Author's Foreword

Arden Vul appeared as a hazy gleam in my eye in 2009. I was returning to gaming after a ten-year hiatus and, as someone who had been transformed by reading of the Fellowship's trek through Moria, it seemed only fitting that my new campaign should feature a tent-pole megadungeon. At the outset I only had a couple of vague ideas for what my dungeon should feature: 1) 'at least' ten levels, 2) a 'blasted ziggurat' on the bottom level, 3) some sort of demon boss as a culmination of the dungeon, and 4) enough adventuring space that a typical party could never hope to clear it out.

From these vague beginnings, Arden Vul took a long time to conceive, map and write. I had spent several years as a lurker on-line, passively absorbing wisdom from such OSR luminaries as Allan Grohe, Trent Foster, Gabor Lux, Al Krombauch, James Maliszewski, and many others. My plan was to just start mapping and let things proceed from there. And so the first maps I drew eventually came to comprise what is now Level 3. My procedure was pretty simple: I'd draw some cool designs, and only then begin to think about who might have created them and for what purpose. Keying also began with Level 3. Levels 2 and 4 followed, since they were conceptually linked to Level 3. Level 1 was written later, as a 'starter' level for brand new characters. Levels 5-10 and the sub-levels proceeded mostly in order, since by the time I got around to them I had already established a pretty good sense of which factions and regions needed to be placed in which order. Those early levels were the easiest to write, as they followed some pretty standard dungeon tropes: lost crypts, factions of low-to-middle level opponents, hints about deeper levels, etc. It was also the case that I had no problem with skipping a room or series of rooms if I didn't know what should happen there, only returning once inspiration hit or once I realized I needed to link an upper level to a lower one. The lower levels were more difficult to key (and slower, as well!), since they needed to satisfactorily link up with the ideas and content that I'd laid out in the first few levels. Joe Browning was incredibly patient with this process, accepting that the writing process for such a large, complex, and integrated dungeon would be different from that required by a 32-page module.

I took inspiration from a wide array of literature, art, mythology, and previous gaming products. The entire setting of Arden Vul is basically an unlikely mashup of elements of the Byzantine Empire and Moorcock's Melniboné. General inspiration comes from the awesome NG product, Rappan Athuk, and from Jennell Jaquays' Caverns of Thracia, which remains for me a master example of level design. My beastmen are a clear homage to Gygax's Old Guard Kobolds (with a twist, though). Peter Mullen's image of a giant, horned skeleton sitting in a chair in front of a pile of corpses (appearing on the first printing of Swords and Wizardry) provided the inspiration for my giant rudishva skeletons. The library of Thoth is infested with critters inspired by a Scott Lynch short story. An NPC on level 8 is a thinly-disguised biologist friend of mine. Al Krombauch's (sadly now-defunct) blog "Behind the Black Gates" gave me inspiration for the iconic Arden Vul location, the Obsidian Gates. I even reskinned a medieval Arthurian legend for one encounter!

I can't close without expressing some deeply felt thanks. First, this product would not exist without Andreas Claren. Not only did he push me to consider showing it to publishers, and not only has he patiently drawn and redrawn all the maps, he has been a font of personal and gaming advice for over a decade. Truly, Andreas is an amicus optimus. Second, I owe a massive debt to Joe Browning. I'm still amazed that he was willing to take a chance on an unknown author for a project this big! Since he came on board, his genius for editing – both copy-editing and the more challenging task of improving the author's ideas and execution – has been nothing short of miraculous. For support and advice, I must also thank Jon Hershberger, Stuart Marshall, and Scot Hoover. The players in my home campaign – Chad B., Matt, Katie, Olav, Randall, Chad R., Greg, Ethan, and Byron – also deserve thanks. Their clever and sometimes ornery play has frequently resulted in redesigns that have made the product better. Finally, I must thank my wife, Anne, and my daughter, Katie, for letting Arden Vul hang over our lives for the past ten years.

Cartographer's Foreword

I first met Rick Barton in the mid-2000s at the Necromancer Games forum where I often used to hang around at that time. Both being music aficionados, we originally got into contact about music there, and only after a while started talking about gaming. Rick told me that even though he hadn't gamed anymore since several years, he was in the process of designing a multiple level dungeon. The snippets that he shared with me about it sounded intriguing, and after I expressed interest in it, he asked me whether I would like to take a look at a few maps and notes that he had already done.

After looking at the pencil-drawn maps and the accompanying notes that he sent me, I immediately realized that this was an uncut gem of a beauty that to me as a hobby cartographer was like the Arkenstone to the dwarves of Middle Earth. I had never before seen anything so beautifully convoluted and perfectly designed in a non-linear way, except for Jennell Jaquays' maps in Dark Tower and Caverns of Thracia, which to this day both count among the top five of my all-time favorite dungeon adventures. I tried to convince Rick that this had the potential of becoming a superior gaming product and that it cried out to be published. It was obvious that he had never thought about this possibility before and, being the humble person that he is, at first seemed to be reluctant of the thought, but I begged him to allow me to render his maps so they might better shine in all their beauty, and also to help him in finding a possible publisher, and finally he gave in.

Over the next ten years, rendering the 38 maps that make up The Halls of Arden Vul was the most demanding and most satisfying mapping job that I had ever done and likely ever will. It fills me with pride and joy to have been a part in the creative process of bringing Arden Vul to life, and I never ceased to admire Rick's ingenuity and creativity, his vast knowledge, and the incredibly fast output of high-quality gaming material, all perfectly well-written. Over time, Rick and I have become close friends, even visiting each other in the US and Germany, and I'm looking forward to working together with him on new projects for the World of Magae setting.

In the good tradition of saying Thank You, I want to thank my wife Bettina for being patient with my gaming obsessions over all these years. I also want to thank my son Lucas who turned out to be a talented artist and provided a few wonderful drawings to this product. Thank you to all my gaming buddies out there who helped me with comments and insights during the whole process, especially Heinrich Helms and Rafael San Miguel. And finally thank you to Rick Barton and Joe Browning for letting me be part of this.

Publisher's Foreword

Out of the blue, way back in June of 2013, I was approached by Moritz Mehlem, a steady Expeditious Retreat Press customer, and Stuart Marshall, editor of the First Edition retroclone OSRIC, about a manuscript they'd stumbled across and fell in love with. They wanted to know if I'd be interested in taking a look at it and perhaps even publishing it. I agreed—I'm always willing to look at manuscripts—and when they put me in contact with the author who then passed along the first partial draft and companion maps, I was stunned by what was before me.

Firstly, you don't get many RPG publishing inquires that begin with a 400+page manuscript submission. Secondly, and most importantly, you simply don't get submissions that, while still quite incomplete, are already leaps and bounds ahead of the standard adventure module fare. The early Arden Vul manuscript was good. Very good. Somehow, I'd lucked into the single most amazing thing I believe I will ever publish and it just landed on my virtual doorstep with a polite knock and a calm, "Hey, we think you're going to like this."

Describing Arden Vul to someone who hasn't read it is a difficult endeavor. It is a megadungeon, yes, but it's more than that. It's also a campaign setting, yes again, but it's more than that too. It took me several years before I finally hit on the right metaphor to describe the core of the work: Arden Vul is the banquet of role-playing modules, but it not just any banquet, it is the Manchu-Han Imperial Feast of dungeons. It is not merely the size that is impressive, although there are none larger, nor is it the resounding delicacy of the servings, although there are no dungeons more fiendishly interconnected thematically and texturally. No, Arden Vul is all these things, yes, but it is one thing in particular.

Arden Vul, the real Arden Vul, is the moment when you realize you're enjoying the most amazing meal you've ever had and there are still 90 more courses to go. Arden Vul is that moment—that exquisite moment when you are ecstatically transported into another realm and can hardly wait to find out how everything else interconnects. When you want nothing more than to fully and deeply relish the moment where you are, but yet you also crave to know how things all work out in the end.

I remember when it happened to me, and I'm smiling knowing what's in store for you. For now, you are a member of an elite club and you have the enviable pleasure of taking the first bite of the massive fantasy gaming banquet that is Arden Vul. As you keep eating, you too will reach that point where suddenly it all starts to make a deeper sense, when suddenly you become awestruck by what has been created and laid before you, by the sheer unrelenting audacity of the work.

There will be a moment when you realize that you are one of the luckiest people: you have experienced a singular soaring vision and the unarguable masterpiece of old-school dungeon design. You'll push back from the table, full to brimming over, and the servers will continue to line up the next courses while you marvel at the bounty.

Bon Appétit!

GENERAL INTRODUCTION

Who has not heard rumors of the lost city of Arden Vul? During the glory days of the Archontean Empire, now 1,200 years in the past, Arden Vul was a small, but important, wealthy and secretive imperial center located atop a 1,500'-tall cliff at the head of Burdock's Valley. Dominated by the imperial administration itself, as well as by the great temples of Thoth and Set, the city attracted alchemists, scholars, priests and sorcerers by the droves. Seeking the lost secrets of long-dead civilizations as well as the mysterious element known as arcanum (see new magic items), the Archontean delved deeply - and secretly - within the mountain. Alas! The terrible civil war that rent the Archontean Empire, that is, the war of Sortians and Theosophs, led to the utter destruction of the city and the withdrawal of the imperial legions from the western continent of Irthuain.

Now, with the renaissance of imperial power, it is possible for well-equipped adventurers to make the long trek to Arden Vul from the exarchates of the coast. Tales of gold piled in imperial vaults, legendary magical artifacts resting in unspoiled crypts, and the fruits of the lost secrets of ancient imperial smiths and mages lying ripe for the picking are legion. Yet alongside the tales of lost treasures are other, more unsettling whispers. How could a lost city remain unlooted for more than a millennium? Surely only the existence of the cruelest of foes and unimaginable evil within the mountain can explain Arden Vul's unspoiled status. Only the bravest, the cleverest, and the luckiest of adventurers will survive to plumb the mysteries of Arden Vul.

After three hard days' march from the town of Newmarket, the setting sun illuminates a thunderous waterfall pouring down the fabled cliff face of Arden Vul. Two colossi carved into the cliff to the right of the waterfall stare stonily across the valley. A twinkle of sunlight catches on the rocks ... is it the spray from the falls? or could it be the glint of metal moving up the cliff? There's only one way to find out ... Adventure awaits!

A BRIEF HISTORY OF ARDEN VUL

The ruined city and dungeons Arden Vul were designed as part of the author's home-brewed world of Archontos. The history, names, cultural practices, and political background that define the dungeon thus reflect that setting. Still, it is easy enough to plunk Arden Vul into most other settings with a minimum of GM tweaking. All that's needed is a setting with ancient civilizations and brave adventurers willing to loot their buried treasures! The following text and time-line provides the briefest of overviews of the history and development of Arden Vul and, to a degree, the world around it (for more, see the World of Archontos appendix).

The site of Arden Vul has been inhabited for some 3,600 years. The first settlers were the inimical heqeti (see new monsters), who traveled here from their Underearth dwellings and built their great ziggurat to the demon prince Kauket. The rudishva arrived some 600 years later, bringing with them their servitor races

While the struggle between heqeti and rudishva was transpiring below ground, the rise of the human Archontean empire was taking place on the surface. The lords of the city of Archontos struck an alliance with the seven princes of dragonkind (the Compact of Ennius) at about the same time that the rudishva arrived at Arden Vul. This alliance allowed the Archontean to unify the human cultures of their home island and to enslave the goblins of the same island; unification occurred roughly as the rudishva were (mostly) being exterminated in Arden Vul. For the next several centuries, the Archontean expanded across the Wine-Dark Sea, bringing the territories of Irthuain and Ostralius under their rule. Eventually this expansion brought the Archontean - in the form of the heroes Arden and Vul - to discover the cliff of Arden Vul. A city was established on the cliff face 2,100 years ago, and the Archontean began exploring the caverns below. Making use of some found rudishva devices, the archons of Arden Vul began to push the heqeti back; this campaign culminated with the great victories of the archon Marius Tricotot, who drove the heqeti from their ziggurat. The varumani then offered fealty to the human archon, and for the next 975 years the Archontean reigned supreme. During this golden age, the Archontean delved deeply beneath the cliff, erecting tombs, temples, shrines, and administrative chambers therein (but failing to penetrate the Obsidian Gates). Ultimately rivalries within the empire, between the conservative forces known as the Theosophs and radical egalitarians known as Sortians, broke into open conflict; the ensuing civil war crippled the Archontean empire, and the city of Arden Vul was sacked 1,210 years ago. Twenty years later, the emperor ordered the formal abandonment of Arden Vul and the withdrawal of all remaining legions from Irthuain.

A dark age for Archontos set in. The varumani became the dominant faction within Arden Vul, even as monsters moved into many of the darkened Halls. The heqeti returned to their ziggurat some 300 years ago, even as the Archontean returned in muted triumph to Irthuain. A formal Archontean expedition to reclaim Arden Vul, under the leadership of Adrienic, was dispatched from Narsileon 250 years ago; within a decade, it had foundered, destroyed in a foolish assault on the varumani court. One cohort of imperial soldiers were trapped and enslaved by the witch, Deino, who transformed them into beastmen.

In the present, the Halls are thus home to several vibrant and unusual 'native' factions: ferocious albino baboons led by quasi-intelligent 4-armed baboons and a deluded druid (Level 2); a small goblin community (Levels 3 and 5, and Sub-Level 4); the beastmen and Deino (Level 3); lizardmen (Sub-Level 4); the varumani thegn and his court (Level 7); and the heqeti with their terrible ziggurat of Kauket (Level 10). Interest in the Halls from the outside is also growing, with numerous parties eager to exploit the riches and hidden secrets of the Halls. Among these groups are the newly reformed cult of Set (Levels 3 and 4), who have partially restored their ancient halls and shrine; a group of secretive Priscians, who claim (wrongly) to be the philosophical descendants of the ancient Sortians (Levels 3, 6, and 9); numerous sorcerers seeking arcantum (e.g., Kerbog Khan on Sub-Level 12, see new magic items); a band of evil halfling thugs (Level 3), a group of renegade kaliyani who have fled their Underearth city to seek their ancient heritage (see Sub-Level 9); and a sect of fearsome lone knights led by their mysterious Master Malachite (Sub-Level 10).

TIMELINE OF ARDEN VUL AND ARCHONTOS

AEP = 'from the pact of Ennius'; SP = 'before the pact'

Archontean Reckoning (see World of Archontos appendix)	Approx. years in past	Important Event
2993 AEP	0	Present
2992 AEP	1	Phlebotomas Plumthorn (3-5) seizes some of the entry halls of Level 3
2990 AEP	3	Kronos Kettle-Belly and Estelle establish a roadhouse named the Sign of the Broken Head in the ruined city of Arden Vul (see AV-22)
2978 AEP	15	The Set cult in Arden Vul makes contact with the kaliyani
2972 AEP	21	Tsilliv (SL9-77) leads a group of renegade kaliyani to Arden Vul and founds the Twelfth Consortium (see Sub-Level 9)
2968 AEP	25	Lady Alexia Basileon (AK-2) leads a sept of the Knights of the Azure Shield to a tiny Thorcin community named Gosterwick, located near the falls of Arden Vul. The knights restore an ancient fortress (the Azure Keep) and Lady Alexia renames the community Vetucaster; she proceeds to expand the community rapidly, offering residence, citizenship, and services to adventurers and others
2943 AEP	50	The archmage Nerub Null, one of the secretive Priscians, arrives in Arden Vul searching for Sortian lore and power (see 9-64)
2936 AEP	57	The arch-mage Cerbactos Kalthetos arrives in Arden Vul, locates the medical pod of the Beacon, and transforms himself into Kerbog Khan (see SL12-25)
2900 AEP	93	A group of Set cultists re-colonizes areas of Level 4
2810 AEP	183	Alarmed at the threat posed by the beastmen, Narbisto the Huge persuades the several tribes of goblins living in Arden Vul (descendants of Archontean slaves) to unite. Narbisto naturally becomes the first Grand King of the United Goblins
2784 AEP	209	The Order of Priscians is founded in Archontos
2759 AEP	234	Deino (3-158) enslaves a kentarchia of the 3 rd Cohort of the Imperial Tagmata as it retreats from the disaster of the Cave of Blood (7-76), and transforms them into the beastmen
2759 AEP	234	The Archontean attempt to recolonize Arden Vul ends in complete failure, as Adrienic's forces are destroyed by Girbala, the 31 st thegn of the varumani, in a massacre at the Cave of Blood (7-76)
2743 AEP	250	A dragon is spotted in the skies west of Narsileon for first time in centuries
2742 AEP	251	Emperor Phocion IV dispatches an expedition led by Adrienic to reoccupy the halls of Arden Vul. With Adrienic are several contingents of imperial soldiers, including the 2 nd Legion of scutarii and the 3 rd Cohort of the Imperial Tagmata. Among Adrienic's chief advisors are Lankios, Kaitor, and Guivrel (c.f. 1-6 and 5-11)
2718 AEP	275	Archontean settlers found a new town in Burdock's Valley, naming it Noviomagus. It is colloquially known as Newmarket, and becomes the largest community in the valley
2682 AEP	311	The Heqeti return to Arden Vul and begin restoring the ziggurat of Kauket (10-32 to 10-37)
2661 AEP	332	The secret revival of the cult of Set commences in Archontos

2639 AEP	354	Empress Juliana X Bellatrix leads a triumphant Archontean return to Irthuïn; imperial forces reoccupy Narsileon and Arcturos, which are named the seats of Archontean exarchates
2495 AEP	498	Livraka, the 26 th thegn of the varumani, establishes a system of lifts along the Great Chasm; the system comes to be known as the Troll Lifts
2493 AEP	500	Deino arrives in Arden Vul and lays claim to the abandoned administrative centers of the temple of Thoth (3-158)
2450 AEP	543	The Archontean Silver Age begins with a renewed period of military expansion
2400-1900 AEP	593 to 1103 years ago	The Archontean Dark Ages commence; the empire retracts to Mithruïn and the Grain Islands and much ancient knowledge is lost
2093 AEP	900	Javaka, the 20 th thegn of the varumani, re-establishes control of Middle Halls of Arden Vul
1991 AEP	1002	Niravairi members of the Order of Planar Explorers searching for the god-corpse of Horus use Sub-Level 1 as a base for exploring the Astral Plane
1855 AEP	1138	The Archontean empire formally adopts a new pantheon of deities, known as the Twelve (see Gods of Magae in the World of Archontos appendix)
1839 AEP	1154	The worship of Set is proscribed within the Archontean empire
1833 AEP	1160	The embassy of the elven lord, Gilleshorn Ellagelsson, to Archontos ends in disaster, when a mob kills him in the streets; many elves withdraw from imperial lands
1818 AEP	1175	Emperor Drusus VII Fusus withdraws the weakened legions from Irthuïn, abandoning imperial citizens in Narsileon, Arcturos and elsewhere; jubilant Thorcinga occupy these worried cities
1803 AEP	1190	Emperor Drusus VI Tenax orders the abandonment of the city of Arden Vul; the archon, Pellas the Last, oversees the evacuation
1801 AEP	1192	The arch-mage, Kel Bormol, is imprisoned in his own chess set by his rival, Hithra the Paleologue (see SL3-2A)
1793 AEP	1200	The war of Sortians and Theosophs comes to an end
1783 AEP	1210	The city of Arden Vul is brutally sacked by dragons and renegade Sortians during the war of Sortians and Theosophs. The archon, Uriel Basileon, dies in her palace. The varumani revolt under the mountain, expelling the Archonteans from the Lower Halls
1775 AEP	1218	The city of Agoreon, the Archontean empire's 'second capital' located on the edge of Ostraios, is sacked by Theosophic troops during the War of Sortians and Theosophs
1729 AEP	1264	Alcibiades the Hunter, archon of Arden Vul, orders the priesthoods to arrest all suspected Sortians. Berenib, the high priestess of Bastet, refuses, and the Bastet cult flees to Level 8
1713 AEP	1280	Priscus Pulcher, the leader of the Sortians, is executed by Gordion ('the Impaler'), archon of Arden Vul
1701 AEP	1292	Zhorak, the great dwarven smith (see 8-97), dies inside Arden Vul, although his death is unknown to imperial authorities
1698 AEP	1295	Emperor Vaslotus IV formally accuses Priscus Pulcher of stealing the Compact of Ennius from the imperial treasury, thus setting off the War of Sortians and Theosophs
1687 AEP	1306	The Order of Thoth votes to democratize its membership following pressure by Priscus Pulcher and other soi-disant Sortians. Certain conservative members of the Order of Thoth announce the formation of the first new collegium, the New Imperial Academy
1680-850 AEP	1313 to 2143 years ago	The Archontean Golden Age

DESIGN PRINCIPLES

When I began the decade-long process of creating the Halls, I had four principles in mind. The first was that the dungeon needed to be large. This meant not merely big, but truly large. Inspired by a spate of message-board threads and blog-posts about mega-dungeons, Arden Vul was intended from the beginning to be one of the largest mega-dungeons published for old-school gaming. To our delight, we appear to have met this goal. The Halls comprise more than 2,000 keyed encounter areas spread across ten main levels and fifteen sub-levels. That's a lot of adventuring! While not quite on the scale of the Mythic Underworld beloved of some old-schoolers, the Halls are so large that they ought to be properly understood more as a campaign product than as a typical dungeon adventure. The scale of the Halls and the variety of adventuring experiences available within them ensure that no two groups will encounter the Halls in the same way. In fact, the same group might well be able to run several different parties through the Halls and never replicate their own experiences.

The second guiding principle behind this product was coherence. A dungeon might be large, but its size won't mean much if it doesn't also offer a gripping and inspiring context and setting for adventure. With Arden Vul we have attempted to provide a rich backstory (well, really, many rich backstories) which adventuring parties can use as inspirations for unlocking secrets, confronting powerful foes, and 'liberating' great treasures. What is more, the product is self-referential in numerous subtle ways. This means that actions taken by adventurers one level can and will affect their adventures elsewhere in the Halls, sometimes in ways that they may not even realize. We have provided numerous cross-references which the GM can use to help keep track of how foolish or clever actions in one place might affect actions taken elsewhere. In this sense, the Halls are a living place, and the adventurers only one of many inputs that affect how the site evolves and changes. Some GMs and some parties may be less interested in backstory, history, and/or interconnections. That's fine. The Halls work perfectly well without paying attention to such matters. But for those GMs wishing to get the most out of the product, that background is fully available, both in the appendices (World of Archontos, Arden Vul books) and in some of the introductory chapters (Factions of Arden Vul).

The third guiding principle was that the Halls ought to offer a loving homage to the tropes of old-school gaming. The Halls attempt therefore to offer plenty of the familiar in terms of monsters, traps, puzzles, and treasures while simultaneously offering new interpretations of and variations on those tropes, all intended to challenge even the most grizzled grognard. So, while there are some familiar motifs (like pit traps), there are also scores of new traps, designed solely for this product. Similarly, while many of the foes found in the original three monster books can be encountered here, so too can some 200 new monsters, all designed in the old-school vein. Other old-school tropes abound. The Halls are dangerous. PCs will undoubtedly die. Such is the way of it! In addition, while the product generally follows the old trope that dungeon levels get tougher the deeper they are from the surface, this is only a guideline and not a rule. Indeed, there's nothing more annoying than players confidently asserting that since it's the 2nd level of the dungeon, they can expect to face only 1st or 2nd-level monsters! PCs adventuring in the Halls will need, to the contrary, to be extremely cautious; they will need to gauge each situation carefully, and be prepared to flee if (as is likely) they stumble across a hidden location that is clearly out of their league. Of course we have not been purposefully sadistic. In most cases, it should be clear from context clues that PCs have stumbled into dangerous areas, even if it is 'only' on Level 3.

The fourth guiding principle was that the Halls should offer the opportunity for lots of styles of role-playing. For those who prefer combat, the Halls have plenty of opportunities to 'use the axe', and several of the possible culminating encounters provide suitably epic, campaign-defining combats. And yet the Halls are also ripe for negotiation, plotting, and politics: twelve factions of sentient creatures can be found within, many of which are willing to negotiate with like-minded parties. In addition, the Halls contain two major trading centers, a strange "inn" for travelers, and an arena, all of which can serve as neutral grounds in which parties can catch their breath, heal, and exchange goods and information. For those parties who like to unravel secrets, the Halls provide fertile ground for investigation; such investigations are, in most cases, not merely satisfying to the players' sense of curiosity, they also can prove extremely lucrative to the PCs of such players. Ultimately, the Halls are designed to provide a little bit of everything (or, perhaps, a lot of everything!). In so doing they attempt, humbly, to emulate the great works of the early designers of dungeons.

NOTE ON DESIGNATION OF KEYED LOCATIONS

All keyed locations in this product are designated by a two part code: the first part is a prefix indicating the chapter or level in which the location may be found, while the second is the numbered location within that chapter or level. So, for instance, the famous Obsidian Gates are designated as area 5-6D; this means that they may be found on Level 5, and in area 6D of that level. Similarly, AV-15 indicates the great pyramid of Thoth found in the ruined city of Arden Vul; it is found in the AV (city of Arden Vul) chapter, under area 15.

STARTING LEVELS FOR PCs

The Halls of Arden Vul should provide challenges and fun to PCs of any level from 1st to 12th. Those GMs wishing to start a new campaign with 1st-level PCs should be forewarned, however: the design principles described above mean that fragile new characters need to be exceptionally cautious in adventuring within Arden Vul; the multiple entrance points to the dungeons and multiple interconnections between levels make it entirely possible for cocky PCs to quickly end up in areas that greatly exceed their capabilities. Even in those areas more appropriate to low-level parties, the design principles sketched above mean that PCs should be careful in exploration; they should be ready to flee if (or when) they encounter something beyond their capabilities. Of course, these points lie at the heart of old-school play, and experienced players will know exactly what to expect.

New 1st-level parties should probably have received the rumor that the most accessible entry point is through the Pyramid of Thoth (AV-15). Such information would lead them to Level 3, which was always intended to be the 'default' starting level for 1st-level PCs. If the players are relatively inexperienced, however, the GM might wish to guide them towards Level 1 (perhaps by Kronos Kettle-Belly in AV-22, whose men may have discovered the stairs at AV-17), which was specifically designed as a 'starter' level for players new to the pleasures of old-school gaming. While such weak parties might well discover other enticing secret entrances to the Halls, they should probably know better than to tempt the fates by descending too deeply into the dangers below the mountain.

The GM could also easily drop the Halls into an existing campaign. PCs who have already gained a few experience levels (2nd to 4th levels) will be able to breathe more easily in the lower levels (Level 1, Level 3, Sub-Level 3), and will find Levels 2 and 5 challenging. PCs who have already reached the first edition 'sweet spot' (level 4-7) will find the lower levels relatively easy (at least in most sections), and might be encouraged to delve more deeply, perhaps by revealing one of the direct routes from the surface or cliff face to the middle levels (Level 4, Level 5, Level 6, etc.). Still, as noted above, each level has a mixture of challenges, so even more powerful parties might find themselves needing to work carefully to pass through portions of the lower Halls.

While keeping in mind the principle that every level will have a few challenges above what might be expected, the following chart offers some suggested PC levels for a few of the most accessible upper levels of Arden Vul.

Arden Vul Location	Suggested PC Experience Level	Typical Entry Point(s) to Arden Vul Location
Ruined City (AV)	1 st to 4 th	EX-8 to AV-1
Pyramid of Thoth (UP)	1 st to 3 rd	AV-15
Tower of Scrutiny (TS)	6 th to 9 th	AV-8
Level 1	1 st	AV-17
Level 2	3 rd or 4 th	AV-14, or 3-21
Level 3	1 st to 4 th	AV-15/UP-5, or EX-11, or 1-21
Level 4	2 nd to 5 th	EX-15, or several entrances from Level 3
Level 5	3 rd to 5 th	3-12, or 3-7, or the Great Chasm (5-34)
Sub-Level 3	2 nd to 3 rd	EX-12, or 2-56F, or 3-123
Sub-Level 8	4 th to 7 th	EX-16
Sub-Level 13	6 th to 9 th	EX-17
Sub-Level 15	3 rd to 6 th	AV-46, or 2-33

GENERAL CONSTRUCTION FEATURES

The subterranean regions of Arden Vul have been worked for thousands of years by a series of different peoples. Each of these cultures left a distinctive imprint on the physical space of the Halls. The descriptions below proceed from the first delvers within the halls to the latest.

In what follows, however, it should be remembered that the central feature of the Halls is not man-made at all, but is rather a natural feature, the Great Chasm. Extending more than 1,500 feet between Level 2 and Level 9, the conical Chasm provides the most direct (but dangerous!) means of traveling vertically throughout the dungeons. Unsurprisingly, the Chasm also provided the starting point for most of the cultures that delved beneath the cliff face: heqeti, rudishva, Archonteans and varumani typically used the Chasm as the focal point for their subterranean halls.

Heqeti

The heqeti were the first to delve within Arden Vul. Arriving from the Underearth about 3,600 years ago, they erected the colossal ziggurat of Kauket within the mephitic marsh (10-15) and colonized the floor of the Great Chasm (i.e., Level 9). Limited delving of upper sectors of the Great Chasm, including the pukel-manders (see new magic items), the Obsidian Gates (5-6D), the Hall of Forty Pillars (5-6), and an upper temple to Kauket (7-79), proceeded. The heqeti were driven from Arden Vul twice, first by the rudishva in 32 AEP and again by the Archonteans in 1942 AEP. They returned 300 years ago (2682 AEP) and immediately restored the ziggurat; they now seek to reclaim their former dwellings.

Stonework: Most of the heqeti construction is ancient, dating to the period between 32 and 1942 AEP. Surfaces are worked (with hand tools), but not smoothed; indeed, surfaces have a pebbled, bumpy texture. The heqeti also spread a special non-lethal slime across these surfaces that gives them an oily, greasy feel.

Doors: Doors are stone and typically unlocked

Ceiling Height: 10', unless otherwise indicated

Sculpture and Art: The heqeti do carve statuary and relief images, but infrequently. When they do, the subject matter tends to be struggle against their enemies and/or images of their great dread lords, Kauket and Rimmaq-Isfet. The great pukel-manders (see new magic items) are indicative of the heavy, oppressive feel of heqeti artistic programs.

Locations: 2-48, 2-49, 2-56C, 3-51, 3-117, 4-51A, 4-51B, 4-74, 4-151A, 4-152, 5-6, 5-18, 5-25, 5-41, 5-42, 5-46 to 5-49, 5-52, 5-104, 6-1, 6-50, 6-51, 6-54, 6-68, 6-92 to 6-98, 6-104 to 6-107, 7-78 to 7-84, 7-138, 7-139, 8-25, 8-26, 8-76, 8-159, 8-162, 8-165, 9-31 to 9-48, 9-76 to 9-82, 9-108 to 9-126, all worked areas of Level 10, SL5-32, SL5-36 to SL5-42, SL6-4, SL6-6, SL6-35, SL9-27, SL9-30. Mention should be made of the pukel-manders scattered throughout the upper levels. Finally, although areas 6-41 to 6-43 and 6-55 to 6-91 were originally heqeti areas, they have been repurposed over the millennia and have thus lost some of the pebbling and most of the oiliness of typical heqeti chambers.

Rudishva

The rudishva arrived in 32 AEP when their starship, the Shining Beacon of Glorious Heaven (aka, the Beacon), crashed into the cliff, its matter-phased pieces scattered at various depths. Once it was clear that rescue was not imminent and that the Beacon would never fly again, the rudishva began constructing permanent dwellings. They drove the heqeti from the upper reaches of the Great Chasm and established a base on what is now Level 5, locating it behind the ancient heqeti Obsidian Gates. These dwelling were connected to the surviving modules of the Beacon by a network of teleportation nodes. As the years of exile turned into decades and the heqeti resistance stiffened, the rudishva established breeding nests for the varuda and growth tanks for the varumani (the Troll Pits, 5-132). With these additional forces, the rudishva went to war against the heqeti and drove them from Arden Vul (77 AEP) Over the next century, the rudishva expanded into other portions of the halls, delving new halls on Level 9 and elsewhere while hegemony scientists attempted to engineer a new propulsion formula for their shuttle craft (SL13-37). During these years, the heqeti returned in secret to Arden Vul. Allying themselves with the traitorous kaliyani, the heqeti launched a surprise attack on the rudishva hegemony in 193 AEP; the heqeti slimes were deadly, and wiped out the rudishva, the varuda, and half of the varumani. The rudishva halls have remained unoccupied ever since.

Stonework: The rudishva favored a modernistic, 'clean' style in which right angles were absent. All rudishva chambers and halls therefore have rounded corners and no ninety-degree angles. The style has the effect of rendering corridors tunnel-like and chambers ovoid. The surfaces of rudishva chambers are typically sheathed with highly polished marble, either in pure white or dark black; the sheathing is formed of octagonal tiles, which fit together perfectly without grout lines (thanks to the advanced mining and cutting tools available to the rudishva).

Doors: Rudishva doors are always 6'-diameter oval dilating irises made of grey plasteel. An oval panel 6" high is set into the wall on the right side of the door; this panel flickers with a colored light that runs successively through the color spectrum. Each door was originally installed with security protocols that allowed only those crewmen of a particular rank to open the door. In game terms this means that a rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items) of the correct color must be placed against the panel, at which point the plasteel irises open.

Sculpture and Art: The rudishva did not typically adorn public areas with sculpture or painting, so most of the ancient areas connected to the survivors of the Beacon are featureless. A few exceptions exist, especially in areas connected with the kaliyani, as the kaliyani culture did favor sculptural art (see below). One important exception is the Midnight Road itself (5-91), along which runs a kaliyani-inspired frieze of complex, kinetic sculpture of writhing figures surrounded by floral and geometric patterns.

Locations: 3-39, 4-156, 4-157, 4-158, 5-30, 5-31, 5-53, 5-54, 5-84, 5-86 to 5-98, 5-105 to 5-138, 6-4, 6-5, 6-27 to 6-38, 6-95A, 6-99, 6-100, 6-102, 6-103, 6-109 to 6-111, 6-113 to 6-124, 6-162 to 6-164, 7-4 to 7-6, 7-35 to 7-44, 7-108 to 7-111, 7-143 to 7-146, 8-29, 8-35, 8-46 to 8-48, 8-51 to 8-53, 8-56, 8-59, 8-62, 8-157, 9-29 to 9-30, 9-88 to 9-97, SL2-2, SL2-3, SL6-3, SL6-27, SL6-32, SL6-37, SL9-41, SL9-41A, SL9-43 to SL9-49, SL9-52, SL9-53, SL10A-30 to SL10A-33, SL12-4 to SL12-12, SL13-37 to SL13-39, SL14-6 to SL14-14

Varumani

The varumani survivors fled the collapse of the rudishva hegemony in 193 AEP. After wandering in the middle levels for several decades, they finally settled into a series of caves halfway down the Great Chasm (Level 7). Over the following centuries they developed a powerful, if insular, society centered around the four clan-holds (7-17, 7-18, 7-25 and 7-26), the thegn's court (7-75), the audience hall (7-27), their 'great pit' (7-32), and a trading center known today as the Troll Market (7-76). As befit security personnel on the Beacon, the modern varumani have labored to ensure that entrance to their halls is protected by a handful of choke-points. Aside from the system of troll lifts developed close to 500 years ago, the varumani have seen little reason to expand beyond their carefully-guarded hold.

Stonework: The varumani halls feature carefully-worked and polished native stone (granite, mostly).

Doors: Varumani doors mimic Archontean ones; that is, they are formed of wood with iron bands for extra support.

Ceiling Height: Varumani ceilings are 10' high unless otherwise indicated.

Sculpture and Art: Influenced by long centuries as tributaries to the human archons, varumani art is clearly modelled on Archontean forms and styles. It includes brightly painted walls, life-sized statues, the occasional fresco representing a thegn or some heroic feat of arms, etc. In terms of quality, though, varumani sculptors and painters are more enthusiastic than skilled.

Locations: 7-1, 7-8 to 7-33, 7-65 to 7-77

Archontean

The Archontean arrived at Arden Vul in the century after two Archontean heroes, Arden the Defender and Vul the Sorcerer, 'discovered' the area in 829 AEP. The surface city was chartered by imperial decree in 893 AEP, and, seeking arcanum (see new magic items) and ancient artifacts and knowledge, the Archontean began delving into the subterranean areas shortly thereafter. The powerful and wealthy temples of Thoth and Set were major pioneers in this effort, together developing much of Levels 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5, and Sub-Levels 2, 3 and 8. Building projects sponsored by the (secular) imperial administration were responsible for developing sections of Levels 6, 7, 8, and 9, and Sub-Levels 4, 6, 7, and 13. Individual Archontean officials also developed tombs and other hidden retreats throughout the complex; two of the most significant were the famous tombs of the Drowned Canyon (SL6) and the almost unknown tomb of Isadora (SL11).

Stonework: The quality of Archontean masonry is generally high, with neatly trimmed native walls covered (originally) in plaster. Most plastered surfaces were painted with bright colors, with some carrying painted frescoes appropriate to the purpose of their chamber.

Doors: Doors are wood, with iron bands for support.

Ceiling Height: 10' unless otherwise indicated.

Sculpture and Art: The ancient Archontean favored representational art. As a result, important public chambers were typically plastered and then either painted with frescoes depicting scenes appropriate to the function of the chamber, or painted simply in a vibrant color. Sculpture was typically highly realistic, taking either the form of free-standing statues or of relief sculptures of varying depth. Modern Archontean art is frequently less realistic, although still representational, favoring wispy, elongated, ethereal depictions of idealized persons; it is typically found only in those areas occupied by the failed expedition of Adrienic (e.g., 5-15, 5-16, 5-19 to 5-24, etc.). It is possible for a viewer well-versed in ancient iconography to deduce the builders and purposes of individual chambers from the garb of figures depicted in frescoes: regions built by the priesthood of Thoth, for instance, will include images of priests in tall cylindrical headdresses and heavy vestments (in orange), as well as repeated use of ibis, baboon, and other appropriate images.

Locations: All of the ruined city (AV map), all of the Tower of Scrutiny (TS map), all of the Pyramid of Thoth (UP map), all of Level 1, all worked areas of Level 2 (except 2-48, 2-49, and 2-56C), all worked areas of Level 3 (except 3-39, 3-51, 3-117, and 3-192), 4-1 to 4-51, 4-52 to 4-62, 4-101 to 4-111, 4-118 to 4-120, 4-122 to 4-150, 4-159 to 4-164, 4-167 to 4-171, 4-177, 4-180, 4-181, 4-183, 4-185, 4-187, 5-1, 5-6 to 5-17, 5-19 to 5-24, 5-26 to 5-29, 5-35 to 5-40, 5-56 to 5-64, 5-66 to 5-81, 5-83, 5-85, 6-7 to 6-16, 6-18 to 6-20, 6-40, 6-44 to 6-49, 6-52, 6-53, 6-130 to 6-160, 7-100, 7-119 to 7-130, 7-136, 8-1, 8-3 to 8-21, 8-28, 8-30 to 8-34, 8-36 to 8-41, 8-69, 8-70, 8-77 to 8-79, 8-83 to 8-86, 8-95 to 8-107, 8-119 to 8-127, 8-133, 8-142 to 8-149, 8-168, 9-58 to 9-64, 9-98, and 9-100 to 9-107, SL2-1, SL3-2 to SL3-11, all worked areas of SL4, SL5-43 to SL5-47, SL6-2, SL6-5, SL6-7 to SL6-10, SL6-16, SL6-17, SL6-17A, SL6-20 to SL6-23, SL6-28, SL6-29, SL6-31, SL6-33, SL6-34, SL6-

36, SL6-38 to SL6-48, SL6-55, SL6-58 to SL6-63, SL6-65 to SL6-98, all of Sub-Level 7, SL8-9, SL8-13A, SL8-17 to SL8-24, SL10A-1 to SL10A-6, SL10A-12 to SL10A-28, all of Sub-Level 10B, all of Sub-Level 11, SL13-4 to SL13-27, SL14-1 to SL14-5, SL15-4, SL15-7 to SL15-10, SL15-13, SL15-17

Kaliyani

Although their ancestors were an important part of the rudishva hegemony that built sections of Level 5 (and elsewhere), the modern kaliyani have only a limited footprint in Arden Vul. Arriving in Arden Vul some twenty-one years ago (in 2972 AEP), Tsilliv's band of renegades have developed a small consortium in the kaliyani style on Sub-Level 9. While they are eager to locate traces of their former presence in Arden Vul, they have so far been unwilling to expand beyond the well-guarded precincts of their new consortium.

Stonework: The kaliyani are expert stone carvers. Walls, ceilings and floors within the consortium are neatly worked, and all feature the distinctive “no 90-degree angles” style inherited from the ancient rudishva days. As noted below, the kaliyani prefer to carve low-relief sculptures into all stone surfaces, including floors (although they may place mats atop such carved floors to protect the ceremonial carvings).

Doors: Kaliyani doors are oval in the tradition of the ancient rudishva dilating iris doors, although kaliyani doors are made of stone and do not require identity plaques or high-technology to open. These doors are rarely equipped with locking mechanisms (an exception is SL9-73); most can be pushed or pulled open easily.

Ceiling Height: Ceilings are 15' tall unless otherwise indicated.

Sculpture and Art: For public areas, the kaliyani favor busy, low-relief sculpture that covers every square inch of walls, floors and ceilings. The subject matter of such sculpture is typically kinetic, depicting kaliyani (and other allies) writhing in contest with foes; surrounding and interspersed among the action are floral and geometric images (e.g., 6-32, 6-33, SL9-60 to SL9-63, SL9-66, etc.). Private quarters are typically left un-carved. The kaliyani do produce statues, but rarely; their statues are designed to enhance the glory of a consortium, and are placed accordingly.

Locations: SL9-60 to SL9-77

ICONIC LOCATIONS

Although specific knowledge about the ruined city and dungeons of Arden Vul has mostly faded into oblivion over the last millennium, a few locations remain better known and exercise a talismanic attraction among the civilized peoples. These “iconic locations” are those which the cognoscenti might be expected to remember, even if in only a partial or even faulty manner. It should be noted that almost no common folk outside of Burdock's Valley will know anything about Arden Vul; iconic locations are those likely to be known by sages, scholars working in the imperial or collegial libraries, and a handful of retired adventurers. The following list provides the current scuttlebutt about each location, that is, what makes each place ‘iconic’. In addition, the list describes the veracity of the scuttlebutt, and the degree to which the information is widespread (i.e., how prevalent it is).

Adventurers and sages are those mostly to have heard of the iconic locations. The GM should feel free to select the locations known by such NPCs to fit her/his needs. Still, if randomization is desired, the following tables can be used to determine which iconic locations are known to a particular NPC. Table I ranks the chance of knowing about a location by the type of location; Table II provides an equal chance to know any of the locations.

Table I: Iconic Locations By Type

d20	Type	Possible Iconic Locations
1-9	Common	The Arena, the Forum of Set, the Glory of Thoth, the Great Cavern, the Great Hall, the Inn of the Lost, the Pyramid of Thoth
10-15	Uncommon	The Court of the Goblin King, the Great Chasm, the Howling Caves, the Obsidian Gates
16-18	Rare	The Drowned Canyon, the Hall of Forty Pillars, the Red Bridge, the Sundered or Imperial Span, the Well of Light
19-20	Esoteric	The Forge of Zhorak, the Troll Market, the Ziggurat

Table II: List of All Iconic Locations

d20	Location	d20	Location
1	The Arena	11	The Howling Caves
2	The Court of the Goblin King	12	The Inn of the Lost
3	The Drowned Canyon	13	The Obsidian Gates
4	The Forge of Zhorak	14	The Pyramid of Thoth
5	The Forum of Set	15	The Red Bridge
6	The Glory of Thoth	16	The Sundered or Imperial Span
7	The Great Cavern	17	The Troll Market
8	The Great Chasm	18	The Well of Light
9	The Great Hall	19	The Ziggurat
10	The Hall of Forty Pillars	20	Roll Twice, ignoring results of 20

The Arena (6-68)

The Scuttlebutt: A neutral ground deep within the mountain, where gladiatorial bouts are presided over by a fearsome undead warrior. It's a good place to gain experience by fighting, as well as the best spot to gamble and seek information. Bring your purse, because the arena isn't cheap. Although anyone can participate in arena bouts (if they dare), the house gladiators rarely lose. The Arena is hard to find within Arden Vul.

Veracity: Mostly accurate. The Arena Lord (6-85) is not undead, however, and the house gladiators do actually lose. The Arena Lord enforces peace within the Arena precincts, and anyone is permitted to participate ... if they dare. The Arena is actually easy to find, especially if one employs the Troll Lifts (e.g., 5-55 and 6-1)

Prevalence: Common

The Court of the Goblin King (SL4-23)

The Scuttlebutt: A powerful goblin refugee from Archontos holds court in set of halls located in the upper levels. The goblin king's powerful sorcerers and ogre guards are the source of his power. The court is a swirling hotbed of intrigue, backstabbing, and information-trading. It's necessary to propitiate the goblin king in order to travel to the deeper levels, where the real wealth is to be found. The goblin court is best accessed through the pyramid.

Veracity: Partly accurate. The court of King Weskenim (SL4-22) is busy, but its rituals are mostly empty, and the king is eager to talk to (and impress) visitors. The goblin halls do not actually block access to the lower halls, although befriending the goblins will make it easier to access the chasm and the Sundered Span. Many informants seem to have conflated the goblin court with the larger and more dangerous court of the varumani thegn (7-75).

Prevalence: Uncommon

The Drowned Canyon (SL6-24)

The Scuttlebutt: The Drowned Canyon is an El Dorado-like location, where the un-plundered tombs of ancient imperial officials lie ripe for the looting. Most informants will confidently claim that one of the great lost treasures of antiquity is definitely to be found there: e.g., the iron circlet of Ghanor, the bone ring of Jagri-Naz, the armor of Sulla, or any of the unique, named magic weapons (see new magic items). Of course, most of those rumors are not true. Reports about why the canyon is 'drowned' vary, with most speaking of a vast lake that covers the tomb entrances. Most reports claim that there is only one entrance to the canyon, and that it is to be found in a hidden location within the old temple precincts (e.g., Levels 3 or 4).

Veracity: Some of the general information is accurate, including access routes found at 3-87 and 5-115, but the information about specific treasures is entirely false.

Prevalence: Rare

The Forge of Zhorak (8-100)

The Scuttlebutt: Attracted by the magical properties of Arden Vul, the legendary dwarven smith Zhorak set up his forge under the cliff of Arden Vul. The forge can be used to create magical items to this day, provided the smith knows the correct formulae, is strong enough to operate the forge, and/or can master the magical stone within which the forge was carved. Reports vary about Zhorak's fate: some think he is still living within Arden Vul, forging esoteric items. Others believe that, having been betrayed by imperial authorities, he 'took to the stone' somewhere within Arden Vul, leaving his stash of enchanted equipment to be plundered by the canny and bold.

Veracity: The basic report that Zhorak's forge remains open and usable is true. The report that Zhorak 'took to the stone' is interesting, if ultimately incorrect (for Zhorak's fate, see 8-97); it's interesting because most Archontians don't know almost anything about Dwarven culture, let alone this closely-guarded secret. Of course, most rumor-mongers don't really know what 'took to the stone' means. The other details are mostly fabulous.

Prevalence: Esoteric

The Forum of Set (4-2)

The Scuttlebutt: Although it has been proscribed for centuries within all civilized territories, a cult of the god Set (one of the Twelve) has risen again, and has reoccupied the old market forum within Arden Vul. The forum is easy to access through a hole on the cliff-face. The cultists welcome those who show respect to their dread Lord, and particularly to those who bring valuable goods to trade in the Forum. The Forum is the best site from which to outfit expeditions to other parts of the Halls, at least for those strong enough to resist the nefarious slavers guild, known as the Guild of Service. The high priest of Set commands the loyalty of lots of monsters, who provide security for the Forum.

Veracity: Mostly accurate, especially about the trading function of the Forum and the access point on the cliff-face.

The Glory of Thoth (3-2)

The Scuttlebutt: A glorious, bejeweled statue depicting the god Thoth (one of the Twelve). The statue is said to lie directly beneath the Pyramid of Thoth (AV-15). One must beware, for the Glory comes to life to protect followers of Thoth and to smite evildoers. It is said that placating the Glory with gifts of gnostic knowledge will secure a blessing from the god.

Veracity: Mostly accurate. The statue is located directly beneath the pyramid, and offerings of scrolls do produce a blessing of sorts. The statue does not come to life but is, however, part of a complex puzzle leading to the hidden treasury of Thoth (3-23 and 3-24).

The Great Cavern (3-163, 3-172)

The Scuttlebutt: The priests of Thoth discovered in antiquity an enormous underground cavern containing a river, lake, and giant grove of mushrooms. Strange creatures lived in the groves, but the Thoth priests tamed them. The temple used the fungal forests not only for food, but also as a site in which to conceal the tombs of their favorite priests, including the legendary Ptarmis, who discovered the grove. Today the Cavern is nearly empty, and ripe for pickings. Watch out for the dragonflies, though!

Veracity: Almost entirely true. The dragonfly reference refers to the automatons of Kerbog Khan (SL12-25), which can be either helpful or harmful.

Prevalence: Common

The Great Chasm (2-63A, 3-38, 5-34, 6-108, 7-3, 8-2, 9-1)

The Scuttlebutt: A giant chasm at least 1,000' deep bisects all the underground region of Arden Vul. It's the best way to travel between the multiple levels, especially since a giant staircase has been cut into the walls of the chasm. The only danger are the cave worms that dwell within holes in the chasm wall. It is said that six waterfalls plunge down the chasm! One hot tip is that the shrine to the great Archon Marius is located just off the chasm about halfway down the shaft.

Veracity: Partly accurate. The chasm does extend from level 2 to level 9, and does provide the surest method for quick ascent or descent. While the staircase is a myth, the system of troll lifts (5-55, 6-1 to 6-5, 7-1, 8-1) provides a relatively safe way of traversing the chasm. The shrine of Marius (6-154) is not really located 'just off' the chasm. The story about the cave worms is a total urban legend, created centuries ago by bored adventurers; other threats, including cavern cephalopods, do lurk within the chasm, though.

The Great Hall (3-123)

The Scuttlebutt: A giant hall of crucial importance to the exploration of Arden Vul. Some argue that the Great Hall is the same as the Hall of Forty Pillars, while others claim it holds the Obsidian Gates, and still others speak of it in hushed tones as the punishment hall of the priesthood of Thoth, where the barks and whoops of dead prisoners still echo today. Only a handful describe it as two- or three-story hall filled with broken pillars and strange statuary, lying moreover in a strategic position on the borders of the territory of some deadly humanoid warriors. All agree, however, that the Great Hall is an essential landmark, one that provides a jumping off point to [fill in the blank with a specific location - the most reputable accounts accurately note that it leads directly to the Great Cavern].

Veracity: Mixed, mostly because the name of this location is vague enough that explorers have been willing to identify many locations (2-35, 5-66, 6-68, 8-7, etc.) as the 'true' Great Hall. After all, any imposing hall may well seem 'great' to a visitor. The GM could use the general confusion about this location to seed false rumors, or, conversely, to provide useful information to those exploring the upper levels. Ironically, none of the accounts realize that one of the greatest treasures lost within Arden Vul - the iron circlet of Ghanor - is located in a secret tomb just off the Great Hall (3-127).

The Hall of Forty Pillars (5-6)

The Scuttlebutt: A dark, ominous hall filled with heavy, squat pillars. Croaking sounds emanate from the very pillars! Although the Hall of Forty Pillars contains no treasure itself, it is essential to locate, since it leads directly to the fabled Obsidian Gates. Some dark rumors suggest that the souls of dead adventurers are imprisoned within the pillars. The Hall is said to lie on the level below the old Archontean temples. A few claim it was not built by human hands.

Veracity: Mostly accurate, although the rumors that the pillars contain souls are false. The croaking noises come from the strange toads that inhabit the hall.

The Howling Caves (2-56)

The Scuttlebutt: A series of natural caves abutting the old precincts of Thoth in the upper levels. They take their name from the howls and moans that emanate from them. Explanations for the howling vary. Most attribute them to the hunger of a battalion of ghouls created from the corpses of long-dead priests abandoned during the Archontean retreat. Others claim the howls are produced by a series of mutant dogs that roam the ruins. All, however, claim that it is best to exercise extreme light- and noise-discipline when exploring the precincts of Thoth. No treasure rumors are associated with the Caves; they are mostly cited as a sort of 'bogey-man' designed to frighten or intimidate new explorers.

Veracity: Mixed. The literal Howling Caves are indeed found to the south and east of Level 2, but most explorers use the phrase to describe all of Level 2. The ghoule story is erroneous (although some nasty ghouls can be found nearby, at 2-20 to 2-22). The 'mutant dog' story is closer to reality, as the howls are produced by the large albino baboons that hunt in packs. Most accounts are hazy about which parts of the precincts of Thoth are affected by the Howling Caves; for instance, Level 3 is part of the precincts of Thoth but lacks baboons and howls.

Prevalence: Uncommon

The Inn of the Lost (6-7 to 6-20, 6-28)

The Scuttlebutt: A welcome beacon of refuge amid all the hazards of Arden Vul. This inn is operated by a kindly old gentleman, whose magical abilities ensure that no monsters enter the Inn. Rates are reasonable, given its location, and the common room even features decent entertainment. Look for the Peace Door (6-7A), which is located in a corridor lying just east of the Chasm.

Veracity: Accurate. It is true that the Inn offers protection versus all external threats; the rumors do not reveal, however, that the proprietor, Thegan Whitemane, is not always as kindly as he seems (nor is he a sorcerer).

The Obsidian Gates (5-6D)

The Scuttlebutt: A gigantic pair of black, stone doors, beyond which lies the fabled wealth of several lost civilizations. Although famously difficult to penetrate, each report about them usually includes a 'sure-fire' way to get past them. Some of those schemes include tracing the strange glyphs on the doors three times, sacrificing to the correct god in front of the gates, locating a stone guardian whose fingers act as keys to the gates, and so forth. Regardless of the variety of methods for breaching the Gates, the reports uniformly describe vast and unique treasures to be looted behind the Gates. The more sophisticated reports add that these treasures come from an ancient lost civilization that predates the Archontean. A handful of accounts reveal that the Gates are warded against most ordinary magic, including knock and teleport. The rumors place the Obsidian Gates at the end of, or just beyond, the Hall of Forty Pillars, in the middle levels of Arden Vul. All agree that the Gates were never penetrated by the great sorcerers of antiquity.

Veracity: Accurate, except concerning the methods of penetrating the Gates (some of which are downright dangerous!).

The Pyramid of Thoth (AV-15)

The Scuttlebutt: A huge pyramid standing in the ruins of the above-ground city of Arden Vul. The pyramid was a central site for the worship of Thoth, and still contains a bejeweled cult statue. More importantly, the pyramid contains the best and most reliable way of entering the dungeon levels. It is said that placating the cult statue is the way to open the route to the dungeons. Wise speakers might comment on the strange fact that the pyramid is one of the few structures in the city that was not ruined by the [dragon, Sortian magic, giants, divine anger - the cause varies by speaker] that destroyed the city.

Veracity: The basic facts are accurate, except for the causes for the city's destruction.

The Red Bridge (4-120A)

The Scuttlebutt: A bridge made of red stone spanning a depthless chasm and leading straight to the Forum of Set. Reaching the Red Bridge is a sign that one is safe within the precincts of Set. Most agree that the Red Bridge is also enchanted such that it prevents those intending harm to Set from passing. The Bridge is best accessed through a cave on the cliff face, to the west of the waterfall; one must traverse several ruined halls before reaching it.

Veracity: Mostly accurate. Although located on the southern borders of the safe zone delimited by the cult of Set, the Bridge is not entirely safe, as cavern cephalopods often threaten those who traverse it. The Bridge is enchanted, but not in the manner suggested by the rumors; instead, it amplifies footfalls so as to alert the Set guardsmen of approaching visitors.

Prevalence: Rare

The Sundered, or Imperial, Span (5-35)

The Scuttlebutt: A prominent landmark within Arden Vul, this bridge crosses the Great Chasm at a point about halfway down the chasm's vertical distance. It marks the boundary between the territory of the goblins to the west and the vicious trolls to the east. The name given to the Span varies by the teller; those of a more historical or scholarly bent might accord the bridge the name 'Imperial Span' as a memory of its role in helping ensure the Archontean hegemony; more casual or more recent travelers might call it the Sundered Span, noting that it has been broken in the middle (although a jury-rigged repair job still allows passage). A few accounts warn of the swarms of goblins and/or Arden Vul trolls that guard either end of the Bridge; these enemies must either be defeated or bribed to allow passage. There's a small chance that an interlocutor describes an 'island' floating in the chasm below the Span (i.e., 6-4).

Veracity: The basic facts of the Span's location, status (sundered), and proximity both to the goblins and the varumani are accurate. The stories about hordes of goblins and 'trolls' are alarmist; the goblins to the west welcome visitors willing to pay a small toll, while the varumani outpost to the east is in fact the topmost station in the system of troll lifts (5-53 to -5-55).

The Troll Market (7-76)

The Scuttlebutt: An exotic market in the lower levels where all manner of bizarre goods - from coins, statuary, gems and magic, to living creatures and strange plants - are sold by traders hailing from deep beneath the earth. The Troll Market is operated by the band of vicious trolls that control the lower levels; they patrol the market atop giant riding lizards and tolerate no disturbances. In fact, unless they are well lubricated with coin and/or information, they are likely to take offense and sell the incautious into Underearth slavery. Still, the Market is said to be the best place to acquire relics from the lost civilizations that occupied Arden Vul before the Archontean. To reach the Market, one needs to pass the Sundered Span and traverse the Great Chasm almost to the bottom.

Veracity: Partly accurate. It is true that exotic goods are traded here, and that the market is located a good ways down the chasm. The scare stories about the vicious trolls are exaggerated, however; the varumani warmly welcome those traders whom they have invited to the market (by granting them a troll thegn's passport).

The Well of Light (2-1)

The Scuttlebutt: A man-sized well leading from the surface of the ruined city to the private precincts of the old priesthood of Thoth. By all accounts, the Well is extremely dangerous, and only the most experienced and well-warded adventurers are advised to even consider testing it. Some accounts emphasize the blinding glare or even burning interior surface of the well; other accounts focus on the troops of undead, including magic using creatures, that lie at the foot of the well. Still, a common refrain about the Well links it to the lost library of Thoth, which is said to contain much lost and valuable knowledge (2-7); for this reason, there seems to be no end of adventurers willing to risk the well. It is easy to find the mouth of the well amid the ruins of the northeastern quadrant of the city, not far from the pyramid of Thoth.

Veracity: The basic facts are fairly accurate, as the well is located near the pyramid, and does debouch near both the library of Thoth and the secret library of Thoth (2-72). The dangers of climbing up and down the well are largely exaggerated, as are the threats awaiting those who successfully make the climb: rather than undead, it is the packs of feral baboons who pose the greatest threat to adventurers.

Prevalence: Rare

The Ziggurat (10-32 to 10-37)

The Scuttlebutt: A cursed ziggurat built of cyclopean blocks of pitted, greasy stone occupies the lowest levels of Arden Vul. The ziggurat serves as the focus for a demon-prince of great power and malevolence. His servitors periodically restore the shrine, from which emanates great evil and corruption. The archons of old cleansed the ziggurat thoroughly, but (say some) evil has crept back into the site. Perhaps a new alliance of heroes is needed to cleanse it for good? Reports are vague about the location of the ziggurat, except to note that it lies below the foot of the Great Chasm.

Veracity: Mostly accurate as far as it goes. The ziggurat is devoted to the worship of the demon-prince Kauket, and the heqeti have indeed restored the site. The ziggurat can be accessed through tunnels leading downwards from the chasm floor (see 9-82).

RUMORS

The following two tables offer 200 hooks designed to entice PCs into adventuring in Arden Vul. Table 1 contains the usual sort of rumors that might be derived from conversation with other adventurers who braved the Halls or from tired barkeepers who have had to listen to adventurers whine about their failures (or boast about their successes). Table 2 contains more historical rumors, of the sort that might be gleaned from first-hand research or conversation with knowledgeable scholars.

It is recommended that each PC new to adventuring in Arden Vul be allowed at least one roll on each of the two tables. These base rolls reflect the background knowledge specific to that PC. Suggestions for how many rolls to allow per PC per table are provided below.

It is also possible that PCs may seek additional information about Arden Vul from NPCs in Burdock's Valley (or elsewhere). In such cases, the GM should use his/her discretion in deciding which table to use to generate rumors. If the person queried is a bartender or ex-adventurer, then Table 1 is appropriate. If the person queried is likely by virtue of his/her occupation or status to possess historical information about the Halls, then Table 2 might be appropriate. If the GM wishes to randomize the generation of subsequent rumors, he/she should roll d10 on the following chart.

D10 Roll	Result
1-6	Table 1 (Adventuring Rumors)
7-10	Table 2 (Historical Rumors)

Table 1: Adventuring Rumors

The items on this table are of the sort that might be provided by experienced NPC adventurers, or by inhabitants of Burdock's Valley with good reason to know something about the Halls (e.g., bartenders, innkeepers, rangers, certain priests, etc.). These rumors are thus likely to be based (at least theoretically) upon relatively recent practical experience or on recent hearsay; in this way, this table differs from the second, which contains more abstract, historical information.

How to Use This Table: It is recommended that every PC new to adventuring in Arden Vul roll 1-3 times on this table, using d100 to determine results.

Key and Organization of Sub-Table: The rumors are grouped according to their rarity. Rumors 1-30 are Common (C); rumors 31-60 are Uncommon (U), rumors 61-80 are Rare (R), rumors 81-99 are Very Rare (V), and rumor 100 is special. Such a grouping based on ascending order of rarity allows a GM who wishes to drop a further rumor during play to quickly locate rumors of a suitable sort.

Rumor Table 1: Adventuring Rumors

d100	Rumor
1	The old Pyramid of Thoth (AV-15) is the most accessible - and safest - means of entering the Halls of Arden Vul (mostly T). The long staircase through the pyramid that leads to the first dungeon level (3-1) is worn with age and covered with layers of graffiti; some of that graffiti is really useful! (T).
2	The upper dungeon levels under the pyramid were looted centuries ago (T/F), so it's best to find an alternate entrance. For instance, those creepy soldiers that look like animals must have their own entrance (T, see EX-11). In addition, there seems to be an unlimited supply of those white baboons - but where are they coming from? (T, EX-12)
3	The Great Chasm is an important route to the lower levels (T). Or so my sources said. The problem? A tribe of trolls lives in the chasm (F). They ride on top of tamed giant spiders so they can scamper up and down the chasm walls (F). Avoid it, mate! It's death to try the chasm.
4	There's a goblin city in the middle levels somewhere (T, see Sub-Level 4). The main entrance is a huge iron gate built into the wall of that Great Chasm that extends down into the depths (F). Find the great stone seat near Sundered Span (5-35), and you can rappel down from there (F). But be sure to bring tribute, as the goblin king requires a suitable gift to let you in (F).
5	The beast-soldiers hate the goblins (T) and the halflings (F). Those beasties are dangerous, especially the dog-men; they are stealthy and also use good military discipline (T). They even use poison! (F) They worship an obscure goddess named Dayn (T/F; her name is Deino, but she's not a goddess).
6	Bring lots of rope, since there's a massive chasm that extends throughout multiple levels. (T). It's the best way to get from the Thothian precincts to the lower levels (T/F), but it's extremely dangerous, since a tribe of flying baboons inhabits it (F).
7	Some talk about a chasm within the mountain, and claim it's a safe way to travel through the levels (T). This is a lie, as the 'chasm' is actually the mouth and intestines of an enormous underground serpent (F).
8	Powerful artifacts from the glory days of the Archontean empire are still to be found within (T), including the Orb of Krieg (F), the Ebon Spear (T; see SL5-13B) and the Bone Ring of Jagri-Naz (T, 5-74). The best source of information on their location is the Sage of the Middle Levels, a strange fellow named Gog (F, 5-2). Feed him some beast-flesh, and he'll set you straight.
9	Beware the Howling Caves! They're filled with ghouls that make this weird hooting and howling sound (F). I heard the ghouls are twice as strong as normal and howl in that way because of the strange enchanted, orange-colored rocks that stud the walls of their cave (F).
10	You should avoid the Shining Well that leads into Arden Vul. Unholy lights strobe up its length, causing permanent blindness in all and madness in a few. Even if you make it to the bottom, the ghouls are sure to make short work of you in the demonic light (F).

11	Watch out for lingering magical effects! They're all over the place. For example ... (roll d6) <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. there are mists on the entry level that teleport you to a random location (F)</li> <li>2. a lot of the doors are false. When you open one, you'll see a mirror that turns you to stone (F)</li> <li>3. some areas are inaccessible due to permanent walls of incredibly hot fire. Each wall of fire has a weird, dancing figure inside it (T-ish)</li> <li>4. giant dragonflies - an escaped wizard's experiment - fly around the whole place, blasting people with lightning from their eyes (T/F)</li> <li>5. you've heard of magic mouths? That place has magic bodies! I'm talking about enchanted frescoes that step off of the walls and chase you (F)</li> <li>6. the Thoth priests loved teleportation. Watch out for doors marked with an ibis, since they'll teleport you to a new location if you step through one (F)</li> </ol>
12	The goblins hate the beast-soldiers with a passion (T). We struck a deal to help the gobbos eliminate the walking beasts, but it proved too difficult, mostly because those dog-men have built some sophisticated fortifications and are pretty good with missiles (T). Then the goblins got mad at us and we had to run. My advice? Don't negotiate with anyone. Kill 'em all (F).
13	The priests of Mitra are looking for some chumps to track down one of their missing clergy, a priestess named Lillian. It seems she went missing by that huge overgrown Thicket down near the cliff of Arden Vul. We ran into a shepherd who claims he saw her being taken by walking pigs up the cliff into the ruins of Arden Vul (T/F). If you can find and return this Lillian, there's a big reward posted in Newmarket.
14	Everyone uses the old pyramid of Thoth (AV-15) to enter the halls (by the way, check out the gems used for that statue's eyes! My party leader wouldn't let me grab 'em. Superstitious fool). But because everyone uses that entrance, the areas beneath the pyramid have already been picked clean (T-ish). I'd suggest finding another route - I heard there was a Shining Well (T, 2-1) that leads straight to the sweet loot (F).
15	I saw some dodgy-looking tinkers and tradesmen making their way for something they called 'the Forum' (see 4-2), saying that Stephania (4-51) paid good money for the most basic supplies (T). They said: "If you want to go to the Forum, shine two lanterns from the left side of the river at night-time. Then look for the basket on the cliff face" (T)
16	Last week an adventurer collapsed in the street just in front of me. She was charred and badly wounded. She said she had just escaped from the Halls. Her last words? "Beware the Pyramid! The Eyes! The Eyes! They were everywhere ... and then, fire, lightning and swirling lights" (F)
17	There are some pretty bad people in there, each with his/her own band of followers. The worst of them is (roll d6): <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. the Red Witch, Steffie, with her hordes of zombies</li> <li>2. the troll king Weskim, whose trolls ride giant spiders into battle</li> <li>3. the bad-tempered sorcerer Carabog, who commands a horde of giant insects</li> <li>4. Okanda, an ape the size of a building, with its ape-man servitors</li> <li>5. the Mummy-King, Lotharius the Stern</li> <li>6. Master Meteorite, leader of a band of soulless, undead knights</li> </ol> [Note: these are all F as written, although the names Steffie, Weskim, Carabog, and Master Meteorite are corruptions of actual individuals - High Priestess Stephania of the cult of Set (4-51); Weskenim, king of the Goblins (SL4-22), Kerbog Khan (SL12-25), and Master Malachite, leader of the Sun-Scarred Knights (SL10A-32). Okanda and Lotharius do not exist]
18	That place attracts wizards and priests like dung attracts flies (T). A crazed wizard named Khan rules the second level from the top with the aid of an army of ghouls (F). It's said he needs new souls to keep him alive; his ghouls do the procuring for him (F). The worst part? He pretends to be helpful ... that's when the ghouls strike!
19	A psychotic halfling thug named Plummie, Plumit, or Plum-something has taken over the top level, just under the pyramid. He won't let anyone pass unless they buy an 'exploration license' (T, see 3-5). I'd pay up, because his goons are armed with potent magic wands (F).
20	The ibis-priests from the old days had an incredible library of rare books (T) on the fourth level down from the surface (F). The library is still filled with books, including ritual manuals, spell books, and obscure histories (T). The problem is that it is defended by the spectral form of the last librarian, who won't let any items be removed from the shelves (F).
21	Strange dragonflies flit about the underground areas. Their eyes appear to be formed of gems. Some of them can actually speak! (T) The speaking ones will try to bargain with you - offering information or healing in return for gems (T-ish).
22	At the foot of the chasm is a huge cistern the size of a lake (T/F - there is a lake at the bottom of the chasm). The cistern is 100' deep and covers the area of a small town. It is ruled by a terrible kraken (F).
23	A terrible dragon is the ruler of the surface ruins of Arden Vul (T). To access the dungeons you need to sneak past her in the dead of the night, when she's sleeping (F). I've heard that she extorts a toll on all those she catches exiting the Halls (T-ish). If you can't pay, she burns you up (T/F).
24	Everyone talks about the Drowned Canyon and all its wealth, but I don't know any adventurer who admits to actually having found the damned canyon! (T) The entire thing is a myth (F).

25	We visited the Forum of Set and saw the sites. You know, the big statue of Set and the pitiful slaves at his feet, the marketplace, and so forth. We paid up to attend the First Mystery. Huh, pretty lame! No, I won't tell you what it is ... it's a mystery! But the Second Mystery ... that was impressive! I heard there's supposed to be a Third Mystery, but when we asked the Deacon about it he told us to shut up or we'd be sold as slaves. (T)
26	A dueling arena exists (T) on the seventh level beneath the cliff (F). It is accessible through a gate set into the Great Chasm (F). The arena hosts bouts between gladiators and monsters (T). If you can't pay your gambling debt, you have to face a hydra in the pit (F).
27	The Set priests are slavers. Anyone they encounter on the Long Stairs leading to their Forum is liable to be enslaved. If you make it to the Forum, though, you're safe (T).
28	The beast soldiers sometimes visit the kobolds who live in that massive thicket southwest of Arden Vul (T). It's the best time to ambush them, when they're far away from home. Sometimes the beastmen bring captives from the Thicket to the Halls (T).
29	A fortified roadhouse exists within the ruins of the old city. You can get a bed and a meal there, and can sometimes sell extra loot to some traders who hang out in the common room. It's run by an Archontean fellow named Kettle-Belly (T). He's a good bloke (T/F).
30	The Green Lady who runs the town of Gosterwick is hiring adventurers to locate some important treasure inside Arden Vul (T). She'll outfit you with equipment and let you keep everything except .... (roll d6) 1. the iron circlet of Ghanor (3-127, see new magic items) 2. the bone ring of Jagri-Naz (5-74, see new magic items) 3. the ebon spear of Kentillian (SL5-13B, see new magic items) 4. the ebony egg of Firuz (F) 5. the tablet of the Beacon (9-107, see new technological items) 6. the sword of Marius the Conqueror (F)
31	We met a crazy hermit in the ruins of the city (T; Lankios). His stew is foul, but if you eat with him, he'll give you some good directions (T and F). For instance, there's a staircase hidden behind a painted image of a baboon; it leads down to what the hermit called 'the scene of the crime' (T, see 3-12 and 5-11)
32	A patrol of those animal-soldiers told us about a series of elevators operated by intelligent trolls. The elevators can take you from the upper levels to the lower levels, easy as pie (T, see 5-55). Only those who secure the permission of the troll theyn can use them, though (F).
33	A massive ziggurat exists at the floor of the Great Chasm (T, 10-32 to 10-37); it's inhabited by undead giants (F).
34	We knew some folks who climbed down a well from the surface into the secret halls of Thoth (see AV-14). All but one never came back, and the one that did was blind and mad! He kept babbling about the dark and the hooting ... the hooting .... (T/F)
35	No one has made it past the Obsidian Gates (T, mostly), since even knock spell is unable to open them (T). The best treasures are said to lie behind those gates (T).
36	Most of the archons of Arden Vul built their tombs under the city, in odd corners of the Halls (T). So it's best to keep an eye out for strange construction and secret passages. I've heard that the tomb of [roll d10 on list below] is located within a grove of underground almond trees (T/F; the tombs below are all real, but none are located in a grove of almond trees). 1. Metion the Stern (5-17) 2. Basil the Archon (5-23) 3. Muirasso (5-36 to 5-40) 4. Julian Grex (5-85) 5. Liskon the Mad (8-133) 6. Phocion the Builder (8-142 to 8-144) 7. Agaperion Martel (9-128) 8. Zoferus Felix (SL6-42) 9. Hesezion the Red-Handed (SL6-59) 10. Borsella Iron-Fist (SL6-63)
37	There's a massive flooded canyon in there filled with tombs that predate the empire (T). The tombs are still loaded with treasure, just waiting to be looted (T). The canyon is easily accessible from the shrine of Marius (T/F) and is practically undefended due to the water (F).
38	A tribe of advanced lizardmen controls access to the lower levels (F). Although they worship a giant snake (T/F), they are more intelligent than the usual sort (F), and have advanced weaponry and magic (F).
39	It's worth trying to get information from anyone who is willing to talk. Most intelligent sorts will be willing to parlay, and a few have seriously good info! Look for a strange half-troll called Gog - he'll steer you right (T/F; see 5-2). It's the non-intelligent things that you have to watch out for.

40	A unique source of magical energy exists inside the plateau, drawing both creatures and inquisitive mages (T, arcanum , see new magic items). It can be manipulated by powerful mages for good ... or for ill (T). Look for the orange rocks.
41	Everyone heads to Arden Vul to try to plunder the subterranean vaults. But consider this - how much loot is just lying around in the ruins of the city? Why even go underground? We spent a couple of days at that fortified roadhouse run by that bloke, Kronos, and saw no threats in the city ruins (see AV-22). Nothing! (F) Sure the dragon flies around a lot, but if you're quick and silent, you ought to be able to slip into the Carrion Tower (AV-27) or the ruined palace of the archons (AV-29), and make your killing easy enough - right? But no, our leader wanted to go underground. See what it got me? [shows stump where his right hand used to be]
42	Lord Burdock used to be an adventurer (F), and he's interested in mounting an expedition into the Halls (T). He'll split any proceeds 50-50 (F). Apply at Castle Burdock at the entrance of the valley.
43	There are supposed to be some safe places in there somewhere, including some kind of Inn or Tavern or some such (T). Those who check in can never leave (F).
44	Some dodgy types came through recently with some trade goods. I overheard 'em talking about "the Forum, within the cliff, where I can trade this food for loot! I may even come away with some slaves!" (T) This Forum is strictly for evil-types (F).
45	An adventurer used this 'relic of Arden Vul' to settle a bet. But it's nothing more than a jagged piece of metal! Sure, it weighs the same as parchment ... but what use does it have? No one I know can make out the symbols on it, either! [T, a piece of rudishva plasteel]
46	I overheard an adventurer whispering about Arden Vul. She was saying "You know the Fox? that master thief from Narsileon? He made a big score in Arden Vul. But I know how to follow him to the unplundered tombs, since he always paints those little blue fox-pictures on the walls to mark his route. All you gotta do is follow the blue pictures!" (F)
47	The great Thothian wizard, Ptarmis, built himself a secret tomb amid a huge forest of colossal mushrooms (T). We found the fungus cavern on the second level from the surface (F), but were driven back before we could locate the tomb by some sheep-headed critters wielding swords and spears (T).
48	A polite gentleman speaking an archaic form of Archontean saved me from walking into a pit trap on the fifth level below the surface. Although clearly able to move as silently as a ghost through the halls, he was kind and generous, and only asked for directions in return for his service. He promised to protect me if I were to ever return, so long as I again told him how I had gotten to where he had found me. His name is on the tip of my tongue, but I just can't remember it... I do know that he was ... (roll d4) <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. short and dark, with a ruined eye and a long scar across his face; he was dressed in thieves' leathers</li> <li>2. short and pale as a corpse, and dressed in one of those old-fashioned togas</li> <li>3. tall and red-headed, with a bushy beard, and wearing only a loincloth</li> <li>4. tall and fair, wearing an iron circlet studded with gems; his clothes were silk, but he wore no shoes.</li> </ol> [Refers to the vampire, Cinna Minux (7-122), who regularly charms adventurers in order to pump them for information]
49	The halfling thug, Plumthorn, has perfected a recipe for a dangerous narcotic that he distributes in the form of 'mushroom ale'. Anyone who drinks that stuff (under the label "Hack's Special") becomes susceptible to suggestion by any and all comers (F)
50	The reason that the Halls are so dangerous is that they are alive, or, rather, because they are inhabited by a bodiless spirit that sees and hears all (F). This spirit calls itself Kerbog Khan and is known to accost all those who damage the structure of the Halls (F).
51	One of those creepy patrols of dog-men stopped us and asked us if we could procure some rare substance for them. Some kinda drug called 'rastite lotus powder'. I've never even heard of the stuff. But they were willing to pay a lot in coin and information for a supply (T).
52	The fellow who runs the arena has no name (T-ish) and looks like a lich (F). It seems like the house gladiators always win. Is the fix on? (F)
53	A weird goblin prophet named Gislú has been spotted near the Forum of Set. He's looking for some ancient goblin artifact (T) and is sure that the object is located near the Set shrine (F).
54	The Obsidian Gates are pretty easy to find, if impossible to open. All you have to do is descend from the Thoth priests' domain to the cave of Gog (5-2) and the gates are right there. Just don't touch those blasted doors, as you'll regret it (T).
55	Gog is this barmy old goblin (F) who lives in an underground grotto near the arena (F). He's eager to barter information for meat, especially beastman meat. If you do, he'll tell you a sob-story about how he was exiled from the goblin court due to the treachery of another goblin named Mook (T-ish).
56	The precincts of the ibis-god are littered with these creepy statues, all of which have eyes made out of huge gemstones (T-ish). If you try to remove the eyes, the statues animate and wreak bloody vengeance (F).
57	The first level underground, you know, beneath the Well of Light, is dominated by giant, sentient spiders. They roam in packs and wield magic wands (F).

58	Bands of lizardmen exit the Halls via a cave halfway up the cliff face, to the left of the waterfall (T). They lay fiendish traps along the Swift River and take unwary captives back to their lair to be eaten (F).
59	Lady Alexia, who runs Gosterwick, is competing with her brother, Lord Burdock, to locate four valuable items that used to be held by the archons of Arden Vul. The items include the bone ring of Jagri-Naz (5-74) and the iron circlet of Ghanor (3-127) (T). Lord Burdock has a map leading to both items, but requires that adventurers take his bailiff along with them (F).
60	The white-furred baboons that scamper about in the city ruins and on the cliff face are led by a pair of giant, four-armed white apes (T-ish). Those monstrous apes are intelligent, and are directing the baboons like an archon issues orders to his legionaries (T).
61	There are at least two pyramids inside that damned place (T). No, I'm not talking about the one on the surface; these are inside the dungeon levels, in the precincts of Thoth. The topmost one causes you to age prematurely (F), while the other, lower, one - which we never saw - is still being used by some depraved inhabitants (T/F). Of course there's a third one down below somewhere, a cursed ziggurat (T).
62	There's a safehouse, or inn, located deep inside the bowels of the earth (T). It's run by trolls (F). If you annoy them, they'll serve you for dinner (F). On the other hand, if you pay them a good bribe, those trolls will take you right to the safehouse (T-ish).
63	A massive road, built for creatures larger than us, runs for a mile through the caverns. (F, mostly; a hint about the Midnight Road) If you can get on it, you'll be able to reach the goblin king and the troll thegn. (F)
64	An band of super-powerful knights operates from within the Halls of Arden Vul (T). They're all undead (F) and afraid of the light (F). If you see one in his black armor, you should run ... and fast (depends).
65	There's access to a Sunless Sea somewhere underneath the Halls (T). An ogre boatman will sell passage across it (F).
66	The agents of Lady Ellagel, one of the co-rulers of the elven realm located far to the west of civilized human lands, have been quietly querying imperial officials in Narsileon about the location of her son, Erist. Apparently he went missing about 50 years ago in Arden Vul while on a journey of self-discovery (T). Elves!
67	You gotta know when to run, right? Just when you're feeling confident you might locate a tomb, only to find it guarded by some killer mummy. We were strutting through the Thothian areas like bosses until we found this sweet little tomb just off the Great Hall (3-127) ... it all went south from there! (T)
68	Nerub Null, the archmage, entered the Halls about 25 years ago. (T) He possessed many texts from the Ancient Empire (T). He hasn't been heard of since, so he's most likely dead (F); if you could find his body, those texts and his items would be worth some serious gold!
69	There's a shrine to a cat goddess deep within the dungeons (T). A warrior I knew followed the feral cats from the upper levels all the way down the Chasm. They led him straight to the shrine (T), which had a 20' statue of a cat in solid gold (F). When he tried to chip off some pieces, the cats turned into panthers and chased him away (T/F).
70	The king of the goblins, a certain Weston the Bold (F, his name is Weskenim - see SL4-22), has lost the magical scepter that guarantees his legitimacy (T-ish). He's offering a big reward to anyone who can find it (T-ish, although Weskenim is keeping the search quiet). I heard that the scepter ... (roll d4) 1. was taken in pawn by that creepy guy who runs the arena (F) 2. fell to the bottom of the Great Chasm, and the goblins are too scared to descend to the bottom and look for it (F) 3. never existed; it's just an excuse for Weston to send undesirables to their death (F) 4. was taken in tribute by the thegn of the trolls and is now locked up in the thegn's vault (F)
71	A highly-toxic new poison has appeared in Newmarket and Gosterwick under the street name of "Mortality" (T). I have it from reliable sources that the poison is being brewed in Arden Vul (T). The brewer is ... (roll d4) 1. an Archontean fugitive named Cronox (Kronos Kettle-belly, AV-22), who has established an inn atop the cliff (F) 2. the king of the goblins, a certain Wastim, who hates all humans (F) 3. the notorious halfling criminal, Plumthorn (3-5) (T) 4. Lord Burdock's agents, who are operating in the one tower still standing near the pyramid of Thoth (F)
72	We were drinking some of that mushroom ale in the Forum of Set (4-2) when we overheard some of the red guardsmen whispering about some escaped slaves causing problems to the north (T). When we offered help, they turned officious and claimed there was no such thing - nobody escaped the Guild of Service (F). [The rumor refers to the escaped slaves at 4-100]
73	The Hall of Forty Pillars is right next to the Obsidian Gates (T). The hall is filled with these creepy albino toads (T-ish). If the wrong person touches the Gates, the toads turn into demons and attack (F).
74	Those famous twins from antiquity, Thekla and Taticus, are buried in Arden Vul along with their equally famous swords (T). Since they were Thoth-worshippers (F), their tombs can be found among the catacombs of Thoth (F).
75	To find the Drowned Canyon you gotta follow the water, right? I knew an adventurer named Leofwin Rufus who told me that all you had to do was locate the waterfall in the chasm and then follow the river back to the canyon (T). Easy as pie! [For Leofwin Rufus, see SL5-45]

76	The Sundered Span takes you from the precincts of Set to the Arena (F). Although it's sundered, it's easy enough to jump the break (F).
77	We know exactly where the fabled forge of Zhorak can be found. It is located .... (roll d4) 1. at the bottom of the lesser chasm in Set territory, that is, beneath the Red Bridge 2. on the fifth level, right next to the tomb of the great archon Marius 3. in a sub-level now occupied by lizardmen; the forge is flooded with water, but the goods are still there for the picking 4. in a secret cave located behind the great waterfall that pours down the cliff face [all these rumors are F with regard to the location of the Forge, although they all hint at real locations]
78	The Obsidian Gates only open to those who cast the correct sequence of spells on them. That sequence is ... (roll d4) 1. dispel magic, silence 15' radius, knock 2. knock, rock to mud, passwall 3. silence 15' radius, dispel magic, teleport 4. dispel magic, protection from evil 10' radius, find the path [all these sequence are F]
79	On the eighth level underground you can find a grotto filled with giant carved heads. The heads sing in recognizable tunes! (T) If you can get them to sing the right tune, they reveal a treasure vault (T). If they sing the wrong song, however, everyone dies (F). [refers to areas 8-146 to 8-148]
80	We found a couple of eyes formed out of silver (T, Sortian eyes, see new magic items). They're clearly magical, but we couldn't figure out how to use them. Maybe they open the Obsidian Gates (F)? Or they can be used to quiet those ancient granite toad-statues (F)?
81	A mage named Asrotelion has been sent by the College of Cinders to 'bring home' some crazy wizard named Cerbactos. It seems this Cerbactos stole some valuable tomes from the collegium (T). Asrotelion is using a lock of Cerbactos' hair to track the fugitive. According to Asrotelion, the entrance to Cerbactos' lair is in the catacombs of Thoth (T, 3-22A).
82	We spent a couple of hours in the market run by the Arden Vul trolls. On the floor of that market-cave we glimpsed some ancient military insignia; it looked like the symbol of the Sheepshead Rangers (i.e., the imperial IInd Legion). Wasn't that the legion that got destroyed with Adrienic a few centuries ago? I bet the Drome would be interested in that information (T). Of course you'd need hard evidence from the Troll Market to convince Keko the Lame (T, see World of Archontos appendix).
83	The green dragon that rules the surface ruins is the daughter of a terrible wyrm that lives at the bottom of the Great Chasm within the mountain. This ancient wyrm is twice as old and twice as potent as the green; it is served by a race of deathless, horned skeletons whom the old Empire referred to as 'the survivors' (F).
84	Those psychotic halflings that guard the route into the dungeons offered us a surprising deal. If we could find one of their missing friends, somebody named Carlo or something, they'd lift all tolls on us and even reward us with some of their special brew. Thing is ... I overheard the goblins talking about a shortie prisoner of theirs named Carloman. Same guy? I wonder (T. Carloman is a prisoner of the goblins at SL4-33)
85	One of the knights in the amazing armor - you know, the ones with the pale, scarred faces - stopped us and demanded to know if we had seen one of her companions, a knight named Sixth. Said their Order would pay good money for knowledge of his whereabouts. (T, Sixth is currently insane in area 6-39)
86	We were waiting to take the lift down to the troll market when a huge troll exiting the lift asked us a question in surprisingly good Thorcin! It wanted to know if we had seen one of its fellow hunters, a troll named Bedara. When we said no, the troll spat and wouldn't say another word. I got the feeling that they'd be real friendly if you could find this Bedara (T. Bedara languishes in prison at area 10-8).
87	One of the dragonflies with gems for eyes spoke to us in the ruined halls near the Forum of Set. It asked us if we had seen its children. It said that the great wizard Kubla Khan (F, Kerbog Khan) would enrich us beyond our dreams if we found the children and returned them (T, 4-176). Theo grabbed a goblin and, next time we saw one of the dragonflies, tried to claim it was one of the kids. The dragonfly was having none of it and laid a curse on Theo (F).
88	One of the Set deacons took a shine to us. Told us on the sly that Stephania the priestess would reward us handsomely if we came across the tomb of some long-dead Set priest named Thiskel (I think it was something like that) (T, referring to Theskelon, at 4-142). Apparently we could keep anything we found in Thiskel's tomb except his ring and some tablets (T).
89	A buddy from Narsoleon told me about a secret organization called the Sodality of the Fist. Apparently it recruits brave lads and lasses to enter the Arden Vul dungeons to participate in arena duels of some sort. The leader of the Sodality is from the Vislok clan (T, see AV-12). They specialize in bare-knuckle fighting (F).
90	The beastmen are looking for a shrine to their ancestor, a dog called Rex (T-ish). Apparently this dog is now a god, whose bark has the power to kill (F). They're willing to trade good information in return for the location of Rex (T).
91	Some strange creatures that looked like snakes with legs were glimpsed near the bottom of the cavern. They're faster than they look and are definitely NOT animals, as they were wearing belts and used wands (T, a reference to kaliyani).

92	The beastmen admitted that their queen, Dido (F, Deino), has a desperate need for a rare type of subterranean mushroom called 'cloud caps' (T). They can be identified by their mottled blue-and-white caps (T).
93	The one tower that still stands inside the city - you know, the one overlooking the plaza near the Pyramid of Thoth - is a deathtrap (T-ish). There are corpses all over the top level, all burned by dragon fire (F).
94	We found a corpse of an adventurer lying amid the catacombs of Thoth. Stuffed in its boot was an ancient parchment that said that the legendary thieves' mask of Tettius, founder of the Benevolent Brotherhood, had been 'borrowed' by an imperial functionary named Menas the logothete (T) just before the destruction of the city. If you can find Menas' tomb, you'll certainly find the mask (T, see 3-41A).
95	Dwarves have colonized one of the deep levels (F). A party of them was spotted using the troll lift. They refused to say anything about their motives, and just clutched those weird stones they all wear around their necks (T, these are the doppelgangers now found at 8-100)
96	Numerous giant, horned skeletons can be found among the ruins. They speak a strange language (T), and can stun you with the force of their shouts (F). They are the creation of that mad wizard, Kerbog Khan (F). [a reference to giant rudishva skeletons]
97	Gog told us that the original builders of Arden Vul were some toad-like race that he called 'hoppers'. Their lair is an evil, pitted ziggurat that lies at the foot of the Great Chasm (T-ish). The hopper can hop something like 50' before spearing their prey with wicked, barbed, tridents (F). You can always tell the hopper areas from the toxic oil they spread on the walls (T-ish).
98	The best source of information on the hoppers are the trolls. If you can befriend the lodge of trollish hunters, they can explain the powers and weaknesses of the hoppers; they can also tell you how to find the hoppers' ziggurat (T).
99	The hoppers were the first inhabitants of Arden Vul. They left those brooding, squat, toad-like statues with the open mouths all over the place (T). Now that they've returned, the hoppers are able to teleport to any of the toad-statues, emerging from the statues' gaping maws (F).
100	You receive a vision from your deity in which one True rumor is revealed to you. The power of the vision is such that if you ever encounter the individual or the location mentioned in the vision, you receive a bonus to all rolls made during that encounter (+1 to combat rolls and saves, +5% to reaction rolls). The GM should roll on this table until a suitable rumor is indicated. In addition to the special vision/rumor, the PC can make a second roll on this table, ignoring rolls of 100.

Table 2: Historical Rumors

The items on this sub-table are historical in nature. In other words, they reflect the type of knowledge that might be acquired through research, whether by PCs who personally delve into old books, scrolls, and codices, or by PCs who question individuals likely to possess knowledge of this sort (e.g., wizards, powerful priests, scholars, intellectuals, upper imperial officials, etc.). Unlike the first table, this sort of information is less likely to be possessed by random adventurers or inquisitive locals.

How to use this table: The base method is to allow each player who is new to Arden Vul 1-2 rolls on this table, using a d100 to determine results. Optionally, the GM might choose to impose some restrictions on such rolls. For instance, inexperienced PCs (say, 1st- to 3rd-level) and/or those with average or low INT (14 or lower) scores might only be permitted to roll a d30 on this table; this would ensure that their historical knowledge of Arden Vul is relatively unsophisticated. Higher-level PCs, or PCs with high

INT scores (15 or better), might get to roll 2d30 or even d100, thus reflecting that PC's greater sophistication and experience. Those PCs with access to significant research materials (say, the library of one of the collegia in a major Archontean city, or the archives of a major temple) might be allowed an even more advantageous die roll, perhaps 2d30+40. By adjusting the type and number of dice rolled on this table, the GM can ensure that the rarer and more sophisticated rumors are only parceled out to those with a greater likelihood of knowing them.

Key and Organization of Sub-Table: The rumors are grouped according to their rarity. Rumors 1-24 are Common (C); rumors 25-52 are Uncommon (U), rumors 53-83 are Rare (R), rumors 84-99 are Very Rare (V), and rumor 100 is special. Such a grouping based on ascending order of rarity allows a GM who wishes to drop a further rumor during play to quickly locate rumors of a suitable sort.

Rumor Table 2: Historical Rumors

d100	Rumor
1	The heroes, Arden the Swordswoman, and Vul the Sorcerer, discovered the cliff and associated caverns in 829 AEP. (T)
2	The city of Arden Vul was dominated by the two great temples of Thoth and Set, as well as by the imperial administration (T). Most of the subterranean halls were delved by these groups (T/F).
3	The caverns under Arden Vul produced a large supply of a wondrous orange mineral that proved to have very many arcane uses (T). The city was abandoned when the mines ran dry (F).
4	The ancient cult of Set was known for its belief in the natural right of the strong to dominate the weak (T). As a central part of this dogma, it operated its own slave trade, which it called "the Guild of service." (T)

5	The priests of Thoth were equally adept at arcane and divine magic (T). The three mysteries of Thoth, which are located just below the Pyramid of Thoth, were the chief examples of their art (T). One of the mysteries prolonged life (F), one conferred immunity on all disease (T/F), and one revealed the secrets of the future (T).
6	Many of the most ardent devotees of Thoth, known as Thoth's Beloved, were buried in a set of catacombs located just under the Pyramid (T). They are guarded by the power of Thoth himself (T/F), which has prevented all intruders from entering the catacombs (F).
7	Thoth was deeply important to the ancient empire, as he represented the light of knowledge that erased the darkness of ignorance (T). For this reason, the Thoth priests were obsessed with light (T); every one of their Halls remains brightly lit with Thoth's bright, clear, light (F).
8	Thoth was represented primarily by a white ibis (T), but also took for his symbol a baboon (T), whose ferocity represented the god's desire to protect his secrets. The ancient priests supposedly bred giant versions of both species (T/F).
9	The Thoth priests of old were experts in teleportation magic (T). They perfected a way of teleporting between various underground levels by means of a complex, color-coded system (T).
10	The Thoth cult developed at least three major temples beneath the city of Arden Vul (T/F - only two). One of these was located at the foot of an enormous underground chasm (F), and was accessible only by teleportation or flight (F).
11	The Thoth priests built numerous statues of their god (T). These appear in various forms, including ibis-headed and baboon-headed (T). The eyes of all these statues were made of huge gemstones (mostly T), which if removed allowed the bearer to contact Thoth directly (F). Many of the statues were enchanted (T).
12	The temple of Set only arrived in Arden Vul after the ibis priests had been there for many years, and consequently were always playing catch-up to their rivals. Their holy sites, for instance, could only be accessed from the cliff face, and not from the city proper (T).
13	Among the symbols of the ancient cult of Set were the desert dust storm, the black boar, the crocodile, the serpent, a red-headed man, and a strange animal with the snout of a dog but with squarish ears (T).
14	The Set cult favored blood-red armor in an archaic style, with breastplate, greaves, and helmet. (T)
15	Although an important temple during the glory days of the old Archontean Empire, the worship of Set was proscribed by imperial decree in 1839 AEP That is more than a thousand years ago! (T). The Drome has successfully extirpated the cult (F).
16	When the Archontean first came to Arden Vul, they found the caverns infested with hopping, toad-like creatures (T/F). It took centuries of warfare before the hoppers were eliminated (T).
17	The glorious archon, Marius Tricotor, led the assault on the hoppers from his flying carpet (T/F). He and his troops tracked the enemy to a vast underground grotto, where they found an unholy ziggurat at which demon princes were worshipped (T). Marius acquired the name 'Unconquered' (invictus) when he ordered the ziggurat dismantled, piece-by-piece! (T/F)
18	About 250 years ago the Basileus sent his political ally, Adrienic, to re-establish an Archontean presence at Arden Vul. Adrienic proclaimed himself archon but his triumphs were ephemeral. He and his entire expeditionary force disappeared without a trace after only a couple of years (T).
19	The Pyramid of Thoth in the ruined city leads directly to the topmost of the many underground levels (F); beneath it are at least a dozen other levels, culminating in a huge cavern and lake at the bottom (T).
20	Adrienic, who led the ill-fated expedition to recolonize Arden Vul 200 years ago, was a political hack (T). The real authority on the expedition was wielded by others, including the polemarch of the Sheepshead Rangers and a trio of advisors, including a paladin, a priest, and a sorceress (T).
21	Almost all of the archons of Arden Vul are buried along the walls of the Drowned Canyon in Arden Vul (F, only some of them). Chief among these was the great conqueror Marius Tricotor (F)
22	Marius Tricotor had his sorcerers create a magical (F) bridge out of stone. This bridge, called the Imperial Span, crossed the Great Chasm, and allowed the archon's troops to move into the lower levels (F).
23	The Hall of Forty Pillars is located on the level below the precincts of Thoth. It is filled with dangerous toads (T-ish) whose desperate croaking can paralyze the unwary (F). The Hall is also adjacent to the Obsidian Gates (T).
24	Some of the basements in the ruined city of Arden Vul conceal hidden staircases leading down to the dungeon levels (T). Such routes can be found within the donjon (T), the archon's palace (F), and some of the gate towers (T).
25	Half of the Twenty Worthies (i.e., the great heroes of Archontos) won their fame by delving into the caverns below Arden Vul (F). Some, including Larel One-Eye, were buried under the city (T).
26	The Empire never departed from the underground portions of Arden Vul, even after the upper city was abandoned (F). Records show that the Basileus maintained an outpost deep inside the Halls from which his agents could attempt to watch, learn, and control the powers they found within (F).
27	Arden and Vul were each buried in secret tombs concealed behind enormous colossi carved on the cliff face (F). Both Arden (T) and Vul (F) ascended to become demi-gods.

28	Everyone knows that the city of Arden Vul was destroyed during the War of the Sortians and Theosophs. But what isn't well-known is that the city was leveled to the ground by a phalanx of red dragons (T) commanded by the arch-Sortian, Priscus Pulcher (F). Some survivors managed to live on for a while underground, but they were eventually overwhelmed by giant trolls (T).
29	Some 250 years ago the emperor sent six cohorts of legionaries, five from the Sheepshead Rangers and one from his own guards tagmata, to recolonize Arden Vul. All six cohorts were lost in a battle fought at the "Cavern of Blood". What is worse, their battle standards were also lost (T). The archon who led the expedition, a certain Adrienic, committed suicide rather than report his failure (F).
30	Thoth may have represented the light of knowledge, but he was also the guardian of secrets (T). He favored those who acquired and guarded knowledge, and himself only revealed the most potent of his wisdom to the devout (F). There is said to be a chamber in the Upper Halls where, if one listens through an enormous horn, one can hear Thoth speak directly (T/F).
31	Some of the ancient records of the temple of Thoth claim that humans were not the first to explore the chasms under the city. At least two older cultures delved halls there (T). One of these cultures was led by intelligent trolls (T - the varumani) and the other by hopping demons (T/F/ - the heqeti).
32	The priests of Thoth spent centuries expanding their precincts. The main entrance from the city was through the Pyramid, which led to their burial crypts and the three mysteries (T). But the Ibis priests had hidden entrances on the cliff face (F), and their most closely-held secrets were kept in the private areas one level above the public halls (T). Those private areas includes their vaunted library, most of which was abandoned when the city fell (T); records indicate that one needed to climb some stairs from the main public areas to get to the Library (T).
33	The priests of Thoth located a portal to the famed City of Brass (T) at the bottom of the Great Chasm that runs through the cliff (F). The gate is protected by fire demons (F).
34	A special breed of trolls, intelligent and capable of speech, have established a kingdom within Arden Vul (T/F). They're led by a huge troll called the troll thegn.
35	The great king Weskenim rules the trolls and other monsters from a huge cavern deep within the Halls. All those seeking to pass through the lower levels need his approval. (T and F; this conflates Weskenim, the goblin king, with Varboka, the troll thegn)
36	After the high priest of Thoth was killed by a demon while attempting to use magic to open the Obsidian Gates (F), the archon prohibited all citizens from attempting to open the Gates (T).
37	A millennium-old manuscript seems to suggest that the priesthood of Set established two massive crypts in the area just east of the fabled Red Bridge (T). The favored donors of the cult were buried there, with their choicest belongings (T/F). What is worse, the Set priests turned every last one of their mummified corpses into animated dead (F).
38	The worship of Thoth was closely linked to the worship of Maat. The old records claim that feathers of Maat could repel the dead (T).
39	Starting in the time of the great Marius Tricotor, the regalia of the archons of Arden Vul comprised four potent magical items, including the iron circlet of Ghanor (3-12) and the bone ring of Jagri-Naz (5-74) (T).
40	The Sortians were a group of ungrateful sorcerers who demanded changes to the teaching of magic in the Empire. They used terrorist tactics until the emperor finally agreed to their demands (F).
41	So as to emulate their rivals in the Thoth cult (F), the ancient priests of Set also established three great mysteries meant to impress the faithful with Set's powers (T). The chambers of these mysteries were located just off the main Set temple (F).
42	When the Archonteans retreated from Arden Vul, the pyramid of Thoth was quickly inhabited by an ancient wurm whose toxic breath could kill a man (F, although a green dragon inhabits the ruins). This beast has collected the best treasures from the halls below, mostly because it is served by a tribe of lizardmen (F).
43	The Red Bridge (4-120A) was located half-way between the grand staircase of Set on the cliff face and the Set Forum (4-2) (T). Made of red granite, it was warded against all those who would do Set harm (F). It also announced the presence of travelers to the Set guardsmen on the other side of the bridge (T/F).
44	Zhorak, the great dwarven smith, crafted wonderous enchanted items (T) at a special forge (8-100) heated by lava (F). He specialized in automatons, including the infamous Myrmex (T).
45	The forge of Zhorak (8-100) the smith went cold (F) a few decades before the city of Arden Vul was abandoned. Some reports claim he fled, having anticipated the chaos (F). Others claim he was murdered (T). But the best reports assert that he decamped to a new location within the Nether Reaches, where he quietly re-established his forge (F).
46	Two of the greatest heroes of the ancient empire were the twins, Thekla and Taticus (T). Using their enchanted swords, the Gemini blades, they slew a monstrous troll that threatened a farming district (T). The twins were buried in Arden Vul, along with their famous swords (SL6-80) (T).
47	The ancient Set cult was centered around three rituals, or mysteries (T). The first mystery involved the appearance of a specially-bred black boar (T), which celebrants would then slaughter and eat (F).

48	The official record states that Adrienic, sent to Arden Vul 250 years ago, had orders to restore 'civilization' to the area (T). But the secret reports tell a different story. In reality, Adrienic and his expedition had been sent to locate the lost regalia of the former archons, and especially the iron circlet of Ghanor (3-127) (F).
49	The ancient Set cult was centered around three rituals, or mysteries (T). The second mystery demonstrated Set's control over a magically-created sandstorm (T). Within the anonymity of the sandstorm, participants attacked each other with impunity; indeed, such chaos was celebrated! (T)
50	The ancient Set cult was centered around three rituals, or mysteries (T). In the third mystery, each celebrant had to defeat a giant serpent using only a ritual dagger (T/F; the basic gist is true, although the details are exaggerated).
51	Ancient travelers' reports from Arden Vul describe the Set cult's inability to control a strange variety of floating, jelly-fish-like parasite (T, chasm cephalopods - see new monsters). These tiny pests (only 1" long) (F) delivered a painful bite, just like a horsefly (F). The cultists found them irritating.
52	As with all of the old Gods, Set could be worshipped in many lesser aspects. A favorite aspect of Set was Set-Sobek, who appeared as a giant crocodile (T). Set-Sobek was terrible, inflicting death and dismemberment without mercy, but its tears were said to cure the sick (F, but see 3-91).
53	A plan of the old precincts suggests that the main Temple to Set (3-90) was located up a long set of broad stairs from the Forum of Set (4-2) (T). Strangely, this plan suggests that the Set temple was located only a few yards from the main temple of Thoth (3-71) (T).
54	Theskelon was one of the greatest of the high priests of Set. It is said he developed an arcane ritual to cheat death (T). His tomb is thus empty (F, 4-142), as he even now wanders the planes of existence, some 2,000 years after he was born (F).
55	High priests of Set each possessed a named magical ring (T) with a unique personality (F). Those rings imparted great powers, but tended to possess their wearers (F).
56	The ancient Set priests created an artifact they called 'the Golden Ankh' (T, 4-138A), which is said to confer domination over all kinds of undead (T/F). The Golden Ankh is to be found in the main shrine to Set (F).
57	Even at the peak of the ancient empire, nobody was quite sure what lay behind the Obsidian Gates, since they were resistant to divination efforts, to teleportation, and even to potent magicks (T). The best that could be said was that there was nothing living behind the Gates; perhaps tombs of the ancients?
58	Ancient manuscripts preserved by the priests of Thoth speak of a foreign race who inhabited the ruins before the Archontes. Members of this race were tall, broad, and horned, like demons (T/F), and they wrote in strange cryptograms. They were potent sorcerers, who devised unique magical weapons (T/F). It is obvious that reports of intelligent trolls are, in reality, references to these demons (T/F).
59	The priests of Thoth built a Whispering Hall. If one knows how to activate it, one can listen to secrets whispered into it aeons ago (T). It is located on the deepest level of the caves (F, 2-63).
60	The Thoth priests had a secret oracle located in the dungeon levels. It was shaped, naturally, like an enormous ibis. Reports claim that the god actually possessed the postulant for a brief period during which the oracle was spoken (T). The oracle was located just under the pyramid (F, 3-118).
61	A codex taken from the Library of Thoth in Arden Vul notes that the ibis priests claimed to hold the physical remains of the great folk-hero, Larel One-Eye (T). This is impossible, since Larel is a mythical figure (F); they probably meant Jacinth the Rose, whose historicity is well-attested (F).
62	One of five survivors of Adrienic's expedition to Arden Vul left a memoir. He claims that the legionaries in the Sheepshead Rangers were destroyed by giant trolls wielding bolts of lightning (T, although it was laser fire - see 7-76), and that the guardsmen of the tagmata were eliminated by summoned demons (F). All of the leaders, except Adrienic himself and Tulliaros the polemarch, escaped (T).
63	After his glorious conquest of the hoppers and his cowing of the Arden Vul trolls, Marius Tricotor ordered a special complex built at the foot of the Great Chasm "so as to keep perpetual watch on the hoppers, lest their evil rise again" (T).
64	The hoppers are slaves to a race of creatures that use telepathy to dominate their foes (F).
65	Numerous reports speak of visitors to Arden Vul spending an entire day standing on one of the many bridges across the Swift River. What is more, these visitors were described as chanting or singing continuously (T, see AV-30 and AV-31). The purpose of the chanting was to bring good fortune (F).
66	The infamous Sortian traitor, Priscus Pulcher, dwelled in Arden Vul for a while, attracting a group of subversive sorcerers around him. When he was killed during the war of Theosophs and Sortians, his lover - a native of Arden Vul - appeared and took away his body (T). His tomb is somewhere under the cliff (T/F - his remains are at SL11-24, but not his tomb).
67	A standing warrant for the arrest of the mage Cerbactos Kalthetos has been posted by one of the collegia, namely the Imperial Academy (T). Apparently he stole several unique codices having to do with blood (T) and summoning (F). The only lead is that he is said to have fled to Arden Vul, where he has adopted a pseudonym, Priddy of Archontos (F, his new name is Kerbog Khan).

68	The cult of the death-god Thanatos has been proscribed for nearly all of human history. A few scraps of information suggest that one of the major cult centers for worship of this evil deity was Arden Vul (F).
69	Marius Tricotor's personal life was tragic. His wife died in childbirth, and Marius never remarried. They had one daughter, who died young (T). Marius adopted a son, named Phocius, but he was killed by the hoppers (T). Both his children are buried in tombs found along the walls of the Drowned Canyon (F, only Phocius's tomb is there).
70	Although Marius Tricotor gets all the credit, records indicate that his predecessor as archon, one Cassandra 'the easily angered', accomplished almost as much (T). It was she who discovered the Great Chasm (F) and the Drowned Canyon (T), and she who destroyed the hoppers' foul enchanted statues (F). Her tomb is found in the Drowned Canyon (T).
71	Zhorak, the great dwarven smith, was enticed to Arden Vul by the archons. He set up his forge (8-100), however, in a completely inaccessible region, surrounded by dangerous caves. One could only safely visit his forge by teleportation (T).
72	The followers of Set venerated an unusual animal that looked sort of like a dog, albeit with square ears and a forked tail (T). The appearance of one of these 'Set-dogs' forebodes chaos and disaster for all.
73	The Sortians were those sorcerers who insisted that the collegia be open to all those imperial citizens with the gift of magic. They were opposed by reactionary forces in the temples and imperial administration (T).
74	The Sortians are usually thought to have been unanimous in their goals and tactics. In fact, they were as diverse as their opponents, the Theosophs. Priscus Pulcher, often seen as a radical firebrand, actually advocated negotiation and compromise (T). He was opposed by other Sortians who believed in violent rebellion (T).
75	A report from the Drome dated 200 years ago states with certainty that the worship of Set has been revived, despite the ancient imperial proscription of Set (T). The report claims that these illegal cultists have decamped to Arden Vul (T), where they have blasphemously taken up residence within the old pyramid of Thoth (F).
76	The Archontean Collegia are deeply interested in the artifacts still lying unclaimed in the halls. At least three archmages have set out for the halls, including the infamous Nerub Null and a charlatan calling himself Kerbog Khan (T). These wizards will only talk to members of their own collegium! (F)
77	Gneis Valor, the first high priest of the temple of Set in Arden Vul (T), was buried in a tomb obscured by total darkness (F). He was so evil that those entering his tomb are instantly slain (F).
78	In partnership with the sorcerers from the Order of Thoth, the priests of Thoth developed an underground complex devoted solely to the study of elemental magic (F). A lake of fire was created through sorcerous means a long way below the main chambers of Thoth (F).
79	The priests of Thoth constructed a shrine to their god in the valley of Arden Vul. Although all nonbelievers who tried to visit the shrine were stoned on sight (F), one report emerged that claims that the shrine contains full layouts of the Thothian precincts under Arden Vul (T – see Burdock's Valley, Adventure Sites, the Ibis's Roost).
80	One of the early priests of Thoth, a certain Ptarmis (you can tell by his antiquated name!), cultivated groves of giant mushrooms in a great cavern (3-172) located south of the administrative precincts of Thoth (T). One species was 10' tall with orange tops; those who eat it enter a battle frenzy (F).
81	The greatest alchemist of the ancient empire, Plotina, elected to make her burial along the Drowned Canyon (SL6-96) within Arden Vul (T). It is said she brought the recipes for her greatest potions with her (T), along with the preserved bodies of her twenty lovers (F).
82	One of the priests of Thoth, a certain Eustachius, had a special gift with song. He is said to have created a musical grotto in which the very rocks would burst forth in song (T, 8-146); at least, they would do so provided that one had not disturbed the rock elementals who were drawn to this magic (F).
83	Fragmentary accounts speak of dangerous floating creatures inhabiting the larger caverns. What seems to have made them dangerous was that one could never see them coming and then - bam! - their tentacles would grab the unwary. (T/F - chasm cephalopods)
84	Ancient sorcerers claim that Arden Vul, with its source of arcanum (see new magic items), was a nexus for divine and planar activity (T-ish). One of those drawn to the place was a terrible elder deity named Rimmaq-Isfet. Almost nothing is known of this entity except for its slug-like shape and its gaping, insatiable maw (T).
85	Ancient sorcerers claim that Arden Vul, with its source of arcanum (see new magic items), was a magnet for magically adept races (T-ish). Most sages claim that this is what drew the heqeti (or hoppers) from their subterranean lairs (T). Others claim that their demon-prince, Kauket, drove them to do so (F).
86	The lord of the 497 th layer of the abyss, Kauket, resembles an unholy fusion of a salamander and an elephant. The heqeti (hoppers) are devoted to him. The sorcerers of Marius Tricotor's era claimed that the hoppers were attempting to summon Kauket to this plane. (T)
87	The hoppers are formally known as heqeti. They come in various shapes, some of which are more bestial and some of which are more humanoid. The latter, although physically weaker, are magically adept. All are inimical to humankind (T).

88	Lucius Cornelius Scriptor, who wrote the authorized life of the great archon Marius Tricotor, idolized his subject so much that he had his tomb prepared nearby that of Marius (T-ish). Architectural plans indicate it is only accessible from the wall of a great chasm running through Arden Vul (T).
89	A highly-secret report from the archon of Arden Vul is entitled 'The Beacon Project' (T). It speaks of a device used to access the planes from within the dungeon levels (F). The Beacon device was already present when the Archontians discovered Arden Vul (T).
90	An ultra-secret report of the Drome contains a rare interrogation of a humanoid-looking heqeti from the Marian wars. It revealed under torture that their 'builders' were looking for an enchanted horn (T) that had been lost for hundreds of years. With the horn, they could summon their beloved demon-prince, Tsathoggua (T, but Kauket, not Tsathoggua).
91	A tattered report from the archon of Arden Vul to the logothete of the Drome in Archontos claims that a handful of 'survivors' from an extinct race were located within the ruins of Arden Vul. These ageless beings are extremely dangerous, since they are highly adept at sorcery. The report notes that one, Crallicarus (the arena lord, 6-85) has offered much assistance to the archon, while another Melacorius (Master Malachite, SL10A-32) poses a palpable military threat (T).
92	One of the greatest archmages of the ancient empire, Kentillian the Magnificent, built a secret compound (SL5-13B) in some natural caves located near the precincts of Set (T), where she performed scholarly research on the nature of elemental fire (F). Her interest in the ebon spear (see new magic items), which she identified as the spear of Arden (see new magic items), was legendary (T); ultimately the archon had to ban her from the palace.
93	It's a sad tale. One of the greatest archmages of the ancient empire, Pol the Devious, went insane from too much exposure to the orange mineral found in Arden Vul (mostly F). His impenetrable tower (T, SL6-17), which is located near the tomb of Marius (F), has remained empty ever since. It is said that Pol's spirit inhabits the very stone of the dungeon levels (F)
94	About 1,500 years ago, the Elven rulers, Lady Ellagel and Lord Gallador, petitioned the emperor to stop delving beneath the city of Arden Vul. They claimed that a planar nexus was located there, and that it opened directly into one of the most dangerous layers of the abyss (T-ish).
95	In the last centuries before the war of the Sortians and Theosophs, an elite cult of Arden devotees emerged among the military officials stationed in Arden Vul. They delved their own halls within the cliff face, where, it was said, one could attempt to replicate the Twelve Labors of Arden (T – see SL13-10). The entrance to these halls was located on the hand of the colossus of Arden found on the cliff face (F).
96	The founder of the Benevolent Brotherhood, the legendary Tettius Invisus, was captured while attempting to break into the tomb of Marius (F). He was executed on the impalement stakes in the city of Arden Vul, and his famous "thieves' mask" was added to the treasures stored with Marius' relics (F, although the mask is found within Arden Vul, 3-41A)
97	The sorcerers of the Sortian cult developed their own system of teleportation within Arden Vul, albeit in a way hidden from the eyes of the temples and the administration (T). Their method required the consumption of rubies by the one seeking teleportation (F).
98	An ancient rescript from the high priest of Set to his counterpart in Archontos claims that the Set temple in Arden Vul succeeded in breeding a fearsome species of animals that 'shared all the attributes of Lord Set'. The project was based in a secret cavern (SL8-13) located near the waterfall (wherever that is!) (T). Presumably the creature in question was a kind of golem (F).
99	Marius Tricotor, the archon who defeated the hoppers, became a great leader because he rose from the ranks. He never put on airs, and respected the lot of the common soldier. He treated his men with paternal love and discipline and never asked them to do anything he wouldn't do himself. As a result, his men were fanatically loyal (T). A shrine to Marius still exists in the surface ruins of the city (T/F; it is within the dungeons, 6-145).
100	You receive a vision from your deity in which one True rumor about an Arden Vul location is revealed to you. The power of the vision is such that as soon as you step foot on the dungeon level on which the indicated location is found, you will have perfect knowledge of the most direct route to that location. The GM should roll on this table until a suitable rumor/location is indicated. In addition to the special vision/rumor, the PC can make a second roll on this table, ignoring rolls of 100.

FACTIONS OF ARDEN VUL

Arden Vul is a dynamic place, with multiple sentient factions competing for resources, influence, and power. An uneasy equilibrium exists at the moment, but the introduction of clever and/or ambitious adventurers could lead to major changes. Some adventuring groups may, of course, prefer to hack and slash their way through the Halls (and good luck to them!). Still, most will find it advantageous or even necessary to insert themselves into the factional rivalries. An alliance or two - even temporary ones - can offer important opportunities for acquiring information about the Halls, restocking supplies, healing/resting, and conducting trade deals.

How to use this Chapter: The GM is advised to read or skim this section before conducting adventures in Arden Vul, if only because it is here that he/she can gain the clearest overview of the dynamic interactions that lie at the heart of this setting. Once PCs encounter (or the GM thinks they are likely to encounter) representatives of a particular faction, he/she should review the pertinent faction information; what is presented there may help guide PC negotiations, and may even suggest particularly fruitful adventure hooks.

Beastmen, or the Children of Deino

The beastmen are a race created by the witch Deino from survivors of the doomed Archontean military expedition that ventured into Arden Vul 250 years ago. The survivors came from the 4th kentarchia (unit of 40) of the 3rd Cohort of the Imperial tagmata (the elite guards legion). Deino charmed the retreating troopers and bred them with animals to create the beastmen.

Many generations later, the beastmen continue to embrace military training and discipline, still referring to themselves as the ‘tagma’ and organizing themselves according to archaic Archontean military standards. To compensate for their individual weakness, they fight as units and embrace intelligent military tactics. They are only encountered outside their home territory in banda, or patrols, of six troopers and a sergeant.

Ruler and Other Leaders: The beastmen answer to their ‘mother’, a quasi-immortal enchantress called Deino (3-158). Deino rarely leaves her lair, however. Operational leadership of the beastmen is handled by their commander, Count Skleros (3-151). Skleros is aided by two senior advisers, Count Georgik (3-149) and Count Nikeos (3-152). Tactical affairs are handled by the patrol sergeants of each of the konturbia (companies). Of these, the most important is Trisko the Natty, count of the Long-Range Cavern Patrol (LRCP, 3-154). The beastmen are aided by a handful of witch doctors (3-144).

Size of Faction and Replacements: The beastmen number about 115 active troopers, plus forty noncombatant females and approximately twenty-five young. Another twenty to thirty leadership, support, and elderly beastmen round out the faction. Active beastmen are divided into five companies, or konturbia, each of which is subdivided into patrols, or banda, of six troopers and a sergeant. Given their training regimen, the Tagma cannot make up losses swiftly; only 1-4 young can be trained into troopers per month.

Resources: The beastmen are always looking for wood, iron/steel, mushrooms, fresh fruit and vegetables, and magical items. Most of the collection is conducted by the Long-Range Cavern Patrol, which specializes in ventures into the Great Cavern (3-163 and 3-172). Other patrols also venture into other parts of

Key

U: Unknown—The faction is unaware of the existence of the other faction.

A: Antipathy—The faction actively dislikes the other group, and is likely to actively work against it.

N: Neutrality—The faction has no strong feelings about the other. It may work with or against it.

T: Tolerate—The faction tolerates the other group, but will not go out of its way to aid it.

P: Preference—The faction looks with favor on the other faction and may be willing to aid it

F: Fear—The faction fears the other group. The fear might be a cause of hatred or fawning approval.

Level 3 and even into the Ruined City (AV) via their secret exit (3-189). Deino is in perpetual need of cloud cap mushrooms (see new flora); to assuage her need, the LRCP constantly searches the mushroom forest for that specimen. They are quite happy to trade for cloud caps and other valuables. In return, they offer antiquities and treasures plundered from the Halls, plus information about locations within the Halls, factions, and access routes. Deino also requires handsome male humans for her entourage. She periodically commands the konturbia to procure such individuals.

Attitudes Towards Adventurers: The beastmen are not exactly evil (although Deino certainly is), and if a patrol is encountered outside its home turf, the first inclination of the beastmen is to negotiate. In such circumstances, they typically form into a tactical formation (turtle, impi, etc.) and allow their sergeant to speak. Most of the time, they attempt intimidation and request safe passage. If threatened, they defend themselves and seek a tactical advantage. If adventurers aid the beastmen in any way, such as by eliminating the goblins, or locating cloud caps, or defending the beastmen against dangerous foes, they will be grateful; in such cases, they are likely to warn adventurers against treating with their mistress. If they remain neutral towards adventurers, they may invite the adventurers to meet their mistress.

Areas of Control and/or Ignorance: The beastmen control areas 3-138 to 3-162. They have established choke points at 3-123, 3-157A, 3-163A and 3-163B, which serve to keep their domain secure. They send regular patrols to the north (areas 3-2, 3-8 to 3-35), to the west (areas 3-70, 3-124 to 3-137) and to the south (areas 3-163 and 3-172 and environs). Through their access to 3-2 and 3-189, they make semi-regular patrols into the ruins of the city of Arden Vul, and even down the Long Stair into the valley below the cliff.

Motives, Goals, and 'Quests': The raison d'être of the beastmen is to protect Deino. All their activities - patrolling, collecting wealth, locating suitable handsome males - are conducted in the furtherance of this goal. Deino's goals are remarkably limited: she does not seek expansion of territory, rather she hopes to preserve the cushy situation in which she finds herself. Of course, the beastmen have subsidiary goals, including acquiring food, riches, and the materials necessary to fuel Deino's potions. They are constantly looking for cloud cap mushrooms (see new flora) and would love to acquire a new and permanent source of Rastite lotus powder (see new flora) so that they could terminate their trading relationship with Thegan White-Mane (6-19). In addition, the beastmen have a quest all their own: their oral history speaks of their original leader, Gennadius, and the 'first canine', Rex. They would very much like to find relics of these two revered ancestors (see areas 6-50 and 8-41).

Possibilities for Expansion and/or Contraction: The beastmen are not particularly interested acquiring new territory, but they will fight tooth, nail, and claw to retain what they have. Once assaulted, the Children will double their vigilance: no banda (patrols) will be absent from their barracks, and entrance points will be strengthened with the presence of a witch doctor and another patrol; given sufficient time, the beastmen will also rig magical and mechanical traps in the great hall (3-123). In dire circumstances (such as a frontal assault on their territory), the beastmen leaders might request aid from the varumani ambassadors (3-162).

Relations with Other Factions

Fishmen: The beastmen are unaware of this faction.

Goblins: Skleros and Tagma Command look on the goblins with disdain as undisciplined and unserious. While they do not actively hunt the goblins, they also make no effort to aid them. The beastmen are alarmed at the goblins' fecundity and expansiveness. They might be willing to ally with a party that promises to take out the goblins, or to at least reduce their territory.

Halflings of Phlebotomas Plumthorn: The beastmen have little contact with Phlebotomas and his thugs. For this reason, they care little about the halflings, except for the fact that the goblins are obviously exercised by the halflings' presence. Tagma Command is considering a quiet alliance with Phlebotomas solely so as to tweak the goblins.

Heqeti: The heqeti are only rumors to the beastmen.

Priscians: The beastmen are unaware of this faction.

Kaliyani: The beastmen are ignorant of the kaliyani.

Kerbog Khan: The beastmen have had several encounters with the Khan's automatons and have been spooked by the wizard's ability to 'inhabit' those creatures. They have thus far resisted all of the Khan's entreaties to make 'bargains' with him, refusing to trade until they learn more of the Khan's goals and motives.

Set Cult: Tagma Command admires the discipline and focus of Stephania and the Set Cult, but is simultaneously wary of the cultists' motives. The beastmen make good use of the Set Cult's Forum (4-2) for trading purposes, but keep a watchful eye on the humans' activities.

Skreel Lizardmen: The beastmen loathe the lizardmen as primitive and uncivilized, and attack them whenever it is tactically possible to do so. In neutral areas (like the Forum - area 4-2), the beastmen studiously ignore the lizardmen; one exception is in the region of the Arena (6-58 to 6-91), where they regularly insult the lizardmen in attempt to goad them into breaking the peace and thus getting themselves banned.

Sun-Scarred Knights: The beastmen consider the Knights to be inspirations, both in terms of their knightly discipline and their studied neutrality. As with the varumani, Skleros is treading very carefully with the Knights. The beastmen would like nothing more than for a Knight to take up residence with them, but they are too smart to suggest or even intimate it. The beastmen are quick to affirmatively answer any request - or even any suggestion - made by a Knight.

Varumani: The beastmen know the varumani mostly via their use of the Troll Lifts (e.g., 5-55) and their occasional attendance at the arena (6-68) and the troll market (7-76). Skleros is fully aware of the infinitely greater strength of the varumani, and he and his advisors have worked hard to cultivate a formal, but respectful relationship with the varumani. A recent initiative resulted in Varboka (7-30) sending a pair of ambassadors to Deino's court, but Skleros rightly suspects that the ambassadors are largely ceremonial and do not reflect any real commitment on the part of the thegn. The Tagma are wisely treating their discussions with the thegn as a chess match.

Fishmen

The fishmen are the bizarre creation of the deranged rudishva, Reiv-Tor (SL7-23). Using any humanoid form as a base, his strange experiments transform those unfortunate souls into the fishmen. The fishmen are completely subject to Reiv-Tor, and thus devote most of their energy to reshaping Sub-Level 7 to fit his needs. They support themselves by fishing in the Drowned Canyon (SL6-24).

They also frequently ambush parties of Skreel lizardmen in the same location. A small group of fishmen have taken to worshipping the giant moray eel that inhabits the Drowned Canyon as an incarnation of Rimmaq-Isfet (SL6-15).

Ruler and Other Leaders: The creator and ruler of the fishmen is the rudishva survivor, Reiv-Tor (SL7-23). He is aided by two stronger fishmen (also SL7-23).

Size of Faction and Replacements: There are about 95 fishmen in total. Reiv-Tor can make new fishmen, but at a relatively slow pace: given sufficient captives, he can create eight new fishmen every 1-2 months.

Resources: The fishmen have two basic goals: food and living subjects for Reiv-Tor's experiments. They produce no goods for trade, and are thus forced to take whatever they need. They aren't particularly strong, and lack the capacity for magic.

Attitudes Towards Adventurers: The fishmen are inimical towards all other bipedal beings. They attempt to ambush adventurers, hoping to capture them and bring them to Reiv-Tor for transformation.

Areas of Control and/or Ignorance: The fishmen dominate most of the old Archontean administrative offices that form Sub-Level 7; they are directing the transformation of those offices by Reiv-Tor's coral-generating fish. The fishmen regularly hunt in the Drowned Canyon (Sub-Level 6), and occasionally venture into the northern parts of Sub-Level 5 to attack the Skreel lizardmen. Otherwise they are ignorant of the rest of the halls.

Motives, Goals, and 'Quests': The fishmen in the cult of the eel (SL6-15) are looking for more eel- or amphibian-shaped objects that they associate with Rimmaq-Isfet. The main swarm of fishmen constantly seeks new sources of living bodies to subject to transformation by Reiv-Tor.

Possibilities for Expansion and/or Contraction: In their war with the Skreel lizardmen, the fishmen currently are experiencing a stalemate. Neither side has the numbers or strength to expel the other. Should the lizardmen be eliminated in some other way, however, the fishmen swiftly move to occupy Sub-Level 5. In such a scenario, they would also end up with clear control of the main cavern of Sub-Level 6. Expansion would pose a problem, however, as the lizardmen are a prime source for new fishmen; without them, how would the swarm grow? In the face of a concerted attack, the fishmen pull back to protect their lord, Reiv-Tor (SL7-23); they have nowhere else to go, so they fight to the bitter end.

Relations with Other Factions

The fishmen are extremely isolated and are only aware of a few of the other factions.

Priscians: The fishmen observed the Priscian exploration team that recently met its demise in the drowned canyon area (SL6-19), but have no reason to conclude that this team was anything other than a group of adventurers.

Skreel Lizardmen: They are in a state of constant war with the lizardmen, whom they ambush for food and to seize as new subjects for Reiv-Tor's experiments.

Sun-Scarred Knights: When the occasional knight visits the drowned canyon, the usual outcome is combat and the death of numerous fishmen. The fishmen consequently hate and fear the powerful knights.

