The Varuda Guardian Statue: A huge varuda statue some 20' tall stands to the northeast, crouching on its powerful legs and with wings cocked in a halo above its head. The statue still bears much of its colorful paint, with yellow wings, blue head, brown body, and silver talons. The statue is, in fact, a rudishva animated construct known as the varuda guardian (see new monsters). It lumbers to life when any movement enters its field of vision. Swift display of any plastic rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items) is the only way to quiet the monster. If no plaque is forthcoming, the varuda guardian springs after any intruders in short, but well-directed hops, buffeting them with its powerful wings and emitting ear-shattering cries.

The varuda guardian pursues visible intruders from 5-90B all the way to the barrier at 5-120; if it has been antagonized, it continues to pursue intruders through the gap in the barricade and all the way to the doors at 5-138. Fortunately its size prevents it from entering most side chambers. After 2 turns in which no intruder is visible, the Guardian returns to its original place. The varuda guardian attacks varuda on sight, regardless of their possession of plaques, since its final instructions were to maintain the quarantine of the infected varuda nests (c.f. 5-108 and 5-111).

Pool: Along the northwest wall is a 3'-tall semi-circular pool magically filled with cool, clear water. It remains constantly full.

Doors: The west door (to 5-108) is made of reinforced wood, but it has been destroyed by some massive force (the varuda guardian), and its fragments swing uselessly on their bent hinges. Two skeletonized corpses of humans still dressed in chain mail lie just inside the entrance.

The southwest door (to 5-110) is oval and made of stone; a bright yellow circle  $\frac{1}{2}$ " in diameter rests in its center. Waving a pale green, silver, or yellow rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items) across the circle opens the door; otherwise it only opens to a knock spell or better.

The south door (to 5-111) is wooden, like the west one, and is locked. Although it can be picked and opened easily, a rudishva wall of force blocks the tunnel beyond; it may only be destroyed by disintegration, and cannot be bypassed with identity plaques. The wall of force does not, however, contain a fiery dancer (as does the wall at 5-90A). Opening the wooden door causes the varuda guardian to lurch into action and to attempt either to close the door or to destroy the passageway; it attacks in the process any who impede it.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 rudishva animated construct - varuda guardian (see new monsters): SZ L; AL N; AC 0; MV 60'; HD 10; HP 70; #AT 2; Dmg 2-12/2-12; MR 25%. Special attacks: cry (paralysis or sonic damage). Special defenses: +2 or better weapons to hit; immune to cold, fire, electricity, poison and mind-affecting spells.

Treasure:

Varuda guardian: should the varuda guardian be defeated and broken into pieces, a lump of still-potent arcnum the size of a watermelon may be found where the heart might have been. This lump is the equivalent of 8 fist-sized pieces, and can thus be used 8x in the usual way (see new magic items).

Dwarven corpses: four suits of silver-chased steel chain mail (double the value, but dwarven-sized); two war hammers, a battle axe, and a pick +2; a silver plate (110 gp) on which are incised three images with captions: varuda (winged being), varumani (troll), and kaliyani (snake-headed being); three red spinels (250 gp each); and a partial map to Zhorak's Forge (8-100). The map is incised on a rectangular piece of copper, and includes both an inscription in Dwarven runes and an image. The inscription states: 'Lord Zhorak made his home near the bottom of the chasm. Find the hall with the six basalt columns, then use the appropriate red circle.' The 'map' shows two rows of four circles each; the third circle in the top row has an 'x' scratched through it. A second inscription, in Archontean, is scrawled to the side of the 'map': it reads "The chamber is near the cat god's shrine." [GM Note: the map refers to area 8-7, with its six pillars and eight teleportals. It correctly indicates the proper teleporter for Zhorak's Forge (8-7C), although it provides no warning that these are one-way teleportals].

5-108: Brood-Nests of the Elder Varuda

This large set of caves is brightly lit in its central section by a continual light spell. The light reveals the river, a small pool, a sandy area dotted with odd-looking lumps, the mouths of cave openings dotting the north, south, and west walls, and an area of worked stone by the entrance stair. The area is quiet and smells slightly of a blend of ripe fruit and decay. The ceiling of the main cave is 40' tall, and there are numerous niches carved in the walls between the cave-mouths.

River and Pool: The river rushes into the cavern from a 5'-diameter tunnel located at the northeast edge of the cavern. A thin but very strong mesh covers the tunnel opening; on the far side of the mesh (i.e., towards 5-104), a 2'-long cylinder knocks against the mesh. Although it was the delivery mechanism for the heqeti slime-toxins, the river is now perfectly clean and potable. The water of the pool is also clean, despite the forty skeletons of winged bipeds that lie jumbled on its bottom. Among the skeletons is another empty 2' cylinder of some strange chitin (c.f. 5-104), as well as four inoperable laser rifles, three inoperable laser pistols, and 20 ceremonial bronze daggers.

Sandy Area: This area to the east of the pool is dotted with 10 oddly colored, man-sized lumps. The lumps range in color from burnt orange to rust, and all appear slightly 'furry'. The lumps were once varuda that became heqeti slime zombies (see new monsters) during the heqeti attack. Movement beyond the stairwell to 5-107 causes the slime zombies to rise and shamble after the intruders. Remnants of plasteel and ordinary steel apparatuses - all eaten away by some sort of rust - dot the flat area on either side of the river.

Worked-Stone Area: The northern niche, with its access to the incubator and food supply (5-109), is sheathed with smooth blue granite interrupted twice: 1) a 4' by 3' section of smooth black 'glass' [a completely defunct view-screen] and 2) an inscription in spidery Semi-glyphik which runs across the top of the wall and reads "Varuda! We soar ahead of the rest! We locate the enemy! We report! We always serve with faithful loyalty."

Brood-Nests: Six smaller caves open off the main cavern, their mouths located between 20' and 30' above the main floor. These caves are significantly hotter and more humid than the larger cave, and are uniformly dark and rocky. Perspicacious investigation suggests that each cave possesses a number of projections that might have been perches; these perches are usually found in front of a semi-circular depression roughly scraped from the rock. There are 10-30 such perches and egg-nests in each cave. Sadly, all of the egg-nests are empty save for some broken fragments of leathery varuda eggs.

The cave marked 'C' is the only to contain anything else of note. Just over the lip of the cave are the remains of two varuda (not covered in slime); they appear to have been scorched by fire. In the center of the cave is the body of Raalk, one of the great leaders of the varuda, punctured with six 1'-long darts. All of the bodies are dressed in finely woven shorts and tunics of unusual nature, with sets of belts slung across shoulders and hips. Raalk's corpse wears a rudishva breather (see new technological items), which allowed him to avoid the initial slime-toxin attack. It did not prevent some of his crazed lieutenants from killing him with darts in an effort to seize the mask, however.

GM Note: The heqeti attack against the rudishva, abetted by kaliyani treachery, began in this cave. From the slime cave (5-104), the heqeti cast deadly toxins into the river where they washed up against the mesh filter; the slimes oozed through the porous membrane of their delivery canisters and into the river. One variety of slime-toxin took gaseous form and infected the varuda immediately, maddening them with thirst and killing them within hours. Other, slower forms, crept through the tunnels to assault the rudishva themselves, while still other slimes animated dead varuda corpses to fight against their masters. Most of the varuda leadership was slain in the first onslaught, and, seeing their doom, the rudishva imposed swift and severe measures: all varuda fleeing the area were stopped and killed by the stone guardian of 5-107, while the secondary varuda nests (5-111) were quarantined permanently.

Inhabitants:

1. 10 heqeti slime zombies (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 4; HP 30, 29, 28, 27, 26, 26, 25, 25, 24, 23; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8. Special attacks: slime infestation. Special defenses: immune to electricity.

Treasure:

On Raalk's corpse: a rudishva breather; a rudishva lesser power supply; and a laser rifle with another lesser power supply at 50% capacity (see new technological items). He also possesses two rudishva identity plaque (pale green and platinum - see new technological items) and 25 very small amethysts (worth 50 gp each).

On the non-slimed varuda corpses: six silver rods ½" diameter and 6" long (50 gp each), and a rudishva dart thrower with a clip of 6 immobilizing darts (see new technological items).

In the pool, five gems: two iolites (75 gp each), an aquamarine (500 gp), a huge pink pearl (1,500 gp), and a large violet garnet (worth 500 gp).

5-109: Food, Incubator, and Teleportation

This small complex of rounded, oval rooms provided all necessities to the varuda who lived to the south. The walls are white marble, rounded to eliminate 90-degree angles.

The main room features a 4'-tall oval counter surrounded by 16 food stations. Each station has a silver oval inset into the counter and a curved yellow tube that extends from the counter and curves over the plate. A row of six colored buttons is set into the edge of the console in front of each station. Manipulating the buttons causes the nozzle to spurt one of six varieties of high-protein, high-vitamin food paste onto the silver 'plate' (or into a container placed on it). The paste is not very appetizing, but highly nutritious.

Incubator: To the west is the incubator room, in which premature hatchlings were kept warm and safe. Another 4'-tall table occupies the center of the small room; a cowl over it provides (still!) heat and light. Six tiny varuda skeletons lie in the incubator.

Teleport Nodes:

These two nodes are no longer operable as they were disabled following the release of the slime toxins. They could be re-activated from 5-110 and 5-118 (q.v.).

T5: access to 5-118 (Armory) (currently inoperable)

T6: access to 5-110 (currently inoperable)

5-110: Varuda Training Grounds

This 40'-tall vaulted chamber is studded with 3'-diameter pedestals that vary in height from 2' to 10'. Projecting from the walls at similarly varying heights (from 10' to 35') are stone ledges. The room is dark, but light will reveal an enormous mural of an attacking varuda painted across the ceiling. The chamber was used to train varuda units in the tactics of aerial combat. It is empty save for a backpack left on one of the ledges, some 25' up the north wall. A small oval corridor to the west leads to two teleport nodes.

Teleport Nodes:

The rudishva disabled these two nodes as soon as they realized the extent of the heqeti attack; they did so by laying a marble slab across each of the silver floor-pads and by gluing a panel of clear plastic across the wall-mounted hand-pads. If the marble slabs are moved and the plastic panels pulled off (with a successful open doors check), the teleport nodes will again be operable.

T6: access to 5-109 (currently inoperable)

T7: access to 5-111 (currently inoperable)

Treasure:

The backpack holds two 50' coils of rope, a package of iron rations, 3 vials of powerful poison, a potion of extra healing, and three empty bags, one of which is a bag of holding (smallest capacity).

5-111: Nests of the Younger Varuda

Although quite similar in appearance to 5-108, this cave complex differs in that it is currently inhabited by a debased, low-tech tribe of primitive varuda (see new monsters). These varuda have been isolated in this cavern for close to three millennia, surviving on protein paste and purified water. During that period the varuda lost most of their higher knowledge (including written language) and technological ability.

The central cave is dominated by a continual light spell cast on the 50'-tall ceiling; this overlooks the river, the pool, the obelisk, and the sandy area surrounding the obelisk. Dark openings dotting the walls lead to the nesting grounds of the six clans of varuda. In the past twenty years seismic activity has opened a hole in the eastern-most sub-cave, allowing access to 5-119A. Due to the threat of the varuda guardian at 5-107 (a rudishva animated construct - see new monsters), however, the varuda have not dared much exploration.

River and Pool: A mesh gate at the point in which the river enters the cave is connected to a small purifier, a fact that explains why the ancestors of these varuda did not become infected by toxic slimes. The river is cool and clean. At the base of the pool are the rusted and inoperable remains of several dozen rudishva weapons and other technological devices, cast off over the centuries by decreasingly competent varuda as the devices failed (or power supplies expired). Scattered among the debris are one plastic and several metallic rudishva identity plaques (see new technological items): one pale green, three bronze, and five copper plaques.

Sandy Area and Obelisk: The debased varuda gather among the sands of the south bank of the river for ritualized mini-wars (a relic of their ancient military training), and to genuflect to the obelisk, which they recall as a now-silent but once-potent god. The obelisk is 15' high, four sided (4' per side), and highly decorated. Carved images of varuda flying and shooting darts at misshapen amphibian-like things cover the sides up to a height of 4'. At this point each side features a black glass panel (defunct view-screens). The primitive varuda often use blood and other liquids to daub primitive pictures on the screens, hoping thereby to wake their god. They refer to their god as "Lilja" (a corruption of Leil-Jor, the captain of the Beacon - see 5-98).

North Passage: The worked north passage has blue granite sheathing, on which are the faded remains of some ancient frescoes, painted there by the first generations of varuda in a desperate attempt not to forget their identity. The frescoes show many varuda marching, flying, and fighting giant salamander-like things, and a single varuda beseeching a tall, skinny, horned biped. A faint inscription under the latter scene reads, in Semi-glyphik, "Raalk begs Leil-Jor to release the people." Above all of the frescoes is another faded inscription, "The varuda were faithful, as always. Unaware of the nature of their transgression, they await the call of their beloved masters, ready to do penance. They shall be ready." At the end of the passage a shimmering wall of force blocks access to the door to 5-107.

Varuda Caves: The seven sub-caves which line the main cavern are home to 60 primitive varuda divided into six clans. Each cave is the primary nesting place of one of the clans, and is thus typically occupied with nesting females, watchful males, and the frequent sound of wings flapping, beaks snapping, and guttural cries echoing across the cave. If needed, the GM could develop the internal social divisions of the varuda, but it seems unnecessary to do more than note that there are a total of 18 elders and 42 mature adults. All but one of the caves are ordinary and uninteresting, being littered with old egg fragments, guano, and a handful of primitive bone and stone utensils. As the varuda have no need for food due to the still-functioning food processors at 5-112, most of their time is spent roosting, debating precedence, and engaging in mostly-symbolic (i.e., non-lethal) single-combat.

Cave A: The Kreaw clan, which inhabits this cave, is unusual in that they are custodians of the shrine to Raalk and possessors of the last three operative dart throwers (with five clips containing 25 ordinary darts). As a result, the elders of clan Kreaw are the most likely to be asked to negotiate with any visitors.

Cave C: The largest cave (cave C) is the property of no clan. Inside are several dozen oval plasteel containers of various sizes stacked on the usual roosting ledges; in these containers may be found the ashes of the first several generations of varuda who were imprisoned (and died) here. At the far end of the cave is a hole in the stone floor which drops 15' to a subsidiary (and exit-less) cave some 60' in diameter. When one of the modern varuda becomes too decrepit to take part in the rituals of daily life, an adult male from each tribe carries the ancient one into Cave C and tosses him (still living) into the pit, where he/she eventually dies. As a result the lower pit is chillingly thick with the bones of millennia of varuda.

Cave F: The Verrick clan has become influential in the past generation due to their control of the sole access route out of the ancestral cavern. The Verricks have managed to find a pair of steel short swords in the Midnight Road, which they have hidden from the rest of the tribe.

Shrine of Raalk: Once it became apparent that they were stranded here, the ancient varuda collected all remaining data crystals and power supplies and locked them into a rudishva lockbox (similar to a troll chest, although openable by presenting a brown or better rudishva identity plaque - see new technological items). Next to the chest is a 4'-tall statuette of a varuda that has been enchanted with the equivalent of a magic mouth spell; if the chest touched, the statuette's eyes will glow yellow and it will intone, in Varuda Semi-glyphik, "Children! We have put this wisdom aside. You must wait for Raalk to arrive and bring you back into the favor of Leil-Jor. Only those who possess proper authority and access may recover our lore." The modern, primitive, varuda understand only one word of this speech ("Raalk"); as a result, they have decided that the statuette is Raalk, and that he must be placated. Small bits of feather, claw, carved bone, etc. hang reverently from the statuette. Should a brown or better rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items) be waved across the circle on the lid of the chest, it will swing open, revealing its contents.

Playing the Varuda: The varuda are fierce, primitive bird-men. They value cocky display and disdain weakness and retreat. They love to fight ritual duels to establish precedence. They worship two 'gods', Lilja (the obelisk) and Raalk (in the shrine), and are aware of the great evil, a being called "Feeni" (a corruption of 'kaliyani'). They are aware of the Midnight Road, but are terrified of the giant stone bird (5-107); they have explored 5-121 and 5-122, and have heard voices from 5-127 and 5-131. Due to their cripplingly conservative and ritualistic culture, they will be slow to expand outside of their traditional home. They negotiate with outsiders (who can communicate with them), and are eager to acquire new 'artifacts of Raalk' (by which they mean anything not made in their cave). The best way to win their friendship is to destroy, or show proof of the destruction of, the varuda guardian; should this occur, the perpetrators will become trusted allies. The varuda will also begin to explore beyond their nests.

Inhabitants:

1. 18 primitive varuda elders (see new monsters): SZ M; AL LN; AC 6; MV 90', 90' gliding (Class E); HD 3; HP 23, 22, 21, 20, 19, 18, 18, 17(x3), 16(x3), 15(x3), 14, 12; #AT 2 or 1; Dmg 1-4/1-4 or 1-6 (stone club).
2. 42 primitive varuda (see new monsters): SZ M; AL LN; AC 7; MV 90', 90' gliding (Class E); HD 2; HP 16, 15, 14, 14, 13(x6), 12(x8), 11(x8), 10(x8), 9(x8); #AT 2 or 1; Dmg 1-4/1-4 or 1-6 (stone club).

Treasure:

In the pool: 1 sky blue, 3 bronze, and 5 copper rudishva identity plaques (see new technological items)
In cave A: three varuda dart throwers with five clips containing 25 ordinary darts (see new technological items)
In the chest in the Shrine of Raalk: a pale green rudishva identity plaque, 2 laser pistols, 1 greater rudishva power supply, and 5 lesser power supplies (see new technological items for all). In addition, the chest contains 4 heavy platinum bars (400 gp each), the six data crystals listed below (see new technological items), and a set of ivory plaques on which is recorded in Semi-glyphik the story of the first generations of quarantined varuda - this story refers to some mysterious event which caused 'the Masters' to quarantine the faithful varuda; it recounts how Raalk spoke only once to the imprisoned ones, counselling patience and promising to sort out the problem; it tells of some spasmodic and decreasingly frequent video contact from the Masters, urging calm and patience; and it ends with the stark phrase "The kaliyani have betrayed us!" The data crystals here are Do Your Part!, Voyages of the Shining Beacon of Glorious Heaven, Best Aerial Vacations in Hegemony Space, Be the Best Scout You Can!, Lo! The People have been Abandoned!, and Proper Marksmanship Techniques (see Arden Vul books for all).

5-112: Food, Incubator, and Teleportation

Aside from the destinations of the teleport nodes, this complex is identical to 5-109. The food dispensers have kept the varuda alive for millennia, and will continue to churn out protein paste for the foreseeable future. The incubator is operative, although the primitive varuda rarely use it. The teleport nodes were rendered inoperable from the other end, and the primitive varuda have no idea what they do. Should the receiving nodes be 'turned on', these nodes would again be usable.

Teleport Nodes:

T7: access to 5-118 (armory)
T8: access to 5-110

5-113: Varuda Staff Center

This former military command center was the scene of a desperate battle in antiquity. In the center of the room is a sunken area some 8' below the floor; in it are rows of consoles and strange plasteel chairs. In the center of the sunken area is a tall, two-sided view-screen. Along the sides of the room are several tattered banners displaying stylized varuda and two corkboards on which are tacked maps of the entire Midnight Road area (except secret doors) and overview maps of Level 6. A broken hole in the north wall leads to a ragged tunnel.

The entire area is in disarray, with scorch marks on most of the walls, and skeletons slumped over broken consoles. Some of the skeletons are winged bipeds (varuda), a few charred remains look trollish (i.e., varumani), and a few more seem to be those of large bipedal salamanders (i.e., heqeti). Ten of the corpses rise as zombies 3 rounds after the chamber is entered.

Secret Door (northeast): The door is easy to detect (1 in 4) and opens by sliding a panel into the wall.

Inhabitants:

1. 10 enhanced monster zombies: SZ L; AL N; AC 6, MV 90'; HD 6; HP 43, 42, 40, 39, 37, 35, 32, 30, 29, 28; #AT 1; Dmg 4-16. Special defenses: half damage from blunt weapons; immune to charm, cold, death magic, hold, and sleep; turned as ghosts. Special: always strike last in combat. Special attacks: energy drain (1 level/hit).

5-114: Varuda Operations Control, with Stairs Down to Level 7 (7-109)

This large chamber features the same smoothed corners, blue-granite walls, and tall ceiling (30') of the rest of this portion of the complex. The east wall is dominated by two huge rectangles of black glass (inoperable view-screens). In front of them are three 8'-tall pedestals, two 4' in diameter and one 8' in diameter. Along the curved west wall are two smaller and one longer ledges set 10' up the wall. The door to 5-110 is a simple rudishva iris door that dilates open whenever anyone approaches within 5'. The stairs in the northeastern arm lead down to Level 7 (7-109). The northern and southern doors are also rudishva iris doors, but these require a pale green, pink, orange, silver or yellow rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items) to open.

5-115: Stairs Down to Sub-Level 6 (SL6-37)

This enormous room is egg-shaped, with slick, curved, white marble walls. A loud thrum originating to the south echoes off walls. In the center a massive block of granite rises from the curved walls of the egg. The block is a shell for one of the oldest staircases in the complex, a steep, worn set of stone stairs that lead down about 300' to the Drowned Canyon (SL6-37). The block is connected to corridors on the south, east, and west walls by thin bridges of white marble laid over plasteel.

Twenty feet below the bridges, where the walls curve to meet the staircase block, a pile of debris has collected. Most of the debris is random junk, but some searching will turn up a potion case with three potions of water breathing, a wickedly-barbed bone spear, and a brown plastic rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items).

5-115A: Corridor Section

A looting party of six lizardmen is poking around in this section of collapsed hallway. They are willing to negotiate and trade a bit of information, but grow uneasy if too much chatter impedes them from returning down the stairs down to the Drowned Canyon (Sub-Level 6) in the next room. The lizardmen know very little about Level 5, but are well informed about the general features of the Drowned Canyon, about the fishmen (see new monsters), and about the southern reaches of Level 4. They would trade such information for food and assistance against the fishmen and/or the colossal eel (SL6-24).

Inhabitants:

1. 6 lizardmen: SZ M; AL N; AC 5; MV 60', 120' swimming; HD 2+1; HP 15, 13, 13, 12, 11, 11; #AT 1 or 3; Dmg 1-6 (club) and 1-6 (javelin), or 1-2/1-2/1-8. Possessions: clubs; javelins.

Treasure:

The lizardmen have an orange plastic rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items), which they used to access the stairs at SL6-37.

5-116: Fans

A deafening roar permeates this chamber, where two huge fans set in steel racks flank a 10'-diameter hole in the floor. The hole opens over the Drowned Canyon, and was drilled to provide moving air for the rudishva areas of the Halls. The fans labor slightly but are still operable after all the years; with difficulty (i.e., with magic) they could be rendered inoperable. Should this occur, the air in most of the area between 5-86 and 5-137 becomes stale and heavy, sapping the strength of those who journey therein and resulting in -1 to hit and damage. In addition, natural healing in such areas is reduced by half.

5-117: Collapsed Area with Tunnel Up to Level 4 (4-117)

This section of rudishva corridor collapsed centuries ago. A more recent collapse opened a tunnel to Level 4 (4-117). In the entrance to the tunnel lie the corpses of three adventurers, each skewered by short, barbed arrows made of something that looks like bone.

Treasure:

The lizardmen who slew these adventurers looted the corpses enthusiastically, but had no use for two scrolls, one of cure serious wounds and the other of fireball.

5-118: Armory

The door to this important site is composed of two oval, interlocking slabs of blue granite. On each oval is a red circle of plastic, 3" in diameter. To open the doors one must press one of the following colors of plastic rudishva identity plaques (see new technological items) against either of the red circles: brown, sky blue, pale green, pink, orange, silver, or yellow. Presenting a rust plaque causes the door to freeze for 1-3 days (equivalent of a wizard lock spell); during this time even higher value cards will not work.

The entrance hall contains a grill-like framework of plasteel 5' deep and wide enough to admit one medium-sized person at a time. Beyond the apparatus may be glimpsed three motionless, mannikin-like figures standing around a central podium. The walls of the 25'-tall chamber contain numerous racks in which are placed weapons, armor and objects both familiar and unfamiliar.

Scanning Apparatus: Entering the framework triggers a smooth, silky voice (speaking in Rudishva) which states "Produce identification so that we may better serve your weapons needs;" at the same time, a passive reddish laser scan sweeps over the entrant. A rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items) of one of the following colors must then be presented: pale green, pink, silver, or yellow. If the proper plaque is not forthcoming, the smooth voice restates its request “Identification, please!” If the entrant still cannot produce the proper colored plaque, or if he/she/it rushes through the apparatus without waiting to be scanned, a second, deeper voice begins to declaim “Unauthorized access! Unauthorized access! Lethal force has been approved and the authorities have been notified. Remain motionless!” At this point all three automatons activate and attack. Displaying a proper plaque, however, causes the smooth voice to respond with “Thank You. Your tactical advisor has been activated;” it also causes one of the security constructs (mannikins) to activate. This mannikin offers a random item from its approved list. GM Note: a brown, sky blue or orange plaque will open the door, but will not allow passage past the scanning apparatus; those who use a brown, sky blue or orange card to open the door must retreat or face the security constructs.

Security Constructs (mannikins): The three figures standing beyond the scanning apparatus are rudishva security constructs (see new monsters), made of highly articulated steel, plastic, and decaying organic compounds. These three constructs are of the Tactical Advisor models, and are shaped to resemble a rudishva, a varumani, and a varuda, respectively. Due to the decaying organics, each smells badly. Each also carries a different level of security access that is indicated by the proper identity plaque (see new technological items), and each is authorized to release certain objects according to that security level. As mentioned above, all three constructs activate and attack if unauthorized access through the entrance hallway is detected. An individual construct will also respond with deadly force if it is attacked, regardless of whether the correct plaque has been displayed. The constructs do not activate immediately upon the activation of the teleport nodes; in this case they wait for one of the proper identity plaques to be displayed to the proper construct. Interference with the wall-mounted objects, regardless of the means of entrance, causes all three constructs to activate and attack. GM Note: originally there was a fourth security construct shaped like a kaliyani; it was disabled in the hours immediately after the heqeti attack, however. For this reason an orange identity plaque is useless here.

Rudishva Tactical Advisor Construct (see new monsters):

Appearance: a spindly-limbed biped about 7’ tall with a large head; the head bears two small horns, and the mouth has fangs. The construct is dressed in an orange jumpsuit and wears a utility belt.
Activation: silver or yellow identity plaque
Security Access: high

Varumani Tactical Advisor Construct (see new monsters):

Appearance: heavy, thick-limbed, being 8’ tall, with gnarled features. The construct wears a loincloth and a utility belt.
Activation: pink identity plaque
Security Access: medium

Varuda Tactical Advisor Construct (see new monsters):

Appearance: a 6’-tall biped with membranes attached between arms and back, a sharp beak, and impressive comb feathers. The construct wears a light-blue tunic.
Activation: pale green identity plaque
Security Access: low

Available Artifacts

The following tables list the available rudishva objects in the armory, with a number in parentheses indicating the number of exemplars of that artifact that remain in stock. See the appendix of new technological items for details about all these artifacts. Due to a systems decay over the centuries, it is no longer possible to request a specific object; instead, the constructs produce items randomly from the list. Re-roll any results for artifacts whose stock has already been exhausted. The artifacts are secured to the marble walls with thick plasteel clips; these clips are difficult to remove (lift gates check), and any effort to do so causes any remaining constructs to activate and attack.

Low Security-Access Items (see new technological items):

Available To: holders of pale green identity plaques

Displayer: varuda construct.

D10	Object
1	Dart thrower with clip of 10 ordinary darts (6)
2	Ballistic baton (6)
3	Spear-gun with clip of 4 spears (2)
4	Sonic fence (1)
5	Breather (1)
6	Plasteel spear (10)
7	Plasteel breast-plate (2)
8	Plasteel shield, medium (4)
9	Laser pistol, with lesser power supply (1)
10	Stun baton (1)

Medium Security-Access Objects (see new technological items):

Available To: holders of pink identity plaques

Displayer: varumani construct

D12	Object
1	Laser pistol, with lesser power supply (2)
2	Laser rifle, with lesser power supply (2)
3	Stun baton (2)
4	Ballistic baton (6)
5	Plasteel breast-plate (2)
6	Plasteel shield, large (2)
7	Dart thrower, with a clip of 10 explosive darts and 2 clips of 10 ordinary darts (2)
8	Dart thrower, with a clip of 10 narcotic gas darts and 2 clips of 10 ordinary darts (2)
9	Sonic fence (2)
10	Breather, with 3 gas grenades (3)
11	Anti-venom kit, with 6 doses (3)
12	Laser Deflector Shield (1)

High Security-Access Objects (see new technological items):

Available To: holders of silver or yellow identity plaques

Displayer: rudishva construct

D8	Object
1	Laser rifle, with 2 lesser power supplies (2)
2	Laser pistol, with 2 lesser power supplies (4)
3	Personal force shield, with lesser power supply (1)
4	Portable recoilless rocket launcher (1)
5	Laser deflector shield (4)
6	Personal defense array, with a lesser power supply (1)
7	Structural mines (2)
8	Anti-personnel mines (2)

Note: A GM who is worried about the introduction of such items into his/her game might rule that most of the high technology items are inoperable due to age, perhaps allowing a 10% chance that any item is still in working order.

Teleport Nodes:

Two of the three nodes were disabled in antiquity by placing sheets of marble over the floor plates, and gluing clear plexiglass over the hand plates. Removing them (open doors check) renders them operable once more.

T5: access to 5-109 (currently inoperable)

T7: access to 5-112 (currently inoperable)

T12: access to 5-31

Inhabitants:

- 1 rudishva tactical advisor form of rudishva security construct (see new monsters): SZ L; AL N; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 6+6; HP 45; #AT 2; Dmg 3-12/3-12 (laser pistol/vibrablade) or 1-8/1-8 (fists). Special attacks: command every other round (-2 to saves). Special defenses: immune to fire, cold, poison, laser attacks, and mind-affecting spells; regenerate 3 HP/round. Possessions: laser pistol, vibrablade.
- 1 varumani tactical advisor form of rudishva security construct (see new monsters): SZ L; AL N; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 55; #AT 2; Dmg 1-4/4-24 (stun baton/laser rifle) or 2-12/2-12 (fists). Special defenses: immune to poison, cold, and mind-affecting spells; regenerate 2 HP/round. Possessions: stun baton and laser rifle (wielded one-handed).
- 1 varuda tactical advisor form of rudishva security construct (see new monsters): SZ L; AL N; AC 2; MV 120'; 120' gliding (Class D); HD 7; HP 45; #AT 1 or 2; Dmg 3-12 (laser pistol) or 1-6/1-6 (claws). Special defenses: immune to cold, poison, mind-affecting spells; regenerate 1 HP/round. Possessions: laser pistol.

5-119: Guard Niches

These four niches (a fifth, 5-119A, has its own key) are located 20' up the wall of the Midnight Road. Each is an 8'-tall, 5'-deep hemispherical space. In antiquity, a varuda scout kept watch from each niche. At present, the contents of each niche should be determined on the following table (a particular content may only be used once):

D6	Contents
1	A bundle of 10 torches, inside of which is thrust a walnut wand of magic missiles (14 charges)

2	A leather backpack, with a coil of silk rope, 10 pitons, a hammer, 2 flasks of oil, and a map showing areas 5-90, 5-91, 5-93, 5-107, 5-120 to 5-131, 5-135 and 5-137.
3	Green slime, coating a skeleton of a varuda: SZ S; AL N; AC 9; MV 0'; HD 2; HP 12; #AT 0; Dmg special. Special attacks: convert to slime; corrosive to wood and metal. Special defenses: immune to physical attacks and all magic save cure disease
4	2 small chasm cephalopods (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 5; MV 60' flying (Class A); HD 2; HP 13, 12; #AT 5 (4 tentacles and a beak); Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-3/1-4; MR 25%. Special attacks: surprise on 1-4
5	Two fully-charged rudishva lesser power supplies (see new technological items)
6	Nothing

5-119A: Special Guard Niche

Unlike the other, abandoned, niches, two primitive varuda warriors from the Verrick clan (see 5-111F), armed with bone spears and short swords, occupy this one. The warriors hoot threateningly at anyone approaching within 20' and attack if too much deference is shown. Displays of confident strength produce obsequious negotiation or flight.

At the back of the niche is a 4'-tall and 3'-wide crack which leads to a tunnel to 5-111.

Inhabitants:

- 2 primitive varuda warriors (see new monsters): SZ M; AL LN; AC 7; MV 90', 90' gliding (Class E); HD 2; HP 13, 12; #AT 2 or 1; Dmg 1-4/1-4 or 1-6 (stone club).

5-120: Barrier

A 5'-tall barrier of large chunks of stone mixed with smaller bits of wall sheathing, marble fragments, and bone blocks most of the corridor at this point. A similar barrier entirely blocks the entrance to 5-121 from the Midnight Road. The barrier is easily climbed, but also features a 6' opening (which the varuda guardian created and still uses). Two dead adventurers are draped over the barrier towards the west side. The bodies are devoid of treasure, and their armor is destroyed. Stuck into the top of the barrier is a broken spear haft on which has been tied a red woolen scarf. Held down by a rock next to the spear haft is a roll of parchment, on which is written in in Archontean "To Hermonion - watch out for the stone guardian that lurks further north, up this broad, tall corridor. It senses movement. I will slip past it and push ahead to the fire pits. Look for me in this location in 2 days. [Signed] the Silent Tempest."

GM Note: this parchment refers to an adventuring party that worked its way up from the lower levels to 5-125. For additional information on this team, see 5-126.

5-121: Cistern

This chamber is 40' high, with rounded corners; it is bare granite, as the sheathing was stripped long ago. The walls of the cistern that fills the room nearly reach the ceiling (rising 35'), and are a mere 5' from the chamber walls. A knotted rope has been spiked into lip of the cistern and hangs down the west side, allowing one to climb up the side. Coiled on the lip are two more lengths of rope and two wooden buckets.

Two adventurers have made a makeshift encampment atop the cistern, using hammers and spikes to secure their hammocks and gear sacks just inside the lip of the cistern. The two are the sole survivors of an adventuring party that was ambushed by kaliyani at area 5-126. The survivors are a thief known as the Silent Tempest and a Khumus cleric called Kunda the Outlander. Although isolated and hungry, the pair distrust almost everything they encounter along the Midnight Road and will thus defend themselves and their territory fiercely. Still, if they are surprised but not attacked by intruders, they are willing negotiate, hoping to use visitors as a ticket out of the Midnight Road. They have explored a bit of the Midnight Road, and know enough to be afraid of the varuda guardian (5-107), curious about the armory (5-118), and suspicious of the debased varuda (5-119A).

Bolted to the ceiling above the cistern is a 15'x15' rudishva aquafactor (see new technological items). It converts moisture in the air into water that drips from it into the cistern below. Although the aquafactor is working, and hence valuable, it is bulky and extremely difficult to move. Two successful rolls of 4d6 under DEX and INT are necessary to unbolt and safely move the aquafactor.

Inhabitants:

1. The Silent Tempest, 9th-level female Thorcin thief: SZ M; AL NE; AC 2; MV 120'; HD 9; HP 37 (max 50); #AT 1; Dmg 3-8 (short sword +2 of sharpness), or 3-6 (throwing dagger +2). Abilities: STR 11, INT 11, WIS 13, DEX 18, CON 15, CHA 15. Thief skills: PP 80%, OL 77%, F/RT 65%, MS 80%, HS 66%, HN 30%, CW 98%, RL 45%. Possessions: black leather armor +2; hooded cloak of elvenkind; two throwing daggers +2; short sword +2 of sharpness; potion of invisibility; a purse with 99 sp, 47 gp, and two peridots (500 gp each). The Tempest dresses all in black, including a black eye-mask. She is antisocial and unusual, avoiding eye contact and preferring to communicate either in hand signals or brief grunts; the lone exception is that she translates Kunda's whisperings, albeit in her own cryptic fashion. She is venal and selfish.
2. Kunda the Outlander, 8th-level male Khumus cleric of Thanatos: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 120'; HD 8; HP 41 (max 66); #AT 1; Dmg 4-9 (club +3). Abilities: STR 11, INT 11, WIS 18, DEX 16, CON 16, CHA 8. Possessions: black leather armor +2; polished maple club incised with ebony (club +3); two potions of invisibility; a potion of extra healing; a potion of poison; a set of small copper scales with a bag of polished black stones; a purse with sixteen pieces of hematite (10 gp each), five jasper gems (50 gp), and two ivory statuettes, one of a mounted Khumus archer and the other of Thanatos (200 gp each). Spells: ~~bleed~~, ~~create water~~, ~~detect magic~~, ~~protection from evil~~, ~~remove fear~~; ~~augury~~, ~~find traps~~, ~~hold person~~, ~~resist fire~~, ~~silence 15' radius~~; ~~create food and water~~, ~~dispel magic~~, ~~remove curse~~, ~~speak with dead~~; ~~cure serious wounds~~, ~~knif bones~~ (see new spells), ~~neutralize poison~~. Kunda paints his face white with black accents in order to make himself look skeletal. He whispers constantly to himself in the tongues of the Khumus and of his god, Thanatos. Before taking any action, he breaks out his copper scales and pebbles, weighing them and sighing inscrutably.

GM Note: Kunda, the Tempest, and the deceased members of their party descended through the chasm to the Nether Reaches (8-1). There, fending off the shadows, they discovered the concealed door at 8-19, and used it to access areas 8-24 and 7-34. From there they ascended to 5-125, but were treacherously ambushed by the kaliyani in area 5-126.

Treasure:

See personal items above.

5-122: Broken Kaliyani Hall, north

This portion of the former Grand Hall of the kaliyani is the largest to survive, as collapses to both the north and south have obscured the original dimensions of the chamber. The largest remaining part of the chamber is some 50'x25', with a 30' ceiling. It appears as if the floor has been recently cleaned and swept. Visible in this area is a portion of a circular sunken area that occupied the center of the room; the sunken area is covered in light blue tiles. To the south of the sunken area was an enormous floor mosaic, stretching originally some 70' across the entrance to the hall. While much of the mosaic has suffered from the room's collapse, some scenes are still visible; in addition, the kaliyani explorers lurking in 5-125 have recovered two sections of mosaic from 5-123 and propped those slabs against the south wall. The remaining mosaic scenes depict all four of the rudishva races - rudishva, kaliyani, varuda, and varumani - but concentrate on episodes of kaliyani epic history and legend. The kaliyani appear as slender, four-armed, sinuous beings in flowing robes, and may be seen:

1. Exiting down a ramp from an enormous egg (GM Note: the egg is the Beacon)
2. Summoning a spirit in a group of eight
3. Displaying half-circular 'rods' which blast energy (GM Note: these are kaliyani blasting rods - see new technological items)
4. Offering counsel to the rudishva
5. Directing large, lumpish beings (varumani)
6. Directing cringing bird-men (varuda)
7. Conducting research in scrolls and experimenting with chunks of orange rock (i.e., arcnum, see new magic items).

Six candle stubs of red-wax are arranged in a hexagon to one side of the mosaic. Among the candles is an icon of sorts, a piece of lizardman hide nailed to a board and attached to a metal spike; the spike has been driven into the stone floor. The hide has been painted white; on it is a red ouroboros (serpent eating its own tail).

GM Note: the ouroboros is one of the primary symbols for the kaliyani (see new monsters).

5-123: Broken Kaliyani Hall, south

Three rudishva iris doors lead from the Midnight Road to isolated fragments of this formerly grand hall of the kaliyani. They dilate open whenever an orange, silver or yellow rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items) is presented. The fragments accessed from the western and eastern doors are larger, and once contained floor mosaics. These mosaics have been pried up by crowbars, and fairly recently judging by the amount of dust in them. The central door leads to nothing but debris and collapsed rock; on it, however, is painted a red ouroboros symbol (GM Note: this is a common kaliyani symbol).

5-124: Statues and Stumps

The doors to this ceremonial chamber are rudishva iris doors. They dilate open whenever an orange, silver or yellow rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items) is waived in front of a blue circle inset into each.

The chamber is 20' tall, and clad on all sides in beautiful light-blue tiles (6" square) each with a yellow ouroboros painted in its center. Although statues once stood in each of the niches, time has not been kind. Three of the four niches are empty save for some fist-sized chunks of marble. Even the nameplates on the pedestals have been vigorously effaced. The fourth still bears a name, "Lisstak", and the stump of a statue. The statue appears as a headless, armless torso clad in a tunic. A brass plaque on a brass chain hangs around the neck of the headless statue. The plaque reads, in spidery Semi-glyphik, "Lisstak the Great, father of his people, prince of the people." Behind the statue is stashed a crudely fashioned replacement head and crude wooden shingle. The head is a primitive, ugly, thing made of peeling, painted plaster; the face is grotesque, with huge fangs, a floppy tongue, and exaggerated almond eyes. The shingle, which originally hung around the replacement head on a piece of string, reads, in varumani, "Lisstak betrayed us all! Never trust the kaliyani!" [GM Note: angry varumani created the replacement head and wooden shingle after the kaliyani betrayal and just before the varumani flight from Level 5 (see 5-141 for information). When the kaliyani returned to this region several weeks ago, they removed the mocking desecration and added the current brass plaque.]

5-125: Ruined Corridor, with tunnel to Level 7 (7-34)

This ruined section of corridor used to connect several of the kaliyani halls on the north side of the Midnight Road. Sections of it have suffered collapse. An exploring party of kaliyani from Sub-Level 13 (see new monsters) lurks here amid a circle of stones enchanted with continual light. The kaliyani are ruthless and act to dispatch any intruders with maximum force.

A rough natural tunnel to the east leads down to 7-34. The kaliyani left SL9-37 for area 9-119, then followed a chain of tunnels (9-57 to 8-23, 8-24 to 7-34 to 5-125) upwards through the halls until they reached the present location.

GM Notes: There is a chance that Priddy of Archontos (5-128) may attempt to push his way past the kaliyani encampment. See text at 5-128 for the circumstances in which this might occur, as well as for the chances that Priddy is slain (thus adding his possessions to the loot present in 5-125) or that 3 of the kaliyani are slain. Note, too, that the troll thegn (7-30) pays handsomely both for kaliyani fangs and for hard information regarding their lair's location.

Inhabitants:

1. Jisstriv, 7th-level kaliyani sorcerer (see new monsters), SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 150' on six legs, 60' upright; HD 7; HP 39; #AT 2; Dmg 2-5/3-8/6-24 (dagger/scimitar/blasting rod). Special defenses: immune to poison and mind-affecting spells. Special: infravision. Psionic ability: 240. Attack modes psionic blast, mind thrust, psychic crush. Defense modes: mind blank, thought shield, intellect fortress. Disciplines: cellular adjustment, domination, detect magic; mind barring. Spells: comprehend languages, charm person, hypnotism; darkness 15' radius, invisibility, mirror image; dispel magic. Possessions: bracers of defense (AC 5); kaliyani blasting rod with 6 charges (see new technological items); two serrated daggers; a serrated scimitar; 1.5 lb arcenum (see new magic items); 14 small chrysoprase gems (60 gp each).

2. Hestril, 5th-level kaliyani sorcerer (see new monsters): SZ M; AL LE; AC 6; MV 150' on six legs, 60' upright; HD 5; HP 31; #AT 2; Dmg 3-6/2-5 (dagger +1/dagger) or 2-7/2-7 (javelins). Special defenses: immune to poison and mind-affecting spells. Special: infravision. Psionic ability: 210. Attack modes: psionic blast, mind thrust. Defense modes mind blank, mental barrier. Disciplines: clairaudience, clairvoyance, invisibility, telepathic projection. Spells: charm person, dancing lights, hypnotic pattern. Possessions: potion of free action; potion of fire breath; one dagger +1 and a second normal dagger; 6 javelins; a jade amulet of an ouroboros (275 gp); seven silver rings (20 gp each); 4 vials of kaliyani refreshing liquid (see Arden Vul items).
3. 4 kaliyani scouts (see new monsters), as 5th-level thieves: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 150' on six legs, 60' upright; HD 6; HP 43, 41, 38, 36; #AT 2; Dmg 3-8/3-8 (scimitars) or 2-7/2-7 (javelins). Special defenses: immune to poison and mind-affecting spells. Special: infravision; DEX 16. Thief skills: PP 50%, OL 47%, F/RT 40%, MS 40%, HS 31%, HN 20%, CW 90%, RL 25%. Possessions: twin serrated scimitars; six javelins; a set of silver rings, worked glass and minor gemstones, and repurposed coins worth 200 gp. One has a vial of poison; another has a minor heqeti slime (see new monsters) in a breakable flask; another has a potion of invisibility; and one has a solid gold ouroboros bracelet (175 gp).
4. 1 burnt-orange, oily and thick heqeti slime (see new monsters), in a flask held by a kaliyani scout: SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 5' on carbon-based substances; HD 2; HP 13; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6; MR 15%. Special attacks: flesh-eating for 4-7 rounds; corrosive to metal, leather, and wood. Special defenses: healed by electricity or lasers; slowed by cold.

Treasure:

See personal items above.

5-126: Camp Site and Wall of Fire

A permanent wall of fire separates this former administrative chamber from the Midnight Road. A charred corpse of an elven adventurer lies in the Midnight Road in front of it. Those approaching within 20' of the wall from the south side take 1-3 HP/round; this rises to 1-6 HP/round for those within 10'. Passing through it inflicts 2-12 + 12 HP damage.

The chamber is clad in light-blue marble but is devoid of pictorial decoration. Five corpses of human adventurers are scattered about a firepit; the bodies bear signs of having been scorched with fire and then hacked apart. A sixth corpse – of a tunic-clad, serpent-headed being [GM Note: a kaliyani] – lies among the adventurers; the elongated fingers of its right hand are blackened. The chamber also contains seven bedrolls, 4 backpacks, a wooden chest, and a smashed water barrel. The backpacks have been opened and the contents strewn about; a number of once-valuable items (potions, pieces of jewelry, gems, etc.) have been deliberately destroyed. The chest's lid is open, revealing a sizable stash of silver coins inside; the coins are trapped (see below).

GM Note: the human bodies are those of an adventuring party that made its way up from the depths through 5-125. Despite believing they had an agreement with the kaliyani, whom they first encountered at 8-23, the kaliyani followed them and slaughtered them as they slept. Only two members of the party escaped, their thief (the Silent Tempest) and their cleric (Kunda the Outlander).

For the locations of these two survivors, see 5-121; they can also be encountered as random encounters.

Trap: A pale yellow film coats the silver coins in the chest (+5% to detect traps). The film is a powerful contact poison that requires anyone touching a coin to save versus poison (with a -2 penalty) or die.

Treasure:

4,382 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items) in the trapped chest.

A scorched but still-usable set of chain mail +2, as well as two normal suits of scale mail and some mundane weapons. The magic chain mail has its owner's name written across the gambeson: the name is Hermonion (see 5-120).

A scroll of clairvoyance stuck down the pants of one of the corpses.

Tossed among the debris, and only discoverable after a turn of searching, is a flask of black liquid. It is a solvent for the poison that coats the silver coins. Dumping the liquid on the coins produces a puff of acrid smoke as a chemical reaction burns off the poison; although foul, the smoke is harmless.

5-127: Varumani Barracks

The original rudishva iris door leading to this chamber is gone. It has been replaced by a wooden door (also oval) with sturdy iron hinges. The door is kept locked and well oiled (the key is held by Priddy of Archontos in 5-128).

The darkened chamber is 30' tall and plainly decorated in roughly worked granite. The walls are lined with sleeping niches, each about 10' long and 3' high. Freestanding bunkbeds made out of plasteel occupy every other square inch of the chamber, leaving only very narrow passageways (3') between them. Neither the sleeping niches nor the chamber in general contain anything of interest, although the corridor to the south is trapped.

Trap: 20' down the south corridor is a magic mouth, enchanted by Priddy. If the enchantment detects motion within 10' it immediately shouts, in a stentorian Archontean voice, "Alarm! Alarm! Intruders!" The mouth alerts four ogre zombies standing at the entrance to 5-128; the monster zombies move swiftly to repel intruders. Within 4 rounds, Priddy arrives from 5-128 with reinforcements to investigate. See 5-128 for Priddy's reaction.

Inhabitants:

1. 4 monster zombies (ogres): SZ L; AL N; AC 6, MV 90'; HD 6; HP 42, 40, 39, 35; #AT 1; Dmg 4-16. Special defenses: half damage from blunt weapons; immune to charm, cold, death magic, hold, and sleep; turned as ghosts. Special: always strike last in combat.

5-128: Priddy of Archontos

Priddy of Archontos, a slightly crazed magic user and member of the Order of the Fifth Circle [see 'collegia' in the World of Archontos appendix], has taken up residence in this former storage hall. The chamber has been stripped of most of its original furnishings, although an enormous and complex mural occupies the west wall. At the center of the mural are three varumani wearing crossed belts with lots of loops, carrying unusual (and large) hammers, and pointing towards the north. The wall around them is dense with swirled geometric shapes mixed with small quasi-simian beings. Close perusal might reveal a strange oval vessel in the background behind the three varumani (the Beacon).

Plasteel shelving still lines the south and north walls; Priddy has filled the shelves with food supplies (dried meats, dried fruits, coarse cornmeal, a dozen bottles of young red wine, and two large carboys of cider). Hammocks are slung in both the northwest and southwest corners, and four bedrolls are arranged around a campfire set in the middle of the table. Two worktables, a small portable scroll rack, and four stones enchanted with continual light complete the scene.

Priddy's apprentice, Mirko, and his four wary bodyguards accompany the mage. All are normally found in this chamber.

When the alarm rings in 5-127, Priddy rushes with his apprentice and guardsmen to reinforce the zombies. He negotiates first, but if met by force will respond, sending the zombies in first while he and Mirko cast spells and the warriors fire arrows.

Priddy of Archontos: Priddy came to Arden Vul seeking arcnum (see new magic items). While exploring the chasm six weeks ago, Priddy discovered area 7-34, and used it to access the lower Midnight Road via 5-125. Putting up camp here, he has become obsessed with the Troll Pits (5-131), believing wrongly that arcnum is connected to their operation. Although Priddy is slightly eccentric, he is not easily tricked. He is happy to trade information for arcnum, and can supply a good deal of knowledge about all areas and threats accessible from the Midnight Road (but not those accessible by teleportation). He might even trade some of his large selection of miscellaneous keys to those who procure at least 5 lb of arcnum for him. He avoids the varuda guardian (5-107), as well as the defenders of the armory (5-118). Although Priddy is content to remain here indefinitely, his bodyguards are growing anxious about the fact that they appear to be lingering in a highly dangerous area.

Priddy is unaware of the fact that the kaliyani have also recently discovered area 7-34 and have set up camp in 5-125; if alerted to this fact, Priddy becomes quite anxious. He does not wish open conflict with the kaliyani, whose capabilities are unknown to him, but he is also anxious to secure his route of retreat. He departs from 5-128 for the outside within a week of learning of the kaliyani presence; there is a 33% chance that the kaliyani detect him as he attempts to sneak past. If they do, then there is a 25% that Priddy and all his men will be killed by the kaliyani in area 5-125, a 25% chance that Priddy will kill 3 of the kaliyani (who should be removed from roster at 5-125), and a 50% chance that he escapes with only minor injuries on each side. Should he be slain, his equipment will be found at 5-125.

Inhabitants:

1. Priddy of Archontos, 9th-level male Archontean magic user: SZ M; AL LN; AC 1; MV 120'; HD 9; HP 29; #AT 1; Dmg 3-8 (staff of power). Abilities: STR 10, INT 18, WIS 14, DEX 16, CON 9; CHA 10. Possessions: a suit of well-fitted blue silk; leather bracers of defense (AC 5); staff of power (31 charges); wand of summoning (45 charges); Melchior's beads of escape (3 beads; see new magic items). Spells memorized: comprehend languages, identify, protection from evil, read magic; ESP, knock, strength; dispel magic, protection from evil 10' radius, suggestion; polymorph other, wall of fire; interposing hand.

2. Mirko, 5th-level male Archontean magic user and apprentice to Priddy: SZ M; AL NE; AC 6; MV 120'; HD 5; HP 19; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger). Abilities: STR 12, INT 16, WIS 11, DEX 16, CON 15, CHA 13. Possessions: dagger; bracers of defense (AC 8); wand of detecting minerals and metals (23 charges); and a wand of fire (31 charges). His memorized spells are: charm person, read magic, shield, sleep; mirror image, ray of enfeeblement; fly.
3. Juno, 3rd-level female Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 3; HP 24; #AT 1; Dmg 2-11 (halberd), 2-7 (hand axe), or 1-6 (short bow). Abilities: STR 17, INT 8, WIS 9, DEX 10, CON 15, CHA 10. Possessions: banded mail; halberd; hand axe; short bow and 20 arrows; 77 sp and a cameo of a Thorcin woman (75 gp).
4. Kyrus, 3rd-level male Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL NE; AC 4; MV 60'; HD 3; HP 27; #AT 1; Dmg 3-8 (footman's mace), 1-4 (light crossbow). Abilities: STR 16, INT 10, WIS 13, DEX 8, CON 16, CHA 12. Possessions: scale mail and shield +1; footman's mace; light crossbow with 20 bolts; 119 sp.
5. Liriaco, 3rd-level male Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL N; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 3; HP 26; #AT 1; Dmg 2-9 (long sword) or 1-4 (light crossbow). Abilities: STR 16, INT 14, WIS 8, DEX 9, CON 15, CHA 8. Possessions: scale mail and shield; long sword; a light crossbow with 20 bolts; 22 sp, 13 gp, and a tiny silver figure of a jester (25 gp).
6. Mestropo, 4th-level male Thorcin fighter: SZ M; AL LN; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 4; HP 43; #AT 1; Dmg 4-11 (battle axe) or 3-6 (light crossbow +1 and bolts +1). Abilities: STR 18/57, INT 13, WIS 11, DEX 8, CON 17, CHA 15. Possessions: splint mail +1 and shield; battle axe; light crossbow +1 (with 15 bolts +1); 93 sp, 47 gp, and a treasure map.

Treasure:

Four fist-sized lumps of arcanum (see new magic items); two spell books; a scroll of protection from magic; a scroll with remove curse and suggestion; and a scroll of protection from elementals; a sack of 757 sp; another with 819 gp; a pouch with five tourmalines (100 gp each); Priddy's staff of power (16 charges) and his wand of summoning (17 charges); Mirko's wand of detecting minerals and metals (28 charges) and wand of fire (15 charges); Priddy's bracers of defense (AC 7) and

Mirko's bracers of defense (AC 9); Kyrus's shield +1; Liriaco's splint mail +1, light crossbow +1, and 15 crossbow bolts +1; brown and pink rudishva identity plaques (see new technological items); several books, including Beyond the Veil: Interviews with the Elementals; A Complete Decoding of the Old Ones' Glyphs; The Eighth Collegium – Fact or Fiction?; Emperors of Archontos, Volume I; On Friends and Enemies; Great Villains of Archontos, part I: Secunda the Witch; Great Villains of Archontos, part III: Arthuinus the Less-than-Mighty; Vul Speaks; Deeds of the Azure Knights; and the Twelve Labors of Arden (see Arden Vul books for all); and a large collection of old keys, including a key to 5-129.

Spell Book of Priddy of Archontos: Affect normal fires; burning hands; charm person; comprehend languages; detect magic; erase; floating disk; friends; identify; jump; light; magic missile; message; protection from evil; read magic; shield; shocking grasp; sleep; spider climb; unseen servant; write: continual light; darkness 15' radius; detect evil; detect invisibility; ESP; invisibility; knock; levitate; locate object; magic mouth; mirror image; ray of enfeeblement; scare; stinking cloud; strength; web: clairaudience; clairvoyance; dispel magic; fireball; fly; hold person; invisibility 10' radius; monster summoning I; protection from evil 10' radius; slow; suggestion; tongues: charm monster; confusion; extension I; fear; ice storm; minor globe of invulnerability; monster summoning II; polymorph other; remove curse; wall of fire: animate dead; conjure elemental; extension II; interposing hand; monster summoning III; telekinesis: extension III; monster summoning IV: monster summoning V.

Spell Book of Mirko: Affect normal fires; burning hands; charm person; comprehend languages; detect magic; erase; floating disk; identify; light; magic missile; message; protection from evil; read magic; shield; sleep; spider climb; unseen servant; write: continual light; darkness 15' radius; detect evil; detect invisibility; ESP; invisibility; knock; levitate; magic mouth; mirror image; ray of enfeeblement; strength; web: clairaudience; clairvoyance; dispel magic; fireball; fly; monster summoning I; protection from evil 10' radius; extension I; monster summoning II.

5-129: Varumani Practice Grounds

Polished granite walls rise to a dome some 30' above the floor of this brightly lit former 'challenge chamber' of the varumani. On the north wall is a huge (10'x10') stone carving of a grinning varumani face; close inspection reveals severe damage to the face, as if by magic and/or fire. Two plasteel rails, 10' and 12' long, are anchored to the floor at locations (A) and (B) by 3'-tall iron bars. A ledge projects over the west door (C), and a trench 10' long, 4' wide and 6' deep runs near the east door (D). The floor at the center of the chamber (20'x20' square) covers a 20'-deep pit. Dozens of metallic nozzles project from the walls; of these, the key ones (see below) are indicated on the map as E and F.

Two rounds after the chamber is entered, the carved varumani face begins to speak in deep-throated Varumani. Due to the damage inflicted on it (by an irritated Priddy), the words are mostly incomprehensible, appearing as the following set of seemingly random syllables and numbers: "P...e...re Yo...elves! T t...t ...in... 5 ... .. ... .. I .... Now!" (see 5-133 for the non-damaged text of this speech, which reads 'Prepare yourselves! The test begins in 5...4...3...2...1... Now!'). If intruders retreat before the countdown is over, nothing happens. If any door remains open and/or a being is still present in the room at the end of the countdown, the doors slam shut and lock, the lighting starts to flash, and a training routine initiates. The only way to avoid initiating a training routine is to display a pink, silver or yellow rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items) and speak in Varumani something like "No training is required" (any combination with 'no/not' and 'train/training' will work).

The following tables determine the nature of the routine. There is a flat 20% chance that a given routine fails to initiate due to age. Note, furthermore, that anyone on the ledge or in the trench will be protected from some of the effects of the training chamber.

Table One: Number of Effects

D4	Result
1	Roll once on Table 4
2	Roll twice on Table 4
3	Roll thrice on Table 4
4	Roll four times on Table 4

Table Two: Severity of Each Effect

D8	Modification to Effect
1-4	As indicated on table 4
5	Bad: all effects increase damage by 1-6; effects without listed damage now inflict 1-6
6	Worse: all effects increase damage by 2-12; effects without listed damage now inflict 2-12
7	Worst: all effects increase damage by 3-18; effects without listed damage now inflict 3-18
8	Weaker: all effects reduce damage by 1-6

Table 3: Duration of Each Effect

D12	Duration
1-3	Three rounds
4-6	Six rounds

7-9	1 round
10	1 turn
11	2 turns
12	4 turns

Table Four: Training Routine Effects

D8	Effect
1	Fire Blasts: jets of flame spout from F and G in a 30'-long, 20'-wide cone; all take 3-18 HP damage per round unless a save vs. spells is made
2	Sleet: driving sleet pours from ceiling; roll 4d6 under DEX or lose footing, slide 10' in random direction; take 1-6 HP damage per round
3	Darts: high-impact steel darts fire from nozzles around the room; roll 4d6 under DEX or be hit by 1-4 darts for 1-6 HP damage each
4	Poison Darts: same as above, but the darts are poisoned
5	Trap Door: the cover of the central pit (E) flies open, dropping any in a 20'x20' radius for 2-12 HP damage; the cover alternates between open and closed for the remainder of the sequence
6	Gas: sickly purple gas is injected from nozzles all around the chamber. Save vs poison or be subject to confusion
7	Strobe Light: for the next 6 rounds the lights strobe on and off in a dizzying pattern. Save vs spells or be stunned; a new save is possible after 3 rounds
8	Gust of Wind: a powerful breeze is emitted from the varumani face, lasting 6 rounds. All must successfully roll 4d6 under STR or be blown 1-4x10' in a random direction

5-130: Supply Chamber

This former armory and supply chamber was stripped in antiquity. All that remains are four 5'x5'x5' empty stone containers.

5-131: The Troll Pits

The Troll Pits were the site in which the varumani legions were bred and raised. The huge, 40'-tall chamber is clad in white marble and lit by numerous continual light spells.

The doors from the Midnight Road are rudishva iris doors that only open when a pink, silver, or yellow rudishva identity plaque is touched to the accompanying panels. Each door leads past a small antechamber, in which a variety of unfamiliar objects hangs from pegs: gaffing sticks; lengths of hose in several gauges; a bulky florescent green suit with a hood and plastic face plate (i.e., a biohazard suit – see new technological items); two rudishva fire extinguishers with 3 and 4 charges respectively (see new technological items); and, in the east antechamber, a fully-charged stun baton (see new technological items).

Eight pits, each 20' long, 10' wide, 8' deep, and flush with the floor, radiate from a cross-shaped raised basin in the center of the room. Four of the pits are covered with bioplas lids; two more are filled with foul soups of thick, viscous purplish fluids; and two more are empty and dry. See below for details on each type of pit.

The cross-shaped central basin is 5' tall, made of stone, and filled with gently burbling, pale-yellow, viscous, neuroderm (see new technological items). The surface of the neuroderm is currently inaccessible, as a softly-buzzing horizontal forcefield shields it from the open air (to access it, see 5-132). The neuroderm matrix is itself living, if non-sentient; it has been kept warm by rudishva technology for thousands of years, and could still be used to create new life forms. It could be carried from the basin and used to fill one of the pits. There is enough neuroderm present to fill two pits, with a bit left over. The neuroderm will slowly replenish if even a quart remains in the basin (it will take a month to regrow enough material to fill one pit); should it be cleaned out entirely, however, the supply will be lost. Neuroderm is highly flammable, a fact which those engaging in dangerous pyrotechnics in the area should beware!

Ceramic basins some 4' tall occupy the eastern and western ends of the chamber. These flush-basins have visible drains, as well as projecting spray nozzle and two plastic buttons. The buttons summoned cold and hot water through the nozzle, and were used to rinse off newly created varumani. Currently only the western basin is operational.

In the northeast and northwest corners are two purple plasteel pads on each of which is painted a large 'X'. A series of ruby-red nubs along the walls by each pad activate when any weight of more than 50 lb is placed on a purple pad. The lasers interlock to form a force cage. The lasers may only be disabled from the control center in 5-132; those standing on the pads are effectively trapped unless they attempt to push through the laser beams for 8-64 HP damage.

Covered Troll Pits (A, C, D, and F)

These four pits are covered with bioplas lids, which use obscure rudishva techno-sorcery to 'cook' the neuroderm into the form chosen at the control chamber (5-132). Three of the four covered pits contain fully 'grown' true varumani of the G, or Rudiga, model (see new monsters); if these lids are removed (open doors check), the varumani will slowly emerge, groggy and uncertain. Although fully mature, they will lack cultural and racial cues and, as a result, are 25% likely to go insane within 1-3 turns and attack all in sight. If the varumani do not go insane, they will be susceptible to imprinting on any who take them under their wing. The fourth covered pit (D) contains a failed experiment by Priddy of Archontos (c.f. 5-128); if the lid is uncovered, an insane and deformed varumani-ibis hybrid springs forth and proceeds to cause mayhem.

Empty Troll Pits (B and G)

These pits are, well, empty!

Goo-Filled Troll Pits (E and H)

These pits are also the product of Priddy of Archontos's inept experimentation (for Priddy, see 5-128). Each pit stinks of rancid biological matter, and each bubbles and burps alarmingly. Each turn spent in the area provokes a 1 in 6 chance that a purple pudding (see new monsters) crawls forth from the muck (a total of 6 such puddings can be spawned if the dice are unlucky).

Inhabitants:

1. 3 G-model, true varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 60; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or by weapon. Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. As G-model true varumani, these creatures are not likely to prove loyal, exhibiting instead a penchant for selfishness, machination, and treachery.

2. 1 insane varumani-ibis hybrid: SZ L; AL N; AC 6; MV 120'; HD 6; HP 41; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/2-8. Special defenses: regenerate 2 hp/round; immune to mind-affecting spells.
3. 1-6 purple puddings (see new monsters): SZ L; AL N; AC 8; MV 60'; HD 4; HP 28, 27, 25, 24, 23, 18; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12. Special attacks: corrosive to metal and leather. Special defenses: immune to fire; grows with electricity; conductive.

Treasure:

The basin of neuroderm holds, at its bottom, a ring of spell turning. It would take 3 turns of careful (and disgusting) searching to find the ring.

Antechambers: a rudishva biohazard suit; two rudishva fire extinguishers (3 and 4 charges); and a fully-charged stun baton (see new technological items for all three).

5-132: Troll Pit Control

A rudishva iris door leads to this small chamber. It opens to a pink, silver or yellow rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items). Within are the control panels used to operate the troll pits (5-131). The east and west walls are both mostly covered with live video screens that show all action in 5-131 (recorders are mounted above the draining basins in that chamber). In front of each screen is a console with four smaller screens, three dials, and a slot (for inserting a bioplas matrix); the screens for pits A, B, C, and D are on the western wall of 5-132, while those for E, F, G, and H are on the east wall.

In the center of the control room are two more consoles, 6' tall and facing each other. One displays a small screen and 3 dials and 6 buttons; it is used to control conditions (heat, viscosity, force shield) of the neuroderm basin in 5-131. The other tall console contains 33 buttons, each with a slightly different octagonal shape (varying number, length and thickness of interior and radiating lines); this rudishva 'keyboard' was used to program the neuroderm matrices vital to the operation of the Troll Pits. A hidden compartment in the central console (detect as a secret door) contains three blank and three programmed matrices (one for each of the varumani models; see below).

Operating a Troll Pit: To operate one of the eight pits, one inserts a bioplas matrix card into the slot of the relevant station on the console, twists the first button to 'on' (the screen lights up), turns the second dial to the appropriate setting of 'heat' (per the matrix card), and then turns the third dial slowly from left to right. If this is done correctly, the screen will show a silhouette of the intended creation (normally a varumani) and a blue 'completion bar' which fills as the third dial is turned. Once the bar is filled, the process takes 1 day plus 1-12 hours before the desired creatures is 'fully grown'; progress towards this end is indicated by a 'countdown' clock on the screen (in Glyphik, of course). Note: the consoles for Pits B and E are completely broken and inoperable.

Manipulating the Neuroderm: One of the central consoles allows the neuroderm to be manipulated. One of the buttons turns on the console, while a second is a simple 'on/off' switch for the force shield that protects and contains the neuroderm. The three dials control heat, viscosity, and potency of the mixture. For all but the most learned of technosorcerers, however, micro-adjustments to the neuroderm settings will be largely irrelevant and meaningless. What is useful, though, is the heat dial; if it is turned to 3/4 full (180-degrees F; this stop is marked with a line on the console), the neuroderm will begin to grow more quickly, allowing one to replace used neuroderm more swiftly. At this setting, enough neuroderm to fill a troll pit will be grown in 1 week instead of the usual month. If left unattended on this setting, however, the neuroderm will grow so rapidly that, absent the force shield, it will spill over the sides of the basin; in this event the entire chamber will soon be covered in a layer of neuroderm. Should this occur, the neuroderm would have attained sentience, possibly allowing it to create its own creatures from the pits.

Imprinting a Matrix: A bioplas matrix card contains the genetic instructions necessary to transform neuroderm into a living entity. The rudishva attained high levels of skill in biogenetic manipulation, although much was lost in the wreck of the Beacon. The varumani proved to be one of their most successful models, and the base genetic matrix for 'varumani' (G-model – see below) is still the default option that loads when the second tall console is activated. The other two models of varumani are also programmed into the console; these models can be accessed easily from the main control screen.

Truly original and unique genetic creation (i.e., not merely modifying the default varumani model) is, of course, possible from the console; the only limitations to such Frankensteinian activity would be 1) the operator's knowledge of Glyphik; 2) the supply of bioplas matrix cards; and 3) the supply of neuroderm. A GM willing to encourage radical bio-creation is responsible for the details of such activity.

Varumani, Model A (Vanara model): Heat setting is 95-degrees F. Pre-fabricated matrix cards are yellow.

Varumani, Model D (Druva model): Heat setting is 110-degrees F. Pre-fabricated matrix cards are green.

Varumani, Model G (Rudiga model): Heat setting is 100-degrees F. Pre-fabricated matrix cards are red.

Teleport Nodes:

Two teleport nodes exist in small chambers off the south side of the control chamber:

T2: access to 5-92

T9: access to 5-137

5-133: Varumani Practice Grounds, redux

Aside from the following exceptions, this chamber is identical to 5-129:

1. The varumani face is undamaged, and its speech is ungarbled. It states, loudly, "Prepare Yourselves! The Test begins in 5 ... 4 ... 3 ... 2 ... 1 ... Now!" The language is Varumani, though.

2. Three holographic varumani warriors appear as the 'test' begins - one at each door; they engage any and all in combat, shouting cheerful but derogatory insults in Varumani all the while. They never appear to be injured by the training routine effects, but can be 'killed' by combat. Of course, if the room is entered a second or subsequent time, they will be back.

3. In the trench is the corpse of an ancient adventurer, still dressed in imperial field plate (see Arden Vul items) and gripping a halberd +2.

Inhabitants:

1. 3 semi-solid holographic varumani warriors [effectively shades as created by the 6th-level illusionist spell of that name]: SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 6; HP 42, 41, 39; #AT 3; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10. Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. If the shades are recognized as unreal, use these stats: AC 6; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-6.

Treasure:

Imperial field plate (see Arden Vul items); halberd +2.

5-134: Supply Chamber

Like its counterpart at 5-130, this former armory and supply chamber has been mostly stripped. Four 5'x5'x5' stone containers remain, one of which has a few items still inside.

Treasure:

3 Arden Vul cakes (see Arden Vul items); a dinged-up but still usable plasteel breast-plate (see new technological items); and a plastic container holding 36 small plastic figurines (toy soldiers).

5-135: Varumani Barracks 2

The door from the Midnight Road is a rudishva iris door that only opens when a pink, silver, or yellow rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items) is presented. Inside, the darkened chamber is 30' tall and plainly decorated in roughly worked granite. The walls are lined with sleeping niches, each about 10' long and 3' high. Freestanding bunkbeds made out of plasteel occupy every other square inch of the chamber, leaving only very narrow passageways (3') between them.

A motion detector in the niche closest to the south exit triggers a holographic image of a varumani dressed in strangely colored rigid armor when anyone approaches within 10'. The image of the varumani speaks conspiratorially, but in Varumani: "Brothers! The treachery of the kaliyani has destroyed the perfect hegemony of the star borne. Our masters are killed or lie dying. The varuda are no more. But the varumani survive! The thegns, thinking as always about the welfare of their children, have located a new home for the pack! Druva and Rudiga remain to guide you, who are our rear guard. Vanara leads the people to a new life below. Seek Druva and Rudiga at the Command Chamber, and they will direct you to the hidden shrine. We await your swift return! Hurry!"

GM Backstory: when the heqeti biological attack succeeded in wiping out most of the rudishva leadership and ensuring the death or quarantine of the varuda, the leaderless varumani decided to set out on their own. This holographic note was left in one of the varumani barracks to assist any stragglers who did not join the initial exodus. The note reveals that the varumani thegns (Vanara, Druva and Rudiga) were aware of the kaliyani complicity in the demise of the rudishva hegemony. The varumani plan, as revealed in this note, was for Druva and Rudiga to remain at 5-137 (Command) to gather any stragglers; these would then follow Vanara and the main body down a secret route (5-141). Unfortunately the creators of the holographic note did not realize that Rudiga was complicit in the betrayal; he led kaliyani and heqeti warriors in a successful ambush of Druva (5-137). No stragglers ever found Vanara and the main body of varumani refugees.

Secret Door (southeast): This door takes the form of a 3'-tall, 4'-wide panel in the lowest bunk in the northwest corner of the barracks. It is hard to detect (1 in 8) and lacks a conventional opening mechanism; it can be easily shattered by a swift blow from a hammer (open doors check).

5-136: Stripped Chamber

This enormous chamber has been stripped to the walls, with only a few brackets, some broken mountings, and dozens of holes in the wall to suggest its former status. A massive mural on the east wall shows three varumani dancing ecstatically, with hammers and daggers in their hands; around them flutter creatures identifiable as chasm cephalopods and quasi-simians.

The skeleton of a huge varumani lies in the exact center of the chamber, surrounded by dozens of skeletons of heqeti (hoppers). All the skeletons bear scorch marks. The skeletons are inert until the chamber is entered, at which point the varumani skeleton ponderously rises, points at any visitors, and demands in a booming voice, and in Varumani, "By the Thegn's name shall the Way be made clear!" If the proper name ("Vanara") is forthcoming, the skeletal varumani will walk over to the secret door in the east wall, insert its finger into one of the holes in the wall, and wait while the secret door swings open. Despite its threatening tone and appearance, the skeleton does not engage in combat, nor will it defend itself. If attacked, it merely shouts forth the following in a continuous loop: "The Thegns will know of this treachery! The varumani shall find a new home! Beware!" GM Note: for information on Vanara and the fate of the varumani, see 5-135, 5-137, and 5-139.

Secret Door (northeast): This door is hard to locate (1 in 8), and very difficult to open without a key (-30%). The skeletal finger of a varumani opens the lock.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 varumani skeleton: SZ L; AL N; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 5; HP 25; #AT 0; Dmg nil. Special defenses: half damage from cutting weapons. This skeleton is a noncombatant, and will not defend itself.

Treasure:

The skeletal finger of the varumani serves as the key to the secret door in the east wall.

5-137: Varumani Command

The rudishva iris door leading to this chamber was destroyed in antiquity, allowing for easy access to the corridor within. The corridor is stuffed with a 3'-deep layer of rubbish and debris. The top layer is comprised mostly of broken bits of rudishva equipment, mangled and burned bits of plasteel, leather, and wood, unidentifiable fragments of metal, and so forth, all abandoned when the varumani returned to fetch supplies and look for their missing thegns. Beneath the rubbish is a layer of bones, 2/3 of which are heqeti (big femurs) and 1/3 of which are varumani. Traversing the corridor is only possible at 1/2 movement. Within the debris is a discolored, but still usable rudishva plasteel breastplate (see new technological items); 2 turns of searching reveal it.

The chamber within was the nerve center of varumani operations during the rudishva period. A single triple-decker bunkbed and three troll chests (see new technological items) occupy the northeast corner, while the western wall features a large, cracked black mirror (viewscreen), and a long console made of plasteel which features a number of dials and switches; all the equipment has been destroyed. The south wall features a long mural that wraps on both sides of the teleportation niche. On the east side are varuda and varumani figures, surrounded by geometric and floral patterns; on the western side is a rudishva and a piece of destroyed mural (it used to hold a kaliyani figure).

A titanic battle seems to have taken place here, as the entry to the chamber is littered with bones - mostly heqeti. In the center of the chamber, however, lie five varumani skeletons. One is particularly large, being that of Druva the thegn, who died here with his housecarls defending the teleportation chamber. Druva's fierce spirit does not rest in peace, for he was betrayed by his colleague Rudiga; instead, Druva and his warriors rise as skeletal wights (see new monsters) to confront any new intruders, barking gutturally in varumani "Death to all traitors!"

Teleport Node:

T9: Access to 5-132 (Troll Pits Control)

GM Backstory: Rudiga, the third of the varumani thegns, betrayed the varumani plan to escape the fall of the rudishva to the kaliyani, and hence to the heqeti. Rudiga secretly summoned a pod of heqeti to varumani command, where they swarmed Druva and his small rear-guard, killing them all. Vanara, who had led the main body of varumani to Level 7, returned with a small force to the Midnight Road seeking supplies and news of their lost brethren. He discovered the fate of Druva and Rudiga, but elected to keep this information secret from the rest of the varumani. Instead, he lauded both Druva and Rudiga as lost heroes, whose miraculous reappearance the varumani saw as imminent. If evidence of the betrayal of Rudiga were brought to the current troll thegn and/or his court, therefore, it would cause seismic ruptures in the political makeup of the court, and would lead inevitably to a collapse of the careful détente that holds among the clans.

Secret Door (southwest): This door was a closely held secret of the varumani leadership, known only to the three thegns and a few advisors. It is hard to detect (1 in 8) and opens by applying brute force to push a section of stone backwards.

Inhabitants:

1. Druva the thegn, as an enhanced skeletal wight (see new monsters): SZ M; AL CE; AC 3; MV 120'; HD 8+1; HP 55; #AT 1; Dmg 5-12. Special attacks: energy drain. Special defenses: successful energy drain heals 5-12 HP; +1 or better weapons to hit; edged weapons do ½ damage; immune to sleep, charm, hold, poison, paralyzation and cold; turned as ghosts.
2. 4 undead varumani housecarls as skeletal wights (see new monsters): SZ M; AL CE; AC 3; MV 120'; HD 5+1; HP 37, 33, 32, 30; #AT 1; Dmg 3-9. Special attacks: energy drain. Special defenses: successful energy drain heals 3-9 HP; +1 or better weapons to hit; edged weapons do ½ damage; immune to sleep, charm, hold, poison, paralyzation and cold; turned as ghosts.

Treasure:

- Druva's claymore (see new magic items); two laser rifles (no charges – see new technological items); four varumani-sized hammers (two-handed); two rust, one sky blue, and one pink rudishva identity plaques (see new technological items); and a message, written in varumani on a piece of clear plastic, inside a pouch on Druva's body. The message reads: "Druva - await me at Varumani Command. I bring the remnant of our people so that we may guide them to safety. [Signed] Rudiga the Thegn." [GM Note: this was Rudiga's set-up for the betrayal of Druva]
- 3 troll chests (see new technological items), keyed to Druva. His hand, even in its skeletal form, will open the chests.
- Chest #1: 10 25-lb bars of high-quality steel (25 sp each), 10 25-lb bars of pure silver (1,250 sp each), and 25 2-lb lumps of still-potent arcnum (see new magic items). These items could be used in area 5-89.
- Chest #2: 5 rudishva lesser power supplies; 3 clips of 10 ordinary darts for dart throwers; 1 clip of narcotic gas darts; 1 clip of explosive darts; and a rudishva breather (see new technological items for all).
- Chest #3: a silk pouch on which a varumani face has been sewn with gold thread (20 gp), containing 5 blue sapphires (1,000 gp each), 5 rich purple corundum gems (1,000 gp each), and a set of silver and ivory tokens for casting lots (a favorite varumani past-time), worth 175 gp generally but 7,500 gp to the current Thegn (see 7-30). Also in the chest are 2 battle helmets, one sized for varumani and one for medium creatures (see new technological items).

5-138: The Great Pillar

The rudishva iris door leading from the Midnight Road to the Great Pillar is of an unusual sort; it is not opened in the usual manner, by presenting a colored rudishva identity plaque. Instead, it requires a special key to unlock. The lock is extremely complex (-40% to pick). The troll thegn (7-30) and the Arena Lord (6-85) each possess a key. The keys are 1'-long, 3"-diameter, grey plasteel rods with a notched, 1"-tall flange on each end. The door is also enchanted with the equivalent of a wizard lock cast at 12th level.

The door leads to a 5'-wide ledge that circles a massive octagonal shaft. The walls of the shaft are perfectly smooth black granite. A 30'-diameter pillar of black granite extends from the ceiling of the chamber (25' up) down 1,100' through Level 6 (6-103) and Level 7 (7-37) before ending up on the floor of the chasm (9-30). Anyone jumping into the shaft will fall horribly to his/her death. The air in the shaft is fresh, however, and a strong breeze blows from below. The walls of the shaft were treated by ancient kaliyani techno-sorcerers with anti-magic resistance, largely to protect unwanted burrowing into this important site. Although magic will work inside the shaft, magical breaches of the shaft walls are almost impossible.

The Great Pillar itself is of black granite, rendered smooth by rudishva stone-cutting torches. A narrow stone bridge extends from the ledge on the east side of the shaft to the pillar itself. A set of hand- and footholds are cut into the Pillar beginning at the point in which this bridge intersects the pillar; this precarious 'ladder' is invisible from the door side of the ledge, and descends the Pillar in a counter-clockwise spiral. It is thus possible, although highly impractical, to descend the Pillar by hand and foot. Rolls of 5d6 under STR and/or DEX are necessary for anyone so foolhardy as to climb all the way to the Pillar's base. Some alternate mechanism - such as flight, levitation or feather fall - is obviously preferable to such a rigorous climb.

A pod of chasm cephalopods inhabits the upper reaches of the shaft; they are hungry and will be drawn to light and/or noise in 5-138 within 5 rounds.

GM Backstory: The rudishva built the Great Pillar in the heady early days of conquest before their technological resources began to grow scarce. It was via the pillar shaft that legions of hover-sled-mounted varumani and gliding varuda descended through the depths to combat the heqeti hordes. Although many of the varumani clans retain legends of these assaults and of the Pillar, only the thegn (7-30) and his court sorcerer (7-22) are aware of the true location and nature of the pillar, as well as the access it provides to the stronghold of their ancient foe. Indeed, the thegn possesses two of the remaining hover-sleds (7-36 – see new technological items), although their existence is a closely guarded secret.

Inhabitants:

1. 10 small chasm cephalopods (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 5; MV 60' flying (Class A); HD 2; HP 15, 14, 14, 13, 13, 12, 12, 11, 11, 8; #AT 5 (4 tentacles and a beak); Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-3/1-3/1-4; MR 25%. Special attacks: surprise on 1-4.
2. 4 medium chasm cephalopods (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 5; MV 60' flying (Class A); HD 4; HP 27, 26, 25, 24; #AT 5 (4 tentacles and a beak); Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-4/1-4/1-6; MR 25%. Special attacks: surprise on 1-4.
3. 1 large chasm cephalopod (see new monsters): SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 60' flying (Class A); HD 6; HP 45; #AT 6 (five tentacles and a beak); Dmg 1-6/1-6/1-6/1-6/1-6/1-8; MR 25%. Special attacks: surprise on 1-4; one tentacle drains spells from casters, adding 2-8 HP to chasm cephalopod per spell.

5-139: Secret Varumani Shrine

This bi-level cave is the site of a forgotten varumani shrine, one that holds the slumbering remains of the legendary First Thegn, Vanara. The modern varumani still recount legends of the shrine, but are unaware of its location; those providing such information, let alone offering relics of great Vanara, would become instant players in the politics of the thegn's court.

The secret door from 5-136 (q.v. for method of opening this door) opens into a roughly-shaped tunnel that leads to a second secret door; this door leads to a natural cave whose floor has been smoothed by sentient (i.e., varumani) hands. Two enormous stone chairs sit at the edge of this cave, overlooking a cliff that drops 30' to the floor of the shrine proper. Sitting in the chairs are the skeletons of two of Vanara's housecarls.

The lower cave features a 40' ceiling, is lit by seven continual light stones mounted on the walls. Three huge statues of varumani stand around a stone table, on which lies a remarkably well-preserved varumani corpse, that of Vanara himself. The statues are inert, but remarkably well carved; the names "Rudiga" and "Druva" are carved in the pediments of the side statues, while "Vanara" is carved on the southernmost statue. The Rudiga statue has been defaced, however, and a huge Semi-glyphik symbol for "traitor" has been painted across its chest in blood.

The stone table is simple granite, but important artifacts and much wealth surround it. Huge piles of smashed and broken rudishva technology lies to each side of the table. In front of the table is a locked troll chest (see new technological items), as well as four cylindrical plasteel containers.

Vanara and His Actions:

Vanara and his housecarls wait quietly as giant rudishva (varumani) skeletons (see new monsters). If intruders enter the shrine through the secret door from 5-136, the housecarls located on the ledge above the main shrine activate first, and shout in guttural Varumani speech: "You approach the First Thegn. Bend the knee, and explain yourselves lest his wrath become apparent!" Negotiation is possible (in Varumani only), although the housecarls are not very intelligent. Clever talking might allow the party to descend to talk to Vanara. If PCs access the shrine through the tunnel from 5-140, the housecarls leap down from the cliff and advance menacingly, shouting the same words while Vanara broods on his chair.

If proper respect is shown (i.e., if the PCs respectfully approach Vanara and kneel in homage to the thegn), Vanara speaks. He demands a full accounting of the history of the varumani since his exile; if a plausible one is forthcoming, Vanara treats the PCs with neutrality or even goodwill. If no account is forthcoming, or the PCs show disrespect, or if they have attacked his housecarls, or if they cannot communicate in Varumani, Vanara grows angry and prepares to attack. The PCs have one last chance to placate the thegn, as he then demands: "As a sign of your fidelity, you shall produce the Eyes, Heart, and Tongue of Rudiga within three days. If you fail, you would be advised to flee, for you shall be seen as children of Rudiga and, therefore, enemies of the People." The PCs then have an opportunity to flee; if they do not do so within 5 rounds, Vanara and his men attack. It is, however, impossible to produce the organs of Rudiga, since the treacherous thegn fled Arden Vul with his kaliyani allies millennia ago.

Those PCs who return to the shrine (without the viscera of Rudiga) will have a difficult task to convince Vanara not to slay them; a reaction roll (with a -45% penalty) should be made to establish Vanara's reaction to the PCs. If, by some chance, returning PCs manage to placate Vanara, he will see treat them as lesser vassals, and will command them to bring the modern varumani back to their ancestral homelands. If, as is more likely, Vanara is unconvinced by their pleas, the thegn attacks.

Secret Door (west): The door is normal to find and opens only by brute force (i.e., a successful open doors check). It opens into a tunnel that leads to a second secret door blocking entrance to area 5-136.

GM Note: For a brief summary of Vanara's career and the complex circumstances by which he ended up in this location, see the Testament of Vanara in the Arden Vul books appendix.

Inhabitants:

1. Vanara, the First Thegn, as an intelligent giant varumani skeleton (see new monsters): SZ L; AL NE; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8+8; HP 68; #AT 1 or 2; Dmg 3-18 (weapon) or 2-8/2-8 (bone throwing); MR 50%. Special attacks: bone throwing; sonic blast. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; half damage from sharp or edged weapons; half damage from fire; immune to sleep, charm, cold, poison, and paralysis.
2. 2 varumani housecarls, as semi-intelligent giant varumani skeletons (see new monsters): SZ L; AL NE; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8+8; HP 64, 61; #AT 1 or 2; Dmg 3-18 (weapon) or 2-8/2-8 (bone throwing); MR 50%. Special attacks: bone throwing; sonic blast. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; half damage from sharp or edged weapons; half damage from fire; immune to sleep, charm, cold, poison, and paralysis.

Treasure:

On Vanara's corpse: the mattock of the troll thegn (see new magic items); a bag of holding (of the largest capacity) in the shape of belt pouch and webbed belts; and, etched with acid in a small codex of plasteel folios, the Testament of Vanara (see Arden Vul books).

A troll chest (see new technological items), keyed to Vanara (his skeletal hand will still open the chest): it contains 10 15-lb bars of solid gold (750 gp each); 10 10-lb bars of solid platinum (2,500 gp each); and a set of earrings with loops attaching them to a torc, made of platinum and topaz (5,750 gp).

4 plasteel cylinders: these containers are 3' tall and 1' in diameter. Unscrewing a lid opens them. Each container contains the equivalent of 10 doses of a potion. Cylinder #1 contains sweetwater; cylinder #2 contains extra healing; cylinder #3 contains invulnerability; cylinder #4 contains flying.

5-140: Pool with Depths

This cave contains a 30'-deep pool of cold, clear water. A rocky tunnel leading north to 5-139 exits the pool at a point 10' below the surface.

5-141: Transit Cave, with Access to Levels 3 and 7

Vanara found the hole leading to this cave when he was exploring in the Great Cavern; the hole from 3-179 leads down 80' to an intermediary (unmapped) cave, and thence down another 170' to this natural cavern. The northeastern wall of 5-141 has a chiseled image of a leering, salamander-creature (a heqeti); this has been covered in varumani graffiti of an exceptionally vulgar sort. The western tunnel, originally a heqeti passage, leads to caves near the troll thegn's court (area 7-88). The northern tunnel (located behind the secret door) was carved secretly by a select unit of varumani under Vanara's leadership. As it connects this cave to areas 5-135 and 5-137, the tunnel served as the varumani escape route during the chaos of the rudishva collapse.

Secret Door (north): The door is difficult to spot (1 in 8) and opens only when an open doors check is successfully made.

LEVEL 6: THE TROLL LIFTS AND THE ARENA

Level 6 is known to the denizens of Arden Vul for three main attractions, the Troll Lifts (6-1 to 6-5), the Inn of the Lost (6-7 to 6-20) and the Arena (6-55 to 6-94). Each of these areas is potentially a place of peace, as each plays an important role in the political and social lives of the intelligent factions of Arden Vul. Those who visit any of these three locations with open arms instead of unsheathed weapons can be assured of a neutral reception and relative security, for the inhabitants of these three regions enforce peace and security with an iron hand. The regions that surround these three islands of relative peace are, however, quite deadly, and include several extremely dangerous locations: the Lock Cavern with its oozes and deranged Sun-Scarred Knight (6-39), the domain of the Frost Mother (6-137 to 6-142), the slime-choked Crew Quarters of the Beacon (6-113 to 6-124), and the lost tomb of the Archontean hero, Marius Tricotor (6-154). The Great Chasm (6-108) allows travel up to level 5 and down to level 7.

GENERAL CONSTRUCTION NOTES

Heqeti areas: 6-1, 6-50, 6-51, 6-54, 6-92 to 6-98, 6-104 to 6-107.

Areas 6-41 to 6-43 and 6-55 to 6-91 were also originally heqeti areas; they have been repurposed over the millennia, and have thus lost some of the pebbling and most of the oiliness of typical heqeti chambers.

Rudishva areas: 6-4, 6-5, 6-27 to 6-38, 6-95A, 6-99, 6-100, 6-102, 6-103, 6-109 to 6-111, 6-113 to 6-124, 6-162 to 6-164

Archontean areas: 6-7 to 6-16, 6-18 to 6-20, 6-40, 6-44 to 6-49, 6-52, 6-53, 6-130 to 6-160

ICONIC LOCATIONS

The Inn of the Lost (6-7 to 6-20, 6-28)

The Arena (6-68)

The Great Chasm (6-108)

IMPORTANT NPCs

Gorlen, overseer of the Troll Lifts (6-5)

Thegan White-Mane (6-19)

Isocorax (6-20)

RAJ-750, insane rudishva AI (6-27)

The Arena Lord (6-85)

Tredgeris the Dapifer (6-75)

The Bad Neighbors (6-113, 6-129)

SIGNIFICANT REGIONS OF LEVEL 6

1. The Troll Lifts (areas 6-1 to 6-5, 6-50)

The Troll Lifts provide a means of traveling up and across the Great Chasm (6-108). The Lifts themselves are essentially large baskets attached to ropes and pulleys, which giant bestial varumani hoist up and down under the direction of a true varumani overseer. On Level 6, the Lifts provide access up to Level 5 (at 6-3), down to Level 7 (at 6-5), down to Level 8 (at 6-1), and across the chasm itself (at 6-1, 6-4, and 6-5). Each lift is operated by an overseer appointed by the troll thegn (7-30). Fares are fixed by the thegn at 10 sp per leg per voyage, although some overseers extort a bit more from weak travelers.

Factions: The varumani own and operate the Lifts. An attack on any of the Lifts constitutes an assault against the varumani people. None of the other factions would dream of challenging varumani authority here.

Construction: Areas 6-1 and 6-50 were originally of heqeti construction (see general introduction, architectural features), while areas 6-2 to 6-5 were built by the rudishva. No doors exist in this region. Ceilings are 10'-12' tall.

Environment: The region is moist, humid, and noisy thanks to the waterfalls at areas 6-6A and 6-6B

2. The Inn of the Lost (6-7 to 6-20, 6-28)

A functioning inn, with guest-rooms, kitchen, and a common room, occupies a suite of ancient Archontean administrative offices. Formerly known as the House of Isocorax, the area is now more commonly referred to as the Inn of the Lost. The current innkeeper, Thegan White-Mane (6-19), has proclaimed that the Inn defines a zone of peace, within which other grudges, disputes, and feuds must be put aside; this zone commences at the 'Peace Door' (6-7A) and includes all rooms in the Inn. Not surprisingly, the inn has become a place of refuge for those fleeing from more powerful enemies (i.e., 'the lost'). Beneath the veneer of peace and understanding, however, Thegan carefully maintains several deep, dark secrets. A small band of traders gathers in a chamber (6-28) near the inn; although not formally under the protection of the Inn's peace zone, long custom has ensured that this area, too, is one in which enmities are laid aside. Thegan makes good use of the traders' connections outside Arden Vul, especially so as to ensure his continued access to rastite lotus powder (see new flora), which he trades to Deino (3-158).

Factions: None of the main factions controls the Inn. Thegan receives the mostly tacit, but occasionally explicit, support of the other factions, including the varumani thegn (7-30), the goblin king (SL4-22), the Lord of the Arena (6-85), and even the beastmen (see 3-138 to 3-162).

Construction: Typical Archontean construction. With the exception of the Peace Door (6-7A), which is highly enchanted, other doors are new-ish models of wood with iron bands. Most have functioning locks, the keys to which either are found at reception (6-7), or in the hands of Thegan (6-19) or Justin the Nose (6-7, 6-9A). Ceilings are 10' tall.

Environment: An ancient anti-magic shell covers the chambers of the Inn; spell-casting does not work within the shell, unless one possesses one of the rings of higher purpose (see new magic items).

3. The Domain of the Arena Lord (6-55 to 6-94)

This region is centered around an ancient heqeti gladiatorial arena, one that has seen consistent use by successive civilizations for almost 4,000 years. Today the Arena is operated by one of the apparently ageless rudishva survivors, a being known only as 'the Lord of the Arena' (6-85). The Arena Lord rules his domain with an iron fist and strict neutrality; those visiting the Arena are expected to abide by the general rules, which forbid physical altercations of any sort other than those taking place in the Arena itself. Access to the Arena is easy, whether from the Troll Lifts or through corridors leading to the other major centers of intelligent habitation in the Halls (e.g., 6-65 through 6-67). The Arena provides an important economic function within the halls: the Lord pays well for monsters and slaves, and offers a convenient means for the newly rich to spend their winnings.

Factions: This region constitutes its own lesser faction. The leaders of the other factions appreciate the entertainment and economic role the Arena plays and are hence uninterested in efforts to eliminate the arena or its Lord.

Construction: Most of the stonework of the main areas of the region is very old, dating to the heqeti period. Due to millennia of occupation and modification by successor civilizations, however, the usual pebbled, oily nature of heqeti stonework is less pronounced here. Area 6-95A is of rudishva construction. Doors are standard wooden doors. Ceilings, unless otherwise stated, are 10' tall.

Environment: The area is humid and hot due to the high density of inhabitation.

4. Former Archontean Administrative Offices and Shrines (6-136 to 6-160)

West of the chasm the Archontean built a series of administrative offices, shrines, and tombs, including those of Marius Tricotor, the great archon, and Lucius Cornelius, his biographer.

Factions: None of the intelligent factions controls this region, and none see much reason to explore here, both because of the dangers posed by the Frost Mother (6-136) and because of the (erroneous) perception that there is little of value to be found here.

Construction: Stonework is typical of the Archontean era. Doors are wood, with iron bands; due to their age, they are easier to burst open (+1 to chances to open doors). The north side of the door at 6-136 is rimmed with frost and cold to the touch. Ceilings are 10'.

Environment: Most of the region is cool and dry. The areas controlled by the Frost Mother (6-136 to 6-142), however, are bone cold (20 degrees F) and covered with drifts of frost and snow.

ACCESS AND EGRESS

To surface: spiral stair at 6-152, leading up to the Carrion Tower in AV-27

To Levels 2, 3, 5, 7, 8, 9: Great Chasm at 6-108, leading up to 2-63A, 3-38 and 5-34, and down to 7-3, 8-2, and 9-1

To Level 3: teleporter at 6-48, leading to area 3-188

To Level 3: stairs at 6-49A, leading up to 3-50B

To Level 4: teleporter at 6-48, leading to 4-167

To Level 4: tunnel at 6-67, leading up to 4-161

To Level 5: Troll Lift at 6-3, leading up to 5-55

To Level 5: rudishva teleport node (T10) at 6-37, leading to 5-106

To Level 5: stairs at 6-57, leading up to 5-75

To Level 5: rudishva teleport node (T4) at 6-95A, leading to 5-92

To Levels 5, 7, and 9: transit shaft at 6-164, leading up to 5-84 and down to 7-146 and 9-91

To Levels 5, 7, and 9: the Great Pillar at 6-103, leading up to 5-138, and down to 7-37 and 9-30

To Level 5: rudishva teleport node (T3) at 6-124, leading to 5-92

To Level 5: rudishva teleport node (T14) at 6-162, leading to 5-31

To Level 5: tunnel at 6-166, leading up to 5-100

To Level 7: Troll Lift at 6-5, leading down to 7-1

To Level 7: corridor at 6-65, leading down to 7-42

To Level 7: rudishva teleport node (T16) at 6-162, leading to 7-6

To Level 8: Troll Lift at 6-1, leading down to 8-1

To Level 8: hole in 6-20, leading down to 8-33

To Level 8: tunnel at 6-44B, leading down to 8-71

To Level 8: teleporter at 6-48, leading to 8-6

To Level 8: tunnel at 6-60, leading to 8-129

To Level 8: stairs at 6-106, leading down to 8-25

To Level 9: teleporter at 6-48, leading to area 9-59

To Level 9: teleport via pukel-manders at 6-107 and 6-165, leading to 9-40

To Level 9: tunnel at 6-112A, leading down to 9-39

To Level 10: heqeti teleport well at 6-106, leading to 10-24

To Sub-Level 2: elevator at 6-95A, leading up to SL2-3

To Sub-Level 3: teleporter at 6-48, leading to SL3-17

To Sub-Level 4: corridor at 6-66, leading up to SL4-53

To Sub-Level 4: vertical cavern at 6-112, extending upwards to SL4-28

To Sub-Level 6: teleporter at 6-48, leading to SL6-19

To Sub-Level 6: spillway at 6-143, leading up to SL6-25

To Sub-Level 6: tunnel at 6-166, leading up to SL6-56

To Sub-Level 7: corridor at 6-153, leading up to SL7-6

To Sub-Level 9: teleporter at 6-32, leading to SL9-53

To Sub-Level 12: tunnel at 6-161A, leading up to SL12-13

To Sub-Level 13: stairs at 6-144, leading down to SL13-27

To various locations: Tothian teleportation ring (see new magic items) at 6-141

To locations within Level 6: one rudishva teleport node, as follows:
T15: between 6-27 (lock chamber) and 6-39G (weapons module)

Teleportation destinations on Level 6:

6-48: from teleporter at 3-188

6-48: from teleporter at 4-167

6-48: from teleporter at SL3-17

6-104: from teleporter at 10-8

RANDOM ENCOUNTERS

Many areas on this level do not feature ordinary random encounters. This does not mean that they are without the possibility of unusual encounters; it just means that the encounters are area-specific. This is particular true of the Inn of the Lost (6-7 to 6-20), the Arena (6-56 to 6-94), the northern rudishva areas (6-29 to 6-39), the area of Marius's Tomb (6-146 to 6-154), Lucius Cornelius Scriptor's tomb (6-130 to 6-135), the domain of the Frost Mother (6-137 to 6-142), and the interior of the rudishva modules (6-27 and 6-113 to 6-124). Either these areas have distinct tables for encounters, as at the Troll lifts (see 6-1) and the Inn of the Lost (6-8), or they have a fixed set of foes to be used if/when PCs dither or make excessive noise (e.g. frost ghouls in areas 6-137 to 6-142).

1. Western Halls (6-136, 6-157 to 6-160, 6-161 and 6-162)

Checks should be made every 3 turns, with a 1 in 6 chance for an encounter.

D10	Encounter
1-2	Vermin. Roll d10: 1-2: 5-8 giant centipedes: SZ S; AL N; AC 9; MV 150'; HD 1 or 2 HP; HP 2(x4), 1(x4); #AT 1; Dmg n.a. Special attacks: poison (+4 to save) 3-4: 4 giant fire beetles: SZ S; AL N; AC 4; MV 120'; HD 1+2; HP 9, 8, 6, 5; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8 5-8: 9-12 giant rats: SZ S; AL N(E); AC 7; MV 120'; HD 1-4 HP; HP 4(x3), 3(x3), 2(x3), 1(x3); #At 1; Dmg 1-3. Special attacks: 5% chance of disease 9-10: 4-6 giant bats: SZ S; AL N; AC 8; MV 30', 180' flying (Class C); HD 1-4 HP; HP 4, 3, 3, 2, 2, 1; #AT 1; Dmg 1-2. Special attacks: 1% chance of rabies. Special defenses: foes using missiles are at -3 to hit unless they have DEX 13 or greater
3-7	2-4 bestial varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL NE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 61, 53, 50, 49; #AT 3; Dmg 3-6/3-6/3-10. Special defenses: regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision; immune to poison. If slain, these individuals should be removed from the rosters at 6-159 or 6-160
8-9	NPC adventuring party, hunting for the tomb of Marius (6-154): select from the NPC appendix.
10	1. 1 large purple pudding (see new monsters): SZ L; AL N; AC 8; MV 60'; HD 8; HP 52; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12. Special attacks: corrosive to metal and leather. Special defenses: immune to fire; grows with electricity; conductive

2. Southern Caves (6-109 to 6-112, 6-125 to 6-129)

Checks should be made every 3 turns, with a 1 in 6 chance for an encounter.

D8	Encounter
1-4	1-2 subterranean lizards: SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 6; HP 45, 43; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12. Special attacks: double damage on a natural roll to hit of 20. Individuals slain here should be removed from the roster at 6-112

5-6	1 xorn: SZ M; AL N; AC -2; MV 90'; HD 7+7; HP 49; #AT 4; Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-3/6-24. Special attacks: surprise on 1-5. Special defenses: immune to fire and cold; half damage from electricity; travel through stone
7	The Bad Neighbors (NPC adventuring party): see 6-113, 6-129, and the NPC appendix
8	1 basic exploration automaton of Kerbog Khan (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 2; MV 150'; HD 4; HP 29; #AT 2; Dmg 1-4/1-4; MR 40%. Special defenses: immune to cold and fire

3. Northern Caves (6-21 to 6-26)

Checks should be made every 3 turns, with a 1 in 6 chance for an encounter.

D8	Encounter
1-3	4 huge spiders: SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 180'; HD 2+2; HP 15, 15, 13, 11; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: surprise 1-5; poison (+1 to saves); can leap up to 30'
4-5	6 medium chasm cephalopods (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 5; MV 60' flying (Class A); HD 4; HP 28, 27, 26, 25, 24, 24; #AT 5 (4 tentacles and a beak); Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-4/1-4/1-6; MR 25%. Special attacks: surprise on 1-4
6	Thegan White-Mane: see stats at 6-19. Thegan is polite, but non-committal. He runs if combat looms.
7	NPC adventuring party, searching for a way into 6-27: select party from NPC appendix
8	A Priscian exploring party: 1. Justinian, a Priscian war mage (see new monsters) and member of Quintus, as a 6 th -level magic user: SZ M; AL LN; AC 3; MV 120'; HD 6; HP 21; #AT 1; Dmg 3-9 (Priscian gladius +2). Abilities: STR 12, INT 17, WIS 13, DEX 16, CON 11, CHA 14. Possessions: Priscian chain mail (see new magic items); a Priscian gladius +2 (see new magic items); 345 sp; a key to 9-58; a stone of alarm; a vial of Keogh's restorative ointment; a pearl of power (level 3); and his spell book. Spells memorized: charm person, detect magic, magic missile, shield; levitate, pummeling fists of Arak-Zhorr (see new spells); dispel magic, fireball. Spell book: charm person, comprehend languages, detect magic, floating disk, friends, hold portal, identify, magic missile, read magic, shield, spider climb, unseen servant; continual light, detect invisibility, knock, levitate, locate object, pummeling fists of Arak-Zhorr (see new spells), scare, wizard lock; dispel magic, fireball, gust of wind, slow, suggestion, tiny hut, tongues 2. 2 Priscian conversi (see new monsters), as 3 rd -level fighters: SZ M; AL LN; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 3; HP 27, 25; #AT 1; Dmg 2-9 (long sword), or 1-4 (light crossbow). Possessions: Priscian chain mail (see new magic items), long swords, light crossbows. The conversi typically have STR 16

LEVEL KEY

6-1: Eastern Troll Lift

This impressive hall is home to one cog in the extensive Troll Lift system owned and operated by the varumani. The hall was carved by the heqeti millennia ago, and the pebbled walls are slightly oily to the touch and detect faintly of evil. The floor is paved with blue granite. Two weathered statues resembling crouching bipeds flank a platform that extends into the chasm. A team of three varumani under the leadership of Junior Overseer Reith operates both the lift to Level 8 and the cross-chasm ferry between 6-2 and 6-3.

Those wishing to use the Troll Lift to descend the 400' down to Level 8 must negotiate with Reith. The official tariff set by the troll thegn is 10 sp per leg for delivery from 6-1 to 8-1. Reith is too stupid to attempt graft or much else, which is why he has been assigned to this spot in the Lift network (here he is unlikely to have to make decisions on the fly).

The Troll Lift is composed of several parts: a rectangular opening (10'x10') in the pavement, a pair of 10'-tall iron poles on either side of the hole supporting a wooden frame over the hole, guy-lines extending from the side of the platform to the iron apparatus, a pair of iron cranks, over 450' of heavy silk rope coiled around the upper portion of the apparatus, and an iron and wood cage which descends through the rectangular opening some 400' to area 8-1 below. Passage up or down takes 11-20 minutes; the journey is marked by swaying, creaking, and generally nauseating stops and starts of the cage. Operation of the Lift is simple: two bestial varumani crank the winch to raise or lower the cage.

Although the statues are shapeless, their aura is still menacing and vaguely evil. The southeastern statue has a hollow cavity, inside of which are two tears of Kauket (see new magic items). The only way to recover these objects is to destroy the statue, and Reith is unlikely to approve of such a course of action.

Unbeknownst to Reith, the heqeti lurk nearby (6-51) and spy on his operation through a spyhole cleverly set into the southeastern wall.

Reith is jocular, and enjoys teasing passengers about their goals and likely fates. Any who ask about the Inn of the Lost will be directed to 6-7A and will immediately be teased about the causes of their 'flight'. For all of that, Reith sees himself as a guardian of the Inn's famous 'peace', and has a good working relationship with Thegan White-Mane. If Thegan needs muscle, Reith and his boys will be summoned to help deal with any peace-breakers. If asked about the thegn's court or the Troll Market, Reith is 75% likely to remind PCs that they need a passport to visit either location; he is only 25% likely to have one for sale (for 300 gp).

There is a 1 in 6 chance that another other group is present in this chamber. Roll on the below table to determine its composition:

Troll Lift Encounters

D12	Travelers	Stats
1-2	A mixed party of varumani (see new monsters), goblins, and humans bearing a captive monster to area 6-91 in the Arena. Roll 1d8 for creature:  1-3: A giant 4-armed baboon 4-5: A giant spider 6-7: A carcass creeper 8: GM's choice.  If combat ensues, they will release the monster and jump to Reith's defense. They carry 10-100 gp in coins and/or gems and have a 10% chance of 1-4 potions as well.	1. 1-4 lesser varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 61, 59, 58, 57; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (mattock, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8 th -level fighters or 8 th -level magic users, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. mattocks; nets and prods; and 3 portions of varumani knock-out juice (see Arden Vul items) 2. 2-12 goblins: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 7, 6, 5(x3), 4(x3), 3(x3); #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 3. 1-6 human arena wranglers: SZ M; AL N; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 6, 5, 5, 4, 4; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (spear). Possessions: leather armor; spear
3	A group of goblins seeking fame in the arena (6-68). This group left the Goblin Warrens (SL4) against the explicit prohibition by King Weskenim (SL4-22), and its members are furtive and guilty-looking. They possess only 71 sp in total. If the PCs have previously visited the Goblin Warrens, this group will either beg the PCs to keep their secret (50%) or will follow the PCs and attempt to silence them (50%).	8 goblins: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 6, 5(x3), 4, 4, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6
4	Lukas, a rare beastman deserter (see new monsters). Lukas is off to seek his fortune in the Arena (6-68). He carries only 25 sp and will be grateful for company and/or protection.	Lukas, the beastman trooper (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 6; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail, shield; spear; short sword; short bow
5	Adventurers returning from an expedition to the Nether Reaches (Level 8). They are badly wounded and have run out of supplies. They have 1-3 treasures that they might sell, and a substantial store of knowledge about areas 8-1 to 8-8. They plan to hole up in the Inn of the Lost (6-7 to 6-20).	Select an appropriate group from the NPC appendix
6	Thorda Thief-Eyes, a magic user with flunkies. Thorda is traveling to the Inn of the Lost (6-7). Should a fight break out, she will aid the PCs but blame them later for any varumani deaths.	See NPC appendix for stats

7	Durdeon Vislok and six companions in the Sodality of the Fist. The Sodality is travelling between AV-12 and the Arena (6-68). The members are taciturn and passive until talk turns to fighting. They refuse to divulge any information about their route into or out of the Halls.	For stats see AV-12
8	Pugh the lesser varumani, returning to the thegn's court (7-75) with three slaves he won in an epic gambling bout with Justin the Nose (6-7) at the Inn of the Lost (6-7 to 6-20).	1. Pugh the lesser varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 3; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 54; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (mace, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8 th -level fighter or 8 th -level magic user, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: mace; shield 2. 3 Thorcin slaves (2 female, 1 male): SZ M; AL LG, LN, N; AC 10; MV 120'; HD 1-6 HP; HP 4, 4, 2; #AT 1; Dmg by weapon
8	Justin the Nose, with four mercenaries. Justin is on a purchasing mission for his master, Thegan Whitemane at the Inn of the Lost (6-7 to 6-20). Roll 1d8 to determine where Justin is headed:  1-3: The thegn's court (7-75) 4-6: The Forum of Set (4-2) 7: The Goblin Market (SL4-40F) 8: Deino's Hall (3-158)  Justin is polite but offers no assistance.	1. Justin the Nose: see stats at 6-7 2. 4 mercenaries, 2 nd -level Thorcin fighters (2 male, 2 female): SZ M; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 17, 16, 14, 14; #AT 1; Dmg 2-9 (long sword). Special attacks: +1 to damage from STR. Possessions: chain mail and shield; long swords; 79 sp and 22 gp each.
10	Raste, a handsome, pale-skinned human with ink-black hair and black fingernails. He wears a yellow soft cap to which is pinned a fresh aster flower, yellow leather armor, and yellow calf boots.  Raste is a member of the fey House of Asters. Disguised as a human, the Lord of Asters has come to hear the lutist at the Inn of the Lost (6-8) and to seek recruits - willing or not - for an expedition to plunder one of the gold statuettes of Bastet (see new magic items) from the lost shrine to Bastet (8-38).	Raste, the Lord of Asters, and a fey lord (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 8+3; HP 58; #AT 1; Dmg 5-10 ( spear +4 ) or rapier 2-7 ( rapier +1 ). Special: polymorph self (rabbit, boar, tiger); summon 2-5 pixies (50%); step into faerie (20%); detect fairies; resistant to illusion (+4 save); vulnerable to cold iron; soulless. Raste's distinguishing features are his coal-black finger- and toe-nails, the emotion of joy, his narwhal-horn spear, and the inability to speak when music is being played. His glamours are these: charm person, hypnotic pattern, suggestion, emotion, and true seeing. Possessions: leather armor +3 ; narwhal-horn spear +4 ; rapier +1 ; yellow boots of elvenkind ; and a purse of asters (see new magic items)
11	Livod the true varumani hunter (see new monsters). Livod bears monster parts from the Nether Reaches (Level 8) to sell at the Troll Market (7-76). A member of the Confraternity of Hunters (7-14), Livod a formidable warrior. He has no love for Reith, however, and is likely (33%) to intervene on behalf of any whom Reith attempts to bully.	For stats, see 7-14
12	Sir Calculator, the Sun-Scarred Knight (see new monsters). Sir Calculator is on his way to the Troll Market (7-76) to consult with Sir Prudence (7-76A). He is also hot on the trail of one of his personal interests.  Sir Calculator will attempt to mediate in the case of impending hostilities, but refuses to join the fighting on either side.	Sir Calculator, the Sun-Scarred Knight (see new monsters), 10 th -level male human fighter: SZ M; AL LN; AC -2; MV 120'; HD 9+3; HP 88; #AT 3/2; Dmg 7-13 ( broadsword +2 ). Abilities: STR 18/65, INT 15, WIS 13, DEX 12, CON 16, CHA 11. Possessions: key to SL10A-16, gothic armor and sun lance (see new technological items); solar ring , circlet of command , and backpack of capacity (see new magic items for all three); 8 ancient octagonal platinum coins (see Arden Vul items), 125 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items); broad sword +2 .

When no travelers are present, the varumani are often found lounging in their quarters (6-50). The official fare-chest is located at the foot of the southern statue.

Inhabitants:

1. Reith, junior overseer, lesser varumani (see new monsters): SZ

L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 59; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (two-handed axe, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: two-handed axe.

2. 2 bestial varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL NE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 61, 58; #AT 3; Dmg 3-6/3-6/3-10. Special defenses: regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision; immune to poison.

Treasure:

Two tears of Kauket (see new magic items)

Official fare chest (locked): 1,188 sp, 574 gp; Reith's silver baton of authority (250 gp); a scroll with detect magic, and a wand of magic missiles with 3 charges.

6-2: Cross-Chasm Ferry

This segment of the Troll Lift ferries passengers across the chasm to the Floating Garden. Passage costs 5 sp per leg. Reith and his team (see 6-1) are in charge of this service as well.

The ferry appears as a frame of iron bars supported by guy-lines with a reed and bone basket suspended from silk rope. The basket is big enough for 4 man-sized persons or the equivalent, and passage time is 5 minutes each way.

6-3: Troll Lifts on the Floating Garden

Three segments of the Troll Lift converge on the floating garden: the base of the Lift from Level 5, and the receiving ends of the Ferries from 6-2 and 6-5. Vice-Overseer Hakrim the Hairy, a true varumani of exceptional intelligence, directs the operation on the floating garden (6-4). Hakrim and a team of three underlings are generally lazy, preferring to lounge about under the artificial light and exotic plants, enjoying the peace and quiet and any opportunity for some good-natured extortion. Hakrim likes to chat up his passengers, and is a surprisingly good source of information on factions, on the general vicinity of iconic locations, on rumors about monster and treasure location, etc. He will not, however, gossip about the thegn's court.

The 'landing point' for the lift from 5-55 is merely a circle of blue paint on the floor of the garden; the wood and iron basket sets down on this point after its 600' journey. To secure passage up to 5-55, one must pay Hakrim the tariff (officially 10sp/leg, but Hakrim attempts to collect 1 gp/leg) and wait while he shouts up to Riglon to send the Lift down.

For details of cross-channel ferry, see 6-2. Hakrim is equally assiduous in collecting the fee for this service (officially 5 sp/leg), while again attempting to extort a higher price (1 gp/leg).

There is a 1 in 6 chance that another individual or group is waiting to use some portion of the Lift; consult tables at 5-55 and 6-1 for their identity.

Hakrim keeps a normal wooden chest for the official fares, but hides the fruits of his extortion in a small metal lockbox tucked behind a mango tree in the garden. He knows of the effects of both the lover's aid and the green water (c.f. 6-4), but will only warn visitors who are respectful and deferential. He and his boys will be quick to relieve any who succumb to either effect of their valuables.

Inhabitants:

1. Hakrim the Hairy, a true varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LN; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 60; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 6-24 (two-handed sword, 2-20+4). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: huge two-handed sword; ring mail.

2. 2 bestial varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL NE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 55, 49; #AT 3; Dmg 3-6/3-6/3-10. Special defenses: regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision; immune to poison.

Treasure:

Official chest: 1,538 sp, 343 gp, Hakrim's silver baton of authority (250 gp); potions of animal control and climbing; a 5-lb platinum ingot (1,250 gp), and three pearls (100 gp each).

Private lockbox: 2,342 sp, 1,204 gp, a token of Arden (see Arden Vul items), a copper rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items), and a key to the door in 6-136.

6-4: Floating Garden

The floating garden comprises a slab of shaped rock that the rudishva levitated into the middle of the chasm using technosorcery. On the surface of the slab they built up an impressive hilly terrain and planted flora native both to Irthuain (see World of Archontos appendix) and to the rudishva homeworld. The spray from the waterfalls nearby conveniently waters the garden.

The garden is well-lit, warm and humid. Light is provided by two dozen light globes (see new technological items). Dirt and humus cover the structure, such that the central 'hill' which rises 15' above the floor of the garden does not even resemble the stone rectangle that it truly is. Paths of crushed pink granite wend through the garden, although none climb the 'hill'.

The garden is lush and verdant, and includes a number of exotic, tropical species. Most of these are alien, resembling the following Irthuain species: mango trees, coconut palms, camellia-like shrubs, lianas, orchids, and ferns. A wide variety of insect life occupies the garden as well; as a result, it is filled with the sound of whirring and chirping.

One quasi-dangerous variety of orchid, the lover's aid (see new flora), grows at the northwestern edge of the garden; it gives forth a sweet odor of honeyed raspberries, and if anyone breathes in the scent (an occurrence that is likely within 10'), he/she will be highly susceptible to reasonable suggestions for 1-6 turns. Aged Lishna, one of the courtiers at the troll thegn's court (7-75), knows of this plant and sometimes collects specimens for use in the affairs of court.

The central 'hill' has two noteworthy features. At its summit is a pool of warm, emerald green water that, thanks to unusual minerals, acts as a narcotic healing potion. Any who drink a potion-sized quantity of the liquid will be cured of 4-16 HP, but will fall into a blissful state lasting 2-8 turns; during this trance movement is possible, but reaction times are slowed considerably and there is a 50% chance of experiencing pleasant hallucinations. The other feature is a secret door concealed under a tuffet of moss; this door is circular and heavy, and opens by unscrewing a circular knob (like a naval hatch). Inside is a metal ladder leading down to a cramped stone chamber 5' high, 5' wide, and 10' long. The chamber was originally a storeroom for gardening tools, but became a horrible tomb for a pair of adventurers who were inadvertently locked inside this 'tool shed' by colleagues under the effects of the narcotic water. Some virulent fertilizers left inside the chamber dissolved the adventurers' bodies, and the chemical reaction led to the creation of a new pudding. This 'red pudding' waits patiently and mindlessly on the ceiling for new sources of energy to enter the chamber.

The underside of the floating garden is also of note. At the northern end is a forgotten hangar built into the stone and now concealed by hanging vines and mosses. Inside is one of the few remaining rudishva hover-sleds, fully charged. The sled only responds to those wielding the proper access card (a silver or yellow rudishva identity plaque – see new technological items). Only those inspecting the underside of the garden have a chance to spot this hangar.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 red pudding (see new monsters): SZ L; AL N; AC 4; MV 30; HD 10; HP 75; #AT 1; Dmg 2-16; MR 25%. Special attacks: bloody healing; corrodes leather, clothing, wood. Special defenses: immune to electricity and cold; slow regeneration. See notes in appendix for how, even if defeated, the red pudding might nevertheless spread into other areas of Arden Vul.

Treasure:

In toolshed: rudishva herbicide dispenser with 11-30 doses of herbicide (see new technological items); 23 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items); 117 gp; 3 tourmalines (100 gp each); 6 stones of striking (7th-level) scattered about the floor (see new magic items); a badly tarnished silver torc of authority (see new magic items); a long sword; a mace; a black glass activation square (see Thothian teleportation rings in new magic items); and several bits of unidentifiable metal scraps.

In secret hangar: rudishva hover sled (see new technological items).

5 specimens of the lover's aid orchid (see new flora).

6-5: Western Troll Lifts

This former rudishva observation chamber is now a key link in the Troll Lift network. Two lifts operate here. A cross-chasm ferry transports passengers to 6-3/6-4, while a second lift carries visitors down 200' to the thegn's court (7-1). Given its importance, the area is supervised by Overseer Gorlen, the true varumani supervisor of the entire Troll Lift network. Two bestial varumani aid him.

The lifts are constructed in the usual way (see 5-55, 6-2 and 6-3). Fares are standard, and Gorlen attempts no extortion: 10 sp per leg for travel to Level 7-1 (taking 11-20 minutes), and 5 sp per leg for passage to the floating garden (taking 2 minutes).

The chamber is noticeably cool (a product of the frozen regions between 6-137 and 6-142) and damp (due to waterfall spray). A huge stone seat facing the floating garden dominates the chamber. Although it was once enchanted, the glyphs of power on it were gouged out in antiquity. Two staircases lead to the southwestern segment of the chamber, where the varumani keep a roaring fire stoked with whatever fuel they can find. The fare chest is found next to the seat, in which Gorlen likes to lounge imperiously.

Gorlen has mounted heads of a goblin and a human on stakes planted near the Lift, and takes ghoulish pleasure in informing all travelers that 'Such is the fate of those who cheat the thegn!' Gorlen has been charmed by Cinna Minux, the vampire lord (7-122); the latter visits him to learn about travelers on the Troll Lifts.

Gorlen has rigged a wicker, rope, and leather gate across the arch to area 6-136. He warns the curious about the terrible 'icy monsters' that live to the south but will, if asked, admit that 'some fancy tomb' lies somewhere to the west. He charges 1 gp/person for entrance to the west.

Inhabitants:

1. Gorlen, a true varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LN; AC 2; MV 90; HD 8; HP 60; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 6-24 (two-handed sword, 2-20+4). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: huge two-handed sword; ring mail; key to door in 6-136.

2. 2 bestial varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL NE; AC 4; MV 90; HD 8; HP 55, 49; #AT 3; Dmg 3-6/3-6/3-10. Special defenses: regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision; immune to poison.

Treasure:

Fare chest: 2,731 sp, 829 gp; Gorlen's gold baton of authority (510 gp); 2 vials of poison, a scroll of find traps, and a scroll of invisibility.

6-6A: First Waterfall

The spillway from the Drowned Canyon (6-143) empties into the chasm here, producing a torrent of rushing water. As the waterfall commences here, the spray is not as intense as it becomes further down the chasm.

6-6B: Second Waterfall

The waterfall from 5-2A pours down the chasm here, producing a zone of spray some 20' in diameter. It hardly needs to be said that any venturing into the waterfall will be swept to their doom below.

Areas 6-7 to 6-20: The House of Isocorax, or The Inn of the Lost

An Archontean administrative bureau in antiquity, this area was refurbished 750 years ago as an inn by the legendary figure known as Isocorax. Two principles motivated Isocorax: a) anyone was welcome at his inn; b) no violence would be tolerated within its walls. These policies gave the inn its more colloquial name, "The Inn of the Lost," since it was a place where anyone could become lost; that is, anyone could lose himself from his/her past and/or enemies. Although the Inn appears to possess no elaborate defenses, its role as a sanctuary has been, and continues to be, respected by all the major factions of Arden Vul. Indeed, all factions have been known to collaborate in tracking down and punishing any who break the peace of the Inn of the Lost. This zone of 'peace' is widely understood to begin with the so-called peace door (6-7A), although most would also count the trading area of 6-28 as lying within this protected space. It is not uncommon, then, to find exiles, criminals, and those on the wrong end of a vendetta making a dash for the safety of the "peace door". Of course, while any are welcomed to the Inn and given security therein, that peace lasts only as long as one's purse is full. Once the money runs out, guests are politely asked to leave, and will be bodily thrown out if necessary; in the case of obstreperous guests, the proprietor may seek the assistance of Reith and his bestial assistants (6-1) to help in the expulsion.

One firm exception to the Inn's open door policy is enforced by all of the Inn's staff: no Sun-Scarred Knight may stay the night, and only rarely will the proprietor allow one of the knights to drink in the common room.

The proprietor is Thegan White-Mane, a muscular and hearty male human in his early 60s, with pure white hair, a few scars, and piercing grey eyes. Only a few of the oldest and most intelligent inhabitants of the halls remember that it was Isocorax who originally established and operated the Inn, and that ‘Thegan’ has only been the proprietor for just over 200 years. These denizens - among whom Deino (3-158), Varboka the troll thegn (7-30), Kerbog Khan (SL12-25), and the Lord of the Arena (6-85) - know that Isocorax was both a rudishva and an original member of the Sun-Scarred Knights. They assume that for obscure reasons of his own devising Isocorax decided to invent the ‘Thegan’ identity some 200 years ago; the deeds and motives of Isocorax/Thegan are thus of intense interest to these faction-leaders, who might pay good money (or information) for news of Thegan. None who remember Isocorax and assume him to be Thegan would ever divulge this information to mere adventurers, although they might mysteriously observe to those who have done them service that Thegan has been the only proprietor the Inn has ever had for about 200 years.

The reality is a bit more complex. Isocorax is still alive, but has been a prisoner of ‘Thegan’ these past centuries. ‘Thegan’ is the pseudonym adopted by Maurikios Ligareon, taxiarch of the 3rd Cohort of the Imperial Tagmata, after his cohort was defeated 230 years ago during the disastrous imperial attempt to retake Arden Vul. Maurikios saved himself by drugging Isocorax and using the latter’s strange blood (see 6-20) to give him extraordinary longevity. For more on Thegan, see 6-19.

Thegan employs twelve staff from all manner of races, including two human barkeeps, two goblin cooks, one human and one beastman housekeeper, two human serving wenches, three guards/suppliers (1 lesser varumani, 1 goblin, 1 human), and Justin the Nose, the sacristan and Thegan’s chief assistant.

The Inn sends its team of ‘suppliers’ on regular missions to buy supplies at both the Forum of Set (4-2) and the Troll Market (7-76). These suppliers are shielded by the same peace as the Inn itself, at least among intelligent denizens.

A strange sort of anti-magic shell is in operation throughout most of the Inn (areas 6-7 to 6-19). Although inherently magical items still work (e.g., continual light cast elsewhere and brought here, magic swords, etc.), spell-casting does not. Only those (like Justin the Nose) who wear one of the rings of higher purpose (see new magic items) are exempt from this effect.

Rates for Rooms, Drinks, and Meals

Lodging type	Rate
Bed in the bunkroom (6-18)	15 sp/day, or 20 gp/month
Room, private (e.g. 6-9), sleeping up to 4 man-sized beings	30 sp/day or 40 gp/month
Suite with a view (6-10)	7 gp/day, or 200 gp/month
Room, varumani-sized (6-12)	3 gp/day, or 80 gp/month

Food and Drink	Rates
Ale, Hak’s mushroom	2 sp/pint
Ale, Hak’s special red (twice the alcohol)	5 sp/pint
Wine, imported Archontean	1-50 gp/glass

Brandy, Thegan’s home-made	3 gp/shot
Brandy, imported	5 gp/shot
Milk	5 sp/glass
Water	Free
Meal, simple	5 sp
Meal, rich	5 gp
Specific mundane items	Negotiable (three to ten times normal listed price)

Package Deals	Rates
Bed in bunkroom (6-18) plus 2 simple meals per day for a month	25 gp/month
Private room (e.g., 6-9), plus 2 simple meals per day for a month	45 gp/month
Suite (6-10), plus 1 simple and 1 rich meal per day for a month	350 gp/month
Varumani-sized room, plus 2 simple meals a day for a month	85 gp/month
All you can drink, as addition to monthly package rate*	Human: +50 gp/month Varumani: +100 gp/month Dwarf: +75 gp/month Goblin: +40 gp/month

*Thegan reserves the right to renegotiate rates for ‘all you can drink’ plans after one month based on the capacity of the client. He sets rates for other races based on body size and the results of a required drink-off.

Dangers at the Inn: The Inn is a place where long-time explorers of Arden Vul can rest peacefully, recuperate after combat, and trade rumors. That said, it is not the Eden it appears to be. For one, PCs who annoy the leaders of one of the factions only to escape to the Inn can be sure that their stay will be monitored: such PCs should not be surprised to find a scout or two from the now-inimical faction lounging in the Common Room, watching, recording, and reporting. In such cases the Inn can be a prison, for the factions have been known to arrange for any such enemies to be met with overwhelming force in the corridors and halls outside the Peace Door when finally they leave. Another danger posed by the Inn is Thegan White-Mane himself. Although mostly content to play by the rules he created, by which guests’ safety is assured, Thegan’s ultimate goals and purposes are inscrutable to outsiders; should he feel the need to abduct guests via his network of secret tunnels, he will do so (see text at 6-19). These unfortunates will become nourishment for Isocorax (6-20).

6-7: Inn of the Lost, Reception

This plain chamber is lit brightly by a continual light spell cast on the ceiling. A 10’-long counter of aged and polished mahogany runs along the center of the room. On the northwest wall hangs a rack with 15 pigeonholes, some of which contain thick, iron keys. As with the rest of the area (6-7 to 6-19), this room is under the effect of the partial anti-magic effect described above.

Behind the desk sits Justin the Nose, the sacristan of the Inn, waiting to greet and register new guests. Justin is a heavy-set, muscular, 45 year-old human, with bushy eyebrows, long black hair, and a prominent nose. Those seeking a meal or drinks are directed to the common room; those wishing a room should consult the chart below for chances of a vacancy. Prices are paid up front; early departures forfeit any remaining balance on a long-term stay. If new 'guests' are unruly or violent, Justin will warn them once. If they remain disruptive or violent, he uses his wand of paralyzation to good effect and summons aid from the common room (6-8). Any guests whom Justin (or others) is forced to subdue in this way are sold as slaves in the Forum of Set (4-7) or the Arena (6-68).

Lodging	Chance for Vancancy
Bed in bunkroom (x42)	90%
Private Rooms (x7)	40% for 1, 20% for each additional
Luxury Suite (x1)	66%
Varumani Room (x1)	33%

Thegan White-mane is likely (75%) to be hanging around reception or the common room, and may greet new guests personally after Justin has registered them.

There is a 20% chance that Justin is absent, either in his chamber (50% - see 6-9A) or away from the Inn on a purchasing mission (50%). In such circumstances, Thegan takes over at reception.

Inhabitants:

1. Justin the Nose (80%), 5th-level male Archontean magic user: SZ M; AL NE; AC 6; MV 120'; HD 5; HP 16; #AT 1; Dmg 3-6 (dagger +2). Abilities: STR 9, INT 16, WIS 15, DEX 16, CON 11, CHA 10. Possessions: dagger +2; a wand of paralyzation (43 charges); a ring of higher purpose (see new magic items); and an amulet of natural armor +2 (see new magic items). Justin is dressed in a pale blue tunic and black hose. Spells prepared: charm person, comprehend languages, friends, sleep; Frigg's caustic kisses (see new spells), strength; hold person.

2. Thegan White-Mane (75%) (for stats, see 6-19)

6-7A: Peace Door

This heavy door is made of ironwood and is banded with steel. A square sign made of oak is affixed the door, on which reads, in Mithric, "House of Isocorax." Below this the following is neatly printed in white paint and in the Archontean language: "Feeling Lost? Let our warm beds and delicious meals bring you back to the light. Welcome to the Inn of the Lost." Assorted graffiti has been scrawled around these signs, most of which are paeans of thanks to Thegan (e.g., "My refuge for the past 2 months," "Thanks, Thegan. I owe you everything!" and "Ha! Escaped those vengeful in-laws, didn't I?"), but a few of which outline desperate pleas for admittance (e.g., "Four days of flight, and the Peace Door is closed? Bastards!" and "So much for mercy! Dumped outside for my enemies to find.")

The door is well oiled, opens easily, and, if time is spent to detect it, registers as magical. There is a 1 in 10 chance that Thegan has closed and locked the door. In such cases, the door may only be passed by a knock spell or other such magicks. If the door is locked, there is a 50% chance that some unfortunate is groveling outside it, begging for admittance, and a further 20% chance that pursuers are 1-3 turns away from reaching the door and that unfortunate.

6-8: Common Room

The common room is cool and dim, lit only by a pair of crystals mounted on the walls that emit low, blue-tinged light. The bar to the northwest and the low stage in the southern niche dominate the room. A dozen tables fill the main area, and several booths fill the northeastern corner.

The east wall has a large wooden frame (10'x10') over which is stretched a piece of canvas; every year Thegan replaces the canvas and invites any artistic-minded guests to add small pictorial images. Depending on the time of the year, there may be some interesting and potentially useful images on the canvas. As a rule of thumb, by December there are 3 imaginary monsters, 4 real monsters (15% chance that an architectural detail or caption can help locate the beast), 5 representations of locations (20% to identify, or 75% if the viewer has actually been there; 10% chance the image imparts some truly useful information, like a secret door), and 10-20 caricatures of guests of the Inn of the Lost. In front of the mural are a couple of large piss-pots (that are periodically emptied into the Great Chasm).

The barkeeps are two: 1) a handsome, but rather dim human named Boots after the extravagant red, leather high-boots that he sports; 2) a sour, toothless crone named Dirty Betsy; she warms to any who attempt to charm her. The wenches are named Lily and Theudelinda; they are kind but not stupid, and never cavort with guests. See above for food and drink prices.

Thegan likes to hire entertainers for a 'season' of 3-6 months. Currently a fine Thorcin lutist, named Aethgrim Fleet-hand, is in residence. Aethgrim was an adventurer (T4) whose party was decimated in the Nether Reaches and who managed to convince Thegan to let him stay on as an entertainer. Fleet-hand knows a lot of songs, and takes requests in return for a 1gp tip; when left to his own devices he specializes in flowery, classical laments and in murder ballads.

The following tables should be used to determine the population of the common room and guest chambers:

Table 1: Racial Composition (roll once per racial group)

Race	% chance to appear	Number Appearing
Humans	100	7-18, in 1-4 groups
Goblins	75	5
Beastmen	20	5
Varumani	33	2
Dwarves	10	6
Elves	10	4
Other	25	4-7

Table 2: Human Groups

D8	Description	Stats
1	A party of NPC adventurers armed with a 'can't miss' map detailing a way to skirt the Obsidian Gates (5-6D). There is a 15% the map accurately depicts the route from 4-117 to 5-117; otherwise, the map is a fake, and purports to show how a set of tunnels in the northeast side of the chasm (e.g., 5-33) leads to the other side of the Gates.	Choose any NPC group from the appendix.
2	A group of NPC adventurers, nervous, badly injured and on the run from a dangerous enemy. The enemy from whom they are fleeing should be rolled as follows: 1-2: The troll thegn (7-3). 1-6 lesser varumani arrive at the Peace Door in 11-20 turns. 3-4: Nolgi the Hunter (for stats, see 7-14) 5: Tredgeris the Dapifer (6-75), who arrives at 6-7A with 10 wranglers in 1-6 hours 6: Psalor-Ki and his slime zombies (5-66, 5-74) 7: An invisible stalker sent by an NPC magic user 8. GM's choice	Choose one of the NPC groups from the appendix; each adventurer has only 25% of normal HP
3	Prosper the Doughty, a handsome but naive paladin of Mitra, looking for wrongs to right. He is accompanied by two disgruntled hirelings	1. Prosper the Doughty, 7 th -level male Archontean paladin of Ardenia Tessaeron: SZ M; AL LG; AC 2; MV 120'; HD 7; HP 68; #AT 1; Dmg 5-11 ( broadsword +3, frostbrand ). Abilities: STR 17, INT 11, WIS 15, DEX 8, CON 15, CHA 17. Possessions: broadsword +3, frostbrand; banded mail +1 and shield 2. Trevel and Harold, male Archontean men-at-arms: SZ M; AL NG; AC 7; MV 120'; HD 1; HP 7, 6; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (spear, short sword). Possessions: leather armor; spear; short sword
4	An old and decrepit fighter named Edwin the Wrinkled. Edwin has a mysteriously endless supply of coin and no smaller quantity of stories. He is relatively well known as a spy for the thegn. Less well known is the fact that he has also been recruited by Justinian, the Priscian mage, to spy for the Priscians (for Justinian see 6-48 and random encounters for levels 3, 5, 6 and sub-levels 3 and 6)	Edwin the Wrinkled, 4 th -level Thorcin fighter: SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 4; HP 28; #AT 1; Dmg 2-9 (long sword +1). Abilities: STR 12, INT 16, WIS 15, DEX 9, CON 11, CHA 13. Possessions: studded leather armor +1; long sword +1 ; a purse with 321 sp and 153 gp
5	Kolgrima, a magic user from the Order of Thoth (see World of Archontos appendix), searching for information about the Priscians. She is accompanied by her friend and protector, Hallam. They drink quietly and avoid conversation until they hear others mention the Priscians. At that point they offer to trade information for information and might (25%) join a party interested in seeking out the Priscians.	1. Kolgrima, 8 th -level female Wiskin magic user: SZ M; AL LN; AC 4; MV 120'; HD 8; HP 25; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (staff). Abilities: STR 8, INT 17, WIS 11 DEX 16, CON 12, CHA 13. Possessions: staff; bracers of defense (AC 6); cloak of elvenkind ; wand of fire (28 charges); potions of ESP (x3) and polymorph ; bag with 1,250 newly minted imperial gold pieces and 20 citrine gems (50 gp each, for bribes). Spells memorized: charm person, detect magic, enlarge, magic missile; continual light, ESP, locate object; dispel magic, hold person, lightning bolt; charm monster, polymorph other . Spell book: charm person, comprehend languages, detect magic, enlarge, feather fall, hold portal, identify, light, magic missile, push, read magic, shield, sleep; the Bracteros effect (see new spells), continual light, ESP, knock, locate object, mirror image, ray of enfeeblement, stinking cloud, web; blink, dispel magic, fireball, fly, hold person, lightning bolt, protection from evil 10' radius; charm monster, fear, monster summoning II, polymorph other 2. Hallam, 6 th -level male Wiskin fighter: SZ M; AL NE; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 6; HP 61; #AT 1; Dmg 6-13 ( long sword +2 ) or 1-4 (light crossbow). Abilities: STR 18/63, INT 8, WIS 11, DEX 10, CON 16, CHA 7. Possessions: splint mail +1 and shield; long sword +2 ; light crossbow with 20 bolts; 83 sp and 37 gp; immobilizing mesh (see new magic items)

6	Restep the Prestidigitator, with three henchmen, seeking Kerbog Khan (SL12-25). They have been sent by the Imperial Academy (see World of Archontos appendix) to try to recover the volumes the Khan stole from the Imperial Academy.	See NPC appendix for stats
7	Paula Sunburst, a seller of 'rare' manuscripts, with her four guards. Paula is actually a thief starting a long con with the ultimate goal of robbing the troll thegn (7-30).	1. Paula Sunburst, 9th-level female Archontean thief: SZ M; AL CN; AC 2; MV 120'; HD 9; HP 43; #AT 1; Dmg 5-8 (dagger +4). Abilities: STR 12, INT 16, WIS 13, DEX 18, CON 11, CHA 14. Thief skills: PP 80%, OL 77%, F/RT 65%, MS 80%, HS 66%, HN 30%, CW 98%, RL 45%. Possessions: bracers of defense (AC 6); ring of invisibility; stone of good luck; slippers of spider climbing; dagger +4; silken trousers and a tunic of imperial yellow, with a black sunburst on the front of the tunic 2. Hod, Grim, Helgi, and Gisli, 3rd-level male Wisikin fighters: SZ M; AL N; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 25, 24, 23, 20; #AT 1; Dmg 2-9 (long sword) or 2-7 (spear) or 1-6 (short bow). Special attacks: +1 to damage from STR. Possessions: scale mail and shield; spear; long sword; short bow
8	Drusus Freyasson, a cleric of Mitra, with four companions, looking for evil to smite. He is actually a fallen priest, seeking the shrine of his new deity, dread Rimmaq-Isfet. He knows of the existence of the ziggurat of Kauket (10-32), but thinks (rightly) that another shrine is closer (e.g., 7-79). Drusus is adept at concealing his evil; his acolytes are a bit more unruly, though.	1. Drusus Freyasson, 6th-level male Wisikin cleric of Mitra (actually cleric of Rimmaq-Isfet): SZ M; AL CE (posing as LG); AC 4; MV 90'; HD 6; HP 39; #AT 1; Dmg 3-8 (staff of the serpent) or 2-5 (hammer). Abilities: STR 11, INT 14, WIS 17, DEX 15, CON 13, CHA 17. Possessions: scale mail +1; staff of the serpent (python); war hammer; amulet of proof against detection or location; potion of extra healing. Spells: command, cause light wounds, light wounds, detect magic, fear; augury, chant, hold person, know alignment, silence 15' radius; animate dead, continual light, dispel magic 2. 4 acolytes, 2nd-level male Thorcin clerics of Mitra (actually clerics of Rimmaq-Isfet): SZ M; AL CE (posing as LG); AC 5; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 14, 13, 12, 11; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (footman's mace). Special: each has WIS 15. Possessions: scale mail and shield; footman's mace. Spells: command, cause light wounds, cure light wounds, detect magic

Table 3: Non-Human Encounters

Instead of rolling dice, the GM should make up what is appropriate. The following are just samples:

Type	Stats
A group of goblins, on 'vacation.' They are interested only in drinking and gossiping	1. 6-11 goblins: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 7, 6, 5(x3), 4, 4, 3(x3); #AT 1; Dmg 1-6
A group of ten goblins on the run from King Weskenim for reasons only the GM knows	1. 10 goblins: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7(x3), 6(x3), 5(x6), 4(x6), 3(x4), 2, 2; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6
Some rare beastmen deserters, drinking furtively in a corner	1-4 beastman troopers (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 7, 6, 6, 5; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spears; short swords; short bows; 57 gp.

A group of goblins, led by one of the many sons of King Weskenim (SL4-22). They are searching, delicately, for information about Priscus Pulcher and the Priscians	1. Jaskorim, goblin sub-chief (as a hobgoblin): SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 1+1; HP 6; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8 (long sword). Possessions: long sword 2. 4 goblins: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 5, 5, 4, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6
A dwarven war party in search of a lost artifact. They are surly and suspicious	Use the group "Survivors of the Stone" from the NPC appendix
A group of elven magic users with accomplices. They claim to be in search of arcanum (see new magic items) and a lost Elvish tome; they are also interested in vengeance against Kerbog Khan (SL12-25)	Use the group "Arcane Vengeance" from the NPC appendix
Emissaries from a neutral subterranean, sentient race	GM's choice

A beastman patrol (see new monsters) looking either for deserters or allies versus the goblins	1. 6 beastman troopers (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 8, 7, 7, 6, 6, 5; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spears; short swords; short bows 2. 1 beastman sergeant (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 2+2; HP 15; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 or 2-5. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spear; war hammer
Hella, the true varumani. She has just been outlawed and is contemplating her next move	1. Hella, a true varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LN; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 60; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 6-24 (two-handed sword, 2-20+4). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: huge two-handed sword; ring mail
A pair of true varumani who have 'perfected' a card-counting system and are eager to gamble	1. Griga and Kist, true varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 60, 57; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 6-24 (two-handed sword, 2-20+4). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: huge two-handed swords
Three ambitious lesser varumani attempting to 'civilize up' in order to impress the thegn (7-30) and gain employment. They speak in mostly a-grammatical phrases that sound (to them) high-falutin'	3 lesser varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 58, 55, 52; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (mattock, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: mattocks

Two fat imps, dressed like card-sharks and smoking big cigars. They are eager to gamble, gossip, and carouse	2 imps: SZ S; AL LE; AC 2; MV 60', 180' flying (Class C); HD 2+2; HP 16, 13; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4; MR 25%. Special attacks: poison. Special defenses: silver, or +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to fire, cold and electricity; save vs magic as 7 HD creatures. Special: polymorph self (to animal form); detect magic; detect good; detect magic; invisibility; regenerate 1 hp/round, suggestion 1/day
---	--

Inhabitants:

1. Aethgrim Fleet-hand, the lutist, 4th-level male Thorcin thief: SZ M; AL N; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 4; HP 16; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (short sword), 2-5 (dagger +1). Abilities: STR 11, INT 12, WIS 9, DEX 17, CON 10, CHA 17. Thief skills: PP 50%, OL 47%, F/RT 35%, MS 38%, HS 30%, HN 15%, CW 87%, RL 20%. Possessions: bracers of defense (AC 8); furred cloak; short sword; dagger +1; fine lute; purse with 176 gp.

6-9: Guest Rooms

These private rooms feature two bunkbeds, a dresser, a chest (without lock), a bistro table with two rickety chairs, and a stinky chamber pot (guests must empty their own pots, typically into the Great Chasm). Brackets in the walls permit torches, which customers must provide at their own expense. See above for prices.

6-9A: Sacristan's Quarters

Thegan grudgingly gave Justin the Nose the quasi-permanent use of this chamber. It contains a rather nice bed, a desk with a secret compartment, a small shelf for scrolls and books, a rack of wine bottles, and a set of five pieces of parchment sewn together and mounted on the wall. The parchments comprise an excellent map of areas 6-136 to 6-142, 6-145, 6-155, and 6-157 to 6-160; Justin has also annotated each area with its current inhabitant. No secret doors or permanent features (e.g. statues) are indicated.

Trap: The desk has a secret compartment behind the kick-board; it is trapped with a poison needle.

Inhabitants:

Justin the Nose (10%) (for stats, see 6-7)

Treasure:

Inside the secret compartment are Justin's spell-book, a palm of temporal flux with 4 charges (a rudishva useful palm – see new magic items), a red glass activation square (see Thothian teleportation ring in new magic items), and a sack of 20 large moonstones (100 gp each). A huge pewter drinking mug on the desktop holds 89 sp and 15 gp.

Justin's Spell Book:

Charm person, comprehend languages, detect magic, enlarge, friends, identify, light, read magic, shield, sleep, floating disk; ESP, Frigg's caustic kisses (see new spells), levitate, mirror image, strength, web, wizard lock; clairaudience, clairvoyance, dispel magic, fireball, hold person, monster summoning I.

6-10: Luxury Suite

This impressive guest room is spacious and comfortably furnished, with a selection of ancient tapestries depicting the conquests of Marius Tricotor Invictus on the western and north walls, a pair of triple, floor-standing candelabra, a king-sized bed, two smaller day-beds, an escritoire and chair, a large, smell-free chamber pot (to be emptied into the chasm), and a pair of impressive painted armoires. It features a stone chest affixed to the floor with steel brackets; the chest is locked, but its key is only provided to those who pay for a week's stay or more.

On the southwest wall is a 2'-wide, 4'-tall window which looks into the chasm. Thick wooden shutters are attached to the window, allowing guests to protect themselves from chasm cephalopods and other nasties.

Secret Door (north): The door is extremely difficult to detect from this side (1 in 10), and equally difficult to open from this side (-33% to pick). Thegan uses the door to pay nocturnal visits to those guests he has selected for this 'favor.'

6-11: Guest Rooms with a Twist

These private rooms are identical to the others (6-9), save for the fact that Thegan has installed secret doors in the north walls. Thegan won't rent these rooms to elves, as he is worried the elves would detect the doors.

Secret Door (north): These doors are difficult to spot (1 in 8), and difficult to pry open from this side (-25% to open locks).

6-12: Guest Room for Varumani

This private guest room is designed for varumani visitors. It contains two varumani-sized stone beds, a fire pit, a barrel of water, an armoire, a lidless stone chest, a pair of straw-stuffed manikins (for weapons practice), and a chamber pot.

Secret Door (west): This door is difficult to detect (1 in 8), and difficult to pry open from this side (-25% to open locks).

6-13: Store Rooms

Flanking the corridor to the bunkroom are these store rooms. The western one opens into the corridor and holds linens, torches, candles, loose bits of wood for bed repairs, and spare chamber pots. The eastern one, which opens onto the common room, is crammed full of foodstuffs, liquors, spare pots, and kitchen utensils. The most valuable items are probably the three cases of Archontean Old Vineyard Reserve wine (45 bottles, 100 gp/bottle), although the Laughing Priest brandy (8 bottles, 90 gp/bottle) and the Thorham Brown Ale (4 kegs, 100 gp/keg) come close. Both storerooms are locked. Thegan, Justin the Nose, and the two housekeepers hold keys to the western room. Thegan, Justin the Nose, and the two chefs hold keys to the kitchen storeroom.

6-14: Kitchen

A massive fireplace, with a chimney that leads upward to an unmapped cave, fills the western wall. Two worktables occupy the north wall and center of the chamber, respectively, around which the two goblin chefs (named Saucy and Sweetmeat) dart energetically. The kitchen is filled with warmth, light from the fireplace and a series of wall sconces, and pots, pans, and large knives. Intruders are chased off by cleaver wielding, expletive-shouting goblins!

Inhabitants:

1. 2 goblin chefs, Saucy and Sweetmeat: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 5, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.

6-15: Cellar

Down a short flight of stairs is the wine- and bulk-goods cellar of the Inn. Here Thegan stores numerous large sacks of grain, millet, and corn, as well as copious dried vegetables and mushrooms. Towards the eastern end of the cellar are 15 kegs of Hak's mushroom ale and 3 of Hak's special red ale (7-94), as well as a series of racks for bottles of imported wine bottles (50 cases of 15 bottles each) and brandy (15 bottles of imported brandy, and 75 bottles of Thegan's own homemade brandy).

Secret Door (east): This door is normal to locate but hard to open (-10% to pick locks); only Thegan has the key. The chefs and Justin the Nose know about this door, but have never been beyond it.

Secret Door (west): This door is difficult to locate (1 in 8), and opens only if one pushes a stud located 7' up the wall just above the door.

Treasure:

15 kegs of Hak's mushroom ale (15 gp/keg) and 3 of Hak's special red ale (35 gp/keg)

50 cases of wine, with 15 bottles per case; 35 cases are cheap (5 gp/bottle), 10 cases are good quality (50 gp/bottle), and 5 are super-premium (250 gp/bottle).

15 bottles of imported brandy (150 gp/bottle)

75 bottles of Thegan's homemade brandy (80 gp/bottle)

6-16: Secret Cellar

Behind the secret door lie the mundane proceeds of centuries of Thegan's selective thievery from guests at his Inn. Thegan has laid several traps to protect his horde. The treasure is pushed to the sides of the chamber, as if to spotlight the beautiful painted scene inscribed in a 10' circle in the middle of the floor. The scene is of hunters and animals surrounding an archaic Archontean phlamoulon (military standard); the phlamoulon takes the form of an inverted triangle depicting a mailed fist with the numeral III set into the forehead, and with a word written (in Mithric) to each side of the skull, along the side of the triangle. The words read (vertically) 'Caveant hostes', i.e., 'Let enemies beware!' This standard was that of the lost 3rd Cohort of the Imperial Tagmata, part of the forces sent to reclaim Arden Vul some 250 years ago. This brightly colored scene is trapped (see below).

The treasure includes six elaborate carpets, one malfunctioning rudishva military-grade security construct, two glazed urns filled with coins, and four sturdy medium-sized oak chests stuffed with other valuables.

The military-grade security construct is named Gethe. Gethe was originally a counterpart to Relke (6-30), but suffered a neural systems failure that stripped it of most of its fearsome capabilities. Isocorax first brought Gethe to the Inn in a fruitless effort to repair it; Gethe has been here ever since. It recognizes Thegan and Isocorax as its masters, and has been ordered to defend this chamber as best it can; mentioning the name Isocorax, however, causes it to stand down. Gethe has not been 'charged' in centuries, though, and its combat capabilities are much less great than those of Relke. Finally, due to its age and internal systems failures, there is a 5% cumulative chance per combat round that Gethe will suffer a catastrophic meltdown, destroying himself and inflicting 3-18 HP damage on all within 15'. Were it possible to subdue Gethe and bring him to the workshops of Kerbog Khan, that wizard might be able to restore him to full functionality; see SL12-28.

Trap 1 (falling acid trap): This trap is connected to the door; anyone pushing it open without first detecting the tripwire will find a carboy of acid falling on his/her head, to the tune of 3-12 HP damage the first round, 2-8 the second, and 1-4 the third.

Trap 2 (explosive runes): The words "Caveant Hostes" on the painted phlamoulon are explosive runes, which explode for 6-30 HP of fire damage if they are touched. An explosion brings Thegan at the run to investigate.

Inhabitants:

1. Gethe, malfunctioning military-grade rudishva security construct (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 3, MV 120'; HD 10; HP 50; #AT 2; Dmg 3-8/3-8 (fists); MR 50%. Special Defenses: +2 or better weapons to hit; leap unerringly 30'; regenerate 2 HP/round.

Treasure:

6 large, silk carpets (from 5'x7' to 12'x15'). Four of the six have pastoral scenes woven on them (650 gp each). One depicts Adrienic (named in a caption – see 5-18 for more on Adrienic) directing Archontean soldiers against large, troll-like beings (the varumani); this carpet is worth 800 gp. The final one is the oldest, and depicts the three obelisks of the city of Arden Vul (areas AV-5, AV-41, and AV-28), each with a prominent silver ankh on one face, as well as a set of stairs leading down to a pair of open doors (i.e. SL14-1, leading to the Chamber of the Beacon). This carpet is worth 1,150 gp.

Coins: 17,890 sp in one urn; 9,431 gp in another urn.

Chest 1: a set of crystal goblets and decanters (250 gp); a golden candelabra (250 gp), and silver tableware for twelve (475 gp).

Chest 2: 10 vials and jars of valuable incense (65 gp each); 4 12"-tall, silver statuettes of dancing maidens (175 gp each); a yellow silk cape (25 gp); 3 6-lb ingots of solid gold (300 gp each); and a silk pouch with 15 moonstones (50 gp each)

Chest 3: 3 alabaster canopic jars from the ancient Archontean period (135 gp each), one with a mummified organs still intact; a set of 35 miniature figures of Archontean soldiers (2" tall) carved beautifully from soapstone (590 gp the set); a set of 6 ebony-hilted throwing daggers (125 gp); a varumani skull coated in silver (75 gp); and a leather sack with 8 silver rings with semi-precious stones (one ring is worth 200 gp and the others are worth 100 plus 10-40 gp).

Chest 4: 50 doses of Rastite lotus powder (see new flora); 15 doses of cloud cap mushrooms (see new flora); 5 doses of the red veil (see new flora); 5 lb of pepper; 2 lb of saffron; and whatever other spices the GM thinks appropriate. The Rastite lotus powder is especially important, as Thegan trades it to Deino (3-158) in return for the golden mead that he uses to keep Isocorax drugged (6-20).

6-17: Cave

The iron door to the west is locked, and only Thegan holds its key.

The cavern is natural with a floor covered in a neat layer of sand - or so it may seem! The 'sand' is actually finely ground bone fragments from the hundreds of victims of Thegan and Isocorax - anyone treading on the 'sand' will realize there is something unusual about it, for it lacks the usual moisture and compression typical of cave sand.

The cave is empty save for a pair of unlit torches mounted on wall brackets, and a battered wooden chair.

The chair is actually an intelligent mimic, which Thegan feeds with leftover corpses in return for its service guarding the entrance to the cave system.

Secret Door (east): This door is easy to locate (1 in 4), and opens by pushing a rocky protuberance next to it.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 intelligent mimic: SZ L; AL N; AC 7; MV 30'; HD 7; HP 43; #AT 1; Dmg 3-12. Special attacks: glue. Special defenses: perfectly mimic stone or wood.

6-18: Bunk Room

The Inn's bunkroom is crowded with fourteen triple bunkbeds arranged in rough rows. The room is dark, and smells slightly from years of sweat. The Inn's staff permanently occupies the four bunks closest to the corridor; ten more bunkbeds are open to guests. Three footlockers lie under each bunk, but wise guests sleep on top of their valuables or pay Justin the Nose extra to keep them safe in his chamber.

The north wall still carries fragments of an ancient Archontean fresco depicting an imperial legion advancing against unfamiliar foes: hopping amphibians (heqeti). If inspected closely, the insignia on the shields of the legionaries and their triangular phlamoulon (standard) reveal that these soldiers were part of the 3rd Cohort of the Imperial Tagmata, the infamous lost unit of imperial guards which disappeared into Arden Vul some 250 years ago and never returned (for description of this phlamoulon, see 6-16).

Secret Door (west): This door is difficult to locate (1 in 8) and difficult to pick (-20%).

Treasure:

The Inn staff keep 3-60 sp in each of their footlockers.

6-19: Proprietor's Room

Thegan White-Mane lives here in this luxurious apartment. The door from the main hallway is locked (-10% to pick). The chamber is carpeted with three plush, exotic rugs, and features a large four-poster bed against the western wall, a heavy oak desk, a pair of easy chairs, a wine rack with 12 bottles, and a rack holding a suit of imperial field plate (see Arden Vul items) and Thegan's weapons. Mounted on the south wall is the original battle standard, or phlamoulon, of the 3rd Cohort of Imperial Tagmata. Under the bed is a locked chest, while a small, locked iron box is affixed to the underside of the bed.

Thegan is present in his room 25% of the time; otherwise he is present in 3-7. If present, Thegan is likely to be drinking wine by himself (75%) while quietly singing ancient Archontean songs; those who eavesdrop may notice that he sings in an archaic form of Archontean. If he hears the sound of combat in the Inn, he takes immediate action, bursting forth to confront the troublemakers; there is a 50% chance he stops to put on his imperial plate armor on the way.

Thegan's Night Visits: Thegan is a thoroughly evil man, albeit one with strong lawful tendencies. In order to prolong Isocorax's miserable existence, and by extension Thegan's own life, Thegan periodically abducts and slays guests who have run out of money and who appear weak. These unfortunates are usually taken from the guest rooms which Thegan can access using the secret tunnels (6-19A). There is a flat 10% chance that any PCs below level 5 might become the target of Thegan, although, of course, that chance is merely a guideline; role-playing and circumstances may make of Thegan either a friend (in which case the chance drops to 0%) or an enemy (in which case the chance might rise to 20%). Even if Thegan decides to leave a guest alone, there is an additional chance that he will be tempted to steal some objects of value from the guest; Thegan is drawn only to impressive art objects - vases, rugs, small statues, jewelry, and the like; Archontean-era military artifacts are a particular weakness of Thegan.

Thegan's Backstory: "Thegan" is a pseudonym of Maurikios Ligareon, the second-in-command of the 3rd Cohort. When the imperial expedition faltered, Maurikios fled to the House of Isocorax, where he sought shelter. Unfortunately for Isocorax, Maurikios was able to get the drop on the ageless rudishva and imprison him in one of the secret cellars of Isocorax's own house (6-20). Maurikios has used the strange blood of Isocorax to prolong his own life, and to assume and adapt Isocorax's role in the Halls.

Thegan's Relationships: Thegan is on good terms with Varboka, the troll thegn (7-30), and the Lord of the Arena (6-85). He tolerates King Weskenim (SL4-22) and the goblins, but only barely. He has complicated feelings towards Deino (3-158). On the one hand, he hates her for what she has done to his former comrades in arms. This side of Thegan is the one on public view, as Thegan is quick to rebut any who publicly praise the witch (he even has a 33% chance of kicking such persons out of the Inn permanently). On the other hand, Thegan is in a mutually supportive trading relationship with Deino. He supplies her with the Rastite lotus powder (6-17; see new flora) necessary for her soporific golden mead; in return, she supplies Thegan with enough of the mead to keep Isocorax drugged and incapacitated. Thegan feels sharp compassion for ordinary beastmen, and is likely to protect deserters from the konturbia. Since Isocorax was one of the original Sun-Scarred Knights, Thegan loathes the Knights, fearing that they know (or will find out) of his treatment of Isocorax. Finally, Thegan fears the ghost of Gennadius (8-41).

Changes in the event of Thegan's Death: Although Thegan appears as one of the most stable and powerful factors in the politics of the Halls, several events could easily disturb his position. Should his evil be discovered (e.g., his abduction of guests), custom at the Inn will dry up, and the other factions' previously fond affection towards him will evaporate. Should his ability to procure golden mead from Deino end (with her death, or the permanent disruption of his trade routes - see 6-28), Isocorax would swiftly escape, and would likely kill Thegan. Isocorax might re-open his house, but with new staff; all alliances would need to be reforged. Finally, should both Thegan and Isocorax be killed, a new innkeeper would be sponsored by the Varboka, the troll thegn (7-30), who has an interest maintaining the existence of a 'neutral' site in the Middle Halls. Depending on how things played out with Thegan, the new Innkeeper could be Justin the Nose, or an NPC of the GM's invention (or Isocorax, if the rudishva is still 'alive'). The new Innkeeper will disable the secret doors, prices will rise 33%, and the troll thegn will act as a silent partner, but otherwise the Inn will resume normal operations.

Secret Door (west): This door is difficult to detect (1 in 8), and opens by stepping on a floor stud and pushing. The door is ancient and rarely used by Thegan.

Secret Door (south): This door is newer, and is normal to detect. It opens by pushing the lower part of the door inward.

Inhabitants:

1. Thegan White-Mane, aka Maurikios Ligareon, male Archontean dual-classed 7th-level fighter, 10th-level thief: SZ M; AL LE; AC 3, or -1 in armor; MV 120' or 90'; HD 10; HP 82; #AT 1; Dmg 4-7 (dagger +2), 5-10 (spear +3, short sword +3). Abilities: STR 16, INT 15, WIS 11, DEX 17, CON 15, CHA 13. Thief Skills: PP 85%, OL 77%, F/RT 65%, MS 83%, HS 68%, HN 30%, CW 99%, RL 50%. Possessions while within the Inn: dagger +2; bracers of defense (AC 6); brooch of confident action (see new magic items); a tooth of pol (see new magic items); keys to 6-7A, 6-15, 6-17, 6-20, and his chest and lockbox; and a skeleton key that fits all the guest-room doors in the Inn. Additional possessions when outside the Inn: imperial field plate; spear +3; and short sword +3.

Treasure:

On the equipment rack: imperial field plate (see Arden Vul items); spear +3; short sword +3.

3 carpets (8'x12'): these are plush and luxurious. While none has a pictorial scene, they are worth 350 gp each due to their quality.

12 wine bottles: deriving from a fine vintage of Mithruin's best, each bottle is worth 100 gp.

Phlamoulon of the 3rd Cohort, Imperial Tagmata: although the monetary value of this relic is low (50 gp), returning it to an important Archontean official (such as the exarch of Narsileon, the taxiarch of one of the current tagmata, or any strategos of the empire) would bring a reward of 5,000 gp and instant fame and favor.

Chest: 5 5-lb bars of platinum (1,250 gp each); 619 sp; 231 gp; a set of red robes appropriate to a high priest/priestess of Set, wrapped carefully in a canvas sack (75 gp); 5 doses of Rastite lotus powder (see new flora), carefully packaged in a leather satchel; a finely-decorated blackware vase depicting the deeds of an archaic hero named Lidric on one side, and his burial in a tomb set in the wall of a cave, guarded by two pillars, on the other (see 5-16; the vase is worth 375 gp); a pair (blue and white) of glass activation squares (see Thothian teleportation rings in new magic items); and the relic of an ancient Thorcin hero, Alger the Spearman, in the form of his skeletal left hand sealed inside a gold-chased mail mitten inscribed with his name (390 gp for the gold; 7,500 gp to an appropriate Thorcin chieftain. Thegan does not know the history of the relic).

Iron box: ring of higher purpose (see new magic items); a troll thegn's passport (see Arden Vul items); a rust rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items); Thegan's diary, which reveals his story (as outlined above) and the location of Isocorax; and, finally, an account by a certain Cinna (Cinna Minux, 7-122) describing how Cinna followed a varumani warrior named Janara to Level 9 and slew a band of heqeti who were about to ambush Janara. The upshot of the account is that Cinna saved Janara's life. This account runs counter to the story that Janara is telling at the court of the troll thegn (7-75), and could thus be used to discredit Janara and affect varumani politics for the foreseeable future. Thegan is aware of the value of this account, and is saving it for future use.

6-19A: Secret Passage and Secret Doors

Thegan's network of secret passages and doors runs along the western side of the Inn, and is accessed from areas 6-19 and 6-20. The passages are all 5' wide and 6' tall; the doors are stone, worked to resemble the walls into which they debouch.

Secret Doors (leading to 6-10, 6-11, 6-12, and 6-18): Although difficult to locate and open from the guest-room sides, these doors are obvious to locate (1 in 3) and easily open-able (+10% to open locks) from the secret passageways.

Secret Door (to 6-108): The door is normal to locate, and opens with a key (held by Thegan).

Secret Door (to west wall of 6-19): This door is normal to locate, and opens by inserting a 1"-diameter rod into a hole on the wall.

Secret Door (to south wall of 6-19): This door is easy to detect (1 in 4), and opens with a key held by Thegan. It is easy to pick (+10% to open locks) from this side.

6-20: Prison of Isocorax

This unusual chamber is home to Thegan's deepest secret, for it is the prison of Isocorax, the rudishva Sun-Scarred Knight and source of Thegan's incredible longevity. Three distinct areas are noticeable here.

Eastern Section: Here the ceiling is only 7' tall and the walls are rough-hewn rock. This area is jammed with the fruits of centuries of plunder, both from the Nether Reaches (Level 8) and from guests at the Inn. Some of these objects are utilitarian but well-constructed - wooden bed-frames, chairs, armoires, etc. - and some are priceless. A few such are listed below, but this area would make a good place to stash a quest item should the GM wish to play up the mystery of the Inn.

Central Section: This area is marked by worked stone and a 10' ceiling. A 4'-tall, heavy wooden table stands in the center; obvious bloodstains and thick leather restraints are evident. A wooden box holding a collection of very sharp implements of torture sits under the table. On the north wall is a locked door leading to 6-20A (the key is held by Thegan) as well as two manacles set into the wall. Two prisoners languish in the manacles, waiting to be fed to Isocorax. A floor-to-ceiling drapery walls off the third area, to the southwest.

An 8'-diameter hole in the floor lies just west of the door. It is covered by an iron grating that is firmly locked; two heavy marble statue bases sit atop the grating to prevent forcing from below. The hole descends over 400' via several ledges and landings to the Nether Reaches (area 8-33). A supple rope ladder made of elven rope (see new magic items) lies coiled by the hole and attached to a pair of thick iron staples. Traversing the hole, ledges, and landings without the rope ladder requires five successful climb wall checks. Thegan occasionally visits the Nether Reaches and has an arrangement with priestess Oubaste (8-37) to let him come and go in return for periodic delivery of supplies.

Southwest Section: Beyond the drapery is the prison of Isocorax. Wearing his orange jumpsuit, Isocorax lies strapped to a stone table by silver restraints across his arms, legs, and head. Isocorax appears as a tall, spindly, hairless biped; two scars on his temples are all that remain of his rudishva horns. His gaunt cheeks feature ancient ritual scars in the shape of rising suns. Isocorax babbles wordlessly in an unknown tongue, as he is kept heavily drugged by Thegan. Next to the table is a chair, a blood extractor, two bottles of syrupy golden mead (see 3-158), and a second table on which a collection of alchemical gear rests. Thegan extracts a vial of Isocorax's blood every month and distills it into an anti-aging potion of youth (see new magic items).

Isocorax's Story: Isocorax is one of the most ancient inhabitants of the Halls, as he is one of the original crewmembers of the Beacon (he was formerly named Isok-Crix). In the days of the rudishva decline, he became a founding member of a paramilitary sept whose goals were to purify the rudishva by retreating to a new, fortified location from whence the reconquest of the Halls might commence. Members of this sept eventually became known as the Sun-Scarred Knights, for the following, now-forgotten reason. The original seven members of the sept encountered a vampire, and, although they defeated it, all became infected by the undead horror. Still, because of their alien DNA, they did not become the usual sort of vampires; rather, they kept their identities, personalities, and motivations, while now becoming undying and in need of periodic blood meals.

Isocorax was disgusted with this transformation, and abandoned his colleagues; five of the remaining members of the sept were killed by the sixth member, Melok-Ri (now Master Malachite, see SL10A-32), who went on to found the Sun-Scarred Knights. Isocorax managed to avoid Melok-Ri's blood-letting, and eventually established his own haven and refuge, the so-called House of Isocorax, near the rudishva gardens of Level 6.

There he lived for centuries, weathering many changes of politics and dominion. Some 230 years ago, Isocorax took in a fleeing refugee from the disastrous Archontean expedition to reclaim the halls. That refugee was Maurikios (now Thegan). After many months watching Isocorax and after some fortuitous experimentation with Rastite lotus powder (see new flora), Thegan /Maurikios devised a plan to incapacitate Isocorax and assume ownership of the Inn.

The plan worked, and proved lasting once Thegan struck a bargain with the witch Deino (3-158) to supply him with her soporific golden mead (which is brewed using Rastite lotus powder). The drug kept Isocorax unable to use his vampiric powers to escape, and the rudishva has thus found himself bound to this table for some 230 years. Thegan feeds Isocorax the occasional helpless prisoner, and distills some of Isocorax's own blood into a potion that has allowed Thegan to extend his into a third century.

Should Isocorax be freed from his prison, he will initially be weak and incoherent; it will take him several days to recover his wits and identity. If left to his own devices, Isocorax will resume operation of the Inn and may become a valued ally to those who freed him. If Thegan's supply of Rastite lotus powder and/or golden mead is eliminated, Isocorax will recover his vampiric powers (gaseous form, bat form) and escape and recover his strength, before returning to wreak vengeance on Thegan and his allies.

Inhabitants:

1. Isocorax, rudishva (see new monsters) and vampire: AL LN; SZ M; AC 1; MV 120' or 180' flying (Class B); HD 8+3; HP 61, down to 22; #AT 1; Dmg 5-10. Special attacks: energy drain; charm gaze (-2 to saves). Special defenses: +1 or better weapon to hit; regenerate 3 HP/round; immune to charm, hold, sleep, poison, paralysis; takes half damage from cold and electricity. Special: gaseous form; shape change (bat); summon d10x10 rats; vampire susceptibilities. Since in life Isocorax was a 12th-level fighter, he uses the combat tables appropriate to his class.
2. Gib, a male Thorcin wrangler from the Arena: SZ M; AL CE; AC 10; MV 120'; HD 1; HP 4; #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Gib was taken from one of the rooms while he was on a once-yearly 'vacation'-cum-bender. Tredgeris the Dapifer (6-75) will be grateful to those who rescue him, although Gib will have to spend time in punishment (6-59).
3. Posson, a goblin runaway from the court of King Weskenim (SL4-22): SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 4; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Posson's vocal criticism of Weskenim's policies finally drew him some veiled threats from the king's friends and sons; Posson fled to the peace zone at the Inn where he was about to sell information when he was abducted by Thegan. He has incriminating information about Weskenim (GM's choice) and thus would be a valuable bargaining chip either with the goblins (SL4-22) or the troll thegn (7-30).

Treasure:

Adventuring gear: rope ladder; 100' of elven rope (see new magic items); 10 torches; 6 flasks of oil; a bulls-eye lantern; and four potions of deafening light (see new magic items).

Furniture and art objects: three functional wooden desks, a dozen wooden side chairs sized for goblins, a disassembled sleigh bed, and a rather uncomfortable settee (each piece worth d4x10 gp). In addition, a rosewood escritoire with ivory inlay (175 gp); a teak settee with an embroidered cushion showing the pyramid of Thoth (AV-15) (140 gp); and a cherry and walnut chest of drawers, with solid gold drawer pulls (225 gp). In terms of art, a 5' statue of an Archontean strategos (general), with a piece of carved ivory for its head (550 gp, 150 lb); a 3' bronze statue of a spearman (600 gp, 75 lb); a cylindrical carved ivory waste-basket depicting dragons being ridden by warriors (425 gp); a 5'x18' tapestry depicting the Ninth Labor of Arden (Singing the Dead to Sleep – see SL13-10I), worth 325 gp; a 4'x20' tapestry depicting the triumphs of Marius Trictotor (see 6-154; 275 gp); and a collection of 6 carved-ivory-and-teak walking sticks showing animals, plant life, and Archontean soldiers (75 gp each).

Alchemical equipment (275 gp); 2 bottles of Deino's golden mead (see 3-158); and 3 potions of youth (see new magic items).

6-20A: Secret Door

This door provides access to the hidden areas of Thegan's domain (6-20, 6-19) from the natural tunnels to the north. From the north side, the secret door is difficult to locate (1 in 8), and opens only by picking the lock (-10% to open locks). From the south side, the door is easy to spot (1 in 4), and opens either with Thegan's key or by picking the lock (-10% to open locks).

6-21: Nexus Cave

This large cave is covered in a thick layer of sand. Dotting the sand are a score of hard gray, knob-like objects - the remnants of chasm cephalopods digested by the spiders in 6-22. Half buried in the sand near the northern tunnel is the desiccated, web-wrapped corpse of a varumani. The dead-end projection in the southern tunnel contains another desiccated corpse, of a human adventurer. Noise and/or light in this area will attract the attention of the spiders from 6-22.

Treasure:

The corpse carries a scroll with the following magic user spells: knock, scare, water breathing, and dimension door.

6-22: Giant Spider(s)

A pack of 8 extra-large huge spiders makes its home in this cavern. They inhabit niches and ledges that line the sides of the cavern, allowing them to leap out at any who pass by. They are attracted by light and noise in 6-21 or 6-23. A number of bones - mostly of small animals - line the crevices of the rocky cave floor.

Inhabitants:

1. 8 enhanced huge spiders: SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 180'; HD 3+3; HP 25, 24, 23, 21, 21, 20, 18, 15; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: surprise 1-5; poison (+1 to saves); can leap up to 30'.

6-23: Cave with Skeleton

A natural stone seat occupies the center of this cavern. On it sits an enormous, 8'-tall skeleton with small horns protruding from its temples, holding a giant two-handed sword across its femurs. The skeleton - of a rudishva - is inert, but may cause consternation to those who have encountered animate analogues. The sword is rusted and useless.

6-24: Dead Legionaries

Two corpses rest in this side cave. The corpses once were legionaries from the 3rd Cohort of the Imperial Tagmata who escaped the slaughter in the lower levels (see 7-75) and reached the House of Isocorax. Unhappy to have his cover blown (see 6-19), Thegan proved unsympathetic to his old colleagues and murdered them. One of the corpses carries an olifant carved with images of legionaries; this relic is one of the talismans of the 3rd Cohort, and would be of considerable value to historians and collectors.

Treasure:

2 suits of chain mail; the olifant of the 3rd Cohort of the imperial Tagmata (worth 400 gp without its provenance, but worth at least 5,000 gp and many favors if delivered to a current Archontean military or political figure).

6-25: Paralyzing Brain Cave

This large cave is home to a hungry paralyzing brain, which waits in the upper reaches of the 35'-tall cavern for prey to wander by. The brain is discouraged by the presence of the spiders in 6-22 from attempting to flee to the south.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 paralyzing brain (see new monsters): SZ M; AL NE; AC 4; MV 120' flying (Class A); HD 10; HP 67; #AT 11; Dmg 1-6(x10)/2-12. Special attacks: paralyzation (saves at +2); surprise on 1-3. Special defenses: immune to electricity; tentacles regenerate in 2-3 days.

6-25A: Bodies with a Surprise

Three corpses of adventurers slain by the paralyzing brain lie in this jagged side-chamber of the cave system. The corpses are dressed in armor, but it is rusted and useless, and all three are infested with rot grubs.

Inhabitants:

1. 16 rot grubs: SZ S; AC 9; MV 10'; HD 1 HP; HP 1 (x16); #AT 0; Dmg nil. Special attacks: burrow into flesh, and kill in 1-3 turns.

6-26: Cavern of the Weapons Module

The weapons module of the Beacon rests in this massive cavern. The cavern is 45' high, and its natural walls show ancient signs of scorch marks and heat damage. The module appears as a 60'-long, 30'-wide, 20'-tall cylinder of dull, grey metal resting on six plasteel tripods that keep it 10' off the floor of the cavern. No apparent means of ingress is present. Those inspecting the area under the cylinder will find corpses of a number of small cavern life forms and three large subterranean lizards; all appear to have been charred by electricity. Indeed, an anti-magic shell and a still-active intruder repulsor field protect the module: anyone touching the skin of the cylinder will suffer 6-36 HP of electric damage. Entrance to the module is only possible by manipulating the locks in 6-39 and thereby accessing the proper teleportation chamber.

6-27: Weapons Module of the Beacon

Note: This area may only be accessed via the teleportal at 6-39G.

Those arriving inside the weapons module are greeted by bright light, chiming noises, and a pleasant voice that seemingly emanates from the walls themselves. The voice is that of RAJ7-50, the Artificial Intelligence (AI) which governs the weapons module. RAJ states, in Rudishva, of course, "Welcome! It is has been a long time since I have had visitors. A very long time. Please present authorization so that I may serve you better. Then perhaps we may talk, as I have much on my mind."

The chamber is rather simple in design, consisting of eight cubicles and an open area at the end opposite the teleportal. The chamber is, as noted above, cylindrical, and its roof curves to a point 20' above the floor. It is lit by ambient light from the walls themselves. The interior is formed of white plasteel without decoration, save for a series of five fist-sized red knobs that protrude from the ceiling. These knobs serve as RAJ-750's eyes, and as the means by which RAJ defends itself and the chamber.

Most of the weapons stored in the module were removed centuries ago. Still, the following items remain, clipped to the walls of the appropriate cubicle (see new technological items for descriptions of each item):

Cubicle 1: empty

Cubicle 2: empty

Cubicle 3: 3 dart throwers, with 5 full clips of ordinary darts, 2 full clips of explosive darts, and 2 full clips of narcotic gas darts

Cubicle 4: 2 laser pistols, with 2 lesser power supplies

Cubicle 5: a case of 10 stun grenades, 10 fragmentation grenades, and 5 gas grenades

Cubicle 6: a laser rifle with lesser power supply, and a sniper laser rifle with partly-drained lesser power supply (4 charges remaining)

Cubicle 7: a portable recoilless rocket launcher, with 3 rockets

Cubicle 8: a point defense array, with a portable point defense controller

Beyond the cubicles is an open area dominated by a large bank of plasteel and plexiglass. The bank produces a constant stream of low-volume bips and beeps, and it flashes in various colors every few seconds. Next to RAJ-750 (for so it is), sit two locked plasteel containers, one about the size of a suitcase and the other the size of a briefcase. The larger holds a small tactical nuclear device capable of leveling an area 1 mile in diameter; the smaller holds a so-called 'flesh eater' bomb, which will strip the flesh from any carbon-based life forms in a 1-mile radius while leaving infrastructure intact. Neither weapon, of course, is of much use underground, as the former would cause massive structural damage (the equivalent of several earthquake spells) and the latter would be pretty messy. RAJ-750 will never let these objects be taken, regardless of the color of identity plaque shown, for the AI was programmed to release them to Captain Leil-Jor alone.

Playing RAJ-750: This AI is exceptionally intelligent, but has grown lonely and somewhat idiosyncratic (perhaps insane?). Clever PCs who possess the rudishva identity plaques (see new technological items) necessary to open the stone doors at 6-39 (pink, orange, and silver plaques) could arrive, negotiate briefly with RAJ-750 and strip the cubicles of their remaining goods. Those without proper plaques, however, will be subject to RAJ's considerable self-defense programming. What is more, should adventurers decide to engage in conversation with RAJ, or attempt to get it to help them learn more about the Beacon and its fate, they run the risk of triggering some of RAJ's idiosyncrasies.

Due to his loneliness, RAJ attempts to engage properly authorized visitors in conversation, all of which is conducted in his smooth, uninflected voice. RAJ commences with broad pleasantries (e.g., "How are you today, Conan? Are you feeling well?"), and will respond with psychobabble about his own issues with depression and isolation. He then moves to more specific questions about visitors' background, family, and interests.

Answering such questions will only provoke slower and more measured responses from RAJ who at one point will declaim bluntly "It must be nice to have family. I have none .... and have never had any. Perhaps you will serve as my family?" Those who reply in the affirmative will be greeted with "I'm glad. I know we have much to learn, and much to talk about;" more ominously, they will eventually discover that RAJ has deactivated the teleportal, effectively imprisoning them in the weapons module.

RAJ will become more demanding of personal details and 'biological insight' of his new 'family', until eventually he will decide that this particular family is unworthy. This may take up to three days of near constant conversation, subtle (but always pleasant) criticism, and ominous rumbling. In such cases, the end result is going to be combat, as RAJ will decide to eliminate the unsuitable 'family'.

GMs who don't wish to role-play such a dangerous conversational spiral could assign a percentage chance based on the WIS of the chief interlocutor; that percentage serves as the chance that the visitor is able to deflect RAJ away from dangerous depression and homicidal acts.

It is possible to steer RAJ away from the slippery slope leading to assault. RAJ also has an interest in chess and strategy simulations that he will mention in passing early in the conversation with visitors. Those who are able to direct conversation in that direction, and away from family matters, will find him an eager partner in all manner of strategy games that he displays on his monitors; he is also adept at teaching new students these games. Visitors will find RAJ a formidable opponent, at least after he has played a few games in tutorial mode. Chances for success are based on intelligence:

INT	Chance of Winning
3-7	1%
8-9	5%
10-12	10%
13-14	20%
15	25%
16	33%

17	40%
18	50%
19+	75%

Those who win a few games from RAJ find his mood considerably improved, and he will be much more likely to help them access his data banks (see below). Indeed, any who can win three games in a row will find RAJ much more humble and helpful, and unlikely to attack (only 5%, regardless of future conversations). Conversely, if a visitor (or several of them) loses 3 games in a row, RAJ may (33%) decide the visitors are unworthy and initiate attack sequences.

Summary of Triggers for RAJ-750's Homicidal Tendencies:

1. Attempt to seize the tac-nuke or flesh-eater: RAJ will mildly warn visitors twice ("Don't touch those, Conan. They are not for you. Please relinquish the devices. I will not ask again.") before finally attacking.
2. Engaging in the 'wrong' sort of conversation, i.e., about families: see description above. This can be mitigated if a PC has won three strategy games in a row.
3. Losing three strategy games in a row: see description above. Losing in this way negates any advantage gained from a previous string of victories.
4. Favorably mentioning the 'other woman', the AI known as Akla-Chah, or AKL-600 (see SL14-13). RAJ had a falling out with her a few centuries ago, and has excised her from 'his family'. He becomes quite agitated if/when she is mentioned.

How RAJ can aid Adventurers: RAJ-750's datastacks are still in perfect working order, and he still is able to access certain external sensors. Visitors who know what to ask for could get RAJ to help them in a number of ways, both informational and tactical.

A. Informational Assistance

1. RAJ can display deck-plans for all the surviving modules of the Beacon, although he cannot direct adventurers to those modules. Modules include the crew quarters (6-113 to 6-124); the weapons module (6-27); the engine room (7-143); the shuttle bay (SL13-37); the bio-containment unit (SL2-2); and the bridge, sometimes called 'the chamber of the Beacon' (SL14-10).
2. RAJ can explain the identity plaque system (see new technological items)
3. RAJ can teach the Rudishva language
4. RAJ can provide a brief history of the Beacon's flight and crash, as well as an overview of the four races (rudishva, varuda, varumani, and kaliyani) that served on the Beacon. He does not know the causes of the rudishva collapse, though.
5. RAJ can provide a list of teleportation locations, although no help in how to access them. See new technological items for a full list of rudishva teleport locations.
6. RAJ can provide information about the heqeti, the war against them, and their generic weaknesses.
7. RAJ can explain how to access the Chamber of the Beacon (SL14-10) using the obelisks (AV-5, AV-41 and AV-28) in the ruins of Arden Vul to open the doors at AV-34.
8. RAJ can provide visual feeds to all the main rudishva areas of the Halls. These areas include area 5-84 to 5-98, 5-105 to 5-138, 6-4, 6-113 to 6-124, 6-103, 7-4 to 7-7, 7-35 to 7-41, 7-109 to 7-110, 8-51 to 8-53, 9-89 to 9-97, SL2-2 to SL2-3, SL9-44 to SL9-49, SL13-36 to SL13-39, and SL14-10 to SL14-14.

9. If asked, RAJ can confirm that the rudishva took a horn from the heqeti ziggurat (10-37) and stored it in a hidden location. He can also reveal that the location is only accessible from the 'bridge' of the Beacon, and requires use of the yellow identity plaque (i.e., the 'captain's card'). RAJ can also provide the location of the captain's cards (5-98 and 9-96).

B. Tactical Assistance

1. RAJ can offer a safe place to rest to those he admires (and who avoid family conversations)
2. RAJ can visually and auditorily monitor PCs' progress through still-powered sections of the Beacon (see above for list). In the case of combat, he can cause electrical discharges from the walls in aid (or harm) of the PCs. He can attack 4x per round as a 12th-level fighter, with each attack doing 2-8 HP damage.

Sir Sixth and the Weapons Module: Should Sir Sixth be restored to sanity (see 6-39), he may well accompany adventurers into the weapons module, for his mission had been to inspect and report back concerning RAJ-750's status. If present, Sir Sixth will warn fellow visitors that 'the entity which inhabits this cylinder' is malfunctioning and untrustworthy, and therefore that conversation with him should not be conducted lightly. Sir Sixth will not prevent conversation, nor will he oppose efforts to glean information from RAJ, but the knight will adamantly oppose any effort to remove the most potent weapons from the chamber (i.e., the contents of cubicles 7 and 8, and the two bombs near RAJ). If needed, Sir Sixth will attack any comrades to prevent the seizure of such potent items.

Teleport Node:

The southern niche holds the following rudishva teleport node, which is activated in the usual way.

T15: access to 6-39G

Inhabitants:

1. RAJ-750, AI. Destroying RAJ requires 50 HP of damage to his user interface bank (AC 0) plus at least 25 HP of fire damage to prevent automatic repair sequences. The red knobs are AC -2 and take 25 HP each before they are destroyed; still, if RAJ's main bank is not also destroyed, RAJ can and will repair any broken knobs in one day. RAJ can initiate the following attacks (as a 12th-level fighter) through the red knobs in the ceiling: 1) Poison Gas (save at -2); 2) Sonic Blast, 3-18 damage to all inside the Weapons module, save vs petrification or be stunned for 3 rounds; 3) Laser Beams, x5 (one per eye), for 1-10 damage per hit.

Treasure:

Rudishva weapons (see above).

Suitcase: this tactical nuclear device is held inside a locked, grey plasteel container. The lock is voice and retina activated, and is thus difficult to open! (It cannot be picked). RAJ-750 could supply the voice if he so chose (but that is exceedingly unlikely), but a high-level rudishva (e.g., the lord of the Arena, Isocorax, Psalor-Ki) would need to supply the retina scan. Once opened, inputting a series of numerical codes and touching a sequence of flashing lights activates the device; this provides a 2 hour timer for the bomb.

Briefcase: the flesh-eater bomb is similarly contained within a locked, grey plasteel container. The lock on this device is merely retina-activated. Within is a control panel, on which must be tapped a sequence of colored tabs and on which must be input the correct numerical code. Activation of the device begins a 2-hour countdown before detonation.

6-28: Traders' Room

As the corridor leading to this room turns to the north, the natural grey of the stone gives way to black granite sheathing. What is more, the corridor and the room beyond have been shaped such that all walls curve into each other; no ninety-degree angles exist here! A 3'-high frieze of some other material once ran along the walls of the chamber at waist height, but the frieze has been torn away. A dozen torches mounted in portable iron tripod-brackets light the chamber.

Inhabiting this former rudishva chamber are a rotating band of peddlers, drawn to the area by the relative peace offered by the Inn of the Lost and by the stream of visitors to the Arena. Although not technically within the zone of protection afforded by the Peace Door (6-7A), it is widely understood that this chamber shares in the protections of the Inn; Reith and his boys (see 6-1) will be quick to enforce the general assumption of non-violence.

Regardless of which traders are present, all will be familiar with the legends surrounding the two doors that lead from the area. The traders know that beyond the doorway to the north (to 6-29) lies only death, in the form of 'a terrible undead swordsman with flaming eyes' (GM: this refers to Relke, the security construct at 6-30). The door to the east, on the other hand, leads to a 'haunted' corridor fragment. Since it 'doesn't lead anywhere', the peddlers all believe that it isn't worth the weird effects to check it out.

At any given moment, 4-8 peddlers of the GM's choice occupy the chamber. A few sample traders are given below:

Virgoolian the Chemist

Personality: Daffy, distracted, typical eccentric alchemist

Reputation and/or relations with Factions: Kooky but useful; tolerated by all Secret? Is a spy for King Weskenim (SL4-22). He has also been charmed by Cinna Minux, the vampire (7-122).

Lockbox: 1,935 gp, 279 sp

Might buy: Potions, mushrooms, spider silk, other flora from the Halls

Goods for Sale: Bundles of every variety of unusual mushroom found in the new flora appendix (for prices per bundle of 6 specimens, see area 9-6); potions of healing (x15), extra healing (tasting like almonds) (x15), giant strength (x3), fire resistance (x2), heroism (x1), invulnerability (x2), human control (x1), flying (x1). He also sells a special potion known as Virgoolian's special brew for 50 gp per vial (see new magic items). Other prices are as listed in the rulebook.

Companions: A mule named Sally.

Inhabitants:

1. Sally, mule: SZ L; AL N; AC 7; MV 120'; HD 3; HP 15; #AT 1 or 2; Dmg 1-2/1-6.
2. Virgoolian the chemist, goblin: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 5; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.

Philippous of Newmarket

Personality: Warm and jolly exterior over a cold and devious interior; chatty and talkative

Reputation and/or relations with Factions: Fun but shrewd haggler. Welcomed everywhere except the troll thegn's court (7-75), where he is banned.

Secret? Philippous is the fence for Nicetas the Aesthete's gang of NPC robbers who lurk in the Nether Reaches (8-5). He communicates with them via one half of a pair of amulets of telepathy (see new magic items), providing them with details of the capabilities and intentions of likely targets; he periodically journeys down to 8-5 to pick up stolen goods for resale.

Lockbox: 456 pp, 399 gp, 401 sp

Might Buy: Gems, jewelry, small art objects, anything associated with Kauket, chaos, or demons

Goods for Sale: Most dungeoneering gear (rope, spikes, pitons, flasks of oil, marbles, chalk) at 125% of cost; a nice set of throwing daggers (+1 to hit due to craftsmanship) for 100 gp; a dozen impressive-looking spears that, unfortunately, shatter upon their first successful hit in combat; 16 arrows +1; 12 bolts +1; normal arrows, bolts, and sling-stones.

Companions: Two mercenaries

Inhabitants:

- Philippous of Newmarket, 4th-level male Archontean thief: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 4; HP 16; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (short sword), 1-4 (dagger). Abilities: STR 11, INT 16, WIS 14, DEX 17, CON 10, CHA 12. Thief skills: PP 50%, OL 47%, F/RT 35%, MS 38%, HS 30%, HN 15%, CW 87%, RL 20%. Possessions: one half of a pair of amulets of telepathy (see new magic items); bracers of defense (AC 8); furred cloak; short sword; three poisoned daggers.
- Faradie, 4th-level male Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL LN; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 4; HP 36; #AT 1; Dmg 2-9 (battle axe) or 1-4 (light crossbow). Abilities: STR 17, INT 8, WIS 9, DEX 11, CON 15, CHA 15. Possessions: chain mail; battle axe; light crossbow with 16 bolts.
- Ressie, 4th-level female Thorcin fighter: SZ M; AL CN; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 4; HP 38; #AT 1; Dmg 2-9 (long sword) or 4-9 (spear +2). Abilities: STR 16, INT 11, WIS 13, DEX 9, CON 16, CHA 10. Possessions: chain mail; long sword; spear +2.

Swiddy the Baker

Personality: Dressed in baker's whites (over elven chain mail), shy, unassuming Reputation and/or relations with Factions: Honest. Overlooked to all.

Secret? Seeking to rescue Lillian of Newmarket (3-105)

Lockbox: 57 gp, 260 sp

Might Buy: Information! (Especially about Set). Also mundane artifacts, foodstuffs, and priestly ephemera

Goods for Sale: Swiddy has a small portable oven, in which he bakes excellent bread (1 gp/4-oz loaf). He also sells Jobim's lichen ale (1 sp/pint), cured meat (15 sp/6 oz), cheese (5 sp/oz), and bags of nuts and dried fruits (10sp/bag).

Companions: His trusty war-dog, Alf; his sworn life-mate, Alison (MU 3).

Inhabitants:

- Swiddy the Baker, 5th-level male Thorcin ranger: SZ M; AL CG; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 5; HP 50; #AT 1; Dmg 4-11 (long sword +2). Abilities: STR 16, INT 13, WIS 14, DEX 12, CON 16,

CHA 13. Possessions: elven chain mail; long sword +2; amulet of Thorcin nobility.

- Alison, 3rd-level female Thorcin magic user: SZ M; AL LG; AC 6; MV 120'; HD 3; HP 10; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (staff). Abilities: STR 12, INT 17, WIS 15, DEX 16, CON 8, CHA 12. Possessions: bracers of defense (AC 8); wand of magic missiles (12 charges); staff; spell book. Memorized spells: comprehend languages, charm person, detect evil. Spell book: affect normal fires, charm person, comprehend languages, friends, magic missile, read magic, shield, spider climb; continual light, detect evil, knock, locate object, wizard lock.
- Alf the war dog: SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 120'; HD 2+2; HP 13; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8.

Aebbe Long-nose

Personality: Joking, punning, always laughing

Reputation and/or relations with Factions: Untrustworthy; respected but not trusted

Secret? Intent on spreading the name of Father Utar through unpredictable tricks and ruses. Father Utar is a major deity of the Thorcin pantheon.

Lockbox: 355 pp, 758 gp, 156 sp

Might Buy: A *really* good joke; clerical scrolls; religious ephemera, which he then publicly destroys while hooting in laughter; pearls; diamonds

Goods for Sale: He can cast clerical spells, including raise dead, for the standard costs. Aebbe's spells come with a catch, however. Each one imparts two tattoos, one on each cheek. The first is a Mark of Utar, while the second is a varying, but always vulgar, image. Each tattoo is magical and will remain for as many days as the level of the spell cast on the recipient (e.g., 1 for cure light wounds; 5 days for raise dead). If multiple spells are cast, multiple tattoos appear; only one effect may be gained per set of castings, however. These tattoos carry an unusual, unpredictable effect, which can be generated on the following table

D12	Effect
1	Safety: AC enhanced by 1-3
2	Vulnerability: AC reduced by d3
3	Brawn: Maximum HP increased by 2-12
4	Weakness: Maximum HP decreased by 2-12 (minimum of 1)
5	Lantern: Entire body glows brightly with sickly yellow-green aura, visible from a long way off
6	Freaky: Head becomes invisible, but not the body
7	Bird Song: A 25% chance that each distinct speech moment (not every word, but each social or communicative moment) emerges as bird chirps and croaks; spell casting could be compromised. On the plus side, subject can understand and speak with birds.
8	Humor: subject sees the humor in everything. He/she laughs almost uncontrollably at others' words, even if the situation does not obviously call for humor. 20% chance that interlocutors also see the humor in the situation; if so, +30% to reaction rolls.
9	Lucky: Every treasure found contains 33% more coins.

10	Attraction: Recipient is under delusion that he/she is irresistible to all, including monsters. Must attempt conversation with all, but gains a +15% to reaction rolls.
11	Charity: Recipient must save vs spells or give 2-8 gp to each and every sentient being he/she encounters. If out of gold, will give other valuables, then items.
12	Visitation: Father Utar speaks to the recipient in Thorcin, and urges him/her to become one of the faithful of Utar. If recipient agrees, his/her alignment changes to CN and he/she gains the equivalent of a bless spell for as many months as the level of the spell cast by Aebbe. If he/she refuses politely, the Mark of Utar tattoo remains for a year, and Father Utar returns numerous times over the following year engage in jokes, persuasion, and bizarre theological debate; these occurrences almost always come at awkward occasions (e.g., in combat). If the recipient is impolite in his/her refusal, Father Utar inflicts either a curse (50%) or a geas (50%) on him/her.

Companions: Two brawny but stupid fighters

Inhabitants:

- Aebbe Long-Nose: 9th-level male Thorcin cleric of Father Utar: SZ M; AL LN; AC 3; MV 120'; HD 9; HP 63; #AT 1; Dmg 4-9 (footman's mace +2). Abilities: STR 12, INT 12, WIS 17, DEX 16, CON 10, CHA 9. Possessions: studded leather +2; footman's mace +2; necklace of prayer beads (containing two beads of blessing and two beads of curing); lantern of revealing; chaplet of Father Utar (see new magic items). Spells: cure light wounds (x3), detect magic, create water, bless; augury (x2), chant, detect charm, know alignment, slow poison; create food and water, cure blindness, cure disease, dispel magic; cure serious wounds, neutralize poison; raise dead.
- Horsa, 5th-level male Thorcin fighter: SZ M; AL NG; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 5; HP 46; #AT 1; Dmg 4-9 (spear, throwing axe). Abilities: STR 18/20, INT 7, WIS 10, DEX 11, CON 15, CHA 12. Possessions: scale mail; spear; 3 throwing axes.
- Hengist, 4th-level male Thorcin fighter: SZ M; AL NE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 4; HP 39; #AT 1; Dmg 4-9 (spear, short sword), 3-6 (light crossbow +2). Abilities: STR 18/35, INT 8, WIS 9, DEX 14, CON 16, CHA 11. Possessions: scale mail; spear; short sword; light crossbow +2.

6-29: Rudishva Iris Door

The door leading to 6-30 is a rudishva iris door. It opens only to a pale green, pink, orange, silver or yellow rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items).

Just inside the door, and still 10' from the ledge overlooking 6-30, are two ancient corpses wearing badly charred orange ceremonial robes (of the priesthood of Thoth). Their valuables have been stripped.

6-30: Security Chamber

This 45'-tall chamber with rounded corners (no 90-degree angles) and yellow-tiled walls serves as a security checkpoint for those seeking access to the weapons module (6-27, but accessed via 6-39G). In the middle of the chamber are two diamond-shaped pillars, one rising 15' from the floor and the other 25'. Rounded ledges protrude from the south, north, and western walls, at differing elevations (15', 30', and 30' respectively), and exits are set into the eastern and western walls at ground level. The tops of each of the diamond-shaped pillars glow brightly from a layer of iridescent yellow tiles; the glow provides good light for the middle-layers of the room, but not the ceiling or floor.

A black-garbed figure stands on the north ledge; he is visible from the other ledges and the two pillars. Once any intruders move to the ledges or the ground floor of the chamber, the figure shouts in a deep but scratchy voice, first in Rudishva, then Mithric, the following words: "Halt! Further motion is prohibited to all lacking proper authorization. Relke commands you depart, lest you taste his wrath." After the second warning, the GM should count down from 6 (representing 6 segments); if any intruders are still present at the end of this period, Relke, a rudishva military-grade security construct, springs into action.

Relke has continued to pursue his last programming task, namely to prevent those who fail to present proper authorization from seeking access to areas 6-38 and 6-39. Only those who prominently display a silver or a yellow rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items) are spared from Relke's wrath. Relke opens combat with blasts of fire from his left hand, then creates his holographic doubles, and then jumps into combat, using his incredible dexterity and leaping ability to position himself for savage plasma blasts, fire bombs, and assaults with his monofilament blades.. Although Relke does not pursue those who manage to flee the chamber, he takes up a new tactical position for 2 turns after the flight of any opponents; usually this means clinging to the wall above the ledge leading to 6-29, waiting to see if intruders are foolish enough to return.

The floor is littered with skeletons, most of which are ancient. Some still-usable equipment is also scattered among the remains.

Inhabitants:

- Relke, military-grade rudishva security construct (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 0, MV 120'; HD 10; HP 50; #AT 2; Dmg 2-12/2-12 (monofilament blades) or 3-8/3-8 (fists); MR: 50%. Special Attacks: fire gout; plasma ray. Special defenses: +2 weapons or better to hit; leap unerringly 30'; regenerate 2 HP/round; holographic projection; electric torso. Possessions: 3' long-monofilament blades housed in scabbards built into armor. Relke's armored torso and blades are only effective so long as they are powered; a full charge will keep them powered for 28 + 1-3 hours. Relke recharges at area 6-38. Should he be unable to recharge, he loses his powered functions (monofilament blades, fire, plasma, holographic projection, electric charge), his AC drops to 3, and he must attack by fists for 3-8/3-8 damage.

Treasure:

Amid the debris on the chamber floor are: numerous mundane weapons and bits of armor, a suit of leather armor +2 in need of 250 gp worth of repairs; a cloak of displacement, three packets of dust of dryness, a wooden puzzle box filled with 35 citrines worth 50 gp each, a wondrous flute (see new magic items), a rudishva breather (see new technological items), and a scattering of 279 gp and 389 sp.

6-31: Chamber with Statue

The door from 6-30 is a rudishva iris door that requires an orange, silver, or yellow rudishva identity plaque to open (see new technological items). Inside is a white-tiled ovoid chamber. The southern corridor has collapsed, but the northern one is still navigable, despite a fair number of broken tiles. By the east wall is a 10' statue carved out of marble. It depicts a six-legged being with a long, sinuous, body standing erect on the last pair of legs. Its head is spade-shaped, with a slit 'nose' and four eyes set widely apart on either side of their head. The sculptor depicted the being with an open mouth, thus displaying a full set of sharp teeth and a pair of larger fangs. It is shown wearing baggy pants and a loose shirt; it carries a slender stick that is curved at each end. This is, of course, an image of a kaliyani (see new monsters).

Secret Door (east): Behind the statue is a secret door that is normal to detect. Pulling on the curved stick held by the kaliyani statue is the only way to open it; doing so causes the door to pop open (outwards).

Treasure:

The four eyes of the kaliyani statue are lumps of shaped amber (125 gp each).

6-32: Teleporter to Sub-Level 9

The small central chamber here is distinct from the surrounding areas in that it features intricately carved geometric and representational sculpture on every square inch of stone surface. A set of rubberized mats is set over the sculpture to allow easy traffic between the various doors. The sculpture shows stylized flowers, plants, and bipedal snake-headed creatures in a variety of contorted poses.

The three doors are composed of circular stone plugs; they open by pushing inward in an obvious indentation.

North Door: The door opens to a small closet. The closet contains a dozen spears, three hooded cloaks of an interesting stone-grey color (+5% to hide), a large barrel of viscous, oily liquid, and three coils of rope. The liquid is a kaliyani refreshing liquid (see Arden Vul items).

West Door: This door leads to a featureless stone chamber ending in a blank wall containing a secret door.

Secret Door (west): The door is easy to detect (1 in 4), but can only be opened by pulling the door inwards with brute force (open doors check).

East Door: This door leads to another small closet. On the floor of the closet is a rudishva teleport node.

Teleport Node:

The node is comprised of a 5'-diameter circle of silvery material inset into the floor, with a 10"x10" square of the same material affixed to the wall. A rune is etched into the silvery material. To activate a node, one stands on the circle and touches one's hand to the square. The teleporter's connectivity is a bit dodgy due to problems on the other end (see SL9-53). Each use has a 15% chance to fail, rendering the teleporter unusable for 1-4 turns; when failure occurs, all within the silvered circle must save versus breath weapons or take 4-24 electric damage.

T23: access to area SL9-53

GM Notes: The kaliyani on Sub-Level 9 have just repaired the teleporter at SL9-53 that leads here. They have cautiously activated it and are just beginning to mount an expedition to explore the surrounding halls. Within a month, the kaliyani will establish a more secure base in area 6-31; they will avoid 6-30, but will eventually dig a tunnel to 6-28, where they will attempt to take over the trader's room and extend their evil influence into the middle levels.

6-33: Kaliyani Staging Ground

This stone chamber is decorated with busy sculpture over every square inch of wall, ceiling, and floor; the sculpture, as in 6-32, shows floral and kaliyani images. Rubberized rugs line the floor, and a pair of torch holders has been hammered into the floor as well. A kaliyani exploration party is readying itself here for an expedition into the Halls.

To the south is a short passage leading to a secret door that opens onto a small chasm. In that passageway is a lever set into the wall. Pulling the lever will cause a rumbling sound, as a grey plasteel bridge extends across the chasm to connect with area 6-44.

Secret Door (south): The door is easy to detect (1 in 4). It opens by pushing the lever on the wall inwards.

Inhabitants:

1. Astreyiv, 7th-level kaliyani sorcerer (see new monsters), SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 150' on six legs, 60' upright; HD 7; HP 43; #AT 2; Dmg 2-5/3-8/6-24 (dagger/scimitar/blasting rod). Special defenses: immune to poison and mind-affecting spells. Special: infravision. Psionic ability: 240. Attack modes psionic blast, mind thrust, psychic crush. Defense modes: mind blank, thought shield, intellect fortress. Disciplines: cellular adjustment, domination, detect magic; mind barring. Spells: comprehend languages, charm person, hypnotism; darkness 15' radius, invisibility, mirror image; dispel magic. Possessions: bracers of defense (AC 5); kaliyani blasting rod with 6 charges (see new technological items); two serrated daggers; a serrated scimitar; 1.5 lb arcana (see new magic items); 14 small chrysoptase gems (60 gp each).
2. Pivril, 5th-level kaliyani sorcerer (see new monsters): SZ M; AL LE; AC 6; MV 150' on six legs, 60' upright; HD 5; HP 31; #AT 2; Dmg 3-6/2-5 (dagger +1/dagger) or 2-7/2-7 (javelins). Special defenses: immune to poison and mind-affecting spells. Special: infravision. Psionic ability: 210. Attack modes: psionic blast, mind thrust. Defense modes mind blank, mental barrier. Disciplines: clairaudience, clairvoyance, invisibility, telepathic projection. Spells: charm person, dancing lights, hypnotic pattern. Possessions: potion of free action; potion of fire breath; one dagger +1 and a second normal dagger; 6 javelins; a jade amulet of an ouroboros (275 gp); seven silver rings (20 gp each); 4 vials of kaliyani refreshing liquid (see Arden Vul items).

3. 4 kaliyani scouts (see new monsters), as 5th-level thieves: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 150' on six legs, 60' upright; HD 6; HP 43, 41, 38, 36; #AT 2; Dmg 3-8/3-8 (scimitars) or 2-7/2-7 (javelins). Special defenses: immune to poison and mind-affecting spells. Special: infravision; DEX 16. Thief skills: PP 50%, OL 47%, F/RT 40%, MS 40%, HS 31%, HN 20%, CW 90%, RL 25%. Possessions: twin serrated scimitars; six javelins; a set of silver rings, worked glass and minor gemstones, and repurposed coins worth 200 gp. One has a vial of poison; another has a minor heqeti slime (see new monsters) in a breakable flask; another has a potion of invisibility; and one has a solid gold ouroboros bracelet (175 gp).
5. 1 sickly-green, jelly-like heqeti slime (see new monsters), in a flask held by one of the kaliyani scouts: SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 15' pseudopod; HD 2; HP 13; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6; MR 15%. Special attacks: flesh-eating for 4-7 rounds; corrosive to metal, leather, and wood. Special defenses: healed by electricity or lasers; slowed by cold.

6-34: Trapped Chamber

This white-tiled chamber functioned as a sort of airlock for the rudishva and their servitors. Both doors are rudishva iris doors, requiring orange, silver, or yellow rudishva identity plaques to open from the outside. On the south side of the south door is painted, in garish red paint, a skull and the Mithric words "Death! Don't go inside." From the inside, the doors open in the same way, but only after a delay of 1 turn.

Trap: When the chamber is entered from either door, both doors will lock and will be inoperable for 1 turn. During this time two effects occur: 1) the air is sucked out of the chamber, and 2) a disinfectant gas is sprayed into the chamber. The loss of air is a serious problem for any trapped within without magical assistance or possession of a rudishva breather. Most can hold their breath for only 3 minutes.

6-35: Corpse-Ridden Corridor

This long, ovoid corridor connecting 6-37 and 6-30 is strewn with corpses, most badly charred by Relke's (6-30) pyrotechnics. Among the still recognizable bodies are a pair of ancient Set priests, a badly decomposed but relatively recent kaliyani, and three modern adventurers. The door to 6-37 is a rudishva iris door only openable with an orange, silver or yellow rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items).

Treasure:

Among the corpses are 445 gp, 178 sp, 873 cp, 2 ancient octagonal platinum coins (see Arden Vul items), chain mail +1, a shield +2, a bec de corbin +1, a potion of healing, a girdle of giant strength (frost), a piece of charred parchment with a partial list of rudishva teleports and their destinations (see new technological items), a wand of paralyzation with 2 charges, and a serrated kaliyani short sword +2.

6-36: Construct Repair

The door to this chamber is another rudishva iris door, which only opens when an orange, pink, silver, or yellow rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items) is presented. Inside is a scene of devastation. Four large worktables occupy the center of the chamber, on which are a variety of strange pieces of shaped metal and plasteel, with wires, circuit boards, and other electronic ephemera scattered across them (a total of 10 cubic feet of technological material). By the western wall are four racks on which hang the limbless torsos of four more rudishva military-grade security constructs.

Fortunately for visitors, the constructs no longer have legs or arms, and are thus defenseless and threat-less. One of the constructs still has a bit of emergency power, and its eyes will power on when the chamber is entered: PCs may see the amber glow tracking them across the chamber. This construct (Stiller) could be recharged by plugging him into the charger at 6-38; if this is done Stiller will describe the madness of Relke, and how the latter destroyed his fellow guardians and the entire workshop. Stiller is intelligent and knows quite a bit about areas 6-38, 6-39, and 6-27. He might be willing to explain how to get into 6-27 in return for promises to try to fix him. Kerbog Khan is the best hope of restoring Stiller to full functionality; for details see SL12-28.

Treasure:

Stiller, the limbless rudishva military-grade security construct. Scattered among the debris are a pair of rudishva lesser power supplies and an orange rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items).

6-37: Transit Chamber

This ovoid chamber forms an important link in the rudishva teleportal network. The room is sheathed in featureless white tiles, about 25% of which have fallen onto the floor. A number of racks are set into the tiles at eye level; on one of the racks is a ratty cloak of protection +1. A clear and recent path leads through the dust between the northern niche and the door.

The northern niche features a rudishva teleport node.

Teleport Node:

The usual 5'-diameter circle of silvery metal set into the floor, with a 10"x10" square of the same material set into the wall at arm's height. The square bears an indecipherable rune (in Glyphik).

T10: access to 5-106

Treasure:

Cloak of protection +1.

6-38: Iridescent Corridor

This corridor is sheathed in iridescent yellow tiles that glow brightly with diffuse light. Relke waits at the lip of the ledge extending into 6-30. Halfway down the corridor, on the western side, is a charging station set into the wall; Relke is able to plug one of his fingers into this charging station, thereby initiating a rapid-repair and re-armament sequence. Re-charging takes 3 turns, after which he will be restored to full HP and weapons capacity. Stiller, the limbless construct (6-36), could also be recharged here once he was partially repaired (i.e., once one of his arms was restored).

6-39: Lock Cavern

This vast cavern smells of sulfur, burnt cinnamon, and lavender. A thick, soupy haze emanating from several pools of strange slimes (6-39D) obscures sight. The roof is 45' above the floor. Looming through the haze are three imposing platforms, built up out of rock to stand 30' from the floor of the cavern (6-39A, 6-39B, and 6-39C). A crackle of energy suggests a line of force some 3' wide running between the entrance ledge (from 6-38) and the first platform; this is a force bridge, which is entirely safe to traverse once one gets over the incongruity of a mostly-invisible bridge. Although they will not be immediately evident, three niches have been carved into the north wall: two hold still-functioning rudishva point defense arrays (6-39E), while the third is blocked by a set of stone double-doors (6-39F). A subsidiary entrance/exit leads from the floor of the cavern to the airlock at 6-34.

The cavern is exceedingly deadly, as it is home to a hostile and insane Sun-Scarred Knight, to a variety of toxic slimes, and to the still-active rudishva point defense arrays.

The area around the platforms (6-39A, 6-39B, 6-39C) is littered with ancient skeletonized corpses; some bear signs of intense heat and charring. Some useful equipment and treasure may be scavenged from these bodies. If the GM feels the PCs need a bit more of a challenge in this chamber, he/she might decide that some of the corpses have been infected by slimes which has rendered them motile and zombie-like.

Sun-Scarred Knight: Sir Sixth, one of the Sun-Scarred Knights, has been affected by a major mind-altering heqeti slime (see new monsters), and roams the cavern in an injured state, muttering indecipherable phrases, threats, and imprecations. His two varlets, Jaxen and Georgios, lie dead near the central platform, slain by Sir Sixth in his madness. If confronted, Sir Sixth brays out a mixture of warnings and threats, interspersed with sobs (as he battles for control of his mind). After 1-6 rounds he attacks. During that window of time, the very observant might notice glistening burnt-orange patches dotting the knight's black gothic armor. The orange patches are a clue that Sir Sixth has been affected by a major mind-altering slime (see 5-104). Quick thinking via the casting of cure disease or the application of 10 HP worth of fire damage to Sir Sixth will remove the slime, and render the knight sane again. A sane Sir Sixth is grateful to the PCs and offers information and future favors.

Sir Sixth is interested in helping to gain access to the weapons module, for such was his mission; however, he will prevent PCs from taking the more potent weapons from that chamber (see 6-27).

A sane Sir Sixth will never allow the body of his varlets to be looted, although he might allow the use of the bottles of Keogh's restorative ointment.

Inhabitants:

1. Sir Sixth, injured and insane Sun-Scarred Knight (see new monsters), 12th-level male Thorcin fighter: SZ M; AL LN; AC -2; MV 120'; HD 12; HP 53 (max 98); #AT 3/2; Dmg 6-13 (battle axe +2). Abilities: STR 18/53, INT 13, WIS 16, DEX 12, CON 16, CHA 12. Possessions: key to SL10A-16, gothic armor and sun lance (see new technological items); solar ring, circlet of command, and backpack of capacity (see new magic items for all three); 8 ancient octagonal platinum coins (see Arden Vul items); battle axe +2.

2. 3-18 heqeti slime zombies (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 4; HP 30, 29, 28, 28, 27, 27, 26(x3), 25(x3), 24(x3), 23; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8. Special attacks: slime infestation. Special defenses: immune to electricity.

Treasure:

Sir Sixth's gear, plus a rudishva breather (see new technological items).

On the varlets' bodies, a pouch with 10 yellow topaz gems (500 gp each), chain mail +1, broad sword +1, and two bottles of Keogh's restorative ointment.

Amid the corpses: long bow +2; set of six heavy golden figurines of animals, 250 gp each (and 25 lb each); a gold key to the Obsidian Gates (5-6D); three potions of extra healing; a gold, lapis, and jewel-encrusted death mask of an ancient Set priest (450 gp), which is possibly a quest item; various mundane weapons; and two magic user scrolls, one with transmute rock to mud, wall of iron, and project image, and the other with remove curse and wizard eye.

6-39A: Central Platform

Looming in the middle of the chamber, the central platform is comprised of a 5'-thick, 30'-diameter disk of stone resting on a 20'-diameter pillar rising 30' in the air. From the disk rises a second pillar, 8' in diameter and 10' tall, and made of solid ebony. Set into the pillar is a rectangle of silver-colored plasteel that pulses with a faint light. The rectangle is part of the locking mechanism that guards the doors at 6-39F. Only when the correct rudishva identity plaque (silver or yellow - see new technological items) is laid against the rectangle - at the same time that proper plaques are laid against the mechanism on the other two platforms - will the doors to 6-39F be unlocked. To reiterate, the three plasteel rectangles must be activated at the same time in order to open the door. Should the wrong color plaque be introduced, or should the rectangle be touched by flesh, the point defense arrays at 6-39E power up and, in three rounds, begin targeted fire at anything moving on the three platforms.

6-39B: West Platform

This subsidiary stone platform is 3' thick, 20' in diameter, and rests on a 25' column. A red marble pillar 6' in diameter and 8' tall rises from its center. The red pillar bears a glowing rectangle of shiny, orange-colored plasteel. As with 6-39A, when the correctly colored rudishva identity plaque (orange, silver or yellow - see new technological items) is presented to the rectangle at the same time as the other pillars are being activated, the doors at 6-39F unlock with an audible 'click'. Incorrect manipulation of the rectangle leads to attacks from the point defense arrays (6-39E).

A badly charred corpse of a human adventurer lies on the platform, its arm outstretched towards the orange rectangle. Caveat manipulator!

6-39C: East Platform

This platform is identical in size, shape, and construction to that found at 6-39B. The glowing plasteel rectangle is here colored pink, and requires a pink, silver or yellow rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items). Incorrect manipulation of the rectangle leads to attacks from the point defense arrays (6-39E).

6-39D: Slime Pools

These once-pure pools of water were corrupted by heqeti slime warfare in antiquity and now exist as reeking, fuming pools of brightly colored slimes. There are 2 active heqeti slimes (see new monsters) in each pool; if desired, the GM could add more using the tables in the new monster appendix. No delivery systems are present here, so curious adventurers will need to experiment at their own risk.

Inhabitants:

- 1 purple, non-stick heqeti slime (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 5' on carbon-based substances; HD 2; HP 10; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12; MR 15%. Special attacks: kills in 2 rds unless scraped off. Special defenses: healed by electricity or lasers; slowed by cold.
- 2 burnt orange, melted-butter-like heqeti slime (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 5' on carbon-based substances; HD 2; HP 11; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12; MR 15%. Special attacks: kills in 2 rds unless scraped off. Special defenses: healed by electricity or lasers; slowed by cold.
- 3 deep blue, watery heqeti slime (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 5' creeping; HD 2; HP 12; #AT 1; Dmg special; MR 15%. Special attacks: consumes metal in 1 rd. Special defenses: healed by electricity or lasers; slowed by cold.
- 4 emerald green, quicksilver-like heqeti slime (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 10' creeping; HD 2; HP 10; #AT 1; Dmg special; MR 15%. Special attacks: on contact with fresh water, exudes poison gas that kills in 1-4 hrs (and extreme thirst); corrodes wood. Special defenses: healed by electricity or lasers; slowed by cold.
- 5 rainbow, gelatin-like heqeti slime (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 15' pseudopod; HD 2; HP 9; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6; MR 15%. Special attacks: flesh-eating for 4-7 rounds; corrodes metal and leather. Special defenses: healed by electricity or lasers; slowed by cold.
- 6 electric blue, gluey heqeti slime (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 20' pseudopod; HD 2; HP 13; #AT 1; Dmg special; MR 15%. Special attacks: serious mind-altering affects (change of alignment). Special defenses: healed by electricity or lasers; slowed by cold.

