

To our allies in the court of King Hekaton and Princess Serissa;

We Who Harp humbly call upon thee in our time of need, for we are mustering allies for our efforts against Thay.

Many of our number have assisted your court in the restoration of the Ordning, and have aided in the vanquishing of the Doom of the Desert. Others have defended the Uvarjoten Kong Baparte from drow followers of Kiaransalee. And even more recently (and relevant to this matter) some of us have fought alongside giants in the battle of the Vault of Gnashing Teeth against the threat of death giants, and the aratar of Kiaransalee. Thay, being known for being a necromancer's haven, was present for this battle, and though our evidence so far suggests no efforts on their part to reverse-engineer death giants, we cannot eliminate the possibility that they possess insights into their creation from studying of corpses or live specimens.

I write to you to not only bring your attention said possibility of Thayan research into the defilement of your dead giant-kin, but of the state of the Moonsea. Thay controls a significant portion of Mulmaster, and some members of the Five Factions believe it is a puppet-state of the Red Wizards. With control of one of the Moonsea's city-states, it may be a matter of time before Thay broadens its' reach further across the lands of Toril.

I understand it is unorthodox for us smallfolk to be this directly involved in your politics, and that it may even be out of our place to request aid, but we are desperate for allies, especially after receiving word the Hawks of Mulmaster intercepted the missive intended for Selfaril Uoundolphin.

We have no proof that the Red Wizards are conducting experiments with the death giants, nor do you have any stake in a conflict of smallfolk so far away, so if you choose not to be involved in our war, then we will understand and respect your decision to not involve your people in this matter.

Signed,

Grey Owl Skraid

High Harper.