Goblin Kingdom

The goblins of Arden Vul are descendants of a segment of the ancient Archontean slave labor force, which the archons used to carve the upper halls of Arden Vul. This means that King Weskenim and his people are relatively 'civilized'. While they remember the indignity of their servitude, they are also proud of their long history and special status; indeed, the goblin clans largely ape a greatly-diluted form of what they consider to be 'civilized' Archontean attire and behavior, complete with elaborate costumes, a court ceremonial, and formal diplomatic missions to other groups. The United Goblins are sub-divided into five goblin clans, each of which has a clan-cave on the lower level of the Warrens (see SL4-46, and SL4-56 to SL4-60). In addition to the clans, Weskenim is trying to build a separate, clan-less 'Great Army' whose fierce warriors will owe loyalty primarily to him (see SL4-42). Although the weakest faction in Arden Vul, the goblins compensate for their lack of physical strength with numbers and fecundity.

Ruler and Other Leaders: Weskenim, Grand King of the United Goblins (SL4-22). Palestrim, the major-domo (SL4-23), has much influence with the goblin clans. Weskenim is advised by Skimmel and Reeflik (SL4-22). The goblin shamans (SL4-12) are the other source of authority in the goblin warrens.

Size of Faction and Replacements: The goblins are numerous, amounting to some 250 individuals. As they are fecund, they can replace 20 losses per month.

Resources: The goblins are scavengers, and have managed to acquire some treasure in wealth and items from the ruins they inhabit. They have access to giant mushrooms, which they mostly eat but might also trade. They are always interested in trading for large quantities of food, for curiosities from the Archontean period, and for coinage. They position themselves as traders of information and of looted antiquities, as well as of access to the lower levels. Weskenim has a personal treasury of roughly 5,000 gp and 27,500 sp.

Attitudes Towards Adventurers: The goblins are classic bullies, attempting to force concessions out of those they consider weak. Adventurers who seek to negotiate with them must be prepared to look strong. Doing favors for the goblins wins lasting loyalty. If attacked, betrayed, or double-crossed, the goblins become implacable enemies, seeking to trick, trap, and ambush adventurers wherever possible.

Areas of Control and/or Ignorance: The main stomping grounds of the goblins is Sub-Level 4, which they control entirely. They also have a large foothold on Level 5 (areas 5-43 to 5-51) and a small foothold on Level 3 (area 3-7). The goblins are familiar with much of the rest of Level 3, with the eastern parts of Level 5, with the Arena on Level 6, with the Forum of Set (4-2), and with the network of Troll Lifts. They are ignorant of the rest of the Halls.

Motives, Goals, and 'Quests': They seek the fabled scepter of the goblins (now located at area 8-69). They are also looking for hardy souls to aid them against their enemies, including the halflings of Phlebotomas Plumthorn (Level 3), the Beastmen (Level 3), as well as the 'terrible demon' in area 5-52. Weskenim seeks to placate the varumani, who he realizes could crush the goblins easily.

Possibilities for Expansion or Contraction: If the halflings (areas 3-3 to 3-6) are eliminated, the goblins swiftly move to replace them. They erect a masonry wall across the entrance to 3-3, seeking in that way to protect the route to Level 5 and to Sub-Level 4. Once established firmly on Level 3, the goblins will extort 'taxes' from adventurers entering through the Pyramid (3-1). Should the beastmen be eliminated (areas 3-70, 3-121 to 3-162), the goblins will also swiftly move to occupy the former beastman territory; again, they erect masonry walls to defend their new space. If the goblins are expelled from Levels 3 and 5, they seek aid from the varumani (Level 7) to defend their home territory (Sub-Level 4).

Relations with Other Factions:

Beastmen: Weskenim sees the Beastmen as his main rivals. Although he has never met her, he dislikes Deino (3-158), as he cannot figure out what she wants. Weskenim secretly admires the beastman troopers for their military discipline and resourcefulness. Although formal alliance is out of the question, he would not be averse to striking a secret treaty with Count Skleros (3-151) to divide up 'spheres of influence' in the upper halls.

Fishmen: The goblins have no contact with the fishmen.

Halflings of Phlebotomas Plumthorn: The goblins exhibit strong antipathy towards the parvenu halflings. Weskenim has openly offered a bounty (10 gp) for any halfling head, and a quadruple one for the head of Phlebotomas Plumthorn (3-5). Halfling PCs will need to prove they have no connection to Phlebotomas or risk the king's wrath.

Heqeti: The goblins are only dimly aware of the heqeti, and then only as a bogey-man straight out of ancient legends.

Kaliyani: The goblins are unaware of the kaliyani.

Kerbog Khan: Weskenim holds a curious, paternalistic affection for the reclusive wizard. Weskenim loves Kerbog Khan's automatons and, although he has never met the sorcerer in person, is generally disposed to help him whenever possible.

Priscians: Weskenim had never heard of the Priscians before the arrival of the ambassadors (SL4-44) six weeks ago. He has tasked Palestrim with negotiating with the Triad but is still uncertain of what to do or how to proceed. He is impressed with the Priscians' mien and power but is nervous about committing to their cause.

Set Cult: The goblins hate the Set cultists and fear them, not least because the Guild of Service occasionally enslaves goblins. Still, Weskenim is no fool. He knows he is weaker than the cultists, and thus flatly refuses any invitation to work against them. Indeed, Weskenim is rather unctuous in his interactions with visiting Set deacons and priests, offering them every courtesy and going out of his way to offer minor assistance and resources. While part of the goblins' reaction is due to their fear of the power of the Set cult, the goblins also make frequent use of the Forum (4-2) and thus do not wish to endanger their access to that location.

Skreel Lizardmen: Weskenim and his court view the lizardmen with contempt, seeing them as uncivilized and bestial. On their home turf, the goblins taunt and mock any visiting lizardmen; out in the halls, the goblins seek any opportunity to ambush lizardmen.

Sun-Scarred Knights: Weskenim is aware that some of his predecessors periodically had to accommodate the Knights, and is fully aware of their role as powerful, but neutral, arbiters among the factions of Arden Vul. The king hopes (vainly) to use the Knights to gain advantage against the halflings and beastmen.

Varumani: the goblins exist in a state of unhappy subservience towards the varumani. Weskenim pays quarterly tribute to the thegn, a fact which he conceals from his people. He would love to escape from this position, but is cognizant of the fact that the thegn could crush him like a bug, and so appears deferential to the varumani at all times. To his people Weskenim refers to the varumani as 'their big brothers' and 'protectors', but most goblin observers are aware of the fact that the thegn could wipe out the goblins at any moment.

Halflings of Phlebotomas Plumthorn

A band of evil halfling thugs has recently seized control of the chambers adjacent to the most prominent entrance to the dungeon levels (areas 3-3 to 3-6). Although small in number, they are ruthless and confident.

Ruler and Other Leaders: The halflings are led by Phlebotomas Plumthorn (3-5) and his assistants, the halfling Roskelly Winterleaf (3-2), and the human magic user, Blandveg (3-5).

Size of Faction and Replacements: Some twenty-two halflings, plus their three leaders, constitute this small faction. They can replace 4-6 of their number every 1-2 days up to a maximum of 12 new halflings; these reinforcements come from a second poison manufactory hidden near Newmarket. Beyond that number, it takes Plumthorn 3-30 days to recruit 2-8 new halflings from Narsileon. If Plumthorn and Winterleaf are killed, no new reinforcements are forthcoming.

Resources: The halfling's primary resource is a lethal poison that they manufacture from spider venom; it is marketed in select cities of the Archontean empire under the street name 'Mortality'. Some thieves and assassins may well have heard of the poison through appropriate guilds, and may well seek out the source (3-4). Plumthorn, however, is unwilling to sell the poison to anyone directly. Plumthorn and the halflings seek wealth and status; they want coin, gems, and jewelry, but prefer to extort it rather than trade for it. Blandveg is the lone exception; he has heard rumors of the magical utility of arcanum (see new magic items) and might, if ever encountered alone, be willing to trade information, spells, and/or mortality itself for viable samples of arcanum.

Attitudes Towards Adventurers: Plumthorn and his band are extortionists, selling exploration 'licenses' for 25 gp and demanding a 10% tithe of any treasure recovered. They exist, therefore, in a dialectical relationship with adventurers: no adventurers mean no extortion fees. The halflings play a subtle game, choosing to appear strong and demanding fees up front, only to back off if adventurers appear too powerful. Plumthorn flatly refuses to sell Mortality to adventurers, fearing it might be used against him. But he will certainly use its existence and lethality (perhaps with a demonstration on a goblin captive) to secure compliance from new 'customers'.

Areas of Control and/or Ignorance: The halflings have established themselves within a small, but easily-defensible area of Level 3 (areas 3-2 to 3-6). They frequently patrol a broader area of the level (areas 3-7 to 3-35).

Motives, Goals, and 'Quests': The halflings' main motive is to earn a lot of profit; once they feel they have milked their position within Arden Vul for all that it is worth, they will move on (probably to Narsileon). They may also flee if they feel that other factions are becoming too strong. Still, they smell opportunity here, and not merely from extortion; they might be willing to exempt some adventurers from extortion in return for aiding them against the goblins or beastmen. They have no real quests other than the acquisition of money, and, for Blandveg, arcanum. Should Plumthorn become aware that his former second-in-command, Carloman Fleetfingers, is still alive, however, he might be willing to trade goods (including Mortality), information, or services to those who procure Carloman's release; this is the only way for PCs to truly win the halflings' friendship. Carloman is a prisoner of the goblins, where he is being slowly tortured by King Weskenim's chief interrogator (see SL4-33).

Possibilities for Expansion and/or Contraction: Plumthorn is not interested in territory, and so is not interested in expansion. He feels that his current situation is strong (especially given the portcullis at area 3-3). If all of the halflings are killed, then Weskenim, the goblin king (SL4-22), will have his men occupy areas 3-3 through 3-6.

Relations with Other Factions

Beastmen: The halflings fear the beastmen for their military discipline, their quiet courage, and the fact that the beastmen seem completely uninterested in the halflings. Plumthorn would very much like to either establish an alliance with the beastmen or concoct some way to eliminate them.

Fishmen: The halflings are ignorant of their existence.

Goblins: Plumthorn and Co. are in open war with the goblins, for whom they have nothing but contempt. They are aware that the goblins outnumber them, but are confident that their superior tactical positions at areas 3-6 and 3-7, along with the advantage that Mortality provides, will allow them to prevail.

Heqeti: The halflings are unaware of the existence of the heqeti, except as evil monsters from antiquity.

Kaliyani: The halflings are utterly unaware of their existence.

Kerbog Khan: The halflings have encountered the Khan precisely once, through one of his dragonfly automatons. They don't know what to make of him and his bizarre requests. Plumthorn has chalked it up to 'yet more weirdness from Arden Vul' and has ordered his men to shoot down any other dragonflies they encounter.

Priscians: The halflings are unaware of their existence.

Set Cult: Plumthorn is afraid of the Set Cult. For this reason, he has ordered his men to not harass the cultists if they send patrols through the pyramid. The halflings rarely visit the Forum (4-2), mostly because they worry about leaving themselves inadequately defended. But Plumthorn is seriously contemplating offering to trade Mortality to the Set cultists in return for information, favors, and special items.

Skreel Lizardmen: Plumthorn is aware that a tribe of lizardmen lives somewhere in the Halls since he has seen them exiting the cliff face (at 4-190). He has had no dealings with them and would prefer to avoid them. The halflings assume that the lizardmen are powerful, and thus to be avoided; still, so long as they cause trouble to the goblins, it's all good.

Sun-Scarred Knights: Just as with the varumani, the halflings have only glimpsed a Knight twice, and find them utterly mystifying. The fact that the Knights have not deigned to notice the halflings' existence has only made Plumthorn more nervous and more fascinated with the mysterious warriors. Plumthorn might trade goods, perhaps even Mortality, for solid, detailed information on the Knights; he would certainly do so to anyone who could arrange an interview with a Knight.

Varumani: The halflings have only had infrequent glimpses of pairs of varumani hunters (see 7-14), and they are impressed and frightened by what they have seen. They have no formal relationship with the varumani, and are unlikely to establish one. Those who can plausibly claim or prove to have the support of the varumani may be able to escape the halflings' shakedown attempts.

Heqeti

The heqeti were the original inhabitants of Arden Vul, arriving from the Underearth to build shrines and dwellings around the Great Chasm. Their ancient works - including such iconic monuments as the Obsidian Gates (5-6D) - are still scattered throughout the Halls, sometimes repurposed by later inhabitants, and sometimes lying untouched in their original state. The heqeti were chased from Arden Vul twice, once by the rudishva 2,900 years ago, and again by the Archonteans under Marius Tricotor some 1,900 years ago. Recently (about 300 years ago), the heqeti returned to the Halls. Their first project was the restoration of the great ziggurat of Kauket (10-32 to 10-37); with that complete, they have turned their attention towards expansion. The heqeti are a powerful faction by virtue of their racial abilities and powers, but they do not as yet have the numbers to overpower the other established factions.

Ruler and Other Leaders: As is the case in all their settlements, the heqeti of Arden Vul are led by a Great Tongue, who wields absolute authority over his/her people. The Great Tongue of Arden Vul is currently Reepsiq (10-47), an aged and clever heqeti weaver with decades of experience in the Underearth and in Arden Vul. Reepsiq is assisted by Pikaressa, the Second Tongue (10-49), and Qassapik, the Chief Weaver (10-48). Lesser lieutenants include the weavers Cheksib (10-13) and Neepariq (10-40).

Size of Faction and Replacements: At present about 125 heqeti of all sorts (hoppers, chosen, builders, and weavers) may be found permanently stationed throughout Arden Vul, with the vast majority located on Level 10. In addition, 40-60 heqeti pilgrims may also be found visiting the ziggurat. Heqeti losses can be replaced fairly swiftly so long as the ziggurat is in operation, with replacements coming from other heqeti settlements in the Underearth. If the ziggurat is cleansed, however, the heqeti reinforcements dry up.

Resources: The heqeti receive most of their needed goods from the Underearth, including foodstuffs (meat, fish, mushrooms, etc.), ores and metals, and finished goods. They rely on existing Underearth trade networks for those items they cannot make for themselves, and hence are forced to tolerate the presence of such traders (e.g., at 10-54). They are uninterested in trade with surface-dwellers, except in highly unusual circumstances (e.g., trading for lost heqeti artifacts).

Attitudes Towards Adventurers: Given their racial hatred for humanity and demi-humans, the heqeti are likely to view adventurers as threats and dangers, and to proceed to eliminate them with extreme prejudice. This is particularly true of adventurers encountered within Arden Vul, as the heqeti view the halls as their ancestral territory and thus view all-non heqeti as interlopers. The only exceptions to their antipathy might come in the case of truly evil adventurers who perform some feat that serves broader heqeti goals within Arden Vul or in the case of evil adventurers who arrive at Level 10 via the Underearth (i.e., via 10-62). Delivering the missing pale-green demonic horn (found at 5-95A) to Reepsiq, for example, wins the grudging respect of the heqeti (although it would be an intensely evil act, as it would allow them to summon Kauket - see 10-37).

Areas of Control and/or Ignorance: The main area of heqeti control is found on level 10, around the dreaded ziggurat of Kauket. They have established smaller outposts on other levels, including a foothold on Level 9 (9-76 to 9-82), their upper temple on Level 7 (7-78 to 7-84), and a tentative initiative on Level 6 (6-51, 6-54, 6-104 to 6-106). They are familiar with most of the lower levels of Arden Vul, especially those areas where they once held sway, but they are ignorant of the current layout of the upper levels (i.e., Levels 1-4).

Motives, Goals, and 'Quests': The long-term goal of Reepsiq and the heqeti is nothing less than the reoccupation of the entirety of Arden Vul and the extermination of all their enemies. Still, the heqeti leaders are not stupid, and they realize that these goals are ambitious. They realize that they cannot yet confront the varumani directly, at least until they are able to summon Kauket (see 10-37). As a result, they are content to explore, establish hidden listening posts (e.g. 6-51), and generally prepare for the day when they will triumph. Among their immediate goals are these: 1) they actively seek the missing pale-green demonic horn that will allow them to complete the summoning of Kauket (see 10-37; the horn is found in 5-95A), although they have no idea where it may be found; and 2) they are searching for artifacts from their ancient glory days, including the founder's mattock (see 9-12).

Possibilities for Expansion and/or Contraction: Short-term possibilities for heqeti expansion include areas of Level 9 that were once under their direct control, including the silent canyon area (9-109 to 9-126) and the areas around the great pukel (9-31 to 9-48). Still, they would need to deal with the Priscians (c.f. 9-31) in order to make this push. Another possible locus for expansion is the drowned canyon region (Sub-Level 6). Until the varumani are weakened, however, the heqeti are unlikely to be able to expand meaningfully in the upper halls. Should the varumani be eliminated or greatly reduced (say, by aggressive adventurers), the heqeti would instantly attempt to seize both the Troll Lift network (from their base on Level 6) and the domain of the thegn itself (moving from their upper temple to seize the varumani hold).

Relations with Other Factions

Beastmen: The heqeti have captured one beastman (10-43) but have little interest in him. As a result, they are largely ignorant of the beastmen faction.

Fishmen: The heqeti are ignorant of their existence.

Goblins: The heqeti are unaware of the goblin faction.

Halfings of Phlebotomas Plumthorn: The heqeti are ignorant of their existence.

Kaliyani: Ever since the (temporary) alliance between kaliyani and heqeti that led to the collapse of the rudishva hegemony within Arden Vul, there has been uneasy peace and toleration between the two races. It helped that the kaliyani abandoned Arden Vul after the rudishva collapse, as the heqeti interpreted this flight as recognition of the heqeti rights to the Halls. In the complex world of Underearth politics, then, the heqeti and kaliyani are frequently allies. Still, Arden Vul is slightly different. As yet, the heqeti are unaware that a rogue group of kaliyani have returned to Arden Vul (the Twelfth Consortium, at SL9-64 to SL9-78). Were he to learn of Tsilliv's occupation of SL9, Reepsiq would be filled with concern concerning Tsilliv's motives; he might (rightly) fear that the kaliyani were looking to seize Arden Vul for themselves. In short, despite the general goodwill that heqeti have for kaliyani, the potential for conflict between Reepsiq and Tsilliv is high.

Kerbog Khan: The heqeti consider the Khan to be just another variant of dangerous human interloper in their ancestral halls. They hunt his automatons whenever possible and refuse to parlay with him.

Priscians: The heqeti are aware that human mages have been moving about on the chasm floor (Level 9), but as yet have not located the Priscian Hold or managed to trap and interrogate a Priscian. Reepsiq is naturally concerned about the threat posed by these stealthy mages, as he fears a resurgence of the Archontean power that once defeated his people. His people have strict orders to be extra-careful on Level 9 and to make every effort to grab one of the humans.

Set Cult: The heqeti are unaware of the Set cult.

Skreel Lizardmen: Even though the Skreel know of the heqeti (through Flisserak [SL5-7] and the visions of Kusok One-Eye [SL5-31]), the heqeti are ignorant of the Skreel tribe. If contact were made, the heqeti would likely tolerate the Skreel, hoping to use them as servants against their more powerful enemies.

Sun-Scarred Knights: The Knights have long been a thorn in the side of heqeti efforts to recover their territories in Arden Vul. Although ignorant of the origins of the Knights, the identity of their master, and the location of their citadel, the heqeti have recently won a major victory when Caudatssa's forces on Level 7 managed to overpower Sir Mendacity and take her prisoner. Reepsiq plans to transport the captive to the ziggurat for further interrogation, with the goal of finally learning where the knights are located and how they might be defeated.

Varumani: The heqeti instinctively hate the varumani for their role in the original loss of heqeti control of Arden Vul. As a result, they ambush varumani hunters and warriors whenever possible. Still, the heqeti are fully aware that the varumani are powerful, both individually and as a faction. Reepsiq is not ready to move against the varumani and is waiting both for some outside omen and the recovery of the missing demonic horn (10-37) before setting in motion plans to eliminate his ancient rivals.

Kaliyani

The kaliyani of Arden Vul are a group of renegades from the main kaliyani Underearth city of Lissak-Tol. Their leader is an ambitious and powerful magistra named Tsilliv (see SL9-77). Unable to dominate any of the existing eleven consortia in Lissak-Tol, Tsilliv fled with a band of loyal followers. Tsilliv's band left Lissak-Tol about 20 years ago and navigated its way through the Underearth, along ways and passages originally recorded in the annals of the kaliyani escape from Arden Vul. Reaching Sub-Level 9, they delved a small, but well-guarded outpost to the east of the main cavern and named it a consortium, even though this act directly contravenes kaliyani custom, which only allows eleven consortia, all ruled by neutered males. More recently, the kaliyani enslaved a small tribe of renegade lizardmen (the Lagrok tribe) dwelling in the southern reaches of the cavern. Although Tsilliv's numbers are not great, and her forces are somewhat spread out, she and her team are intelligent and quite dangerous. They are poised to begin the exploitation of a number of valuable (and equally dangerous) areas within Arden Vul, including long forgotten areas holding important Rudishva technology (e.g., Level 5). As yet they have not played a major role in the factional maneuvering that marks Arden Vul, although that fact will change once their base and numbers have grown a bit. It should be noted that the 'defection' of Tsilliv and her supporters was seen by the Enclave of the Eleven (the kaliyani ruling council) as a grievous act of treachery and betrayal, and as a sign of rising moral degeneracy among the kaliyani people. The Eleven would like nothing more than to smash Tsilliv and her upstart "Twelfth Consortium." In turn, Tsilliv hopes that success in Arden Vul will allow her to return to Lissak-Tol in triumph, where the intelligence and resources she gathered in Arden Vul would force the doubters to bow to her strength and wisdom.

Ruler and Other Leaders: Magistra Tsilliv is the leader of the Twelfth Consortium (SL9-77). She is aided by two fellow sorcerers, Sveestik and Kaastir (SL9-77 for both).

Size of Faction and Replacements: The Twelfth Consortium currently numbers about 80 members, half of whom are found within the kaliyani compound on SL9 while the other half are busy exploring the Halls. Since Tsilliv's people are outcasts and rebels against the authority of the Eleven in Lissak-Tol, it will be difficult for them to replace losses. At best they might expect 1-2 new recruits per month.

Resources: The kaliyani are well stocked with supplies derived from the Underearth; they are self-sufficient with regards to food and money, especially since they continue to receive covert support from dissatisfied elements in Lissak-Tol. They produce little in the way of exports and are mostly uninterested in trade with surface-dwellers. Their dredging operations do provide some minerals that they could use to trade; they also create their own minor magic items and potions. Since they require arcenum (see new magic items) for higher-level spell casting, they are always interested in new supplies of that orange substance.

Attitudes Towards Adventurers: The kaliyani in general and Tsilliv in particular are completely inimical to humankind. It is hard to fathom the circumstances in which she might negotiate with human or demi-human adventurers.

Areas of Control and/or Ignorance: The Twelfth Consortium proper comprises the western area of Sub-Level 9 (areas SL9-59 to SL9-78). This region is well-designed and -defended, with purpose-built choke-points at SL9-62 and SL9-78. Tsilliv has mounted three exploratory ventures into the Halls. The first expedition was sent down the tunnel at SL9-37 towards Level 9; its members established a forward base at 9-118 and dispatched smaller groups upwards into Levels 8, 7, and 5. The second group was tasked with penetrating the fiery veil at SL9-50. This team solved the problem by digging a new tunnel from SL9-51 to SL9-52. There they discovered and partially repaired a damaged teleporter that allowed them to access area 6-32. The third expedition followed a natural fissure in the rock upward from SL9-75; their mining efforts led to them eventually to level 4, where they broke down a wall leading to the chamber of High Priestess Stephania (4-51A). Aside from these areas, the kaliyani are ignorant of the layout of the rest of Arden Vul. They are committed to exploration, however, and their team on level 5 (5-125) is poised to make the kaliyani the first faction to penetrate the Midnight Road in several millennia.

Motives, Goals, and 'Quests': The long-term goal of Tsilliv is to create a viable, twelfth consortium here at Arden Vul. As this goal directly contradicts two millennia of custom and practice, the other kaliyani at Lissak-Tol would love nothing more than to smash Tsilliv and her upstarts. From records stolen from the other eleven consortia, Tsilliv is aware that her people arrived at Arden Vul on a ship named the Beacon; she would like to discover information about the Beacon and/or its physical remains. As yet, she is unaware that the Beacon was a starship. To this end, she badly wants to discover the ancestral homes of her people in Arden Vul (i.e., the rudishva areas, especially on Level 5). More immediate goals include: 1) the discovery and control of large quantities of arcenum, enough to fuel the spellcasting of the kaliyani spellcasters; 2) coming up with a way to either destroy or dominate the humans (i.e., the Set Cult); and 3) undermining the varumani without confronting them directly. The Eleven Consortia have a spy implanted in Tsilliv's group (Serriv; see SL9-72); the spy's reports are conveyed back to Lissak-Tol by the derro trader, Gest Felstapper (SL9-76). Although it is unlikely that Serriv would be able to make contact with PCs, he (and his masters) would certainly be interested in a short-term alliance with adventurers who could promise to eliminate or damage Tsilliv and her team.

Possibilities for Expansion and/or Contraction: Tsilliv fully controls Sub-Level 9. Within the next month or so, she will send a permanent team to 6-32; this team will avoid area 6-30, but will dig a tunnel to 6-28, where it will attempt to take over the trader's hall and then move into the rest of Level 6. Expansion into Level 4 (via 4-51A or 4-39) is currently stymied by the Set Cult's presence there, at least until Tsilliv can determine whether the humans are strong enough to withstand her. The kaliyani expedition based at 9-118 has not recommended permanent expansion to that location, but its exploration teams have found more promising sites elsewhere. The most significant is area 5-125, where the kaliyani are close to discovering the Midnight Road region; when they do, Tsilliv will undoubtedly establish a strong outpost there with orders to loot everything useful from the area (since she does not yet have the numbers to occupy it completely).

Relations with Other Factions

Beastmen: The kaliyani are ignorant of the beastmen.

Fishmen: The kaliyani are ignorant of the fishmen.

Goblins: The kaliyani are unaware of the goblin kingdom.

Halflings of Phlebotomas Plumthorn: The kaliyani are utterly ignorant of the halflings' existence.

Heqeti: Although Tsilliv's people have not yet encountered the heqeti within Arden Vul, the two races are generally tolerant of each other in the Underearth. Once contact is made, Tsilliv will attempt to form an alliance with Reepsiq; she will offer to split the Halls between the two peoples. Reepsiq, as noted in the heqeti faction entry, will be less sanguine about this overture, as he believes that all of Arden Vul belongs to the heqeti. Thus, a short-term alliance is likely, especially against the varumani, but the seeds of long-term conflict are present.

Kerbog Khan: The kaliyani have encountered several of the Khan's automatons but have yet to speak directly with the strange mage. At this point they don't know what to make of him; he's clearly powerful, and they fear he may have as-yet-unknown resources. Tsilliv is contemplating issuing orders to destroy all automatons on sight.

Priscians: The kaliyani have not yet encountered the Priscians. When and if they do, however, they will see them as natural enemies and move to oppose the human magic users.

Set Cult: The kaliyani were shocked twenty years ago when their tunneling efforts led them to tumble - literally - into the chamber of High Priestess Stephania of the cult of Set. After a tense standoff, the kaliyani came to a modus vivendi with the humans. The kaliyani promised to share information about the lower levels, while the Set cultists agreed to provide necessary goods and supplies. Left unspecified were general promises of support. While the Set leaders have high confidence in this arrangement, the kaliyani see it as a temporary measure. Indeed, their natural hatred for humans makes it likely that they will betray the cult at some point in the future, once they have become more firmly established in the Halls. Tsilliv has also carefully regulated the information she has provided to High Priestess Stephania, and indeed has revealed nothing of her own expansion efforts elsewhere in the Halls. Using psionics and psychology, the kaliyani have played on the cultists' desire to see the kaliyani as natural allies, even as fellow-devotees of Set. To this end they have established a 'snake-god' shrine at 4-51A as a cover.

Skreel Lizardmen: The Skreel are unknown to the kaliyani. Should they encounter each other, the kaliyani will attempt to enslave them as they have already done the Lagrok tribe (see SL9).

Sun-Scarred Knights: The kaliyani are ignorant of the Knights. Once contact is made, the kaliyani will seek to eliminate the Knights and stymie their plans.

Varumani: Over the millennia since their retreat from Arden Vul, the kaliyani have developed a racial myth that they had been persecuted by the rudishva and varumani; as a result, they have natural hatred towards the varumani. Tsilliv's exploration teams have learned that the varumani are powerful within Arden Vul, probably more so than the twelfth consortium. As a result, she has ordered her people to avoid the varumani for the present. One group of scouts, however, was surprised by varumani hunters on the chasm floor and slain; as a result, the varumani know of the existence of the kaliyani, and Varboka the thegn is planning action against them (once he learns the location of Tsilliv's base). At present, the two ancient enemies are still mostly concealed from each other, but open war is likely to break out in the near future; war would be absolutely certain should both sides discover a route to the Midnight Road, since both wish to claim the heritage of the rudishva for themselves.

Kerbog Khan

travel everywhere, seeking to 'bargain' with all and sundry. The Khan's distinctive voice - raspy, tonally varied, and with hisses, pops, and crackles - has also made him memorable to the other factions. Since the Khan appears weak in number and unaggressive, most of the other factions do not see him as a threat. Instead, they accept him as an information broker, albeit a strange one with a strange predilection for blood. It is common for explorers to encounter the Khan via his automatons, even in the most remote sections of the Halls. Indeed, some adventurers attribute their survival to bargains made with the Khan (by which he teleported them to safety in return for blood samples as well as other items).

Ruler and Other Leaders: Kerbog Khan is the sole sentient member and leader of the faction. Born Cerbactos Kalthetos, the Khan climbed through the ranks of the Collegia as a powerful (20th-level) mage with an unhealthy interest in blood magic. Fifty-seven years ago, however, Cerbactos abruptly decamped from Archontos, and ended up in Arden Vul, where he fortuitously located the lost medical pod of the Beacon and set himself up as a blood-mage and techno-sorcerer. Using the high technology in the medical pod, he has grafted various mechanical elements onto his own body.

Size of Faction and Replacements: Kerbog Khan is served by a set of automatons. Four of the automatons are unique: the borer, the doorkeeper, the Giatros, and the Nosokoma (see Automaton of Kerbog Khan in new monsters for all). Most are generic, falling into the following types: battle automatons (5 exist at present), basic dragonflies (20), poison dragonflies (7), basic exploration models (8), and bipedal exploration models (4). Lastly, the Khan has also created a model of automaton that is capable of limited sentience; he calls them his 'children'. Two of these have fled his lair, but two more remain with their 'father'. The process of making an automaton is difficult, requiring time and resources. The Khan is able to replace dragonflies at the rate of one every other month; the exploration models take 3-6 months to create; the battle and unique automatons take 6-18 months to recreate.

Resources: The Khan is fabulously wealthy, since his automatons systematically bring him lost treasure in coin, magic, and codices. That said, he constantly desires new supplies of certain objects, including gems, precious metals, mundane metals (steel, iron, brass, and bronze), rudishva technology (bits of plasteel, as well as specific technological objects), ancient constructs, and magic items. In return for such items, he offers information, spell services, teleportation service, and healing; he almost never parts with items from his own hard-won hoard.

Attitudes Towards Adventurers: Kerbog Khan is intensely interested in adventurers, at least provided that they treat him and his automatons politely. Craving information about the Halls, specific rudishva-era technology, and general magical resources, the Khan is always interested in making bargains with like-minded adventurers. Kerbog Khan's bargains are quite specific: he can offer information, teleportation services, spell services, and healing; in return, he demands information, objects (particularly rudishva items), and services. In any trading session, however, the Khan requires that 'bargains must be sealed with blood' (a phrase that is well known to all who treat with him). This means that bargainers must provide a blood sample, to be taken either by the Nosokoma or by one of his automatons (if the bargain is made outside his own domain). Should adventurers attack his automatons, betray a bargain, or otherwise irk the Khan, he is unlikely to take direct action; rather, he is likely to bargain with other parties - either factions within the Halls or NPC adventuring groups - to take vengeance on his behalf.

Areas of Control and/or Ignorance: Kerbog Khan controls a small, but defensible, complex of rooms on Sub-Level 12. His automatons travel everywhere throughout Arden Vul, ensuring that he is probably the best-informed denizen of the Halls. There are few areas of which he is ignorant.

Motives, Goals, and 'Quests': In general terms, the Khan is constantly searching for unknown locations, new bits of rudishva technology, gems, precious metals, and magic items. Adventurers who 'open' new regions of the Halls to exploration might well receive a visit from the Khan (through one of his automatons), inviting them to bargain with him for information or specific items. Examples of information that the Khan might find valuable include: a route into the Midnight Road (level 5); how to open the Obsidian Gates (5-6D); the location of the archons' regalia (i.e., the bone ring of Jagri-Naz at 5-74, the tablet of the beacon at 9-107, the ebon spear at SL5-13B, and the iron circlet of Ghanor at 3-127A); the nature of Deino (3-158); the nature of Master Malachite of the Sun-Scarred Knights (SL10A-32); the location of any of the pods of the Beacon (SL2-2, 6-27, 6-113, 7-143, SL13-37, and SL14-10); the location of the Tomb of Isadora (SL11) or of the Tombs of Light (SL2); the location of the resting place of the legendary construct, Sulla the Myrmex (SL6-22); how to access the chamber of the Beacon (SL14-10); etc. Finally, the Khan is distraught at the flight of two of his 'children', Corbel and Cobban, from his precincts; he would trade much for the return of the two, or even for information concerning their location (they may be found at 4-176).

Possibilities for Expansion and/or Contraction: The Khan is uninterested in expanding his domain. As none of the other factions are willing to confront him, the likelihood that his domain contracts is also low.

Relations with Other Factions

Kerbog Khan hopes to enjoy a basically neutral relationship with all the factions. He prefers none of them, nor is he willing to ally with any of them. Instead, he merely seeks to further his own ends through bargains.

Beastmen: Kerbog Khan is irritated by the refusal of the beastmen to treat with him, mostly because their hostility poses a constant threat to his automatons on Level 3 and has forced him to seek alternate routes through that level. He is likely to warn adventurers against the them, and regularly plots against Deino.

Fishmen: The fishmen are an unknown quantity to the Khan, a fact that makes him both curious and nervous about them. He has observed their activities in the Drowned Canyon and is aware that they have an aquatic lair somewhere to the north of the canyon; but because he has yet to develop a truly submersible automaton, he has not been able to explore Sub-Level 7. From what he has seen, the fishmen seem primitive and unlikely to offer much to him in terms of bargains.

Goblins: The Khan is pleased by the goblins' affection for him. His automatons make frequent stops in the goblin realm.

Halflings of Phlebotomas Plumthorn: Kerbog Khan's automatons scouted the halfling camp shortly after it was established. Unimpressed with the small-mindedness of the halflings, especially their apparent lack of interest in exploration or knowledge acquisition, the Khan has decided to ignore them. If questioned about the halflings, he has nothing good to say.

Heqeti: Although the Khan has no natural objection to the heqeti and would, in fact, bargain with them if only they would agree to do so, the hostility of the heqeti towards his automatons has made him cautious. Because of this, his automatons rarely venture into heqeti territory.

Kaliyani: As one of the newest factions in Arden Vul, the Khan has been naturally curious about them. He knows where the kaliyani reside and how to get to Sub-Level 9. That said, he is cautious about them, especially given his experience with the heqeti, and has not yet revealed himself to the kaliyani, let alone attempted to bargain with them.

Priscians: The Priscians are the one group that the Khan fears, since they represent in his eyes the might of the Archontean wizardly collegia. Given that the Khan fled the collegia with several valuable - and stolen - codices, he would prefer to remain undetected by other powerful Archontean magic users. For this reason, he actively avoids the Priscians (although he knows where they are located) and denigrates them as 'dangerous evil-doers' to any who ask. As yet he has kept the location of his domain secret from the Priscians.

Set Cult: The Khan values the cult for the Forum, where he regularly seals bargains. So long as the Set cult does not disturb him, he continues to support them.

Skreel Lizardmen: Kerbog Khan has nothing against the lizardmen except for the fact that they are not very interesting. Since they are unlikely to have much to trade to him, he doesn't spend much time thinking about them, and his automatons don't visit Sub-Level 5 very often.

Sun-Scarred Knights: The Khan has come to grudgingly respect the Knights for their neutrality and their willingness to trade information with him. That said, he is intensely curious about their origins, their customs, the location of their citadel, and the identity of their Master; he would eagerly bargain with those who could satisfy this curiosity.

Varumani: Kerbog Khan is one of the few modern persons familiar with the history of the varumani. As a result, he is fascinated by them, both for their vibrant culture and their status as semi-constructed beings (see the troll pits at 5-131). That they find his automatons endearing and interesting puts the seal on his interest in the varumani. For these reasons, his automatons frequently visit the court of the thegn (7-75) and the troll market (7-76).

Priscians, or the Eighth Collegium

The Priscians are a secretive, disciplined, hierarchical order of arcane spell-casters who have taken their name from the ancient Sortian mage, Priscus Pulcher. Although the historical Priscus believed in egalitarian principals and the opening of magical training to all, the modern Priscians embrace a gnosticism that celebrates secret knowledge and power at the expense of others. Although they recruit carefully and attempt to keep rigid control over their members' activities, sufficient hints of their activities have leaked into the public sphere such that Archontean arcane society has come to postulate the existence of an Eighth, or secret, Collegium; the Priscians have adopted this epithet for themselves. The Priscian Order comprises two types, the full members, or circularii (spell-casters), and the adjunct members, or conversi (thieves and fighters who lend support to the casters). Since all are classed characters, the Priscians are more powerful than their numbers would suggest.

Ruler and Other Leaders: The archmage Nerub Null (9-64) is the leader of the Priscian expedition within Arden Vul. Nerub Null is a bit ethereal and concerned with long-term strategy, so day-to-day logistical operations are handled by Jaracondus the Sprightly (9-63). The Priscians embrace a rigidly hierarchical organizational structure, such that most circularii are in charge of at least some of the more junior members.

Size of Faction and Replacements: The Priscians are divided into full members, or circularii (i.e., spell-casters), and non-spellcasting assistants, or conversi. At the moment there are twenty-nine circularii and thirty-two conversi present in the Halls. As the Eighth Collegium is a super-secret organization, it will be impossible for Nerub Null to replace losses. Should the entire Priscian group be eliminated, the duo-decimus of the sept based in Archontos will order another expedition; this expedition will be half as large as that of Nerub Null, although the mages will all be from Quintus and above. It takes three months after the destruction of Nerub Null's group for the new expedition to arrive; it has full knowledge of the entry at AV-19, and will seek to reoccupy the Priscian areas, and especially the arcanum forge (9-60).

Resources: The Priscians control the arcanum forge (9-60), which allows them to make special magical items; these are not usually for sale or trade to non-Priscians, however. Similarly, they have acquired quite a few interesting curiosities from their recent exploration of the halls; these trophies are found in 9-62. They are constantly searching for arcanum (see new magic items) and magical treasures; in return, they offer cash, some of their non-magical trophies, spell-casting services, and, as a last resort, Priscian magical items.

Attitudes Towards Adventurers: The Priscians exercise caution with adventurers at all times, rightly deeming them among the most dangerous potential forces they might encounter. In fact, the Priscians prefer to avoid contact with adventurers through the use of spells and potions. If surprised or confronted, they seek negotiation first. They will not reveal the location of their hold (areas 9-58 to 9-64) except under extreme torture, and they also reveal nothing about their search for lost Sortian tombs (e.g., Sub-Level 11).

Areas of Control and/or Ignorance: The Priscians prefer to make a light imprint on the space of Arden Vul. In addition to their secret entrance point to the Halls (AV-19), they have occupied only a handful of locations: the set of chambers abutting the nexus point for Sortian teleportation (6-45 to 6-49A), and the old Sortian hold itself (areas 9-58 to 9-64). From these areas they have done a fair amount of exploring in the main dungeon levels, particularly on Levels 3, 5, 6, 7, and 8, and on a few of the sub-levels (SL4, SL6, although their expedition to SL6 did not fare well - see SL16-19). They are occasional visitors in the neutral gathering sites such as the Forum (4-2), the Inn of the Lost (6-7 to 6-19), the Arena (6-68), and the Troll Market (7-75).

Motives, Goals, and 'Quests': The Priscians seek magical treasure, magical knowledge, arcanum (see new magic items), and objets d'art from the Archontean golden age. They have a special interest in any objects or knowledge that can be associated with the Sortians. As they are impressed with the might and technomagical powers of the Sun-Scarred Knights, they would very much like to locate the knights' fabled hold. Finally, through long years of research, Nerub Null has come across a series of tantalizing clues pointing to the significance of a Lady Isadora (see World of Archontos appendix) to the ancient Sortians; he would like his people to follow up these clues to see if there is anything behind the rumors.

Possibilities for Expansion and/or Contraction: The Priscians are content with their existing accommodations. While they are strong enough to expand, expansion makes 'noise', and they prefer to remain quiet, gliding through Arden Vul with a minimum of attention. This policy has risks, for they have no spot to which they can fall back.

Relations with Other Factions

Beastmen: The Priscians have no formal relations with the beastmen and only a hazy idea of where they live. In fact, their only knowledge of the beastmen comes from some guarded, inconclusive conversations in neutral sites like the Forum (4-2).

Fishmen: Before it was wiped out (see SL6-19), the Priscian exploration party sent to SL6 reported the existence of the fishmen, describing them as bestial and only semi-sentient. Nerub Null has not given the fishmen another thought.

Goblins: The Priscians are broadly supportive of the goblins, mostly because they feel they can manipulate King Weskenim into helping them achieve their own ends. Nerub Null has recently authorized a first embassy to the goblin court through the secret chambers at SL4-44; King Weskenim is duly amazed and slightly intimidated by the ambassadors' mien and power.

Halflings of Phlebotomas Plumthorn: The Priscians are aware that a band of thuggish halflings has occupied the entrance halls under the pyramid, but they have not made their own presence known to the halflings. They see little reason to do so, as they assume that the halflings will be wiped out sooner or later.

Heqeti: Given the location of their Hold on Level 9, the Priscians came into immediate and hostile contact with the heqeti. Realizing that the heqeti are inimical to humans, the Priscians have moved very carefully about the chasm floor, concealing their movement from the heqeti via illusion spells and potions. They hope to accurately map the accessible areas of Level 9 so as to rule out any possible counter attack from the heqeti; at that point they might make a surprise attack on the heqeti outpost on Level (9-75 to 9-82), hoping to force the heqeti to retreat. Any who aided such a venture (or took the risks on their own), might win the friendship of the Priscians.

Kaliyani: The Priscians have only glimpsed kaliyani parties twice, and both times at a distance. Since they know almost nothing about them, and since the kaliyani seem dangerous, the Priscians are predisposed to dislike them. In certain circumstances, a Priscian party might be willing to trade some information to adventurers in return for a detailed information about kaliyani capabilities and the location of their habitations.

Kerbog Khan: As powerful magic-users from the Archontean empire, the Priscians know of the checkered history of Kerbog Khan, and share the disgust and contempt that the Collegia feel for the Khan. As a result, the Priscians attempt to destroy the Khan's automatons on sight. They also would dearly love to locate the Khan's hidden lair so as to capture him and return him to the empire for justice.

Set Cult: The Priscians recognize the value of the neutral meeting ground that the Set cultists have established and are willing to take advantage of it for purposes of trade and information-gathering. Still, they do not trust the cultists, and are likely to block High Priestess Stephania's ventures whenever it is feasible to do so.

Skreel Lizardmen: The Priscians are aware that a tribe of lizardmen exists, and that the entrance to their domain may be found on Level 4, just north of the ruined entrance halls. They have encountered lizardmen in the neutral areas of the Halls but have not yet made a formal overture to the Skreel. Should the Priscians become aware of the location of the tomb of Kentillian (SL5-13A and SL5-13B), they would take a significantly greater interest in the Skreel.

Sun-Scarred Knights: Although initially shocked and frightened by their first encounter with a Knight, the Priscians quickly came to agreeable terms with them. As the Priscians did not seem to want to play a major role in the politics of the Halls, the Knights were content to register their existence and move on to their already-established strategies. This suits the Priscians just fine. The Knights' lack of interest allows the Priscians time to make careful inquiries about the Knights' powers and special interests, and, especially, about the location of their citadel.

Varumani: Admiring the vigor, power, and mysterious origins of the varumani, the Priscians have thus far treated Varboka, the troll thegn (7-30), with respect. Perhaps sensing that the varumani pose a lesser threat to their plans than does the Set Cult, the Priscians feel less threatened by the thegn's people. It helps that the varumani are not really spell casters, and thus are not really rivals; it also strikes the Priscians that better artifacts from the Sortian period can be found at the Troll Market (7-75). The Priscian leadership is even contemplating a subtle campaign to turn the varumani against Set, with promises of Priscian support as part of the package.

Set Cult

Set was one of the 'Twelve', that is, the Old Gods of the ancient Archontean Empire. During the imperial golden age, one of the centers of Set's cultic power was Level 4 of Arden Vul. Over the past millennium, however, the Archonteans have come to worship new gods (or, perhaps, new avatars of the old ones?), and the worship of Set, Thoth, and the other members of the Twelve has dwindled to a trickle. About a century ago, a handful of the remaining faithful followers of Set began to reoccupy the old halls in Arden Vul. That handful has grown into a powerful, but secretive faction that has restored the old main temple (3-90) and two of the three mysteries of Set (4-23 and 4-48). The cult leaders also chose to restore the ancient Forum of Set (4-2) and to position themselves as the neutral arbiters for trade and diplomacy among the other evil factions of Arden Vul. The cult of Set has thus come to fill an important role in the upper levels by providing a well-ordered, well-guarded site for the exchange of goods, treasure, and slaves. The cult of Set is comprised of two distinct units, the priesthood, and the Guild of Service (i.e., slavers). While technically the priesthood, led by High Priestess Stephania (4-51), rules the entire group, in practice the chief slaver, Gunnar, and the rest of the Guild operate quasi-independently. The cult is ruthless, but lawful; should visitors appear strong and demonstrate a clear reason for visiting the public areas of the cult (especially the Forum), those visitors will not be hindered, and may even be offered advice. The cult is also feared by the other factions of the upper halls thanks to the discipline of the Set guardsmen and, especially, to the spell-casting abilities of the acolytes, deacons, and priests.

Ruler and Other Leaders: The ultimate leader of the cult is High Priestess Stephania (4-51). She consults with a team of senior advisors, including Belisarius the Overseer (4-47), Alexandros the bibliothecarius (4-54), Marius Junienos (4-56), and Lacedaion of Archontos (4-57). The Guild of Service has its own leadership structure: the chief slaver is the Wisikin Gunnar (4-10), who is advised by three guildmasters, Yon Resedor (4-8A), Anna Ligareon (4-8B), and Jisko Grey-Eyes (4-8C). None of the others is aware of the fact that Chief Slaver Gunnar (4-10) has recently been replaced by a doppelganger; the real Gunnar is languishing in a secret prison (4-64).

Size of Faction and Replacements: The cult is relatively large and powerful, as most of its members are classed as fighters (guardsman and sergeants), clerics (acolytes and deacons), or thieves (guildsmen). In total, the cult boasts about 100 guardsmen scattered across various duty stations and patrols, plus about thirty acolytes and ten deacons. The Guild of Service contains another fifty individuals or so. At any given time, some 25-50 non-resident cultists are present on Level 4, visiting the Forum and Mysteries. Despite its size, it is difficult for the cult to replace the trained (classed) guardsmen and clerics; indeed, the majority of Set clergy that currently exist in the Archontean world are concentrated here. Losses incurred on the boundaries of their territory (e.g., choke-points like 3-89) will be swiftly replaced (and doubled) by reassigning forces from elsewhere within the domain of Set. But Stephania can only reassign forces for so long - a prolonged war of attrition will incur losses that Set cannot replace. At best, Stephania can hope to replace 1-3 guardsmen and one acolyte every two months.

Resources: The cult is quite wealthy, both in terms of money and magic. It makes a nice profit from taxing trade in the Forum (4-2), and earns even more from its loathsome slave trade. Set patrols in the upper halls are constantly looking for hidden treasure from the old days of Arden Vul. Finally, the cult also profits from its money-lending and banking services (see 4-2G and 4-24). All of this means that Set has a sizable pool of liquid wealth it can use to bribe or hire mercenaries and allies; for instance, Stephania's treasury (4-52) holds 35,000 gp. It should also be noted that the cult enjoys easy access to divine spells and magic items appropriate to clerics. The cult is always willing to trade or pay for shipments of food, alcohol, iron, steel, and wood from outside Arden Vul.

Attitudes Towards Adventurers: Adventurers who approach the Forum through the normal route (across the Red Bridge, area 4-120A) as peaceful or neutral visitors will find themselves welcomed, although they will be scrutinized carefully. So long as such adventurers follow the Laws of the Forum (4-2), the cult tolerates and encourages visitation, inquiries, and trade. Encounters with Set patrols or fixed Set guard posts elsewhere in the Halls are another story, however. Away from the Forum, Set guardsmen, acolytes, and deacons are arrogant and aggressive, seeking to confront potential foes and force submission. Weak adventurers might find themselves forced to give tribute to such forces. Adventurers who assault any of the cult's fixed territory incur the lasting enmity of the cult; not only will they be barred from the Forum, they will be actively hunted through the upper halls of Arden Vul.

Areas of Control and/or Ignorance: The cult actively controls large chunks of Levels 3 and 4, including areas 3-89 to 3-111, 4-1 to 4-58, 4-101 to 4-106, 4-119 to 4-120, and 4-128 to 4-132. Significant sites include the main temple (3-90), the Forum (4-2), and the Red Bridge (4-120A). The cult also patrols and travels through the two routes from the Forum to the cliff face (4-190): these routes include areas 4-122, 4-170, 4-172, 4-178, and 4-189 on the one hand, and 4-19, 4-163, 4-167, 4-179, 4-178 and 4-189 on the other. Recently Stephania has approved an expansion into the southern portions of Level 3, with a small outpost near to the Great Cavern (3-172): this outpost includes areas 3-194, 3-195, 3-211, and 3-212. Set patrols occasionally enter the precincts of Thoth through the pyramid (3-1), and have made tentative diplomatic forays to the Arena (6-68) and to court of the troll thegn (7-76). It must also be noted that Set regularly (but quietly) patrols the ruined city of Arden Vul, and has quietly fortified one of the old wall towers (AV-44).

Motives, Goals, and 'Quests': The ultimate motives of Stephania and her team are rather lofty: nothing more than the reinstatement of Set as one of the major deities of the Archontean Empire. She hopes to obtain this goal by quietly building power here, on the frontier of the empire; once her numbers have risen and she has amassed significant wealth, she plans to expand the tiny cells that exist in the major Archontean cities of Narsileon, Arcturus, and Archontos itself. This is an uphill battle, as popular opinion has currently swung against Set over the past millennium, and the imperial administrators consider Set cultists to be dangerous and unpatriotic radicals. Conflict between the cult and the Empire is likely.

Within Arden Vul, Stephania's goals are more mundane: she wishes to expand the extent of Set's active control to encompass all of Level 4 and, eventually, all of Level 3. She realizes these are ambitious goals, and is content to move incrementally, nibbling away at territory and growing her base. Stephania and her team are more than happy to hire adventurers to help them accomplish these tasks, for they prefer to let outsiders risk their lives in return for cash. Initial inquiries in the Forum result in a deacon interviewing potential mercenaries; if they pass muster, the cult is likely to task the adventurers with one of several initial tasks: 1) clearing the caves north of the Forum of monsters (areas 4-66 to 4-100); and/or 2) specifically locating and returning the escaped slaves to the Guild of Service (see 4-100). If adventurers succeed at these tasks, one of the senior leaders of the cult might meet with them and invite them to undertake more substantial tasks: 1) neutralizing the monster that has occupied their administrative offices (4-58); 2) reopening the Third Mystery of Set (4-111) by slaying whatever beast is inhabiting it; 3) reopening the necropolis of Set (areas 4-138 and 4-139); or 4) locating the tomb of Theskelon (4-142) and returning its treasures to Stephania. Clearly some of these tasks might be considered evil, so alignment issues need to be carefully considered. For good aligned parties, a major quest involving Set would be the utter elimination of the cult! The imperial Drome (e.g., Lord Keko the Lame in Narsileon) is aware of the growing might of the cult of Set, and even of its general location, and these imperial authorities might be willing to employ such parties to scout, undermine, and even eliminate the Set cult.

Possibilities for Expansion and/or Contraction: should adventurers clear out the caves north of the Forum (6-68 to 6-100), whether as agents of Set or not, the Set cult will swiftly move to occupy them, and those caves will soon echo with the sound of stone masons' hammers, as the cult moves to render those areas 'civilized'. Similarly, should adventurers eliminate the monstrous threats in the chambers of the Third Mystery (4-111) or in the Necropolis of Set (4-138 and 4-139), the cult will quickly move to expand its perimeter to include those areas. Eventually, Stephania hopes to cleanse and restore all of the areas between the Red Bridge (4-120A) and the cliff entrance (4-190). The cult's relatively fixed choke-points (areas 4-120A, 3-89, and 4-66) lend the cult confidence. Should those areas be breached, the cult will react with strong, disciplined attacks designed to recover those areas. Ultimately the cult does not feel that it has much room for contraction; it fights fanatically to defend its core.

Relations with Other Factions

Beastmen: The cult considers the beastmen as some of their chief rivals, even as they believe themselves to be individually and collectively stronger than the children of Deino. Stephania is not exactly certain of the location of the territory of the beastmen, but she is aware that it is close to areas that the cult would like to dominate someday. For the time being, the cult takes no official action against the beastmen, although standing orders allow Set patrols to attack beastman patrols in deserted areas of the Halls.

Fishmen: The Set cult is unaware of the fishmen.

Goblins: Since their territories do not intersect, the Set Cult does not consider the goblins to be threats, or even rivals. They welcome the goblins to the Forum, and are happy to offer trade, information, and services.

Halfings of Phlebotomas Plumthorn: The cult takes almost no notice of the halfings, dismissing them (perhaps rightfully) as minor thugs without much staying power within Arden Vul.

Heqeti: Stephania and her advisors know some history of the Halls, and thus are aware of the existence of the heqeti as an inimical race. Since the cultists have never seen a live heqeti, and since the cult's sphere of influence is in the upper levels, they are unaware of the rising menace of the heqeti. Whispers of the return of the heqeti are starting to be heard in the Forum, a fact that puzzles and alarms Stephania.

Kaliyani: The high priestess was shocked when kaliyani miners broke down the wall into her own chamber some twenty years ago. After a short tense standoff, she came to an understanding with the strange, snake-like kaliyani. Given the fact one of Set's favorite creatures is the snake, it was perhaps natural for her to decide that the kaliyani should be her allies (a fact of which the kaliyani did not attempt to dissuade her). As yet the alliance has not really produced any meaningful results, but Stephania is content to have secret, potentially powerful allies. She has informed only a few of her closest advisors of this alliance.

Kerbog-Khan: Deeming the Khan to be nothing more than an eccentric wizard whose obsessions are unlikely to impact their own ambitions, the Set cult is content to tolerate the Khan and his bizarre automatons. Indeed, they are happy to trade goods and information with him through those automatons. Stephania idly wonders where the Khan is based, but as yet has not found this question to be pressing enough to pursue actively.

Priscians: The cult has had only occasional encounters with the Priscians, mainly in neutral sites like the Forum (4-2), the Arena (6-68), and the Troll Market (7-76). These encounters have given Stephania and the other leaders pause, for the secretiveness and obvious magical power of the Priscians makes them an unknown, and potentially dangerous entity. Stephania would desperately like to learn where the Priscians are based, and to that end is contemplating a secret operation to assault and capture a Priscian party so as to subject its members to interrogation.

Skreel Lizardmen: The cult has little time for the lizardmen, considering them uncivilized and of little threat to their plans for expansion. One point of potential conflict is the fact that the lizardmen use the same route to access the exterior (4-190), via the long tunnel (4-165) from the lizardman caves to Level 4. At the moment, however, the cult encourages official neutrality with the lizardmen even as its leaders ponder how they can milk the reptiles of their wealth and information.

Sun-Scarred Knights: The Set Cult has been careful not to offend the Knights, and to abide by the inscrutable rules and customs that the Knights follow. Privately the Set leaders discuss how they might discern the location of the Knights' citadel so as to gain actionable intelligence against them. Publicly they always greet visiting Knights warmly.

Varumani: Recognizing the varumani as a more powerful, and more established version of themselves, the Set leaders have been careful to treat the varumani with respect. They are aware that the varumani are the most powerful faction in the halls, and don't wish to incur the thegn's wrath. It helps that their spheres of influence are quite distinct.

Skreel Lizardmen

A successful tribe of lizardmen, known as the Skreel, inhabit the warm, humid caves of Sub-Level 5. Although these are typical lizardmen in terms of intelligence, tactics, and goals, their leaders are attempting to provide more direction to the tribe.

Ruler and Other Leaders: The Skreel are led by their chief, Sgraal, a fearsome lizard king warrior (SL5-36). Sgraal is advised by a renegade (and insane) human magic user, Yurtil Skreel-Friend (SL5-35), and by a trio of shamans (SL5-30). The senior shaman is Kusok One-Eye (SL5-31).

Size of Faction and Replacements: The Skreel are a large group, with approximately 125 individuals (of which 40 are females), divided into at least seven clans. Currently the Skreel have thirty hatchlings. They will have trouble replacing losses; they can expect only 1-2 hatchlings to mature per month.

Resources: The Skreel have few resources to offer. Perhaps their most valuable resource is the green friend (see new flora), the curative powers of which might be useful to adventurers and other factions. It hasn't occurred to the Skreel yet that they could actively market or sell this resource. Unbeknownst to the Skreel, they are also sitting atop one of the most potent magical relics hidden within Arden Vul; this is the famed spear of Arden (see new magic items), which is currently found in the lair of the lich, Kentillian (SL5-13B). As they lack the knowledge of metalworking, they are interested in acquiring metal tools, including weapons. Sgraal has a hoard of more conventional treasure (SL5-41), but he is unlikely to consider using it in trade.

Attitudes Towards Adventurers: The Skreel are suspicious of adventurers, since their experience suggests that adventurers are nothing but trouble. Adventurers who arrive unannounced or uninvited in their domain will be met with an ambush (SL5-1), although the ambush can be avoided if adventurers announce their intention to parlay with the lizardmen. Although the evil tendencies of Chief Sgraal cause him to attempt to kill, trap, or imprison visitors, the average Skreel is not as concerned with such policies as is the Chief. In the right circumstances, therefore, adventurers might be able to negotiate peaceful passage through the Skreel domain. Even if a truce is obtained, though, adventurers should remain cautious, as Sgraal will attempt to rally his warriors to reverse their decisions and attack the adventurers.

Areas of Control and/or Ignorance: The Skreel completely control Sub-Level 5. They hunt regularly for fish and fishmen (see new monsters) in the Drowned Canyon (SL6-24) and are familiar with some of the open areas of that region. Similarly, they periodically venture to the exterior of the dungeon via the long tunnel from SL5-1 to 4-165; once on Level 4, they make their way through the southern halls to 4-190, and then down the cliff face. The Skreel are bitter enemies of the Lagrok lizardmen of Sub-Level 9, and by extension fear and hate the kaliyani. They very occasionally visit the Forum of Set (4-2) and the Troll Market (7-76). They otherwise are ignorant of most regions of the Halls.

Motives, Goals, and 'Quests': The Skreel mostly desire stability and the preservation of their territory. They would like to inflict serious damage on the fishmen of Sub-Level 7 and the Lagrok lizardmen of Sub-Level 9, but it has never seriously occurred to them that either group could be fully eliminated. Chief Sgraal and the shamans are fascinated with the heqeti, even though they have only ever met one (Flisserak, the amnesiac - see SL5-7). Still the shamans' discovery of the hall of heqeti heroes (SL5-32) has fueled their desire to locate and ally with these 'fellow Skreel'.

Possibilities for Expansion and/or Contraction: Possibilities for expansion are thin. Should the fishmen of Sub-Level 7 be eliminated, the Skreel would probably attempt to occupy the main cavern of the Drowned Canyon (SL6), and might even move into Sub-Level 7 itself. The same is true for Sub-Level 9; should the kaliyani and Lagrok lizardmen be eliminated, the Skreel would probably occupy the Lagrok domains. In the case of a concerted attack on their domain, the Skreel will pull back from the dry caves to the wet caves (SL5-8, SL5-13, SL51-15, SL5-16, SL5-18, SL5-19, SL5-21, SL5-28, and SL5-34), hoping that their advantage in the water will help them. If they are eliminated, the fishmen (SL7) will occupy their old caves.

Relations with Other Factions

Beastmen: Although they respect the beastmen's military skills, the lizardmen don't pay much attention to them - and are ignorant of their base except to note that it is somewhere near 'the big cave'. They have only rare contact with the beastmen; they may meet them in the ruined city or in one of the neutral trading sites.

Fishmen: The Skreel hate the fishmen with a passion, since the two factions compete for fish and other resources in the drowned canyon (SL6). Conflict between the Skreel and the fishmen has only been increasing. Unfortunately, Sgraal doesn't know exactly where the fishmen base is located, nor how powerful they are; all he knows is that they emerge into the canyon from SL6-39.

Goblins: The Skreel have an uneasy truce with King Weskenim's people. The lizardmen think of the goblins as weak, but numerous, and are thus hesitant to move against them. The tribe also cannot fathom the goblins' fascination with clothing and the trappings of 'civilization'. If it were known that the goblins were holding Perrilk, a son of Chief Sgraal, as a prisoner (SL4-34), however, this truce would swiftly end.

Halflings of Phlebotomas Plumthorn: The lizardmen are unaware of the halflings and wouldn't care about them even if informed of their existence.

Heqeti: The Skreel are convinced that the heqeti are another tribe of advanced cousins, who would naturally solve the many problems facing the Skreel if only the Skreel could locate them. This perception is largely fantasy, based on their experience with Flisserak (SL5-7) and the visions of Kauket received by Kusok One-Eye (SL5-31).

Kaliyani: Although the Skreel have met no kaliyani, they are aware that some 'big lizard-cousins' are propping up their arch-nemeses, the Lagrok lizardman tribe. Chief Sgraal is disappointed by this clear lack of judgment and has declared the 'big lizard-cousins' to be anathema.

Kerbog Khan: The lizardmen greet the 'magical talking dragonflies' with awe and fear. They typically comply with Kerbog Khan's requests, as much as they are able to do so. It has not occurred to them that there is a single human magic user behind the various automatons.

Priscians: The lizardmen are ignorant of this faction.

Set Cult: The Skreel fear and hate the Set cultists. The tribe knows that the Set cult is on the rise and that the humans are generally more powerful than the Skreel. The fact that the Guild of Service has begun enslaving lizardmen has exacerbated this feeling. Chief Sgraal is concerned that his warriors must venture past increasing Set patrols in order to reach the cliff face on Level 4. An alliance with any party opposed to Set is likely.

Sun-Scarred Knights: The lizardmen find the Knights completely incomprehensible. And yet they also envy the attention that the Knights seem to pay to other factions. Indeed, a Knight has not come to dwell with the Skreel for over a generation, and the tribe feels the slight acutely. That said, they don't really want to have to support a Knight, with his/her strange eating habits, different morality, and so forth.

Varumani: The Skreel view the varumani with awe and reverence. In some sort of inchoate fashion, Chief Sgraal thinks of the Varumani as advanced lizardmen. He constantly attempts to curry favor with the Varboka (7-30) by offering small gifts - bits of fish, small stone objects, heads of Set cultists, etc. - which the Varumani find both amusing and disturbing. The varumani have told Sgraal to back off, and the Lizardmen are hard at work trying to decide how to regain the favor of the 'big lizard brothers.'

Sun-Scarred Knights

A sept of paramilitary vigilantes-cum-diplomats has existed in the Halls since the last days of the rudishva hegemony. Indeed, it was two rudishva - Melok-Ri (SL10A-32) and Isok-Crix (now Isocorax, see 6-20) - who founded the first such group; they vowed to abandon the complacency that gripped the rudishva and, through vigilance, justice and fidelity, restore the 'proper' rudishva mindset. They called their order the "Harmonious Brotherhood" and quickly added five more new recruits. The brothers established a hidden base underground, where they stored a cache of necessary items. From this base, they planned to strike out to the surface above Arden Vul and dominate the locals; once established as rulers, they would return and force the rest of the rudishva Hegemony to comply with their directives.

Amid their explorations, however, they disturbed the lair of a powerful ancient vampire; all were bitten and transformed into rudishva vampires. Although their alien DNA prevented them from becoming undead or adopting the characteristic 'evil' nature of the vampire, they acquired most of the powers and vulnerabilities of vampires: they could assume gaseous form, they could charm those with whom they conversed, they could regenerate (although not quite as well), and their already long lifespans were lengthened, but they became sensitivity to sunlight. Most importantly, however, they retained their identities and willpower. The experience broke the Brotherhood since none were now able to venture outdoors, and divergent views on what to do about their new status emerged. When the other five Brothers announced their plan to turn all the other rudishva into vampires, Melok-Ri and Isok-Crix were shocked. The pair turned on the five 'traitors' and slew them. At this point (197 AEP), the great heqeti surprise attack on the rudishva occurred, the success of which ended the rudishva hegemony.

The two former comrades eventually separated in acrimony, with Melok-Ri remaining in their sanctum (SL10) and Isok-Crix departing in a noble (but failed) effort to establish a new, multi-ethnic society (see 6-7 and 6-20). After scavenging a substantial hoard of rudishva technology for his own purposes, Melok-Ri remained incommunicado for many centuries. When he reappeared in 901 AEP, it was with a new philosophy, one that was far less aggressive and arrogant than what he had originally embraced (he became a devotee of the rudishva philosopher, Redip-Beg, whose Prosperity in the Eternal Now advocated a zen-like focus on neutrality and the eternal now). He began recruiting young humans who shared his perspectives into a second version of the brotherhood. Initially he thought he could transform them into vampires whose ethos would be similar to his own. Alas, he found that humans became 'traditional' vampires; that is, evil, undead creatures.

In the year 1123 AEP, Melok-Ri slew all but one of his offspring (the one survivor is Cinna Minux - 7-122) and began anew. This time he refused to turn his new recruits, but instead marked their faces with sunlight and his blood in a ritual that gave its name to the new order: the Sun-Scarred Knights (see SL10A-28). The Order was a success and has existed for more than 1,800 years. Recruiting from the human and demi-human inhabitants of the Halls, Melok-Ri's new institution was grounded in principles of egalitarianism and humility, one that nevertheless allowed individual members substantial intellectual and artistic individuality. The Knights thus lead long and full lives as the deadly, but neutrally-aligned, guardians of the status quo within Arden Vul. As a result, the mystique of the knights' ethos, coupled with the power of their magical and technological equipment, has caused the Order to be viewed as the most powerful of factions. Even if not exactly true, since the varumani both individually and collectively are a match for the knights, the perception of the Order as based on the knights' quiet, deadly, mysterious neutrality has made them into the arbiter of politics within the Halls. In short, when a Knight offers counsel, the other factions listen. Indeed, the arrival of a Knight on an embassy to another faction is cause for equal parts anxiety and pride; anxiety, since all realize that the Knight will have some agenda to pursue, and pride, since it is a form of status (and protection) to have a Knight dwelling with any faction.

Ruler and Other Leaders: According to its stated philosophy, the knights of the Order are peers, none of whom is superior to the others. And yet despite this collective ethos, it is clear that Master Malachite (aka Melok-Ri) is the first among equals. His opinions are typically accorded greater weight, and his approval or disapproval of a course of action is enough to be decisive. Master Malachite is not merely ancient, he is also a unique type of vampire.

Size of Faction and Replacements: The Order is composed of fourteen named knights and their leader, Master Malachite. In addition, fourteen junior members, known as varlets, exist, each being assigned to the service of a specific knight. The usual trajectory for recruitment is for the order to identify promising young persons (of any race, although humans predominate) and subject them to a set of trials. If the postulant passes the trials, he or she is made a varlet and is assigned to the service of a knight. When one of the knights dies, the most experienced varlet usually succeeds him/her by undergoing the ritual of scarification. If a knight becomes too aged or infirm to perform his/her duties, he either commits ritual suicide in the loving presence of his brothers and sisters, or 'goes to the Master' (a ritual that is rarely practiced any more, but which entailed the Master slaying and consuming the former knight). In addition to the knights and varlets, the citadel also houses a pair of wizards, two smiths, and several servants.

Replacing a knight is difficult, despite the presence of the varlets. Since a knight must be at least 7th level (and preferably higher), it is sometimes the case that no varlets are experienced enough to step into the shoes of a dead knight; it has also been the case that Master Malachite has rejected some varlets as unworthy. All of this means that the time necessary to replace a dead knight is highly variable, ranging from several days to several years. Although knights are allowed to take on more than one varlet at a time, none of the current knights save Sir Sixth is interested in taking that responsibility. The process of replacing a varlet is also quite selective, and many postulants are rejected for physical or psychological reasons.

Resources: The Order is fabulously wealthy, mostly due to its longevity. Indeed, the knights have accumulated a vast quantity of treasure in coin, magic, and ancient technology, all of which is stored in its citadel and the surrounding halls. Despite the collective wealth of the Order, the individual knights actually possess few material possessions, since the Order's ethos requires that the wealth of the Order be shared collectively, and not hoarded privately. The Knights do engage in trade, typically at the Forum of Set (4-2) or the Troll Market (7-76), especially for items they have not already acquired or cannot readily produce themselves: foodstuffs, wood, finished goods, and luxuries. In their travels through the Halls, the Knights frequently collect lost treasures to add to their Order's vaults or to further their own individual interests: it might be possible for a party aware of the interests of a given knight to trade luxury items, magic items, or objects specific to those interests in return for other material objects. The Knights are unlikely to be swayed by such 'gifts' or bribes, however.

Attitudes Towards Adventurers: Individual Knights are typically neutral towards adventurers, although each knight is to some extent a free agent, capable of making his/her own judgments. Adventurers who don't personally threaten a knight or put his/her diplomatic agenda at jeopardy are likely to be treated politely but firmly by knights encountered in the Halls. Such Knights might offer clear warnings concerning what they find to be permissible behavior on the part of adventurers (especially when it comes to a knight's diplomatic mission). Should adventurers target a Knight for harm (or even kill one), the other Knights will band together to hunt down and slay the adventurers with extreme prejudice. The prospect of 7-10 Sun-Scarred Knights on a retributive mission of vengeance is a frightening one indeed!

Areas of Control and/or Ignorance: The domain of the knights comprises a huge cavern with surrounding caves and worked halls (SL10A). Rising from the center of the cavern is their massive stone citadel, where the knights' dwellings may be found (SL10B). Additional worked halls, and the dwelling of Master Malachite, lie just north of the citadel. Although uninterested in expansion, the knights have the best knowledge of the Halls of any of the other factions. Indeed, the knights are even semi-familiar with the Midnight Road, and occasionally visit it for their own inscrutable purposes. Were they interested in doing so (a fact that is highly unlikely!), one or more of the knights would be able to provide clear directions to almost every location within the Halls.

Motives, Goals, and 'Quests': The Order has a quixotic reputation among the denizens of Arden Vul: it is known to all, even as almost nothing is known of it. Indeed, individual knights are legendary for the flat refusal to talk about the Order. Some facts are clear to all observers: 1) the Order is not interested in overt control of other groups, even though it could easily dominate some of the lesser factions; 2) the Order is, however, interested in pursuing its sometimes-opaque form of indirect control, by explaining consequences, suggesting courses of action, and persuading listeners of where their interests lie. If all recognize the second truth, few factions are capable of seeing the entirety of inter-factional politics as clearly as do the Knights (or, as does Master Malachite) and almost none are able to comprehend the knights' motives. Since most of the factions are motivated by self-interest, they assume the same to be true of all others; the knights' apparent indifference to self-interest (they do not take bribes, they seem unconcerned by wealth, they are immune to blackmail, and are apparently unmoved by offers of alliance) renders them a frustrating paradox. And yet the knights cannot be ignored, for the simple reason that they are individually (and collectively) too powerful. As a result, the knights move through the domains of the intelligent factions like rock stars, always the object of admiration, desire, envy, and fear.

Although the collective needs of the Order are always paramount, the Knights are highly individualized in their particular goals and agendas, with individual knights pursuing their own projects, some of which may last decades. Indeed, although all knights must be lawful and swear powerful oaths to support the interests of the Order and Master above all else, there is wide divergence in alignment, personality, and degree of interest in the other denizens of the Halls on the part of each Knight. So long as a knight's individual goals do not conflict with those of the master or the Order as a whole, he/she is free to pursue them.

Individual Knights often act as advisers to the intelligent factions of Arden Vul (the goblins, the beastmen, the cult of Set, the troll thegn, etc.) for indeterminate periods of time, all the while furthering their own goals and the goals of the Order. Such advice is usually coveted by the factions of the Halls, since these factions imagine they can gain advantage through a Knight's wisdom and might. All such denizens recognize, however, that to count on such advice is dangerous, since the Knights can and will abandon their charges according to their own, often untimely, schedules. The arrival of a Sun-Scarred Knight in any of the precincts of the Halls is thus cause for anxiety, hope, and alarm.

Ultimately the master's strategic plan is to keep the status-quo amongst the factions. Over long centuries the Order has worked hard to ensure that none of the factions in Arden Vul dominate the others. This means weaving a delicate web of relationships and plucking, bending, or even breaking individual strands when necessary. Given its interest in the existential 'now' rather than some effort to return to the past, the Order evinces little interest in recovering and/or rehabilitating former rudishva areas of the halls. In a real sense, the Order sees itself as guardians and/or conductors of the vast ecosystem that is Arden Vul. For all that this attitude might in part be seen as laudable, even noble (an attitude certainly taken by the knights), it is also true that the Order feels zero obligation towards specific individuals. The knights do not respond well to requests or demands, and do not negotiate for favors. This means that they prefer to dictate or subtly suggest from a position of strength or fear, rather than engage in meaningful negotiation or compromise. Indeed, those who discover their sanctum are likely to be marked as threats and considered for elimination, as the knights prefer their home to remain a secret.

Several immediate quest-like concerns occupy the knights, any one of which might provide a clever group of PCs with a lever for gaining information or support from the Order: 1) Sir Sixth and Sir Mendacity are both missing (Sixth is insane in 6-39; Mendacity is a prisoner of the heqeti at 7-81). Locating and returning either missing Knight would earn much goodwill from the Order; 2) the Knights are concerned about impending conflict between the varumani and goblins, since Sir Prudence (see 7-75 and 7-76A) has learned of Varboka's desire to enslave the goblins, and Sir Sorrow has been dispatched to shore up King Weskenim's position (SL4-19). Those who aid the Knights in keeping the status quo might find the Order amenable to other requests; 3) the Order has become alarmed by the emergence of the powerful Priscians as a new faction, and Sir Ennius has suggested taking action to eliminate the Priscians (see SL10A-31). PCs who learned of the Order's concerns might be able to use that information to earn the respect and possible assistance of the Knights.

Possibilities for Expansion and/or Contraction: The Order has no interest in expanding outside of its traditional location, nor does it have an interest in expanding its membership. The status quo is paramount for the Knights.

Relations with Other Factions

Unlike other factions, the Knights have a single operative philosophy that governs their relations with the other factions: they attempt to maintain the balance of power through equal parts application of the carrot and the stick. This means that the Knights do not take 'sides' in any meaningful, essential way; rather, they shift their support as conditions warrant, sometimes supporting one faction, and at other times a different faction. A few exceptions to this rule apply.

Beastmen: At the moment the Knights have no concerns about the beastmen. Indeed, they have not established an embassy with the beastmen in over a generation.

Fishmen: The domain of Reiv-Tor and the fishmen is one of the few areas of the Halls that the Knights do not know well, since the fishmen are notoriously xenophobic. Since they seem self-contained, however, the Knights have not been willing to expend the force necessary to impose a visit on the fishmen.

Goblins: Currently the Knights are attempting to prop up what they see as the weakest of the factions. The Knights have learned that Varboka, the troll thegn (7-32), is considering a move to enslave the goblins; their current policy is thus designed to offer public support for King Weskenim (SL4-22). As a result, Sir Sorrow (SL4-19) has been sent on an embassy to the goblin kingdom.

Halfings of Phlebotomas Plumthorn: The Knights consider the halfings to be little more than thugs, and unlikely to have any staying power in the Halls. As a result, they ignore Phlebotomas.

Heqeti: The Knights do not consider the heqeti to be civilized or part of the existing balance of power. They hunt and slay heqeti on sight.

Kaliyani: Although they have not yet seen or spoken to a kaliyani, the Knights have learned of the presence of the kaliyani within the Halls. Sir Calculor (who may be encountered on the Midnight Road) is likely to be the first to encounter the kaliyani (for whom, see 5-125). The Knights are at present curious about the kaliyani, and once contact is made are likely to petition Master Malachite for information and/or advice about how to proceed with this new group.

Kerbog Khan: The Knights respect Kerbog Khan's neutrality. They also value the information about the Halls that he has collected via his automatons; indeed, they sometimes visit the Khan merely to exchange information about new visitors, new threats, and interesting locations that they and the automatons have discovered. For this reason, the Knights are willing to protect the Khan's automatons.

Priscians: Initially alarmed at the appearance of this band of powerful magicians within the Halls, the Knights have been mollified by the Priscians' apparent discretion and lack of interest in playing power politics. So long as the Priscians keep a low profile and do not attempt expansion, the Knights will be content to simply register their existence and move on to their already-established strategies.

Set Cult: Master Malachite and the senior Knights are generally concerned about the swift rise in power of the Set cultists. Still, they view the establishment of the Forum (4-2) as a generally good thing, in part because it dilutes the importance of the Troll Market (7-76). Although they have no formal ambassador to the Set cult, Knights visit frequently, and all are tasked with keeping a close watch on the cultists.

Skreel Lizardmen: The Knights do not consider the lizardmen to be organized enough, or powerful enough, to pose a threat to the status quo. As a result, they have not visited the Skreel in more than 40 years.

Varumani: Although on good terms with Varboka (7-32), the Knights are concerned that his own insecurity may lead him to a rash move that might unsettle the Halls for years to come. For this reason, one of the Knights most adept at subtle diplomacy - Sir Prudence (7-76A) - has been sent on a long-term embassy to the troll thegn's court. His job is to counsel caution and patience on Varboka, and to seek to mute the thegn's militaristic tendencies.

Varumani

The varumani came to Arden Vul (and Magae, the world of Arden Vul) millennia ago as crewmembers on the starship Beacon. When the rudishva hegemony in Arden Vul collapsed, a small group of varumani survivors, led by the great thegn, Vanara 'the Mighty Fist', escaped the destruction; these survivors formed the nucleus of the modern varumani. Millennia later, the varumani still remember Vanara and the other original thegns, but their origins as starfarers are largely forgotten. By virtue of their racial strength and natural abilities, the varumani are clearly the most powerful faction within Arden Vul, easily dominating the weaker factions such as the goblins and beastmen. And yet, despite their clear physical superiority, the varumani remain fairly cloistered, preferring to endlessly practice their physical skills within the well-demarcated boundaries of domain of the thegn (Level 7).

Given their regenerative abilities and combat prowess, the varumani were labeled 'trolls' by early Archontean explorers of Arden Vul, and that nickname has stuck (even though the varumani despise it, and consider 'true trolls' to be despicable, uncivilized monsters). To the Archontean, then, the thegn Varboka is 'the troll thegn'.

Access to the domain of the thegn is limited to varumani and to those who have been granted a special 'troll thegn's passport' (see Arden Vul items). The Domain is well-protected by natural choke-points, which the varumani guard assiduously. Outside the Domain, the varumani operate a silver mine (area 7-51 and areas 9-21 to 9-28), and a network of transportation devices known colloquially as 'the Troll Lifts'. These pulley-and-bucket systems allow travelers to ascend or descend the Great Chasm between Levels 5, 6, 7, and 8, provided that the proper fees are paid and that the travelers have not angered the thegn.

Ruler and Other Leaders: The varumani have traditionally been led by one or more thegns. Currently, Varboka rules as First Thegn (7-30). He is colloquially known as the 'troll thegn' by other intelligent denizens of the Halls. Ashoka, the court sorcerer (7-22), is exceptionally smart and ambitious; he serves as Varboka's main advisor. By ancient tradition, the varumani are divided into four clans, each of which has its own leader: Hraskaya leads the Rudigaya clan (7-17), Vedreya One-Eye directs the Vanaraya clan (7-18), Gavra the Easy-Going leads the Pendaya clan (7-25), and Igrippa the Unruly directs the Druvaya clan (7-26).

Size of Faction and Replacements: About 100 true varumani remain in the domain of the thegn. They are joined by approximately 170 lesser varumani and an indeterminate, but growing, number of bestial varumani. Varboka and the clan leaders are all aware that their people are declining in number and vitality, and are desperate to do something to halt the decline. At the moment, however, there is little for them to do. This means that replacing losses of true varumani is unlikely; perhaps only one new true varumani every two months. The lesser varumani might repopulate two of their members per month.

Resources: The varumani are wealthy, having access to mushrooms and meat (7-45 and Level 9), as well as silver ore (see their silver mine in areas 7-51 and 9-21 to 9-28). Their famous 'troll market' (7-76) is one of two major trading centers within the Halls; vendors there pay a 10% tariff on all sales to the varumani. The varumani are not a magically adept race, with only a small percentage of their population showing the ability to cast spells; they produce almost no magical items. As the distant descendants of starfarers, however, they still possess some technological items (e.g., the point-defense arrays in 7-76), which they use with confidence and skill. The varumani will trade for exotic foodstuffs, alcohol, and antiquities connected to 'the Old Days' (by which they mean the rudishva period); they are especially eager to acquire rudishva power supplies and other technology. The varumani don't create a lot of exports, although visitors to the troll market will find non-varumani traders willing to sell all manner of treasures, magical or mundane.

Attitudes Towards Adventurers: Adventurers encountered away from the domain of the thegn are likely to be greeted initially with contempt, as yet another group of 'weaklings' to be dominated by whichever varumani are present. Successfully resisting such bullying may well win the admiration of any surviving varumani, who may even be willing to offer such persons one of the coveted troll thegn's passports (see Arden Vul items). Of course, once word spreads that a potent group of humans or demi-humans has been spotted in the Halls, varumani attitudes will adjust: the more experienced varumani (like the confraternity of hunters) will treat adventurers with caution and respect; other varumani, especially youngsters, will seek out the 'strong strangers' in an effort to best them in combat. Adventurers who encounter the varumani for the first time at the borders of the Domain (e.g. area 7-1) or at one of the stations of the Troll Lift network find the varumani to be polite and neutral. Absolutely no adventurers will be admitted to the Domain, however, unless a passport is displayed. In general, then, the varumani treat adventurers either as potential sport or as beneath their notice until the adventurers make themselves valuable to the thegn.

Areas of Control and/or Ignorance: The heart of the varumani faction is located on Level 7, in a series of ancient chambers known as the domain of the thegn (areas 7-1, 7-8 to 7-33, 7-38, and 7-65 to 7-77). These chambers are home to the clan halls, the court of the thegn, the Troll Market, the Great Pit, and so forth. Access to the Domain is strictly controlled, as all non-varumani must present a troll thegn's passport (see Arden Vul items) to enter it. The varumani also dominate two neighboring areas, the proving grounds (7-45) and the nearby silver mine (7-51 and 9-21 to 9-28). Finally, they operate a transport service within the Great Chasm known colloquially as the Troll Lifts; stations in this network may be found at 5-55, 6-1, 6-2, 6-3, 6-5, 7-1, and 8-1.

Motives, Goals, and 'Quests': The varumani are aware of their own position as the apex faction within Arden Vul, and their most basic strategic goals are designed to maintain that position. As noted above, they pay careful attention to the other factions' strength and expansion, and continually debate amongst themselves whether or not strikes against those factions are necessary. It might be possible for diplomatically-adept adventurers to strike an alliance with the thegn so as to act as the thegn's unofficial strike force in policing the other factions.

While most varumani remain unaware of the details of their history, the thegn and court sorcerer are aware of the location of the tomb of Vanara (5-139) and thus of the route taken by the survivors of the heqeti attack that destroyed the rudishva hegemony. Varboka and Ashoka are fully aware that Vanara led the people from their 'ancestral halls' (i.e., the Midnight Road section of Level 5) to their current home, and hope that exploration of the tunnels near Varboka's tomb might lead to information about the location of those ancestral halls. Little do they know that those halls lie hidden only several paces away from Vanara's resting place! Although not exactly certain what they are looking for, the varumani leaders would pay a lot in terms of cash and favors for solid information concerning those ancestral halls.

Other possible quests include the following.

- a. Members of the varumani hunter's lodge wishes to know the fate of their comrade Bedara; she was taken by heqeti on Level 9 and now languishes in a heqeti cell at area 10-8. Rescuing her wins the eternal friendship of the hunters, and powerful influence at the thegn's court.
- b. The case of Gog (see 5-2), exiled from Court for a serious crime, continues to upset many varumani who knew him as upright and honorable. Even Varboka suspects that Gog was framed; the thegn quietly offers a substantial sum of money to anyone who can produce evidence of Gog's innocence. In fact, Gog was framed, by his rival Muq. Muq is currently in hiding at area 8-151, where evidence of his betrayal may also be found. Solving this mystery wins the goodwill of Gog, the thegn, and many varumani courtiers.
- c. Hraskaya, chief of the Rudigaya clan (7-17), is envious of Varboka, and is attempting to undermine the thegn's authority by offering contradictory counsel at every turn. Exposing Hraskaya wins the friendship of the thegn.
- d. Ashoka the court sorcerer has heard rumors of the existence of a lost Sortian complex within Arden Vul. He would like to discover it before the Priscians do. This complex is, of course, the tomb of Isadora (Sub-Level 11).
- e. The Archontean authorities (and especially the logothete of the Drome in Narsileon) would like hard evidence of the fate of the lost expedition of Adrienic. Some of that evidence could be acquired in area 7-76, as it was there that Adrienic's legionaries were slaughtered by the varumani. The head and helmet of Tullarios, strategos of the II Legion (Sheepshead Rangers) is one such piece of evidence; it may be found in a mummified state at area 7-12.

Possibilities for Expansion and/or Contraction: Despite their strength, the varumani have shown little interest in acquiring new territories within the Halls. Partly this is due to their declining numbers, but it is also partly a product of their temperament. While individually fearsome warriors, collectively they are better followers than leaders (a trait bred into them by the rudishva). This means that they are unlikely to expand except under unusual circumstances. In fact, the only circumstance that might provoke expansion would be their acquisition of knowledge of the location of their 'ancestral halls' on Level 5. Should adventurers discover a route to the Midnight Road, especially to the Troll Pits (5-131), and should such adventurers trade that information to Varboka, the varumani will certainly mount an immediate expedition to claim the entire region (areas 5-86 to 5-141).

Relations with Other Factions

Beastmen: The thegn sees the beastmen as more civilized and interesting than the goblins. For this reason, Varboka recently approved a diplomatic mission to the court of Deino (see 3-162). While the Beastmen hope this is a sign of more active support to come, they have been disappointed to find the ambassadors to be lazy and uninterested in Tagma Command's needs. In fact, Varboka intends the ambassadors to act more as spies than as real ambassadors, hoping to gain a sense of Deino's capabilities.

Fishmen: The varumani are distantly aware of the existence of the fishmen but have no regular contact with them and are unaware of the identity or nature of Reiv-Tor.

Goblins: The varumani see the goblins as annoying little brothers, to be tolerated until they overreach, at which point they are to be slapped back into place. Practically this means that the thegn ignores the machinations of King Weskenim, secure in the knowledge that a varumani strike force could easily wipe out the goblins at any time. To forfend this possibility, the goblins pay quarterly tribute to the thegn. They are wise to do so, for not only is Varboka unlikely to come to the aid of 'the little brothers' unless it were clear that another major faction was making a power play, he is contemplating a move to directly enslave the goblins (see 7-30). The recent varumani mission to the Beastmen is perhaps a sign of Varboka's shifting intentions, one that has the goblins worried.

Halflings of Phlebotomas Plumthorn: The thegn is only distantly aware of this tiny faction, mostly through reports passed through the goblins and beastmen. Since the halflings don't visit the lower halls, or use the Troll Lifts, the varumani pay no attention to them.

Heqeti: The heqeti are detested and despised by the varumani, who recall the central role of the heqeti in the destruction of the 'star borne hegemony' and the subsequent flight and exile of the varumani people. Partly to satisfy this ancient hatred, and partly because they view the heqeti as worthy adversaries against which to test themselves, the varumani regularly hunt the heqeti on Level 9. While most varumani consider this to be a form of fun and traditional sport, the hunters have quietly noticed that the heqeti are growing in strength and confidence. Varboka may be forced to make a move in the near future; such a move would be directed at the heqeti areas on Level 9 (9-77 to 9-82).

Kaliyani: The varumani loathe and detest the kaliyani as traitors. For close to two millennia, however, the kaliyani were absent from the Halls, and the varumani came to treat them as legendary 'monsters in the closet'. When a band of varumani hunters returned two months ago with tales of a battle against kaliyani, and could display the fangs of their ancient enemies as proof, Varboka and his advisors were shocked and alarmed. The thegn has publicly offered a bounty on kaliyani fangs (100 gp each) and has authorized his people to attack kaliyani (and their allies) on sight. He might well look with favor on those who share enmity with the kaliyani. Varboka privately hopes that the kaliyani 'home' is swiftly discovered so that he can lead his people in a 'good war' against the hated traitors; of course, victory in such a war would also greatly enhance Varboka's personal reputation.

Kerbog-Khan: The varumani show an almost childlike delight in the appearance of any of Kerbog Khan's automatons. Since the Khan has never exhibited aggressive or hostile tendencies, they have welcomed him (through his automatons) to their domain, and enjoy chatting with him through those devices. Kerbog Khan's creatures are thus a fairly constant presence in the Troll Market.

Priscians: The sudden appearance of powerful human magic users in the lower halls came as a shock to the varumani who first encountered them. Varboka and Ashoka are thus highly suspicious of the Priscians and their motives, although outwardly they have established a cordial detente with the newcomers. It is a closely guarded secret that Glif, the First Adept, captured a Priscian while on an expedition with Nolgi the hunter (see 7-24). Glif and Ashoka are hoping to gain useful intelligence from their prisoner, but have so far produced few results.

Set Cult: Varboka and his advisors are concerned about the rise of Set, particularly as their records remind them of the long period in which the varumani were subject to the Archontean empire. At the moment, Varboka is content to watch the Set Cult, hoping that the cultists will remain in the upper halls. Should the high priestess seem to be moving into the middle halls, however, the varumani would likely mobilize to strike them down. Clever adventurers might be able to play on this gnawing anxiety about Set. Indeed, given the right arguments and/or evidence, Varboka might supply resources (including teams of warriors) to aid a party seeking to undermine or even eliminate the cult.

Skreel Lizardmen: The varumani have little interest in the lizardmen, as they consider them barely sentient. The strange reverence with which the Skreel hold the varumani also makes the thegn uncomfortable. The varumani try to avoid the lizardmen whenever possible, although they have not banned the lizardmen from the Troll Market.

Sun-Scarred Knights: The varumani have long since given up trying to fathom the Knights' motives and goals. While they respect individual knights' combat prowess and generally high levels of knowledge and civilization, they don't worry very much about the knights as a group.

ADVENTURE HOOKS

In the tradition of old-school gaming, the Halls of Arden Vul do not offer a linear path towards a single 'boss fight'. Instead, this product presents a fully-statted mega-dungeon setting (complete with ruined city!) out of which bold adventurers can forge their own paths and create their own stories. Many GMs will simply want to point their players towards Arden Vul and see what happens ... that is, after all, one of the defining features of sandbox-style, old-school play.

Still, other groups may have trouble deciding how best to approach an adventuring site of this size and complexity. Such groups may be used to having a clear adventure seed to follow, or even a more defined set of encounters (a so-called adventure path). While it is ultimately the GM's responsibility to create such seeds and paths as appropriate to his/her own game, what follows are a few possible methods for imposing greater structure on Arden Vul. These suggestions (some of which emerged from the author's home campaign) present a hook, an explanation of the hook, some guidance on the locations within Arden Vul to which the hook might lead, and suggested levels of PCs who choose to take up the adventure hook.

Note: other, less-developed hooks are listed under each faction in the Factions of Arden Vul chapter. Rumors also offer plenty of other potential hooks.

The Abducted Canon

Lillian, canon of the temple of Mitra in Newmarket, has gone missing. The high priest wants her back and is offering a reward (5,000 gp) to those who can accomplish the deed.

Source of the Hook: The priests of Mitra in either Newmarket or Gosterwick will offer the reward. As Lillian was popular, her absence is also generally known in these communities.

Explanation: Lillian was investigating reports of beastman activity in the farmlands south of the cliff of Arden Vul when she went missing. She was abducted by the Green Fang kobolds living in the Thicket (see Burdock's Valley), albeit at the orders of a beastman patrol led by Trisko the Natty (3-154). The beastmen took her back to Arden Vul, where they sold her to the cult of Set. She is currently languishing in the dungeons of Set (3-104).

Relevant Areas of Arden Vul: Following the leads of this mystery should lead PCs to the Thicket, where they can either fight or negotiate, and thence to Arden Vul. The kobolds know that the beastmen have an entrance on the cliff face (see EX-11 or 3-189), but generally steer adventurers to the pyramid (AV-15). PCs can explore Level 3, perhaps negotiating with the goblins (see 3-7) for information about, and/or assistance against, the beastmen (3-123A to 3-162). Once the beastmen are located, PCs can either lead an assault against them, hoping to rid the region of Deino (3-158), or can again negotiate. The trail eventually leads to the forum of Set (4-2). The Set cult is unlikely to reveal the identity of their prisoners, so stealth and investigation will be in order, unless the PCs are powerful (or stupid enough) to take the cult on headfirst. It might also be possible for a determined group with good intel to make a quick strike into the heart of the Set cult through the ruined temple of Thoth (3-71); such a group could push from 3-71 to 3-89 and from there dip into the prisons of Set (3-105).

PC Levels: 2-5

The Missing Regalia

Lady Alexia Basileon (AK-2) is desperate to recover the four pieces of regalia that defined the office of archon during the glory days of Archontean control of Arden Vul. She knows that possession of the items will allow her to wrest lordship over the valley away from her half-brother, Iskander (currently Lord Burdock). Variant: Lord Burdock is aware of Alexia's plans, and hires PCs to recover the regalia ahead of Alexia's teams. Rewards include all treasure found within Arden Vul (except the regalia), a finder's fee of 20,00 gp per item, and significant political influence.

Source of the Hook: Lady Alexia Basileon (AK-2) herself provides the hook (or, conversely, her half-brother Iskander, who resides in Castle Burdock). Lady Alexia only approaches those who have already made a name for themselves.

Explanation: The four pieces of regalia are among the most potent items to be found within Arden Vul. Indeed, PCs might well wrestle with the decision to surrender them to their patron. The four pieces are the iron circlet of Ghanor (3-127A), the bone ring of Jagri-Naz (5-74), the ebon spear (SL5-13B), and the tablet of the Beacon (9-107).

Relevant Areas of Arden Vul: PCs who take up this quest are in for a long and extremely difficult set of adventures that may well constitute a complete campaign. Certainly, the pursuit of the regalia will involve significant political maneuvering in Narsileon, Newmarket and other seats of Archontean power; consultation with sages or serious research in the libraries of the collegia will also be necessary (activity which may require side adventures). Within Arden Vul, the four items are currently found in widely divergent and extremely dangerous locations. The iron circlet of Ghanor is actually located close to the surface, but is defended by a powerful greater mummy; the bone ring of Jagri-Naz is possessed by the crazed and extremely dangerous rudishva survivor, Psalor-Ki; the ebon spear is guarded underwater by a lich served by several daemons; and the tablet of the Beacon is not only found at the foot of the Great Chasm, it is defended by a deadly vengeance aspect of Sekhmet. The acquisition of each item is thus likely to involve a protracted search and highly dangerous combat with potent adversaries.

PC Levels: 8-15

Penetrate the Obsidian Gates

The PCs hear of the Obsidian Gates and the stories of vast wealth concealed behind them. The challenge, of course, is how to open them ...

Source of the Hook: It is relatively easy for PCs to hear about the Gates from discussion with other adventurers, or even from the various factions within Arden Vul (e.g., Goblins, Beastmen).

Explanation: Unlike other hooks, there is no external reward for following this lead; PCs should be motivated by the lure of unplundered wealth. The Obsidian Gates were built by the heqeti and then improved (and warded) by the rudishva; the Archontean, despite their long domination of Arden Vul, never penetrated them (at least not officially). The task of the PCs is to first locate the Gates and then figure out a way to open them.

Relevant Areas of Arden Vul: The Gates are not difficult to locate, as those who descend the pyramid (AV-15 to 3-1) can quickly end up in Gog's cave (5-2) by locating a concealed door (3-12). From Gog's cave, the Hall of Forty Pillars (5-6) is obvious, as will be the Gates themselves (5-6D). Opening them is another story. Experimentation may lead to disaster. It is necessary for PCs to realize that specialized keys are necessary to open the Gates; a list with the locations of all known keys is found in the Arden Vul items appendix. PCs may stumble across one or more keys by chance, or may (if the GM wishes) be given leads to their location by NPCs exterior to the Halls (e.g., a sage) or by members of one of the Arden Vul factions. In most cases, recovery of a set of keys requires a side-adventure. Once the Gates are penetrated, moreover, the PCs must deal with the substantial dangers along the Midnight Road.

Infiltrate or Eliminate the Cult of Set

All citizens of the Archontean empire know that the ancient cult of Set (one of the Twelve) was proscribed centuries ago. PCs will hear that the cult Set has been revived, and that its main cult center is reputed to lie within Arden Vul. Low-level PCs are tasked with infiltrating the cult and securing evidence about its numbers and practices; higher-level PCs may also be asked to eliminate the cult once and for all. Rewards for such actions can vary from the monetary (cash reward), to the forgiveness of crimes, or to admission into one of the Five Families via adoption.

Source of the Hook: The variable. One possible source is Keko the Lame, logothete of the Drome in Narsileon. Keko is not afraid to use the weight of his position to 'encourage' PCs to look into the cult. Good-aligned PCs might hear about the cult and choose to take action on their own; they might also be approached by good-aligned temples (e.g., Mitra) or political groups (e.g., the Dawn Striders, see World of Archontos appendix).

Explanation: Set has indeed returned, or, to be precise, worship of the Red God of the Desert has been revived (since Set himself never disappeared). Cultists recolonized Level 4 of Arden Vul about ninety years ago, and their power (and numbers) have grown ever since. The current High Priestess, Stephania (4-51), has made the Forum of Set into a vibrant market for goods, slaves, and information, and has begun to attract cultist-pilgrims from outside Arden Vul.

Relevant Areas of Arden Vul: The cult operates primarily on levels 3 and 4 of Arden Vul. It is relatively easy to glean information about the cult's location from sources within Burdock's Valley, since a slow, secretive, but steady stream of pilgrims and merchants have made their way up the valley to the cliff entrance (EX-15). PCs could scale the cliff to EX-15, or could signal for the basket to be lowered to them (especially if they are masquerading as merchants). The route to the Forum (4-2) from the cliff face is dangerous, but fairly well marked. Conversely, PCs could enter the Halls through the pyramid (AV-15) and make their way through Level 3 to the Set areas (e.g., 3-89). At the Forum, PCs are able to interact with cult members and other visitors from within and without Arden Vul. The nature of such interaction will vary according to the PCs' alignment, relative experience, and interests. Some may wish to observe, count cultists, and investigate the extent of the cult's activities; others may offer to serve the cult in order to win its friendship and learn its secrets; other bold (and powerful) parties may try to eliminate the cult by force.

PC Levels: 4-8

Locate and/or Apprehend Kerbog Khan

Locate the rogue archmage, Cerbactos Kalthetos, as well as the six rare codices that Cerbactos stole from the Imperial Academy's library. Hard evidence of his location within Arden Vul (including a map from exterior to his sanctum) will produce a reward of 5,000 gp; return of each of the six codices will bring a reward equal to 1.5x their value; apprehending the Khan and bringing him to justice brings a reward of 25,000 gp and a choice of magic items; producing evidence of his death brings a reward of 5,000 gp.

Explanation: The representative reveals that Cerbactos entered Arden Vul some 50 years ago and is currently calling himself Kerbog Khan. The six codices stolen from the Imperial Academy are Blood is the Key to All, by the Sanguinator, Principles of Magical Attraction, by Herluinus, Animating the Inanimate, by Vaslotus Light-Fingers, Locomotion in Animals and Humanoids, by Spindledor, A Hierarchy of Essential Fluids, by Licinia the Vampire, and Successful Reanimation, by Herbertus Occidentalis (see Arden Vul books for all). Kerbog Khan is ensconced in a well-defended lair on Sub-Level 12, where he has been investigating the junctions of biological and mechanical life (see SL12-25).

Relevant Area of Arden Vul: PCs may already have encountered Kerbog Khan through one or more of his automatons. If not, a likely location in which to do so is the Great Cavern of Level 3 (3-163, 3-172), or the Forum of Set (4-2), or at any number of random areas throughout the upper levels. PCs adept at negotiating might be able to persuade the Khan (through his automatons) to give them directions to his sanctum (provided they can persuade the Khan that they have items to trade to him) or even to teleport them there. Locating Kerbog Khan's lair without such advice is much more difficult, since all entrances are well hidden. Once PCs have located the Sanctum, they must negotiate with the Khan or, if they are very powerful, attempt to overwhelm his defenses.

Stop the Poison Supply

A deadly new poison with the street name of "Mortality" has been cropping up in the communities of the empire. Can the PCs locate the source of the poison and put a stop to it? Relevant authorities in Newmarket and/or Gosterwick will pay up to 2,000 gp/PC for proof that the supply has been permanently stopped.

Source of the Hook: Mayor Josselin Rinstock of Newmarket (see Burdock's Valley), or the thesmothete Eusbias Phokas (AK-23) of Gosterwick (or their agents).

Explanation: The poison is being brewed by Phlebotomas Plumthorn and his band of evil halfling thugs. Mortality is based on spider venom, of which Phlebotomas has two sources. The first is a secret 'spider farm' located within the New Forest; his men 'milk' the spiders there and bring the venom to Phlebotomas in Arden Vul Note: GMs may wish to modify the fine module, The Spider Farm, by Stuart Marshall, as the location for this farm; it can be downloaded for free at [Dragonsfoot.org]. The second source of venom is limited trade with denizens of Arden Vul.

Relevant Areas of Arden Vul: Phlebotomas's operation is located on Level 3, just where the stairs from the pyramid (AV-15) enter the dungeon levels. Some PCs might be able to track Phlebotomas's suppliers from either Newmarket or Gosterwick back to Arden Vul, and thus learn where Phlebotomas's operation is based. Others may be able to uncover the source of the spider venom in the New Forest (see Burdock's Valley), from which they will be directed to Arden Vul. Engaging with Phlebotomas might then entangle the PCs with other adventure seeds.

Find the Rogue Druid

A druid from the circle of the Old Forest has disappeared into Arden Vul. Disturbing reports suggest that this druid, named Gerrilad the Grey, has ceased to concern himself with preserving the Balance. PCs are asked or hired to investigate and bring him to the circle for judgment.

Source of the Hook: A druid PC can be approached by a member of the Circle of the Old Forest. Otherwise, PCs known to have delved into Arden Vul could be approached by Fael Valdorsdot in Gosterwick (AK-18). The source reveals that Gerrilad has not attended the Circle in more than two years; when last he was encountered, he was ranting incoherently about 'baboon society'.

Explanation: Gerrilad the Grey (2-69) has indeed lost his way and has decided that animals (and especially baboons) represent a purer natural force than humans. He has set himself up as leader of the albino baboons on Level 2 of Arden Vul (see 2-35), where he erratically dispenses justice.

Relevant Areas of Arden Vul: Gerrilad rules most of Level 2. There he is supported by the giant intelligent baboons and a rogue magic user; the ordinary albino baboons roam the darkened halls in packs. Some bold parties might be able to access Level 2 directly by descending the Well of Light (AV-14, 2-1). Others might cleverly decide to follow the baboons that sometimes hunt in the ruined city and/or the long stair (EX-8) back to their lair. Doing so could lead the PCs to several entrance points, all of which lead eventually to Level 2 (e.g., EX-12 via Sub-Level 3; and AV-10). The most traditional route to Level 2, however, is to enter the pyramid (AV-15) and then work upwards from Level 3; this could be accomplished via the stairs at 3-21 or by manipulating the lesser pyramid at 3-11. Extremely clever or lucky PCs might discover Gerrilad's backdoor route from the exterior to Level 2 (AV-46), although they would need to navigate all of Sub-Level 15 to do so. Once they have arrived on Level 2, PCs will need to locate and defeat Gerrilad, probably after an epic battle in 2-35.

Cleanse the Ziggurat

A great, demonic evil has been growing within Arden Vul; if unchecked it threatens all of Burdock's Valley and potentially the continent of Irthuin. This evil has been linked to the horrific ziggurat that is said to lie at the bottom of the dungeon. Can the PCs locate the ziggurat and defeat the growing evil? Defeating the evil should stand as its own reward.

Source of the Hook: PCs might learn of this problem through their own exploration of Arden Vul. Conversely, an outside, good-aligned source might approach powerful PCs, present some historical and/or theological evidence of the threat, and invite PCs to tackle the problem: such sources might include the Dawn Striders, the exarch in Narsileon, or a high-level priest from one of the good-aligned temples in Narsileon.

Explanation: The evil in question is the demon prince Kauket, whom the heqeti builders are attempting to summon to this plane. Kauket is possibly linked to an even greater cosmic evil, the god of pitiless consumption, Rimmaq-Isfet. Located on the lowest level of Arden Vul, the ziggurat of Kauket has been restored by the heqeti as part of their long-term strategy to reoccupy all of Arden Vul. Hard information about its location is hard to come by, although sages and the more powerful intelligent denizens of Arden Vul know that it is accessed by a well-guarded tunnel leading from the foot of the Great Chasm. It should be clear that this hook will require many seasons of adventuring to complete, and may indeed serve as the overarching structure to an entire campaign within Arden Vul. Indeed, PCs are well advised to gather intelligence, experience, and items before tracking the evil to its source; they will need to learn about the heqeti and their abilities, and might find it valuable to suppress a series of lesser evils (the heqeti upper temple at 7-79, the presence of Rimmaq-Isfet in the Feasting Hall at 8-76, and the colossal statue of Kauket buried in the muck at 9-12, and so forth). Accomplishing some or all of these goals will directly weaken the heqeti on Level 10 and make the task of cleansing the ziggurat easier. The PCs must also guard against the overriding desire of the heqeti to recover the lost sounding horn that will allow them to summon Kauket itself; although the horn is safely locked in a rudishva vault (5-95A) at the moment, the heqeti are searching for it and PCs who locate it might find themselves the target of theft or worse. Those cocky souls who force their way directly to the ziggurat are likely to be overwhelmed.

Relevant Areas of Arden Vul: In a simplistic sense, the task of defeating the heqeti and cleansing the ziggurat is limited to Level 10. Access to that level is via a corridor on Level 9 (9-82). But, as noted above, wise PCs will wish to thoroughly explore other areas of Arden Vul in an effort to weaken the heqeti (and Kauket) before turning their attention to the ziggurat.

The Mystery of the Beacon

Assiduous explorers of Arden Vul, and particularly those who penetrate beyond the Obsidian Gates, are likely to come across reference to the great ship of the rudishva, the Beacon. Just what was this Beacon? Where may it be found? Can it be made seaworthy again? Players may quickly realize that the Beacon is indeed a starship, and some may choose to have their PCs explore the potential of space flight!

Source of the Hook: No outside authority or source of wisdom can impart this hook, as the identity of the Beacon is unknown to even the greatest sages. PCs must uncover enough clues about the mysterious nature of the Beacon through adventuring in Arden Vul and then decide to follow those clues to their logical end.

Explanation: Since the Beacon broke into constituent modules upon its crash landing into the cliff of Arden Vul, it is impossible to restore the Beacon to its original form. Still, one of the Beacon's shuttles did survive, and is technically space-worthy. Indeed, only days before the heqeti assault that destroyed the rudishva hegemony, the rudishva had finally solved the propulsion problems that had prevented them from using the shuttle for interstellar flight. PCs interested in the rudishva and/or in a different kind of adventure could thus follow the trail of clues that will allow them to prepare the shuttle for space flight.

Relevant Areas of Arden Vul: The shuttle is found on Sub-Level 13 (SL13-37A). Enough fuel for one interstellar jump is also located in the shuttle bay (SL13-37); it is possible to discover the formula that will allow intelligent PCs to produce more fuel, though (see 9-96). Yet PCs will also need to recover at least one drive rod from the engineering pod of the Beacon (7-143) and one or more astrogation crystals from the bridge of the Beacon (SL14-10). All of these areas are difficult to locate and access (although either rudishva AI might be willing to assist - see SL14-13 and 6-27). General knowledge of the rudishva and their long history is probably desirable before PCs attempt to activate the shuttle; PCs can learn the story of the rudishva on Level 5 (areas 5-86 to 5-98, 5-105 to 5-138), in the few surviving modules of the Beacon and rudishva (e.g., 6-27, 6-113 to 6-123, 7-143, SL12-4 to SL12-15, SL14-10 to SL14-14), and in other rudishva areas (9-89 to 9-97, SL9-41 to SL9-49).

Tracking the Eighth Collegium

Since the dark days of the war between Sortians and Theosophs, the number of collegia devoted to magical scholarship and training has been fixed by imperial decree at seven. And yet, rumors of an eighth, hidden collegium have persisted for centuries. It is said that the eighth collegium - if it exists - must have access to rare spells, summoning information, and magical processes. Gossip had fingered the archmage Nerub Null as a potentially leading figure in this shadowy organization. When he disappeared some fifty years ago, it was thought that he had died or gone underground. Now a reputable report places Nerub Null in Arden Vul with a small team of supporters. The leaders of at least five of the mainstream collegia will offer substantial rewards in coin, spells, and magic items to those who can produce definitive proof of the existence, structure, and operations of the eighth collegium; the reward doubles if the archmage Nerub Null can be brought alive for interrogation in Narsileon or Archontos.

Source of the Hook: A magic user PC has probably heard the rumors of an eighth collegium. The hook will be offered to such PCs (and their friends) by the leader(s) of the PC's collegium.

Explanation: the eighth collegium is the Order of Priscians (see Factions of Arden Vul). It is true that Nerub Null has come to Arden Vul; he has established a base in an old Sortian outpost on Level 9. From there, the Priscians hope to loot Arden Vul for its magical treasures and hidden knowledge. Carefully composed strike teams of Priscian war mages and conversi may be encountered elsewhere in Arden Vul.

Relevant Areas of Arden Vul: The main Priscian outpost is on Level 9 (9-58 to 9-64A). They have a smaller presence on Level 6 (6-48 to 6-49A). Lucky or clever PCs might be able to discover the Priscians' secret route into Arden Vul (AV-19), which leads to 6-49 and thence to Level 9. It might also be possible for PCs to ambush one of the Priscian exploration teams (7-143, 9-31, or SL4-44) and in that way learn the location of the Priscian base.

PC Levels: 9-12

The Tomb of the Twins

Sometimes scholarly research pays off! A contact has provided you with sure-fire information concerning the long-lost tomb of the Twins, that is, the resting place of the famous twin warriors of antiquity, Thekla and Taticus. The tomb is said to contain the

Gemini blades (see new magic items), which the twins used to defeat the troll of Helmdorf. Your contact will pay 15,000 gp for each of the Gemini blades, assuring you that there will be plenty of additional treasure in the tomb of the Twins and 'nearby' tombs. The contact informs you that the tomb is found along the south wall of the Drowned Canyon, next to the tomb of Phocius Tricotor; so if you can find Phocius's tomb (easy!, says your contact), it'll be a simple task to find the tomb of the Twins.

Source of the Hook: The hook with its specific details can be provided by an outside source, such as Calpurnia the Quiet, one of the leaders of the Collegium of Macrina (see World of Archontos appendix). Alternatively, PCs may hear of the deeds of the twins (through one of the Arden Vul books, perhaps) and conduct their own research through sages and magic.

Explanation: The PCs' source is correct: the tomb of the Twins is located in the Drowned Canyon (SL6-88), and the Gemini blades can be recovered there. Accessing the Drowned Canyon can be difficult, however. Once PCs have entered the canyon, it will be necessary to use hit-and-miss tactics (or magic) to determine the precise location of the tomb of the Twins (SL6-88).

Relevant Areas of Arden Vul: The tomb of the Twins is found on Sub-Level 6. The contact's information is useful, as the tomb of Phocius Tricotor (SL6-81) is one of the most obvious along the south wall, given that its entrance is visible above the waterline. Unfortunately, it is impossible to access the tomb of the Twins from that of Phocius Tricotor; PCs will need to poke about near Phocius's tomb to discover one of the real entrances to the tomb of the Twins (i.e., SL6-80, some 50' below the waterline, which leads to the false tombs of SL6-86 and SL6-87, or via the backdoor route leading from SL6-91, to SL6-96, and then to SL6-89). Accessing the Drowned Canyon poses its own problems, as Calpurnia has no idea how to do so (if she's used as the source of information). PCs will need to discover the stairs at 3-87, or traverse the spillway from the chasm to 6-143, or locate one of the other entrances to the Drowned Canyon. All of these entrances are difficult to locate, and may require negotiation with other factions, consultation with sages, or other significant research.

PC Levels: 6-8

Rescue Operation

Someone has gone missing in Arden Vul, and it's up to the PCs to locate and rescue him/her/it! Will doing so bring a reward, a new party member, or merely a sense of satisfaction?

Source of the Hook: If a given prisoner is connected to an individual or institution that would pay for his/her/its release, that interested party is listed in the third column below. Otherwise, the GM should decide who the interested party might be.

Explanation: The following table includes a complete list of all prisoners/captives found within the Halls of Arden Vul, along with indications of where they are being held and who, if anyone, is interested in procuring their release. Some captives have built-in mini-quests associated with them. For example, Lillian the canon is the subject of her own hook (see above); the temple of Mitra will pay good money for her rescue. Similarly, High Priestess Stephanica of the cult of Set would be interested in the return of Berenice, the Set deacon. For most prisoners, however, no interested party is given. Partly this is because these prisoners are NPC adventurers, unconnected to the factional politics of the Halls. Still, the GM could decide that the relatives or comrades of one of these NPCs has approached the the PCs and asked them to locate their missing family member/friend; such parties might provide a vague report of where the NPC was headed. So, for example, the GM might decide that Weothas, the now-lame former companion of Samantha the Red and Tresti Iredell, approaches the PCs and begs them to rescue his comrades. In such a case, Weothas could explain how his party had descended the Well of Light (2-1) to the 'secret halls of the Thoht priests' (Level 2), where they were beset by terrible, barking apes that overwhelmed their party. Last he saw, Samantha and Tresti were being dragged away by an enormous, four-armed ape! Such a hook provides PCs with a motive and general location for the captives found in 2-36B and 2-36C. Perhaps Samantha and/or Tresti are interested in joining forces with their rescuers?

The Oldest Profession? Or, Tomb Robbing 101

Everybody knows that Arden Vul is filled with ancient tombs that are ripe for the looting! The PCs have come across a good lead to a particular tomb [selected from the table below]. It's now a matter of locating that tomb and relieving its occupant of any remaining treasures.

Source of the Hook: The source should vary at the GM's discretion. One potential source might be an interested outsider, willing to pay to equip an expedition to plunder a specific tomb (for one example, see above, the Tomb of the Twins). Another source could be a sage or other scholarly source located in one of the imperial cities (Narsileon, Arcuturos, Archontos); this scholar might have a few scraps of information about the individual buried in the tomb and a greater or lesser sense of where the tomb is located. With a small amount of work, the GM could also drop hints about a specific tomb - even a treasure map - within Arden Vul, either as a scrap of lost text, as hearsay from fellow NPC adventurers, or as a specific lead from a member of one of the native factions. For instance, perhaps Killik, the goblin sub-chief (5-46) and his men recently observed two 'foolish outsiders' climbing the chasm wall towards a strange circular piece of stone.

Sadly, says Killik, 'those fools never returned'. This hook refers to the tomb of Artax-Ris at 3-39.

Explanation: The following table collects in one place all the lost tombs of Arden Vul. It should be noted that these are tombs, and not merely lairs (of which there are hundreds more). The table provides a location for the tomb, the name (if known) of the original occupant(s), the type of tomb guardians (if any), the extent to which the tomb complex is trapped or concealed, and some indication of the size and quality of its treasure.

Relevant Areas of Arden Vul: Varies. See locations on the following table.

PC Levels: Varies widely.

SL11-23, SL11-24	Priscus Pulcher (remains)	Invisible stalkers	N	Major
SL13-10J	Apollonius of Archontos	Demi-lich, flesh golems, skeleton warrior, ghoulish lords, rending demons, spectres, vampires, ghouls	Y	Major
SL15-13	Crypt of the Everlasting Brotherhood	Ghouls, wights, shadows, mummies, greater mummy	N	Major

Key

Traps: N=none; Y=traditional trap (poison needle, gas, falling block, etc.); C=concealment or other trick.

Treasure: None=no appreciable treasure; Minor= less than 100 gp; Moderate= 100-1,000 gp with 0-2 minor magic items; Major= more than 1,000 gp and/or 2 or more magic items.

CUSTOMIZING ARDEN VUL

Although it might seem crazy to want to expand what is already a massive dungeon, one of the tropes of old-school mega-dungeons is their never-ending nature. To that end, it is entirely possible for enterprising GMs to expand the product. Perhaps other modules of the Beacon are buried in the rock? Or perhaps a long tunnel leads to an area of geothermic, or even volcanic activity? Any number of lost Archontean-era sorcerous laboratories with dangerous experiments and/or constructs might be located just off some of the most traveled routes. Even a new faction, one composed of invisible or ultra-stealthy types, might exist amid and around the existing factions. While GM creativity should rule, the text does indicate several promising areas for expansion. These are summarized below.:

Area	Possible Expansion Ideas
EX-7	A wizard's laboratory with tricks and defenses, located behind the colossus of Vul
AV-29	Additional wings of the former archon's palaces, and/or basements
4-138A	Additional crypts of Set, with undead and lost artifacts
8-170	Deep regions of the Underearth, including the dwellings of the Selenite guardians
8-171	Either new sub-levels of Arden Vul, or a direct path to the Underearth
9-30	Air-shafts leading to an unknown cave system
10-7	Additional heqeti areas, including a formal shrine to Rimmaq-Isfet
10-31	The Rimpled Run leads to the Silent Sea in the Underearth
10-62	The main heqeti route to the Underearth, where may be found a heqeti residential colony, a shrine to Rimmaq-Isfet, the kaliyani city of Lissak-Tol, etc.

SL7-39	Further Archontean-era administrative suites and shrines
SL9-79	Tunnel to the Underearth, including the kaliyani city of Lissak-Tol
SL15-13	A necropolis of the Everlasting Brotherhood, complete with a shrine to Thanatos
SL15-14	Any variety of cave-dwelling monsters

It is, of course, easy to build new regions off of existing levels. For instance, the dead corridors at 3-211 and 3-220 might lend themselves to expansion.

In addition to newly discovered regions of Arden Vul, the complex offers many portals, gates, and teleportation effects that allow PCs - voluntarily or involuntarily - to journey to exotic and/or dangerous locales. Some of those are listed here:

Destination of Gate/Portal/Teleportation	Location of Gate/Portal
The Abyss	4-152, 8-76, SL1-12
The Ethereal Plane	SL1-10, SL2-1H
The City of Brass	3-49, SL4-14 (via the Codex Sequentis), SL6-17A
The Astral Plane	4-18A, 9-51, SL1-11, SL2-1H, SL6-17A, SL13-10C
A base of the Order of Planar Explorers	SL1-3
A sub-basement of the imperial palace in Archontos (see World of Archontos appendix)	SL6-17A

The city of Archontos	SL4-14 (via the Codex Sequentis)
The free city of Duneagle on Oereth	SL4-14 (via the Codex Sequentis)
Mount Juventus, on Mithruin (see World of Archontos appendix)	SL13-10A
The icy forests of Borelios (see World of Archontos appendix)	SL13-10D
A cave in the snowy mountains many miles north of Arden Vul	SL13-10E
A hollowed-out mallorn tree in the heart of the elven realm of Lady Ellagel and Lord Gallador (see World of Archontos appendix)	SL13-10F
The sultry skies above the ruined city of Agoreon, located off the coasts of Ostraios (see World of Archontos appendix)	SL13-10K

Flavor: Sci-Fi and Fantasy

What's this sci-fi doing in my fantasy?? One of the big secrets of Arden Vul concerns the origin and identity of the rudishva and their servitors: as should be pretty clear by now, all were extra-terrestrials who arrived in Arden Vul when their starship (the Beacon) crashed into the cliff. This blurring of fantasy and sci-fi genres is consciously meant to evoke the early days of fantasy role-playing and, in particular, one of the author's favorite first edition modules. Still, some GMs and players may worry about this fusion. Some may be concerned that the injection of high technology may 'imbalance the game.' Fear not! Almost all of the rudishva devices are charged. This means that even if these devices are permitted in a campaign, they have a limited shelf life; as soon as the limited stock of lesser power supplies runs out, they become inert chunks of plasteel and electronics. If a GM is still worried about the effects of rudishva technology, he/she can also choose to reduce the number of power supplies available as treasure.

For those who object on principle to the blending of fantasy and sci-fi, again it is worth saying 'Fear not!' After all, it is remarkably easy to recast the rudishva in terms of traditional fantasy tropes. Taking account of Clarke's Third Law ('any sufficiently advanced technology is indistinguishable from magic'), the following paragraphs offer some suggestions on how to recast the rudishva, their devices, and their story in terms of more traditional fantasy:

The Origins of the Rudishva and their Servitors: Rather than interstellar voyagers, they are either extinct races native to Mage or visitors from another plane. The former is plausible, and fits into the general decayed empires theme of Arden Vul; indeed, it might allow the GM to develop other, modern rudishva locations elsewhere on Magae. If the latter is used, however, the GM might decide that the rudishva of Arden Vul were outcasts from their own plane, or that they were researchers attempting to produce better weapons with which to battle their arch-enemies (either demons or the niravairi [see new monsters]).

Rudishva Technological Items: Following Clarke's Third Law, these are easily transformed into new magic items. Thus, a laser rifle becomes a 'staff of blasting,' albeit with a few changes in description to make it sound more magical than mechanical. A rocket launcher becomes a staff of explosions; identity plaques become amulets; plasteel becomes mithril; tactical suits are a specially prepared kind of leather armor; a personal shield is an incredibly rare personal wall of force; a jet ski becomes a magic carpet usable only over water; a hover sled is a better variant of magic carpet; the GnuCoder series of devices become miniature enchanted mirrors; data crystals retain the form, but are the product of enchantments that only discharge when used in such enchanted mirrors; a point defense controller becomes a rare apparatus for detonating miniature fireballs, etc. Rudishva power supplies may either be eliminated completely (perhaps replaced by standard potions), or can be transformed into powerful magical recharging devices that work with any charged magic item; a lesser supply might restore up to 15 charges, while a greater one could restore 100 charges (or more).

The Rudishva Story: As written, the rudishva stayed hidden within Arden Vul because they were attempting to repair their starship and wished to minimize contact with the native species. Conflict with the inimical heqeti occurred anyway, and eventually the rudishva were overcome by heqeti slime attacks. It is perfectly simple to recast this tale in fantasy terms: the rudishva were attempting to devise a potent magical device that required enormous amounts of arcenum and special minerals located only within Arden Vul; conflict with the heqeti was inevitable, and the rudishva were defeated as already written. The major change involves the rudishva goals: instead of wishing to develop a new propulsion technique so as to permit the shuttle to fly, the particular magical properties of arcenum (and Arden Vul) required their long residence beneath the cliff.

Rudishva Architecture and Building Materials: Plasteel becomes mithril, and plasglass becomes a form of specially prepared, mithril-infused glass. The rudishva consoles are enchanted mirrors. The distinctive rudishva architectural style (no 90-degree corners) can remain.

The Pods of the Beacon: The various pods (residential, weapons, medical, engineering, shuttle bay) can be easily reconfigured. The residential pod requires little alteration: it is made of a mithril alloy and is powered (6-123) by an arcenum-infused crystal (not a nuclear plant). The weapons pod (6-27) requires little alteration as well; the point-defense arrays are merely magical enchantments firing magic missiles or fireballs. The engineering bay (7-143) can be recast as location where the rudishva either created arcenum, or transformed it (as in a smithy) into other substances. The medical pod (SL12-4) can be recast as a magically-attuned healing and/or punishment center, with medicaderm either a purely magical healing substance or some sort of symbiotic monster that the rudishva had tamed. The shuttle bay requires little in the way of retconning, except for the shuttle itself (SL13-37A). Here the GM has a choice. The shuttle might become a prototype of some steampunk-style, magically floating airship. Or, it could become something other than a vessel, perhaps an enchanted orrery that can be used to predict the location of the heqeti ziggurat and/or the timing of an impending heqeti summoning ritual (or something comparable). In other words, it is easy enough to transform the shuttle into a more traditional fantasy MacGuffin.

The Rudishva Artificial Intelligences (6-27, SL14-13): The two artificial intelligences should be transformed either into summoned and trapped extra-planar entities (imprisoned, all-knowing planetars or some such), or transformed into a kind of magical consciousness analogous to the heads of Thoth (see new magic items).

BURDOCK'S VALLEY, THE AZURE KEEP, AND GOSTERWICK

The legendary lost city and dungeons of Arden Vul lie on a plateau overlooking the valley carved by the Swift River into the knees of the Emerald Mountains. The valley is about 90 miles wide and 80 miles long, and it features varied terrain: forest both ancient and new, cleared fields, swamp, mire, and rocky hills and ridges. In antiquity it marked the northern-most edge of Archontean civilization on Irthuïn; the important administrative and scholarly city of Arden Vul was the seat of an archonate and home to several legions. With the Archontean retreat occasioned by the great War of the Sortians and Theosophs, Arden Vul was abandoned in 1803 AEP. Most of the Archonteans estate-owners in the valley fled as well, and the fields reverted to wood and mire.

For a variety of reasons, the Thorcinga never chose to settle the valley in great numbers. So, when the empire returned to Irthuïn in 2639, albeit in reduced numbers, they found a mostly depopulated, dangerous frontier region. The exarch in Narsileon assigned lordship of the valley to the Basileon family, and a new town (Newmarket) was chartered. More recently, a second new town, Gosterwick, has emerged under the aegis of Lady Alexia Basileon (see AK map and chapter). The towns and villages of Burdock's Valley are thus islands of civilization in a still dangerous frontier region. To the south lies Narsileon, some two weeks' walk along the imperial road. To the north are the Emerald Mountains, which are home to giants, monsters, and the occasional Wiskein steading.

The valley itself takes its name from the Thorcin thegn who ruled the valley in antiquity, before the Archonteans arrived to 'civilize' it. The Thorcinga still know it as the Vale of Burgheat, although this has been rendered into Archontean as Burdoc-Vale or Burdock's Valley.

MAP KEY (BV- BURDOCK'S VALLEY)

The following areas are indicated on the map.

Towns

Newmarket: The largest community in Burdock's Valley, Newmarket lies on the Swift River and is home to over 4,000 people. It is a free town, exempt from the lordship of Lord Burdock and governed by a mayor and council of aldermen. Although at least three days walk from Arden Vul, it is a good site for adventurers to heal, train, resupply, and trade. The major Factors and temples all have a presence in Newmarket. The local villages sell their surplus in Newmarket, and merchants from Newmarket trade downriver to Narsileon.