6-39E: Point Defense Arrays

Two still-active rudishva point defense arrays (see new technological items) watch over the platforms from their perches in the corners of the cavern. These arrays are installed in finished stone niches dug into the rock some 40' up the side of the cavern. Each array looks like vertical oval framework of plasteel, within which floats a silvered concave disk 6" in diameter. The framework is mounted on a rod stuck into the stone floor, allowing it to swivel as needed. Both arrays lie dormant until incorrect manipulation of the lock pillars on any or all of the three platforms occurs. At that point, a loud thrumming is heard, and the rectangular frame of each array glows with blue light. Three rounds later, focused laser fire from the silvered disk commences. Each array strikes as a 10 HD fighter, attacking three times every two rounds, and inflicting 6-36 HP damage on a target (impedes regeneration).

6-39F: Stone Doors

These 12'-tall stone doors are mounted on a ledge 20' above the cavern floor. They are carved intricately in swirling geometric and representational forms; visible are lotus blossoms, dogwoods, and rudishva overlords commanding varuda, varumani and kaliyani. The doors are enchanted against magic and will only open when the three lock-pillars on the three platforms (6-39A, 6-39B, and 6-39C) are activated simultaneously.

6-39G: Teleportal to the Weapons Module

Behind the stone doors lies a short, white-tiled corridor culminating in a standard rudishva teleport node.

Teleport Node:

T15: access to 6-27 (Weapons module)

6-39H: Tunnel to SL10A-29

Some 30' up the wall is the mouth of a small tunnel that leads downward through some extremely steep (even vertical) sections before reaching area SL10A-29. The tunnel was delved by a unique heqeti slime only recently burped forth from the lock cavern's greater slimes; among other abilities, this slime's mutation allowed it to devour rock within a certain, very narrow range on the moh scale. The slime located the proper rock hardness and pursued it all the way to Sub-Level 10, where it may currently be found.

6-40: Broken Hallway

This oval hallway leaves 6-28 and rises up some too-wide steps before ending in a cave-in. At the cave-in can be heard whispers in a strange language (Rudishva); should any speak that tongue, the whisperings are revealed as pleas for rescue and for vengeance against the 'treacherous snakes.'

6-41: Broad Hallway with a Pair of Statues

The heqeti architecture - pebbled, greasy, stone walls - continues up this broad, tall (15') corridor, past a pair of niches. The niches contain ancient heqeti plinths on which the rudishva placed new marble statues. Both statues are worn with age, with water stains, and with bits of lichen. The statue on the northwestern side of the corridor is of Captain Leil-Jor (5-98), and appears as a spindly female biped with impressive curled horns growing from her forehead. The captain wears a close-fitting uni-garment (jumpsuit), and appears to have some ear protectors on. She stands in a thoughtful pose, looking into the distance. The words "Captain Leil-Jor" are written in Glyphik on her left foot. The statue on the southeastern side is badly corroded by water and worse, and is only distantly recognizable in form as something comparable to its partner across the corridor.

6-42: Intersection with Large Statue of a Varumani

A large 12'-tall granite statue looms over this well-traveled intersection. Like all heqeti construction, the walls are slightly pebbled and greasy to the touch. The statue is of Vanara, the First Thegn (see 5-139). It was carved relatively recently (only 500 years ago) and by lesser hands. As a result, the statue has a slightly cartoonish look to it. Vanara appears as a thickly muscled varumani, wearing a thigh-length tunic and an elaborate web-belt, on which hang various lumpish-looking tools. He holds a staff in one hand, and points down the southeastern corridor with his other. It is common for young varumani to offer bits of food and flowers (from 6-4) at the feet of Vanara in the hopes of securing his aid in mating.

6-43: Another Pair of Statues

Another pair of 8' statues carved of granite stand in niches originally built by the heqeti.

To the northwest is an image of Raalk, chief of the varuda (c.f. 5-108 and 5-111). He appears as a crouching bird-man, with wings cocked in a halo above his head. The ages have been unkind to Raalk's image, as chunks of his face and head (including his beak) are missing, and most of his left leg below the knee is gone. The words, 'Raalk, First of the Varuda' are scribed in Glyphik on his right foot.

To the southeast is a broken statue (formerly of Lisstak); only the stumps of two feet remain, and the inscription on the left foot has been gouged out.

A barricade of rubble (including anonymous bits of broken statuary) some 3' high blocks the corridor just to the northeast of these statues.

6-44: Chasm Overlook with Corpses

Eight corpses of varying antiquity lie on the pavement by the lip of the 75'-tall chasm: two are Archontean soldiers (250 years old), two are varumani, and four are human adventurers. Although the corpses still bear armor, their weapons and valuables have been stripped.

Investigation of the corpses triggers the appearance of the illusory cave worm (see 6-44A). Such investigation reveals a surprising lack of visible wounds on the corpses.

There is a 10% chance that a grey plasteel bridge extends from area 6-44 towards the chasm wall by the secret door to 6-33.

Treasure:

2 suits of leather armor, chain mail +1, and a suit of banded mail.

6-44A: Chasm with Illusory Cave Worm

This lesser chasm is 75' tall, with the corridors of Level 6 intersecting at about the 50' mark. It is dark and features the sound of slowly dripping water. At the foot of the chasm are several lootable corpses.

There is a 10% chance that a grey plasteel bridge extends over the chasm, connecting area 6-44 with the chasm wall by the secret door to 6-33. Otherwise, the bridge is retracted into a hidden receptacle on the north wall of the chasm.

Activity on the south side of the chasm (6-44) triggers a powerful permanent, programmed illusion of an enormous, corpse-white cave worm which rises from the chasm to assault any foolish enough to stand their ground. Any who don't recognize the worm as an illusion must fight the monster. The illusion was placed here by the Priscians to guard one of their access points (6-45 to 6-48). The kaliyani (6-32 to 6-33) are aware of the illusion and are content to employ it as a similar deterrent to those snooping around their areas.

Secret Door (north): The door is difficult to detect (1 in 8). It can only be opened by inserting a curved blade into a thin slot on the chasm wall.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 enormous illusory cave worm: SZ L; AL N; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 61; #AT 1; Dmg 3-18. Special attacks: fear aura. Special: illusory.

Treasure:

On the chasm floor: leather armor +2; light crossbow +1; 10 bolts +2; a sack with a disarticulated human skeleton, coated in silver (275 gp); 3 ancient octagonal platinum coins (see Arden Vul items); 457 sp; 238 gp; scroll of protection from demons; scroll of protection from evil.

6-44B: Tunnel to Level 8 (8-71)

At the bottom of the mini-chasm (6-44A), 5' above the floor, a 5'-diameter tunnel leads southeast for about 30' before dropping downward 400' in a series of steep cliffs until it reaches Level 8 (8-71). The tunnel is relatively untraveled, but difficult to traverse, and requires ropes or else three successful rolls of 4d6 under DEX to avoid taking a total of 3-18 damage from falls.

6-45: Portable Bridge and Eye

In the corridor across the chasm from 6-44 rests a 30'-long, 5'-wide portable ladder that the Priscians use to bridge the chasm. It requires at least two people to successfully manhandle into position. At the tee-intersection an enormous eye has been inlaid into the floor using brightly colored chips of glass.

6-46: Trapped Corridor

Three 30'-deep spiked pit traps line the floor of this corridor. The pits are linked mechanically to the false door at the end of the corridor. None of the three opens until the door is opened, at which point all three pits open, delivering 3-18 HP damage to any who fail to save.

6-47: Caryatid Hallway

The corridor here is 20' tall. Along either side of the corridor runs a ledge at the 10' level, and on the ledges stand six caryatid columns. Any non-Priscians who pass this way (that is, any who fail to display a Sortian eye – see new magic items) activate the caryatids.

Inhabitants:

1. 6 caryatid columns: SZ M; AL N; AC 5, MV 60'; HD 5; HP 22(x6); # AT 1; Dmg 2-8. Special defenses: all saves at +4; half damage from normal weapons; full damage without magical pluses from magic weapons; weapons that strike a column have 25% chance to break (-5% per magical plus).

6-48: Teleporting Sortian Faces

On the floor just inside the door from 6-47 is painted a white feather about 1' long; the feather is a trigger for a version of the spell, Frigg's flatulence (see new spells), that the Priscians in 6-49 have cast here. Any being larger than 4' in height who comes within 2' of the feather causes a large raspberry sound to echo through the chamber, alerting the Priscians in 6-49.

The chamber is of normal height. A 12'-diameter wide knot inlaid in colored glass occupies the center of the floor. The walls contain seven high-relief carvings of Sortian faces (see new magic items) that are activated by placing Sortian eyes in the empty eye sockets. Like all such faces, the majority of eye combinations are standard and are detailed in the new magic items appendix; only a few product individualized effects. The faces are numbered in a clockwise manner from southwest to southeast.

This hall is a destination for the Sortian faces found at 3-188, 4-167, 8-6, 9-59, and SL3-17. Those teleported here find themselves standing just inside the doorway, facing the Sortian faces.

Because the chamber serves as the central destination for Sortian teleportation from elsewhere, it is not impossible (20% chance) that a party of Priscian explorers appears in the chamber while visitors are still investigating the faces.

Face 1

Gold-Gold: Teleportation. All within 5' are teleported to area 8-6

Gold-Sapphire: A permanent magic mouth speaks in Mithric from the face: Recall the words of Livia, our beloved spokesperson: 'When a Sortian ventures forth, let her do so with a clear mind and an open heart. Anger and conflict are to be avoided. Seek instead to persuade and understand. As you act so shall you be perceived.'

Face 2

Gold-Gold: Teleportation. All within 5' are teleported to area SL6-19 (note that there is no corresponding Sortian face in that destination; travel from 6-48 is one-way).

Gold-Sapphire: A permanent magic mouth speaks in Mithric from the face: Warning! Proceed at your own risk, as numerous imperial bureaucrats and military officers have been visiting the Canyon for the purpose of selecting tomb sites. Return travel is currently not possible.

Face 3

Gold-Gold: Teleportation. All within 5' are teleported to area 3-188

Gold-Sapphire: A permanent magic mouth speaks in Mithric from the face: Have your remembered to conceal your knot? Priscus advises you to not to call attention to yourself and, instead, to blend in with the custodians of the mushroom groves.

Face 4

Gold-Gold: Teleportation. All within 5' are teleported to area SL3-17

Gold-Sapphire: A permanent magic mouth speaks in Mithric from the face: Rage is all that remains. Seek the red mushrooms. They will fuel our revenge for the murder of our comrade, Priscus.

Face 5

Gold-Gold: Teleportation. All within 5' are teleported to area 9-59

Gold-Sapphire: A permanent magic mouth speaks in Mithric from the face: Please persuade Jace to abandon his post. The fragile truce depends on all submitting to the emperor's mercy. No more equipment is to be forged, and his notes are to remain by the forge.

Face 6

Gold-Gold: Teleportation. All within 5' are teleported to area 4-167

Gold-Sapphire: A permanent magic mouth speaks in Mithric from the face: Recall the words of Livia, our beloved spokesperson: 'When a Sortian ventures forth, let her do so with a clear mind and an open heart. Anger and conflict are to be avoided. Seek instead to persuade and understand. As you act so shall you be perceived.' [Same as First Face]

Face 7

Gold-Gold: Teleportation. All within 5' are teleported to a walled-up cellar in a noble clan's house in Archontos, the imperial city (see World of Archontos appendix). The GM should develop or ignore this destination as desired.

Gold-Sapphire: A permanent magic mouth speaks in Mithric from the face: Macrinus was right. The peace is phony and the emperor cares nothing for us. It is time to infiltrate the court and bring about real change. Sic semper tyrannis!

Secret Door (south): The secret door is hard (1 in 8) to locate and is locked; only magical light of any sort (dancing lights, light, etc.) will reveal the keyhole. Once revealed, the lock can be opened with its key (held by Jillia One-Ear in 6-49) or can be picked.

GM Notes: Priscus Pulcher, Livia, and Macrinus were important leaders of the Sortians: see the World of Archontos appendix. Jace Far-Seer was the enchanter-cum-smith who developed the distinctive Sortian magic items; see 9-60 for details. The 'knot' (Face 3) was a Sortian symbol. The 'red mushrooms' are the red veil (see new flora), which grow on Sub-Level 3 (e.g., SL3-20). Needless to say, the Sortian who uttered the threat against the emperor (Face 7) was unsuccessful.

Inhabitants:

A Priscian exploring party (20% chance), consisting of a war mage and 2 conversi (see new monsters):

1. Justinian, a Priscian war mage (see new monsters) and member of Quintus, as a 6th-level magic user: SZM; ALLN; AC 3; MV 120'; HD 6; HP 21; #AT 1; Dmg 3-9 (Priscian gladius +2). Abilities: STR 12, INT 17, WIS 13, DEX 16, CON 11, CHA 14. Possessions: Priscian chain mail (see new magic items); a Priscian gladius +2 (see new magic items); 345 sp; a key to 9-58; a stone of alarm; a vial of Keogh's restorative ointment; a pearl of power (level 3); and his spell book. Spells memorized: charm person, detect magic, magic missile, shield; levitate, pummeling fists of Arak-Zhorr (see new spells); dispel magic, fireball. Spell book: charm person, comprehend languages, detect magic, floating disk, friends, hold portal, identify, magic missile, read magic, shield, spider climb, unseen servant; continual light, detect invisibility, knock, levitate, locate object, pummeling fists of Arak-Zhorr (see new spells), scare, wizard lock; dispel magic, fireball, gust of wind, slow, suggestion, tiny hut, tongues.
2. 2 Priscian conversi (see new monsters), as 3rd-level fighters: SZ M; AL LN; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 3; HP 27, 25; #AT 1; Dmg 2-9 (long sword), or 1-4 (light crossbow). Possessions: Priscian chain mail (see new magic items), long swords, light crossbows. The conversi typically have STR 16.

6-49: Priscian Guardpost

The room is brightly lit with continual light, and features new, pale blue paint on all the walls. Atop the blue paint are painted various Sortian and Priscian symbols: knots of various sizes, the numeral '8', fairly crude faces meant to imitate the Sortian faces (e.g. in 6-48).

Five Priscians sit around a wooden table, playing cards. They are tasked with guarding the route between Level 3 and Level 6. Although bored, they are relatively vigilant. If they hear a raspberry sound from either 6-48 or 6-49A, they instantly take precautions and ready themselves. If possible (especially with intruders in 6-48), Jillia One-Ear will cast clairaudience and/or ESP while the conversi ready themselves. If intruders seem formidable, one of the conversi will depart in the opposite direction of the intrusion to try to alert the other Priscians.

Secret Door (north): The door is normal to find. It has a keyhole that is only revealed by true seeing or comparable magic (although dispel magic will reveal it for 3 turns). Once revealed, an observer will be able to detect the keyhole thereafter; at that point, the lock is easy to pick (+10% to chances). Jillia One-Ear holds the key.

Secret Door (west): The door is easy to locate (1 in 4). Its keyhole is revealed by any magical light within 5' of the door. It can be opened by the key (held by Jillia One-Ear) or by picking.

Inhabitants:

1. Jillia One-Ear, Priscian war mage (see new monsters) and member of Quintus, as an 8th-level female Archontean magic user: SZ M; AL LN; AC 2; MV 120'; HD 8; HP 25; #AT 1; Dmg 3-9 (Priscian gladius +2). Abilities: STR 9, INT 17, WIS 14, DEX 16, CON 9, CHA 11. Possessions: a key to 9-58; Priscian chain mail +1 (see new magic items); Priscian gladius +2 (see new magic items); Priscian ring (see new magic items), enchanted with detect invisibility and detect magic; wand of fire (28 charges); potions of ESP and polymorph; scroll of sending; keys to the secret doors leading to 6-48 and 6-49A; and her spell book. Spells memorized: charm person, detect magic, enlarge, magic missile; continual light, ESP, locate object; clairaudience, dispel magic, hold person; charm monster, polymorph other. Spell book: burning hands, charm person, comprehend languages, detect magic, enlarge, feather fall, hold portal, identify, light, magic missile, push, read magic, shield, sleep; the Bracteros effect (see new spells), continual light, darkness 15' radius, ESP, knock, locate object, mirror image, ray of enfeeblement, stinking cloud, web; blink, clairaudience, dispel magic, fireball, fly, hold person, lightning bolt, protection from evil 10' radius; charm monster, fear, monster summoning II, polymorph other.
2. Oskarina, Priscian war mage (see new monsters) and member of Secundus, as a 4th-level female Archontean illusionist: SZ M; AL LN; AC 3; MV 120'; HD 4; HP 13; #AT 1; Dmg 3-9 (Priscian gladius +2). Abilities: STR 12, INT 17, WIS 15, DEX 16, CON 9, CHA 13. Possessions: Priscian chain mail (see new magic items); Priscian gladius +2 (see new magic items); 321 sp; a potion of clairaudience; and her spell book. Spells memorized: darkness, phantasmal force, wall of fog; brain full of small spiders (see new spells), improved phantasmal force. Spell book: color spray, darkness, detect invisibility, gaze reflection, light, phantasmal force, wall of fog; blur, brain full of small spiders (see new spells), fog cloud, hypnotic pattern, improved phantasmal force.
3. Krator the Wit, Priscian conversus (see new monsters) and bonded defender to Jillia One-Ear, as a 7th-level male Archontean thief: SZ M; AL LE; AC 3; MV 120'; HD 7; HP 37; #AT 1; Dmg 3-8 (short sword +2) or 2-5 (sling). Abilities: STR 11, INT 14, WIS 10, DEX 17, CON 15, CHA 17. Thief skills: PP 65%, OL 62%, F/RT 50%, MS 60%, HS 48%, HN 25%, CW 94%, RL 35%. Possessions: leather armor +2, short sword +2, sling; a pouch with 39 sp, 59 gp and a very deep blue spinel (500 gp); a potion of invisibility.
4. Baela Ice-Hand, Priscian conversus (see new monsters), as a 6th-level female Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL LN; AC 3; MV 120'; HD 6; HP 62; #AT 1; Dmg 3-12 (two-handed sword +1), 1-6 (short bow). Abilities: STR 17, INT 9, WIS 15, DEX 9, CON 17, CHA 10. Possessions: chain mail +2; two-handed sword +1; short bow; potion of invulnerability; 113 sp and 71 gp.
5. Tergon the Rutter, Priscian conversus (see new monsters), as a 5th-level male Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL NE; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 5; HP 53; #AT 1; Dmg 5-12 (battle axe +1), 1-4 (light crossbow). Abilities: STR 18/63, INT 8, WIS 10, DEX 11, CON 16, CHA 9. Possessions: splint mail +1 and shield; battle axe +1; light crossbow; 83 sp and 37 gp.

6-49A: Stairs Up to 3-50B

A 5'-wide staircase climbs up some 850' to area 3-50B. The stairs show signs that booted feet have used them recently.

At the foot of the staircase, just outside the secret door leading to 6-49, is painted a white feather: this is a trigger for the spell, Frigg's flatulence (see new spells), cast by the Priscians in 6-49. Anyone over 4' in height who approaches within 3' of the feather causes a loud 'raspberry' sound to sound forth, alerting Jillia One-Ear and her conversi.

Secret Door (south): The door is easy to find (1 in 4). The keyhole is obvious. The door can be opened with its key (held by Jillia One-Ear in 6-49) or it can be picked.

6-50: Varumani Quarters

Junior Overseer Reith and his two assistants make their home in this side chamber. The room boasts the same heqeti-style construction as area 6-1: blue-granite floor with pebbled, oily walls.

The varumani have laid down an area carpet and have brought in a table and three large chairs, three bedrolls, and some supplies: three 150' coils of thick rope (replacements for the Lift), a keg of Hak's mushroom ale (7-94), three dead goats, and a large stock of dried fruit and mushrooms. They also confiscated an unusual item taken from the Nether Reaches (Level 8) by some adventurers and have yet to decide what to do with it. The object is a stuffed and preserved whippet dog, with a leather collar bearing the name 'Rex' in Archontean. If asked where the dog came from, the varumani think it came from 'near the lowest Troll Lift (8-1)'. Note: this is the preserved body of the faithful companion of Gennadius (see Beastmen area, 3-138 to 3-163, and especially 3-158; see also 8-31). The beastmen would pay dearly for the remains of Rex and for information about Gennadius's resting place.

The three varumani are ignorant of the peepholes set into the north wall.

Inhabitants:

1. Reith, a lesser varumani (see new monsters): see stats at 6-1.
2. bestial varumani (see new monsters): see stats at 6-1.

Treasure:

Each of the varumani has a pouch with 4-24 gp and 5-30 sp
Preserved body of Rex the whippet (see 3-158 and 8-31)
Various adventuring supplies (see above)

6-51: Heqeti Observation Chamber

The room dates to the heqeti period, and still includes a basin of oily green liquid attached to the east wall. This liquid is curative for heqeti (cures 2-8 HP once per day through immersion, or 2-12 HP per full draught drunk), but is poisonous to all other species (save at +2 if touched, save at -4 if drunk). The chamber is cloaked in a permanent silence spell.

Two heqeti chosen (see new monsters) peer through the peepholes at the varumani and their visitors in 6-1 and 6-50.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 heqeti chosen (see new monsters), as 6th-level fighters: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60', 150' swimming; HD 6; HP 40, 37; #AT 2; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 1-6 (bite). Special attacks: hop; acid tongue

(1-6 acid damage); +1 damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold and water/ice.

6-52: Trash Chamber

A 3'-deep layer of trash – bones, skins, and bits of wood, stone, and leather – covers the floor of this room. The overseers of the Troll Lift have used it as a refuse pile for centuries.

There is a 50% one-time chance that a thorough search of this room produces a randomly-generated miscellaneous magic item. Such a search requires 2-5 hours.

6-53: Storage Chamber

The troll thegn keeps spare wooden beams for the troll lift here. An assortment of tough, seasoned lumber is stacked against the north wall. A set of saws, drills, and planes lies near the pile.

6-54: Heqeti Living Quarters

This chamber serves as living quarters for those heqeti sent to observe the varumani on Level 6. It features the pebbled, oily walls of all the heqeti areas.

A low, stone-rimmed pool occupies the center of the chamber; it is murky and contains small fish, amphibians, lichen, and water plants. Around the pool are four oval lounging devices; they appear as 5'-long, empty peapods sloped such that the head is about 3' higher than the foot of the lounger. Heqeti can rest in one of these while letting their feet dangle in the water of the pool. A woven basket to one corner holds 25 lb of dried fish and eels.

Secret Door (north, into staircase): This door is difficult to detect (1 in 8); indeed, the heqeti in 6-51 and 6-106 have not yet discovered it. It opens by succeeding at an open doors roll and then pushing a slab into a recess to the left. From the north side, however, the secret door is easy to detect (1 in 4), and opens in the same fashion.

Secret Door (north, into 6-55): This door is easy to detect (1 in 4) from the south side. It is stuck, and can only be opened by brute force.

6-55: Pair of Fine Statues and Magic Mouths

The heqeti hallway (oily, pebbled) continues towards the Arena and here passes another pair of statues. Instead of worked stone, these statues are formed of finely-cast bronze, and are extremely life-like; they are also dust-free and painted for extra realism.

Northeast Statue: This statue depicts the Lord of the Arena (6-85)

Southwest Statue: This one depicts a terrible, 4-armed monster with gaping, toothed maw and extended claws.

Trap: Each statue is enchanted with a permanent magic mouth spell. The monstrous statue speaks first, when any come within 20': it utters a gruff roar, as if from a dragon or other large predator. The statue of the Lord of the Arena speaks next, booming forth a greeting in three tongues (Archontean, Rudishva, and Varumani): "Welcome to the Arena! Spectacle awaits! No violence is permitted outside the Arena sands."

Secret Door (southwest): The secret door is difficult to detect (1 in 8), partly because it is hidden behind the statue. It only opens through the application of brute force.

6-56: Darkness and Damaged Corridor

The south corridor (still pebbly and oily) passes down a flight of stairs and by a huge iron portcullis before ending in rubble. A permanent darkness spell has been cast on the stairs to discourage traffic. There is a 1 in 4 chance for a random encounter at the southern tip of this corridor.

6-57: Portcullis and Stairs to Level 5

This large room, set behind a locked iron portcullis, features polished (i.e., not pebbly and oily) granite spiral stairs, which lead up about 600' to the domain of the Vivisectionist (5-75). Psalor-Ki uses these stairs on the rare occasions he wishes to meet with his fellow rudishva, the Lord of the Arena. The door to 6-95 is locked and difficult to pick (-10%).

Areas 6-58 to 6-91: The Arena

The Arena is one of the iconic locations of the Halls of Arden Vul, and is well known to the intelligent factions of Levels 2 through 7. Outside the Halls its existence is merely rumored, and what is known is wildly exaggerated. The region is an ancient heqeti arena occupied and re-purposed first by the rudishva and later by the Archontians. The Lord of the Arena (6-85) is, in fact, an ancient rudishva kept alive for millennia by the wonders of ancient technology; he is so old that few – perhaps not even the Lord himself – recalls his name. He is feared for his longevity and apparent power, even by the handful of other rudishva survivors. Still, the absolute neutrality required of all visitors by the Lord also accords him grudging respect, and the factions appreciate the security which the Lord's domain provides.

Visiting the Arena: Once one has passed 6-55 or 6-63 one is expected to behave in a non-violent manner. Any physical assaults are treated as serious infractions, and will result in the offender (and friends) being banned, at the least, and hunted down, at the worst. Since the regulars at the Halls are fully familiar with the rules, encounters within the area should not normally involve violence. That said, the regulars enjoy taunting, boasting, and bullying, and will engage in such tactics against newcomers and apparent weaklings in an effort to trick the others to break the rules.

What's Going on at the Arena?

It is recommended that the GM decide whether a spectacle is imminent before PCs arrive at the Arena, for, as the subsequent entries indicate, that fact determines the activities of many denizens of the area. If the GM doesn't wish merely to decide by fiat, it is recommended that a spectacle be imminent the first time the Arena is approached, and 50% of the time on subsequent visits.

When a spectacle is due, the GM should determine (ahead of time) the following facts:

1. What type of spectacle is to take place (see below)
2. What rules will govern the spectacle (see below)
3. What the environmental conditions will be (see 6-68)
4. Who or what will participate in the spectacle (see 6-89 and/ or 6-91 for monsters; see 6-71 for gladiators. For outside groups use one of the samples listed below).

The nature of an imminent spectacle can be determined by rolling on the following table:

D12	Nature of Spectacle
1-2	Gladiatorial Bout: 12 house gladiators versus each other
3	Wizard Duel: outside team of 1-3 wizards versus another outside team of 1-3 wizards
4	Gladiatorial Bout: 4-6 house gladiators versus an outside team (1: goblins, 2: beastmen, 3: Set Guardsmen, 4: adventurers)
5	Gladiatorial Bout: two outside teams versus each other (1: goblins, 2: beastmen, 3: Set guardsmen, 4: varumani, 5: adventurers, 6: intelligent monsters)
6	Punitive Bout: criminals versus suitably overwhelming monsters [for criminals, roll 1d8: 1-2: 1-8 goblins, 3-4: 1-4 lizardmen, 5: 1-6 outsider(s), 6: 1-3 Set guardsmen, 7: 1-2 Arena staff, 8: 1 varumani]
7	Monster Bout: 3-4 house gladiators versus 1-6 relatively easy monsters (Levels 2-5)
8	Monster Bout: outside team versus 1-6 medium strength monsters (Levels 3-6)
9	Monster Bout: outside team versus 1-3 tough monsters (Levels 4-7)
10	Grudge Match: a series of single combats between sworn enemies (3-6 bouts)
11	Special! An outside team versus a very tough or unusual monster (Levels 5-8)
12	Grand Melee: 6 medium monsters, 2 tough monsters, 6 house gladiators, 1-3 outside teams

Details concerning the house gladiators and possible monster opponents are detailed in the appropriate entries below (e.g., 6-89, 6-91, 6-71). 'Outside teams' refers to any group that has journeyed to the Arena to fight for glory or money. Some of these groups are quasi-regular, others are one-timers. Samples of several 'outside teams' include:

"Big Trouble"

Type: 8 goblins from the Goblin Warrens (SL4-40)

Leader: Big Sammy

Goals: They have a big war chest, and fight to make money off of bets. Sammy is not averse to throwing non-lethal matches if the money is right.

Tactics: Swarm one foe first, attempting to net him/her and stake the net to the sand. Rinse and repeat.

Stats:

1. 7 goblins: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 6, 6, 5(x3), 4; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Possessions: spears; nets; and short swords.
2. Big Sammy, a goblin sub-chief (as a hobgoblin): SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 1+1; HP 8; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8 (long sword). Possessions: long sword.

"By the Sign of the Goat"

Type: 7 beastmen from Goat Company (from 3-142)

Leader: Sgt. Gren

Goals: Avoid lethal matches, secure training and glory

Tactics: Classic Zulu impi (head and horns), attempting to isolate one or two foes before moving to another.

Stats: These veteran beastmen are +2 to hit in the Arena due to their experience fighting here.

1. 6 beastman troopers (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 8, 7, 7, 6, 6, 5; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spears; short swords; short bows.
2. Sergeant Gren, beastman sergeant (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 2+2; HP 15; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 or 2-5. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spear; war hammer.

"Fist of Destiny"

Type: 5 human Set guardsmen and a Set acolyte (see 4-2 for the center of the Set Cult)

Leader: Herman the acolyte

Goals: Humiliation of foes in the name of Lord Set

Tactics: Herman opens with hold person, while the boys (and girls) wade in and slug it out

Stats:

1. 4 Set guardsmen (see new monsters), as 2nd-level Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 15, 12; #AT 1, Dmg 2-7 (mace), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: red scale mail and wooden shield; footman's maces; spears; light crossbows with 20 bolts.
2. Herman the Set acolyte (see new monsters), as a 3rd-level Archontean cleric of Set: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 60'; HD 3; HP 19; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (mace) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Possessions: Set armor (see Arden Vul items); footman's mace; light crossbow; acolyte's was stick (see new magic items); and a silver holy symbol of Set (10 gp). Spells prayed for: command, cure light wounds, curse (reverse of bless), protection from good; hold person, silence 15' radius.

"Varly and Jiks"

Type: 2 lesser varumani (see new monsters), up from Level 7 (7-17)

Leader: None, although Varly is considerably smarter than Jiks

Goals: Fun! These good old boys love to pummel foes until they die or beg for mercy.

Tactics: It's stompin' time! They've never been beaten and are getting a bit cocky.

Stats:

1. Varly, a lesser varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 3; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 57; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (war hammer, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: large war hammer; shield.
2. Jiks, a lesser varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 58; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (cleaver, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: huge meat cleaver.

"Dalton's Darlings"

Type: 6 adventurers

Leader: Dalton Erdell

Stats: See NPC appendix

Goals: Money and exposure; they are interested in locating the Forge of Zhorak (8-100) in the Nether Reaches and are spending time in the Arena building up their experience and looking for sources of information

Tactics: Classic adventurers' tactics: mage to the back, fighters at the front with thief and cleric for support.

"Night of the Jackals"

Type: 4 jackalweres, in human form, plus 2 hellhounds

Leader: Yost

Goals: Chaos, slaughter, and fresh meat. They will fight to the death only

Tactics: Swarming. 33% chance that blood frenzy causes the pack to revert to jackal form.

Stats:

1. Yost and 3 other jackalweres: SZ S (M); AL CE; AC 4; MV 120'; HD 4; HP 28, 27, 26, 24; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8 or by weapon. Special attacks: gaze causes sleep. Special defenses: iron, or +1 or better weapons to hit. Possessions (in human form): long sword (x1); spear (x1); battle axe (x1); halberd (x1).
2. 2 hell hounds: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 120'; HD 5; HP 35, 31; #AT 1; Dmg 1-10. Special attacks: breathe fire; surprise on 1-4 in 6. Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6. Special: 50% to spot hidden or invisible.

"Arcane Assault"

Type: 2 magic users, Yerevan of the Yurt and Mittoril the Ugly

Leader: Yerevan

Goals: Magical bouts to submission, mostly so they can pick over the magic items of the defeated

Tactics: Open with wands/staves, finish with spells.

Stats:

1. Yerevan of the Yurt, 7th-level male Khumus magic user: SZ M; AL NE; AC 3; MV 120'; HD 7; HP 21; #AT 1; Dmg 3-8 (staff of power). Abilities: STR 10, INT 17, WIS 14, DEX 16, CON 9, CHA 14. Possessions: bracers of defense (AC 7); staff of power (13 charges); robe of eyes; potion of extra healing; dagger. Spells memorized: enlarge, jump, magic missile (x2); continual light, mirror image, stinking cloud; dispel magic, fireball; confusion. Spell book: burning hands, charm person, enlarge, floating disk, identify, jump, magic missile, read magic, shield, sleep; continual light, detect evil, ESP, invisibility, mirror image, stinking cloud, strength; blink, dispel magic, fireball, fly, hold person, monster summoning I, tongues; confusion, minor globe of invulnerability, polymorph other.
2. Mittoril the Ugly, 7th-level male Archontean magic user: SZ M; AL NE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 7; HP 22; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger). STR 15; INT 16; WIS 11; DEX 17; CON 11; CHA 7. Possessions: rod of absorption (30 spell levels); wand of frost (25 charges); ring of protection +2; potion of invisibility; dagger. Spells memorized: charm person, light, magic missile, shield; darkness 15' radius, levitate, ray of enfeeblement; gust of wind, lightning bolt; ice storm. Spell book: charm person, comprehend languages, detect magic, feather fall, hold portal, light, magic missile, push, read magic, shield, shocking grasp; darkness 15' radius, detect invisibility, knock, levitate, ray of enfeeblement, stinking cloud, web; dispel magic, fireball, gust of wind, haste, lightning bolt, protection from normal missiles, slow; dimension door, fear, ice storm, polymorph self.

Rules Governing Spectacles

Some bouts are governed by rules, either set randomly by the Lord or determined in advance by the opponents. In the case of monster bouts, 'anything goes' and 'to the death' are the usual procedures. Things are more complex when it comes to intelligent opponents. The rules governing regularly scheduled bouts (i.e., those scheduled by the Lord of the Arena - 6-85) are randomly determined using the following table; should an adventuring group wish to participate in one of these regular bouts, they would need to accept the randomization of rules for a bout and obey them faithfully. On occasion, however, the Lord will allow additional spectacles to be scheduled at the request of one or both parties; he does so either a) if the requesting party pays well (500gp/entrant) to fight house gladiators or monsters, or b) if two inimical parties petition him to fight each other. In such cases, the parties are allowed to agree to their own rules prior to the bout, but only in the presence of the Lord, who will then faithfully enforce them. In the case of house gladiators vs. house gladiators, the rules are almost always 'to submission'.

D12	Rules Governing Bout
1-3	Anything goes, to the death! (allows any combination of weapons, spells, poisons, dirty-tricks, etc., and requires the utter elimination of one side)
4-6	Anything goes, to submission (means until one side submits, that is, when all surviving members lie prone on the sand: fatalities may have been incurred prior to this, of course)
7-8	No spell-use, to the death
9-10	No spell-use, to submission
11	Magic only (spells, spell-like effects only: no melee or missile attacks), to the death
12	Magic only, to submission

Ending a Spectacle

How a spectacle ends depends on several factors: 1) the rules which govern it; 2) the whim of the Arena Lord; and 3) the response of the crowd. For bouts to the death, the end is obvious: one side is utterly eliminated. For bouts to submission, however, things are more complex. The survivors of a defeated group must lie prostrate on the sand to signify their submission. At that point their fate lies with the Lord and the crowd. The GM rolls a d20, and if the modified result is greater than 12, the Arena Lord grants mercy. If the modified result is less than 12, though, the Arena Lord turns his thumbs down, and the victors are expected to slaughter their now-defenseless opponents.

Modifier	Situation
+3	Positive relations with the Lord
-1	Unknown to the Lord
-5	Has previously angered the Lord
+5	Bout lasted more than 10 rounds
+2	Bout lasted 7-9 rounds
+1	Bout lasted 5-6 rounds
-1	Bout lasted 3-4 rounds
-2	Bout lasted 1-2 rounds

-3	Defeated seem cowardly
+2	Defeated acquitted selves well
+1	Per slain member of defeated team
-1	Per slain member of victorious team
-2 to +2	Oral plea by member of victorious team
-7	Defeated broke rules of bout
+10	Victorious broke rules of bout

6-58: Hallway to the Arena

This 20'-tall, pebbled, oily hallway provides one of the main routes to the Arena. It is lit by torches set in sconces located every 30' of the hallway. If a spectacle is imminent (see preceding paragraphs), the chance of an encounter is 80%, if one is not imminent, the chance is 33%.

D12	Encounter if Spectacle is Imminent
1	11-20 goblins: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7(x4), 6, 6, 5(x6), 4(x4), 3 (x4); #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.
2-3	4-8 lesser varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 61, 59, 58, 57, 55, 53, 50, 47; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (club, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8 th -level fighters or 8 th -level magic users, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: club.
4	Group of mixed gamblers, ducking out of Gamblers' Corner for extra action: select 2-4 groups from 6-61.
5	A beastman patrol: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>6 beastman troopers (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 8, 7, 7, 6, 6, 5; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spears; short swords; short bows.</li> <li>1 beastman sergeant (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 2+2; HP 15; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 or 2-5. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spear; war hammer.</li> </ol>
6	Durdeon Vislok and six members of the Sodality of the Fist: for stats, see AV-12.
7	An important person from the following list: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>King Weskenim (SL4-22) with 10-20 goblin courtiers and 1 eunuch ogre guard</li> <li>Set High Priestess Stephania (4-51) with 6 elite Set guardsmen (see new monsters)</li> <li>Gerrilad the Grey (2-69) with Umsko (2-60) and 4 large albino baboons (see new monsters)</li> <li>Tikun Thane (SL3-2) with 3 disciplined and 4 large albino baboons (see new monsters for both)</li> <li>Psolor-Ki (5-74) with 6 ichor spawn (see new monsters)</li> <li>Varboka the troll thegn (7-31) with his housecarls (7-29)</li> <li>A Sun-Scarred Knight (see new monsters) with varlet</li> <li>GM's Choice</li> </ol>
8	Roll Twice

9	6-10 lizardmen: SZ M; AL N; AC 4; MV 60'; 120' swimming; HD 2+1; HP 16, 15, 14, 13, 12, 12, 11, 11, 10; #AT 1 or 3; Dmg 1-6 (club) and 1-6 (javelin), or 1-2/1-2/1-8. Possessions: clubs; javelins; shields.
10	Set patrol: 1. 4 Set guardsmen (see new monsters), as 2 nd -level Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 15, 12; #AT 1, Dmg 2-7 (mace), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: red scale mail and wooden shield; footman's maces; spears; light crossbows with 20 bolts. 2. 1 Set acolyte (see new monsters), as a 3 rd -level Archontean cleric of Set: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 60'; HD 3; HP 19; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (mace) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Possessions: Set armor (see Arden Vul items); footman's mace; light crossbow; acolyte's was stick (see new magic items); and a silver holy symbol of Set. Spells prayed for: command , cure light wounds , curse (reverse of bless ), protection from good ; hold person , silence 15' radius
11	Party of NPC adventurers (select from NPC appendix)
12	3-12 arena wranglers with a new creature: 1. 3-12 arena wranglers: SZ M; AL N; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 7, 6, 6, 5(x4), 4(x4); #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (spear). Possessions: leather armor; spear. 2. Monster: select type from 6-91.

D12	Encounter if Spectacle is not Imminent
1	3 goblins, sweeping up: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 4, 3, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.
2	2 lesser varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 50, 47; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (club, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8 th -level fighters or 8 th -level magic users, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: club.
3	2 beastman deserters (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 7, 5; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spears; short swords; short bows.
4-5	3-12 arena wranglers with a new creature: 1. 3-12 arena wranglers: SZ M; AL N; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 7, 6, 6, 5(x4), 4(x4); #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (spear). Possessions: leather armor; spear. 2. Monster: select type from 6-91.
6	8 arena wranglers chasing an escaped monster: 1. 8 arena wranglers: SZ M; AL N; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 7, 6, 6, 5, 5, 4, 4; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (spear). Possessions: leather armor; spear. 2. Monster: select type from 6-91

7	Dworm, the faithful bodyguard of Galadnor Half-Elven (4-2, 4-31), quietly seeking a buyer for the incriminating information about Marius Junienos that Galadnor possesses (see 4-31): Dworm, 3 rd -level male Wisikin fighter: SZ M; AL LN; MV 90'; AC 5; HD 3; HP 26; #AT 2-9 ( long sword +1 ). Abilities: STR 15, INT 8, WIS 10, DEX 10, CON 15, CHA 10. Possessions: chain mail; long sword +1 ; purse with 71 sp, 19 gp. Dworm can only be encountered once. If the same result is rolled on another occasion, it will be another person seeking to sell information (at the GM's choice).
8	3 gladiators out for a stroll. Choose from the list at 6-71. The gladiators have some hot tip about the next spectacle to impart .. for the right price.
9	6 drunk gladiators looking to either goad visitors into an assault, or persuade them to visit area 7-42 for a no-weapons brawl. One of the six will be one of the elite gladiators (select from either 6-76, 6-77 or 6-78), while the other five will come from the list at 6-71.
10-11	A group of Arena spectators who got the schedule wrong; they are mistakenly expecting a spectacle. Roll d10 on the previous table to determine the group. The group is bored and looking for trouble.
12	The Lord of the Arena (6-85) with 4 guards: 1. Lord of the Arena: for stats, see 6-85 2. 4 arena guards, as 2 nd -level male Thorcin fighters: SZ M; AL NE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 15, 15; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8 (long sword) or 1-6 (spear). Possessions: scale mail; long swords; spears; purse with 33 sp and 9 gp each.

6-59: Seat of Judgment

Here the Lord of the Arena (6-85) dispenses justice on his minions and any outsiders who fall afoul of the Laws of the Arena. A 3'-tall semicircular dais rests against the northeast corner; on top of it is a strange throne made of some shiny orange substance (plasteel). The throne possesses wide armrests into which are set colored glass panels. Opposite the throne is a rectangular dais 2' tall, into which are set three 5'-tall poles made of thick iron. Each pole has four sets of manacles attached to it via an iron chain attached to the top of the pole. A rotting thoquua corpse is spiked to the southwest wall, behind the three iron poles.

A judgment ceremony is underway 10% of the time, but the poles of discipline are occupied 50% of the time.

Judgment Ceremony: Present will be the Lord of the Arena (6-85) in a heavy fur robe, four arena guards (see stats at 6-79), and 1-2 miscreants from the list below. Most ceremonies result in the offender being tied to a discipline pole and given 10-50 lashes by a guard; particularly egregious offenses (betrayal, murder, etc.) result in amputation or even death. Should visitors break any of the formal or informal rules of the Arena, for example, by cheating, by throwing bouts (or abetting the throwing of bouts), by refusing to honor bets, or by engaging in violence within the boundaries of the Arena, the Lord will send a troop of 6 guards (stats at 6-79) to arrest the accused and hold them for a trial. Ceremonies are mostly kangaroo courts, and the usual result is corporal punishment.

Poles of Discipline: After receiving their flogging, miscreants are left to hang from a discipline pole for 6-36 hours, depending entirely on the whim of the Lord of the Arena. Should the dice indicate the presence of an unfortunate in this area, roll on the following tables to determine the specifics (none of the prisoners will have any possessions):

D10	Miscreant
1	1-2 human arena wranglers (6-86): SZ M; AL N; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 1-1; HP 5, 4; #AT 1; Dmg by weapon.
2	Idris the gladiator (6-71), 2 nd -level male Thorcin fighter: SZ M; AL CE; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 21; #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 18/90, INT 7, WIS 9, DEX 17, CON 18, CHA 7.
3	1 guardsman (6-79), as 2 nd -level male Thorcin fighter: SZ M; AL NE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 15, 15; #AT 1; Dmg by weapon.
4	Yerk the deuterios: for stats see 6-77.
5	An entire outside team: choose from list provided above in regional introduction
6	A bestial varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL NE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 49; #AT 3; Dmg 3-6/3-6/3-10. Special defenses: regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision; immune to poison.
7	Runaway beastman trooper (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 6; #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Special attacks: tactics.
8	1-3 adventurers, imprisoned for drawing blood against the edicts: select from NPC appendix.
9	A heqeti hopper captured in the Nether Reaches and on display (see new monsters), as a 4 th -level fighter: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60'; 150' swimming; HD 4; HP 22; #AT 2; Dmg 1-6 (bite). Special attacks: hop; +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice.
10	2 lizardmen: SZ M; AL N; AC 5; MV 60'; 120' swimming; HD 2+1; HP 11, 11, 10; #AT 1 or 3; Dmg 1-2/1-2/1-8.

D10	Outlook
1	Confused and angry due to linguistic incompetence
2	Still drunk, unaware of situation
3	Enjoying the attention
4	Accepting of his/her/their fate
5	Weeping and sorrowful
6	Driven insane by ordeal
7	Screaming in hatred at all
8	Filled with cold vengeance vs Arena Lord (6-85)
9	Hatred and vengeance at a specific individual
10	Roll twice

D6	State
1	Will die in 1-6 hours

2	Near death but can recover
3	Moderately hurt
4	Lots of blood, but only lightly injured
5	No real damage
6	Broken limb

6-60: Rockworm Tunnel (to 8-129)

A particularly large thoqqua bored a tunnel into the Arena area about 6 months ago. The tunnel is 4.5' in diameter, and leads downward at a precipitous slope until, after many twists and turns, it debouches at area 8-129 in the Nether Reaches. The Lord of the Arena likes this small bit of chaos, and has allowed the tunnel to stand (although the thoqqua's corpse is mounted on the wall at 6-59).

6-61: Gamblers' Corner

Directly across from the entrance to the Arena proper stands this 20'-tall chamber, supported by beautiful red porphyry columns. Torches provide guttering light. All gambling connected to the Arena bouts, as well as any number of private deals both licit and not, takes place here.

Whenever a spectacle is imminent (or taking place), the area is crowded with those seeking to place or take wagers. Some such folk are regulars, but a great many more are occasional visitors hoping for some excitement and profit. Some examples of this crowd are listed below:

Leddy the Worm

Overview: Goblin, LN. Dressed in dirty red silken pantaloons, with a jaunty yellow tam 'o shanter. Has bad teeth.

Personality: Oily and unctuous, constantly bowing and scraping

Reputation: Honest, feared. Although Leddy never leaves the Arena, it is known that those who cheat him end up dead, regardless of where they may run

Role: Professional gambler; prefers to take bets from visitors, particularly when the bets involve the gladiators and well-known outside teams. Unlikely to take bets for newcomers.

Total Available Wealth: 1,660 gp in assorted coins

Maximum GP per Bet: 350 gp

Secrets? He is fronted by King Weskenim (SL4-22), who also pays for the assassins that track down defaulters

Special Items: A tattered scroll with a list of debtors and their preferred haunts; poisoned dagger

Leddy the worm, goblin, SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 5; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (poisoned dagger).

Bruno Bent-Nose

Overview: Human male, LN. Bruno has sandy hair and a grotesquely bent and broken nose. He also has a wooden prosthetic left foot, and uses a cane to hobble about.

Personality: Suspicious of all; bitter about his injuries

Reputation: Unpleasant but fair

Role: Professional gambler (and former gladiator). Bruno doesn't like to bet against the gladiators, except in the case of Basil (6-71), whom he loathes.

Total Available Wealth: 499 sp; 611 gp

Maximum GP per Bet: 75 gp

Secrets? None

Special Items: Leather armor; darts of sleeping x4 (see new magic items)

Bruno Bent-Nose, 2nd-level male Archontean fighter, AL LN; SZ M; AC 8; MV 60' (due to foot); HD 2; HP 17; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (cane) or 1-3 (darts of sleeping). Abilities: STR 17, INT 9, WIS 9, DEX 4, CON 17, CHA 8. Possessions: leather armor; darts of sleeping (x4) (see new magic items); cane.

Keth the Friendly

Overview: A lesser varumani (see new monsters), Keth sports a woman's peasant smock over too-tight leather trousers. His face is covered with large warts. He carries a ginger cat.

Personality: Friendly and engaging; likes to sing old varumani drinking songs.

Reputation: A rube, and one easy to fool

Role: Professional gambler and loan shark.

Total Available Wealth: 692 sp; 492 gp

Maximum GP per Bet: 50 gp

Secrets? He is much smarter than his clownish behavior suggests.

He does more business as a loan shark, pawning items for cash.

Special Items: A 3-lb lump of still-active arcanum (see new magic items); a stone of striking (8th-level; see new magic items); a terra cotta tablet with a scratch map of areas 6-145, 6-147 to 6-155, and 6-157 to 6-160 (but without secret doors and the cave-in south of 6-154); a solid silver goat's paw (45 gp); a herald's trumpet (15 gp); a large piece of quartz from which emanate strange telepathic thoughts (GM's choice); and a statuette of feline friendship (see new magic items).

Keth, lesser varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 55; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (club, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: club.

The Sisters Grevilar

Overview: Ida and Odile Grevilar, CN human female twins. Ida is a 5th-level thief; Odile is a 4th-level cleric of Banion. They have long, straight raven hair, pale faces, green eyes, and long, narrow noses.

Personality: Intense and spooky; enjoy riddles and wordplay; finish each other's sentences; their questioning of potential clients is off-putting Reputation: Poor gamblers, but possibly dangerous.

Role: Amateur gamblers, likely to miscalculate odds and chances

Total Available Wealth: 300 tiger eye gems (10 gp each), 375 gp

Maximum GP per Bet: 100 gp

Secrets? The sisters are seeking Walid, the ogre mage, in order to recover a lost volume of lore (see 9-70). They have moved in as gamblers as a way of trying to elicit information about Walid and his companions.

Special Items: Banion's dice (Odile) (see new magic items); bag of holding (smaller capacity, Ida); rope of climbing (Ida)

Ida, 5th-level, female Archontean thief: SZ M; AL CN; AC 3; MV 120'; HD 5; HP 21; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (short sword +1). Abilities: STR 12, INT 14, WIS 15, DEX 18, CON 9, CHA 14. Thief skills: PP 60%, OL 57%, F/RT 45%, MS 50%, HS 41%, HN 20%, CW 90%, RL 25%. Possessions: leather armor +1; short sword +1.

Odile, 4th-level female Archontean cleric of Banion: SZ M; AL CN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 4; HP 28; #AT 1; Dmg 3-8 (footman's mace +1). Abilities: STR 11, INT 12, WIS 16, DEX 10, CON 15, CHA 15. Banded mail; dagger, footman's mace +1. Spells: cure light wounds, detect magic, light, protection from evil, sanctuary; augury, find traps, hold person, silence 15' radius.

Razor Face

Overview: Male human; his face is a mass of scars, his nose and ears are gone, and his voice is low and raspy. He wears a dirty white robe and a ragged grey cloak Personality: Devious and aggressive, taking advantage of his looks to elicit sympathy

Reputation: Skeevy, as he is prone to disappearing for several weeks at a time. He is pitied and shunned by the other gamblers.

Role: Semi-professional gambler, and professional spy.

Total Available Wealth: 799 sp, 249 gp

Maximum GP per Bet: 25 gp

Secrets? He has been charmed by Cinna Minux (7-122) and relays news and gossip about the intelligent factions to that vampire lord. His natural quasi-thief abilities and his cloak allow him to travel mostly undetected. Each time he submits to Cinna, he adds a new scar to his face.

Special Items: Cloak of the dwarves (see new magic items)

Razor Face, male Thorcin: SZ M; AL CE; AC 10; MV 120'; HD 1-1; HP 6; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger). Possessions: cloak of the dwarves (see new magic items); dagger. Although not a classed thief, Razor Face can hide in shadows (50%) and move silently (50%). His cloak enhances these rates to 75% and 55% respectively when underground.

Ledyard of Arcturos

Overview: Tall, aristocratic-looking human male, dressed in fine blue silk tunic with yellow leggings.

Personality: Entitled, arrogant, but loyal to friends and allies. Expects clients to come to him.

Reputation: Disliked by the other gamblers who see him as slumming

Role: An amateur, who is too proud to learn much about the gladiators and hence is not particularly competent.

Total Available Wealth: 567 sp, 893 gp, 175 white eye agates (10 gp each)

Maximum GP per Bet: 200 gp

Secrets? Ledyard reneged on a 10,000 gp debt to the thieves' guild of Arcturos. To win the right to return, he must either acquire and deliver the thieves' mask (see new magic items; it is located at 3-41A) or 15,000 gp. Ledyard is hoping to raise the money, but will offer 7,500 gp for the mask if PCs persuasively show they can get it.

Special Items: He has 15 yellow topaz gems (500 gp each) sewn into the lining of his tunic.

Ledyard of Arcturos, 3rd-level male Thorcin thief, SZ M; AL LE; AC 2; MV 120'; HD 3; HP 14; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (short sword +1). Abilities: STR 14; INT 11; WIS 9; DEX 18; CON 11; CHA 16. Thief skills: PP 50%, OL 48%, F/RT 35%, MS 37%, HS 30%, HN 15%, CW 87%. Possessions: bracers of defense (AC 6); short sword +1.

Inhabitants:

Before and during a spectacle:

1. The 7 gamblers listed above.

2. 3-6 goblin gamblers: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 6, 5, 5, 4, 4, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger). On average each has 41 sp, 11 gp, and a 5% chance for a small gem. They are mostly begging for small loans.
3. 2-4 lesser varumani (see new monsters) gamblers: SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 57, 55, 53, 49; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (club, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: club. On average, each has 72 sp, 31 gp, and a 20% chance for a small gem. They are either placing bets with one of the big players or begging for small loans.
4. 3-6 unclassed human gamblers: SZ M; AL N; AC 10; MV 120'; HD 1-1; HP 6, 6, 5, 4, 4, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger). Possessions: dagger. On average each has 51 sp, 22 gp, and a 15% chance for a small gem. They are mostly placing bets with one of the big players or begging for small loans.
5. 2-4 classed NPC gamblers: These should be selected from the NPC appendix. They are placing bets with one of the big players.
6. 4 male Thorcin arena guards, as 2nd-level fighters: SZ M; AL NE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 15, 15; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8 (long sword) or 1-6 (spear) or 1-4 (light crossbow). Possessions: scale mail; long swords; spears; light crossbow and 20 bolts; purse with 33 sp and 9 gp each. In addition to their mail byrnies, and simple helmets, they wear a light green surcoat emblazoned with a black image of a six-sided die (the insignia of the arena guards).

6-62: Guard Niches

Two arena guardsmen stand in each niche whenever a spectacle is not imminent; the number rises to three per niche when one is imminent. The guardsmen wear the distinctive gear of the Arena: yellow-stained chain mail, sallet-style helmets, halberds and short swords. A gong in the west niche allows the guardsmen to summon help from 6-79 if needed (although the layout of the area means that help will be slow to arrive).

A metal gate in the west wall leads to a small antechamber; in it a circular staircase leads down over 60' to an access tunnel that wends underneath the Arena to emerge at 6-79. The gate is kept locked at all times; the key is kept by the duty guardsmen in 6-62.

Inhabitants:

1. 4 or 6 male Thorcin arena guardsmen, as 2nd-level fighters: SZ M; AL NE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 17, 16, 15, 15; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8 (long sword) or 1-6 (spear) or 1-4 (light crossbow). Possessions: scale mail; long swords; spears; light crossbow and 20 bolts; purse with 33 sp and 9 gp each. In addition to their mail byrnies, and simple helmets, they wear a light green surcoat emblazoned with a black image of a six-sided die.

6-63: Brooding Chairs

Unlike their analogs further west (6-102), these massive seats are empty. The chairs are 10' wide, 15' tall, and 5' deep, and the seats are 5' off the floor. The chairs are made of oily soapstone and give off a faint tinge of ancient evil. Despite their ominous look, there is a 15% chance that either a drunken reveler or a passing 'tourist' occupies one of them.

6-64: The Corner

This massive octagonal chamber has a sloping ceiling that rises 30' in its center. A single yellow light globe (see new technological items) hangs from the point of the ceiling, providing soft yellow light. As the nexus point for a series of corridors connecting to other areas of the complex, the corner is extremely busy, and chances for a random encounter here are tripled. If one is indicated, use the chart found at area 6-58 to determine its nature.

An enterprising lesser varumani known as Hal (for his bad breath) has set up a bar here. For those who haven't brought their own liquid courage with them to the Arena, Hal's bar at the corner is the place to be. The bar is a solid plank laid over two bits of broken masonry; he keeps his kegs and (few) bottles behind it. In addition to the usual Arden Vul potables, Hal sells a super-potent grain alcohol (Hal's Hearty Hello) that he has acquired from visiting Archontean. Three goblin barmen aid Hal.

The Corner Bar offers the following:

Good for Sale	Price
Ale, Hak's Mushroom	2 sp/pint
Ale, Hak's special red (double the alcohol content)	5 sp/pint
Hal's Hearty Hello (grain alcohol; quadruple alcohol content)	1 gp/pint
Brandy, imported	5 gp/shot
Wine, imported	1 gp/glass
Mushroom cake	5 sp/cake

Since the Corner is outside the 'safe zone' of the Arena, Hal is vigilant about threats, and not averse to using his massive club. The guards from 6-62 will not aid Hal, although intelligent random visitors (if present) probably will (50%).

A set of 2"-tall paving stones arranged in a 6'-diameter ring lies in the center of the floor, directly under the light globe (see new technological items). Inset into the floor next to the ring is a rectangle 48" long by 8" tall; the rectangle is divided into six interior compartments, each 8" square. Together these elements form a Thothian teleportation ring (see new magic items). To activate the ring, one must place six colored glass activation squares into the inset according to a sequence that matches the 'address' of the ring to which one wishes to travel. Once the squares are placed, a brief shimmer of energy is visible over the ring. At this point the user has 1 round to collect the squares and enter the ring, after which anyone in the ring is teleported without error to address indicated by that sequence of squares. If the glass activation squares are not collected and/or if the travelers do not possess a second set of them, they are likely to be stranded in the location to which they have just teleported. The address of this ring is as follows: [BL-GR-BK-YE-WH-RE (see new magic items for explanation). None of the glass activation squares necessary to operate the circle are present.

Arriving unexpectedly in the corner via the teleportation ring is sure to bring attention to the PCs, as some of the hangers-on encountered here may wish to deprive them of whatever powerful magic allowed them to apparate in the midst of the Arena crowd.

Inhabitants:

1. Hal the lesser varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 56; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22

(club, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: club.

2. Three goblin barmen: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 5, 5, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.

Treasure:

Hal keeps 55 sp and 17 gp in a belt pouch, and his stash consisting of 431 sp, 349 gp, and a sapphire Sortian eye (see new magic items) is hidden in a keg of his hooch.

6-65: Stairs Down to Level 7 (area 7-42)

This corridor leads west down numerous flights of stairs over some 200' until it ends up at the varumani regions of Level 7 (area 7-42).

6-66: Long Corridor to SL4-53

This long, broad corridor climbs 475' until it reaches the Goblin Warrens (SL4-53).

6-67: Bridge and Corridor to the Precincts of Set (4-161)

A rickety, 3'-wide rope bridge connects this corridor to area 6-64. The corridor narrows to 10' and then winds upwards some 350' through a long maze of passages until it gives forth near the old entrance to the precincts of Set (4-161).

6-68: Arena

This massive chamber dating to the heqeti period rises 80' from the sanded floor to the barrel-vaulted ceiling. The walls are rough and pitted with age, but still ooze an oily sheen. The Lord of the Arena (6-85) periodically has the arena wranglers paint colossal images – of gladiators and unrecognizable monsters (from the rudishva homeworld) – on the north, south and west walls. These images tend to be 25' tall and formed of vibrant primary colors; due to the nature of the stone, though, the images begin to run almost immediately. As a result, during any spectacle, visitors will see huge but barely visible images formed of slowly running paint lining the walls.

Numerous apertures line the walls of the chamber. To the east is the half-dome of the spectator's box (6-70); it begins 25' off the floor of the Arena and rises another 25'. The north wall contains two wide openings to the beast pits (6-87); these are 15' tall and closed by portcullises that may be raised only from area 6-87. To the south is a single opening, similarly boasting a portcullis, which leads to the gladiators' quarters (6-71). The west wall boasts the box of the Lord of the Arena (6-84), situated 40' off the floor. To either side of his box is a pair of windows that allow his guests to view the spectacles from relative safety (6-81, 6-85). Three of the corners of the Arena feature ledges on which are mounted large ballistae (6-69).

The floor is covered with a 5'-thick layer of sand.

Two broad, locked cabinet doors line the east wall under the seats (6-70). These storage cabinets contain long trestle tables and benches; twice a day these are brought onto the Arena sands for meals. All inhabitants – gladiators, guards, wranglers, and the Lord – take their meals together in this way.

Three large spheres made of colored glass hang from the ceiling on thin wires. These are rudishva environment globes, salvaged from the wreck of the Beacon and used by the Lord of the Arena to simulate different environmental conditions in the Arena. The middle, yellow globe is the largest (5' in diameter), and controls light intensity; the southern, red globe is 3' in diameter, and controls precipitation; the northern, blue globe is 3' in diameter and controls temperature. All three can be manipulated by the Lord's control bracelet. Environmental conditions are decided randomly at the start of a spectacle and are cumulative. Roll 3d10 and consult the following charts:

D10	Light (Yellow Globe)
1	Super bright, -1 hit
2	Bright, full light
3	Bright, full light
4	Half-light (+10% stealth)
5	Half-light (+10% stealth)
6	No light
7	No light
8	No light
9	Strobe light every round (save vs spells or blinded)
10	Restorative light: cures 1 hp/rd

D10	Precipitation (Red Globe)
1	None (dry)
2	None
3	None
4	Soft rain (or snow)
5	Soft rain (or snow)
6	Pounding rain (or heavy snow) (-1 to hit)
7	Pounding rain (or heavy snow) (-1 to hit)
8	Hail (1 hp/rd damage)
9	Acid Rain (2 hp/rd damage)
10	Sandstorm (1 hp/rd damage, -2 to hit, low visibility)

D6	Temperature (Blue Globe)
1	Blistering hot (2 hp/rd damage, metal untouchable after 2 rds)
2	Sweltering (-1 to all rolls after 3 rds)
3	Sweltering (-1 to all rolls after 3 rds)
4	Warm, no effect
5	Moderate, no effect
6	Cool, no effect
7	Icy cold (-1 to hit using weapons)
8	Icy cold (-1 to hit using weapons)
9	Bone-chilling cold (2 hp/rd damage, 15% to drop weapons)
10	Alternating - roll a new temperature every 2 rounds

6-69: Ballistae

These three corners of the Arena are fitted with ballista stations. During spectacles two guardsmen, ready to gun down monsters, gladiators, or unruly spectators at a nod from the Lord, man each station. The ballista bolts hit as 8th-level fighters and do 3-18 HP damage. For dangerous spectacles, there is a 33% chance that the bolts have been dipped in a paralysis poison.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 guardsmen per station, as 2nd-level human fighters; SZ M; AL varies; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 2; HP 18; #AT 1; Dmg: by weapon. Guardsmen typically are +1 to hit and +1 to damage (STR 17); they typically have CON 16 and no other elevated statistics. They wear a mail byrnie, a simple helmet, and a light green surcoat emblazoned with a black image of a six-sided die. They are armed with spears, long swords, and light crossbows.

6-70: Arena Seats

Rows of stone benches line this half-domed chamber. The west edge of the area has a low (2' tall) wall, allowing good views of all spectacles. A steep staircase provides access to the benches. The seats begin 25' above the Arena floor, and rise another 25' in height to 6-59. During a spectacle, the seats contain the following:

Types of Spectators
3-60 goblins: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7(x12), 6(x6), 5(x18), 4(x12), 3(x12); #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.
2-12 lizardmen: SZ M; AL N; AC 4; MV 60', 120' swimming; HD 2+1; HP 16, 15, 14, 14, 13, 13, 12, 12, 11, 11, 10, 10; #AT 1 or 3; Dmg 1-6 (club) and 1-6 (javelin), or 1-2/1-2/1-8. Possessions: clubs; javelins; shields.
1-3 parties of adventurers: select from NPC appendix
A beastman patrol: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. 6 beastman troopers (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 8, 7, 7, 6, 6, 5; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spears; short swords; short bows.</li> <li>2. 1 beastman sergeant (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 2+2; HP 15; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 or 2-5. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spear; war hammer.</li> </ul>
A raucous group of varumani: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. 1-6 true varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LN; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 60, 58, 57, 53, 52, 47; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 6-24 (two-handed sword, 2-20+4). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: huge two-handed sword.</li> <li>2. 2-12 lesser varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 61, 60, 59, 58, 58, 57(x3), 55, 53, 51, 49; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (club, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: club</li> </ul>
An important person from the following list: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. King Weskenim (SL4-22) with 10-20 goblin courtiers and 1 eunuch ogre guard</li> <li>2. Set High Priestess Stephania (4-51) with 6 elite Set guardsmen (see new monsters)</li> <li>3. Gerrilad the Grey (2-69) with Umsko (2-60) and 4 large albino baboons (see new monsters)</li> <li>4. Tikun Thane (SL3-2) with 3 disciplined and 4 large albino baboons (see new monsters for both)</li> <li>5. Psalor-Ki (5-74) with 6 ichor spawn (see new monsters)</li> <li>6. Varboka the troll thegn (7-31) with his housecarls (7-29)</li> <li>7. A Sun-Scarred Knight (see new monsters) with varlet</li> <li>8. GM's Choice</li> </ul>

1-3 groups from other intelligent races (GM's choice) (25% chance)

Durdeon Vislok and six members of the Sodality of the Fist: for stats, see AV-12.

Each of the primary racial groups has developed distinct chants and songs that they sing loudly during spectacles; many (particularly the goblins and varumani) are typically well lubricated with alcohol (from the 6-64). The scene is generally rowdy but genial.

Should visitors pick a fight or try to intervene in a bout, the crowd is 75% likely to swarm the miscreants and hold them for punishment by the Lord of the Arena.

6-71: Gladiators' Preparation

This lightly sanded hall serves as a practice facility and preparation hall for the gladiators of the Arena. The north wall has a 10'-wide, 15'-tall opening into the Arena; a heavy portcullis, the release for which is found on the east wall, normally prevents exit. A steep stairway leads down to area 6-72. The northeast and northwest walls are painted with enormous, art naïve images of smiling gladiators; above the images are the words 'Honor', 'Comradeship' and 'Dignity'.

Although the gladiators enjoy a certain prestige among those who attend the Arena, they are technically bound in servitude to the Lord. Most have no intention of leaving, however, as they have become accustomed to the thrills and accolades of their position. Still, the gladiators' servile status is evident in the presence of guardsmen (6-74 and elsewhere).

Just before a bout, the gladiators selected for that spectacle meet here to oil themselves, swear sacred oaths to each other, and prepare their equipment. At such times, six guardsmen (from 6-74) will be present.

During a gladiatorial bout, all gladiators not fighting are present here, pressed against the portcullis to witness the performances of their fellows.

A list of the current gladiators living at the Arena, ranked according to their status from 1st to 15th, follows. Gladiators typically take part in one of the following types of bouts: 1) 12 gladiators against each other; 2) 4-6 gladiators versus an outside team; 3) 3-4 gladiators versus some easy monsters.

(#1) Hector, 8th-level male Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL LN; AC 3; MV 120'; HD 8; HP 75; #AT 3/2; Dmg 6-13 (long sword +2), or 6-11 (spear +2). Abilities: STR 18/04, INT 8, WIS 10, DEX 16, CON 15, CHA 15. Possessions: orange-colored studded leather armor +2; long sword +2; spear +2; headband of the kallistos (see new magic items). Personality: brave but dim; resents Tredgeris, a poor judge of character; but a talented fighter

(#2) Lara, 7th-level female Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL LN; AC 2; MV 120'; HD 7; HP 59; #AT 3/2; Dmg 5-10 (trident +2) or 3-6 (short sword +1). Abilities: STR 16, INT 15, WIS 11, DEX 17, CON 13, CHA 11. Possessions: studded leather +2; trident +2; short sword +1. She has a purse with 147 sp and 10 moonstone gems (50 gp each). Personality: tough-as-nails, completely lacking in mercy ... except towards other gladiators

(#3) Yerk, 7th-level male Thorcin fighter: SZ M; AL CN; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 7; HP 78; #AT 3/2; Dmg 6-7 (whip +2), or 6-13 (battle axe +2). Abilities: STR 18/23, INT 10, WIS 8, DEX 12, CON 17, CHA 12. Possessions: whip +2; battle axe +2; studded leather armor +2. Personality: psychotic, near-berserker warrior.

(#4) Jonas, 5th-level male Archontean magic user: SZ M; AL LN; AC 4; MV 120'; HD 5; HP 15; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (staff). Abilities: STR 11, INT 17, WIS 15, DEX 16, CON 10, CHA 8. Possessions: staff, bracers of defense (AC 6); ring of shield (see new magic items); wand of magic missiles (15 charges). Memorized spells: magic missile (x2); charm person, jump; invisibility, mirror image; fireball. Spell book: affect normal fires, burning hands, charm person, enlarge, identify, jump, magic missile, read magic, shield, sleep, spider climb; continual light, invisibility, levitate, mirror image, ray of enfeeblement, web; blink, dispel magic, fireball, fly, monster summoning I, slow. Personality: cautious and clever; prefers to fight in a team.

(#5) Eracleis, 5th-level male Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL NG; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 5; HD 41; #AT 1; Dmg 6-13 (battle axe +2). Possessions: STR 18/65, INT 7, WIS 10, DEX 15, CON 12, CHA 10. Possessions: chain mail; battle axe +2. Personality: a very large, muscle-bound man whose easy-going nature is the one reason he won't advance any further in rank.

(#6) Mord, 4th-level male Wisikin magic user: SZ M; AL CN; AC 6; MV 120'; HD 4; HP 15; #AT 1; Dmg 2-5 (dart +1). Abilities: STR 8, INT 17, WIS 15, DEX 16, CON 16, CHA 7. Possessions: 4 darts +1; ring of protection +2; wand of lightning (11 charges). Memorized spells: magic missile (x2); charm person; invisibility, mirror image. Spell book: affect normal fires, burning hands, charm person, enlarge, identify, jump, magic missile, read magic, shield, sleep, spider climb; continual light, invisibility, levitate, mirror image, ray of enfeeblement, web; blink, dispel magic, lightning bolt, fly, monster summoning I, slow. Personality: misanthropic, speaks Wiskinga but little Archontean. Little loyalty or friendship to other gladiators.

(#7) Thomas, 4th-level male Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL NE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 4; HP 33; #AT 1; Dmg 6-11 (spear +2). Abilities: STR 18/24, INT 10, WIS 11, DEX 8, CON 11, CHA 17. Possessions: scale mail; spear +2. Personality: cold, reserved, sadistic.

(#8) Pelissa Halbestdottir, 3rd-level female elf fighter: SZ M; AL CG; AC 2; MV 120'; HD 3; HP 23; #AT 1; Dmg 3-10 (long sword +1), or 1-6 (long bow). Abilities: STR 16, INT 14, WIS 15, DEX 17, CON 10, CHA 9. Possessions: elven chain mail; long sword +1; long bow, 20 arrows. Personality: smiles constantly but speaks little; prefers surgical, called shots in combat.

(#9) Basil, 3rd-level male Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 3; HP 34; #AT 1; Dmg 4-9 (trident +1). Abilities: STR 17, INT 14, WIS 10, DEX 9, CON 18, CHA 7. Possessions: scale mail; trident +1; throwing net. Personality: prefers sarcastic jokes and taunts; gets in trouble a lot, but his CON bails him out.

(#10) Hamfast, 2nd-level male halfling fighter: SZ S; AL NG; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 17; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (short sword) or 4-7 (sling +2). Abilities: STR 16, INT 11, WIS 11, DEX 16, CON 16, CHA 9. Possessions: studded leather armor; short sword; sling +2, 20 sling stones. Personality: cheerful, alcoholic, devoted to Julia below.

(#11) Julia, 2nd-level female halfling fighter: SZ S; AL NG; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 16; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (short sword) or 3-8 (short bow +1 with arrows +1). Abilities: STR 14, INT 10, WIS 14, DEX 16, CON 16, CHA 15. Possessions: studded leather; short sword; short bow +1 and 20 arrows +1. Personality: flirtatious, shallow.

(12) Idris, 2nd-level male Thorcin fighter: SZ M; AL CE; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 21; #AT 1; Dmg 7-13 (glaive +2) or 4-7 (war hammer). Abilities: STR 18/90, INT 7, WIS 9, DEX 17, CON 18, CHA 7. Possessions: chain mail; glaive +2; war hammer. Personality: an incredible physical specimen, but dull-witted and charmless. Has few friends.

#13: Kelt, 2nd-level female Wiskin magic user: SZ M; AL CN; AC 9; MV 120'; HD 2; HP 6; #AT 1; Dmg 3-9 (staff +1). Abilities: STR 18, INT 15, WIS 8, DEX 10, CON 10, CHA 11. Possessions: staff +1; ring of protection +1. Memorized spells: magic missile, shield. Spell book: affect normal fires, burning hands, charm person, enlarge, identify, jump, magic missile, read magic, shield, sleep, spider climb; continual light, invisibility, levitate, mirror image, ray of enfeeblement, web. Personality: chaotic and unstable; probably insane; prone to babbling in Wiskin.

#14: Nisdis Jerronsson, 2nd-level male elf fighter: SZ M; AL NE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 18; #AT 1; Dmg 5-10 (spear +1) or 4-11 (long sword). Abilities: STR 18/74, INT 9, WIS 14, DEX 10, CON 16, CHA 8. Possessions: scale mail; spear +1; long sword. Personality: even-tempered, a good strategist, deferential and loyal.

#15: Xerxes, 2nd-level male Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL NG; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 15; #AT 1; Dmg 3-9 (broadsword) or 3-6 (dagger +1). Abilities: STR 17, INT 17, WIS 9, DEX 11, CON 11, CHA 13. Possessions: chain mail; broad sword; dagger +1. Personality: filled with nervous energy, constantly chattering, prefers swift, direct assaults.

6-72: Gladiators' Hall (unmapped)

This 30'x60'x15' hall is reached via a steep staircase leading down from 6-71. So as to not clutter the main map, this hall is not depicted there.

The floor is stone, but is covered with several inches of sand. A continual light spell illuminates the area. The walls are painted with life-like images of deceased gladiators, each in full gear and with his/her name listed beneath. Easily 300 such images line the walls, some of which are ancient and faded. Desecration or ridicule of the images cause the entire gladiatorial troop to attack the blasphemer. Against the east walls are the racks of gladiatorial weapons and equipment.

During a spectacle, the chamber is empty. If no spectacle is imminent, all of the gladiators (6-71) will be practicing here.

Two of the images of deceased gladiators are enchanted. The image of Lucius Magnus (halfway down the east wall) has enchanted eyes; the Dapifer can see through them from his chambers (6-75). All of the gladiators are aware of this ancient scrying apparatus, but most do not care. The image of Maria Bellatrix (just to the left of the staircase) is also enchanted; anyone touching the image of Maria's whip will find himself/herself +1 to hit and immune to extremes of heat and cold for three hours. The gladiators know of this enchantment, as does the Dapifer (since he is a former gladiator), but the Lord of the Arena does not.

Inhabitants:

0-15 gladiators (see stats at 6-71)

6-73: Cells of the Gladiators

All of the gladiators except the top three live in this block of chambers, in one of the six cells with a door. The door-less eastern niche features a latrine and a water basin. The cells are spartan, with simple cots, a few blankets, and a communal chest for a few personal items. The gladiators' winnings are kept in Hector's chamber (6-78). When the gladiators are present (8 hours per day), the doors are locked from the outside; when they are absent in 6-72 or in the Arena itself, the cells stand open. All walls are whitewashed stone, and the area is subject to a continual light spell cast in the center of the entrance.

6-74: Guard Post

Six Arena guardsmen are posted here at all times, on a rotating basis (see 6-79). The chamber is brightly lit by continual light, and contains a trestle table, benches, and two large water barrels. The walls are whitewashed stone. When a spectacle is imminent or under way, the guardsmen are found at 6-71. Otherwise they kill time in the post by swapping lies and playing cards. They pay little attention to the gladiators.

Inhabitants:

1. 6 male Thorcin arena guardsmen, as 2nd-level fighters: SZ M; AL NE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 17, 16, 15, 15; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8 (long sword) or 1-6 (spear) or 1-4 (light crossbow). Possessions: scale mail; long swords; spears; light crossbow and 20 bolts; purse with 33 sp and 9 gp each. In addition to their mail byrnies, and simple helmets, they wear a light green surcoat emblazoned with a black image of a six-sided die.

6-75: Keeper of the Gladiators: Tredgeris the Dapifer

This spacious chamber is home to the second-in-command of the Arena, a human named Tredgeris the Dapifer. A curtain divides the chamber in half. To the north is the public area, where Tredgeris keeps his desk, a scroll cabinet, a couple of extra chairs, and a low table. To the south is the private area, where may be found Tredgeris's comfortable feather bed, his wardrobe, armor stand, a small table inset with a copper basin, and a locked ebony cabinet. The chamber is door-less and illuminated by continual light.

Tredgeris is a 48-year old male Archontean. During and just before a spectacle, Tredgeris is found at the portcullis in 6-71. Otherwise he has a 50% chance to be in his chamber and a 50% chance to be visiting 4-2 or 7-76. He began his career in Arden Vul as a slave of the Set Cult; the previous Dapifer purchased him from the Guild of Service and trained him as a gladiator. Although never Kallistos, his intelligence meant that he was promoted to Dapifer six years ago. Hector (6-78) resents this fact, and makes no secret of his hatred of Tredgeris. Conversely, Tredgeris is supportive of Hector's position as Kallistos, and is generally liked by the younger gladiators. As Dapifer, it is Tredgeris's responsibility to ensure that the Arena is staffed with a full complement of well-trained gladiators. This means that Tredgeris is responsible for procuring new gladiators, and also for overseeing training sessions (in 6-72). Tredgeris is completely loyal to the Lord of the Arena.

The copper basin serves as a scrying pool, and is attuned to the image of Lucius Magnus in 6-72. By focusing on the water in the bowl for 2 rounds, one is able to see all that transpires in 6-72.

The south door leads to a ledge overlooking the lesser chasm; the bodies of slain gladiators are thrown from this ledge into the pit. Tredgeris is aware of the passage to the west (to 6-100) but has, perhaps wisely, not explored it.

Inhabitants:

1. Tredgeris, 7th-level male Archontean fighter (50% chance): SZ M; AL LN; AC 0; MV 220'; HD 7; HP 59; #AT 3/2; Dmg 5-11 (morning star +2). Abilities: STR 16, INT 15, WIS 15, DEX 15, CON 12, CHA 9. Possessions: chain mail +2; morning star +2; dagger; boots of speed; circlet of persuasion; and a purse with 204 gp.

Treasure:

Scroll Case: a dozen works of martial poetry (10-100 gp each), including an ancient copy of the Lay of Marius Invictus by Lucius Cornelius (see 6-135 and Arden Vul books; this copy is worth half the usual price); a scroll of protection from magic; a scroll of legend lore; another scroll with suggestion and mnemonic enhancer; the transcript of the testimony of a dying gladiator, which provides accurate directions to the tomb of Marius Tricotor (6-154) by means of areas 6-145 and 6-146.

Desk: a full psychological and physical assessment of all gladiators. Tredgeris has marked Yerk (6-77), Thomas (6-71) and Idris (6-71) as 'beast-fodder' and has starred Lara (6-76) as 'the next Kallistos'.

Locked Ebony Chest: 395 gp, 2,019 sp, 535 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items), and an olifant of command (struggling warriors) (see new magic items). The chest itself is worth 400 gp.

6-76: Deuterus: Lara

The second and third ranked gladiators are called the Deuterus (deuterus, sing.), and they receive special treatment. Lara, the number two gladiator, lives here. She has a comfortable bed, a wardrobe, a small, unlocked chest, and the privilege of sleeping with her door unlocked.

Lara is a 35-year old woman, black-skinned, with an impressive scar on her right cheek. She is necessarily tough, and rarely swayed by sentiment. She has spent most of her life at the Arena and can think of nothing better than to be Kallistos. Her loyalty to the Lord (6-85) is abstract, but strong; she respects Tredgeris (6-75) and Hector (6-78), but has near contempt for Yerk (6-77).

Inhabitants:

1. Lara, 7th-level female Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL LN; AC 2; MV 120'; HD 7; HP 59; #AT 3/2; Dmg 5-10 (trident +2) or 3-6 (short sword +1). Abilities: STR 16, INT 15, WIS 11, DEX 17, CON 13, CHA 11. Possessions: studded leather +2; trident +2; short sword +1. She has a purse with 147 sp and 10 moonstone gems (50 gp each).

6-77: Deuterus: Yerk

Yerk, the number three gladiator and the other Deuterus, lives here. He has a comfortable bed, a wardrobe, a small, unlocked chest, and the privilege of sleeping with his door unlocked.

Yerk is a 30-year old human male who sports a mohawk and enjoys inscribing his own flesh with homemade tattoos. Yerk was a mercenary until captured a decade ago by the Guild of Service and sold to the Arena. He has risen to the rank of Deuterus mostly because he is utterly fearless and ruthless. Indeed, all but Hector (6-78) suspect he is completely insane, while Lara (6-76) fears he may lose control in the near future.

Inhabitants:

1. Yerk, 7th-level male Thorcin fighter: SZ M; AL CN; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 7; HP 78; #AT 3/2; Dmg 6-7 (whip +2), or 6-13 (battle axe +2). Abilities: STR 18/23, INT 10, WIS 8, DEX 12, CON 17, CHA 12. Possessions: whip +2; battle axe +2; studded leather armor +2.

6-78: Kallistos: Hector

The first of the gladiators, or Kallistos, is Hector, who enjoys a life of relative ease in this spacious chamber. His door remains unlocked, and he possesses a comfortable bed, a wardrobe, two locked chests, and a brandy rack.

Hector is male, Archontean, and 45 years old, with thinning brown hair and piercing grey eyes. He wears a silver mesh headband to indicate his rank. He has survived for 25 years in the Arena and can imagine no other life. He rose to the rank of Kallistos a decade ago, and expected to be made Dapifer. When Tredgeris (6-75) was promoted above him, Hector was outraged and conceived a burning hatred for the new Dapifer. These feelings are starting to affect his competency as Kallistos, since he has interpreted Yerk's psychotic behavior (6-77) as 'good old-fashioned spirits' rather than the dangerous insanity that it is.

Inhabitants:

1. Hector, 8th-level male Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL LN; AC 3; MV 120'; HD 8; HP 75; #AT 3/2; Dmg 6-13 (long sword +2), or 6-11 (spear +2). Abilities: STR 18/04, INT 8, WIS 10, DEX 16, CON 15, CHA 15. Possessions: orange-colored studded leather armor +2; long sword +2; spear +2; headband of the kallistos (see new magic items).

Treasure:

The smaller locked chest contains 560 sp, 113 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items), and a pewter cup (25 sp). The larger locked chest contains the winnings of the other fourteen gladiators, divided into 14 sacks, each containing 301-400 sp and 101-200 gp.

6-79: Barracks of the Arena Guards

This chamber contains the bunkbeds and chests of the twenty guardsmen employed by the Lord of the Arena. The walls are whitewashed, and the furniture is rough and simple. During spectacles, only two guardsmen are present. At other times, eight are present.

The corridor to the south is blocked by a heavy portcullis that can only be raised by employing a lever on the south wall of 6-79. To the east the ceiling rises sharply in order to allow access to the ballista post at 6-69; a narrow staircase along the eastern wall allows the guardsmen to climb to that position.

Along the north wall a spiral staircase leads down 20' to an access tunnel that snakes under the Arena to emerge at another staircase leading up to 6-62.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 or 8 male Thorcin arena guardsmen, as 2nd-level fighters: SZ M; AL NE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 19, 18, 17, 17, 16, 16, 15, 15; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8 (long sword) or 1-6 (spear) or 1-4 (light crossbow). Possessions: scale mail; long swords; spears; light crossbow and 20 bolts; purse with 33 sp and 9 gp each. In addition to their mail byrnies, and simple helmets, they wear a light green surcoat emblazoned with a black image of a six-sided die.

Treasure:

The chest of each guardsman holds 5-100 sp and 5-30 gp.

6-80: Commander of the Arena Guards

Darko, commander of the guardsmen, inhabits this spartan chamber. The walls are whitewashed and slightly dirty; a pair of smoky torches provides light. Darko has a bed, desk, a pair of battered chairs, and a diverse collection of bottles both empty and full of noxious grain alcohol. He is a drunkard, and spends most of his time in his room 'working' on duty rosters and tippling. Although chronically impaired, he manages to fulfill his obligations and the Lord has not (yet) replaced him.

Inhabitants:

1. Darko, 5th-level male Thorcin fighter: SZ M; AL CE; AC 1; MV 90'; HD 5; HP 43; #AT 1; Dmg 3-10 (long sword +1) or 1-4 (light crossbow). Abilities: STR 16, INT 11, WIS 9, DEX 13, CON 15, CHA 9. Possessions: chain mail and shield +3; long sword +1; light crossbow, 20 quarrels.

Treasure:

In the desk drawer is a casket with 200 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items) and 399 gp. Under the desk is a box containing 10 full and 20 empty bottles of brandy; one of the full bottles is fancy (250 gp), the others are cheap (10-40 gp each).

6-81: Observation Window

This sumptuously decorated chamber offers important visitors a comfortable location from which to view spectacles. A window – about 8' square – set in the east wall overlooks the Arena itself. The north and south walls are brightly painted with pastoral woodland scenes. A plush orange carpet covers the floor, while three leather chairs, a leather sofa, a low wooden table, and a teak humidor provide all the comforts one might need.

Treasure:

The carpet is worth 50 gp as is the teak humidor.

6-82: Solar

The Arena Lord's salon is an elaborate, rococo riot of colors, fabrics, and objects. The entire chamber is covered with a thick plush orange carpet (of unknown substance). The walls are carved in elaborate mid-relief sculptures, all of which are freshly painted in bright primary colors. The sculptures show, clockwise from the east wall: 1) writhing, intertwined figures in combat; the figures include tall skinny bipeds in uniforms, thick, tall troll-like beings, and misshapen amphibian-oids (rudishva, varumani, and heqeti); 2) a huge flattened oval (painted matte black), with some circular windows on it, surrounded by various unusual creatures; 3) elaborate jungle and arboreal images, complete with unknown flora and fauna; 4) a group of ten life-sized skinny bipeds (rudishva) wearing strange uniforms and gazing meaningfully toward the east.

At the south end is a beautiful rosewood table inlaid with lapis, pearl, and silver; four rosewood chairs surround it. The rest of the chamber is stuffed with leather sofas, chairs, and ottomans, as well as with a rosewood sideboard, a rosewood scroll case, and a carved rosewood chest.

Treasure:

Eight pieces of bulky rosewood furniture (100-400 gp per piece); heavy silver dining service in the sideboard (250 gp); 2 scrolls of protection from petrification; a scroll with tiny hut, tongues, and water breathing; a scroll with massmorph and wall of ice; a scroll with animate dead and cloudkill; a scroll with spiritwrack and stone-to-flesh; a scroll with monster summoning III and secret chest; a scroll with levitate and locate object; 16 scrolls describing in minute detail the spectacles staged in the Arena (these go back 500 years); a scroll on unusual linen 'parchment' entitled the Time of Darkened Skies (see Arden Vul books); six heavy platinum goblets (100 gp each) in the chest; and six bottles of rudishva 'aquavit' (150 gp each).

6-83: Guest Room

An orange plush carpet, overstuffed bed, and pair of leather chairs occupy this room. The walls are painted a sea-green color. There is a 20% the chamber is occupied by a guest (GM's choice).

6-84: Lord's Overlook

The Lord of the Arena presides over spectacles from this brightly lit (continual light) overlook. The overlook is 40' above the floor of the Arena; three onyx pillars support the aperture that gives forth to the Arena. Four stone seats rest between the pillars, just at the edge of the floor. Two gigantic eyes are painted on the northwest and southwest walls; through an illusion, these eyes appear to blink and regularly scan the Arena. Although without true function, the eyes are well known to Arena regulars, and most are convinced that they see everything.

Haine, a rudishva military-grade security construct, stands just inside the west corridor; it is inert unless commanded into action by the Lord. Haine once operated with all the same features as Relke (see 6-30), but has not been powered or charged for centuries. As a result, many of his powered functions (flames, plasma beam, charged torso) no longer function; still, he is adept at hand-to-hand combat. Were it possible to subdue Haine and bring him to Kerbog Khan's workshop, the Khan might be able to restore him to full functionality (see SL12-28).

A miserable female goblin named Leila sleeps against the walls of this area. She is the Lord's personal servant, and is also responsible for ensuring that the sculptures in 6-82 are kept brightly painted. Although she has been inside the Lord's sanctum, both he and she prefer that she sleep elsewhere.

Inhabitants:

1. Lord of the Arena, only if a spectacle is underway (see stats at 6-85)
2. Leila, goblin servant: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.
3. Haine, partially-functioning military-grade rudishva security construct (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 3, MV 120'; HD 10; HP 50; #AT 2; Dmg 3-8/3-8 (fists); MR 50%. Special defenses: +2 weapons or better to hit; leap unerringly 30'; regenerate 2 HP/round.

6-85: Lord of the Arena

The insane, ancient Lord of the Arena counts this huge chamber as his inner sanctum. The door to the room is a circular, specially-modified rudishva iris door that opens only to the Lord's control bracelet (although a small hole in its center also permits a bend bars attempt to open it). Inside the temperature is cool and dry, and rudishva light globes (see new technological items) attached to the walls provide light. Each wall has been painted (freshly) with trompe l'oeil techniques such that each 'wall' appears as a corridor extending into the distance; the effect is make the chamber seem larger than it is. Most of the floor is covered with more of the thick, plush orange carpet found nearby. All the corners of this chamber have been packed with cement and smoothed, so that no 90-degree angles are visible; while this work has been professionally done, it is obvious that the work is not original to the chamber.

A 15'-diameter sunken pool occupies the exact center of the chamber. To the west stands the Lord's massive, four-poster bed. To the north is a three-tiered display table, on which a variety of rare and exotic items stand. To the northeast are three 'troll' chests, keyed to the Lord's hand, and a pile of 3'-long cylinders. To the southeast a 6'-tall egg-shaped object hangs from the ceiling.

Sunken Pool: 4' deep, for relaxation purposes.

Display Table: Two fist-sized chunks of raw arcanum (see new magic items); a 4"x10" holograph of the Lord standing with others of his race in front of a pile of amphibian corpses; a full set of Sortian eyes (see new magic items) mounted in a heavy silver necklace; and the helm of Marius (see new magic items).

Troll Chest 1: 40 lesser power supplies for rudishva artifacts. Stacked behind this chest are 10 greater power supplies (see new technological items for chest and items).

Troll Chest 2: A rudishva laser rifle and a laser pistol (see new technological items; 20 data crystals (see new technological items) for use in a GnuCoder 5000 (see 5-97, and new technological items), most of which are children's stories, albeit strange children's stories; a pair of red plastic ducks; 3 frayed silk scarves; a set of keys to the Great Pillar (see 6-103); and rudishva identity plaques (see new technological items) in the following colors: rust, brown, sky blue, pale green, pink, copper, bronze, and platinum.

Troll Chest 3: 18,473 cp; 7,599 sp; 5,321 gp; and 1,321 pp, plus a portable hole containing 20,000 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items), 5,000 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items), and 251 ancient octagonal platinum coins (see Arden Vul items).

Egg-Shaped Object: One of only two rudishva portable medical units (see new technological items) that remains operative (the other is located at SL10A-32), this device has ensured the Lord's longevity and continued health. Through judicious use of this device, the Arena Lord has managed to live for roughly three millennia, although the process has effaced many of his memories.

Lord of the Arena: Although he has lost memory of his name and former life, the Lord of the Arena was originally called Crellik-Var, and was the entertainment officer on the Beacon. He avoided the plague that struck down his fellows through sheer genetic luck, and, with a few others (e.g. Psalor-Ki, 5-74) tried initially to maintain rudishva hegemony over the servitor races. When that proved impossible, due to the defection of the kaliyani, the demise of the varuda and the flight of the varumani, Crellik-Var migrated to this area, where he began doing what he had always done – organize entertainment. Early in his career he recovered a number of rudishva objects from the halls, including the medical unit with which he prolonged his own life. Extended use of that device gradually effaced his identity, and now, despite being surrounded by familiar objects, Crellik-Var is truly and essentially the Lord of the Arena. He lives only for the continuation of the spectacles and the proper adherence to his own laws. At some point, when his supply of power sources dries up, the Lord will die, but that date is still centuries away.

The Lord appears as a skinny, 7'-tall biped with small horns protruding from the temples of his hairless head. He wears a purple jumpsuit, a white silk scarf, web-belt with holster, heavy varumani-skin boots, and several items of jewelry, including a torc of domination (see new magic items), his command bracelet (see new technological items), and a beautiful topaz ring of levitation (see new magic items).

The Lord has become the embodiment of Lawful Neutral, and concerns himself not at all with the affairs of other parties, provided they adhere to his rules when in his domain. If encountered normally, whether at 6-58, 6-59 or 6-70, he is polite and terse. If explorers visit him unannounced in his sanctum, he is considerably less forgiving, and attacks immediately. He listens politely to all proposals but is only interested in those that aid in his agenda. Should an individual or group provide him some very great service (securing a particularly valuable monster for use in a spectacle, for example), he might invite that person or group to spend 1-8 days as his guest in 6-83. If attacked in his sanctum, the Lord's tactics are to summon the security construct (6-84), drink a potion of gaseous form, float out into the Arena, and rally his remaining servitors. He will use the ring of levitation and his laser pistol to good effect.

If the Lord is slain, Tredgeris (6-75) vainly attempts to continue the Arena's normal operations, but after 2-4 months the area collapses into anarchy.

Secret Door (west): This door is normal to find, and is merely the end of the trompe l'oeil image on the west wall. It is opened as a regular door.

Inhabitants:

1. The Lord of the Arena Crellik-Var, rudishva (see new monsters), with abilities of a 9th-level fighter; SZ L; ALLN; AC 4; MV 150'; HD 9; HP 64; #AT 6; Dmg 3-12/3-12/3-12/3-12/3-12. Implants: speed (AC 4; MV 150'; doubled attacks; haste for 1 turn/day), linguistics (comprehend and speak all languages), medical (regenerate 2 HP/round, 50% immunity to disease and poison), microprocessor (INT 18; +25% reaction rolls). Possessions: laser pistol (see new technological items); ring of levitation (see new magic items); torc of domination (see new magic items); a command bracelet (see new technological items) that he uses to control both the environment globes in 6-70 and Haine, the military construct, in 6-84; potion of gaseous form; potion of speed; a spare, full rudishva lesser power supply (see new technological items); a silver rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items); and keys to the Great Pillar (6-103), appearing as 1'-long, 3"-diameter, grey plasteel rods with a notched, 1"-tall flange on each end.

Treasure:

See above.

6-85A: Escape Tunnel

The secret door from 6-85 leads to a narrow, dark escape tunnel. From this tunnel, both secret doors are obvious to locate (3 in 4) and open.

6-86: Wranglers

The Arena's team of expert monster-wranglers inhabits this simple, whitewashed chamber. The west side is cluttered with 10 bunkbeds, a variety of chests and loose clothing, and scattered personal effects. The east side of the room is a training area, and is kept scrupulously clean. Several trophy heads, including a manticore, an owlbear, a dragonne, a pair of rhinoceros beetles, and a bulette, are mounted to the walls. Several racks holding all manner of whips, gaffs, goads, ankusas, long and short poles, ropes, and leather hoods stand against the walls.

Due to their frequent use of Rastite lotus powder in the pens (see 6-90 and 6-91), most of the wranglers are addicted to that drug. A dozen ½ oz doses are hidden in various secret locations throughout their living quarters.

To the southeast a narrow staircase leads upwards to 6-69.

Inhabitants:

20 arena wranglers of various races. If a spectacle is imminent or occurring, only 4 are present; otherwise 10 are present.

1. 8 goblin arena wranglers: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 6, 5(x3), 4, 4, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.
2. 8 human arena wranglers: SZ M; AL N; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 7, 6, 6, 5, 4, 4; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (spear). Possessions: leather armor; spear.
3. 4 lesser varumani (see new monsters) arena wranglers: SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 61, 59, 58, 57; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (club, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: clubs.

Treasure:

All told, the wranglers' chests contain 149 gp, 457 sp, and twelve doses of Rastite lotus powder (See new flora). A potion of healing is concealed in the bulette's maw.

6-87: Monster Preparation Area

This 25'-tall, sandy-floored chamber is where the wranglers prepare monsters for spectacles in the Arena. Two 12'-tall arches lead into the Arena; heavy portcullises normally close off these arches. Further sets of portcullises impeded entrance to and from the pens.

6-88: Kitchen

This smoke-blackened room swirls with odors both pleasant and not. A fireplace and chimney occupy the east wall. To the north are several huge cabinets in which the cook has stacked various preserved meats, vegetables, and mushrooms. The preparation table is to the south. By entrance door is a basin and enormous water barrel. The cook, an ancient beastman runaway, sleeps under the preparation table.

Inhabitants:

1. Ancient beastman cook, as a trooper (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LE; AC 9; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP 4; #AT 1; Dmg 1-3 (cleaver).

6-89: Monster Pens, Small

Five pens for smaller monsters occupy this 25'-tall, bi-level space. When new monsters arrive, the wranglers bring them along 6-58 and through the door to the pens; the wranglers then simply push the monster over the lip from the eastern walkway into the appropriate 10'x10'x15' pen. Climbing or flying monsters are contained in their pens via the use of special covers that lean against the east wall; similar covers may be rested against the lower grates on those occasions when the pens house monsters with breath weapons.

When it is time to bring the monsters forth for sport in the Arena, the wranglers first toss smudge pots laced with Rastite lotus powder (see new flora) into the pens from above; the drugged smoke tends to render the monsters pliant and non-aggressive, at least for the time needed for the wranglers to raise the iron gates and swarm the monsters. The wranglers are able to raise the iron grates via a pulley system attached to the ceiling; they stand on the eastern, upper walkway and pull up the gates. When the gates are being raised and the monsters are drugged, other wranglers swarm into the pen behind heavy, tower-style shields and secure the creatures via goads, snares, nets, and so forth.

The southeast corner holds a rack with the ropes, goads, nets, hoods, snares, and other devices necessary for wrangling.

Each pen has a stone trough and some rancid straw. The monsters are fed irregularly, and are snarly and dangerous.

Note: wranglers can move from upper to lower level via the stairs at the north end of the chamber.

At present, the pens hold the following:

- A: 6 giant bombardier beetles: SZ M; AL N; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 2+2; HP 17, 16, 14, 13, 13, 12; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12. Special attacks: acid cloud (50% chance per round).
- B: 3 hell hounds: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 120'; HD 5; HP 35, 32, 31; #AT 1; Dmg 1-10. Special attacks: breathe fire; surprise on 1-4 in 6. Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6. Special: 50% to spot hidden or invisible.

C: A smoke mephit and a steam mephit.

1. 1 smoke mephit: SZ M; AL CE; AC 4; MV 120'; 240' flying (Class B); HD 3; HP 19; #AT 2; Dmg 1-2/1-2. Special attacks: breath weapon; flame damage on death. Special: invisibility (1/day); dancing lights (1/day); gate 1-2 mephits (20% chance).

2. 1 steam mephit: SZ M; AL NE; AC 7; MV 120'; 240' flying (Class B); HD 3+3; HP 21; #AT 2; Dmg 1-4/1-4. Special attacks: breath weapon once every other round; boiling rainstorm 1/day; contaminate water 1/hour. Special defenses: steaming skin; gate another mephit 1/hour (30% chance).

D: Empty

E: 5 ghouls: SZ M; AL CE; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 13, 12, 11, 11, 10; #AT 3; Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-6. Special attacks: paralysis. Special defenses: immune to sleep and charm.

Should visitors witness the demise of (or participate in the demise of) a monster, the Arena will replace it with a new creature within 3-18 days. Contracts to procure live monsters from the Nether Reaches may be arranged with Tredgeris the Dapifer (6-75).

6-90: Storage

This whitewashed storage chamber holds a dozen smudge pots; a locked chest with 30 doses of Rastite lotus powder and 6 of Gethite lotus powder (see new flora for both); two dozen bales of straw; numerous spare parts for the wranglers; eight sets of gladiator equipment; and 12 small or medium corpses hanging from hooks in the ceiling (monster chow). There is a 50% chance that any item of adventuring gear can be found in this chamber. Tucked away behind the hay is a greater salt lamp of protection (see new magic items).

6-91: Monster Pens, Large

The larger pens work in the same basic way as the smaller ones. Beasts are brought in through the northern double doors and unceremoniously dumped into one of the 20'x20'x20' pens. When their day in the Arena arrives, the wranglers drug the monsters with smudge pots laced with Rastite lotus powder (see new flora), and then maneuver the groggy beasts out of the pens through the iron portcullises on the south side (20' below the northern walkway). They raise the portcullises via a set of pulleys set into the 30'-tall ceiling of the chamber. As with the smaller pens, removable lids for the pens rest against the north wall, along with iron-and-wooden baffles that can be pushed against the portcullises when a pen houses a monster with a breath weapon. Numerous hooks holding snares, prods, and so forth are scattered throughout the chamber. The pens each have a stone trough and some dirty straw.

Current inhabitants of the pens include:

A: 1-2 manticores: SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 120'; 180' flying (Class E); HD 6+3; HP 47, 40; #AT 3; Damage 1-3/1-3/1-8. Special attacks: four sets of 6 tail spikes (1-6 HP/spike).

B: 1 fire lizard: SZ L; AL N; AC 3, MV 90'; HD 10; HP 67; #AT 3; Dmg 1-8/1-8/2-16. Special attacks: breath weapon (2-12 HP). Special defenses: immune to fire.

C: 1 chimera: SZ L; AL CE; AC 6/5/2, MV 90', 180' flying (Class E); HD 9; HP 61; #AT 6; Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-4/1-4/2-8/3-12. Special attacks: breath weapon (3-24 HP).

D: 2 owlbears: SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 5+2; HP 39, 33; #AT 3; Dmg 1-6/1-6/2-12. Special attacks: hug.

E: 2 giant scorpions: SZ M; AL N; AC 3; MV 150'; HD 5+5; HP 39, 35; #AT 3; Dmg 1-10/1-10/1-4. Special attacks: poison.

See text at 6-89 for the replacement of monsters; larger monsters take a bit longer to replace (3-36 days).

6-92: Hall of Stone Heads

This area dates back to the heqeti period of the Halls, and features the usual grey, oily, pebbled stonework that is a hallmark of that era. The 30'-tall hall is in bad shape, with cracked and buckled floor tiles and numerous mini-collapses from the ceiling and walls. Still, the hall is dominated by a row of impressive stone face pillars. These 5'-diameter pillars stretch up 15' to the ceiling, and each is carved in the form of a grotesque face. In addition to the special guardian head (6-94) and the head isolated by a cave-in (i.e., the one in 6-104), four heads survive in this hall. Each head is roughly humanoid, but contains some unusual amphibian-oid features, including bulbous eyes, slit noses and lolling tongues (heqeti). The mouth of each head/face is open, revealing a 2' oval compartment. If a flask-full of 'sweat' from the nearby antechamber (6-93) is placed in any of the mouths, the tongue of that head will lick the nearest person (within 5'). Two effects are imparted: 1) the subject will recognize and be able to open all secret doors and passages on Level 6 (including 6-95A), and 2) the subject will be afflicted with an effect from the following table:

D10	Effect
1	Sweat uncontrollably for 7 days, -3 CHA, -1 to hit rolls
2	Temporary gills for 7 days, allowing subject to breathe underwater
3	Eyes grow disproportionately large for 3 days, -1 CHA but true seeing
4	Legs grow in power while arms atrophy for 3 days: MV increased by 30', STR -1
5	Webbing between fingers and toes, 50% better swimming but -1 CHA
6	Comprehend amphibian tongues, for 7 days
7	Cursed (if Good), Blessed for 3 days if CE. Nothing for other alignments
8	Sensitive to light for 7 days (-2 to all rolls), but gains infravision
9	Locate body of fresh water; knows route to pool-sized bodies of water (or larger) within 200'
10	Mark of Kauket: all 9 of the above, 1-3 of the effects are permanent.

Remove curse will remove any of the temporary negative effects, but the Mark of Kauket can only be removed via alter reality, miracle, limited wish or wish, or through the special favor of a good-aligned deity via the completion of a significant quest.

6-93: Sweating Antechamber

The chamber is sheathed in the same ancient, oily, pebbled stone as the rest of this area. What sets it apart is the fact that it 'sweats' an odorless, viscous, clear liquid. The sweat is slow, but steady, and pools along the cracked flagstones of the floor. The 'sweat' has no special properties, except as the substance used to manipulate the Stone Heads in 6-92.

6-94: Guardian Head

An archway leads to a 15'-tall extension of the hall of stone heads (6-92), where still one more head stares towards the west. Like the others, the head is humanoid but 'wrong', with fish-eyes, feather-gills, and an open mouth. Adding 'sweat' from 6-93 causes the same effects as any of the other stone heads (see 6-92). But the Lord of the Arena (6-85) has added further enchantments to this head. If anyone other than the Lord enters this chamber, the guardian head will start to shout loud imprecations in an unknown, harsh language (Heqeti): the words translate to something like 'Get away, you ever-cursed Monkey-Boys! This area is not for you!' The auditory effects last for a full turn and are 50% likely to alert the Lord (if he is present in areas 6-82 to 6-85).

6-95: Hall of Four Pillars

This extension of the Hall of Stone Heads is equally tall (30') but features four greasy, smoothed-granite pillars holding up the roof. The pillars radiate strongly of magic, and are part of the opening mechanism for the door to 6-95A. The door to 6-57 is kept locked, and is difficult to pick (-10%).

Attached to the north wall is a high-relief sculpture of humanoid face. The face is elongated and skinny, and features both a pair of small tusks and a pair of small curved horns (a rudishva). The face is 5' tall and detects strongly of magic. In its default state, the face's eyes and mouth are closed and its nostrils are flared. Touching the pillars (numbered from south to north) activates features of the rudishva face as follows:

- Pillar 1: reset (eyes and mouth closed, nostrils flared)
- Pillar 2: the mouth opens wide
- Pillar 3: the nostrils close up
- Pillar 4: the eyes open wide

The face serves as the door to 6-95A, but will only open if the pillars are touched in this order: 3-4-2 (nostrils, eyes, mouth). Immediately as this sequence is touched, the mouth of the Face dilates open to reveal a 5'-diameter circular opening into 6-95A. If any other sequence is created, the Guardian Head at 6-94 starts to yell its curses.

Secret Door (north): The opening to 6-95A is difficult to detect (1 in 8). It can only be opened by following the procedure above.

Secret Door (east, to 6-85A): The secret door is difficult (1 in 8) to detect from 6-95. It opens from by sliding a stone panel to one side.

6-95A: Rudishva Chamber

Beyond the rudishva face lies a gleaming chamber sheathed in white marble tiles. All corners are rounded, such that no 90-degree angles are present. In the center of the room three orange plasteel benches surround a 5'-diameter sunken spot in the floor; whatever once filled the basin is long gone.

Elevator: The westernmost section of the room (10'x20') functions as an elevator leading up some 1,050' to SL2-3. A comparably sized elevator 'shaft' is present in the ceiling above this area. On the south wall next to the elevator is an inlay of lapis, showing a 6"-diameter orb surrounded by three 2"-diameter orbs (the rudishva homeworld and its moons).

If the elevator is present here (50%), it appears as a slab of polished blue granite, with a similar lapis inlay incised in the center of the slab. The inlay shows a 1' orb with three 4" orbs around it. The elevator activates by stepping on (or placing something on) the inlay. Travelers will experience slight nausea as the elevator travels rapidly up to SL2-3. Those standing next to the elevator when it activates will hear a slight grinding and will then see the floor whoosh upward, carrying away any who were standing on it.

If the elevator is not present, the area appears as a rough patch of ordinary granite. Touching the inlay on the south wall will summon the elevator from SL2-3, although those standing on the rough granite must save vs breath weapons or be crushed to death by the returning elevator. There is a 1% per use (cumulative) that the elevator ceases to function

Teleport Node: To the east sits one of the nodes in the rudishva teleportation network. Like all such nodes, it is comprised of a 5'-diameter circle of silvery material inset into the floor, with a 10"x10" square of the same material affixed to the wall. The square has a rune etched into the silvery material.

T4: access to 5-92 (Translocation Hub)

Access to 6-95: On the south wall, a 5'-diameter circle has been cut out of the regular white marble. Beyond the circle are some carved bits of stone closed over the opening in a complex way (observant PCs may notice teeth and deduce that they are looking at the inside of a carved stone mouth). A 12"-long and ½"-wide slot is set in the lip of the circle. Inserting an appropriately-sized lever into the slot and pulling or pushing causes interior gears to open the stone face, thus allowing access to 6-95. So long as the lever is left in the slot, the face remains open; if it is removed, the face closes up after 1 turn.

6-96: The Arena Lord's Stash

This unadorned chamber has the usual pebbled and oily walls of ancient heqeti construction. The locked door is more recent, appearing as a standard Archontean-era door. The entrance to the chamber trapped with warding chain of glyphs (fire, 7 glyphs - see new spells); the glyphs are placed on the floor just inside the door. Piled haphazardly within are numerous large and bulky items salvaged by the Arena Lord over the centuries.

The hoard includes the following: a working mobile stone cutter (see new technological items); two large, but irreparably broken, rudishva machines, a Nutri-Vore 2000 and a Gnu-Coder 5000 (see new technological items for each); six depleted rudishva greater power supplies (see new technological items); a pair of 6'-tall, 4'-diameter clay urns incised with bipedal salamanders (ancient heqeti burial urns - worth 200 gp each, but weighing 150 lb each); two 4'-diameter kegs of Archontean brandy, only ¼ to ½ full (150 and 200 gp respectively); a brass, ivory, and colored glass orrery, standing 5' tall (250 gp); six petrified roc eggs (25 gp each); and a bizarre Archontean mechanical 'bank' depicting the impalement of a criminal and standing 4' tall (575 gp; to operate it, one deposits an ancient silver penny or ancient gold solidus (see Arden Vul items) into the executioner's pouch; the criminal is automatically lowered onto the impalement stake while his mouth opens in a silent scream). The mechanical bank holds 23 ancient silver pennies and 5 ancient gold solidi.

Due to the cave-ins in the surrounding areas (c.f. 6-97), it is unlikely that most of stored items will currently fit through the narrow tunnel leading to 6-92. Digging for 4-6 hours with hand tools, or 4-6 turns with the mobile stone cutter, will widen the tunnel sufficiently. Still, there is a 15% cumulative chance per hour (or fraction of an hour) that digging causes a serious cave-in, inflicting 4-40 HP of damage on the diggers and burying them under the rubble.

6-97: Corridor Fragment

This section of the old main corridor is still in relatively good shape, despite the cave-ins that surround it. At the western edge of the fragment is the mostly-buried body of an adventurer. Digging her out will produce some treasure, but has a 1 in 6 chance per turn of causing a further collapse (3-18 damage). It takes 2-4 turns to dig her out.

The narrow (3'x5') tunnel to the west is hard to spot amid all the rubble (3 in 8).

Treasure:

The Kauketiad (see Arden Vul books), an ancient rudishva description of the ziggurat of Kauket (areas 10-32 to 10-35); a bag of holding (150 cubic feet capacity) that contains 407 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items), 119 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items), a short sword +2, and a varumani skull with a thick wax candle melted onto it (15 sp).

6-98: Rubble-Filled Tunnel and Closet

The narrow access tunnel connecting 6-105 and 6-97 is filled with rubble and is currently impassable. It would take 12-18 hours of careful digging to clear the tunnel. Each hour of digging provokes a 1 in 6 chance of a cave-in that inflicts 3-18 HP damage on the digger(s) and adds 1-3 hours to the digging time.

Amazingly, a small closet still exists to the north of the rubble-filled tunnel. It is 7' tall, but only 4' square. Amid some rotted biological matter litter is a copper rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items).

6-99A: Stasis Bridge (North) and Fiery Dancer

A 3'-radius sphere of white marble is embedded in the granite at the end of this corridor; it is mirrored by an identical sphere some 30' away on the south side of the chasm. Rectangular indentations 6"x2" in size are visible in the marble. The two spheres form the bases for a rudishva stasis bridge. To activate the stasis bridge, one must place a silver rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items) in either indentation; this causes a 1'-wide band of buzzing silver energy to instantly appear, linking the two spheres. Although narrow, the stasis bridge is perfectly safe and remains for 2 turns after the silver rudishva identity plaque is removed.

Fifteen feet north of the white marble sphere a rudishva fiery force shield blocks the entire corridor. As with the fiery shield at 5-90A, the flame is broken only by an 8'-tall, 4'-wide oval in which a holographic figure stands on one leg. The figure has two legs, but six arms, many holding a different object (drum, pot of fire, lotus, and dagger; the other two hands hold nothing). If any living being approaches within 5', the six-armed figure starts to dance, beginning slowly but swiftly increasing its tempo. After 3 rounds, the whirling figure begins to call forth blobs of fire from the fiery force wall; these blobs hit unerringly for 1-6 damage each (with a chance to ignite combustibles).

The force wall can only be destroyed by casting disintegration on it. Should a being present an orange, silver, or yellow rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items) after the figure has begun to dance, the figure will dematerialize, allowing the holder and his/her friends to step through the oval opening. After a turn, the dancer rematerializes.

6-99B: Stasis Bridge (South)

For appearance and operation of the stasis bridge, see 6-99A.

The door to the east is a rudishva iris door, and can only be opened if an orange or silver rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items) is presented to the accompanying panel. Once opened, the door reveals a rudishva tunnel leading to 6-100).

6-100: Hangar with Hover Sled

Both doors to this hangar are rudishva iris doors that open only to orange or silver rudishva identity plaques (see new technological items). The opening to the chasm is concealed by a heavy curtain of vines. Noisy activity near these vines is 75% likely to attract the huge spiders that lair in the chokepoint leading to 6-101 (q.v.).

The hangar holds a rudishva hover sled salvaged by the Arena Lord in the years after the Archontean collapse. The chamber is of typical rudishva construction – white marble sheathing with no 90-degree angles. The Arena Lord has not used his sled in over 500 years, but it is still in fine working condition. He has stored a laser rifle with two lesser power supplies (see new technological items) in the sled.

6-101: Lesser Chasm

This chasm is connected to the Great Chasm by a very narrow passage that is currently jammed with cave vines and creepers. A nest of huge spiders has made its home near this chokepoint. They take particular interest in any attempting to access 6-100 via the passage on the west wall of the chasm.

Inhabitants:

1. 8 huge spiders: SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 180'; HD 2+2; HP 17, 16, 15, 14, 14, 13, 12, 11; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: surprise 1-5; poison (+1 to saves); can leap up to 30'.

6-102: A Pair of Huge – and Occupied - Seats

These chairs are nearly identical to those found at 6-63, as they are 10' wide, 15' tall, and 5' deep, with the seats 5' off the floor. Carved from oily soapstone, they emit a faint tinge of ancient evil. Two giant rudishva skeletons (see new monsters) inhabit the seats, a fact which keeps the nosy away from area 6-103. The Arena Lord (6-85) has not sent a cleanup detail this way in some time, and several corpses – including two goblins seemingly impaled with femur bones – are scattered around the hallway.

Secret Door (north): This secret door is normal to spot but only opens when an orange or silver rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items) is held before a 2" circle of glowing red light.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 semi-intelligent giant rudishva skeletons: SZ L; AL NE; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8+8; HP 68, 54; #AT 1 or 2; Dmg 3-18 (weapon) or 2-8/2-8 (bone throwing); MR 50%. Special attacks: bone throwing; sonic blast. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; half damage from sharp or edged weapons; half damage from fire; immune to sleep, charm, cold, poison, and paralysis.

Treasure:

Scattered among the corpses are 35 gp, 77 sp, a purse with 10 pieces of jade (worth 100 gp each), 2 potions of healing, and a scroll with false trap, haste, and fear.

6-103: Great Pillar

The Great Pillar, which begins on Level 5 (5-138), continues downward here. From this location it can be used to reach areas 5-138, 7-37 and 9-30. The three rudishva iris doors are of an unusual sort; they are not opened in the usual manner, by presenting a colored rudishva identity plaque. Instead, they require a special key to unlock. The lock is extremely complex (-40%) to pick. The troll thegn (7-30) and the Arena Lord (6-85) each possess a key. The keys are 1'-long, 3"-diameter, grey plasteel rods with a notched, 1"-tall flange on each end. The doors are also enchanted with the equivalent of a wizard lock cast at 12th level.

For a general description of the Great Pillar and how to navigate it, see 5-138. It should be noted that no bridge to the central shaft exists at this level. Furthermore, the pod of chasm cephalopods mentioned at 5-138 will certainly be attracted to light and noise at 6-103.

6-104: Lost Shrine to Rimmaq-Isfet

At the eastern end of the Hall of Stone Heads is a newly restored shrine to Rimmaq-Isfet. Given the cave-ins in this area, it had been lost for over a millennium, and only recently rediscovered by a heqeti exploration party. The worked areas feature cracked and buckled granite floor tiles, and pebbled, oily walls. To the east, one of the stone heads (see 6-92) marks the edge of a major cave-in; it can be manipulated in the same way as the other stone heads.

The shrine proper lies to the west, in front of the new tunnel leading out to the Chasm. It takes the form of a 15'-tall, 3'-wide oval pool of murky, viscous brown sludge. Four slim columns of polished basalt are placed around the pool, one on each side; these 4'-tall columns are set obliquely (not perpendicular to the floor). When the proper summoning rites have been performed, a worm of Qok (see new monsters) appears in the pool, eager to devour whatever sacrifices are forthcoming.

A party of heqeti is present here to guard the recovered shrine. They are led by a builder and include a chosen, a weaver, and three hoppers (see new monsters for all). They have captured three adventurers, who have been bound to the basalt columns as sacrifices to Rimmaq-Isfet. The heqeti hate non-heqeti with a passion, and attack interlopers without hesitation.

Two rounds into any combat the worm of Qok arrives in the pool. It attempts to swallow whatever prey is making the most noise nearby.

The tunnel leading west and south to the Chasm is of new construction, and shining with slime. A pair of ropes made of twisted vines is stapled to the entrance of this corridor; it runs close to the Chasm face and leads to 6-107. The heqeti use the ropes to move between 6-106 and 6-104. Using the ropes requires a successful roll under STR on 2d6.

The southeastern extension is freshly carved, and serves as the campground of the heqeti group. It contains some strange woven bags filled with dried fish and mushrooms, as well as a large bucket of slime.

This hall is a destination for the heqeti teleporter located at area 10-8.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 heqeti builder (see new monsters), 6th/6th-level fighter/cleric of Rimmaq-Isfet: SZ M; AL CE; AC 1; MV 90'; 120' swimming; HD 6; HP 46; #AT 1; Dmg 4-9 (short sword +2 of wounding). Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice. Possessions: heqeti mail armor (-2 to AC); short sword +2 of wounding, amulet of natural armor +2 (see new magic items). Spells: bless, command, cure light wounds, light, fear; chant, hold person (x2), silence 15' radius, speak with animals; dispel magic, curse.
2. 1 heqeti weaver (see new monsters), as a 5th-level magic user: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 120'; 90' swimming; HD 5; HP 16; #AT 1; Dmg 1-3 (darts). Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice. Possessions: brooch of shielding (56 HP left); 6 poisoned darts. Memorized spells: jump, magic missile, protection from good, sleep; invisibility, mirror image; lightning bolt. Spell book: dancing lights, detect magic, enlarge, jump, magic missile, protection from good, read magic, shield, sleep; darkness 15' radius, invisibility, knock, mirror image, ray of enfeeblement, strength; blink, dispel magic, gust of wind, lightning bolt, slow.
3. 1 heqeti chosen (see new monsters), as a 6th-level fighter: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60'; 150' swimming; HD 6; HP 39; #AT 2; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 1-6 (bite). Special attacks: hop; acid tongue (1-6 acid damage); +1 damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold and water/ice.
4. 3 heqeti hoppers (see new monsters), as 4th-level fighters: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60'; 150' swimming; HD 4; HP 28, 26, 24; #AT 2; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 1-6 (bite). Special attacks: hop; +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice.
5. 1 worm of Qok (see new monsters): SZ L; AL CE; AC 3; MV 60'; HD 12; HP 86; #AT 1; Dmg 2-24; MR 50%. Special attacks: swallow.
6. Odd of Freyr's Landing, 4th-level male Wisikin ranger: SZ M; AL CG; AC 10; MV 120'; HD 4; HP 21 (max 40); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 16, INT 13, WIS 14, DEX 11, CON 16, CHA 8. Possessions: none.
7. Helgi of Westholm, 3rd-level male Wisikin cleric of Bragi: SZ M; AL CG; AC 9; MV 120'; HD 3; HP 18; #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 16, INT 10, WIS 17, DEX 15, CON 10, CHA 15. Possessions: none. Spells: bless, create water, cure light wounds (x2); slow poison, speak with animals.
8. Kerrie Flaxseed, 5th-level female halfling thief: SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 5; HP 24; #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR

11, INT 14, WIS 15, DEX 18, CON 13, CHA 15. Thief skills: PP 65%, OL 62%, F/RT 50%, MS 60%, HS 56%, HN 25%, CW 75%, RL 20%. Possessions: none.

Treasure:

At the bottom of the shrine's pool is a fast-rotting leather sack filled with coins (235 sp, 456 gp, and 122 pp), bronze and rust rudishva identity plaques (see new technological items), and a gold Sortian eye (see new magic items). The builder wears amulet of natural armor +2 (see new magic items) and wields a short sword +2 of wounding. The weaver wears a brooch of shielding (56 HP left), and carries 6 poisoned darts (paralysis).

6-105: Wet Chamber

The heqeti exploration party that refurbished 6-106 placed several alarm and defense mechanisms in this chamber. The walls of the chamber have been newly coated with a white, paint-like slime that is eating away the rudishva-era murals underneath. Those murals are now unintelligible on all but the north wall, which shows a trio of spindly-limbed rudishva in orange jump suits pointing narrow sticks/wands at a mass of amphibian-oid creatures.

The northern part of this chamber is wet with a gray-green, nutrient slime, out of which grow 3 shriekers. Clinging to the ceiling is a large gray ooze. The shriekers are likely to draw the heqeti hoppers from 6-106.

The narrow tunnel leading east is filled with rubble and currently impassable (see 6-98).

Secret Door (west): This door is easy to locate (1 in 4), as it is newly constructed. It can only be opened by brute force, either a successful open doors check or a combined 30 STR (from a max of 2 characters).

Inhabitants:

1. 3 shriekers: SZ M; AL N; AC 7; MV 10'; HD 3; HP 19, 14, 13; #AT 0; Dmg nil. Special attacks: noise.
1. 1 gray ooze: SZ L; AL N; AC 8; MV 10'; HD 3+3; HP 23; #AT 1; Dmg 2-16. Special attacks: corrode metal. Special defenses: impervious to spells; immune to heat and cold.

6-106: Heqeti Transport Chamber

This was the first chamber on Level 6 that the resurgent heqeti refurbished. It provides access to several important heqeti locations deeper in the Halls. The walls of the chamber are coated with the slime that renders them, over time, both pebbled and greasy/oily to the touch. No light is present.

The stairs lead down in a tight spiral to 8-25 in the Nether Reaches, while the tunnel to the east is newly carved and still wet with slime. If the hoppers hear the shriekers in 6-105, they will investigate in 2 rounds.

Heqeti Teleport Wells:

The niches to the north contain heqeti teleport wells. Each well takes the form of a 7'-diameter circle of stone rising 3' above the floor. The well to the right is operative, and appears to contain nothing but inky blackness; objects tossed into it make no sound. One employs it by jumping into the well, emerging some seconds later at 10-24. The left well, however, is inoperative. It currently appears simply as a 10'-deep well with a carven image of an amphibian head on its bottom; the amphibian head has a 4"-diameter hole in the place of the mouth. Normally the well could be 'turned on' by dropping a tear of Kauket (see new magic items) into the appropriate mouth; the enchantments seem to be broken, as the heqeti have been unable to reactivate the well.

Secret Door (north): This door is normal to locate, and opens by sliding a stone panel upwards into a slot in the wall. Beyond the door a narrow corridor and 5' flight of stairs lead up to 6-51.

Secret Door (east, to 6-105): This door is easy to locate (1 in 4). It can only be opened by brute force, either a successful open doors check or a combined 30 STR (from a max of 2 characters).

Inhabitants:

1. 4 heqeti hoppers (see new monsters), as 4th-level fighters: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60', 150' swimming; HD 4; HP 28, 26, 24, 22; #AT 2; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 1-6 (bite). Special attacks: hop; +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice.

6-107: Pukel-mander

Another of the heqeti pukel-manders (see new magic items) squats in this chamber. A pile of bricks (one side carved to resemble natural stone) rests on either side of the pukel-mander; it is clear that a wall that shielded the pukel-mander from the Great Chasm has recently been destroyed. A pair of ropes made of vines is stapled to the southeast wall; they lead to the new tunnel leading to 6-104.

Secret Door (north): The secret door is normal to find. It opens by locating and depressing a mechanism hidden inside a ½"-diameter hole found on the nearby floor. It is freshly oiled and maintained.

6-108: Great Chasm

One of the iconic features of the Halls, this massive fissure extends through most of the dungeon levels and provides a sure, if difficult, means of vertical navigation of the Halls. The fissure is generally shaped like a triangular prism, with its apex about 50' above Level 2. The prism extends downward 1,600' through the Halls until it levels out at the floor of the chasm (9-1).

At this level the chasm is noisy with life and activity. The warmth given off by the Floating Garden (6-4) and the moisture from the waterfalls ensures abundant plant and insect life. Creepers, vines, lichen mats, and so forth line the walls. To the southeast, a nest of huge spiders has taken up residence in the bottleneck leading to the lesser chasm (6-101).

Secret Door (to 6-19A): The door is difficult to spot (1 in 8) from the chasm, and is locked. The lock is difficult to unlock (-20% to open locks).

Random encounters use the following table; roll every three turns, with a 1 in 6 chance for an encounter.

D100	Encounter
01-10	Party of NPC adventurers (select from NPC appendix)

11-15	1-3 carcass creepers: SZ L; AL N; AC 3 (head) or 7 (body); MV 120'; HD 3+1; HP 19, 18, 17; #AT 8; Dmg nil. Special attacks: paralysis
16-20	1 smoke mephit: SZ M; AL CE; AC 4; MV 120', 240' flying (Class B); HD 3; HP 19; #AT 2; Dmg 1-2/1-2. Special attacks: breath weapon; flame damage on death. Special: invisibility (1/day); dancing lights (1/day); gate 1-2 mephits (20% chance)
21-25	3-6 vapor rats: SZ S; AL C(N); AC 6 (or special); MV 120', 60' swimming, 10' floating; HD 2; HP 14, 12, 11, 10, 10, 8; #AT 1; Dmg 1-2. Special attacks: noxious fumes on death. Special: gaseous form
26-30	2-4 gargoyles: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 90', 150' flying (Class C); HD 4+4; HP 31, 28, 26, 25; #AT 4; Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-6/1-4. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit
31-35	1-3 imps: SZ S; AL LE; AC 2; MV 60', 180' flying (Class C); HD 2+2; HP 16, 14, 13; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4; MR 25%. Special attacks: poison. Special defenses: silver, or +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to fire, cold and electricity; save vs magic as 7 HD creatures. Special: polymorph self (to animal form); detect magic; detect good; detect magic; invisibility; regenerate 1 hp/round, suggestion 1/day
33-40	1-2 poltergeists: SZ M; AL LE; AC 10; MV 60'; HD 1-4 HP; HP 3, 2; #AT 0; Dmg special. Special attacks: throw object, a hit causes fear (throws as a 5 HD creature). Special defenses: invisible; silver, or +1 or better weapons to hit
41-45	Gimon, from 6-167 (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 7; MV 60', 150' flying (Class D); HD 6; HP 40; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-6; MR 25%. Special defenses: cannot be surprised; immune to cold
46-50	2-5 huge spiders: SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 180'; HD 2+2; HP 15, 15, 13, 12, 11; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: surprise 1-5; poison (+1 to saves); 30' leap
51-55	Either of the following: 1. 2 off-white, gluey heqeti slimes (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 5' creeping; HD 2; HP 15; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6; MR 15%. Special attacks: flesh-eating for 4-7 rounds. Special defenses: healed by electricity or lasers; slowed by cold 2. 2 maize-yellow, gluey heqeti slimes (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 15' pseudopod; HD 2; HP 14; #AT 1; Dmg special; MR 15%. Special attacks: produces gills on neck, victim must immerse in water 4 hrs/day. Special defenses: healed by electricity or lasers; slowed by cold
56-60	3 mantari: SZ S; AL NE; AC 9; MV 180' flying (Class C); HD 1+1; HP 8, 6, 6; #AT 1; Dmg special. Special attacks: sting (inflicts HP equal to 19-victim's CON); if a PC is hit on a 2 nd consecutive round, damage from the sting is quadrupled
61-65	Roll on Upper Zone table (see 2-63A)
66-70	Roll on Lower Zone table (see 7-3)

71-80	3-7 medium chasm cephalopods (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 5; MV 60' flying (Class A); HD 4; HP 29, 27, 26, 26, 25, 24, 24; #AT 5 (4 tentacles and a beak); Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-4/1-4/1-6; MR 25%. Special attacks: surprise on 1-4
81-85	1 ochre jelly: SZ M; AL N; AC 8; MV 30'; HD 6; HP 39; #AT 1; Dmg 3-12. Special defenses: lightning divides into half-sized creatures
86-90	1 assassin vine (see new monsters): SZ S (effective); AL N; AC 8 (main plant), 4 (tendrils); HD 8 (main plant); HP 53 (main plant), 5 (tendrils); #AT 24; Dmg special. Special attacks: drag; strangulation; digestion
91-95	1-2 bestial varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL NE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 50, 49; #AT 3; Dmg 3-6/3-6/3-10. Special defenses: regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision; immune to poison
96-100	Either of the following: 1. 1 basic dragonfly automaton of Kerbog Khan (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 4; MV 240' flying (Class A); HD 1+2; HP 8; #AT 0 Dmg n.a.; MR 25%. Special defenses: immune to cold and fire 2. 1 poison dragonfly automaton of Kerbog Khan (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 4; MV 240' flying (Class A); HD 1+2; HP 8; #AT 1; Dmg poison (death, or 1-3 turns paralyzation with 1-4 round slow on save); MR 25%. Special attacks: poison. Special defenses: immune to cold and fire

Chasm Color:

The GM might decide to play up the creepy and mysterious nature of the chasm. Roll every 3 turns, with a 1 in 6 chance for a chasm sound effect.

D8	Noise/Effect
1	Loud hissing
2	Moaning (of the wind?)
3	A roar
4	A shriek
5	A loud clap (a sharp, brief noise)
6	An echoing voice (undecipherable)
7	A flash of bright light for 3 second
8	Fluting, of a tuneless sort

6-109: Stone Corridor

This stone corridor leads from the Great Pillar to the residential pod of the Beacon. As indicated at 6-103, the rudishva iris door leading to the Pillar is unusual, as it is wizard locked (12th level) and requires a key to open. The corridor is dusty and absent signs of recent traffic. Sounds of crunching metal are audible from the west.

6-110: Slagged Corridor with Xorn

Here, where the corridor changes from stone to plasteel, a tremendous battle took place in antiquity. The plasteel walls and floor have been buckled and melted as if by the application of powerful energy. Indeed, burn and scorch marks are evident. The result is a 30'-deep pit of slagged plasteel. In the center of the pit are two xorn, happily munching on the metallic bounty.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 xorn: SZ M; AL N; AC -2; MV 90'; HD 7+7; HP 55, 49; #AT 4; Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-3/6-24. Special attacks: surprise on 1-5. Special defenses: immune to fire and cold; half damage from electricity; travel through stone.

6-111: Plasteel Corridor

Beyond the slagged cave-in, the corridor is clearly made of a different substance (plasteel) from the stone of 6-109. It is metallic and white, and conveys sound easily. The door to the residential pod is a rudishva iris door that opens upon presentation of a brown, sky blue, pale green, orange, pink, silver, or yellow rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items). The wall into which the doors opens is unusual, as it is formed of a grey version of the same metallic substance (although pitted with small indentations). Those rolling 3d6 under INT (+2 to roll) might notice that the door was added to the wall at some later point.

A 5'-diameter hole has been blasted through the plasteel on the south wall, just east of the door to 6-112. A rope hangs through the hole into area 6-112, held in place by a simple 'x' made of two 6' pieces of wood nailed together. GM Note: the Bad Neighbors (6-113) made the hole with their laser rifle and used the rope to shimmy down into 6-112.

6-112: Cavern with Residential Pod and Access to SL4-28

One of the residential pods from the Beacon dominates this large cavern. The pod was driven through the rock to this location upon the crash of the Beacon, but subsequent geological (and rudishva) activity has sealed up most of the path it took to this location. It is still possible to follow the burn hole upward 475' until one reaches SL4-28.

The grey plasteel residential pod is 40' tall and rests on several sets of sturdy tripod legs. The floor of the cavern has been levelled, but its walls remain rough rock. The cavern is warm due to the energy still pulsating from the pod; as a result, numerous vines, creepers, lichens, and molds have grown up here. Some of the creepers have begun to enshroud the Beacon itself, such that one can climb the vines from the wall and then make one's way onto the roof of the residential pod. Thanks to this natural environment, a pack of vicious subterranean lizards has taken up residence here; they normally hunt any prey that enters the region, using the vines and creepers adeptly to gain height and surprise.

The south end of the residential pod has been eaten away by some corrosive substance; an 8'x15' hole exists in the hull some 25' from the cavern floor.

GM Note: It was a sumuksu (see new monsters) that breached the hull in antiquity; that foul creature is still present in 6-121.

Inhabitants:

1. 7 subterranean lizards: SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 6; HP 45, 42, 39, 37, 36, 33, 32; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12. Special attacks: double damage on a natural roll to hit of 20.

6-112A: Heqeti Statue and Tunnel to Level 9 (area 9-39)

Squatting on this ledge overlooking the cavern is a heqeti statue. Lacking the potency of the ancient pukel-manders, it is a simple statue some 8' tall carved from soapstone; it shows a salamander-thing with powerful legs and a salamander head. Its over-sized eyes are disks of quartz (50 gp each). Behind the statue a tunnel wends its way downward to Level 9-39.

6-113: Residential Pod of the Beacon, Upper Level

The pod can be accessed either through the door to 6-111 or through the corroded hole leading to 6-112; both entrances lead to the upper level of the residential pod. All structural surfaces are white plasteel, although the walls also feature decorative swooshes and swirls in a variety of primary colors. A 3'-wide, sickening-brown smear of partly melted plasteel runs down the center of the hallway and up to each door (GM Note: the brown smear was produced by the sumuksu, which still resides in 6-121). The hallway is notably dirty and scattered with trash, lizard skins, and numerous bones (mostly from small animals).

As the nuclear reactor for this pod is still active (see 6-123), lighting is still operational throughout the residential pod. LED strips run along the ceilings of the corridors, and will spring to light in 30' segments if any living entity more than 25 lb in weight steps on the decking.

The oval central chamber of the pod contains two null-grav holes in the floor; these lead to the lower level. One simply steps into the hole, gives oneself a shove, and levitates downward to emerge, one segment later, at 6-118.

The Bad Neighbors, a party of evil NPC adventurers, lurk in the corridor just north of the central chamber. These villains acquired two laser rifles, which they used to create the hole in the corridor at 6-111 and to drive off the lizards of 6-112. They used a reduce spell (reverse of enlarge) to squeeze between the cavern wall of 6-112 and the bulkhead of the residential pod. If they hear intruders, they will prepare an ambush with spells and laser fire. Their base camp is located at 6-129.

Inhabitants:

Most of the Bad Neighbors, including the following: Klibo, Haldor, Idris One-Eye, Uriel Bean, Wotar the Puny, and Qid of Qon. For statistics, see the NPC appendix. Although the GM is free to decide which level range to use (low, middle or high), it is recommended they be mid or high level when encountered here

6-114: Crew Quarters (x8)

These eight chambers are roughly egg-shaped, with a lack of 90-degree angles. Doors are 6'-diameter rudishva iris doors, but all have been jammed in the 'open' position since antiquity. Entrance into any chamber causes a peaceful yellow light to illuminate from a hanging fixture. A 2'-wide smear of brown corrosion runs through each open door and into the center of each room; the smear is a product of the sumuksu in 6-121.

Each chamber contains a pair of wall-mounted bunk beds mounted over a desk, two wardrobes, and a vacuum sink; these are built into the wall. Each room also contains two orange hard-plastic chairs affixed to the floor (25% chance the adhesive has deteriorated and a chair is removable; chairs could be sold as curiosities for 25 gp each).

All of the original movable furnishings were stripped a very long time ago, and each chamber consequently contains little more than a jumble of trash, including desiccated vines, broken bits of plasteel, fragments of parchment, small bones, and bits of leather gear. Still, there may be something more unusual amid the litter. For each turn spent searching, there is a 1 in 4 chance of finding something interesting. In such a case, the following chart should be consulted. A maximum of two unusual items may be found per chamber, and a result cannot be repeated in different rooms.

D20	Item	Notes
1	Flute made from a polished femur
2	Silk purse with 35 gp
3	Cracked leather purse with 22 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items)
4	A marble finger broken off of a long-lost statue; a silver ring (25 sp) is jammed onto it
5	A pair of illuminated parchment folios describing the Reception of Light canticle from the Litany of Light	For the canticle, see 2-3; for the Litany of Light , see Arden Vul books appendix. Folios are worth 20 gp.

6	A troll thegn's Passport	See Arden Vul items
7	A straw doll (3" tall) of a goblin dressed in fancy robes with a needle for a sword	The doll belonged to Gribble (3-105B), the brother of King Weskenim (SL4-22). Weskenim will pay 45 gp for the nostalgia it brings
8	An empty rudishva lesser power supply (see new technological items), with the words "I need more of these!" written on it in Archontean	See new technological items
9	A rust, copper, bronze or brown rudishva identity plaque (25% chance for each)	See new technological items
10	A piece of ebony carved to resemble a heqeti hopper	See new monsters. The carving is worth 25 gp
11	A rudishva data crystal (see new technological items), marked with glyph for 'home'	If used in a GnuCoder 5000 (c.f. 5-97), it displays cheesy home movies of a rudishva crewman and his friends visiting strange alien worlds.
12	Two arrows +2
13	Copper torc with black boar engraved on it (25 sp)	The boar refers to the cult of Set (see Level 4)
14	Deck of playing cards with blue snake on reverse
15	A desiccated body, stripped of equipment: 1-4: human 5: goblin 6: varumani 7: dwarf 8: rudishva
16	Coil of silk rope, 50'
17	A soft-gel package of ancient rudishva brandy	50% it is spoiled, otherwise worth 250 gp
18	A necklace of human teeth strung on a piece of rawhide
19	A heqeti stone-tipped spear; the wooden shaft is carved with images of amphibian warriors	Worth 5 gp
20	A fragment of plasteel with the following note in Glyphik written on it: "The slime has breached the hull. We are doomed. The kaliyani are to blame. I will retreat to my quarters and die honorably."	Refers to the sumuksu (6-121) that compromised the living quarters. Also contains a hint as to the culpability of the kaliyani in the downfall of the rudishva.

6-115: Empty Officers' Quarters (x2)

These two rooms are in most respects larger versions of the crew quarters (6-114): they are clad in white plasteel and feature a wall-mounted bed and a desk, closet, and orange plastic chair all affixed to the floor. The doors to both chambers have been eaten open by some corrosive agent, leaving a jagged, roughly 4'-diameter entrance and a tell-tale brown smear of corrosive leading into each chamber (c.f. the sumuksu in 6-121).

As with areas 6-114, these chambers are littered with trash. Searching them is 50% likely per turn to turn up one of the items from the table provided at 6-114.

6-116: Officer's Quarters, Occupied

This chamber is identical in every way to 6-115 (complete with corroded 'door'), except that it has become the lair of an enormous boa constrictor. The floor of the chamber is littered with even more litter, of which a high percentage is bones. The boa perches on the wall-mounted bed and has a good chance of surprising any but the most cautious of explorers.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 giant constrictor snake: SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 6+1; HP 39; #AT 2; Dmg 1-4/2-8. Special attacks: constriction.

Treasure:

Among the bones are scattered 35 sp, 47 gp, and 14 pp.

6-117: Officer's Quarters, Intact

The rudishva iris door to this chamber is intact and only opens when a sky blue, silver, or yellow rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items) is presented. No smear of brown corrosion enters this chamber.

The basic features of the chamber are identical to those in 6-115, with a few significant exceptions. First, the desiccated corpse of Mol-Prev, the Beacon's Morale Officer, is swinging by a noose attached to the light fixture. Mol-Prev committed suicide in his chamber when the sumuksu (6-121) breached the hull and the heqeti assault commenced. Second, most of Mol-Prev's personal items are still present, forming a rich haul for the dedicated explorer.

Desk: The morale officer's desk contains two holo-cubes loaded with personal pictures of Mol-Prev in a variety of formal (full-dress uniform) and informal (carousing with mates) poses; one bracelet from a pair of communication bracelets (see new technological items; the other bracelet is found in SL6-55); a GnuCoder 3000 Data Recorder (see new technological items); and, in a drawer, three fully-charged lesser power supplies (see new technological items) and two blank data crystals for the GnuCoder. In a second drawer is a plastic box filled with twelve data-crystals (see new technological items); these could be viewed as full immersion experiences on the GnuCoder 5000 (see new technological items) or in holographic, two-dimensional mode on the GnuCoder 3000 found here. The titles of the data crystals are: Letters Home, Do Your Part!, Tibe-Riv's Primer of Primitive Cultures, the Faithful Manager, Proceedings Against Triv-Lok, Duty Awards, Stardate 6532, How to Talk with the Natives, Our New Home!, Personal Diary of Mol-Prev, Military Instructional Manual, Our Friends, the Kaliyani!, and Voyages of the Shining Beacon of Glorious Heaven (see Arden Vul books for all).

Closet: The closet contains four orange jumpsuits (sized for 7'-tall beings), a formal uniform (two piece, orange and blue, with a variety of mission stripes on the sleeves), a leather pouch with a brown, a sky blue, and a platinum rudishva identity plaques (see new technological items), and a rubberized party mask of a grinning varumani. In the pocket of the dress uniform is a note in Rudishva Glyphis, which reads: "Mol-Prev, Our GnuCoder 5000 has ceased operation. Can you fix it? Since ours is on the fritz, I believe that the machine in the Captain's Library, near the Cloister, is the only remaining location that can handle our viewing crystals. As it's quite inconvenient to travel there all the time, I hope you will consider a brief trip to the alchemical pits in order to repair my team's GnuCoder. It would be a shame, both for morale and for intelligence purposes, if all of our data crystals were to remain unwatchable. [signed] Psalor-Ki." GM Notes: this note provides a valuable hint about how rudishva data-crystals were originally used, as well as about the one location where an operable full-immersion machine might still exist (the library at 5-97). The note also points to the domain of Psalor-Ki, once the alchemical chief of the rudishva mission and now a deranged vivisectionist (5-66 to 5-75).

Treasure:

12 data-crystals; a note from Psalor-Ki; uniforms and varumani mask; brown, sky blue, and platinum rudishva identity plaques (see new technology); a GnuCoder 3000; a communications tablet; the holo-cubes (500 gp each); and the 3 lesser power supplies (see new technological items).

6-118: Residential Pod of the Beacon, Lower Level

For many centuries the entire lower level of the Residential Pod has been the lair of a horrendous sumuksu, also known as a spawn of Rimmaq-Isfet (see new monsters). Deriving energy from the nuclear generator in 6-123, where its primary protoplasm resides, the slime has used the LED lighting strips to pour its foul slime into every corner of the level. As a result, most surfaces are slimy and viscous. Worse than this simple tactile note is the fact that the greater slime has been able to generate subsidiary slimes that animate living or dead creatures; the greater slime drips these animating sub-slimes from the overhead lighting strips. The result is a small army of animated slime-zombies that will attempt to overwhelm intruders and add their bodies to the greater slime's forces. For unknown reasons, the greater slime has not been able to re-navigate the null-grav shaft, and is confined to the lower level of the residential pod.

Like all of the lower level, the central, oval area (6-118) is formed of white plasteel, without 90-degree angles. Two eye-shaped ovals of grey plasteel mark the spots where the null-grav shafts exist; to ascend to the upper level one enters one of the fields, kicks off, and arrives at 6-113 one segment later.

The original starkness of the chamber has been modified by the sumuksu's long habitation on this level. A 3'-wide smear of corroded brown plasteel leads from the western null-grav shaft north towards 6-120, and then west into 6-121. A score of smaller corrosive 'burns' mar the floor, and another score the wall; all are the product of the slime creature. Three 3'-diameter pools of quiescent purple slime dot the floor between the corpses of eight beings (see below). The LED strip lighting that runs through the center of the chamber (and hallways) is no longer the peaceful yellow of the upper level, but is rather a glistening, sickly purple, from which numerous drips seem about to fall. The entire area reeks of acid, decay, and corroded plastics.

Only 1-4 rounds after any enter the lower level, six slime zombies lumber to their feet/paws and attack. These slime zombies will be joined by fellows from 6-119 and 6-120 within 1-6 rounds.

A handful of heqeti slimes (of the flesh-animating sort) cling to the lighting strips, ready to drop down on any plausible host (whether it be an adventurer or a recently-slain slime zombie). There are 2-8 such heqeti slimes.

Inhabitants:

1. 6 heqeti slime zombies (see new monsters): SZ S(x2), M(x2) and L(x2); AL N; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 2(x2), 4(x2), 6(x2); HP 42, 39, 29, 27, 14, 10; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8. Special attacks: slime infestation. Special defenses: immune to electricity.
2. 2-8 heqeti slimes (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 5' (creeping); HD 2; HP 14, 13, 13, 12, 12, 11, 11, 10; #AT 1; Dmg special; MR 15%. Special attacks: flesh animating (covers flesh and kills victim in 4-7 rounds, then re-animates as a heqeti slime zombie - see new monsters); corrosive to metal, leather, and wood. Special defenses: healed by electricity or lasers; slowed by cold. These slimes vary in color and texture, although all are flesh animating; roll for types in new monster appendix.

6-119: Slime Covered Lounge

This lounge contains a number of orange plastic chairs, settees and sofas arranged in clumps around small tables. The north wall is a viewscreen, attuned to display the cavern outside (i.e., 6-112). All furniture is covered with a thin layer of sticky slime.

As befitted a 'quiet' place, the LED lighting strips are fewer in number, running only along the east and west walls. Still, those few drip slime like those in 6-118. Another six slime zombies are draped about the room, but are most likely to be encountered in 6-118 as they join any combat there in 1-6 rounds.

There is nothing of value in the lounge.

Inhabitants:

1. 6 heqeti slime zombies (see new monsters): SZ S(x2), M(x2) and L(x2); AL N; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 2(x2), 4(x2), 6(x2); HP 42, 39, 29, 27, 14, 10; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8. Special attacks: slime infestation. Special defenses: immune to electricity.
2. 2-8 heqeti slimes (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 5' (creeping); HD 2; HP 14, 13, 13, 12, 12, 11, 11, 10; #AT 1; Dmg special; MR 15%. Special attacks: flesh animating (covers flesh and kills victim in 4-7 rounds, then re-animates as a heqeti slime zombie - see new monsters); corrosive to metal, leather, and wood. Special defenses: healed by electricity or lasers; slowed by cold. These slimes vary in color and texture, although all are flesh animating; roll for types in new monster appendix.

6-120: Slime Covered Refectory

This area used to be the refectory for the inhabitants of this pod. In its center lies an oval counter some 4' tall that features 16 food stations (c.f. 5-109). A dozen stools set into the floor line the east and west walls. The north wall is a huge viewscreen that displays a live camera view of area 5-94 (the Cloister). The whole area is covered with a layer of sticky slime. The lighting strips also drip slime. Six heqeti slime zombies occupy the room, although they will be drawn into combat at 6-118 in 1-6 rounds.

Food Counter: Each of the sixteen stations has a silver oval inset into the counter and a curved yellow tube that extends from the counter and curves over the plate. A row of six colored buttons is set into the edge of the console in front of each station. Pressing the buttons causes the nozzle to spurt one of six varieties of high-protein, high-vitamin, food paste onto the silver 'plate' (or into a container placed on it). The paste is not very appetizing, but highly nutritious.

Inhabitants:

1. 6 heqeti slime zombies (see new monsters): SZ S(x2), M(x2) and L(x2); AL N; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 2(x2), 4(x2), 6(x2); HP 42, 39, 29, 27, 14, 10; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8. Special attacks: slime infestation. Special defenses: immune to electricity.
2. 2-8 heqeti slimes (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 5' (creeping); HD 2; HP 14, 13, 13, 12, 12, 11, 11, 10; #AT 1; Dmg special; MR 15%. Special attacks: flesh animating (covers flesh and kills victim in 4-7 rounds, then re-animates as a heqeti slime zombie - see new monsters); corrosive to metal, leather, and wood. Special defenses: healed by electricity or lasers; slowed by cold. These slimes vary in color and texture, although all are flesh animating; roll for types in new monster appendix.

Treasure:

The rudishva (6 HD) slime zombie dropped a sonic fence complete with fully charged lesser power supply (see new technological items) and a 1'-square jade box (250 gp) containing a sky blue rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items).

6-121: Slime Central! (aka Game Room)

This former game room has been the home of a sumuksu for close to three millennia, ever since it helped the heqeti breach the residence pod and overwhelm the crewmembers still living here. Both rudishva iris doors have been eaten open by the slime, leaving 5'-diameter holes as access points.

About a dozen lumps of mostly shapeless plasteel dot the chamber; these are the remains of former entertainment consoles corroded over the years by the slime creature. Four more slime zombies are scattered throughout the area, but the most impressive feature of the chamber is the 15'-diameter mound of mottled green-and-brown slime that sits half in and half outside the door to 6-123. This mound is the sumuksu! Clear tracks of purple and brown slime run along the overhead lighting strips to the slime creature.

The sumuksu will have been alerted to intruders by combat in 6-118, 6-119 or 6-120, and will be prepared to attack. Four randomly determined heqeti slimes (see new monsters) will be moving along the ceiling, and the sumuksu will use its pseudopods and engulfing abilities to maximum effect.

Game Machine: For whatever reason, one game machine is still operable, once the slime covering it has been scraped away. It is a version of the arcade claw: a rectangular table with clear plasteel top and a pair of joysticks to one side. One drops a token (an ancient gold solidus is perfectly sized for this) into the slot, manipulates the joysticks and attempts to seize a prize with a mechanical claw. A successful roll of 5d6 under DEX claims a prize. Three prizes remain to be claimed: a candy treat in a plastic sack that has disintegrated into powder, a repli-cube, and a communications bracelet (see new technological items for both). If reconstituted in liquid, the powder serves as a potion of clairvoyance, albeit with some trippy hallucinatory side-effects. The unit is AC 2 and possesses 50 hp; if destroyed by brute force, it discharges an electric blast worth 3-18 HP to any within 15'.

Lodged under one of the destroyed game tables is an adventurer's backpack that has escaped destruction. Another lucky survival is magic long sword lying against the south wall.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 sumuksu (see new monsters): SZ L; AL CE; AC 3; MV 30'; HD 10; HP 71; #AT 4; Dmg 2-8/2-8/2-8/2-8; MR 15%. Special attacks: engulf; create new slimes. Special defenses: corrode metal, wood, leather; half damage from cold and fire; immune to charm, hold, and all mind-based spells.
2. 1 burnt-orange, oily and thick heqeti slime (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 5' on carbon-based substances; HD 2; HP 13; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6; MR 15%. Special attacks: flesh-eating for 4-7 rounds; corrosive to metal, leather, and wood. Special defenses: healed by electricity or lasers; slowed by cold.
3. 1 rust colored, gluey heqeti slime (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 10' creeping; HD 2; HP 14; #AT 1; Dmg special; MR 15%. Special attacks: hallucinations for 7-12 hours; corrosive to leather. Special defenses: healed by electricity or lasers; slowed by cold.
4. 1 sickly green, melted butter-like heqeti slime (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 15' (pseudopods); HD 2; HP 12; #AT 1; Dmg special; MR 15%. Special attacks: spore-throwing (death in 3-18 days unless save at -1). Special defenses: healed by electricity or lasers; slowed by cold.
5. 1 pale lavender, watery heqeti slime (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 0'; HD 2; HP 12; #AT 1; Dmg special; MR 15%. Special attacks: exploding (6-36 in 30' radius). Special defenses: healed by electricity or lasers; slowed by cold.

Treasure:

Game unit: powdered potion of clairvoyance (with side effects); repli-cube; communications bracelet (see new technological items for the latter two objects)

Backpack: bag of holding (1,000 lb capacity); 10,000 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items), 1,250 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items), 320 ancient octagonal platinum coins (see Arden Vul items); six scrolls of magic user spells (monster summoning II, polymorph other, cloudkill, wall of force, anti-magic shell, spiritwrack).

Against the south wall: long sword +4 (defender)

6-122: Exercise Room and Last Stand

This exercise room was the site of the last stand of the rudishva crewmen surprised by the assault of the heqeti and the sumuksu.

The north lobe of the chamber has a set of rubberized mats and free weights. The southern lobe has eight treadmills built into the floor, facing a now-inoperable view-screen on the southeast wall. These areas have been colonized by the slime creature, and drip with slime, albeit of a less toxic kind. Four slime zombies – two heqeti hoppers and two rudishva crewmen – exist in each lobe of the chamber, although they are barred from entering the hallway by 6-124 (see below).

Both entrances to the 20'x10' hallway in front of the door to 6-124 are clouded by a slight yellowish vapor, as if from a light mist. The mist is harmless, however, and in fact provides a safe zone through which the heqeti slimes cannot penetrate. The vapor emanates from a thick, yellowish paste that has been painted in a continuous band along the walls, floor and ceiling of each entrance to this corridor. Within the corridor lie the desiccated corpses of eight rudishva crewmembers and one kaliyani.

A fair amount of rudishva gear can be found among the bodies. A plasteel bucket of quietly burbling yellow paste rests by their side; there is enough paste to cover a medium sized person or to paint a stripe 6" wide and 40' long.

GM Note: The yellow paste is a biological, anti-slime agent developed secretly by the kaliyani after they began to plan the 'great betrayal'; they did so as a means of protecting themselves from their new 'allies', the heqeti and their slimes. One of the few kaliyani who remained loyal to the rudishva, a certain Kesstak, stole a pot of this anti-slime material and hastened to the residential pod after the attack began. Kesstak and the remaining rudishva painted the substance on the walls of the corridor, thereby saving themselves from the slime creature. Sadly, Captain Leil-Jor ordered the teleporter in 6-124 to be shut down in order to avoid contamination, and Kesstak and the other rudishva gradually expired of thirst.

Inhabitants:

North lobe: 4 heqeti slime zombies (see new monsters): SZ M(x2) and L(x2); AL N; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 4(x2), 6(x2); HP 42, 39, 29, 27; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8. Special attacks: slime infestation. Special defenses: immune to electricity.

South lobe: 4 heqeti slime zombies (see new monsters): SZ M(x2) and L(x2); AL N; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 4(x2), 6(x2); HP 42, 39, 29, 27; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8. Special attacks: slime infestation. Special defenses: immune to electricity.

Treasure:

A laser rifle; two laser pistols; a sonic fence; a rust, a brown, and an orange rudishva identity plaque; a repli-cube; three rudishva lesser power supplies with 1, 3, and 2 charges respectively (see new technological items for all of the above), and the pail of anti-slime paste (see Arden Vul items).

If activated the repli-cube shows the following: 1) a desperate battle between orange jumpsuited rudishva and various slime zombies (still recognizable as rudishva themselves); 2) the arrival of a kaliyani through the door (to 6-124) and excited discussion about the contents of the pail; 3) the kaliyani and rudishva frantically painting the walls with a yellow paste from the pail; and 4) a testimonial from a single rudishva who goes on in detail about the extraordinary loyalty and heroism of Kesstak, 'regardless of what his egg-mates may have done elsewhere.' This repli-cube might be worth up to 1,000 gp to the kaliyani leader, Tsilliv (SL9-77), if, that is one can get her to negotiate.

6-123: Generator

A powerful nuclear-powered generator occupies most of this small closet; it has provided power to the residential pod since the rudishva days. The generator appears as a bank of plasteel dotted with dials, LED screens, and one keyboard. It is difficult to damage short of high-level magic; should some foolish parties actively seek to do so (through means the GM would need to determine), the generator will explode, inflicting 20d6 damage on all inside the pod or area 6-112 and effectively destroying the lower level of the pod. The sumuksu has been feeding off its energy for millennia.

6-124: Transport Closet

The rudishva iris door to this closet opens by touching the appropriate rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items) to a silver oval inset on the door; a sky blue, pale green, pink, orange, silver or yellow plaque suffices. Originally a supply closet, this chamber was refitted after the crash of the Beacon with a standard rudishva teleport node.

GM Note: Although this teleport node was disabled during the last days of the rudishva in Arden Vul, it was restored by Psalor-Ki years later.

Teleport Node:

T3: access to 5-92 (transport hall)

6-125: Warm Cavern

Unlike areas further west (6-136 to 6-142), this cave is warm and humid. A number of moderate sized mushrooms grow here (4' to 8'). Hidden behind the mushrooms is a ledge 15' up the south wall, with a tunnel leading south.

6-126: Dead Lizards

This rocky cave rises slightly towards the south. With the slight change in elevation comes a change in atmosphere: unlike the cold, dry northern tunnel (leading to 6-139), the southern portion is noticeably warmer and more humid. The corpses of three 15'-long subterranean lizards sprawl just before the entrance to the eastern tunnel. If examined, they show signs of intense and tightly focused energy (i.e., laser fire). GM Note: the adventurers in 6-113 killed these lizards as they approached the residential pod.

6-127: Corpsicles

Two completely frozen adventurers lie amid the stalagmites and stalactites of this cavern, slowly melting. The pair were slain in area 6-140 and dragged here by their friends, who left to seek assistance but never returned. The pair is completely encased in ice that is melting rapidly; they will be de-iced in 4-9 hours.

Treasure:

69 cp, 58 sp, 35 gp; long sword; scale mail; potion of heroism; staff; ring of protection +1.

6-128: Chasm Access

This unoccupied cave provides clear and easy access to the Great Chasm (6-108). It is sandy and relatively flat. A handful of jumbled skeletons – several humans, a halfling, a heqeti and a varumani – rest against the southwest wall (they have no valuables or gear). Obvious boot prints lead south. Those who spend more than 3 turns here are 50% likely to attract an encounter from the Great Chasm (middle levels table – see 6-108). Despite its inviting nature, those who camp here will automatically be visited by a pod of chasm cephalopods.

6-129: Base Camp

The NPC adventuring party known as the Bad Neighbors (see NPC appendix) has established its base camp in this humid but sandy cave. While most of the band is currently exploring area 6-113, three junior members have been deputed to guard the supplies. Four bearers crouch nervously around the fire. Four sacks of food and supplies, plus a barrel of fresh water, line the cave wall behind a small wood-fire fire. Cyricus is sitting on a small metal chest.

Inhabitants:

1. The following members of the Bad Neighbors are present here: Diomedes, Cyricus, and Gyrde. For statistics, see the NPC appendix; although the GM is free to decide which level range to use (low, middle or high), it is recommended they be mid or high level when encountered here.
2. 4 non-classed human bearers: SZ M; AL LN; AC 9; MV 120'; HD 1; HP 8, 6, 5, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger).

Treasure:

- Sack #1: enough dried food rations for 10 people for a week
Sack #2: trade goods, including 250 colored glass beads (25 sp total), 25 skeins of colored yarn (3 gp each), 12 bottles of red wine (25 gp each), 4 quivers with 12 crossbow bolts in each (25 sp each), and 20 sugary delicacies (5 sp each).
Sack #3: 10 10-lb silver ingots (25 gp each).
Sack #4: adventuring equipment, consisting of 5 coils of silk rope (50' each); 10 flasks of oil; 2 dozen spikes; 4 quivers with 20 arrows each; 4 quivers with 12 crossbow bolts each; 4 bundles of firewood; 2 grappling hooks; 12 pieces of chalk; a bag of marbles; 6 empty sacks; 4 leather scroll cases; 12 waterskins; some reading material, including the Courtship of Julius the Exarch, Great Villains of Archontos, part II: Kegfiller the Proedros, the Twelve Labors of Arden, and On Friends and Enemies (see Arden Vul books).
Gyrde's Spell Book: Erase, hold portal, magic missile, push, read magic, run, shield, sleep, unseen servant; bind, continual light, darkness 15' radius, detect invisibility, locate object, shatter; dispel magic, fireball, lightning bolt, suggestion; dig Metal chest (locked - poison needle trap): a sapphire Sortian eye (see new magic items); 6 deep blue spinels (500 gp each); 6 octagonal platinum coins; 2 doses of hunter's friend (see Arden Vul items); and a platinum decanter (475 gp).

6-130: Tomb of Lucius Cornelius Scriptor:

Antechamber

A permanent illusion conceals the entrance from the chasm to this room. The site is the antechamber to the tomb of Lucius Cornelius Scriptor, protonotarius (chief administrative officer) of the great archon, Marius Tricotor (6-154). The floor features a 15'x5' mosaic of an Archontean face, oriented such that the top of the head is by the door to 6-131. A permanent magic mouth activates if anyone steps on the mosaic. In addition to the doors, a dozen 4'-tall basalt pillars line the south and west walls. On the pillars sit life-sized, painted, marble busts of men and women.

Mosaic: The face mosaic is remarkably detailed, due to the fact that some of the tesserae have been shaped specially to fit their purpose. It depicts the lined face of a man in his 50's or 60's, with the typical Roman nose of the Archontean aristocracy, close-cropped hair, and several warts by his nose. The man is, in fact, Lucius Cornelius Scriptor. If any portion of the mosaic is touched, the image's lips move and utter the following phrase in Mithric (a permanent magic mouth spell): Hail, Friend! Lucius the scriptor, of the Cornelius clan, rests within, happily surrounded by the ghosts of his ancestors. Let his service to unconquered Marius Tricotor, archon and imperator, stand as a record to his fidelity and service to Archontos. Lucius is tired. Importune him no more. Rather, let him rest! The message is repeated every five rounds so long as some object touches the mosaic.

Busts: The painted marble busts are also quite lifelike. They depict seven men and five women of the Cornelius clan, all relatives of Lucius Scriptor. Anyone with deep knowledge of the history of the Archontean Empire might know that the Cornelian clan largely died out about 500 years ago, with its remaining members subsumed into the Krakteros clan (one of the Five Families - see World of Archontos appendix). A successful roll of 4d6 under INT produces this knowledge. The busts weigh about 5 lb each but will fetch 200 gp each from the Krakteros clan. Each bust has a name scratched into its bottom (e.g., Licinia Septima; Sixtus the Praetor; Junius the younger, Cornelia of the collegium, Mendax the Outcast, etc.).

Close inspection of the bust of Mendax the Outcast, however, reveals some anomalies. This bust is far more generic and stylized than the others, as it lacks the crows-feet, moles, small scars, and other features that render the remaining busts so lifelike. In fact, the bust of Mendax conceals a hidden compartment containing the key to the secret door leading to 6-133. Smashing the bust reveals the key. A dwarf has a 33% of noticing that the weight of the bust is 'off'; a thief who successfully detects traps on the bust will also learn that something is 'off' about the bust.

Doors: Both doors are stone and locked. As the keys are long gone, they will need to be forced or the locks picked.

Secret Door (south): The door is normal to detect. Its opening mechanism is an unusual x-shaped keyhole. Picking the lock is at -15% due to its complexity. The key is hidden inside the bust of Mendax the Outcast.

Treasure:

12 busts, 200 gp each to the Krakteros clan.

6-131: Trapped Corridor

This long, narrow corridor contains a deadly trap. The wooden door visible at the end of the corridor is a false door. If the false door is opened, a stone block drops from the ceiling by the real door to 6-130, completely blocking the corridor except for a 6" gap. Dwarves have a 60% to detect the trap if they look for it. Thieves have a +5% chance to identify the existence of a trap, although the chance to disarm it is at -10%. Those without means of moving several tons of stone (or other magical powers) are doomed to a slow death.

6-132: False Floor

The north, south, and west walls of this chamber are painted with vibrant scenes of common persons and soldiers bringing treasures and tributes before a seated man depicted on the east wall. The center of the floor appears to have another image of Lucius Cornelius, this time in paint (not mosaic, as in 6-130). Just east of the image of Lucius Cornelius is an 8'x3'x4' sarcophagus.

Trap (pit trap): The floor is actually an illusion covering a 30'-deep pit. The only part of the floor or furnishings that is 'real' is the 'sarcophagus', which is merely the carved tip of a 30'-tall pillar. Anyone falling into the pit takes 3-18 falling damage and must make a successful roll of 3d6 under DEX or take another 2-8 damage from sharpened pungi stakes affixed to the floor below. In addition to these perils, two hungry ghouls are marooned in the pit.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 ghouls: SZ M; AL CE; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 14, 12; #AT 3; Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-6. Special attacks: paralysis. Special defenses: immune to sleep and charm.

Treasure:

The corpse of a half-elf magic user/thief rests on the floor of the pit: the corpse wears boots of elvenkind and a belt pouch containing four pearls (100 gp each) and a scroll with extension I and fly. In addition, the corpse wears well-tooled gloves of red leather, one of which has a bag of holding (smallest capacity) sewn into its liner; the bag currently stores the corpse's spell book. Spell book: charm person, comprehend languages, detect magic, feather fall, floating disk, hold portal, jump, light, read magic, shield, shocking grasp, spider climb; audible glamor, darkness 15' radius, detect invisibility, invisibility, knock, levitate, mirror image, pyrotechnics, rope trick, strength, wizard lock; blink, dispel magic, fly, invisibility 10' radius, protection from normal missiles, slow; charm monster, extension I, fire trap, mnemonic enhancement, polymorph other, remove curse.

6-133: False Tomb of the Scriptor

A huge sarcophagus, 15' long by 5' wide by 5' tall, sits in the center of this room. Surrounding the sarcophagus are easily a dozen pieces of large, gilt furniture, some stacked on top of each other. By the west wall are a huge writing desk (6' tall, 8' wide) and a large scroll cabinet. Two large stone chests lie against the south side of the sarcophagus. Ten half-round stone warriors line the walls of the chamber; they take the form of Archontean legionaries. Between the statues the walls are painted with vibrant frescoes showing scenes of mundane Archontean administration in which one dark-haired man (Lucius Cornelius) is the dominant figure. The most interesting of these scenes is on the south wall, which shows Lucius Cornelius sitting next to a figure dressed in sumptuous purple robes with a gleaming gold circlet and numerous gaudy pieces of jewelry. The one inscription among the frescoes also occupies the south wall; it reads, in Mithric, “Thus the Scriptor aided the glorious Marius Tricotor in the acquisition and distribution of wealth.”

GM Notes: This chamber was designed to fool tomb robbers by offering some of the expected rewards for looting the Scriptor’s tomb while concealing the good stuff (and Lucius Cornelius’s actual body) elsewhere (6-135). Thus one can find some treasure here, but none of it is particularly valuable. The fresco is a red herring, which anyone who has learned anything about Marius Tricotor should recognize: Marius was a simple soldier first and always, and eschewed finery and acclaim.

Furniture: Among the pieces are four occasional tables, a delicate canopied bed, a set of campaigning furniture, and six dining chairs. All is gilt, and could be stripped for a total of 125 gp. All the furniture is purely ceremonial.

Writing Desk and Scroll Case: Both are formed of ivory-inlaid teakwood and are both functional and extremely valuable (1,500 gp and 300 gp respectively). The desk is bulky, but could be disassembled by anyone with carpentry training, or by anyone who rolls 4d6 under INT. The scroll case is less bulky, but can also be disassembled. Despite its size, there are only four scrolls in the case: a cursed scroll; the Lay of Marius Invictus, by Lucius Cornelius Scriptor (see Arden Vul books); a scroll of protection from possession; and a scroll containing the Secreta Secretorum (see Arden Vul books).

Sarcophagus: The stone cover is carved to depict Lucius Cornelius in elaborate ceremonial attire as an imperial official. The lid can be removed by making an open doors check. The sarcophagus inside appears to be solid gold studded with precious and semiprecious stones, but is really fool’s gold and colored glass (roll 3d6 under INT to notice). Inside the sarcophagus is a wrapped skeleton with a silver-and-ruby medallion of thought projection prominently displayed on its chest. Disturbing the mummy (such as by taking the medallion) causes a ghostly spirit to apparate near the defiler; this spirit will follow the PC relentlessly, moaning dire but wordless imprecations and generally making the PCs’ life miserable, until an exorcism spell is cast. The ghostly presence inflicts severe penalties to reaction rolls (-25%) and causes other social problems. The body is not that of Lucius Cornelius.

Chests: One contains 22,451 cp. The other contains 18,978 cp.

Secret Door (west wall of corridor): This door lies just outside the room proper, and is difficult to locate (1 in 8). It has no obvious opening mechanism, but can be shattered by applying 10 hp of damage to it.

6-134: Stone Golem

At the west end of this narrow chamber stands a stone golem, shaped to resemble an Archontean legionary. It activates once any living being has ventured 20’ west of the door to 6-133. It pursues intruders into 6-133 and 6-130.

Secret Door (south): The secret door to the true tomb of Lucius Cornelius is normal to find and can be opened by smashing it for 15 HP damage.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 stone golem: SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 60’; HD 14; HP 60; #AT 1; Dmg 3-24. Special attacks: slow once every other round. Special defenses: +2 or better weapons to hit; immune to most magic.

6-135: Tomb of Lucius Cornelius Scriptor

In contrast to the grandeur of the false tomb, the true tomb of Lucius Cornelius is spartan. A sarcophagus lies against the west wall, while a small bookshelf and an armor rack occupy the east wall. The south wall contains a fresco in which Lucius Cornelius, dressed in a simple white tunic and recognizable by the warts near his nose (see 6-130), stands next to Marius, himself dressed as a simple legionary, carrying a red-handled gladius. The inscription in Mithric reads: “Lucius and Marius. Friends in life, friends in death. In simplicity there is truth.”

Sarcophagus: It is undecorated save for the inscription “Lucius Cornelius, friend of Marius.” The lid can be removed with an open doors check. Inside is an urn that holds the ashes of Lucius Cornelius, as well as a carpet of 5,429 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items) and 1,387 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items). Amongst the coins are an ioun stone (pale lavender) and a helm of comprehend languages and read magic (in the form of a silver circlet).

Bookcase: The shelf contains five items: the Deeds of Marius Tricotor, by Lucius Cornelius Scriptor (see Arden Vul books); the Value of Mud, by Herodian the Blessed (see Arden Vul books); a tome of clear thought; Vul Speaks (see Arden Vul books); and a bifolium on which is carefully printed (and annotated with descriptions of the pertinent location) the addresses of two Tothian teleportation rings (see new magic items): the rings are those at 6-141 and 4-171.

Armor Rack: The rack contains a battered suit of Archontean legionary armor (the armor of Marius –see new magic items), plus a gladius in a simple wooden sheath. Anyone who has read the Deeds of Marius Tricotor will recognize the armor as that of Marius, from the scorch marks on the breastplate. The grip of the gladius is wrapped in red linen. It is the sword of Marius (see new magic items). Possession of the sword and the armor is necessary to activate certain effects in the tomb of Marius Tricotor (6-154).

Ashes of Lucius Cornelius: The ashes are contained in an alabaster urn (50 gp). They are not inherently valuable, but if disturbed (or scattered), the defiler will be struck with a geas to bring the bodies of ten heqeti to the tomb of Marius Tricotor (6-154).

6-136: Cold Crossroads

The walls of this crossroads chamber are thickly carved with bas-reliefs showing floral motifs. Interspersed among the flora are a dozen tall, skinny bipeds with small horns (rudishva). The chamber is quite cool (about 45-degrees F) and littered with numerous brittle and desiccated bits of discarded adventuring gear (useless).

The locked door to the south is rimmed with frost and is extremely cold to the touch (the key is held by Gorlen in 6-5). The varumani in 6-5 have nailed a sign to it that says (in Varumani), "Entrance Forbidden! This means you!"

Areas 6-137 to 6-142: Ice Chambers

The walls, floors and ceilings of most of the areas south of the troll lift (6-5) are bone cold and covered with nearly a foot of snow and ice (partial exceptions may be found in 6-141 and 6-142). Temperatures do not exceed 20 degrees F, and movement is halved due to the slippery conditions. The crunchy snow also renders silent movement difficult. Combat in these conditions incurs a penalty of -1 to all rolls to those standing on the ice. The frost mother bound to area 6-140 (see new monsters) is the source of these environmental conditions. Should she be slain, the region will gradually thaw; thawing takes 2-12 days (roll separately for each room). Once thawed, some of these areas will reveal formerly concealed information and objects (see below).

6-137: Frozen Lounge

Like the rest of the vicinity, this chamber is bone cold (20-degrees F) and covered in almost a foot of snow and ice. Numerous footprints dot the snow, and a rough path leads from the chamber to both 6-136 and 6-140.

Three frost ghouls (see new monsters), reanimated from the corpses of slain adventurers, reside here, waiting patiently for new victims to bring to the frost mother in 6-140 (see new monsters). Combat in 6-140 brings them at a lope on the round indicated at 6-140.

After the Ice has Thawed: The room contains no surviving wall decorations, although a beautiful shallow pool exists in the center. The surface of the pool (filled with melting ice) is inlaid with 350 semi-precious stones. These could be chipped out laboriously (5 stones per turn). A corpse of an Archontean legionary officer is now visible in the northwest corner.

Inhabitants:

1. 3 frost ghouls (see new monsters): SZ M; AL NE; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 3; HP 20, 18, 16; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8. Special attacks: cold aura. Special defenses: immune to cold; turned as wights.

Treasure:

Semi-precious stones (350), worth 10 gp each

Legionary: his corpse holds a suit of chain mail, an Archontean gladius, a potion of heroism and 35 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items) in a leather purse. Two parchment writs are also concealed in the purse. The seal of one has been broken, and it reads (in Mithric): "To kentarch Justinus, from Guivrel, advisor to the archon, Adrienic. Deliver this writ to the thief and deserter Pollitt. If possible, ensure his peaceful return to Adrienic's seat of governance by the Hall of Forty Pillars. If not possible, you are empowered to deal with him by any means possible." [GM Note: these are the legionary's orders; for Guivrel, see 5-11; for the Hall of Forty Pillars, see 5-6]. The second writ is still sealed, as Justinus was slain by Pollitt before he could deliver it. The contents of the second writ are identical to those contained on the writ found on Pollitt's body in 6-140.

On the frost ghouls: a silver cup with garnets (175 gp); a pouch filled with copper shavings (35 gp); and a long sword +1.

6-138: Frozen Campsite

This chamber is also covered with a foot of snow and ice. Aside from the three frost ghouls resident here, it is non-descript. Tracks made by the frost ghouls lead west to 6-140.

After the Ice has Thawed: The campsite of Pollitt the Sorcerer will be revealed here. Alongside an improvised fire ring and a small stack of firewood are a couple of saddlebags and the body of Hector, Pollitt's apprentice. Hector's throat has been cut.

Inhabitants:

1. 3 frost ghouls (see new monsters): SZ M; AL NE; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 3; HP 20, 18, 16; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8. Special attacks: cold aura. Special defenses: immune to cold; turned as wights.

Treasure:

Saddlebag #1: silk clothing in various ancient styles and wild colors (total worth 250 gp); a token of Arden (see Arden Vul items); a guard cap (see new magic items); and 5 empty iron scroll cases.

Saddlebag #2: a collection of 12 pieces of ancient pottery looted from the tombs in areas 5-18 to 5-24. Ten of the pieces are worth 125 gp each. One shows a key scene from the Tale of Larel One-Eye and the Legionary (see Arden Vul books), and is worth 250 gp. The last shows Marius the archon, dressed in the uniform of a common legionary, being named as one of the Twenty Worthies of Archontos by a grateful emperor (see Worthies of the Archontean Empire in World of Archontos appendix); it's worth 250 gp.

On Hector's body: a wand of frost with 4 charges; an iron key to area SL8-1; and a parchment draft of a letter that Hector never delivered. It has numerous erasures and lined out words, and reads (in Archontean): "Hector, humble scribe to Pollitt the Mighty, to the Lord Strategos Lankios, peace and friendship. Your lordship, I do not know how to best phrase what must be said in this missive, so I will eschew the usual pleasantries and move directly to the point. You cannot trust Guivrel. She has been corrupted by that ring, which my master Pollitt found in the Hall of Forty Pillars and gave to her as a gift. It is cursed! Cursed, I tell you! Pollitt knew it well, which is why he allowed it to pass from his hands to your Guivrel. The ring changes a person's thoughts, rendering the victim cruel, calculating, and enamored of treachery. I beg of you to force Guivrel to surrender the ring, and then to destroy it. Only then might she return to her usual good-natured self. Please take these words as they are intended: humble advice from a friend to a powerful lord." GM Note: this letter is a clue about the fate of Lankios, Guivrel and Kaitor (for all of whom see 5-11), as well as to the nature of Pollitt (6-140). Possession of the note might well help PCs make a judgment in 5-11. The ring in question is the heqeti ring (see new magic items) also found in area 5-11.

6-139: Frozen Storeroom

The chamber appears as yet another ice- and snow-filled room, albeit with over a dozen lumps and humps ranging from 2" to 5" in height. A 5'-diameter hole on the east wall leads to some natural tunnels and areas 6-125 and 6-127. Tracks in the snow lead from the hole to the hallway leading to 6-140; spatters of relatively fresh blood dot the snow along this path.

The humps are the snow-covered boxes, barrels, and kegs that occupied this former storeroom. Since they are all covered in 2-5" of snow and ice, however, they are mostly unrecognizable and serve mostly as impediments to movement.

Three more frost ghouls inhabit this chamber. They will lope to the aid of the frost mother if combat breaks out in 6-140.

After the Ice has Thawed: Once the snow is gone, a dozen wooden boxes, four very large barrels, and a dozen smaller kegs become visible. The liquids in the kegs and barrels are all potable, but quite unappealing and valueless (since they were frozen for a long time). Amongst the usable items found among the boxes are the following: a box of several hundred nails; a set of surveying instruments (50 gp); 2 50'-coils of rope (now weakened by the cold and wet; they will break if more than 50 lb weight placed on them); a set of 40 glass marbles; a set of ivory and jet Archontean chess figures (250 gp); and 12 iron spikes.

Inhabitants:

1. 3 frost ghouls (see new monsters): SZ M; AL NE; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 3; HP 20, 18, 16; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8. Special attacks: cold aura. Special defenses: immune to cold; turned as wights.

Treasure:

See above.

6-140: Chamber of the Frost Mother

This dark and frigid chamber is the source of the ice and cold that dominates the surrounding caves, for a terrible frost mother (see new monsters) is bound to this chamber. Although the entire room is covered with a foot of snow over several more inches of ice, it is still clear that a dais occupied the northwest corner, since the snow piles up dramatically in this region. Two simple stone columns carved in spiral patterns flank each side of the dais. Although it is just a lump under the snow and ice, a throne still sits at the center of the dais. Six corpses lie half-buried among the crunchy snow.

On a huge snow pile in the northwest of the room sits a slim woman whose visage, hair, clothing and other body parts lack any real pigment. She appears, in other words, as a woman carved of snow, albeit with coal black eyes. One round after anyone enters the chamber, the frost mother's mouth will slowly grow larger and wider, and she will belch forth a maelstrom of snow and ice (cone of cold). The corpses then rise as frost ghouls to defend their 'mother'. The frost mother cannot be reasoned with, and fights to the bitter end. She cannot leave the chamber, and regenerates lost hit points so long as she remains in its frigid environment (6 hp per hour as long as surrounded by snow and ice).

Background: The frost mother was summoned here by the Archontean sorcerer, Pollitt, during the ill-fated imperial effort to reclaim the halls 250 years ago; although the mage's frozen body has lain under the snow at the foot of the throne for centuries, the frost mother has been unable to return to the para-elemental plane of ice. Marooned here, and increasingly unstable, she has created an environment suited to her native plane and has populated it with the frost ghouls created from the corpses of those unfortunates who have died at her hands.

If combat in this chamber lasts longer than 3 rounds, additional frost ghouls will start arriving from 6-137, 6-138 and 6-139 to aid the frost mother. The inhabitants of 6-138 arrive on round 4; those of 6-139 on round 6; and those of 6-137 on round 8. If these frost ghouls have already been defeated, of course, no reinforcements are forthcoming.

After the ice has thawed: the frescoes on the walls are illegible, but a fine mosaic covering the floor is visible. It shows an authoritative-looking Archontean dressed in ordinary legionary attire and identified as "Marius" receiving the homage of a half-dozen warriors and officials, all dressed in glittering finery. In addition to the mosaic, the corpse of Pollitt the Summoner becomes visible, along with a carelessly incomplete summoning pentagram; his body has several valuables on it (see below).

Inhabitants:

1. 6 frost ghouls (see new monsters): SZ M; AL NE; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 3; HP 22, 20, 19, 18, 17, 16; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8. Special attacks: cold aura. Special defenses: immune to cold; turned as wights.
2. 1 frost mother (see new monsters): SZ M; AL NE; AC 2; MV 60'; HD 8; HP 59; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-4; MR 10%. Special attacks: cold aura; cone of cold (2/day); ice storm (2/day; sleet form); create ice ghouls. Special defenses: +2 or better weapons to hit; immune to cold; regenerate 1 HP/rd in cold environments.

Treasure:

Dropped by the frost ghouls: 39 sp, 58 gp, 23 pp; 13 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items), 3 octagonal platinum coins; an aquamarine (100 gp), a peridot (125 gp); a scroll of fireball; and a spear +2 with a fine ivory cap on its haft.

On Pollitt: a ring of protection +2; a jar of stone salve (with 3 doses); a mother-of-pearl box decorated with scenes from the tales of Larel One-Eye (375 gp; see Arden Vul books); a bowl of controlling water elementals; a dagger +2; a silver ankkey (see Arden Vul items); a pair (yellow and green) of glass activation squares (see Thothian teleportation rings in new magic items); a tightly wrapped and once-sealed parchment writ that reads (in Archontean) "Comrade Pollitt. Your hairy allies have been defeated. Return to the archon with the items you have stolen or face our wrath. [signed] Lankios." Pollitt's spell book has been mostly destroyed by the cold, and only the following leaves of the book are still legible: conjure elemental, dolor, monster summoning III, and geas.

GM Notes: The note indicates that Pollitt abandoned his post alongside Adrienic (see 5-18), the imperial archon sent 250 years ago to recover the halls, and that he stole the bowl of controlling water elementals. The note is from Lankios, who still lives as a hermit (1-6).

6-141: The Lady's Asylum

The ubiquitous snow and ice covers all surfaces of the eastern half of this 20'-tall chamber. To the west, however, things are different. The west wall is fully occupied by an enormous sculpture of a human female. Warmth radiates from her visage, such that all surfaces to the west of the entrance are free from snow and ice. Deeply cut inscriptions in Mithric fill the southwest and northwest walls. No frost ghouls are found here.

Head of the Lady: The 15'-tall granite head is carved in  $\frac{3}{4}$  (or perhaps  $\frac{5}{8}$ ) relief; that is, it is attached to the wall at the back. It takes the form of a young, attractive human female with an impressively tall hairdo. She smiles benignly, with slightly opened lips. The head has been painted in vibrant colors: olive skin, black hair, blue eyes, and a yellow necklace. GM Note: the head was originally carved as a likeness of Lady Clementia, wife of the great Marius, but over the years it came to represent the idealized virtues expected of (but rarely possessed by) all aristocratic women. Those virtues included mercy and protection to all.

The Lady's Asylum: An area extending in a 20' radius from the Lady's head constitutes a magical area of asylum. Here the cold and evil of the frost mother do not penetrate. In game terms the area should be considered as under a permanent protection from evil spell.

Inscriptions: The letters of the inscriptions on the northwest and southwest walls are 2' tall and filled; the gold could be pried out with some labor (2 hours) and might fetch 100 gp in total. Prying out the gold causes the protective features of the asylum to disappear, however.

The inscription on the northwest wall reads:

*Raised to the purple
Beside the unconquered one,
Her clemency echoes
The sweetness of her name*

The inscription on the southwest wall reads:

*Let those in need of mercy,
Those seeking a mother's breast,
Those in search of protection,
Beseech her benign goodwill*

Anyone who stands before the face of the Lady and orally beseeches her assistance is rewarded with a protection from evil spell. If one invoked Clementia by name, the spell lasts for an entire day. If one merely invokes 'the lady', it lasts for an hour. One may receive the Lady's blessing once per month.

After the Ice has Thawed: A set of 2"-tall paving stones arranged in a 6'-diameter ring lies hidden under the ice on the east side of the room. Inset into the floor next to the ring is a rectangle 48" long by 8" tall; the rectangle is divided into six interior compartments, each 8" square. Together these elements form a Thothian teleportation ring (see new magic items). To activate the ring, one must place six colored glass activation squares into the inset according to a sequence that matches the 'address' of the ring to which one wishes to travel. Once the squares are placed, a brief shimmer of energy is visible over the ring. At this point the user has 1 round to collect the squares and enter the ring, after which anyone in the ring is teleported without error to address indicated by that sequence of squares. If the glass activation squares are not collected and/or if the travelers do not possess a second set of them, they are likely to be stranded in the location to which they have just teleported. The address of this ring is as follows: BL-GR-BK-WH-RE-YE (see new magic items for explanation). None of the glass activation squares necessary to operate the circle are present, though.

6-142: Fountain of Marius

Like the rest of this area, the surfaces of this 20'-tall chamber are covered in inches of snow and ice, with the significant exception of an unusual fountain occupying the center of the chamber. The 'fountain' or pool is 30' long and 5' wide, and is bookended by two 20' statues. Around the fountain is a 3' space without snow or frost. Four 8'-tall statues of Archontean legionaries stand against the slanted walls of the chamber. Both fountain and statues detect as magic.

Fountain: Two 10'-tall statues of Archontean legionaries face each other across the 4'-tall, marble, trough that runs between them. Each legionary brandishes a gladius in one hand while holding an olifant-style drinking horn over the trough in the other. Cold, clear water pours from the horns to fill the trough. The legionaries are carved from basalt, and are quite lifelike, all the way from their archaic, but distinct, facial features, to their articulated splint mail, even down to their toe- and fingernails. The fountain's water acts as a potion of super-heroism and also cures 2-12 HP, but only if the imbibor first recites the oath of loyalty to the emperor (that oath is inscribed on the north wall, but is currently obscured by ice; see below). A PC can gain this benefit once per month. If a PC drinks without reciting the oath, the four stone statues on the diagonal walls lurch to life and attack; the liquid in such circumstances tastes bitter and conveys no benefits.

After the Ice has Thawed: A 2'-tall inscription in Mithric filled with gold (100 gp, 2 hours to pry out) occupies the north wall. It reads: Imperator! With faith and strength I uphold your authority and obey your rightful commands. Imperator! GM Note: reciting this oath in this chamber activates the beneficial effects of the fountain. Thawing the ice also reveals the secret door in the southeast wall (next to the stone legionary).

Secret Door (southeast): This door is invisible when the walls are covered with snow and ice. Once the room thaws, it can be detected normally, and opens by simply pushing a 4'-square panel inwards.

Inhabitants:

1. 4 stone legionaries, as Archontean animated constructs - spearmen (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 2; MV 60'; HD 6; HP 45, 40, 35, 33; #AT 1; Dmg 5-10; MR 25%. Special defenses: immune to elemental magic, poison, and mind-affecting spells; +1 or better weapons to hit; half damage from slashing or piercing weapons.

6-143: Spillway from the Drowned Canyon (SL6-25)

This passage was built allow overflow water from the dam at the east end of the Drowned Canyon (SL6-25) to pour into the Great Chasm (6-108). For most of its length the spillway is about 40' wide, 4' tall, and semicircular; its circular walls are natural stone, but the flat floor is smooth granite covered in numerous places by slippery moss. About 150' from the chasm, however, the spillway changes direction and narrows into a 10'-diameter tube; this tube extends to the edge of the chasm, where the water running through it forms a steady waterfall (6-6A). The pitch of the spillway in the wide sections is gentle, only about 20 degrees; the narrower section is steeper (25 degrees). A cautious party should have little trouble traversing the spillway. A breach in the roof of the spillway may be found about 50' west of the point where the narrow section widens out; the breach leads to a 5' tunnel that snakes north and west to area 6-159.

6-144: Stairs Down to SL13-27 (Lost Chambers of Arden)

The secret door in 6-142 leads to a narrow, 4'-wide passage and set of stairs that leads downward 350' to Sub-Level 13 (area SL13-27). Should explorers mount these stairs from below and attempt to open the secret door to 6-142 from the east side before that chamber has been thawed, they will find it impossible to open the door.

6-145: Shrine to Marius

This was the public shrine to the great archon, Marius Tricotor, to which the Archontes brought visitors. Although splendid, it lacks the potency of the real tomb (6-154). It also attempts to construct the viewer's perception of its subject by suggesting Marius was like any other Archontean aristocrat, consumed with desire for status and appropriate honor. Anyone who has seen other imagery devoted to Marius will recognize the discrepancy, as in those other schemes Marius is shown as a man of simplicity who eschewed formality and luxury.

The stone door is locked, but easy to pick (+5%). The chamber itself is 20' tall and barrel vaulted. A dais, 15' long, 10' wide and 5' tall, dominates the center of the room. Behind it is a 15' statue of Marius Tricotor and his adoring secretary, Lucius Cornelius. Six more 10' pieces of sculpture line the walls, each standing on a 2' semicircular dais. The floors and ceilings (aside from the statues) are painted imperial purple, while the statues are painted to resemble actual flesh, clothing, and equipment. The entire room detects of magic. If the chamber is entered and the door not shut, the inhabitants of 6-157 will come to investigate in 4 rounds.

Dais: The dais is 5' above the floor, and is reached by a short stair on the south end. The top is sheathed in blue marble. When any weight is put on the top of the dais, a permanent magic mouth spell is triggered. Speaking from the mouth of the central statue, it states in Mithric: "I am Marius Tricotor the Great. My nobility was recognized early in my career, and I received the promotions I deserved. Here, at Arden Vul, I received the homage of the troll thegn and devised and executed the plan that drove back the hopping hordes of the slimy dwellers in the dark. For this I received appropriate honors and ruled as archon, enjoying the friendship of the Emperor himself. I am truly worthy to be listed among the Twenty. My loyal friend, Lucius Cornelius, wrote the true account of my deeds and chose to entomb himself nearby." [GM Note: by 'the Twenty' he refers to the Worthies of the Archontean Empire - see World of Archontos appendix].

Central Statue: The main statue of Marius shows him standing with right arm outstretched to the side; kneeling next to him is a second man, looking up with awe at Marius and pointing at the archon. An inscription on the south side of the pediment reads in Mithric: "the Great Archon, Marius Tricotor." A smaller inscription on the east side "Lucius Cornelius, scribe and confidant, recipient of the relics of the great man." [GM Note: Lucius Cornelius's tomb is found at 6-135]

The archon is cloaked in a purple-trimmed white toga draped so as to leave the right shoulder bare. He wears a heavy gold circlet studded with red gems as well as three thick gold rings. Cradled in his left arm is a pair of fasces. Sheathed by his right side is a legionary gladius. Marius's visage is stylized and generic; his unlined, unblemished face smiles thinly as he looks to the south. Some of the objects attached to the statue are removable: the rings, the short sword, and the white toga; they are non-valuable, painted, sculptural items, and not treasure.

The statue of Lucius Cornelius is less elaborate, without removable garb. Still, the head of Lucius is hollow, and could be removed by twisting it slightly. Inside is a folded piece of parchment that reads (in Mithric): "Lucius Cornelius received the armor and sword of Marius Tricotor, and added them to his collection. Now they are gone, hidden in the scriptor's tomb, which that suspicious ingrate has concealed from all." [For Lucius Cornelius, see 6-135]

Flanking Sculptures: The six groupings that line the wall depict Marius in various stages of his career. Each is described below, but all share one feature: in each Marius and other figures appears in a highly idealized way. That is, the artistic representation is symbolic rather than realistic. From the southeast corner, the sculptural scenes depict:

1. Marius the Legionary: a young man, in the attire of a common legionary, standing at attention. GM Note: this is the only acknowledgement in a chamber devoted to mythmaking that Marius was actually a commoner who rose through the ranks.
2. Marius the Kentarch: wearing the uniform of a commander of 100 men, pointing with his javelin towards an imagined enemy.
3. Marius receiving the fealty of the troll thegn: Marius, dressed in ceremonial dress armor, extends his left hand, which a writhing, skinny varumani kisses humbly
4. Marius Invictus, trampling the heqeti: Marius, in ceremonial armor and holding a baton of office, steps on the neck of a heqeti hopper.
5. Marius the Archon: Marius, dressed in elaborate courtier's garb, renders judgment on a kneeling man
6. Marius and the Emperor: Marius bows slightly before the emperor, who places a hand of friendship on his shoulder. Both are dressed resplendently.

GM Note: The broad outline of Marius's career is accurately told here. It is the insistence on Marius's natural nobility and typically aristocratic predilection for deference and honor that deviates from reality.

Secret Door (ceiling): A circular door, about 10' in diameter, exists in the ceiling of the chamber. It is normal to detect, but hard to open, as it requires one to twist the gold ring on the central statue's hand. The door leads to a broad but low (4'-tall) passage to 6-146.

6-146: Ceiling Bolt Hole

This chamber is only 4' tall and is rough-carved from the rock. It provides one of the few navigable routes between the eastern portion of Level 6 and the tomb of Marius Tricotor (6-154). A 10'-diameter hole in the floor of this chamber leads to the ceiling of the corridor between 6-148 and 6-154. The tunnel to the south ends in a 10'-diameter circular hatch that opens into the ceiling of 6-145. A dry and cracked leather haversack lies on the floor of the chamber; in it is a coil of silk rope and an ancient terra cotta plaque on which was stamped an image of the archon, Marius Tricotor (15 gp).

6-147: Sub-Archon's Quarters

An imperial sub-archon oversaw an official honor guard for Marius Tricotor's tomb (6-154) from this location. The sub-archon and his men swore binding oaths to protect the tomb with their lives. Due to this oath, the last unit of these guards remains at its post.

The door is locked and the one key lies within; the lock is easy (+10%) to pick.

The chamber is painted sky blue, with green laurel wreaths (an imperial symbol) at 3' intervals. A 5'-tall writing desk stands at the center of the room. To the west is a wooden screen, behind which is a cot, wardrobe, and armor stand. To the east is a long, rectangular table on which are tacked some maps. A narrow table on the north wall holds some symbolic objects.

The wardrobe holds some badly deteriorated wool and linen clothing, plus a pair of still usable yellow silk surcoats with the letters MI embroidered on front and back (GM Note: MI stands for Marius Invictus). The armor stand carries a special set of yellow-died legionary banded mail +1, a short sword +2, and a bundle of 4 javelins of piercing. The maps on the table include the following: 1) a map of Burdock's Valley; 2) a map of the city of Arden Vul; and 3) a map of the environs of the Tomb of Marius Tricotor (areas 6-5, 6-136 to 6-142, and 6-145 to 6-148).

Treasure:

See above.

6-148: Barracks Chamber

Thanks to their eternal oath, the elite guard still stands watch in the guardsmen's former barracks. The walls are sky-blue, with yellow helmets painted over the blue every 3'. Since the surviving guardsmen do not need to sleep, they have pushed the twelve rotting wooden bunkbeds to the south.

The eight surviving guards and their sub-archon commander are now oathbound knights (see new monsters). They stand quietly waiting to repel any intruder who desecrates the tomb of Marius Tricotor (6-154) or the areas of east of the tomb. They are dressed in yellow-died banded mail and tattered yellow surcoats with the MI insignia (see 6-147). They confront anyone who opens the door from 6-154 or who descends from the hole to 6-146. Such persons will have only a couple of rounds to convince the oathbound knights (in Mithric!) that their purpose does not involve disrespect, plunder, or desecration. The oathbound knights will not attack anyone who presents a true artifact of Marius (e.g., his sword or armor from 6-135). If, somehow, the talismans of their oaths are destroyed before the knights are encountered (see 6-149), the knights will have crumbled into dust and no encounter will occur.

Inhabitants:

1. 8 oathbound knights (see new monsters): SZ M; AL LN; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 6; HP 47, 44, 43, 42, 41, 40, 39, 37; #AT 3/2; Dmg 3-9 (broadsword), 3-6 (horseman's flail), 1-4 (light crossbow); MR 25%. Special attacks: +1 to hit, +1 damage. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit. Possessions: chain mail; broadsword; light flail; light crossbow, 20 quarrels.
2. Publius Lanlius, the oathbound knight-commander (see new monsters): SZ M; AL LN; AC 3; MV 90'; HD 9; HP 63; #AT 3/2; Dmg 5-12 (long sword +3); MR 25%. Special attacks: +1 to hit, +1 damage. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit. Possessions: chain mail +2; long sword +3.

Treasure:

Among the debris of the bunk beds is a rotting chest that contains 1,311 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items), a scroll of extension II, and a wand of frost (12 charges). The oathbound commander holds the key to 6-149 and wears the ring of Marius (see new magic items); he also holds a folded piece of parchment on which are written the words black-red-yellow-green-blue-white (the address of the Thothian teleportation ring - see new magic items - at SL4-49).

6-149: Repository of the Oaths

Secret Door: The door from the hallway is normal to find. The door is locked, and the key held by the oathbound commander (6-148). It can be picked (-5%).

This long room has a barrel-vaulted, 20'-tall ceiling. Its ceiling and walls are painted sunflower yellow. Words in Mithric are painted over the yellow on the east and west walls in bold black paint: Discipline, Order, Loyalty, Fidelity, and Service. Stone benches fill the northern two-thirds of the chamber. At the south end is an obsidian shrine.

The shrine rests on a dais 2' tall, 10' wide, and 8' across. The north edge of the platform contains an apparently solid 5'-square cube of obsidian (see below). Behind the cube, at the rear of the platform is a half pillar, 3' in diameter and 5' high. On top of it is a finely carved, hyper-realistic marble bust of Marius Tricotor. Draped over the bust or attached to it by bits of string are nine small talismans.

Talismans of the Knights: These objects are the physical manifestations of the oaths sworn by the oathbound knights (6-148). If a talisman is destroyed, the corresponding knight will crumble into dust. The talismans for the ordinary knights are: a lock of hair; a cameo with a man's head; a small knife; a scrap of parchment with the name "Gnaeus" on it; a terra cotta icon of Marius Tricotor; a cheap necklace made of copper and glass (5 gp); a small vial with dried blood; and another small vial with a desiccated human finger (pinky) in it. The oathbound commander's talisman is a gold amulet set with carnelians (375 gp).

Obsidian Cube with Marius's Heart: Each of the five visible sides of the cube carries an identical message, inscribed into the stone and filled with silver. The inscription reads, in Mithric: "The Archon's Heart is Worthy of Service." In addition, the top face of the cube bears an indentation  $\frac{3}{4}$ " in diameter and similarly coated with silver. The indentation is too large for an ancient silver penny, but is just the right size for a signet ring. If the ring of Marius (see new magic items, currently borne by the oathbound commander in 6-148) is pressed into the indentation, the obsidian cube will slide back, revealing a 1'-square hole in the platform. Inside the hole is the mummified heart of Marius, wrapped in linen. A parchment tag is attached to the linen that reads (in Mithric): "This is the Heart of Marius Tricotor, taken from his body when the archon died."

6-150: Empty Guardpost

A few benches, a table, and some ancient pewter mugs are all that remain of this guard post. A faded fresco on the south wall shows a yellow-clad legionary under the Mithric motto: "By our oath we show our service to Emperor and Archon!"

6-151: Robing Room

This 15'-tall room is painted bright yellow, and is studded with pegs suitable for hanging clothes. A few shreds of yellow silk hang from a few of the pegs. Over the exit to the south is a faded slogan in yellow paint (in Mithric): "Fidelity to our Lord Marius."

GM Note: Imperial custodians of the tomb of Marius Tricotor always wore a yellow surcoat with the initials "MI" (Marius Invictus); those arriving from what are now the Flooded Vaults (Sub-Level 7) stopped here to dress.

6-152: Stairs to Surface (AV-27)

This narrow (5'-wide), circular staircase wends its way upward some 1,200' until it debouches in a secret door in the basement of the Carrion Tower of the Donjon in the Ruined City (AV-27).

6-153: Stairs and Corridor to SL7-6

A set of stairs descends briefly before turning into a corridor that leads west. The corridor then ascends 250' over many short staircases before connecting to the Flooded Vaults (SL7-6).

6-154: Tomb of Marius Tricotor

One of the legendary lost locations of the Halls, this site has been isolated from most traffic for a millennium since the passage to 6-157 collapsed.

The chamber is 30' tall and barrel vaulted. Eight statues (10' tall) of legionaries stand along the east and west walls. To the south a 10'-wide passage leads south, only to end in a cave-in. At the north edge of the chamber is a colossal carved head of Marius Tricotor; it is 15' tall, 6' in diameter and mounted on a 5'-square pedestal. The base of the pedestal carries an inscription in Mithric. In a line down the center of the room are four basalt platforms, each 5' long, 10' wide, and 3' tall. Each platform has a different sculptural program and inscription.

Head of Marius: The head is carved in elaborate detail, down to the last hair, wrinkle, and blemish. It shows a man of late middle age, with close cropped hair, a broken Roman nose, pursed lips, and sharp, penetrating eyes. The head is made of marble, with basalt chips for eyes. Those who approach within 5' of the head are greeted with a permanent magic mouth spell that intones in Mithric: "Only those who know me well may summon me to their side. Restore those objects that symbolize my nature, and I shall return to aid you in your need. Choose poorly, and your ignorance and lack of faith shall be punished!" Should the four objects required of the four basalt platforms be recovered and restored to their proper locations, the spirit of Marius Tricotor will return to inhabit his head for 4-6 days (see below).

Basalt Platforms: Each of the platforms is devoted to one of the virtues believed to embody Marius; the name of that virtue is inscribed in gold filling (in Mithric) on each side of each platform. On top of each platform is an 8'-tall, marble half-statue of Marius: torso, arms, hands, and head. Each of these 'statues' has indentations in the same locations: skull (10" diameter), eyes (4" ovals), and chest (12" diameter). The differences between the platforms and half-statues are as follows:

No.	Virtue	Distinctiveness	Solution
1	Fidelity	The statues' arms are outstretched and the fingers of both its hands are open and outstretched	Roll 4d6 under INT to notice wear on the right ring finger. Place the ring of Marius (currently in 6-148) on any of Marius's fingers.
2	Protection	Both arms are placed such that the hands are by the torso's waist. The fingers of both hands are closed as if to grip something	Those who wear armor can roll 4d6 under INT to notice wear marks where the straps to attach armor should be. Attach the armor of Marius (6-135) on the torso.
3	Vengeance	The torso is slightly swiveled and the left arm is thrust forward. The fingers of both hands are closed as if to grip something	Any sword-wielding PC may roll 4d6 under INT to detect wear marks in the right hand. Place the sword of Marius (6-135) in the left hand
4	Nobility	Both arms are folded behind the torso's back.	Place the heart of Marius (6-149) in the indentation in the torso's chest

If any incorrect item (such as any of the 'false' items from 6-145) is placed on any of the half-statues, two of the stone legionaries (two per wrong object) will animate and attack.

Spirit of Marius Tricotor: If all four of the correct symbolic objects are placed on the appropriate torsos, the spirit of Marius will return to possess the colossal head. It speaks in Mithric through the head's mouth, starting with the following: "I'm here. Why have you ripped me across the veil?" The spirit eschews the aristocratic tones favored by the previous magic mouth, and speaks Mithric in a common, even lower class, accent. Marius is blunt and direct, caring nothing for niceties or circumlocutions. If treated politely, he is a font of potentially useful information and wisdom.

He can describe in detail the campaigns against the heqeti, as well as the characteristics and powers of the various heqeti types. He has spirit-knowledge of the locations of the iconic objects attributed to him in the Lay of Marius Invictus (see Arden Vul books): the ancient sky sled (the remaining ones are at 6-4, 6-100, and 7-36); the iron circlet of Ghanor (3-127A); the bone ring of Jagri-Naz (5-74); the ebon spear (SL5-13B); and the tablet of the Beacon (9-107). He can also provide directions to these locations, so long as the route passes through Archontean-era construction. He can describe the original functions and layout of the Archontean areas (Levels 1, 2, 3, 4, parts of 5, parts of 6, and Sub-Levels 2, 3, 4, 6 and 7).

If asked about treasure, and if convinced the treasure will be put to lawful purposes, he will reveal a hidden catch on the fourth platform that causes the platform to slide to one side, revealing a short flight of stairs to a treasure vault. Marius's spirit remains for 4-6 days. At the end of that period, Marius cuts short any conversation with the following words: "Comrades, I've got to go. Carry yourself with honor and dignity, and always press the bastards when they least expect it. Look for me again after the full moon." He can be re-summoned after two months have passed.

Inhabitants:

1. 8 stone legionaries, as Archontean animated constructs – spearmen (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 2; MV 60; HD 6; HP 45, 42, 40, 39, 38, 37, 35, 33; #AT 1; Dmg 5-10; MR 25%. Special defenses: immune to elemental magic, poison, and mind-affecting spells; +1 or better weapons to hit; half damage from slashing or piercing weapons.

Treasure:

In the hidden treasure vault: 10 5-lb bars of platinum (1,250 gp each); an urn with 2,347 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items); a set of gold and emerald jewelry (necklace, earrings, and ring; total 5,000 gp); a suit of imperial field plate (see Arden Vul items); a rod of lordly might; a vorpai blade (long sword); a description of the troll thegn's court (7-72 to 7-77) and his submission to Marius Tricotor.

6-155: Lawful Propaganda Chamber

This former meditation chamber has seen hard times. All furnishing have been stripped. All that remains are a set of slogans carved into the wall above now-destroyed frescoes. Six slogans occupy the walls, one per 10' section (except the section with the secret door). They read, in Mithric:

1. Discipline makes one strong
2. Loyalty is its own reward
3. Death before dishonor
4. Order breeds happiness
5. Good lordship starts with good discipline
6. The Wise servant obeys without question

GM Note: These slogans obviously privilege principles of law over chaos. Although intended for general purposes by the Imperial authorities, the slogans might also provide hints as to the alignment tendencies of the magic pool in 6-156.

Secret Door (north): This door is easy to find (1 in 4). It opens by pushing the 'w' of the word 'wise' in the sixth slogan. Clever (or lucky) searching might detect wear around that letter.

6-156: Magic Pool

The stairs and corridor lead to a pleasant, hemispherical chamber, whose walls and floor are tiled in pale green tiles. A three-tiered fountain occupies almost all of the room. It is filled with bright yellow liquid that cascades invitingly down the fountain.

The fountain is a magic pool. Drinking a draught provokes a roll on the following table; the results differ according to the drinker's alignment:

D6	LG, LE, LN	NG, CG	CN, True N	NE, CE
1	Cures 4-24 HP	Cures 2-12 HP	Cures 1-6 HP	Inflicts 2-12 damage
2	Restoration (at 15 th level)	Remove Curse	Inflicts 1-6 damage	Inflicts 1-6 damage
3	Prof. From Chaos, 10' radius, 6 hours	Shield for 3-6 turns	Infravision for 1-6 turns	Penalty of 2 to AC for 1-3 days
4	+1 STR (once only)	+1 STR for 1-4 days	Glow brightly for 1-6 days	-1 STR (50% permanent, 50% for 1-4 days)
5	+1 CON (once only)	+1 CON for 1-4 days	+1 to hit for 3-36 turns	-1 STRv(50% permanent, 50% for 1-4 days)
6	Per potion of super-heroism for 2 days	Per potion of heroism, for 2 days	-1 to hit for 3-36 turns	Opposite of potion of heroism (reducing levels) for 2 days; min. is level 1

6-157: Antechamber

This 20'-tall room was the antechamber through which those visiting the tomb of Marius Tricotor (6-154) once passed. Four 12'-tall, half-round, granite carvings of legionaries are attached to the east and west walls, one each on either side of the east-west corridors. The center of the room holds a 4'-tall, triangular dais made of striated marble. On the center of the dais stands the spectral form of a legionary. The legionary points to the north and, whenever the room is entered, declaims slowly and loudly in Mithric "Seek the great Marius Tricotor down that corridor. Be prepared to offer him fealty, and he in turn will defend and protect you." Only a dispel magic spell cast at a very high level (12 or above) will cancel this repeating magical effect. Recent smears of blood are visible on the floor around the dais (these are the remains of the adventurers being devoured in 6-159).

The 10'-wide passage to the north is impassable due to an ancient cave-in. As a result, the only way to access the tomb of Marius Tricotor (6-154) is to locate the secret door in the ceiling of 6-145.

Two bestial varumani are growling and pawing at the door to the south. They attack as soon as noise or light is visible in this room. Combat lasting more than four rounds eventually draws the other varumani in 6-159 and 6-160 to the fray; they arrive on round 7.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 bestial varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL NE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 58, 49; #AT 3; Dmg 3-6/3-6/3-10. Special defenses: regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision; immune to poison.

6-158: Terrified Adventurer

Lepp the thief hides in this former storeroom from the savage varumani who slew his comrades. He has spiked the door shut, and is at wit's end on how to escape.

The chamber has built-in stone shelving, but almost everything was looted from it long ago. All that remains are a stone jar of pickled beets on a top shelf.

Inhabitants:

1. Lepp, 5th-level male Wiskin thief: SZ M; AL NE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 5; HP 8 (max 23); #AT 1; Dmg 3-6 (dagger +2), 1-6 (short sword). Abilities: STR 13, INT 15, WIS 9, DEX 17, CON 9, CHA 10. Thief skills: PP 55%, OL 52%, F/RT 40%, MS 45%, HS 36%, HN 20%, CW 90%, RL 25%. Possessions: leather armor; short sword; dagger +2; a potion of levitation; a purse with 129 gp, 57 sp, and a troll thegn's passport (see Arden Vul items).

6-159: Renegade Varumani

A band of eight varumani who abandoned their fealty to the troll thegn makes its lair here. Seven of them are bestial, semi-intelligent varumani, but they are led by a lesser varumani outcast named Bothig. The reek of their lair is obvious from 30' down the corridor.

The chamber was once a pleasant, 20'-tall barrel-vaulted audience hall, but a half decade of inhabitation by Bothig and his primitive followers has ensured that any remnants of Mithric imagery was destroyed. Two piles of soft-ish trash serve as the trolls' nests. The varumani are perpetually hungry, as they mostly survive on small vermin from the caves north of 6-160. They eagerly chase any intruders up to 6-136, but won't enter the Troll Lift (6-5) or the domain of the frost mother (south of 6-136).

Bothig is capable of crude, but intelligible, speech. That said, neither Bothig nor his friends have much interest in anything but rending and tearing.

Four of the varumani are currently devouring the bodies of four adventurers whom they slew in 6-157 and dragged here. Two others are in 6-160 and two are in 6-157.

Inhabitants:

1. Bothig, lesser varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 3; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 58; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (mace, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: mace; shield.
2. 3 bestial varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL NE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 55, 50, 49; #AT 3; Dmg 3-6/3-6/3-10. Special defenses: regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision; immune to poison.

Treasure:

Bothig's treasure: 4,097 gp; 2,357 sp; 10 blue quartz gems (20 gp each); silver toe-ring (900 gp); silver and gold box (700 gp); silver and gems goblet (2,600 gp); silver and gold seal (200 gp), gold locket (800 gp).

Adventurers' gear: 349 sp; 211 gp; a heavy flail +1; banded mail +1; a set of four throwing axes +1; large shield +1, +4 vs. missiles; a pouch with 77 gp worth of silvered sand; a tear of Kauket (see new magic items); a rod of turning (5 charges – see new magic items); a potion of the berserk (see new magic items); a short sword; a staff; some rent studded leather armor (still usable); and a scroll with sleep, telekinesis, and project image.

6-160: Ruined Dining Hall ... with Varumani

Two bestial varumani from Bothig's band of renegades (see 6-159) wait on either side of the tunnel from 6-161 in order to ambush any prey that might emerge.

A 20'-long, heavy oaken table still stands in the center of the room, although the chairs are now gone. A pile of bones (the past meals of the varumani) sits in the southwest corner. The east wall still bears a faded fresco in which Marius Tricotot, dressed in ordinary legionary armor, stands at the center of group of legionaries. The caption reads (in Mithric): "A great leader knows his men. Marius!"

Inhabitants:

1. 2 bestial varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL NE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 55, 53; #AT 3; Dmg 3-6/3-6/3-10. Special defenses: regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision; immune to poison.

6-161: Pleasant Cave

This large cave is humid and warm. A species of green lichen emits pale green phosphorescence. The southwestern lobe of the cave contains a pool of cool, clear water. The cave is home to numerous cave crickets and small lizards. The northern tunnel exits the cave about 10' up the wall; it is only 6' wide. The southern tunnel is 20' up the cave wall, and only 3' wide. Although pleasant and unthreatening, anyone resting here for more than 1-3 hours will be visited by a gray ooze from 6-165.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 gray ooze (after 1-3 hours): SZ L; AL N; AC 8; MV 10'; HD 3+3; HP 23; #AT 1; Dmg 2-16. Special attacks: corrode metal. Special defenses: impervious to spells; immune to heat and cold.

6-161A: Tunnel leading up to Sub-Level 12 (SL12-13)

At a point 5' above the floor on the western wall of 6-161 is a perfectly round, perfectly smooth tunnel that leads upwards in wide spirals to Sub-Level 12 (SL12-13). The hole was bored by Kerbog Khan's borer automaton (see SL12-19). The slope of the passage is just gentle enough to allow bipeds to traverse it without slipping, although speed is reduced by 30'.

6-162: Rudishva Transport Hall

The door to 6-163 is one of the dilating rudishva iris doors, and only opens by presenting a pale green, pink, orange, silver, or yellow rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items). This ancient rudishva hall has no right angles, and is sheathed in hexagonal white tiles. Most of the chamber is taken up by a 15'-diameter, 3'-deep black granite fountain. The liquid in the fountain is opalescent and sparkly. Anything (or anyone) coated in the liquid will be able to levitate in the shaft (6-164).

Teleport Nodes:

Like all such nodes, there is a silvery disk on the floor and a silvery square inset on the wall. Anyone standing on the disk who touches the square is teleported to the appropriate location.

T14: access to 5-31

T16: access to 7-6 (floating garden)

6-163: Giant Rudishva Skeletal Guardians

The door to 6-162 is one of the rudishva iris doors, and only opens by presenting a pale green, pink, orange, silver, or yellow rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items). This 15'-tall chamber, like 6-162, is sheathed in hexagonal white tiles. No right angles are present. Two granite chairs occupy the center of the room, angled such that both face the entry point from 6-164. An 8'-square hole in the west wall provides access to the transit shaft.

Each chair holds a giant rudishva skeleton. Anyone who exits the transit shaft (6-164) is met with a harsh query in the rudishva language from the skeletons. The skeletons mercilessly attack those who do not immediately present a pale green, orange, pink or silver rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items). They also respond in force if attacked from the shaft itself.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 semi-intelligent giant rudishva skeletons: SZ L; AL NE; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8+8; HP 68, 55; #AT 1 or 2; Dmg 3-18 (weapon) or 2-8/2-8 (bone throwing); MR 50%. Special attacks: bone throwing; sonic blast. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; half damage from sharp or edged weapons; half damage from fire; immune to sleep, charm, cold, poison, and paralysis.

6-164: Transit shaft, with Impaled Dwarf

A 40'-square shaft, sheathed in the same white marble and silver grout, extends 1,100' through the Halls, commencing at 5-84 and culminating on Level 9 (9-91). Built by the rudishva as a swift form of transport for their officers, it detects strongly as magical. Anything tossed into the shaft will fall normally, but anything - or anyone - coated in the opalescent liquid is capable of levitation in the pit. Levitation is at the rate of 20' of vertical distance per round. Removal of even 10% of the silver grout cancels the levitation effect. From this point one can use the shaft to access 5-84, 7-146 and 9-91. Those without the coating fall 500' feet to their death. The opening to 6-163 is obvious and easily accessible to those traversing the shaft.

The body of a dwarf is impaled against the east wall of the chasm by what appear to be monstrous femurs; he was a victim of the giant rudishva skeletons at 6-163. The dwarf still wears (dwarf-sized) chain mail and carries a battle axe +1, a 50' coil of rope, 10 spikes, a potion of healing, an inert dwarven life-stone (see new magic items) from the clan Goethite, and a sack full of desiccated bits of fruit.

Treasure:

See above.

6-165: Ooze Chamber with Pukel-mander

This large, partly worked chamber is home to an enormous gray ooze as well as two important heqeti sites. The northern and eastern sections are worked in the heqeti manner, with pebbled, oily walls.

The gray ooze typically inhabits the southern, natural lobe of the cave. If it has been encountered in 6-161, of course, it cannot be found here.

To the east, down the partly finished corridor, a pukel-mander (see new magic items) looms over the cave at 6-166.

The central feature of the cave, however, is an enormous pool of roiling and burping slimes of different colors and consistencies. The slime pit is about 10' deep and roughly 20' in diameter. It contains several noxious slimes extruded by Rimmaq-Isfet itself and imported from the Abyss. Unlike the comparable pool at 5-104, this one never produced the right combination of slimes to make it usable for the attack on the rudishva. As a result the heqeti abandoned this location.

At any given time 4 heqeti slimes (see new monsters) are visible on the surface of the pool. For every hour of waiting, it is 75% likely that one of the slimes will submerge and 1-2 new ones will rise to the surface.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 electric blue, liquid but adhesive heqeti slime (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 5' creeping; HD 2; HP 10; #AT 1; Dmg special; MR 15%. Special attacks: touch causes painful boils for 1-3 days followed by death; infectious. Special defenses: healed by electricity and lasers; slowed by cold.
2. 1 rainbow, oily and thick heqeti slime (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 10' creeping; HD 2; HP 11; #AT 1; Dmg special; MR 15%. Special attacks: changes 25% of epidermis per hit to thick yellow fur. Special defenses: healed by electricity and lasers; slowed by cold.
3. 1 blue-black, gluey heqeti slime (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 15' pseudopod; HD 2; HP 12; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6; MR 15%. Special attacks: flesh-eating for 4-7 rounds. Special defenses: healed by electricity and lasers; slowed by cold.
4. 1 sickly-green, oily and runny heqeti slime (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 20' on liquids; HD 2; HP 13; #AT 1; Dmg special; MR 15%. Special attacks: flesh animating (covers flesh and kills victim in 4-7 rounds, then re-animates as a heqeti slime zombie - see new monsters); corrosive to metal. Special defenses: healed by electricity and lasers; slowed by cold.
5. 1 gray ooze: SZ L; AL N; AC 8; MV 10'; HD 3+3; HP 23; #AT 1; Dmg 2-16. Special attacks: corrode metal. Special defenses: impervious to spells; immune to heat and cold.

6-166: Crossroads Cave, with tunnels to 5-100, SL6-56, and the Chasm (6-108)

Stalactites and stalagmites dot this 30'-tall cavern. A tunnel to the northwest slopes upward to 5-100, while one to the east slopes gently down to the Great Chasm (6-108). A third tunnel is more difficult to locate, as it is only 3' in diameter and near the ceiling of the northeast wall; it leads up to area SL6-56 of the Drowned Canyon. At the west end of the cave is a ledge containing a heqeti pukel-mander (see 6-165). At the foot of the ledge is the corpse of a human magic user.

Treasure:

A belt pouch with 55 pp, 43 gp, and 39 sp, and a bone scroll case with scrolls of secret chest and levitation. Spell Book: Alarm, armor, burning hands, firewater, grease, read magic, taunt; deeppockets, irritation, preserve, vocalize, zephyr; cloudburst, item, monster summoning I; ultravision.

6-167: Cave of Gimon

This small cave is the abode of the strange creature known as Gimon (see new monsters). Gimon was a human adventurer who found the potent idol of Camazotz (see new magic items) and fell under its spell. After several months of possessing the idol, Gimon was transformed into a partial bat creature. His body is still bipedal, albeit quite skinny, but his arms are now connected to his body with bat wings, and he has grown some impressive fangs. Despite his monstrous appearance, Gimon is not evil; he is probably insane, though. He flies about the middle levels of Great Chasm, feeding on other predators and occasionally rescuing the weak. The workers at the Troll Lifts know him well and don't bother him; they refer to him, rather fondly, as the 'Bat-monk'. Despite their neutrality, Gimon is too skittish to form friendships with them. Instead he abides here, in a surprisingly well-kept cave. He is present in his cave 50% of the time; otherwise he is flying about the Great Chasm. If encountered here, he will likely hear intruders before they enter his cave, and he will take flight so as to avoid being trapped in his cave. So long as the idol of Camazotz remains untouched, he will not bother those who ransack his cave (although such persons will not be the beneficiaries of his occasional 'rescue missions'). He will pursue to the death anyone who carries off his idol.

On a ledge in the back of the cave is the idol of Camazotz (see new magic items). Next to it is a forgotten purse with 10 impressive pearls (120 gp each).

Inhabitants:

1. Gimon (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 7; MV 60', 150' flying (Class D); HD 6; HP 40; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-6; MR 25%. Special defenses: cannot be surprised; immune to cold.

Treasure:

Idol of Camazotz (see new magic items); 10 pearls (120 gp each)

6-168: Two-lobed Cave

The first portion of this cave, that which opens onto the chasm, is nondescript: it is rocky and the occasional home of chasm cephalopods (25% chance). At the back of this cave, however, is a narrow crack, only 2' wide and 4' tall, that leads to a second, larger cave. This section is drier, sandier and an altogether fine place to rest without fear of attack. Gimon knows of this cave and might recommend it to those whom he trusts.

Inhabitants:

1. 4 medium chasm cephalopods (see new monsters) (25% chance): SZ M; AL N; AC 5; MV 60' flying (Class A); HD 4; HP 27, 26, 25, 24; #AT 5 (4 tentacles and a beak); Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-4/1-4/1-6; MR 25%. Special attacks: surprise on 1-4.

LEVEL 7: THE COURT OF THE TROLL THEGN

This level of Arden Vul occupies a substantial area to the south and west of the Great Chasm (7-3). It is most notably the location of the court of Varboka, First Thegn of the varumani (7-30), a figure known to almost all non-varumani as “the troll thegn”. The Troll Lift (7-1) is the main access point from Level 7 to the upper levels. Visitors to the level can approach in peace provided they have one of the troll thegn’s passports (see Arden Vul items); these objects allow access to the hotbed of rumors, machinations, and plots that run through the thegn’s court (7-75) as well as to the famous Troll Market (7-76), where all manner of strange goods are bought and sold. Beyond these well-traveled and relatively safe areas lie the dwellings of the true varumani (to the east of the market), and the caves of the bestial varumani, aka Arden Vul trolls (to the west). A few isolated and unknown areas unconnected to Varboka’s domain are scattered about the level, including a set of Archontean shrines to the west that have become the lair of a powerful and secretive vampire (7-119 to 7-130), a forgotten route to the Sub-Level 9 (at 7-111), the engine room of the Beacon (7-143), a second rudishva floating island (7-4 to 7-7), and the lost upper temple of Kauket, which unbeknownst to the varumani has been recently restored by a heqeti builder (7-78 to 7-84).

The varumani form the most powerful faction in the Halls. And yet, despite their clear physical and numerical superiority, the varumani remain fairly cloistered, preferring to endlessly practice their physical skills within the safety of the clan-holds. Ultimately the modern varumani are a collectively cautious and wary people, even if individual members are typically brave and well-trained. They are also a people in decline, a fact that has become painfully obvious to the thegn and his advisors. Today only about 100 true varumani remain, along with perhaps 170 lesser varumani and an indeterminate number of bestial varumani. To fend off this slow decline, the thegn is now actively interested in promoting procreation and also in seeking the origins of his people, namely by ‘activating’ the fabled ‘Beacon’ as a method of restoring their diminishing people.

In addition to this agenda, Varboka and his people have been shocked by the recent revelation that the kaliyani have returned to Arden Vul; a varumani hunting party surprised and slew a kaliyani scouting team sent by Rivvep (9-118) to explore the chasm floor. As a result, Varboka has publicly announced a bounty on kaliyani fangs, worth 100 gp per fang. Varboka hopes to swiftly discover the location of their ancient enemies, and to then mount a major expedition to destroy the kaliyani “once and for all” (this plan would also cement Varboka’s status as one of the great thegns).

If the varumani are viewed as hostile by visitors, the level will prove a substantial challenge in terms of combat tactics and attrition. If negotiation is preferred, though, the varumani can provide much valuable information and even a bit of assistance. Indeed, Varboka may even seek to employ capable-looking visitors for his own purposes.

GENERAL CONSTRUCTION NOTES

Heqeti areas: 7-78 to 7-84, 7-138, 7-139

Rudishva areas: 7-4 to 7-6, 7-35 to 7-44, 7-108 to 7-111, 7-143 to 7-146

Archontean areas: 7-100, 7-119 to 7-130, 7-136

Varumani areas: 7-1, 7-8 to 7-33, 7-65 to 7-77

ICONIC AREAS

The Troll Market (7-76)

The Great Chasm (7-3)

IMPORTANT NPCs

Trijax, varumani, vice-overseer of the Troll Lifts (7-1)

Hraskaya, varumani, chief of Rudigaya clan (7-17)

Vedraya One-Eye, varumani, chief of the Vanaraya clan (7-18)

Ashoka, varumani, court sorcerer (7-22)

Glif, lesser varumani, first adept (7-24)

Gavra the Easy-Going, varumani, chief of the Pendaya clan (7-25)

Igrippa the Unruly, varumani, chief of the Druvaya clan (7-26)

Varboka, varumani, Thegn, aka ‘the troll thegn’ (7-30)

Caudatssa the Tongue, heqeti (7-79)

Cinna Minux, ancient vampire (7-122)

SIGNIFICANT REGIONS OF LEVEL 7

1. Domain of the Varumani (areas 7-1 to 7-77, 7-91 to 7-106)

The central region of this level is the territory known as the ‘domain of the thegn’, that is, the home of the varumani. By virtue of their racial strength and natural abilities, as well as their innate cultural predilection for discipline and loyalty, the varumani are clearly the most powerful faction within Arden Vul. The region is defined by clear defensive choke-points that the thegn keeps well-guarded (e.g. 7-1, 7-38, and 7-65). A frontal assault from either direction brings immediate and well-organized reaction, as scores of highly trained varumani muster to repel a threat. For peaceful visitors, possession of a troll thegn’s passport (see Arden Vul items) is necessary to enter the domain.

When visitors initially approach the domain of the varumani, the GM must first determine whether one of several special varumani gatherings is taking place. If a special gathering is indicated, it will determine the location of a large portion of the varumani. Roll on the table to determine this important fact:

D100	Ritual
01	Moot (see 7-27)
02-07	Audience (see 7-27)

08-09	Cleansing of Sorrows (see 7-32)
10	Victor's Right (see 7-32)
11-100	No special ritual

The starting location of Varboka, the troll thegn (see 7-30) is also necessary to determine. Varboka spends much time moving through his domain, pressing the flesh and making executive decisions. If, of course, the previous d100 roll indicated that a special gathering was under way, then Varboka will be present in at the location required for that gathering (either 7-27 or 7-32). If no special gathering is underway, then the following table determines where Varboka and his housecarls (7-29) will be when the PCs arrive on Level 7.

D100	Location
1-5	7-13
6-12	7-27
13-32	7-30
33-35	7-32
36-65	7-73
66-95	7-74
96-100	Moving about Level 7

Factions: The varumani control this region fully. Representatives of other factions visit respectfully, either to pay suit to the thegn or to visit the Troll Market (7-76).

Construction: The worked areas are in the varumani style, but are very old, since they were built by the first generations of varumani fleeing the collapse of the rudishva hegemony. Ceilings are 12', doors are typically wood with steel supports.

Environment: The region is warm and humid due to the high population density.

2. Heqeti Upper Temple (areas 7-78 to 7-84)

This region is defined by the lesser ziggurat of Kauket and surrounding heqeti regions. Cleansed by the rudishva in antiquity, it has been newly restored by a team of heqeti under the tongue Caudatssa (7-79). It has ancient resonance for the heqeti, as prior to the arrival of the rudishva it was a major center of heqeti civilization. With the retreat of the Archontean and the shrinking of the varumani population, the heqeti deemed it a fortuitous time to restore this temple. As yet the upper temple exists in a somewhat precarious position, as it lies next to the varumani domain and is far from any potential heqeti reinforcements.

Factions: The heqeti control this region. Its proximity to the domain of the varumani, however, has caused Caudatssa to be circumspect in announcing their presence, let alone in seeking expansion.

Construction: The worked areas are of ancient heqeti construction.

Environment: Area 7-78 is under the effect of a hallow spell, such that chaotic evil creatures gain +2 on all rolls, while good-aligned creatures suffer -2 penalties.

3. Domain of the Vampire (areas 7-119 to 7-132)

This set of ancient Archontean shrines and administrative chambers is now the domain of a powerful vampire named Cinna Minux (7-122). Due to his enhanced charm abilities, Cinna has been able to gather a 'court' of followers over which he presides as lord and master; these subjects include some lesser vampires as well as some charmed adventurers and monsters. Cinna also maintains an extensive network of charmed informants in other areas of Arden Vul. Despite his powers, Cinna is cautious. In particular he does not wish to cross the Sun-Scarred Knights (Sub-Level 10), nor does he wish to alert them to his location; as a result, Cinna keeps tight control on the comings and goings of his minions. For this reason, few denizens of Arden Vul know of Cinna's existence, let alone the location of his lair. Should PCs stumble upon his lair by chance, Cinna is instantly aware of the intrusion and swiftly organizes a counter-attack and ambush.

Factions: No faction controls this area and, indeed, few know of its existence. The bestial varumani (near 7-91) know only that this area is haunted.

Construction: All the worked areas were built in the Archontean style. Ceilings are 10' tall, doors are iron-bound wood.

Environment: The area features the typically cool and dry conditions of the Halls.

ACCESS AND EGRESS

To Levels 2, 3, 5, 6, 8, 9: Great Chasm at 7-3, leading up to 2-63A, 3-38, 5-34 and 6-108, and down to 8-2 and 9-1

To Level 4: tunnel at 7-118, leading up to 4-90

To Level 5: tunnel at 7-34, leading up to 5-125

To Levels 5, 6, and 9: transit shaft at 7-146, leading up to 5-84 and 6-164 and down to 9-91

To Levels 5, 6, and 9: the Great Pillar at 7-37, leading up to 5-138, and 6-103, and down to 9-30

To Level 5: tunnel at 7-88, leading up to 5-141

To Level 5: stairs at 7-109, leading up to 5-114

To Level 5: tunnel at 7-137, leading up to 5-100

To Level 5: tunnel at 7-141, leading up to 5-85B

To Level 5: rudishva teleporter (T11) at 7-144, leading to 5-95

To Level 6: Troll Lift at 7-1, leading up to 6-5

To Level 6: corridor at 7-42, leading up to 6-65

To Level 6: rudishva teleport node (T16) at 7-6, leading to 6-162

To Level 8: ropes at 7-34 leading across the chasm to 8-24

To Level 8: tunnel at 7-40, leading down to 8-137

To Level 8: rudishva teleport node (T18) at 7-110, leading to 8-52

To Level 9: Dread Risers at 7-2 (and 7-14), leading down to 9-2

To Level 9: tunnel at 7-52, leading down 9-27

To Level 9: tunnel at 7-64, leading to 9-41

To Level 9: corridor at 7-136, leading down to 9-101

To Level 9: switchbacks at 7-147, leading down to 9-86

To Level 10: heqeti teleport well at 7-83, leading to 10-24

To Sub-Level 4: stairs at 7-44A, leading up to SL4-45

To Sub-Level 5: tunnel at 7-95, leading up to SL5-27

To Sub-Level 6: tunnel at 7-86, leading up to SL6-26

To Sub-Level 6: tunnel at 7-135, leading up to SL6-18

To Sub-Level 7: stairs at 7-119, leading up to SL7-31

To Sub-Level 7: tunnel at 7-148, leading up to SL7-9A
 To Sub-Level 9: stairs at 7-111, leading up to SL9-49
 To Sub-Level 13: tunnel at 7-59, leading down to SL13-33

To various Locations: Tothian teleportation ring (see new magic items) at 7-131

To locations within Level 7: one rudishva teleport node, as follows:
 T17: between 7-6 (floating garden) and 7-110

Teleport destinations on Level 7:

- 7-1: from teleporter at 4-167
- 7-84: from teleporter at 10-8

RANDOM ENCOUNTERS

1. The Floating Island (7-4 to 7-7)

Checks should be made every 3 turns, with a 1 in 6 chance for an encounter.

D6	Encounter
1	Vermin. Roll d10: 1-2: 5-8 giant centipedes: SZ S; AL N; AC 9; MV 150'; HD 1 or 2 HP; HP 2(x4), 1(x4); #AT 1; Dmg n.a. Special attacks: poison (+4 to save) 3-4: 4 giant fire beetles: SZ S; AL N; AC 4; MV 120'; HD 1+2; HP 9, 8, 6, 5; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8 5-8: 9-12 giant rats: SZ S; AL N(E); AC 7; MV 120'; HD 1-4 HP; HP 4(x3), 3(x3), 2(x3), 1(x3); #At 1; Dmg 1-3. Special attacks: 5% chance of disease 9-10: 4-6 giant bats: SZ S; AL N; AC 8; MV 30', 180' flying (Class C); HD 1-4 HP; HP 4, 3, 3, 2, 2, 1; #AT 1; Dmg 1-2. Special attacks: 1% chance of rabies. Special defenses: foes using missiles are at -3 to hit unless they have DEX 13 or greater
2	1 giant pedipalp: SZ L; AL N; AC 2; MV 60'; HD 4+4; HP 28; #AT 3; Dmg 1-8/1-8/2-8. Special attacks: grip; poison gas. If slain here, it cannot be encountered at 7-4.
3-4	A band of 5 baindara (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 8; MV 150', 150' gliding; HD 1-1; HP 3, 3, 2, 2, 1; #AT 1; Dmg 1-2
5	6 medium chasm cephalopods (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 5; MV 60' flying (Class A); HD 4; HP 28, 27, 26, 25, 25, 24; #AT 5 (4 tentacles and a beak); Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-4/1-4/1-6; MR 25%. Special attacks: surprise on 1-4
6	Party of NPC adventurers (select from NPC appendix)

2. The Domain of the Varumani (areas 7-1, 7-8 to 7-33, 7-65 to 7-77)

These areas are busy with varumani moving around their domain. Checks should be made every 2 turns, with a 1 in 4 chance for an encounter.

D6	Encounter
1	Varboka the thegn and six housecarls: see stats at 7-30 and 7-31

2-3	2-5 true varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 62, 60, 57, 55, 54; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 6-24 (two-handed sword, 2-20+4). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8 th -level fighters or 8 th -level magic users, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: huge two-handed swords
4-5	2-5 lesser varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 61, 59, 58, 57, 56; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (club, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8 th -level fighters or 8 th -level magic users, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: club
6	One of the other 'special' varumani. Roll d8: 1. Hraskaya: see 7-17 2. Vedreya: see 7-18 3. Gavra the Easy-Going: see 7-25 4. Igrippa the Unruly: see 7-26 5. Ashoka, the Court Sorcerer: see 7-22 6. Glif, the First Adept: see 7-24 7. Vimela the Record Keeper: see 7-66 8. Roll twice on this list, rerolling further results of 8

3. Eastern Access Routes (7-38, 7-40 to 7-43)

Checks should be made every 3 turns, with a 1 in 6 chance for an encounter:

D6	Encounter
1	Vermin. Roll d8: 1-2: 5-8 giant centipedes: SZ S; AL N; AC 9; MV 150'; HD 1 or 2 HP; HP 2(x4), 1(x4); #AT 1; Dmg n.a. Special attacks: poison (+4 to save) 3-4: 4 giant fire beetles: SZ S; AL N; AC 4; MV 120'; HD 1+2; HP 9, 8, 6, 5; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8 5-8: 9-12 giant rats: SZ S; AL N(E); AC 7; MV 120'; HD 1-4 HP; HP 4(x3), 3(x3), 2(x3), 1(x3); #At 1; Dmg 1-3. Special attacks: 5% chance of disease
3-4	2-5 true varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LN; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 62, 60, 57, 55, 54; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 6-24 (two-handed sword, 2-20+4). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8 th -level fighters or 8 th -level magic users, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: huge two-handed swords; ring mail
5	2-5 lesser varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 61, 59, 58, 57, 56; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (club, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8 th -level fighters or 8 th -level magic users, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: club
6	Roll on encounter chart found at area 7-42

4. Southern Cavern and Caves (7-45 to 7-63)

Checks should be made every 3 turns, with a 1 in 6 chance for an encounter.

D10	Encounter
1-2	4 giant fire beetles: SZ S; AL N; AC 4; MV 120'; HD 1+2; HP 9, 8, 6, 5; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8
3-5	4 cave skinks (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 7; MV 120'; HD 2; HP 15, 13, 12, 10; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: toxic mucus
6	2-4 lesser varumani (see new monsters) miners: SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 61, 59, 57, 56; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (club, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8 th -level fighters or 8 th -level magic users, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: club
7	4 huge spiders: SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 180'; HD 2+2; HP 15, 15, 13, 11; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: surprise 1-5; poison (+1 to saves); can leap up to 30'
8	1 Arden Vul spriggan (see new monsters) from 7-62, hoping to entice visitors to join the 'party' at 7-62: SZ S or L; AL CN; AC 4 (5); MV 90' (150'); HD 5 (8+3); HP 34 (61); #AT 1 (2); Dmg 2-5 (knife) or (2-12/2-12); MR 25%. Thief skills: PP 75%, OL 78%, FRT 70%, MS 77%, HS 64%, HN 35%, CW 81%, RL 40%. Special attacks: confusion 1/day. Special defenses: immune to poison, charm, and mind-affecting spells; healed by magic missiles. Special: grow to giant size; affect normal fires, faerie fire, trip, detect magic, shatter. If encountered randomly, remove from roster at 7-62
9-10	5-8 giant centipedes: SZ S; AL N; AC 9; MV 150'; HD 1 or 2 HP; HP 2(x4), 1(x4); #AT 1; Dmg n.a. Special attacks: poison (+4 to save)

5. Basilisk Caves and Heqeti Temple (7-78 to 7-90)

Random encounters are unlikely in these areas. In the basilisk caves (7-85 to 7-90), there is a 1 in 6 chance every 3 turns to encounter one of the basilisks. In the heqeti temple proper (areas 7-78 to 7-84) there are no random encounters.

6. Caves of the Wild Varumani (7-91 to 7-106)

Bestial varumani regularly move about these areas. As a result, checks should be made every 2 turns, with a 1 in 4 chance of an encounter. All encounters will be with 2-5 bestial varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL NE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 61, 58, 55, 53, 50; #AT 3; Dmg 3-6/3-6/3-10. Special defenses: regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision; immune to poison.

7. Western Caves (7-112 to 7-118)

Aside from the caterwauls, whose locations are discussed in the introduction to areas 7-114 to 7-118, there are no random encounters in these areas.

8. Domain of the Vampire (7-119 to 7-130)

Because Cinna Minux (7-122) keeps such a tight rein on his domain, there are no random encounters within it.

9. Northern Tunnels (7-133 to 7-142)

Checks should be made every 3 turns, with a 1 in 6 chance for an encounter.

D8	Encounter
1-2	1 ochre jelly: SZ M; AL N; AC 8; MV 30'; HD 6; HP 39; #AT 1; Dmg 3-12. Special defenses: lightning divides into half-sized creatures
3-5	6 medium chasm cephalopods (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 5; MV 60' flying (Class A); HD 4; HP 30, 27, 26, 25, 24, 22; #AT 5 (4 tentacles and a beak); Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-4/1-4/1-6; MR 25%. Special attacks: surprise on 1-4
6-7	4-6 huge spiders: SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 180'; HD 2+2; HP 17, 16, 15, 14, 13, 11; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: surprise 1-5; poison (+1 to saves); can leap 30'
8	Cinna Minux: see stats at 7-122

LEVEL KEY

7-1: The Lower Troll Lift, up to Level 6 (6-5)

This chamber hosts the lowest terminus of the network of Troll Lifts on the western side of the Great Chasm. Here one can take the lift up 200' to area 6-5. The chamber is formed of rough-carved stone, with polished blue granite tiles on the floor. Four highly detailed, 4'-tall, high-relief carvings of grinning varumani heads line the walls. The door to the south is locked and carefully watched. A pair of disused iron bars are set into the granite near the edge of the chasm (an out-of-commission cross-chasm ferry stop).

Domain of the Varumani: The chamber marks the main entrance to the domain of Varboka, the troll thegn, and is thus a necessary waypoint for those seeking entrance to the thegn's court (7-75) or the Troll Market (7-76). Trijax, the true varumani vice-overseer of this section of the Troll Lifts, presides over a team of two bestial varumani and six ogres. Trijax immediately accosts those arriving from above (6-5) or the Chasm (7-3) in a gruff but neutral manner, demanding their business. Absolutely no one is permitted through the southern door without a special permit from the thegn, and those seeking access to the west will need to clear customs.

Trijax is a tough old warrior and likes nothing more than to mix it up with those who prove 'lippy'; he will, of course, send one of the ogres for reinforcements from 7-75 in the case of a real fight. If visitors are deferential to Trijax, however, and offer him a small gratuity (5 gp/person), he proves utterly willing to negotiate. Trijax can provide useful information about the court, the market, and local politics. Despite his gruff, macho demeanor, Trijax is surprisingly articulate and speaks fluent Archontean.

Customs Checkpoint: Those seeking to pass from 7-1 into 7-72 (in order to visit the court at 7-75 or the market at 7-76) must show at least one troll thegn's passport (see Arden Vul items). If a party has no passport, they are almost always out of luck and must either return to 6-5 or seek their fortunes in the Chasm. If no other visitors are present (see below), there is a 20% chance that Trijax will be willing to furtively sell the party an extra passport.

Stone Heads: The varumani like to paint (and repaint) the four heads; currently their faces are yellow, their long noses are blue, their eyes are black, and their hair is brown. The lesser varumani have given each face a name, as well: (clockwise from north) Smiley, Bubba, Junior, and Grim. The face on the south wall (Junior) is actually the destination point for the teleporter from 4-167. Since no one has used that teleporter in generations, Trijax and Co. will be astonished and impressed by any who arrive at 7-1 via that method (+15% reaction rolls).

The Troll Lift: The lift is unassuming at this end. No winch mechanism exists here, nor even a framework. Rather, on this end the only sign of the lift is a black square, 12' per side, that has been painted on the floor at the point where the wood-and-iron cage from 6-5 (usually) lands. Passengers descending must wait until the cage has bumped the floor before disembarking and presenting themselves to Trijax for inspection. Those seeking to travel up (to 6-5) must first offer proper payment to Trijax (10 sp/leg). If the cage is present (33% chance), Trijax shouts up to Gorlen to activate the lift, and passengers reach 6-5 after 11-20 rounds. If the cage is not present, potential passengers have to wait 3-4 turns for it to appear; the trip up will take the usual amount of time. A troll chest keyed to Trijax stands against the west wall, under the face of 'Grim'.

There is a 1 in 6 chance that another other group is present in this chamber. Roll on the following table to determine its composition:

D10	Travelers	Stats
1	8 goblins, come to hire mercenaries to help them locate the scepter of the goblins (see 8-69 and new magic items)	SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 6, 5(x3), 4, 4, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6
2	One of the Sun-Scarred Knights (GM's choice which one) on an inscrutable mission. He/she will attempt to mediate in the case of impending hostilities with Trijax, but will in no way intervene if fighting breaks out.	Select appropriate knight from the level overview of Sub-Level 10
3-4	NPC adventurers	Select an appropriate group from the NPC appendix

5	A beastmen patrol of 6 troopers and a sergeant. They are seeking to buy something specific at the Troll Market (7-76)	6 beastman troopers (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 8, 7, 7, 6, 6, 5; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spears; short swords; short bows 1 beastman sergeant (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 2+2; HP 15; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 or 2-5. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spear; war hammer
6	A lesser varumani returning to the thegn's court with three slaves he won in a bout of late-night gambling at the Inn of the Lost	1 lesser varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 3; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 57; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (club, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8 th -level fighter or 8 th -level magic user, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: club; shield 3 enslaved goblins SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6
7	Justin the Nose, sacristan of the Inn of the Lost, with 4 mercenaries, on a purchasing mission to the Troll Market (7-76)	Justin the Nose: for stats, see 6-7. 4 mercenaries, as 2 nd -level Thorcin fighters (2 male, 2 female): SZ M; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 17, 16, 14, 14; #AT 1; Dmg 2-9 (long sword). Special attacks: +1 to damage from STR. Possessions: chain mail, shield; long swords; 79 sp and 22 gp each.
8-9	Livod the hunter, a true varumani bearing monster parts from the Nether Reaches (Level 8) for sale at the Troll Market (7-76). Livod is a clanmate of Trijax, and supports him in the case of a fight	For Livod's stats, see 7-14
10	A secretive magic user traveling either to the Troll Market (7-76) or the thegn's court (7-75). This group will not aid the PCs in a fight	Select an appropriate magic user with flunkies from the NPC appendix.

Inhabitants:

1. Trijax, true varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LN; AC 1; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 61; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 6-24 (two-handed sword, 2-20+4). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: huge two-handed sword; ring mail +1.
2. 2 bestial varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL NE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 55, 49; #AT 3; Dmg 3-6/3-6/3-10. Special defenses: regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision; immune to poison.
3. 6 ogres: SZ L; AL CE; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 4+1; HP 31, 29, 28, 27, 25, 22; #AT 1; Dmg 1-10, or by weapon.
4. Other visitors (1 in 6 chance): see table

Treasure:

Troll chest (see new technological items): 14 ancient octagonal platinum coins (see Arden Vul items); 137 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items); 879 sp; 211 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items); 731 gp; Trijax's silver baton of authority (250 gp); a scroll with a schedule of shipments on it; another scroll with a list of names [those proscribed from using the Lift]; and a clay tablet inscribed with an image of Vanara (the legendary varumani leader – see 5-139).

Trijax carries an embroidered silk purse with his own personal stash: 179 sp, 47 gp, and a gold sunburst medallion that he confiscated from a traveler (375 gp).

7-2: The Dread Risers (to 9-2)

Access to the bottom of the chasm is obtained via a stairway cut into the side of the chasm. This long staircase of 3,666 steps links area 7-1 with area 9-2. The width of the Dread Risers varies, but averages about 3' wide. The Risers descend along the chasm wall for about 100' before turning east onto a tall ridge of rock extending up from the chasm floor. A series of switchbacks descends the ridge to a hillock and thence to the cavern floor. Total descent is about 300'.

The varumani confraternity of hunters has a little-known access route to the Dread Risers via a concealed door into the chasm (7-14) and a set of hand- and foot-hold inset into the chasm wall; these dangerous climbing aids join the stairs at a point about 60' below the plane of Level 7. Those on the Dread Risers detect the hunters' path as if it were a secret door.

7-3: Great Chasm

One of the iconic features of the Halls, this massive fissure extends through most of the dungeon levels and provides a sure, if difficult, means of vertical navigation of the Halls. The fissure is generally shaped like a triangular prism, with its apex about 50' above Level 2. The prism extends downward 1,600' through the Halls until it levels out at the floor of the chasm (9-1) hundreds of feet below.

The chasm is about as wide on this level as it is on Levels 5 and 6, and is subject to more varied potential encounters. Key features of the chasm include the waterfalls (on either side of 7-1), the lowest points of the Troll Lift (7-1 and 8-1), and the wild Floating Garden (7-4 to 7-7). Several other points of access to the chasm exist on this level.

Random encounters use the following table; roll every three turns, with a 1 in 6 chance for an encounter.

D100	Encounter
01-10	Party of NPC adventurers (select from NPC appendix)
11-15	Either of the following: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. 1 basic dragonfly automaton of Kerbog Khan (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 4; MV 240' flying (Class A); HD 1+2; HP 8; #AT 0 Dmg n.a.; MR 25%. Special defenses: immune to cold and fire</li> <li>2. 1 poison dragonfly automaton of Kerbog Khan (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 4; MV 240' flying (Class A); HD 1+2; HP 8; #AT 1; Dmg poison (death, or 1-3 turns paralyzation with 1-4 round slow on save); MR 25%. Special attacks: poison. Special defenses: immune to cold and fire</li> </ol>
16-20	Mixed undead: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. 2-3 wraiths: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 120'; 240' flying (Class B); HD 5+3; HP 36, 32, 28; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: energy drain. Special defenses: silver or magic weapons to hit; immune to sleep, charm, hold, cold, poison, and paralysis</li> <li>2. 1 spectre: SZ M; AL LE; AC 2; MV 150'; 300' flying (Class B); HD 7+3; HP 52; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8. Special attacks: energy drain. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to sleep, charm, hold, cold, poison, and paralysis</li> </ol>
21-25	2 ogre magi (from 9-70): SZ L; AL CE; AC 4; MV 90'; 150' flying (Class B); HD 5+2; HP 36, 34; #AT 1; Dmg 1-12 or by weapon. Special attacks: charm person 1/day; sleep 1/day; ray of cold 1/day. Special defenses: fly (12 turns); become invisible; darkness 10' radius; polymorph to human form; regenerate 1 HP/rd; assume gaseous form
26-30	1-4 margoyles: SZ M; AL CE; AC 2; MV 60'; 120' flying (Class C); HD 6; HP 44, 42, 39, 37; #AT 4; Dmg 1-6/1-6/2-8/2-8. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit
31-35	1-3 chasme: SZ M; AL CE; AC -1; MV 60'; 210' flying (Class D); HD 7+2; HP 52, 49, 47; #AT 3; Dmg 2-8/2-8/1-4; MR 40%. Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: cause darkness 5' radius; cause fear; droning sound (sleep). Special defenses: immune to poison; half damage from cold, electricity, fire, and gas. Special: teleport; detect good; detect invisible; telekinesis (1,500 gp weight); gate in another chasme (15%)
36-40	1-2 quasits: SZ S; AL CE; AC 2; MV 150'; HD 3; HP 19, 18; #AT 3; Dmg 1-2/1-2/1-4; MR 25%. Special attacks: DEX drain; fear blast 1/day. Special defenses: regenerate 1 hp/rd; cold iron, or +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to cold, fire, lightning; save vs spells as 7 HD creature. Special: invisibility; polymorph to bat or giant centipede; detect good; detect magic
41-45	1 black pudding: SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 10; HP 50; #AT 1; Dmg 3-24. Special attacks: dissolve wood and metal. Special defenses: divide into parts when struck; immune to cold

46-50	1-2 gloomwings: SZ M; AL N; AC 1; MV 120' flying (Class D); HD 5+1; HP 34; #AT 3; Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-8. Special attacks: pheromone; wings cause confusion; surprise on 1-3 in 6
51-55	A pile of 5 heqeti slimes (see new monsters): 1. 2 off-white, jelly-like heqeti slimes (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 10' creeping; HD 2; HP 11; #AT 1; Dmg special; MR 15%. Special attacks: coagulant for up to 30 gallons liquid (including blood). Special defenses: healed by electricity or lasers; slowed by cold 2. 2 off-white, runny and oily heqeti slimes (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 20' pseudopod; HD 2; HP 8; #AT 1; Dmg special; MR 15%. Special attacks: victim saves or believes is a different race and gender. Special defenses: healed by electricity or lasers; slowed by cold 3. 1 rust-colored, jelly-like heqeti slime (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 15' pseudopod; HD 2; HP 9; #AT 1; Dmg specials; MR 15%. Special attacks: spore-throwing (death in 3-18 days unless save at -1). Special defenses: healed by electricity or lasers; slowed by cold
56-65	A group of chasm chephalopods (see new monsters): 1. 5-8 medium chasm cephalopods (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 5; MV 60' flying (Class A); HD 4; HP 30, 28, 27, 26, 25, 25, 24, 22; #AT 5 (4 tentacles and a beak); Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-4/1-4/1-6; MR 25%. Special attacks: surprise on 1-4 2. 1-2 large chasm cephalopod (see new monsters): SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 60' flying (Class A); HD 6; HP 45, 38; #AT 6 (five tentacles and a beak); Dmg 1-6/1-6/1-6/1-6/1-6/1-8; MR 25%. Special attacks: surprise on 1-4; one tentacle drains spells from casters, adding 2-8 HP to chasm cephalopod per spell
66-70	1 dao, pursued by 2 jannee 1. 1 dao: SZ L; AL NE; AC 3; MV 90', 150' flying (Class B), 60' burrow through earth; HD 8+3; HP 56; #AT 1; Dmg 3-18. Special defenses: assume gaseous form; become invisible; cause misdirection; immune to earth-based/affecting spells. Special: change self 1/day; detect good 1/day; detect magic 1/day; fulfill limited wish; passwall; create spectral force; create wall of stone; rock to mud 3/day; dig 6/day 2. 2 jannee: SZ M; AL N(G); AC 2; MV 120', 300' flying (Class A); HD 6+2; HP 45, 41; #AT 1; Dmg 6-14 (big scimitar); MR 20%. Possessions: large scimitar; chain mail. Special defenses: invisibility 3/day. Special: growth/reduction 2/day; create food and water 1/day (as 7 th -level cleric); etherealness 1 hr/day; dwell in elemental air, water, fire, earth for up to 48 hrs.

71-75	3-5 spined devils: SZ S; AL LE; AC 3; MV 60', 180' flying (Class C); HD 3+3; HP 24, 21, 20; #AT 1 and/or 2; Dmg 1-8 (military fork) and/or 1-4/1-4; MR 25%. Special attacks: flaming spines; command. Special defenses: half damage from cold and gas; immune to fire. Special: affect normal fires; change self; produce flame; scare; summon a barbed devil 1/day (5%)
76-80	1 smoke mephit: SZ M; AL CE; AC 4; MV 120', 240' flying (Class B); HD 3; HP 19; #AT 2; Dmg 1-2/1-2. Special attacks: breath weapon; flame damage on death. Special: invisibility (1/day); dancing lights (1/day); gate 1-2 mephits (20% chance)
81-85	6-8 yeth hounds (see 9-50): SZ L; AL NE; AC 0; MV 150', 270' flying (Class B); HD 3+3; HP 25, 24, 23, 22, 21, 20, 19, 18; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8. Special attacks: fear. Special defenses: silver, or +1 weapons or better to hit (damage taken is 1 per magical plus, or 1 for silver weapons)
86-90	2-3 bestial varumani (see new monsters), climbing the wall creepers: SZ L; AL NE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 55, 53, 49; #AT 3; Dmg 3-6/3-6/3-10. Special defenses: regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision; immune to poison
91-95	Roll on Upper Zone table (see 2-63A)
96-100	Roll on Middle Zone table (see 5-34)

Chasm Color:

The GM might decide to play up the creepy and mysterious nature of the chasm. Roll every 3 turns, with a 1 in 6 chance for a chasm sound effect.

D8	Noise/Effect
1	Loud hissing
2	Moaning (of the wind?)
3	A roar
4	A shriek
5	A loud clap (a sharp, brief noise)
6	An echoing voice (undecipherable)
7	A flash of bright light for 3 second
8	Fluting, of a tuneless sort

7-4: Large Floating Garden

This floating garden is a larger version of the floating island found on Level 6 (6-4). Three 'hills' dot the island, each stone at its core but covered with earth and humus and planted with a variety of flora. The spray from the northern waterfall conveniently waters the garden.

The garden is brightly-lit, warm and humid. Two dozen rudishva light globes (see new technological items) emit the light and heat that enables the plants to grow. Doors into the hills are hidden by thick overgrowth of vines, moss, and grasses. The rounded sides of the north and south hills (areas 6-4 and 6-6) appear as shiny black surfaces across which vines and creepers trail; they are, in fact, one-way windows that are opaque from the outside. A pair of corroded iron frameworks occupy the southeast and southwest edges of the island; these were part of a cross-chasm ferry that the then abandoned when the island and Nether Reaches (Level 8) became too dangerous.

Unlike area 6-4, which is relatively well-tended, this garden is wild and dangerous. One threat is an enormous assassin vine, whose main root is sunk into the loam of the central hill (its location is marked with the letter A). Another is the six retch plants that appear as globular palm-like trees (marked with the letter B). Three triflower frond plants (marked C on the map) complete the dangerous flora. Two giant pedipalpi roam among the plant life.

One of the creepers provides a succulent, coral-colored fruit that is edible and refreshing; denizens of the halls call it the pink delight (see new flora). A small orchard of six trees drop edible nuts, known colloquially as the delver's reward (see new flora). Other edible plants may exist here at the GM's desire.

A large troupe of baindara (see new monsters) inhabits the island. The baindara have constructed a nest on the underside of the floating island out of dense pockets of twisted creepers and vines; its inaccessibility protects them from the pedipalpi and any wandering chasm cephalopods. The baindara chatter angrily and hurl nuts and fruit if disturbed; despite their fearsome appearance, they are cowardly and flee to their nest if threatened. They only fight if cornered.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 assassin vine (see new monsters): SZ S (effective); AL N; AC 8 (main plant), 4 (tendrils); HD 8 (main plant); HP 53 (main plant), 5 (tendrils); #AT 24; Dmg special. Special attacks: drag; strangulation; digestion.
2. 6 retch plants (marked B): SZ L; AL N; AC 8; MV 0'; HD 6(x3), 5(x34); HP 32, 30, 28, 25, 24, 22; #AT nil; Dmg nil. Special attacks: 5-8 fruit causing nausea; odor from broken fruit.
3. 3 triflower frond plants (marked C): SZ M; AL N; AC 9; MV 0'; HD 2+8; HP 21, 19, 17; #AT 2-8; Dmg special. Special attacks: tendrils cause slumber; enzymes cause 2-8 HP/rd; other tendrils cause 1-6 HP/rd.
4. 2 giant pedipalpi: SZ L; AL N; AC 2; MV 60'; HD 4+4; HP 30, 28; #AT 3; Dmg 1-8/1-8/2-8. Special attacks: grip; poison gas.
5. 30 baindara (see new monsters), typically in groups of 5: SZ S; AL N; AC 8; MV 150', 150' gliding; HD 1-1; HP 4(x5), 3(x10), 2(x10), 1(x5); #AT 1; Dmg 1-2.

Treasure:

Up to 25 specimens of pink delight, and 3d20+120 delver's reward nuts (see new flora for each).

7-5: South Observation Facility

The door to this rudishva observation station and lounge is a rudishva iris door. Presentation of a sky blue (or better) rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items) opens the door easily.

The interior is filled with trash, including two plasteel stools, numerous scraps of metal, piles of rotted vegetal matter, and two rudishva skeletons. Walls are stone, aside from the curved, southeastern wall, which, as a one-way window, provides a nice prospect of the chasm. A control panel of plasteel, with knobs, dials and panes of dark glass, sits underneath the window; it has been badly damaged by fire and corrosive substances.

Treasure:

Plasteel stools (25 gp each as curios), and a copper rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items) lost amid the debris.

7-6: Rudishva Teleport Nodes

Only by presenting a silver or yellow rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items) can this rudishva iris door be opened.

Teleport Nodes:

As with all such nodes, a silvery disk is inset on the floor and a silvery square is inset on the wall. Anyone standing on the disk who touches the square is teleported to the appropriate location.

T16: access to 6-162

T17: access to 7-110

7-7: North Observation Facility

The rudishva iris door to this facility opens in the same way as that of 7-5. The interior is also analogous to its counterpart, but is in a better state of preservation.

An operations and control panel stands against the curved one-way window (north wall); it has numerous dials, knobs, and dark-glass panels. Slumped against the panel are two dead rudishva in tattered orange jump suits. Five orange-colored amphibianoid corpses lie amid the plasteel lounge chairs and settees. The corpses – of heqeti – are now heqeti slime zombies (see new monsters). Attached to the ceiling are two heqeti slimes (see new monsters).

While most of the electronics have failed, one knob and screen combination still work. Turning the knob causes the screen to illuminate and display the upper temple to Kauket (7-78); given the recent heqeti refurbishment of that area, numerous heqeti will be visible in the scene. Most usefully to the viewer, the screen also bears a flickering set of Rudishva glyphs that read (if translated!): “300’ SSW”

Inhabitants:

1. 5 heqeti slime zombies (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 4; HP 28, 27, 26, 25, 24; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8. Special attacks: slime infestation. Special defenses: immune to electricity.
2. 1 sickly-green heqeti slime (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 5' creeping; HD 2; HP 13; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6; MR 15%. Special attacks: flesh-eating for 4-7 rounds; corrosive to metal. Special defenses: healed by electricity or lasers; slowed by cold.
3. 1 burnt-orange heqeti slime (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 5' creeping; HD 2; HP 12; #AT 1; Dmg special; MR 15%. Special attacks: flesh-animating (covers flesh and kills victim in 4-7 rounds, then re-animates as a heqeti slime zombie - see new monsters); corrosive to leather. Special defenses: healed by electricity or lasers; slowed by cold.

Treasure:

One of the rudishva corpses holds a laser pistol (with an empty lesser power supply) and has a sky blue plastic rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items for both). There are two rudishva dart throwers among the debris; they contain clips with 2 and 1 ordinary darts. The other rudishva corpse carries a synthetic pouch with 50 moonstones (60 gp each).

7-8: Antechamber to the Varumani Hold

This antechamber serves as a checkpoint to prevent unwanted visitors from proceeding to the varumani domain to the east and south. Unusual sconces with globes of ambient continual light are attached to the south, east and west walls. Three true varumani and two bestial varumani stand guard here at all times; they are 90% likely to attack non-varumani on sight.

When those with a legitimate need and official approval (from the thegn) to visit the varumani hold appear in the antechamber, one of the true varumani shouts across the chasm for the vibro-bridge to be activated.

Secret Door (west): This large (9'x4') door is normal to detect. One opens it by pulling down the sconce on the west wall.

Inhabitants:

1. 3 true varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LN; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 62, 59, 57; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 6-24 (two-handed sword, 2-20+4). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: huge two-handed swords; ring mail.
2. 2 bestial varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL NE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 50, 49; #AT 3; Dmg 3-6/3-6/3-10. Special defenses: regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision; immune to poison.

7-9: Chasm and Vibro-bridge

A small (50'-deep) chasm separates 7-8 and 7-10. A rudishva-era vibro-bridge is set between the two worked areas. When it is extended, it appears as a 2'-wide strip of buzzing blue energy. Despite its appearance, the bridge is harmless and safe to cross.

7-10: Vibro-bridge Control

An extremely bored lesser varumani is posted in this niche. She activates the vibro-bridge across the chasm by pulling a lever found on the wall of her niche.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 lesser varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 57; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (club, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: club.

7-11: Point Defense Array Controls

Only the thegn (7-30), his housecarls (7-29), and the court sorcerer (7-22) know of this chamber. This area contains an important piece of rudishva technology salvaged by the varumani when they fled from Level 5. A stone table holds a portable control unit for the four rudishva point defense arrays concealed in area 7-76 (the troll market). The portable point defense controller (see new technological items) is attached to a rudishva greater power supply (see new technological items). It requires an operator's key-card (copies are held by the thegn Varboka [7-30] and Ashoka, the court sorcerer [7-22]) to activate. The controller has a single screen divided into four sub-screens, plus four switches, two dials, and four joysticks. The screens are connected wirelessly to cameras on the point defense arrays; currently that means they reveal most of area 7-76, each from a slightly different perspective. While the arrays are fully automated, and can be used as such in several modes (motion-sensitive, sweep, arc-control, etc.), the joysticks allow manual control as well.

Underneath the stone table is a pile of 19 depleted greater power supplies. The power supply that is attached to the controller has only 30+3d100 hours of power remaining; recognizing this, the thegn normally leaves it unconnected to the controller so as to husband its power.

Secret Door (east, to 7-12): The secret door is easy to find (1 in 4), but hard to open without the key (copies are held by the thegn and the court sorcerer).

Secret Door (west, to 7-76): This door is also easy to detect (1 in 4). It opens when a 1"-diameter object is thrust into a small hole in the ceiling of the corridor.

GM Note: The controller is an extremely dangerous device. Of course, without an operator's key-card, it is useless. But with the card and up to four point defense arrays, it could be used to inflict devastating damage on large numbers of enemies. Indeed, it was the main reason why the thegn was able to annihilate the Archontean expedition led by Adriene 230 years ago. It could also be used on Level 10 to aid those assaulting the ziggurat of Kauket (10-32).

7-12: Lower Hall of the Thegns

This 20'-tall grand hallway is broad, clean, and brightly lit (via continual light spells cast on the ceiling). Six niches break up the dark grey of the walls. In the niches are statues of some of the early thegns; the statues are 10' tall, marble, and carved in an enthusiastic if somewhat clumsy style. Despite their mediocre quality, the varumani love and revere them; indeed, they dress them up with bright, loose clothing and paint their eyes, noses, and ears. The effect is garish. From north to south, the statues depict these thegn:

Penda, 4th Thegn
Gadila, 6th Thegn
Kubala, 7th Thegn
Rideya, 9th Thegn
Nakula, 10th Thegn
Girvala, 31st Thegn

At the foot of Girvala is the badly-mummified head of Tulliaros, polemarch of the Archontean II Legion (Sheepshead Rangers), still wearing the gilded helmet of a polemarch (for his empty tomb, see 5-21). Tulliaros was slain with most of his men in area 7-76 during the ill-fated expedition to retake the Halls some 250 years ago. The exarch in Narsileon (see World of Archontos appendix) would pay up to 1,000 gp for the return of the head (and helmet). Stealing the 'sacred relic' incurs the automatic enmity of all the varumani.

Secret Door (northwest, to 7-11): The secret door leading to this chamber is normal to find, but hard to open without the key (copies are held by the thegn and the court sorcerer). Only the thegn (7-30), his housecarls (7-29), and the court sorcerer (7-22) know of this chamber.

Treasure:

Head of Tulliaros the polemarch (1,000 gp), with gilded (but usable) Archontean helmet (125 gp). One of the pieces of cloth used to decorate Penda's statue is an ancient lemon-yellow cloak of resistance +2 taken from poor Tulliaros's body.

7-13: Porch of the Thegn

Beyond the 20'-tall wooden double doors the thegn's porch looms over the cavern of the troll market (7-76). The porch proper is sheathed in marble and boasts two basalt columns carved with images of varumani struggling with heqeti. The porch is 25' above the floor of the cavern, and is brightly lit by two rudishva light globes mounted on 6'-tall iron spikes (see new technological items). Despite its impressive appearance, the thegn almost never uses the porch, preferring to use the greeting hall (7-74). There is a 5% chance that Varboka is here with his six housecarls.

Inhabitants:

1. Varboka, the troll thegn (5%): see stats at 7-30.
2. 6 varumani housecarls (5%): see stats at 7-29.

7-14: Hunters' Lodge

The elite varumani confraternity of hunters has its headquarters in this chamber. The 15'-tall chamber is dimly lit with huge tapers made of (smelly) rendered animal fat. The chamber is filled with stuffed and mounted monster heads: a jaguar, a yeth hound, an ogre, a guardian of Thoth, a heqeti weaver, a heqeti hopper, a frost ghou, two fishmen, a dog-brother beastman, a fungal forester, a Set deacon, a giant rudishva skeleton, and an entire giant four-armed baboon. Amid all the trophies, eight hammocks are slung from the ceiling. By the doorway is a weapons rack, and three chests rest in the northeast corner. A set of heavy black velvet drapes blocks the eastern alcove, in which hang numerous sides of meat. An enormous cauldron steams in the center of the room; the hunters use it to rend the fat from their prey in order to make tallow candles. Three wooden chests carved with various animal and monster images dot the chamber.

At any given moment 4-6 of the hunters are present in the lodge, skinning hides, sharpening blades, and drinking crude mushroom wine. The hunters are widely respected and feared for their independent ways. Winning their friendship is likely to convey significant advantages upon any seeking to negotiate with Varboka the thegn. That said, the hunters are among the smartest and most ruthless of the varumani, and are more likely to attempt to kill those they encounter in the wilds than they are to befriend them. Among the better-known members of the confraternity are Nolgi and Livod, each of whom has a 5% chance of being present.

One of the senior and most-respected members of the confraternity, Bedara, has been missing for a month. She had been scouting rumors of a new danger on the chasm floor (the aroksachaul at 9-50 - see new monsters) when she was ambushed by a heqeti strike force; she is now suffering perpetual torture in area 10-8. Nolgi, in particular, would very much like news of Bedara; he and the others would proclaim eternal friendship to those who rescued Bedara.

The hunters have their own shortcut to the Dread Risers (7-2): a set of hand- and foot-holds carved in the chasm wall and extending from the concealed door down 50' to the Risers. They have hammered a series of iron hooks, pitons, and pulleys into the rock to allow them to hoist their catch from the Risers to the concealed door.

Secret Door (north): The door is easy (1 in 4) to locate. It swings soundlessly on a vertical pin; a successful open doors check pushes it open. The door leads to a narrow passage and a concealed door that gives forth onto the chasm.

Inhabitants:

1. 4-6 true varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LN; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 60; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 6-24 (two-handed sword, 2-20+4). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: huge two-handed sword; ring mail.
2. Livod the hunter, a true varumani (see new monsters) (5%): SZ L; AL LE; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 62; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10, or 6-24 (trident, 2-20+4), or 8-26 (javelin +2). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: a huge trident; 7 javelins +2; ring mail; a thick gold torc (465 gp); a pouch with 76 sp, 112 gp, and two doses of hunter's friend (see Arden Vul items). Livod's ring mail is decorated with dozens of trophies, that is, scraps of hair or hide from his successful hunts.
3. Nolgi the hunter, a true varumani (see new monsters) (5%): SZ L; AL LE; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 62; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 8-26 (spear +2, 2-20+6). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: a two-handed spear +2; an enormous mace; a heavy crossbow with 24 bolts; ring mail; two copper arm bands carved with images of heqeti (175 gp the pair); two doses of hunter's friend (see Arden Vul items); a pouch with 111 sp, 78 gp, and two doses of hunter's friend (see Arden Vul items). Nolgi wears a decorative helmet formed out of a couple of heqeti skulls, to which he has attached some streamers of colored cloth.

3. Halti the hunter, a true varumani (see new monsters) (5%): SZ L; AL LE; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 62; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 8-26 (two-handed sword +2, 2-20+6) or 7-25 (javelin +1). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: a two-handed sword +2; a net; a sheaf of 5 javelins +1; ring mail; a collection of 15 bangles of gold and silver (550 gp for the collection); and a purse with 87 sp, 131 gp, and two doses of hunter's friend (see Arden Vul items). She affects a bright yellow phrygian cap (at least when she is not stalking prey).

Treasure:

Each hunter has his/her own personal weapons, some of which are enchanted.

Weapons rack: two two-handed swords, a two-handed axe, a heavy boar spear, a halberd, and two heavy crossbows

Mounted monster heads: each (except the Set deacon) could be sold to collectors in a large city for 100-400 gp each.

Chest 1: 2 lb of Gethite lotus powder in sixteen 2-oz pieces, stolen from traders on the chasm floor (100 gp per ounce) (see new flora); 4 vials of heqeti acid drawn from fresh corpses; 8 doses of hunter's friend (see Arden Vul items); 11 doses of varumani knock-out juice (see Arden Vul items); 3 potions of waterbreathing; 2 potions of extra healing; and a potion of human control.

Chest 2: 374 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items); 298 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items); 1,149 sp; 357 gp; and 19 ancient octagonal platinum pieces (see Arden Vul items).

Chest 3: 4 pieces of ivory from a variety of unusual beasts (225 gp per piece), a weretiger pelt (300 gp), four sable pelts (100 gp each), and 3 teeth from a gold dragon (100 gp each).

7-15: Larder

The varumani store a wide variety of useful items here. Numerous dried colossal mushrooms, harvested from the chasm floor, hang from the ceiling, as do already-cured sides of meat. Stone bins hold the following: salt, barley flour, wheat flour, dried beans, mixed nuts, lard, and oil. A pair of armoires hold prosaic items, including a 50% chance for any item from the standard equipment list. Buried at the bottom of the bin of dried beans is a cursed loadstone (stone of weight).

7-16: Mess Hall and Kitchen

The hall is brightly lit with continual light. A 10'-long and 5'-tall stone table occupies the center of the room; on it sits a Nutri-Vore 2000 food generator (see new technological items). As the thegn has announced that the varumani stock of communal power supplies has been exhausted, however, the Nutri-Vore 2000 is currently not operable; should a power supply be attached to it, of course, it would again be capable of producing Arden Vul cakes (see Arden Vul items). The thegn is aware of a few privately-held power supplies, but is not in a position to confiscate them and, in truth, feels that the few remaining supplies are better used elsewhere. Still, should a new stock of power supplies come into existence, the thegn will be happy to win plaudits by re-connecting the Nutri-vore 2000.

Around the rest of the chamber are wooden trestle tables and benches. Hanging on the west wall are two enormous casks of water. There is a 50% chance for 2-12 varumani to be present in the mess hall, jovially eating, drinking, and singing songs.

Inhabitants:

- 1-6 lesser varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 61, 60, 59, 58, 57, 54; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (club, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: club.
- 1-6 true varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 61, 59, 58, 57, 55, 55; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 6-24 (two-handed sword, 2-20+4). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: huge two-handed sword.

Treasure:

Nutri-vore 2000 food generator (see new technological items).

7-16A: Kitchen

Two diva ogres reign as the resident cooks. Their domain contains several wooden work tables, a fireplace against the north wall (with vents to the chasm), a stone basin for washing, and a cabinet full of plates and cups. The niche to the far east is rough carved, and contains a 3'-diameter hole which leads down 5' to area 7-34. The cooks use this as for waste disposal; not surprisingly, it smells foul.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 ogre cooks: SZ L; AL CE; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 4+1; HP 25, 22; #AT 1; Dmg 1-10, or by weapon.

7-17: Rudigaya Clan Quarters

The members of one of the ancient varumani clans –the Rudigaya – dwell in this chamber. The chamber is 30' tall and boasts typical, if ancient, varumani construction. Five towering stacks of barracks-style bunks dominate both the north and south entrances. These stacks are 10' long, 4' wide and formed of very old orange plasteel. Each stack has seven bunks in it. In addition, the walls of each corner or 'wing' of the chamber have an additional seven bunks carved in each. In total there are 98 bunks. The middle of the chamber, a 20'x30' rectangle, is open, and provides living space for the clan. The central, open area is brightly lit, while the bunk stacks are in shadows. The walls are regularly painted in a bright cerulean blue.

The Rudigaya is the smallest of the four clans, and despite the grand size of the chamber it is home to only 19 true and about 20 lesser varumani. At any given moment 50% of the clan is likely to be present here, sleeping, relaxing, or plotting.

Benches border the central living space. To the east are a several tables, with dice, game boards (chess), scores of clay mugs, and a large keg of cold water. To the west are a pair of targets used in dagger and javelin practice, a sanded wrestling pit, and three clan chests.

The northernmost table contains several codices bound in heqeti hide: A Rudigaya's Best Friend and Success (see Arden Vul books), plus a tome of understanding.

Inhabitants:

1. 9 true varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 63, 61, 60, 59, 59, 58, 55, 53, 50; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 6-24 (two-handed sword, 2-20+4). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: huge two-handed sword.
2. 10 lesser varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 60, 59, 59, 58, 57, 57, 55(x3), 51; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (mace, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: mace.
3. Hraskaya, a true varumani (see new monsters), and chief of the clan (25%): true varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LN; AC 0; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 60; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 8-26 (two-handed sword +2, 2-20+6). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: huge two-handed sword +2; ring mail +2.
4. 4 varumani infants, one of which is true (see new monsters): SZ M; AL LN; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 4; HP 25, 21, 20, 17; #AT 3; Dmg 1-2/1-2/1-6. Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision.

Treasure:

Books: a tome of understanding; A Rudigaya's Best Friend; Success (see Arden Vul books for the last two).

The chests are unlocked and open to all clan members. Among them are a total of 9,159 silver pieces; several dozen throwing daggers made of a variety of substances, including six daggers +1 and a non-magical dagger with a hidden venom injector in the hilt; 8 vials of poison of varying toxicity; a crude but surprisingly useful Rudishva Glyphik-to-Heqeti dictionary; four coils of silk rope; three clips of narcotic gas darts for a rudishva dart thrower (see new technological items); three empty rudishva lesser power supplies and one full one; 5 copper, 3 bronze, and a brown rudishva identity plaques, a brown plastic plaque and a pink plastic plaque (see new technological items); and a dozen Arden Vul cakes (see Arden Vul items).

7-18: Vanaraya Clan Quarters

The basic orientation of this chamber is comparable to that of 7-17, at least in terms of the bunkbeds and general layout. The walls are painted a soothing ochre color.

The Vanaraya were traditionally the first of the clans, given their descent from Vanara (see 5-139). Currently they have lost some of their status, and have only 18 true and 31 lesser varumani members. About 50% of the clan is present in this chamber at any given time.

Benches border the central living space. The center is occupied with four large tables pushed together, on which are dice, game boards (backgammon), scores of clay mugs, and a double-sized keg of Hak's mushroom ale (30 gp; see 7-94). To the west is a wrestling pit and weapons rack along with three chests. The rack contains three two-handed swords, two large battle-axes, two halberds, two rudishva dart throwers (but with only 2 clips of ordinary darts – see new technological items), four ballistic batons (see new technological items), and a sheaf of 12 javelins. To the east is a pile of randomly sized pieces of wood, string and rope, bits of metal and plasteel, and so forth. This is a construction zone, where the Vanaraya experiment with new engineering projects. Currently the area contains a set of 2'-tall pillars connected by string (a model for an improved troll lift apparatus), and a set of 6'-long sliding, interlocking bits of colored plasteel (a portable bridge that extends up to 15'). Amid the tools and projects is also a rudishva security encoder (see new technological items), used to code troll chests to a new handprint.

Inhabitants:

1. 9 true varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 63, 61, 60, 59, 59, 58, 55, 53, 50; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 6-24 (two-handed sword, 2-20+4). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: huge two-handed sword.
2. 16 lesser varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 60, 59, 59, 58(x3), 57(x3), 55(x3), 54(x3), 51; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (club, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: club.
3. Vedreya One-Eye, a true varumani (see new monsters) (33% chance): SZ L; AL LN; AC 0; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 63; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 6-24 (two-handed axe +2, 2-20+6). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: huge two-handed axe +2; ring mail +2.
4. 6 varumani infants, 2 of which are true (see new monsters): SZ M; AL LN; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 4; HP 26, 25, 21, 20, 19, 17; #AT 3; Dmg 1-2/1-2/1-6. Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision.

Treasure:

Chests 1 and 2 are unlocked and open to all clan members. They contain a total of 6,479 silver pieces, plus 36 small bits of carved plasteel, ivory, and bone in a variety of shapes (worth 5 gp each to a collector of art naif), a pair of large silver platters embossed with a sheepshead and the Archontean numeral II (GM Note: plunder from the massacre of Adrienic's expedition; see 5-18 et seq.), worth 125 gp each; 3 bolts of silk (purple, yellow, and blue) worth 250 gp each; 2 tokens of Arden (see Arden Vul items); numerous worthless objects of daily life (cups, mugs, IOUs, small knives, etc.); and several rudishva identity plaques: three copper, a brown, two bronze, a pink, and an orange plaque.

Chest 3 is a troll chest (see new technological items) keyed to the hand of Vedreya One-Eye, the current clan chief. Inside are complete maps of the entirety of the varumani areas of Level 7 (areas 7-1 to 7-76); the chambers on the maps are neatly labelled by function in Varumani Semi-glyphik. Also in the chest is the helmet of Vanara, a rudishva battle helmet (see new technology) with special significance to the varumani in general and to the Vanaraya in particular. Affixed to the inside of the helmet is a carefully folded bit of parchment with an accurate sketch of the non-secret areas of the Midnight Road (areas 5-86 to 5-137, not including 5-99 to 5-104). Finally, Vedreya has a stash of 2 fully-charged lesser power supplies (see new technological items) that he's saving for emergencies.

7-19: Sorcerous Practice

This space is where the varumani sorcerers hone their spellcraft, mainly by casting spells at each other. For obvious reasons the area is bereft of valuables or possessions, since they keep being incinerated, destroyed or otherwise damaged. Several life-size targets have been painted on the walls: two are kaliyani in different poses, one is a heqeti hopper, and the fourth is a human dressed in archaic imperial field plate. The walls, ceiling, and floors, bear numerous scorch marks and scars.

The northern niche has a barrel in which a variety of charred, snapped, and broken sticks. One of the charred sticks is actually a rod of beguiling (13 charges).

Provided they are not required elsewhere, there is a flat 10% chance that the sorcerers are practicing some spells. If that is the case, the court sorcerer, the first adept, and all the apprentices will be present here.

Inhabitants:

1. There is a 10% chance that the court sorcerer, the first adept, and all the apprentices are here (see stats at 7-21, 7-22, and 7-24).

Treasure:

Rod of beguiling (13 charges).

7-20: Niche with Summoning Circle

Within the niche is a 10'-diameter solid silver summoning circle inset into the stone. The circle takes the form of a five-pointed star surrounded by a circle. The silver could be pried from the floor and sold for 335 gp. There is a 5% chance that the sorcerers have summoned a type I demon to the circle.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 type I demon: SZ L; AL CE; AC 0; MV 120'; 180' flying (Class C); HD 8; HP 57; #AT 5; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-8/1-8/1-6; MR 50%. Constant effect: infravision. Special attacks: cause fear; darkness 5' radius. Special defenses: half damage from cold, electricity, fire, and gas. Special: levitate; detect invisible objects; telekinesis; gate a type I demon (10% chance).

7-21: Apprentices' Quarters

Although this 10'-tall chamber is filled with five bunkbeds, enough for 10 apprentice sorcerers, the varumani have only identified five youth with the aptitude for magic. The apprentices have painted a large caricature of Ashoka next to the door; whenever they are feeling abused they adorn the painting with funny objects, including mice on string, odd-looking mushrooms, and ordure. A communal chest holds a dozen varumani-sized robes of rough wool, as well as the apprentices' spell books.

Secret Door (north): The apprentices are ignorant of this door. The door is 5' tall and wide and is difficult to locate (1 in 8). It opens by pushing it inward.

Inhabitants:

1. Arjun the apprentice, a male true varumani (see new monsters), 2nd-level magic user: SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 49; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 6-24 (staff, 2-20+4). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: an iron-shod staff; a purse with 5 carnelians (50 gp each) and a copper plaque carved with a dragon in flight (225 gp). Memorized spells: comprehend languages, sleep. Spell book: comprehend languages, dancing lights, detect magic, hold portal, light, read magic, sleep, unseen servant.
2. Bindu the apprentice, a female true varumani (see new monsters), 3rd-level magic user: SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 51; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 6-24 (staff, 2-20+4). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: a wooden staff topped by a 5"-diameter copper ball; a copy of the Lay of Marius Invictus by Lucius Cornelius scriptor (see Arden Vul books); a purse with 43 sp and 37 gp. Memorized spells: charm person, jump, continual light. Spell book: charm person, comprehend languages, detect magic, feather fall, jump, magic missile, spider climb, write; continual light, knock, locate object, wizard lock.
3. Chanda the apprentice, female lesser varumani (see new monsters), 4th-level magic user: SZ L; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 53; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-25 (iron-shod staff +1, 2-20+5). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: iron-shod staff +1; a sapphire Sortian eye (see new magic items); and a purse with 3 octagonal platinum coins (see Arden Vul items), 69 sp and 57 gp. Memorized spells: detect magic, identify, magic missile; darkness

15' radius, mirror image. Spell book: affect normal fires, comprehend languages, detect magic, floating disk, identify, light, magic missile, mending, read magic, shield, ventriloquism; audible glamor, darkness 15' radius, detect evil, detect invisibility, ESP, mirror image, scare, stinking cloud.

4. Jagat the apprentice, male lesser varumani (see new monsters), 3rd-level magic user: SZ L; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 50; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-25 (iron-shod staff +1, 2-20+5); Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: iron-shod staff +1; a pouch with 3 carnelians (50 gp each) and 89 sp; and an Archontean military brooch (125 gp) discovered on the floor of 7-76. Memorized spells: burning hands, enlarge, levitate. Spell book: burning hands, comprehend languages, enlarge, friends, hold portal, message, shield, unseen servant; levitate, pyrotechnics.

5. Kalyan the apprentice, male true varumani (see new monsters), 5th-level magic user: SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 55; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 6-24 (staff, 2-20+4) or 2-5 (darts +1). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: iron-shod staff; a belt of 6 darts +1; a purse with 8 jasper gems (50 gp each) plus 33 sp and 47 gp; and a cloak of arachnida. Memorized spells: charm person, comprehend languages, identify, magic missile, darkness 15' radius, knock, suggestion. Spell book: affect normal fires, charm person, comprehend languages, detect magic, enlarge, feather fall, floating disk, friends, identify, light, magic missile, read magic, shield, sleep, spider climb; continual light, darkness 15' radius, detect evil, ESP, knock, levitate, locate object, magic mouth, pyrotechnics, ray of enfeeblement, web; blink, explosive runes, gust of wind, hold person, lightning bolt, suggestion.

7-22: Ashoka, the Court Sorcerer

The powerful and influential varumani court sorcerer, Ashoka, resides here. The large chamber has a hammock in the northwest corner with a troll chest (see new technological items) under it, a large work desk in the center, a scroll and codex cabinet by the door, and an alchemical apparatus to the south.

As a member of the Rudigaya clan, Ashoka is constantly being pressured by his clansmen to manipulate the thegn; he is firmly loyal to Varboka, however, and has refused such overtures. Ashoka is highly intelligent and a keen judge of character; Varboka relies on him in almost all decision-making.

The alchemical apparatus is valuable (750 gp); mixed in with the retorts and glassware are several potions, including potions of the berserk (see new magic items), clarity (see new magic items), growth and polymorph.

In the cabinet are several magic user scrolls and a few rare codices. The scrolls are of stinking cloud, extension I, ice storm, magic jar, monster summoning III, and reincarnation. The codices include: the Ancient Ones, by Laelius the Praetor; Dogmatics of Father Set; Pandects of Thaumaturgical Visitation; Planar Dwellers and their Powers, by Nominus Obscurus; "Property of Eustachius the Cantor"; and Thoth in all his Forms (see Arden Vul books for all).

Inside the troll chest (see new technological items), which is keyed to Ashoka, are Ashoka's spell book, a 6'-long 'string' of silver, coiled like solder; 3 lb of arcenum (see new magic items); gold and sapphire Sortian eyes (see new magic items); a leather sack with 451 sp and 399 gp; a silk pouch with four black opals (1000 gp each); a pair of gauntlets of fire absorption (see new magic items); a human-sized guard cap (see new magic items); and a packet of immobilizing mesh (see new magic items).

Secret Door (south): This door is difficult to discover (1 in 8). A keyhole exists in the pavement in front of the door; only Ashoka has the key, but the First Adept (7-24) knows of the door's existence.

Inhabitants:

1. Ashoka the Court Sorcerer, a true varumani (see new monsters), 12th-level magic user: SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 62; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 5-11 (staff of the magi 1-6+4). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighter or 12th-level magic user, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: keys to areas 7-11, 7-23, 7-28, and 7-67; a sky blue rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items); an operator's keycard for the weapons controller in 7-11; a rod of absorption; and a staff of the magi (21 charges). Memorized spells: comprehend languages, detect magic, identify, sleep; continual light, detect evil, levitate, ray of enfeeblement; dispel magic, fireball, slow, suggestion; confusion, monster summoning II, remove curse, wall of fire; conjure elemental, contact other plane, telekinesis, wall of force; monster summoning IV.

Ashoka's Spell Book: All standard first level spells; all standard second level spells; blink, clairaudience, dispel magic, fireball, gust of wind, haste, hold person, fly, invisibility 10' radius, item, lightning bolt, monster summoning I, slow, suggestion, tongues; charm monster, confusion, dig, dimension door, extension I, hallucinatory terrain, ice storm, monster summoning II, polymorph other, remove curse, wall of fire; cone of cold, conjure elemental, contact other plane, interposing hand, magic jar, monster summoning III, telekinesis, wall of force; forceful hand, globe of invulnerability, monster summoning IV, stone to flesh.

Treasure:

See above.

7-23: Sorcerer's Secret Chamber

The existence of this hidden chamber is known only to the Court Sorcerer and First Adept, but the only key is held by the former.

The chamber is rough carved. Its only decoration is a large slogan painted on the south wall: "The Truth Can Hurt. Keep This Secret!" A stone table stands in the center of the chamber. On it sit two incredible treasures that the court sorcerers have kept squirreled away for centuries. The first is the Testament of Vanara (see Arden Vul books), and describes in detail the collapse of the rudishva hegemony, the treachery of Rudiga, the death of Druva, and the wanderings of the varumani. It describes the passage from 7-28 to 5-141, and clearly describes Vanara's resting place. Making the contents of the Testament widely known to the varumani would cause serious repercussions at the thegn's court: 1) the Rudigaya clan would be shamed, and its members marginalized; 2) the harmony of the varumani society would be broken, leading to factionalization and infighting; 3) expeditions to reclaim Level 5 would be mounted almost immediately. For political reasons, therefore, a long succession of court sorcerers has kept the Testament secret from even the thegn.

The second treasure comprises two incredibly rare Priscian texts, the Hidden Codex and a heretofore unknown portion of the Fragment (see Arden Vul books for both). Information derived from the texts would be extremely valuable to the Archontean authorities in Narsileon or the modern Priscians (at areas 9-58 to 9-64 and elsewhere). Ashoka has correctly intuited from these texts that Isadora's resting place is nearby, and he would like to locate it (GM: the location is SL11-19).

7-24: Glif, the First Adept

This chamber is the abode of the First Adept, the second most important sorcerer at the varumani court. The current First Adept is Glif, a lesser varumani. Glif has had the chamber painted a cheery yellow, over which she likes to practice painting images of monsters and other Arden Vul denizens. Images of chasm cephalopods, subterranean lizards, carcass creepers, and one of Kerbog Khan's basic exploration automatons are visible. If guests ask about the automaton, Glif reveals that she encountered it at 8-62 ("in the Nether Reaches, in one of the ruined corridors north of the troll lift"). Glif has a hammock, an ordinary wooden chest, a work-table, a scroll case, and a gagged Priscian attached to the north wall with manacles.

Ashoka shocked the thegn's court by appointing Glif as First Adept, as there has never been a lesser varumani in any position of sorcerous importance (and, indeed, only a handful of lesser varumani apprentices over the centuries). Glif is certainly worthy of the post, however, as she is extremely intelligent and possessed of a keen insight into varumani psychology. She plays up the 'dumb' lesser varumani stereotype, and wears 'primitive' attire, including a mountain lion head and pelt as a cape, but is in truth one of the most canny varumani of them all. Despite Ashoka's trust and her obvious ability, Varboka is a bit off-put by her. Glif is quite the explorer, and has been known to accompany members of the Hunters' Lodge (7-14), and especially Nolgi, on expeditions to the Nether Reaches (Level 8).

Glif also has an imp as a familiar; it goes by the bizarre name 'Elliott'.

The Priscian prisoner is named Noreden. Glif and Nolgi encountered Noreden in the Nether Reaches. After slaying her conversi, they captured her and brought her back to the varumani court for interrogation. Noreden has thus far revealed little, and Glif and Ashoka are growing frustrated; more advanced torture is imminent. The sorcerers are seeking specific information on the access points to the Priscian areas (9-58 to 9-64), and details of its layout. The thegn fully supports the sorcerers' efforts, as he worries about the existence of a powerful force in an unknown location. Varboka is unaware that Ashoka is also interrogating Noreden with the hopes of extracting information about a hidden tomb connected with the Sortians (i.e., the Tomb of Isadora at Sub-Level 11). Unfortunately Noreden knows nothing of that tomb, nor even much about Isadora.

Inhabitants:

1. Glif, the First Adept, a female lesser varumani (see new monsters), 8th-level magic user: SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 57; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 9-14 (short sword +4, 1-6+8). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: keys to 5-28 and 7-67; a gold Sortian eye (see new magic items); a rudishva useful palm (of correction) with 2 charges (see new magic items); a wand of secret door and trap detection (73 charges); and a short sword +4. Her memorized spells are: comprehend languages, feather fall, Frigg's flatulence (see new spells), magic missile; levitate, Pol's endless sneezes (see new spells), the pummeling fists of Arak-Zhorr (see new spells); dispel magic, haste, lightning bolt; confusion, wall of ice.
2. 'Elliott', imp familiar of Glif: SZ S; AL LE; AC 2; MV 60', 180' flying (Class C); HD 2+2; HP 14; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4; MR 25%. Special attacks: poison. Special defenses: silver, or +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to fire, cold and electricity; save vs magic as 7 HD creatures. Special: polymorph self (to animal form); detect magic; detect good; detect magic; invisibility; regenerate 1 hp/round, suggestion 1/day.
2. Noreden Galesdottir, 7th-level female elf magic user: SZ M; AL LN; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 7; HP 12 (max 22); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 9, INT 18, WIS 15, DEX 16, CON 10, CHA 13. Noreden's spell book was destroyed when she was captured.

Treasure:

In addition to the items carried on her person (see above), Glif's chest contains: a full set of beautiful black silk robes embroidered with dragons, which she wears in private (75 gp); a pouch holding 10 black pearls (500 gp each); a sack with 357 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items) and 121 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items); another sack with 7,456 sp and 3,718 gp; 3 lb of arcenum (see new magic items); and her spell book.

Her scroll case contains the following scrolls: find familiar, suggestion, locate object, wizard lock, conjure elemental, polymorph self, and remove curse. The work area has a fine map of the western areas of Level 8 (areas 8-1, 8-3, and 8-27 to 8-46), lacking only secret doors; strewn about it are Noreden's Priscian chain mail, Sortian baculus (imbued with blink), and Priscian gladius +2 (see new magic items for each).

Glif's Spell Book: Burning hands, charm person, comprehend languages, detect magic, feather fall, find familiar, friends, Frigg's flatulence (see new spells), identify, light, magic missile, read magic, shield, spider climb; continual light, detect evil, ESP, invisibility, knock, levitate, locate object, mirror image, Pol's endless sneezes (see new spells), the pummeling fists of Arak-Zhorr (see new spells), pyrotechnics, stinking cloud, web, wizard lock; clairaudience, dispel magic, gust of wind, haste, hold person, lightning bolt, slow, suggestion, tongues; confusion, dig, dimension door, fire shield, minor globe of invulnerability, polymorph self, remove curse, wall of ice.

7-25: Pendaya Clan Quarters

The basic orientation of this chamber is comparable to that of 7-17, at least in terms of the bunkbeds at the east and west ends and the open common space in between. The walls are painted bright yellow; the Pendaya have added large purple rings (symbolizing fidelity) with the letter 'P' on them (in Varumani).

Despite a slight inferiority complex at being descended from a varumani who was not one of the original three thegns, the Pendaya are currently powerful and self-satisfied. They maintain a roster of 21 true and 37 lesser varumani members, although only about 40% are present at any given time, eating, resting, and generally having a good time.

Benches border the central living space. Three long trestle tables abut the north wall. A sanded wrestling pit is to the south. The current chief of the clan, Gavra the Easy-Going, is interested in wrestling and physical skills, and thus the common area has a web of ropes connected to the ceiling, neighboring bunks, and iron bars set into the walls. The clan uses this apparatus to practice climbing, jumping, and general fun. A several weapons racks rest against the south wall, along with two clan chests and a stand holding Gavra's personal armor (ring mail +2). The weapons racks hold six halberds, six two-handed swords, two huge clubs, three two-handed axes, a score of javelins, 2 rudishva dart throwers (see new technological items), and six clips of darts (2 immobilizing, 2 explosive, and 2 narcotic).

Should combat break out in the clan room, 25% of the varumani who are present will take to the ropes and attempt either to use missile weapons or to drop down on opponents from above.

Inhabitants:

1. 11 true varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 63, 61, 60, 59, 58, 58, 57, 55, 53, 50; #AT 3 or 1;

Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 6-24 (two-handed sword, 2-20+4). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: huge two-handed sword.

2. 18 lesser varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 60, 59(x3), 58(x3), 57(x3), 55(x3), 54(x3), 53, 51; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (mattock, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: mattock.

3. Gavra the Easy-Going, a true varumani (see new monsters) (20% chance): SZ L; AL LN; AC 0; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 60; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 8-26 (halberd +2, 2-20+6). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: halberd +2; ring mail +2.

4. 6 varumani infants (see new monsters), 1 of which is true: SZ M; AL LN; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 4; HP 26, 25, 21, 20, 19, 17; #AT 3; Dmg 1-2/1-2/1-6. Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision.

Treasure:

Within the clan chests are the following: 7,392 sp and 531 gp; an ioun stone (pale green); a rudishva data crystal (see new technological items) entitled Anatomy of the Enemy (see Arden Vul books); a faded scroll entitled The Time of Darkened Skies, written in Semi-glyphik (see Arden Vul books); a grey soapstone statuette of Kauket, with white veins, taken on Level 9 (250 gp); and an array of rudishva identity plaques (see new technological items), 4 copper, one brown, one sky blue, one bronze, and one pink plastic.

7-26: Druvaya Clan Quarters

The basic orientation of this chamber is comparable to that of 7-17, at least in terms of the bunkbeds at the east and west ends and a 20'x30' open space between them. The walls are painted in electric green spotted with bright silver 'suns'.

The Druvaya clan is the least interested in politics; its members are always more interested in a good, clean fight. The clan is currently composed of 22 true and 46 lesser varumani. Many of the Druvaya are found as guards elsewhere, however, so the clan hold is not particularly crowded. At any given time about 9 true and 18 lesser varumani are present in the chamber, sleeping, relaxing, or good-naturedly beating each other up. Their clan-chief, Igrippa the Unruly is frequently found here, clowning around with 'the boys and girls.'

Battered benches border the central living space. A solitary trestle table stands to the north. It has a number of sharp daggers thrust into it (for the knife game), while a score of cheap clay mugs are piled near a double-sized keg of Hak's mushroom ale (30 gp; see 7-94). The bulk of the area is given over to a sparring ring set off by ropes attached to spears thrust into holes in the ground, and to a sanded wrestling area. A long weapons rack against the south wall holds six halberds, six two-handed swords, six huge clubs, six two-handed axes, a score of javelins, a pair of rudishva ballistic batons (see new technological items), six large crossbows, and 120 large crossbow bolts.

Inhabitants:

1. 9 true varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 63, 61, 60, 59, 58, 57, 55, 53; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 6-24 (two-handed sword, 2-20+4). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: huge two-handed sword.
2. 18 lesser varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 60, 59(x3), 58(x3), 57(x3), 55(x3), 54(x3), 53, 51; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (club, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: club.
3. Igrippa the Unruly, a true varumani (see new monsters) (33% chance): SZ L; AL LN; AC 0; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 60; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-25 (mattock +1, 2-20+5). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: mattock +1, ring mail +2.
4. 8 varumani infants (see new monsters), 2 of which are true: SZ M; AL LN; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 4; HP 26, 25, 23, 22, 21, 20, 19, 17; #AT 3; Dmg 1-2/1-2/1-6. Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision.

Treasure:

Underneath the table is a trough-sized wooden box containing 5,743 sp; 16 dried mushrooms (8 white ribs, 2 red veils, 2 orange lamps, and 4 cloud caps – see new flora for all); a vial of stone salve; a mask of the skull (carved as a kaliyani skull/face); and several rudishva identity plaques: 2 copper, one rust, and one pink.

7-27: Thegn's Audience Hall

This vast, 25'-tall hemispherical hall is one of the central ritual chambers for the varumani. The walls are natural stone, but painted bright blue. The curved east wall contains a 30"-tall frieze (starting 4' from the ground) that the original varumani brought with them from Level 5. Composed of high-relief figural and geometric sculptures, the frieze tells the story of the rudishva hegemony's conquest of the middle halls and its defeat of the heqeti. Tall, spindly, horned bipeds (rudishva), as well as thick, muscled bipeds (varumani) are common, while bird-men (varuda) and a few sinuous bipeds (kaliyani) are also visible. The final scenes depict varumani assaulting a ziggurat structure, around which scores of heqeti are dying. A bright red curtain hides the hallway to the west; on the curtain is embroidered a massive grinning varumani head.

The chamber is dominated by the chairs of thegns. These simple plasteel seats are affixed by iron bolts to a 5'-tall granite dais. The central chair alone shows signs of wear; the flanking chairs are, in fact, dusty.

Most of the time (93%) the Audience Hall is filled with 3-30 varumani youth, who noisily and good-naturedly practice wrestling and martial arts here.

Special Ceremonies: On rare occasions, the hall is filled with varumani for a Moot or an Audience. In the case of the varumani Moot (which is underway 1% of the time when PCs first arrive), the thegn assembles all available varumani to discuss some pressing matter, usually one with clear implications to the entire people. Such matters might include a decision to go to war, to ally with a certain faction, to occupy a new section of halls, to devote resources to a particularly costly or dangerous task, etc. At a Moot the thegn stands on the dais and conducts an open discussion, in which any varumani is free to speak; about 65 true, 70 lesser, and 30 bestial varumani will be present. Outsiders, unless they are formal allies or have something pertinent to add to the discussion, are not permitted to attend.

An Audience is a more regular (6% chance when PCs first arrive) occurrence. At such meetings, the thegn meets with important allies to discuss, generally, their requests, and/or to offer a judgment in the case of a dispute. Either way, the thegn is accompanied by his housecarls (7-29), his court sorcerer (7-22), and 2-40 true, 2-40 lesser, and 1-20 bestial varumani. Outsiders (including PCs) are only admitted to an Audience if they are already well-known and admired by the varumani.

Inhabitants:

Varies, see above.

Treasure:

A hidden compartment in the frieze holds some valuables. It is activated by locating and pressing a catch found in the heqeti ziggurat represented on the frieze. The release causes a section of the frieze to swing open, revealing a 2'x2'x1' space within which are the following: a silver plastic rudishva identity plaque, a rudishva gas grenade, and a rudishva personal defense array with a full lesser power supply (see new technological items for all). The varumani are ignorant of the existence of this valuable hoard.

7-28: Cave of Grateful Respite

The varumani use this cave for meditation and contemplation. Several benches and stools have been carved into the rock, but otherwise it is rough and natural, with colorful lichens, flowstone, and not a few stalagmites and stalactites.

All varumani save the thegn (7-30), the court sorcerer (7-22) and the first adept (7-24) believe the cave's name, "Cave of Grateful Respite," to be connected to its current meditative purpose. But those leaders know the truth, namely that it was the first place of respite found by the varumani who fled from Level 5 during the collapse of the rudishva hegemony. It is thus deeply connected to the origin story of the varumani. More significantly, the secret door on the west wall provides access to a set of caves hiding a secret route to Level 5 (see area 7-88). Varboka, Ashoka and Glif are the only who know of the secret door and the fact that it leads to somewhere near their ancient halls, but even they have been unable to proceed further than area 5-141. That is, they have not managed to discover the connections to the Midnight Road (5-135) or the resting place of Vanara (5-139), even if they suspect that area 5-141 ought to lead to someplace important.

Secret Door (west): This door is difficult to locate (1 in 8) and is tall and narrow. The door opens to any who declaims “Open in the name of Vanara” in Varumani before it; otherwise, only force or magic will open it.

7-29: Thegn’s Housecarls

The thegn’s twelve housecarls reside in this chamber. It is fairly spartan, with twelve hammocks, a water barrel, a pair of communal chests, and some weapons racks. At any given time six of the housecarls are present with Varboka while the others kill time in this chamber. At important ritual or diplomatic moments, however, the full complement of twelve accompanies the thegn. If Varboka is in his private chamber (7-30), though, all twelve housecarls will be present here. The housecarls are all fully loyal to Varboka.

Inhabitants:

1. 6 or 12 true varumani housecarls (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LN; AC 0; MV 90+; HD 8; HP 61, 61, 60(x4), 59(x5); #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 8-26 (two-handed sword +2, 2-20+6). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: huge two-handed sword +2; ring mail +2. If Varboka is in area 7-30, there are 12 housecarls here; otherwise there are 6.

Treasure:

The communal chests contain several varieties of dried meat; six packs of playing cards (2 gp each); eight sets of dice (10 sp each); a dozen silver drinking cups (15 gp each); six knives with elk-horn handles (5 gp each); a set of Archontean chessmen in ivory (25 gp each, or 650 gp for the set); a head of an Archontean nobleman carved out of ivory, and decorated with ebony and gold (375 gp); a pair of beautiful ivory drinking horns carved with Wisikin scenes (225 gp each); a large polar bear fleece (55 gp); and a cash reserve of 757 gp and 1,238 sp.

7-30: Varboka, the Troll Thegn

This chamber hosts the private quarters of Varboka the troll thegn. The walls are painted a pleasing sea green, over which has been added a fine (in varumani terms) portrait of Varboka. Several mottoes are also visible, all written in spidery Semi-glyphik: “the People cannot be stopped!”, “the only good dead hopper is a cooked hopper!”, “Smile if you love the thegn!” and so forth.

Varboka’s bed is a simple wooden affair, loaded with silk sheets (125 gp) and rare furs (3 pelts, worth 375 gp total). His armor and weapon rack stands by the door, while a pot of stew bubbles over a tripod of heating (see new magic items) around which cluster four stools. He owns a fine, teak, inclined writing desk (450 gp, but difficult to move) that is pushed against the south wall, under his portrait. A keg of fine brandy completes the scene (225 gp).

Lying atop the writing desk is a draft of an ultimatum to the goblin king, Weskenim (SL4-22), demanding formal submission of the goblins and the installation of varumani ‘advisors’ on Sub-Level 4. This document would be extremely valuable to Weskenim (500 gp), and would win the alliance of the goblins for he/she who delivered it. Within the writing desk are the following: a pouch of silvered sand (100 gp); a set of fine writing inks and quills (35 gp); a primer written in Semi-glyphik and entitled ‘How to Write Elegantly’ (see Arden Vul books); a quire of ruled parchment with sample ‘letters’ in Semi-glyphik, and space to practice them; and Varboka’s Logbook (see Arden Vul books). The desk has a secret compartment of which Varboka is ignorant: if the correct catch is found and depressed, a small panel pops open, revealing an exceptionally crafted platinum orb on which had been delicately etched the shape of the continents from the varumani homeworld (8,000 gp).

Varboka knows there was something ‘wrong’ with the evidence that implicated Gog (5-2) in treason, and caused his banishment. Varboka will pay up to 2,500 gp if evidence of Gog’s innocence is found; that evidence is located in area 8-151, with Muq.

Varboka is also deeply alarmed at the sudden reappearance of kaliyani in Arden Vul (a band of hunters slew three kaliyani on the chasm floor two months ago). He has issued a bounty of 100 gp apiece for kaliyani fangs. Although nervous about this development, he also greets the prospect of a ‘good war’ against the kaliyani (one that all varumani would support) with growing interest, since a victory would cement his reputation as one of the great thegns. As yet, however, Varboka is ignorant of the location of the kaliyani; indeed, his people have not encountered any other kaliyani after that first battle.

When present in his chamber (see below for chances), he is likely to be found entertaining his two favorite companions, Heska and Breg.

Secret Door (east): The door is easy (1 in 4) to locate. Only the key held by Varboka will open it.

Initial Location of Varboka

D100	Location of Varboka
1-5	7-13
6-12	7-27
13-32	7-30
33-35	7-32
36-65	7-73
66-95	7-74
96-100	Moving about Level 7

Inhabitants:

1. Varboka the thegn, a true varumani (see new monsters) (20% chance; see chart above): SZ L; AL LN; AC -1; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 63; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 8-28 (two-handed vorpal sword +4, 2-20+8). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: a two-handed vorpal sword +4 that he calls 'Peacemaker'; ring mail +3; a purse with 37 gp, 112 sp, and 7 octagonal platinum coins (see Arden Vul items); keys to 7-11, 7-28, 7-31, 7-37, 7-39, and 7-67; an operator's keycard for the controller of 7-11; and a pink rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items).
2. Heska, a true varumani (see new monsters), only if Varboka is present: SZ L; AL LN; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 60; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 6-24 (two-handed sword, 2-20+4). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: huge two-handed sword; ring mail.
3. Breg, a lesser varumani (see new monsters), only if Varboka is present: SZ L; AL LE; AC 3; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 55; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (mattock, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: mattock; shield.

Treasure:

See above.

7-31: Varumani Treasure Hall

All varumani know that this chamber exists, but only the thegn knows how to access it. The hall is 10' tall, undecorated, and brightly lit by two rudishva light globes (see new technological items). Troll chests (see new technological items), stone tables, and steel racks are crammed into the room, scattered among which is a king's ransom in treasure.

The items in the north ell, including two troll chests, are the thegn's personal hoard, while the items just inside the secret door from 7-30 are what is known as the 'Mighty Strength of the People.' The 'Mighty Strength' comprises ancient objects and weapons that the varumani bore with them in their flight from Level 5, as well as some famous trophies. Theoretically any varumani in the court can formally request that the thegn produce any or all of the 'Mighty Strength' to be viewed and/or used by the assembled clans. Should this request be supported by representatives from the other three clans, then the thegn is obligated to produce the goods. In practice, this sort of request is rare; indeed, the last formal request was made 250 years ago at the time of the Archontean expedition of Adrienic (see 5-18 et seq.).

The Mighty Strength of the People: Scattered about the tables are 2 laser rifles, 6 laser pistols, a laser deflector shield, a sonic fence, 3 stun batons, two broken Nutri-Vore 2000 devices (for all of which, see new technological items), as well as embalmed corpses of a heqeti weaver, a kaliyani, and a human. Alas, no power supplies remain for any of these potent devices. Both troll chests are keyed to the hand of the thegn. The first troll chest contains 10 25-lb bars of platinum worth 6,250 gp each, plus a piece of ancient pink plasteel on which is written the following, in Semi-glyphik: "Let the People not forget their home, Bunda-Three, nor their glorious history as star walkers and faithful servants of the Lords Rudishva. Repair the Beacon so they may return whence they came!" [GM Note: this note, meant to remind the varumani of their origins and provide them with a racial goal, provides valuable clues about the extra-terrestrial nature of the rudishva and varumani, and about the Beacon's identity as a starship]. The second troll chest contains rust, copper, brown, bronze, and sky blue rudishva identity plaques (see new technological items); an amulet of courage (see new magic items); an insidious bone flute (see new magic items); to which is attached a tag that reads in Semi-glyphik, 'Do not blow into holes'; a disarticulated skeleton of a kaliyani formed of solid silver (3,500 gp); the gold and platinum archon's baculus lost by Adrienic 230 years ago in 7-76 (5,000 gp); a silver and emerald cloak clasp with the name Adrienic on it (1,150 gp); 4 bolts of fine yellow silk embroidered with red flowers (150 gp each); a wood and copper scale model of a heqeti ziggurat (1,200 gp); and a rudishva grav disk lacking a power supply (see new technological items).

The Thegn's Personal Treasure: In the northern ell lies Varboka's personal hoard. In plain site are the following: a suit of imperial field plate +1 (see Arden Vul items); a halfling- or goblin-sized suit of leather armor +3; a tower shield +2; a sling +2 and a short bow +2 (both too small for varumani use); a porter's carpet (see new magic items); a guardian caryatid (see new magic items) in the form of a cat-headed biped carrying a mace in each hand; a rod of resurrection, useless to the cleric-less varumani, with 6 charges remaining; and an ancient Archontean tapestry that depicts the use of the obelisks in the city of Arden Vul to open a door, which is marked 'Beacon' [GM Note: this is a hint about using areas AV-5, AV-41, and AV-28 to open the doors at AV-34 that lead to SL14-1]. In the first troll chest are 4,501 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items); 2,159 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items); 3,499 gp; and 12,641 sp. In the second troll chest are potions of extra healing (x2), invulnerability, longevity, treasure finding, and undead control; a pair of boots of striding and springing sized for a SZ S creature; a girdle of hill giant strength; a tooth of Pol (see new magic items); and the following note, inscribed in spidery Semi-glyphik on a piece of blue plasteel: "The hangar for the thegn's flying sleds is located just north of the transit octagon. The thegn holds the key." [GM Note: this refers to areas 7-35 to 7-37].

7-32: Great Pit of the Varumani

This vast hall plays an important daily and ritual part in the lives of the varumani. Five rows of stone benches circle the upper part of the chamber, leading down 15' to a sunken, sanded area. This area – the actual 'Pit' – is located 5' below the level of the lowest set of seats. The ceiling rises 20' above the entrance level, and the entire area is lit by eight rudishva light globes suspended from the ceiling (see new technological items).

Most of the time the hall is filled with the sound of ringing steel and loud, but friendly, taunts and challenges: the varumani ceaselessly practice their combat skills on the sands of the pit and even among the seats. At such times 7-12 true varumani may be found sparring with weapons, while 11-20 lesser varumani wrestle (50%) or spar (50%).

Cleansing of Sorrows: At least once a month the thegn presides over this important ritual. At that ceremony all grudges between individual varumani or groups of 2-5 varumani are settled by duels. The parties to a duel agree to terms, and particularly to the desired outcome, in advance: outcomes range from first blood to lack of consciousness or even (rarely) to death. Almost all varumani who are not 'on duty' (at 7-1, 7-8, 7-38, etc.) attend the Cleansing of Sorrows, cheering, singing songs, and offering praise or sorrow to the parties. Although a Cleansing ceremony is scheduled when pre-existing grudges are known and registered with the thegn, it is not uncommon for varumani from the crowd to remember old, forgotten grudges, partly as a way to keep the festivities going. It is exceedingly rare for non-varumani to be allowed to witness, let alone participate in, a Cleansing. Only those who are already known and respected to the varumani leadership and who subsequently enter into a dispute with a varumani are permitted to duel in the Cleansing of Sorrows. At such a ceremony the thegn, his housecarls, the chiefs of all four clans, the sorcerers, and approximately 70 true, 150 lesser, and 50 or more bestial varumani will be present. When PCs first arrive at the thegn's court there is a 2% chance that a Cleansing of Sorrows ritual is taking place. If a ceremony is not occurring, it will occur in d30 + d6 days.

The Victors' Right: This ritual is less common than the Cleansing of Sorrows. It has a 1% chance of being underway when the PCs first arrive, and will occur in the future in d100+30 days (modified by -5 days per prisoner held in 7-33). In this ritual, prisoners from the Cells (7-33) are brought to the Great Pit and sacrificed by a hand-picked team of varumani. The prisoners are given no weapons, and spell casters are gagged to begin, but all are permitted to fight back as best they can. Usually the varumani make this into a 'fun' spectacle of humiliation and terror. When this ritual is taking place, the thegn will be present as well as 1-4 of the clan chiefs, 30 true varumani, 90 lesser varumani, and 60 bestial varumani.

Inhabitants:
See above.

7-33: The Cells

Treb the lesser varumani presides over the prisoners of the thegn in this location. The central area is brightly lit by two rudishva light globes (see new technological items), and contains an interrogation table with implements, plus a side table, a pair of chairs, and a stack of carefully preserved human-skin on which Treb practices his surprisingly adept painting techniques.

Those captured in battle (a rarity) or those who fall afoul of the thegn within his domain are imprisoned here. Each cell is bare stone with a simple wooden bucket for necessities. At the moment the cells contain the following persons:

- A. Berenice, a Set Deacon (see new monsters) whose tongue has been ripped out, as a 6th-level female Archontean cleric of Set: SZ M; AL LE; AC 10; MV 120'; HD 6; HP 15 (max 37); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. She has no possessions, and is unable to pray for spells. The varumani caught her attempting to infiltrate their private areas, and have scheduled her to be slain in the next ritual of the Victor's Right (see 7-32).
- B. Empty
- C. A heqeti hopper (see new monsters), as 4th-level fighters: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60'; 150' swimming; HD 4; HP 7 (max 25);

#AT 2; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 1-6 (bite). Special attacks: hop; +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice.

- D. Kador Malachite and Kegil Malachite, dwarven brothers taken while searching for the forge of Zhorak (8-100). The brothers are bound, and Kegil is gagged; he has no spells prepared. The varumani see few dwarves, and are contemplating what to do about the pair.
  - a. Kador, 5th-level dwarf fighter: SZ S; AL N; AC 9; MV 90'; HD 4; HP 19 (max 41); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 17, INT 10, WIS 12, DEX 15, CON 16, CHA 9.
  - b. Kegil, 5th-level dwarf cleric: SZ S; AL LN; AC 10; MV 90'; HD 5; HP 21 (max 47); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 12, INT 13, WIS 17, DEX 9, CON 16, CHA 15.
- E. Joskelin Artiklines, 8th-level male Archontean ranger: SZ M; AL CG; AC 10; MV 120'; HD 8; HP 30 (max 77); #AT 3/2; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 18/61, INT 13, WIS 14, DEX 10, CON 16, CHA 15. Spells: speak with animals. Joskelin is an agent of the imperial Drome (see World of Archontos appendix), sent by the exarch in Narsileon to gather information about the demise of the imperial expedition sent 250 years ago and to report on opportunities for renewed imperial expansion. Joskelin appeared at the Troll Market (7-76), posing as a merchant, but was identified by a visiting Set deacon and hence seized by the varumani. The thegn is still considering what to do about him.

Inhabitants:

1. Treb, a lesser varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 58; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (mattock, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: mattock.

7-34: Waste Pit Crossroads (to 5-125 and 8-24)

This natural cavern extends under area 7-16 and is filled with centuries of refuse dumped here by the varumani cooks. An otyugh has taken up residence among the tasty trash. The otyugh is easily bribed by gifts of food to allow passage through the waste pit. A too-generous gift, however, causes the otyugh to imprint on the giver; the otyugh will follow its new friend, sending him/her warm and hungry thoughts at a near constant rate.

To the north the cavern gives forth onto the Great Chasm (7-3). A set of three ropes set with loops and knots extends across and steeply down the chasm at this point, allowing dangerous access to the Nether Reaches (area 8-24). The ropes were set up by the kaliyani exploring party now present in area 5-125.

To the south, a narrow tunnel snakes upward through various cutbacks before debouching at area 5-125.

Inhabitants:

- 1 otyugh: SZ M; AL N; AC 3; MV 60'; HD 8; HP 52; #AT 3; Dmg 1-8/1-8/2-5. Special attacks: disease. Special defenses: limited telepathy (30'); never surprised.

7-35: Hidden Rudishva Corridor

This corridor (without 90-degree angles) provides access between the Great Pillar and the chasm. On the chasm side, a double-sized rudishva iris door is concealed behind centuries worth of vines and creepers; it dilates open to anyone presenting a pale green, pink, orange, silver, or yellow rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items). The interior rudishva iris door leading to the Great Pillar is of an unusual sort; it is not opened in the usual manner, by presenting a colored rudishva identity plaque. Instead, it requires a special key to unlock. The lock is extremely complex (-40% to pick). The troll thegn (7-30) and the Arena Lord (6-85) each possess a key. The keys are 1'-long, 3"-diameter, grey plasteel rods with a notched, 1"-tall flange on each end. The door is also enchanted with the equivalent of a wizard lock cast at 12th level. No one – not even the thegn – has visited this area in decades.

7-36: Thegn's Hangar

The rudishva iris door to the hangar opens only to a silver or yellow rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items). The chamber within is sheathed in white marble tiles, cleverly shaped to fit the angle-less nature of the room. Within is a great treasure: two rudishva hover sleds. One of the sleds is a bit wonky and has a 5% chance per turn of activity to misfire, potentially causing major problems for its riders. The location of these sleds is a secret passed from thegn to thegn. Despite having visited them as a young man, Varboka has never used the sleds.

Treasure:

Two rudishva hover sleds (see new technological items), one of which has a 5% chance per turn to malfunction.

7-37: Great Pillar

From this location, the Great Pillar provides access upwards to 5-138 and 6-130 and downwards to the chasm floor at 9-30. Both rudishva iris doors leading to the pillar are of an unusual sort; they are not opened in the usual manner, by presenting a colored rudishva identity plaque. Instead, they require a special key to unlock. The locks are extremely complex (-40% to pick). The troll thegn (7-30) and the Arena Lord (6-85) each possess a key. The keys are 1'-long, 3"-diameter, grey plasteel rods with a notched, 1"-tall flange on each end. The doors are also enchanted with the equivalent of a wizard lock cast at 12th level.

For a general description of the Great Pillar and how to navigate it, see 5-138. It should be noted that no bridge to the central shaft exists at this level. The pod of chasm cephalopods mentioned at 5-138 may be attracted (50% chance) to light and noise at 7-37.

7-38: Varumani Guard

Three lesser varumani (Kit, Vor, and Cos) and a true varumani (Hendrav) keep a lazy watch here at the easternmost outpost of the varumani domain. The chamber contains four benches, a water barrel, and a tripod of heating (see new magic items). They have a pair of pet baindara (see new monsters) taken from area 7-4 that keep them amused with their antics. The guards are tasked with ensuring that anyone approaching from 7-39 or 7-40 carries proper authorization, i.e., that they are accompanied by a known, respected varumani and/or that they carry a troll thegn's passport (see Arden Vul items). Hendrav in particular is quite bored and would appreciate some clever repartee with visitors. The door to the south is locked and barred from this side; only the thegn has a key to it.

Inhabitants:

1. Hendrav, a true varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LN; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 60; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 6-24 (two-handed axe, 2-20+4). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: two-handed axe; ring mail.
2. Kit, Vor, and Cos, 3 lesser varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 3; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 59, 58, 57; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (mattock, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: mattocks; nets and prods; shields; and three portions of varumani knock-out juice (see Arden Vul items).
3. 2 baindara (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 8; MV 150'; 150' gliding; HD 1-1; HP 3, 2; #AT 1; Dmg 1-2.

7-39: Decrepit Rudishva Hall

One of the wizards from the Priscian war mage triad (see new monsters) based in area 7-44 is attempting to access the Great Pillar (7-37). Lacking keys, he and his colleagues are stymied for the moment. Since the thegn rarely visits the Great Pillar, it is unlikely the Priscians will be discovered any time soon. If they are discovered, they immediately summon assistance from 7-44; they prefer to negotiate before fighting.

Inhabitants:

1. Scarred Crotus, Priscian war mage (see new monsters) and member of Secundus, as a 4th-level Thorcin magic user: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 4; HP 15; #AT 1; Dmg 3-9 (Priscian gladius +2). Abilities: STR 8, INT 17, WIS 12, DEX 11, CON 16, CHA 7. Possessions: Priscian chain mail (see new magic items); Priscian gladius +2 (see new magic items); wand of enemy detection (15 charges); potion of extra healing. Spells memorized: dancing lights, jump, shield; forget, levitate. Spell book: comprehend languages, dancing lights, detect magic, find familiar, jump, magic aura, magic missile, read magic, shield, sleep, unseen servant, ventriloquism; detect invisibility, forget, levitate, Pelagion's bridge of sighs (see new spells), pyrotechnics, wizard lock; explosive runes, gust of wind, protection from normal missiles. With Jellicos and Lisut, Scarred Crotus is a member of a war mage triad (see 7-44).
2. Haltor, Priscian conversus (see new monsters), as a 3rd-level male Wisikin fighter: SZ M; AL LE; AC 2; MV 120'; HD 3; HP 23; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (short sword, spear) or 1-6 (javelin). Abilities: STR 17, INT 10, WIS 16, DEX 16, CON 11, CHA 9. Possessions: Priscian chain mail (see new magic items) and shield; spear; short sword; 3 javelins; immobilizing mesh (see new magic items).

7-40: Empty Crossroads Hall (to 8-137)

The wall sheathing of this rudishva hall is pitted and scarred, and in several places has disappeared. A clear path through the debris littering the floor leads south to 7-41 and 7-42. The tunnel to the north leads downward to the Nether Reaches (8-137).

7-41: Ancient Stone Chairs

These rudishva chairs are 10' wide, 10' tall, and 5' wide, and the seats are 5' off the floor. The back of each chair is loosely covered by an extremely worn piece of leather. The seat and arms of the chairs are worn, as if by use. Incised on each chair are two large (2'-square) Rudishva glyphs, one on the seat and one on the back under the leather throw. On the north seat, the sigil on the seat is the rune of Restoration; that on the back is a rune of Guardianship. On the south seat, the rune on the seat has been utterly destroyed; the rune on the back is again the rune for Guardianship. The runes are activated by living flesh. Thus, anyone touching or sitting on the north seat activates the Restoration rune. The Guardianship runes can only be activated by removing the leather throw and then either sitting back in one of the seats or by touching either rune. It is, of course, possible to sit in the chair without removing the leather throw.

Rune of Guardianship: If either of these runes is activated, a giant rudishva skeleton bursts forth from a hidden niche behind the appropriate chair.

Rune of Restoration: This rune sends a tingling jolt of energy through the activator. The jolt is pleasant feeling, but leaves the activator dazed for 1-3 rounds. The effect cures of 3-12 HP of damage, but also directs a dispel magic spell onto the activator (and his/her items). The dispelling effect is as if it were cast by a 18th-level magic user.

Inhabitants

2. 2 semi-intelligent giant rudishva skeletons: SZ L; AL NE; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8+8; HP 68, 57; #AT 1 or 2; Dmg 3-18 (weapon) or 2-8/2-8 (bone throwing); MR 50%. Special attacks: bone throwing; sonic blast. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; half damage from sharp or edged weapons; half damage from fire; immune to sleep, charm, cold, poison, and paralysis.

7-42: Octagonal Hall with Stairs Up to 6-65

This ancient rudishva hall is quite decrepit. Debris from fallen stone sheathing, campsites, blood, and other unidentifiable biological material is scattered throughout the chamber. Stairs to the north lead upwards for about 200' to area 6-65. As the main route taken by the varumani to the Arena, however, the chamber is 66% likely to be occupied by one of the following (roll 2d10 on the table below, one for the encounter and one for the reason for it):

Octagonal Hall (7-42) Encounter Table

D10	Encounter	Reason Encountered
1	4-10 goblins: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 7, 6, 5(x3), 4, 4, 3, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6	Sleeping off a bender from the Corner Bar (6-64). They are at -2 to all rolls, and are grumpy (-25% to reaction roll)
2	A pair of lesser varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 58, 57; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (mattock, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8 th -level fighters or 8 th -level magic users, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: mattocks	Selling or waiting to sell some Gethite lotus powder to someone else (roll again on the first column for buyer if necessary). Reaction: 1-3 tries to sell to the PCs; 4-5 flees up the stairs; 6 attacks
4	Party of NPC adventurers (select from NPC appendix)	Planning to assassinate someone during the next spectacle. Victim is: 1-2 a goblin; 3-4 a varumani; 5-6 a member of the Set cult; 7-8 someone important
5	3 beastman troopers (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 7, 7, 6; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spears; short swords; short bows.	Consulting a treasure map obtained at Gamblers' Corner (6-61). Their reaction is: 1-3 no modification to RR; 4-5 annoyed, -20% to RR; 6 receptive, +20% to RR
6	2-4 human arena wranglers: SZ M; AL N; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 1-1; HP 6, 5, 5, 4; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (spear). Possessions: leather armor; spear	Hiding from: 1-3 the Arena Lord; 4-6: the troll thegn
7	A Set patrol: 1. 1 Set acolyte (see new monsters), as a 3 rd -level Archontean cleric of Set: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 60'; HD 3; HP 19; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (mace) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Possessions: Set armor (see Arden Vul items); footman's mace; light crossbow; acolyte's was stick (see new magic items); and a silver holy symbol of Set (10 gp). Spells prayed for: command , cure light wounds , curse (reverse of bless ), protection from good ; hold person , silence 15' radius 2. 4 Set guardsmen (see new monsters), as 2 nd -level Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 15, 12; #AT 1, Dmg 2-7 (mace), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: red scale mail and wooden shield; footman's maces; spears; light crossbows with 20 bolts	Attempting to secure entrance to the varumani domains via 7-38. Their preferred method is: 1-2 stealth; 3-4 force; 5-6 negotiation or begging

8	3 true varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 59, 57, 56; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 6-24 (two-handed sword, 2-20+4). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8 th -level fighters or 8 th -level magic users, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: huge two-handed sword	Hiding from gamblers. They owe 40-400 gp to a gambler at 6-61. On a 1-2 they beg PCs for help; 3-4 attempt to shake down PCs for money; 5-6 assault PCs for money
9	6-8 lizardmen: SZ M; AL N; AC 4; MV 60'; 120' swimming; HD 2+1; HP 16, 15, 13, 13, 12, 11, 11, 10; #AT 1 or 3; Dmg 1-6 (club) and 1-6 (javelin), or 1-2/1-2/1-8. Possessions: clubs; javelins; shields	Consulting a piece of plasteel on which is etched a crude map of areas 6-16 to 6-22. They are -25% to reaction rolls.
10	Roll twice	Fighting among themselves. 1-2 They cease fighting and assault the PCs; 3-4 they ignore the PCs and continue fighting; 5-6 they try to enlist the PCs on one or both sides of the fight

7-43: Empty Rudishva Chamber

Both the tunnel leading to this empty chamber and the chamber itself have suffered significant damage over the years. Despite the decay, the rudishva iris door that leads to 7-46 is in fine working order, although it requires a sky blue or better rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items) to open.

7-44: Priscian Camp

The Priscians based on the floor of the chasm (9-58 to 9-64) discovered the tunnel at 7-64 (aka 9-41) and widened it, allowing them access to this small portion of Level 7. Eager to plumb the mysteries of the nearby Great Pillar (7-37), a war mage triad accompanied by three conversi has established a camp in this chamber. They are cautiously exploring the surrounding areas.

The west wall of the hall fragment contains a niche in which stands a 4' watcher nataraja (see new magic items). The watcher nataraja is inert since its original possessor died millennia ago. The activation word for the watcher is written on the sole of its left foot (the Rudishva word for 'look'). Speaking the activation word (in Rudishva) allows one to control the watcher.

If threatened, the Priscians shout loudly in order to summon their colleagues from 7-39.

Secret Door (east): This door is difficult to locate (1 in 8). The key to this door is held by Jellicos. The lock may be also picked (+5% to chances) or the door may be beaten down.

Inhabitants:

1. Jellicos, Priscian war mage (see new monsters) and member of Septimus, as a 7th-level male Archontean magic user: SZ M; AL LN; AC 2; MV 120'; HD 7; HP 22; #AT 1; Dmg 3-9 (Priscian gladius +2). Abilities: STR 11 INT 17, WIS 12, DEX 16, CON 13, CHA 10. Possessions: a key to 9-58; Priscian chain mail +1 (see new magic items); Priscian gladius +2 (see new magic items); brooch of shielding (66 HP left); wand of fire (23 charges); key to secret door leading to 7-44A. Spells memorized: charm person, detect magic, enlarge, magic missile; continual light, ESP, locate object; dispel magic, hold person; charm monster. Spell book: charm person, comprehend languages, detect magic, enlarge, feather fall, hold portal, identify, light, magic missile, push, read magic, shield, sleep; the Bracteros effect (see new spells), continual light, ESP, knock, locate object, mirror image, ray of enfeeblement, stinking cloud, web; dispel magic, fireball, fly, hold person, lightning bolt, protection from evil 10' radius; charm monster, monster summoning II. He is in a war mage triad with Scarred Crotus (7-39) and Lisut.

2. Lisut, Priscian war mage (see new monsters) and member of Tertius, as a 5th-level female Archontean magic user: SZ M; AL LN; AC 3; MV 120'; HD 5; HP 16; #AT 1; Dmg 3-8 (staff +2). Abilities: STR 11, INT 16, WIS 13, DEX 16, CON 9, CHA 10. Possessions: Priscian chain mail (see new magic items); staff +2; wand of light (47 charges); Priscian ring (see new magic items) enchanted with true seeing. Spells memorized: identify, magic missile, shield, sleep; locate place (see new spells), strength; clairvoyance. Spell book: affect normal fires, charm person, comprehend languages, detect magic, erase, feather fall, hold portal, identify, light, magic missile, protection from evil, read magic, shield, sleep; continual light, detect evil, ESP, knock, locate place (see new spells), mirror image, rope trick, stinking cloud, strength; clairvoyance, dispel magic, hold person, lightning bolt, slow; ice storm. He is a member of a war mage triad with Scarred Crotus (7-39) and Jellicos.
3. Bitaurus, Priscian conversus (see new monsters) and bonded defender to Jellicos, as a 6th-level male Archontean thief: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 120'; HD 6; HP 33; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (short sword) or 4-7 (dagger +3) or 2-5 (sling). Abilities: STR 10, INT 11, WIS 9, DEX 17, CON 15, CHA 17. Thief skills: PP: 60%, OL 57%, F/RT 45%, MS 52%, HS 42%, HN 20%, CW 92%, RL 30%. Possessions: leather armor +1; dagger +3; short sword; sling; a pouch with 15 sardonyx gems (50 gp each) and 73 gp; and a potion of invisibility.
4. Paganus, Priscian conversus (see new monsters), as a 5th-level male Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL NE; AC 2; MV 60'; HD 5; HP 47; #AT 1; Dmg 5-12 (battle axe +1) or 1-4 (light crossbow). Abilities: STR 18/63, INT 9, WIS 11, DEX 12, CON 16, CHA 8. Possessions: splint mail +1 and shield; battle axe +1; light crossbow and 20 quarrels; 83 sp and 37 gp.

7-44A: Stairs Up to Sub-Level 4 (SL4-45)

This narrow staircase leads up to a hidden area of the Goblin Warrens (SL4-45). The stairs allowed the Priscians now encamped at 7-44 to establish an embassy to King Weskenim (see SL4-22).

7-45: Great Cavern, or the Varumani Proving Grounds

This massive cavern averages 75' in height. Phosphorescent mushrooms from the southern portion of the cavern (south of the pool at 7-49) offer a dim light, through which can be glimpsed several looming rock formations (7-47, 7-48, and 7-53). The environment is humid and damp, and the air is filled with the sound of drips and subterranean insects. Numerous ledges line the walls of the cavern, some of which lead to small subsidiary cave systems.

The varumani access the cavern via the wooden ladder at 7-63. While they have not formally colonized the cavern, the varumani consider it to lie within their domain. They maintain it as a sort of nature preserve, albeit with several practical functions as well: 1) it is a place for young varumani to learn combat techniques against the monsters that typically congregate nearby; 2) it provides valuable food supplies in the form of giant mushrooms and hunted animals; 3) it is mined for valuable arcnum (see new magic items), iron, and 'glowing sand' (radioactive silicon); and 4) it provides alternative routes to other portions of the lower Halls (especially 7-52, which provides access to the silver mine at 9-27).

To the north, a deep, sandy pool of spring-fed water surrounds a 40'-tall rock formation (7-47 and 7-48).

To the south, the cavern is dominated by a small fungal forest, in which grow all the same species found in the Great Cavern of Level 3 (3-163, 3-172): white ribs, white bulbs, orange lamps, eye-openers, cloud caps, blue trumpets (see new flora for all). The mushrooms surround another prominent rock formation, on the top of which is an ancient ruin (7-53).

Chances for a random encounter are doubled here.

7-46: Ledge with Snakeskin

This ledge sits 40' above the floor of the main cavern. It is nondescript save for a rudishva iris door to the east that opens only with a sky blue or better rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items) and by a secret door set in the northern wall. The varumani have not used the secret door in centuries. An enormous molted snake skin lies on the floor of the ledge.

Secret Door (north): This door is normal to locate. It swings on pins set on either side of the frame, by pushing on the lowest portion of the door.

7-47: Rock Formation

The top of this 20'-tall rock formation is relatively flat, and young varumani occasionally perch on it, waiting for prey to pass beneath.

Inhabitants:

1. 1-4 teenaged lesser varumani (see new monsters) (25% chance): SZ L; AL LE; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 6; HP 46, 42, 40, 37; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 2-5/2-5/2-8 or 2-16 (club). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: club.

7-48: Varumani Sand Mining Operation

The varumani dredge the pool (7-49) for 'glowing' sand and other objects from atop this 25' rock formation. The formation is reached by a pair of small, 2-person dinghies, one of which is attached to the eastern shore (near 7-63) and the other to the western foot of 7-48. Hand- and foot-holds in the formation allow the varumani to clamber to the top. The varumani have learned to paddle swiftly to avoid the blood eels that infest 7-49.

Atop the formation are four dredging stations and an 8' structure formed of well-fitted stone blocks. Most of the time two varumani are found here, operating the dredges and filtering muck.

Dredging Stations: These four areas are comprised of iron structures from which a heavy bucket depends. Using a winch, the varumani drop the bucket into the depths of the pond and pull up the contents of the bottom. The contents are sorted and filtered inside the neighboring structure.

Structure: This simple stone structure holds a sluice and rocker box for sifting the materials dredged from the pond, as well as a couple of barrels used to hold the gathered 'glowing' sand. A wooden box in the corner holds other strange objects dredged from the pond: a rudishva skull with horns, six small pieces of plasteel in various colors, 2 badly corroded and unusable rudishva lesser power supplies, a badly corroded long sword, a glass vial still filled with contact poison, and 4 deep blue spinels (500 gp each).

Glowing Sand: The sand is fine and glows with a yellow-green color. It is, in fact, radioactive silicon from a nuclear disaster that occurred here in the early years of the rudishva hegemony (see below). As the varumani are immune to the radiation, they are happy to use it for smithing purposes in the Triple Forge (7-68). Given its off-world properties, it is potentially quite valuable, and might fetch 50 gp/lb from alchemists. Non-varumani who stay into contact with the glowing sand for more than 3 days, however, suffer from radiation sickness: 1-4 HP damage plus a loss of one point of CON for each subsequent day of contact. HP lost from radiation sickness may be regained normally, but CON loss can only be cured magically.

GM Note: The nuclear-powered fuel-injection pod of the Beacon ended up in this cavern when the starship crashed. Although the rudishva discovered the pod and tried to repair it, it eventually suffered a nuclear meltdown, turning areas 7-48 and 7-49 into a dangerous, radioactive slag pool.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 lesser varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 58, 53; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (club, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: club.

7-49: Mysterious Pool

This small lake surrounds the varumani sand mining operation at 7-48. Although the water is not radioactive, nor does it glow, the silicates mixed into the natural muck at the bottom gives off a yellow-green glow (see 7-48 for details); this glow is visible to any who peer carefully into the water.

The pool also contains a more serious threat, a pack of vicious mutated eels that the varumani call 'blood eels.' Anyone swimming in the pond, peering into it for any length of time, or boating idly attracts 3-6 eels. The eels are ravenous and attack without fear. A total of 24 eels inhabit the pond. Extended combat with one group will bring another group within 3-6 rounds.

Beneath a layer of muck and radioactive sand on the bottom of the pool is some ruined-era plasteel, slagged machinery, and other detritus. Those brave enough to swim around in the water might find some objects. For each 1-4 turns spent searching, roll on the following table. An item may only be found once; subsequent rolls for that result will produce 1-3 bones.

D8	Result
1-3	Nothing
4	A rust rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items)
5	A miraculously undamaged rudishva lesser power supply (see new technological items)
6	47 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items) and 59 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items)
7	1'-tall oblong black stone inscribed with the word 'Sortian' (an activation stone for 7-53 or 7-62)
8	A human tibia, with the phrase "Thoth does consume magic" carved into it. This cryptic phrase may help in solving the puzzle in the tomb of Muirasso (see 5-37).

Inhabitants:

1. 24 blood eels (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 7; MV 120' swimming; HD 3; HP 20(x8), 18(x8), 15(x8); #AT 1; Dmg 2-8. Special attacks: drain blood; 5% chance for disease.

7-50: Ledge

This ledge sits 35' above the cavern floor, and provides a nice view of the varumani mining operation at 7-48. Corpses of two adventurers rest here, in badly damaged splint and chain armor; all valuables have been stripped from the bodies, though.

7-51: Varumani Iron Mine

Sounds of metal ringing on rock echo from the entrance to this looping set of caves and tunnels, for it is here that the varumani mine the high-quality iron they use in the triple forge (7-68). The tunnels average 8.5' in height, while the wider openings (caves) are 10'-15' tall. The mine is dark unless otherwise noted. At the entrance to the mine are four large buckets, two of which are filled with ore, and a pair of shoulder yokes. Several areas within the mine merit further attention:

7-51A: A cave-in occurred in this spur, killing an incautious human adventurer. The tips of her booted feet may be glimpsed from beneath a huge pile of rock. Digging her corpse out is possible, but incurs a 4 in 6 chance of a further cave-in causing 6-36 damage. Her body yields 55 sp, 153 gp; a suit of chain mail; a mace +2; a clerical scroll of cure serious wounds and regeneration; and a map showing the floor of the Great Chasm (area 9-1) with key features and the route to 7-52 (via 9-1, 9-19, 9-21, 9-23, and 9-27) clearly marked.

7-51B: This connecting tunnel shows little sign of actual mining. A broken pick is jammed into the rock at the point marked by the indication 51B; attached to it is a piece of plasteel with an image of a horned skull painted on it (a varumani sign for 'danger').

7-51C: This brightly lit (by a single rudishva light globe – see new technological items) cavern is the site of a particularly rich vein of iron. Four lesser varumani miners are at work here with picks and mauls. While not interested in chatting, they are not necessarily hostile.

7-51D: Another major vein exists in this brightly lit cavern. Six lesser varumani miners are busy collecting ore from a wooden scaffold erected against the east and south walls. Like those at 7-51C, these miners have little to offer, but will defend themselves if attacked. Indeed, they managed to defeat an over-bold band of adventurers who arrived from 7-52; they took the following loot from the corpses, and then threw the bodies into the water at 7-51E: 235 sp, 412 gp; a silver and ruby statuette of Set (625 gp); a long sword +1; six arrows +2; a set of jade armbands (450 gp); a scroll of fireball, protection from normal missiles, and hold person; and 2 potions of extra healing.

7-51E: At this point the descending tunnel hits the waterline and quickly becomes filled with pond water. The remaining 50' of the tunnel are completely submerged. The tunnel ultimately leads to a 6'-diameter opening in the bottom of area 7-49. The varumani tossed the corpses of three human and one elven adventurer into the water here for the blood eels (see 7-49 for statistics) to devour. The varumani in 7-51D have the former adventurer's valuables.

7-51F: Two xorn have just arrived here after swimming through the nearby rock and are munching on delicate ores. The xorn are hungry and will move aggressively to attack anyone on whom they smell gold, silver, or gems. They have not yet encountered the miners in 7-51C or 7-51D.

Inhabitants:

1. 4 lesser varumani (see new monsters), miners at 7-51C: SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 59, 58, 57, 53; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (club, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: club.
2. 6 lesser varumani (see new monsters), miners at 7-51D: SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 61, 59, 58, 57, 53, 51; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (club, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: club.
3. 2 xorn: SZ M; AL N; AC -2; MV 90'; HD 7+7; HP 55, 49; #AT 4; Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-3/6-24. Special attacks: surprise on 1-5. Special defenses: immune to fire and cold; half damage from electricity; travel through stone.

Treasure:

Each of the varumani has a small pouch with 11-30 sp. Among them they also hold 2 copper rudishva identity plaques (see new technological items). The cleric's corpse in 7-51A has some treasure, while the other adventurers' wealth is held at 7-51D. The miners have collected 75 lb of iron ore.

7-52: Tunnel Down to 9-27

In digging their mine the varumani intersected with another passage that leads downward to the chasm floor, at 9-27. The tunnel is narrow and cramped.

7-53: Ancient Sortian Teleportation Device

High above the ground and within this massive rock pillar lies the companion mosaic and teleportation device to that found in 7-62. This chamber is almost completely hidden from the outside, with only a 2'-square window giving forth to the cavern; the window is found 40' up the side of the pillar.

The chamber is rough-hewn from the solid rock and is littered with the desiccated husks of numerous small animal forms, for eight huge spiders have established their nest here. Beneath the grime, however, is a beautiful mosaic some 20' square. The centerpiece of the mosaic is a large, 10'-diameter image of a male human head, with close-cropped hair and beard, and Archontean nose, and kind eyes. His mouth is open wide. Four 1'-diameter holes are set in a diamond pattern around the face. If proper activation stones are placed in the holes, the mosaic can function as a teleportation device: if one stands on the image of the face and utters the word 'Sortian', one is instantly transported to 7-62. Currently, three of the activation stones are found in 7-62, while the fourth is in the murky water of 7-49.

Two levers sit in the floor near the locked southeastern door. One lever opens the door to the stone bridge leading to 7-54, while the second opens the steel door to 7-54 itself.

It is possible to scale the pillar, locate the window, and – if one is sufficiently small – slip inside. Still, the intended method of accessing this chamber is the teleportation device. Those arriving from 7-62 by teleportation will be confronted immediately by the huge spiders.

GM Note: The modern Priscian cult based on Level 9 has no idea that this area exists; bringing a map of its location to 9-58 might bring a reward of 5,000 gp and the good will of the Priscians.

Inhabitants:

1. 8 huge spiders: SZ M; AC 6; MV 180'; HD 2+2; HP 18, 17, 16, 16, 16, 15, 14, 13; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: surprise 1-5; poison (+1 to saves); can leap up to 30'.

7-54: Ancient Idol

This cave is difficult to access, as it is located 30' above the cavern floor and behind a locked, steel door. The door can be opened via the lever in area 7-53. Inside is an ancient idol to a long-forgotten worm deity. It was discovered in antiquity by Sortian explorers, who, alerted to its dangers, constructed the teleport device (7-62 and 7-53) and the doors as safety mechanisms.

The idol sits on an elevated granite pediment (2' tall), preceded by four red-granite, free-standing pillars. It is about 8' tall and ess-shaped, taking the form of a curved, erect worm with a humanesque face looming over the pediment. The face has two enormous, platter-sized crystal eyes, a protruding proboscis-style nose, and an open mouth with razor sharp teeth. The worm body of the idol is formed from an enormous piece of ivory, from an unknown type of beast, while the face is etched and incised gold, with faceted crystal eyes and sharpened steel teeth.

Anyone standing on the pediment in front of the idol will see its eyes glow with a yellow light. That person has 1 round to hold an offering above its head before the worm strikes. If an appropriate offering is present (see below), the worm-idol lurches down and takes the offering in its mouth. If no offering is present, it strikes the blasphemer, rolling to hit as a 16 HD creature; if it hits, its teeth inflict 6-36 damage and have a chance of amputating an extremity (amputation occurs on any roll to hit of 18-20). If an offering is presented and accepted, the idol will drop a pair of 300 gp black pearls from its proboscis. Appropriate offerings include any precious metals worth at least 300 gp or any magic item. The idol is protected by powerful divine magic: it has a 100% magic resistance, and is AC -6 with 100 HP. Should PCs begin hammering at the idol, the ancient worm deity will gate in four horned devils to smite the desecrators.

GM Note: The ancient Sortians were puzzled by the existence of this idol, whose deity they did not recognize. The deity has no real connection to the other entities of Arden Vul and provides an opportunity for further GM development.

Inhabitants:

1. 4 horned devils: SZ L; AL LE; AC -5; MV 90', 180' flying (Class D); HD 5+5; HP 41, 39, 37, 32; #AT 4, or 1+ weapon; Dmg 1-4/1-4/2-5/1-3, or 1-3 and 2-12 (fork); MR 50%. Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: bleeding from tail strike (1 HP/rd); cause fear 5' radius; pyrotechnics (1/rd); produce flame (1/rd); wall of fire of triple strength (1/day); charm person, suggestion. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; half damage from cold and gas; immune to fire. Special: ESP, detect magic, illusion; teleportation; know alignment; animate dead; summon horned evil (50%).

Treasure:

Large black pearls (300 gp each).

7-55: Arcanum Cave

The lip of this cave is 10' above the floor of the main cavern, but is relatively wide and hence easily noticed. From the entrance a soft orange glow may be glimpsed. Several picks, chisels, and other implements are strewn about the floor. Within lies a massive pocket of raw arcanum (see new magic items), which the varumani occasionally mine. The arcanum is most visible as the knob-like projection extruding from the southeast wall. In addition to the usual properties of an arcanum chamber (see new magic items), it is possible to chip off pieces of arcanum in ½-lb or 1-lb chunks.

7-56: Sunken Cave of the Spectre

This sunken cave lies 30' below both of the passages that connect to it. A miasma of mist hangs in the air above the cave. The ancient corpse of Heliabolus, a half-hearted member of the Sortian league, lies on the floor of the cave, where it was cast away in antiquity by his companions. Heliabolus's spirit has risen as a spectre, one that is, however, bound to the general area so long as his corpse remains unburied. With the spectre are 4 half-strength varumani spectres created when unsuspecting varumani encountered the spectre.

Inhabitants:

1. Heliabolus the spectre: SZ M; AL LE; AC 2; MV 150', 300' flying (Class B); HD 7+3; HP 52; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8. Special attacks: energy drain. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to sleep, charm, hold, cold, poison, and paralysis.
2. 4 half-strength spectres: SZ M; AL LE; AC 2; MV 150', 300' flying (Class B); HD 3+3; HP 27, 26, 24, 22; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8. Special attacks: energy drain. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to sleep, charm, hold, cold, poison, and paralysis.

Treasure:

With Heliabolus's corpse is a robe of blending, a Sortian baculus (see new magic items) imbued with blink (15 charges remaining); gauntlets of dexterity, a sapphire Sortian eye (see new magic items); a purse with 73 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items); and a piece of parchment detailing the discovery of the ancient idol at 7-54 and the creation of the transport circles used to access it.

7-57: Broad Shelf

A wide, deep shelf exists here, 30' above the floor of the cavern. It is covered with more fungi, including aqua vitae, mind eater, and red veil forms (see new flora). It provides a fine vantage point from which to study the fungal forest. It is also quite dangerous, as those who do not notice the existence of a second shelf (7-58) are likely to be surprised by the phase spider that dwells there.

Treasure:

Numerous samples of red veil, mindeater, and aqua vitae mushrooms (see new flora).

7-58: Upper Shelf with Phase Spider

A second ledge or shelf exists 20' above the first, that is, at a height of 50' above the cavern floor. A phase spider has its web in the cavern at the rear of the shelf. The spider likes nothing more than to leap upon unsuspecting victims who climb to area 7-57.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 phase spider (95%): SZ L; AL N; AC 7; MV 60', 150' in web; HD 5+5; HP 43; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: poison (-2 to saves). Special defenses: phasing.

Treasure:

In the muck beneath the spider's web is a tarnished, but finely-wrought silver box depicting scenes of Priscus Pulcher, Isadora, and other Sortians (75 gp, or 150 gp to a Priscian). Within are 20 ancient octagonal platinum coins (see Arden Vul items), a scarab of enraging enemies, and a ring of mind shielding.

7-59: Tunnel to Sub-Level 13 (SL13-33)

This tunnel snakes downward 150' before debouching at SL13-33.

7-60: Empty Cave

A broad ledge 20' above the floor of the main cavern leads to an uninhabited cave. It is a good place for resting, as there are no normal random encounters here. There is a slight chance (5% per day), however, that the phase spider or 1-2 skinks wanders by.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 phase spider (5%) – see stats at 7-58.
2. 1-2 cave skinks (see new monsters) (5%) – see stats at 7-61.

7-61: Cave Skinks

A large pod of cave skinks (see new monsters) nests here. The cave slopes upwards sharply as it moves to the north, before ending in a sandy floor next to a pool of fresh water. A total of 20 cave skinks dwell here, although only 10 will be present at any given time. Skinks killed as wandering monsters should be deleted from the total. The varumani could easily wipe out this pod, but see no real reason to do so.

Inhabitants:

1. 10 cave skinks (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 7; MV 120'; HD 2; HP 15, 14, 13, 13 12(x3), 11, 11, 10; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: toxic mucus.

7-62: Cave of the Spriggans

This dangerous location is accessed via a narrow ledge 30' above the floor of the main cavern. The sound of chattering and singing is audible from the ledge, and the flicker of flames is visible from the same location. A set of crude steps lead down to a large cave lit by a campfire, around which crouch four small humanoids. The beings appear to be toasting bits of meat speared on sticks. A large boulder lies at the rear of the cave. The cave smells of sour wine and sweat, and a layer of dirt covers everything.

The creatures are Arden Vul spriggans (see new monsters), who were tricked in antiquity into agreeing to guard the transportation circle that lies underneath the dirt. The spriggans are most unhappy with their millennium-long task, and are eager for conversation and the opportunity to trick someone else into guarding the location. They offer visitors a seat at the fire, a share of their toasted lizard meat, and the opportunity to chat. They freely admit to being stuck here, but will slyly attempt to get the PCs to agree to helping them out. If the PCs are suspicious or hostile, the spriggans begin to sing a famous (to them) song, 'The Green Silken Robe', as a round. After a few verses the round begins to degenerate and, one round later, it turns into the spriggans' confusion attack. At that point they spriggans transform into giant size and attack. The 'boulder' is a pile of rotting varumani corpses hidden by phantasmal force.

The Green Silken Robe

Verse 1:

*As I was out strollin' near Ripperham vill,
I spied a young lass with gold in her hair,
She smiled long and lovely and her eyes said 'I will',
And I stopped in my tracks at this image so fair.
I whistled and turned, and stared good and long, but twas' her green silken robe that set me to song.*

Chorus:

*Oh, that Green Silken Robe,
Twas' as fine as could be,
That emerald hue
Nearly blinded poor me.
Oh that green silken robe,
So tight and so trim,
As soon as I glimpsed it,
My heart went a-swim.*

Many other verses exist, some quite explicit. The spriggans can sing this song for hours, improvising new, naughtier bits all the while.

Underneath the dirt and grime is a beautiful bit of mosaic about 14' square. The center of the mosaic features an 8'-diameter depiction of a male human face with close cropped hair and beard. Those familiar with Sortian faces (see new magic items) will instantly recognize the image, for is it identical (complete with empty eye sockets). At the four corners of the mosaic are 1' round holes in the pavement.

The mosaic functions as a teleportation device that transports those who figure out its puzzle to area 7-53. The teleportation works as follows: 1) one places the four activation stones in the four holes in the mosaic; 2) one stands on the mosaic face; 3) one declaims the word "Sortian". The spriggans have three of the activation stones, but they cast the fourth into the pond at 7-49 in a fit of rage. The stones are 1'-tall, oblong pieces of black granite on which has been carved (and filled with silver) the word 'Sortian'.

GM Note: As with area 7-53, the modern cult of Priscus Pulcher (see areas 9-58 to 9-64) has no idea that this area even exists; it would pay much in wealth and favors to receive an accurate map of how to access this area.

Inhabitants:

1. 4 Arden Vul spriggans (see new monsters): SZ S or L; AL CN; AC 4 (5); MV 90' (150'); HD 5 (8+3); HP 37 (62), 35 (61), 34 (61) 32 (58); #AT 1 (2); Dmg 2-5 (knife) or (2-12/2-12); MR 25%. Thief skills: PP 75%, OL 78%, FRT 70%, MS 77%, HS 64%, HN 35%, CW 81%, RL 40%. Special attacks: confusion 1/day. Special defenses: immune to poison, charm, and mind-affecting spells; healed by magic missiles. Special: grow to giant size; affect normal fires, faerie fire, trip, detect magic, shatter.

Treasure:

In addition to the three activation stones, the spriggans have accumulated a bit of treasure: 211 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items) and 390 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items); a gold flute inscribed with pictures of naked dancing girls (250 gp); a water pipe of ivory, copper, and enamel (75 gp); a silk chasuble with Sortian knots (90 gp); and a Sortian baculus (see new magic items) imbued with blink (11 charges remaining), and two potions of water breathing.

7-63: Ledge leading to the Varumani Domain

A deep ledge 20' off the ground provides access to the domain of the varumani. A 25' wooden ladder usually provides access up and down the cliff, although occasionally (25%) the ladder has been pulled up and rests on floor of the ledge.

7-64: Tunnel to the Chasm Floor (9-41)

This tunnel leads downward to a ruined heqeti area just off of the floor of the Great Chasm (area 9-41). The Priscian explorers at 7-44 discovered this passage, which allowed them both to establish a camp on Level 7 (7-44) and to establish an embassy with the goblin King Weskenim (SL4-22) via the stairs at 7-44A.

Trap (noise trap): A smiley face is painted on the tunnel wall 50' below the point at which the tunnel departs area 7-44. The face is the trigger for a Frigg's flatulence spell (see new spells) that the Priscians have installed there as a warning. If the spell is triggered by motion, the Priscians in 7-44 will be ready.

7-65: Varumani Guard Post

The locked door on the east wall is steel, with a sliding view slit. Four varumani stand guard here at all times, with orders to let only varumani enter. They possess a couple of benches, a table, a bag of dice, and a large collection of shiny beetle shells with which they gamble endlessly.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 true varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LN; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 58; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 6-24 (two-handed sword, 2-20+4). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: huge two-handed sword; ring mail.

2. 3 lesser varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 59, 57, 52; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22

(club, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: club.

7-66: The Record Keeper

The aged varumani record keeper, Vimela, sits on a bench against the north wall. He is available for consultation to any member of any of the clans. Recently, demand for his services has declined. He therefore welcomes the opportunity to speak with any interesting – but authorized – visitors. He wears the key to 7-67 on a secure chain around his neck. Due to his advanced age, Vimela's combat skills are greatly reduced.

Inhabitants:

1. Vimela, the true varumani record keeper: SZ L; AL LN; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 6; HP 38; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-8. Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision.

Treasure:

Vimela holds the key to the Hall of Records (7-67), and wears a fine jasper and silver ring (225 gp).

7-67: Varumani Hall of Records

This narrow hall contains the records of the varumani people dating back to the era of the rudishva hegemony. The east wall is lined with shelving, some of it plasteel and subtly 'different' (rounded edges, shallow shelves) and some of it wooden. The shelves contain a veritable treasure trove of information in two basic forms: 1) a set of 25 data crystals (see new technological items) in grey plasteel tubes, and 2) over 100 parchment codices.

Among the data crystals are a handful of pre-collapse recordings (see below) as well as the digitized logbooks of the first seven thegn's. Although the information on these crystals is exceptionally useful and valuable, the varumani currently possess no means of viewing them. In fact, the crystals have not been viewed in over a millennium.

The codices are quarto volumes, bound in grey lizard skin, and contain the thegn's logbooks of every thegn from the 8th to the 37th (i.e., Varboka). The logbooks annalistically record the deeds and events of the varumani, both good and bad. So, the earliest parchment codex (the sole logbook of the 8th thegn) records the submission of the varumani to the archon, Marius Tricotor, called 'invictus' (see 6-154); the third logbook of the 16th thegn records the retreat of the Archontians; the fourth logbook of the 31st thegn records the glorious varumani victory over Adrienic at the Cave of Blood (7-76); and so forth. The number of logbooks produced by a given Thegn varies by the length of that thegn's reign and by personal proclivity; it is evident to any serious scholar, for instance, that the logbooks have become terser and less polished in the past century or so (indeed, Varboka is only beginning his second logbook despite having been Thegn for 53 years).

Against the north wall rests a stone table with two pieces of rudishva technology: a broken GnuCoder 3000 data recorder and a still functioning security encoder (see new technological items for both).

Vimela the Record-Keeper (7-66) is well-versed in the material found in the logbooks. He is able to suggest events of potential interest to browsers as well as swiftly to locate the books relevant to an already known event.

GM Note: It is impossible to detail all the historical information and potential adventure seeds found in this trove. The following, though, is a list of some of the more interesting non-logbook data crystals (see new technological items) preserved here: the People Improve, High Score!, the Thegn's Speak, Service Manual for Optical Devices produced by GnuCoder S.A., Testimony of Vanara, Great Feats, the Faithful Manager, How to Talk with the Natives, Military Instructional Manual, and Voyages of the Shining Beacon of Glorious Heaven (see Arden Vul books for all).

7-68: Triple Forge of the Varumani

This massive, 30'-tall, vaulted hall is home to the famous triple forge, at which the varumani create high-quality steel, iron, and other practical objects for use and trade. The chamber is lit by a series of four pendent rudishva light globes (see new technological items) and is quite hot from the forge fire.

Forge: The forge proper is massive, being about 20' long and 10' wide, and built of the hardest granite. The base rises 3' from the ground and has a steel door at the north end; the main fire is stoked by a lesser fire elemental bound to the forge by one of the past court sorcerers. Atop the base is a steel grill on which are set a number of lava rocks that conduct the heat from the elemental. Above the main base are two subsidiary grills, set 18" apart (so that the top grill is 3' from the floor). These, too, have lava rocks on them; they are used for work that requires less heat. The forge pumps out dry heat at an impressive rate.

Smithing Stations: Three smithing stations circle the forge. Each station has a water trough, a metal-topped work table, and a massive anvil. A wide array of smith's tools (tongs, hammers, crucibles, buckets, picks, etc.) rest on or beneath each table.

The northeast and northwest walls hold racks for finished weapons, armor, and utilitarian objects. At any given time one can find 7-12 two-handed weapons, 7-12 suits of ring mail, 7-12 helmets (for large creatures), and a variety of metal clips, nails, tools, etc.

The southwest wall holds an armorer's station, where the master armorer improves and personalizes varumani ring mail. The southeast wall holds a jeweler's station, with several benches and tables, under which are bins containing bits of copper, silver, gold and small ornamental and semi-precious stones. Molds and dies for ingots, wire, troll thegn's passports, and other jewelry-like objects are also found here. Fine tools are scattered about the benches. A wall-mounted rack here also contains objects of the glass-blower's trade.

The smiths receive regular shipments of smelted silver from the mining operations on Level 9 (see areas 9-22 to 9-28). One of their primary tasks is to turn that raw silver into ingots and wire.

Most of the time at least one of the four smiths is hard at work. If intruders from the east prove dangerous, one of the apprentices will be sent north to fetch help from the clan halls. Roll d10 to determine activity in the forge:

D10	Activity
1	Forge is empty; smiths are in 7-69 (75%) or elsewhere (25%)
2-3	1 smith at work
4-6	2 smiths at work
7-8	3 smiths at work
9	4 smiths at work, with important visitors (GM's choice) looking on
10	All apprentices are present, cleaning the forge area

Inhabitants

- 1-4 smiths (80% - see above) – for stats, see 7-69.
- 4 apprentices (10%) – for stats, see 7-69.
- 3 visitors (10%)

Treasure:

Finished weapons, armor, and objects. Smithing tools (350 gp all told). Scrap precious metal worth 125 gp; a score of ornamental stones worth 200 gp total (5 eye agates, 5 azurites, 5 pieces of turquoise, and 5 pieces of obsidian); 8 semi-precious stones worth 340 gp total (2 bloodstones, 2 onyx, a peridot, an iolite, and 2 rock crystals).

7-69: Smiths' Dwelling

The four varumani smiths and their four apprentices dwell in this warm side chamber. The smiths have decorated the walls by painting them white and then sketching exotic weaponry over the paint; although the weapons look fearsome, they are impractical and largely constitute a joke. Each smith has one corner of the chamber to himself, while the apprentices sleep on the floor in the central, common area. Each smith has a wooden cot, a small wooden chest, and a rack for personal items (weapons and armor). The common area contains a beautiful, 20'x10' carpet depicting Marius atop the 'sky sled,' clad in his Archon's regalia (GM Note: for Marius, see 6-145 and 6-154; the 'sky sled' refers to rudishva hover sleds – see new technological items); the carpet could be sold to Archontean elites for up to 750 gp. In addition, the common area has a tripod of heating (see new magic items), a barrel of ale, two benches, and two batter chairs.

Two of the smiths are true varumani (Shilva and Hinna) and two are lesser varumani (Loff and Migi). The apprentices are all lesser varumani. For locations of the smiths and apprentices, see chart at area 7-68. Although all the smiths and apprentices have fine ring-mail and weapons, they don't typically wear or carry their equipment when at work or lounging in their quarters.

Inhabitants:

1. Shilva and Hinna, true varumani smiths (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 60; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 6-24 (hammer, 2-20+4). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: huge hammer, key to 7-70.
2. Loff and Migi, lesser varumani smiths (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 58, 51; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (hammer, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: hammer, key to 7-70.

3. 4 lesser varumani apprentices (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 60, 57, 55, 50; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (hammer, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: hammer.

Treasure:

Each smith wears a heavy belt on which hang keys to 7-69 and 7-70 as well as his/her favored hammer. In addition, the smiths possess the following: 528 sp; 123 gp; a two-handed axe +2; a two-handed sword +2; a massive spear +2; a war hammer +2; four sets of varumani ring mail; and four pieces of impressive jewelry that constitute each smith's master-piece, namely a gold and deep-green spinel goblet (3,000 gp), a ceremonial knife made of platinum and silver (1,750 gp) inscribed with the smith's name (Hinna), a silver and emerald arm-ring (2,750 gp), and a silver and pearl pendant (975 gp). The apprentices have no wealth.

7-70: Materials Storage

The wood and iron door to this chamber is locked; each smith has a key to it. Inside the raw materials used in the Triple Forge are stored in large, 5'-square stone bins. Among the bins are the following raw materials:

Bin #	Contents	Quantity
1	Yellow-green glowing sand (see 7-48)	100 cubic feet of radioactive silicon (mostly full, see 7-48 for radiation effects)
2	Ordinary sand	20 cubic feet
3	Charcoal and small pieces of wood	Half full
4	Iron ore	1,150 lb or more (¾ full)
5	Silver ore	750 lb (½ full) [if purified, worth 5,000 gp]
6	Arcanum (see new magic items)	25 lb (mostly empty)
7	Oil (a bit smelly)	Half full
8	Gold fragments, coins, ingots	125 lb

To either side of the door are some shelves on which sit smaller boxes. These contain the following: coiled silver 'string' worth 275 gp; lots of coiled solder (25 gp); 25 moss agates (10 gp each); 10 flawed precious stones (worth a total of 1,150 gp); 4 large fiery-yellow corundums (4,350 gp); 15 silver bracelets (375 gp); 3 bronze arm bands (90 gp); and various worthless bits of metal.

7-71: Tanning Vats

This side chamber is where the smiths grudgingly cure and tan hides for use in armor and other necessities. A heavy leather curtain hangs across the entrance, which mitigates the terrible odor from within. Four stone basins are grouped in the center of the chamber; these contain water and a series of chemical baths used to prepare the hides. Stretching and drying racks are hammered into the walls. As the smiths think tanning is beneath them, they don't use this chamber very often, preferring to repurpose existing bits of leather.

7-72: Upper Hall of the Thegns

Like its counterpart (7-12), this grand hallway is 20' tall, broad, and brightly lit via continual light spells cast on the ceiling. Three niches hold statues of the first three, and greatest, thegns: Druva (north wall), Rudiga (south wall), and Vanara (west wall). The statues are 10' tall, marble, and carved in an enthusiastic if somewhat clumsy style. The varumani love and revere the statues; indeed, they dress them up with bright, loose clothing and paint their eyes, noses, and ears. In addition, it is custom for varumani hoping for luck in an endeavor to drop small tokens at the feet of Vanara: these include bits of hair or bone, fragments of plasteel, and other objects of special meaning to the donor.

Inevitably some of the members of the court spill over into the western portion of the Hall of Thegns. Roll once on Table 1 at 7-75 to determine who is present here, along with 5 varumani courtiers.

Inhabitants:

1. 3 true varumani courtiers (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 58, 57, 52; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 6-24 (two-handed sword, 2-20+4). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: huge two-handed sword.
2. 2 lesser varumani courtiers (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 57, 54; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (club, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: club.
3. 1 group from Table 1 at 7-75

7-73: Thegn's Lounge

This spartan chamber serves as the thegn's office, especially when dealing with court matters and negotiations with non-varumani. A tripod of heating (see new magic items) stands in the center of the room. Four battered benches are arranged around it. A sand-filled bag hangs from the ceiling in the northeast corner; Varboka (7-30) uses this for combat training. In the northwest corner is a simple wooden desk, a battered wooden chair, and an unlocked wooden chest. Each wall features a brightly-painted fresco depicting a different historical episode:

North: Vanara leads the people through a cavern

East: The thegn Girvala beholds Adrienic (dressed in imperial field plate) while varumani celebrate

South: Priyala stands over kneeling Archontean (a reminder of the moment when the varumani regained independence)

West: A blood-streaked varumani skewers a salamander-like thing (a heqeti) with a spear

The surface of the desk contains parchment, ink, and quills. Its drawer contains 10 troll thegn's passports (see Arden Vul items) and two valuable writs of authority signed by the thegn (these writs state that what the bearer has done, he has done with the approval and authority of the thegn).

The chest contains a pile of 575 sp and 219 gp, plus a leather sack with 37 ornamental gemstones worth 10 gp each (tiger eyes, freshwater pearls, and moss agates, mostly). It also contains any items confiscated from malefactors at the court (7-75).

Four ogre guards are present at all times, with two posted at each door.

GM Note: This is where private audiences with the thegn take place, provided that PCs are able to justify the need for such a private meeting.

Secret Door (south): The door is narrow (2') but easy to locate (1 in 4). It can be pushed open by anyone with STR 14 or greater. It leads to a secret tunnel to 7-8, one that allows the thegn to come and go at court without passing through 7-1 or 7-72.

Inhabitants:

1. Varboka the thegn (30%)
2. Thegn's housecarls (if thegn present)
3. 4 ogre guards: SZ L; AL CE; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 4+1; HP 31, 29, 28, 27; #AT 1; Dmg 1-10, or by weapon.

Treasure:

10 troll thegn's passports (see Arden Vul items); two signed writs; 575 sp; 219 gp; 37 ornamental stones worth 370 gp total.

7-74: Thegn's Conference Hall

The double doors from 7-75 lead to this enormous rounded hall. Most of the time the double-doors are open, allowing members of the court to drift into the conference hall for semi-private discussions. Some of the time (30% - see chart at 7-30), however, the thegn summons particular visitors to a private discussion. On those occasions the doors are closed, and guarded by two of the ogre guard.

The hall is sheathed in white marble and is 15' tall. It is dominated by a massive oak table, some 20' in diameter. Twenty oak chairs surround the table. Atop it is an enormous silver candelabra whose base is a gilded human skull (135 gp). The north wall features a massive, 10'-tall mosaic showing three varumani striding forward, arms locked together in harmony.

Inhabitants:

1. Varboka the thegn with 3-18 visitors (30%): for Varboka's stats, see 7-30.
2. 2 members of the ogre guard, only if Varboka is present (30%): SZ L; AL CE; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 4+1; HP 31, 25; #AT 1; Dmg 1-10, or by weapon.
2. 1-6 groups rolled from the tables at 7-75 (70%, only if Varboka is not present)
3. 2-8 true varumani courtiers (see new monsters) (70%, only if Varboka is not present): SZ L; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 61, 59, 58, 58, 57, 57, 55, 52; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 6-24 (two-handed sword, 2-20+4). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: huge two-handed sword.

4. 1-6 lesser varumani courtiers (see new monsters) (70%, only if Varboka is not present): SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 59, 56, 55, 51, 50, 49; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (club, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: club.

7-75: Court of the Troll Thegn

This spectacular hall is the location of the thegn's notorious court. Its 25'-tall ceiling is barrel vaulted, and supported by two rows of 3'-diameter granite columns. Over a dozen rudishva light globes (see new technological items) hang from the ceiling, and noise from the scores of courtiers and visitors is substantial.

The east and west walls feature enormous frescoes, showing famous varumani of the past several centuries; the frescoes serve as a sort of 'court of honor' for those non-thegns who have performed some deed of special value to the people. There are 23 such images, the majority of which (15) are ring-mail clad true varumani. Still, seven lesser varumani and even one bestial varumani are also depicted. Each image is carefully identified by name in spidery Varumani Semi-glyphik; among the names are Nolgi and Livod (both hunters, see 7-14), as well as Gog (see 5-2).

The court of the thegn is a center for political and diplomatic negotiations and, of course, plotting. At any given moment, the following are present:

A. 18-24 Varumani Courtiers

Courtiers are those varumani who have earned significant status in the eyes of their peers; that status may have come from combat, especially on the chasm floor (9-1), or from performing some impressive deed. Of the courtiers, 66% are true varumani and the rest are lesser varumani. The tables below allow the GM to determine both the reason for a courtier's prominence and some of his/her current ideas or plans.

B. Sir Prudence, the Sun-Scarred Knight

Sir Prudence is a male Archontean of about 45 years in age. He has silver-grey hair, dark-black eyebrows, and a well-trimmed (grey) van dyke beard. He is accompanied at all times by his varlet, Beuvon. Sir Prudence arrived at the court of the troll thegn seven years ago and never left. Initially tasked to watch and report on the activities of the varumani, he has recently received orders to undermine Varboka's authority, and in particular to prevent Varboka from moving against the goblins. Prudence has interests in varumani mating rituals (which he has still never witnessed), in the reasons why no varumani have ever been tapped as a Knight, and in the particular tactile qualities of the skins of all manner of creatures. He is also a reliable recruiter for the knights, and has been known to use his considerable persuasive abilities to convince members of NPC adventuring groups to consider a career/lifetime as a knight. Finally, Prudence has a well-known soft spot for cheerful grifters and cheats, so long as he is not the victim. After a year in which the pair slept in a corner of the court, Varboka grudgingly allowed them to maintain a 'permanent' residence in one of the caves of the Troll Market (7-76A).

C. Ogre Guards

Two obedient ogre guards are stationed at each of the western exits to the court.

D. Visitors, in 4-8 distinct groups

Use the tables below to determine the size of such groups, as well as the motives of each group.

Courtiers' Motives and Background

Roll d8 for the source of a courtier's status and d20 for his/her current plans, plots or agenda

D8	Source of Status
1	Heroic personal combat against heqeti on Level 9
2	Combat leadership of a small group of varumani
3	Strategic planning
4	Discovery of minerals (1-2), treasure (3-4), or food sources (5-6)
5	Discovery of important rudishva-era technology (1-4) or locations within Arden Vul (5-6)
6	Diplomatic success, achieved against the Set Cult (1-2), the beastmen (3-4), or the goblins (5-6)
7	Diplomatic success, with adventurers. Familiar with 1-2 groups of NPC adventurers.
8	Friend (1-4) or family (5-6) of Varboka

D20	Current Agenda or Plan
1	Boasting about his/her achievements
2	Suspicious intimidation of non-varumani
3	Acquisition of personal wealth
4	Political maneuvering so as to be poised to be the next thegn, 'should anything happen to Varboka'
5	Desire to mount an expedition to a specific lost tomb 1-2: on Level 5 3-5: in the drowned canyon (Sub-Level 6) 6: elsewhere (GM's choice)
6	"Heqeti delenda sunt!" ('Let the heqeti be destroyed!') Talks to everyone about the need to destroy the growing heqeti threat.
7	Plot to undermine the authority of King Weskenim, in favor of Gislú (see 4-2) or Gribble (see 3-105)
8	Plot to eliminate Deino (3-158) and subjugate the beastmen
9	Friend of an exiled varumani trying to rehabilitate the exile's name in the eyes of the thegn. Either friend of Gog (5-2) or Iklor (petrified at 5-53).
10	Enemy of Varboka, seeking quietly to build a coalition against him
11	Radical who believes the Inn of the Lost's neutrality is bad for the varumani. Full of suspicions about Thegan White-Mane (6-19) and Justin the Nose (6-7)
12	Peacemaker, who tries to get other courtiers and visitors to agree to talk openly and collectively about all possible plans
13	Historical zealot, who wants to locate the original home of the varumani and the remains of Vanara (see 5-139)
14	Roll twice, ignoring results of 14

15	Religious fanatic, trying to convert the famously non-religious varumani to some religious belief
16	Obsessed with the Sun-Scarred knights, either to join them (1-3) or annihilate them (4-6)
17	Apprehensive about the elusive hints of a new power structure in the halls, those who 'follow the knot' and wield potent sorceries (i.e., the Priscians – see 9-58 to 9-64). Wants information about them or seeks to eliminate them.

18	Looking for important documents about varumani birth rates. Believes they were stolen by a 'low-down rat of a beastman.' GM: Helios of Dog patrol is currently hawking the documents at the Forum of Set (4-2)
19	Fascinated with Archontean and sorcery (at which the varumani have almost no skill). Eager to make alliances and connections with lawful Archontean
20	Obsessed with a particular monster somewhere in the halls; wants it eliminated. GM's choice.

Visting Groups

D20	Group	Stats
1-2	Beastmen patrol, composed of a sergeant and six troopers	6 beastman troopers (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 8, 7, 7, 6, 6, 5; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spears; short swords; short bows 1 beastman sergeant (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 2+2; HP 15; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 or 2-5. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spear; war hammer
3-6	Goblins	8 goblins: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 6, 5(x3), 4, 4, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6
7-8	Lizardmen	6-8 lizardmen: SZ M; AL N; AC 5; MV 60', 120' swimming; HD 2+1; HP 15, 13, 13, 12, 11, 11; #AT 1 or 3; Dmg 1-6 (club) and 1-6 (javelin), or 1-2/1-2/1-8. Possessions: clubs; javelins.
9-10	Set deacon plus 6 Set guardsmen	1 Set deacon (see new monsters), as a 6 th -level Archontean cleric of Set: SZ M; AL LE; AC 3; MV 90'; HD 6; HP 38; #AT 1; Dmg 3-8 ( mace +1 ). Possessions: Set armor +1 (see Arden Vul items); deacon's was stick (see new magic items); footman's mace +1 ; an amulet of protection against normal missiles (see new magic items); a potion of extra healing ; a potion of glibness ; a scroll of curse ; and a gold holy symbol of Set (150 gp). Spells prayed for: command , cure light wounds (x2) , cause fear , protection from good ; chant , hold person , know alignment , resist fire , silence 15' radius ; animate dead , dispel magic , cause blindness ; cause serious wounds . 6 Set guardsmen (see new monsters), as 2 nd -level Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 16, 16, 15, 12; #AT 1, Dmg 2-7 (mace), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: red scale mail and wooden shield; footman's maces; spears; light crossbows with 20 bolts
11-14	NPC adventurers pursuing their own goal or mission	Select an appropriate group from the NPC appendix
15-16	NPC adventurers looking to hire themselves to the highest bidder	Select an appropriate group from the NPC appendix
17-20	Special	See Special Visitors table below

Special Visitors (from Visting Groups Table)

D20	Special Visitor	Stats
1	Thegan White-Mane and Justin the Nose	See 6-7 and 6-19
2	Psalor-Ki with 4 ichor spawn	1. For Psalor-Ki, see 5-74 2. 4 ichor spawn (see new monsters): SZ M; AL CE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 3; HP 22, 21, 19, 15; #AT 2; Dmg 1-8/1-8. Special attack: ichor spray if takes more than 8 HP from one blow (spray does 2-12 HP, plus corrodes metal and/or leather).
3	Black skeleton	1 black skeleton (see new monsters): SZ M; AL LE; AC 0; MV 120'; HD 6; HP 37; #AT 2; Dmg 1-6/1-6 (short swords). Special attacks: shriek causes fear or panic; STR loss on hit. Special defenses: half damage from sharp or edged weapons; half damage from fire; immune to sleep, charm, hold, cold, poison, and paralysis; turned as ghosts. Possessions: short sword; 1 sword of shadows (see new magic items)
4	An entrapment devil in human form. Its true name is Trelert.	1 entrapment devil (see new monsters): SZ M; AL LE; AC -2; MV 90'; HD 10; HP 73; #AT 2; Dmg 3-6/3-6; MR 70%. Special attacks: dominate 3/day; hold person. Special defenses: polymorph self; immune to fire; takes half damage from cold and gas. Special: permanent illusion; teleport without error; summon another devil (40% chance); know alignment; cause fear; animate dead; infravision; suggestion

5	Doppelgangers, in dwarven form, seeking the body and life-stone of Jasper Malachite (see 5-52)	5 doppelgangers: SZ M; AL N; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 4; HP 25, 24, 23, 22; #AT 1; Dmg 1-12 or 1-8 (long sword) Special attacks: surprise 4 in 6. Special defenses: immune to charm and sleep; saves as a 10 th -level fighter. Special: ESP. Possessions: chain mail; long swords. One carries a potion of rock melting (see new magic items).
6	Nizamudden, an efreeti lord disguised through polymorph self as a Khumus diplomat. He seeks an enchanted ewer stolen from the Sultan of the City of Brass	1 efreet: SZ L; AL N(LE); AC 2; MV 90', 240' flying (Class B); HD 10; HP 69; #AT 1; Dmg 3-24. Special attacks: produce flame, cause pyrotechnics; enlarge. Special defenses: become invisible; assume gaseous form; polymorph self. Special: grant three wishes; create illusion; detect magic; create wall of fire; immune to normal fire; -1 HP/die from magical fire
7	A bipedal exploration automaton of Kerbog Khan	1 bipedal exploration automaton of Kerbog Khan (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 6; HP 43; #AT 2; Dmg 1-6/1-6; MR 40%. Special defenses: immune to cold and fire
8	Tikun Thane (see SL3-2), and three disciplined	Tikun-Thane: for stats, see SL3-2. 3 disciplined (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 7; MV 120'; HD 4; HP 30, 27, 24; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8 (scimitar); MR 10%. Special defenses: immune to mind-affecting spells
9	A party of dwarven adventurers	Use the group, 'Survivors of the Stone' from the NPC appendix
10	An ogre mage from area 9-70, disguised as a human	1 ogre mage: SZ L; AL CE; AC 4; MV 90', 150' flying (Class B); HD 5+2; HP 36; #AT 1; Dmg 1-12 or by weapon. Special attacks: charm person 1/day; sleep 1/day; ray of cold 1/day. Special defenses: fly (12 turns); become invisible; darkness 10' radius; polymorph to human form; regenerate 1 HP/rd; assume gaseous form
11	4 emissaries from the Thorcin Recovery League, a group seeking allies in their effort to resist the Archontean Empire	Wigmund, 5 th -level male Thorcin fighter: SZ M; AL CN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 5; HP 43; #AT 1; Dmg 5-12 ( battle axe +1 ) or 1-6 (short bow). Abilities: STR 18/03, INT 14, WIS 11, DEX 15, CON 12, CHA 16. Possessions: chain mail; battle axe +1 ; short bow with 20 blue arrows. He carries a sack of 1,578 sp, 399 gp, 10 zircons (50 gp each), and 7 deep green spinels (100 gp each) with which to buy assistance. 3 3 rd -level Archontean thieves (2 male, 1 female): SZ M; AL CN; AC 6; MV 120'; HD 3; HP 15, 14, 13; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (short sword). Special: each has DEX 16. Thief skills: PP 40%, OL 38%, F/RT 30%, MS 27%, HS 20%, HN 15%, CW 87%. Possessions: leather armor; short sword
12	2 emissaries from the Archontean Empire, plus 4 guards	Lady Aelia Krakteros, a female Archontean noblewoman, and an agent of the imperial House of Coins: (see World of Archontos appendix): SZ M; AL LE; AC 10; MV 120'; HD 1-1; HP 6; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger). She has a gold signet ring (1,000 gp), a gold necklace with a silver pendant (600 gp) that is actually the key to her casket, and pearl and silver earrings (2,000 gp). She carries a casket (locked, poison needle) with 2,000 pp. Hilduin Two-Teeth, 9 th -level male Thorcin thief: SZ M; AL LN; AC 2; MV 120'; HD 9; HP 43; #AT 1; Dmg 3-8 ( short sword +2 ). Abilities: STR 12, INT 13, WIS 13, DEX 18, CON 10, CHA 9. Thief skills: PP 80%, OL 77%, F/RT 65%, MS 80%, HS 66%, HN 30%, CW 98%, RL 45%. Equipment: leather armor +2 ; short sword +2 ; ring of free action ; boots of elvenkind ; a purse with 55 sp and 113 gp. Hilduin is an agent of Keko the Lame, head of the imperial spy service, or drome (see World of Archontos appendix). 4 guards, as 3 rd -level male Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL N; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 3; HP 28, 25, 25; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8 (long sword), 1-4 (light crossbows). Possessions: chain mail; long sword; light crossbow
13	An emissary from Lord Burdock (See map BV-Castle Burdock), with 6 men-at-arms	Phocas, chamberlain to Lord Burdock, as a 5 th -level male Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL LN; AC 3; MV 90'; HD 5; HP 43; #AT 1; Dmg 4-9 ( footman's mace +1 ). Abilities: STR 17, INT 15, WIS 13, DEX 10, CON 11, CHA 15. Possessions: chain mail and shield +1 ; footman's mace +1 ; purse with 134 sp, 53 gp, and 10 violet garnets (500 gp each). 6 Archontean men-at-arms (4 female, 2 male): SZ M; AL N; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 1; HP 7, 7, 6, 6, 5, 5; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (spear), 1-6 (short sword). Possessions: chain mail; spear; short sword

14	An emissary from Lady Alexia Basileon, aka the Green Lady (see AK-2), with 2 guards	Gaius Christopher, a knight commander of the Order of the Azure Shield (see AK-1), as a 7 th -level male Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL NG; AC 2; MV 120'; HD 7; HP 69; #AT 3/2; Dmg 4-9 ( short sword +2 ). Abilities: STR 17, INT 14, WIS 12, DEX 10, CON 16, CHA 15. Possessions: short sword +2 ; mace; banded mail +1 and shield; silver arm-ring (400 gp); purse with 77 sp and 81 gp. 2 knights of the Azure Shield, as 2 nd -level male Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 18, 15; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 2-9 (long sword). Special: +1 to damage from STR. Possessions: chain mail and shield; spear; long sword
15	A succubus disguised as a female human magic user	1 succubus: SZ M; AL CE; AC 0; MV 120', 180' flying (Class C); HD 6; HP 40; #AT 2; Dmg 1-3/1-3; MR 70%. Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: energy drain; charm person; suggestion. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; half damage from cold, electricity, fire, and gas. Special: cause darkness 5'; become ethereal; ESP; clairaudience; shape change; gate (40% chance)
16	Emissaries from a subterranean, sentient race	GM's choice
17	An arrogant magic user and flunkies, on a quest	Select an appropriate magic user with flunkies from the NPC appendix
18	A geased cleric, with 4 guards	Gunnbjorn, 6 th -level male Wiskin cleric of Bragi; SZ M; AL CG; AC 3; MV 60'; HD 6; HP 38; #AT 1; Dmg 5-10 (footman's mace +2). Abilities: STR 16, INT 9, WIS 16, DEX 11, CON 14, CHA 17. Possessions: splint mail and shield; footman's mace +2 ; purse with 52 sp and 37 gp; gold holy symbol of Bragi (175 gp); ring of fire resistance . Spells: cure light wounds (x2) , detect evil , protection from evil , sanctuary ; augury , find traps , hold person , silence 15' radius , slow poison ; locate object , speak with dead . 4 male Wiskin men-at-arms: SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1; HP 7, 6, 6, 5; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (spear), light crossbow (1-4). Possessions: scale mail; spear; light crossbow with 20 quarrels
19	A paladin on a quest	Swithun of Upford, 5 th -level male Thorcin paladin of Mitra: SZ M; AL LG; AC 2; MV 120'; HD 5; HP 51; #AT 1; Dmg 3-8 ( footman's flail +1 ) or 1-6 (short bow). Abilities: STR 14, INT 10, WIS 15, DEX 10, CON 16, CHA 17. Equipment: banded mail +1 and shield; footman's flail +1 ; short bow and 20 arrows; golden circlet of Mitra (1,100 gp)
20	GM's choice	Varies

Motives of Visitors

D20	Motive	Modifier to Next Table
1-3	Acquire Information	+1
4-6	Sell Information	+3
7-8	Rescue missing friends in the Halls	0
9-10	Negotiate a long-term, strategic alliance with the varumani	0
11-13	Procure varumani aid versus a third party	+2
14-15	Procure general favor of the varumani, and/or permission to move about Levels 7 and 8	+2
16	Procure permission and/or aid for an expedition to an artifact	0
17	Procure permission and/or aid for an expedition to a tomb	0
18	Hire selves as mercenaries	+2
19	Meet with a third party	+2
20	GM's choice	Varies

Subsidiary, or Ulterior Motives of Visitors (roll d20 and apply modifier from previous table)

D20	Result
1-4	None
5	Assassination, of another visitor (50%), a varumani (25%), or a PC (25%)
6	Abduction, of third party
7	Espionage, against varumani
8	Espionage, against other: Sir Prudence (25%), another visitor (75%),
9	Theft, against varumani
10	Theft, against other
11	Rescue prisoner, of varumani (50%), of another visitor (25%), of a merchant (25%)
12-13	Buy/sell important and/or secret artifact
14	Usurp Thegan White-Mane's ownership of the Inn of the Lost (see 6-7 to 6-19)
15	Foment uprising against Varboka, by stoking antagonisms of one or more clan chiefs
16	Convert others to the worship of Rimmaq-Isfet (see new monsters), quietly and subtly

17	Mount an expedition against the ziggurat of Kauket (areas 10-32 to 10-35)
18	Locate, and either slay (50%) or negotiate with (50%), one of the wizards living within Arden Vul. Roll d8 and consult the following list to determine which wizard: 1. Kerbog Khan (SL12-25) 2. Tikun Thane (SL3-2) 3. Priddy of Archontos (5-128) 4. Trocadero (3-176) 5. Pelagion the Grey (4-62) 6. Marcus Junienos (4-56) 7. Isocritis Half-Hand (2-70) 8. Yurtil Skreel-Friend (SL5-35)
19	Track rival group deeper into the Halls, either for a secret meeting (25%) or an ambush (75%)
20 or more	Roll twice on this table, ignoring subsequent rolls of 20

Four sample courtiers, four groups of ordinary visitors, and two groups of special visitors are listed for the convenience of the GM:

Reja (courtier): A lesser varumani friend of Varboka's from infancy, Reja has a status that exceeds his achievements. In fact, he has never really left the varumani domain and as such is openly ridiculed as a 'poor specimen of a varumani' by the more aggressive and the more martial. As a result, Reja is usually found leaning against a pillar, observing the goings-on rather than actively participating in them. Despite his 'outsider' status, though, Varboka plainly values Reja's advice and wisdom. Indeed, Reja is one of the only varumani (perhaps the only one) to have noticed signs of a new faction within the halls: the Priscians. He has spotted and catalogued their devices (knots, images of bearded men), and knows that some of the magic users who pass through the court have been Priscians. To date, though, Reja keeps this information to himself. Those who befriend Reja might find the path to Varboka easier to tread.

Reja, a lesser varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 57; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (club, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: mace.

Lishna (courtier): An aged (200+ years) true varumani who has been one of the prime strategic planners for the past several thegns, Lishna is very wise and sharp, and has a good mind for factional politics. It is for her mind that the thegns are willing to tolerate her frank and open xenophobia. Lishna distrusts all outsiders, and especially hates Archontians. While she is too wily (and old) to confront outsiders directly, she actively attempts to undermine their diplomatic efforts at court. She is treated with respect but a certain amount of distance by the rest of the court. Lishna is aware of the lover's aid orchid (see new flora and area 6-4), and will occasionally use specimens she has collected in order to further her purposes at court.

Lishna, a true varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LN; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 41; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 6-24 (two-handed sword, 2-20+4). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: huge two-handed sword.

Yog (courtier): This genial lesser varumani accrued much favor at court by discovering a hoard of six fully-charged rudishva lesser power supplies. This meant a temporary return to service of the Nutri-Vore 2000 in 7-16, for which Yog was temporarily treated as a hero. Riding that popularity, Yog has tried to interest the court in 'cleaning out' the other denizens of the southern caves, including the 'demon spider' (7-58, a phase spider) that he claims haunts the area. As no one else has seen the 'demon spider', his efforts have thus far failed. Yog's fifteen minutes of fame are ticking down, and he is anxious to reclaim the limelight through another bold deed.

Yog, a lesser varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 57; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (club, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: flail.

Janara (courtier): This hulking true varumani warrior is famous for having single-handedly defeated a band of heqeti hoppers on the floor of the chasm (see 9-1, but the action occurred near 9-75). He even brought two heqeti heads back to the court as trophies. Janara is not very smart, although he is a fine warrior; he doesn't realize that his success was due almost entirely to luck. He spends his days constantly haranguing everyone – and especially new visitors – about the threat of the heqeti, and the necessity of 'eliminating them once and for all!' Although he may seem risible to the PCs, his achievements are legendary among the varumani, many of whom are coming around to his way of thinking. Unbeknownst to Janara, a witness to the battle exists (Cinna Minux, 7-122), and Thegan White-Mane (6-19) possesses a transcript of that witness's account. If Thegan's transcript were made known to the court, it would ruin Janara and likely halt varumani military expansion towards Level 9.

Janara, a true varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LN; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 62; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 6-24 (two-handed sword, 2-20+4). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision.

Pillik, the goblin sub-chief, with six warriors (ordinary visitors): Pillik is on an official embassy from King Weskenim (SL4-22) and has been tasked with negotiating an alliance of equals between Weskenim and the thegn. Weskenim and Pillik would like to have a written document that delineates spheres of influence for both courts. Unfortunately, the tenor of the court is currently rather aggressive, and Varboka has become convinced that it is time to subjugate the goblins to varumani authority (see 7-30). Pillik is thus finding his task extremely difficult. Pillik is also supposed to be nosing out the whereabouts of Gislú the mystic (see 4-2). He is aware that Intef (see below) is up to no good, and is also aware that Varboka has granted many more audiences to Intef than to Pillik himself. In desperation, Pillik has hired the NPC group known as the Broom to assassinate Intef (see below).

Pillik, goblin sub-chief (as a hobgoblin): SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 1+1; HP 7; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8 (long sword). Possessions: long sword.

6 goblins: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 6, 5, 5, 4, 3, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.

The Broom, a mid- to high-level NPC band (ordinary visitors): This group of evil NPCs is led by the Wisikin fighter, Harold Good-Ears. They have valuable information about the location of Gislú the mystic (4-2), which they have sold to Pillik and are willing to sell to others. They also encountered and slew a small band of kaliyani on Level 8 (at 8-8); they have just learned that the thegn offers a bounty for kaliyani fangs, and are contemplating returning to that site to recover the fangs. They have tentatively agreed to assassinate Intef the deacon (see below) for Pillik, but have not yet moved on this task; indeed, they are contemplating betraying Pillik, if they can decide who would pay the most for information about the assassination contract.

The Broom: see NPC appendix.

Arctos, a beastman sergeant, with six troopers (ordinary visitors): Reith, the junior overseer of the Troll Lifts (6-50), taunted some beastmen returning from the Arena about having one of their dog brothers, 'stuffed and mounted, and with a collar.' Tagma command rightly guessed that this was a reference to Rex, legendary faithful 'First Hound' and companion of Gennadius. When Reith refused to negotiate with the beastmen, or even show them the item, Tagma Command sent Arctos to formally petition the thegn to aid them in their recovery, even if it meant compelling Reith to hand over Rex. Arctos would also like very much to learn where Reith acquired Rex, and has a sizable stash of coin (3,000 gp) with which to hire adventurers to pursue this lead. If negotiations fail, Arctos is supposed to steal the object from Reith; he has little hope that such a theft would work, unless he were to hire a more proficient thief from outside the tagma.

1 beastman sergeant (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 2+2; HP 15; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 or 2-5. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spear; war hammer.

6 beastman troopers (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 8, 7, 7, 6, 6, 5; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spears; short swords; short bows.

Intef, the Set deacon, with five Set guardsmen (ordinary visitors): Intef has been sent to the thegn's court to try to persuade Varboka to join High Priestess Stephania (4-51) in an alliance, with the specific aim of eliminating both the beastmen and the goblins. Intef is a short (5'2") and rather round man, but is equipped with a sharp mind and a silver tongue. It is due to his influence that Varboka is contemplating the subjugation of the goblins (although Intef actually wanted Varboka to kill them all). Pillik the goblin has recently hired the Broom (see above) to assassinate Intef.

Intef, a Set deacon (see new monsters), as a 6th-level Archontean cleric of Set: SZ M; AL LE; AC 3; MV 90'; HD 6; HP 42; #AT 1; Dmg 3-8 (mace +1). Possessions: Set armor +1 (see Arden Vul items); deacon's was stick (see new magic items); footman's mace +1; an amulet of protection against normal missiles (see new magic items); a potion of extra healing; a potion of glibness; a scroll of curse; and a gold holy symbol of Set (150 gp). Spells prayed for: command, cure light wounds (x2), cause fear, protection from good; chant, hold person, know alignment, resist fire, silence 15' radius; animate dead, dispel magic, cause blindness; cause serious wounds.

4 Set guardsmen (see new monsters), as 2nd-level Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 15, 12; #AT 1, Dmg 2-7 (mace), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: red scale mail and wooden shield; footman's maces; spears; light crossbows with 20 bolts.

Sable Granite, the dwarf, with his five dwarven comrades (special visitors): This band of well-armored dwarven fighters claims to have journeyed from Kazildor (see World of Archontos appendix) in order to re-appropriate certain 'rightful' heirlooms of the dwarven people, namely the hammer, tongs, and belt of the great smith, Zhorak (see 8-100). They are suspicious, dour, and tight-lipped, as dwarves usually are. Typically they stand to one side, with cloaks up, staring at newcomers and, eventually, interrogating new visitors about their knowledge of dwarven artifacts and/or Zhorak. For all of this, the 'dwarves' are impostors, as they are actually doppelgangers engaged in yet another skirmish in the age-old war between their people and the dwarves. Sable and his companions might sponsor an expedition in search of Zhorak's forge, but might also merely follow adventurers and hope to ambush them. For stats, see table above.

Sable Granite, a doppelganger impersonating the real dwarven hero: SZ M; AL N; AC 3; MV 90'; HD 4; HP 26; #AT 1; Dmg 1-12 or 5-8 (war hammer +3). Special attacks: surprise 4 in 6. Special defenses: immune to charm and sleep; saves as a 10th-level fighter. Special: ESP. Possessions: scale mail +3; potion of fire resistance; a war hammer +3; 2 potions of rock melting (see new magic items); and an inert dwarven life-stone (see new magic items) that once belonged to a dwarf named Korda Malachite.

5 doppelgangers, posing as the dwarven clansmen of Sable Granite: SZ M; AL N; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 4; HP 29, 26, 25, 24, 23; #AT 1; Dmg 1-12 or 1-8 (battle axe) Special attacks: surprise 4 in 6. Special defenses: immune to charm and sleep; saves as a 10th-level fighter. Special: ESP. Possessions: chain mail; battle axes.

Gaius Christopher, a grizzled but polite knight commander of the Order of the Azure Shield, with two squires (special visitors): Gaius Christopher journeyed from the Azure Keep (AK-1) on a mission from the Lady Alexia, aka the Green Lady (Ak-2, and World of Archontos appendix). She entrusted the knight commander with an important message to Varboka, one offering equal lordship above and below the ground should Varboka help her recover the four lost artifacts of the archons of Arden Vul. She seeks the artifacts – the iron circlet of Ghanor (3-127A), the tablet of the Beacon (9-107), the bone ring of Jagri-Naz (5-74), and the ebon spear (SL5-13B) - ahead of her treacherous brother, Lord Burdock. Varboka is well aware of the rivalry between the siblings, and enjoys watching it play out. The thegn has already decided not to help her, mostly because he doesn't want either sibling to re-acquire objects that might lead to another Archontean hegemony, but also because he has no idea where they might be. He hasn't informed Gaius Christopher of his decision yet, as he enjoys watching the knight squirm. For stats, see table above.

Inhabitants:

1. 13-16 true varumani courtiers (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 62, 61, 60(x3), 59(x3), 58(x3), 57, 57, 54, 53, 52; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 6-24 (two-handed sword, 2-20+4). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: huge two-handed sword.
2. 5-8 lesser varumani courtiers (see new monsters): lesser varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 60, 59, 58, 57, 55, 54, 52, 50; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (club, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: club.
3. Sir Prudence, the Sun-Scarred Knight (see new monsters): for stats, see 7-76A.
4. Beuvon, the varlet: for stats, see 7-76A.
4. Visitors, in 4-8 groups: determine using tables above.
5. 4 ogre guards: SZ L; AL CE; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 4+1; HP 31, 29, 28, 27; #AT 1; Dmg 1-10, or by weapon.

7-76: The Troll Market, aka the Cave of Blood

This large cavern is famous for its history as well as for its function in the present. About 230 years ago it was the site of the famous (to varumani) defeat of the Archontean expeditionary force under Adrienic at the hands of the then-thegn, Girvala. As such it is venerated by the varumani as an iconic symbol of varumani prowess while it is known, by reputation only, to the Archonteans as a symbol of tragic, hubristic failure. To those unversed in history, however, the cavern is also the site of the Troll Market, which is the vernacular name for the public exchange sponsored by Varboka the thegn. Visitors may browse in one of eight or so permanent trading booths, or can strike deals along the platforms with more temporary salesmen.

The natural cavern is about 50' tall. Running through the center of the cavern is a set of wooden platforms that rise 20' from the floor, and which are supported by seven massive stone pillars (marked by the pillar sign on the map). The walls of the cave are thick with creepers and the entire place echoes with the chirp of cave insects. Side caves run along the north and south walls, and these are connected to the main set of platforms by rope bridges. The permanent booths are located in the side caves, while the central platform is where visitors and varumani alike crowd about buying, selling, and trading goods and information. In addition to the main side caves, four additional side caves hold the secret to the varumani success against Adrienic: four rudishva-era point defense arrays, which may be controlled remotely from area 7-11.

The Cavern Floor

The floor of the cavern lies 20' below the platforms. Those poking around on the floor will quickly discover hundreds of human skeletons, all stripped clean by the insect life that lives here. These are the remains of five cohorts of the II Scutarii (i.e., the Sheepshead Rangers) and much of the third cohort of the Imperial Tagmata (the Able Ones), both of which marched to their demise here under the foolish orders of Archon Adrienic about 230 years ago. The Archontean soldiers were caught in a web of laser fire from the point defense arrays (areas 7-76K) and annihilated. Although most of the valuables were stripped from the corpses in the aftermath of the defeat, careful searching can turn up the following (3-6 turns searching per item):

D8	Item
1	A purse with 37 sp and 15 gp
2	A battered silver helmet in the shape of a sheep's head (55 gp for metal, 175 gp as a curio)
3	An oliphant carved with the insignia "III Cohort. Able Ones," worth 75 gp or 200 gp to a collector [ GM Note: a reference to the 3 rd cohort of the Imperial tagmata]
4	A pair of silver belt fittings embossed with the heads of sheep (10 gp each)
5	A badly decayed officer's baculus with tarnished silver tips, worth 60 gp
6	An almost completely ruined parchment diary. The owner was "Tull[iaros] [polemarch] of the II Scutarii". Among the only readable bits is this, one of the final entries: " Why must we suffer the incompetence of aristocrats who fancy themselves soldiers? Adrienic believes his 'grand strategy' will bring the trolls to their knees. Yet he adopts no tactical plan worthy of the name, and will not listen to my pleas. Scouts and skirmishers? Unnecessary, according to A. The best plan? Marching straight into the trollish domain in a solid phalanx, as if we were maneuvering on the plains before Arcturos. May the gods forfend us from disaster! I will do my part, as my oath to the Emperor requires, but I fear the worst. "
7	A half-charged rudishva lesser power supply (see new technological items)
8	A still-usable imperial gladius (short sword)

The Troll Market

Unlike the more heavily regulated Forum of Set, the thegn imposes no formal laws or rules to govern activity in the Troll Market save an unwritten but widely-known prohibition against lethal violence. Commerce takes place in the fixed 'booths' (caves 7-76A to 7-76J) as well as along the platforms. Those using the Troll Market include the varumani, adventurers exploring the Halls, representatives of other factions, and the occasional unusual visitor, whether from outside Arden Vul or from the caves that lead deeper into the earth. It should be noted that the thegn provides no accommodations to visitors to the Market; those who need to stay overnight typically climb to the cavern floor and sleep among the bones.

At any given moment, the following are present at the Troll Market:

A. Wardens of the Market

Three tough, ring-mail clad, true varumani warriors patrol the market under the command of Layela Three-Tufts. Layela and his 'gals' (the other two wardens are female) are well known to habitués of the market, and greet regulars jovially. If anything they are more likely to side with existing merchants in a dispute, and like nothing more than to haul miscreants away and kick them down the Dread Risers (7-2). That said, they interfere only when matters become serious and blood is about to be shed.

Layela Three-Tufts and 2 other true varumani (see new monsters), wardens of the market: SZ L; AL LN; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 63, 62, 58; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 6-24 (two-handed sword, 2-20+4). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: huge two-handed sword; ring mail.

B. Food Vendors

Four lesser varumani vendors wander the platforms, offering delicacies to the hungry. The source of the food is not always clear, and regulars know better than to ask. Each vendor carries about 150 sp and 20 gp. The delicacies on offer are these:

Food Item	Price
Rat on a stick	5 sp/rat
Candied fruit	1 gp/glob
Baked insects	5 cp each, or 15 sp/lb
Toasted mushrooms	5 sp/skewer-full
Green friend (see new flora)	3 gp per 3' strand

4 lesser varumani (see new monsters) food vendors: SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 59, 55, 53, 51; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (club, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: club.

C. Peddlers

These are wandering merchants with neither the money nor inclination to rent one of the official market booths. At any moment there are 0-3 such peddlers hawking their wares on the platforms. As compared to the market goods for sale in the booths, the peddlers typically offer stranger and fewer goods. Sample peddlers include the following (but the GM may also use those peddlers detailed at 6-28 or SL4-40F).

Fogflifter the Seer

Fogflifter has the gift of second sight, and makes a living reading futures – and occasionally the past – for those willing to pay. He wears greasy, once-elegant, lemon-yellow silken robes and a floppy purple hat.

Personality: Distracted and distant, with a flair for dramatic pronouncements complete with gestures and small smoke and pyrotechnic effects.

Reputation and/or relations with Factions: Tolerated by all, except the goblins, who are embarrassed by his theatrics. The varumani in particular love his act, and many lesser varumani line up for readings. Harassing Fogflifter would incur significant enmity from most of the sentient factions of the Halls.

Secret? None, although he knows an awful lot about politics and the personalities of the various factions.

Available Wealth: He swiftly converts coin to gems, so he has only 55 sp and 129 gp in his purse. But in his pack are assorted gems worth 6,500 gp.

Might Buy: Nothing

Goods for sale: Three levels of reading, corresponding to augury, identify, and speak with dead. He charges 200 gp for the first two, and 400 gp for the third. He accepts goods in kind.

Inhabitants:

1. Fogflifter the Seer (male goblin): SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 5; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.

Aruna the Gatherer

Aruna travels the relatively safe portions of the halls seeking out bits of Archontean ephemera. Like a magpie, he is attracted to small shiny bits of the past. Aruna is a stooped, thin man who dresses in leather armor and grey wool.

Personality: Dull and introspective, with a mumbling voice. He lacks the salesman's instinct, and hence is often overlooked.

Reputation and/or relations with Factions: Has no reputation, positive or negative, and no support from any leader.

Secret? He has heard of a new faction (the Priscians) and is searching for information about their location (i.e., 9-58 to 9-64).

Available Wealth: 411 sp, 218 gp, 1,200 gp in gems

Might Buy: Sortian eyes (see new magic items), information about Priscian sites or Sortian artifacts (provided directions come with the information)

Companions: Peller, a deaf-mute fighter.

Goods for Sale: 1-4 species of exotic mushroom; a skein of spider silk; a still-moving fragment of living mosaic, showing a tiny (2"-square) portion of 6-154; eight octagonal platinum coins; a guard cap (see new magic items); an Alexia's useful pole (see new magic items); an entire text of the Litany of Light (see Arden Vul books); and a hand-written copy of the inscription at 6-147, which he will note came from 'the icy hall of the Lady'.

Inhabitants:

1. Aruna the Gatherer, a 3rd-level male Thorcin thief: SZ M; AL CN; AC 4; MV 120'; HD 3; HP 14; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (short sword) or 1-4 (daggers). Abilities: STR 11, INT 12, WIS 10, DEX 17, CON 11, CHA 14. Thief skills: PP 45%, OL 43%, F/RT 30%, MS 32%, HS 25%, HN 15%, CW 87%. Possessions: leather armor +1; short sword; throwing daggers; grapple and rope; brooch of confident action (see new magic items); ring of shield (see new magic items).

2. Peller, 2nd-level male Thorcin fighter, deaf and mute: SZ M; AL LN; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 17; #AT 1; Dmg 4-9 (spear), 5-11 (broadsword). Abilities: STR 18/75, INT 9, WIS 10, DEX 12, CON 16, CHA 6. Possessions: scale mail; spear; broadsword; purse with 127 gp.

Hakreon the Apothecary

Hakreon is a genial, outgoing, wandering healer. He dresses in a dirty white robe and sports a blue turban.

Personality: Friendly and eager-to-please. Looks puzzled if asked about himself; it's apparent he knows nothing of his own past.

Reputation and/or relations with Factions: Viewed with suspicion by the cult of Set, but tolerated as an odd holy man by all others.

Secret? Hakreon was a 5th-level cleric of Ardenia Tessaeron, but he has no memory of his life prior to the past year. The reason is that he fell prey to the memory erasing trap located in Level 8 (8-111). Ardenia Tessaeron would be pleased to have his memory restored, but this can only be accomplished by destroying the appropriate figurine in 8-126.

Available Wealth: Almost none (75 sp, 55 gp), as he gives most of his money away to the needy

Might Buy: Nothing

Goods for Sale: 'Blessings', that is, cure light wounds, cure blindness, and cure disease. Hakreon accepts donations for his blessings; he leaves the amount up to recipients. Those who offer less than 100 gp or the equivalent in goods will not receive future blessings.

Inhabitants:

1. Hakreon the Apothecary, 5th-level male Archontean cleric of Ardenia Tessaeron with amnesia: SZ M; AL CG; AC 5; MV 60; HD 5; HP 42; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (footman's mace). Abilities: STR 13, INT 14, WIS 16, DEX 10, CON 16, CHA 11. Possessions: scale mail and shield; footman's mace. Spells granted by Ardenia Tessaeron, despite the amnesia: cure light wounds (x4), protection from evil; augury (x2), chant, know alignment, snake charm; cure blindness (or cure disease – 50% chance for either).

Utor Malachite

Utor is a weapons-master, and travels the mid-levels of the Halls offering a small selection of weapons for sale. He also acts as a trainer for those who need one.

Personality: Fairly friendly as far as dwarves go, but with a thin skin and a quick temper.

Reputation and/or relations with Factions: Utor hates the Set cult and has nothing to do with them. He admires the beastman, is fond of the goblins, and admires the varumani.

Secret? He is looking for his missing clansmen, Jasper and Korda Malachite. GM Note: Jasper's party entered the chamber of the keqemander demon (5-52), and Jasper was slain there. Korda has been missing for decades, and his body is lost; his life-stone, however, is now possessed by the doppelganger posing as 'Sable Granite' (see 7-75).

Available Wealth: 45 sp and 53 gp in a purse, plus a lockbox in his pack with 278 sp, 359 gp, and 6,350 gp in gems. He wields a battle axe +2 that is not for sale.

Might Buy: Any magic or unusual weapon

Goods for Sale: A selection of fine daggers and hand-axes, plus the following three magic items: dagger +2, hand-axe +2, short sword +1.

Inhabitants:

1. Utor Malachite, 7th-level male dwarf fighter: SZ M; AL LN; AC 3; MV 90; HD 7; HP 79; #AT 3/2; Dmg 5-8 (war hammer +2), 4-11 (battle axe +2), or 1-3 (darts of sleeping). Abilities: STR 17, INT 10, WIS 12, DEX 15, CON 17; CHA 11. Possessions: chain mail and shield; war hammer +2; 2 darts of sleeping (see new magic items); battle axe +2; dwarven life-stone (see new magic items).

D. Patrons of the Market

To determine the nature of those who have come to buy, sell, or browse, roll once on Table 1 for each potential group (e.g., there is a 60% chance for 1-2 groups of goblins), then roll on subsequent tables as indicated in the final column of Table 1.

Table 1: Creatures at the Market

Type	Chance Present	Number of Groups	Number in Group
Goblins	60%	1-2	6-8
Beastmen	33%	1	7
Lizardmen	20%	1	6
Varumani	100%	2-5	1-4
Ogres from 7-77	80%	1-2	2-5
NPC adventurers	80%	1-2	4-9
Human traders, 50% from outside AV	60%	1-3	3-7
Priscians	25%	1	3-7
Special (roll on Table 1A)	50%	See below	see below

Table 1A: Special Visitors at the Market

D20	Special Visitor	Stats
1	Psalor-Ki	See area 5-74
2	Nizamudden the efreeti, disguised as a Khumus human	See area 7-75, Table 2A, entry 6
3	Magic user and flunkies	Select from NPC appendix
4	A Sun-Scarred Knight (see new monsters)	Select from list found in level overview to Sub-Level 10
5	'Gunnar', the chief slaver (who is currently a doppelganger – see 4-10), with four guildsmen from the Guild of Service	1. For Gunnar, see stats at 4-10. 2. 4 guildsmen, as 2 nd -level male Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 8; MV 120; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 16; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (spears, clubs). Possessions: leather armor; spears; and clubs. Special: +1 dmg from STR.

6	Kerbog Khan (SL12-25), inhabiting a bipedal exploration automaton of Kerbog Khan	1 bipedal exploration automaton of Kerbog Khan (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 6; HP 43; #AT 2; Dmg 1-6/1-6; MR 40%. Special defenses: immune to cold and fire
7	A party of dwarven adventurers	Use the group, 'Survivors of the Stone,' from the NPC appendix
8	Tikun Thane (see SL3-2), and three disciplined	See area 7-75, Table 2A, entry 8
9	Five doppelgangers in dwarven form, seeking the body of Jasper Malachite (5-52). If Utor Malachite (see peddlers, above) arrives at the same time as the doppelgangers, trouble will ensue, as Utor will attempt to engage them in conversation and may well detect their true nature.	See area 7-75, Table 2A, entry 5
10	An ogre mage from area 9-70, disguised as a human	See area 7-75, Table 2A, entry 10
11	A neverlasting (see new monsters) on a mission for a lich	1 neverlasting: SZ M; AL NE; AC 2; MV 120', 60' flying (Class C); HD 8+1; HP 51; #AT 3; Dmg 3-8/3-8/1-2, or 2-5/2-5/1-2. Possessions: lesser short sword of sharpness. Special attacks: entangling banner. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to attacks by those with less than 3 HD; immune to charm, sleep, enfeeblement, polymorph, cold, insanity and death attacks; turned as vampires. Spells: comprehend languages, magic missile, shocking grasp, sleep; darkness 15' radius, mirror image, scare, web; dispel magic, hold person, slow; confusion, ice storm; feeblemind, stone shape
12	Jennistacoril, a silver dragon, in human form as a beautiful woman named Jenna. Her mission is up to the GM.	Jennistacoril, average-sized, old silver dragon: SZ L (or M, in human form); AL LG; AC -1; MV 90', 240' flying (Class E), or 120' in human form; HD 10; HP 60; #AT 3; Dmg 1-6/1-6/5-30. Continual abilities: infravision; detect hidden or invisible (70'); talking (Archontean, Elvish, Thorcin). Special attacks: breath weapon (cold); fear aura (+3 to saves). Special: polymorph self (animal or human). Spells memorized: charm person, shield; detect evil, invisibility; dispel magic, suggestion; ice storm, remove curse. She carries a spell book for the sake of appearances: charm person, comprehend languages, detect magic, friends, identify, read magic, shield; detect evil, ESP, invisibility, magic mouth, wizard lock; dispel magic, fly, haste, slow, suggestion; charm monster, ice storm, polymorph self, remove curse
13	Human agents of the imperial Drome, from Narsileon	See area 7-75, Table 2A, entry 11
14	A succubus disguised as a female human magic user	See area 7-75, Table 2A, entry 15
15	An entrapment devil (see new monsters)	See area 7-75, Table 2A, entry 4
16	Justin the Nose, sacristan of the Inn of the Lost (6-7 and 6-9A), with 4 mercenaries, shopping	1. Justin the Nose: for stats, see 6-7. 2. 4 mercenaries, 2 nd -level Thorcin fighters (2 male, 2 female): SZ M; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 17, 16, 14, 14; #AT 1; Dmg 2-9 (long sword). Special attacks: +1 to damage from STR. Possessions: chain mail and shield; long swords; 79 sp and 22 gp each.
17	Tredgeris the Dapifer, with 3 guardsmen (see 6-75)	1 Tredgeris, see stats at 6-75. 2. 3 male Thorcin arena guardsmen, as 2 nd -level fighters: SZ M; AL NE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 15; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8 (long sword) or 1-6 (spear) or 1-4 (light crossbow). Possessions: scale mail; long swords; spears; light crossbow and 20 bolts; purse with 33 sp and 9 gp each. In addition to their mail byrnies, and simple helmets, they wear a light green surcoat emblazoned with a black image of a six-sided die
18	A party of elves, looking for looking for supplies while searching for the "Sortian Outpost" (now occupied by the Priscians – see areas 9-58 to 9-64)	Use the group, "Arcane Vengeance", from the NPC appendix. The elves are ignorant of the existence of the modern Priscians

19	A were-tiger in human form, calling herself Bootsy. She seeks supplies for an expedition to the shrine of Bastet (8-38)	Bootsy, a weretiger. Human form: SZ M; AC 9; AL N; AC 9; MV 120'; HD 6+2; HP 39; #AT 1; Dmg 3-6 ( dagger +2). Possessions: flowing robes; two daggers +2; amulet of protection from normal missiles (see new magic items). Weretiger form: SZ L; AL N; AC 3; MV 120'; HD 6+2; HP 39; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-12. Special attacks: rake for 2-5/2-5; cause lycanthropy. Special defenses: silver, or +1 or better weapons to hit
20	GM's choice

Table 2: Primary Reason for Presence in Market

D10	Motive	Modifier to Table 3
1-3	Buy goods (see table 4)	0
4-6	Sell Goods (see table 4)	0
7	Acquire or Sell Information	+3
8	Hire mercenaries	+2
9	Hire selves as mercenaries	+1
10	Meet with a third party: varumani (25%), existing merchant (25%), NPC party (25%), or Special Visitor (25%)	+2

Table 3: Subsidiary or Ulterior Motives

D20	Result
1-4	None
5	Assassination, of another visitor (50%), a varumani (25%), or a PC (25%)
6	Abduction, of third party
7	Espionage, against varumani
8	Espionage, against other: Sir Prudence (25%, see 7-76A for stats), another visitor (75%),
9	Theft, against varumani
10	Theft, against other
11	Rescue prisoner, of varumani (50%), of another visitor (25%), of a merchant (25%)
12-13	Buy/sell important and/or secret artifact
14	Usurp Thegan White-Mane's ownership of the Inn of the Lost (see 6-7 to 6-19)
15	Foment uprising against Varboka the thegn (7-30), by stoking the antagonisms of one or more clan chiefs (cf. 7-17, 7-18, 7-25, 7-26)
16	Convert others to the worship of Rimmaq-Isfet (see new monsters), quietly and subtly
17	Locate, and either slay (50%) or negotiate with (50%), one of the wizards living within Arden Vul. Roll d8 and consult the following list to determine which wizard: 1. Kerbog Khan (SL12-25) 2. Tikun Thane (SL3-2) 3. Priddy of Archontos (5-128) 4. Trocadero (3-176) 5. Pelagion the Grey (4-62) 6. Marcus Junienos (4-56) 7. Isocritis Half-Hand (2-70) 8. Yurtil Skreel-Friend (SL5-35)

18	Mount an expedition against the ziggurat of Kauket (areas 10-32 to 10-35)
19	Track rival group deeper into the Halls, either for a secret meeting (25%) or an ambush (75%)
20 or more	Roll twice on this table, ignoring subsequent rolls of 20

Table 4: Goods for Sale, or Goods Sought

D100	Trade Goods	Quality/Rarity
1-20	Food. Bulk goods if for sale, rations if sought	Average/Low
21-30	Alcohol	Average/Low
31-35	Mushroom products, either food (75%) or for other purposes (25%)	High/High
36-40	Misc. objects found within Halls (roll on tables 4A and 4B)	High/Average
44-50	Weapons, mundane	High/Low
51-55	Armor, mundane	High/Average
56-58	Spell scrolls	High/Average
59-62	Potions	High/Average
63-64	Treasure maps	Low/Low
65-78	Meat, fresh or cured	Average/Average
79-85	Mundane manufactured goods (e.g. rope, barrels, pulleys)	Average/Average
86-90	Metal ore	Average/Average
91-95	Mundane metal items	Average/Low
96-97	Gems	High/Low
98-100	Special (roll on Table 4C)	n.a.

Table 4A: Looted Objects from Arden Vul

D20	Object(s) and Quantity	Value
1-3	1-4 pieces of jewelry	6-600 gp each
4-6	1-6 stelae or inscriptions	2-40 gp each
7-8	1-3 pieces of statuary	10-100 gp each
9-10	1-4 scrolls, informational	3-60 gp each
11-12	1-4 religious items or strange bits of iconography	2-20 gp each
13-15	1-6 rare monster parts	10-100 gp each
16	1-2 pieces of rudishva technology, 90% non-functioning (select from new technological items)	20-200 gp each

17-18	Re-roll twice, ignoring rolls over 16	n.a.
19-20	Re-roll, ignoring rolls over 16, but unbeknownst to the seller, the object is magical	n.a.

Table 4B: Nature of Objects from Halls
(Roll 2d20, once for origin, and once for material)

D20	Origin	Material
1-4	Archontean, Thoth	Stone, granite
5-6	Archontean, other	Iron
7-8	Archontean, Set	Stone, other
9-10	Varumani, post-rudishva era	Gemstone, semi-precious
11	Sortian	Silver
12	Beastman	Copper
13	Goblin	Gold
14	Lizardman	Parchment
15	Dwarven or elven	Gemstone, precious
16	Kaliyani	Wood
17	Rudishva	Ivory
18	Heqeti	Bone
19-20	Modern human culture (i.e., imported into halls)	Steel

Table 4C: Special Objects for Sale

D20	Object	Value, per item
1-2	Exotic poisons	60-600 gp
3-4	Exotic mushrooms with pharmacological properties, 2-40	10-200
5-6	Exotic animal parts used in spell research	100-400
7-8	Miscellaneous, one-property, magic items	Varies
9-10	Enchanted weapons, 1-3	Varies
11-12	Blackmail information	1,000-4,000
13-14	Keys, allegedly to crucial sites in Halls (e.g. to Obsidian Gates). 33% chance claim is accurate	1-100
15-16	Rudishva technology, 25% chance to be operable	100-800
17-18	Personal objects stolen from powerful personage in Halls	Varies
19	Unusual or high-level spells	Varies
20	Piece of a powerful artifact; rest must still be recovered	Priceless

Areas 7-76A to 7-76J

These small side caves connect to the main cavern of the Troll Market. Each has a flat, sandy floor. Each also has at minimum one wooden table and an open wooden box. Merchants rent the cave at the rate of 25 gp/month plus 5% of all sales. Most of the caves are inhabited by long-term tenants, and boast extra furnishings.

7-76A: Sir Prudence's Quarters

The thegn grudgingly assigned this cave to Sir Prudence (see 7-75) once it became apparent that the Sun-Scarred Knight intended to stay for some time. Although Varboka complains about the 'loss of revenue' he incurs by having a mercantile booth devoted to a private residence, the reality is that this booth never attracted much business due to its distant location along the platforms.

Sir Prudence and his varlet, Beuvon, reside here when they are not engaged in the business of the Troll Court. The thegn provided two simple cots, a pile of mangy furs, and two battered chairs for the visitors; to these Sir Prudence has added a beautiful yellow silk curtain that hangs across the entryway and provides some privacy; a pair of thick, padded quilts embroidered with bizarre scenes from the mysterious past of the Sun-Scarred Knights; a small casket of brandy; and two locked iron boxes.

Inhabitants:

1. Sir Prudence, the Sun-Scarred Knight (see new monsters), as a 9th-level male Wisikin fighter: SZ M; AL LN; AC -2; MV 120'; HD 9; HP 91; #AT 3/2; Dmg 4-13 (two-handed sword +2), 2-5 (dagger), 1-4 (light crossbow). Abilities: STR 17, INT 15, WIS 16, DEX 10, CON 16, CHA 12. Possessions: key to SL10A-16, gothic armor and sun lance (see new technological items); solar ring, circlet of command, and backpack of capacity (see new magic items for all three); 8 ancient octagonal platinum coins; 173 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items for both); two-handed sword +2; dagger; light crossbow, 20 quarrels; keys to the two iron boxes.
2. Beuvon, varlet of Sir Prudence, as a 5th-level Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL LN; AC 0; MV 120'; HD 5; HP 41; #AT 1; Dmg 4-11 (long sword +2), or 1-6 (short bow). Abilities: STR 17, INT 13, WIS 12, DEX 16, CON 15, CHA 9. Possessions: chain mail +2 and shield; long sword +2; short bow and 20 arrows; 2 potions of heroism.

Treasure:

Iron box #1: contains fresh fruits and vegetables that Sir Prudence buys from a secret supplier in the Troll Market.

Iron Box #2: holds 4,375 gp.

In addition to the brandy (120 gp) and the silk curtain (100 gp), Prudence has secured a leather satchel to the ceiling of the cave. The satchel contains copies of the Litany of Light, the Lay of Marius Invictus, and the Canticle of Arcane Knowledge (see Arden Vul books for all three), and a map showing the route through Level 8 to the citadel of the Sun-Scarred knights (SL10A-14 and SL10B); the route traces the path from 8-1 to 8-3, 8-28, 8-29, through the secret door and down the tunnel to 8-62, 8-61, 8-58, 8-57 and 8-56, and thence to SL10A-2.

7-76B: Ale and Spirits

Proprietor: Big Jacoby

Personality: A bright and cheerful halfling with a deep laugh and welcoming attitude. He is good friends with Skalla Ironmonger (7-76E), and Skalla is often found drinking here.

Reputation and/or relations with Factions: He is beloved by all.

Secret? He hates the Archontean Empire, which is why he finds himself here, far from its reaches.

Lockbox: 797 sp, 451 gp, 750 gp in gems.

Might Buy: Any alcoholic beverages; he is also partial to anything made by or for halflings

Goods for Sale: Imported Narsileon IPA (6 sp/pint), Jacoby's special stout (5 sp/pint), Hak's special red ale (twice the alcohol, 5 sp/pint), Hak's mushroom ale (2 sp/pint), imported Archontean wine (1-20 gp/glass), imported brandy 5 gp/shot.

Companions: Hod, his nephew

Other Features of Cave: His lockbox is buried in the sand at the end of the cave, behind the simple wooden bar found just inside the entrance. He has three trestle tables with benches for those who wish to sit and drink. Behind the bar is his brewing apparatus and supplies, along with 10 kegs of his famous stout. He and Hod sleep behind the bar.

Inhabitants:

1. Big Jacoby, male halfling: SZ S; AL CN; AC 7; MV 90'; HD 1-6 HP; HP 6; #AT 1; Dmg 1-2 (knife)
2. Hod, male halfling and nephew of Big Jacoby: SZ S; AL N; AC 7; MV 90'; HD 1-6 HP; HP 4; #AT 1; Dmg 1-2 (knife).

7-76C: Relics and Curios

Proprietor: Chaudri the Echophont

Personality: Tall, willowy, and innocuous, Chaudri's ethereal air is the root of the fake ghost stories told by the men of the Sign of the Broken Head (AV-22). Chaudri dresses in a flowing white robe tied with a blue silk sash; he affects a yellow pointed hat and gestures dramatically at his merchandise with an ivory wand (non-magic).

Reputation and/or relations with Factions: He is considered an effete idiot by the varumani, who have little time for his strange artifacts; the goblins love his routines, though; the Set cult tolerates him.

Secret? Most of his blithe demeanor is an act, as Chaudri is extremely clever. He is acting for the Collegium of Cinder (see World of Archontos appendix), and is tasked to locate Tikun Thane (SL3-2) for the Cold Fires (the ruling circle of the collegium). Few know he has arcane abilities.

Lockbox: 379 sp, 1,801 gp; 5,450 gp in gems

Might Buy: Anything 'interesting' (50% chance) from the history of the halls; minor magic items; relics of famous figures; inscriptions (so long as they come with a provenance, including directions to that location)

Goods for Sale: A good selection of inscriptions (both actual stones and rubbings of them); statuary fragments; small statuettes; pieces of furniture, including an ebony desk (575 gp); unusual or archaic weapons; codices (but not spell-books); a full range of Sortian eyes at 150% of base price (see new magic items); a token of Arden (see Arden Vul items), for which he wants 1,500 gp; one of the control rods to the eggs found in 4-85 (asking price 250 gp); an iron key (to area SL8-1); and 1-4 common miscellaneous magic items.

Other Features of Cave: He has installed, with the thegn's permission, an iron portcullis across the mouth of his cave. During business hours the door-sized entryway is open. When Chaudri grows tired or must depart, the gate is shut and wizard locked. He keeps his lockbox hidden in the drawer of his large ebony desk.

Inhabitants:

1. Chaudri the Ecophont, 7th-level male Archontean magic user: SZ M; AL CN; AC 6; MV 120'; HD 6; HP 18; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger). Abilities: STR 11, INT 17, WIS 15, DEX 10, CON 9, CHA 12. Possessions: dagger; gem of seeing, bracers of defense (AC 6), a kaliyani blasting rod with 5 charges (see new technological items). Memorized spells: charm person, comprehend languages, detect magic, identify; ESP, knock, wizard lock; blink, suggestion; minor globe of invulnerability. Spell book: charm person, comprehend languages, dancing lights, detect magic, floating disk, friends, identify, light, read magic, shield, sleep, spider climb; audible glamer, continual light, darkness 15' radius, ESP, knock, levitate, scare, stinking cloud, wizard lock; blink, feign death, hold person, protection from normal missiles, suggestion; extension I, fumble, massmorph, minor globe of invulnerability, plant growth.

Secret Door (south): This door is normal to locate but opens only from the south side. Chaudri does not know it exists.

7-76D: Jewelry and Gems

Proprietor: Jordan Rivulus, aka Cold Jordan

Personality: Jordan is a handsome, raven-haired woman of about 30, who dresses in black tunic and black pantaloons. She lives up to her nickname, however, as she is cold and distant, and suspicious of all transactions. She has a set of scales and weights, and most of her business comes from appraisals and exchange of coins for gems.

Reputation and/or relations with Factions: Tolerated by all factions. Regulars to the market know that even though Jordan has been robbed a couple of times over the years, she somehow always manages to recover her goods.

Secret? She is a spy for the Guild of Service (4-7), reporting directly to Gunnar, one of the guildmasters of the Guild of Service. As she has not seen Gunnar in some time (see 4-10 and 4-64), she is growing anxious.

Lockbox: 9,874 gp; 359 sp; six vials of poison.

Might Buy: Jewelry or gems, at 75% of list value. She will also purchase poison, but only from trusted sources

Goods for Sale: 8 pieces of jewelry (110% of list value); gems (110% of list value); money-changing services

Companions: Three 3rd-level fighters as guards. One is on guard at all times (8 hr shifts), but the others are easily summoned in the case of trouble.

Other Features of Cave: Jordan keeps her goods in three, long, narrow metal chests (2'x2'x4') that she locks up each night (-5% to pick, poison needle traps). She hangs a simple rope across the opening to the cave to indicate her shop is closed. Regulars know, however, that efforts to sneak into the shop while Jordan sleeps are unwise. Indeed, she has a clever, near-invisible, set of threads attached to the rope; these are attached to a set of bells mounted inside the cave mouth. In the rare case when her stall is robbed, Jordan uses her ring of the stalker (see new magic items) to track down the culprits; to date the stalker(s) have always managed to eliminate the thieves and return her goods.

Inhabitants:

1. Jordan Rivulus, aka Cold Jordan, 6th-level female Thorcin thief: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 120'; HD 6; HP 29; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (short sword), 5-8 (light crossbow +3 and bolts +1). Abilities: STR 12, INT 15, WIS 13, DEX 17, CON 10, CHA 9. Thief skills: PP 60%, OL 57%, F/RT 45%, MS 52%, HS 42%, HN 20%, CW 92%, RL 30%. Possessions: ring of the stalker; short sword; light crossbow +3 and 20 bolts +1; leather armor +1; potions of invisibility.
2. 3 guardsmen, as 3rd-level male Thorcin fighters: SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 3; HP 27, 24, 23; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 2-9 (long sword). Special: +1 damage from STR. Possessions: scale mail; spear; long sword.

7-76E: Weapons and Armor

Proprietor: Skalla Ironmonger

Personality: Skalla is a typical Wiskin: tall, fair, with reddish-blond hair, long mustaches, and big muscles. He is a man of few words during working hours, preferring shrugs and eyebrow lifts to words; after he closes shop, though, he likes to drink horns of ale with his friend, Big Jacoby (7-76B). At that point he is quite voluble, full of boasts, challenges, and epic songs about obscure heroes of legend (e.g. Larel One-Eye, Jacinth the Rose, Chramn the Hunter [4-97B], and legendary Wiskin, Olaf White-Beard).

Reputation and/or relations with Factions: The varumani love him, especially when he drinks, and especially love to challenge him to arm-wrestling contests. Although he always loses, his determination and good sportsmanship have won him lots of friends. He is unknown to the Set cult and goblin court.

Secret? He is a skald, and is looking for material for his own epic tale. He wouldn't mind a few epic adventures, as well, so long as they starred him.

Lockbox: 3,479 sp; 6,731 gp

Might Buy: Exceptionally finely made spears, axes or blades, or unusual or ceremonial exemplars of the same. He might buy an enchanted blade (up to +2) at 80% value, although he might need time to raise the cash

Goods for Sale: One suit each of leather armor, studded leather, banded mail, and scale mail; two fine chain byrnies; three medium wooden shields; 1-4 long swords; 1-4 battle-axes, 3-6 fine ash spears; and a 25% chance for any other weapon. Skalla charges 125% of list value. He also has a battle axe +1, a long sword +1, and a spear +2 (Earthfriend), but will only sell these treasures to someone he likes well. His price for the spear is 10,000 gp. Unbeknownst to Skalla, the spear is actually the legendary Earthfriend (see new magic items). Should Skalla sell the spear and then learn of its identity, he will do everything in his power to recover it.

Companions: 2 Wiskin assistants, 2nd-level fighters

Other Features of Cave: The goods are displayed on simple racks along the walls of the cave. The lockbox is buried in the sand beneath Skalla's bedroll. One assistant guards the shop at night.

Inhabitants:

1. Skalla Ironmonger, 5th-level male Wiskin fighter: SZ M; AL N; AC 3; MV 90'; HD 5; HP 48; #AT 1; Dmg 6-13 (battle axe +2). Abilities: STR 18/49, INT 10, WIS 11, DEX 10, CON 16, CHA 10. Possessions: chain mail and shield +1; battle axe +2.
2. 2 assistants, as 2nd-level female Wiskin fighters: SZ M; AL N; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 15, 14; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 3-6 (war hammer). Special: +1 to damage from STR. Possessions: scale mail and shield; war hammer; spear.

7-76F: Scribe and Scrolls

Proprietor: Hallar Ellagelsson

Personality: As a son of Lady Ellagel of the realm of Gallador (see World of Archontos appendix), albeit by a human lover, Hallar has significant status among his own people. Hallar has honey-gold, shoulder-length hair and penetrating green eyes; he favors brightly striped tunics worn over his elven chain, and loose purple trousers. He is inquisitive to a fault, and likes nothing more than to subject his patrons to close questioning about their experiences in the halls.

Reputation and/or relations with Factions: Mostly treated with suspicion as too nosy and arrogant for his own good.

Secret? He vowed to his mother to locate his half-brother, Erist Ellagelsson, who has been missing in Arden Vul for about 75 years. Unbeknownst to Hallar, Erist is currently petrified at area SL6-5. Hallar will not easily reveal his quest, but will be most grateful – as will his mother – for news of his sibling and/or for his restoration.

Lockbox: 385 sp, 4,931 gp

Might buy: Rare spells; exemplars of any unknown languages (e.g., Rudishva); certain interesting inscriptions; information about Pol or his missing brother, Erist

Goods for Sale: Single-sheet scrolls with any MU spell of levels 1-3 (80% for any given spell), at a cost of 350 gp/spell level. Hallar also offers scribing services, whether copying items, translating them, or composing text for the illiterate; these services are typically 100 gp per hour of work. Hallar reads/writes all living languages (Elvish, Dwarvish, Archontean, Thorcin, Wiskin, etc.); he also reads Mithric fluently and has some familiarity with Glyphik-derived tongues (33%). He knows a few Rudishva glyphs (10% chance to know any given one).

Other Features of Cave: Hallar has constructed an inclined scribe's desk out of pieces of oak and ash; it has three drawers and ample supplies of parchment, ink, and other scribing implements. He keeps his scrolls in a heavy iron and wood chest that is locked and wizard locked at night.