Gosterwick: A small town (2,211 persons) lying close to the cliff of Arden Vul and under the shadow of the Azure Keep. Lady Alexia Basileon has sponsored this new town in an effort to oppose her half-brother, Lord Burdock. Although small, it is consciously organized to appeal to adventurers, who can pursue training, buy supplies, and dispose of their loot in the town. Due to its size, however, it cannot fully compete with Newmarket for such services. See the separate entry for the Azure Keep and Gosterwick.

Villages

Castleton: A small village of 600 persons lying at the foot of Castle Burdock. The few services not devoted to the needs of the local farmers are bureaucratic in nature, serving Lord Burdock's growing need for soldiers, lawyers, and money. Morton the Steward, Lord Burdock's loathed tax-collector, has his manor in the village.

Bilsham: A farming village east of Newmarket lying on the Bilstream. The villagers specialize in wheat and buckwheat, selling most of their surplus in Newmarket through the Farm Cooperative. Population: 790.

Ulfham: A farming village east of Newmarket, known for its vineyards. Also participates in the Newmarket Farm Cooperative. Population 520.

Thorham: A farming village lying on the old Imperial Road well to the north of Newmarket and close by the Paw and the Fenn. The villagers specialize in wheat, barley, and hops. A ruined moat-house lies nearby at the edge of the Fenn. Population 475.

Beretun: A farming village north of Newmarket along the old Imperial Road, close by the New Forest. The villagers specialize in legumes, but also grow barley and hops. Population 650.

Deepton: A mining village located in the foothills west of the New Forest. Half the villagers work the local iron mine under the supervision of some of Lord Burdock's men; the mine is productive, even if Lord Burdock has been hoping (vainly) to strike gold or silver (which he knows was found here in antiquity). The other half of the villagers grow wheat, legumes, and barley. Population 900.

Fortifications

Castle Burdock: An imposing fortress built on a ridge at the southwest corner of the valley, overlooking Castleton. The castle is the seat of Lord Burdock, a title currently held by Iskander Basileon, who is a favorite of the exarch in Narsileon. His title is contested by his half-sister, Alexia. Lord Burdock employs a large force of men-at-arms as well as a force of better-trained ex-legionaries.

The Azure Keep: Until recently a ruined fortress lying close to the Swift River at the foot of the cliff of Arden Vul, it has been repaired by a sept of knights from the Order of the Azure Shield. This sept is unusual for being politically active, as it is acting in concert with Lady Alexia Basileon, who contests lordship over Burdock's Valley with her half-brother, Iskander. The Keep's roof is tiled with sky-blue tiles and it sits atop a low ridge; the new and growing town of Gosterwick lies below it. See separate entry for the Azure Keep and Gosterwick.

Watercourses

The Swift River: This river lives up to its name, as it runs swiftly and strongly from the waterfall at the cliff of Arden Vul through the center of Burdock's Valley. The old Imperial Road runs alongside it through much of the valley. South of Newmarket the river is navigable to trading barges.

Bilstream: This minor watercourse waters the rich agricultural lands east of Newmarket.

The Muddy River: Pouring down from the mountains to the west of Burdock's Valley, this river gets lost in the Valtos Marshes before joining the Swift River at the mouth of the valley.

Gold River: This river gets its name from the flakes and small nuggets of gold sometimes found along its course within the New River. All assume the ore to have been swept down from the mountains near Deepton, where gold was mined in antiquity.

The Long Run: This vigorous stream runs east from the mountains to join the Swift River near the Azure Keep.

Woods

Old Forest: This old growth forest was never settled in antiquity, and is thus still home to giant hornbeams, beaches, elms, and other deciduous specimens. The western borders are home to bold human settlements of charcoal-burners and woodcutters. These groups are frequent targets of attacks by humanoid tribes living further in the forest. A circle of druids is said to make its home within the forest; it is not clear whether the druids support the humans or the humanoids.

New Forest: Although more than 800 years old and substantial in its own right, this forest land is considered 'new' because in antiquity it was mostly farmland. The retraction of the Archontean Empire 1,200 years ago led to prolonged and successful reforestation. Spiders, humanoids, and even worse monsters are said to dwell there.

Named Hills, Ridges, Rock Projections

The Paw: A tall hill shaped like a giant cat's-paw, lying at the north end of the New Forest and looking over the old Imperial Road. It is said that the ancient Thorcinga delved vertical tombs into the rock of the Paw.

The Fingers: An odd rock formation of four slender ridges of stone rising 200' into the air, and thus appearing as fingers of a hand. Most give the Fingers a wide berth, as they are a notorious nesting spot for gargoyles. Careful observers have reported several openings in the rock high up the side of the Fingers; a few of these appear to be worked, not natural.

Rocky Ledges: A long system of forested hills and ridges lying at the center of the New Forest. The terrain is jagged and difficult to negotiate, which has made it a perfect home for the Lone Pine tribe of goblins.

The Spire: A steep hill located at the southern mouth of the valley, taking its name from the unusual spire of rock that extends another 75' above the summit of the hill.

Bald Hill: An imposing, steep hill north of Newmarket. The hill rises 200' above the plain. Strangely, the normal coniferous forest ends 50' from the summit (hence the name).

Table Rock: A large, gently sloping formation at the southern end of the valley. Its summit is both long (6 miles) and remarkably flat. The ruins of several watchtowers stud the mesa.

Marshes, Swamps

The Fenn: A low-lying area between the Fingers and Thorham, through which the Swift River moves more slowly than usual. The Fenn is home to several ruins, including a decrepit Moat House. Old-timers claim that in their 'great-great-grandmother's day' the area was prime farmland and that some vast catastrophe turned it into swamp.

Valtos Marshes: Extensive marshland lying along the Muddy River just south of Castleton. Although serving as an effective barrier to attacks on Castle Burdock from the south, the marshes have also ensured the relatively stagnant economic status of the region around Castleton.

Lakes

Hidden Lake: Deep within the Old Forest is a broad lake fed by mountain streams. An ancient stone tower rises from an island in the center of the lake. Humanoid activity in the forest has prevented exploration of the lake.

Adventure Sites

Arden Vul: Located atop a 1,500' cliff at the north end of the valley, Arden Vul comprises both the ruins of an Archontean city and substantial dungeon levels below.

Bandit Camp: The Thorcin Recovery League has established a permanent encampment here, at the southern edge of the New Forest. The TRL bandits mostly attack imperial trading missions and have begun picking off the patrols of Lord Burdock's men.

The Ibis's Roost: An ancient shrine to Thoth is concealed in a fold in the hill known as the Spire. The existence of the shrine is not well known; still, those able to circumvent its powerful guardians may find that it contains useful information about Arden Vul (including maps).

The Thicket: A magically-enhanced thicket of thorn bushes surrounds a hill known as Broken Knob. The Broken Knob hosts the ruins of a watch-tower. The thorn bushes cover an area of 3-5 acres, and are remarkably hardy. The Thicket is home to a tribe of kobolds, who use the Thicket to defend themselves from more dangerous predators. Only the kobolds know that an ancient Thorcin burial mound lies within the Thicket.

Lost Shrine: Concealed on the east side of Bald Hill is a forgotten shrine to the heroes Arden and Vul. The shrine has recently been occupied by a band of doppelgangers posing as dwarves. The 'dwarves' claim to be outfitting themselves for an expedition to Arden Vul for two reasons: 1) discovery and restoration of the Forge of Zhorak (8-100), and 2) recovery of their lost comrade, Jasper Malachite (see area 5-52).

THE AZURE KEEP AND GOSTERWICK

The closest safe haven for adventurers exploring the Halls of Arden Vul is the small town of Gosterwick, which has rapidly grown up at the foot of an ancient fortress, the Azure Keep. Lying only a few miles west of the Long Falls (EX-3), Gosterwick and the Azure Keep occupy an advantageous site atop and around a semi-circular, granite ridge. Until recently, the Keep was a ruin, and the site of Gosterwick was inhabited only by a handful of husbandmen and their families. Twenty-five years ago, however, the mysterious Green Lady (Alexia Basileon - see World of Archontos appendix) arrived at the Azure Keep with her companions, a sept of the Knights of the Azure Shield (see World of Archontos appendix). Lady Alexia and the knights claimed the tower as their own and began to restore it, swiftly making it their base of operations in Burdock's Valley. Now known as the Azure Keep, it takes its name partly from the name of the knights' order, and partly from the azure-blue tiles that define the Keep's roof. In addition to the keep proper, the Knights sponsored the restoration of other buildings in two baileys located atop the ridgeline, including a grand fortified residence for Lady Alexia, stables, dwellings for craftsmen, a well, and stout walls. Only a few years later came the news that Lady Alexia was building a new town at the foot of the keep; this town, formally named Vetucaster in Archontean, but known to most by its Thorcin name of Gosterwick, also profited from an ambitious, and swift, building program. Currently some 2,200 souls dwell in Gosterwick, including representatives of several of the Factors, a local chapter of the Benevolent Brotherhood, and numerous traders and craftspeople. Lady Alexia is actively recruiting merchants, factors, workers, and retired adventurers to her thriving community.

The Knights of the Azure Shield

A military order that spans the empire, the Knights of the Azure Shield are organized into septs of twenty knights (plus squires) led by a Sept Commander. The entire order is governed by the Grand Master from the Night Tower in Archontos, although individual septs traditionally operate as distinct, largely-independent units. Founded 400 years ago by the great paladin of Mitra, Keladon Gesedion (known as 'the Wall'), the mission of the order is to aid the needy wherever they may be found, without regard to faith, alignment, or social rank. As a result, the order has a reputation as a motor of social mobility, as the stories of men and women from modest backgrounds who joined as grooms, lackeys, or servants and rose to become a squire and/or knight are legion. While not technically defined by alignment as a 'good' organization, the order has nevertheless acquired a reputation as a haven for naive do-gooders.

The sept that has restored the Azure Keep is unusual among the order, and for several reasons. First, it is obviously aligned to a political figure, Lady Alexia Basileon. This runs contrary to the usual ethos of the knights, who pride themselves for their neutrality in the game of the Five Families. Many thus sneeringly dismiss this sept as 'mere mercenaries' working for the Green Lady. Secondly, it is larger than a normal sept, with thirty knights and an equal number of squires. Finally, its goals and motives appear to most observers to be opaque, and certainly not typical of the order. While the knights living in Burdock's Valley have been known to assist travelers on rare occasions, they do not seem to seek out the needy and downtrodden; instead, they seem more inclined to keep to themselves. Some wags claim that the knights literally have been bewitched by the 'Green Witch' (Alexia).

Rather than detail the entire Keep and town, what follows aims to provide GMs with a rough framework of information to aid those PCs seeking a place to heal, rest, trade, and train.

Population

Gosterwick has 2,211 inhabitants, of whom 40% are Archontean, 40% are Thorcin, 15% are Wiskin, and 5% are demi-human (primarily halflings and imperial goblins, although there are a few elves and dwarves).

Rulers

Unlike Newmarket, a free town whose elites elect their own mayor, Gosterwick is governed by a thesmothete appointed by Lady Alexia. Currently, the thesmothete is Eusebia Phokas (AK-23). As Eusebia's jurisdiction extends only over the town proper, the Azure Keep is governed separately, by Sept Commander Horatius Gesellion (AK-1). Of course, true authority over both town and keep lies with Lady Alexia Basileon, who dwells in the Residence lying on the ridge just north of the Keep (AK-2).

Government

The Thesmothete: Eusebia Phokas holds the executive power in Gosterwick, as she supervises the other imperial agencies from her town house (AK-23). She is aided in her bureaucratic work by three proedroi, and seven chartoularii. Eusebia is a capable and experienced administrator, and only kicks decisions up to Lady Alexia when they concern unusual problems.

Imperial Bureaucracy: As an imperial town, albeit one started quasi-illegally by a renegade aristocrat, Gosterwick possesses the three familiar agencies of all imperial communities, namely the House of Sight, the House of Coins, and the Private House. In a brazen break with authority, Lady Alexia has simply appointed her own candidates to run the three bureaucratic offices, granting each of them the title of logothete regardless of their previous postings or experience. The House of Coins (AK-19), responsible for general taxation and public expenditures, is the largest of the three in Gosterwick; Lady Alexia has conferred its administration to an old friend, Theron Glesteon. The Private House (AK-15), which traditionally administers the estates and possessions of the imperial family in a given jurisdiction, is significantly smaller than usual in Gosterwick, since as of yet the emperor has claimed no territory here for his own. Its logothete is Aedelwine the Fair. The House of Sight (AK-13), responsible for postal service, diplomacy, and imperial intelligence-gathering, is also small in Gosterwick; indeed, its logothete, Audun Yellow-Eyes, has not yet been recognized in his office by his alleged superiors in Narsileon.

Justice

The four normal categories of Archontean justice are operative in Gosterwick.

High Justice: Crimes against the Emperor and/or against the State. Typically, this means treason, murder, arson, rape, criminal conspiracy, and any type of crime committed against a member of the imperial family or against imperial property. Punishment: fines followed by death, by inventive, public, and slow means. Judge: Lady Alexia Basileon Procedure: accusations are initiated by Lady Alexia or her agents; hearings are held on an ad-hoc basis

Justice of the Body: Offenses against the persons of imperial citizens, or of those granted judicial protection by the Empire. Typically, this means assault, insult, slander, wounding, sexual assault (other than rape). Punishment: varies, ranging from fines, to amputation, to death. Judge: Eusebia Phokas, the thesmothete. Procedure: citizens file a complaint (for a fee) with the thesmothete's office. Eusebia holds sessions once per quarter to settle these cases.

Justice of the Domus: Crimes against the property of imperial citizens. Typically, this means burglary; theft; damage of 50 gp or more to movables or immovables; disputes over marriage, divorce, or inheritance; disputes over ownership of property worth 50 gp or more. Punishment: fines, or amputation, or blinding, or castration, or a combination. Judge: one of the three proedroi serving the thesmothete. Procedure: citizens file a formal complaint with the thesmothete's office. The complainant pays for a writ of summons, executed by thesmothete's office in order to enforce attendance at court. Both parties are expected to produce their own witnesses, evidence, and/or advocates for their cases. Each proedros holds court once per quarter.

Low Justice: Crimes against non-citizens, and petty crimes. Typically, this means all crimes involving non-citizens; disputes over damages to, or ownership of, goods worth less than 50 gp. Punishments: varies widely, ranging from fines to death. Judge: one of the seven chartoularii. Procedure: The chartoularii hear such cases on a bi-monthly basis in a public square. Complainants register before dawn for a hearing time. Cases are heard orally, and the chartoularios makes a summary judgment

Town Guards

A contingent of 40 guardsmen enforce the peace and the orders of Eusebia Phocas. They reside in two fortified wooden towers, known colloquially as the 'kettles' (see AK-32).

The Wardens of Vetucaster

Lady Alexia (AK-2) has initiated a new program designed to attract well-to-do merchants and adventurers to Gosterwick. She calls it the 'wardens' program, for anyone who takes up the offer is given an impressive diploma naming him- or herself as a 'Warden of Vetucaster'. Wardens are granted the rights of citizenship and the opportunity to buy land within the town at a 50% discount; in addition, for every prosperous merchant or craftsman that a Warden convinces to settle in Gosterwick, she pays a 750 gp bounty (similarly with aristocrats) to the Warden. In return, the Warden must commit to remaining in residence at Gosterwick for at least 80 days per year (20 days per season), must contribute to the town defense, and must obey the lawful orders of the thesmothete or the knight commander. Alexia is explicitly targeting mid- and high-level adventurers (such as Wicktrimmer - see AK-17) who might be interested in retirement, but who are still active and useful.

Training for Level Advancement

As a frontier outpost and haven for adventurers, Gosterwick and/or the Azure Keep provide suitable opportunities for PCs to train for level advancement, at least up to levels 5 or 6 (depending on the class). Training costs are slightly higher here than elsewhere: PCs can expect to pay 1,650 gp per week to train. The identity of trainers, and their locations within the community, are listed below by class.

Fighters: Fighters may train with the knights of the Azure Shield, under the supervision of their arms master, Martin Hadellor (7th-level fighter). See AK-1.

Rangers: The chief huntswoman of the Lady Alexia, Teodora Balcingor (7th-level ranger), is willing to train rangers (see AK-2).

Paladins: The primary guardian of the temple of Mitra (AK-7) is one Gesteon Probus (6th-level paladin). He will train paladins but will attempt to convert them to Mitra in the process.

Magic Users: The ability of magic users to train is more complicated, as the expectation within the Archontean Empire is that magic users will train in the facilities of the collegium (see World of Archontos appendix) to which they belong. As none of the collegia has established an outpost in Gosterwick yet, this poses a problem. Happily, an enterprising and venal young wizard has attempted to solve this problem. Recognizing that she could not open a 'school' of magic, since this would compete with the collegia, Lyssandra Astorion (7th-level magic user) has instead opened an 'Arcane Practitioners Club' on the outskirts of Gosterwick (AK-30). Members pay heavy weekly rates (equivalent to training rates) for the opportunity to come and use the club's small library, alchemical laboratory, and practice grounds. Of course, members are free to seek guidance from other members, and Lyssandra and her assistant, Pelteon Greywand (6th-level illusionist) spend most of their time providing such 'guidance'.

Clerics: Several of the temples are staffed by priests experienced enough (and willing) to train clerics. Good clerics could seek out Jador the Just (9th-level female Wiskin cleric), chief priestess of the temple of Mitra (AK-7), or Vivian (9th-level male Thorcin cleric), chief priest of the temple of Demma (AK-9). Neutral clerics should probably look for Halidor the Observant (7th-level male Thorcin cleric), chief priest of the temple of Lucreon (AK-10). Those aligned with evil are best advised to seek training from Urdenna Belst (8th-level female Archontean cleric), chief priest of the temple of Heschius Ban (AK-8).

Druids: Even though the nearest Druid's Circle is some distance away (50 miles to the east, in the Old Forest), the Circle has dispatched a representative to watch affairs in Gosterwick. Fael Valdorsdot is the representative (6th-level female half-elf druid). Unsurprisingly, Fael spends a lot of time wandering in the woods and streams around Gosterwick, but she can be reached through a contact at the Grain Hall (AK-18). It may take 2-6 days for her to be available.

Thieves: Thief characters should approach the local chapter of the Benevolent Brotherhood. This can be accomplished by making the appropriate signs and uttering the appropriate code phrases in the public spaces of Gosterwick. The public chapter house of the Benevolent Brotherhood is located near the docks (AK-5). If asked, the receptionist, Shirley, will advise those seeking training to leave a message for Anders the Snake. The Brotherhood will then contact the thief PCs to arrange training. Thief PCs of levels 1-3 will be trained by Reesa the Hammer, who works as a bartender at the Muddy Puddle (AK-26). Those of levels 4-5 will be trained by Anders the Snake (AK-5). For thieves of levels 6-9, however, a meeting must first be arranged with Anders or Reesa; if either of these two can be convinced of the good intentions (sic) and bona fides of the PCs, he/she will arrange a meeting with Wicktrimmer, the Elder Brother of Gosterwick (10th-level imperial goblin thief). Wicktrimmer meets such PCs incognito in the cemetery for an initial interview; training will then take place in a warehouse near the docks. Wicktrimmer usually only trains those who tithe appropriately and perform a special 'job' for him.

Assassins: As yet there is no chapter of the Vengeance Factor in Gosterwick, so training with the official order of assassins (the Vengeance Factor) is impossible. Still, a freelance assassin, Revet Faidelsson (7th-level male half elf assassin) has taken up quiet residence at the Yellow Cloak (AK-21). Revet will train those she finds worthy. Anders the Snake (AK-5) and Wicktrimmer (AK-17) know of Revet's line of work and can direct assassin PCs to Revet.

Locations in Gosterwick

The inhabitants of Gosterwick informally divide the town into five districts. These districts are in addition to the Keep and Residence, which form their own micro-communities. The first district is the Upper Market, which occupies the southern bailey of the Azure Keep. It is known for expensive shops and snobby citizens. The Under Keep district comprises the structures at the eastern end of the town, between the two lobes of the ridge; its main street is Keep Row. This district is relatively poor and seedy, with mostly wooden houses and structures. The Market District comprises the structures around the Central Market (AK-22) and is marked by larger buildings and more general prosperity. The Incense District (so named from the incense produced by the temples on the neighboring hill) is the northernmost district and has a divided identity. The areas of the Incense District around the Golden Road are wealthy and prestigious, with free-standing town homes of the wealthier burgesses; the areas to the east, however, by Totey Lake and the Water Gate, are poorer, with smaller, multi-family structures. The fifth district is known as the Outs and is used contemptuously to describe the multitude of cheap, quickly-built structures on the west side of town.

The Walls to Come

As yet, only the hill and ridge where the Azure Keep, the Residence, and the Upper Market are located have been fortified. The bulk of the town currently lacks walls. Yet Lady Alexia's ambitions are quite grand, and she hopes to enclose the town with impressive walls that will allow plenty of population growth. To this end she has had her men dig a small ditch and mound (only 3' tall) to indicate the course of the walls to come. It is transparent to all who view the mound that it will take many years and much treasure to build the projected walls.

The Three City Gates

Alexia envisions three mighty gates to her fully-developed town. All three have been built, even though only one currently serves any function. To the east, by the lake, is the Water Gate. A gatehouse anchored by two 15'-diameter stone towers blocks the narrow strand between the ridge and the lake. This is the only gate that is currently incorporated into the actual structure of the town. The Imperial Gate, which naturally lies at the foot of Imperial Row, stands proudly amid empty meadows. The towers of its gatehouse are 20' in diameter; as of yet it lacks a door. The Stone Gate lies to the west, at the foot of Stone Street. This is the least developed of the gates; as yet it is only a wooden structure, without grandeur or defensive value.

The Waters

Gosterwick and the Keep about a tributary of the Swift River that locals call The Long Run. The Long Run runs along the foothills west of Arden Vul before forming a small lake just north of the town. The lake has been called Totey Lake by the local Thorcinga for centuries; few recall that its original name was Thoth's Eye, and none recall that the priests of Thoth had an interest in the lake (GM: this could be a hint for future adventure development). The lake is fairly shallow, except in its center; it is home to numerous species of edible fish.

Other Businesses in Gosterwick

In addition to the shops, craftsmen, and enterprises of note listed below, Gosterwick is home to the following: 3 bakers, a brewer, 3 butchers, 3 carpenters, 1 wheel/cartwright, another moneylender,

2 fishmongers, 3 general stores, a salter/spice merchant, 6 more neighborhood taverns, 2 general leatherworkers, 1 specialized leatherworker who can make leather armor, 2 stonemasons, 2 masons, 3 millers, a sawmill, 4 potteries, 9 simple scribes, 3 other notaries, 2 lawyers, 2 blacksmiths, 15 weavers/spinners/carders, 5 tailors, 5 furriers, an additional brothel, 1 herbalist/apothecary, 2 barbers, a thatcher, a bowyer/fletcher, a candlemaker, another jeweler, and a ropemaker.

AK-1: The Azure Keep

The keep is sited atop a curved ridge that rises 45' above the flatlands surrounding it. The central tower of the keep is 50' square, with four above-ground floors (plus the roof level) and two below-ground cellars. The cylindrical roof reaches nearly 65' above the ridge and is sheathed with sky-blue porcelain tiles. Access to the keep is via wooden stairs rising to doors set into the keep walls at the level of the first floor (in other words, there is no ground-floor access). Numerous arrow slits, or windows, dot the walls of the first, second and third floors; each window can be shuttered from within the keep. The roof level has four larger openings in its walls that allow ballistae to fire at attackers from all directions. Although the square tower is the oldest and most recognizable element of the keep, the keep also comprises two walled baileys lying to the north and south of the tower. In the northern bailey may be found the stables of the Order, as well as a stone barracks and residence for the knights and their guests.

The keep is governed by Sept Commander Horatius Gesellion. Three Knight Commanders assist him: Gaius Christopher Relleion, Martin Hadellor, and Lucia Nemead. The remaining 27 knights are divided into 3 conrois, or troops, of nine knights, each led by one of the Knight Commanders. Each of the knights hand-picks his/her own squire.

The Azure Keep is home to 31 knights, 31 squires, and approximately 65 grooms, lackeys, servants, cooks, and various support staff.

Services and Personalities

The knights have their own stable, smith, farrier, leatherworker, and bowyer and fletcher. Only knights or their very close friends can make use of these services.

Horatius Gesellion, 9th-level male Archontean fighter and Sept Commander of the Knights of the Azure Shield.

Gaius Christopher Relleion, 6th-level male Archontean fighter, leader of First Conroi

Martin Hadellor, 7th-level male Archontean fighter, arms master for the Knights, leader of the Second Conroi

Lucia Nemead, 6th-level female Archontean fighter, leader of the Third Conroi

AK-2: The Residence

The northern, fortified bailey of the Keep complex is home to a large stone palace, where Lady Alexia resides. The residence takes the form of a basic, three-story rectangle. The ground floor holds 'public' spaces, including a grand audience hall, a library, a formal dining room, and the kitchens. The second floor holds Alexia's personal apartments, her study, and her treasury. The third floor is devoted to rooms for servants and guests. Alexia is somewhat reclusive, preferring to remain in the Residence most of the time. It is not widely known that she is a talented mage, with an interest in water magic. Alexia is unlikely to meet with random visitors, leaving such duties to her steward, Freydis. Only those whom she trusts, or whom she has identified as being capable of serving her interests, will earn the coveted private interview. Alexia is engaged in a long-term struggle for influence in Burdock's Valley with her half-brother, Iskander. Iskander managed to convince the Emperor to award lordship over the valley to him, over the strenuous objections of Alexia. Alexia has decided to retaliate indirectly, by founding Gosterwick and attempting to win the allegiance of the local farming and merchant families. Recognizing that their dispute will shortly come to a head, Alexia is also hiring capable adventurers to search Arden Vul for the four lost pieces of archonal regalia; she believes that if she could obtain these minor artifacts, her claims will be given greater credence. The regalia are the bone ring of Jagri-Naz (area 5-74), the tablet of the beacon (9-107), the ebon spear (SL5-13B), and the iron circlet of Ghanor (3-127A). Alexia is served by a staff of fifteen and a complement of ten personal guards.

Services and Personalities

Alexia can arrange for healing services and the provision of basic equipment for those whom she has taken into service. She can also supply up to ten potions of healing to such persons at a slight discount (350 gp/potion).

Lady Alexia Basileon, the 'Green Lady', 7th-level female Archontean magic user and aristocrat

Freydis the Stern, female Wiskin aristocrat and no-nonsense steward of the Residence

Teodora Balcingor (7th-level ranger), chief hunter and primary advisor to Lady Alexia

AK-3: Kaelo's Bathhouse

This sprawling structure occupies three once-distinct but now connected stone buildings lying along the river front, just inside the Water Gate. The buildings have been reconceived as Archontean-style bath-houses: the main entrance is through the middle building, which leads to the tepidarium, or warm bath. From there, visitors can move either north to the frigidarium (cold bath) or south to the calidarium (hot bath). On the second floor above the calidarium are a set of sauna rooms, while above the tepidarium are some private rooms for conversation and casual dining. The three floors above the frigidarium are divided into small private chambers, where the prostitutes (male and female) licensed by Kaelo entertain customers. The bathhouse is a democratic institution in Archontean culture; one is likely to encounter people of all classes here. Although many enjoy a rousing debate or argument at the baths, brawling and/or physical confrontation is considered bad form; indeed, Kaelo will have his guys apprehend and expel any who break his rules. Kaelo pays the Benevolent Brotherhood a portion of his monthly earnings for security and protection; he is also one of only four persons who knows the identity of Wicktrimmer as Elder Brother (AK-17).

Services and Personalities

It costs 1 sp to visit the baths. Additional costs are imposed for additional services, including towels, oils, massages, refreshments, and an assignation with the working boys or girls.

Kaelo, male Archontean, owner of the bathhouse

30 prostitutes

10 attendants and 10 guards

AK-4: The Bailiff's Truncheon

Located at the foot of the hill holding the Residence, this tough, seedy bar occupies the ground floor of a wooden triplex. The bar is cheap, dirty, and usually crowded. It is an open secret that the Truncheon has two sizable basements, the second of which holds nightly bare-knuckle fights. Although Egill is not himself a member of the Benevolent Brotherhood, he provides a monthly gift to the Brotherhood out of respect (and for protection). As a result, there are almost always several members of the Brotherhood present in his tavern; they can point inquirers to the Brotherhood chapter house (AK-5).

Services and Personalities

Alcoholic beverages. Gambling on bare-knuckle fights.

Egill Flat-nose, 3rd-level male Wiskin fighter, owner and gregarious bartender

AK-5: The Benevolent Brotherhood

As is the case in most Archontean towns, the empire-wide thieves guild known as the Benevolent Brotherhood operates a public chapter house in Gosterwick. The chapter house is unassuming, taking the form of one section of a triplex near the docks. The ground floor of the chapter house is open to the public; its contents are few, namely a receptionist at a central desk and two banks of wooden pigeon-holes on the flanking walls. The receptionist, whose name is always 'Shirley', greets visitors cheerfully and helps them to fill out a request for services; she also offers advice about which “brother” is best suited to answer that request. Petitioners then file their request in one of the pigeonholes (each is marked by the symbol of one of the Brotherhood’s members). The members of the guild check their boxes after hours and respond individually to any pertinent requests. Requests are often traded among members, especially if a job is unsuitable to the chosen thief or if the job requires a more substantial budget or team. Three different women who perform the ‘Shirley’ role in rotating shifts. All three are only receptionists; they have no thief skills and know the locations and/or identities of none of the brothers. The second and third floors of the triplex hold mostly-empty rooms where brothers in the guild can meet, plan, and train. The brothers use hidden entrances to access the chapter house; they never walk in through the front door. It should be clear that the Brotherhood is never required to accept a job proposed by a citizen; it typically refuses jobs that require murder, assault of important imperial officials, or theft of imperial property. In addition, the Brotherhood also mounts its own operations.

Brotherhood Structure

Seven cells of thieves, or ‘brothers’, operate in Gosterwick. Each is led by a ‘big brother’. While brothers can recognize each other through the thieves’ cant, customarily there is little interaction between the cells. The two ranking Big Brothers are Reesa the Hammer (AK-4), whose crew specializes in protection and extortion, and Anders the Snake (AK-5), whose crew contains the best second-story men and women. Anders and Reesa are the only two Big Brothers who know the identity of the Elder Brother of Gosterwick, namely Wicktrimmer, owner of the Rarities Factor (AK-X17). Wicktrimmer meets monthly with Anders and Reesa to hear reports, plan larger jobs, and exchange tithes. The only other individuals who know of Wicktrimmer’s secret life are Kaelo, the bathhouse owner (AK-3), and Lady Alexia herself (AK-2).

Services and Personalities

Citizens can petition the Brotherhood to take on jobs. The cost of jobs (threats, extortion, thievery, robbery, assault, etc.) varies by the job and its difficulty.

Shirley, female Thorcin ‘receptionist’

Anders the Snake, 6th-level male Archontean thief

AK-6: The House of the Gods

This large structure appears quite impressive, as it resembles a large Corinthian-style temple. The roof is 20’ above the floor and is supported by a set of stone columns on all four sides. Within are freestanding shrines to most of the Archontean, Wisikin and Thorcin deities who do not have their own temples. These shrines vary in size and sophistication, but most typically contain nothing more than a covered altar, a locked stone chest for offerings, and a variety of highly personalized ‘decorations’ meant to illustrate the god’s main principles or avatars. Since none of the shrines has its own dedicated cultic precincts, they typically are staffed by volunteer (if highly dedicated!) lay priests.

Services and Personalities

None of the shrines has permanent classed clerics attached to it. There is a 2-20% chance (depending on the popularity of the deity) in question that a classed cleric of a particular deity is visiting the shrine for 1-3 days. Such visiting clerics will be of levels 2-7 (roll randomly). They are typically uninterested in providing extensive services (healing, etc.) for fellow devotees; only the most severe need will cause a visitor to aid adventuring parties. Those seeking clerical services are better served by visiting one of the permanent temples.

Each shrine has 1-10 lay priests who maintain the shrine, collect and make use of offerings, etc.

AK-7: Temple of Mitra

Mitra (LG) is a popular deity associated with justice, protection, serving the weak, and the cleansing properties of fire. The temple of Mitra in Gosterwick is a circular structure of stone, fronted by a portico with an impressive pediment. The pediment shows Mitra, dressed in his shining mail, striding among worshippers, dispensing justice, and punishing the guilty. The main cult object is found within the circular structure; it takes the form of a statue of the god, dressed in an Archontean-style toga, holding the scales of justice forward in his left hand. Worshippers place offerings in the right-hand side of the scales, hoping that Mitra will ‘balance the scales’ by helping their causes. Cleverly set into wall circling the main shrine are the apartments and bureaucratic offices of the cult.

Services and Personalities

The clerics offer healing and other spell services to the worthy. Gesteon Probus, a paladin of Mitra, is a champion of the weak and offers training to paladins. Jador the Just will train any good-aligned clerics.

Jador the Just, 9th-level female Wisikin cleric of Mitra, chief priestess of the temple

Gesteon Probus, 6th-level male Archontean paladin of Mitra, defender of the temple

3 3rd-level clerics of Mitra

4 2nd-level fighters

AK-8: Temple of Heschius Ban

Heschius Ban (LE) is one of the most popular of Archontean gods, since his ethos of might and the inevitability of power appeals not only to the actual powerful but to the general Archontean sense of their empire’s manifest destiny. His proud temple lies at the rear of the hill of the Gods. Like the temple of Lucreon (AK-10), its form is that of the classic three-chamber temple. The outer chamber, or ante-cella, is for conducting the simplest rituals and for allowing the celebrants to properly prepare the congregants for the rituals held in the inner chamber, or cella. The third chamber, or postern, abuts the cella but provides no connection to the inner fane; the apartments and offices of the clergy are found there. The main cult statue shows Heschius Ban in the armor of an Archontean legionary, standing with one foot on a trampled enemy and holding a whip and a set of shackles in his hands. Celebrants are encouraged to offer gifts of wealth into the open mouth of the defeated enemy and also to shed a bit of their own blood on top of the trampled enemy’s head. As a result, the cella smells strongly of blood. During the most solemn rituals, the cella is closed to all but the most powerful worshippers; on these occasions, a series of slaves procured in Narsileon are sacrificed to the god, with the clergy and powerful laity jointly participating in the sacrifice.

Services and Personalities

The clergy provide healing to those who seek it (although with some condescension, as to need healing is to show weakness).

Urdenna Belst will train evil-aligned clerics.

Urdenna Belst, 8th-level female Archontean cleric of dread Heschiu Ban

4 3rd-level clerics of Heschiu Ban

AK-9: Temple of Demma

Demma (LG) is a very popular deity, as she represents bountiful harvest, motherhood, and the mercy of rulers. Demma's temple is shaped like a larger version of the tithe barns that dot the rural countryside. Two stories tall, it is made of stone with pediments showing the goddess disbursing seeds to faithful humans. Inside, a peristyle supports a second floor while leaving the central space open to the roof. Within the peristyle is a 30'x10' plot of ever-fertile earth. What is planted in this plot varies by the month, but thanks to Demma it is always fully-grown and ripe: one may find wheat, barley, millet, hops, oats, rye, or sorghum growing here, always at peak ripeness. Twice per day, a magical rainfall drops on this plot from the roof. A modest statue of the goddess, 15' tall, rises from the center of the plot: she appears as an Archontean woman dressed in formal toga, with a circlet formed of wheat stalks. The second floor contains apartments for the priests, a barracks, supply rooms, and several meeting rooms.

Services and Personalities

The lesser clerics regularly offer spell services, although precedent is given to followers of Demma and the rural poor. Vivian can provide more advanced cures and will train good-aligned clerics.

Vivian, 9th-level male Thorcin cleric of Demma, chief priest

4 3rd-level clerics of Demma

6 2nd-level Archontean fighters

AK-10: Temple of Lucreon

Lucreon (LN) is one of those deities who is rarely loved, but often placated; many merchants seek his blessing before a new venture, and even lesser folk are known to seek his fortune with a few coppers of offering. The shrine to Lucreon is a classic, three-chamber structure. The front is the ante-cella, in which the clerics and the devout congregate. The middle chamber is known as the cella, and it is here that the main rituals take place. On the opposite side of the cella is the postern; it is unconnected to the cella and holds the administrative offices and apartments of the clergy. The main cultic object within the cella is the colossal granite statue of Lucreon, dressed as an Archontean factor associate, holding a massive bag of coins in his outstretched right hand. A large wooden chest sits below the money bag; believers are encouraged to place their offerings into the chest. Lucreon's shrine is home to one of the most impressive mysteries of the temples of Gosterwick. As soon as a coin drops to the bottom of the wooden offering box, it magically appears in the air above the statue of Lucreon and falls 10' into the god's open money bag. As a result, during important rituals, a near constant stream of coins may be seen to come clinking down from thin air to fill the god's bag. It should be noted that when the temple is closed for the night, the clerics empty Lucreon's bag so that it will be ready to perform the mystery on the morrow.

Services and Personalities

The clerics will perform healing, but a bit more grudgingly than their counterparts in the good-aligned temples. Halidor will train any cleric who pays his fees.

Halidor the Observant, 7th-level male Thorcin cleric, and chief priest, of Lucreon

6 2nd-level clerics of Lucreon

5 3rd-level fighters

AK-11: Residence of Chairduster the Metallurgist

Chairduster, the finest gold- and silver-smith in Gosterwick, lives in this spacious townhome with his wife, Facetcutter. Although his shop is located elsewhere (AK-28), Chairduster has his workshop here, in the basement (forge) and third floor. The first and second floors are given over to their well-appointed living spaces. Chairduster is truly gifted (Excellent skill level jeweler, and Superb skill level gemcutter) and is capable of creating jewelry and all other sorts of gold- or silver-based objects. Facetcutter spends her days managing their shop in the Upper Market. The residence is guarded by a war dog and by two private security guards. Chairduster's workshop contains 5,000 gp in unfinished gold, 2,500 gp in unfinished silver, and 1,000 gp in unfinished platinum. Their personal liquid wealth is found in a set of exquisite platinum, jade, and jet jewelry, as well as a large collection of loose gems to which Chairduster adds as he continues to make a profit. Chairduster pays a monthly 50 gp fee to The Benevolent Brotherhood (AK-5), ensuring his family and business are never targets of their profession, as well as to inform him of any third-party requests for their services against him.

Services and Personalities

There are no services here. All business is transacted at the shop (AK-28).

Chairduster, male imperial goblin goldsmith and silversmith

Facetcutter, female imperial goblin, shopkeeper (only present in the evenings)

Bas the war dog

2 private security guards, 2nd-level Wisikin fighters

AK-12: The Stunned Acolyte Inn

An elegant, four-story, stone-and-wood structure, the Stunned Acolyte faces the Golden Road and is a mere stone's throw from the Hill of the Gods. The ground floor holds reception, a private dining room, the kitchen, and a wood-paneled common room. The upper floors are divided into rooms for rent; most are singles, but there are two suites on the second floor. The Stunned Acolyte prides itself on elegance and quality and has the prices to prove it. It attracts the wealthier clientele, naturally. The innkeepers have even been known to refuse service to those they feel 'don't seem like our kind of people.'

Services and Personalities

The Acolyte is known for its fine dining. A 'simple' meal runs 1 gp, but a full sampling of Tador's genius can run to 15 gp/person. A night in a single room is 2 gp/head (max. of three persons per room); the suites go for 10 and 15 gp/night respectively. Although the Acolyte doesn't have its own stables, Ulf has an arrangement with Sakeon (AK-31) to stable visitors' mounts for 1 gp/night.

Ulf Vareon, the owner and innkeeper, with his wife Helena

Tador, the gifted chef

Priasson Kaledor, merchant from Narsileon and, secretly, a spy for Keko the Lame, come to scout out exactly what Lady Alexia is up to in Gosterwick.

AK-13: The House of Sight

The House of Sight, colloquially known as the Drome, is housed in this comfortable, 2-story wood structure. This branch of the Archontean bureaucracy is responsible for the imperial postal service, diplomacy, and intelligence gathering. The logothete in charge of the House of Sight is Audun Yellow-Eyes, a man of Wiskin birth (but 'more Archontean than the Archontean' in his loyalties). He was appointed by Lady Alexia and has not yet been recognized in his office by his alleged superiors in Narsileon. The first floor contains a reception and audience chamber, several private interview rooms, and a small guardroom. The cellar contains cells for prisoners, and a lead-lined vault for storing treasure and valuable information. The second floor holds Audun's quarters, a map room, and a scrying room. Audun does not yet have a team of Black Lotus special operatives at his disposal, although he has not let this fact become known in Gosterwick.

Services and Personalities

Citizens typically avoid the House of Sight. Some of the richest and best-connected townspeople might seek to send important and rapid messages through the mundane postal services that Audun offers. Most citizens, however, are afraid of falling under the Drome's scrutiny.

Audun Yellow-Eyes, male Wiskin aristocrat and logothete of the House of Sight

3 4th-level Archontean fighters as guards

AK-14: Torunn the Smith

Torunn's shop is the largest of the three smithies in Gosterwick, mostly because Torunn, a formidable Wiskin woman, is the most talented smith in town. She runs her smithy with an iron fist, directing her teams of apprentices in projects mundane and extraordinary. Most of the work is of the mundane variety, producing objects for home use; her apprentices typically produce this work. Torunn reserves her time and talent for higher profile projects. In addition to fancy metalwork for domestic and civic use, she can produce all the sorts of metal weapons and armor found in the manual (except plate armor, which doesn't exist in Magae). She charges only 110% of list price for these items.

Services and Personalities

Mundane metalwork. Weapons and metal armor (at 110% of list price).

Torunn the smith, female Wiskin

6 apprentices

AK-15: The Private House

This well-appointed town house is 25' square. It is home to the Private House, that branch of the imperial bureaucracy charged with administering the estates and financial perquisites belonging to the imperial family. As yet, the imperial family owns no property in Gosterwick save for this structure, so the duties of the logothete are limited to collecting the taxes which by tradition belong to the emperor: market taxes (a flat fee per vendor, plus 10% of sales), a cartage tax (1 sp per axle leaving the city), and 50% of all proceeds from High Justice. The current logothete is Aedelwine the Fair, an unassuming woman who was appointed by Lady Alexia. Aedelwine relies on the House of Coins (AK-19) to perform the actual collection of revenues.

Services and Personalities

Most citizens have little reason to visit the Private House.

Aedelwine the Fair, female Thorcin aristocrat and logothete of the Private House

AK-16: The Old Well Tavern

This 2-story wooden structure is marked by numerous gables, dormers, and unusual architectural obtrusions. Taking its name from the covered well next door, this watering hole is popular with middle- and upper-class residents. There are bars on each floor, and numerous alcoves for private conversations. The second floor also holds six private rooms, which are used both for private gatherings and for assignations arranged with the escorts who work in the tavern. The male and female escorts are known as the Plums and are of high quality and discretion; inquiries about retaining a Plum must be made directly with Laedion Verr, who is protective of his boys and girls.

Services and Personalities

Alcoholic drinks and escort services.

Laedion Verr, male Archontean, owner and chief bartender

Verr's Plums, seven escorts

AK-17: The Rarities Factor

The newest of the merchant factors in Gosterwick was recently founded by Wicktrimmer, an imperial goblin and retired adventurer. His niche industry is antiquities, particularly those recovered from ruined tombs, dungeons, and other locations (such as the nearby Arden Vul). Of course, to compete with the other markets, Wicktrimmer also offers the other basic services of a factor, including banking services and caravan services. To this end, Wicktrimmer's location near the Grain Hall has ensured that he is starting to receive contracts for shipping goods other than antiquities. The ground floor of the three-story wooden structure is given over to the reception area where associates conduct business with clients. The second floor holds offices and a dining room, where Wicktrimmer periodically entertains his old adventuring buddies. The third floor is devoted to his personal apartment, plus a guest suite. The vaults are in the basement and are, according to local gossip, protected by both an earth elemental and the ghostly gurgles of a drowned goblin (relics, again, from his adventuring days). Wicktrimmer oversees a staff of 3 associates, six clerical workers, and four tough-looking mercenaries. At any given time, the Factor holds 25,000 gp worth of goods in its vaults. Wicktrimmer's sizable personal wealth and substantial stock of magic items are held in a heavily trapped and secret location within his apartments.

Unbeknownst to any of the staff of the Rarities Factor, Wicktrimmer is a high-level thief and the ranking member (i.e., the Elder Brother) of the chapter of the Benevolent Brotherhood in Gosterwick. This secret is known to only four persons in Gosterwick: Lady Alexia (AK-2), Kaelo (AK-3), Reesa the Hammer (AK-4), and Anders the Snake (AK-5). Wicktrimmer prefers to conceal his role in the Brotherhood behind the (successful) front of the Rarities Factor; the factor also provides a convenient cover for smuggling hot goods in and out of Gosterwick. Wicktrimmer meets monthly with Reesa and Anders in a private room above the tepidarium at Kaelo's bathhouse (AK-3); there the trio set the agenda for the Brotherhood's activities for the coming month and Wicktrimmer's lieutenants pass on to him his share of the monthly proceeds. Those needing to locate the Elder Brother of Gosterwick may thus find it difficult to do so. They must convince one of the four to whom he has confided his secret of their bona fides and of their need. Low-level thieves (levels 1-5) will be ignored. Only those with important information, or those of levels 6-9 needing training) will be directed by one of the four to Wicktrimmer. Even then, Wicktrimmer never meets outsiders at the Factor Offices. Instead, he meets such persons incognito at the cemetery. If he is willing to train thieves of the appropriate level, it will take place in a hired warehouse near the docks. He will attempt, almost always successfully, to maintain the secrecy of this 'straight' identity. Wicktrimmer is remarkably well-informed about what goes on in Gosterwick, thanks to a potent magic item that allows him to talk with cats.

Services and Personalities

The Rarities Factor provides the usual banking services: deposits of valuables worth at least 150 gp at a rate of .75% of their worth per month. Caravan services are also regularly available, whether it be hiring an entire caravan (rates vary) or adding letters (15 gp/letter) or goods (18% of the value of each mule's worth of goods) to an existing caravan. As of yet, the Rarities Factor only has branches in Newmarket and Narsileon; it hopes to expand to other sites on Irthu in the near future.

Wicktrimmer, imperial goblin and Chief Associate of the Rarities Factor (also a 10th-level thief, and Elder Brother of the Benevolent Brotherhood)

AK-18: The Grain Hall

One of the largest structures in Gosterwick, this cavernous, wooden hall was built and is maintained by the local Farmers' Collective. The Collective acts as a 'craft' guild for the farmers active within a three-day walk of Gosterwick. Members of the Collective can store their surplus grain in the Grain Hall, where the Collective's permanent staff hold periodic auctions to those in need of wheat, barley, oats, hops, millet, hay, and the like. The ground floor is 20' tall and is usually crammed with bales, bags, or barrels of foodstuffs. A second floor holds the offices of the Collective's staff, as well as an apartment for the manager and eight tiny bedrooms for visiting members of the Collective. A basement is accessible via several large trap doors. The Collective owns a piece of the carting business located just to the west of the Grain Hall. Despite the dusty, fire-trap nature of the Hall, the Collective is widely respected in Gosterwick for its wealth and influence.

Services and Personalities

Those in need of bulk foodstuffs can come to the monthly auction to bid on whatever is available.

Isidor Quick-Tongue, manager and auctioneer

Fael Valdorsdot, 6th-level female half-elf druid

AK-19: The House of Coins

This two-story structure is entirely made of stone, with a slate roof. Aside from two entrances on the ground floor and four windows on the second floor, no means of entrance are visible. The ground floor contains a public reception/service area and a guardroom. The vaults in which tax revenues are stored are in the basement. The upper story holds offices and the residence of Thereon Glesteon, the aristocrat whom Lady Alexia has named as logothete of the House of Coins. This standard unit of Archontean bureaucracy is responsible for collecting general taxes from citizens of the empire and for supplying monies for approved public expenditures. The former is the responsibility of the logothete, who employs a group of five 'revenue agents' to collect the two basic taxes: the poll tax of 1 sp per person per quarter, and the property tax of 1% of the value of property (assessed annually). Expenditures are suggested and approved by an executive committee comprised of Lady Alexia, Eusebia the Thesmothete, and the three logothetes.

Services and Personalities

Most citizens rarely visit the House of Coins, except to contest (usually futilely) tax assessments.

Theron Glesteon, male Archontean aristocrat, and logothete of the House of coins

8 elite guardsmen, 5th-level Archontean fighters
Bureaucrats

AK-20: The Silent Factor

The mysterious Silent Factor has established its presence in Gosterwick here, in a large structure facing Stone Street. It is a two-story stone structure whose existing windows have been closed by permanent shutters. The ground floor holds interview rooms for meeting with clients, as well as offices for the associates. The upper floor holds apartments for the associates and the hidden vaults; the basement holds the main vaults. Alone of the major empire-wide factors, the Silent Factor believes that anonymity in business transactions ensures that egos, rivalries, and enmities do not spoil good business.

As a result, all associates of the Silent Factor dress in head-to-foot robes made of red silk that conceal their bodies; this attire includes a full, burqa-style head covering. In addition, associates refuse to speak to non-associates (and to each other, when in the presence of non-associates); instead they use sign language. Since most non-associates are not familiar with these signals, the Factor grudgingly employs a handful of 'translators' whose job it is to meet clients, evaluate their requests, and vocalize the associates' hand signals during any negotiations. Those seeking the services of the Silent Factor must approach the public door, knock loudly, and state their business through an eyehole. Visitors are admitted by a translator, who listens to their business, and conducts them to an appropriate interview room; there, three associates from the factor will listen and negotiate (through the translator).

Like all the factors, the Silent Factor offers banking services, transport services, and communication services. The Chief Associate in Gosterwick is Warin the Tall; he oversees 10 associates, 3 translators, 10 staff, and 10 guardsmen. At any given time, the Silent Factor is storing 50,000 gp worth of goods and items in its secure vaults.

Services and Personalities

Despite the off-putting demeanor of the associates, the Silent Factor is highly esteemed for its discretion and absolute neutrality; indeed, many consider it the most secure of the Factors. Many make use of its banking services. One can deposit wealth (a minimum of 500 gp) for a 1.25% service fee per month; withdrawals are possible at any time, whether from the branch into which the deposit was made or by letter of credit at any other branch of the Factor within the Archontean Empire. Frequent or high-volume depositors may be offered a more favorable rate of .75% per month.

In addition, the Factor will arrange and conduct caravans to and from any other major settlement within the Empire; the costs of such caravans must be negotiated on an ad hoc basis. It is sometimes possible to add one's merchandise to an already-constituted caravan; the Factor will typically be willing to accept any number of sealed letters and up to one mule's worth of goods. There is a 33% cumulative chance per week that such a caravan is available. The cost of sending a letter in this way is 25 gp; the cost for adding a mule's worth of goods is 200 gp or 20% of the appraised value of the goods, whichever is higher.

Ellisif, female Wiskin, translator

Warin the Tall, 6th-level male Thorcin thief, and Chief Associate of the Silent Factor

Neftali, 6th-level male Khumus magic user, associate of the Silent Factor

AK-21: The Yellow Cloak Inn

The Yellow Cloak occupies one of the oldest structures in Gosterwick on a favorable site adjoining the Central Market. The main structure is painted imperial yellow and is 5 stories tall. Facing Stone Street, the ground floor of the main structure holds reception, a lounge, and the upper-class common room, while the upper floors are divided into individual rooms for rent. The subsidiary structure faces Imperial Row and is newer, being only three stories tall; the ground floor holds the kitchen and main common room, while the upper two floors contain several dormitory-style bunkrooms. The Yellow Cloak is the larger of the two inns in Gosterwick and has a more eclectic clientele.

Services and Personalities

Meals in upper-class common room range from 5 sp to 5 gp; those in the main common room range from 1 sp for soup and bread, to 2 sp for a merchant's meal, all the way up to 2 gp for a rich meal. A night in a single room is 1 gp/head (max. of three persons per room). A bunkbed in one of the dormitories is 1 sp per night. Visitors with horses can stable them for 5 sp/night at a stable behind the inn.

Margot the Red, female Thorcin innkeeper, and her husband, Bricwine, who tends bar in the upper-class common room.

Helle, a female Wiskin, is the chief bartender in the main common room

Revet Faidelsson, 7th-level female half elf assassin. Revet has taken a room for six months while she looks for work.

AK-22: The Central Market

In the center of Gosterwick, where four major roads meet, lies the central square. Here a market is held twice a week, on Totsday and Demmasday. The Totsday market runs from noon until 8 PM, and is primarily concerned with foodstuffs: grain, flour, bread, ale, wine, fruit, vegetables, cuts of meat, pastries, prepared dishes, etc. The Demmasday market is larger and lasts from 7 AM to 10 PM. On Demmasday, one can still find foodstuffs, but booths stocking other items are also common: cloth, clothing, shoes, barber's services, useful metal wares for the home, rope, candles, pottery of all sorts and qualities, scribe's services, money changing, etc. Fish are not sold in the central market, however; one must visit the docks in the late afternoon to buy fish. On Totsday there is a 25% chance that 1-2 peddlers or traveling merchants will have set up shop with 'specialty items' (including dungeoneering equipment, archaeological remains, small bits of mundane treasure, etc. On Demmasday, this chance rises to 75% for 3-6 such peddlers; one of the peddlers might (10%) have a minor magic item or two for sale. Two patrols of the city guard (see AK-32) are present for each of the weekly markets. It should be noted that the central square is impassable to carts and horses when a market is taking place.

AK-23: House of the Thesmothete

This impressive, 30'-square, three-story structure abuts the Central Market and is the civic heart of Gosterwick. The first two stories are stone, while the third is wood. The ground floor holds an audience chamber plus public offices at which citizens can register complaints (for a fee), procure writs of summonses, and generally seek assistance for any civic matter. The second floor is dedicated to justice, with one large courtroom and offices for the three proedroi and seven chartoularii who perform most of the bureaucratic work. The upper floor is reserved for Eusebia Phokas's personal quarters. Visitors are met by chartoularii who evaluate requests or demands before deciding which merit the attention of one of the proedroi or of Eusebia herself.

Services and Personalities

As the chief executive ('mayor') of Gosterwick, all issues concerning the security, prosperity, expansion, and general welfare of the town are properly directed here. Wardens are officially enrolled in their offices here. All formal legal accusations of the level above 'low justice' (that is, justice of the domus, justice of the body and above), must be first registered here, with the complainant purchasing the appropriate writs to set the wheels of justice in motion.

Eusebia Phokas, female Archontean aristocrat and thesmothete

AK-24: The Prosperity Factor

This large home facing Imperial Way is home to the Prosperity Factor, one of the empire-wide merchant collectives. The building is stone for the ground and first floors, and wooden for the third floor. The ground floor holds the public Transaction Hall, where citizens can meet with one of the associates to negotiate business. The basement holds the secure vaults, where valuable coming to or from Gosterwick are stored; citizens who make use of the factor's banking services also store their wealth in the vaults. The upper floors are devoted to private meeting rooms (for more important customers) and the apartments of the associates of the factor. In Gosterwick, the Chief Associate is Beryl Gneiss, one of the very rare dwarfs to abandon dwarven society for the human world. Beryl Gneiss oversees a staff of six junior associates, ten support personnel, and eight heavily-armed guards. At any given time, the vaults contain 45,000 gp worth of goods of various types.

Services and Personalities

Banking services are reliable and discreet. One can deposit wealth (a minimum of 250 gp) for a 1% service fee per month; withdrawals are possible at any time, whether from the branch into which the deposit was made or by letter of credit at any other branch of the Factor within the Archontean Empire. Frequent or high-volume depositors may be offered a more favorable rate of .5% per month.

In addition, the Factor will arrange and conduct caravans to and from any other major settlement within the Empire; the costs of such caravans must be negotiated on an ad hoc basis. It is sometimes possible to add one's merchandise to an already-constituted caravan; the Factor will typically be willing to accept any number of sealed letters and up to one mule's worth of goods. There is a 25% cumulative chance per week that such a caravan is available. The cost of sending a letter in this way is 20 gp; the cost for adding a mule's worth of goods is 100 gp or 20% of the appraised value of the goods, whichever is higher.

Beryl Gneiss, 7th-level male dwarf fighter, and Chief Associate of the Prosperity Factor

Huguccio, 5th-level male Archontean magic user, and associate of the Prosperity Factor

8 4th-level male Archontean fighters, as guards

AK-25: Creon's Curios and Pawnshop

This large, dusty shop is located on the border of the Market and Under Keep districts. It is crammed with all manner of strange items, for Creon is a bit of an eccentric and collector. Although proud of his inventory, most of Creon's income comes from his pawnbroking; he offers loans at 25% of the value of the item, repayable in 1-4 months (depending on the customer). He also buys unusual items for 80% of their value and is happy to sell whatever is in his stock. Creon is interested in 'anything old', including decorative objects, rugs, small pieces of furniture, weapons, rare and/or unusual books or scrolls, high quality glassware or serving pieces, etc. Although not a magic user, he has a friend come in one the first of each month and cast detect magic on the inventory; until that point, there is a 2% chance that he has acquired a magic item of which he is unaware. There is also a chance that he has a couple of magic items of which he is already aware; these will be 1-3 potions (20%), 1 wand (10%), 1-3 minor magic items (5%). For magic items, he charges 125% of list price.

Services and Personalities

Buying and selling antiquities and antiques and pawnbroking.
Creon the Unctuous, male Archontean

AK-26: The Muddy Puddle

The Puddle (as it's known to its habitués) is one of the most well-known locations in the Under Keep district. It is a tough tavern, with some simple bar food service as well. A sprawling building of two stories, the ground floor common room is where working people come to drink, dice, and fight. The upstairs room is even more suspect and is the site where many criminal plots have been hatched. The chief bartender upstairs is Reesa the Hammer, an important member of the Benevolent Brotherhood; she carefully evaluates appeals for contact with the Elder Brother of Gosterwick (see AK-17), and only forwards requests for meetings if the petitioner can demonstrate his/her bona fides.

Services and Personalities

Alcohol of all types, ranging from 5 cp for very poor beer, to 1 sp for a pint of ale, to up to 10 gp for fancy wines and brandies. Bar food is typically 10 cp/serving.

Jocko, male Thorcin, owner and chief bartender of the ground floor common room

Reesa the Hammer, 4th-level female Archontean thief, chief bartender of the upstairs common room, and contact for the Benevolent Brotherhood.

AK-27: Jeremias the Money Changer

A cheerful but venal halfling named Jeremias is the most significant money lender and changer in Gosterwick. His main shop is in the walled Upper Market. In addition, he operates two stalls in the main part of town, one by the central market and one at the foot of the hill of the gods; the stalls are operated by his twin daughters, Marla and Cassie. Jeremias employs a team of well-paid and loyal guards to ensure the security of his operations; two are present at each location during working hours, and four guard his shop during the night. Jeremias keeps 5,000 gp in coins and another 5,000 gp in gems in his shop; if necessary, he can raise 10x these amounts within 2 weeks (the rest of his wealth is stored in Narsileon). The stalls hold only 500 gp in coins and 500 gp in gems; these sums are transferred to the main shop at night.

Services and Personalities

To change coins, Jeremias (and his daughters) charges 5% on amounts worth up to 1,000 gp and 1% on amounts worth more than 1,000 gp. The same rates apply for those seeking to exchange coins for gems. He will loan money, too, albeit at exorbitant rates: for loans up to 100 gp, he charges 12% interest per annum; for loans above 100 gp, the rate is 24% per annum. Repeat customers, however, can earn a discount. Those who have paid off two loans see the interest rates on their subsequent loans drop to 8% and 12%, respectively.

Jeremias Smallleaf, male halfling, money changer and moneylender.

Marla and Cassie, daughters of Jeremias

Eight private security guards, as 4th-level fighters

AK-28: Chairduster's Fine Metallurgy

The finest gold- and silver-smith in Gosterwick is Chairduster

the imperial goblin. Although he practices his craft in his home workshop (AK-11), his goods are sold here, in this impressive (and expensive) shop. The shop is usually staffed by his wife, Facetcutter. Facetcutter will buy objects made of those substances, provided they are of high quality; she pays 90% of list price for such objects. She also takes special orders for Chairduster to complete; if the order is expensive and/or complex, Chairduster will make an appointment with the customer at his shop. The shop is guarded by a war dog and by two private security guards. At any given time, the shop displays some 6,000-18,000 gp worth of gold objects.

Services and Personalities

Making and selling jewelry and other objects made of gold or silver; buying similar objects (for 90% of list price); gem cutting.

Facetcutter, female imperial goblin, shopkeeper

Basina the war dog

4 private security guards, 2nd-level Wiskin fighters

AK-29: Astableon the Scribe and Bookseller

Astableon's small shop is stuffed with over 400 codices and bound scrolls that he has collected over the past fifty years. Although he would prefer to discuss ancient history and philosophy with like-minded customers, most of his income is derived from writing letters and notarizing documents. Those seeking information on a given subject have a fairly good chance of discovering that Astableon has a volume on that subject: 60% for broad or general historical, philosophical, and/or religious topics; 40% for works on geology, biology, zoology and/or botany; 25% for fiction or 'popular' writing; 10% for theoretical works on magic or alchemy; and 5% for obscure, rare, or dangerous texts. There is a 5% chance to find a spell (level 1 to 4) or alchemical formula hidden within any obscure or rare work that Astableon has in stock. Astableon eagerly buys most texts, particularly older ones. Although he appears doddering and air-headed, Astableon is careful about concealing his liquid wealth; when he purchases books, he typically sets a price and then requests that customers return in 30 minutes to complete the transaction. His lockbox is hidden in a compartment beneath his desk, where it is guarded by explosive runes; it contains 2,250 gp in coin and gems. Astableon could raise 5x this sum in three weeks if necessary.

Services and Personalities

Basic scribe services; selling books and scrolls. He sells books at list price and buys them for 80% of list price.

Astableon the scribe, male Archontean

AK-30: The Arcane Practitioners' Club

Technically a private club catering to magic users and illusionists, the thinly-veiled raison d'être for the institution is the training of arcane casters who can't (or are unwilling to) get back to their collegium for 'official' training. The building is four stories tall, with the first three made of heavy granite and the top floor made of wood. The ground floor contains a kitchen, dining room, and lounge for members only. The second floor holds two alchemical laboratories. On the third floor is a library and a practice chamber. The fourth floor offers eight small apartments plus the owners' suite. Two basement levels provide training space for spell casters. Lyssandra Astorion and her partner, Pelteon Greywand, are adequate mages, but truly gifted entrepreneurs; the proceeds from their semi-illegal arcane training have already amounted to 20,000 gp in coin and gems. They put just enough money back into the club (in spell books, scrolls, components, and alchemical supplies) to make it attractive for training but are ready to flee if and when the authorities decide to close them down.

Services and Personalities

Training of arcane casters is the prime service, although Lyssandra will also sell spell components at 150% of list price; she has a 33% chance to have a given component.

Lyssandra Astorion, 7th-level, female Archontean magic user

Pelteon Greywand, 6th-level, male Archontean illusionist

AK-31: Livestock and Horse Market

Near the location of the future city walls is found this livestock pen and market. Cattle, sheep, goats, and other meat animals are driven here from surrounding ranches to be sold to the butchers, inns, knights, Residence, and so forth. The slaughtering is done in a closed shed separate from the animal pens. One (smallish) section of the yards is given over to the stabling of horses, both those intended for sale and those simply in need of stabling. While a decent number of horses is always available for purchase, these horses will be draft and riding horses, without special skills or training. Twin brothers - Sakeon and Trucleon - run the two sides of the enterprise.

Services and Personalities

Visitors can purchase entire sides of meat or can purchase draft or riding horses. If there is space (45% chance), Sakeon will also negotiate the stabling of visitors' mounts.

Sakeon the Horse-Whisperer

Trucleon, wrangler of livestock

AK-32: The Kettles (x2)

Each of these wooden fortified houses serves as the barracks for one a detachment of the city guards. Each of the 'kettles' (so named for their alleged resemblance to teakettles) is three stories tall. The first two stories are 30'x30' square and made of fitted logs; the upper story is round with a conical roof. The main door is found at the 2nd floor and is entered via an exterior staircase; narrow arrow slits dot the walls of the first two levels, while broader windows are set into the walls of the upper story. A detachment of twenty guardsmen, plus four sergeants and a guard captain, occupy each of the 'kettles'. Each section is divided into four five-person patrols. The structures hold enough dried provisions to feed 100 people for two weeks.

Services and Personalities

Two patrols remain in each kettle at all times, to watch for threats. The other two patrols circulate through the town, providing simple justice and assistance to citizens.

Paolindar the Caterpillar, 5th-level male Archontean fighter, and guard captain

Neolynda Gastevean, 5th-level female Archontean fighter, and guard captain

EXTERIOR (EX): THE LONG FALLS AND THE LONG STAIR

The Halls of Arden Vul lie within an massive rock plateau that looms over the valley of the Swift River. From the top of the plateau, the Swift River drops 1,500' to the valley floor in an enormous waterfall. Carved into the face of the cliff is a set of broad steps that winds upward through three cutbacks until it reaches the top of the plateau; this is the infamous Long Stair, which varies in width from 5 to 50'.

ACCESS AND EGRESS

To Level 3: secret door at EX-11, leading to 3-189

To Level 4: cave at EX-15, leading to 4-190

To Sub-Level 8: cave behind the falls at EX-16, leading to SL8-1

To Sub-Level 3: hidden cave at EX-12, leading to SL3-30

To Sub-Level: plunge pool at EX-17, leading to SL13-1

APPROACHING THE FALLS

The Long Falls are visible on a clear day from many miles away on the verdant and temperate valley floor, appearing as a thin stream of white against the grey and green of the cliff face. They are audible from three miles away as a dull buzzing sound in the distance. At two miles it becomes a sustained white noise as loud as a person speaking. At one mile the white cloud of mist and moisture roughly 200 yards in diameter becomes evident, and the sound is loud enough to impede conversation. Beneath the falls conversation is almost impossible, and the sound is as loud as a freight train among the smell of the damp, mold, and mildew.

As one closes towards the falls, about a mile away, the Colossal Defenders become apparent. The one representing Arden is placed just to the right of the falls, on the east side of the river (EX-6), while the other (EX-7) representing Vul stands another 400 yards further to the east. The figures are carved out of the rock face and extend a good 1,000-1,100' up the cliff face. The Colossus at EX-6 is an enormous crouching warrior woman, helmed, with right hand gripping a sword blade down; the left hand is extended outward, palm up; the palm is only about 100' above the valley floor. The Colossus at EX-7 is altogether different: slender, cowed, arms folded across its chest, with a stone staff in the crook of the left arm. It always appears to be looking at those who glance at it.

The cliff face is uneven rock, with bits of shrubbery and small trees growing out of it; it is home to goats and worse. Close inspection may reveal (1-4 in 20) areas that appear to be worked by human hands (e.g., EX-9, EX-14).

The noise of the fall may have tactical implications should a combat break out within 200'. Even if it does not, the mist certainly will, since everything within 500' is slick with moisture. At the edge of the falls' basin, the rocks are covered with slippery moss; those climbing on the rocks will be hard pressed to keep their footing. The Colossus of Arden the Defender (EX-6) is also slick with moisture and slime, as is the Tower of Madness (EX-4) and the lower portions of the Long Stair (EX-8). Movement is halved within this radius, and combats taking place on slick surfaces impose a -1 adjustment to all rolls.

RANDOM ENCOUNTERS

These tables are to be used for those exploring the base of the Falls or traversing the cliff face. Checks should be made every 6 to 12 turns (depending on GM preference); encounters occur on a 1 in 10 chance.

13-14	1 mountain lion (from EX-14): SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 150'; HD 3+1; HP 22; #AT 3; Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-6. Special attacks: gains 2 attacks from rear claws (1-4/1-4) if both front claws hit in same round. Special defenses: surprised 1 in 6. If killed here, it cannot be encountered at EX-14
15	6-9 Set cultists (see new monsters): SZ M; AL LE; AC 9; MV 90'; HD 1; HP 7, 6, 6, 5, 5, 4, 4, 3, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger) or 2-7 (flail) or 1-6 (staff). Special attacks: fanaticism. Possessions: padded armor; daggers; flails or staves
16	8 cavemen (from area EX-5): SZ M; AL N; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 2; HP 14, 13, 12, 12, 11, 11, 8, 7; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (stone spear) or 2-9 (stone axe). Casualties should be subtracted from the number at EX-5
17	Visitors to the Forum of Set (See area 4-2 for tables to determine such visitors)
18-19	6-8 lizardmen: SZ M; AL N; AC 4; MV 60'; 120' swimming; HD 2+1; HP 16, 15, 13, 13, 12, 11, 11, 10; #AT 1 or 3; Dmg 1-6 (club) and 1-6 (javelin), or 1-2/1-2/1-8. Possessions: clubs; javelins; shields
20	Special, e.g. Craastonistorex (see AV-40)

Encounter Areas

EX-1: The Swift River

This fast-moving river runs through Burdock's Valley after a drop of 1,500' feet from the plateau of Arden Vul. Crossing the river in the valley without a bridge or ford is very difficult; trying to ford the river at the foot of the Long Falls is foolhardy.

EX-2 Imperial Road

The old Imperial Road runs along the east side of the Swift River and eventually leads to Newmarket. It is made of large rectangular cobblestones, and originally boasted curbs and drainage. Today it is largely overrun, cracked, with grasses and small shrubs growing out of it. Within 500' of the Falls it is slick and treacherous.

EX-3: The Long Falls

The Swift River drops 1,500' into a bowl carved out of the solid rock. The plunge pool at the foot of the falls is some 275' across, and about 50' deep. It is death to swim in the pool, for the force of the falls produces a constant swirling motion, which draws water down to the foot of the basin before spitting it up along the sides.

EX-4: Tower of Madness

This watch tower was built by the revived Archontean Empire only 250 years ago, but it is already in extremely poor repair. It takes its name from the effect produced by the noise of the Falls in the minds of those condemned to guard duty in it for any length of time. All of the upper levels have collapsed into the tower and surrounding area, leaving only a treacherous ground floor. This ground floor may be reached through a broken doorway, revealing a 50'x50' area that, while completely dark and rather oppressive, is surprisingly dry. Parties may rest here without having their equipment (and characters) soaked.

Due to the 'haunted' reputation of the tower, visitors are not subject to random encounters while inside the tower. Resting for eight hours or more is perfectly feasible, although one party member will suffer some strange dreams/weird feelings for each period of rest. Roll randomly to determine which PC, and then roll on this table:

D8	Effect
1	Whispers at the back of the PC's consciousness: 'Where is she? Come back Nyema!'
2	Vague sense of uneasiness, as if a malign presence is watching the PC
3	PC hears a shouted command in a foreign tongue (e.g., "Venite!" [Come!]). No one else hears it.
4	A sense of intense fear washes over the PC, causing him/her to wish to leave immediately
5	The Long Falls seem to be roaring in a rhythm; PC spends 4-7 turns listening to this melody, then tries to convince others of this fact
6	PC feels a sense of claustrophobia, starts sweating, grows irritable.

7	A clammy, wet-feeling presence wraps itself across the PC's face momentarily, then disappears
8	PC becomes convinced that the patch of stone underneath him/her is unusually cold, and that there is something malign and brooding underneath.

Lengthy stays tend to produce other unsettling effects due to the constant roar of the Falls; anyone who stays for more than 3 days starts to suffer sleeplessness, irritability, and gradual madness. GMs should assign a -1 penalty to WIS for each two-day period spent in the Tower after the first three days. This WIS loss can only be regained by rest in a safe (and dry) environment.

Basement: Beneath some rubble in the northeast corner of the tower is a trapdoor. Clearing the rubble allows it to be opened, to the peril of those who do so. Inside the 20'x20' unfinished basement is the presence that causes unease during rest periods: it is Yrtol the Hungry, an Archontean nobleman who has become a ghost. The ghost will not leave the tower but attacks any who open the trap door. It might be possible to communicate with Yrtol without opening the trap door; he will communicate his longing for his lost love Nyema, who was taken by the 'new priests' as a sacrifice. He refers to the Cult of Set, and to their vile practice of human sacrifice. Nyema's remains may be found in the pool in area 3-90; should they be given a decent burial, Yrtol's spirit will be put to rest.

Inhabitants:

1. Ghost (Yrtol the Hungry): SZ M; AL LE; AC 0 (or 8); MV 90'; HD 10; HP 62; #AT 1; Dmg age 10-40 years. Special attacks: magic jar, panic. Special defenses: ethereal.

Treasure:

In the basement is Yrtol's corpse, still wearing a circlet of heavily tarnished metal and carrying a small silk purse. The metal appears to be silver, but it is in fact platinum and is worth 3,000 gp. The purse contains a returning pebble (see new magic items) and a potion of flying.

EX-5: Cavemen Lair

A band of cavemen has taken over a natural cave some 20' up the western side of the cliff. The band includes some 48 members. The band forages in the valley. It avoids the beastmen and the lizardmen, who in turn ignore them. Its members actively hide from the Knights of the Azure Shield (see AK-1), who enjoy hunting them. The cavemen sometimes try to attack adventurers, preferring to leap from concealment among the boulders at the foot of the falls. If confronted by an obviously powerful party (more than 6 members), the cavemen will perform obeisance, bowing and scraping and grunting their submission. If pressed they will bring a party to their matriarch war leader for a parlay. The interior of the cave has a rude fire, and some dried lizardmen skulls on sticks.

The cavemen worship a small soapstone figure of a malign, squatting salamander-man (Kauket). This idol sits on a ledge inside their cave. The cavemen will mob any persons who make any threatening gestures towards the idol.

The cavemen are easily 'bribed' with finished goods, particularly tools and weapons. Should communication be possible, and should the cavemen react favorably to the party, they can impart some useful information. They know that the 'snake men' (Set cultists) come from EX-15; that the Knights of the Azure Shield (see AK-1) have become a lot more interested in the Falls (and in hunting cave-men!) in the past year or so; that "walking lizards" (i.e., lizardmen) sometimes emerge from EX-15 and fight with the cavemen; that the 'barking dogs' (i.e., beastmen) have a "hidden home-place" somewhere along the ramp; and that the Tower of Madness is to be avoided at all costs.

Inhabitants:

At any given time 50% of the tribe will be present in the cave, while the rest are out foraging.

1. 16 male cavemen: SZ M; AL N; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 2; HP 14, 14, 13, 13, 12(x4), 11(x4), 8, 8, 7, 7; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (stone spear) or 2-9 (stone axe).
2. 15 female cavemen: SZ M; AL N; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 2; HP 12, 12, 11, 11, 10(x4), 8, 8, 7(x4), 5; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (stone spear).
3. 10 cavemen children: noncombatants (AC 10, HP 2)
4. Caveman war leader, as a 5th-level fighter: SZ M; AL N; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 5; HP 43; #AT 1; Dmg 2-9 (stone axe).
5. Two cavemen sub-chiefs, as 4th-level fighters: SZ M; AL N; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 4; HP 32, 27; #AT 1; Dmg 2-9 (stone axe).
6. Four skilled cavemen warriors, as 3rd-level fighters: SZ M; AL N; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 3; HP 27, 22, 18, 17; #AT 1; Dmg 2-9 (stone axe).

Treasure:

The cavemen have little in the way of treasure, save a few steel implements stolen from other groups. The one item of value is a magical axe-head currently used in food preparation; it is a hand axe +2, +3 versus demons, and would need to be remounted by a master smith (for 150 gp) to be effective. The cavemen will happily trade it for several mundane steel items.

EX-6: Colossus: Arden the Defender (and Elevator)

The colossus of Arden the Swordsman looms 1,000' above the valley floor. The socialist-realist carving depicts her kneeling on her right knee; her right hand holds a broadsword point down, while her left hand is extended, palm up, about 100' off the valley floor. Her head is helmed in a hoplite-style helmet (with chin greaves); her eyes stare downward at her palm. Hair braids extend below the helmet, and she appears to be wearing a breastplate. Although constantly wet and moss-covered, no significant pieces have fallen off of the colossus. Water stains make it appear as if Arden is weeping.

Arden the Swordswoman was one of the Twenty Worthies of the ancient Archontean Empire (see World of Archontos appendix), and the companion and lover of Vul the Sorcerer. With Vul, she founded the city that bears her name. She is famous for her Twelve Labors, which have become a ubiquitous part of Archontean culture (see the Twelve Labors of Arden in the Arden Vul books appendix).

Elevator: Arden the Defender's palm acts as an elevator up to the city of Arden Vul. Those who manage to get into the 20'-long left palm of Arden and speak her name will find that the arm shifts, such that the palm eventually reaches the plateau above. Note: the name 'Arden' must be spoken in Mithric.

EX-7: Colossus: Vul the Defender

An enormous, 1,100' tall, colossus of Vul the Sorcerer carved out of the cliff face towers over the valley below. Vul appears as a slender, cowed figure with arms folded across his chest. A stone staff with a large pommel rests in the crook of his left arm. The right arm has fallen away, as has most of the left leg. The cowl is deep, rendering the features invisible from below. The style of the colossus is socialist-realist mixed with art-nouveau, i.e., all clean lines designed to suggest rather than provide actual details.

Vul the Sorcerer was one of the Twenty Worthies of the ancient Archontean Empire (see World of Archontos appendix). Along with his companion and lover, Arden, Vul located the hidden caverns below the plateau and founded the site that bears his (and Arden's) name. After the death of Vul and Arden, the governors who succeeded them ordered the colossi to be built.

GM Note: if expansion of Arden Vul is desired, a wizard's laboratory might be located behind the colossus of Vul.

EX-8: The Long Stair

The 'stair' is really a ramp that rises slowly along the cliff face. In ancient times, the ramp was sheathed with large flagstones, mortared together. Today the flagstones are broken, rutted, and in places quite dangerous. Twice during an ascent of the long stair each PC will find his/her balance threatened, and must roll 2d6 under DEX or risk stumbling off the cliff face. PCs that are roped together subtract 2 from this roll. Combat on the lower third of the stair is risky due to the moisture from the Falls; here, 'to hit' rolls are at -1.

EX-9: Lower Customs Post

At the second switchback in the Long Stair may be found a 20'-wide entrance into the cliff. Located about 750' above the valley floor (and 750' below the plateau), the entrance leads to a low (8'-tall) chamber that once served as a customs and guard post for those ascending the path to Arden Vul. The chamber is neatly shaped rock, without decoration or ornamentation. Any remains of the interior subdivisions and furnishings have long since disappeared. Today all that is found within is a fire-circle and a two-weeks supply of firewood.

EX-10: Guard Position

At the spot where the Long Stair begins its third switchback (about 900' from the valley floor, or 600' below the plateau), the ancient Archontean installed a guard post of 20 men and a lieutenant who were charged with checking the business of those traveling upward. A stone door originally opened into a small H-shape barracks. The door has been smashed, and lies in shards. The entrance passageway is 20' wide x 20' deep, and is littered with bits of trash (a broken canteen, some scraps of leather, etc.), but the two arms of the barracks are choked with thick, ropy cobwebs. If fire is applied to the cobwebs, they will burn, but slowly and with much thick black smoke, which will push out toward the entrance. In the left arm of the barracks is a skeleton of a dwarf still clothed in chain mail, and clutching a war hammer. In a rotting pouch is a vial filled with a light-blue powder laced with sparkling motes. If any liquid is added to the powder, it will act as a potion of extra healing. The skeleton also wears some remarkably fresh-looking burgundy colored leather half-boots, with fancy blue-tooled designs; the boots are cursed, however, as they are boots of subtlety (see new magical items).

Treasure:

Dwarf-sized chain mail; war hammer; inert dwarven life-stone (see new magic items); 2 dried potions of extra healing, and a pair of boots of subtlety (see new magic items)

EX-11: Secret Entrance (aka 3-189)

Halfway up the fifth leg of the Long Stair lies a secret door leading to the Great Cavern and the district of the beastmen on Level 3. The door is difficult to spot from the outside (1 in 8 chance), unless PCs have followed a beastman patrol and watched them disappear in the general vicinity (at which point it is normal to locate). It lies about 1,150' up from the valley floor, or 350' below the plateau.

EX-12: Baboon Cave (aka SL3-30)

This crevice leads to Sub-Level 3, the Lesser Baboon Caves, which comprise a series of winding, rough, no-more-than-5'-wide passageways. These passages wend upward through the plateau to eventually emerge in the main albino baboon cave on Level 2. It provides egress for the baboons to the outside, and explains their sometime presence in the valley. The crevice appears as a fold in the cliff face; the baboons are adept at clambering down the cliff to the Long Stair and/or the valley floor. The entrance is about 1,225' above the valley floor, or 275' below the level of the plateau.

EX-13: The Short Stair (now collapsed)

This 7'-wide staircase used to lead from the valley floor up the side of the cliff to the Grand Entrance (EX-14). Sadly, several long sections of the stair encompassing the first several switchbacks have completely collapsed, rendering the stair useless.

Clever PCs who investigate the base of the Short Stair will see signs of recent activity, including many boot prints and signs of pack-animal activity (left by those using the basket at EX-15)

EX-14: Former Grand Entrance

In the glory days of the Archontean empire, the precincts of Set were accessed through this formerly impressive grand entrance. Cult members climbed a staircase (EX-13) cut into the cliff face from the valley floor up to a thirty-foot wide ledge that gave entrance to the cult's sphere of entrance. The ledge, made of marble, still exists and is visible even from the valley floor; the impressive decorations that adorned the ledge are long gone, however. What is worse, the cataclysms associated with the fall of the city destroyed the passageways which led inward from the grand entrance; as a result, the entrance is now nothing more than a glorified cave, now home to a mountain lion made hungry by the predations of Craastonistorex (see AV-40). This ruined entrance is about 650' above the valley floor, and 850' below the level of the plateau.

From the marble ledge, the sharp-eyed may spot two narrow paths that hug the cliff face. One path climbs west and upwards to EX-15. The other path descends eastward through several switchbacks to EX-16, aka SL8-1. The base chance to notice either path is 1 in 6, but it is improved to 3 in 8 for rangers and elves.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 mountain lion: SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 150'; HD 3+1; HP 22; #AT 3; Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-6. Special attacks: gains 2 attacks from rear claws (1-4/1-4) if both front claws hit in same round. Special defenses: surprised 1 in 6.

Treasure:

Two darts of sleeping (see new magic items) are tucked in a corner of the cave.

EX-15: Cave Entrance (aka 4-190)

This natural cave entrance is about 8' tall, and only 5' wide; it leads to a set of natural caverns extending into the cliff (see 4-190). The cave mouth is about 700' above the valley floor, 50' above and to the west of EX-14, and 800' below the level of the plateau.

Just inside the cave is a pulley system attached to an iron bar which can swing out into the air; to this iron bar is attached a set of thick ropes and a wicker basket big enough for two humans with gear. When not in use, the basket, ropes, pulleys, and some extra spikes, hammers, and ropes, are stored in a stone chest just inside the entrance. A lantern with crimson panes (for signaling) is also found here.

The Set cult uses the pulley and basket to descend the cliff face. The lizardmen, however, do not use the basket, preferring to slither and slide down the cliff face to the valley floor.

A narrow path wends downward along the cliff face from this location to area EX-14. It is hard to spot (1 in 6; 3 in 8 for rangers), and is used exclusively by the few members of the cult of Set who know about Sub-Level 8, and who thus need to get from EX-15 to EX-14, and thence to EX-16 (aka SL8-1). When they come this way, the Set priests use raw meat to distract the mountain lion at EX-14.

Inhabitants:

In addition to the likelihood that the mountain lion (see EX-14) will take interest in those investigating this area, the GM should roll on the following tables to determine if any creatures are currently using the Cave Entrance.

D10	Daytime Inhabitant
1-5	No one
6	6-9 Set cultists (see new monsters): SZ M; AL LE; AC 9; MV 90'; HD 1; HP 7, 6, 6, 5, 5, 4, 4, 3, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger) or 2-7 (flail) or 1-6 (staff). Special attacks: fanaticism. Possessions: padded armor; daggers; flails or staves

7	6-8 lizardmen: SZ M; AL N; AC 4; MV 60', 120' swimming; HD 2+1; HP 16, 15, 13, 13, 12, 11, 11, 10; #AT 1 or 3; Dmg 1-6 (club) and 1-6 (javelin), or 1-2/1-2/1-8. Possessions: clubs; javelins; shields
8-10	Party of NPC adventurers (select from NPC appendix)

D10	Night-time Inhabitant
1-5	No one
6	6-9 Set cultists (see new monsters): SZ M; AL LE; AC 9; MV 90'; HD 1; HP 7, 6, 6, 5, 5, 4, 4, 3, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger) or 2-7 (flail) or 1-6 (staff). Special attacks: fanaticism. Possessions: padded armor; daggers; flails or staves
7	6-8 lizardmen: SZ M; AL N; AC 4; MV 60', 120' swimming; HD 2+1; HP 16, 15, 13, 13, 12, 11, 11, 10; #AT 1 or 3; Dmg 1-6 (club) and 1-6 (javelin), or 1-2/1-2/1-8. Possessions: clubs; javelins; shields

EX-16: Cave Behind the Falls (aka SL8-1)

A small cave mouth lies hidden here behind the great ribbon of the Long Falls. The cave opening is about 440' above the valley floor (1,060' below the level of the plateau). The mouth of the cave is 15' wide and slick with spray from the falls. From it a steeply sloping tunnel leads into the cliff; the tunnel descends steeply before ending at a stone door, which is wizard locked (12th-level of experience). For details see Sub-Level 8 (SL8-1). The cave is invisible to viewers from the ground, and is extremely difficult to find (detect as a secret door) even for those flying or hovering in front of the Falls.

A 2- or 3'-wide, water-slick path leads west and upwards from the cave opening. It travels upwards through several cutbacks before reaching EX-14. The path is really no more than a goat track, and is thus difficult to traverse. In order to successfully navigate the path, adventurers must successfully roll 4d6 under DEX or plunge to their deaths below. Thieves, of course, need not make this roll. A party that ropes itself together increases its chances: the roll is improved to 3d6 under DEX.

Locating the path is easiest for those who perch on the ledge at EX-14 and examine the area around. They have a 1 in 6 chance to notice (3 in 8 for rangers). Those flying in front of the cliff face have a slightly more difficult chance to notice the path: 1 in 8 chance (1 in 6 for rangers).

Only the most senior of the Set Cultists (who regularly employ EX-15) know of the hidden path to EX-16.

EX-17: Underwater Tunnels to Sub-Level 13 (SL13-1)

Two holes in the north side of the plunge pool of the Long Falls lead to an underground grotto where a secret shrine to Arden was erected by a small group of Archontean elites (Sub-Level 13). The western entrance is 35' below the pool's waterline, while the eastern entrance is 40' below the waterline. The underground grotto forms the entrance to the Lost Chambers of Arden (SL13-1).

ARDEN VUL: THE RUINED CITY (AV)

The ancient emperors of Archontos established the settlement of Arden Vul on this plateau for reasons both strategic and sorcerous. It was named for the two heroes, Arden and Vul (see World of Archontos appendix), who located the chambers beneath the plateau and served as the governors of Arden Vul for more than a decade. The city (more properly a town) was largely devoted to scholarly and sorcerous pursuits; that is, it was not an open city, nor did it grow up on a trade route. Entrance to and from Arden Vul was carefully scrutinized, and those permitted to live within were those whom the Empire needed or wanted. Foodstuffs and other necessities were largely shipped in, either by sorcery, or from the latifundia created in the valley below.

Due to its non-mercantile nature, the town was marked by a large proportion of monumental building, both of temples and of palaces for important functionaries of the Empire. As the Archontean Empire waned, the city came to be seen as a retreat and safe haven, and in its last centuries was marked by greater militarization and frantic excavations below.

The longest-lived and most important organization in the ancient city was the temple of Thoth, whose pyramid still stands and provides the most well-known entrance to the Halls of Arden Vul. Eventually, like the empire at large, the city became riven by two factions known as the Sortians and the Theosophs; the Sortians, led by Priscus Pulcher, Isadora, and others, sought to open access to magical training and knowledge to all those who possessed the gift, while the Theosophs, led by the powerful and conservative temples of Thoth, Horus, and Set, sought to preserve the restrictive and hierarchical model that had endured for centuries (see the World of Archontos appendix for additional information on the above groups and individuals).

During this period of civil disorder much digging occurred below, as rival groups staked out a position. The city was finally destroyed in a cataclysmic event 1,210 years ago, one that leveled and scorched its precincts. Some 250 years ago, during the most recent phase of Imperial rebirth and expansion, Emperor Phocion IV sent an expedition under the command of the archon Adrienic to reclaim Arden Vul (and search for arcanum). Adrienic established his seat in the middle Halls (e.g. 5-18), but the expedition was destroyed by the varumani after less than 20 years.

At its peak, Arden Vul covered an area of only about 16 hectares, or about 1.8 million square feet, and had a population (mostly of elite specialists) of 10,000. Today Arden Vul is largely a ruin. Its walls have almost completely collapsed, allowing plants and animals to move into the ruin. The gate towers are in better repair, and many still stand (or have been repaired). Most of the western side of the city has become a swamp due to the failure of the irrigation and drainage efforts instituted by the Archontean. The east side is in better shape, with a broad boulevard running from north to south, and several monumental structures still intact. Those considering the cause of the demise of Arden Vul may be drawn to two facts, which are only observable to those who care to look: 1) the east side (except the pyramid) seems to have been flattened by a wall of enormous force, as if a child had swept through a block-city with her hands; 2) the western side, and the remaining foundations of the east side, appear to have been charred by enormous heat.

The most significant structures still remaining in the city are 1) various gate-towers, 2) the Great Pyramid of Thoth (AV-11), which is visible to all those who enter the now-ruined town, 3) two tall obelisks (AV-5, AV-41), one on each side of the river, 4) a long and low bungalow (AV-43), also on the western side, 5) portions of the old donjon (AV-27), and 5) the complex of jumbled buildings that forms the imperial Archon's Palace (AV-29). While most of the lesser buildings have fallen into decay, some still hold secrets that can be elicited by digging or uncovering clues from a variety of sources.

GM Notes on traffic and population in the Ruined City: It is up to the GM to determine how much activity is desired in the ruined city. It was tempting to make the ruined city the equivalent of another dungeon level in terms of monsters, treasure, and 'special items.' Indeed one could write dozens of additional encounters within the city ruins, as cellars abound; many of these were interconnected, potentially providing a goodly number of independent mini-dungeons. If such an environment is desired, pick a location in the ruins that is distant from any of the currently-keyed locations and bring that particular concept to life. The ruined city is large and can accommodate many more detailed areas.

But to keep the focus on the deeper dungeon levels, it seemed best that the ruined city serve as a relatively neutral location in which the PCs can search for clues about the levels below, meet rivals, rest, and glean general information about the setting. Given that assumption, traffic in the city should be relatively slight, limited to Kronos Kettle-Belly, Estelle, and their men at The Sign of the Broken Head (AV-22), a few monsters, and vermin and animals. Of course the ruins should not be completely safe, and at least one powerful potential adversary (Craastonistorex, a huge adult green dragon at AV-40) has been added to make things interesting.

SEARCHING THE RUINS

Only the fixed encounter areas are listed in the following pages. For random exploration, the GM should use the following charts (note that wall towers, round and square, have their own charts - see below at AV-3 and AV-4). Normally PCs will have a 1 in 10 chance per hour of uncovering something of possible interest.

Table 1: Nature of Discovery

D20	Type of Discovery
1-4	Inscription (see Table 2 below)
5-8	Small valuable (see Table 3 below)
9-11	Bit of adventuring gear (see Table 4 below)
12-14	Den or lair (see Table 5 below)
15-17	Puzzling clue (see Table 6 below)
18	Scroll case or book (see Table 7 below)
19	Lost cache (see Table 8 below)
20	Lost cellar or chamber (see Table 9 below)

Table 2: Inscriptions

The GM should devise inscriptions as needed, with an eye towards providing seeds for adventure inside the halls, clues to locations that have been already encountered, and so forth. Unless otherwise noted, the inscriptions are in Mithric. Some examples are as follows (roll once for form and once for inscription; modify as needed).

D20	Form	Sample Inscription	GM Notes to Sample Inscriptions
1-2	Fragment of plaster stele	... Lord Vul wrought great magicks, and lo! the Gates were formed, of the blackest obsidian ... shewed forth the keys, of which there were two ... and the golden key was deeded to .... but the second key made of .... 66 copies .... to the lord Prior of Thoth.	An incorrect myth concerning the creation of the Obsidian Gates (5-6D). In fact, the Gates date to the heqeti period, although they were modified and enhanced by the rudishva. Vul and Arden merely (re) discovered the Obsidian Gates when they first explored the area. The Archonteans never really penetrated beyond the Gates, and never figured out the keys. Two keys are necessary to open the Obsidian Gates, one gold and one platinum. The Prior of Thoth was the administrative leader of the Cult of Thoth, which dominated Levels 2-3 and 5; the wealth of the Priors is found at 3-63.
3-4	Bust, 3' diameter, with inscription on base	Marius Tricotor, archon of Arden Vul in the 150th year of its founding, who defeated the monstrous troll-things and re-established peace among the peoples.	Refers to the famous Marius, governor of Arden Vul at its peak. See the Lay of Marius (see Arden Vul books). His tomb is located at 6-154.
5-6	Polished bone (1=femur, 2=skull, 3=ulna, 4=scapula, 5=hip, 6=non-human)	Upon application of the hot iron Sicandros the barbarian revealed the location of the tomb of Muirasso the archon ... beside the bridge leading to the lower levels.	The unlooted tomb of Muirasso, imperial archon, is located at 5-36 to 5-40. Sicandros was the architect of the tomb.
7-8	Medallion	In commemoration of that peace which was finally obtained between the warring Sortians and the Theosophs.	Refers to the war of the Sortians and Theosophs, that destructive conflict that sundered the old empire and provoked a millennium of imperial contraction. A modern Order of Priscians that claims descent from the Sortians has its base at areas 9-58 to 9-64. See the World of Archontos appendix for additional information on the groups above.
9-10	Fragment of a picture-vase	Alexandros, servant of the mighty Lord, who helped tame the Great Cavern and cultivate the spores.	Alexandros is an otherwise forgotten agent of Ptarmis, the great Thothian priest who brought the Great Cavern (areas 3-163 and 3-172) under Archontean control. Also refers to the fungal foresters (see new monsters) who inhabit those caverns.
11-12	Fragment of mosaic	The Old Ones travelled here by mighty sky-chariot ... fire and destruction ... look to the Beacon for answers.	Fragments of Archontean lore about the rudishva. The 'sky-chariot' was the Beacon, the rudishva spaceship. Remnants of the Beacon are scattered throughout the Halls, e.g., SL2-2, 6-27, 6-113, 7-143, SL13-37, and SL14-10.
13-14	Bit of tile	Priscus the unbeliever led the rebellion against the Emperor and was joined by .... the treachery of the ancient allies.	A reference to Priscus Pulcher, one of the principal leader of the Sortians in antiquity (see World of Archontos appendix).
15	Ivory triptych	The cliff entrance to the lower levels is quite vulnerable ... seek other defenses against the foe.	Refers to area EX-14, which led to the precincts of Set on Level 4.
16	Ceremonial stone stele	The Ritual of Enhancement. Face our lord Vul and chant the incantation .....	A reference to the magical effect that may be produced at AV-31.
17	Enameled plaque	Vul's Insight takes three days to receive, and is wearying due to the need to chant the incantation four times per hour. Do not falter, or the consequences shall be severe!	Another reference to AV-31.
18	Pectoral or torc, 25% it's made of precious metal	Lo, the incantation to Vul! Empty the mind, open the heart, fill the soul/ Empty the soul, open the mind, fill the heart /Empty the heart, open the soul, fill the mind.	The key to activating the magical effect at AV-31.

19	Tapestry fragment	All warriors know the Song of Arden, that most beautiful verse which banishes doubt and brings them courage and stamina. Sing it to Lady Arden, and she will not leave you!	A reference to AV-30.
20	Carved crystal set over gold base (125 gp)	... of Arden: Fear is the destroyer, it bites in the heart. Fear brings me low, makes me writhe in the dirt. Strength counters fear, pushes it deep in its hole; strength is my strength, let it fill all my soul.	The key to activating the magical effect at AV-30.

Table 3: Small Valuables

D20	Discovery
1	A cracked leather purse containing 13 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items)
2	1-6 beads of valuable stone from a necklace (15 gp)
3	A silver holy symbol of Thoth (10 gp)
4	A silver holy symbol of Set (10 gp)
5	An ankh of protection , 3 charges left (see new magic items)
6	1-6 arrows +2 , wrapped in stained purple cloth
7	A single, large, ancient octagonal platinum coin (see Arden Vul items)
8	A waterproof satchel containing silk ceremonial robes in orange with purple trim (Thothian)
9	A copper ring (5 sp) with a hidden catch and 3 doses of virulent poison
10	A copper scutaron's torc, inscribed with insignia of 3 rd Cohort of the Imperial Tagmata (10 gp, or 200 gp to a current soldier) [refers to the origins of the beastmen now inhabiting areas 3-138 to 3-162]
11	A gold signet ring (30 gp), "Lucii Hesti, Procuratoris" (i.e., ring of Lucius Hestus the procurator)
12	A modern small pouch with 1-10 sp, 1-8 gp, and 1-4 pp
13	A statuette of feline friendship (see new magic items)
14	A 3" iron arrow within a 5"-diameter golden disk; will point to north unerringly (250 gp)
15	A packet of dust of sneezing and choking
16	3 crossbow bolts of fire (see new magic items)
17	A crude bronze ceremonial dagger sheathed in human-skin scabbard, 50 gp to evil collector
18	A fragment of jewelry, worth 1-100 gp (1=gold, 2=silver, 3=platinum, 4=mixed)
19	A gem worth 100-600 gp (1=beryl, 2=sapphire, 3=emerald, 4=aquamarine, 5=garnet, 6=topaz)
20	A small ivory statue (250 gp) from Craastonistorex's hoard, lost 1-20 years ago; the wyrm is grateful (50%), indifferent (25%) or angry (25%) if item is returned

Table 4: Bit of Adventuring Gear

D20	Gear
1	50' of rope
2	7-16 spikes
3	A backpack full of iron rations (enough for 3 weeks)
4	3 canteens, 2 empty and 1 filled with brandy
5	1-4 flasks of oil
6	Thieves' tools (25% chance these are +5% to pick locks)
7	A bundle of 6 torches
8	A quiver with 18 crossbow bolts
9	Dungeoneering equipment: marbles, a hammer, chalk, line, and a pot of caulk
10	Pitons, a hammer, and 50' of silk rope
11	A leather pouch containing a silver mirror and a 6" statue of an adventurer (25% chance she can revived)
12	Crowbar, sledgehammer and maul
13	Pouch of chalk powder and three slow-burning candles
14	Bullseye lantern (no oil)
15	Cloak of the Dwarves (see new magic items)
16	2 vials of holy water
17	Scroll of rope trick
18	5 lb of dried meat (for luring monsters) in a well-wrapped packet
19	A whistle, a packet of chalk, and a pouch of powdered graphite
20	Roll twice above

Table 5: Den or Lair

D20	Encounter
1	3-6 giant centipedes: SZ S; AL N; AC 9; MV 150'; HD 1 or 2 HP; HP 2(x3), 1(x3); #AT 1; Dmg n.a. Special attacks: poison (+4 to save).
2	2-4 giant weasels: SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 150'; HD 3+3; HP 20, 18, 15; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12. Special attacks: drain blood.
3	Venomous snake: SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 150'; HD 2+1; HP 8; #AT 1; Dmg 1. Special attacks: poison (causes sickness + incapacitation, 2-12 days).
4	Feral cats, adoptable with some effort.

5	1-6 wild dogs: SZ s; AL N; AC 7; MV 150'; HD 1+1; HP 9, 8, 6 (x2), 5, 4; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4.
6	Crazed former adventurer, scarred by an experience in the dungeon levels: choose from NPC appendix.
7	1-6 huge spiders: SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 180'; HD 2+2; HP 15, 15, 13, 11, 8, 7; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: surprise 1-5; poison (+1 to saves); can leap up to 30'.
8	Giant badger: SZ M; AL N; AC 4; MV 60', 30' burrowing; HD 3; HP 20; #AT 3; Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-6.
9	1-3 brown bears: SZ L; AL N; AC 6, MV 120'; HD 5+5; HP 33, 29, 25; #AT 3; Dmg 1-6/1-6/1-8. Special attacks: hug.

10	2-12 giant rats, 10% chance led by a wererat. Giant rats: SZ S; AL N(E); AC 7; MV 120'; HD 1-4 HP; HP 4(x3), 3(x3), 2(x3), 1(x3); #At 1; Dmg 1-3. Special attacks: 5% chance of disease. Wererat: SZ S-M; AL LE; AC 6; MV 120'; HD 3+1; HP 18; #At 1; Dmg 2-9 (longword +1). Special attacks: lycanthropy, summon and control 2-12 giant rats. Special defenses: silver or magic needed to hit. Possessions: longword +1, 55 gp.
11	Nest of 5-20 rot grubs: SZ S; AC 9; MV 10'; HD 1 HP; HP 1 (x20); #AT 0; Dmg nil. Special attacks: burrow into flesh, and kill in 1-3 turns.
12	GM's choice

Table 6: Puzzling Clues

D20	Puzzling Clue	GM Explanation
1	A bronze key.	Unknown or GM's choice (perhaps one of the keys to the Hematite Doors at 3-175/3-177).
2	A 1.25"-diameter and 3"-long rod of stone, with a thin covering of silver on one end.	A hint concerning the keys to the Obsidian Gates (5-6D). The general shape and material is correct, but this rod is too small in diameter and too long in length.
3	Two 8" glass activation squares, one blue and one red (see Thothian teleportation rings in new magic items).	An incomplete set of 'address cards' used to dial an address on a Thothian teleportation ring (see new magic items).
4	A scrap of parchment with a code on it.	GM's choice.
5	A scrap of parchment in Archontean reading "Gog knows. Trust him."	Refers to Gog, the lesser varumani exiled from the troll thegn's court (7-75) and current resident of 5-2.
6	A broken femur on which is incised these directions in Wiskin: "from stone seat, South 10, West 50, South 10."	These directions (in feet) lead to the grave of Ptarmis (3-174) in the Fungal Forest (3-172), using the Stone Seat at 3-176 as a starting point.
7	A clay tablet with the following in Elvish: "the howlers fear the light. Restore the well."	Refers to the albino baboons of Level 2 and offers a clue as to help diminish their threat by restoring the mirror at 2-1.
8	A scrap of faded papyrus with an image of bubbling vats; over them is written 'evil' and 'Deino is a witch' in Mithric.	Deino is the witch who rules the beastmen from her lair in 3-158. The note provides a warning as to her true nature.
9	An oblong piece of bronze, stamped on one side with a monstrous, tusked, grinning head, and on the other with a hammer. Item is ¼" thick, 3" high, and 8" long.	A troll thegn's passport (see Arden Vul items) allowing safe access to the varumani domain (7-1).
10	A silk bag holding 6 irregular pieces – a few grey, a few orange - of an extremely hard but non-metallic substance.	The items are plasteel, looted from the rudishva ages ago. They have a slight value as curiosities (15 gp each).
11	A 1"-diameter disk of orange 'metal'; the roman numeral V is scratched into it.	A rudishva lesser power supply, with 5 charges remaining (see new technological items).
12	A treasure map, torn into quarters - only three of the pieces are extant.	GM's choice.
13	A wooden 'puzzle statuette' of carved, fitted, and polished pieces of ebony in the form of a turtle; if the head is pulled forward and pushed downward, the shell will pop off, revealing a golden key.	The key is to the secret door in 3-60. The statuette could be sold for 50 gp.
14	A 'Russian doll' statuette of a squatting, salamander-shaped being with a huge mouth; made of lacquered maple; if all eight pieces are extant, one can read a prayer to Rimmaq-Isfet on the bottom of the statuette. The prayer is in Mithric. Currently three pieces are missing.	The statuette could be sold for 100-400 gp. It contains a hint as to the nature of the heqeti foe, especially on Level 10.

15	A fist-sized sapphire, cut to resemble an eye, with a bit of jet inset as the pupil.	The sapphire is worth 2,000 gp. It is a sapphire Sortian eye (see new magic items).
16	A coarse linen bag with a set of polished augury sticks. The bag is embroidered “Only those without ideology may find the way” (in Mithric).	If cast by a person of True Neutral alignment, the sticks spell out directions from area 3-67 to the Sanctum (5-83).
17	A scrap of parchment with notes written in Thorcin: “Grithnal did not understand the clues in the dread tomb of Sethu. We must return with scrolls of protection, for Thoth will not release his wealth lightly.”	Refers to the Tomb of Sethu, 5-57.
18	A piece of magical glass on which a series of pastoral images flashes; interspersed among them are images of a chasm, a beautiful stone bridge, and floating subterranean garden.	A GnuCoder 1000 image screen, loaded with images of the rudishva homeworld (the pastoral images) and several areas within Arden Vul (e.g., the Great Chasm, the Sundered Span [5-35], and the Floating Garden [6-4]). See new technological items.
20	A 1'-tall, enchanted silver ankh, chased with red glass, worth 125 gp.	One of the ankh-keys (see Arden Vul items) used to activate the obelisks (AV-5, AV-28, AV-41) in the ruins of the city.

Table 7: Scroll Case or Book

D20	Description
1	Scroll with arcane spells (50% MU, 50% Illusionist), 1-4 spells of levels 1-6 each.
2	Scroll with cleric spells, 1-4 spells of level 1-6 each
3	Treasure map, roll d4: 1=fake, 2=fragmentary, 3=treasure is already gone, 4=usable.
4	Scroll case is empty, but valuable: 1=ivory (75 gp), 2=bone (20 gp), 3=leather (15 gp), 4=rare wood (30 gp).
5	Fragmentary parchment codex of 1-30 leaves from a copy of Licinius Monad's Practical Animal Magic (see Arden Vul books); the fragment covers 1-6 distinct creatures.
6	Parchment codex of 1-30 leaves containing ancient religious rituals (50% for Litany of Light; see areas 2-2 to 2-5 and Arden Vul books) worth 50 gp.
7	Leather-bound codex of 1-100 leaves with 1-3 treatises in it: historical, magical theory, literary. 50 gp per each treatise.
8	Leather-bound codex of 1-100 leaves, blank save for 1-6 valuable entries (10-60 gp each).

This result indicates the discovery of a hidden cache of valuables. The GM should feel free to adjust the results as necessary, especially if the PCs have already found a cache. Any cache discovered has a flat 25% chance of attracting the attention of Craastonistorex (AV-40). Certain results may increase that chance. Each found cache also has a chance of being trapped (GM's choice of trap) or of also being the lair of a creature (for the latter, roll on table 5).

Table 9: Lost Cellar or Room

If this result is rolled, the PCs have found a relatively intact chamber in the rubble. The value and role of this chamber is up to the GM to decide. It is recommended that an additional 2-3 entry

Table 8: Lost Cache

D8	% trap or monster	Description
1	20%	Sack of coins, 1-100 cp, 1-100 sp, 1-100 gp, 1-100 pp.
2	25%	Pouch of 50 fine carnelians, 50 gp each.
3	30%	Helm of Underwater Action filled with 600-1,000 sp. Add 15% to chance of attracting the wyrm.
4	30%	Potion sack with 3-6 potions.
5	30%	200-800 gp worth mixed coins, 1-3 potions, 1 MU scroll, 1 cleric scroll.
6	10%	Six bolts of valuable silk, worth 150 gp each (but heavy, 25 lb).
7	20%	A damaged rug (3'x4') wrapped around a magic weapon (15% chance cursed). Add 20% to chance of attracting the wyrm.
8	30%	1-3 magic weapons and 1-2 miscellaneous magic items of low power. Add 35% to chance of attracting the wyrm.

points to the dungeon levels be discoverable in this manner; if the GM decides that a lost cellar does lead to the dungeons, it should be trapped in some manner and should lead to a small sub-level (of the GM's devising) which can be made to connect to one of the main levels. Such additional entry points should be rare, and perhaps only discoverable after clues to their existence are found during the course of role-playing (conversations with Lankios [1-6] or Craastonistorex [AV-40], finding an inscription, etc.). If the GM does not wish the PCs to find another way into the Halls (or they have already found one), then the cellar or chamber will have some combination of results from tables 2-8. It might also be noted that a safe cellar might prove to be a valuable spot for PCs to establish their own refuge.

Encounter Areas in the Ruins of Arden Vul

AV-1: The Cliff Gate

This gate opens to the Long Stair, which winds down the cliff face through several switchbacks and for 1,500' feet. Two massive round towers guarded the gate, each about 35' in diameter and 45' tall; originally these towers possessed four interior levels, but the topmost level of each has been destroyed by violent force. The wooden gate itself has long since disappeared, allowing the curious to enter through a 40'-wide gaping passageway between the looming gate towers.

West Tower: the wooden interior divisions have mostly rotted, leaving a shell of stone in which may be found rubble, shards of wood, and cobwebs. A pack of huge spiders has made this tower their lair, but the spiders hunt in the eastern districts, not in the entrance plaza. Several arrow slits allow PCs to peer into the darkened interior of this tower. There is little of value left in the tower, save a sack with 45 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items).

East Tower: this tower has suffered greater damage over the millennia. Although the northern face of the tower is still standing, the southern face (facing the cliff) has collapsed, allowing the elements to penetrate - and destroy - the interior of this tower. There is nothing of value here

Inhabitants:

1. 6 huge spiders: SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 180'; HD 2+2; HP 16, 15, 15, 12, 13, 11; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: surprise 1-5; poison (+1 to saves); can leap up to 30'.

D10	Round Tower Inhabitants	Square Tower Inhabitants
1-4	None	None
5-6	3-18 stirges: SZ S; AL N; AC 8; MV 30'; 180' flying (Class B); HD 1+1; HP 8, 8, 7(x4), 6(x3), 5(x4), 4(x3), 3, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-3. Special attacks: drain blood; attack as 4 HD creatures	1-6 humanoids scouting ruins from the south
7	1-2 giant poisonous snakes: SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 150'; HD 4+2; HP 27, 20; #AT 1; Dmg 1-3. Special attacks: poison	1 brown bear: SZ L; AL N; AC 6, MV 120'; HD 5+5; HP 31; #AT 3; Dmg 1-6/1-6/1-8. Special attacks: hug
8	1 giant lizard: SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 150'; HD 3+1; HP 21; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8. Special attacks: double damage on a natural 20 to hit	1 mountain lion: SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 150'; HD 3+1; HP 22; #AT 3; Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-6. Special attacks: gains 2 attacks from rear claws (1-4/1-4) if both front claws hit in same round. Special defenses: surprised 1 in 6.
9	2-5 huge spiders: SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 180'; HD 2+2; HP 15, 15, 13, 12, 11; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: surprise 1-5; poison (+1 to saves); can leap up to 30'	Large nest of honeybees. Anyone staying in the area for more than one round suffers 1 HP of damage per round from multiple stings.
10	Undead. Roll d6: 1-4: 3-4 ghosts SZ M; AL CE; AC 4; MV 150'; HD 4; HP 30, 25, 23, 21; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-8. Special attacks: stench; paralysis. Special defenses: immune to sleep and charm 5-6: 1-3 wights: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 4+3; HP 33, 29, 27; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4. Special attacks: energy drain. Special defenses: silver or magic needed to hit; immune to sleep, charm, hold, cold, poison, and paralysis	Powerful undead. Roll d6: 1-4: 1-3 wights: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 4+3; HP 33, 29, 27; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4. Special attacks: energy drain. Special defenses: silver or magic needed to hit; immune to sleep, charm, hold, cold, poison, and paralysis 5-6: 1-2 wraiths: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 120', 240' flying (Class B); HD 5+3; HP 36, 31; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: energy drain. Special defenses: silver or magic weapons to hit; immune to sleep, charm, hold, cold, poison, and paralysis

AV-2: City Walls

The walls were originally 20' tall, and some 15' thick. A good portion of the walls has collapsed. The remaining sections (indicated on the map) are rickety, and any climbing on or over them is likely (50%) to provoke a collapse; if a collapse is indicated, the PC(s) should roll 2d8 under DEX or take 2-12 damage. Most of the walls are covered with vines, ivy, shrubs and trees; climbing them is easy.

AV-3 & AV-4: Generic Round & Square Towers

Towers are generally 30' high and 25' wide. The round towers are older than the square ones, which were part of a later building program by the authorities of Arden Vul. Originally, the round towers featured 3 interior levels plus a conical tiled roof, and two bands of geometric tile and brick-work at 15' and 20' respectively. The square towers had a ground floor, two more interior floors reached by wooden stairs, and an open, machicolated roof. Poking around in anything but mostly intact towers will provoke a roll of 2d8 under DEX; if failed, the incautious PC has taken 1-6 damage from falling/collapsing masonry.

Status:

Roll d8 to determine how much of each tower still stands:

D8	Status
1-3	Utterly obliterated, under tons of rubble
4	Mostly gone, 25% chance of a 10'-diameter safe area
5	Portions of ground floor still intact
6	Portions of ground and first floors intact
7	Most of three interior floors intact, but roof is gone (roll on next table at -1)
8	Intact tower (roll on next table for inhabitants)

Inhabitants:

Roll only if indicated on previous table, or at GM's wish:

Treasure:

AV-5: Obelisk of the Sun

This is one of three huge granite obelisks that used to rise above the city (the two others are at AV-28 and AV-41). Although weather-beaten, it still stands proudly amid the utter ruin around it. The obelisk is 10' square at its base and rises 35' in the air; it is incised with bands of inscriptions and images. The former are in Mithric, and contain references to the Twelve (the major imperial deities of antiquity - see World of Archontos appendix), as well as the names of the first 327 emperors of the Archontean Empire. For the first 8' feet of its height, the images are largely of humans interacting with large lizards, of humans riding on the lizards, of humans putting various creatures to the sword, and so forth. Above this level the images turn to a single theme: the sun.

An exception to this artistic program is found in a wide band of stone on the south face of the obelisk at about 5' in height; this band is completely clear save for a deeply incised image of an ankh (about 1' tall). Running above the ankh-shape is the following inscription in Mithric: "The Beacon shall be revealed to those who bring midday life to the Sun, the Moon and the Stars." Intelligent observation will conclude that an ankh of those dimensions is meant to be placed into the incision. While this is true, it is also true that the magic of this obelisk is linked to the other two obelisks (AV-41 and AV-28). Should one of the ankh-keys (see Arden Vul items) be placed into the appropriate shape on each of the obelisks at noon, a powerful effect will result.

Result of activating all three obelisks: if ankh-keys are placed in the appropriate spots on all three obelisks at noon, a grinding noise rings out across the ruins as a set of steel doors set horizontally into the pavement at AV-34 grind open. The doors fold inward (like a bulkhead), showering a clatter of rubble and dust onto a set of broad stairs leading down (see SL14-1). The stairs lead to the legendary 'Chamber of the Beacon' (Sub-Level 14).

AV-6: Boulevard of Knowledge

This 50'-wide boulevard, paved with large cobblestones, leads from the Long Stair to the Grand Forum. The cobblestones are now buckled and cracked with age, and trees grow out of the cracks. Ancient oak trees line the boulevard on either side.

AV-7: Grand Forum

Originally a well-maintained site for imperial announcements, public discussions, and business, the Grand Forum today resembles a war zone. Stumps of pillars, broken off between 3' and 8' in height, line the outer borders; the busts that sat on these pillars lie on the pavement, staring unceasingly at interlopers. Small trees have grown up here and there, and stumps of larger ones dot the pavement. Only three large trees remain, including a massive and ancient oak in the center of the forum, and two majestic maples in the southern section. The oak is sentient, but quiescent (see below). The paving stones are tilted, stained, and cracked.

The districts around the forum have been almost entirely leveled, such that they provide a consistent landscape of rubble, trees, and shrubs about 8' in height. It is as if a hurricane or other major wind has flattened the areas around the forum (save for AV-7 and AV-15, of course). A few paths have been carved through the rubble.

Random Encounters are more common here; roll once every six turns on the random table; 1 in 6 for an encounter.

The Old Oak: the oak is an ancient sentient tree named Tuftwillig. Tuftwillig is more than 800 years old, having moved here shortly after the abandonment of the city. Druids have a 1 in 6 chance to sense the sentience of Tuftwillig. He is difficult to wake from his slumbers: noise will only do it 1/3 of time; threat of fire will do so, but he will be most unhappy. He has not moved in many centuries and is loath to do so. That said, a druid might be able to coax some valuable information concerning features of the city (like the obelisks) or concerning entrance points to the Halls below. In return for such information, Tuftwillig may request favors, including, e.g., 1) the elimination of the baboon tower (AV-9); 2) freeing Lankios from his curse (see 1-6); 3) recovering a druidical artifact from a known area of the halls or a specific named entity inside the halls.

Tuftwillig is quite unhappy about Craastonistorex's presence in the ruins (AV-40), and, if already persuaded of the party's good will (by the fact of their accomplishing tasks for him), he might assist them with information useful against the wyrm or, more rarely, in a confrontation. Physical assistance would come in the form of summoned animals in most circumstances; he will only bestir himself in extremely unusual and dire cases.

Inhabitants:

1. Tuftwillig, the sentient tree: SZ L; AL N; AC 0; MV 10'; HD 12; HP 89; #AT 2; Dmg 4-24/4-24. Special attacks: summon animals.

Treasure:

Tuftwillig has two items hidden in his roots. One is a ring of acid resistance (see new magic items) given to him by a druid when he was a young tree; this item he will only offer to the very most trusted of allies, and then only if they can demonstrate great need. The other item is the left hand from the colossal statue of Arden (see AV-30); he will give this to anyone who asks, so long as they are polite and respectful.

AV-8: Tower of Scrutiny

The Tower of Scrutiny was used by the priesthood of Thoth to oversee public discourse in the forum and to serve as a symbol of imperial might. It is 40' square, and looms 45' above the forum. A pair of massive bronze doors exist at the level of the Forum. The doors are locked and wizard locked (12th level, see TS-1). No windows grace the tower until the final 10' of its height (see TS-12).

Kronos Kettle-Belly (AV-22) sent some of his men to investigate the tower; as they never returned, the inhabitants of the Broken Head have developed a healthy fear of the tower, one that they are happy to share with (and exaggerate to) all comers.

The Tower's internal structure and inhabitants are detailed separately in the Tower of Scrutiny (TS) level description.

Secret Door: A second entrance exists in the form of a secret door on the west side of the tower (for details see TS-6).

AV-9: Baboon Tower

An enterprising giant intelligent baboon named Rango has led some of the albino baboons from Level 2 into this tower, from which they venture (at night) to forage for provisions and victims.

At night-time this area is rife with hooting, howling, and thumping of rocks. Regardless of the time of day, anyone approaching within 50' will be met by a hail of thrown stones (each worth 1-4 damage). Rango has accumulated some pretty things that he sometimes trades to the Set cultists of Level 4; as a result he has become somewhat adept at Archontean speech.

Inhabitants:

1. 8 large albino baboons (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; MV 120'; AC 6; HD 3; HP 22, 20, 20, 19, 19, 18, 18, 16; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-6. Special attacks: pack attack.
2. Rango, giant intelligent baboon (see new monsters): SZ L; AL NE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 8; HP 52; #AT 5; Dmg 1-6/1-6/1-6/1-6/1-10. Special attacks: rend.

Treasure:

Three ancient, large (8'x16'), and heavy tapestries (100 lb each), one depicting a war between dragon riders and wizards, and the other two featuring the 4th and the 7th labors of Arden (for these labors see the Twelve Labors of Arden in Arden Vul books). Each is worth 400 gp to imperial scholars and each might also be used to glean information about the past (in the hands of a wizard or sage).

GM Note: The dragon-rider tapestry is a hint about the origins of the Empire's power and the Compact of Ennius (see World of Archontos appendix), by which the early Emperors secured an alliance with dragons. The tapestry of the 4th Labor of Arden ("The Three Berserkers of Westholm") shows Arden, distinctive in braids and conical cap, tricking the three Wiskinga berserkers into attacking and slaying each other. The tapestry of the 7th Labor ("The River God") shows Arden and a companion (Vul) battling against a huge water elemental inhabiting a river near a cliff. The cliff is that of the future site of Arden Vul.

AV-10 Baboon Cave leading to 2-54

Just outside the eastern walls is an overgrown dry cistern. A wide (4') crack in its bottom leads by circuitous tunnels down 225' to Level 2-54. The tunnel is small and cramped, no more than 5' high, and in some places only 3'x3'. PCs venturing into it will have to crawl, and will probably have to drag their armor behind them. Crawling through the tunnel will take about an hour of strenuous and claustrophobic effort, and imposes a 1 in 6 chance of encountering several baboons. The GM should check once before entering, once during the tunnel crawl, and once as the PCs near the exit to see if any baboons are encountered.

Inhabitants:

1. A chance for 4 large albino baboons (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; MV 120'; AC 6; HD 3; HP 20, 19, 18, 18; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-6. Special attacks: pack attack.

AV-11: Ghoulish Nest

A pod of ghouls, led by 3 ghaists, occupy ruins just to the south of the eastern plaza. They are nocturnal. The nest is in a cellar covered by rubble. Its entrance is hard to locate.

Inhabitants:

1. 8 ghouls: SZ M; AL CE; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 15, 14, 13, 13, 12, 11, 11, 10; #AT 3; Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-6. Special attacks: paralysis. Special defenses: immune to sleep and charm.

2. 3 ghaists: SZ M; AL CE; AC 4; MV 150'; HD 4; HP 30, 23, 21; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-8. Special attacks: stench; paralysis. Special defenses: immune to sleep and charm

Treasure:

A set of copper candelabra and bowls worth 1,975 cp; a circular electrum mirror 3' round, worth 1,000 gp but very heavy; a potion of clairvoyance, a potion of polymorph (self), and a shield of dubious faith (see new magic items).

AV-12: Eastgate, with Access to 3-52A

The upper two-thirds of both towers lie in ruins under heaps of broken stone.

D6	Result
1	A corpse of an Imperial administrator, with a parchment description of 'the accursed ones on their fire-breathing mounts' (i.e., dragon-riders), 6 ancient octagonal platinum coins (see Arden Vul items), and a silver pectoral in the shape of a knot surrounding a stylized drop of liquid (the sign of the Sortians, see World of Archontos appendix, worth 75 gp)
2	1-3 vials of flame-red liquid ( potions of fire breath )
3	A wax tablet with these words in Mithric: "That suck-up, Lucius Cornelius, took Lord Marius's relics to his own abode. He said he needed them to prepare his biography. We'll never see those things again! Nor Cornelius, the rat. I think he's holed up in a hidden lair somewhere along the chasm wall, south of the Imperial Bridge." [GM: a reference to Lucius Cornelius Scriptor's tomb, found at areas 6-130 to 6-135. The Bridge referred to is the now-Sundered Span, 5-35]
4	Bottle with imprisoned wraith. The wraith will either attack (25%) or issue threats before departing to the Tower of Scrutiny (AV-8) (75%). Wraith: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 120', 240' flying (Class B); HD 5+3; HP 36; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: energy drain. Special defenses: silver or magic weapons to hit; immune to sleep, charm, hold, cold, poison, and paralysis
5	A battered but still intact set of imperial field plate (see Arden Vul items)
6	3-12 giant centipedes: SZ S; AL N; AC 9; MV 150'; HD 1 or 2 HP; HP 2(x6), 1(x6); #AT 1; Dmg n.a. Special attacks: poison (+4 to save)

North Tower: This tower conceals a potentially more valuable prize. A ranger or druid has an easy chance (75%) of noticing tracks leading into the rubble. The tracks are relatively recent, and suggest a group of seven humans or humanoids. They lead towards a pile of stone blocks which conceal a 3'-diameter hole leading into the rubble. The hole leads to a cleared space that is about 14' in diameter but only 3.5' tall. It contains a fire pit, and a pile of firewood covered with a tarp. It also conceals a trapdoor leading down to the cellar of the tower. The cellar is dry, and shows signs of recent habitation: seven bedrolls and a new, locked, wooden chest. Within the chest are three 50' coils of rope, a set of climbing pitons, two hammers, fifteen torches, a broom, and six flasks of oil. It also contains three bronze medallion about 2" in diameter; the medallions show an Archontean cestus on the obverse and the initials 'SF' on the reverse in Archontean (i.e., 'Sodality of the Fist'). A narrow crack (2' wide and 5' tall) leads to a natural tunnel that descends some 350' to area 3-52A.

Background: The tower was discovered by Durdeon Vislok, an adventurous young Archontean aristocrat. Durdeon ventured down the stairs and, following a route that led him from AV-12 to the Arena (6-68), via areas 3-52A (wisely leaving whatever horrors making the noise inside the sarcophagi alone and sneaking through the area on subsequent trips), 5-64, 5-55, 6-3, and 6-58. Inspired by the events he witnessed, Durdeon enlisted his louche friends from Narsileon (see World of Archontos appendix) into a secretive organization that he named the Sodality of the Fist. The Sodality has two components. First, all members must participate in monthly, illicit, cestus-driven fights at a location within or just outside Narsileon (locations differ each time). Members are vetted for toughness and ability to keep the existence of the Sodality secret. Those who fail are excluded from subsequent bouts. The second component is reserved for those who have proven themselves by winning at least five bouts and earning the trust and confidence of Durdeon and two other members: such persons are invited by Durdeon to accompany six members on a trip to the Arena within Arden Vul (see 6-68). The members travel secretly from Narsileon to the ruins of Arden Vul, rest in the cellar here, and then make their way to the Arena. It is Durdeon's dream that one day he will be able to field a team of cestus fighters that could compete in the Arena itself.

There is only a 20% chance that the Sodality will be present in the cellar. If discovered here, the members attempt negotiation. If pressed, they clam up, even enduring torture and interrogation rather than betray their vows. If treated harshly but released, Durdeon and his friends will prove implacable enemies.

Inhabitants:

1. Durdeon Vislok, male Archontean aristocrat and 4th-level fighter/3rd-level thief (20% chance): SZ M; AL LN; AC 7; MV 90; HD 7; HP 45; #AT 1; Dmg 1-3 (cestus) or 2-7 (short sword +1). Thief skills: PP 40%, OL 38%, F/RT 30%, MS 27%, HS 20%, HN 15%, CW 87%. Possessions: leather armor +1; cestus; short sword +1; purse with 39 pp, 15 gp, a gold signet ring (75 gp), and a bronze medallion of the Sodality of the Fist (10 sp).
2. 6 male Archontean members of the Sodality of the Fist, as 3rd-level fighters (20% chance): SZ M; AL LN; AC 8; MV 90; HD 3; HP 27, 25, 24, 22, 21, 19; #AT 1; Dmg 1-3 (cestus) or 1-6 (short sword). Possessions: leather armor; short sword; cestus; purse with 2-20 pp, 2-20 gp, and a bronze medallion of the Sodality of the Fist (10 sp).

AV-13: Eastern Plaza

This formerly pleasant plaza is littered with masonry rubble. A 15'-diameter dry basin (for a long-gone fountain) occupies its center. The marble right arm and hand from the colossal statue of Arden (see AV-30) has been cast into the center of the basin.

Trap: the area around the fountain is unstable and will collapse if more than 300 lb of weight is placed within 5' of the basin. If it collapses, those standing by the fountain will take 2-12 damage, and will need to be dug out of rubble that may be up to 10' deep by their friends. Digging takes 1-6 hours. If night falls, the ghouls (AV-11) will certainly investigate.

AV-14: The Well of Light, with Access to Level 2-1, Level 2-64, and Sub-Level SL1-1

An uncovered well, with a 3'-tall frame, stands in a small courtyard, accessed via an obscure path off the boulevard leading to the East Gate. This well is about 5' in diameter, and extends downward about 225' to Level 2 (area 2-1). Convex mirrors and shards of glass embedded in the sides of the well reflect light up and down the shaft making the interior very bright. At a point 110' down the shaft is an extremely well hidden secret door (1 in 8 to notice) leading to the Tombs of Light (see SL1-1 for more information on the secret door). The well does not contain ladder rungs or any other device for negotiating its distance. Still, armed with sufficient rope, it would be possible for adventurers to lower themselves down the well from the surface; this would require at least 200' of strong rope, and might well prove optically challenging due to the brightness of the interior of the well.

Just to the east of the well is a ceramic chimney that still rises 2' above the ground; it is a 3'x2' rectangle, and extends down to the refectory at Level 2-64.

AV-15: Pyramid of Thoth

This enormous pyramid, some 90' square and 45' high, occupies its own square just north of the Forum. See the chapter on the pyramid of Thoth (UP) for details.

AV-16: Hidden Stairs to SL4-37

In a rubble-filled cellar just off the Grand Forum (AV-7) lies a hidden staircase that leads down 725' to area SL4-37. The stairs twist and turn over numerous landings. The cellar is concealed beneath 5' of rubble. Clearing the debris reveals a 10'-wide stair leading to a 40'-square sub-basement; there an archway provides access to the staircase. The left arm of the colossal statue of Arden (see AV-30) has been tossed into the sub-basement.

AV-17: Plaza of the Priests of Thoth, with Stairs to Level 1-1

To the west of the pyramid of Thoth was a complex of buildings given over to the small army of priests of Thoth and their servitors. Amid the general flattening of the region, one building - some 20'x30'x10' - still stands, albeit only its bottom floor; the top floor has caved into it. A narrow chimney (1'x1') pokes out the rubble; it leads down to Level 1 (1-19)

Those poking around in the ruins of this dormitory have a good chance of finding the staircase that leads down 60' to dungeon Level 1 (area 1-1). If the PCs do not know of the existence of the staircase, they have a 1 in 6 chance of finding it for each turn spent poking in the local ruins. If they have heard of its existence, then the chance rises to 3 in 6 per turn of searching.

Roll on the following table for each turn that the PCs search the rubble around the Plaza of Thoth:

D20	Result
1-5	Nothing
6-7	3-12 giant rats: SZ S; AL N(E); AC 7; MV 120'; HD 1-4 HP; HP 4(x3), 3(x3), 2(x3), 1(x3); #AT 1; Dmg 1-3. Special attacks: 5% chance of disease
8-9	A nest of wasps

18-19	3 sets of human remains. 2 in 10 chance they animate, as either a zombie or skeleton. Remains have jewelry worth 150 gp.
20	Golden statuette worth 75 gp; 10% chance it is magic and dances when commanded (375 gp). May only be found once.

AV-18: Buried Cellar with Access to Level 2-23

Amid the ruins of a Thothian priest's urban residence is a hole leading to a lost cellar. The cellar is partly filled with rubble, but includes several items of note, including three broken marble statues each about 6' tall, as well as the marble right leg from the colossal statue of Arden (see AV-30). The ordinary statues could be reassembled and sold for a handsome sum. Their subjects are Horus in a triumphant pose (75 gp, or 700 gp if repaired), Uriel Gnaeus, the founder of the Order of Thoth (45 gp or 450 gp if repaired; see Collegia in the World of Archontos appendix for information on the Order), and a finely-dressed goblin (40 gp or 275 gp if repaired). Perhaps more significantly, the cellar wall holds a secret door leading to Level 2 (2-23).

Secret Door: The door is normal to find, and opens by sliding a panel to the right into the wall. Within is a spiral staircase that leads down about 225' to area 2-23.

AV-19: Ruined Palace with Stairs to 3-50A

Casual inspection would not indicate anything of interest in this mound of rubble except that it is slightly taller than its neighbors. And yet careful inspection will instantly reveal to a tracker the signs of recent activity: boot prints, a few swatches of wool and linen caught on broken masonry, and several un-rusted iron buckles. Non-rangers have a 25% chance to spot the clues if they search this area carefully.

The rubble conceals a trap door leading to the cellars of this once-grand palace. The trap door is difficult to detect (1 in 8 chance) unless the clues mentioned previously have been spotted, in which case it is easy to locate (1 in 4 chance).

The (unmapped) cellar is about 150'x60' in size, with 15' ceilings, and is divided into three sub-sections. The trap door enters into the first, or entry chamber.

Cellar, Entry Room (30'x60'): A score of empty wooden boxes are scattered throughout it, while eight zombies slouch among the rubble. The boxes are all of quite recent vintage, and bear stamps of current victuallers from Narsileon. The north wall boasts an archway concealed behind a stack of boxes. A trap door in the ceiling near the south wall leads up to the city ruins.

Cellar, middle room (100'x60'): This huge chamber features a score of heavy stone pillars that hold up the ceiling. A ruined staircase once led up into the palace proper. Ancient debris is scattered everywhere, almost all of it useless: bits of leather, rotted sacks, desiccated foodstuffs, wine turned to vinegar, broken tools, and so forth. Among the trash, however, is a coil of elven rope (see new magic items). An archway in the south wall leads to the entrance chamber of the cellars. Eight more zombies patrol this hall.

A plaster coat of arms is affixed to the west wall at the foot of the stairs. The coat of arms features a set of fasces and an officer's baculus tied together with a complex knot. Those with specific knowledge of the Priscians or a deep historical knowledge (i.e., not just cultural knowledge) might recognize the knot as the one used by the Sortians in antiquity and the Priscians in the present. The coat of arms may be identified by anyone with knowledge of the Archontean nobility as belonging to the Briennios clan, still one of the important mid-rank clans in Archontos. The World of Archontos appendix contains information on the above groups.

Secret Door (north wall): The door is difficult to locate (1 in 8 chance). It opens by thrusting a 1"-diameter object into a hole in the ceiling (15' above the floor).

Cellar, secret room (20x'20'): This secret chamber exists to conceal a narrow, 5'-wide entrance to the staircase that descends some 350' through several landings until it reaches Level 3 (3-50A).

GM Note: these ruins were once the palace of the Briennios clan in Arden Vul. The Briennios were and still are an important imperial service clan, one that provides many bureaucrats and officers. At the time of the War of the Sortians and Theosophs, the Briennios were highly placed advisors to the archon of Arden Vul. Yet Lucius Briennios was also an old schoolmate of Macrinus Furiosus, and eventually became a secret supporter of the Sortians. He allowed the Sortians to construct their secret entrance in the cellar of his urban palace. That entrance remained undiscovered for more than a thousand years until Nerub Null (9-64) discovered area 3-50, and the stairs at 3-50A. Nerub Null eventually built the secret entrance in the ruins to allow his allies and badly-needed supplies to enter the dungeons. They only use the entrance in the dead of night so as to minimize the chance of discovery. The Priscians animated the zombies to guard their secret entrance.

Inhabitants:

1. 16 zombies: SZ M; AL N; AC 8; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 14(x3), 12(x4), 11(x3), 10(x3), 9(x3); #AT 1; Dmg 1-8. Special: always strike last.

AV-20: Isadora's Estate, with Stairs to SL11-18

A once-elegant villa lies in ruins just outside the walls of Arden Vul. During the period before the Archontean collapse, it was owned by the famous Lady Isadora (see World of Archontos appendix), a known aesthete, artist, philosopher, and hostess of one of the great intellectual and political salons of her age. The villa was in the classic Archontean style, albeit on a grand scale: it had two atria and a large peristyle along with the usual suites of chambers for Isadora, her guests, her servants, and her extensive collection of art. While about half of the walls still stand, the roof is long gone and the house has been stripped entirely of its movable goods.

In one desolate chamber off the peristyle may be found a set of stairs leading to the wine cellar. A rank animal stench permeates the cellar, for an exceptionally large giant wolverine makes its lair here. Although sixteen large casks still line the walls, the wine evaporated long ago, leaving only a thick precipitate coating the casks. Several skeletons of human adventurers are scattered about the floor of the cellar.

One of the wine casks is actually a permanent illusion, designed to cover the portal to Isadora's secret tomb (Sub-Level 11). Those able to see past the illusion will see a stone wall upon which glow fourteen gold glyphs arranged in a circle. Read magic determines that the glyphs represent letters of the Archontean alphabet. Clockwise from the top center, the letters read ORCUSAIDSPAIRS. The letters are the key to an anagram puzzle that, if correctly solved, reveals and opens a magically concealed door on the wall. To reveal the door, one must press the glyphs/letters in either of the following combinations: "ISADORAPRISCUS" or "PRISCUSISADORA".

Any incorrect combination instantly summons an invisible stalker that was bound to this task a millennium ago by Isadora's Sortian friends. The stalker attempts to eliminate all present, but will not pursue out of the cellar. It waits for a month, however, and will be ready to attack the same party if the party ventures into the cellar again. Even if the initial invisible stalker is slain, others will take up the task if and when subsequent attempts to solve the puzzle prove incorrect.

Should the puzzle be decoded and the door revealed, it is found to lead to a small chamber that contains a circular staircase. The stairs are roughly carved of granite, and boast a rise to run ratio too large for human feet. They descends 150' to Sub-Level 11 (SL11-18).

GM Note: Should one ever investigate Archontean civil property records for the estate (which is possible in Narsileon, at the House of Coins; see World of Archontos appendix), those records will reveal that the estate was owned for 700 years by a succession of women whose names always began with the letter 'I': Ianthe, Isabella, Iola, Irene, Isolde, and finally, Isadora. All these women were the same person, namely the gold dragon, Yasidoranicil (see SL11-19); she changed her name to preserve her human identity across the centuries.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 exceptionally large giant wolverine: SZ M; AL N; AC 4; MV 150'; HD 5+5; HD 42; #AT 3; Dmg 2-5/2-5/2-8. Special attacks: musk; +4 to hit.
2. 1 invisible stalker: SZ L; AL N; AC 3; MV 120'; HD 8; HP 55; #AT 1; Dmg 4-16; MR 30%. Special attacks: surprise on 1-5. Special defenses: invisibility.

Treasure:

Two suits of slightly damaged chain mail, a long sword, sixteen darts, two flasks of oil, a scroll of protection from evil, a scroll of locate place (see new spells), a potion of fire resistance, a potion of hostile levitation (see new magic items), and a purse containing a large lump of amber (175 gp) and 113 sp.

AV-21: Northgate

Kronos Kettle-Belly (AV-22) and his team have cleared the area around the north gate of rubble. The two 30' towers have new doors, which are locked with shiny new padlocks. Kronos has placed teams of two men in the top of each tower to observe activity in the ruins. Those men have orders to shout at any newcomers to the ruins and invite them to the Broken Head (see below, AV-22). They will not leave their perch under any circumstances, even to aid those in need. They are well stocked with horns, quivers, mead and food.

Inhabitants:

1. 4 2nd-level Thorcin fighters: SZ M; AL LN; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 16, 15; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (bow) or 1-6 (short sword). Possessions: studded leather armor and shield; short swords; short bows; 2-12 sp each. One has a potion of healing.

AV-22: The Sign of the Broken Head

Two enterprising rascals - a Thorcin named Kronos Kettle-Belly and his Archontean lover, Estelle - have established a fortified refuge and trading center just beyond the River Gate (AV-23).

Kronos built his inn on the solid foundation of an old outbuilding, and used scavenged stone blocks and wood beams to build a central structure that is 30'x40'x25', with a 20'x20'x12' ell projecting to the southeast. The main structure is fort-like, with no windows on the stone ground story, and only a few narrow windows set into the wooden second floor. It resembles, in short, a blockhouse. The connected ell is a stable with a 15'-wide wooden door (and no interior connection to the inn). Several less-fortified outbuildings are scattered nearby, including a smokehouse, a kitchen, and two storehouses.

The Head of Arden: Kronos and his men have salvaged the colossal head of Arden the Defender from the ruins of the forum (see AV-30), and have mounted it on a beam above the front door of the Inn. The head is six feet in diameter, with oval, staring eyes (empty of their insets), and is depicted clad in a Corinthian helmet. The head detects as magic (as Estelle well knows), but seems inert. In fact, if it is addressed as "Lord Arden" it will animate and whisper "Restore me! Restore me! Courage shall be yours when I am whole and the incantation sung!" GM Note: the head's cryptic whisper refers to the potential for restoring the statue at AV-30 (q.v.).

The Broken Head:

The inn-cum-tavern is basically a single, smoky common room with a large fireplace and numerous sturdy wooden tables and legs. The place is lit by the fire and by two continual light spells cast onto pebbles (which Kronos received as gifts from some grateful clients). At precisely 11 PM, Kronos covers the pebbles and the common room is darkened (until 6 AM). Upstairs is a large bunkroom plus three private rooms. The largest of the three is where Kronos and Estelle sleep, the second has been turned into an office and storeroom, and the third is kept empty for important visitors. Kronos's employees sleep in the bunkroom, which has room for 36. Any additional guests sleep on the floor of the Common Room.

Kronos's rates for rooms are reasonable: a bed in the bunkroom costs 10 sp/day, or 3 gp/week, whereas the private room is 3 gp/day, or 20 gp/week. If the one private room is available (33% chance), it can be rented for 3 gp/day, or 20 gp/week. Food is additional, 2sp for a simple meal, and 2 gp for a rich meal. Kronos also sells kits of iron rations for 3x the normal costs.

Traveling Tinkers:

Kronos encourages traders to add the Broken Head to their regular rounds, so as to be able to provide supplies to adventurers. At any given time 1-3 traders are likely to be present at the Broken Head. These traders offer adventuring gear at 150% of the list price; each trader has a hoard of 100-400 gp worth of coins and gems on his/her person. Luxury items from civilization will not typically be available, but there is a 10-40% chance that one of the traders will carry something unusual, whether it is 1-4 potions of healing, a treasure map, a bit of useful lore relating to the Halls of Arden Vul (equivalent to a good rumor), etc.

The Statue Brokers:

Kronos permits three statue brokers from the merchant factors of Newmarket (see World of Archontos appendix) to live at the inn as permanent residents. These aggressive merchants are Crisarius Three-Legs, from the Prosperity Factor, Fenitior Stone-Hands, from the Wisdom Factor, and Godric the Wise, a rare Thorcin member of the Golden Band. The clever system they have worked out is this: they convince adventurers to locate and remove statues from Arden. Whichever broker is chosen by the adventurers then assigns a value to the statue and issues a letter of credit for that value; the letter may only be turned into cash, however, when the adventurers deliver the statue to the appropriate factor building in Newmarket. A broker gets 10% of the valuation of any statue, and Kronos gets another 10%. Each month a messenger from Newmarket delivers news and a bag of gems (typically 50 gems worth 50-100 gp each) to each broker; these gems are for expenses, bribery, and payment for successful transactions.

The three brokers appear as bitter enemies when negotiating with adventurers, but are actually close friends. They are also canny evaluators and, while happy to bid against each other, are unlikely to be snookered by adventurers. Kronos likes the money he receives from the brokers, and will protect them vigorously if needed; those threatening the brokers may find themselves ostracized from the Broken Head.

Valuation of statues is up to the GM, but should be calculated as a factor of size, quality, and subject matter. Although some of the statues in this text are provided with specific values many are not, so the following guidelines allow the GM to roughly calculate the value of a statue.

Size	Tiny	25 gp
	Small	50 gp
	Medium	100 gp
	Large	200 gp
Subject	Unimportant	25 gp
	Average	50 gp
	Important	100 gp
	Very Important	200 gp
Quality	Poor	x2
	Fair	x5
	Good	x10
	Exceptional	x20

The value is calculated by adding the figures for appropriate size and subject matter together and then multiplying by quality. So, a medium sized statue with an average subject that is of good quality would be worth approximately 1,500 gp.

The brokers typically start with an offer that is 50% of the value of a statue; they expect to haggle, and would like to end up at a price that is 75-80% of the value of any statue. Canny PC thieves or others with appraisal skills will be able, however, to realize they are being fleeced. Once aware that they are facing skilled negotiators, the brokers quickly fall into line, beginning their haggling at 80% of value and hoping to end at no more than 110% of value.

Kronos's Illicit Activities:

Despite his friendly and engaging manner, Kronos is an inquisitive, acquisitive, and thoroughly opportunistic person. As his main reason for establishing the Broken Head was to get rich by fleecing adventurers, he is quick to encourage adventurers to tell tales of their exploits and, especially, of the loot they have acquired. Ordinarily he will be content to fleece his sheep by charging high prices. Flashy displays of wealth, however, and particularly of wealth newly acquired from the Halls, are liable to tempt him to more aggressive action; he might (25%) decide to pay the unlucky victim a visit with his entire crew. Kronos and company will wait until early morning before surrounding the victims and politely demanding the goods. If the party looks too powerful (level 4 or above), he will attempt theft by stealth instead. That said, Kronos is also a nervous fellow and circumspection (and/or magical concealment) on the part of the PCs will prevent overt attacks.

Information and Assistance at the Broken Head:

A careful and cautious party should be able to rest and recuperate from dungeon adventuring at the Broken Head without fear of harm. Wounded characters will be able to purchase healing and protective magic from Estelle, at the following rates:

Cure Light Wounds	100 gp
Detect Magic	150 gp
Protection from Evil	350 gp
Augury	300 gp
Slow Poison	350 gp
Cure Blindness	1,000 gp
Cure Disease	1,000 gp
Dispel Magic	700 gp
Remove Curse	1,000 gp
Cure Serious Wounds	350 gp
Neutralize Poison	1,000 gp

Estelle is in love with Kronos and will do his bidding as needed.

Relationships with Other Inhabitants of the Ruins:

1. Craastonistorex (AV-40): Kronos and Estelle are wary of the dragon; they provide him with game on a weekly basis, and Estelle, unbeknownst to Kronos, is providing cure spells and information about Arden Vul in lieu of monetary tribute. If asked about threats in the ruins, the pair will warn guests about the dragon, and will advise them to treat the wyrm politely, but firmly. If guests grow irritating or hostile, Kronos will attempt to persuade the wyrm to attack the unwanted PCs.
2. Tuftwillig (AV-7): No one at the Broken Head is aware of the sentient tree.
3. Galeth, Master of the Long House (AV-43): Estelle is aware of a great evil in the Long House, but does not know its nature. She knows of the ghouls, of course, since they frequently emerge at night, but the identity of their master remains unknown.
4. Phlebotomas Plumthorn and his halflings (Level 3, areas 3-2 to 3-6): Kronos and Estelle are perfectly aware of the extortion racket set up by the halflings on Level 3, and are in fact envious of Phlebotomas's ingenuity. Out of grudging professional respect, they pretend ignorance of the halflings and their game. If PCs ask about halflings spotted among the ruins, they will suggest that these are adventurers. Once a month the halflings trade loot from the halls to Kronos for provisions; this transaction is a secret known only to Kronos and Estelle.

5. The Beastmen (Level 3, areas 3-138 to 3-162): Kronos and Estelle are neutral with regard to the beastmen. They know the beastmen must have a separate entrance to the Halls (EX-12), but do not know where it is, nor have they (yet) attempted to locate it. Since the beastmen have seemed honorable (i.e., lawful), the pair is content to watch them and, on occasion, trade with them.
6. The Cult of Set (Level 4, especially 4-1 to 4-61): The inhabitants of the Broken Head know that the entrance to the precincts of Set lies on the cliff face (EX-15). Although they know little specific about the cult, they are generally intimidated by the demeanor of the cultists. Kronos would be highly pleased if the PCs were to quietly eliminate the cultists from the Westgate (AV-44).
7. Other Threats: Kronos and his men will be happy to describe some of the threats which lie in the ruins, including the baboon tower (AV-9), some 'unknown but deadly creatures' at the donjon (AV-27), the giant crocodiles and giant snapping turtle (AV-35), and numerous vermin, bears, minor undead, spiders, and snakes.
8. Legend: They also have developed a fake 'ghost story' which they use to try to impress and intimidate newcomers; this story involves the ghost of a certain 'Hurree the Echophont' who allegedly reacts to loud noises by threats and attacks. Kronos's men love to develop new tales about Hurree's depredations. The rascals have based their fake ghost on the name and quirks of a one-time visitor to the inn, one Chaudri the Echophont. Chaudri is currently found at 7-76C, where he remains ignorant of his 'fame'.

Knowledge of the Dungeons:

Kronos and Estelle are an excellent source of rumors concerning the Halls (see Rumors in the General Introduction). They are able to dispense five adventuring and three historical rumors to newcomers to the Sign of the Broken Head. There is a 33% chance that they learn a new rumor each week.

In addition to randomly-determined rumors, the pair can impart the following information to those who ask (provided the questioners are polite and respectful):

1. Entrances: The Pyramid of Thoth (AV-15) is the main entrance, but there are probably some lesser holes on the cliff face that provide access (e.g., EX-11, EX-15). They suspect that some of the cellars in the ruined city also lead down to the dungeons.
2. Levels: They are certain that there are 'at least a dozen' levels under the pyramid, culminating in a huge cavern with an enormous lake.
3. Inhabitants: They know of a tribe of baboons (Level 2), a well-organized unit of beastmen (Level 3), a goblin kingdom (Sub-Level 4), and a tribe of 'advanced' lizardmen (Sub-Level 5). They have heard of the existence of a band of intelligent "trolls" (i.e., the varumani of Level 7).
4. Iconic Locations: They can provide the usual information (see Iconic Locations in the General Introduction) about the following locations: the Pyramid of Thoth, the Court of the Goblin King, the Great Chasm, the Obsidian Gates; the Great Cavern; the Sundered Span; the Forum of Set; and the Inn of the Lost.

5. Personalities: They have heard the name Deino (3-158) from the beastmen, and assume her to be a beastman leader; they also know of Kerbog Khan the sorcerer (SL12-25), and assume he has control of an entire level; they know of and fear High Priestess Stephania of the cult of Set (4-51); they know of a grand king of the goblins, named Witsen (actually Weskenim, at SL4-22); they know that Gog (5-2) is a wise hermit who aids the needy; they consider Lankios to be crazy but harmless (1-6); their men have conversed with 'a very strange druid' named Gerrilad in the woods north of the the ruined city (2-69).
6. Treasures and Hoards: They have heard of the following treasures and tombs, and will confidently supply incorrect directions to each: Muirasso's Tomb (5-36 to 5-40); the lost library of Thoth, containing powerful spells unknown to present wizards (2-70 and 2-72); the tomb of the great hero, Larel One-Eye (3-46); and the tomb of the conqueror-archon, Marius the Great (6-154). They also speak confidently of two non-existent tombs, those of Huree the Ecophont (see above) and Tristion Varrell; while they know the former is false, they believe thoroughly in the existence of the latter.

Permanent Inhabitants:

1. Kronos Kettle-Belly, 6th-level Thorcin thief, SZ M; AL CN; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 6; HP 30; #AT 1l Dmg 1-8 (long sword) or 3-6 (dagger +2). Abilities: STR 11; INT 13; WIS 9; DEX 16; CON 10; CHA 16. Thief skills: PP 55%, OL 52%, F/RT 45%, MS 47%, HS 37%, HN 20%, CW 92%, RL 30%. Possessions: leather armor; long sword; dagger +2; sling with 20 bullets; potions of healing, gaseous form, human control and levitation. He carries a purse with 39 sp and 43 gp.
2. Estelle, 7th-level Archontean cleric of Tychias: SZ M; AL CN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 7; HP 45; #AT 1; Dmg 2-9 (mace +1). Abilities: STR 11; INT 11; WIS 17; DEX 12; CON 9; CHA 15. Possessions: chain mail and shield; gold holy symbol (150 gp); mace +1; staff of curing (20 charges); and potions of extra healing and polymorph self. She carries a purse with 36 cp, 25 sp, and 78 gp. Estelle has prayed for the following spells: bless, cure light wounds (x2), protection from evil, sanctuary, augury, know alignment, silence 15' radius, slow poison, speak with animals, create food and water, dispel magic, remove curse; cure serious wounds.
3. 8 2nd-level Thorcin fighters: SZ M; AL LN; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 20, 18, 17, 17, 16, 15, 15, 14; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (bow) or 1-6 (short sword). Possessions: studded leather armor and shield; short swords; short bows; 2-12 sp each.
4. 2 female Archontean cooks: SZ M; AL NG; AC 10; MV 90'; HD 1-6 HP; HP 5, 4; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (cleaver). Possessions: cleavers.
5. 2 Thorcin boys as grooms: noncombatants (AC 10, HP 2).
6. 4 Thorcin men for all-purpose tasks: SZ M; AL NG; AC 8; MV 90'; HD 1-6 HP; HP 6, 4, 3, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger). Possessions: leather armor; daggers; 2-12 sp.
7. 3 statue brokers: Crisarius Three-Legs, an Archontean from the Prosperity Factor; Fenitior Stone-Hands, an Archontean from the Wisdom Factor; and Godric the Wise, a Thorcin from the Golden Band (see World of Archontos appendix for factors). Their statistics are as follows: SZ M; AL NE; AC 8; MV 90'; HD 1-6 HP; HP 4, 3, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger). Possessions: leather armor; daggers; pouches with 40-60 gems worth 50-100 gp each.

Treasure:

2,397 sp and 3,024 gp are kept in an iron box inside a keg of ale in the storeroom along with a potion of plant control. The iron box is locked and trapped with a poison needle trap. Kronos keeps the only key. Kronos and Estelle have their special wealth stashed in a tightly wrapped oilcloth packet secured to the inside of their bedframe; in it are 20 ancient octagonal platinum coins taken from the ruins (see Arden Vul items), a small silk pouch with 20 amethysts (100 gp each), a scroll with the clerical spell holy name (see new spells), and an emerald necklace (1,475 gp).

AV-23: River Gate

These two massive (40'-square) towers used to guard the river entry to Arden Vul. They suffered badly when the city was ravaged.

West Tower: The top 30' of the western tower have been utterly demolished, leaving a 10'-tall shell completely filled with rubble. Searching the rubble is dangerous (roll 2d8 under DEX or take 2-12 damage from falling rubble), but potentially profitable. Deep within the tower (accessible only after 3-6 hours digging) is a skeleton clutching a tarnished silver coffer (3'x1'). Inside the coffer are two 1'-long silver ankh-keys (see Arden Vul items), one chased with black glass and the other with a white glass. These are control instruments for the obelisks in the ruins. Accompanying the ankhs is a copper tablet with the following instructions in Mithric: "To open the Chamber of the Beacon, all three ankhs must be pressed into the proper locations on the proper monument at midday." The corpse wears cursed boots of attraction (see new magic items).

GM Note: The tablet refers to the obelisks at AV-5, AV-41, and AV-28. Manipulation of the obelisks opens the doors at AV-34 that lead to SL14-1.

Treasure:

Silver coffer (worth 100 gp) with ankh-keys (see A and instruction plaque; boots of attraction (see new magic items).

East Tower: Two sides of this tower (east and south) are still mostly intact (30' tall). A steep slope of rubble leads from the ground near the river up to those walls. This rubble pile is pretty secure, so it is relatively easy to climb to the top of the pile and get a nice view of the city. The former south entrance door leads to a 10'x18' 'chamber' under the rubble. Adventurers and hermits occasionally make use of this space, which boasts a cook-fire, a battered bucket, and a small stack of firewood. There's a 25% chance that a group of 3-6 adventurers has staked this place out.

AV-24: Swift River

True to its name, the Swift River rushes through the ruins at a fast clip. The current is too fast to swim in the western, or main, arm of the river; in the eastern channel, which leads to the docks, however, the current is potentially swim-able.

AV-25: Shattered Northern Bridge

This shattered stone bridge has a 15' gap between its surviving segments. The bridge is extremely fragile.

AV-26: Bridge to Ruined Donjon

Surprisingly this slender masonry bridge is still intact after all the centuries. It is only 8' wide, with a 1' parapet. Those standing on the bridge will be able to see the Outer Bailey (AV-27) clearly, with its bones and stone lumps. If the PCs seem to be eager to cross the bridge, Kronos's men in the towers of AV-21 will shout at them to try to gain their attention; the archers will warn them against the bridge, saying that it leads to certain doom. On the east bank next to the mouth of the bridge is a small intact guard-room; it is 10' square and missing its roof.

AV-27: Ruined Donjon, with Access to 6-152 and SL15-4

The citadel of Arden Vul was mostly destroyed during the assault on the city. It originally featured a curtain wall on the northern and western sides (studded with three 25'-diameter towers), and a large oblong fortress inside those walls.

Outer Bailey: This open area lies north of the curtain wall, near the bridge (AV-26). It is relatively clear of masonry debris. Observers from either bank will see four large (8'-tall) misshapen lumps of guano-stained stone and a large number bones gleaming in the sun. The lumps of stone are imperial stone guardians (see new monsters), still vigilant in their efforts to defend the citadel. Should interlopers cross the bridge into the outer bailey, the stone guardians lumber into action and assault the intruders with their stone fists.

Inhabitants of the Outer Bailey:

1. 4 imperial stone guardians (see new monsters): SZ L; AL N; AC -2; MV 90'; HD 8+3; HP 60, 60, 60, 60; #AT 2; Dmg 3-18/3-18; MR 50%. Special defenses: +2 or better weapons to hit; immune to missiles (including magic missile), fire, cold, mind-affecting spells (e.g. charm), and most immobilizing spells (immune to entangle, hold monster, web).

Curtain Wall and Towers: Almost all of the northern and western curtain walls were destroyed, leaving only a 10'-tall line of rubble. Only two of the towers that once studded the walls remain partly intact; the others are shapeless piles of rubble.

Carrion Tower (West Tower): This tower takes its name from the several dozen large black vultures that make it their home. They nest in the top-most surviving level of the tower, which they access through a catapult hole on the western side of the tower, by the river. Their lair is foul such that on a bad day the reek drifts across the river to the western bank. Access to the tower was originally achieved from a door to the curtain wall, but the collapse of the walls has buried the entrance. At present, the only way to access the tower is by scaling its outside walls and entering the chamber of the vultures. PCs who do so must save vs. poison or be weakened (-2 to all rolls) for an hour due to retching. The vultures squawk at intruders, but do not attack. Within, a stone stair leads down through two more levels and into a basement. The middle level of the tower is empty save for some skeletons, but the lowest (ground) level of the tower has another imperial stone guardian.

The basement hides a secret door that leads to a circular staircase that descends 1,200' down through the rock to access the dungeon levels below (6-152). Within the basement are four two-handed swords of fine quality and archaic style.

Inhabitants of the Carrion Tower:

1. 1 imperial stone guardian (see new monsters): SZ L; AL N; AC -2; MV 90'; HD 8+3; HP 60; #AT 2; Dmg 3-18/3-18; MR 50%. Special defenses: +2 or better weapons to hit; immune to missiles (including magic missile), fire, cold, mind-affecting spells (e.g. charm), and most immobilizing spells (immune to entangle, hold monster, web).

Ghost Tower (Northwest Tower): Known to modern explorers as the Ghost Tower, this four-story tower is in almost pristine condition, complete with conical, slate-covered roof. Access is via the five 10'-wide windows that lead into the top story; behind the windows are the charred ruins of ballistae and, surprisingly, a half a barrel of still-usable flammable oil (15 flasks worth). The third story was once a barracks, but the cots, chests, and equipment were long ago destroyed; six sets of ancient, skeletonized remains lie among the ruins. Half of the second story has collapsed, although the other half still contains three desks; among the drawers are some blank archonal rescripts, with the 'signature' of Uriel Basileon (see AV-29). The rescripts could be used to impersonate imperial authority, provided the forger can imitate imperial court hand. The door from the inner bailey to the ground floor is blocked by the partial collapse of the second story; it would take 6 hours of serious digging to clear the rubble. The basement contains supplies, including 40 spears, 20 gladii, 20 medium iron shields, 5 grappling hooks, 20 crossbows, and 360 crossbow bolts. A trap door in the basement leads to a sub-basement, which is mapped and keyed as area SL15-4. The spirits of two late Archontean-era dekarchs, Poulos Tissel and Mekos Gadril, haunt the entire tower as vengeful spirits (see new monsters). One spirit is always found in the Ghost Tower proper, while the other is found in the sub-basement (SL15-4). The pair seek vengeance for their murder; finding their bones in the sub-basement and giving them proper burial puts the spirits to rest. The wordless cries and moans of Poulos and Mekos have given the tower its current name.

Inhabitants of the Ghost Tower:

1. Poulos Tissel and Mekos Gadril, vengeful spirits (see new monsters): SZ M; AL LE; AC 1; MV 120'; HD 6; HP 41, 36; #AT 1; Dmg 1-12; MR 25%. Special attacks: STR drain. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to fire; turned as vampires; reform in 1-6 hours if their bones remain unburied.

Inner Bailey:

This open space between the curtain walls and the donjon features nothing but cracked and buckled pavement and a variety of scorched and ruined pieces of armor.

Donjon:

This impressive fortification once loomed 40' over the river that surrounds it. The thick walls were mostly solid, with only an occasional arrow slit for light (and defense). It used to contain a ground floor (storage, forage, stables), a first floor (great hall and a few solars), a second floor (barracks, armory, kitchen, jakes), a third floor (command rooms, private chambers, wizard's lab, etc.), a machicolated roof, and extensive cellars.

At present the donjon is in a bad state of disrepair. The front doors (to the inner bailey) have been blasted off (signs of charring, but the doors are absent) and the roof has collapsed, burying most of the third floor. In addition, the northeast wall (badly damaged in the assault), has collapsed, leaving a large ramp of masonry from ground to the second floor, a ramp that opens into the former great hall. An enterprising party might be able to swim the river (avoiding the outer bailey and the imperial stone guardians there), and climb the rubble pile to access the donjon from the 2nd floor.

One corner of the cellar contains a set of 2'-tall paving stones arranged in a 6'-diameter ring. Inset into the floor next to the ring is a rectangle 48" long by 8" tall; the rectangle is divided into six interior compartments, each 8" square. Together these elements form a Thothian teleportation ring (see new magic items). To activate the ring, one must place six colored glass activation squares into the inset according to a sequence that matches the 'address' of the ring to which one wishes to travel. Once the squares are placed, a brief shimmer of energy is visible over the ring. At this point the user has 1 round to collect the squares and enter the ring, after which anyone in the ring is teleported without error to address indicated by that sequence of squares. If the glass activation squares are not collected and/or if the travelers do not possess a second set of them, they are likely to be stranded in the location to which they have just teleported. The address of this ring is as follows: GR-RE-YE-BL-BK-WH (see new magic items for explanation). None of the glass activation squares necessary to operate the circle are present.

GM Note: If desired, the GM could draw up detailed maps of the donjon, adding new threats, treasures, and potential connections to the Halls below.

AV-28: Obelisk of the Moon

This obelisk is one of the three needed to open the chamber of the Beacon (see AV-34/SL14-1). Only a 10' stump of the obelisk still stands, hidden behind the 8' walls that enclosed the secluded garden of the archon's palace (AV-29). Still, that stump contains the same inscription and indentation for an ankh-key as its partners (see AV-5 for details), and just enough of the lunar iconography to identify it as the obelisk of the moon.

Due to its fragmentary state, this obelisk may prove more difficult to locate than the other two. Unless daring adventurers either 1) gain access to the solarium (AV-29) or 2) clamber over the rubble of the palace to find the secluded garden in the northeast corner of the palace (AV-29), they may never realize that the third obelisk is here.

AV-29: Palace Ruins

The northern end of this island was the site of the palace of the imperial archon (governor) of the city. It spanned an area of roughly 75'x130' and was four stories tall, with three domes rising above the roof (two 25'-diameter domes flanked a central 35'-diameter dome). Much of the complex, and in particular the western and central portions of it (holding sumptuous apartments, meeting rooms, libraries, dining facilities, etc.), lie in ruins.

Observers will note that the eastern wing seems in better shape, and that the eastern dome is still intact. Strangely, the 15'-tall ebony double-doors of the main entrance are also still intact; they lead to a now-buried-but-still-traversable corridor leading into the palace. The curious are, of course, capable of crawling into and on top of the rubble on either side of the doors. Searching this rubble leads to the usual search checks for the ruins of Arden Vul.

The ebony doors still carry one of their protective enchantments, a permanent magic mouth that activates when anyone touches the doors; it sternly declaims in Mithric, "Stand aside, citizen. This is not your home!". The doors are permanently wizard locked (by a 12th-level magic user). Should a group of adventurers get past the doors, they will find a bizarrely domestic scene within: a carpeted antechamber with two wooden settees and three doors leading to the separate wings of the palace. The antechamber also holds two desiccated bodies of servants who starved to death here. The doors on the northern and western walls lead to areas of the palace that have collapsed, but the eastern door (also wizard locked at the 12th level) leads to the one remaining intact portion of the palace.

Eastern Wing of the Palace:

The door from the antechamber leads east past several storerooms, a stairwell filled with rubble from the upper floors, and a sitting room with crumbling silk and linen finery (1 tapestry still recoverable: 100 gp).

The sitting room contains a set of 2'-tall paving stones arranged in a 6'-diameter ring. Inset into the floor next to the ring is a rectangle 48" long by 8" tall; the rectangle is divided into six interior compartments, each 8" square. Together these elements form a Thothian teleportation ring (see new magic items). To activate the ring, one must place six colored glass activation squares into the inset according to a sequence that matches the 'address' of the ring to which one wishes to travel. Once the squares are placed, a brief shimmer of energy is visible over the ring. At this point the user has 1 round to collect the squares and enter the ring, after which anyone in the ring is teleported without error to address indicated by that sequence of squares. If the glass activation squares are not collected and/or if the travelers do not possess a second set of them, they are likely to be stranded in the location to which they have just teleported. The address of this ring is as follows: GR-RE-YE-WH-BK-BL (see new magic items for explanation). None of the glass activation squares necessary to operate the circle are present.

At the end of the corridor, and lying directly under the eastern dome, is the famous imperial solarium. This room is 35' in diameter and rises the full four-stories in height; the underside of the stone dome proves to have been enchanted to let in sunlight, and as a result the chamber is bright and warm. Balconies and short bridges (describing arcs along the sides of the chamber, but not across the middle) dot the vertical faces of the solarium; these feature planters of various size and shape, which still hold an exotic mixture of flora. The center of the ground floor is home to a 15'-diameter basin and fountain; its magic has not failed, and as a result jets of water periodically spray out of the fountain to water the balconies. This means that the entire area is damp and humid; indeed, the floor is slick with spray. Due to these imperial magicks, plant life has flourished over the millennia. A verdant growth of vines, orchids, small shrubs, and even an old, but stunted, elm tree grow on (and hang from) the various balconies. Amid the plant life are an assassin vine and a shambling mound.

The body of the last imperial governor, Uriel Basileon, may be found on the royal balcony,  $\frac{2}{3}$  of the way up the western side of the chamber, where she committed ritual suicide as the city fell. Her body still holds the imperial signet ring and her rod of imperium, as well as other treasures. It would take quite a bit of searching to find her and her settee amid all the riot of plant life, and those attempting to loot her body will have to contend with a nasty specimen of assassin vine (see new monsters).

A pair of double-doors on the north wall of the solarium leads to a walled (8'-tall) garden in which lies the stump of the third obelisk (see AV-28). That garden is also verdant, although empty of threats (and treasures).

Note: The governor's palace was one of the destinations for the one-way teleport pillar at 4-167. Since the floor where the destination used to be located has collapsed, those teleported here find themselves falling through the air for 10' before landing on the rubble (1-6 damage). Surprised travelers might, however, glimpse the stump of the Obelisk of the Moon (AV-28) as they fall.

Expansion: Should the GM wish to have further adventures in the ruined palace, some of the doors from the ledges of the solarium could lead to other undamaged areas of the palace.

Inhabitants:

- 1 shambling mound: SZ L; AL N; AC 0; HD 8; HP 56; #AT 2; Dmg 2-16/2-16. Special attacks: suffocation. Special defenses: immune to fire; lightning causes it to grow; cold does  $\frac{1}{2}$  or no damage.
- 2 1 assassin vine (see new monsters): SZ S (effective); AL N; AC 8 (main plant), 4 (tendrils); HD 8 (main plant); HP 53 (main plant), 5 (tendrils); #AT 24; Dmg special. Special attacks: drag; strangulation; digestion.

Treasure:

Archontean signet ring (150 gp in materials, 3,000 gp to certain modern Archontean); rod of imperium (a rod of lordly might); a 2-lb lump of arcanum (see new magic items); platinum coronet (1,500 gp); an iron key to area SL8-1; three silver ankh-keys (see Arden Vul items); five rubies (500 gp each); short-sword +2, named Jellicose (INT 13; low empathy, True Neutral, see invisible 10' radius; ego 3).

AV-30: Bridge of Doubt

This stone bridge leads directly from the central isle to the eastern shore, debouching in front of the remains of a colossal statue of Arden the Defender. The bridge and statue are magically linked, but until the statue is restored the enchantments cannot be activated.

Statue of Arden: The statue depicted a standing Arden dressed in legionary armor and leaning on her famous spear. Sadly, all that is left of the statue at present is the pediment and two enormous marble feet and ankles; everything else has been broken and scattered. Restoring the statue is possible, albeit difficult.

Arden's Gift of Strength: The bridge is enchanted so as to allow those who pay proper respect to Arden to receive enhanced endurance or strength. Should the colossus somehow be restored (a sculptor of great talent will be needed once the pieces are found), the incantation below must be sung in Mithric from the bridge for an entire day without ceasing. If this is accomplished, Arden grants a permanent bonus of +1 to STR or to CON. If a postulant is interrupted or fails to complete the day of singing, he/she becomes susceptible to fear for 1-6 months (-2 to saves versus fear effects or spells). A person may only attempt to gain Arden's blessing once in a lifetime (i.e., if he/she fails, it's tough luck).

Song of Arden:

*Fear is the destroyer, it bites in the heart.
Fear brings me low, makes me writhe in the dirt.
Strength counters fear, pushes it deep in its hole.
Strength is my strength, let it fill all my soul.*

The Song of Arden is no longer commonly known, and must be discovered through magical means, through the use of a sage, or through lucky searching of the city ruins (see tables above).

GM Note: strangely enough, the bridge took its name from the emotion (doubt, or fear) that Arden's gifts opposed.

AV-31: Bridge of Wisdom

This stone bridge leads from the central isle to the western precincts of the city. Like the Bridge of Doubt, this bridge is magically linked to the nearby statue of Vul the Sorcerer (AV-42). Should that statue be restored by a talented sculptor, it would be possible to perform the 'Ritual of Enhancement' from the bridge.

The Ritual of Enhancement: Once the colossal statue of Vul is restored, this ritual (known colloquially in antiquity as 'Vul's Insight') can again be performed. The celebrant must stand on the bridge, recite the proper incantation in Mithric (see below) and then (still on the bridge) spend a full three days in contemplation of Vul, all the while reciting the incantation every quarter hour. If completed, this process (known in the past as 'The Ritual of Enhancement' or, more colloquially, as 'Vul's Insight') will confer a permanent increase of +1 to either INT or WIS. If the postulant gives up after reciting the incantation but before the three days have passed, he or she will be struck with a confusion spell lasting 1-6 days. A postulant may only attempt to receive Vul's Insight once in his/her life.

The incantation, which must be discovered through a sage or the lucky discovery of an inscription, goes as follows, and must be recited in Mithric:

*Empty the mind, open the heart, fill the soul.
Empty the soul, open the mind, fill the heart.
Empty the heart, open the soul, fill the mind.*

GM Note: The bridge drew its name from its association with Vul, that paragon of scholarly wisdom.

AV-32: Docks and Lagoon

This lagoon was the site of the main docking facility for Arden Vul. It was also the starting point for a tow-way along the east side of the river by which boats could be towed upstream until they could sail on their own steam. The docks are cement structures that extend into the lagoon; they are pitted, bowed, and at least one is ripe for collapse due to erosion of its foundation.

Resting on the river bottom amid the docks is the marble torso of the colossal statue of Arden (see AV-30).

In addition, the grand archonal barge (used on the Tranquil Lake for ceremonial occasions) sank between two of the docks a millennium ago and has mostly rotted away. Some parts of it, which had been preserved by magic, remain quasi-intact, including a changing room in which are two airtight stone chests. An ambitious GM could decide that more of the barge is intact, and could flesh out a map of it according to its full original dimensions (25' wide x 75' long). The barge is the home of an electric eel, which is cautious but attacks if diving or salvage operations commence.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 electric eel: SZ M; AL N; AC 9; MV 720' swimming; HD 2; HP 14; #AT 1; Dmg 1-3. Special attacks: jolt.

Treasure:

Chest 1: 2 potions of water breathing; a potion of watery form (see new magic items); 4 sets of silk ceremonial clothing (2 Set and 2 Thoth).

Chest 2: 10,000 small ancient copper bits (see Arden Vul items), and a sealed scroll case with Cleophalus's look-away spell and Dameon's shadow spell book (see new spells for both).

AV-33: Footbridge

A narrow (5'-wide) iron bridge spans the opening from the lagoon to the lake here. It is pitted with age, but still sound.

AV-34: Hidden Doors to the Chamber of the Beacon (SL14-1)

Buried beneath several layers of rubble are a set of steel doors set flat into the pavement of an old imperial plaza. If the doors can be opened, they reveal a 15'-wide granite staircase leading into the earth. The stairs descend 40' to a second set of bronze double-doors that open into the Chamber of the Beacon (Sub-Level 14). The horizontal steel doors can only be opened by manipulating the three obelisks (AV-5, AV-41, and AV-28); once accomplished, the doors fold inward amid a shower of rubble to reveal the stairs at SL14-1. The steel doors are invisible unless the rubble is cleared from this area.

AV-35: The Tranquil Lake

The Archontes dammed the Swift River to form what they called Tranquil Lake. Because the spillway is no longer monitored, the lake has grown substantially in size, blending seamlessly into a swamp (AV-38) on its west and south sides. Currently the lake is cloudy with silt and dotted with lily pads and reeds. The true, original lake, is 50' deep in places, while the encroachments to the west are often 10' deep or less. A number of large crocodiles make their home in the lake. A sunken pleasure barge (marked B on the map) is home to an enormous snapping turtle. Inside the pleasure barge (30' below the surface) are two rotted treasure chests, one containing coins, and the other an assortment of imperial medallions, insignia, and keys.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 giant snapping turtle: SZ L; AL N; AC 5 (0); MV 30'; 20' swimming; HD 10; HP 71; #AT 1; Dmg 6-24. Special attacks: surprise on 1-4.

2. 15 crocodiles: SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 60'; 120' swimming; HD 3; HP 24, 22, 22, 20, 19(x3), 18(x3), 17(x3), 16, 15; #AT 2; Dmg 2-8/1-12. Special attacks: surprise on 1-3.

Treasure:

Chest of coins: 4,000 ancient silver pennies and 1,250 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items).

Chest of goods: 5 golden medallions, worth 45 gp each (but more to a collector; potential adventure seeds); three silver ankh-keys (see Arden Vul items); a gold key to the Obsidian Gates (5-6D); 1-4 more keys (GM's choice); a magical broadsword, named

Trollsbane (see new magic items); and a wand of paralyzation (47 charges).

AV-35A: Dam and Spillway

The early settlers in Arden Vul dammed the Swift River in order to make the Tranquil Lake. The dam is made of stone blocks fused together by magic. It possesses an adamantine spillway control system that can be raised or lowered so as to let more or less water out of the lake. The control system is accessed by a locked (and stuck) door on the east side of the dam; this door leads to a 10'x10' room containing 2 great adamantine wheels. The left wheel spins easily on its shaft, a sign that it has ceased to work. The right wheel, however, is still operative, and could be used to raise or lower the water-flow mechanism on top of the dam. The wheel is stuck due to inactivity and will only move with a successful open doors check.

Raising and Lowering the Water Level: the right wheel can be turned as follows: counter-clockwise raises the water-flow mechanism; while clockwise lowers the water-flow mechanism. The mechanism's gears contain 10 'stops' running from stop 1 (fully raised) to stop 10 (fully lowered). Anyone turning the wheel will feel it immediately as the wheel 'clicks' into a new stop, and he/she will hear some grinding of gears and, potentially, more or less sound from the waterfall.

At the moment the wheel is set at stop 4; this means that there are only 3 more stops available for raising the water-flow mechanism, but six available stops for lowering it. For each stop by which the mechanism is raised, the water level of the lake will increase over 1-3 days by 4", and the extent of the swamp will increase by 25'. For each stop by which the water-flow mechanism is lowered, the water level of the lake will drop in 1-3 days by 4" and the swamp will retreat by 25'.

Fully raising the mechanism will still allow some water to escape through the spillway, although the volume of water in the waterfall will visibly diminish; doing so will also bring the swamp directly to the entrance to Craastonistorex's tower, a fact which the dragon will not appreciate. Fully lowering the mechanism, on the other hand, will greatly increase the volume and violence of the waterfall, will improve the visibility of the lake-water (allowing a glimpse of the sunken pleasure barge - see AV-35), and will mostly drain the swamp (permitting access to AV-39, among other things). Draining the swamp will also incur the dragon's wrath.

AV-36: Corroded Southern Bridges

The two iron bridges that span the river here have been corroded by time and moisture. They are obviously unsafe.

AV-37: Partly Intact Structures

This key number indicates several different structures on the map; each represents one of the best-preserved remaining structures. Although none has a special encounter attached to it, the chance for something special doubles when exploring one of these ruins (2 in 10 chance per hour). A maximum of 2 'specials' can be pulled from each location. Each structure is different; should the GM wish it, each could be mapped.

AV-38: Swamp

The southwest quadrant of the city became a swamp when the Archontean spillway system fell into desuetude. The area echoes with a range of sounds, from the shrill piping of the peepers to the deep and intimidating roar of the giant frogs.

The area is under about 2' of sludgy dirty water, which makes movement slow and offers the opportunity for slipping into holes in the pavement. For every turn of movement, there is a 1 in 6 chance for a lead PC to slip and become drenched. There is also a 1 in 6 chance per hour of attracting the attention of 4-6 fearless and always-hungry giant frogs.

Aside from these threats (and the presence of the wyrm in AV-40), the area is slightly less dilapidated than the other areas of the city. For those who stop to explore the occasional shell of a building or push a foot or pole into a ruined foundation, the chance of an interesting encounter rises by 1.

Affecting or Draining the Swamp: It is possible for PCs to alter the level of water in the swamp by one of two ways. The first is by manipulating the spillway mechanism (see AV-35A); this could reduce the radius of the swamp by 100 feet, and the height of the standing water to no more than a few inches in low-lying areas. The second is by locating the door at AV-39 and opening it; this will drain the southern portion of the swamp and will affect portions of Level 4 (see details at AV-39).

Inhabitants:

1. 24 giant frogs, appearing in groups of 4-6: SZ M; AL N; AC 7; MV 30', 90' swimming, 100' jumping; HD 2; HP 16, 15, 13, 12, 11, 9; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8. Special attacks: surprise on 1-4; tongue strikes at +4 to hit; swallow on natural 20.

AV-39: Soggy Stairs, with Access to Level 4-122A

The swamp has swallowed the ruins of a large former imperial administrative building. A water-filled cellar (4' deep) hides a stairwell that leads down 20' to locked iron door. If the level of the swamp decreases (by manipulating the spillway at AV-35A), the stairwell will become visible to searchers. Although the stairwell will still be filled with water, it might be possible for an enterprising PC to swim down the stairwell, pick the lock, and open the door. The door leads to a sub-basement, with a further staircase descending about 650' to Level 4 (4-122A) of the dungeons. It is difficult to spot the stairwell so long as the swamp remains at its present level.

Effects of Opening the Door: anyone foolish enough to open the door without first draining the swamp will be swept away, as the force of approximately 110,000 cubic feet of murky swamp water rushes towards Level 4. Anyone in the stairwell will take 20d6 damage and must save vs. poison with a -2 penalty or drown. The effects of this drainage are as follows:

1. The Swamp: the southern half of the swamp (approximately 22 squares) will drain almost completely (although pockets of water in basements will remain).
2. Area 4-121 (the chasm of Set): half of the released swamp water (55,000 cubic feet) will rush into this chasm, raising the water level in the chasm by 55' such that the bridge (4-120A) is only 30' above the new level.
3. Path of the Water to the South on Level 4: the other half of the swamp water will rush south, passing through 4-122, 4-170,

4-172, 4-178, 4-189 and 4-190 before pouring messily out of the cliff onto the valley below. Anyone standing in the route of the water will be swept away to his/her demise.

4. Area 4-170: the portable statues of Set will be swept away and destroyed. They will be replaced in 1-4 months
5. Area 4-172: all the sand on the floor of the cavern will be swept away, and the colossal heads will be shifted such that they partially block the passage towards 4-178. The passage will be blocked for 4-7 days until the Set cult can lever the heads out of the way.
6. Area 4-178: the dungeoneering equipment on top of the boulder will be swept away.
7. Area 4-189: the impaled, animated skeletons will be swept away and destroyed. These will not be replaced.
8. Area 4-90: the Set cult's pulley and basket apparatus will be swept away and lost. It will take the cult 3-7 weeks to re-establish an effective entry system.

AV-40: Tower of the Wyrms

The apex predator of the ruins, a huge adult green dragon named Craastonistorex, makes his lair in this tower. This wily and intelligent wyrm has accumulated the beginnings of a fair hoard by pillaging what he can find and stealing what he can take. His tower is slightly larger than normal, about 40' in diameter, and is in pretty good shape. Craastonistorex inhabits the ground and first floor, and has cowed two wyverns that he allows to dwell on the top floor. The wyrm's treasure is in the cellar, which is accessible via a hole in the floor.

Craastonistorex is canny and inquisitive, and uses his fear aura to elicit information from sentient creatures in the area. He will learn of the arrival of the PCs within 2 days, and will watch the characters for another couple of days before introducing himself. The wyrm chooses an advantageous time and place (e.g., when a wounded party is exiting the halls) at which to make a dramatic appearance; Craastonistorex speaks politely but firmly, and likely pursues one of the following strategies: 1) he might, if the PCs are powerful, simply warn them not to interfere in his hunting; 2) he might magnanimously allow them to carry away whatever spoils they can find in the dungeons, but might (50%) demand a tithe from those proceeds; 3) he might attempt to bully the PCs into serving him, perhaps by eliminating a rival or by locating a particular object. The GM should make sure that the PCs recognize the danger represented by Craastonistorex and the advisability of negotiating with him (at least for the short term). A wise GM will also have the dragon make occasional reappearances so as to keep the PCs on their toes.

Relations with other inhabitants of the ruins:

1. Tuftwillig: The wyrm is unaware of Tuftwillig's existence, although Craastonistorex is aware of a 'force of nature' in the area. If he became aware of the ancient tree, he would plot Tuftwillig's demise.
2. Kronos Kettle-Belly and Estelle (AV-22): These entrepreneurs know of the wyrm, and act with respect towards him. Indeed, their men provide a weekly offering of game to the dragon. Unbeknownst to Kronos, Estelle has also been providing curative and information services in lieu of a monetary tribute. Each month there is a 10% cumulative chance, however, that Craastonistorex begins to demand the more traditional tribute.

3. Galeth, Master of the Long House (AV-43): Craastonistorex is a bit intimidated by Galeth's evil and age, and avoids him. In the right circumstances, the wurm might trade information about Galeth in return for valuables.
4. The Cult of Set: Stephania the high priestess (see 4-51) pays a tribute of 100 sp per month to ensure that her minions remain unmolested. As Craastonistorex grows older, he will wish to change the terms of this bargain in his favor; a clever party might be able to use this fact to drive a wedge between the two.
5. Deino and the Beastmen. Craastonistorex has only heard of Deino, since she does not leave her domain (3-158). Deino has recently begun to refuse to pay tribute, and so Craastonistorex has begun to hunt the beastmen when he can find them.
6. Lizardmen: The lizardmen rarely venture to the top of the cliff, and always offer small, but symbolic, gifts to the wurm. Craastonistorex mostly ignores them.
7. Cavemen (EX-5): The cavemen are terrified of the wurm but, as they have little treasure, Craastonistorex mostly ignores them. If pressed he will confess that they taste 'a little off'.
8. Knights of the Azure Shield (see AK-1): As Craastonistorex perceives the knights to be his greatest threat, he might attempt to persuade PCs of the knights' 'untrustworthiness' and of the danger they pose 'to equilibrium in the valley'. In certain circumstances, he might even ally with like-minded parties to oppose the knights (although he prefers to let the PCs do the hard work against them). Those parties that are publicly allied with the knights, however, find Craastonistorex to be a permanent and implacable foe.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 wyverns: SZ L; AL N(E); AC 3; MV 60', 240' flying (Class E); HD 7+7; HP 55, 51; #AT 2; Dmg 2-16/2-16. Special attacks: poison sting.
2. Craastonistorex, huge very old green dragon: SZ L; AL LE; AC 2; MV 90', 240' flying; HD 9; HP 63; #AT 3; Dmg 1-6/1-6/2-20. Continual abilities: infravision; detect hidden or invisible (70'); talking (Archontean, Elvish, Thorcin). Special attacks: breath weapon (gas); fear aura (+1 to saves). Special defenses: saves as a 15 HD monster. Spells: identify, protection from good, read magic, shield; darkness 15' radius, ESP, invisibility.

Treasure:

The head from the huge statue of Vul (AV-42); 101 ancient octagonal platinum coins (see Arden Vul items), 457 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items), 330 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items), 7,679 cp, 6,492 sp, 5,647 gp, 453 pp; 40 pieces of jewelry worth 100-600 gp each; a gold key to the Obsidian Gates (5-6D); a copy of the Deeds of Marius Tricotor by Lucius Cornelius scriptor (see Arden Vul books); a copy of Yeng of Narsileon's Great Villains of Archontos, part V: Priscus the Traitor (see Arden Vul books); eight potions, of sweet water, gaseous form, extra healing, philter of love, growth, treasure finding, molasses, and deafening light (see new magic items for the last two); a ring of spell storing; a javelin +1, +2 versus dragons; a suit of cursed armor of arrow attraction (banded mail; see new magic items); a beaker of plentiful potions; an Alexia's useful pole (see new magic items); a staff of the frog (see new magic items); and six scrolls (fireball, protection from magic, ice storm, tongues, protection from demons, and feline senses [see new spells]).

AV-41: Obelisk of the Stars

This intact obelisk currently rests in the midst of the swamp. It is identical to the first (AV-5), save that after 8' of the usual figural art, the obelisk is decorated with carvings of stars, both shooting stars and clusters of constellations. It is one of the three obelisks that must be manipulated in order to open the chamber of the Beacon (see AV-34).

AV-42: Headless Colossus

This colossal statue of a seated, robed figure (Vul) is missing its head. The enormous block of stone is about 20' square and 30' tall. The missing head of the statue currently adorns the treasure hoard of the dragon Craastonistorex (AV-40). The statue's two hands are also missing; they may be found in area AV-43. If the missing pieces are found, the colossus could be fully restored through the talents of a master sculptor. Once the statue has been restored, the enchantments of the Bridge of Wisdom may once again be activated, provided that the correct rituals are conducted on the bridge (see AV-31).

AV-43: Long House

This low bungalow is one of the best-preserved structures in all of the ruins. It was the home of a powerful necromancer (Archemeson), who somehow managed to erect better magical defenses than most of his counterparts in the city. As a result, the Long House may appear to explorers as a miraculous survival, and thus as potentially worthy of investigation (or as a refuge). That would be a grave error, however, as the Long House is the residence of a powerful enhanced wight and its servants (ghouls). This wight was originally an adventurer named Galeth Ironhands who entered the Long House many centuries ago only to encounter the angry shade of Archemeson. That spirit slew and possessed Galeth, imbuing him in the process with greater intelligence and self-awareness. As a result Galeth keeps a sort of perverse court, mimicking in undeath the life that Archemeson used to lead.

The Long House is about 60' long and 25' wide; the front door opens to a small antechamber, with double doors leading to a main central hall. Several smaller rooms surround the hall. The wight sits in a great chair in the hall, surrounded by his hungry ghouls. Although structurally sound, the hall (and other rooms) is devoid of actual creature comforts and, in fact, reeks of the charnel house (a kind GM will give the PCs a chance to detect this smell from the antechamber). As a feature of the enchantments that have preserved the house, Galeth is bound to it (i.e. he cannot leave); his ghouls, however, range into the surrounding ruins at night to secure flesh. Galeth is always delighted to receive visitors, with whom he will banter briefly in a low cracked voice before turning his ghouls loose on them. The floor of the Hall is littered with bones and a jumble of broken equipment and treasure. One of the side rooms also features a small hoard of valuables.

Inhabitants:

1. Galeth, enhanced wight: SZ M; AL CE; AC 4; MV 120'; HD 6+3; HP 47; #AT 2; Dmg 1-6/1-6. Special attacks: level drain. Special defenses: silver or magic needed to hit; spell immunities; turned as a wraith, but cannot be destroyed.
2. 18 ghouls: SZ M; AL CE; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 16, 15, 14(x3), 13(x4), 12(x3), 11(x3), 10, 9, 8; #AT 3; Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-6. Special attacks: paralysis. Special defenses: immune to sleep and charm.

Treasure:

5,000 cp; 3,000 sp; 4 gems (130 gp, 700 gp, 80 gp; 450 gp); twelve arrows +2; long sword +1 Magebane (see new magic items); a feather token (fan); a scroll with four magic user spells (identify, levitate, tiny hut, and hold portal), and both hands from the colossus of Vul (see AV-42).

AV-44: Westgate, with Access to SL15-9

Set cultists have recently fortified one of the towers. They do not take aggressive action, preferring to watch and report, but will defend themselves if discovered. The door to the gatehouse is obviously newly repaired and oiled; it is also locked. Insistent efforts to access the tower will be met with boiling water (2-12 damage plus a 5' splash of 1-6 damage) from above and a well-armed response from within.

Secret Trap-Door (bottom floor): The cultists have not yet discovered a secret trap door set into the floor of the lowest level of the southwestern gatehouse tower. The trap door is difficult to find (1 in 8) and opens only with a successful open doors roll. The trap door leads to a sub-basement mapped as area SL15-9.

GM Note: High priestess Stephania's goals in occupying this tower are twofold: 1) it provides a convenient resting place for cultists on their way to or from the Forum, particularly those traveling through the mountains to the north and west of the city; 2) it allows her a vantage point from which to collect intelligence on the comings and goings of the beastmen, Kronos Kettle-Belly (AV-22), Craastonistorex (AV-40), and potentially hostile adventurers. Although it has been impossible for the cult to hide the fact that the tower is occupied, its occupants make an effort to hide their identity; they do not wear their cultic robes when moving through the ruins, and, if accosted by others, pose as scholars looking for lost historical items (especially statuary and pottery sherds). Kronos is aware of their identity, though. So too is Craastonistorex, since he has tortured and eaten several of them.

Inhabitants:

1. 4 Set guardsmen (see new monsters), as 2nd-level Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 15, 12; #AT 1, Dmg 2-7 (mace), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: red scale mail and wooden shield; footman's maces; spears; light crossbows with 20 bolts. One has a potion of ESP.
2. 1 Set acolyte (see new monsters), as a 3rd-level Archontean cleric of Set: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 60'; HD 3; HP 19; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (mace) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Possessions: Set armor (see Arden Vul items); footman's mace; light crossbow; acolyte's was stick (see new magic items); and a silver holy symbol of Set (10 gp). Spells prayed for: command, cure light wounds, curse (reverse of bless), protection from good; hold person, silence 15' radius.
3. 6-9 Set cultists: (see new monsters) SZ M; AL LE; AC 9; MV 90'; HD 1; HP 7, 6, 6, 5, 5, 4, 4, 3, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger) or 2-7 (flail) or 1-6 (staff). Special attacks: fanaticism. Possessions: padded armor; daggers; flails or staves.

Treasure:

Each cultist carries 4-24 sp and 20-40 gp. The outpost has two unlocked chests, with a bit more treasure.

Chest #1: 9,783 sp and 3,411 gp.

Chest #2: 6 picture-vases worth 100-600 gp each; a bronze plaque showing a heavy legionary (45 gp); a prayer rug showing a Set animal (50 gp); a platinum goblet (125 gp); and an ornate silver necklace studded with four lumps of un-shaped gold (750 gp).

AV-45: Ruined Gladiator School, with Access to SL15-10

A short distance from the western wall of the city are found the grounds of an ancient gladiatorial school. The main portion of the school is a 100'x30' pit sunken 15' into the earth. The pit is now filled with trees, shrubs, and a stagnant pond, but once was the site of training for chariot teams and gladiators. Trackers and druids will notice the spoor of large predators among the flora (the subterranean lizards – see SL15-10).

To the east of the training pit is the residential wing. Formerly a grand, Archontean-style villa, the building has almost entirely collapsed. It is possible to poke through the storerooms, kitchens, and residence of the owner and her family without finding anything of value. A broad staircase leading down to the cells of the gladiators is found between the edge of the training pit and the ruined villa. The cell level is structurally intact, and features thirty-five 8'x8' cells, plus a common area and some storerooms. The common area smells foully of animals, and is covered with the bones of small- and medium-sized prey. It is the lair of a pack of five subterranean lizards. Three of the beasts are present at any one time. A hole in the floor of the common area leads to the network of tunnels that comprises Sub-Level 15 (see SL15-10).

Inhabitants:

1. 5 subterranean lizards: SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 6; HP 45, 43, 41, 39, 35; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12. Special attacks: double damage on a natural roll to hit of 20.

Treasure:

6,161 gp; a gold collar set with garnets (6,000 gp); a platinum necklace with depending emeralds (9,000 gp); a pair of matching platinum and emerald earrings (4,000 gp); and a silver brooch set with topaz (5,000 gp). Note: this information is repeated from SL15-10.

AV-46: Cave in the Woods, Leading to Sub-Level SL15-21

About a half mile northwest of the city walls, safely within the old forest that has begun to advance towards the ruins, lies a dank cave. The cave is the home of a cave bear, but, perhaps more significantly, it also conceals yet another entrance to the Halls of Arden Vul (see SL15-21).

The cave is set into a low hill in a clearing in the forest, and its opening is shrouded by vines during summer. The smell of a large carnivore lingers at the cave mouth. Inside is a carpet of crunched and mangled bones.

A narrow passage at the back of the cave leads to Sub-Level 15, a set of tunnels that wend their way under the ruined city before finally ending at 2-33. The druid Gerrilad the Grey (2-35 and 2-69) uses these tunnels to exit Level 2 in search of mistletoe and holly. Gerrilad has become fast friends with the cave bear.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 cave bear: SZ L; AL N; AC 6; MV 120'; HD 6+6; HP 52; #AT 3; Dmg 1-8/1-8/1-12. Special attacks: hug.

AV-47: Ruined Suburban Villa of Kel Bormol

The ruins of a once-fine, late Archontean-era villa lie here, overgrown with trees and shrubs. Designed in the usual style, with living quarters surrounding an atrium and a peristyle, the walls and ceilings have all collapsed, rendering the place completely uninhabitable. In addition, the villa was thoroughly looted in the years after the Archontean collapse, so no mundane items of value can be found here.

Still, as Kel Bormol (see SL3-2A) was an archmage of considerable skill and foresight, he prepared a sub-basement of the villa as a refuge from the political turmoil that led to the destruction of Arden Vul. The sub-basement is accessed via a stone trap door in the tablinum (study); to access the study takes 6 hours of digging and shifting of rubble.

The trap door in the tablinum is locked (only Kel Bormol has the key). In addition, a unique symbol, devised by Kel Bormol himself, has been cast seventeen times on the trap door: it is a symbol of forgetting, which causes those who fail to save versus spells (with a -2 penalty) to turn away from their present task and adopt some new course of action. The symbol is designed to prevent intruders from entering the sub-basement.

The sub-basement is 15' square, and well-appointed with dusty, but fine, late Archontean furnishings. The chamber holds two red leather settees, an oak writing desk, a cabinet for scrolls and books, a wooden box filled with coins, and a stuffed elephant's foot used to hold walking sticks and a couple of wands.

A pair of invisible stalkers wait patiently in the sub-basement, tasked more than a millennium ago to ensure that no one but Kel Bormol enters the chamber. Although their long servitude has rendered them insane, Kel Bormol's binding still holds. They do not pursue outside the sanctum.

Should Kel Bormol be freed, he will eventually visit this refuge to collect his items. If he has been driven from SL3, he will use this refuge and the one at 8-133 as locations from which to rebuild his strength before undertaking revenge against those who expelled him from his rightful place.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 invisible stalkers: SZ L; AL N; AC 3; MV 120'; HD 8; HP 59, 50; #AT 1; Dmg 4-16; MR 30%. Special attacks: surprise on 1-5. Special defenses: invisibility.

Treasure:

Wooden box: 1,250 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items)
 Elephant's foot container (25 gp): a wand of illusion (37 charges), and a wand of lightning (23 charges).
 Cabinet: a scroll with dig and move earth; a scroll with teleport without error; and copies of Kel Bormol's eleven spell books.

Kel Bormol's Spell Books (in eleven large volumes): All 1st-level spells plus Basil's torch treatment, Cleophalus's look-away spell, and friend of the Hekate (see new spells for all three); all 2nd-level spells plus the Bracteros effect, locate place, Pol's endless sneezes, pummeling fists of Arak-Zhorr, and wizard's cache (see new spells for all five); all 3rd-level spells plus garrulous mouth (see new spells); all 4th-level spells plus Dameon's shadow spell book (see new spells); all 5th-level spells plus harnessing the chaos, the hecate's bonds, and Pol's improved eye (see new spells for all three); anti-magic shell, curse item (see new spells), death spell, disintegrate, enchant an item, extension III, forceful hand, geas, globe of invulnerability, invisible stalker, legend lore, monster summoning IV, project image, reincarnation, repulsion, stone to flesh, transformation; cacodemon, delayed blast fireball, duo-dimension, grasping hand, limited wish, mass invisibility, monster summoning V, Pol's recall (see new spells), power word stun, vanish, warding chain of glyphs (see new spells); clenched fist, incendiary cloud, irresistible dance, mass charm, mind blank, mindshift (see new spells), monster summoning VI, permanency, polymorph object, power word blind, spell immunity, symbol; astral spell, crushing hand, gate, meteor swarm, power word kill, prismatic sphere, time stop.

THE PYRAMID OF THOTH (UP)

(AKA AV-15)

The pyramid of Thoth is 90' square, and rises 45' above the floor of the city. At the summit is a 30'-square platform, on top of which is a stone canopy supported by marble pillars. Underneath the canopy is the cult statue of Thoth, here depicted as a 20'-tall ibis-headed person in classic Egyptian pose. The interior of the pyramid is keyed with the designation UP (Under the Pyramid).

ACCESS AND EGRESS

To Level 2: teleporter at UP-11, leading to 2-35

To Level 3: stairs at UP-5, leading down to 3-1

To Level 3: teleporter at UP-11, leading to 3-123

To Level 3: teleporter at UP-11, leading to 3-175

To Level 5: teleporter at UP-11, leading to 5-2

To Sub-Level 7: teleporter at UP-11, leading to SL7-8

To the home plane of the vorantes demons in the Abyss: gate at UP-11

KEY TO PYRAMID

Pyramid Steps

Marble steps rise on each side of the pyramid to a central platform. The 120 steps rise at a 22.5-degree angle and are worn in the center from traffic (particularly on the eastern side). Several of the steps are cracked, but as the marble slabs rest on granite, there is little chance of danger from the decrepitude.

Attentive climbers will notice that an image has been carved into the exact center of each riser. Four images alternate, such that there are thirty exemplars of each image. The images are these:

1. Ibis-headed Thoth pointing both arms at a robed human descending a staircase. GM Note: this image depicts the safer way to manipulate the Statue of Thoth the Guardian (q.v.) and thereby open a path to the Halls of Arden Vul. By rotating the statue's hands so that they both point straight out, one opens the staircase to UP-2, which is far safer than the set of stairs leading to UP-6.
2. Ibis-headed Thoth pointing his left arm at a bowing human, who is presenting the god with a plate of scrolls and coins. GM Note: a clue to the manipulation of the statues of Thoth at 3-2, and 3-15, 3-40; rotating the left hands of all three statues to this position opens the door to the secret treasury at 3-23 and 3-24.
3. Ibis-headed Thoth spewing forth a long scroll inscribed with (abstract) writing into the hands of grateful humans. GM Note: a reminder that Thoth is the source of wisdom.
4. A baboon squatting with an open book on its thighs, holding a pen in its paw, and gazing at a group of humans; a feather appears between the baboon and the people. GM Note: an image of Thoth as recorder of the Book of the Dead; the feather is the feather of Maat, or justice.

Pyramid Platform

The 30'-square platform is sheathed in white marble. A dark grey granite canopy rises 30' above the platform to accommodate the enormous cult statue of Thoth. Purple porphyry columns support the canopy. Crouching at the foot of each column is a heavily pitted 4'-tall statue of a crouching baboon, with its mouth slightly open as if barking.

Statue of Thoth the Glorious

This 20'-tall statue of Thoth represents the epitome of the sculptor's trade. Carved out of a solid block of porphyry, and topped with a white marble ibis head, the statue is truly awe-inspiring. Two grapefruit-sized lumps of shaped jade serve as eyes. The god's arms rest flat at his side, but may in fact be manipulated.

Should both arms be rotated such that they point straight up towards the sky, a grinding sound will be heard as the cover to UP-1 slides to the east, revealing a staircase descending to the south (UP-6). Should both arms be rotated such that they point out parallel to the floor, the cover will slide to the west, revealing a different staircase leading down and to the north (UP-2). After an hour, the arms will return to the statue's side, and the cover at UP-1 smoothly slides shut.

Any effort to remove the eyes is met with blasts of blue lightning, which emanate from the mouths of the baboon statues that ring the platform. One blast emerges each round from a random baboon, and will inflict 2-12 damage on the desecrator; the effort to remove them will take 4-16 rounds. Should anyone manage to chip the eyes out, two greater guardians of Thoth (see new monsters) teleport to the pyramid and immediately assault the desecrators.

Those offering an invocation to Thoth before (or while) manipulating the arms receive a blessing from Thoth (equivalent to bless spell, but lasting 6 turns). In the unlikely case that a thief manages to make off with the jade eyes, they are worth 10,000 gp each but will impart a curse of the GM's choosing on he/she who sells them.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 greater guardians of Thoth (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LN; AC 0; MV 120'; HD 8; HP 62, 56; #AT 4 or 1; Dmg 1-8/1-8/1-8/1-8 or 1-12; MR 20%. Special attacks: fear, stun. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; teleport without error 2/day.

UP-1: Cover for Stairs

Directly in front of the statue of Thoth is a 10'x5' section of pavement that is obviously distinct from the rest of the platform. This section slides in two directions, but is only operable by manipulating the arms of the statue of Thoth. Should the arms of the statue both be rotated to pointing straight up, the cover will grind to the east, revealing a steep set of stairs (UP-6) leading southwards and down into the dark. Should both arms be raised to positions parallel to the floor, the cover will grind to the east, revealing another set of stairs (UP-2) leading north into the darkness. After an hour, the arms of Thoth will return to rest, and the cover will slide shut.

UP-2: Stairs

Composed of rough granite blocks, these stairs have seen heavy use. They descend steeply to the north and end up at UP-3. The ceiling of the stairwell was originally plastered and decorated, but today only tiny shreds of plaster remain.

At the head of the stairs, just under UP-1, is an iron handle that will allow the cover to be slid aside to allow egress from the dungeon below.

UP-3: Upper Landing

This tiny room only exists to allow the stairs to change their direction. There is nothing in this room, which only boasts about 25-square feet of floor space. All ornamentation has been stripped from the walls.

Graffiti of many vintages and natures covers the walls.

D20	Graffiti	GM Notes
1-5	A name: e.g., Gil, Aethelwulf, Hoss, Flet, Jilken, Tom the Mighty, Rache, Dalton, Roger the Rapier, etc. Language: most are Archontean or Thorcin, but the GM might decide some are in Wiskin, Elvish, or another language	The GM could or should add names to this list that reflect figures from his/her own campaign. In the samples, Dalton and Roger the Rapier are both leaders of rival NPC adventuring groups.
6	Gregor was brave, but the dust took him. Language: Archontean	A cryptic reference to the dust monster in 3-35.
7	I hate halflings! (written 7' up the wall). Language: Thorcin	A reference to the band of halfling thugs who dominate parts of Level 3 (3-2 to 3-6).
8	Dear Joten: 'ware the Fungal Forest and the crazy priest who rules it. Meet me Tuesday at the Broken Head. [signed] Utrip. Language: Wiskin	Refers to the Great Cavern (3-163 and 3-172) and to Trocadero of Newmarket, the insane magic user who occupies the Great Stone Seat (3-176)
9	I told Robin not to touch the eyes. Now his picks are mine. Language: Archontean	A warning about the perils of fooling around with the eyes of statues of Thoth at AV-15, 3-2, and 3-40.
10-11	Plumthorn Rules these Halls! Obey Him! Language: Archontean	Written 4' from the ground. A reference to the leader of the halflings who inhabit 3-2 to 3-6.

12	The Darlings were here! Hide your loved ones! Language: Archontean	A reference to Dalton's Darlings, one of the suggested rival NPC adventuring parties (see NPC appendix)
13	Hugo – I've found the Obsidian Gates. Gog helped me. Language: Archontean	References to the iconic Obsidian Gates (5-6D) and to Gog (5-2).
14	Set is waiting and watching. Language: Archontean	An unspecific reference to the renewed activity of the Set Cult (see, inter alia, 3-90 and areas 4-1 to 4-61).
15	A faint and primitive sketch of a biped with huge thighs and an amphibian head	An image of a heqeti hopper (see new monsters)
16	The chasm extends deeper than we thought. I've gone to get more rope. Wait here. Language: Thorcin	A reference to the Great Chasm (e.g., 3-38) that extends between Level 2 and Level 9.
17	Watch your back near the Well of Light, Niko. Those damned monkeys got Freb. Language: Archontean	A reference to the baboons that dominate much of Level 2.
18	The goblins hate the beastmen more than we do. Language: Archontean	A potentially exploitable clue about the hatred existing between the goblins (Level 5 and Sub-Level 4) and the beastmen (areas 3-138 to 3-163)
19	A pornographic sketch	Self-evident.
20	KK is watching us all the time! Don't trust the dragonflies. Language: Thorcin.	A reference to Kerbog Khan (see Sub-Level 12) and one of his many types of automatons.

UP-3A: Second Stair

The stair from UP-3 is less steep, but equally worn (i.e., wear-marks in each step). Plaster shreds hang from the walls and ceiling. Little graffiti is found here.

UP-4: Preparation Room

This large chamber (20' square, 10' tall) is brightly lit, thanks to countless continual light spells cast by adventurers on the ceiling. Whatever plaster once covered the walls has long disappeared; the walls are bare stone, and are covered with graffiti (use table from UP-3 or improvise). To the left of the stairwell is a circle made of bits of stone that has been used as a fire pit; scorched charcoal and bones are found inside it.

Inhabitants:

There is a 3 in 8 chance of an encounter here. If one is indicated, it will be as follows:

D6	Encounter
1	A pack of 1-6 rats (normal); 50% likely to flee
2	3-6 giant rats: SZ S; AL N(E); AC 7; MV 120'; HD 1-4 HP; HP 4, 3, 3, 2, 2, 1; #At 1; Dmg 1-3. Special attacks: 5% chance of disease
3	Treasure map, roll d4: 1=fake, 2=fragmentary, 3=treasure is already gone, 4=usable
4	A halfling exploration party: 1. Roskelly Winterleaf, 5 th -level halfling thief: SZ S; AL CE; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 5, HP 22; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (short sword) or 2-5 (dagger). Abilities: STR 16, INT 9, WIS 10, DEX 17, CON 10, CHA 15. Thief skills: PP 60%, OL 62%, F/RT 50%, MS 52%, HS 57%, HN 25%, CW 77%, RL 30%. Special attacks: poison; both weapons are coated "Mortality" poison (see 3-4), which has an onset of 2-8 rounds, and does 20 HP damage, or half if a save is made. Possessions: leather armor; short sword; dagger; potion of invisibility . 2. 5 1 st -level halfling fighters: SZ S; AL NE; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1; HP: 10, 9, 8, 8, 7; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 2-7 (club), or 2-5 (sling). Possessions: studded leather armor and shield; spears; clubs; slings; one has a potion of ventriloquism .
5	Party of NPC adventurers (select from NPC appendix, use stats for low-level characters). Roll d6. 1-2: just entering the halls; 3-4: leaving halls without casualties and with treasure; 5: leaving after taking casualties, with treasure; 6: leaving after taking casualties, without treasure
6	A beastman patrol consisting of 6 troopers and a sergeant: 1. 6 beastman troopers (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 8, 7, 7, 6, 6, 5; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spears; short swords; short bows; one has a potion of delusion . 2. 1 beastman sergeant (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 2+2; HP 15; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 or 2-5. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spear; war hammer

UP-5: Stairs to Level 3 [aka Area 3-1]

These stairs descend some 350' into the heart of the complex of Thoht and eventually debouch at Level 3-2. See description of the stairs at Level 3-1.

UP-6: Unworn Stairs (Dangerous Entrance)

These stairs are made of marble blocks, and appear in very good shape. They are considerably less worn than those at UP-2. The plaster here is also gone. Six corpses in various states of decomposition lie along the staircase.

Unlike at UP-1, no convenient iron handle exists to allow the cover to be slid away. This means that once the lid slides shut after an hour, it is impossible to exit the dungeon from this point (short of powerful magic). A kind GM might allow for a deus ex machina rescue; e.g. Lankios the Hermit (1-6), or a beastman patrol, or Kronos Kettle-Belly (AV-22) and his men. A successful lift gates roll (at -5% due to the cramped conditions) might also succeed in forcing the cover open.

Each riser of the 45 steps leading from UP-6 down to UP-7 is incised with an image of a different animal; these include a hippo, crocodile, ibis, baboon, giraffe, etc. Three stairs from the top the animal is a scorpion; next to the scorpion has also been incised, in Mithric, "safety". GM Note: this is a hint about how to escape the trap that governs areas UP-6 to UP-11; it refers to the bust of Selket in UP-11, which is the only (easy) way to escape this area.

Trap (for all areas between UP-6 and UP-11): Once the lid leading to UP-6 has closed (i.e., after 6 turns), a deadly trap begins to activate. Every turn thereafter, one of the corpses that litter the areas between UP-6 and UP-11 lurches into undead activity and begins to move towards the intruders. Each turn after that first hour, the GM should roll 1d10 and consult the following table; the results determine what type of undead awakens and the location where it rises.

D10	Type and Location	GM Notes
1	3 undead rats	SZ S; AL NE; AC 9; MV 90'; HD 1 or 2 HP; HP 2, 2, 1; #AT 1; Dmg 1-3 (bite). Special: turned as skeletons
2	6 undead rats	SZ S; AL NE; AC 9; MV 90'; HD 1 or 2 HP; HP 2(x3), 1(x3); #AT 1; Dmg 1-3 (bite). Special: turned as skeletons
3	1 skeleton	SZ M; AL N; AC 7; MV 120'; HD 1; HP 7; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special defenses: immune to sleep, charm, hold, and cold; cutting and piercing weapons do half damage
4	2 skeletons	SZ M; AL N; AC 7; MV 120'; HD 1; HP 7, 6; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special defenses: immune to sleep, charm, hold, and cold; cutting and piercing weapons do half damage
5	1 zombie	SZ M; AL N; AC 8; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 14; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8. Special: always strike last
6	2 zombies	SZ M; AL N; AC 8; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 14, 8; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8. Special: always strike last
7	1 ghoul	SZ M; AL CE; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 15; #AT 3; Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-6. Special attacks: paralysis. Special defenses: immune to sleep and charm.
8	2 ghouls	SZ M; AL CE; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 13, 12; #AT 3; Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-6. Special attacks: paralysis. Special defenses: immune to sleep and charm.
9	Roll d8 twice (reroll 1-2)	The existence of two, potentially different, groups of undead is the product of the demise of a previous adventuring party.
10	Roll d8 three times (reroll 1-2)	The existence of three, potentially different, groups of undead is the product of the demise of a previous adventuring party.

GM Note: Since the priests of Thoth designed this ‘dangerous’ entrance to punish those who were insufficiently unaware of the mysteries of Thoth, this trap is naturally quite deadly. Some hints as to its nature exist, including the barely worn stairs and the corpses that are found in every area. Still, some groups may well find themselves trapped beneath the pyramid after the cover slides shut; the only hope for such groups, which will face a continuous cycle of undead activity, is to locate UP-11 and employ the teleporter attached to the bust of Selket (q.v.). Hints about the existence of that exit are indicated in several places among areas UP-6 to UP-11.

Treasure:

Among the six corpses are three long swords, a quarter staff, a set of usable leather armor +1, a medium shield, and two purses with 37 sp and 24 gp respectively.

UP-7: Upper Landing

Like UP-3, this chamber is tiny and exists merely to redirect the stairs. Its clean marble floor is largely undamaged, although it is littered with plaster fragments. Six sets of mostly skeletal remains lie on the floor, but without any equipment. Remarkably little graffiti exists here, but what does exist is ominous:

D8	Graffiti	Notes
1	Frumious ever not Green! Language: Thorcin	Mad ramblings.
2	We’re doomed unless we find the scorpion! Language: Archontean	A hint that PCs must find the scorpion at UP-11 to escape.
3	Durko fell here. We hope he won’t join the dead ones. Language: Dwarvish	A hint about the trap that governs this part of the pyramid, through which corpses keep rising to attack the living.
4	Durko was lucky, but we are not. We waited too long before searching for the scorpion and now the way is blocked. Language: Dwarvish	Another hint that PCs must find the scorpion at UP-11.
5	Jeril was taken by the last onslaught. Where’s the exit? There must be one! Language: Thorcin
6	The lid is closed and we cannot open it. I hear another one rising. Where can we go? Language: Archontean
7	KK sees all! The dragonflies are everywhere! Language: Archontean	A reference to Kerbog Khan (SL12-25), and his dragonfly automatons
8	Ha! So long, suckers! We found it! The scorpion’s tail is the way out. Language: Archontean	Another hint that the PCs must find the scorpion at UP-11 to escape.

UP-8: Lower Stair

This long (90’) marble stair leads downward at a less steep slope than the staircase at UP-6. Bits of plaster are still in evidence, and depict rather generalized and repetitive images of Thoth, with blazing eyes. Characters standing at the top of the stairs can see a bright light at their base (the continual light spell at UP-9). Five moldering corpses lie along the stairs, bereft of usable equipment.

Trap (last 30’ of the stairs): on a roll of 1-2 out of 6, a weight of 200 lb or more causes the last 30’ of the stairs to flatten out into a slide that drops anyone unfortunate enough to be on them onto the trap door at UP-9. The trap door opens on a roll of 1-5 out of 6. A clever PC might resist sliding by making a successful roll of 3d6+2 under STR.

UP-9: Lower Landing

This small chamber is brightly lit, thanks to a continual light spell cast here over a century ago. The stair ends in a 10’x10’ room. Across from the stair appears to be a 5’-tall stone door (the door is actually a false door that cannot be opened). The walls are marble, and completely devoid of imagery or graffiti, save for a hastily painted image of a scorpion with the words ‘Where is it?’ scrawled underneath it in Archontean. Five corpses of adventurers, bereft of equipment are decomposing in the landing.

Trap: A covered pit trap (25’ deep and 5’ square) exists at the foot of the stairs. Pressure in excess of 100 lb is sufficient to force open the pit door, thereby depositing the unlucky PC(s) into the Pit of Bones (UP-10). So doing incurs 4-14 falling damage. This fate is almost certain to befall those who are affected by the slide trap at UP-8. Still, if the slide does not activate, the pit trap here will be activated by the first 100 lb of weight placed on the square at the foot of the stairs. The walls of the pit are pitted with regularly spaced holes, which allow the vorantes demons (see new monsters; c.f., UP-11) to climb up the pit.

UP-10: Pit of Bones

The Pit of Bones is marked by a complete absence of light, as well by the thick carpet of dry bones and broken adventuring equipment that litters the chamber floor. A small semi-circle (about 4' in radius) is cut into the far wall, leading to UP-11. A stench of decay, age, and evil lingers in this foul charnel heap.

The sheer amount of random equipment and treasure (from the numerous corpses found in areas UP-7, UP-8, and UP-9) mixed among the bones means that there is a 10% chance that any weapon, set of armor, or bit of equipment found on the standard equipment list can be found here. No food will be found, nor any drink, nor any potions or magic items. Lengthy searching produces 1d100 coins per hour; 60% will be copper, 25% will be silver, 10% will be gold, and 5% will be platinum. Almost all the coins will be ancient and unfamiliar. A maximum of 250 gp worth of coins may be uncovered. For each hour searching, a 5% cumulative chance exists to uncover a gemstone; roll d100x5 to determine its worth in gp. A maximum of 1,750 gp in gems are available.

Mucking about in the Pit of Bones is sure to attract the attention of the vorantes demons that reside in UP-11. The chance to attract one of the vorantes starts at 25%, and rises by 10% for every turn spent searching the Pit. Once attracted, a vorantes follows its prey until defeated. Once one vorantes has taken the 'scent' of the PCs, a second will follow in 1-6 turns, and a third 1-4 turns after that (unless the PCs are dead, of course).

UP-11: Lair of the Vorantes Demons and Exit

The chamber is cramped, being only 5' tall, and composed of nondescript worked stone. Two features are worthy of note.

The first is a floating black disk only 3' in diameter; this disk is a gate to the home plane of the vorantes demons that reside here. If all the vorantes are defeated, new vorantes will start to appear through the gate in 1-4 hours at the rate of one vorantes per hour until three more are present. If the GM wishes, the gate might be two-way, allowing the foolhardy to venture to the demonic home plane of the vorantes (not detailed here).

The second unusual feature of the chamber is a 4'-tall bust of a female human head on top of which crouches a scorpion (an image of the goddess Selket). The bust is in the northeast corner of the room. Around the bust (but probably initially covered by dust) is a 7'-diameter semi-circle of lapis inset in the stone. The bust provides the only escape route from this area.

A trio of voracious vorantes demons (see new monsters) dwells in this chamber, which their ancient contract compels them to guard. The vorantes appear initially as inert, 2'-diameter orbs. After 1-6 rounds, they roll towards any carbon-based life-form and attack. Intruders who recognize the significance of the bust of Selket would be wise to rush as quickly as possible to that statue, lest the vorantes prove over-deadly as foes. The vorantes are also intimidated by the lapis circle surrounding the bust of Selket, and will wait 1-4 rounds before attacking any within the circle. Note, too, that the vorantes may already have been attracted by noise in UP-10, and thus may well have been encountered and/or slain elsewhere in the complex.

Bust of Selket: The bust is stone, and was once brightly painted (black hair, blue eyes, kohl and makeup, red lips), with a brown scorpion on its crown. The stinger of the scorpion can be manipulated by pulling it forward. If pulled, the eyes of Selket burn brightly with white light for 5 seconds before a strobe of white light fills the chamber. At the moment that the strobe flashes, anything found inside the 7'-diameter circle of lapis is teleported to a location determined by the following table:

D6	Location
1	The Great Hall (3-123)
2	The Hall of Judgment (2-35)
3	The parvis of the Great Cavern (3-175)
4	The cave of Gog (5-2)
5	The Flooded Vaults (SL7-8)
6	GM's choice on Levels 5-8

Inhabitants:

- 3 vorantes demons (see new monsters): SZ S; AL CE; AC 4; MV 120'; HD 4; HP 28, 26, 24, 21; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8; MR 10%. Special attacks: gnaw. Special defenses: take 1 less HP damage per die versus fire and cold. Special: demonic telepathy; can see in absolute darkness.

Treasure:

The vorantes demons have collected certain bits of non-organic glitter and brought it into this chamber. Some of it is junk (numerous bits of quartz and crystal gnawed out of their original settings; scraps of lapis lazuli; some tattered bits of colored cloth), but a few items of power remain: a ring of protection +2; a ring of delusion; a gem of insight; a pearl of power (1st-level); an inlaid silver bracer worth 500 gp; a bejeweled rod worth 250 gp; a pair of star rubies worth 1,000 gp each, and a gem-studded wand which detects as magic but has no special properties (135 gp).

THE TOWER OF SCRUTINY (TS)

(AKA AV-8)

Looming over the Plaza of Thoth (AV-7) in the ruined city of Arden Vul, the Tower of Scrutiny is a formidable, squat symbol of Archontean power, one rendered all the more impressive for standing intact among the surrounding rubble. The Tower of Scrutiny once served as the above-ground headquarters of the Over-Seer of Thoth. Its defining feature was the great, swiveling ibis head that occupied the top floor of the tower and allowed the Over-Seer to scrutinize the surrounding plaza and buildings. Due to its close connection with Thoth, the Tower survived the destruction of the city. And yet it is currently a place of great evil, ruled by the master wraith Loukios Tornikion (TS-16) and its lesser servants. Should Loukios be defeated, however, the Tower would offer a new and easy access route from the ruined city to a central location in the precincts of Thoth in Sub-Level 3.

The Tower is 40' square and composed of heavy granite blocks. Rising 45' into the sky, it is comprised of four levels above ground and one below. Although roofed, the top floor is punctuated with a series of broad windows; the rest of the tower is windowless. A set of locked and wizard locked (12th level) double doors lead to the ground floor from the surrounding plaza. The key for the interior of the tower uses the designation TS.

ACCESS AND EGRESS

To the Ruined City: double doors at TS-1, leading to ruined city
To the Ruined City: secret door at TS-6, leading to ruined city
To Sub-Level 3: stairs at TS-19, leading down to SL3-5A

Gate Destinations

TS-12: gate from SL6-17A (Tower of Pol)

RANDOM ENCOUNTERS

There are no random encounters within the Tower of Scrutiny.

LEVEL KEY

TS-1: Carved Bronze Doors

These massive bronze double-doors are 8' tall and radiate strongly of magic. Both valves are carved inside and out with symbols of Thoth: ibises, baboons, moons, magical glyphs, and multiple iterations of the Archontean alphabet. They are locked and, more significantly, wizard locked (by a 12th-level magic user). Still, it is possible to bypass both lock and spell by touching the letters in a particular order; if any of the secret names of Thoth are spelled out (e.g., "Thrice Great"), the doors glide open noiselessly. The doors automatically close after a turn, regardless of how they were opened. The secret names can be acquired from sages or from either of the following books, Thoth in All His Forms, or Secreta Secretorum (see Arden Vul books for both).

It should be noted that the same procedures are necessary to open the doors from within the tower. Keys to the bronze doors may be found a TS-16 and SL5-2: they don't bypass the wizard lock, however.

TS-2: Viewing Platform

A trapezoidal platform juts into a darkened open space (the well of wraiths – TS-3) extending upwards and downwards. The corpse of a human adventurer lie on the platform, her desiccated face twisted into a rictus of fear. The door to the north is locked and stuck; successful open doors and pick locks rolls are necessary to open it.

Every round spent on the platform brings a 10% (cumulative) chance of attracting wraiths from the well. Once one wraith has notice intruders, another wraith will join the fray each round until all are engaged or slain (see TS-3).

Inhabitants:

1. Wraiths: for stats see TS-3.

Treasure:

On the corpse: leather armor +1; a short sword +1; a potion of truthfulness (see new magic items); a set of fine lock picks (+5% to pick locks); and a purse with 53 sp and 19 gp.

TS-3: Well of Wraiths

This open space extends upward 50' from the basement (TS-15) of the tower until it reaches the floor of the top floor (TS-12). A 4'-diameter stone pillar occupies the center of the well and runs through its entire distance. The pillar is carved with continuous scenes of the worship of Thoth, including all aspects of the Litany of Light (see Arden Vul books). The first 10' of the well below the top floor is cloaked by a continual darkness spell, making the descent down the floating stairs (TS-11) rather difficult.

The well takes its modern nickname from the fact that it is filled with twenty-two wraiths. These foul entities are drawn to any living beings who enter the tower, although they do not pass through doors and only enter the top floor (TS-12) during the night. Intruders are most at risk on the viewing platform (TS-2) and the narrow, open walkways that line the well on its ground, second and third floors. They also have free access to areas TS-17 and TS-20. So long as Loukios is still active, the wraiths are turned as ghosts. For details about the bottom of the well, see TS-15.

Inhabitants:

1. 15 wraiths: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 120', 240' flying (Class B); HD 5+3; HP 43, 42, 40 (x3), 37 (x3), 34 (x3), 31, 31, 28, 28; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: energy drain. Special defenses: silver or magic weapons to hit; immune to sleep, charm, hold, cold, poison, and paralysis; turned as ghosts until Loukios Tornikion (TS-16) is destroyed.

2. 7 half-strength wraiths: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 120', 240' flying (Class B); HD 2+3(x4), 3+3(x2), 4+3; HP 28, 23, 19, 17, 15, 14, 12; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: energy drain. Special defenses: silver or magic weapons to hit; immune to sleep, charm, hold, cold, poison, and paralysis; turned as ghosts until Loukios Tornikion (TS-16) is destroyed.

TS-4: Spiral Stairs, Ground Floor

This stone spiral staircase runs the length of the tower, from the basement to the third floor. The steps are worn and smooth.

On the ground floor, both doors to the stairs are locked and stuck from the inside. The keys are long gone, and the locks must be picked; in addition, a successful open doors check is needed to open them. Inside is some detritus from an adventuring party that made it part-way through the tower: a coil of elven rope (see new magic items), a bulls-eye lantern, and three flasks of oil.

TS-5: Robing Chamber

Both doors are locked, but not stuck. The walls within are lined with wooden pegs, from which depend fifteen mostly ruined sets of ceremonial robes from the cult of Thoth. One set is made of silk, however, and has survived intact: it is bright orange, with blue embroidery depicting ibises, baboons, and, curiously, the fourth secret name of Thoth, the Light of Comprehension (see Secreta Secretorum in Arden Vul books for a full listing).

A 5'-square wooden trapdoor is set in the floor; it leads down to TS-18.

Secret Door (east): The secret door is normal to locate; it is locked, and the key is held by Loukios Tornikion. Picking the lock is difficult (-15%).

TS-6: Secret Passage to the Ruined City

This 5'-wide passage leads to a secret postern in the west wall of the tower.

Secret Door (ruined city side): The door on the exterior wall is difficult to detect (1 in 8) and is locked. It may be picked, but at a -15% penalty.

TS-7: Mask Storage

Both doors to this chamber are locked; the iron keys disappeared ages ago.

Pegs line the east and south walls; from these hang ten unusual masks, each representing either an ibis, a baboon, or an Egyptian-style male human. All ten of the masks are masks of Thoth, although three are more potent than the other seven (see new magic items). In addition to their basic powers, the masks possess two special powers when used in the well of wraiths (TS-3, TS-15). First, the masks allow such clarity of vision that the wearer receives +2 to hit incorporeal undead, including the wraiths and Loukios Tornikion himself (TS-16). Second, since the masks are hated by the wraiths as manifestations of their nemesis (Thoth), the masks instill a frenzy in the wraiths that gives the foul undead spirits +1 to hit and +1 to damage.

Treasure:

10 masks of Thoth (see new magic items), 3 of which are of the special variety.

TS-8: Spiral Stairs, 2nd floor

This stone spiral staircase runs the length of the tower, from the basement to the third floor. The steps are worn and smooth.

The southern door is spiked shut from the inside, making it impossible to open from the well (TS-3). The eastern door, however, is easy to open. In fact, it has trouble closing; once opened, PCs must take active steps to ensure that it stays closed (jury rigged latch, spikes), or else it will swing open, allowing access to the wraiths from TS-3. Lying on the stairs here are the remains of two dead adventurers and one of the original priest-administrators of the Tower.

Treasure:

On the adventurers' remains: a silver scroll case with spell scrolls containing fireball, detect magic, and irritation; a steel-shod oaken staff; chain mail +1; a shield +1; a two-handed sword; and a pouch with 50 hematite gems (10 gp each). Tucked into the shoe of the priest of Thoth is a folded piece of parchment (folded as a paper airplane). It reads as follows (in Mithric): "The Second Overseer has gone mad. He has locked the door and prevented us from leaving to join the retreat of our comrades. We hear him chanting strange litanies within his chamber; they are NOT the Litany of Light. In fact, he has seemed increasingly unhinged the past several weeks. Just this morning an enormous thunderclap was heard from his office, and then silence. I am begging whoever finds this missive to plead with the archon to force the doors of the tower and rescue us, his loyal servants!"

GM Note: the parchment is a clue about the fate of Loukios Tornikion (TS-16) and the Tower. The thunderclap was Thoth striking Loukios dead for his betrayal. Sadly for this priest, Loukios rose as a master wraith and slew his former underling before the priest could jettison his desperate note from the top of the tower.

TS-9: Looted Office

Both doors to this chamber have been broken down. Within are the pitiful remains of an administrative office: a smashed wooden desk and chair, shredded parchment receipts, snapped styluses, and general detritus. Two drained corpses lie on the floor (victims of the wraiths); their bodies hold nothing of value.

TS-10: Spiral Stairs, 3rd Floor

This stone spiral staircase runs the length of the tower, from the basement to the third floor. The steps are worn and smooth.

On the third floor, both doors are stuck closed; a successful open doors roll is necessary to open them. On the inside of the south door is scrawled in blood the following words (in Archontean) "Do not open the doors below! They are waiting!"

TS-11: Floating Stairs

These wooden staircases lead 10' upward from the walkways of the third floor until they reach the stone floor of the Scrutiny of Thoth (TS-12). The stairs are old and rotted; there is a 50% chance that a being weighing more than 50 lb will cause the stairs to collapse. In such a case, the victim will fall 50' to the basement (TS-15), taking 5-30 HP damage along the way. In addition to the rot, the stairs are cloaked by a continual darkness spell.

TS-12: Scrutiny of Thoth

The top floor of the tower is open to the outside world via eight 8'-wide windows. The roof is 15' above; originally covered with red tiles, it is now badly damaged and leaky. It is relatively easy for thieves to scale the side of the tower in order to reach the windows (+5% climb chance).

The floor is formed of large flagstones. Two narrow staircases lead downward into the tower; the stairs are wooden and quite unsafe (see TS-11).

The recent corpses of three humans are strewn about the area: two are former employees from the Sign of the Broken Head (AV-22), while the third is a halfling thief.

Treasure:

On the corpses: two sets of splint mail; two short swords; two shields; leather armor +1; a bandolier with seven throwing daggers; a club; a small gold head depicting a barbarian (actually fool's gold – worth 35 cp); a scroll of curse item (see new spells); and an ancient rescript from Uriel Basileon, archon of Arden Vul (AV-29), to Kel Bormol, Overseer of Thoth (cf. SL3-2A). The rescript reads, in Mithric: “In answer to the pious inquiry of Kel Bormol, Overseer of Thoth, Uriel Basileon, most humble archon, offers this reply. Your assistant, the Second Overseer, has not dared show himself since of his cowardly retreat before the Sortian onslaught. He cowers within the Tower of Scrutiny, refusing entry to all. Should conditions improve, and should the Sortian dragons depart, I shall smoke him out of his lair, and deliver him to you for punishment. I should warn you, furthermore, that my agents have noticed a messenger from Hithra Paleologos obtaining entrance to the Tower of Scrutiny. I know not what this portends, but it cannot be good. Be warned.”

GM Note: The rescript hints at some secrets surrounding the Tower. First, it notes the rift between Overseer Kel Bormol (SL3-2A) and his chief lieutenant, the Second Overseer, Loukios Tornikion (TS-16). It also hints that the imprisonment of Kel Bormol by Hithra Paleologos (cf. 3-36A to 3-36E) was the product of collusion between Loukios and Hithra. The city of Arden Vul was destroyed before the rescript could be delivered; Uriel Basileon's corpse may be found in AV-29. The rescript was recently discovered in the ruins of the archonal palace by the thief, who was then killed by the wraiths.

TS-13: Ibis Head of Scrutiny

The defining feature of the Tower is this massive, 8'-tall ibis head. The head is a marvel of craftsmanship, as it is composed of a stone core, ivory sheathing for the head and neck, red porphyry for the bill, and circles of polished silver for the eyes. Aside from the eyes, which are 18" in diameter, the head appears highly realistic. The head is set on a heavy steel pin, allowing it to rotate so as to stare out of any of the eight windows that pierce the tower walls at this level. The magical mechanism for rotating the head and using it for viewing is located at TS-15.

The ibis head of scrutiny detects strongly of magic, and, indeed, it is still protected by Thoth himself. Damaging or attempting to remove the head results in three greater guardians of Thoth (see new monsters) teleporting in to stop the desecration.

The Head's Abilities: The head allows those who peer through the ibis eyes (using the apparatus at TS-15) to use the following powers three times per day for an hour, in a 150' radius: true seeing, clairaudience, and clairvoyance. If the user is a priest of Thoth, moreover, he/she can also use the head to cast commune and holy word (once per day each).

Inhabitants:

1. 3 greater guardians of Thoth (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LN; AC 0; MV 120'; HD 8; HP 57, 53, 48; #AT 4 or 1; Dmg 1-8/1-8/1-8/1-8 or 1-12; MR 20%. Special attacks: fear, stun. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; teleport without error 2/day.

TS-14: Spiral Stairs, Basement

This stone spiral staircase runs the length of the tower, from the basement to the third floor. The steps are worn and smooth. The door leading to TS-15 is locked.

TS-15: Floor of Well of Wraiths

Here, at its base, the pillar that rises through the entire Well of Wraiths is uncarved. Instead, an ibis head apparatus is attached to the pillar at a point 5.5' above the floor. The apparatus is almost identical to the ibis head of scrutiny (TS-13), albeit on a smaller scale; it is designed such that a priest could stand with his back to the pillar and insert his head into the apparatus. Doing so allows the user to see out of the ibis head of scrutiny; moreover, the thoughts of the user allow him/her to swivel the ibis head of scrutiny as he/she likes. Although powerfully enchanted, this control apparatus is useless without the much larger (and impossible-to-move) ibis head of scrutiny; still, the control apparatus could be sold as a work of art for 500 gp.

The floor of the well is littered with scores of skeletal remains of those who succumbed to the wraiths. Among the remains are various rusted and ruined weapons and bits of armor, as well as a bit of treasure.

The sound of movement among the remains brings two additional foes within two rounds: the imperial stone guardian from TS-17, and the master wraith from TS-16.

Inhabitants:

1. Wraiths: for stats, see TS-3.

Treasure:

A scattering of 78 ancient silver pennies and 52 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items), as well as 476 sp and 211 gp; a scroll case with a treasure map; another scroll case containing a magic user scroll of dispel magic and secret page; a short sword +3; and a set of six throwing daggers +1.

TS-16: Second Over-Seer's Office

The south doors to this area is stuck in the open position, but the east door has been spiked shut from within. The chamber within was the working office and residence of the Second Over-Seer of Thoth, the official responsible for the administration and upkeep of the tower of scrutiny. The southern ell contains three desks, six wooden chairs, and two scroll cases. The northwest corner contains a small sitting area, with a settee, two arm chairs and a coffee table. The small eastern ell contains an armoire and a simple bed, upon which rest the remains of the last Second Over-Seer, Loukios Tornikion. All the furniture is in fairly good condition, and could be sold for 30-180 gp per item. In a drawer of the desk is a bag of silver shavings (10 gp), a periapt of finding attuned to heqeti (see new magic items), and a copy of the Courtship of Julius the Exarch (see Arden Vul books). The corpse of Loukios wears a heqeti ring (see new magic items) and carries a key ring with keys to all doors in the tower. On the wall above the bed is scrawled the following terrible blasphemy (in Mithric): “May Rimmaq-Isfet feast on the ibis!”

The scroll cases primarily contain administrative documents pertaining to the supply and maintenance of the tower. These are valueless, although a close reader might notice that receipts are always for four casks of wine (not five); this is a hint that the fifth cask contained something other than wine (see TS-20). Among the bureaucratic materials, however, are five cleric scrolls. The cleric scrolls are speak with dead, remove curse, cure serious wounds, true seeing, and holy name (see new spells).

Loukios is now a powerful master wraith (see new monsters), who dominates all the ordinary wraiths (see TS-3). Within two rounds of hearing sounds from the floor of the well of wraiths (TS-15), Loukios arrives to attack the intruders. If, somehow, intruders are able to discover his corpse, remove the ring, and either bless or destroy the remains, he is instantly destroyed; the lesser wraiths can then be turned normally, and will fight at -1 to hit.

GM Note: Rendered chaotic evil and insane by the heqeti ring, Loukios Tornikion became increasingly erratic in the final days of Archontean control in Arden Vul. He ceased communicating with his superior (Kel Bormol – see SL3-2A) and with the archon (AV-29), and closed the tower to entry. Eventually Thoth, hurt by the betrayal of one of his chief priests, slew Loukios; such was the power of his new evil, however, that Loukios returned as a master wraith. He then killed the remaining staff of the tower, turning them into wraiths; for the past 1,200 years he has slowly added to his incorporeal army.

Inhabitants:

1. Loukios Tornikion, master wraith (see new monsters): SZ M; AL CE; AC 1; MV 150; 300' flying (Class B); HD 9+1; HP 63; #AT 1; Dmg 1-12. Special attacks: energy drain. Special attacks: energy drain. Special defenses: immune to sleep, hold, charm, and cold; silver, or +1 or better weapons to hit; turned as a vampire.

Treasure:

Furniture (see text); bag of silver shavings (10 gp); a key to the bronze doors at TS-1; a pair (black and white) of glass activation squares (see Thothian teleportation rings in new magic items); periapt of finding attuned to heqeti (see new magic items); heqeti ring (see new magic items); and 5 cleric scrolls (speak with dead, remove curse, cure serious wounds, true seeing, and holy name [see new spells]).

TS-17: Hallway of Forgotten Priests

Ten 4' pedestals stand against the west and south walls of this portion of the basement. Upon each pedestal is the portrait bust of one of the previous Overseers of Thoth. They alternate in material – obsidian or marble – but are uniformly of excellent quality, and could be sold for 400 gp each or 800 gp if the name of the subject could be learned. While none of the busts are magical, an emerald wrapped in chamois-cloth is tucked into a hollow on the bottom of the fifth bust.

In the southwest corner of the hallway stands a long forgotten imperial stone guardian. It lurches into action as soon as it hears footsteps in TS-15. It attacks all those who it does not recognize as priests of Thoth; wearing Thothian robes or masks of Thoth (see TS-7) renders one ‘invisible’ to the stone guardian. The guardian is not activated by the wraiths.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 imperial stone guardian (see new monsters): SZ L; AL N; AC -2; MV 90'; HD 8+3; HP 60; #AT 2; Dmg 3-18/3-18; MR 50%. Special defenses: +2 or better weapons to hit; immune to missiles (including magic missile), fire, cold, mind-affecting spells (e.g. charm), and most immobilizing spells (immune to entangle, hold monster, web).

Treasure:

1 emerald (1,000 gp); 10 portrait busts.

TS-18: Closet

Various practical items – all in a decrepit state – occupy this storage closet: two brooms, a mop, a small cask containing starch, two bolts of unusable linen, one bolt of orange silk (50 gp), a sewing kit (needles, thread, etc.), a mallet, extra door fittings, and a key ring with keys to all the doors in the Tower.

A wooden trap door is set in ceiling; it opens easily into TS-5.

TS-19: Chamber with Stairs Down to SL3-5A

Both doors are locked; more significantly both have been spiked shut on the exterior side so as to prevent access to the tower of scrutiny from below. The spiral stair is granite and covered with a thin layer of dust. It has not been used in 1,200 years. It leads down roughly 250' to area SL3-5A.

TS-20: Storage

Lining the walls are casks and crates that used to supply the tower. Crates of molded foodstuffs occupy the north wall; poking around in them has a 50% chance per term of uncovering some yellow mold. The east wall holds five large casks (5' in diameter, by 6' deep). Four used to hold wine; sadly it turned to vinegar ages ago. The fifth (closest to TS-19) conceals a hidden compartment in which some of the tower staff's treasure was hidden. The compartment detects as a secret door, and opens by depressing the spigot on the outside of the cask.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 patch of yellow mold (50% chance): SZ M; AL N; AC 9; MV 0'; HD n.a.; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8. Special attacks: poison spores. Special defenses: damaged only by fire.

Treasure:

A casket with 2,500 neatly stacked ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items); a stone of passage (see new magic items); bracers of defense (AC 5); a silk bag with 20 peridots (500 gp each); a clerical scroll with cure light wounds, neutralize poison, raise dead, and blade barrier; and the seal matrix for the Overseer of Thoth (200 gp).

LEVEL 1: THE BASEMENT

As the cellars of a ruined Thothian administrative building, this small level is easily accessible from the surface (see AV-17). It contains no major factions, merely vermin, dangerously weakened masonry, and a few surprises for the clever and/or unwary. It provides a useful starting point for neophytes, as well as some alternate routes to the deeper levels.

GENERAL CONSTRUCTION NOTES

Archontean areas: the entire area was built by the Archontians.

IMPORTANT NPCs

Lankios the hermit (1-6)

ACCESS AND EGRESS

To Ruined City: staircase at 1-1, leading up to AV-17

To Ruined City: chimney (1'x1') at 1-19, leading up to AV-17

To Level 3: spiral staircase at 1-21, leading down to 3-27

To Level 5: privy (hole) at 1-20, leading down to 5-85

RANDOM ENCOUNTERS

Random encounters should be checked every 3 turns, and occur with a 1-in-10 chance. Some random encounters involve creatures whose lairs appear in the keyed entries; should these creatures be killed through a random encounter, the GM should revise the indicated keyed area appropriately.

D20	Encounter
1-2	Noise, but nothing else
3-4	Cave-in! A section of wall (50%) or ceiling (25%) or floor (25%) collapses. All must roll 3d6 under DEX or suffer 1-6 HP damage from the collapse.
5-8	3-6 giant centipedes, from area 1-1B: SZ S; AL N; AC 9; MV 150'; HD 1 or 2 HP; HP 2(x3), 1(x3); #AT 1; Dmg n.a. Special attacks: poison (+4 to save).
9	1 giant constrictor snake, from area 1-11: 1 giant constrictor snake: SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 6+1; HP 39; #AT 2; Dmg 1-4/2-8. Special attacks: constriction
10	Lankios the hermit: for stats see area 1-6
11-14	3-12 giant rats: SZ S; AL N(E); AC 7; MV 120'; HD 1-4 HP; HP 4(x3), 3(x3), 2(x3), 1(x3); #AT 1; Dmg 1-3. Special attacks: 5% chance of disease
15-16	1 giant tick: SZ S; AL N; AC 3; MV 30'; HD 3; HP 18; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4. Special attacks: blood drain
20	1 carcass creeper: SZ L; AL N; AC 3 (head) or 7 (body); MV 120'; HD 3+1; HP 19; #AT 8; Dmg nil. Special attacks: paralysis

LEVEL KEY

1-1: Basement

This immense pillared hall (with a 20' ceiling) was a main storage facility for the priests of Thoth. The staircase from the ruins above (AV-17) leads straight down some 60' before opening into the basement. Light is almost absent, save for a dim glimmer from the surface at the stairs. Currently the basement is choked with cobwebs, dust, grime, broken masonry, smashed barrels and boxes, wooden furniture, and all manner of trash. Among the junk, however, is the marble left leg of the colossal statue of Arden (see AV-30). A 3'-wide path has been cleared towards the wide double-doors facing the stairs. The double doors are cracked open, and appear badly damaged.

Two corpses lie face down on the path towards the double-doors; one is a human cleric and the other a human fighter. Both corpses are recent and show signs of severe poisoning - multiple sting/injection marks and necrotic, blackened skin. One corpse clutches a potion bottle that is still full (elixir of health). The pair is still dressed in their armor (chain mail and splint mail), but weapons and other valuables are gone.

The 16 pillars holding up the ceiling are of heavy stone, about 4' in diameter, but all show signs of stress and damage.

The areas to the left and right of the staircase are choked with trash to a level of 2'. Above the trash hang ribbons of dusty cobwebs. Movement through the trash will be difficult, and potentially dangerous.

Moving around the rubble in the main chamber will increase chances for a random encounter; roll once every other turn, with a 50% chance of an encounter.

Treasure:

An elixir of health, chain mail, splint mail.

1-1A Ruined Doors

These massive double doors are cracked open about 18", and are in very bad shape. The wood is swollen with moisture, the reinforcing iron bands are thick with rust, and the doors seem to have been assaulted with sharp or heavy objects. They are difficult to move open (open doors check), but most medium characters will be able to squeeze through in one round. Doing so, however, will leave a character open to attack from the residents of 1-1B.

1-1B: Giant Centipedes

A colony of 20 giant centipedes has made its nest in the rubble-choked hallway beyond the double doors. Only 7-13 are present in the nest at any given time; losses taken here or as wandering encounters should be subtracted from the overall number. The centipedes hear anyone squeezing through the doors at 1-1A, and will swarm to the attack. The centipedes completely ignore any characters smeared with the anti-vermin paste of Lankios the Hermit (see 1-6).

Inhabitants:

1. 20 giant centipedes: SZ S; AL N; AC 9; MV 150'; HD 1 or 2 HP; HP 2(x10), 1(x10); #AT 1; Dmg n.a. Special attacks: poison (+4 to save)

1-2: Spider Closet

The badly warped wooden door hangs crazily on its hinges. Inside the former closet is an impressive web spun by a colony of giant spiders. Some broken wooden crates litter the floor.

Inhabitants:

1. 8 large spiders: SZ S; AL N; AC 8; MV 60', 150' in web; HD 1+1; HP 7, 7, 6, 5, 5, 4, 3, 2; #AT 1; Dmg 1. Special attacks: poison (+2 to saves).

Treasure:

A ruby (50 gp) has fallen to the floor, and may be found within 1-4 turns searching; in addition, a badly damaged scroll (Divine Breath of Thoth" [see Arden Vul books]) may be found in the NE corner.

1-2A: Spider Web

The spiders have spun a very thin, but strong, web across the entrance to 1-3. In the darkness it is easy to miss the web: there is a 1 in 6 chance for any but the most cautious of characters to become bound in the webs. If the spiders in area 1-2 have not yet been discovered, they emerge immediately and attack. If the spiders are dead, or do not respond immediately, an enwebbed victim can escape in 2 rounds (+1 round per point of STR below 17). If the spiders are dead and a victim is entangled, thrashing may draw the attention of the giant snake from 1-11 (5% per round, cumulative).

Treasure:

55 cp, 38 sp and 10 gp lie scattered on the floor.

1-3 Training Ground

The priests of Thoth used this open area for training purposes. The floor is relatively clear; a thick layer of dust lies heavily over the floor. No signs of humanoid traffic disturb the dust, although a few lumps disturb it. The lumps are the rotting remains of wooden staffs and poles, as well as one shield.

An anvil rests on a pedestal near the eastern side of the room. On top of the pedestal is a silver chalice that seems, for some reason, to have escaped tarnish. Investigators may well suspect a trap, but there is none. The chalice may be put to good use in the mosaic room (1-12).

Treasure:

Silver chalice (50 gp).

1-4: Storeroom

Aside from a 5'-radius semicircle around the door, this room is choked with debris. The junk is useless and valueless.

1-5: Storeroom with Porter

This chamber contains another refuse heap similar to that found in area 1-4. The one difference is the existence of an unusual zombie standing just to the left of the door. This zombie was created as a porter for some long-dead wizard. It lurches towards any intruders as they enter the room, but will not attack even if itself attacked. Instead, it imprints on the first person it sees and follows that person faithfully until prevented from doing so. It will occasionally utter grunts and groans, and can carry surprisingly large loads (200 lb). Its move is slow (30'), it smells badly, and it will cause a negative reaction in most civilized locations. It wears a dog collar with silver chasing (10 sp) around its neck.

Treasure:

Zombie porter and silver dog collar (10 sp).

1-6: Lankios the Hermit

The door to this chamber looks to be in better repair than others in the complex, with well-oiled hinges and a lock that works. Those approaching from the direction of 1-1A see a faint light from under the door, and can detect a foul stench of rotting vegetable matter from a good 30' away.

This large, former storage room is now the abode of a wizened human hermit named Lankios, who has a 66% chance of being here. Some 280 years old and preserved by a curse (see 5-11), Lankios dresses in a ragged tunic and wears a smelly loop of vegetable matter around his neck. He boasts an impressive white beard and long white hair. He is barefoot. Although once a formidable paladin, Lankios has gone insane for reasons that are difficult to tease out from him.

Lankios has a fire crackling in one corner. A tripod of heating (see new magic items) stands over the fire, and a blackened pot bubbles with some foul-smelling goo. The chamber is neat, with no dust; indeed, a rush broom hangs from a peg on the door. A bedroll lies neatly against the left wall. Some small vermin corpses (rats, stirges) hang curing near the fire. A barrel containing water stands underneath a perpetual drip from the ceiling.

Lankios's gruel smells completely foul. It is a distillate of verminous beasts, water, and sludge from the pool in 1-7. He uses the gruel for two purposes: 1) food, and 2) vermin repellent. Indeed, Lankios's vegetable-root necklace has been liberally doused in the stuff. Anyone daubing the goo on some part of his/her body will be avoided by vermin on Level 1 of the Halls for 3 hours. Lankios will offer visitors food; it is nauseating and wretched, but nutritious.

Lankios is delighted to talk to anyone who does not threaten him. He speaks in obtuse, semi-poetical phrases, and often breaks into guffaws of laughter or sobs of tormented grief. He babbles about a lovely mage named Guivrel, a competition for her hand, and betrayal by a trusted friend, apparently named "K". His role in that story is unclear. Lankios offers those who treat him with respect a chance to partake of his excellent feast.

Lankios is quite familiar with all of the chambers on this level, and with a bit of Level 3 and Level 5 as well. It is difficult, however, to get him to describe those areas with any degree of coherence or linearity. Two methods might bring him out of his funk: 1) the reappearance of his love, the mage Guivrel, or two 2) having remove curse cast on him by a 10th-level cleric. Guivrel's remains lie at 5-11; bringing her signet to him, and assuring him that judgment has been made, and/or that Kaitor has been punished may restore him to sanity (see description at 5-11).

Should he be brought back to his senses, Lankios recognizes that he is centuries old, and that he has little to live for. He is grateful but not slavishly so. He is old, and most of his powers are gone. It is likely he will answer any and all questions asked by the PCs, and can give excellent current information about all of Level 1; areas 3-2, 3-14 to 3-16, 3-18 to 3-20, 3-25 to 3-28, and 3-30 to 3-31 on Level 3; and, albeit with information that is centuries old, areas 5-1 to 5-8, and 5-10 to 5-31. He rewards his rescuers with his treasure, stashed behind a loose flagstone while he was still sane.

Inhabitants:

1. Lankios the hermit, 10th-level Archontean paladin of Mitra (66% chance): SZ M; AL LG; AC 9; MV 120'; HD 9+3; HP 62 (max 79); #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (staff). Abilities: STR 13, INT 11, WIS 13, DEX 15, CON 15, CHA 17. Possessions: staff, key to the door at 1-6. Lankios is 280 years old, kept alive by Mitra for specific reasons (see 5-11). He is insane but not fallen, and thus can still use his paladin abilities. In his madness he has not prayed for clerical spells in more than a century. He avoids combat completely, and only defends himself if cornered.

Treasure:

A huge diamond (1,500 gp); a periapt of proof against poison; an ankh-key (see Arden Vul items); a scroll of 6 cleric spells (light, cure light wounds, slow poison, find traps, dispel magic, and continual light); a scroll with three magic user spells (spider climb, jump, and detect invisibility); a green glass activation square (see Thothian teleportation rings in new magic items); and a gold key to the Obsidian Gates (5-6D). A sane Lankios can confirm that the key is intended for the Gates, but he and his comrades never found a platinum key to match it.

1-7: Pool of Sludge

A raised pool (4' tall) dominates the center of this room. Orange tiles (2" square) cover the walls, floor, pool containment walls, and ceiling of this chamber; on each tile is painted a white ibis. Most of the tiles are still intact. The pool is some 15' in diameter, and originally contained a liquid with magical qualities of curing and protection. It currently contains a foul-smelling brown sludge the consistency of molasses. Despite the reek, the sludge is still efficacious: it cures 1-4 HP damage per draught and confers a -1 AC bonus against vermin and undead for 6 turns. It is difficult to swallow, however, due to its noxious smell. Some 10-20 draughts may initially be found in the pool, but the supply will slowly be replaced at the rate of 1-6 draughts per week.

Another corpse may be found in the northeast corner, where Lankios unceremoniously pushed it ("so as not to spoil the pool!"). The corpse is of a human magic user, and appears to have been drained of much of its blood through several large wounds on her neck (she was a victim of the stirges in 1-19). The magic user's belt pouch holds a linen bag filled with gold dust (75 gp), a scroll of detect magic, and a vial of oil. A dagger is clutched in her hand.

Inhabitants:

Lankios the hermit (15% chance, see 1-6)

Treasure:

At the bottom of the pool is a bronze key to the secret door at 1-14.

1-8: Three Wise Monkeys

The trash and junk that are omnipresent on this level have been pushed to the sides of this room, leaving a cleared section 10' in diameter around a small stone pedestal (5' tall) found in the exact center of the chamber.

Three stone monkeys about 3' tall occupy the chamber. One is immediately visible, as it crouches on the pedestal facing west. The other two may be harder to spot in the gloom, as they perch on ledges over each door. The three monkeys represent the Three Wise Monkeys who See no Evil, Hear no Evil, and Speak No Evil. Each monkey is enchanted to produce a different effect.

Speech: this monkey crouches on the pedestal. Although it never leaves the pedestal, it is able to swivel on the pedestal so as to face intruders from any direction. The monkey's mouth is grossly oversized, and is shaped in a way such that a cylinder could be slid into it. Once the room is opened, this monkey will begin to utter guttural coughs, once per round. Each cough is aimed at a particular victim, who must save versus spells or be rendered mute for 1-6 turns. Blows may destroy the monkey, while sliding a cylinder into its mouth will silence it. Conveniently, a bone scroll case rests on the floor near the pedestal.

Sight: this monkey is perched above the western door and is carved grotesquely with huge round eyes. Once the room is entered and the Speech monkey begins coughing, the Sight monkey leaves its post and begins flapping about, attempting to use its gaze attack; this attack shoots rays of fire which, if they hit, do 1-4 damage per hit. The monkey may be defeated through normal combat, or can be neutralized by casting blindness or some other sort of vision-impairing spell on it or the room.

Hearing: this monkey crouches above the east door, and possesses impossibly large ears. When the room is entered it also begins to fly about, uttering increasingly loud shrieks (one per round). The first two shrieks are merely annoying, but beginning on the third round the shriek will do 1-6 damage to all within 25' who do not save versus spells. The monkey may be defeated by normal combat, or it can be neutralized by silence.

Corpse: Partly buried in the junk on the south side of the room is another corpse, this one of a man dressed in leather armor. The armor bears scorch marks and the man's ears appear to have bled. The victim wears a gold ring set with a silver knot (150 gp); it is a mark of the victim's Sortian proclivities (although it is unenchanted); a 2-lb ingot of platinum (500 gp), and a short sword.

Inhabitants:

1. 3 stone monkeys: SZ S; AL N; AC 5; MV 0', 150' flying (Class C); HD 3+1; HP 23, 19, 18; #AT 1; Dmg special. Special attacks: muting, or fire (1-4 HP), or shriek. Special defenses: non-magical weapons do half damage.

Treasure:

A bone scroll case with a scroll of 3 magic user spells (identify, Basil's torch treatment [see new spells], gust of wind); a Sortian gold ring (150 gp); a 2-lb platinum bar (500 gp); a short sword; leather armor.

1-9: Empty Chamber

The trash in this chamber has been pushed to each side, allowing a narrow path between the corridor and area 1-7. Nothing of interest can be found here.

Those making substantial noise (from searching) run the risk of attracting the stirges from 1-19. GMs should assign a chance from 10-50% based on the amount of noise the PCs make.

1-10: Collapsing Ceiling

The door to this empty chamber is firmly closed, and stuck. The ceiling of the room within is completely unstable, and any movement inside is likely to produce a cave-in. There is a 25% chance per round (cumulative) that a cave-in will occur. The cave-in commences in the exact center, but quickly spreads until the entire ceiling has collapsed, burying the chamber in tons of rock. PCs must move decisively to the door in order to escape.

- Round 1: 1-4 damage to anyone in center
Round 2: 1-6 damage to anyone in southern half
Round 3: 2-12 damage to those in southern half, 1-6 damage in northern half
Round 4: those in southern half are buried and killed, 3-18 damage to those in northern half.