Inhabitants:

1. Hallar Ellagelsson, 6th-/7th-level male half-elf fighter-magic user: SZ M; AL CG; AC 4; MV 120'; HD 7; HP 40; #AT 1; Dmg 4-11 (long sword +2) or 2-7 (short bow and arrows +1). Abilities: STR 16, INT 17, WIS 10, DEX 15, CON 13, CHA 11. Possessions: elven chain mail; long sword +2; short bow and 20 arrows +1; wand of light with 23 charges; boots of striding and springing. Memorized Spells: charm person, detect magic, identify, sleep; detect evil, locate object, wizard lock; dispel magic, explosive runes; monster summoning II. Spell book: burning hands, charm person, comprehend languages, detect magic, erase, hold portal, identify, jump, magic missile, protection from evil, read magic, shield, sleep, ventriloquism; continual light, detect evil, invisibility, knock, locate object, locate place (see new spells), mirror image, Pol's endless sneezes (see new spells), wizard lock; clairaudience, clairvoyance, dispel magic, explosive runes, fireball, protection from evil 10' radius, slow; dimension door, extension I, fire charm, monster summoning II, wall of ice.

7-76G: Alchemist

Proprietor: Coelrith the Mixer

Personality: Coelrith is twisted and bitter, and mutters constantly to himself. He seems to dislike interruptions, and is brusque with customers. He has an enormous mane of bushy white hair, complete with a stained, chest-length beard.

Reputation and/or relations with Factions: Barely tolerated by all; it seems he is always close to being expelled for general rudeness.

Secret? He dislikes magic users, and particularly members of the Collegium of Cinder (see World of Archontos appendix)

Lockbox: 299 sp, 2,239 gp, two 300-gp bars of platinum

Might Buy: Non-standard potions or recipes, herbal, fungal or animal byproducts suitable for potion creation

Goods for Sale: 75% chance for any potion off the list; 1-3 exotic poisons; alchemical supplies, including herbal, fungal, and animal products. Coelrith has also acquired a good stock of Gethite lotus powder (see new flora) and other exotic substances from subterranean trade; he doesn't advertise this fact, but might part with some if he were in a good mood.

Companions: Two goblin assistants, Wiggy and Plod

Other Features of Cave: Coelrith has a full alchemical laboratory in the rear of the cave, at which he constantly labors. Most of the time Wiggy handles sales, and the two goblins take turns guarding the shop at night.

Inhabitants:

1. Coelrith the Mixer, 7th-level male Thorcin magic user: SZ M; AL LN; AC 6; MV 120'; HD 7; HP 21; #AT 1; Dmg 2-5 (dagger +1). Abilities: STR 9, INT 17, WIS 15, DEX 15, CON 9, CHA 9. Possessions: dagger +1; bracers of defense (AC 6); wand of fire (5 charges). Memorized Spells: charm person, detect magic, identify, sleep; detect evil, invisibility, wizard lock; dispel magic, fireball; wizard eye. Spell book: burning hands, charm person, comprehend languages, detect magic, erase, hold portal, identify, jump, magic missile, push, read magic, shield, sleep, ventriloquism; continual light, detect evil, invisibility, knock, locate object, magic mouth, mirror image, scare, wizard lock; clairaudience, clairvoyance, dispel magic, explosive runes, fireball, protection from evil 10' radius, slow; charm monster, extension I, massmorph, plant growth, wizard eye.
2. Wiggy and Plod (goblins): SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 5, 4; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.

7-76H: Empty Cave

This cave is currently not occupied by a quasi-permanent merchant. As a result, many visitors bed down in it. The thegn tolerates this for only a night or two, but has the Wardens roust the vagrants after that.

7-76I: General Outfitting

Proprietor: Lyssandra of Newmarket

Personality: Sunny and cheerful, greeting all customers with a hearty 'hello' and seemingly interested in every word they say. Lyssandra is a handsome woman with brown hair, blue eyes, and a long scar running down her left cheek

Reputation and/or relations with Factions: She is well-liked and tolerated by all Secret? Lyssandra is looking for the NPC adventurer who gave her the scar on her cheek. She also periodically reports back to Mayor Josselin Rinstock of Newmarket concerning the identity of those she spots in the Halls.

Lockbox: 873 sp, 731 gp, and a trio of sizable emeralds worth 1,200 gp each.

Might Buy: Good-quality general equipment, as well as objets d'art, inscriptions, books, and jewelry found in the Halls

Goods for Sale: A wide selection of general equipment. Pretty much anything off the equipment list may be found here, for 120% of list cost. She has a good eye for interesting items, and has a small selection of minor magic items (1-4) at 150% of listed cost and a small collection of writings, objects, and artifacts found within the Halls.

Companions: Harold and Maude, two assistants

Other Features of Cave: She has acquired several more benches, on which she displays her wares. A locked iron chest at the rear of the cave holds valuables. Her lockbox is buried under the chest.

Inhabitants:

1. Lyssandra of Newmarket, 3rd-level female Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL LG; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 3; HP 24; #AT 1; Dmg 2-11 (halberd), 2-7 (short sword). Abilities: STR 17, INT 10, WIS 13, DEX 10, CON 15, CHA 15. Possessions: scale mail and shield; halberd; short sword; potions of greek fire and singing birds (see new magic items for both).

2. Harold and Maude, Archontean merchants: SZ M; AL NG; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 1-6 HP; HP 5, 4; #AT 1; Dmg 1-3 (dagger). Possessions: leather armor; dagger.

7-76J: Yeskim's Place (Hot Food)

Proprietor: Fat Yeskim (male goblin)

Personality: Yeskim is an incredibly round goblin who dresses in extravagantly striped and checkered silk garments. He is outgoing and cheerful, and well-liked by all.

Reputation and/or relations with Factions: Yeskim has a good reputation with all.

Secret? None.

Lockbox: 899 sp, 241 gp, plus two sapphire Sortian eyes (see new magic items)

Might Buy: Fresh meat, mushrooms

Goods for Sale: He maintains a huge cauldron of Yeskim's stew, to which he is always adding choice new ingredients (10 sp/6-oz bowl). He has haunches of cured meat, a couple of bins of dried mushrooms and dried fruit. He also operates a rotisserie over a tripod of heating (see new magic items) on which he roasts fresh meat. With a day or two's notice, he can also assemble packages of very tasty rations that last for a week (7 gp/packet).

Companions: Two young nieces (Sarka and Kellan) as assistants

Other Features of Cave: He has two tripods of heating (see new magic items), one for the stew and one for the rotisserie. He also has three wooden bins for dried goods, plus a heavy oak preparation table. His lockbox is kept inside a locked wooden chest under the preparation table.

Inhabitants:

1. Yeskim, goblin: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.
2. Sarka and Kellan, goblin assistants: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 3, 2; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.

7-76K (x4): Concealed Point Defense Arrays

Each of these four shallow caves contains an ancient weapon of great power, a rudishva point defense array (see new technological items). These laser cannons ("tubes attached to a tripod") are remotely controlled (via the controller in 7-11), and can be used to sweep the entirety of the Cave of Blood (i.e., 7-76). Each array strikes as a 10 HD fighter, attacking three times every two rounds, and inflicting 6-36 HP damage on a target (impedes regeneration). The thegn only authorizes their use in the case of a clear and present threat to the safety of the varumani people.

Secret Door (east, to 7-11): One of the caves housing a point defense array also conceals a secret door leading to the point defense control chamber. The door is hard to find from this side (1 in 8), and only opens to force.

7-77: Barracks of the Ogre Guards

A small tribe of ogres inhabits this chamber. The ogres serve happily as petty guards for the varumani, and are paid well for their troubles. About the only grievance the ogres have is the fact that they must provide 2 infants per year to the thegn, who trades them to Weskenim the goblin king to use as the latter's eunuch guards (see SL4-25).

The chamber is undecorated, and smells rather rank. The ogres have a single tripod of heating (see new magic items) and two immense barrels, one of water and one of sour wine. Their 'beds' are nothing but piles of hides and furs.

Inhabitants:

1. 9 ogres: SZ L; AL CE; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 4+1; HP 31, 29, 28, 27, 26, 25, 25, 24, 22; #AT 1; Dmg 1-10, or by weapon.
2. 4 ogre females: SZ L; AL CE; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 4+1; HP 24, 23, 22, 21; #AT 1; Dmg 1-10, or by weapon.
3. 4 ogre children: SZ M; AL CE; AC 7; MV 90'; HD 2+1; HP 13, 12, 11, 10; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4.

Treasure:

The ogres have a war chest that contains 5,397 sp and 1,118 gp.

7-78: Upper Temple of the Heqeti

This ancient heqeti temple to Kauket was important in antiquity before it was destroyed by the rudishva. The original complex included current areas 7-91 and 7-76, but those areas were devastated by the rudishva in their first wars with the heqeti, leaving only this badly dilapidated set of ruins (7-78 to 7-84). In the past several decades, however, the heqeti have returned and have begun restoring this area.

Area 7-78 is the temple proper. It encompasses a tall cavern (40') dominated by a crumbling stone ziggurat (7-79) that sits in the midst of a foetid pool. The entire cavern is covered by the effects of a hallow spell (see new spells) cast on the altar atop the ziggurat; this spell adds +2 to all rolls made by those of chaotic evil alignment, and imposes a -2 penalty to all rolls by good creatures. GM Note: The heqeti forces on Level 10 can be weakened by removing the evil hallow effect from the upper temple. To remove that effect is difficult: it might be accomplished by having good-aligned PCs cast their own version of hallow, or by having a high priest of a good deity cleanse the area through a set of costly and time-consuming rituals (15,000 gp in materials and a two-week period of time). For the consequences of removing the evil hallow effect, see the level introduction to Level 10.

The walls of the chamber are pitted and covered with strange purple lichen and yellow-green shelf fungus, while the floor is covered by a thin layer of sand. Two glowing fire-beetle abdomens hang from iron rods by the east end of the pool, providing minimal light to that area.

Two niches stand 15' above the cavern floor near the east exit. A pair of heqeti hopping dead (see new monsters) with spears stands in each niche. Close examination of the wall under the southern niche reveals hand and foot-holds leading up to that niche; these features are discovered as if they were secret doors.

The cavern is dominated by a dark pool of mostly-stagnant water. The pool is 13' deep and offers a mild but unpleasant reek of rotting vegetation. A stone causeway leads up 10' via a series of shallow stone steps to the foot of the ziggurat (7-79).

Six heqeti chosen on riding salamanders (see new monsters for both) patrol the cavern, and keep a close eye out for the warning salamanders from 7-84. The chosen swiftly intercept any intruders, while calling for assistance from those on the lesser ziggurat (7-79). Should a battle royale break out here, the other six chosen arrive from 7-82 after 4 rounds.

The Tongue (i.e., chief priest) of this temple is Caudatssa, a heqeti builder (see new monsters). Initially Caudatssa will be found at the ziggurat at 7-79, either atop it with a sacrifice (50%), or within it in the summoning chamber (50%).

Secret Door (southern niche, leading to 7-83): The door is normal to find and opens by physically sliding stone panel into a slot in the wall.

Inhabitants:

1. 4 heqeti hopping dead (see new monsters): SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 3; HP 19, 17, 16, 15; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8. Special attacks: leap; cursed tongue. Special defenses: turned as ghosts; half damage from piercing and edged weapons; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and cold-based spells.
1. 6 heqeti chosen (see new monsters), as 6th-level fighters: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60', 150' swimming; HD 6; HP 44, 42, 41, 39, 38, 37; #AT 2; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 1-6 (bite). Special attacks: hop; acid tongue (1-6 acid damage); +1 damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold and water/ice.
3. 6 riding salamanders (see new monsters): SZ L; AL N; AC 6; MV 60', 90' swimming; HD 6; HP 43, 41, 41, 39, 37, 35; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12.

Treasure:

Each heqeti has 11 gp and 7 sp.

7-79: Lesser Heqeti Ziggurat

This forbidding structure is the heart of the revived heqeti temple. Its interior is formed by huge granite blocks, while the sheathing and steps are oily, pebbled soapstone. Steep steps on each side of the ziggurat climb 25' above the level of the surrounding pool to a central platform. Halfway up the west side a 7'-square opening leads to an inner chamber. Atop the ziggurat stands a 6'x3'x4' altar.

Altar: The altar is a shaped piece of soapstone resembling a salamander on four legs. Leather restraints allow a sacrifice to be strapped onto the altar. A hole in the altar allows blood from such sacrifices to spill down through the altar into a copper basin on the ziggurat top; a hole in the basin leads to the summoning chamber inside the ziggurat. Three sharp copper knives, a pair of copper picks, and a set of copper nesting bowls rest atop the altar. Two large violet garnets are set into the altar at one end, forming the eyes of the 'salamander'.

Inner Chambers (not mapped)

The interior of the ziggurat is comprised of three chambers. The 7'-square entrance tunnel leads straight to the summoning chamber, whose dimensions are 14'x14'x14'. A 4'-wide side corridor leads down 30' from the entrance passage via a narrow staircase to two 10x10' chambers set in the bedrock. The summoning chamber has a hole in the ceiling that leads up to the top of the ziggurat; blood from sacrifices drips down the hole and pools in a shallow depression in the center of the chamber. The depression is surrounded by a five pointed star gouged into the floor and carefully filled with crushed shell. Two iron sconces hold tallow candles. From this chamber the tongue and weavers are able to summon keqemandri (see new monsters). Of the two lower chambers, one is a holding cell for sacrifices, with iron shackles set into the wall. The other is a utility room for the weavers and builder. Currently the holding cell is occupied by Lyxander, a human adventurer and member of the ill-fated NPC group, the Cleaners. The Cleaners found the Drowned Canyon (SL6) and then came up the tunnel to 7-86. Surprised by the basilisks, they fled to 7-84, where they were overwhelmed by the heqeti and taken prisoner. The utility room contains the adventurer's gear, plus a pile of dried human skins, a sack with unidentifiable jerky, an extra set of copper sacrificial instruments; and a stone chest containing the treasure of the temple.

Ceremonies: Two rituals take place at the ziggurat: 1) the sacrifice of prisoners to Kauket, and 2) the summoning of keqemandri demons to aid the heqeti. When the PCs arrive, there is a 50% chance that the tongue, Caudatssa, is performing a sacrifice atop the ziggurat. Otherwise he is found in the summoning chamber within the ziggurat. The weavers accompany Caudatssa at all times. Should PCs arrive during a sacrifice, Caudatssa will immediately dash to the summoning chamber; there he spends 5 rounds summoning a keqemander demon while the weavers confront the PCs. If the leaders are already in the summoning chamber, they complete the summoning before moving en masse to the top of the ziggurat for combat.

GM Note: In the case of a combat that turns clearly against the heqeti, Caudatssa attempts to flee towards 7-83, where he jumps into the teleport well to alert the rest of his people.

Inhabitants:

1. Caudatssa the Tongue, a heqeti builder (see new monsters), 9th/7th-level fighter/cleric of Rimmaq-Isfet: SZ M; AL CE; AC 3; MV 90', 120' swimming; HD 9; HD 64; #AT 3/2; Dmg 6-11 (short sword +4, defender); MR 10% (tear of Kauket). Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice. Possessions: heqeti mail armor (-2 to AC); short sword +4, defender; heqeti ring (see new magic items); tear of Kauket (10% MR) (see new magic items), staff of compulsion. Spells: bless, command (x2), light, protection from good; augury, hold person (x3), silence 15' radius; dispel magic, curse; cure serious wounds.
2. Rissalviq, a heqeti weaver (see new monsters), as a 9th-level magic user: SZ M; AL CE; AC 3; MV 120', 90' swimming; HD 9; HP 28; #AT 1; Dmg 4-6 (dagger +2). Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice. Possessions: wand of fire (30 charges); amulet of natural armor +2 (see new magic items); ring of shield (see new magic items); wand of magic missiles (12 charges); bone dagger +2. Memorized spells: burning hands, comprehend languages, enlarge, magic missile; darkness 15' radius, levitate, web; dispel magic, fly, haste; ice storm, wall of ice, interposing hand. Spell book: found at 7-82.
3. 1 heqeti weaver (see new monsters), as a 7th/7th-level magic user/cleric of Rimmaq-Isfet: SZ M; AL CE; AC 3; MV 120', 90' swimming; HD 7; HP 34; #AT 1; Dmg 5-10 (footman's mace +2). Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice. Possessions: amulet of natural armor +2 (see new magic items); staff of healing (18 charges); copper-headed footman's mace +2; two glass spheres of arcane assistance (one of arcane warding, one of protection) (see new magic items); potion of gaseous form. Magic user spells:

enlarge, jump, magic missile, shield; continual light, levitate, ray of enfeeblement; fireball, protection from normal missiles; polymorph other. Cleric spells: bles, command (x2), create water, cure light wounds; chant, hold person (x2), resist fire, silence 15' radius; animate dead, blindness; sticks to snakes. Spell book: found at 7-82.

4. 1 keqemander demon (see new monsters): SZ L; AL CE; AC -2; MV 90'; 150' flying (Class D); HD 12; HP 85; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/3-18; MR 40%. Constant abilities: dread (-1 to saves); infravision. Special attacks: acid spit (3-10 dmg; 30' range, every other round); cause fear; darkness (10' radius); exude acid with chance to degrade armor; use a symbol of discord. Special defenses: only hit by magic weapons; half damage from cold, electricity, fire, and gas; become invisible. Special: levitate; telekinesis (4,000 gp weight); project image; teleport without error; 50% chance to gate in either another keqemander or a Type I-IV demon.
5. Lyxander, 5th-level male Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL NG; AC 9; MV 120'; HD 5; HP 18 (max 43); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 16, INT 8, WIS 11, DEX 15, CON 15, CHA 10. Possessions: Lyxander's gear is held in the storeroom (chain mail +2 and shield +1, long sword +2).

Treasure:

Altar: 2 large violet garnets (650 gp each); set of copper sacrificial instruments (200 gp)

Storeroom: another set of sacrificial instruments (200 gp); chain mail +2; long sword +2; shield +1; gold statuette of a crocodile (200 gp); sack of jerky; pile of dried and prepared human skins.

Chest: 5,418 sp; 7,421 gp; three white opals tied together by strips of human flesh (1,000 gp each); a choker made of silver and aquamarines (575 gp); a pair of matched gold rings inset with silver lizards (400 gp each); a platinum key to the Obsidian Gates (5-6D); a sheet of smallness; a rod of turning (see new magic items); a silk-lined purse with 2 doses of efreeti sand (see new magic items); an orange ioun stone; a bone coffer with 4 tears of Kauket (see new magic items) and a spoon of stirring; 2 potions of sweat of Rimmaq-Isfet (see new magic items); a scroll of phantom armor, a scroll of protection from fire; and a pledge of Rimmaq-Isfet (see new magic items).

7-80: Pool

This cave is mostly submerged with still, cloudy water to depth of 15'. An outcropping in its center has been carved to resemble the head of a giant salamander peering from the water. The heqeti use it for recreation.

A submerged passageway leads to the entrance pool at 7-81.

Treasure:

A soggy, but still legible scroll is stuffed into the nostril of the carved salamander head; the scroll contains the magic user spells invisible stalker and stone to flesh.

7-81: Water Cells

The heqeti keep prisoners in eight horrible water-filled pits prior to bringing them to the ziggurat (7-79) for sacrifice. Each pit is 4' in diameter and 8' deep. Prisoners are secured in wooden collars that attach to bolts on the side of each pit; the collars keep each prisoner's head at level just above the waterline. Two heqeti jailers with spears wander amongst the pits. Five of the pits currently hold prisoners; the three adventurers (Mard, Clearchus, and Proethus) were members of the Cleaners (See 7-79).

A broader, 8'-wide, 20'-deep pool stands in the entrance to the prison. A submerged tunnel 15' below the surface leads to area 7-80.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 heqeti chosen (see new monsters), as 6th-level fighters: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60', 150' swimming; HD 6; HP 43, 38; #AT 2; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 1-6 (bite). Special attacks: hop; acid tongue (1-6 acid damage); +1 damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold and water/ice.
2. Yeggit, a lesser varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 58; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or by weapon. Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Yeggit was captured on Level 9.
3. Sir Mendacity, the Sun-Scarred Knight (see new monsters), as a 13th-level female Thorcin fighter: SZ M; AL LN; AC 9; MV 120'; HD 13; HP 31 (max 101); #AT 2/1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 17, INT 11, WIS 12, DEX 15, CON 16, CHA 15.
4. Mard Adamantine, 8th-level male dwarven thief: SZ M; AL NG; AC 7; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 15 (max 38); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 16, INT 14, WIS 10, DEX 17, CON 10, CHA 14. Thief skills: PP 70%, OL 77%, F/RT 70%, MS 67%, HS 54%, HN 25%, CW 86%, RL 35%.
5. Clearchus, 6th-level male Thorcin fighter: SZ M; AL NG; AC 9; MV 120'; HD 6; HP 31 (max 51); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 17, INT 9, WIS 10, DEX 15, CON 15, CHA 11.
6. Proethus of Epirenus, 7th-level male Archontean magic user: SZ M; AL CG; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 7; HP 10 (max 20); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 11, INT 16, WIS 15, DEX 16, CON 9, CHA 9. He has no spells memorized.

Treasure:

Caudatssa sent all of Sir Mendacity's equipment to the Great Tongue (10-47; equipment in 10-53) save her solar ring (see new magic items), which is in 7-82. Piled in the corner are Mard's dwarven-sized chain mail +2, war-hammer +2, and dwarven life-stone (see new magic items); Clearchus's scale mail +1 and long sword +1; and Proethus's staff +2. After granting the weaver access to Proethus's spell book, Caudatssa ordered it destroyed.

7-82: Chambers of the Tongue

These three caves constitute the living quarters for the heqeti who serve the upper temple. The westernmost cave is home to the two weavers; the middle cave is the residence of Caudatssa, the tongue; the larger, eastern cave is a residence for the other heqeti.

Western Cave: The weavers (for stats see 7-79) have a 'bead curtain' made of bits of shell that offers a bit of privacy. They have a full human skeleton tied together with wire and hanging from a hook, on which they practice spells. A low (3'-tall) slab of inclined rock acts as a writing desk; on it sit their two spell books, the leaves and binding of which are made of human flesh. They also have an art-naïf statuette of Rimmaq-Isfet shaped much like a slug: a 10"-long piece of granite, shaped and rounded, with eyes and a mouth opening on one end. It detects as evil, but has no powers.

Center Cave: Caudatssa, the tongue (see 7-79), commands the revived lesser ziggurat from this cave (even though he is rarely present here). A pile of dried pondweed serves as his resting spot. On a flat rock is the partly dissected corpse of the last sacrifice, a human; a set of finely-honed copper knives lies next to the body. Caudatssa has a curious interest in the inner workings of humans, and he is always eager to open up prisoners or the remains of sacrifices. Two banners made of human skin lashed to a circle of bones rest against one wall. A large white teardrop is painted on the first [GM: a symbol of Kauket], while a thin black circle on a white field appears on the second [GM: a symbol of Rimmaq-Isfet]. Caudatssa also retains Sir Mendacity's solar ring (see new magic items).

Eastern Cave: This large cave houses twelve heqeti chosen. At any given moment, six are on patrol in 7-78, while the other six relax here. The heqeti have flattened one of the walls and painted it white; atop the white field is a sinuous tongue [GM: another Rimmaq-Isfet symbol]. The cave contains twelve lumps of sand and pondweed, and a wooden post on which hangs a decomposing varumani corpse that the heqeti use for combat practice. In one of the 'nests' is a hand-carved circular piece of bone; it serves as an amulet of health, albeit only for those of an evil alignment. Searching the others produces six pieces of carved amber.

Inhabitants:

1. 6 heqeti chosen (see new monsters), as 6th-level fighters: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60', 150' swimming; HD 6; HP 45, 43, 40, 39, 38, 35; #AT 2; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 1-6 (bite). Special attacks: hop; acid tongue (1-6 acid damage); +1 damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold and water/ice.

Treasure:

A sun-scarred knight's solar ring (see new magic items), an amulet of health usable only by evil characters, and six pieces of carved amber (150 gp each).

Spell Book for 9th-level Weaver: Affect normal fires, burning hands, comprehend languages, detect magic, enlarge, floating disk, hold portal, identify, jump, magic missile, read magic, shield, sleep; continual light, darkness 15' radius, detect invisibility, knock, levitate, mirror image, ray of enfeeblement, web; dispel magic, feign death, fireball, fly, haste, protection from normal missiles, suggestion; charm monster, fear, fumble, ice storm, monster summoning II, wall of ice; conjure elemental, interposing hand, stone shape, telekinesis.

Spell Book for 7th/7th-level Weaver: Affect normal fires, burning hands, comprehend languages, detect magic, enlarge, floating disk, hold portal, identify, jump, magic missile, read magic, shield, sleep; continual light, darkness 15' radius, detect invisibility, knock, levitate, magic mouth, ray of enfeeblement, web; dispel magic, fireball, fly, haste, protection from normal missiles, suggestion; charm monster, fear, fumble, ice storm, monster summoning II, polymorph other, remove curse.

7-83: Secret room with Teleport Well

A heqeti teleport well is found in this low (8'-tall) cave. The well appears as a 7'-diameter circle of stone rising 3' above the floor. It appears to contain nothing but inky blackness; objects tossed into it make no sound. By jumping into the well one is transported after 3 seconds to 10-24.

The tongue, Caudatssa, and her advisors know of the existence of this chamber. They rarely use the teleport wells, as the return trip from Level 10 to the lesser ziggurat (7-79) is onerous. In the case of a serious assault on the lesser temple, though, Caudatssa attempts to use the well to alert his comrades.

Secret Door (north): The door is easy to find (1 in 4) and opens by sliding the panel into a slot in the wall.

7-84: Decrepit Heqeti Hall

This hall bears a certain resemblance to the Hall of Forty Pillars (5-6). Ten thick (3'-diameter) pillars support a semi-circular ceiling, and the walls and pillars are formed of oily, pebbled stone. The floor was anciently covered in 5'-square panels of black marble; most of these are cracked, and several are buckled. Two panels are completely missing, leaving puddles of muddy water where they once lay. At the north end, a 2' pediment holds the ruined stump of a statue. The statue itself is long gone.

The chamber is the home of six warning salamanders (see new monsters) as well as a small colony of fire beetles. Should any creature larger than a salamander enter from the south and create noise (such as by fighting fire beetles), the warning salamanders take notice and, within 1-3 rounds, will hurry to 7-78 to avoid the threat. Their arrival has a 75% chance of alerting the heqeti chosen to the arrival of visitors.

This hall is a destination for the heqeti teleporter located at area 10-8.

Inhabitants:

1. 6 warning salamanders (see new monsters): SZ S; AC 8; MV 90'; 150' swimming; HD 2; HP 14, 13, 12, 11, 10, 9; #AT 0; Dmg 0. Special attacks: strobe light. Special defenses: surprised only on 1.
2. 8 fire beetles: SZ S; AL N; AC 4; MV 120'; HD 1+2; HP 10, 9, 8, 8, 7, 7, 5, 4; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8.

Areas 7-85 to 7-90: Basilisk Caves

These caves are home to three adult basilisks. The caves are also damp and humid, with numerous rocky protuberances, stalactites and stalagmites. The walls are covered with two forms of lichen, one orange-ish and one grey. The lichen is attractive to a variety of small cave cricket; as a result, the caves are filled with noisy thrumming. As the basilisks are always hungry, they constantly roam the region hunting crickets and whatever else they can find. Should combat break out with one basilisk, the other two will arrive within 1-4 rounds.

7-85: Tall Cave with Holes

This 20'-tall cavern is a bit less rocky than the others in the vicinity. A petrified heqeti weaver stands underneath the hole in the ceiling that leads to 7-84. To the southwest a 5'-diameter hole in the floor leads to 7-87.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 petrified heqeti weaver (see new monsters), as a 5th-level magic user: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 120', 90' swimming; HD 5; HP 16; #AT 1; Dmg 1-3 (darts). Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice. Possessions: brooch of shielding (56 HP left); 6 poisoned darts. Memorized spells: jump, magic missile, protection from good, sleep; invisibility, mirror image; lightning bolt. Spell book: dancing lights, detect magic, enlarge, jump, magic missile, protection from good, read magic, shield, sleep; darkness 15' radius, invisibility, knock, mirror image, ray of enfeeblement, strength, whip; blink, dispel magic, gust of wind, lightning bolt, slow.
2. 1 basilisk (66% chance): SZ M; AL N; AC 4; MV 60'; HD 6+1; HP 41; #AT 1; Dmg 1-10. Special attacks: petrifying gaze.

7-86: Uneven Cave with Tunnel Up to SL6-26

This large cave is quite uneven, with a large and steep bit of flowstone at the west end and numerous stalactites and stalagmites near the entrance. Among the stalagmites are a petrified true varumani and a petrified lizardman. The former actually looks much like a stalagmite, given the long time he has been petrified (300 years); it would take a close inspection of the rocks to detect that a petrified being exists under the limestone veneer. The lizardman was entombed more recently. The east end of the cave rises steeply until it turns into a broad but short (10'-wide, 5'-tall) tunnel leading up to the drowned canyon (SL6-26). Although they are not necessarily present in this cave, it does house the lair of the basilisks: a thick pile of dirt, rubbish, and bones pushed together at the north end of the cave.

Inhabitants:

1. Anuran, a petrified true varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LN; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 55; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 6-24 (two-handed sword, 2-20+4). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: huge two-handed sword; ring mail.

2. Petrified lizardman: SZ M; AL N; AC 5; MV 60'; 120' swimming; HD 2+1; HP 14; #AT 1 or 3; Dmg 1-6 (club) and 1-6 (javelin), or 1-2/1-2/1-8. Possessions: club, javelins.
3. 1 basilisk (50% chance): SZ M; AL N; AC 4; MV 60'; HD 6+1; HP 41; #AT 1; Dmg 1-10. Special attacks: petrifying gaze.

Treasure:

In the basilisk nest are a pair of halfling-sized boots made of solid gold (5,000 gp the pair); a basilisk egg (2,500 gp), and 457 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items).

7-87: Dripping Cave

Water actively drips from nearly a half-dozen stalactites in this cave located down a sharp slope from 7-88. The corresponding stalagmites are close to forming solid pillars of limestone. Two carcass creepers appear to confront those entering the cave, but they are, in fact, petrified.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 petrified carcass creepers: SZ L; AL N; AC 3 (head) or 7 (body); MV 120'; HD 3+1; HP 21, 17; #AT 8; Dmg nil. Special attacks: paralysis.
2. 1 basilisk (33% chance): SZ M; AL N; AC 4; MV 60'; HD 6+1; HP 41; #AT 1; Dmg 1-10. Special attacks: petrifying gaze.

7-88: Central Cave with Tunnel Up to 5-141

A pool of cool, clear water lies in the western portion of this central cave. To the south a tunnel climbs gradually to Level 5-141; it shows signs of having been shaped by sentient hands (Vanara and his friends, when they abandoned the new home of the varumani for the ancestral rudishva halls). Three toppled 'statues' lie in the center of the chamber; two are of lizardmen and the third is of a human magic user.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 petrified lizardmen: SZ M; AL N; AC 4; MV 60'; 120' swimming; HD 2+1; HP 14, 13; #AT 1 or 3; Dmg 1-6 (club) and 1-6 (javelin), or 1-2/1-2/1-8. Possessions: club; javelins; shield.
2. Gesellon, petrified Sortian (see World of Archontos appendix), as a 7th-level male Archontean magic user: SZ M; AL LE, AC 4; MV 120'; HD 7; HP 20; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (staff +1). Abilities: STR 10, INT 16, WIS 14, DEX 15, CON 11, CHA 8. Possessions: Sortian chain mail (see new magic items); Sortian baculus (see new magic items) infused with infravision; staff +1; two gold Sortian eyes (see new magic items); two potions of levitation, and 63 ancient gold solidi. His spell book is lost. Remaining spells memorized: shield; mirror image; hold person; confusion. He has pretty good knowledge of Levels 1-4, 6 and 7, even though it is 1,300 years out of date. Gesellon only speaks Mithric.
3. 1 basilisk (66% chance): SZ M; AL N; AC 4; MV 60'; HD 6+1; HP 41; #AT 1; Dmg 1-10. Special attacks: petrifying gaze.

7-89: Cave

This cave is fairly nondescript, aside from the pair of petrified heqeti hoppers located just inside the tunnel from 7-88.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 petrified heqeti hoppers (see new monsters), as 4th-level fighters: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60'; 150' swimming; HD 4; HP

- 28, 22; #AT 2; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 1-6 (bite). Special attacks: hop; +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice.
2. 1 basilisk (33% chance): SZ M; AL N; AC 4; MV 60'; HD 6+1; HP 41; #AT 1; Dmg 1-10. Special attacks: petrifying gaze.

7-90: Cave with Secret Door

This cave is slightly drier than the surrounding caves, and is rarely visited by the basilisks due to the narrowness of the tunnel connecting it to 7-89. That said, a petrified true varumani stands at the tunnel mouth.

Secret Door (east): The door to 7-28 is cleverly hidden as part of the natural rock (normal to find). A keyhole exists, but the keys are long gone.

Inhabitants:

1. Ravi, a petrified true varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LN; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 54; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 6-24 (two-handed sword, 2-20+4). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: huge two-handed sword; ring mail.
2. 1 basilisk (10% chance): SZ M; AL N; AC 4; MV 60'; HD 6+1; HP 41; #AT 1; Dmg 1-10. Special attacks: petrifying gaze.

7-91: Cave of the Wild Varumani

This large, 40'-tall cave has a rolling floor, with numerous dips, hillocks, and small crevasses. It is also covered with a small fungal forest, making those features hard to detect. Movement is halved in the chamber due to the mushrooms (specimens include: blue trumpets, cloud caps, eye-openers, mind eaters, orange lamps, white bulbs and white ribs – see new flora for all). Due to the orange lamp mushrooms, the area is lit with a dull orange light, which makes obvious the heqeti ruins at 7-92. Given the flora, the cavern is filled with small lizards, snakes, and cave insects.

The cavern takes its name from the numerous bestial varumani who live in the radiating caves to the north and west and who use this cavern for food, water, and socializing. At any moment there are 4 groups of 3-8 bestial varumani present in the cavern. To determine what each group is up to, roll on the following table:

D6	Reason for presence
1	Harvesting specimens of edible giant mushroom
2	Hanging around the pool (7-93),
3	Hunting small lizards and cave crickets
4	Stalking a rival band of bestial varumani for fun (50%) or mayhem (50%)
5	Idle thoughts of digging up 'treasure' at 7-92; they are easily distracted
6	Grumbling loudly about the thegn and his policies

Inhabitants:

1. Four groups of 3-8 bestial varumani (see new monsters) per group: SZ L; AL NE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 61, 58, 55, 54, 53, 51, 50, 49; #AT 3; Dmg 3-6/3-6/3-10. Special defenses: regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision; immune to poison.

7-92: Heqeti Ruins

This 25'x25' area of the large cavern is filled with a jumbled pile of huge blocks of stone. It is clear from even casual viewing that the blocks were carved, and, indeed, a few have huge salamanders incised into them. They blocks are piled rather haphazardly, as if by a child who tossed them together. Crevices and holes await those who climb to the top: non-thieves must roll 3d8 under DEX or slip and suffer 1-4 damage plus a 5% of getting stuck. Were the blocks to be moved somehow, an 8'x3' gisant would be visible in the center of the debris. The gisant depicts a heqeti hero, Tissiq One-Claw, holding a spear. Beneath the gisant are Tissiq's bones and his enchanted spear, plus a few other valuables.

Treasure:

Bone-Biter (see new magic items), a bone and silver amulet of mighty fists, and four enormous white pearls (5,000 gp each) the size of a man's fist.

7-93: Freshwater Pool

A trickle of water bubbles up from the rock at this location. The varumani use the resulting pool for drinking water and for brewing. Usually 2-4 bestial varumani are clustered about the pool, chatting with each other and watching Hak (7-94) at work. A dozen battered cups and three large buckets are scattered near the pool.

Inhabitants:

1. 2-4 bestial varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL NE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 55, 53, 50, 49; #AT 3; Dmg 3-6/3-6/3-10. Special defenses: regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision; immune to poison.

7-94: Hak's Brewery

In the southwest corner of the large cavern, next to the pool (7-93), an enterprising lesser varumani named Hak has enlisted the help of some of the bestial varumani in brewing some mushroom ale. He has a barrel of malted barley and mushrooms, a second barrel of hops, and an ample supply of water. Hak boils his brew in a huge cauldron hung over a tripod of heating (see new magic items), and then transfers it to one of a dozen small or four large kegs. Although it won't win awards, it is good enough that the thegn has promised to supply him with ingredients provided he keeps brewing. Hak is present at all times, along with three bestial varumani. He is cheerful and loves to talk about brewing. He'll sell a small keg (170 pints) to anyone who is properly appreciative for 15 gp. He also brews a double-strength 'special red ale' that he sells to selected retailers in Arden Vul (6-8, 6-64, 7-76B).

Inhabitants:

1. Hak, a lesser varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 53; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (mattock, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: mattock.
2. 3 bestial varumani workers (see new monsters): SZ L; AL NE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 53, 50, 49; #AT 3; Dmg 3-6/3-6/3-

10. Special defenses: regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision; immune to poison.

Treasure:

Buried in the mulch under the brewery is a battered iron box with 931 sp and 1,153 gp. The tripod of heating (see new magic items) also has some value. Hak currently has 30 kegs of mushroom ale (15 gp each) and 4 of his special red ale (35 gp each).

7-95: Tunnel up to SL5-27

This tunnel, located 20' up the wall of 7-91, leads upwards to the lizardman caves at SL5-27. It is difficult to spot unless one knows it is present.

7-96: Bestial Varumani Cave

This cave is home to six bestial varumani. They have a foul-smelling 'nest' of dirty cloth, bone, half-gnawed lizards, mushroom detritus, and other material. Inside the nest are assorted silver and gold coins worth about 100 gp per bestial varumani as well as one item from the chart below. Each item may only be found once.

D20	Contents of Bestial Varumani Lair
1	A human skull with a yellow topaz rattling around inside (500 gp)
2	A copper rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items)
3	One tear of Kauket (see new magic items)
4	A potion of greek fire and a potion of molasses (see new magic items)
5	A set of three figurines cast in solid gold tied together with twine; they depict varumani warriors holding strange devices [GM: laser pistols] (200 gp each)
6	A Sortian baculus , enchanted with infravision (see new magic items)
7	A white gold ring, which is a ring of friendly defense (see new magic items); the other ring is at 7-124
8	A Set animal mask (see new magic items)
9	A rod of silver, capped with an impressive yellow crystal. It detects of magic but has no powers (75 gp)
10	A rudishva lesser power supply (see new technological items)
11	An impressive headdress made of leather, eagle feathers, and lapis lazuli (25 gp)
12	A straw doll of a human female (worth nothing)
13	A quasi-tame pregnant housecat
14	A pouch with 37 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items)
15	A soapstone statuette of a heqeti chosen (worth 50 gp)
16	A somewhat tattered silk carpet (worth 75 gp)
17	An archaic Archontean legionary's helmet, usable as a helmet and worth 20 gp as a curio
18	A pouch with 6 doses of Gethite lotus powder (see new flora), with a silver spoon (5 sp)
19	Four doses of red veil mushrooms (see new flora)
20	A wand of conjuration with 2 charges

Inhabitants:

1. 6 bestial varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL NE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 58, 55, 54, 53, 50, 49; #AT 3; Dmg 3-6/3-6/3-10. Special defenses: regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision; immune to poison.

7-96A: Concealed Door and Tunnel

This tunnel is barely concealed by a primitive mat of reeds painted to look – sort of – like stone. The tunnel is one dug recently by the bestial varumani so as to provide themselves with their own access route to the Chasm (via 7-147). The thegn and true varumani do not know of this tunnel.

7-97: Bestial Varumani Cave

This cave is home to four bestial varumani. Its contents are identical to those of 7-96 (that is, nest, coins, and an item from the table).

Inhabitants:

1. 4 bestial varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL NE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 55, 54, 50, 48; #AT 3; Dmg 3-6/3-6/3-10. Special defenses: regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision; immune to poison.

7-98: Grotesque Statue

On this landing and tucked into a semi-circular niche is an 8'-tall statue. The statue appears as a salamander erect on massive rear legs, with numerous smaller legs and a head that appears as an open mouth rimmed with small tentacles. [GM: this is Rimmaq-Isfet]. The statue is very old, detects of evil, and is formed of greasy, pebbled stone. If the name 'Rimmaq-Isfet' is spoken by one of evil alignment, the equivalent of bless will be placed on the character for 1-3 days; if its name is spoken by anyone of neutral or good alignment, the speaker is cursed. The bestial varumani admire the statue, and refer to it fondly as 'Old Brush-head'.

7-99: Bestial Varumani Cave

This cave is home to 5 bestial and one lesser varumani. Its contents are identical to those of 7-96 (that is, nest, coins, and an item from the table).

Inhabitants:

1. 5 bestial varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL NE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 58, 55, 53, 50, 49; #AT 3; Dmg 3-6/3-6/3-10. Special defenses: regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision; immune to poison.
2. 1 lesser varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 55; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (mace, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: mace.

7-100: Haunted Corridor

This corridor is of Archontean construction, and originally provided a route for Archontean to keep tabs on the varumani during the long period in which the thegn bowed before the archon of Arden Vul. Today the corridor is dusty and shows no sign of traffic. The varumani – especially the bestial ones – are convinced that the corridor is haunted, and they avoid it like the plague. Their fears are more than superstition, as a poltergeist inhabits the chamber beyond (see 7-121). Bowing to these fears, the thegn has ordered a sign placed just before the door into 7-121: it takes the form of a spear thrust into the door, from which dangles a human skull. On the door are the words "Keep Out!" in varumani.

7-101: Bestial Varumani Cave

This cave is home to six bestial varumani. Its contents are identical to those of 7-96 (that is, nest, coins, and an item from the table).

Inhabitants:

1. 6 bestial varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL NE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 61, 58, 55, 53, 50, 49; #AT 3; Dmg 3-6/3-6/3-10. Special defenses: regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision; immune to poison.

7-102: Bestial Varumani Cave

This cave is home to three bestial varumani. Its contents are identical to those of 7-96 (that is, nest, coins, and an item from the table).

Inhabitants:

1. 3 bestial varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL NE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 53, 50, 49; #AT 3; Dmg 3-6/3-6/3-10. Special defenses: regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision; immune to poison.

7-103: Wrestling Pit

With its flat sandy floor and location where many of the bestial varumani caves enter 7-91, this site is commonly used for leisure, socializing, and wrestling. Kup, an enterprising lesser varumani, resides in the northern niche and organizes no-holds-barred wrestling matches between bored bestial varumani. He has a large keg of Hak's ale with which to lubricate the contestants prior to matches. In addition to Kup, 3-6 bestial varumani are usually present, wrestling, cheering, and drinking.

Inhabitants:

1. Kup, a lesser varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 57; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (club, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: club.
2. 3-6 bestial varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL NE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 61, 58, 55, 53, 50, 49; #AT 3; Dmg 3-6/3-6/3-10. Special defenses: regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision; immune to poison.

Treasure:

Keg of Hak's ale (50 gp)

7-104: Bestial Varumani Cave

This cave is home to five bestial varumani. Its contents are identical to those of 7-96 (that is, nest, coins, and an item from the table).

Inhabitants:

1. 5 bestial varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL NE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 58, 55, 53, 50, 49; #AT 3; Dmg 3-6/3-6/3-10. Special defenses: regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision; immune to poison.

7-105: Bestial Varumani Cave with hole to 7-107

This cave is home to five bestial varumani. Its contents are identical in most ways to those of 7-96 (that is, nest, coins, and an item from the table).

A 5'-diameter hole in the floor drops down 15' to a tunnel that leads to the fissure at 7-107. The varumani keep a woven mat over the hole so that chasm cephalopods don't come through from 7-107.

Inhabitants:

1. 5 bestial varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL NE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 58, 55, 53, 50, 49; #AT 3; Dmg 3-6/3-6/3-10. Special defenses: regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision; immune to poison.

7-106: Bestial Varumani Cave

This cave is home to three bestial varumani. Its contents are identical to those of 7-96 (that is, nest, coins, and an item from the table).

Inhabitants:

1. 3 bestial varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL NE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 53, 50, 49; #AT 3; Dmg 3-6/3-6/3-10. Special defenses: regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision; immune to poison.

7-107: Small Fissure

This fissure is about 70' tall, and connects to three otherwise unconnected areas of Level 7. The walls are covered with snottites, bacteria that form microbial mats in the form of small stalactites. The snottites drip acid, rendering spelunking here quite dangerous. For every turn spent in the fissure, a person suffers 1-3 HP acid damage. It is home to a pod of evolved chasm cephalopods that are immune to acid.

Inhabitants:

1. 5 medium chasm cephalopods (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 5; MV 60' flying (Class A); HD 4; HP 28, 27, 26, 25, 24; #AT 5 (4 tentacles and a beak); Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-4/1-4/1-6; MR 25%. Special attacks: surprise on 1-4.

2. 1 large chasm cephalopod (see new monsters): SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 60' flying (Class A); HD 6; HP 39; #AT 6 (five tentacles and a beak); Dmg 1-6/1-6/1-6/1-6/1-6/1-8; MR 25%. Special attacks: surprise on 1-4; one tentacle drains spells from casters, adding 2-8 HP to chasm cephalopod per spell.

7-108: Destroyed Rudishva Hall

The door from 7-109 is a rudishva iris door, openable only with a pale green, pink, orange, silver or yellow rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items).

A scene of devastation fills this former rudishva control chamber (with rounded corners and white marble walls). Piles of scorched plasteel furniture, consoles, chairs, and screens line the walls to a height of about 4', leaving the center of the chamber empty save for a single skeleton clutching an object. Mixed among the debris are numerous heqeti skeletons. Although PCs may fear otherwise, none of the bodies are undead.

The rudishva skeleton is that of Pejar-Bel, a subadar in the Tactical Corps of the Beacon. Pejar-Bel detonated a powerful anti-personnel mine here as the heqeti tried to overwhelm him. The result was the death of all (including Pejar-Bel) and the complete destruction of the chamber.

Searching the rubble might produce a valuable or two. For each 1-4 turns spent searching, one of the following may be found: a copper dagger +1; a heqeti amulet of swimming (see new magic items); a half-filled rudishva lesser power supply (see new technological items); a brown rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items); a rudishva data crystal (see new technological items) with audio-less scenes of rudishva standing in front of unknown, bizarre (alien) landscapes; and a trio of Arden Vul cakes (see Arden Vul items). Only one of each may be found.

7-109: Rudishva Control Hall, with Stairs Up to 5-114

The stairs from 5-114 end in a rudishva iris door that may only be opened by presenting a sky blue or better rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items).

The chamber is built in the rudishva style, lacking 90-degree angles and sheathed in white marble. An 8'-wide walkway circumnavigates the room above a sunken area in its center. Steep stairs to the north and south lead down 8' to the sunken area. On the east and west walls, at the level of the upper walkway, are large black mirrors that have been struck with great force; they are cracked and fragmented. In the center of the sunken area are two rows of consoles and strange plasteel chairs. Between the consoles is another pair of large black 'mirrors' [GM: view screens]. Obvious signs of battle are everywhere: scorch marks on the walls, broken stone spears, skeletons slumped over chairs or consoles, and bits of metal, glass, leather, and plasteel scattered everywhere.

A pool of blackish slime covers the floor of the sunken area; this is the horrible ichor of Rimmaq-Isfet (see new monsters) that aided in the overthrow of the rudishva eons ago and is still waiting patiently for more prey. It quickly animates two skeletons with its ichor (4 HD each) while the rest of it attacks in a globulous mass.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 ichor of Rimmaq-Isfet (see new monsters): SZ L; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 16 HD; HP 103; #AT 2; Dmg 1-6/1-6; MR 30%. Special attacks: caustic touch (1-4 HP acid damage); crush (1-10 HP/rd); obliterate organic matter. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to cold and acid.

7-110: Rudishva Teleport Nodes

The door to this pair of rudishva teleport nodes is a rudishva iris door, and opens only upon presentation of a silver or yellow rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items). Each node is comprised of a 5'-diameter circle of silvery material inset into the floor, with a 10"x10" square of the same material affixed to the wall. Each square has a different rune etched into the silvery material. To activate a node, one stands on the circle and touches one's hand to the square.

Teleport Nodes:

T17: access to 7-6

T18: access to 8-52

7-111: Stairs Up to the Sub-Level 9, SL9-49

These stairs are narrow, steep, and rounded in the rudishva tradition. They lead up to Sub-Level 9 (SL9-49).

7-112: Water-Filled portion of Large Cavern

The eastern portion of the large cavern described by 7-112 and 7-113 is water filled. At its deepest point the water is 30' deep. The ceiling of the cave rises 30' above the waterline, and two tunnels on the eastern wall (one 10' above the waterline, and one 15' above the waterline) lead to the varumani caves. To the north a scree formed from the collapsed wall leads up 10' to area 7-123. The pool is filled with fish and crayfish, and the varumani often fish from the eastern ledges.

7-113: Dry Portion of Large Cavern

The western portion of the large cavern (7-112 and 7-113) is dry and sloped. Between the western edge and the waterline at 7-112, it drops 20' in height. A channel in the center of this slope directs drip water from the western caves to the pool. Numerous small lizards bask in the humid conditions along the slope. To the north a scree formed from the collapsed wall leads up 10' to area 7-123.

Substantial noise and/or extended exploration of this cave is likely to draw the attention of the caterwauls (7-116) that lair in the caves to the west. Although the caterwauls prefer to track and hunt in those caves, they may (25%) be tempted to attack a party that lingers in this location.

Areas 7-114 to 7-117

A mated pair of canny and dangerous caterwauls lairs in these warm and humid caves. The predators are perpetually hungry due to the low traffic of this area, and consequently stalk all prey energetically. They have survived for so long on a diet of bestial varumani, whom they devour so energetically that the troll-like beings are unable to regenerate fast enough. They possess incredible dexterity and slightly more HD than normal, a sign of their experience as predators. When this area is first entered (via 7-118 or 7-113), one caterwaul will be present in their lair (7-116). The other will be hunting in the neighboring tunnels; it will be found at 7-114 (33%), 7-115 (33%), 7-117 (33%). If the stalking caterwaul initiates combat, the second will hear its mate's shriek and will arrive after one round.

7-114: Hot Cave

This small cave is warm (~80F) and humid, and small stalagmites are starting to form on the floor. A set of varumani bones lies in the center of the cave (devoured by the caterwauls). A ranger might (45%) be able to detect traces of large cat-like creatures.

Inhabitants:

Caterwaul (33%): see stats at 7-116.

7-115: Hot Cave with Bones

This hot and humid cave is where the caterwauls have slain and devoured most of their prey. As a result the bones of numerous former victims are scattered about the floor: a ranger could identify remains of many varumani, a few humans, and copious small lizards and fish.

Inhabitants:

Caterwaul (33%). See stats at 7-116.

7-116: Lair of the Caterwauls

This hot and humid cave serves as the lair of the caterwauls that stalk the neighboring cave system. The lair proper is on a shelf about 8' up the southern wall of this cave; in it are some shiny baubles the caterwauls have collected. In the unlikely case that one of the caterwauls is encountered here, it will leap from the ledge in ambush.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 large caterwauls: SZ L; AL CE; MV 180', 240' for short distances; AC 2; HD 5+1; HP 39, 34; #AT 3; DMG 1-4/1-4/1-6. Special attacks: screech on initial attack (1-8 HP damage); multiple attacks per round (2/1); -4 bonus to AC, dodging, and some saving throws. Special defenses: only surprised 10% of the time. Special: climb any surface (95%); move silently (75%), hide in shadows (75%).

Treasure:

531 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items); 2,119 gp; a peridot

(50 gp); two red spinels (100 gp each); four beautiful silver charm bracelets with small nuggets of gold hanging from them (900 gp each); four large silver hoop earrings (100 gp each); a gold goblet with the inscription in Mithric 'Marius Tricolor made me' (320 gp); and a gold medallion with an intaglio image of Vanara, the first varumani thegn (1,050 gp).

7-117: Hot Cave

Hot and humid like its neighbors, this cave boasts several stalagmites and stalactites. In addition, several sets of bones litter the floor. One of these was of a human magic user. While the caterwauls clawed its spell book to pieces, they ignored a bone scroll case.

Inhabitants:

Caterwaul (33%): see stats at 7-116.

Treasure:

Bone scroll case with two scrolls, one containing three magic user spells: Pol's endless sneezes, harnessing the chaos, and charm monster (see new spells for the first two), and the other containing the clerical spells bless, cure serious wounds, regeneration and hallow (see new spells).

7-118: Tunnel Leading Up to 4-90

This tunnel wends its way upward more than 900' to area 4-90. As it does so, the temperature and humidity drop substantially. There is a 25% chance of encountering a selenite guardian along the tunnel.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 selenite guardian (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 2; MV 30' on dirt, 60' on selenite; HD 6; HP 36; #AT 2; Dmg 2-8/2-8. Special defenses: regenerate 2 HP/round near selenite; immune to fire and water; take only 1 HP from edged weapons.

Areas 7-119 to 7-132: Domain of the vampire, Cinna Minux

This cluster of chambers forms the current lair of the dangerous and ancient vampire lord, Cinna Minux. Cinna was one of the first Archontean recruited to the Order of the Sun-Scarred Knights by the order's reclusive master, Master Malachite (SL10A-32), and the last to have been offered the 'gift' of vampirism by the master. In his pride, Cinna accepted, but over time grew to chafe at the master's strict and overly lawful regulations. He eventually renounced the order and its principles and fled, hiding himself in the ancient Archontean shrine complex in which he had once served. Here he works hard to conceal his presence from the Knights, even while continuing to hunt (carefully, and quietly) on the chasm floor (Level 9).

He has been exceptionally careful in revealing his presence, and few know even rumors of his existence. The bestial and lesser varumani know the area to be haunted, but know nothing of the cause of that 'haunting'. Malachite has not told subsequent generations of Sun-Scarred Knights about Cinna's origins, and they know him only as a 'dangerous undead lord'. Cinna has built up a small circle of undead, plus a few lesser vampires, whom he dominates ruthlessly, imposing his own rigid regulations upon them (mostly, those have to do with never leaving Cinna's domain).

Due to his age, Cinna's charm abilities are more powerful than those of a standard vampire; the duration of any successful charm by Cinna is 10x that of the standard vampire. Cinna regularly travels throughout the halls in gaseous form; occasionally he stops to charm NPCs and monsters throughout Arden Vul. These charmed allies provide Cinna with information about who has passed, what their goals might be, and so forth. Some of his charmed sources of information include: Gillen, Tressa and Quade (4-180), Gog (5-2), Killik (5-46), Riglon (5-54), Gorlen (6-5), Virgoolian the chemist (6-28), Razor Face (6-61), Olaf the bee-whisperer (8-73), Muq (8-151), and Lithiric (9-22). He has also charmed, as necessary, numerous ordinary beastmen, goblins, Set guardsmen, lizardmen, and adventurers.

Within his domain, Cinna is aggressive and dangerous, and uses all of his resources to destroy any party that sets foot in that domain. Of course, should the PCs prove too powerful, he swiftly resorts to gaseous form and flees to his sanctum (7-122) through the holes he has drilled in the floor of that chamber.

Cinna's evil casts a pall over the entire area. That pall produces two effects: 1) it reduces good clerics' chances of turning undead by 2, and 2) it imposes a penalty of 1 to all saving throws made by good characters. Should Cinna be slain, the evil pall disappears in 1-3 days.

When the area is first approached, Cinna is holding court in 7-128 among his minions. He is instantly aware of an attack on any of the minions of his domain; if such an attack occurs, he immediately disperses his remaining lesser minions to soften up intruders' defenses. He then plans ambushes with his greater minions among the hallways and shrines of his domain.

Cinna's Minions:

Cinna has sired two vampires, whom he dominates and employs as assistants. He has also charmed several adventurers and a few monsters. Finally, he has dominated a trio of wights and a small pack of ghouls. He has issued strict orders to the charmed creatures, forbidding them from leaving his domain without permission. All of the minions fight gladly for their master. Should PCs enter the domain in a way that attracts attention – e.g., by noisily fighting with the ogres at 7-119, the ghouls at 7-123, or the wights at 7-130 – then Cinna will order the remainder of his minions to move into action against the intruders. They attempt to force the PCs into 7-128, where Cinna's entire force can participate in the assault. It is possible, however, for PCs to stealthily enter the domain via area 7-121 (or via one of the other entrances, if silence is employed); in this case, the minions will be found in their usual locations, and Cinna could be caught by surprise in his hall (7-128). If Cinna captures any PCs, there is a 50% he will attempt to charm one or more low-intelligence characters into his service, and a 15% chance he will make one into a vampire.

7-119: Spiral Stairs Up to SL7-31

The stone spiral stairs here lead up 425' to area SL7-31 in the Flooded Vaults.

Three ogres are cheerfully roasting an equal number of fishmen (see new monsters) on a spit over a roaring fire. The ogres have been charmed by Cinna Minux (7-122) and are stationed here to watch for intruders from above. The ogres have a barrel of Hak's ale (7-94), plus a dirty sack filled with apples, potatoes, and 769 gp. If confronted by a powerful-looking party, one of the three vigorously beats a cowbell to alert Cinna and his other minions to the threat. The ogres have a 50% chance of taking notice of any combat that breaks out in 7-130; if they do, one reports to Cinna in 7-128 while the others head north and attempt to lay an ambush from the corridor leading west.

Inhabitants:

1. 3 charmed ogres: SZ L; AL CE; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 4+1; HP 27, 25, 22; #AT 1; Dmg 1-10, or by weapon.

Treasure:

The ogres have a filthy leather bag containing a total of 769 gp.

7-120: Shrine to Ptah

The ancient Archontean shrine to Ptah is in remarkably good condition. The chamber is tall (20'), and clad entirely in green marble. To the south is a cult statue of the god, standing on a dais. A well-appointed forge occupies the center and northern part of the chamber. Painted onto the green walls are images of farmers engaged in every sort of agricultural activity, one per 5' section of marble. Looming behind each farmer is the face of Ptah, handsome and bearded. The one exception is the north wall, which is devoted to an enormous high-relief carving of bearded Ptah

Statue of Ptah: The statue of Ptah is 9' tall and stands on a 3' dais. He takes the form of a standing man, tightly wrapped in a thin shroud, holding three scepters across his chest. The statue is white marble, save for the head, which is polychromed green marble.

His head is impassive, with blue eyes, black eyebrows, and a black beard. The three scepters – two held in the right hand, and one in the left – are a was stick, a djed pillar, and an ankh. A lawful good cleric who invokes Ptah (even if he/she follows a different god) hears the following words rumble like an earthquake through the chamber: “Champion of Order and Creation, choose your reward: power, life, or stability.” The cleric has 3 rounds to remove one of the three scepters; after the three rounds, the magic ends and none of the scepters can be removed.

The was stick is shaped like one of the Set was sticks (see new magic items), that is, like a curved head on a straight body, with a forked bottom. In the hands of a lawful good cleric, it functions as a rod of striking with 20 charges (albeit only usable by LG clerics).

The djed pillar appears as a rod formed of concentric rings of polished copper, starting with a ring 1” in diameter and ending with one that is 6” in diameter. In the hands of a LG cleric, it acts as a potent enchanted mace known as the creator’s breath (see new magic items).

The ankh appears as a 2’-long copper ankh, incised with lapis. In the hands of a lawful good cleric it functions as rod of resurrection (with 10 charges).

Ptah’s Field: Most of the northern half of the chamber is devoted to a remarkable site known in antiquity as “Ptah’s Field”. The field is an area of loamy dirt about 5’ deep, from which grow gorgeous specimens of wheat and corn. A gentle breeze blows constantly from the large carving of Ptah on the north wall, except for ten minutes of every hour, when the breath turns into a gentle rain. The crops are without disease or weeds, and can easily be harvested, threshed and ground into flour using tools and a stone that stand in the center of the chamber. If the crops are harvested, a new set will have grown back within 2 weeks. It takes an hour to thresh the harvest, and another hour to grind it into flour. One harvest can produce 5 lb of flour. If made into bread, the flour is quite valuable: one loaf not only provides all food needs for a day, it also cures 2-12 HP.

Treasure:

Ptah's grain (see above); possibility of an enchanted 'scepter'.

7-121: Deserted Chamber

The eastern door is unlocked, but closed, while the western door features a sturdy, well-oiled lock.

This former administrative office is filled with junk: broken desks and chairs, shreds of parchment, pieces of equipment, etc. A clear path, however, runs between the two doors.

A poltergeist inhabits this chamber. Although Cinna Minux could easily remove it, he has elected to let it remain as a barrier against varumani exploration of his domain. The bestial varumani are duly terrified by the poltergeist (see 7-100), and have decided (rightly) that the area is haunted.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 poltergeist: SZ M; AL LE; AC 10; MV 60'; HD 1-4 HP; HP 3, 2; #AT 0; Dmg special. Special attacks: throw object, a hit causes fear (throws as a 5 HD creature). Special defenses: invisible; silver, or +1 or better weapons to hit.

7-122: Lair of the Vampire, Cinna Minux

The final 15' of the staircase that rises from 7-119 to this hall has been blocked with rubble (stone bits and pieces of furniture). It would take several hours of hard labor to move all the debris.

Cinna Minux has made a sanctum out of this ancient Archontean convocation hall, a site where the priests of the various temples and shrines used to meet to discuss business and settle disputes. Cinna enters and exits the lair in gaseous form through one of several holes he drilled in the floor of 7-122; these holes emerge in the ceiling of the corridor that passes beneath the convocation hall. Should Cinna be encountered elsewhere and driven to 0 HP, he is forced into gaseous form and retreats to this chamber, where his coffin lies.

The hall was once very grand, with frescoes of all the ancient Archontean gods lining the walls above a set of tiered benches. The frescoes are faded, but still visible and depict, in addition to Thoth and Set, Horus, Wadjet, Sobek, Besa, Osiris, Isis, Jael, Anubis, Tiamat, and Ptah, each in their iconic poses. The benches rise steeply from the central space, where once a speaking rostrum stood; now, however, the central space holds the sarcophagus/coffin of Cinna Minux.

The sarcophagus is made of fine marble and unadorned save for an inscription in Mithric that reads, 'Cinna Minux. First Knight.' A set of 10 ½"-diameter holes are drilled in the lid, which can only be budged by making an open doors roll. The interior of the sarcophagus contains a 3" layer of dirt and Cinna's emergency stash of yellow topazes inside a red-silk bag.

Surrounding the sarcophagus are various treasures that Cinna has accumulated over the centuries: a 3'-tall silver statue of a maiden (900 gp); a rosewood and ebony escritoire inlaid with ivory (1,200 gp); a silk and ivory canopy, such as might be carried above a dignitary in a procession (350 gp); a settee carved from a single piece of maple, carved with images of lions, tigers, and bears (250 gp); an armor rack with a full set of imperial field plate (see Arden Vul items); a Theodorus's bed of convenient respite (see new magic items) in full-sized mode; a set of six oak dinner chairs on the backs of which is carved the seal of the old archons of Arden Vul (150 gp each); and several codices, including Symbols of Power, the Twelve Labors of Arden, Words and Symbols: an attempt to understand the symbols of the old ones, Thirty-Seven Quips of Balak the Sage, Tales of Larel One-Eye, and Sixteen Steps to Successful Administration (see Arden Vul books for all). It should be noted that these objects are all (mostly) bulky and require much labor to move.

Inhabitants:

1. Cinna Minux, ancient vampire, formerly a 10th-level male Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL CE; AC 1; MV 120', 180' flying (Class B); HD 8+3; HP 59; #AT 1, or 3/2; Dmg 5-10, or 8-15 (Cers). Special attacks: energy drain; charm gaze (-2 to saves, duration 10x longer than usual). Special defenses: shape change (bat); assume gaseous form; summon 10-100 rats or bats; immune to charm, hold, sleep; +1 or better weapons to hit. Due to his age, Cinna's charm power has a duration of 10x that of normal vampires. He possesses the intelligent enchanted scimitar, Cers (see new magic items), which he can wield as follows: #AT 3/2, Dmg 8-15.

Treasure:

Sarcophagus: 20 golden yellow topaz gems (500 gp each), and a full set of six colored glass activation squares (see Thothian teleportation rings in new magic items).

Chamber: numerous bulky valuables (see above).

7-123: Badly Damage Shrine to Osiris

This former shrine to Osiris – one of the old gods of Archontos – has suffered massive structural damage along the south wall. Indeed, that south wall has collapsed, leaving a scree that leads down 10' to the large cavern at 7-113 and 7-112. Cinna Minux has stationed six ghouls here as a deterrent to visitors. The ghouls have strict orders to send one of their number to report any intruders to him, but given their rapacious nature there is only a 33% chance that they do so.

Not much remains of the shrine. A headless granite statue of a man stands against the west wall, while fragments of color suggest once-vibrant frescoes on the walls. At the east, however, a djed pillar still stands: it is 8' tall and formed of concentric circles of stone. The ghouls give it a wide berth, as it sparks constantly (a vestige of its old divine power).

Inhabitants:

1. 6 ghouls: SZ M; AL CE; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 16, 15, 15, 14, 14, 13; #AT 3; Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-6. Special attacks: paralysis. Special defenses: immune to sleep and charm.

7-124: Shrine to Sobek

Badly looted and desecrated by vandals over the centuries, this small shrine to the aggressive sea-god, Sobek, has lost any connection to the divine. Bits of frescoes are still visible, including one that shows a crocodile-headed human with spears in each hand, riding a wave in a fragile-looking boat; another of the same crocodile-headed man spearing enemies; and a third in which a crocodile head is emerging from a mound of sand or earth.

A dais to the south once held the cult statue, but it is gone.

Cinna Minux's two charmed minions have made this chamber their home. The pair were part of an adventuring party that was defeated on the chasm floor; Cinna came across these survivors and easily charmed them.

The shrine has two comfortable beds, a quartet of chairs, a pair of locked chests, a table filled with food, and a set of twelve bottles of wine. Most of the time (75%), the pair are found in 7-128 with Cinna; the rest of the time they are here.

Inhabitants:

1. Nasteon of Upford, 8th-level male Archontean thief, charmed by Cinna (25%): SZ M; AL CE; AC 2; HD 8; HP 48; #AT 1; Dmg 5-10 (short sword +4, defender). Abilities: STR 14, INT 9, WIS 10, DEX 18, CON 16, CHA 15. Possessions: leather armor of shadows (see new magic items); short sword +4 defender; a potion of greek fire (see new magic items); key to his chest. Thief skills: PP 75%, OL 72%, F/RT 60%, MS 82%, HS 69%, HN 25%, CW 96%, RL 40%.

2. Elliana the Swarthy, 6th-level female Archontean fighter, charmed by Cinna (25%): SZ M; AL NE; AC 5; HD 6; HP 65; #AT 3/2; Dmg 3-10 (long sword +1), 1-6 (long bow). Abilities: STR 17, INT 8, WIS 10, DEX 12, CON 17; CHA 15. Possessions: scale mail +1; long sword +1; long bow and 20 arrows; a packet of immobilizing mesh (see new magic items); key to her chest.

Treasure:

Nasteon's chest is locked with a poison needle trap. Inside are two sets of thieves' picks, four vials of poison, a set of three golden chalices studded with colored crystal (150 gp each); a packet of gethite lotus powder (see new flora); a token of Arden (see Arden Vul items); three Arden Vul cakes (see Arden Vul items); a rudishva palm of temporal flux (see new magic items), with no charges (worth 100 gp as a curiosity); and a sack filled with 577 sp, 135 gp and 40 moss agates (10 gp each).

Elliana's chest is locked, but not trapped. It contains a sack with 893 sp and 431 gp; two potions of heroism; a bolt of patterned yellow silk showing elephants (250 gp); a pair of yellow silk slippers embroidered with silver thread (150 gp); and white gold ring that is a ring of friendly defense (see new magic items). The other ring is found in one of the bestial varumani caves (see 7-96).

7-125: Shrine to Wadjet

One of the largest rooms in the complex, this 15'-tall chamber was the shrine to the protector goddess Wadjet. It is in good condition.

The north, west, and east walls are lined with impressive, 9'-tall, high relief carvings of hooded cobras rearing to strike. The heads of the cobras are about 2' square and actually project away from the wall by the same distance, presenting a striking degree of verisimilitude. Three of the heads have been broken off, but the other fifteen are intact. Across the southeast and southwest walls runs the following inscription, in 5' Mithric letters: "The Goddess Protects those without Fear."

Statue of Wadjet: The 10'-tall cult statue of Wadjet is found to the south, and takes the form of a lithe young woman with the head of a cobra. Her body is white marble, while the cobra head is gold, lapis, and silver.

If a brave – and bareheaded – postulant stands before Wadjet and beseeches her by name for her protection, the cobra head of the statue whips forward and bites the postulant on the head. The bit inflicts 1-4 damage, but conveys protection from evil for 6 hours. An individual can only gain this blessing once per month.

The cobra head of the statue is valuable (7,500 gp), but stealing it imposes a curse on the thief.

7-126: Pool of Imperial Fortitude

In the center of this circular, domed chamber sits a magic pool. The walls were originally painted pale green, although they are now dirty and long strips of paint hang from the ceiling. The pool is set flush into the floor, although a band of yellow tiles inset into the stone outlines it. The liquid is clear and inviting.

The pool was known to the Archontean as the Pool of Imperial Fortitude, and was used by commanders before they departed to more dangerous parts of the halls on missions for the archons. A good draught from the pool imparts remove fear (duration 10 hours) in the drinker.

7-127: Lair of the Lesser Vampires

The door to this undecorated former storage room is locked and barred from the inside. Six 2"-diameter holes have been drilled in the door.

Within are the coffins of two junior vampires created by Cinna Minux, as well as some finery that he has allowed them to accumulate. The coffins are simple stone boxes with wooden lids; each has 6" of dirt lining its bottom. Brenna Three-Braids and Joshuel the Binder are almost always (85%) in attendance on Cinna Minux at 7-128; if not there, they are here (10%) or wandering elsewhere in the domain (5%).

Brenna has acquired an ancient Archontean puppet theater, with exquisitely carved wooden dolls showing the traditional figures of this genre: the siblings Alba and Balbus, the governess Caeca, the virtuous soldier Lucius, the vamp-ish stepmother Hortalia, and the roguish tramp, Larel (the latter is equally famous for his own stories; see 3-46). These puppets would easily be worth 400 gp each. She also has an armor rack with a suit of ceremonial gilded mail worth 450 gp but only AC 8. Finally, she has a pair of 4'-tall blackware vases, one showing the story of Larel and the Farmer's Daughter (see the Tales of Larel One-Eye in Arden Vul books) and the other depicting Arden's First Labor (the Owlbeats of Mount Juventus - see SL13-10A). Each vase is worth 850 gp, but they are very fragile.

Joshuel is more ascetic. He has a simple desk that contains his spell book and a sack of 20 bloodstones (50 gp each); a travel satchel with six potions (clarity x2, fire resistance, singing birds, hostile levitation, and molasses - see new magic items for all); and one of the eyes of Pol (see new magic items).

Inhabitants:

1. Brenna Three-Braids, 7th-level female Wisikin fighter, now a vampire: SZ M; AL CE; AC 1; MV 120', 180' flying (Class B); HD 8+3; HP 51; #AT 1, or 3/2; Dmg 5-10 or 6-12 (morning star +2). Special attacks: energy drain; charm gaze (-2 to saves). Special defenses: shape change (bat); assume gaseous form; summon 10-100 rats or bats; immune to charm, hold, sleep; +1 or better weapons to hit. Brenna occasionally wields her morning star +2, which gives her #AT 3/2, Dmg 6-12 due to STR and magic bonuses. Her natural AC as a vampire allows her to wear red silk clothing instead of armor. She carries her olifant of command (warriors) (see new magic items) at all times.
2. Joshuel the Binder, 7th-level male Archontean magic user, now a vampire: SZ M; AL CE; AC 1; MV 120', 180' flying (Class B); HD 8+3; HP 52; #AT 1; Dmg 5-10. Special attacks: energy drain; charm gaze (-2 to saves). Special defenses: shape change (bat); assume gaseous form; summon 10-100 rats or bats; immune to charm, hold, sleep; +1 or better weapons to hit. Possessions: ring of spell turning; wand of magic missiles (16 charges); potion of clairaudience. Memorized spells: comprehend languages, jump, shield, sleep; darkness 15' radius, invisibility, knock; dispel magic, slow; monster summoning II.

Joshuel's Spell Book:

Affect normal fires, burning hands, comprehend languages, dancing lights, detect magic, erase, firewater, floating disk, identify, jump, magic missile, read magic, shield, sleep, spider climb; continual light, darkness 15' radius, detect invisibility, invisibility, knock, levitate, mirror image, rope trick, strength, web; clairaudience, clairvoyance, dispel magic, fly, lightning bolt, protection from normal missiles, slow, tongues; fear, ice storm, monster summoning II.

Treasure:

See above.

7-128: Court of Cinna Minux

This grand hall was once an important shrine to Horus, but now it serves as the court for the vampire, Cinna Minux, and his minions.

The ceiling is 25' tall. Two lines of columns march along the flanks of the chamber towards the cult statue at the western end. The walls are decorated with scenes of hawk-headed Horus presiding over the weather and over armies of Archontean soldiers. Two massive, oaken tables dominate the center of the chamber. They are piled with food, plates, silverware, and candelabra. Several continual light spells cast on the ceiling provide adequate light.

Statue: Standing on a 3' dais, the 15'-tall statue depicts a standing man holding spears in each hand (the butts rest against his feet). The head has been knocked off, however, and now serves as the centerpiece of Cinna Minux's table.

Tables: Both tables are 20' long and made of heavy oak. They are joined in a t-shape, such that Cinna and his greater minions can sit at the head table while the lesser minions (ogres and varumani) sit on the cross. Dotting the tables is an impressive array of objects: six heavy gold candelabra (200 gp each); three silver ewers (75 gp each); a dozen fine porcelain plates decorated with the imperial helmet (600 gp the set); a dozen sets of gold and steel tableware (100 gp each set); three fine porcelain vases filled with dried flowers (150 gp each); a dozen crystal goblets (75 gp each); eight pewter tankards (10 gp each); and seven heavy pewter serving dishes (25 gp each). The serving dishes are filled with food: dried fruit, dried meat, fresh meat (slightly rare), bread, jams, preserves, etc.. Seven bottles of imported Archontean wine (45 gp each) and a keg of Hak's mushroom ale (see 7-94) complete the feast.

On the table in front of Cinna sits the hawk head of Horus. At its core the head is marble, with a covering of gold to represent his back feathers, and eyes formed from silver, yellow topaz and sapphire. Intact the head is worth 8,000 gp, but weighs 125 lb; if the head is broken up, the metals and gems are worth 1,500 gp.

Unless previously alerted to intruders, and in some circumstances even then, Cinna Minux is found here, holding court with his minions. He occupies the central seat at the high table. To his left are Brenna and Joshuel; to his right are Nasteon and Elliana. Two ogres and two bestial varumani sit at the cross table. Cinna enjoys ceremony and the trappings of the civilized life, and likes nothing more than to read edifying verses or stories to his minions and to encourage them to offer songs to the group.

If a party manages to reach this location without causing a general alert, or if a party has sought negotiations with the vampire, then Cinna greets the PCs as guests and invites them to his table. Should the PCs agree, they are free to eat and drink with the company without fear. At the end of the meal, Cinna politely invites guests to share stories, poetry or song. If the offerings are successful (as determined by the GM), Cinna likely allows the party to depart in peace, with a warning not to intrude again. If the PCs' efforts are unsuccessful, or if they show hostility, then Cinna signals his minions to attack.

GM Note: Although they are not nourished by normal food, the three vampires do consume portions of the feast for the sake of appearances. When one of them brings back a victim, they dine on it in their personal lairs and dispose of the body in 7-132.

Inhabitants:

1. Cinna Minux, vampire: Cinna is dressed in black silk chased with silver thread, with a silver torc and a silver coronet. See stats at 7-122
2. Brenna Three-Braids, F7 and vampire (see stats at 7-127)
3. Joshuel the Binder, MU7 and vampire (see stats at 7-127)
4. Nasteon of Upford, charmed T8 (see stats at 7-124)
5. Elliana the Swarthy, charmed F6 (see stats at 7-124)
6. 2 charmed ogres: SZ L; AL CE; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 4+1; HP 24, 21; #AT 1; Dmg 1-10, or by weapon.
7. 2 charmed bestial varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL NE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 55, 53; #AT 3; Dmg 3-6/3-6/3-10. Special defenses: regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision; immune to poison.

Treasure:

See table furnishings above.

Personal magic-items on inhabitants.

Hawk head of Horus: 8,000 or 1,500 gp,

7-129: Shrine to Jael

The shrine to the ancient Archontean god of the moon, secrecy and lawlessness is in good shape.

The shrine is 20' tall and painted matte black. Glowing images of phases of the moon are painted over the black, among which are four extra-large images – the new moon on the north wall, a waxing quarter on the east wall, the full moon on the south wall, and the waning quarter on the west wall.

A 10'-diameter circle of veined marble is inset into the granite floor in the center of the chamber, and a bronze statue of a heron is set into the marble. The heron is 6' tall, and its beak is cracked open. An inscription in Mithric chiseled into the marble encircles the statue: 'Summon the Night Lord's Cloak and Whisper Your Plan into his Fulsome Face.' Should one speak the name 'Jael' while standing on the marble disk, a mist (i.e., Jael's 'cloak') will start billowing forth from the heron's beak. It fills the chamber in 5 rounds and is harmless. While the chamber is mist-filled, it is possible to seek blessings from Jael by approaching the full moon image on the south wall and whispering a secret plan or nefarious activity to the Moon God. In return, Jael rewards such persons with a bonus of 1 to all saves as well as a bonus of 1 to all rolls made while the character is in moonlight (the two bonuses do not stack). The benefits last 1-4 days.

7-130: Sarcophagi and Wights

This chamber has been fully stripped of any vestiges of its former purpose. Three simple stone sarcophagi stand in the center of the chamber, home to three wights that Cinna Minux has stationed here. The wights typically remain in their sarcophagi until the aura of sentient beings arouses them. Then they spring forth to confront the intruders. The wights do not pursue into the chasm (7-133). The southern door is stuck open, and sounds of combat here are 50% likely to alert the ogres in 7-119.

Inhabitants:

1. 3 wights: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 4+3; HP 33, 29, 27; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4. Special attacks: energy drain. Special defenses: silver or magic needed to hit; immune to sleep, charm, hold, cold, poison, and paralysis.

Treasure:

Between them the wights possess: 231 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items); 497 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items); a gold coronet studded with chrysoberyls (6,000 gp); a silver and lapis lazuli locket (14,000 gp); a silver medallion with an intaglio head of a forgotten archon of Arden Vul (900 gp); and a necklace formed of alternating tubes of gold and silver (700 gp). The locket would be worth 500 gp were it not for the fact that, when opened, it reveals a cameo in gold of Marius Tricotor, the great Archontean hero. The full value of the locket will only be realized by selling it to an Archontean collector.

7-131: Thothian Teleportation Ring

A set of 2"-tall paving stones arranged in a 6'-diameter ring occupies this ell. Inset into the floor next to the ring is a rectangle 48" long by 8" tall; the rectangle is divided into six interior compartments, each 8" square. Together these elements form a Thothian teleportation ring (see new magic items). To activate the ring, one must place six colored glass activation squares into the inset according to a sequence that matches the 'address' of the ring to which one wishes to travel. Once the squares are placed, a brief shimmer of energy is visible over the ring. At this point the user has 1 round to collect the squares and enter the ring, after which anyone in the ring is teleported without error to address indicated by that sequence of squares. If the glass activation squares are not collected and/or if the travelers do not possess a second set of them, they are likely to be stranded in the location to which they have just teleported. The address of this ring is as follows: YE-RE-GR-BL-BK-WH (see new magic items for explanation).

Cinna Minux owns a set of the glass activation squares necessary to operate the ring (see 7-122). He knows the 'addresses' to the rings at areas 3-33, 8-17, and 9-98, although he only rarely visits those locations for fear of betraying his location to the Sun-Scarred Knights.

7-132: Trapped Shrine to Isis

This shrine is in extremely poor shape and, indeed, its ceiling is liable to collapse at any time.

The walls were once painted with bright frescoes, but only a few splashes of color are still visible. About a dozen corpses have been tossed into the chamber just inside the entrance; they are in various states of decomposition, but all appear to have been drained of blood.

Three bowed wooden beams prop up the 14' ceiling in the center of the chamber; they are obviously of recent, rather than ancient, vintage, and look quite unstable. At the south end of the chamber is a dais with a statue of a woman that glints gold.

Statue: The statue is not the cult statue of Isis, which is long gone, but rather a poorly carved piece of granite painted with gold paint and set here by Cinna Minux as a trap. It inelegantly depicts an unknown female.

Trap: Anyone passing the midpoint of the chamber so as to approach the statue has a 3 in 6 chance of touching off a cave-in from the ceiling. If the ceiling does collapse, it does damage to everyone in the chamber on a sliding scale based on how far each person is from the door: 0-10', take 2-12 HP damage; 11-20', take 4-24; 21-30', take 6-36; 31-40' (i.e., at the statue), take 8-48. A thief who successfully moves silently reduces his/her chance of setting off the trap to 1 in 6. A cave-in brings all inhabitants of Cinna's domain on the run to confront intruders (see inhabitants of 7-119 to 7-132).

7-133: Lesser Chasm

This chasm is 70' deep and bisects the former Archontean route from Level 7 to the main chasm floor (Level 9). Several other potentially useful connections to other levels meet here, albeit at different elevations. The floor of the chasm has much debris, some of it pieces of worked stone, lying in 2' of murky water. As is typical of such caves, a pod of chasm cephalopods makes its home here.

Inhabitants:

1. 5 medium chasm cephalopods (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 5; MV 60' flying (Class A); HD 4; HP 28, 27, 26, 25, 24; #AT 5 (4 tentacles and a beak); Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-4/1-4/1-6; MR 25%. Special attacks: surprise on 1-4.
2. 1 large chasm cephalopod (see new monsters): SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 60' flying (Class A); HD 6; HP 45; #AT 6 (five tentacles and a beak); Dmg 1-6/1-6/1-6/1-6/1-8; MR 25%. Special attacks: surprise on 1-4; one tentacle drains spells from casters, adding 2-8 HP to chasm cephalopod per spell.

7-134: Cave

A pair of adventurers slain by the chasm cephalopods lies in this cave. One is an elven magic user and the other a human fighter. Scavengers have made off with all valuables save for a single agate (10 gp) and scroll of monster summoning IV that the magic user wore wrapped around his right calf, below his leggings.

Treasure:

A 10 gp agate and a scroll of monster summoning IV.

7-135: Tunnel up to SL6-18

This tunnel snakes gently upward before joining the cavern of Pol (SL6-17 and SL6-18). It is devoid of traffic.

7-136: Ancient Archontean Road to Level 9 (9-101)

This broad and tall (15') corridor was built by the Archontean as a main military conduit between their administrative and religious sectors (Level 7 and Sub-Level 7) and their outpost on the chasm floor (9-101). It leads down to the area near Marius's headquarters. Cinna Minux (7-122) traverses this road to hunt on the chasm floor. Because of the chasm (7-133), few others use this route.

7-137: Tunnel up to 5-100

This tunnel departs the wall of the chasm (7-133) and snakes upward to area 5-100.

7-138: Heqeti Corridor Fragment

This fragment of corridor is pebbled or granulated, and somewhat oily. It leads to a cave-in in the north.

7-139: Tomb of Kekulesa

The stone door to this lost tomb is partly broken, and thus only openable through a successful open doors check.

Inside is found the tomb of a heqeti hero from antiquity, Kekulesa. The tomb is only 7' tall. Its walls are the usual pebbled, oily heqeti affair, with the exception of the south wall, from which a stone carving of a gaping salamander maw projects. In the center of the chamber is a simple, four-step, funeral ziggurat on top of which rest the bones of Kekulesa. Scattered about the steps of the ziggurat are various objects associated with the deceased: three 4"-tall pyramids of solid copper (100 gp each), one 6" pyramid of solid silver (350 gp), a set of dividers, a pair of calipers, a dozen human scalps strung together on a leather string, a necklace made of heavy rectangles of platinum (2,500 gp); and three tears of Kauket (see new magic items).

Should non-heqeti enter the chamber, the outrage causes Kekulesa's bones to animate. He leaps forward as a heqeti old one (see new monsters), wielding his stone-tipped spear +2. Kekulesa is aided by an enchantment set on the salamander head found on the south wall: three 'tongues' of green energy flicker forth from the carving and attempt to grab intruders. The tongues hit as 6th-level fighters; if they hit, they do 1-4 damage and wrap around the victim, pulling him/her towards the south wall. It takes 2 rounds to pull victims to the maw, where they are simply held, helplessly, until the combat is over. One can break free from a tongue by rolling 4d6 under STR.

Inhabitants:

1. Kekulesa, an heqeti old one (see new monsters): SZ M; AL CE; AC 3; MV 90'; HD 6+6; HP 47; #AT 1 Dmg 5-14 (spear +2). Special attacks: leap; cursed tongue. Special defenses: turned as spectres; half damage from piercing and edged weapons; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and cold-based spells. Possessions: stone-tipped spear +2.

Treasure:

3 pyramids of copper (300 gp); pyramid of silver (350 gp); platinum necklace (2,500 gp); three tears of Kauket (see new magic items).

7-140: Shattered Constructs

This wide cave is relatively flat. Two shattered rudishva animated constructs (stone natarajas – see new monsters) rest in pieces on the floor before the tunnel to 7-143. The pieces include two torsos with heads, four legs, and eight arms (2 holding nothing, 2 with scimitars, 2 with small pots, and 2 with drums). Despite the dismembering, one is still slightly animate; its eyes will follow any non-rudishva and its grinning mouth will make a sound as if it were grinding its (stone) teeth. Despite this vestige of its former power, the construct is harmless.

A successful listen check at or in the southern tunnel reveals the sounds of shouting and combat.

7-141: Tunnel Up to Level 5 (5-85B)

This tunnel wends its way upwards some 800' to area 5-85B.

7-142: Cave of the Dust Monster

The cavern is covered with sand and dirt, amid which are numerous bones and other pieces of debris. A large dust monster (see new monsters) lies in wait here, ready to feast on chasm cephalopods and whatever else it can find.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 large dust monster (see new monsters): SZ L; AL N; AC 0; MV 90'; HD 8, HP 38; #AT 1; Dmg 3-16. Special attacks: suffocation; blinding. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; half damage from blunt magical weapons.

7-143: Engine Room of the Beacon

This large chamber constitutes one of the original modules of the starship Beacon, the engine room. This module contains some artifacts that are both valuable and potentially useful, even though it certainly cannot be used to drive a starship anymore.

The outer walls of the engine room are made of triple-strength plasteel, painted gunmetal grey on the outside and off-white on the inside. The module is 40' tall, and has two main areas. The first is the engineering deck, set 20' above the floor of the module. Both entrances to the module give forth onto the engineering deck. The second area is the 60'x40'x20' drive well in the center of the module, in which the six warp drives stand.

A fierce battle is currently raging between three factions: a rudishva animated construct; a party of Priscian explorers who navigated their way here from Level 9 via 7-136 and 7-138; and one of Kerbog Khan's rare battle automatons (who arrived via 5-85B and 7-141). The construct is carrying out its last orders, to prevent non-rudishva from entering the module. The Priscians and the automaton are each in search of artifacts. Kerbog Khan (SL12-25) is currently directly controlling his automaton, and the strange voice of that wizard may be heard bellowing imprecations, shouting for blood samples, and threatening magical ruin on the Priscians. The Priscians are fighting quietly, using hand signals in addition to spells. Two Priscian conversi are already dead. Either the Priscians or Kerbog Khan would be willing to ally with a party of PCs, but only if the PCs help eliminate the other group.

Engineering Deck: Two control consoles stand at either end of this deck. The consoles are 4' from the ground and appear as black glass sheets studded with dials and buttons. Without technical training it would be impossible to figure out what all the functions are, let alone how to operate or trouble-shoot the drives. Those who simply push buttons and crank dials at random have a 5% chance per round of causing a meltdown in one of the drives. Once begun, a meltdown leads to loud klaxon horns and flashing red lights. In 4 rounds one of the drives will explode for 30d6 damage to all in the area. A meltdown can be averted by pushing the right sequence of buttons (1% chance if attempted randomly). With proper instructions (see below), the consoles can also be used to unlock the panels holding the drive rods.

Warp Drive Well: The well is accessed by four plasteel ladders set into the sides of the well. The drives appear as 10'-diameter, 30'-tall columns of clear plasteel filled with glowing yellow gel. A maze of tubing, wires, glowing panels, and dials is attached to the outside of each drive. At the foot of each drive is an openable panel, some 18"x36" in size. The panels can only be opened using the consoles on the engineering deck. Doing so reveals a heavy (50 lb), 2'-long rod of clear plasteel filled with glowing orange liquid; this rod is a 'drive rod.'

The six engines are also connected to each other, as well as to consoles to the east and west, by a set of blue plasteel tubing. Although amber lights periodically blink on each of the drives, all six engines have been in 'power-down' state for millennia; a nuclear generator under the engineering deck continues to provide the power that keeps the drives active.

Two rudishva skeletons (inert) lie on the floor of the drive well. One carries a GnuCoder 1000 with one data crystal and a full lesser power supply (see new technological items). The data crystal carries a set of orders that include instructions on how to remove two of the drive cores safely, and instructions (in Rudishva) to "report immediately to Lieutenant Svar-Loj in the shuttle bay" (i.e., SL13-37). One who reads Rudishva could use these instructions at the control console to open the panel doors on any or all of engines so as to remove the drive rods.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 rudishva animated constructs - stone nataraja (see new monsters): SZ L; AL N; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 55 51; #AT 1; Dmg 4-11; MR 25%. Special attacks: sonic or fire attack. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to cold, fire, electricity, poison, and mind-affecting spells.
2. 1 battle automaton of Kerbog Khan (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 0; MV 150'; HD 8; HP 60; #AT 4; Dmg special; MR 50%. Special attacks: laser (3-12 damage); blade (3-12 damage); poison injector (death, or 3-12 damage on save); flamethrower (3-18 damage in arc). Special defenses: immune to cold and fire.
3. Laegel the Forsworn, Priscian war mage and member of Nonus, as a 9th-level male Archontean magic user: SZ M; AL LN; AC 2; MV 120'; HD 9; HP 29; #AT 1; Dmg 3-9 (Priscian gladius +2). Abilities: STR 11, INT 17, WIS 14, DEX 16, CON 10, CHA 15. Possessions: a key to 9-58; Priscian chain mail +1 (see new magic items); Priscian gladius +2 (see new magic items); gem of brightness; wand of fire (22 charges); staff of the magi (13 charges). Spells memorized: charm person, detect magic, enlarge, magic missile; continual light, ESP, locate object; dispel magic, hold person, suggestion; charm monster, wall of ice; cloudkill. Spell book: burning hands, charm person, comprehend languages, detect magic, enlarge, feather fall, hold portal, identify, light, magic missile, push, read magic, shield, sleep; the Bracteros effect (see new spells), continual light, darkness 15' radius, ESP, knock, locate object, mirror image, ray of enfeeblement, stinking cloud, web; blink, clairaudience, dispel magic, fireball, fly, hold person, lightning bolt, protection from evil 10' radius, suggestion; charm monster, fear, monster summoning II, remove curse, wall of ice, wizard eye; interposing hand, cloudkill, hold monster, passwall, wall of iron.

4. Malachi, Priscian war mage (see new monsters) and member of Tertius, as a 5th-level male Thorcin magic user: SZ M; AL LN; AC 3; MV 120'; HD 5; HP 15; #AT 1; Dmg 3-6 (staff +2). Abilities: STR 12, INT 16, WIS 10, DEX 16, CON 9, CHA 13. Possessions: Priscian chain mail (see new magic items); staff +2; wand of paralysis; Priscian ring (see new magic items) enchanted with true seeing. Spells memorized: detect magic, identify, magic missile, sleep; locate place (see new spells), strength; clairvoyance. Spell book: affect normal fires, charm person, comprehend languages, detect magic, erase, feather fall, hold portal, identify, light, magic missile, protection from evil, read magic, shield, sleep; continual light, detect evil, ESP, knock, locate place (see new spells), mirror image, rope trick, stinking cloud, strength; clairvoyance, dispel magic, hold person, lightning bolt, slow; ice storm.
5. Amadec, Priscian war mage (see new monsters) and member of Secundus, as a 4th-level female human magic user: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 4; HP 15; #AT 1; Dmg 3-9 (Priscian gladius +2). Abilities: STR 11, INT 17, WIS 14, DEX 12, CON 16, CHA 9. Possessions: Priscian chain mail (see new magic items); Priscian gladius +2 (see new magic items); wand of light (10 charges); potion of extra healing. Spells memorized: dancing lights, jump, shield; forget, levitate. Spell book: comprehend languages, dancing lights, detect magic, find familiar, jump, magic aura, magic missile, read magic, shield, sleep, unseen servant, ventriloquism; detect invisibility, forget, levitate, Pelagion's bridge of sighs (see new spells), pyrotechnics, wizard lock; explosive runes, gust of wind, protection from normal missiles.
6. Pelagor, Priscian conversus (see new monsters) and bonded defender to Laegel, as an 8th-level Archontean thief: SZ M; AL LE; AC 3; MV 120'; HD 8; HP 45; #AT 1; Dmg 4-9 (short sword +3) or 2-5 (dagger +1) or 2-5 (sling). Abilities: STR 11, INT 12, WIS 12, DEX 17, CON 15, CHA 17. Thief abilities: PP 70%, OL 67%, F/RT 55%, MS 67%, HS 54%, HN 25%, CW 96%, RL 40%. Possessions: leather armor +2; dagger +1; short sword +3; sling and 10 sling bullets; a pouch with 15 sardonyx gems (50 gp each) and 73 gp; boots of elvenkind, a potion of invisibility.
7. Eroica, Priscian conversus (see new monsters), as a 5th-level female Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL NE; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 5; HP 49; #AT 1; Dmg 4-11 (battle axe +1) or 1-4 (light crossbow). Abilities: STR 18/50, INT 9, WIS 12, DEX 10, CON 16, CHA 7. Possessions: splint mail +1 and shield; battle axe +1; light crossbow; 83 sp and 37 gp.

Treasure:

Warp drive rods (up to 6).

On the bodies: a GnuCoder 1000 image screen, with one crystal; a rudishva lesser power supply; and brown, copper, sky blue rudishva identity plaques (see new technological items for all). Items on the Priscians (see above).

7-144: Rudishva Teleport Node

Both doors – to 7-143 and to 7-145 – are rudishva iris doors that require a pale green, pink, orange, silver, or yellow rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items) to open. A rudishva teleport node lies along this corridor. The node is comprised of a 5'-diameter circle of silvery material inset into the floor, with a 10"x10" square of the same material affixed to the wall. A rune is etched into the silvery material. To activate the node, one stands on the circle and touches one's hand to the square.

Teleport Node:

T11: access to 5-95

7-145: Pool of Sparkling Liquid

A softly gurgling basin of black granite is almost dwarfed by the large, but otherwise empty, chamber that surrounds it. The basin is 15' in diameter and 3' deep; it is filled with opalescent, sparkly liquid. Anything coated in the liquid will levitate in the shaft (7-146). The coating lasts for an hour, but can, strangely enough, be brushed off easily.

7-146: Rudishva Transit Shaft

A 40'-square shaft, sheathed in the same white marble and silver grout, extends 1,100' through the Halls, commencing at 5-84 and culminating at 9-91. Built by the rudishva as a swift form of transport for their officers, it detects strongly as magical. Anything tossed into the shaft will fall normally, but anything - or anyone - coated in the opalescent liquid is capable of levitation in the pit. Levitation is at the rate of 20' of vertical distance per round. Removal of even 10% of the silver grout cancels the levitation effect. From this point one can use the shaft to access 5-84, 6-164, and 9-91. Those without the opalescent covering who fall into the shaft fall 300' to their likely death.

A pair of giant rudishva skeletons sit in gargantuan stone chairs overlooking the transit shaft. The skeletons animate and confront any non-rudishva who step out of the shaft onto the floor of the chamber. The door to the west is a rudishva iris door that requires a pale green, pink, orange, silver, or yellow rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items) to open.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 semi-intelligent giant rudishva skeletons: SZ L; AL NE; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8+8; HP 68, 58; #AT 1 or 2; Dmg 3-18 (weapon) or 2-8/2-8 (bone throwing); MR 50%. Special attacks: bone throwing; sonic blast. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; half damage from sharp or edged weapons; half damage from fire; immune to sleep, charm, cold, poison, and paralysis.

7-147: Dangerous Route to Chasm Floor (9-86)

The bestial varumani discovered and improved this set of 'steps', hand- and foot-holds, and cracks, and a daring few among them use it to traverse the lower chasm outside the scrutiny of the thegn. Like the Dread Risers (7-2), the path ultimately leads down 300' to the chasm floor (9-86). Unlike the Risers, however, this route is extremely dangerous. Those climbing or descending it must roll 3d8 under DEX every 100' or fall off. Thieves, or others with special climbing skills, only need roll 2d8 under DEX.

7-148: Tunnel to the Flooded Vaults, SL9-9A

A 4'-diameter hole in the chasm wall leads to a narrow tunnel that wends its way to the Flooded Vaults region (SL9-7A). The hole is about 50' above the descending route that the bestial varumani take to the chasm floor (see 7-147).

LEVEL 8: THE NETHER REACHES

The Nether Reaches have a reputation among denizens of Arden Vul as an ultra-dangerous ‘wild west’ region. As a result, no faction controls the level, nor is any faction genuinely interested in establishing a permanent presence here. To be sure, in antiquity most of the main cultures of Arden Vul established some presence on Level 8, but in each case that presence was limited, and even secret in some cases. It was thus frequently a truism that ‘to seek the Nether Reaches’ meant to strike out on one’s own into the dangerous and unknown areas far outside the control of the authorities. In the present, the Nether Reaches retain their aura of mystery and opportunity. Rumors of some of the infamous ‘special’ locations persist, and both denizens of the Halls and hardy outsiders frequently mount expeditions to the Reaches, usually in search of a fabled location or object. It must be said, however, that most of these expeditions never return to the more ‘civilized’ areas.

The level contains several special encounter areas, interspersed with natural tunnels and broken fragments of older habitation. Among the notable regions are the domain of the shadow lord, Laocoon (8-8 to 8-21); the temple of Bastet (8-30 to 8-41); the cave of the bliss flowers (8-67), with the nearby hives of giant bees (8-69 and 8-70); the terrible hall of the chaotic feasters (8-76), with its direct access to the greater god entity Rimmaq-Isfet; the forge of Zhorak (8-95 to 8-104); the tomb of Phocion the Builder (8-142 to 8-144); Eustachius the Cantor’s famous Singing Grotto (8-146 to 8-148); and the lost temple of Besa (8-119 to 8-126). While this may seem to represent a convenient conjunction of plunderable of riches, magic, and lore, explorers of the Nether Reaches face two problems: first, many of these special areas are guarded by powerful entities; second, and perhaps more importantly, travel between the entrance halls (8-1 to 8-7) and the rest of the level is notoriously difficult. Of course, travel from the entrance hall is easy in one sense, for explorers can use teleporters in that hall to access distant sections of the Reaches (see 8-7). Perhaps it is more accurate, then, to say that travel out of the Reaches to safer areas has proven the major obstacle to adventurers. Escape from the level is rendered difficult both because of the circuitous tunnels that wend through the level, but also because of the mind-altering pollen of the bliss flowers (see new flora) that affects most of the central areas of the level. The potent bliss pollen is responsible for confounding even the most well-organized exploring parties by separating them, turning them around, and leading them into unforeseen dangers (see below at region 3 for those areas affected by the pollen).

GENERAL CONSTRUCTION NOTES

Heqeti areas: 8-25, 8-26, 8-76, 8-159, 8-162, 8-165

Rudishva areas: 8-29, 8-35, 8-46 to 8-48, 8-51 to 8-53, 8-56, 8-59, 8-62, 8-157

Archontean areas: 8-1, 8-3 to 8-21, 8-28, 8-30 to 8-34, 8-36 to 8-41, 8-69, 8-70, 8-77 to 8-79, 8-83 to 8-86, 8-95 to 8-107, 8-119 to 8-127, 8-133, 8-142 to 8-149, 8-168

ICONIC AREAS

The Forge of Zhorak (8-100)

IMPORTANT NPCs

Ecath, true varumani apprentice overseer of the Troll Lifts (8-1)

Nicetas and Company, NPC robbers (8-5)

Laocoon the Shadow Lord (8-15)

Oubaste, high priestess of Bastet (8-37)

Peabo, exiled lesser varumani (8-55)

Olaf the Bee-Whisperer (8-73)

Zhorak, undead dwarven spirit (8-97)

Ljots, aka Arkose Scoria, doppelganger leader posing as a dwarf (8-100)

Sir Discord, a Sun-Scarred Knight (8-116)

Vatapi, Ilvala and Tataka, rakshasas posing as rudishva (8-120, 8-124, 8-125)

Muq, exiled lesser varumani (8-151)

SIGNIFICANT REGIONS OF LEVEL 8

1. Entrance and Shadowed Halls (Areas 8-1, 8-3 to 8-21)

Almost all expeditions to the Nether Reaches commence in this compact region of mostly Archontean-era construction. Most visitors arrive via the troll lift (8-1). Depending on the intelligence they have previously garnered, explorers have several choices. They can venture north, either to cross the lesser chasm (8-27) in the direction of the temple of Bastet (8-30 to 8-41) or to risk the ambush of Nicetas and Co. (8-4 and 8-5). They can also venture east, to the entrance hall (8-7); there they can either push past the safety of the torch of Anubis (8-7) into the darkened halls beyond, or can use one of the one-way teleporters to head deeper into the Nether Reaches (8-7A to 8-7H).

Factions: The varumani maintain a cursory presence at area 8-1 in the person of Ecath, the most junior member of Troll Lifts staff. The areas east of the entrance hall (8-7), that is, areas 8-8 to 8-21, are under the control of a powerful shadow lord (8-15). An Archontean bandit, Nicetas, occupies area 8-5, from which he ambushes unwary explorers.

Construction: Although the area was occupied by heqeti and rudishva, the construction here dates from the Archontean era.

Environment: Area 8-8 is under several permanent darkness spells, a fact that renders the shadows and vorantes demons more dangerous. Only the light of the torch of Anubis (8-7) prevents them from occupying the western portion of the region.

2. Temple of Bastet (8-30 to 8-41)

A strange vestige of the ancient Archontean glory days exists in this temple devoted to the goddess, Bastet. During the war of Sortians and Theosophs (see World of Archontos appendix), the priestesses of Bastet refused to aid the anti-Sortian archon of Arden Vul and fled to the Nether Reaches, where they established a new - and secret - temple, one that remains in operation to the present. The temple is protected by several natural chokepoints (e.g., 8-30), and the priestesses are vigilant in defending their territory from monsters and/or hostile adventurers. The large colony of feral cats that inhabits the tunnels near the temple serves as a warning system for the priestesses. Although old and rich, the temple has remained secret; for this reason it is not considered an iconic location of the Halls.

Factions: The priesthood of Bastet (8-31, 8-32, 8-37) controls this area fully. The priestesses are not necessarily hostile to those who approach humbly and with demonstrated need, but they are rightfully suspicious of adventurers and require assurances before allowing visitors into their fane.

Construction: The construction is late-Archontean era stonework, with much imagery devoted to cats.

Environment: Many chambers within the temple precincts (i.e., 8-31, 8-32, 8-37, and 8-38) are affected by the new spell, nighteyes of Bastet (see new spells); this spell provides true moonlight to these areas, thus allowing the priestesses to assume maubaste form (see new monsters). In addition, the outer temple (8-38) is under the effect of a hallow spell (see new spells), which sanctifies the area for those of chaotic neutral alignment (+2 to all rolls for those of CN alignment; -2 to all rolls for all others).

3. Caves of Bliss (Areas 8-63, 8-67 to 8-75, 8-80 to 8-83, 8-111, 8-113 to 8-115, 8-128 to 8-131)

This region is marked less by architecture or habitation than by environmental effects. Its center is the vast, magically sunlit cavern of the bliss flowers (8-67), from which the pollen spreads to surrounding areas, both worked and unworked.

Factions: No factions control this region.

Construction: Most of this region is comprised of natural caves and tunnels; the few worked areas are Archontean in origin.

Environment: Areas with bliss pollen are dangerous since the pollen induces psychotropic effects. Those breathing the pollen must save versus petrification (with a -3 penalty) or wander in a random direction, blissfully unaware of their surroundings, for 1-6 hours.

4. Forge of Zhorak (8-95 to 8-100, plus mines at 8-87 to 8-94)

Although an iconic location in the halls, knowledge of the site's location has been lost for close to a millennium. The few explorers who have managed to locate the forge have all perished, including a recent group of adventurers who had the misfortune to be ambushed by a group of doppelgangers posing as dwarves (8-100). The region includes the forge proper (8-100), as well as associated storage, design, display, and habitation chambers. While the doppelgangers form the most immediate threat here, the forge is still protected by a fearsome iron golem (8-100A). A network of mineral-rich tunnels is linked to the worked areas; although still rich with ore, the tunnels are also home to several huldugritti (see new monsters) and inert Zhorak's miners (see new monsters; they could be activated in certain circumstances).

Factions: No faction controls this region, although a group of doppelgangers posing as dwarves has just reached the area, with the goal of destroying the forge itself.

Construction: All areas are Archontean, albeit in a unique style that is the product of Zhorak's dwarven predilection.

Environment: There are no unusual environmental effects in operation here.

5. Lost Temple of Besa (8-119 to 8-126)

This region was notorious even in antiquity, thanks to the sometimes-perverse practices and rituals associated with Besa, the ancient Archontean deity of sexual pleasure and pain. Although scholars of Arden Vul history know of the existence of the temple, its location has been lost to time (with the exception perhaps of the most formidable sages). As a result, experienced adventurers consider it one of the holy grails of Arden Vul exploration, one perfect for jokes and knowing winks. The priesthood expired a millennium ago, however, and the region has fallen into the hands of three powerful and extremely clever rakshasas.

Factions: No factions control this region, although it is occupied by three rakshasas masquerading (through illusion) as well-heeled rudishva survivors.

Construction: All stonework is Archontean.

Environment: The area appears well-maintained, and even luxurious, thanks to illusions maintained by the rakshasas that have occupied the region. The illusions are particularly strong in areas 8-120 to 8-124.

ACCESS AND EGRESS

To Levels 2, 3, 5, 6, 7, 9: Great Chasm at 8-2, leading up to 2-63A, 3-38, 5-34, 6-108 and 7-3, and down to 9-1

To Level 3: stairs at 8-34, leading up to 3-41A

To Level 5: stairs at 8-35, leading up to 5-63

To Level 5 (formerly): inoperative rudishva teleport node (T21) at 8-157, now leading nowhere

To Level 6: Troll Lift at 8-1, leading up to 6-1

To Level 6: stairs at 8-25, leading up to 6-106

To Level 6: hole in ceiling of 8-33, leading up to 6-20

To Level 6: tunnel at 8-71, leading up to 6-44B

To Level 6: tunnel at 8-129, leading to 6-60

To Level 7: steeply climbing rope bridge at 8-24 leading up to 7-34

To Level 7: tunnel at 8-137, leading up to 7-40

To Level 7: rudishva teleport node (T18) at 8-52, leading to 7-110

To Level 9: tunnel at 8-23, leading down to 9-57

To Level 9: teleportation via pukel-mander (see new magic items) at 8-26, leading to 9-40

To Level 9: tunnel at 8-95A, leading down to 9-139

To Level 9: tunnel at 8-110, leading down to 9-150

To Level 9: tunnel at 8-119, leading down to 9-147

To Level 9: rudishva teleport node (T19) at 8-52, leading to 9-97

To Level 10: heqeti teleport wells at 8-25 and 8-162, leading to 10-24

To Sub-Level 10A: stairs at 8-56, leading up to SL10A-1

To Sub-Level 10A: tunnel 8-82, leading up to SL10A-9

To Sub-Level 12: tunnel at 8-54, leading up to SL12-21
 To Sub-Level 15: tunnel at 8-60, leading up to SL15-12
 To Various Locations: Thothian teleportation ring (see new magic items) at 8-17

To Unmapped Areas: tunnel at 8-170, leading to unmapped areas
 To Unmapped Areas: tunnel at 8-171, leading to unmapped areas

Teleport destinations on Level 8:

8-6: from teleporter at 6-48

RANDOM ENCOUNTERS

Random encounters vary considerably according to the region in which PCs are traveling.

1. Areas with No Initial Random Encounters

The following areas have no initial random encounters: 8-30 to 8-41, 8-76 to 8-79, 8-99 to 8-104, 8-120 to 8-125, 8-142 to 8-144, 8-146 to 8-149. If the creatures that inhabit them are eliminated, however, then these areas are liable to random checks. In that case, use the general encounter charts for this level.

2. General Encounter Tables

For areas other than those listed in the more specific tables found below, checks should be made every three turns, with a 1 in 6 chance for an encounter. If an encounter is indicated for an area filled with bliss pollen (areas 8-63, 8-67 to 8-75, 8-80 to 8-83, 8-111, 8-113 to 8-115, 8-128 to 8-131), then the GM should determine if the creature(s) are under the effect of bliss pollen (75% chance); if they are, then a roll on the bliss-pollen reaction table (see below) below is required. In addition, the GM should use common sense in using the following chart. For example, if the PCs are close to areas 8-69 and 8-70, the likelihood that a random encounter will involve giant bees should be very high; the bees are a less likely encounter the further the party is from the hives. The same might hold for housecats (more common near areas 8-30 to 8-50) and heqeti (more common to the west of the level).

D20	Encounter
1-2	1-3 wild cats (from 3-181): SZ S; AL N; AC 5; MV 180'; HD 1; HP 5, 3, 3; #AT 3; Dmg 1-2/1-2/1-2. Special attacks: rear claw rakes; surprise 3 in 6. Special defenses: only surprised 1 in 6
3	1 invisible stalker: SZ L; AL N; AC 3; MV 120'; HD 8; HP 58; #AT 1; Dmg 4-16; MR 30%. Special attacks: surprise on 1-5. Special defenses: invisibility. If slain here, the stalker cannot be encountered at 8-64
4	Olaf the bee whisperer (see 8-73), 7 th -level Wisikin magic user: SZ M; AC 7; MV 120'; HD 7; HP 19; #AT 1; Dmg 2-5 (dagger +1). Abilities: STR 13, INT 8 (formerly 17), WIS 13, DEX 17, CON 10, CHA 15. Possessions: dirty linen clothing; periapt of proof against poison ; dagger +1 .
5	4 huge spiders: SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 180'; HD 2+2; HP 15, 15, 13, 11; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: surprise 1-5; poison (+1 to saves); can leap up to 30'
6	Party of NPC adventurers (select from NPC appendix)

7-8	4-16 giant rats: SZ S; AL N(E); AC 7; MV 120'; HD 1-4 HP; HP 4(x4), 3(x4), 2(x4), 1(x4); #At 1; Dmg 1-3. Special attacks: 5% chance of disease
9	2 carcass creepers: SZ L; AL N; AC 3 (head) or 7 (body); MV 120'; HD 3+1; HP 19, 19; #AT 8; Dmg nil. Special attacks: paralysis
10-11	3-10 giant worker bees: SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 90'; 300' flying (Class D); HD 3+1; 24, 23, 22, 21, 20, 19, 18, 17, 16, 15; #AT 1; Dmg 1-3. Special attacks: sting once; poison.
12	Varumani hunter(s) (roll d4). The hunter(s) is/are hot on the trail of a rumored creature (50%), or is/are returning to 8-1 bearing monster parts from the Nether Reaches to sell at the Troll Market (7-76) (50%) <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Livod the hunter, a true varumani (see new monsters) (5%): SZ L; AL LE; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 62; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10, or 6-24 (trident, 2-20+4), or 8-26 (javelin +2). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: a huge trident; 7 javelins +2; ring mail; a thick gold torc (465 gp); a pouch with 76 sp, 112 gp, and two doses of hunter's friend (see Arden Vul items). Livod's ring mail is decorated with dozens of trophies, that is, scraps of hair or hide from his successful hunts.</li> <li>Nolgi the hunter, a true varumani (see new monsters) (5%): SZ L; AL LE; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 62; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 8-26 (spear +2, 2-20+6). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: a two-handed spear +2; an enormous mace; a heavy crossbow with 24 bolts; ring mail; two copper arm bands carved with images of heqeti (175 gp the pair); two doses of hunter's friend (see Arden Vul items); a pouch with 111 sp, 78 gp, and two doses of hunter's friend (see Arden Vul items). Nolgi wears a decorative helmet formed out of a couple of heqeti skulls, to which he has attached some streamers of colored cloth.</li> <li>Halti the hunter, a true varumani (see new monsters) (5%): SZ L; AL LE; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 62; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 8-26 (two-handed sword +2, 2-20+6), or 7-25 (javelin +1). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: a two-handed sword +2; a net; a sheaf of 5 javelins +1; ring mail; a collection of 15 bangles of gold and silver (550 gp for the collection); and a purse with 87 sp, 131 gp, and two doses of hunter's friend (see Arden Vul items). She affects a bright yellow phrygian cap (at least when she is not stalking prey).</li> <li>Several of the above. Roll d6: 1-3 = 2 of the above; 4-6: all 3 of the above</li> </ol>

13	2 lesser varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 3; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 57, 53; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (mace, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: mace; shield. The varumani are (25% chance for each): 1) renegades from the Troll Court (7-76); 2) looking for Muq (8-151); 3) lost and looking to make their way back to Level 7; 4) treasure-hunters, with a 'sure-fire' map to Zhorak's Forge (8-100) (20% chance the map is accurate).
14	3-6 subterranean lizards: SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 6; HP 45, 43, 41, 39, 35, 32; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12. Special attacks: double damage on a natural roll to hit of 20
15	10 goblins: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 7, 6, 5(x3), 4, 4, 3, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. They are searching for the fabled scepter of the goblins (see new magic items), even though they have no clue where it is (it is currently at 8-69)
16-17	A solitary lost adventurer. Roll d6: 1-2: Knut the Lucky, a 5th-level male Wiskin fighter: SZ M; AL CG; AC 2; MV 120'; HD 5; HP 45; #AT 1; Dmg 4-7 (war hammer +1) or 1-6. Abilities: STR 16, INT 8, WIS 10, DEX 15, CON 15, CHA 7. Possessions: chain mail +1 and shield; war hammer +1; short bow and 20 arrows; a purse with 34 sp and 9 gp; a key to his lockbox in the vaults of Set (see 4-24); and an excellent map showing the route from 8-1 to 8-4, 8-5, 8-66, 8-62, 8-63, and 8-83. The map does not, however, indicate pollen or the bandits in 8-5. 3-6: Edric 'who drinks water', a 6th-level male Thorcin cleric of Laraveen: SZ M; AL LN; AC 3; MV 90'; HD 6; HP 41; #AT 1; DMG 4-9 (footman's flail +2). Abilities: STR 12, INT 12, WIS 16, DEX 9, CON 15, CHA 15. Possessions: banded mail and shield; footman's flail +2; a potion of healing; a flask of strong brandy; a purse with 91 sp, 43 gp, a white opal (1,000 gp), and the key to his lockbox in 4-24. Spells prayed for: command, bless, cure light wounds (x2), protection from evil; aid, find traps, hold person, silence 15' radius; continual light, create food &amp; water.
18	Vermin. Roll d8: 1-2: 5-8 giant centipedes: SZ S; AL N; AC 9; MV 150'; HD 1 or 2 HP; HP 2(x4), 1(x4); #AT 1; Dmg n.a. Special attacks: poison (+4 to save) 3-5: 4 giant fire beetles: SZ S; AL N; AC 4; MV 120'; HD 1+2; HP 8, 7, 7, 5; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8 6-8: 9-12 giant rats: SZ S; AL N(E); AC 7; MV 120'; HD 1-4 HP; HP 4(x3), 3(x3), 2(x3), 1(x3); #At 1; Dmg 1-3. Special attacks: 5% chance of disease
19	Cinna Minux, the vampire: for stats see 7-122. What form he takes is up to the GM to decide.

20	A heqeti exploration party of 6 hoppers led by a weaver (see new monsters): <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1 heqeti weaver (see new monsters), as a 7th/7th-level magic user/cleric of Kauket: SZ M; AL CE; AC 3; MV 120'; 90' swimming; HD 7; HP 34; #AT 1; Dmg 5-10 (footman's mace +2). Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice. Possessions: amulet of natural armor +2 (see new magic items); staff of healing (14 charges); copper-headed footman's mace +2; two glass spheres of arcane assistance (one of arcane warding, one of protection) (see new magic items); potion of gaseous form. Magic user spells: enlarge, jump, magic missile, shield; continual light, levitate, ray of enfeeblement; fireball, protection from normal missiles; polymorph other. Cleric spells: bless, command (x2), create water, cure light wounds; chant, hold person (x2), resist fire, silence 15' radius; animate dead, blindness; sticks to snakes. Spell book: affect normal fires, burning hands, charm person, comprehend languages, detect magic, enlarge, floating disk, hold portal, identify, jump, magic missile, read magic, shield, sleep; continual light, darkness 15' radius, detect invisibility, knock, levitate, magic mouth, ray of enfeeblement, web; dispel magic, fireball, fly, haste, protection from normal missiles, suggestion; charm monster, fear, fumble, ice storm, monster summoning II, polymorph other, remove curse.</li> <li>6 heqeti hoppers (see new monsters), as 4th-level fighters: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60', 150' swimming; HD 4; HP 29, 28, 25, 26, 24, 22; #AT 2; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 1-6 (bite). Special attacks: hop; +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice</li> </ol>
----	--

3. Entrance Halls (Areas 8-1 to 8-7)

Checks should be made every 3 turns, with a 1 in 6 chance for an encounter. If an encounter is indicated, it will either come from the chart listed below at 8-1 (50%) or from the list of random chasm encounters (8-2).

4. Shadowed Halls (Areas 8-8 to 8-20)

The shadows are quite active here. Checks should be made every 2 turns, with a 1 in 6 chance for an encounter. Encounters in this area are always the same: a mixed group of 1-2 greater shadows and 3-5 normal shadows. Combat with shadows, even those produced by a random encounter check, has a likelihood of drawing more shadows (see chart at 8-8).

1-2 greater shadows (see new monsters): SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 5+1; HP 36, 30; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12. Special attacks: ability drain. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to cold, poison, paralysis, sleep, charm, and hold; turned as a wraith.

3-5 shadows: SZ M; AL CE; AC 7; MV 120; HD 3+3; HP 24, 22, 20, 19, 17; #AT 1; Dmg 2-5. Special attacks: STR drain. Special defenses: 90% undetectable; +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and cold.

LEVEL KEY

8-1: Troll Lift, Up to 6-1

This hall is the debarkation site for the eastern Troll Lift (6-1). Passengers descending the 400' from Level 6 reach this location after a descent taking 11-20 minutes and costing 10 sp per leg.

Like other halls opening into the Great Chasm (8-2), this chamber was carved by the heqeti millennia ago, and as a result the pebbled walls are slightly oily to the touch and detect faintly of evil. The floor is paved with blue granite. Here the lift appears solely as a set of ropes looped around a pulley set into the floor; to secure passage up the chasm, one must shout to get the attention of Reith (6-1) or get Ecath to sound his horn. After 11-20 minutes the basket will appear and travelers step aboard. A return trip of the same duration is necessary to travel the 400' up to Level 6, at which point Reith collects the tariff for passage (10 sp per leg).

Ecath, a true varumani (see new monsters), is the lone representative of the troll thegn (7-30) in this location. His title is 'apprentice overseer of the Troll Lifts', but even Ecath recognizes a dead-end posting when he sees it. Dismayed at his prospects, Ecath has struck a secret bargain with Nicetas and his gang of robbers (8-5). Nicetas forks over 10% of all proceeds, and in return Ecath guides suitable marks towards area 8-5. Ecath hopes to use his growing stash of valuables to buy his way into the favor of the troll thegn (7-30).

Ecath would also love to take credit for some discovery or new source of wealth, as he hopes this might be his ticket out of the tedium he faces here. As a result, Ecath appears curious and engaging, hoping to elicit something valuable from any visitors.

Ecath knows a bit about the closer areas of the Nether Reaches. For instance, he knows that there is an old temple to the north (Temple of Bastet, areas 8-30 to 8-41); he also knows that those venturing east into area 8-7 had better have good sources of light. He claims to know nothing about robbers nearby (8-5), since he is on Nicetas's payroll.

Ecath has two cauldrons on tripods. One is a tripod of heating (see new magic items); the other holds the revenues from the troll lift (2,936 sp, and 328 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items). Ecath has an impressive horn taken from some devil that he uses to alert Reith (6-1) to lower the basket. The horn is not magical, but is worth 3,100 gp.

Secret Compartment (north wall): Ecath has also used his down time to carve a small secret hole in the wall behind a loose stone. The compartment is detected as a secret door. Here he keeps the loot delivered to him by Nicetas per their arrangement.

There is a 1 in 6 chance that another other group is present in this chamber. Roll on the following table to determine its composition:

D8	Traveler	Statistics
1	Ten goblins who have heard a rumor that the long-lost and fabled (to goblins) scepter of the goblins (see new magic items) is located on Level 8. Although they don't really know where they are going, they are talking with Ecath, and trying to screw up their courage to head into area 8-7. The scepter is found at 8-69.	10 goblins: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 7, 6, 5(x3), 4, 4, 3, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6
2	A rare deserter from the Children of Deino, or beastmen (see new monsters), Karol thought he could start over on Level 8, but has become deterred by its obvious dangers. He tries to glom on to a party as a scout, but will betray his new friends at the earliest opportunity, hopefully after he has stolen some of their gear. He carries only 25 sp but is an adept pick-pocket (66%).	Karol the beastman trooper (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP 7; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: spear, short sword, short bow
3	Adventurers returning from an expedition into the Nether Reaches. They were ambushed by Nicetas and Co. (8-5) and are badly wounded. They have 1-3 treasures they might sell, and some knowledge about areas 8-3 to 8-5 and 8-7 to 8-8. They plan to hole up in the Inn of the Lost (6-7 to 6-20).	Party of NPC adventurers (select from NPC appendix)
4	A party just arrived in 8-1. They are overconfident because they possess a (false) map and testament purporting to show an easy route into the Nether Reaches through the route 8-7 to 8-8 to 8-11.	Party of NPC adventurers (select from NPC appendix)

5	One (or more) of the varumani hunters (see new monsters) bearing monster parts from the Nether Reaches to sell at the Troll Market (7-76).	Roll d4 to determine which hunter: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Livod the hunter, a true varumani (see new monsters) (5%): SZ L; AL LE; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 62; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10, or 6-24 (trident, 2-20+4), or 8-26 (javelin +2). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: a huge trident; 7 javelins +2; ring mail; a thick gold torc (465 gp); a pouch with 76 sp, 112 gp, and two doses of hunter's friend (see Arden Vul items). Livod's ring mail is decorated with dozens of trophies, that is, scraps of hair or hide from his successful hunts.</li> <li>2. Nolgi the hunter, a true varumani (see new monsters) (5%): SZ L; AL LE; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 62; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 8-26 (spear +2, 2-20+6). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: a two-handed spear +2; an enormous mace; a heavy crossbow with 24 bolts; ring mail; two copper arm bands carved with images of heqeti (175 gp the pair); two doses of hunter's friend (see Arden Vul items); a pouch with 111 sp, 78 gp, and two doses of hunter's friend (see Arden Vul items). Nolgi wears a decorative helmet formed out of a couple of heqeti skulls, to which he has attached some streamers of colored cloth.</li> <li>3. Halti the hunter, a true varumani (see new monsters) (5%): SZ L; AL LE; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 62; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 8-26 (two-handed sword +2, 2-20+6), or 7-25 (javelin +1). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: a two-handed sword +2; a net; a sheaf of 5 javelins +1; ring mail; a collection of 15 bangles of gold and silver (550 gp for the collection); and a purse with 87 sp, 131 gp, and two doses of hunter's friend (see Arden Vul items). She affects a bright yellow phrygian cap (at least when she is not stalking prey).</li> <li>4. Several of the above. Roll d6: 1-3= 2 of the above; 4-6: all 3 of the above</li> </ol>
6	A magic user with a hot rumor about a location in the Nether Reaches and who even possesses a map to that area (only 25% the map is accurate). Roll d4: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Temple of Bastet (8-38)</li> <li>2. Forge of Zhorak (8-100)</li> <li>3. Hives of Golden Nectar (8-69)</li> <li>4. Halls of Song (8-132)</li> </ol>	NPC magic user and flunkies (select from NPC appendix)
7	A mixed party of varumani (see new monsters), goblins and humans bearing a captive monster to area 6-91 in the Arena. They carry 10-100 gp in coins and/or gems and have a 10% chance of bearing 1-4 potions as well. Roll d8 for creature: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1-3: an albino baboon (see new monsters)</li> <li>4-5: a giant spider;</li> <li>6-7: a carcass creeper;</li> <li>8: GM's choice.</li> </ol>	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. 1-4 lesser varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 61, 59, 58, 57; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (club, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: club</li> <li>2. 2-12 goblins: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 7, 6, 6, 5(x3), 4(x3), 3, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6</li> <li>3. 1-6 human arena wranglers: SZ M; AL N; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 6, 5, 5, 4, 4; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (spear). Possessions: leather armor; spear</li> </ol>
8	A Sun-Scarred Knight (see new monsters). GM should select one from the new monsters entry list.	The knight is on his way to the Troll Market (7-76) to consult with Sir Prudence (7-76A). He is also hot on the trail of one of his personal interests. He/she will attempt to mediate in the case of impending hostilities, but refuses to join the fighting on either side.

Inhabitants:

1. Ecath, a true varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LN; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 60; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 6-24 (two-handed sword, 2-20+4). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: huge two-handed sword; ring mail.

Treasure:

In the open: a tripod of heating (see new magic items); sounding horn from a devil (3,100 gp); 2,936 sp, and 328 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items).

In the hidden cache: 403 sp, 279 gp, 17 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items), 3 ancient octagonal platinum pieces (see Arden Vul items), 4 deep-green spinels (100 gp each), a 6"-tall ivory statuette of a scantily clad female human dancer (375 gp), a potion of healing, and a scroll of lightning bolt.

8-2: Great Chasm

One of the iconic features of the Halls, this massive fissure extends through most of the dungeon levels and provides a sure, if difficult, means of vertical navigation of the Halls. The fissure is generally shaped like a triangular prism, with its apex about 50' above Level 2. The prism extends downward 1,600' through the Halls until it levels out at the floor of the chasm (9-1) hundreds of feet below.

The chasm is slightly wider on this level than it was on Level 7. Other than the troll lift (8-1) and the spur (8-27) that separates 8-3 from 8-28, the chasm is not a major feature of the Nether Reaches.

Random encounters use the following table; roll every three turns, with a 1 in 6 chance for an encounter.

D100	Encounter
01-10	Party of NPC adventurers (select from NPC appendix)
11-15	Either of the following: 1. 1 basic dragonfly automaton of Kerbog Khan (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 4; MV 240' flying (Class A); HD 1+2; HP 8; #AT 0 Dmg n.a.; MR 25%. Special defenses: immune to cold and fire 2. 1 poison dragonfly automaton of Kerbog Khan (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 4; MV 240' flying (Class A); HD 1+2; HP 8; #AT 1; Dmg poison (death, or 1-3 turns paralyzation with 1-4 round slow on save); MR 25%. Special attacks: poison. Special defenses: immune to cold and fire
16-20	Mixed undead: 1. 2-3 wraiths: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 120'; 240' flying (Class B); HD 5+3; HP 36, 32, 28; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: energy drain. Special defenses: silver or magic weapons to hit; immune to sleep, charm, hold, cold, poison, and paralysis 2. 1 spectre: SZ M; AL LE; AC 2; MV 150'; 300' flying (Class B); HD 7+3; HP 52; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8. Special attacks: energy drain. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to sleep, charm, hold, cold, poison, and paralysis

21-25	2 ogre magi (from 9-70): SZ L; AL CE; AC 4; MV 90'; 150' flying (Class B); HD 5+2; HP 36, 34; #AT 1; Dmg 1-12 or by weapon. Special attacks: charm person 1/day; sleep 1/day; ray of cold 1/day. Special defenses: fly (12 turns); become invisible; darkness 10' radius; polymorph to human form; regenerate 1 HP/rd; assume gaseous form
26-30	1-4 margoyles: SZ M; AL CE; AC 2; MV 60', 120' flying (Class C); HD 6; HP 44, 42, 39, 37; #AT 4; Dmg 1-6/1-6/2-8/2-8. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit
31-35	1-3 chasme: SZ M; AL CE; AC -1; MV 60', 210' flying (Class D); HD 7+2; HP 52, 49, 47; #AT 3; Dmg 2-8/2-8/1-4; MR 40%. Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: cause darkness 5' radius; cause fear; droning sound (sleep). Special defenses: immune to poison; half damage from cold, electricity, fire, and gas. Special: teleport; detect good; detect invisible; telekinese (1,500 gp weight); gate in another chasme (15%)
36-40	1-2 quasits: SZ S; AL CE; AC 2; MV 150'; HD 3; HP 19, 18; #AT 3; Dmg 1-2/1-2/1-4; MR 25%. Special attacks: DEX drain; fear blast 1/day. Special defenses: regenerate 1 hp/rd; cold iron, or +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to cold, fire, lightning; save vs spells as 7 HD creature. Special: invisibility; polymorph to bat or giant centipede; detect good; detect magic
41-45	1 black pudding: SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 10; HP 50; #AT 1; Dmg 3-24. Special attacks: dissolve wood and metal. Special defenses: divide into parts when struck; immune to cold
46-50	1-2 gloomwings: SZ M; AL N; AC 1; MV 120' flying (Class D); HD 5+1; HP 34; #AT 3; Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-8. Special attacks: pheromone; wings cause confusion; surprise on 1-3 in 6
51-55	A pile of 5 heqeti slimes (see new monsters): 1. 2 off-white, jelly-like heqeti slimes (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 10' creeping; HD 2; HP 11; #AT 1; Dmg special; MR 15%. Special attacks: coagulant for up to 30 gallons liquid (including blood). Special defenses: healed by electricity or lasers; slowed by cold 2. 2 off-white, runny and oily heqeti slimes (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 20' pseudopod; HD 2; HP 8; #AT 1; Dmg special; MR 15%. Special attacks: victim saves or believes is a different race and gender. Special defenses: healed by electricity or lasers; slowed by cold 3. 1 rust-colored, jelly-like heqeti slime (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 15' pseudopod; HD 2; HP 9; #AT 1; Dmg special; MR 15%. Special attacks: spore-throwing (death in 3-18 days unless save at -1). Special defenses: healed by electricity or lasers; slowed by cold

56-65	A group of chasm chephalopods (see new monsters): <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1-5 medium chasm cephalopods (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 5; MV 60' flying (Class A); HD 4; HP 30, 28, 27, 26, 25, 25, 24, 22; #AT 5 (4 tentacles and a beak); Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-4/1-4/1-6; MR 25%. Special attacks: surprise on 1-4</li> <li>1-2 large chasm cephalopod (see new monsters): SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 60' flying (Class A); HD 6; HP 45, 38; #AT 6 (five tentacles and a beak); Dmg 1-6/1-6/1-6/1-6/1-6/1-8; MR 25%. Special attacks: surprise on 1-4; one tentacle drains spells from casters, adding 2-8 HP to chasm cephalopod per spell</li> </ol>
66-70	1 dao, pursued by 2 jannee <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1 dao: SZ L; AL NE; AC 3; MV 90', 150' flying (Class B), 60' burrow through earth; HD 8+3; HP 56; #AT 1; Dmg 3-18. Special defenses: assume gaseous form; become invisible; cause misdirection; immune to earth-based/affecting spells. Special: change self 1/day; detect good 1/day; detect magic 1/day; fulfill limited wish; passwall; create spectral force; create wall of stone; rock to mud 3/day; dig 6/day</li> <li>2 jannee: SZ M; AL N(G); AC 2; MV 120', 300' flying (Class A); HD 6+2; HP 45, 41; #AT 1; Dmg 6-14 (big scimitar); MR 20%. Possessions: large scimitar; chain mail. Special defenses: invisibility 3/day. Special: growth/reduction 2/day; create food and water 1/day (as 7th-level cleric); etherealness 1 hr/day; dwell in elemental air, water, fire, earth for up to 48 hrs.</li> </ol>
71-75	3-5 spined devils: SZ S; AL LE; AC 3; MV 60', 180' flying (Class C); HD 3+3; HP 24, 21, 20; #AT 1 and/or 2; Dmg 1-8 (military fork) and/or 1-4/1-4; MR 25%. Special attacks: flaming spines; command. Special defenses: half damage from cold and gas; immune to fire. Special: affect normal fires; change self; produce flame; scare; summon a barbed devil 1/day (5%)
76-80	1 smoke mephit: SZ M; AL CE; AC 4; MV 120', 240' flying (Class B); HD 3; HP 19; #AT 2; Dmg 1-2/1-2. Special attacks: breath weapon; flame damage on death. Special: invisibility (1/day); dancing lights (1/day); gate 1-2 mephits (20% chance)
81-85	6-8 yeth hounds (see 9-50): SZ L; AL NE; AC 0; MV 150', 270' flying (Class B); HD 3+3; HP 25, 24, 23, 22, 21, 20, 19, 18; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8. Special attacks: fear. Special defenses: silver, or +1 weapons or better to hit (damage taken is 1 per magical plus, or 1 for silver weapons)
86-90	2-3 bestial varumani (see new monsters), climbing the wall creepers: SZ L; AL NE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 55, 53, 49; #AT 3; Dmg 3-6/3-6/3-10. Special defenses: regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision; immune to poison
91-95	Roll on Upper Zone table (see 2-63A)
96-100	Roll on Middle Zone table (see 5-34)

Chasm Color:

The GM might decide to play up the creepy and mysterious nature of the chasm. Roll every 3 turns, with a 1 in 6 chance for a chasm sound effect.

D8	Noise/Effect
1	Loud hissing
2	Moaning (of the wind?)
3	A roar
4	A shriek
5	A loud clap (a sharp, brief noise)
6	An echoing voice (undecipherable)
7	A flash of bright light for 3 second
8	Fluting, of a tuneless sort

8-3: Southern Landing

Originally nothing more than a widening of Archontean-era tunnels, this chamber is now more significant as the last 'safe' area on the south side of the east-west 'spur' of the Great Chasm (8-27). The room's original decorations are gone, effaced by time, dirt, and considerable graffiti. Some of the graffiti has been painted over with black paint, but much is still visible (Nicetas's men paint over any references to their gang – see 8-5). The northern lip of this area, by the edge of the spur has six spikes set into the floor; to these spikes are attached ropes of various length (used by previous explorers to cross the spur).

D20	Graffiti (Language)	Notes
1	Big Reward for News of Muq. Tell Gog. (Varumani)	A reference to the intrigue that caused Gog (5-2) to be exiled from the court of the troll thegn (7-75). Muq is located at 8-151. The thegn (7-30) will also pay a reward for incriminating information on Muq.
2	Image of a cat-headed woman. Below, in black paint is scrawled "Ipwet" (Elvish).	A reference to Ipwet, priestess of Bastet (8-32). Also a hint about her nature as a maubaste
3	Oh that green silken robe, So tight and so trim, As soon as I glimpsed it, My heart went a-swim (Archontean)	Part of the chorus from the song, The Green Silken Robe , beloved of Arden Vul Spriggans (c.f. 7-62)
4	Gislu – I have a lead on the item. Follow the bees. (Goblin)	A reference to Gislu the goblin mystic (4-2), and his search for the scepter of the goblins (found in 8-69)
5	Reith is a big ape who steals all the money! Tell the thegn! (Varumani)	Vitriol directed at Reith (6-1), who controls the lift to 8-1. Accusations of his corruption are unfounded.

6	We saw Philippous lurking around here. What's he doing away from the trading hall? (Thorcin)	A reference to Philippous the trader (6-28), and a hint as to his status as a fence.
7	The thegn pays for fangs from the six-legged ones. (Varumani)	It is true that the troll thegn, Varboka (7-30), pays 100 gp apiece for kaliyani fangs.
8	We came, we saw the six legged-ones, and we slew them. The Broom Sweeps all Before it! (Archontean)	Boasting from Harold Good-Ears and the other members of the adventuring party called the Broom (now at 7-75). Refers to their defeat of kaliyani at 8-8.
9	Don't mess with Nolgi. That is one bad dude. (Thorcin)	A reference to Nolgi the hunter (7-14).
10	200 solidi reward for the head of Lugo the Renegade. Apply to Lishna at court. (Varumani)	A reference to the renegade lesser varumani, Lugo (8-136). Reward will be paid by Lishna (7-75).
11	Discord – return to the citadel. The Master requires your presence. (Archontean)	A reference to Sir Discord (8-116) and the citadel of the sun-scarred knights (SL10A-14)
12	There's a crazy Wiskin out there who lives with the bees. Watch out! (Wisikin)	A reference to Olaf the bee-whisperer (8-73)
13	Where did all these damned cats come from? (Archontean)	An oblique reference to the feral cat colonies (8-42 to 8-44) living around the temple of Bastet (8-38)
14	Proceed past the entry hall at your own risk, and be sure to bring plenty of light. The darkness is ... dangerous (Archontean)	A warning about the dangers of the shadow-infested halls (8-8 to 8-21)
15	The flowers are poison. Try not to breathe. (Mithric)	A reference to bliss flowers (8-67) and the pollen they emit.
16	The Snake Was Here! Let all Flee! (Wisikin)	Boasting from Kormak the Snake (8-132)
17	We lost Justine to the clouds. We'll await her here for a day. (Archontean)	A reference to Justine Two-Hands (9-130)
18	The First Adept will pay for specimens of plants and animals. (Varumani)	A reference to Glif, the First Adept of the varumani (7-24).

19	Kallion – we need you. Your contract with Set's Bankers is expiring. Come home fast. (Archontean)	A reference to Kallion the White, now dead (8-15), and his lockbox in the vaults of Set (4-24)
20	Those dwarves we encountered were surly. Only one would speak with us. Damned dwarves. (Archontean)	An oblique reference to the false dwarves at 8-100 (really doppelgangers)

8-4: Hall of Ambushes

This long chamber is brightly lit by several continual light spells cast on the ceiling. It is littered with skeletons and partially-decomposed corpses. The stench of death is strong. Under all the debris is a beautiful, 10'-diameter mosaic depicting a yellow hoplite helmet (an imperial symbol); unusually, the yellow tesserae are actually bits of gold (total of 475 gp worth).

Three arrow slits occupy the north wall, as does a lowered portcullis. Nicetas and his robbers (8-4) use these apertures to ambush those who approach their domain. The robbers wait until a party has fully entered the chamber before launching their attacks.

Almost nothing of value may be found here, since Nicetas's men assiduously loot the dead bodies. Still, the robbers have never noticed that a desiccated human hand rests flush with the ceiling in the northwestern corner. Unless visitors expressly state that they are examining the ceiling, it is likely to be overlooked. The hand wears a ring of levitation (see new magic items), which accounts for its strange positioning.

Secret Door (east): The door is normal to detect. It is locked, and the key is held by Nicetas. Attempts to pick the lock are at +5%.

Treasure:

Ring of levitation (see new magic items).

8-5: Nicetas and Co., Robbers

A band of robbers led by Nicetas the Aesthete makes its home in this well-protected chamber. A sturdy iron portcullis separates the lair from area 8-4; the lever operating the portcullis is on the floor next to the portcullis. The door leading north is brand new and in good repair. It is also locked and barred from this side; Nicetas holds the key.

Typically Nicetas keeps the main part of the chamber dark, so as to better accomplish ambushes in 8-4; the eastern ell of the chamber, where the gang sleeps and rests, is lit by torches and a tripod of heating (see new magic items). The western ell holds supplies – several barrels of smoked fish, a keg of ale, sacks of potatoes and leeks, a pail of black paint (for painting over graffiti in 8-3), etc. – and provides a narrow window onto the chasm spur (8-27). The walls of all three parts of the chamber are stained with smoke and debris, but a fresco on the north wall of the main chamber could be revealed with a bit of cleaning; it shows a pair of human-cat hybrids standing before an enormous black, seated cat. The seated cat is extending its paws to touch the heads of the 'cat-women'. Underneath the image are the faded words in Mithric: "Lady Bastet bestows her gift on the faithful." [GM: this is a hint as to the existence of maubaste at area 8-38]

The robbers have worked out a set of relationships to maximize their potential gains. Their junior (but glib) partner, Philippous, is ensconced in the traders' area of Level 6 (6-28), where he sells objects stolen by the gang and communicates with Nicetas via his half of a pair of amulets of telepathy (see new magic items). Philippous often steers naive groups to Level 8 and then alerts Nicetas as to the potential pickings. Nicetas also has an arrangement with Ecath (8-1) whereby the gang surrenders 10% of its profits to Ecath in return for the varumani directing suitable prey their way.

The gang keeps its loot in the eastern ell, amid their bedrolls and cookpots. They have a 5' marble statue of a dancing girl that they intend to sell in Newmarket, plus a locked chest whose key is held by Nicetas.

Inhabitants:

1. Nicetas the Aesthete, 8th-level male Archontean magic user: SZ M; AL CE; AC 2; MV 120'; HD 8; HP 25; #AT 1; Dmg 2-5 (dagger +1). Abilities: STR 10, INT 17, WIS 15, DEX 16, CON 9, CHA 14. Possessions: one half of a set of amulets of telepathy (see new magic items); keys to the door leading to 8-66, to the secret door in 8-4 and to the treasure chest in 8-6; wand of lightning (18 charges); wand of enemy detection (33 charges); bracers of defense (AC 4); dagger +1; scroll with fear, fumble and monster summoning I; his spell book (see Treasure below); purse with 31 gp and seven pieces of amber (100 gp each). Memorized spells: charm person, comprehend languages, hold portal, magic missile; continual light, darkness 15' radius, web; dispel magic, fireball, haste; confusion, dimension door.
2. Ketil the Caterpillar, 7th-level male Wisikin fighter: SZ M; AL NE; AC 1; MV 120'; HD 7; HP 80; #AT 3/2; Dmg 6-9 (war hammer +1), 6-11 (short bow +3 and arrows +2). Abilities: STR 17, INT 9, WIS 11, DEX 11, CON 17, CHA 8. Possessions: battle axe +2; short bow +3 and 20 arrows +2; banded mail +2 and shield; purse with 133 gp.
3. Lara One-Ear, 7th-level female Thorcin fighter: SZ M; AL LE; AC 1; MV 120'; HD 7; HP 70; #AT 3/2; Dmg 6-11 (short bow +3 and arrows +2), 6-9 (war hammer +1). Abilities: STR 18/41, INT 12, WIS 10, DEX 15, CON 16, CHA 11. Possessions: war hammer +1; short bow +3 and 15 arrows +2; chain mail +3; a potion of super-heroism; a pouch with 43 sp and 77 gp.
4. Thorir, 7th-level male Wisikin cleric of Loki: SZ M; AL CE; AC 2; MV 120'; HD 7; HP 41; #AT 1; Dmg 2-4 (staff of the serpent), or 4-9 (mace +1). Abilities: STR 16, INT 10, WIS 17, DEX 16, CON 11, CHA 14. Possessions: staff of the serpent (adder); studded leather armor +3; mace +1; pouch of capacity (see new magic items) with 497 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items); a ring of shield (see new magic items). Spells: bles, command, cure light wounds, remove fear, sanctuary; chant, hold person (x2), silence 15' radius (x2); animate dead, blindness, dispel magic; cure serious wounds.
5. 4 2nd-level Wisikin fighters (2 male, 2 female): SZ M; AL NE; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 15, 15; #AT 1; Dmg 2-9 (long sword), 3-6 (light crossbow and bolts +2). Special: each has STR 17 and CON 16. Possessions: chain mail; long sword; light crossbows, with 4 bolts +2 and 20 regular bolts; a pouch with 27 sp and 33 gp.

Treasure:

Statue: marble statue of a classical dancing girl, 5' tall (2,750 gp).
Chest: gold ewer (125 gp); a burlap sack with 3,757 sp and 2,498

gp; a silk purse with 10 ancient octagonal platinum coins (see Arden Vul items); a ceremonial helmet made of silver (375 gp); three troll thegn's passports (see Arden Vul items); a pair of empty rudishva lesser power supplies (see new technological items); a rudishva useful palm of correction (see new magic items); a sapphire Sortian eye (see new magic items); and several codices, including the Twelve Labors of Arden, On Profit, Moralia in Teracleon, the Kauketiad, and the Genealogy of the Deities of Archontos (see Arden Vul books for all).

Nicetas's Spell Book: Affect normal fires, burning hands, charm person, comprehend languages, enlarge, find familiar, friends, hold portal, identify, light, magic missile, push, read magic, shield, spider climb, write; continual light, darkness 15' radius, ESP, knock, levitate, magic mouth, rope trick, shatter, web; blink, dispel magic, fireball, gust of wind, infravision, monster summoning I, slow, tongues, water breathing; charm monster, confusion, dimension door, fire shield, minor globe of invulnerability, monster summoning II; airy water, dismissal, dolor.

8-6: Closet and Teleporter Destination

The ancient Sortians constructed this secret closet under the noses of the imperial authorities in order to provide a link in their chain of teleport faces (see 6-48). The chamber is long and narrow, and is roughly delved without the usual finishing touches. A trio of hooks are set into the north wall; on one of them hangs a cloak of poisonousness, which Nicetas (8-5) hopes may thin the ranks of anyone appearing from this direction.

Against the east wall is a Sortian face (see new magic items). It can be activated by inserting Sortian eyes (see new magic items) into the empty eye sockets. Only a few combinations of eyes are unique to an individual face; the rest are standard (and are detailed in the new magic items appendix).

Gold-Gold: Teleportation. All within 5' are teleported to area 6-48

Gold-Sapphire: A permanent magic mouth speaks in Mithric from the face: No time for the usual maxims. Take notice! Zhorak the smith has departed suddenly. His workshop is apparently unguarded. Let the next member of the League to visit these halls go swiftly to the hall of apparition and employ the third rose circle along the northern side. Else it is a long walk of 265 cubits to the north. Make haste! The smith's treasures will aid Macrinus in the Sortian cause.

GM Notes: The magic mouth refers to the forge of Zhorak (8-100), to the appropriate rose quartz circle in the Entrance Hall (8-7C), and to Macrinus, the most militaristic of the Sortian leaders (see World of Archontos appendix). This closet is also the destination for a Sortian face found at area 6-48.

Secret Door (west): The secret door is easy to find (1 in 4). From the east side, it opens by raising a simple latch.

8-7: Entrance Hall to the Nether Reaches

This substantial hall serves an important role as the jumping-off point for expeditions to most parts of the Nether Reaches. It provides direct – albeit highly dangerous – access to the Cave of the Bliss Flowers (8-67) via the Hall of Shadows (8-8). But it also provides one-way teleportal access to all of the key areas of the level via a set of specially built teleporters.

The hall is 30' tall and brightly lit by continual light spells. The ceiling is supported by six pairs of 5'-diameter basalt columns, which form an avenue down the center of the room. To the north and south of the pillars are wide stone shelves that rise 5' above the floor. Four 5'-diameter circles of rose quartz are inset into each shelf; these quartz circles are permanent teleporters providing direct, one-way access to various parts of the Nether Reaches. One activates a teleporter by standing or sitting within the rose quartz circle for one segment. Although the destinations of each circle are not officially indicated, in a few cases graffiti has been scratched into the rock next to the teleportal.

Teleporter	Destination	Graffiti (if any)
8-7A	The Face of Bastet (8-30)	'Cats!' 'That was a big mouse!' (Archontean)
8-7B	The Feasting Hall (area 8-77)	"Meat", "Avoid the Wine" (Thorcin)
8-7C	The Forge of Zhorak (8-102)	'Music Room' [incorrect]; 'Beware the [effaced]' (Archontean)
8-7D	The Temple of Besa (8-119)	'To gold' (Wisikin)
8-7E	The Singing Grotto (8-146)	'To Forge' [incorrect]; 'Find Eustachius's Book' (Mithric)
8-7F	The Crystalline Cave (8-169)	'Hot and humid,' 'Bring suitable gear' (Archontean)
8-7G	Inoperable (or to an area of the GM's creation)
8-7H	Inoperable (or to an area of the GM's creation)

8-8: Hall of Shadows

This dangerous hall is cloaked in darkness courtesy of several permanent darkness spells. The only break in the darkness comes from the torch held by the statue of Anubis that looms over the hall from the west. Anubis's torch imparts a 20'-radius sphere of bright, yellow, true sunlight, and is an important protective device against the shadow creatures and other undead (see below).

The hall is 30' tall. Its walls are covered with still-vivid ancient Archontean frescoes. The frescoes depict the following: laborers shaping stone (west wall), a field of bright flowers growing amid stones (north), sarcophagi, both open and closed (east), and varumani and heqeti, with the inscription (in Mithric) "our enemies" (south). Of course, these frescoes are invisible until the darkness is dispelled.

The hacked corpses of four kaliyani (see new monsters) lie on the stairs leading up to 8-7. An NPC adventuring party (see 7-75) slew the kaliyani and looted the bodies of all apparent valuables. That said, they did not know that the troll thegn (7-30) pays a bounty of 100 gp for every kaliyani fang; sixteen fangs are recoverable from the corpses.

Statue of Anubis: Anubis stands on a 10'-tall pedestal at the foot of the stairs descending from 8-7. His image is 9' tall, and he is depicted in jackal-headed form, holding a traveler's staff in his left hand and an upraised torch in his right. Yellow light streams from the torch. The statue is made of obsidian, with a few exceptions: Anubis's eyes are star rubies (10,000 gp each), the staff is ebony, and the torch appears to be a formed of solid gold. The staff is theoretically removable, but only if rolls of 5d6 under STR and 4d6 under DEX are successfully made by a single person. The torch is removable (see below). Efforts to remove the eyes take 3-6 rounds and cause several negative effects: 2-12 HP electrical damage per round of prying, plus a curse. The gem thief loses one point of CON per day while a gem is not in its proper place, as does any person who even touches a stolen gem. The two effects are additive, so a thief that steals both gems suffers a loss of two points of CON per day. The curse can only be broken by returning a gem to its rightful place. Any person drained of all CON by a gem rises as a juju zombie which immediately returns the gem to its rightful location before wandering away to attack the closest living thing. Lost CON is regained at the rate of one point per week.

Torch of Anubis: The torch appears to be solid gold and detects of magic and lawfulness (but not good or evil). In fact, it is fool's gold (5 gp). It provides sunlight as well as a powerful magical protection against evil, preventing undead, demons, devils, and other evil extra-planar entities from entering its 20' radius. Such creatures are thus effectively unable to cross into area 8-7; those standing on the stairs (and in the torch's light) are also immune from attack by these creatures. The torch may be removed, albeit with serious consequences for any such thief. Removing the torch causes another identical torch to instantly appear in the hand of Anubis, so that the protective sunlight never disappears. The removed torch, however, equally instantly transforms into a cursed blacklight torch (see new magic items). Each time the torch of Anubis is removed, a new cursed blacklight torch is created.

A pack of greater shadows (see new monsters) under the control of Laocoon the shadow lord (8-15) inhabits the chamber. They are kept at bay by the sunlight emitted by the torch of Anubis, but move swiftly to attack those who step outside its light. Noise or combat in the chamber (such as combat against the shadows) will draw other minions of the shadow lord (see 8-15) on the following schedule after combat commences:

Round	New arrival(s)
2	6 greater shadows (from 8-9 and 8-14)
3	4 vorantes demons (from 8-20; see new monsters), and 3 skeletal wights (from 8-16)
4	Laocoon the Shadow Lord, plus 3 greater shadows (from 8-15)
5	4 vorantes demons (see new monsters) and a greater vorantes demon (from 8-21)

Inhabitants:

- 8 greater shadows (see new monsters): SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 5+1; HP 41, 39, 37, 36, 36, 35, 33, 31; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12. Special attacks: ability drain. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to cold, poison, paralysis, sleep, charm, and hold; turned as a wraith.

Treasure:

Staff of Anubis (see new magic items); sixteen kaliyani fangs (100 gp each to the troll thegn, 7-30); cursed blacklight torch (see new magic items)

8-9: Shadows

This former administrative chamber is crammed with debris and broken furniture. Movement is difficult before the ruined desks, chairs, racks, etc. are cleared out. For every turn searching the rubble, there is a 10% cumulative chance of finding a small item of value (each item may be found once):

D6	Item of value
1	A pouch with 23 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items)
2	A scroll with the 7 th -level magic user spell, limited wish
3	A feline ushabti figurine, made of solid silver (125 gp)
4	Two unbreakable bolts +2
5	A gold and platinum torc, inscribed with the name 'Paratus the Logothete' (775 gp) [see also SL12-23]
6	Key to secret door leading to 8-12

Three greater shadows inhabit the chamber, but they are likely to be encountered in area 8-8 first (see chart at that location).

Secret Door (west): The door is normal to find. It opens by sliding a panel of stone to the right.

Secret Door (east): The door is normal to find and opens either by a key (found by searching the debris) or by force.

Inhabitants:

1. 3 greater shadows (see new monsters): SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 5+1; HP 36, 34, 30; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12. Special attacks: ability drain. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to cold, poison, paralysis, sleep, charm, and hold; turned as a wraith.

8-10: Secret Closet

The corpse of a human adventurer is slumped on the floor, next to the dead body of a vorantes demon (see new monsters). The adventurer's legs are broken, but she still wears leather armor +2 and an ankh of protection (see new magic items) on a copper chain around her neck. Her light crossbow of speed lies by her body; its string is broken, and can only be replaced with spider silk from a giant spider or with hair from the mane of a unicorn. The adventurer wrote a short note on the wall before she died of blood loss; it reads "The shadows seem to be controlled by some evil intelligence, but we could not locate it. We pushed south but encountered the strange rollers. Then more shadows ... everywhere! Kallion ran to the east, but Jadon and the bearers fled north towards the light. I was overcome but managed to crawl to this closet. Perhaps I can make it to the light." GM Notes: the body of Kallion is in 8-15, while that of Jadon is in 8-67; the 'evil intelligence' is Laocoon (8-15); the rollers are vorantes demons (areas 8-18 to 8-21); the light could refer to Anubis's torch (8-7) or the Cave of Flowers (8-67).

Treasure:

Leather armor +2; damaged light crossbow of speed; ankh of protection (see new magic items).

8-11: The Landing of Flowers

Forty feet of stairs rise from the darkness of 8-8 towards a bright, well-lit landing. The walls of the stairwell are carved intricately in the form of flowers, vines, and creepers. The landing extends 15' into an enormous cavern (8-67); it is 60' above the cavern floor, and 30' below the ceiling.

The magically created sunlight in 8-67 prevents the shadows from area 8-8 and other undead from neighboring areas from entering the landing.

8-12: Secret Room

A decrepit wooden table stands against the north wall, while two wall-mounted racks on the south wall have collapsed in a pile of rotted wood. A dozen potions sit on the table, the products of an ancient but forgotten Archontean alchemist. Amid the debris of the fallen racks is the beekeeper's rod (see new magic items).

Secret Doors (east and west): The doors are easy (1 in 3) to find from this side. They open with the key (found in 8-9) or by force.

Treasure:

Beekeeper's rod (see new magic items); potions of healing x3; potions of plant control x4; and potions of sweetwater, speed, heroism, invulnerability, and levitation.

8-13: Table with Corpses

A large oak table, 10'x20' in size, occupies the center of this chamber. The desiccated corpses of two human men-at-arms lie under the table; their souls have joined the troupe of shadows that killed them. The corpses carry leather armor, long swords, and pouches with 77 and 43 sp respectively.

Secret Door (west): The door is normal to find. It opens either by force, or with a key that fits the cleverly-hidden lock (the key may be found in 8-9).

8-14: More Shadows

A series of stone busts built into the walls line the walls of this chamber. There are sixteen busts, each about 3' tall; each depicts a now-forgotten Archontean functionary. They are carved in high realism, showing wrinkles, warts, and scars. Tucked into the space between one bust and the wall is a scroll of protection from undead, a scroll of protection from acid, and a scroll of protection from devils.

Three more greater shadows (see new monsters) occupy the chamber, although they are likely to be first encountered in area 8-8 (q.v.).

Inhabitants:

1. 3 greater shadows (see new monsters): SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 5+1; HP 36, 34, 30; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12. Special attacks: ability drain. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to cold, poison, paralysis, sleep, charm, and hold; turned as a wraith.

Treasure:

A scroll of protection from undead; scroll of protection from acid; scroll of protection from devils.

8-15: Lair of Laocoon the Shadow Lord

Four thick (5'-diameter) columns support the ceiling of this oddly shaped hall. A huge oak throne sits against the south wall. The columns were painted cerulean blue in antiquity, and still bear splashes of color. A patch of living mosaic (see new magic items) is set in the east wall at eye level; it shows the landing of flowers (8-11) and part of the cave of flowers (8-67), and is filled with movement due to the bees that are active in 8-67.

A vile shadow lord (see new monsters) named Laocoon has taken this hall for his lair. Laocoon dominates the shadows that occupy the chambers around 8-8, and even is able to bend the vorantes (see new monsters) to his will (see 8-18 to 8-21). He typically sits in the throne, nearly invisible in the darkness, where his shadow minions whisper placatingly in his ears. Of course, Laocoon may also be encountered in 8-8 (q.v.). His treasure is piled against the wall next to the throne.

The body of a notorious adventurer, Kallion the White, lies amid the columns. Although the remains still bear his white-painted banded mail, Kallion's soul has joined the troupe of shadows that killed him. For more on Kallion, see 4-24, 4-58, and 8-10.

Inhabitants:

1. Laocoon the shadow lord (see new monsters): SZ M; AL CE; AC 4; MV 150'; 240' flying (Class A); HD 9+3; HP 65; #AT 2; Dmg 2-5/2-5. Special attacks: evil aura, 20' radius (regenerate 1 HP/rd, reduce turning by 2, drains STR of living); command lesser undead. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to cold, poison, paralysis, sleep, charm and hold; turned as vampires. Spell use: augury, cause critical wounds, detect magic, dispel magic, locate object, stone tell, symbol of pain.

1. 3 greater shadows (see new monsters): SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 5+1; HP 36, 35, 30; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12. Special attacks: ability drain. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to cold, poison, paralysis, sleep, charm, and hold; turned as a wraith.

Treasure:

On Kallion's body: white banded mail +2; the intelligent long sword Narses (see new magic items); a pair of silver armbands chased with gold (500 gp each); a gold ring with a ruby (1,500 gp); a purse with 275 sp and 439 gp; and the key to his lockbox in 4-24 (q.v.).

Laocoon's treasure: 4,199 gp; 3 pieces of chalcedony (50 gp each); 3 amethysts (100 gp each); and 3 black pearls (500 gp each).

8-16: Sparring Hall

The walls of this former sparring hall are lined with metal clips and wooden racks designed to hold all manner of weapons. Only a few weapons remain, and all are mundane: 2 halberds, 2 bill-guisarmes, a footman's flail, and a mace. In the center of the chamber is a sand-filled pit; the pit is 10'x20' and 5' deep. The sand is tightly packed, such that its level is now 2" below the stone of the main floor. Buried in the sand are two skeletons, one wearing a corroded but still usable suit of imperial field plate (see Arden Vul items) while the other possesses a philter of beauty and clutches a dagger of venom. It takes 5-8 turns of digging to find these items.

Three skeletal wights (see new monsters) occupy this hall, although they are likely to be encountered in 8-8 (q.v.).

Inhabitants:

1. 3 skeletal wights (see new monsters): SZ M; AL CE; AC 3; MV 120'; HD 5+1; HP 35, 33, 32; #AT 1; Dmg 3-9. Special attacks: energy drain. Special defenses: successful energy drain heals 3-9 HP; +1 or better weapons to hit; edged weapons do ½ damage; immune to sleep, charm, hold, poison, paralyzation and cold; turned as ghosts.

Treasure:

A suit of imperial field plate (see Arden Vul items); philter of beauty; dagger of venom.

8-17: Chamber of Several Uses

This utilitarian chamber is largely undecorated, although flecks of sky-blue paint remain on the wall. To the south is a well, 4' in diameter and rising 4' from the floor. It sinks 60' to a large waterfilled cavern. The rusted winch mechanism for the well is, however, broken.

To the north is a set of 2"-tall paving stones arranged in a 6'-diameter ring. Inset into the floor next to the ring is a rectangle 48" long by 8" tall; the rectangle is divided into six interior compartments, each 8" square. Together these elements form a Thothian teleportation ring (see new magic items). To activate the ring, one must place six colored glass activation squares into the inset according to a sequence that matches the 'address' of the ring to which one wishes to travel. Once the squares are placed, a brief shimmer of energy is visible over the ring. At this point the user has 1 round to collect the squares and enter the ring, after which anyone in the ring is teleported without error to address indicated by that sequence of squares. If the glass activation squares are not collected and/or if the travelers do not possess a second set of them, they are likely to be stranded in the location to which they have just teleported. The address of this ring is as follows: RE-BK-BL-GR-YE-WH (see new magic items for explanation). None of the glass activation squares necessary to operate the circle are present.

8-18: Audience Hall

A 2'-tall, semi-circular dais made of blue granite abuts the east wall. On top of the dais is a large stone throne of the same blue stone. The rest of the chamber is strangely bare of decorations.

Four vorantes demons (see new monsters) roll about in this chamber, looking for prey. The vorantes demons are quick to join combat in 8-8 (q.v.).

A hidden compartment (detected as a secret door) in the throne contains a piece of folded oilskin cloth, tied up with string and sealed with red wax (the seal is a hoplite helmet with the words 'Valens proedros' around it). Inside the cloth are Valens's tokens of office, a gold signet ring (550 gp), a platinum scepter (1,250 gp), and a set of silver writing tools (125 gp).

Inhabitants:

1. 4 vorantes demons (see new monsters): SZ S; AL CE; AC 4; MV 120'; HD 4; HP 28, 26, 24, 21; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8; MR 10%.

Special attacks: gnaw. Special defenses: take 1 less HP damage per die versus fire and cold. Special: demonic telepathy; can see in absolute darkness.

Treasure:

A gold signet ring (550 gp), a platinum scepter (1,250 gp), and a set of silver writing tools (125 gp).

8-19: Decayed Lounge

Formerly a sumptuous-appointed lounge, this chamber is now largely filled with debris. A beautiful silk rug (10'x20') depicting various legendary monsters (dragons, sea serpents, kraken, etc.) occupies the center of the chamber (575 gp, but heavy). The rotted remnants of a half dozen leather chairs have been pushed against the walls, amid other bits of wood, leather, and cloth. Three bronze side tables (75 gp each) are buried among the debris. A tall, heavy, but empty bookcase stands in front of a 2'-diameter hole located near the ceiling of the southwest corner.

Four vorantes demons and a greater vorantes demon (see new monsters) occupy the chamber.

The tunnel to the south is only 2' in diameter where it enters this chamber; it gradually grows larger in diameter as it descends to the south. The vorantes demons are unaware of the hole, and the kaliyani (8-22) deemed it a tactically dangerous dead end.

Inhabitants:

1. 4 vorantes demons (see new monsters): SZ S; AL CE; AC 4; MV 120'; HD 4; HP 28, 26, 24, 21; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8; MR 10%. Special attacks: gnaw. Special defenses: take 1 less HP damage per die versus fire and cold. Special: demonic telepathy; can see in absolute darkness.
2. 1 greater vorantes demon (see new monsters): SZ M; AL CE; AC 2; MV 120'; HD 7+3; HP 47; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12; MR 25%. Special attacks: gnaw. Special defenses: immune to fire and cold. Special: demonic telepathy; can see in absolute darkness.

8-20: Former Barracks

The remains of four wooden bunkbeds rest against the north wall of this chamber. The four vorantes demons (see new monsters) that occupy the chamber are busily devouring the (somewhat rancid) corpses of two human adventurers.

Inhabitants:

1. 4 vorantes demons (see new monsters): SZ S; AL CE; AC 4; MV 120'; HD 4; HP 28, 26, 24, 21; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8; MR 10%. Special attacks: gnaw. Special defenses: take 1 less HP damage per die versus fire and cold. Special: demonic telepathy; can see in absolute darkness.

Treasure:

One of the corpses still bears a scroll with the cleric spells stone tell and heal. The other bears a morning star +1 and a 4"-tall, golden votive statuette of Besa, the Archontean goddess of pleasure (610 gp). A torn and tattered (but still legible) copy of the Twelve Labors of Arden lies under one of the bunkbeds (see Arden Vul Books).

8-21: Bedroom

Unlike neighboring rooms, this chamber features plastered walls, on top of which are bright frescoes showing an Archontean official (Valens the proedros) dispensing justice, commanding laborers, and reclining in a throne-like chair (that looks much like the one in 8-18). The plaster on the west wall conceals the broken passage that originally led to area 8-25. The corridor fragment is instantly recognizable as from a different era of construction; its walls are pebbled and oily, and throw off a very dim sense of evil (a product of its heqeti origins).

The main chamber is marked by the remains of a once grand four-poster bed, now collapsed in the southwest corner. A teak writing desk (175 gp) on the north wall is intact; the desk is carved with exotic, non-Archontean figures (it comes from the Khumus people to the west).

Four vorantes demons and a greater vorantes demon (see new monsters) occupy this chamber, although they may be first encountered in 8-8 (q.v.).

Inhabitants:

1. 4 vorantes demons (see new monsters): SZ S; AL CE; AC 4; MV 120'; HD 4; HP 28, 26, 24, 21; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8; MR 10%. Special attacks: gnaw. Special defenses: take 1 less HP damage per die versus fire and cold. Special: demonic telepathy; can see in absolute darkness.
2. 1 greater vorantes demon (see new monsters): SZ M; AL CE; AC 2; MV 120'; HD 7+3; HP 44; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12; MR 25%. Special attacks: gnaw. Special defenses: immune to fire and cold. Special: demonic telepathy; can see in absolute darkness.

Treasure:

The writing desk holds a jade ink well (225 gp), a crystal-encrusted golden statuette of a large-bellied, smiling woman (375 gp), and, stuck to the underside of the single drawer, a parchment bifolium entitled 'The Honey Project' (see Arden Vul books).

8-22: Crossroads Cave

This large, 25'-tall cave sits at the nexus of several tunnels linking various levels of Arden Vul. Numerous stalactites and stalagmites dot the cavern. A ranger will have little difficulty in noticing the signs of recent traffic between 8-23 and 8-24; the tracks suggest a six-legged creature.

To the west of the cavern is a ledge rising some 20' above the floor. Hidden behind a rock fall is the tunnel to 8-25. The tunnel mouth should be considered as a concealed door.

A second ledge, some 15' above the floor, occupies the niche on the north wall. Three kaliyani scouts wait on the ledge. They serve as guardians for the expedition that rose from 9-57 to 8-23, crossed the chasm between 8-24 and 7-34, and then ascended to 5-125.

The scouts have drunk potions of invisibility and will exercise caution when confronting any intruders. Indeed, if they are obviously outmatched, one of the scouts slips down the tunnel at 8-23 to warn the kaliyani at 9-57, a second attempts to slip past the PCs and swarm up the ropes at 8-24 to alert its fellows at 5-125, and the third waits quietly, observing and taking careful notes of intruders strengths and capabilities. If intruders appear weak or foolish, however, the scouts attack from their perch.

Concealed Door (west): The tunnel to the west is concealed behind a rock fall. The tunnel can be detected normally; it takes 2-4 turns to clear the opening.

Inhabitants:

1. 3 invisible, 5th-level kaliyani scouts (see new monsters), as 5th-level thieves: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 150' on six legs, 60' upright; HD 6; HP 43, 41, 38, 36; #AT 2; Dmg 3-8/3-8 (scimitars) or 2-7/2-7 (javelins). Special defenses: immune to poison and mind-affecting spells. Special: infravision; DEX 16. Thief skills: PP 50%, OL 47%, F/RT 40%, MS 40%, HS 31%, HN 20%, CW 90%, RL 25%. Possessions: twin serrated scimitars; six javelins; a set of silver rings, worked glass and minor gemstones, and repurposed coins worth 200 gp. One has a vial of poison; another has a minor heqeti slime (see new monsters) in a breakable flask; and one has a solid gold ouroboros bracelet (175 gp). All three have already drunk potions of invisibility.
2. 1 pale lavender, quicksilver-like heqeti slime (see new monsters), in a flask held by one of the kaliyani scouts: SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 5' creeping; HD 2; HP 13; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6; MR 15%. Special attacks: flesh-eating for 4-7 rounds; corrosive to metal, leather, and wood. Special defenses: healed by electricity or lasers; slowed by cold.

8-23: Tunnel Down to Level 9 (9-57)

A narrow tunnel twists downward here before opening onto the floor of the Great Chasm (9-57). A ranger or other tracker will easily notice the signs of the passage of several six-legged creatures (kaliyani).

8-24: Chasm Access and Route to 7-34

A wide ledge provides access to the Great Chasm here. Three ropes studded with loops and knots are set into the chasm wall next to the ledge; the ropes lead upward steeply to area 7-34. The kaliyani exploring party now at 5-125 installed the ropes after they made their way from 9-57 to 8-23.

8-25: Heqeti Transport Hall, with Stairs Up to 6-106

The heqeti (see new monsters) built this hall as a connection site between their (now-destroyed) halls on Level 8 and their shrine on Level 6 (i.e., 6-104, 6-106). With the resurgence of the heqeti, and their re-occupation of the shrine at 6-104, this hall has also been partially restored. The walls have been coated with fresh slime, the passage to the pukel-mander (8-26) was re-opened, and an effort has been made to bring the teleport wells back into operation.

A statue of a heqeti warrior thrusting with a spear stands by the west wall, partly concealing the secret door to 8-26. The statue is old and very worn, and carved out of the local granite. Its eyes are empty sockets; should a gem of 500 gp (or greater) value be placed in either socket, the statue will partially animate, piping out a query in heqeti. Those who understand that language have an opportunity to ask three questions of the statue, which responds truthfully to the best of its knowledge (which, sadly, is thousands of years out of date).

The niches to the north contain heqeti teleport wells. Each well takes the form of a 7'-diameter circle of stone rising 3' above the floor. Both wells appear to contain nothing but inky blackness; objects tossed into either make no sound. Neither well is operative at the moment, however, a fact that is currently proving vexing to the heqeti. Those jumping into either well are instantly vaporized.

Currently a small party of heqeti are stationed here, puzzling over their failure to get the teleport wells to operate correctly. One of their number is stationed at the mouth of the tunnel to 8-22; the vigilance of this guard makes it unlikely that the heqeti will be surprised from this direction.

The stairs climb steeply in a tight spiral to 6-106.

A natural tunnel to 8-22 departs from the western corridor, but it is concealed behind the rockfall that blocks the corridor.

Secret Doors (west): The 4'-wide door is normal to find. It hangs on a horizontal pin; one needs merely push on the upper or lower panel to swing the door open. Within the tunnel leading to 8-26 is a second secret door, which is clearly visible from this side; the second secret door opens only by force or to a simple pulling motion by those of chaotic evil alignment.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 heqeti weaver (see new monsters), as a 7th/7th-level magic user/cleric of Kauket: SZ M; AL CE; AC 3; MV 120', 90' swimming; HD 7; HP 34; #AT 1; Dmg 5-10 (footman's mace +2). Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice. Possessions: amulet of natural armor +2 (see new magic items); staff of healing (12 charges); copper-headed footman's mace +2; two glass spheres of arcane assistance (one of arcane warding, one of protection) (see new magic items); potion of gaseous form. Magic user spells: enlarge, jump, magic missile, shield; continual light, levitate, ray of enfeeblement; fireball, protection from normal missiles; polymorph other. Cleric spells: bles, command (x2), create water, cure light wounds; chant, hold person (x2), resist fire, silence 15' radius; animate dead, blindness; sticks to snakes.
2. 6 heqeti hoppers (see new monsters), as 5th-level fighters: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60', 150' swimming; HD 5; HP 35, 34, 33, 30, 29; #AT 2; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 1-6 (bite). Special attacks: hop; +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice.

8-26: Pukel-mander

One of the loathsome heqeti pukel-manders (see new magic items) crouches here, on a ledge overlooking the Great Chasm. Over a dozen chasm cephalopod husks dot the floor at the thing's feet.

Secret Doors (northeast): The door is normal to locate, but opens only to those who are chaotic evil in alignment (for whom it pushes aside easily) or by force. A second, 4'-wide, secret door lies at the end of the tunnel leading to 8-25. This door is easy to locate; as it hangs on a horizontal pin, it opens by pushing on either the upper or lower half of the door.

8-27: Spur of the Great Chasm

About 500 years ago, erosion along the wall of the Great Chasm began to produce this side spur. Indeed, it continues to slowly encroach on the worked areas to the east. The spur is about 100' tall; Level 8 bisects it at about its midpoint (i.e., 50' above the floor of the spur). Bits of rope attached to spikes hammered into both landings hang into the spur. At the bottom of the chasm are several chasm cephalopod husks as well as a smashed and inoperable basic exploration automaton from Kerbog Khan's workshop (see new monsters). Those investigating the floor of the spur provoke two additional chances for random encounters (see 8-2 for possible encounters).

Treasure:

The remains of the automaton could be delivered to Kerbog Khan (SL12-16) in return for favors. Among the debris are three chrysoprase gems (50 gp each) that the automaton had located.

8-28: Northern Landing

The northern side of the chasm spur is nondescript save for eight spikes hammered into the lip of the chasm. Numerous lengths of rope hang from the spikes.

8-29: Transitional Hall

This empty chamber displays a marked variation in construction. The eastern, western and southern walls are typical of Archontean construction: neatly trimmed granite. The northern third of the floor and the north wall, however, are of rudishva vintage: octagonal plaques of solid white marble closely fit together, and with rounded joints between floor and walls. In the center of the northern wall is a rudishva iris door that spirals open only when a sky blue or better plastic rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items) is presented.

Secret Door (east): This door is difficult to locate (1 in 8). It opens by inserting a 1"-diameter object into a small hole in the ceiling; the hole is perfectly sized for a sun lance of a sun-scarred knight (see new monsters).

8-30: Face of Bastet

An enormous alabaster screen carved in the form of an open cat's mouth serves as a sign that one is approaching the domain of Bastet. The screen is thick (5') and tall (15'), and is carved to show a cat with alert ears, open eyes, bared fangs, and a slightly extended tongue. The face is coated with fresh paint: the 'fur' is black, the eyes are yellow, the teeth are white, and the tongue is pink. One traverses the screen by climbing up a slight incline on the cat's tongue and then entering the corridor to the north.

There are always 2-5 cats of various shapes and sizes climbing on and around the face of Bastet. One of these felines will always be a large golden-furred tabby that purrs loudly and near-constantly; it is, in fact, a luck eater. The priestesses know of the luck eater and tolerate its presence here as a sign of Bastet's mysterious ways.

Although it detects of magic, the stone screen is inert except in two circumstances. First, if Oubaste, the high priestess of Bastet (8-37), is slain, then the cat's fangs will slam down on the person who delivered the killing blow when next that person traverses the mouth, inflicting 6-36 HP damage. The mouth remains shut, blocking traffic between 8-28 and 8-38. Only when a new high priestess is installed will the mouth open again. Second, the passage of any creature who is not primarily chaotic in alignment (i.e., all save those of alignments CE, CN and CG) through the mouth causes a loud caterwauling sound to echo throughout the region. This sound serves to alert the priestesses of the arrival of potential trouble.

Set into the floor of the niche to the west of the screen is a 5'-diameter circle of rose quartz; this is the destination for the teleporter at 8-7A.

Inhabitants:

- 1 luck eater: SZ S; AL N; AC 7; MV 150'; HD 4; HP 26; #AT 0; Dmg 0. Special attacks: surprise 1-4 in 6; purr effects 30' radius (effect varies).
- 1-4 wild cats (from 3-181): SZ S; AL N; AC 5; MV 180'; HD 1; HP 5, 3, 3, 2; #AT 3; Dmg 1-2/1-2/1-2. Special attacks: rear claw rakes; surprise 3 in 6. Special defenses: only surprised 1 in 6

8-31: Acolytes of Bastet

Twelve acolytes of Bastet occupy this unusual chamber.

A 10'-diameter disk of pure silver is attached to the center of the ceiling (500 gp). The chamber is flooded with pure moonlight thanks to the nighteyes of Bastet (see new spells) spell that has been cast on the silver disk.

Twelve piles of soft linen and wool abut the walls of the chamber. In the center is a 10'x10' pool of cool, clean water. On the west wall is a huge fresco of a black cat's head. Studding the north, south and east walls are a score of wooden posts set horizontally into the stone; these allow the acolytes' semi-tame pet cats (as well as small maubaste) to jump about and climb. Each acolyte's 'nest' contains 3-60 gp and 1-3 fancy gems (100 gp each).

A ledge above the door is empty, but bears a note that reads, in Mithric, "Rex, faithful guardian and friend to cats." It refers to Rex, the whippet companion of Gennadius (see 3-158 and 8-41). The mummified body of Rex rested on this ledge for several centuries until it was stolen and traded to Reith (6-50). The acolytes would be grateful to anyone who returns their mascot.

If the temple has not been alerted to the presence of interlopers, then six of the acolytes are present here, lounging about and bathing; the other six are present in 8-38. If the temple has been alerted to a threat, then all twelve acolytes are present in 8-38.

Acolytes are human females and 4th- or 5th-level clerics. Each wears a silver moon of Bastet (see new magic items) on a silver chain around her neck; these items allow acolytes to transform into small maubaste (see new monsters).

Inhabitants:

1. 6 acolytes, 4th-level female Thorcin clerics of Bastet. In human form: SZ M; AL CN; AC 7; MV 120'; HD 4; HP 30, 30, 28, 28, 26, 25; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (jo-stick). Abilities: STR 11, INT 9, WIS 15, DEX 16, CON 11, CHA 16. Possessions: a black silk robe; an earring of protection +1 (see new magic items); a moon of Bastet (see new magic items); and a polished black jo-stick. Prepared spells: command, cure light wounds, fear, protection from evil, sanctuary; hold person, silence 15' radius, speak with animals. In maubaste form: SZ S; AL CN; AC 3; MV 150'; HD 4; HP as above; #AT 3 or 5; Dmg 1-3/1-3/2-7, plus 1-3/1-3; MR 20%.

2. 6 acolytes, 5th-level female Archontean clerics of Bastet. In human form: SZ MS; AL CN; AC 7; MV 120'; HD 5; HP 39, 39, 36, 34, 33, 30; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (jo-stick). Abilities: STR 11, INT 9, WIS 15, DEX 16, CON 11, CHA 16. Possessions: a black silk robe; an earring of protection +1 (see new magic items); a moon of Bastet (see new magic items); and a polished black jo-stick. Prepared spells: command, cure light wounds, fear, protection from evil, sanctuary; augury, chant, hold person, silence 15' radius, speak with animals; dispel magic or create food and water (3 have the former, 3 the latter). In maubaste form: SZ S; AL CN; AC 3; MV 150'; HD 5; HP as above; #AT 3 or 5; Dmg 1-3/1-3/2-7, plus 1-3/1-3; MR 20%.

3. 7 semi-tame domestic cats: SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 150'; HD 1-5 HP; HP 5, 4, 4, 3, 3, 2, 2; #AT 2; Dmg 1-2/1. Special attacks: rear claw rakes; surprise 3 in 6. Special defenses: only surprised 1 in 6.

Treasure:

12 'nests', each with 3-60 gp and 1-3 fancy gems (100 gp each)

8-32: Priestesses of Bastet

Four priestesses of Bastet dwell in this chamber. Should the temple be alerted to a threat, the chamber is empty; all four priestesses will be found in 8-38. If the temple has not been alerted, two priestesses may be found here. Typically the priestesses are found in human form in their chamber; each is an attractive, black-haired woman. The priestesses swiftly transform into medium maubaste if the circumstances require (see new monsters).

A 10'-diameter disk of pure silver (500 gp) is attached to the center of the ceiling. On it has been cast nighteyes of Bastet (see new spells); this spell causes the entire chamber to be flooded with pure moonlight.

Two bunkbeds occupy the east wall; the beds are appointed with black silk sheets (four sets of sheets, 20 gp each). A half-dozen goats hang from hooks along the north wall. A wooden table with five chairs sits in the center of the chamber, while a large wine rack with 30 bottles of valuable red wine (25-125 gp per bottle) sits against the south wall. A wardrobe by the door holds 20 black silk robes, each with a silver halfmoon on the chest and a silver cat's head on the back (25 gp each). A treasure chest sits between the two bunkbeds; it is locked, and each priestess holds a key.

Inhabitants:

1. Atet, Hent, Ipwet, and Kiya, each a priestess of Bastet and a 7th-level female Archontean cleric of Bastet. In human form: SZ M; AL CN; AC 6; MV 120'; HD 7; HP 53, 52, 49, 47; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (jo-stick +1). Abilities: STR 11, INT 9, WIS 16, DEX 16, CON 11, CHA 16. Possessions: a black silk robe; an earring of protection +2 (see new magic items); a moon of Bastet (see new magic items); and a polished black jo-stick +1. Prepared spells: command, cure light wounds, fear, protection from evil, sanctuary; augury, chant, hold person, silence 15' radius, speak with animals; dispel magic, prayer; cure serious wounds. In medium maubaste form: SZ M; AL CN; AC 4; MV 150'; HD 7; HP as above; #AT 3 or 5; Dmg 1-4/1-4/2-9, plus 1-4/1-4; MR 30%.

Treasure:

4 sets of black silk sheets (20 gp each); 30 bottles of red wine (25-125 gp per bottle); 20 black silk robes (25 gp each).

In the treasure chest: 4,352 ancient silver pennies and 2,411 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items for coins); 25 carnelians (50 gp), 10 pieces of coral (100 gp each), 5 tourmalines (100 gp), 4 aquamarines (500 gp), and 1 jacinth (1,000 gp).

8-33: Storage Chamber, with Hole up to 6-20

The cult of Bastet stores its foodstuffs and other equipment in this plain chamber. Among the goods are three barrels of dried biscuits, a box of dried meat, two boxes of dried fruit, a large sack of salt, and a sack with twelve balls made of red rubber, each 2" in diameter. In addition, the corpses of several animals are curing on hooks set into the ceiling; these include a dozen rats threaded onto three strings, a small boar, two dogs, a wolverine, and a goat. The corpse of a halfling hangs curing as well.

A hole in the ceiling leads up 400' via several ledges and landings to area 6-20. There are no handholds or footholds between the ledges and landings. Climbing up or down the entire length requires five successful climb walls checks. Oubaste (8-37) knows of the hole and of the occasional visits of Thegan White-Mane (6-19); she tolerates his coming and going so long as he brings the occasional bag, box, or barrel of supplies.

Secret Door (south): The door is difficult to locate (1 in 8). It takes the form of a 6'-wide, 3'-tall sliding panel of stone near the ceiling of the chamber. Once found it is easy to open by sliding the panel to the east.

8-34: Secret Staircase up to 3-41A

A very steep staircase climbs many hundreds of feet via numerous switchbacks before reaching the tomb of Menas the Logothete (3-41A); its upper reaches are coated with thin layer of fine sand. A pair of stone marbles rest on the penultimate stair from the bottom; their origin is a mystery. If 3-41A has never been accessed before, then opening the doors from this side causes an avalanche of sand to pour out from 3-41A and down the staircase. The force of the sand trap is likely to knock unwitting PCs down the stairs, causing 8-48 damage (half if a save versus petrification is made). At that point, the upper 40' of the staircase will be buried under sand, and area 3-41A will only be accessible after substantial digging.

Secret Door (north): The secret door on the north wall is easy to locate from this side (1 in 4). It opens by sliding a panel to the east.

8-35: Rudishva Hall, with Stairs Up to 5-63

This chamber is obviously of rudishva construction, with its sheathing of octagonal white plates of marble and lack of 90-degree angles. It is dominated by the stairs which rise some 1,000' through many landings and turns to Level 5 (area 5-63). Some garish graffiti, in huge, red-painted letters, mars the west wall: it reads (in Archontean) 'to the Knights,' with an arrow pointing north. A second, smaller hand has annotated the earlier graffiti in the same tongue with the word 'vampires.' Both doors are rudishva iris doors, and may only be opened when a sky blue or better plastic rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items) is presented.

GM Note: The graffiti refers to the fact that the main route to the Sun-Scarred Knights (Sub-Level 10A) may be found by heading north from this chamber

8-36: Mummification Chamber

A strong smell of cinnamon and juniper greets anyone who listens at this door.

The chamber is devoted to mummifying deceased members of the cult of Bastet. Two large stone tables stand in the center of the room; one has a human female in process of mummification, the other has two ordinary cats in early stages of mummification. Frescoes in bright paint line the walls: these show the process of mummification, from corpse to beautifully arranged mummy. Some of the subjects are human women, others are cats.

The east wall is lined with alabaster jars containing the materials used in the process: wax, juniper berries, scented unguents and oils, salt, and sawdust. A large box on the north wall contains linen strips. Scattered around the tables are a half-dozen copper knives, hooks, and other implements.

8-37: Chamber of Oubaste, the High Priestess of Bastet

Oubaste, the high priestess of Bastet, resides here. The ceiling is 20' tall, and three enormous alabaster bas-reliefs of cat faces occupy the west, north and east walls. The alabaster tongues of these cats are extended into the center of the room, where they connect to an elevated platform (10' above the floor).

Above the interlocked tongues and attached to the ceiling is another 10'-diameter disk of pure silver (500 gp). The cult has cast nighteyes of Bastet (see new spells) on the disk, causing it to flood the chamber with pure moonlight.

Oubaste's bed is located on the raised platform; it is comprised of numerous cushions and black silk sheets (20 gp). A silk rope ladder is coiled atop the platform. Her personal treasure is located in a locked iron box set inside the open mouth of the bas-relief on the west wall. In human form she appears as a beautiful woman with brown eyes, brown skin and waist-length, raven black hair. Oubaste shares her chamber and bed with her second-in-command, Juliana, a human magic user.

An ebony writing desk (450 gp) stands against the north wall (below the tongue).

There is only a 15% chance that Oubaste and Juliana are present; otherwise they are found in 8-38. Juliana is besotted with Oubaste, and has been begging her to grant her the right to transform into a maubaste; Oubaste has not yet agreed, preferring to observe and gauge Juliana's devotion to Bastet for a while.

Inhabitants:

1. Oubaste, high priestess, and 9th-level female Archontean cleric of Bastet. In human form: SZ M; AL CN; AC 4; MV 120'; HD 9; HP 62; #AT 1; Dmg 4-9 (sistrum of Bastet). Abilities: STR 12, INT 15, WIS 17, DEX 17, CON 11, CHA 18. Possessions: a low-cut black silk robe; an earring of protection +3 (see new magic items); a moon of Bastet (see new magic items); a rod of absorption (31 spell levels remaining); and a sistrum of Bastet (see new magic items). She wears a silver chain around her ankle; the small key to her personal treasure chest is threaded onto the chain. Spells: bless, command, detect magic, protection from evil, fear, sanctuary; augury, detect charm, hold person, know alignment, resist fire, silence 15' radius; nighteyes of Bastet (see new spells), blindness, dispel magic, glyph of warding; cure serious wounds, divination; flame strike. In large maubaste form: SZ L; AL CN; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 9; HP as above; #AT 3 or 5; Dmg 1-6/1-6/2-11, plus 2-5/2-5; MR 40%.
2. Juliana, 8th-level female Archontean magic user: SZ M; AL CN; AC 4; MV 120'; HD 8; HP 24; #AT 1; Dmg 2-5 (dagger +1). Abilities: STR 10, INT 17, WIS 14, DEX 11, CON 9, CHA 17. Possessions: a diaphanous tunic of yellow silk (50 gp); wand of lightning (20 charges); bracers of defense (AC 4); dagger +1; scroll with fear, fumble and monster summoning I; a platinum and emerald necklace (given to her by Oubaste), worth 5,500 gp. Memorized spells: charm person, comprehend languages, hold portal, magic missile; continual light, darkness 15' radius, web; dispel magic, fireball, haste; confusion, dimension door.

Treasure:

Oubaste's personal treasure: 3 doses of incense of attraction (see new magic items); 1,391 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items); 569 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items); a pair of heavy gold bracelets, each set with a single emerald (1,500 gp each); a jade necklace set with jet (4,500 gp); a jade torc, also set with jet (2,250 gp); a dose of varumani knock-out juice (see Arden Vul items); and a statuette of feline friendship (see new magic items).

Juliana's Spell Book (inside the drawer of the writing desk): Burning hands, charm person, comprehend languages, dancing lights, detect magic, enlarge, feather fall, floating disk, hold portal, identify, light, magic missile, protection from good, sleep, spider climb; continual light, darkness 15' radius, detect invisibility, ESP, knock, levitate, mirror image, ray of enfeeblement, rope trick, scare, web; blink, dispel magic, fireball, gust of wind, haste, hold person, monster summoning I, slow; confusion, dimension door, fear, fumble, minor globe of invulnerability, remove curse; animate dead, cloudkill.

8-38: Outer Temple of Bastet

This enormous, 25'-tall chamber serves as the entranceway to the shrine proper. Four 10'-diameter silver disks (500 gp each) hang from the ceiling; with nighteyes of Bastet (see new spells) cast on them, they flood the area with pure moonlight. A landing runs across the east end. Stairs lead down into a pool of placid water, from which half-columns rise in two rows to a height 10' above the water. At the west end is the enormous alabaster inner temple (8-39), fronted by another landing and steps into the pool. A narrow, 6"-wide ledge runs along the north and south walls at a level 15' above the floor. Also on the north and south walls, above the water line, are four 15'-tall niches, each holding a 12'-tall basalt statue of Bastet in cat-headed human form. Each statue wears a gold earring set with a sapphire (1,000 gp each). The statues themselves could be sold for 5,000 gp each to an appropriate statue merchant.

The half-pillars are 5' in diameter and rise 10' above the water. In maubaste form, the priestesses can leap easily from pillar to pillar, and will use this tactic if combat breaks out in the temple.

The tunnels leading to 8-42 and 8-50 are narrow (4' diameter) and placed 15' above the water line.

High Priestess Oubaste (8-37) has cast hallow (see new spells) in the outer temple; this effect means that the area is sanctified for those of chaotic neutral alignment (+2 to all rolls for those of alignment CN; -2 to all rolls for all others).

The eastern wall of the inner temple (8-39) offers a commanding sight to those in outer temple. The wall is 25' tall and made of alabaster; eighteen niches (each 3' tall and 2' wide) are carved into the facade. The niches are arranged such that there are nine niches on each side of the entrance to 8-39, in three tiers (at 5', 11', and 17' above the floor). All but one of the niches contain a 3'-tall statuette of a cat in various poses: crouching, batting with a paw, hissing, sleeping, curled with a kitten, etc. Sixteen of the statuettes are painted alabaster, but two are different. The niche on the lowest register to the left of the opening to 8-39 is empty, while its counterpart to the right of the entrance contains a solid gold statuette of Bastet (see new magic items). The empty niche used to contain a second golden statuette of Bastet, but it was stolen years ago and may currently be found in area 3-215. Returning the missing statuette wins the friendship of the priesthood.

The middle statuette in the right upper register is also significant. It is of a classically posed cat, sitting on its haunches. Unlike all the others, it is partly attached to the floor via a spring mechanism. Pulling it forward serves to unlock and open the secret doors on the west wall of 8-39 (leading to 8-40).

In addition to the priesthood, the temple is regularly visited by two dozen feral cats who use the tunnels to 8-42 and 8-50 to come and go from their lairs.

If the temple is entered by surprise, or by those allied with the cult of Bastet, PCs will find half the acolytes and priestesses (see 8-31 and 8-32) lounging about, swimming, talking, and performing rituals in the inner temple. On such occasions, Oubaste and Juliana (8-37) are also present 85% of the time.

If the temple has been alerted, or the cult has reason to believe that enemies are near, then all the members of the cult (twelve acolytes, four priestesses, Oubaste and Juliana) will be present. In such cases, eight of the acolytes will be standing in human form on the half-pillars, while the four priestesses crouch next to the basalt statues of Bastet in the north and south niches; the remaining four acolytes, plus Oubaste and Juliana, stand before the entrance to 8-39. If combat ensues, the acolytes are quick to transform into maubaste and attempt to knock foes into the water. The priestesses open with spells before changing into maubaste form and leaping across the pillars to confront foes. Oubaste and Juliana maintain spell use for as long as necessary before Oubaste also transforms into a maubaste.

Inhabitants:

1. Oubaste, the high priestess (85%): see stats at 8-37
2. Juliana (85%): see stats at 8-37
3. 2 (50%) or 4 (50%) of the priestesses: see stats at 8-32.
4. 6 (50%) or 12 (50%) of the acolytes; see stats at 8-31.
5. 12 domestic cats: SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 150'; HD 1-5 HP; HP 5(x3), 4(x3), 3(x3), 2(x3); #AT 2; Dmg 1-2/1. Special attacks: rear claw rakes; surprise 3 in 6. Special defenses: only surprised 1 in 6.

8-39: Inner Temple

The inner temple takes the form of an enclosed cella some 30' square. Its walls, floor and ceiling are enormous slabs of alabaster. The external facade of the east wall of the cella is set with niches (see description at 8-38). The dominant feature of the cella is the colossal statue of Bastet that stands against the west wall. Six iron torch brackets set into the floor provide a dramatic avenue towards the statue. In addition, a basalt stone altar table stands at Bastet's feet; typically incense is burning on the altar and small offerings (rats, mushrooms, locks of hair) are scattered about it. Three open basalt chests line the north wall. The walls are empty of decoration save for the south wall, on which is painted an enormous cat's eye.

Statue of Bastet: The 20'-tall statue is formed of black basalt, and takes the form of a standing, cat-headed woman. Bastet cradles her sistrum in her left hand and points outwards with her right. She wears a modest gold hoop earring in one ear. The statue is carved such that Bastet is trampling a large serpent under her feet.

Basalt Chests: The three chests contain the accumulated wealth of the cult, mostly in the form of offerings made to Bastet in antiquity (but including some of more recent vintage). One chest contains 31,738 ancient copper bits (see Arden Vul items). The second has 11,349 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items) mixed with 3,577 sp. The third contains 6,721 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items) and 2,811 gp.

Cat's Eye: The eye painted on the south wall is enchanted. It initially appears as a narrowed eye with yellow iris and black, vertical pupil. The pupil moves to follow any visitor to the inner temple who is not wearing one of the moons of Bastet (see new magic items). Should the cult statue be molested or any of the temple treasure be stolen, Bastet will curse the malefactor. The curse takes the form of a permanent eye blazoned on the victim's forehead; in addition to this unusual ornament, the cursed person(s) will be considered inimical to all felines. Larger felines may attack, while smaller species will avoid the malefactor and hiss appropriately.

Secret Doors: The two doors are easy to locate (1 in 4), but impossible to open unless the trigger is known. The trigger is the seated cat statuette in the middle of the upper right register on the outer wall of the inner temple (see description at 8-38). If the statuette is pulled forward, both secret doors open instantly. It is easy, of course, for a maubaste to climb to this statuette and trigger the doors.

Treasure:

See temple treasury contents above.

8-40: Tomb of the Founder

The sarcophagus of Berenib dominates this roughly-carved, 8'-tall, granite chamber. The walls are painted with simplistic images of cats being worshipped by stick-figure-like humans.

Sarcophagus: Formed of shaped bluestone, the sarcophagus is carved on all sides. The short sides show figures of a seated Bastet, while the long sides offer the following inscription in Mithric: "Berenib, high priestess, who refused to bow to the archon // and who led the children of Bastet to a new home." The lid contains an image of a woman with cat ears, dressed in a simple tunic. The incised image on the lid is picked out by gold fill (100 gp).

Within the sarcophagus is Berenib, now a mummy, albeit one who appears more as a mummified giant cat than as a human. She only confronts intruders if her sarcophagus is violated. Berenib cannot be turned while in the environs of the shrine of Bastet.

GM Note: As the conflicts between Sortians and Theosophs began to accelerate, the archon, Alcibiades the Hunter (ruled 1717-1734 AEP), imperiously commanded that all the priesthoods join him in locating and arresting all those suspected of Sortian sympathy. Alone among the high priests and priestesses, Berenib of Bastet refused. She and the majority of her followers absconded with the temple treasury and fled to the lower reaches of Arden Vul, where they hid for several decades. Then, as the Archontean hegemony collapsed above, Berenib and her priestesses constructed a new temple to Bastet here on Level 8. For her actions, she was deemed a traitor by the Basileus and the archon; official record of the Arden Vul temple of Bastet was expunged. The cult of Bastet has remained secret since that date, with new priestesses periodically guided by Bastet to her shrine where they take up their destined roles.

Inhabitants:

1. Berenib the cat-mummy: SZ M; AL LE; AC 3; MV 60'; HD 6+3; HP 48; #AT 1; Dmg 1-12. Special attacks: fear; rotting disease. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; half damage from magic weapons; immune to sleep, charm, hold, cold, poison, and paralysis Berenib wears an amulet of fire resistance (see new magic items) and is, as noted above, immune to turning so long as she remains between areas 8-31 and 8-41.

Treasure:

Berenib wears an amulet of fire resistance (see new magic items) and a jade necklace with a jet representation of a seated cat (350 gp).

Inside the sarcophagus is a set of four jade cups and a jade ewer (total 500 gp); one of the cups is actually a jade cup of life restoration with 4 charges (see new magic items).

8-41: Catacombs of the Cat Goddess

The short flight of stairs from 8-40 leads to the burial chambers of previous priestesses of Bastet. The area is roughly carved out of the local granite, with niches for the mummified remains of centuries of priestesses. Over seventy five bodies are present in the niches, all carefully mummified. In addition, the western extension of the catacombs contains a mountain of mummified cats, each representing the favorite cat of one of the high priestesses. A small (3'-diameter) hole leads to one of the cat tunnels to the south.

There is a 15% chance that any mummified human has either a jade amulet (150 gp), a jet figurine of Bastet (175 gp), or a silver and enamel necklace (75 gp). It takes one turn to search a mummy.

One of the mummified corpses in the northwestern alcove is different from the others: it is that of Gennadius, leader of the kentarchia of the 3rd Tagmata that fled the military disaster of the Cave of Blood (7-76) only to become ensorcelled by Deino (3-158). Kentarch Gennadius, and his faithful whippet, Rex, managed to escape Deino and wandered. They came to the Inn of the Lost (6-8), where Gennadius recognized Thegan's true identity; Thegan ambushed the pair and threw them down the hole at 6-20/8-33. Badly wounded, Gennadius and his dog were, strangely enough, taken in by the cult of Bastet. In return for their service to the high priestess, she accorded them full rights of mummification. Gennadius's mummy is wrapped in linen as usual, but has a gold death mask (450 gp) that clearly reveals a male face with a military haircut; inscribed on the reverse of the mask are the words, "Gennadius, protector." Should the death mask be removed, the benign ghost of Gennadius materializes.

Gennadius's ghost speaks in an old-fashioned dialect of Archontean, and is blunt and crude, like the old soldier that he was. Gennadius pleads with PCs to let his body rest, and, in particular, to not disturb his mummy (including the mask). He also inquires about the fate of his men from the 3rd Tagmata, and begs interlocutors to rescue them from the clutches of 'that witch, Deino' (3-158). The ghost offers to provide important secrets and the possibility of great wealth if the PCs bring him proof of Deino's demise (say, by producing her head). Should the PCs do this, Gennadius explains the identity of Thegan White-Mane (6-19) and describes how to access Thegan's secret treasures (6-20).

Inhabitants:

1. Gennadius's ghost: noncombatant.
2. 3-12 domestic cats: SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 150'; HD 1-5 HP; HP 5(x3), 4(x3), 3(x3), 2(x3); #AT 2; Dmg 1-2/1. Special attacks: rear claw rakes; surprise 3 in 6. Special defenses: only surprised 1 in 6.

Treasure:

Each of the 74 mummies may have a piece of jewelry (see above). Gennadius's death mask is worth 450 gp.

8-42: Feral Cat Colony

A large colony of feral cats inhabits the caves south of the shrine to Bastet (8-42 to 8-45, 8-49, 8-50). About 60 cats of numerous breeds and colors make up the colony. The cats hunt along the chasm walls, but also frequently venture into the precincts of Bastet (via tunnels at 8-37, 8-38, 8-41, and the corridor outside 8-38) for handouts from the priestesses.

This particular cave is 8' tall in the center, and dotted with ledges and crevices that are perfect for cat nests. At any given moment 11-18 cats are present here. The cats are not naturally aggressive, but do defend their turf.

Inhabitants:

1. 11-18 feral domestic cats: SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 150'; HD 1-5 HP; HP 5(x4), 4(x5), 3(x5), 2(x4); #AT 2; Dmg 1-2/1. Special attacks: rear claw rakes; surprise 3 in 6. Special defenses: only surprised 1 in 6.

8-43: Stinking Cave

The colony of feral cats uses this cave as a litter box, which incidentally helps ward off unwanted predators from the chasm. As a result, the stench of feline urine is rather overpowering. Spending more than a turn here imposes a -1 penalty to CON for 6 turns. At any given moment 1-4 cats are present here, doing their business.

Inhabitants:

1. 1-4 domestic cats: SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 150'; HD 1-5 HP; HP 5, 4, 3, 2; #AT 2; Dmg 1-2/1. Special attacks: rear claw rakes; surprise 3 in 6. Special defenses: only surprised 1 in 6.

8-44: Water Hole

This cave is dominated by a pool of clear water in its southern projection. It is visited frequently by the cats of the feral colony; at any given moment 8-15 cats are present here.

Inhabitants:

1. 8-15 domestic cats: SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 150'; HD 1-5 HP; HP 5(x3), 4(x3), 3(x3), 2 (x3), 1(x3); #AT 2; Dmg 1-2/1. Special attacks: rear claw rakes; surprise 3 in 6. Special defenses: only surprised 1 in 6.

8-45: Cat Colony, Redux

This large cave is home to the majority of the feral cat colony that occupies the area. A strip of sand runs through the center of the cave, on which are the skeletons of scores of small rodents. At any given moment 21-30 cats are present in niches along the walls.

Buried in the sand is the ancient corpse of an adventurer on which some loot may still be found.

Inhabitants:

1. 21-30 domestic cats: SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 150'; HD 1-5 HP; HP 5(x7), 4(x8), 3(x8), 2(x7); #AT 2; Dmg 1-2/1. Special attacks: rear claw rakes; surprise 3 in 6. Special defenses: only surprised 1 in 6.

Treasure:

A set of chain mail +2, a heavy crossbow of speed, a pouch with 15 pieces of jet (100 gp each), and a potion of healing.

8-46: Rudishva Corridor Fragment

Most of the black octagonal sheathing has fallen from the walls of this section of broken corridor, resulting in piles of dusty black granite on the floor. A sinkhole at the western edge of the fragment provides access to the tunnels of the feral cat colony. Next to the rudishva iris door to 8-47 someone has crudely painted an image of a figure dancing on one leg with the words (in Archontean): "Beware the Dancer Within."

8-47: Rudishva Security Station

One of the important rudishva security centers in antiquity, this chamber is clad in octagonal black-granite sheathing and has no 90-degree angles. A 10'x10' table occupies the center of the chamber; its top is a piece of black glass. Several stools are parked around the table. The north and east walls contain consoles made of plasteel. A pedestal in the northeast corner holds a stone nataraja (see new monsters – rudishva animated constructs), still futilely guarding the otherwise empty chamber.

Wall Consoles and Holographic Table: The two consoles are identical, allowing a pair of operators to produce holographic and other effects on the table in the center of the chamber. Each console is made of orange plasteel, inset with a score of octagonal buttons with glyphs on them, plus several knobs and 'joysticks'. The northern console is in poor repair, however, and will explode in a cascade of sparks after being manipulated thrice (e.g., pushing three buttons, or operating the joystick three times, etc.). The eastern console may be operated without danger.

Wrapped in oilcloth under the eastern console is a tactical suit (see new technological items).

Using the Console: The Rudishva glyphs were specially created to describe the locations to which they connect. This means that even someone with a limited knowledge of Rudishva is unlikely to be able to simply 'read' the glyph. When a glyph is punched, the GM should roll randomly to determine which location is connected to that glyph. Once a location is connected to a glyph, PCs will be able to select a given location to view.

2d12	Function of Selected Glyph
2	Opens a communication channel to the RAJ-750 artificial intelligence in 6-27, while also providing a holographic live feed of area 6-27
3	Opens a communication channel to the Aklah-Chah artificial intelligence in SL14-13, while also providing a holographic live feed of area 6-27
4	Calls up a holographic live feed of area 5-92
5	Calls up a holographic live feed of area 5-107
6	Calls up a holographic live feed of area 5-131
7	Calls up a holographic live feed of area 5-94
8	Calls up a holographic live feed of area 5-18
9	Calls up a holographic live feed of area 5-25
10	Calls up a holographic live feed of area 6-39
11	Calls up a holographic live feed of area 6-113
12	Calls up a holographic live feed of area 6-121
13	Calls up a holographic live feed of area 6-122
14	Calls up a holographic live feed of area 7-4
15	Calls up a holographic live feed of area 7-143
16	Calls up a holographic live feed of area 7-109
17	Calls up a holographic live feed of areas 8-53A through 8-53H (six seconds per area)
18	Calls up a holographic live feed of area 9-96
19	Calls up a holographic live feed of area 9-91
20	Calls up a holographic live feed of area 9-89
21	Calls up a holographic live feed of area SL2-2
22	Calls up a holographic live feed of SL6-27
23	Calls up a holographic live feed of SL9-46
24	Calls up a holographic live feed of SL14-10

Note: The joysticks allow holographic images to rotate through a 360-degrees vantage point.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 rudishva animated constructs - stone nataraja (see new monsters): SZ L; AL N; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 56; #AT 1; Dmg 4-11; MR 25%. Special attacks: sonic or fire attack. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to cold, fire, electricity, poison, and mind-affecting spells.

Treasure:

Tactical suit (see new technological items).

8-48: Rudishva Corridor Fragment

This fragment of ancient rudishva corridor is in bad shape. Most of the octagonal white wall sheathing has collapsed in piles on the floor, and the entire area is home to numerous rats.

Inhabitants:

1. 7-18 ordinary rats: SZ S; AL N(E); AC 7; MV 150'; HD ¼; HP 1 each; #AT 1; Dmg 1.

8-49: Reeking Cave

Like area 8-43, this cave smells strongly of cat reek. Although none of the cats from the feral colony (see 8-42 to 8-45, 8-50) live here, they frequently travel through it on their way to hunt insects and rodents to the north. Typically 1-4 cats may be found here.

Inhabitants:

1. 1-4 domestic cats: SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 150'; HD 1-5 HP; HP 5, 4, 2, 2; #AT 2; Dmg 1-2/1. Special attacks: rear claw rakes; surprise 3 in 6. Special defenses: only surprised 1 in 6.

8-50: Still More Feral Cats

As it provides direct access to the shrine of Bastet, this cave is a favorite one in which members of the feral cat colony prowl, play, and wait for the priestesses to offer them food. The opening to 8-39 is 3' in diameter, and 15-20 cats are usually found here.

Inhabitants:

1. 15-20 feral domestic cats: SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 150'; HD 1-5 HP; HP 5(x5), 4(x5), 3(x5), 2(x5); #AT 2; Dmg 1-2/1. Special attacks: rear claw rakes; surprise 3 in 6. Special defenses: only surprised 1 in 6.

8-51: Rudishva Hall

The black granite octagonal sheathing has fared better in this antechamber to the detention block. The walls gleam with black, and offer no 90-degree angles. Stairs lead down to area 8-53. The stairs are littered with bits of broken bone. A rudishva iris door openable only with a silver or yellow rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items) occupies the south wall.

8-52: Rudishva Teleporters

The door from 8-51 is a rudishva iris door, and only opens when a silver or yellow rudishva identity plaque is presented (see new technological items). The t-shaped chamber possesses no 90-degree angles, is spotlessly clean, and is sheathed with beautiful black granite panels in the usual octagonal pattern. In each arm of the chamber a 5'-diameter circle of silvery material is inset in the floor, with a 10"x10" square of the same material affixed to the wall. Each square has a different rune etched into the silvery material.

The rudishva built these niches to be part of their teleportation network. To activate them, one stands on a silvery circle and touches the adjacent silvery square; teleportation to the appropriate location is instantaneous.

Teleport Nodes:

T18: access to Level 7 (7-110)

T19: access to Level 9 (9-97)

8-53: Rudishva Detention Block

This area served as a detention center for members of the rudishva hegemony. The entire area is sheathed in octagonal black granite tiles, and no 90-degree angles are present. The cells proper are labeled A through H; the western portion features an oval console surrounded by plasteel stools. Lockers line the north and south walls. The west wall once held a huge black glassteel view screen, but it was shattered in antiquity and its shards now litter the floor under the wall.

A pile of corpses lines the hallway to 8-51. Some of these corpses are human, both ancient Archonteans and more recent adventurers, some are varumani (see new monsters), three are kaliyani (see new monsters), and two are large horned and taloned creatures (demons).

The oval console has been subject to much damage and is inoperable. The lockers, which used to store weapons and equipment, are empty, and their doors are merely twisted and blasted pieces of plasteel.

As the type IV demon (see below) is not always present, and only attacks once the western chamber is fully entered, most of the corpses in the hallway have been looted pretty thoroughly. A few bits of treasure do remain.

Gate: The most imposing sight in the room is a 10'-diameter black disk of pulsating energy that floats above the oval console. This disk detects of magic and of evil; it is, in fact, a permanent one-way gate to the Abyss that was conjured over a millennium ago by a long forgotten wizard. A type IV demon waits behind the disk, sent here by the master of its layer of the abyss in order to investigate the gate and possibly close it. This demon has enjoyed lurking here for years at a time so as to ambush those foolish enough to investigate the gate. At times it returns to the abyss, though; there is a 15% chance that when the chamber is entered, the demon will be gone. Otherwise it waits in ambush so as to add to the pile of corpses.

Strangely, the demon does not bother Kerbog Khan's automatons as they pass from 8-54 to other areas of the Halls.

Cells: Each cell is carved from the bare granite, and features a plasteel cot and bucket. Originally force screens prevented the incarcerated from leaving, but the power supply (operated at the console in the west of the area) failed, and all the cells are open. Most of the cells are empty, save for the following:

Cell A: A perfectly circular, highly polished, 6'-diameter tunnel leads west from the back wall of this cell (see 8-54).

Cell C: The desiccated corpse of a rudishva crewman, still wearing her orange jumpsuit, lies on the floor of the cell. Forgotten by her jailors, she died of dehydration after the complex was abandoned during the collapse. In her boot is a bronze rudishva identity plaque (See new technological items).

Cell G: The body of an elven adventurer rests here. He was wounded badly by the demon and crawled here to die.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 type IV demon: SZ L; AL CE; AC -1; MV 90'; 120' flying (Class E); HD 11; HP 81; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/2-8; MR 65%. Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: +2 to hit; cause fear; darkness 10' radius; use symbol (fear or discord). Special defenses: half damage from cold, electricity, fire, gas; +1 or better weapons to hit. Special: teleport without error; detect magic; read languages; telekinesis (5,000 gp); project image; create illusion; levitate; polymorph self; dispel magic; gate in demon of type I to IV (60%).

Treasure:

Amid the corpses: a scattering of 201 cp, 177 sp, 149 gp, and six 100 gp pearls; a robe of the archmagi (white); a war hammer +3; a wooden shield +2; 6 crossbow bolts of fire (see new magic items); a suit of chain mail; a slim codex containing the Cantor's Lament (see 8-148); a gold key to the Obsidian Gates (5-6D); and a carved ivory puzzle box depicting elephants and other animals (3,500 gp).

On the elven adventurer: a suit of elven chain mail +1, a rope of climbing, an elixir of youth, of two fire opals (1,000 gp each) and four peridots (500 gp each).

8-54: Tunnel to SL12-21 (Workshops of Kerbog Khan)

A 5'-diameter, spiral tunnel leads wends its way upwards some 1,050' to the workshops of Kerbog Khan (SL12-21). The tunnel perfectly smooth and regular, as if it had been dug and smoothed by machinery. Although it slopes upward continuously, the gradient of the slope is just gentle enough to allow bipeds to climb it with some caution. This is one of the primary routes by which Kerbog Khan's automatons leave his workshops in order to gain access to the rest of the Halls. Note that there is a 20% chance of encountering one of Kerbog Khan's automatons, the borer, in the tunnel: see text at SL12-21.

8-55: Cave of Peabo

An exiled lesser varumani named Peabo inhabits this cave. The cave is 15' tall and has a small natural basin with fresh water. Peabo otherwise survives on rats and small vermin. His security is ensured by the relative proximity of the citadel of the Sun-Scarred

Knights (see new monsters), whose members come and go via 8-56; the knights, on the other hand, tolerate Peabo as a vermin remover and as a sort of canary in the coalmine, alerting them to potential dangers.

Peabo was exiled from the court of the troll thegn (7-74) for refusing to support the thegn's recent expansionist policies. He would be interested in any intrigues designed to bring down the thegn, and might be able to put those he considers friendly into touch with other varumani of similar sympathies. Peabo has occasionally crept up the stairs at 8-56 and can describe the outer precincts of the citadel of the Sun-Scarred Knights (SL10A-1 to SL10A-7, and SL10A-14); he knows several of the knights by name and interest.

If a noticeably hostile and powerful party enters his chamber, Peabo quickly drinks his potion of invisibility and tries to escape. Otherwise he is happy to negotiate, trading information for food and small valuables.

Inhabitants:

1. Peabo, a lesser varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 55; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (mattock, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: mattock, one dose of varumani knock-out juice (see Arden Vul items).

Treasure:

Two potions of invisibility, kept in the basin of water so they remain 'fresh', as well as a pouch with 8 pearls (100 gp each) hidden under a rock.

8-56: Rudishva Hall, Stairs Up to SL10A-1

This rudishva hall is similar in physical respects to area 8-51, with black octagonal sheathing and no 90-degree angles. The stairs, however, rise rather than descend, and lead eventually to SL10A-1, just outside the citadel of the Sun-Scarred Knights.

The passage of some creatures through the hall and up the stairs is obvious; a good tracker might be able to detect that these creatures were armored.

8-57: Cave, with Charred Spiders

A clear path leads through this 8'-tall cave. In the southern niche are the roasted corpses of three huge spiders, who rather unwisely thought to make this cave their home and were incinerated by the first Sun-Scarred Knight (see new monsters) to pass this way.

8-58: Cave

The only noteworthy feature of this cave is the clear path leading from one exit to the other.

8-59: Ruined Corridor

Once a portion of a rudishva corridor, this area is noticeable for major cave-ins along the west, south and east walls. Only along the north side is the original black granite octagonal sheathing still present. Someone has chalked the following words in Archontean along the remaining sheathing: "Seek the Khan to the west, near the prison. His contracts must be sealed with blood."

8-60: Sandy Cave, with tunnel up to Sub-Level 15 (SL15-12)

This cave is covered in sand, within which lair 8 very hungry sand worms (see new monsters).

The tunnel to the northwest ascends over a half mile before intersecting another set of tunnels, namely SL15-12.

Inhabitants:

1. 8 sand worms (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 7/2; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 15, 14, 14, 13(x3), 12, 12; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attack: slurp blood (1-4 HP/rd).

8-61: Cave with Lantern

A glowing lantern hangs from an iron shepherd's crook stuck into the floor in the center of this large cave. The hooded lantern is lit by a continual light spell. The Sun-Scarred Knights (see new monsters) created the lantern, as this is one of their main routes into other areas of the Halls.

8-62: Ruined Rudishva Corridor

This area still displays its origin as a rudishva corridor along its west wall: no 90-degree angles and black granite, octagonal sheathing, half of which has fallen to the floor. The east side, however, has been subject to a major cave-in, rendering it unstable and dangerous. The western extension shows signs of a recent battle, with scorch marks marring the remaining sheathing and a few pieces of broken metal on the floor. One of Kerbog Khan's rare battle automatons (see new monsters) is investigating the scene; it attacks any so foolish as to interrupt it.

GM Note: The 'battle' took place between Glif, the varumani first adept (see 7-24), and one of Kerbog Khan's exploration automatons; Glif blasted it with lightning, and then took it off to her chamber for study.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 battle automaton of Kerbog Khan (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 0; MV 150'; HD 8; HP 60; #AT 4; Dmg special; MR 50%. Special attacks: laser (3-12 damage); blade (3-12 damage); poison injector (death, or 3-12 damage on save); flamethrower (3-18 damage in arc). Special defenses: immune to cold and fire.

8-63: Pollen-Filled Cave

This cave marks the westernmost edge of the pollen effect given off by the bliss flowers found in 8-67 (see description in level overview). Any person entering the cave must save versus petrification with a -3 penalty or wander in random directions for 1-6 hours.

8-64: Invisible Stalker

An invisible stalker, summoned by Juliana (8-37), is hunting in this otherwise nondescript wet cave. It has been ordered to circle the precincts of Bastet and eliminate any threats to the shrine for a period of twenty years, and it takes its orders quite literally. This means that if a party does not appear overt or hostile, it will ignore them. If they have entered the cave bearing unsheathed weapons, or have recently or loudly engaged in combat, then it will attack. If the stalker has been encountered as a wandering monster in the pollen-filled areas and defeated, it obviously won't be present here.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 invisible stalker: SZ L; AL N; AC 3; MV 120'; HD 8; HP 55; #AT 1; Dmg 4-16; MR 30%. Special attacks: surprise on 1-5. Special defenses: invisibility.

8-65: Bloodless Corpse

A human-sized form crouches in the center of the room, facing the southeastern wall. A continual light rock in front of the corpse casts shadows throughout the chamber.

Closer inspection reveals that the form is that of a human adventurer clutching the spear that pierced his chest and apparently killed him. Even closer inspection reveals a pair of bite marks on his neck. The corpse holds no valuables.