1-11 Giant Snake

A giant constrictor snake makes its lair in this former pantry. The double-doors have been spiked slightly ajar (2'), a fact which allows the snake to return with its prey and devour it at its leisure. Wooden shelves still may be found on the walls, although all are rotten and will crumble with any pressure. Numerous skeletons and bits of bone form a carpet across most of the floor. The snake is in its lair only 25% of the time.

Inhabitants:

- 1 giant constrictor snake (25% chance): SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 6+1; HP 39; #AT 2; Dmg 1-4/2-8. Special attacks: constriction.

Treasure:

Scattered among the skeletons are a pair of beryls worth 25 gp each; a pouch holding 88 sp; and a magical iron spear named Nightwind (see new magic items).

1-12 Mosaic Room

The walls and floor of this small shrine are covered with mosaics depicting rituals in the cult of Thoth. A 10'x4'x3' stone altar is found at the north side of the room. Several brackets for torches still remain. The floor mosaic is mostly obscured by dirt and dust, although bare human footprints are visible in the grime.

- Mosaic on North Wall: This mosaic depicts a scene in which humans bring offerings of jewels, coins and scrolls to a large ibis-headed figure, whose left arm is pointing to the distance, parallel to the floor. Above and below this scene are mystical runes and symbols. GM Note: this is a clue to the safe manipulation of the statues of Thoth at 3-3, 3-15 and 3-40; if the left arms of the three statues are moved to this position, the route to the treasure chamber at 3-23 grinds open!
- Mosaic on East Wall: It depicts a huge white baboon using its fists to smash a smaller crocodile, while humans throw their hands up in fear. GM Note: this is crudely symbolic of Thoth (the baboon) defeating Set (the crocodile).
- Mosaic on the West Wall: This scene depicts another white baboon clubbing a series of hopping, salamander-like, bipedal creatures. GM Note: a hint about the heqeti (see new monsters) foes of Levels 9 and 10.
- Mosaic on the South Wall (to the west of the door): The mosaic depicts a massive set of black doors. Three orange-robed priests stand in front of the doors. One priest is shown touching the door with his hand while a blast of lightning incinerates him. The other two priests stand apart, and point at the (dying) third priest. GM Note: the doors are the Obsidian Gates (5-6D), and the scene contains a valuable warning about the dangers of manipulating them.
- Mosaic on the Floor (initially obscured): Once cleared of dust and grime, it depicts a large ibis-headed being standing over human corpses prepared for burial, while humans with feathers in their hair pile up grave goods around the Thoth figure. GM

Note: the scene provides a clue as to how employ the feather of Maat (3-19) to avoid undead in the necropolis of Thoth (3-22).

Inhabitants:

- Lankios the hermit (10% chance, see 1-6)

Treasure:

The altar contains a hidden panel (detect as secret door); the panel is trapped (poison needle) and contains a pouch full of rubies (20 rubies, 50 gp each) and a lover's token (see new magic items). If the chalice from room 1-3 is placed on the altar, the hidden panel will spring open, negating the poison needle trap.

1-13 Closet

This room contains only the recent corpses of a halfling adventurer and a stirge. The halfling has been drained of blood. Her corpse still bears a usable, but halfling-sized, suit of leather armor, and a short sword and sling lie nearby. The corpse also carries a pouch with 10 iron spikes, a flask of oil, and a parchment note on which is inscribed the following, in Archontean: Use the little pyramid to access the Howling Caves. Beware of the Darkness! [GM Note: this note refers to the Pyramid of Venerable Age in area 3-11, which offers one of the swiftest and easiest routes from Level 3 to Level 2]

1-14: Undead Party

This former study is in bad shape. The plaster that covered the walls is now flaking off in large chunks, bookshelves by the west wall have collapsed due to rot, and the entire room smells of mildew. Only a set of wooden chairs that surround a fireplace on the east wall appear to have escaped the rot.

A cowered figure appears to sit in one of the chairs, while three or four dog-like skeletons lie at its feet. These figures are undead skeletons; they attack as soon as the chamber is entered.

Secret Door (south): It operates on a pin; one needs only to push the base of the door inward, and the door will rotate inward at about 4' up the wall.

Inhabitants:

- 1 tough skeleton: SZ M; AL N; AC 7; MV 120'; HD 2; HP 15; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special defenses: immune to sleep, charm, hold, and cold; cutting and piercing weapons do half damage; turned as a zombie.
- 4 baboon skeletons: SZ M; AL N; AC 7; MV 120'; HD 1; HP 8, 7, 6, 4; #AT 2; Dmg 1-4/1-4. Special defenses: immune to sleep, charm, hold, and cold; cutting and piercing weapons do half damage.

1-15: Treasury

This undecorated room contains two decrepit tables, on which are piled several sets of golden altar ware and a small coffer. The altar ware consists of two candelabra (200 gp), 3 chalices (100 gp each), 2 plates (100 gp each), a censer (150 gp), and an ebony and ivory image of Thoth in ibis-headed form (1,000 gp). All told the gold objects weigh 25 lb. The coffer contains 552 sp.

1-16: Vat Storage

The door to this storage chamber is stuck open, revealing four large stone vats. The first vat contains clean but slightly salty water. The second contained olive oil, but it has long since turned rancid. The third is empty. The fourth contains lamp oil (enough for 20 flasks).

1-17: Feasting Carcass Creeper

Although shut, the door to this chamber has been subject to much abuse; a ragged hole some 3' wide and 3' high has been kicked in it from the inside. Within the chamber a carcass creeper is feasting on the body of a slain human fighter. The room is nondescript, as it is covered in a shallow layer of trash, plaster debris, and partly devoured pieces of carrion.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 carcass creeper: SZ L; AL N; AC 3 (head) or 7 (body); MV 120'; HD 3+1; HP 19; #AT 8; Dmg nil. Special attacks: paralysis.

Treasure:

Chain mail; long sword; pouch with 37 sp, and 18 gp; and a map of areas 3-2, 3-12, 3-13, 3-15, 3-16, 3-18, 3-31, 3-32, and 3-33, with obscure annotations.

1-18: Unsafe Roof

The door to this room is ajar, and stuck. The entire eastern wall has collapsed, and a thick air of rot, moisture, and decay permeates the room. From underneath the rubble a pair of legs protrudes. On one of the feet is a supple leather boot.

Treasure:

One boot from a pair of elven boots (the other is at 3-183).

1-19: Stirge Lair

Those approaching this room from the south are met first by a powerful stench of avian guano. The floor is so slick with stirge guano that combat here carries a -2 rolls to hit and damage. Only the far eastern part of the room, along a path leading towards 1-21, is free of the guano. A set of sticks dipped in an equally foul-smelling goo (Lankios's gruel, from 1-6) delimits this path; the goo serves to repel the stirges, who avoid that area if they can. Should combat break out, however, the stirges overcome their reticence and attack those behind the 'goo-line', albeit with -1 penalty to hit.

The stirge nest is formed of a 15'-diameter mound of trash, bones, sticks, and mud standing directly in front of a fireplace set into the north wall (which may remain hidden to PCs). The chimney of the fireplace extends 40' up to the surface. It is quite small (1'x1'), but allows the stirges access to the outside.

By the door to 1-21 lies a set of 2"-tall paving stones arranged in a 6'-diameter ring. Inset into the floor next to the ring is a rectangle 48" long by 8" tall; the rectangle is divided into six interior compartments, each 8" square. Together these elements form a Thothian teleportation ring (see new magic items). To activate the ring, one must place six colored glass activation squares into the inset according to a sequence that matches the 'address' of the ring to which one wishes to travel. Once the squares are placed, a brief shimmer of energy is visible over the ring. At this point the user has 1 round to collect the squares and enter the ring, after which anyone in the ring is teleported without error to address indicated by that sequence of squares. If the glass activation squares are not collected and/or if the travelers do not possess a second set of them, they are likely to be stranded in the location to which they have just teleported. The address of this ring is as follows: GR-WH-RE-BL-BK-YE (see new magic items for explanation). None of the glass activation squares necessary to operate the circle are present.

Secret Door (south): The secret door is locked, and requires a key (currently at the bottom of the pool in 1-7). Lankios put the key there, and might tell a friendly party how to find it, although he will warn them of 'nasties'.

Inhabitants:

1. 18 stirges: SZ S; AL N; AC 8; MV 30'; 180' flying; HD 1+1; HP 8, 8, 7(x4), 6(x3), 5(x4), 4(x3), 3, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-3. Special attacks: drain blood; attack as 4 HD creatures.

Treasure:

In the stirge nest: 231 gp, 347 sp, a cone of incense of attraction (see new magic items), a Sortian baculus with no further enchantments (see new magic items), and a leather-bound and badly mutilated set of adventuring notes written in Archontean.

Adventuring Notes:

We have located the Obsidian Gate, but it is barred and we lack the proper key. We heard the drums, and retreated to the Chamber of Life. [gap] Gregor felt we should brave the precincts of the Dead but Otto insisted that we try again at the Obsidian Gates. A terrible hopping demon emerged from the caves near the Sundered Span and drove us back. [gap] Gog lent us aid, but at a steep price. Jasmine suggested we try the Chasm again. [gap] We followed his lead, and found the entrance to the Drowned Canyon, but it proved too formidable. Again we retreated, but the way was blocked. Gregor died fighting the slimy ones near the Troll Lift. We buried him in a tomb beside two other fallen heroes, a certain Kaitor and [gap] Otto led us back to the chasm, but the fire took his spell book. We began climbing. Otto fell at once. [gap] Jasmine heard the howls of the white ones. They fear the light, but our supplies were limited. [gap] Jasmine fell. I am alone. But I know the way out! Ha ha ha.

GM Notes to Adventuring Notes Text: Obsidian Gates, see 5-6D; Chamber of Life, 3-10; Precincts of the Dead, 3-22; Hopping Demon, a keqemander (see new monsters) from area 5-22; Sundered Span, 5-35; Gog, resident of 5-2, potential ally; Chasm, see 3-38; Drowned Canyon, SL6, with entrance at SL6-7; Troll Lift, there are several (e.g. 5-55, 6-1, 6-5), but this undoubtedly refers to the lowest lift, 8-1, which abuts the Nether Reaches; Tombs, including Kaitor, a reference to the resting place of Guivrel and Kaitor, Lankios's erstwhile companions, at 5-11; White Ones, the albino baboons of Level 2, and their fear of light (see 2-1)

1-20: Privy

The privy is a 3'-diameter hole in a marble plug that covers a much wider (6') shaft leading down some 550' to Level 5 (area 5-85). Iron rungs have been hammered into the well shaft at regular intervals. Although it smells vaguely foul, the privy has not been used as such in centuries. It is, however, a useful, if dangerous means of accessing the lower levels.

Tied to the fifth rung from the top with some fraying hemp twine is a ring of change self (see new magic items). There is a cumulative 15% chance per person passing this rung to detect the aberration; of course, if the shaft is carefully searched, the treasure is easily located.

1-21: Spiral Stair

An open doorway leads to a stone circular stairway. The stairs lead down 300' to Level 3 (3-27). They are dusty, but remarkably free of debris. Perceptive observers will note the existence of some bare human footprints. These are made by Lankios the hermit (1-6) who occasionally wanders here.

LEVEL 2: THE HOWLING CAVES AND THE WELL OF LIGHT

GENERAL INFORMATION

This level was the private level of the priests of Thoth, noted for its mysterious Whispering Hall (2-63), the dread Hall of Judgment (2-35), the famed Library of Thoth (2-72), and the Howling Caves (2-56), where the baboon servitors of Thoth lived and bred. A central theme to this level is light and dark; the baboons are more aggressive in the dark, and may be partly deterred by light. Major factions include a horde of baboons that roam throughout the level in packs, led by some intelligent baboons and the druid Gerrilad the Grey (2-69). If PCs are not quiet and careful, they may find themselves hunted through the darkened halls, hearing only by clattering claws, occasional hoots, and distant howling until the baboons attack. If they can figure out how to repair the great mirror (2-1), the PCs might be able to turn the tables, thereby turning the hunters into the hunted.

ENVIRONMENTAL CONDITIONS

When the PCs enter the level, it will be dark. Since the Well of Light (2-1) served originally to illuminate the entire level through the placement of mirrors at specially placed intersections (mirrors are marked M on the map), it is possible to change that status by repairing the mirror at 2-1 and experimenting with the lesser mirrors throughout the area. If the PCs manage to 'turn on the lights', the baboons will be disheartened (lower morale by 25%, and -2 to hit).

LOCATION OF KEY MONSTERS AND NPCs

The placement of certain monsters depends on whether or not Gerrilad the Grey (2-69) is conducting a punishment ritual in area 2-35 (75% likely). The GM must determine whether or not such a ritual is under way as soon as the PCs enter the level. If Gerrilad is meting out punishment, he will be in 2-35, along with Sisko (2-29) and Trefko (2-32). If a ritual is not taking place, the GM needs to roll dice to determine the location of each of these figures. For Trefko, he is in his lair (2-32) 80% of the time, while he is with Sisko in 2-28 the rest of the time. For Sisko, there is an 80% chance he is holding court (2-28) and a 20% chance he is in his lair (2-29). Gerrilad the Grey is found in the library (2-70) 38% of the time, resting in his room (2-70) 60% of the time, and traveling the tunnels of Sub-Level 15 2% of the time.

RANDOM ENCOUNTERS:

1. Areas with No Random Encounters

Areas 2-7, 2-8, 2-17 to 2-22, 2-30, 2-31, 2-38, 2-40, 2-42 to 2-46, 2-71, and 2-72 are not subject to random encounters.

2. Encounters for the Majority of Level 2

With the exception of the areas listed below, only one type of random encounter exists for the majority of the level: troops of aggressive albino baboons. Checks should be made every 3 turns, with a 1 in 6 chance for an encounter; a successful check results in a roll on the following table. If the PCs manage to restore light to the level the baboons will be disheartened, and Random Encounter checks should be reduced in frequency (one every 6 turns, with a 1 in 10 chance for an encounter). If thirty (30) baboons are encountered and slain as wandering monsters, then the chance for further encounters is reduced to 1 in 12, with a check made every 10 turns.

D10	Encounter
1-2	Distant howls; no encounter
3-4	Guttural hooting; a troop of 4 large albino baboons (see new monsters) has caught the scent and will attack in 1-6 rounds: SZ M; AL N; MV 120'; AC 6; HD 3; HP 20, 19, 18, 18; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-6. Special attacks: pack attack.
5-6	Hooting and the clatter of claws on stone; a troop of 4 baboons will attack in 1-3 rounds: stats as above
7-8	Loud hooting; a troop of 4 baboons attacks immediately: stats as above.
9-10	2-5 huge spiders: SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 180'; HD 2+2; HP 15, 15, 13, 12, 11; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: surprise 1-5; poison (+1 to saves); can leap up to 30'
10	A strange, grunted command, followed by many hoots. A troop of 4 baboons led by a giant intelligent baboon attacks in 1-2 rounds: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>4 albino baboons: SZ M; AL N; MV 120'; AC 6; HD 3; HP 20, 19, 18, 18; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-6. Special attacks: pack attack.</li> <li>1 giant intelligent baboon (see new monsters): SZ L; AL NE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 8; HP 52; #AT 5; Dmg 1-6/1-6/1-6/1-6/1-10. Special attacks: rend</li> </ol>

PCs who employ silence or who are somehow able to mask their scent may reduce the chances that a Random Encounter check will produce a baboon troop. Such circumstances are up to the GM to adjudicate, but might result in checks every 4-5 turns with a 1-in-8 probability of an encounter. Conversely, noise (such as that stemming from protracted combat) will add 2 to any subsequent roll and will double the frequency of checks for the next hour. It is entirely possible for clumsy PCs to bring down multiple troops in a deadly swarm.

3. Areas with Different Random Encounters

The eastern portions of this level (areas 2-50 to 2-55) use this Random Encounter table:

D8	Encounter
1-3	7-12 giant rats: SZ S; AL N(E); AC 7; MV 120'; HD 1-4 HP; HP 4(x3), 3(x3), 2(x3), 1(x3); #At 1; Dmg 1-3. Special attacks: 5% chance of disease

4-5	3 large albino baboons (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; MV 120'; AC 6; HD 3; HP 21, 17, 14; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-6. Special attacks: pack attack
6-7	4 giant rats fighting 2 albino baboons: stats as above
8	1 giant badger, looking for a new den: SZ M; AL N; AC 4; MV 60', 30' burrowing; HD 3; HP 20; #AT 3; Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-6

2-1: The Well of Light (aka AV-14), with Access to SL1-1

An iconic location in the Halls of Arden Vul, the Well of Light is the centerpiece of the precincts of Thoth on this level. The Well is a 200'-long shaft, 5' in diameter, which descends from the surface (AV-14) to emerge in this chamber. The shaft is studded with convex mirrors and reflective stones in a carefully orchestrated manner such that, when it is daylight (and clear) on the surface, bright sunlight will be reflected down the long well to chamber 2-1. The Well of Light is also the site of one of the main mysteries of this level.

The chamber itself is tiled in pale yellow squares from floor to ceiling (i.e., 25' up). A brilliant shaft of light descends from the ceiling to the floor on sunlit days; this illuminates a 5'-diameter circle in the center of the room. The rest of the room is dark. Careful inspection reveals a depression in the ground at the foot of the shaft of the light; the depression is 5' feet in diameter, and about 5' deep. It is covered with a mixture of muck and wiry baboon hair. Should the muck be cleared away, a large convex mirror set into the floor will be revealed; this mirror will instantly flood 2-1 with diffused light from the beam reflected down the well. On three sides of the mirror are 2" holes in the floor suitable for inserting some sort of rod or object. Indeed, scattered around the room are some pieces of steel which may be assembled to produce a tripod with an identical 5'-radius central aperture; that opening clearly is designed to house another mirror (found in 2-70). The aperture on the assembled tripod swivels, allowing the reflective mirror to be directed towards any of the intersections marked 2-6.

What all of this means is that 1) adventurers who clean away the surface of the mirror fixed to the floor of 2-1 will have produced a brightly lit room in the center of the darkness of the Howling Caves; 2) adventurers who assemble the tripod and locate the missing lens will be able to direct a focused beam of light towards any of the intersections marked 2-6 (q.v. descriptions at 2-6).

The baboons and their associates favor the dark, and have thus disassembled the swiveling reflective apparatus and covered up the fixed mirror with excrement and dirt.

The mirrors radiate magic of the protective kind. They have been enchanted to grant them exceptional durability, which is why the baboons have been unable to break them.

Wall sconces also exist in this room, so that, should one prefer to direct the focused beam to area 2-6, area 2-1 can still be adequately lit with torches.

There is a 75% chance that the sound of screaming is audible from the corridor to the north; this indicates the presence of a punishment ceremony led by Gerrilad the Grey in 2-35.

Notes about the Well: The ceiling of 2-1 is 25' high, and the well is 5' in diameter. The well does not contain ladder rungs or any other device for negotiating its distance. Still, armed with sufficient rope, it would be possible for adventurers to lower themselves down the well from the surface; this would require at least 225' of strong rope, and might well prove optically challenging due to the brightness of the interior of the well.

Secret Door: The door is found 90' up the shaft of the Well from area 2-1 (and 110' below the surface). It is difficult to find (1 in 8 chance), and difficult to open. It requires twisting one of the dozens of convex mirrors near the door 90-degrees. This causes a 5'-tall panel of the well shaft to spring inward, revealing a 5'-tall, hexagonally-shaped passage to the south. The passage leads to the Tomb of Light (SL1-1).

2-2: Invocation of Light

Along with its three identically shaped counterparts (2-3, 2-4, 2-5), this room housed a portion of the Litany of Light, a simultaneously allegorical and magical ceremony that celebrated Thoth's gift of knowledge to his faithful through the metaphor of light (see Arden Vul books for locations of manuscripts of the Litany of Light).

This, the first chamber, was devoted to invocations of the light of Thoth. Two simple stone benches run along the room, allowing viewers to read the iconography of the plastered walls; in addition, a 5'-diameter circle of yellow marble has been inlaid on the floor in front of the southeast wall. That wall shows rows of robed figures raising their hands towards a yellow globe, from which no rays extend. The figures are superimposed on a dark background that makes them look as if they are floating in a void. Across the top of the image is inscribed, in Mithric, "Let the Faithful Acknowledge the Darkness and Invoke the Light of Truth."

Should someone step into the yellow circle and intone the proper phrase "Let Thoth Illuminate My Ignorance", a column of light will surround the person and he/she will be imbued with infravision for 12 hours. This effect will work twice per day. The chamber is otherwise empty, and remarkably free of trash.

2-3: Reception of Light

The second chamber in the Litany of Light, this room celebrated the benefits of Thoth's revealed wisdom. Two stone benches again face the southwest wall, and a circle of yellow marble occupies the pride of place in front of that wall. Figures similar to those in 2-2 are now turned to face the viewer, basking with smiling faces in rays of yellow light that extend from the orb, which now appears as the eye of an enormous ibis. The background is now bright yellow, and includes tiny inscriptions in the secret tongue of the priesthood of Thoth and images in various hands (secrets revealed to priests of Thoth and recorded on this wall; most will be unintelligible to any PC, but a kind GM might allow a PC a chance of recognizing a phrase or image related to one of the secrets of the Halls of Arden Vul). Above the image runs an inscription, in Mithric: "The Light of Truth is Received by the Faithful."

Should someone stand in the yellow circle and state "Thoth's light reveals all secrets," that person will also be surrounded by a column of yellow light and will receive a temporary 1-4 bonus to WIS for 1-3 hours. This effect works only once per day. Again, the chamber is otherwise empty and relatively clean.

2-4: Glorification of Light

The third chamber in the Litany of Light existed to allow the faithful to glorify the wisdom they had received. As with 2-2 and 2-3, two stone benches face the northwest wall, while a yellow marble circle stands before that wall. The images on the northwest wall show the robed figures genuflecting towards an enormous ibis (now revealed in its entirety, not just its head as in 2-3). Some bow, others are prostrate, but all display reverence towards the rays that the ibis emits. The background is silver, and the inscription reads in Mithric: "Let the Faithful Render Honor and Glory to the Light Which Reveals All."

Anyone standing in the marble circle who states, "All Glory to the Light of Knowledge" and who whispers a secret known only to him/herself will be surrounded by a column of light and imbued with true seeing for 1-3 hours.

2-5: Concealing of Light

The final chamber in the Litany of Light reminded the faithful that sometimes it was necessary to conceal knowledge. Two stone benches face the northeast wall, in front of which has been placed a yellow marble circle. The northeast wall is completely black save for a yellow orb from which no rays emerge. An inscription in Mithric reads "The Light Must Be Guarded Against the Impious." Anyone who stands in the circle and states, "Thoth's truths are for Thoth's Children" will be surrounded by a column of light and will be made invisible, as per the spell, for 2-8 hours (or until he/she takes an action that would cancel the invisibility).

2-6 (x4): Mirrors

At these four intersections, a silver mirror is attached to the ceiling by a metal swivel joint. The mirrors can be pointed up either corridor so as to reflect light from 2-1 down the hallways. Should all 4 be tilted at the same angle, they will effectively illuminate the corridors surrounding 2-1.

The mirrors radiate magic of the protective kind. They have been enchanted to grant them exceptional durability, which is why the baboons have been unable to break them.

2-7: Vestibule, and Corpses

This richly decorated chamber was originally a vestibule and robing room for priests engaged in the ritual of Venerable Age (at 2-8 and 3-11). It is brightly lit with a continual light spell cast on the ceiling. The floor of 2-7 contains a living mosaic (see new magic items) in a 15'x10' section, while the walls are covered in pale yellow tiles. The ceiling was painted yellow to match the walls; much of this plaster hangs in shards from the ceiling. A series of brass pegs run across the west and east walls at shoulder height. The vestibule is remarkably free from debris. The corpses of two adventurers lie face down on the mosaic. Their chests, abdomens, and faces have been badly torn, as if by terrible claws.

The hallway from 2-8 to 2-7 is covered entirely in pale yellow tiles, some of which are scratched and/or broken. Halfway up the west wall the following message in Archontean is scrawled in blood: "They are deterred by light. We should restore the well!" [GM Note: this is a clue to explorers that the baboons are deterred by light, and that restoring the Well of Light at 2-1 would greatly reduce danger from the baboons]

Living Mosaic: this enchanted mosaic depicts a truncated pyramid much like the one found in 2-8 and 3-11. Its tesserae rearrange themselves to make a rough but comprehensible image of whomever is standing on the pyramid at 3-11. Should there be no one present, the mosaic will simply depict a pyramid. Should the PCs be separated, however, a character that has been transported by the pyramid in 2-8 may well see his/her comrades in the mosaic.

Treasure:

On the corpses are leather armor; a light crossbow (with no bolts); a pouch with 22 sp and 5 gp; splint mail; a sundered shield; a battle axe; a backpack with 212 cp, 34 sp, and a potion of clarity (see new magic items).

2-8: Pyramid of Venerable Age, Redux (Cf. area 3-11)

This chamber lies above the Pyramid of Venerable Age on Level 3, and is the destination for the teleportation effect accomplished in 3-11. The room is the exact same shape as 3-11, and is decorated in an identical fashion, with frescoes illustrating Thoth's conquest of aging and death through images of creatures of all sorts - including humans - rising up from the ground and shedding the symbols of age (robes, beards, canes). The room is unlit, although wall sconces are present. The 40'-tall pyramid with the truncated, lapis lazuli top is also present here, but the control rod for teleportation (the steel rod with obsidian top) is absent; it may be recovered at area 2-35. Aside from the missing rod, the chamber is identical to 3-11, a fact that may well cause PCs arriving from 3-11 to initially assume that they are still in 3-11.

Should the control rod for 2-8 be recovered, reinserted in the hole on the top of the pyramid, and then depressed, anyone on the lapis platform will be transported (without the smoke cloud of the other pyramid) to area 3-11.

Unlike its counterpart in 3-11, this pyramid conceals no pukel-mander.

2-9: Guard Post

This small chamber is dark, and littered with trash. Pegs set into the walls originally held equipment and clothing, but any items of practical value from this former guard post are long gone.

2-10: Antechamber of the Oracle

Light and a low buzz and crackle of energy greet those approaching this chamber. The 20'-tall antechamber is shunned by the baboons, which fear its unpredictable but still potent magical force.

The antechamber is lit with a continual light spell, and still retains much of its decorative splendor. A fresco of an ibis occupies the entire western wall; its eyes are permanently-active coconut-sized lumps of arcanum (see new magic items), and they thus protrude from the fresco a good bit. Every 2 turns the eyes flash sharply with pink light and a buzz of energy that fills the chamber for a moment; this light acts as a dispel magic spell (at 9th level) on anything in the chamber (potions have a 35% chance of destruction). The north wall features a fresco of a smaller ibis head from whose beak spouts a scroll. The curves and wraps of the scroll occupy most of the wall. This scroll has about 200 phrases written upon it in Mithric; these are utterances of the oracle that were never decoded. The GM could elect to bury a clue or two to the dungeon on this wall, although such a clue would have to be quite abstruse (since the priests of Thoth were not unintelligent).

On the south wall, three blocks of granite protrude from the wall. These blocks (6' wide, 3' tall, 3' deep into the room) have been carved to resemble open mouths, complete with hints of teeth. Although each gapes open, a continual darkness spell has been cast inside of each. Carved on the floor in front of the mouths is this phrase: "Those who would seek Thoth's knowledge must possess the wisdom to follow his breath." Objects tossed into any of the mouths will disappear from view. The only way to determine where a mouth will lead is to climb into it. The middle mouth leads to a long stone staircase that descends 150' before eventually emerging at the Oracle (3-118 and 3-119). The other two mouths will teleport the entrant elsewhere in the Halls: the western mouth leads to the Great Hall (3-123), while the eastern mouth deposits entrants in the fane of the Sanctum (5-83). A permanent silence 15' radius lies behind the middle mouth silencing sounds of thrown objects.

Treasure:

The 2-lb lumps of arcanum (see new magic items) are valuable, but difficult to remove. It takes a successful open doors check to do so, as well as a roll of 2d8 under INT to avoid shattering them in the process. The process of removing the arcanum will also serve to inflict a magical 'burn' on the remover; the remover will suffer a temporary dispel magic on him or herself for a period of 2-8 weeks. During that period, no spells will work on the remover, nor will he/she be able to operate magical devices (rings, wands, etc.). Magical weapons will retain their bonuses, however. In addition to this 'burn' effect, the remover will feel infused with incredible energy; he/she will feel practically invincible (the feeling will not convey any special benefits; it is purely psychological). Once removed, the two lumps function as 'normal' fist-sized lumps of arcanum (see new magic items).

2-11: Guard Captain's Chamber

This formerly opulent chamber has seen better days. The walls retain their plaster and imagery. The most noticeable image is that of an immense squatting baboon which stares from the north wall. Several piles of rotted wood indicate what had previously been a bed, dresser, and desk. A human-sized skeleton lies in the center of the room, with mouth gaping open.

The eyes of the squatting baboon conceal small spy-holes which the Chief Priest could use to spy on his captain (see 2-30 for more details).

Treasure:

Among the trash is a fine long sword, with a baboon-skin grip (worth 35 gp). In the desk drawer is a battered copy of The Courtship of Julius the Exarch (see Arden Vul books).

2-12: Barracks

Both doors to the barracks are closed and spiked shut from the outside, and both have baboon feces smeared on them. Shut inside is a small pack of ghouls who are starving for flesh. PCs listening at the door will hear groans, whimpers, and wordless pleading.

The chamber itself has been ravaged; the plaster is shredded, the furniture splintered, and all personal items of the long-dead guards dispersed.

Inhabitants:

1. 6 ghouls: SZ M; AL CE; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 15, 13, 12, 11, 11, 10; #AT 3; Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-6. Special attacks: paralysis. Special defenses: immune to sleep and charm.

Treasure:

One particularly vile pile of filth contains 45 pp, a wand of alignment detection with 25 charges, and a guard cap (see new magic items for both).

2-13: Baboon Attack

Both doors to this chamber have disappeared. Light or noise will provoke an immediate attack from the baboon troop that is scavenging among the junk left in this former guardroom. The room is filthy, the frescoes are long gone, and piles of trash, fur, and excrement litter the floor.

Inhabitants:

1. 6 large albino baboons (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; MV 120'; AC 6; HD 3; HP 20, 19, 18, 18, 15, 14; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-6. Special attacks: pack attack.

2-14: Dormitory

Elaborate wooden cells line the walls of this large chamber. The room is dark, and smells strongly of baboon urine. Four cells are 20'x10', while the other eight are 10'x10'. The cells are formed of teakwood walls and doors, all of which are intricately carved with floral and animal motifs. Each cell contained a built-in sleeping unit (bed over drawers, with storage above) and a small desk and chair; the larger cells boasted a small table and two extra chairs. Most of the cells were long ago stripped of their movable furnishings.

A life-sized stone statue of a human priest in an action pose stands just to the west of the door. This is the unfortunate Remagis, 1st-level cleric of Thoth, who was turned to stone during the tumultuous abandonment of the complex over a millennium ago. It is possible that a stone to flesh spell would bring Remagis back to life (a system shock roll would be in order to see if he survives the transformation), although he speaks only Mithric and will be extremely confused. Still, he possesses a good knowledge of the layout of Levels 1, 2, 3, and parts of 5 and 6.

Inhabitants:

1. Remagis, 1st-level male Archontean cleric of Thoth: SZ M; AL LN; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 1; HP 6; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (mace). Abilities: STR 11, INT 15, WIS 17, DEX 16, CON 11, CHA 14. Possessions: orange ceremonial garb; an ibis-headed mace; a pouch with 25 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items); and a scroll of protection from evil. Remagis speaks only Mithric.

Treasure:

Persistent searching over 3 turns might turn up a silver candlestick (10 gp), a set of inlaid dice (25 gp), a red glass activation square (see Thothian teleportation rings in new magic items), and a packet of sealing wax. The true treasure is the carved teakwood, which, if carefully disassembled by someone with skill in carpentry, would be worth 10,000 to a collector in a city. The wood is heavy and bulky, though. If the dis-assembler lacks carpentry training, a roll of 4d6 under INT must be made to preserve the integrity of the piece; if it is failed, the result will be 3-12 pieces of partial furniture worth 100-600 gp each. When disassembled, a secret compartment holding two distinct stories from The Deeds of Phagtro the Westron (see Arden Vul books) may be found.

2-15: Stairs Down to Level 3 (3-21)

Both doors to this area swing broken on their hinges. The stairs lead down 125' to area 3-21. An observant PC will notice that there has been some, but not a lot of, traffic up and down the stairs. It should be noted that a portcullis currently blocks access from the stairwell to area 3-21.

2-16: Crossroads

The walls are bare stone. Inlaid in the floor in colored glass is a set of cardinal compass points. Low pulsating light emanates from the west corridor. An ibis-shaped iron lever is set into the west wall. It used to operate the portcullis but is now immovable due to rust. As a result, it opens only with a successful lift gates check.

2-17: Anti-Magic Zone

This entire chamber (including the portcullis at 2-16) has been enchanted with an anti-magic shell (protection of a sorts for summoning gone awry in 2-19); no spells, magic items, or devices will work in this chamber. Should the portcullis be forced open, the ghouls in areas 2-20 through 2-22 will be free to move into the rest of Level 2. This might be a good thing for adventurers looking to soften up the baboons, but then again, it might not.

In the center of the room is a small, carved ivory box, some 18"x12"x4" in size.

Six corpses lie in a pile across the threshold of the door leading to 2-20. They have nothing of value.

Noise or light in this chamber is sure to attract the ghouls from 2-20. If combat ensues with these ghouls, Jhentris (2-22) may (25%) hear the ruckus and come to investigate

Treasure:

The ivory box is a coffer of Zo (see new magic items), containing four ghouls and seven skeletons. So long as the coffer sits in 2-16, the anti-magic shell mutes its powers; its powers return when it is taken out of the area, however.

2-18: Stuck Door

This door was spiked shut from the inside (open doors check to open) when two priests of Thoth tried to fortify themselves against the ghouls in 2-20 and 2-22 until reinforcements could arrive. That never happened, and the priests' bodies are now to be found resting against the wall where they finally committed suicide. The chamber contains three rickety sets of wooden shelving; the floor is littered with broken glass, and bits of colored flakes. Two ivory wands have been snapped in half. As the priests lost hope they grew despondent and destroyed a small fortune in equipment used in alchemy and summoning.

Treasure:

A ring of spell storing (stores 3 first level spells), a scroll of augury, and a pouch full of small garnets (20 gems worth a total of 100 gp). Two orange silk robes with arcane sigils of Thoth embroidered on them (50 gp each).

2-19: Summoning Chamber

A locked stone door (key in 2-22) leads to this enormous summoning chamber. Listening at the door before it is opened will likely (50%) allow one to hear bleating and chattering sounds (a pair of imps in goat and rat form). The walls are plastered and painted inky black, while the 30' ceiling is painted sky blue. A continual light spell shines from a point at the center of the ceiling. The floor is black marble, save for a white marble pentagram occupying the center of the room. A small ivory coffer, much like the one found in 2-17, rests on the floor next to the pentagram.

If the imps hear the PCs entering (very likely), they will be in goat and rat form. If they're taken by surprise, they will be in their natural form.

In the northwest corner a set of 2"-tall paving stones is arranged in a 6'-diameter ring. Inset into the floor next to the ring is a rectangle 48" long by 8" tall; the rectangle is divided into six interior compartments, each 8" square. Together these elements form a Thothian teleportation ring (see new magic items). To activate the ring, one must place six colored glass activation squares into the inset according to a sequence that matches the 'address' of the ring to which one wishes to travel. Once the squares are placed, a brief shimmer of energy is visible over the ring. At this point the user has 1 round to collect the squares and enter the ring, after which anyone in the ring is teleported without error to address indicated by that sequence of squares. If the glass activation squares are not collected and/or if the travelers do not possess a second set of them, they are likely to be stranded in the location to which they have just teleported. The address of this ring is as follows: WH-YE-BL-GR-RE-BK (see new magic items for explanation).

Unlike most of the teleportation rings, this one has a full set of glass activation squares placed in the inset; what is more, these squares are arranged in the sequence that provides the address to this same chamber (i.e., WH-YE-BL-GR-RE-BK). As a result, anyone stepping into the ring will shimmer briefly and then reappear in the same spot.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 imps: SZ S; AL LE; AC 2; MV 60'; 180' flying (Class C); HD 2+2; HP 16, 13; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4; MR 25%. Special attacks: poison. Special defenses: silver, or +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to fire, cold and electricity; save vs magic as 7 HD creatures. Special: polymorph self (to animal form); detect magic; detect good; detect magic; invisibility; regenerate 1 hp/round, suggestion 1/day.

Treasure:

Carved ivory coffer (about 18"x12"x4"; carved with obscene images of mating demons). The coffer is cursed; the first person to touch it will receive 2-12 HP damage and will suffer from rapid hair growth until the curse is removed (in one hour the hair will reach shoulder length; in one day it will be floor-length). Once the curse has been activated, the coffer loses its magical properties and is worth 200 gp. Rattling about within the coffer are two acorns of Fenth (see new magic items).

2-20: Ghouls

About a dozen priests and apprentices were conducting a dangerous summoning ritual in 2-19 the last days before the complex was to be abandoned. When the ritual failed, the guards in area 2-16, fearing to release unspecified evil, refused to open the portcullis and release these priests. Eventually all died of starvation and self-inflicted wounds. Due to a failure in the ritual, most of these Thothian adepts rose as undead.

This former preparation chamber looks like a madhouse. Frescoes that used to depict serene images of Thoth and his priests have been badly mutilated and defaced, and most of the equipment has been destroyed. A few bits of insane ramblings have been scrawled on the walls in Mithric - these indicate cannibalism, fear of a certain Jhentris, and furious murder. The noise of combat in this chamber is likely (50%) to bring the skeletons from 2-21 into the fray.

Inhabitants:

1. 8 ghouls: SZ M; AL CE; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 15, 14, 14, 13, 12, 11, 11, 9; #AT 3; Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-6. Special attacks: paralysis. Special defenses: immune to sleep and charm.

Treasure:

A pair of bolts of fire (see new magic items), a jade bracelet (25 gp), and a rough diamond (1,000 gp) can be found after a turn of searching among a lot of trash.

2-21: Skeletons

As the chaos ensued, the bodies of murdered and eaten priests were thrown into this former private laboratory. Six of them have risen as skeletons. The door to 2-20 is shut, but not locked. The laboratory was completely gutted by the trapped priests, and little of use remains. The frescoes in this chamber are in better shape, and depict a kneeling Thoth blowing the wind of wisdom onto the heads of busy priests, all of whom are engaged in research and experiments of some sort.

Inhabitants:

1. 6 skeletons: SZ M; AL N; AC 7; MV 120'; HD 1; HP 8, 7, 6, 6, 5, 4; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special defenses: immune to sleep, charm, hold, and cold; cutting and piercing weapons do half damage.

Treasure:

Amid the rubble may be found, after a turn of searching, a potion of healing; a potion of the berserk (see new magic items); six silver holy symbols of Thoth (50 sp each); and a backpack with 334 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items).

2-22: Jhentris the Ghoul

This former alchemical laboratory houses the 'court' of Jhentris, a particularly ambitious priest who returned after death as an unusually powerful ghoul. Originally three large workbenches sat in the middle of the room, and wooden shelving filled with paraphernalia lined the walls. Most of the glassware has been shattered, and Jhentris has built a strange throne of sorts out of the surviving table and scraps of wood. The 'throne' consists of a chair made of bone and wood resting atop a desk placed on top of a table. Jhentris sits in his throne, gnawing bones and murmuring hungrily and angrily. The walls are undecorated, save for marks where the shelving used to rest. The floor is covered with glass shards and other debris, rendering movement more difficult (-10' movement). Some scraps of 'treasure' sit on the table to either side of Jhentris's throne.

Inhabitants:

1. Jhentris, powerful ghoul: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 4; HP 25; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-6. Special attacks: paralysis. Special defenses: cannot be turned in area 2-22, turned as a ghost elsewhere; immune to sleep and charm.
2. 4 normal ghouls: SZ M; AL CE; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 13, 12, 11, 10; #AT 3; Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-6. Special attacks: paralysis. Special defenses: immune to sleep and charm.
3. 4 zombies: SZ M; AL N; AC 8; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 12, 10, 9, 8; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8. Special: always strike last.

Treasure:

Jhentris carries the key to 2-19 on a thong around his neck. Piled by his throne are 6 copper daggers, a copper torc (25 gp), a bronze circlet (30 gp), 612 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items); a wand of magic missiles (2 charges); a scroll of holy name (see new spells); an ankh-key (see Arden Vul items); a single tale from The Deeds of Phagtro the Westron (see Arden Vul books); and an amulet versus undead (cleric level 4). Four potions, of flying, clairvoyance, giant control, and dispelling (see new magic items), may also be found among the debris.

2-23: Magical Laboratory, with Access to AV-18

A locked door leads to this former wizard's laboratory. Although much reduced since the days of Thoth's glory, Gerrilad (2-69) and Isocritis (2-70) have managed to scavenge a fair amount of useful materials. Gerrilad holds the key, although it is Isocritis who has activated the Archontean animated construct (see new monsters) and who uses the laboratory on a regular basis. The construct attacks anyone not accompanied by Gerrilad or Isocritis. There is a 10% chance that Isocritis is present here.

The room is crammed with stuff, some useful, most not. A huge (10'-tall) carved face stares from the south wall, while an 8'-tall stone statue stands to the west of the entrance hall. About 8 tables of different size and heights occupy the room, on which, under which, and near which is a huge assortment of items. If dungeon dressing is used, roll up to 100 times to establish the proper level of clutter; otherwise the GM should invent whatever is useful or appropriate. Appropriate items might include a mummified baboon paw, an enormous calcified egg, feathers from exotic birds, geological specimens of unusual shape and color, colored sands, jars with strange liquids (some with objects floating in them), etc. At the GM's will, some of these may be usable in magical research. Removal of the stuff will be difficult as there is a lot of it, and much of it is bulky. Several magic items can be found after 6 turns of searching (they are listed below).

Potion Machine: Against the south wall is an enormous carved baboon face with extended tongue. The features are exaggerated, with hollowed-out eyes and nostril cavities that extend over the tongue. Currently an empty flask rests on the tongue. In fact, the face can be used to create potions. An empty flask is placed on the tongue, and then the appropriate samples are laid in the eyes; after 3-12 rounds, the appropriate potion will drip out of the nostrils and into the flask. If the PCs look for potion supplies, the following can be found in a new-ish looking case laid against the east wall: 10 doses of red veil mushroom (see new flora), 5 fist-sized chunks of still-potent arcenum (see new magic items), 3 doses of crushed pearl, 1 50-gp diamond chip, 13 eyes of newt, 25 holly leaves, 4 manticores spines, 7 ghouls' teeth, 3 vials of gelatinous cube gelatin, a roc feather, a vial of red dragon blood, 2 fire mephit eyes, and 3 vials of mercury.

It is up to the GM to decide appropriate recipes for potions, but a few helpful suggestions (among many other possibilities,) are given here:

Potion of healing: 1 dose crushed pearl, 3 holly leaves, and an eye of newt

Potion of the berserk (see new magic items): 3 doses of red veil mushroom (see new flora), 1 vial of mercury, 2 ghouls' teeth.

Poison [weak, +2 to save]: 1 dose red veil mushroom (see new flora), 1 manticores spine, 1 pint vinegar.

Potion of fire breath: dragon's blood, a fire mephit eye, and a diamond chip.

Statue: The statue shows a human clad in kilt and Thothian head-dress, and carrying a spear. The statue animates and attacks anyone unaccompanied by Isocritis and/or Gerrilad.

Secret Door (north): This door is hard to detect (1 in 8) from the south side, but very easy (1 in 3) to find from the north. The door leads to a narrow, steep passage that climbs upward 225' in a series of spirals before ending up in a cellar of area AV-18.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 Archontean animated construct - spearman (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 2; MV 60'; HD 6; HP 38; #AT 1; Dmg 5-10; MR 25%. Special defenses: immune to elemental magic, poison, and mind-affecting spells; +1 or better weapons to hit; half damage from slashing or piercing weapons.
2. Isocritis Half-Hand (10%): for stats, see 2-70.

Treasure:

Lots of mundane, and potentially interesting, items. In addition, the construct wields a black iron spear (see new magic items). An hour's careful searching will turn up these items: pair of keys to the hematite doors (3-177); an ankh-key (see Arden Vul items); a wand of detect evil (20 charges); a cursed wand of alarms (27 charges; see new magic items); a peript of proof against poison; and two scrolls containing wizard's cache and the Bracteros effect (see new spells for both).

2-24: Apprentices' Chamber

This ransacked former apprentices' chamber still contains vestiges of ancient frescoes of baboons on its walls. Most of the chamber is filled with trash, including smashed beds and desks. In the northeast corner stands a perch for a bird, and on it rests a large raven. The bird is a mechanical apprentice's raven.

Treasure:

Apprentices' raven, worth 650 gp, or twice that to Kerbog Khan at SL12-25 (see new magic items).

2-25: Store Room

The door to this former storeroom balances precariously on shattered hinges. All stores have long since been cleaned out of this empty room.

2-26: Baboons

Both doors to this chamber are long gone, and a troop of six baboons is currently rummaging among the trash and detritus. The trash includes bones, offal, dung, and random bits of adventuring gear. Some of the trash is fresh, and has been deposited here at Gerrilad's orders. Spending one turn searching the knee-deep trash may (20%) turn up one randomly determined piece of adventuring equipment. All paint has flaked off the walls of this room.

Inhabitants:

1. 6 large albino baboons (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; MV 120'; AC 6; HD 3; HP 20, 19, 18, 18, 15, 14; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-6. Special attacks: pack attack.

Treasure:

A pouch with 37 gp may be found after 3 turns searching.

2-27: Haunted Room

The door to this room is intact, and pulled shut. The baboons avoid this chamber, since they suffered a major defeat here many years ago. Just inside the doorway are piled 10 skeletal baboon corpses. On the other side of the baboon pile is the mostly-skeletonized form of a large human, still dressed in a chain byrnie and wielding an enormous axe. This is the body of Skalla of Westholm, who gave his life defending his (dying) companion. Skalla's spirit still lingers, and will animate his armored skeleton if the body of his dead companion is disturbed.

Inside the room, the walls are brightly painted with pastoral scenes of hunting with birds and dogs in marsh and forest; in every scene is a large ibis, which accompanies the hunter. Against the east wall is a simple rope bed, whose bedclothes have mostly rotted. On the bed lies the corpse of an elven female, desiccated but not desecrated. Mortally wounded by baboons, she died here while Skalla repelled the baboon horde. The corpse clutches a metal wand some 8" long in its left hand, while its right hand is encased in a blackened leather glove. She wears a linen belt pouch, still remarkably preserved, and a leather backpack. Should her corpse be approached, a groaning-yet-wordless warning will emanate in the room. Should it be disturbed, the soul of Skalla will return to protect his mistress; his axe will fly to his hand, regardless of its current location, and Skalla will attack. Those viewing the terrible sight must save vs. spells at -4 or flee away in terror for 1-4 rounds.

Underneath the bed is a stone chest. The spyholes to 2-30 are fairly obvious on the east wall.

Inhabitants:

1. Skalla of Westholm, animated skeleton: SZ M; AL LN; AC 4; MV 120'; HD 6, HP 38, #AT 1; Dmg 4-11 (Axe of the Wastes). Special attacks: fear aura (saves at -4). Special defenses: immune to sleep, charm, hold, and cold; cutting and piercing weapons do half damage; cannot be turned. Possessions: Axe of the Wastes (see new magic items).

Treasure:

Axe of the Wastes (see new magic items), a wand of secret door and trap detection with 25 charges (command word is "reveal" in Elven), two arrows of striking, a gauntlet of fire absorption, and a pouch of capacity (see new magic items for the last three). The backpack contains a spell book with the following spells: detect magic, enlarge, floating disk, magic missile, push, read magic, sleep; darkness 15' radius, detect evil, Frigg's fraud (see new spells), knock, Probus's thunderous alert (see new spells), strength; blink, monster summoning I, slow. It also contains a coil of 100' of elven silk rope.

2-28: Audience Hall

This 15'-tall chamber was originally the audience hall for the high priests of Thoth. It is currently the residence and court of Sisko, chief of the giant intelligent baboons (see 2-32). Enormous frescoes of Thoth and his priests occupy the east wall, and are still largely intact. A stone dais rises 3' above the floor in the center of the east wall; on it is a heavy but beautiful rosewood chair carved with ibises and baboons (worth up to 200 gp, but weighing 50 lb).

If no punishment ritual is taking place in 2-35, Sisko is present here 80% of the time; otherwise he is in his room (2-29; 20%). If he is found here, he will be sitting in the chair, holding court by grunting at 4-9 baboons that are barking nervously before him. If Sisko is present, there is a 20% chance that Trefko (2-32) will be here, pretending to wait on the alpha-male. If Sisko is present and intruders enter, Sisko will give the intruders a brief chance to abase themselves and state their business before he and his troop attack.

Inhabitants:

1. Sisko (possibly): see stats at 2-29
2. Trefko (possibly): see stats at 2-32
3. 4-9 large albino baboons (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; MV 120'; AC 6; HD 3; HP 20, 19, 19, 18, 18, 18, 17, 15, 14; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-6. Special attacks: pack attack.

Treasure:

Rosewood chair (200 gp).

2-29: Sisko's Lair

Sisko, the alpha male of the giant intelligent baboons, inhabits this room, the former residence of the high priest of Thoth. The 10'-tall chamber used to be extravagantly decorated, with frescoes of gilt and lapis that depicted priests of Thoth in full ceremonial robes (with tall cylindrical headgear) performing various rituals.

By the west wall sits an enormous statue of Thoth, seated and in human guise. Behind it is a fresco showing an ibis emitting rays, with robed figures genuflecting before it (identical to that in 2-4).

Above the fresco are the Mithric words of the third portion of the Litany of Light (see Arden Vul books): “Let the Faithful Render Honor and Glory to the Light Which Reveals All.”

Two sections of living mosaic (see new magic items) have been enchanted on the north wall next to the door. They depict 1) the Whispering Hall (2-63), and 2) the Great Hall (3-123).

A half-dead adventurer named Burris is suspended from manacles stapled into the ceiling; Phlebotomas’s gang (areas 3-3 to 3-6) captured him and traded him to the baboons. If rescued, he can reveal information about the Hall of Judgment and the halflings’ operations on Level 3.

Tormenting Burris are the members of Sisko’s harem, a group of four female baboons and two female goblins.

Sisko has a large mound of clothing for his bed. Three dead goats and two dead goblins hang from hooks set in the east wall, and a rectangular stone water basin lies against the south wall. Sisko has attached a pair of leather sacks to a hook in the ceiling; his treasure is there, out of reach of his harem.

If no punishment ceremony is taking place in 2-35, Sisko will be found here 20% of the time; otherwise (80%) he will be holding court in 2-28.

Sisko is intelligent and aggressive. He is Gerrilad’s main lieutenant, and is feared by almost all other denizens of Level 2. His Archontean is clear, if halting, and he occasionally likes to put on human clothes to see what he looks like. His harem is full of cowed and subservient females who will, however, fight any intruder tooth and nail.

Secret Door (east): The door is normal to detect, but almost impossible to open from this side unless one uses one of the following two methods: a) using the right key, either the high priest’s key (2-31 or 2-43), or a Thothian passkey (see Arden Vul items); or b) facing the fresco of Thoth on the west wall and chanting the third mantra of the Litany of Light (see Arden Vul books) (“All Glory to the Light of Knowledge”). The secret door leads to a network of tunnels used by the high priests of old to spy on their subordinates (2-30).

Inhabitants:

1. Sisko, giant intelligent baboon (see new monsters): SZ L; AL NE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 8; HP 62; #AT 5; Dmg 1-6/1-6/1-6/1-6/1-10. Special attacks: rend.
2. 4 large albino baboons (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; MV 120'; AC 6; HD 3; HP 20, 19, 18, 18; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-6. Special attacks: pack attack.
3. 2 goblins: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 5, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.
4. Burris, 2nd-level male Thorcin fighter: SZ M; AL NG; AC 10; MV 120'; HD 2; HP 8 (max 20); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 16; INT 9; WIS 11; DEX 14; CON 17; CHA 10.

Treasure:

One sack contains a mixture of coins: 343 cp pieces, 277 sp, 156 gp, and 5 ancient octagonal platinum coins (see Arden Vul items). The other sack contains assorted treasures: a femur made into a flute, a conical bronze helmet, a pair of red silk slippers, a black glass activation square (see Thothian teleportation rings in new magic items), a gold Sortian eye (see new magic items), a jar of candied oranges, and a set of silver chess pieces worth 400 gp.

2-30: Spy-Holes and Secret Doors

The secret door in 2-29 leads to a network of narrow, cramped tunnels built to allow the high priest to spy on the goings-on of his underlings. The tunnels are of poorly finished rock without decoration, and are currently filled with cobwebs and small spiders’ webs (harmless). Cleverly concealed spy-holes at 2-11, 2-27, and 2-32 allow observation of these chambers.

Secret Door (near 2-12 and 2-27): This door is easy to detect from the tunnel side (1 in 4), but hard to detect from the corridor side (1 in 8). It can only be opened from the corridor side by those possessing either the high priest’s key (2-31 or 2-43) or a Thothian passkey (see Arden Vul items). From the tunnel side, an iron pull concealed near the ceiling causes the door to spring open inward.

Secret Door (to 2-31): This door communicating to the high priest’s secret lab is normal to find, and is accessed by pressing a panel near the floor inwards, and then pulling it upwards.

Secret Door (to 2-29): This door is difficult to open from the high priest’s chamber (see description at 2-29), but is easy to find (1 in 4) from the spy-tunnel network. It is locked, and either the high priest’s key (2-31 or 2-43) or a Thothian passkey (see Arden Vul items) is necessary to open it; it can be picked by thieves at a penalty of -10%.

Secret Door (to 2-34): This door is normal to find from the corridor side, but easy to find from the tunnel side (1 in 4). From the corridor side, only the high priest’s key (2-31 or 2-43) or a Thothian passkey (see Arden Vul items) can open it; from the tunnel side, an iron pull concealed near the ceiling causes it to spring open inward.

2-31: Hidden Laboratory

The high priest of Thoth possessed a secret laboratory and workshop to which he and only a select few of his inner circle had access. In addition to some fine magical equipment, the laboratory is also the resting place of Arpostas, one of the last high priests of Thoth, as well as an unfortunate lesser priest named Xerxastes. It is also the current abode of an entrapment devil (see new monsters) named Semillimes.

The chamber is lit by torches (illusions, see the devil below), and is almost completely undecorated, save for a huge white ibis head painted over the secret door on the north wall. The ibis head is enchanted, and its eyes will follow any who move around in the room. It also serves as a magic mouth for Thoth: anyone opening the door and leaving the chamber hears the ibis intone in a booming bass voice (in the secret tongue of the priests of Thoth): “Thus always traitors” (the language will be comprehensible to all).

The southeast wall of the room contains a long workbench with a variety of wizardly and priestly objects on it. Against the northern wall rests an interrogation table made of stone, with bronze manacles; still shackled to the table is the desiccated corpse of a human being. On his finger is a gold and lapis signet ring with the name “Xerxastes” (worth 50gp); he also wears an earring of protection +2 (see new magic items). The western wall has two sections of living mosaic (see new magic items) embedded into it; one shows the Audience Chamber (2-28) while the other shows the Judgment Hall (2-35).

The center of the room is carpeted; on the circular carpet is a table, four chairs, and an additional easy chair, in which slumps a middle-aged man with greying hair; the man wears elaborate formal robes and a Thothian headdress. If the chamber is entered, the man stirs, shakes himself, rubs his eyes, and stands; he appears bleary and confused, and peers around at his environment. The man is actually a devious entrapment devil, who masquerades as the Thothian priest, Arpostas (see below for his strategy).

Story: The true Arpostas dabbled in summoning magic and was ensnared by an entrapment devil, who dominated him. A priest, Xerxastes, discovered the treachery of Arpostas and reported it to the spymaster, Ptirasa. Before Ptirasa could take definitive action, Arpostas managed to locate and torture Xerxastes, and then to lure Ptirasa into a trap and kill her (see 2-41). Arpostas's pride went too far, however, and Thoth eventually cursed him; he died in misery. His tormentor, the devil Semillimes, was trapped in the summoning circle in this room. Semillimes has been waiting for release for a very long time, and has developed a cunning plan and persona through which to do so. He will be more than happy to damn a few extra souls in the process, if he is able to do so.

The Devil: Semillimes has cast an illusion designed to mask the fact that he is trapped in a summoning circle. The illusion takes several forms, including the carpet (obscuring the circle), the lights, and his own physical form. He greets all intruders jovially in Mithric, introducing himself as Arpostas; he thanks them profusely for entering the chamber and breaking the stasis spell by which he has been imprisoned. He is intensely interested in the current era, and will offer refreshment at his table. If pressed to leave, he says he prefers to garner information here first (he may gesture at the living mosaics), as he is aware that he has much to learn before reinserting himself in the world. If questioned about Xerxastes, he notes that his enthusiastic servants blamed Xerxastes for his imprisonment and thus tied the priest to the questioning table. Eventually they left for reasons Arpostas/Semillimes does not understand, and Xerxastes slowly died.

Should anyone join Semillimes on the rug, the devil quickly attempts to dominate him/her; if successful, he commands the PC to continue the charade. If either his illusion or his domination attempt is detected, Semillimes blithely continues his pretense, becoming slightly shriller in his pathetic requests to the PCs. If detected after he has successfully dominated someone, the devil attempts to barter the dominated PC's life in return for his own ends, namely freedom and promises of service from other PCs. If unsuccessful in bartering, Semillimes commands the dominated PC to erase the circle (friends will see that PC lift the rug, and then scrape at the floor); he then attempts to summon an ice devil to assault the foolish PCs (40% chance) before teleporting himself and the dominated PC to Hell.

If Semillimes is able to depart, the illusion vanishes and PCs see a smudged summoning circle with a pentagram inside it, as well as a desiccated corpse where the illusionary table used to be, all amid a well-stocked laboratory. The corpse is that of Arpostas; it bears a bronze key (the high priest's key; usable at 2-29, 2-30, 2-34, and 2-41) and his signet ring (platinum and ruby, worth 250gp). If this ring is presented to the ghost of Ptirasa at 2-41, the PCs may also be able to acquire a Thothian passkey (see Arden Vul items).

Inhabitants:

1. Semillimes, entrapment devil: SZ M; AL LE; AC -2; MV 90'; HD 10; HP 73; #AT 2; Dmg 3-6/3-6; MR 70%. Special attacks: dominate 3/day; hold person. Special defenses: polymorph self; immune to fire; takes half damage from cold and gas. Special: permanent illusion; teleport without error; summon another devil (40% chance); know alignment; cause fear; animate dead; infravision; suggestion.
2. Ice devil: (possibly): SZ L; AL LE; AC -4; MV 60'; HD 11; HP 77; #AT 4; Dmg 1-4/1-4/2-8/3-12; MR 55%. Constant abilities: infravision; ultravision (60'); radiate fear 10' radius (save vs wands). Special attacks: cause fear; charm person; suggestion; ice storm (1/day). Special defenses: regenerate 1hp/round; silver, or +2 or better weapons to hit; immune to fire; takes half damage from cold and gas. Special: animate dead; fly; know alignment; phantasmal force; teleport without error; detect magic; detect invisible; polymorph self; 60% chance to gate in either two bone devils (70%) or another ice devil (30%).

Treasure:

Xerxastes's signet ring (50 gp) and earring of protection +2 (see new magic items); Arpostas's platinum and ruby signet ring (250 gp), and the high priest's key. The equipment and consumable materials of the laboratory are worth 10,000 gp, although they present obvious difficulties in transportation.

2-32: Trefko's Lair

A former barracks for elite guards who attended the high priest of Thoth, this room has been taken over by Trefko, a giant intelligent baboon. The walls are dirty and streaked with dust and worse. If they are cleaned up, images of men in bronze armor and conical helmets will be seen marching, spearing animals and monsters, and accompanying an ibis-headed man. An enormous pile of old robes and blankets occupies the northwest corner; this serves as Trefko's bed. Two dead goats hang from pegs on the east wall, and a leaky barrel of water rests against the south wall.

Trefko is an old, canny baboon, and not much interested in procreation; as a result he has no harem. If no ritual of punishment is taking place in 2-35, Trefko will be found here in his chamber 80% of the time, reclining on his 'bed' and eating sweetmeats (bits of meat); the other 20% of the time he will be in 2-28 pretending to pay court to Sisko.

Trefko is loyal to Gerrilad. Thus, while he is willing to talk first before turning hostile, he will not go against the wishes of Gerrilad, nor can he be tempted to act against the other giant intelligent baboons. That said, Trefko is no friend of Sisko, and is unlikely to come to Sisko's assistance if he hears fighting in 2-29 or 2-28. Trefko knows quite a bit about Level 2, and is quite willing to talk and reminisce (50% chance) if treated with respect and a lack of hostility.

Inhabitants:

1. Trefko, giant intelligent baboon (see new monsters): SZ L; AL NE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 8; HP 45; #AT 5; Dmg 1-6/1-6/1-6/1-10. Special attacks: rend. He wears an inert dwarven life-stone (see new magic items) on a cord around his neck. It bears the name 'Schist Corundam' in Dwarven Runic; the Corundam clan would love to have this object returned to Kazildor (see World of Archontos appendix).

Treasure:

Trefko has hidden a pretty rock (1,000 gp diamond) in his water barrel. It is impossible to see unless the barrel is actively searched or upended.

2-33: Robing Room, with Access to SL15-1

This former robing room sees a lot of traffic in the form of baboons moving between the Hall of Judgment (2-35) and Sisko's audience hall (2-28). Due to a collapse in the northwest corner, it also the route that Gerrilad the Grey (2-69) uses to exit the halls to cut mistletoe and holly.

Images of robed human priests line the north and west walls, although they are badly worn and, in places, mutilated. A crude image of a simian wearing a strange robe has been scrawled on the east wall. Wooden pegs may still be found in all the walls. There is a 25% chance of encountering 2-4 baboons here.

A 5'-tall pile of rubble stands in the northwest corner, the product of the collapse of a portion of the ceiling above it. The hole in the ceiling is about 4' in diameter and leads to a rough tunnel that climbs to area SL15-1. A knotted rope hangs from the hole; Gerrilad the Grey uses the rope to access the tunnels that eventually lead to the exterior (via area SL15-21).

Inhabitants:

1. 2-4 large albino baboons (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; MV 120'; AC 6; HD 3; HP 20, 19, 18, 18; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-6. Special attacks: pack attack.

2-34: Passageway

This corridor extends from 2-33 along the northern edge of the Hall of Judgment. In addition to two functional doors providing access to the Hall of Judgment (2-35), this corridor conceals two secret doors.

Secret Door (south): The secret door leading south to the high priest's spy tunnels (2-30) is normal to find, but impossible to open from the corridor side without the high priest's key (see 2-31 or 2-43) or a Thothian passkey (see Arden Vul items).

Secret Door (east): The door to 2-42 is hard to find (1 in 8). It operates by locating a pull wire stuck to the intersection of wall and ceiling, detaching the wire, and pulling it downward; this causes the secret door panel to slide up.

2-35: Hall of Judgment

This vast hall was the site of ritual judgment and decision-making for the inner-circle of the priesthood of Thoth. It features a 30'-tall coffer-vaulted ceiling and is lit by guttering torches attached to the pillars which form a hallway from the entrance towards two daises, each of which rises 10' above the floor. The walls are decorated with colossal mosaics of Thoth striding among puny humans: Thoth appears in various forms, including as an ibis, an ibis-headed man, a handsome Egyptian-style human, a crouching baboon, and a baboon-headed human. The columns are slim, some 2' in diameter, and still coated with a flaking, powder blue paint.

To the east and west of the columns are trapezoidal covered pits some 10' on a side; these pits are 25' deep and quite dark. The pits open automatically if more than 1,000 lb of weight is placed on the lid; a pair of studs located on the Ruby Chair may also be used to open them manually. The western pit contains 5' of water and 2 large crocodiles. The eastern pit has only 2' of water, but contains an otyugh.

The dais closer to the columns is a bare marble triangle out of which rises a black iron, 10'-tall, trapped punishment post. The post has two sets of shackles bolted to it with huge staples.

At the north end of the room is the judge's dais; this dais is also 10'-tall and made of marble, but it possesses a triangular chair made out of an enormous ruby.

A door to the east leads to the holding cells, while two doors to the north lead to an access corridor.

Currently the Hall of Judgment is the primary residence of the druid Gerrilad the Grey (2-69), who directs the baboons from this location. Gerrilad is present 75% of the time, conducting judicial interrogations of his own devising. If present, Gerrilad is accompanied by Sisko (2-29), Trefko (2-32) and 6 large albino baboons. A prisoner (roll 1d4 to determine which inhabitant of cells 2-36B through 2-36D) will also be shackled to the pillar; the prisoner will be screaming loudly as he/she is whipped by one of the giant intelligent baboons. Should combat ensue in the Hall, Njal Oakheart (2-36A) will emerge to investigate. If Gerrilad gains the upper hand, he orders the baboons to subdue any remaining enemies, who will be stripped and imprisoned in 2-36. Gerrilad might be willing to negotiate with a powerful-seeming party, although he might also attempt to maneuver them over the pits and open the lids. In combat, Sisko and Trefko attempt to grapple opponents and throw them onto the pits, which Gerrilad then opens manually.

If no punishment ritual is taking place, the chamber will be empty (save for the crocodiles and otyugh). Noise in the empty chamber (created by, say, attacking the crocodiles or otyugh) brings Njal Oakheart on the run (90%).

Ruby Chair: The ruby chair is made of the blood of Thoth, which Thoth's priesthood in Arden Vul secured through long and onerous service across the planes. In return for securing it from threat, Thoth transformed his blood into crystalline form, that is, into a giant ruby. Given its origin, it is simultaneously priceless and immovable. Those who attempt to chip away at the ruby will find their efforts useless, and their instruments swiftly blunted. Only by beseeching Thoth directly is it possible to gain some reward from the stupendously large gem. One must sit in the chair and then speak out one of Thoth's seven secret names followed by the phrase "Hear the voices of your servants in their need." If this ritual is performed, a trickle of 3-30 rubies worth 1,000-10,000 gp each will 'bleed' forth from the chair.

Of course the secret names of Thoth are not readily known. The four most likely ways for a PC to learn one of the names are these: 1) if Gerrilad the Grey is slain in 2-35, a booming, thunderous voice will immediately declaim one of the secret names ("the Thrice-Born Linguist"); 2) the ancient tome, Thoth in All His Forms (see Arden Vul books) lists four of the seven secret names; 3) the extremely rare ancient text entitled Secreta Secretorum (see Arden Vul books) contains all seven names; 4) consultation with a sage may (but only may) produce one of the names. Underneath the pile of coins that lies behind the ruby chair, the following words are incised deeply into the stone in formal, Mithric script: "Speak the Secret Name and Claim Thy Reward." Only those who remove the entire treasure pile will notice the inscription.

Trap 1 (Pits x2): Open if 1000 lb of weight are placed on them, or if a stud on the Ruby Chair is pressed. 2-12 damage.

Trap 2 (Punishment Post): pressing a stud on the Ruby Chair causes anyone touching the post to receive a 1-4 hp jolt of electric damage.

Note: this room is the destination for the teleport feature found at UP-11. Those teleported here find themselves standing between the ruby chair and the punishment post.

Permanent Inhabitants:

1. 2 crocodiles: SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 60', 120' swimming; HD 3; HP 24, 22; #AT 2; Dmg 2-8/1-12. Special attacks: surprise on 1-3.
2. 1 otyugh: SZ M; AL N; AC 3; MV 60'; HD 6; HP 42; #AT 3; Dmg 1-8/1-8/2-5. Special attacks: disease. Special defenses: limited telepathy (30'); never surprised.

Present only during a Punishment Ceremony:

1. 6 large albino baboons (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; MV 120'; AC 6; HD 3; HP 21, 19, 17, 16, 15, 13; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-6. Special attacks: pack attack.
2. Sisko (see stats at 2-29)
3. Trefko (see stats at 2-32)
4. Gerrilad the Grey (see statistics at 2-69).

Treasure:

In some circumstances (see above), the ruby chair will yield 3-30 rubies worth 1,000-10,000 gp each. In the east pit is the control rod for the pyramid at 2-8, as well as a wand of illumination with 22 charges. In the western pit are 511 sp, and a ring of invisibility (requires 1-3 turns searching). Piled behind the judge's dais is a mound of coins: 7,562 cp, 6,293 sp, 2,365 gp, and 827 pp.

2-36: Cells of Eternal Anxiety

The cellblock for the cult of Thoth is found in this location. The cells have wooden doors with barred windows set into them. Each has two sets of manacles set into the walls, although Gerrilad tends to keep only one prisoner in each cell.

2-36A: A guardroom, in which lives Njal Oakheart, an adventurer who has been charmed by Gerrilad the Grey (2-69, 2-35) and who now performs the function of gaoler. This chamber contains a simple cot, a water barrel, and a wooden box full of apples and dried meat. Njal possesses no treasure save his personal equipment, although a dry barrel contains a suit of leather armor, a suit of chain mail, two long swords, six daggers, 50' of rope, a bulls-eye lantern, and three backpacks.

Inhabitants:

1. Njal Oakheart, 4th-level male Wisikin fighter: SZ M; AL N; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 4; HP 36; #AT 1; Dmg 3-10 (battle axe +1). Abilities: STR 17, INT 11, WIS 9, DEX 11, CON 17, CHA 13. Possessions: battle axe +1; chain hauberk, wooden shield; two potions of healing; and an amulet of protection from normal missiles (see new magic items).

2-36B: Samantha the Red, 1st-level female Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL NG; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 1; HP 3 (max 10); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 17, INT 11, WIS 10, DEX 16, CON 16, CHA 12. She has been imprisoned for a little over one month and is in bad shape.

2-36C: Tresti Iredell, 2nd-level female half-elf magic user: SZ M; AL LN; AC 7; MV 120'; HD 2; HP 2 (max 4); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 10, INT 17, WIS 15, DEX 17, CON 11, CHA 8. Tresti has no spells memorized; her spell book is now located in area 2-70. She has been imprisoned for 2 weeks.

2-36D: Gwelf, 3rd-level male dwarven thief: SZ M, AL CN; AC 7; MV 90'; HD 3; HP 2 (max 17); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 15, INT 14, WIS 10, DEX 17, CON 15, CHA 10. Thief skills: PP 45%, OL 53%, F/RT 45%, MS 32%, HS 25%, HN 15%, CW 77%. Gwelf has been here 2 months, and has been tortured several times. He is close to insane, and sings old dwarven songs constantly, and off-key.

2-36E: Jost of Newmarket, 2nd-level male Thorcin fighter, SZ M; AL CG; AC 9; MV 120'; HD 2; HP 14 (max 18); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 18/48, INT 10, WIS 9, DEX 15, CON 16, CHA 9. As Jost has only been imprisoned for a week, he is still filled with hope.

2-37: Dormitory

This former dormitory used to have 10'x10' wooden cells lining its walls, but the baboons and their masters have ripped out the wood to use for other purposes. The chamber is thus a wreck, with small bits of wood, baboon dung, and the occasional bone strewn across it. The door is badly damaged, and will no longer stay shut.

2-38: Ancient Cavern

This cavern features natural walls with a smoothed and sanded floor. It served as a refuge and supply depot for the high priest of Thoth. A simple wooden desk, chair, and scroll case stand in the southwest corner, although they are badly rotted by age. Bolted to the south wall are manacles and shackles, which are still occupied by a mostly decomposed and desiccated human corpse. A pile of decomposed foodstuffs lies against the north wall. The tunnel to the northeast climbs a short series of stone steps but ends in a blank wall.

Secret Door (to 2-39): The door is easy to find (1 in 4) but hard to open (requires finding and depressing a knob of rock on the east wall of the tunnel).

2-39: Cave and Bridge

This cave was discovered by the priests of Thoth and incorporated into the secret precincts of the high priest. The priests did not improve the cave, although they did build a narrow stone bridge across the chasm. The bridge is made of fitted blocks of granite 3' wide. The cave contains a rough sarcophagus carved out of stone, with the following inscription in Mithric at one end: Hormakh built the bridge. His secrets lie here with him. May his sacrifice be honored, if not remembered. The stone sarcophagus is empty. The cave is home to a trio of mantari, who hunt in the chasm and surrounding caverns.

Secret Door (to 2-38): The door is easy to find (1 in 4). It silently opens by locating and depressing a knob of rock on the east wall of the tunnel.

Inhabitants:

1. 3 mantari: SZ S; AL NE; AC 9; MV 180' flying (Class C); HD 1+1; HP 8, 6, 6; #AT 1; Dmg special. Special attacks: sting (inflicts HP equal to 19-victim's CON); if a PC is hit on a 2nd consecutive round, damage from the sting is quadrupled.

2-40: Spy Platform

This 8'-tall chamber is undecorated, but boasts two ancient wooden chairs that collapse into dust if manipulated. Two obvious sets of spy-holes have been cut into the wall; they look out into 2-63. An ancient piece of parchment lies on the floor near one of the chairs; on it is written in Mithric some rough notes (heard by a watcher using the spyholes). These notes read: Lycandus - illusions conceal his remains. Ptarmis claims he can control the Fungal Foresters. Horkhari was shown the tomb of great Theskelon, of the Set Cult; it lies to the east of the Southern Necropolis of Set. Amhit has found the Obsidian Gates, but has been unable to teleport behind them.

GM Note: the tomb of Lycandus is found at 3-197; the note about Ptarmis refers both to the tomb of the real Ptarmis at 3-174 and to the amulet of Ptarmis worn by Trocadero of Newmarket (3-176); the tomb of Theskelon may be found at 4-142, near the southern necropolis of Set (4-139); the Obsidian Gates may be found at 5-6D.

Resting on the chair is an enormous conch shell; it has been enchanted to amplify sounds within 50'. The high priest used it to eavesdrop on those employing the Whispering Hall.

Secret Door (to 2-63): The door is easy to find (1 in 4). It opens by finding and depressing a knob of rock on the south wall of the cave.

Treasure:

Conch of amplification (see new magic items).

2-41: Funerary Cave

Like its analog on the other side of the chasm, this cave was discovered and employed for ultra-secret purposes by the inner circles of the cult of Thoth. A narrow tunnel leads to the chasm and the bridge to 2-39. Several wooden crates have decomposed into a pile to the south; rummaging around them are six giant centipedes.

Against the northern wall are five funeral slabs (gisants), suitable for using as sarcophagus lids. Two have been carved to represent priests of Thoth. One of the two is generic (waiting to be finished), but the other actually has a name carved on it (Ptirasa); it depicts an old woman with stringy hair, a short nose, and beady eyes. Ptirasa's gisant also bears an inscription in the secret tongue of the priesthood of Thoth: "Head Inquisitor and Judge, Ptirasa lived in the shadows even as she pursued the Light."

A sixth gisant has fallen over; a skeleton may be found beneath it. If moved, the skeleton will be revealed to possess a signet ring (Ptirasa), and a badly damaged scroll. The scroll reads, in the secret tongue of the priesthood of Thoth, "Be wary in agreeing to any meetings with Arpostas, for the high priest has abandoned the Light of Wisdom for the folly of chaos. Seek proof in the hidden passages beneath the Hall of Judgment. [signed] Xerxastes."

The ghost of Ptirasa haunts this chamber even still, although it is largely benign. It manifests shortly after the chamber is entered, as a ghostly woman dressed in elaborate ceremonial robes. The ghost hisses (in Mithric): "Beware the treachery of Arpostas. He will destroy our work. Warn the others!"

All of this may appear mundane and uninteresting, but the evidence of the gisants and ghost in fact provides a significant clue concerning the story of the entrapment devil and Arpostas in 2-31. Indeed, if proof of Arpostas's demise (from 2-31) is demonstrated to Ptirasa, then her ghost will glide to the south wall and point to an iron key cleverly hidden by a rock spur. This key is a Thothian passkey (see Arden Vul items), which may be used to open all locks on Levels 2 and 3 (except for those specifically excluded in a room description). Without the passkey, the secret door to the east is impassable from this direction.

Secret Door (east): This door is cleverly concealed to appear as part of the cave surface. From the cave side, it is normal to find, but only opens if the high priest's key (2-31 or 2-43) or a Thothian passkey (see Arden Vul items) is inserted into a hidden keyhole. It might be possible for a thief to pick the lock, albeit at a penalty of -20%. From the east, the door is easy to find (1 in 4) and opens inward when a rocky knob is depressed.

Inhabitants:

1. (benign) ghost, immune to attacks; no attack form.
2. 6 giant centipedes: SZ S; AL N; AC 9; MV 150'; HD 1 or 2 HP; HP 2(x3), 1(x3); #AT 1; Dmg n.a. Special attacks: poison (+4 to save)

Treasure:

Thothian passkey (see Arden Vul items).

On Ptirasa's corpse: three gold rings, each with a secret name of Thoth inscribed inside (the Thrice-Born Linguist, Font of Magic, Giver of Words), each worth 150 gp; a platinum, jade, and lapis necklace worth 3,750 gp; and two teeth of Poi (see new magic items). See Secreta Secretorum in Arden Vul books for a full listing of Thoth's secret names.

In the crates: desiccated foodstuffs, three 50' coils of hemp rope, two flasks of oil, a lantern, a set of marbles in a leather pouch, a set of stone mason's tools, and a set of fine chisels (35 gp).

2-42: Hall of Seeing

The long west-leading hallway is dusty and undecorated; it hasn't seen traffic in a very long time.

This dusty hall is empty save for its enchanted ceiling and two sections of living mosaic (see new magic items). The ceiling is enchanted to look like the stars over Arden Vul as they are at the current moment. It is so realistic that careful examination is necessary for visitors to recognize that it is not in fact the actual night sky; repeated visits will demonstrate, moreover, that the ceiling changes as the seasons change. The north wall features a patch of living mosaic (see new magic items) that displays area 2-34. The south wall contains a patch of living mosaic that displays the Hall of Shrines (area SL2-1). There is a 15% chance that an odd set of tracks run through the dust on the floor from east to west.

In the northeast corner, a set of 2"-tall paving stones is arranged in a 6'-diameter ring. Inset into the floor next to the ring is a rectangle 48" long by 8" tall; the rectangle is divided into six interior compartments, each 8" square. Together these elements form a Thothian teleportation ring (see new magic items). To activate the ring, one must place six colored glass activation squares into the inset according to a sequence that matches the 'address' of the ring to which one wishes to travel. Once the squares are placed, a brief shimmer of energy is visible over the ring. At this point the user has 1 round to collect the squares and enter the ring, after which anyone in the ring is teleported without error to address indicated by that sequence of squares. If the glass activation squares are not collected and/or if the travelers do not possess a second set of them, they are likely to be stranded in the location to which they have just teleported. The address of this ring is as follows: WH-YE-BL-RE-BK-GR (see new magic items for explanation). None of the glass activation squares necessary to operate the circle are present.

Secret Door (west): The secret door leading to this chamber is easy to find from the east (1 in 4), although it is difficult to find from 2-34 (1 in 8); it operates by locating a pull wire stuck to the intersection of wall and ceiling, detaching the wire, and pulling it downward; this causes the secret door panel to slide up.

2-43: Antechamber

Two dust-covered corpses lie in the center of this simply decorated chamber (yellow painted plaster walls). The corpses wear full-length red robes and tall cylindrical hats. One carries a belt-pouch with an onyx figurine of a panther (100 gp). The other wears a pair of boots of attraction (see new magic items) and is lying on top of an elaborate bronze key, namely the high priest's key (used at 2-29, 2-30, 2-34, and 2-41). Both bear a silver holy symbol of Set (10 gp). These ancient Set priests came across the key during the fall of the city and thought to loot the Halls of Thoth: they were mauled by the constructions in 2-44 and crawled here to die.

2-44: Guard Post

This room is still richly decorated in Thothian themes: white ibises imparting knowledge to genuflecting humans, baboons smashing crocodiles, and so forth. The ceiling is a cerulean blue, studded with gold stars. The room is lit with perpetually burning torches on the east and west walls. Statues of ibis-headed men stand in the middle of the north and south walls. These statues are 12' tall, with granite human bodies, alabaster ibis heads, and begemmed eyes. They animate and smite anyone who fails to present a holy symbol of Thoth upon entering the room (or who attempts to remove their sapphire eyes).

Secret Door (south): The secret door on the south wall is detected normally. It is concealed in a large fresco of an angry baboon. It opens when the eyes of the baboon are pressed at the same time.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 Archontean animated constructs - ibises (see new monsters): SZ L; AL N; AC 2; MV 60'; HD 6; HP 42, 41; #AT 2; Dmg 2-8/2-8; MR 25%. Special defenses: immune to elemental magic, poison, and immune to mind-affecting spells; +1 or better weapons to hit.

Treasure:

4 sapphire eyes, worth 1,250 gp each.

2-45: Stair of Heroes, to SL2-1

The secret door from 2-44 leads to a short hallway and then to a stairway leading upwards some 75' to the legendary Hall of Shrines (SL2-1). The hallway and the staircase are painted with vibrant images of human heroes smiting enemies of Thoth: magic users, warriors, veiled figures, and giant frogs. The paint looks remarkably fresh, although a thick layer of dust lines the area.

Secret Door (west): This door is easy to detect (1 in 4) from either side, and is manipulated by pressing the wall panel inward.

2-46: Circular Stair Down to Level 3-47

This granite stairway leads 125' feet down to Level 3 (area 3-47). The staircase is unremarkable save for numerous cobwebs and an abandoned backpack halfway down the staircase. It contains 10 iron spikes, three torches, 2 flasks of oil, and an everfull purse (sp, ep, gp variety).

2-47: Lost Cache and Skeleton

The high priest stored a cache of supplies here in case of emergency. It remains locked away in a stone chest in this small cave. In front of the chest are two badly mutilated corpses, one wearing orange-tinted chain mail with numerous rents and rips (usable Sortian chain mail, but only AC 6 due damage - see new magic items) and the other the attire of an ordinary adventurer. On top of the chest is an animated skull (see new monsters), which will rise into the air to query any intruder in the secret language of Thoth. If a proper password is not forthcoming ("Thoth" or "Wisdom"), the skull attacks. The corridor to the south leads to a small stone step and two spyholes that look out into the cavern of 2-48.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 animated skull (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 0, MV 30' flying (Class A); HD 4, HP 29; #AT 1; Dmg 1-2; MR 25%. Special defenses: immune to mind-affecting spells, resistance to fire and cold. Spell-like abilities: magic missile (2 missiles) (unlimited), cone of cold (4-24) (1/day), dispel magic (3/day), teleport (3/day), mirror image (3/day), ray of enfeeblement (3/day), sleep (3/day), and fireball (4-24) (3/day).

Treasure:

Stone chest, locked and trapped by explosive runes. The lock is difficult (-5%) to pick. Inside are 10,000 ancient silver pennies, 250 ancient octagonal platinum coins (see Arden Vul items for the coins), three golden bracelets (150 gp each), a silver torc of protection (see new magic items), a copy of the Litany of Light (see Arden Vul books), a war hammer +2, two glass spheres of arcane assistance – arcane warding and destruction (see new magic items), and three potions of extra healing.

On the corpses: damaged orange-tinted AC 6 Sortian chain mail (see new magic items); a silver Sortian eye (see new magic items), a purse of 56 cp, 55 sp, and 43 gp, leather armor, a short sword, a light crossbow with 20 bolts, a backpack, a scroll of the Hekate's bonds (see new spells), and a potion of levitation and a potion of flying. The smiths at area 9-60 might be able to repair the chain mail for the right price.

2-48: Ancient Monolith

The monolith rises over 150' from its base at 3-51 into Level 2 (see 3-51 for details). Here at 2-48, the monolith rises out of the gloom to end in a flattened platform. The platform is roughly 20' above the opening leading to the west (to the door to 2-49), and is about parallel to the spyholes in the passage extending from 2-47. The platform is triangular, with 8'-long sides.

A pentagram is inscribed on the surface of the platform, and the incisions have been filled with liquid silver (now hardened). A small cold-iron coffer rests in the middle of the pentagram. Anyone stepping inside the pentagram summons a keqemander demon (see new monsters) to the platform. The keqemander is able to levitate, and tries to knock enemies off the platform to their doom 150' below on the floor of 3-51 (15d6 damage).

Inhabitants:

1. 1 keqemander demon (see new monsters): SZ L; AL CE; AC -2; MV 90'; 150' flying (Class D); HD 8; HP 55; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/3-18; MR 40%. Constant abilities: dread (-1 to saves); infravision. Special attacks: acid spit (3-10 dmg; 30' range, every other round); cause fear; darkness (10' radius); exude acid with chance to degrade armor; use a symbol of discord. Special defenses: only hit by magic weapons; half damage from cold, electricity, fire, and gas; become invisible. Special: levitate; telekinesis (4,000 gp weight); project image; teleport without error; 50% chance to gate in either another keqemander or a Type I-IV demon.

Treasure:

The cold-iron coffer is a roughly-smithed box of iron plates, welded together with a silvery solder such that there is no apparent way to open the coffer. The easiest way is to apply heat to the seams and melt the solder. Doing so will heat the iron plates considerably, potentially causing heat damage to anyone holding the coffer. Inside the coffer are the following:

1. a palm of correction (a form of rudishva useful palm - see new magic items)
2. a tear of Kauket (see new magic items)
3. an insidious bone flute (see new magic items)
4. a platinum key to the Obsidian Gates (5-6D)
5. two flasks of the sweat of Rimmaq-Isfet (see new magic items)

2-49: Pukel-mander and Charnel Pit

Crouching in sullen menace, a pukel-mander (see new magic items) sits here on a ledge over-looking the Great Chasm (2-63A). The ledge falls away behind the statue, opening up into a large natural cavern that is covered with bones in a layer 3' deep. The cavern floor is 10' below the level of the statue.

In addition to its 'normal' properties, this pukel-mander has been enchanted such that touching it with anything other than a tear of Kauket (see new magic items) causes 8 heqeti hopping dead (see new monsters) to animate from the charnel pit behind the pukel. If defeated, the hopping dead are able to reanimate after 2 hours have passed. The pit only ceases to spawn hopping dead if the ziggurat of Kauket (10-32 to 10-37) is cleansed.

A concealed door is hidden behind a pile of bones and trash at the far end of the pit. It leads to a cliff's edge 135' above the floor of the cavern of the monolith at 2-48.

Inhabitants:

1. 8 heqeti hopping dead (see new monsters): SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 3; HP 22, 21, 20, 19, 19, 17, 16, 15; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8. Special attacks: leap; cursed tongue. Special defenses: turned as ghastrs; half damage from piercing and edged weapons; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and cold-based spells.

2-50: Doorstep to the Tomb of Isadora (leads to SL11-1)

This darkened hall is only 8' tall. The walls hold five stone doors – three on the north wall and one each on the east and west walls. Covering the walls (and doors) are faded frescoes spattered with baboon dung. Each depicts the same image: a woman in a white gown with waist-length yellow hair who is holding her right hand out in the universal symbol of 'stop'. The floor is littered with charred bits of cloth, leather, metal, and bone.

Entering the chamber triggers a permanent programmed illusion. The illusion shows a woman emerge from the middle door of the north wall. She wears a white gown with waist-length yellow hair and possesses piercing black eyes. She holds her hand up and speaks, in Mithric, "Stop! You are not welcome. Return whence you came and you will avoid retribution. Proceed and you shall die." The figure (who is Isadora - see SL11-19A) interacts in an extremely limited way, merely responding to questions with further dire threats and warnings. The warning illusion repeats every time the room is entered.

All five of the visible doors are false and trapped. A sixth, secret door is located on the east wall; while it is also trapped, it provides the only route to the tomb of Isadora (SL11-1) found in the dungeon levels of Arden Vul.

Traps (doors): All five of the visible doors as well as the secret door are trapped. Opening any of them triggers a fireball (7d6) spell. The magic that powers these traps is finite, however. It was originally set to allow up to 25 fireballs to be cast. Over the centuries, however, thirteen have been cast, meaning that the trap will only work twelve more times. Thieves have a normal chance to detect the traps, but they can only be disabled by the casting of dispel magic by a spell caster of 12th-level or higher. If a fireball is triggered, all within range have the usual chance to save for half damage. Note: the fireball trap is not triggered by those entering 2-50 from SL11-1.

Secret Door (east): This door is difficult to locate (1 in 8) and is locked and trapped (see above). The lock is concealed in a dark portion of the fresco that covers the wall here; it is a complex lock as well (-5% to chances to pick). The door leads to a set of stairs that descend 50' to a corridor that leads eastward to Sub-Level 11 (SL11-1).

Due to the fire and charred remains, the nearby baboons avoid this chamber like the plague.

2-51: Enhanced Baboons

Although the walls of this cave are natural, the floor has been smoothed and covered with a thin layer of sand. A 10'-square stone dais dominates the center of the cavern. On the dais is a circular basin in which bubbles a fountain of clear liquid. The liquid is magical, and conveys a wisdom boost of 1-4 points for 1 day. A troop of baboons has occupied this chamber for several generations and, thanks to the magical liquid, has raised its members to average sentience. In addition to learning to speak a rude form of Archontean, they have armed themselves with throwing rocks, crude spears, and stone daggers. They defend their fountain against all comers. It is possible the baboons could be placated and reasoned with.

Inhabitants:

1. 6 enhanced large albino baboons (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; MV 120'; AC 6; HD 3; HP 23, 22, 20, 19, 18, 17; #AT special, or 3; Dmg see below, or 1-4/1-4/1-6. Special attacks: pack attack. Two baboons hurl rocks (Dmg 1-4 per rock, 2 rocks per round); two attack with short spears (Dmg 1-6 damage); and two attack with two stone daggers (Dmg 1-4 each; if both hit, another 1-4 damage from ferocity of attack).

2-52: Pool

This nondescript cave features a pool of clear, cool water on its southern side. The exiled baboons (2-53) come here to drink.

2-53: Exiled Baboons

A number of older and weaker baboons have been exiled from the main cave (2-56) to this lesser cave. The cave is natural, with uneven floors and walls. The baboons that live here are slower, greyer, and leaner than their counterparts in the main cave. Numerous baboon skeletons may be found in the northern-most projection of the cave, for the weakened baboons have been occasionally known to resort to cannibalism.

Inhabitants:

1. 25 weakened large albino baboons (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 7; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 13(x6), 12(x6), 10(x6), 9(x7); #AT 3; Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-6. Special attacks: pack attack.

2-54: Exit to the Ruined City (AV-10)

A cramped, 5'-diameter tunnel wends its way upward 225' to the surface of the plateau near the ruined city of Arden Vul. See AV-10 for further details.

2-55: Rat Lair

This area is the nexus of a vast network of small tunnels leading to pockets in the rock, where a colony of 50 giant rats and 200 ordinary rats makes its home. Most of the tunnels are completely impassable without magical means. The wide passage from 2-56, however, continues on to the east, and eventually leads to 2-54 (an exit from the Halls). Another wide passage leads northwest towards area 2-53; rangers or other trackers may be able to follow it by following the smell of baboons and/or the presence of baboon dung. Numerous other tunnels start wide, but eventually peter into narrower and smaller rat tunnels. For every turn spent wandering in the rat tunnels, there is a 50% chance that 1-6 giant rats and 3-12 normal rats attack the explorers.

An encounter always occurs at area 2-55. The encounter will be either 2-5 baboons (40%), or a pack of 7-14 giant rats (40%), or both baboons and rats (20%). In the latter case, the two groups of animals are attacking each other.

Note: it is difficult to fight and maneuver in the rat tunnels. PCs will be at -1 to hit and damage in the wider tunnels, and -2 to hit and damage in the smaller ones.

Inhabitants:

1. 2-5 large albino baboons (40%) (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; MV 120'; AC 6; HD 3; HP 20, 19, 18, 18, 16; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-6. Special attacks: pack attack.
2. 7-14 giant rats (40%): SZ S; AL N(E); AC 7; MV 120'; HD 1-4 HP; HP 4(x3), 3(x4), 2(x3), 1(x3); #At 1; Dmg 1-3. Special attacks: 5% chance of disease
3. Both baboons and rats (20%)

Treasure:

The wide tunnels contain no treasure. If the PCs are able to penetrate the smaller rat tunnels, they are likely to find a rat nest every 1-4 turns of exploration. Such a nest might (25%) have treasure: if so, it will be 1-100 cp (45%), or 1-20 sp (40%), or a gem worth 20-200 gp (10%), or a cursed penny (5%) (see new magic items).

2-56: Howling Caves

One of the iconic locations in the Halls, this massive cyst cavern was used by the priests of Thoth to breed, house, and train the large baboons which served as guardians and symbols of Thoth's power. When the priests departed, the baboons remained, and multiplied.

The cave floor is rock covered with layers of sand and dirt. A patch of giant mushrooms grows in the center-north projection of the cave; a giant intelligent baboon usually guards this area to ensure that the lesser baboons do not over exploit it. Some phosphorescent fungus clinging to the walls provides some dim light to the area. The ceiling averages some 30' in height.

The caves are filled with hooting, grunting, and the sounds of movement. At any given moment several score baboons will be present in the main cavern. These baboons are organized into smaller troops, with individual alphas, and are somewhat territorial. Still, the giant intelligent baboons can mobilize multiple troops into concerted action. The baboons are particularly aggressive with intruders, and unless precautions are taken, an intruding party is likely to be swarmed by baboons within a turn. Initial contact will be made with 1 or 2 troops, with more troops joining the fray as combat and noise persist.

Inhabitants:

1. 49 adult albino baboons (see new monsters), in seven troops (21 male, 28 female): SZ M; AL N; MV 120'; AC 6; HD 3; HP 20(x7), 19(x7), 18(x10), 17(x10), 16(x8), 14(x7); #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-6. Special attacks: pack attack.
2. 35 baboon cubs: noncombatants (AC 8; HP 1).
3. 1-3 giant intelligent baboons (see new monsters): SZ L; AL NE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 8; HP 57, 51, 47; #AT 5; Dmg 1-6/1-6/1-6/1-6/1-10. Special attacks: rend.

Treasure:

Gerrilad and the giant intelligent baboons have taken most of the valuables. Buried in the mulch under the mushrooms is the skeleton of a priest of Thoth; it contains a bone scroll case with a map of Level 5, a scroll of aid, enthrall, and wyvern watch, as well as a gold Sortian eye (see new magic items).

2-56A: Dead Creeper Bodies

The rent and slashed bodies of two carcass creepers lie rotting on the floor of the cave at this location. The baboons lightly gnawed them, but found them unpalatable. The passageway through to 2-57 is narrow (5' wide) and cramped (6' tall).

2-56B: Pool

A seemingly natural pool exists here. In antiquity Thothian mages placed a decanter of endless water in the pool, and protected it with an invisibility spell. The decanter can only be found by detect magic, or by swimming around in the 15'-deep pond. Removing the decanter soon causes the dispersal of the baboon troops, as they are driven elsewhere in search of water.

The decanter is putting out a gallon of water per round, which is roughly equal to the consumption levels of the baboons. If more than half the baboon population is killed, the pool will slowly expand to be about 20' larger in all directions before achieving a new equilibrium. If most or all of the baboons are slain, the pool expands greatly, filling up the southwestern portion of the cavern in a foot or so of water before the natural contours of the cave create a stream that leads towards 2-56A and thence through the passage there to fall down into the Great Chasm (2-63A) as the tiniest of waterfalls.

Treasure:

Decanter of endless water (invisible).

2-56C: Collapsed Wall and Hidden Idol

Here a portion of the cavern wall has collapsed, leaving a rough hole some 6' wide by 10' tall through which one can step. Behind the collapse is a pukel-mander (see new magic items), peering menacingly through the hole in the wall. Behind the pukel-mander is an ancient passageway that has collapsed.

2-56D: Rock Outcroppings

Scattered throughout the Howling Caves are rock outcroppings of various size and height. The albino baboons are adept at clambering up these platforms, and may well use them for combat maneuvers. A clever party might well do the same.

2-56E: Rat Tunnels

Several tunnels lead out of the Howling Caves at their eastern edge. A number are small, and suitable only for rats or similarly sized creatures; a good score of such tunnels enter 2-56 (although only a few are indicated on the map). The holes of the rat tunnels are frequently found at head height on the walls, or higher. One tunnel, however, is broader, about 5' wide and 8' tall, and leads straight to area 2-55. The baboons like to hunt rats for meat. Conversely, the rats are driven to scavenge among the baboons' dung and other refuse, and thus are likely to be encountered in this area of the cave.

The area under the rat tunnels is littered with small bones and dung. It exudes a strong odor.

Treasure:

Amid the refuse may be found two golden armbands (50 gp each) and a badly battered leather tome containing the Litany of Light (see Arden Vul books).

2-56F: Tunnel to Lesser Baboon Caves (Sub-Level 3)

This tunnel leads south to SL3-1.

2-57: Pulsating Arcanum Cave

This cave was formed as a geode of sickly pulsing orange arcanum (see new magic items). An ancient water source, now dried up, opened the cave, but long after the Thothian priests had gone; as a result, the cave is unknown to the sentient races of Arden Vul.

The cave functions as a large, natural pocket of arcanum; see new magic items for descriptions of how this fact affects magic users and illusionists.

2-58: Landing to the Howling Caves

The hallway from 2-62 ends at an ancient portcullis, the lever for which is on the hallway side. The portcullis is almost always raised these days, as the baboons do not like to be penned in.

Beyond the portcullis is a two-step dais leading down into the great natural cavern known as the Howling Caves. The dais allowed keepers to keep their eye on baboons in the old days. Today it serves as a watch post, where six baboons stand guard.

Inhabitants:

1. 6 large albino baboons (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; MV 120'; AC 6; HD 3; HP 21, 20, 19, 16, 15, 14, 13; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-6. Special attacks: pack attack.

2-59: Store Room

This plain, undecorated room serves as a supply room for the baboons in 2-56. Along the south wall are a series of hooks which on which hang corpses of various creatures - several baboons, two goblins, a human, a fungal forester (see new monsters), and three giant centipedes. Along the south wall are a dozen or so old looking crates, into which have been thrown 1) a large number of dried mushrooms, 2) about 50 freshly dead giant insects of various species, 3) about 20 lb of dried fruit and vegetables, and 4) about 300 strips of dried meat of various (and dubious) provenance. At the western end of the chamber are two 4'-tall stone containers filled with water. A 10'-long, enchanted bullwhip is hidden behind the basins. The baboons knew it of old as Snapper (see new magic items), and hate it to this day.

Inhabitants:

1. An elderly human slave (noncombatant, AC 10, HP 2), raised from infancy to serve, is chained to a staple in the floor. The slave has no name and will be terrified of any intruder. The slave resists any effort to leave, and attempts to return to his servitude at the earliest opportunity. He speaks only rudimentary Archontean.

Treasure:

Snapper, the enchanted bullwhip (see new magic items).

2-60: Umsko the Intelligent Baboon

Umsko, another of the giant intelligent baboons, dwells alone in this chamber, which, like 2-61, used to house the Order of Thoth's baboon keepers.

Umsko is considerably more intelligent (and also more cruel and evil) than most of his kind. As a result, he has greater pretensions to culture and civilization. His room is kept clean by a reed broom hanging on a peg by the door and is lit by four torches, and he actually possesses a heavy wooden bed, a desk, and a chair (all of simple workmanship). Umsko eschews the company of female baboons, preferring human or demi-human females. He currently has Thalia, a female ranger, chained (and gagged) to the east wall of the room. Umsko speaks Archontean better than all of the other giant intelligent baboons and often serves as interpreter in interrogation sessions.

He is present in his chamber 50% of the time (if not here, he is at 2-63 [25%] or wandering the halls [25%]). If he is present and recognizes that intruders outmatch him, Umsko will attempt to barter information for his security. He knows quite a bit about the plans of Gerrilad the Grey (2-69), and knows both how to access the Whispering Hall (2-63) and how to avoid some of the traps in the Hall of Judgment (2-35). If allowed to flee, Umsko will (depending on what he has learned from the PCs) make straight for either 2-35 or 2-56. The other baboons are afraid of Umsko.

Thalia is naked and has been badly treated by Umsko. She welcomes rescuers warmly, but will wish to leave the Halls of Arden Vul as quickly as possible. She currently distrusts all male characters, regardless of alignment or species. Her gear is stored in a wooden box under Umsko's bed.

GM Note: any party approaching 2-60 is 33% likely to be noticed by the baboon guards at 2-58 unless precautions are taken. Loud noises here or at 2-61 are 75% likely to cause a baboon troop to investigate from 2-56.

Inhabitants:

1. Umsko, giant intelligent baboon (see new monsters): SZ L; AL NE; AC 3; MV 120'; HD 8; HP 54; #AT 5; Dmg 1-6/1-6/1-6/1-6/1-10. Special attacks: rend. Possessions: an amulet of natural armor +2 (see new magic items).
2. Thalia, 3rd-level female Thorcin ranger: SZ M; AL CG; AC 9; MV 120'; HD 3; HP 10 (max 30); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 17, INT 14, WIS 15, DEX 15, CON 15, CHA 12.

Treasure:

In the desk: some scratchings in something resembling Archontean (Umsko is not truly literate), a quire containing one of The Deeds of Phagtro the Westron (see Arden Vul books); two quill pens, and an ever-full inkwell (see new magic items).

Box 1, under bed: scale mail, helmet, metal shield, spear, short sword, short composite bow, backpack, two potions of levitation, and a flask of oil of sharpness (+5).

Box 2, under the bed: a scroll with three magic user spells on it (scare, hold person, hallucinatory terrain), two potions of extra healing, a key to the door in 2-62, and a sack with 256 gp and 348 pp.

2-61: Yamki the intelligent Baboon

The dwelling of Thothian baboon keepers in antiquity, this chamber is currently the residence of Yamki, one of the giant intelligent baboons, and his harem of female baboons. While Yamki is present only 50% of the time (otherwise he is directing baboon troops on Level 2 or in 2-56), his harem is always present.

The chamber is filthy, with undecorated walls, a guttering torch on the south wall, a strong scent of baboon urine, and general rot. Somewhat incongruously, a beautiful, heavy wooden chair sits next to a battered, cheap wooden table on which sits a silver cup and some pewter tableware. A musty water barrel is by the door, while an enormous pile of pelts and clothing occupies the northwest corner; the 4 female baboons of Yamki's harem are typically found on the pelts. Although the females attack ferociously for 1-4 rounds, their morale is low, and they attempt to flee after taking 50% casualties.

GM Note: any party approaching 2-61 is 33% likely to be noticed by the baboon guards at 2-58 unless precautions are taken. Loud noises here or at 2-60 are 33% likely to cause a baboon troop to investigate from 2-56.

Inhabitants:

1. Yamki, giant intelligent baboon (see new monsters): SZ L; AL NE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 8; HP 50; #AT 5; Dmg 1-6/1-6/1-6/1-6/1-10. Special attacks: rend.
2. 4 large albino baboons (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; MV 120'; AC 6; HD 3; HP 20, 19, 18, 18; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-6. Special attacks: pack attack.

Treasure:

Chair: it is heavy (50 lb) and made of ebony, with interesting (and non-Thothian) carvings on its arms, legs and backrest. It is worth 200 gp, or 400 gp if the iconography can be discerned and a proper buyer found.

On the table: a large silver goblet studded with citrine (1,150 gp); and a small (2' square) ivory-inlaid wooden box (95 gp) containing 753 sp, a returning pebble (see new magic items), and a potion of vitality.

Buried in the baboons' nest: a cloak of protection +1.

2-62: Thoth's Fist

A 10'-tall statue of a springing baboon with clenched fists and forearms raised above its head dominates this room. The chamber itself is 20' high, with the statue resting atop a 10'-diameter circular plinth. Although dark, the room could be lit through clever adjustment of the wall mirrors, provided the Well of Light (2-1) has been activated. Frescoes on the walls of the chamber show humans and baboons working together to smash a variety of enemies, including other humans, crocodiles, and bipedal amphibians. A large human ear is painted on the door, which is locked and trapped. The room smells strongly of baboons, and any trackers will have no difficulty discerning that many baboons come and go via the southern hallway.

Door (locked and trapped): The opening mechanism appears to be a simple iron lift latch; if the latch is lifted, a poison needle will stab the manipulator (1 HP damage plus loss of 1 point of CON per hour for 1-10 hours; save vs. poison for half damage and half CON loss. PCs die if CON drops below 3). The actual door mechanism is a pull cleverly concealed on the wall next to the door. It requires a key for access: the druid Gerrilad the Grey (2-69) and the giant intelligent baboon Umsko (2-60) currently have keys.

2-63: Whispering Hall

This barrel-vaulted chamber boasts strange acoustical and magical properties. The interior walls are sheathed in brick topped with a layer of painted plaster. The paint is a vibrant royal blue, and is still mostly intact. The ceiling is 25' high in the center of the chamber, but only 15' tall at the sides. Eleven slim floating columns rise 10' from the floor; they are stone sheathed in flaking painted plaster. The northeast side of the hall is open to the Great Chasm; a 2' brick wall extends along the lip of the chasm save for a 10' stretch in the exact center of the room's width. Unobtrusive spyholes may be detected as concealed doors; they are found on the northwest wall.

A 10'x15'x5' platform occupies the center of the hall; on it is a 7'-diameter, 2'-tall stone disk from which protrudes an iron rod holding an ivory olifant. The edge of the platform bears the following inscription in Mithric: "Hall of Echoes. Name Thyself, and Whisper Thy Message. Thou Shalt Be Rewarded in Thine Ear" (in Mithric). The olifant has been carved with images of ibises. Per the inscription, anyone who states his/her true name, whispers a message into the olifant, and then places his/her ear against the olifant's aperture will receive a message. See the following tables for the content of the message.

The high priest would sometimes eavesdrop on his underlings as they employed the device; he did so from his hidden chamber and spy-holes at 2-40.

Secret Door (to 2-40): This door is small (5' wide x 6' tall) and difficult (1 in 8) to detect from 2-63. It rotates on a pin, and can be opened by pushing on the upper or lower part of the door.

Inhabitants: There is a 25% chance that a creature from the chasm is present here (roll on chart in 2-63A). There is also a 25% chance that Umsko, the intelligent baboon (see 2-60) is present (although Umsko and a random encounter cannot be present at the same time). If Umsko is present, he is carrying his key to the door at 2-62 on a string around his neck.

Table A: Type of Whisper Received

11	Interesting (modern) (roll on Table E)
12	Dangerous (roll on Table F)

Table B: Mundane Whispers (Ancient)

A sampling of possible whispers follows. They could be multiplied endlessly. The magic of the Whispering Hall translates all the whispers into a language intelligible to the listener.

D30	Message	GM Notes, if pertinent
1	Hormakhis wets his bed
2	Arpostas is having an affair with Elspetha
3	Jikla got reprimanded by the high priest today
4	Julia is a great kisser! Too bad she's three circles higher than me.
5	I heard Khamit saying that he was going up top to quit the priesthood and join the Set guardsmen!

6	I messed up the Litany of Light this morning	C.f. areas 2-2 to 2-5.
7	I let Hormakhis take the blame for that accident with the baboons
8	I poisoned Psiatro's soup ... but he didn't even notice!
9	I'm fed up with rituals. I'm joining P'tarmis in the Great Cavern	A reference to the priest of Thoth who tamed the Great Cavern (3-163 and 3-172). His tomb is at 3-174.
10	I miss my baby's melons. Mmmm... melons.
11	Don't forget to relieve Oskit in the Great Hall, or the ibis gargoyles will get him!	The Great Hall is area 3-123
12	Guard duty at the chasm – 6:00 sharp!
13	It's 'up go the arms' in the second litany of Thoth's Majesty	An obscure ritual.
14	[in sing-song voice] Don't touch the sky and you'll avoid the pit	A hint as to avoiding the pit traps at 3-15
15	Never talk in the Great Hall, for the Eye is watching!	A reference to the Eye of Thoth, whose post was at SL3-3D
16	I never thought I'd love baboon stew this much!
17	Watch out for the small red mushrooms; they seem to cause craziness!	A hint about the red veil (see new flora)
18	I can handle below-ground duty ... if only there were some fresh milk! (sigh)
19	Lizards tastes like .... like chicken!
20	I could kill for a pot of me ma's spicy haddock paste.
21	Lord Thoth rewards those who find new knowledge ... or items of power
22	The Second Circle is within reach! Now to master that damnable Litany of Light
23	How the faithful love the pyramid trick! Fools!	A reference to 3-11
24	Those who give to Thoth shall receive from him twofold	Possibly an oblique reference to 3-2.
25	Lord Thoth's command of magic and words renders him more powerful than the emperor!

26	You know what? I'm happy I left that shrew and those brats behind in Archontos. There! I said it!
27	I can't believe the Eye of Thoth didn't see me screw up the Third Ritual of Knowledge! Must be the right day to dice with Lucius.	The Eye of Thoth was in charge of disciplining all the priests. His post was at SL3-3D. Kel Bormol (SL3-2A) was the last Eye; he is still around ... sort of.
28	My dad thinks I'm already the high priest and now he's coming to visit! I've got to get some help.
29	Stone, stone, stone, as far as the eye can see! This place is fit only for goblins. How I pine for the roiling waves and cold breezes of far Westholm
30	Only 472 more days in this gods-forsaken outpost. Then I return to the Shining City, and all her delights!

Table C: Mundane Whispers (Modern)

D30	Whisper	Speaker ( if known) and Notes
1	I detest Gerrilad. Once I've found the book, I'm leaving. Bastard.	Isocritis Half-hand (2-70)
2	Where is the lost cache of books? I need to know!	Isocritis Half-hand (2-70), a hint that there is a second, still-hidden library of Thoth (i.e., 2-72)
3	Baboon relationships are so pure! They do not worry about subtexts at all.	Gerrilad the Grey (2-69)
4	My simian friends are demonstrating the power of my theories; soon we will crush all before us	Gerrilad the Grey (2-69)
5	I wonder if baboons can mate with humans? I'm certain they can.	Gerrilad the Grey (2-69)
6	This is blasphemous. The Emperor should have me destroy it	Adrienic, doomed imperial archon
7	I love Guivrel. Why does she torment me so? Is that what love is? Perhaps Kaitor knows	Lankios (1-6), some background relating to 5-11

8	The boys are so sweet! They're both hot for me, but I'm going to play them both for chumps.	Guivrel (5-11), some background relating to 5-11
9	I love Guivrel, but she has no time for me. I can't let her destroy my good friend Lankios.	Kaitor (5-11), some background relating to 5-11
10	I wish for a million gold pieces! [pause] Ah, this thing doesn't work at all	Anonymous
11	Hrothgar is an arrogant jerk. I should be in charge of this expedition, and everyone knows it	Doffy the thief, part of an adventuring party (see NPC appendix)
12	Will the Master know if I whisper his secrets into this horn?	Sisko (2-29)
13	Me hide pretty rock in water. No one finds it now!	Trefko (2-32), A reference to the diamond Trefko hid in his water barrel (2-32)
14	Man, I hate baboons. Let's get out of here	Anonymous
15	I feel pretty stupid doing this. Are they watching?"	Anonymous
16	Now we're lost, and a pack of baboons are on our tail. What should I tell them to do?	Hrothgar, leader of an adventuring party (see NPC appendix)
17	Isocritis is weak, but I need him. Let him show his devotion to the cause, or I will feed him to Ranko.	Gerrilad the Grey (2-69)
18	Mirko memorized read magic again last night. Why? Why?! WTF?!	Anonymous
19	From here we can drop down on those cursed halflings from above! Yeah! Wait ... what was that sound?	Anonymous, reference to proximity of this chamber to the halflings below (3-3 to 3-6)
20	I've taken that mewling apprentice's spell book to the library to add it to the others. She won't need it when Gerrilad is through with her.	Isocritis Half-hand (2-70), refers to Tresti Iredell (2-36)
21	I just let Gerrilad think he's in charge. Ha!	Isocritis Half-hand (2-70)
22	Isocritis just thinks he's in charge. Ha!	Gerrilad the Grey (2-69)
23	Me like old days better when master G not around. More fun for all back then! Now too much work for this old monkey.	Trefko (2-32), master G is Gerrilad the Grey (2-69).

24	I'll bet we're the first of Deino's Children to discover this location! Won't she be pleased? Maybe we can find some cloud caps. Wait ... did I hear something?	Anonymous, deceased beastman sergeant, and a reference to Deino, mistress of the beastmen (3-158)
25	99 flagons of ale on the wall, 99 flagons of ale ... you take one down, pass it around, 98 flagons of ale on the wall (ad nauseam)	Anonymous jerk
26	How can I find my way home?	Aelin, female half-elf ranger, see NPC appendix
27	I wish to shine a light on ignorance. All will benefit from my wisdom and greatness.	Balthazar the Blue, Archontean magic user, see NPC appendix (also 9-62)
28	Phreena shall provide for the destitute – all of them!	Grimley, holy warrior of Phreena, see NPC appendix (also 9-62), and refers to the Thorcin deity, Phreena
29	Where's that evil white-haired bitch, Bodil? Tell me! Tell me! She must pay!	Ulv, female Wiskin fighter, see NPC appendix, and Bodil is an infamous shape-changer in modern Wiskin culture
30	I am Adric, a faithful servant of Odin	Adric, one-eyed cleric of Odin, see NPC appendix

Table D: Interesting Whispers (Antiquity)

D20	Whisper	Speaker (if known) and Notes
1	I can't believe it! Finally! The fifth secret name of our lord is 'Keeper of the Seven Keys'	A Thoth priest; for all of the secret names of Thoth, see Secreta Secretorum in Arden Vul books
2	Lady Neferet has taken the iron circlet from the archon. It is said she will wear it until she dies!	A Thoth priest; important reference to the iron circlet of Ghanor (see new magic items), and its association with Neferet, penultimate high priestess of Thoth (3-127)
3	Lord Sethu has flaunted custom and will build himself an extravagant tomb, apparently only yards north of the imperial bridge	A Thoth priest; clue to the location of the tomb of Sethu (5-57 to 5-62)

4	Hithra the Paleologue told me he has a sure-fire means of curbing the arrogance of Kel Bormol, the Eye of Thoth. Let's just say that one shouldn't open the Eye's chess set in the near future!	A Thoth priest; Hithra's tomb is at 3-36. He imprisoned Kel Bormol in the latter's own chess set; see SL3-2A
5	I saw the high priest carrying the offerings to the treasury beneath the statue of our Lord. Left arm, straight out, does the trick!	A (naughty) Thoth priest; a reference to the treasure chamber at 3-23 and 3-24, accessed under the statue in 3-2. Also a clue to the position of the statue's arm.
6	I feel sorry when the tenders bring the security baboons into the Well of Light. The poor things are terrified of the light as it floods through the mirrors.	A Thoth priest; a clue about the desirability of restoring the mirror at the base of the Well of Light (2-1), since it will repel the baboons.
7	Georgius got in trouble today for placing the colored squares in the wrong order on the teleporter. He popped into the Summoning Hall at the wrong moment and was devoured! Dumb jerk!	A Thoth priest; a clue about how to use glass activation squares (see Thothian teleportation rings in new magic items)
8	Lord Arpostas has been dabbling in summoning dangerous entities. He doesn't think I know, but I do. I see his eyes when he returns from his secret tunnels and can tell!	A Thoth guardsman; a reference to the last high priest, Arpostas, and his unwise experiments at 2-31.
9	In case I do not live to tell the story, I will tell it here. A secure source has confirmed what I expected: Arpostas has summoned entities against the code. But whom shall I tell? And how?	Ptirasa, the spy master; and a reference to Arpostas, 2-31. Ptirasa's ghost is located at 2-41.
10	That peon Xerxastes thinks he can betray me to that nosy bitch Ptirasa? He'll be sorry.	High Priest Arpostas; another reference to the events in 2-31 and 2-41
11	Lord Marius the archon has forced the so-called troll thegn to bend his knee to Archontos! At long last we can begin to expand below!	An Archontean nobleman; Marius Tricotor (6-154) forced submission from a troll thegn (currently Varboka 7-30) almost 2,000 years ago.
12	Only those who recognize the true artifacts of Marius may consult his ghost.	A Thoth priest; a reference to the tomb of Marius, 6-154.

13	They say that there's a back entrance to the tombs of the Priors through the supply closet off the Chapter House. That's a relief, as I hate having to navigate the chasm to the front door.	A Thoth priest; A reference to the Tombs of the Priors (3-61) and the two means of accessing it: the chasm (3-38) and the supply closet (3-60)
14	Prior Jacobus is getting careless. I saw him disappear through his own seat into some hidden chamber!	A Thoth priest; a reference to the Prior's Study (3-59)
15	Those Set bores are so stupid! A child could deduce the answer to their 'secret riddle,' needed to proceed beyond the red bridge. Let's just say that I'm well shielded from their idiocy!	A Thoth priest; refers to the riddle at 4-119, and the solution ("shield").
16	Priscus Pulcher paid a visit to the archon and to High Priest Arpostas today. He said he was trying to avert a war, and was off to Archontos to negotiate with the basileus. Some of our own priests have joined his followers east of our precincts. What a shame!	A Thoth priest; refers to the growing discord between the Theosophs (in this case the Thoth priests) and the radical sorcerers, or Sortians, represented by Priscus Pulcher (see World of Archontos appendix)
17	Those who believe in Priscus Pulcher's radical 'egalitarian' ideas have adopted a stylized knot as their symbol. They blaspheme in calling Priscus the Father of Magic! That honor belongs to Thoth!	A Thoth priest; another reference to the Sortians (see World of Archontos appendix), their symbol, and their poor relationship with the temples
18	I know your secrets, bird-brain! That so-called mystery of the pyramid? Ha! A conjurer's trick. I know it's just a teleporter to get you to your comfortable chambers. But it does fool the punters, doesn't it?	A Set priest; a reference to 3-11
19	It no longer pays to linger by the chasm. Those floating things are getting worse, and more aggressive. Fortunately they burn easily enough.	Anonymous; refers to the chasm cephalopods (see new monsters)
20	Ptarmis has announced he will not return to the Chapterhouse or to the Great Hall, but will remain in his fungal 'paradise'. [scoffing noise] He has said he will build his home 'on high, among the rocks and fungi'. Fool!	A (jealous) Thoth priest; a reference to Ptarmis's tomb, at 3-174, and to the Great Cavern (3-163 and 3-172)

Table E: Interesting Whispers (Modern)

D20	Whisper	Speaker ( if known) and Notes
1	Isocritis was right to insist on keeping the portcullis down, so as to keep the undead out.	Gerrilad the Grey (3-69); Gerrilad is referring to 2-16, but it holds equally true for 3-21
2	I must leave once more to collect more holly and mistletoe. Let us hope Isocritis does not make his move while I am gone. Fortunately he has not found the passage in the Laboratory.	Gerrilad the Grey (3-69); refers to his escape route (2-23) and his distrust of Isocritis Half-hand (3-70)
3	At least the druid has agreed to put the stacks off limits until we figure out what's going on with those word-eating things!	Isocritis Half-hand (3-70); a reference to the logovores in 3-70 (see new monsters)
4	My information was faulty. The Paleologue's tomb is actually at the north end of the chasm, not the south end.	An adventurer; a reference to the tomb of Hithra Paleologos (3-36)
5	The entrance to the Oracle of Thoth is just west of the Well. I think the middle mouth is the one.	An adventurer; a reference to 2-10
6	Curse that stupid druid and his monkey 'court'. I know the route to the famed shrines of Thoth lies just beyond his court and then to the west! If only I could get there, Thoth's power will be mine.	An adventurer; a reference to the route to Sub-Level 2-1, accessed via 2-35 and then east to 2-42
7	I know one of those demonic amphibian statues lies along the chasm, just east of here. I think there's another somewhere on the level below.	An adventurer; a reference to the pukel-mander (see new magic items) at 2-49
8	The baboons are deterred by light. If only we could figure out how to get the Well to light up the mirrors!	An adventurer; a reference to the Well of Light (2-1) and the mirrors (2-6)
9	When I put that enchanted feather on my helmet, the undead stopped attacking. If only Jordin had thought to do the same!	An adventurer; a reference to the powers of the feathers of Maat (3-19) in repelling the undead (of 3-22 and elsewhere)
10	So it's clear that the arms of the statues rotate. We tried all combinations on the two obvious ones and heard a click, but nothing happened. Is there a third statue somewhere?	An adventurer; a reference to the need to get all three statues (3-2, 3-15, 3-40) into the same position to open the route to 3-23

11	We found the main temple of Thoth, to the west of the lesser catacombs, but it had been desecrated. And the tentacles .... (shiver)	An adventurer; a reference to 3-71 and the slime kraken (see new monsters) there
12	So the goblins hate the halflings, and the halflings hate the beastmen, but the beastmen hate nobody. How can we exploit this?	An adventurer; a hint about faction relationships (c.f. 3-3 to 3-6; SL4-23; and 3-138 to 3-158)
13	We blew it by pissing off the goblins. They control the route to the Sundered Span, and thus the route to the Troll Lifts. I guess we'll need to traverse the chasm.	An adventurer; refers to the route to the Sundered Span (5-35) and the Troll Lifts (5-55, 6-1 through 6-5), a route which leads from 3-7 to 4-47 and thus to 5-35
14	The Obsidian Gates seem to lie at the end of the Hall of Forty Pillars. But how to breach them? Two keys are needed ...	An adventurer; refers to 5-6
15	That country bumpkin of a troll – Gog, I think? – is a lot smarter and more educated than he lets on. I heard him singing in perfect Archontean verse!	An adventurer; refers to Gog and his cave (5-2)
16	Thossssee [ssztt] who needssss the hellp of Kerrbog Khan [szztt] should seeeeeeeek hissss flying friendzzz, the dragonfliesz. Bargains [ssztt] must be sealed in blood!	Kerbog Khan (SL 12-25) speaking through an automaton about his desire to secure blood for his rituals and workshops.
17	The mushroom folk aren't the problem in the big cavern. It's that crazy sorcerer, flying around like he owns the place.	An adventurer; refers to Trocadero (3-176) and the Great Cavern (3-163 and 3-172)
18	We've caught the trace of a few of these Priscian fellows. Tough customers! Their mages are potent, and they are utterly ruthless. They were looking for the tomb of one of their ancient leaders, somewhere off the great cavern	An adventurer; refers to the Priscians (9-58 to 9-64 and elsewhere) and the tomb of Lycandus (3-197)
19	There's some sort of safe house at the foot of the Troll Lift. We were told to seek the Sundered Span, turn north to the Lift, and descend to the Inn of the Lost. Sounds dodgy to me.	An adventurer; refers to the Sundered Span (3-35), the Upper Troll Lift (5-55), and the Inn of the Lost (6-7 to 6-20)
20	They say if you make it to the Peace Door, just north of the lower Troll Lift, that none of the factions will bother you. I think we're gonna need that...	An adventurer; refers to the Peace Door that leads to the Inn of the Lost (6-7A), just north of 6-1.

Table F: Dangerous Whispers

D20	Whisper	Notes
1-4	“Take that, you meddling jerk!” [a random damage-producing magic user spell (level 1-4) takes effect on the whisperer and/or his/her comrades]	Roll d4 for spell level; select or randomly choose spell.
5-6	“Now I’ve got you, you fool!” [a high-level magic user spell (levels 5-8) affects the whisperer and/or his comrades]	Roll d4 for spell level; select or randomly choose spell.
7-9	I am coming for you, [PC’s name]. I know what you did [to someone specific, or at some specific place] and you will pay.	GM’s choice
10-12	[booming voice] “For that, I pronounce anathema upon you!” [PC is cursed]	1-3: cursed by Thoth 4-5: cursed by Set 6: cursed by Rimmaq-Isfet (see On the Terrible Old Gods in Arden Vul books) GM’s choice on nature of curse
13-15	“Oops!” [a randomly-determined monster is summoned into the Hall and attacks]	Use charts in the core rulebook.
16-18	[a booming voice] “Ahhh, just the one I intended. Now you will provide the aid I require!” [geas on the whisperer]	GM determines nature of geas.
19-20	“Pserotucin eeves verg? Youe! He he he he he he.” [listener goes insane from these unintelligible whispers]	50% it is a relatively minor affliction (GM’s choice; it should have effects, but should not cripple the PC); 50% it is a major affliction (PC’s mind snaps and he/she becomes a gibbering lunatic)

2-63A: Great Chasm

One of the iconic features of the Halls, this massive fissure extends through most of the dungeon levels and provides a sure, if difficult, means of vertical navigation of the Halls. The fissure is generally shaped like a triangular prism, with its apex about 50’ above Level 2. The prism extends downward 1,600’ through the Halls until it levels out at the floor of the chasm (9-1) many hundreds of feet below.

The Great Chasm narrows at this level to a mere 10’ to 15’ in width. It widens as it descends, and narrows as it ascends. At Level 2, the walls are steep, with almost no moss or vines growing on them. Due to its narrowness, Random Encounters are slightly less frequent here: roll every three turns with a 1 in 8 chance.

Great Chasm, Upper Zone

D100	Encounter
1-15	Noise, unusual
16-20	3 off-white (with greenish motes), quicksilver-like heqeti slimes (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 5’ creeping; HD 2; HP 11, 9, 9; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6; MR 15%. Special attacks: flesh-eating for 4-7 rounds; corrosive to metal, wood and leather. Special defenses: healed by electricity or lasers; slowed by cold

Chasm Color:

The GM might decide to play up the creepy and mysterious nature of the chasm. Roll every 3 turns, with a 1 in 6 chance for a chasm sound effect.

D8	Noise/Effect
1	Loud hissing
2	Moaning (of the wind?)
3	A roar
4	A shriek
5	A loud clap (a sharp, brief noise)
6	An echoing voice (undecipherable)
7	A flash of bright light for 3 second
8	Fluting, of a tuneless sort

2-64: Refectory

Originally this room was the refectory for the priests of Thoth. A fireplace is found in the southeast corner, and its narrow chimney (3' by 2') extends 225' up to the surface (see AV-14). The fireplace is large, capable of roasting whole animals, and it also provides access to the kitchen beyond (2-65). Currently only one badly scarred and uneven table and one scorched bench are left. Clear baboons tracks run from northeast to southwest. On the table is a flagon of ale and a turnip. The fireplace has wood in it, ready to be lit at any moment.

There is a 25% chance that Yrsko is present, and another 25% chance that he is in 2-65. If he is present in either location, there will also be 4 baboons present in 2-64, nosing at Yrsko's fare. If Yrsko is in 2-65 while intruders threaten his 'guests,' he will burst through the fireplace, scattering coals as he leaps to assist them.

Secret Door (east): The door is normal to detect. It is difficult to open, as one has to locate a hidden catch in the floor and pull it.

Inhabitants:

1. Yrsko (25%): for stats see 2-67.
2. If Yrsko is present here or in 3-65, 4 large albino baboons (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; MV 120'; AC 6; HD 3; HP 20, 19, 18, 18; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-6. Special attacks: pack attack.

2-65: Kitchen

The old kitchen of the cult of Thoth has been taken over by Yrsko, a giant intelligent baboon with many delusions (see 2-67). An archway leads from the kitchen into the refectory, and the pass-through fireplace also allows access between the two rooms. Activity in either the kitchen or refectory is thus liable to attract attention from the other chamber. Yrsko is present in the kitchen 25% of the time, cooking up a foul brew with the questionable aid of his 3 goblin slaves; if this is the case, then there will be 4 baboons present in 2-64.

The kitchen was ransacked long ago, but Yrsko has attempted to restore it. A large wooden table that is only about 32" tall (its legs were cut down long ago) has been pushed against the east wall. On the table Yrsko uses a variety of cleavers to dismember his 'meats' and prepare his cuisine. Next to it is a cauldron of boiling (see new magic items). On the south wall are three big wooden bins filled with 1) turnips, 2) mushrooms, and 3) worms in dirt. On the south wall Yrsko has chained three captives as bits of 'meat': a beastman, a caveman, and a human Wiskin. All are gagged. The beastman is already missing an arm. Hanging from pegs on the east wall are 6 battered pots and skillets. An enormous cauldron hangs from a hook near the fireplace; Yrsko can swing it into the fire as needed.