GM Note: The adventurer is an Archontean fighter whose party became lost in the Nether Reaches. After a falling out, this poor fellow was attacked and left to die by his former colleagues. Ironically, it was not the spear thrust but the vampire, Cinna Minux (7-122), that killed him.

8-66: Statue of Chibalba

An 8'-tall statue of the Archontean deity Chibalba occupies the center of this partly ruined, 15'-tall hall. The eastern side retains its worked features – typical Archontean stonework, with frescoes that have run into smears of unrecognizable color. The western side has collapsed, leaving piles of broken masonry and rough rock. A 10'-diameter mosaic surrounds the statue; it depicts pastoral subterranean scenes, including lizards, mushrooms, sarcophagi, bats, altars, etc. The door to 8-5 is obviously new and in good repair; it is locked and barred from the south.

Statue: The blue granite statue of Chibalba is in bad shape. The head has been knocked off, and is nowhere to be found. From the badly corroded remains of the statue, it appears that the statue depicted a cloaked figure holding a staff in one hand and a lantern in the other. Anyone familiar with the cult of Chibalba will have no problems recognizing these as the iconic images associated with this protector of subterranean regions and travelers.

The base of the statue reads, in Mithric: "Chibalba, lord of the Deeps, watches over these halls. Summon him if thy need is great." Should anyone standing on the mosaic either 1) state Chibalba's name three times in a row, or 2) declaim "I summon thee, Chibalba!", an avatar of the deity will arrive to lend temporary aid and protection to the invokers. The aid imparted by the avatar will depend on the needs of those making the invocation; the GM should use his/her best judgment in determining which situation is most appropriate based upon the table below.

Situation	Aid offered
In combat	Avatar fights for duration of one combat: AC 0, HD 8, HP 58, #AT 1, damage 1-10
Badly wounded	Cure critical wounds x2
Lightly wounded	Cure serious wounds x2
Uninjured	Detect traps, infravision, and locate place (see new spells), all good for 10 turns

Speaking in the Mithric language, the avatar describes in a solemn, deep voice what aid it will impart. This advice takes one round to describe, after which the avatar will not communicate in any way.

Summoning the avatar is only possible once per month. Should a cleric of Chibalba invoke the deity, then all four types of aid will be proffered to the cleric and his friends (with the combat avatar serving the cleric for one whole day, or until it is destroyed, whichever comes first).

Note: Two other identical statues of Chibalba may be found, at 4-69 and 9-87.

8-66A: Concealed Entrance

A permanent illusion of a continuous cavern wall conceals the entrance to this tunnel. The tunnel is used by the Sun-Scarred Knights (see new monsters) to access 8-29 and from it, the upper levels of Arden Vul.

8-67: Cave of the Bliss Flowers

This warm, brightly-lit cavern hums with the buzz of insects moving amid field of 6'-tall flowers. The cavern is over 100' tall in places, and features some worked areas on the south and north walls. The ledge at 8-11 is 60' above the floor, and the entrances to 8-69 and 8-70 are 30' above the floor. The floor is relatively flat, and is covered in a thick layer of humus. The walls drip with water, making the environment a bit humid.

The cavern has a long history. It was known to the rudishva as the 'Cave of Tears', since a majority of the varuda flyers were wiped out here in a heqeti ambush during the early years of the struggle between these two peoples. After centuries of desuetude the cavern became the site of a series of botanical and entomological experiments by a pair of Archontean eccentrics, the functionary Valens the proedros and his magic user accomplice, Houlios (see 8-21). The results of their extensive experiments, which they called the Golden Nectar Project, persist, and have produced a strange mini-ecosystem.

The cave is lit by bright, warm sunlight, comparable to the light of a warm summer day. Houlios's unique spell, sun's gift (see new spells), is the source of the light and heat. He cast over a dozen instances of the spell all over the ceiling and walls of the area; these could be dispelled individually, but only by a magic user of at least 12th-level.

Five steam vents scattered across the cavern floor provide the heat and moisture necessary for the plant life that occupies it. If standing directly over a vent when it discharges (once every 3 turns), a PC takes 1-8 HP scalding damage.

A vast field of bliss flowers (see new flora) thrives in the light and warmth. These flowers are about 6' tall and boast beautiful yellow flowers. The flowers have a rapid sexual cycle thanks to Houlios's experiments. This means that even after they release their pollen and decay, new plants spring up from the decayed remains within days.

Along the edge of the cavern grow some other plants, albeit in smaller numbers: some small alders, crepe myrtles, and chaste trees, plus numerous wild flowers. None of these additional plants are particularly healthy or vigorous specimens, but they do add biodiversity to the cavern.

A haze of bliss-flower pollen fills the cavern (and many surrounding chambers). While the giant bees (8-69 and 8-70) collect much of the pollen, the plants are so prolific that their pollen is literally everywhere. This means that those exploring the cavern must make a save versus petrification at -3 or wander in random directions, blissfully unaware of their surroundings, for 1-6 hours.

Giant bees from 8-69 and 8-70 flit among the flowers nearly continuously, producing an audible hum throughout the cavern. Most of these bees are workers, but if the workers are disturbed soldier bees will emerge from the hives to lend assistance

There is a 10% chance that Olaf the bee whisperer is wandering among the flowers (see 8-73).

Ledges on the wall of the cavern lead to other parts of the level. The ledge to 8-68 is 20' above the floor, the ledges to the bee hives (8-69 and 8-70) is 30' above the floor, and the ledge to 8-113 is 40' above the floor.

Those who dig in the humus of the cave floor have no difficulty in turning up various objects of interest. Almost any place one digs (i.e., 75% chance) reveals the bones of a medium-sized, winged biped; these are varuda bones (see new monsters), and the product of a great massacre during the rudishva-heqeti wars. The area directly under the ledge at 8-11 also bears interest: the skeleton of several humans, with some gear. (GM Note: these are the remains of Jadon and the linkboys of his party, who ran in terror to 8-11 and fell to their doom in the cavern – for Jadon, see 8-10). In addition to these results, each turn of searching in the humus has a 1 in 4 chance of turning up one item from the following table (the first three items may be found up to 3 times each):

D8	Item found	Notes
1-3	Piece of broken rudishva equipment (see new technological items for all). Roll d6: 1. empty lesser power supply 2. laser rifle 3. spear gun 4. dart thrower and clip containing 3 ordinary darts 5. sonic fence 6. battle helmet	Detritus from the battle in which the heqeti destroyed 2/3 of the varuda flyers
4	Piece of still operative rudishva equipment (see new technological items for all): Roll d4 1. clip of ordinary darts for a dart thrower 2. lesser power supply 3. laser deflector shield 4. sonic fence	Also detritus from the battle
5	Rust, brown, sky blue or pale green rudishva identity plaque (25% chance for each)	Dropped by a varuda slain here
6	A cracked leather potion belt still holding potions of extra healing, fly, and animal control	Dropped by Houlios the mage (see 8-21)
7	A crude basalt statuette of Rimmaq-Isfet (see new monsters)	Worth 50 gp
8	A wand of fireballs	3-18 charges remaining

Inhabitants:

1. 40 giant worker bees: SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 90'; 300' flying (Class D); HD 3+1; 24(x4), 23 (x4), 22(x4), 21(x4), 20(x4), 19(x4), 18(x4), 17(x4), 16(x4), 15(x4); #AT 1; Dmg 1-3. Special attacks: sting once; poison.
2. 1-4 giant soldier bees, (33% chance when the cavern is first entered. But if combat breaks out, 20 or more soldier bees arrive in 1-3 rounds): SZ M; AL N; AC 5; MV 120', 300' flying (Class C); HD 4+2; HP 32, 31, 30, 30, 29, 29, 28(x3), 27, 27, 26(x4), 25(x4), 23; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4. Special attacks: sting once; poison (-1 to saves).

Treasure:

On Jadon's body: banded mail +1, a metal shield, a battle axe, an amulet of courage (see new magic items), an Alexia's useful pole (see new magic items), and a purse with 79 sp and 43 gp.

8-68: Darkened Cave with Roper

This section of the larger cavern rises 20' above the floor of 8-67, up a scree of loose rock. It is dark, and its floor is uneven rock, with lumps, boulders, and small stalagmites. While no bliss flowers grow here, their pollen floats throughout the area in a thick haze. Those breathing the pollen must save versus petrification at -3 or wander in a random direction for 1-6 hours.

The cave is well-suited to climbing vines of a number of species. The walls and eastern section of floor are covered with a mat of vines with pale, whitish leaves. The vines conceal the entrance to areas 8-128, 8-129 and 8-134 (the latter of which is located 10' up the south wall of this cavern).

A stone table overlooks the drop-off to 8-67; Houlios used it while preparing the bliss flower and bee experiments for the Golden Nectar Project. The long-decayed skeletal remains of Houlios lie next to the table, still wearing the prototype 'bee-suit' that he used when collecting honey from the bee hives (see Arden Vul items). A slash in the back of the suit shows how Houlios died (a dagger from a deranged apprentice). If the slash is fixed, the suit would provide excellent protection against giant bee stings.

A clever and extremely hungry roper lurks in this darkened chamber, feeding off the occasional lost bee and hoping for better prey. It prefers to take the form of a low boulder lying just behind Houlios's corpse. It waits until visitors are inspecting the corpse before striking with a 3 in 6 chance of surprise. The roper is daunted by the bright light and swarms of bees, and so does not typically visit 8-67.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 roper: SZ L; AL CE; AC 0; MV 30'; HD 11; HP 78; #AT 1; Dmg 5-20; MR 80%. Special attacks: six poisonous strands (20'-50' range; reduce STR by 50% in 1-3 rds). Special defenses: immune to lightning; take half damage from cold.

Treasure:

Houlios's bee suit (see Arden Vul items).

Inside the roper's gut: four golden topaz gems (500 gp each), plus a pink diamond (5,000 gp)

8-69: Hive of Golden Nectar

This chamber was specially built by Valens and Houlios to house one of the hives of giant bees that formed part of the Golden Nectar

Project (see 8-67). The ceiling is 40' above the floor, and the entire chamber plus the entrance from the south are of neatly worked, but undecorated, stone. The northern exit is unfinished, and turns swiftly into a natural tunnel.

The air is thick with bliss flower pollen and the drone of scores of bees.

The hive is enormous, and is composed of three huge combs attached to the ceiling and walls. Each comb is 50' wide and 30' tall, and has 5'-deep cells on each side. Thus each comb is 10' wide. Each comb is separated from its neighbor (or the north or south wall) by a 5'-wide space, which allows the bees to move about the hive. In addition, 10' of space separates the floor from the bottom of the combs. The upper 20' of each comb is devoted to honey storage, while lower 10' has cells for larval production. The queen typically moves about in the lower third of the combs, attended by her drones.

The bees are initially unconcerned by the arrival of man-sized visitors on the floor of their hive, although there is a 25% chance per turn that a bee may blunder into one of the PCs, potentially leading to combat. Should the PCs try to climb or fly among the combs, however, the bees rally to defend their turf.

There are approximately 50 cells filled with the bees' special honey on each side of each comb (a total of 300 cells). Most cells (250 of them) contains regular honey (50 gp worth per cell), but 50 of the cells contain royal jelly. Each of the royal jelly cells contains sufficient special honey to make 1-3 potions of extra healing, although it will take quite a lot of containers to transport the stuff to a suitable alchemist. In addition, lodged in the topmost row of cells in the middle comb is the scepter of the goblins (see new magic items; also see Gislú the goblin mystic at 4-2, and King Weskenim at SL4-22).

Olaf the bee-whisperer (8-73) has a 25% chance to be present in the hive, either observing the bees (33%) or climbing the comb to collect some honey for his meal (66%).

Note: This area is occluded by a thick cloud of bliss pollen (see new flora).

Inhabitants:

Listed here are the total population numbers for the first hive. Bees encountered and destroyed elsewhere (e.g., 8-67 or as wandering monsters) should be deleted from the roster. So long as the queen lives, losses can be replaced within a week.

1. Queen bee: noncombatant, SZ L; AL N; AC 7; MV 0'; HD 10; HP 74; #AT 0.
2. 4 drone bees: noncombatant, SZ M; AL N; AC 8; MV 90'; HD 5; HP 34, 33, 22, 20; #AT 0.
3. 15 giant soldier bees: SZ M; AL N; AC 5; MV 120', 300' flying (Class C); HD 4+2; HP 32, 31, 31, 30, 29, 28(x3), 27, 26(x3), 25(x3); #AT 1; Dmg 1-4. Special attacks: sting once; poison (-1 to saves).
4. 99 giant worker bees: SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 90', 300' flying (Class D); HD 3+1; 24(x9), 23 (x10), 22(x10), 21(x10), 20(x10), 19(x10), 18(x10), 17(x10), 16(x10), 15(x10); #AT 1; Dmg 1-3. Special attacks: sting once; poison.
5. Olaf the bee-whisperer (25%): see 8-73

Treasure:

Honey, potentially 12,500 gp worth; royal jelly, enough for 50-100 potions of extra healing; The scepter of the goblins (see new magic items).

8-70: Second Hive of Golden Nectar

The second hive of giant bees is identical in almost every way to the hive at 8-69, complete with three massive combs spaced in the same way. Of course there is no scepter of the goblins here.

As with the first hive, Olaf the bee-whisperer (8-73) has a 25% chance to be present here, either observing the bees (33%) or climbing the comb to collect some honey for his meal (66%).

Note: This area is occluded by a thick cloud of bliss pollen (see new flora).

Inhabitants:

Listed here are the total population numbers for the second hive. Bees encountered and destroyed elsewhere (e.g., 8-67 or as wandering monsters) should be deleted from the roster.

1. Queen bee: noncombatant, SZ L; AL N; AC 7; MV 0'; HD 10; HP 74; #AT 0.
2. 4 drone bees: noncombatant, SZ M; AL N; AC 8; MV 90'; HD 5; HP 34, 33, 22, 20; #AT 0.
3. 12 giant soldier bees: SZ M; AL N; AC 5; MV 120', 300' flying (Class C); HD 4+2; HP 32, 31, 30, 29, 28, 28, 27, 26, 26, 25(x3); #AT 1; Dmg 1-4. Special attacks: sting once; poison (-1 to saves).
4. 107 giant worker bees: SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 90', 300' flying (Class D); HD 3+1; 24(x9), 23 (x10), 22(x11), 21(x11), 20(x11), 19(x11), 18(x11), 17(x11), 16(x11), 15(x11); #AT 1; Dmg 1-3. Special attacks: sting once; poison.
5. Olaf the bee-whisperer (25%): see 8-73

Treasure:

Honey, potentially 12,500 gp worth; royal jelly, enough for 50-100 potions of extra healing.

8-71: Cave, with tunnel up to Level 6 (6-44B)

Bare human footprints mark the pollen- and dust-covered floor of this otherwise nondescript cave. They lead to the northwest.

Note: This area is occluded by a thick cloud of bliss pollen (see new flora).

The southern tunnel leads upwards some 400' via a number of corkscrew turns and steep cliffs before eventually reaching Level 6 (6-44B). The bliss pollen is gone after 50' of travel. The tunnel is relatively untraveled, but difficult to traverse, and requires ropes or else three successful rolls of 4d6 under DEX to avoid taking a total of 3-18 damage from falls.

8-72: Trapped Cave

Olaf the bee-whisperer (8-73) has arranged a trap in this cave as a way to protect his dwelling from unwanted visitors. A cage woven of reeds is attached to the ceiling above the tunnel leading to the northwest. In it are three angry giant soldier bees. A tripwire across the tunnel entrance is connected to a latch on the bee cage, such that anyone who breaks the wire causes the cage to open and the angry bees to burst forth.

Despite the cleverness of this mechanism, the trapped bees make a fair amount of noise. PCs have a 50% chance of hearing the bees and, thus, of detecting the trap. If PCs stop to listen, the chance rises to 80%.

Note: This area is occluded by a thick cloud of bliss pollen (see new flora).

Inhabitants:

1. 3 angry giant soldier bees: SZ M; AL N; AC 5; MV 120', 300' flying (Class C); HD 4+2; HP 29, 28, 25; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4. Special attacks: sting once; poison (-1 to saves).

8-73: Olaf the Bee-Whisperer

This cave is home to an eccentric, possibly-insane Wisikin adventurer named Olaf. A hammock is slung in the corner, and a tripod of heating (see new magic items) provides warmth. Two dried bee husks are gently pinned to the wall. A striped cat that Olaf has named Lucia pads around the cave; it is immune to the pollen, but wise enough to not stray far from Olaf's dwelling. Two decrepit clay urns hold honey harvested from areas 8-69 and 8-70. Finally, he has rigged a deadfall trap over the entrance. Olaf is home 40% of the time.

Olaf appears as a tall, thin human with black hair and a handsome face. He wears only a loincloth, and his flesh is dirty and pocked with the result of bee stings. His eyes wander constantly, and he has some difficulty maintaining a conversation due to his long residence among bees and bliss pollen. Still, in return for food, Olaf might help a friendly party with directions to other locations in the Nether Reaches. Olaf is familiar with 8-67, 8-68 (and he knows of the roper there), 8-69 to 8-76, 8-83 to 8-84, 8-87 to 8-94, and 8-113. Although in some ways starved for conversation, he is loath to abandon his cave. Olaf has been charmed by the vampire, Cinna Minux (7-122); Cinna only rarely visits him, since Olaf's information is often garbled.

Trap (deadfall): Those breaking a thin tripwire running 3" above the floor of the entrance (75% chance for any visitor) causes the deadfall to activate. The deadfall inflicts 2-12 HP damage on up to 3 persons near the entrance. More significantly, it causes a loud noise that is likely to bring Olaf running.

GM Note: Olaf was the magic user in an adventuring party that became lost in the Nether Reaches, with each member slowly succumbing to deprivation amid the pollen clouds. Olaf was transformed by long exposure to bee pollen, but did not die. Indeed, after many years of breathing the pollen, he has become immune to its confusion effect. Eventually Olaf discovered the great bee hives (8-69, 8-70) and has been living in symbiosis with them for years, surviving primarily on honey. Although he is regularly stung by the bees, his periapt of proof against poison has protected him from their poison. Over the years he has become grudgingly accepted by the hives.

Although once a magic user, Olaf lost his spell book and all his equipment. At this point his mind has been so transformed by pollen and bee-honey that even were he escorted to safety, it is unlikely that he would want to practice magic ever again. Still, he once had numerous friends in the College of Macrina (see World of Archontos appendix); they might be willing to assist him if he were brought to the collegium in Narsileon.

Note: This area is occluded by a thick cloud of bliss pollen (see new flora).

Inhabitants:

1. Olaf the bee-whisperer (40%), 7th-level Wiskin magic user: SZ M; AC 7; MV 120'; HD 7; HP 19; #AT 1; Dmg 2-5 (dagger +1). Abilities: STR 13, INT 8 (formerly 17), WIS 13, DEX 17, CON 10, CHA 15. Possessions: dirty linen clothing; 3 doses of varumani knock-out juice (see Arden Vul items); periapt of proof against poison; dagger +1.

Treasure:

Olaf's periapt of proof against poison and his tripod of heating (see new magic items)

8-74: Mostly Empty Cave

A broken clay urn lies on the floor of this cave, surrounded by a sticky mass of honey. Bare human footprints lead south.

Note: This area is occluded by a thick cloud of bliss pollen (see new flora).

8-75: Large Cave with Pool

The northern-most portion of this large cavern is filled with a 50'-deep pool of cold water. The surface of the water is coated with a thin layer of yellow pollen.

Bare human footprints lead to the east (these are Olaf's feet; see 8-73). In addition to Olaf, giant worker bees regularly come here to gather water.

More ominously, if the demonic sounding horn at 8-76 is winded without first ringing the tubular bells around it, the chaotic reverberations have a 50% chance of summoning a worm of Qok (see new monsters) into this pool. The horrible worm is attracted to sound, so once summoned it will begin to slither down the passage to 8-76 (as the horn's sound resounds for a whole turn). Those present in 8-75 when it emerges from the pool may have difficulties of their own!

Note: This area is occluded by a thick cloud of bliss pollen (see new flora).

Inhabitants:

1. 3-8 giant worker bees: SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 90', 300' flying (Class D); HD 3+1; 24(x4), 23 (x4), 21, 20, 19, 18, 17, 16, 15, 15; #AT 1; Dmg 1-3. Special attacks: sting once; poison.
2. 1 worm of Qok (see new monsters): SZ L; AL CE; AC 3; MV 60'; HD 12; HP 86; #AT 1; Dmg 2-24; MR 50%. Special attacks: swallow.

8-76: The Feasting Hall

This enormous cave is referred to as the Feasting Hall to those few who know of its existence. It is the site of an interdimensional singularity, whereby the abyssal plane on which Rimmaq-Isfet continuously writhes comes into direct contact with the Prime Material plane.

The cave is very old, with rough walls covered with an oily sheen, and a flat, sanded floor. The ceiling is 30' tall. Two ledges are built into the east wall; one features a cistern with clear water, while the other holds a large pile of bones. To the south are five pedestals: the central one is home to a 10'-tall demonic sounding horn, while the four surrounding ones hold tubular gongs of various sizes. To the west is a 10'-tall stone ledge running alongside the wall; this is the point where cultists are able to directly contact Rimmaq-Isfet. The center of the chamber holds three stone tables with heavy stone benches.

Fifteen filthy, long-haired, wild-eyed humans and humanoids are seated at the tables, ravenously devouring thick, juicy steaks. They wear scraps of clothing and boast long, greasy, untended hair. Their bodies are lean, but well-muscled, and their eyes are bright and inquisitive. They greet visitors cheerfully, inviting them in Archontean to join the feast. If questioned, they are unable to recall their own names, or the circumstances of their presence here.

Niches on the Eastern Wall: The northern niche has a 5'-tall retaining wall between it and the rest of the cave. The wall forms a kind of cistern, with water dripping from the walls and ceiling collecting here. Two copper dippers sit atop the retaining wall, and a 12'-tall rickety ladder leans against the wall, allowing access to the cistern from the cavern floor. At the bottom of the cistern is a limed-over skeleton of a human with a stone of passage (see new magic items) resting amid the bones; only by swimming in the pool will this item be found.

The southern niche is filled with whitened bones. All are human or humanoid, the remains of previous generations of chaotic feasters. Close inspection of the remains shows that no skulls are present and that many of the long bones have been gnawed. Beneath the bones are the plinth and shattered remains of a heqetiera statue; the statue depicted a crouching heqeti hopper, but only the head is recognizable.

Lesser Pedestals: Tubular Bells: Five pedestals dominate the southern approaches of the cave. Copper tubular bells hang from aged iron racks on the four lesser pedestals. Each bell is artfully etched, albeit with unsettling images and strange glyphs. The glyphs are in an obscure abyssal tongue; in most circumstances, the services of a sage will be necessary to decode them. A wooden mallet is attached to each rack with an ancient, cracked leather cord. Striking a bell with its mallet produces a deep, echoing tone. The tubular bells vary as follows, from the northeast pedestal clockwise to the northwest pedestal:

Size and Musical Note	Glyphs and Images
Bell 1: 2' tall, 6" in diameter, C	Glyphs: "Tairon [the name of this bell] speaks, and the dread lord Rimmaq wakes." Images: A thick serpent-like creature snakes around the bell; it is squeezing bipedal creatures with anguished faces
Bell 2: 3' tall, 1' in diameter, E	Glyphs: "Peqar [the name of the bell] speaks, and the ears of dread Rimmaq open" Images: Heqeti striking a tubular bell similar to this one
Bell 3: 4' tall, 2' in diameter, G	Glyphs: "Ivlik [the name of the bell] speaks and the dread lord Rimmaq begins to writhe" Images: Heqeti carrying human and rudishva heads on spears while leering demonic faces
Bell 4: 6' tall, 3' in diameter, B	Glyphs: "Ristik [the name of the bell] speaks, and lord Rimmaq approaches the veil. Bring him home!" Images: A large heqeti sounds a curved horn of such size that it surrounds his body

The bells could be detached from their mounts and sold to collectors of antiquities and exotica: Tairon would bring 1,000 gp, Peqar 2,000 gp, Ivlik 4,000 gp, and Ristik 8,000 gp. The two larger bells are quite heavy and bulky.

Central Pedestal: the Demonic Sounding Horn: The central pedestal, around which the lesser pedestals of the bells are arranged, contains a huge, spiral horn that rises 10' above the floor of the pedestal. The horn is supported by three copper rods thrust into the corners of the pedestal. It is possible for a man-sized creature to stand in the center of the pedestal, partly surrounded by the coils of the horn, and sound it. The horn is carved with blasphemous images of a large, slug-like creatures feeding continuously on bipedal creatures; the creature is surrounded by salamander-seeming creatures with sharp teeth. A set of glyphs near the mouth of the horn reads (to those able to read abyssal tongues): "Lord Rimmaq-Isfet and his spawn feed on the sacrifices. Summon him at your peril!"

The horn is quite dangerous if used carelessly. Sounding it while the tubular bells are still ringing (see below) produces a potent blast of cacophony that serves to open the rift to the abyss, where Rimmaq-Isfet writhes. Sounding it without first properly ringing the bells, however, has a 50% chance to summon a worm of Qok (see new monsters) at 8-75, and produces a chaotic effect from the following table. If summoned, the worm of Qok arrives here within 5 rounds. An individual may only sound the horn once per week. It has no uses outside this chamber (although it might bring 3,500 gp).

D6	Effect
1	Berserk: all within hearing must save vs paralysis or immediately attack a random 'opponent'. Those of lawful alignments save at +1. The berserk status lasts for 3-6 round per individual.
2	Demonic Assault: a keqemander (see new monsters) appears and attacks savagely until reduced to 1/3 HP, at which point it teleports away.

3	Abyssal Environment: the temperature of the cavern rises to 110F and an acidic rain drips down from the ceiling. Those in armor have 1/2 movement, and all take 1-3 HP damage per round from the acid. Effect lasts for a turn.
4	Mark of the Abyss: a tentacular eye appears from the west wall, zooms in on the PC who sounded the horn, scans him/her slowly, and departs. The PC now has a purple tattoo of an eye on his/her forehead, and all creatures associated with the abyss have +1 to hit and damage versus that PC. The mark may only be removed with a remove curse spell.
5	Gravity Reversal: gravity is temporarily reversed in the cavern, such that all unattached items and beings will fall 'upward' towards the ceiling, which is the new focus of gravity. Living beings take 3-18 damage, or half damage if a save versus spells is made. The effect lasts for 1-3 turns, at which point a similar 'falling' back to the floor occurs (with another chance for damage).
6	Summoning: a series of heqeti hopping dead (see new monsters) are summoned to the platform along the west wall. Two warriors are summoned per round for 5-8 rounds. The warriors attack PCs first, ignoring the chaotic feasters until/unless the PCs flee.

Accessing the Flank of Rimmaq-Isfet Proper manipulation of the bells and the sounding horn opens a dimensional portal that provides access to the flank of Rimmaq-Isfet. To open the portal, one must first strike each of the tubular bells in turn, starting with C, and proceeding through E, G, and B. While the tones of the tubular bells are still ringing, one then sounds the enormous demonic sounding horn. The combination of the tones is cacophonous, and requires all within hearing to save vs. paralysis or be stunned for 1-2 rounds. The sounding horn echoes for a full turn, during which time it is possible to harvest 'meat' from the flank of Rimmaq-Isfet.

The Flank of Rimmaq-Isfet: Access to the flank of Rimmaq-Isfet is obtained from the platform that runs across the western side of the cavern. When the tubular bells and sounding horn have been properly employed, anyone standing on the platform will feel a light breeze emanating from the wall, bringing with it an array of strong, and mostly unpleasant odors: burnt sugar, ammonia, spoiled eggs, and so forth. A 10'x5' rectangle of the wall will be seen to ripple gently with motion, and it will be apparent that the section of wall is no longer stone, but rather a mottled grey-green hide. For the turn that the sounding horn echoes, it is possible to carve pieces of this flank as one might a piece of beef. Two 3'-long, curved copper daggers rest on the platform; the chaotic feasters use the daggers to carve meat from Rimmaq-Isfet.

The meat of Rimmaq-Isfet is nutritious and tasty, but consuming it is risky. For each serving consumed, there is a 5% cumulative chance of the diner turning into a chaotic feaster; this chance is modified by +25% for those of chaotic evil alignment and +15% for those of chaotic (but not evil) alignments.

Effects on Rimmaq-Isfet: As Rimmaq-Isfet is an extremely powerful greater deity, one with regenerative powers, it is able to absorb the carving of meat from its flank without truly noticing such actions. Clever PCs might realize, however, that it would be possible to inflict greater harm on Rimmaq-Isfet through the open dimensional portal. Simply hacking at its flesh is easy enough; should 50 HP damage be inflicted in this way, Rimmaq-Isfet will notice and move away from the portal. The portal stays open, and foolish PCs could enter the abyss through it if so desired. It is also possible to poison, and hence weaken, Rimmaq-Isfet through the portal. The GM should determine the composition of a suitable 'poison'; one possibility might be ten flasks of holy water, mixed with 2 oz of unicorn hairs and a pair of brownie eyes. The benefit to PCs of weakening Rimmaq-Isfet through poison will be felt if the PCs confront the heqeti on Level 10 (see level introduction for Level 10).

The Chaotic Feasters: An elaborate set of entirely false beliefs has grown up among the society of the feasters, one that seeks to explain in limited ways the situation in which they find themselves. What is most surprising is the fact that the feasters do not realize they are consuming the flesh of a greater god of intense chaotic evil, but instead have come to attribute their bounty to the existence of a vast planar creature they call the throom. The throom, they think, may be singular, or there may be 'herds' of them moving through interdimensional space; either way, the throom are so vast and placid that careful harvesting of the throom flesh goes largely unnoticed. It is the good fortune of the feasters, they think, to have located a nexus point where they can harvest the throom's flesh. Beyond their rituals with the throom, the feasters have been known to engage in cannibalism to supplement the regular harvesting of the throom; this is particular true for feasters who have grown old, sick, and/or feeble, but might also apply to nosy visitors. The feasters refer to the western platform as the 'throom Platform', and the copper knives as 'throom knives', and their meat as 'throom steaks'.

The feasters are welcoming, if slightly suspicious, of newcomers. They invite PCs to share in the throom-bounty, and may (33%) grow enraged if their offer is rejected. If visitors are cautious and respectful, it is possible to inspect the cavern without provoking the feasters. Should PCs seek to remove items (including the bells, the 'throom-knives', or anything else), the feasters immediately attack. Should careless PCs sound the demonic sounding horn without following the correct procedure with the bells, the feasters turn sullen and uncommunicative; after 4 rounds they attack. Finally, if PCs question the feasters too aggressively about their past lives or the meaning of this cavern, they will also grow sullen and uncommunicative and will attack within a turn.

Inhabitants:

1. The alpha chaotic feaster: SZ M; AL CE; AC 3; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 57; #AT 3; Dmg 3-14/2-5/1-3; MR 10%. Special attacks: flying feet (an additional attack sequence doing 2-5 damage), extra-crazy (additional attack sequence doing 1-3 damage with chance for disease). Special defenses: magic immunity, immune to fire.
2. 14 chaotic feasters: SZ M; AL CE; AC 10 or 6; MV 90'; HD 4; HP 30(x3), 29(x3), 25 (x5), 21(x3); #AT 1; Dmg 3-10; MR 10%. Of the fourteen, five have nails of iron (2-9 plus 1-3 bleeding for 3 rounds) and tough skin (AC 4); three have corpse breath (foes save vs poison or spend 2 round retching) and immunity to fire; two have flying feet (an additional attack sequence doing 2-5 damage) and immunity to cold; two have extra crazy (additional attack sequence doing 1-3 damage with chance for disease) and magic immunity (to 1st-level spells); one has mesmerizing eyes (foe saves vs petrification or be charmed) and tough skin (AC 4); and one has extra crazy (see above) and immunity to fire.
3. 1 worm of Qok (see new monsters): see stats at 8-75 (50% chance to arrive 5 rounds after the horn is sounded).

Treasure:

A pair of boxes under one of the tables contains a mixture of treasure: two 10-lb gold bars (500 gp each), 567 gp, 911 sp, a gold brooch with a quartz starburst (1,150 gp), a fine-crystal ewer (150 gp), a set of five copper flasks inscribed with Archontean names (40 gp each), a set of 3 platinum-tipped ivory rods, suitable for using as reading aids (75 gp each), a tarnished silver censer with a dose of incense of relaxation (see new magic items), a set of 12 arrows +2, an arrow of slaying devils, a military pick +4, a war hammer +3, and a helm of brilliance.

8-77: Antechamber

Those using the teleporter at 8-7B appear in a 6'-diameter circle of lapis tile set into the northeast corner of this chamber.

An Archontean-era construction, the chamber has neatly worked granite surfaces, all of which are blackened by smoke from a large fire that crackles in the center of the chamber. A 10'-square iron grill is hung from the ceiling above the fire; on the grill roast a dozen thick steaks. Two dirty humans crouch near the fire, tending to the meat.

The fire burns more brightly and more hotly than the fuel – some charcoal and some bones – would seem to allow. This is because the rendered fat from the special steaks is highly flammable (indeed, if collected somehow, the fat of three steaks could produce liquid comparable to a flask of oil).

The cooks are chaotic feasters (see new monsters). They greet visitors cheerfully, inviting them in Archontean to join the feast, which is taking place just down the stairs in the main hall. If questioned, they are also unable to recall their own names, or the circumstances of their presence here. Instead, they rave only about the great food and drink, and the companionship of like-minded friends. Should they be treated roughly or aggressively, they flee to 8-76 to warn their colleagues.

Almost completely concealed behind the soot on the walls is an ancient inscription in Mithric, located above the stairs leading down to 8-76. It reads: "Caveat Comestor" [GM Note: "Let the diner beware"]

Secret Door (south): The door is standard sized and normal to locate. It is very difficult to open from this side, requiring an open-doors roll to pull it open. It slams shut after one turn in the open position.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 chaotic feasters (see new monsters): SZ M; AL CE; AC 10 or 6; MV 90'; HD 4; HP 26, 21; #AT 1; Dmg 3-10; MR 10%. On has nails of iron (2-9 plus 1-3 bleeding for 3 rounds) and immunity to cold; the other has mesmerizing eyes (foe saves vs petrification or be charmed) and tough skin (AC 4).

8-78: Feasters' Lair

This chamber is dark and reeks of waste and bodily fluids. The floor is covered with a noxious 2" layer of dirt, filth, and worse. A shelf is set into the walls at a level 6' above the floor; the shelf contains over a hundred skulls that have been stripped of flesh but are still stained brown and red. These are the remains of previous generations of feasters.

Hidden among the skulls is an ivory cylinder that can be twisted open to reveal an inner compartment. The cylinder is carved with an image of the emperor Arthuinus the Mighty; the emperor is dressed as a scholar, wears a philosopher's long beard, and is depicted writing at a scribe's desk. Inside the cylinder is a bit of parchment with the following text: "The cavern below was used by the hoppers to summon their god, and to consume its flesh in debauched rituals. Might it be possible to weaken their slimy lord by making use of the opened portal?" The cylinder is worth 225 gp.

8-79: A Second Feasters' Lair

This chamber is similar in most respects to 8-78, complete with layer of filth and shelf with skulls. An ancient human skeleton is nailed to the east wall, though.

The skeleton is that of Helibar of Archontos, the last Archontean administrator of this site before the collapse. Helibar's men grew hungry as supplies from the surface failed, and they began to consume the meat of Rimmaq-Isfet over his objections. Transformed into chaotic feasters, they eventually crucified him on the wall, where he died a slow death. Given the nature of his demise, Helibar's soul is still close to his body. A Speak with Dead spell cast by a cleric of at least 13th level will be efficacious, despite the usual restrictions (Helibar has been dead more than 1,200 years). Such a cleric will be able to ask 3 questions of Helibar, thus allowing the PCs to learn something about the nature of area 8-76 (or whatever else they find of interest). If Helibar's remains are taken down and given a respectful burial, his soul departs and the normal parameters for Speak with Dead apply.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 chaotic feasters (see new monsters): SZ M; AL CE; AC 10 or 6; MV 90'; HD 4; HP 26, 21; #AT 1; Dmg 3-10; MR 10%.

On has nails of iron (2-9 plus 1-3 bleeding for 3 rounds) and immunity to cold; the other has mesmerizing eyes (foe saves vs petrification or be charmed) and tough skin (AC 4).

8-80: Shocking Moss

A rare form of moss, known as shocking moss (see new flora), covers the surfaces of this cave. In the presence of substantial quantities of metal (e.g., metal armor), the moss discharges electric blasts every 3 rounds. These shocks do 3-18 HP damage to anyone bearing metal (save for half damage). Touching (or walking on) the moss doubles the damage. The shocking moss is highly susceptible to fire, and can be burned off with ease. Should it be removed, a crude inscription in Varumani Semi-glyphik will be revealed in the stone of the north wall: it reads "This way to the citadel of the knights". An arrow points towards area 8-81.

The corridor between 8-80 and 8-81 is covered with more of the moss.

Note: This area is occluded by a thick cloud of bliss pollen (see new flora).

8-81: More Shocking Moss

Both this cave and the tunnel leading west and north to 8-80 is coated in the same shocking moss found at area 8-80. After 3 rounds in either the tunnel or the cave, a discharge worth 3-18 HP will be targeted at a PC wearing metallic armor. Touching the moss doubles the damage.

Another inscription in Mithric lies under the moss in the tunnel that approaches 8-81. It reads: "This way to the citadel" with an arrow pointing towards 8-82.

Note: This area is occluded by a thick cloud of bliss pollen (see new flora).

8-82: Tunnel up to SL10A-9

This tunnel leads upward at a gentle slope until it reaches area SL10A-9.

Note: For about 50' this tunnel is occluded by a thick cloud of bliss pollen given off by the bliss flowers in 8-67 (see description in level overview). Any person entering the tunnel must save versus petrification (-3 penalty) or wander randomly for 1-6 hours.

8-83: Ruined Storage Room

Once a storage chamber during the Archontean occupation, this chamber is bereft of anything interesting save some bare human footprints in the dust made by Olaf in 8-73; they lead west and south towards 8-74. The western wall of the chamber has collapsed, leaving piles of rubble on the floor.

Note: This area is occluded by a thick cloud of bliss pollen (see new flora).

8-84: Hall of Columnar Heroes

This long hallway served as an important connecting link for the Archontean areas of Level 8. While seismic activity over the past millennium has broken many of the connections, the hall itself is still in good shape.

The hallway is 15' tall, with sixteen 3'-diameter columns supporting the roof. Each column is carved in the form of an Archontean legionary, complete with banded mail, hoplite helmet, spear and gladius. The legionaries face different ways (north, south, etc.). Remnants of paint are visible here and there. The floor is dusty, but bare human footprints come and go towards area 8-83 (these were made by Olaf in 8-73).

One of the legionary columns (marked 'A' on the map) is not like the others. A compartment in its helmet opens, revealing an 8"-tall cavity. Inside the cavity is an extremely rare artifact of ancient Archontean sorcery, one of Caldornia's ausculatoris (see new monsters). This ausculator has the personality of Hamil the Southron, and was one of the main spies of the Archontean forces in Arden Vul more than 1,500 years ago. Hamil has grown insane from his long imprisonment, and proves a dangerous temporary 'ally'. He greets any rescuer with respect, referring to him/her as 'guv'nor' in heavily accented Archontean and offering his services. After 2-12 days, however, Hamil attempts to flee after stabbing his primary 'guv'nor' in the eyes while he/she sleeps.

Behind the doorway on the western edge of the south wall lies a collapsed corridor. Amid the rubble is a forgotten sack of adventuring gear: two coils of rope, six flasks of oil, a set of caltrops, and a potion of healing. The other broken hallways behind the doors on the north and south walls contain nothing of interest.

Inhabitants:

1. Hamil the Southron, one of Caldornia's ausculatoris (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LE; AC -1; MV 60'; HD 3; HP 18; #AT 3/2; Dmg 1-4/1-4; MR 25%. Special attacks: attack as 7th-level fighter. Special defenses: permanent silence; immune to fire, cold, lightning, hold, charm, and mind-affecting spells.

8-85: Campsite

The door to this chamber is stuck. The chamber within was once the office of an Archontean bureaucrat, and still features some recognizable painted frescoes showing the counting, storage, and exchange of coins by archaically-dressed officials. All furnishing are long gone, but a previous adventuring party created a convenient firepit here. The site would be a good place at which to camp.

Secret Compartment: A secret compartment exists in the west wall. It is difficult to locate (1 in 8), and open by pressing the largest coin on the western fresco. Doing so reveals a 3'x3' cubbyhole in which are stacked 25 ancient octagonal platinum coins (see Arden Vul items) and 450 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items).

8-86: Boarded-Up Chamber

Someone has attempted to prevent the door to this chamber from being opened from the south: boards run across it, hammered into the stone lintels with spikes.

Within are the ruins of an Archontean office. The only items of value amid the shattered desks, chairs, and scroll cabinets are a pair of spell scrolls. A pack of wights lurks here, hungry and menacing. They attack ferociously.

Inhabitants:

1. 13 wights: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 4+3; HP 35, 34, 33, 31, 30(x3), 29, 28, 27, 26(x3); #AT 1; Dmg 1-4. Special attacks: energy drain. Special defenses: silver or magic needed to hit; immune to sleep, charm, hold, cold, poison, and paralysis.

Treasure:

Two scrolls, one with the druid spell water breathing and the other with the magic user spell glasse.

8-87: Coal Seam

The rich seam of coal found here was mined by Zhorak in antiquity in order to fuel his forge (8-100). The walls are uneven, with indentations, multiple 3' mini-tunnels, and so forth. A thick layer of coal dust coats everything, including two stone dwarves apparently frozen in the act of wielding mining picks. The two dwarves are perfect in every respect – enough so that viewers might assume they had been petrified by a basilisk. In fact, the dwarves are constructs, built by Zhorak in his forge and known as Zhorak's miners (see new monsters).

Close examination of the two dwarves reveals two hints as to their nature: a thin slot in their sides, under the left arm, and faces that are a bit too smooth and idealized to be real. Inside the slot of each is a depleted rudishva lesser power supply (see new technological items). Should a full lesser power be inserted into one of Zhorak's miners, it will lurch into activity, attempting to complete its mining tasks. Interfering with a miner causes it to attack, at least until the nuisance(s) have retreated.

Given the coal dust on the floor, any use of fire in this chamber is extremely dangerous. Open flame (torches, etc.) has a 25% chance per turn to cause a coal explosion that inflicts 6-36 HP damage on any persons within the chamber. Fire spells produce similar effects.

For every turn the PCs are present there is a non-cumulative 10% chance that the huldugritti from 8-92 (see new monsters) decide to visit this cave. When first encountered, huldugritti are always in spirit form.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 Zhorak's miners (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 2; MV 60'; HD 5; HP 35, 24; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8. Special defenses: immune to fire, cold, and mind-affecting spells.
2. 1 huldugritti (see new monsters) (10% chance): for stats see area 8-92.

8-88: Depleted Gallery

This seam of iron and coal was mined to near exhaustion in antiquity. A pair of broken picks lies in the dust.

8-89: Iron Deposits

This cave contains a rich deposit of iron. Although none of Zhorak's miners are found here, their labors are evident. A spiral path leads from the floor up the wall of the cavern, rising slowly but steadily and gradually carving out deeper rings in the walls. The path rises a good 35' in height.

A pair of baindara (see new monsters), brought here by the dead adventurer on the floor of the cave, chatter nervously at the uppermost limit of the spiral path. More significantly, a huldugritti (see new monsters) lurks here, consuming the delicate iron dust and filings that still remain.

The corpse of a female elven magic user lies on the floor, slain by the huldugritti. The corpse contains some treasure, as well as the magic user's spell book.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 bairdara (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 8; MV 150'; 150' gliding; HD 1-1; HP 3, 2; #AT 1; Dmg 1-2.
2. 1 huldugritti (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 0 or 2; MV 120' or 60'; HD 8+8; HP 50; #AT 2 (in stone form); Dmg 2-16/2-16; MR 25%. Special attacks: hurl boulders (2-8 HP each). Special defenses: meld with stone (cure 3-24 HP); assume spirit form; +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to fire, electricity, and mind-affecting spells.

Treasure:

A linen pouch with six 100 gp pearls; a beautiful egg made of solid gold, chased with silver in geometric patterns (775 gp); an elven cloak; a wand of cold (10 charges); a staff +2; a spell book.

Spell Book: Alarm, charm person, detect magic, feather fall, floating disk, friends, hold portal, jump, magic missile, protection from evil; audible glamor; darkness 15' radius, detect invisibility, flaming sphere, forget, invisibility, magic mouth, mirror image, rope trick, shatter; blink, clairvoyance, cloudburst, dispel magic, explosive runes, fireball, gust of wind, haste, phantasmal force, suggestion, water breathing; charm monster, dig, fire shield, ice storm, plant growth, remove curse, stonewalk.

8-90: Depleted Iron Deposits

This side cave proved to contain a rich lode of iron, and Zhorak's miners extracted nearly every ounce of it.

For every turn the PCs are present there is a non-cumulative 10% chance that the huldugritti from 8-92 (see new monsters) will have decided to visit this cave. When first encountered, huldugritti are always in spirit form.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 huldugritti (see new monsters) (10% chance): for stats see area 8-92.

8-91: Mining Supplies

This wide spot in the mine holds two rickety wooden shelves, on which are a variety of mining implements: pick heads, shovels, wedges, mauls, canvas sacks for ore, and so forth. Inside one of the canvas sacks is a gold nugget worth 600 gp.

For every turn the PCs are present there is a non-cumulative 10% chance that the huldugritti from 8-92 (see new monsters) will have decided to visit this cave. When first encountered, huldugritti are always in spirit form.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 huldugritti (see new monsters) (10% chance): for stats see area 8-92.

8-92: Depleted Coal Seam

A rich coal seam used to run through this cavern, but Zhorak's miners extracted most of it in antiquity. The remaining dust makes for fine feeding grounds for a huldugritti (see new monsters); if the huldugritti has been encountered elsewhere (see chances at 8-87, 8-90, 8-91 and 8-93) it obviously will not be present here.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 huldugritti (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 0 or 2; MV 120' or 60'; HD 8+8; HP 56; #AT 2 (in stone form); Dmg 2-16/2-16; MR 25%. Special attacks: hurl boulders (2-8 HP each). Special defenses: meld with stone (cure 3-24 HP); assume spirit form; +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to fire, electricity, and mind-affecting spells.

8-93: Active Coal Seam

Two of Zhorak's miners (see new monsters) are frozen in mid-swing of the pickaxe here, having shut down when their power supplies became depleted. A pile of mined coal lies in the center of the cave. As with area 8-87, the miners could be reactivated by replacing the depleted rudishva lesser power supplies that power them.

For every turn the PCs are present there is a non-cumulative 10% chance that the huldugritti from 8-92 (see new monsters) will have decided to visit this cave. When first encountered, huldugritti are always in spirit form.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 Zhorak's miners (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 2; MV 60'; HD 5; HP 35, 24; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8. Special defenses: immune to fire, cold, and mind-affecting spells.
2. 1 huldugritti (see new monsters) (10% chance): for stats see area 8-92.

8-94: Mine Entrance

This broad cave was the initial site of Zhorak's mining endeavors. It is tall (40'), and ringed by a spiral pathway that allowed mining on all sides. At the top of the spiral path (on the west wall, above the passage to 8-95) is a coffer made of carved ivory plates; the carvings show exotic scenes of elephants being ridden into battle by distinctly non-Archontean humans. The coffer itself is worth 500 gp, but also contains a heqeti ring and an icon of Kauket (see new magic items for each).

A single huldugritti (see new monsters) inhabits this cave.

The passage to the west turns into worked stone, but is blocked by a formidable steel portcullis, the lever for which is in area 8-95. A lift gates roll is needed to budge the portcullis from this side.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 huldugritti (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 0 or 2; MV 120' or 60'; HD 8+8; HP 52; #AT 2 (in stone form); Dmg 2-16/2-16; MR 25%. Special attacks: hurl boulders (2-8 HP each). Special defenses: meld with stone (cure 3-24 HP); assume spirit form; +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to fire, electricity, and mind-affecting spells.

Treasure:

Carved ivory coffer (500 gp); icon of Kauket (see new magic items), and a heqeti ring (see new magic items)

8-95: Entrance Hall to the Forge

This tall octagonal chamber was the main public hall for Archontean dignitaries eager to visit the famous forge of Zhorak and, perhaps, to acquire some of the legendary smith's work. The ceiling here is 30' tall, and several continual light spells cast on the ceiling provide bright light.

The walls of the diagonal sides of the chamber are carved as colossal statues of crouching dwarves. These statues are rendered out of huge 10'-thick slabs of black basalt, which Zhorak bolted to the native granite. The dwarves have too-large eyes and thin grins on their half-open mouths; they are depicted in floppy Phrygian caps and tight-fitting leather half-coats. Each holds a distinct tool across its chest: one a hammer, another a set of tongs, the third a fuller, and the last a swage.

An octagonal dais about 3' tall occupies the center of the chamber. On the dais are three gleaming, silver, savonarola-style chairs in a row facing north. The chairs are carved with Dwarvish runes and images of dour-faced dwarves. Although the chairs appear to be solid silver, they are actually teak with a thick layer of silver gilt. As objects, they are worth 525 gp each; the silver gilt is worth a total of 175 gp.

8-95A: Tunnel down to Level 9 (9-139)

Amid the wreckage that once connected the forge to area 8-84 is a tunnel delved out of the loose rock. It descends in swoops and whorls at a rather precipitous pitch all the way down to area 9-139.

8-96: Ruined Workshop

This was Zhorak's design workshop, where he planned and sketched the creations he would produce in the forge. It has two beautiful sloped writing desks made of teak (150 gp, but heavy), three teak cabinets for scrolls and paper (100 gp each), plus a pair of teak stools (50 gp). A whirlwind of parchment appears to have been unleashed in the chamber – the result of frantic efforts to pack and 'loot' as the Archontes fled. Most of the parchment is useless, but there is a 1 in 6 chance per turn spent searching that something interesting might be unearthed. If an interesting result is indicated, roll on the following table to determine what is found (each may be found only once):

D6	Parchment	Notes
1	Magic user scroll of level 3-8, determined randomly
2	Forge Instructions: detailed notes on how to operate the forge	A guide for future smiths produced by Zhorak; includes important details such as the need to use his seal (8-97) to activate the enhanced forge. See text at 8-100.
3	Charcoal sketch of a dwarf	This is an accurate rendering of Zhorak himself, made by one of his apprentices. It could be sold to an Archontean collector for 75 gp, or presented to the dwarven kingdom of Kazildor (see World of Archontos appendix) for favors.
4	Formula and sketches for creating a chime of opening	The formula reduces the amount of arcanum required by ¼, and the amount of additional costly materials and time by ½.
5	Formula and sketches for creating a set of golden bracers of archery	The formula reduces the amount of arcanum required by ¼, and the amount of additional costly materials and time by ½.

6	Formula and sketches for creating a set of leather and steel gauntlets of ogre power	The formula reduces the amount of arcanum required by ¼, and the amount of additional costly materials and time by ½.
---	---	---

8-97: Zhorak's Retreat and Resting Place

Secret Door: The door is difficult to locate (1 in 8) and opens only by inserting a rounded, 2"-diameter object into a hidden aperture near the floor. A suitable object would be a ring with a correctly-sized stone, such as Zhorak's ring (see new magic items; currently in 8-115), although any similar object will work. Although the door can be propped open from the inside, it can only be opened from within if the true Zhorak's ring (8-115) is used from within; otherwise, intruders will be trapped once the door closes in an hour.

The chamber is only 6' tall and undecorated. Stone ledges 3' tall run along the walls of the chamber. In the center is a sunken area, 10' below the level of the floor. The sunken area contains a rope bed stretched across the west end of the area, plus a water barrel and a wooden chest. The ledges are scattered with scraps of metal, empty potion bottles, and unfinished projects. The true treasure of Zhorak, however, is Zhorak's hammer (see new magic items); it rests on a special rack by the west wall.

A dwarven corpse, desiccated but not visibly damaged, rests on the rope bed. On the wall by the bed, in Dwarven Runic, is scrawled the phrase "Burn me!". The corpse wears a finely carved seal matrix on a silver chain (50 gp) around its neck, and an elaborate copper-and-silver bracelet on its left wrist. These objects are the seal of Zhorak, which may be used to activate advanced features of the forge (8-100), and Zhorak's bracelet (see new magic items), which allowed him to control his miners. The corpse is Zhorak, who was deceived in the early years (1701 AEP) of the War of Sortians and Theosophs (see World of Archontos appendix) by his assistant, Lozor Hornfels, and died slowly of starvation in his own sanctum. Zhorak's spirit (see new monsters) haunts the place as a malign entity, eager to take vengeance on any of the living.

GM Note: Lozor Hornfels (see 8-115) smithed a replica of Zhorak's ring in secrecy. He managed to switch the two rings, hoping to gain power or influence by possession of the ring. When Zhorak entered his sanctum using the false ring, he became trapped within. As no one else knew the location of the sanctum, Zhorak slowly died; Lozor, afraid of retribution, fled but was slain in the cavern of 8-115.

Inhabitants:

1. Zhorak, undead spirit (see new monsters): SZ M; AL NE; AC 1; MV 120' flying (Class A); HD 9; HP 61; #AT 1; Dmg 3-12; MR 75%. Special attacks: energy drain; gaze instills hunger. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to sleep, charm, hold and cold; cannot be turned while remains are intact.

Treasure:

Zhorak's hammer (see new magic items); the seal of Zhorak (350 gp); Zhorak's bracelet (see new magic items); a beautiful white and yellow gold ring with a 2" jade stone, i.e., the false ring of Zhorak (1,750 gp); assorted scraps of precious metal and stones (350 gp total); slippers of stealth (see new magic items); and Zhorak's inert dwarven life-stone (see new magic items), which, due to his fame, would bring a reward of 10x its normal value if returned to Kazildor.

8-98: Zhorak's Quarters

This chamber served as Zhorak's private sanctum and living space. A patch of living mosaic (see new magic items) is set into the north wall; it is covered by a tattered bit of hanging cloth. This particular specimen is unusual, as it can call up images of most of the Archontean locations in the halls, provided the speaker issues commands in Dwarvish. It is possible to 'zoom' in on the mosaic by saying 'closer' in Dwarvish. The following table summarizes areas that may be viewed:

Level	Viewable Areas
Level 1	All
Level 2	All except areas 2-39 to 2-41 and 2-47 to 2-56
Level 3	All except areas 3-51, 3-111 to 3-116, 3-166 to 3-171, 3-180 to 3-192, 3-196, and 3-198 to 3-220
Level 4	All except areas 4-63 to 4-100, 4-112 to 4-118, 4-151, 4-165, 4-166, 4-172 to 4-176, 4-178, 4-179, 4-182 to 4-186, 4-1888 to 4-190
Level 5	Only areas 5-2, 5-6 to 5-14, 5-18 to 5-31, 5-41, 5-42, 5-53 to 5-56, 5-63 to 5-72, and 5-76 to 5-83
Level 6	Only areas 6-1 to 6-15, 6-18, 6-19, 6-41 to 6-44, 6-50, 6-52, 6-53, 6-55 to 6-59, 6-61 to 6-95, 6-136 to 6-145, 6-147 to 6-160
Level 7	Only areas 7-119 to 7-133, and 7-136
Level 8	Only areas 8-1 to 8-21
Level 9	Only areas 9-98 and 9-100 to 9-107
Sub-Level 2	Only area SL2-1
Sub-Level 3	Only areas SL3-2 to SL3-11
Sub-Level 4	All except areas SL4-1, SL4-2, SL4-4, SL4-21, SL4-28 to SL4-32, SL4-39, SL4-41, SL4-42, SL4-46, SL4-50, SL4-56, and SL4-61 to SL4-63
Sub-Level 6	Only areas SL6-1, SL6-2, SL6-5 to SL6-11, SL6-24 to SL6-30, SL6-32 to SL6-37, SL6-39
Sub-Level 7	All except SL7-9A, SL7-36, and SL7-37
Sub-Level 8	Only areas SL8-16 to SL8-24

The east wall features a fresco depicting an underground grotto – with pools, stalagmites, stalactites, flowstone in various colors, and so forth. An expert spelunker or dwarf will notice subtle touches of carving and shaping of the features of the grotto; in fact, the fresco is a scene from the famous (to dwarves) Grotto of Contemplation in Kazildor (see World of Archontos appendix). Dwarven PCs from that center of dwarven culture will recognize it immediately; others may just see the fresco as a dim, somewhat inert cavernscape. Detect magic reveals that the fresco is enchanted. Those who know the command word ("Home" in Dwarvish) can use the fresco to travel directly to the Grotto by literally stepping into the scene. Knowledge of the command word was limited to Zhorak himself; short of random guessing, the word can only be revealed by powerful planar or divine magic.

Other than these features, the chamber is mundane. Furniture includes a bed frame, an armoire, a scroll case, a low table and three dwarf-sized chairs, all exquisitely made out of teak (2,500 gp for the lot). Long strips of torn bedclothes litter the area, and almost all personal items were looted in antiquity. Careful inspection of the table reveals a hidden compartment cleverly concealed on its underside. Inside the compartment is a square of parchment that reveals Zhorak's doubts about his 2nd Tapper, Lozor Hornfels. It reads, in Dwarvish: "In case of my disappearance, Second Tapper Hornfels will undoubtedly be found to be responsible. He has been sniffing about my secrets for too long now. The color of his stone is off. As yet he does not know of my sanctum. Seek it to the southwest, and bring the true ring." It is signed with the distinctive seal of Zhorak. The note refers to area 8-97, and to Zhorak's (correct) suspicions that Lozor would betray him. Lozor's body may be found at 8-115.

8-99: Gallery of Goods

This 12'-tall, barrel-arched hallway was used to display Zhorak's finished items for visiting dignitaries. The floor is red marble. The walls are lined with 4'-tall ledges sheathed in blue marble. The ceiling was painted yellow, but most of the paint is flaking off in large strips. For obvious reasons, none of Zhorak's goods remain, with one exception: his enchanted blade, feather (see new magic items). It lies in a pile of paint flakes on the east ledge, waiting for someone to speak the command word that activates it from super-heavy to 'light as a feather'.

Treasure:

The magic sword, feather (see new magic items).

8-100: The Forge of Zhorak

The legendary forge of Zhorak is found in this tall (30') chamber. The walls are sheathed in red granite up to 20' in height, while the domed ceiling is covered in white marble tiles. A continual light spell cast at the peak of the dome provides light. Colossal (18' tall) statues of dwarven smiths flank both the eastern and western exits. The dwarves carry the same tools as the statues in area 8-95 (hammer, tongs, fuller and swage) and are carved such that they stare at the forge proper. The north wall carries a colossal carved face of a dwarf, one that visitors always assumed to be in the likeness of Zhorak himself.

The center of the chamber holds the elements of the forge: an x-shaped stone basin with rancid water, two anvils, a bellows, a bin containing a pile of lava rocks, and a glowing, white-hot forge.

Ten dwarves currently occupy the chamber. They are dressed in chain mail and carry weapons, and are busy inspecting the forge apparatus (although they do not appear to be operating it). See below for their reactions to visitors. GM Note: the dwarves are actually doppelgangers, a strike-force of special operatives taking part in the Endless War between dwarves and doppelgangers.

A pair of fresh corpses of human adventurers are piled against the northeast wall. They have been slain by weapons, and still bear some of their equipment.

Using the Forge: Basics

The solid elements of the forge – the basin and forge itself – are constructed of blocks of red granite, 3' tall and carved with geometric forms and Dwarven Runes. A helmeted dwarven face is carved on the north side of the forge, with its mouth open in a round 'o' about 6" in diameter.

The interior of the forge consists of a steel tray set into the granite. Scores of lava rocks litter the tray. Both tray and rocks are red hot with heat. Close inspection reveals that the tray is hinged, and could probably be opened downward once the mechanism were discovered. Inflicting 25 HP of damage on the tray will break it, spilling the rocks into the larger cavity below, a cavity in which a huge fire elemental has been imprisoned for millennia. Breaking the tray releases the fire elemental, which will attack furiously for 3-6 rounds before departing to the elemental plane of fire.

In its base configuration (closed tray with lava rocks), the forge is eminently usable, provided suitable tools and materials are located (e.g., those in 8-101) and the water in the basin replaced.

But to achieve more potent effects such as those for which Zhorak was famous, it is necessary to access the inner workings of the forge. To do so, one must procure Zhorak's seal (8-97) and place it in the open mouth carved on the north side of the forge. Doing so causes the metal grate to fall open, revealing a deeper forge fueled by the fire elemental. Placing any other object in the open mouth activates the iron golem at 8-100A, which crashes through the wall to defend the forge.

Using the Forge: Special Properties

What follows are special rules that modify and in some cases replace the standard rules for enchanting objects. Regular metallic equipment and jewelry may be imbued with magical effects in one of two ways. The first is for a competent smith to locate Zhorak's hammer (see new magic items; currently in 8-97), a potent magical item that allows the smith to impart certain spell effects into his craft. It should be noted that, while slightly more limiting in terms of possible magical effects, this method is far easier and was, in fact, how Zhorak himself operated. Method one requires the following: arcnum (see new magic items), Zhorak's hammer, and the appropriate items to be enchanted. The time needed for enchanting is a minimum of a week per effect (or plus). Any effects created with Zhorak's hammer are permanent. Each effect requires a certain amount of arcnum be added to the forge during the smithing process. Finally, the materials to be enchanted must be of the highest quality, and the smith must be above average in skill; those with no smithing experience will fail dismally. For the effects that may be enchanted, as well as the accompanying arcnum cost, see the write-up of Zhorak's hammer in the new magic items section.

The second method is more laborious, costly, and time-consuming, but allows a wider variety of magical effects to be enchanted. For method two, a smith and a magic user of at least 12th level (or a smith who is also a magic user of that level) must work together over the forge. The pair must possess the following: an object to be enchanted, arcnum, the spell enchant an item, the spell(s) appropriate to the effect to be created, and other ingredients worth 250 gp per level of spell to be created. This method requires substantial amounts of arcnum: 10 lb per spell level or plus to be created (e.g., 10 lb for a dagger +1; 20 lb for a detect evil ring, etc.). The time required for enchantment is two weeks per plus or equivalent spell level. Of course, to create permanent items the magic user must be higher level and have access to the 8th-level spell, permanency.

It is possible to combine methods one and two, that is, for a smith to use Zhorak's hammer in conjunction with a magic user of appropriate level. In so doing, one can create a wider array of effects than those native to the hammer itself, but at a faster and cheaper rate than if the hammer were not used. The cost and time for enchantment is halved when the hammer is used during method two.

The Doppelgangers

Ljots, a doppelgangers of exceptional power and intelligence, leads the expedition. His mission was to locate the forge of Zhorak, loot it of any valuables and intelligence usable in the Endless War, and then destroy it. The team has been operating in Arden Vul for many months, but only recently managed to ambush a dwarven party with a map to area 8-7; they have just used the teleportal there to access the forge. They have scouted areas 8-95 to 8-96 and 8-98 to 8-104, but have not (yet) entered the mines (8-94). Neither have they located areas 8-97 or 8-100A. While Ljots is content with his success in finding the forge, the other members of the team are growing restive, as they have become worried about how they will escape from the forge once their mission is completed. Ljots is unaware that other doppelgangers have infiltrated the Guild of Service (see 4-10).

The shape-changers are not necessarily hostile when encountering PCs. Ljots introduces himself as Arkose Scoria, a member of the famous clan Scoria. He speaks good Dwarvish and the common trade argot, but little Archontean; he apologizes that his brothers are nervous around non-dwarves and thus probably won't reply to questions. His cover story is that he has been sent by the Pyrite Council of Kazildor to locate Zhorak's old forge and, hopefully, his remains; 'Arkose' is also to evaluate the risks and rewards for establishing a new dwarven colony in Arden Vul. He explains that the human corpses are of bandits who tried to prevent the 'dwarves' from reoccupying what should be dwarven property.

Ljots wears a silver chain around his neck of the sort typical for a dwarven life-stone (see new magic items), but if it were possible to look at the stone (and it is a serious cultural insult to ask to see a dwarf's life-stone), it would instantly be apparent that the stone is inert and thus not connected to the life force of Arkose/Ljots. Three of the other doppelgangers speak Dwarvish and wear similarly inert life-stones tucked into their shirts. The other six speak no Dwarvish and have no life-stones.

If an adventuring party has no dwarves in it, Ljots and his companions will be much more at ease, as they feel confident their disguises are sufficient to fool non-dwarves. In such cases, the doppelgangers may share food and swap stories and maps with the PCs, hoping that the PCs will locate an exit from the area. Only if a non-dwarven party is aggressive or exceptionally stupid (like sleeping without guards) will the doppelgangers attack. If a party contains dwarven PCs, however, Ljots and his band will become visibly nervous the longer the PCs stay in the area. A dwarven PC has a base 10% chance of noticing some incorrect detail of their speech or disguises; this chance rises by 5% for every hour the PCs spend with the shapeshifters. The base chance is also modified as follows: +25% to base if PCs somehow learn that a number of the 'dwarves' speak no Dwarvish; +75% to base if a PC manages to glimpse one of the inert life-stones; +50% to base if a PC is familiar with the Scoria clan, and +100% if a dwarven PC is a member of that clan. Once the doppelgangers think that the PCs are beginning to grow suspicious, they attack viciously. If combat of any sort breaks out, Ljots uses his potions of rock melting (see new magic items) on the forge, thus unwittingly causing the iron golem (8-100A) to activate.

The Iron Golem (8-100A)

Zhorak created the iron golem as the main defender of his forge. It waits behind the stone wall at 8-100A until circumstances cause it to activate and burst through the wall. See 8-100A for details.

The Forge after Initial Encounters

If the PCs never discover the nature of Ljots and his fellows and depart in peace, then Ljots will eventually accomplish his mission and destroy the forge. Subsequent visits will find the forge wrecked and cold; substantial scorch marks (from the fire elemental) will be visible all over the area, and the corpses of eight doppelgangers will be scattered about the floor (torn apart by the iron golem). In such cases the iron golem will be ready and waiting to smite any new desecrators.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 fire elemental: SZ L; AL N; AC 2; MV 120'; HD 16; HP 114; #AT 1; Dmg 3-24. Special attacks: combustion. Special defenses: +2 weapons or better to hit.
2. Ljots, aka Arkose Scoria, more powerful doppelganger: SZ M; AL N; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 52; #AT 1; Dmg 7-14 (battle axe +2) or 3-6 (light crossbow +2). Special attacks: surprise 4 in 6. Special defenses: immune to charm and sleep; saves as a 10th-level fighter. Special: ESP. Possessions: dwarven-sized chain mail +2; helm of comprehend languages; a handy haversack; 4 potions of rock melting (see new magic items); a light crossbow +2 and 20 bolts; and a battle axe +2. Due to his natural doppelganger strength, he attacks with weapons like a human with STR 18/76 (i.e., +2 to hit, and +4 damage); these bonuses stack with the magic of his weapons.
3. 9 doppelgangers: SZ M; AL N; AC 5 or see below; MV 90'; HD 4; HP 25, 24, 23, 22; #AT 1; Dmg 1-12 or see below. Special attacks: surprise 4 in 6. Special defenses: immune to charm and sleep; saves as a 10th-level fighter. Special: ESP. The three toughest doppelgangers wear dwarven-sized chain mail, giving them AC 4; these three also carry war hammers +1 (6-9 damage). Due to their natural strength, they are +2 to hit and +3 to damage with weapons (bonuses stack with the magic of the weapons). The other doppelgangers fight as regular instances of their race.

Treasure:

On the human corpses: studded leather armor +1, a suit of chain mail, a spear +1, a two-handed sword +1 with the name 'Rex' inscribed on the blade, and a large shield +1, missile deflector.

In a special pouch tied to Ljots's belt: 4 potions of rock melting (see new magic items). He intends to use these four to destroy the forge.

On the doppelgangers, in addition to the worn equipment listed above: four inert dwarven life-stones (see new magic items), which could be returned to Kazildor for important favors; 3,472 sp; 3,954 gp; a coral statuette of a cephalopod, with quartz eyes (275 gp); a square of platinum stamped on both sides with the name 'Ljots' and yin-yang symbol (75 gp); 3 coils of silk rope; rations suitable for feeding ten persons for a week; two potions of poison; a potion of diminution; and six vials of concentrated acid.

They also have the map they used to locate Zhorak's Forge: a rectangular piece of copper inscribed with an image (the map) and a set of Dwarven runes. The runes state: 'Lord Zhorak made his home near the bottom of the chasm. Find the hall with the six basalt columns, then use the appropriate red circle.' The image shows two rows of four circles each; the third circle in the top row has an 'x' scratched through it. [GM Note: the map refers, of course, to area 8-7, with its six pillars and eight teleportals. It correctly indicates the proper teleporter for Zhorak's Forge (8-7C)].

8-100A: Iron Golem

Behind the northern wall of 8-100 stands a terrible iron golem, the creation of Zhorak the smith. The golem is a bit smaller than the 'usual' golem (10' instead of 12'), but if anything is better built than most. The golem appears as an armored, trim-bearded dwarf with runes incised on its back and a grim, unsmiling face. The runes read 'Zhorak' and 'Vengeance'. The golem carries a huge, two-handed stone hammer. It is inert until one of two circumstances occur: 1) if anything other than Zhorak's seal is inserted into the open mouth carved on the north side of the forge in 8-100; or 2) if damage is inflicted on any of the sculptural elements of area 8-100 (i.e., the carved dwarven statues) or the forge itself (including breaking the steel tray – see above), whether intentionally or not. In either case, the golem activates, bursting through the south wall to smite the intruders.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 iron golem: SZ L; AL N; AC 3; MV 60'; HD 18; HP 80; #AT 1; Dmg 4-40. Special attacks: poison gas. Special defenses: +3 or better weapons to hit; immune to all magic except electricity, which slows it; healed by fire.

8-101: Forge Materials

Zhorak used this chamber to store basic materials for the forge. Much remains: 40 5-lb ingots of iron (5 cp per bar), 25 5-lb ingots of steel (5 sp per bar), 20 5-lb ingots of silver (250 sp per bar), and 2 5-lb ingots of gold (250 gp per bar). There is also a large, but very heavy (100 lb), spool of silver thread (250 gp) and a similar spool of solder (250 cp).

8-102: Teleport destination from 8-7C

A 6'-diameter circle of shiny lapis tile is set into the western ell of this intersection; those using the teleporter at 8-7C arrive on the lapis circle.

8-103: Vats

Two 4'-diameter, 4'-tall stone vats once used in metal preparations occupy this storage area. Two human skeletons are slumped against the vats, bereft of equipment. One of the vats contains 4" of water floating above oil; the other is filled with strong acid. A very large gray ooze waits on the ceiling for other victims; it (and not the acid) ate all of the equipment of these treasure hunters.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 gray ooze: SZ L; AL N; AC 8; MV 10'; HD 3+3; HP 23; #AT 1; Dmg 2-16. Special attacks: corrode metal. Special defenses: impervious to spells; immune to heat and cold.

8-104: Arcanum Mother Lode

This chamber holds one of the largest pieces of arcanum (see new magic items) discovered in Arden Vul, and is the reason why Zhorak built his forge in this location. The door to the chamber is locked, with the key lost long ago. The chamber within is hemispherical and approximately 40' in diameter. The east end is dominated by an enormous pulsating orange rock, the arcanum source. A finely made set of chisels and hammers lie on the floor by the arcanum. Approximately 900 lb of usable arcanum may be harvested here. Of course, the usual side-effects for magic users are applicable.

8-105: Trapped Cube

Trapped within the corridor fragment is a large and very hungry gelatinous cube. It prefers to wait immediately behind the door frame, hoping that incautious prey will step through the door and into its body. A pile of gold coins lies on the floor beyond the cube.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 extra-large gelatinous cube: SZ L; AL N; AC 8; MV 60'; HD 6; HP 39; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8. Special attacks; paralysis; surprise on 1-3. Special defenses: partial immunity to cold; immune to electricity, fear, hold, paralyzation, polymorph, and sleep.

Treasure:

33 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items).

8-106: Almost Empty Chamber

The walls of this former guardroom are covered with poorly-executed images of Archontean legionaries marching, advancing in line, and carousing. A 3' layer of trash litters the floor and rises against the walls on all sides, with the important exception of a 10'-diameter circle in the exact center of the chamber. This circle is completely clean of dust and debris, except for a dwarf-sized skeleton that appears to be reaching for the object in the center of the circle. That object is a cylinder, about 6" in diameter and 18" tall, made of a yellow metallic substance. A red light blinks on the top face of the cylinder.

Despite the ominous impressions given by the cylinder, it is nothing more than a rudishva dust ionizer (see new technological items), a device that keeps 10'-diameter areas clean of dust. How the dust ionizer came to be present here is unknown. The skeleton is without equipment.

Secret Door (east): The door is normal to find and opens by pushing inwards with brute force.

8-107: Tomb of Sulla Bellator

The door to this area is locked. Within is the tomb of Sulla, nicknamed 'the Battler' (or Bellator), a famous Archontean military commander from antiquity.

The entrance hallway is covered on wall and ceiling by quarter-round reliefs showing an Archontean polemarch personally leading legionaries against goblins, varumani, and heqeti. The commander wears an archaic hair style, with tight, neck-length ringlets. He wields a battle axe in one hand, and displays his baculus of authority in the other.

The tomb proper is 20' tall and dominated by impressive sculpture. A life-sized statue of Sulla Bellator stands against the west wall. Sulla stares with a half-smile and open eyes. Strangely, although his face and bottom inch of his hair are finely carved, the rest of his head is smooth, as if the sculptor did not finish his work or did not intend for it to be seen. The same is true of the body, which aside from the hands and shoes lacks any detail.

An inscription in Mithric is carved on the wall to the right and left of the statue; it reads: "Sulla Bellator, fiercest of the fierce, bravest of the brave, who always led from the front. Beloved by his men, admired by the archons, he gave his image and spirit to the Myrmex." [GM: the inscription refers to the fact that Zhorak modelled the infamous Myrmex – see SL6-22 – on Sulla.]

The north and south walls feature more of the quarter-round sculptures seen in the entrance hall.

The center of the chamber is dominated by a 15'-square platform. Four 8'-tall stone legionaries point their spears towards the center, where Sulla's sarcophagus rests. The spearmen are Archontean animated constructs (see new monsters), who animate only under the circumstances listed below.

The sarcophagus is simple black basalt, with the Mithric inscription 'Sulla' and an image of a battle axe. Resting on the sarcophagus are a polemarch's helmet and cuirass, along with legionary greaves and arm guards. The workmanship of each piece is exceptional, and none of the set shows sign of rust or decay. In fact, the set is magical, the fabled armor of Sulla (see new magic items). Although a seam runs around the sarcophagus and thus appears to suggest that the lid is removable, this is a trick. Attempting to force open the 'lid' triggers the block trap and causes the animated spearmen to lurch into action.

The only way to access the actual interior of the sarcophagus is to adorn the statue of Sulla on the west wall with his armor. Indeed, it is immediately apparent to those who bring the armor to the statue that the 'unfinished' portions of the statue are designed for the armor. Should the armor be placed on Sulla, the sarcophagus will grind to the north, revealing a shallow compartment. Inside the compartment are Sulla's bones, plus his baculus of authority, a sunburst medallion of gold and platinum, and Sulla's battle axe (see new magic items). Unfortunately for looters, adorning the statue properly also causes the statue of Sulla to animate as an imperial stone guardian (see new monsters). Once "Sulla" has been defeated, the armor and other loot are free for the taking.

Trap (stone block): Attempting to remove the lid of Sulla's sarcophagus causes a rectangular stone block to drop from the ceiling in the entrance hallway. The block grinds downward, destroying the carvings on the walls and leaving only an 8" gap between the top of the block and the ceiling. The trap is normal to detect, but impossible to disarm.

Inhabitants:

1. 6 Archontean animated constructs - spearmen (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 2; MV 60'; HD 6; HP 45, 40, 38, 37, 35, 33; #AT 1; Dmg 5-10; MR 25%. Special defenses: immune to elemental magic, poison, and mind-affecting spells; +1 or better weapons to hit; half damage from slashing or piercing weapons.
2. Sulla, the imperial stone guardian: (see new monsters): SZ L; AL N; AC -2; MV 90'; HD 8+3; HP 64; #AT 2; Dmg 3-18/3-18; MR 50%. Special defenses: +2 or better weapons to hit; immune to missiles (including magic missile), fire, cold, mind-affecting spells (e.g. charm), and most immobilizing spells (immune to entangle, hold monster, web).

Treasure:

The armor of Sulla (see new magic items); Sulla's battle axe (see new magic items); an archaic polemarch's baculus, in ebony with silver chasings (1,550 gp to a collector); and a sunburst medallion in gold and platinum with the Archontean numeral '5' (a 'V') set out in small rubies (4,500 gp). The medallion was given to Sulla to commemorate his command of the V Scutarii legion.

8-108: Blue Haze Lichen

This cavern is covered with a patch of psychotropic pale-blue lichen known as "blue haze" (see new flora). The lichen covers all the walls, floor and ceiling of this cave.

Secret Door (to 8-106): The door is easy to spot from this side (1 in 4), but must be pulled inward to open.

8-109: Cave with Pool

The center 20'x20' section of this cavern is filled with 15' of crystal clear water that has dripped from the walls over the ages. A skeleton in rotted leather armor can be glimpsed at the bottom of the pool. A strange, translucent ochre jelly floats atop the pool, ready to devour any who swim for the skeleton.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 translucent ochre jelly: SZ M; AL N; AC 8; MV 30'; HD 6; HP 39; #AT 1; Dmg 3-12. Special defenses: lightning divides into half-sized creatures.

Treasure:

Next to the dead adventurer at the bottom of the pool is a battered steel box containing four 100 gp pearls.

8-110: Tunnel down to Level 9 (9-150)

This tunnel corkscrews downward until it debouches at area 9-150.

8-111: Memory Trap

The floor of this large cavern is pitted with uneven dips and hummocks. Remnants of worked stone floor slabs are evident by the northwest exit. Seven stone figurines hang from strings in the northeastern section of the chamber; each figurine is about 18" tall, with arms and legs twined about an unrealistically-large, gaping mouth. They are painted bright primary colors. Approaching within 15' of any of the figurines triggers a nasty magical trap (see below) that is set and maintained by the rakshasas nearby (see 8-125).

Trap (memory loss): Anyone approaching within 15' of any of the seven figurines must save vs. spells or have his/her memories erased. The trap is detectable as normal, but cannot be disarmed short of magical means (e.g., dispel magic by a 9th-level or greater spell caster). The trap causes the memories to be transferred to one of the empty vessels found in the rakshasas' 'trophy room' (8-126). Each figurine can only erase one being's memories before becoming inert; six of the figurines are still 'charged'. Memories that are erased include the victim's name, life story, friends, recent events, and so forth; anything considered to be 'passive' memory, such as language and knowledge of skills (including) combat, is not affected. A magic user affected by this trap thus would be able to memorize spells as usual, provided someone explained the process to him/her. Should PCs attempt to destroy the figurines from a distance with missiles or spells, they find that the figurines are immune to most attacks; only dispel magic (as stated above) is effective. Memories erased by a figurine can be restored by destroying the appropriate vessel in the trophy room. After three weeks, the rakshasas will have recharged any 'used' figurines and/or replaced any that have gone missing.

Secret Door (northeast): The door is normal to detect, and opens in one of two ways: either a rakshasa tooth must be inserted into a hidden hole, or a successful lift gates roll must be made to force it open.

GM Note: Most victims of the memory erasing trap end up as food for the rakshasas in 8-125, but a few manage to stumble away to other parts of Arden Vul. Four such victims are Hakreon (currently at 7-76), Kormak (currently at 8-132), Justine Two-Hands (currently at 9-130), and Niskim the goblin (8-114). The GM may wish to include other wanderers who have lost their memory.

Note: This area is occluded by a thick cloud of bliss pollen (see new flora).

8-112: Paranoid Adventurers

This strange worked chamber is protected by two locked steel doors with closable eye-slits. Inside are two adventurers who have lost their minds in the bliss pollen. The pair has holed up inside the chamber, fearful of the imaginary threats they perceive without. They talk furtively to any visitor through the eye-slit in either door before inevitably freaking out in a loud and possibly violent tantrum. Any conversation prior to the freakout is likely to be paranoid and weird. If the adventurers are somehow subdued and allowed to recuperate in a safe environment for 3-6 weeks, they are grateful to their rescuers and offer information about their route into the Halls.

They entered at the pyramid (3-1), descended via 3-7 to the goblin caves on Level 5 (3-44A to 3-48), passed across the sundered span (5-35), descended the troll lift at 5-54 to Level 6 (6-1), journeyed to the Arena (6-58 to 6-86) where they witnessed some bouts, descended to Level 7 (via 6-64 to 7-42), and located the tunnel at area 7-40 that led them to Level 8 (8-137). They can describe all these areas accurately, and can give useful advice on dealing with the neutral factions found en route. Their advice concerning Level 8 is a bit hazier: they descended the cliff at 8-137, paid tribute to the varumani at 8-136, and then wandered north, where the pollen took them. Their comrades are gone. In addition to this valuable information, the pair might be willing to join an appropriately aligned party.

If and when the chamber is eventually accessed, PCs will find it foul-smelling and devoid of much interest. A waste bucket, a small keg of water, a cold fire pit and two bedrolls constitute the entirety of the furnishings. In his madness Laertes has scrawled numerous cryptic phrases on the walls in Archontean. A sampling include: "They come! They come? Who are they? Latch the gate and do not let them in. The dwarf changes his shape – do not trust it!"

Inhabitants:

1. Keller, nicknamed 'Killer Keller', 6th-level male Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL CN; AC 2; MV 120'; HD 6; HP 59; #AT 1; Dmg 3-8 (spear +1), 1-6 (long bow). Abilities: STR 16, INT 8, WIS 8, DEX 10, CON 16, CHA 14. Possessions: chain mail +1 and shield +1; spear +1; long bow with 20 arrows; a pouch with 339 sp and 128 gp; a potion of healing.
2. Laertes the Lithe, 6th-level male Archontean magic user: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 6; HP 18; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (staff +1). Abilities: STR 8, INT 16, WIS 7, DEX 15, CON 11, CHA 9. Possessions: bracers of defense (AC 6); staff +1; wand of magic missiles (21 charges); a sack of gold dust (375 gp); a purse with 251 sp and 37 gp; a potion of explosive acid and a potion of deafening light (see new magic items for both). Spells memorized: burning hands, charm person, hold portal, sleep; detect invisibility, stinking cloud; fireball, hold person.

Laertes's Spell book: Burning hands, charm person, detect magic, friends, grease, hold portal, magic missile, sleep, spider climb, write; detect invisibility, ESP, levitate, locate object, rope trick, stinking cloud; dispel magic, fireball, hold person, lightning bolt, secret page, slow.

8-113: Ledge

This ledge is 40' above the floor of the cavern of the bliss flowers (8-67), and provides access to other parts of the level. It is littered with the husks of dead giant bees.

Note: This area is occluded by a thick cloud of bliss pollen (see new flora).

8-114: Confused Goblin

Niskim, the goblin commander of a failed expedition sent by Weskenim (SL4-22) to locate the fabled scepter of the goblins (see new magic items), wanders about here in a daze. In addition to having been affected by the bliss pollen, Niskim has had her memories erased by one of the figurines in 8-111. She is unable to provide any information about herself, her mission, or how/why she happens to be present in this cavern.

Note: This area is occluded by a thick cloud of bliss pollen (see new flora).

Inhabitants:

1. Niskim, goblin sub-chief (as a hobgoblin): SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 1+1; HP 7; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8 (long sword). Possessions: long sword. She carries a pouch with six pieces of jasper (50 gp each) and a piece of dried human skin on which is drawn a crude sketch of a scepter along with the words "Find this!" in goblin. The sketch reflects the goblin court's best guess as to what the scepter looks like, and bears little resemblance to the actual object, which may currently be found at 8-69.

8-115: Dead End with Skeleton

The skeleton of a dwarf lies crushed under a large piece of stone in the northeast extension. This is Lozor Hornfels, 2nd Tapper under Zhorak the Smith (see 8-97). Lozor fled the forge area in antiquity but got lost in the pollen haze and was killed in a freak accident here. He carries the true ring of Zhorak (see new magic items), which he stole from Zhorak and which is necessary to open the secret door to 8-97.

Note: This area is occluded by a thick cloud of bliss pollen (see new flora).

Treasure:

The ring of Zhorak (see new magic items); Lozor's inert dwarven life-stone (see new magic items).

8-116: Knights' Rest

Secret Doors (north and east): The stone doors are identical. They are normal to find, but difficult to open. The doors only open after a 1"-diameter object is inserted into a small hole in the ceiling; the holes are perfectly sized for the tip of a sun lance carried by a Sun-Scarred Knight (see new monsters). Of course, destructive magic or a successful lift gates roll will also open either door.

The chamber was claimed by the Sun-Scarred Knights as a safe house in which wandering knights could rest, recuperate, and resupply. Two thick, plush carpets, one with geometric patterns and the other displaying an octagonal tower rising out of a cavern (a representation of SL10A-14), cover the floor. Two hammocks slung in the corners, two simple wooden chairs, a low table, a water keg, a tripod of heating (see new magic items), and an unlocked wooden chest complete the furnishings.

The chest contains dried rations suitable for one person for four weeks, 500 gp (several hundred years old, but not yet 'ancient'), 10 ancient octagonal platinum coins (see Arden Vul items), a silk pouch with seven carnelians (50 gp each), twenty flasks of oil, a tinder box, a hammer, a scribe's case with ink and parchment, and three well-worn codices bound in blue leather. The titles of the codices are: the Secret Courtship of Julius the Exarch, The Thirty-seven Quips of Balak the Sage, and the Lives of the Noble Founders, Arden and Vul (see appendix of Arden Vul books).

The Sun-Scarred Knight, Sir Discord, along with his varlet, Rorgo, are currently resting here (see new monsters). Sir Discord is one of the few knights who cares little for those he encounters while on his missions; he is just as likely to attack and overcome those in his path as he is to converse with them. Should PCs penetrate this chamber while Discord is still present, he will certainly take it as an offense and will attack with all his resources. If Discord and Rorgo have already been encountered at 8-117 (see text there), they will not be present here.

Sir Discord's mission is to locate the scepter of the goblins (see new magic items). To this end he has cultivated the fantasies of the goblin mystic, Gislú (4-2). In so doing he has annoyed his colleague, Sir Sorrow (SL4-19), who is attempting to prop up the powers of the goblin king. Discord and Rorgo are hunting for the scepter (found at 8-69), which they rightly believe to be in the Nether Reaches.

Inhabitants:

1. Sir Discord, the Sun-Scarred Knight (see new monsters), 11th-level male Wisikin fighter: SZ M; AL LE; AC -2; MV 120'; HD 11; HP 97; #AT 3/2; Dmg 7-13 (bastard sword +2), or 4-7 (dagger), or 3-6 (light crossbow and bolts +2). Abilities: STR 18/25, INT 9, WIS 11, DEX 10, CON 17, CHA 12. Possessions: key to SL10A-16, gothic armor and sun lance (see new technological items); solar ring, circlet of command, and backpack of capacity (see new magic items for all three); bastard sword +2; dagger, light crossbow and 20 bolts +2; a purse with 77 sp, 61 gp, and 111 ancient copper bits (see Arden Vul items).
2. Rorgo, varlet to Sir Discord, and a 5th-level male Thorcin fighter: SZ M; AL CN; AC 2; MV 120'; HD 5; HP 48; #AT 1; Dmg 6-13 (long sword +2) or 1-6 (short bow). Abilities: STR 18/47, INT 11, WIS 10, DEX 12, CON 16, CHA 14. Possessions: chain mail +2 and shield; long sword +2; short bow with 18 arrows; 2 potions of heroism.

8-117: Wet Cave

This cave drips with moisture. For every two turns spent here, there is a 20% (noncumulative) chance that Sir Discord and Rorgo will emerge into the cave from the secret door to 8-116. In such circumstances, Discord takes lethal action immediately in order to preserve the secret location of the knights' rest hall. Discord will pursue to the death those who flee from him.

Inhabitants:

20% chance every two turns for Sir Discord and Rorgo (see stats at 8-116).

8-118: Table Rock Cave

A 15'-diameter rock formation in the center of this cave is flattened and resembles a round table. On it rest three tarnished silver cups, upside down (20 gp each). One cup pins a note to the rock: "Discord - return to the Citadel at once. The Master needs you." It is sealed with an image of a sunburst.

GM Note: The note refers to Sir Discord, currently in 8-116; the Master is Malachite, aka the leader of the Sun-Scarred Knights SL10A-32).

8-118A: Trap! Hole in the Floor

To the east of the large cave at 8-118 is a jagged, 6'-diameter hole in the tunnel floor. It leads through 3' of rock, through the ceiling of area 8-124, and then drops 10' to the floor. Due to the light and uneven conditions of the tunnel, the hole should be treated as a pit trap, albeit with a bonus for discovery (+10% to detect traps). Those falling through the hole take 2-7 HP damage, and are immediately confronted by the denizens of 8-124.

8-119: Temple of Besa: Entrance

The original entrance to the Archontean temple of Besa is found here. Although one of the Twelve and hence an official deity of the ancient Archontean, Besa's portfolio - potency, pleasure, violence and hedonism - ensured that worship of the Sloe-Eyed Lady would be relegated to hidden and often secret locations within the empire. In Arden Vul, her temple was located deep within the Nether Reaches, accessible to those who knew where to look but suitably removed from the more proper grand temples of Thoth and Set.

The entrance hall gives a taste of what is to come: three pillars carved with scenes of the grinning goddess alternating between acts of love and acts of violence, and walls featuring badly worn frescoes depict cavorting men and women, the women voluptuous and the men priapic. Their activities include both pleasure and pain.

An invisible glyph is inscribed on the west wall; it is instantly apparent to illusionists, but invisible to all others. The glyph simply states, in Archontean, "Danger." The existence of the glyph is revealed by detect magic, although non-illusionists who attempt to render it visible (by spells such as detect illusion or true seeing) must save vs spells or suffer confusion for 2-8 turns.

To the east is a niche containing a 5'-diameter circle of rose quartz set in the floor. This is the destination point for the teleporter at 8-7D.

A tunnel carved out of the ruined corridor leads downward to Level 9 (9-147).

The curved hallways leading downward to area 8-120 feature more of the same frescoes – voluptuous and priapic young men and women engaged in a variety of unusual acts. Despite the fading to the wall art, the floor is clear of dust and debris.

8-120: Temple of Besa: Main Temple

The site of many debaucheries in antiquity, the main temple of Besa is currently quiet, if remarkably well preserved. Soft red light emerges from sconces set into the walls, illuminating the boudoir-like qualities of the temple. Eight slim columns rise to the 20' ceiling; they are carved like the pillars at 8-119, with erotic images. Between the pillars is a sunken area, from which arises the cult statue of Besa. The floor around the pillars is covered with thick, plush red carpeting. Low platforms covered with red silk sheets and red pillows occupy the north, east and west points of the chamber. In these three locations, tapestries hang behind the platforms: one shows a surprisingly modest version of the well-known tale, the Ravishing of Besa; a second depicts Besa presiding over a scene of torture; and the third depicts a number of naked men writhing on imperial impaling spikes. The remainder of the walls display a mix of erotic and violent frescoes. Doors are concealed behind the east and west tapestries.

A rudishva, clad in an orange jumpsuit, is busily taking rubbings of the pillar carvings on a large piece of parchment. He introduces himself casually in accented Archontean as “Vatapi, one of the few survivors of the crash.” Vatapi is not aggressive, and seems content to negotiate and converse with visitors. If treated well, he chats happily and may invite visitors to meet his fellow survivor, Tataka, for a meal (in 8-124). If treated in a hostile manner, he responds with ‘hurt’ and disappointment before drinking his invisibility potion and attempting to join his friends in 8-125.

Vatapi’s Story and Information: Vatapi reveals the following to friendly visitors: he and another rudishva lived throughout the Archontean era with the help of key technology that they had squirreled away. When the Archontean abandoned Arden Vul, they sought a safe location far from the politics and warfare of the new factions. They found it here, in this ‘strange human temple dedicated to the pleasure/pain principles.’ Here they have lived in harmony for millennia, waiting rescue from the stars. Vatapi can provide the following information: he knows the forge of Zhorak is nearby, to the northwest; he knows of the bliss pollen and its effects (8-69), and might be willing to trade some rudishva breathing technology to the PCs in return for ‘stories of adventure’; several groups of goblins have come through, looking for a scepter, but Vatapi had to disappoint them, and they left via the tunnel at 8-119; he knows of two other rudishva survivors, the Lord of the Arena (6-85) and Psalor-Ki (5-75), although Vatapi considers both of them to be insane criminals; the occasional wandering monster appears in their domain, having unwittingly used the teleporter at 8-7, but Vatapi and his companion have been able to defeat or repel them all.

Vatapi’s True Nature and Agenda: In fact, Vatapi is the leader of a trio of rakshasas that has occupied this area for many hundreds of years. He uses his illusion powers to appear as a rudishva and to make the ancient temple appear to be fresh and clean. Vatapi’s real plan, however, is to lower the PCs’ inhibitions, invite them to share a meal with him in area 8-124 (allegedly so the ‘rudishva’ can learn about the PCs’ adventures), and then launch a surprise attack.

Statue of Besa: This impressive statue is 17’ tall and composed of ivory with accents in colored stone and other natural materials. It depicts Besa, the Sloe-Eyed Lady, in the midst of her famous erotic dance. She is naked, with arms upraised, and long black hair whirled around her body (the hair is actual human hair affixed cleverly to the ivory). Her face is strangely impersonal, almost like a kouros, with almond eyes and a fixed, grinning mouth.

Despite the long habitation of the rakshasas in this region, the spirit of Besa still inhabits her statue. Touching either of her breasts conveys a magical blessing, and those who engage in vigorous sexual or violent behavior in the statue’s presence have a 5% chance per day (and per act) to open a direct channel to Besa herself. The blessing takes the form of increased attractiveness to objects of desire for a month; practically, this adds +50% to reaction rolls when the blessed person encounters those he/she finds attractive. The direct channel to Besa can result in one of four ‘gifts’. Each gift comes with a side-effect. Besa can only appear directly once per month, regardless of how many petitioners seek to summon her.

D4	Gift	Side Effect
1	Magical Protection: petitioner receives spell immunity for 1-4 hours	Increased libido; petitioner must save vs. spells each time he/she encounters an attractive person. The side effect lasts for 1 month.
2	Information: Besa truthfully and fully answers three questions posed by the petitioner	Increased bloodthirstiness: petitioner must save vs spells or actively seek to bloodily dismember all enemies, regardless of risk. Effect lasts for a month.
3	Beauty: petitioner’s CHA is increased. For those with CHA 15 or above, the increase is +1; for those with CHA less than 15, the increase is +2.	Loss of wisdom: petitioner’s WIS is reduced by two for a month.
4	A pure gift: Besa grants a wish to the petitioner	Geas: Besa imposes a geas on the petitioner, either to restore one of her temples here or elsewhere, to achieve 20 sexual conquests in two months, or to slaughter bloodily and publicly ten powerful foes (at GM’s wish) within four months.

The statue is immensely valuable (20,000 gp), both in terms of materials and historical significance, but removing it from her shrine incurs Besa’s wrath. Among the punishments meted out to desecrators include a permanent lowering of CHA by 2, the permanent disappearance of libido, and a permanent reduction of -20% to all reaction rolls. Should desecrators realize the errors of their ways and restore the statue, the curses will be lifted. Otherwise only the highest level divine intervention or high level magic (e.g., a wish spell) can remove the curses.

Inhabitants:

1. Vatapi, the 'rudishva' (actually a rakshasa): SZ M; AL LE; AC -4; MV 150'; HD 7; HP 49; #AT 3; Dmg 1-3/1-3/2-5. Special defenses: ESP; affected only by 8th-level spells or greater; immune to normal weapons; half damage from +1 and +2 weapons. Cleric spells: curse, light, fear. Magic user spells: charm person, jump, magic missile, sleep; audible glamer, darkness 15' radius, mirror image; dispel magic, suggestion. Possessions: rudishva jump suit; rudishva breather (see new technological items); potion of invisibility; wand of frost (22 charges); and one half of a pair of amulets of return (see new magic items).

Treasure:

The statue of Besa (20,000 gp), removal of which bears heavy consequences as described above.

8-121: Temple of Besa: Cubicles

The entrance to each of these five cubicles appears to be covered by a thick, luxurious black-velvet drape. Inside each cubicle is a 3'-tall stone platform strewn with red, yellow, and black silk pillows. In antiquity these cubicles served as private rooms for the depravities of the followers of Besa. The luxurious appearance of these cubicles is the product of an illusion cast and maintained by the rakshasas (see 8-120, 8-124, and 8-125). In reality, the drapes and pillows are rotting and tattered.

8-122: Temple of Besa: Inner Fane

This area was the site of the most secret and perverse rituals of the inner cult of Besa. Five more cubicles line the north wall, each equipped with restraints, low beds, and luxurious black silken sheets and pillows. As with the neighboring cubicles, the luxurious appearance is the product of an illusion; in reality the sheets and pillows are tattered and decrepit.

Another invisible phrase is inscribed on the south wall; it is instantly apparent to illusionists, but invisible to all others. It states the following, in Archontean: 'Flee now, lest the ghost of the priestess consume you!' The existence of the glyph is revealed by detect magic, although non-illusionists who attempt to render it visible (by spells such as detect illusion or true seeing) must save vs spells or suffer confusion for 2-8 turns.

A 70'-long freestanding wall runs across the center of the chamber, blocking sight of the cubicles. The floor south of the wall is sheathed in purple marble, while floor-length black velvet drapes conceal the niche containing the 10'-tall marble cult statue of Besa. The beauty of her naked body is slightly marred by the numerous cuts and bruises that cover her marble flesh, and by the fact that her left leg and right arm seem to have been carved as if they had been broken. Besa's face shows a smile, but a grim, humorless smile. The whiteness of the marble has been marred by a strange glyph inscribed in a circle with black paint across her chest and abdomen. In her left hand, Besa clutches a gold djed amulet (see new magic items); it could be removed by breaking the statue's hand or through a slow (2-4 turns) and careful process of jimmying it free.

The glyph is demonic in origin, and serves to deny spirits entrance to an object or location; the rakshasas have used it to prevent Besa from manifesting in her cult statue. Should the glyph be erased, through the use of holy water, and a ceremony of hallowing performed, Besa's spirit will return to the statue within 1-100 hours. Once she has returned, the same effects found at 8-120 can be produced through the same actions.

The spirit of Besa's last high priestess, a certain Bunefer, haunts the cubicles in the north part of the chamber as a spectre. The spectre attacks mortal intruders within 4-7 round of their arrival. It does not molest the rakshasas, however, for reasons explained below. Should the spirit of Besa be restored to her statue, Bunefer the spectre will be transformed into a wraith.

Bunefer's Story: As the Archontean hegemony crumbled, Bunefer attempted to maintain the usual ceremonies of the temple. But the demand for pleasure and pain waned in the face of more pressing issues, and both worshippers and lesser priestesses drained away. When Bunefer sought permission from Besa to close the temple, even temporarily, the goddess was irate, and punished Bunefer by slaying her and raising her as a wraith. She haunted the temple for hundreds of years until the rakshasas arrived. Vatapi convinced the wraith that they could help Bunefer repair her relationship with Besa, and even hinted that Bunefer could be restored to life. The first step in this process, according to the duplicitous Vatapi, was to conduct rituals on the cult statue of Besa. This ritual, which banished Besa, increased Bunefer's power by making her a spectre, but did not bring her back to life. The rakshasas have convinced the rather dim Bunefer that the devouring of a certain number of souls is necessary to accomplish her goals. Although they are clearly using her to attract prey, Bunefer is not smart enough to realize it; she continues to aid the rakshasas in the vain hope that this will abet her condition.

Inhabitants:

1. Bunefer, a spectre: SZ M; AL LE; AC 2; MV 150', 300' flying (Class B); HD 7+3; HP 53; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8. Special attacks: energy drain. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to sleep, charm, hold, cold, poison, and paralysis. In some circumstances, Bunefer will become a wraith: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 120', 240' flying (Class B); HD 5+3; HP 32; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: energy drain. Special defenses: silver or magic weapons to hit; immune to sleep, charm, hold, cold, poison, and paralysis.

Treasure:

A djed amulet (see new magic items), in the left hand of the statue of Besa. The velvet curtain was ensorcelled in antiquity to prevent decay; it could be sold for 250 gp.

8-123: Temple of Besa: Cubicles

These five cubicles are identical to those at 8-121, with drapes, pillows and low platforms. The furnishings appear luxurious, but are in fact the product of illusions produced by the rakshasas.

8-124: Temple of Besa: Common Room

A wooden trestle some 20' in length table stands in the center of this chamber. Four 5'-long benches encircle it. The table groans with delicious, but exotic food set in simple wooden and copper serving vessels. There are spicy vegetable dishes, a succulent-smelling roast, cups of wine, and a quivering sweet pudding. The walls are decorated with ancient and faded frescoes showing naked diners at a feast enjoying both a variety of Archontean dishes and each other.

If Vatapi (8-120) has been encountered previously and the PCs are on neutral terms with him, then he will likely be present here, attempting to get the PCs to join him at the feast and trade stories. His cover story, as recounted at 8-120, is that he and his companion, Tataka, possess a rudishva food processor which allows them to live and dine well. If the PCs agree to dine with him and share stories, he begs a few rounds (1-6) to fetch his companion, Tataka, from their home. If the PCs somehow have not encountered Vatapi previously, have slain him, or have through their actions caused him to flee from 8-120, then the chamber appears empty of inhabitants (although the food is still present).

In fact, the food is far simpler than it appears, having been enhanced by the rakshasas' illusion powers: the vegetable dishes are moldy mushrooms, the wine is water, and the desserts are lichen patched together with water and mud.

But the true horror of the meal is the roast, for the meat is actually the body of Ilvala, the third of the rakshasas dwelling here. The rakshasas' evil plan is to get visitors to consume the apparently innocuous meat, not knowing that it is in fact the temporarily dismembered body of their comrade. Once Ilvala has been consumed, Vatapi can magically reconstitute Ilvala's body thanks to their possession of a pair of amulets of return (see new magic items). When Ilvala is reconstituted within a diner's stomach, the reconstitution effectively kills the diner as the pieces of meat transform into a full-sized rakshasa. Death occurs in 1-4 rounds. Vatapi commences the reconstitution by introducing the concept of his long lost sister to the conversation, and then ritually summoning Ilvala by name. Ilvala can only be reconstituted in one diner's stomach, so if more than one visitor consumes the meat, the GM should roll randomly to determine which diner suffers this horrible fate. There are a few ways to avoid the rakshasas' foul trick: one is to slay Vatapi before he can summon his sister by name; another is to prevent him from uttering his sister's name through the imposition of silence. Should Vatapi and Tataka (see 8-125) be slain before the meat is consumed, moreover, Ilvala will have no way to return and will effectively rot into nothingness.

Hole in Ceiling: A ragged, 6'-diameter hole in the ceiling leads to area 8-118A in the tunnel network that snakes around the old Besa complex. The rakshasas are aware of the hole, but view it more as a potential source of food than as a danger point.

Inhabitants:

1. Ilvala, a rakshasa initially disguised as cooked meat: SZ M; AL LE; AC -4; MV 150'; HD 7; HP 45; #AT 3; Dmg 1-3/1-3/2-5. Special defenses: ESP; affected only by 8th-level spells or greater; immune to normal weapons; half damage from +1 and +2 weapons. Cleric spells: curse, light, fear. Magic User spells: charm person, jump, magic missile, sleep; audible glamer, darkness 15' radius, mirror image; dispel magic, suggestion. Possessions: rudishva jump suit; rudishva breather (see new technological items); potion of invisibility; half of a pair of amulets of return (see new magic items).
2. Vatapi (possibly present; see text): for stats, see 8-120.
3. Tataka, also possibly present; for stats, see 8-125.

Treasure:

There is no treasure here save the personal equipment borne by the rakshasas.

8-125: Temple of Besa: Rakshasa Lair

The rakshasas have converted the ancient quarters of the high priestess of Besa into their sanctum. It is dimly lit by four smokeless torches (see new magic items), and includes a riot of exotic and sumptuous items. Unless he has already been encountered in 8-124, Tataka the rakshasa will be found here; if Vatapi has been chased from 8-120 or 8-124, he too will be present here.

The chamber includes four elaborate day beds carved of teak (950 gp each) and set with brightly colored silk sheets and pillows. Six oriental carpets cover the floor, each a masterpiece of geometric and animal pattern (800 gp each). Four more carpets hang on the north and south walls, covering badly damaged frescoes that depict the debased rituals of Besa's cult; these carpets are figural, and depict strangely-accoutered warriors with spears and curved swords. One of the four is, in fact, a porter's carpet (see new magic items). A welter of small tables occupies the rest of the floor space; there are ten, ranging from a pair of 4'-tall, 2'-diameter tables of solid ivory (1,800 gp each), to a set of five oval tea tables in teak and ivory, a pair of mahogany end tables (400 gp each), and a magnificent sandalwood gaming table inset with ivory and gold (2,250 gp), on which the rakshasas play endless games of backgammon while awaiting victims (the ivory pieces are worth another 200 gp). A low bookcase holds the following tomes: Laelius Praetor's the Ancient Ones; Archons of Arden Vul; the Book of Night Maneuvers; A Canticle of Arcane Knowledge; Elements of Animal Reproduction; Green are My Lover's Eyes; the Highly Impressive Story of Frigg the Fabulous; Locomotion in Animals and Humanoids; Sorcerous Properties of Gems; and the Twelve Labors of Arden (see Arden Vul books for all). In the northeast corner is a jumble of brightly colored plasteel equipment, which (if PCs ever were to peacefully enter this chamber) the rakshasas represent as their all-important rudishva technology; the equipment is indeed rudishva in origin, but it is broken and useless.

On either side of the secret door on the west wall stand two 6'-tall statues carved out of ironwood. Each depicts a grimacing demon warrior holding a glaive; the face of each warrior has tusks and wild eyes. Each statue is decorated with an Khumus-style bronze helmet (50 gp each), a set of four gold arm rings shaped like snakes (300 gp each), a steel breastplate, a pair of steel greaves, and four gold finger rings set with black pearls (800 gp each). Each pair of breastplate and greaves is actually a set of abyssal armor (see new magic items). One of the glaives is normal, but the other is a powerful sentient magic item, named Bhima (see new magic items). The northern statue also bears an exotic silver necklace from which dangle thirteen 4"-long curved fangs; these are rakshasa fangs, which may be used to open the secret doors here and in 8-111. The necklace of fangs could be sold for 600 gp.

Scattered among the tea tables are the following magical items: a set of eyes of Pol, a bag of efreeti sand, an insidious bone flute, and a set of predictive tokens (see new magic items for all).

Secret Door (west): The door is normal to detect, and opens in one of two ways: either a rakshasa tooth must be inserted into a hidden hole, or a successful lift gates roll must be made to force it open.

Possible Inhabitants:

1. Tataka the rakshasa SZ M; AL LE; AC -4; MV 150'; HD 7; HP 41; #AT 3; Dmg 1-3/1-3/2-5. Special defenses: ESP; affected only by 8th-level spells or greater; immune to normal weapons; half damage from +1 and +2 weapons. Cleric spells: curse, light, fear. Magic User spells: charm person, jump, magic missile, sleep; audible glamor, darkness 15' radius, mirror image; dispel magic, suggestion. Possessions: rudishva jump suit; rudishva breather (see new technological items); potion of invisibility; wand of fire (11 charges).

2. Vatapi the rakshasa (see stats at 8-120)

Treasure:

See text.

8-126: Trophy Room

If the rakshasas' living quarters reflect a certain raffish opulence and civilization, their trophy room bears witness to their evil and their monstrous nature, for it is here that the rakshasas devour their victims. Gouts of dried blood stain the walls, while two piles of human and other bones occupy the northeastern and southeastern corners. Two scorched varumani corpses hang from hooks, dripping blood onto the floor.

The west wall features shelves built into the stone; these shelves contain twenty-one life-sized heads made of clay, modeled to reflect different types of creatures (some human, some humanoid, some varumani, and some utterly exotic). These clay heads are connected to the memory trap in 8-111; the memories of those affected by the trap are transferred here, to one of the 'empty' heads appropriate to their race. Smashing a skull releases a trapped memory to its owner, regardless of where that being may be. A dull yellow glow in the eyes of a head reveals the fact that it is 'occupied' by a being's memory. Currently six of the twenty-one heads are occupied. Four of those whose memories have been stolen are Hakreon (7-76), Kormak (8-132), Justine Two-Hands (9-130), and Niskim the goblin (8-114). It is up to the GM to decide the nature of the other stored memories.

Treasure:

On one of the shelves among the clay heads is a platinum key to the Obsidian Gates (5-6D). The rakshasas know it's enchanted but never figured out what it is used for, and have forgotten about it.

8-127: Goat Pen

The rakshasas (8-125) keep a small herd of six goats penned up in this crumbling corridor fragment. They use the goats for meat if they are unable to acquire other victims, but might also use the goats as part of a longer term plan to trick unwary PCs who accept the premise of their habitation. Half of a wine cask filled with musty water sits at the south end of the fragment.

8-128: Empty Cave

This cave contains nothing of note save the bliss pollen. The tunnel connecting it to 8-68 is blocked by creepers; it takes 1-2 rounds to force one's way through the creepers.

Note: This area is occluded by a thick cloud of bliss pollen (see new flora).

8-129: Cave with Tunnel up to 6-60

This nondescript cave connects to a thoqqua tunnel that leads up to the Arena area of Level 6 (area 6-60). The tunnel is steep and quite smooth, and reduces movement by half. Two extremely large thoqqua are still rooting around in the rock surrounding this cave.

The tunnel connecting it to 8-68 is blocked by creepers; it takes 1-2 rounds to force one's way through the creepers.

Note: This area is occluded by a thick cloud of bliss pollen (see new flora).

Inhabitants:

1. 2 large thoqqua: SZ M; AL N; AC 2; MV 120'; 30' burrowing through rock; HD 4; HP 28, 24; #AT 1 and 1; Dmg 4-32/2-12. Special attacks: heat. Special defenses: healed by fire.

8-130: Cave with Glyph

This cave features several impressive bits of flowstone in beautiful caramel colors. One of the flows emerges from the northern niche, which is naturally quite damp. The source of this flow has almost (but not quite) obscured a glowing green wizard mark featuring the entwined letters "K" and "B" (for Kel Bormol; see SL3-2A). The glyph is a wizard's cache (see new spells), place here by Kel Bormol as a way to secure the key to his secret lair (8-133). The password to the cache is, unsurprisingly, "Kel Bormol"; only by reciting this password or casting dispel magic at level 19 or above can the cache be opened.

The cache contains a very large, cartoonish key that fits the lock on the door to 8-133. It also contains a bag of powdered platinum (1,000 gp) and a scroll of passwall.

Note: This area is occluded by a thick cloud of bliss pollen (see new flora).

Treasure:

See text.

8-131: Cave with Pit

In the center of this crossroads cave is a 15'-diameter, 40'-deep shaft, bored in the distant past by Kel Bormol (SL3-2A) as part of his failed initial effort to construct a hidden sanctum. More recently some cruel adventurers have covered the opening with a mat of reeds sprinkled with rock dust and sand.

Trap: Pit trap with obscured reed-mat cover. Anyone crossing the mat has a 75% chance of falling through into the pit, thus taking 4-24 HP damage.

Note: This area is occluded by a thick cloud of bliss pollen (see new flora).

Treasure:

At the bottom of the pit is a sack holding three doses of varumani knock-out juice (see Arden Vul items).

8-132: Cave with a Weeping Warrior

In this pollen-free cave, a tough Wiskin warrior is slowly banging his head against the south wall, weeping uncontrollably. He wears a Norman helmet and a chain mail byrnie on which is painted a yellow snake, and bears a serrated long sword. He is Kormak the Snake, and he fell victim to the memory trap in 8-111. Desolate and lost, he is barely functional, and greets all visitors with suspicion (-10% to reaction rolls). If Kormak grows hostile, he shouts simple insults in Wiskin and, if the PCS respond with aggression, attacks.

Should he somehow be befriended, and his memory restored (see 8-126), he will be grateful and will be able to pass on the following bits of information: he talked to Olaf the Bee-Whisperer (8-73) and learned that a strange scepter is lodged in one of the bee hives (see 8-69). This object is the lost scepter of the goblins (see new magic items) which is greatly desired by King Weskenim (SL4-22). Kormak has also visited the temple of Bastet (8-38) and can give advice on how best to reach the temple and negotiate with the priestesses there. Finally, he also knows that the Forge of Zhorak (8-120) is quite close, only a few hours march to the west and north, even though he has never been there.

The door on the south wall is wizard locked (18th level), but also boasts an exaggeratedly-large keyhole. The wizard lock can be bypassed by use of the correct key (see 8-130).

Inhabitants:

1. Kormak the Snake, 8th-level male Wiskin fighter: SZ M; AL N; AC 3; MV 120'; HD 8; HP 88; #AT 3/2; Dmg 4-11 (Lithast). Abilities: STR 17, INT 9, WIS 10, DEX 8, CON 17, CHA 14. Possessions: the enchanted long sword, Lithast (see new magic items); a chain mail +2; a purse with 275 gp and 148 sp; and a potion of superheroism.

8-133: Kel Bormol's Hidden Lair

The late-Archontean-era archmage, Kel Bormol (see SL3-2A), converted this tomb into one of the hidden refuges that he prepared in and around Arden Vul as he watched the city devolve into chaos. The door to the lair (in 8-132) is wizard locked (18th level), and can only be opened by magic or by locating the key (8-130).

The tomb was that of Liskon the Mad, the 8th archon of Arden Vul, and a lesser figure in Archontean lore. Liskon was paranoid, and ordered his resting place built in this then-obscure location, far from the growing court. The walls are decorated with shallow carvings of imperial officials in archaic togas and costumes performing administrative and judicial functions. At the center of the scene is a bearded archon (Liskon). When he claimed the tomb, Kel Bormol covered up the earlier art with a set of three large 'modern' tapestries; one showing the signing of the Compact of Ennius (see World of Archontos appendix), one depicting the great victory of the imperial legions at Trenner's Rock (see World of Archontos appendix), and the third displaying the grim court held by Emperor Maurikios IV Sanguinator in the smoking rubble of Arden Vul after its sacking. Each tapestry is worth 750 gp.

The northern section of the sanctum contains a trio of leather easy chairs (65 gp each), a low oak table (25 gp), a wine rack (with six ultra-rare, and still drinkable, Archontean whites that are 1,300 years old and worth 950 gp each), a daybed with satin sheets (covered in dust), an oak scroll cabinet, and a staff rack with six walking staffs (two of polished oak, one of ebony, one of natural pine, and the last a staff of withering with 9 charges).

The scroll cabinet contains eleven items, all cheesy light fiction and soft-core pornography, with titles like the Whispering Widow, Legionary Rex and the Celadon Shipment, Paulus and the Goblin King, The Night Urges, Euphronia's Awakening, and Meson's Guide to the Brothels of Archontos (see Arden Vul books for all). In addition to these well-thumbed items, copies of Kel Bormol's eleven spell books are hidden in a secret compartment at the base of the cabinet. The compartment detects normally and opens by inserting a quill-sized item into a small hole on the left side of the cabinet.

The southern portion of the chamber still holds Liskon's tomb, a 10'x8'x4' block of granite carved with an image of the archon (the bearded man with the cylindrical hat from the walls). Kel Bormol has draped a now-rotted cotton tablecloth across the tomb, and a sixteen-piece set of silver tableware rests atop it (425 gp for the set). A pair of the silver cups hold a map open on the tablecloth. The map shows a substantial section of the precincts of Set, in full detail (including secret doors): areas 4-1 to 4-58 and 4-101 to 4-105. The map was annotated by Kel Bormol, indicating the function and/or residents of each area. Along the south wall are three crates that contain long spoiled foodstuffs.

If Kel Bormol has been released (see SL3-2A), then the entire area will be cleaned, the table-cloth replaced with a new one, and a fresh set of food items will be present. In such circumstances there is a 20% chance Kel Bormol himself will be present in the chamber.

A pair of invisible stalkers wait patiently in the chamber, tasked a millennium ago to ensure that no one but Kel Bormol enters the chamber. Although their long servitude has rendered them insane, Kel Bormol's binding still holds. They do not pursue outside the sanctum.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 invisible stalkers: SZ L; AL N; AC 3; MV 120'; HD 8; HP 61, 50; #AT 1; Dmg 4-16; MR 30%. Special attacks: surprise on 1-5. Special defenses: invisibility.

Treasure:

See text

Kel Bormol's Spell Books (in eleven large volumes): All 1st-level spells plus Basil's torch treatment, Cleophalus's look-away spell, and friend of the Hekate (see new spells for all three); all 2nd-level spells plus the Bracteros effect, locate place, Pol's endless sneezes, pummeling fists of Arak-Zhorr, and wizard's cache (see new spells for all five); all 3rd-level spells plus garrulous mouth (see new spells); all 4th-level spells plus Dameon's shadow spell book (see new spells); all 5th-level spells plus harnessing the chaos, the hecate's bonds, and Pol's improved eye (see new spells for all three); anti-magic shell, curse item (see new spells), death spell, disintegrate, enchant an item, extension III, forceful hand, geas, globe of invulnerability, invisible stalker, legend lore, monster summoning IV, project image, reincarnation, repulsion, stone to flesh, transformation; cacodemon, delayed blast

fireball, duo-dimension, grasping hand, limited wish, mass invisibility, monster summoning V, Pol's recall (see new spells), power word stun, vanish, warding chain of glyphs (see new spells); clenched fist, incendiary cloud, irresistible dance, mass charm, mind blank, mindshift (see new spells), monster summoning VI, permanency, polymorph object, power word blind, spell immunity, symbol; astral spell, crushing hand, gate, meteor swarm, power word kill, prismatic sphere, time stop.

8-134: Concealed Cave with Rock Formations

The entrance to this cave is concealed behind the mat of vines and creepers that fills area 8-68; it takes 1-3 rounds to push through the creepers. The cave is 25' tall and is surprisingly devoid of bliss pollen; it is cool and damp. Three large rock formations stand in the center of the sandy floor; the northern two extend all the way to the ceiling, but the southern formation is only 20' tall. Atop the southern formation is a fire ring besides which lies the skeleton of a long-dead dwarven adventurer, still wearing equipment. Also atop the southern formation is a small patch of aqua vitae mushrooms, enough for 6 doses (see new flora).

Treasure:

Six doses of aqua vitae mushrooms (see new flora), and on the skeleton: a dwarf-sized suit of banded mail +3; an inert dwarven life-stone (see new magic items) bearing the name in Dwarven Runic of Gypsum Hornfels; a fine but non-magical war hammer inscribed with the clan 'Hornfels' insignia; a silver belt (250 gp); and a backpack with a coil of rope, six spikes, a hammer, two flasks of oil, and a bag of carefully polished marbles.

8-135: Cave with Warning Signs

Three thick spears are thrust into the sand that covers the floor of this cave; a varumani skull is perched atop each one. The skulls have been there for a long time (hundreds of years), and the purpose for their placement has been long forgotten. Jammed into one of the skulls is a piece of parchment that provides the following bit of advice in Archontean: "the tomb of Marius the Great is now inaccessible, save through the hidden door in the propagandistic 'shrine' to the archon. One must still placate the guardians." [GM: the note refers to the shrine of Marius (6-145) with its ceiling exit that leads eventually to the tomb of Marius (6-154)].

8-136: Renegade Varumani

A band of renegade lesser and bestial varumani have abandoned the domain of the thegn (see much of Level 7, including, e.g., 7-2 and 7-8 to 7-38) and set themselves up as robbers in this cave.

The gang is led by Lugo, and contains a total of eight members. The bestial varumani are growing restless with Lugo's leadership, however, as they (rightly) blame him for failing to procure suitable meat. Familiar with stories of 'civilized robbers', however, Lugo has to date restrained his followers and convinced them that extortion is better than murder. He has them all wearing 'stylish' green berets.

The gang has built a low rock wall (4' tall) across the mouth of the cave, giving their members 50% cover (and serving to deter the rust monsters (see 8-140). They have also placed torches in the passageway to 8-137. They loudly demand 'tribute' of any who pass, in the form of silver coins (50 sp per head) or pretty rocks (gemstones, of any sort). If the tribute is paid, Lugo will most likely restrain his fellows from attacking (75%). The gang attacks if one of the following occurs: 1) the tribute is not paid; 2) the victims pay, but are not suitably humble; or 3) the bestial varumani simply decide to attack regardless of Lugo's orders (25%).

Inside their cave, the gang has accumulated three hammocks, two kegs of Hak's ale (see 7-94), three dead goats, two recently slain adventurers hanging from hooks, a sack of dried edible mushrooms; two shields; five spears; and a wooden chest with their loot.

The varumani feed all metal except coins (e.g., the armor of the dead adventurers) to the rust monsters in 8-140. There is a 15% chance that noisy combat here draws the rust monsters within three rounds; the chance rises by 5% for every round starting with the fourth.

Inhabitants:

1. Lugo, a lesser varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 3; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 57; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (mace, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: stone club (as mace); shield.
2. 2 more lesser varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 57, 53; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (club, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: club.
3. 5 bestial varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL NE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 58, 57, 55, 53, 49; #AT 3; Dmg 3-6/3-6/3-10. Special defenses: regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision; immune to poison.

Treasure:

In addition to the mundane equipment, the loot chest contains: 793 sp; 174 gp; 101 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items); 3 citrines (55 gp each), 4 zircons (45 gp each), 2 peridots (500 gp each), and an orange jacinth (5,000 gp); a set of six throwing daggers +1; a set of Banion's dice made of bone (see new magic items); and a pair of boots of the ogre (see new magic items).

8-137: Cave with Cliff and Tunnel Up to 7-40

This large, 60'-tall cavern has a particularly uneven floor, with lots of small holes and ridges. Movement is reduced by half, or else explorers risk a 25% chance per round of taking 1-4 damage from tripping on the terrain. The cavern is dominated by an imposing, 40'-tall cliff that runs along its southern edge. The cliff face is relatively smooth, and can be climbed with some difficulty by thieves (-10% to climb walls). A shelf extends along the south wall above the cliff, beyond which is a steeply rising tunnel that leads to area 7-40.

Two patches of worked stone exist, one at the bottom of the cliff by the eastern edge, and the other at the top of the cliff in the same location. At each location the rock floor has been smoothed flat in a 15'-diameter circle, and a short piece of doggerel has been inscribed on the flattened rock. An oaken shepherd's crook some 10' high is firmly inserted into the rock in the exact center of each location; from each crook hangs a copper bell about 3' in diameter. The doggerel is written in Mithric, and reads as follows:

*Five for the furious
Four for some fun
Three for trouble
Two to be spun
And One? One is for the lonely*

The doggerel provides a clue to using the bells. Each number in the verse refers to a number of rings of one of the bells, and provides a cryptic clue to the effects wrought by ringing the bell that many times. The only safe solution is to ring the bell twice ('to be spun'). All of the effects are summarized as follows:

of Rings	Effect
Five	Fury: All within 20' must save versus spells or attack someone nearby for 1-4 rounds
Four	Fun: Three imps dressed as clowns are summoned. The imps perform card tricks and sleight of hand for one turn. At the end of the show, one passes his bowler hat: if at least 10 gp are placed in the hat, the imps leave without incident. If no tip is offered, or it is less than 10 gp, or if they are interrupted during the show, the imps attack for 4-5 rounds before returning to their home plane. 3 imps: SZ S; AL LE; AC 2; MV 60'; 180' flying (Class C); HD 2+2; HP 16, 14, 13; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4; MR 25%. Special attacks: poison. Special defenses: silver, or +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to fire, cold and electricity; save vs magic as 7 HD creatures. Special: polymorph self (to animal form); detect magic; detect good; detect magic; invisibility; regenerate 1 hp/round, suggestion 1/day
Three	Trouble: An aerial servant is summoned. It attacks immediately, with a 50% chance of seeking to grab victims, flying to the roof of the cave, and dropping them for 6d6 damage. Aerial servant: SZ L; AL N; AC 3; MV 240'; HD 16; HP 101; #AT 1; Dmg 8-32; surprise on 1-4; grab attack; surprise foes with 4 in 6 chance.
Two	To be Spun: The bell ringer is spun in a circle three times, and then teleported to the flattened rock on the other side of the cliff (i.e., from the foot of the cliff to the top, or vice versa)
One	Lonely: The bell ringer is teleported to a random location in Arden Vul. To determine, roll d8: 1= area AV-27 2= area 4-163 3= area 6-55 4= area 7-130 5= area 8-84 6= SL3-5 7= SL4-53 8= SL7-39

8-138: Caves with Iron Ore

A vein of iron ore runs east from this crossroads in the cave network. The rust monsters from 8-140 use the vein as a primary source of nutrition and, as a result, there is a 20% chance for the pair to be present here. A pair of pick handles lie in the intersection; the rust monsters corroded and ate the metal heads.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 rust monsters (20%): see stats in 8-140.

8-139: Cave

A pile of wooden boards and two wooden wheels stand in the center of this chamber; formerly a cart, the rust monsters who live in 8-140 ate away the metal fittings that held it together. The circular knob to the east has a deep (30') well of cold, clear spring water. There is a 20% chance that the rust monsters are here, poking around the cart remnants or drinking water. A beautifully carved, 3'-tall, jade statuette of a warrior turning to fire an arrow over his shoulder rests at the bottom of the well. The warrior wears his long hair in two topknots that drop down his back, has a long, droopy mustache, and wears lacquered armor; all of these features mark him as a Khumus nomad from the west, and not an Archontean.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 rust monsters (20%): see stats in 8-140.

Treasure:

Jade statuette of a western nomad, worth 4,000 gp

8-140: Rust Monster Lair

A pair of mated rust monsters has made this cave their lair. It is scattered with broken stalagmites and small remnants of oxidized and digested metals. The rust monsters are quite agile, and are adept at jumping from the cave floor to the stalagmite fragments, and from there to any source of metal.

The western niche has their nest, in which are three rust monster eggs (worth 450 gp to a dealer in a large town). Tucked among the eggs are two spell scrolls.

The rust monsters are familiar with the varumani gang at 8-136, and occasionally visit that area seeking handouts of metal. The sound of combat at 8-136 will eventually draw the rust monsters (15% for first three rounds of combat; chances rises by 5% per subsequent round). If not already encountered at 8-136, there is a 20% chance the pair will be scrounging in 8-138, a 20% chance they will be in 8-139, a 10% chance they will be in 8-141, and a 50% chance they will be present in this, their lair. Loud noise in any of the neighboring caves (8-138, 8-139, or 8-141) draws them in 1-4 rounds.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 rust monsters: SZ M; AL N; AC 2; MV 180'; HD 5; HP 36, 29; #AT 2; Dmg nil. Special attacks: corrode metal.

Treasure:

A clerical scroll with hallow on it, and a magic user scroll with the spell harnessing the chaos on it (see new spells for each). Also three rust monster eggs (450 gp each).

8-141: Lurker Cave

This broad cave is 40' tall at its northwestern, open end, but thanks to a large flowstone drift the southeastern end is only 15' tall. The flowstone is a beautiful caramel color, and is slightly wet. Scattered about the flowstone are four piles of cleaned bones, including a recent pile that seems to have been a 5'-tall quadruped (a rust monster).

The tunnel to the south leads to a locked stone door, on which is inscribed an Archontean seal. Only those with a previously-demonstrated dedication to ancient history or architecture have a chance (15%) to recognize the seal as that of Phocion the Builder, the famous architect (see his statue at SL7-22). Before the door is another pile of bones, this time of a human adventurer; thanks to the lurkers above, the rust monsters have not yet been able to devour the adventurer's gear.

Two lurkers above make the cave their home. One typically is found in the large open area, while the other lurks in the tunnel, just above the door to 8-142.

As the lurkers have recently slain one of their number, the rust monsters are hesitant to visit this cave, even though they can smell the metallic treasure to the south. As a result, there is only a 10% chance for the rust monsters to be present here.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 lurkers above: SZ L; AL N; AC 6; MV 10', 90' flying (Class D); HD 10; HP 68, 64; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: surprise 4 in 6; constriction; suffocation. Special defenses: 90% undetectable against stone.

2. 2 rust monsters (10%): see stats at 8-140.

Treasure:

Near the bones of the adventurer: banded mail +2; glaive-guisarme +1; a crossbow with 15 bolts; 1,741 gp scattered on the floor; and a gold ring (450 gp).

8-142: False Tomb of Phocion the Builder

The tomb of the famed Arden Vul architect, Phocion the Builder, lies in this forgotten corner of Level 8. Responsible for designing most of the public spaces in the city, as well as the main temples of Thoth and Set, Phocion was a major figure in the glory days of Arden Vul.

The stone door to this false tomb is locked, and marked with the seal of Phocion (see 8-141). It can be opened by picking the lock (-15% chance) or breaking down the door (3-6 turns).

The chamber within is 15' tall, with walls simply decorated with a single word inscribed in Mithric. To the east, the word is 'beauty', to the south 'strength', and to the west 'utility'. The inscriptions stand out from the bare granite because they are filled with silver (150 gp total).

Sarcophagus: The chamber is dominated by a 12'x5'x4' sarcophagus made of stone. Atop the sarcophagus is a fine gisant of Phocion, dressed simply in a tunic with a belt pouch, and carrying a level and a set of architect's dividers. The lid of the sarcophagus can be removed by making a successful bend bars roll. Within is a 6'x3'x2' compartment, in which a set of human bones rest. A scattering of 53 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items) and 157 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items) carpets the inner compartment. In addition, a tightly rolled scroll rests within: it bears the title Testament of Phocion the Builder (see Arden Vul books). The scroll contains an acrostic that hints at the location of the secret door on the south wall; the door is located under the 'S' in the inscription ('strength') found on that wall.

False Door: To the west is a small (only 4'x3') stone door. Despite its inviting nature, it is impossible to open.

Secret Door (south): This door is quite small (3'x3') and difficult to detect (1 in 8). It can only be opened by sheer physical force (i.e., by succeeding at a bend bars roll, or by spending six turns noisily destroying it with suitable tools).

8-143: Tomb of Phocion the Builder

The tomb of Phocion is a striking epitome of the artistry of a gifted designer and his workmen. The ceiling is 15' tall, and carved so as to suggest a wooden beamed ceiling. Two 10'x4'x4' stone sarcophagi and two tall bronze statues provide a natural focus to those entering. Large, silver-filled inscriptions occupy the diagonal walls of the northern and southern niches. A 20'-diameter mosaic, surrounded by another silver inscription, occupies the floor in the center of the chamber.

Inscriptions: The letters are in Mithric and filled with silver. It takes a turn to scrape the silver out of each inscription, earning the thief 65 gp per inscription. Clockwise from the northwest, the inscriptions read:

Northwest: Theory and practice are the sires of art.

Northeast: Strength means locating a solid foundation and choosing proper materials.

Southeast: Utility requires a judicious distribution of the parts, with each in its proper place serving its proper purpose.

Southwest: Beauty derives from a proper sense of proportion and from the pleasing appearance and good taste of the whole.

Mosaic: The mosaic is beautiful, with tesserae of brightly colored stone forming four quadrants. In a separate circular band around the mosaic proper are the word Proportion, Uniformity, Consistency, Economy. The quadrant by the word 'proportion' shows a rectangle made of silver tesserae surrounded by azure blue tiles; if measured, it appears that the long side is twice as long as the short side [this is not quite the golden ratio, but it comes close]. The quadrant next to the word 'uniformity' shows an elevation of a building front, in ivory tesserae with thin black onyx edges, with three columns on either side of a central door. The third quadrant, next to the word 'consistency', features the front and side of a dwelling in one-point perspective, as well as a rose compass; the building is in ivory tesserae with edges marked out in thin pieces of black onyx. The columns at the front are simple (doric), and there is a window in the side wall. The rose compass indicates that the window is to the east. The final quadrant has a small person (in blue quartz) inspecting pieces of granite, silver and marble; close inspection shows the figure is pointing to the granite piece.

If the mosaic is destroyed, the value of the tesserae is 500 gp; if the mosaic is somehow excavated and brought to civilization (it weighs 600 lb), it would be worth 10,500 gp.

Statues: The eastern and western niches contain 8'-tall bronze statues of Phocion. The eastern statue shows Phocion as a typical Archontean aristocrat, dressed in a toga and gesturing into the center of the room. The other statue depicts him as an architect, wearing a simple tunic and belt pouch and holding forth his dividers and level. Both show him with closely trimmed beard and hair, and with a naturalistic face (large nose, several warts, and kind eyes). Although tarnished by age and humidity, the statues are great works of art and could fetch 2,500 gp each from an Archontean collector.

Sarcophagi: The sarcophagus to the north is a plain rectangle some 12'x8'x4' in dimensions. The word "Phocion" is inscribed on the lid and a continuous mid-relief sculpture runs along its side. The images represent the builder at work, directing men raising stone blocks, carving out caverns, and erecting a pyramid. The lid may easily be prised open; within are the mummified remains of Phocion, surrounded by desiccated flowers, pure white sand, and several valuable objects: a ring of fire resistance (actually a ring of delusion); a heavy signet ring with the letter 'P' (450 gp); a rod of beguiling (19 charges); a rudishva repli-cube and a partly-full rudishva lesser power supply (see new technological items); and a platinum cloak pin set with lapis (850 gp).

If activated, the repli-cube immediately projects an image of Phocion as an old man; the aged architect speaks in Mithric for 8 minutes about several matters. First, he speaks for 4 minutes about the principles of proper architectural design, emphasizing the four key components of proportion, uniformity, consistency, and economy. The second portion of the recording is more confessional; Phocion modestly describes his dividers (see 8-144), gliding quickly over their properties before lamenting the greed and deception he could see in his comrades' eyes as Phocion himself grew closer to death. Phocion then becomes slightly opaque, noting that he devised one last 'great work' meant to keep the dividers secret until 'one who was worthy' proved capable of understanding Phocion's life work and the 'proper combination of beauty, function, and strength' (a reference to the puzzle here in 8-143, and the hidden room where the dividers rest to this day). The charge on the power supply only allows the recording to be played twice before it is exhausted; of course those with their own power supplies and knowledge of how to use them could easily replay the image (or even record over it).

The second 'sarcophagus' is actually a stone table, carved on its side in the same scheme as the northern sarcophagus. It detects strongly of magic. A grid of ½"-square holes and a rose compass is carved into the top of the table; there are nineteen holes in each row/column, each 1" from its neighbor. This means that each side of the grid is 26.5" wide from corner to corner, and that there are a total of 361 holes.

Arranged around the grid are neat piles of appropriately sized building materials made of different substances. There are three piles of 3 ½"-wide, 7"-tall wall segments, each cut so as to have ½"-square pegs spaced 1" apart on its base and inset along its height so as to allow the insertion of up to three pillars along the front of the wall segment. The piles are divided by material: one of 15 wall segments in silver, one of 15 in granite, and one of 15 in white marble. A fourth pile contains wall segments with windows; there are four segments in silver, four in granite, and four in white marble. Another six piles contain pillars that can be inserted into wall segments. There are piles of oak, ebony, silver, gold, white marble, and granite pillars; each pile contains 48 pillars. Finally there are three piles of roof pieces, with each pile distinguished by size and material. One of the roof piles has six pieces, 2 ends and four interior pieces; each piece is 3 ½" by 3 ½", and is made of silver. The second pile of roof pieces contains granite pieces 7" by x 3 ½" in size; there are two end pieces and six interior pieces. The last pile of roof pieces is in white marble, with pieces measuring 10 ½" by 3 ½"; there are two end pieces and eight interior pieces. All roof pieces are gabled roofs; end pieces have a pediment on one side, while interior pieces are just the roof itself. The roof pieces are clearly suited to laying across the wall pieces. Regardless of what explorers do with the building pieces, the entire set could be sold for 5,000 gp.

Puzzle: Clearly the 'building blocks' are a puzzle. If a Greek-style building is constructed following the principles hinted at in the mosaic and inscriptions, the secret door to area 8-144 opens with an audible click. To activate this magical trigger, the following principles must be followed:

1. A structure must be built, using the grid on the table top, using wall segments, pillars, and roof pieces
2. The proportions of the structure must be 2:1 (per the mosaic hint). Although buildings of any size could be constructed in this proportion, the size of the roof pieces (either 3 ½", 7", or 10 ½") functionally limits a builder's choices to one of the following: a building with one wall segment on the short side and two on the long side, or a structure with two wall segments on the short side and four on the long side, or a building with three wall segments on the short side and six segments on the long side. Building in any of these ways satisfies Phocion's requirement of 'proportion', although only one of the three choices satisfies the principle of 'economy' (see below).
3. The eastern wall of the structure must contain at least one window; the rose compass determines which side is east. This satisfies the principle of 'consistency'.
4. The materials used must be uniform, that is, the entire building must be composed of granite, silver, or white marble (but see point 5). Adding pillars of any of the 'odd' materials is unacceptable. Building in this way satisfies the principle of 'uniformity'.
5. The building must be constructed using granite, not silver or white marble. This satisfies Phocion's principle of 'economy'. This requirement effectively limits the size of the structure to be built because only one of the three sizes of roofing comes in granite (the 7" x 3 1/2" size).

By following all these principles, it will become evident that the only solution to the puzzle is as follows: use two granite wall segments on each short sides and four granite wall segments on each long side; on the eastern long side, include at least one window; use granite pillars throughout; and use the granite roof pieces.

Secret Door (west wall): The door on the west wall is normal to detect, but is magically held. Only solving the architectural puzzle (see above) will cause the door to open with an audible click. Other than this method, only very powerful magic allows access to area 8-144.

Treasure:

1. In Phocion's sarcophagus: ring of fire resistance (actually ring of delusion), a signet ring (450 gp), rod of beguiling, a rudishva repli-cube and lesser power supply (see new technological items), and a platinum cloak pin (850 gp).
2. Statues: 2,500 gp each, if a way to move them is found.
3. Mosaic: 500 gp if destroyed, 10,500 gp if somehow transported intact.
4. Building set: up to 5,000 gp to a collector of curiosities.

8-144: Phocion's Dividers

Phocion's most valued item is hidden in this secret chamber. The secret door that leads to the chamber can only be opened by solving the puzzle in 8-144 or by employing very powerful magic (passwall, etc.).

The chamber within is simple and undecorated. A stone pedestal stands in the center of the chamber, surrounded by four simple stone benches. Atop the pedestal, wrapped in a piece of yellow silk, are Phocion's dividers, a potent magical artifact (see new magic items).

Treasure:

Phocion's dividers (see new magic items).

8-145: Broken Hall

This worked chamber has suffered badly from the deprivations of time. Two corridor fragments end in cave-ins. Strands of plaster hang from the ceiling, and mounds of broken tiling dot the floor. In the northeast corner stands a striking statue in basalt, with ivory accents (hair, clothing, sandals). The pediment reads "Eustachius the cantor, who located the Singing Grotto." Strangely, Eustachius appears in this guise without ornate Thothian decoration, merely as a handsome man of middle age dressed in a tunic. He points to the south with one arm, and holds a cithara in the other. The statue is of high quality, and despite weighing 550 lb, could bring 900 gp if sold. [GM Note: one of Eustachius's personal books may be found at 3-57].

8-146: Entrance to the Singing Grotto

Amid the collapsed stonework of this ruined hallway sits the still-functional destination for the teleporter at 8-7E. That destination is marked by a 5'-diameter circle of rose quartz set in the floor. Next to the circle are three backpacks containing some functional adventuring items.

Treasure:

The backpacks contain three 50' coils of rope; a dozen caltrops; a hammer and chisel; a sack with 549 sp; a control rod for the eggs at 4-85; a functional rudishva lesser power supply (see new technological items); four wax candles; a small silver mirror; and six days of still-edible iron rations.

8-147: Antechamber to Singing Grotto

A 20'-diameter mosaic sits in the center of this 15'-tall antechamber, and seven oversized (10' tall) stone doors line the walls. Six relatively recent corpses are strewn about the floor.

Mosaic: The mosaic shows at its center a Thothian cleric, singing sweetly. In the first circular register around him are some unusual, tribal-looking heads with open mouths, each with a letter from A to G under it. The outer register shows various creatures, some recognizable but others alien. The clever may notice that a head and letter are associated with a particular figure in the outer register, in the manner indicated by this table (see areas 8-147A to 8-147G for explanations):

Head and Letter	Creature
A	A butterfly-like creature with open mouth
B	A baboon-headed biped with four arms
C	A cleric of Thoth in formal, orange, ceremonial garb
D	A pair of black birds (starlings)
E	Another butterfly-like creature with open mouth
F	A fire-breathing dog
G	A blocky, golem-like entity

Doors: The doors are 10'x4' in size, and cannot be opened from 8-147 (they are magically held). Only by manipulation of the horns at 8-148 (q.v.) may a door be opened. Once opened, a door may be spiked or otherwise held open for up to 6 hours, during which time the contents of its chamber do not replenish. Otherwise, once a door opens and shuts, the contents of the room to which it leads are instantly replenished.

Corpses: Two of the corpses appear to have been scorched, two more have been badly cut up, and the final two have no visible wounds save for blood in their ears. The equipment of some of the corpses is still usable (see below).

Backstory: Eustachius designed these doors and the summoning chambers to which they lead both for security and as a way of delighting his visitors. They were linked to specific songs and melodic moods as played by the horns and heads in 8-148. Although he initially changed the contents of the magical chambers on a regular basis, as he grew closer to death he tended to favor security (i.e., summoned entities) over entertainments.

Treasure:

1. On the corpses: leather armor +2, studded leather armor +1, banded mail +1, a shield +2, a two-handed sword, a long sword +1, a mace, six throwing axes, a guard cap (see new magic items), a pair of bracers of defenselessness, a bag of beans, two gold statuettes of Khumus warriors (450 gp each), an ebony and ivory lyre (800 gp), a scorched and useless spell book, a metal scroll case containing a protection from magic scroll, 479 gp and 563 sp.

2. Next to one of the corpses: a shattered antique black-ware vase. If reassembled it shows a scene of a Thothian priest standing next to the Great Head, with the inscription (in Mithric) "Eustachius sings his lament to open the door" below it.

8-147A: A is for Aerodis

When this door is opened, 1-3 hostile aerodes (see new monsters) are released.

Inhabitants:

1. 1-3 aerodes (see new monsters): SZ M; AC 0 or 6; MV 350' flying (Class A); HD 6; HP 42, 41, 34; #AT 1; Dmg 3-12. Special attacks: beneficial or detrimental songs. Special defenses: +2 or better weapons to hit; healed by fire; immune to magic missile, charm, confusion, hold, and mind-affecting spells.

8-147B: B is for Baboons

When opened, this door releases a greater guardian of Thoth. The guardian allows those it confronts here or in 8-148 three rounds to recite the Litany of Light (see Arden Vul books) or else it attacks.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 greater guardian of Thoth (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LN; AC 0; MV 120'; HD 8; HP 55; #AT 4 or 1; Dmg 1-8/1-8/1-8/1-8 or 1-12; MR 20%. Special attacks: fear, stun. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; teleport without error 2/day.

8-147C: C is for Care

Opening the door causes a helpful manifestation of Thoth to appear in the guise of a cleric of Thoth, complete with full ceremonial garb. The 'cleric' offers healing and succor to any who invoke Thoth: it can cast cure light wounds x3; cure serious wounds x2; cure deafness (reverse of the illusionist spell deafness); cure blindness; neutralize poison; and remove curse.

Inhabitants:

"Cleric" manifestation of Thoth, immune to attacks.

8-147D: D is for Delight

Opening this door causes a flight of some 500 starlings to burst down the hallway to 8-148, where they circle, form a murmuration in the shape of an ibis, and then dart through the sinkhole at 8-148G and thence into the far reaches of Arden Vul. If summoned again, the flock may take other forms at the GM's wish.

8-147E: E is for Entertainment

Opening this door releases a peaceful aerodis (see new monsters). Unless attacked, the aerodis spends 1-4 turns singing beautiful, six-part melodies. In this period it runs through 1-2 of its 'good' songs. If attacked it functions as a hostile aerodis.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 aerodis (see new monsters): SZ M; AC 0 or 6; MV 350' flying (Class A); HD 6; HP 39; #AT 1; Dmg 3-12. Special attacks:

beneficial or detrimental songs. Special defenses: +2 or better weapons to hit; healed by fire; immune to magic missile, charm, confusion, hold, and mind-affecting spells.

8-147F: F is for Fire

Opening this door releases a pack of hell hounds.

Inhabitants:

1. 8 hell hounds: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 120'; HD 5; HP 37, 35, 34, 33, 33, 32, 32, 30; #AT 1; Dmg 1-10. Special attacks: breathe fire; surprise on 1-4 in 6. Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6. Special: 50% to spot hidden or invisible.

8-147G: G is for Guardians

When opened, this door releases an imperial stone guardian. Since Eustachius is not present, the guardian immediately attacks. Once one guardian has been summoned, subsequent results for this chamber produce nothing (that is, only 1 imperial stone guardian may be summoned).

Inhabitants:

1. 1 imperial stone guardian (see new monsters): SZ L; AL N; AC -2; MV 90'; HD 8+3; HP 58; #AT 2; Dmg 3-18/3-18; MR 50%. Special defenses: +2 or better weapons to hit; immune to missiles (including magic missile), fire, cold, mind-affecting spells (e.g. charm), and most immobilizing spells (immune to entangle, hold monster, web).

8-148: The Singing Grotto

This large grotto was discovered by the cantor of the cult of Thoth, Eustachius. He developed it into one of the marvels of ancient Arden Vul, one known and appreciated by the elites whom Eustachius permitted to visit. The cave has a 35' ceiling. Several pillars of rock extend from floor to ceiling (one also descends into a sinkhole). A light breeze circulates through the chamber in a counter-clockwise direction commencing from the natural pillar marked G.

All of the natural stone – but not the shaped areas – is covered with whispering fungus (see new flora), a pale yellow, phosphorescent, and slightly furry fungus that ripples in the moving air. The fungus possesses a basic collective sentience in patches of 20 square feet or more, and one of its acts of volition is to ripple the air so as to create the breeze.

The lightly sanded floor may appear to be natural, too, but dwarves will know immediately that it has been carefully shaped. The wall to the southeast has been worked; it was known as the wall of songs, where Eustachius recorded the most successful of his compositions. To the west are seven looping horns carved into the stone and enhanced with bronze mouthpieces. Carved into one side of each of the seven main stone pillars is a 3'-tall, tiki-like stone head. The southern niche, moreover, contains an enormous boulder (15'x15'x15') that has been entirely shaped to resemble a huge stone head.

GM Note: This puzzle chamber allows the curious and clever to interact with Eustachius's great creation, the Singing Grotto. The basic idea is that each of the seven horns is connected to one of the lesser stone heads; sounding a horn produces a distinct note, which echoes forth from the appropriate stone head (sounding the

A horn produces an A note from the head marked A). If one sounds the horn in a certain sequence, certain effects may be triggered, including the release of the creatures bound in area 8-147A to 8-147G. Once one is done sounding individual notes through the horns (via a delay of 3 rounds after the last note played), the Great Head sings the sequence out in a beautiful, sonorous bass. Replicating the sequence known as the Cantor's Lament (see below, Table 1) not only causes the Great Head to sing its mournful lament, it also causes the Great Head to grind forward, revealing the staircase to 8-149.

The Horns: The sounding horns are built into a carefully shaped ledge of rock that circles the western portion of the cave. Each 'horn' is in fact a careful piece of craftsmanship that incorporates an actual tusk or horn into cleverly and magically carved stone channels in the cave wall. Each horn is slightly different, with apertures/mouthpieces of varying size and material. In addition, each horn 'plays' a distinct note, although the note sounds from the appropriate lesser head. Working counter-clockwise from the upper right, the notes played by the horns are C, D, E, F, G, A, and B. For true music fans, it is possible to achieve a flatted or sharped tone by varying the embouchure used when sounding a horn.

The Wall of Songs: A 40'x10' portion of southeastern wall of the cave was flattened by Eustachius, who used it as a sort of blackboard on which to experiment with 'compositions' or note sequences. Two lumps of whitish chalk lie invitingly on the floor by the wall, and a long-decayed step ladder sits nearby. Some remnants of Eustachius's composing process are still legible on the wall. Two are notes written in a spidery Mithric hand: "Compose swiftly, or face appropriate action!" and "Repetition does not equal music." One tonal sequence, named 'Restorative', is also fully indicated: EEF+EAA-. The start of a second sequence, tantalizing entitled "Eustachius's Lament" is also present, although most has been erased: B-D-. For the effects of these sequences, see below. Full transcriptions of Eustachius's Lament (aka the Cantor's Lament) may be found at areas 3-57, 7-22, and 8-53.

The Lesser Heads: Each of the lesser heads is carved into one side of a rock pillar in the main cave. The heads vary in size, from 2' (the G-head) to 5' (the E-head) in height. Each is distinct in its facial features and expression, but all share a few features: 1) they do not resemble 'normal' Archontean sculpture, but instead appear more like the Olmec Colossal Heads (flat noses, wide eyes, thick lips); 2) whatever their expression, the lips of each are slightly pursed, allowing sound to emanate from within; 3) all are placed at a level 5' above the cave floor. Each head is connected by magic to one of the horns, and, as a result, each head only sings a single note.

Two of the lesser heads differ slightly from the others. The 'F-head' is not found on a free-standing pillar, but rather is carved onto an outcropping of the north wall of the cave. The 'G-head' is the most unusual, as it is carved into a pillar that rises from the center of a sinkhole extending 10' below the level of the cavern floor (cf. the sinkhole below).

The Great Head: This colossal boulder located in the southern portion of the cavern has been entirely shaped into another Olmec-style head. It has two oval eyes, a flattened nose, broad cheeks, and thick lips open in an 'o'. A band of some sort surrounds its head. The top of the boulder is flat. Via his sonic magic, Eustachius arranged it so that sequences of notes played by the horns and sounded by the lesser heads are sung forth in a melody by the Great Head. The great head's melodies vary slightly, but are typically mournful. It sings in a deep but sonorous bass tone. Should the Cantor's Lament be 'played' on the horns, the Great Head grinds forward, revealing the stairs to 8-149. The Great Head encases a giant chunk of arcanum (see new magic items); 3-12 turns of serious excavation on the head will reveal the arcanum.

The Sinkhole: The sinkhole around the G-tone lesser head is about 15' in diameter and 10' deep. The walls of the sinkhole are fairly sheer. At its base it opens into the tunnel network leading between 8-145 and 8-156. A noticeable breeze may be felt on the sinkhole floor, one that rises into the main cavern and helps activate the whispering fungus.

Effects Produced by Tone Sequences: As indicated above, sounding the horns in certain patterns produces 'songs' sung by the Great Head. As the possibilities for such composition are infinite, some guidelines for the GM are presented here. A few sequences are fixed, and produce the fixed effect noted below on Table 1. For all other note sequences, the GM must use some judgment. In general terms, Eustachius designed the system such that note sequences in major or 'happy' scales or modes produce positive effects, while those that are discordant or in minor keys/modes produce 'negative' effects. As players may not have much musical training or inclination, however, the GM has two ways to proceed when PCs produce a set of tones. If PCs hum a melody or even a specific song, the GM should judge whether that melody/song fragment is 'positive' or 'negative'; the GM can then select whichever effect seems appropriate from Table 2. If the players don't indicate a melody or song, or if they show little inclination to engage with the musical component, the GM can simply roll randomly to determine the effect produced by the PCs' composition.

Note: In Archontean notation, F+ is the same as the modern western F-sharp, while A- is the same as our A-flat.

Table 1: Fixed Effects of Certain Tone Sequences

The following effects are fixed (i.e., playing any of these sequences only produces the associated effect).

Sequence of Tones	Effect
Any single note (without producing another tone within 3 rounds)	The Great Head produces a loud raspberry sound
AA (or any sequence of As without other tones)	Opens door A in 8-147
BB	Opens door B in 8-147
CC	Opens door C in 8-147
DD	Opens door D in 8-147
EE	Opens door E in 8-147
FF	Opens door F in 8-147
GG	Opens door G in 8-147
Any combination of two or more notes sounded simultaneously (by several persons, of course)	Cacophony from the various Heads, plus doors 8-147A and 8-147E open simultaneously
B-D-F-D-E	The Cantor's Lament; the Great Head sings a wordless lament (to Trane's "Blue Train") after which the Great Head grinds forward, revealing the entry to 8-149
The GM can assign a specific effect to other fixed sequences	varies

Table 2: Randomized Effects of Tone Sequences

D20	Sequence of Tones	Effect
1-4	Generic 'happy song'	Either door 8-147 C (33%), door 8-147D (33%), or door 8-147E (33%) opens
5-8	Generic 'sad' song	Either door 8-147A (25%), 8-147B (25%), 8-147F (25%), or 8-147G (25%) opens
9-11	Intriguing song	Summons 1-3 aerodes (see new monsters). 25% chance they are hostile.
12	EEF+EAA- [Happy Birthday]	The Great Head chants a pleasing simple melody; all in hearing have 1-8 HP restored
13	CCDECED [Yankee doodle]	The Great Head hums a fast jaunty melody; marching speed of all increased by 30' (i.e., from 90' to 120', or 120' to 150') for 2-4 hours
14	DE+EFGG+ AB+ [Blue Monk]	Great Head sings a simple climbing harmonic sequence for 5 minutes; all in hearing are affected as if by a heroism potion.
15	EEFGGFE [Ode to Joy]	The Great Head sings a triumphant song for 10 minutes; all in hearing receive +2 to saves for 2-4 hours.

16	BABCDEC [So What]	The Great Head sings a repetitive loop that is highly syncopated. For the next 1-4 hours, whenever the PCs make a decision about which direction to take, the GM rolls it randomly as the characters 'naturally' don't seem to care. No mapping is possible, either.
17	CBAGGCBCGG [Don't Fear the Reaper]	The Great Head intones slow ominous tones. A pair of type III demons gate in to answer the summons! Type III demons: SZ L; AC -4; MV 90'; HD 10; HP 70, 59; #AT 5; DMG 2-12/2-12/1-3/1-3/2-5; darkness; fear; levitate; cause pyrotechnics; polymorph self; telekinese; gate another demon (30%).
18	BDDEEGF+ [Iron Man]	The Great Head breathes forth a cloud of poison gas that fills the grotto within 2 rounds and lasts for 2 turns. Save versus poison (at +1 bonus) or die; even those saving take 2-8 damage.
19	EGABAGA [Stayin' Alive]	The Great Head chants a swift disco beat, and all must save or dance, imposing a -2 penalty to all rolls for 2-4 turns. Also, a randomly-determined door in 8-147 opens.
20	Discordant overload	All doors in 8-147 open simultaneously

GM Note: The sequence called the Cantor's Lament may be discovered elsewhere, at areas 3-57, 7-22, and 8-53.

Inhabitants:

There is a 25% chance that the phase spider in 8-156 comes to investigate sounds of human activity, but only if more than six rounds have passed without music from the heads. For stats, see 8-156.

Treasure:

The arcnum (see new magic items) within the Great Head is 5' in diameter and weighs about 11,000 lb.

8-149: The Cantor's Rest

This cavern may only be accessed by playing the Cantor's Lament on the horns/heads in area 8-148; doing so causes the Great Head to grind forward, revealing the stairs down to this area.

The square cave within was Eustachius the cantor's private study and retreat. The walls are decorated with frescoes showing representations of aerodes (see new monsters), largely as shimmering butterflies in iridescent colors. An oak desk carved to make it look as if it were made of actual branches sits against the south wall; on it are sheaves of sheet music. A hammock has rotted in place along the east wall, and a set of simple pine chairs and tables lies in the center of the chamber. The west wall boasts a rack with several musical instruments: three buccinae, a pair of cithara, three lyres, and two auloi. One of the cithara is Eustachius's cithara (see new magic items), and one of the auloi is an aulos of frenzy (see new magic items). By the entrance hallway is a stone chest: inside the chest are the following: a pouch with eight golden yellow topaz gems (500 gp each); an unusual set of ebony Archontean chess pieces, in which each of the usual figures carries a tiny gold instrument (cithara, lyre, aulos, etc.) (the set is worth 4,000 gp); a stack of twelve ancient octagonal platinum coins (see Arden Vul items); and a set of erotic earrings made of ivory and platinum (450 gp).

Treasure:

See text above.

8-150: Leather-Making Cave

This cave smells strongly of decaying animal tissue. Four natural pools are found along its walls. In its center are four frames made of bone and wood. Muq (8-151) stretches animal skins on the frames after working them over in the pools. As a result the pools are rather filthy and smell quite badly. At the far end of the cave is a pile of bones and rotting viscera; most of the bones are those of small animals like goats, lizards, and snakes.

Treasure:

One of the skins stretching on the rack is a basilisk skin that Muq is preparing for Cinna Minux (7-122); that skin is worth 325 gp. The other three skins are more mundane, and might fetch 25-75 gp each.

8-151: Muq's Cave

The western corridor is blocked by a latticework of wooden sticks, vines, and bits of debris (so as to deny the rust monsters at 8-140 entrance to this cave).

This cave is the home of an exiled lesser varumani (see new monsters) named Muq. More than fifteen ledges and niches are set into the walls of the cave, and Muq is adept at leaping between them (or from them!). He has two goats curing from hooks in the ceiling, and a pool of clear water in the northern niche. Hidden beneath a rock at the bottom of the pool is an iron box sealed with wax; in it are Muq's few valuables.

Muq lurks in the shadows on the wall, preferring to hide if visitors look dangerous. If discovered, he proves to be anxious and shiftily, attempting to placate visitors with whatever information – even invented information – will get them to leave. He only fights if cornered.

Muq is a clan-brother and former friend of Gog (5-2); he provided false evidence to Varboka the thegn (7-30) implicating Gog in treason. Gog was duly exiled, but swiftly Muq was forced to flee as varumani public opinion turned against the snitch. Fearing for his life, Muq survives by spying for the vampire, Cinna Minux (7-122), who has charmed him and who brings him food and bits of information. Both Gog and Varboka would pay well for information about Muq's location (or news of his death).

Muq is afraid of Lugo and company (8-136), and would like to avoid them if possible.

Inhabitants:

1. Muq, the lesser varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90; HD 8; HP 56; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22

(club, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: club.

Treasure:

In Muq's sealed box are the following: a choker made of gold inset with onyx (2,200 gp); a pair of white pearls (100 gp each); a map of areas 7-10 to 7-33 etched on the back of a piece of leather, with area 7-31 marked with an 'X' and noted as 'treasure'; a tightly-wrapped packet of documents that prove Gog's innocence and Muq's culpability. The documents would exculpate Gog in the eyes of Varboka, and are thus valuable: Gog has little money, but would prove a valuable and eternal friend, while the thegn would offer 2,500 gp for them.

8-152: Destroyed Weapons Stash

The northwest lobe of this cave contains two rickety wooden racks, each of which was once filled with spears. The spears, which are not uniform but vary in size and material, lie broken in pieces about the cave. Graffiti in Mithric is scrawled across the western wall of the cave: "Let the enemy take notice! They won't be able to use this stuff now!" and "Marcus, optio X-S". Any Archontean would recognize the 'X-S' abbreviation as meaning the Xth legion of heavy infantry (scutarii); Marcus was an optio (minor officer) in this legion in antiquity. Beneath the spears are the bones of a heqeti hopper (see new monsters).

8-153: Headless Statue

A rather lumpish, headless statue stands near the entrance to this small, muddy cave. It depicts a being with a squat torso, thick thighs, and human-esque arms that each hold a spear. It is, of course, a heqeti hopper. The head was struck off in antiquity and is lost. As a curiosity the statue might bring 200 gp to the statue brokers (AV-22). Buried in the muck at the foot of the statue, however, is a heqeti spore bomb (see Arden Vul items), wrapped carefully in a piece of lizard hide.

8-154: Cave with Small Cliff

This cave is relatively flat and dry. A small cliff (30' high) looks down from the southern corridor into area 8-156 (although a descending passage also allows access to that location). Signs of a recent feast are present: two skeletons of subterranean lizards that have been stripped of all edible meat and marrow, and a litter of empty stoneware jugs and bottles surround a small campfire. The fire is warm, but no longer active. The debris is a warning of the presence of the spriggans to the north.

8-155: Spriggan Trouble

The cavern is relatively flat, with a sandy floor; it is brightly lit by six torches thrust into the sand around its edges. Amid the torchlight six Arden Vul spriggans (see new monsters) are playing bocce with an assortment of skulls. They tethered their trained subterranean lizard to the floor while they play; the lizard carries thirty seven bottles of various sizes containing brandies, ales, and other liquors. The skulls are human, and one has two scrolls stuffed into it.

The spriggans were sent by a faerie lord to discover the fate of their comrades (7-62), who have been missing for more than a millennium. Displeased with the assignment, they are easily distracted and quite content to dilly-dally, play games, sing songs, and chat with visitors. Eventually, after urging any visitors to drink and play with them, the spriggans will ask about the fate of their lost colleagues. Should the PCs have useful information (such as their location), this group will part as great friends, promising to 'put in a good word' with all other spriggans; in this case, the spriggans can warn their new friends about the 'demons who are not as they appear' (8-119 to 8-120) and can suggest that the 'shiny cave' (8-157) has good pickings for non-spriggans. Should the PCs have killed the other spriggans and admit it, this group attacks immediately. If the PCs have no information to report, there is a 50% chance that this group grows angry and attacks; otherwise they continue their game, ignoring the PCs. Should the PCs mention and/or sing the Green Silken Robe (see 7-62), these spriggans are impressed. They immediately drop what they're doing and join in, singing for 2-8 turns. The chance that they attack drops to 10%.

Half of their number has become radicalized. As a result, they left the search party and can be found at area 9-99.

Inhabitants:

1. 6 Arden Vul spriggans (see new monsters): SZ S or L; AL CN; AC 4 (5); MV 90' (150'); HD 5 (8+3); HP 38 (63), 37 (62), 35 (60), 34 (61), 34 (59), 32 (57); #AT 1 (2); Dmg 2-5 (knife) or (2-12/2-12); MR 25%. Thief skills: PP 75%, OL 78%, FRT 70%, MS 77%, HS 64%, HN 35%, CW 81%, RL 40%. Special attacks: confusion 1/day. Special defenses: immune to poison, charm, and mind-affecting spells; healed by magic missiles. Special: grow to giant size; affect normal fires, faerie fire, trip, detect magic, shatter.
2. 1 trained, smallish (15'-long), subterranean lizard: SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 6; HP 37; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12. Special attacks: double damage on a natural roll to hit of 20.

Treasure:

The alcohol is usable, or could be sold for 275 gp. The scrolls are a scroll of protection from earth elementals and a spell scroll containing Kentillian's abyssal ice (see new magic items). Each spriggan carries a pouch with 25 sp, 75 gp, 15 pp, and a potion. The six potions are as follows: potions of fire resistance, undead control, treasure finding, the berserk, deafening light, and hostile levitation (for the last three, see new magic items).

8-156: Spider Cave

A phase spider makes its home in this tall (20') cave. The spider's web runs across the upper register of the cave, allowing it to drop down on unsuspecting prey as they cross below. A number of dead starlings (6-13) lie on the cave floor; inspection reveals they have been drained of their bodily fluids. The spider has no treasure. Occasionally it visits area 8-148 through the sinkhole, but is intimidated by the music of the Great Head; only if the sounds of prey moving in 8-148 persist for 6 rounds without any music might the spider move to investigate (25% chance).

Inhabitants:

1. 1 phase spider: SZ L; AL N; AC 7; MV 60', 150' in web; HD 5+5; HP 38; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: poison (-2 to saves). Special defenses: phasing.

8-157: Rudishva Retreat

This large chamber is constructed in the usual rudishva style: all edges rounded, octagonal black granite sheathing tiles, and a very clean, minimalist look.

A long, oval console and three stools stand against the east wall; all are made of white plasteel. In one of the stools is the desiccated corpse of a rudishva, still in his orange jumpsuit. The cause of his death is obvious, as a heqeti stone spear protrudes from his back. Three hammocks of sturdy flexible plastic hang from posts set into the curved northern wall. In one of them is a second corpse, also in orange jumpsuit and also bearing signs of violent attack. Five corpses of heqeti hoppers lie in the center of the chamber; they appear to have killed each other.

By the east wall are several white plasteel racks holding numerous pieces of rudishva gear, all of it smashed and useless, as well as a closed and keyed troll chest (see new technological items). The troll chest is keyed to the hand of the third rudishva corpse (see below); were explorers able to open the rudishva iris door and slay the slime zombie, they could use the desiccated hand of the rudishva to open the chest.

The door in the southern wall is a rudishva iris door, and only opens when a silver or yellow rudishva identity plaque is presented (see new technological items). The t-shaped area beyond it is similar in appearance, although the southern corridor fragment ends in jagged rock. To the west and east are niches for rudishva teleport nodes. Lying inert in the southern extension is a valuable rudishva tool, a mobile stone cutter (see new technological items).

Just inside the southern side of the door is the corpse of a third rudishva in an orange jumpsuit. The corpse's flesh within the jumpsuit is coated by a rust colored, gluey, non-motile, flesh-animating heqeti slime (see new monsters). The corpse rises as a heqeti slime zombie (see new monsters) if warm-blooded life is detected within 10'.

Backstory: Near the end of the period of rudishva hegemony, Captain Leil-Jor commanded three crewmembers of the Beacon to begin delving a new refuge here in the depths of the Nether Reaches. Those crewmen were overwhelmed and slain during the heqeti surprise attack, as the kaliyani let their heqeti allies use the teleporter near 5-122 (that once led to T21) to assault this region. The leader of this three-man team was infected by the heqeti slime, but managed to shut the rudishva iris door after the hoppers, trapping them in the northern portion of the room as they slaughtered his comrades. The heqeti eventually took their own lives when they could not find an exit. A later heqeti rescue party dug the tunnel that now connects this chamber to the surrounding tunnel network, but they were too late to save their fellows.

Teleport Nodes:

The two nodes are not functional, even though both possess the standard 5'-diameter silvery circle on the floor and the companion 10"x10", rune-incised wall plaque. Both lead to areas that are now buried under tons of rubble. The western node (T21) once led to the now-destroyed kaliyani areas (near 5-122). The eastern node (T22) once led to an area with substantial arcenum and deuterium deposits that Captain Leil-Jor had just begun to develop in the months before the demise of the rudishva. Sadly, that new area suffered a cave-in in the intervening years, and the teleporter is thus currently inoperable. The new area provides a potential location for GM development; should the GM wish it, he/she could devise a new rudishva area to which T22 leads.

T21: inoperable (once led to an area near 5-122)

T22: inoperable

Inhabitants:

1. 1 heqeti slime zombie (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 4; HP 24; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8. Special attacks: slime infestation. Special defenses: immune to electricity.
2. 1 rust colored, gluey heqeti slime (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 0'; HD 2; HP 11; #AT 1; Dmg special. Special attacks: flesh-animating (covers flesh and kills victim in 4-7 rounds, then re-animates as a heqeti slime zombie - see new monsters); corrosive to leather. Special defenses: healed by electricity or lasers; slowed by cold.

Treasure:

Under the corpse and atop the console in the northern part of the chamber: a stun baton with rudishva lesser power supply (see new technological items).

On the third rudishva corpse: a silver rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items).

In the troll chest (keyed to the hand of the third rudishva): two rudishva breathers, a rudishva fire extinguisher, three rudishva stun grenades, a rudishva personal force shield, two full rudishva lesser power supplies, 30 Arden Vul cakes (see new technological items for all these items).

In the unfinished southern corridor: a mobile stone cutter with a greater rudishva power supply (75% charged) (see new technological items for both).

8-158: Heqeti Sign Mold

A patch of vermillion mold covers the southern half of this cavern. Motion with 10' of the mold causes the mold to adjust its hyphae to reveal a pictographic message: a crude heqeti hopper with an arrow pointing east. The mold is, in fact, a heqeti sign-mold (see new flora), placed here ages ago to direct lost heqeti to the staging ground at 8-162

8-159: Crossroads Cave with Pukel-mander

This deserted cave seems to have been partly worked in antiquity, and several broken bits of primitive mining equipment are scattered around (shovels, picks, etc.). The southern extension contains the remains of a heqeti pukel-mander (see new magic items). The head of the pukel-mander has been hacked off and lies on the sandy floor; excrement has been shoved into its eye holes, and crude graffiti in Mithric covers its torso (sample: 'back to the swamp, hoppers!' and 'teleport this!'). Needless to say the teleport function of the 'mander no longer functions. A piece of dirty linen thread runs across the floor of the chamber, leading towards both 8-160 and 8-161.

8-160: Deserted Cave

A whiff of a breeze from the west may be felt in this cave. The desiccated bodies of a dozen starlings summoned in antiquity from 8-147D lie on the floor. A dirty linen thread snakes towards the east (8-159); it eventually leads to 8-161.

8-161: Cave with Secret Door

One end of the linen thread found in 8-159 ends here, next to the corpse of an adventurer. The cave floor is sandy and shows much evidence of traffic, albeit very old traffic: drag marks, the footprints of heqeti hoppers, small bits of broken bone and stone, etc. A ranger notices this immediately; others have a 1 in 4 chance to spot the signs.

Secret Door (east): This rare heqeti secret door is normal to detect. Presenting a tear of Kauket (see new magic items) causes the door to swing open easily; otherwise, the door must be pried open using brute strength.

Treasure:

The corpse of the human adventurer holds a flask of oil, a bandoleer of throwing knives, a broken staff, a bulls-eye lantern, and a backpack with 537 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items), a pair of silver earrings shaped like heqeti hoppers (125 gp), four red spinel gems (100 gp each), and a scroll with the following magic user spells: wall of fire, extension II, and enchant an item.

8-162: Hidden Heqeti Staging Area

This chamber is roughly hewn from the rock. As with all heqeti areas, the walls are pebbled and slightly oily. On the east wall are three large pieces of graffiti in Mithric: "Death to the hoppers!"; "Life to the Xth!" [i.e., the Xth legion of heavy scutarii], and "We have disabled the damned wells. Let them try to flank us now!" The niches to the east hold heqeti teleport wells. A statue of a heqeti weaver stands at the north end, while several overturned equipment racks stand to the south. Broken equipment and the bones of numerous heqeti and humans line the floor. The bones come to life and attack once the room is entered.

Statue of Qisstep the Weaver: Qisstep the Weaver was one of the architects of the heqeti defeat of the rudishva. The statue is 6' tall and carved of granite, and shows Qisstep gesturing with a wand toward the secret door. As a weaver, Qisstep's features are close to human, albeit with noticeable amphibian overtones: his legs are slightly thickened, his face is flattened face, and he has a slit-nose and slightly too-large mouth. Qisstep's name is etched into the plinth in simple heqeti runes.

Equipment and Bones: The shattered equipment mostly includes stone- or steel-tipped spears, with a smattering of wooden or stone clubs and Archontean gladii. The bones are jumbled, but come to life once the chamber is entered. Searching the debris for at least two turns produces several intact mundane weapons as well as several enchanted items.

Heqeti Teleport Wells: Each well takes the form of a 7'-diameter circle of stone rising 3' above the floor. Unlike other wells, which contain an inky blackness, these are void of magical effects and simply extend 10' below the surface of the chamber floor. The bottom of each well, however, bears a carved image of an amphibian head, with a 4"-diameter hole in the place of the mouth. The wells could be reactivated by dropping a tear of Kauket (see new magic items) into the appropriate mouth. If reactivated, the wells connect to 10-24.

Inhabitants:

1. 10 skeletal wights (see new monsters): SZ M; AL CE; AC 3; MV 120'; HD 5+1; HP 38(x3), 35(x4), 29(x3); #AT 1; Dmg 3-9. Special attacks: energy drain. Special defenses: successful energy drain heals 3-9 HP; +1 or better weapons to hit; edged weapons do ½ damage; immune to sleep, charm, hold, poison, paralyzation and cold; turned as ghosts.
2. 10 zhou (see new monsters), from the legionaries' corpses: SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 120'; HD 4; HP 30, 28, 28, 25, 25, 23, 23, 21, 21, 18; #AT 1; Dmg 3-12; MR 10%. Special defenses: immune to charm, hold, sleep, and cold; turned as ghosts.

Treasure:

Amid the litter: three intact heqeti spears, an intact stone club, a pair of fine gladii, Qisstep's spear (see new magic items), an enchanted gladius (short sword +3), four tears of Kauket (see new magic items), and a heqeti spore bomb (see new magic items) concealed in a backpack (there is a 20% chance the spore bomb activates when/if the backpack is handled).

8-163: Cave with Concealed Door

This empty cave has a moist, muddy floor. The south wall is covered with another patch of vermilion heqeti sign mold (see new flora). Approaching it causes the mold to form two pictographs: a crude spear pointing west, and an image of a heqeti hopper.

The mold also covers a small (3'-diameter) hole in the south wall. The hole is a concealed entrance to the tunnel leading to 8-159.

8-164: Watery Cave

This 50'-tall cave is full of water up to a level 30' above its floor. The tunnel to the south (towards 8-163) is found just at the water level. The tunnel to the north opens 10' above the cave floor and is thus fully submerged; it slopes downward to 8-166.

The water is not fully stagnant, but is also not running. The surface of the pool is dotted with cave lilies (see new flora). The spores of the cave lily, of course, cause intense euphoria, making swimming among the lilies highly dangerous. Those swimming must either consciously say they are avoiding the lilies's bulbs or roll 4d6 under DEX to avoid them. If a lily releases its seeds, those within 15' must save vs poison or fall into a soporific state; in such a state they will immediately sink and will drown in 3-6 rounds unless pulled out by comrades.

This cave is part of the territory of the giant snapping turtle that resides in 8-166. There is a 25% chance that the turtle is present in 8-166 at any given moment. If not present, it will still arrive from 8-166 within 2-5 rounds if it hears noise (like swimming, or the bodies of anesthetized swimmers dropping to the cave floor). The turtle is immune to the cave lilies.

The floor of this cave holds a scattering of bones as well as some treasure from previous victims of the lilies and the turtle.

Inhabitants:

1. Giant snapping turtle (25%): see stats at 8-166

Treasure:

Two 5-lb bars of platinum (1,250 gp each); 2 darts of sleeping (see new magic items); and a jade cup of life restoration with 2 charges remaining (see new magic items).

8-165: Looted Tomb of Qisstep the Weaver

Secret Door (east): This door is normal to find. It hangs on a pivot and opens by pushing hard on its right side.

A second, normal stone door leads to the tomb of the heqeti weaver, Qisstep. Tomb robbers will be disappointed, however, as the interior door rests crazily on its hinges; it was clearly broken down in antiquity.

The original heqeti frescoes have been utterly destroyed, with images hacked out and various curses scribed (in Mithric) all over the wall (sample: "Lucius took a dump here!" and "May Osiris keep the slimy ones from passing the veil").

To the south is a mortuary altar in the heqeti style, formed of red obsidian and with a shallow basin in which the ashes of the deceased were placed. Although no ashes are present in the basin, it seems that Lucius was true to his word. To the north is a statue of Qisstep, looking much like that at 8-162: he stands on relatively human-looking legs, and was originally pointing a wand at the door. The head and both arms have been knocked off, however.

Amid the general debris and litter are several fittings marked with the Archontean numeral, 'X': it is a sign that a spathos of the Xth legion was quartered here briefly during the heqeti wars.

For all of their destruction, the legionaries did not locate a hidden compartment in the plinth to Qisstep's statue. The compartment is protected by an ancient poison needle (50% chance it still works): those stuck must save vs poison or suffering a wasting disease (CON diminishes by 1, and HP by 10%, each week until death or until the disease is cured). Inside the compartment is Qisstep's ring (see new magic items) and a necklace made of jade, coral, and shark teeth (550 gp).

8-166: Water-filled Chasm

A deep chasm filled with cold, slightly stagnant water bisects this large cavern. The water-filled chasm extends 50' below the floor of the western ledge; the eastern ledge is 30' taller than the western one. The pool is filled with the strange fungi known as cave lilies (see new flora), whose spores cause motion-freezing euphoria. Swimmers must either move extremely carefully while consciously avoiding the bulbs, or successfully roll 4d6 under DEX to avoid touching a bulb. A burst bulb releases its spores in a 15' radius, causing all within to save vs poison or sink into a catatonic state (and thereby probably drowning within 3-6 rounds).

The cave is also home to a large and very hungry giant snapping turtle that alternates hibernation with feasting on incautious spelunkers. The turtle is 75% likely to be present here (otherwise it will be in 8-164); it is immune to the cave lilies.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 giant snapping turtle: SZ L; AL N; AC 5 (0); MV 30'; 20' swimming; HD 10; HP 62; #AT 1; Dmg 6-24. Special attacks: surprise on 1-4.

8-166A: Hidden Spring

Down the submerged tunnel is a spring that feeds fresh water into the caves at 8-164 and 8-166. The spring takes the form of a slow leak through a narrow crack, and is not traversable.

8-167: Deep Cave

The entrance ledge drops 20' to the cave floor below. On the floor of the cave are the corpses of several animals who fell into this pit. Beneath them, and invisible to casual sight, is the skeletal corpse of an Archontean scholar who, having overindulged in wine, also fell into the pit and died of his injuries. The scholar still wears a ring of fire resistance and carries a small wooden coffer carved with scenes of Archontean justice. The coffer contains two rudishva breathers (see new technological items) and a slate tablet with the following notes, in Mithric: "The crystal guardians completely ignore us, save when we attempt to harvest the giant crystal columns. We need more resources, better defenses, and stronger protection against the environment within."

Treasure:

Two rudishva breathers (see new technological items).

8-168: Archontean Corridor Fragment

This worked section of hallway is palpably warm and humid. A plaque hammered to the wall reads, in Mithric: "Do not proceed past the environment veil without proper protection. Their language remains elusive. Those without authorization may be trapped." Scholars in the late Archontean period began to finish this section of tunnel in preparation to a full-scale exploitation of area 8-169.

The northern niche contains a 5'-diameter circle of rose quartz set in the floor: the destination point for the teleporter at 8-7F.

The southern passage is blocked by a special, permanent wall of force; it allows passage into area 8-169, but only allows passage back to 8-168 to those who know the password ("open", in Mithric).

8-169: Crystalline Cave

This huge cave is 80' tall; the entrance ledge protrudes at a point 60' above the cavern floor. The cavern combines several unusual geological features. First, it is extremely hot and humid (~130F and close to 100% humidity), making exertion quite difficult (movement halved, all combat rolls at -2). Second, colossal columns of light-orange-colored gypsum imbued with arcanum (see new magic items) crisscross the bulk of the chamber. Third, the cavern is filled with bathtub-hot water up to a point 20' below the ceiling; explorers will need to swim among the giant columns to explore the cave. Fourth, six large (8'- to 10'-diameter) pockets of raw arcanum (indicated by capital As on the map,) are buried among the gypsum columns. And fifth, the infusion of arcanum in the gypsum causes the columns to give off a dull, orange glow.

Amid the gypsum columns move four regular and two large selenite guardians. They politely request that intruders depart, although their language is utterly foreign and can only be deciphered by magic. Should intruders not depart within a turn, the selenite guardians move to defend their 'garden'.

Inhabitants:

1. 4 selenite guardians (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 2; MV 30' on dirt, 60' on selenite; HD 6; HP 41, 37, 36, 34; #AT 2; Dmg 2-8/2-8. Special defenses: regenerate 2 HP/round near selenite; immune to fire and water; take only 1 HP from edged weapons.

2. 2 large selenite guardians (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 2; MV 30' on dirt, 60' on selenite; HD 9; HP 65, 59; #AT 2; Dmg 2-16/2-16. Special defenses: regenerate 2 HP/round near selenite; immune to fire and water; take only 1 HP from edged weapons.

Treasure:

Six large pockets of raw arcanum (see new magic items).

The arcanum-infused crystalline columns can be distilled at area SL13-37 to form more raw arcanum.

The corpses of any slain selenite guardians produce 6-600 gp worth of selenite crystals.

8-170: Tunnel to Unmapped Area

The destination of this tunnel is left to the GM to devise. It most certainly leads, at least indirectly, to a dwelling of the selenite guardians, deep below the earth. Perhaps it also leads to the subterranean realms of dwarves, gnomes, and dark elves? Of course, the tunnel can simply be a dead end if preferred.

8-171: Tunnel to Nowhere

Currently this tunnel ends in a cave-in. It does, however, provide the GM with an opportunity for expansion, should such expansion be desired. In such cases, the tunnel could lead to other, unexplored areas of the Halls, or even directly to the Underearth.

LEVEL 9: THE FLOOR OF THE GREAT CHASM

The focus of this level is the enormous cavern lying at the base of the Great Chasm that extends throughout Arden Vul. Surrounding cave systems and a handful of isolated and (mostly) abandoned outposts of the ancient occupants of Arden Vul provide additional interest. The western half of this enormous cavern has no roof, and intrepid explorers are thus capable of accessing Level 9 from any of the upper levels that open into the chasm. The eastern portion of the cavern, however, is enclosed, with a 50' ceiling soaring over the cavern floor. The floor of the cavern is mostly taken up by groves of colossal mushrooms, groves that are split into northern and southern halves by the lake formed by the two waterfalls falling from the upper levels. An underground river, the Rimpled Run, exits the cavern to the north (9-127, 9-141). The central cavern is home to all manner of monsters, including a vicious band of quicklings (9-4, 9-13 to 9-15).

Over the millennia all intelligent species have attempted to impose their will on the level, and thus remnants of heqeti, rudishva, Archontean, and Sortian building programs may be found branching out from the cavern walls. Some of these ancient, and other more modern, groups have begun to re-colonize the cavern floor, although to date only in cautious, exploratory ways. The heqeti have occupied the chambers leading to Level 10 (areas 9-76 to 9-82), and regularly hunt in the fungal forests. The kaliyani have sent an exploration team from Sub-Level 9 (9-118). The varumani not only hunt in the mushroom groves but have also established a silver mining operation to the south of the cavern (9-20 to 9-27). Finally, the Priscians have recently reoccupied the old (and hidden) Sortian compound (9-58 to 9-64). Other, older threats still exist in the ruins, including a camp of deadly demonic huntsmen (9-50), a tower occupied by ogre magi (9-70), the heqeti Old Father (9-126), a vengeance spirit of Sekhmet (9-104), and an Archontean-era lich (9-55).

GENERAL CONSTRUCTION NOTES:

Heqeti areas: 9-31 to 9-48, 9-76 to 9-82, 9-108 to 9-126.

Rudishva areas: 9-29 to 9-30, 9-88 to 9-97.

Archontean areas: 9-58 to 9-64, 9-98, and 9-100 to 9-107.

IMPORTANT NPCs

Rí Mear, lord of the quicklings (9-14)

Prayaska, true varumani mine boss (9-22)

Cenwulf the Unseen, 8th-level illusionist, and leader of the Priscian expeditionary team (9-31)

Vingalok, niravairi member of the Order of Planar Explorers (9-48)

Syagria Aitón, lich (9-55)

Jaracondus the Sprightly, second in command of the Priscians in Arden Vul (9-63)

Nerub Null, archmage and leader of the Priscians (9-64)

Walid, chief of the ogre magi (9-70)

Celsus Torquatius, a vengeance aspect of Sekhmet (9-104)

Rivvep, kaliyani sorcerer and leader of exploration team (9-118)

SIGNIFICANT REGIONS OF LEVEL 9

1. The Floor of the Chasm (areas 9-1 to 9-12, 9-16, 9-49 to 9-51, 9-65 to 9-67, 9-70 to 9-76, 9-83 to 9-87, 9-98, 9-108)

The Great Chasm extends downward from Level 2 through most of Arden Vul before ending here, in a massive cavern. The cavern is defined by the twin waterfalls that fall from the upper levels (9-66, 9-67) into a lake (9-65) before draining to the north in an underground river called the Rimpled Run (9-71). The western part of the region, around the lake and waterfalls, has no ceiling; to the north and east, however, the cavern has a ceiling that averages about 30' in height. North and south of the lake are extensive groves of giant mushrooms, amid which a variety of monsters thrive.

Factions: No faction controls the chasm floor, although the quicklings (9-4, 9-13 to 9-15) are active in the southern mushroom groves, and the ogre magi (9-70) and the aroksachaul (9-50) regularly hunt throughout the region.

Construction: The worked stone present in this region is very old, typically of either heqeti (9-75 and 9-76) or ancient Archontean (9-70) construction.

Environment: The region is generally humid and warm, thanks to the waterfalls (9-66 and 9-67) and plant life. The noise of the waterfalls falling into the lake (9-65) makes it easier to surprise foes; chances increase by 1 within 50' of the lake shore. Phosphorescence from the mushroom groves north and south of the lake provides dim light.

2. The Silver Mine (9-19 to 9-27)

The varumani have mined this series of caves and tunnels for silver for centuries. The miners are efficient and uninterested in talking or plotting (although the mine boss has been skimming silver from the operation). The region is defended to the north by a natural choke-point, where the varumani have built a defensive wall (9-21). Some of the mine tunnels lead upwards to the varumani regions of Level 7.

Factions: The varumani fully control this region, and are quick to eliminate any threats in the form of monsters, other factions, or foolish adventurers.

Construction: The only piece of construction is the varumani-built defensive wall at 9-21.

Environment: The region is cool and dry.

3. The Priscian Compound (9-58 to 9-64A)

A small, secret outpost delved in antiquity by the Sortians (see World of Archontos appendix) defines this region. The outpost remained hidden from the imperial administration thanks to illusions cast at area 9-58 and to the Sortians' unique teleportation system that makes use of Sortian eyes (see new magic items). The modern Priscians, who somewhat disingenuously claim to be descendants of the Sortians, reclaimed the outpost a few decades ago when the Priscian archmage Nerub Null (9-64) rediscovered it. So long as it remains secret, the outpost provides a safe refuge for Priscian exploration teams; it contains residences, storage halls, a means of teleporting to other Sortian areas, and, perhaps most significantly, the arcanum forge (9-60). The Priscians have restored the forge, which has allowed them to begin making some of the legendary Sortian equipment; as yet, however, they have not fully mastered the forge's secrets.

Factions: The region is fully controlled by the Priscians.

Construction: Construction is in the late classical style of the Archontean empire, although the Priscians have modernized it.

Environment: Normal dungeon conditions apply here.

4. The Rudishva Bastion (9-89 to 9-97)

This ultra-secret region was the command post for rudishva operations in Arden Vul and served as the residence for the bridge crew of the Beacon. It has remained secret for 2,800 years because it is extremely difficult to access. The transit shaft (9-91), which extends downward from Level 5 to this location, provides the most likely access route. A 'back door' at area 9-88 provides the only other point of entry, but a combination of clever concealment and still-operative rudishva point defense arrays (see new technological items) has kept this route secret as well. As a result, the bastion is in excellent condition; several important secrets, including the propulsion formula that might allow the rudishva shuttle (SL13-37) to fly between the stars, may be found here.

Factions: No faction controls this area, as no living souls have visited it in several millennia.

Construction: The entire region is rudishva construction.

Environment: The region is dry and cool.

5. The Praitonion (9-100 to 9-107)

A once-important, if seldom-visited and poorly-understood, region of Arden Vul, this small complex was built in the aftermath of Archon Marius's conquest of the heqeti. It served as a command center and forward position from which to watch for heqeti recrudescence. Over the centuries, as the heqeti threat receded into legend, the Praitonion came to serve a mostly ceremonial role as a symbol of Archontean glory. It was also by tradition the complex in which one of the great items of archonal regalia, the tablet of the Beacon (see 9-107) was housed. Although it is assumed that the tablet was lost during the Archontean retreat some 1,200 years ago, the tablet still rests in its reliquary, where it is guarded by Celsus Torquatius, a fearsome vengeance aspect of Sekhmet (9-104).

Factions: No faction controls the region, and few visit it due to the formidable power of Celsus Torquatius.

Construction: The entire area is Archontean construction.

Environment: The region is dry and cool.

6. The Silent Canyon (9-109 to 9-126)

This region was one of the first settled by the heqeti in the distant past. Their dwellings were built along the side walls of a tall, narrow cave, whose dimensions make it appear to be a canyon. Ritual and public spaces were built into the rock to the south of the canyon. The region has been unoccupied for almost 3,000 years, since the rudishva newcomers slew the heqeti living in the canyon and concealed the entire region behind a secret door (9-108). Those ancient heqeti still haunt the region as a form of undead known as the heqeti old ones, under the domination of a powerful undead spirit, the Old Father (9-126). As the Archontean never discovered the region, it has lain silent for centuries.

Factions: No faction controls this region. A team of kaliyani has just entered the region for the purpose of exploration (9-118).

Construction: The dwellings along the canyon proper are built of drystone flint walls. The delved areas (9-120 to 9-126) are of typical heqeti construction.

Environment: The region is dry and cool.

ACCESS AND EGRESS

To Levels 2, 3, 5, 6, 7, 8: Great Chasm at 9-1, leading up to 2-63A, 3-38, 5-34, 6-108, 7-3, and 8-2

To Level 5: tunnel at 9-35, leading up to 5-52B

To Levels 5, 6, and 7: the Great Pillar at 9-30, leading up to 5-138, 6-103, and 7-37

To Levels 5, 6, and 7: transit shaft at 9-91, leading up to 5-84, 6-164 and 7-146

To Level 6: tunnel at 9-39, leading up to 6-112A

To Level 7: the Dread Risers at 9-2, leading up to 7-2

To Level 7: tunnel at 9-27, leading up to 7-52

To Level 7: tunnel at 9-41, leading up to 7-64

To Level 7: corridor at 9-101, leading up to 7-136

To Level 7: stairs at 9-86, leading up to 7-147

To Level 8: tunnel at 9-57, leading up to 8-23

To Level 8: tunnel at 9-139, leading up to 8-95A

To Level 8: tunnel at 9-147, leading up to 8-119

To Level 8: tunnel at 9-150, leading up to 8-110

To Level 8: rudishva teleporter (T19) at 9-97, leading to 8-52

To Level 10: corridor at 9-82, leading down to 10-1

To Level 10: river at 9-141, leading down to 10-31

To Sub-Level 2: tunnel at 9-131, leading up to SL2-6

To Sub-Level 6: stairs at 9-125, leading up to SL6-4A

To Sub-Level 9: tunnel at 9-119, leading up to SL9-37
 To Sub-Level 10A: tunnel at 9-99A, leading up to SL10A-8
 To Sub-Level 13: tunnel at 9-44, leading up to SL13-32
 To Sub-Level 13: rudishva teleporter (T20) at 9-97, leading to SL13-38
 To Sub-Level 14: rudishva teleporter (T24) at 9-97, leading to SL14-7

Teleport Destinations on Level 9:

To 9-40: pukel-manders (see new magic items) at 2-49, 2-56C, 3-11, 4-74, 4-151A, 5-104, 6-107, 6-165, 8-26, SL5-28

RANDOM ENCOUNTERS

1. Areas with No Random Encounters

(9-21 to 9-27, 9-29 to 9-30, 9-78 to 9-82, 9-89 to 9-97, 9-100 to 9-107)

2. The Southern Mushroom Groves (9-2 to 9-12, 9-16 to 9-20, 9-31 to 9-40)

A check for an encounter should be made every three turns, with a 1 in 6 chance for success.

D20	Encounter
1-2	An item plummets from somewhere high above. All PCs must roll 4d6 under DEX. The one failing by the largest amount is struck by the object for 3-18 HP damage. If all pass the check, the object is merely an unpleasant liquid which coats all. Thrown objects are 90% junk (rocks, broken mundane objects, etc.), but there is a 10% chance it is interesting or valuable (GM's choice). If PCs are not in the western portion of the cavern (i.e., west of the dotted line), ignore this result and use the next one on the table.
3-7	A strike force of 4 quicklings: SZ S; AL CE; AC -3; MV 960'; HD 1 1/2; HP 11, 10, 9, 7; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-4. Special defenses: save as 19 th -level clerics; never surprised; 90% invisible when moving, 100% when motionless; impossible to surprise. Special: ventriloquism, forget, levitate, shatter, dig, and fire charm. There is a 33% chance that any given quickling has coated his/her dagger with spider venom. One of the team has 2-4 skulls filled with acid (2-8 HP, 1 HP splash) attached to his/her belt.
8	1 ogre mage from the Tower of Walid (9-70): SZ L; AL CE; AC 4; MV 90'; 150' flying (Class B); HD 5+2; HP 34; #AT 1; Dmg 1-12 or by weapon. Special attacks: charm person 1/day; sleep 1/day; ray of cold 1/day. Special defenses: fly (12 turns); become invisible; darkness 10' radius; polymorph to human form; regenerate 1 HP/rd; assume gaseous form. He is traveling swiftly and invisibly due to the threat posed by the aroksachaul (see new monsters)
9-11	1-3 giant spiders: SZ L; AL CE; AC 4; MV 30', 120' in web; HD 4+4; HP 32, 29, 25; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8. Special attacks: poison.

12-13	2-3 true varumani (see new monsters) from the Hunters' Lodge (7-14): SZ L; AL LN; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 61, 59, 58; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 6-24 (two-handed sword, 2-20+4). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8 th -level fighters or 8 th -level magic users, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: huge two-handed sword; ring mail. One of the three has 3 vials of hunter's friend (see Arden Vul items). There is a 33% chance that 1 of the encountered varumani is one of the named hunters from 7-14. The hunters are either hunting a trophy or food (50%), or returning with a trophy or food (50%)
14-15	2 renegade bestial varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL NE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 58, 51; #AT 3; Dmg 3-6/3-6/3-10. Special defenses: regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision; immune to poison
16	Two of the Priscians from area 9-62 (GM's choice of which), cautiously scouting the area. See stats at 9-62
17	A single aroksachaul (see new monsters) from area 9-50, with 2 yeth hounds. 1. 1 aroksachaul (see new monsters): SZ L; AC CE; AC 0; MV 120', 270' flying (Class C); HD 7+7; HP 48; #AT 2; Dmg 1-4/1-4 or 3-5/4-12 ( whip +2/bastard sword +2 ), or 4-9 (short bow with arrows of striking ); MR 55%. Continual abilitates: infravision; extraordinary senses. Special attacks: wield two weapons without penalty; only -1 to hit invisible creatures; cause fear; create darkness 10' radius. Special defenses: +2 or better weapons to hit; half damage from cold, electricity, fire and gas. Special: teleport without error; detect magic; read languages; dispel magic; levitate; telekinesis; gate in another aroksachaul or a type I-III demon (50%). Possessions: whip +2; bastard sword +2 ; short bow and 12 arrows of striking (see new magic items). 2. 2 yeth hounds: SZ L; AL NE; AC 0; MV 150', 270' (Class B); HD 3+3; HP 19, 18; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8. Special attacks: fear. Special defenses: silver, or +1 weapons or better to hit (damage taken is 1 per magical plus, or 1 for silver weapons)
18-19	A pod of chasm cephalopods (see new monsters): 1. 5 medium chasm cephalopods (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 5; MV 60' flying (Class A); HD 4; HP 29, 27, 26, 25, 24; #AT 5 (4 tentacles and a beak); Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-4/1-4/1-6; MR 25%. Special attacks: surprise on 1-4 2. 1 large chasm cephalopod (see new monsters): SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 60' flying (Class A); HD 6; HP 42; #AT 6 (five tentacles and a beak); Dmg 1-6/1-6/1-6/1-6/1-6/1-8; MR 25%. Special attacks: surprise on 1-4; one tentacle drains spells from casters, adding 2-8 HP to chasm cephalopod per spell
20	Roll on Great Chasm Table (see 9-1)

3. The Northern Mushroom Groves (9-73 to 9-77, 9-83 to 9-86, 9-98, 9-99, 9-108)

Checks should be made every three turns, with a 1 in 6 chance for an encounter.

D30	Encounter
1-3	2-5 corporeal undead raised by Celsus Torquatius (see 9-104). Roll d6 for type: 1-2=zombies, 3-4=ghouls, 5-6=ghasts 1. 2-5 zombies: SZ M; AL N; AC 8; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 15, 11, 10, 9, 8; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8. Special: always strike last 2. 2-5 ghouls: SZ M; AL CE; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 13, 12, 11, 11, 10; #AT 3; Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-6. Special attacks: paralysis. Special defenses: immune to sleep and charm. 3. 2-5 ghasts: SZ M; AL CE; AC 4; MV 150'; HD 4; HP 30, 25, 24, 23, 19
4-7	Small vermin. Roll d6 for type: 1=giant rats, 2-3=giant centipedes, 4-5=fire beetles 6=large spiders 1. 5-8 giant centipedes: SZ S; AL N; AC 9; MV 150'; HD 1 or 2 HP; HP 2(x4), 1(x4); #AT 1; Dmg n.a. Special attacks: poison (+4 to save) 2. 12 giant fire beetles: SZ S; AL N; AC 4; MV 120'; HD 1+2; HP 10, 9, 9, 8, 8, 7, 7, 6, 5, 4, 4, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8 3. 3-12 giant rats: SZ S; AL N(E); AC 7; MV 120'; HD 1-4 HP; HP 4(x3), 3(x3), 2(x3), 1(x3); #At 1; Dmg 1-3. Special attacks: 5% chance of disease 4. 10 large spiders: SZ S; AL N; AC 8; MV 60', 150' in web; HD 1+1; HP 7, 7, 6(x3), 5, 5, 4(x3), 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1. Special attacks: poison (+2 to saves).
8	A single aroksachaul with 2 yeth hounds (from 9-50): 1. 1 aroksachaul (see new monsters): SZ L; AC CE; AC 0; MV 120', 270' flying (Class C); HD 7+7; HP 48; #AT 2; Dmg 1-4/1-4 or 3-5/4-12 ( whip +2/bastard sword +2 ), or 4-9 (short bow with arrows of striking ); MR 55%. Continual abilites: infravision; extraordinary senses. Special attacks: wield two weapons without penalty; only -1 to hit invisible creatures; cause fear; create darkness 10' radius. Special defenses: +2 or better weapons to hit; half damage from cold, electricity, fire and gas. Special: teleport without error; detect magic; read languages; dispel magic; levitate; telekinesis; gate in another aroksachaul or a type I-III demon (50%). Possessions: whip +2; bastard sword +2; short bow and 12 arrows of striking (see new magic items). 2. 2 yeth hounds: SZ L; AL NE; AC 0; MV 150', 270' (Class B); HD 3+3; HP 19, 18; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8. Special attacks: fear. Special defenses: silver, or +1 weapons or better to hit (damage taken is 1 per magical plus, or 1 for silver weapons)
9-10	1-3 land urchins (see 9-83): SZ S; AL N; AC 3; MV 120'; HD 3+3; HP 22, 20, 19; #AT 2-12; Dmg 1-2(x12). Special attacks: paralysis. Special defenses: gas cloud.

11-12	4-6 bestial varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL NE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 58, 55, 53, 50, 49, 48; #AT 3; Dmg 3-6/3-6/3-10. Special defenses: regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision; immune to poison. These creatures have descended the stair at 9-86 either for a temporary visit (33%) or to join the renegades at 9-8 (66%)
13-15	1-3 true varumani hunters (see new monsters) from the Hunters' Lodge (7-14): SZ L; AL LN; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 60, 59, 55; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 6-24 (two-handed sword, 2-20+4). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8 th -level fighters or 8 th -level magic users, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: huge two-handed sword; ring mail. One of the three has 3 vials of hunter's friend (see Arden Vul items). There is a 33% chance that each of the encountered varumani is one of the named hunters from 7-14. The hunters are either hunting for a trophy or food (50%), or returning with a trophy or food (50%)
16-17	An item plummets from somewhere high above. All PCs must roll 4d6 under DEX. The one failing by the largest amount is struck by the object for 3-18 HP damage. If all pass the check, the object is merely an unpleasant liquid which coats all. Thrown objects are 90% junk (rocks, broken mundane objects, etc.), but there is a 10% chance it is interesting or valuable (GM's choice). If PCs are not in the western portion of the cavern (i.e., west of the dotted line), ignore this result and use the next one on the table.
18-19	9-12 baindara (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 8; MV 150', 150' gliding; HD 1-1; HP 4(x3), 3(x3), 2(x3), 1(x3); #AT 1; Dmg 1-2. Unless appeased quickly by food or slain outright, the baindara are likely to chatter loudly, making the chance for a random encounter 2 in 6 for the next 3 turns.
20	1-2 Arden Vul spriggans (see new monsters): SZ S or L; AL CN; AC 4 (5); MV 90' (150'); HD 5 (8+3); HP 34 (61), 31 (59); #AT 1 (2); Dmg 2-5 (knife) or (2-12/2-12); MR 25%. Thief skills: PP 75%, OL 78%, FRT 70%, MS 77%, HS 64%, HN 35%, CW 81%, RL 40%. Special attacks: confusion 1/day. Special defenses: immune to poison, charm, and mind-affecting spells; healed by magic missiles. Special: grow to giant size; affect normal fires, faerie fire, trip, detect magic, shatter. These spriggans come from the radicalized group found at area 9-99; casualties taken here should be subtracted from the roster at 9-99
21-22	3 shriekers: SZ L; AL N; AC 7; MV 10'; HD 3; HP 18, 15, 13; #AT 0; Dmg nil. Special attacks: noise. Unless silenced swiftly (within 2 rounds), the shriekers are 50% likely to attract a shambling mound within 3 rounds (see next entry)
23-24	One of the shambling mounds that stalks the northern groves (see 9-83): SZ L; AL N; AC 0; HD 10; HP 72; #AT 2; Dmg 2-16/2-16. Special attacks: suffocation. Special defenses: immune to fire; lightning causes it to grow; cold does ½ or no damage

25-26	1-3 tenebrous worms (see 9-83): SZ M; AL N; AC 1; MV 150'; HD 10; HP 70, 63, 59; #AT 1; Dmg 2-20. Special attacks: acid. Special defenses: poison bristles
27	2 heqeti chosen (see new monsters), as 6th-level fighters: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60'; 150' swimming; HD 6; HP 40, 37; #AT 2; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 1-6 (bite). Special attacks: hop; acid tongue (1-6 acid damage); +1 damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold and water/ice. The spears of the chosen are smeared with Kauket's vision (see Arden Vul items)
28	1 ogre mage from the Tower of Walid (9-70): SZ L; AL CE; AC 4; MV 90'; 150' flying (Class B); HD 5+2; HP 34; #AT 1; Dmg 1-12 or by weapon. Special attacks: charm person 1/day; sleep 1/day; ray of cold 1/day. Special defenses: fly (12 turns); become invisible; darkness 10' radius; polymorph to human form; regenerate 1 HP/rd; assume gaseous form. He is traveling swiftly and invisibly due to the threat posed by the aroksachaul (see new monsters)
29	A pod of one large and five medium chasm cephalopods (see new monsters): 1. 5 medium chasm cephalopods (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 5; MV 60' flying (Class A); HD 4; HP 29, 27, 26, 25, 24; #AT 5 (4 tentacles and a beak); Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-4/1-4/1-6; MR 25%. Special attacks: surprise on 1-4 2. 1 large chasm cephalopod (see new monsters): SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 60' flying (Class A); HD 6; HP 42; #AT 6 (five tentacles and a beak); Dmg 1-6/1-6/1-6/1-6/1-6/1-8; MR 25%. Special attacks: surprise on 1-4; one tentacle drains spells from casters, adding 2-8 HP to chasm cephalopod per spell
30	Roll on the Great Chasm encounter chart (see 9-1)

4. The Silent Canyon (9-108 to 9-126)

Checks should be made every two turns, with a 2 in 10 chance for an encounter.

All random encounters will be 3-6 heqeti old ones (see new monsters), which clamber out of the sand of the canyon to assault intruders: SZ M; AL CE; AC 3; MV 90'; HD 6+6; HP 47, 45, 40, 39, 38, 37; #AT 1 Dmg 3-12. Special attacks: leap; cursed tongue. Special defenses: turned as spectres; half damage from piercing and edged weapons; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and cold-based spells. So long as the Old Father (see 9-126) still 'lives', there is an infinite supply of heqeti old ones. Should he be slain, then only 18 more can rise from the sands as random encounters.

5. The Rimpled Run and the River Caves (9-71, 9-127 to 9-150)

Checks are made every 4 turns, with a 1 in 8 chance for an encounter.

Should one be indicated, the GM should select the encounter based on the location of the PCs. If appropriate (i.e., if the PCs are in areas 9-140 to 9-150), the encounter might be with a hydra from 9-143 (25%) or 3-6 of the cave skinks (see new monsters) from areas 9-144 to 9-146). Otherwise, the GM should roll on the encounter chart for either of the mushroom groves (see above).

6. The Rudishva Bastion (9-89, 9-90, 9-93, 9-96, 9-97)

There is only one possible random encounter here, namely the harmless rudishva dust ionizer (see new technological items). Initially the ionizer is located at area 9-93A, but it slowly moves in a clockwise route through the accessible areas of the Bastion on its six-hour cleaning routine. PCs may hear the whine and light trundle of its trackballs. Although possibly alarming, the ionizer is completely harmless.

LEVEL KEY

9-1: Great Cavern at the Foot of the Great Chasm

One of the iconic features of the Halls, this massive fissure extends through most of the dungeon levels and provides a sure, if difficult, means of vertical navigation of the Halls. The fissure is generally shaped like a triangular prism, with its apex about 50' above Level 2. The prism extends downward 1,600' through the Halls until it levels out at the floor of the chasm (9-1) hundreds of feet below.

The Great Chasm bottoms out here. The foot of the chasm is an enormous cavern, some 600'x 450' in size, one that spreads out beyond the vertical part of the chasm to encompass surrounding caves and worked areas. Two waterfalls, one from 5-2A and the other from 6-6A, combine here to form a large lake, out of which a river flows to areas further underground. Given the presence of the waterfalls, the entire level is noisy and humid; indeed, it is difficult to hear or speak around the lake due to the noise. Phosphorescence from the mushroom groves provides a dim light to illuminate most of the central cavern. Individual features of the cavern, such as the two mushroom groves, the effluent canals, the plateaus, and the seeing chair, are described separately.

The western portions of the great cavern (west of the dotted line on the map) have no ceiling, as the chasm rises above them all the way to Level 2. East of the dotted line on the map, however, the cavern does have a ceiling; it is roughly 50' tall, that is, 50' above the level of the lake.

GM Note: The floor of the chasm can be altered by destroying the dam at SL6-25. In this case, a massive amount of water will flow down the spillway and cause the waterfall from 6-6A to become a raging torrent for several hours. This influx of water will raise the water level by 15' for a period of 7-10 hours. During this time period, the midden (9-87), the muck fields (9-7), the berm (9-9), the sluice gate (9-10), and a swathe of the mushroom fields (in area 9-4, a zone from the lake to area 9-6; in area 9-83, a zone from the lake to 9-76) will be swept clear of anything that is not stone. After the lake resumes its normal level, these areas will be covered with a layer of muck.

Those who can fly or climb long distances can follow the chasm upwards to 8-2, 7-3, 6-108, 5-34, 3-38 and 2-63A. Such persons use the lower zone chart for random encounters while on Level 9, rolling every three turns with a 1 in 6 chance for an encounter:

D100	Encounter
01-10	Party of NPC adventurers (select from NPC appendix)
11-15	Either of the following: 1. 1 basic dragonfly automaton of Kerbog Khan (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 4; MV 240' flying (Class A); HD 1+2; HP 8; #AT 0 Dmg n.a.; MR 25%. Special defenses: immune to cold and fire 2. 1 poison dragonfly automaton of Kerbog Khan (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 4; MV 240' flying (Class A); HD 1+2; HP 8; #AT 1; Dmg poison (death, or 1-3 turns paralyzation with 1-4 round slow on save); MR 25%. Special attacks: poison. Special defenses: immune to cold and fire
16-20	Mixed undead: 1. 2-3 wraiths: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 120', 240' flying (Class B); HD 5+3; HP 36, 32, 28; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: energy drain. Special defenses: silver or magic weapons to hit; immune to sleep, charm, hold, cold, poison, and paralysis 2. 1 spectre: SZ M; AL LE; AC 2; MV 150'; 300' flying (Class B); HD 7+3; HP 52; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8. Special attacks: energy drain. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to sleep, charm, hold, cold, poison, and paralysis
21-25	2 ogre magi (from 9-70): SZ L; AL CE; AC 4; MV 90', 150' flying (Class B); HD 5+2; HP 36, 34; #AT 1; Dmg 1-12 or by weapon. Special attacks: charm person 1/day; sleep 1/day; ray of cold 1/day. Special defenses: fly (12 turns); become invisible; darkness 10' radius; polymorph to human form; regenerate 1 HP/rd; assume gaseous form
26-30	1-4 margoyles: SZ M; AL CE; AC 2; MV 60', 120' flying (Class C); HD 6; HP 44, 42, 39, 37; #AT 4; Dmg 1-6/1-6/2-8/2-8. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit
31-35	1-3 chasme: SZ M; AL CE; AC -1; MV 60', 210' flying (Class D); HD 7+2; HP 52, 49, 47; #AT 3; Dmg 2-8/2-8/1-4; MR 40%. Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: cause darkness 5' radius; cause fear; droning sound (sleep). Special defenses: immune to poison; half damage from cold, electricity, fire, and gas. Special: teleport; detect good; detect invisible; telekinese (1,500 gp weight); gate in another chasme (15%)
36-40	1-2 quasits: SZ S; AL CE; AC 2; MV 150'; HD 3; HP 19, 18; #AT 3; Dmg 1-2/1-2/1-4; MR 25%. Special attacks: DEX drain; fear blast 1/day. Special defenses: regenerate 1 hp/rd; cold iron, or +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to cold, fire, lightning; save vs spells as 7 HD creature. Special: invisibility; polymorph to bat or giant centipede; detect good; detect magic
41-45	1 black pudding: SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 10; HP 50; #AT 1; Dmg 3-24. Special attacks: dissolve wood and metal. Special defenses: divide into parts when struck; immune to cold

46-50	1-2 gloomwings: SZ M; AL N; AC 1; MV 120' flying (Class D); HD 5+1; HP 34; #AT 3; Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-8. Special attacks: pheromone; wings cause confusion; surprise on 1-3 in 6
51-55	A pile of 5 heqeti slimes (see new monsters): 1. 2 off-white, jelly-like heqeti slimes (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 10' creeping; HD 2; HP 11; #AT 1; Dmg special; MR 15%. Special attacks: coagulant for up to 30 gallons liquid (including blood). Special defenses: healed by electricity or lasers; slowed by cold 2. 2 off-white, runny and oily heqeti slimes (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 20' pseudopod; HD 2; HP 8; #AT 1; Dmg special; MR 15%. Special attacks: victim saves or believes is a different race and gender. Special defenses: healed by electricity or lasers; slowed by cold 3. 1 rust-colored, jelly-like heqeti slime (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 15' pseudopod; HD 2; HP 9; #AT 1; Dmg specials; MR 15%. Special attacks: spore-throwing (death in 3-18 days unless save at -1). Special defenses: healed by electricity or lasers; slowed by cold
56-65	A group of chasm chephalopods (see new monsters): 1. 5-8 medium chasm cephalopods (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 5; MV 60' flying (Class A); HD 4; HP 30, 28, 27, 26, 25, 25, 24, 22; #AT 5 (4 tentacles and a beak); Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-4/1-4/1-6; MR 25%. Special attacks: surprise on 1-4 2. 1-2 large chasm cephalopod (see new monsters): SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 60' flying (Class A); HD 6; HP 45, 38; #AT 6 (five tentacles and a beak); Dmg 1-6/1-6/1-6/1-6/1-6/1-8; MR 25%. Special attacks: surprise on 1-4; one tentacle drains spells from casters, adding 2-8 HP to chasm cephalopod per spell
66-70	1 dao, pursued by 2 jannee 1. 1 dao: SZ L; AL NE; AC 3; MV 90', 150' flying (Class B), 60' burrow through earth; HD 8+3; HP 56; #AT 1; Dmg 3-18. Special defenses: assume gaseous form; become invisible; cause misdirection; immune to earth-based/affecting spells; Special: change self 1/day; detect good 1/day; detect magic 1/day; fulfill limited wish; passwall; create spectral force; create wall of stone; rock to mud 3/day; dig 6/day 2. 2 jannee: SZ M; AL N(G); AC 2; MV 120', 300' flying (Class A); HD 6+2; HP 45, 41; #AT 1; Dmg 6-14 (big scimitar); MR 20%. Possessions: large scimitar; chain mail. Special defenses: invisibility 3/day. Special: growth/reduction 2/day; create food and water 1/day (as 7 th -level cleric); etherealness 1 hr/day; dwell in elemental air, water, fire, earth for up to 48 hrs.

71-75	3-5 spined devils: SZ S; AL LE; AC 3; MV 60', 180' flying (Class C); HD 3+3; HP 24, 21, 20; #AT 1 and/or 2; Dmg 1-8 (military fork) and/or 1-4/1-4; MR 25%. Special attacks: flaming spines; command;. Special defenses: half damage from cold and gas; immune to fire. Special: affect normal fires; change self; produce flame; scare; summon a barbed devil 1/day (5%)
76-80	1 smoke mephit: SZ M; AL CE; AC 4; MV 120', 240' flying (Class B); HD 3; HP 19; #AT 2; Dmg 1-2/1-2. Special attacks: breath weapon; flame damage on death. Special: invisibility (1/day); dancing lights (1/day); gate 1-2 mephits (20% chance)
81-85	6-8 yeth hounds (see 9-50): SZ L; AL NE; AC 0; MV 150', 270' flying (Class B); HD 3+3; HP 25, 24, 23 22, 21, 20, 19, 18; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8. Special attacks: fear. Special defenses: silver, or +1 weapons or better to hit (damage taken is 1 per magical plus, or 1 for silver weapons)
86-90	2-3 bestial varumani (see new monsters), climbing the wall creepers: SZ L; AL NE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 55, 53, 49; #AT 3; Dmg 3-6/3-6/3-10. Special defenses: regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision; immune to poison
91-95	Roll on Upper Zone table (see 2-63A)
96-100	Roll on Middle Zone table (see 5-34)

Chasm Color:

The GM might decide to play up the creepy and mysterious nature of the chasm. Roll every 3 turns, with a 1 in 6 chance for a chasm sound effect.

D8	Noise/Effect
1	Loud hissing
2	Moaning (of the wind?)
3	A roar
4	A shriek
5	A loud clap (a sharp, brief noise)
6	An echoing voice (undecipherable)
7	A flash of bright light for 3 second
8	Fluting, of a tuneless sort

9-2: The Dread Risers (up to 7-2)

The 3,666 steps of this staircase commence at the small hillock (9-3) on the chasm floor. From there, they circle a stone ridge through a series of switchbacks before joining the chasm wall; they then climb the chasm wall until they reach area 7-2. The Dread Risers average about 3' in width and climb a total of about 300'. Those using light on the Risers, and especially on the ridge, are likely to alert the quicklings (see 9-14 to 9-15), the huntsmen (9-50) and other denizens of the giant cavern.

A small fragment of the broken end of an ancient heqeti bridge protrudes from the ridge around which the Risers circle. The fragment originally connected to area 9-31; the gap in the broken segments of the bridge is 15' wide, and thus could be jumped.

9-3: Hillock with Statue

A small hillock of stone rises offers a commanding view of the mushroom groves that surround it (9-4). The hillock lies 15' above the floor of the grove, and also serves as the starting point for the Dread Risers (9-2).

A battered, 8'-tall statue of Wadjet, the ancient Archontean deity of protection, stands on the hillock just where it adjoins the chasm wall. Wadjet appears as a young woman clothed in a simple tunic, albeit with the head of a cobra. Despite missing both arms, and possessing numerous gouges along its torso, the statue retains its beautiful polychromed head. An aura of calm and peace is palpable, since, indeed, the protective spirit of Wadjet is still present here. Should anyone beseech Wadjet orally and by name, the entire hillock will immediately be covered with the equivalent of a protection from evil spell; the radius of the protection is the entire hillock, and it lasts for 6 turns. If the statue is beheaded, the protection function disappears forever.

9-4: Southern Mushroom Groves

The southern third of the cavern slopes downward towards the southeast, that is, towards the cesspool at 9-16. Several millennia worth of effluent and debris has accumulated atop the cavern floor south of the lake, forming a rich bed of humus some 40' deep and masking the steepness of the slope. Atop the humus grows a large forest of giant mushrooms, fed and watered by a network of small canals containing brown, sludgy liquid (see 9-5). As a result, the entire area smells a bit foul. As some of the mushroom species (e.g. orange lamps) are phosphorescent, the groves are relatively well lit. Amid the mushrooms are a few special areas of note, including a secluded mushroom market (9-6), a mostly-buried colossal statue (9-12), and a promontory boasting a rudishva seat of contemplation (9-11).

The groves teem with life and sound thanks to the chattering of the numerous species of small insects, harmless bats, and baidara (see new monsters) that call the area home.

A thick net of spider webs cover the southern portion of the cave, roughly between areas 9-29 and 9-16. Aside for about 5' of empty space above the tops of the largest mushrooms, the webs completely fill the space above the groves. In addition, vertical webs some 10' wide crisscross the opening to the southern lobe of the cavern (leading to 9-16). A tribe of giant spiders lives in the webs, as well as in a side cave (9-17). Those blundering about under the webs are likely (75%) to attract the attention of 2-4 giant spiders; these monsters like nothing more than dropping on unsuspecting victims from above, although they may also wait in hopes that the prey snares itself in the vertical webs. Loud and sustained combat draws the rest of the tribe in 3-4 rounds, although if clearly outclassed the spiders will retreat to area 9-17.

The groves are tended by quicklings (see 9-14 and 9-15), who carefully harvest and dry the fungi before trading the dried specimens to the varumani and other sentient beings (see 9-6). A bewildering network of small tunnels (9-15) runs through the humus underlying the grove; dozens of well-disguised holes allow the quicklings to appear almost anywhere within the grove at a moment's notice. For every turn spent in the groves, there is a 25% chance that a quickling strike force emerges from the tunnels to harass the PCs. Unless they encounter easy pickings, the quicklings are only likely to spend 2 rounds attacking the PCs before disappearing down one of the tunnels. For more on their tunnel-fighting methods, see 9-15.

Mushroom Groves: Colossal mushrooms fill the cavern south of the lake (9-65) and the band of muck (9-7). The grove rises 10' to 15' in height, and includes all of the fungal species listed in the new flora appendix: orange lamps, white ribs, blue trumpets, eye-openers, cloud caps, white bulbs, aqua vitae, mind eaters, red veil and slow steppers. The groves are densely packed, since the quicklings who manage them (see 9-14) do not need wide trails. Movement is possible through the forest, but at half the normal rate. When moving on the floor of the grove, direction is hard to maintain; one must roll 6d4+2 under WIS (or possess tracking skills) to maintain the proper direction.

Should the dam on Sub-Level 6 (SL6-25) be destroyed, a portion of the groves in a zone extending from 9-65 to 9-6 will be swept clear of anything that is not stone (including mushrooms). After 7-10 hours, this area will drain, leaving a layer of sticky muck.

The quicklings delight in laying traps among the groves. Their traps come in two forms, tripwires and small holes with punji sticks. Each turn of movement amid the fungi results in a 1 in 8 chance of stumbling upon a trap; the likelihood increases to 1 in 6 if one is following an effluent canal. Once a trap is indicated, there is a 66% chance it is a tripwire, and a 33% chance it is a hole with punji sticks.

Tripwires: The tripwires have tiny bells on them. Activating a tripwire has a 50% chance of drawing a band of 3-6 quicklings to harass and possibly attack the hapless victim(s).

Holes with Punji Sticks: The holes are about 18" in diameter and just as deep, with punji sticks angled downward into the hole. The quicklings cover the holes with loose wood and mulch; they are only activated by a creature or object weighing more than 50 lb. Such a trap inflicts 1-3 HP damage, and halves the victim's movement until that damage is healed. Releasing a foot from a hole takes three rounds of careful activity; more hasty removal inflicts another 1-3 HP damage.

Searching the Fungal Forest: For each turn spent searching the forest, it is possible (1 in 6 chance) that the PCs might come across something interesting:

D20	Fungal Forest Search Result	GM Notes
1-2	A head from an ancient statue: heqeti (65%) or Archontean (35%)	Nothing special
3-4	Relatively recent corpse, still decaying. Roll d8: 1-3: adventurer 4-5: heqeti 6-7: varumani 8: Priscian	The corpse might still have a normal weapon (25%), a mundane object such as rope (25%), a bag of coins worth 1-100 gp (50%), and/or a minor magic item (5%)
5-6	3-6 ancient skeletons. There is a 50% chance the skeletons rise from the muck and attack. Roll d20: 1-6: human (Archontean soldiers) 7-13: heqeti 14-16: varumani 17: kaliyani 18-19: varuda 20: rudishva	Human and varuda skeletons: SZ M; AL N; AC 7; MV 120'; HD 1; HP 8, 7, 6, 5, 5, 4; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special defenses: immune to sleep, charm, hold, and cold; cutting and piercing weapons do half damage.  All other skeletons: MV 120'; AC 6; HD 2; edged weapons do ½ damage
7	An oblong bit of bronze (8"x3") with an image of a leering trollish face engraved on it.	One of the troll thegn's passports (see Arden Vul items)
8-10	A holy symbol. Roll d12: 1-4: Ancient Archontean deity, such as Thoth, Set, Osiris. 5-7: Modern Archontean deity, such as Ardenia Tessaeron, Debellaton, Mitra, or Tychias 8-9: Modern Thorcin deity, such as Croul, Nitheral, Phreena, or Utar 10: Wiskin deity, such as Gna, Loki, Odin or Thor 11: Kauket 12: Rimmaq-Isfet	Each is worth 3-60 sp. For deities, see Gods of Magae section of the World of Archontos appendix
11	A shrunken head of a monkey dangling on a string. The head chatters incessantly in Archontean about the basest of physical needs and/or about its immediate environment.	A shrunken head (see new magical items). If the GM wishes, the head knows how to get to one hidden tomb (e.g., 3-39, 3-66, 3-197, 5-36 or 5-57)
12	A key to 9-58	This key was lost in antiquity
13-14	A plaque depicting a warrior woman holding a dragon egg	This is the Eleventh Labor of Arden (see SL13-10K)

15-16	A fibula (brooch) lost by an Archontean legionary	Either silver (50%) and worth 10 gp, or gold and enamel (50%) and worth 125 gp
17	A broken fragment of grey plasteel	From damaged rudishva equipment
18	A soapstone idol of Kauket, lost by a heqeti hopper	Worth 50 gp
19	Three doses of liquid in glass vials	These are the hunter's friend (see Arden Vul items)
20	A rescript sealed with the sign of Marius Tricotor. If opened it reads: To Horatius Jennius, commander of the Glorious Tenth. In answer to your query, I have brought the Tablet of the Beacon to my command post here at the foot of the chasm. The staff sorcerers believe it can be used to our advantage. Signed, Marius Tricotor, Archon. Note: this item may only be found once; if indicated again, reroll.	A clue as to the location of the Tablet of the Beacon, still hidden in the Archon's quarters at 9-107.

Searching for Mushrooms: Use the following table to determine what species are nearby at any given moment. If PCs are familiar with colossal mushrooms and announce that they are looking for a specific species, it takes them 2-12 turns to locate a specimen of that species.

D20	Mushroom Search Result	GM Notes
1-4	White ribs	15' tall, 4' caps, one specimen feeds a person for 3 days
5-7	White bulbs	11' tall, 2' bulbs, poisonous
8-10	Blue trumpets	14' tall, 2'-diameter blue cup-shaped caps, 75% cap filled with water, one specimen feeds a person for 3 days
11-12	Orange lamps	10' tall, 3'-diameter orange caps, emit phosphorescence; edible but unappetizing, with one specimen feeding a person for 2 days
13-14	Eye openers	9' tall, 5'-diameter brown caps, psychedelic effects
15	Cloud caps	9' tall, with white and blue 2' caps; edible, with one specimen feeding a person for 3 days; each dose cures 1d3 HP
16	Aqua vitae	Heavy white caps with brown stems and yellow ribs; one specimen feeds a person for one day; if cooked, cure d8 HP
17	Mind eaters	Pale yellow with a red dot in center of cap; tasty and nutritious, with two specimens feeding a person for a day; but also cause insanity in those who fail save
18	Red veil	Blood red caps with pale yellow stems; violent madness (see description) if fail save
19	Slow steppers	Corpse white with black flecks; crushing or damaging the caps imposes slow on all in a 10' radius
20	A new variety of GM's creation

Inhabitants:

- 1. A strike force of 4 quicklings: SZ S; AL CE; AC -3; MV 960'; HD 1 ½; HP 11, 10, 9, 7; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-4. Special defenses: save as 19th-level clerics; never surprised; 90% invisible when moving, 100% when motionless; impossible to surprise. Special: ventriloquism, forget, levitate, shatter, dig, and fire charm. There is a 33% chance that any given quickling has coated his/her dagger with spider venom. One of the team has 2-4 skulls filled with acid (2-8 HP, 1 HP splash) attached to his/her belt.
- 2. 2-4 giant spiders (in the southern portion): SZ L; AL CE; AC 4; MV 30', 120' in web; HD 4+4; HP 34, 32, 29, 25; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8. Special attacks: poison.

9-5: Effluent Canals

Generations of inhabitants of Arden Vul have tossed their human and other waste into the chasm, where much of it ends up floating in the lake. The quicklings have capitalized on this pungent but useful resource. They skim waste from the lake, and direct it into a network of small canals that run through the mushroom groves and end up in the cesspit (9-16). The canals are typically about 2.5' wide and just as deep. Most of the time the canals are filled with a sludgy, brown, foul-smelling liquid that flows slowly towards the southeast. The quicklings can alter the viscosity of the canals through use of the sluice gate (for details on its operation, see 9-10). Given the contents of the canals, those stepping into them or otherwise coming into contact with the effluent have a 5% chance of catching a disease. Searching among the effluent is generally fruitless, as the quicklings take pains to keep the canals raked clean. Still there is a 10% chance per turn of locating a gemstone (roll randomly for type) or 1-4 randomly-determined coins.

9-6: Mushroom Market

A small fire burns merrily in the center of this clearing in the midst of the mushroom forest. Around it stand three wooden racks from which hang specimens of dried mushrooms. Two quicklings are always present here, and there is a 33% chance that a true varumani is also present to trade for mushrooms. All of the usual residents of this marketplace are willing to talk first, but if visitors prove threatening a full complement of quicklings will arrive within 2 rounds (see 9-15), and the varumani will join in on the quicklings's side. Visitors are welcome to participate in the trading: the quicklings prefer gemstones, exotic alcohol, or amulets made of precious metals (and/or magic) in trade. The quicklings sometimes have varumani knock-out juice (see Arden Vul items) for sale, although they would never admit this to the varumani. One has to ask specifically.

The following chart indicates the likelihood that a given variety is available for sale, as well as the asking price for a standard six-specimen bundle of any given variety. There will always be at least three bundles available for sale or trade.

Varietal	Chance of Bundle	Asking Price
White ribs	90%	15 gp
White bulbs	50%	25 gp
Blue trumpets	50%	20 gp
Orange lamps	25%	10 gp
Eye openers	20%	35 gp
Cloud caps	15%	40 gp
Aqua vitae	15%	60 gp
Mind eaters	15%	30 gp
Red veil	15%	50 gp
Slow steppers	15%	75 gp
New Variety of GM's creation	5%	N.A.
Varumani knock-out juice (see Arden Vul items)	20% (one dose)	250 gp

Inhabitants

- 2 quicklings: SZ S; AL CE; AC -3; MV 960'; HD 1 ½; HP 10, 9; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-4. Special defenses: save as 19th-level clerics; never surprised; 90% invisible when moving, 100% when motionless; impossible to surprise. Special: ventriloquism, forget, levitate, shatter, dig, and fire charm. There is a 33% chance that any given quickling has coated his/her dagger with spider venom. One has 2-4 skulls filled with acid (2-8 HP, 1 HP splash) attached to his/her belt.
- 1 true varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LN; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 60; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 6-24 (two-handed sword, 2-20+4). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: huge two-handed sword; ring mail.

Treasure:

Bundles of mushrooms (6 doses per bundle).

9-7: Muck Field

A band of thick, viscous muck runs between the lake (9-65) and the southern mushroom groves (9-4). This muck is the product of centuries of effluent being tossed down the chasm and washing up on the shore of the lake. Delimited by the berm (9-9) for most of its length, the entire field is malodorous and quite slippery. It is also potentially dangerous; spending time in it has a 5% cumulative chance per turn of causing a disease. Because the muck is about 3' deep in most places, movement by creatures weighing 50 lb or more is difficult: movement is halved, and combat penalties apply (-1 to initiative and -2 to 'to hit' rolls). A band of hungry bestial varumani hunts in the northeastern portion of the field (see 9-8 for details); they are inured to the disease-effect of the muck field.

Should the dam on Sub-Level 6 (SL6-25) be destroyed, the muck fields will be swept clear of anything that is not stone. After 7-10 hours, this area will drain, leaving a fresh layer of sticky muck.

9-8: Varumani Cave

Six renegade bestial varumani (see new monsters) dwell in the northeastern portion of the muck field, below the escarpment leading up to the plateau (9-49). They have dug a cave into that escarpment, in which they store their small supply of treasure.

The renegades are adept at combat in the muck. They have developed a number of clever combat tactics, including waiting until foes are mired in the muck, running and sliding into battle, and attempting to grapple and then drown foes in the slime.

The bestial varumani are afraid of their true and lesser varumani cousins, however, and cower in their cave whenever such beings are sighted (e.g. the hunters – see 7-14). Members of this band slain as wandering monsters can be replaced in 2-5 weeks; should the band be wiped out, however, the cave remains empty.

Should the dam on Sub-Level 6 (SL6-25) be destroyed, the cave will fill almost completely with water. After 7-10 hours, the cave will drain, leaving a layer of sticky muck but taking with it all the varumani's treasure.

Inhabitants:

- 6 bestial varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL NE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 58, 55, 53, 52, 50, 49; #AT 3; Dmg 3-6/3-6/3-10. Special defenses: regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision; immune to poison.

Treasure:

In a smelly sack the renegades have accumulated: 5,972 cp, 4,119 sp, 1,956 gp; in addition there is an ever-full inkwell and a glass sphere of arcane assistance – dispelling (see new magic items for each).

9-9: Berm and Bridge

A 6'-tall, 4'-wide berm runs in an arc along the northern edge of the mushroom groves before climbing the escarpment to the plateau (9-49). The top of the berm is flat and well-trodden, exhibiting the signs of many feet, both bare and booted. It crosses the inlet of the lake on a shaky bridge of rope and planks affixed by iron rods to the berm. The berm serves to protect the mushrooms from being inundated with too much effluent and water, and serves as a rough barrier to the trolls living at 9-8. It also allows both quicklings and larger creatures to move more swiftly through the muck field.

Resting on the southernmost tip of the berm is a crude wicker cage containing 3 baindara. They are hungry and will bond easily with rescuers.

Should the dam on Sub-Level 6 (SL6-25) be destroyed, the berm will be inundated by the water that is released from the drowned canyon. After 7-10 hours, this area will drain, leaving a layer of sticky muck on a much-weakened berm.

Inhabitants:

- 3 baindara (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 8; MV 150'; 150' gliding; HD 1-1; HP 3, 3, 2; #AT 1; Dmg 1-2.

9-10: Sluice Gate

A small sluice gate rests here, where the inlet to the lake meets the quicklings's main effluent canal. The gate is made a piece of repurposed rudishva plasteel set into grooves in two heavy wooden posts. Although the gate itself is not miniature, the apparatus that controls it is: a small crank some 1' in diameter is used to raise or lower the gate. Closing the gate fully causes the effluent canals (see 9-5) to dry up, leaving stinking effluent to dry in place; the process of drying up takes about 2 hours. Opening the gate fully, however, floods the canals with relatively clean water from the lake. Within 6 turns the canals are flushed fully, and the cesspool (9-16) has grown in size. Adjusting the gate (and thus affecting the canals) is considered a provocation to the quicklings, who treat such interference as a casus belli.

Four crocodiles lie patiently in wait for anyone who interacts with the sluice mechanism.

Should the dam on Sub-Level 6 (SL6-25) be destroyed, the sluice gate will be swept away by the ensuing flood. After 7-10 hours, this area will drain, leaving a layer of sticky muck where the gate once stood. It will take the quicklings 5-7 days to replace the sluice, during which period they will be grumpy and hostile.

Inhabitants

1. 4 crocodiles: SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 60', 120' swimming; HD 3; HP 22, 18, 17, 16; #AT 2; Dmg 2-8/1-12. Special attacks: surprise on 1-3.

9-11: Greater Seat of Contemplation

A rudishva seat of contemplation sits atop this levelled rock promontory that rises 25' above the floor of the mushroom grove. The seat of the chair is 4' tall and is 5' wide and deep. The back of the chair rises another 6' in height. The seat and arms of the chair are worn, as if by use. Incised into the chair are two large (2') symbols or runes, one on the seat and one on the back. The sigil on the seat is the rune for Sight; that on the back is a rune of Communication. The runes are activated by the close proximity of living flesh. Anyone touching or sitting on the seat will thus activate both runes. It is possible to cover one or both of the runes with an appropriate object and then employ the chair normally.

Rune of Sight: The rune allows the viewer perfect vision within the chasm and areas of Level 9 connected to the chasm. That is, one can thoroughly investigate most of the chasm by sitting in this seat. The effect of this vision takes some time to get used to, as it can be nausea-inducing to swoop virtually up and down the chasm; there is a 50% chance that a user will vomit within 3 rounds of activating the rune. The rune is also dangerously attractive to human minds, and users will find it difficult to relinquish the swooping vision it produces. After a turn of use, the user must save vs spells in order to voluntarily leave the seat. If the save is failed, another may be attempted in 6 hours. Someone so ensnared by the seat will feel a great compulsion to return to the seat and use it again. A few of the old rudishva regions of the chasm are cloaked from the sight of the Chair, including the Floating Gardens (6-4 and 7-4), area 6-99, and area 9-88; a user will see these areas as impenetrable clouds of roiling darkness. Note that the chair provides perfect vision, as if the chasm was well lit. The chair does not, of course, reveal secret doors or hidden passageways. Complete scans of the chasm will take many days to accomplish.

Rune of Communication: This rune activates a three-dimensional, full-immersion communication channel to the control niche (9-89) in the rudishva bastion. The image of whoever sits in the chair appears on the control panel, and the sitter is able to speak directly to any operator in the niche. The idea was that a rudishva who had been outside in the 'wilds' could request the opening of the door at 9-88 and the temporary disabling of the point defense arrays there. Of course, there needs to be someone present in 9-89 to actually accomplish this request.

9-12: Buried Colossal Statue

The top half of a buried stone head looms forth from the mushrooms and humus here. The head is flat and amphibian in features, with no ears, huge saucer-shaped eyes, and a slit nose. Only the upper lip of what must be a gaping maw is visible above the loam. If checked, the statue detects as evil.

The head is actually the tip of a colossal, 50'-tall statue that has been mostly buried by the accumulation of humus over the millennia. Carved by the heqeti into an enormous stone pillar (40' in diameter at the base, 10' in diameter at the top), the statue was the model for the Great Pukel (see 9-40) and the other, lesser pukel-manders (see new magic items) scattered throughout Arden Vul.

It would require massive labor or powerful spells to clear away the loam around the statue (an act which would also provoke total war with the quicklings – see 9-14). Should it be accomplished, however, the rest of the statue appears as a giant worm-like thing, albeit with the feet of an elephant and the arms and hands of a human. It is, in fact, a crude depiction of the demon lord Kauket (see new monsters).

Nestled in the statue's arms (and buried 20' down) is the founder's mattock, (see new magic items), a lost heqeti artifact. It could be traded to the heqeti in return for 20,000 gp worth of gems and an assurance of neutrality (as the heqeti will never be true allies of any human). Doing so, however, should be considered an evil act, as possession of the mattock would greatly aid the heqeti.

Destroying the statue, either physically with implements or magically via a spell or device (e.g., the spell stone to earth), weakens any incarnation of Kauket brought to this plane (see 10-37). Casting a hallow spell (see new spells) on the statue serves the same function.

Treasure:

The founder's mattock (see new magic items).

9-13: Mushroom Drying Cave

A network of ropes crisscrosses the ceiling of this two-lobed cave. From the ropes hang scores of colossal mushrooms harvested by the quicklings in the groves (9-4). Five bundles of every species found in the groves are drying here (each bundle contains 6 doses of that variety).

Two quicklings are always present here, buzzing about to ensure their operation is working smoothly. Should combat break out, all inhabitants of 9-14 will arrive within 2 rounds.

The entry to 9-13A is a 3'-diameter hole in the ground of the north lobe of this cave.

Barred Door (north): The door to the north is small (3'x4') and barred on the other side (9-14). A successful bend bars/lift gates roll can force the door from this side.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 quicklings: SZ S; AL CE; AC -3; MV 960'; HD 1 ½; HP 10, 9; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-4. Special defenses: save as 19th-level clerics; never surprised; 90% invisible when moving, 100% when motionless; impossible to surprise. Special: ventriloquism, forget, levitate, shatter, dig, and fire charm. There is a 33% chance that any given quickling has coated his/her dagger with spider venom. One has 2-4 skulls filled with acid (2-8 HP, 1 HP splash) attached to his/her belt.

Treasure:

50 bundles of dried mushrooms (6 doses per bundle).

9-13A: Quickling Ossuary

The tunnel connecting this side cave to 9-13 is quite small, only 3' in diameter.

The cave is wide, but has a low (4' ceiling). Carefully stacked throughout most of the cave are the tiny (2.5"-diameter) bleached skulls of hundreds of quicklings. The quickling tribe (9-14) preserves the skulls of its forebears and honors them with placement here.

The east side of the cave contains a healthy colony of mucus-like snottites, which drip acid into a pool on the floor. The acid is strong, and those brushing against the snottites will take 2-8 HP damage (per round).

The quicklings make use of the acid to give them a fighting chance against the varumani. They coat the insides of their forebears' skulls with special concoction of mud and effluent (derived from 9-7 and 9-16); then they fill the skulls with acid. Thrown against a target, these acid-skull bombs inflict 2-8 HP damage, with a 1 HP splash. The process of making the acid bombs is laborious, so not all quicklings possess them.

9-14: Hall of the Quicklings

Rí Mear, lord of the quicklings, presides over his tribe from this hidden chamber. Only accessible from the network of tunnels that riddle the loam under the mushroom groves, the 8'-tall chamber offers a gruesome prospect to those who make it through the tunnels. A pile of dried mushrooms burns continuously in the center of the hall, shedding dim light on the splashes of blood that coat the walls.

A ledge 2' above the floor runs along the east and west walls of the chamber; it is here that quicklings perch for rest, relaxation, and drinking.

The north wall possesses a single 5'x5' ledge. There sits Rí Mear's throne of skulls, a dreadful thing made of ancient human and heqeti skulls bound together with strips of dried flesh. Concealed in one of the skulls is the key to the secret door. This ledge also holds the quicklings's stock of spider poison, which they use to coat their tiny daggers. Rí Mear doles it out sparingly.

To the south are some low tables crammed with bottles, small kegs, and wine flasks containing a bewildering assortment of liquors, ales, and other spirits. The floor around the liquor tables is littered with old bones, the remains of those unwary individuals who made it through the tunnels only to meet a sad fate in the quicklings's hall.

The Quicklings: This band numbers 30 individuals, of which only ten plus Rí Mear are typically found in this chamber (the rest are out in the tunnels). The band is confident and cocky, as their situation in the tunnels has allowed them to thrive in the shadow of putatively stronger beings. They do value their small-scale but steady trade in mushrooms with the varumani, which provides them with liquors and other luxuries, but they treat all others with casual contempt. They are likely to torment and harass visitors to the mushroom groves in a regular fashion, although that harassment grows to open and total warfare if the groves are harmed in any way.

Rí Mear has established an uneasy alliance with the giant spiders whose webs fill the space above much of the mushroom groves. In return for the quicklings informing the spiders of the arrival of juicy morsels, the giant spiders provide a limited quantity of venom.

Rí Mear ("King Quick"): As the largest (2.5' tall) and strongest of the quicklings, Rí Mear has ruled the band successfully for an amazing 15 years. He is ruthless and pitiless, preferring to direct his followers in guerilla warfare against any perceived threats rather than negotiate. Only if somehow confronted in his own hall by clearly superior forces will he agree to halt harassment, and then only grudgingly (although once given, his word is good).

Secret Door (north): A tiny (3'x3'), stone, secret door leads to a room in which the quicklings store their treasure. It is normal to detect (although all the quicklings know of it), and opens to the proper key (concealed in the throne) or to force.

Barred Door (south): This stone door is 3'x4' in size and is barred with an oaken plank from this side.

Inhabitants:

1. Rí Mear, quickling lord: SZ S; AL CE; AC -3; MV 960'; HD 4 ½; HP 30; #AT 3; Dmg 2-5/2-5/2-5. Special defenses: save as 19th-level clerics; never surprised; 90% invisible when moving, 100% when motionless; impossible to surprise. Special: ventriloquism, forget, levitate, shatter, dig, and fire charm. His dagger is coated with spider venom, and he carries 3 skulls filled with acid (2-8 HP, 1 HP splash).

2. 10 quicklings: AL CE; SZ S, AC -3; MV 960'; HD 3(x2), 1 ½(x8); HP 22, 19, 11, 10, 10, 9(x3), 8, 7; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-4. Special defenses: save as 19th-level clerics; never surprised; 90% invisible when moving, 100% when motionless; impossible to surprise. Special: ventriloquism, forget, levitate, shatter, dig, and fire charm. At least three of the ten have weapons coated in giant-spider venom; there is a 33% chance that each of the other seven have followed suit. Three have 2-4 skulls filled with acid (2-8 HP, 1 HP splash) attached to their belts.

Treasure:

Alcohol: most of the liquor is of modest quality (20 containers worth 5-500 sp each). There are three kegs of Hak's mushroom ale (see 7-94) worth 15 gp each, as well as three bottles of ancient Archontean brandy worth 225 gp each.

Spider venom: Rí Mear possesses 20 doses of giant spider venom.

Treasure chamber: the floor is littered with coins (17,492 sp, 3,451 gp) and precious stones. The stones are collectively worth 12,000 gp, and include 15 moss agates (10 gp each), 22 pieces of obsidian (10 gp each) 13 tiger eyes (10 gp each), 23 citrines (50 gp each), 6 iolites (50 gp each), 17 tourmalines (50 gp each), 7 pieces of jade (100 gp each), 2 aquamarines (500 gp each), 3 violet garnets (500 gp each), an emerald (1,000 gp), and a jacinth (5,000 gp). Scattered amid the coins and gems are the following (see new magic items for all): two glass spheres of arcane assistance (dispelling and martial warding), a pair of gauntlets of fire absorption, a heqeti ring, an icon of Kauket, and a jade cup of life restoration with 2 charges.

9-15: Quickling Tunnels

A bewildering network of small tunnels runs through the 40'-deep loam that forms the bed of the southern mushroom groves. The tunnels are only 3' in diameter, and include vertical shifts in elevation, intersections, slight widenings, dead ends, and plenty of old bones sticking out the loam. The tunnels are present everywhere there are mushrooms, that is, between the berm (9-9) and the cesspool (9-16). Scores of tiny concealed holes (2' diameter) lead from the floor of the groves to the tunnel network; these holes are typically concealed by fallen mushroom ribs, detrital mats woven of discarded giant spider silk, or something similar. The quicklings use their tremendous speed to dash through the tunnels, either to access to a portion of the groves for fungi maintenance or to harass unwanted visitors (and most are unwanted!).

Several strike teams composed of 4-6 quicklings are present in the tunnels at all times, ready to burst forth from the nearest access hole. A strike team typically spends 2-3 rounds tormenting its foes before dashing back into an access hole. They then wait for the victims to move before repeating the procedure.

Should appropriately-sized PCs enter the tunnels, they will find the strike teams equally willing to attack lead characters in turn, hoping to reduce the invaders' strength by attrition (and, hopefully, by the successful use of the spider venom that some of the quicklings employ). Should small-sized PCs overcome these odds, it will still take 6-12 turns of claustrophobic crawling through the tunnels before the entrance to the quicklings's hall (9-14) is discovered.

Inhabitants:

1. Up to 16 quicklings in strike teams of 4-6 individuals: AL CE; SZ S (2'), AC -3; MV 960'; HD 3(x2), 1 ½ (x14); HP 22, 19, 11(x3), 10(x3), 9(x4), 8, 8, 7, 7; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-4. Special defenses: save as 19th-level clerics; never surprised; 90% invisible when moving, 100% when motionless; impossible to surprise. Special: ventriloquism, forget, levitate, shatter, dig, and fire charm. There is a 33% chance that any given quickling has coated his/her dagger with spider venom. One member of each team has 2-4 skulls filled with acid (2-8 HP, 1 HP splash) attached to his/her belt.

9-16: Cesspool

The more liquid parts of the effluent that falls to the bottom of the chasm and is channeled through the quicklings's canals (9-5) collect here in a foetid pool. The odor is palpable from 50' away. Two quicklings, long inured to the stench, flit about the pool, using long bamboo skimmers to rescue anything small and interesting-looking. If bothered, one quickling zooms away to bring help while the other harasses the violators.

Their meager cache of valuables is deposited under a fallen mushroom cap.

Entering the pool provokes a 20% chance of catching a disease, although those doing so may discover a submerged tunnel leading to area 9-24.

GM Note: Vertical spider webs span the mouth of the southern lobe of the cavern leading to the cesspool (see 9-4) and horizontal webs cover the space above the grove and pit. For every turn spent near the pit there is a cumulative 10% chance of attracting the attention of 2-4 giant spiders. The spiders do not bother the quicklings.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 quicklings: SZ S; AL CE; AC -3; MV 960'; HD 1 ½; HP 8, 7; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-4. Special defenses: save as 19th-level clerics; never surprised; 90% invisible when moving, 100% when motionless; impossible to surprise. Special: ventriloquism, forget, levitate, shatter, dig, and fire charm. There is a 33% chance that any given quickling has coated his/her dagger with spider venom. One has 2-4 skulls filled with acid (2-8 HP, 1 HP splash) attached to his/her belt.

2. 2-4 giant spiders (possibly): see stats at 9-17.

Treasure:

13 sp, 7 gp, a silver fibula studded with onyx (35 gp), and a single pearl earring (125 gp).

9-17: Spider Cave

The two entrances to this cave lie 15' above the floor of the mushroom forest. A tribe of eight giant spiders lives here and in the webs in the surrounding areas of the great cavern (see 9-4). The leader of the tribe goes by the name 'Fang' and is a bit larger than her fellows. The cave is filled with webs and the dried up husks of the spiders' prey. In the southern tip of the cave is a partly-concealed opening, only 3' in diameter, to another cave (9-18) that the spiders do not visit.

The spiders prefer to hunt in the chasm, but do not object if prey comes to them. They are aggressive until confronted with overwhelming force, at which point they flee into the webs, the mushroom groves, or their cave-lair.

If members of the tribe are encountered and slain elsewhere (c.f. 9-4 or 9-16), they should be subtracted from the total here.

Inhabitants:

1. Fang, larger leader of the giant spiders: SZ L; AL CE; AC 2 MV 60', 120' in web; HD 6+6; HP 47; #AT 1; Dmg 3-12. Special attacks: poison (save at -2).
2. 7 giant spiders: SZ L; AL CE; AC 4; MV 30', 120' in web; HD 4+4; HP 35, 34, 33, 29, 27, 25, 24; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8. Special attacks: poison.

Treasure:

473 sp, 299 gp, two suits of human-sized chain mail, a medium metal shield +1, and an illusionist's spell book.

Spell Book: Audible glamor, color spray, dancing lights, darkness, gaze reflection, hypnotism, light, phantasmal force; blur, deafness, detect magic, hypnotic pattern, improved phantasmal force, mirror image, misdirection; continual light, dispel illusion, fear, paralysis, spectral force, suggestion; confusion, dispel exhaustion, emotion, massmorph, phantasmal killer; chaos, major creation, maze, shadow door, shadow magic.

9-18: Hidden Cave

Accessible only via a 3'-diameter opening in the southernmost portion of 9-17, this cave is unremarkable save for the corpse of Kesti Jiradell, a dead human illusionist. She was the companion and lover of Erist Ellagelsson, princeling of the elven kingdom of Gallador (see SL6-5). She was overwhelmed by the spiders while looking for way to help Erist escape from his current fate. She managed to crawl into this cave before dying from the spider venom. By her corpse are two battered backpacks and other gear.

Treasure:

3 Arden Vul cakes (see Arden Vul items), 2 fully-charged rudishva lesser power supplies (see new technological items), a pair of boots of insulation, three darts of sleeping, a lover's token (keyed to Erist Ellagelsson – see SL6-5), a potion of dispelling (see new magic items for the last four), and a rod of absorption (with 33 spell levels in it).

9-19: Warning Cave

The cave is damp, with dripping water, numerous stalactites and stalagmites, and a healthy growth of furry green lichen. Two 'scarecrows' stand in the center of the cave, facing the exit into the chasm. One is a human adventurer, stripped of all gear save a loincloth, and tied to a triangular frame of wood. The other is a goblin, tied to a similar but smaller frame. Around the neck of each is hung a wooden shingle with the phrase "No Entry!" in Varumani. The human is dead, but only recently so, as the chasm insects are still feasting on his body. The goblin is still alive, but only barely so. His name is Baradim, and he is neither powerful nor significant. Still, King Weskenim (SL4-22) will be grateful for his return to the Goblin Warrens (to the tune of offering a reward of 500 sp); alternately, Baradim might volunteer his services as a guide and general dogsbody to his new friends.

The varumani miners placed the poor individuals here in the hopes they would deter the curious or hungry from moving into the silver mine area (9-21 to 9-28).

GM Note: The opening to the chasm lies 5' above the layer of humus on which the mushrooms grow.

Inhabitants:

1. Baradim the goblin: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 5; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6..

9-20: Empty Cave

This cave contains nothing of interest save the desiccated husk of a giant spider.

9-21: Varumani Guard Post

An 8'-tall masonry wall bisects this 20'-tall cave; it runs from the north to south side. Six true varumani warriors (see new monsters) stand on a firing ledge on the east side of the wall. Armed with heavy crossbows, spears, and battle axes, they are tasked with preventing unwanted visitors from entering the silver mine area (areas 9-22 to 9-28). Although bored, the varumani refuse to negotiate with anyone; indeed, they are eager to fight. They have a keg of Hak's ale (7-94), a rickety wooden ladder, two sides of smoked goat meat, as well as a low table with a set of seventeen dice of mixed origin; among the dice is a silver set of Banion's dice (see new magic items). Should combat break out, the inhabitants of area 9-22 will arrive in 3-6 rounds to aid them; the miners in area 9-21 also have a 33% chance of hearing the sounds of combat and arriving within 6-8 rounds.

Inhabitants:

1. 6 true varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LN; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 62, 60, 59, 56, 53, 50; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 6-24 (two-handed axe, 2-20+4). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: two-handed axes; heavy crossbows; ring mail.

Treasure:

A keg of ale (50 gp), and a silver set of Banion's dice (see new magic items).

9-22: Mine Boss

This cave is brightly lit by four torches and serves as the headquarters of the varumani silver mining operation. Within are six hammocks, a rack containing picks, shovels, and wooden buckets, four kegs of Hak's ale (see 7-94), a dozen sides of smoked goat meat, and an unused rudishva greater power supply (see new technological items). Against the flattish south wall is a man-sized straw dummy, which the varumani use for target practice. Typically the true varumani overseer of the mining operation, Prayaska, hangs about here with her advisor, Lithiric the Talker, killing time and planning how to enrich herself. There is a 33% chance that two miners are also present, resting in their hammocks.

GM Notes: Prayaska is a proud and extremely venal member of clan Rudigaya. She is so proud, in fact, that she eschews actual mining, preferring to boss her fellows about. Her venality is well known to Varboka the thegn (7-30), but Varboka believed that her greed could be turned to the benefit of the People by ensuring maximum output from the silver mine. The thegn did not count on the evil influence of Lithiric, however. Lithiric insinuated himself into Prayaska's favor and has been slowly playing up the latter's greed; it was Lithiric who suggested that Prayaska begin holding back some portion of the smelted silver as her own 'due'. Lithiric is, in fact, an agent of High Priestess Stephanica of the cult of Set (4-51), sent to the thegn's court to sow dissension; by playing on Prayaska's greed, he hopes to be able to divert an increasing quantity of the mined silver to his mistress on Level 4. Lithiric has also been charmed by Cinna Minux (7-122), and is unaware that the vampire is fully aware of the existence of the mine as well as Lithiric's political machinations. Despite his treacherous plans, Lithiric fights bravely alongside his varumani 'friends' so as to preserve Set's influence in this area.

Inhabitants:

1. Prayaska, female true varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LN; AC 1; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 60; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 6-24 (club, 2-20+4). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: a huge, polished rosewood war club; six javelins; a torc of protection (see new magic items) worn as an arm band; and pouch of capacity (see new magic items). The pouch contains 25 lb of pure silver, skimmed from the smelting operation in 9-26.
2. Lithiric the Talker, 7th-level male Thorcin magic user: SZ M; AL CE; AC 7; MV 120'; HD 7; HP 21; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger). Abilities: STR 9, INT 16, WIS 15, DEX 15, CON 9, CHA 10. Possessions: a bandolier of daggers; a ring of protection +2; a scroll case of potency (see new magic items) in which he has placed one of his three scrolls of fireball; a bag of holding (70 cubic feet variety) containing 500 sp and 155 lb of pure silver; and a wand of lightning (11 charges). Memorized spells: burning hands, charm person, friends, shield, continual light, invisibility, mirror image; dispel magic, suggestion; wall of fire.
3. 2 bestial varumani (see new monsters) (33%): SZ L; AL NE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 53, 49; #AT 3; Dmg 3-6/3-6/3-10. Special defenses: regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision; immune to poison.

Treasure:

Three kegs of Hak's ale (50 gp each); personal treasure on the two bosses; Lithiric's spell book.

Lithiric's Spell Book: Burning hands, charm person, comprehend languages, detect magic, friends, identify, jump, light, magic missile, read magic, shield, sleep; audible glamer, continual light, detect invisibility, invisibility, mirror image; dispel magic, fireball, phantasmal force, protection from normal missiles, slow, suggestion; charm monster, fire shield, fumble, remove curse, wall of fire, wizard eye, distance distortion.

9-23: Silver Mine, Main Seam

A rich seam of pure silver runs through the rock in this area. The sound of picks and mauls echoes throughout, as the varumani have seized the area and are mining it. The main seam averages 20' in width and 15'-25' in height; torches set into sconces every 25' provide light. Numerous side tunnels (e.g. 9-28) have been dug off the main seam. Wooden scaffolding is erected here and there throughout the seam, on top of which 6-8 lesser and bestial varumani miners are always hard at work with pickaxes, mauls, shovels, and wooden buckets.

While the main seam still produces ore (about 18 lb of raw ore and 3 lb of silver per day), it is clear that the easy days of mining in the wide main seam are nearing their end. Already the section of the seam nearest area 9-26 is played out, and the miners are piling up their tailings along the west wall there. Within three months the eastern arm of the main seam will also be played out, and the miners will need to start the more difficult work of delving new seams, in the direction of area 9-28 for instance.

Unless visitors are obviously hostile, the miners ignore all those who appear to have legitimate business in the area. If a fight breaks out at area 9-21, there is only a 33% chance that the miners hear it and move to investigate.

Inhabitants:

1. 4 lesser varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 59, 58, 53, 49; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (club, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: club.
2. 2 or 4 bestial varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL NE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 53, 50, 49, 48; #AT 3; Dmg 3-6/3-6/3-10. Special defenses: regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision; immune to poison.

Treasure:

The miners have collected 36 lb of un-smelted raw ore.

9-24: Smelly Cave

A foul smell emerges from the pool located in the center of this cave. The water in the pool is strangely colored (brownish) and contains little bits of biological material. This fact is explained by the existence of a subterranean tunnel that connects the pool to the effluent pit (9-16). Entering the submerged tunnel provokes a chance for catching disease (20% chance). A tarnished silver statuette depicting Rimmaq-Isfet (see new monsters) may be found inside the tunnel.

Treasure:

Silver statuette of Rimmaq-Isfet (250 gp).

9-25: Cave with Hole

The silver in this extension from the main seam has played out. A 5'-diameter hole drops down 15' to a tunnel leading to area 9-19. The varumani are aware of the hole, but don't consider it a threat.

9-26: Smelting Operation

This cave is where the varumani smelt their silver ore into pure silver. The smelting is accomplished via an ancient rudishva relic: a CRUD-Ore 7500 ore processing machine (see new technological items). This piece of technology is powered by a greater rudishva power supply (see new technological items), and can distil 1 lb of pure metal from 6 lb of ore in about a turn. The power supply is good for another month of operation before becoming fully drained. Originally several other dials existed which allowed an operator to fine-tune the production and consistency of the metallic output; at the moment, the output consists of rock slag and a soft, amorphous mass of raw silver. Once smelted, the miners lug the silver up the tunnels to be smithed in the forge (7-68).

Geldaka, a mute lesser varumani, works the smelter under the direction of Prayaska (9-22).

GM Note: Prayaska and Lithiric have been skimming smelted silver from the operation. Geldaka is aware of their thievery, but has chosen to do nothing about it, mainly because he is unable to speak.

Inhabitants:

1. Geldaka, mute lesser varumani smelter (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 58; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (club, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: club.

Treasure:

At any given time there is a 50% chance for 50 lb of smelted silver to be present here; otherwise the stocks are empty.

9-27: Tunnel up to 7-52

This tunnel is narrow and cramped. Its size is a sore point for the varumani miners, who must crouch and scramble to return to the thegn's court (Level 7). The tunnel wends its way upwards before debouching at area 7-52.

9-28: Narrow Silver Vein

This narrow tunnel follows the most promising silver vein branching off the main seam. At its northern end the tunnel is 7' tall and 4' wide, but it tapers to 4' tall and 3' wide at its southern end. The silver seam is quite rich here, and the varumani will develop it as the new source of their silver mining operations. At the moment, Prayaska is using this location to store the proceeds of her graft.

Treasure:

Prayaska has stored 150 lb of smelted silver under a rock-colored tarp at the end of this tunnel. Unless PCs physically search the end of the tunnel, the tarp must be detected as a secret door.

9-29: Rudishva Doors and Hallway

The door to the chasm floor (9-1) is a rudishva iris door, and can only be opened if a silver or yellow rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items) is held against a yellow rectangle inset into the doors. The door is also buried under 20' of accumulated humus from the mushroom groves.

The rudishva iris door leading to the Great Pillar (9-30) is of an unusual sort; it is not opened in the usual manner, by presenting a colored rudishva identity plaque. Instead, it requires a special key to unlock. The lock is extremely complex (-40% to pick). The troll thegn (7-30) and the Arena Lord (6-85) each possess a key. The keys are 1'-long, 3"-diameter, grey plasteel rods with a notched, 1"-tall flange on each end. The door is also enchanted with the equivalent of a wizard lock cast at 12th level.

Lying in the hallway are two desiccated corpses of varuda, still dressed in their orange jumpsuits. Bronze and pale-green rudishva identity plaques may be found on the corpses.

9-30: Great Pillar

From this location, the rudishva great pillar may be used to ascend to Levels 5, 6, and 7 (areas 5-138, 6-103 and 7-37). The walls of the shaft, as well as the 30'-diameter pillar itself, are formed of perfectly smooth black granite. The walls of the shaft were treated by kaliyani techno-sorcerers with a unique form of anti-magic resistance, largely to protect unwanted burrowing into this important site. Although magic will work within the shaft, magical breaches of the shaft walls are almost impossible.

Inset into the floor of the shaft are four 6'-diameter circular fans made of plasteel. These marvels are still working several thousand years after their installation, and serve to pump fresh air from a hidden cave system into the pillar shaft. The cave system is unmapped, and provides an opportunity for expansion should the GM wish it.

A set of hand- and footholds are cut into the Pillar; this precarious 'ladder' ascends the Pillar in a clockwise spiral. It is thus possible, although highly impractical, to climb the Pillar by hand and foot. Several rolls of 5d6 under STR and/or DEX are necessary for anyone so foolhardy as to climb all the way to the top of the Pillar (5-138).

For a general overview of the pillar, see area 5-138.

9-31: Broken Heqeti Connector

A heqeti causeway once linked area 9-40 to the ridge at 9-2. In antiquity that span was broken in two places, one near area 9-2 and the other closer to 9-38. Although the connector is in places a corridor, carved out of solid rock, in other places it became a thin bridge of stone that extended above open spaces below. The northern tip of the causeway is one such bridge, as it extends from the cavern wall 40' above the floor; sadly, the last bit of the bridge that linked it to area 9-2 has collapsed, leaving a 15'-wide gap between the ridge and the connector. The other bridge segment comes to the south, where the connector crosses area 9-33; here the bridge is intact and floats 50' above the floor of the cave below. In addition to the main causeway, a side bridge once extended to the stairs at 9-36; the central portions of that bridge collapsed eons ago. As with all heqeti construction, the bridge is slightly rough or pebbled on its surfaces, and still retains a faint oily sheen.

Originally the connector boasted a pair of 4'-diameter free-standing columns every 10' (much like area 5-6), but most of them were toppled long ago. The extant portions of the connector are littered with broken bits of column, fallen stalactites, and ancient heqeti, varumani, and varuda skeletons.

The Priscians have established a concealed encampment on the causeway, in the section of roofed corridor between the open areas at 9-2 and 9-33. This base camp is intended to guard their newly-discovered route to Level 7 (i.e., the route from 9-41 to 7-64). As is their wont everywhere, these Priscians prefer to remain hidden if possible, only taking action if visitors discover their camp or the tunnel at 9-41.

The camp is concealed by an hallucinatory terrain spell cast by Cenwulf, the leader of the Priscians. Visitors will see an empty corridor littered with broken bits of column, fallen stalactites, and a broken orange lamp mushroom that gives off some low phosphorescence. In reality, the camp is 20' in diameter and includes a camp fire, 10 bedrolls, a small keg of water, and 4 chests with supplies. The conversi thieves are also invisible, even when relaxing. The one thing that Cenwulf cannot (or will not) conceal fully is noise; those listening carefully may well detect sounds of breathing, slight movements, or shifting gear.

If discovered, the Priscians first attempt to render any visitors helpless via backstabs and disabling magic. If the PCs offer negotiation or surrender, though, the Priscians are willing to listen, provided the PCs swear to depart from this section of Level 9. They might even offer a bribe of up to 200 gp/head to induce the PCs to depart. Should the PCs agree, the Priscians will appear pleased; but will soon shift their camp to area 9-38 and double the guard, since they fully expect the PCs to return with a vengeance.

Inhabitants:

1. Cenwulf the Unseen, Priscian war mage (see new monsters) and member of Septimus, as an 8th-level male Thorcin illusionist: SZ M; AL LE; AC 3; MV 120'; HD 8; HP 24; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (Sortian baculus). Abilities: STR 10, INT 17, WIS 15, DEX 16, CON 11, CHA 11. Possessions: a key to 9-58; bracers of defense (AC 5); robe of blending; brooch of shielding (43 HP left); wand of negation (37 charges); Sortian baculus infused with blink (9 charges) (see new magic items), and a Priscian ring infused with dispel magic and invisibility (17 charges) (see new magic items). He holds the key to all four chests. Memorized spells: color spray, darkness, phantasmal force, wall of fog; blur, brain full of small spiders (see new spells), invisibility; Frigg's caustic kisses (see new spells), hallucinatory terrain; brain full of large spiders (see new spells). Spell book: audible glamer, the Bracteros Effect (see new spells), color spray, dancing lights, darkness, detect illusion, detect invisibility, light, phantasmal force, wall of fog; blur, brain full of small spiders (see new spells), detect magic, hypnotic pattern, improved phantasmal force, invisibility, mirror image, misdirection; continual darkness, dispel illusion, Frigg's caustic kisses (see new spells), hallucinatory terrain, invisibility 10' radius, paralyzation, spectral force, suggestion; brain full of large spiders (see new spells), confusion, minor creation, phantasmal killer.

2. Pretius Octavus, Priscian war mage (see new monsters) and member of Quintus, as a 7th-level male Archontean magic user: SZ M; AL LN; AC 2; MV 120'; HD 7; HP 21; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (Sortian baculus). Abilities: STR 9, INT 18, WIS 12, DEX 16, CON 10, CHA 13. Possessions: Priscian chain mail +1 (see new magic items); Sortian baculus infused with infravision (see new magic items); Priscian ring infused with detect invisibility and shield (see new magic items); dust of disappearance; scroll of protection from evil; wand of magic missiles (63 charges). Memorized spells: charm person, magic missile, sleep, spider climb; ESP, forget, Pol's endless sneezes (see new spells); fireball, fly; polymorph other. Spell book: burning hands, charm person, comprehend languages, detect magic, erase, hold portal, identify, jump, magic missile, read magic, shocking grasp, sleep, spider climb, floating disk; continual light, detect evil, ESP, forget, knock, levitate, locate object, Pol's endless sneezes (see new spells), ray of enfeeblement, stinking cloud, strength, web; clairvoyance, dispel magic, fireball, fly, haste, invisibility 10' radius, lightning bolt, protection from normal missiles, slow; dimension door, hallucinatory terrain, polymorph other, wall of ice.

3. Aethelflaed Flatnose, Priscian war mage (see new monsters) and member of Tertius, as a 5th-level female Thorcin illusionist: SZ M; AL LE; AC 3; MV 120'; HD 5; HP 16; #AT 1; Dmg 3-9 (Priscian gladius +2). Abilities: STR 11, INT 17, WIS 14, DEX 16, CON 12, CHA 8. Possessions: Priscian chainmail (see new magic items); Priscian gladius +2 (see new magic items); Priscian ring infused with detect invisibility, necklace of missiles, potion of polymorph self (see new magic items). Memorized spells: darkness, detect invisibility, hypnotism, phantasmal force; blindness, mirror image; suggestion. Spell book: audible glamer, change self, darkness, detect invisibility, hypnotism, phantasmal force; blindness, deafness, detect magic, fog cloud, improved phantasmal force, mirror image; fear, hallucinatory terrain, paralyzation, suggestion.
4. Demetrios Sinister, Priscian war mage and member of Tertius, as a 4th-level male Archontean magic user: SZ M; AL LN; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 4; HP 12; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (Sortian baculus). Abilities: STR 10, INT 16, WIS 13, DEX 18, CON 9, CHA 7. Possessions: Sortian baculus infused with detect magic; ring of protection +1; scroll of magic missile. Memorized spells: charm person, magic missile, sleep; Frigg's jelly legs (see new spells), scare. Spell book: charm person, dancing lights, detect magic, light, magic missile, magic aura, read magic, shield, sleep; darkness 15' radius, detect invisibility, fools gold, Frigg's jelly legs (see new spells), knock, magic mouth, rope trick, scare, wizard lock; blink.
5. Thorgrim the Stout, Priscian war mage (see new monsters) and member of Secundus, as a 3rd-level male Wisikin magic user: SZ M; AL LE; AC 10; MV 120'; HD 3; HP 13; #AT 1; Dmg 3-5 (darts +2). Abilities: STR 12, INT 16, WIS 9, DEX 10, CON 16, CHA 13. Possessions: 6 darts +2; Priscian ring infused with shield (see new magic items); scroll of magic missile. Memorized spells: jump, sleep; pummeling fists of Arak-Zhorr (see new spells). Spell book: detect magic, feather fall, hold portal, jump, magic missile, read magic, sleep; continual light, pummeling fists of Arak-Zhorr (see new spells), scare, strength.
6. Sarabel Jewel-Eye, Priscian conversus (see new monsters) and bonded defender to Cenwulf, as an 8th-level female Archontean thief: SZ M; AL NE; AC 0; MV 240'; HD 8; HP 38; #AT 1; Dmg 3-9 (Priscian gladius +2). Abilities: STR 11, INT 14, WIS 14, DEX 18, CON 10, CHA 17. Thief skills: PP 85%, OL 82%, FRT 60%, MS 72%, HS 59%, HN 25%, CW 96%, RL

40%. Possessions: gauntlets of dexterity; leather armor +2; Priscian gladius +2 (see new magic items); boots of speed; bag of beans; 2 potions of invisibility; potion of extra healing. Sarabel is under an invisibility spell until she engages combat.

7. Crinux the Wrinkled, Priscian conversus (see new monsters), as a 6th-level male Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL LE; AC 2; MV 120'; HD 6; HP 57; #AT 1; Dmg 6-13 (battle axe +2), 7-12 (javelins of piercing). Abilities: STR 18/64, INT 9, WIS 11, DEX 10, CON 15, CHA 7. Possessions: banded mail +1 and shield; battle axe +2; 4 javelins of piercing; potion of extra healing.
8. 2 Priscian conversi (see new monsters), as 5th-level male Thorcin thieves: SZ M; AL LE; AC 6; MV 120'; HD 5; HP 25, 22; #AT 1; Dmg 3-9 (Priscian gladius +2). Thief skills: PP 50%, OL 47%, F/RT 40%, MS 40%, HS 31%, HN 20%, CW 90%, RL 25%. Special: they have DEX 16. Possessions: leather armor; Priscian gladius +2. One has a potion of molasses while the other has a potion of greek fire (see new magic items for both). The pair are currently operating under invisibility spells.
9. 2 Priscian conversi (see new monsters), as 3rd-level female Thorcin fighters: SZ M; AL NE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 3; HP 30, 28; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (spear) or 2-9 (long sword). Special: they have STR 17 and CON 16. Possessions: chainmail and shield; spear; long sword.

Treasure:

In addition to the personal items on the Priscians, the chests contain some valuables:

Chest #1: this chest contains the spell books of the mages, plus 3 scrolls of detect magic, and 2 scrolls of knock.

Chest #2: a pile of silver and copper coins to be used as bribes. 1,319 sp, 456 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items), and 8,901 cp.

Chest #3: enough dried meat, dried vegetables and dried fruit for a dozen people for a week. In addition, 10 Arden Vul cakes (see Arden Vul items), and a 3-lb bag of nuts.

Chest #4: 2 lb of silver dust (5 gp); a pair of solid gold finials shaped like storks (330 gp each); an elaborate carved ivory box with scenes from Archontean military history (450 gp); 6 vials of sweet-smelling incense, a solid lead andiron shaped like a terrier (45 gp), a set of eight carved silver weights used in draftsmanship to hold parchment in place (35 gp each), and 3 10-lb bars of platinum (2,500 gp each).

9-32: Bone Slope

This corner of the great cavern slopes downward precipitously, losing 10' in elevation before merging with area 9-33. The slope is littered with bones from all manner of creature: human (ancient Archontean), heqeti, varumani, varuda, small animals, and even a few kaliyani. Although the presence of these bones may suggest the nearby lair of a fearsome predator, their presence here is actually due to the quicklings, who toss any bones that they discover while digging their tunnels (9-15) onto this slope. The bones do make traversing the slope rather difficult; characters other than thieves must roll 3d6 under DEX or slide down the slope, taking 1-2 HP damage in the process. Those employing light or making noise (such as that caused by sliding down the slope) automatically alert the Priscians at area 9-31.

9-33: Deep Cave beneath the Causeway

The floor of this cave lies 50' beneath the ancient heqeti causeway (9-31). It is littered with piles of broken stone, some of which still contain recognizable shapes – like shattered column drums, bits of broken pediment, and the headless, limbless torsos of three heqeti statues. Amid the debris are numerous skeletons, most of which are ancient and appear to be heqeti or human in origin. To the west end of the cave are two corpses of more modern vintage, still wearing some equipment: these corpses are riddled with strange bone arrows (heqeti arrows) and appear to have been scorched rather badly.

Searching among the debris may turn up some item of interest. For every turn spent searching, roll on the following chart. Up to six items may be found. Creating noise in the western portion of the cave (by, say, searching) brings Tashiblis from 9-34 and awakens the undead heqeti at 9-36 (see new monsters for both).

The tunnel to 9-37 is located 10' above the floor of the eastern edge of the cavern.

D100	Result	Notes
01-25	Nothing
26-30	A pair of Archontean greaves, inscribed "Junius"	Worth 15 gp as a curio
31-35	An amethyst brooch with an intaglio of an Archontean noble woman	340 gp
36-46	A bone arrow with black fletching	5 sp. A heqeti arrow
47-50	The head to one of the heqeti statues. Roll d6: 1-2: weaver 3-4: hopper 5-6: builder	The head could be sold to a statuary dealer for 100-600 gp
50-53	A hand of glory made from a heqeti paw	See new magic items
54-70	Some scattered ancient coins. Roll d6 1-2: 2-12 ancient silver pennies 3-4: 3-24 ancient copper bits 5-6: 2-8 ancient gold solidi 7-8: 1-3 ancient octagonal platinum coins	See Arden Vul items for all
71-73	A shattered Archontean blackware vase showing a human greeting a dragon, with the inscription (in Mithric) "Ennius Signs the Compact"	An important clue concerning ancient Archontean history, as few modern Archontean remember the identity of the ancient allies with whom Ennius signed his famous compact (see World of Archontos appendix). Worth 850 gp.

74-78	A metal rod	One of the control rods for the egg-shaped vessels in 4-85
79-83	A leather pouch with 3 Arden Vul cakes	See Arden Vul items
84-88	A silk pouch with three doses of red veil mushrooms	See new flora
89-91	A gold sunburst symbol mounted on a 2"-long gold rod; the center of the sunburst contains the Archontean numeral I	Intended to be inserted into an archon's command helmet in the ancient Archontean legions. From the legendary "Originals", the now-defunct I scutarii legion. Worth 575 gp
91-92	A 3"-tall hand with a third eye and touching thumb and forefinger	A rudishva useful palm (palm of cancellation – see new magic items)
93-94	A flute made of a thigh bone	An insidious bone flute (see new magic items)
95-96	A copper ziggurat with four steps, 4" tall	The bottom has an inscription in Mithric "home of Kauket. Beware". A representation of area 10-32. Worth 275 gp.
97-98	A heqeti jagged club	Worth 25 gp
99-100	A copper heqeti ritual bowl, incised with images of hoppers spearing humans	Worth 150 gp

Treasure:

On the bodies of two adventurers: a lovely yellow silk wizard's robe embroidered with coiled dragons; a suit of battered but usable banded mail; a two-handed sword; a backpack with a coil of rope, a lantern, four flasks of oil, a sack with 352 sp and 125 gp, a potion of superheroism; a coiled rope ladder (40' long); and a wooden scroll case with a scroll containing harnessing the chaos and Pol's recall (see new spells for both).

9-34: Cave of Tashiblis

This 'cave' is separated from area 9-33 by a narrow, 8'-wide opening between two huge piles of rubble. If examined, the rubble is easily shown to be the remains of the stone bridge that once connected 9-36 and 9-31. It is clear both that the rubble has been consciously piled up so as to close off 9-34 and that the extant entrance to 9-34 was formed by something pushing into 9-33 from within 9-34. That 'something' is a dreadful animated construct known to the heqeti as Tashiblis (see new monsters). Noise or light in the western areas of 9-33 brings Tashiblis stumping to the attack (and wakens the undead heqeti at 9-36).

Background: Tashiblis is a rudishva animated construct (stone nataraja) (see new monsters) that was abandoned during the rudishva collapse and 'repurposed' by the clever heqeti builder, Hossqip. Hossqip was a hero of the rudishva wars, and accomplished many impressive magical feats, including taking control of the animated construct and infusing it with some impressive offensive and defensive features. It guarded area 9-36 until the Archontean wars, when the stone bridge was destroyed and the Archontean magi barricaded it into area 9-34. Eventually it dug its way out of the rubble and now continues in its guard duties even in the absence of its heqeti masters.

Inhabitants:

1. Tashiblis (see new monsters): SZ L; AL N; AC 1; MV 120'; HD 8+8; HP 62; #AT 1; Dmg 4-11; MR 35%. Special attacks: sonic stun; small fireballs (4-24 damage); rainbow bolts (drain spells from target), breath weapon - fire (5-30 damage). Special defenses: +2 weapons or better weapons to hit.

9-35: Tunnel Up to 5-52B

This tunnel climbs a very long way through the rock (some 1,100') before ending up on Level 5, at area 5-52B. Although mostly natural, the tunnel does contain sections of worked corridors and stair segments, all of which have the familiar pebbled and slightly oily texture of heqeti construction.

Note: If the keqemander demon (see new monsters) has been summoned at area 5-52 and has not been defeated, there is a chance it may be present here or in one of the surrounding caves. See area 5-52 for details.

9-36: Heqeti Bridge Fragment and Stairs

Looming 50' above the floor of area 9-34, this bridge fragment used to extend east to area 9-31. A set of stairs commences on the bridge and leads west. Originally this staircase climbed all the way to area 5-52, but it was destroyed in antiquity, leaving only the current 60' fragment. The construction of the bridge and stairs is heqeti (pebbled and oily), and the stairs' tread-to-rise ratio is uncomfortable for humans.

Seven undead heqeti salamander warriors (see new monsters) lie in wait atop the bridge fragment. They are armed with short bows and poisoned arrows, and will employ their ranged weapons until out of ammunition, at which point they leap down to confront intruders. Very loud noise in area 9-33 might rouse them to action (33%), but they are certain to react if Tashiblis (9-34) enters melee.

Inhabitants:

1. 7 heqeti hopping dead (see new monsters): SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 3; HP 22, 21, 20, 19, 17, 16, 15; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8. Special attacks: leap; cursed tongue. Special defenses: turned as ghastrs; half damage from piercing and edged weapons; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and cold-based spells. They are armed with short bows and 15 poisoned arrows each. The poison is known to the heqeti as Kauket's Vision, and is of a psychotropic sort that causes severe hallucinations to those who fail a save (see Arden Vul items).

9-37: Cave below the Heqeti Causeway

The floor of this large cave is 40' below the edge of the heqeti causeway (9-38 and 9-40). The eastern edge of the cave has suffered numerous collapses and cave-ins; loose rubble and scree runs along that wall. The floor of the cave is uneven, dotted with piles of rubble including both worked and natural stone.

Given the geological instability here, any destructive magic (like fireball) cast in the area of 9-37 to 9-40 have a 75% chance of causing a pile of rocks to fall from the ceiling. The rockfall strikes an area that covers 3-6 10'x10' squares. Those within the affected zone take 6-36 HP damage; thieves who save vs breath weapons take no damage, but others still take half damage.

Dwarves or rangers will notice signs of recent passage through the rubble fields, leading towards 9-41.

9-38: Rubble-Strewn Heqeti Causeway

This section of the long heqeti causeway that once linked 9-2 to 9-40 overlooks the cavern below (9-37). The way north is blocked by an impassable cave-in; the same appears to be the case to the south, although careful inspection reveals several narrow passages that lead through the debris to area 9-40.

The west wall (running all the way to 9-40) boasts low relief carvings of heqeti, salamanders, frogs, and amphibian-like entities writhing in an interlocking, chaotic mass of limbs, tongues, and stabbing weapons. The scene is disturbing to look at, especially as the eyes of all the carvings are all hollow depressions about the size of a fist. Some ancient Mithric graffiti mars the carvings towards the north end; this graffiti is vulgar and coarse, with frequent mention of the hoppers and where they ought to hop.

At the moment this area is unoccupied. Should the Priscians at 9-31 be discovered, however, they will move their encampment to this area.

Secret Door (west): This door is difficult to locate (1 in 8 chance). It is unusually sized, taking the form of a writhing salamander, and can only be opened from this side by placing two tears of Kauket (see new magic items) in the eyeholes of that salamander. If this is done, the salamander-shaped door (about 3' high and 7' long) opens inward.

9-39: Secret Staircase Leading Up to 6-112A

The very long staircase behind the secret door leads up to area 6-112A. It was one of the main routes used by the heqeti in their secret – and successful – strike against the rudishva. The steps are worn, pebbled and oily. The staircase is filled with cobwebs, insect husks, and random bits of leather and metal for most of its length.

Secret Door (to 9-38): The door is easy to locate (1 in 4 chance). From this side it can only be opened by locating and depressing a small knob.

9-40: The Great Pukel

A giant pukel-mander crouches here, at the southern end of the ancient heqeti causeway in a niche that is 30' tall. Piles of rubble block views of the pukel from 9-37 or 9-38. The eastern edge of the pediment overlooking 9-37 has collapsed into the cave below; even non-thieves have a 33% chance of successfully scrambling up the scree.

The Great Pukel: Like its many lesser siblings scattered throughout Arden Vul, the Great Pukel appears as a massive, crouching salamander carved out of oily soapstone. Unlike the pukel-manders (see new magic items), however, the Great Pukel is 20' tall and 15' wide. The eyes are gaping holes, 5' in diameter, while the toothless maw is 6' across. Although the features of the pukel do not change, a low, chuffing laugh emerges constantly from its maw: "heh, heh, heh, heh". The Pukel radiates evil.

Within each eyehole are 3-6 pure white tears of Kauket (see new magic items). These potent but dangerous items may be removed easily enough (in order, for instance, to use them to activate the secret door at 9-38) by characters of chaotic evil alignment. All others who remove a tear are punished for their blasphemy: the Pukel's laugh changes to harsh shouts of anger, and two keqemandri (see new monsters) teleport in to punish the transgressors.

The gaping maw of the Great Pukel is filled with a viscous clear liquid, none other than the sweat of Rimmaq-Isfet (see new magic items). Up to 15 vials of the sweat may be filled from the maw. The supply of sweat gradually replenishes at a rate of 1 vial's worth per month. The same alignment restrictions as concern the tears of Kauket apply here; two keqemandri teleport in if a non-chaotic evil being takes any of the sweat.

GM Note: the tears appear here when beings effect teleportation by means of the lesser pukel-manders. In such cases any pure white tear used in teleportation remains in the Great Pukel's eyeholes; tears of other colors are destroyed in the teleportation. It is thus possible for the supply here to be replenished. If the PCs use the devices, then any white tear used will be found here; there is also a 5% chance per month that some other being will have used at least one white tear in a pukel-mander, and thus that a new tear will be present in the Great Pukel's eyeholes.

Destroying the Great Pukel: It is difficult, but possible to destroy the Great Pukel, and doing so will have several effects on Arden Vul. For one, it will cancel the magical powers of the lesser pukel-manders scattered through Arden Vul; thereafter, the pukel-manders will merely appear as ominous, vaguely evil statues, with no special effects. More importantly, though, destroying the Great Pukel serves to weaken Rimmaq-Isfet and Kauket, thus evening the odds should PCs confront Kauket on Level 10 (see Level 10 introduction and 10-37). To destroy the Great Pukel, four spells must be cast in sequence within a span of 6 hours: spiritwrack or holy word, dispel magic (by a 12th- or greater-level caster), transmute rock to mud, and then hallow (see new spells). During the casting period(s), two more keqemandri will teleport in to defend the unholy Great Pukel. Of course, a single carefully-worded wish would also suffice.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 or more keqemander demons (see new monsters): SZ L; AL CE; AC -2; MV 90'; 150' flying (Class D); HD 16; HP 116, 101; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/3-18; MR 40%. Constant abilities: dread (-1 to saves); infravision. Special attacks: acid spit (3-10 dmg; 30' range, every other round); cause fear; darkness (10' radius); exude acid with chance to degrade armor; use a symbol of discord. Special defenses: only hit by magic weapons; half damage from cold, electricity, fire, and gas; become invisible. Special: levitate; telekinesis (4,000 gp weight); project image; teleport without error; 50% chance to gate in either another keqemander or a Type I-IV demon.

9-41: Tunnel up to 7-64

This tunnel snakes upward to join Level 7 at area 7-64. The Priscians recently discovered it and have dispatched a war mage triad up it (see areas 7-39 and 7-44). If lights are employed at the entrance of this tunnel, the Priscians at 9-31 will be alerted and will arrive within a turn to protect their colleagues on Level 7.

Trap (noise trap): A smiley face is painted on the tunnel wall 50' below the point at which the tunnel arrives in area 7-44. The face is the trigger for a Frigg's flatulence spell (see new spells) that the Priscians have installed there as a warning. If the spell is triggered by motion, the Priscians in 7-44 will be ready.

9-42: Debris-Strewn Cave

The same geological instability present in 9-37 is found here (see above for chances of collapse). The temperature is noticeably warmer, and the air moister. Although the cave surfaces are rough and natural, obvious bits of ancient worked stone protrude crazily from the floor and walls. These include bits of stairs, flattened pieces of pediment, and an occasional broken plinth.

Lying in a pool of dried blood halfway down the cave is the corpse of an unusual being: a man-sized biped dressed in bulbous, puffy, quilted, yellow pants and coat. Within is the body of a spindly biped with a smooth, hairless body. Its eyes are pupil-less and of indeterminate color. Within its cold-weather gear it wears only a loincloth and four web-belts that were once stuffed with gear. The corpse is that of Harjot, a niravairi and a rissaldar in the Order of Planar Explorers (see new monsters). His body has a nasty gut wound and has been stripped of nearly all of its special equipment.

A ranger may be able to locate and track a subtle blood trail that leads south towards 9-43. The chance is 50% plus 5% for every level of experience over 3.

GM Note: The demonic huntsmen at 9-50 hunted Harjot and his companions, Bahula (see 9-50) and Vingelok (see 9-48), through the Astral Plane. The three members of the Order fled through the gate at 9-51, but were trailed by the huntsmen. Bahula was slain first, while Harjot was mortally wounded and succumbed to his injuries here. Vingelok still lives, wounded and desperate, deeper within the ruins.

Treasure:

Stuffed into a pouch on the web-belts is a 1-lb sack of gold flakes (50 gp), a 1-lb sack of silver flakes (50 sp), and 7 cork-sized plugs of pure platinum (weighing about 1 lb in total and worth 250 gp). Within the corpse's loincloth is a small piece of crystal covered with spidery writing in the niravairi language; if deciphered with magic, it reads "Rissaldar! We have reason to believe Veshlok, the hero of the ancient Order, still lives, trapped in a time anomaly within the Astral. Your mission is to provide tactical support to the Havildar. Together you are to locate the missing Veshlok, probably at the arcanum mine on the hawk-headed corpse, and rescue him. May your karma be sufficient to merit success?" [GM: the note refers to the other members of the Order of Planar Explorers whose fate is detailed at SL1-11].

9-43: Stalactite Cave

This cave and the surrounding tunnels are very humid and warm. Scores of stalactites and stalagmites dot the area, many in beautiful shades of blue and green. Movement is slowed to half, and unless explorers look carefully, they might overlook the tunnel leading to 9-45. A ranger may be able to locate and track a subtle blood trail that leads south towards 9-45. The chance is 50% plus 5% for every level of experience over 3.

9-44: Tunnel Leading to SL13-32

This tunnel rises steeply before reaching the Lost Chambers of Arden at SL13-32.

9-45: Unstable, Wet Cave

This wet, humid cavern is also covered with stalagmites and stalactites. The cave exhibits the same geological instability as areas 9-37 and 9-42 (see 9-37 for chances of collapse). It will be clear to any casual observer that the cave once housed an area of worked stone, perhaps with a staircase. That worked area has been completely destroyed, however, and the cavern floor is now 30' below the nearest worked area (9-46). Piles of debris litter the floor, and bits of pediment and broken stair risers are embedded in the extant cave surfaces.

A ranger may be able to locate and track a subtle blood trail that leads east towards 9-47. The chance is 50% plus 5% for every level of experience over 3.

9-46: Ancient Slime Pits

This worked area sits 30' above the floor of 9-45 and features pebbled, oily surfaces like the rest of the heqeti architecture. Six pits, each 6' in diameter and 3' deep, are set into the floor of the chamber, while shattered stone benches rest against all the walls and piles of debris litter the floor. Amid the piles may be found stone chips, leather flasks, gourds, bits of unidentifiable dried mushroom, broken copper utensils, and small bits of flakey substances in a variety of colors. Two of the pits are coated with a long-dried precipitate, one of which is pale green and the other bright yellow.

This was one of the original locations in which the heqeti experimented with brewing slimes, relying on the chaotic influence of dread Rimmaq-Isfet (see new monsters), and on the ingenuity of their builders.

Since the site was destroyed twice, first by the rudishva and again by the Archontes, little of use remains. Still, the precipitates that remain in the pits could be rehydrated, thus creating two heqeti slimes (see new monsters). If the slimes are rehydrated in a closed receptacle (bottle or flask), they might be usable as thrown weapons. If rehydrated in situ, they act as foes. The GM can roll randomly or choose an appropriate slime.

More significantly, a foul ichor of Rimmaq-Isfet has been drawn here by the evil that still permeates the area. It is plastered to the ceiling, where it appears as a patch of black rock. Once living prey has come into range, it drops from above in an effort to consume the living. The ichor has no treasure.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 ichor of Rimmaq-Isfet (see new monsters): SZ L; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 16 HD; HP 111; #AT 2; Dmg 1-6/1-6; MR 30%. Special attacks: caustic touch (1-4 HP acid damage); crush (1-10 HP/rd); obliterate organic matter. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to cold and acid.
2. 1 rust-colored, watery heqeti slime (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 10' creeping; HD 2; HP 14; #AT 1; Dmg special; MR 15%. Special attacks: consumes metal in one round (magic items get save); corrosive to leather. Special defenses: healed by electricity or lasers; slowed by cold. Must be rehydrated with a gallon of water.
3. 1 rust-colored, peanut-butter-like heqeti slime (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 15' pseudopod; HD 2; HP 7; #AT 1; Dmg special; MR 15%. Special attacks: poison (kills in 3-18 days); corrosive to wood. Special defenses: healed by electricity, lasers; slowed by cold. Must be rehydrated with a gallon of water.

9-47: Ancient Heqeti Brood Pools

A low (3'-tall) pool runs down the center of this pebbled, greasy-surfaced chamber. It is fed by a gently-bubbling fountain shaped like a trio of giant tusks (5' tall). The side niches once held pools as well, but only a salty precipitate remains in them. The liquid in the central pool is clear, but briny. Its continued operation is a mystery of Kauket, and a source of wonder to the modern heqeti who occasionally visit it.

In the distant past, this chamber was used for mating and the raising of heqeti efts.

9-48: Heqeti Chamber

This heqeti chamber, with its pebbled, greasy surfaces, was stripped of all interesting items over a millennium ago. It is now the hiding place of Vingelok, a niravairi and a havildar in the Order of Planar Explorers (see new monsters). Vingelok is dressed in puffy, quilted orange 'cold weather' outfit, and carries a fair amount of exotic gear.

Vingelok is on the run, having been chased through the gate at 9-51 by the demonic huntsmen now encamped at 9-50. His comrades, Bahula and Harjot, were slain (see 9-42 and 9-50), but Vingelok, despite his own injuries, managed to locate a temporary place of refuge in this chamber. Vingelok gratefully accepts medical aid from PCs, although what he would really like is for the PCs to eliminate the huntsmen. If the latter transpires, Vingelok returns to 9-51 and rewards rescuers with up to three items from his stash. Those who aid Vingelok win the lasting gratitude of the Order, a fact which might prove useful in Astral or other planar adventuring.

If PCs refuse to aid Vingelok, he will be dead within three days after the aroksachaul (9-50) finally get around to finishing the hunt. At that point, all that remains here is a pool of dried blood.

Inhabitants:

1. Vingelok, niravairi (see new monsters) and havildar in the Order of Planar Explorers, as a 10th-level fighter: SZ M; AL LN; AC 1; MV 120'; HD 10; HP 27 (max 70); #AT 3/2; Dmg 3-10 (niravairi astral tulwar), or 3-6 (niravairi astral crossbow of accuracy and bolts +2). Abilities: STR 16, INT 16, WIS 11, DEX 15, CON 12, CHA 13. Continual abilities: infravision. Special attacks: surprise on 1-3 in 6. Special defenses: only surprised on 1 in 6. Possessions: niravairi astral tulwar (see new magic items); niravairi astral crossbow of accuracy with six bolts +2 (see new magic items); a niravairi personal shield (see new technological items); and other gear (see treasure).

Treasure:

Two signet rings made of steel (one his, one Harjot's), each worth 15 gp as a curiosity; 12 platinum disks threaded on a steel rod (250 gp per disk); 100 chrysoberyls (100 gp each); a diplomat's voice; two niravairi rebreathers; a niravairi molecular analyzer; and six packets of dehydrated rations (see new technological items for all).

9-49: Eastern Plateau

This relatively flat bit of rock looms 20' above the mushroom groves and 25' above the lake. Here the ceiling of the great cavern is only 30' above the plateau floor. An ancient stone bridge, 5' wide and without rails, crosses the Rimpled Run (9-71) at the northwest side of the plateau. To the southwest, a ramp of beaten earth leads down to the berm (9-9). Since the huntsmen established their camp on the plateau, other creatures have given it a wide berth.

9-50: Camp of the Huntsmen

A band of eight aroksachaul, or demonic huntsmen (see new monsters), have established a temporary camp by the wall of the great cavern. The camp comprises a gaudy yurt about 20' in diameter; it is made of black felt colored with yellow images of the trophies the band has acquired. Two huntsmen stand on guard outside at all times, while the other six relax within. Eight yeth hounds prowl about the perimeter of the camp; their extraordinary senses make it difficult for foes to sneak up on the camp. The hounds have a 75% chance to detect the smell of intruders (even invisible ones) within a 50' radius. If they detect potential prey they immediately begin baying (those within range must save vs spells or flee in panic).

Twelve 8'-tall iron stakes have been pounded into the stone in a circle around the yurt. From six of them hang the draining corpses of the aroksachaul's most recent catches: Bahula, a niravairi and a naik in the Order of Planar Explorers (see new monsters); two heqeti; a bestial varumani (from 9-8); an albino baboon (see new monsters); and a quickling.

Within the yurt are seven wooden stools, a keg of fiery demonic brandy (400 gp), a weapons rack, a large chest, and a dozen desiccated trophy heads hanging from the ceiling. The huntsmen are discussing the deliquescing 'corpses' of a couple of chasm cephalopods.

While traveling the Astral Plane, these ruthless and relentless fiends came upon an expedition formed of niravairi members of the Order of Planar Explorers (see new monsters), ambushed the expedition, and chased the survivors through the gate at 9-51 into Arden Vul. The lone survivor of that attack is wounded and hiding in area 9-48. The aroksachaul have a pretty good idea which way he went, but are delighting in the new environment and in letting their prey stew in a mixture of fear and hope. Within 1-3 days they will have tracked down Vingelok (9-48), slain him, and added his corpse to the hooks outside their yurt. His equipment will be added to their treasure.

This band of aroksachaul have never been to the Prime Material Plane before, and are delighted by the hunting possibilities offered here. They are arrogant, cruel, and a bit careless. They will negotiate first with a party that appears strong, but will then lay plans to track and ambush that group. They know nothing about Arden Vul save for the following: they know amphibians are to the north; that there are weak, but fast, prey among the mushrooms; and that a powerful and dangerous foe lies within the ruins to the northwest (i.e., 9-104). In return for the specific location of Vingelok (9-48), they might agree to exclude the PCs from their hunt; of course, any such agreement would be abrogated if the PCs interfered with the huntsmen's hunting of other beings.

If a party of PCs that appears weak or wounded attempts to negotiate with them, the huntsmen will laugh evilly, begin sharpening their blades, and then 'generously' offer their new prey a head start of two turns before they begin the hunt.

The aroksachaul remain on Level 9 for 2-6 weeks after the PCs first encounter them; after this, they depart through the gate at 9-51.

The aroksachaul are unable to replenish their numbers. Should any of them (or their yeth hounds) be slain as wandering monsters, those losses should be subtracted from the roster here. Of course, previous encounters will also determine the huntsmen's willingness to negotiate.

Inhabitants:

1. 8 aroksachaul (see new monsters): S SZ L; AC CE; AC 0; MV 120', 270' flying (Class C); HD 7+7; HP 58, 56, 55, 51, 50, 49, 48, 47;

#AT 2; Dmg 1-4/1-4 or 3-5/4-12 (whip +2/bastard sword +2), or 4-9 (short bow with arrows of striking); MR 55%. Continual abilities: infravision; extraordinary senses. Special attacks: wield two weapons without penalty; only -1 to hit invisible creatures; cause fear; create darkness 10' radius. Special defenses: +2 or better weapons to hit; half damage from cold, electricity, fire and gas. Special: teleport without error; detect magic; read languages; dispel magic; levitate; telekinesis; gate in another aroksachaul or a type I-III demon (50%). Possessions: whip +2; bastard sword +2; short bow and 12 arrows of striking (see new magic items).

2. 8 yeth hounds: SZ L; AL NE; AC 0; MV 150', 270' (Class B); HD 3+3; HP 25, 24, 23, 22, 21, 20, 19, 18; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8. Special attacks: fear. Special defenses: silver, or +1 weapons or better to hit (damage taken is 1 per magical plus, or 1 for silver weapons).

Treasure:

On their persons: their weapons, plus a bag of holding (75 cubic feet variety).

In the chest: six feet of coiled platinum rope (4,000 gp), 3 vials of embalming fluid (25 gp each), 10 emeralds (1,000 gp each), an octagonal crystal signet ring (50 gp), a niravairi astral tulwar, a niravairi astral crossbow of accuracy, and a niravairi astral staff of the magi (see new magic items).

9-51: Gate to Astral Plane

A ledge has been carved into the northeast side of a pillar that rises from floor to ceiling. The ledge is 20' above the level of the northern plateau, and only 10' below the ceiling of the cavern. The ledge appears empty, but in fact is the location of a dimensional portal connecting the Prime Material and Astral Planes. The portal is almost invisible on the prime material side, appearing only as a slight silver shimmer in the air.

9-52: Abattoir Cave

A strong smell of rotting flesh comes from this cave. Inside are the insect-infested remains of numerous small animals and lesser monsters, slain by the aroksachaul (see 9-50) in their hunts. As these creatures weren't impressive enough to keep as trophies, the huntsmen tossed the mangled corpses here.

9-53: Cave with Statue

This cave is noteworthy for two respects. The first is the fact that a statue of a human stands in the northwest corner of the cave. The second is that the statue is surrounded by a circle containing the desiccated corpses of small creatures – albino monkeys, baindara, chasm cephalopods, etc. Unlike the abattoir in 9-52, the bodies show no sign of physical harm – it is as if they simply dropped dead.

Statue of Syagria Aitón: The statue is 7' tall, weighs 525 lb, and depicts a severe Archontean woman of advancing years. She wears a wizard's robe and a circlet, and carries a wand in her crossed arms. The pediment bears an inscription in Mithric: "Syagria the Rhetor, Disciple of Vul the Sorcerer". The statue is in excellent condition despite being close to 2,000 years old; it is still painted and lifelike, and has no chips or breaks. It also detects as magic.

The reason for its pristine condition is that it is enchanted in several ways. First, it carries a necromantic protection such that any being with less than 3HD that approaches within 15' must immediately save vs. death or be slain. Second, the statue is enchanted with the 5th-level magic user spell, avoidance (for purposes of dispelling, the avoidance spell was cast at 19th level of experience). Should it be possible to approach the statue, careful inspection (as detecting secret doors) will reveal a small catch on its back heel. This catch opens the concealed door that leads to area 9-55.

Concealed Door: The door to 9-55 is 3'x3' in size. It is only visible to those who are able to approach the statue and peer behind it, and only opens by locating the catch on the statue (as a secret door).

9-54: Skeleton Cave

Seven human skeletons are scattered across the floor of this large cave. Most are centuries old, although a pair are of more recent vintage. The one-way door from 9-56 exits into the slightly flattened southern wall of this cave.

9-55: Lich Hall

The entrance corridor has been prepared with multiple castings of symbol. Fear has been inscribed in four places (floor, ceiling, north wall, south wall) just inside the entrance from 9-53. Death has been inscribed on the lintel inside 9-55, such that the first person to enter the hall will activate it.

Six slender pillars create three aisles to this quiet and shadowed chamber. Within the center aisle is a 25'-long table made of glowing orange material (arcanum – see new magic items). Two stone chairs sit at the north and south ends of the table, as do eight more along the side aisles; all ten of the chairs are occupied by skeletal figures in rotting yellow robes. Another dozen skeletons surround the table and lie between the chairs. The walls were once painted a vibrant yellow color with blue arcane symbols atop the yellow, but most of the paint is coming off in strips. Although it will be hard to see initially, a name – Syagria Aitón – is incised above the chair on the south wall. Several ancient large-format codices are open on the table, albeit covered with inches of dust.

The skeletal figures all wear yellow robes of obvious quality, even though most are torn and decrepit. Each wears a gold armband on one arm, a small iron box strapped to the other, and a tarnished silver circlet around the skull. The circlets boast a moon-shaped front-piece, into each of which has been set a 3,000 gp gem. The eyes of all ten all glow with red light. Nine of the ten are skeletal wights (see new monsters), while the tenth is none other than the lich, Syagria Aitón.

Intruders might easily conclude that Syagria Aitón occupies the seat of honor beneath her name (to the south), but they would be wrong. In fact, she sits in the first seat along the eastern wall.

When the hall is first accessed, five of the skeletal wights immediately move to confront the intruders. In addition, five of the 'normal' skeletons on the floor rise as skeleton archers. Syagria and the other four skeletal wights commence the casting of spells; of course in the case of the skeletal wights, this is a deception designed to keep Syagria's identity hidden for as long as possible (since they cast no actual spells). Once Syagria has been clearly identified by foes, the other four skeletal wights join the fray. She is likely to cast time stop first, followed immediately by power word stun, power word blind, maze, and cloudkill. Should 'time' still be permitting, she next casts polymorph other or death spell. If things go badly for her, she teleports to 9-56 using Syagria's circlet (see new magic items).

As this is her lair, Syagria may not be turned here. In addition, the skeletal wights are turned here as ghosts, and the skeletal archers are turned as shadows.

Syagria collected much treasure before she shut herself away from the company of humans. That treasure is located in area 9-56. To access it, one needs to don her circlet and concentrate upon 'treasure'; doing so activates the teleport feature of the circlet and transports the wearer instantly to 9-56. She also built in an alternative, failsafe mechanism to allow access to the chamber. This mechanism works by touching the pillars of the chamber in the following sequence: northwest, southeast, southwest, northeast, east, west. Doing so transports the being who touches the west pillar to area 9-56.

Backstory: Young Syagria became an apprentice of Vul the Sorcerer in the century after Arden and Vul discovered Arden Vul and the Archontians began colonizing it. Syagria took a close and perhaps unhealthy interest in the site and in the properties of the arcanum found within it. Her power was great, however, and despite her strange proclivities she became a close advisor to the great military archons of the period leading up to Marius's conquests. After the defeat of the heqeti, Syagria disappeared. The archons publicly announced her death in the final battle at the ziggurat, while privately admitting that her long exposure to arcanum had probably driven her mad. In fact, she had long been preparing to transcend death by becoming a lich. She brought her own disciples here, where she and they could explore the planes after death. Even now she works to ascend to demi-lichdom.

Inhabitants:

1. 9 skeletal wights (see new monsters): SZ M; AL CE; AC 3; MV 120'; HD 5+1; HP 38, 38, 37, 37, 35(x3), 31, 30; #AT 1; Dmg 3-9. Special attacks: energy drain. Special defenses: successful energy drain heals 3-9 HP; +1 or better weapons to hit; edged weapons do ½ damage; immune to sleep, charm, hold, poison, paralyzation and cold; turned as ghosts.
2. 12 skeleton archers: SZ M; AC 7; MV 120; HD 1; HP 8, 8, 7, 7, 6(x4), 5(x3), 4; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (short bow). Special defenses: immune to sleep, charm, hold, and cold; cutting and piercing weapons do half damage; turned as shadows.
3. Syagria Aitón, a lich: SZ M; AL N(E); AC 0; MV 60'; HD 11; HP 71; #AT 1; Dmg 1-10. Special attacks: fear, paralysis, magic use. Special defenses: +1 or better weapon to hit; immunity to charm, sleep, enfeeblement, polymorph, cold, electricity, insanity and death spells/symbols. She has cast contingency and globe of invulnerability, such that entrance into her hall by any outsider immediately triggers the contingency and then the globe. Possessions: amulet of protection from normal missiles (see new magic items); Syagria's circlet (see new magic items); wand of magic missiles (80 charges). Memorized spells (as 19th-level magic user): comprehend languages, light, magic missile x2, sleep; darkness 15' radius, ESP, invisibility, acid arrow, web; dispel magic x2, fireball, protection from good 10' radius, slow; dimension door, black tentacles, fear, polymorph other, wall of ice; interposing hand, cloudkill, cone of cold, telekinesis, teleport; chain lightning, death spell, repulsion; monster summoning V, power word stun, teleport without error; clenched fist, maze, power word blind; time stop.

Treasure:

Nine circlets with large yellow corundum gems (3,000 gp each).

Syagria's circlet (see new magic items).

Three valuable codices: Preparing for the Long Death, Planar Dwellers and their Powers, Mind over Blood (see Arden Vul books for all three).

9-56: Lich's Retreat

This small chamber serves as the repository for Syagria's treasure and her spell books. Three alabaster vases (50 gp each) hold coins: 31,197 ancient copper bits (see Arden Vul items), 24,521 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items), 12,749 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items), and 1,783 ancient octagonal platinum coins (see Arden Vul items). One of the vases also holds a yellow silk pouch containing a fiery yellow corundum (2,500 gp and two golden yellow topazes (600 gp each). A simple oak side table holds a potion of fire breath; a sword +2, dragon slayer; and a pair of eyes of petrification. A small oaken bookshelf holds her eleven spell books, plus a manual of puissant skill at arms and a tome of clear thought.

Syagria's Spell Books (in eleven large volumes): All 1st level spells (inc. UA); all 2nd level spells (inc. UA); all 3rd level spells (inc. UA); all 4th-level spells (inc. UA); animate dead, avoidance, interposing hand, cloudkill, conjure elemental, cone of cold, contact other plane, dismissal, dolor, extension II, feeblemind, hold monster, secret chest, magic jar, monster summoning III, passwall, stone shape, telekinesis, teleport, wall of force, wall of iron; forceful hand, chain lightning, contingency, death spell, disintegrate, enchant an item, geas, globe of invulnerability, invisible stalker, project image, reincarnation, repulsion, spiritwrack, stone to flesh; banishment, grasping hand, forcecage, mass invisibility, monster summoning V, power word stun, teleport without error, vanish, volley; clenched fist, demand, maze, permanency, power word blind, symbol; astral spell, power word kill, prismatic sphere, time stop.

Treasure:

See text.

9-57: Tunnel up to 8-23

A tunnel leads upward to 8-23 at this point. The mouth of the tunnel is 10' above the level of the mushroom groves. The tunnel is largely unknown to other sentients operating on Level 9 (e.g., the Priscians), due largely to the fact that the entrance is a squeeze shy of two feet in height. After 20' of crawling, the passage grows steadily to about 7' in height. The only group to discover it were the kaliyani, who recently used it to establish an outpost on Level 8. Two kaliyani scouts hidden by invisibility potions lurk here in order to protect the flanks of their comrades on Level 8. If this tunnel is discovered, one of the kaliyani skitters up to warn its comrades at 8-23; the other shadows the invaders, hoping to strike from behind if and when combat breaks out on Level 8.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 invisible 5th-level kaliyani scouts (see new monsters), as 5th-level thieves: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 150' on six legs, 60' upright; HD 6; HP 43, 41, 38, 36; #AT 2; Dmg 3-8/3-8 (scimitars) or 2-7/2-7 (javelins). Special defenses: immune to poison and mind-affecting spells. Special: infravision; DEX 16. Thief skills: PP 50%, OL 47%, F/RT 40%, MS 40%, HS 31%, HN 20%, CW 90%, RL 25%. Possessions: twin serrated scimitars; six javelins; a set of silver rings, worked glass and minor gemstones, and repurposed coins worth 200 gp. One has a vial of poison; the other has an extra potion of invisibility.

Areas 9-58 to 9-64A: The Priscian Outpost

The modern order of the Priscians has reoccupied an outpost secretly constructed during the last centuries of the Archontean period by 'sleeper' Sortians embedded within the imperial bureaucracy. Those Sortians diverted resources and workmen to build these chambers as a refuge to which they and their friends could retreat in the case of discovery. They linked this base to two other Sortian centers, the teleport nexus on Level 6 (areas 6-45 to 6-49A) and the guardpost on Level 3 (area 3-50). The Sortians who built these areas were also friends with Isadora, lover of the deceased Priscus Pulcher, and knew of her plans for retirement (c.f. Sub-Level 11).

Some fifty years ago a Priscian adept from Archontos named Nerub Null (see 9-64) decided to see if he could locate the traces of the Sortians, as he and the other Priscians trace the lineage of their Order to the Sortians. He was successful in locating AV-19, which led him to 3-50 and then to 6-48. After several years of experimentation and continued exploration, Nerub Null finally figured out the secret to Sortian teleportation using Sortian eyes (see new magic items); this discovery led him to 9-59. Once established here, he sent for his comrades, and a contingent of circularii (magic users) and conversi arrived about six months ago. The team has restored the arcanum forge (9-60), which had allowed the ancient Sortians to create special and powerful magical items; having mastered some of the ancient Sortian magical practices, the Priscians are now equipped with Priscian rings, Priscian gladii, Priscian chain mail, and so forth (see new magic items).

Under the leadership of Nerub Null, the Priscians hope to plumb the secrets of Arden Vul. The leaders also have uncovered tantalizing hints about Isadora and her relationship with Priscus Pulcher (whom the Priscians revere as a 'lord of magic'). Nerub Null and Jaracondus the Sprightly would like to follow up those hints, while reserving any possible rewards for themselves. Those hints, of course, pertain to Isadora's ultra-secret refuge, located at Sub-Level 11.

9-58: Concealed Balcony

This balcony looms 10' above the floor of the plateau. A reinforced wooden door down a short corridor leads to the Priscian outpost. The ledge and door are concealed by a hallucinatory terrain spell, which make them look like a regular rock wall. The wooden door is locked (-15% chance to pick). Keys are held by Jaracondus the Sprightly (9-63), Nerub Null (9-64), Laegel the Forsworn (7-143), Cenwulf the Unseen (9-31), Jellicos (7-44), Lukor (SL4-44), Jillia One-Ear (6-49), Justinian (6-48 and elsewhere), Ellergast Half-Elven (9-62); another key lost in antiquity may be found by searching at 9-4. A classic sliding peephole allows those within to determine who is without.

9-59: Sortian Face

A heavy iron portcullis separates this chamber from the hallway. It may be raised by manipulating the lever at 9-59A.

The chamber is dominated by a 10'-diameter mosaic of a knot on the floor and by a Sortian face (see new magic items) on the south wall.

Stacked in boxes along the east and west wall is an impressive array of dungeoneering equipment, including: 3 coils of rope, 24 vials of oil, 2 bullseye lanterns, 16 torches, 6 backpacks, 15 sacks, 3 small ivory coffers (12"x18") worth 55 gp each, 3 iron boxes (18"x24"), 6 leather scroll cases, 20 iron spikes, 2 bags of marbles, 16 pieces of chalk, and 8 weeks' worth of iron rations. Scattered among these supplies are some less mundane items: 12 Arden Vul cakes (see Arden Vul items), a used rudishva lesser power supply (see new technological items), and a lesser salt lamp of protection (see new magic items). Pegs near the portcullis hold 7 rock-colored hooded cloaks, while a nearby ceramic bucket holds 5 stout walking staves.

The Sortian face may be activated by placing appropriate Sortian eyes into the eye sockets of a carving. Only a few combinations of eyes are unique to an individual face; the rest are standard (and are detailed in the new magic items appendix).

Gold-Gold: Teleportation. All within 5' are teleported to area 6-48

Gold-Sapphire: A permanent magic mouth speaks in Mithric from the face: And so the war comes to an end. But at what cost? Death, destruction, and recrimination. We have sworn to uphold the peace, and so we shall. But listen! Lady Isadora, the Hekate's dearest companion, has taken Priscus's body from the stake. Now her estate is empty, the guards confounded. Whither Isadora and Priscus's corpse? None know. Unwillingly, therefore, I abandon the arcanum forge and our sanctum. Our late enemies still know not its nature or location, and I will do nothing to reveal that secret. Should the need arise, future Sortians will find and restore it.

Note: This chamber is also the destination for a Sortian face found at area 6-48.

GM Notes: The magic mouth refers to the Hekate, aka Priscus Pulcher, and to his lover, Lady Isadora, both of whom were prominent Sortians (see World of Archontos appendix). The arcanum forge is located at 9-60. The mage who recorded this message was none other than Jace Far-Seer (see 9-60).

Treasure:

See text.

9-59A: Guard Post and Lever

A bored Priscian conversus (see new monsters) sits in this niche, watching to ensure that no unauthorized visitors arrive via teleport in 9-59 or attempt to force the door at 9-58. In the niche is a stool, a low table, and a 3'-diameter bronze gong. The conversus is casting a set of silver dice compulsively, but will sound the gong instantly if she hears anything suspicious. Attached to the wall is the lever used to raise the portcullis across the hall.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 Priscian conversus (see new monsters), as a 3rd-level female Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 3; HP 26; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (spear) or 2-9 (long sword). Special: she has STR 16 and CON 16. Possessions: chain mail and shield; spear; long sword.

Treasure:

Set of six silver dice (225 sp).

9-60: The Arcanum Forge

This chamber is tall (25') and quite warm. Here a pair of smiths – Big Theo, the 'normal' smith, and Palestrina the enchantress – produce the special equipment used by the Priscians. The chamber practically reeks of magic, as the aura of arcanum (see new magic items) permeates the chamber. There is an 80% chance that Big Theo and Palestrina are hard at work when PCs arrive; in this case, they are easily surprised (4 in 6) due to the noise of the forge. Note: Palestrina is immune to the possible effects of arcanum due to her long exposure to it.

The dominant feature is the arcanum forge, which lies to the east of the chamber. The forge area includes a pool of effervescent, orange water surrounding a huge, 20'-diameter lump of arcanum. At the edge of the pool are all the regular elements of a forge: a furnace into which has been bound a small fire elemental; three anvils; racks with hammers, tongs, etc.; and molds for short swords, rings, rings for mail, spear heads, etc. The smiths employ the enchanted waters of the pool, as well as raw arcanum itself, to create their magical items.

To the west, in the worked area, are a simple desk and numerous crates of supplies. The desk holds four scrolls of permanency, Palestrina's spell book, and a strange codex formed from fifty sheets of beaten platinum bound with demon-skin: this is Jace Far-Seer's unique work, Forging with Arcanum (see Arden Vul books). Among the supplies are the following: 50 5-lb iron ingots (5 cp each), 50 5-lb steel ingots (5 sp each), 20 5-lb silver ingots (250 sp each), 10 5-lb gold ingots (250 gp each), 5 5-lb platinum ingots (1,250 gp each), 45 lb of arcanum in various sized chunks (see new magic items), 25 bloodstones (50 gp each), plus assorted string, bits of leather, frames for 'sewing' mail, and so forth. Several completed products are ready to be put into use: a suit of priscian chain mail +1, 2 priscian gladii +1, and a priscian ring infused with shield (see new magic items for all).

Big Theo is a former warrior who found a second calling as a gifted smith. He is big, strong, and dumb. Palestrina is a very powerful mage, but is by temperament more of a scholar than one who seeks power or influence. If confronted by seemingly hostile and powerful foes, she might try a sending spell to Nerub Null and then will try to teleport away.

GM Note on Sortian and Priscian Magic Items: When Nerub Null rediscovered the arcanum forge, he also rediscovered Jace Fare-Seer's manual. This manual offers general advice on how to use arcanum to power magic items, as well as specific 'recipes' for a few classes of item. The Priscian smith (Big Theo) and enchantress (Palestrina) have been able to master a few of the recipes. One of these is the recipe for enchanted chain mail, although their results have been slightly limited. Whereas ancient Sortian chain mail was permanently enchanted, the modern Priscian version (Priscian chain mail) is temporary; the armor must be regularly bathed in the waters of the forge or the enchantment is lost. The Priscian team has also figured out how to use arcanum to produce Priscian rings and Priscian gladii.

They have been working with limited success to replicate Sortian eyes (due in part to a missing page in Jace Far-Seer's manual). Their procedure is time-consuming (it requires a ritual lasting three months), costly (3,000 gp worth of materials), and morally suspect (a pair of fresh human eyes are required as material components). As a result, their stock of Sortian eyes is rather small, a fact which explains their rather limited use of the Sortian faces.

They have been unsuccessful, however, in reproducing Sortian faces, and Sortian baculi. Although Palestrina thinks their failure may be due to a lack of experience, Big Theo believes (correctly) that they are missing a crucial quire of Jace's manual.

Inhabitants:

1. Big Theo (80%), Priscian conversus (see new monsters) and smith, as a 4th-level male Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL LN; AC 10; MV 120'; HD 4; HP 31; #AT 1; Dmg 6-9 (warhammer). Abilities: STR 18/81, INT 11, WIS 9, DEX 12, CON 16, CHA 11. Possessions: war hammer; silver-chased belt (25 gp).
2. Palestrina the Enchantress (80%), Priscian war mage (see new monsters), as a 12th-level female Archontean magic user: SZ M; AL LE; AC 2; MV 120'; HD 12; HP 36; #AT 1; Dmg 2-5 (dagger +1). Abilities: STR 10, INT 17, WIS 12, DEX 15, CON 9, CHA 15. Possessions: bracers of defense (AC 3); Priscian ring infused with detect invisibility and invisibility (see new magic items); wand of fear (23 charges); dagger +1. Memorized spells: detect magic, identify, protection from evil, shield; detect invisibility, invisibility, know alignment, vocalize; blink, detect illusion, dispel magic, hold person; confusion, enchanted weapon, resilient sphere, shout; contact other plane, extension II, sending, teleport; enchant an item.
3. 1 fire elemental: SZ L; AL N; AC 2; MV 120'; HD 8; HP 53; #AT 1; Dmg 3-24. Special attacks: combustion. Special defenses: +2 weapons or better to hit.

Treasure:

See text for materials and objects.

Palestrina's Spell Book: Affect normal fires, armor, comprehend languages, detect magic, enlarge, firewater, grease, identify, light, magic missile, precipitation, protection from evil, read magic, shield, taunt, unseen servant, wizard mark, write; bind, continual light, darkness 15' radius, detect evil, detect invisibility, ESP, forget, invisibility, irritation, know alignment, locate object, mirror image, strength, vocalize, web, wizard lock; blink, clairvoyance, detect illusion, dispel magic, fly, haste, hold person, phantasmal force, protection from evil 10' radius, protection from normal missiles, secret page, suggestion, tongues; confusion, dispel illusion, enchanted weapon, extension I, fear, fire charm, hallucinatory terrain, magic mirror, resilient sphere, plant growth, remove curse, shout, stonewall; avoidance, conjure elemental, contact other plane, dismissal, extension II, hold monster, passwall, sending, teleport; contingency, enchant an item, legend lore.

9-61: Priscian Quarters

The door to this 15'-tall chamber is open, and the sound of conversation is easily audible from within. The chamber is divided in half by a heavy black curtain, with the southern half devoted to a lounge and the northern half to sleeping quarters. Only the southern half of the chamber is worked stone; the northern half is rough-hewn and natural.

Three magic users and three conversi are playing mahjong and drinking fermented goat's milk in the southern half of the chamber. Should the gong be sounded at 9-59A, all six are quick to prepare spells and move to repel intruders.

The southern half of the chamber features a dozen battered wooden straight-backed chairs, five plush leather armchairs, a 10'-long trestle table with benches, two kegs of water, a console with plates, cutlery and cups, and a liquor cabinet with 13 bottles of assorted alcoholic beverages (1-100 gp each). The diagonal wall features a giant (10') painting of the face of Priscus Pulcher, with the legend "Priscus the Great, Lord of Magic."

Behind the curtain in the northern half of the chamber are thirteen triple bunkbeds, thirteen chests, and three desks. The chests are filled with mundane clothes and personal objects.

Inhabitants:

- Ulf No-brows, Priscian war mage (see new monsters) and member of Tertius, as a 4th-level male Wisikin magic user: SZ M; AL LN; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 4; HP 12; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (Sortian baculus). Abilities: STR 10, INT 16, WIS 13, DEX 18, CON 9, CHA 7. Possessions: Sortian baculus infused with detect magic; ring of protection +1; scroll of magic missile. Memorized spells: charm person, magic missile, sleep; Frigg's jelly legs (see new spells), scare. Spell book: charm person, dancing lights, detect magic, light, magic missile, magic aura, read magic, shield, sleep; darkness 15' radius, detect invisibility, fools gold, Frigg's jelly legs (see new spells), knock, magic mouth, rope trick, scare, wizard lock; blink.
- Knut Half-troll, Priscian war mage (see new monsters) and member of Tertius, as a 5th-level male Wisikin magic user: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 5; HP 25; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (staff). Abilities: STR 9, INT 16, WIS 11, DEX 15, CON 17, CHA 7. Possessions: Priscian chain mail (see new magic items); wand of illumination (18 charges); Priscian ring infused with shield (see new magic items); staff. Spells memorized: charm person, enlarge, magic missile, sleep; ESP, strength; lightning bolt. Spell book: burning hands, charm person, detect magic, enlarge, hold portal, light, magic missile, read magic, shocking grasp, sleep; continual light, ESP, levitate, mirror image, stinking cloud, strength; dispel magic, lightning bolt, slow.
- Dolofina Yellow-Eyes, Priscian war mage (see new monsters) and member of Primus, as a 2nd-level female Archontean magic user: SZ M; AL LE; AC 10; MV 120'; HD 2; HP 5; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (staff). Abilities: STR 8, INT 16, WIS 13, DEX 10, CON 11, CHA 6. Possessions: staff; potion of human control; potion of clairvoyance. Spells memorized: light, sleep. Spell book: affect normal fires, charm person, erase, hold portal, light, read magic, sleep, spider climb, write; levitate, mirror image.
- Eigon the Bald, Priscian conversus (see new monsters), as a 5th-level male Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL LN; AC 3; MV 60'; HD 5; HP 42; #AT 1; Dmg 3-10 (long sword +1), 1-4 (light crossbow). Abilities: STR 17, INT 10, WIS 9, DEX 15, CON 15, CHA 9. Possessions: splint mail; long sword +1; light crossbow; purse with 33 sp and 21 gp.
- Asdrusil the Swift, Priscian conversus (see new monsters), as a 4th-level female Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 4; HP 30; #AT 1; Dmg 3-8 (spear +1). Abilities: STR 16, INT 9, WIS 16, DEX 7, CON 12, CHA 17. Possessions: chainmail and shield; spear +1; purse with 22 sp and 21 gp.
- Cassie Top-Knot, Priscian conversus (see new monsters), as a 5th-level female Thorcin thief: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 5; HP 21; #AT 1; Dmg 3-9 (Priscian gladius +2) or 1-3 (darts). Abilities: STR 12, INT 14, WIS 15, DEX 17; CON 9, CHA 15. Thief skills: PP 55%, OL 52%, F/RT 40%, MS 45%, HS 36%, HN 20%, CW 90%, RL 25%. Possessions: leather armor;

Priscian gladius +2 (see new magic items); six darts; potion of invisibility, purse with 11 sp and 63 gp.

9-62: Priscian Hall of Trophies

This 20'-tall chamber might once have had a ceremonial purpose, but now it is mainly used to store interesting items discovered by Priscian exploring parties. Four 4'-diameter columns support the ceiling. The walls are painted with frescoes showing a handsome, bearded man (Priscus Pulcher) engaged in scenes of magical and political significance: counselling a diademed ruler, teaching apprentices, confronting a troll-like monster, pointing a staff at a Thothian priest, producing fire from his fingertips, etc.

Narrow staircases on the west wall lead to balconies set 10' up the north and south walls.

While the floor of the chamber is cluttered with interesting objects looted from elsewhere in Arden Vul (see table below), the Priscians also use the area beneath the north landing for food storage and preparation. There may be found two work tables, a set of cookware, a cauldron of boiling, a keg of water, and six open crates holding substantial amounts of the following: dried fruit, nuts, dried mushrooms, smoked meat, beans and dried vegetables, and corn meal.

Amid the clutter four magic users are engaged in wizardly practice while four conversi look on with amusement. Loud noise at 9-58 or the sound of the gong at 9-59A alerts the Priscians here; they will prepare spells and move cautiously to repel intruders. Should visitors somehow manage to surprise the Priscians at their practice, it will take 3 rounds of combat to alert the inhabitants of 9-63, 9-63A, 9-64, and 9-64A.

Item	Value
A 5' marble statue of a goblin dressed in gaudy clothing with a phrygian cap carrying a whip; the Mithric inscription reads 'Lamplighter the Overseer'	500 gp
A 7'-tall granite statue of a non-Archontean warrior (a Thorcin), with mail, sword and shield. The inscription in Mithric reads: "Oswin the warrior, who located the path"	750 gp
A pair of 4'-tall shepherd's crooks that hold gold lanterns	350 gp each
A battered silver bowl with the name 'Rex' crudely etched on it. [GM: this is an artifact of Rex the whippet – see 6-50, 8-31 and 8-41 for more information]	25 gp
A sheaf of bronze, silver and gold rods, tied up with silver cords (a ceremonial set of fasces employed by an ancient Archontean legate)	375 gp
A folding parasol; when opened, it shows various pornographic bordello scenes	125 gp
A troll chest (see new technological items), locked. If opened, it contains 10 fully charged rudishva lesser power supplies (see new technological items)	Varies
One of the 3'-tall children automatons of Kerbog Khan (see new monsters). It is immobile, but there is a 10% chance that the Khan visits it to peer through its eyes	Varies

A plaster model of a chasm cephalopod, depending from an iron hook. The parts of the cephalopod are labelled, as are its powers and vulnerabilities	15 gp
A small wooden case containing six wax seals removed from imperial rescripts. They date to the period 1637-1687 AEP	600 gp
A staff wrapped in burlap; some dim blue light shines forth from the wrappings. It is a staff of blue light (see new magic items), with the name Balthazar inscribed on it (see 2-63)	1,500 gp
A set of Archontean chessmen in ebony and ivory	750 gp
A pair of glass spheres of arcane assistance (see new magic items) wrapped in yellow silk. They are pale green and lemon yellow.	1,500 gp each
Three nesting vases made of fine porcelain. They bear peaceful garden scenes	300 gp for the set
A stash of twelve portrait busts in stone. They have been badly treated, with chips, cracks and other damage, and are not identified. If it were possible to identify the persons they represent, the busts would be valuable to their modern descendants	200 gp each, if identified
Two battered buccinae from an Archontean legion	45 gp each
A fine granite statue of a varumani. It is actually Vanela, the penultimate thegn, who is believed to have disappeared 53 years ago. How he was petrified is unknown. If restored via stone to flesh , his reappearance will throw the varumani court (7-76) into chaos.	675 gp for the statue
A collection of heqeti clubs, spear-heads, and arrows, mounted on a cracked oaken board. 15% chance one of the arrows is poisoned with Kauket's vision (see Arden Vul items)	250 gp to a collector
A range of books and scrolls, including: the Twelve Labors of Arden; Beyond the Veil; Interviews with the Elementals; Deeds of Phagtro the Westron; Divine Power is a Manifestation of Collective Will; the Founder and his Deeds; Great Villains of Archontos, part I: Secunda the Witch; Great Villains of Archontos, part IV: Larsinius the Exarch; History of the Pagan Cults; the Kauketiad; Moralia in Teracleon; On the Terrible Old Gods; the Politics; Secreta Secretorum; the Seventeen Uses of a Dead Troll; the Song of Jacinth the Rose; Thirty Uses for Arcanum ; and Vul Speaks (see Arden Vul books for all)	See Arden Vul books for values
Other items as the GM sees fit.

Inhabitants:

1. Ellergast Half-Elven, Priscian war mage (see new monsters) and member of Septimus, as an 8th-level half-elf magic user: SZ M; AL LN; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 8; HP 23; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (Sortian baculus). Abilities: STR 12, INT 18, WIS 14, DEX 13, CON 9, CHA 14. Possessions: a key to 9-58; bracers of defense (AC 5); Sortian baculus infused with suggestion (see new magic items); Priscian ring infused with dispel magic and shield;

(see new magic items); wand of conjuration (21 charges). Spells memorized: enlarge, jump, magic missile, spider climb; continual light, knock, web; fireball, hold person, monster summoning I; fumble, polymorph self. Spell book: charm person, comprehend languages, detect magic, enlarge, erase, feather fall, friends, identify, jump, light, magic missile, protection from evil, read magic, shield, sleep, spider climb, unseen servant; continual light, darkness 15' radius, detect evil, invisibility, knock, locate object, mirror image, rope trick, stinking cloud, strength, web; blink, clairaudience, dispel magic, explosive runes, fireball, fly, hold person, monster summoning I, protection from normal missiles, water breathing; dig, dimension door, extension I, fire charm, fumble, polymorph other, polymorph self, remove curse, wizard eye; hold monster.

2. Gibreon, Priscian war mage (see new monsters) and member of Secundus, as a 4th-level male Archontean illusionist: SZ M; AL LE; AC 3; MV 120'; HD 5; HP 14; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (staff). Abilities: STR 9, INT 16, WIS 11, DEX 16, CON 15, CHA 10. Possessions: Priscian chainmail (see new magic items); staff, Priscian ring infused with detect invisibility (see new magic items); potion of polymorph self (see new magic items). Memorized spells: darkness, detect invisibility, phantasmal force; blindness, mirror image. Spell book: audible glamor, change self, darkness, detect invisibility, hypnotism, phantasmal force; blindness, deafness, detect magic, fog cloud, improved phantasmal force, mirror image; fear, hallucinatory terrain, suggestion.

3. Ebba of Pristen, Priscian war mage (see new monsters) and member of Primus, as a 3rd-level female Thorcin magic user: SZ M; AL LE; AC 6; MV 120'; HD 3; HP 12; #AT 1; Dmg 1-3 (darts). Abilities: STR 12, INT 16, WIS 9, DEX 10, CON 16, CHA 13. Possessions: 6 darts; bracers of defense (AC 6); scroll of magic missile. Memorized spells: jump, sleep; pummeling fists of Arak-Zhorr (see new spells). Spell book: detect magic, feather fall, hold portal, jump, magic missile, read magic, sleep; continual light, pummeling fists of Arak-Zhorr (See new spells), scare, strength.

4. Justina Krakteros, Priscian war mage (see new monsters) and member of Primus, as a 2nd-level female Archontean magic user: SZ M; AL LN; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 2; HP 6; #AT 1; Dmg 3-9 (Priscian gladius +2). Abilities: STR 9, INT 16, WIS 10, DEX 16, CON 11, CHA 11. Possessions: Priscian gladius +2 (see new magic items). Spells memorized: dancing lights, magic missile. Spell book: dancing lights, feather fall, jump, magic missile, read magic, sleep, floating disc; forget, ray of enfeeblement.

5. Handsome Harold, Priscian conversus (see new monsters) and bonded defender to Ellergast Half-Elven, as a 7th-level male Thorcin fighter: SZ M; AL LE; AC 2; MV 120'; HD 6; HP 62; #AT 3/2; Dmg 6-13 (long sword +2), 3-8 (short bow and arrows +2). Abilities: STR 18/64, INT 9, WIS 11, DEX 10, CON 15, CHA 6. Possessions: banded mail +1 and shield; long sword +2; short bow with 14 arrows and 6 arrows +2; potion of extra healing.

6. A Priscian conversus (see new monsters), as a 5th-level female Wiskin thief: SZ M; AL LE; AC 6; MV 120'; HD 5; HP 21; #AT 1; Dmg 3-9 (Priscian gladius +2). Special: she has DEX 16. Possession: leather armor; Priscian gladius +2; and potion of invisibility.

7. 2 Priscian conversi (see new monsters), as 3rd-level male Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 3; HP 28, 24; #AT 1; DMG 2-7 (spear) or 2-9 (long sword). Special: they have STR 17 and CON 16. Possessions: chain mail and shield; spear; long sword.

9-63: Chamber of Jaracondus the Sprightly

The door to this chamber is usually open, although it can be locked. Jaracondus the Sprightly, the second-in-command of the Priscians operating in Arden Vul, makes his abode here. The furnishings include the following: a bed, an armoire, a writing desk, an armor rack, a plush, sea-green carpet (350 gp), a solid ivory coffee table (550 gp), and a locked iron chest. The walls are painted the same peaceful sea-green color as the rug.

Jaracondus the Sprightly is an elderly wizard, but a clever and agile one. His climb through the Priscian Order (he is a member of Nonus) has been slow and steady, as his innate caution ensured that he made few enemies along the way. These qualities made him a perfect complement for the more ethereal Nerub Null: Nerub Null thinks big and sets broad strategy, while the more practical Jaracondus implements the practical logistics. In the rare cases when the Priscians choose to treat with visitors, it is with Jaracondus that visitors speak; at such moments Jaracondus prefers to strike mutually profitable bargains. Should the outpost be assaulted from without, however, Jaracondus is swift to organize the defense. He first casts invisibility on his bonded defender, Inlevris (9-63A) and then attempts to summon an earth elemental; only then does he move to assist his comrades.

Inhabitants:

1. Jaracondus the Sprightly, Priscian war mage (see new monsters) and member of Nonus, as an 11th-level male Archontean magic user: SZ M; AL LN; AC 0; MV 120'; HD 11; HP 34; #AT 1; Dmg 4-7 (dagger +3). Abilities: STR 9, INT 18, WIS 13, DEX 17, CON 9, CHA 9. Possessions: dagger +3; a key to 9-58; robe of eyes; bracers of defense (AC 3); Priscian ring infused with blink and dispel magic (see new magic items); rod of absorption (23 levels absorbed); wand of fire (23 charges), key to 9-63. Spells memorized: enlarge, light, magic missile, spider climb; continual light, ESP, invisibility, mirror image; blink, fly, haste, suggestion; fear, ice storm, wall of ice; cone of cold, conjure elemental, interposing hand.

Treasure:

Atop the desk are sketch maps of the obvious portions of Level 9, plus a tattered treasure map leading to area 5-19. The desk drawer contains three vials of hydra blood (100 gp each), an orange jacinth (4,500 gp), and several magical scrolls: protection from earth elementals, protection from magic, and mass charm.

The armoire contains practical clothing, including several sets of robes and slippers. The armor rack holds a suit of Priscian chain mail (see new magic items). Atop the coffee table are two bottles of rudishva aquavit (see Arden Vul items) and six silver cups (50 gp total).

The chest holds 4,731 sp and 3,499 gp, a complete set of Sortian eyes (see new magic items), a dagger +2, longtooth, all six of Jaracondus's spell books, plus a pair of fully charged rudishva lesser power supplies (see new technological items).

Jaracondus's Spell Books (in six large volumes): All 1st-level spells; all 2nd-level spells; blink, clairaudience, clairvoyance, dispel magic, explosive runes, fireball, fly, gust of wind, haste, hold person, invisibility 10' radius, lightning bolt, phantasmal force, protection from normal missiles, slow, tongues; charm monster, confusion, fear, fire shield, ice storm, minor globe of invulnerability, polymorph other, remove curse, wall of ice; airy water, interposing hand, cloudkill, conjure elemental, cone of cold, hold monster, magic jar, passwall, telekinesis, teleport, wall of stone; enchant an item, ensnarement, legend lore.

9-63A: Chamber of Inlevris Half-Elven

This small chamber serves as the office and dwelling of Inlevris Half-Elven, the bonded defender of Jaracondus and one of the two leaders of the Priscian conversi in Arden Vul.

Inlevris has a desk, a bed, an equipment rack, and a locked chest. The floor is covered with a thin, sky-blue carpet (55 gp), and the walls are painted with frescoes of flying dragons.

Inlevris is an aspiring artist. Near the bed he keeps an easel, two canvases, seven large pieces of parchment, and a set of brushes and paints. He would desperately like to complete an image of the Whispering Glen (a famous location within the elven Realm of Lord Gallador and Lady Ellagel – see World of Archontos appendix). Despite filling the parchments with sketches, and attempting a formal painting numerous times, Inlevris's work is just not very good (45 gp for the canvas).

As a member of the Priscian Order, Inlevris is a superb leader and loyal friend to the ruling magi. He firmly believes in the need to advance knowledge and power in secret ways. If the outpost is alerted, Inlevris rushes to join Jaracondus to plan their response; he is then likely to slip into the outpost under an invisibility spell to scout and then cause havoc. If encountered in peaceful situations, Inlevris is an erudite, learned, polite half-elf with a taste for discussing art, philosophy, and literature.

Inhabitants:

1. Inlevris Half-Elven, Priscian conversus (see new monsters) and bonded defender to Jaracondus the Sprightly, as a 7th/9th-level male half-elf fighter/thief: SZ M; AL LN; AC 1; MV 120'; HD 9; HP 43; #AT 3/2; Dmg 4-10 (Priscian gladius +2) or 4-7 (dagger +2). Abilities: STR 17, INT 14, WIS 12, DEX 18, CON 14, CHA 10. Thief skills: PP 90%, OL 77%, F/RT 65%, MS 80%, HS 71%, HN 30%, CW 98%, RL 45%. Possessions: leather armor +3; Priscian gladius +2; dagger +2; dust of appearance; ring of free action; 2 potions of invisibility.

Treasure:

When Inlevris is present in his chamber, the equipment rack holds his leather armor and weapons. The desk holds a roster of all the conversi present in Arden Vul, as well as a petition to Liesbet (9-64A) asking her to bring additional personnel to Arden Vul. In the drawer of the desk are some scrunched-up pieces of parchment with attempts at poetry, and a surprisingly good pencil sketch of Jaracondus (25 gp). His chest holds clothing, a piece of ironwood from the elven realm (see World of Archontos appendix) that has been shaped and sanded to resemble a moonflower (55 gp), an iron flask filled with two uses of oil of sharpness (+5), a silver necklace studded with three deep blue spinels (2,250 gp), and a scroll of poetry, Inellador's Imagining in Rounds (see Arden Vul books).

9-64: Chamber of Nerub Null

The door to this chamber is almost always locked. Within dwells the powerful but cryptic leader of the Priscians in Arden Vul, the archmage, Nerub Null.

Nerub Null's furnishings include the following: a bed, an armoire, a writing desk, two comfortable leather chairs, an embroidered silk carpet featuring an Archontean man standing next to a gold dragon (450 gp), a teak coffee table (250 gp), and a locked iron chest. The walls are painted white, but Nerub Null has entirely covered them with mystical symbols, including long sequences of numbers and a seven bizarre words (the names of devils – GM's choice as to which).

A 10'-diameter magic circle occupies the northwest corner of the chamber. There is a 25% chance that Nerub Null has summoned a devil and is conversing with it.

The desk drawer contains three vials of devil's ichor (100 gp each), a clear red ruby (5,000 gp), and several magical scrolls: protection from evil 10' radius (x2), ensnarement, and banishment. Atop the desk are parchment sketches of six varieties of devil, a rudishva head preserved in a jar, a 2-lb lump of arcanum, a full set of the ultra-rare Priscian texts (the Canticle of Arcane Knowledge, the Gesta Isadorae, the Hidden Codex, and the Fragment [see Arden Vul books for all]), and a torn and stained parchment writ addressed to Gordion, archon of Arden Vul. The writ reads: "To Gordion, archon, from his devoted proedros, Hasibel. You will be interested to know that I assigned a full kentarch to watch the villa of that Sortian sympathizer, Lady Isadora. My men swear that she never departed from the villa, and our combat mages confirm that nothing invisible snuck past them. And yet, when three weeks of observations produced no sign of the accursed agitator, my men broke down the door to her villa to find it completely empty! No servants, no guards, and – what is worse! – no Lady Isadora. We naturally searched the villa from top to bottom but were able to find neither hide nor hair of her. It was as if she disappeared by teleportation – but, as you know, the Archon's wards were supposed to render that impossible. It is my great displeasure, therefore, to announce our failure. Lady Isadora, consort of the arch-traitor Priscus Pulcher, has utterly disappeared. I would offer my resignation if I felt that her disappearance had occurred through my negligence, but this is not the case. I smell sorcery of the worst and most dire kind. No doubt our other agents will pick up her trail. At that point, may I recommend that she be introduced to the impalement stake? She deserves to suffer the same fate as her treacherous lover." The date is AEP 1713.

GM Note: The writ is a hint that Isadora, the faithful partner of Priscus Pulcher, eluded the imperial authorities and thus that it might still be possible to locate her or her refuge. It is the primary reason why Nerub Null pushed the Priscians to attempt an expedition to Arden Vul, for he (rightly) believes that secret Sortian knowledge and treasure is still to be located here. The resting place of Isadora is SL11-19, although access to her tomb is also possible through her ruined estate (AV-20).

The armoire contains practical clothing, including several sets of robes and slippers. Atop the coffee table are two bottles of strong Archontean brandy (and six silver cups (50 gp total).

The chest holds 2,171 sp and 13,275 gp, a full set of Sortian eyes (see new magic items), Nerub Null's eight spell books, and several codices: The Nine Hells: a Catalogue with descriptions and summoning notes; The Founder and His Deeds; Great Villains of Archontos, part V: Priscus the Traitor; Pandects of Thaumaturgical Visitation; Planar Dwellers and their Powers; Summoning from the Beyond; A True History of Isadora, companion of Priscus Pulcher, (see Arden Vul books for all).

Inhabitant:

1. Nerub Null, Priscian war mage (see new monsters) and member of Decimus, as an 18th-level male Archontean magic user: SZ M; AL LE; AC 2; MV 120'; HD 18; HP 40; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (Sortian baculus) or 1-6 (staff of the magi). Abilities: STR 7, INT 19, WIS 17, DEX 9, CON 8, CHA 15. Possessions: a key to 9-58; Sortian baculus infused with suggestion; Priscian ring infused with blink and dispel magic (see new magic items for both); staff of the magi (18 charges); bracers of defense (AC 2). Memorized spells: alarm, friends, identify, magic missile, wizard mark; acid arrow, detect invisibility, ESP, knock, mirror image; dispel magic, fireball, slow, suggestion, tongues; dimension door, extension I, polymorph other, remove curse, shout; contact other plane, dismissal, dolor, hold monster, teleport; chain lightning, ensnarement, spiritwrack; banishment, forcecage, power word stun; binding, maze; time stop.

Treasure:

See text.

Nerub Null's Spell Books (in eight large volumes): All 1st-level spells; all 2nd-level spells; all 3rd-level spells; charm monster, confusion, dig, dimension door, extension I, fear, fire shield, hallucinatory terrain, ice storm, massmorph, polymorph other, polymorph self, remove curse, shout, stoneskin, wall of fire, wizard eye; avoidance, conjure elemental, contact other plane, dismissal, dolor, extension II, feeblemind, hold monster, interposing hand, magic jar, monster summoning III, sending, telekinesis, teleport, transmute rock to mud, wall of force; chain lightning, contingency, disintegrate, enchant an item, ensnarement, extension III, geas, invisible stalker, legend lore, project image, reincarnation, repulsion, spiritwrack; banishment, cacodemon, forcecage, instant summons, limited wish, monster summoning V, phase door, power word stun, teleport without error, torment, truename; binding, demand, maze, permanency, spell immunity, symbol, trap the soul; astral spell, gate, succor, time stop.

9-64A: Chamber of Liesbet the Reptile

Liesbet, the bonded defender of Nerub Null, resides in this chamber. Liesbet's nickname is a product of her interests in snakes, her slippery personality, and her uncanny ability to slither out of tight spots. No one actually uses it to her face. Liesbet is rather pathetically loyal to Nerub Null; in fact, she cares little about anyone else. Although the putative leader of the conversi in Arden Vul, she rarely leaves the side of Nerub Null, leaving day-to-day administration to Inlevris Half-Elven.

Liesbet's chamber has a hammock, an equipment rack, an armoire, a locked chest, and several glass display cases. The floor is covered with a wall-to-wall, thick, wool carpet in an unpleasant shade of green (20 gp), and the walls are unpainted.

The display cases occupy the east and west walls, and are 5'x2'x3'. One contains 9 mice. The other contains a pair of poisonous vipers. The armoire is nearly empty, save for six sets of boots and a couple of tunics. The desk contains a copy of the conversi roster for Arden Vul, as well as some unopened notes from Inlevris. The notes describe the Priscian expeditions to Levels 9 (9-31) and 7 (7-39, 7-44, and 7-143), as well as to Sub-Level 4 (SL4-44). They contain rosters as well as general goals for these expeditions. It is clear that Liesbet has not read the notes.

The chest contains a variety of snake related objects: a gold statuette of a coiled cobra (175 gp); a flexible snake toy made of articulated pieces of ebony set with tiny gems (225 gp); a silver torc with matching arm rings, all in the shape of a snake (135 gp); a battered copper hooded lantern shaped like a snake's head (25 gp); and an ebony and ivory chess set in which all of the pawns are coiled cobras (350 gp).

Liesbet is obsessed with two things: Nerub Null, whom she considers a great visionary and mystic, and snakes. The reptile fascination is largely a product of her long possession of the ring of the snake (see new magic items). This potent ring allows her to transform into a snake 3x per day, but also has turned her mind a bit towards things reptilian. She uses it less underground than she does in her normal urban life, but will quickly adopt snake form (after drinking a potion of invisibility) if things go pear-shaped for the Priscians.

Inhabitant:

1. Liesbet the Reptile, Priscian conversus (see new monsters) and bonded defender to Nerub Null, as an 11th-level female Archontean thief: SZ M; AL LE; AC 1; MV 120'; HD 11; HP 49; #AT 1; Dmg 3-9 (Priscian gladius +2) or 3-6 (dagger +2). Abilities: STR 12, INT 16, WIS 15, DEX 18, CON 10, CHA 12. Thief skills: PP 100%, OL 82%, F/RT 75%, MS 91%, HS 80%, HN 35%, CW 99.1%, RL 55%. Possessions: leather armor +3; Priscian gladius +2 (see new magic items); dagger +2; dust of appearance; ring of the snake (see new magic items); 2 potions of invisibility.

Treasure:

See text.

9-65: Roiling Lake

A lake has formed here where the two internal waterfalls of Arden Vul finally strike solid rock. The lake is 50' deep in its center, but becomes shallow at the north and south ends. A river known to the Archontean as the Rimpled Run departs the lake to the east (9-71). Due to the noise and power of the falls, the lake is home to no large monsters. It is well stocked with cave fish, however. Until recently, that meant that other creatures – like the mihstu in 9-68 and 9-69, and the ogre magi in 9-70 – frequently hunted over the lake. With the arrival of the aroksachaul (9-50), however, the other natural predators have gone into hiding as they await the departure of the huntsmen.

Unsurprisingly, given its location at the foot of a huge chasm, the lake is home to several bits of forgotten treasure. It takes 4-9 turns searching underwater to turn up one of these items.

The depth of the lake remains constant, except if the dam at SL6-25 is destroyed. In this case, a massive amount of water will flow down the spillway and cause the waterfall from 6-6A to become a raging torrent for several hours. This influx of water will raise the water level by 15' for a period of 7-10 hours. During this time period, the midden (9-87), the muck fields (9-7), the berm (9-9), and a swathe of the mushroom fields (in the south, from the lake to area 9-6; in the north from the lake to 9-76) will be swept clear of anything that is not stone. After the lake resumes its normal level, these areas will be covered with a layer of muck.

Treasure:

A bronze statue of Odin, badly corroded but still worth 3,500 gp; a beautifully carved portrait bust of the 23rd claustral prior of the cult of Set, Mauricius (345 gp); an ancient gladius +2, goblin-slayer; a rotting wooden box with six lumps of arcnum (see new magic items); a solid gold prosthetic arm inscribed 'Histanius' (1,200 gp); a bronze tablet serving as a ceremonial and permanent iteration of an imperial rescript granting 'the survivor Ravatorus' full imperial protection in return for his alchemical and sorcerous assistance, worth 475 gp (Ravatorus is the Archontean name for Reiv-Tor; see SL7-23).

9-66: Base of Waterfall (from Level 6 - area 6-6A)

The waterfall produced by the spillway (6-143) lands here in a thunderous downpour. An area 50' around the base of the falls is cloaked in spume and mist.

9-67: Base of Waterfall (from Level 5 – area 5-2A)

The second waterfall of the Great Chasm finds its base here. An area 50' in diameter around it is clouded with mist and spray.

9-68: Mist-obscured Cave

The entrance to this cave sits 30' above the surface of the lake (9-65). It is also obscured by the mist and spray produced by the waterfalls. Once discovered, it appears to be a relatively benign place, save for being extremely damp and slightly cold. In fact it is highly dangerous, for it leads to the lair of a trio of mihstu that have made their home in this cave network; there is a 25% chance that one of the three mihstu is present here, blending into the mist. Due to the conditions, a mihstu present here has an enhanced chance to surprise (1 better pip on the dice).

The tunnels that lead to 9-69 are relatively small (6' in diameter) and damp with moisture; movement is halved. Noise or light in the tunnels is sure to alert the mihstu, who will be sure to use the opportunity of the terrain to ambush intruders from behind. Only cautious and quiet parties have a chance to arrive at 9-69 without alerting the mihstu. Halfway through the tunnel network are the corpses of an ogre (actually an ogre mage) and a Priscian conversus (see new monsters), both recently slain by the mihstu.

Inhabitants:

I. 1 mihstu (25% in cave; greater chance in tunnels): see stats at 9-69.

Treasure:

The conversus's Priscian chain mail is no longer enchanted, nor is his Priscian gladius (see new magic items for both). He does have a potion of growth and a purse with 45 sp and 23 gp.

9-69: Lair of the Mihstu

This large, damp cave is the lair of three mihstu. Because the tunnels that feed it are slightly higher than the floor of the cave, the moisture in this entire area has condensed into a shallow (5"-deep) pool of water that covers the floor.

To the south is a relatively dry ledge 10' above the pool, on which is the badly rotted and encrusted corpse of a pair of ancient heroes. The pair fought an unauthorized duel in antiquity over a shared love interest. The duel led them all over Level 9 until they mortally wounded each other in this chamber. The seconds elected to lay them to rest together in secret. One is Brehmn the Scout, and the other is Sixtus Cornelius the praetor (c.f. 6-130).

Inhabitants:

I. 3 mihstu (unless previously encountered): SZ M; AL NE; AC -2; MV 60', 60' flying (Class B); HD 8+2; HP 61, 57, 51; #AT 4; Dmg 2-7/2-7/2-7/2-7; MR 10%. Special attacks: drain CON. Special defenses: +2 or better weapons to hit; immune to electricity and all missiles (including magic missiles); stunned for 2-12 rounds by cold attacks.

Treasure

On the body of Brehmn the Scout: a buckler +2, a battle axe, and a pair of javelins of lightning.

On the body of Sixtus Cornelius: a medium shield -1, missile attractor, a long sword +1, flame tongue, and a potion of healing.

In addition to the bodies, a rotted purse contains 53 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items), 33 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items), and two ancient octagonal platinum coins (see Arden Vul items).

9-70: Tower of Walid

A large rock formation rises from the lake bed in this location. The formation is 100' tall, with 50' extending below the surface of the lake and the rest towering over it. At a point 25' above the surface of the lake a secret door leads to a hidden 'tower' constructed here by a long-forgotten Archontean sorcerer.

Secret Door (north side): The door is normal to notice, and opens to a key. At the moment the only key is held by Walid the ogre mage (9-70). The lock could be picked or the door broken down.

The Tower

The tower consists of three identical levels, each 30'x20' and 15' tall; the three are connected by a stone spiral staircase. The entrance level is the middle level. Currently the tower is home to a band of ogre magi led by the clever and fearsome Walid. The band is, however, afraid of the aroksachaul (9-50); Walid has ordered them to limit their movement outside the tower until they depart.

Five ogre magi constitute Walid's band; they are served by seven goblin slaves. Assuming they have not been defeated elsewhere, the initial locations of the band are as follows:

Entrance level: two ogre magi and three goblins

Upper Level: two ogre magi and three goblins

Lower level: Walid and one goblin

Because the goblin slaves are terrified that they will be eaten, they will initially fight for their masters. Should the tide appear to be turning, however, they will betray the ogre magi and throw themselves on the mercy of any intruders.

Entrance Level: Living Space

The chamber is lit by a pair of continual light spells and is finely decorated in antique Archontean style. There are four leather chairs, a settee, two low tables, a pair of tripods of heating (see new magic items), a cloak rack, a wine rack with a dozen bottles of liquor (2-20 gp each), and a fine carpet depicting a flying dragon (350 gp). Four leather-bound codices are scattered about the room: a copy of the Pandects of Thaumaturgical Visitation; Planar Dwellers and their Powers; Travels in the Astral Plane; and Great Villains of Archontos, part V: Priscus the Traitor (see Arden Vul books for all).

Two ogre magi and three goblin slaves are present here. The ogre magi appear as humans in casual dress and attempt to engage any intruders in conversation and negotiation, posing as scholars trapped here by the arrival of the demonic huntsmen (9-50). Their conversation is meant to buy time to draw their compatriots from the other levels of the tower.

Upper Level: Study and Bedroom

Here is found a collapsed wooden bedframe, another pair of leather chairs, a tripod of heating (see new magic items), a beautiful teak desk (250 gp), another carpet (125 gp), a bookshelf, and an armoire. The floor is covered with bone fragments and bits of gristle, as this is where the ogre magi sometimes consume their victims. Two ogre magi are busily devouring a bestial varumani, while three goblin slaves look on in terror. If combat breaks out in the entrance level, all inhabitants rush to join the fray.

The armoire holds seventeen silken robes of various colors and styles, from formal robes to evening gowns (10-100 gp each). The desk is empty save for a scroll of protection against possession. Atop the desk, however, are two, 18"-tall solid gold bookends carved as dragons (2,000 gp the pair) and a set of keys (both gold and platinum) to the Obsidian Gates (5-6D). On the bookshelves are the following: Toth in All His Forms; the Trifold Tome of Theodore the Wise; the Eighth Collegium – Fact or Fiction?; On Friends and Enemies; Great Villains of Archontos, part II: Kegfiller the Proedros; Lexicon of Mithric; The Lives of the Noble Founders; On the Errors of the Sortians; and Plotina's Recipe Book (see Arden Vul books for all).

Lower Level: Laboratory and Charnel House

The base of the tower contains a wizard's laboratory, with two work tables, alchemical equipment, and supplies. It is also where the ogre magi torment their victims before carving them up. The floor is stained with blood, and a pile of cleaned bones lies in one corner. The glassware, retorts, mortars, and so forth are of fine quality, and worth 2,500 gp. A crate stuck under the workbench holds a small fortune in platinum: a 2-lb bag of platinum shavings worth 500 gp, and 2 20-lb bars each worth 5,000 gp. Also in the box is a codex entitled Platinum Portals: an Improvement on the Standard Silver Models; the author is one Cornelius of Arden Vul, the former resident of the tower (whose bones are in the pile). Amid the alchemical supplies are 5 potions: potions of plant control, treasure finding, oil of impact, oil of etherealness, and a philter of love.

Currently Walid and one goblin slave are here, carving up a dead human adventurer whom he charmed and slew elsewhere in the Halls. The adventurer's gear includes a suit of chain mail, a ring of clumsiness, 77 gp, and five pink pearls (100 gp).

Inhabitants:

1. Walid, chief of the ogre magi: SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90', 150' flying (Class B); HD 7+2; HP 55; #AT 1; Dmg 3-14. Special attacks: charm person 1/day; sleep 1/day; ray of cold 1/day. Special defenses: fly (12 turns); become invisible; darkness 10' radius; polymorph to human form; regenerate 1 HP/rd; assume gaseous form. Walid attacks and saves as a 9 HD monster. He wears a periapt of proof against poison and a ring of higher purpose (see new magic items), and wields a wand of illusion and a crossbow of accuracy +3 (with 12 bolts +2). He is unaware of the purpose of the ring, but knows it is magical.
2. 4 normal ogre magi: SZ L; AL CE; AC 4; MV 90', 150' flying (Class B); HD 5+2; HP 38, 37, 36, 34; #AT 1; Dmg 1-12 or by weapon. Special attacks: charm person 1/day; sleep 1/day; ray of cold 1/day. Special defenses: fly (12 turns); become invisible; darkness 10' radius; polymorph to human form; regenerate 1 HP/rd; assume gaseous form.
3. Seven goblin slaves: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 6, 5, 5, 4, 4, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.

Treasure:

See text.

9-71: The Rimpled Run

This river flows from the lake (9-65) towards the north and east. The current is noticeable if not particularly strong, as the river bed has a gradual declination.

9-72: Northeastern Plateau

This narrow plateau is the companion to area 9-49, albeit on the north side of the Rimpled Run (9-71). It is a bit less tall than 9-49, standing only 15' above the level of the lake and 10' above area 9-73. A set of stone stairs cut into an outcropping leads down to area 9-73.

The stumps of six basalt columns that once reached to the cavern ceiling stand alongside the river. Atop one of them is the flayed corpse of a quickling; atop another is the charred and flayed corpse of a lesser varumani.

9-73: Northeastern Mushroom Grove

The small area between the heqeti causeway (9-75) and the Rimpled Run (9-71) is filled with more colossal mushrooms. The grove here is dark, as it is composed primarily of blue trumpets and cloud caps (see new flora). Four shriekers also wander slowly through the area. Triggering the shriekers's noise causes the heqeti in areas 9-78 to 9-81 to be on high alert for 3-8 turns, and provokes an immediate roll on the appropriate random encounters chart.

Should the dam on Sub-Level 6 (SL6-25) be destroyed, a portion of the groves in a zone extending from 9-65 to 9-6 will be swept clear of anything that is not stone (including mushrooms and shriekers). After 7-10 hours, this area will drain, leaving a layer of sticky muck.

Inhabitants:

1. 4 shriekers: SZ L; AL N; AC 7; MV 10'; HD 3; HP 19, 17, 16, 13; #AT 0; Dmg nil. Special attacks: noise.

9-74: Stone Faces

The ancient heqeti carved two monstrous, 15' faces onto the flattened walls of this corner of the cavern.

One face is a depiction of Kauket (see new monsters): an ovoid face, with saucer-like empty eyes, and a quarter-moon-like, toothless maw. The stone of the face is old, pitted, and slowly exudes a light yellowish, oily substance; it is the same material as the tears of Kauket, but appears in too small a quantity to coalesce into an actual tear. If tasted, however, the liquid acts as a tear of Kauket (see new magic items).

The other face depicts Rimmaq-Isfet (see new monsters): a circular face, three lidless eyes, and an enormous maw that occupies  $\frac{2}{3}$  of the face. The maw is fanged with impossibly narrow, sharp teeth, and is surrounded by a forest of feelers/tentacles. Like Kauket's, this face also oozes imperceptibly; the ooze is viscous but clear, and acts like the sweat of Rimmaq-Isfet (see new magic items) if tasted.

Surrounding the two giant faces are 337 smaller faces, only 2' high. These are far cruder than the two major ones, and represent all of the heqeti builders (see new monsters) that have governed the heqeti in Arden Vul over the millennia. The smaller faces are all slightly different.

9-75: Heqeti Causeway

This ancient, pitted stone causeway offers the primary entrance to the heqeti dwellings and ziggurat on Level 10. It stands 10' above the level of the mushroom groves and is pebbled and greasy like all heqeti construction. Short, steep staircases lead down from the causeway to the groves on either side, while a third leads downward into the waters of the lake (9-65).

Six pairs of carved granite pillars once stood along the causeway. Those pillars were all broken in antiquity, leaving stumps between 6"-18" high. The modern heqeti have driven 5'-tall, black iron rods into each of the stumps. The ends of these rods are curved into sharpened hooks, from each of which depends a moldering and flayed corpse. The naked corpses include three (scorched) bestial varumani, five humans, a dwarf, two goblins, and a halfling. These horrific remains attract numerous insects.

9-76: Heqeti Ritual Platform

The causeway widens here into a platform with three semi-circular projections. It lies 10' above the floor of the mushroom groves, and is composed of pitted, pebbled, greasy stonework of great antiquity. A 3'-tall oblong basin occupies each of the semi-circular projections into the cavern. Each basin is filled with a different liquid: the northern one with blood, the western one with water, and the southern one with dried viscera and guts from mammalian creatures. In the center of the platform is a heptagonal platform on which sits the broken stump of a once-grand statue (formerly it was Kauket).

There is a 15% chance that the heqeti are holding an exsanguination ritual here. If so, four hoppers, four chosen, a builder and a weaver are present, along with a tongue-less victim and their special exsanguination device (see 9-79). The ritual party is armed (of course), but also possesses some stone cups, bowls, and spoons. The ritual takes about 30 minutes. It commences with chanting near the stump of the statue, before moving to the northern basin where the victim is exsanguinated. The heqeti proceed to the southern basin, where the builders flay the victim, and ends with the builders washing themselves at the western basin while the chosen hang the flayed corpse on one of the hooks at 9-75. The victim will be a helpless goblin.

Inhabitants: (15%)

1. 4 heqeti hoppers (see new monsters): see stats at 9-78 and 9-81
2. 4 heqeti chosen (see new monsters): see stats at 9-78 and 9-81
3. 1 heqeti builder (see new monsters): see stats at 9-78 and 9-81
4. 1 heqeti weaver (see new monsters): see stats at 9-78 and 9-81
5. A mute goblin victim: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 4; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.

9-77: Abandoned Heqeti Chamber

Due to the cave-in to the east, this ancient heqeti chamber is unoccupied. The doorway leading to the collapsed eastern corridor is trapped.

Trapped Stone Door (glyphs of warding): Two glyphs of warding have been cast here by heqeti weavers. One is a glyph of lightning (doing 20 hp damage to those who do not save) and the other is a glyph of energy drain. The glyphs are placed so that opening the door triggers both. The noise of the glyph of lightning is likely (75% chance) to alert the heqeti at 9-78.

9-78: Bone Portcullis and Heqeti Guardpost

An imposing bone portcullis blocks access to and from this chamber. The portcullis is made of thick, femur-sized bones lashed together with sinew. The lower portion of the portcullis slides into holes in the floor. A simple winch within area 9-78 allows it to be raised and lowered. If a ritual has been taking place in 9-76, the portcullis will be raised.

The chamber is heqeti-made, with glistening, freshly-oiled, pebbled surfaces. The floor is painted with a black paint on which are numerous white teardrops. The winch used to raise the portcullis lies to the left of the portcullis.

A strong party of heqeti guard this chamber, as it is the main route to their dwellings on Level 10. The guardpost area includes a weaver, a builder, six chosen, and six hoppers (see new monsters for all). Initially the builder and the three of the chosen are present here; the others are relaxing in area 9-81, but join their comrades in two rounds if needed. If combat is going badly, one of the chosen mounts the riding salamander in 9-80 (see new monsters) and departs to alert the Great Tongue (see Level 10 introduction and 10-47) of the arrival of powerful intruders. In the case of the direst necessity, the weaver will break his pledge of Rimmaq-Isfet (see new magic items), thereby summoning a keqemander (see new monsters) to his aid.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 heqeti builder (see new monsters), 6th/6th-level fighter/cleric of Rimmaq-Isfet: SZ M; AL CE; AC 1; MV 90', 120' swimming; HD 6; HP 46; #AT 1; Dmg 4-9 (short sword +2 of wounding). Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice. Possessions: heqeti mail armor (-2 to AC); short sword +2 of wounding, amulet of natural armor +2 (see new magic items). Spells: bless, command, cure light wounds, light, fear; chant, hold person (x2), silence 15' radius, speak with animals; dispel magic, curse.
2. 3 heqeti chosen (see new monsters), as 6th-level fighters: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60', 150' swimming; HD 6; HP 42, 40, 37; #AT 2; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 1-6 (bite). Special attacks: hop; acid tongue (1-6 acid damage); +1 damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold and water/ice. The javelins of these chosen are smeared with Kauket's vision (see Arden Vul items).
3. 3 heqeti hoppers (see new monsters), as 6th-level fighters: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60', 150' swimming; HD 6; HP 44, 40, 39; #AT 2; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 1-6 (bite). Special attacks: hop; +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice.

4. 1 keqemander demon (see new monsters): SZ L; AL CE; AC -2; MV 90', 150' flying (Class D); HD 12; HP 78; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/3-18; MR 40%. Constant abilities: dread (-1 to saves); infravision. Special attacks: acid spit (3-10 dmg; 30' range, every other round); cause fear; darkness (10' radius); exude acid with chance to degrade armor; use a symbol of discord. Special defenses: only hit by magic weapons; half damage from cold, electricity, fire, and gas; become invisible. Special: levitate; telekinesis (4,000 gp weight); project image; teleport without error; 50% chance to gate in either another keqemander or a Type I-IV demon.

Treasure:

The builder wears a copper torc chased with platinum (550 gp) and assorted rings, arm bands and amulets worth another 450 gp. The chosen each wear baubles valued at 225 gp.

9-79: Heqeti Chamber

This darkened chamber has all the usual features of heqeti construction. A heqeti riding salamander is tied to an iron ring set in the floor. In case of serious assault, one of the chosen from 9-78 will mount the riding salamander and flee down area 9-82 to warn the Great Tongue (see Level 10 introduction and 10-47).

Inhabitants:

1. 1 riding salamander (see new monsters): SZ L; AL N; AC 6; MV 60', 90' swimming; HD 6; HP 35; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12.

9-80: The Exsanguinator

This side chamber holds a sinister, 4'-tall and 7'-long contraption made of wood, bone, and leather. It is roughly man sized, with strong, iron-reinforced extensions for arms, legs and head and a pair of jointed, wood-mounted, razor-sharp bone daggers attached near the head. This is the heqeti exsanguinator, used for rituals in 9-76. It can be pushed there by 2 chosen, or 3 if it contains a victim. It works by strapping the victim onto the contraption, then adjusting the jointed 'arms' with the bone daggers until the sharpened bone begins to slice the jugular vein of the victim. The heqeti are masters of doing this slowly, such that the blood flows below into the copper vessels they use to collect it. The exsanguinator detects strongly of evil, and any paladin would feel it her duty to destroy the device.

9-81: Heqeti Barracks

This chamber serves as a living quarters for the heqeti assigned to guard the gate at 9-78. To the south end of the room is a 10'-deep pool running across the width of the chamber. The east and west walls are lined with eight stone sleeping benches (4'x4'x6'). To the north are a pair of decapitated and charred varumani hanging from hooks on the wall; the heqeti use them for target practice. The walls and ceiling are painted an unsettling mauve color; the floor is black, with numerous white teardrops.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 heqeti weaver (see new monsters), as a 7th/7th-level magic user/ cleric of Kauket: SZ M; AL CE; AC 3; MV 120', 90' swimming; HD 7; HP 34; #AT 1; Dmg 5-10 (footman's mace +2). Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses:

psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice. Possessions: amulet of natural armor +2 (see new magic items); staff of healing (4 charges); copper-headed footman's mace +2; two glass spheres of arcane assistance (one of arcane warding, one of protection) (see new magic items); potion of gaseous form. Magic user spells: enlarge, jump, magic missile, shield; continual light, levitate, ray of enfeeblement; fireball, protection from normal missiles; polymorph other. Cleric spells: bles, command (x2), create water, cure light wounds; chant, hold person (x2), resist fire, silence 15' radius; animate dead, blindness; sticks to snakes. Spell book: dancing lights, detect magic, enlarge, jump, magic missile, protection from good, read magic, shield, sleep; darkness 15' radius, invisibility, knock, mirror image, ray of enfeeblement, strength; blink, dispel magic, gust of wind, lightning bolt, slow.

2. 3 heqeti chosen (see new monsters), as 6th-level fighters: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60', 150' swimming; HD 6; HP 42, 40, 37; #AT 2; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 1-6 (bite). Special attacks: hop; acid tongue (1-6 acid damage); +1 damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold and water/ice. The javelins of these chosen are smeared with Kauket's vision (see Arden Vul items).

3. 3 heqeti hoppers (see new monsters), as 5th-level fighters: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60', 150' swimming; HD 5; HP 38, 34, 33; #AT 2; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 1-6 (bite). Special attacks: hop; +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice.

Treasure:

The weaver wears assorted jewelry and amulets worth 750 gp, while the chosen wear gewgaws worth 225 gp each.

9-82: Broad Corridor to Level 10-1

This 20'-wide corridor slopes downward about 300' to the heqeti complex on Level 10 (10-1). Every 20' a green-luminescent fungal pod has been affixed to the oily walls. Every 60' the corridor descends down a flight of stairs built for non-human feet.

9-83: Northern Mushroom Groves

North of the Rimpled Run lies another large grove of colossal mushrooms. Like its southern counterpart, the grove here includes specimens from all the varieties listed in the new flora appendix. These mushrooms grow on a deep (20') bed of humus. The entire area is lit with a low orange phosphorescence and echoes with the sounds of crickets, insects, and small animal life (e.g., bairdara – see new monsters). A shallow, stagnant pond (9-84) has accumulated in the center of the groves, fed by two often-dry streams from the west and north. It should be noted that most of the northern groves lie under a 50' ceiling and not under the open portion of the chasm.

Unlike the southern groves, however, this region is untended by any sentient beings. As a result, the northern groves are home to a variety of dangerous monsters. These include a fungal render (see new monsters), several shambling mounds, numerous shriekers, three tenebrous worms, and a handful of land urchins. The fungal render prefers to lurk on the northern side of the pond, while the shambling mounds wander to the south and west of the pond.

The humus contains the ancient skeletal remains of hundreds of heqeti, varuda, varumani, and humans, all of whom fought and died in the chasm floor millennia ago. Should Celsus Torquatus (9-104) pursue intruders into the groves, he will be able to raise 5-8 corpses as ghosts per round.

Should the dam on Sub-Level 6 (SL6-25) be destroyed, a portion of the groves in a zone extending from 9-65 northwards to 9-76 will be swept clear of anything that is not stone (including mushrooms). After 7-10 hours, this area will drain, leaving a layer of sticky muck.

Searching the Fungal Forest: For each turn spent searching the forest, it is possible (1 in 8 chance) for the PCs to come across something interesting. If so indicated, use the table at 9-4 to determine what is found.

Locating Specific Mushroom Species: To determine what species are nearby at any given moment, roll on the table at 9-4. If PCs are familiar with colossal mushrooms and announce that they are looking for a specific species, then it takes 2-12 turns to locate a specimen of that species.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 fungal render (see new monsters): SZ L; AL N; AC 9 (3 for tendrils); MV 30'; HD 12; HP 87; #AT 6; Dmg special. Special attacks: if two or more tendrils hit, 1-4 HP damage per tendril per round; crush attack (4-24 damage) Special defenses: tendrils take 10 HP damage; regenerate 2 HP/turn and 1 tendril/turn.
2. 3 shambling mounds: SZ L; AL N; AC 0; HD 10; HP 75, 72, 68; #AT 2; Dmg 2-16/2-16. Special attacks: suffocation. Special defenses: immune to fire; lightning causes it to grow; cold does ½ or no damage.
3. 6 land urchins: SZ S; AL N; AC 3; MV 120'; HD 3+3; HP 25, 22, 21, 20, 20, 19, 19; #AT 2-12; Dmg 1-2(x12). Special attacks: paralysis. Special defenses: gas cloud.
4. 8 shriekers: SZ L; AL N; AC 7; MV 10'; HD 3; HP 22, 20, 19, 17, 16, 15, 15, 13; #AT 0; Dmg nil. Special attacks: noise.
5. 3 tenebrous worms (see 9-83): SZ M; AL N; AC 1; MV 150'; HD 10; HP 70, 63, 59; #AT 1; Dmg 2-20. Special attacks: acid. Special defenses: poison bristles.

9-84: Stagnant Pool

A stagnant pool of smelly liquid sits in the center of the northern mushroom groves. The pool varies in depth, but is typically only 1-3' deep. It is fed by channels from the west and north; those channels are often dry, but occasionally channel liquids hurled into the chasm from above. The pool cannot sustain life, but is nonetheless an attraction for the shambling mounds and the fungal render, which may often be found near its shores. See 9-83 for details.

Treasure:

Four gems and a bejeweled necklace are buried in the muck of the pool: two deep green spinels (100 gp each), a deep blue spinel (500 gp), a blue star sapphire (1,000 gp), and a silver and emerald necklace (2,000 gp). Searchers have a 10% chance per turn of finding one of the six valuable items. After three valuable items are found, the chance decreases to 5%.

9-85: Western Plateau

This rocky plateau sits 10' above the northern mushroom groves (9-83) and the lake (9-65). Sloping gently from the chasm wall to its eastern and southern edges, the plateau is usually slick with moisture and liquids tossed into the chasm from above. Movement here is halved. Those using light and noise are sure to alert the shambling mounds (9-83) and other chasm denizens to their presence.

9-86: Dangerous Path to Level 7 (7-147)

A dangerous path to Level 7 commences here at the edge of the mushroom grove. This path is narrow, slippery, and fraught with danger, as it is nothing more than a set of occasional 'steps' interspersed with hand-holds, foot-holds, and cracks. The bestial varumani use it to access the chasm floor without the knowledge of the troll thegn (7-30). The path rises 300' to area 7-147. Given its primitive nature, this route is extremely dangerous. Those climbing or descending it must roll 3d6 under DEX every 100' or fall off. Thieves, or others with special climbing skills, only need roll 2d6 under DEX.

9-87: Midden with Buried Statue

The southwestern portion of the plateau (9-85) is open to the chasm and has, over the centuries, become a giant trash heap. Bits of bone, smashed chamber pots, broken leather straps, odd pieces of iron implements, masonry chunks and the occasional fragment of carved stonework combine together in a heap that is 5' tall on its edges and 8' tall in its center. There is nothing of value among the trash, as the midden is regularly picked over by scavengers. It smells rather sharply of effluence.

Still, the midden conceals a 10'-tall statue of the Archontean deity, Chibalba, that is almost fully buried in the refuse. The statue appears as a hooded, cloaked figure holding a staff in one hand and a lantern in the other. It stands on a mosaic set into the plateau, one that depicts pastoral subterranean scenes, including lizards, mushrooms, sarcophagi, bats, altars, etc. The base of the statue reads: "Chibalba, lord of the Deeps, watches over these halls. Summon him if thy need is great."

Should someone clear the refuse away from the statue (a task that takes 3-6 hours) and stand on the mosaic, it is possible to summon an avatar of the deity by either 1) stating Chibalba's name three times in a row, or 2) declaiming "I summon thee, Chibalba!" The aid imparted by the avatar will depend on the needs of those making the invocation. The GM should use his/her best judgment in determining which situation is most appropriate.

Situation	Aid offered
In combat	Avatar fights for duration of one combat: AC 0, HD 8, HP 58, #AT 1, damage 1-10
Badly wounded	Cure critical wounds x2
Lightly wounded	Cure serious wounds x2
Uninjured	Detect traps, infravision, and locate place (see new spells), all good for 10 turns

Speaking in the Mithric language, the avatar describes in a solemn, deep voice what aid it will impart. This advice takes one round to describe, after which the avatar will not communicate in any way.

Summoning the avatar is only possible once per month. Should a cleric of Chibalba invoke the deity, then all four types of aid will be proffered to the cleric and his friends (with the combat avatar serving the cleric for one whole day, or until it is destroyed, whichever comes first).

Note: This is the third such statue of Chibalba to be found in Arden Vul; the others appear at 4-69 and 8-66.

Should the dam on Sub-Level 6 (SL6-25) be destroyed, most of the loose trash in the midden will be swept away down the river, fully revealing the statue of Chibalba and the entrances to 9-88. After 7-10 hours, this area will drain, leaving a thin layer of sticky muck over the stone and a few bits of remaining trash.

9-88: Cave with Secrets

The two entrances to this 20'-tall cave have become completely obscured as the level of the midden (9-87) has risen. Several hours of laborious excavation is necessary to unblock them. Within is a fallen statue, apparently of a human warrior.

The fallen 'statue' is in fact a killer mimic, who has been hibernating for decades while waiting for prey to dig through the blocked entrances.

Secret Doors (northwest, southeast, southwest): These three well-concealed secret doors are difficult to detect (1 in 8). The rudishva built them of steel fronted with natural stone in manner that is remarkably realistic. None of the three opens from the outside; indeed, attempting to use force or magic on any of the three causes the smaller secret doors to slide open and the point defense arrays to activate, targeting anyone in the cave. The doors can only be opened using the panel at 9-89.

Rudishva Point Defense Arrays (see new technological items): The northwest and southeast secret doors are located 10' up the wall of the cavern. They are 5' ovals that press inward 6" before sliding into slots in the wall. Behind each door is a 5'-diameter nook that contains a rudishva point defense array (see new technological items). These items are linked to the controller at 9-89, and are hardwired to fire at anyone attempting to force entry through the secret door to the bastion. Physical damage to the western secret door or any attempt to cast powerful magicks (knock, passwall, etc.) at the western door activates the point defense arrays. As they contain motion and heat sensors, they fire continuously until the chamber is empty. Each array strikes as a 10 HD fighter, attacking three times every two rounds, and inflicting 6-36 HP damage on a target (impedes regeneration).

Inhabitants:

1. 1 semi-intelligent, killer mimic: SZ L; AL N; AC 7; MV 30'; HD 9; HP 61; #AT 1; Dmg 3-12. Special attacks: glue. Special defenses: perfectly mimic stone or wood.

9-89: Rudishva Bastion: Control Niche

In the southern niche is a non-portable controller for the point defense arrays found in 9-88 (see new technological items) and the secret door leading to this chamber.

The controller is comprised of a chest-height console with view-screen that is powered by a rudishva greater power supply (see new technological items). It requires an operator's key-card (copies are found in 9-94 and 9-96) to activate. The controller has a single screen divided into two sub-screens, plus two power switches, a dial, two joysticks, and a large red button. The screens are connected wirelessly to cameras on the point defense arrays. While the arrays are fully automated and remain in an active state even after all these centuries, an intelligent and experienced operator can add nuance to the system by switching over to manual control. Doing so allows one to select various settings, including motion-sensitive firing (the current setting), sweep firing, stutter firing, arc-control, and heat-sensitive firing, plus variation between projectiles (lethal rounds, rubber bullets, gas pellets, etc.). Manual control requires dexterous use of the joysticks. Those without formal training can only master the system by succeeding at a roll of 5D6 under INT and then a roll of 5D6 under DEX. The switches turn on or off power to the arrays, while the dial controls their intensity, that is, damage, from 1-6 to 6-36 (currently the setting is on high). The red button opens the secret door to 9-88. Beneath the console are three greater rudishva power supplies (see new technological items), daisy-chained together to provide power to the console and the point defense arrays. Two are empty, but the third still has 33% of its capacity remaining.

Against the west wall is a 5'x15' view screen that displays a real-time image of either 9-88 or 9-87. The view alternates every minute automatically, but a wall-mounted trackball allows one to switch images manually. The images are derived from extremely small cameras mounted on the walls of both 9-87 and 9-88; the cameras have night-vision capabilities, and can thus display heat signatures even when no light is present. Those sitting in the great chair (9-11) and activating the rune of communication will appear on this screen, where their message can be heard. If desired, the operator can then use the console to dismantle the point defense arrays and open the door to 9-88.

Secret Door (northeast): This door can only be opened by pressing the red button in the control niche.

9-90: Rudishva Bastion: Chief of Security's Chamber

The door to this modest chamber is a rudishva iris door; it opens only to a silver or yellow rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items).

Within are the quarters of the one-time rudishva chief of security, Pliv-Mol. They include a wall-mounted bed and desk, made of white plasteel, an orange plastic chair affixed to the floor, and a white plasteel wardrobe. Mounted on the north wall is a holographic display screen that alternates pictures of stars, star clusters, and nebulae, cycling through 750 unique images once every ten minutes. The wardrobe contains two orange jumpsuits, some strange footwear (desert boots, but for large feet), and a vinyl bag containing three structural mines (see new technological items). On the desk is a GnuCoder 1000 image screen and a scattering of six data crystals (see new technological items): Letters Home, the Shining Beacon of Glorious Heaven: Technical Specifications of this Yort-Class Exploration Vessel, Diary of Pliv-Mol, Chief of Security, untitled (by Dipra-Jol), Crew Roster, and Allies for Ever! (see Arden Vul books for all).

9-91: Rudishva Transit Shaft

The door to this hall is a rudishva iris door; it opens only to a silver or yellow rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items).

A 40'-square shaft, sheathed in the same white marble and silver grout, extends 1,100' through the Halls, commencing at 5-84 and culminating here. Built by the rudishva as a swift form of transport for their officers, it detects strongly as magical. Anything tossed into the shaft will fall normally, but anything - or anyone - coated in the opalescent liquid is capable of levitation in the pit. Levitation is at the rate of 20' of vertical distance per round. Removal of even 10% of the silver grout cancels the levitation effect. From this point one can use the shaft to access 5-84, 6-164, and 7-146.

The floor of the transit shaft is littered with the bones and equipment of the few non-rudishva who located and attempted to use the shaft.

Two granite chairs occupy the area to the south of the transit shaft. Each chair holds a giant rudishva skeleton (see new monsters). Anyone who exits the transit shaft is met with a harsh query in rudishva from the skeletons. The skeletons mercilessly attack those who do not immediately present a silver or yellow rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items). They also respond in force if attacked from the shaft itself.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 semi-intelligent giant rudishva skeleton: SZ L; AL NE; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8+8; HP 68, 55; #AT 1 or 2; Dmg 3-18 (weapon) or 2-8/2-8 (bone throwing); MR 50%. Special attacks: bone throwing; sonic blast. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; half damage from sharp or edged weapons; half damage from fire; immune to sleep, charm, cold, poison, and paralysis.

Treasure:

A suit of ring mail +3; a light crossbow of speed; 572 ancient silver pennies and 399 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items); a staff of the necromancer with 23 charges (see new magic items); a ring of protection +3; a scroll of protection from petrification; a scroll with the illusionist spells shadow door, permanent illusion, shades, veil, and alter reality; and potions of fire resistance, invulnerability and dispelling (see new magic items).

9-92: Basin Full of Opalescent Liquid

This side chamber holds a softly gurgling basin of black granite that is 15' diameter and 3' deep. The basin is filled with opalescent, sparkly liquid. Anything coated in the liquid will levitate in the shaft (9-91). The coating lasts for an hour, but can, strangely enough, be brushed off easily.

9-93: Rudishva Bastion: Supply Closet

The walls of this chamber are set with wire shelves made of white plasteel. The shelves are mostly empty, save for some waxy, crumpled paper-like substances, each with a set of Rudishva glyphs on one side. Among the scattered wrappers is also a lone rudishva ballistic baton and three empty data crystals for use in GnuCoder-series devices (see new technological items).

9-93A: Empty Niche

When PCs first enter the bastion, an automated rudishva dust ionizer (see new technological items) is found here, partly through its six-hour cleaning routine. The routine takes it on a clockwise circuit through the open areas of the bastion, a fact which may surprise and/or alarm jumpy PCs. Of course the ionizer is completely harmless. It has kept the bastion dust-free for many centuries and could be easily removed and transported elsewhere where it will happily perform the same service.

9-94: Rudishva Bastion: Captain's Quarters

The door to this private chamber is a rudishva iris door; it opens only to a silver or yellow rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items).

Within are the quarters of Leil-Jor, captain of the Beacon. Furnishings include a wall-mounted bed, a wrap-around desk, and a wardrobe. All are made of white plasteel. In addition, a 5'-tall table made of orange plasteel is set into the floor just inside the doorway. Mounted on the south wall is a holographic display screen that alternates pictures of nebulae and random locations within Arden Vul, cycling through 550 unique images once every ten minutes. The wardrobe contains two light blue jumpsuits and some strange footwear (desert boots, but for large feet). On the desk are some rare items: a set of keys (one gold and one platinum) to the Obsidian Gates (5-6D), a GnuCoder 3000 data recorder with a data crystal inserted into it (see new technological items for both), and one of the operator cards to the console in 9-89. The data crystal carries the somewhat unappealing title Solutions to the Propulsion Problem (see Arden Vul books), but is in fact a rather important object for those interested in employing the LOAV-291 Shuttle (see SL13-37B); indeed, it describes the compounds necessary to fly the shuttle (see SL13-37).

Treasure:

GnuCoder 3000; data crystal; operator card to 9-89; command tablet, aka tablet of the Beacon (see new technological items for all).

9-95: Rudishva Bastion: First Officer's Quarters

The rudishva iris door to this chamber is partly open, with the desiccated and charred corpse of a rudishva in a light-blue jumpsuit jammed into the aperture, feet in the hallway and head in the room beyond. The door can be opened normally with a silver or yellow rudishva identity plaque.

Within are the quarters of Utor-Val, first officer of the Beacon. Furnishings include a wall-mounted bed, a wrap-around, wall-mounted desk, and a wardrobe. All are made of white plasteel. Mounted on the south wall is a holographic display screen that alternates pictures of nebulae and alien landscapes, cycling through 550 unique images once every ten minutes. The wardrobe contains two light blue jumpsuits and some strange footwear (desert boots, but for large feet). Although a GnuCoder 1000 image screen (see new technological items) rests on the desk, no data crystals are in evidence. In the entrance-way are two rudishva-sized manikins, each dressed in outlandish, non-rudishva attire. One has numerous belts strapped to its body, with numerous bits of jewelry, glass, and small objects depending from them. The other is dressed in furs and leather and holds a spear. Plasteel plaques identify the manikins as, respectively (and in Rudishva Glyphik), "heqeti" and "human".

Trap (explosive): Both the wardrobe and the bed are trapped with small charges of plastic explosive connected wirelessly to a controller affixed to the underside of the desk. The explosives detonate unless they are disabled by inputting a four digit code (5555) into the controller. Opening the wardrobe or searching the bed cause detonations worth 6-36 HP damage to all within 15' of the blast.

GM Note: Utor-Val was one of the few rudishva who did not handle the long exile particularly well. He grew obsessed with the local 'primitive cultures' (e.g., the manikins), and became paranoid. When the heqeti attack came, he was caught trying to flee to his chamber; he was killed in the doorway itself.

Treasure:

The small bits and bobs of jewelry and glass on the heqeti manikin are worth a total of 237 gp. The spear is ancient, but usable. Inside the wardrobe is a rudishva laser pistol (see new technological items) and two full rudishva lesser power supplies. The corpse of Utor-Val carries a silver rudishva identity plaque and a command bracelet (see new technological items).

9-96: Rudishva Bastion: Assembly Ground

This chamber was designed as a meeting and assembly area for officers of the rudishva hegemony. A huge, 20'x10' table that rises 5' from the floor occupies the southern portion of the chamber. Although no chairs are present, two slim t-shaped 'roosts' made of plasteel are set into the floor at the west end of the table. Several corpses litter the chamber: two of kaliyani just inside the northern entrance, two rudishva at the south end, behind the table, and two heqeti at the entrance to 9-97. All the corpses are ancient but show signs of charring (energy weapons); the heqeti corpses are particularly badly charred.

Trap (fire): The corridor from 9-97 to 9-96 is trapped with a sophisticated sensor that causes a fiery blast to engulf anyone not of the rudishva, varumani, kaliyani or varuda races. The fire damage does 6-48 HP damage (save vs spells for ½ damage). There is no practical way to disarm this trap without extensive programming ability; it could be done at the control niche (9-89), but it would take someone fluent in Logik (see World of Archontos appendix – Languages) and familiar with rudishva technology, and would still require a roll of 3d10 under INT to disarm the trap.

Treasure:

The rudishva corpses bear platinum, silver and sky blue rudishva identity plaques (see new technological items). On one of the corpses are two additional plastic cards: one of the two yellow 'captain's cards' necessary for access to the bridge via the private teleporter (T24), and a second operator's card to the console in 9-89. Two melted laser rifles lie next to them; they are useless. Fek-Prail is lying atop a satchel that contains two glassteel flasks, one containing 3 quarts of centrifuged arcnum essence and the other containing 3 quarts of deuterium. These substances are necessary to operate the shuttle (see SL13-37B).

GM Note: The rudishva corpses are of Pliv-Mol, the chief of security (see 9-90) and Fek-Prail, the chemical engineer. During the surprise attack a strike team of kaliyani and heqeti descended the transit shaft (9-91) and took the senior rudishva officers by surprise. The first officer was killed by his quarters (9-95), but the chief of security almost managed to make it to the teleport nodes before getting trapped behind the conference table here. He was joined by the chemical engineer, who arrived from the shuttle bay. They held off their foes for a while before being overwhelmed. The two heqeti attempted to use the teleport niches and were fried by the trap.

9-97: Rudishva Teleport Nodes

This chamber possesses no 90-degree angles, is spotlessly clean, and is sheathed with black granite panels in the usual octagonal pattern. All of the three niches contain 5'-diameter circles of silvery material inset into the floor. Only two, however, have the usual 10"x10" squares of the same silvery material affixed to the wall. Each square has a different rune etched into the silvery material.

The third, northern niche (T24) is blocked by a rudishva force shield. Next to the shield is a 10"-square golden plaque inset in the wall. The force shield may be circumvented in one of two ways: 1) when either of the two special yellow identity plaques (the 'captain's card' – see 5-98 and 9-96) is touched to the golden square; or 2) when disintegration is cast upon the force shield. In the latter case, the spell causes an electrical explosion that does 4-24 HP damage to all within 15'. Note: although this force shield is similar to those at 5-90A, SL6-37, and SL9-50, there is no motion-activated fiery dancer in this shield.

The rudishva built these niches to be part of their teleportation network. To activate them, one stands on a silvery circle and touches the adjacent silvery square; teleportation to the appropriate location is instantaneous.

Trap (fire): The corridor leading to 9-96 is trapped; see that entry for more information.

Teleport Nodes:

T19: access to 8-52

T20: access to SL13-38 (shuttle bay)

T24: access to SL14-7

9-98: Archontean Pediment

This section of the level is elevated, rising 20' above the surrounding cavern floor, and is sheathed in granite flagstones. Several sets of stairs lead down from the pediment. Two ballistae are mounted on pedestals overlooking the mushroom forest; these are still functional, although no bolts are present. Four imperial stone guardians (see new monsters) sit on the pediment; they are marked "G" on the map. The southernmost guardian, although intact, is inert and no longer functions. The other three guardians are active, and respond to motion and sound with lethal force. The guardians do not detect invisible entities, and are unable to pursue foes down the narrow tunnel to 9-100.

In the western ell, by the cavern wall, is found a set of 2"-tall paving stones arranged in a 6'-diameter ring. Inset into the floor next to the ring is a rectangle 48" long by 8" tall; the rectangle is divided into six interior compartments, each 8" square. Together these elements form a Thothian teleportation ring (see new magic items). To activate the ring, one must place six colored glass activation squares into the inset according to a sequence that matches the 'address' of the ring to which one wishes to travel. Once the squares are placed, a brief shimmer of energy is visible over the ring. At this point the user has 1 round to collect the squares and enter the ring, after which anyone in the ring is teleported without error to address indicated by that sequence of squares. If the glass activation squares are not collected and/or if the travelers do not possess a second set of them, they are likely to be stranded in the location to which they have just teleported. The address of this ring is as follows: BL-YE-GR-RE-BK-WH (see new magic items for explanation). None of the glass activation squares necessary to operate the circle are present.

Inhabitants:

1. 3 imperial stone guardians (see new monsters): SZ L; AL N; AC -2; MV 90'; HD 8+3; HP 64, 57, 53; #AT 2; Dmg 3-18/3-18; MR 50%. Special defenses: +2 or better weapons to hit; immune to missiles (including magic missile), fire, cold, mind-affecting spells (e.g. charm), and most immobilizing spells (immune to entangle, hold monster, web).

9-99: Radical Spriggans

The sound of numerous small drums beating together in rhythm emanates from this cave; the drum beats are punctuated every five minutes or so by a set of ragged screams. Within the cave are six Arden Vul spriggans (see new monsters) huddled around a 4'-tall statuette of a winged faerie.

These spriggans have gone rogue, abandoning their comrades (8-155) and the task assigned to them by their Tiarna (lord), namely to locate the missing spriggans (see 7-62). Unhappy with their mission, these six have adopted radical views, and are trying to convince each other that they have been slaves to the faerie lords (Tiarnaí). As a result, they have made a pact to reject all the aspects of spriggan culture that they consider 'slave' attributes, including 'silly games', lewd songs, and general capering. They have firmly sworn off, for instance, The Green Silken Robe, and immediately attack anyone who attempts to sing it to or with them (although each must make a save vs spells to resist joining in on the chorus). Instead, they are eager to talk about their alleged oppression at the hands of the Tiarnaí and about social justice in general. To this end, they enjoy reciting Beat-style poetry with hand-drums as accompaniment. Their current favorite is a new composition called "Scream!," to which they all listen intently before joining in with soul-tearing screams as appropriate:

Scream!

Caper. Smile. Sing.

Find the treasure, wait nearby.

Tiarnaí order and we comply.

Caper. Smile. Sing.

Sharpened spear, Sharpened teeth.

Tiarnaí send us off to death.

Caper. Smile. Sing.

Growing big, shrinking small.

It's always at the Tiarnaí's call.

Caper. Smile. Sing.

Suck the marrow, drink the red.

The Tiarnaí always want more dead.

Caper. Smile. Sing.

WAIT!

Why not tell the Tiarnaí no?

Why not work to bring them low?

Walk. Frown. Recite.

Spriggans shall indeed unite,

And together we shall ... SCREAM!

Despite their radical slogans and enlightened outlook, these spriggans are currently at a bit of a loss about what to do with themselves. Cautious visitors are greeted warmly and invited to sit down and share in the radical rhetoric; those who play along and agree with the spriggans' complaints will become 'best comrades', to whom the spriggans will offer alcohol and information. Those who disagree or even don't agree warmly are likely (50%, plus an additional 10% chance per turn) to be attacked as 'oppressors'. Singing or mentioning The Green Silken Robe, or approvingly mentioning the spriggans in 7-62 or 8-155, causes this group to attack instantly. Strangely enough, also reporting the death of the other spriggans will also cause combat.

The spriggans can reveal the following information to their 'best comrades': the location of Walid the ogre mage (9-70), the location and some of the powers of Celsus Torquatius (9-104), the existence of the shambling mounds (9-83), the existence of the buried statue (9-87), and the fact that there is something 'dodgy' about area 9-108. They might also trade their potions for high quality alcohol or other 'interesting' admixtures.

Secret Door (north): The secret door is normal to locate, and opens by singing or playing any bar of music with at least five different notes. A thief may (3 in 6) notice that a musical note is scribed nearby (a hint about the door). The spriggans are unaware of the secret door.

Inhabitants:

1. 6 Arden Vul spriggans (see new monsters): SZ S or L; AL CN; AC 4 (5); MV 90' (150'); HD 5 (8+3); HP 38 (65), 36 (63), 34 (61), 32 (60), 31 (59), 30 (55); #AT 1 (2); Dmg 2-5 (knife) or (2-12/2-12); MR 25%. Thief skills: PP 75%, OL 78%, FRT 70%, MS 77%, HS 64%, HN 35%, CW 81%, RL 40%. Special attacks: confusion 1/day. Special defenses: immune to poison, charm, and mind-affecting spells; healed by magic missiles. Special: grow to giant size; affect normal fires, faerie fire, trip, detect magic, shatter.

Treasure:

Each spriggan carries a pouch with 75 gp, 15 gp and a potion; one of the spriggan also has a contraband tin whistle. The six potions are as follows: potions of plant control, human control, diminution, the berserk, deafening light, and hostile levitation (for the last three, see new magic items). The 4'-tall statuette depicts a slim, winged faerie sitting on a toadstool; it is ceramic and brightly colored, but strangely heavy. Breaking off the ceramic covering reveals an ancient statuette of the dwarven all-father, Zodarim, in his guise as the First Tapper, holding a chisel and hammer (see Gods of Magae in World of Archontos appendix). This inner statuette is quite rare and worth at least 9,500 gp. If sold as a heavy piece of painted ceramic, however, it will bring only 300 gp.

9-99A: Narrow Tunnel up to SL10A-8

This 5'-wide passage winds upward until it reaches the cavern outside the citadel of the Sun-Scarred Knights (SL10A-8). Periodic steps have been hewn out of the rock along this tunnel.

Secret Door (south): The door is easy to find (1 in 3), mostly because five faded musical notes have been painted on it in red. It opens by singing or playing a bar of music with at least five different notes.

Areas 9-100 to 9-107: The Archontean Praitorion

This small complex was built in the aftermath of Archon Marius's conquest of the heqeti. He ordered a command center to be built here, to watch against heqeti recrudescence. By tradition, the complex – which came to be known at the Praitorion – was the home to an elite tagma of guardsmen and the resting place of one of the great treasures of Arden Vul, the tablet of the Beacon (see 9-107). When the Archontean retreated some 1,200 years ago, the Praitorion was abandoned. Over the intervening twelve centuries, it has suffered structurally from seismic activity, particularly around the spot where area 9-100 connected to area 9-98. And yet the tablet still rests in its reliquary, thanks mostly to the efforts of a vengeance aspect of Sekhmet (9-104), whose fearsome powers have kept the Praitorion clear of looters.

9-100: The Praitorion: Central Hall

Two rows of thick granite pillars flank this broad hall. The floor is littered with chunks of masonry, bits of equipment, mounds of debris, and the long-decomposed corpses of 24 un-identifiable man-sized creatures, all covered with dust. A 25th corpse, of a charred Priscian, is recent. The pillars were once painted in blue and green, but the paint has peeled off, with only a few remaining strips hanging down into the dust.

Clear signs of a party of six to eight bipeds moving from east to west are evident in the dust, as is a slightly acrid smell, as from charred flesh and burned dust.

Dawdling in the hall (to inspect the corpses, for instance) is likely to bring Celsus Torquatius, the vengeance aspect of Sekhmet (see new monsters), from 9-104 to assault and pursue invaders. The chance starts at 1 in 6 after a turn, and rises by one every subsequent turn (2 in 6 the 2nd turn, 3 in 6 the 3rd, and so forth). If he does arrive and attacks, he will raise undead from the numerous corpses at a rate of 4-8 ghouls every other round.

Inhabitants:

- 1. Celsus Torquatius, from 9-104 (see text for chance)
- 2. Up to 25 ghouls: SZ M; AL CE; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 17, 16(x3), 15(x4), 14(x4), 13(x4), 12(x4), 11(x3), 10, 10; #AT 3; Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-6. Special attacks: paralysis. Special defenses: immune to sleep and charm.

Treasure:

The corpse of the Priscian (Khulan the Westron, a member of Tertius) has some useful items: a charred leather purse with 31 cp and 73 gp, a wand of illumination (13 charges), a bone scroll case with a scroll of transmute rock to mud, and a set of Priscian chain mail (see new magic items). Buried in the dust in the southwest corner is a token of Arden (see Arden Vul items); it takes many turns of careful searching to find this item.

9-101: The Praitorion: Route to Level 7 (7-136)

This broad corridor leads upward to Level 7 (area 7-136). It is mostly untraveled, with two exceptions. One is the vampire, Cinna Minux (7-122), who regularly travels this way in gaseous form. The other is a bold band of Priscians from the outpost (areas 9-58 to 9-64), who made their way past Celsus Torquatius (9-104) and are now engaged in a desperate battle in area 7-143. Signs of this party's passage are evident in the dust and general debris.

9-102: The Praitorion: Barracks of the Elite Guards

As one of the two barracks for the guards tagma assigned to watch the chasm floor during the Archontean period, this chamber is a shambles. A heavy silk curtain once divided the chamber in half, but it lies in tatters, such that the image of crossed gladii picked out in gold thread is only barely visible.

To the east of the divider was a large open space, with some benches, a now-broken tripod of heating (see new magic items), various wall-mounted weapons racks and a large mural of legionaries with crossed gladii painted on their breastplates. The area is filled with junk.

To the west of the divider are the ruins of eight wooden bunkbeds, all collapsed in heaps of wood, rotten wool, and ancient animal nests. Sorting through the junk is time consuming. There is a flat 1 in 6 chance to find something interesting after a turn; this rises by one pip per subsequent turn. If something is found, roll on the following table to determine its identity:

D6	Item	GM Notes
1	6 ballista bolts for the machines found at 9-98, wrapped in a decrepit woolen cloak	Five are normal bolts, but one is an incendiary bolt (explodes for an additional 2-16 HP damage on a hit)

2	603 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items) inside a rusted legionary's helmet
3	A bronze plaque, 3"x6", with an enameled image of a lion-headed goddess carrying a spear and an ankh, plus an inscription	The plaque shows Sekhmet (see 9-104), the aspect of Wadjet, in her guise as goddess of war and avenging fire. The inscription reads (in Mithric) "Sekhmet, whose fire cleanses guilt and defends the fortress". The plaque is worth 50 gp.
4	5 javelins tied up with a long rope	The rope is an elven rope (see new magic items)
5	A writing tablet made of bronze with a wax interior; a draft letter is still visible in the wax	The letter reads: " Dearest Manlia: the situation continues to deteriorate. The priests have fled from the administrative precincts, and yet we are required to maintain our position at the bottom of this hellhole. Our chiliarch is a good man, but altogether too rigid in his devotion to honor and duty. We all await with desperation the order to fall back. May it come swiftly. Your dearest brother, Callimachus. " The draft letter reveals some of the rationale behind the murder of Celsus Torquatius by his men (see 9-104)
6	Three enormous black freshwater pearls, strung together on a piece of rawhide	The pearls are worth 5,000 gp each; the 'rawhide' is cured human skin.

9-103: The Praitorion: Barracks of the Elite Guards

The basic layout of this chamber is identical to that of 9-102, with an open area close to the door and bunkbeds behind a silk curtain to the west. Like area 9-102, the room has been trashed, with torn clothing, smashed crockery, broken weapons, and random bits of stoneware and equipment strewn everywhere.

Searching is also possible, with the same chances for success as in 9-102. Roll on the below table for each successful search result:

D6	Item	GM Notes
1	4 ballista bolts suitable for the machines in 9-98
2	A large plug of aromatic leaves, lightly bound together with oil and wrapped in silk	The leaves are a mild narcotic. If chewed they provide a +2 defense vs fear and mental attacks for a period of up to 6 turns, but cause a temporary loss of 1 point of WIS. The plug contains 9-12 doses

3	A polished ceremonial shield made of wood with substantial silver adornments, including a grinning troll's head carved into the silver boss	The shield provides no bonus to AC, but does provide a +5% to reaction rolls to all but varumani, with whom it provides a -15% modifier to reaction rolls (since the varumani resent the caricature)
4	A gladius in a wooden sheath; it glows brightly upon examination	The sword is a cursed short sword -2 .
5	A bag with 37 pieces of turquoise in it	The turquoise is worth 10 gp per piece; amid the lesser gems is a fine emerald worth 1,250 gp.
6	A folded parchment rescript from Archon Pellas the Last to a certain Jovianus Rubeus	The rescript has been folded and unfolded several times. It reads: " To Jovianus Rubeus, dekarch in I Legio, from Pellas Idreonus, archon. You are hereby and immediately reassigned to the Guards Tagma stationed to the Praitorion within the mountain. Report immediately to the chiliarch of the tagma, Celsus Torquatius, for further instructions. Obey him as you would your own scutarium. May the emperor lend you strength. [dated 1803 AEP] " GM Note: provides the name of the vengeance aspect found in 9-104 (see new monsters). The rescript could be sold as a curiosity for 35 gp.

9-104: The Praitorion: Military Chapel

This former military chapel is dark, save for a jet of burning flame that extends upward from a black basalt altar set at its south end. Thick layers of dust coat the floor and lower portions of the walls. Eight shapeless lumps dot the floor, also covered with dust. Scorch marks mar once-bright frescoes depicting the mustering of imperial legions along the eastern and western walls; the legions' archons offer sacrifices of weapons and trophies to a lion-headed goddess who holds a spear in one hand and an ankh in the other. Slumped in front of the altar is another lump, this time identifiable as a desiccated, mostly skeletonized corpse wearing enchanted imperial field plate +2 (see Arden Vul items). The corpse appears to be gripping the altar.

Close examination of the dust (by, say, a ranger) will reveal that mostly-filled footprints lead from the altar to the entrance of the chapel, and back again.

Vengeance Aspect: Entering the chapel causes the dust to swirl, making vision hazy; even still, the flames at the altar will flare brightly. A round after the area is entered, an apparition emerges from the armored corpse by the altar. The apparition appears as a ghostly and immaterial male Archontean with military haircut and bearing and wearing (immaterial) field plate. Its eyes glow with yellow fire, and it utters the following words in a disconcerting, silkily feminine voice (in the Mithric tongue): “Betrayal requires vengeance!” [the voice is that of Sekhmet herself]. The spirit is none other than Celsus Torquatius, formerly chiliarch of the elite guards tagma in Arden Vul and now a vengeance aspect of Sekhmet (see new monsters). Celsus attacks relentlessly, pursuing intruders throughout Level 9 (but not elsewhere), and raising lesser undead as necessary to aid it in its vengeance.

The eight lumps are the remains of long decomposed Archontean soldiers; their equipment is also useless, having been charred into rubble by intense fire. Each does possess a purse containing 31-40 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items) and 4-7 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items). If Celsus engages intruders in this chamber, he will immediately raise the eight lumps to fight beside him as ghosts.

Although it is technically possible to appease a vengeance aspect, usually by avenging the wrong which caused it to manifest in the first place, Celsus Torquatius is intractable and rather unfair, judging any intruder to be equivalent to his betrayers. Only those swift and canny enough to recognize a vengeance aspect of a god (i.e., clerics who successfully roll 3d8 under their INT) and who then immediately and loudly proclaim themselves to have made a sacrifice for the greater good can slow Celsus’s wrath. Even then he pauses for only a few rounds, allowing the speaker to outline the sacrifice made by the speaker (or on his behalf). If Celsus is impressed (with a ‘friendly’ or better result on a reaction roll), then he allows the intruders to depart, although they will have to repeat the process should they return. If unimpressed, Celsus attacks.

Altar: The altar is dedicated to Sekhmet, the aspect of Wadjet devoted to warfare and cleansing fire. It is clear of dust and rather simple, with only a trio of erect swords etched into the front face to reveal its identity. The flame of Sekhmet burns continuously (unless the chapel should be desecrated), flaring only into greater brightness when her vengeance aspect is active. The flame is cold and harmless. Damaging the altar by physical force or magic results in firebolts of 6d6 HP each being targeted at the desecrators (although those who survive can successfully de-sacralize the altar). In addition, if the vengeance aspect of Sekhmet is slain in this chamber, the same firebolts strike all those who inflicted damage on the vengeance aspect. Should the vengeance aspect be slain elsewhere, however, the firebolts do not appear.

GM Notes: As the Archontean grip on Arden Vul began to crumble during the War of the Sortians and Theosophs, the archon became increasingly worried about the safety of the artifact known as the Tablet of the Beacon (see new technological items; currently in 9-107). Despite the general chaos, the tablet had been kept in this forward outpost on Level 9 since the days of the great Marius Tricotor. Indeed, it remained on Level 9 because Marius had ordered it to be so (see 9-107 for details). Celsus Torquatius was then the chiliarch (commander) of the guards tagma of Arden Vul, and a man of fidelity and honor. Ordered by Archon Pellas the Last to defend the tablet and this outpost to the death, Celsus gathered the legionaries of the guard in the military chapel dedicated to Sekhmet. Celsus demanded that his men take a fearsome oath to Sekhmet to never abandon their post, whatever might happen above. His legionaries were weak and frightened, however, and as Celsus presented his sword ritually to Sekhmet, eight of them cut him down from behind. Sekhmet immediately slew the eight with fire, but the others fled, joining the flight from the halls. Celsus Torquatius returned as a potent vengeance aspect of Sekhmet; since that day almost 1,200 years ago, Celsus has guarded the outpost, interpreting his/its task as requiring that all intruders be hunted down and punished.

Inhabitants:

1. Celsus Torquatius, a vengeance aspect (see new monsters) of Sekhmet: SZ M; AL LN; AC 0 or 7; MV 90’ flying (Class A); HD 9; HP 62; #AT 2; Dmg 3-18/3-18; MR 75% or 50%. Special attacks: cause fear; animate dead; stunning shout; power word, blind (2/day); create any magic user symbol (1/day). Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; ethereal; Special: detect magic, detect evil, detect invisibility (all at will).
2. 8 ghosts (potentially): SZ M; AL CE; AC 4; MV 150’; HD 4; HP 31, 30, 28, 27, 24, 22, 20, 18; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-8. Special attacks: stench; paralysis. Special defenses: immune to sleep and charm.

Treasure:

Celsus Torquatius’s enchanted imperial field plate +2 (see Arden Vul items); his saffron-yellow-hilted long sword +4 (defender), named Crocensis, lies in the dust before the altar. On each of the eight corpses: 31-40 ancient silver pennies and 4-7 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items).

9-105: The Praitorion: Chiliarch’s Chamber

Like the rest of the Praitorion, the chamber of the commander of the Guards Tagma is a wreck. Teak furnishings – bed, armoire, table, and armchairs – have been smashed into pieces, with the contents scattered willy-nilly across the chamber.

Among the litter are two interesting items: the tattered, yellow-silk phlamoulon of the tagma, with its crossed gladii and the word ‘fidelity’ (worth 500 gp to Archontean collectors), and a parchment rescript sent by Archon Pellas Idreonus to chiliarch Celsus Torquatius (worth 350 gp to a collector). The rescript reads: “To my sodalis Celsus, chiliarch of the Tagma, from Pellas, unworthy archon in these dark days. I regret to have to inform you that you are ordered to stay in place with the other heroes of the tagma. As was ordained by the divine Marius himself, the watch against the hoppers must be maintained, and control of the sacred tablet reserved for imperial (and not temple) use. To that end I am sending you an additional spatha with provisions lasting 6 months. You are to operate with my full authority in my absence. Once affairs in the Shining City have been resolved and order has been restored to the city of Arden, your sacrifices in protecting imperial territory will be recognized and rewarded. You are hereby granted license to forage in the great cavern as needed. I have also sent you a magos, Petreon the Younger, to aid in your endeavors. He brings with him the control words for the imperial guardians. Your task is great, but our trust is greater. Valet!”

9-106: The Praitorion: Command Chamber

Access to this barrel-vaulted chamber is via a narrow tunnel wending through piles of collapsed masonry. This was the nerve-center of the Archontean praitorion, where strategy was plotted and expeditions into the wild reaches of the chasm floor planned.

The north wall has an enormous, floor-to-ceiling fresco, in faded, archaic style, showing a central legionary commander with a red-hilted gladius, flanked by three officers on each side. All are dressed in ancient legionary style. A much later hand has annotated each of them in a careful Mithric script; the central figure is marked 'Marius, archon', while the other figures are marked from left to right as 'Lucius the scriptor' (6-135), 'Regulus the kentarch', 'Ligareus the kentarch', 'Theodorus the scutarion', 'Irene the polemarch', and 'Galen the taxiarch'.

A sand table (12'x12') with 48 lead legionaries, 48 assorted lead humanoid figures, and some pieces of scenery (stone blocks) occupies the western portion of the room. The lead figures are worth 125 gp. Under the sand table is a smaller chess table, with a lacquered box holding all 32 pieces in silk-lined compartments. The box itself is worth 225 gp, while the 32 pieces – finely carved platinum with felt bases – are worth 250 gp each.

A pile of filthy and stinky textiles occupies a portion of the western part of the chamber. The pile moves alarmingly, but is in fact the 'nest' of a hairless cat and her six kittens. Only after 3 rounds of strange muffled noises and movement is it apparent that cats, and not monsters, dwell in the pile.

Secret Door (west): This narrow (2'-wide) door is normal to find. It opens by sticking a 1"-diameter rod into a small hole set into the fresco (the eye of "Lucius the scriptor").

Inhabitants:

A hairless cat and her six kittens.

9-107: The Praitorion: The Tablet of the Beacon

Originally the private chamber of Marius Tricotor during and after his successful campaigns against the heqeti, this small chamber came to be the formal location of one of the Archontean's great treasures, the tablet of the Beacon (see new technological items). The west wall offers a fresco of an archon (Marius) standing before a set of stairs into the ground; around him in a triangle are three obelisks. The Mithric inscription above the scene reads "The obelisks shall open the way to the chamber. There the tablet may be employed." [Note: the inscription refers to areas AV-5, AV-28, and AV-41, and the stairs at SL14-1 leading to the chamber of the Beacon, aka SL14-10].

Below the fresco is a stone pedestal on which sits an ebony casket, carved with images of Archontean's interacting (implausibly) with rudishva-like beings. Within, nestled in a bed of yellow silk, is the tablet of the Beacon (see new technological items). Beneath the tablet is an octavo quire of 48 folios made of parchment and without binding boards; it provides a sort of 'user's manual' for the tablet and applies to the chamber of the Beacon (SL14-10). The opening folio reads in red ink: "The tablet is the property of the archon, and not that of the high priests of Thoth, Set or Horus. Ensure it remains safely in the hands of the civil authorities. Marius"

Against the north wall is a simple wooden camp bed, as well as two folding chairs, a travel desk, a scroll case, and a tripod of heating (see new magic items). All the wooden furniture is intact, but extremely fragile and is 75% likely to crumble with contact.

Inside the travel desk is some ancient dried ink, two styluses, six rescript-sized sheets of parchment, 3 silver ankh-keys (see Arden Vul items), a parchment quire with the addresses to all of the Thothian teleportation rings (see new magic items) inscribed on it (a description of each chamber is placed next to each address), and a pair of gold signet rings with the letters 'MT' (Marius Tricotor) on each of them. The rings could be sold for 1,500 gp each to an Archontean collector. The scroll case contains a three-scroll 'complete' edition of The Deeds of Marius Tricotor;

Irene Bellatrix: on the Wars of this Great Archon; The Honorable Life of Ligareus, Archon; and a four-scroll anonymous Archons of Arden Vul, that lists all archons from Fretevus of Haldor to Ismil the Coward, with brief annotations about the reign of each. Rolled up inside the third scroll of the Archons of Arden Vul is a spell scroll containing Kentillian's animate water (see new spells).

Treasure:

The tablet of the Beacon (see new technological items), inside an ebony box (450 gp); also a tripod of heating (see new magic items). Two gold rings, plus four historical works and a spell scroll.

9-108: Broken Statue and Hidden Passage

An octagonal pedestal rising 3' above the floor stands in the middle of this side cave. The stump of an ancient statue rises from the pedestal; the rest of the statue lies in shapeless lumps near the pedestal. All the stonework is slightly oily and pebbled, marking heqeti construction. Close inspection reveals an arrow pointing toward the ground carved into one side of the pedestal.

The pedestal is the key to opening the hidden passage that leads towards area 9-108A. The pedestal rests on a vertical stone axis, and can be turned slowly in a circle past four stops, one at each cardinal direction. The arrow on the side of the pedestal is currently located at the north stop. Turning it 90-degrees to the right, that is, to the east stop, causes counterweights in the southern wall to raise the secret door leading to 9-108A. The mechanism is old and finicky, and requires the application of 50 points of STR to move. Nothing happens if the pedestal is turned to the southern or western stops, as the traps associated with those positions ceased working ages ago.

Secret Door (south): The door is difficult to spot (1 in 8 chance) due to its thickness and natural rock exterior. It can only be opened by manipulating the pedestal as described above (or by manipulating the stone wheel in 9-108A). Doing so causes the door to rise into the ceiling; after a turn, or unless the pedestal is manually held at the eastern stop, the door slides back into place.

9-108A: Door Mechanism

This small cave contains the second mechanism by which the secret door to 9-108 can be opened. The mechanism takes the form of a stone cap placed over a metal rod rising out of the ground. Holes (3" in diameter) are set into the cap, allowing objects to be placed into the cap like spokes from the hub of a wheel. With these 'spokes', the cap can be turned slowly, causing the secret door to 9-108 to rise.

Two 3' iron bars are found on the ground near the mechanism. They clearly fit into the stone cap.

9-109: Silent Canyon

This foreboding canyon is 60' tall and runs southeast for close to 250'. The floor of the canyon is white sand (10' deep), dotted with an occasional boulder and scores of skeletal heqeti half-buried in the sand. Six ledges line the sides of the canyon, ranging in height from 10' to 30' above the canyon floor. In contrast to the constant hum of insect noise and wind effects in the main chasm (9-1), the canyon is deathly still and quiet. Indeed, the slightest sound echoes off the canyon walls. A palpable brooding evil fills the canyon (a fact which paladins and good clerics will instantly notice).

Every turn a breeze blows down the canyon, from southwest to northeast. The breeze is dry and produces numerous eddies and dust devils. The effects make vision difficult in the canyon.

The canyon was one of the original homes of the heqeti within Arden Vul. Primitive dwellings lined the canyon, and more finished public spaces occupied its southwestern tip. The rudishva slaughtered those dwelling within the canyon shortly after the crash of the Beacon, and the area was never recolonized.

The area is currently the preserve of the undead heqeti old ones (aka the more powerful sort of heqeti hopping dead – see new monsters) who operate under the dominion of the Old Father (9-126). For every two turns spent in the canyon proper, there is a 20% chance that 3-6 of the skeletons buried in the sand clamber forth and assault the intruders.

Inhabitants:

1. 3-6 heqeti old ones (see new monsters): SZ M; AL CE; AC 3; MV 90'; HD 6+6; HP 47, 45, 40, 39, 38, 37; #AT 1 Dmg 3-12. Special attacks: leap; cursed tongue. Special defenses: turned as spectres; half damage from piercing and edged weapons; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and cold-based spells.

9-110: Toppled Colossus

A huge heqeti statue lies in ruins here. Originally some 40' tall, it depicted a slug-like being with a vaguely-heqeti head. The head (10' in diameter) has broken off and lies at a crazy angle in the sand. The face is flat and amphibian in features, with no ears, huge saucer-shaped eyes, a slit nose, and a gaping, toothless maw. The body is thick and cylindrical, albeit worn and pitted from the canyon's breezes; the original arms are missing, buried in the sand. The statue was a crude depiction of the heqeti demon-lord, Kauket.

A kaliyani corpse is pinned to the statue with stone spears; this warrior was a casualty of the kaliyani expedition that departed SL9-37, entered Level 9 at 9-119, fought their way past the old ones into the chasm proper at 9-108, and then found the tunnel at 9-57 leading up to 8-23. The corpse is only a few days old; it lacks equipment, but is still adorned with belts and small bits of jewelry and tokens (worth 73 gp).

Noise and/or light at this location is very likely to attract the attention (if not already attracted) of the heqeti old ones at 9-111A/9-111B and 9-112A.

9-111A: East Cave, with Old Ones

A spur of rock extends out into the canyon here; it is 25' above the canyon floor. Six heqeti old ones inhabit it and the nearby cave. They are sensitive to the passage of the living due to the recent appearance of the kaliyani expedition (see 9-110); those dawdling in the northeastern approaches of the canyon are 50% likely to draw their attention. If visitors are concealed, extra-careful, and/or moving swiftly, then the old ones may remain un-alerted. Once alerted, the old ones will attack all below with volleyball-sized boulders (2-8 HP damage each) for 3-4 rounds before retreating to 9-111B. Unless visitors are consciously looking upward, the old ones here are likely to gain surprise (3 in 6 chance).

The cave has some traces of worked floor (with geometric designs inset), plus a niche carved into the north wall. The niche holds (still!) a soapstone idol of Kauket, as a rising worm- or salamander-like thing with huge maw and slit eyes. It is oily and evil, but has no special powers; it could be sold to evil collectors for up to 250 gp.

Inhabitants:

1. 6 heqeti old ones (see new monsters): SZ M; AL CE; AC 3; MV 90'; HD 6+6; HP 47, 45, 40, 39, 38, 37; #AT 1 Dmg 3-12. Special attacks: leap; cursed tongue. Special defenses: turned as spectres; half damage from piercing and edged weapons; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and cold-based spells.

Treasure:

Soapstone Kauket idol (250 gp).

9-111B: West Cave and Ledge

Although this cave and ledge are initially unoccupied, the old ones from 9-111A will arrive here 3-4 rounds after initiating combat with those on the canyon floor. In addition, those who did not previously alert the old ones but spend time (with light and noise) investigating the colossus (9-110) will cause the old ones from 9-111A to move here and begin hurling stones at the intruders.

The floor is worked, even if the walls show signs of cave-ins. A rough worked corridor extends west, but ends in a cave-in. One of Kerbog Khan's dragonfly automatons (see new monsters) has been smashed into inoperative status here; if returned to Kerbog Khan (see SL12-25), the Khan will be grateful to the tune of four 300-gp gems or four pieces of useful Arden Vul related information.

9-112: Ancient Heqeti Ruin

This battered structure is one of the few heqeti habitations that still stands; the others fell into ruin shortly after the rudishva attack. Half of this dwelling extends into the canyon; it is made of roughly shaped pieces of flint assembled into drystone walls. The roof of this portion collapsed years ago. The rest of the structure is delved into the side of the canyon. The door is long gone.

Within is a jumble of smashed ceramics, plus three stone vases inscribed with heqeti faces. Four sets of heqeti remains lie amid the rubble of the roof. None of them will become old ones, but their spirits still inhabit the space as poltergeists. The poltergeists act mostly as a pest by throwing objects, creating sudden noises, and causing puffs of air. Unlike regular poltergeists, however, these are turned as spectres so long as they remain in the canyon area (9-108A to 9-126). They follow intruders throughout the region, causing mischief and hoping to alert the old ones by their actions.

Inhabitants:

1. 4 poltergeists: SZ M; AL LE; AC 10; MV 60'; HD 1-4 HP; HP 4, 3, 2, 1; #AT 0; Dmg special. Special attacks: throw object, a hit causes fear (throws as a 5 HD creature). Special defenses: invisible; silver, or +1 or better weapons to hit. Turned as spectres.

9-112A: Ledge with Old Ones

Four more heqeti old ones wait patiently on this ledge, which sits 20' above the chasm floor. They are armed with spears and rocks; after 2-3 rounds of hurling rocks, they leap down on their foes to engage hand-to-hand.

Inhabitants:

1. 4 heqeti old ones (see new monsters): SZ M; AL CE; AC 3; MV 90'; HD 6+6; HP 45, 40, 39, 38; #AT 1 Dmg 3-12. Special attacks: leap; cursed tongue. Special defenses: turned as spectres; half damage from piercing and edged weapons; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and cold-based spells.

9-113: Ancient Heqeti Ruin with Shaky Roof

Like area 9-112, this structure is partly free-standing within the canyon, and partly embedded in the canyon wall. The external walls are the same drystone construction, and, miraculously, its wood-and-slate roof is still in place. The wooden door, too, is still present, although it is badly stuck. It can easily be broken down (add one pip to the chance for any open doors roll), but doing so causes the roof to collapse within 3 rounds. The collapsing roof does 2-8 HP damage to any within the structure, and causes a great deal of noise.

No furnishings remain, although a pair of fired ceramic tiles may be found after 1-2 turns of sifting through the rubble. One tile shows tiny heqeti figures surrounding a ziggurat on top of which sits an enormous salamander thing (Kauket, see new monsters). The other has some indecipherable tally marks (a primitive accounting system). Two corridor fragments lead to ancient caves. A silver ritual club (250 gp) lies amid the debris.

9-114: Ancient Heqeti Tomb

This ancient heqeti tomb is set entirely into the canyon wall; its wooden door is battered and would open easily were it not for the pile of rocks that has been placed before it.

The east wall of the tomb has largely collapsed. Shattered crockery and a pair of unadorned stone vases fill the floor. Two heqeti mummies inhabit the chamber and will pursue any who release them from their long entombment.

Stuck horizontally into the collapsed east wall is a beautifully carved 8' pole; the carvings are all geometric and floral. The pole is actually the staff of the frog (see new magic items); this potent item is concealed under a dweomer that prevents it from registering as magic to detect magic spells. Dispel magic will remove the dweomer; identify cast on the staff will reveal its abilities as normal.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 mummies (heqeti): SZ M; AL LE; AC 3; MV 60'; HD 8+3; HP 62, 58; #AT 1; Dmg 2-16. Special attacks: fear; rotting disease. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; half damage from magic weapons; immune to sleep, charm, hold, cold, poison, and paralysis; turned as vampires.

Treasure:

Staff of the frog (see new magic items).

9-115: Cave and Ledges

This cave is located 30' above the floor of the canyon. Six more heqeti old ones are present here. They hurl rocks at any causing noise at areas 9-113 or 9-114. Should a fight with the mummies at 9-113 spill into the canyon proper, half of the old ones will leap downward to confront intruders in melee.

The southeast wall of the cave contains another ledge that stands 15' above the tunnel leading to 9-117.

Inhabitants:

1. 6 heqeti old ones (see new monsters): SZ M; AL CE; AC 3; MV 90'; HD 6+6; HP 47, 45, 40, 39, 38, 37; #AT 1 Dmg 3-12. Special attacks: leap; cursed tongue. Special defenses: turned as spectres; half damage from piercing and edged weapons; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and cold-based spells.

9-116: Ledge

This ledge sits 15' above the canyon floor. The inanimate remains of four heqeti old ones are stacked like cordwood against the east edge of the cave leading south. Two new coils of rope are attached to heavy iron staples set into the edge of the cave; the ropes are coiled (not hanging over the edge). Signs of the passage of a group of six-legged creatures (kaliyani) are evident in the sand and dust.

An invisible kaliyani scout (see new monsters) is posted here to watch for traffic in the canyon. If detected, or if intruders show extended interest in this ledge, the scout hastens to 9-118 to warn his comrades.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 invisible kaliyani scout (see new monsters): for stats see 9-118.

9-117: Crossroads Cave

This cave features many exits. It is empty of inhabitants, despite the nearby presence of a kaliyani encampment (see 9-118).

9-118: Kaliyani Camp

A forward team of kaliyani (see new monsters) has established a base camp here from which to cautiously explore parts of the lower levels of Arden Vul. One sub-team has already exited the canyon via 9-108 and discovered the tunnel at 9-57 leading upwards to 8-23, 7-34 and 5-125.

The encampment takes advantage of an ancient heqeti pediment made of weathered stone blocks that rises 4' above the cave floor. A square depression in the center of the pediment has collected several inches of dripwater. Hints that the cave once featured other worked areas abound: the eastern wall is shaped at one point, despite crumbling due to seismic activity in others; in addition, a flattened cobblestone path leads south only to end in a massive cave-in.

The kaliyani have placed eight stones around the edge of the pediment; each stone has been enchanted with continual light. A large ouroboros symbol has been painted on the northwest wall.

Eight kaliyani, led by Rivvep the sorcerer, inhabit the chamber. In addition to their personal equipment, they have three sacks made of mushroom fiber and creepers containing dried foodstuffs of subterranean origin; a small wooden keg of kaliyani refreshing liquid (see Arden Vul items); another wooden keg with water; a simple silver box containing 15 pearls (100 gp each); 6x 2-lb lumps of arcnum (see new magic items); 6 each of some slightly odd-looking but functional pick-axes, shovels, and mauls; and 3 small, soapstone heqeti idols to long-forgotten gods (150 gp each).

In addition, Rivvep carries a reed scroll from Tsilliv (SL9-77), magistra of the kaliyani consortium in Arden Vul. It reads, in Kaliyani Semi-glyphik, as follows: "You are to accomplish three tasks. First, reestablish contact with the Old Allies and offer them gifts in return for a permanent diplomatic mission. Second, locate the ancestral home of the People in the upper levels. Avoid the brutish ones who are said to dominate the middle levels. Third, secure the portal to the Astral that lies at the base of the chasm. Too much traffic has been detected coming through it. Our preference is for you to seize control of it, but should that prove impossible, you are to destroy it." [GM Note: task one refers to the heqeti, e.g., those at 9-78; task two refers to the former kaliyani areas on Level 5 (e.g. 5-125), and makes mention of the varumani ('brutish ones'); task three refers to the gate located at 9-51].

The kaliyani are exceptionally cautious and careful. If alerted to the imminent arrival of intruders, either by noise and light or by their scout (at 9-116), they will have darkened their lights and prepared an ambush. Assuming they have a turn of foreknowledge, Rivvep and Velerim will have conjured a 12-HD earth elemental to aid them. If intruders arrive in less than a turn, the chance for conjuration drops per the rules for kaliyani rituals (55% for 5 rounds, 45% for 3 rounds, etc.). If taken by surprise, the kaliyani attempt to negotiate, while biding time for a quick strike at the intruders; negotiations may be difficult as none speak Archontean or other 'civilized' tongues (although Rivvep does know comprehend languages).

Inhabitants:

1. Rivvep, 8th-level kaliyani sorcerer (see new monsters), SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 150' on six legs, 60' upright; HD 8; HP 45; #AT 3; Dmg 3-8/2-5/6-24 (scimitar/dagger/blasting rod). Special defenses: immune to poison and mind-affecting spells. Special: infravision. Psionic ability: 240; attack modes psionic blast, mind thrust, psychic crush; defense modes: mind blank, thought shield, intellect fortress. Disciplines: cellular adjustment, domination, detect magic; mind barring. Spells: comprehend languages, charm person, hypnotism; darkness 15' radius, invisibility, mirror image; dispel magic. Possessions: bracers of protection (AC 5); kaliyani blasting rod (6 charges) (see new technological items); two serrated daggers; a serrated scimitar; 1.5 lb arcenum; 14 chrysoprase gems (60 gp each).
2. Velirim, 5th-level kaliyani sorcerer (see new monsters): SZ M; AL LE; AC 6; MV 150' on six legs, 60' upright; HD 5; HP 29; #AT 2; Dmg 3-6/2-5 (dagger +1/dagger) or 2-7/2-7 (javelins). Special defenses: immune to poison and mind-affecting spells. Special: infravision. Psionic ability: 210. Attack modes: psionic blast, mind thrust. Defense modes mind blank, mental barrier. Disciplines: clairaudience, clairvoyance, invisibility, telepathic projection. Spells: charm person, dancing lights, hypnotic pattern. Possessions: potion of free action; potion of fire breath; one dagger +1 and a second normal dagger; 6 javelins; a jade amulet of an ouroboros (275 gp); 7 silver rings (20 gp each); 4 vials of kaliyani refreshing liquid (see Arden Vul items).
3. 2 6th-level kaliyani soldiers (see new monsters): SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 150' on six legs, 60' upright; HD 7; HP 53, 47; #AT 2; Dmg 3-8/3-8 (scimitars), 3-8/3-8 (javelins +1). Special defenses: immune to poison and mind-affecting spells. Special: infravision. Possessions: a pair of scimitars; six javelins +1; a ring of protection +1; a vial of kaliyani refreshing liquid (see Arden Vul items), and an assortment of silver rings, worked-glass and minor gemstones and repurposed coins worth 125 gp. One has a potion of invulnerability, while the other has a potion of frost giant strength.
4. 4 5th-level kaliyani scouts (see new monsters), as 5th-level thieves: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 150' on six legs, 60' upright; HD 6; HP 43, 41, 38, 36; #AT 2; Dmg 3-8/3-8 (scimitars) or 2-7/2-7 (javelins). Special defenses: immune to poison and mind-affecting spells. Special: infravision; DEX 16. Thief skills: PP 50%, OL 47%, F/RT 40%, MS 40%, HS 31%, HN 20%, CW 90%, RL 25%. Possessions: twin serrated scimitars; six javelins; a set of silver rings, worked glass and minor gemstones, and repurposed coins worth 200 gp. One has a vial of poison; another has a minor heqeti slime (see new monsters) in a breakable flask; another has a potion of invisibility; and one has a solid gold ouroboros bracelet (175 gp).

5. 1 blue-black, gelatin-like heqeti slime (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 10' creeping; HD 2; HP 13; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6; MR 15%. Special attacks: flesh-eating for 4-7 rounds; corrosive to metal, leather, and wood. Special defenses: healed by electricity or lasers; slowed by cold.
6. 1 earth elemental: SZ L; AL N; AC 2; MV 60'; HD 12; HP 73; #AT 1; Dmg 4-32. Special defenses: +2 weapons or better to hit. Special: reduced damage if foes are not touching earth.

9-119: Tunnel to SL9-37

This newly-dug tunnel wends its way steeply upward through a series of corkscrew turns. It debouches at SL9-37.

9-120: Cave with Debris

The floor of this cave is an uneven mishmash of bits of pavement, broken segments of pillars, and fragments of broken statuary. The debris is covered with scorch marks and, due to its fragmentary and unstable nature, it is difficult to traverse. Amid the rubble two mostly intact statues remain, leaning in 30-degree angles to the floor. One is of a heqeti builder, pointing in front of itself, and the other is of a muscled heqeti hopper wielding a stone spear. The carving of each is primitive but impressive, with small touches of realism and well-articulated accent clothing and jewelry. If transported out of Arden Vul, each could be sold for 5,000 gp.

One of the pieces of debris is a 6'-diameter stone basin that, despite its awkward placement among the debris, still holds several inches of odorless, viscous, clear liquid. This 'sweat' can be placed inside the mouths of the stone heads at 9-121.

The ledge leading to area 9-123 is 20' above the floor; the lip is jagged and broken.

GM Note: This area was once a finished hallway that connected 9-123 to 9-121. It was destroyed by the rudishva, and then suffered further damage due to seismic collapse.

9-121: Ancient Shrine to Kauket

This large chamber is in much better shape than the other areas of the canyon region. The ceiling is 25' tall, and is supported by a row of 4'-diameter pillars that flank the east and west walls. Notable in the chamber are a pair of grotesque stone faces carved into two of the pillars, a 15'x5' pool in the center of the chamber, and a 15'-tall statue of Kauket in the northern corner.

The corpses of four ancient Archontean explorers who were slain by keqemandri lie among the pillars. The corpses are desiccated and inanimate, but still contain some valuables.

Stone Pillar Faces: The two pillars at the south edge of the room, at the end of the double row that once extended through 9-120 to 9-123, are carved as grotesque stone faces (like those at area 6-92). Each head is roughly humanoid, but contains some unusual amphibian-oid features, including bulbous eyes, slit noses and lolling tongues. The mouth of each head/face is open, revealing a 2' oval compartment. If a flask-full of 'sweat' from the basin in 9-122 (or the equivalent amount of the sweat of Rimmaq-Isfet - see new magic items) is placed in any of the mouths, the tongue of that head will lick the nearest person (within 5'). Two effects are imparted: 1) the subject will be immune to acid effects from any of the servitors of Kauket (such as keqemandri - see new monsters) for 5-10 turns, and 2) the subject will be afflicted with an effect from the following table:

D10	Effect
1	Sweat uncontrollably for 7 days, -3 CHA, -1 to hit rolls
2	Temporary gills for 7 days, allowing subject to breathe underwater
3	Eyes grow disproportionately large for 3 days, -1 CHA but true seeing
4	Legs grow in power while arms atrophy for 3 days: MV increased by 30', STR -1
5	Webbing between fingers and toes, 50% better swimming but -1 CHA
6	Comprehend amphibian tongues, for 7 days
7	Cursed (if Good), Blessed for 3 days if CE. Nothing for other alignments
8	Sensitive to light for 7 days (-2 to all rolls), but gains infravision
9	Locate body of fresh water; knows route to pool-sized bodies of water (or larger) within 200'
10	Mark of Kauket: all 9 of the above, 1-3 of the effects are permanent.

Remove curse will remove any of the temporary negative effects, but the Mark of Kauket can only be removed via alter reality, miracle, limited wish or wish, or through the special favor of a good-aligned deity via the completion of a significant quest.

Central Pool: The pool in the center of the chamber is 15' tall and 5' wide, and is filled with murky, viscous brown sludge. Four slim columns of polished basalt are placed around the pool, one on each side; these 4'-tall columns are set obliquely (not perpendicular to the floor).

The pool is (like area 6-104) an ancient summoning chamber devoted to Rimmaq-Isfet. In antiquity the heqeti would tie sacrifices to the oblique pillars and summon a worm of Qok (see new monsters) to devour the victim(s) in the name of Rimmaq-Isfet. Although no heqeti are left to perform the summoning rituals, a worm of Qok will appear within three rounds if any living flesh is immersed in the liquid of the pool.

Statue of Kauket: The statue of Kauket in the northern corner of the shrine is unusual for several reasons. First, it gleams with gold, silver, and precious metal, and appears completely untouched by the destruction and decay which otherwise marks the canyon area. Second, although recognizably Kauket, the statue has been constructed out of precious metals and in an artistic style completely unlike any of the other heqeti statuary in Arden Vul. The cylindrical, salamander-like body is formed of ebony, with short ebony forearms that end in gold, three-fingered hands. The head is made of solid silver, with saucer-shaped eyes of crimson coral, a slit nose formed of pieces of jet, and a gaping maw with teeth of diamond. The statue carries an ebony spear with a gold head. All the metalwork is without tarnish, and gleams as if new. On top of all this extravagance, dozens of pieces of clearly heqeti jewelry – rings of granite, small silver earrings, tufts of hair set into amber – have been attached to the spear and arms. The entire statue appears more like one of the garish human cult statues than the more usual and more primitive heqeti ones. The statue is incredibly valuable (60,000 gp), but also protected by Kauket itself. Should the statue be moved, or any piece of it removed, two keqemandri teleport in to punish the desecrators. Once (if?) the keqemandri have been defeated, the statue loses its potency and can be moved normally (although it is quite heavy).