The three goblin slaves are terrified of Yrsko but will not leave the kitchen. They sleep under the preparation table.

Inhabitants:

1. 3 goblins: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 5, 3, 3, #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.
2. Yrsko (25%): for stats, see 2-67.
3. Egrk, caveman: SZ M; AL N; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 2; HP 5 (max 11); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon.
4. Marco, the beastman trooper (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP 2 (max 6); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon.
5. Ketil, 2nd-level male Wiskin ranger: SZ M; AL CG; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 2; HP 4 (max 23); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 16; INT 13; WIS 14; DEX 16; CON 15; CHA 16.

Treasure:

Aside from the turnips, there is a 10% per turn of searching through the mushrooms that one of the exotic varieties listed in the appendix will be found. Only one exotic variety is present.

2-66: He's Just a Cook

This secret passage has remained untouched for centuries. The corridor itself is narrow, undecorated, and empty save for a skeleton still dressed in a rotting chef's toque. The skeleton clutches a parchment scrap in one hand, and a large cleaver in the other. If the body is disturbed, the skeleton animates to defend its recipe.

Secret Door (east): This door (leading to the corridor between 2-61 and 2-58) is easy to find from the west (1 in 3), but normal to detect from the other side. It rests on a simple pin, and opens by pushing inward.

Secret Door (west): This door is easy to find (1 in 3). It opens by locating a hidden catch in the floor and pulling it.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 skeletal cook (unique undead): SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 4, HP 22; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 with cleaver. Special defenses: immune to sleep, charm, and hold; takes half damage from piercing and slashing weapons; cannot be turned within 50' of area 2-65.

Treasure (?):

A recipe for baboon stew. It is quite tasty and might be worth something to an adventurous chef. Kronos or Estelle (AV-22) might pay up to 40 gp for it.

2-67: Yrsko's Lair

This former storeroom is the home of Yrsko, one of the giant intelligent baboons. Yrsko has developed a fixation on cooking, and has commandeered the kitchen and refectory as his personal space. He bullies baboons into tasting his noxious stews, which feature some sentient creature as the base meat. His lair has a simple straw pallet pushed up against the western wall. His 'recipe books' are stuffed under the pallet; he scrupulously pretends to read them, and frequently brandishes them at his goblin slaves in the kitchen. A wooden chest lies against the south wall. Yrsko is here 25% of the time. If not here, he is in the refectory (2-64, 25%), kitchen (2-65, 25%), or elsewhere in the complex (25%).

Inhabitants:

1. Yrsko (25%), giant intelligent baboon (see new monsters): SZ L;

AL NE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 8; HP 46; #AT 5; Dmg 1-6/1-6/1-6/1-6/1-10. Special attacks: rend.

Treasure:

Two 'recipe' books. One is genuinely a recipe book, filled with exotic recipes (Mushroom and Lizard Goulash; Puree of Mushroom and Turnip; Goat and Mushroom in a Light Cream Sauce, etc.). This book is worth 45 gp to Kronos or Estelle at the Sign of the Broken Head (AV-22), or 75 gp to the knights of the Azure Shield (see AK-1). The other book is actually a spell book containing the following illusionist spells: audible glamor, color spray, phantasmal force; blur, improved phantasmal force, fear, and rope trick. The chest contains three different sizes of chef's toques, a grimy grey apron, various other soiled linens, and a 'special carving knife' (dagger +1).

2-68: Isocritis Half-Hand

Isocritis Half-Hand inhabits the ancient quarters of the librarian of Thoth. Since Isocritis spends most of his time in 2-70 (65% chance), he is found here only 25% of the time (the remaining 10% of the time he is found using the laboratory at 2-23).

The room is neat, with a simple wooden cot, a brazier with a store of charcoal, a water barrel, and a simple wooden chest. The chest contains simple clothing, as well as a silver mirror (10 gp), a cherry box filled with pens, nibs, and materials for ink, a pouch filled with spell components, and another pouch containing 25 pp. The walls of the chamber bear faded frescoes showing abstract, geometric shapes. See 2-70 for more on Isocritis.

Inhabitants:

1. Isocritis Half-Hand (25%): for stats, see 2-70.

2-69: Chamber of Gerrilad the Grey

Gerrilad the Grey, a half-elf druid, has made himself master of Level 2 by exerting command over the baboons of the Howling Caves. He is thoroughly disturbed, as he believes he is re-establishing order with a 'better' sort of dominant species (i.e., the baboons rather than humans). He treats the baboons with paternal love, and they in turn consider him to be practically god-like. Gerrilad spends most of his time in the Hall of Judgment punishing interlopers (75%). If no punishment ritual is taking place in 2-35, he will be found in one of three locations: here in his chamber (60%), consulting with his lieutenant in the Library of Thoth (38%; see area 2-70), or traversing the tunnels of Sub-Level 15 (2%).

Gerrilad has redecorated his room, painting over the old frescoes with a soothing pale-green base coat and then adding his own botanical and animal images. Visible are a jungle grove, complete with exotic birds, jaguars, and monkeys; a savanna with baboons, baobab trees, and various herd animals, and so forth. Gerrilad has slung a hammock from the ceiling of the northeast corner. A wooden stand holds a large parchment drawing of a baboon's anatomy, complete with Gerrilad's annotations. A small side table holds the upper half of a marble statue of a human; it is very detailed and realistic, and is in fact a magical head of Thoth (see new magic items).

A mulch pit is found by the south wall; it is 5'x20' in area and extends 10' below the floor. In it Gerrilad experiments with fungi, worms, and other vermin. In the pit are three enormous, 5'-tall mushrooms (a shrieker, and two charmed spotted fungal foresters – see new monsters) as well as numerous smaller species. The shrieker's call will summon Isocritis if he is in room 2-68, and has a good chance (50%) of bringing Yrsko from 2-65 to investigate.

Inhabitants:

1. Gerrilad the Grey (60% chance), 5th-level male half-elf druid: SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 120'; HD 5; HP 36; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (a spoke in the wheel). Abilities: STR 16, INT 11, WIS 16, DEX 15; CON 10, CHA 15. Possessions: leather armor +1; an intelligent magic club named A Spoke in the Wheel (see new magic items); a wand of animal control (8 charges); a Theodorus' bed of convenient respite in a linen pouch (see new magic items); and a mantle of Fenth (see new magic items). Gerrilad always carries several keys, including the key to the door in 2-62 leading to the Whispering Hall, the key to 2-70, and the key to 21-23 (laboratory storage). He also carries 10 octagonal platinum coins (see Arden Vul items). He has prayed for the following spells: entangle (x2), speak with animals, detect magic, faerie fire (x2); barkskin, charm person or mammal, cure light wounds, heat metal, warp wood; pyrotechnics, summon insects.
2. 1 shrieker: SZ M; AL N; AC 7; MV 10'; HD 3; HP 20; #AT 0; Dmg nil. Special attacks: noise.
3. 2 spotted fungal foresters (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 30' on rock, 90' in fungal forests; HD 4; HP 27, 26; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12.

Treasure:

Aside from the magic items which Gerrilad wears on his person, the chamber is home to a head of Thoth (see new magic items) with the personality of Stamelis the Librarian (weight 500 lb, worth 10,000 gp). Gerrilad's treasure is buried in the mulch pit: a sack of small gems (40 gems worth 50 gp each); 10 octagonal platinum coins (see Arden Vul items); and a silver statuette of a frog-demon (350 gp).

2-70: Library of Thoth

The vaunted library of Thoth has fallen on hard times in the centuries since the fall of Arden Vul. The double doors leading to the library are locked (keys are held by Isocritis and Gerrilad the Grey (2-69).

The library is lit with a continual light spell placed on the vaulted ceiling 10' in from the double doors; this light spell illuminates the reading area in the fore-chamber, although it does not reach the back of the stacks.

Six columns divide the room into a reading area (fore-chamber) and the stacks; these columns are black basalt and carved with subtle arcane marks. A librarian's desk occupies the space leading to the stacks; Isocritis Half-Hand, the lieutenant of Gerrilad the Grey, customarily occupies it. The desk is heavy oak, with two drawers, and two heavy chairs.

The fore-chamber includes two long oak tables with five chairs per side; this is where scholars consulted books from the library. Six cloaked figures sit at the tables; a sharp eye from the door will notice that they have no books in front of them.

The stacks area holds four 25'-long, 10'-tall, double-sided bookshelves. Normally no one save Isocritis or Gerrilad is allowed to browse the stacks.

Isocritis is found here 65% of the time; otherwise he may be found sleeping at 2-68 (25%) or using the magical laboratory at 2-23 (10% chance). If no punishment ritual is taking place in 2-35, then there is a 38% chance that Gerrilad the Grey will also be found here, consulting with Isocritis.

The magic user Isocritis Half-Hand agreed to work for Gerrilad for 6 months in order to obtain access to the Library of Thoth. If disturbed by any who do not immediately offer propitiatory gestures and speeches, he will order the baboon zombies (the cloaked figures in the fore-chamber) to attack. Isocritis absolutely loathes baboons, however, a fact which makes it possible for a clever and quick-thinking party to negotiate with him. Given certain incentives and securities, he might even be persuaded to abandon Gerrilad.

The library stacks are occupied by a logovore pack (see new monsters) which Isocritis created using an ancient ritual he found in the library (he used baboon cubs as the base for the ritual). Although the logovores do not attack their 'creator' (i.e., Isocritis), they are wild and independent, always clamoring for new words. Isocritis has enchanted the pillars separating the reading area from the stacks to act as a barrier beyond which the Logovores won't move; should Isocritis die or leave the Halls, however, the enchantment will be broken and the pack will be able to move. For obvious reasons, Isocritis and Gerrilad only communicate in sign language when using the stacks.

Inhabitants:

1. Isocritis Half-Hand, 6th-level male Archontean magic user, with a withered left hand: SZ M; AL NE; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 5; HP 19; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger). Abilities: STR 9, INT 17, WIS 12, DEX 16, CON 10, CHA 15. Possessions: dagger of venom; a staff; a ring of shield (see new magic items); a wand of frost (20 charges); potions of extra healing and invisibility; and a key to area 2-70. Spells memorized: sleep, charm person, comprehend languages, magic missile; ray of enfeeblement, pummeling fists of Arak-Zhorr (see new spells); haste, lightning bolt.

2. Gerrilad the Grey (38%): see stats at 2-69
3. 6 baboon zombies: SZ M; AL N; AC 8; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 14, 12, 11, 10, 9, 8; #AT 2; Dmg 1-6/1-6. Special: always strike last
4. 8 logovores (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 120'; HD 6 (x2), 4 (x2), 2 (x4); HP 44 (6 HD), 40 (6 HD), 30 (4 HD), 40 (4 HD), 15 (2 HD), 13 (2 HD), 11 (2 HD), 10 (2 HD); #AT 1; Dmg. 2-12 (6 HD), 2-8 (4 HD), 1-6 (2 HD). Special attacks: grow by word acquisition.

Treasure: In addition to his personal magical items, Isocritis's desk drawers contain various writing tools (quills, parchment, nibs, ink) as well as a pouch of marbles, a bag of chalk, a set of surveying strings and instruments, and a purse with 299 gp. Propped against the south wall of the library, behind the stacks, is a 5'-diameter mirror; it is the missing piece of the mirror from the Well of Light in 2-1.

Books:

Although greatly diminished since ancient times, the library is still filled with a large number (over 1,000) of codices, divided into sections by Isocritis. Among the sections he has created (which must be inferred by examining books) are the following: Spell Books, Histories of the Archontean Empire, Liturgies and Rituals of Thoth, Arcane Theory, and Mundane Knowledge. The GM should develop tomes that are appropriate to her campaign with the majority of tomes being of no great note (worth 20-50 gp each). It is certain, however, that the room contains the spell books of Isocritis and of Tresti Iredell (2-36), as well as the following: The Lives of the Noble Founders, Arden and Vul; the Deeds of Marius Tricolor, by Lucius Cornelius scriptor; the Value of Mud, by Herodian the Blessed; a folio, illustrated codex of the Twelve Labors of Arden; three copies of the Canticle of Revelation; a copy of Practical Liturgies of Lord Thoth; the treatise On the Care and Keeping of Baboons; a jeremiad entitled Notes on the followers of the arch-traitor, Priscus Pulcher, with Suggestions for their Destruction; a rare copy of Summoning from the Beyond; an illuminated two-volume set of the Tales of Larel One-Eye (cf. 3-46); a worn copy of the Song of Jacinth the Rose; a moth-eaten edition of the extremely dry Thoth in All His Forms; a copy of Sorcerous Properties of Gems; and so forth (see Arden Vul books for all). A majority of the books, and all of those pertaining to ancient history, cults, and arcana, are written in Mithric.

Isocritis Half-Hand's Spell Book (in stacks):

Affect normal fires, alarm, armor, charm person, comprehend languages, friends, grease, hold portal, magic missile, protection from evil, read magic, sleep; continual light, detect invisibility, forget, knock, levitate, pummeling fists of Arak-Zhorr (see new spells), ray of enfeeblement, strength, uncontrollable hideous laughter; clairaudience, detect illusion, dispel magic, haste, lightning bolt, secret page, slow, suggestion; mnemonic enhancer.

Spell Book of Tresti Iredell (in stacks):

Basil's torch treatment (see new spells), charm person, comprehend languages, erase, friends, magic missile, message, read magic, sleep; the Bracteros effect (see new spells), continual light, Frigg's elephant ears (see new spells), knock, mirror image, web.

2-71: Locked Door and Forgotten Chamber

The end of the hallway in front of this door is choked with dust, cobwebs, and trash. Hidden behind the debris is the stuck, locked (+5% to pick lock chances), and warded door to 2-71. The ward takes the form of a 3'-diameter glowing purple glyph (three horizontal lines, with an 's' mark through them, and dots above and below). The glyph is a permanent glyph of warding (cause fear); it can only be dispelled by 10th or higher level magic user. Those failing a save vs. spells flee in fear for 2-8 rounds.

Inside may be found the intact dwelling of the chief librarian of the cult of Thoth. The room is layered in centuries of dust that, if scraped away, reveal a glorious set of frescoes showing scholars at work, Thoth issuing forth knowledge in the form of a continuous scroll from his/her/its mouth, and so forth. The frescoes are bright and clear (once cleaned), with gilt work and inlaid silver (worth a total of 100 gp; 10 turns to extract). An archaic bed rests against the west wall; it has four posts of ash, as well as a rope-strung mattress. The whole is desiccated and brittle with age. The east wall contains two collapsed bookshelves and a decrepit desk. In the middle of the south wall is a pedestal, on which rests a 1'-diameter orb of softly glowing – and unusually-stable - arcanum (see new magic items), also covered in dust. The desiccated corpse of the librarian lies peacefully on its bed.

The arcanum globe is powerful and valuable, but has also acted to impart a strange unlife to the librarian. Should the globe be disturbed in any way, the librarian rises from his bed and attacks. If defeated, the librarian rises again, with full hit points, after 1 turn; it tracks the globe and its possessors unerringly. It attacks (and rises again) until burned to ashes. Should the globe be replaced on the pedestal, the librarian returns to his bed. Only by destroying the arcanum lump can this link to the librarian be erased; doing so, however, will cause a magical explosion that causes 2-12 damage to all within 10'.

Secret Door (south): This door is relatively easy to find (1 in 4). It only opens, however, when a thin pointed object - like a stylus - is inserted into a hole on the wall.

Inhabitants:

1. Undead librarian (as an unusually strong ghoul): SZ M; AL CE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 5; HP 33; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-8. Special attacks: paralysis. Special defenses: turned as a vampire; immune to sleep and charm. He wears a jade amulet of fire resistance (see new magic items).

Treasure:

Gold and silver chasings from walls (100 gp); globe of arcanum weighing 80 lb (see new magic items); an unfinished treatise entitled On the Properties of Arcanum (300 gp); six scrolls, each with a magic user spell: find familiar, light, locate object, scare, blink, feign death; much fine parchment (20 gp); two fine steel styluses (5 gp); a jade amulet of fire resistance (see new magic items); a bolt of very old silk (250 gp; 20 lb); and a parchment rescript in Mithric from 'Bruno, archon of Arden Vul' commanding 'Hellas, Chief Librarian' to burn all the works in the secret library since they are at risk of falling into the wrong hands.

2-72: Secret Library

The secret library of the cult of Thoth has remained undiscovered by Isocritis or anyone else in the many centuries since the complex was abandoned. Originally it stored the most holy, most blasphemous, and most dangerous texts of the Order. Many of these texts were removed when the last members of the cult abandoned the Halls in antiquity, but the librarian, already driven insane by the arcanum (see new magic items), remained with some choice items that he found himself incapable of destroying (see 2-71).

This unremarkable chamber has an 8' ceiling and no decorations. The walls have been hollowed to form book cabinets in which wooden shelves carry the remnants of the library. A wooden table with three wooden chairs occupies the middle of the room. All of the wood is old and brittle, and is liable to snap if any weight is placed on it. An unbound quire of 24 parchment folios rests on the table; it is a diary of sorts written by the librarian from 2-71, and recounts his discovery of the arcanum (see new magic item) chunk, his efforts to master it, and his growing frustration and alienation. The pages become increasingly chaotic and raving as the diary progresses. The diary is written in Mithric.

Next to the diary are a set of parchment scraps, clearly first drafts of letters. Most are uninteresting, but one is not. It reads, “To Neferet, high priestess, from Hellas, greetings. Your demand to relocate the contents of the special library to your new residence is impossible to grant. I will be party to neither your fantasies nor your self-aggrandizement. If the Lord of Light wished us to live eternally, he would have granted us this power; to seek eternal life through necromancy is grotesque and a perversion of Thoth’s teaching. Furthermore, your new residence, with its entrance in the Great Hall, is much too public and therefore unsafe. Most of the acolytes cannot learn of the existence of the works which I guard, and to bring them to you would risk too much. You may already have claimed the Circlet from the archon, but you will not steal the heritage of Lord Thoth. Hithra the Paleologue agrees with me. Given this day, April, AEP 1787.” All but the first two sentences are lined out.

GM Note: This parchment scrap provides a valuable clue as to the location of Neferet (3-127) and, with her, the iron circlet of Ghanor (see new magic items). It also reveals that Neferet was dealing in necromancy (she is now a greater mummy). For Hithra the Paleologue, see 3-36.

One-Way Door: Just south of the secret door from 2-71 sits a one-way door leading to the east-west corridor. This door is armed with a pair of peepholes, and allowed Chief Librarians to exit the secret library directly into the corridor leading towards the main Library.

Treasure:

There are some 40 codices and 15 rolls of parchment remaining in the secret library. Many of the codices (30 of them) are very large, measuring 30”x15” and weighing up to 10 lb (their size and weight is one reason why they were left behind). See the Arden Vul books appendix for potential titles of books to be found here. The GM should also feel free to customize the library to fit her own purposes. Regardless of what other volumes the GM places here, two codices are always to be found in the secret library: one is the infamous Pol’s Treatise on Scrying (see new magic items), while the other is a large, illuminated codex of the Litany of Light (see Arden Vul books). The latter presents the full ritual of the Litany, complete with marginal glosses describing how and where liturgists should stand in rooms 2-2 through 2-5 when completing the liturgy.

Among the scrolls will be found 2-5 maps of various locations in the Halls, as well as sixteen spell scrolls, each containing a single spell. Clerical spells include: purify food and drink, sanctuary, augury, spiritual weapon, animate dead, dispel magic, remove curse, neutralize poison, speak with plants, cure critical wounds, and raise dead. Magic user scrolls include: ventriloquism, rope trick, lightning bolt, remove curse, stone shape, and monster summoning IV.

Finally, one of the scrolls also contains the addresses to four of the Thothian teleportation rings (see new magic items): YE-BL-RE-GR-BK-WH (SL2-1), BL-GR_BK-WH-RE-YE (6-141), RE-GR-WH-BK-BL-YE (5-76), and GR-RE-YE-WH-BK-BL (AV-29). Since all the materials in the library are over 1,200 years old, the GM should remember that any additions to the library will be in one of the ancient languages.

LEVEL 3: THE HALLS OF THOTH

Although not the topmost level of the dungeon, the Halls of Thoth are the most accessible level to the surface (via the Grand Pyramid of Thoth at AV-15, which leads to 3-1). As a result, it sees a fair amount of traffic, particular in its central areas (3-1 to 3-20 or so). It contains numerous points of egress and access to Levels 1, 2, 4, and 5, as well as to several sub-levels. In addition to being significant for its accessibility, the level is also notable for its size; it is one of the largest levels of the entire complex.

The northern, worked areas of the level (3-1 to 3-162) were mostly constructed by the priesthood of Thoth during the period of Archontean domination, although the rival priesthood of Set delved the westernmost section that leads directly to the Forum of Set (4-2). Today, the precincts of Thoth are divided into smaller regions, many controlled by one of the factions of Arden Vul.

A group of evil, halfling extortionists led by Phlebotomas Plumthorn (3-5) has but recently set up operations (including a poison manufactory – see 3-4) just outside the entry chamber (3-2); they claim suzerainty over areas 3-2 to 3-35 and demand tribute from any who enter this territory.

The halflings have run into trouble with the goblins of King Weskenim, whose main hold lies below (SL4), but who have established a foothold on Level 3 (area 3-7) as well as on Level 5 (5-43 to 5-51). The goblins resent the newly arrived halflings, and actively seek allies in their extermination.

To the west, the priesthood of Set has re-established its influence in its ancient demesne (3-89 to 3-111) and conduct dire rituals in their upper temple (3-90).

The central regions of the level, which originally served as the administrative hub of the priests of Thoth, is now home to the highly disciplined cohorts of the beastmen of Deino (3-120 to 3-162). The beastmen have cleared all the areas east of the Great Hall (3-120), and conduct frequent patrols both north, towards the rest of the old precincts of Thoth, and south into the Great Cavern (3-163, 3-172).

The unworked, natural, portions of the level are dominated by the massive Great Cavern, which itself is bisected by a subterranean river (the Seamly Run - see 3-217, 3-230 and 3-231) and a small lake (3-164). No one faction calls this area home, although the deranged magician Trocadero of Newmarket (3-176), who thinks himself the reincarnation of Ptarmis of Thoth (3-174), is trying to lay claim to the southern Great Cavern through his hold over the fungal foresters.

GENERAL CONSTRUCTION NOTES

Heqeti areas: 3-51, 3-117, 3-192.

Rudishva areas: 3-39

Archontean areas: all worked areas (except 3-39, 3-51, 3-117, and 3-192).

ICONIC AREAS

The Glory of Thoth (3-2)

The Great Chasm (3-38)

The Great Hall (3-123)

The Great Cavern (3-163, 3-172)

IMPORTANT NPCs

Roskelly Winterleaf, halfling thug (3-2)

Phlebotomas Plumthorn, leader of halfling thugs (3-5)

Sir Simonet, a Sun-Scarred Knight (3-131)

Count Skleros, beastman leader (3-151)

Count Trisko the Natty, beastman and commander of the Long Range Cavern Patrol (3-154)

Deino, witch and 'mother' of the beastmen (3-158)

Trocadero of Newmarket, crazed magic user (3-176)

SIGNIFICANT REGIONS OF LEVEL 3

1. Northern Region: Precincts of Thoth (3-1 to 3-70)

The halls in this region were the center of the public rituals held in honor of Thoth. The great statue of Thoth (the Glory of Thoth - 3-2), the three mystery chambers (3-9, 3-10, and 3-11), and the mortuary centers for devotees (3-16 and 3-22) were among the 'sights' visited by the faithful. Of course the priests of Thoth also kept some sites carefully hidden, as befit the god of hidden knowledge.

Factions: The band of evil halfling thugs and brigands led by the notorious Phlebotomas Plumthorn (3-5) occupies a key (and highly defensible) section of the region adjacent to the main entry point from the surface (areas 3-3 to 3-6). They claim authority over the entire region and attempt to extort licenses and tribute from all who pass through area 3-2.

Construction: Almost all construction in this region is Archontean, with 10' ceilings and iron-bound wooden doors. The Thoth priests preferred to sheath the stone walls with plaster, on which they painted elaborate frescoes celebrating Thoth. Many of the frescoes are still visible and might reveal some general or even useful information to those unfamiliar with Thoth. Considering a 10'x10' section of wall for a turn might reveal some useful and comprehensible information (25% chance). If so indicated, the GM should roll d100 on the table on the next page to determine what the art-lover has learned.

Environment: Cool and dry

2. Western Region: Hidden Temples (areas 3-71 to 3-117)

To the west of the public areas of the cult of Thoth was the great private temple of the Thoth priesthood (3-71). Quite nearby is the main temple to Set, which was restored over the past several decades by a rejuvenated Set cult. Although the two temples were distinct in antiquity, the modern Set cult has connected the two areas via new construction and is contemplating expansion into the empty halls of their former rival.

Generic Wall Iconography for Northern Region: Precincts of Thoth

D100	Description of Image(s)	GM Notes
01-20	Ibis-headed Thoth worshipped by orange-robed priests	One of the most common images of Thoth was as an ibis-headed person (c.f. his cult statues at AV-15 and 3-2). Orange robes with cylindrical headdresses indicate Thoth priests
21-30	A large ibis flanked by servitor baboons wielding clubs	Thoth was commonly represented by ibises and baboons
31-35	Baboons beat a black boar with clubs	The black boar is a symbol of Set, the rival of Thoth
36-45	Ibis-headed Thoth points with left arm to a Mithric glyph. Two words in Mithric script spew from Thoth's mouth on a slip of parchment	The Glyph is that for magic. The words say "I am." To readers of Mithric, this is simple: "I am magic", that is, Thoth is the source of magic. The placement of the left arm is a clue to the working of the statues in 3-2, 3-15 and 3-40
46-55	Loops of parchment spew from ibis-headed Thoth's mouth and into the hands of numerous human beings, some in orange robes. Words are visible on the parchment	Thoth was the source of writing. The words say "Writing is power" in Mithric
56-65	A standard image of ibis-headed Thoth has been defaced, and graffiti in the form of a boar (50%) or a dog-like animal with curved snout, square ears and a forked tail (50%)	The boar and the Set animal are common representations of Set. The modern cult of Set (see 3-89 to 3-117 and much of Level 4) is responsible for the graffiti.
66-75	A baboon crouching in the 'scribe' position (knees pulled to chest), with a book open on its knees. The left paw of the baboon is raised in greeting.	A reference to Thoth's role as recorder of the deeds of the dead, and in his baboon form. The placement of the arm is a clue to the working of the statues at 3-2, 3-15 and 3-40
76-80	Ibis-headed Thoth walks beside a woman bearing a white feather in her hand; to either side are sarcophagi.	Thoth was associated with Maat, whose image was the white feather. A clue to the efficacy of the feathers of Maat found at 3-19 in repelling the undead of the catacombs (3-22)
81-90	Ibis-headed Thoth holds the reins of a chariot in his outstretched left hand. At Thoth's side is a rayed orb. The chariot travels through the sky, above adoring orange-clad priests	The Archontean cult of Thoth associated him with bringing the light of knowledge, and saw him as the driver of the solar chariot. A reference to the Litany of Light (see 2-2 through 2-5).
91-95	Unusually, ibis-headed Thoth stands with both arms raised above his head. In front of him, human worshippers fall into a pit.	A clue to the danger of manipulating the statue of Thoth at UP-1 and 3-15 in the wrong way
96-100	Humans bearing gifts of gems, cloth, golden statuettes and scrolls approach ibis-headed Thoth, whose left hand is outstretched in benediction	An important clue to manipulating the statues at 3-2, 3-15 and 3-40 so as to locate the treasure room (3-23). Also a hint about the benefits of offering Thoth (3-2) gifts.

Factions: The cult of Set fully controls important sections of this region (3-89 to 3-110). Reckless incursions into Set's territory will be met swiftly by deadly force.

Construction: All worked areas are Archontean, with 10' ceilings and iron-bound wooden doors. Thothian areas were plastered in antiquity and covered in frescoes (see table in region 1); the Set cult preferred to decorate the stone directly, and adopted no general artistic scheme (hence no table).

3. Central Region: Precincts of the Beastmen (3-120 to 3-162)

In antiquity this was the administrative and residential district for the priest of Thoth, centering around the iconic Great Hall (3-123), which extended upwards to Sub-Level 3. Today the non-secret areas form the domain of the beastmen and their foul mistress, Deino (3-158).

Factions: The beastmen are the dominant players in this region. They patrol the area regularly in banda (patrols) of six plus a sergeant. They are always willing to negotiate first, but are quick to defend themselves. They will warn those visitors whom they like or admire not to seek audiences with their mistress.

Construction: All worked areas are Archontean, typically with 10' ceilings and iron-bound wooden doors. The beastmen have worked hard to scrub away any of the old images of the cult of Thoth, leaving the walls bare of decoration in most places.

4. Southern Region: Great Cavern and Surrounding Caves (3-163 to 3-230)

South of the Great Hall of Thoth lies the enormous Great Cavern (3-163, 3-172), bisected by an underground river called the Seamly Run (3-217, 3-230, 3-231) and a small lake (3-164). Numerous side caves and tunnels connect to the Great Cavern, and a few tombs crafted by the paranoid in antiquity may be found scattered among those caves. Ptarmis, a priest of Thoth, discovered the Great Cavern during the glory years of Archontean Arden Vul. It was he who cultivated the giant species of mushroom that form the current fungal forest, it was he who introduced the fungal foresters as cultivators of the mushrooms, and it was he (and his men) who built the hematite gates (3-177) and the parvis with its great chair (3-175, 3-176). So enamored was Ptarmis by the Great Cavern that he commanded his tomb be prepared here (see 3-174).

Factions: No faction controls this region. The fungal foresters patrol the fungal forest, but are not territorial. The beastmen's Long Range Cavern Patrol frequents the Great Cavern in order to bring food and other supplies to Deino and their comrades. A fearsome hag has a small domain among the river caves (3-204 to 3-206, 3-219, 3-221 to 3-224). The cult of Set has a tiny foothold to the far west (3-193 to 3-195, 3-211 to 3-212).

Construction: The few worked areas are Archontean, albeit with stone doors.

Environment: The area is substantially more humid than the rest of the area, and some sections (e.g. the Great Cavern) are quite warm.

RANDOM ENCOUNTERS

1. Northern Area (areas 3-1 to 3-70)

The GM should make checks every 3 turns, with a 1-in-6 chance of an encounter, although it will be uncommon that a hostile encounter will result. If an encounter is indicated, consult the following table:

D20	Encounter
1-3	1 basic dragonfly automaton of Kerbog Khan (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 4; MV 240' flying (Class A); HD 1+2; HP 8; #AT 0 Dmg n.a.; MR 25%. Special defenses: immune to cold and fire
4-5	A mundane animal. Roll d8: 1-2: a bat flaps by at top speed 3-4: a rat hops into view, freezes, and scampers back the way it came 5-6: a 3"-long lizard runs across the floor and clambers up the wall 7: a very lost rabbit sits forlornly in the hall/room 8: a cat (33% chance to be black) crosses the PCs' path
6-8	6 halflings from Phlebotomas Plumthorn's gang (see areas 3-3 to 3-6). The halflings are scouts, making sure that nothing unusual is happening in the areas which they consider to be in their area of influence. If slain, the halflings should be subtracted from the numbers given in the note before area 3-3: 1. 3 1 st -level halfling fighters: SZ S; AL NE; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1; HP: 8, 9, 10; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 2-7 (club), or 2-5 (sling). Possessions: studded leather armor and shield; spears; clubs; slings 2. 3 2 nd -level halfling thieves: SZ S; AL NE; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 11, 9, 8; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (short sword), 1-4 (dagger), or 2-5 (sling). Special: the thieves have DEX 17, and the following thief skills: PP 45%, OL 44%, F/RT 30%, MS 36%, HS 35%, HN 15%, CW 71%. Possessions: leather armor; short swords; daggers, slings
9-11	4 skeletons, released from the catacombs (areas 3-21 to 3-22) by some other adventuring party: SZ M; AL N; AC 7; MV 120'; HD 1; HP 7, 6, 5, 4; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special defenses: immune to sleep, charm, hold, and cold; cutting and piercing weapons do half damage

12-13	Party of NPC adventurers (select from NPC appendix). If negotiation occurs, the NPCs will be simultaneously secretive and prying - they want to know what the PCs have found, but will only grudgingly (and possibly misleadingly) reveal any of their own information about the level. The NPCs have not figured out the trick to the Thoth statue in area 3-2, and thus are ignorant of area 3-23. They also have not figured out the trick to 3-15. It is up to the GM to determine how far into the complex these rivals have ventured.
14	4-8 giant fire beetles: SZ S; AL N; AC 4; MV 120'; HD 1+2; HP 10, 9, 8, 8, 7, 7, 5, 4; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8
15-16	3-12 giant rats: SZ S; AL N(E); AC 7; MV 120'; HD 1-4 HP; HP 4(x3), 3(x3), 2(x3), 1(x3); #At 1; Dmg 1-3. Special attacks: 5% chance of disease
17-18	A beastman patrol consisting of 6 troopers and a sergeant: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. 6 beastman troopers (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 8, 7, 7, 6, 6, 5; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spears; short swords; short bows</li> <li>2. 1 beastman sergeant (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 2+2; HP 15; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 or 2-5. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spear; war hammer</li> </ul>
19	1 gelatinous cube: SZ L; AL N; AC 8; MV 60'; HD 4; HP 29; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8. Special attacks; paralysis; surprise on 1-3. Special defenses: partial immunity to cold; immune to electricity, fear, hold, paralyzation, polymorph, and sleep
20	A Set patrol composed of 4 Set guardsmen and a Set acolyte (see new monsters). This encounter will only happen once; re-roll any subsequent results of 20. They are not interested in combat unless pressed. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. 4 Set guardsmen (see new monsters), as 2nd-level Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 15, 12; #AT 1, Dmg 2-7 (mace), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: red scale mail and wooden shield; footman's maces; spears; light crossbows with 20 bolts</li> <li>2. 1 Set acolyte (see new monsters), as a 3rd-level Archontean cleric of Set: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 60'; HD 3; HP 19; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (mace) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Possessions: Set armor (see Arden Vul items); footman's mace; light crossbow; acolyte's was stick (see new magic items); and a silver holy symbol of Set (10 gp). Spells prayed for: command, cure light wounds, curse (reverse of bles), protection from good; hold person, silence 15' radius</li> </ul>

2. Western Areas 3-71 to 3-115

Checks every 3 turns, with a 1-in-6 chance of an encounter.

A. Areas 3-71 to 3-74, 3-82 to 3-85

LEVEL KEY

3-1: Entrance Stairs up to UP-5

The stairs leading down from the Great Pyramid (UP-5) are steep and cramped. They descend some 350' and exit into 3-2. The stairs were once flanked with brightly colored frescoes outlining the glories of Thoth. Today the chute-like stairway is blackened with soot, grime, and desecration. Little meaningful is left to decipher, although the GM may offer some tidbits: a flash of gold paint, a blue beak, some broken runes.

What is legible is a variety of graffiti, some informational and some obscene. PCs may find 1-4 instances of graffiti scratched onto each 10' section of wall. The GM should roll on the following table to determine the nature of the graffiti.

D20	Graffiti	GM Notes
1-4	A name: e.g., Gil, Aethelwulf, Hoss, Flet, Jilken, Tom the Mighty, Rache, Dalton, Roger the Rapier, Anna the Archer, etc.	The GM could or should add names to this list that reflect figures from his/her own campaign. In the samples, Dalton and Roger the Rapier are both leaders of rival NPC adventuring groups. The language/script in which the names are written varies, either at choice of GM or as appropriate to a name. For example, Dalton and Roger are both Archontean and thus their names are in that language
5	One of the dog troopers warned us not to seek an audience with his mistress, the powerful sorceress Deino. Why not?	A reference to the beastmen (3-138 to 3-162) and the dangers posed by any meeting with Deino (3-158). Language: Archontean
6	Thoth's knowledge - and his wealth - remains hidden. But I know how to unlock it. Look to the arms!	A reference to the puzzle involving the statues at 3-2, 3-15, and 3-40, which if manipulated correctly reveal the path to the hoard at 3-23/3-24. Language: Elvish
7	I hate halflings! (written 7' up the wall)	A reference to the band of halfling thugs who dominate parts of Level 3 (3-2 to 3-6). Language: Wiskin
8	The feathery blessing of Maat fends off the walkers! Do not ignore her soft offering!	A hint about how use of the feather of Maat (3-19) will render the user immune from the undead of the catacombs of Thoth (3-22). Language: Mithric
9-10	Plumthorn Rules these Halls! Obey Him!	Written 3' from the ground. A reference to the leader of the halflings who inhabit 3-2 to 3-6. Language: Archontean

11	The Darlings are stupid. They left the portcullis open again. I hope they all die horribly.	Refers to the portcullises at 3-21, and the inadvisability of leaving them open (so undead can access the eastern areas). Darlings is a reference to Dalton's Darlings, one of the suggested rival NPC adventuring parties (see NPC appendix). Language: Archontean
12	The Darlings claim this level! All the treasure is ours! So long, suckers!	A reference to Dalton's Darlings, one of the suggested rival NPC adventuring parties (see NPC appendix). Language: Archontean
13	Wulf - Wait for me in the pyramid room. If you don't see me, I will have ascended. [Signed] Edgar	A reference to the small pyramid in 3-11, and its ability to teleport explorers to 2-8. Language: Thorcin
14	Halflings rule ok! (Written at halfling height)	A positive reference to Phlebotomas Plumthorn and his band of extortionists (see 3-2 to 3-6). Language: Archontean
15	A faint and primitive sketch of a biped with huge thighs and an amphibian head. An arrow points to its eye, with the caption 'danger'	An image of a pukel-mander (see new magic items, see 2-56C, 3-11, etc.). Placing a tear of Kauket (see new magic items) in the pukel-mander's eye can be quite dangerous! The caption is in Mithric
16	A crude map of 3-2, 3-15 and 3-16 with an 'x' and 'look here' scrawled next to the intersection at 3-15	Self-explanatory, with an oblique hint as to the significance of the statue of Thoth at 3-15. Language: Archontean
17	We shall return. The secrets of the Paleologue will not remain hidden. Look to Gog for directions.	A reference to the lost tomb of Hithra Paleologos (3-36) and the fact that Gog (5-2) can give directions to many locations (but not to 3-36). Language: Elvish
18	We followed the arrogant, red-armored fools into the great temple of Thoth, but then we lost them ... and half our party.	A hint that the cult of Set is located west of the Great Temple of Thoth (3-71), i.e. at areas 3-89 to 3-117. Also an oblique reference to the danger of the slime kraken in 3-71. Language: Thorcin
19	Grumak went for a boat ride in the lake. Big mistake.	Refers to the lake (3-164) that bisects the Great Cavern (3-163 and 3-172), and is an oblique hint about the giant crabs that infest the waters of the lake. Language: Wiskin

20	KK is watching us all the time! Don't trust the talking puppets!	A reference to Kerbog Khan (see SL12-25) and one of his many types of automatons. Language: Archontean
----	--	---

2. 5 1st-level halfling fighters: SZ S; AL NE; AC 6; MV 90; HD 1; HP: 10, 9, 8, 8, 7; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 2-7 (club), or 2-5 (sling). Possessions: studded leather armor and shield; spears; clubs; slings; 3-18 sp each.

3-2: The Glory of Thoth

Located at the foot of the long staircase from the surface, this chamber was originally the main public site for the veneration of Thoth. The chamber is lit by guttering torches placed (by the halflings) in sconces along the north, south and west walls - these provide some dim light, but do not fully illuminate the center of the room. The ceiling here is 30' high. The plaster on the walls has been badly damaged, but the ceiling plaster is still intact - a character who somehow manages to get close enough to examine the ceiling imagery will see an image of humans bearing valuable goods - gems, cloth, golden statuettes, scrolls - to ibis-headed Thoth. In these images Thoth is pointing with an outstretched left hand, while his right hand is flat against his thigh (an important clue concerning the solving of the puzzle in 3-2A).

A substantial amount of debris - wrecked furniture, destroyed armor and equipment, bits of bone and leather - has accumulated in the four corners of the chamber. There is dust everywhere, although clear paths lead from the stairs to 3-3, 3-12, 3-15, and 3-31. No dust is found around the central statue. A character who specifically examines the floor around the statue carefully may (2 chances in 6) notice scoring as if a heavy stone object (such as the statue) had been dragged across the floor.

The body of a recently slain adventurer (possibly one encountered by the PCs outside the dungeon or as a random encounter) is slumped against the west wall. The halflings have already looted most of the useful items from his body; a scroll with the spell find traps is still stuffed into his pants.

Any lights or noise (such as experimenting with the statue) will bring some shouts from 3-3, followed by a group of six halflings, led by Roskelly Winterleaf. Roskelly and his thugs interrogate the party as to its intentions, and inform the PCs that in order to explore the dungeon each explorer must procure a 'license' from the 'big boss' of this area, his 'good friend,' Phlebotomas Plumthorn (3-5). Licenses cost 25 gp up front, plus 10 gp per sortie into 3-2, plus a 10% tithe of any treasure (including magic items) found in the dungeon. The halflings prefer to threaten, bluster and negotiate. If the PCs pay up, the halflings treat them neutrally, although they are extra-vigilant so as to secure any subsequent 'fees.' If the PCs refuse to pay, but look powerful, then Roskelly and his men retreat to 3-3 to join their comrades; they engage in guerrilla warfare against the PCs from this point onward. If the PCs refuse, but look weak, Roskelly and his men attack, although they might be willing to take prisoners.

Inhabitants:

1. Roskelly Winterleaf, 5th-level halfling thief: SZ S; AL CE; AC 5; MV 90; HD 5, HP 22; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (short sword) or 2-5 (dagger). Abilities: STR 16, INT 9, WIS 10, DEX 17, CON 10, CHA 15. Special: thief skills are PP 60%, OL 62%, F/RT 50%, MS 52%, HS 57%, HN 25%, CW 77%, RL 30%. Special attacks: poison; both weapons are coated "Mortality" poison (see 3-4), which has an onset of 2-8 rounds, and does 20 HP damage, or half if a save is made. Possessions: leather armor; short sword; dagger; potion of invisibility.

3-2A: Statue of Thoth

This massive statue of the ibis-headed god is 15' tall and faces north. The perfectly proportioned and lifelike human body stands on a granite pedestal (3' tall) and is carved of black onyx. In classic Egyptian fashion, Thoth's right foot is advancing slightly. His arms hang at his side, but rotate on stone pins. The arms always start flat against his sides, but can be pulled upward and forward to any position between 0 and 180 degrees (0 degrees would be his hand against his side, while 180 degrees would be his hand pointing straight up at the ceiling). Thoth's ibis head is made of white marble, inserted on a stone pin into the onyx. His eyes are empty sockets.

At the foot of the statue is a large stone chest that is part of the pedestal. When the complex was being used, worshipers would deposit their offerings into the chest. Even now, if a character places a magic scroll into the chest and invokes Thoth (in any form whatsoever, as long as he/she mentions the name Thoth), the character receives a magical enhancement to INT or WIS (determined randomly). If the spell on the scroll is of 1st to 3rd level (magic user or clerical), the donor gains either +1 INT and +1 WIS for the period of one week; if the scroll contains a spell of 4th level or above, then the donor gains a permanent +1 to either INT or WIS (determined randomly). Any magical scroll left in the chest instantly vaporizes.

A character may gain the lesser increase in INT or WIS once per week, but any one character may only gain one point of INT and one point of WIS by donating higher-level scrolls. Note that this means a character can gain the benefit twice, once for INT and once for WIS; still, the ability gain is determined randomly each time a character deposits a scroll, so it is possible that a character who has already gained an ability increase may not [50% chance] gain the other ability increase from any subsequent donation. Any symbol of Set placed into the chest produces a column of black flame (5-30 HP damage) that affects all persons standing within 25' of the statue.

The statue is also the key to an important puzzle. If the arms of all three statues of Thoth on Level 3 (at 3-2, 3-15, and 3-40) are shifted to the correct position, the pedestal here grinds backwards to reveal a set of stairs leading downwards toward the north. The correct position is to shift Thoth's left hand so that it is parallel to the floor and pointing (in 3-2) to the north. The right hand must remain in the default position. After 1 hour of inactivity, the arms reset to default (both facing down).

Hidden Staircase and Passageway: The stairs are dusty and choked with thick strands of cobwebs. The halflings have not figured out the puzzle, and the Set followers are too afraid of the statue to manipulate it. The stairs descend about 10 feet before opening into a 5'-wide, 7'-tall tunnel leading northwest. The walls, although not perfectly square, are nonetheless plastered and covered with colorful images: Thoth in majesty, Thoth receiving wisdom, languages of various sorts being spewed from the mouths of ibises and baboons, etc.

3-3: Portcullis and Halfling Guardpost

The passage has been fitted with an iron gate, in the center of which is a (halfling-sized) iron door. The two door guards keep the key. These guards will never allow the PCs to pass through the iron gate on their own; if a parlay is required, either Roskelly (3-2) or Phlebotomas himself (3-5) will come to the gate to negotiate. Characters with high strength can force the gate, or its lock can easily be picked by a thief (+10%).

If for some reason the PCs have not already spoken with Roskelly (3-2) for reasons of concealment, sneaking, etc., then the guards will be chatting idly, unaware of the PCs. If the PCs are already known to be hostile, or if they show hostility, one of the guards runs to a horn hanging on a peg (stuck into an image of Thoth) and sounds it. In 1-4 rounds, the halflings from areas 3-4, 3-5 and 3-6 begin arriving to repel intruders.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 1st-level halfling fighters: SZ S; AL NE; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1; HP: 8, 9; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 2-7 (club), or 2-5 (sling). Possessions: studded leather armor and shield; spears; clubs; slings; 3-18 sp each.

3-4: Ancient Tombs and Halfling Camp

This burial chamber for important figures in the cult of Thoth has been badly treated by time; the walls are stained with soot, urine, and worse.

Three massive stone sarcophagi exist in the center of the room. The lids were pried open long ago, and lie shattered on the floor. Currently the tombs are empty.

The chamber is lit by three large candelabra placed near each of the sarcophagi, as well as by a small cookfire in the northwest corner and a tripod of heating (see new magic items) in the southeast corner. The northeast corner of the room is open to the chasm (3-38). A small parapet of rubble (3' high) has been erected across that opening. The halflings do not know that a passage originally led from this room to 3-40. It was filled in with rubble in antiquity, and bricked and plastered over on this end. A dwarf might (1 in 6) note that this section of wall is different (bricks underneath the plaster, instead of stone). Even if detected, the passageway is completely filled with rubble.

The halflings' poison manufactory is set up along the south wall. It comprises a rickety table on which is a set of glass alchemical equipment, including two alembics, a retort, two crucibles and a mortar and pestle. To one side is a burlap sack with six glass bulbs containing viscous clear liquid (the spider venom) and three more sacks filled with herbs, dyes, and alchemical powders. To the other side are eighteen small glass vials, each with the word "Mortality" (the street name for Phlebotomas's poison) etched on the side; these are filled with a sticky, green substance. The distilled poison is relatively slow acting (onset in 2-8 rounds), but fairly lethal: it inflicts 20 hp of damage, or 10 hp damage if a save is made. Each vial contains 3 doses of "Mortality", and sells for 100 gp to the right buyer. Because it is so valuable, Phlebotomas does not automatically issue it to his rank and file thugs, reserving it for himself, Roskelly (3-2), and Blandveg (see 3-5). If, however, Phlebotomas realizes that his crew is the object of a concerted attack and is given enough time to do so, he will distribute poison to the 1st-level fighters and 2nd-level thieves.

Tactical Note: The halflings fight from behind the tombs, using them as cover (75%). The halflings in areas 3-5 and 3-6 will use the same tactic if possible.

Inhabitants:

1. 5 1st-level halfling fighters: SZ S; AL NE; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1; HP: 10, 9, 8, 8, 7; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 2-7 (club), or 2-5 (sling). Possessions: studded leather armor and shield; spears; clubs; slings; 3-18 sp each.
2. 5 2nd-level halfling thieves: SZ S; AL NE; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 11, 10, 10, 9, 9; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (short sword), 1-4 (dagger), or 2-5 (sling). Special: the thieves have DEX 17, and the following thief skills: PP 45%, OL 44%, F/RT 30%, MS 36%, HS 35%, HN 15%, CW 71%. Possessions: leather armor; short swords; daggers, slings; 3-18 sp each.

Treasure:

Tripod of heating (see new magic items); six bulbs of spider venom (30 gp each); three sacks of alchemical ingredients (45 gp each); eighteen vials of 'Mortality' poison (100 gp each); alchemical equipment (a total of 500 gp).

GM Option:

If the GM wishes it, the halflings have erected a makeshift bridge across the chasm between 3-4 and 3-40 (a 20' span). Their bridge is quite unstable - either a single long plank or tree-trunk, or an unsteady rope bridge anchored to the tombs. Even if the bridge exists, the halflings have not yet explored beyond 3-40.

3-5: More Ancient Tombs, with Halfling Leaders

This room is decorated almost identically to 3-4, with formerly gilded luxury paintings now stained with soot and other unknown substances. Another three stone sarcophagi lie broken and looted in the center of the chamber. The three leaders of the halfling gang reside in this chamber. A false bottom in the southernmost sarcophagus has miraculously escaped detection. In addition, the halflings have deposited their treasure in a locked wooden chest with iron straps and an iron lock (key held by Phlebotomas).

The northeastern corner of the chamber is open to the chasm. The halflings have rigged a 3'-tall parapet of debris across the opening, and the leaders have dangled a set of strings on which are tied noisy bells and bits of metal - this will alert the halflings (they hope) if something comes out of the chasm.

The halflings' stores are also located here: two large casks of ale, several sides of curing meat (deer), several bags of turnips, apples, and potatoes, and a large sack of rock-hard biscuits.

Although Roskelly Winterleaf has his bedroll here, he is typically encountered in area 3-2.

Negotiating with Plumthorn: Phlebotomas does not typically negotiate with newcomers, leaving the mundane business and dirty work to his lieutenant, Roskelly. Only in the case of pressing need, or if visitors have convinced the guards at 3-3 that they have valuable information, will Plumthorn deign to parlay. In such cases, he might be willing to trade information. Phlebotomas knows the following information about the Halls:

- a. A hidden passage exists somewhere in Level 3. Phlebotomas suspects it is connected to the statue in 3-2.

- b. At least one room may be found across the chasm (i.e., 3-40), but Phlebotomas doesn't know how to access it (or has just done so; see area 3-4 for details)
- c. Goblins lurk to the southeast (3-7); they would like to control area 3-2, but the halflings have stymied them.
- d. Occasional groups of hooded figures have been seen moving between the west and the south. [Set worshippers]
- e. Dangerously large spiders lurk in the chasm
- f. Phlebotomas's men report strange whoops, hoots, and barks drifting down from higher up in the chasm
- g. The guards have witnessed some dangerous undead moving around to the west of 3-2. [ghouls]
- h. Dangerous and highly organized beastmen are encamped to the south; they are ruthless, disciplined and best avoided. They worship a goddess called Deino (3-158).
- i. Access to the upper levels is difficult to obtain; only the risky stairs at 3-21 provide a known means of access.
- j. The lower halls are creepy and dangerous, and were not carved by the ibis priests. The stair to Level 5 (3-12) leads to a cave next to a cursed, pillar-ridden hall.

Treasure:

Inside the false bottom of the sarcophagus: a holy symbol of Thoth, made of silver, encrusted with precious stones (850 gp); 575 cp; 352 sp; a moldering illusionist scroll, with three spells on it (phantasmal force, phantom armor, invisibility); and two arrows of striking (see new magic items).

Locked chest: 432 copper pieces; 243 sp; 957 gp; two ancient holy symbols of Thoth in the form of baboons (150 gp); a holy symbol of Set in the form of a crocodile (100 gp); six gems - 10, 20, 30, 10, 50, and 130 gp value; three codices: Great Villains of Archontos, part IV: Larsinius the Exarch, Thorcin Poisons and their Cures, and Emperors of Archontos, Volume I (see Arden Vul books for all); and Blandveg's spell book: enlarge, friends, jump, magic missile, jump, magic aura, read magic, shield, sleep; Frigg's jelly legs (see new spells), knock, mirror image, scare.

Inhabitants:

1. Phlebotomas Plumthorn, 4th-level halfling fighter: SZ S; AL NE, AC 2; MV 90'; HD 4; HP 35; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8 (battle axe), 1-6 (short bow). Abilities: STR 16, INT 11; WIS 13; DEX 16, CON 11, CHA 15. Special attacks: poison; his axe is coated with "Mortality" poison, which has an onset of 2-8 rounds and inflicts 20 HP damage or half if a save is made. Possessions: chain mail and shield; battle axe; short bow; potion of invulnerability; potion of the berserk (see new magic items) For details see 3-4.
2. Blandveg, 3rd-level Archontean magic user: SZ M; AL CE; AC 7; MV 120'; HD 3; HP 12; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger). Abilities: STR 8, INT 17, WIS 11, DEX 17, CON 15, CHA 6. Special attacks: poison; his dagger is coated with "Mortality" poison, which has an onset of 2-8 rounds and inflicts 20 HP damage or half if a save is made. Possessions: dagger; potion of polymorph self; potion of singing birds (see new magic items); scroll of fireball; a Lexicon of Mithric (see Arden Vul books). Memorized spells: sleep, shield, scare.

3-5A: Halfling Guard Post

After the halflings drove the goblins out of area 3-6, Phlebotomas set up a large (4'-tall) barrier with firing steps in case his men need to retreat from area 3-6.

3-6: Ancient Tomb and Halfling Barracks

This smoky room is nearly identical to 3-4 and 3-5, with ruined wall images and three plundered sarcophagi. The chamber is lit by three candelabra, which ooze oily smoke in the center of the room. Rough, hand-carved tunnels exist in the northwest and southeast corners of the room. The ceiling has caved in slightly in each of these corners. The halflings have piled up a low barrier of debris across the entrance to 3-7.

Numerous bedrolls occupy this room, since all of the non-leader halflings sleep in this chamber (in shifts). Seven of the bedrolls may be found in the unfinished tunnel leading from the northwest corner. The others are scattered along the western wall.

Inhabitants: Two of the halflings present are always located at the barrier in the SE corner.

1. 5 1st-level halfling fighters: SZ S; AL NE; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1; HP: 10, 9, 9, 8, 8, 8; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 2-7 (club), or 2-5 (sling). Possessions: studded leather armor and shield; spears; clubs; slings; 3-18 sp each.
2. 5 2nd-level halfling thieves: SZ S; AL NE; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 11, 10, 9, 9, 8; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (short sword), 1-4 (dagger), or 2-5 (sling). Special: the thieves have DEX 17, and the following thief skills: PP 45%, OL 44%, F/RT 30%, MS 36%, HS 35%, HN 15%, CW 71%. Possessions: leather armor; short swords; daggers, slings; 3-18 sp each.

3-7: Goblin Outpost, with Access to 5-44A

This small chamber is merely a widened area at one end of the 250' long tunnel connecting area 3-6 with area 5-44A. The goblins had begun work on an extension (the spur in 3-6) before the halflings arrived and drove them out of the level. Weskenim, the goblin king (SL4-22), has settled into an uneasy detente with Phlebotomas and has thus stationed some warriors at 3-7 behind a barricade. There is no light in the chamber.

If loud noises occurred in 3-6 (through combat, for instance), then the goblins will be aware, prepared, and using the barricade for concealment. If the PCs do not make noise, then they are likely to surprise the goblins (50%). The goblins do not necessarily want to fight, and are open to negotiation.

Inhabitants:

1. 6 goblins: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 6, 5, 4, 3, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Possessions: 3-18 sp each.
2. 1 goblin sergeant (as orc): SZ M; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1; HP 7; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8 (morning star). Possessions: morning star; 18 sp and a 100 gp aquamarine.

3-8: Robing Room

This chamber served as a robing room for priests serving in one of the three chambers of mystery (3-9, 3-10, 3-11). It is accessed by a flight of steps which descend 15' to a simple wooden door. Inside the chamber is a thick layer of trash - bits of leather, ruined clothing, scraps of metal, and a foul-smelling bolus of decaying animal matter. It takes 2 turns of searching to find the white glass activation square (see Thothian teleportation rings in new magic items) mixed among the trash.

Secret Door (south): The door is relatively easy to discover (1 in 4). It opens by sliding a 4'-square panel into the wall. The door leads to a narrow hallway of plain rock featuring a set of rough-hewn stone steps leading upward to 3-67.

3-9: Chamber of Painful Knowledge

This is one of the mystery chambers devised by the cult of Thoth; it was designed to demonstrate to the faithful that the acquisition of knowledge is difficult and sometimes painful.

The chamber is dark, but numerous (empty) sconces line the walls. A layer of grey-green mist rises 3' from the floor throughout the chamber. The mist is harmless, and dissipates if the pool in area 3-10 is cleansed.

Three stone benches face a sunken area that is 8' below the level of the floor (the mist is thus 6' deep here). Five steps lead into the sunken area, the centerpiece of which is a single onyx pillar (15' high). The usual mixture of trash clutters the room, along with almost completely obliterated wall frescoes. High up on the western wall and partly obscured by a layer of grime is the following inscription (in Mithric): Thou May Ask of Thoth What Thou Will, Provided Thou Accept His Judgment.

Pillar of Truth: Any being who grips the onyx pillar and speaks aloud a question may have that question answered by the God ... at the cost of a little pain. The question must involve the past (not the future), and must be primarily factual (i.e., nothing like 'what were so-and-so enemies thinking ...'). Questions phrased in such a way have a 50% chance of being answered. However ... the recipient of Thoth's wisdom also receives a strong electrical shock worth 1-6 damage for every two levels of the asker (that is, a first level character takes 1-6 damage; a 10th level PC receives 5-30 HP damage). The GM should exercise some judgment on the use of this potentially powerful quasi-oracle. The Pillar will only work twice per character per month.

3-10: Pool of Youth

The second of the chambers of mystery of the cult of Thoth, this room was originally designed to impress devotees with the curative powers of the god.

A continual light spell was cast in the center of the ceiling centuries ago. A grey-green mist rises 3' above the floor throughout the chamber. Through the mist is visible a 20'-diameter pool rimmed with a 1'-tall, blue-granite lip. The mist is harmless. If the pool is cleansed, the mist disperses after 1-6 hours. The wall frescoes are particularly damaged in this room, and are almost impossible to make out except near the ceiling.

The liquid in the pool is a dark, sludgy brown color. It reeks with a foul and disgusting odor. Despite its unappetizing appearance, aroma, and taste, the pool still serves its original function: any person wading into the pool and drinking from it is instantly cured of 1-8 HP and has a 50% chance of being cured of any current diseases. Such healing is available once per week per PC.

Cleansing the Pool: The pool has been used as a latrine by monsters and by passing Set guardsmen for many decades. This fact has affected its appearance and the efficaciousness of its healing powers. It is possible to restore the pool to its original deep azure blue color and its full functionality, though: this may be accomplished either by mixing three vials of holy water into the sludge, using a potion of sweet water, or by casting purify water or purify food and drink on the liquid. If cleansed, the pool heals 3-12 HP per draught and automatically cures the imbiber of all diseases; it may still only be used once per PC per week.

3-11: Pyramid of Venerable Age

As one of the three chambers of mystery, the priests of Thoth used this chamber to demonstrate Thoth's powers over aging through a ritual by which a priest was 'magically' shot through the ceiling. Worshipers viewed this stunt as proof of Thoth's omniscience and power.

The room is shaped like a huge isosceles triangle. It is unlit, although numerous wall sconces await torches; the 50'-tall ceiling is thus invisible to normal torchlight. The still-extant frescoes on the walls of this chamber illustrate Thoth's conquest of aging and death, with numerous images of creatures of all sorts - including humans - rising up from the ground and shedding the symbols of age (robes, beards, canes). The chamber is dominated by a massive, 40'-tall triangular pyramid of closely fitted granite. A layer of grey-green mist rises 3' from the floor and covers the floor around the pyramid. The mist is harmless and dissipates quickly after the pool in area 3-10 is cleansed.

Pyramid: The pyramid is triangular. On all three sides, stairs cut into the granite lead up to a central platform, where the mystery was accomplished. In essence, the platform occupies the place where the top of the triangular solid would have been (as if it had been cut off). The platform has a smaller triangle made of lapis-lazuli centered in its middle, from the center of which extends a single steel bar. The bar is grey with age, but is not (strangely) rusted; an obsidian knob rests on its top. Those who stand on the lapis triangle and depress the bar will activate the mystery of venerable age: a cloud of dense smoke pours out of hidden holes on all three sides of the pyramid (obscuring vision of those on the floor of the chamber) while, at the same moment, those standing on the lapis-lazuli triangle are teleported to Level 2 (area 2-8). Transfer is almost instantaneous, and the smoke quickly disperses (within 15 seconds).

Hidden Chamber: The granite pyramid conceals a hidden chamber in which is found an enormous soapstone heqeti pukel-mander (see new magic items). The priests of Thoth found the statue here and decided for various reasons to build around it. Pulling the steel bar on the top platform of the pyramid three times in a row will cause anyone on the lapis triangle to be teleported to the floor of the hidden chamber. The chamber is a triangular solid, albeit with the top lopped off. The base of the chamber is 20'x20'x30' and rests on the original stone floor of the complex. A one-way secret door at the base of the interior chamber allows those viewing the pukel-mander to return to the main chamber.

3-11A: The Mouth of Thoth

A permanent magic mouth was placed on the south wall during the Archontean glory days. Anyone approaching within 15' will trigger the mouth. It takes the form of enormous red lips formed in a thin line; the mouth speaks in the ancient secret tongue of the priests of Thoth (known only to those well-versed in ancient religions): "Behold the Glory of Thoth! Mysteries of past, present and future are known to those who speak his name and direct his arms. Knowledge is power!"

3-11B: Set's Mouth

More recently some priests of Set decided to mock the Mouth of Thoth with their own permanent magic mouth. This mouth is also activated by anyone approaching within 15' of its location (so there is a very good chance that anyone coming down the western passage from 3-12 will activate both simultaneously). This mouth appears as a sneering, contemptuous pair of lips that announce in Archontean: "The followers of the ibis are dead and gone; their power is faded and their secrets lost. Neither power nor knowledge is to be shared. Beware!"

3-12: Concealed Door, with Access to Level 5-1

The wall contains an enormous fresco of a baboon, squatting on the ground and staring forward with bared teeth. The image is a good 6' tall and 4' wide. Although there is much wear on the walls, the image is still recognizable. Pressing both of the baboon's eyes will cause the wall to grind inwards, revealing a staircase leading down 250' to Level 5 (area 5-1). The concealed door is easy (4 in 6) to discover.

3-13: Trashed Chamber

Inside is an even larger pile of trash than usual for this level - broken bits of wood, moldy pieces of plaster, several skulls and broken bones, broken pieces of metal, torn strips of cloth. There is a 33% chance for an inhabitant in this chamber; if so indicated, it will be either giant rats (50%), a scared adventurer (25%), or a pair of giant fire beetles (25%).

Inhabitants (33% chance):

1. 3-12 giant rats: SZ S; AL N(E); AC 7; MV 120'; HD 1-4 HP; HP 4(x3), 3(x3), 2(x3), 1(x3); #At 1; Dmg 1-3. Special attacks: 5% chance of disease.
2. A scared adventurer (choose from NPC appendix)
3. 2 giant fire beetles: SZ S; AL N; AC 4; MV 120'; HD 1+2; HP 8, 5; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8

Treasure:

The only item of value in all this trash is a sapphire worth 1,500 gp that is lodged inside a skull. It takes 3-6 turns of sorting through the trash to locate the gem.

3-14: False Corridor

The wooden door from 3-2 leads to a short hallway, with a turn to the left that ends in a door. The door is a false door, however, and is trapped.

Trap (covered pit): The pit is 20' deep and is triggered by opening the false door. Those falling into it take 2-12 HP damage.

3-15: Thoth the Recorder

The second of the three major statues of Thoth stands in this intersection. The hallway from 3-2 is filled with frescoes of Thoth recording the virtues and sins of believers. In most he appears as an implacable ibis-headed scribe, while around him numerous humans and demi-humans shout requests for mercy and favor.

The statue occupies an 8'-diameter circular pedestal that mostly blocks the center of the intersection. The statue is of a seated ibis-headed scribe (in the traditional Egyptian pose). On his lap is his book, where he records the deeds of the dead. The left hand holds the book down, while the right hand holds a quill pen. The main block of the statue is onyx; the ibis head is ivory, as is the book and the quill. The ibis head has no gemstones in it, merely empty holes (purposely designed to show the unfathomable and limitless nature of knowledge). Anyone staring into the eye-holes (which are about 2" in diameter) is dazed for 1-4 rounds by the cosmic reach of Thoth's knowledge.

The forearms of the statue rotate on stone pins (as in 3-2), and manipulation of them constitutes one of the major puzzles of this level of the Halls. Each arm has three possible positions - down (default position, with hands holding pen and book); pointing straight ahead to the east, and up (above his head). There are thus nine possible combinations:

Down	Down	None (default position)
Down	Straight	Opens pit at 3-15A
Down	Up	Opens pit at 3-15B
Straight	Down	Unlocks mechanism to secret door in 3-2C
Straight	Straight	Opens chute at 3-15C
Straight	Up	None
Up	Down	None
Up	Straight	None
Up	Up	Simultaneously opens both pits and the chute

After 1 hour of inactivity, the arms reset to default (down-down) and all pits close.

Secret Door (west): The door is normal to locate. The door opens by locating a catch concealed in the nostril of a fresco of Thoth; once the catch is released, the door slides into the south wall.

3-15A: Pit Trap

This 10'x10' pit trap opens when certain combinations of Thoth's arms are 'dialed'. The pit is 10' deep and contains spikes on the bottom. Damage is 2-12.

3-15B: Pit Trap

Identical to 3-15A.

3-15C: Chute

Anyone standing in front of Thoth the Recorder (3-15) when either straight-straight or up-up is 'dialed' will be dropped into a chute to Level 5. The chute is a zig-zag tunnel (i.e., with cutbacks) made of magically oiled stone. Despite traversing more than 250' of depth between Level 3 and Level 5, the unfortunate victim(s) only take 3-18 damage when they are unceremoniously dumped into area 5-2.

3-16: Halls of Thoth's Beloved

This darkened hallway is 15' high. The surface of the walls is filled with burial niches reserved for favored worshipers of the cult of Thoth. Niches are 5' long (thus two niches per 10' length of hallway) and 3' high (thus five niches from floor to ceiling), and originally boasted a stone plug on which family names and images of Thoth were painted. All of the plugs have long since been smashed, with one exception in the northwest corner that is marked as 3-16A. As a result the floor is littered with bits of masonry, bones, and general pieces of trash. The litter is thick enough (2') that it impedes movement and makes moving silently much more difficult (-10%). The halls also slope downward, such that the western hall is twenty feet below the floor of the eastern hall. The slope is steep enough that it is noticeable to all.

Those who insist on searching through the floor trash may find 1-4 sp every hour up to a maximum of 200sp.

A group of giant rats has begun a nest in the darkness of the western hallway. The rats only attack a party that moves through their nesting area in the southwest corner.

Inhabitants:

1. 9-12 giant rats: SZ S; AL N(E); AC 7; MV 120'; HD 1-4 HP; HP 4(x3), 3(x3), 2(x3), 1(x3); #At 1; Dmg 1-3. Special attacks: 5% chance of disease. The rats attack leaping from niches at the level of PCs' heads/torsos. This tactic provides a bonus to surprise (surprise on 1-3).

Treasure:

The rats' nest contains 459 sp, four citrines (50 gp each), a large pearl (500 gp), two aquamarines (100 gp each), a lapis lazuli and gold ring worth 500 gp, and a cursed blacklight torch (see new magic items).

The burial niches are mostly bereft of valuables. A party that insists on searching all the niches (560 in total) will be in for a lengthy search indeed (8-12 hours). Despite the risk of random encounters, such a search might reveal one of the following (1 in 6 chance per hour of searching).

D20	Object
1	silver holy symbol of Thoth worth 10 gp
2	jade necklace worth 50 gp
3	set of silver buckles worth 5 gp
4	dagger +1
5	copper candlestick (20 cp)

6	gold brooch shaped like a baboon (35 gp)
7	leather purse with 15 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items)
8	gold signet ring, 25% chance the family name is still an important one in the Archontean empire
9	scroll with one of the four canticles of the Litany of Light (see Arden Vul books)
10	silver-backed mirror (15gp)
11-15	bronze tablet inscribed with a name, clan and office (e.g., Georgius Tullius, tribune of the archonate of Arden Vul)
16	a soapstone animal figurine (10 sp)
17	key to a mundane lock (GM's choice)
18-19	small alabaster canopic jar with ibis head for lid (10 gp)
20	copper torc incised with silver (15 sp)

3-16A: Burial Niche

Only one untouched burial niche remains in the Halls of Thoth's Beloved. The plug is covered with soot - if wiped off it shows an image of Thoth pointing straight forward with his left hand, while the right hand is at his side (GM Note: this is a hint about how the arms of the statues at 3-2, 3-15, and 3-40 ought to be positioned in order to open the passage to 3-23). Also on the plug is a symbol of the inhabitant of the niche's family: a black tower with a single window shining forth light into the darkness (GM Note: this is still one of the sigils of clan Krakteros, one of the Five Families [see World of Archontos appendix] that run the Archontean Empire).

Breaking the plug will require some strength, some implements, and a way of wielding implements while 12-some feet up in the air. If successfully opened, the PCs find an intact skeleton and a variety of grave goods. While the clothing has disintegrated into mere scraps of linen, a few more durable items of value remain. Disturbing the tomb inevitably wakens the skeleton.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 tough skeleton: SZ M; AL N; AC 7; MV 120'; HD 3; HP 20; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (short sword+1). Special defenses: immune to sleep, charm, hold, and cold; cutting and piercing weapons do half damage; turned as a ghoul.

Treasure:

Three black pearls worth 360 gp each; a jade necklace with the Krakteros sigil on it (worth 500 gp); and the short sword +1 that the skeleton wields.

3-17: Hidden Tomb

Observant PCs may notice (2 in 6 chance when passing this section of the Halls) that the trash in front of this section of wall has been disturbed in a regular pattern. The disturbance is a clue to the secret chamber which is accessed through a 3'x5' secret panel at the rear of the third niche up from the floor on this section of wall. The secret panel is relatively obvious to anyone who looks inside the niche (+1 to chances to detect). Once located, the panel slides easily to the left.

The first PC to squeeze through the secret door is in for a nasty surprise, as the ghouls lurking within will attack hungrily, and with surprise if the PCs have not listened before entering (4 in 6 chances to surprise).

The chamber is an elaborate burial chamber for two of the earliest Thoth worshippers. It features two stone sarcophagi (albeit with burst lids), some still-intact grave goods, and pristine wall frescoes depicting Thoth and the donors. Indeed, once plied with a light, the walls shine with vibrant color.

The walls are ornately decorated with six large images, their description and meaning follows.

1. Ibis-headed Thoth worshipped by orange-robed priests. One of the most common images of Thoth was as an ibis-headed person (c.f. his cult statues at AV-15 and 3-2). Orange robes with cylindrical headdresses indicate Thoth priests.
2. Humans and baboons beat crocodiles with clubs while a serene ibis watches the scene. The iconography is meant to show the triumph of Thoth (the baboons) over Set (crocodile).
3. A baboon crouching in the 'scribe' position (knees pulled to chest), with a book open on its knees. The left paw of the baboon is raised in greeting. Thoth was associated with Maat, whose image was the white feather. This is a clue to the efficacy of the feathers of Maat found at 3-19 in repelling the undead of the catacombs (3-22).
4. A stream of humans bringing goods to the feet of an orange-robed pair of Thoth priests, over whom looms another enormous ibis. The intention is simple: the devout followers of Thoth should prepare suitable donations to his priests.
5. Ibis-headed Thoth walks beside a woman bearing a white feather in her hand; to either side are sarcophagi. Thoth was associated with Maat, whose image was the white feather. A clue to the efficacy of the feathers of Maat found at 3-19 in repelling the undead of the catacombs (3-22).
6. Ibis-headed Thoth holds the reins of a chariot in his outstretched left hand. At Thoth's side is a rayed orb. The chariot travels through the sky, above adoring orange-clad priests. The Archontean cult of Thoth associated him with bringing the light of knowledge, and saw him as the driver of the solar chariot. A reference to the Litany of Light (see 2-2 through 2-5).

Sarcophagi: The two sarcophagi are made of basalt and inscribed with scenes of humans worshiping Thoth and of baboons beating crocodiles with sticks. They are incredibly heavy (500 lb each) and might bring 2,500 gp each.

Inhabitants:

1. 4 ghouls: SZ M; AL CE; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 13, 12, 11, 11, 10; #AT 3; Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-6. Special attacks: paralysis. Special defenses: immune to sleep and charm.

Treasure:

4 large (4' high, 50 lb each) alabaster urns, possibly worth 225 gp each; two rings, each a ring of friendly defense (white gold) (see new magic items), inscribed Ruritanus and Aethelgifu, respectively (command word: 'Amici'); 16 ancient gold solidi, 2,316 ancient copper bits, and 1,135 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items for coins); a spear +1 with lapis inlay on the haft; and two silver torcs, each inscribed with an ibis head and a cornucopia (each is worth 70 gp, together they are worth 280 gp). The rest - sacks of food, wooden furniture, and elaborate costumes - have decayed into dust and fragments.

3-18: Hall of Judges

This oval chamber served as the entry point to the main mortuary areas (at 3-21 and 3-22). It contains four massive pillars holding up a domed roof. Light may be glimpsed through the open archway to the north.

Each of the four pillars has been carved into the likeness of one of the four gods of the dead. To the northeast is Osiris, god of the dead, in the form of a bearded human with tall conical cap, holding two scepters across his chest. To the northwest is snake-headed Wadjet, the protector goddess. To the southwest is Maat, wife of Thoth, bearing in her hands the feather with which souls were judged. To the southeast is Thoth in his ibis-headed form. These pillar-statues are 30' tall and incredibly imposing. The walls of the chamber contain frescoes depicting the judgment of the dead and the rule of Osiris in the afterlife. Currently there is nothing else of interest in this chamber.

3-19: Feathers of Justice

This chamber is brightly lit from a continual light spell cast on the ceiling. The entire area detects strongly of magic.

All three walls are painted with brightly colored frescoes. On each wall the main image depicts a female deity (Maat) with an ostrich feather in her hair handing a feather to a small human worshipper. Other humans bear the feathers before them as they walk into a crypt. In the background of each of these images is Thoth the recorder. The upper register of each wall shows worshippers beseeching Maat with outstretched hands, while the lower registers show demons, monsters and crocodiles.

In the center of the chamber is a dais that rises 3' above the floor. It is made of white marble (contrasting with the regular stone). On top of the dais is a solid 10'x5' onyx table. Suspended in the air above the center of the table is a white ostrich feather. It can easily be grasped; if removed from its place, another feather appears immediately.

These feathers of Maat have the magical property of repelling undead, although they only work effectively in the precincts of the temple of Thoth. To be used properly, a feather should be placed in the hair or carried in one's outstretched hand.

3-20: Antechamber

Four slim stone columns separate this former guard post from the hallway. An adventurer's corpse lies in the darkness of the guard post. She has not been discovered by the halflings, and still carries some of her equipment.

Treasure:

Leather armor, 16 gp, 34 sp, 44 cp, a potion of invisibility, and a potion of diminution.

3-21: Catacombs Entrance, with Stairs Leading Up to Level 2 (2-15)

This circular hall is the funnel point for those entering or leaving Thoth's catacombs (3-22). As such it contains the levers used to raise and lower several sets of iron portcullises designed to prevent intruders from disturbing the dead. In addition, the portcullises currently function to prevent the waking dead from infesting the rest of the complex. The four curved sections of wall each feature the same image: Thoth as an ibis-headed man presenting a scroll to woman carrying an ankh and wearing a headdress shaped like a throne (Isis). This scene represents the belief that Thoth conveyed to Isis the secret words that allowed resurrection of the dead.

In the center of the room is a low dais out of which protrude three iron levers. Each lever controls one of the portcullises. The levers are all a bit stiff, and there is a 5% per use that one will break.

Portcullises: all three are currently in the down position. They can be opened using the levers, or via a normal lift gates roll.

Stairs to Level 2: the southern hallway leads to a short hallway and then a long staircase leading up 125' to Level 2 (2-15).

3-22: Catacombs of Thoth

Lesser, but still honored, devotees of Thoth were buried in this twisting maze of passages. The 15'-high corridors contain eight burial niches per 10'x15' section of wall; these niches lack plugs and are thus open to the passages. The niches contain bones, the occasional mummified corpse, and bits of lesser grave goods. The observant might notice that the walls and floors of the catacombs are remarkably free from dust and general trash (due to the gelatinous cube).

Those desirous of searching every niche will be in for a long slog: it takes 3-6 turns to search each 10'-wide wall section. Each turn PCs spend searching provokes a 1-in-8 chance of finding something interesting:

D20	Result
1-4	holy symbol of Thoth: 75% silver worth 5 gp, 20% gold worth 50 gp, 5% platinum worth 250 gp.
5-6	1-3 glass beads, 50% chance colored like eyes
7-8	rusted iron (50%) or bronze (50%) fittings; no value
9-10	an ancient weapon (small size), 75% chance it is rusted beyond use
11-12	1-6 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items)
13-14	a copper torque, worth 10-100 cp
15-16	an enameled plaque, with the name of an ancient family written in Mithric. 10% chance this name leads to an adventure seed of GM's choice
17-18	a bit of adventuring gear, stored by a long-departed party: ex: rope, oil, rations, spikes, marbles, chalk, grappling hook, etc.
19	a gem worth 50-500 gp (GM determines type)
20	a scroll: 25% map, 25% lore, 50% 1-4 spells

The Waking Dead: Extended searching may prove fatal, however, as the dead in the Catacombs of Thoth do not rest easily. After any living creature has spent 1-4 turns in the Catacombs, the dead will start rising. Roll on the Waking Dead table to see what sort of undead appear, and then on the Distance table to see how far away they are. Each additional turn spent in the catacombs requires an additional roll on the table. Possession of a feather of Maat (possibly obtained in 3-19) will render one immune from the fatal attraction of the undead. Note that each member of a group must have a feather in order for that party to be truly immune.

D20	Waking Dead Type
1-4	False alarm (nothing)
5-12	3-6 skeletons
13-19	2-5 zombies
20	Special. Roll d4: 1: 4-18 zombies 2: 2-5 ghouls 3: 1-3 ghaunts 4: 1-2 wights

D10	Distance from PCs
1-2	30'
3-4	50'
5-6	70'
7-8	90'
9-10	Just outside area 3-21

The waking of any of these undead will be accompanied by a loud clatter and a thump, which PCs may well hear (depending on their distance from the new foe).

In addition to the waking dead, a very old gelatinous cube roams these corridors. When the catacombs are first entered, the cube will be at the far western edge, near the hole into which the Set cultists sometimes dump garbage (i.e., near 3-113). It is attracted by noise (like combat), and pursues intruders relentlessly.

Inhabitants:

- 3-6 skeletons: SZ M; AL N; AC 7; MV 120'; HD 1; HP 8, 7, 6, 6, 5, 4; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special defenses: immune to sleep, charm, hold, and cold; cutting and piercing weapons do half damage.
- 2-5 zombies: SZ M; AL N; AC 8; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 15, 13, 10, 9, 8; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8. Special: always strike last.
- 1-3 ghaunts: SZ M; AL CE; AC 4; MV 150'; HD 4; HP 25, 23, 21; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-8. Special attacks: stench; paralysis. Special defenses: immune to sleep and charm
- 2-5 ghouls: SZ M; AL CE; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 13, 12, 11, 11, 10; #AT 3; Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-6. Special attacks: paralysis. Special defenses: immune to sleep and charm.
- 1-2 wights: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 4+3; HP 29, 27; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4. Special attacks: energy drain. Special defenses: silver or magic needed to hit; immune to sleep, charm, hold, cold, poison, and paralysis.
- 1 ancient gelatinous cube: SZ L; AL N; AC 8; MV 60'; HD 5; HP 35; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8. Special attacks: paralysis; surprise on 1-3. Special defenses: partial immunity to cold; immune to electricity, fear, hold, paralyzation, polymorph, and sleep.

Treasure:

The waking dead have no treasure. Inside the gelatinous cube, however, are the following: 43 gp, a 90 gp garnet, a 230 gp emerald, and a wand of polymorph with 3 charges.

Note on Further Play: Should the portcullises at 3-21 be left ajar, the gelatinous cube should be added to the list of random encounters for Level 3. The halflings are aware of the undead in this region, but do not know of the cube. The Set cultists know of both the undead and the cube. The beastmen know of neither.

3-22A: Stairs Down to Sub-Level 12 (SL12-20)

Secret Door: The door is difficult to detect from the catacombs (1 in 8), since it is found within one of the burial niches. The door is thus a 3'-square panel that opens inward to 3-22A. It opens from the catacomb side by pushing a ½"-diameter rod into a hole in the door. Kerbog Khan's automatons have such rods as part of their makeup, and can thus open the door to return to the workshops.

Stairs descend about 200' before reaching Sub-Level 12 (SL12-20). Halfway down the stairs is the corpse of a magic user; his spirit is now a wraith, which lurks on the ceiling.

Inhabitant:

- 1 wraith (see text at SL12-20): SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 120'; 240' flying (Class B); HD 5+3; HP 36; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: energy drain. Special defenses: silver or magic weapons to hit; immune to sleep, charm, hold, cold, poison, and paralysis.

3-23: Treasure Hoard

This complex holds the hidden treasury of the cult of Thoth. It has not been discovered in the 1,200 years since the collapse of Arden Vul, and the amount of wealth and magic here is prodigious.

Tunnel from 3-2: When all three cult statues (3-2, 3-15, and 3-40) are manipulated such that the left arm is parallel to the ground, then the statue at 3-2 will silently glide backwards revealing a set of stone stairs leading down. The stairs descend 20' to a narrow tunnel, 5' wide by 5' tall. The tunnel is undecorated, and may seem to be unimportant at first glimpse. After an hour all three statues revert to their original, 'start' positions, and the statue at 3-2 glides back to cover the staircase. An iron lever at the foot of the stairs allows those within the treasure chambers to force all three statues back into 'open' position.

3-23A: Antechamber

The tunnel from 3-2 ends in a simple door covered with a fresco of an ibis. A trap guards the unlocked door. Inside is a guardian of Thoth (see new monsters).

Trap (poison dart): Opening the door triggers a poison dart. It inflicts 1-3 HP damage plus poison; the poison is mostly degraded and a failed save only knocks characters unconscious for 1-4 hours, awakening with 1 hp.

Inhabitants:

- 1 guardian of Thoth (see new monsters): SZ M; AL LN; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 3; HP 20; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-6. Special attacks: shriek. Special defenses: darkness 3/day.

3-23B: Hall of Thoth

The walls of this 20'-tall chamber contain a repetitive fresco - of a baboon staring straight at the viewer. The floor is covered with coins ... literally covered. There are easily 200,000 ancient copper bits and 15,000 ancient silver pennies here, among which are scattered 5,000 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items for coins). Among the wealth are two cursed pennies (see new magic items). A lot of containers, much time, and much labor are needed to remove 220,000 coins. The halflings (3-3 to 3-6, if still around) will certainly take notice of any attempt to remove such a massive quantity of loot.

A statue of a seated Thoth stands in the center of all the coins. The ibis-headed god broods, hunched over with chin in both hands. The body is made of blue marble, while the ibis head is of alabaster. Two jet black gems gleam in the eye-sockets; they worth 1,000 gp each if pried out, although they will impart a curse upon anyone (prier, holder, seller) who possesses them: anyone so cursed will a) always be surprised in combat; and b) will always lose initiative in combat. The curse may be removed by a remove curse spell cast by a 12th- or higher level cleric.

Secret Doors (northeast): Two of the staring baboon frescoes conceal secret doors. The doors are normal to find and open when the eyes of the appropriate baboon are pressed simultaneously.

3-24: Secret Treasury

Behind the secret doors lie the major treasures of the cult of Thoth. Among the treasures are the following:

- 3 solid gold statuettes (of a cat, an ibis, and a baboon) worth 900 gp each (weighing 15 lb each);
- a gilt wooden bed, now decayed (but with gilding worth 75 gp);
- 6 jade canopic jars worth 185 gp each (10 lb each);
- 8 crystal vases, from 1' to 5' in height (100-600 gp each, but fragile)
- a set of 12 death-masks made of hammered silver and adorned with crystals; these are of the first 12 high priests of Thoth. The masks are worth 500-2,000 gp each to imperial collectors/historians. There is a 1% chance per mask that a demon is entrapped in the mask.
- 2 Set animal masks taken from their rivals in antiquity (see new magic items)
- Enameled reliquary #1: showing scenes of the deeds of Arden and Vul, containing a femur said to be that of Arden. The bone is a fake, but the relic could easily be sold for 350 gp anyway.
- Enameled reliquary #2: showing the three mysteries of Thoth (3-9, 3-10, and 3-11) and containing a human hand and some odd dust (dust of dryness). Worth 175 gp.
- Enameled reliquary #3: showing the three obelisks in the city; a ray emanates from each and the three join at a sunken door. The bottom panel depicts a silver ankh. Inside are a pair of fully charged rudishva lesser power supplies (see new technological items) and 2 silver ankh-keys (see Arden Vul items). The reliquary is worth 250 gp. GM Note: this is a hint to the operation of the obelisks of AV-5, AV-41, and AV-28; doing so opens the doors at AV-34 that lead to the Chamber of the Beacon (SL14-1).
- 6 elaborately wrought eggs made of platinum, gold, and lapis. Each is worth 1,000 gp. One is a puzzle-egg; if the puzzle is solved, it opens to reveal a massive black pearl (5,000 gp).
- 13 potions: extra healing x3; invisibility; invulnerability; growth; treasure finding; super-heroism; elixir of youth;

clairaudience; speed; fire breath; watery form (see new magic items)

- harp of charming, made of ebony inset with ivory. The harp is full-sized (8' tall) and heavy.
- gauntlets of ogre power
- tome of understanding
- A deluxe, folio copy of the Litany of Light (see areas 2-2 through 2-5; worth 475 gp)
- a huge codex entitled the First History of the Order of Thoth in Arden Vul (see Arden Vul books)
- a parchment codex listing the names of all 239 high priests of Thoth, a few with annotations. Worth 250 gp.
- a treatise entitled On the Errors of the Sortians (see Arden Vul books)
- clerical scrolls: holy name (see new spells), spiritual weapon, remove curse, dispel magic, cure serious wounds, raise dead, neutralize poison, sun's gift (see new spells)
- magic user scrolls: Frigg's caustic kisses (see new spells), ray of enfeeblement, blink, fireball, tiny hut, wall of fire, dimension door, stone shape, Pol's improved eye (see new spells)
- illusionist scrolls: darkness, gaze reflection, improved phantasmal force, ultravision, fear, wraithform, emotion phantasmal killer, maze

3-25: Skeletal Baboons

A wooden cupboard is the only piece of furniture to have survived in this former priest's chamber, and that only barely. Inside it are some bits of parchment, including one inscribed with a cleric spell. The priest's two baboon guards have risen as skeletons.

Inhabitants:

2 skeletal baboons: AC 7; MV 120'; HD 2, HP 15, 15; attacks: 1; Damage: 1-6 (bite); ½ damage from edged or piercing weapons. The two skeletons will rush the same character.

Treasure:

Scroll of sanctuary.

3-26: Foyer

This former foyer is unremarkable save for the illusory wall in the northeast corner. An elf or a dwarf has a 1 in 6 chance of noting that something about the room is 'off'. Otherwise the illusory wall may only be detected by physical inspection.

3-27: Stairs Up to Level 1-21

This dusty chamber is hidden behind the illusory wall in 3-26; it contains a stone circular stairway leading up to Level 1 (1-21).

3-28: Guard Barracks

One rather decrepit wooden chest lurks among the ruins of this former barracks. This chest may easily be kicked open - inside are some rotted clothing, a blue glass activation square (see Thothian teleportation rings in new magic items), and a jasper gem.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 zombies: SZ M; AL N; AC 8; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 12, 9; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8. Special: always strike last.

Treasure:

Jasper gem (125 gp), blue glass activation square (see Thothian teleportation rings in new magic items).

3-29: Antechamber

This antechamber has not been disturbed for centuries. Brilliant frescoes of Thoth decorate its walls, while a thin layer of dust covers the floor. A wooden desk and chair are set in the center of the room and gleam with a gold leaf veneer - they crumble into dust if touched, leaving bits of gold leaf worth 150 gp to the careful collector. The north door leads to an undecorated stone passage that ends in a one-way stone door into 3-26.

Treasure:

Gold leaf (150 gp).

3-30: Guardpost

A thick layer of trash fills this former guard post. This portion of the complex is made of unadorned, but neatly fitted, stonework.

3-31: Empty Guardpost

Identical to 3-30. A rotted pouch containing 13 sp, and a 100 gp aquamarine lies buried under the trash accumulated in the southeast corner.

3-32: Guardpost

Currently the only inhabitant of this former guard post is the skeleton of an elf, staked to the wall in the eastern niche. The skeleton is inanimate, and carries no possessions. A thick layer of dust covers the floor, but halfling-sized footprints lead north towards 3-34.

3-33: Floating Head

A 2'-deep pile of trash completely covers the floor of this small side room. Floating above the junk is a life-sized, bronze bust of a bearded man of noble mien, albeit with empty eye sockets; his lips are pursed as if in the midst of speech. In fact this is a Sortian portable sage (special knowledge in Archontean politics & genealogy, and in divination - see new magic items) that was seized by imperial authorities in the last days of Archontean rule. As the temple and archonal authorities lacked the command word, they had difficulty moving the head, and it was abandoned here. The command word necessary to activate it is on the corpse found in 3-169. The head could be moved by powerful magic (e.g. teleport), but would still be inert until the command word is intuited.

Underneath the pile of trash is hidden a set of 2"-tall paving stones arranged in a 6'-diameter ring. Inset into the floor next to the ring is a rectangle 48" long by 8" tall; the rectangle is divided into six interior compartments, each 8" square. Together these elements form a Thothian teleportation ring (see new magic items). To activate the ring, one must place six colored glass activation squares into the inset according to a sequence that matches the 'address' of the ring to which one wishes to travel. Once the squares are placed, a brief shimmer of energy is visible over the ring. At this point the user has 1 round to collect the squares and enter the ring, after which anyone in the ring is teleported without error to address indicated by that sequence of squares. If the glass activation squares are not collected and/or if the travelers do not possess a second set of them, they are likely to be stranded in the location to which they have just teleported. The address of this ring is as follows: YE-BL-GR-RE-BK-WH (see new magic items for explanation).

Sadly, none of the glass activation squares necessary to operate the ring can be found in the trash.

3-34: Scrutiny of Thoth

A continual light spell was cast here years ago, at the center of the 15'-tall ceiling. The chamber is plastered, and features sixteen large (15'-tall by 5'-wide) images of ibis heads staring at the center of the chamber. The sapphire-blue eyes of each ibis were painted such that each pair appears to be staring at the point marked X on the map. A thick layer of dust is found in the chamber, with halfling-sized footprints leading south (to 3-32) and west (through the door at 3-30).

The four ibis heads on the north wall flanking the door to 3-35 have peep holes about 5' up. These are easily identified by anyone looking at the frescoes.

The bronze double-doors to the north are elaborately carved, with ibises, baboons, humans, scrolls, and strange objects. A bronze keyhole and lock appears on the right-most valve; from its size, the key must be very large (8 inches or more). The doors are locked, and stuck. Only the key will unlock them from this side. The key may currently be found in the possession of the Set deacon in 3-89A.

3-35: Hall of Scrutiny

The bronze double doors (3-34) on the south wall are locked, and the key is found in 3-89A. A former guard post and administrative facility, this chamber prevented unauthorized access to the secrets found to the east (3-40, 3-45). A 2"-thick layer of dust covers the floor. No footprints are evident, even though the corpse of a recently slain adventurer lies against the south wall and a brazen halberd leans against the north wall. A deadly dust monster (see new monsters) is concealed amid the dust. The plastered walls are a peaceful aqua green.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 small dust monster (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 0; MV 90'; HD 4, HP 24; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: suffocation; blinding. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; half damage from blunt magical weapons.

Treasure:

The brazen halberd is an enchanted weapon known as Set's Bane (see new magic items)

Adventurer's body: a gaudy gold signet ring with "Gregor" inscribed around a smiling face (100 gp), a full flask of water, and a potion of gaseous form.

3-36A: Tomb of Hithra Paleologos: Hidden Vestibule

At the very tip of the chasm, concealed behind the spiders' webs (see 3-37 for information on the spiders), is a concealed door. It leads to narrow passage of simple granite, roughly shaped. At the end is a small chamber, devoid of furnishings save a 7'-diameter hole in the floor. This hole leads down 25' to the ancient and deadly tomb of Hithra Paleologos. Scrawled on the wall behind the hole is some graffiti: in Mithric, "Danger! Do not Pass!" and in Archontean "Return with the Fruits of Lord Priscus's Wisdom before further Exploration."

3-36B: Tomb of Hithra Paleologos: Tiled and Trapped Entrance

The hole from 3-36 drops into a cramped triangular chamber sheathed in 1"-square orange and purple tiles. In eighteen locations on the walls, the tiles appear to be arranged in patterns of 64 alternating squares (i.e., in a checkerboard patterns). Many of the tiles are inscribed with runes representing traditional Archontean chess pieces.

The west wall contains the door to 3-36C in the form of a 5'-diameter circle made of blue granite. The door is magically barred with hold portal (cast by a 12th-level mage) and is trapped. Several inscriptions and images appear on the door. At the top of the circular plug are a pair of orange, heavily-lidded eyes which appear to stare at visitors. Just below the eyes the following phrase (in Mithric) is incised with gold fill into the stone: "Hithra the Paleologos Rests Within. Visitors are Unwanted." Finally, below the inscription are two rows of five glyphs; the top row of glyphs glows with orange light, while the bottom row glows with purple light. The glyphs in each row depict, in order, a rod of command (Archon = king), a sinuous winged serpent (Dragon = queen), a robed figure making a blessing (High Priest = bishop), a robed figure performing an incantation (Sorcerer = knight), and a gladius (Legionary = pawn).

Opening the Door: The glyphs must be touched in the proper sequence for the door to open. That sequence is this:

1. orange High Priest
2. purple Sorcerer
3. orange Legionary
4. purple Archon.

A clue to this sequence may be found on the surrounding walls, as described below.

Trap: In addition to being magically held, the door is trapped. Any touching it casually will receive a jolt of magical force for 1-3 damage. Anyone who touches the glyphs in any but the proper order receives successively more powerful jolts, starting at 1-6 and increasing by 1-6 for each 'wrong' sequence. The sequence of jolts resets to 1-6 damage after an hour.

Opening the door, and avoiding the trap, will be made much easier if observers spend time examining the chessboards that cover the southwest and northwest walls. There are 18 distinct boards represented on these walls, with the pieces arranged differently on each. Despite the variety in the placement and survival of pieces, all 18 boards share the same likely fate: the pieces are arranged in such a way that an orange High Priest will take a purple Sorcerer and thus enable an orange Legionary to place the purple archon into checkmate. It takes an observer with expertise in chess, or a successful roll of 3d8 under INT to recognize this fact.

3-36C: Tomb of Hithra Paleologos: Main Tomb

The star-shaped tomb is brightly lit by a continual light spell. Its walls are white marble and its floor is particolored marble. The central 20'x20' section of floor is designed to resemble a chessboard, with 2.5'-square tiles of alternating orange and purple marble. Stone doors in the form of 5'-diameter circle occupy the three truncated points of the star. Brightly painted, 3'-tall terracotta game pieces in the Archontean style - Archon (=king), Dragon (=queen), High Priest (=bishop), Sorcerer (=knight), Cataphract (=rook), and Legionary (=pawn) - stand in their home positions on each side of the board. In the center of the board, lying between the two sets of pieces, stands a 6'x4'x4' stone bier on top of which rests a corpse dressed in the orange ceremonial robes of Thoth. The entire area radiates magic, and, from the bier, evil.

Several effects may be activated by those who interact with various components of the tomb.

Bier: The corpse on the bier is not that of Hithra Paleologos (who rests in 3-36E), but is rather that of a skeleton warrior named Kalifer who was bound by Hithra and has been languishing here for more than a millennium. Although Kalifer is aware of all intruders as soon as the chamber is entered, he uses his intelligence to his advantage and waits, unmoving, until the intruders take action. Kalifer desperately and single-mindedly desires the return of the golden circlet with which Hithra bound him, and thus all his actions are directed towards this end. How he reacts depends on what the intruders do:

1. Intruders poke or otherwise disturb his body: Kalifer attacks
2. Intruders activate guardians in areas 3-36D by moving chess pieces to new squares: Kalifer bides his time
3. Intruders take no action within 2 turns, or appear exceptionally cautious and/or intelligent: Kalifer sits up and negotiates with intruders for their assistance in obtaining his circlet

[GM Note: Kalifer is immune to the powders contained in the chess pieces, so in combat he will not shrink from smashing open as many pieces as possible.]

Chess Pieces: Each chess piece is beautifully shaped and painted, and is hollow. Within each piece is a huge pearl worth 1,000 gp and a stash of fine, dust-like powder; each type of piece contains its own type of powder (see below). Should a piece be broken, the powder is released into a 20'-diameter cloud which affects any within it.

Piece Type	Powder Effect
Archon	Poison: save at +4 or die
Dragon	Paralysis: save at +2 or be held for 1 turn
High Priest	Sleep: save at +2
Sorcerer	Confusion: save at +4
Cataphract	Choking: save at -1 or -3 to all rolls
Legionary	Obscuring: save or -1 to all rolls, vision obscured to 10'

Trap: The chessboard and pieces are trapped. Should any chess piece be moved to another square on the board, two events occur. First, a volley of 8 steel darts will be ejected from the ceiling aimed at randomly determined squares on the board. Second, the stone doors to areas 3-36D swing open, releasing their inhabitants. Each of the darts is aimed at a different square, and will unerringly hit whatever is in a square. If nothing is present in a square, the dart is wasted. In the case in which both an adventurer and a chess piece are in the same square, it is the adventurer that receives the dart. Darts do 1-4 HP damage to flesh-and-blood creatures, but easily break open the chess pieces, thereby releasing the appropriate powder into the air. A total of 96 darts may be fired (i.e., 12 volleys of 8).

Secret Door: The secret door on the southwestern wall is normal to detect, but can only be opened when the purple Archon chess piece is destroyed. Otherwise the only way to open the door is to bash it open.

Notes: Clever intruders may realize that chess pieces may be removed from the board without penalty. Such a strategy is indeed wise, for it may help minimize the destruction of pieces. Still, both the inhabitants of 3-36D and Kalifer are aware of the properties of the powder and will certainly take the time to destroy pieces adjacent to them in combat; they may also (50%) elect to spend a combat round specifically destroying 1-3 pieces.

Inhabitants:

1. Kalifer, a skeleton warrior: SZ M; AL N(E); AC 0; MV 60'; HD 9+2; HP 66; #AT 1; Dmg 1-10 (two-handed sword); MR 90%. Special attacks: +3 to hit; cause fear. Special defenses: cannot be turned. Possessions: Kalifer's sword (see new magic items); earring of protection +2 (see new magic items).
2. (Possibly): creatures from 3-36D

Treasure:

32 huge pearls worth 1,000 gp each; Kalifer's sword (see new magic items); earring of protection +2.

3-36D: Tomb of Hithra Paleologos: Side Chambers

The doors to these three triangular chambers are 5'-diameter circular plugs of stone. Each door is locked and detects of magic. Should any of the chess pieces in 3-36C be moved to a different square on the board, all three doors pop open and the Archontean animated constructs (chessmen) (see new monsters) leap through the doors into Hithra's tomb. It is also possible to open the doors by picking the locks (if no chess pieces have been moved); doing so reveals three identical chambers of natural stone, in the center of each of which stands a 4'-tall stone chessman; each takes the form of the High Priest. The chessmen only animate and attack if the chess pieces in 3-36C are moved to a different square on the board, regardless of whether the doors to their chambers are opened. Note: if engaged in combat, the chessmen may (50% per round) elect to destroy 1-3 of the terra cotta pieces instead of striking a living opponent.

Inhabitants:

1. 3 Archontean animated constructs – chessmen (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 2; MV 60'; HD 6; HP 45, 39, 35; #AT

1; Dmg 4-11; MR 25%. Special defenses: immune to elemental magic, poison, and mind-affecting spells; +1 or better weapons to hit; half damage from slashing or piercing weapons.

3-36E: Tomb of Hithra Paleologos: Secret Tomb and Treasury

The secret door from 3-36C leads to a small chamber. There the body of Hithra Paleologos rests on another 3'-tall stone bier, surrounded by substantial treasure. Next to the body stands an elaborate gold and opal goblet (250 gp), from which Hithra sipped the poison that ended his long life. Hithra is dressed in the orange silk robes of a high priest of Thoth, although his cylindrical headdress of office is nowhere to be found. Instead a golden circlet inset with huge emeralds rests on his brow; this is the control circlet for Kalifer the skeleton warrior (3-36C). His desiccated left hand bears a large, gaudy, silver ring with an immense topaz. The ring is worth 650 gp, and a secret compartment behind the topaz contains two doses of lethal poison. Hithra's right hand clutches a rudishva useful palm (size adjustment; see new magic items). The palm has 3 charges left. Despite what intruders may fear, Hithra's body remains inanimate.

To one side of the bier is a low wooden bookcase, rotted with age. In it rest a dozen notebooks, each labeled "Games and Strategies of Hithra the Paleologos, vol. [1 to 12]". These volumes contain detailed notes and moves from scores of chess games that Hithra played over a period of 40 years, all of which took place about 1,200 years ago in the period when the city and temples of Arden Vul fell into chaos. Volume 12 is devoted to games against "Kel Bormol the Overseer, that cheating, untrustworthy snake!". The last 10 games versus Kel Bormol are all losses, and the final entry includes a few frustrated notes: "He anticipates my every move! He must be cheating! We shall see how he likes a dose of my Useful Palm! I will offer to play him in his chambers above the Great Hall, and will even let him play orange for once. Let him attempt to cheat the Paleologos once more! He shall regret it ..." GM Note: All of this is a reference to Hithra's betrayal of his sometime friend, Kel Bormol, a story recounted in more detail at Sub-Level 3, area SL3-2A.

To the other side of the bier are 3 heavy and large alabaster jars filled with treasure.

Treasure:

- Gold and opal goblet (250 gp).
- Control circlet for Kalifer the skeleton warrior (3-36C).
- Gaudy silver ring set with a topaz (650 gp), concealing two doses of poison.
- A rudishva useful palm (size adjustment; see new magic items), with 3 charges.
- Three alabaster jars carved with chess motifs, worth 500 gp each (although heavy at 70 lb each).
- First alabaster jar: 8,000 ancient silver pennies. Mixed in with them is a silver ankh-key (see Arden Vul items for both).
- Second alabaster jar: 4,000 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items), plus a dozen rubies (500-6,000 gp each).
- Third alabaster jar: six potions in a leather carrying case (climbing, heroism, healing, fire resistance, human control, sweet water), a Thothian passkey (see Arden Vul items), a mace +2, and a suit of chain mail +2.

3-37: Spiders from Above

The northwest point of the Great Chasm (3-38) is the lair of some spiders. The nest includes six spiders, five huge and one giant. They have woven a web in the corner of the chasm, up about 20' from the level of the dungeon floor. The spiders roam throughout the chasm and any caves accessible from it. As a result, adventurers are likely to encounter only some of the spiders at any given time:

d6 Roll	# of Spiders
1	2 huge spiders
2	3 huge spiders
3	4 huge spiders
4	1 giant spider
5	1 giant spider and 2 huge spiders
6	The whole nest!

Inhabitants:

- 5 huge spiders: SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 180'; HD 2+2; HP 16, 15, 13, 11; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: surprise 1-5; poison (+1 to saves); can leap up to 30'.
- 1 giant spider: SZ L; AL CE; AC 4; MV 30', 120' in web; HD 4+4; HP 32, 29, 25; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8. Special attacks: poison.

Treasure:

110 gp in two belt pouches, a white opal worth 200 gp, a potion of frost cage (see new magic items), and a scroll with 3 magic user spells (magic missile, sleep, ray of enfeeblement).

3-38: The Great Chasm

One of the iconic features of the Halls, this massive fissure extends through most of the dungeon levels and provides a sure, if difficult, means of vertical navigation of the Halls. The fissure is generally shaped like a triangular prism, with its apex about 50' above Level 2. The triangular prism extends downward 1,600' through the Halls until it levels out at the floor of the chasm (9-1) many hundreds of feet below.

Most adventurers will first encounter the chasm at Level 3. From Level 3 it requires some careful spelunking to traverse the chasm upwards or downwards; ropes, pitons, and/or fly spells offer the surest way to navigate the chasm. Lower down the chasm (e.g., 5-34) the prevalence of cave vines, creepers, and lichen mats provides some assistance to such ventures, but at this height plant life is relatively rare.

Random encounters on Level 3 use the Upper Zone table; roll every 3 turns, with a 1 in 6 chance for an encounter.

Great Chasm, Upper Zone

D100	Encounter
1-15	Noise, unusual
16-20	3 off-white (with greenish motes), quicksilver-like heqeti slimes (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 5' creeping; HD 2; HP 11, 9, 9; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6; MR 15%. Special attacks: flesh-eating for 4-7 rounds; corrosive to metal, wood and leather. Special defenses: healed by electricity or lasers; slowed by cold

21-30	3-12 giant rats: SZ S; AL N(E); AC 7; MV 120'; HD 1-4 HP; HP 4(x3), 3(x3), 2(x3), 1(x3); #At 1; Dmg 1-3. Special attacks: 5% chance of disease
31-35	Spiders, either 3-6 large (50%) or 2-4 huge (50%) 1. 3-6 large spiders: SZ S; AL N; AC 8; MV 60'; 150' in web; HD 1+1; HP 7, 7, 6, 5, 4, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1. Special attacks: poison (+2 to saves) 2. 2-4 huge spiders: SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 180'; HD 2+2; HP 15, 15, 13, 11; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: surprise 1-5; poison (+1 to saves); can leap up to 30'
36-40	1-4 albino baboons climbing walls
41-45	6-8 giant centipedes: SZ S; AL N; AC 9; MV 150'; HD 1 or 2 HP; HP 2(x4), 1(x4); #AT 1; Dmg n.a. Special attacks: poison (+4 to save).
46-55	Party of NPC adventurers (select from NPC appendix)
56-65	3 mantari: SZ S; AL NE; AC 9; MV 180' flying (Class C); HD 1+1; HP 8, 6, 6; #AT 1; Dmg special. Special attacks: sting (inflicts HP equal to 19-victim's CON); if a PC is hit on a 2 nd consecutive round, damage from the sting is quadrupled

Chasm Color:

The GM might decide to play up the creepy and mysterious nature of the chasm. Roll every 3 turns, with a 1 in 6 chance for a chasm sound effect.

D8	Noise/Effect
1	Loud hissing
2	Moaning (of the wind?)
3	A roar
4	A shriek
5	A loud clap (a sharp, brief noise)
6	An echoing voice (undecipherable)
7	A flash of bright light for 3 second
8	Fluting, of a tuneless sort

3-39: Tomb of Artax-Ris

The wall of the chasm at this point is covered with creepers (benign) which conceal the opening to this tomb. The entrance is a circular piece of stone, 10' in diameter. On it is carved the rudishva glyph for protection, along with some runic-style letters in crude Archontean. They read: "Artax-Ris does not wish to be disturbed." To open the door, one must depress the protection glyph; doing so, however, may trigger a trap. When the glyph is pressed, the entire disk of stone will roll to the right, opening the tunnel into the tomb. After 1 hour the disk will grind shut. Both the entrance and the tomb are 20' tall.

Trap (rudishva protection glyph): Touching the glyph without taking proper precautions triggers an electric discharge that does 3-18 HP damage to all within 20'. To avoid the trap, one must cover the glyph with cloth or other organic material before depressing it; flesh or metal triggers the trap instantly.

The resting place of Artax-Ris is distinctly different from the rest of the level, since it does not boast the usual Archontean and/or Thothian motifs. Instead, the entrance hallway and inner chamber are each tiled with 6"-square lapis lazuli tiles. Each tile bears a golden bead in its center. When light enters the tomb, the beads reflect the light in an almost blinding way.

The 10'-long entrance passageway holds four desiccated skeletons: two are of ancient Thothian priests, while the other two are of more recent adventurers.

The entrance hall opens into a 20'x15' chamber. A set of the lapis tiles on the east wall have had their golden beads stripped away, and a crude inscription in Mithric has been painted across them: "Do not disturb Lord Artax-Ris. The Prior forbids it." Resting on the floor of the chamber is a strange 'sarcophagus' some 8' long and 4' wide: it appears to be made of orange material that is very hard and very shiny (plasteel), with has a clear glass (i.e., plasglass) lid. An unusual clasp holds the lid shut. Within the 'sarcophagus' rests Artax-Ris, in the form of a giant rudishva skeleton (see new monsters). Artax-Ris clutches a large two-handed sword; other valuables may be seen inside the sarcophagus. Against the west wall, under the inscription, is a large stone chair that is too big for humans (but just right for giant rudishva skeletons).

The sarcophagus is actually a rudishva hyperbaric chamber (see new technological items), powered by a greater power supply (see new technological items) built into the device. Close examination of the underside reveals Rudishva glyphs and an access panel; the greater power supply can be removed via the panel.

Opening the clasp of the plasteel container causes Artax-Ris to spring to life, ready to defend his meager hoard. He shouts, repeatedly, the following phrase in guttural Rudishva: "Who bothers lord Artax-Ris? Leave now or die!"

Development: If 'awakened' but not slain, Artax-Ris decides to leave his chamber, using his ring to levitate down to area 5-35. He seeks other rudishva, whether giant skeletal ones or actual survivors. He may set himself up as a tyrant over the goblins, commandeering area 5-46 from Killik while contemplating how to gather allies so as to reassume his rightful status over the varumani (e.g., at 5-54).

GM Note: Artax-Ris was one of the survivors of the surprise attack that toppled the rudishva hegemony in Arden Vul. Along with Psalor-Ki (5-74), he experimented with using the hyperbaric chambers to prolong life. Growing disenchanting with Psalor-Ki, he fled here, taking one of the chambers. That chamber can still be used to create intelligent versions of the giant rudishva skeletons (see new monsters).

Inhabitants:

1. Artax-Ris, intelligent giant rudishva skeleton (see new monsters): SZ L; AL NE; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8+8; HP 68; #AT 1 or 2; Dmg 3-18 (weapon) or 2-8/2-8 (bone throwing); MR 50%. Special attacks: bone throwing; sonic blast. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; half damage from sharp or edged weapons; half damage from fire; immune to sleep, charm, cold, poison, and paralysis.

Treasure:

On the priestly corpses: 2 silver holy symbols of Thoth worth 15 gp each.

On the corpses of the adventurers: a suit of scale mail (human sized), a long sword +1, 35 sp, 45 gp, and a potion of healing.

Artax-Ris's rudishva hyperbaric chamber (see new technological items), which contains a rudishva greater power supply (see new technological items), plus 1,122 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items), 3,478 ancient copper bits (see Arden Vul items), a ring of levitation (see new magic items), a staff of blue light (see new magic items) wrapped in blue silk; two scrolls of magic user spells (wizard lock, slow), and a pair of boots of springing and striding

3-40: Thoth, the Knower of Secrets

The corridor that originally connected this chamber with 3-4 was blocked in antiquity. Rubble packs the old corridor from floor to ceiling, and a wall of brick and plaster has been laid across the entrance at 3-40; the hallway may be detected automatically by dwarves and with a 4-6 chance by elves; others detect it on a 1 in 6 chance.

The only access point from the west is thus the door from 3-35, which opens into a triangular landing overlooking the chasm. A narrow stone bridge - about 3.5' wide - spans the chasm, rising only to only a slight arch in the center its span. This means that characters fighting from the bridge will have to roll 3d6 under DEX to avoid falling into the chasm.

The chamber is 30' tall and unlit, although sconces are available on the north and east walls. Light may be glimpsed from 3-4, at least for so long as the halflings still occupy that room. The floor is dusty, but clear of trash, and the northwest corner is filled with a tangle of spider webs. The images on the walls are hermetic, dealing with strange, gnostic principles and magical knowledge. Human forms are largely absent, but moons of all phases, baboons, ibises, pentagrams, circles, and numbers in talismanic sequences are ubiquitous.

The three normal doors leading from this room are magically held (hold portal cast by an 18th-level magic user), and are only openable by manipulating the statue of Thoth; the doors open normally, however, from the opposite side.

Noise and light in this room may attract the spiders at area 3-37. A crushed skeleton of an adventurer lies huddled in the northeast corner; it still contains some loot.

Statue of Thoth the Gnostic: This massive, 15'-tall image of Thoth with a baboon head (as Aani, who sits on the scales with which a soul is weighed against the feather of Maat) dominates the chamber. This is the third of the great statues of Thoth on Level 3, and, with its peers in 3-2 and 3-15, it serves as part of the key to unlocking the secret tunnel to 3-23.

Carved out of solid basalt, Thoth squats with his knees drawn up to his chest. His arms are bowed, and his paws/hands rest on his knees. The eyes are stone and painted in a life-like manner. As with the statues at 3-2 and 3-15, the arms move through several stops: knees, air, eyes [that is, the backs of the hands cover the eyes - 'see no evil']. Rotating the arms will produce different effects for each combination. After 1 hour, both arms will grind back to 'neutral' position (knees-knees).

Knee	Knee	None (default position)
Knee	Raised	Opens concealed door to 3-40A
Knee	Eyes	Opens door to 3-41
Raised	Knee	Helps open secret passage at 3-2C
Raised	Raised	Opens concealed door to 3-40B
Raised	Eyes	Opens door leading to 3-42
Eyes	Knee	Casts continual darkness centered on the statue
Eyes	Raised	Opens concealed door to 3-40C
Eyes	Eyes	Opens door to hallway, just north of 3-40C

Treasure:

On the skeleton is a dagger, a rotted purse with 26 pp, and a rotted backpack containing a spell book with the following spells: Cleophalus's look-away spell (see new spells), comprehend languages, floating disk, jump, read magic, shield.

3-40A, 3-40B, 3-40C: Cells of the Guardians

Each of these bare cells contains re-spawning guardians designed to protect the secrets of the tombs of Thoth. Each cell boasts a concealed door panel which slides into the ceiling when the proper combination of Thoth's arms are 'dialed' at area 3-40. The image on each door differs: 3-40A features a crescent moon shining down on an ibis; 3-40B depicts a baboon clubbing a crocodile; 3-40C depicts a single blue eye. When each cell is opened (by means of the statue at 3-40), a guardian of Thoth (see new monsters) is summoned to that cell and the door slides open, releasing the guardian. The guardians possess no treasure. If a guardian is defeated, another can be summoned (in the same fashion) after 1 hour. If a guardian is inactive for 1 hour (the foes that activated it defeated or fled), it is banished.

Inhabitants:

1. 3 guardians of Thoth (see new monsters): SZ M; AL LN; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 3; HP 22, 20, 18; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-6. Special attacks: shriek. Special defenses: darkness 3/day.

3-41: Ancient Tombs

Three sarcophagi occupy this ornately decorated burial chamber. The inhabitants were important priests of Thoth who received the honor of burial next to the cult image in 3-40. The images on the wall are largely intact, if somewhat faded by time. They depict priests genuflecting at the feet of a seated baboon, the left arm of which points forward (a hint to the puzzle at 3-2).

Trap: A cascading sand trap is rigged in this chamber. The opening of any of the sarcophagus lids triggers the trap; locating a hidden catch on the floor near the left-most sarcophagus can disable it. When triggered, sand pours forth from three 5'-diameter holes in the ceiling (marked on the map with an X) and completely fills the chamber in 6 rounds. In the first round, PCs may move normally, but in the 2nd and subsequent rounds, PCs must make increasingly difficult DEX checks (roll 4d6 under DEX) to keep footing and reach the doorway. The DEX check in round 2 is a straight check, but it worsens by 1 for each subsequent round (hence in round 5, the check would be at +4).

Access to 3-41A via the holes in the ceiling is only possible after the sand-trap has been triggered, and only after 1-4 hours of sand removal has opened a route to those holes.

Sarcophagi: Each is intact, and contains an inanimate mummy. Inside each mummy is a piece of elaborate jade jewelry worth 500-3,000 gp and a single black pearl worth 325 gp.

3-41A: Tomb of Menas the Logothete, with Access to 8-34

The tomb of Menas lies above chamber 3-41 and is accessible through the 5'-diameter holes in the ceiling of 3-41. Once the sand trap in 3-41 has been triggered, and once 1-4 hours have been spent clearing sand from 3-41, it is possible to climb into 3-41A.

If the tomb is approached up the long staircase from Level 8 and the sand trap has not previously been triggered at 3-41, then opening the doors to the tomb causes an avalanche of sand to pour into the corridor. The room will be inaccessible without considerable digging.

Menas's tomb is 10' tall and richly decorated with frescoes showing Thoth in all his forms – ibis, baboon, sky-chariot driver, etc. The largest fresco is centered on the south wall above Menas's sarcophagus; it depicts an enormous ibis from which stream rays of energy. Above the fresco are these words from the Litany of Light "The Gift of Thoth to the Faithful" (see 2-3 and the Litany of Light in the Arden Vul books appendix). All the frescoes are particularly vibrant due to the protection afforded them by the sand that filled the chamber until the trap in 3-41 was activated.

Dominating the tomb is the massive sarcophagus of Menas (8' long, 4' wide, 4' tall), which rests on a 2'-tall oval dais. Four similar daises protrude from the west, north and east walls. Five sections of slate, each 2' wide by 6' tall, are present in the room; four are attached to the walls above the ancillary daises, while the fifth forms the top of the sarcophagus. A basin attached to the south wall still holds sand (from the trap); mixed in with the sand are several pieces of chalk.

Sarcophagus: Menas's sarcophagus is made of granite. It has an image of a Thothian priest in robes and cylindrical headdress inscribed on the front (short) end, along with the name 'Menas the Logothete'. Attached to the lid is the slate 'chalkboard' described above. The sarcophagus can only be opened by deciphering a puzzle. One must print the letters of one of two words on the slates in the chamber (one letter per slate); only when the last letter is chalked will the sarcophagus lid slide open. The words are 'LIGHT' or 'MAGIC'; each has five letters, and, conveniently, there are five slates in the chamber. The start of the word can begin with any of the slates, so long as the slates eventually spell out the proper word. Adventurers may be assisted in their efforts to solve the puzzle both by prior knowledge of the cult of Thoth (for instance, by information gleaned from the Litany of Light – c.f. Arden Vul books appendix or areas 2-2 through 2-5) and/or by the inscription over Menas's tomb. The latter is a clear reminder about the gifts provided by Thoth to humans; magic and light are two of those gifts. Once opened, the sarcophagus is full of riches as well as the desiccated (and inert) mummy of Menas.

Door (north): This door is magically held, and only opens if the proper word is chalked on the slates. It leads to an undecorated corridor and a very long staircase that debouches in the Nether Reaches (8-34).

Treasure:

2,345 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items) and 459 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items).

The legendary thieves' mask (see new magic items).

Three books: a libram of silver magic, a tome of leadership and understanding, and Bruning of Westholm's cursed grammar (see new magic items).

Ten solid gold shabti figurines in unusual stylized dance poses (100-600 gp each).

A scroll with seven illusionist spells: phantasmal force, wall of fog; brain full of small spiders (see new spells), invisibility, magic mouth; invisibility 10' radius, spectral force.

Two silver ankh-keys (see Arden Vul items).

3-42: More Ancient Tombs

This chamber is similar to 3-41, featuring intact wall art, three sarcophagi and a trap.

Trap: A poison dart trap guards each sarcophagus. Each trap may be turned off by small catches in the western wall, the first of which is difficult to detect (1 in 8). Once the first has been found, the other two are easy to find (1 in 4). The opening of the appropriate sarcophagus triggers each trap. Each fires six darts in the general direction of the sarcophagus opposite the X mark, attacking as a 6 HD monster. Those hit take 1-2 damage. The darts are also poisoned with dried black lotus powder, which cause paralysis for 3-12 turns unless a save vs poison is made (if made, the paralysis lasts 1-4 rounds).

Sarcophagi: each has an inanimate mummy. Inside the mummy wrappings is a piece of jade jewelry worth 50-500 gp and a garnet worth 125 gp.

3-43: Still More Ancient Tombs

This ornately decorated burial chamber contains three sarcophagi holding the remains of former priests of Thoth. The images on the wall are largely intact, if somewhat faded by time. They depict priests genuflecting at the feet of an impassive human with a cylindrical headdress whose left arm points forward (a hint to the puzzle at 3-2).

The floor is dotted with  $\frac{3}{4}$ "-diameter holes, which will be evident to all but the most foolhardy or unobservant. Two adventurer skeletons huddle before the westernmost sarcophagi: some of their equipment is still usable.

Trap: The holes in the floor contain iron spears, which stab upwards if the lids of any of the sarcophagi are removed. Any PC in the chamber will be struck by 2-4 such spears; spears strike as a 6 HD monster for 1-4 damage. There is a 5% chance per spear that a spear point will still be poisoned (save vs poison or die) after all this time.

Treasure:

Each sarcophagus contains an inanimate mummy and a piece of elaborate jade jewelry worth 50-500 gp. The corpses possess two rusted suits of chain mail, a shield +1, two maces, an illusionist scroll of magic mouth and a rotted backpack containing a purse filled with 26 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items) and a cursed penny (see new magic items).

3-44: Magic Fountain

This circular hall is brightly lit with a continual light spell. In the center of the room is a 5'-diameter and 3'-tall basin, in the center of which is a crouching marble baboon. Clear liquid pours from his mouth. The fountain is magical, and although its original function was to provide protection from evil, the magic has become more chaotic over the centuries. The first time the fountain is tasted, roll on the following chart; that effect is good for all who taste it for the next hour. If the party leaves and returns, a new effect will be produced; and so forth.

D20	Duration	Magical Effect
1-3	1 hour	Protection from evil
4-5	1 hour	Detect magic
6-7	1 hour	Protection from evil, 10' radius
8-9	2 hours	Shrink to 50% height
10-11	2 hours	Infravision, per spell
12-13	n.a.	Cure 2-16 HP
14-15	Permanent	A wasting curse (-1 CON per week until removed)
16-17	1 hour	True seeing
18	1 hour	Magic resistance (33%)
19	1-4 months	Grow donkey ears
20	1 hour	Flight, per spell

3-45: Hall of Mysteries

A balustraded balcony overlooks the Hall of Mysteries. The hall lies 15' below and is accessible via a set of stone chairs. Along the eastern and western sides of the chamber are giant 15'-tall statues of the old deities; lion-headed Sekhmet, Set (in Set-Animal form), and jackal-headed Anubis line the east wall, while Osiris, Horus and Isis stand along the west wall. These statues stand in classic pose - left foot advancing, hands by their sides, and with traditional symbolic headdresses. On the north wall is a larger (25'-tall) statue of Thoth in his ibis-headed form. Thoth's statue is unusual; one of its 2'-diameter eyes is empty. One of three mysteries will take place 2 rounds after someone descends the stairs from the balcony. Roll 1d3 to determine which mystery takes place.

D3	Mystery
1	Thoth as the Silver Light
2	Thoth, the Wise Arbiter
3	Thoth, the Source of Magic

Thoth as the Silver Light:

Two rounds after descending the stairs, the statues of Set and Horus advance into the center of the chamber, where Set jabs a spear into Horus's eye. A 2'-diameter, 2"-thick silver disk then rolls out of Horus's head and clatters to the ground. The disk is meant to represent the moon.

The ritual is completed if the PCs advance, pick up the silver disk, and insert it into the empty eye socket in the statue of Thoth. If this is accomplished, the statue of Thoth emits a brilliant silver light which cures all diseases and heals all wounds of all living creatures within the chamber.

If the silver disk is not recovered within 1 turn, the Set Statue crushes the disk under foot, causing it to splinter with a loud, grinding sound. The sound is earsplitting, and causes 2-12 HP damage to each being in the room.

During future visits to the chamber (if at least two days have passed), Horus's eye will be restored, and it will be possible to replay the mystery.

Thoth, the Wise Arbitrator:

In this mystery, Osiris and Sekhmet advance and begin to strike each other with their massive stone fists. Chips of stone fly for several rounds until the Thoth statue utters a guttural command word (in Mithric): "Halt!" The statues stop in mid assault, and Osiris drops his flail to the floor. Thoth then intones "One with wisdom must choose!" Should a PC advance and pick up the flail, the lion on top of Sekhmet's head will come to life and attack the flail-wielder (as an Archontean animated construct -see new monsters); the PC's companions will be held magically for the length of the combat. Should the PC die, Thoth will again shout "Halt!" and the PC will be revived, but he or she will have lost 5 HP permanently. Should the PC prevail, Thoth grants him/her +3 HP permanently.

After Thoth's judgment, the statues return to their positions. If the PC was victorious, he/she can keep the flail (flail +1) and a new one will appear in Osiris's hand. If defeated, the flail returns to Osiris's hand.

A single person can only receive the goodwill of Thoth once, but those who fail can make repeated attempts until successful.

Thoth, the Source of Magic:

Set and Isis advance into the room. Isis opens a cavity in her abdomen, and places a small (8"-tall) ebony statuette of Osiris on the floor. Set then swings his axe at Osiris, causing him to shatter into 15 pieces. At this point a wall of force seals the chamber. Set then coughs forth 3 giant snakes which attack all in the room. Thoth shouts, in Mithric: "Isis must restore him, but only I can revive him!"

The PCs must reassemble the pieces of the statue, and reinsert the statuette inside Isis. It takes 2 rounds per piece (hence 30 rounds) to reassemble the statuette, although each person aiding in the effort can reduce this time by 5 rounds (hence 3 people working can do it in 20 rounds, while four working can do it in 15 rounds). Another giant snake emerges every 10 rounds.

Once the statue has been reassembled and reinstalled inside Isis, a slip of parchment floats from Thoth's mouth. On this slip is written in Mithric the phrase "With knowledge I prevail." Reciting it aloud causes Set to retreat, any remaining snakes to crumble to dust, and the wall of force to disappear. The phrase also turns the statuette of Osiris into solid gold. The statue is worth 5,000 gp, but it is heavy, weighing 100 lb.

Should the same group undergo this mystery a second or third time, the quality of the metal produced in the mystery will decrease by one class per subsequent experience of the mystery (the 2nd time the statuette will be silver, the 3rd time copper, the 4th time bronze, and the 5th and any subsequent times wooden).

Inhabitants:

- Archontean animated construct - stone Sekhmet lion (see new monsters): SZ L; AL N; AC 2; MV 60'; HD 3-8; HP varies; #AT 3; Dmg 1-6/1-6/1-10; MR 25%. Special defenses: immune to elemental magic, poison, and mind-affecting spells; +1 or better weapons to hit; half damage from slashing or piercing weapons. Special: Thoth fixes the lion's HD at 2 less than its opponent, with a minimum of 3 HD and a maximum of 8 HD.
- Many giant poisonous snakes: SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 150'; HD 4+2; HP 31, 27, 20; #AT 1; Dmg 1-3. Special attacks: poison.

Possible Treasures:

1. Flail +1

2. Statuette of Osiris, 100 lb. If gold, 5,000 gp. If silver, 5,000 sp; if copper, 5,000 cp; if bronze, 100 gp; if wood, 50 gp.