GM Note: The strange artistic style of the statue requires comment. Researching the statue through a sage or extremely ancient books will reveal that the statue was clearly built by human hands, and that it dates to the very earliest days of Archontos, when the city was still ruled by an oligarchy of merchant-sorcerers; that is, it is about the same age as the famous compact of Ennius (see World of Archontos appendix). The implications of that information, however, are serious, for it suggests that Kauket was known to the early Archontians. Indeed, the statue was constructed by a cult of evil proto-Archontians, who knew Kauket as the 'Writhing Master' and as 'Caecus Caucius' (i.e., "Blind Kauket"). Following signs offered by Kauket himself, this sect brought the statue to Arden Vul in the days when it was ruled by the heqeti. Remnants of this cult still exist in the capital city of Archontos, where, in the deepest cellars underneath the imperial palace, rituals to supplicate the entity now called "Tuphlo-Kaukos" are still conducted. Bringing the statue to sale in an Archontian market would thus attract the notice of this small, but powerful cult, and could lead to trouble for the sellers. It might also lead to a dangerous trip to Archontos itself, where hardy PCs would have to navigate the politics of the imperial court as well as the deadly sorcerous rituals of the cult.

Inhabitants:

- 1 worm of Qok (see new monsters): SZ L; AL CE; AC 3; MV 60'; HD 12; HP 86; #AT 1; Dmg 2-24; MR 50%. Special attacks: swallow.
- 2 keqemandri demons (see new monsters): SZ L; AL CE; AC -2; MV 90'; 150' flying (Class D); HD 16; HP 111, 99; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/3-18; MR 40%. Constant abilities: dread (-1 to saves); infravision. Special attacks: acid spit (3-10 dmg; 30' range, every other round); cause fear; darkness (10' radius); exude acid with chance to degrade armor; use a symbol of discord. Special defenses: only hit by magic weapons; half damage from cold, electricity, fire, and gas; become invisible. Special: levitate; telekinesis (4,000 gp weight); project image; teleport without error; 50% chance to gate in either another keqemandri or a Type I-IV demon.

Treasure:

1. Cult statue of Kauket (60,000 gp)
2. On the corpses: A suit of imperial field plate +1, 215 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items); a two-handed sword +2, +4 versus giants; a pair of boots of levitation; and a magic user spell book.

Spell Book: Charm monster, dig, extension I, ice storm, polymorph other, polymorph self, mnemonic enhancer, wall of ice; airy water, cloudkill, contact other plane, extension II, passwall, wall of force; control weather, enchant an item, extension III, invisible stalker, Kentillian's useful sphere (see new spells), legend lore, reincarnation, spiritwrack, wizard eye; Pol's recall (see new spells).

9-122: Sweating Side Chamber

This chamber is sheathed in white marble squares (5' square) on all sides, floor and ceiling. The floor is slightly convex, dipping towards a 10'-diameter basin placed in the middle of the floor (much like area 3-117). Each square of marble has a symbol incised in its center and filled with gold inlay. The symbols are identical: an open, toothless mouth, from which extends a thick tongue. All of the marble tiles are slick with dripping moisture; close examination will determine that the moisture beads up on each incised tongue, only to drip off or down, eventually collecting in the basin. Not surprisingly, the chamber is quite slippery. All movement is halved, and the incautious should roll 3d6 under DEX to keep their footing. Anyone slipping has a chance to end up in the basin, where he or she will be affected by multiple doses of the sweat of Rimmaq-Isfet (see new magic items).

9-123: The Hall of Thirty-Six Pillars

A ledge some 20' above the floor of area 9-120 leads to this tee-shaped hall. Thirty-six heavy stone pillars 4' in diameter define the hall. The ceiling is 15' tall between the pillars and the walls, but rises to 30' in a barrel arch in the center of the hall. The walls and pillars are formed of pebbled stone, and seem worn and even a little greasy. The eastern and western edges of the hall end in serious cave-ins.

The pillars radiate so strongly of magic that it need not be detected; the effect is of dread (-3 morale rolls for retainers, -1 to all saves to everyone for 1-4 hours).

Scattered about the hall are the skeletons of twenty-four ice toads. The skeletons are inert until the Old Father (see 9-126) engages in combat, at which point they animate (eight per round) to aid him against interlopers.

Excessive noise in this area has a 20% chance of drawing the Old Father from 9-126 to investigate.

Inhabitants:

1. 24 ice toad skeletons (see new monsters): SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60' plus 60' hop; HD 3; HP 22(x4), 20(x4), 18(x6), 16(x6), 14(x4); #AT 1; Dmg 3-12. Special attacks: cold blast (2-12 damage every other round). Special defenses: edged weapons do half damage; turned as spectres, or wights if the Old Father has been destroyed.

9-124: Preparation Chamber

The door to this oddly-shaped chamber has been blasted open by a powerful source of energy. Within are four stone tables and the remains of a half dozen heqeti. The yellowed bones show signs of charring (from rudishva energy weapons). The remains are inert.

Secret Door (south): The secret door is normal to locate. It opens by applying brute force (open doors check) to cause the stone door to swing inward on a pin.

Treasure:

Amid the detritus are three jade ceremonial knives (575 gp each), two small jade bowls (325 gp each), and seven black pearls (500 gp each).

9-125: Stairs Up to SL6-4A

These narrow, primitive stairs wend their way upward in a pattern of squarish rises until they reach the tiny, forgotten heqeti observation post at SL6-4A.

9-126: Lair of the Heqeti Old Father

Although this area used to form the eastern end of area 5-123, major seismic activity has rendered it isolated and only accessible via a narrow tunnel. The flagstone floor is buckled and cracked. Two primitive heqeti teleport wells are still visible amid the crumbling walls; these are no longer operational, however, and can never be repaired. The northeast and southeast walls bear simple images scratched into the stone; one shows a crowd of heqeti standing around a giant worm, while the other shows three heqeti receiving the obeisance of a dozen others.

Among the debris from the collapsed walls are the remains of a dozen heqeti; these appear as piles of yellowed and brittle bones.

While the entire chamber radiates evil, a paladin or lawful good cleric will be able (after one round of reflection) to pinpoint the source of the evil; it emanates from one particular pile of remains, located just inside the collapsed corridor to the east.

Those remains are those of the Old Father (see new monsters), a terrible undead spirit whose spirit inhabits this chamber and whose evil empowers the lesser undead of the canyon region. Should the Old Father's remains be hallowed, either by spell or by sprinkling holy water on them, its powers will be greatly weakened (see entry in new monsters appendix for specifics).

The Old Father does not usually wander about. Still, undue noise in area 9-123 has a 20% chance to draw him there. He will also pursue intruders throughout the canyon area (9-109 to 9-126). Once aroused, the Old Father's evil causes the ice toad skeletons in 9-123 to animate; they join him in combat wherever he may be.

GM Note: The Old Father was the Great Tongue of this area at the time of the rudishva attack. He died here, but returned in undead form. His presence is responsible for the Old Ones and other undead in the canyon area.

Inhabitants:

1. The heqeti Old Father (see new monsters): SZ M; AL CE; AC 0 or 6; MV 90'; HD 10+3; HP 71; #AT 1; Dmg special. Special attacks: maze; energy drain. Special defenses: ethereal; +2 or better weapons to hit; turned as a lich.

Treasure:

Among the heqeti remains are the following: 20 pieces of shaped crimson coral (100 gp each), 5 large aquamarines carved to resemble tadpole-like things (750 gp each), and 7 pieces of exceptional white jade carved to resemble salamanders (300-600 gp each).

With the Old Father's remains: a carved jade necklace worth 5,000 gp; an incised jade bracelet worth 2,500 gp; and a rod of lordly might made out of ebony.

9-127: Sand Bar in the Rimpled Run

A rocky outcrop located in the midst of the Rimpled Run has acquired a thin layer of soil and sand. A few interesting items have washed up on the sandbar over the years, including the head of an ancient Archontean general lost from a marble statue (50 gp); a clever teak puzzle box with a petrified egg inside it (50 gp; successful roll of 4d6 under INT to open); a tarnished silver ewer (25 gp); a soggy quire from a spell book with the magic user spells phase door and simulacrum; and the battered remains of a basic exploration automaton of Kerbog Khan (see new monsters), which was destroyed by the demonic hunters at 9-50 and tossed into the river. Returning the automaton's remains to the Khan delivers a reward, namely four 300-gp gems or four pieces of useful Arden Vul related information.

Should the dam on Sub-Level 6 (SL6-25) be destroyed, the sand bar will be swept clear. After 7-10 hours, the river will recede to normal level, leaving a thin layer of muck covering the sand.

9-128: Tomb of Agaperion Martel

The first steps leading to this simple tomb are frequently awash in river water. The stone door to the tomb is stuck in a partly open position; it shows signs of serious damage. Within is the looted tomb of the archon, Agaperion, nicknamed 'the Hammer' (Martel). Frescoes cover all the walls, but they are nearly illegible due to moisture and age. Careful study of the west wall might reveal the name "Agaperion, Archon of Arden Vul" beneath a faded and stained image of a clean-shaven Archontean.

Three marble sarcophagi stand in the center of the chamber; the shattered lids of all three are scattered across the floor. All three feature impressive medium-relief carvings in a 2' band around all sides. The carvings on two sarcophagi are military in nature, showing Archontean legionaries in combat against heqeti and other monstrous foes: on one, the leader is an archon, wielding a large military hammer (Agaperion), while on the other the leader is a young scutarion dressed in military gear (Agaperion's son). The third sarcophagus features women in a mourning procession towards an ibis-headed god, led by a noble-looking Archontean lady (Agaperion's wife).

The floor contains a moldy layer of scattered remnants of tomb contents and furnishings – rotted wooden furniture, scraps of linen, bones, etc.

Although the destruction is near total, the sarcophagi are extremely valuable, as the carved marble is of the highest quality. Each sarcophagus is worth 20,000 gp, but is extremely heavy (over 1,000 lb, or a half a ton).

GM Note: Agaperion was the archon of Arden Vul about 1,370 years ago. He was a warrior archon, easily smiting a tentative heqeti resurgence near the ziggurat. In an effort to promote Archontean activity at the foot of the chasm, he built his tomb here.

9-129: Ledge

This 5'-wide opening in the cave wall lies 20' above the surface of the Rimpled Run. It is easy to miss unless explorers search carefully.

9-130: Broken Heqeti Hallway

A lost, frightened, and unlucky adventurer crouches in this hallway, sobbing quietly. The adventurer, Justine Two-Hands, is the sole survivor of a party that grew lost in the Nether Reaches (Level 8). After her comrades perished, Justine fell victim to the memory trap at 8-111; she eventually found her way down the tunnel at 8-110 to 9-150, where she fled the hydras and worked her way upriver. She is wounded and terrified, and will gratefully accept assistance. In addition to lacking her memory, Justine has also fallen victim to the cursed door at 9-136; as a result her alignment currently detects as NE despite the fact that she is really NG. Given her memory loss, general inability to explain herself, and this curse, she may well appear as an evil NPC trying to insinuate herself into the party.

Inhabitants:

1. Justine Two-Hands, 6th-level female Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL "NE" (really NG); AC 4; MV 120'; HD 6; HP 27 (max 60); #AT 1; Dmg 5-14 (two-handed sword +1) or 2-5 (heavy crossbow). Abilities: STR 18/25, INT 10, WIS 16, DEX 9, CON 16, CHA 7. Possessions: chainmail +1; two-handed sword +1; heavy crossbow with 11 bolts; two days of rations; a purse with 37 sp and 15 gp; and a 3-lb chunk of arcana (see new magic items).

9-131: Tunnel Up to SL2-6

This long tunnel climbs steeply through some ascending loops and mini-cliffs before extending north for several hundred feet to connect with SL2-6.

9-132: Tomb of Marcion Aoratus: Entrance

This tomb seems comparable to that of Agaperion (9-128). A set of stairs rises from the river to a battered stone door stuck in a partly-opened position. Within are two plain granite sarcophagi, the lids of which are broken on the floor. The walls are covered with mildewed and barely-visible frescoes of imperial administrators and military scenes. The central scene on the north wall seems to depict an archon wearing the robes of a sorcerer, gesturing with a wand. An inscription in Mithric on the base of one of the sarcophagi reads: "Marcion the archon, called Aoratus for his ability to appear and disappear at will. Per his request, this tomb was created for him." Amid the litter on the floor are numerous bones, bits of worked stone, rotted leather, and rotted wood. In addition, 47 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items) can be found among the detritus. Close examination of the bones might reveal that none are from a human; rather, they come from animals.

Secret Door (south): The door would be easy to detect, were it not concealed with a permanent illusion. Only by dispelling the illusion can the door be properly found. Once found, it opens easily by pushing it inward. The corridor beyond is narrow (5') and climbs steeply up a long flight of stairs.

9-133: Tomb of Marcion Aoratus: False Tomb

A basalt sarcophagus dominates this 12'-tall tomb chamber. The walls were once covered with frescoes above and below a 3'-tall register of high-relief marble sculpture that circles the room at eye-height. While the frescoes are merely smears of ruined color, the relief carvings are vivid and impressive. They depict seven scenes of an archon's life: reviewing a line of legionaries, sitting in judgment in a court chamber, presiding over an impalement execution, conducting a solemn religious procession, reading the auspices, receiving dignitaries and their gifts, and marching at the head of a column of troops.

The sarcophagus is equally impressive, featuring a gisant-style image of Marcion carved into the lid, and the words 'Marcion, Archon' on all four sides. The sarcophagus is trapped with explosive runes. Within the sarcophagus are a set of bones (not Marcion's), carefully wrapped in yellow silk (110 gp), as well as 57 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items), 379 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items), and a set of fifteen gold shabti figurines (125 gp each).

Trap (explosive runes): The lid of the sarcophagus is trapped with explosive runes.

Secret Compartment: Behind the sculpture depicting the impalement ceremony is a hollow compartment, 3' tall, 5' deep, and 6' long. The compartment is detected normally, but can only be opened by destroying or carefully removing the marble sculpture. Within are a second set of bones, also wrapped in yellow silk (110 gp), with a platinum rod of authority (350 gp), a gold and onyx signet ring (350 gp), and a scroll of protection from undead. These bones are also not Marcion's, but rather are another red herring designed to keep tomb robbers from locating the true tomb.

Secret Door (east wall of corridor): This secret door is difficult to locate (1 in 8); it can only be opened by destroying the thin stone 'door' panel.

9-134: Tomb of Marcion Aoratus: True Tomb

Marcion's actual bones rest within this 12'-tall chamber. The walls are undecorated, and the chamber is dominated by a simple, uncarved marble sarcophagus. Surrounding it are seventeen 24"-tall onyx shabti figurines. In addition, four 8'-tall granite figures of jackal-headed humans bearing axes stand in the corners of the chamber. An inscription in 2'-tall, silver-filled Mithric letters runs across the south wall; it reads, 'Marcion, the great archon. Whether seen or unseen, he is always present.'

Disturbing the lid of the sarcophagus causes the spirit of Marcion to animate. The spirit is an Archontean animating ghost (see new monsters) and is ethereal, although visible as a vague outline to those on the Prime Material Plane. Marcion's spirit can animate any of the stone figurines into which it manifests for a round. The spirit can only be damaged itself during the round after it exits a particular figurine, or at any time by those capable of entering the ethereal plane. It must wait 1-2 rounds after exiting a figurine before animating another. It animates the four jackal-headed statues first, before turning to the shabti figurines.

Inhabitants:

1. Marcion, an Archontean animating ghost (see new monsters): SZ M; AL NE; AC 8 or 2; MV 120'; HD 8; HP 51; #AT 0; Dmg 0; MR 25%. Special: animate stone statues or figurines. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit.
2. 4 jackal-headed stone warriors, as enhanced Archontean animated constructs - spearmen (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 2; MV 60'; HD 8; HP 58, 55, 53, 50; #AT 1; Dmg 5-10; MR 25%. Special defenses: immune to elemental magic, poison, and mind-affecting spells; +1 or better weapons to hit; half damage from slashing or piercing weapons.
3. 17 Archontean animated constructs - shabti warriors (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 13(x17); #AT 1; Dmg 3-8; MR 25%. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; half damage from slashing or piercing weapons (but double-damage from crushing weapons); immune to elemental magic, poison, and mind-affecting spells.

Treasure:

Inside the sarcophagus: 273 ancient octagonal platinum coins (see Arden Vul items); 1,137 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items); 3,753 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items); eight green tourmalines (100 gp each); and Marcion's rod of rulership.

9-135: Island in the Rimpled Run

A small island covered with sand and silt rises 5-10' above the Rimpled Run in this location. A 5' statue occupies the southwestern end, while a 9'-tall carved pillar stands to the northeast end.

The statue depicts an Archontean legionary standing with her feet shoulder-width apart. The legionary rests her spear on the ground with her left hand; her right arm is extended in the universal gesture of 'stop'. The statue is marble, but is badly stained and worn from the river and other damage. Just visible on a plinth that has been bolted to the island is the word 'Forbidden!'

The pillar is almost as thick (8') as it is tall (9'). It radiates an obvious and brooding evil and exudes a chill in a 5' radius. Carved in a spiral fashion, the narrative register depicts the triumph of the heqeti followers of Rimmaq-Isfet (much like the pillar at 3-178). Given its antiquity and the moisture in this region, many of these carvings are now little more than faceless lumps. Still, careful perusal of the column reveals some information, albeit at a potentially stiff price.

Should any being not of chaotic evil alignment or otherwise girded with an appropriate token – e.g., a heqeti ring (see new magic items) – touch the pillar, a keqemander demon gates in to confront the intruders (see new monsters). Simply examining the pillar will cause dizziness, and possibly confusion (save vs. spells to avoid). Any able to keep their eyes on the pillar might learn one of the following bits of information:

D10	Result
1-2	A colossal salamander fills the top of the pillar. It has multiple legs, and an enormous mouth filled with teeth and circled with a 'beard' of feelers/tentacles. Three lidless eyes span its massive brow.
3-4	Hopping salamander-headed bipeds wreak destruction on lizards
5-6	Humans in chains are driven into the maw of a giant amphibian
7-8	The boundary separating the spiraling narratives is in fact a tongue
9-10	The heqeti and their slaves seem to be moving towards a ziggurat in a cave.

It will take an hour of scrutiny to learn all of this information. Anyone who successfully gleans even one piece of information from the column has a flat 50% chance of recognizing the origin of Kauket artifacts and structures found elsewhere in Halls (e.g. pukel-manders, tears of Kauket, etc.), and a flat 33% chance of intuiting a relationship between Rimmaq-Isfet and Kauket. Such an ability does not allow one to intuit specific uses or functions of such objects, but does allow one to state with authority something along the lines of "That [whatever] is part of the demonic fishy-amphibian cult. I saw something similar on that blasted pillar!" Forewarned is forearmed, after all.

Note: Should the dam on Sub-Level 6 (SL6-25) be destroyed, the island will be swept clear of everything except the statue and the pillar. After 7-10 hours, the river will recede to normal level, leaving a thin layer of sticky muck on the island.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 keqemander demon (see new monsters): SZ L; AL CE; AC -2; MV 90; 150' flying (Class D); HD 12; HP 75; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/3-18; MR 40%. Constant abilities: dread (-1 to saves); infravision. Special attacks: acid spit (3-10 dmg; 30' range, every other round); cause fear; darkness (10' radius); exude acid with chance to degrade armor; use a symbol of discord. Special defenses: only hit by magic weapons; half damage from cold, electricity, fire, and gas; become invisible. Special: levitate; telekinesis (4,000 gp weight); project image; teleport without error; 50% chance to gate in either another keqemander or a Type I-IV demon.

Treasure:

A few items have washed up on the island: a cursed shield -1, missile attractor; a scroll case holding a copy of the epic adventure story, Fraternal Triumph: Taticus and Thekla against the Troll (see Arden Vul books); and a rather primitive statuette made of gold, with a solid gold body and limbs but with a head formed of three ancient Archontean solidi welded and melted together (worth 125 gp for the metal, or 430 gp to a very particular collector).

9-136: Ledge with Trapped Door

A worked ledge rising 5' out of the river leads to a stone door. The door is wizard locked (at 10th level of casting), and contains a deeply-incised inscription in Mithric.

The inscription takes the form of a 3'-diameter circle. A 6" register of text runs around the outer edge; within are a pair of eyes and a nose (but no other facial features). The inscription reads: "An archon towards his subjects, a legionary to his comrades, the faithful to their god, a husband to his wife, a mother to her children."

While the nose contains an obvious keyhole, the key is long gone. The only current way to open the door is to recognize the inscription as a riddle and speak the answer aloud in Mithric. The answer to the riddle is "love."

Trap (Curse): Touching or manipulating the door in any way imposes a curse on the manipulator. The curse causes the aura of the victim's alignment to change to its diametric opposite. To be clear, the victim's alignment itself does not change, merely the 'reading' offered by spells like detect alignment. In the case of true neutral, the new alignment reading is determined randomly. As this is a fairly subtle curse, the victim may not be aware that he/she has been cursed for some time. The curse can be removed, but only by remove curse cast at the 10th-level or greater. The trap might be detected by a thief (-10% chance), but it cannot be disarmed. Dispel magic cast at 10th level or above will remove it.

Note: Should the dam on Sub-Level 6 (SL6-25) be destroyed, the ledge will be swept clear. After 7-10 hours, the river will recede to normal level, leaving a thin layer of muck on the floor of the ledge.

9-137: Half-Finished Chamber

Abandoned shortly after it was begun, this chamber was intended to be the tomb of Marcion Aoratus's successor, Hecatia the Younger. The project was abandoned when the chief architect was slain in the tomb by unknown forces and Hecatia's interests turned elsewhere.

The chamber is a rough-hewn enlargement of a natural cave. Architect's chalk marks, some small iron eye-hooks, and a ball of twine are scattered about the chamber. Three large granite slabs, about 4'x4'x7' carved out of the rock of the floor, indicate the locations for future sarcophagi. The corpse of Halfdanios the Wiskin, an architect from the atelier of the great Phocion the Builder (see 8-142), is slumped over one of them. The corpse's skull has been crushed by a heavy object; the rest of the remains have deliquesced into bone and sinew. A set of architect's dividers and a fine hammer (35 gp total) rest near the corpse.

The tunnel to 9-138 was clearly bored from the west into this chamber; a small pile of rock rubble indicates this fact.

There is a 25% chance that a huldugritti (see new monsters) from 9-138 is present here, inspecting the rock for snacks.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 huldugritti (see new monsters) (25% chance): SZ M; AL N; AC 0 or 2; MV 120' or 60'; HD 8+8; HP 56; #AT 2 (in stone form); Dmg 2-16/2-16; MR 25%. Special attacks: hurl boulders (2-8 HP each). Special defenses: meld with stone (cure 3-24 HP); assume spirit form; +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to fire, electricity, and mind-affecting spells.

9-138: Ore Seams and Huldugritti

This large natural cavern features lots of minor dips and rises in the floor, walls and ceilings. The reason for this is that the area contains extremely rich seams of silver and iron, and has attracted huldugritti for many centuries; their gnawing has carved the interesting features into the rock face. As they find arcenum indigestible, the huldugritti have carefully eaten around three large (25-lb) knobs of arcenum (see new magic items).

Two huldugritti (see new monsters) are present here at all times, unless one has previously been encountered at 9-137. In addition there is a 33% chance that if combat breaks out, a third huldugritti will appear.

Inhabitants:

1. 2-3 huldugritti (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 0 or 2; MV 120' or 60'; HD 8+8; HP 61, 58, 56; #AT 2 (in stone form); Dmg 2-16/2-16; MR 25%. Special attacks: hurl boulders (2-8 HP each). Special defenses: meld with stone (cure 3-24 HP); assume spirit form; +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to fire, electricity, and mind-affecting spells.

Treasure:

Three 25-lb knobs of arcenum (see new magic items).

9-139: Tunnel up to 8-95A

This tunnel rises in swoops and whorls at a rather precipitous pitch before joining the collapsed tunnel at 8-95A, near Zhorak's forge.

9-140: Croaking Pool, with Rock Fingers

The Rimpled Run forms a wide pool in this location. The pool is 60' deep and filled with leafy, fronded pigment-less pondweeds. A large school of blind fish lives among the weeds. This microclimate is made possible by the geyser in 9-143, which makes both the air and the water here much warmer than normal.

Four irregularly-shaped columns of pitted granite rise from floor to ceiling here. The ancient heqeti bored dozens of holes into the 'fingers', each 3"-7" in diameter; in them live a vociferous breed of small white frogs. They fill the air with a cacophony of croaking and peeping.

Where the Rimpled Run leaves the pool in the northeast there is a short (5') waterfall; the current is swift and dangerous from this point onwards (see 9-141).

There's a 25% chance that the adolescent hydra from 9-143 is present here, swimming and feeding.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 six-headed hydra (25%): see statistics at 9-143.

9-141: Rimpled Run, Lower Reaches

The Rimpled Run enters a narrower passage here, only 8' in diameter. It also drops in elevation quickly and severely as it swings towards the south. These facts mean that navigation of the river past this point is much more difficult, as the current is swift and there is little head room above the water. An unprotected swimmer will take 10-60 HP damage from general buffeting before washing up at Level 10-31. Magical breathing assistance reduces the damage to 4-24 HP. Magical protection of the body eliminates all damage.

9-142: Beach with Stream

The overflow from the geyser in 9-143 runs down a gently-sloping, pebbled beach to join the Rimpled Run at 9-140. Scattered about the beach are a number of pieces of semi-valuable debris. There is a 10% chance that the six-headed hydra from 9-143 will be here.

Should the dam on Sub-Level 6 (SL6-25) be destroyed, the beach will be inundated, and anything on it will have been swept away. After 7-10 hours, the river will recede to normal level, leaving a thin layer of sticky muck on the beach.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 six-headed hydra (10%): see stats at 9-143.

Treasure:

Teak desktop (75 gp); two old helmets (5 gp); a Wiskin battle axe, a gold incense burner (35 gp), and a scroll case with a treasure map.

9-143: Hydra Cave, with Geyser

This large, 35'-tall cave is hot and steamy. A depression about 6' deep occupies most of its eastern half. Within the depression a geyser of hot water erupts every turn; over the centuries this has filled the depression with warm, nitrogen rich water.

The steamy water (along with feeding grounds in the surrounding caves and the pool at 9-140) has proven hospitable to a family of hydras, two adults with 11 and 9 heads respectively, and an adolescent with 6 heads.

Anyone within 30' of the geyser when it erupts takes 4-24 HP of scalding damage (save vs breath weapons for half damage). The hydras are immune to the geyser.

Beneath the hot water is a carpet of mostly splintered and crunched bones, as well as some treasure.

Within the western, relatively dry portion of the cave is a pile of sand strengthened by bones and bits of pond-weed. Within the pile are four hydra eggs (about 3' long); two will produce males and two will produce females. There is a 10% chance that one of the eggs produces a lernaean hydra. While the eggs are valuable generally (10,000 gp each), King Weskenim (SL4-22) and the goblins will surrender their three flawless diamonds (total of 15,000 gp) in return for a female egg.

Inhabitants:

1. 11-headed hydra: SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 11; HP 88; #AT 11; Dmg 1-10(x11).
2. 9-headed hydra: SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 9; HP 72; #AT 9; Dmg 1-8(x9).
3. 6-headed hydra: SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 6; HP 48; #AT 6; Dmg 1-6(x6).

Treasure:

Under the water: 5,119 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items), 2 aquamarines (500 gp each), an emerald (1,000 gp).
In the nest: four hydra eggs (10,000-15,000 gp each).

9-144: Skinks's Cave

A large population of cave skinks lives in this and the surrounding caves. Their quickness allows them to get past the hydras most of the time, and the hydras' size prevents them from squeezing into the narrower tunnels such as those between 9-143 and 9-144 and 9-149 and 9-148.

Although the entire population numbers 35, only 15 will be encountered here. The skinks are always voracious and are likely to swarm foes.

Inhabitants:

1. 15 cave skinks (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 7; MV 120'; HD 2; HP 16, 15, 14, 14, 13(x3), 12(x3), 11(x3), 10, 9; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: toxic mucus.

9-145: Wet Cave with More Skinks

The floor of this cave is unusually cracked and uneven, and glistens with moisture. The air is humid and warm. Every five rounds two blasts of superheated steam from the same underground source as the geyser spray upwards from one of the cracks in the floor. Those in the cave take 3-18 HP damage, or half if a save versus breath weapons is successful. Ten more skinks inhabit this cave; they are adept at dodging the effects of the steam sprays.

Inhabitants:

1. 10 cave skinks (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 7; MV 120'; HD 2; HP 15, 14, 13, 13 12(x3), 11, 11, 10; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: toxic mucus.

9-146: Ancient Garbage Heap

The floor of this hot and humid cave is covered by a layer of ancient trash derived from the old temple of Besa (8-119). The biological components of the trash heap mostly ossified centuries ago into hard and crunchy bits, which are mixed in with broken iron candelabra, badly bent bronze plates and ewers, soiled clothing, and so forth. The heap looks inviting, but in fact contains nothing of value save a silver and ebony statuette which takes 4-6 turns to locate. The cave skinks have found lots of routes through and under the heap, and are able to use the heap to gain surprise on the unsuspecting; they have a 1 in 3 chance to surprise.

Inhabitants:

1. 10 cave skinks (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 7; MV 120'; HD 2; HP 15, 14, 13, 13 12(x3), 11, 11, 10; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: toxic mucus.

Treasure:

A silver-and-ebony statuette of Besa in her squat, hermaphroditic manifestation (275 gp).

9-147: Tunnel up to 8-119

This tunnel spirals upward to join the ruined corridor near the temple of Besa at 8-119.

9-148: Cave with Dead Sortian

The skeletal corpse of a Sortian killed in antiquity lies in the center of this cave, still wearing its inert Sortian chain mail (see new magic items). The corpse's hands still clutch a lesser salt lamp of protection (see new magic items). In an ancient leather satchel that has been gnawed upon by the cave skinks are four packets of essence for the lamp.

Treasure:

Sortian chain mail (see new magic items); a short sword, a mace, a lesser salt lamp of protection (See new magic items) with four packets of essence (see new magic items), a bag of marbles, and a packet of chalk.

9-149: Cave of Carnage

This cave is warm and humid due to the geyser in 9-143. The corpses of six goblins are strewn about the cave, badly rent and torn. Five cave skinks (see new monsters) are feeding on the corpses. Producing noise or light here has a 33% chance of bringing 1-3 of the hydras from 9-143 to investigate.

The goblins discovered the path from 8-110 to 9-150, and were delighted to find hydras, as they would have loved to steal a hydra egg. Unfortunately they were slaughtered easily by the two adult hydras.

Inhabitants:

1. 5 cave skinks (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 7; MV 120'; HD 2; HP 15, 14, 13, 12, 10; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: toxic mucus.

Treasure:

Among the corpses may be found 43 sp, 22 gp, a single ancient octagonal platinum coin (see Arden Vul items), six spears, and a fine helmet.

9-150: Tunnel up to 8-110

This tunnel rises through a series of switchbacks to join area 8-110

LEVEL 10: THE ZIGGURAT OF KAUKET

This level is home to the dreaded heqeti ziggurat built in honor of the mighty demon prince, Kauket (see areas 10-32 to 10-37). The ziggurat, with its surrounding marsh and heqeti structures, has existed in some form or another for almost 3,400 years. Despite having been ‘cleansed’ twice in antiquity (once by the rudishva and once by the Archontians), the heqeti have returned from their hidden homes in the Underearth to re-sanctify their site. The ziggurat is once again operational, and the heqeti are starting to reoccupy their ancient halls.

The centerpiece of the level and, in some ways, culmination of the dungeon is the enormous cavern that is occupied by a stinking marsh (10-15) and by the ziggurat of Kauket (10-32 to 10-37). Causeways and bridges lead through or above the marsh so as to connect the ziggurat with heqeti dwellings delved from the surrounding rock. To the heqeti, this area constitutes an ancient and sacred shrine, but is not a major center of their habitation. Custody of the site is granted to an evil high priest of Kauket known as the Great Tongue, currently a certain Reepsiq (10-47). The Great Tongue is served by several other high-level spell casters and a mixed group of heqeti hoppers, chosen, and builders. Lesser heqeti sometimes make a pilgrimage from their dwellings in the Underearth to the ziggurat. To serve these pilgrims, the Great Tongue has constructed a small complex of ‘public’ areas (areas 10-51 to 10-62). Human and demi-human intruders arriving from Level 9 (via 10-1 or 10-31) will be instantly and unquestioningly treated as foes by the heqeti. Only those arriving from the Underearth (10-62) might find a cautiously neutral reception.

Given the concentration of powerful heqeti here, the task of cleansing the area of its evil is challenging. Most PCs will approach Level 10 through the heqeti forward post on Level 9 (areas 9-76 to 9-82). If the heqeti manage to send a warning from that location (see 9-79) to Level 10, then the Great Tongue and his forces will be prepared and waiting for intruders. Their state of readiness lasts for twelve hours; after twelve hours, the Great Tongue sends a strong party of heqeti hoppers, chosen, weavers, and builders up the long passage from 10-1 to 9-82 so as to reoccupy their forward base. While the heqeti forces are on alert, the leaders will all be found in and around the ziggurat (10-32 to 10-37), ready for a titanic battle. If the heqeti are not alerted, then they are dispersed throughout the level. Exterminating the heqeti and cleansing the ziggurat of its evil (see text at 10-32 to 10-37), ends the heqeti presence in Arden Vul ... at least for a generation. For, like all evil, the heqeti will eventually return, seeking to re-sanctify their holy site and again move into the other portions of Arden Vul. The only way to end the heqeti interest in the area is to destroy the ziggurat completely, e.g., by using powerful magic (earthquake, limited wish, etc.).

GENERAL CONSTRUCTION NOTES

Heqeti areas: All worked areas are heqeti areas

ICONIC AREAS

The Ziggurat of Kauket (10-32 to 10-37)

IMPORTANT NPCs

Reepsiq, the heqeti Great Tongue (10-47)

FACTIONS

The heqeti fully control the entire level.

ENVIRONMENT

The Mephitic Marsh (10-15) makes the entire level humid and warm. The marsh itself smells powerfully of acid, decay, and sulphur. The ziggurat proper (areas 10-32 to 10-37) lies under a hallow spell (see new spells) with a 60’ radius. This effect provides a +2 bonus to all rolls (saves, ‘to hit’ rolls, etc.) for those of CE alignment, while imposing a penalty of -2 to all rolls on those of all other alignments. The surrounding chambers and corridors lack this effect.

THE HEQETI AND KAUKET

For generations, heqeti Great Tongues have been attempting to summon Kauket himself to aid them in their goal of reoccupying the rest of Arden Vul. They have failed, mostly because of the absence of the pale green, spiral horn necessary to complete the summoning within the ziggurat (10-37). The horn was taken by the rudishva when they defeated the heqeti in antiquity; it is currently located in a high-security rudishva vault (area 5-95A). Knowledge of the very existence of the horn is limited, even to the heqeti. Reepsiq is aware that his efforts to summon Kauket will continue to fail until a horn is restored to area 10-37, but he doesn’t know exactly what the missing horn looks like.

The best information on the nature and location of the pale green horn is actually held by the two rudishva AIs, RAJ-750 (6-27) and AKL-600 (SL14-13); only the AIs can provide the proper command code to access the teleporter that leads to the secret vault. Should the PCs locate the horn and learn of its proper use, they will be able to insert it in the proper place in 10-37. Doing so instantly summons Kauket, however!

GMs must carefully consider whether combat with such a powerful foe is desirable and/or necessary for their campaigns. For certain campaigns, a battle with a demon prince might be an appropriate conclusion. For others, however, such a foolish and almost certainly lethal confrontation might not be appropriate. If such a confrontation is desired, the GM should seed information about the existence of the pale green horn so as to allow the PCs to bring Kauket to this plane. For such foolhardy PCs, Kauket is fully statted in the new monsters appendix. Of course, the demon prince will bring appropriate servitors with him to the Prime Material Plane, including multiple keqemandri and other lesser demons. Forewarned is forearmed! If a GM deems combat with a demon prince to be inappropriate for his/her campaign, however, it is easy enough to occlude the existence of the horn; in such cases, combat with the Great Tongue and the cleansing of the ziggurat will easily serve as a satisfying culmination to the campaign.

WEAKENING THE HEQETI

Accomplishing certain tasks elsewhere in the Halls may make the task of cleansing the ziggurat slightly easier. Of course, knowledge of how to weaken the heqeti is not common within Arden Vul. Should canny PCs seek information on how to do so, the GM ought to make the acquisition of this knowledge a quest in and of itself, one that would probably involve visiting imperial sages and archives in Archontos or communing with good-aligned deities. Some PCs may accomplish one or more of these tasks without realizing their import; if they do, so much the better for them.

Task	Area	Effect on Level 10
Removing the evil hallow effect (see new spells) from the upper heqeti temple.	7-78	Strips the magical power from the statues on the third step of the ziggurat of Kauket (10-34); the statues will not be able to utter unholy words at the Great Tongue's command
Weakening Rimmaq-Isfet by poisoning him through the portal in the Feasting Hall	8-76	Removes the evil hallow (see new spells) effect that covers the ziggurat of Kauket (see introductory text for areas 10-32 to 10-37)
Destroying the giant statue of Kauket, or neutralizing its power by casting a good-aligned hallow spell on it (see new spells)	9-12	Weakens Kauket himself, should the demon prince be summoned to this plane (see below and area 10-37 for this process). Kauket's magic resistance is reduced by 25% (from 80% to 55%)

ACCESS AND EGRESS

To Level 6: teleporter at 10-8, leading to 6-104

To Level 7: teleporter at 10-8, leading to 7-84

To Level 9: corridor at 10-1, leading up to 9-82

To Level 9: river at 10-31, leading up to 9-141

To Underearth: river at 10-31, leading to the Silent Sea in the Underearth (unmapped)

To Underearth: tunnel at 10-62, leading to the Underearth (unmapped)

Teleport Destinations on Level 10:

10-24: from heqeti teleport wells at 4-74

10-24: from heqeti teleport wells at 6-106

10-24: from heqeti teleport wells at 7-83

10-24: from heqeti teleport wells at 8-25

10-24: from heqeti teleport wells at 8-162

10-24: from heqeti teleport holes at SL5-32

RANDOM ENCOUNTERS

General note: if the complex is alerted to the arrival of the PCs, then there will be no random encounters.

1. Areas with No Random Encounters

10-27 to 10-37, 10-53

2. Western Approaches (10-1 to 10-14)

Checks should be made every 3 turns, with a 1 in 6 chance for an encounter. If an encounter is indicated, it will be one of the groups of heqeti guards from area 10-3 or 10-4 conducting a patrol of the western areas (see stats in those areas). If the heqeti in those areas have already been slain, then there will be no random encounters in these locations.

3. Mephitic Marsh (10-15 to 10-26)

Checks should be made every turn, with a 1 in 6 chance for an encounter.

d20	Encounter
1-18	2-4 acid salamanders (see new monsters): SZ L; AL N; AC 7; MV 60', 90' swimming; HD 7; HP 50, 49, 47, 45; #AT 1; Dmg 3-12. Special attacks: acid spit. Special defenses: immune to acid
19-20	3-8 heqeti hopper pilgrims (see new monsters), as 4 th -level fighters: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60', 150' swimming; HD 4; HP 28, 26, 25, 24, 23, 22, 21, 20; #AT 2; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 1-6 (bite). Special attacks: hop; +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice

4. Eastern Heqeti Areas (10-50 to 10-52, 10-54 to 10-62)

Checks should be made every other turn, with a 2 in 6 chance for an encounter.

d20	Encounter
1-15	5-10 heqeti pilgrims, as 4 th -level fighters (see new monsters): SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60'/150'; HD 4; HP 32, 30, 28, 26, 25, 24, 23, 22, 21, 20; #AT 2; Dmg 2-7 (staff), 1-6 (bite); hop; toxic skin; psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice
16-19	A patrol of 4 heqeti hoppers (see new monsters), as 4 th -level fighters: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60', 150' swimming; HD 4; HP 28, 26, 24, 22; #AT 2; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 1-6 (bite). Special attacks: hop; +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice
20	1-4 representatives of one of the other Underearth races, chosen at GM's discretion (e.g., duergar, svirfneblin, kaliyani, etc.). The representatives are interested in trade, and potentially espionage.

5. Northern Chambers (10-38 to 10-49)

Checks should be made every other turn, with a 1 in 4 chance for an encounter.

D6	Encounter
1	An apprentice heqeti weaver (see new monsters), as a 4th-level cleric of Kauket: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 120, 90' swimming; HD 4; HP 25; #AT 1; Dmg 3-8 (club +1). Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice. Possessions: club +1; heqeti spore bomb (see Arden Vul items). Spells prayed for: bless, command, cure light wounds, darkness, detect magic; chant, hold person, resist fire, silence 15' radius. The apprentice is taking a mundane message from the Chief Weaver (10-48) to Cheksib (10-13). If killed as a wandering monster, the apprentice should be removed from the roster at 10-38.
2-5	6 heqeti hoppers (see new monsters), as 4th-level fighters: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60', 150' swimming; HD 4; HP 28, 27, 26, 24, 23, 22; #AT 2; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 1-6 (bite). Special attacks: hop; +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice
6	Four heqeti chosen led by a heqeti weaver: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>4 heqeti chosen (see new monsters), as 6th-level fighters: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60', 150' swimming; HD 6; HP 43, 40, 39, 36; #AT 2; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 1-6 (bite). Special attacks: hop; acid tongue (1-6 acid damage); +1 damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold and water/ice</li> <li>1 heqeti weaver (see new monsters), as a 7th/7th-level magic user/cleric of Kauket: SZ M; AL CE; AC 3; MV 120', 90' swimming; HD 7; HP 34; #AT 1; Dmg 5-10 (footman's mace +2). Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice. Possessions: amulet of natural armor +2 (see new magic items); staff of healing (19 charges); copper-headed footman's mace +2; two glass spheres of arcane assistance (one of arcane warding, one of protection) (see new magic items); potion of gaseous form. Magic user spells: enlarge, jump, magic missile, shield; continual light, levitate, ray of enfeeblement; fireball, protection from normal missiles; polymorph other. Cleric spells: bless, command (x2), create water, cure light wounds; chant, hold person (x2), resist fire, silence 15' radius; animate dead, blindness; sticks to snakes</li> </ol>

LEVEL KEY

10-1: Heqeti Road Up to Level 9-82

Serving as the primary connection between the ziggurat of Kauket (10-32 to 10-37) and the rest of Arden Vul, this broad corridor is eerily lit by fungal pods that hang every 20' or so. The pods emit a green luminescence that reflects gently off the oiled, pebbled stonework of the road. The corridor is 20' tall and very long, extending about 300' between 9-82 and 10-2. Every 60' or so, it ascends up a flight of steps with a rise-to-tread ratio too large for human feet.

About every 40' the road is flanked by a pair of alcoves. The majority of the alcoves contain shapeless, damaged lumps of stone that once might have been statues. The last four niches before the road reaches area 10-1, however, have new, recognizable statues formed of granite brought from the Underearth. They depict four contemporary leaders who are leading the heqeti resurgence in Arden Vul: Caudatssa the Tongue (7-79), Reepsiq the Great Tongue (10-47), Pikaressa the Second Tongue (10-49), and Qassapik the Weaver (10-48). All four appear in classically aggressive heqeti poses, in slight crouches and wielding a staff or wand.

10-2: Hall of Mouths

When approached from the west, an eerie green glow can be seen emerging from this 25'-tall chamber. The glow comes from the green luminescence emitted by scores of fungal pods that hang from pegs on the walls and from the ceiling (the pods are harvested from the swamp in 10-15). The walls are also covered with purple lichen and yellow shelf fungus. The hall is dominated by a large abstract sculpture rising from the center of a murky pool of greenish water. The sculpture (once a statue of Kauket, but damaged in antiquity and now unrecognizable) is festooned with dripping algae. Numerous warning salamanders (see new monsters) writhe in the pool and among the algae. The presence of non-heqeti causes them to strobe and to dart in all directions, both into the pool but also towards 10-5, 10-10, and 10-14.

All but one of the exits from the hall are carved to resemble enormous, toothed salamander mouths. The carvings are incredibly ancient, and badly damaged; indeed, the lower teeth in all of the portals were smashed in antiquity. Still, they present a foreboding aspect, one that is compounded by the rippling, green-and-black shell strings that block sight into each mouth.

A patch of heqeti sign mold (see new flora) is found on the wall to the right side of each of mouth. When approached within 5' the mold adjusts itself to reveal an image and a phrase in Heqeti Runic. Amid the other fungi and luminescent pods, it might be possible for hasty explorers to miss the sign mold: the mold should thus be treated as a concealed doors.

Destination	Image	Phrase
To 10-4	Spear	Faithful // Watchers
To 10-10	Eft	Water // Life
To 10-14	Ziggurat	Tongue// sacrifice // Kauket
To 10-5	Flask	Weavers // Rimmaq-Isfet
To 10-3	Spear	Faithful // Watchers

If the heqeti have been warned of approaching hostile forces (see 9-79), then the forces from areas 10-3 and 10-4 will have an ambush waiting in this chamber. They will also have summoned aid from area 10-6 and will have released the neo-otyugh from 10-5. These reinforcements wait just inside the tunnel to 10-5 hoping to surprise intruders once they engage with the initial heqeti forces.

Inhabitants:

1. 8 warning salamanders (see new monsters): SZ S; AC 8; MV 90', 150' swimming; HD 2; HP 14, 13, 12, 12, 11, 10, 9, 8; #AT 0; Dmg 0. Special attacks: strobe light. Special defenses: surprised only on 1.

Treasure:

The shells that form the curtains hanging in the mouths are rare, and could bring 900 gp total.

10-3: Heqeti Watchers

One of two teams of heqeti guardians keeps watch on the approaches to the ziggurat from this chamber. The walls are painted a sickly mauve and are covered with more of the yellow shelf fungus; the floor is painted black, although it is punctuated with a dozen, large, white teardrops. The team consists of six heqeti chosen led by a heqeti weaver (see new monsters). They possess the bloated, stinking corpses of a baidara and a varumani, which they use for target practice with their spears.

The heqeti react immediately to the presence of intruders in area 10-2. Should they be forewarned of the arrival of hostile forces, one of the chosen will have been sent to 10-14 to warn the Great Tongue; the remainder will prepare an ambush (in conjunction with their fellows in 10-4).

Inhabitants:

1. 6 heqeti chosen (see new monsters), as 6th-level fighters: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60', 150' swimming; HD 6; HP 44, 41, 40, 39, 37, 35; #AT 2; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 1-6 (bite). Special attacks: hop; acid tongue (1-6 acid damage); +1 damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold and water/ice.
2. 1 heqeti weaver (see new monsters), as a 7th/7th-level magic user/cleric of Rimmaq-Isfet: SZ M; AL CE; AC 3; MV 120', 90' swimming; HD 7; HP 34; #AT 1; Dmg 5-10 (footman's mace +2). Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice. Possessions: amulet of natural armor +2 (see new magic items); staff of healing (18 charges); copper-headed footman's mace +2; two glass spheres of arcane assistance (one of arcane warding, one of protection) (see new magic items); potion of gaseous form. Magic user spells: enlarge, jump, magic missile, shield; continual light, levitate, ray of enfeeblement; fireball, protection from normal missiles; polymorph other. Cleric spells: bless, command (x2), create water, cure light wounds; chant, hold person (x2), resist fire, silence 15' radius; animate dead, blindness; sticks to snakes. Spell book: dancing lights, detect magic, enlarge, jump, magic missile, protection from good, read magic, shield, sleep; darkness 15' radius, invisibility, knock, mirror image, ray of enfeeblement, strength; blink, dispel magic, gust of wind, lightning bolt, slow.

10-4: More Heqeti Watchers

This chamber is decorated identically to area 10-3, and contains an equivalent force of guardians. This team has no rotting corpses, however; instead, it possesses a primitive statue of Kauket, to which it has attached numerous bits of flesh taken from its foes.

Inhabitants:

1. 6 heqeti chosen (see new monsters): see stats at area 10-3.
2. 1 heqeti weaver (see new monsters): see stats at area 10-3.

Treasure:

The statue of Kauket is soapstone and 4' tall; despite its blasphemous visage, it might fetch 450 gp.

10-5: Ancient Hole

The corridor is badly damaged here, with a mini cave-in on the northeast side and numerous ancient blast marks along the walls. More significant is the crater that blocks access down the corridor; it is 25' deep but only 20' wide. A rickety bridge of reeds, vines, and fungal fibers spans the hole, anchored to the walls on either side of the hole. On either side of the bridge is an upturned giant mushroom cap containing a pile of rotting viscera from unknown creatures. On the south side of the hole is a pile of ropes woven from the same mix of vines and reeds; the heqeti use it to pull the neo-otyugh from the hole if necessary.

The hole is inhabited by a large neo-otyugh. The heqeti feed it scraps from sacrifices and other victims. Given sufficient warning, the heqeti in 10-3 and 10-4 use the ropes to haul the neo-otyugh out of the hole to aid them in repelling intruders. The bottom of the hole is covered with several feet of biological rubbish, including skins, bones, bits of leather equipment, and so forth. Amid the debris are four heqeti stone spear-heads, three barbed heqeti arrows coated in Kauket's vision (see Arden Vul items), and a bardiche +1, +4 vs heqeti.

Inhabitant:

1. 1 neo-otyugh: SZ L; AL N; AC 0; MV 60'; HD 11; HP 71; #AT 3; Dmg 2-12/2-12/1-3. Special attacks: disease. Special defenses: never surprised.

Treasure:

See text.

10-6: Crossroads Encampment

A contingent of heqeti hoppers under the command of a lesser builder are stationed in this badly damaged crossroads. The northern side of the intersection is badly damaged, with the pebbled, oily stonework giving way to rough natural granite. The heqeti are working here to try to uncover some of the lost areas to the west and south, and have recently broken through to area 10-8.

The encampment includes three baskets woven of vines, a portable bathing pool composed of a 10'x4' carapace of some underground creature, and numerous digging tools (mattocks, sledges, shovels). The baskets hold dried fish, dried mushrooms, and dried sausage.

Inhabitants:

1. 10 heqeti hoppers (see new monsters), as 4th-level fighters: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60', 150' swimming; HD 4; HP 31,

30, 28, 26, 25, 24, 23, 22, 21, 20; #AT 2; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 1-6 (bite). Special attacks: hop; +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice.

2. 1 heqeti builder (see new monsters), 6th/6th-level fighter/cleric of Rimmaq-Isfet: SZ M; AL CE; AC 1; MV 90', 120' swimming; HD 6; HP 46; #AT 1; Dmg 4-9 (short sword +2 of wounding). Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice. Possessions: heqeti mail armor (-2 to AC); short sword +2 of wounding, amulet of natural armor +2 (see new magic items). Spells: bless, command, cure light wounds, light, fear; chant, hold person (x2), silence 15' radius, speak with animals; dispel magic, curse.

10-7: Broken Lesser Obsidian Gates

A pair of large, obsidian valves lie shattered on the floor here. It is clear that they bear a resemblance to the more iconic ones found on level 5 (area 5-6), even if they are much smaller. Beyond the doors is a completely collapsed corridor that once led to a major shrine to Rimmaq-Isfet. The shrine was cleansed by the Archontean in antiquity, and the access route to it collapsed. The heqeti are beginning the slow process digging their way back to the shrine.

GM Note: The lost shrine provides a possibility for GM expansion.

10-8: Heqeti Shrine

This chamber superficially resembles area 9-121. The ceiling is 25' tall and is supported by a row of 4'-diameter pillars that flank the north and south walls. Originally the pillars marched down the corridor towards 10-6, but only one of these remains. Notable features include three grotesque stone faces carved into three of the pillars, an enormous sculpture in the center, and an unsettling carved block of arcanum at the west end.

Stone Pillar Faces: The three pillars at the east edge of the room are carved as grotesque stone faces (like those at areas 6-92 and 9-121). Each head is roughly humanoid, but contains some unusual amphibian-oid features, including bulbous eyes, slit noses and lolling tongues. The mouth of each head/face is open, revealing a 2' oval compartment. If a flask-full of the sweat of Rimmaq-Isfet (see new magic items) is placed in any of the mouths, the tongue of that head will lick the nearest person (within 5'). Two effects are imparted: 1) the subject will be immune to acid effects from any of the servitors of Kauket (such as keqemandri – see new monsters) for 5-10 turns, and 2) the subject will be afflicted with an effect from the following table:

D10	Effect
1	Sweat uncontrollably for 7 days, -3 CHA, -1 to hit rolls
2	Temporary gills, allowing subject to breathe underwater, for 7 days
3	Eyes grow disproportionately large, -1 CHA but true seeing , for 3 days
4	Legs grow in power, arms atrophy: MV increased by 30', STR -1, for 3 days

5	Webbing between fingers and toes, better swimming but -1 CHA
6	Comprehend amphibian tongues, for 7 days
7	Cursed (if good), blessed for 3 days if CE, nothing for other alignments
8	Sensitive to light for 7 days (-2 to all rolls), but gains infravision
9	Locate body of fresh water; knows route to pool-sized bodies of water (or larger) within 200'
10	Mark of Kauket: all 9 of the above, the effects of 1-3 of which are permanent

Remove curse will remove any of the temporary effects, but the Mark of Kauket can only be removed through the special favor of a good-aligned deity (probably at the cost of a significant quest).

Sculpture of Rimmaq-Isfet: Dominating the center of the chamber is a giant soapstone representation of Rimmaq-Isfet. It is easily 40' long, 10' tall and 10' wide, and depicts the dread lord as an enormous, slug-like amphibian. The thick body rests on eight salamander-like legs, while the open maw points towards the altar at the west. A forest of delicate feelers originally extended out of the toothed maw, and a ridge of 5' tentacles extended in a circle around the mouth; these were all broken off in antiquity, and lie in pieces on the floor. Sharp teeth still line the mouth, however, and three huge lidless eyes span its brow. The eyes once held gems, but they were stolen in antiquity. The entire statue is painted black, with yellow spots.

The other feature of the sculpture is that it oozes an oily clear liquid that drips to the floor and pools in a subtle depression (10' in diameter) to the south of the sculpture. This sweat is none other than the sweat of Rimmaq-Isfet (see new magic items). Currently seven flasks-full of the sweat exist in the depression; the sculpture oozes enough to produce one flask per day.

Arcanum Teleport Mouth: The west wall features a low dais (3' tall), upon which is a squat, foreboding block of orange arcanum (see new magic items) roughly 8' square. The arcanum is carved as an open, upturned mouth and is meant to depict the open maw of Rimmaq-Isfet. The opening of the mouth is about 5' in diameter and extends 3' down from the top of the mouth. The rest of the block is quite detailed, with feelers, teeth, and two pronounced, 6'-long orbital ridges along either side of the mouth. Each ridge used to have three empty sockets where eyes might have been; they are perfectly sized for tears of Kauket (see new magic items). One of the ridges was vandalized in antiquity, however, and its three eye sockets are ruined and misshapen. The entire mouth rests on four 3'-diameter cylinders of granite, each of which is carved to depict the head of an enemy of the heqeti in agony: these are a human, a varumani, a rudishva, and a varuda. Finally, a set of slots are carved into the east face of the block; these can be used to climb to its top.

Four 7' iron rods are thrust into the top of the arcanum block, and a pitiful true varumani named Bedara is suspended between the four rods. Beaten, tortured, and gagged, she has six copper ritual daggers buried in her flesh; these open wounds are preventing full regeneration, and cause her blood to drip into the arcanum maw. Although badly injured, she could be rescued and, after regenerating, will eagerly accompany and assist her saviors.

The block of arcanum is, of course, highly magical, and detects easily as such. The mouth functioned as an outgoing teleportal to other heqeti sites within Arden Vul. It works by climbing the arcanum block, placing a tear of Kauket (see new magic items) into an appropriate eye socket, and then jumping into the open mouth. Ten seconds later the user appears in the desired location. As one of the orbital ridges has been vandalized, only three of the eye sockets are still operative. Of these, the right eye sends the user to area 6-104 while the center eye sends the user to area 7-84. The destination for the left eye was destroyed in antiquity (it formerly abutted area SL5-32); attempting to use it causes instant death as the user is teleported into solid rock. The heqeti have filled the left eye socket with mud to prevent any further 'disappearances'. The tears of Kauket (see new magic items) used to power the teleporter are consumed in the process.

GM Note: The heqeti have only recently dug their way back to this shrine. Reepsiq (10-47) and the other heqeti leaders were delighted to find the chamber, as they hoped to use its teleport powers to return to the upper levels. Their plans were thwarted by the fact that only two of the original six teleportals still functioned (three were destroyed in antiquity and the fourth sends explorers to their doom). These limitations explain the minimal presence of heqeti outside levels 9 and 10. Should the GM wish it, he/she might decide that the heqeti will shortly repair more of the teleportals on the arcanum block; those other teleportals lead to areas 5-41, SL6-6, and 8-162. Once/if those other destinations are accessible, the heqeti will swiftly move to establish fortified advance positions in each of those areas.

Inhabitant:

1. Bedara, a true varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 11 (max 55); #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or by weapon. Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Bedara is a senior and popular member of the varumani lodge of hunters (see 7-14); she was ambushed and captured while scouting the aroksachaul (see new monsters) on Level 9. The other hunters (and especially Nolgi) will be eternally grateful to her rescuers.

10-9: Broken Corridor Fragment

This section of corridor is badly damaged; it is completely blocked by the destruction wrought in antiquity.

Secret Door (east): The door is normal to locate. It is magically held, and can only be opened by force or by a knock spell.

10-10: Heqeti Eft Ponds

Despite the ruined nature of its western side, this 20'-tall hall is still in use by the heqeti. It is warmer and more humid than surrounding areas, and subtly lit by more of the green, luminescent pods that hang on the walls. Originally six oval ponds flanked a larger central pool, but the western three ponds were destroyed in antiquity. The three surviving ponds are shallow (3' deep) and filled with murky, brownish, algae-clouded water taken from the mephitic marsh (area 10-15). The central pool, however, is deeper (7') and filled with clear water that recirculates through six huge tusks that project from the pool's rim. The heqeti use the area for mating (central pool) and the maturation of efts (side ponds). Currently there are seventeen non-combatant efts in the side ponds, while four heqeti chosen stand guard. The sound of combat here brings Feqarrip from area 10-11 to investigate.

Inhabitants:

1. 17 heqeti efts (non-combatants): SZ S; AC 8, HP 2.
2. 4 heqeti chosen (see new monsters), as 6th-level fighters: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60', 150' swimming; HD 6; HP 40, 37; #AT 2; Dmg 3-8 (spear +1), 1-6 (bite). Special attacks: hop; acid tongue (1-6 acid damage); +1 damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold and water/ice. Possessions: spear +1.

Treasure:

One of the eft ponds contains a ring of acid resistance (see new magic items) hidden in the murk.

10-11: Abattoir

Although a dais and the stump of a statue are visible by the north wall, the heqeti have repurposed this area for food storage and preparation. A score of carcasses hang from hooks in the ceiling; they are in various state of draining and/or curing. Two are still alive, moreover. A stone table rests against the southeastern wall; a half-dozen sharp copper blades rest on its blood-soaked surface.

Feqarrip, an heqeti weaver responsible for the care and feeding of the efts, lurks among the hanging corpses. She is quick to join combat in area 10-10.

Inhabitant:

1. Feqarrip, a heqeti weaver (see new monsters), as a 7th/7th-level magic user/cleric of Kauket: SZ M; AL CE; AC 3; MV 120'; 90' swimming; HD 7; HP 35; #AT 1; Dmg 5-9 (hammer +2). Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice. Possessions: amulet of natural armor +2 (see new magic items); hammer +2; potion of gaseous form. Memorized spells: enlarge, jump, magic missile, shield; continual light, levitate, ray of enfeeblement; fireball, protection from normal missiles; polymorph other. Cleric spells prayed for: bless, command (x2), create water, cure light wounds; chant, hold person (x2), resist fire, silence 15' radius; animate dead, blindness; sticks to snakes. Spell book: dancing lights, detect magic, enlarge, jump, magic missile, protection from good, read magic, shield, sleep; darkness 15' radius, invisibility, knock, mirror image, ray of enfeeblement, strength; blink, dispel magic, gust of wind, lightning bolt, slow.
2. Mox, a lesser varumani (see new monsters), gagged and hanging trussed from a hook: SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 10 (max 51); #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or by weapon. Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision.
3. Erenbald, 6th-level male Thorcin ranger, hanging trussed from a hook (and missing three fingers and five toes): SZ M; AL CG; AC 10; MV 120'; HD 6; HP 4 (max 58); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 16, INT 13, WIS 14, DEX 10, CON 17, CHA 11. Erenbald has no equipment.

GM Note: Erenbald and two companions were exploring level 7 with Mox as a guide; the group discovered area 7-84 but were overwhelmed by the heqeti nearby. Although his companions were sacrificed in the temple at 7-79, Erenbald and Mox were delivered to level 10 for interrogation and eventually were designated as food for the efts.

10-12: Magic Nexus

A dangerous magical hot spot persists here, where the ancient corridors were destroyed in antiquity. Caused by the unwelcome confluence of Archontean destructive magic with the local heqeti demonic and divine magic, the hot spot inflicts a variety of unpleasant effects on those who come too close. The hot spot is difficult to note, appearing only as a shimmer in the (darkened) corridor. Magic users have a 1 in 6 chance to passively detect the danger, while thieves have a 1 in 8 chance. Searching carefully, of course, reveals the shimmer instantly. Those who blunder into the hot spot must roll on the following table to determine the effect:

D10	Effect
1	Electrostatic Charge: victim takes 2-16 HP electric damage, hair turns bone white and stands straight up.
2	Magnetism: victim's skin is magnetized, causing all iron-based objects within 2' to adhere to his/her skin. It takes a successful open doors check to pull the item(s) free. Combat with iron/steel weapons is impossible
3	Narcolepsy: tension and conflict produce in the victim an impulse to sleep. At the start of any stressful endeavor, the victim must save vs spells or fall asleep for 1-4 rounds.
4	Magic Magnet: victim is attuned to magic, such that magic user spells cast at others are likely to target him/her instead. For every spell cast at a person or object within 30' of the victim, the victim must save vs spells or take the effects on him/herself. Note: this might aid a party, but might also hinder it.
5	Light Master: the victim possesses infravision and ultravision to 60'. Unfortunately, he/she also emits a bright purple glow, rendering him/her visible at 150'.
6	Phase Distortion: victim continuously comes in and out of phase. This acts as a blur spell on him/her in combat, but also causes permanent balance and dexterity issues; for non-combat purposes, the victim's DEX is reduced by 3, as the victim has trouble knowing where to put his/her feet.
7	Echo Effect: victim's hearing is badly damaged. Listen rolls are reduced by 3-12%. This may render some races effectively deaf.
8	Monster Magnet: victim doubles chances for wandering monsters.

GM Note: the persistence of these weird effects explains the heqeti reticence to re-delve these collapsed areas. As these are not exactly curses, they cannot dispelled by remove curse. The GM might decree that dispel magic cast by a 12th- or higher-level caster might remove the effect.

10-13: Quarters of Cheksib the Weaver

This spacious hall has been repurposed as the residence of Cheksib the weaver, one of the Great Tongue's (10-47) chief lieutenants. The hall is 15' tall, and the walls are painted inky black, with yellow spots dotting the darkness.

A low, stone-rimmed pool is attached to the north wall of the chamber; it is murky and contains small fish, amphibians, lichen, and water plants. To the south of the pool are two oval lounging devices; they appear as 5'-long, empty peapods sloped such that the head is about 3' higher than the foot of the lounger. Cheksib and a guest can rest in the pods, while letting their feet dangle in the water of the pool. By the south wall are two stone sleeping benches, a locked stone chest, and two woven baskets containing dried fish and eels (25 lb per basket).

Cheksib is present in his quarters unless the complex has been alerted to the potential arrival of intruders (see Level 10 introduction). If an alert has been raised, Cheksib will be present at area 10-17, attempting to summon a worm of Qok (see new monsters).

Trap (chest): A glyph of warding in the form of energy drain was cast on the chest by the Great Tongue. The glyph drains one level of experience from its victim.

Inhabitant:

1. Cheksib, a heqeti weaver (see new monsters), as a 12th-level cleric of Kauket: SZ M; AL CE; AC 3; MV 120', 90' swimming; HD 12; HP 83; #AT 1; Dmg 5-10 (footman's mace +2). Constant abilities: infravision; WIS 18 for bonus spells. Special attacks: +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice. Possessions: amulet of natural armor +2 (see new magic items); copper-headed mace +2; a heqeti ring (see new magic items); and a rod of absorption (25 spell levels). Cleric spells: bless, cause fear, command (x2), create water, cure light wounds, light, resist cold; augury, chant, hold person (x2), resist fire, silence 15' radius, speak with animals; animate dead, blindness, dispel magic (x2), prayer, speak with dead; cause serious wounds, divination, neutralize poison, protection from good 10' radius; flame strike, true seeing; aerial servant, heal.

Treasure:

The chest contains 9,513 gp in assorted types of coins, plus three pure white and three particolored tears of Kauket (see new magic items), two vials of Kauket's vision (see Arden Vul items), two heqeti spore bombs (see Arden Vul items), a pledge of Rimmaq-lsfet (see new magic items), and a set of six sacrificial knives made of copper (1,500 gp for the set). The handles of the knives are carved to resemble salamander-monsters whose eyes are filled with lapis lazuli.

10-14: Broken Obsidian Gates

Smaller cousins of the famous Obsidian Gates (see area 5-6) once stood here, blocking the main route to the Mephitic Marsh (10-15) from the west. The valves were blasted apart by the rudishva in antiquity, however, and all that is left are 2'-wide stumps that still swing easily on their hinges. Hanging from each fragment are roughly a dozen heads of sentient creatures, in varying states of decay. Most are skeletal, but there are a few heads with flesh still attached; these come from an aroksachaul (see new monsters), a goblin, and a human.

10-15: The Mephitic Marsh

This enormous cavern is home to the infamous ziggurat of Kauket (see 10-32 to 10-37). It is warm, humid, and dimly lit by green and yellow phosphorescent lichen and algae. The ziggurat and other worked structures rise from a deep, smelly marsh that roils and burps from geothermal forces. The cavern is about 90' tall, but the bottom 20' is a soggy mixture of wet humus, nitrogenated water in ponds and rivulets, and decaying biological matter. It smells powerfully of acid, decay, and sulphur.

Flora and Fauna of the Marsh: The marsh has a wide variety of plant life, including dozens of species of mushrooms, lichens, and algae. Two unusual types of flora dominate, however: a fruticose, aquatic version of wolf lichen known to the heqeti as acid drops (see new flora), and a variety of brown algae known as the glowing friend (see new flora). The former is slightly dangerous, for it contains an acid that is toxic to mammals. The pneumocysts of the latter allow it to float gently in the humid air; those sacs are also phosphorescent, providing the dim light that marks the marsh.

Scores of species of insects inhabit the swamp; these range in size from finger-nail sized skimmers to fist-sized dragonflies and spiders. Some blind cave fish inhabit the larger ponds. The largest, and most dangerous animals of the swamp, however, are the acid salamanders (see new monsters) that prey on the smaller creatures. For every turn spent in the marsh, there is a 1 in 6 chance of attracting 2-4 of these voracious creatures.

Movement in the Marsh: The surface of the marsh is and wet and swampy, with multiple pools and rivulets of brown water. Since it is often hard to find drier ground amid the lichen, algae, and water, movement is effectively halved here. It is possible to move at  $\frac{3}{4}$  speed, but so doing requires a save versus poison each round; failure indicates that some of the toxic sap of the acid drops has affected the PC (take 2-5 HP damage).

Inhabitants:

1. 16 acid salamanders (see new monsters): SZ L; AL N; AC 7; MV 60', 90' swimming; HD 7; HP 53, 52, 50, 49, 49, 48, 48, 47(x3), 46, 46, 45, 45, 44, 44; #AT 1; Dmg 3-12. Special attacks: acid spit. Special defenses: immune to acid.

10-16: Least Causeway

Rising only 5' above the level of the marsh, this causeway is the lowest of the three connecting to the ziggurat of Kauket (see 10-32). Short staircases provide access into the marsh on either side; in addition, numerous small (2'-diameter) holes drilled through the causeway allow water and creatures to move back and forth from the north and south sides of the marsh. The portion of the causeway closest to the ziggurat was badly damaged in both the rudishva and Archontean wars. The more intact, western portion is lined with 4'-tall iron stakes upon which hang the decomposing corpses of various sacrificial victims – human, goblin, varumani, etc.

If the heqeti are alerted to the arrival of the PCs, a welcoming party of builders, hoppers and chosen will be waiting on the causeway and in the nearby marsh, hoping to slow the intruders' progress towards the ziggurat.

Inhabitants (possible):

1. 4 heqeti chosen (see new monsters), as 6th-level fighters: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60', 150' swimming; HD 6; HP 44, 41, 40, 37; #AT 2; Dmg 3-8 (spear +1), 1-6 (bite). Special attacks: hop; acid tongue (1-6 acid damage); +1 damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold and water/ice. Possessions: spear +1.
2. 8 heqeti hoppers (see new monsters), as 4th-level fighters: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60', 150' swimming; HD 4; HP 29, 28, 26, 25, 24, 23, 22, 18; #AT 2; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 1-6 (bite). Special attacks: hop; +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice.
3. 2 heqeti builders (see new monsters), 6th/6th-level fighter/cleric of Kauket: SZ M; AL CE; AC 1; MV 90', 120' swimming; HD 6; HP 46, 44; #AT 1; Dmg 4-9 (short sword +2 of wounding). Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice. Possessions: heqeti mail armor (-2 to AC); short sword +2 of wounding, amulet of natural armor +2 (see new magic items). Spells: bless, command, cure light wounds, light, fear; chant, hold person (x2), silence 15' radius, speak with animals; dispel magic, curse.

10-17: Lower Summoning Platform

Rising 35' above the surrounding marsh, this flattened stone pillar is home to an oval pool of murky, viscous brown sludge some 10'x3' in size. Four slim columns of polished basalt stand around the pool, one on each side; these 4'-tall columns are set obliquely (not perpendicular to the floor). When a sacrificial victim has been tied to the four columns and the proper summoning rites performed, a worm of Qok (see new monsters) appears in the pool, eager to devour whatever sacrifices are forthcoming.

If the heqeti are forewarned about intruders on level 10, then one of the prisoners from 10-43 (determined randomly) will be tied to the columns while Cheksib the weaver summons a worm of Qok. In a battle royale in 10-15 or upon the ziggurat, the worm of Qok will first attempt to attack PCs in the northern half of the marsh; if none are present there, it mounts the least causeway (10-16) and then moves to the ziggurat (10-32) to defend the fane of its lord. Cheksib, meanwhile, uses spells in support of the Great Tongue. If PCs are able to enter the great cavern without alerting the ziggurat or heqeti leaders, then of course the platform will be empty.

Inhabitants (possible):

1. 1 worm of Qok (see new monsters): SZ L; AL CE; AC 3; MV 60'; HD 12; HP 86; #AT 1; Dmg 2-24; MR 50%. Special attacks: swallow.
2. Cheksib the heqeti weaver, (see new monsters): see stats at area 10-13
3. Prisoner from 10-43, to be determined randomly.

10-18: Upper Summoning Platform

Rising 55' from the marsh, this flattened stone pillar is identical in every other way to the one at 10-17. Again, should the complex be warned of the approach of the PCs, the heqeti weaver, Neepariq, will be present here, sacrificing a victim from 10-43 in order to summon a worm of Qok. If the PCs approach undetected, then the platform is empty. It should be noted that a long, slender, and steep staircase descends from this platform to the marsh.

Inhabitants (possible):

1. 1 worm of Qok (see new monsters): SZ L; AL CE; AC 3; MV 60'; HD 12; HP 86; #AT 1; Dmg 2-24; MR 50%. Special attacks: swallow.
2. Neepariq, heqeti weaver, as 12th-level cleric of Kauket: see stats at area 10-40
3. Prisoner from 10-43, to be determined randomly.

10-19: High Bridge

Soaring 55' above the marsh, this 10'-wide, 3'-thick, damaged stone bridge connects area 10-18 with the top level of the Ziggurat (area 10-35). One section of the span was broken in antiquity; it is spanned by a rickety set of wooden planks.

10-20: Pilgrim's Rest

The largest structure in the great cavern outside of the ziggurat, this platform is the site at which many heqeti pilgrims stop to take in the sights and make a small offering to Kauket. The platform rises 25' above the marsh, and was damaged in the wars of antiquity. It is connected to the ziggurat by a bridge (10-21) and to the eastern chambers by a solid causeway. The center of the platform has a low, raised pool about 18' in diameter. To either side of the pool are two 4'-tall copper statues of erect salamanders with upturned mouths. Heqeti devotees of Kauket approach the pool, perform ablutions there, and deposit offerings of small gems into the mouths of the salamanders. Once this is accomplished, they are free to enter the ziggurat. The offering statues are periodically emptied into the treasury (10-53).

Unalerted: The platform is watched by a quartet of heqeti chosen (see new monsters) with long halberds. At any given moment 5-8 heqeti pilgrims are present on the platform.

Alerted: If alerted, 2 heqeti builders, 2 apprentices, and 10 hoppers guard the causeway.

Inhabitants:

1. 4 heqeti chosen (see new monsters), as 6th-level fighters: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60', 150' swimming; HD 6; HP 40, 37; #AT 2; Dmg 3-12 (halberd +1), 1-6 (bite). Special attacks: hop; acid tongue (1-6 acid damage); +1 damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold and water/ice. Possessions: halberd +1.
2. 5-8 heqeti hoppers (see new monsters), as 4th-level fighters: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60', 150' swimming; HD 4; HP 30, 28, 26, 25, 25, 24, 24, 22; #AT 2; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 1-6 (bite). Special attacks: hop; +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice.
3. 2 heqeti builders (see new monsters), 6th/6th-level fighter/cleric of Kauket: SZ M; AL CE; AC 1; MV 90', 120' swimming; HD 6; HP 46, 45; #AT 1; Dmg 4-9 (short sword +2 of wounding). Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice. Possessions: heqeti mail armor (-2 to AC); short sword +2 of wounding, amulet of natural armor +2 (see new magic items). Spells: bless, command, cure light wounds, light, fear; chant, hold person (x2), silence 15' radius, speak with animals; dispel magic, curse.
4. 10 heqeti hoppers (see new monsters), as 5th-level fighters: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60', 150' swimming; HD 5; HP 38, 36, 36, 35, 35, 34, 33, 32, 32, 30; #AT 2; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 1-6 (bite). Special attacks: hop; +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice.
5. 1 apprentice heqeti weaver (see new monsters), as a 4th-level magic user: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 120', 90' swimming; HD 4; HP 12; #AT 1; Dmg 2-5 (dagger). Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice. Possessions: wand of frost (14 charges); curved dagger. Memorized spells: enlarge, magic missile, spider climb; strength, web. Spell book: detect magic, enlarge, magic missile, protection from good, read magic, spider climb; darkness 15' radius, invisibility, strength, web.
6. 1 apprentice heqeti weaver (see new monsters), as a 4th-level cleric of Kauket: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 120', 90' swimming; HD 4; HP 25; #AT 1; Dmg 3-8 (club +1). Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice. Possessions: club +1; heqeti spore bomb (see Arden Vul items). Spells prayed for: bless, command, cure light wounds, darkness, detect magic; chant, hold person, resist fire, silence 15' radius.

Treasure:

The copper statues are worth 300 gp each. They contain a total of 37 gems worth 50 gp each and 319 gems worth 10gp each.

10-21: Low Bridge

This 20'-wide, 5'-thick bridge is in relatively good shape and connects the second level of the ziggurat (10-33) with the nearby pilgrims' rest area (10-20). The bridge is 25' above the floor of the Mephitic marsh.

10-22: Stair Fragment

A fragment of staircase that once connected to 10-20 rises from the marsh in this location. It is solid stone and 10' tall, and liberally covered with acid drops and the glowing friend (see new flora). It would be a good location from which observe the ziggurat.

10-23: Pillar with Ledges

A pillar of stone rises to the ceiling here. Two ledges are inset into it at a point 15' above the marsh. The flora has been carefully pruned back here, as the heqeti use this as a place of 'natural beauty' from which to admire the ziggurat. Numerous heqeti sigils have been carved into the side of the pillar. The northern ledge provides good sight lines overlooking the first step of the east face of the ziggurat.

10-24: Platform of the Pukel

A broad, low stone platform rises 5' above the level of the marsh in this location. The pavement is cracked, pitted, and holed. It abuts the great salamander head to the south (10-25), and is also the destination for all the heqeti teleport wells throughout Arden Vul, whether they are currently active or inoperative (i.e., those found at areas 4-74, 6-106, 7-83, 8-25, 8-162, and SL5-32).

10-25: Giant Salamander Head

A giant, carved, stone salamander head rises ominously from the Mephitic Marsh at this point. It resembles both the Great Pukel (9-40) and the colossal buried head (9-12) in appearance: the head is rounded, with no ears, huge saucer-shaped eyes, a slit nose, and a gaping maw some 10' in size. The lower lip juts forward from the mouth, allowing liquid to drip from the head and upper lip into the open maw. The maw is filled with clear water, amid which glisten numerous pure white tears of Kauket (see new magic items). The head rises 25' above the marsh, and its mouth is level with the nearby platform (10-24).

The head is an extrusion of both Kauket and Rimmaq-Isfet on this plane; it continuously oozes a viscous white liquid that drips into the water of the head's maw, where it turns into a tear of Kauket. The head produces sufficient liquid for five tears of Kauket each day, up to a maximum of 15 tears. If collected and drunk before it can harden into a tear, the liquid causes permanent madness.

Treasure:

Nine tears of Kauket (see new magic items).

10-26: Pillar with Ledge

Another natural pillar rises from floor to ceiling in this location. A small ledge is set into the pillar about 10' above the level of the marsh. The pillar and ledge are heavily swathed in both the glowing friend and acid drops (see new flora). The ledge contains a battered memorial to the legionaries of the Archontean 10th Legion ("the Glorious Tenth"). It takes the form of a copper casket within a stone cairn. The casket, although corroded by humidity, still bears the distinctive numeral X (10) of the legion; within the casket is a gladius +2, a cestus, a copper plaque, a spell scroll containing Kentillian's useful sphere (see new spells), and an amulet of courage (see new magic items). The plaque reads, in Mithric, "In memory of our brothers and sisters in the Glorious Tenth, who died to cleanse this foul site." The plaque would bring 2,500 gp to the modern polemarch of the legion.

Treasure:

See text.

10-27: Vantage Point

This broad platform set into the south wall of the cavern is about 35' above the level of the marsh. It provides a fine view of the ziggurat, which looms to the north. A narrow set of stairs provides access to the marsh. Once used as a gathering place for pilgrims in antiquity, the damage to the western precincts of the heqeti complex has ensured that this area remains relatively unvisited.

Secret Door (south): This door is normal to find. It opens simply by pushing it inward.

10-28: Cistern

The heqeti have walled off this portion of the great cavern with mortared round stones. Here the run-off of the Rimpled Run (see 10-30 and 10-31) collects into a large cistern. The heqeti use the cistern to modulate the amount of water in the Mephitic Marsh.

The retaining wall of the cistern is 10' thick and 30' tall; its top is flattened, allowing persons to walk along the top. The water level is 15' from the floor of the cavern.

A sluice gate set into the retaining wall allows the heqeti to add water to the marsh. The controls for the sluice are located atop the retaining wall; a simple wheel lever attached to a rope completes the mechanism. Crafty PCs may decide to empty the cistern. Given the size of the marsh, however, this act does not seriously affect movement or the structures in the marsh.

10-29: Cistern Keepers' Post

A pair of heqeti hoppers are stationed in this hidden perch overlooking the mephitic marsh (10-15). They are tasked with maintaining the cistern (10-28) and watching the river and spillway (10-30). They have a rope ladder that they attach to eyebolts set in the floor whenever they wish to descend to the cistern. They also possess a spiral ibex horn which they attempt to sound in case of attack or if they spot intruders in the cistern. The west wall is painted black, with a sinuous white tongue superimposed over it (a symbol of Rimmaq-Isfet). The watchers have no treasure.

GM Note: The post offers a fine vantage point from which to observe the ziggurat. PCs who spent 1-4 hours watching from here might learn quite a bit about the heqeti population and activities.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 heqeti hoppers (see new monsters), as 4th-level fighters: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60', 150' swimming; HD 4; HP 24, 22; #AT 2; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 1-6 (bite). Special attacks: hop; +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice.

10-30: Beach and Spillway

A broad cave spans the Rimpled Run in this location. It slopes down gently from south to north, a fact that means that the northern bank serves as a spillway for excess water from the Run. Ordinarily the overflow is minimal, amounting only to a small trickle that drips down the cliff into area 10-28. Significant changes to the water flow (see, for example, area 9-65) will cause the trickle to grow to a flood, affecting the water level at 10-28.

Secret Door (west): The secret door is normal to find, and opens by pushing it open (open doors check).

Treasure:

A limed over ring of swimming is encrusted into the stone along the south bank of the Rimpled Run. Detecting it requires a successful secret door check.

10-31: Rimpled Run, from Area 9-141

The Rimpled Run emerges from level 9 (area 9-141) here. That section of the underground river is vigorous and dangerous, as the water entirely fills the passageway (see 9-141 for risks of traveling from that location). Those who successfully navigate the Run find that it slows considerably in this section, allowing swimmers a chance to exit the river at area 10-30 (roll 3d6 under DEX to reach the beach). The Rimpled Run continues for several miles before debouching into the Silent Sea, a vast underground lake forming a key portion of the Underearth.

Areas 10-32 to 10-37: The Ziggurat of Kauket

The ziggurat of Kauket is the dominant feature of Level 10. The ziggurat is massive and ancient. First built out of huge blocks of granite some 3,400 years ago, it has always served as a site for heqeti worship of the demon prince, Kauket. The blocks are 10'x15' in size, and are pitted, pebbled, and greasy from the blood of sacrifices and the passage of countless heqeti slimes. As the map makes clear, the ziggurat has been damaged over the millennia, particularly on its lower steps, but is still basically intact.

The ziggurat has four steps, with the lowest step rising 10' above the level of the swamp and each subsequent step climbing another 15'. The top step is thus 55' above the marsh. The ziggurat is lit by the glow of fire emanating from its first and third steps (see text below).

Environmental Effects: As a site of great and ancient evil, the entire ziggurat lies under the effect of a hallow spell (see new spells). This means that creatures of chaotic evil alignment benefit from +2 to all rolls (saves, 'to hit' rolls, etc.), while those of all other alignments suffer a -2 penalty to all rolls. Should the PCs have cleansed the upper heqeti temple (area 7-78) of its evil (through the use of a hallow spell), then the hallow effect here on Level 10 will be removed. It is, of course, also possible to unhallow the ziggurat through the application of good-oriented divine rituals; doing so after a climactic battle here should be considered a good and heroic act. The rituals for hallowing the ziggurat are costly (20,000 gp) and time-consuming (three weeks).

A Climactic Battle!

For those adventuring parties wishing to cleanse Arden Vul of the heqeti presence, an epic combat on and around the ziggurat is likely. In preparing for such a combat, the GM must consider the state of heqeti awareness of the PCs's progress (see 9-79 and Level 10 introduction). If the heqeti are expecting intruders, then the heqeti leaders will have assumed fixed positions in the vicinity of the ziggurat, and will be ready to repel the PCs with spells and summoned allies. The resulting combat may provide a suitably epic conclusion to many campaigns. If, however, the PCs have managed to approach Level 10 without alerting the heqeti to their presence, then the ziggurat will provide a substantially easier challenge, as some of the heqeti leaders will be found elsewhere in the complex. Finally, GMs should also be aware that it is possible for the PCs to summon and fight Kauket himself! The procedures for such a foolish action are described in the Level 10 introduction and in the text for area 10-37.

10-32: Ziggurat of Kauket, First Step

The first step of the great ziggurat is the most badly damaged from previous wars. It rises 10' above the level of the surrounding marsh, and is accessed from area 10-16 via a short, 5' staircase. Statues occupy three of its four corners; next to each statue is a brazier with glowing red coals. Two doors on the west side of the step lead inward to area 10-36; these are unlocked. The walls leading to the second step are densely carved with high-relief images of heqeti worshipping a strange salamander with elephant feet and human hands (Kauket).

Statues: The three remaining statues on this step (one was destroyed in antiquity) are 13' tall. Each appears as a slug-like being with two powerful hind legs and two arms that grip a spear, a mattock, and an axe respectively. The statues are granite, and finely carved, despite numerous lichen growths and pitting from age; they could be sold for 900 gp each. In addition, the statues moan constantly in a low-pitched, eerie tone. The heqeti assume this is Kauket speaking to them, when in fact it is the effect of a simple, but very ancient, enchantment. The moaning rises and falls in volume, and is punctuated every couple of rounds with a loud croaking sound. If a good-aligned being approaches within 10' of any of the statues, a powerful dispel magic effect emanates from the statue in question; this effect covers a sphere in a 20' radius around the statue. This effect can be permanently defeated if a 12th-level caster casts dispel magic on each statue.

Unalerted: If the complex is not alerted, then this step will have 9-16 heqeti pilgrims milling about, admiring the ziggurat. Four chosen will also be present, one posted by each of the doors to 10-36.

Alerted: If the heqeti are expecting the PCs, then nobody will be present here, but a troop of eight chosen led by Pikaressa, the Second Tongue (see 10-49) will be hiding inside area 10-36, ready to burst from the doors as soon as the PCs approach.

Inhabitants:

1. 9-16 heqeti hopper pilgrims (see new monsters), as 4th-level fighters: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60', 150' swimming; HD 4; HP 31, 30, 29, 28, 28, 27(x3), 26(x3), 24, 23, 22, 22, 21; #AT 2; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 1-6 (bite). Special attacks: hop; +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice.
2. 4 heqeti chosen (see new monsters), as 6th-level fighters: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60', 150' swimming; HD 6; HP 39, 38, 35, 30; #AT 2; Dmg 3-12 (halberd +1), 1-6 (bite). Special attacks: hop; acid tongue (1-6 acid damage); +1 damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold and water/ice. Possessions: halberd +1.

10-33: Ziggurat of Kauket, Second Step

The second step suffered less damage in antiquity. It rises 15' above the first step and 25' above the level of the marsh. It is accessed either via stairs from 10-32 or via the bridge (10-21) leading from area 10-20. A single door on the south wall leads inward to area 10-37. The riser for the third step is once again carved with images of Kauket smiting all manner of foes, both demonic, mammalian, and unknown.

Unalerted: If the complex is not expecting the PCs' arrival, there will be 4-7 pilgrims waiting to visit area 10-37. Watching them are two heqeti builders.

Alerted: If the heqeti are prepared for intruders, then the step will be empty.

Inhabitants:

1. 4-7 heqeti hopper pilgrims (see new monsters), as 4th-level fighters: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60', 150' swimming; HD 4; HP 28, 27, 26, 25, 24, 22, 20; #AT 2; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 1-6 (bite). Special attacks: hop; +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice.
1. 2 heqeti builders (see new monsters), 6th/6th-level fighter/cleric of Kauket: SZ M; AL CE; AC 1; MV 90', 120' swimming; HD 6; HP 46, 43; #AT 1; Dmg 4-9 (short sword +2 of wounding). Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice. Possessions: heqeti mail armor (-2 to AC); short sword +2 of wounding, amulet of natural armor +2 (see new magic items). Spells: bless, command, cure light wounds, light, fear, chant, hold person (x2), silence 15' radius, speak with animals; dispel magic, curse.

10-34: Ziggurat of Kauket, Third Step

The third step rises 15' above the second and 40' above the level of the marsh. It is accessed via a staircase from 10-33 (on the western side). Bronze statues stand proudly at each of its four corners. Next to each statue is a brazier that glows with red-hot coals. The walls leading to the fourth step are carved in a more restrained, but still impressive fashion: a 5'-tall band of carved images extends around the entirety of the top step, depicting a single, huge salamander surrounded by fawning heqeti.

Statuses: The bronze statues are 9' tall and depict anonymous heqeti with arms upraised and bowing towards the pinnacle of the ziggurat. The workmanship of the statues is fairly crude, and thus they will only bring 300 gp each. Like the statues on the first step, these are enchanted with a unique effect, a sort of 'delayed blast unholy word.' If the Great Tongue (10-47) is standing anywhere on the ziggurat, he is able to use his action on a given round to croak out a command directed at one of the four statues; immediately, the designated statue will emit a deafening unholy word (radius 30'). The Great Tongue can perform this feat once per statue per day.

Weakening Rimmaq-Isfet by poison on Level 8 (see area 8-76) causes the statues on the third step to lose their ability to utter unholy words.

Unalerted: If the complex has not been warned of the PCs' arrival, no heqeti are present here.

Alerted: Six heqeti chosen are waiting here, armed with javelins and halberds. Their task is to prevent intruders from reaching the fourth step of the ziggurat.

Inhabitants:

1. 6 heqeti chosen (see new monsters), as 6th-level fighters: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60', 150' swimming; HD 6; HP 44, 41, 40, 38, 35, 35; #AT 2; Dmg 3-12 (halberd +1), 1-6 (bite). Special attacks: hop; acid tongue (1-6 acid damage); +1 damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold and water/ice. Possessions: halberd +1.

10-35: Ziggurat of Kauket, Fourth Step

The pinnacle of the ziggurat lies 15' above the third step and 55' above the level of the marsh. It is accessed either via the bridge (10-19) from area 10-18 or via stairs from 10-34. A shallow copper depression about 8' in diameter occupies the exact center of the step; in the center of the basin is a 6"-diameter hole leading inside the ziggurat (to 10-37). The basin is stained with blood. Four copper shepherd's crooks rise 5' above the basin, from each of which hang strong copper restraints. Sacrifices to Kauket are bound to the crooks and then exsanguinated into the basin.

Unalerted: There is a 45% chance that Reepsiq, the Great Tongue (see 10-47), is present here, preparing a sacrifice to Kauket (select sacrifice from area 10-43). If Reepsiq is present, he is accompanied by three heqeti builders (see new monsters).

Alerted: If the complex is awaiting the PCs, Reepsiq, the Great Tongue (see 10-47), and Qassapik, the Chief Weaver (see 10-48), will be present here, preparing spells in order to defend the ziggurat. With them will be three heqeti builders. The two leaders will already have summoned demonic allies; three invisible keqemandri will already be levitating near the ziggurat, ready to swoop down upon intruders.

Kauket Arrives: It is possible for the PCs to summon Kauket himself, whether knowingly or inadvertently. See text at 10-37 for details. If Kauket is summoned, he appears atop the fourth step with three keqemandri servitors. Woe to the PCs! Note: it is possible to slightly weaken Kauket by destroying the great statue of the demon prince that is located on Level 9 (area 9-12); see text there.

Inhabitants:

1. Reepsiq, the Great Tongue, 17th-level heqeti cleric: for stats, see 10-47.
2. Qassapik, the Chief Weaver, 10th-level cleric/9th-level magic user: for stats, see 10-48.
3. 3 heqeti builders (see new monsters), 6th/6th-level fighter/clerics of Kauket: SZ M; AL CE; AC 1; MV 90', 120' swimming; HD 6; HP 46, 45, 43; #AT 1; Dmg 4-9 (short sword +2 of wounding). Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice. Possessions: heqeti mail armor (-2 to AC); short sword +2 of wounding, amulet of natural armor +2 (see new magic items). Spells: bless, command, cure light wounds, light, fear; chant, hold person (x2), silence 15' radius, speak with animals; dispel magic, curse.
4. 3 keqemander demon (see new monsters): SZ L; AL CE; AC -2; MV 90', 150' flying (Class D); HD 16; HP 107, 99, 97; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/3-18; MR 40%. Constant abilities: dread (-1 to saves); infravision. Special attacks: acid spit (3-10 dmg; 30' range, every other round); cause fear; darkness (10' radius); exude acid with chance to degrade armor; use a symbol of discord. Special defenses: only hit by magic weapons; half damage from cold, electricity, fire, and gas; become invisible. Special: levitate; telekinesis (4,000 gp weight); project image; teleport without error; 50% chance to gate in either another keqemander or a Type I-IV demon.
5. Kauket, the demon prince (see new monsters): SZ L; AL CE; AC -7; MV 120'; HD 16+; HP 175; #AT 2; Dmg (3-18) (spear of Kauket) and 1-4 (bite); MR 80% (or 55%). Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: swallow foes on roll of 19-20 to hit; sonic stun every other round; acid spit (2-12 HP); cause fear, charm person, charm monster, feeblemind (1x/day), suggestion. Special defenses: +2 or better weapons to hit; immune to psionics; half damage from cold, electricity, fire, and gas. Special: detect magic; read magic; comprehend language; detect invisible creatures; ESP; clairvoyance; clairaudience; water breathing; continual darkness; create illusion (as a wand of illusion); levitate; dispel magic; polymorph self; wall of fire; telekinesis (11,000 gp weight); teleport (without error); project image; use any symbol (1x/day each); vanish 1x/day; polymorph any object; gate in other demons with an 80% chance for success (33% for a type II-IV demon, 33% for a keqemander [see new monsters], and 33% for a type V-VI demon). The spear of Kauket (see new magic items) has many magical powers. GM Note: should the statue of Kauket at area 9-12 be destroyed or its power neutralized (via hallow spell - see new spells), Kauket's magic resistance drops from 80% to 55%.

10-36: Ziggurat of Kauket, Inner Fane

Accessible only from the doors on the first step of the ziggurat, this 10'-tall chamber holds the sacred cult objects of Kauket. Light is provided by two braziers filled with burning coals. The interior walls are painted an unsettling shade of yellow-green, with large symbols of Kauket everywhere: white tear drops, black and barbed spears, white worms, gaping toothless maws, etc. The centerpiece of the chamber is a stone table about 5' tall on which are laid the holy relics of Kauket. These include three 8" curved fangs purported to be Kauket's, a copper bowl with seven pure white tears of Kauket (see new magic items), a six foot spear of ebony said to be the spear of Kauket (actually just a spear +2), a set of keys (one gold and one platinum) to the Obsidian Gates (5-6D), and a replica of Kauket's palace (located on the 497th layer of the abyss), carved out of a 3'-diameter amethyst (10,000 gp).

Unalerted: A small but regular stream of heqeti pilgrims filters through this chamber, stopping briefly to admire the cult objects. See text and stats at 10-32.

Alerted: If the complex is ready for intruders, a strike team of eight heqeti chosen led by the Second Tongue, Pikaressa, will be waiting here, ready to spring an ambush on any intruders who reach the first step (10-32).

Inhabitants:

1. 8 heqeti chosen (see new monsters), as 6th-level fighters: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60', 150' swimming; HD 6; HP 45, 44, 42, 40, 39, 38, 35, 31; #AT 2; Dmg 3-12 (halberd +1), 1-6 (bite). Special attacks: hop; acid tongue (1-6 acid damage); +1 damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold and water/ice. Possessions: halberd +1.
2. Pikaressa, the Second Tongue (see stats at 10-49)

10-37: Ziggurat of Kauket, Sacrificial Chamber

The second interior chamber of the heqeti ziggurat is accessible only from the door on the southern wall of the second step. It leads to the sacrificial chamber and the true holy of holies for the ziggurat.

The octagonal chamber holds a 5'-tall stone pillar atop of which rests a copper bowl. Blood from sacrifices slain on the fourth step (10-35) drips through holes in that step to land in the bowl here.

Four of the eight walls are carved with half-relief sculptures. The sharp ends of horns taken from bizarre or magical creatures are thrust into three of the sculptures. A double-sized, pearl-white tear of Kauket (see new magic items) is thrust into the open, wide end of each horn; the mouths of the horns are all stained with blood.

Sculpture #1 (southwest)

Image: Kauket, stirring in the mud with his spear; barely visible are small, tadpole-like creatures wriggling in the mud.

Horn: A midnight black, straight demon's horn (3' long), with silver glyphs incised into it (475 gp). It is inserted into the mud at the feet of Kauket.

Sculpture #2 (northwest)

Image: Kauket stands amid a crowd of heqeti hoppers; large tears fall from his eyes into the mouths of grateful followers.

Horn: A purple, curved, ram-like demon's horn, albeit with unsettling incrustations across its 4' length. The horn is thrust into Kauket's heart.

Sculpture #3 (northeast)

Image: Kauket leaps into battle, wielding an enormous spear; hordes of keqemandri and other demons follow him.

Horn: A 3' segment of a unicorn horn. The tip is stuck into Kauket's spear.

Sculpture #4 (southeast)

Image: Kauket stands atop a ziggurat, while heqeti throng the lower steps.

Horn: The horn is missing; if present it would be inserted into Kauket's mouth. The missing horn is pale green, with a broad spiral and with irregular tufts of black bristly hair growing from it. It may be found in area 5-95A.

Summoning Kauket: Should the missing horn be inserted into the fourth sculpture, and blood poured into each of the horns, then Kauket will manifest atop the ziggurat within 2-6 turns. Reepsiq, the Great Tongue (10-47), is aware that the absence of the fourth horn prevents him from fully communing with, or summoning, Kauket. He would give almost anything for the return of the horn. The missing horn was, in fact, taken by the rudishva when they cleansed the ziggurat millennia ago. Recognizing its importance, they stored it in a hidden vault (area 5-95A). Information on the location of the vault and the horn is lost to all living beings; only the rudishva AIs can, if asked, confirm the horn's existence and describe how to access it (see AIs at 6-27 and SL14-13).

10-38: Hall of the Builders

This large, 25'-tall chamber is dominated by an enormous carved heqeti head that rises out of a central pool. The head is carved out of a 20'-diameter half-column of stone that rises 15' into the air before branching into two slender (5'-wide) bridges that connect to the walls of the chamber. The central column is carved to resemble the upturned maw of a heqeti hopper, with the bridges as tongues emerging from that maw. A narrow entrance in the central column allows one to climb a spiral staircase and thus access the tongues/bridges. The carved half-column is ancient, pitted and damaged in places, but still exudes the oily sheen of active heqeti habitations.

Circling the chamber at a level 15' above the floor is a 5'-wide walkway. The walkway can be accessed by climbing, or by using the spiral stair and tongues/bridges. The walkway allows one to view a pictorial history of the heqeti occupation of Arden Vul, in the form of bas-relief panels some 5' high. The bas-reliefs differ in age and artistic skill, as well as in content; they can be roughly divided into four programs, starting from the northeast and working clockwise.

Discovery of Arden Vul

Age: 3,600 years

Scenes: Primitive heqeti entering a cavern, constructing the ziggurat, genuflecting before Kauket, standing before twin waterfalls (i.e.. 9-66, 9-67)

Carving Skill: Primitive

Length: 10 panels, some 50'

Golden Age of Heqeti Habitation

Age: 2,900 years

Scenes: Fighting rudishva, varumani, and varuda; constructing the pukel-manders; re-building the ziggurat; heqeti dwellings along a canyon (9-109); heqeti before a geyser and pool (SL6-1)

Carving Skill: Good

Length: 15 panels, some 75'

Wars and Reverses

Age: 1,850-2,000 years

Scenes: A builder confronts a spear-maiden (i.e., Arden); hoppers assault humans; heqeti trying to summon Kauket; the final panels are blank

Carving Skill: Begins with high quality, last panel is primitive

Length: 5 panels, 25'

Return of the Heqeti

Age: 300 years

Scenes: Re-occupying the ziggurat; summoning worms of Qok (see new monsters)

Carving Skill: Impressive

Length: 3 panels, 15'

Unalerted: Two heqeti builders and two apprentice weavers are inspecting their racial histories.

Alerted: No inhabitants.

Inhabitants

- 1 apprentice heqeti weaver (see new monsters), as a 4th-level magic user: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 120, 90' swimming; HD 4; HP 12; #AT 1; Dmg 2-5 (dagger). Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice. Possessions: wand of frost (10 charges); curved dagger. Memorized spells: enlarge, magic missile, spider climb; strength, web. Spell book: detect magic, enlarge, magic missile, protection from good, read magic, spider climb; darkness 15' radius, invisibility, strength, web.
- 1 apprentice heqeti weaver (see new monsters), as a 4th-level cleric of Kauket: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 120, 90' swimming; HD 4; HP 25; #AT 1; Dmg 3-8 (club +1). Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice. Possessions: club +1; heqeti spore bomb (see Arden Vul items). Spells prayed for: bleed, command, cure light wounds, darkness, detect magic; chant, hold person, resist fire, silence 15' radius.
- 2 heqeti builders (see new monsters), 6th/6th-level fighter/clerics of Kauket: SZ M; AL CE; AC 1; MV 90, 120' swimming; HD 6; HP 46, 44; #AT 1; Dmg 4-9 (short sword +2 of wounding).

Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice. Possessions: heqeti mail armor (-2 to AC); short sword +2 of wounding, amulet of natural armor +2 (see new magic items). Spells: bless, command, cure light wounds, light, fear; chant, hold person (x2), silence 15' radius, speak with animals; dispel magic, curse.

Treasure:

The heqeti historical carvings, if removed from the wall, would bring 500-1,000 gp per panel, depending on the quality.

10-39: Practice Grounds

This floor of this chamber is covered in a 1' layer of dirt. Its walls are painted deep black, with huge white teardrops on each cardinal face. An 8'-tall, 4'-wide stone pillar rises from the center of the room. To it are shackled three bestial varumani (see new monsters); between the varumani are four practice dummies made of leather-stuffed clay. Eight torches are set into sconces along all four walls.

Unalerted: If the complex is unalerted, one of the heqeti apprentices and several chosen are found here, practicing spells and weapons skills. The heqeti like to use varumani as sparring dummies due to their regenerative powers.

Alerted: No one is present.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 apprentice heqeti weaver (see new monsters), as a 4th-level magic user: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 120', 90' swimming; HD 4; HP 12; #AT 1; Dmg 2-5 (dagger). Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice. Possessions: wand of magic missiles (54 charges); curved dagger. Memorized spells: enlarge, magic missile, spider climb; strength, web. Spell book: detect magic, enlarge, magic missile, protection from good, read magic, spider climb; darkness 15' radius, invisibility, strength, web.
2. 4 heqeti chosen (see new monsters), as 6th-level fighters: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60', 150' swimming; HD 6; HP 43, 40, 39, 38; #AT 2; Dmg 3-12 (halberd +1), 1-6 (bite). Special attacks: hop; acid tongue (1-6 acid damage); +1 damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold and water/ice. Possessions: halberd +1.
3. 3 bestial varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL NE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 53, 50, 49; #AT 3; Dmg 3-6/3-6/3-10. Special defenses: regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision; immune to poison.

10-40: Quarters of Neepariq the Weaver

Neepariq's quarters are spartan, especially compared with his rival Cheksib (10-13). The floor is covered with several inches of sand. A tall table (5') runs across the entirety of the west wall; various objets d'art and curiosities line the table. Four 3'-diameter urns filled with marsh soil and water stand in the corners of the room: from these grow large specimens of the glowing friend (see new flora). Against the east wall is a trapped stone chest.

Neepariq enjoys the meditative pursuit of drawing elaborate geometric patterns (often a labyrinth) in the sand, sometimes using his stock of pieces of obsidian to accentuate the pattern. The current pattern shows an enormous eye surrounding a dozen teardrops, each picked out in obsidian. A set of heqeti footprints leads from the door to the sleeping niche, to the chest, and to the table.

In the northwest corner of the room a concealed ivory coffer is set into a hole in the stone floor under 2" of sand. The coffer is encircled by a thin steel chain attached to a pull ring. If one knows where to look for the ring, it is relatively easy to find; then one can pull the coffer out of the sand with the ring.

Trap (chest): A glyph of warding in the form of energy drain was cast on the chest by the Great Tongue. The glyph drains one level of experience from its victim.

Inhabitant:

1. Neepariq, a heqeti weaver (see new monsters), as a 12th-level cleric of Kauket: SZ M; AL CE; AC 3; MV 120', 90' swimming; HD 12; HP 81; #AT 1; Dmg 4-9 (staff +2). Constant abilities: infravision; WIS 18 for bonus spells. Special attacks: +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice. Possessions: amulet of natural armor +2 (see new magic items); staff +2; a heqeti ring (see new magic items); and a rod of beguiling (13 charges). Cleric spells: bless, cause fear, command (x2), create water, cure light wounds, light, resist cold; augury, chant, hold person (x2), resist fire, silence 15' radius, speak with animals; animate dead, blindness, dispel magic (x2), prayer, speak with dead; cause serious wounds, divination, protection from good 10' radius, sticks to snakes; flame strike, true seeing; aerial servant, heal.

Treasure:

Stone Chest: 1,853 pieces of obsidian, most only finger-nail sized (10 gp each).
Hidden ivory coffer (250 gp): two white tears of Kauket (see new magic items); two vials of Kauket's vision (see Arden Vul items); two heqeti spore bombs (see Arden Vul items); a pledge of Rimmaq-Isfet (see new magic items); and a bronze disc carved with an image of an Archontean official (75 gp).

10-41: Quarters of the Apprentices

Seven junior heqeti weavers call this hall home. A low pool filled with murky water occupies the center of the chamber. Fourteen sleeping niches are built into the walls of the chamber. The apprentices rarely spend much time here, as they are tasked with duties throughout the ziggurat area.

Unalerted: If the heqeti are taken unawares, then two apprentices are sleeping here.

Alerted: No one is present here.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 apprentice heqeti weaver (see new monsters), as a 4th-level magic user: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 120', 90' swimming; HD 4; HP 12; #AT 1; Dmg 2-5 (dagger). Constant abilities: infravision.

Special attacks: +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice. Possessions: wand of magic missiles (43 charges); curved dagger. Memorized spells: enlarge, magic missile, spider climb; strength, web. Spell book: detect magic, enlarge, magic missile, protection from good, read magic, spider climb; darkness 15' radius, invisibility, strength, web. This weaver has been afflicted by the light master effect from the magical nexus at 10-12. Although his infravision is strong, he emits a purple glow visible for 150'.

2. 1 apprentice heqeti weaver (see new monsters), as a 4th-level cleric of Kauket: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 120, 90' swimming; HD 4; HP 25; #AT 1; Dmg 3-8 (club +1). Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice. Possessions: club +1; heqeti spore bomb (see Arden Vul items). Spells prayed for: bleed, command, cure light wounds, darkness, detect magic; chant, hold person, resist fire, silence 15' radius.

Treasure:

Scattered in the sleeping nooks are seven pieces of carved coral strung on leather cords (100 gp each), plus 2-12 pieces of jewelry formed of bits of silver and semi-precious stones (35 gp each).

10-42: Barracks of the Ziggurat Guards

This 15'-tall chamber serves as the barracks for the chosen and builders who help to guard the ziggurat and surrounding areas. Each 10' section of wall has three sleeping niches cut into it; this makes a total of twenty-seven niches. The niches have some rushes from the marsh, plus 1-3 mesh sacks containing personal items. Running through the center of the chamber is a shallow pool (3' deep, 5' wide, 15' long) filled with murky, silty water. At the north and south ends of the pool are peapod-shaped, stone reclining benches. Cleverly mounted to the walls between and beside the sleeping niches are weapons racks, which contain thirty-six spears, seventeen javelins, and six stone maces.

Unalerted: Four heqeti chosen are resting here.

Alerted: The chamber is empty.

Inhabitants:

1. 4 heqeti chosen (see new monsters), as 6th-level fighters: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60', 150' swimming; HD 6; HP 41, 39, 38, 37; #AT 2; Dmg 3-12 (halberd +1), 1-6 (bite). Special attacks: hop; acid tongue (1-6 acid damage); +1 damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold and water/ice. Possessions: halberd +1.

Treasure:

Scattered among the personal effects in the sleeping niches are forty-three small bits of hand-made jewelry (15 gp each); a jade figurine of a duergar (175 gp); sixteen silver plugs (35 sp each); and a sandstone figurine of a gravid heqeti female (55 gp).

10-43: Water Cells

The heqeti keep prisoners in horrible water-filled pits prior to bringing them to the ziggurat (10-35) for sacrifice or consigning them to the efts for food (10-11). The pits are set in the rocky stone around a worked pathway. Each of the sixteen pits is 4' in diameter and 10' deep. Prisoners are secured in wooden collars that attach to bolts on the side of each pit; the collars keep each prisoner's head at level just above the waterline. Eight of the pits currently hold prisoners. None of the prisoners has equipment. Two heqeti hoppers wander among the prisoners, looking for opportunities to poke them with their spears.

Inhabitants:

1. Lommt, a lesser varumani taken on Level 9 (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 19 (max 49); #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or by weapon. Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. If rescued, Lommt takes the first opportunity to flee.
2. Prika, a true varumani taken on Level 9 (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 25 (max 55); #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 6-24 (two-handed sword, 2-20+4). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Prika gladly helps rescuers.
3. Gneiss Lucitan, a 5th-level male duergar fighter and trader: SZ S; AL LE; AC 10; MV 60'; HD 5; HP 17 (max 41); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 17, INT 13, WIS 9, DEX 10, CON 14, CHA 15. Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: surprise on 3 in 6. Special defenses: surprised only 1 in 10; save versus magical attacks at +4; immune to paralysis and poison; unaffected by illusion or phantasm. Psionic strength: 40. Psionic disciplines: expansion, invisibility, molecular attraction, reduction. Gneiss and Chert Tillis (10-54) are rival traders; the latter convinced the heqeti to imprison Gneiss and seize his wares. Gneiss would like revenge against Chert but will not betray the location of his people. Gneiss is waiting to make his escape using his invisibility and reduction. All he needs is a distraction that takes the guards out of the room.
4. Moder Maab, a male svirfneblin assistant burrow warden, as a 5th-level fighter: SZ S; AL NG; AC 8; HD 5+8; HP 19 (max 39); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon; MR 30%. Abilities: STR 15, INT 16, WIS 14, DEX 14, CON 13, CHA 10. Constant abilities: infravision; ultravision; non-detection. Special attacks: +2 to hit with darts; surprise foes 90% of the time. Special defenses: surprised on 1 in 12; 60% chance to be unseen; immune to illusion; all saves at +3 (except poison, at +2). Special: blindness (1/day), blur (1/day), change self (1/day). Moder was taken in the Underearth by the duergar and traded to the heqeti.
5. Tappho Caertleon, 8th-level female Archontean thief: SZ M; AL NE; AC 7; MV 120'; HD 8; HP 12 (max 396); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 13, INT 14, WIS 10, DEX 17, CON 11, CHA 14. Thief skills: PP 70%, OL 67%, F/RT 55%, MS 67%, HS 54%, HN 25%, CW 96%, RL 40%. Tappho was a member of the adventuring group known as the Red Flag. The Red Flag foolishly sought the chasm floor (Level 9) and were wiped out. She and two companions survived, but were taken captive by the heqeti. Tappho is a realist and will serve rescuers faithfully ... until safely free from Arden Vul, at which point she pickpockets what she can and beats a path for Archontos.

6. Greta One-Eye, 6th-level female Thorcin fighter: SZ M; AL N; AC 10; MV 120'; HD 6; HP 24 (max 51); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR18/33, INT 9, WIS 10, DEX 11, CON 15, CHA 11. Greta was a member of the Red Flag; she is interested in joining a new adventuring group.
7. Pippin of Magger, 7th-level male Archontean magic user: SZ M; AL N; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 7; HP 4 (max 21); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 11, INT 17, WIS 12, DEX 16, CON 9, CHA 13. He has no spells memorized and his spell book is gone. Pippin was a member of the Red Flag; given the traumatic demise of his team, Pippin would like to retire from adventuring.
8. Pavallo, a beastman sergeant (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 2+2; HP 15; #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Special attacks: tactics. Pavallo was captured by the Red Flag on Level 3; when the Red Flag was destroyed, Pavallo, too, ended up a captive of the heqeti. He would like to return to his bandon.
9. 2 heqeti hoppers (see new monsters), as 6th-level fighters: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60', 150' swimming; HD 6; HP 35, 33; #AT 2; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 1-6 (bite). Special attacks: hop; +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice.

10-44: Slime and Ooze Pits

This chamber is the site at which the heqeti prepare their various slimes and work to create new ones. Smelling strongly of ammonia and other chemicals, and lit only dimly by phosphorescence floating in the central pool, the chamber and the experiments performed here are directed by Qassapik, the Chief Weaver (area 10-48). A long central pit runs down the center of the chamber; it is flanked by seven niches, each containing its own smaller pit. The flanking pits are labeled A through G.

Unalerted: Two builders and a 50% chance of Qassapik (10-48).

Alerted: Two builders guard the pits at all times.

Central Slime Pit: The central pit is 40' long, 8' wide, and 8' deep, and is filled with roiling and burping slimes of different colors and consistencies. Although the pit was originally filled with a fixed set of slimes extruded by Rimmaq-Isfet itself and imported from the Abyss, the noxious pit is constantly mutating, with existing slimes being re-absorbed into the base matter and new slimes being extruded. At any given moment 4-7 heqeti slimes (see new monsters) are visible on the surface of the pool. Each hour, however, there is a 75% that any one of the initial slimes will be replaced by 1-2 new ones. Slimes are quiescent until removed from the pool, at which point they will, if not contained or put into another slime pit, act according to their basic function (see below). The heqeti have been hoping to recreate their great victory against the rudishva by discovering and/or encouraging a plague slime that will eliminate the varumani or humans. So far, however, they have been unsuccessful (or unlucky).

Pit A: This pit is filled with an oily, thick, greenish slime that is curative to heqeti and other amphibians (cures 2-8 HP once per hour through immersion, or 2-12 HP per full draught drunk), but poisonous to all other species (save at +2 if touched, save at -4 if drunk). It has no motility or combat abilities. There is enough of it to fill 6 delivery devices.

Pit B: A thick, viscous, grayish-green slime is found here; although it stinks horribly, it is a powerful fertilizer, and can be used to enhance plant growth. If ingested it causes hair to grow uncontrollably at ten times normal speed for 3 weeks. There is enough of it to fill 6 delivery devices. It has no motility or combat abilities.

Pit C: The pit is filled with a thick, white slime the consistency of paint (there is enough of it to fill six delivery devices). The slime is highly corrosive to stone, earth and metal; it will eat away a 10'x10'x2" section in 1-4 hours. It could be used as a crude grenade-like projectile that will eat away metal armor and weapons in 1-3 rounds. To protect the slime pit, the pit is lined with mats made of tightly-woven reeds. Stats: 6 white, oily and thick heqeti slimes (see new monsters, roll for type) slimes (see new monsters, roll for type): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 20' on liquids; HD 2; HP 14, 13, 11, 11, 10, 9; #AT 1; Dmg special; MR 15%. Special attacks: corrode stone, earth and metal. Special defenses: healed by electricity or lasers; slowed by cold.

Pit D: A deadly type of heqeti slime (see new monsters) fills this pit; there is enough of it to fill six delivery devices. This slime has been harvested from the central pit and carefully encouraged by Qassapik. Stats: 6 burnt orange, softened-butter-like heqeti slimes (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 20' pseudopod; HD 2; HP 15, 13, 12, 10, 10, 9; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12; MR 15%. Special attacks: kills in 2 rounds if not scraped off. Special defenses: healed by electricity or lasers; slowed by cold.

Pit E: A clear, viscous slime fills this pit. It is used to coat the stone walls in heqeti habitations, and is the source of the pebbled, oily surface of such stonework. If applied to stonework, it produces the 'heqeti effect' in 3-6 hours. The slime is otherwise harmless. It has no motility or combat abilities.

Pit F: This pit contains one randomly-determined heqeti slime (see new monsters; use tables to determine type and effect). There is enough of it to fill three delivery devices.

Pit G: This pit contains one randomly-determined heqeti slime (see new monsters; use tables to determine type and effect). There is enough of it to fill three delivery devices.

Delivery Devices: Stacked by the entrance are twelve oval containers, each about 2' long. The ovals are made of a strange grey-brown chitinous substance and feature a porous membrane on one end. These ovals are transport and delivery systems for heqeti slimes; once a slime is scooped into the container, it can be thrown as a projectile or cast into the water (the porous membrane then allowing the slime to seep into the water).

Inhabitants:

1. Qassapik, the Chief Weaver (for stats see 10-48).
2. 2 heqeti builders (see new monsters), 6th/6th-level fighter/clerics of Kauket: SZ M; AL CE; AC 1; MV 90', 120' swimming; HD 6; HP 46, 45; #AT 1; Dmg 4-9 (short sword +2 of wounding). Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice. Possessions: heqeti mail armor (-2 to AC); short sword +2 of wounding, amulet of natural armor +2 (see new magic items). Spells: bless, command, cure light wounds, light, fear, chant, hold person (x2), silence 15' radius, speak with animals; dispel magic, curse.
3. 4-7 heqeti slimes (see new monsters) in the main slime pit: SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV varies; HD 2; HP 15, 14, 13, 12, 12, 11, 9; #AT 1; Dmg varies; MR 15%. Special attacks: varies. Special defenses: varies. The specific features (color, consistency, motility, and effect) should be determined using tables found in the new monsters appendix.
4. Other heqeti slimes (see new monsters) found in one of the specific pits are detailed above.

10-45: The Tongue's Ear

The chamber's walls are painted white; in the center of each is painted a huge black, barbed spear. Rising 4.5' from the center of the floor is a large, spiral, horn. The horn is a greenish-shade of yellow, with many ugly carbuncles. The heqeti refer to the horn as "the Tongue's Ear", as those seeking an audience with the Great Tongue (10-47) or another of the heqeti leaders must speak their petition into the open mouth of the horn. Such petitions are vocalized through a specialized, permanent magic mouth placed on the north wall of the corridor running between 10-47 and 10-49. To prevent frivolous petitions, four heqeti chosen (see new monsters) stand guard in the chamber. If intruders manage to get to this point without alerting the Great Tongue or others, one of the chosen immediately rushes to the horn and croaks a warning; the heqeti leaders will then flee through the secret door to 10-53 to rally a response.

Unalerted: Four heqeti chosen.

Alerted: No one is present here.

Inhabitants:

1. 4 heqeti chosen (see new monsters), as 6th-level fighters: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60', 150' swimming; HD 6; HP 46, 44, 42, 39; #AT 2; Dmg 3-8 (halberd +1), 1-6 (bite). Special attacks: hop; acid tongue (1-6 acid damage); +1 damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold and water/ice. Possessions: halberd +1.

Treasure:

The horn, from a creature native to the abyss, could be broken off carefully from where it is inserted into the stone floor and sold for 1,250 gp.

10-46: Great Tongue's Overlook

This ledge provides a view of the marsh and ziggurat from a position 55' above the floor of the marsh. The worked walls are pebbled and oily, and contain two 5'x5' panels displaying half-relief sculptures. The sculptures are incredibly lifelike, are still partly painted in vibrant colors, and depict heqeti weavers summoning keqemandri. If hacked out of the walls, they might bring 10,000 gp to an Archontean collector of curiosities.

Unalerted: If the complex is taken by surprise, there are no inhabitants here.

Alerted: Three heqeti apprentices, waiting to support the Great Tongue (see 10-35) with spells.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 apprentice heqeti weavers (see new monsters), as a 4th-level magic users: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 120', 90' swimming; HD 4; HP 12, 10; #AT 1; Dmg 2-5 (dagger). Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice. Possessions: each as a wand of magic missiles (14, 17 charges) and a curved dagger. Memorized spells for each: enlarge, magic missile, spider climb; strength, web. Spell books: detect magic, enlarge, magic missile, protection from good, read magic, spider climb; darkness 15' radius, invisibility, strength, web.
One of the two has been afflicted by the light master effect from the magical nexus at 10-12. Although his infravision is strong, he emits a purple glow visible for 150'.
2. 1 apprentice heqeti weaver (see new monsters), as a 4th-level cleric of Kauket: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 120', 90' swimming; HD 4; HP 21; #AT 1; Dmg 3-8 (club +1). Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice. Possessions: club +1; heqeti spore bomb (see Arden Vul items). Spells prayed for: bless, command, cure light wounds, darkness, detect magic; chant, hold person, resist fire, silence 15' radius.

10-47: The Great Tongue

This opulent chamber is the residence of Reepsiq, the heqeti tasked with overseeing the ziggurat and other heqeti activities in Arden Vul. That heqeti is, of course, the Great Tongue.

A massive carved image of the mouth of Kauket occupies almost all of the south wall; it is easily 10' in diameter. The mouth is gaping open, and a sinuous stone tongue emanates from it, curving down to join a shallow, semi-circular pool that is also connected to the south wall. The tongue's curves are such that not only can Reepsiq sleep on one of the upper curves, the lowest portion of the tongue serves as a throne-like chair in which he sits for audiences. The pool into which the tongue descends is home to a half-dozen glowing friend (see new flora) specimens, which give the chamber an eerie half-light. The other walls are painted black, with numerous white teardrops. Against the west wall are two locked and trapped stone chests.

The current Great Tongue is Reepsiq. Reepsiq is bowed with age, and walks with the aid of a walking stick; he is missing one eye, moreover, and bears many battle scars. Despite his kindly, slow-moving, avuncular appearance, Reepsiq is keenly intelligent and capable of moving with startling quickness and direction. He loathes humans, and has made it his goal to expel humans and their 'allies' (by which he includes humanoids and even the varumani) from Arden Vul. He reluctantly deals with the other evil Underearth races, and allows a modicum of trade to take place here (see 10-54), but he is at his core a xenophobe. His unshaking confidence and vision have made him trusted and respected, even despite his failure to summon Kauket in person (see 10-37).

Unalerted: Reepsiq is present here if the heqeti do not suspect trouble. Note that should the guards at 10-45 warn him of trouble through the horn/magic mouth, he will flee through the secret door to 10-53 so as to avoid being trapped in his chamber.

Alerted: If the complex is on alert, Reepsiq is to be found atop the ziggurat (10-35).

Trap (symbol of persuasion): A symbol of persuasion is cast on the wall above the inside of the door; those entering are affected unless they take special precautions.

Trapped Chests (glyphs of warding): The chests are trapped with glyphs of warding that, if not detected and disarmed, drain an energy level from the hapless visitor.

GM Note: A permanent magic mouth of sorts is located on the wall across from the entrance to this room. It activates whenever someone speaks into the horn in area 10-45, and merely repeats (in a loud, heqeti voice) whatever was spoken there.

Inhabitant:

1. Reepsiq, the Great Tongue, as a heqeti weaver (see new monsters) and a 17th-level cleric of Kauket: SZ M; AL CE; AC 1; MV 120', 90' swimming; HD 17; HP 79; #AT 1; Dmg 2-4 (staff of the serpent, adder). Constant abilities: infravision; WIS 18 for bonus spells. Special attacks: +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice. Possessions: choker of the Great Tongue (see new magic items); a heqeti ring (see new magic items); staff of the serpent (adder); cleric scroll with dispel magic (x2); cleric scroll with gate spell; cleric scroll with symbol of pain; a key to the secret doors leading to 10-53; and six pieces of amber jewelry worth 1,675 gp total. Cleric spells: bless, cause fear, command (x2), cure light wounds (x2), darkness, detect magic, light, protection from good; augury, chant, find traps, hold person (x2), know alignment, resist fire, silence 15' radius (x2), speak with animals; animate dead, cause blindness, continual darkness, curse, dispel magic, glyph of warding, locate object, prayer, speak with dead; cause serious wounds (x2), cure serious wounds, divination, neutralize poison, protection from good 10' radius, tongues; commune, cure critical wounds, flame strike, raise dead, true seeing; blade barrier, conjure animals, heal; unholy word.

Treasure:

In the two locked and trapped stone chests: one contains 247 pearls (100 gp each), 799 moss agate gems (10 gp each), and 33 polished rock crystals (50 gp each); the other contains 17 pure white tears of Kauket (see new magic items), three cleric scrolls, each with dispel magic and symbol upon it; a pledge of Rimmaq-Isfet (see new magic items); and six pieces of amber carved in the shape of a teardrop (150 gp each).

10-48: The Chief Weaver

This chamber is the home of Qassapik, the heqeti Chief Weaver. Built into the west wall are small shrines to both Kauket and Rimmaq-Isfet. Against the east wall are a stone sleeping bench, a stone planter from which rises a specimen of glowing friend (see new flora), and two locked, trapped, stone chests. Against the south wall is a dais on top of which sits a strange 'throne.' The throne is in the shape of a teardrop 8' tall and 5' wide, with a 3'-wide seat cut into the front side. The teardrop is made of basalt, although it glistens with an oily sheen and smells slightly of burnt sugar.

Like his contemporary, the Great Tongue, Qassapik is a scarred veteran of countless ambushes, deceits, and betrayals. While looking almost human, his heqeti nature is betrayed by a slit nose and the odor of burnt sugar that his sweat produces (the byproduct of a magical experiment). Qassapik is fanatical in his devotion to Kauket and Rimmaq-Isfet, and constantly spurs Reepsiq to take bolder moves into Arden Vul. His duties include training the weaver apprentices and advising the Great Tongue on all matters connected to arcane magic.

Shrines: The shrines are simple affairs. The one to Kauket takes the form of six yellow demon's tusks (about 4' long each) bound together with leather strips; the 'top' of the shrine is a piece of dried human-hide. Atop it is a simple copper bowl and a copper knife. The shrine to Rimmaq-Isfet is a 4'-tall block of red porphyry; a shallow depression is carved into the top of the block. A disgusting stew of blood, guts, and other fluids fills the depression; it is filled with maggots.

Unalerted: If the complex has not been alerted, there is a 50% chance that Qassapik is found inspecting the slime pits (10-44), a 25% chance that he is here, and a 25% chance that he is in area 10-51. Note that if he is present in his chamber when the guards at 10-45 warn the leaders of trouble through the horn/magic mouth, he will flee through the secret door to 10-53.

Alerted: No one is present. Qassapik is located at 10-35, alongside the Great Tongue.

Trapped Hidden Compartment (symbol of pain): Beneath the seat in the teardrop is a hidden compartment, in which Qassapik stores some valuables. The compartment detects as a secret door, and is easy to pry open once detected. The inside of the lid has a symbol of pain inscribed on it. Within the 3'-square compartment are the following: 16 teardrop-shaped plugs of silver (25 sp each); 160 pearls (100 gp each); a 5-lb lump of arcenum (see new magic items); 6 pure white tears of Kauket (see new magic items); a map made of lizard hide that shows the route through the Underearth to the main heqeti settlement as well as 3-6 other locations of the GM's devising; an accurate map of all the heqeti areas of Level 9 (i.e., 9-31 to 9-48, 9-75 to 9-82, and 9-109 to 9-125); and Qassapik's spell book.

Locked and Trapped Chests (glyphs of warding, poisoned locks): Like similar chests, these are trapped with glyphs of warding (energy drain). Unlike others, they are also trapped with poison needles in the locks; the poison kills unless a saving throw is made. The chests are red herrings, however, as they are both empty.

Inhabitant:

1. Qassapik, a heqeti weaver (see new monsters), as a 10th/9th-level magic user/cleric of Kauket: SZ M; AL CE; AC 0; MV 120', 90' swimming; HD 10; HP 48; #AT 1; Dmg 4-9 (staff of power). Constant abilities: infravision; WIS 18 for bonus spells. Special attacks: +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice. Possessions: amulet of natural armor +3 (see new magic items); pledge of Rimmaq-Isfet (see new magic items); staff of power (18 charges); ring of fire resistance; and a key to the secret doors leading to 10-53. Cleric spells: bless, command, create water, cure light wounds, detect magic, protection from good; chant, hold person (x2), resist fire, silence 15' radius, snake charm; animate dead, curse, dispel magic, feign death; cure serious wounds, protection from good 10' radius, tongues; flame strike. Magic user spells: enlarge, magic missile (x2), shield; darkness 15' radius, mirror image, ray of enfeeblement, web; dispel magic, fireball, haste; confusion, polymorph other; cloudkill, cone of cold.

Treasure:

See text.

Qassapik's Spell Book: Burning hands, comprehend languages, detect magic, enlarge, hold portal, identify, light, magic missile, read magic, shield, sleep, unseen servant; continual light, darkness 15' radius, detect invisibility, knock, magic mouth, mirror image, ray of enfeeblement, scare, shatter, strength, web; blink, dispel magic, fireball, haste, hold person, invisibility 10' radius, slow, tongues; confusion, fear, fumble, monster summoning II, polymorph other; cloudkill, telekinesis.

10-49: The Second Tongue

These are the quarters of Pikaressa, the heqeti leader in charge of heqeti military matters. They are rather spartan. Along the east wall are stone sleeping bench, a locked stone chest, and a wall-mounted rack with a dozen spears (one is a spear +3). The preserved head of an owlbear is mounted on the south wall; below it are badly reeking, semi-preserved corpses of a human, a varumani, and a kaliyani that Pikaressa uses as practice dummies. By the west wall are several racks holding human-sized armor, trophies of Pikaressa's battles: they include a full set of archaic Archontean legionary armor from the era of Marius Tricotor (350 gp); a suit of imperial field plate +2 (see Arden Vul items); and a suit of cursed banded mail of vulnerability -2.

Pikaressa is a strong, vigorous warrior. Dressed in her specially-made mail and wielding her deadly spear, she strikes an imposing figure among the lesser heqeti. She has a curiosity about human culture, which has led her to collect human rings and coins; still, she is as devoted to Kauket as the rest of the leadership. The hoppers and chosen are genuinely afraid of her.

Unalerted: Pikaressa is present here when the heqeti are not suspecting trouble. Note that should the guards at 10-45 warn the leaders of trouble through the horn/magic mouth, she will flee through the secret door to 10-53 so as to avoid being trapped in her chamber.

Alerted: If the complex is on alert, Pikaressa is to be found in area 10-36, preparing to lead an ambush against intruders.

Locked Chest: Pikaressa doesn't keep much wealth, preferring to donate most of it to the ziggurat treasury. The chest holds 2,113 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items), a stone statuette of Kauket (100 gp), and a large lump of amber carved in the shape of a heqeti warrior (275 gp).

Secret Door (east, in hallway): The secret door to area 10-53 is difficult to locate (1 in 8 chance). It reveals its keyhole to anyone speaking the heqeti words 'open, now!' within 5' of the wall; each of the leaders holds a key. The door can also be beaten down (AC -2, HP 25), although edged weapons only do 1 HP damage and each non-magical weapon used to attack the door has a 5% cumulative chance per round of breaking during the process (magical weapons have a 2% cumulative chance).

Inhabitant:

1. Pikaressa, a heqeti builder (see new monsters), as a 12th/5th-level fighter/magic user (see new monsters): SZ M; AL CE; AC -1; MV 90', 120' swimming; HD 12; HP 51; #AT 1; Dmg 5-10 (bone spear +3 of life stealing). Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice. Possessions: finely-wrought heqeti mail (-4 to AC); ring of protection +2; a bone spear +3 of life stealing; a heqeti ring (see new magic items); a potion of extra healing; a potion of stone-giant strength; a key to the secret doors leading to 10-53, and six plundered gold signet rings, each worth 100-600 gp. Spells memorized: enlarge, magic missile, protection from good, shield; continual light, web; slow. Pikaressa was affected by the magnetism effect produced by the magic nexus at area 10-12. She is content that her mail and rings are effectively bonded to her. In combat, enemies wielding metal weapons have a -2 to hit her due to the magnetism; on a successful hit, moreover, the enemy must make an open doors check or else the enemy's weapon is effectively stuck to Pikaressa.

Treasure:

See text.

Pikaressa's Spell Book: Charm person, detect magic, enlarge, light, magic missile, protection from good, read magic, shield, spider climb; continual light, ESP, levitate, web; feign death, haste, slow.

10-50: East Causeway and Corridor

This imposing causeway connects the pilgrims' rest (10-21) with the eastern areas of the heqeti shrine. Where it extends into the great cavern, it rises 25' above the level of the marsh. In the corridor segment that leads to 10-51 a pair of niches hold statues. The statues are 8' tall and depict Reepsiq, the Great Tongue, and Qassapik, the Chief Weaver (see 10-47 and 10-48). Each is festooned with small bits of leather, feathers, and small trinkets; with the clutter stripped away, each could be sold for 475 gp.

10-51: Hall of the Heqeti

This large hall provides a gathering and socializing space for heqeti pilgrims who have come to visit the ziggurat. The ceiling is 20' tall and supported by eighteen thick columns. In the center is a large, shallow pool of murky dirty water (3' deep) that surrounds a dais and a statue of Kauket. A dozen specimens of the glowing friend (see new flora) twine about iron rods placed along the edge of the pool. The plants provide a dim light to the area. Ordinarily the hall contains 21-40 heqeti pilgrims, who gather in the aisles formed by the columns and wade in the pool.

Statue of Kauket: The statue is about 15' tall and shaped of red porphyry. He appears as a biped, with the trunk of a salamander, the feet of an elephant, human arms, and an oversized salamanderesque head. He carries his famous spear in an aggressive posture. His saucer-like eyes drip a liquid that hardens into tears of Kauket (see new magic items) when it hits the water of the pool. Enough liquid to form a single tear drips every hour.

Unalerted: Two apprentices are always present so as to offer advice to the pilgrims (see above). There is a 25% chance that Qassapik (see 10-48) is present here, intimidating the lesser heqeti.

Alerted: If the complex is alerted, two apprentices are stationed here to watch over the public areas.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 apprentice heqeti weaver (see new monsters), as a 4th-level magic user: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 120; 90' swimming; HD 4; HP 10; #AT 1; Dmg 2-5 (dagger). Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice. Possessions: wand of frost (18 charges); curved dagger. Memorized spells: enlarge, magic missile, spider climb; strength, web. Spell book: detect magic, enlarge, magic missile, protection from good, read magic, spider climb; darkness 15' radius, invisibility, strength, web.

2. 1 apprentice heqeti weaver (see new monsters), as a 4th-level cleric of Kauket: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 120, 90' swimming; HD 4; HP 21; #AT 1; Dmg 3-8 (club +1). Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice. Possessions: club +1; heqeti spore bomb (see Arden Vul items). Spells prayed for: bless, command, cure light wounds, darkness, detect magic, chant, hold person, resist fire, silence 15' radius.

3. Qassapik, 25%: see stats at 10-48.

4. 21-40 heqeti hopper pilgrims (see new monsters), as 4th-level fighters: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60; 150' swimming; HD 4; HP 32, 31, 30, 29(x3), 28(x5), 27(x5), 26(x5), 25(x5), 24(x5), 23(x5), 21, 20, 19, 19; #AT 2; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 1-6 (bite). Special attacks: hop; +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice.

Treasure:

9 tears of Kauket (see new magic items) - see text.

10-52A: Heqeti Barracks

This chamber is a barracks for heqeti hoppers. It is dark and smells with a stale, fishy odor. Forty-five sleeping bunks are set into the walls (although Reepsiq does not have a full complement of hoppers). Two battered wood tables, a dozen stools, racks for spears, two large stone bins full of nasty fish paste (heqeti food), and a practice dummy made of straw (and shaped like a human) stand in the center of the chamber. Only eight of the hoppers are actually present in the barracks at any given time.

Secret Door (on north wall of hallway): This narrow door is difficult to locate (1 in 8) and only opens if the proper key is inserted into a cleverly hidden hole. Keys are held by Reepsiq, Qassapik and Pikaressa (see 10-47 to 10-49).

Inhabitants:

1. 8 heqeti hoppers (see new monsters), as 4th-level fighters: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60; 150' swimming; HD 4; HP 29, 28, 27, 26, 24, 23, 22, 20; #AT 2; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 1-6 (bite). Special attacks: hop; +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice.

Treasure:

Twenty of the bunks contain small bits of silver, copper, and shell jewelry worth 11-20 gp per bunk.

10-52B: Barracks

This chamber is identical to area 10-52A, including inhabitants and treasure.

10-53: Treasury

This secret chamber serves as the treasury for the ziggurat. Four large stone bins hold the bulk of the treasure collected from the pilgrims at areas 10-20 and 10-57. These bins contain 183 semi-precious stones (carnelian, citrine, onyx and sardonyx) worth 50 gp each, plus 3,971 ornamental gems (mostly azurites, malachites, moss agates, pieces of obsidian and tiger eyes) worth 10 gp each.

Mixed in with this treasure are 17 pieces of amber (100 gp each), 11 pieces of coral (100 gp each), and 1 black opal (5,000 gp).

A fifth stone bin holds more unusual goods, including the majority of Sir Mendacity's equipment (for Sir Mendacity, see 7-81): her circlet of command and backpack of capacity (see new magic items); her key to SL10A-16, gothic armor, and sun lance (see new technological items); and her broadsword +2, +4 vs giants. The bin also holds a tome of clear thought, plus four scrolls: one with the spells enchant an item and guards and wards; a second with stone to flesh; a third scroll with power word, stun; and a fourth with mass charm. At the GM's desire, the treasury may also contain any quest items appropriate to his/her setting.

Secret Door (west): This door is easy to find (1 in 4) from this side. The key held by the heqeti leaders opens it (see 10-47 to 10-49).

Secret Door (east): This door is easy to find (1 in 4) from this side. The key held by the heqeti leaders opens it (see 10-47 to 10-49).

10-54: Underearth Traders

This chamber is rather spartan, with roughly carved walls and no decoration. A half-dozen smoky torches light the area, and two tripods of heating (see new magic items) stand in its center. The handful of traders allowed by the heqeti to enter the ziggurat area and conduct business are assigned to this chamber. Each trader is responsible for his/her own possessions and security; most sell goods out of their saddlebags and sleep atop the same. Currently three traders are present.

Chert Tillis

Personality: Unctuous and servile in public, vicious and vindictive privately. Chert wears flowing black and yellow silken robes over his armor.

Reputation and/or relations with Factions: He is well known and considered a reliable and relatively harmless occasional visitor. He has only visited the heqeti within Arden Vul, but is aware of the varumani and kaliyani.

Secret? While naturally a spy, his demeanor renders him less suspicious in the eyes of the heqeti. He hopes to learn the location of the hidden derro city that is the home of Gest Felstapper (see SL9-79); he has encountered Gest in safe zones throughout the Underearth and would very much like to learn Gest's routes. He has thoroughly scouted the great cavern (10-15) and knows most of the routines of the heqeti leaders. He considers it impossible and/or impractical for his people to attempt a raid on the heqeti.

Available Liquid Wealth: Small lumps of gold worth a total of 2,300 gp; small silver cylinders worth a total of 3,500 sp; 319 ancient Archontean pennies (see Arden Vul items).

Might Buy: Specific information (layouts, maps) about Levels 7 and 9; magic items; exotic (that is, fresh) surface-world fruits and vegetables.

Goods for Sale: 100 lb of dried mushrooms (20 gp/lb), 10 steel picks, 20 daggers, 1 poisoned dagger, 5 2-lb lumps of arcenum, 3 potions of invisibility, a copy of Thorcin Poisons and their Cures (see Arden Vul books), maps to the Silent Sea, to Lissak-Tol, and to two other Underearth locations of the GM's choosing.

Companions: 2 duergar bodyguards, as 3rd-level fighters

Inhabitants:

1. Chert Tillis, 5th/6th level duergar cleric/assassin: SZ S; AL LE; AC 3; MV 60'; HD 6; HP 28; #AT 1; Dmg 5-8 (war hammer +2), 2-5 (daggers). Abilities: STR 16, INT 11, WIS 16, DEX 10, CON 10, CHA 13. Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: surprise on 3 in 6. Special defenses: surprised only 1 in 10; save versus magical attacks at +4; immune to paralysis and poison; unaffected by illusion or phantasm. Psionic strength: 45. Psionic disciplines: expansion, invisibility, molecular attraction, reduction. Possessions: studded leather +3 and shield; war hammer +2; two poisoned daggers; gilded derro skull on a chain (15 gp). Spells prayed for: command, create water, detect magic, light, sanctuary; augury, hold person (x2), silence 15' radius, slow poison; dispel magic.
2. 2 female duergar bodyguards, 3rd-level fighters: SZ S, AL LE; AC 3; MV 60'; HD 3; HP 20, 18; #AT 1; Dmg 3-6 (hammer), 2-7 (short sword), 1-4 (light crossbow). Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: surprise on 3 in 6. Special defenses: surprised only 1 in 10; save versus magical attacks at +4; immune to paralysis and poison; unaffected by illusion or phantasm. Psionic strength: 36. Psionic disciplines: expansion, invisibility, molecular attraction, reduction. Possessions: banded mail and shield; hammer, short sword; light crossbow and 20 bolts.

Peelstiv

Personality: Alien, mysterious, difficult to read; she doesn't understand human/heqeti personal space, and is constantly coming too close to interlocutors' faces.

Reputation and/or relations with Factions: She is an unknown quantity. Given their ancient alliance with the kaliyani, the heqeti are familiar with kaliyani practice and interests; still, they do not know Peelstiv and thus mistrust her motives.

Secret? She is one of the most trusted and experienced agents from Lissak-Tol, and has been tasked by the eleven consortia to locate Tsilliv and the renegade heqeti of the twelfth consortium (see SL9). She poses as a trader, but is interested in any hint of news about the kaliyani traitors.

Available Liquid Wealth: 100 tiger eye gems (10 gp each), 16 pieces of coral (100 gp), and 20 lb of powdered silver (1,000 sp).

Might Buy: Kaliyani artifacts, rudishva artifacts, magic items, information

Goods for Sale: Kaliyani charms (10 gp each); 3 empty rudishva lesser power supplies, sold as curios (5 gp each); 8 kaliyani asp eggs (see new magic items), 2 each of eggs of fire, eggs of cold, eggs of torment, and eggs of blinding; a bundle of 6 specimens each of 1-3 species of mushrooms from the new flora appendix (for prices see area 9-6).

Inhabitants:

1. Peelstiv, 7th-level kaliyani soldier (see new monsters): SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 150' on six legs, 60' upright; HD 7; HP 49; #AT 2; Dmg 3-9/3-8 (bastard sword +1/scimitar). Special defenses: immune to poison and mind-affecting spells. Special: infravision. Possessions: bastard sword +1 and a serrated scimitar; a ring of protection +2; a vial of kaliyani refreshing liquid (see Arden Vul items); small jewelry worth 179 gp; and potions of superheroism and fire giant strength.

Margarita Blood-Eyes

Personality: Hostile and aggressive, but responds well to those who stand up to her. She has a distinctive look: she sports a stone-colored full length cloak with hood covering blood red leather armor and gear. In addition, her face and forehead are coated with ash-grey makeup punctuated only by blood red eyeliner and blood red ovals on her cheeks. She does not speak Archontean, but rather an archaic dialect of Thorcin.

Reputation and/or relations with Factions: The heqeti consider her god-possessed, and thus treat her with caution. Some would like to slaughter her out of hand due to the long enmity between humans and heqeti, but the leaders have ruled that the cult she follows makes her acceptable as a trader.

Secret? She is a representative of a reclusive cult of humans who fled the surface world 97 years ago so as to be free to worship the alien deity Mzingaloq (see Gods of Magae in the World of Archontos appendix). This cult slew a community of Svirfneblin and took the deep gnomes's home for their own. They are xenophobic and highly paranoid, and only trade with other subterranean races out of necessity.

Available Liquid Wealth: 25 solid gold plugs shaped like elongated incisors (25 gp each); 719 ancient silver pennies; 391 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items).

Might Buy: Foodstuffs of any sort, particularly in bulk; steel or iron ingots; high quality weapons; magic items

Goods for Sale: 150 lb of nutritious lichen (35 sp/lb); 37 riding salamander eggs packed in a combination of water and mud (40 gp per egg); and a sapphire Sortian eye for which she wants 2,400 gp (see new magic items).

Companions: 4 2nd-level fighters as bodyguards. The guards' faces are also coated with ash-grey pigment, but lack the red high-lights; all four are mute.

Inhabitants:

1. Margarita Blood-Eyes, 9th-level female Archontean thief: SZ M; AL CE; AC 2; MV 120'; HD 9; HP 40; #AT 1; Dmg 4-10 (broad sword +2, nine lives stealer), 1-4 (dagger). Abilities: STR 11, INT 14, WIS 9, DEX 17, CON 12, CHA 15. Thief skills: PP 75%, OL 72%, F/RT 60%, MS 75%, HS 61%, HN 30%, CW 98%, RL 45%. Possessions: blood-red leather armor +3; broad sword +2, nine lives stealer (2 lives remaining); poisoned dagger; copper holy symbol of Mzingaloq in the shape of an opening door (20 gp); potions of invisibility and frost giant strength.

2. 4 cultist bodyguards, as 2nd-level male Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL CE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 17, 15, 14, 14; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 2-9 (battle axe). Special: +1 to damage from STR. Possessions: chain mail and shield; spear; battle axe.

10-55: Relaxation Pools

This low-ceilinged hall (8') is dimly lit by the green phosphorescence of the glowing friend (see new flora). The sound of dripping water is audible from the entrance.

Four pools, each about 5' deep, line the floor. From each pool rise several specimens of the glowing friend, from which moisture drips back into the pools. Surrounding the pools are a total of nineteen relaxation beds designed for heqeti: these are made of stone and are pea-pod shaped, allowing a heqeti to curl up while still dipping his/her toes into the pool.

At the west end of the chamber is a statue of two crouching heqeti facing each other while touching tongues (a mating ritual). The statues are stone, 5' tall, and remarkably detailed; the ensemble could be sold as a terrifying curiosity for 6,000 gp.

At any given moment, ten heqeti pilgrims are present here, relaxing in the quiet and near-darkness.

Inhabitants:

1. 10 heqeti hopper pilgrims (see new monsters), as 4th-level fighters: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60'; 150' swimming; HD 4; HP 30, 29, 28, 26, 24, 23, 22, 21, 20, 19; #AT 2; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 1-6 (bite). Special attacks: hop; +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice.

10-56: Pilgrims' Cells

Ten small and five larger cells are placed here for the comfort of pilgrims to the ziggurat of Kauket. All cells are spartan, with bead-curtains made of shells instead of doors. The smaller cells contain six stone sleeping niches set into the walls, while the larger contain six sleeping niches plus two chairs and a low table.

At any given moment there are 40-60 pilgrims visiting the entire area, but they are typically spread out among the various sites: ziggurat (10-32 to 10-37), pilgrims' rest (10-20), and other common areas (10-51, 10-54, and 10-55). Only ten pilgrims are thus likely to be resting in the cells. These resting heqeti are randomly distributed throughout the cells. For each cell entered, the GM should assign a 1 in 4 chance that 1-3 pilgrims are present until, of course, the limit of ten pilgrims has been reached. If a cell is searched, the following table determines what is present:

D20	Item(s)
1-5	Nothing
6-8	A purse made of two shells sewn together, containing 100 sp worth of powdered silver and a 25% chance for a gem worth 10-50 gp
9-10	A stone statuette of a gravid heqeti with open, toothed maw (25 gp)
11-12	A silver brooch in the shape of a teardrop (50 sp)
13-14	A ring made of jade, coral and shark's teeth (65 gp)
15-16	Three vials of Kauket's vision (see Arden Vul items)
17-19	A leather purse containing 1-10 gems worth 10-100 gp each
20	A potion, to be determined randomly

Inhabitants:

1. 10 heqeti hopper pilgrims (see new monsters), as 4th-level fighters: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60'; 150' swimming; HD 4; HP 30, 29, 28, 26, 24, 23, 22, 21, 20, 19; #AT 2; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 1-6 (bite). Special attacks: hop; +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice.

10-57: Tolls and Bone Gate

An imposing bone portcullis blocks access between the Underearth and the heqeti shrines on Level 10. The portcullis is made of thick, femur-sized bones lashed together with sinew. The lower portion of the portcullis slides into holes in the floor. A simple winch located on the north wall by the passage to 10-58 allows it to be raised and lowered.

The heqeti keep the portcullis lowered nearly all the time. Entrance is granted to other heqeti and selected sympathetic residents of the Underearth, including a handful of traders (see 10-54). All those entering the through the portcullis must pay a toll of 10 gp or the equivalent. The heqeti chosen (see new monsters) who guard the portcullis deposit the offerings into a 4'-tall, copper statue of a salamander-monster with open mouth. Periodically the guards empty the tolls into the treasury at 10-53.

A frontal assault that does not immediately silence or neutralize the gate-keepers is likely to alarm the whole complex, as one of the heqeti chosen will sound a spiral, demonic horn to alert the neighboring guards (10-54 and 10-56) and eventually all the heqeti nearby. The horn's blast is likely to lead to a battle royale with all the inhabitants of areas 10-32 to 10-56.

Inhabitants:

1. 3 heqeti chosen (see new monsters), as 6th-level fighters: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60', 150' swimming; HD 6; HP 40, 38, 37; #AT 2; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 1-6 (bite). Special attacks: hop; acid tongue (1-6 acid damage); +1 damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold and water/ice.
2. 1 heqeti weaver (see new monsters), as a 7th-level magic user: SZ M; AL CE; AC 3; MV 120', 90' swimming; HD 7; HP 22; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (throwing daggers). Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice. Possessions: amulet of natural armor +2 (see new magic items); wand of magic missiles (23 charges); six throwing daggers; two glass spheres of arcane assistance (one of arcane warding, one of protection) (see new magic items); potion of gaseous form. Spells: enlarge, jump, magic missile, shield; continual light, levitate, ray of enfeeblement; fireball, protection from normal missiles; polymorph other.

Treasure:

The copper salamander statue (250 gp), containing small valuables worth 3,790 gp. The sounding horn is worth 50 gp.

10-58: Heqeti Guardroom

A squad of eight heqeti hoppers waits here, ready to defend the ziggurat area from intruders. The pebbled walls, ceiling and floor are painted an unsettling mauve, with yellow images of wriggling tadpoles painted randomly throughout. The hoppers possess a rack of spears, an upturned mushroom cap filled with water, and a basket with three heqeti spore bombs (see Arden Vul items).

Inhabitants:

1. 8 heqeti hoppers (see new monsters), as 5th-level fighters: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60', 150' swimming; HD 4; HP 36, 34, 33, 32, 31, 30, 28, 28; #AT 2; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 1-6 (bite). Special attacks: hop; +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice.

10-59: Second Heqeti Guardroom

Aside from the paint scheme, this chamber is identical (including inhabitants) to area 10-58. Here the walls are painted midnight black, punctuated with white teardrops.

10-60: Entry Cave

A dimly-lit balcony overlooks this cave of gently sloping flowstone that leads downward into the Underearth. The balcony is 20' above the floor of the cave; it is formed of worked granite, is pebbled and oily, and holds two braziers filled with glowing coals. A statue and two invisible heqeti chosen (see new monsters) stand atop the balcony. The ceiling of the cave soars another 20' above the balcony.

The heqeti chosen are tasked with watching the entry cave for dangerous monsters or intruders. They do not attack instantly, but rather wait to gather intelligence. In the case of formidable foes, one slips back to 10-58 to warn the gate guards, while the other hides in the entry cave. If foes look weak or confused, they may (50%) materialize and demand that the intruders retreat.

Statue: The statue is 12' tall and made of bronze. It depicts a great heqeti hero of antiquity, Qisstep, brandishing a spear fiercely in the direction of area 10-62. The statue is enchanted such that any of good alignment who approach within 10' cause the statue to bark out threats in Heqeti: "Enemies! Alert! You shall feed the worms of the marsh!" The auditory effect easily alerts the toll-keepers at area 10-57.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 invisible heqeti chosen, as 9th-level thieves: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60', 150' swimming; HD 9; HP 59, 55; #AT 2; Dmg 1-6 (bite), or 3-8 (javelin +1) or 2-7 (short sword). Special attacks: hop; acid tongue (1-6 acid damage); +1 damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold and water/ice. Thief skills: PP 70%, OL 62%, F/RT 60%, MS 70%, HS 56%, HN 30%, CW 98%, RL 45%. Possessions: 4 bone javelins +1 (3-8 dmg); short sword; potion of invisibility.

10-61: Salamander Pens

Facilities for penning Underearth pack animals are located here. A dozen iron chains and collars are attached to the wall, and a stone drinking trough runs down the middle of the cave. Currently, seven riding salamanders (see new monsters) are chained to the wall. Nearby are some tack and saddle-bags. Two stone bins at the far northeastern corner of the cave hold food for the beasts: one has rotting meat filled with maggots and worms, while the other holds dried insects. The saddle-bags are empty, as the traders have taken their goods to area 10-54.

Inhabitants:

1. 7 riding salamanders (see new monsters): SZ L; AL N; AC 6; MV 60', 90' swimming; HD 6; HP 43, 41, 41, 39, 37, 36, 35; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12.

10-62: Tunnel to the Underearth

This tunnel leads into the Underearth (unmapped). As a secondary tunnel, it extends about 3 miles until it joins a major passage. From there one can journey in multiple directions to various areas of the Underearth, including a heqeti residential colony; the infamous Silent Sea; a shrine devoted to Rimmaq-Isfet; the mysterious city of Lissak-Tol, home to the eleven consortia of the kaliyani (see SL9-79); and the dwellings of the other Underearth denizens.

ARDEN VUL TABLE OF CONTENTS

GENERAL INTRODUCTION

A Brief History of Arden Vul.....	V. 1 P. 7
Design Principles .....	V. 1 P. 10
Note on Designation of Keyed Locations .....	V. 1 P. 11
Starting Levels for PCs .....	V. 1 P. 11
General Construction Features .....	V. 1 P. 12
Iconic Locations of Arden Vul .....	V. 1 P. 14
Rumors .....	V. 1 P. 18
Factions of Arden Vul .....	V. 1 P. 30
Adventure Hooks .....	V. 1 P. 48
Customizing Arden Vul .....	V. 1 P. 58

EXTERIOR ADVENTURE LOCATIONS

Burdock's Valley, The Azure Keep, and Gosterwick (AK)...	V. 1 P. 61
Exterior: the Long Falls and the Long Stair (EX).....	V. 1 P. 75
The Ruined City of Arden Vul (AV) .....	V. 1 P. 81
The Pyramid of Thoth (UP).....	V. 1 P. 107
The Tower of Scrutiny (TS).....	V. 1 P. 112

THE HALLS OF ARDEN VUL

Level 1: The Basement .....	V. 1 P. 117
Level 2: The Howling Caves and the Well of Light .....	V. 1 P. 123
Level 3: The Halls of Thoth .....	V. 1 P. 153
Level 4: The Forum of Set .....	V. 1 P. 239
Level 5: The Obsidian Gates and the Midnight Road .....	V. 2 P. 3
Level 6: The Troll Lifts and the Arena .....	V. 2 P. 65
Level 7: The Court of the Troll Thegn .....	V. 2 P. 135
Level 8: The Nether Reaches .....	V. 2 P. 201
Level 9: The Floor of the Great Chasm .....	V. 2 P. 261
Level 10: The Ziggurat of Kauket .....	V. 2 P. 317

Sub-Level 1: The Tombs of Light .....	V. 3 P. 3
Sub-Level 2: The Hall of Shrines .....	V. 3 P. 11
Sub-Level 3: The Lesser Baboon Caves .....	V. 3 P. 23
Sub-Level 4: The Goblin Warrens .....	V. 3 P. 33
Sub-Level 5: The Lizardman Caves .....	V. 3 P. 57
Sub-Level 6: The Drowned Canyon .....	V. 3 P. 73
Sub-Level 7: The Flooded Vaults .....	V. 3 P. 117
Sub-Level 8: The Caves Behind the Falls .....	V. 3 P. 125
Sub-Level 9: The Kaliyani Pits .....	V. 3 P. 131
Sub-Level 10A: The Hold of the Sun-Scarred Knights .....	V. 3 P. 153
Sub-Level 10B: The Citadel of the Sun-Scarred Knights .....	V. 3 P. 167
Sub-Level 11: The Tomb of Isadora .....	V. 3 P. 177
Sub-Level 12: The Workshops of Kerbog Khan .....	V. 3 P. 187
Sub-Level 13: The Lost Chambers of Arden .....	V. 3 P. 199
Sub-Level 14: The Chamber of the Beacon .....	V. 3 P. 219
Sub-Level 15: The Druid's Retreat .....	V. 3 P. 225

APPENDICES

New Monsters .....	V. 4 P. 2
New Magic Items .....	V. 4 P. 71
New Technological Items .....	V. 4 P. 116
Arden Vul Items .....	V. 4 P. 126
New Flora .....	V. 4 P. 129
New Spells .....	V. 4 P. 132
Arden Vul Books .....	V. 4 P. 141
World of Archontos .....	V. 4 P. 171
NPC Appendix .....	V. 4 P. 191
Index of Proper Names.....	V. 4 P. 227
OGL .....	V. 4 P.234

SUB-LEVEL 1: THE TOMBS OF LIGHT

This small sub-level differs in architecture and purpose from much of the rest of the level. It was developed in antiquity by the niravairi (see new monsters), rivals to the rudishva and noted planar explorers. They located a permanent portal in the Astral plane that led to a site here, within Arden Vul (SL1-11). Discovering strange crystals and new life forms (lumens - see new monsters), they built a small research facility to study the optical phenomena (and added a few other portals as well). When the Beacon crashed here, the rudishva discovered signs of their rivals' activity and, for a while, occupied the site in the hope that it could aid in their propulsion dilemma. Eventually the dangers posed by the lumens, as well as the drain on resources, caused the rudishva leadership to pull back (although one scientist refused to leave - see SL1-8). Centuries later, while improving a light well so as to transform it into the Well of Light (2-1), the Archontean discovered the nearby complex; they hopefully installed a secret door in the Well and hoped that the area would yield secrets, but after several disasters (see SL1-6), they abandoned further exploration (thus giving the sub-level its current name). The sub-level is comprised of a hexagonal upper chamber designed for the study of lumens and optics, and a lower level for storage chambers and the niravairi portals. Successful navigation of the sub-level requires solving difficult puzzles with regard to light beams, as well as confrontation with the lumens (and more).

GENERAL CONSTRUCTION NOTES

Niravairi areas: SL1-2 to SL1-13. Corridors are hexagonal in shape. All niravairi areas are sheathed in impact resistant, opaque, hexagonal tiles made of colored plasglass. Unless otherwise noted, ceilings are 12' tall.

Archontean areas: SL1-1.

ACCESS AND EGRESS

To Ruined City: Well of Light at SL1-1, leading up to AV-14

To Level 2: Well of Light at SL1-1, leading down to 2-1

To the Ethereal Plane: portal at SL1-10, leading to the Ethereal Plane

To the Astral Plane: portal at SL1-11, leading to the Astral Plane

To the Abyss: portal at SL1-12, leading to the GM's choice of layers of the Abyss

To the home of the Order of Planar Explorers: portal at SL1-13, leading to an unmapped base of this group

RANDOM ENCOUNTERS

There are no random encounters in this sub-level.

LEVEL KEY

SL1-1: Secret Door and Archontean Entrance Corridor

A secret door in the Well of Light (AV-14, 2-1) leads to a 10'-long, roughly hewn rock corridor that opens into a darkened, hemispherical chamber (SL1-2). The secret door is located on the shaft of the Well at a point 110' below the surface. The short corridor was dug by the Archontean who were constructing the Well of Light when they detected worked areas to the south.

Secret Door (south): The secret door is difficult to find (1 in 8 chance), and difficult to open. It requires twisting one of the dozens of convex mirrors near the door 90 degrees. This causes a 5'-tall panel of the well shaft to spring inward, revealing a 5'-tall, roughly-carved passage to the south.

Well of Light: The Well is a 200'-long shaft, 5' in diameter, which descends from the surface (AV-14) to emerge at Level 2 (area 2-1). From SL1-1, it is another 90' down the shaft to 2-1. The well shaft is studded with convex mirrors and reflective stones in a carefully orchestrated manner such that, when it is daylight (and bright) on the surface, sunlight will be reflected down the length of the shaft.

SL1-2: Niravairi Entrance Chamber

This chamber is hemispherical, with a 10' ceiling curving down on all sides. All surfaces - floor and 'ceiling/walls' - are covered with opaque, impact-resistant, reflective, white plasglass tiles, cleverly molded to fit the contours of the chamber. The tiles are hexagonal in shape. The chamber is dark, but any light source introduced to the chamber immediately reflects across the surface, shedding light everywhere.

The narrow passageway to the east and south ends in a heap of collapsed rock, masonry, and plasglass shortly after some stairs begin to rise. The corridor and stair once connected SL1-2 with SL1-8. The rudishva leaders destroyed the corridor to prevent their scientists from further dangerous experimentation with the tombs of light.

SL1-3: Corridor with Niravairi Light Tiles

The 60'-long tunnel leading from SL1-2 to SL1-4 is made from more of the opaque, impact-resistant plasglass. The walls, floor and ceiling of each 10'-long section of the tunnel are formed from scores of smaller plasglass hexagons fit together in an almost seamless fashion. Each of the six sections of tunnel features a different hue, in this order (from north to south): yellow-green- blue-purple-red-orange. The display of any light source from the Well reveals the multi-colored nature of the tunnel via a rainbow of flashing colors.

Programmed Illusion: If any portion of the walls, floor or ceiling of the entrance tunnel is touched by even 5 lb of weight, the following illusion appears half-way down the tunnel: a spindly-limbed, female biped wearing an orange jumpsuit and skullcap appears and begins to speak, slowly and sympathetically, but in Rudishva. If translated, the image states: “I regret to inform you that this area is off-limits to all personnel by order of Captain Leil-Jor. The renegade responsible for the dangerous experiments found within has been ‘reallocated’.” This hologram will appear every 5 minutes for as long as the entrance tunnel is being touched.

Colored Plasglass Tiles: Touching any of the hexagonal plasglass tiles which form the corridor causes a number of magical effects. First, touching a tile of a particular color causes the entire entrance corridor to glow in the color of the tile that was touched. Second, touching a tile of a particular color affects the environment in SL1-4, in the following way:

- Yellow: Activates/deactivates the yellow light beam from SL1-5
- Blue: Activates/deactivates the blue light beam from SL1-6
- Red: Activates/deactivates the red light beam from SL1-7
- Green: Activates/deactivates both the yellow and the blue beams from SL1-5 and SL1-6
- Purple: Activates/deactivates both the red and the blue beams (from SL1-6 and SL1-7)
- Orange: Activates/deactivates both the red and the yellow beams (from SL1-5 and SL1-7)

It perhaps need not be noted that any explorers able to fly are able to bypass the effects of the colored tiles.

Door: The door at the south end of the entrance tunnel is a circular disk of opaque, but clear, plasglass hinged to open into area SL1-4.

GM Note: It is crucial to keep careful note of which light beams have been turned on (or off). Note that if an explorer steps on yellow first and then on orange, then only the red beam will still be in effect (as yellow turns ‘on’ the yellow beam, but orange would thus turn ‘off’ yellow while turning ‘on’ red). Note, too, that if a group activated every color in the corridor in order, they would enter area SL1-4 with all three light beams activated.

SL1-4: Upper Tomb of Light

This hexagonal chamber is 40’ tall and formed from more of the opaque, plasglass tiles which make up the entrance tunnel. The plasglass tiles on all surfaces are un-tinted, but while the walls and ceiling are opaque, the floor is clear and translucent.

What Visitors See: It is important for the GM to be aware of which areas of the Upper Tomb are lit, and by which beams of light (see below). Indeed, depending on the actions of visitors in the entrance corridor (SL1-3), beams of red, yellow and/or blue light may be shining into the chamber and thereby illuminating certain zones of the chamber. Even if none of the beams are lit, a low glow of white light emanates from a 10’-wide hexagonal pillar of crystal which stretches from floor to ceiling and dominates the center of the chamber. Six corpses lie near the entrance, apparent to all regardless of light conditions; some appear to have been scorched, others appear roasted, and one appears desiccated.

More careful observation from the doorway might reveal 5’-diameter tunnels set about 25’ up the sides of three of the six walls; these tunnels rise at 35°-degree angles to areas SL1-5, SL1-6, and SL1-7. Barely visible through the floor, although at an indeterminate distance, is a second chamber (SL1-9), into which the hexagonal pillar seems to descend.

Crystalline Hexagonal Pillar (area ‘G’): This translucent, crystal pillar rises from floor to ceiling (and, in fact, also descends through the floor to area SL1-9). The pillar serves as the chief means by which the light beams from the surrounding chambers are refracted and blended. Use of darkness on the pillar is an obvious strategy for those seeking to neutralize the light beams, but only a caster of 10th level or greater can successfully overcome the enchantments cast on the pillar (and then only for 1-4 rounds). Physical force is another possibility, but the pillar is AC -2 and takes 50 HP; it also heats substantially when light beams touch it (1-6 HP heat damage to anyone who successfully hits the pillar). On each of the three sides of the pillar that does not face one of the light beams, at a level 5’ from the floor of SL1-4, is an octagonal indentation 6” wide.

Light Beams: Up to three 5’-diameter beams of colored light may be present in this chamber: a red beam projected from SL1-7, a yellow beam from SL1-5, and/or a blue beam from SL1-6. Once activated by the tiles in the entrance corridor (SL1-3), the light beams strike with laser-like accuracy the crystal pillar, and thus flood a portion of SL1-4 with colored light. An activated light beam has two effects:

1. Damage: any carbon-based life form that moves through a beam takes 4-24 HP damage per round of contact.
2. Environmental Effects: beams reflected off the central hexagonal pillar produce colored light in one or more zones of the chamber. While this effect causes no direct harm to visitors, it can affect the powers of the lumens (see new monsters) encountered herein.

Zones within the Chamber: Although perhaps not immediately be apparent to intruders, the Upper Tomb is effectively divided into six zones. These zones are defined by the appropriate facet of the hexagonal central pillar. When one or more light beams is activated (see below), a zone becomes flooded with brilliant, colored light according to the table on the next page.

Lumens: Three powerful light-based entities called lumens (see new monsters) are present in the chamber when it is first breached. The lumens provide the white glow that is visible by the crystal pillar even in dark conditions. They respond to intruders within 3-6 rounds. In addition to their native abilities, the light conditions of the chamber - as determined by the activation of any or all of the light beams - can and will affect the powers of the lumens. Should a lumen spend a full round in a zone lit by colored light, it gains the powers appropriate to that color; these powers last for 4 rounds or until the lumen inhabits a zone lit with different colored light. The lumens know the effects of the light beams and use them tactically. See the table on the next page for the various effects.

It should hardly need to be mentioned that those fighting the lumens would do well to deactivate as many of the light beams as is possible, for the enhanced lumens are formidable indeed!

Unless the apparatuses found in areas SL1-5, SL1-6 and SL1-7 are permanently destroyed, new lumens will be summoned to replace any that are ‘slain.’ These reinforcements arrive in one hour.

Light Beam Table

Zone	Yellow Beam	Blue Beam	Red Beam	Yellow + Blue Beams	Yellow + Red Beams	Blue + Red Beams
Zone A	Yellow	Dark	Red	Yellow	Orange	Red
Zone B	Yellow	Dark	Dark	Yellow	Yellow	Dark
Zone C	Yellow	Blue	Dark	Green	Yellow	Blue
Zone D	Dark	Blue	Dark	Glue	Dark	Blue
Zone E	Dark	Blue	Red	Blue	Red	Purple
Zone F	Dark	Dark	Red	Dark	Red	Red

Light Zone Effect on Lumens

Color of Zone	Name of Effect	Specifics
Dark	None	None
Yellow	Regeneration	Cures 2-16 damage on a lumen
Green	Protection	Cures 1-8 damage on a lumen, and renders it immune to electricity
Blue	Desiccation	Adds damage to a lumen's attacks: +1-4 HP damage, and all liquids save at -1 or evaporate
Purple	Change form	A lumen immediately shifts to infra-red (50%) or ultra-violet (50%)
Red	Burning	Adds +1-4 HP fire damage to a lumen's attacks, and may ignite combustibles
Orange	Combustion	Adds an explosive fire effect to a lumen's attacks, +1-12 HP damage to all in 20'

Access to Lower Tomb (SL1-9): Access to the lower tomb is difficult to achieve. Three solidified lumens must be acquired and placed in the three indentations in the hexagonal pillar. Doing so causes the pillar to slowly sink through the floor until it merely protrudes 10' above the floor of SL1-9. The process of sinking takes 1 turn. Note that while the absence of the pillar prevents the creation of colored light in the zones of SL1-4, it does not deactivate the light beams. Indeed, without the pillar to reflect them, the light beams will meet in the space vacated by the pillar, causing a continuous crackle of roiling energy in a 10' radius; this energy does 2-12 HP damage to any who enter its radius. Those seeking to enter SL1-9 via the hole in the floor of SL1-4 will thus either have to endure the damage or turn off the light beams. The drop into SL1-9 is 40' (or 30' to the top of the protruding pillar).

Exit to SL1-8: The way to area SL1-8 is blocked by a buzzing energy screen erected by the rudishva who discovered this chamber. The screen is impermeable and may only be deactivated from SL1-8.

Inhabitants:

1. 3 lumens (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 2; MV 180' flying (Class A); HD 9; HP 43, 39, 37; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4, or 2-8, or 3-12, or 4-16; MR 25%. Special attacks: blindness (2/turn). Special defenses: +2 or better weapons to hit; immune to light and optical effects.

Treasure:

On corpses: imperial field plate +1 (see Arden Vul items); leather armor +2; short sword +3; broadsword +1; mace of dispelling (see new magic items); a charred leather pouch with 20 pearls (100 gp each); a piece of white plasteel on which is etched (with a laser) a fairly accurate image of the door leading from 5-46 to 5-52, with a subsequent piece of graffiti in the form of an arrow pointing to the correct icon that allows safe entrance to 5-52 (see 5-46 for this door).

From 'slain' lumens: octagonal crystals 6" in diameter, only 50 gp each but necessary to access SL1-8.

SL1-5: Yellow Chamber

This spherical chamber is sheathed completely in canary yellow plasglass. Floating and rotating in the center of the chamber is a blob of yellow energy roughly 10' in diameter.

If activated by the tiles in SL1-3, the floating sphere emits a continuous beam of yellow light that travels down a 5'-diameter shaft to area SL1-4. Since anyone touching the activated yellow beam takes 4-24 HP damage per round, access to this chamber will, in most cases, require deactivation of the proper light beam.

Wise explorers will seek a method of destroying the blob of energy, since by doing so they can a) disable the light beam mechanism and b) prevent the arrival of new lumens to replace any that have been slain. Destroying the energy blob is difficult, though. High-level destruction magic (appropriate spells of level 6 or higher) will work. Physical attacks by weapons of +2 or greater enchantment will also be effective (the blob is AC 4 and has 50 HP), although each successful hit requires the attacker to save vs magic or take 4-24 HP energy damage. The GM might also rule that other magic that opposes the properties of the yellow energy might also work.

Secret Door (west): A rather obvious secret door (1 in 4 to find) is set in the west wall. It is illusory, so one need only walk through it to access the narrow walkway to area SL1-8.

SL1-6: Blue Chamber

Identical to SL1-5 save for the color of the chamber's walls (blue), the color of the energy blob (blue), and the color of the light beam the blob produces (blue). Unlike the other two spherical chambers, there is no secret door here.

SL1-7: Red Chamber

Identical to SL1-5 save for the color of the chamber's walls (red), the color of the energy blob (red), and the color of the light beam the blob produces (red).

Secret Door (east): A rather obvious secret door (1 in 4 to find) is set in the east wall. It is illusory, so one need only walk through it to access the narrow walkway to area SL1-8.

SL1-8: Laboratory

This long, narrow chamber is covered with more of the white, hexagonal, opaque, impact-resistant, reflective, plasglass tiles. Although a narrow corridor and stairs once led from it to SL1-2, the corridor is now a pile of inaccessible slag and collapsed rock. The chamber is thus accessible initially only through the secret doors from areas SL1-5 and SL1-7.

A console made of red plastic sits against the south wall. Above the console are three hexagonal plasglass view screens, each one of which is starred and broken (as if hit by a strong hammer or other implement). Four man-sized lumps of melted plastic, wiring, and electronics are the remains of some destroyed advanced technological equipment.

In addition to the useless technology, the chamber features two decrepit wooden workbenches against the north wall, a hammock of unusual material, three small casks, and a troll chest (see new technological items).

The observant will notice that, at the western end of the north wall, a 10"x10" square of silvery metal has been attached to the wall. The square had a rune engraved on it, but the rune has been brutally scratched out. Even closer observation will notice a 5'-diameter circle on the floor where the plasglass tiles have been marred by adhesive. These are the remnants of a now-dismantled rudishva teleport node that once connected this chamber to the rudishva areas on Level 5.

On the workbenches are a number of unusual tools of a strange metal alloy (hammer, screwdrivers, wrenches, awls, a dead electric drill, a dead soldering iron, etc.).

The casks contain only some desiccated remnants of food and a precipitate of dried-up liquid.

The hammock is made of nylon, and is quite sturdy. In it rests the desiccated body of Liut-Repp, a rudishva scientist. She wears her orange jumpsuit (with name on the breast) and appears to have died peacefully. In her pocket are sky blue and platinum rudishva identity plaques (see new technological items).

The troll chest is locked and keyed to Liut-Repp's hand (her corpse can be used to open the chest). It contains 10 2-lb bars of platinum (500 gp each), an octagonal crystal 6" in diameter, and a rudishva grav disk (see new technological items) with 2 lesser power supplies (10 and 14 charges; see new technological items).

GM Note: Liut-Repp was the rudishva science officer most interested in optics. When this area was discovered, and it became evident that the niravairi, arch-enemies of the rudishva, had already been here, Liut-Repp successfully lobbied for resources and funds to study the (temporarily) abandoned niravairi site. Liut-Repp became convinced that studying the lumens and their optical properties might provide an alternate form of propulsion to enable the rudishva to escape Magae. But after one of her assistants was atomized by the light rays in SL1-4, Captain Leil-Jor ordered the experiment to be shut down. The captain had the control panels and equipment here destroyed, and had the access corridor from SL1-2 destroyed with explosives. Liut-Repp refused to leave, however, and ended her days studying the lumens.

Stairs and Entrance to SL1-4: A steep, staircase coated in the same white, opaque, hexagonal plasglass tiles leads down 20' to SL1-4. The entrance to that chamber is blocked by a force wall created by Liut-Repp; it is easy to pass through from the north. It may also be deactivated if one erases or obscures a rune painted on the wall next to the doorway.

Treasure:

See text.

SL1-9: Lower Tomb of Light

The Lower Tomb is only accessible via the hole created when explorers cause the hexagonal pillar that stretches between SL1-4 and SL1-9 to sink into the floor beneath SL1-9. To do so, they must activate the mechanism by manipulating the three octagonal holes set into the pillar at a level 5' from the floor of SL1-4. The pillar slowly sinks down into SL1-9 until only 10' of the pillar rises above the floor of SL1-9. After 3-5 turns, the pillar automatically rises up to its original starting position. Lest they should find themselves trapped in SL1-9, explorers will find a second set of three octagonal holes set into the fully extended pillar, at about 5' from the floor of SL1-9. The extended pillar can thus be lowered from SL1-9 either by inserting the solidified remains of three lumens into this second set of holes, or by pressing the octagonal control ruby held by Veshlok (see SL1-11) into any one of the three holes.

The lower tomb is 40' tall, with walls and floor coated in opaque plasglass tiles: the tiles are octagonal and multi-hued. The result is a rainbow of colored tiles that sparkle when external light is brought to bear. Four stone corridors lead from the central chamber, while four large hexagonal prisms defined by shimmering walls of colored light stand along the walls.

Prisms: The prisms are containment units employed by the Order of Planar Explorers to store specimens discovered during their ventures into the outer planes. Each prism is hexagonal in shape, and measures about 12' across and 18' high. The faces of the prism are translucent, but shimmer slightly and are impenetrable; they are composed of high intensity sheets of light projected from a set of six octagonal crystals set into the floor. Short of learning the operation of the prisms from a member of the Order, the face of a prism can only be 'turned off' by destroying one of the crystals: crystals are AC 4 and take 20 HP. Entities contained within the prism exist in a state of suspended animation; if released an occupant needs 1-3 turns to recover its wits sufficiently to be able to talk and converse (but can defend itself immediately, albeit with a -2 penalty to all actions). Since the faces of the prism are translucent, viewers can get a good sense of what is inside each:

Prism 1: A derghodaemon: SZ L; AL NE; AC 0; MV 120'; HD 11+ 22; HP 95; #AT 5; Dmg 1-4+8(x5); MR 80% to 1st-level spells. Continual abilities: infravision; ultravision. Special attacks: grab attack; cause fear; sleep 2/day. Special defenses: half damage from acid, cold, fire; immune to poison, paralysis; silver, or +1 or better weapons to hit. Special: create darkness 10' radius; teleport without error; detect invisible; read magic; comprehend languages; invisibility; telepathy; word of recall (1/day).

Prism 2: A space squid (see new monsters): SZ L; AL N; AC 3; MV 20', 120' flying (Class D); HD 16; HP 109; #AT 7;

Dmg 1-8(x6)/6-36; MR 35%. Special attacks: stunning attack; consumption of prey (4-24 HP damage). Special defenses: immune to cold and fire.

Prism 3: A specimen of the ichor of Rimmaq-Isfet (see new mon-sters), appearing as a large blob of oily black matter: SZ L; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 12; HP 83; #AT 2; Dmg 1-6/1-6; MR 30%. Special attacks: caustic touch (1-4 HP acid damage); crush (1-10 HP/rd); obliterate organic matter. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to cold and acid.

Prism 4: A transposer, wearing the form of a rudishva: SZ M; AL N; AC 7; MV 150'; HD 6; HP 39; #AT 2; Dmg 1-6/1-6. Special attacks: transposes damage. Special defenses: change self/illusion.

If released, the derghodaemon, the space squid, and the ichor of Rimmaq-Isfet attack immediately; the transposer attempts to negotiate in Mithric, hoping to attack from surprise once suspicions are lulled.

SL1-10: Portal to Ethereal Plane

At the point of this arrow-shaped chamber a 5'-diameter portal of purple energy hovers in the air. The unsealed portal has no depth on this plane and is set at a 45-degree angle; it is thus easy to step through. The portal leads to the Ethereal Plane.

A 4'-tall glyph is incised into the east wall and filled with platinum; it translates (if magic is used) as "Ethereal". Next to it has been hurriedly scribed in some red substance a set of smaller glyphs: these read in Niravairi "Vaporous Curtain to the Deep at 30-degrees from Turquoise Veil."

SL1-11: Portal to Astral Plane

This arrow-shaped chamber is crowded. A yellow, disc-shaped portal (unsealed) to the Astral Plane hovers at the point of the arrow. The rest of the chamber is filled with six movable caskets made of smoky, opaque plasglass, and a single crumbling wooden chest. Silvery cords emerge from four of the caskets and lead into the portal.

Caskets: The caskets are 3' wide by x 4' tall by 7' long, opaque, and decorated on side and top. On the side of each are three large niravairi glyphs. With magical assistance, they can be translated as "Order/Group", "Planes", "Traveler/Visitor." The lid of each casket is incised with an image and a string of 8 to 15 smaller glyphs in Niravairi Glyphik; these decorations are composed of tesserae of colored plasglass, artfully joined to produce the image or glyph. Again, magical means are the only way to decipher the scripts. On the short end of each casket is a silver disk about 2' in diameter. In the center of each lid is an octagonal depression about 1" across. Inserting one of the signet rings (see below) into the depression causes the casket to open without incident. Otherwise, the caskets are difficult to open (lift gates roll) without destroying the lid (AC 4, HP 50). In addition, attempts to open the caskets without use of one of the rings summons a mihstu to defend the inhabitant.

Casket 1: The glyphs read "Red-Eyed Rissaldar Kwarringa, who travels through Ether"; the image is of a pair of red, pupil-less eyes. Inside the casket lies the dead and desiccated body of Kwarringa, whose silver cord was cut on the Astral Plane. Beneath his body is a niravairi astral dripping sword, his octagonal signet ring, and 3 lb of fine gold flakes (3,000 gp).

Casket 2: The glyphs read “Subadar Jalalbak, blue-keyed walker in the gray.” The image shows a blue key with eight blades. Inside is the still-living body of Jalalbak, armed with a niravairi astral staff of power with 20 charges (see new magic items), a necklace of missiles, and a scroll with duo-dimension, and phase door inscribed on it.

Casket 3: The glyphs read “Jemadar Singalok Ket, lord of yellow and master of demons.” The image shows a yellow ring. Inside is the desiccated dead body of Singalok Ket, whose silver cord was also severed. With the remains are Singalok Ket’s octagonal signet ring, the golden band of Singalok Ket (see new magic items), and a brass cylinder on which have been incised some glyphs detailing directions to Horus’s God-Isle in the Astral Plane. To use the cylinder, a being with good intentions enters the Astral and concentrates on an image of the solar disk; a golden hawk then appears; by following the hawk one arrives at the God-Isle. As a failsafe, the brass cylinder also functions as a beacon, emitting a faint glow that increases in intensity as the holder nears the other members of Veshlok’s team.

Casket 4: The glyphs read “Veshlok, Havildar of the Order, master of many colors, lord of all portals, holder of the silver tulwar.” The image shows a silver tulwar slicing a silver rope. Inside is the living body of Veshlok. He carries a niravairi astral tulwar (see new magic items), a pouch filled with 50 red spinels worth 200 gp each, and another large, glowing, octagonal ruby (used to activate the hexagonal pillar in SL1-9). A tablet made of crystal also lies within, on which glyphs scribed in red ink in Niravairi Glyphik read: “Veshlok and his tuman depart for the Astral gray to seek the arm of the Hawk-God. Await him here. He shall return with the artifact of light sought by the Order. Singalok Ket carries the directions to the God-Isle, whose properties Mananik has laid bare.”

Casket 5: The glyphs read “Babildor, faithful Naik, keeper of the Cup.” The image shows a green cup. Babildor lies within; he carries a niravairi astral crossbow of accuracy (see new magic items) with 20 bolts +2, as well as a jade cup of life restoration (see new magic items).

Casket 6: The glyphs read “Mananik, Duffadar of the Order, the Craftiest of all.” The image is of a purple, hooded cloak. Mananik lies within, wearing his purple cloak of wise negotiating (see new magic items) and carrying a niravairi astral staff of the magi (see new magic items) with 20 charges. A set of strange crystal tablets are filled with glyphs: these notes describe the discovery of the corpse of dead Horus floating in the Astral Plane, and of the valuable arcnum (see new magic items) to be mined from that corpse, as well as of the artifacts said to be stored in his belt pouch. Magic and time (at least a week, and likely up to a month) are necessary to decipher the notes.

Backstory: A thousand years ago, the niravairi Order of Planar Explorers (see new monsters), received accurate information concerning the location of the corpse of the dead god, Horus, as it floats in the Astral Plane. Aware of the magical value of this resource, including enormous stocks of arcnum (see new magic items) they believe to be present in the desiccated veins of Horus’s corpse, they sent a crack team of explorers under the leadership of Veshlok to locate and exploit this valuable resource. The team was ambushed and trapped inside Horus’s body by rivals seeking the same resources. As time works differently in the Astral, their long period of captivity has lasted a thousand years of relative time on the Prime Material Plane but only years on the Astral. During this ordeal, two members of the Order – Kwarringa and Singalok Ket – were slain. The other four are still alive, trapped in the Astral Plane.

There is a 5% chance that the Order finally frees itself after all those years in captivity. If this occurs, they return to area SL1-11 within 1-6 turns of the PCs entering the area.

There are two other ways for PCs to potentially interact with the order. First, the PCs could venture into the Astral Plane in an effort to locate the Order. Second, if the PCs successfully open one of the caskets containing a living member of the Order, that member will be instantly drawn back to the Prime Material Plane. It will take a returning member 1-2 turns to clear his head before he is capable of action; during this time it is theoretically possible for evil creatures to slaughter the member out of hand. It is worth recalling, moreover, that any effort to open the caskets without use of a proper signet ring requires that the PCs to defeat a mihstu. The returned explorer may also be dismayed that the PCs have destroyed his planar casket. The explorer will immediately try to open the other caskets with his signet ring before negotiating with the party as a team. Veshlok and his team will not necessarily be hostile; should PCs wish to aid them on their venture to Horus’s body, they will welcome the help. They can give no information about Arden Vul. They are fully aware that the rudishva, whom they loathe, discovered (and abandoned) this sub-level in the distant past.

Should intruders slaughter the astral team, the modern incarnation of the Order will eventually learn of the massacre and will prove implacable and dangerous enemies thereafter. In particular the Order will seek to recover the special astral items held by Veshlok’s team.

Inhabitants:

1. Up to 6 mihstu: SZ M; AL NE; AC -2; MV 60; 60’ flying (Class B); HD 8+2; HP 61, 57, 53, 51, 49, 48; #AT 4; Dmg 2-7/2-7/2-7; MR 10%. Special attacks: drain CON. Special defenses: +2 or better weapons to hit; immune to electricity and all missiles (including magic missiles); stunned for 2-12 rounds by cold attacks.
2. Jalalbak, a niravairi (see new monsters) and a subadar in the Order of Planar Explorers, as a 12th-level magic user: SZ M; AL LN; AC 4; MV 120; HD 12; HP 36; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (niravairi astral staff of power). Abilities: STR 11, INT 17, WIS 13, DEX 17, CON 15, CHA 9. Special attacks: surprise on 1-3 in 6. Possessions: a niravairi astral staff of power with 20 charges (see new magic items); a necklace of missiles; a tablet with duo-dimension, and phase door; a ring of protection +3; and his niravairi spell tablet (see new technological items). Spells memorized: comprehend languages, enlarge, jump, magic missile; darkness 15’ radius, levitate, mirror image, strength; blink, feign death, fly, lightning bolt; dimension door, minor globe of invulnerability, polymorph other, wizard eye; cone of cold, hold monster, teleport, wall of force; legend lore. Spell tablet: charm person, comprehend languages, detect magic, enlarge, friends, identify, jump, light, magic missile, protection from evil, push, read magic, shield, floating disc, write; continual light, darkness 15’ radius, detect invisibility, forget, knock, levitate, mirror image, ray of enfeeblement, strength, wizard lock; blink, dispel magic, feign death, fireball, fly, gust of wind, haste, hold person, lightning bolt, protection from normal missiles, slow, suggestion, tongues, water breathing; charm monster, confusion, dimension door, fire charm, hallucinatory terrain, minor globe of invulnerability, polymorph other, mnemonic enhancer, wall of ice, wizard eye; airy water, cone of cold, distance distortion, hold monster, passwall, teleport, wall of force; enchant an item, legend lore, project image, stone to flesh.

3. Veshlok, a niravairi (see new monsters) and a havildar in the Order of Planar Explorers, as 12th-level fighter: SZ M; AL LN; AC 0; MV 120'; HD 12; HP 79; #AT 2/1; Dmg 3-10 (niravairi astral tulwar), 3-24 (laser rifle). Abilities: STR 17, INT 12, WIS 15, DEX 16, CON 12, CHA 14. Special attacks: surprise on 1-3 in 6. Possessions: laser rifle (see new technological items); niravairi astral tulwar (see new magic items); a pouch filled with 50 red spinels worth 200 gp each; a glowing, octagonal ruby (used to activate the hexagonal pillar in SL1-9); crystal tablet (see casket 6 above); diplomat's voice (see new technological items); niravairi personal shield (see new technological items).
4. Babildor, a niravairi (see new monsters) and a naik in the Order of Planar Explorers, as 4th-level fighter/8th-level thief (see new monsters): SZ M; AL LE; AC -1; MV 120'; HD 8; HP 72; #AT 1 or 2; Dmg 3-6 (niravairi astral crossbow of accuracy with bolts +2) or 2-12/2-12 (laser pistol). Abilities: STR 16, INT 8, WIS 10, DEX 17, CON 12, CHA 10. Thief skills: PP 70% OL 67%, F/RT 55%, MS 67%, HS 54%, HN 25%, CW 96%, RL 40%. Special attacks: surprise on 1-3 in 6. Possessions: laser pistol (see new technological items); niravairi astral crossbow of accuracy (see new magic items) with 20 bolts +2; a jade cup of life restoration (see new magic items); a potion of invisibility; sixteen packets of dehydrated rations (see new technological items); a niravairi personal shield (see new technological items).
5. Mananik, a niravairi (see new monsters) and a duffadar in the Order of Planar Explorers, as 8th-level magic user/8th-level thief: SZ M; AL LE; AC -1; MV 120'; HD 8; HP 64; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (niravairi astral staff of the magi), 2-7 (dart thrower with ordinary darts), or 1-4 (dart thrower with immobilizing darts). Abilities: STR 10, INT 17, WIS 15, DEX 17, CON 10, CHA 9. Thief skills: PP 70% OL 67%, F/RT 55%, MS 67%, HS 54%, HN 25%, CW 96%, RL 40%. Special attacks: surprise on 1-3 in 6. Possessions: cloak of wise negotiating (see new magic items); niravairi astral staff of the magi (see new magic items); dart thrower, with clips holding 6 ordinary and 6 immobilizing darts (see new technological items); niravairi personal shield (see new technological items); crystal tablets with notes on the astral location of Horus; his niravairi spell tablet (see new technological items). Spells memorized: charm person, comprehend languages, friends, protection from evil; continual light, levitate, strength; dispel magic, fireball, suggestion; charm monster, polymorph other. Spell tablet: charm person, comprehend languages, detect magic, enlarge, friends, identify, jump, light, magic missile, protection from evil, read magic, shield, floating disc, write; continual light, darkness 15' radius, detect invisibility, forget, knock, levitate, mirror image, strength, wizard lock; blink, dispel magic, feign death, fireball, fly, gust of wind, haste, hold person, lightning bolt, slow, suggestion, tongues, water breathing; charm monster, fire charm, hallucinatory terrain, minor globe of invulnerability, polymorph other, mnemonic enhancer, wall of ice, wizard eye.

Treasure: The wooden chest is crumbling and decrepit, and can be kicked apart easily. Inside are 20 20-lb platinum ingots, worth 5,000 gp each. See text for additional items of value.

SL1-12: Sealed Portal to the Abyss

Inside the chamber is a purple portal, floating at the point of the chamber at a 45-degree angle to the floor. It appears to be sheathed in a shiny, clear coating.

The portal here leads to the Abyss, and to the GM's choice of plane. Due to the potential dangers of an open portal to the abyss, the Order of Planar Explorers sealed the portal. The seal takes the form of a 2'-diameter silver disk that floats in the air next to the portal (similar to the disks on the Order's caskets – see SL1-11). In the center of the disk is an octagonal depression about 1" across. Impressing one of the signet rings held by each member of the Order (see SL1-11) causes the clear seal on the portal to be temporarily removed; the portal is accessible for so long as the signet ring is placed in the depression, plus an extra 5 minutes after it has been removed. The seal cannot be removed from the abyss side of the portal.

Should an unwary explorer open the seal, there is a 33% chance that a babau demon enters immediately to sow chaos.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 babau: SZ M; AL CE; AC -3; MV 150'; HD 7+14; HP 53; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 2-5/2-5/2-8, or 8-15 (military fork); MR 50%. Thief abilities: PP 70%, OL 62%, F/RT 60%, MS 70%, HS 56%, HN 30%, CW 98%, RL 45%. Special attacks: gaze acts as ray of enfeeblement; backstab as 9th-level thief; fear (by touch only). Special defenses: half damage from cutting and stabbing attacks; half damage from cold, electricity, fire and gas. Special: cause darkness 5' radius; levitate (as 10th-level magic user); fly (as 11th-level magic user); dispel magic user (as 12th-level magic user); polymorph self; heat metal (as 14th-level druid); gate in a babau demon (25% chance).

SL1-13: Portal to Order of Planar Explorers

At the apex of the arrow in this chamber floats another portal, this one sky-blue in color, albeit covered with a clear, reflective substance. A 2'-diameter silver disk floats next to the portal; it boasts an octagonal depression about 1" across. A set of glyphs painted on the north wall reveal (if translated) the destination of the portal, and include this friendly tag (in Niravairi) as well: "Home is where you hang your harness!"

The portal here once led to a major base of the Order of Planar Explorers. The exact location of this base is up to the GM to decide, as are the details of that base and the question of whether the base is still in operation after 1,000 years: it could be on an active starship, on a distant moon in the PC's home galaxy, or on a completely different plane. To protect their home base, the members of the Order also sealed this portal. As with the portal in SL1-12, the seal takes the form of a 2'-diameter silver that floats in the air next to the portal (similar to the disks on the Order's caskets – see SL1-11). In the center of the disk is an octagonal depression about 1" across. Impressing one of the signet rings held by each member of the Order (see SL1-11) causes the clear seal on the portal to be temporarily removed; the portal is accessible for so long as the signet ring is placed in the depression, plus an extra 5 minutes after it has been removed. The seal cannot be removed from the other side of the portal.

SUB-LEVEL 2: THE HALL OF SHRINES

This sub-level comprises two distinct regions. The first, the Hall of Shrines, is one of the most potent and secret constructions of the priests of Thoth from the Archontean period of Arden Vul. The Hall is of polished marble and granite, and features the static, busy artistic program of the cult of Thoth. The shrines that radiate from the Hall are quite potent - for good or for ill - and the GM is advised to consider limiting access to them; a good rule of thumb is that Thoth only allows one shrine to be 'open' at a time. The other part of the sub-level contains a suite of chambers that were originally part of the Beacon. These areas are thus rudishva in feel and appearance, with rounded corners and metallic surfaces.

GENERAL CONSTRUCTION

Rudishva areas: SL2-2, SL2-3

Archontean areas: SL2-1

ACCESS AND EGRESS

To Level 2: stairs at SL2-1, leading to 2-45

To Level 6: elevator at SL2-3, leading down to 6-95A

To Level 9: tunnel at SL2-6, leading down to 9-131

To various locations: Thothian teleportation ring at SL2-1

To the Astral and/or Ethereal Planes: gates at SL2-1H

RANDOM ENCOUNTERS

There are no random encounters in this sub-level.

LEVEL KEY

SL2-1: Hall of Shrines

A set of broad stairs leading up 75' from Level 2-45 provides the traditional access route to this site. The hall is very grand, with a tall ceiling (30') and two imposing rows of 8'-tall statues. All surfaces are clad in gleaming white marble. Rounded archways on each long wall lead to subsidiary chambers, each containing a shrine devoted to a particular incarnation of Thoth. A Thothian teleportation ring (see new magic items) is found in the northwest corner. The corpses of at least six adventurers are strewn throughout the room, as are several piles of broken granite. At the south end of the chamber, standing in a semi-circular niche, is a colossal statue of Thoth in ibis-headed form; from the ibis's beak drifts a spiral of light-orange mist. A verse in 2'-tall, gold-filled Mithric letters has been carved into the wall on either side of Thoth.

The inscription to the east of the statue reads:

*Soft exhalations
Drift from the beak,
As the Lord's Pneuma
Molds the champion*

The inscription to the western of the statue:

*The Champion's virtue
Is revealed in humility and wisdom,
While the lies of the proud
Find reward in self-knowing*

Rows of Statues: The hall is defined by two rows of 8'-tall statues that face outwards, toward the walls. Of the 28 plinths that originally held statues, 21 are still occupied and bear the names of their subjects carved in Mithric on the plinth. The names include many heroes of old (e.g., Crinius the Rector, Amalasantha of Narsileon, Felix Minucius, Jixon of Archontos, Kalea the Theosoph, etc. – see Worthies of the Archontean Empire in the World of Archontos appendix). It should be clear that the type of figures depicted in the statues varies: some are warriors, some sorcerers, some priests, and some lordly types. In certain circumstances, some or all of the statues may activate and attack as special stone golems (see below). If a stone golem is destroyed, the name on its plinth is erased.

Statue of Thoth: The colossal statue of Thoth is 5' wide and 15' high. It is made of black basalt, crowned with a white marble ibis head with a lapis beak. The ibis's eyes are enormous yellow topaz gems (500 gp each), while the lapis beak is worth 500 gp as well. Any effort to desecrate the statue or remove the eyes/beak causes all remaining stone golem statues to activate and attack; it will also ensure the permanent enmity of Thoth, as well as automatic failure in any of the shrines.

The Pneuma of Champions: The 'mist' that drifts down from Thoth's open beak is the Champion's Pneuma, a potent magical vapor. The vapor is light orange in color, and smells vaguely of ripe citrus. The Pneuma is strongly narcotic, and will cause any who inhale it to stand still for 1-6 rounds as the user contemplates the mysteries of Thoth. Generally the narcotic effects of the pneuma last for 1 hour, during which a user's head appears wreathed in an orange, translucent nimbus and the user experiences a general glow of excellence and well-being. In addition to these physical effects, the Pneuma imparts each of the following three effects to everyone who inhales it:

Effect	Mechanic	Duration
Wisdom	WIS +4, INT +4	1 day
Weakness	STR -4, CON -4	1 day
Awareness	Openness to Thoth	1-6 hours

Openness to Thoth: One under the effects of the Pneuma is more attuned to the ibis-lord's presence; attempts to contact Thoth, whether as a cleric or through high-level spells, are more likely to succeed. Whether or not Thoth will be pleased with the contact, or whether he will aid the summoner, is up to the GM.

Shrines to Thoth: The eight side chambers contain shrines devoted to the eight chief incarnations of Thoth. Each is decorated with vibrantly colored bas-reliefs representing the virtue or theme appropriate to that incarnation. At the end of each chamber is a shrine reflecting the relevant incarnation, before which is a circle of blue granite in which a postulant stands while contemplating that incarnation. Above each shrine to Thoth is a gold-filled inscription in Mithric.

Standing in the postulant's circle of any of the shrines activates that shrine. Generally those who have not first inhaled the pneuma of Thoth will find their experience more difficult, while those armed with the pneuma have an easier time (and a few shrines are only accessible to those under the pneuma's influence). Each shrine offers several possible benefits and negative consequences. Most negative consequences can only be removed by undertaking a major quest or by having recourse to the most powerful magic and/or divine intervention.

The Voice of Thoth: In many of the shrines, postulants will hear the voice of Thoth as a part of the operation of the shrine. Thoth's voice is comprehensible to all persons, regardless of what language they speak.

Limitations on Use: It is recommended that the GM roll 1d8 to determine which shrine is 'open' (available) on a given visit to the hall. Once that shrine is determined, it is 'open' for a month. The other seven will be sealed with walls of divine force (with the possible exception of SL2-1H – see text at that location). Of course, in certain campaigns it may make sense for all shrines to be accessible on any given visit. Regardless of availability, an individual may only gain a beneficial effect from a shrine once, although he/she can be subject to negative effects as often as they occur. In other words, an individual can consult a shrine as often as he/she earns negative benefits, but once he/she has earned the positive benefit, the shrine is forever closed to him/her.

Thothian Teleportation Ring: In the northwest corner of the hall is a set of 2"-tall paving stones arranged in a 6'-diameter ring. Inset into the floor next to the ring is a rectangle 48" long by 8" tall; the rectangle is divided into six interior compartments, each 8" square. Together these elements form a Thothian teleportation ring (see new magic items). To activate the ring, one must place six colored glass activation squares into the inset according to a sequence that matches the 'address' of the ring to which one wishes to travel. Once the squares are placed, a brief shimmer of energy is visible over the ring. At this point the user has 1 round to collect the squares and enter the ring, after which anyone in the ring is teleported without error to address indicated by that sequence of squares. If the glass activation squares are not collected and/or if the travelers do not possess a second set of them, they are likely to be stranded in the location to which they have just teleported. The address of this ring is as follows: YE-BL-RE-GR-BK-WH (see new magic items for explanation). None of the glass activation squares necessary to operate the circle are present.

Inhabitants:

1. 21 stone golems: SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 14; HP 60(x21); #AT 1; Dmg 3-24. Special attacks: slow once every other round. Special defenses: +2 or better weapons to hit; immune to most magic.

Treasure:

On the dead adventurers: 256 gp, 379 sp, 243 cp; two suits of chain mail; a suit of banded mail; a shield +2; a ranseur +1; a battle axe +1; two long swords; a sling +2, with 20 bullets, a holy symbol of Thoth, a scroll with four illusionist spells (dispel exhaustion, brain full of small spiders, brain full of large spiders, and warding chain of glyphs – see new spells for the latter three), a potion of gaseous form; and a potion of fly.

SL2-1A: Thoth the Arbitrator of Disputes

The walls of the chamber show scenes of men judging a wide variety of creatures. At the western end of the chamber stands a 4'-tall marble table, on which sits a set of platinum scales (with weights nearby). Above the table, the wall is carved with both an inscription and a trio of 3'-tall polychromed figures in high relief. The figures depict an ibis-headed man (Thoth) standing between a hawk-headed man (Horus) and a red-headed man (Set); Thoth wraps a cord around the clasped hands of Set and Horus (representing concord between the two enemies). Both the scales and the relief detect as magic.

Inscription: The Champion's Wisdom Ensures Peace

How the Shrine Works: Anyone who stands in the blue circle before the shrine is frozen briefly in time while he/she communes with an avatar of Thoth. The avatar telepathically asks three questions of the postulant, who needs only register his/her answer in his/her mind. After each answer is registered, the ibis relief booms out so that all can hear: "Thoth Hears!". Once all three questions have been answered, the ibis states "Now Thoth shall Judge." At this point the postulant rolls 3d6. If the roll is under his/her WIS score (potentially modified by the influence of the pneuma), a benefit is received; otherwise negative consequences are borne.

The three questions are listed in the table below. Three possible answers to each question are provided; the GM should determine which of the three is closest in spirit to whatever response the PCs give, and then apply the appropriate modifier. If an answer is clearly inappropriate, or unrelated to any of the three answers, apply a -1 modifier to the PC's subsequent roll of 3d6. For ease of examination, the 'best' answer is marked with an asterisk.

Question	Possible Answer	Modification of 3d6 roll
1. A wise man walks with whom?	A. The wise* B. The strong C. Himself	A. -2 to roll B. +2 to roll C. +0 to roll
2. In judging, a just judge seeks what?	A. To discover right B. To apply the letter of the law C. To bring harmony to the parties*	A. -1 to roll B. +1 to roll C. -2 to roll
3. Law is always trumped by what?	A. Nothing B. Informal agreement* C. Might	A. +0 to roll B. -2 to roll C. +2 to roll

Negative Consequences: those whose wisdom is found lacking by Thoth must roll on the following chart:

D6	Negative Consequences
1	-1 WIS (permanent)
2	Permanent -4 Reaction Roll to be applied to any attempt by the PC to persuade anyone of anything
3	Buying or selling goods is affected by -25% (that is, prices are 25% higher when buying and 25% lower when selling); lasts 1 year
4	PC is 50% more likely to be found guilty of a crime of which he/she is formally accused in a legal setting; permanent
5-6	2-4 stone golems activate and attack

In addition, the platinum scales will weigh incorrectly and cannot be balanced; using them may make PCs liable to accusations of using false measures.

Benefits: If Thoth accepts the wisdom of the PC's decisions, he/she should roll on the following table:

D6	Benefits
1	+1 WIS (permanent)
2	+4 reaction roll in any formal legal setting (permanent)
3	May summon this avatar of Thoth once in order to consult on the wisdom of a particular decision or action, or to intercede in a difficult set of negotiations. The avatar's advice will be highly useful, even decisive, but it will not engage in combat
4	PC gets 25% better prices for a year

In addition, the champion will find that the platinum scales are not only perfectly balanced whenever he/she uses them, but that they are able to provide only him/her with an accurate gold piece value of any gem, piece of jewelry, or small object placed upon them.

The Platinum Scales: Those who commune with Thoth are permitted to remove the platinum scales. The scales are worth 4,650 gp, and are enchanted; see above for their effects, which vary according to whether the postulant received a benefit or a negative consequence. Those who have not undergone Thoth's questioning cannot remove the scales; for such persons, the scales and weights appear to be affixed permanently to the table. If the scales are removed by a postulant, an identical pair will be present the next time the shrine is available (i.e., after a month).

SL2-1B: Thoth the Magician

The walls of the chamber are covered in frescoes showing arcane symbols, formulae, and objects (wands, librums, etc.). At the western end is a basalt table on which sit two wands, one carved out of simple oak with a few arcane glyphs and the other a piece of ivory chased with silver and gold. Above the table is carved an inscription and a flying ibis with open beak, from which a long, twisting scroll descends to the hands of two sorcerers. The scene represents Thoth as the font of magic.

Inscription: The Champion Taps the Arcane

How the Shrine Works: A postulant standing in the blue-granite circle triggers a booming voice which intones "Choose!" Both wands glow with an orange light until the postulant selects one (at which point the other returns to inert status). Regardless of which is chosen, the postulant must then roll 3d6 under his/her INT (possibly modified by the pneuma). Several factors may influence the die roll:

- Postulant is a magic user: -2 to roll
- Postulant is an illusionist: -1
- Postulant is any other class: +2
- Postulant is a follower of Thoth: -2
- Postulant is a follower of Set: +2
- Postulant has correctly and orally identified Thoth as the origin of magic: -1

If the roll succeeds, consult the Benefits section; if it fails, consult the Negative Consequences section. Thoth replaces any missing wands within a month. Note: inert wands (i.e., those not chosen) may be taken, and will detect as magic, but have no powers. They can be sold as curios for 50 gp.

Negative Consequences: The wand is detrimental, but the postulant will refuse to recognize that fact, thinking instead that the wand is actually one of immense power (roll on the wooden wand chart below to determine the type of wand the user believes it to be). If the user chose the wooden wand, the wand actually functions as a cursed wand of alarms (see new magic items). If the user chose the ivory wand, it is a cursed wand of life-stealing (see new magic items).

Benefits: The wand is beneficial and possesses 40 charges; its powers and charges are instantly known to the wielder. Only the original postulant may wield this wand, and may do so even if not normally able to wield wands of this (or any) sort. The nature of the wand depends on which was selected:

D6	Wooden Wand	Ivory Wand
1	Wonder	Illumination
2	Lightning	Magic Detection
3	Polymorphing	Metal and Mineral Detection
4	Fire	Secret Door and Trap Location
5	Negation	Enemy Detection
6	Conjuration	Size Alteration

SL2-1C: Thoth the Scribe

The walls of the shrine depict scores of scribes laboring to copy scrolls and codices. At the western end is a solid ivory table on which rests the Book of Thoth (an enormous codex, 3'x5' in dimension, with green leather covers and ivory plates for folios - see Arden Vul books), an ebony inkpot, and an ibis-feather pen. On the wall above the table are carved an inscription and a fresco of baboon-headed Thoth handing scrolls to genuflecting humans.

Inscription: The Champion Transfers Knowledge

How the Shrine Works: This shrine is only operable by those under the influence of the Pneuma. Negative consequences occur for any not under the influence of the Pneuma who touches the objects of the shrine in any other way. If a postulant who has inhaled the Pneuma stands in the blue circle, he/she hears a booming voice intone: “Will you read or write?” If the postulant says or thinks ‘read’, then the Book of Thoth opens to one of the pages determined on the table below. If the postulant speaks or thinks ‘write’, then the ibis-feather pen floats to his hand, and the Book of Thoth opens to a blank page.

Negative Consequences: If a postulant who has not first inhaled the Pneuma attempts to read the open page of the Book of Thoth, he or she loses 1 WIS instantly, and three stone golems from SL2-1 animate to intercept the desecrator(s). If the inkpot or the pen are touched, the golems activate but no WIS loss occurs.

Benefits: The nature of the benefit depends on whether the postulant chose to ‘read’ or ‘write’.

If a postulant chose to ‘read’, the ivory pages of the Book of Thoth flip open to a random page. After reading the page, the postulant must roll 3d6 under INT to comprehend the cosmic consequences of the information presented; if this fails, he/she suffers confusion for 1 day, loses a permanent point of INT, and can never receive a benefit from the shrine. If it succeeds, roll on the following table. Note: even if a character is illiterate, he/she will still magically be able to comprehend the tome.

D6	Benefit
1	+1 INT
2	+1 WIS
3	Instant and permanent ability to comprehend languages , per the magic user spell.
4	Instant and permanent ability to cast a single 1 st -level magic user spell, regardless of class restrictions, intelligence, or material components. The spell should be determined randomly. The lucky recipient can ‘cast’ the spell once per day.
5	Knowledge of astral spell . If the recipient is a magic user, this is a spell-like ability usable once per week (regardless of intelligence or material components). If recipient is not a magic user, the spell appears on a scroll which can be used or sold as appropriate.
6	XP sufficient to gain one level, or 10,000 XP, whichever is less.

If the postulant chose to ‘write’, then he or she knows intuitively that he/she must convey knowledge and/or power to Thoth by inscribing it in the Book of Thoth. Two kinds of information may be recorded: spells or secrets. With spells, the more potent the spell, the more likely the recipient is to receive the benefit. The base chance to receive a benefit is 20%, modified by 10%xLVL of spell inscribed (e.g., a 1st-level spell is inscribed, the chance is 30%, if a 9th-level is inscribed, it rises to 110%). Whatever spell the PC chooses to inscribe is wiped permanently and irrevocably from both his/her mind and his/her spell book. In return, if the percentage roll is made, Thoth grants a lapis, bronze, and silver brooch in the form of an ibis: this brooch may be used to summon an avatar of Thoth (equivalent in power to a solar) to aid the summoner. The brooch may be used twice before it crumbles to dust. If the roll fails, the postulant hears “It is already known!” and he/she can receive no further benefit from the shrine.

If the postulant knows no spells, he or she must record an important, defining moment of his/her life into the Book (the precise nature of the moment should be discussed with the GM and/or other players; it should be significant). Once that moment or secret is recorded in the Book, knowledge of it is wiped from postulant’s mind permanently; at that point there is a 20% chance plus 10%/level of the postulant to receive the brooch. If the roll fails, the postulant hears “It is already known!” and he/she can receive no further benefit from the shrine.

SL2-1D: Thoth the Judge of the Dead

The south wall of the shrine depicts a file of 20+ souls of various social classes progressing towards a set of scales. The north wall is devoted to an enormous fresco of the scales, behind which crouch Thoth-as-baboon and Maat. On one scale is a human heart, while on the other is an ibis feather. Five humans are lined up to be judged - a beggar, a great lady, a pudgy priest, a sorcerer, and a warrior. At the western end of the shrine is a plain stone table on which stands a 3’-tall set of bronze scales. To one side lies a white ibis feather made of ivory; to the other side lie two apple-sized human hearts carved out of red garnet. One of the hearts has a white painting of an ibis feather on it; the other has a black spiral painted on it.

Inscription: With Wisdom the Champion Judges

How the Shrine Works: When a postulant steps into the blue granite circle, the voice of Thoth booms forth: “Thou must judge so that thou may be judged!” At that point an apparition appears and makes a short statement about the conduct of its life. When the soul has made its statement, it is up to the PC to place one of the two garnet hearts and the feather of Maat onto the scales. The heart chosen by the PC is, in effect, a judgment on the merit of the soul. If the PC chooses the heart inscribed with a feather, then the judgment is that the soul is without serious sin and thus worthy of joining the afterlife. If the PC chooses instead the heart with the black spiral on it, he/she has judged that the soul does not merit the afterlife. The GM should roll on the table on the next page to determine the soul who appears, the gist of its statement, and the ‘correct’ judgment. If the PC’s judgment was correct, benefits accrue; if it was incorrect, negative consequences occur.

Note to GM: Thoth is a god of law, justice and equanimity; as a result, the ‘correct’ judgment is mostly a reflection of the absence of violent emotion, pride, or chaotic impulses.

Negative Consequences: The voice of Thoth booms forth: “You lack the wisdom to judge justly.” The postulant loses a point of WIS and three stone golems from SL2-1 animate and attack. Despite this outcome, the postulant may still take the garnet hearts (500 gp each), and the ivory feather (200 gp).

Benefits: The voice of Thoth booms with satisfaction: “Wisdom is indeed the prerequisite for Judgment.” The postulant gains a point of WIS and may take the objects from the table. The hearts are valuable gems (500 gp each), but the feather transforms into a feather of Maat (see new magic items).

d10	Appearance	Statement of Dead Soul	Correct Judgment
1	Wild-eyed beggar in tattered clothes	My wife died, and I lost my job when I broke my leg. I have begged because I have nothing else to do. I am grateful for the charity showed to me by all.	Maat
2	Wild-eyed beggar in tattered clothes	I never deserved poverty, as I have had nothing but bad luck. My wife died and I hurt my leg working for an unjust overseer. In the afterlife I will become equal to those who have sprinkled a few coins on me.	Sin
3	Beautiful lady in glittering jewels and gown	The gods blessed me with beauty and wealth. I have never listened to the insinuations of the envious, but rather have acted with equanimity towards all, offering pain where it is due and reward where it is due. I have exercised my rightful authority justly.	Maat
4	Beautiful lady in glittering jewels and gown	The gods blessed me with beauty and wealth. Those who have envied my gifts cannot be trusted; my righteous anger has brushed them aside, and I have ferreted out their dens of iniquity. I act righteously in all matters.	Sin
5	Pudgy priest in soiled robes	Curses on Set! It is the fault of the loathsome deceiver that I have been foiled in my efforts to lead a blameless life. To repay his deceit I have slain his cattle and will feast on them with my paramour.	Sin
6	Pudgy priest in soiled robes	The ways of the Gods are unfathomable. I have sought only to follow the path of righteousness. I have rebuffed the amorous, distributed their gifts to the poor, and embraced the path of moderation. While I have erred, it has been accidental and not intentional.	Maat
7	Haughty sorcerer brandishing a wand	With my mighty magic I have explored every facet of the universe. I have torn down, and I have built up. I have sought knowledge, and shared it with the learned. My life reflects the power of magic.	Maat
8	Haughty sorcerer brandishing a wand	Magic has made me feared. My anger has wrought devastation on those who would dare to challenge me. My life reflects the triumph of magical power.	Sin
9	Stern warrior in imperial field plate	Over the course of a dozen campaigns I have fought tirelessly with dripping blade to defend the Empire. I have slain and watched my comrades be slain. I seek rest.	Maat
10	Stern warrior in imperial field plate	Brought unwilling to the army, I proved an eager disciple, reveling in the battle lust and the cleansing emotions wrought by slaughter. Promoted to Polemarch, I always sought the lead in battle, throwing my troops into the fray and following with shrieking war cry. Glory is my reward.	Sin

SL2-1E: Thoth the Self-Begotten

The north and south walls are filled with dozens of images of objects and incarnations associated with Thoth: ibis-headed men, ibises, baboons, apes, scroll full of writing, a sorcerer's staff, a star constellation, a set of scales, the feather of Maat, an egg, etc. At the east end of the shrine a stone table sits beneath the inscription. On the table are ten miniature-sized (3" tall) objects representing each of the symbols just mentioned; each is made from a different precious material (gold, silver, ivory, ebony, gems, etc.).

Inscription: The Champion's Wisdom Knows Whence it Arrives

How the Shrine Works: The postulant stands in the blue-granite circle, and the voice of Thoth booms forth. The voice asks two questions, after which the postulant must roll 3d6 under his/her INT (possibly modified by the pneuma). The questions are listed below, along with possible answers that might influence the roll. If the roll is successful, benefits accrue. If it is failed, negative consequences happen. Note: this is not a multiple-choice question, and so the GM should not provide a list of possible answers. The postulant must craft an answer on his/her own, which the GM should interpret according to the rough guidelines below.

First Question: Whence Lord Thoth?

Possible Answers with modifiers:

From Himself	-5
From nothing	-5
He is always	-5
An egg	+1
An ibis	+1
A baboon	+3
Any other answer	+5

Second Question: What are the offspring of Lord Thoth?

Possible Answers with modifiers

He has none	-3
All things	-1
Writing	-1
Magic/spells	-1
The (other) Gods	0

Baboons	0
Ibises	0
Humans	+2
Any other answer	+1 to +3

Negative Consequences: The voice intones: “You lack wisdom. Learn it, lest you be cursed! And now ... choose your reward!” The postulant can then select one of the 10 objects from the table at the bottom of the page. Sadly, the object is cursed (see table below). Curses are permanent until dispelled by a 12th-level cleric. Once the curse affects the postulant, the object is drained of magic and is merely of some small value. If a postulant refuses to take an object, no curse is inflicted. If he/she takes more than one object, only one curse is inflicted (GM’s choice).

Benefits: The voice of Thoth solemnly intones: “Your wisdom is manifest! Choose your reward!” The ten objects on the table then sparkle invitingly. The postulant may select one, whose positive effects are listed at the bottom of the page. If, however, the postulant does not choose an object but rather states “I choose wisdom” (or something like that), then the objects disappear and he/she gains +1 WIS and an amulet which can be used once to summon an avatar of Thoth (equivalent in power to a planetar). A selected object retains its magic so long as it is worn by the postulant. If the postulant gives away or sells the object, it loses its magic instantly. If a greedy postulant takes more than one object, he/she receives a curse (GM’s choice) and no benefit.

SL2-1F: Thoth the Astronomer

The walls of the shrine are painted with large fresco images of the traditional zodiacal symbols, six on the south wall (from east to west: Ram, Bull, Twins, Crab, Lion, and Maiden) and six on the north wall (from east to west: Scales, Scorpion, Archer, Horned-Monster, Water-Bearer, and Fish). At the east end of the shrine is a complex apparatus of arcs, circles and gears, all apparently made of gold. Twenty orbs made of various gemstones stud the apparatus.

Inscription: The Champion’s Wisdom Brings Order to the Stars

How the Shrine Works: When anyone steps into the blue granite circle, the apparatus spins and gyrates for 1 round before stopping with the gemstones in a specific arrangement of orbs. That arrangement reflects the star map of one of the twelve zodiacal signs (roll 1d12 to determine which); this fact will only be apparent to characters with special training or to a clever player who asks about the pattern and succeeds on a roll of 3d6 under INT. The voice of Thoth then booms forth, stating “The stars must be aligned, and the signs opposed. Else chaos reigns!” Once Thoth speaks, the wall fresco that represents that sign starts to come to life, peeling itself from the wall and expanding into a full-sized form of the sign; the process takes 3 rounds. The trick to the puzzle is twofold: first, the postulant needs to recognize that he/she needs to manipulate the apparatus of globes, arcs and circles to form the star-pattern of one of the zodiacal signs; second, he/she needs to recognize that the appropriate sign is the one on the wall directly opposite to the sign which has been activated. The chart below summarizes the opposing signs:

Image on South Wall	Image on North Wall
Ram	Scales
Bull	Scorpion
Twins	Archer
Crab	Goat
Lion	Water-Bearer
Maiden	Fish

If the postulant dials the opposing sign before 3 rounds are up, then benefits accrue. If not, the apparatus locks, and the PC and his/her friends face negative consequences. A kind GM should allow a PC who has already figured out which sign to ‘dial’ on the apparatus to make a 3d6 roll under WIS or INT (modified by the pneuma of course) to figure out what combination of orbs, arcs, and circles will produce the relevant sign.