3-46: Larel One-Eye

Relics of the legendary hero Larel One-Eye (see Tales of Larel One-Eye in Arden Vul books) rest in this chamber. Larel is a figure of legend and one of the heroes of the ancient Archontean empire. His exploits have been spun into a series of moralizing folk-tales which emphasize the value of wit and good cheer over force. These tales are still told in some form in the Archontean Empire today.

Larel is most commonly depicted as a short, pudgy man with ginger hair in a pudding-bowl style, green eyes, and a red eye-patch. His iconic items are his sack, from which he drew myriad useful items, his thin dagger, and his humble grey cloak, patched with a variety of colorful patches.

The chamber is decorated on the north wall with an enormous fresco of Larel wearing a green cap and patched cloak, carrying a sack over his shoulder, with his dagger at his side. The other walls feature scenes from his famous tales, including Larel producing a chicken from his sack so as to distract wolves; Larel using his cloak as a quilt to conceal himself from an angry husband; Larel cleverly spiking four apples on his dagger while distracting the innkeeper with a card trick; Larel absconding from the castle of the wizard Tilgo with the latter's spell book in his sack, and so forth.

Rather than lying inside a sarcophagus, relics of Larel are draped across various racks in the center of the chamber. A cloak rack contains three cloaks: a fine blue wool one, a simple black linen cloak, and a ratty patched cloak of many colors (Larel's cloak, see new magic items). A small rack of weapons includes six fine-but-wicked-looking daggers, some curvy, some with gold handles, others bejeweled. A writing desk features a gold apple, a plain silver 'letter opener' (actually Larel's pin, or dagger, see new magic items), and three fairly explicit love notes in Mithric from Larel to three aristocratic women of Archontos. An unlocked oak chest contains a variety of fine clothing, three leather belt pouches, a purple silk purse with a gold-thread drawstring, and a green stocking cap. Stuffed into the cap is a brown sack (Larel's sack, see new magic items). In the very center of the chamber is a stone pedestal, on top of which is a capped urn filled with ashes - allegedly those of Larel.

Clever PCs can easily walk out of this chamber with some impressive items, but only if they read the frescoes correctly or if they have previously heard the stories of Larel One-Eye. The only danger in the room lies inside the urn. If the cap on the urn is removed (so as to see what's inside, for instance), an invisible spectral body forms out of the ashes. This spirit of Larel attempts to possess the PC with the greatest combined WIS and CHA; that PC must save vs spells at -3 to resist the possession. If Larel's spirit is unsuccessful, it makes one more attempt on the PC with the next highest combination of WIS and CHA. If successful, Larel causes the PC to act mischievously, particularly by poking fun at, or humbling, the mighty [the GM should talk privately with the player so as to explain this process]. If Larel's ashes have been desecrated, his spirit maliciously works to cause major bad luck and misfortune to the possessed PC. If the party has not desecrated the ashes, the spirit causes only minor mischief. Over time Larel's spirit will cause the possessed PC to exhibit wanderlust, strong erotic needs, and increasing disregard for all authority. It may be difficult to detect the possession, and only exorcism by a high priest (at a cost of 9,000 gp) will rid the possessed PC of the spirit; if exorcised, Larel's spirit returns to the urn, wherever it happens to be.

Inhabitants:

1. Spirit of Larel, noncombatant

Minor Treasure: fine wool cloak (25 sp), 6 daggers (total 110 gp), gold apple (35 gp), love notes (20 gp each to a collector of antiquities), fine clothing (total 20 gp), purple silk purse (25 gp). All of these items will detect as magic.

Major Treasures: Larel's cloak; Larel's dagger, known commonly as Larel's pin; and Larel's sack (see new magic items for each item). A powerful conceal magic effect is in effect on these items: only if detect magic is cast by a 9th-level caster will the fact that they are enchanted be revealed. If the PCs come away with these treasures, they will undoubtedly draw attention from thieves and others who might wish to possess the relics of Larel.

3-47: Spiral Stair up to Level 2 (2-46)

This stone staircase climbs up 125' before reaching Level 2. See description at area 2-46.

3-48: Jaken the Proud

This chamber contains the tomb of Jaken the Proud, one of the warrior companions of the heroes Arden and Vul. Jaken was a famous spearman, and the tomb shows a series of water-stained frescoes of scenes from Jaken's legendary adventures: skewering a giant bipedal salamander, casting a spear at a flying globe of yellow light, riding a beast (unclear due to water damage), holding up Arden's cloak, drinking a hornful of beverage, etc. Jaken is always identifiable in these images due to his tall, plumed, conical helmet, his heavy boar-spear, and his scarlet banded mail.

Jaken's tomb is an elaborate marble block, with carvings of struggling warriors on all four sides. An image of a supine Jaken is carved on the lid, carrying his helmet and spear. The lid is well balanced, and slides off easily. Inside are the alleged relics of Jaken the Proud, including his conical helmet, heavy spear and red armor (all extremely shiny and polished), and a small (30"x8"x12") ivory coffer containing an incomplete set of very old, tarnished, and charred set of bones. Perceptive observers will notice that the equipment has no wear on it and, in fact, that it looks far newer than the bones.

In fact, the equipment is not that of Jaken, but rather is a set of ancient copies, made by the priests of Thoth for show in promoting the cult of the great hero. The equipment looks impressive, and detects as magic, but in fact carries no bonuses. It also appears well made, but will not hold up to normal wear and tear (10% cumulative chance of breaking per use). The bones, however, are actually those of Jaken, and are in fact much more valuable than the equipment. The bones themselves detect as magical, and, if carried, provide protection from evil in a 10' radius. The bones can also be used to contact Jaken's spirit; Jaken is bluff and martial, but not stupid (although he can only converse in Mithric). He knows nothing of the Halls, but is well-versed in ancient history, mythology, and tactics.

Treasure:

Impressive-looking helmet, spear and armor (worth 75 gp in total); bones of Jaken the Proud (see new magic items) in an ivory coffer worth 45 gp.

3-49: Pit of Fire

A large, 20'-diameter pit of fire sits in the center of this 20'-tall room. The walls are covered with flaking plaster painted orange, an effect which magnifies the effect of the fire. The pit is rimmed with a low (1'-tall) lip of marble, and the fire leaps and crackles to a height of 8' above it. The top of the lip is inscribed with obscure mystical symbols that require a read magic spell or specialized knowledge to decipher. If deciphered, they read "The fire of Truth cleanses the mind and transports the body of those faithful who proclaim that Thoth Rules!" A large golden key is easily visible in the center of the pit.

The fire pit is inhabited by a medium-sized fire elemental, whose form can be glimpsed by those who spend several rounds gazing at the fire. If someone pronounces the words "Thoth Rules" in any language, he or she will be able to step safely into the pit of fire. Doing so opens a telepathic link to the elemental, through which the elemental states "Thoth values your love. Do you wish to be cleansed or to be transported?"

If the character thinks or says "cleansed" he or she receives one of the following gifts (d6): 1-2: full cure of all HP and removal of all curses; 3-4: permanent +1 increase in INT; 5-6: grant of magic resistance (20%) for 2-7 days. If the character thinks or says "transported", he or she and all his comrades are transported immediately to the legendary City of Brass on the plane of fire.

The benefits of 'cleansing' may only be received once; those who think or say 'cleansed' a second time will receive no effect (although they can recover the key in the pit). Those who think or say 'transported' may access the City of Brass as often as they desire (presuming they can return from that dread place).

If a character steps into the pit without first stating "Thoth Rules", he or she takes 3-18 damage immediately and the elemental attacks all persons in the room.

Secret Door (south): The locked secret door is difficult to discern (1 in 8). It can only be opened with the key found in the fire pit; the door opens inwards.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 fire elemental: SZ L; AL N; AC 2; MV 120'; HD 12; HP 79; #AT 1; Dmg 3-24. Special attacks: combustion. Special defenses: +2 weapons or better to hit.

3-50: Priscian Antechamber

The chamber is barrel-vaulted and 15' tall. Two 3'-tall ledges run across the north and south walls, atop of which stand granite statues of kilted spearmen. The floor of the passage running between the two ledges boasts three impressive mosaics, each featuring a blue knot. The statues are Archontean animated constructs (spearmen; see new monsters), which animate whenever a being traverses the passage. Interlopers have 1 round to display a Sortian eye (see new magic items) of any type or else the constructs attack.

An 8'-tall carving of a male human face occupies the east wall. It depicts a distinguished man of late middle age, with crew cut, trim beard, piercing eyes, wrinkles, a few blemishes, and empty sockets where the eyes would be. Anyone who has seen a Sortian face (see new magic items) will recognize the carving as the same one that appears on those carvings; this face, however, is mundane and not magical. The face depicts the generic image of the Philosopher.

Secret Door (north): The door to 3-49 is easy (1 in 4) to locate from this side. It opens by releasing a hidden catch and pushing the door into 3-49. It is not locked from this side.

Inhabitants:

2. 6 enhanced Archontean animated constructs - spearmen (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 2; MV 60'; HD 8; HP 61, 58, 55, 53, 50, 49; #AT 1; Dmg 5-10; MR 25%. Special defenses: immune to elemental magic, poison, and mind-affecting spells; +1 or better weapons to hit; half damage from slashing or piercing weapons. These constructs are slightly more powerful than the run-of-the-mill variety.

3-50A: Stairs Up to AV-19

This narrow staircase travel 350' upwards through several landings until it debouches in the basement of a ruined palace in the city of Arden Vul (AV-19).

3-50B: Stairs Down to 6-49A

This 5'-wide staircase descends over 850' through multiple landings and switchbacks to area 6-49A. The stairs show signs of recent traffic (booted feet).

3-51: Cavern and Monolith

This large cave contains a 10'-square monolith which rises 150' to Level 2 (2-48). An aura of evil hangs over the cavern like a damp mist; it is easily detectable by magic and will be manifested by a sense of prickling skin and of looming, unseen menace.

The monolith is carved of the native granite of the cavern, but with some strange textural features. If touched with bare flesh, the stone feels greasy and appears to leave a filmy residue on the skin that touches it. This effect is psychosomatic, and not actual; still, the effect lingers for hours and can provide the GM with some fun. The monolith also appears to be polished, lacking the usual grain which one finds in natural stone. Finally, strange cursive runes appear on the monolith in apparently random patterns. These runes are incised in the stone and filled with a red substance that appears liquid, but is in fact solid. If a rune is touched by anyone who is not CE in alignment, the rune inflicts 1-6 HP damage and imprints itself as a tattoo on a visible portion of the toucher's body (face, neck, arm, hand). Such tattoos drain CON at the rate of 1 point per month per tattoo, and also cause a -3 to CHA or reaction rolls. They may be removed with a remove curse spell (one spell per tattoo).

The top of the monolith is a flattened triangle which is described at area 2-48.

The floor of the cave is littered with a scattering of bones, mostly human, but some humanoid and monstrous. Sorting through the bones may turn up something useful:

D12	Object
1-3	a piece of non-magical armor
4-5	a non-magical metal weapon
6-9	a random piece of adventuring gear
10	a gemstone of 5 gp value
11	a scroll case, containing: 1-2: empty 3-4: 1 random MU spell 5-6: map
12	an intact potion of healing

3-52: Great Seat of Contemplation

This 25'-high chamber is extremely old, and quite powerful. It was created by the rudishva early in their tenure in the middle halls, centuries before the priests of Thoth rediscovered the area. The floor is composed of 10'-square flagstones, most of which are cracked and buckled; movement here is slowed, and combat rolls will be at -1. The walls are undecorated grey granite.

The centerpiece of the room is a giant stone chair, the seat of which rises 4' above the chamber floor and is 5' wide and deep. The back of the chair rises another 6' in height and is loosely covered by an extremely worn piece of leather. The seat and arms of the chair are worn, as if by use, and are slightly greasy to the touch. Incised into the chair are two large (2') symbols or glyphs, one on the seat and one on the back under the leather throw. The symbol on the seat is the rudishva glyph for sight; that on the back is the rudishva glyph of guardianship. The glyphs are activated by living flesh. Thus, anyone touching or sitting on the seat will activate the sight glyph. The guardianship glyph can only be activated by removing the leather throw and then either sitting back in the seat or touching the glyph itself. It is, of course, possible to sit in the chair without removing the leather throw. See below for the effects of the glyphs.

Careful investigation reveals that the flagstones around the chair look newer, as if the chair had been shifted from its original alignment; indeed originally it looked due west through the western aperture into the chasm. The priests of Thoth turned it to face their Lesser Chair at area 3-53.

The only other features of the chamber are an 8'x15' stela set into the floor behind the chair. Inscribed on the stela is the imposing form of a tall biped with small horns on its temples and a prominent supraorbital ridge and jawbone (a rudishva). The figure also appears to have slightly visible fangs. It is dressed in a flowing robe and rests its hands on the hilt of a massive great sword. At its feet is a sinuous reptile. Strange runes run in a register around the image: if deciphered by one who can read Rudishva Glyphik, they read "Grev-Kilj the Far-Seer, Tamer of the Winged Ones, Lord of Air and Earth, Student of Subterranean Life Forms, Slayer of the Hopping-Ones."

Glyph of Sight:

The glyph allows the viewer perfect vision within the chasm. That is, one can thoroughly investigate most of the chasm by sitting in this seat (and that is exactly what Grev-Kilj, and the priests of Thoth, did). The effect of this vision takes some time to get used to, as it can be nausea-inducing to swoop up and down the chasm; there is a 50% chance that a user will vomit within 3 rounds of activating the glyph. The glyph is also dangerously attractive to human minds, and users may find it difficult to relinquish the swooping vision it produces. After a turn of use, the user must save vs spells in order to voluntarily leave the seat. If the save is failed, another may be attempted in 6 hours. Someone so ensnared by the seat will feel a great compulsion to return to the seat and use it again. A few of the old rudishva regions of the chasm are cloaked from the sight of the chair, including the Floating Gardens (6-4 and 7-4), area 6-99, and area 9-71; a user will see these areas as impenetrable clouds of roiling darkness. Note that the chair provides perfect vision, as if the chasm was well lit. The chair does not, of course, reveal secret doors or hidden passageways. Complete scans of the chasm will take many days to accomplish.

Glyph of Guardianship:

This glyph activates the rudishva point defense systems that defend the rudishva bastion (see 9-88). Those systems remain active for 3 hours before shutting off. In addition, activating the glyph causes the remains of Grev-Kilj to burst forth from beneath the stela and attack those who dare to use his chair.

Inhabitants:

1. Grev-Kilj, intelligent giant rudishva skeleton (see new monsters): SZ L; AL NE; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8+8; HP 68; #AT 1 or 2; Dmg 3-18 (weapon) or 2-8/2-8 (bone throwing); MR 50%. Special attacks: bone throwing; sonic blast. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; half damage from sharp or edged weapons; half damage from fire; immune to sleep, charm, cold, poison, and paralysis.

3-52A: Forgotten Hall, with Connections

This hall is only 7' tall, and contains three sarcophagi. Each sarcophagus has a crude image of a rudishva face carved into its lid, along with the Mithric words: "Old One. Do Not Open." Each sarcophagus is also bound with rusted metal bands, which prevent them from being opened. As soon as the chamber is entered, visitors who aren't trying to be quiet will hear the sounds of scraping, clawing, and hammering from inside the sarcophagi; these are the sounds of giant rudishva skeletons (see new monsters) trying to get out. Of course if the PCs open the sarcophagi, the skeletons burst forth, shouting in their guttural speech. But, given the rust on the bindings, there is a 10% chance per sarcophagus that the bindings will fail. This check should be made once per round; after a turn, the chance rises to 20% per round per sarcophagus. The sarcophagi contain no treasure.

The natural tunnel climbs 350' to the northeast before ending at a crack in the wall of the cellar to the north tower at AV-12.

Secret Door (north): The door is normal to find. It opens by locating a catch hidden beneath the eastern-most sarcophagus, and pushing it. It leads to a long, 5'-wide staircase that descends 250' to level 5 (area 5-64).

Inhabitants:

1. 3 semi-intelligent giant rudishva skeletons: SZ L; AL NE; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8+8; HP 61, 55, 52; #AT 1 or 2; Dmg 3-18 (weapon) or 2-8/2-8 (bone throwing); MR 50%. Special attacks: bone throwing; sonic blast. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; half damage from sharp or edged weapons; half damage from fire; immune to sleep, charm, cold, poison, and paralysis.

3-53: Lesser Seat of Contemplation

A stone chair proportioned for human beings sits in the center of this chamber; it faces out across the chasm towards 3-52. In fact, it lies on the exact axis of the Great Seat of Contemplation in 3-52. This room was built by the priests of Thoth in an effort to mimic the effects of the Great Seat without some of the risks found in that chamber. Their efforts were not completely successful.

In theory, the Lesser Seat works in the same way as the Great Seat: one sits in the chair, activates the glyph of sight, and gains sight into the chasm. In fact, the glyph carved into the lesser seat functions only sporadically, and with some danger. Roll on the following chart to see what effect it has:

D10	Effect
1-4	Immobile vision of a single area of the chasm lasting 1 turn. Roll 1d6 for the area depicted: 1: Hall of Whispers (2-63) 2: Seat of Contemplation (3-52) 3: Thoth, Knower of Secrets (3-40) 4: Sundered Span (5-35) 5: The Sanctum (5-83) 6: The Troll Lift (6-5)
5	Blindness (permanent)
6	See invisible and hidden, 1 day
7	A horrible vision of a demon; it haunts the PC until curse is removed.

8-9	PC sees stars for 1-6 days, causing all rolls involving sight to be at -1
10	Hint of a tantalizing vision of a location in the Halls (GM's choice) that fades to black after a second

3-54: Porch

The narrow passageway from 3-55 leads to a shallow porch which looks out over the chasm. Those who listen from the hallway will hear moving air and a random chasm sound (see 3-38).

The porch is undecorated, save for a pair of iron sconces attached to the southwestern wall. Three large coils of hemp rope, each 50' in length, a hammer, and 20 spikes usable in spelunking or rock climbing lie on the floor of this room. The rope is quite old, however, and is liable (3 in 6) to break once 75 lb of weight have been attached for at least 4 rounds. Light and sound on the porch is 75% likely to draw the attention of the spiders from 3-55 (they will arrive in 4 rounds), and an encounter with the spiders is 25% likely to provoke 2 rolls on the chasm random encounter table (see 3-38).

3-55: Stairs Down to Level 5 (5-76)

This staircase leads down 250' at a steep angle to Level 5 (5-76). The stairs are granite blocks, littered with dust and stone chips. About 50' down the stair is a thick web in which live 4 huge spiders. The stairs under the web are littered with bones, mostly of beastmen.

Inhabitants:

1. 4 huge spiders: SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 180'; HD 2+2; HP 15, 13, 11; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: surprise 1-5; poison (+1 to saves); can leap up to 30'.

Treasure:

Among the corpses are 93 sp, 210 cp, and a fine broadsword worth 30 gp.

3-56: Secret Doors and Pit Trap

The passageway is rough undecorated stone, only 6' tall, and extremely dusty.

Secret Door (west, from areas 3-65 and 3-53): The door is normal to detect. The catch holding the door in place can be released by sliding a thin object along a 1/8-inch wide opening between the secret door and the floor. Once the catch has been released, it will become clear that the door pivots on a vertical central pin.

Secret Door, trapped (east): The door is relatively easy to detect (1 in 4), and opens merely by pushing it open.

Trap (pit trap): The pit is harder to detect than usual (-5% to chances). If the secret door (east) is opened without first detecting and disarming the pit trap, those standing in a 10'x10' square before the door are dropped into a 30'-deep pit (3-18 HP damage). The pit lid snaps back into place after a turn. Over the centuries some loot has accumulated on the corpses of adventurers who were unable to escape the trap.

Treasure:

Among the corpses are 2 long swords, 1 mace, 3 short swords, and 6 spears. One of the spears is a spear +1. A dozen suits of unusable metal and leather armor are also present, along with three usable shields (one of which is a shield +2). Scattered in various rotting purses and backpacks are 257 gp, 143 sp, 87 cp, two vials of holy water, and a potion of waterbreathing.

3-57: Antechamber

The door from 3-64 is a typical wooden door, but it is stuck (successful open doors check to open). The chamber features stone walls painted with peeling yellow paint and a set of stone benches lining all the walls. These benches are attached to the wall, and are 3' tall. A section of bench next to the door is hinged. This section is not immediately obvious, and detects as a secret door unless each section of bench is examined. Opened, the section reveals a 3'-square hollowed-out cavity. Inside the cavity is a bolt of carefully folded yellow silk (100 gp), a bulls-eye lantern, a flask of oil, and an octavo-sized codex marked "Property of Eustachius the Cantor" (see Arden Vul books).

3-57A: Trapped Door

The beastman witch doctors have cast their special alarm spell, Probus's thunderous alert, across this opening (see new spells). Anyone crossing the entryway must save versus spells or trip the spell. If triggered, the noise of a dozen very loud brass instruments fills the hallway for 10 minutes. This noise will alert the beastmen at 3-160. The door is a normal, albeit well-oiled, wooden door that opens out, to the north.

3-58: Chapter House

The Collegiate Chapter of the clergy of Thoth met here to discuss internal business under the leadership of the prior. The Chapter House is richly painted, with a sky blue ceiling on which was depicted the constellation of the ibis in gold stars. Thirty-nine cherry-wood stalls line the walls; each stall is 5' tall and 4' wide, with a 3'-deep seat. The stalls are intricately carved with floral, geometric, and animal patterns. On one section of the east wall is set a much larger seat, some 8' tall, 6' wide, and 5' deep, with a wooden canopy; this is the prior's seat. The prior's seat conceals the secret door. All of the seats, including that of the prior, are hinged, and each covers a cavity in which personal goods could be stored.

The center of the chamber contains an oval band of unusual living mosaic some 15' tall by 8' wide (see new magic items). The image shown by the mosaic can be controlled by a shallow, 3'-square and 6"-deep indentation set in the middle of the oval. Anyone standing in the indentation can produce an image on the mosaic by merely thinking of the appropriate location. One must know of appropriate locations in order to visualize them. When the chamber is first entered the mosaic will be showing area 3-2.

Secret Door (east): The door is hidden in the back of the prior's seat. It is opened by pressing the eye of a carved ibis on the prior's seat; if the catch is pressed, a panel on the back of the prior's seat springs forward, revealing the passageway beyond.

Treasure:

Six of the stalls contain items; it will take a good 2 turns to search all the seats. 1: a potion of hill giant strength; 2: a leather pouch with 250 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items); 3: a potion of poison; 4: a quarto volume of erotica entitled The Seventy-Four Ways of Opening the Lotus (see Arden Vul books);

5: an orange cylindrical ceremonial headdress made of silk and studded with colored glass (175 gp); 6: a pair (yellow and green) of glass activation squares (see Thothian teleportation rings in new magic items).

Inhabitants:

There is a 25% chance that the ghost of Prior Jacobus the Small is present in the Chapter House (see 3-59). Because of this fact, the beastmen avoid this chamber.

3-59: Prior's Study

This chamber housed the private quarters and study of the prior of Thoth, the second highest ranking officer in the temple (after the high priest). The study is decorated with impressive frescoes of previous priors, all dressed in ceremonial robes and cylindrical hats, but each subtly different. Some are thin, some heavy; some dark, some fair, some blue-eyed, some black-eyed, etc. There are 52 such images, with empty spaces for two more future priors. The last image is of an extremely short (4' 10"), heavy-featured, older man with silver hair and eyes. This is Jacobus the Small, the last prior before the collapse of the temple. The chamber contains a marble pedestal with a copper bowl, now filled with dust; a cherry-wood desk with one drawer; a stool; a small cabinet for scrolls; a small armoire; and a camp bed made of carved ebony.

The benign ghost of Prior Jacobus haunts the study. If Jacobus's spirit has not been encountered in 3-58 (there is a 25% chance he is found there), he will be found here, sitting on his stool at his desk. Jacobus greets any arrival with delight and relief, rising and gesticulating wildly at himself, his desk, and his surroundings. Jacobus cannot audibly communicate with the living. He can move between areas 3-58, 3-59 and 3-60, but nowhere else. He is immune to physical attacks, but might be harmed by magic; powerful magic could also be used to communicate with him. If angered, he can strangle as does a haunt.

Jacobus is anxious because his body was never deposited in the grand tomb he was preparing for himself (see areas 3-61 to 3-63). His ghost will continue to haunt these rooms until his remains (currently in 3-61) are placed in the sarcophagus in 3-63. Should that occur, his ghost materializes immediately in 3-63, bows gratefully to the PCs, indicates the secret compartment in the sarcophagus, and then disappears for good.

Although he cannot communicate with the PCs, he can point to some clues available on his desk, namely the blueprints for his tomb. On the desk is a sheaf of parchments, most of which display mundane financial and personnel matters; one sheet, however, shows the plans for the complex at 3-61 to 3-63. These plans are clearly marked "Tomb of Jacobus, 52nd Claustal Prior of the Chapter of Thoth;" they also clearly indicate the secret door and the location of the sarcophagus in 3-63.

The scroll cabinet contains boringly mundane administrative and financial records, in 50 scrolls bound with silk ribbons, as well as a single quire containing one of The Deeds of Phagtro the Westron (see Arden Vul books). Rolled up inside one of these scrolls, however, is a sketch map of some areas of Level 3, including areas 3-71, 3-77 to 3-80, and 3-86.

Treasure:

Resting on the desk may be found a silver letter-opener (15 gp), a bronze ink well (10 sp), a fancy stylus (5 sp), and a gold and opal signet ring (100 gp). The armoire contains two full sets of orange ceremonial robes for the cult of Thoth, complete with cylindrical hats. In one of the hats is a small key strung with orange silk as a necklace: it opens the secret door in 3-60.

3-60: Supply Closet

This former supply closet has been enthusiastically and systematically plundered. All that remains are scraps of parchment and bits of linen and silk. Even the sturdy wooden racks attached to the walls have been plundered.

Secret Door (north): This door is difficult to find (1 in 8) and difficult to open from 3-60 (it is obvious and easy to pull open from the side of 3-61). The door itself is narrow (3' wide) and short (5'), and swings inward towards 3-61. The mechanism is a cleverly concealed keyhole (the key is hidden in 3-59).

3-61: Tombs of the Priors

This chamber contains the tombs and gisants of all 51 of the priors of the chapter of priests of Thoth. The imposing stone double-doors to the chasm swing open; their locks have been smashed, preventing them from being secured.

Thirty-two of the early priors were buried neatly in niches carved into the walls for this purpose. Each niche is 3' deep and features a carved marble gisant of the prior; these priors vary by gender, size, racial features, and garb, although most feature the traditional cylindrical headdress of the priesthood of Thoth. Alas for tomb-robbers, most of the gisants do not contain any loot; in fact, only the last 10 of the gisants conceal cavities for bones and grave goods. It takes 2-4 turns of hard work with suitable tools to remove the lid of each gisant. The noise of such labor will prompt multiple random encounter checks (see 3-38). Sadly, the resulting finds are meager. Nine of the ten contain only bones and some minor jewelry (10-100 gp worth each). The tenth, of the 33rd prior (Yakon), contains a wand of lightning.

The other 19 priors were entombed in sarcophagi of varying composition and quality set haphazardly on the floor of the chamber (indeed, the sarcophagi obscure and, in places, have damaged, some beautiful floor mosaics featuring pastoral scenes). Some of these sarcophagi are stone, some are marble, and a few are oak caskets. One can detect a gradual simplification in the artistic style of the images carved on the tomb lids. All of the nineteen have been opened, and their lids lie in and between the sarcophagi, making the room into a jumble of concealed spaces and narrow pathways through the clutter.

A pack of ghouls led by a wight (the 51st prior) has taken up residence in the hall. The ghouls wait for several rounds before springing from cover to attack. There is a 25% chance that their intense hunger cause them to moan with anticipation, thus spoiling their surprise. Due to the jumbled layout of the room, movement is halved and rolls to hit are at -1.

The skeleton of Prior Jacobus, the 52nd prior, lies on the floor in front of the secret door to 3-63. The wight attacked Jacobus's servants while they were bringing him to his preferred resting place, and they dropped him unceremoniously here. The short stature of the skeleton is a clue that it is that of Jacobus (see 3-59).

Secret Door (southeast): This narrow, short secret door leads to a short hallway and thence to 3-60. It is difficult to detect (1 in 8) and can only be opened by finding a ¼"-diameter hole next to it and inserting an appropriate instrument into that hole.

Secret Door (northeast): The secret door to area 3-63 is hidden in the back of a burial niche. The door is a rectangle some 24" high and 4' long. If detected, the door can easily be opened by sliding the panel upward.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 wight: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 4+3; HP 28; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4. Special attacks: energy drain. Special defenses: silver or magic needed to hit; immune to sleep, charm, hold, cold, poison, and paralysis.
2. 6 ghouls: SZ M; AL CE; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 15, 13, 12, 11, 11, 10; #AT 3; Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-6. Special attacks: paralysis. Special defenses: immune to sleep and charm.

Treasure:

In the tombs covered by gisants: 9 pieces of jewelry worth 10-100 gp each; and a wand of lightning with 5 charges. For every 2 turns of searching through the debris, there is a 25% of finding coins worth 15 gp (50%) or a gem worth 50 gp (50%), up to a maximum of 350 gp worth of loot. On Jacobus's corpse: a gold and sapphire torc (950 gp), a small rod of iron used to open the southeast secret door, and a small duplicate key to the secret door in 3-60 strung on an orange silken cord.

3-62: First Prior

The first prior of the chapter of Thoth, a certain Kyrus Esgarete, was re-interred in this special extension to area 3-61. The tomb features a large marble pedestal with a life-sized marble gisant of Kyrus. Both the gisant and the wall-art have been defaced by the wight, who has made Kyrus's tomb his resting place. As a result the whole area stinks of decay and death. Nothing of value may be found here.

3-63: Priors' Hoard

The secret panel in the burial niche at 3-61 leads to a short passageway, and from there to a small room crammed with treasures. In addition to the treasure there is an empty sarcophagus with a marble lid, on which is incised an image of a very short man (wearing heels) in Thothian ceremonial robes. The legend reads, in Mithric, "Iacobus, Prior of Thoth". Should the remains of Iacobus be brought from 3-61, placed in the sarcophagus, and the lid put into place, the ghost of Iacobus (see 3-59) materializes, points to a secret panel on the sarcophagus, and then fades into happy oblivion.

The rest of the chamber is filled with treasures accumulated by centuries of priors.

A secret compartment in Iacobus's sarcophagus is nigh impossible detect (1 in 10) without the former Prior's help (3-59); it is locked, and contains further valuables.

Treasure:

Strewn around the room are: 6 bolts of expensive silk, each worth 500 gp, each weighing 10 lb; a solid gold statuette of a baboon some 3' tall (750 gp, weight 15 lb); a magic mace, known of old as Finisher (see new magic items); 16 10-lb bars of silver (25 gp each); 2 disks (28" in diameter) of grooved, beaten gold with 1" holes in their centers, which may be used to open the lesser obsidian gates (SL4-34); the Book of Priors (see Arden Vul books); scrolls with the cleric spells command, chant, dispel magic, feline senses (see new spells), and knit bones (see new spells); and 12 potions: extra healing x2, flying, human control, levitation, longevity, undead control (ghouls), water breathing, oil of slipperiness, philter of persuasiveness, molasses, and truthfulness (see new magic items for the last two).

A trapped wooden chest (poison needle) with 6,876 ancient copper bits, 3,397 ancient silver pennies, and 1,349 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items).

In Iacobus's sarcophagus: a ring of free action and a belt of hill giant strength.

3-64: Empty Chamber

This room contains nothing of interest except for a bone scroll case hidden amongst the trash in the southeast corner containing a scroll of phantom armor.

3-65: Hall of Remembering

This chamber boasts a low dais and a 4'-tall alabaster book stand, on which are found some scraps of parchment. Originally the priests kept a Memorial Codex of Thoth (see Arden Vul books) here with the names and dates of death of their priesthood. The codex was taken by the beastmen, and it currently resides in Deino's chamber (3-158). The chamber has the usual thick dust and trash. Surprisingly, the walls are not badly damaged and feature a midnight blue paint with hundreds of small flecks of silver - one per priest of Thoth.

Two stone doors and a secret door exit from this chamber. The stone doors only open with difficulty (i.e., by making an open doors check).

Secret Doors (east): The secret door is normal to locate, but it opens only for a knock spell. The passageway revealed by the secret door culminates in a blank wall. At its end is a second secret door that leads into the Tomb of the Founder (3-66). This second secret door is easy to locate (1 in 4), and it opens by sliding the door panel to the left.

3-65A: False Door and Traps

The ibis-covered wall frescoes of this corridor have been vigorously defaced. Lying along it are some twenty corpses surrounded by bits of broken adventuring gear. Some decent treasure is recoverable from the corpses after 1-3 turns of searching. The door at the north end of the corridor appears normal, but is in fact a false door.

GM Note: Unless PCs are cautious and explicitly state they are keeping the door to 3-65 open while searching the corridor, they are in for a nasty fate. Indeed, once the one-way door to 3-65 shuts, there is effectively no escape from this corridor (hence the corpses). Nothing short of magic, actual stone mining tools, or someone else opening the outer door can save those trapped within. A generous GM might allow them to be captured by a patrol of beastmen from Level 3.

Treasure:

Long sword +1, a scroll of six magic user spells (protection from normal missiles, massmorph, hold monster, reincarnation, clenched fist, volley), a gold ring worth 50 gp, an ioun stone (incandescent blue), and a shield +2. In addition, 177 cp, 143 sp, 568 gp, and 97 pp are strewn amongst the junk.

3-65B: Another False Door and Trap

The plastered walls of this corridor are painted sky-blue with numerous white ibises. The door at the north end of the corridor is a trapped false door.

Trap (false door and pit): Opening the false door causes four pit traps along the corridor to open simultaneously. Any PC standing on one of the indicated sections of the corridor falls 20' into a pit (2-12 HP damage). The pits' lids snap closed after 2 rounds.

Treasure:

The pit closest to the false door contains a recent corpse (human thief), with leather armor, a short sword, and a 5-lb gold ingot stamped with the imperial insignia (250 gp).

3-66: Tomb of the Founder

This complex houses the tomb of Ptoh-Ristus, cleric of Thoth and one of the companions of Arden and Vul. The most likely route by which tomb robbers might access the tomb is via the secret corridor from 3-65, which channels visitors into the antechamber to the actual tomb. This route poses dangers, as the antechamber is trapped (see below). It is less likely, although dimly possible, that travelers in the chasm (3-38) might discover the path to 3-66A and thus enter the tomb through the 'back door'. Such visitors are fortunate, as they might avoid several of the more deadly traps.

The Antechamber:

The 20'-tall antechamber, or eastern ell, is supported by six thick basalt columns in two rows. Thirty-two 5'x5' slate flagstones cover its floor. Its walls are plastered and painted with images of Thothian priests in orange ceremonial robes and tall cylindrical orange hats, all of whom appear to be striding towards the western portion of the chamber. The eyes of these priests are black and round; close observation from the doorway reveals that they are holes, rather than painted eyes. Several traps are present in the antechamber, including numerous poison dart traps and a falling block trap.

Antechamber Traps:

1. Falling block: the flagstones just to the north of the secret door leading to 3-65 are pressure sensitive; should anyone step on them, a massive granite block some 10'x10'x10' in dimensions will crash downward onto the space just beyond the doorway. Victims have a chance to roll 3d6 under DEX at -2 to avoid being killed instantly by the block. Once fallen, the block may pose problems of egress from the chamber.

2. Poison darts: the eight northernmost and the eight southernmost flagstones are also pressure sensitive. Stepping on any of them causes 1-3 poisoned darts to shoot out from the painted black eyes on the walls at the triggering PC. Darts roll to hit as 6 HD creatures. If one or more should hit, the darts do 1-3 hp damage in addition to their (possible) poison effect. Given the age of the poison, only 1 in 4 darts is still potent, dealing 2-12 damage (save vs. poison for half damage). Sliding a thin knife into the interstices of the pavement and cutting the trigger wire may disarm each pressure plate.

The Tomb of Ptoh-Ristus: To the west of the antechamber lies the tomb proper. It is a vast space, with a 40' ceiling and a floor composed of large, fitted, marble flagstones (5' square). In the center of the room is a dais 15'x20' in length on which rests an enormous basalt sarcophagus (10'x15'). This is Ptoh-Ristus's resting place. To the north and south of the main sarcophagus are two smaller ones, each about 6'x4' and made of white marble. The western wall features three colossal images painted on to plaster; in the center is an orange-robed priest of Thoth looking serenely forward and holding an ankh and codex. To his right is the image of a female warrior (Arden), armored in an antique style, who is looking approvingly at Ptoh-Ristus as she leans on her spear. To the left is an image of a cloaked figure (Vul), pointing three fingers at Ptoh-Ristus. The other walls are merely painted in a pleasing shade of blue.

On the east wall, to either side of the opening to the antechamber (and perhaps initially hidden to those entering via the antechamber), are 8'-tall stone statues of kilt-clad, spear-bearing, humans. As soon as anyone crosses from the antechamber to the main chamber, these Archontean animated constructs (see new monsters) lumber to the attack.

If the lids of any of the three sarcophagi are removed (via an open doors check), the inhabitants of both white sarcophagi shatter their tomb lids from within and move to attack. If the stone spearmen have not already come to life, they do so at this time.

Sarcophagus of Ptoh-Ristus: Formed of polished black basalt, the main sarcophagus bears the inscription "Ptoh-Ristus, Servant of the Lord Thoth, Knower of Secrets and Founder of these Halls" chiseled in Mithric onto its eastern face. The lid is extremely heavy and requires an open doors check to lift off. Inside Ptoh-Ristus's tomb is a man-sized mummy, with a golden face mask. Surrounding the mummy are numerous miniature models representing mundane and magical objects of significance to the great high priest. These objects are made of wood, but are enhanced with paint, small glass gems, bits of lapis, and occasional gilt work. As objects they might be worth something to a collector, but their raw value is low (20 gp for the lot). The exception is a miniature chair, which is magical: it is a Theodorus's chair of great ease (see new magic items). Scattered among the miniatures are 25 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items), 30 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items), and 12 golden beryls worth 1,000 gp each. The death mask of Ptoh-Ristus is a potent magical item (see new magic items). Ptoh-Ristus's mummy is inanimate.

Lesser Sarcophagi: The white marble sarcophagi lack any decoration save for a generic stylized image of a priest lightly incised on the lid. Neither sarcophagus contains any treasure. Each contains the mummified remains of one of Ptoh-Ristus's lieutenants; these undead emerge to defend the tombs if the lids of any of the sarcophagi are destroyed.

Secret Door (north): This door is normal to find, but hard to open; the white sarcophagus in front of it must be moved, and an inset button pushed to open it.

Secret Door (antechamber, leading to 3-65): This secret door is normal to find and opens by sliding a panel to the right.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 Archontean animated constructs - spearmen (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 2; MV 60'; HD 6; HP 37, 35; #AT 1; Dmg 5-10; MR 25%. Special defenses: immune to elemental magic, poison, and mind-affecting spells; +1 or better weapons to hit; half damage from slashing or piercing weapons.
2. 2 mummies: SZ M; AL LE; AC 3; MV 60'; HD 6+3; HP 44, 41; #AT 1; Dmg 1-12. Special attacks: fear; rotting disease. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; half damage from magic weapons; immune to sleep, charm, hold, cold, poison, and paralysis.

Treasure:

Miniature objects (20 gp for the lot); death mask of Ptoh-Ristus (see new magic items); some coin and gems (see above); Theodorus's chair of great ease (see new magic items).

3-66A: Treasure Room

This chamber is undecorated, but stuffed with riches.

Secret Door (east): from 3-66A, this door is easy (1 in 4) to locate, and easy to open (a simple push on its left side), but it is trapped with a poison needle (save vs poison or die; even if save is made a struck PC loses 1-4 CON points for 2-5 months). The door leads to a narrow natural tunnel that exits in the chasm; the opening to the chasm is concealed and very difficult to spot from the chasm itself. If approached from the chasm side, the door is normal to detect, and opens by pulling on the left side (via an open doors check).

Secret Door (south): From area 3-66A, this door is normal to locate. It can only be opened from this side by destroying it.

Treasure:

6 delicately carved alabaster vases (100 gp each, but 10 lb each).
A carved ebony box stuffed with incense (100 gp).
A plain stone jar filled with oil (enough for 20 flasks).
A wooden chest with 3,333 ancient copper bits, 2,222 ancient silver pennies, and 1,111 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items for the coins).
A 10"-tall solid silver ibis (50 gp).
A golden feather (95 gp).
Two platinum rings set with rubies (1,250 gp each).
A pair of rugs of instance access (see new magic items).
An illuminated parchment codex entitled The Founder and His Deeds, detailing the adventures of Ptoh-Ristus, Arden and Vul (see Arden Vul books).
Scrolls with the cleric spells hallow and warding chain of glyphs (see new spells for both).

3-67: Greater Hall of Columns

Door (west): The door is stuck, and only opens with a successful open doors check.

The chamber boasts a 20' ceiling and 21 columns that gleam with hints of yellow gold. Several bodies (two halflings, four beastmen, and a human magic user) lie amid the columns. The columns are of stone, painted with a shimmering gold paint. Floating in the darkness amid the columns are 6 small chasm cephalopods (see new monsters).

Inhabitants:

1. 6 small chasm cephalopods (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 5; MV 60' flying (Class A); HD 2; HP 14, 13, 13, 12, 11, 8; #AT 5 (4 tentacles and a beak); Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-3/1-4; MR 25%. Special attacks: surprise on 1-4.

Treasure:

2 suits of halfling-sized leather armor, 2 short swords, 4 spears, one steel helmet, a control rod to the eggs found at 4-85, a potion of healing, a potion of heroism, and some coins (34 sp, 48 gp).

3-68: Lesser Hall of Columns

Door (east): The door is stuck, and only opens with a successful open doors check.

This large chamber is dominated by 6 squat stone columns. The ceiling is 15' high. A 1'-deep layer of trash covers the floor, including broken furniture, masonry chunks, bits of statuary, and decrepit equipment. Beastman troopers often sift through the rubbish (50% chance); if encountered here they will negotiate first, and then fight to the death.

Scratched in Dwarvish onto the base of one of the pillars, beneath the layer of trash, is the following phrase: 'I found him! Ptoh-Ristus rests some 130' east and 80' north. Be wary!' This refers to 3-66.

Inhabitants:

1. 6 beastman troopers (see new monsters) (50%): SZ S; AL LN; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 8, 7, 7, 6, 6, 5; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spears; short swords; short bows; 3-18 sp each

3-69: Vestibule, and Warning Sign

This former administrative chamber is another mess of rubbish. Large bits of furniture, entire sarcophagi, and miscellaneous adventuring gear have been tossed here. The pile makes a decent low-height barricade spanning the width of the chamber.

Warning Sign: A rotting halfling head is impaled on a spear stuck into a crack in the pavement just before the door leading to the corridor to the south.

Trap (spear trap): The beastmen have concealed a spear trap at the spot marked by an X. The first person to attempt to climb the 10' section of rubble before the X is subject to trap, which inflicts 1-8 HP damage.

3-70: Traps and Beastmen

The complex that is 3-70 was originally a minor administrative office for the cult of Thoth. It is mostly decrepit now, and has been occupied as a forward outpost by some beastmen from Sheep Company of the Children of Deino (see area 3-141). These beastmen, nervous about their exposed position, have devised several traps for the unwary. Note: parties bypassing 3-70 and heading south will be spotted by the beastmen from the peephole in 3-70A. If discovered, the beastmen will negotiate with non-aggressive parties.

Trap (deadfall): The beastmen have hoisted a pile of rubble above the door to 3-70. Whoever opens the door must roll 3d6 under DEX or take 2-12 damage as the rubble crashes on his/her head.

3-70A: Beastman Outpost

The beastmen use the peephole here to spy on those passing by. Inside are some bedrolls, a small campfire, and several sacks of provisions. The beastmen shadow any party that passes to the south, hoping to engage it from the rear.

Inhabitants:

1. 4 beastman troopers (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 7, 6, 6, 5; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spears; short swords; short bows.
2. 1 beastman sergeant (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 2+2; HP 15; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 or 2-5. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spear; war hammer.

Treasure:

3-18 sp per beastman.

3-70B: Beastman Barracks

The door to this chamber opens outward into the hallway. Within this chamber dwells another squad of beastmen. Bedrolls, a cooking fire, and provisions, including a small keg of decent brandy (30 gp), are scattered throughout.

Trap (tripwire): The beastmen have strung a wire across the doorway at a height 1' above the floor. It causes two effects: 1) Trip: roll 3d6 under DEX (with penalty of +2) or fall flat on one's face for 1-3 rounds; 2) Crossbow trap: the wire triggers a crossbow mounted above the door. Damage is 1-8 HP, or 5-12 for tripped characters.

Inhabitants:

1. 6 beastman troopers (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 8, 7, 7, 6, 6, 5; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spears; short swords; short bows.

Treasure:

3-18 sp per beastman, plus a bag of iron spikes.

3-70C: Bait and Switch

Opening into the hallway, this door is wide open. Visible from the door is a pile of trash, apparently of more recent vintage (barrel fragments, bits of less-rotten wood, sacks, etc.). To one side of the trash pile sits a wooden chest. The beastmen in 3-70A and 3-70B hope to lure the incautious into this chamber and lock them in. The chest is locked, but contains only sand.

Trap (containment): Should a party enter the chamber, the beastmen in 3-70B will rush out and slam the door. They then hammer two wooden beams across the door and jam some iron spikes into the door jamb. Meanwhile, the beastmen will also send for reinforcements from Tagma Command (3-150). They hope to negotiate with their captives from an impregnable position.

3-70D: Barred Door

The door to this chamber opens outward to the hallway and is barred from the outside by pieces of wood hammered across the door itself. On the door itself is painted the word "Danger" in Archontean. Snarls, growls and wordless pleadings emerge from within. The beastmen have trapped 2 ghouls within this chamber.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 ghouls: SZ M; AL CE; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 15, 10; #AT 3; Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-6. Special attacks: paralysis. Special defenses: immune to sleep and charm.

3-71: Desecrated Temple of Thoth

The narrow (5'-wide), undecorated passage from 3-15 opens suddenly into an enormous darkened hall whose walls rise out of the gloom some 30' to a coffer-vaulted ceiling.

Although it appears worn and draped in odd objects, the cult statue of Thoth commands immediate attention from its pedestal lying in the center of a low pool. Rows of columns lead from the entrance towards that impressive statue, while empty iron sconces line the walls at 15' intervals. Just over half of the columns have been thrown down, leaving the fane's floor covered in dust and fragments of stone. Clear tracks through the debris lead towards the door in the southwest corner of the room.

Several rotting corpses of goblins, humans, and beastmen have been piled in front of the statue and pool. A fresher pair of human corpses have been stripped of all clothing and pinned to the north wall with iron nails.

Desecration by Set: In addition to the damage to the columns, the temple has been desecrated by the resurgent cult of Set. The walls are smeared with dirt and feces, and all the gilt has been pulled off. Obscene images and vulgar phrases are scrawled across the walls of the temple in Archontean: a sampling includes "The Ibis has been Shorn", "Fuck Thoth!", "We have 'known' Thoth, but there is better flesh to be known in Archontos" and "Where is your power now, Bird-Brain?" and so forth. An enormous sketch of a crocodile devouring an ibis has been splashed with black paint on the western wall behind Thoth's statue. This unpleasant graffiti and desecration is so potent as to provide evil characters with a bonus of +1 to all rolls while in the temple and good characters with a -1 penalty to all rolls. Those sensitive to such things (e.g. paladins, good clerics, or perhaps elves) will feel the aching 'wrongness' of the desecration as a damp shroud falling over all who enter.

Set Spy Holes: Not content with desecrating Thoth's sanctuary, the Set cult took the opportunity of expanding their own temple (3-90) eastward until they were in a position to carve two spy holes which look into the now empty fane of Thoth; those spy holes are located some 20' up the western wall (3-90B). It is 33% likely that Set's spies will notice movement in the temple of Thoth; that likelihood goes up to 66% if a group engages the slime kraken (see below) in extended combat. Still, even if the cult of Set notices the party, it is unlikely that they will take direct action; their awareness will, however, increase the likelihood that the minions of Set in 3-81 and 3-89 will be ready to repel intruders.

Statue of Thoth: Thoth stands in the classic semi-advancing pose, arms at his side. He takes the form of an ibis-headed human some 20' tall. He wears a kilt and a headdress with a single feather in it. The statue is made of black marble, save for the ibis head, which is of white marble. The eye sockets of the statue are gaping holes, since the Set cultists managed to pry out the sapphire eyes (the sapphire eyes are currently located in the Set temple, at 3-90).

Although they were unable to knock over the statue, the Set cultists have defaced it: it is covered with bits of dung and streaks of dried blood; the head of a beastman has been impaled on the feather headdress.

Should the sapphires be restored to Thoth, the desecration effect will be removed from the temple. As a reward, Thoth provides experience points sufficient to raise the restorers of his eyes to the middle of their next level of experience. Cleaning the statue also brings rewards from Thoth: a blast of white light cures all wounds within 25' of the statue.

Pool of Faith: The statue is centered in a basin that is 3' tall and 15' in diameter. Although the basin originally contained cool clear water, it too has been desecrated and is currently filled with a malodorous opaque liquid of sludgy consistency. In the sludge lurks a slime kraken (see new monsters). Should the slime kraken be defeated and a vial of holy water poured into the pool, the liquid will begin to lose its odor and color. Within a week, it will have reverted to its crystal-clear state, and will have the added effect of curing 1-6 HP damage per draught per day. This curative effect is lost if the liquid is transferred to other vessels. The level of the liquid remains constant regardless of how much of it is drunk.

Secret Doors (north and south walls): These two doors are easy to locate (1 in 4), and both open by locating a catch on their neighboring wall.

Secret Door (southwest corner): This door is normal to find, and opens by pulling a nearby iron wall sconce. Traffic through the door is regular, but most explorers assume that the tracks lead to the door to 3-77 instead of to the secret door.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 slime kraken (see new monsters): SZ L; AL N; AC 4 (-3 in basin); MV 120' swimming; HD 7, HP 49; #AT 7 (6 pseudopods and a beak); Dmg 1-8(x6)/1-12. Special attacks: stunning slime. Special defenses: slow regeneration.

Treasure:

A yellow glass activation square (see Thothian teleportation rings in new magic items) and a Thothian passkey (see Arden Vul items) rest in the Pool of Faith.

3-72: Alcoves of the Guardians

These semi-circular chambers are empty of anything save the sort of grime, filth and graffiti found in 3-71.

Each alcove originally housed a guardian of Thoth (see new monsters). Should the temple (3-71) be cleansed of its desecration through the means described therein, the magic binding the guardians to this location will be reinvigorated. Should that occur, then any person not bearing a holy symbol of Thoth who approaches the statue of Thoth will find that guardians of Thoth have manifested in each alcove and have emerged to confront the impious. Although they can still trigger the appearance of the guardians, those who cleansed the temple will not be attacked. The guardians attack all others.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 guardians of Thoth (see new monsters): SZ M; AL LN; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 3; HP 20, 18; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-6. Special attacks: shriek. Special defenses: darkness 3/day.

3-73: North Gallery

A narrow gallery, accessed by a door and a ramp, overlooks the grand temple of Thoth. The ramp is decorated with scenes of servants of Thoth carrying various gifts of valuable objects, codices, and scrolls. These scenes are faded and worn, but lack the overt desecration found in the main temple. The gallery stands 15' above the floor of the temple.

3-74: South Gallery

This gallery is identical in every way to the northern one, save for the presence of a secret door along the southeast wall. Abandoned by some long-departed adventuring party on the floor of the gallery are the following: a bulls-eye lantern, three flasks of oil, and a bag of 10 iron spikes.

Secret Door (southeast): The door is normal to find, and is shaped like a female worshiper bearing a bag of some sort. Pressing the figure's left eye opens the door.

3-75: Antechamber

The walls of this tiny chamber are painted with a dense silver paint in a textured way such as to resemble scales. The effect of the paint makes the walls ripple in torchlight. The door leading to 3-76 is locked, and the key is long gone. A rope ladder, about 15' in length, is coiled next to the door.

3-76: Arcanum Cave

This cave resembles the inside of a geode; it is roughly spherical (30' diameter) with fabulous orange crystalline formations growing from every surface. It pulsates with a dull orange light. The door opens into the wall some 15' above the 'floor' of the cave. A secondary cave extends to the southwest; this sphere is smaller, only 10' in diameter, and has a hole bored in its floor (leading to 3-78).

This cave is, of course, a natural pocket of arcanum (see new magic items), and is subject to the usual compulsions and properties of such locations (see new magic items for details).

3-77: Cave-In

Although both doors to this chamber can be opened, the room itself is buried in several tons of rock, earth, and other debris. Short of serious mining efforts, the way is impassable.

3-78: Store Room

This storeroom contains a variety of adventuring equipment, all of which is ancient. There are four coils of rope, three large carboys of oil (40 flask worth each), a case of wine that has turned to vinegar, a dozen iron spikes, several shovels, three pick-axes, a hammer, numerous pitons, three 10' poles, two lanterns, a bundle of ten torches, a sheaf of parchment, several bottles of dried ink, and an Alexia's useful pole (see new magic items) that has been 'decorated' as a candle-holder.

If the items are touched, a permanent magic mouth appears and barks in Mithric "Touch not the Possessions of Lord Thoth. You have been warned!"

There is a 4'-wide hole in the eastern end of the ceiling, leading up about 8' to 3-76. The hole is easy to miss unless visitors specifically announce that they are looking up.

3-79: Ruined Council Chamber

The sound of wheezy, labored breathing is audible if one listens from either entrance. The focal point of the chamber is a stone table some 15' long running north-south. Rotted wooden stools lie on either side. The door to 3-80 has the words "Do not open!" painted on it (in Archontean).

The wheezing sound is produced by a pitiful creature strapped to the top of the table. The creature was once a priest of Thoth, a fact that is borne out by the tattered orange robes it wears. The priest is dead, but its spirit has been unable to depart due to the soul stone (see new magic items) stuffed into its mouth. As a result the priest is a sort of semi-aware zombie, albeit without hostility or aggression. If the soul stone is removed, the creature whispers a ragged warning in Mithric: "Go no further. They are waiting." The priest's soul departs 1-3 turns after the stone is removed, leaving an inert corpse. The warning refers primarily to the zhouls (see new monsters) in 3-80 and secondarily to the wight in 3-86.

Treasure:

Soul stone (see new magic items).

3-80: Those Who Wait

The door to this room is stuck, and opens only with a successful open doors check (or magic). Long strips of pale blue paint flake from the walls, and a half-dozen coffers line the walls. Inside are four priests of Thoth who were trapped here more than a millennium ago but who have risen as zhouls (see new monsters). They relentlessly attack and follow those who release them.

The coffers contain mostly ruined copes, stoles, and ceremonial robes. One coffer contains a few valuable items.

Inhabitants:

1. 4 zhoul (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 120'; HD 4; HP 28, 25, 23, 18; #AT 1; Dmg 3-12; MR 10%. Special defenses: immune to charm, hold, sleep, and cold; turned as ghosts.

Treasure:

Coffer: orange silk robe of Thoth (35 gp); two silver Sortian eyes (see new magic items); a parchment slip bearing the following words, "yellow-black-green-white-black-red" (the 'address' for the Thothian teleport ring at 3-159 - see new magic items).

3-81: Secret Antechamber to Set

This small room is filled with dusty and broken pieces of trash, with two especially big piles of it set against the northwest and southwest corners. Tracks from the secret door lead to the center of the room and stop.

The trash heaps in this antechamber have been cleverly arranged by the priests of Set so as to conceal the door connecting their precincts with the rest of Level 3. The junk pile to the southwest, which includes settee frames, bits of bookcases, side table tops, and numerous table legs, actually conceals an ordinary door leading to 3-89. Only close inspection or searching of the pile will reveal that the heap has been artfully constructed, indeed, that it has been glued together to form a single mass of stuff. What is more, only close inspection will reveal that the fake junk pile is attached to the west wall by hinges, and can be swung noiselessly aside to reveal the door. Woe to searchers, though, for a spear trap is hidden in the junk pile.

The door to 3-89 is new, with freshly oiled hinges and a tough lock (-10% to pick); it is also trapped.

Trap 1: Spear Trap (southwest junk pile): Unless the release mechanism (a protruding table leg) is located and disarmed, anyone searching or attempting to shift the fake pile of junk triggers a spear trap (1-8 damage). The spear trap is spring loaded and fully resets automatically.

Trap 2: Gas Trap (southern, concealed door): The Set cultists have rigged a gas trap using gas collected from the Breath of Set (4-2A) and connected it to the locking mechanism of the door leading to 3-89. If not disabled, the mechanism pumps a narcotic gas into the room. All in a 15' radius must save vs poison or be confused for 2-4 turns. The trap is difficult to locate (-5%) and disarm (-5%). Activation of this trap is 50% likely to bring the guardsmen from 3-89 at a run to investigate. The trap only affects those opening the door from the north. After the trap is activated, the Set priests will reset it within 1-3 days.

Secret Door (east): The secret door to 3-71 is easy to locate from the west (1 in 4), and opens by locating a simple catch.

3-82: Stuck Door to an Empty Chamber

The door on the southern wall (towards 3-71) is stuck from the inside by some iron spikes (placed there by the adventurer in 3-83). A successful open doors check is necessary to move the door. The chamber itself has been badly despoiled, as the walls have been stripped of their plaster, which lies in heaps on the floor.

3-83: Lost Adventurer

A lost adventurer lurks in this trash-strewn chamber, hoping to escape past the slime kraken (3-71) and the vigilant eyes of the priests of Set. She is down to her last iron rations and is desperate for assistance. The walls of the chamber have been stripped, and only some patches of plaster remain. The room smells foul, as if of excrement, sweat, and fear.

Inhabitants:

1. Susarra, 2nd-level female Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL NG; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 10 (max 18); #AT 1; Dmg 2-9 battle axe or 1-4 (light crossbow). Abilities: STR 17; INT 12; WIS 12; DEX 10; CON 15; CHA 13. Possessions: chain mail and medium shield; battle axe; light crossbow with 20 bolts; two torches; two flasks of oil; 45 gp; and a ring of feather falling and a spell book with the following spells: the Bracteros effect (see new spells), change self, gaze reflection, phantasmal force, phantom armor, wall of fog; improved phantasmal force (taken from her fallen comrades in 3-85).

3-84: Ruined Hall

This chamber has been thoroughly and enthusiastically looted. The plaster from the walls lies in a heap in the center of the room, mixed in with bits of wooden furniture, clothing, and so forth. Soot blackens the walls, as it appears that someone once tried to light all the trash on fire.

3-85: Corpses and One-Way Door

The bodies of two adventurers and two ghouls lie moldering here. The adventurers (a thief and an illusionist) were the former companions of Susarra (3-83). The thief's body still holds a short sword, leather armor, and a silver signet ring. Under the illusionist's body lie a snapped wand and a fine but broken lute (the lute may be repaired by a master luthier for 150 gp; at that point it will be worth 350 gp to a bard or collector).

One-way Door: The corridor to the north leads to a one-way door into the catacombs (3-22). This door will close in 1 turn unless it is jammed open.

Treasure:

Silver signet ring (35 gp); short sword, leather armor; broken but repairable lute (up to 350 gp if fixed).

3-86: Wight

A wight lurks in this chamber, along with three zombies. The room is exceptionally well preserved, due to the cave-in at 3-77 and the presence of the wight. The plaster still hangs on the walls, decorated with scenes of skiffs moving over dark waters, poled by humans and ibises. The door leading to 3-88 is spiked shut on the side of 3-88.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 wight: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 4+3; HP 27; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4. Special attacks: energy drain. Special defenses: silver or magic needed to hit; immune to sleep, charm, hold, cold, poison, and paralysis.
2. 3 zombies: SZ M; AL N; AC 8; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 13, 11, 10; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8. Special: always strike last.

Treasure:

Bits of equipment from slain adventurers litter the floor, including a sack holding a solid gold ibis (750 gp), 4 aquamarines (100 gp each), and 239 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items). There is also a fine short sword +1, a potion of human control, a scroll of protection from petrification, and a pair of Thorstein's oculae (see new magic items for both).

3-87: Stairs Down to Sub-Level 6 (SL6-7)

This staircase leads down 550' to Sub-Level 6, the Drowned Canyon (SL6-7).

3-88: Hidden Room

Secret Door (to 3-88): The secret door on the south wall of the nearby corridor is exceptionally well-hidden (1 in 8 to discover) and can be opened by picking a lock concealed as an ibis's eye. This chamber is nondescript, with flaking pale blue frescoes studded with silver moons (paint, not plating). The bones of a dead mule rest here, complete with a pannier with 2 coils of rope, a lantern, and 6 flasks of oil. The door to 3-86 is spiked shut from this side.

3-89: Set Guardpost

The cult of Set has taken over this former priests' dormitory and made it into an advance guardpost for their temple. They have established a defensive position at the top of the stairs leading up from 3-81, and have posted a troop of guardsmen there under the command of Hurub, a deacon of Set.

The defensive position involves a 4'-tall wooden barricade anchored to the wall with iron bolts, with a 2'-wide gate set in it. The guardsmen are alert, and use ranged weapons and oil flasks to impede advance up the stairs. If hard pressed and able to do so, the guardsmen will summon aid from 3-93.

The chamber contains four wooden bunk beds, a wooden chest, a bucket of water, another bucket for night soil, and a rack of spears. The Set guardsmen stripped the walls of their former Thothian imagery, and painted in their place, directly onto the rock, some crude images of Set surrounded by crocodiles, hippos, and pigs. A linen screen with the sign of Alpha Sept (see 4-40) - that is, a huge black boar - rests against the west wall.

The hallway to 3-91 is obviously of more recent vintage than the chamber itself, having been torn crudely from the rock without attention to aesthetics.

Concealed Door (west): The linen screen conceals this door to 3-98.

Inhabitants:

1. 6 Set guardsmen (see new monsters), as 2nd-level Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 16, 15, 15, 12; #AT 1, Dmg 2-7 (mace), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: red scale mail and wooden shield; footman's maces; spears; light crossbows with 20 bolts.

2. Hurub, a Set deacon (see new monsters), as a 6th-level Archontean cleric of Set: SZ M; AL LE; AC 3; MV 90'; HD 6; HP 42; #AT 1; Dmg 3-8 (mace +1). Possessions: Set armor +1 (see Arden Vul items); deacon's was stick (see new magic items); footman's mace +1; an amulet of protection against normal missiles (see new magic items); a potion of extra healing; a potion of glibness; a scroll of curse; a gold holy symbol of Set (150 gp); and the key to the chest in 3-89A. Spells prayed for: command, cure light wounds (x2), cause fear, protection from good; chant, hold person, know alignment, resist fire, silence 15' radius; animate dead, dispel magic, cause blindness; cause serious wounds.

Treasure:

The wooden chest contains 150 sp, 4 flasks of oil, a golden statuette of a crocodile (50 gp), 2 aquamarines (100 gp each), and two silver holy symbols of Set (in Set animal form, 10 gp each).

3-89A: Closet

Hurub the Set deacon sleeps in this chamber, where he has a fine bed with sheets, a desk and chair, and a locked, iron-bound chest.

Treasure:

The locked chest contains 159 gp, 2 solid silver goblets (25 gp each), a bronze key (to 3-35), and two potions of extra healing.

3-90: Main Temple of Set

A temple to Set has existed in this location in one form or another since the founding of Arden Vul. In the heyday of the city, Set was slightly overshadowed by the wealthier and better-connected priesthood of Thoth, but after Thoth's departure the cult of Set has risen anew, and its members have delved deeply, expanding and enhancing the primitive site into its current, enormous form.

This, the main temple, serves as the primary site for rituals and ceremonies for adherents of Set in the upper levels of the Halls of Arden Vul and even for some from outside the dungeon. The central axis of the fane runs from the huge bronze double-doors at 3-110 to the altar and cult statue at 3-90A. Along this axis, the ceiling is a good 50' high, although it slopes down to only 20' at the northern and southern sides, where a series of shrines (3-91 to 3-96) are located. Two rows of eight large stone pillars help support the roof.

The shrines along the north and south walls are normally closed by heavy black drapes, which run from floor to ceiling. To either side of the bronze doors are painted monumental (35') images of Set in human form with Set-Animal head. The angled walls behind the altar also feature the same colossal images. The eastern-most tip of the chamber is also cloaked by heavy black drapes rising 20' above the floor; behind them is the passage to the spy chamber at 3-90B.

The floor is clad in blood-red tiles. Two 35'-long pools flank the central axis; they are 15' feet deep, contain lily pads and several crocodiles, and are kept fresh by clerical spells. At the eastern end stands a dais whose three steps rise 8' off the floor; on top of this is a red stone altar, behind which is an enormous statue of Set (3-90A). Torches on the western and eastern walls light the temple, aided by a pair of sconces set into each pillar. The torches have been treated with red lotus blossoms (see new flora), which lend the entire room a smoky, languidly-sweet aroma. A faint but noticeable breeze tends to whirl the smoke west, towards 3-110.

Ceremonies: If adventurers manage to enter the temple without having alerted the cult of Set to their presence, one of several ceremonies might be taking place:

D12	Ritual
1-6	No ritual
7-8	Invocation of the Dark (minor)
9-10	Ritual of the Lesser Beast (minor)
11	Sacrificial Ritual (major)
12	Ritual of the Set Animal (major)

Each ritual involves a different cast of cult participants (in addition to the permanently stationed guardsmen in 3-93 and 3-96):

No Ritual: No formal ritual, but 2-8 Set cultists and 1-3 Acolytes will be present

Invocation of the Dark: A general ritual to praise Set, culminating in the summoning of a roiling cloud of magical darkness that sweeps through the temple and out the bronze doors. Involves a Set deacon, 2 Set acolytes and 3-12 Set cultists.

Ritual of the Lesser Beast: A ritual designed to summon a large version of one of the creatures associated with Set (1-4: crocodile; 5-6: snake; 7-8: armadillo, 9-10: snake; 11-12: wild boar). Involves a Set deacon, a Set acolyte, and 4-16 Set cultists.

Sacrificial Ritual: This ritual gifts a human sacrifice to Set. Victims are taken from dungeons of Set (3-105) or supplied by the Guild of Service (see 4-11, 4-12 and 4-13) and are prepared for sacrifice at 3-97. During the ritual the victim will be screaming in fear and dripping blood from numerous shallow cuts inflicted before the ceremony began. Involves the First Priest, the Third Priest, a Set deacon, 3 Set acolytes, and 3-12 Set cultists.

Ritual of the Set Animal: A rare ritual to summon a Set animal, performed under only the direst of circumstances. Involves the sacrifice of two human subjects, as well as one acolyte. Involves the high priestess, the second priest, the third priest, 4 Set deacons, 4 Set acolytes, and 1-4 Set cultists.

Inhabitants: Who is present depends on what is happening in the temple. GMs should not forget the presence of 12 guardsmen in 3-93 and 3-96, or the four crocodiles in the pools. If they haven't already been defeated, the forces at 3-89 might also be summoned for assistance in case of an attack, as would be the cultists at 3-90B. Finally, in the case of a free-for-all, a guardsman might release the boars in 3-95 and open the grate in 3-94 that leads to 3-112.

- 4 crocodiles: SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 60', 120' swimming; HD 3; HP 24, 22, 16, 15; #AT 2; Dmg 2-8/1-12. Special attacks: surprise on 1-3.
- 1-4 Set acolytes (see new monsters), as 3rd-level Archontean clerics of Set: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 60'; HD 3; HP 21, 20, 19, 18; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (mace) and 1-4 (light crossbow).

Possessions: Set armor (see Arden Vul items); footman's mace; light crossbow; acolyte's was stick (see new magic items); and a silver holy symbol of Set (10 gp). Spells prayed for: command, cure light wounds, curse (reverse of bless), protection from good; hold person, silence 15' radius.

- 1-4 Set deacons (see new monsters), as 6th-level Archontean clerics of Set: SZ M; AL LE; AC 3; MV 90'; HD 6; HP 44, 42, 39, 36; #AT 1; Dmg 3-8 (mace +1). Possessions: Set armor +1 (see Arden Vul items); deacon's was stick (see new magic items); footman's mace +1; an amulet of protection against normal missiles (see new magic items); a potion of extra healing; a potion of glibness; a scroll of curse; a gold holy symbol of Set (150 gp); and the key to the chest in 3-89A. Spells prayed for: command, cure light wounds (x2), cause fear, protection from good; chant, hold person, know alignment, resist fire, silence 15' radius; animate dead, dispel magic, cause blindness; cause serious wounds.
- The high priestess is Stephania (see 4-51)
- The second priest is Marius Junienos (see 4-56)
- The third priest is Lacedaion of Archontos (see 4-57)
- Up to 16 Set cultists (see new monsters): SZ M; AL LE; AC 9; MV 90'; HD 1; HP 7(x3), 6(x3), 5(x3), 4(x4), 3(x3); #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger) or 2-7 (flail) or 1-6 (staff). Special attacks: fanaticism. Possessions: padded armor; daggers; flails or staves.
- 1 Set animal (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LE; AC 5; MV 150'; HD 2; HP 13; #AT 2; Dmg 1-4/1-6; MR 25%. Special attacks: venom; jump; confusion; dispel magic 1/day.

Treasure:

A box of 30 doses of dried red lotus blossoms (see new flora) near the bronze doors; 40 aquamarines (100 gp each) strewn throughout the pools; a gold ring (75 gp) in the gullet of the largest crocodile. See also the descriptions of 3-90A and the shrines. Individual priests and cultists may also bear wealth and/or magic. A skeleton lies at the bottom of the southern pool, wearing a torc that reads "Nyema". The torc is worth 350 gp, but if returned to Yrtol in EX-4 the torc will melt and put his ghost to rest. In a leather pouch in the northern pool are two enormous eye-shaped sapphires (10,000 gp each); these are the eyes from the statue of Thoth in 3-71. Anyone touching the eyes receives an electric shock worth 1-4 HP/round (hence the leather pouch). If restored to the statue of Thoth, Thoth will be most pleased (see explanation at 3-71).

3-90A: Altar and Statue

Carved from a single block of red marble, the main altar pulses with an evil red light. On the top of the pulsing slab (6' long, 3' wide, 4' high) is a human-shaped indentation, runnels to drain blood, and copper shackles. On it rest a jagged stone knife with a crocodile-hide hilt (100 gp), a green jade cup for catching blood (100 gp), and two black candles that, if lit, emit an oily black cloud (10 gp each). The altar radiates evil palpably.

Behind the altar is a 25'-tall statue of Set, in Set animal form (long flat ears, forked tail, long curved snout). Set is shown grasping a wasp stick in his left hand and an ankh in his right. The statue is made of an enormous block of granite, although the head is made of ivory, gold, and lapis, with two lemon-sized rubies for eyes. The rubies are worth 5,000 gp each, although anyone attempting to remove them will be cursed, such that he/she will lose 1 CON per month until he/she shrivels into nothingness. The curse also affects any subsequent buyer of the eyes. The rest of the head may be ripped apart, and is worth 1,000 gp.

3-90B: Spy Chamber

The priests of Set dug this extension of their temple so they could keep an eye on the ruin of their old enemy's temple. The rough stone chamber contains two short wooden benches, which permit viewers to peer out into 3-71.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 Set cultists (see new monsters): SZ M; AL LE; AC 9; MV 90'; HD 1; HP 5, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger) or 2-7 (flail) or 1-6 (staff). Special attacks: fanaticism. Possessions: padded armor; daggers; flails or staves.

3-91: Shrine of Set-Sobek

Standing at the east end of the room is a stone table on which sits a large statue of a crocodile, with mouth open for the attack. This is Set in his crocodile form (taking over the role of Sobek). Placing any extremity into the mouth of the statue causes it to snap down for 2-12 HP damage and a 50% chance of severing that extremity. Should the extremity be severed, the crocodile leaks out two large tears, which harden into aquamarines worth 100 gp each. Six such aquamarines can be created in this manner per month: additional victims receive no recompense for their lost limbs. The remainder of the room is decorated with riverine scenes, most of which show crocodiles terrorizing boaters, fishermen, and other wildlife.

3-92: Shrine of Set the Warrior

Against the south wall rests a shrine devoted to Set the Warrior, in his form as a human with the head of the Set animal. The shrine consists of a low pedestal, on top of which is a 6' statue of the god. Arranged around the statue are bowls with lotus flowers floating in them as well as two iron candelabra with lit candles. The other walls show the same image of Set as warrior dispatching all manner of enemies, including ibises, falcons, snakes, turtles, and even crocodiles.

Secret Door (south): The shrine is hinged and stands on rollers. If a button on Set's sandal is pressed, the shrine pulls away from the wall, revealing a passage behind it.

Inhabitants: If a major ceremony is taking place in the main temple, the shrine is empty. Otherwise there is a 50% chance for 1-2 Set acolytes (see new monsters), as 3rd-level Archontean clerics of Set: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 60'; HD 3; HP 20, 19; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (mace) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Possessions: Set armor (see Arden Vul items); footman's mace; light crossbow; acolyte's wasp stick (see new magic items); and a silver holy symbol of Set (10 gp). Spells prayed for: command, cure light wounds, curse (reverse of bleed), protection from good; hold person, silence 15' radius.

3-93: Guardpost

A section of 4 Set guardsmen lounges behind the curtain in this room, dicing and talking lowly. The walls are painted brightly with desert scenes. They have a barrel of water, a table, and some chairs.

Inhabitants:

1. 4 Set guardsmen (see new monsters), as 2nd-level Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 15, 12; #AT 1, Dmg 2-7 (mace), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: red scale mail and wooden shield; footman's maces; spears; light crossbows with 20 bolts.

3-94: Shrine of Set-Apep

At the east end of the room is another stone table on top of which writhes a coiled green serpent of great length (10'). The serpent coils, writhes, and hisses, but does so in an awkward, mechanistic way. It is in fact shaped of jade inlaid with carnelian, lapis, and other stones in a beautiful and mesmerizingly realistic fashion. Dispel magic causes the serpent to cease writhing, at which point it may be taken (worth 1,000 gp, but heavy and awkward). If touched without first being quieted, the serpent strikes with poisoned fangs as an 8 HD monster; the poison is powerful and will kill unless a save vs. poison is made.

Grill: An iron grill some 4' square is set in the north wall. It provides access to 3-112, and to the giant lizard which roams between 3-94 and 3-111.

Inhabitants: If the grate has opened by the guards (see 3-90), there is a 25% chance that Apophis the giant lizard (see 3-112) has come to investigate.

3-95: Shrine of Set the Knower of Secrets

Against the north wall is a shrine to Set as diviner of secrets. The shrine consists of a table on which are placed several large silver basins glistening with silver liquid (mercury), two golden candlesticks, and two mummified objects, one a hand and the other a small crocodile's head. The hand is a hand of glory (see new magic items). A pathetic and anemic (but still living) ibis hangs in a cage to the right of the table.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 wild boars chained to the east and west walls: SZ M; AL N; AC 7; MV 150'; HD 3+3; HP 24, 20; #AT 1; Dmg 3-12. Special attacks: fights for 2-5 rounds after 0 HP reached, or until -7 HP is reached.
2. 1 Set deacon (see new monsters), as 6th-level Archontean clerics of Set: SZ M; AL LE; AC 3; MV 90'; HD 6; HP 39; #AT 1; Dmg 3-8 (mace +1). Possessions: Set armor +1 (see Arden Vul items); deacon's was stick (see new magic items); footman's mace +1; an amulet of protection against normal missiles (see new magic items); a potion of extra healing; a potion of glibness; a scroll of curse; a gold holy symbol of Set (150 gp); and the key to the chest in 3-89A. Spells prayed for: command, cure light wounds (x2), cause fear, protection from good; chant, hold person, know alignment, resist fire, silence 15' radius; animate dead, dispel magic, cause blindness; cause serious wounds.

Treasure:

Mercury (2 flasks worth 10 gp each), 2 golden candlesticks (50gp), a hand of glory (see new magic items).

3-96: Guardpost

Another section of 4 Set guardsmen lounges behind the curtain. They, too, have a table, chairs, and a water barrel, but they also possess a side of roasted pork. The walls are painted in a starry night scene.

Inhabitants:

1. 4 Set guardsmen (see new monsters), as 2nd-level Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 15, 12; #AT 1, Dmg 2-7 (mace), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: red scale mail and wooden shield; footman's maces; spears; light crossbows with 20 bolts.

3-97: Preparation Room

Sacrificial victims intended for the altar in 3-93 are prepared for their fate here. The many centuries of sacrificial preparations conducted here have produced a permanent fear effect (as the spell); all those not holding a was stick must save vs spells or suffer the effect for 4-16 rounds. Shackles line the north wall. A stone table sits in the center of the room, with more shackles and restraints. Implements of torture designed to get the blood flowing are neatly arranged on a wooden table on the south wall. More torture implements rest in the hallway to 3-109.

3-98: Stair of Screams

This dark and ominous stair proceeds down two steep flights (down about 50'). It is dimly lit by black ever-burning enchanted candles. If anyone who is not evil proceeds down the stairs, the candles start to give off thick black smoke, and blood-curdling screams fill the stairwell. The screams will not summon anyone from the temple proper, as the priests are used to the screams of those souls condemned to torture. The screams do have a 50% chance, however, of bringing the guards from 3-99 to see what new sport is arriving. If combat breaks out on the stairs, there is a further 25% chance that Lenuel the Jailer (3-104) joins the fray after 2-5 rounds.

Secret Door: Halfway down the stairs, on the landing between the two flights, is a secret door. It is easy to find (1 in 4), but difficult to open without the right key (held by Lenuel at 3-104). A turn spent searching might (1 in 6) locate a small circle of stone which, if pressed, will release the catch on the door.

3-99: Guard Chamber

Kathroc and Hidlat, the two torturers of Set, reside in this brightly-lit, homey chamber, along with their four guardsmen. Two bunkbeds line the south wall, while two beds occupy the north wall. The guardsmen have a pair of charcoal-fueled tripods, a table with six chairs, and a water barrel and box full of foodstuffs. A weapons rack hangs on the east wall, over a table on which a large selection of implements (knives, spoons, whips, thongs, etc.) may be found. Each torturer has an iron-bound chest at the foot of his bed. Several impressive specimens of taxidermy line the north and south walls, including heads of a varumani (see new monsters), a lion, a heqeti (see new monsters), and a goblin. A continual light cast on the lion head provides light to the room (and can be covered with a spare blanket). The goblin head has been enchanted to sing jolly folk and drinking songs whenever a bit of alcohol is placed in its mouth; it could be sold for 100 gp.

If screams are produced on the Stair of Screams (3-98), there is a 50% chance that 2 of the guardsmen will poke their heads out of this room to see what is going on. At any given moment there is a 50% chance that the torturers will be busy in one of the torture chambers; if this is the case, they will have taken two guardsmen with them.

Inhabitants:

1. 4 Set guardsmen (see new monsters), as 2nd-level Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 15, 12; #AT 1, Dmg 2-7 (mace), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: red scale mail and wooden shield; footman's maces; spears; light crossbows, 20 bolts.
2. Kathroc, 4th-level male Thorcin fighter: SZ M; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 4; HP 33; #AT 1; Dmg 3-8 (footman's flail +1), or 4-7 (Red Welt). Abilities: STR 15, INT 13, WIS 12, DEX 10, CON 16, CHA 10. Possessions: scale mail; footman's flail +1; and Red Welt (see new magic items). Kathroc's face is round and scarred with welts, some fresh and red and others old and white. He grins almost all the time.
3. Hidlat, 4th-level male Wiskin magic user: SZ M; AL NE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 4; HP 14; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (staff +1). Abilities: STR 9, INT 16, WIS 15, DEX 14, CON 13, CHA 10. Possessions: staff +1; bracers of defense (AC 5); wand of shielding (10 charges). He has memorized the following spells: enlarge, magic missile, shocking grasp; mirror image, ray of enfeeblement. Hidlat is tall, thin, and dour, with greasy black hair and bad skin.

Treasure:

Singing goblin head (100 gp).

Kathroc's chest: 345 sp, 312 gp, and three aquamarines worth 100 gp each.

Hidlat's chest: 756 sp, 213 gp, two 125 gp gems, and his spell book.

Spell Book: enlarge, identify, magic missile, push, read magic, shield, sleep, shocking grasp; fool's gold, mirror image, ray of enfeeblement, scare, strength, wizard lock; flame arrow, tiny hut.

Personal possessions: flail +1, a magic bullwhip named Red Welt (see new magic items), staff +1, bracers of defense (AC 5), and wand of shielding (17 charges - see new magic items).

3-100: Disposal

This small room contains a 5'-diameter hole which drops down 10' to a wider, unmapped, 20'-diameter natural cavern. In the lower cavern is a trapped and hungry otyugh, to which the Set jailors toss the bodies of prisoners who die under torture or who are deemed otherwise useless.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 otyugh: SZ M; AL N; AC 3; MV 60'; HD 7; HP 44; #AT 3; Dmg 1-8/1-8/2-5. Special attacks: disease. Special defenses: limited telepathy (30'); never surprised.

Treasure:

Among the bones on the floor of the pit are two diamonds (850 gp and 1,350 gp) whose owners had swallowed them before capture.

3-101 through 3-103: Torture Chambers

In the old days, the cult of Set was larger and featured more torturers; currently there are only two, and as a result only one chamber tends to be in use at a given time. Most of the time the torturers use 3-103 as they have been told to do so, but occasionally they vary their routine. The three 25'-tall rooms are almost completely identical. Each is brightly lit with torches and is painted a midnight blue. In the center of each room is a large (4'-wide x 4'-tall x 8'-long) stone table with head and limb restraints. Each chamber also has one or more braziers with coals, a set of buckets of various diameters filled with water, and a table with more torture implements. Room 3-103 is different in that it features a smiling jackal head painted on the north wall; the eyes of the jackal are spyholes leading to 3-106A.

If one of the chambers is in use (50% chance), it will be 3-103 almost all (80%) of the time.

Inhabitants: 50% chance for one room to be in use, with 2 torturers (see 3-99), one victim (from 3-105), and 2 Set guardsmen (see new monsters), as 2nd-level Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 15, 12; #AT 1, Dmg 2-7 (mace), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: red scale mail and wooden shield; footman's maces; spears; light crossbows with 20 bolts.

3-104: Jailer's Room

The jailer Lenuel has taken over this former torture chamber for his dwelling. The chamber is decorated just like the other three chambers - midnight blue paint, with stone table and accoutrements. Lenuel has added a set of silk pillows and sheets to the table, and has a small locked iron box under the table in which he keeps his valuables. He has a human woman (Eadgithu) chained to the wall for use as his personal plaything.

Lenuel is present in his chamber 50% of the time; otherwise he is found at 3-105.

Inhabitants:

1. Lenuel the jailer, 5th-level Archontean fighter (50% chance): SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 5; HP 39; #AT 1; Dmg 3-8 (short sword +1). Possessions: short sword +1; chain mail; and boots of the north. Lenuel has STR 17. He also carries a key ring with 10 keys on it, including keys to each of the cells at 3-105, the key to his iron box (see below), and a key to the secret door at 3-98.
2. Eadgithu, 2nd-level female Thorcin ranger: SZ M; AL CG; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 2; HP 14 (max 19); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 17, INT 15, WIS 16, DEX 16, CON 13, CHA 10. She gratefully joins any party that helps her escape Arden Vul. She might be willing to permanently join a good-aligned party.

Treasure:

The iron box is trapped and locked (poison needle); Lenuel holds the key. Inside are 155 pp, 127 sp, 4 aquamarines worth 100 gp each, a potion of extra healing, and the spell book of Geleg, a prisoner in 3-105. Geleg's spell book includes the following: charm person, comprehend languages, detect magic, enlarge, friends, Frigg's flatulence (see new spells), identify, light, read magic, shield, sleep, floating disk; ESP, levitate, mirror image, strength, web, wizard lock; clairaudience, clairvoyance, dispel magic, hold person, monster summoning I.

3-105: Prisons of Set

The notorious prison of Set comprises seven 10'x10' cells enclosed by iron bars (each with its own lock). It is here that interesting prisoners are brought for interrogation, torture, and possible sacrifice in the temple proper (lesser captives are sold as slaves in 4-3 if Set Sobek in 3-91 has no more gems to offer for severed limbs). The prison area has a sloping ceiling that is some 25' high on the northeast and southeast walls but only 12' high on the western wall. The whole room is well lit with several continual light spells. Against the southeast wall are a table and some chairs, where four guardsmen sit, dice, and taunt the prisoners. There is a 50% chance that Lenuel the jailer is also present (see 3-104). The northeast wall features two obvious observation slits some 20' up the wall (leading to 3-106). If there are Set deacons present in 3-106 (15% chance), intruders will hear various shouts of encouragement and direction from the observation slits. It is possible that the deacons will also fire spells through the slits if combat breaks out in the prison area.

Inhabitants:

1. 4 Set guardsmen (see new monsters), as 2nd-level Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 17, 15, 12; #AT 1, Dmg 2-7 (mace), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: red scale mail and wooden shield; footman's maces; spears; light crossbows with 20 bolts.
2. Lenuel the jailer (50%): for stats see 3-104

Inhabitants of the Cells: The GM should feel free to plant prisoners who will aid the plots of his/her campaign. What follows are merely some suggestions of potential prisoners. All prisoners are clad only in undergarments; their equipment has been dispersed elsewhere.

A: Lillian, canon of the temple of Mitra in Newmarket (see World of Archontos appendix), as a 4th-level female Archontean cleric: SZ M; AL CG; AC 9; MV 120'; HD 4; HP 8 (max 22); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 11, INT 15, WIS 17, DEX 15, CON 10, CHA 15. As she is gagged, she has not prayed for spells. She was taken by beastmen in the valley of the Swift River and sold to the Cult of Set. She has been tortured and is in bad physical shape, although her spirits are still strong. If released, she requests assistance in returning to Newmarket, where a reward of 5,000 gp is waiting.

B: Gribble, a goblin captain (as gnoll): SZ S; AC 4; MV 60'; HD 2; HP; 12; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8, but weaponless at the moment. A brother of King Weskenim (SL4-22), Gribble was taken in ambush on Level 5. He has not been tortured much, as the Set cultists are hoping to trade him back to the goblins for territory and/or information.

C. Empty

D. A fishman (see new monsters), bought from the lizardmen: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60', 150' swimming; HD 3+1; HP 19; #AT 2 or 1; Dmg 1-3/1-3 or 2-7 (bone club, spear or javelin); MR 10%. Special attacks: paralyzing mucus. Special defenses: immune to cold and poison. The fishman attacks if released. Unbeknownst to the jailer, the guardsmen, and the fishman, this cell contains an ancient escape tunnel hidden under a flagstone. It leads to Level 4 and area 4-157.

E. Geleg, 5th-level male Archontean magic user: SZ M; AL NG; AC 10; MV 120'; HD 5; HP 17; #AT: 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 9, INT 18, WIS 15, DEX 10, CON 15, CHA 13. Geleg is an adventurer captured in the Halls. He is a plump, cheerful fellow with a fondness for sweets. He has not been tortured ... yet. His spell book may be found in 3-104. He eagerly joins any good-aligned party.

F. Azgallatu, 4th-level male Archontean cleric of Mitra: SZ M; AL CG; AC 10; MV 120'; HD 4; HP 8 (max 28); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 16, INT 10, WIS 17, DEX 12, CON 16, CHA 7. Azgallatu is manacled and gagged. He is a fierce warrior cleric with a strange blue-tinged scar along the right side of his face. Azgallatu was imprisoned for insulting a ranking member of the Guild of Service in the Forum of Set (4-2); three of his fellows escaped and are holed up in area 3-214.

G. Grist the Hammer, a 4th-level male dwarven fighter searching for evidence of dwarven activity in Arden Vul: SZ M; AL LN; AC 10; MV 90'; HD 4; HP 5 (max 35); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 18/55, INT 11, WIS 12, DEX 9, CON 16, CHA 10. Grist is in bad shape. Like most dwarves, he is suspicious of all other races and is reluctant to share information with rescuers. Still, he cautiously joins those who can help him escape Arden Vul. He might accompany such a group for a longer period if his rescuers can prove their power and wealth, or if they have evidence of dwarven activity.

3-106: Observation Chamber

A pair of spy holes set in the southwest wall allow observation of activity in 3-105. The small chamber contains three leather-bound easy chairs, some side tables stocked with goblets and wine bottles, and a bench that abuts the southwest wall. High level Set priests like to come here and observe the misery of the prisoners. They occasionally shout commands to the guards below, mostly asking them to prod or otherwise discomfit the prisoners.

Inhabitants:

1. 2-4 Set deacons (see new monsters), as 6th-level Archontean clerics of Set (15% chance): SZ M; AL LE; AC 3; MV 90'; HD 6; HP 42, 39, 36, 33; #AT 1; Dmg 3-8 (mace +1). Possessions: Set armor +1 (see Arden Vul items); deacon's was stick (see new magic items); footman's mace +1; an amulet of protection against normal missiles (see new magic items); a potion of extra healing; a potion of glibness; a scroll of curse; a gold holy symbol of Set (150 gp); and the key to the chest in 3-89A. Spells prayed for: command, cure light wounds (x2), cause fear, protection from good; chant, hold person, know alignment, resist fire, silence 15' radius; animate dead, dispel magic, cause blindness; cause serious wounds.

3-106A: Observation Window

This side passage leads to a pair of spy-holes which overlook the torture chamber at 3-103. At the end of the passage is a bench and a parchment codex with notes written in it. The notes can provide mundane information, grisly torture details, or clues to aspects of the Halls depending on the GM's wishes.

3-107: Robing Room

The Set priesthood uses this room for robing and preparing for rituals in the main temple. It is brightly lit with continual light, and features large frescoes with images of Set crushing enemies (ibises, baboons, bipedal amphibians) and receiving tribute from abject specimens of many races. Two racks by the south wall carry ceremonial robes and headdresses, while four comfortable leather-bound chairs and several tables with metal cups and flagons of wine sit by the east wall. There is a 50% chance that a Set deacon and 2 acolytes are present here, preparing for rituals.

Secret Door (south): This door is easy to locate (1 in 4) but may only be opened by fitting a rod-shaped object (staff, spear-butt, etc.) into a small hole in the ceiling. The door leads to the spy tunnels around the prisons of set.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 Set deacon (see new monsters), as 6th-level Archontean clerics of Set (50% chance): SZ M; AL LE; AC 3; MV 90'; HD 6; HP 42; #AT 1; Dmg 3-8 (mace +1). Possessions: Set armor +1 (see Arden Vul items); deacon's was stick (see new magic items); footman's mace +1; an amulet of protection against normal missiles (see new magic items); a potion of extra healing; a potion of glibness; a scroll of curse; a gold holy symbol of Set (150 gp); and the key to the chest in 3-89A. Spells prayed for: command, cure light wounds (x2), cause fear, protection from good; chant, hold person, know alignment, resist fire, silence 15' radius; animate dead, dispel magic, cause blindness; cause serious wounds.
2. 2 junior Set acolytes (see new monsters), as 2nd-level Archontean clerics of Set (50%): SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 13, 12; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (mace) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Possessions: Set armor (see Arden Vul items); footman's mace; light crossbow; acolyte's was stick (see new magic items); and a silver holy symbol of Set (10 gp). Spells prayed for: command, cure light wounds, curse (reverse of bless), protection from good.

Treasure:

One of the cups is silver and worth 25 gp.

3-108: Alcove

This alcove contains a wooden bench and two wooden pegs fixed to the wall, on each of which hang a distinctive mask. The masks are semblances of the Set animal (long curved snout, square ears), and are enchanted. The priests use the Set animal masks (see new magic items) to observe torture sessions and the prisoners in area 3-105.

Treasure:

2 Set animal masks (see new magic items).

3-109: Waiting Room

Cultists wait here before being permitted to enter the temple of Set. The walls are plastered, and depict scenes of Set animals preening, receiving worshippers, and being adored. A black curtain runs across the back of the room, obscuring the door to the torture chamber at 3-97 (occasionally the priests need to 'borrow' a cultist for ceremonial purposes, and this door allows that to happen). Wooden benches fill the room, and a barrel of lukewarm water is mounted on a table on the south wall by the door. A variety of cultists are always present here, chattering eagerly under the supervision of a pair of Set acolytes.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 junior Set acolytes (see new monsters): as 2nd-level Archontean clerics of Set: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 14, 13; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (mace) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Possessions: Set armor (see Arden Vul items); footman's mace; light crossbow; acolyte's was stick (see new magic items); and a silver holy symbol of Set (10 gp). Spells prayed for: command, cure light wounds, curse (reverse of bless), protection from good.
2. 3-30 Set cultists (see new monsters): SZ M; AL LE; AC 9; MV 90'; HD 1; HP 7(x5), 6(x6), 5(x7), 4(x8), 3(x4); #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger) or 2-7 (flail) or 1-6 (staff). Special attacks: fanaticism. Possessions: padded armor; daggers; flails or staves.

Treasure:

Each acolyte has 28 sp and 17 gp. Each cultist has 56 sp and 21 gp.

3-110: Bronze Doors and Set's Path

The massive bronze doors leading to the Temple of Set (3-90) are normally kept unlocked, unless a major ritual is underway. The keys are kept by the high priestess (4-51).

The 20'-wide stairway-cum-corridor is known as Set's Path, and leads deeper into the complex, culminating after 100' of slow descent in area 4-1.

3-111: Cavern Crossroads

This large, c-shaped cavern has a flattened, sandy floor. It serves as a nexus point for several tunnels leading to various areas of the Halls. The cavern is some 50' tall, and is normally dark. The atmosphere is cool and wet, and stalactites hang from the ceiling. Clear paths through the dust lead to 3-110, 3-112, 3-114, and 3-115.

A section of Set guardsmen is posted here under the control of an acolyte in order to watch the passageways. They normally lurk on the ledge of the mouth of the tunnel leading to 3-110.

Apophis the lizard (3-112) likes to hunt in this cavern for bats, cave crickets, and other delicacies. There is a 50% chance that she will be encountered here; otherwise she will be in 3-112 (25%) or lurking by the grate at 3-94 (25%).

Inhabitants:

1. 6 Set guardsmen (see new monsters), as 2nd-level Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 16, 16, 15, 12; #AT 1, Dmg 2-7 (mace), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: red scale mail and wooden shield; footman's maces; spears; light crossbows with 20 bolts.
2. 1 Set acolyte (see new monsters), as a 3rd-level Archontean cleric of Set: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 60'; HD 3; HP 19; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (mace) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Possessions: Set armor (see Arden Vul items); footman's mace; light crossbow; acolyte's was stick (see new magic items); and a silver holy symbol of Set (10 gp). Spells prayed for: command, cure light wounds, curse (reverse of bless), protection from good; hold person, silence 15' radius.
3. Apophis (see 3-112), 50% chance

3-112: Lair of Apophis

Apophis, the giant lizard and revered aspect of Set, makes her lair in this cave. The cave is natural, although steps have been carved in the tunnel to allow easier access to 3-111. The lizard has created a nest of bones, dirt, straw, and other goodies. If the grate at 3-94 is open, it is likely (25%) that she will have come to 3-94 to investigate, drink, and/or assault any intruders. Otherwise she may be encountered here (25%) or in 3-111 (50%). She is trained to obey those who wield was sticks.

Inhabitants:

1. Apophis, the exceptionally large giant lizard (50% chance): SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 150'; HD 5+1; HP 35; #AT 1; Dmg 3-13. Special attacks: double damage on a natural 20.

Treasure:

Hidden deep in the nest is a ring of truth.

3-113: Ledge and Cave with Hole to 3-22

The ledge is 20' up the northeast wall of area 3-111, and leads to a cave filled with stalactites and stalagmites. About twenty of the rock formations have been snapped off, and the remains of a campfire and discarded ration-packages litter the floor. A 3'-diameter hole may be found in the floor at the far east of the cave; a rope ladder is attached to a large stalagmite next to the hole. Carved crudely onto the stalagmite in Archontean are the words "Stilicho was here." The hole leads to area 3-22.

3-114: Winding Tunnel with Hole to Level 5 (5-99)

This steeply descending tunnel has several sections of steps carved into it. The tunnel leads to a small cave in which is found a 5'-wide hole covered with a heavy wooden cover. The hole very gently slopes to the northwest and leads downward about 250' to Level 5 (5-99).

3-115: Tunnel Leading Down to Level 4 (4-88)

This tunnel snakes down about 100' until it eventually joins Level 4 at 4-88.

3-116: Hidden Tomb

High (40') up on the southwest wall of the cavern (3-111) is a ledge concealed by a glamor to look as if it were part of the cavern wall. The cult of Set is ignorant of this tomb. The corridor leading to the burial crypt is of roughly finished stone; its walls are faintly decorated with geometric images intermixed with some primitive sketches of warriors and salamander-like amphibians (heqeti - see new monsters). The walls and ceiling of the crypt itself are also rough-carved. Lying in the center of the crypt under a carpet of dust is a 10'-long stone sarcophagus, atop of which sits a thick tallow candle mounted on a heqeti skull. The lid of the sarcophagus is intact and still bears the faint polychromed image of a man with a ram-horn helmet holding a massive two-handed sword. If the lid is disturbed, Tuolicha the mummy rises to repel the desecrators.

Secret Door (southeast): The door is easy to locate (1 in 4 chance), but difficult to open (a key in the mummy's sarcophagus fits a small hole in the rock).

Inhabitants:

1. Tuolicha, a mummy: SZ M; AL LE; AC 2; MV 60'; HD 6+3; HP 41; #AT 1; Dmg 1-12. Special attacks: fear; rotting disease. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; half damage from magic weapons; immune to sleep, charm, hold, cold, poison, paralysis. Possessions: torc of protection (see new magic items).

Treasure:

In addition to the torc of protection (see new magic items), the following lie inside the sarcophagus: a two-handed sword +1, +3 vs heqeti; 450 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items); potions of healing, invisibility, and levitation; a silver circlet set with jade (750 gp), the key to the secret door, and a treasure map showing a route from 3-1 to the tomb of Sethu (5-57 to 5-60).

3-117: Dripping Chamber, with Well to Level 5 (5-104)

The corridor from 3-116 is narrow, low, and cramped (5'x5'x5'); it is completely undecorated. It ends at a square stone door with a simple wooden latch. The latch lifts easily.

Brightly lit by no visible light source, the chamber is sheathed in white marble squares (5' square) on all walls, floor and ceiling. The floor is slightly convex, dipping towards a 10'-diameter basin placed in the middle of the floor. Each square of marble has a symbol incised in its center and filled with gold inlay. The symbols are identical: an open, toothless mouth, from which extends a thick tongue. All of the marble tiles are slick with dripping moisture; close examination will determine that the moisture beads up on each incised tongue, only to drip off or down, eventually collecting in the basin. Not surprisingly, the chamber is quite slippery. All movement is halved, and the incautious should roll 3d6 under DEX to keep their footing. Anyone slipping has a chance to end up in the basin, where he or she will be affected by multiple doses of sweat of Rimmaq-Isfet (see new magic items) for 5-20 damage.

At the east end of the room is a 5'-diameter well extending some 200' down and exiting on Level 5 (5-104). Small handholds have been chiseled into the stone well.

The liquid is clear and slightly more viscous than water. It is in fact an extrusion of Rimmaq-Isfet and is known to sages as the sweat of Rimmaq-Isfet (see new magic items). There is enough sweat in the basin to fill 10 flasks. It will be replenished at a rate of 1 flask-full per day.

Treasure:

Up to 10 flasks of sweat of Rimmaq-Isfet (see new magic items).

3-118: Oracle of Thoth

Passing through the central mouth in 2-70 leads PCs to a long and steep stairway that descends in a series of twists for some 150'. The stairwell is narrow (5' wide), roughly carved, and unadorned. Eventually it ends at a small landing (10'x10'x10') where PCs can glimpse light through a 4'x4' hole in the ceiling. The hole leads to the legendary Oracle of Thoth.

The Oracle chamber lies beneath a shallow dome some 25' high in its center, and is brightly lit by a continual light spell. There is no height to the walls; rather, they curve inward and upwards immediately (making the ceiling quite low along the edge of the chamber). The ceiling is painted with a bright yellow paint that glitters and sparkles in the light. Although the Oracle was originally sheltered behind a set of hanging curtains, the curtains have long since rotted, leaving a sagging set of iron curtain rods in a square around the central feature of the chamber, the Oracle.

The Oracle: A 10'x10' dais lies in the center of the iron curtain-frames. On the dais is a large and unusual statue. It is of an ibis, with wings cocked to enclose a marble seat just in front of the ibis's body. The seat is arranged such that any who sit in it will find their body closely enfolded by the ibis's wings, and their erect head shadowed by the ibis's beak. The ibis statue is impressive: marble, lapis, and jet cleverly worked together to produce an effect of verisimilitude. The head is pure white marble and carved to resemble a real bird - with the exception that the eyes are empty and vacant holes. Although the statue is clearly stone, the marble may be seen to gently rise and fall, as if the bird were actually breathing. The plinth on which the statue sits bears an inscription in the secret tongue of the priests of Thoth: “Sit, Ask, and Receive. Lord Thoth Knows All.”

Currently a human figure is writhing in the chair, surrounded by the wings of the ibis. This is Anaximander, an Archontean sage. Arriving here 250 years ago with Adrienic’s expedition (see 5-18), Anaximander sought to trick the Oracle into providing more than its customary delphic pronouncements. As a result he has been condemned ever since to trade riddles with an Aspect of Thoth while his life was preserved (barely) by the magical breath of Thoth. Anaximander’s body is wasted and thin, and his beard and hair are now long, stringy and white. He mutters nonsense words under his breath as he thrashes about. Only if he is physically pulled from the Oracle will he leave its embrace. Sadly, he then faces life as an extremely old, frail, and insane person, whose ravings may well be taken as oracular themselves. He will not be able to convey much of interest to adventurers, and if pressed will merely babble in Archontean “My hubris was my downfall. Hubris! Pride! Alas. The voice .... I could not withstand His voice ....” He speaks thereafter in crude doggerel and only responds to questions with riddles or with what may actually be the answers to unknown riddles.

Consulting the Oracle: Once Anaximander is gone, anyone may consult the Oracle by sitting in the chair. A postulant is immediately enveloped by a warm secure layer of air, and *feels* a low voice state “Speak Thy Desire” in his/her mind. Speaking or thinking a question results in several seconds of psychic turmoil culminating in the postulant losing conscious control of his or her brain. Bystanders will then hear a deep, alien voice boom forth from the lips of the postulant as the oracle is declaimed. The postulant must succeed at a roll of 4d6 under INT to recall what Thoth said through him or her. What is said by the Oracle is delphic, that is, obscure and in need of interpretation; in no way does it provide a straight factual answer. The Oracle can and will predict future events as well as specific, current questions of fact; the degree of opacity of its answer is inversely related to both the specificity of a question or the temporal distance of a prediction. More specific factual questions and more distant predictions will elicit more opaque responses. For instance, if a postulant asks/thinks, “Will I die in the Halls of Arden Vul”, the Oracle might reply in fairly specific ways, such as “Thy fate is linked to the month of the Crab and the acquisition of the iron cirlet of Ghanor; Thou shall not fear under such signs” [a very specific response]. If a postulant were to ask, “Where is the iron cirlet of Ghanor?”, the response might be “Resisting the Breath of the Feeble will lay bare the Path” [a reference to 3-127A]. And if a postulant were to ask, “Will I become a king?” the response would be true, but vague, along the lines of “Thou shall reign over time and mortals in the capacity that Thou desires.”

Effects of an Oracular Pronouncement: In addition to the Oracle’s pronouncement, Thoth’s voice stuns listeners for 1-4 rounds (save vs petrification to resist) and reduces the WIS of the postulant by 2-6 for 1-4 days due to the psychic shock of acting as the conduit for Thoth’s dicta. If the postulant is a priest of Thoth, the wisdom loss is halved (1-3). If the postulant is evil, a greater guardian of Thoth (see new monsters) teleports in to dispatch the blasphemer (this is in addition to the standard WIS loss). There is a base 10% chance that any postulant immediately becomes a devotee of Thoth; this chance increases by 2% for each subsequent consultation. Such converts will be fanatical, and conversion may have class and/or alignment implications.

Due to the psychic stress of channeling Thoth, characters may only consult the Oracle once per month.

Inhabitant:

1. Anaximander, male Archontean sage: SZ M; AL LN; AC 10; MV 120’; HD 8d4; HP 3 (max 14); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 13, INT 18, WIS 16, DEX 8, CON 5, CHA 8. Without his books and research materials, he has only access to the following clerical spells: detect evil, detect magic; augury; locate object; divination, tongues; true seeing; stone tell. Anaximander was a famous sage in his day, but is now more than 300 years old and insane. Were it possible to cure him, his major field of study is physical universe (specialties: architecture & engineering, chemistry, geology & mineralogy), while his minor fields of study are humankind and supernatural and unusual.
2. 1 greater guardian of Thoth (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LN; AC 0; MV 120’; HD 8; HP 53; #AT 4 or 1; Dmg 1-8/1-8/1-8/1-8 or 1-12; MR 20%. Special attacks: fear, stun. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; teleport without error 2/day.

3-119: Fountain of Knowledge

This domed chamber is damp and mildewed, and features long strands of rotting plaster hanging from the ceiling/walls. In the center of the chamber a 10’-wide basin holds a fountain from which gushes prodigious amounts clear, cold water. The water has spilled over the basin and has collected in a low pool occupying the southeast corner of the room. Over centuries the fountain and pool have eroded a segment of wall, producing a small stream that disappears into a wall of fractured rock.

Fountain: Although the liquid is indeed simple water, the basin is magical and serves to temporarily transform the liquid into a potent elixir - at least so long as it is in the basin. Originally the basin’s magic was limited to providing a WIS boost to those who drank from it (to counter the effects of the Oracle), but the passage has time has caused the basin to function in a rather more unpredictable fashion. The Fountain of Knowledge may only be consulted once per month per person.

D20	Effect
1-5	+ 1-4 WIS for 1-4 days (original function)
6-8	+1-3 points to a random attribute for 1-4 days
9-11	-1-3 points to a random attribute for 1-4 days
12-14	Strong delusion for 1-4 days (e.g. believes a companion to be a devil; sees a shadow trailing a member of the party, etc.)
15-17	Heal 4-40 HP and cure disease
18-19	Poison. Take 1-8 damage per round for 3-6 rounds; save for half damage. If fail first save, must make second save at end of the 3-6 rounds. If fail second save, die. If succeed, take an additional 2-8.
20	Re-roll twice, ignoring future results of 20

3-120: Entrance Hall and Doors

This 20'-wide hallway ends in a pair of massive stone double doors at its eastern end. The hallway was once plastered, but the plaster is gone, revealing the arrow slits on the north wall. The doors open inward, and are scorched and cracked, with chunks broken off. They are stuck open at about a 20-degree angle, leaving a 3'-wide entrance between them. The portals themselves are carved stone (not plastered); one door bears an ibis and the other a feather.

3-121: Guard Post

The beastmen mount a watch in this guard post. If the watchers detect intruders, they blow a pair of enormous horns mounted in the east wall. The horns echo like alpenhorns with a dull, reverberating boom that resonates into the Great Hall (3-123).

Inhabitants:

1. 2 beastman troopers (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 6, 5; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spears; short swords; short bows.

Treasure:

3-18 sp per beastman.

3-122: Secret Door and Passageway

Secret Door (west wall of 3-123, leading to 3-127): This door is difficult to notice (1 in 8). It opens by pressing the bell of one of the horns protruding from the nearby wall inward and sharply (see 3-123).

Beyond the door a set of steep steps descend to a 5'-wide by 6'-tall passageway of rough-hewn rock that leads to 3-127. All those who pass through the secret door are subject to a dispel magic spell, unless they first utter a prayer to Thoth. For more details, see 3-127.

3-123: Great Hall

The Great Hall is an imposing place, with a ceiling that stretches some 100' above the floor. Originally a hall for major meetings of the whole cult of Thoth, it has become a no-man's land separating the organized beastmen (areas 3-138 to 3-162) from the halflings to the north. For the first 25' of wall height, the Hall was originally plastered and decorated with images of Thoth. Among the remaining scenes may be seen a monumental side view of Thoth, with his left arm horizontal to the ground and pointing, and his right arm against his thigh (a clue to the puzzle in 3-2). The upper reaches of the hall extend into Sub-Level 3 (see SL3-3).

The Hall is dark, although brackets for a score of torches still exist on the walls.

Eight 40'-tall freestanding columns once lined the Hall, but they have been thrown over, and only 5'-tall broken splinters still remain. There is remarkably little dust here, a sign that much traffic flows through this hall. Scorch marks are easily noticeable on the floor and walls, and a large number of broken arrows litter the ground. Anyone with a strong enough light source who looks up may notice an arcade circumscribing the hall along with a stone bridge passing west to east, and the looming statue of Thoth, the Overseer of Truth, some 75' above, at the south end of the Hall (see SL3-3). If the beastmen have sounded the horns in 3-121, anyone entering the Great Hall will hear the sounds of large kettledrums beating a military rhythm (see 3-123A).

The Great Hall is home to a flight of 6 ibis-form gargoyles, who nest in niches some 40' up the wall of the Hall. The gargoyles are a little slow, and will not rouse themselves to attack those who march purposefully to a particular exit. Those who spend more than three turns in the hall will be attacked within 2-6 rounds.

Horn Bells: The bells of the two horns from 3-121 are embedded in the eastern wall of the Hall, just north of the entrance from 3-121. The watchers use the horns to alert their fellow beastmen of approaching intruders. Pressing the mouth of one of the horns inward, and sharply, opens the secret door at 3-122.

Magic Mouth: A painting of a bearded man with empty eyes is found on the west wall just south of the entrance from 3-121. If approached within 10' by a medium sized or larger creature, the image animates into a garrulous mouth (see new spells) and speaks in Archontean: "The Path of Lord Priscus is the path to enlightenment and fulfillment. The eyes will tell you the way." The garrulous mouth loses its force after it has been approached by, and has spoken to, eight medium-sized creatures. The mouth refers to the Priscians, whose base is located at 9-58 to 9-64, and who employ Sortian eyes (see new magic items) to activate Sortian faces (see new magic items) in various places throughout the halls (e.g. 6-48).

Overhead Bridge: A stone bridge extends across the width of the Great Hall. The bridge is 75' above the floor of the Hall and is this difficult to make out. The bridge is part of the Upper Great Hall complex; see Sub-Level 3 (SL3-3B).

Secret Door (west, leading to 3-121): The door to 3-121 is easy (1 in 4) to find and opens by simply pushing a stone panel inward.

Note: The Great Hall is the destination location for several one-way teleporters found elsewhere in the Halls. These include the teleporters at UP-11, 2-10 and 4-167. Those teleported here find themselves standing at the far north of the Great Hall, between the fallen pillars.

Inhabitants:

1. 4 simian-form gargoyles: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 90', 150' flying (Class C); HD 4+4; HP 32, 29, 28, 22; #AT 4; Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-6/1-4. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit.

Treasure:

None on the floor of the Hall, although each gargoyle has a small stash of loot in its niche. #1: a pair of +1 throwing daggers; #2: two carved ivory teeth of Pol (see new magic items); the teeth can be used to activate the stone head at SL6-8; #3: a 195 gp pearl and a green glass activation square (see Thothian teleportation rings in new magic items); #4 a silver pitcher worth 25 gp and 2 aquamarines worth 100 gp.

3-123A: Beastman Barricades

Each of these three locations features a similar barricade, which takes the form of a 7'-tall masonry wall running across the original hallway. The beastmen have built fighting platforms 4' up the eastern sides of the new walls, on which they can stand and project missiles at enemies approaching from the Great Hall. Each wall has a 4'x4' wooden door set into it. The doors are kept closed and locked at all times.

Each barricade is manned by a bandon of 6 beastman troopers and a beastman sergeant. They do not immediately engage those entering the Great Hall, but, if warned by the horns at 3-121, they begin to beat their kettle drums in a slow, rhythmic tempo. Thus warned, they are watchful and ready to negotiate forcefully with any who approach. If confronted by clearly superior forces or if they lose 33% casualties quickly, the sergeant will send a runner to summon additional forces from the relevant barracks (3-138, 3-140, or 3-141) as well as from their varumani allies in 3-162 (25% chance the varumani ignore the summons). Beastman reinforcements arrive in 4-6 rounds, and one of the varumani arrives in 1 turn.

Note that the northernmost barricade can be supported by arrow fire through the arrow slit in the wall leading to 3-138.

Inhabitants:

1. 6 beastman troopers (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 8, 7, 7, 6, 6, 5; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spears; short swords; short bows.
2. 1 beastman sergeant (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 2+2; HP 15; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 or 2-5. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spear; war hammer.

Treasure:

3-18 sp per beastman.

3-124: Fearful Chamber

A glyph of warding (fear) has been inscribed in a 20'-diameter circle in the center of this chamber. Unlike most such glyphs, it is permanent, at least until dispelled by a 12th-level caster. Those crossing the glyph must save vs spells (at -1) to avoid running in terror in a random direction (roll 1d4: 1: north, 2: east, 3: south, 4: west).

Drawn to the glyph, a fear elemental (see new monsters) has occupied this chamber, thereby preventing the escape of the goblins (3-130) and guardsmen (3-125). The fear elemental attacks after the glyph has done its work, aiming first at those who make their save and then moving to track down the terrified. The elemental is unable to enter the Great Hall, but will pursue prey through any open doorways in the area from 3-124 to 3-137. Currently the door to 3-125 is closed and spiked from the north side; the door to 3-129 is open slightly; and the door to 3-133 is ajar.

Trap: Fear glyph of warding (save vs spells at -1)

Inhabitants:

1. 1 fear elemental (see new monsters): SZ L; AC 0; MV 90'; HD 6; HP 39; #AT 1 per target; Dmg special; MR 50%. Special attacks: cause fear; immobilize with fear; drain CON. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to cold and fire.

3-125: Set Patrol Beset

An exploration party of Set guardsmen, led by Hamil the acolyte, ran into trouble in the Great Hall, fled west, and, like the goblins

(3-130), became trapped by the fear elemental. The guardsmen are attempting to recuperate in this undecorated former administrative chamber. A fire burns in a hastily improvised fire pit, and the entire party is jumpy, choosing to fight first and ask questions later. If pressed, they release their zombified former comrades from 3-126. They have piled a fair amount of rubble against the door to 3-128.

Pile of Rubble: A pile of rubble in the northwest corner contains the remains of a dead priest of Thoth, still wearing a silver amulet of Thoth (25 gp).

Inhabitants:

1. 4 Set guardsmen (see new monsters), as 2nd-level Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 15, 12; #AT 1, Dmg 2-7 (mace), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: red scale mail and wooden shield; footman's maces; spears; light crossbows with 20 bolts.
2. Hamil, the advanced Set acolyte (see new monsters), as a 5th-level Archontean cleric of Set: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 60'; HD 5; HP 31; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (mace) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Possessions: Set armor (see Arden Vul items); footman's mace; light crossbow; acolyte's was stick (see new magic items); potions of healing and singing birds (see new magic items); and a silver holy symbol of Set (10 gp). Spells prayed for: command, cure light wounds, curse (reverse of bless), protection from good, sanctuary; augury, chant, hold person, silence 15' radius, spiritual hammer; animate dead. Hamil wears a tattered but still usable cloak of the bat taken from the dead Thoth priest; he only knows that it provides improved armor class, and nothing about its special abilities.

3-126: Zombies

Two dead Set guardsmen have been raised by Hamil as zombies, and have been told to wait in this closet. The closet contains nothing of interest.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 zombies: SZ M; AL N; AC 8; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 12, 10; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8. Special: always strike last.

3-127: Hidden Tombs

The narrow, low tunnel from 3-122 is littered with five charred, rotted bodies containing no usable equipment except an ebony ring of protection +1 that closely matches the color of the corpse its upon. It ends in a simple wooden door, which is swollen with moisture; it is stuck, and an open doors check is required to open it. This is the tomb of Neferet, one of the last high priestesses of Thoth. It is also the location of the equally legendary iron circlet of Ghanor (see new magic items), one of the key minor artifacts to be found in the Halls.

The main area (3-127) is a 10'-tall chamber whose walls are brightly plastered and painted with pleasant pastoral scenes of men and women fishing, hawking, and hunting. The west wall (to 3-127A) is illusory, and appears to be unbroken and comparable to the rest of the chamber. The north and south walls feature wide archways leading to separate chambers (3-127B and 3-127C).

The apparent tomb of Neferet dominates the center of the main chamber. On a 2' dais rests a large basalt sarcophagus (6' long, 3' high, 2'-4' wide). The long sides are carved with the Mithric phrase "Neferet, Beloved of Thoth, Seeker of Truth, Preserver of Secrets". The lid is incised with an image of a placid-looking female in classic pose, wearing a circlet. It will take quite a bit of work to remove the lid, but it is possible (open doors check). If her tomb is opened, the creatures in the surrounding chambers will waken and move to attack the intruders. Note that Neferet herself (in 3-127A) commences combat by casting spells through the illusory wall.

The false tomb contains nothing but sand. Disturbing the sand also disturbs the layer of dust of sneezing and choking that covers it. PCs could collect three doses of the dust if very careful.

Treasure:

Dust of sneezing and choking (up to 3 doses).

3-127A: Illusory Wall and True Tomb

Behind the illusory wall from 3-127 lies the true tomb of Neferet. This chamber is only 8' tall, and is painted with a darker hue of blue on which appear a variety of mystical symbols (moons, stars, hermetic symbols, knots, etc.). In the center of the room is a simple granite sarcophagus. The rest of the chamber is crowded with grave goods: delicate gilt chairs, a gilt settee, several ankhs on the end of 10' poles, a 10'-diameter net made of gold mesh, and a variety of alabaster and jet canopic jars.

A few bits of crumpled parchment have been tossed into the corners. One reads, in Mithric: "To Neferet, glorious Priestess, from Hellas, humble librarian, greetings. I am working to accommodate your request to transport the contents of the special library to your new residence. Alas, the flight of so many of our acolytes, the evils of the present age, and my own decrepitude has delayed their transfer. I will seek to fulfill your wishes in good order." [GM Note: this is the final draft of the note found in 2-71; Hellas never intended to move the library]

If intruders have opened the sarcophagus in 3-127, Neferet rises as a greater mummy to smite the desecrators. She is still dressed in the tattered orange ceremonial robes of the priesthood of Thoth, and bears a prominent ankh and ibis on a chain around her neck. She still wears the iron circlet of Ghanor (see new magic items). She cannot be turned while in area 3-127.

Tactics: Once awakened, Neferet allows her minions from 3-127B and 3-127C to confront the desecrators while she fires spells through the illusory wall. The source of these magical attacks may be unclear, at least unless (or until) one of her foes uses true seeing or discovers the illusory wall. The only hint to her location is the smell of spice that emanates strongly from her body. Sample tactics: Neferet opens combat by casting silence 15' radius into 3-127, then protection from good and hold person. Given conditions in 3-127, she might then cast insect plague or blindness. She uses cause and cure wounds spells as needed. She waits until the illusory wall is discovered to cast darkness, and until her minions are defeated to use flame strike. Only then, and possibly only after casting resist fire on herself, will she emerge to engage in hand-to-hand combat. Although she still wears the iron circlet of Ghanor (see new magic items), she is unable to use it (an unforeseen side effect of her mummification).

Inhabitants:

1. Neferet, greater mummy (see new monsters): SZ M; AL LE; AC 0; MV 90'; HD 10+3; HP 71; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12; MR 50%. Special attacks: aura of despair (saves at -3); mummy rot; command other undead. Special defenses: magic weapons to hit (+1 does 1 HP damage; +2 does half damage; +3 does full damage); immune to cold; takes half damage from non-magical fire; turned as a ghost. Possessions: amulet of protection from normal missiles; pearl necklace of invisibility (8 pearls); iron circlet of Ghanor (see new magic items for all three). Spells as a 10th-level cleric with WIS 18: command(x2), protection from good, darkness, curse (reverse of bless); cause light wounds; hold person(x2), silence 15' radius(x2), resist fire, chant; dispel magic, bestow curse (reverse of remove curse), blindness, animate dead; protection from good 10' radius, cure serious wounds(x2), cause serious wounds; flame strike, insect plague.

Treasure:

Gilt grave goods worth a total of 5,000 gp if intact (roll 4d6 under DEX to remove without damage), or 250 gp for the gilt; immobilizing mesh (see new magic items), canopic jars worth a total of 250 gp, a 2500 gp diamond in one of the jars, five scrolls with cleric spells (dispel magic, bestow curse, neutralize poison, detect magic, speak with dead), pearl of the sirines, and four beads of force. On Neferet herself: an amulet of protection from normal missiles, a pearl necklace of invisibility (8 pearls), and the iron circlet of Ghanor (see new magic items for all three).

3-127B: Lesser Tomb

Two 6'-long granite sarcophagi occupy the southern extension to area 3-127. The chamber's plaster is still mostly intact, and depicts priests marching and conducting rituals while a huge ibis peers down from the ceiling. The sarcophagi are simple granite without inscriptions, and contain the remains of two of Neferet's aides. Should the false sarcophagus in 3-127 be opened, the lids of these lesser sarcophagi will be thrown open and their inhabitants will emerge. If adventurers do not disturb the false sarcophagus and first inspect these tombs, they will find them sealed; the lids can be cracked easily, and PCs will hear the hiss of escaping vapors. The inhabitants then rise and attack.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 shadows: SZ M; AL CE; AC 7; MV 120; HD 3+3; HP 20, 17; #AT 1; Dmg 2-5. Special attacks: STR drain. Special defenses: 90% undetectable; +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and cold.

Treasure:

One sarcophagus has 3,400 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items); the other has 238 ancient gold solidi and 5,072 ancient copper bits (see Arden Vul items).

3-127C: Lesser Tomb

This chamber is decorated in the same scheme as 3-127B, but contains only a single granite sarcophagus. The sarcophagus is sealed if the false tomb in 3-127 has not been disturbed. The conditions under which the inhabitant rises to attack intruders are the same as those for 3-127B.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 mummy: SZ M; AL LE; AC 3; MV 60'; HD 6+3; HP 42; #AT 1; Dmg 1-12. Special attacks: fear; rotting disease. Special defenses:

+1 or better weapons to hit; half damage from magic weapons; immune to sleep, charm, hold, cold, poison, and paralysis; turned as a vampire so long as Neferet is alive.

Treasure:

6 pieces of jade jewelry (100-600 gp per piece), boots of levitation, and scrolls with the following magic user spells: magic aura, shatter, lightning bolt, and stone shape.

3-128: Battle Scene

Groups of goblins (3-130) and Set guardsmen (3-125) fought each other here in this former robing and spy room. The bodies of 3 guardsmen and 5 goblins lie on the floor, amid a welter of broken weapons, spent arrows, and dropped equipment. A set of wooden shelves running along the west wall is old and rotten; it still holds a few canopic jars with partly pickled body parts (6 alabaster jars worth 60 gp total), a dagger +3, packet of dust of sneezing and choking, and a scroll of find traps. The walls feature faded, but still clear, images of an endless procession of humans bearing offerings of a various and diverse nature to an ibis-headed figure.

Secret Door (east): This door is easy (1 in 4) to find; it opens by pushing the base of the door inward.

Inhabitants:

1. 3 ghouls (the guardsmen: SZ M; AL CE; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 15, 11, 10; #AT 3; Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-6. Special attacks: paralysis. Special defenses: immune to sleep and charm.
2. 5 zombies (the goblins): SZ M; AL N; AC 8; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 14, 13, 10, 9, 7; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8. Special: always strike last.

Treasure:

6 canopic jars (10 gp each), dust of sneezing and choking, a dagger +3, and a scroll of find traps.

3-129: Audience Hall

Originally an audience hall for the high priests of Thoth, this semi-circular hall boasts a raised platform at its western end. A large, high-backed chair made of ivory and wood sits in the middle of the platform; the wooden back and ivory arms have been carved in elaborate geometric forms. At some point the audience hall was turned into a tomb, for three stone sarcophagi lie in a neat row in front of the platform.

Sarcophagus 1: This lidless object features bas-reliefs on its side which show a dragon ridden by a man in elaborate armor. The dragon is scorching humans, eating lizards, and buffeting bipedal salamanders. An inscription on a short side reads in Mithric 'The Emperor and his Consort defeat all enemies.' The sarcophagus is truly ancient, and would be worth 2,000 gp to an Archontean collector. It has been moved and reused several times, and is currently empty save for dust and a dried-up wineskin.

Sarcophagus 2: This object has no decorations, and no lid. It is roughly shaped and inelegant. Hiding inside is a confused and very hungry giant centipede (which cannot escape from the fear elemental in 3-124). It leaps out of hiding to strike the first person to come near.

Sarcophagus 3: This sarcophagus is made of red basalt, with an intact brass lid that has been affixed to the base by heavy iron nails. Each red basalt side features a painted black eye. The brass lid has an imprint of a humanoid with open screaming mouth and clutched hands. One could easily conclude that this is the image of some-one or -thing trapped inside the sarcophagus. One would be correct. Inside is a very hungry wight. The sarcophagus is magical: it is a sarcophagus of entombment (see new magic items). A clay tablet within the sarcophagus is broken into 3 pieces, but can easily be reassembled; it reads: "Heraclous was found guilty and sentenced to eternal punishment without release." Heraclous still wears a platinum ring and a gold torc.

Secret Door (west): The door is easy to find (1 in 4); it opens by pulling the base of the door upward.

Treasure:

Ivory and wooden chair (100 gp, but bulky), platinum ring (250 gp), gold ring inset with lapis (300 gp)

Inhabitants:

1. 1 giant centipede: SZ S; AL N; AC 9; MV 150'; HD 1 or 2 HP; HP 2; #AT 1; Dmg n.a. Special attacks: poison (+4 to save).
2. 1 wight: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 4+3; HP 33, 29, 27; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4. Special attacks: energy drain. Special defenses: silver or magic needed to hit; immune to sleep, charm, hold, cold, poison, and paralysis.

3-130: Lost Goblins

An adventurous band of twenty goblins made a foray into this level from their main halls below, but they found themselves overmatched and trapped by various enemies. Of the original twenty, only a sub-chief, a witch doctor, and ten warriors still remain. They have taken refuge in this chamber, where they hide from the Set guardsmen and the beastmen. Their food supplies are running out and they are getting nervous. They are happy to negotiate if not immediately attacked, especially if they're promised protection from the Set guardsmen and/or assistance in returning home.

The chamber is nondescript, and its original function is hard to discern. The door to the west opens to a hallway that becomes impassable after 20' due to collapsed walls and ceiling.

Although putatively sent forth to perform general exploration, the band had been secretly tasked by King Weskenim (SL4-22) with finding the lost scepter of the goblins (see area 8-69 and new magic items). Rescuing the survivors and helping them to return to SL4 ensures a favorable hearing from King Weskenim.

GM Note: the goblins' route took them from 5-41 to 5-1, up the stairs to 3-12, south to 3-69 and into 3-123, and finally west into 3-124, where the fear elemental and the Set patrol (3-125) drove them to 3-130.

Inhabitants:

1. 10 goblins: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 7, 6, 5(x3), 4, 4, 3, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.
2. Harab, goblin sub-chief (as a hobgoblin): SZ S; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 1+1; HP 8; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (military pick). Possessions: military pick.
3. Larakim, the 5th/4th-level goblin witch doctor: SZ S; AC 6; MV 60'; HD as a 3 HD monster; HP 21; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (spear). Spells (lined out spells have already been cast): ~~cure light wounds~~, ~~resist fear~~, ~~protection from evil~~; ~~augury~~, ~~chant~~, ~~resist fire~~; ~~dispel magic~~; ~~dancing lights~~, ~~shield~~, ~~ventriloquism~~; ~~invisibility~~, ~~scare~~.

Treasure:

3-18 sp per goblin.