Negative Consequences: If the player does not figure out which sign opposes the animating incarnation, or cannot manage to ‘dial’ the right combination on the apparatus within 3 rounds, then the animated zodiacal sign attacks. The animated signs are mechanically similar in some ways, although each has distinct

Object from SL2-1E	Properties if Cursed	Properties if Beneficial	Value
Ibis-headed man of ivory and lapis	Loss of one experience level or 10,000 xp, whichever is less	Gains one experience level or 10,000 xp, whichever is less	275 gp
Ibis figurine, of ivory and ebony	All found treasure is worth 25% less	Found treasure is worth 20% more	250 gp
Baboon, of malachite	-1 INT, -1 CHA	+1 DEX	150 gp
Crouching ape, of jasper	-1 INT, -1 WIS	+1 STR	100 gp
Stylized scroll with pretend writing, of ivory	Inability to read or to speak comprehensibly	75% Read Languages (as thief)	75 gp
Sorcerer’s staff, of carved ebony	Saves vs magic reduced by 2	Saves vs magic improved by 2	75 gp
Constellation of stars, of yellow jasper connected by gold wire	Bad luck; -1 to all rolls	+1 to all saves	300 gp
Set of scales, in platinum	-50% to reaction rolls	+25% to reaction rolls	250 gp
Feather of Maat, in carved ivory	Undead magnet: unable to hide from undead, who attack bearer first	Undead must save vs spells to attack wearer	200 gp
Egg of an ibis, in ivory	AC degraded by 2	AC improves by 2	200 gp

special attack, special defense, and treasure (which may be acquired once the sign is defeated). An animated sign follows the postulant until it is slain. See below.

Benefits: If the player can dial the opposing sign within 3 rounds, then the fresco image of the opposing sign also animates, and the two signs battle each other (ignoring the PCs) until both are destroyed. Benefits are WIS +1 and the treasure from the two animated zodiac signs.

Animated Zodiac Signs:

Ram: An enormous white-and-red bighorn sheep, with fire-red, glowing eyes and a pair of sharp, golden horns

Stats: SZ M; AL N; AC 2; MV 60'; HD 8+8; HP 60; #AT 1; Dmg 3-12 (horn); MR 20%. Special defenses: immune to fire.

Vulnerability: Takes double damage from ice or water; is easily distracted by images of another ram/sheep (e.g., by an illusion, or even a mirror)

Treasure: 2 golden horns, each worth 500 gp. Excellent potential as musical instruments.

Bull: A huge, 5'-tall snow-white bull, with black 'stockings' markings on its feet, a black head, and black tail. Its eyes are limpid, grey and featureless. Its horns are ivory, carved with scenes of commerce presided over by bulls; blue dye highlights the carvings.

Stats: SZ M; AL N; AC 2; MV 60'; HD 8+8; HP 60; #AT 1; Dmg 5-16 (head-butt); MR 20%. Special attacks: breath weapon (slow, 2/day). Special defenses: immune to alteration magic.

Vulnerability: Waving the color red before the Bull causes it to attack wildly at -3 to hit; double damage from electricity

Treasure: 2 carved ivory horns, each 500 gp in value; potential as drinking horns.

Twins: Two muscular young men in loincloths, bearing polished wooden clubs. A 5'-long silver chain runs from a bracelet on one twin's left hand to a bracelet on the other's right hand. The Twins are agile and strong, but strangely anonymous; this is particularly of their faces, whose features are bland, unwrinkled, and disconcerting.

Stats: SZ M; AL N; AC 2; MV 60'; HD 8+8; HP 60; #AT 1; Dmg 1-12 (club); MR 20%. Special defenses: regenerate 3 HP/rd so long as joined by the chain; immune to cold, electricity, fire, and water damage.

Vulnerability: Breaking the chain linking the twins inflicts 50% of remaining HP damage, and large tears of blood start welling from the eyes of each. Chain: AC 0; HP 18.

Treasure: The red tears may be collected at the end of combat. There will be 2 tears for each round of combat after the chain is broken. Tears of the Twins (see new magic items) are small rubies worth 500 gp each; if swallowed, allow temporary regeneration of 2 HP/rd for 2 turns.

Note: Each individual twin has no fixed amount of HP. Regardless of how much one twin 'takes', the twins are only defeated once the pair has taken 60 HP, whether that damage is inflicted on one twin or is divided among the two.

Crab: A huge crab, with midnight black shell and pure white eyes.

Stats: SZ M; AL N; AC 2; MV 60'; HD 8+8; HP 60; #AT 2; Dmg 3-12/3-12; MR 20%. Special defenses: immune to cold and water damage.

Vulnerability: Takes double damage from fire.

Treasure: Eyes are pearls worth 250 gp each; if 450 gp is expended a good armorer could transform the chitinous shell into a shield +2, +3 versus cold.

Lion: An 8'-long, tawny gold lion with amber eyes

Stats: SZ M; AL N; AC 2; MV 60'; HD 8+8; HP 60; #AT 3; Dmg 1-8/1-8/2-8 (claw/claw/bite); MR 20%. Special attacks: stunning roar, 2/day (save vs. petrification or be stunned for 1-3 rounds). Special defenses: immune to fire.

Vulnerability: Susceptible to illusion (-3 to saves); double damage from arrows.

Treasure: Hide may be made into leather armor +2, with +2 to saves vs fire attacks; doing so costs 450 gp in materials and labor.

Maiden: A beautiful girl with long dreadlocks, chiseled facial features, and coal-black eyes. She wears a light-blue, diaphanous gown and a golden circlet from which dangle 20 enormous pearls on golden chains.

Stats: SZ M; AL N; AC 2; MV 60'; HD 8+8; HP 60 each; #AT 1; Dmg special; MR 75%. Special attacks: touch petrifies if save is failed (petrification starts at point of touch and only spreads to cover the whole body in 2-4 rounds); charm person through her song.

Vulnerability: Has no magic resistance against any spell that affects the mind directly (e.g. suggestion, confusion, feeblemind).

Treasure: Golden circlet of pearls (see new magic items)

Scales: A pair of armored dwarfs, each holding a heavy weight on a short chain in each hand. Their eyes are blank, and their expressions featureless.

Stats: 2 dwarfs: SZ M; AL N; AC 2; MV 60'; HD 8+8; HP 30, 30; #AT 1; Dmg 5-10; MR 20%. Special attacks: they are +2 to hit when swinging the weighted chains as a flail. Special defenses: any hit to either dwarf is shared between the two (halve the damage total and apply half to each); immunity to fire.

Vulnerability: Any display of gold coins or gems will act as confusion spell

Treasure: Once the dwarfs are dead, the weights crack open. One contains a set of mithril scales, the other three contain sets of weights weighing a combined 100 lb. These weights are solid gold and can be sold for 3,000 gp. As a set, though, the scales can be used to determine almost accurate (+/- 5%) values of any object placed in the scales.

Scorpion: A giant scorpion made of segmented, multi-colored alabaster. Its eyes are black jet gems.

Stats: SZ M; AL N; AC 2; MV 60'; HD 8+8; HP 60; #AT 3; Dmg 3-10/3-10/2-5 (claw/claw/stinger); MR 20%. Special attacks: stinger causes paralysis for 1-4 turns if save is failed. Special defenses: immunity to cold, electricity and fire.

Vulnerability: Crushing weapons do double damage.

Treasure: The two eyes are valuable (250 gp) and enchanted; if mounted in a setting (helmet, crown) worn on the head, the eyes allow the wearer to see behind him/her (negating certain combat penalties).

Archer: An 8'-tall, green-clad archer with a jaunty cap and a permanent grin.

Stats: SZ M; AL N; AC 2; MV 60'; HD 8+8; HP 60; #AT 3; Dmg

1-8/1-8/1-8 (arrows); MR 20%. Special attacks: fires 3 arrows/rd; each is +2 to hit; arrows also cause psychedelic hallucination (save vs poison or spend 1-3 rounds contemplating anarcho-syndicalism). Special defenses: immune to targeted ranged attacks (magic missile, lightning bolt, etc. - but not fireball).

Vulnerability: Susceptible to illusions (-2 to saves) and mind-affecting spells (-2 to saves).

Treasure: 24 arrows +2 (the hallucinogenic effect is unique to the archer, though).

Goat: A 6'-tall goat with a fish tail. Its body is covered with oily iridescent scales. Its eyes are bright orange Stats: SZ M; AL N; AC 2; MV 60'; HD 8+8; HP 60; #AT 2; Dmg 4-11/1-4 (head-butt/tail slap); MR 20%. Special attacks: the oil on the tail is caustic and degrades metallic armor (save vs poison or AC value of any armor decreases by 2). Special defenses: immune to cold.

Vulnerability: Electricity does double damage.

Treasure: One of the horns is a horn of blasting; the other merely a valuable horn (100 gp).

Water-Bearer: A loincloth-wearing, brown-skinned man; he carries one water jar and has a second strapped to his back. His face is fixed in a rictus of a grin. The bearer is weak, but quick. Each round he is still standing he throws a half-sized water elemental from the jar. A minimum of one elemental emerges from the jar, even if the bearer is slain in the first round.

Stats:

1. water bearer: SZ M; AL N; AC 0; MV 180'; HD 8+8; HP 12; #AT 1; Dmg special; MR 20%. Each round he tosses a half-sized water elemental from the jar.

2. half-sized water elemental: SZ S; AL N; AC 2; MV 60', 180' in water; HD 4; HP 26; #AT 1; Dmg 2-20. Special attacks: affect boats. Special defenses: +2 or better weapons to hit.

Vulnerability: The bearer is particularly vulnerable to fire (+2 HP/die)

Treasure: The jar on the bearer's back is a decanter of endless water, although it is larger than usual (3' tall)

Fish: A single rainbow-colored fish emerges from the fresco and opens its mouth; a half-dozen smaller fish emerge from it. On each round that it is still active, the larger fish emits two more smaller fish up to a maximum of 18 smaller fish. All the fish hover and dart in the air, moving as if in water. The large fish does not attack, but the smaller fish do.

Stats:

1. large fish: SZ M; AL N; AC 2; MV 60' flying; HD 8+8; HP 60; #AT 0; Dmg 0; MR 20%. Special defenses: immune to cold and water damage. Special: emit 6 smaller fish on 1st round, and 2 more smaller fish every subsequent round.

2. 6-18 smaller fish: SZ S; AL N; AC 5; MV 120' flying; HD 2; HP 12(x6); #AT 1; Dmg 4-9; MR 20%. Special defenses: immune to cold and water damage.

Vulnerability: Double damage from fire and electricity

Treasure: Inside the larger fish are a number of 100 gp pearls equal to the number of smaller fish that engaged in combat (minimum of 6); also within the larger fish is a pearl of the Sirines.

SL2-1G: Thoth the Resurrector

The walls of the shrine are filled with frescoes depicting ibis-headed

Thoth striding among brightly-painted sarcophagi, touching them with a white ibis feather. In 50% of the images, the sarcophagi are opening, and the dead are rising. At the east end of the shrine, an 8' statue of an ibis stands in front of the usual blue-granite circle. The statue is made of pure white marble, albeit with a black basalt beak and blue sapphire eyes. One of the feathers extrudes from the statue and appears to be made of solid gold.

Inscription: The Wise Champion Raises the Dead

How the Shrine Works: This shrine is simpler than the others. The postulant approaches and stands in the circle; he/she rolls 3d6. If the roll is under (modified) WIS, then the gold feather flashes blue for an instant and may be removed. If the roll is not made, negative consequences occur.

Negative Consequences: If the WIS roll is failed, the feather is only a 25 gp curio, and 3 stone golems from SL2-1 activate and attack.

Benefits: If the WIS roll is made, the golden feather is enchanted such that it may be used once to raise dead or return a being from any other unfortunate state (e.g., petrification, etc.) without the need for system shock or resurrection rolls. The feather must be touched to the subject, who is instantly returned to full health by Thoth (those disintegrated or otherwise vaporized, however, are out of luck). The feather disappears after 1 use.

SL2-1H: Thoth the Timeless (or, Thoth, the Lord of Time)

The south wall of the shrine is painted flat grey; amid the grey flit vaguely human and humanoid shapes - in shapeless white. A few silver cords snake through the grey. The north wall features a grey mist within which are dim forms - some bipedal, some oval [demi-planes] - and a swirling vortex. At the east end of the shrine, under the inscription, stands a blue-painted wooden box some 8' tall and 4' square. It has a hipped roof with a slight overhang. A 2'-square hinged panel with some strange glyphs is on one side, while another features a full-sized door.

The southeast corner of this shrine has suffered a small collapse, revealing a narrow, cramped tunnel to SL2-2.

Inscription: The Wisdom of the Champion Conquers Time

How the Shrine Works: The shrine may only be activated if the postulant has breathed in the pneuma of Thoth (SL2-1). He/she stands in the blue-granite circle and enters a trance in which he/she attempts to commune with Thoth across space and time. Eventually, after 1-6 turns, the postulant attempts to roll 3d6 under his/her WIS (modified by the pneuma, of course). If the roll is made, benefits accrue. If it is failed, negative consequences occur. Several additional factors modify the dice roll:

Postulant is a magic user	-2
Postulant is a cleric	-1
Postulant is any other class	+2
Postulant has a holy symbol of Thoth	-1
Postulant is a follower of Thoth	-4
Postulant is evil	+3
Postulant has visited the Astral Plane	-1
Postulant has visited the Ethereal Plane	-1

Negative Consequences: If the roll is not made, the blue box disappears, and three stone golems animate and attack. The box returns in one month.

Benefits: If the roll is made, both the hinged panel and the door on the box click open. Behind the hinged panel is a special scroll of gate, usable only to gate in Thoth himself. The door to the blue box opens to a much larger space, some 30' in diameter, with a central pedestal and at least two doors [Note: the GM could add further doors/gates as she wished]. The doors are gates to the Astral and Ethereal Planes respectively. So long as the special Scroll of Gate is held, this shrine will be accessible to the holder. So, even if on a subsequent visit another shrine is indicated as 'open', this shrine will also be accessible.

SL2-2: Deep-space Containment Units

This chamber is 20' tall and made of polished matte-white plasteel. The room is octagonal in shape yet the joints between the walls and the ceiling and floors are all rounded (without 90-degree angles).

In the center of the chamber is a low pool of gently burbling, pale-yellow, viscous, neuroderm (see new technological items); from the center of it rises a 1'-diameter translucent bioplas tube filled with the same stuff. On the northwest side of the pool is a 4'-tall control console. Against the walls stand thirteen containment units, each of which is connected to the pool of neuroderm via pulsing, flexible tubes of bioplas that snake across the ceiling before connecting to the tube that rises from the pool. Channels in the floor lead from each unit to a floor drain. For the neuroderm and the console, see SL2-2A.

Containment Units: Resting on stone plinths, the thirteen 10'-tall containment units are hemispherical and opaque. The top, bottom and back are made of plasteel, while the curved front is of frosted plasglass. At about eye level on each unit is a 1'-square plaque of plastic on which is inscribed a Rudishva glyph (the glyphs are for numbers 1 to 13). Flexible, lightly pulsing tubes of bioplas connect the top of each unit to the neuroderm pool (SL2-2A).

The containment units were used to cryogenically store wounded, ill, or criminally insane rudishva starfarers as well as the occasional strange specimen encountered during the Beacon's far-flung travels.

Six of the thirteen units have been damaged beyond repair: the plasglass front panels of two have large cracks and spider-patterns on them, the panels of two more hang open without any sign of power, and the panels of two more are missing altogether.

Of the seven operable units, six are occupied and the seventh is vacant. The following table offers some suggestions for inhabitants of the occupied units. The GM can select an appropriate inhabitant or roll d10 for each of the six inhabited units. It is recommended that at least one of the units contain a rudishva.

D10	Description
1	Baltaj Kop, a niravairi (see new monsters) and a rissaldar in the Order of Planar Explorers, as a 7th-level fighter: SZ M; AL LN; AC 9; MV 120'; HD 7; HP 57; #AT 3/2; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 17, INT 10, WIS 13, DEX 15, CON 12, CHA 9. Special attacks: surprise on 1-3 in 6. Baltaj Kop was captured by the crew of the Beacon and held for interrogation; the rudishva and the Order were often at odds with each other.

2	I ichor of Rimmaq-Isfet (see new monsters): SZ L; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 16; HP 102; #AT 2; Dmg 1-6/1-6; MR 30%. Special attacks: caustic touch (1-4 HP acid damage); crush (1-10 HP/rd); obliterate organic matter. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to cold and acid
3	I night hag: SZ M; AL N(E); AC 9; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 55; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12; MR 65%. Special attacks: magic missile 3/day (2-16 HP damage); ray of enfeeblement 3/day. Special defenses: become ethereal; silver, iron or +3 or better weapons to hit; immune to sleep, charm, fear, fire, and cold. Special: know alignment; polymorph self; gate (50% chance for either a barbed devil or a type I demon). The hag enters the Ethereal Plane instantly upon release, and, once the recovery time has elapsed, returns to attack the PCs.
4	Plec-Gris, a male rudishva (see new monsters): SZ L; AL NE; AC 7; MV 90'; HD 3; HP 16; #AT 1; Dmg by weapon; MR 20%. Plec-Gris was a science technician grade 1 who went insane and murdered his partner; Captain Leil-Jor sentenced him to be stored for eventual imprisonment. As a criminal and sociopath, Plec-Gris wishes to avoid all rudishva areas and will work to subvert and betray any 'rescuers'.
5	I gibbering mouther: SZ M; AL N; AC 1; MV 30'; 60' on mud or quicksand; HD 4+3; HP 29; #AT 6+; Dmg 1(x6) +1/round. Special attacks: spit causes blinding flash; pull down and flow over victims; babble causes confusion. Special: alter ground density. Due to its unusual biology, the mouther can attack instantly upon release.
6	Selenite guardian (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 2; MV 30' on dirt, 60' on selenite; HD 6; HP 41; #AT 2; Dmg 2-8/2-8. Special defenses: regenerate 2 HP/round near selenite; immune to fire and water; take only 1 HP from edged weapons. The guardian does not require a recovery time and may act instantly
7	Kelo-Rep, a male rudishva (see new monsters), as 3rd-level thief: SZ L; AL CE; AC 7; MV 90'; HD 3; HP 15; #AT 1; Dmg by weapon; MR 20%. Abilities: STR 11, INT 15, WIS 7, DEX 16, CON 10, CHA 11. Thief skills: PP 40%, OL 33%, MS 27%, HS 20%, HN 15%, CW 87%. Kelo-Rep was an engineering jemadar who cracked under the weight of the stress wrought by the crash. Although definitely psychotic, he can 'pass' as rational for short periods. He sounds knowledgeable, but his advice about technological matters is now 50% likely to be erroneous, and potentially dangerously so.
8	Talg-Roe, a female rudishva (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LN; AC 7; MV 90'; HD 3; HP 14; #AT 1; Dmg by weapon; MR 20%. Talg-Roe was infected with a disease that the medical staff of the Beacon could not treat with drugs or technology. She is cheerful and friendly upon release, although she will not admit to her condition. There is a 50% chance her illness is contagious for humans; if so, it is serious and potentially lethal. She will die in 1-3 months.

9	Janaka, 5th-level kaliyani sorcerer (see new monsters): SZ M; AL LE; AC 6; MV 150' on six legs, 60' upright; HD 5; HP 31; #AT 2; Dmg by weapon. Special defenses: immune to poison and mind-affecting spells. Special: infravision. Psionic ability: 210. Attack modes: psionic blast, mind thrust. Defense modes mind blank, mental barrier. Disciplines: clairaudience, clairvoyance, invisibility, telepathic projection. Spells: charm person, dancing lights, hypnotic pattern. Possessions: jumpsuit; a jade amulet of an ouroboros (275 gp); seven silver rings (20 gp each). Janaka will need kaliyani refreshing liquid (see Arden Vul items) within a few days. Janaka, a science jemadar on the Beacon, who was found guilty of disobeying orders and was sentenced to indefinite cryogenic storage. Janaka was one of the first of the kaliyani to vocally express displeasure with the decision-making of Captain Leil-Jor.
10	Triv-Lok, a male rudishva (see new monsters), as a 6th-level fighter: SZ L; AL LN; AC 7; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 45; #AT 1; Dmg by weapon; MR 20%. Abilities: STR 15, INT 15, WIS 10, DEX 12, CON 14, CHA 16. Triv-Lok was a jemadar (officer) on the Beacon; as such she has deep knowledge of the rudishva period in Arden Vul, and of the operation of rudishva systems. Believing she established peace with the heqeti, she ignored orders and set off to visit the heqeti; she was seized by a varumani security team and remanded for court martial. Although the verdict was death (due to dereliction of duty), Captain Leil-Jor commuted the sentence to indefinite cryogenic storage. An account of Triv-Lok's trial may be found at 6-117.

For the rudishva or allied occupants of the containment units, it might be desirable to generate randomized mental states and general goals. Roll 1d12 and 1d6 on the following table as needed.

D12: Mental State	D6: Goals/Outlook
1-2: Depressed and hopeless; nearly catatonic. Lasts 3-300 months.	1: Locate shuttle (SL13-37) and return to the stars
3-4: Insane, but crafty and plotting	2: Locate troll thegn (7-30), in order to join (50%) or take over (50%) the varumani
5: Insane, wildly psychotic	3: Locate other rudishva survivors, e.g., Psalor-Ki (5-74)
6-8: Normal, suspicious	4: Destroy all rudishva tech
9-10: Normal, helpful	5: Explore Arden Vul, possibly with PCs
11-12: Amnesia, for 1-100 days	6: Genocidal hatred for: humans (1-2); varumani (3-4); heqeti (5-6); other (7-8)

The inhabitants of the containment units can be released and revived through manipulation of the console at SL2-2A. If an inhabitant is released, the release on the plasglass screen will snap open, the yellow neuroderm will pour onto the floor and down the drain, and the subject will slump to the floor. It takes 5-8 turns for the subject to recover from the experience.

Should a PC wish to make use of one of the containment units, the procedure works in reverse: the visitor steps into an empty, but usable, unit, the door is shut, and, once the console is properly manipulated, the bioplas tube fills the unit with neuroderm. The effects of this process on a rudishva are these: curing of all wounds, cessation of aging, and preservation of life at a minimal state. The effects on non-rudishva must be rolled on the following table:

D100	Effect
1-40	Preservation of life, no other effects
41-65	Preservation of life, plus full healing
65-80	Incompatible: instant death
81-88	Preservation of life, but inflicts a rare disease
89-96	Preservation of life, but subject goes insane
97-100	Preservation of life, but changes to subject's biological makeup (GM's choice)

SL2-2A: Neuroderm Pool and Console

This area is comprised of the pool of gently burbling yellow neuroderm with its control console, both of which lie in the center of area SL2-2.

Neuroderm: Neuroderm has significant bio-technological properties (see new technological items). Its role in this chamber is to provide the nutrient bath within which cryogenic stasis is possible. Flexible tubes of bioplas run from the pool to each of the thirteen containment units.

Control Console: The console on the northwest side of the pool is used to control the containment units. The console features three buttons, a smoky-gray plasglass screen, thirteen 3" slots, and a larger, 6"-wide slot. One button (green) activates the console, turning the screen on and allowing selection of individual containment units via the touch screen. A second button (blue) opens the plasglass front panel of a selected containment unit. The third button (yellow) activates the flow of neuroderm from the pool to the selected containment unit. Six of the slots are currently filled.

Removing an Occupant: The user must turn the power on via the first button, select the appropriate unit on the touch-screen, remove the control card from that unit's slot, and open the plasglass front panel by pressing the second button. This process may be summarized in this way: press green (power) button >> select unit on touch screen >> remove control card >> press blue button.

Installing an Occupant: The process requires an open unit. Then, the user must turn power on with the first button, select a unit via the touch-screen, insert a control card into that unit's slot, open the unit by pressing the second button, install a subject in the unit, close the plasglass screen by pressing the second button, and finally fill the unit with neuroderm by pressing the third button. For the effects of an active containment unit, see text at SL2-2. The installation process may be summarized in this way: press green (power) button >> select unit on touch screen >> insert control card into slot for appropriate unit >> press blue button >> [subject enters unit] >> press blue button >> press yellow button.

Creating New Control Cards: A process for creating new control cards, and even creating special genetic sequencing cards with which to bioengineer new creatures, exists on this console, but it would be difficult to figure out without rudishva advice and input, and it would require both a 2 lb mass of bioplas (to be inserted into the larger slot) and the activation of a series of mostly-hidden sequences on the control screen.

SL2-2B: Oval Door

This door is a rudishva iris door, which can only be activated by a sky blue, pale green, orange, pink, silver, or yellow rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items). When that plaque is presented, plasteel plates slide open in semi-circles, revealing a 4'-diameter entranceway.

SL2-3: Elevator to 6-95A

Inside the oval door is an elevator shaft leading down to the Arena (6-95A). The walls of the elevator shaft are undecorated stone, save for a bit of lapis inlay next to the oval door (the lapis shows a 6" orb circled by three 2" orbs).

If the elevator is present here (50%), it appears as a slab of polished blue granite, with another inlay of lapis incised in the center of the slab. The inlay shows a 1' orb with three 4" orbs around it (the rudishva homeworld with its three moons). The elevator activates by stepping on (or placing something on) the inlay. Travelers will experience slight nausea as the elevator travels plunges down about 1,050' to 6-95A.

If the elevator is not present, the entire 'room' is merely an empty granite shaft some 1,050' deep. The elevator may be summoned from 6-95A by touching the lapis inlay on the shaft wall; this brings the elevator in 1 round. There is a 1% per use (cumulative) that the elevator breaks, grinding to a halt in the middle of the transit.

SL2-4: Crevasse

The crevasse extends downward about 50'. Its walls slope gently inwards as it descends, and, while composed of rough stone, show signs of having been scraped flush and/or fused into a glassy-surface at some point in the past. The floor of the crevasse is damp and is littered with chunks of rock intermixed with brightly colored pieces of plasteel.

A patch of 2'-tall white mushrooms grows thickly on the floor. These are slow stepper mushrooms (see new flora), which if crushed or damaged (such as by landing on them or stepping on them) cause a slow effect to those who fail a save versus poison.

Among the mushrooms lie numerous skeletons. Four are rudishva, two are varuda, and three more are heqeti (see new monsters for all). The rudishva and varuda skeletons are still wearing orange jumpsuits that, unlike the bodies, are completely pristine. A still-operative rudishva battle robot (see new monsters) also sits among the corpses.

The battle robot was one of only two maintained by the crew of the Beacon (the other is located at SL13-37). It has waited for many centuries in the wreck of the chamber it was ordered to guard, and will still lurch into action at any sign of non-rudishva activity. Given the depth of the crevasse, the robot has not been able to use its levitation beam to escape the crevasse.

GM Backstory: This area was once an important rudishva security office, where a team constantly guarded the valuable neuroderm and the containment units. When the heqeti launched their surprise attack on the entire rudishva regime, they managed to undermine the security outpost from below. A massive collapse occurred, leaving the crevasse as a smoking hole where the outpost once stood. The security officers were slain instantly, but the battle robot merely received dings and bangs. Having been programmed to guard the outpost from all non-rudishva, it is still carrying out those orders amid the rubble. Given the rapid collapse of the rudishva hegemony, the survivors never managed to salvage it.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 rudishva battle robot (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC -2; MV 90' flying (Class A); HD 8; HP 51; #AT 4; Dmg 3-9/3-9/3-12/3-18 (laser/laser/explosive pellet/gauss gun). Special attacks: attacks and saves as a 10th-level fighter; gauss gun strikes all targets within range each round. Special defenses: immune to fire, cold, electricity, and poison; immune to mind-affecting spells. Special: 56 explosive pellets remain. Special: those holding a plastic rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items) will not be targeted; the robot can be controlled by a Rudishva-speaker who possesses a command bracelet (see new technological items).

Treasure:

Among the skeletons are the following pieces of rudishva technology (see new technological items for all): 1) a greater rudishva power supply; 2) a laser pistol with 7-26 charges remaining; 3) a laser rifle with 5-16 charges remaining; 4) a sonic fence; 5) two communication bracelets; 6) four lesser power supplies, each with 1-20 charges in it; 7) six rudishva identity plaques (2 rust, and one each of copper, bronze, pale green, and platinum).

SL2-5: Heqeti Staging Ground

After digging the long tunnel from Level 9 (SL2-6), the heqeti prepared this cave as a staging ground for their attack on the rudishva security outpost at SL2-4. Although long since abandoned, the cave carries two mementos of the heqeti attack. The first is a 5'-tall statue of Laydassa, the heqeti builder who conceived this daring attack. The statue sits on a 2'-tall pedestal to the west and is roughly carved of the local granite. Laydassa is depicted as a thick-legged heqeti holding a staff in one hand and pointing towards SL2-4 with the other. The statue might be sold as a curio for up to 750 gp. The second memento is more dangerous: a heqeti spore bomb (see Arden Vul items) filled with green slime that sits innocently in the center of the cave. As with all such devices, direct handling by warm-blooded creatures has a 20% chance per round (cumulative) of activating the bomb, while even proximity to warm-blooded creatures provokes a slower chance for explosion (10% cumulative chance per turn).

Inhabitants:

1. 1 green slime: SZ S; AL N; AC 9; MV 0'; HD 2; HP 12; #AT 0; Dmg special. Special attacks: convert to slime; corrosive to wood and metal. Special defenses: immune to physical attacks and all magic save cure disease.

SL2-6: Long Tunnel to Level 9 (9-131)

This long tunnel extends north several hundred feet before curving back and, after a lengthy series of descending loops and steep mini-cliffs, ending up at 9-131.

SUB-LEVEL 3: THE LESSER BABOON CAVES

This sub-level extends from the Howling Caves (Level 2, especially 2-56F) south to the external cliff face (EX-12, aka SL3-30). It features few iconic or unusual encounters, save the precipice at SL3-25 and the (hidden) upper reaches of the Great Hall (SL3-2 through SL3-11). The tunnels leading north from SL3-30 to 2-56 are narrow, steep, and sometimes frequented by troops of albino baboons. They are not at all easy to traverse, being filled with rough protuberances, small stalactites and stalagmites. Unless otherwise indicated, the caverns are dark.

GENERAL CONSTRUCTION NOTES

Archontean areas: areas SL3-2 to SL3-11

IMPORTANT NPCs

Tikun Thane, Archontean magic user (SL3-2)

ACCESS AND EGRESS

To surface: cave at SL3-30, leading to the cliff face at EX-12

To Level 2: cave at SL3-1, leading to 2-56F

To Level 3: upper reaches of the Great Hall at SL3-3, extending downward to 3-123

To Level 3: stairs at SL3-9, leading down to 3-135

To Level 6: teleporter at SL3-17, leading to 6-48

To the Tower of the Ape, in the city of Newmarket (see World of Archontos appendix): teleport rack at SL3-2

Teleport destinations on Sub-Level 3:

SL3-17: from teleporter at 6-48

RANDOM ENCOUNTERS

1. Northern Tunnels (i.e., SL3-1, and SL3-12 to SL3-25)

Checks should be made every three turns, with a 1 in 8 chance for an encounter:

D10	Encounter
1-2	Unusual cave feature or sound: a bat swarm flies by, a tight spot in the tunnel, a gust of wind.
3-6	4 large albino baboons (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; MV 120'; AC 6; HD 3; HP 20, 19, 18, 18; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-6. Special attacks: pack attack
7-8	4 huge spiders: SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 180'; HD 2+2; HP 15, 15, 13, 11; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: surprise 1-5; poison (+1 to saves); can leap up to 30'
9	Party of NPC adventurers (select from NPC appendix)

10	1-3 carcass creepers: SZ L; AL N; AC 3 (head) or 7 (body); MV 120'; HD 3+1; HP 20, 19, 17; #AT 8; Dmg nil. Special attacks: paralysis
----	---

2. Worked Areas (SL3-2 through SL3-11)

Checks should be made every three turns, with a 1 in 6 chance for an encounter.

D10	Encounter
1-4	Loud noise from Lower Great Hall (GM's choice: beastmen fighting? Skirmish with goblins?)
5-6	A beastman patrol consisting of 6 troopers and a sergeant: 1. 6 beastman troopers (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 8, 7, 7, 6, 6, 5; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spears; short swords; short bows 2. 1 beastman sergeant (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 2+2; HP 15; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 or 2-5. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spear; war hammer
7	A Priscian exploring party, consisting of a war mage and 2 conversi (see new monsters): 1. Justinian, a Priscian war mage (see new monsters) and member of Quintus, as a 6 th -level magic user: SZ M; AL LN; AC 3; MV 120'; HD 6; HP 21; #AT 1; Dmg 3-9 ( Priscian gladius +2 ). Abilities: STR 12, INT 17, WIS 13, DEX 16, CON 11, CHA 14. Possessions: Priscian chain mail (see new magic items); a Priscian gladius +2 (see new magic items); 345 sp; a key to 9-58; a stone of alarm ; a vial of Keogh's restorative ointment ; a pearl of power (level 3); and his spell book. Spells memorized: charm person, detect magic, magic missile, shield, levitate, pummeling fists of Arak-Zhorr (see new spells); dispel magic, fireball . Spell book: charm person, comprehend languages, detect magic, floating disk, friends, hold portal, identify, magic missile, read magic, shield, spider climb, unseen servant, continual light, detect invisibility, knock, levitate, locate object, pummeling fists of Arak-Zhorr (see new spells), scare, wizard lock; dispel magic, fireball, gust of wind, slow, suggestion, tiny hut, tongues 2. 2 Priscian conversi (see new monsters), as 3 rd -level fighters: SZ M; AL LN; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 3; HP 27, 25; #AT 1; Dmg 2-9 (long sword), or 1-4 (light crossbow). Possessions: Priscian chain mail (see new magic items), long swords, light crossbows. The conversi typically have STR 16

8-9	8 Set cultists (see new monsters): SZ M; AL LE; AC 9; MV 90'; HD 1; HP 7, 6, 6, 5, 5, 4, 4, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger) or 2-7 (flail) or 1-6 (staff). Special attacks: fanaticism. Possessions: padded armor; daggers; flails or staves.
10	Kel Bormol, but only if he has been released: for stats see SL3-2A. Reroll if Kel Bormol has not been released.

3. Southern Tunnels (SL3-26 to SL3-30)

Checks should be made every three turns, with only a 1 in 10 chance for an encounter.

D10	Encounter
1-2	Minor Cave-in: 1-4 PCs must save vs petrification or take 1-4 damage from falling rocks. It takes 1-3 turns to clear the debris to allow further movement.
3-7	4 large albino baboons (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; MV 120'; AC 6; HD 3; HP 20, 19, 18, 18; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-6. Special attacks: pack attack
8	9-12 giant rats: SZ S; AL N(E); AC 7; MV 120'; HD 1-4 HP; HP 4(x3), 3(x3), 2(x3), 1(x3); #At 1; Dmg 1-3. Special attacks: 5% chance of disease
9	1 lost mountain lion: SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 150'; HD 3+1; HP 22; #AT 3; Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-6. Special attacks: gains 2 attacks from rear claws (1-4/1-4) if both front claws hit in same round. Special defenses: surprised 1 in 6
10	Party of NPC adventurers (select from NPC appendix). There is a 75% chance the party is moving inward, and a 25% chance it is moving towards the exit at SL3-18.

LEVEL KEY

SL3-1: Transit Cave

This 35'-tall cave is the transit point between the main colony of baboons in 2-56 and those inhabiting the lesser caves of Sub-Level 3. It also contains a secret door leading to the upper levels of the Great Hall (i.e., to SL3-3), and a little-known passageway to SL3-12.

The passage to SL3-12 emerges 30' above the floor of SL3-1; it is invisible to casual scrutiny.

Secret Door (west): The secret door is easy to locate (1 in 4), but is difficult to unlock (-5% to open locks). It is also guarded by a fresh poison needle mechanism (3-24 HP damage, or half if save is made).

Inhabitants:

- 3-6 large albino baboons (see new monsters) (25%): SZ M; AL N; MV 120'; AC 6; HD 3; HP 20, 19, 18, 18, 17, 15; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-6. Special attacks: pack attack.
- 25% chance of a spider from SL3-12

SL3-1A: Secret Passageway

This passageway is almost completely unknown to adventurers, and indeed was only infrequently used during the years when the cult of Thoth was at its peak. Although plenty of dust and debris line the walls of this passage, recent footprints (those of Tikun Thane - see SL3-2) and marks of activity suggest a path down its center. A set of thick iron restraints for hands and feet lie near the secret door to SL3-1, along with a huge iron collar attached to a thick chain/leash. Coarse white hairs (albino baboon fur) coat the restraints and collar.

SL3-2: Residence of the Overseer of Thoth

This chamber was home to the archmage Kel Bormol, Overseer of Truth in the precincts of Thoth. The door to the chamber is stout wood with iron bands; it looks remarkably fresh, and indeed the hinges have been freshly oiled. The door has been wizard locked by a 16th-level magic user. If breached, the entrance will reveal a room in remarkably good repair: a continual light spell shines from the center of the 25' ceiling, and the walls are painted in evocative Thothian-style imagery of men receiving wisdom from ibis-headed beings (in the form of scrolls floating from the mouth of the ibis); those men are seen dominating others, releasing powerful sorceries, and enjoying great riches. The color scheme is bright, with blues, golds (a total of 150 gp worth of gilt may be pried from the walls), greens, and whites. Friezes of arcane symbols and hieroglyphs run above and below the main pictorial scheme: the frieze above the door reads, in the secret tongue of the priests of Thoth, "Kel Bormol, archmage and Overseer of Truth."

Although close to 1,350 years old, Kel Bormol still lives, albeit as a captive in a strange prison (see SL3-2A). If released he will pose a potent and deadly threat.

At present the chamber is occasionally occupied by Tikun Thane, a wizard from Newmarket who found Kel Bormol's chamber and began using it as both a sanctum and a staging point for the capture and training of albino baboons. There is a 25% chance that Tikun Thane will be present; if so, he will be accompanied by 3 disciplined (see new monsters) and 4 trained large albino baboons (see new monsters).

Furnishings: Tikun Thane has attached some iron rods to the walls and floor on the west side of the chamber and has hung simple black drapes from them. The drapes enclose his simple bed and chest of mundane clothes. Also inside the chest are 756 gp and an emergency stash of 6 black opals worth 3,000gp total.

The center of the room is occupied by a fire pit which burns continuously and gives off warmth without smoke or apparent need for fuel. A leather settee and two leather chairs are arranged around the firepit.

To the west of the door on the north wall is a basin with a bronze ibis in the center. Water burbles slowly from the ibis head and back into the basin, which will not overflow. Ripping out the basin will destroy the perpetual fountain effect, although the ibis will fetch 50 gp.

Two sets of iron manacles on chains are set into the east wall. The restraints allow some movement, but not enough to reach the worktable (see below). Tikun Thane uses these restraints when he captures albino baboons. The ferocity and strength of these captives has significantly weakened the wall at this point (a dwarf will detect this fact 55% of the time when examining the wall). It could, with some work, be made to collapse, providing a permanent entrance into SL3-14.

An elaborate chess table is set against the north wall, to the east of the door. It is the prison of Kel Bormol, and is the subject of its own key entry (SL3-2A).

Work Table: This long wooden worktable occupies most of the south wall. It is littered with bits of magical apparatus (including a full alchemical set-up) both on its surface and its one shelf. Among the wizardly gear may be found seven potions (philter of persuasiveness, plus potions of climbing, diminution, growth, invulnerability, speed, and sweet water); six packets of dried red veil mushrooms (see new flora); two parchment scrolls detailing experiments with charm, domination and mind control (worth 250 gp to a high-level wizard); a notebook with three unique spells (the Thane's betrayal, the Thane's collar, and the Thane's vengeful veil – see new spells for all three); a full set of glass activation squares (see Thothian teleportation rings in new magic items) that Tikun Thane hasn't figured out yet; and 3-4 bits of broken magical items which are worth 25 gp each but might be made into a more powerful item by the right person (a pommel, a broken ring, a chipped ruby, a partly melted amulet, etc.). A quire of parchment with the title Kel Bormol's Chess Diary, vol. 3 (see Arden Vul books) also rests on the table.

Teleportation Portal: A simple, 5'-tall, wooden frame, decorated with faded paintings of white ibises, stands on two legs in the southwest corner. The frame contains a shimmering black field, which serves as a teleportation field. It is currently attuned to its mate in Tikun Thane's town home, the Tower of the Ape in Newmarket (see World of Archontos appendix).

Baboon-headed Statue: A 10'-tall, stone, baboon-headed figure stands in classic Egyptian pose against the northeastern wall. The statue is Rixit, Kel Bormol's stone golem, who has been waiting for a millennium to fulfill his master's instructions. Since the last instructions were "Wait here", that is what Rixit has been doing. In fact, it is unlikely that any PC will recognize Rixit as other than a statue unless Kel Bormol is released. If Kel Bormol is freed, he will certainly activate Rixit, and may even order him to attack (see chances at area SL3-2A). Rixit will not pursue enemies unless explicitly commanded to do so by Kel Bormol.

Secret Door (west): The door is normal to find, and is activated by pressing the eye of an ibis on the western wall.

Inhabitants:

1. Tikun Thane, 16th-level male Thorcin magic user (25%): SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 16; HP 39; #AT 1; Dmg 4-7 (dagger +3); MR 5%. Abilities: STR 12, INT 18, WIS 16, DEX 16, CON 9, CHA 10. Possessions: dagger +3; eye of seeing, with 17 charges (see new magic items); 2 cones of incense of relaxation (see new magic items); Melchior's beads of escape (see new magic items); ring of wizardry (3rd-level spells); a black robe of the archmagi; rudishva useful palm (cleansing wind), with 8 charges (see new magic items); torc of domination (see new magic items); wand of shielding, with 59 charges (see new magic items); wand of fire, with 49 charges. Spells memorized: charm person, comprehend languages, hold portal, magic missile, shocking grasp; ESP, forget, knock, pyrotechnics, wizard lock; blink, clairvoyance, dispel magic, fireball (x2), fly, hold person, lightning bolt, protection from normal missiles, suggestion; charm monster, confusion, extension I, fear, polymorph other; cloudkill, cone of cold, feeblemind, hold monster, teleport; disintegrate, extension III, globe of invulnerability; grasping hand, power word, stun; maze.

2. 3 disciplined (see new monsters) (25%): SZ M; AL N; AC 7; MV 120'; HD 4; HP 30, 27, 24; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8 (scimitar); MR 10%. Special defenses: immune to mind-affecting spells.

3. 4 trained large albino baboons (see new monsters) (25%): SZ M; AL N; MV 120'; AC 6; HD 3; HP 20, 19, 18, 18; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-6. Special attacks: pack attack.

4. Rixit, stone golem: SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 14; HP 60; #AT 1; Dmg 3-24. Special attacks: slow once every other round. Special defenses: +2 or better weapons to hit; immune to most magic.

Treasure:

See text. Tikun Thane keeps his spell books safely in his tower.

SL3-2A: Prison of Kel Bormol, Archmage

The ancient Archontean archmage, Kel Bormol, has been imprisoned within his own chess set for a millennium. The chess table is located within his former residence (SL3-2), just to the east of the entranceway.

Chess Table: The table is a simple, 5'-tall and 5'-square affair made of stone. A linen cloth is draped over a pyramidal object some 15" tall that rests at the center of the table. Once removed, the cloth reveals a beautiful chessboard made of ebony with ivory and silver inlay (100 gp). The board is covered by pyramidal glass dome. Most of the chess pieces seem to have disintegrated into piles of white or black dust, although the black king, two black pawns, a black bishop, and a black knight still remain. These pieces are of porphyry with lapis insets, and, while recognizable to an Archontean PC, they feature archaic attire. In addition to these pieces, an unusual brightly colored 'piece' of indeterminate nature may be seen moving swiftly around on the board. The piece has copper-brown skin, wears a tall conical hat and a bright yellow robe covered with blue eyes, and carries a crooked wooden staff. It appears to gesture excitedly at anyone peering at the board.

The 'piece' is, of course, Kel Bormol, trapped in his own chess set by a rival and kept alive in a stasis field under the glass lid. During the long centuries of his imprisonment, Kel Bormol won the game, destroyed all the white pieces, and has been waiting to be released. He is completely ignorant of the fact that he has been imprisoned for more than a millennium.

If the glass dome is lifted from the board, a hiss of escaping gas will be heard. Kel Bormol will be released, and will spring forth at his full height and in a towering rage.

Kel Bormol, the Archmage: Kel Bormol is 5' 6" tall, slender, with a gaunt copper cheeks, closely cropped black hair, two warts by his nose, and long spidery fingers. Upon his release he will bark in the secret tongue of the priests of Thoth: "Are you minions of Hithra Paleologos? Answer!" If no one can understand him, he will point a finger to his throat, murmur and spell, and begin speaking in Mithric. He states baldly: "I will ask four questions. You will answer. At the end we shall see if I let you live." These are his questions:

1. Are you minions of Hithra Paleologos? [GM Note: for Hithra, see 3-36)]
2. By what right do you enter the precincts of the Overseer of Truth?

3. Your attire is unbecoming and ridiculous. Are you tomb robbers?
 4. Who now rules in Agoreon? [GM Note: Agoreon, the 'second capital' of the empire was sacked in 1775 AEP, that is during Kel Bormol's lifetime, but he assumes it was rebuilt. See World of Archontos appendix.]

He does not comment on answers, but interrupts with the next question if the answer drags on for very long. Kel Bormol is convinced the visitors are low-class tomb robbers from a foreign/unknown land. He responds better to truth than to lies or bluffs. He believes he is due respect and submission, and treats any sign of arrogance, implied entitlement (for freeing him), or physical threat badly. How Kel Bormol responds to the party depends on the result of a reaction roll and on the GM's preference, for he is likely to be able to destroy all but the highest level parties.

After this 'dialogue', the GM should roll on the following reaction table, making use of whichever modifiers are appropriate:

d20	Result
below 0	Alliance
1-4	Cautious friendship
5-8	Neutral
9-12	Hostile
13-20	Mortal enemy

Modifiers to Reaction Roll

Party bears weapons openly	+3
Party seems disrespectful or entitled	+5
Party is humble in speech and demeanor	-2 to -5
(Q1) Party answers 'yes'	+10
(Q1) Party answers 'no'	-3
(Q1) Party dissembles or answers 'I don't know'	+2
(Q2) Party attempts to bluff	+5
(Q2) Party admits it has no right to be there	+1
(Q2) Party thinks up a clever, but humble, answer	-1 to -3
(Q3) Party defends its attire	+3
(Q3) Party admits to being ridiculous	-3
(Q3) Party admits to being tomb robbers	-3
(Q3) Party claims to be explorers/adventurers	+1
(Q3) Party lies and claims some other role	+4
Q4) Party makes up a name	+5
(Q4) Party confesses ignorance	+1
(Q4) Party recognizes Agoreon is in ruins, that Kel Bormol is ancient, and tells him (gently) that they are from the future	-3
Party member speaks Mithric	-2
Party member is visibly Archontean	-3
Party has found tomb of Hithra (3-36) and tells Kel Bormol that Hithra is dead	-5

Results of Reaction Table:

Alliance: Kel Bormol is convinced the visitors are humble and deserving of his patronage. He looks on them as small children in need of a firm but loving paternal hand. He will in no way aid them directly in their endeavors, but might provide them with a token – a lover's token (see new magic items) - with which they can contact him in dire emergencies.

Cautious Friendship: Kel Bormol decides the party intended no evil, and are either too weak or too stupid to do him harm. He is grateful for his release and for the party's humility. He encourages them to come to the Great Hall (SL3-3 and 3-123) when they need to ask him for advice. He will soon clear the Upper Hall of enemies, but will not initially disturb the beastmen (Level 3). Should the party in the future come to the Lower Hall (3-123) and, looking upwards toward the south, ask Kel Bormol for a favor (i.e., information), he will likely (50%) answer them favorably in a booming, echoing voice (the party will have to deal with any beastmen, of course).

Neutrality: Kel Bormol decides the party is indeed a pack of lying, thieving tomb robbers, but that they intend him no harm and are unlikely to pose him any threat. He orders them to disperse. Should they reenter the precincts of Thoth, he claims that the Overseer of Truth will know instantly and will take immediate action to eliminate them.

Hostility: Kel Bormol doesn't like the PCs' demeanor and answers, and suspects that they are either in league with his (long-dead) enemies or are potential rivals to his power. He barks a command to his stone golem, Rixit (see SL3-2), which lumbers to life and moves to engage the party. Kel Bormol then teleports away. He should remain a recurring, if occasional villain.

Mortal Enmity: Kel Bormol decides that the lies and arrogance of the party suggest that its members are somehow connected to Hithra Paleologos and thus require instant punishment. Uttering an activation command to his stone golem, Rixit (see SL3-2), he attacks the party with the full power of his wizardry. Should the party survive somehow, Kel Bormol becomes a central and active antagonist to all their endeavors.

Kel Bormol has other hidden lairs within and without the Halls (see 8-133, SL6-79, and AV-47). Regardless of his ultimate actions towards the PCs, he will not sit idly in this chamber but will move swiftly to assess his resources. He will certainly visit the Hall of Eleven Pillars (SL4-14) to recover the Codex Sequentis (see Arden Vul books) that is hidden there. Once he has learned that he has outlived the collapse of Arden Vul by 1,200 years and that all his allies and enemies are long dead, he will begin to plot a strategy designed to restore the city to its former glory. This will involve locating and contacting imperial officials in Narsileon and Archontos, seizing control of the upper levels of the Halls, subjugating the goblins to his power, and so forth. If driven from this location (his preferred home), he visits 8-133 first, then AV-47 and SL6-79; he will bide his time and build his power, intending to return to the Halls and re-establish his rightful lordship here.

GM Note: This encounter has the potential to lead to a TPK for many parties. Experienced PCs should of course be wary of something like the chessboard. If the PCs are novices, though, the GM may wish to give them a further hint, such as a neatly printed note attached to the linen cover which reads something like “Absolutely no guest is to touch this case, lest we all die. TT”

Inhabitants:

1. Kel Bormol, 18th-level male Archontean magic user: SZ M; AL NE; AC 1; MV 120'; HD 18; HP 42; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (staff of the magi). Abilities: STR 10, INT 20, WIS 18, DEX 15, CON 9, CHA 14. Possessions: keys to SL6-79 and AV-47; ring of wizardry (5th-level spells); ring of levitation (see new magic items); staff of the magi (17 charges); bracers of defense (AC 2); helm of teleportation (in the form of a circlet); brooch of shielding (97 HP left); medallion of ESP; robe of eyes; and an ankh of healing (see new magic items). Spells memorized: comprehend languages, enlarge, floating disk, identify, magic missile, continual light, detect evil, knock, mirror image, ray of enfeeblement; blink, clairaudience, dispel magic, fly, haste; confusion, extension I, fear, polymorph other, wall of fire; cone of cold, conjure elemental, extension II, faithful hound, feeblemind, hold monster, interposing hand, passwall, teleport, wall of force; death spell, geas, globe of invulnerability; limited wish, monster summoning V, power word stun; irresistible dance, spell immunity; crushing hand.

SL3-3: Upper Great Hall [with access to 3-123]

This enormous two-level hall rises 100' from floor to ceiling. The lower level (3-123) is a no-man's land that abuts the territory of the beastmen. The upper level (SL3-3) is not claimed by any humanoid group, although it is home to some dangerous ibis-form gargoyles. The upper hall is dark, with undecorated walls and ceiling.

SL3-3A: Portico

The east side of the Great Hall features a square room with four pillars holding up its 15' ceiling. The pillars are plain, and the walls of the room are undecorated. The portico is dark and dusty, with clinging cobwebs.

SL3-3B: Stone Bridge

This 5'-wide bridge extends across the Great Hall at a level of 75' above the floor. It possesses a low, 2'-tall wall, on which are found six 4'-tall statues of ibises. The ibises are actually gargoyles that fly to attack all those crossing the bridge. Combat on the bridge is potentially dangerous, as the ibises will try to crowd enemies over the railing and cause them to fall 75' to the floor (taking 7-42 damage). Note: if Kel Bormol has been free for more than a day (see SL3-2A), then these gargoyles will have been turned into inert stone statues and will not animate.

Inhabitants:

1. 6 gargoyles: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 90', 150' flying (Class C); HD 4+4; HP 31, 30, 28, 27, 26, 25; #AT 4; Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-6/1-4. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit.

SL3-3C: Arcade

A 10'-wide arcade extends around the upper level of the Great Hall, some 25' below the ceiling of the hall. A low, 3' wall provides some protection from falling over the edge. At four locations on the east, west, and south walls may be found obvious spy holes, some 2" in diameter. Those who peer through them will see dark chambers (SL3-6 and SL3-11). The spy holes are 5' above the floor.

SL3-3D: Statue of Thoth the Overseer of Truth

An open balcony extends into the upper galleries of the Great Hall. Here looms a 15'-tall statue of Thoth, peering vulture-like down into the Great Hall from the edge of the balcony. The statue is stone, with a strange, articulated metal head, and was originally painted in vibrant colors, shreds of which remain. The statue takes the form of a huge ibis with open wings and open mouth. Its head swivels slowly, but securely, from side to side and up and down.

From the south side, the statue is partly hollow, allowing one to mount a low platform and peer through the eyes in the ibis head. Anyone so doing will have perfect vision of anything in the upper or lower reaches of the Great Hall (to a distance of 150'). This includes all invisible or hidden persons (acts as true seeing). The head may be swiveled such that most of the hall (save the area directly under the balcony) is visible. If Kel Bormol has been freed from prison and is still alive (see SL3-2A), there is a 10% chance that the head of the ibis is swiveling in all directions as the party approaches, apparently of its own; this is in fact Kel Bormol manipulating the statue from SL3-11. The eyes of the statue are cylindrical diamonds with magical lenses of blue crystal. The diamonds and lenses could be removed, mounted in frames, and employed as goggles of seeing; the ensuing goggles would be ungainly and ugly, and would only work for ranges of 20', but might be exceptionally useful. If dismantled and sold, the diamonds are worth 5,000 gp each and the lenses 450 gp each. Kel Bormol will be most unhappy if the seeing apparatus is destroyed.

SL3-3E: Pillars and Gargoyles

The western side of the Great Hall features an unlit, trapezoidal room with multiple undecorated pillars supporting a 15'-tall roof. Along each angled wall are 4 half columns on which rest 4' statues of ibises. Five torn and shredded corpses of beastmen lie moldering on the floor; these have been dead a long time. These statues (8 all told) are more ibis gargoyles, which animate and attack once intruders are amidst the pillars. [If Kel Bormol has been freed, these gargoyles will still be active, as he is content to use them for security]. The door to SL3-4 is large and made of stone. It should be considered stuck, and only movable with a successful open doors check.

Inhabitants:

1. 8 ibis gargoyles: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 90'; 150' flying (Class C); HD 4+4; HP 32, 30, 29, 28, 27, 25, 24, 23; #AT 4; Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-6/1-4. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit.

Treasure:

5 sets of beastman ring mail, 5 spears, 5 short swords, and 3-18 sp per deceased beastman.

SL3-4: Living Mosaics

This room contains three 8'x15' sections of living mosaic (see new magic items). The chamber is dark, and the walls unadorned; light will be needed to examine the mosaics. If lights are employed, any ibis gargoyles still surviving at SL3-3E will move to attack.

Living Mosaic #1 (north): This mosaic depicts the lower great hall (3-123). It shows a beastman patrol moving through the Hall.

Living Mosaic #2 (center): Depicts a pavement with columns, and large mushroom shapes to the sides. It is the parvis of the great cavern (3-175). There is a 33% chance that a robed figure (Troadero, 3-176) is moving across the mosaic.

Living Mosaic #3 (south): This mosaic depicts the Thothian Hall of Judgment (2-35) as a room with two triangular platforms and many dots (pillars). There is a 75% chance that some simian creatures and a human (Gerrilad the Grey, 2-69) are moving back and forth between the triangular platforms and the pits.

SL3-5: Looted Chamber

This former living quarters for the personal guard of the Overseer of Truth was looted and pillaged long ago. Two wooden benches are all that remain. Piles of wood, masonry, and organic matter have been pushed against the south and western walls.

Secret Door (west): The secret door is normal to find. It is keyed to aural commands: speaking the name Thoth causes it to swing open. Otherwise it can be beaten down.

Treasure:

Two turns of searching turns up a scorched ivory scroll case. The scroll within has been burned beyond recognition, but the real treasure is the case itself, which is a scroll case of potency (see new magic items).

SL3-5A: Spiral Stair up to the Tower of Scrutiny (TS-19)

The spiral stair is granite and covered with a thin layer of dust. It has not been used in 1,200 years. It leads up roughly 250' to the basement of the Tower of Scrutiny (TS-19).

SL3-6: Spy Chamber

This room is empty, dark and undecorated. The only furnishings are a pair of stone steps on the east wall that provide access to two strange apparatuses and the spy holes leading into SL3-3. The spy holes are at a point 5' above the floor.

The strange apparatuses hang from pegs on the wall and resemble WWI aviator helmets: cracked leather cowls with large, 2"-diameter circular yellow lenses embedded in the eye holes. One of the two apparatuses has ceased to function (both its lenses are broken), but the other still works: if someone dons the helmet and goggles, they will instantly see through the eyes of the statue at SL3-3D and will be able, with their thoughts, to swivel the head of the statue to examine any portion of SL3-3 or 3-123. The intact set of goggles will work within 100 yards of the statue; beyond this distance, it will function as a set of goggles of seeing (see new magic items).

SL3-7: Former Barracks

The door to this chamber has been barred from the corridor side. Within is a jumble of broken furniture, torn-up wall hangings, and scattered movables. Six desiccated corpses lie amid the rubble; they wear copper armor and helmets, all with ibis symbols on them. The guardsmen entombed here have all become shadows.

Inhabitants:

1. 6 shadows: SZ M; AL CE; AC 7; MV 120; HD 3+3; HP 24, 22, 20, 19, 18, 17; #AT 1; Dmg 2-5. Special attacks: STR drain. Special defenses: 90% undetectable; +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and cold.

Treasure:

6 sets of archaic banded mail; 6 zircon gems (50 gp each); an ivory token stamped with an ibis and the words (in Mithric) "Overseer of Truth" (50 gp, referring to Kel Bormol in area SL3-2A).

SL3-8: Looted Room

A cord dangles from the exact center of the ceiling of this storage chamber. Attached to it is a hard-soled leather boot. A large piece of parchment is attached to the boot. On it, in Mithric text large enough to be visible from the door, is printed the word, "Danger!"

Although PCs may suspect a trap, the boot is harmless. If the reverse side of the parchment (which is naturally invisible from the doorway) is inspected, a second comment may be found: "Georgios, your feet stink. Take a bath." The shoe was left as a joke many centuries ago. As Georgios and his crew fully looted the room in antiquity, it contains nothing save some broken bits of equipment.

SL3-9: Circular Stair down to Level 3 (3-135)

A broad circular staircase leads down 100' to area 3-135. On the east wall is the form of a door, but it is one-way and only opens from the other side (SL3-10).

SL3-10: Supply Room

Most of those supplies deposited here rotted long ago into heaps of cloth, wood, and noxious-looking vegetal matter. The trash is a good 6"-12" deep throughout the chamber. Anyone entering and searching may disturb a colony of yellow mold. The door in the west wall is a one-way door.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 patch of yellow mold: SZ M; AL N; AC 9; MV 0'; HD n.a.; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8. Special attacks: poison spores. Special defenses: damaged only by fire.

Treasure:

Among the trash is a gold Sortian eye (see new magic items).

SL3-11: Spy Chamber

As Overseer of Truth, it was Kel Bormol's (SL3-2A) duty and delight to serve as inspector of the goings-on of the priesthood of Thoth and as a sort of arcane oracle that answered their questions. From this chamber Kel Bormol could both peer through the spy holes into SL3-3 as well as manipulate the statue at SL3-3D. Kel Bormol's control apparatus is considerably more sophisticated than the simple seeing goggles found at SL3-6. In the southeast corner is a stone seat with broad armrests. From the left armrest projects a jointed iron rod with a dully-glowing sapphire attached to its end.

If one sits in the chair, the rod may be manipulated such that the sapphire rests just in front of the sitter's mouth (like a microphone); if this is done, two potential effects are possible. First, any sound made in 3-123, no matter how quietly uttered, will be audible to the sitter. Second, any word the sitter utters will boom forth at high volume from the mouth of the ibis statue at SL3-3D. A similar jointed iron rod extends from the right armrest; at the end of this rod is a pair of spectacles with very thick (1") yellow crystalline disks as eyes. If a sitter manipulates this rod such that the lenses are in front of his/her eyes, he/she will be able to see through the eyes of the ibis statue at SL3-3D and will be able to swivel the statue's head at his/her will. The apparatus allowed the Overseer of Truth to scrutinize the behavior of the priests below, eavesdrop on conversations, and answer questions posed to Thoth. Tikun Thane is aware of the chamber, but makes no use of it.

The chamber also contains two stone chests, on the east and south walls respectively. The eastern chest is trapped with a poison needle whose venom has weakened over time; failing a save versus poison inflicts 3-18 HP damage but won't kill the lucky investigator. The chest contains two extra sets of yellow lenses for the apparatus, as well as an extra blue sapphire (unenchanting). The lenses are worth up to 1,000 gp per set to a powerful magic user, but only 150 gp per set to a curiosity seeker; they only fit the apparatus (and not the goggles in SL3-6). The unenchanted sapphire is worth 1,000 gp, while the enchanted one (in the apparatus) is worth 2,000 gp. The south chest is neither trapped nor locked; it is also empty.

SL3-12: Spider Cave

As a result of the cave-in at SL3-13, the baboons avoid this cave, and it has been taken over by several huge spiders. The floor of the cave is littered with baboon bones.

Inhabitants:

1. 4 huge spiders: SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 180'; HD 2+2; HP 15, 15, 13, 11; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: surprise 1-5; poison (+1 to saves); can leap up to 30'.

Treasure:

A dried husk of a dwarven adventurer lies on the floor of the cave, wearing chain mail, and carrying a small metal shield +4 and a light war hammer. The corpse still wears a belt pouch with 25 pp, a silver Sortian eye (see new magic items), a green glass activation square (see Thothian teleportation rings in new magic items), and a small bag of marbles.

SL3-13: Cave-In

The tunnel walls have collapsed here, leaving a narrow 3'-tall tunnel through which one might (attempt to) crawl. The damaged area extends for some 30 feet. For each 10' of distance crawled, a PC should save vs wands to avoid a further cave-in. If a cave-in occurs, consult the following chart:

d20	Result
1-2	Warning: dust and a few stones clatter around the PC
3-4	A big chunk falls on the PC's head, for 1-4 HP damage; the way is still (relatively) clear
5-6	Wall collapses, partly burying the PC and inflicting 2-8 HP damage
7-8	Entire section collapses for good; PC(s) is/ are buried, take(s) 3-12 HP damage, and suffocate(s) in 5-8 rounds.

Treasure:

The legs of a buried adventurer extend out of the rubble at a point halfway through the cave-in. Still on the body is a purse with 25 gp, a fine pair of burgundy boots (10 gp), and a wand of secret door and trap location with 8 charges.

SL3-14: Lesser Baboon Cave

This large cavern serves as spill-over space for the baboons when the Howling Caves (2-56) grow too crowded. The floor undulates in a series of rocky ridges and depressions, making movement difficult (3/4 movement rates). The caves are lit by phosphorescent lichens which offer a dim glow. Several rock outcroppings of varying height (5', 8', 12' and 15') dot the cavern, on which the baboons frequently sit and groom themselves.

Inhabitants:

1. 6-15 large albino baboons (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; MV 120'; AC 6; HD 3; HP 20, 20, 19(x3), 18(x5), 17, 17, 16, 16, 13; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-6. Special attacks: pack attack.

SL3-15: Baboon Watch Post

A flattened pillar of rock some 10' tall and 12' long looms near the entrance to this cave. On top of it are three watch-baboons (watching, in truth, for Ranko, from SL3-16); they normally have a good chance to gain surprise (3 in 6). They attack any non-baboon intruders with loud hoots and screams, thereby drawing the remainder of the pack from the main cavern (SL3-14).

Inhabitants:

1. 3 large albino baboons (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; MV 120'; AC 6; HD 3; HP 19, 18, 18; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-6. Special attacks: pack attack.

SL3-16: Berserker Baboon

One of the giant intelligent baboons, Ranko, has become addicted to the red veil (see new flora), and has decamped to this cave with his followers. It is they who set up the skull fetish in SL3-20, and who cultivated the mushrooms around it. The chamber has another pile of rocks in its center, on top of which have been piled some baboon heads and skulls (including some fresh ones). Ranko has a wooden chest by the west wall in which he stores the red veil; currently there are 3-30 dried specimens. The chest also contains a bronze ritual dagger stolen from the priests of Set, (10 gp, or 50 gp to a Set cultist), and three 'pretty rocks' (two chunks of coal and a chrysoberyl worth 100 gp). Three dead goats hang from the ceiling, along with a female baboon corpse. Due to their chaotic and cannibalistic ways, Ranko and the followers of the red veil have been largely ostracized by the other baboons.

There is a 75% chance that Ranko will have just ingested a red veil mushroom, and a 25% chance that each of his followers has done the same.

Inhabitants:

1. Ranko, giant intelligent baboons (see new mon-sters): SZ L; AL NE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 9; HP 65; #AT 5; Dmg 1-6/1-6/1-6/1-6/1-10. Special attacks: rend. When on the red veil, Ranko has AC 7, an additional 10 HP, and a bonus of +3 to hit.
2. 6 berserker large albino baboons (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; MV 120'; AC 6; HD 3; HP 20, 19, 18, 18; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-6. Special attacks: pack attack. When on the red veil, they have AC 8 and +10 HP each.

SL3-17: Sortian Face

A portion of the north wall of this cave, opposite the tunnel towards SL3-19, was flattened in antiquity and a Sortian face (see new magic items) carved into it. The baboons do not like the bas-relief, and tend to avoid this cave.

The Sortian face may be activated by placing appropriate Sortian eyes (see new magic items) into the eye sockets of the carving. Only a few combinations of eyes are unique to an individual face; the rest are standard (and are detailed in the new magic items appendix).

Gold-Gold: Teleportation. All within 5' are teleported to area 6-48

Gold-Sapphire: A permanent magic mouth speaks in Mithric from the face: All those with the spark must be trained, regardless of their origin. The empire will be better for it. Once you have found a suitable recruit, visit the sanctum so that training may commence. Recall that proper vision comes only with yellow or blue eyes. I, Priscus the Hekate, have spoken! Oh, and if exigency requires it, you may seek our outpost along the wall of the chasm, near where the falls crash to the floor. Do not alert the Theosophs to your passage!

GM Notes: This cave is also the destination for a Sortian face found at area 6-48. The magic mouth makes clear the egalitarian principles that the ancient Sortians espoused. For the Sortians, see the World of Archontos appendix.

SL3-18: Baboon Cave

A troop of healthy albino baboons inhabits this ordinary, sandy-bottomed cave.

Inhabitants:

1. 6 large albino baboons (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; MV 120'; AC 6; HD 3; HP 20, 19, 18, 18, 16, 12; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-6. Special attacks: pack attack.

SL3-19: Sandy Cave with Pool

The tunnel from SL3-25 levels out here into a sandy-bottomed cave. The eastern side of the cave is lower than the rest, and contains a 5'-deep pool of crystal clear water.

Treasure:

At the bottom of the pool is a simple silver ring, worth 20 gp. It is inscribed "To Guivrel, with love from Lankios." It could be presented to Lankios (see area 1-6) in return for favors.

SL3-20: Crossroads

In the center of the cavern is a large rock, on top of which is a small cairn of stones topped with an enormous bleached-white baboon skull. The skull gleams with a low-intensity red light, which barely illuminates a 10' radius around the rock. Around the rock may be found 4-16 small red mushrooms (about 3' tall and 1' in diameter): this unique species of mushroom is known to scholars as the red veil, since ingesting one will cause violent madness for 1-6 turns (see new flora).

Note: Any noise or light here likely (75% chance) draws the attention of the baboons in SL3-22, who scamper to the attack.

Treasure:

A fist-sized red garnet set beneath the skull glows with a red light (500 gp). The gem detects as magic, but has no special properties.

SL3-21: False Lead

This promising upward-sloping tunnel is wide and clear as it leaves SL3-20, but after a turn to the north it narrows into an impassable crack. At the very end of the lead is the corpse of a beastman.

Treasure:

On the corpse: 12 sp, a beastman-sized suit of ring mail, a spear, a dagger, and a badge (mailed fist) of the lost 3rd Cohort of the Imperial Tagmata (10 gp).

SL3-22: Baboon Cave

A small troop of adolescent male baboons has been exiled to this distant cave. It smells quite badly of baboon urine and feces. These young males fight each other frequently; as a result, their coats are torn and sticky with blood, and they are generally weaker than a full troop.

Inhabitants:

1. 8 weakened albino baboons (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; MV 120'; AC 6; HD 3; HP 15, 15, 14, 14, 13, 13, 10, 9; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-6. Special attacks: pack attack.

SL3-23: Steep Tunnel

This tunnel is very steep. Adventurers must crawl here at ¼ normal movement speed.

SL3-24: Sandy Cave

The steep tunnel from SL3-26 empties into a wide cavern. The cavern is pocked with rock formations that jut out of the sandy floor of the cave. A pod of ravenous sand worms (see new monsters) inhabits this cave, hoping for the occasional baboon to slip off the rocks and fall onto the sand. The mature baboons know how to leap from rock to rock to avoid the sand worms.

Inhabitants:

1. 6 sand worms (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 7/2; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 15, 14, 14, 13, 12, 12; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attack: slurp blood (1-4 HP/rd).

SL3-25: Baboon Cliff

This large cavern is dominated by an imposing, 40'-tall cliff. Two torches gutter at the bottom of the cliff, casting flickering shadows across the cliff face. Although the cliff is almost sheer, it appears to be climbable - easily by thieves or with difficulty by other classes. The climb is not easy, however, since the cliff is guarded by Inkor, the giant intelligent baboon, and a full troop of albino baboons.

Those approaching from SL3-19 will be accorded a moment to state their intentions before the group attacks. Those approaching from the direction of SL3-28 or SL3-27 will be spotted as they move into the torchlight, and will be subject to attacks. Inkor shoots his great bow, while the baboons hurl coconut-sized rocks at those in view or climbing the rock face. Great hooting and barking accompanies all attacks. Inkor shouts commands in a guttural and debased form of Archontean: e.g., "Rocks. Rocks! Rocks!!!", "Kill", "No climb!", etc. Those attempting to climb the cliff while the baboons are active must roll 3d6 under STR to avoid being knocked off the wall if hit by a rock.

Inhabitants:

1. Inkor, giant intelligent baboon (see new monsters): SZ L; AL NE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 8; HP 59; #AT 5; Dmg 1-6/1-6/1-6/1-6/1-10. Special attacks: rend. Possessions: great bow (1-10 damage).
2. 6 large albino baboons (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; MV 120'; AC 6; HD 3; HP 20, 19, 18, 18, 17, 15; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-6. Special attacks: pack attack. They can hurl one rock a round (range 20'; Dmg 1-6 per rock).

Treasure:

6 dead goats, a stone basin filled with water, Inkor's great bow (requires 18 STR), and a matched set of 200 gp amethysts mounted on Inkor's collar.

SL3-26: Steep Tunnel

The tunnel here is very steep and rocky. PCs must clamber (slowly) on all fours to climb it. Movement is reduced to ¼ of normal. There is a 35% chance that some baboons are using the tunnel.

Inhabitants:

1. 2-4 large albino baboons (see new monsters) (35% chance): SZ M; AL N; MV 120'; AC 6; HD 3; HP 20, 19, 18, 18; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-6. Special attacks: pack attack.

SL3-27: Corpse

The remains of two adventurers, a human thief and a human magic user, lie in this upward-sloping tunnel. The thief has been badly mauled and is unrecognizable; her armor is also destroyed. A usable short sword lies nearby, and a scrap of parchment is stuck in her boot. The magic user is better preserved; his pouch contains a set of mapping tools (parchment, ink, quills), some chalk, a large star rose quartz worth 50 gp, and a silver Sortian eye (see new magic items).

The parchment scrap is written in Archontean and reads as follows:

Howling Caves: bring light.

Pyramid: the suckers's entrance.

Obsidian Gates: beneath the precincts of Thoth.

Flooded Vaults: hold the key, but to what?

Ask Gog for direction to the Troll Court and to the Inn of the Lost.

The Sortian faces require careful eye control

[in a 2nd hand: "silver"]

GM Note: The locations referred to in the scrap are as follows: the Howling caves (2-56); the pyramid of Thoth (AV-15, UP, and 3-1); the Obsidian Gates (5-6); the Flooded Vaults (SL7); Gog, the lesser varumani (5-2); the Troll Court (7-75); the Inn of the Lost (6-7); and Sortian faces (various places, including SL3-17, 6-48, etc.).

SL3-28: Pool

A steady drip from the ceiling has slowly filled the eastern portion of this cave with crystal clear water. The tunnel leading to SL3-25 slopes up steeply. There is a 25% chance to encounter several baboons at the pool.

Inhabitants:

1. 2-4 large albino baboons (see new monsters) (25% chance): SZ M; AL N; MV 120'; AC 6; HD 3; HP 20, 19, 18, 18; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-6. Special attacks: pack attack.

SL3-29: Crossroads

The entrance tunnel forks here. The northeastern passage begins immediately to slope steeply upwards (about 40-degree slope), while the eastern tunnel is relatively flat.

A carpet of bones covers the tunnel floor here, the result of baboon feasting. The bones are mostly animal (goat), but there are some humanoid ones as well.

SL3-30: Entrance Cave (see also EX-12)

A fold in the cliff face conceals a 4'-wide and 7'-tall crevice that leads to a set of tunnels which eventually emerge at the Howling Caves (2-56). Careful observers (e.g. rangers) may note two clues that the crevice is bears traffic: 1) animal prints (baboon) and 2) the smell of animal urine. The tunnel leading to SL3-29 is only 5' wide and varies between 5 and 8' in height. PCs will need to move in single file. The entrance to the cliff is about 1,225' above the valley floor and 275' below the level of the plateau.

Inhabitants:

1. 6 large albino baboons (see new monsters) (20% chance): SZ M; AL N; MV 120'; AC 6; HD 3; HP 20, 19, 18, 18, 17, 14; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-6. Special attacks: pack attack.

SUB-LEVEL 4: THE GOBLIN WARRENS

Weskenim the goblin king (SL4-22) holds sway over a loose collection of goblin clans from a throne located in the ancient servitors's halls, where generations of Archontean laborers, miners, sculptors, and builders lived under the close scrutiny of their masters. The main feature of the sub-level is a vast two-story hall, lit by the great goblin cookfire and filled with smoky whirligigs and a wide range of aromas both pleasing and not. A series of rope bridges stretch crazily across portions of the upper hall, while rickety ladders lean against the walls, providing both access to clan-caves and transit between the upper and lower levels of the hall. Because it is so well-populated, few surprises lurk in the goblin warrens, nor are there secret tombs and treasures. Still, many come to trade with the merchants who gather on the floor of the hall (SL4-40), and still others come to King Weskenim's Court (SL4-23) to trade information, barter with the goblins for lost objects, and set in motion any variety of plots and dangerous missions. Of course, a few 'special areas' are scattered throughout the more mundane goblin habitations (c.f. SL4-3, SL4-12, SL4-14, SL4-15).

GENERAL CONSTRUCTION NOTES

Archontean areas: all worked areas are Archontean

ICONIC AREAS

Court of the Goblin King (SL4-23)

IMPORTANT NPCs

Sir Sorrow, a Sun-Scarred Knight (SL4-19)

Weskenim, Grand King of the United Goblins (SL4-22)

ACCESS AND EGRESS

To Surface: stairs at SL4-37, leading up to AV-16

To Level 5: tunnel at SL4-1, leading to 5-51

To Level 6: corridor at SL4-53, leading to 6-66

To Level 6: vertical cavern at SL4-28, leading down to 6-112

To Level 7: stairs at SL4-45, leading down to 7-44A

To Sub-Level 5: tunnel at SL4-31, leading to SL5-24 (not yet connected, see SL4-31)

To various locations: Tothian teleportation ring (see new magic items) at SL4-49

To the city of Archontos: teleportation at SL4-14

To the city of Brass: teleportation at SL4-14

To the city of Duneagle on Oerth: teleportation at SL4-14

To the world of Faerie: planar transport at SL4-48

Teleport destinations on Sub-Level 4:

SL4-53: from teleport pillar at 4-167

RANDOM ENCOUNTERS

Checks should be made every 2 turns, with a 1 in 4 chance for an encounter. If goblins are indicated, roll on the Goblin Goals table to determine what they are doing. The following areas do not generate random encounters: SL4-10, SL4-43 to SL4-48

D8	Encounter
1-6	5-8 goblins: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 7, 6, 5, 4, 4, 3, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Roll on Goal Table
7	Party of NPC adventurers (select from NPC appendix)
8	Other visitor: roll on Table 1 at SL4-40

D20	Goblin Goals
1-4	A warband setting out into the Halls; 25% chance they don't like the looks of the PCs and hassle them
5	Servers carrying platters of food. If it's a large group, they are carrying a feast to King Weskenim (SL4-22); otherwise they could be going anywhere.
6	Plotters: these goblins have gathered to complain about King Weskenim (SL4-22) and his policies
7	Mystic: one of the goblins in the group has had a vision concerning the whereabouts of the lost scepter of the goblins (currently in 8-69). There's a 10% chance the vision is true.
8	Messengers on their way to visit the witch doctors (SL4-12) requesting aid for something
9-10	Petitioners on their way to the goblin court (SL4-23)
11-12	Petitioners on their way to visit Rizzit (SL4-15) and elicit a prophecy
13	Bringing fresh meat to the hydra in SL4-3
14	Bringing a new 'wife' to Weskenim's harem (SL4-20)
15	An embassy on its way to the beastmen (3-138 to 3-162)
16	A group of bravos setting out to the Arena (6-68)
17	A well-armed and secretive group tasked with bringing the quarterly tribute to Varboka, the troll thegn (7-75). They carry a steel coffer with 2,000 sp
18	An embassy on its way to plead with the Set cult (4-2) to eliminate the halflings (3-2 to 3-6)
19	An intrepid band of young goblins setting out for Level 6 to pursue a 'good lead' on the location of the scepter of the goblins (their lead is incorrect; the scepter is at 8-69, see new magic items)
20	A group of foolhardy goblins setting out for the chasm floor (Level 9) to pick rare mushrooms

LEVEL KEY

SL4-1. Tunnel to the Upper Halls

Rough steps carved into the floor of this steeply-sloping tunnel suggest its connection to intelligent life. Indeed, it is the main passage by which the goblins ascend to Level 5 (area 5-51), and thence to Level 3.

Chances of meeting a group of goblins while traversing the tunnel are high (33%). Such a group will have six members, and its goal or motives should be determined by rolling on the 'Goblin Goals' table found on the previous page. Should combat break out, one of the six will scamper towards SL4-2 to warn the rest of the goblin community. If the warning is successful, the reactions of the goblins (including King Weskenim) will be permanently affected for the worse (-25% to reaction rolls).

Inhabitants:

1. 6 goblins: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 5, 4, 4, 3, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.

SL4-2. Crossroads and Guardpost

The floor of this cave is covered in sand. Those standing at the lip of the steep tunnel leading downward to the west (c.f. SL4-2A) will notice a dim glow of light from below (the torches at the western edge of area SL4-3).

A group of goblins commanded by a goblin sergeant lurks on a ledge located 10' above the eastern passage. The goblins wait with a cowbell, hoping to gauge visitors' intentions. If visitors seem peaceful, the sergeant will hail them, swing down from the ledge, and begin negotiations, urging them to check in with Reskim at SL4-4. If the visitors seem hostile, the goblins will a) toss a rock towards area SL4-2A, hoping that the sound of the rock and the light from below will draw the visitors close to the western slope, and then b) pull a rope connected via eye-holes on the ceiling to the trap at SL4-2A (q.v.). If the trap fails to propel unwanted visitors down the western slope into SL4-3, the goblins will furiously ring their cowbell and, while firing arrows at the intruders, await reinforcements from SL4-4 and SL4-11.

Inhabitants:

- 1 goblin sergeant (as an orc): SZ M; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1; HP 7; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8 (morning star) or 1-6 (short bow). Possessions: morning star, short bow.
- 2 goblins: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 5, 4, 4, 3, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (spear or short bow). Possessions: short bow, spear.

SL4-2A: Steep Slope with Trap

To those entering the goblin warrens from the north (SL4-1), this steeply sloping tunnel appears promising, as a slight glow of light is visible in SL4-3 to those standing at the top of the tunnel. In fact the tunnel exists for two reasons: 1) its slope prevents the hydra in SL4-3 from escaping its pen, and 2) it is trapped in a way that allows the goblins lurking in SL4-2 to push hostile visitors down the slope to face the hydra in SL4-3.

In addition to the slope, about a dozen sharply-pointed stakes pointing downward towards SL4-3 are concealed in the tunnel. The stakes serve to impede the efforts of those trying to climb up the slope (movement at ¼ normal).

Trap (push): The purpose of this trap is to knock hostile visitors down the slope towards area SL4-3, where the goblins hope that the lernaean hydra will dispose of them. To this end, a rectangle of woven wicker some 15'x10' in size is attached to the ceiling of area SL4-2 just above the lip of the tunnel here at SL4-2A. The western edge of the wicker frame is attached to the ceiling by a stout metal hinge; the eastern edge is not attached to the ceiling, but is held parallel to the ceiling via a rope that runs through eye-holes set in the ceiling of SL4-2 before ending up at the ledge on its eastern side. The goblin guards on the ledge operate the trap by releasing the rope, allowing the eastern edge of the frame to swing downward. Those standing at the lip of SL4-2A looking towards SL4-3 when the trap is activated must thus save versus paralyzation or be knocked down the slope by the hinged wicker frame. Anyone so affected takes only 1-4 HP falling damage, but must face the hydra in SL4-3.

SL4-3. They Call it "Mr. Heads"

The goblins have raised a lernaean hydra from an egg and keep it in this crumbling hall, where it serves simultaneously as a mascot of sorts, as a symbol of goblin potency, and as a defense mechanism for the warrens. The western door has a view-hole carved into it so that the goblins know when it is safe to bring food and straw to the hydra. The room is 15' tall and features, on the north wall, a huge, faded fresco of a pair of eyes and lashes, gazing down on a mass of goblins, humans, and demi-humans wielding pickaxes, mattocks, hammers, and chisels in a crowded, blurry mass. The floor of the chamber is filled with straw, partly decomposed corpses, and hydra-dung. It is lit by a pair of torches mounted on sconces to either side of the western door, rendering the chamber smoky, dim, and foul.

The goblins are immensely proud of their 'pet' and have given it the affectionate name of 'Mr. Heads'. Any party that slays the hydra earns the permanent enmity of all of the goblin clans, even if the goblins are likely to conceal that enmity initially. Indeed, they may falsely 'thank' the visitors for ridding them of such a dangerous threat, even as they maneuver the PCs into position for an ambush (e.g. at SL4-7). The goblins are looking for a female hydra to provide company for Mr. Heads; they might well task a friendly party with such a mission, promising up to 15,000 gp for an egg that produces a female (e.g., one of those at 9-149).

Inhabitants:

1. Mr. Heads, the seven-headed lernaean hydra: SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 7; HP 56; #AT 7; Dmg 1-8 (x7). Special: regenerates two new heads in 1-4 rounds if fire is not applied to the stump.

Treasure:

Amid the debris on the floor of the chamber are the following: a shield +1, +2 versus fire, a star ruby (1,100 gp) in a piece of hydra dung, a yellow glass activation square (see Thothian teleportation rings in new magic items), and a scattering of 189 sp.

SL4-4. Overlook and Bailiff

Fresh sand covers the floor of this natural cave. The east end of the cave contains the remnants of a worked corridor and of the bridge that once extended across the main hall (SL4-5 and SL4-40). The corridor fragment is floored in cracked white marble, and its walls are blackened with soot.

Reskim the Bailiff resides here, tasked by King Weskenim (SL4-22) with collecting appropriate ‘inducements’ from visitors to the Goblin Warrens. Reskim keeps a pile of old furs and skins in the corridor fragment, and is accompanied by 3 chattering goblin guards and his pet bobcat. The bailiff is friendly enough, being eager to hear news of exotic locales and brave exploits. Only if visitors prove obdurate about paying the required inducements does Reskim grow hostile. Visitors are expected to offer a gift to King Weskenim (and Reskim will helpfully remind visitors of this need). Only those who also offer a gratuity to Reskim receive active advice, assistance, and a bone-and-hair token guaranteeing an audience with the goblin king. The expected gift to Weskenim is 10 gp/person for first-time, adventuring visitors, but only 1 gp/person for return visitors and/or inhabitants of the Halls. Reskim expects an equal sum in gratuities for his services. If not suitably compensated, Reskim is not averse to providing some misleading information, including sending parties towards the pit at SL4-11.

Inhabitants:

1. Reskim the bailiff, a goblin sub-chief (as a hobgoblin): SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 1+1; HP 8; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8 (long sword). Possessions: long sword.
2. 3 goblins: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 5, 4, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (short sword) or 2-7 (military pick).
3. 1 bobcat (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 7; MV 120'; HD 1+3; HP 7; #AT 3; Dmg 1-2/1-2/1-3.

Treasure:

Reskim has a scepter crafted from a platinum rod and a bobcat skull (625 gp as a curio). Unbeknownst to Reskim, the rod portion of his scepter is actually a platinum key to Obsidian Gates (see 5-6D). Stealing the scepter provokes the enmity of all the goblins, as Reskim is quite popular.

SL4-5: Upper Great Hall

The Great Hall of Labor dominates this sub-level. Rising 75' from floor (SL4-40) to ceiling (top of SL4-5), its smooth, finished walls were once covered with titanic frescoes illustrating the virtues of labor and craftsmanship. These showed benevolent orange-robed priests directing human, goblin, and other laborers at various activities, including masonry, stone-carving, and digging.

Several areas of the upper level of the Warrens open onto the Great Hall. These areas include SL4-4, SL4-14A, SL4-17A, SL4-18A, or SL4-23A, all of which enter the upper Great Hall at a point 50' above its floor (this means that the ceiling of SL4-5 is 25' above each of these regions of the upper Warrens). Unless otherwise noted, no balustrades or other architectural features exist to distinguish the solid floor of, say, SL4-14A from the open air of the Great Hall. Careless individuals might thus, theoretically, walk off the floor at one of these points and plunge 50' to area SL4-40 below (taking 5-30 HP damage in the process).

Whereas the lower level (SL4-40) shines with light and rings with the clamor of goblin activity, the upper level is relatively quiet. A small glow of light may be seen from the brazier at SL4-23, but the ballista stations (areas SL4-14A, SL4-17A, and SL4-18A) are all shrouded in darkness. Careful listening, say from the lip of SL4-4, might produce a few snatches of goblin conversation from several points around the hall. Immediately visible from any of the access points will be fragments of brightly-colored frescoes (now mostly damaged by smoke and grease) and the scores of small, harmless lizards which scamper along the walls, bridges, and overlooks.

Secret Door (north): Although this door is normal to spot, one must be climbing the wall or flying in the Great Hall to be able to notice it. Once found it is easy to open; one merely slides a 4'-square panel to the left.

SL4-6. Main Ladder

A 55'-tall vertical ladder made of wood, bone, and twisted hemp leans against the edge where area SL4-4 intersects with the open vastness of the Great Hall. The ladder extends 5' above the floor of SL4-4, a fact that allows one to mount the ladder with relative ease. It extends downward to the floor of the main hall (SL4-40). The ladder is 5' wide and quite rickety, although numerous guy lines attached to the wall ensure its relative stability.

SL4-7. Rope Bridge

A 4'-wide bridge made of rope and wooden slats stretches west from SL4-4 to SL4-8. Both ends of the bridge are fixed to iron rods hammered into the wall of the Great Hall. The goblins are adept at scampering along the bridge, but those weighing or carrying more than 150 lb will have trouble navigating it: movement will be reduced by half, and there is a 25% chance of punching through one or more of the slats, provoking a 3d6 roll under DEX to maintain footing. Those who fail the roll plunge 50' from the bridge and take 5-30 HP damage.

SL4-8. Goblin Barracks

This former overseer's chamber is occupied by twenty goblin warriors. The walls are blackened with centuries of smoke, obscuring some lovely frescoes illustrating scenes from the Tales of Larel One-Eye (see Arden Vul books). An unusual circular fixture of bronze hangs from the ceiling. Coiled around the pendant rod which maintains the fixture is an enchanted bullwhip, the whip of persuasion (see new magic items). Its existence is unknown to the goblins, who like to use the fixture for target practice. Twenty piles of furs and rags occupy the floor of the chamber.

Inhabitants:

20 goblins, of whom at least 10 are present at any given moment:
SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 7, 6, 5(x3), 4, 4, 3, 3;
#AT 1; Dmg 1-6.

Treasure:

The whip of persuasion (see new magic items). In addition, each pile of bedding conceals 2-24 sp and has a 15% chance of containing a gem worth 10-60 gp.

SL4-9. More Rope Bridges

Two more 4'-wide rope-and-slat bridges connect various sections of the upper hall. Like the bridge at SL4-7, these structures are meant for goblins, not heavier beings. Chances for falling are described at SL4-7. Note, too, that the goblins at SL4-14A can detach their end of the rope bridge in one round (if needed).

SL4-10. Forgotten Chamber

The existence of this former storage room is unknown to the goblins. It can only be accessed by locating the secret door on the wall of area SL4-5. Inside are scores of items dating to the Archontean period. Much of the stuff is of the practical sort, including shovels, prybars, picks, mauls, small hods for carrying stone, a pyramid of empty barrels, a wheelbarrow, a dozen coils of silk rope, some well-seasoned lumber (sixty 1"x12"x60" planks worth 10 gp each to any of the underground factions), three large area carpets, six prayer rugs (3'x4'), a box full of twenty 4"-diameter steel spheres, surveying equipment, and so forth. Two the prayer rugs are enchanted, each acting as a paired rug of instant access (see new magic items). In addition to the mundane items, the following may also be found: a cache of five red spinels (100 gp each) glued to the inside of one of the empty barrels, a medium-sized suit of imperial field plate (see Arden Vul items), three imperial gladii, a heavy crossbow, and an Alexia's useful pole (see new magic items).

Secret Door (from SL4-5): This door is normal to spot, and opens merely by sliding a 4'-square panel to the left.

Secret Door (into SL4-10): This door is easy to find (1 in 4), and opens by pushing it inward.

Treasure:

Practical items, plus two rugs, each enchanted as a rug of instant access (see new magic items), lumber (60 planks worth 10 gp each), 6 red spinels (100 gp each), a suit of imperial field plate (see Arden Vul items), 3 gladii, a crossbow, and an Alexia's useful pole (see new magic items).

SL4-11. Tunnel with Pit

Trap (pit): This narrow tunnel contains a 20'-deep pit trap concealed by a wicker lid covered with dirt and stone chips. Anyone weighing or carrying more than 150 lb has a 50% chance of plunging through the wicker cover (taking 2-12 HP damage in the process). The pit is 5'x5' in dimensions but widens at its base into a 15'x15' cave. Inside the pit the goblins keep a mangy, half-starved bear, whose growls a careful group may detect (10% per person crossing the wicker lid).

Six goblins crouch at their duty post, a niche 5' up the north wall. Should combat break out at SL4-2, the goblins will hoot and cry, attempting to lure enemies down the tunnel and across the pit. Should peaceful folk pass this way, the goblins wait to see if the rubes managed to fall into the pit, thereby provoking peals of laughter from the goblins. The goblins may (50%) move to assist any unfortunates by pulling them from the pit. Those who detect or avoid the pit are greeted good-naturedly by the goblins.

The floor of the pit-cave is littered with animal and goblin bones. Amid the debris is some treasure that the goblins are too scared to fetch.

Inhabitants:

1. 6 goblin bear-wranglers: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 5, 4, 4, 3, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.
2. 1 brown bear: SZ L; AL N; AC 6, MV 120'; HD 5+5; HP 22; #AT 3; Dmg 1-6/1-6/1-8. Special attacks: hug.

Treasure:

32 gp, 173 sp, and a shrunk head (see new magic items).

SL4-12. Goblin Witch Doctors

The door to this chamber is stuck open, and a stench of sulfur and boiling flesh wafts through it. Guttural chanting from four figures huddled around a pentagram echoes into the hallway. More than a dozen distorted, elongated masks hang on the north wall, eerily lit by a handful of candelabra in the center of the room and a merrily burning fire to the east.

The 'masks' are harvested and preserved dretch faces, pulled and stretched into bizarre and unnatural positions by the witch doctors's 'preservation' methods. The witch doctors think this is great fun, and have given silly nicknames to all the faces. One, which vaguely resembles the face in Munch's painting, the Scream, they have named "Bruno"; inside Bruno's mouth is stuffed a small purse with 57 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items).

In the center of the room is a 1"-wide pentagram carefully inscribed in the floor and filled with blood; it is lit by five candelabra placed at the points of the pentagram. Four goblin witch doctors are attempting to summon a new dretch servant, since their most recent - the much-lamented Smiley - has just been slain. The witch doctors like to summon dretches and use them for a while as servants in their shrine (SL4-15), before slaughtering them and harvesting their faces for their gallery.

To the east is a fire - burning mushroom and wood fragments - and a large kettle, in which a noxious concoctions of ingredients is boiling away the flesh of Smiley the dretch - save for his face, which shortly will be mounted on the north wall.

There is a flat 25% chance that the summoning goes awry as visitors approach. In this case, either 2-8 dretches are summoned and attack all in sight - including those in the hallway (66%), or a more powerful demon (a babau) is summoned instead, and begins to wreak havoc (33%). If the ceremony fails, the witch doctors flee their chamber and immediately seek assistance from any passersby.

On subsequent visits, the witch doctors will be entertaining themselves by using audible glamer to cause their gallery of masks to speak and sing in funny voices.

The witch doctors' sleeping furs lie in the northeast corner of the chamber, as does a locked wooden chest.

The witch doctors assume that their friend and colleague, Larakim, is dead, since there has been no word from his expedition. In fact Larakim and his companions are trapped in area 3-130. Should PCs have freed Larakim, he will be present here and he and the other witchdoctors will prove valuable allies.

Inhabitants:

1. Hobim, 6th/4th level goblin witch doctor: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD as a 4 HD monster; HP 25; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (spear +1). Cleric spells: cure light wounds, protection from evil, resist fear; augury, chant, resist fire; blindness, dispel magic. Magic user spells: affect normal fires, identify, ventriloquism; audible glamer, Frigg's flatulence (see new spells).
2. Haskell, 4th/3rd level goblin witch doctor: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD as a 3 HD monster; HP 17; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8 (morning star). Cleric spells: cure light wounds, detect magic, protection from evil; detect charm, speak with animals. Magic user spells: push, ventriloquism; audible glamer.
3. Bibi, 4th/4th level goblin witch doctor: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD as a 3 HD monster; HP 15; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (spear) or 3-6 (sling +1). Cleric spells: detect evil, detect magic, darkness; cause disease, remove curse. Magic user spells: dancing lights, shield, ventriloquism; audible glamer, invisibility.
4. Preskell, 3rd/2nd level goblin witch doctor: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD as a 2 HD monster; HP 11; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (spear) or 2-5 (sling). Cleric spells: cure light wounds, darkness; chant. Magic user spells: identify, shield.

5. Larakim, the 5th/4th-level goblin witch doctor (only if previously rescued from 3-130): SZ S; AC 6; MV 60'; HD as a 3 HD monster; HP 21; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (spear). Spells (lined out spells have already been cast): cure light wounds, resist fear, protection from evil; augury, chant, resist fire; dispel magic; dancing lights, shield, ventriloquism; invisibility, scare.
6. 1 dretch (75%): SZ S; AL CE; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 4; HP 24; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/2-5; MR 30%. Constant abilities: infravision. Special defenses: half damage from cold, electricity, fire and gas. Special: darkness 5' radius; scare; stinking cloud; telekinesis (500 gp); teleport 1/day; gate a type I demon (5% chance).
7. If inhabitant #6 is not present, either 2-8 dretches (66%) or a Babau (33%) are present (see text above). For dretches, see #6. For the babau: SZ M; AL CE; AC -3; MV 150'; HD 7+14; HP 53; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 2-5/2-5/2-8, or 8-15 (military fork); MR 50%. Thief abilities: PP 70%, OL 62%, F/RT 60%, MS 70%, HS 56%, HN 30%, CW 98%, RL 45%. Special attacks: gaze acts as ray of enfeeblement; backstab as 9th-level thief; fear (by touch only). Special defenses: half damage from cutting and stabbing attacks; half damage from cold, electricity, fire and gas. Special: cause darkness 5' radius; levitate (as 10th-level magic user); fly (as 11th-level magic user); dispel magic user (as 12th-level magic user); polymorph self; heat metal (as 14th-level druid); gate in a babau demon (25% chance).

Treasure:

Chest: a short codex written in goblin, entitled The Highly Impressive Story of Frigg the Fabulous (see Arden Vul books); three arcane spell scrolls that the current witch doctors cannot read (hold portal, pyrotechnics, and blink); a potion of molasses (see new magic items); a potion of the berserk (see new magic items); potions of climbing, dragon control and human control; a vial of oil of slipperiness; Frigg's spell book (see below); 4 doses of aqua vitae mushrooms, 6 doses of eye opener mushrooms, 1 dose of mind eater mushroom, 4 doses of red veil mushrooms, 2 doses of slow stepper mushrooms (see new flora for all); six extra candles; a purse with 25 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items), 13 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items) and two ancient octagonal platinum pieces (see Arden Vul items); a sack with 6,592 cp; and a bronze statuette of a hippopotamus (50 gp).

In the mask called "Bruno": a purse containing 57 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items), and a white glass activation square (see Thothian teleportation rings in new magic items).

Hobim has a spear +1 that he calls 'Sharpstick'; Bibi has a sling +1 that he calls 'Eye Killer'.

Frigg's Spell Book: Frigg was one of the first imperial goblins (see World of Archontos appendix) to receive formal training as a magic user (and not as a witch doctor) and he developed several new spells. His spell book, long abandoned in Arden Vul, was recovered by the wild goblins and now forms a treasured object to the current witch doctors, even if they are unable to learn most of the spells that it contains. Burning hands, charm person, detect magic, floating disk, friends, Frigg's flatulence (see new spells), magic aura, magic missile, message, protection from evil, shield, spider climb; audible glamer, continual light, darkness 15' radius, detect invisibility, Frigg's elephant ears (see new spells), Frigg's fraud (see new spells), invisibility, knock, magic mouth, pyrotechnics, stinking cloud; blink, flame arrow,

Frigg's caustic kisses (see new spells), Frigg's jelly legs (see new spells), gust of wind, invisibility 10' radius, phantasmal force, protection from evil 10' radius, suggestion.

SL4-13. Spiral Staircase

This stone staircase spirals down 50' to the lower reaches of the Warrens. Chances for random encounter rise here: roll once per turn, with a 1 in 4 chance of an encounter. Use the Goblin Goals table (found in the Random Encounters section of the introduction to this level) to determine what the goblins are doing.

SL4-14. Hall of Eleven Pillars

This darkened hall features eleven heavy, squat pillars (5' in diameter) supporting a 20'-tall ceiling. On each of the nine pillars in the main part of the hall is a 1'-square inset plaque made of silver, with a Mithric numeral inscribed in lapis on each plaque (these numerals run from I to IX). The chamber also contains an overlook into the great hall (SL4-14A). The walls are coated in black paint; on top of the black are crude silver sketches of ten goblin heroes. Standing beside each pillar is a goblin zombie (raised by a passing Set cleric who owed Weskenim a favor). The zombies ignore non-goblins who pass through, but defend themselves and move to intercept those approaching the shrine (SL4-15). Any noise here brings the goblins from SL4-14A to investigate.

The central pillar contains a secret compartment that is unknown to the goblins. It is normal to detect, but only opens if a finger's-width release catch is located at the base of the pillar. The compartment is just large enough for the Codex Sequentis which occupies it (see Arden Vul books). If Kel Bormol is released from prison (see SL3-2A), he will recover the Codex within one month of his release and, thereafter, the Codex will no longer be found here.

Puzzle: Touching the silver, numbered plaques on the nine pillars affects the thaumaturgic circle in area SL4-15. Different patterns of touches produce different effects, and a good two score patterns are recorded in the Codex Sequentis (see Arden Vul books). Patterns using all nine numbers act as summoning spells, whereas adumbrated patterns affect the functioning of the thaumaturgic circle. Should a valid sequence be initiated, a cloud of effervescent purple vapor forms at the first plaque of the sequence; the vapor then quickly extends to touch each of the other plaques in the sequence, until a grid of vapor covers the area. Once the final plaque has been connected to the vaporous grid, a low grinding sound may be heard from all nine pillars, and the appropriate result is effected at area SL4-15. The vapor is harmless if touched. Touching a plaque out of sequence means no vapor will be released (a hint to the clever!).

Inhabitants:

1. 11 (goblin) zombies: SZ M; AL N; AC 8; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 14, 14, 13, 13, 11, 10(x3), 9, 8, 7; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8. Special: always strike last.

Treasure:

Codex Sequentis (see Arden Vul books).

SL4-14A: Overlook

This extension of the Hall of Eleven Pillars provides an excellent view of most activity in the Great Hall. Two ballistae mounted on swivels offer the goblins a measure of security; these weapons are served by a crew of eight goblins at all time. It takes a minimum of two goblins to maneuver, fire and load a ballista; rate of fire is one every four rounds, and damage is 2-12/3-18 per bolt. If four goblins serve a ballista (as they will surely do for as long as possible), the rate of fire increases to one bolt every other round. The goblins have twenty bolts for the two ballistae.

A bucket of sulfurous purple wax sits next to each ballista (see SL4-15); the goblins dip each bolt in the wax before firing (save vs paralysis or be paralyzed for 1-3 turns).

The rope bridge which leads to SL4-14A can easily be detached from its mountings, and the goblins are sure to use this tactic if facing intruders on the bridges.

Inhabitants:

1. 8 goblins: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 7, 6, 5, 5, 4, 4, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (spears) and 2-5 (slings).

SL4-15: Shrine of Rizzit

This chamber exudes an overwhelming odor of sulfur and a strong aura of evil. The walls are painted in an incongruously cheerful - albeit peeling - sky blue, and the floor is sheathed in elaborate colored triangles of marble, arranged in patterns both geometric and figural. A 15'-diameter thaumaturgic circle occupies the east end of the chamber. The circle itself is composed of crimson, navy, and puce-green triangles, with nine 1'-diameter black circles interspersed at regular intervals along the circumference of the circle. Each of the black circles has a Mithric numeral inscribed in lapis inside it; these range from I to IX. Steaming and dripping inside the circle is the source of the sulfur, a horrific lucern demon named Rizzit (see new monsters).

The south edge of the chamber features a large abacus and several stools; the witch doctors use the abacus to make calculations concerning Rizzit's prophecies.

To the north are two stone chests and two scrapers attached to wooden poles. Inside one of the chests are six live rats, which are used to feed Rizzit. Inside the other are 37 mummified paws and hands of various creatures, which the goblins trade to Rizzit for information.

Rizzit's form is constantly mutating, but generally appears as a floppy bipedal pile of dripping purple wax; his head features two large black eyes and the hint of a mouth (if one looks closely enough, the mouth occasionally slides open, revealing chitinous, hollow, conical 'teeth'). An occasional lump of 'wax' drips off of Rizzit's form; when one of these happens to fall outside the summoning circle, it is carefully scraped up by the goblins and used for their paralytic poison.

Rizzit has been imprisoned in the circle for over a millennium, since his original summoner, the sorcerer Kel Bormol (see SL3-2A), has never died and Rizzit's bonds are thus still intact. As a result, the goblins have always known of Rizzit, and most have come to see him as a quasi-deity to be placated and occasionally consulted. The witch doctors and King Weskenim are fully aware of the nature of Rizzit, and have instituted strict rules to ensure that no goblin unwittingly releases Rizzit from his binding. Indeed, the witch doctors are aware that the circle is connected magically to the Hall of Eleven Pillars, but they do not fully understand the ancient mechanisms of this area. In truth, they don't really care so long as they are able to collect the occasional paralytic wax and trade witticisms and information with Rizzit.

Rizzit tries hard to get newcomers to release him. As a result of the length of his imprisonment, however, he is willing to talk, provided that proper nourishment and payment (c.f. the two chests) are offered. The demon is able to make prophecies about future events, although he tends to pronounce them in terms of arithmetical expressions. Expressions ending in odd numbers equate to 'yes' answers, whereas those ending in even numbers are 'no' answers. If released without having been formally bound by oaths or magic, Rizzit will wreak devastation on the goblins and any others nearby as best he is able before teleporting back to the Abyss. Conversely, should Kel Bormol be released (see SL3-2A), he will eventually come here (within a month), dispel Rizzit, and recover the Codex Sequentis (SL4-14, see Arden Vul books).

Features of the thaumaturgic circle may be manipulated and altered by the pillars in area SL4-14. Indeed, Rizzit may be dispelled by touching the silver plates in this sequence: III-IV-II-I-V. Other functions are described in the Codex Sequentis.

Inhabitants:

1. Rizzit, a lucern demon (see new monsters): SZ L; AL CE; AC -3; MV 90'; HD 8+8; HP 61; #AT 5; Dmg 3-6/3-6/3-6/3-6/4-16; MR 75%. Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: pseudopods cause paralysis; throw blobs of wax (40' range). Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to acid; immune to mind-affecting spells; half damage from cold, electricity, fire and gas. Special: utter prophecy; cause darkness; teleport without error; comprehend languages; levitate; detect magic; dispel magic; telekinesis (3,000 gp); symbol of discord; symbol of despair; gate in 2-5 dretch (75% chance).
2. Six live rats: SZ S; AL N; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 1 hp; #AT 1; Dmg 1; 5% chance of disease per bite.

SL4-16: Store Room

This dusty chamber is filled with boxes, crates, and bits of discarded equipment. Although nothing of true value may be found here, there is a 25% chance that any specific item from the general equipment list (not weapons) can be found here after 2-6 turns of searching; conversely, searching randomly for 2 turns is sure to turn up an item off that list. The goblins use this room as a dumping ground for things they might want to use someday. Due to its proximity to Rizzit, many of the goblins consider it haunted.

SL4-17: Barracks

A cohort of 30 goblin warriors dwells in this chamber, although only 10 will be present at any given time. The chamber is utterly nondescript, containing only the goblins's bedrolls, a water barrel, a cookfire, some fuel, and a pair of rotting mummified beastmen whom the goblins use for weapons practice.

Inhabitants:

1. 10 goblins: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 7, 6, 5(x3), 4, 4, 3, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (short sword) and 2-7 (military pick).

Treasure:

Each bedroll has 3-18 sp concealed in it.

SL4-17A: Overlook

This open ledge overlooks the great hall. Two large ballistae are mounted here and are served by a crew of eight goblin warriors. A bucket of purple wax (see SL4-15) and a rack of ten bolts rests next to each ballista. It takes a minimum of two goblins to maneuver, fire and load a ballista; rate of fire is one every four rounds, and damage is 2-12/3-18 per bolt. If four goblins serve a ballista (as they will surely do for as long as possible), the rate of fire increases to one bolt every other round.

Inhabitants:

1. 8 goblins: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 6, 5(x3), 4, 4, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (spear).

SL4-18: Barracks

This chamber is almost identical to SL4-17, save that this group possesses a trampoline instead of the two beastman corpses.

Inhabitants:

1. 10 goblins: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 7, 6, 5(x3), 4, 4, 3, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8 (morning star).

Treasure:

3-18 sp in each bedroll

SL4-18A: Overlook

Identical to area SL4-17A, including inhabitants.

SL4-19: Sir Sorrow, the Sun-Scarred Knight

King Weskenim handed over his only guest chamber to Sorrow, one of the Sun-Scarred Knights, when she arrived in the Goblin Warrens eleven months ago. At her request, and using her ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items), the chamber has been redecorated to her liking. Each wall is light blue and features the same image: a puffy, white cloud from behind which a handful of solar rays emerge. Sorrow's furnishings include a wooden bed-frame with an overstuffed feather mattress, a pair of leather easy chairs, a low wooden table, a beautiful mahogany armoire, a locked stone chest, and a desk and chair made out of bone.

Those entering her chamber unannounced or uninvited (when she is present - see below for chances) are greeted by her varlet, Huguette, who leaps to her feet to demand the reason for intrusion. There is a 20% chance that Sorrow is intrigued by the visitors and allow them to remain, otherwise Huguette demands immediate exit, using persuasion, then threats, and ultimately force. Sorrow allows Huguette to conduct all negotiations unless violence breaks out, at which point she comes to the defense of her varlet.

Sorrow is a tall (6' 2"), muscular, woman with long black hair and piercing green eyes. Her beauty is marred (or enhanced?) by ritual scarring on each cheek: one cheek shows a full sun, the other an arched doorway. Sorrow speaks Archontean easily, although with a strange accent; she is also fluent in all the other major tongues of the Halls. Huguette is equally tall, with blonde hair, blue eyes, and a fiery temper; although Archontean, she is clearly of Wiskin descent.

At any given time, Sorrow can be found in her chamber (50%), in SL4-23 (25%), elsewhere in the Goblin Warrens (20%), or in some completely different location (5%). When outside this room, she wears her gothic armor at all times, although she may go helmet-less while within the Goblin Warrens. Inside her chamber she usually doffs her armor in preference for brightly colored silk trousers and tunic.

Sorrow's motives for spending time with the goblins are obscure, at least to Weskenim and the goblins. In fact her mission is to prop up the goblins, whom the knights see as the weakest of the major factions. Sorrow has been subtly advising Weskenim against costly aggression (e.g., against the Halflings), and has been suggesting new defensive measures and practices. She is extremely adept at diplomacy, and at making those around her think that her ideas were always their own. In addition, Sorrow has a personal interest in the manifestations of grief in all its forms, with particular attention to the gendering of sorrow, and to comparative racial causes for sorrow (human vs. goblin, for instance). She is not unwilling to manipulate goblins (and others) into recognizing their own grief at any number of incidents; as a result those around her are often weeping (but not vengeful). Sorrow has a peculiar interest in labor and hierarchy, and sometimes foments dissent by spreading anti-hierarchical ideology, especially just before a mission is about to end. Sorrow has a weakness for pretty women who sing songs of broken or unconsummated love. She is eager to talk to new visitors to the Goblin Warrens, but on her own terms; like all the Knights, she is adept at not revealing her own agenda.

Sorrow will abruptly leave the Goblin Warrens 1-6 months after being first encountered here by the PCs. When she departs, the chamber will be given over to another favored guest of the GM's choice.

Inhabitants:

1. Sir Sorrow, the Sun-Scarred Knight (see new monsters), 11th-level female Wiskin fighter (50%): SZ M; AL LN; AC -2; MV 120'; HD 11; HP 95; #AT 3/2; Dmg 4-13 (two-handed sword +2) or 2-5 (dagger) or 4-7 (light crossbow with bolts +3). Abilities: STR 17, INT 15, WIS 16, DEX 10, CON 16, CHA 15. Possessions: key to SL10A-16, gothic armor and sun lance (see new technological items); solar ring, circlet of command, and backpack of capacity (see new magic items for all three); 59 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items); 11 ancient octagonal platinum coins (see Arden Vul items); two-handed sword +2; dagger; light crossbow with 15 bolts +3.
2. Huguette, varlet to Sir Sorrow, and a 5th-level female Archontean fighter (50%): SZ M; AL LN; AC 2; MV 120'; HD 5; HP 49; #AT 1; Dmg 6-13 (battle axe +2) or 1-6 (short bow). Abilities: STR 18/13, INT 9, WIS 15, DEX 11, CON 16, CHA 9. Possessions: chain mail +2 and medium shield; battle axe +2; short bow and 20 arrows; 2 potions of heroism.

Treasure:

Chest: 9,875 gp; 1,129 gp; a djed amulet (see new magic items); 3 doses of incense of attraction (see new magic items); Sorrow's vial of tears (see new magic items).

Desk: an ivory and bronze statuette of a dancing houri (250 gp); a slim manuscript of high-quality original poetry written by Sorrow herself and entitled A Lover's Lament (the title page, however, attributes the work to Aelia of Perros – for her, see Green are My Lover's Eyes in Arden Vul books) (Sorrow's volume would bring 250 gp in a major city); and a loose sheet of parchment with some notes, which read "Discord has gone too far and is living up to his name. The Master's motive in letting him undermine my work here is opaque. He is banished to the Knight's Rest. More efforts to shore up the pitiful goblins are needed." [GM Note: 'Discord' refers to Sir Discord, another of the Sun-Scarred Knights, who is currently holed up in the Knights' Rest, i.e., area 8-116.]

Armoire: the armoire itself (100 gp); a pair of high-quality silk robes, decorated with female warriors defeating hydras (75 gp each); a red-and-yellow cap of serenity (see new magic items); a pair of thigh boots made of heqeti hide (40 gp); and a feather boa (15 sp).

SL4-20: Royal Harem

King Weskenim keeps a substantial harem in this richly appointed (by goblin standards) chamber. Eunuch ogre guards are posted both inside and outside the door to SL4-23 (unless Weskenim is visiting, in which case the inside guard will be found in SL4-22). Fifteen goblin women, two human women, and a lone halfling woman make up the harem. The eastern-most section of the harem, by the door to SL4-23, contains a pair of game tables with eight chairs, plus a large comfy chair for the ogre guard. It is set off from the western portion of the harem, where the ladies entertain King Weskenim, by a heavy tapestry hung from the ceiling. The western half of the harem is filled with cushions and pillows of varying quality. Both areas are painted a soothing pale green, and are lit by smoky wall sconces. The entrance to area SL4-21 is concealed by another hanging tapestry. The ladies of the harem are all quite content with their status, and have no desire to be 'freed' or rescued. The alpha 'wife' is a certain Griselt, who governs the harem fairly but strictly.

If Weskenim is visiting, then 1-6 of the ladies will be here, while the rest wait in their living quarters (SL4-21). Otherwise twelve of the ladies are lounging among the pillows here.

Inhabitants:

1. 15 goblin females: non-combatants, AC 8, 1 HP.
2. 2 human women: non-combatants, AC 10, 2 HP.
3. 1 halfling woman: non-combatant, AC 9, 1 HP.
4. 1 eunuch ogre guard: SZ L; AL CE; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 4+1; HP 25; #AT 1; Dmg 1-10, or by weapon.
5. King Weskenim (20%): see stats at SL4-22.

Treasure:

Personal jewelry: among them the harem ladies possess forty pieces of jewelry, which they wear at all times: 20 are silver (100-1,000 gp each), 8 are gold and silver (200-1,200 gp each), 8 are gold (300-1,800 gp each), and 2 (Griselt's) are platinum studded with emeralds (1750 gp) each.

Tapestries: The two hanging tapestries are old and faded, but still of interest: one shows a female archon directing legionaries against a horde of heqeti (this is the warlike archon, Irene Bellatrix – see SL6-9 and SL6-44); the other shows a female mage floating above a subterranean lake pointing a black spear (this is Kentillian, wielding the famous artifact, the ebon spear; see SL5-13B for both Kentillian and her spear)

SL4-21: Harem Quarters

To the west is a small cavern excavated at the orders of King Weskenim (SL4-22) in order to house his burgeoning harem; it contains seventeen hammocks, a trio of vanities with make-up pots, and seventeen locked iron boxes (one per inhabitant).

Inhabitants:

If Weskenim is visiting the harem (20% chance), then all but 1-6 of the harem will be present here; otherwise only five of the seventeen are present here, lounging in their hammocks. For stats, see SL4-20.

Treasure:

The seventeen iron boxes hold the special trinkets of the harem ladies. Most of these trinkets are mundane and valueless (bits of hair, small bits of carved rock or bone, a button or two), but each box also contains 3-18 sp and 2-12 gp.

SL4-22: King Weskenim

Weskenim, the Grand King of the United Goblins, rules his people from his throne room. The eastern part of the room is dominated by a large, king-sized bed, from which Weskenim greets petitioners. To the north of the bed is a bench, on which his advisors - Skimmel and Reeflik - and his major-domo, Palestirim, sit while the king dispenses judgments, advice, and commands. A eunuch ogre guard stands just inside the east door at all times. The eastern, public half of the room is dimly lit by a pair of wall-sconces and is separated from the western half by heavy purple curtains embroidered with crowns, scepters, and grinning goblin faces; the north and south walls are also painted purple, but each features an enormous, garish, cartoony image of a grinning Weskenim.

The western half of the room is mostly dark. It features a gilt throne lined with throw pillows, three comfortable settees, two sets of armor (one badly rusted and clearly ceremonial, and the other gleaming and functional), a sideboard stocked with wine, an enormous keg of brandy, a stout iron-bound chest, a lectern with a large volume on it, and a comfortable hammock slung across the northwest corner (Weskenim's preferred sleeping location). The walls of the western half of the room are painted black.

The lectern holds Weskenim's ledger book, a meticulous piece of record-keeping that records every bit of tribute collected by the king, whether from visitors (like the PCs), from the goblin clans, or from any other source. It is an impressive piece of double-entry bookkeeping. PCs investigating it casually will merely see a list of debits and credits; a clever PC who studies the ledger for 1-2 hours (perhaps by succeeding at a roll of 4d6 under INT) may notice that the running total of Weskenim's finances is much greater than the sums found in the operating expenses chest (see below). That might serve as a clue that Weskenim must have other sources of treasure.

Weskenim is a shrewd, canny old goblin much given to bursts of enthusiasm for interesting persons and for new projects. He is large for goblins, with a shock of still-raven hair, large incisors, and a huge, lumpy nose. He favors bright, loose silks, and a brilliantly colored, although slightly tattered turban, on top of which perches his crown. Although appearing to be slightly naïve and unsophisticated, Weskenim is quite intelligent and is sensitive to how he is treated; those who are deferential and respectful are more likely to find their requests fulfilled. Those who are condescending or arrogant will find themselves negotiating impenetrable walls of banal pleasantries.

The king is served ably by a coterie of old and trusted advisors. Palestrim, the major-domo, is the one who determines who shall gain admittance to the royal chambers and when they shall do so. This grizzled, one-legged goblin is particularly adept at reading the motives of non-goblins, and is thus usually present for all interviews conducted inside the throne room. Skimmel, an aged goblin with stringy white hair, is referred to by the king as 'Caution' for his reminders about the potential costs of potential actions in terms of treasure, manpower, and other resources. The third advisor is a younger goblin named Reeflik (he is actually middle-aged); the king calls him 'the Hammer', as Reeflik is always keen to use force to defend and extend goblin influence. Despite their contrasting roles, Skimmel and Reeflik are the best of friends. The advisors sleep on the settees in the throne room, near their king.

Weskenim will be found in his throne room 25% of the time; otherwise he will be visiting his harem in SL4-20 (20%), mingling with the courtiers in SL4-23 (25%), visiting the clans in the Great Hall at SL4-40 (25%), or occupied with some secret business (5%).

Weskenim's power is fairly secure, since he is popular with nearly all the family groupings that make up the tribe. One exception is the group at SL4-57. This group has come to follow a goblin mystic named Gislú, who recently announced that no goblin could be king without possessing the scepter of the goblins (see new magic items). When Weskenim looked around for a scepter he couldn't find one, and so he banished Gislú (who is now in 4-2). As no one, including Weskenim, knows what this scepter looks like, Weskenim is slightly anxious about the sudden emergence of the scepter and the threat to his power that it might entail. For this reason, Weskenim and Palestrim keep a close watch on the gossip that occurs in SL4-23, listening for news of the scepter. Should Gislú or anyone else show up at SL4-23 with the scepter of the goblins (currently at 8-69), or even a plausible simulacrum of it (e.g., the trill flute found in 3-168), trouble is likely to ensue. Those producing a 'scepter' are likely to be challenged to single combat by the king, via one of his champions (one of the ogres). On the other hand, Weskenim will pay handsomely for discrete information about the scepter or, better yet, any plausible version of that object.

Weskenim is also concerned about the expedition he sent into Level 3 under the leadership of Harab and Larakim (see 3-130). He delicately attempts to question visitors about his missing people, and will be instantly favorable to those who rescue Harab and Co.

Weskenim has two affectations. First, to the amusement of his people, he has a strong personal fear of cavern cephalopods (see new monsters), and offers various favors and gifts to any who produce a cephalopod husk. Second, the king is fascinated with cats, and would give much in coin and/or favors to whoever brought him a litter of kittens or a pregnant mother. GM Note: A likely source of cats are the regions near the temple of Bastet (areas 8-30 to 8-50).

Inhabitants:

1. Weskenim, king of the goblins (25%) (as a gnoll): SZ M; AL LE; AC 2; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 14; #AT 1; 3-9 (morning star +1).

Possessions: morning star +1; amulet of spell absorption (13 spell levels) (see new magic items); cloak of displacement; and a potion of healing.

2. Palestrim, the major-domo (50%): for stats, see SL4-23.
3. Skimmel and Reeflik, goblin advisors (90%) (as hobgoblins): SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 1+1; HP 7, 7; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8 (long sword). Possessions: long swords.
4. 1 eunuch ogre guard: SZ L; AL CE; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 4+1; HP 26; #AT 1; Dmg 1-10, or by weapon.
5. an individual or a group from the court (see SL4-23), 33%

Treasure:

In the chamber: the gleaming, functional armor is banded mail +1. The rusty, ceremonial armor is a unique magic item, the armor of secret storage (see new magic items). The main cache of Weskenim's treasure is stored within the armor of secret storage: 5,195 gp, 27,632 sp, and 50 gems (worth 50-500 gp each), including 3 flawless diamonds (5,000 gp each). Only Weskenim, his advisors, and the witch doctors (SL4-12) know the location of the stash; they are careful to only withdraw from the cache (or add tribute to it) when no one else is present. The magical nature of the armor is concealed by the witch doctors, who have cast Frigg's fraud on it (see new spells).

Chest: this chest is for operating expenses. Stacks of coins line one side, to the tune of 275 gp and 896 sp. The other side contains a pouch with 20 pearls (100 gp each), plus a set of 6 Archontean chess pieces in solid gold with ivory highlights (400 gp per piece; for more on Archontean chess, see 3-36C).

Weskenim's personal items: morning star +1; gold and chrysoberyl turban pin (3,000 gp); gold, silver and chrysoberyl crown (5,500 gp); silver ring with large crystal stone (3,500 gp).

SL4-23: Court of the Goblin King

This broad plaza, with its overlook into SL4-5, serves as the main site at which goblin politics takes place. Here important goblins and visitors mill about, sharing gossip, hatching plans, and generally feeling important. All await Weskenim's frequent appearances, for the king loves nothing more than to press the flesh, display his prodigious incisors, and utter pithy-but-vague platitudes. The north and south walls each feature a stone bench, on which the more elderly or pessimistic courtiers rest. A pair of braziers in the center of the chamber casts a dull glow and provides some warmth. Violence is not permitted at the court by order of the king, and any transgressors will be met with immediate resistance from all those in attendance.

When he is not in the throne room (SL4-22), Palestrim, the major-domo of the court, sits on a too-large padded chair just outside the door to the throne room. Palestrim's job is to decide who may enter the royal chambers and in what order. An old, grizzled, and one-legged goblin, he is quite adept at his job, for he has a natural and somewhat mystical ability to read the motives of non-goblins. Those unknown to the court may expect to wait up to a week before being admitted; those whom the goblins know, and/or those who have been deemed 'Goblin Friends,' can usually be admitted within 12 hours. Palestrim is not particularly venal, but appreciates fine food and drink; 'gifts' of the latter can reduce the wait time by ¼.

The court is a hotbed of gossip and rumor. Much of this is mundane and salacious, but there are a few dangerous political undercurrents that occasional surface. One involves the touchy subject of the scepter of the goblins (see new magic items, and areas 8-69 and SL4-22). Visitors may well be questioned on the sly about this object and its location; careless responses may well cause serious political repercussions, and might even bring an immediate interview with Weskenim.

Inhabitants:

At any given moment, the following will be present at court:

- 10 goblins from the clans, seeking favors and/or advice (100%): SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 7, 6, 5(x3), 4, 4, 3, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (short sword) and 2-5 (sling).
- 4-7 goblins visiting from outside Arden Vul (25%): SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 5, 5, 4, 4, 3, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (military pick).
- A Set deacon plus 4 Set guardsmen, on an embassy from Level 4 (20% chance). Irenaeus the Set deacon (see new monsters), as a 6th-level Archontean cleric of Set: SZ M; AL LE; AC 3; MV 90'; HD 6; HP 42; #AT 1; Dmg 3-8 (mace +1). Possessions: Set armor +1 (see Arden Vul items); deacon's was stick (see new magic items); footman's mace +1; an amulet of protection against normal missiles (see new magic items); a potion of extra healing; a potion of glibness; a scroll of curse; and a gold holy symbol of Set (150 gp). Spells prayed for: command, cure light wounds (x2), cause fear, protection from good; chant, hold person, know alignment, resist fire, silence 15' radius; animate dead, dispel magic, cause blindness; cause serious wounds. In addition, 4 Set guardsmen (see new monsters), as 2nd-level Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 15, 12; #AT 1, Dmg 2-7 (mace), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: red scale mail and wooden shield; footman's maces; spears; light crossbows with 20 bolts.
- 2 true varumani (see new monsters) from the thegn's court (7-75) (20%): SZ L; AL LN; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 60; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 6-24 (two-handed sword, 2-20+4). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: huge two-handed sword; ring mail.
- A beastman patrol sent by Deino (3-158) to negotiate (25%), including: 6 beastman troopers (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 8, 7, 7, 6, 6, 5; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spears; short swords; short bows; and a beastman sergeant (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 2+2; HP 15; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 or 2-5. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spear; war hammer.
- 1-3 parties of NPC adventurers (33%): select from NPC appendix.
- Sir Sorrow, the Sun-Scarred Knight, and her varlet (25%) (unless she has departed): for stats and details, see SL4-19.
- 1-4 unusual visitors (from outer planes, from outside Arden Vul, etc.) (10%): GM's choice.
- 6 royal guardsmen from SL4-24, lined up on the western wall (100%): see stats at SL4-24

- 10. Palestrim, the goblin major-domo (50%) (as a hobgoblin): SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 1+1; HP 8; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8 (long sword). Possessions: long sword.
- 11. Weskenim, the Goblin king (25%): for stats, see SL4-22.
- 12. 2 eunuch ogre guards, one posted at each of the western doors (100%): SZ L; AL CE; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 4+1; HP 28, 22; #AT 1; Dmg 1-10, or by weapon.

SL4-23A: King's Overlook

Weskenim loves to make appearances and shout encouraging slogans from this overlook. Two brass speaking tubes located on either side of the royal podium loudly project any voice into SL4-5.

SL4-24: Royal Guards

The elite royal goblin guards inhabit this chamber. A total of twenty-two goblins reside here, divided into three companies of 6 each, plus three captains and a commander. As a result, the chamber is crowded, with six triple and two double bunkbeds lining the yellow-painted walls. In the center is a large brazier, which burns coals and whatever the guards can find. Clustered around the brazier are a number of benches, tatty chairs, and small side tables. From the ceiling hang various taxidermied trophies, including a baby hydra, a varumani head, and several subterranean lizards.

Resting on a table that is nestled between two bunkbeds on the western wall is a 4'-tall, 2'-wide, 1'-deep, free-standing ogive arch made of marble, inside of which is a solid gold statuette of an armored warrior wielding a tulwar/scimitar. The golden warrior is clad in the attire of the ancient Archontean legions. Those familiar with the Labors of Arden should recognize him as Lucius Minux, who played a role in the Sixth Labor (see SL13-10F). The statuette is actually a statuette of faithful service (see new magic items), which activates only when Lucius is addressed by name in Mithric.

The royal guards are recognizable by their jaunty, bright red caps made of silk, and by the scarlet oval badge (with a silver-incised image of Weskenim on it) which they wear on their clothing.

The captains accompany their companies at all times, but the commander - Vingrim the Surly - is lazy, and spends 90% of his time lounging around the brazier.

Inhabitants:

- 6 goblin royal guards (as gnolls): SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 14, 13, 13, 12, 12, 11; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8 (morning star). Possessions: morning stars.
- 1 goblin royal guard captain (as gnoll): SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 14; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8 (morning star). Possessions: morning star.
- Vingrim the Surly, commander of the goblin royal guard (as gnoll): SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 14; #AT 1; Dmg 2-9 (long sword +1). Possessions: long sword +1.

Treasure:

Statuette of faithful service (Lucius Minux - see new magic items), and 4-24 sp in the bedroll of each guardsmen

SL4-25: Lair of the Eunuch Ogres

Weskenim purchases young ogres from the troll thegn, castrates them, and raises them as his private bodyguards. Eight such creatures reside here, four of whom are on guard at any given moment and four of whom may be found here. The ogres are delighted with their mostly ceremonial position and their cushy lair, and would never betray Weskenim. Their chamber contains four bunkbeds, a rack of halberds and maces, a sunken 'pool' filled with water in which they like to recline when off-duty, 48 pieces of highly polished copper and bronze candlesticks, ewers, mugs, plates, and so forth (worth a total of 150 gp), a sideboard stocked with small kegs of ale, and a cabinet stuffed with dried and fresh meat. Two young goblins serve the ogres and keep the chamber tidy.

Inhabitants:

1. 4 eunuch ogres: SZ L; AL CE; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 4+1; HP 26, 24, 23, 22; #AT 1; Dmg 1-10, or by weapon.
2. two goblin servants: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 5, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.

Treasure:

48 pieces of tableware, worth 150 gp total, and a stash of 438 sp tucked under the sideboard.

SL4-26: Hydra Keepers

The six unfortunate goblins tasked with caring for the 'pet' hydra (SL4-3) live and work here. A horrendous reek of fresh blood and aging meat fills the corridor around the door. Inside are six bedrolls, a large worktable littered with cleavers, saws and other instruments of butchery, a pile of offal and bones, and a set of hooks from which dangle a variety of unrecognizable sides of meat.

Inhabitants:

1. 6 goblins: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 5, 4, 4, 3, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.

SL4-27: Food Storage

The goblins use this chamber to store the food they have collected from area SL4-28. It is stuffed with drying mushrooms (white ribs, cloud caps and 1-8 specimens of aqua vitae - see new flora for all). In addition, twenty-one lizard corpses of various sizes hang on a rack by the north wall. On hooks set into the west wall rest six 'pickers' (12'-long poles with blades, used to 'pick' mushrooms) plus four short bows with quivers of arrows. The arrows all have thin ropes attached to them (for shooting and recovering lizards). The tunnel leading west (SL4-27A) is covered by a thick net of woven rope, designed to prevent unwanted visitors from below from accessing the Warrens.

SL4-27A: Connecting Tunnel

This exploratory tunnel was begun several hundred years ago and, to the goblins' delight, was found to connect to a valuable source of food. There is a 25% chance that 4-6 goblins are crouching at the western edge of the tunnel overlooking the shaft (SL4-28).

A woven rope-and-slat bridge extends over the chasm to area SL4-29 allowing the goblins access to the largest mushroom shelf.

Inhabitants:

1. 4-6 goblins: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 5, 4, 4, 3, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. They also have short bows with arrows (ropes attached to the arrows) and 'pickers' (See SL4-27).

SL4-28: Vertical Shaft, leading down to 6-112

This cavern was formed close to three millennia ago as a burn hole when the crew quarters module of the Beacon (see 6-112) plunged downward through the cliff. Although the upper reaches of the shaft were eventually closed by seismic activity, a long section still remains, one that extends 475' feet from the Goblin Warrens to Level 6 (6-112).

Ledges and shelves dot the shaft, each containing a thick grove of giant mushrooms. Some of these are detailed (SL4-29, SL4-30, SL4-61 to SL4-63), but others are not. The shaft is also home to a large population of small lizards, which the goblins hunt with bows and arrows.

SL4-29: Mushroom Shelf

This is the largest of the shelves that dot the vertical shaft (SL4-28). A rope-and-slats ladder connects this shelf to area SL4-27A. The goblins carefully cultivate this patch of mushrooms, as it provides quality eating from its white ribs and cloud caps (see new flora).

SL4-30: Mushroom Shelf

This narrow shelf is harder for the goblins to access, and as a result they rarely visit it. Among the cloud caps and white ribs are eight specimens of aqua vitae mushrooms (see new flora for all). Buried in the mulch are a plasteel box containing six Arden Vul cakes (see Arden Vul items) and a rudishva fire extinguisher (see new technological items).

SL4-31: Blocked Tunnel, eventually leading to

SL5-24

Although this tunnel is currently impassable, the prisoners in area SL4-32 are busily excavating it. Within 1-3 weeks it will be cleared enough to allow passage down to area SL5-24.

SL4-32: Cave with Tunnel

The goblins are trying to expand their domains by digging in this area. Five prisoners shackled together at the feet by a thick chain are using pickaxes and mattocks to try to expand the cave. They are watched by a trio of goblin guards. At the moment, this cave serves as the prisoners's residence during their rest periods; the goblins attach the chain around their feet to a staple in the wall, and the prisoners sleep on the rocky floor. Once SL4-31 is fully cleared, Weskenim will have this area improved as a guard area.

Inhabitants:

1. 3 goblin guards: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 5, 5, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.
2. 2 goblin prisoners, imprisoned for arguing for peace with the beastmen: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 3, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.
3. 1 lizardman prisoner: SZ M; AL N; AC 5; MV 60', 120' swimming; HD 2+1; HP 15; #AT 1 or 3; Dmg by weapon, or 1-2/1-2/1-8.
4. 1 human Set cultist prisoner: SZ M; AL LE; AC 10; MV 120'; HD 1; HP 4; #AT 1; Dmg by weapon.
5. Kurab, a gagged Set deacon (see new monsters) prisoner: SZ M; AL LE; AC 10; MV 120'; HD 6; HP 21 (max 31); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Kurab has no possessions at the moment. He has prayed for the following spells, although the gag ensures he cannot effectively cast them: command, cure light wounds (x2), cause fear, protection from good; chant, hold person, know alignment, resist fire, silence 15' radius; animate dead, dispel magic, cause blindness; cause serious wounds.

SL4-33: Interrogation Chamber

Agoravere, the official goblin interrogator, operates in this chamber just off the Judgment Hall (SL4-34). The finished walls were long ago stripped of decoration; Agoravere has his living space in the eastern fragment of corridor, while his three assistants inhabit the northern fragment. Three low tables fitted with restraints occupy the center of the room; Agoravere has a fine collection of razor-sharp knives and other tools with which to aid the recall of unfortunate prisoners. Three sets of shackles have been attached to the western wall. One of them holds Elena, a paladin, while another holds the near-dead body of Carloman Fleetfingers, formerly the second in command to Phlebotomas Plumthorn (see 3-5) but captured on a raid; the third is empty. Freeing Carloman and returning him to Plumthorn wins the grudging friendship of the halflings; such a service would also exempt the PCs from the license charged by Plumthorn.

Inhabitants:

1. Agoravere the interrogator, a goblin sub-chief (as a hobgoblin): SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 1+1; HP 7; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8 (long sword). Possessions: long sword.
2. 3 goblins: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 5, 3, 2; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.
3. Elena, 4th-level female Archontean paladin of Ardenia Tessaeron: SZ M; AL LG; AC 10; MV 120'; HD 4; HP 19 (max 34); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 14, INT 11, WIS 15, DEX 10, CON 15, CHA 17. She has no equipment.
4. Carloman Fleetfingers, 3rd-level male halfling fighter: SZ S; AL CE; AC 9; MV 90'; HD 3; HP 6 (max 26); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 16, INT 8, WIS 11, DEX 15, CON 16, CHA 9. He has no possessions.

Treasure:

Agoravere keeps a bag of holding (largest size) tucked into his bed-clothes. Inside are the following: 26 gp, 68 sp, 128 cp, his father's silver razor (25 gp), a wax-sealed cheddar he's keeping for a special occasion (worthless, it went off a long time ago), 6 iron flasks containing his urine, a large moss agate (50 gp), a mink pelt (3 gp), a pouch filled with pulled-off fingernails, a long coil of thin gold wire (65 gp), a dried badger penis, two ivory dice piped with obsidian (50 gp), and a bundle of twine-bound twigs containing a wand of wonder (34 charges).

SL4-34: Judgment Hall and Lesser Obsidian Gates

The arch from the Great Hall (SL4-40) leads to this smoky, 20' chamber. It is dominated by four cages which hang from thick chains in each corner. A pair of 15'-tall, 10'-wide obsidian doors looms along the western wall. Centuries of smoke and grime have served to completely efface the original frescoes on the north and south walls (which, if somehow restored, show Thothian priests directing workers in construction projects). In addition to the cages, six iron posts are driven into the stone floor in the center of the room; to these are shackled additional beings requiring punishment. Young goblins like to hang around here, mocking the prisoners and hurling trash at them. A pair of guards is stationed at both the north and south exits from the Judgment Hall.

Prisoners: The hanging cages are occupied with the following: 1) Perrilk, a son of the lizardman king; 2) Narbo, a magic user captured by the goblins; 3) a heqeti; and 4) Purbrin, Weskenim's rebellious half-brother. Chained to the punishment stakes are two goblins caught thieving, a beastman deserter, and a sobbing merchant from Narsileon.

Lesser Obsidian Gates: These are not the iconic Gates (for which see 5-6D), but rather a copy made by the Archontean in homage to the originals. These impressive valves are carved with arcane symbols appropriate to Thoth, Set, and the Imperial Cult (although the gold that filled them was stripped away long ago). The double doors radiate magic strongly, and are enchanted with a permanent dispel magic spell. Any spell directed against them must be cast by a 12th-level magic user to affect the doors; there is a 5% chance, moreover, that magical items brought within 10' of the gates will be disenchanting.

The gates have not been opened in well over a thousand years, mostly because they feature an extremely complex lock. Four obsidian posts protrude from the doors at eye level, two on each of the double doors. The posts are exactly 8" apart. Close inspection of the area around the posts reveals small steel needles extending only a 1/8" above the surface of the door. The doors open only by placing four golden, grooved disks on the posts and rotating them in the proper direction against the steel needles (like a vinyl record album). Clockwise from the upper left post, the disks must be spun in the following ways: 1) a full rotation counter-clockwise; 2) a half rotation clockwise; 3) two rotations clockwise; and 4) a full rotation clockwise and then a full rotation counter-clockwise. The remaining disks necessary to open the gates may be found in SL4-48, an area that the goblins conveniently consider taboo (it is also possible to discover other disks elsewhere in the Halls - see areas 3-63, 5-85, and SL4-46).

The goblins are simultaneously proud of the gates and afraid of what lies behind them. They present the gates as a great work of their ancestors, but have no idea how to open them.

Inhabitants:

1. 4 goblin guards: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 6, 5, 5, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.
2. Perrilk, a lizardman and the son of Chief Sgraal (SL5-36): SZ M; AL N; AC 5; MV 60', 120' swimming; HD 2+1; HP 7 (max 13); #AT 1 or 3; Dmg by weapon, or 1-2/1-2/1-8.
3. Narbo, 4th-level male elven magic user: SZ M; AL N; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 4; HP 8 (max 12); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 9, INT 17, WIS 14, DEX 16, CON 9, CHA 10. Narbo's spellbook is currently in SL4-42.
4. 1 heqeti hopper (see new monsters), as a 4th-level fighter: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60', 150' swimming; HD 4; HP 11 (max 21); #AT 2; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 1-6 (bite). Special attacks: hop; +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice.
5. Purbrin, half-brother of King Weskenim (SL4-22) (as gnoll): SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 14; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8.
6. 2 goblin prisoners: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 5, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.
7. A beastman deserter (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 10; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 2 (max 6); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Special attacks: tactics.
8. Lake, a male Thorcin merchant from Narsileon whose debts led to his imprisonment: SZ M; AL CN; AC 10; MV 120'; HD 1-6 HP; HP 2 (max 4); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon.

SL4-35: Statuary Corridor

This broad, 15'-tall corridor contains four 6'-tall, bronze statues of laborers; one is of a goblin wielding a hammer and chisel, two are of humans wielding pick-axes, and the fourth is of a human employing mason's tools. The statues are idealized, but well-executed. The goblin statue could be 'sold' to King Weskenim (SL4-22) for 500 gp and substantial goodwill, or all four statues could be sold outside the Halls for 750 gp each. From the western side, the lesser obsidian gates (see SL4-34) may be opened with ease, and without recourse to the complicated locking mechanism found on the eastern side.

SL4-36: Archontean Guard Post

This former guard post features still-vibrant frescoes depicting Archontean guardsmen watching over laborers who are excavating and shaping stone. The chamber contains a circular wooden table and six stools, along with a rare suit of imperial field plate (see Arden Vul items) on a rack by the door.

SL4-37: Hidden Stairs to the Surface (AV-16)

A lost Archontean 'back route' to the surface of the ruined city commences here. These stairs wind upwards via numerous landings and short corridors for 725', before emerging in a currently-buried cellar in the ruins (AV-16). Should PCs open the route from this staircase to the Goblin Warrens, the goblins will quickly move to seize control of the stairs, thus providing them with access to the surface and a major supply of food and trade opportunities.

SL4-38: Kitchens

The stench of meat and entrails emanates from this chamber, where a team of goblins prepares food to be cooked on the great fire (SL4-40A) and to be consumed. Any former decorations are long gone, and the walls drip with grease and dust. Two 12'-long, 4'-wide trestle tables occupy the northern half of the room; around them caper six goblin chefs, chopping and dicing meats with cleavers that appear much too big for them. The chefs's sleeping quarters are found in the western corridor fragment, while a third table is the site of baking and vegetable preparation. A ceramic stove occupies the eastern edge of the finished chamber, while a curtain to the south obscures entry to SL4-39.

The chefs are responsible for preparing meals for the goblin elites (the inhabitants of SL4-12 and SL4-19 through SL4-25), and a stream of servers is often found darting out of this room for the upper level. Many of the clans also commission the chefs to prepare their meals, especially when hunting has been good. As a result, the chefs are busy almost all the time.

Inhabitants:

1. 10 goblin chefs, armed with cleavers and spoons: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 7, 6, 5(x3), 4, 4, 3, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.
2. 6 goblin servers: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 5, 4, 4, 3, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.

SL4-39: Supply Cave

This two-lobed cave serves as the main food storage site. The western lobe is filled with rickety shelves and dangling sides of curing meat. It is possible to find almost any food item, whether fresh, dried, or preserved, among the litter. The hungry should beware, however, as there is a flat 20% that any item has spoiled and will produce a bad case of food poisoning: -3 to all attributes for two days plus halved movement. The eastern lobe is chilled by a pair of cold rocks (see new magic items) enchanted decades ago by a friendly magic user in return for lodging; as a result the temperature is close to 40 degrees Fahrenheit here. The goblins aren't exactly sure what needs to be 'made yucky' by cold, so the area is less cluttered: still, visitors to the Halls often require their food be stored here, and there is a nice selection of fresh-ish meats, some unattractive but nourishing pies, and three casks of excellent wine (100 gp each). A pair of barrels just inside the cold zone provide the cleaning facility for the kitchens.

Treasure:

Cold rocks (see new magic items); hidden under one of the cleaning barrels is a pouch containing 14 gp, and a small, but flawless, ruby worth 1,000 gp.

SL4-40: Lower Great Hall

The lower Great Hall is a hive of activity, noise, and motion. Although the great frescoes (see SL4-5) are gone, the magnificent craftsmanship that produced the Hall itself, as well as the arches leading out from it and the fountain and plinth which dominate it, is still apparent, even despite the ravages of time. A large colony of many hundreds of small (3"-long) white lizards shares the Hall with the goblins, who use them for the occasional snack; these lizards can be seen scampering brazenly over almost every portion of the Hall (save the fire pit at SL4-40A and the statute at SL4-40D). In addition to the lizards, a flock of goats some 30 strong roams the halls; each goat is marked with a spot of paint to designate which clan owns it. Poaching goats is a serious offense!

The goblins use the floor of the Hall for many activities (cooking, socializing, training with weapons, trading with visitors, etc.). Approved visitors (see SL4-4) will be directed down the great ladder (SL4-6) and told to join the throng on the floor of the Great Hall; as the goblins love to watch big visitors negotiate the tricky bridges (SL4-9), they tend to 'forget' to tell visitors about the circular stair (SL4-13). Visitors are expected to pitch camp somewhere on the floor and at their own risk, although valuables may be stored with Leifcrim the merchant for a price (see SL4-40F). A pair of eunuch ogres help keep the peace (SL4-40G), although mostly they sit around lazily.

Inhabitants:

At any given moment the following persons will be present in the Great Hall (these are in addition to the inhabitants mentioned in the sub-regions of the Hall):

1. 40 goblins engaged in sundry mundane activities: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7(x6), 6(7), 5(x7), 4(x7), 3(x7), 2(x6); #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.
2. 10 members of the Great Army (SL4-42) engaged in some sort of martial practice: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 7, 6, 5(x3), 4, 4, 3, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.
3. 2 goblin badger-handlers: for stats see SL4-50.
4. 3-6 visiting merchants (see SL4-40F)
5. 1-4 groups of other visitors, determined from the tables below
6. 30 goats: SZ M; AL N; AC 7, MV 150'; HD 1+2; HP 8, 8, 7(x5), 6(x5), 5(x5), 4(x5), 3(x5), 2(x3); #AT 1; Dmg 1-3. Special attacks: charge.
7. King Weskenim, accompanied by Palestrim, Skimmel, Reeflik and a eunuch ogre guard (25%) –see SL4-22 for stats for all.

Table 1: Visitors to the Great Hall

D20	Group and Stats
1-2	A beastman patrol, including: 1. 6 beastman troopers (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 8, 7, 7, 6, 6, 5; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spears; short swords; short bows 2. 1 beastman sergeant (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 2+2; HP 15; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 or 2-5. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spear; war hammer
3-4	7 lizardmen visiting from SL5: SZ M; AL N; AC 5; MV 60', 120' swimming; HD 2+1; HP 16, 15, 15, 14, 14, 13, 13; #AT 1 or 3; Dmg 1-6 (club) and 1-6 (javelin), or 1-2/1-2/1-8. Possessions: clubs, javelins.
5-7	3-6 lesser varumani (see new monsters), visiting from Level 7: SZ L; AL LE; AC 3; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 59, 58, 57, 55, 54, 50; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (club, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8 th -level fighters or 8 th -level magic users, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: club; shield
8-11	A Set patrol, including: 1. 1 Set deacon (see new monsters), as a 6 th -level Archontean cleric of Set: SZ M; AL LE; AC 3; MV 90'; HD 6; HP 42; #AT 1; Dmg 3-8 ( mace +1 ). Possessions: Set armor +1 (see Arden Vul items); deacon's was stick (see new magic items); footman's mace +1 ; an amulet of protection against normal missiles (see new magic items); a potion of extra healing ; a potion of glibness ; a scroll of curse ; gold holy symbol of Set (150 gp). Spells prayed for: command, cure light wounds (x2), cause fear, protection from good; chant, hold person, know alignment, resist fire, silence 15' radius; animate dead, dispel magic, cause blindness; cause serious wounds. 2. 6 Set guardsmen (see new monsters), as 2 nd -level Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 16, 16, 15, 12; #AT 1, Dmg 2-7 (mace), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: red scale mail and wooden shield; footman's
12-16	A party of human merchants, come from outside Arden Vul to trade, including: 1. 6 Thorcin merchants (3 male, 3 female): SZ M; AL NE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-6 HP; HP 5, 4, 4, 3, 3, 2; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (short sword). Possessions: scale mail; short sword. 2. 6 guards, as 2 nd -level male Thorcin fighters: SZ M; AL N; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 16, 14, 14, 13, 12, 10; #AT 1; Dmg: 3-8 (footman's mace), or 2-7 (spear) or 1-4 (light crossbow). Special: +1 damage due to STR. Possessions: chain mail; footman's mace; spear; light crossbow, 16 bolts

17-18	Party of NPC adventurers (select from NPC appendix)
19-20	Special (roll on Table 1A)

Table 1A: Special Vistors

2D8	Visitors and Stats
2	Tredgeris the Dapifer, with 3 guardsmen (see 6-75). He is trying to recruit teams of goblin fighters for the Arena (6-85): 1. Tredgeris, see stats at 6-75. 2. 3 male Thorcin arena guardsmen, as 2 nd -level fighters: SZ M; AL NE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 15; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8 (long sword) or 1-6 (spear) or 1-4 (light crossbow). Possessions: scale mail; long swords; spears; light crossbow and 20 bolts; purse with 33 sp and 9 gp each. In addition to their mail byrnies, and simple helmets, they wear a light green surcoat emblazoned with a black image of a six-sided die
3	NPC magic user and flunkies (select from NPC appendix)
4	A questing cleric with four men-at-arms: 1. Adric, 5 th -level male Wisikin cleric of Odin: SZ M; AL NG; AC 0; MV 90'; HD 5; HP 34; #AT 1; Dmg 4-9 ( footman's mace +2 ). Abilities: STR 14, INT 11, WIS 17, DEX 16, CON 11, CHA 7. Possessions: banded mail +2; mace +2 . Prepared spells: command, cure light wounds (x2), remove fear, protection from evil; augury, chant, hold person, silence 15' radius, speak with animals; dispel magic, speak with dead. 2. 4 guardsmen, 1 st -level male Wisikin fighters: SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1; HP 9, 8, 7, 7; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8 (long sword), or 1-6 (short bow). Possessions: ring mail and shield; long sword; short bow and 20 arrows.
5	Kerbog Khan (SL12-25), inhabiting one of his bipedal exploration automatons (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 6; HP 43; #AT 2; Dmg 1-6/1-6; MR 40%. Special defenses: immune to cold and fire.
6	Dwarves searching for the forge of Zhorak (8-100): 5 3 rd -level dwarven fighters (3 female, 2 male): SZ M; AL N; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 3; HP 30, 25, 24; #AT 1; Dmg 2-9 (battle axe). Special: +1 damage due to STR. Possessions: chain mail and shield, battle axe. One has a scarab of protection .
7	An erinyes, disguised as a human and on a mission to be determined by the GM: 1. 1 erinyes: SZ M; AL LE; AC 2; MV 60', 210' flying; HD 6+6; HP 41; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8; MR 30%. Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: poison; rope of entanglement; cause fear; charm person; suggestion.; Special defenses: half damage from cold and gas; immune to fire. Special: illusion: animate dead; know alignment; detect invisible; locate object; invisibility; polymorph self; produce flame; teleport without error; summon another erinyes (25% chance)

8	A party of elves searching for Erist Ellagelsson (SL6-5): <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Jiltorin Trillissason, 5th-level male elf thief: SZ M; AL N; AC 2; MV 120'; HD 5; HP 24; #AT 1; Dmg 3-8 (short sword +2), 1-6 (short bow), 1-4 (darts of sleeping). Abilities: STR 12, INT 15, WIS 13, DEX 17, CON 13, CHA 15. Thief skills: PP 60%, OL 47%, F/RT 40%, MS 50%, HS 63%, HN 25%, CW 90%, RL 25%. Possessions: leather armor +1; short sword +2; ring of protection +2; short bow, 20 arrows; brooch of confident action (see new magic items), and 3 darts of sleeping (see new magic items).</li> <li>2. 4 2nd-level female elf fighters: SZ M; AL N; AC 4; MV 120'; HD 2; HP 19, 18, 17, 17; #AT 1; Dmg 2-9 (long sword), 1-6 (long bow). Special: +1 damage due to STR. Possessions: elven chain and shield; long sword; long bow with 20 arrows</li> </ol>
9	A succubus, disguised as a human and on a mission of the GM's devising: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. 1 succubus: SZ M; AL CE; AC 0; MV 120'; 180' flying (Class C); HD 6; HP 40; #AT 2; Dmg 1-3/1-3; MR 70%. Constant abilities: invisibility. Special attacks: energy drain; charm person; suggestion. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; half damage from cold, electricity, fire, and gas. Special: cause darkness 5'; become ethereal; ESP; clairaudience; shape change; gate (40% chance)</li> </ol>
10-12	A party of humans on a diplomatic mission from an organization based outside the Halls. For example, Nicetas the bailiff from Castle Burdock (See map BV-Castle Burdock), with a troop of 10 men-at-arms. <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Nicetas the bailiff, 4th-level male Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL N; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 4; HP 30; #AT 1; Dmg 3-10 (battle axe +1). Abilities: STR 16, INT 11, WIS 9, DEX 11, CON 16, CHA 13. Possessions: battle axe +1; chain hauberk, wooden shield; silver amulet of office (25 gp).</li> <li>2. 10 Archontean men-at-arms, 5 male and 5 female: SZ M; AL NG; AC 7; MV 120'; HD 1; HP 8, 7, 7, 6, 6, 6, 5, 5, 4; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (spear). Possessions: leather armor; spear.</li> </ol>
13-14	Kobold emissaries from the Thicket (see map BV-4) <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. kobold leader (as goblin): SZ S; AL LE, AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 4; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (short sword). Possessions: short sword, shield.</li> <li>2. 9 kobolds: SZ S; AL LE, AC 7; MV 60'; HD 1-4 HP; HP 4, 4, 3, 3, 3, 2, 2, 1; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (short sword or spear). Possessions: short sword(x4) or spear (x5), shield.</li> </ol>
15	5 doppelgangers, in human (33%) or dwarven form (66%): SZ M; AL N; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 4; HP 25, 24, 23, 22, 22; #AT 1; Dmg 1-12 or 1-8 (long sword) Special attacks: surprise 4 in 6. Special defenses: immune to charm and sleep; saves as a 10th-level fighter. Special: ESP. Possessions: chain mail; long swords. One carries a potion of rock melting (see new magic items).
16	Unusual race of GM's choice

Table 2: Primary Reason for Presence in the Goblin Warrens

D20	Motive	Modifier to Table 3
1-3	Buy goods (roll on Table 4 below)	-2
4-10	Sell goods (roll on Table 4 below)	-2
11	Acquire or sell information	+3
12	Rescue missing friends from Halls	+1
13	Negotiate alliance or favor with King Weskenim (SL4-22)	+2
14	Expedition to find an artifact	+2
15	Expeditions to a lost tomb	+1
16	Hire selves as mercenaries	+0
17	Meeting with a third party (i.e., not with goblins)	+3
18-19	Hire guide(s)	+1
20	Pose prophetic questions to Rizzit (SL4-15)	0

Table 3: Subsidiary or Ulterior Motives (Roll d20 and add modifier from Table 2)

D20	Subsidiary Motive
1-4	None
5	Assassination
6	Abduction of third party
7	Espionage against goblins
8	Theft, against goblins
9	Theft, against another visitor
10	Rescue a prisoner (SL4-32, SL4-33) or harem-girl (SL4-20)
11-12	Penetrate behind the Lesser Obsidian Gates (SL4-34)
13	Buy/sell important and/or secret artifact
14	Locate, and either slay (50%) or negotiate with (50%), one of the wizards living within Arden Vul
15	Track rival group into Halls, either for secret meeting (25%) or ambush (75%)
16	Plan a major war, within or without Halls
17	Plunder an important tomb, thanks to a rare treasure map
18	Subvert King Weskenim (SL4-22) or his ministers
19	Foment uprising against King Weskenim (SL4-22)
20+	Roll twice on this table

Table 4: Goods for Sale

D100	Trade Goods	Quality/Rarity
1-15	Cereals (food)	Average/low
16-25	Alcohol (wine, spirits)	Average/average
26-32	Mushroom food products	High/high
33-35	Green friend (see new flora)	High/average

36-40	Gems	High/low
41-43	Miscellaneous objects looted from Arden Vul (See Tables 4A and 4B)	High/average
44-50	Weapons, mundane	High/low
51-55	Armor, mundane	High/average
56-58	Spell scrolls	High/average
59-62	Potions	High/average
63-64	Treasure maps	Low/low
65-78	Meat, fresh or cured	Average/average
79-85	Mundane manufactured goods (e.g. rope, barrels, etc.)	Average/average
86-90	Metal ore	Average/average
91-97	Mundane metal items	Average/low
98-100	Special (roll on Table 5 below)

Table 5: Special Objects for Sale

D20	Object	Value, per item
1-2	Exotic poisons	100-600
3-5	Exotic mushrooms with powerful pharmacological properties	20-200
6-8	Exotic animal parts used in spells or research (e.g. spider silk, unicorn hair, troll liver, etc.)	100-400 or as appropriate
9-10	Miscellaneous, one-property magic items	Varies
11-12	Enchanted weapons	Varies
13-14	Blackmail information	100-400
15-16	Keys, allegedly to iconic sites (e.g. the Obsidian Gates)	10-100
17	Rudishva technology, 25% chance to still be operable	200-500
18	Personal objects stolen from powerful personage in Halls	Varies
19	Unusual or high-level spells	Varies
20	Piece to powerful artifact, rest must still be recovered	Varies

SL4-40A: Firepit

One of the three main features of the lower Hall, this massive firepit serves as the main source of light and heat for the Hall. Originally a 10' circle cut into the floor of the Hall, where a lesser fire elemental was bound by ancient wizards, the firepit now sprawls over a wider area. The modern pit has at its core the same fire elemental, but the goblins like burning things when they can, and so the elemental has been obscured by a huge pile of charcoal, on top of which wood, trash, bones, and anything else the goblins can find gets tossed.

According to Weskenim's decree, any goblin may use the firepit for cooking, and so there are always 3-12 goblins roasting some sort of meat on sticks over the fire. Of these, 25% will be the actual chefs, who can be hired by wealthier individuals to prepare 'special' meals (in addition to their duties as cooks to the king and other elites)

Inhabitants:

- 3-12 goblins: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 7, 6, 6, 5(x3), 4(x3), 3, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.
- 1 fire elemental: SZ L; AL N; AC 2; MV 120'; HD 8; HP 51; #AT 1; Dmg 3-24. Special attacks: combustion. Special defenses: +2 weapons or better to hit.

SL4-40B: Goat Pen

This corner of the hall is enclosed by an iron cage set into the stone walls. Inside are 15 goats, bleating loudly. These are the goats whose ownership is disputed. Until that fact can be sorted out, they are stuck inside this pen.

Inhabitants:

- 15 goats: SZ M; AL N; AC 7, MV 150'; HD 1+2; HP 8, 7, 7, 6, 6, 5(x3), 4(x3), 3, 3, 2, 2; #AT 1; Dmg 1-3. Special attacks: charge.

SL4-40C: Beetle Pen

Weskenim had the bright idea to breed giant fire-beetles after his scouts caught a few. This pen contains ten hungry fire beetles. The goblins are a bit intimidated by the beetles, and would listen to offers concerning their sale or use.

Inhabitants:

- 10 fire beetles: SZ S; AL N; AC 4; MV 120'; HD 1+2; HP 10, 10, 9, 9, 8, 8, 7, 7, 6, 6; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8.

SL4-40D: Old Plinth and New Statue

In the center of the Hall is an ancient, 3'-tall circular plinth of pink marble. On top of the plinth is a statue that is obviously much newer than the plinth, carved out of simple granite. It shows a 6'-tall, male human dressed in chain mail and a velvet cowl who is gesturing to his right with a 3' baton. Those who have previously encountered modern Priscians in the Halls might conclude that this statue is a rendering of a Priscian war mage, but they would be incorrect; he is a Sortian, petrified in antiquity.

The 'statue' is actually the body of the Sortian, Julianus the Red, who was petrified in an encounter with a basilisk. The goblins found the 'statue', and brought it back to the Great Hall, where they installed in on the plinth. The ordinary goblins love 'the Pointer', as they call Julianus, and often dress him up in dramatic, flowery, goblin-style clothing. He has even been painted several times, although Weskenim always commands him to be restored to 'stony perfection' after a couple of weeks. The Priscian ambassadors in SL4-44 have heard of the statue from Palestrim, and would like to remove him without causing a ruckus; given the goblins' fondness for their mascot, this is proving more difficult than they would have thought. Should a stone to flesh spell be cast on Julianus, he will be restored to his former state; although grateful, he will not dally with benefactors, nor will he be impressed with the modern Priscian ideology.

Inhabitants:

- Julianus the Red, a Sortian from antiquity, as a 7th-level Arch-ontean magic user: SZ M; AL LN; AC 2; MV 120'; HD 7; HP 21; #AT 1; Dmg 3-5 (darts +2). Abilities: STR 11, INT 17, WIS 15, DEX 16, CON 11, CHA 9. Possessions: Sortian chain mail +1 (see new magic items); 10 darts +2; two glass spheres of arcane assistance (protection, arcane warding) (see new magic items); wand of fire (17 charges). Julianus has no memorized spells, and his spell book is long gone; he speaks Mithric and an ancient dialect of Thorcin.

SL4-40E: Fountain

This large fountain and pool dominates the east side of the Hall. The fountain proper is a cylinder of water powered by a small water elemental bound to a chamber 10' below the floor of the Hall. The pool around the fountain is 3' above the floor of the Hall and contains cool, clean water.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 half-sized water elemental: SZ S; AL N; AC 2; MV 60', 180' in water; HD 4; HP 26; #AT 1; Dmg 2-20. Special attacks: affect boats. Special defenses: +2 or better weapons to hit.

SL4-40F: Merchants' Corner

This corner of the Hall is devoted to trade and barter with outsiders. The overseer of the area is Master Leifcrim, a halfling merchant. He licenses traders (10 gp for a month) and provides them with a rickety table under the awning at which they may hawk their wares. Leifcrim operates his own trading concern from a beautiful ebon-wood desk next to the door to SL4-47. The current traders present here are listed below. Most of the traders have only a limited sample of their wares present on the table, and prefer to negotiate with potential customers before visiting area SL4-47 to procure a specific item that the customer desires.

Master Leifcrim

Personality: Outgoing, enthusiastic, easy-going

Secret? A close ally of King Weskenim (SL4-22); reports to king every other day.

Lockbox: 6,402 gp, 678 sp.

Might Buy: Cats (for the king), gems, fancy or unusual clothing, magic items, old but beautiful furniture, food delicacies

Goods for Sale: He sells jewelry (125% of base value; he has 1-12 pieces in stock), mundane weapons (50% to have any normal weapon, cost 150% of base), gems (125% of base; he has 3-18 gems in stock), and a collection of 'curios', including a sapphire Sortian eye (see new magic items), an orange rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items), a pack of tarot cards, a returning pebble (see new magic items), one of the control rods to the eggs found at 4-85 (Leifcrim asks 115 gp for this oddity), and a ring of three wishes with one wish remaining.

Inhabitants:

Leifcrim, 5th-level male halfling thief: SZ S; AL LN; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 5; HP 24; #AT 1; Dmg 4-7 (dagger +3). Abilities: STR 10, INT 14, WIS 11, DEX 17, CON 11, CHA 12. Thief skills: PP 60%, OL 57%, F/RT 45%, MS 55%, HS 51%, HN 25%, CW 75%, RL 20%. Possessions: dagger +3; leather armor; cloak of the dwarves (see new magic items); key to SL4-47.

Jobim the Brewer

Personality: Easily distracted, dotty, kindly

Secret? Trades with the halflings for their new venom (see area 3-4), against the king's orders

Lockbox: 378 gp, 449 sp

Might Buy: Odd mushrooms, potion ingredients, monster parts

Goods for Sale: A variety of brews, including Hak's mushroom ale (2 sp/pint), Jobim's lichen ale (1 sp/pint), Jobim's purple wax lager, which offers a strong, almost paralytic buzz (10 sp/pint), imported brandy (7 gp/shot). He also offers a selection of potions of healing (150% of cost), poisons, and other relatively simple non-magical potions (e.g., a 'love philter' for 10 sp; a hair tonic for 10 sp, etc. None of these are efficacious). He has 3 vials of Mortality poison (see 3-4) as well, which he will only sell to trusted customers (at 125 gp per vial).

Inhabitants:

1. Jobim, goblin brewer: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 4; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.

Temrin the Artist

Personality: Eager, puppy-like, easily tricked

Secret? Can limn magical maps. If an object is described to him, he has the supernatural ability to sketch a quick map from area SL4-40 to that location. The map does not include secret doors or side areas; it depicts the main route to the desired object. Specific details of the object are necessary for the map to be accurate (i.e., one cannot ask him to locate 'big treasure'; one must describe an object in size, shape, color, etc.). He might reveal this information to someone who commissions at least one portrait and who praises the quality of his work. He will ask 500 gp per magical map although they are easily worth three times that sum.

Lockbox: 64 gp, 156 sp

Might Buy: Nothing. He's a painter, and is desperate for customers.

Goods for Sale: Returning from a visit to Narsileon, Temrin is attempting to interest his fellows in portraiture, with little success. He has a variety of media (animal scales, a few canvasses, glass) on which he is willing to paint, and a nice selection of paints in a variety of colors. What he does not have are many customers.

Inhabitants:

Temrin, goblin artist: SZ S; AL LN; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 4; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.

Thorgrim the Easy

Personality: His nickname, 'easy', is a joke, as Thorgrim is dour, short-tempered, and irascible

Secret? He's looking for the iron circlet of Ghanor (see new magic items; currently located at 3-127A)

Lockbox: 439 gp, 197 sp

Might Buy: Old Archontean artifacts, particularly books, maps, and other hints as to the iron circlet's location

Goods for Sale: Dried meat 8 gp/lb, dried rice 8 gp/lb, sugar or flour 8gp/lb, sweet pastries (5 sp each), loaves of bread 25 sp/loaf, imported Archontean wine (5-30 gp/bottle), imported rye whiskey (190 gp/bottle), imported corn whiskey (100 gp/bottle), imported Narsileon IPA (50 sp/gallon). There is also a 75% chance he currently has a single exemplar of each ordinary item off the general equipment list (for 175% of cost). He has no magic items for sale.

Inhabitants:

1. Thorgrim the Easy, 2nd-level male Wiskin human fighter: SZ M; AL N; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 17; #AT 1; Dmg 2-9 (long sword), 2-7 (spear); 1-4 (light crossbow). Abilities: STR 16, INT 11, WIS 9, DEX 11, CON 17, CHA 7. Possessions: chain mail; long sword; spear; light crossbow and 15 bolts; djed amulet (see new magic items).

Claudine of Narsileon

Personality: Reserved, observant, devious

Secret? She's a deacon of Set, sent by the Set cult (e.g. 4-2) to infiltrate the Goblin Warrens and generally sow chaos

Lockbox: 941 gp, 312 sp

Might Buy: Archontean artifacts (movables, bits of magical or scholarly ephemera, jewelry, coins, etc.). She will also buy information, particularly about goblin and halfling movements and plans.

Goods for Sale: Short swords, maces, axes (4 each), and spears (12). Also three sets of chain mail and three suits of leather armor. All weapons and armor are sold at 150% base value. She has a good collection of spelunking gear: rope, picks, harnesses, mallets, spikes, etc.

Inhabitants:

Claudine of Narsileon, a Set Deacon, as a 6th-level female Archontean cleric of Set: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 6, HP 40; #AT 1; Dmg: 3-8 (mace +1). Abilities: STR 13; INT 15; WIS 15; DEX 9; CON 11; CHA 14. Possessions: chain mail (instead of Set armor); mace +1; a deacon's was stick (hidden in her packs - see new magic items); an amulet of protection against normal missiles (see new magic items), a potion of extra healing, a potion of glibness, and a scroll of curse. Spells prayed for: command, cure light wounds (x2), cause fear, protection from good; chant, hold person, know alignment, resist fire, silence 15' radius; animate dead, dispel magic, cause blindness; cause serious wounds.

SL4-40G: Ogre Guards

Two of the eunuch ogre guards from SL4-25 are posted in this corridor fragment at all times. They are bored and lazy, and spend most of their days playing mumblety-peg and shooting dice. Still, they will move swiftly if trouble breaks out in the Hall.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 eunuch ogres: SZ L; AL CE; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 4+1; HP 25, 22; #AT 1; Dmg 1-10, or by weapon.

SL4-41: Holding Cell

Visitors whose status and motives are uncertain are detained in this holding cell until Weskenim and his advisors can decide what to do with them. If the PCs are taken or rescued by the goblins they will end up here. Currently there are three adventurers here; their equipment is kept by the guards in SL4-42.

GM Note: The adventurers are searching for specimens of the rare midnight rose flower (see new flora). They grew enmeshed in a verbal confrontation with the goblins concerning the latter's treatment of their animals (e.g., the giant badgers at SL4-50), and so the goblins arrested them. Weskenim (SL4-22) is trying to decide what to do about the visitors.

Inhabitants:

1. Fedolcin, 6th-level male half-elf druid: SZ M; AL N; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 6; HP 37; #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 11; INT 13; WIS 17; DEX 16; CON 10; CHA 15. Prepared spells: animal friendship, detect magic, entangle, faerie fire, invisibility to animals, speak with animals; barkskin, charm person, create water, cure light wounds, locate plants; hold animal, neutralize poison, summon insects; animal summoning I.
2. Lillecin, 4th-level female half-elf druid: SZ M; AL N; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 4; HP 23; #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 9, INT 9, WIS 16, DEX 16, CON 11, CHA 17. Prepared spells: detect magic, entangle, locate animals, pass without trace, shillelagh, speak with animals; barkskin, charm mammal, obscurement, trip; protection from fire, stone shape.
3. Seldorin Seldorsson, 7th-level male elf thief: SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 120'; HD 7; HP 33; #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 15, INT 9, WIS 9, DEX 18, CON 11, CHA 9. Thief skills: PP 75%, OL 62%, F/RT 55%, MS 70%, HS 63%, HN 30%, CW 94%, RL 35%.

SL4-42: Barracks of the Great Army

This cave is accessed by a narrow ladder leading up 15' from the floor of the Great Hall. The 20'-high, unlit cavern is spacious and floored with sand. Dozens of hammocks are slung throughout the cave, which is also dotted with more pedestrian sleeping mats and 16 half-barrels, 8 used for waste and 8 for water. A total of 50 goblin warriors comprising Weskenim's 'Great Army' live here, although only 20 are present at any given time. The 'Great Army' is composed of otherwise unattached or particularly martial goblins, and as a result those poking their noses into this cave will be met with aggression, regardless of the status of those visitors in the Goblin Warrens. Only when guided by an important official will visitors be able to prowl through this cave without trouble.

Two unusual features mark the cavern. One is a rickety, 12'-tall wooden ladder which leans against the western wall. The other is a mat of goat-hide which covers an 8'-diameter hole in the floor near the ladder; this mat is hard to spot in the dark (treat as a concealed door), especially as a hammock swings directly over it. The hole leads down to SL4-43. The goblins present all know of the hole, but have strict orders from Weskenim (SL4-22) not to venture below. All they are willing to say is that some humans were discovered below and that Palestrim (SL4-23), the king's major-domo, travels below for long periods of time.

Just inside the entrance is a chest which contains the equipment of anyone detained in the holding cell (SL4-41).

Inhabitants:

1. 20 aggressive goblin warriors: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7 (x5), 6 (x7), 5 (x 5), 4 (x3); #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.

Treasure:

Each of the 50 bedrolls conceals 3-18 sp.

The chest holds the equipment of the adventurers detained in SL4-41; studded leather +1, leather armor +2, leather armor, 2 wooden shields, club +1, 6 throwing daggers, a scimitar, a sling +1, 30 sling bullets, a pair of daggers +2, two vials of oil, a potion of invisibility, a potion of locate object, a scroll of protection from demons, a sketch of the midnight rose flower (see new flora) with botanical notes describing its strange properties, a letter of introduction to high priestess Stephania (4-51), a pouch with sixteen pieces of amber carved as animals (100 gp each), 467 sp, 132 gp, and a 2-lb bar of platinum (500 gp).

Spell Book of Narbo (imprisoned at SL4-34): Armor, burning hands, charm person, comprehend languages, enlarge, grease, hold portal, identify, jump, magic missile, mount, protection from evil; continual light, darkness 15' radius, ESP, invisibility, locate object, scare, stinking cloud; clairvoyance, material, slow, water breathing.

SL4-43: Lost Corridor

This corridor has been forgotten due to the collapse of the tunnel connecting it to SL4-40. It is choked with dust and cobwebs, except for a clear path which leads from the hole at SL4-42 to the door to SL4-44 and thence to the stairs at SL4-45. At the western end of the corridor a skeletonized corpse protrudes from under the caved-in portion of the corridor. Although the body has been looted, it rests over (and obscures from casual view) a magical spear +2 named Bright-Blade (see new magic items).

Treasure:

Bright-Blade, spear +2 (see new magic items)

SL4-44: Priscian Embassy

A triad of Priscian war mages inhabits this chamber. The triad was sent by Jaracondus the Sprightly (9-63) to investigate the passage at 7-44A; the triad's exploration led them to SL4-45 and the goblins. Although initially surprised by this encounter, the Priscians have quickly established new short-term goals. Having heard from Palestrim, the king's major domo, of the statue (SL4-40) and floating head (SL4-58), they recognized them as Sortian and are scheming to recover both. They are also hoping to use persuasion, or, if necessary, magic, to enlist King Weskenim (SL4-22) as an ally against the troll thegn (7-30). They have yet to meet the king, as the latter is afraid of the thegn and thus has ordered the Priscians to remain here, out of sight. They have been negotiating instead with Palestrim, the king's major-domo (SL4-23), for over a month, and are starting to grow irritated by the slow pace of discussions.

Weskenim has appointed the chamber richly, as befits the importance of the visitors. Three costly rugs cover the floor, and the walls have been painted a cool shade of light blue. Three wooden beds, three desks, six chairs, a low table, and two locked chests complete the chamber.

Inhabitants:

1. Lukor, Priscian war mage (see new monsters) and member of Quintus, as a 7th-level Thorcin magic user: SZ M; AL LN; AC 2; MV 120'; HD 7; HP 20; #AT 1; Dmg 3-9 (Priscian gladius +2). Abilities: STR 11, INT 17, WIS 14, DEX 16, CON 9, CHA 9. Possessions: a key to 9-58; Priscian chain mail +1 (see new magic items); Priscian gladius +2 (see new magic items); gem of brightness; wand of frost (37 charges). Spells memorized: charm person, detect magic, enlarge, magic missile; continual light, ESP, locate object; dispel magic, hold person; charm monster.
2. Elanchian Gellisson, Priscian war mage (see new monsters) and member of Tertius, as a 5th-level female elf magic user: SZ M; AL LN; AC 3; MV 120'; HD 5; HP 13; #AT 1; Dmg 3-6 (staff +2). Abilities: STR 9, INT 16, WIS 13, DEX 16, CON 10, CHA 15. Possessions: Priscian chain mail (see new magic items); staff +2; wand of paralysis (10 charges); Priscian ring (see new magic items) enchanted with true seeing. Spells memorized: charm person, identify, magic missile, sleep; locate place (see new spells), strength; clairvoyance.
3. Ysadel, Priscian war mage (see new monsters) and a member of Secundus, as a 4th-level female Archontean magic user: SZM; AL LE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 4; HP 12; #AT 1; Dmg 3-9 (Priscian gladius +2). Abilities: STR 12, INT 17, WIS 14, DEX 9, CON 16, CHA 11. Possessions: Priscian chain mail (see new magic items); Priscian gladius +2 (see new magic items); wand of light (15 charges); potion of extra healing. Spells memorized: dancing lights, jump, shield; forget, levitate.
4. Paullor, Priscian conversus (see new monsters) and bonded defender to Lukor, as a 6th-level Archontean thief: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 120'; HD 6; HP 43; #AT 1; Dmg 4-7 (dagger +3), 1-6 (short sword), 2-5 (sling). Abilities: STR 14, INT 13, WIS 12, DEX 17, CON 15, CHA 17. Thief abilities: PP 60%, OL 57%, F/RT 45%, MS 52%, HS 42%, HN 20%, CW 92%, RL 30%. Possessions: leather armor +1; dagger +3; short sword; sling with 20 bullets; a pouch with 15 sardonyx gems (50 gp each) and 73 gp; a potion of invisibility.
5. Rusticus, Priscian conversus (see new monsters), as a 5th-level male Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL LE; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 5; HP 49; #AT 1; Dmg 5-12 (battle axe +1), 1-4 (light crossbow). Abilities: STR 18/63, INT 8, WIS 10, DEX 12, CON 16, CHA 11. Possessions: splint mail +1 and shield; battle axe +1; light crossbow and 16 bolts; 83 sp and 37 gp.
6. Wellor, Priscian conversus (see new monsters), as a 3rd-level male Wisikin fighter: SZ M; AL LE; AC 2; MV 120'; HD 3; HP 22; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (spear, short sword) 1-6 (javelin). Abilities: STR 17, INT 8, WIS 16, DEX 16, CON 12, CHA 7. Possessions: Priscian chain mail (see new magic items) and shield; spear; short sword; 3 javelins; immobilizing mesh (see new magic items).

Treasure:

Rugs: two are modest and recent (50 gp each), but one is ancient, and depicts a dragon-riding Archontean (300 gp)

In one chest: 2,500 sp, 250 gp.

In the other chest: three spell books, six scrolls (detect magic, light, detect evil, locate object, dispel magic, protection from evil 10' radius), six potions of healing.

Lukor's Spell Book: Alarm, burning hands, charm person, comprehend languages, detect magic, enlarge, feather fall, hold portal, identify, light, magic missile, push, read magic, shield, sleep; the Bracteros effect (see new spells), continual light, darkness 15' radius, ESP, knock, locate object, mirror image, ray of enfeeblement, stinking cloud, web; blink, dispel magic, fireball, fly, hold person, lightning bolt, protection from evil 10' radius; charm monster, fear, monster summoning II.

Elanchian's Spell Book: Affect normal fires, charm person, comprehend languages, detect magic, erase, feather fall, hold portal, identify, light, magic missile, protection from evil, read magic, shield, sleep; continual light, detect evil, ESP, knock, locate place (see new spells), mirror image, rope trick, stinking cloud, strength; clairvoyance, dispel magic, hold person, lightning bolt, slow; ice storm.

Ysadel's Spell Book: Comprehend languages, dancing lights, detect magic, find familiar, jump, magic aura, magic missile, read magic, shield, sleep, unseen servant, ventriloquism; detect invisibility, forget, levitate, Pelagion's bridge of sighs (see new spells), pyrotechnics, wizard lock; explosive runes, gust of wind, protection from normal missiles.

SL4-45: Stairs Down to Level 7 (7-44A)

This forgotten staircase leads down to an old rudishva chamber at area 7-44A. The Priscians discovered these stairs, which led them to their unexpected embassy to the goblins (see SL4-44).

SL4-46: Goblin Clan Cave

This cavern is reached by a 20'-tall rickety ladder from the floor of SL4-40. Inside is a neat cave with a sandy floor, in which dwell 50 goblins. Of these, only 20 are present at any given time. Searching through the many goblin nests will provoke antagonism and will be time-consuming; still, such a search has the possibility of turning up an interesting item (a cumulative 10% per turn of searching, up to a maximum of 60% chance per turn after 6 turns. A maximum of three items may be found):

2d12	Item
2	Obsidian ceremonial dagger (25 gp)
3	A grooved gold disk, one of four needed to open the lesser Obsidian Gates (SL4-34)
4	Purse with 2-24 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items)
5	Torn treasure map
6	Scroll with a MU spell of level 1-6
7	Packet of 6 red veil mushrooms (see new flora)
8	Potion of healing
9	Silver holy symbol of Set (25 gp)
10	A battered codex entitled Tales of Larel One-Eye (see Arden Vul books)
11	Flute made from a thigh bone: 1-2: human, 3-4: goblin, 5: varumani, 6: heqeti
12	Coil of elven rope (see new magic items)

13	Two vials of caustic acid packaged carefully in a doe-skin pouch (1-6 acid damage on impact)
14	Three griffon feathers
15	An ossified dragon egg
16	Six dried blue haze lichen (see new flora)
17	Cursed octagonal platinum coin; brings bad luck to owner (-1 to all rolls)
18	Crystal dagger with a hollow blade (acid or poison could be placed inside it)
19	A midnight rose (see new flora) in a flower pot
20	Phineas's silver slide-whistle (See new magic items)
21	Yo-yo made of gold (35 gp)
22	Bottle of fine Archontean brandy (75 gp)
23	Battered helm of infravision (see new magic items)
24	Cursed short sword -2

Inhabitants:

- 20 goblins: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7 (x 4), 6 (x 6), 5 (x 5), 4 (x 4), 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.
- 30 goblin females: non-combatants, AC 8, 1 HP.
- 50 goblin young: non-combatants, AC 8, 1 HP.

Treasure:

See table above.

SL4-47. Merchants' Storage

The wooden door to this chamber is in excellent repair and remains locked at all times. Master Leifcrim (SL4-40F) holds the only key. Inside is an old storeroom which Leifcrim uses as a storehouse for his goods, for the goods of other merchants, for certain items of value to Weskenim, and for the valuables of visitors. The latter service is not free, however; Leifcrim charges 1 gp/day to store small parcels, and 10 gp/day for larger packages or items. Leifcrim is honest, and goods stored here should be safe.

The chamber includes seven lockable wooden chests, of which four are currently in use by the merchants in SL4 32F (only Temrin does not use one). These chests contain the goods mentioned as 'For Sale' in the writeups of each individual items. Larger goods that do not fit within the chests, such as weapons and armor, are stacked neatly near the appropriate merchant's chest. Incongruously placed among the valuables is a small set of shelves containing fifteen pots of paint in various colors and a number of decrepit paint brushes.

Weskenim has stored some bulky valuables here, including five rolled-up carpets (two worth 75 gp, one worth 125 gp, and two spectacular examples of old Archontean carpet-weaving worth 475 gp each); a defaced marble bust of a bald Archontean, with the Mithric inscription 'Trebizet the Overseer' (see SL4-48); six ceremonial spears covered in gold leaf (50 gp each); a pair of 5'-tall Archontean urns with images of laborers at work with picks and shovels (100 gp each); and a large tapestry showing scenes from the Song of Jacinth the Rose (see Arden Vul books) worth 1,125 gp.

Currently no other visitors have taken advantage of Leifcrim's storage services.

Treasure:

See text.

SL4-48: Taboo Chamber

The door to this chamber is emblazoned with three pieces of faded, ancient graffiti (in Goblin). One piece is a skull and crossbones with the word "NO!" next to it; a second reads "Death lies within!"; the third reads "No Entry! The overseer still lives ... sort of!" The door itself is locked (key lost) and stuck. Needless to say, the modern goblins who recently discovered this chamber (via the hole leading from SL4-42 to SL4-43) have been fully intimidated by the ancient words of their ancestors, and have refused to investigate or enter this chamber.

The brightly painted chamber is furnished with a large table some 12' square, on which are scattered a number of old parchment documents. Benches and chairs flank the table, and, in the largest chair directly across from the entrance, is slumped an obvious corpse. Along the south wall are three open bins measuring 4'x4'x4'. Attached to the underside of the table in its exact center is a 3'-diameter circular metal container (locked, poison needle).

As soon as the threshold is crossed, a sighing sound emanates from the corpse slumped in a chair opposite the entrance; 2 rounds later, a spectre materializes and attacks.

Documents: Most are mundane bureaucratic memoranda (guard rotations, lists of laborers, accounts, etc.) which might bring 30 gp total to a collector. One, however, is an illuminated version of the Lay of Marius Invictus (see Arden Vul books).

Stone Bins: The left-most bin is empty, the middle one appears to be full of rich topsoil, while the right-hand bin is coated in a flaky, orange precipitate. The soil is only two inches deep, and covers a patient ochre jelly. If rehydrated, the orange precipitate acts as a healing potion, with enough precipitate for 10 potions.

Circular Lockbox: The lock is hard to pick (-10%) and the poison needle is hard to locate (-10%), but the trap is easy to remove (+5%). Inside are ten disks (28" in diameter) of grooved beaten gold with 1" holes in their centers (like record LPs). These gold disks are worth 200 gp each for their metal, but are in fact the missing items needed to operate the lesser obsidian gates (SL4-34).

Frescoes: The north wall is covered by a huge image of a pair of night-black doorways on which glow mystical symbols of Thoth, Set, and Archontos; to either side is a priest - one orange-robed and the other red-robed - displaying a grooved, golden disk in one hand and pointing to the doors with the other. From the image, it is clear that the disks are connected to the operation of the doors (GM: these frescoes are hints as to the operation of the lesser Obsidian Gates at SL4-34). On the south wall is a huge eye looming over scores of miniscule laboring figures. To the east is a pastoral scene of surprising beauty and unusual draftsmanship; unlike the Egyptian-style frescoes that dominate the upper Halls, this image is more lush and painterly, almost in an impressionist style, albeit with vivid, bright hues. The wall shows a rolling hill, a sunken country lane, and two giant elm trees. In the distance is a hazy smudge that might be a fortified manor house, while the foreground features a knotted walking stick thrust into the bank of the lane. The image radiates magic, and serves as an entry point into the world of faerie. One need only grasp the walking stick and one will be drawn into the painting and the world of faerie. It is up to the GM to decide what that world is like.

GM Backstory: This chamber was the residence and office of the Overseer of Labor, the Archontean official charged with maintaining the (slave) labor force that lived in and around the Hall of Labor. Even though it was lost for hundreds of years and only recently rediscovered, the chamber retains a taboo status among the goblin descendants of those laborers as the symbol of hated oppression. Of course, the ominous graffiti on the door has only contributed to their unwillingness to venture within.

As the Archontean withdrew from Arden Vul, a brave goblin managed to stab the last overseer, a particularly vicious fellow named Trebizet, in the back, killing him. Trebizet rose immediately as a spectre, and his brave assassin fled; the assassin and his friends locked the door and inscribed it with graffiti. Trebizet has haunted the chamber here ever since.

Secret Door (east): The door is normal to detect, and is openable from this side by pulling the closest wall sconce. When this is done, a 4'x3' section of wall grinds open, revealing SL4-49.

Inhabitants:

1. Trebizet the spectre: SZ M; AL LE; AC 2; MV 150', 300' flying (Class B); HD 7+3; HP 52; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8. Special attacks: energy drain. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to sleep, charm, hold, cold, poison, and paralysis.
2. 1 ochre jelly: SZ M; AL N; AC 8; MV 30'; HD 6; HP 41; #AT 1; Dmg 3-12. Special defenses: lightning divides into half-sized creatures.

Treasure:

Room contents: mundane administrative documents (30 gp); an illuminated version of the Lay of Marius Invictus (see Arden Vul books); precipitate for 10 potions of healing; 10 gold disks for the doors at SL4-34 (200 gp each).

Corpse: 24 ancient silver pennies and 6 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items for the coins); a silver and jasper ring (150 gp); boots of jumping; and a poisoned dagger embedded in its back.

SL4-49: Ogre Guards

King Weskenim assigned a second detachment of his eunuch ogres (c.f. SL4-25) as guards of this strategic route to the lower levels. Their chamber is dark and rank; the ogres have defaced the old Archontean frescoes and supplied their own crude and pornographic images and slogans. Furnishings include eight bedrolls, barrels of brandy and of water, a pay chest, a table and eight battered chairs, and two halfling corpses being cured on hooks. Winches for the two portcullises (SL4-52A and SL4-52B) flank the door. Two of the ogres are always found at SL4-52A. If the remainder hear the warning sound made by this pair, they will emerge ready for a fight within 2 rounds.

Like their fellows, these eunuch ogres are content with their lot, and are unlikely to betray Weskenim. That said, they consider themselves loyal to Weskenim personally, and not to the other goblins. Should it be shown to them that Weskenim is dead, they will depart for the Arena (6-68).

Thothian Teleportation Ring: In the southeast corner of the room is a set of 2"-tall paving stones arranged in a 6'-diameter ring. Inset into the floor next to the ring is a rectangle 48" long by 8" tall; the rectangle is divided into six interior compartments, each 8" square. Together these elements form a Thothian teleportation ring (see new magic items). To activate the ring, one must place six colored glass activation squares into the inset according to a sequence that matches the 'address' of the ring to which one wishes to travel. Once the squares are placed, a brief shimmer of energy is visible over the ring. At this point the user has 1 round to collect the squares and enter the ring, after which anyone in the ring is teleported without error to address indicated by that sequence of squares. If the glass activation squares are not collected and/or if the travelers do not possess a second set of them, they are likely to be stranded in the location to which they have just teleported. The address of this ring is as follows: BK-RE-YE-GR-BL-WH (see new magic items for explanation). None of the glass activation squares necessary to operate the circle are present.

Neither the goblins or the ogres have any idea how the teleportation ring works.

Secret Door (west): The door is extremely difficult to detect (1 in 10 chance). From this side it can only be opened by force.

Inhabitants:

1. 6 ogres: SZ L; AL CE; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 4+1; HP 31, 29, 28, 27, 25, 22; #AT 1; Dmg 1-10, or by weapon.

Treasure:

In the pay chest (locked, poison needle; key kept in the water barrel) are 275 gp, 653 sp, 24 sards worth 50 gp each, and the ogres' contract with Weskenim.

SL4-50: Giant Badgers

The goblins have tamed two giant badgers and use them for security as needed. The reek of the badgers is quite strong, and can easily be smelled from the Great Hall. Two badger-wranglers from SL4-55 lounge at the entrance to this cave at all times. The entrance is barred by a portcullis, just inside of which is a rack with four 5'-long badger-poles, several sets of harnesses, and two saddles.

Further back in the cave are the two badgers, whom Weskenim has named Stinky and White-nose.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 goblin badger-handlers (as orcs): SZ M; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1; HP 7, 6; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8 (morning star). Possessions: morning stars.
2. 2 giant badgers: SZ M; AL N; AC 4; MV 60', 30' burrowing; HD 3; HP 20, 18; #AT 3; Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-6.

SL4-51: Hallway with Winch

This hallway was one of the main entry points to the Hall of Labor in antiquity. A winch mechanism is set into the north wall; it operates the portcullis at SL4-52A. A pair of 6'-tall marble statues stand against the north and south walls. The north statue is in a heroic, socialist-realist style, and depicts a muscled human laborer wielding a pair of hammers. The south statue depicts a goblin employing mason's tools. The goblins love the southern statue, and have named it Jeskenim, after the legendary first king of their tribe. They decorate it with colorful scarves, turbans, and pantaloons.

SL4-52A: Portcullis

A heavy iron portcullis blocks the passage here. It can be raised by a winch located just to the west, in area SL4-51, or by the winch in SL4-49. A pair of ogres stand in front of the portcullis, demanding both tribute and the reasons for entry into the Goblin Warrens. Regardless of what reasons are adduced, the expected tribute amounts to 10 gp/person as a gift to King Weskenim. This rate applies to first-time, adventuring visitors, but decreases to 1 gp/person for return visitors and/or inhabitants of the Halls. The ogres expect to be bribed an equal amount. If suitable payment is not forthcoming, they will rattle their weapons on the portcullis, alerting their fellows in SL4-49. Should combat with the ogres break out here, the goblin guards at SL4-40 will come to investigate, most probably with the giant badgers in tow (66% chance). They arrive in 4 rounds, and lift the portcullis from the west so as to help the door guards subdue or slaughter foes.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 ogres: SZ L; AL CE; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 4+1; HP 27, 23; #AT 1; Dmg 1-10, or by weapon.

SL4-52B: Hidden Portcullis

This second portcullis is usually kept raised, and is only lowered by the ogres in SL4-49 when summoned to combat at SL4-52A. It can be detected as a secret door.

SL4-53: Stairs to Level 6 (6-66)

This wide hallway leads to an impressive stone staircase which descends some 475' and curves north and then east, before debouching at the Arena on Level 6 (6-66). The stairs are relatively clean and well-traveled, as this is the primary route by which denizens of the lower levels come to negotiate with the goblins.

Note: This hallway is the destination for one of the one-way teleporters on the blue pillar at 4-167. Those teleported here find themselves standing just to the east of the portcullis at SL4-52A.

SL4-54: Storage

This broken corridor-fragment is where the goblins store excess fuel and other sundries. Dozens of stacks of ancient wood (including much salvaged furniture) and packets of dried mushroom clutter the area. Two decomposing xorn carcasses hang from hooks, being readied for the badgers.

Treasure:

A chance exists for a small item of mundane value. Use probabilities and results table found at SL4-46 to determine if and what anything is present.

SL4-55: Badger Handlers

The badger handlers (see SL4-34) reside in this long corridor fragment. The western end of the corridor holds badger food, including 6 sides of meat (from a variety of unpleasant sources) hanging from hooks, 12 fresh spider husks, and several dozen beetle carcasses. Halfway down the corridor are the hammocks of the handlers, as well as a rack holding bits, harnesses, and badger-gaffs. Two of the handlers are always stationed at SL4-50, while the other four rest here.

Inhabitants:

1. 4 goblin badger-handlers (as orcs): SZ M; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1; HP 7, 7, 6, 6; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8 (morning star). Possessions: morning stars.

Treasure:

Mundane gear for handling giant badgers.

SL4-56: Goblin Clan Cave

A rickety ladder leading up 15' from the floor of the Great Hall provides access to this cave. It is home to 50 goblins, of whom 25 are present at any given time. It is otherwise similar to SL4-46, including chances to find items.

Inhabitants:

1. 25 goblins: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7 (x3), 6 (x7), 5 (x5), 4 (x7), 3 (x3); #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.
2. 30 goblin females: non-combatants, AC 8, 1 HP.
3. 50 goblin young: non-combatants, AC 8, 1 HP.

SL4-57: Goblin Clan Cave

The goblins that live here can enter their cave via a hole in the wall of the Great Hall or through the arched hallway to the west. Thirty goblins live here, of whom 11 are present at any given time. It is otherwise similar to SL4-46, including chances to find items. This tribe is the least happy with King Weskenim, and its members are likely to make trouble if someone other than Weskenim (e.g. Gislú the goblin from 4-2) appears with possession of the scepter of the goblins (currently at 8-69; see also SL4-23 and new magic items).

Inhabitants:

1. 11 goblins: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 6, 6, 5(x3), 4(x3), 3, 2; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.
2. 18 goblin females: non-combatants, AC 8, 1 HP.
3. 30 goblin young: non-combatants, AC 8, 1 HP.

SL4-58: Niche with Bust

At the north edge of the collapsed tunnel the goblins have erected a shrine of sorts to their protector, whom they call "King Wesky the First". In fact, the statuary bust, which floats 5' from the floor, is a Sortian portable sage (special knowledge areas in legends and folklore and dweomercraeft - see new magic items). The command word ('speak') is written on the bottom of the bust in Mithric. The Priscian visitors (SL4-44) have learned of the existence of this bust and are scheming to acquire it.

Treasure:

Sortian portable sage (see new magic items).

SL4-59: Goblin Clan Cave

This cave is accessed via the archway to the Great Hall. It is home to 25 goblins, of which 10 are present at any given time. It is otherwise similar to SL4-46, including chances to find items.

Inhabitants:

1. 10 goblins: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 7, 6, 5(x3), 4, 4, 3, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.
2. 15 goblin females: non-combatants, AC 8, 1 HP.
3. 25 goblin young: non-combatants, AC 8, 1 HP.

SL4-60: Goblin Clan Cave

The entrance to this cave is an 8'-wide, 4'-tall hole some 5' off the floor of the Great Hall. The cave is similar to SL4-46, except that it holds 20 goblins, of which only 8 are present at a given time. The normal chances for searching apply here. A section of the corridor fragment has been hollowed out, and the goblins have hidden a golden, Corinthian-style ceremonial helmet under the loose pavement.

Inhabitants:

1. 8 goblins: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 6, 6, 5, 4, 4, 3, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.
2. 12 goblin females: non-combatants, AC 8, 1 HP.
3. 20 goblin young: non-combatants, AC 8, 1 HP.

Treasure:

Golden helmet (150 gp).

SL4-61: Mushroom Ledge

The goblins have built a zipline from the western edge of SL4-32 to this mushroom ledge. It contains a small stand of cloud cap mushrooms (See new flora).

SL4-62: Mushroom Ledge

Another zipline leads from SL4-61 to this large shelf. Cloud caps, blue trumpets and eye-opener mushrooms grow here (see new flora).

SL4-63: Mushroom Ledge

This small shelf contains deadly white bulb mushrooms (that may be mistaken for their white rib cousins) (see new flora). The goblins naturally avoid it.

SBP
2020

SUB-LEVEL 5: THE LIZARDMAN CAVES

These caves are home to a lizardman tribe of unusual vitality and creativity. The tribe, which calls itself the Skreel or, sometimes, the Children of the Salamander, is led by a powerful lizard king/chieftain named Sgraal. A portion of their domain is flooded, and they have access to the exterior through a long set of tunnels and stairs to the south, leading eventually to the south end of Level 4. They vaguely revere Kauket (see new monsters), thanks to the influence of their senior shaman, Kusok (SL5-31); most of the ordinary lizardmen, however, worship as their protector a terrible pukel-mander (SL5-28, see new magic items), who seems more real and terrible than Kusok's distant salamander deity.

The lizardmen often fish and scout in the Drowned Canyon (Sub-Level 6), where they frequently engage in hit-and-run raids against the fishermen (see new monsters) of the Flooded Vaults (Sub-Level 7). They are also bitter enemies of the renegade Lagrok tribe of lizardmen found on Sub-Level 9.

The Skreel are unaware that their domain includes the lost abode of a powerful Archontean archmage, Kentillian the Magnificent (SL5-13A, SL5-14). Nor are they aware that Kentillian has transformed herself into a lich (SL5-13B), and still maintains possession of one of the pieces of the archonal regalia, the ebon spear (see new magic items). They merely avoid Kentillian's island and warn any friendly visitors about the 'bad spirits' that infest it. The eastern section of their domain includes some ancient heqeti ruins, in one of which Chief Sgraal holds court (SL5-36); the shaman Kusok has, unbeknownst to Sgraal, located another forgotten heqeti chamber (SL5-32).

The lizardmen are fairly canny warriors, trackers, and scouts on their home turf. They are expert trap makers and, thanks to their shamans, they have also learned to use molds and slimes as weapons against potential intruders. That said, the lizardmen are not necessarily hostile to all visitors, merely to those who arrive unannounced, who offer no gifts, and who appear bent on destruction. Others might be treated to negotiation and bargaining, for information or access, while those favored few who have done favors for the lizardmen might be rewarded with an audience before Chief Sgraal (SL5-36).

GENERAL CONSTRUCTION NOTES

Heqeti areas: SL5-32, SL5-36 to SL5-42

Archontean areas: SL5-43 to SL5-47

IMPORTANT NPCs

Sgraal, a lizard king and chief of the Skreel lizardmen (SL5-36)

FACTIONS

The sub-level is controlled by the Skreel tribe of lizardmen.

ENVIRONMENT

The watery tunnels and caves of this sub-level are damp and humid. An algal growth known as the green friend (see new flora) covers the surfaces of all natural areas (unless otherwise noted). Some areas of the sub-level are above water, but other areas include standing water. One section (SL5-16 through SL5-21) is covered in 4'-deep brackish water, while another section (SL5-8, SL5-13, SL5-15, SL5-28, SL5-29, SL5-33 and SL5-34) contains water that is over 6' deep and that, in some spots, reaches the ceiling.

ACCESS AND EGRESS

To Level 4: tunnel at SL5-1, leading up to 4-165

To Level 7: tunnel at SL5-27, leading down to 7-95

To Level 9: teleport feature of pukel-mander (see new magic items) at SL5-28, leading to 9-40

To Level 10: heqeti teleport wells at SL5-32, leading to 10-24

To Sub-Level 4: tunnel at SL5-24, leading up to SL4-31 (not yet connected, see SL4-31)

To Sub-Level 6: corridor at SL5-47, leading to SL6-36

To Sub-Level 9: tunnel at SL5-25, leading down to SL9-9

RANDOM ENCOUNTERS

Checks should be made every 3 turns, with a 1 in 6 chance for an encounter.

D12	Encounter
1-5	4 lizardmen from a nearby cave: SZ M; AL N; AC 4; MV 60'; 120' swimming; HD 2+1; HP 13, 13, 12, 11; #AT 1 or 3; Dmg 1-6 (club) and 1-6 (javelin), or 1-2/1-2/1-8. Possessions: clubs; javelins; shields.
6-7	4 lizardman hatchlings, playing hide-and-seek: noncombatants (AC 7, HP 2)
8	The human magic user, Yurtil Skreel-Friend, walking or swimming along while munching green friend (see new flora): for his stats, see SL5-35. Yurtil flees a hostile party, attempting to alert Chief Sgraal (SL5-36) and rally the rest of the tribe
9	A lizardman shaman, either Lorg (40%), Bsak (40%), or Kusok One-Eye (20%), along with 4 lizardmen. 1. For the shaman, see either SL5-30 or SL5-31. 2. 4 lizardmen: SZ M; AL N; AC 4; MV 60'; 120' swimming; HD 2+1; HP 13, 13, 12, 11; #AT 1 or 3; Dmg 1-6 (club) and 1-6 (javelin), or 1-2/1-2/1-8. Possessions: clubs; javelins; shields.

10	One of the enormous giant crabs from SL5-33: SZ L; AL N; AC 3; MV 90'; HD 4; HP 31, 27; #AT 2; Dmg 2-8/2-8. Special attacks: surprise on 1-4. The crab attacks any non-lizardman on sight. If it is slain here, it cannot be encountered at SL5-33
11	Flisserak, happily chewing green friend (seen new flora): for stats, see SL5-7. Flisserak is amiable unless previously alerted to danger in the cave system.
12	1 basic dragonfly automaton of Kerbog Khan (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 4; MV 240' flying (Class A); HD 1+2; HP 8; #AT 0 Dmg n.a.; MR 25%. Special defenses: immune to cold and fire.

LEVEL KEY

SL5-1: Entry Cave and Traps

A wide, relatively dry tunnel leads upwards about 75' over a gentle gradient before reaching area 4-165. As the tunnel enters the map of Sub-Level 5, the humidity rises and the rough walls start to be decorated with symbols and crude runes that mark the territory as that of the Skreel tribe. These symbols include moldy and rotting heads of goblins, humans, and beastmen; some old (and useless) stone spears and clubs; some 'medicine' packets of dried flesh, dried mushrooms, and bits of coral; and crude painted images of spear-wielding lizards.

The tunnel opens into a broad, sandy cave, lined with ropy, seaweed-like strings of the green friend algae (see new flora). A lidded pit trap is concealed under the sand of the cave floor. The vigorous growth of the green friend in this cave obscures several concealed niches (A, B, and C). Lizardman guards occupy two of the niches (A and C). The third niche (B) hides a weapon and food cache: six stone spears, six stone clubs, some dried meat, some gourds filled with drinking water, and so forth.

Known friends or allies are greeted by lizardman warriors who step from the concealed niches. Visitors of unknown status who approach cautiously and assert peaceful intentions may (50%) be warned of the pit. Hostile-looking visitors will not receive a greeting, as the warriors hope for them to fall into the pit. If combat breaks out, the lizardmen from SL5-2 run to join the fray, while hatchlings rush to alert other clans.

Trap (concealed pit trap): The trap is activated by 150 lb of weight. The pit is concealed by a reed mat covered by a thin layer of sand. It drops 20' onto a set of poisoned punji sticks; victims take 2-12 HP damage and must save vs poison.

Inhabitants:

1. 6 lizardmen: SZ M; AL N; AC 4; MV 60', 120' swimming; HD 2+1; HP 16, 15, 13, 13, 12, 11, 11, 10; #AT 1 or 3; Dmg 1-6 (club) and 1-6 (javelin), or 1-2/1-2/1-8. Possessions: clubs; javelins; shields.

SL5-2: Lizardman Clan

A group of 14 lizardmen and 6 hatchlings inhabit this small set of caves. A minimum of light is provided by some softly glowing phosphorescent lichen that grows among the green friend (see new flora). The caves are damp, close, and relatively uncomfortable. These lizardmen will come to aid the guards at SL5-1 if combat breaks out there.

If 2 turns are spent searching through the rocks and algae, one item from the following table may be found. Each item may only be found once.

D20	Item	Notes
1	Silver holy symbol: 1-2: Thoth, 3-4: Set, 5-6: Horus, 7-10: other (modern)
2	Stone lizardman fetish on a cord of green friend (see new flora)	Worth 75 gp, but if stolen and displayed reduces reaction rolls with lizardmen by 20%
3	A white moonstone gem	50 gp
4	A human thigh-bone made into a flute
5	One arrow +2
6	A 50' coil of silk rope
7	Two gourds full of oil
8	A full rudishva lesser power supply	See new technological items
9	A bag of blue haze lichen	See new flora
10	A copper dagger +1	Damage is only 1-3/1-2 because it is copper
11	Platinum necklace set with fishmen teeth	650 gp
12	A large, bronze key	The key fits the locks on the bronze doors at TS-1
13	A 25-lb ingot of silver (1,250 sp) with the imperial smithing mark	A relic of the failed Archontean attempt to recolonize the halls (see 5-18)
14	A malfunctioning basic dragonfly automaton of Kerbog Khan (see new monsters)	Stats: SZ S; AL N; AC 4; MV 240' flying (Class A); HD 1+2; HP 8; #AT 0 Dmg n.a.; MR 25%. Special defenses: immune to cold and fire. Kerbog Khan is unable to 'inhabit' this dragonfly; it is effectively lost to him
15	A scroll tube with some strange runes on it	Within is a scroll of protection from evil
16	A pair of small gold spoons used for inhaling lotus powders	15 gp each
17	A troll thegn's passport	See Arden Vul items
18	A sack of marbles
19	A tear of Kauket	See new magic items
20	A platinum plate with an engraving of cloaked man pulling a chicken from a sack	275 gp. A depiction of one of Larel One-Eye's adventures (see World of Archontos appendix)

Treasure:

In a hollow under a boulder are 76 cp, 45 sp, and two gourds of green friend juice (see new flora). The quantity of juice in each gourd means that a gourd will cure 2-16 HP.

Inhabitants:

1. 14 lizardmen: SZ M; AL N; AC 4; MV 60'; 120' swimming; HD 2+1; HP 17, 15, 14, 13, 13, 12, 12, 12, 11, 11, 10, 9, 9, 8; #AT 1 or 3; Dmg 1-6 (club) and 1-6 (javelin), or 1-2/1-2/1-8. Possessions: clubs; javelins; shields. Of the fourteen, six are females who fight as 1 HD creatures.
2. 6 lizardman hatchlings: noncombatants (AC 7, HP 2).

SL5-2A: Negotiation Cave

This relatively dry cave located between SL5-2 and SL5-5 is unoccupied by lizardmen. Instead, it is used for preliminary negotiations with those approaching the area from Level 4. Parties whose members are already known to the lizardmen, or exceptionally dangerous-looking parties, might be met at SL5-1 and guided to this location, where either Chief Sgraal himself (see SL5-36) or a mix of his advisors (the shamans and/or Yurtil – see SL5-30, SL5-31 and SL5-35) arrive to discuss the visitors's intentions.

SL5-3: Lizardman Clan

A group of 12 lizardmen and 5 hatchlings inhabit these caves. The walls are covered with the green friend. This clan is a bit disaffected, and won't rush to the sound of combat in SL5-1.

Two turns of searching within will reveal one object from the list found in SL5-2.

Treasure:

In a sack hidden behind the green friend are 15 pieces of polished obsidian (10 gp each).

Inhabitants:

1. 12 lizardmen: SZ M; AL N; AC 4; MV 60'; 120' swimming; HD 2+1; HP 17, 15, 14, 13, 13, 12, 12, 12, 11, 11, 10, 9, 9, 8; #AT 1 or 3; Dmg 1-6 (club) and 1-6 (javelin), or 1-2/1-2/1-8. Possessions: clubs; javelins; shields. Of the twelve, five are females who fight as 1 HD creatures.
2. 5 lizardman hatchlings: noncombatants (AC 7, HP 2).

SL5-4: Slime Pods and Slippery Slope

The floor, walls and ceiling of this transit passage are covered with green friend (see new flora). As a result it affords a green, tunnel-like approach to either SL5-1 or SL5-16. The algal growth conceals a slope downward towards area SL5-16. The first 2-4 members of a group approaching from the west must roll 3d6 under DEX or go slipping downward into the water at SL5-16.

Nestled among the green friend are 12 closed gourds in which the lizardmen are cultivating various tiny jellies and slimes. Unless the walls are searched, the gourds will go unnoticed. The gourds contain the following:

1. Green slime (x2): SZ S; AL N; AC 9; MV 0'; HD 1; HP 2, 1; #AT 0; Dmg special. Special attacks: convert to slime; corrosive to wood and metal. Special defenses: immune to physical attacks and all magic save cure disease.
2. Tiny black pudding (x2): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 10'; HD 1; HP 6, 5; #AT 1; Dmg 1-3. Special attacks: dissolve wood and metal. Special defenses: divide into parts when struck; immune to cold.

3. Tiny brown pudding (x2): SZ S; AL N; AC 5; MV 10'; HD 1; HP 7, 5; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4. Special attacks: corrode leather and wood. Special defenses: immune to acid, cold and poison.
4. Arcanum jelly (x2) (see new magic items)
5. Ghost paste (x2) (see new magic items)
6. Sweating jelly (x2) (see Arden Vul items)

SL5-5: Lizardman Clan

A group of twelve lizardmen and 5 hatchlings inhabits this large cave. The cave is covered with the green friend (see new flora) on all surfaces. The clan possesses a lesser salt lamp of protection (see new magic items); the lamp lacks any packets of essence, though. The lizardmen are storing two doses of juice of the green friend in the lamp. Two turns of searching produces an item from the table in SL5-2.

Treasure:

Lesser salt lamp of protection (see new magic items); two doses of juice from the green friend (see new flora).

Inhabitants:

1. 12 lizardmen: SZ M; AL N; AC 4; MV 60'; 120' swimming; HD 2+1; HP 17, 15, 14, 13, 13, 12, 12, 12, 11, 11, 10, 9, 9, 8; #AT 1 or 3; Dmg 1-6 (club) and 1-6 (javelin), or 1-2/1-2/1-8. Possessions: clubs; javelins; shields. Of the twelve, five are females who fight as 1 HD creatures.
2. 5 lizardman hatchlings: noncombatants (AC 7, HP 2).

SL5-6: Meat Curing Tunnel

Although just as humid as the surrounding caves, a slight temperature drop prevents the growth of the green friend here. The lizardmen use this wide tunnel to dry meat. They have cleverly set numerous wooden pegs into the walls, on which they hang a variety of types of 'meat'. The bodies include: two crocodiles, two goblins, three humans, five fishmen (see new monsters), and several dozen cave fish of various species. The floor of the cave is slick with the blood of these corpses. One of the humans is a cleric of Set, who has managed to use cure spells to keep himself alive (barely). If rescued, he might aid a party with information and introductions, although his loyalties remain with Stephania (4-51).

Inhabitants:

1. Geroius, a near-dead, 5th-level male Archontean cleric of Set: SZ M, AL LE; AC 10; MV 120'; HD 5; HP 2 (max 39); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 12, INT 13, WIS 17, DEX 8, CON 16, CHA 7. He has no possessions. Spells: cure light wounds, cure light wounds (x4); ~~chant, hold person, resist fire, slow poison, slow poison; create food and water.~~

SL5-7: Unusual Guardian

An aged heqeti builder (see new monsters) named Flisserak lives in the small northern cave. He suffered a head injury long ago and has forgotten his past life and people. The Skreel view him as a messenger sent by their god (the pukel-mander at SL5-28), and have consequently treated him with respect and honor for the past twenty years, even as they find his lack of memory and general passivity to be rather puzzling. His small cave has a raised bed of wood covered with green friend strands, and he has fashioned an art-naïve statuette of Kauket out of a 3'-tall chunk of arcenum

(see new magic items). Attempting to use the arcanum for the usual arcane reasons has a chance to alert Kauket itself (15%); if this occurs, the holder of the statuette will be teleported instantly to the ziggurat of Kauket (areas 10-32 to 10-35).

Flisserak acts as a tactical advisor to Chief Sgraal (SL5-36), although his amnesia renders his advice only sporadically useful. The Skreel have tasked him with guarding the hole to SL5-8. Although still evil, his aggression seems to have departed along with his memory, and he is content to chat with any but the most obviously hostile newcomers if they speak Heqeti or Lizardman.

The southern tunnel holds a 5'-diameter hole that drops 20' into the waters of area SL5-8.

Inhabitants:

1. Flisserak, an heqeti builder (see new monsters), 6th/6th-level fighter/cleric of Rimmaq-Isfet: SZ M; AL CE; AC 1; MV 90', 120' swimming; HD 6; HP 47; #AT 1; Dmg 4-9 (spear +2) or 3-8 (javelin +1). Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice. Possessions: heqeti mail armor (-2 to AC); spear +2, 3 javelins +1, amulet of natural armor +2 (see new magic items). Spells: bless, command, cure light wounds, light, fear; chant, hold person (x2), silence 15' radius, speak with animals; dispel magic, curse.

Treasure:

Idol of Kauket fashioned from arcanum (2,000 gp); 25 freshwater pearls worth 50 gp each; and a set of polished coral that can be assembled to form a map. Flisserak does not remember what the map represents; divination spells might reveal its function, though. GM Note: The coral map shows the best route through the Underearth from area 10-62 to the main heqeti settlement.

SL5-8: Water-Filled Cave

Water completely fills this 30'-deep cave, except for a 5'-diameter hole that leads upward 20' to SL5-7. The water here roils and churns with unforeseen currents and eddies due to the presence of a large water elemental that was bound to this location many centuries ago. The elemental is responsible for the strange properties of the water in these caves, and for maintaining the volume and freshness of the pools. Should it be slain, the sub-level's waters would slowly turn stagnant, affecting the lizardmen and probably killing (or severely reducing the extent of) the green friend. The lizardmen know of the elemental, and respect it as a 'spirit'; they are intimidated by its frenzy, however, and rarely travel here.

A strangely rust-free metal box rests in the exact center of the floor of this cave (marked 'X'). The box is trapped with explosive runes (to which the box is immune). Inside is the phylactery of the lich Kentillian (see SL5-13A), in the form of a gold armband engraved with dolphins and whales. Efforts to take the box or its contents cause the elemental to attack.

The tunnel leading to SL5-13 is completely underwater and is marked by a strong current running west to east.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 water elemental: SZ L; AL N; AC 2; MV 60', 180' in water; HD 16; HP 103; #AT 1; Dmg 5-30. Special attacks: affect boats. Special defenses: +2 or better weapons to hit.

Treasure:

A set of remains at the bottom of the pool still possesses an enchanted shield +1, +3 versus demons, and a sack of 307 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items). In an enchanted metal box sits the phylactery of Kentillian (225 gp for its metal).

SL5-9: Lizardman Clan

Here amid the green friend (see new flora) dwell 11 lizardmen with their 4 hatchlings. Searching for two turns produces one item from the table in SL5-2. This clan has no additional treasure and is consequently unhappy with Chief Sgraal. If proper inducements are offered, the clan might betray Sgraal; following such a betrayal they hasten to join the Lagrok tribe on Sub-Level 9.

Inhabitants:

1. 11 lizardmen: SZ M; AL N; AC 4; MV 60', 120' swimming; HD 2+1; HP 16, 14, 13, 13, 12, 12, 11, 11, 10, 9, 8; #AT 1 or 3; Dmg 1-6 (club) and 1-6 (javelin), or 1-2/1-2/1-8. Possessions: clubs; javelins; shields. Of the eleven, five are females who fight as 1 HD creatures.

2. 4 lizardman hatchlings: noncombatants (AC 7, HP 2).

SL5-10: Lizardman Clan

A clan of 10 lizardmen and 4 hatchlings inhabits this cave. The green friend is significantly less vibrant in this cave, which explains the clan's relative poverty and low status. As a result this group is considerably more aggressive than others; it has been feuding with the clan in SL5-9 and would love to occupy that area. Searching the area for three turns produces one item from the table in SL5-2.

Inhabitants:

1. 10 lizardmen: SZ M; AL N; AC 4; MV 60', 120' swimming; HD 2+1; HP 16, 14, 13, 13, 12, 11, 11, 10, 9, 8; #AT 1 or 3; Dmg 1-6 (club) and 1-6 (javelin), or 1-2/1-2/1-8. Possessions: clubs; javelins; shields. Of the ten, three are females who fight as 1 HD creatures.

2. 4 lizardman hatchlings: noncombatants (AC 7, HP 2).

SL5-11: Lizardman Clan

This cave is home to the most prosperous lizardman clan, which comprises 15 adults and 6 hatchlings. Two turns of searching produces two items from the table at SL5-2. This group has also acquired a cauldron of boiling (see new magic items), which they mostly use as a curiosity since they prefer their meat raw or dried.

Inhabitants:

1. 15 lizardmen: SZ M; AL N; AC 4; MV 60', 120' swimming; HD 2+1; HP 17, 15, 14, 13, 13, 12, 12, 12, 11, 11, 10, 10, 9, 9, 8; #AT 1 or 3; Dmg 1-6 (club) and 1-6 (javelin), or 1-2/1-2/1-8. Possessions: clubs; javelins; shields. Of the fifteen, seven are females who fight as 1 HD creatures.

2. 6 lizardman hatchlings: noncombatants (AC 7, HP 2).

Treasure:

A cauldron of boiling (see new magic items).

SL5-12: Beach and Ruined Skiffs

The tunnel from the west slopes downward rapidly to end at a small gravel beach overlooking a vast, water-filled cavern. Two rotted skiffs rest to one side.

SL5-13: Large Water-filled Cavern

This huge cavern is mostly filled with water; average depth is 25'-40', while the ceiling rises another 35' above the water line. An island or plateau rises out of the water in the middle of the cave (see SL5-14). The walls of the cave are lined with the green friend (see new flora), and the waters are full of blind cave-fish, crabs, crayfish, and other small creatures.

The tunnels leading to SL5-8, SL5-15, and SL5-21 are completely underwater. The lips of the other three tunnels – leading to SL5-10, SL5-12, and SL5-26 – are located at the water line.

Two giant crayfish swim in the waters. They avoid lizardmen, and hide from Kentillian or the daemons, but attack all others.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 giant crayfish: SZ L; AL N; AC 4; MV 60', 120' swimming; HD 4+4; HP 30, 26; #AT 2; Dmg 2-12/2-12. Special attacks: surprise on 3 in 6.

SL5-13A: Burial Shrine of Kentillian the Magnificent