3-131: Simonet the Sun-Scarred Knight

This was the high priest's residence in antiquity, and it still bears traces of its former glory. An azure ceiling flecked with golden stars is still largely intact, as is the enormous fresco of Thoth covering the east wall. Most of the furnishings - a settee, a four-poster bed, two tables, a desk and so forth - are in badly deteriorated shape. Reclining on the settee in his gothic armor (see new technological items) is Sir Simonet, a wounded member of the group known as the Sun-Scarred Knights (see new monsters). Sir Simonet was exploring the rooms west of the Great Hall when he was momentarily stunned by the fear elemental and then beset by the elemental (to the tune of 8 points of lost CON), the goblins, and the Set cultists. Surprised by these foes, he has retreated to this chamber to recover his strength and meditate about his next move. Simonet is uninterested in mundane wealth, of which there is still much in the high priest's room. He is interested in magical and historical lore, however, particularly concerning the modern cult of Priscus Pulcher. He is willing to parlay with non-aggressive visitors. If treated disrespectfully or threatened, he defends himself vigorously with his sun lance (see new technological items) and solar ring (see new magic items).

A stone chest rests against the south wall and is still intact. It is trapped with explosive runes. If opened successfully it will reveal an ibis-skin pouch with 350 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items; a platinum and jade necklace worth 275 gp; two heavy silver goblets (25 gp each); and three leather scroll cases with scrolls within each: (1) invisibility to undead, hold person, locate object; (2) cure serious wounds, neutralize poison, insect plague; (3) cloudburst, raise dead, resurrection. If the explosive runes are set off, saves should be rolled for each item in the chest.

After he is first encountered, Simonet only remains here for another day. Subsequent visits to this chamber will find it empty of inhabitants, or perhaps (25%) occupied by a party of goblins or beastmen hoping that Simonet abandoned some object of value.

Kind GMs might grant a 20% chance that Simonet takes an interest in some specific aspect of the PCs' story and/or plans. If such occurs, Simonet might reappear at moments both opportune and inopportune.

Trap: Explosive runes on the stone chest.

Playing Simonet: Simonet is an inveterate collector of lore, particularly about the modern cult of Priscus Pulcher (whose explorers he has glimpsed and parlayed with in his travels through the Halls). He is completely unmoved by claims for assistance based on moral or ethical grounds, nor does he have any love or hatred for any of the factions of the Upper Halls. He cannot be enlisted, therefore, as an agent to help against any of these forces. Should the PCs be able to offer him lore about magic or the Priscians, he might offer information (but not physical assistance) about any of these groups.

Despite his neutrality, Simonet is not cold and humorless; he enjoys a good joke, and likes to make puns, albeit sometimes very obscure puns. He is fairly affable, even though he will be unmoved by claims to friendship or alignment obligations. He will doff his helm when parlaying, allowing PCs a glimpse of his face. About 6' tall, he is slim and wiry, with coal-black hair, a thin nose, and pupils bleached of all color. Laugh lines crinkle around his eyes, and he smiles easily, displaying prominent incisors. His cheeks are badly scarred, with raised welts in the shape of a circle with rays extending from it; the welts are old and have healed into whitened scars. He wears his circlet (silver with a large emerald on his brow) and body armor at all times.

Inhabitants:

1. Sir Simonet, Sun-Scarred knight (see new monsters), 10th-level male Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL LN; AC -2; MV 120'; HD 9+3; HP 66 (max 91); #AT 3/2; Dmg 7-13 (broadsword +2). Abilities: STR 18/70, INT 13, WIS 16, DEX 12, CON 8 (max16), CHA 12. Possessions: key to SL10A-16, gothic armor and sun lance (see new technological items); solar ring, circlet of command, and backpack of capacity (see new magic items for all three); 16 ancient octagonal platinum coins (see Arden Vul items); broad sword +2; cloak of wise negotiating (see new magic items).

3-132: Antechamber

This former antechamber to the high priest's residence has been badly treated by the centuries. Wooden furniture has been smashed into sticks and thrown to the sides of the chamber. The original painted plaster has been ripped from the walls and piled in a mound. A path amid the litter leads from the secret door to 3-133 to the door of 3-130. Two goblin corpses lie mangled against the south wall; their bodies are badly burned and scorched.

Secret Door (north): This door was once expertly concealed by plaster, but is now easy to find (1 in 4).

3-133: Fountain

A burbling fountain may be found along the east wall of this humid room. Cool water flows from a 4'-tall bronze spigot carved to look like an upright cod. The basin around the fish is filled with the water. No apparent source of plumbing exists, as this is a decanter of endless water. Even if detached from its basin, the cod will continue to burble. Of course, without the corresponding basin of evaporation (see new magic items), things may get quite wet.

Secret Door (south): This door is difficult to detect (1 in 8).

Treasure:

Cod-shaped decanter of endless water, and a basin of evaporation (see new magic items).

3-134: Closet

The door to this closet hangs broken on its hinges. The closet is empty save for some graffiti in Goblin Runic which says "We are trapped! Grugor went for help but did not return. I am hungry."

3-135: Grand Stair up to Sub-Level 3 (SL3-9)

An impressive circular stairway made of stone blocks rises 100' to Sub-Level 3 (SL3-9). The corridor to this chamber is choked with cobwebs, and a barricade with a goblin skull on it lies across the entrance to the Great Hall.

3-136: Looted Chamber

This former priest's chamber has been looted enthusiastically. The plaster on the walls has been stripped, and a variety of vulgar expressions in multiple languages has been scrawled across them. The furnishings have either been stolen or destroyed, and a large pile of organic matter rests against the south wall. Three beastman corpses lie in the center of the room, scorched severely. They rise as zombies 2 rounds after the room is entered.

Inhabitants:

1. 3 beastman zombies: SZ M; AL N; AC 8; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 13, 9; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8. Special: always strike last.

3-137: No Man's Land

The beastmen have made this room into an initial point of defense for their complex, which begins through the door to the east. The northern door opens, but the short passage beyond it leading to the Great Hall has collapsed and is full of rubble. The eastern door features a small aperture that can be opened and closed from the east side; it is locked and shows signs of careful maintenance. A continual light spell has been cast in the center of the ceiling.

The original decorations are long gone, and the floor is littered with stone rubble that rises to a height of several feet in the corners. Faint paths lead from each of the three doors to the center of the room, where a 4'-tall venting stalagmite protrudes from the floor. Resting precariously atop the top of the vent is a simple bronze platter (3' diameter) on which lie thirteen shiny platinum coins.

Trap 1 (sleep gas): The stalagmite dispenses, at a slow but steady rate, an odorless, colorless gas that puts anyone breathing it to sleep for 1-6 turns. The tray serves to build up pressure in the vent, such that anyone touching the tray, or removing even one platinum coin from the tray, causes the tray to topple off the vent and the gas to pump forth, filling the chamber in 2 rounds. If the vent is stopped up again, it will take two days for the gas to build up enough pressure to immediately fill the chamber again. If at least 50% of a group falls asleep, the beastmen at 3-137B will rush out and attempt to disable the remnants. Their goal is to capture and imprison the party for interrogation.

Trap 2 (3 noise traps along the paths): Any creature moving along the paths in the room is likely to trip one of the three noise traps concealed among the rubble (marked N on the map). Thieves have a +5% chance to locate each trap. Failure to do so will trigger a magic mouth on the wall which begins loudly to sing beastman marching songs in a bastardized version of Archontean: e.g., "Good Old Count Janisto/He took two hundred men/he marched them all around the halls/and he marched them home again," and similar stuff. The songs lasts for 1 turn, and serve to alert the beastmen in 3-137B.

Trap 3 (2 pits with punji sticks): At the points marked X on the map, the beastmen have constructed shallow, concealed pits (2' deep) loaded with punji stakes. The punji stakes are smeared with excrement. Thieves have a +5% chance of detecting the traps. Each set of punji stakes inflicts a mere 1-2 damage to those who fail a save vs. poison, but they also reduce movement by half for 24 hours (those wearing hard-soled boots suffer only for 12 hours). If the save is failed, the victim also has a 10% chance of contracting a blood disease (50% chance it is mild, 50% it is acute).

3-137A: Dead Goblins

Outside the door to 3-137 lie the bodies of three goblins slain by the beastmen and/or by their traps. The goblin bodies have been stripped of all belongings, and also bear unmistakable signs of having been butchered for choice 'meats'.

3-137B: Beastman Watch

Two beastmen from 3-142 are posted as watchmen behind this door. They have erected a crude, but effective, door bar across the east side of the door; a lift gates roll is required to force the door.

The beastmen peer through the aperture into 3-137 and watch to see if intruders blunder into their traps. If intruders are spotted, one beastman runs back to 3-142 to summon an additional 6 beastmen and a sergeant. The beastmen only open the door to 3-137 if 50% of a party has been incapacitated or if they possess overwhelming force.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 beastman troopers (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 6, 5; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spears; short swords; short bows.

Treasure:

3-18 sp per beastman.

3-138 to 3-162: Precincts of the Beastmen

In ancient times this was the heart of administrative and priestly activity for the cult of Thoth. It is now the home of a group of humanoids known known in the halls as 'beastmen' (see new monsters). The beastmen prefer to call themselves either the Children of Deino or, more formally, the 4th Kentarchia of the 3rd Cohort of the Imperial Tagmata. All beastmen appear as hybrids of human and beast, whether the beast be dog, pig, goat, sheep, or rat. They are the product of centuries of breeding experiments overseen by Deino, a quasi-immortal sorceress (see 3-158).

Background: Some 250 years ago, the emperor sent a new archon, Adrienic (see 5-18), to Arden Vul with orders to re-establish imperial control over the complex. Adrienic brought with him the elite 3rd Cohort of the Imperial Tagma and the 2nd legion of scutarii (heavy infantry). When the imperial expedition foundered in the lower levels, the men of the 3rd Cohort sought to escape the Halls. One kentarchia (unit of 100) under the leadership of Gennadius found its way to this region, where they fell under the sway of Deino. Deino entranced most of the soldiers, although Gennadius and his faithful whippet (named Rex) managed to escape (see 6-50 for Rex, and 8-41 for Gennadius). She kept the most handsome and useful soldiers alive through sorcery and potions, and transformed the others into beasts. She 'grew' her flock by interbreeding the soldiers and their descendants with animals until the current self-sustaining mix of debased beast-men was reached.

Despite their bestial form (and aggressive natures), the Children of Deino are surprisingly well organized and disciplined. This is due to the old legionary training of the forefathers of the group, whose expertise and tactical sense has been passed down over the generations. The beastmen maintain a semblance of the old military structure of their forebears, although some titles have been garbled: the Children consider themselves a single tagma divided into konturbia ('companies' of 20-30 members), which are subdivided into banda (patrols of 10 each).

They are also well led, starting with Deino the witch, but also including Count Skleros (3-151) and his tough staff sergeants. Beastman military hierarchy is based on merit, even though individual Konturbia are named after a single sub-species of beastman. That means that each konturbs is actually comprised of a mixture of basic types.

The Children are highly organized, and react in a disciplined manner to any threat or assault. They have erected impressive barriers (3-123A) at the most obvious entry points to their domain, and post vigilant guards at each of these locations. Should intruders assault one of the entry points, the leaders will be swiftly informed, and appropriate measures will be taken to repel invaders. If possible, the beastmen attempt flanking maneuvers in force; that is, reinforcements in the form of at least one company will be sent to meet the intruders as they advance, while another company will be sent to come upon the intruder's flank. Skleros (3-151) will certainly summon the witch doctors (3-144), the varumani (3-162) if necessary (although they only respond 75% of the time), and, after some hesitation, Deino herself (3-158). If intruders seem too strong, Skleros orders a fighting retreat down one of the entrance paths so as to allow the rest of the Tagma to escape out one of the other entrances/exits.

Once assaulted, the Children will double their vigilance: no banda (patrols) will be absent from their barracks, and entrance points will be strengthened with the presence of a witch doctor and another patrol; given sufficient time, the beastmen will also rig magical and mechanical traps in the great hall (3-123).

3-138: Beastman Barracks: Porcine Konturbs (Pig Company)

The beastman troopers of Pig Company live in this chamber. Pig Company ranks second in seniority, and its members are proud and haughty. The konturbs is formed of 21 beastmen, organized into three banda (patrols) of 6 troopers and one sergeant per bandon. One bandon is all pig-men, while the other two are mixed. The sergeants are all pig-men.

Their chamber is spartan and very neat, with well-ordered bed-mounds surrounding a trestle table at which troopers can play dice, etc. The far wall boasts the tattered Pig Company banner on which is displayed a mailed fist; hanging from it are very small fragments of equipment, bone, and a few slips of parchment (battle mementos). Theft of the banner provokes immediate and vengeful retribution. Below the banner is a 10'x10' 'rooting ground' of mud and soil, ripe for wrestling and rooting. One bandon is always on guard at 3-123A; one bandon is always found here; and the third patrol will be found either here (33%), or elsewhere in the complex (3-161, 3-147, 3-156, or 3-158).

An arrow slit allows members of the bandon to support their allies at 3-123A by firing at attackers attempting to gain access to the domain of the beastmen. Two of the troopers present in the Pig Company barracks are always posted near the slit with their bows at the ready.

The company has a communal stone chest next to the wall in which may be found some dried rations, 2 potions of healing, a few extra helmets, etc. A stone water barrel sits next to the chest. A weapons rack on the other side of the door holds spears, shields, and swords. The company has also collected a dozen busts and other bits of statuary from the halls, which it has used to decorate its barracks.

One bust is actually a portrait bust of Priscus Pulcher (and is so marked on its base); it portrays a handsome young man, with close-cropped hair, a trim beard, and smiling eyes. Although the bust possesses empty sockets in the place of eyes, as do the Sortian faces, and although it also detects as magic (it carries a permanent magic aura), Sortian eyes placed in the sockets cause no effect other than some general fizzing and sputtering. GM Note: This is not a Sortian portable sage (for which see new magic items), but rather a malfunctioning Sortian face (see new magic items) salvaged from elsewhere in the halls.

Pig Company's prize possession, however, is the mummified head of Comentiolus, one of the original imperial soldiers and, according to Pig Company lore, the 'First Pig'. Comentiolus's head is often touched for luck, and is thus fairly shiny with wear. Given the right spell, PCs might learn something from Comentiolus's restless shade.

Inhabitants:

1. 6 or 12 beastman troopers (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 9, 8, 7(x3), 6(x4), 5(x3); #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spears; short swords; short bows.
2. 1 or 2 beastman sergeants (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 2+2; HP 16, 15; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 or 2-5. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spear; war hammer.

Treasure:

2 potions of healing in the communal chest. Each of the beastmen has 2-12 sp, while each sergeant has 3-18 sp and 1-8 gp.

3-139: Supply Closet

This small room contains supplies: brooms, hammers and chisels, a wide selection of pieces of lumber pillaged from the halls, and some odds and ends (goblin equipment and weapons, coils of rope, etc.). There is a 20% chance that any bit of non-comestible, non-warlike bit of equipment can be found here.

3-140: Beastman Barracks: Canine Konturbs (Dog Company)

The beastman troopers of Dog Company live in this chamber. Dog Company is the most senior of the beastman units; its troopers are not only smarter and quicker than the others, but they also have the most battle experience. Despite its name, the company is the most thoroughly mixed of the konturbia: there is a healthy mix of dog-, pig-, sheep-, goat- and rat-men, all of whom are veterans. They expect, and receive, deference (as well as envy!) from the other companies. A total of 16 beastmen (4 dog-men, 4 pig-men, 3 goat-men, 3 rat-men, 2 sheep-men) are stationed here, organized into two six-beastman banda (patrols). In addition, 2 patrol sergeants (one dog-man, one goat-man) and 2 staff sergeants (one pig-man, one rat-man) live here.

The chamber is spartan and neat, with well-ordered bed-mounds surrounding a trestle table at which troopers can play dice, etc. On the east wall is displayed the tattered blue Dog Company banner featuring a mailed fist; hanging from it are very small fragments of equipment, bone, and a few slips of parchment (battle mementos). Theft of the banner provokes immediate and vengeful retribution.

One bandon is always on guard at 3-123A. The other patrol is present in the barracks 50% of the time; the rest of the time it will be found in either 3-156, 3-158, 3-161 or one of the harems (3-145 to 3-148). The Staff Sergeants will be present here 50% of the time. The company has a communal stone chest by the north wall in which may be found some dried rations, 6 potions of healing, a few extra helmets, etc. A stone water barrel sits next to the chest. A weapons rack next to the door holds spears, shields, and swords.

The company has looted a golden idol of Anubis (a human body with a canine head whose mouth is open, displaying sharp teeth), which it has mounted on a ledge on the south wall. Believing it to be an image of Rex (6-50), the whippet companion to the original imperial kentarchia, the company considers it to be its special mascot.

Inhabitants:

1. 0 or 6 beastman troopers (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 8, 7, 7, 6, 6, 5; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spears; short swords; short bows.
2. 0 or 1 beastman sergeant (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90': HD 2+2; HP 15; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 or 2-5. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spear; war hammer.
3. 0-2 beastmen staff sergeants (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 3+3; HP 23, 20; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7. Special attacks: tactics; +1 to damage from STR. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spear; short sword.

Treasure:

6 potions of healing in the communal chest. Each of the beastmen has 3-18 sp.. The idol weighs about 90 lb and is worth 5,000 gp.

3-141: Beastman Barracks: Ovine Konturbs (Sheep Company)

The beastman troopers of Sheep Company live in this chamber. Sheep Company is the most junior company, with the youngest and least tested troopers. Although well trained like all of the Children of Deino, the Ovine troopers tend to be simultaneously more nervous and more aggressive than their senior colleagues (weaker morale, but more likely to attack). A total of 21 beastmen are stationed here: three six-beastman patrols with 3 patrol sergeants. Of the troopers, 8 are sheep-men, 6 are goat-men, 3 are dog-men, 3 are pig-men and only one is a rat-man. The three sergeants are all goat-men.

The chamber is small and cramped, with rickety wooden bunkbeds arranged in rows across the floor (although the sergeants get single beds). The troop possesses no table. Their banner is significantly newer and less tattered than those of the other companies (the last banner was lost a decade ago in a disastrous expedition to the lower levels). It boasts no battle mementos. Even still, theft of the Sheep Company banner provokes immediate and vengeful retribution.

One bandon is always on guard at 3-123A. Another bandon is always present in the barracks. The third patrol will be found either in the barracks (25%), in the mess hall (25%), with its harem in 3-145 (25%) or training in 3-156 (25%). The company has a communal stone chest next to the door in which may be found some dried rations, a contraband jug of wine, a few extra helmets, etc. A stone water barrel sits next to the chest. A weapons rack next to the door holds spears, shields, and swords. Lacking better spoils, the company has decorated its chamber walls with surprisingly high quality painted images of giant beastmen spearing a variety of enemies, including goblins, humans, and, improbably, varumani (see new monsters).

Inhabitants:

1. 6 or 12 beastman troopers (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 9, 8, 7(x3), 6(x4), 5(x3); #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spears; short swords; short bows.
2. 1 or 2 beastman sergeants (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90': HD 2+2; HP 16, 15; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 or 2-5. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spear; war hammer.

Treasure:

Each of the beastmen has 3-18 sp.

3-142: Beastman Barracks: Caprine Konturbs (Goat Company)

The beastman troopers of Goat Company live in this chamber. Goat Company ranks third in seniority. Its troopers are a mixed bag, as the company combines a fair proportion of misfits (i.e., those passed over for promotion) with an equal number of ambitious youngsters hoping to prove their worth and earn promotion to Dog Company. Although an effective unit by most standards, it is the most fractious of the konturbia that make up the Tagma. Given its status, its troopers are equally likely to bully Sheep Company troopers and to cringe in the presence of the veterans of Dog and Pig companies. A total of 28 beastmen are stationed here: four six-beastmen patrols with four patrol sergeants. Currently the composition of the konturbs is 8 sheep-men, 7 rat-men, 5 pig-men, 5 dog-men, and 3 goat-men; of the sergeants, 1 is a sheep-man, 2 are pig-men, and one is a dog-man.

The chamber is cramped and crowded with rickety wooden bunkbeds. Although clean, it smells of too many beastmen living in close quarters. Given the cramped conditions, it is common (25%) to find troopers relaxing in the hallway outside their barracks. The west wall boasts the tattered Sheep Company banner featuring the usual mailed fist; hanging from it are only three battle mementos. Loss of the banner will inspire company morale and will provoke immediate and vengeful retribution.

Two troopers are always on guard at 3-137B, while a full bandon is always elsewhere in the complex (3-146, 3-156, 3-158 or 3-161). The remaining troopers are always present in barracks.

The company has a communal stone chest next to the door in which may be found some dried rations, 2 potions of healing, a few extra helmets, etc. A stone water barrel sits next to the chest. A weapons rack next to the door holds spears, shields, and swords.

The company has recently won some victories: three stuffed (but smelly) mantari hang from the ceiling, while a poorly-preserved halfling corpse has been impaled on a spear in the center of the room, allowing the troopers to push it into amusing poses.

Inhabitants:

1. 16 or 22 beastman troopers (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 9(x3), 8(x4), 7(x4), 6(x7), 5(x4); #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spears; short swords; short bows.
2. 2 or 3 beastman sergeants (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 2+2; HP 16, 15, 14; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 or 2-5. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spear; war hammer.

Treasure:

Each of the beastmen has 3-18 sp, and the communal chest holds 2 potions of healing.

3-143: Inspection Point and Map

The arrow slits in the east and south walls are evident to anyone who traverses this snaking passage. Light seeps through the slits from the Fire Support Center (3-144), and, in case of alarm, the witch doctors will be ready to fire spells and missiles through the slit. Tagma Command (see 3-150) has been assembling tactical maps on pieces of hide (goblin, human) which have been stretched along the north and west walls of 3-143. These maps present a fairly complete picture of the easily accessible areas of Levels 3 and 4. Most hidden areas (those accessed only by secret doors) are not indicated. Numerous notes have been scrawled on the map in the beastman tongue. A large tapestry stolen from the cult of Set hangs on the west wall of the passage, concealing the door to 3-144. The tapestry is mostly non-representational (geometric forms), but does feature a depiction of a was stick in its center. The tapestry is very heavy (100 lb) and might bring 450 gp from the right buyer.

3-144: Beastman Fire Support Center (Witch Doctors)

The Tagma's three witch doctors and their one apprentice inhabit this strategic choke-point. Access to the chamber is through the concealed door at 3-143 and through a secret door to 3-145 (a 3'x3' panel which may be depressed slightly and then slid into the wall.

The chamber is sumptuously decorated, with many furs and cushions (up to 350 gp in value). Each witch doctor has a bed and a wooden chest. They share a small table with three chairs. Their apprentice sleeps under the table. A stone water barrel rests against the east wall. The chamber is usually (75%) brightly lit with a continual light rock. The witch doctors are close friends, and they love to pass the time insulting each other as they gamble.

Inhabitants:

1. Thirk, 7th/4th-level beastman witch doctor (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 7; MV 90'; HD as 5+ HD monster; HP 31; #AT 1; Dmg: 1-4. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail; dagger; 8 throwing daggers. Memorized spells: cure light wounds, detect magic, resist fear; augury, chant, snake charm; cause blindness, dispel magic; divination; identify, push, shield; levitate, scare. Thirk is a dog-man (+1 to surprise and initiative, +1 to all attack rolls, +10% morale).
2. Ujax, 5th/4th-level beastman witch doctor (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 7; MV 90'; HD as 4+ HD monster; HP 25; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail; staff. Memorized spells: cure light wounds, detect evil, light; augury, detect charm, speak with animals; remove curse; affect normal fires, shield, ventriloquism; Probus's thunderous alert (see new spells), detect invisibility. Ujax is a sheep-man (+1 to hit when in formation, +2 saves vs fire and cold, -5% morale).
3. Drood, 4th/3rd-level beastman witch doctor (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 7; MV 90'; HD as 3+ HD monster; HP 27; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail; club. Memorized spells: cure light wounds, cause fear, remove fear; chant, speak with animals; dancing lights, shield; levitate. Drood is a pig-man (+2 HP per HD, -1 damage per die from magic, +5% morale).
4. Jixon, 2nd/2nd-level beastman apprentice witch doctor (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 7; MV 90'; HD as 2+ HD monster; HP 10; #AT: 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail; staff. Memorized spells: cure light wounds, protection from evil; dancing lights, shield. Jixon is a goat-man (33% berserk chance resulting in +2 attack and damage for 3 rounds, but -2 AC).

Treasure:

The witch doctors have 548 sp which they use for gambling. One chest holds 10 ancient octagonal platinum coins (see Arden Vul items), three scrolls with magic user spells (sleep, magic mouth, and blink), and a variety of clothing. The second chest holds 50 small garnets (70 gp each) and three scrolls of magic user spells (mirror image, explosive runes, fear) amid more mundane clothing and gear. The third holds a sapphire Sortian eye (see new magic items), a solid silver statuette of a troll-like being (a varumani, see new monsters) (400 gp), and a fragment of a volume entitled Deeds of Ptarmis (see Arden Vul books). This fragment provides a clue as to the location of Ptarmis's tomb (3-174).

3-145: Beastman Concubines

An arrow slit lets noise and light into this chamber from 3-144. The slit allows the witch doctors to fire spells and missiles at invaders; it also permits them some other, more voyeuristic, pleasures.

This open area is home to 10 beastman females and 5-10 beastman young. When they are not entertaining one of the Tagma's banda, the females will be engaged in sewing, sweeping/cleaning, repairing equipment, or other support tasks. If combat breaks out in 3-141, the females gather the young and make a fighting retreat to 3-158 or 3-159. The chamber is clean, with ten sleeping areas, several small tables, and a variety of mundane items stored in a set of wicker baskets affixed to the south wall (needles, thread, wool, skins, hammers, etc.).

Inhabitants:

1. 10 female beastmen, as troopers (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 10; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 7, 7, 6(x4), 5, 5, 4, 4; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: clubs.
2. 5-10 beastman young (see new monsters): noncombatants (AC 10, HP 2).

3-146: Beastman Concubines

This large room is home to 15 beastman females and 6-12 beastman young. Otherwise it is identical to 3-145.

Inhabitants:

1. 15 female beastmen, as troopers (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 10; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 7, 7, 6(x7), 5(x4), 4, 4; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: clubs.
2. 6-12 beastman young (see new monsters): noncombatants (AC 10, HP 2).

3-147: Beastman Concubines

This area is home to the 15 senior beastman females as well as 5-10 beastman young. Furnishings and tactics are similar to what is described at 3-145.

Inhabitants:

1. 15 female beastmen, as troopers (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 10; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 7, 7, 6(x7), 5(x4), 4, 4; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: clubs.
2. 6-12 beastman young (see new monsters): noncombatants (AC 10, HP 2).

3-148: Detention Center

This large room doubles as a detention center and a torture/interrogation site, and is divided in two by animal-skin curtains. The torturer does his work to the west. The eastern half features eight sets of manacles set into the north and east walls, a small round table, and two chairs. Currently the beastmen have only a few creatures in detention:

1. Ysabel Ligareon, 4th-level female Archontean cleric of Mitra: SZ M; AL LG; AC 10; MV 120'; HD 4; HP 18 (max 26); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 15; INT 15; WIS 17; DEX 10; CON 9; CHA 11. A representative of one of the powerful noble Five Families (see World of Archontos appendix), Ysabel's normally firm belief in her own invincibility is beginning to waver.

2. Rolf, 2nd-level male Wisikin ranger: SZ M; AL CG; AC 10; MV 120'; HD 2; HP 11 (max 20); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 16; INT 15; WIS 15; DEX 10; CON 15; CHA 12. A member of an adventuring party that entered the upper Halls, Rolf got separated from his crew and was swiftly overwhelmed. He has been tortured and is in bad shape. If desired, the GM could link him to any good-aligned party from the NPC appendix.
3. Thomas, a Set acolyte (see new monsters), as a 3rd-level Archontean cleric of Set: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 60'; HD 3; HP 5 (max 17); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. He is bound and gagged, and has no prepared spells or equipment.
4. Bleth, a goblin sub-chief captured in battle (as a hobgoblin): SZ S; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 1+1; HP 8; #AT 1; Dmg by weapon.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 beastman torturer, as staff sergeant (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 3+3; HP 23, 20; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7. Special attacks: tactics; +1 to damage from STR. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spear; short sword.
2. 2 beastmen assistant torturers, as troopers: SZ S; AL LN; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 7, 6; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spears; short swords; short bows.

3-149: Count Georgik

This savvy, old, one-legged pig-man is the master strategist of the tribe. Having fought enemies for several decades, he has a clear memory of the layout of the Halls, and of the strategies to be employed in traversing, defending, and assaulting them. The map at 3-143 is his idea. Despite his infirmity, Georgik hops around nimbly with his crutch, and will be found either in his chamber (20%), in Deino's Hall (30% - see 3-158), or at Tagma Command (50% - see 3-150). As he has aged, Georgik has become a workaholic. He is also the patron of young Trisko the Natty of the LRCP, who returns Georgik's favor with fierce loyalty. Georgik's voice frequently clashes with that of the younger Nikeos in council meetings.

Georgik's chamber is well appointed, with a comfortable set of looted cushions and furs, a trapped stone chest (poison needle trap; -5% to detect), a wooden desk piled high with notes about missions, enemies, and history, an armor rack with an elaborate suit of black chain mail chased in silver, a weapons rack with a standard spear and sword, and, mounted next to the south door, his rod of comital office.

Inhabitants:

1. Georgik, beastman count (see new monsters) (20%): SZ S; AL LN; AC 5 (due to leg); MV 60' (due to leg); HD 5+5; HP 40; #AT 1; Dmg 3-8. Special attacks: tactics, +2 to damage from STR. Possessions: chain mail; spear; short sword; potions of explosive acid and Greek fire (see new magic items); keys to his trapped stone chest and to the doors at 3-154, 3-156A, 3-163A, and 3-163B.

Treasure:

Black chain mail with silver chasing (150 gp), rod of office (actually a wand of dispel fear, with 10 charges left), and, in the trapped stone chest, 456 sp, 278 gp, a mummified goblin paw, a key to the stone chest (on the count at all times), and a winged statuette in the form of a silver lizard (see new magic items).

3-150: Tagma Command

This is the planning center for the Tagma. It contains four tables, a slew of parchment, and four camp beds. The four senior beastman staff sergeants live here and help plan strategy with the counts and Skleros. At any given moment, at least 3 of the 4 staff sergeants will be present; it is also possible for some of the counts to be present.

Inhabitants:

1. 3 or 4 beastmen staff sergeants (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 3+3; HP 23, 20; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7. Special attacks: tactics; +1 to damage from STR. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spear; short sword; one has a spear +1.
2. 0-2 beastmen counts: Nikeos (40%) and/or Georgik (50%). For stats see 3-152 and 3-149.
3. Count Skleros (45%): for stats see 3-151.

Treasure:

The staff sergeants possess 3-30 gp each. One has a spear +1. The parchment sheets can convey significant information about 1-4 major areas of the Halls: these include the goblin warrens (SL4), the troll thegn's court (7-1 and 7-72 to 7-77), the arena (6-56 to 6-95), or the great cavern (3-163 and 3-172). This information will be specific and relatively up-to-date.

3-151: Count Skleros, the Beastman Commander

Skleros is a middle-aged, slightly paunchy dog-man who has risen to command of the Tagma through a combination of a genial personality, canny politicking, military skill, and luck. Although he may appear as slightly dim, he is in fact a shrewd judge of personality, and is adept at manipulating beastmen and others to attain his goals. He is exceptionally good at 'managing' Deino. He gives Nikeos much public voice, while privately listening to the more cautious Georgik. In short, he is a very successful commander. He is present in his chamber 25% of the time; the rest of the time he will be found either in the Tagma Command (45% - see 3-150) or in Deino's Hall (30% - see 3-158).

Skleros's chamber is not significantly more luxurious than those of the counts. He has a fine set of furs for sleeping, an unused desk, a stone water barrel, and a pair of Thothian tapestries showing bird scenes (40 lb each).

Inhabitants:

Skleros, beastman count (see new monsters) (25%): SZ S; AL LN; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 5+5; HP 40; #AT 1; Dmg 5-10. Special attacks: tactics, +2 to damage from STR. Possessions: chain mail +1; spear +2; cloak of the dwarves (see new magic items); ring of the stalker (see new magic items); keys to the doors at 3-154, 3-156A, 3-163A, and 3-163B.

Treasure:

3 sables (100 gp each) and 2 tapestries (100 gp each). He keeps a cache of 150 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items) in a leather pouch nailed to the back of the desk. On his person: spear +2, black chain mail +1, cloak of the dwarves, and a ring of the stalker (see new magic items for the last two).

3-152: Count Nikeos

An exceptionally canny goat-man, Nikeos is the youngest beastman to make count in many generations, and he did so on the strength of his aggression and ambition. Unlike his counterpart, Georgik, Nikeos is an imperialist, constantly urging Skleros to expand the territory of the Tagma and confront their enemies. Given this philosophy, Nikeos is well loved by the younger companies.

Nikeos is in his early 30s, still young and virile. His chamber is decorated in a sort of spartan-chic style: elegant furs, but not too many; a simple desk, but of valuable ebony; no distracting documents; two elaborate weapon/armor racks with a silver-chased chain mail shirt, a silver-hilted sword, and an ebony hafted spear. The count is in his chambers 30% of the time, in Tagma Command (3-150) 40% of the time, and in Deino's Hall (3-138) 30% of the time.

Inhabitants:

1. Nikeos, beastman count (see new monsters) (30%): SZ S; AL LN; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 5+5; HP 40; #AT 1; Dmg 4-9. Special attacks: tactics, +2 to damage from STR. Possessions: chain mail; short sword +1; and an amulet of spell absorption (11 spell levels) (see new magic items).
2. 1 beastman concubine (50% chance if Nikeos is present): SZ S; AL LN; AC 10; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 6; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: club; keys to the doors at 3-154, 3-156A, 3-163A, and 3-163B.

Treasure:

Silver-chased chain shirt (beastman sized), worth 300 gp; ebony desk (bulky, but 500 gp); silver-hilted short sword +1; ebony-hafted spear (50gp); an amulet of spell absorption (11 spell levels) (see new magic items); and 1,156 sp in a chest, along with a potion of heroism and a potion of invisibility.

3-153: Armory

This room serves as the forge and armory of the Tagma. The room is smoky and hot, and is lit with a dull glow from the forge. Against the western wall is a forge apparatus, which is worked by a sheep-man smith aided by three rat-man assistants. Along the south wall are various casks for cooling hot steel, bins with raw metal, and the tools of a smithy. The beds of the smith and his assistants lie against the eastern wall. The center of the room holds a range of weapon and armor racks: one may find 5-10 beastman-sized suits of chain mail, a dozen spears, a dozen beastman short swords, and various helmets, greaves and other equipment.

The beastmen have bored a chimney of sorts up into the rock; it debouches in a cave some 30' above this level (the GM could develop this area further). Despite the 'chimney', the area is still quite smoky.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 beastman smith, as a sergeant (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 2+2; HP 15; #AT 1; Dmg 4-7. Special attacks: tactics; +2 to damage due to STR. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spear; war hammer.
2. 3 beastman troopers (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 6, 6, 5; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spears; short swords.

Treasure:

The smith has a two 5-lb bars of gold hidden among the pig iron and steel scraps (250 gp each). Hidden in his bed is a pouch with 3 pp, 35 sp and a crystal ring (75 gp). The assistants carry 3-18 sp in a pouch.

3-154: Beastman Barracks: the Pedary Konturbs, a.k.a. the Long Range Cavern Patrol

This unassuming chamber is home to one of the elite units of the Tagma, the Long Range Cavern Patrol (LRCP). The LRCP consists of four seven-beastman banda (patrols), each of which comprises 6 troopers and a sergeant.

This chamber features nine bunk beds ranged against the north and south walls, four single beds along the west wall, a long trestle table, and a smaller table. Next to the door is a communal chest, a stone water barrel, and an equipment stand. The insignia of the LRCP (a fist holding a torch) is painted on the east wall. The door leading to the passage to 3-163A is locked and barred, and features a viewing slit. The LRCP has its own elaborate set of passwords that change on a daily basis.

As the sole function of the LRCP is the active exploration of the Halls and the acquisition of material and information usable by Tagma Command and Deino, only one of the patrols is likely to be in residence here at any given time. Above all else, the LRCP is tasked with procuring wood, iron/steel, fresh fruit and vegetables, and the specimens of cloud cap mushrooms that Deino (3-158) requires (see new flora). These missions take them, naturally, into the Great Cavern (3-163 and 3-172), where cloud caps can be found, but also into the ruins of the city of Arden Vul and sometimes into the valley below. It is the LRCP that makes use of the 'beastman entrance' to the Halls, located at 3-189.

Only the most intelligent, self-reliant, and hardy beastmen are selected for service in the LRCP. By temperament the LRCP attracts rat-men, but overall recruitment is by merit. Their commander (see below) is a rat-man, and the sergeants are mostly the same (3 rat-men and a goat-man). The troopers currently are made up of 8 rat-men, 2 pig-men, 5 dog-men, 3 sheep-men, and 8 goat-men. Members of the LRCP rightly see themselves as an elite and have little if anything to do with the regular konturbia; in turn, the Companies (even Dog Company) treat members of the LRCP with elaborate deference.

Count Trisko the Natty, a rat-man, commands the LRCP. Trisko is a canny explorer and diplomat, with the most experience of any of the beastmen leaders with conditions outside the Halls. Trisko has met and negotiated with Craastonistorex, for instance, and is legendary among his peers for a dangerous mission to the valley floor where he and one of his banda intimidated a tribe of local kobolds into delivering important prisoners into Trisko's hands (see map BV-4, for the kobold thicket). For all of these reasons, Trisko is the most willing to trade information and even maps with any peaceful visitors whom his patrols encounter. Trisko is especially anxious for the return of his missing bandon, that led by sergeant Histar (Histar and the troopers are currently dwelling in 3-221 as slaves of the greenhag of area 3-204).

Inhabitants:

1. 6 or 12 beastman troopers (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 8, 8, 7(x4), 6(x4), 5, 5; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spears; short swords; short bows.
2. 1 or 2 beastman sergeants (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 2+2; HP 16, 15; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 or 2-5. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spear; war hammer.
3. Trisko the Natty, beastman count (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 5+5; HP 40; #AT 1; Dmg 5-10. Special attacks: tactics, +2 to damage from STR. Possessions: chain mail; short sword +2; torc of domination; gilded helm of infravision (see new magic items for the last two); keys to the doors in 3-154, 3-156A, 3-163A, and 3-163B.

Treasure:

In the equipment box: 4 potions of healing, a potion of gaseous form, a potion of animal control, a potion of clairaudience, a potion of clairvoyance, and a potion of plant control. In addition, a mixture of basic equipment is found within: 20 iron rations, 6 water flasks, 6 flints, 6 belt knives, 20 torches, etc.

In Trisko's desk: a pouch of 20 aquamarines (100 gp each), an iron box with 275 sp, a silk bag with a small diamond (1,150 gp), a ring of protection +1, 10 doses of cloud cap mushrooms (see new flora), and a quire of parchment with detailed notes on the features of 3-12 interesting locations on Levels 3 and 4 (GM's choice).

Each trooper of the LRCP has 2-12 gp and 1-6 pp.

On Trisko: chain mail; short sword +2; torc of domination; gilded helm of infravision (see new magic items for the last two); keys to the doors in 3-154, 3-156A, 3-163A, and 3-163B.

3-155: Storage and Supplies

Although in theory a storage room for the entire Tagma, this room is considered the territory of the LRCP; as a result, the other beastmen tend to avoid it. It is crammed with wooden and stone boxes and loose bits of gear and pillage. At least 25% of the boxes hold foodstuffs (dried mushrooms, cured monkeys, meat jerky of dubious origin, etc.). There are two forgotten casks of fine wine, stolen from the cult of Set: these weigh 50 lb each and are worth 250 gp each. Other boxes hold dungeoneering equipment: ropes, pitons, hooks, pulleys and grapples, poles, hammers, bits of stone and wood, etc. More interesting are the fruits of some of the LRCP expeditions: a marble bust of a forgotten priest of Thoth (75 gp); a 3'-diameter, lapis and silver symbol of Set (50 gp); a box which holds 35 ancient octagonal platinum coins (see Arden Vul items); a collection of 35 samples of dried red veil mushrooms and 20 samples of aqua vitae mushrooms (see new flora); a forgotten leather pouch with one each of silver, gold and sapphire Sortian eyes (see new magic items) as well as a pale green ion stone.

3-156: Sparring and Training Hall

This 20'-wide, 20'-tall arched corridor is supported by a single row of 4'-diameter columns. Wall sconces line the walls. The beastmen have repurposed it to serve as a training and sparring hall. Present are the chief trainer (a dog-man staff sergeant) and his three assistants. In periods of normalcy, it is usual for one to three banda (patrols) from the various companies to be present here and engaged either in sparring or in practicing unit tactics. Of course, if the complex has been assaulted, only the trainer and his assistants will be present, waiting for orders. The trainer keeps numerous old shields and dulled weapons in bins along the south wall. He and his assistants sleep in the southwest corner.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 beastman trainer, as a staff-sergeant (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 3+3; HP 20; #AT 1; Dmg 4-9 (mace +1). Special attacks: tactics; +1 to damage from STR. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spear; short sword; mace +1.
2. 3 beastman assistants, as troopers (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 6, 6, 5; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spears; short swords.

Treasure:

The trainer possesses 2-12 gp and a mace +1. The assistants have 3-18 sp.

3-156A: Passage and Door to the Cavern

This narrow (5') passage is one of the primary routes by which the beastmen access the Great Cavern. The door leading to 3-163B is made of steel; it is locked and barred from the north side.

3-157: Treasury

Deino's treasure is extensive, comprising the contents of three large oak chests and various other items.

Chest #1: 18,259 sp.

Chest #2: 5,673 gp and 14,512 cp.

Chest #3: a bolt of fine damask silk (450 gp), a silver head of a handsome 'human' that is actually an infernal effigy (see new magic items), a gauntlet of fire absorption (see new magic items), potions of healing (x2), a potion of flying, and a potion of stone giant strength.

Near the chests are display stands that hold a human-sized suit of black leather armor +2 and a two-handed sword +2 (both are too large for beastmen to use). Scattered around the room are the following: a terra cotta tomb seal chased with lapis and silver (100 gp) taken from the tombs at 3-129 and featuring the second secret name of Thoth (Giver of Life – for names, see Secreta Secretorum in Arden Vul books.); a pair of fireplace pokers with solid-gold handles (50 gp each); an ivory and gold triptych studded with precious stones (575 gp) featuring the 8th, 9th and 10th of the Labors of Arden (see The Twelve Labors of Arden, in Arden Vul books); a platinum, ceremonial, Mycenaean-style helmet (350 gp); a porcelain urn with a beautiful depiction of Larel One-Eye and the farmer's wife (100 gp; see Tales of Larel One-Eye in Arden Vul books); and three clerical scrolls (protection from evil 10' radius; silence 15' radius; and detect magic).

3-158: Deino's Hall

Soft yellow light, low pastoral sounds, the pleasing tones of a sung ballad, and enticing odors of roasting meat waft out of the open door to this imposing, 25'-tall hall. It is the lair of Deino, witch, enchantress, and 'mother' to the beastmen of the "Able Ones" (the 3rd cohort of the Imperial Tagmata). The upper register of the walls still bear evidence of the room's original function as a Thothian audience hall: images of ibises, baboons, magical symbols, and cylindrically-hatted priests form a frieze along the upper register of the room. Smokeless torches burn in sconces along the walls, giving off a too-soft and smokeless light; they do not burn out (see new magic items).

A 20'-wide by 15'-deep dais occupies the north wall, on which lies Deino's king-sized bed. The floor is covered with large, overlapping carpets of vibrant colors and dynamic patterns. Along the north, south, and east walls stand the stiff, mummified remains of 25 human beings, still dressed in archaic armor and festooned with colorful silk ribbons (remnants of the original 3rd Cohort of the Imperial Tagmata). A number of goats, pigs, sheep, dogs, and rats wander tamely through the chamber. In addition, 2-5 naked males of random species lounge idly in the chamber.

Against the western wall is a closed door leading to Skleros's chamber, as well as a series of five bronze tripods of heating (see new magic items) that bubble merrily without an apparent heat source. On the east wall is a wooden armoire, painted a cheerful blue color. A 10' trestle table with benches occupies the center of the chamber; it is set with pewter plates and settings and silver goblets. Bowls of fruit, plates of marinated meat, and bowls of pickled mushrooms temptingly fill the table.

Deino the Witch: Deino is ancient, quasi-immortal enchantress whose mastery of seduction and charms would be legendary were it more widely known. She appears as an attractive nut-brown woman with raven hair and coal-black eyes. She dresses in a loose tunic of pale yellow, secured with a belt of large pearls (1,500 gp). She wears a large opal ring at all times (see below).

Deino loves to seduce and charm attractive males of any humanoid species. Once under her thumb, she cavorts with them until she tires of them. At that point she turns them into animals, using her potions and ring to accomplish the transformation.

Deino warmly greets any group composed of at least one attractive male (CHA 14 or better), inviting such males (and their friends) to join the feast. She apologizes for her beastmen (if they have attacked the party), attributing any combat to their jealousy and protective nature. Genuinely interested in tales of her guests' adventures, she begs for news of adventure, clapping and 'ooh'-ing approvingly during any story telling. As the festivities continue, Deino plies the guests with her (drugged) food and drink and eventually offers to tell her own story, at which point she finally attempts to charm guests with her song; she sings delightfully, in a slightly haunting manner that compels attention (-1 to saves). Attractive males (CHA 14 or more) who are charmed are kept as playthings for 2-12 months; others are transformed into animals. Should guests prove hostile, or should a group include no desirable males, she summons all her forces (zombies, animals, and charmed men) to defend her.

Armoire: The armoire contains 10 sets of filmy silk garments, perfect for snuggling with Deino. It also contains some worn adventuring gear (clothing, belts, sacks - no armor or weapons) that used to belong to her current playthings. In the back of the armoire is a large, trapped silver box containing several scrolls; a set of six colored glass activation squares (see Thothian teleportation rings in new magic items) for use in 3-159; 19 doses of Rastite lotus powder (see new flora); and a vial of hot red liquid. The liquid is a sort of phylactery, containing Deino's life essence; should the vial be smashed, she will be unable to regenerate. The trap on the box is a poison needle (save vs poison or die; even if save is made, the poison causes 2-12 damage).

Tripods: The basin of each bronze tripod of heating (see new magic items) contains a different substance:

Tripod 1: Meat stew. A more savory form of the beastmen's cavern stew, Deino feeds this tasty fare to her playthings and any visiting beastmen.

Tripod 2: Syrupy golden mead, brewed from a variety of mushrooms and vital fluids garnered in the Halls, with one special ingredient, Rastite lotus powder (see new flora). When enchanted by Deino, this produces a delicious mead, albeit one with strong soporific qualities. It reduces saves in humans by 2 for an hour for each glass that is imbibed; strangely, it also acts to mask most powers of vampires, a property that Thegan White-Mane has used to subdue Isocorax (see 6-20).

Tripod 3: Transformation wine. This purplish liquor gives off a faint odor of granite, blackberries, and wild game. Its secret ingredient is cloud cap mushrooms (see new flora). Anyone drinking a mug of this will be transformed into an animal: 1=pig, 2=dog, 3=goat, 4=rat, 5=sheep, 6=unholy combination of three of the above. The transformation is permanent, but can be removed by dispel magic.

Tripod 4: 'Mother's milk'. This thick, viscous, yogurt-like substance smells of pine nuts. It tastes delicious, but is in fact deadly poison and will kill all those who don't save at -1. Deino uses this to end the lives of playthings and animals of which she has tired.

Tripod 5: Elixir of life. A thin, watery, whitish liquid that smells and tastes of mint and, strangely, of pepper. Deino extracts this from the bodies of the deceased and combines it with special ingredients to form the basis of both transformation wine and her own phylactery. When cloud caps are added, it becomes transformation wine. When Deino adds her own blood, it turns red and is used for her phylactery.

Secret Door (south): This door is normal to find and trapped with a poison needle trap (-5% to disarm). To open it, one must fold up a corner of the carpet and locate a small stud; pressing it causes a panel in the wall to unlock. The panel slides both ways, and is trapped (-5% to detect). Sliding the panel to the left causes a poison needle to stab the manipulator; sliding it to the right avoids the trap completely.

Notes on Playing Deino: Should PCs be admitted to the precincts of the 3rd Cohort for purposes of negotiation, they will be conducted to Deino's Hall, where she determines whether or not the PCs should be charmed, attacked, or invited to negotiate. Deino is interested in acquiring large quantities of cloud cap mushrooms (available in the Great Cavern, i.e., 3-163 and 3-172), and in locating the remains of Gennadius and Rex (Gennadius's remains are found at 8-41 and Rex's can be found at 6-50). She might also be interested in information about the cult of Set.

Although Deino is clearly the chief figure in this area, she leaves most tactical and daily decisions to her counts. Only larger matters of strategy and policy are brought to her attention.

The beastmen are fully aware of Deino's nature, and of the cruel fate reserved for most guests. Still, she is their 'mother', and they will defend her fiercely. About the best that PCs could hope for if they have previously befriended some of the senior beastmen is a warning of some sort, of either a direct ("Avoid Deino's hall completely!") or indirect nature ("I'd be careful about what I drank in Deino's hall ..."). Of course, strangers or enemies receive no such warning. Those who attack Deino instantly become mortal enemies to the Tagma.

Finally, Deino enjoys a close relationship with Thegan White-Mane (6-20), operator of the Inn of the Lost. She relies on him to procure rare ingredients for her brews (especially Rastite lotus powder); in return, she supplies him with some of her syrupy golden mead, which allows him to continue to subdue Isocorax (see 6-20). Interrupting this trade would seriously weaken (if not endanger) both parties, and so both take pains to support and promote the interests of the other.

Inhabitants:

1. Deino, semi-immortal female enchantress: SZ M; AL LE; AC 2; MV 120'; HD 6; HP 38; #AT 2; Dmg 4-7/4-7 (Deino's dagger); MR: 33%. Special attacks: charm song (-1 to saves). Special defenses: regenerate 4 HP/rd; immune to charm, hold, polymorph. Possessions: Deino's ring (see new magic items); a pearl necklace of invisibility (see new magic items); and Deino's dagger (see new magic items). Deino can produce the following spell-like effects at will: audible glamor, change self, detect illusion, detect invisibility, detect magic, and hypnotism. In addition, she can create the following effects as a 7th-level illusionist three times per day each: blur, dispel illusion, hypnotic pattern, invisibility, magic mouth, phantasmal force, improved phantasmal force, non-detection, and suggestion. She can also cast magic-user or illusionist spells from scrolls (up to 5th-level spells).
2. 5 naked men (2 Archontean, 2 Wisikin, 1 Thorcin): SZ M; AL N; AC 10; MV 120'; HD 1-6 HP; HP 5, 5, 3, 3, 2; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger).
3. 25 zombies: SZ M; AL N; AC 8; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 14(x3), 13 (x3), 12(x4), 11(x4), 10(x3), 9(x3), 8(x3); #AT 1; Dmg 1-8. Special: always strike last.
4. The beastman counts Georgik, Nikeos, or Skleros (30% chance for each). For stats, see 3-149, 3-151 and 3-152.
5. Varumani advisors (55%): see 3-162.

Treasure:

The cult of Thoth's memorial codex, stolen from 3-65, and containing, inter alia, a full version of the Litany of Light (for the codex, see Arden Vul books; for the Litany of Light, see the same, as well as areas 2-2 through 2-5); Deino's ring; Deino's dagger; pearl necklace of invisibility (see new magic items for the last three); three scrolls in the armoire, each with three MU spells (1: pyrotechnics, tongues, polymorph self; 2: fumble, conjure elemental, passwall; 3: airy water, globe of invulnerability, power word stun); a set of six colored glass activation squares (see Thothian teleportation rings in new magic items); five tripods of heating (see new magic items); 19 doses of Rastite lotus powder (see new flora).

3-159: Commons

Despite the beastmen's best efforts (paint removal in this chamber is a classic punishment detail), this chamber retains its (magical) coat of bright yellow paint studded with pale-blue and white ibises. Even though Tagma Command has designated this chamber for off-duty relaxation, the beastmen consider the paint job to be ugly and, as a result, few use it. Even the furniture designated for this chamber has been 're-assigned.' Even the furniture designated for this chamber has been 're-assigned.'

In the northwest corner of the chamber lies a set of 2"-tall paving stones arranged in a 6'-diameter ring. Inset into the floor next to the ring is a rectangle 48" long by 8" tall; the rectangle is divided into six interior compartments, each 8" square. Together these elements form a Thothian teleportation ring (see new magic items). To activate the ring, one must place six colored glass activation squares into the inset according to a sequence that matches the 'address' of the ring to which one wishes to travel. Once the squares are placed, a brief shimmer of energy is visible over the ring. At this point the user has 1 round to collect the squares and enter the ring, after which anyone in the ring is teleported without error to address indicated by that sequence of squares. If the glass activation squares are not collected and/or if the travelers do not possess a second set of them, they are likely to be stranded in the location to which they have just teleported. The address of this ring is as follows: YE-BL-GR-WH-BK-RE (see new magic items for explanation).

The beastmen are ignorant of the purposes of the ring, largely because they possess none of the glass activation squares necessary to manipulate the ring. Deino, on the other hand, possesses a full set of the squares (in her armoire) and has memorized the addresses to the rings found in areas AV-29, 1-19, 2-42, and 3-33; she has not used the ring in decades, however.

3-160: Beastman Barracks: Veterans' Hall

Those beastmen who live so long that they are no longer able to serve in the Konturbia typically follow one of three paths: 1) if they are wise enough, they are promoted to a leadership position; 2) if they still feel virile enough, they journey to the Arena (Level 6) where they eventually die a glorious death; 3) if they are neither too wise nor too bold, they end up here, allegedly as guardians of the door to the north (leading to 3-57A). In truth they mostly sit around swapping lies and drinking cold water. There are eight sleeping pallets here, and a weapons rack with some ancient spears and chipped swords.

Activation of the trap in area 3-57 alerts the venerable beastmen, who summon a patrol from one of the other companies (arriving within 1 turn).

Inhabitants:

1. 8 venerable beastman troopers (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 6, 6, 5(x3), 4(x3); #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spears; short swords; short bows. Special: they are -2 to hit and -2 to damage due to decrepitude.

Treasure:

Each venerable beastman has 3-18 sp.

3-161: Beastman Mess Hall

The mess hall buzzes with activity in normal times as patrols cycle through the hall for meals. A serving table stands against the east wall, a table stacked with plates and mugs stands in the southeast corner, and two very long trestle tables with benches occupy the center of the hall.

Inhabitants:

1. 14-28 beastmen (in times of peace) (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 9, 9, 8(x6), 7(x8), 6(x8), 5(x4); #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spears; short swords; short bows.
2. Varumani advisors (25%): for stats, see 3-162.

3-161A: Kitchens

The kitchen features a large open fireplace, as well as some ceramic ovens, and a maze of preparation tables. A huge cauldron simmers over the firepit, filled with the staple of beastman diet: cavern stew (a noxious mix of mushrooms, monkey meat, other meat [when available], lichen, moss and so forth). The head cook and her six assistants toil here 18 hours a day in noisy, hot conditions. The cook prefers to use wood for the fire, but must frequently rely on the dried stems of giant mushrooms. A 'chimney' of sorts directs smoke efficiently to an upper cave. Many pots, pans, ladles, spoons, and knives are present and in heavy use. A series of stone water barrels holds hot, warm, and cold water for washing (no soap is used, though!). The kitchen staff loves to sing martial marches as they work.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 beastman cook, as a trooper: (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 7; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 5; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail; cleaver.
2. 6 beastmen assistants, as troopers (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 7; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 8, 7, 7, 6, 6, 5; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail; cleavers.

Treasure:

The cook wears a silver chain around her neck at all times (25 gp).

3-162: Varumani Advisors

Two emissaries from the troll thegn (see 7-30) have been sent to advise (and observe) the Children of Deino. If no alert has been sounded, the varumani (see new monsters) will be found in one of three places: here (20%), the mess hall at 3-161 (25%), or Deino's Hall (3-158; 55%). They have been assigned two young beastmen as runners and messengers, and they take great delight in joking about eating their young aides. Their chamber features two huge piles of fur, a water barrel, a table on which are found some fist-sized dice, a sausage, two tankards, a small barrel of beer, and a locked wooden chest.

The emissaries are lazy and not particularly interested in protecting Count Skleros and the beastmen. If summoned to help in repelling intruders, there is a 25% chance that they ignore the summons. If they suspect the beastmen are going to be defeated, they will retreat to 3-159 and use their colored glass activation squares to teleport to area 6-64 (the only address they have memorized is the one to that location).

Inhabitants:

1. Clug and Verv, 2 lesser varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 58, 57; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (mattock, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: mattocks.
2. 2 beastman young (see new monsters): noncombatants (AC 10, HP 2).

Treasure:

The locked chest contains 576 sp, 626 gp, and two troll thegn's passports (see Arden Vul items). The chest also contains a silver rod suitable for use in opening doors at 5-6E, a set of six colored glass activation squares (see Thothian teleportation rings in new magic items), and a pair of solid gold goblets stolen from the beastmen (125 gp each).

3-163: Great Cavern, Northern Portion

This iconic location is renowned through the upper levels of Arden Vul. It features luxuriant mushroom groves, a prolific (and nutritious!) troop of albino monkeys, numerous species of lizard and cave insect, and several noteworthy physical features, including a river, some falls, a lake, and a 50' cliff. The northern section (3-163) connects to the precincts of the beastmen (3-137 to 3-162), as well as to the river caves and other complexes. The southern half (3-172) holds several ancient tombs and artifacts, and eventually leads to the exterior via a tunnel system. The ceiling averages 60-80' in height. The temperature of the cavern is warm and humid.

Kerbog Khan (see SL12-25) regularly sends his dragonfly and explorer automatons to the great cavern to observe the denizens and gather specimens. Explorers have a 5% cumulative chance per hour spent in the cavern to encounter an automaton of Kerbog Khan (see new monsters). If so indicated, roll 1d6: 1-2 dragonfly automaton; 3-4: poison dragonfly automaton; 5: basic explorer automaton; 6: bipedal explorer automaton. There is a 33% chance that the Khan is inhabiting the automaton. Once initially encountered, there is a 75% chance that the automaton will reappear after a significant encounter (provided the PCs did not destroy it!), as the Khan will be interested in how the newcomers have fared. In subsequent encounters, there is a 75% chance that the Khan is inhabiting the automaton.

Light: The cavern is not completely dark, for among the colossal fungal growths are some species that emit dim orange phosphorescence. Still, the areas by the cliff (3-163C) and lake, as well as the tops of the rock formations (3-174, 3-178, and 3-179), are pretty dark. Anyone emerging from 3-154, 3-156, or 3-227 will see a low orange glow emerging from a stand of enormous mushrooms (10' to 15' tall).

Sound: Unlike many dungeon chambers, the Great Cavern is not quiet. There is a hum of insect activity, as well as the occasional moaning of breezes, plops of liquid from mushroom caps, and an occasional thrashing sound (prey being snatched). The sound of the falls (3-164B) is loud once one has descended the cliff.

Note: The cavern floor along the river below the falls (3-164B) is some 25' above the level of the river.

Inhabitants

1. 1 basic dragonfly automaton of Kerbog Khan (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 4; MV 240' flying (Class A); HD 1+2; HP 8; #AT 0 Dmg n.a.; MR 25%. Special defenses: immune to cold and fire.
2. 1 poison dragonfly automaton of Kerbog Khan (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 4; MV 240' flying (Class A); HD 1+2; HP 8; #AT 1; Dmg poison (death, or 1-3 turns paralyzation with 1-4 round slow on save); MR 25%. Special attacks: poison. Special defenses: immune to cold and fire.
3. 1 basic exploration automaton of Kerbog Khan (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 2; MV 150'; HD 4; HP 29; #AT 2; Dmg 1-4/1-4; MR 40%. Special defenses: immune to cold and fire.
4. 1 bipedal exploration automaton of Kerbog Khan (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 6; HP 43; #AT 2; Dmg 1-6/1-6; MR 40%. Special defenses: immune to cold and fire.

3-163A: Observation Cage

The priests of Thoth constructed an observation cage out of steel in this location. The cage is 15' high and afforded the priests an observation and collection zone. The priests smoothed the north wall and installed a small steel door; the door is locked and oiled. The cage door is also locked (+10% to pick).

The beastmen of the Long Range Cavern Patrol have stacked several boxes of provisions near to the door on the north wall. The boxes contain dried rations, filled water skins, six flasks of oil, and a dozen torches. There is also a pail of a noxious smelling, greyish paste (made of mushrooms and other cave detritus). The beastmen smear this on a torch and use its smell to repel giant centipedes as they rappel down the cliff face at 3-163C.

3-163B: Feeding Station

A locked steel door separates area 3-156A from a stone bridge extending out into the great cavern. The bridge is narrow (5' wide), and rises 15' above the cavern floor; it ends in a 5'x10' platform from which the priests used to feed the monkeys and other small animals. A rickety-looking but serviceable ladder is propped against the platform. The cavern floor near the platform is filled with a variety of giant mushrooms, and is filled with chattering noise of monkeys and the buzzing of dragonflies.

3-163C: Cliff

Running across the northern edge of the Great Cavern is tall cliff that drops 50' to the level of the lake (3-164). The cliff face is sheer, but rocky and relatively easy to climb (+15% to climb rolls). The paths through the fungal forest lead right to its edge, and it is just possible that an inattentive (or running) PC might walk or run off the edge (taking 5-30 HP damage in the process).

Small caves and holes in the cliff face serve as homes to the albino monkeys, to various small insects, and to numerous giant centipedes. Anyone climbing the cliff is vulnerable to attack by 3-4 giant centipedes (50% chance for an attack). Use of ropes makes the descent easier, and allows a straight 33% chance to avoid centipedes. Those making use of the foul paste found at 3-163A find their descent (or ascent) untroubled by centipedes. GM Note: clever PCs might also employ Lankios's paste (1-6) or a comparable recipe to serve the same purpose.

Close examination of the cliff edge nearest to points 3-163A and 3-163B reveals iron stakes driven into the stone (indicated on the map by an 'x'); the LRCP uses these to attach ropes when they ascend and descend the cliffs.

Inhabitants:

1. 18 giant centipedes, in groups of 3-4: SZ S; AL N; AC 9; MV 150'; HD 1 or 2 HP; HP 2(x9), 1(x9); #AT 1; Dmg n.a. Special attacks: poison (+4 to save).

3-163D: Fungal Forest

All of the open areas, both above and below the cliff, are filled with specimens of colossal mushrooms that grow 10' to 15' in height. All of the colossal species listed in the new flora appendix may be found here, including orange lamps, white ribs, blue trumpets, eye-openers, cloud caps, and white bulbs. Paths through the forest are marked with dashes; these allow relatively normal movement. Where no paths exist, the forest is densely packed; movement is possible through it, but at half the normal rate. When in the forest, direction is quite difficult to maintain; one must roll 6d4+2 under WIS (or possess tracking skills) to maintain the proper direction. Note: there is a 5'-wide space between the cavern walls and the side of the fungal forest, so it is possible to circumnavigate the cavern by hugging the cave walls. The mushrooms grow right up to the cliff edge and the water's edge, so it might be possible for a careless PC to walk into the lake.

Searching the Fungal Forest:

Nothing of interest will be found on the path. For each turn spent blundering around in the forest, however, it is possible (1 in 6 chance) that the PCs might come across something interesting:

D20	Result	GM Notes
1-2	A head from an ancient statue: heqeti (20%), Thothian (50%), or Set (30%)	Nothing special
3-4	Corpse. Roll d10: 1-2: adventurer, 3-6: beastman, 7-8: goblin, 9: varumani 10: GM's choice	The corpse might have usable armor (25%), a normal weapon (25%), a bag of coins worth 10-100 gp (50%), and/or a minor magic item (5%)
5-6	Skeletons: skeletons rise from the muck and attack. Attacks are at -1 for all combatants, and only one person can engage another at a time (without hacking down some mushrooms)	3-6 skeletons: SZ M; AL N; AC 7; MV 120'; HD 1; HP 8, 7, 6, 6, 5, 4; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special defenses: immune to sleep, charm, hold, and cold; cutting and piercing weapons do half damage
7	An oblong bit of bronze (8"x3" with an image of a leering trollish face engraved on it.	One of the troll thegn's passports (see Arden Vul items)
8-10	A holy symbol: 1-4: Thoth; 5-8: Set; 9-11: other; 12: Rimmaq-Isfet	Each is worth 10-60 gp
11	A shrunken head of a monkey dangling on a string. The head chatters incessantly in Mithric about the basest of physical needs and/or about its immediate environment.	A shrunken head (see new magical items). If the GM wishes, the head knows how to get to one hidden tomb (e.g., 3-39, 3-66, 3-197, 5-36 or 5-57)
12	A gold cylindrical seal matrix, 8" long and 5" in diameter	The matrix is used to print archonal images on parchment; it is worth 450 gp
13-14	A gold medallion depicting a woman decapitating a frost giant	The medallion depicts the Fifth Labor of Arden (see SL13-10E); it is worth 100 gp

15-16	A 6"-tall terra cotta figurine of a man wearing an eye patch and a patchwork cloak, holding a huge sack and wielding a tiny, narrow dagger.	A representation of the folk hero, Larel One-Eye (see 3-46)
17	A 1"-diameter disk of a hard gray substance, with the words "From the Beacon" scrawled on it in Mithric.	A (depleted) rudishva lesser power supply (see new technological items). The inscription is a hint as to the origins of the rudishva tech.
18	A pottery shard with the words "the first name is 'Font of Magic'" written in Archontean	This is the first of the Seven Secret Names of Thoth (see either Secreta Secretorum or Thoth in All His Forms , both in Arden Vul books)
19	A parchment folio with the Lay of Marius Invictus (see Arden Vul books) written on it in a beautiful Mithric script	See Arden Vul books
20	A folded-up piece of parchment with the following note in Mithric: "Neferet, High Priestess of the Lord of Light, to Uriel Basileon, archon of the city of Arden Vul. Deliver the iron circlet of Ghanor from the governor's palace to me for safe-keeping, or lose the support of the priesthood of Thoth in your struggle against the Sortians."	A clue about how the iron circlet of Ghanor (see new magic items) left the possession of Uriel Basileon (AV-29) and ended up with Neferet, high priestess of Thoth (now in 3-127)

Searching for Mushrooms:

Those looking for a particular mushroom species (see new flora) should roll on the following table:

D20	Species Found	Description
1-8	White Ribs	15' tall, 4' caps, good for eating
9-10	White Bulbs	11' tall, 2' bulbs, poisonous
11-13	Blue Trumpets	14' tall, 2'-diameter blue cup-shaped caps, 75% cap filled with water, good to eat
14-16	Orange Lamps	10' tall, 3'-diameter orange caps, emit phosphorescence
17-18	Eye Openers	9' tall, 5'-diameter brown caps, psychedelic effects
19	Cloud Caps	9' tall, with white and blue 2' caps; good to eat, cures 1-3 HP; used by Deino (3-158)
20	A new variety of the GM's creation

3-164: Lake

The Seamy Run (3-230) forms a small lake here before the falls at 3-164B. The lake is about 130' by 100' at its largest extent, and its banks drop off quickly to an average depth of about 40'. A small island (3-164A) lies in its center. The water is clear, but dark due to lack of light. Its temperature is cold, about 55 degrees Fahrenheit, and a current runs through it towards the falls at 3-164B. Those not suspecting the current will need to paddle, row, or swim hard to reach the jetty at 3-164C (or any part of the beach). As part of the Great Cavern, the ceiling over the lake is high - some 40-60' above the surface of the water.

Two giant crabs make their home in the lake. The crabs are hungry and are likely (50%) to attack anything moving across the lake. They are, however, intimidated by light, and can be driven away for 1-6 rounds if bright light (torch, light spell, etc.) is shined directly in their eyes. The beastmen bring chum for the crabs when they cross the lake. If the crabs attack the PCs while they are in a boat, there is a 15% capsizing chance. This chance can be reduced to 5% if at least one PC focuses only on keeping the boat afloat.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 giant crabs: SZ L; AL N; AC 3; MV 90'; HD 3; HP 24, 22; #AT 2; Dmg 2-8/2-8. Special attacks: surprise on 1-4.

Treasure:

Halfway between the two docks, at a depth of 40', is a solid gold statuette of a dwarf clad in mail with an axe; it is worth 5,000 gp.

3-164A: Sandy Island

Rising 5' above the surface of the lake, this small island is the peak of a rock formation rising from the floor of the cave below. Over the centuries it has acquired a thin coating of sand on top of the rock (about 2" deep). Several skeletons and a few piles of rusted metal are visible on the island. One or both of the giant crabs may be resting on or near the island 50% of the time, ready to scuttle forth to attack any who land on their favored resting ground. Those who linger on the island will inexorably attract the crabs' attention: the first crab arrives in 5 rounds, and the second 3 rounds after that. The crabs can be deterred for only 1-4 rounds by bright light at this location.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 giant crabs (50%) (see 3-164).

Treasure:

The skeletons are bare. The piles of metal include a badly damaged suit of splint mail (it provides AC 6 instead of the usual AC 4), a magic shield +2, and several useless piles of rusted armor. Digging in the sand for 2-4 turns will produce a pair (white and green) of glass activation squares (see Thothian teleportation rings in new magic items), a deep blue spinel worth 750 gp, four aquamarines worth 100 gp each, and a black pearl worth 500 gp.

3-164B: Falls

At this point the Seamy Run drops some 25' over a natural granite dam, producing quite a bit of noise and spray. Unsuspecting swimmers or boaters may be swept over the falls by the current if they come within 30' of the Falls.

3-164C: Northern Dock

Here a stone jetty extends into the dark lake. Hammered into the sand-and-stone 'beach' near the jetty are two torch-holders, with fresh but un-lit torches in them. Tethered to the jetty are two old and weather-beaten skiffs, complete with two oars per boat. Each skiff seats five medium creatures.

3-164D: Side Cave

The ceiling of this side cave is 10' above the surface of the lake. A 4'-radius hole in the ceiling of the side-cave leads up to 3-171.

Treasure:

On the floor of the lake at this point, below 20' of water, is a wooden chest containing 9,971 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items), a map ruined by water, a potion of waterbreathing (see new magic items), and a ring of swimming.

3-164E: Southern Dock and Rowboat

Identical to 3-164C, including jetty and torch-holders, but with only one skiff.

3-165: Rocky Island

A rocky island rises out of the Seamly Run (3-230) here. The island is uneven, rising to a level of about 20' above the river (and thus about equal to the height of the cavern floor to the north). In the center of the island is a badly worn and almost shapeless statue, worn almost smooth by moisture and time. The head of the statue has been knocked off and lies at its feet; the features of the statue are vaguely reptilian. The statue is visible from the base of the cliff opposite the river. A pair of phase salamanders (see new monsters) lairs on the island.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 phase salamanders (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 3 (or 6); MV 90', 120' swimming; HD 5; HP 32, 23; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8. Special attacks: phase (+4 to hit). Special: AC 6 if unable to phase.

Treasure:

Next to the statue head is a small stash left by previous adventurers: a leather sack with a coil of rope, 10 steel spikes, four torches, 2 smokeless torches (see new magic items), a mallet, 2 flasks of oil, and a 6"-tall, ebony statuette of feline friendship (see new magic items).

3-166: Elevated Tunnel and Cave

The 5'-diameter mouth of a cave gapes over the Seamly Run (3-230) here. The opening is 25' above the Seamly Run and about even to the cavern floor across the river; as such it is difficult to detect unless light is used to inspect the far wall. Inside the opening are some roughly hewn - and wet - steps leading up to a cavern. There is a 10% chance per turn spent near the river at this location that a stirge can be spotted emerging from the cavern mouth.

The cavern is uneven and filled with stalagmites and stalactites. A trickle of water runs down the center of the walls, down the stairs, and drips over the edge of the cave opening and into the river. Any light source reveals a beautiful array of colors and glittering bits of mica. Close investigation of the stalagmites further reveals that one of the smaller ones has coalesced over a sack containing 52 gp; the sack must be chipped out of the stalagmite (possibly bringing company from 3-171).

Treasure:

52 gp in a sack.

3-167: Sloping Cave

The northern end of this cave rises sharply to a point more than 15' higher than the cave mouth. The floor is treacherous and uneven, with flowstone and other mineral formations. A sheen of water glistens when light is deployed.

Close observation reveals some roughly carved steps leading north (and upwards) beneath the flowstone.

Secret Door (east): The door is located behind a stone pillar, at a place where the cave is only 5' high. The door is an obviously worked piece of stone and is thus easy to detect (1 in 4). It has no secret catch, but must simply be pushed open with a successful open doors check.

3-168: Antechamber

This tiny room may at first appear as nothing more than a storage chamber, but it is in fact the antechamber to the tomb of Ythak Furl, a minor sorcerer from antiquity. The antechamber contains 6 large (5'-tall) urns and a pile of rotted wood (if investigated, the wood can be recognized as having once been a ladder). The walls were originally painted, but moisture has caused the paint to run and the walls now are covered with large, disquieting smears of moist color.

Urn 1: Hundreds of valueless cave pearls (2"-diameter white calcite formations).

Urn 2: A disgustingly thick soup of rotted vegetal matter (mushrooms): -2 penalty to saves for 1 day if ingested.

Urn 3: What appears to be an urn full of lamp oil. In truth, the lamp oil's depth is only a handful of inches, underneath which is contaminated water. Enough lamp oil can be gleaned to fill 5 flasks.

Urn 4 (covered): Extremely fine black sand.

Urn 5 (covered): 24 smooth wooden sticks ranging from 18" to 50" in length. One of the 36"-long sticks is in fact a femur of a large creature (troll), which has been carved into a flute. This enchanted item is a troll flute (see new magic items). Should Gislú the goblin (see 4-2) be present when the tomb is looted, Gislú will mistakenly declare the troll flute to be the long lost scepter of the goblins (see new magic items; the scepter is actually at 8-69) and will claim it as his share of the loot.

Urn 6: An inch of water on top of solid gold (once liquid, now hardened). The gold is worth 17,500 gp, but the urn weighs close to 400 lb.

Secret Door (east): A thin panel ½" thick, 3' tall, and 5' wide may be found at the top of the east wall of the antechamber; it is normal to locate. Blunt force will easily shatter the panel, allowing awkward egress to the inner tomb (recall that PCs will have to boost themselves 7' up to climb through the broken panel).

3-168A: Tomb of Ythak Furl

Ythak Furl, an eccentric sorcerer from the glory days of Arden Vul, commanded his tomb be built in this obscure location. Feeling death approaching, he retired to this chamber with his four trusted servants, whom he slew before taking his own life. The inexpertly worked, 20'-tall chamber has developed cracks that have oozed and dripped calcite-rich water over the centuries. The result is a forest of soda straws up to 5' in length and an uneven floor filled with various mineral formations. The vibrant paint of the frescoes has run, forming long streaks of color on the walls. Two stone statues depicting archaic spearmen stand against the west wall. Ythak Furl's sarcophagus rests along the east wall. The corpses of his four servants are neatly stacked by the south wall. Two more large urns stand in the center of the chamber. The first urn contains pure water, and the second once contained the finest hops, but they are now ruined by moisture.

The animated stone spearmen (see new monsters) and zombified corpses rise to confront any intruders who enter the chamber. Combat will inevitably result in the shattering of numerous stone soda straws; all should save vs. spells every other round (with a -2 penalty) to keep footing.

Sarcophagus: Ythak Furl's sarcophagus is a relatively modest, 6'x3'x3' stone affair, with an inexpert, vaguely cartoonish, carved image of a man with a strange headdress, too-large eyes, and long-but-wispy mustaches. Inside are the moldy but inert remains of Ythak Furl as well as some treasure.

Inhabitants:

1. 4 zombies: SZ M; AL N; AC 8; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 13, 11, 10, 7; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8. Special: always strike last.
1. 2 Archontean animated constructs - spearmen (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 2; MV 60'; HD 6; HP 37, 34; #AT 1; Dmg 5-10; MR 25%. Special defenses: immune to elemental magic, poison, and mind-affecting spells; +1 or better weapons to hit; half damage from slashing or piercing weapons.

Treasure:

Inside the sarcophagus: 3,814 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items), an ebony wand of magic missiles (the command word - 'shoot' - is engraved on the side in Mithric; 20 charges remain), a torc of authority (see new magic items), a gilt helmet with eye holes and ear flaps worth 150 gp but usable as a helmet, and three potions (of poison, extra healing, and fire resistance).

3-169: Pool

Much of this room is filled with a 15'-deep, mineral-rich pool of clear water. The walls are wet, and hundreds of soda straws hang from the ceiling. The entrance to the cave is layered flowstone. The water is potable, but tastes slightly off. At the bottom of the pool is ancient, limed-over skeleton. It is hard to detect, due to mineral formation. The corpse bears a Sortian baculus (no further enchantments; see new magic items), a pouch of 55 gp (fused together by mineral action), and a plugged steel tube containing several pieces of parchment. One piece reads, in formal, ceremonial Mithric: "To operate the floating sage, one must slowly and clearly declaim the first principle of epistemology." Alongside this calligraphy are scrawled the words, also in Mithric "Dubito, ergo cogito, ergo sum" (I doubt, therefore I think, therefore I am). This is the command word for the Sortian portable sage (see new magic items) located in area 3-33.

3-170: Last Stand

This relatively plain cave holds the skeletal remains of 6 adventurers and 6 stirges. All twelve sets of remains rise to confront those who stay more than 3 rounds in the cave.

Inhabitants:

1. 6 skeletons: SZ M; AL N; AC 7; MV 120'; HD 1; HP 8, 7, 6, 5, 5, 4; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special defenses: immune to sleep, charm, hold, and cold; cutting and piercing weapons do half damage.
2. 6 skeletal stirges: SZ S; AL N; AC 7; MV 120' flying (Class B); HD 1+1; #AT 1; Dmg 2-5. Special defenses: immune to sleep, charm, hold, and cold; cutting and piercing weapons do half damage.

Treasure:

A suit of badly rusted chain armor; another suit of enchanted banded mail +1; 66 gp, 79 sp, 35 cp, and a large moonstone (60 gp); two potions of healing; a potion of growth; a bone scroll case (25 gp) with a scroll with two cleric spells (resist fire and find traps); and a treasure map.

3-171: Stirge Lair

This cave might be as beautiful as 3-166 if it weren't for centuries of stirge dung which covers the stalagmites and mica formations. The ferocious reek of the dung becomes evident only a few steps into the cave. Those who fail a save vs. poison suffer a -2 penalty to combat rolls due to the smell. Combat here is likely to draw the attention of the skeletons in 3-170, who will arrive in 2-4 rounds.

In the southern tip of the cave is a 4'-radius hole in the floor that descends 10' to the lake (c.f. 3-164D).

Inhabitants:

1. 12 stirges: SZ S; AL N; AC 8; MV 30', 180' flying (Class B); HD 1+1; HP 8, 7, 7, 6(x3), 5(x3), 4, 4, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-3. Special attacks: drain blood; attack as 4 HD creatures.

3-172: Great Cavern, Southern Portion

The ceiling of this enormous cavern averages 60-80' in height. The temperature of the cavern is cool, and somewhat moist (given the lake and river). Several large rock formations (3-174, 3-178, and 3-179), as well as an ancient parvis and stone chair (3-175 and 3-176), rise above the fungal forest.

Kerbog Khan (see SL12-25) regularly sends his dragonfly and explorer automatons to the great cavern to observe the denizens and gather specimens. Explorers have a 5% cumulative chance per hour spent in the cavern to encounter an automaton of Kerbog Khan (see new monsters). If so indicated, roll d6: 1-2 dragonfly automaton; 3-4: poison dragonfly automaton; 5: basic explorer automaton; 6: bipedal explorer automaton. There is a 33% chance that the Khan is inhabiting the automaton. Once initially encountered, there is a 75% chance that the automaton will reappear after a significant encounter (provided the PCs did not destroy it!), as the Khan will be interested in how the newcomers have fared. In subsequent encounters, there is a 75% chance that the Khan is inhabiting the automaton.

Light: The cavern is not completely dark, for among the colossal fungal growths are some species that emit a low orange phosphorescence. Still, the areas of the parvis (3-175 to 3-176) and lake (3-164), as well as the tops of the rock formations (3-174, 3-178, 3-179), are pretty dark. Anyone emerging from 3-180, 3-184, or 3-193 will see a low orange glow emerging from a stand of enormous mushrooms (10' to 15' tall), above which loom shapeless formations of rock.

Sound: Unlike many dungeon chambers, the Great Cavern is not completely quiet. It is filled with a hum of insect activity, as well as occasional moaning of breezes, plops of liquid from mushroom caps, and an occasional thrashing sound (prey being snatched).

Inhabitants:

- 1 basic dragonfly automaton of Kerbog Khan (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 4; MV 240' flying (Class A); HD 1+2; HP 8; #AT 0 Dmg n.a.; MR 25%. Special defenses: immune to cold and fire.
- 1 poison dragonfly automaton of Kerbog Khan (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 4; MV 240' flying (Class A); HD 1+2; HP 8; #AT 1; Dmg poison (death, or 1-3 turns paralysis with 1-4 round slow on save); MR 25%. Special attacks: poison. Special defenses: immune to cold and fire.
- 1 basic exploration automaton of Kerbog Khan (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 2; MV 150'; HD 4; HP 29; #AT 2; Dmg 1-4/1-4; MR 40%. Special defenses: immune to cold and fire.
- 1 bipedal exploration automaton of Kerbog Khan (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 6; HP 43; #AT 2; Dmg 1-6/1-6; MR 40%. Special defenses: immune to cold and fire.

3-172A: Rockfall Trap

At this point where the eastern caves enter the Great Cavern the beastmen have set a trap, activated by a trip wire only 2" off the ground. If detected it is easily avoided and removed. If the trap is sprung, a pile of rocks held in a net above the entrance comes crashing down, inflicting 3-18 HP damage to anyone standing within five feet of the entrance. The beastmen will reset the trap in 1-4 days.

3-172B: Fungal Forest

Most of the cavern is filled with groves of colossal mushrooms that grow 10' to 15' in height. All of the colossal species listed in the new flora appendix may be found here, including orange lamps, white ribs, blue trumpets, eye-openers, cloud caps, and white bulbs. Paths through the forest are marked with dashes; these allow relatively normal movement. Where no paths exist, the forest is densely packed; movement is possible through it, but at half the normal rate. When in the forest, direction is quite difficult to maintain; one must roll 6d4+2 under WIS (or possess tracking skills) to maintain the proper direction. Note: there is a 5'-wide space between the cavern walls and the side of the fungal forest, so it is possible to circumnavigate the cavern by hugging the cave walls. The mushrooms grow right up to the cliff edge and the water's edge, so it might be possible for a careless PC to walk into the lake.

Areas 3-175 and 3-176 are elevated, so PCs taking the path from 3-172A to 3-164C, for instance, will encounter a 20'-tall stone edifice as they approach the latter.

Searching the Fungal Forest:

Nothing of interest may be found on the path. For each turn spent blundering about in the forest, however, it is possible that the PCs might come across something interesting (1 in 6 chance):

D20	Result	GM Notes
1-2	A head from an ancient statue: heqeti (20%), Thothian (50%), or Set (30%)	Nothing special
3-4	Corpse. Roll d10: 1-2: adventurer, 3-6: beastman, 7-8: goblin, 9: varumani 10: GM's choice	The corpse might have usable armor (25%), a normal weapon (25%), a bag of coins worth 10-100 gp (50%), and/or a minor magic item (5%)
5-6	Skeletons: skeletons rise from the muck and attack. Attacks are at -1 for all combatants, and only one person can engage another at a time (without hacking down some mushrooms)	3-6 skeletons: SZ M; AL N; AC 7; MV 120'; HD 1; HP 8, 7, 6, 6, 5, 4; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special defenses: immune to sleep, charm, hold, and cold; cutting and piercing weapons do half damage
7	An oblong bit of bronze (8"x3" with an image of a leering trollish face engraved on it.	One of the troll thegn's passports (see Arden Vul items)
8-10	A holy symbol: 1-4: Thoth; 5-8: Set; 9-11: other; 12: Rimmaq-Isfet	Each is worth 10-60 gp
11	Skull with a note written in Elvish stuffed inside: Row swiftly, my love, so as to avoid the lake's guardians. Fire will keep them at bay, but only for a short while.	Refers to the giant crabs in 3-164

12	A gold cylindrical seal matrix, 8" long and 5" in diameter	The matrix is used to print archonal images on parchment; it is worth 50 gp
13-14	A gold medallion depicting a woman impaling a huge troll	The medallion depicts the Second Labor of Arden (see Twelve Labors of Arden in Arden Vul books): it is worth 100 gp.
15-16	Grave stela, badly eroded: it reads, in Mithric, " Soltis, servant of Thoth, who helped erect the House of Ptarmis atop the outcropping. " Digging will not produce a corpse, as this marker has been removed from its original location.	A clue about the location of Ptarmis's tomb (3-174)
17	A Sortian eye: silver (80%), gold (15%), or sapphire (5%)	See new magic items
18	A parchment scrap with the words "the sixth name is 'Guardian of the Silver Veil'" (written in Mithric)	This is the sixth of the Seven Secret Names of Thoth (see Secreta Secretorum , in Arden Vul books)
19	A piece of leather with the following note burned into it in Archontean script: Use the feather of Maat to avoid unwanted interruptions from the waking dead.	Refers to the feathers of Maat in 3-19 and the catacombs of 3-22
20	A fragment of a parchment letter in Mithric, of which the following is all that remains: ... and Lord Marius has caused great distress in the court by refusing to live in the archon's palace. He prefers the barracks, and the company of soldiers. Worse, he eschews the offerings of the finest merchants of Archontos, preferring a worn gladius and battered legionary gear. It is most unbecoming, but he has the ear of the Basileus! If only ....	Could help those attempting to make the choice of Marius (see 6-154)

Searching for Mushrooms:

Those looking for a particular mushroom species (see new flora) should roll on the following table:

D20	Species Found	Description
1-8	White Ribs	15' tall, 4' caps, good for eating
9-10	White Bulbs	11' tall, 2' bulbs, poisonous
11-13	Blue Trumpets	14' tall, 2'-diameter blue cup-shaped caps, 75% cap filled with water, good to eat
14-16	Orange Lamps	10' tall, 3'-diameter orange caps, emit phosphorescence
17-18	Eye Openers	9' tall, 5'-diameter brown caps, psychedelic effects
19	Cloud Caps	9' tall, with white and blue 2' caps; good to eat, cures 1-3 HP; used by Deino (3-158)
20	A new variety of the GM's creation

The southern fungal forest is home to a spore group of fungal foresters (see new monsters) who support and revere Trocadero, the mad wizard (see 3-176). They have no central lair, but may be encountered as random encounters, and/or in specific locations (e.g. 3-176) under certain well-defined circumstances. There are a total of 33 fungal foresters; any losses should be subtracted from that total.

Inhabitants:

- 14 spotted fungal foresters (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 30' on rock, 90' in fungal forests; HD 4; HP 30, 30, 29, 29, 28, 28, 27, 27, 26, 26, 25(x4); #AT 1; Dmg 2-12.
- 3 red fungal foresters (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 30' on rock, 90' in fungal forests; HD 2; HP 15, 14, 12; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12. Special attacks: explode for 3-18 HP damage.
- 7 blue fungal foresters (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 30' on rock, 90' in fungal forests; HD 6; HP 40, 38, 36, 36, 34, 32, 30; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12. Special attacks: spore cloud (stun).
- 7 yellow fungal foresters (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 30' on rock, 90' in fungal forests; HD 6; HP 41, 39, 38, 37, 36, 35, 33; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12. Special defenses: spore cloud (missile/spell defense).
- 2 black fungal foresters (see new monsters): SZ L; AL N; AC 4; MV 30' on rock, 90' in fungal forests; HD 8; HP 61, 59; #AT 1; Dmg 4-16. Special attacks: spore clouds (stunning, and missile/spell defense).

3-173: Stirge Cave

Some 40' up the cavern wall is the opening to a small cave, where a colony of stirges has its lair. As the stirges continuously forage in the Great Cavern, only 1-4 are likely to be encountered here at any given time. Their cave lair is only about 4' tall, and is a disgusting mass of feathers, dirt, and excrement.

Inhabitants:

- 1-4 stirges: SZ S; AL N; AC 8; MV 30', 180' flying (Class B); HD 1+1; HP 6, 5, 4, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-3. Special attacks: drain blood; attack as 4 HD creatures.

Treasure:

Buried in the muck is a gold Sortian eye (see new magic items), and a necklace of adaptation.

3-174: House of Ptarmis

On top of a rock outcropping some 50' above the floor of the great cavern sits the resting place of Ptarmis, priest of Thoth, discoverer of this cavern, and cultivator of underground flora. Given the light radius thrown by most torches, it may be difficult for spelunkers to notice the existence of this mausoleum. Indeed, the structure on top of the outcropping cannot be seen unless 1) adventurers state they are looking up; 2) they are flying; 3) they have a way of casting light with a radius of more than 40'; or 4) they possess infravision.

Ptarmis's mausoleum lies on the flattened top of this outcropping, and is itself a structure some 20' tall. The ceiling of the cavern is here about 10' above the roof of the mausoleum. No ladder or indentations exist to aid climbing the outcropping.

Mausoleum: The mausoleum takes the form of a Greek-style temple some 25' long and 15' wide. A portico of slim columns supports the pediment; the lintel features elaborate neo-classical Archontean bas-reliefs showing a bald priest in robes, carrying an ankh and accompanied by an ibis, moving through a variety of fungal species. Close inspection reveals the bodies of large amphibians (heqeti, see new monsters) lying beneath the fungi. The interior of the mausoleum is open to the air through the pillars, and contains a large sarcophagus surrounded by 8 large urns containing plant and fungal matter. Four skeletons stripped of flesh and usable equipment lie on the pavement; scratched in the dust next to one of the skeletons is the word 'Beware' in Archontean.

Urn: The 8 urns are about 4' in diameter and 4' tall; moving them requires a successful open doors check. They are filled with an earthy and pungent soil. Four feature 3'-tall brown pitcher-shaped central flowers (assassin vines – see new monsters); the other four contain 3'-diameter brown globes of fungal matter (brown deadly puff ball mushrooms – see new monsters). Should the lid of the sarcophagus be opened, these plants spring to life and attack the desecrators.

Sarcophagus: The sarcophagus is undecorated, save for an inscription in large Mithric letters on its lid: Here rests Ptarmis/ loyal servant of Thoth/ seeker of hidden ways/ who destroyed the loathsome ones/ raised his children from spores/ and opened this cavern/ Those who disturb his sleep/ Will be returned to the mulch/ from whence they came. A successful open doors check is required to pry open the lid. Inside, Ptarmis's mummy case is nestled in four inches of dirt. The mummy case is elaborate, with a solid gold head decorated with lapis, sapphires, and black onyx. If sold intact, it easily realizes 10,000 gp. If broken up into its constituent gems and minerals, it is worth only 2,000 gp. Of course the case is not empty, as it contains a fungal mummy that used to be Ptarmis (see new monsters). Once the lid of the sarcophagus has been pushed off, Ptarmis pushes open his case and rises to confront the intruders.

GM Note: Ptarmis's fear aura poses a significant tactical challenge, as it might drive some intruders to run off the edge of the rock outcrop. Despite the height, those falling in such a manner only suffer 4-24 damage thanks to the great mushrooms around the outcropping, which slightly soften the fall.

Inhabitants:

1. 4 assassin vines (see new monsters): SZ S (effective); AL N; AC 8 (main plant), 4 (tendrils); HD 2 (main plant); HP 14, 13, 11, 10 (main plants), 5 (tendrils); #AT 24; Dmg special. Special attacks: drag; strangulation; digestion.
2. 4 brown deadly puff ball mushrooms (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 10; MV 0'; HD 3 HP; HP 3, 3, 3, 3; #AT 1; Dmg special. Special attacks: spore cloud (stunning for 4-7 rounds).
3. Ptarmis, the fungal mummy (see new monsters): SZ M; AL LE; AC 1; MV 60'; HD 8; #AT 2; Dmg 1-10/1-10. Special attacks: cause fear in 10' radius; spores cause madness. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; fungal flesh absorbs 2 HP dmg from each hit. Special: always act last in combat.

Treasure:

Ptarmis's mummy case is worth 10,000 gp entire, or 2,000 in pieces. Inside the mummy case are three 500 gp gems, 1,079 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items), a pair of keys to the hematite doors at 3-177, a pair (black and red) glass activation squares (see Thothian teleportation rings in new magic items), a jar with 3 doses of stone salve (see new magic items), and an amulet versus undead (7th level). Buried in the dirt of one of the urns is an intelligent magical short sword named Plantsbane (see new magic items).

3-175: Elevated Parvis

The paved area (parvis) here rises about 20' above the rest of the cavern. Anyone on the parvis thus commands a fairly good view over some parts of the fungal forest. The parvis is made of old, cracked, chipped, and dirty white marble pavers identical to the parvis in 3-177. Black hematite doors lead to 3-177 (see that location for details). In short, speaking any of the seven secret names of Thoth (see Secreta Secretorum, in Arden Vul books) produces keyholes, but without the keys egress is impossible (see 3-177 for location of keys).

The parvis features four pairs of stone pillars that rise some 30' into the air; they do not reach the ceiling of the cavern (unlike their counterparts in 3-177).

Note: The parvis is one of the destinations for the one-way teleporter found in UP-11. Those teleported here find themselves standing on the pavement looking north at the gargantuan chair at 3-176.

3-176: Pavilion and Gargantuan Chair

The parvis leads to an imposing pavilion at its northern end. The pavilion is a further 10' above the parvis (and thus 30' above the cavern floor) and is reached by three wide steps from the parvis. The sides and rear of the pavilion feature 20 slim (2'-wide) black marble pillars that rise 20' in the air (but which do not support a superstructure). In the center of the pavilion is a gargantuan seat, some 10' wide by 10' deep by 10' high, carved completely out of single block of red jasper. To the left and right of the chair are two more 20'-tall, black marble columns. The floor of the pavilion is the same cracked white marble of the parvis, save for the impressive mosaics laid out directly in front of the chair. A human dressed in dirty brown robes sits uneasily in the chair (should Trocadero have been encountered as a Random Encounter and slain, the seat will be empty).

Living Mosaics (see new magic items): Ptarmis of Thoth (3-174) installed three living mosaics on the pavilion in front of the Great Chair when he discovered this cavern. The mosaics depict three separate areas of the Halls of Arden Vul:

Mosaic #1: it shows a section of the Long Stair near EX-11. There is a 25% chance that the mosaic currently depicts some group on the Stair. Roll on the random encounter charts at the start of the EX chapter to determine what the mosaic depicts. If a beastman patrol is indicated, then there is a 75% chance that the image shows the beastmen proceeding to enter the Halls at 3-189 (EX-11).

Mosaic #2: it shows a section of the Great Cavern at 3-163A. If the PCs have been there before, it is recognizable. If not, it depicts a section of cave with some bars near it. There is only a 15% chance of a creature moving through the scene.

Mosaic #3: this mosaic shows area 3-2. The scene shows a large ibis-headed figure. There is a 33% chance of a creature moving through the scene: if so, it will be 1-3: halflings, 4-5: adventurers, 6: cloaked figures (Set cultists).

Mad Wizard: Trocadero is a middle-aged human magic user (45 years old) who has been driven insane by the amulet that he found and elected to use. As a result he believes himself the reincarnation of Ptarmis and the natural custodian of the fungal forest. Trocadero spends his time walking through the forest (50%) or sitting on 'his' seat (50%). He is quite mad, but is not necessarily aggressive. He refers to himself in the third person as Lord Ptarmis, and gestures grandly at his dominion. He listens to petitions so long as the petitioners are polite and offer him respect and deference. Only if the PCs insist on searching the pavilion, or if they show signs of having killed any fungal foresters, or if they insult "Lord Ptarmis" to his face, will Trocadero attack. His first action is to ring a nonmagical silver bell. The bell alerts his allies, the fungal foresters, to his need, and they begin arriving (one per round) after 3 rounds. He then uses his spells to maximum effect, alternating between defense and offense. A favorite strategy is to cast fly, shield, and then fireball.

Treasure:

Trocadero wears the amulet of Ptarmis (see new magical items) and a ring of protection from normal missiles (see new magic items), and wields a wand of magic missiles (20 charges). He discovered a loose marble paver on the pavilion and stashed some considerable treasure there: his spell book, two potions of plant control, two potions of extra healing, 650 gp, an alabaster figurine of a cat (100 gp), a gaudy gold and sapphire ring (300 gp), and a large amethyst (400 gp). His stash also includes the Diary of Trocadero of Newmarket (see Arden Vul Books).

Trocadero's Spell Book: Charm person, comprehend languages, detect magic, enlarge, friends, read magic, shield, sleep, unseen servant; ESP, forget, invisibility, magic mouth, mirror image, pyrotechnics, stinking cloud, web; explosive runes, fireball, fly, tiny hut.

Inhabitants:

1. Trocadero of Newmarket, 6th-level male Archontean magic user: SZ M; AL NE; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 6; HP 19; #AT 1; Dmg: 1-4 (dagger). Abilities: STR 8, INT 17, WIS 11, DEX 16, CON

12, CHA 13. Possessions: dagger; a silver bell (25 gp); a wand of magic missiles (20 charges); a ring of protection from normal missiles (see new magic items); a scroll of mirror image; and the amulet of Ptarmis (see new magic items). Spells memorized: charm person, enlarge, shield, sleep; invisibility, web; fireball, fly.

2. 6 fungal foresters (see new monsters). The foresters begin arriving three rounds after Trocadero rings his silver bell, and appear once per round in the following order:

Rnd	Type of Forester
1	Spotted fungal forester (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 30' on rock, 90' in fungal forests; HD 4; HP 22; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12
2	Spotted fungal forester (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 30' on rock, 90' in fungal forests; HD 4; HP 23; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12
3	Blue fungal forester (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 30' on rock, 90' in fungal forests; HD 6; HP 34; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12. Special attacks: spore cloud (stun)
4	Yellow fungal forester (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 30' on rock, 90' in fungal forests; HD 6; HP 35; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12. Special defenses: spore cloud (missile/spell defense)
5	Red fungal forester (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 30' on rock, 90' in fungal forests; HD 2; HP 12; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12. Special attacks: explode for 3-18 HP damage
6	Black fungal forester (see new monsters): SZ L; AL N; AC 4; MV 30' on rock, 90' in fungal forests; HD 8; HP 59; #AT 1; Dmg 4-16. Special attacks: spore clouds (stunning, and missile/spell defense)

3-177: Cave of the Hematite Doors

This large cave has been partially worked and improved. The floor for 35' in front of the doors has been smoothed and laid with large (5'x5') pavers of white marble. Six slim (4' diameter) natural stone pillars extend up to the ceiling (although an observer will notice that they turn into unshaped rock over their top 10' of height). The western wall has also been finished, and was plastered at one time; now, however, only a few shreds of plaster hang on the wall. The east wall is unfinished rock.

The north wall boasts a masonry wall of fitted stone surrounding two enormous (15') black doors. The masonry wall includes two of the stone pillars (i.e. the masonry has been fitted to two pillars); the wall was originally plastered, but, like the west wall, is now entirely bare.

The Hematite Doors: The doors are made of black hematite and are inscribed with arcane symbols that glow with a gentle, pulsating purple light. The symbols include an ankh on each door, as well as a feather on the western door and an ibis on the eastern door. An inscription runs across the top of both doors, reading (in Mithric): "Speak One of the Seven to Enter the Domain of Ptarmis." The doors do not feature any obvious keyholes or locks, but are quite immovable. Anyone who passes successfully through the doors is rewarded with a bless spell, with a duration of 1 day.

Opening the Doors: PCs may naturally assume that these black doors are the (in)famous Obsidian Gates. They are not, although they are themselves quite potent. Speaking aloud one of the seven secret names of Thoth (for which see Secreta Secretorum in Arden Vul books) causes a keyhole to appear in each valve. Each requires a large (1') bronze key to open. Without the keys, the doors will be almost impossible to open; a knock spell causes the keyholes to appear, but will not open the door. The only alternative to locating the keys is to traverse the eastern tunnels (3-180 through 3-184). Keys may be found at areas 2-23, 3-174, 4-2, 4-158, 5-17, and 5-39.

Arcane Sigils on the Doors: Tracing any of the sigils inscribed on the door produces a magical effect, although if the tracer is carrying a holy symbol of Set he/she will instead be blasted for 2-8 HP of electrical energy and the sigil's effect will be wasted. Tracing either ankh produces a blessing (+1 to hit and +1 to damage for 4-6 hours); tracing the feather provides a +4 bonus to AC against undead for 4-6 hours; and tracing the ibis grants the user the equivalent of comprehend languages for 4-6 hours. Once a sigil is traced, the sigil ceases to glow for 1-4 days, at which point it will again glow and can impart its powers.

3-178: Accursed Pillar

The accursed pillar of Rimmaq-Isfet stands atop a rock formation, some 40' above the floor of the great cavern. As with 3-174, it might be difficult or unlikely for unsuspecting cavern crawlers to notice this pillar unless they state they are examining the ceiling carefully. This pillar is one of the most ancient icons of the complex, carved millennia ago during the height of heqeti (see new monsters) dominance over the Halls. Rising 15' above the formation and 8' in diameter, the pillar is carved in a spiral fashion with scenes showing the triumph of the heqeti followers of Rimmaq-Isfet. Given its antiquity, many of these carvings are now little more than faceless lumps. Still, careful perusal of the column reveals some information, albeit at a potentially stiff price. The entire column radiates an obvious and brooding evil, and exudes a chill in a 5' radius around it. Touching the column results in a keqemander demon being gated in to confront the intruders (see new monsters). Simply examining the pillar causes dizziness, and possibly confusion (save vs. spells to avoid). Those who keep their eyes on the pillar may learn one of the following bits of information:

D10	Result
1-2	A colossal salamander fills the top of the pillar. It has multiple legs, and an enormous mouth filled with teeth and circled with a 'beard' of feelers/tentacles. Three lidless eyes span its massive brow.
3-4	Hopping salamander-headed bipeds wreak destruction on lizards
5-6	Humans in chains are driven into the maw of a giant amphibian
7-8	The boundary separating the spiraling narratives is in fact a tongue
9-10	The heqeti and their slaves seem to be moving towards a ziggurat in a cave.

It takes an hour of scrutiny to learn all of this information. Anyone who successfully gleans even one piece of information from the column has a flat 50% chance of recognizing the origin of Kauket artifacts and structures found elsewhere in Halls (e.g. pukel-manders, tears of Kauket, etc.), and a flat 33% chance of intuiting a relationship between Rimmaq-Isfet and Kauket (see new monsters for both). Such an ability does not allow one to intuit specific uses or functions of such objects, but does allow one to state with authority something along the lines of "That [whatever] is part of the demonic amphibian cult. I saw something similar on that blasted pillar!" Forewarned is forearmed, after all.

GM Note: A similar pillar may be found at 9-135.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 keqemander demon (see new monsters): SZ L; AL CE; AC -2; MV 90', 150' flying (Class D); HD 8; HP 55; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/3-18; MR 40%. Constant abilities: dread (-1 to saves); infravision. Special attacks: acid spit (3-10 dmg; 30' range, every other round); cause fear; darkness (10' radius); exude acid with chance to degrade armor; use a symbol of discord. Special defenses: only hit by magic weapons; half damage from cold, electricity, fire, and gas; become invisible. Special: levitate; telekinesis (4,000 gp weight); project image; teleport without error; 50% chance to gate in either another keqemander or a Type I-IV demon.

3-179: Mysterious Hole, with Access to 5-141

The rock formation rises another 20' in height from the accursed pillar (3-178). At its pinnacle it is some 60' above the cavern floor, and only 10' away from the ceiling. At this point is a 5'-diameter hole in the rock that extends downward some 80' before opening into a small cavern. This cavern (unmapped) is about 20' wide and 8' to 15' high, and snakes over uneven rocky floors some 80' towards the north. It is cool and dry, and is a suitable place for resting. In the extreme north corner of the unmapped cavern is another 5'-diameter hole that extends down another 170' to Level 5-141. A midnight rose plant grows next to the hole (see new flora).

The unmapped cave contains a cache of food, including 4 lb of dried fruit of an unusual nature (but edible), 1 lb of dried (but now leathery) meat, and 2 flasks made of a strange, orange-colored material (plastic). Discarded next to the cache are two 1" discs of a strange orange substance (rudishva lesser power supplies, each with 3 charges remaining - see new technological items). Carved on the wall near the cache is some strange text (in Varumani Semiglyphik) which if translated state: "Betrayed by the kaliyani, the varumani flee. Our Lords help us not. They are thrown down. Let us follow the thegn."

GM Note: The holes that connect 3-179 to 5-141 were delved by the varumani as they sought escape from the collapse of the rudishva hegemony over the halls. The note points to the culpability of the kaliyani, the third rudishva servitor race, in this disaster. Alerting the current troll thegn (7-30) to the content and location of the inscription adds a +20% reaction bonus to any initial meeting with the thegn, and also produces a reward of 250 gp.

Treasure:

Two rudishva lesser power supplies with 3 charges each (see new technological items), and two rudishva plastic flasks (10 gp each to a collector).

3-180: Damp Caverns

The walls of these three caves are slick with moisture, and the temperature in them is about 10 degrees warmer than the surrounding caves. The floor of the caves is muddy sand and gravel. The beastmen have placed a warning sign at location (A); it takes the form of a broken spear haft with a decomposing baboon head impaled on it. A column of magical fire crackling merrily at location (B) has attracted 3 fire mephits, who frolic at location (C). The mephits smoke sticks made of dried and pressed eye-opener mushrooms (see new flora). They are dressed in strange costumes: heavy purple velvet smoking jackets, orange top hats, and ankle boots with 3" heels.

Inhabitants:

1. 3 fire mephits: SZ M; AL NE; AC 5; MV 120'; 240' flying (Class B); HD 3+1; HP 23, 22, 20; #AT 2; Dmg 2-4/2-4. Special attacks: flame shroud around body; breath weapon 3/day; heat metal 1/day; magic missile (2 missiles) 1/day; gate (25% chance, once per hour).

Treasure:

If slain, each fire mephit's heart will coalesce into a fire opal worth 100 gp; mephit skin may also be sold to wizards for magical research. They have a silver case (25 gp) containing 12 of the eye-opener 'cigarettes'; these cigarettes function just as the fresh variety (see new flora).

3-181: Hidden Side Cave

The entrance to this side cave is a 3'-diameter hole located 5' above the floor of the tunnel. It is easily found by those proceeding slowly or cautiously, but might be overlooked by those moving swiftly or lazily. The tunnel is small and narrow at first, but opens up to 5' wide by 8' tall before emerging in a 10' by 10' cave. Inside the cave is the body of an elven magic user, long dead and decomposed. All that remains of her is a wooden staff capped with iron and a leather pouch with a 50 gp beryl and a 100 gp aquamarine.

A colony of four feral house cats led by the former familiar of the wizard make their nest here. The cats prowl in 3-172 for insects and other small prey, and hide in this cave to escape larger predators. It might be possible to adopt one or more of them.

Inhabitants:

1. 4 wild cats: SZ S; AL N; AC 5; MV 180'; HD 1; HP 6, 4, 3, 2; #AT 3; Dmg 1-2/1-2/1-2. Special attacks: rear claw rakes; surprise 3 in 6. Special defenses: only surprised 1 in 6.

3-182: Empty Cave

This cave contains obvious signs of animal traffic leading towards 3-183.

3-183: Rock Reptile Lair

This cave is the lair of 3 rock reptiles that enjoy hunting in the Great Cavern (3-172). Their lair proper is in the western protrusion. The beastmen know of the rock reptiles, and employ a testudo formation to move swiftly through this cave; they also offer fresh meat as an offering to allow them to pass. There is a 50% chance that 1 or more of the rock reptiles will be present; if any, roll a d10: 1-4=1 rock reptile, 5-8=2 rock reptiles, 9-10= 3 rock reptiles.

Inhabitants:

1. 1-3 rock reptiles: SZ M (8'); AL N; AC 3; MV 60'; HD 5+8 HP; HP 42, 40, 38; #AT 1; Dmg 9-12. Special attacks: surprise on 3 in 6. Special defenses: chameleon powers.

Treasure:

Two 10-lb silver ingots (500 sp each), a misshapen stone head of a snake-creature (one of the bas-reliefs from 3-192F), a potion of flying, and one boot from a pair of elven boots (the other is at 1-18).

3-184: Cave-In

An enormous rock fall renders the passage here impassable. Just beyond the cave-in is a short tunnel that leads to 3-172, exiting some 25' above the floor of the Great Cavern.

3-185: Lost Goblins

The remnant of a goblin expeditionary party lurks in this cave. Only three goblins remain, under the command of the charismatic sub-chief, Bellringer (who is fluent in Archontean, moreover!), and they are nervous and excitable. They are quite willing to parlay, especially if the PCs offer them food and assistance. They have stashed the bodies of three of their dead companions down the narrow passageway

The Goblins' Story: Flushed with a minor gladiatorial victory at the Arena (6-68), a team of goblins under the leadership of Bellringer decided that they were fated to discover the whereabouts of Gribble, King Weskenim's missing brother (Gribble is currently in the prison of Set at 3-105). They left the Arena area (6-67), climbed to Level 4 (4-161), and located the stairs to Level 3 (via 4-159). Once in the Great Cavern (3-172), however, Bellringer and his men were ambushed by the beastmen of the Long Range Cavern Patrol (3-154) and almost annihilated. The remnants fled east, and managed to locate this cave, where they are planning their next move. They gladly trade information for food and assistance in returning to 4-159.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 goblins: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 5, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.
2. Bellringer, sub-chief (as a hobgoblin): SZ S; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 1+1; HP 8; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (military pick). Possessions: military pick, chime of opening (3 charges).

Treasure:

35 sp, 61 cp, and two dead giant centipedes (poison glands could be extracted).

3-186: Crossroads and a Giant Boulder

A giant boulder rests on the floor of this crossroads. The fact that the boulder is freestanding, and not attached to the ceiling, may not initially be apparent to the incautious: the ceiling here is 20-25' high, while the boulder is 22' wide and 15' high. Close inspection reveals chiseled footholds on the north face of the boulder that allow easy access to the top of the boulder. At the top may be found a flattened space, the cold ashes of a cooking fire, and several battered iron pots and cauldrons. A small patch of aqua vitae mushrooms (see new flora) has taken root in some dirt and dust that has accumulated in a shallow depression on the rock. Currently there are 8 ripe mushrooms. Every 1-3 months a new crop of mushrooms will spring up here.

The campsite on the boulder is relatively safe; it provides a good view of all approaching tunnels, as well as of the hematite doors at 3-177 (which are clearly visible due to the magical light found there).

3-187: Empty Cave

This cave is little more than a widening of the tunnel. The corpses of two beastmen lie moldering in the small spur to the north. The bodies are badly decomposed and carry nothing of value. Occasionally (10%) a carcass creeper is found here.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 carcass creeper (10% chance): SZ L; AL N; AC 3 (head) or 7 (body); MV 120'; HD 3+1; HP 20; #AT 8; Dmg nil. Special attacks: paralysis.

3-188: Crossroads

Three tunnels converge at this point, and a fourth appears to lead to the north. The fourth passage leads to a small cave whose far wall has been smoothed flat and then carved. The carved stone is a Sortian face (see new magic items) that is activated by placing Sortian eyes (see new magic items) in the empty eye sockets. Only a few combinations of eyes are unique to an individual face; the rest are standard (as detailed in the new magic items appendix).

Gold-Gold: Teleportation

All within 5' are teleported to area 6-48

Gold-Sapphire: A permanent magic mouth speaks in Mithric from the face: All those with the spark must be trained, regardless of their origin. The empire will be better for it. Once you have found a suitable recruit, visit the sanctum so that training may commence. Recall that proper vision comes only with yellow or blue eyes. I, Priscus the Hekate, have spoken! Oh, and if exigency requires it, you may seek our outpost along the wall of the chasm, near where the falls crash to the floor. Do not alert the Theosophs to your passage!

GM Note: This message is a hint as to the original, egalitarian message of the Sortians, and especially Priscus Pulcher. The outpost is to be found at areas 9-58 to 9-64.

Note: This cave is also the destination for a Sortian face found at area 6-48.

3-189 (aka EX-11): Secret Door to Exterior

This secret door deposits travelers outside the Halls and onto the upper reaches of the Long Stair at a point 1,150' from the valley floor or 350' below the plateau. The door is made of stone, and is easy to discern from the inside (1 in 3). The door is the primary route used by the beastmen of the Long Range Cavern Patrol (3-154) to access the ruined city of Arden Vul (AV) and the valley of the Swift River.

Trackers will easily notice signs of traffic here, particularly of small feet (the beastmen). Much graffiti is scrawled on the walls near the secret door.

D20	Graffiti	GM Notes
1-3	A random name, e.g., Jimmy Sharp-Eyes, Gaius Christopher, Azgallatu, Ceras, etc.	The GM should use names of NPCs known to (or rivals of) the PCs. Language: varies by ethnicity of author
4	Beware the Lake. Foul things live there!	A reference to 3-164 and the giant crabs dwelling therein. Language: Dwarvish runes
5	Door impenetrable. Move instead to pyramid. Forge of Zhorak to find!	A reference to the legendary dwarven smith Zhorak, whose forge (8-100) modern dwarves would dearly love to locate. Language: Dwarvish runes
6	Humans Go Home! (with a skull painted nearby)	Beastman propaganda (for beastmen, see 3-138 to 3-162). Language: large, simplistic Archontean script
7	To Gnath: walking animals be too mighty. Me take boys home. [Signed] Ragnar	A warning about the beastmen (3-138 to 3-162) from a Wiskin adventurer. Language: crude, agrammatical Archontean
8	'The Priscians have returned' [in Archontean with big block capitals] and 'Fool of a First Circle apprentice. Use discretion!'	A clue that the Priscians have occupied the old Sortian outpost (see 9-58 to 9-64). Language: Mithric
9	Foul sorcery in the big cave. The flying fire-dealer cannot be stopped.	An opaque reference to Trocadero of Newmarket (3-176) although PCs may think it refers to a dragon. Language: Archontean
10	Ptarmis found this cavern and built this door. May Thoth reward him.	An ancient reminder of the role of Ptarmis (now a fungal mummy at 3-174) in developing the Great Cavern (3-163 and 3-172). Language: Mithric
11	Nerub Null is a big fat idiot. May he choke on his silver eyes!	A reference to one of the leaders of the modern Priscian cult (9-64) and to the Sortian eyes (see new magic items). Language: Thorcin
12	Hareth: bear right through the caves and meet us by the lake.	An adventuring note, with the important clue about how to reach the Great Cavern (3-172) and lake (3-164). Language: Thorcin
13	[a recently-painted, but crude, image of a black boar with an ibis in its mouth]	Iconography of the cult of Set (the boar) and that of Thoth (the ibis). A hint that Set is active again (see 3-90 and Level 4)

14	Don't trust the beastmen. Their 'mother' is a witch!	Partly true, as Deino (3-158) is a dangerous sorcerer. But the beastmen (3-138 to 3-162) are lawful and generally keep their word. Language: Archontean
15	Those yellow-spotted blue mushrooms pack a dangerous punch! But with them we found a hidden door!	A reference to the eye-opener variety of giant mushrooms (see new flora). Language: Archontean
16	Watch out for the walking mushrooms. Some of them explode!	A reference to the red variety of fungal forester (see new monsters), which might be encountered in the great cavern (3-163 and 3-172). Language: Wiskin
17	There's a route to the lower caverns high up on the west wall of the big cavern.	A useful hint about the route to Levels 4 and 6 via the ledge at 3-193. Language: Archontean
18	We have it on good information that there are three major unplundered tombs accessible from the big cavern. One is under the waters of the lake.	A reference to areas such as 3-168A, 3-174, 3-192, and 3-197. The rumor about a tomb under the lake is false. Language: Archontean
19	To reach the temple of Thoth, head north through the Great Hall and turn left through the tombs. Look for the statue.	An accurate, if general, description of the route to 3-71, via 3-123 and 3-15. Language: Elvish
20	The LRCP Owns These Caves!	Propaganda from the Long Range Cavern Patrol (3-154). Language: Archontean

3-190: Storage Cave

The beastmen use this dry cave to store supplies for their patrols. A coffin-sized stone container sits in the southwestern corner; it has an ancient wooden lid on which the faint imprint of the insignia of the 3rd Cohort of the Imperial Tagmata (a mailed fist) is still visible. The lid is held shut with a padlock trapped with contact poison (save vs. poison or die; if save is made, still take 1-12 damage). Despite this protection, the lid could easily be removed by chopping off the hinges of the chest. Inside the stone container are 10 javelins, 10 torches, six gourd canteens filled with water, dried food sufficient for 5 persons for a week, three glass flasks of oil, and a leather pouch with 5 dried specimens of red veil mushrooms (see new flora).

Inhabitants:

A beastman patrol may be present (25%). There is also a 25% chance that a carcass creeper has been attracted by the smell of prey. If the two are present at the same time, they will be in combat (and that combat will be noisy and evident to those approaching from the south).

1. 6 beastman troopers (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 8, 7, 7, 6, 6, 5; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spears; short swords; short bows.
2. 1 beastman sergeant (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 2+2; HP 15; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 or 2-5. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spear; war hammer.
3. 1 carcass creeper: SZ L; AL N; AC 3 (head) or 7 (body); MV 120'; HD 3+1; HP 21; #AT 8; Dmg nil. Special attacks: paralysis.

3-191: Empty Cave?

First impressions suggest an empty natural cave. But the western wall is, in fact, illusory (marked by dotted lines). Klisko Lightfingers, a human illusionist, was badly burned in the battle that took place in 3-192, and has retreated here in shock to recuperate. Most of his possessions, including  $\frac{3}{4}$  of his spell book, were destroyed in the conflagration. With what spells that remain to him, he threw up a hallucinatory terrain spell to make the room appear smaller than it is; retreating into the illusion, he applied a medicinal paste to his burned face and scalp and fell asleep on his bedroll. If discovered and awakened, Klisko is cautious, and backs away, mumbling vague threats and warnings about fire. If cured, he pretends to join his rescuers but betrays them as soon as possible.

Careful examination of the floor of the cave might suggest that it has been used recently and a ranger might (+5% to base chance) notice tracks leading towards the illusory wall.

Klisko freely relates what happened in 3-192, (including the existence of the fire trap) hoping thereby to ingratiate himself with his rescuers. He and his team knew one of the secret names of Thoth (#4: Light of Comprehension, see Secreta Secretorum in Arden Vul books for all Thoth's secret names) and suspected the location of the tomb of Lycandus (3-197). He might barter this information for assistance in exiting the Halls.

Inhabitants:

1. Klisko Lightfingers, 5th-level male Archontean illusionist: SZ M; AL NE; MV 120'; AC 5; HD 5; HP 4 (Max 14); #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (throwing daggers). Abilities: STR 10, INT 17, WIS 14, DEX 17, CON 11, CHA 13. Possessions: backpack; 1 day's rations; empty water skin; 6 throwing daggers; bracers of defense (AC 8); a pouch with 45 gp; a bag of silver shavings (110 gp); and his badly burned spell book. Memorized spells: the only spell he has left is light.

Treasure:

Bracers of defense (AC 8), a pouch with 45 gp, a bag of silver shavings (110 gp), and his badly burned spell book. The only spells still left in the spell book are: detect invisibility, phantasmal force, and hypnotic pattern.

3-192: Hall of Unease

This elaborately carved and decorated chamber predates the arrival of the Archontean to this site, even though it has been substantially modified and redecorated on numerous occasions over the centuries. Originally (and until only recently) it was accessed through a set of stone doors opening into 3-172; this entrance is now buried under several tons of rubble from a cave-in caused by the adventuring party lying (mostly) dead in the chamber. A secondary access route was gnawed or delved by unknown hands some centuries past; it leads by a twisty path to the tunnels near 3-188 and 3-191.

The chamber contains an ancient, timeworn statue, six decapitated bas-relief figures, and five sarcophagi of more recent (but still centuries-old) vintage. The walls originally featured low bas-reliefs of figures struggling in coiling, writhing masses; with erosion and desecration it is hard to make out the nature of the figures, but they seem vaguely reptilian. In a few places it seems as if large snakes or lizards are devouring multitudes of smaller figures. Studying the walls for more than a couple of rounds (say, while searching for secret doors) provokes a sense of unease (-1 to saves vs fear for 1-4 hours).

In addition to the sculptural features, the Hall has also been the site of a destructive battle in the very recent past: fully nine adventurers lie dead throughout the room. Six of the corpses are badly scorched, as if from tremendous heat; the most badly burned body lies directly in front of the statue. The three other corpses are less badly scorched, probably because their owners were crouching behind the sarcophagi in the center of the chamber when they died. The corpses belong to two adventuring parties that got into an argument in this chamber; in the midst of their struggle, the thief of one party manipulated the statue, thereby provoking the fireball that annihilated the parties and caused the cave-in over the exit to 3-172.

Statue: The statue has been badly eroded by time, and its features are hard to discern. It is bipedal and human-sized, although its head looks strangely large and nonhuman, particularly in its nose. Two highly faceted amber gems serve as over-sized eyes for statue. Should anyone touch the gems, a roaring noise will fill the hall for 3 rounds before one of the following effects occurs:

D6	Effect
1-2	Two bolts of electricity strike one of the PCs, inflicting 2-8 HP each
3-4	A cloud of poison gas emerges from the ceiling. Everyone in the hall must save vs poison: if save is made, take 1-10 HP damage; if it is failed, but within 5 of the target number, take 2-16 HP damage and suffer blindness for 1-4 turns; if failed by 5 or more, take 3-24 HP damage and suffer blindness for 1-4 days
5-6	Fireball at level 9 (i.e., 9-54 damage)

It is possible to provoke multiple effects, or multiple iterations of a single effect, by continued manipulation of the statue.

Sarcophagi: The three in the center of the chamber are ancient, dating to the earliest period of the Archontean Empire. The lids of all three were smashed long ago, and the remains dispersed. They are 4' tall, 6' long, and 3' wide. One could easily hide within any of them. The outside of each is carved in a simplistic style, employing rude scenes of dragons devastating an idealized countryside. The two sarcophagi that rest against the northeast and southeast walls are more recent, dating to the attempted recolonization of the Halls some 250 years ago. Both have plain sides and an elaborate, well-carved gisant of an imperial legionary on their top. The northeastern sarcophagus has been smashed open, and its contents dispersed, while the southeastern one is still intact. It takes a successful open doors check and the use of a prybar (or equivalent) to lift the lid. Inside is a skeleton of an Archontean legionary, still accoutered in tarnished mail and conical helm, with a serrated sword. The skeleton clambers out of the sarcophagus and attacks.

Bas-Relief Figures: Along the eastern ell of the chamber are six 2' daises on which stood bas-relief figures of animal-like humanoids. The heads of 5 of the 6 have been brutally struck off. The sixth is intact, and represents a bipedal figure with bulbous eyes, slit nose, and an oversized mouth (it looks vaguely salamander-like; it is, in fact, a heqeti, see new monsters). The bas-reliefs are ancient, and extremely worn.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 skeleton: SZ M; AL N; AC 7; MV 120'; HD 1; HP 7; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special defenses: immune to sleep, charm, hold, and cold; cutting and piercing weapons do half damage.

Treasure:

The intact sarcophagus: 6 ancient octagonal platinum coins (see Arden Vul items), a bone scroll case with three magic user spells (spider climb, continual light, and gust of wind), and a jade necklace worth 275 gp.

On the dead adventurers: a total of 143 sp, 71 gp, 219 cp; a hammer +1; a dagger +2; a potion of fire resistance; a potion of climbing; usable long swords (x3), mace, daggers (x6); a lump of melted silver (56 gp), formerly a statuette; and various charred bits of equipment at the GM's will.

3-193: Set's Landing

Twenty-five feet up on the west wall of the great cavern is a small landing leading west to a 5'-wide passageway. The landing has a low balustrade of simple stone columns to which is attached a long rope ladder. The rope ladder is coiled on the landing but easily reaches the cavern floor when uncoiled. Three Set guardsmen with bows are lounging on the landing, watching activity in the cavern. The landing provides the only sure way to access Level 4 (via 3-212) from the southern part of Level 3, and the priests of Set are increasingly anxious to control it. If combat breaks out here, there is a 50% chance that the guardsmen in 3-195 hear and arrive to aid their comrades in 3-5 rounds.

Inhabitants:

1. 4 Set guardsmen (see new monsters), as 2nd-level Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 17, 15, 12; #AT 1, Dmg 2-7 (mace), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: red scale mail and wooden shield; footman's maces; spears; light crossbows with 20 bolts.

3-194: Storage Chamber

This small chamber is unpainted and rather drab. Twelve large sacks line the north and south walls. These sacks contain varying amounts of dried mushrooms of different sorts harvested from the Fungal Forest of the Great Cavern. The sacks are not worth much in absolute terms, but would be valuable as food and pharmacological resources to any of the intelligent communities in the Halls. They would be recognized as stolen from Set if the PCs tried to sell the sacks in the Forum of Set. At the bottom of one sack is a silver plaque engraved with a sheep's head; it is worth 50 gp as a symbol of the 2nd legion (Sheep's Head Rangers), which foundered in Arden Vul 250 years ago.

3-195: Cozy Chamber

The narrow corridor from 3-194 ends up in this large chamber featuring a high ceiling painted with stars in the shape of the manta constellation. By the east wall is a fireplace that crackles with burning mushroom stalks. Several simple wooden benches, one battered easy chair, and two barrels of water complete the chamber. Stephania, the high priestess of Set (4-51), has furnished the room in a relatively luxurious manner as a sort of 'reward' to her minions for taking up this distant and dangerous posting. Four leather easy chairs (50 gp each), a silk settee (55 gp), a plush green carpet (25 gp), a set of brass candelabra and eating utensils (35 gp total), a keg of brandy (25 gp), and two barrels of water are arranged in front of the fireplace. Still, the guardsmen posted here remain unconvinced. In fact, they are jumpy and alert, and have a 20% chance of fleeing to the north if they hear loud and/or ominous sounds emanating from the east.

Inhabitants:

1. 3 Set guardsmen (see new monsters), as 2nd-level Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 18, 15, 12; #AT 1, Dmg 2-7 (mace), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: red scale mail and wooden shield; footman's maces; spears; light crossbows with 20 bolts.
2. 1 Set sergeant (see new monsters), as a 5th-level Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL LE; AC 3; MV 60'; HD 5; HP 35; #AT 1, Dmg 3-8 (mace +1), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: Set armor (see Arden Vul items) and wooden shield; footman's mace +1; spear; light crossbow with 20 bolts.
3. 1 Set acolyte (see new monsters), as a 3rd-level Archontean cleric of Set: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 60'; HD 3; HP 19; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (mace) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Possessions: Set armor (see Arden Vul items); footman's mace; light crossbow; acolyte's was stick (see new magic items); and a silver holy symbol of Set. Spells prayed for: command, cure light wounds, curse (reverse of bless), protection from good; hold person, silence 15' radius.

3-196: Empty (?) Cave

This 35'-tall, river-carved cavern appears to be empty save for some dripping stalactites and a thin layer of sand. The cave is quite damp and moist.

The passage to Lycandus's tomb (3-197) is 25' up on the south wall and is concealed by an illusion. The illusion is powerful, and cannot be dispelled save by a 15th-level magic user (or better); it will be revealed by those who attempt to touch it, for the subject's hands will go right through the wall. Those who make their way past the illusion into the south-leading tunnel will find an enormous complex knot carved on the tunnel wall (the knot is a symbol of the Sortians - see World of Archontos appendix). The door to 3-197 is worked stone without any evident keyhole. GM Note: Successfully manipulating the pillars at 3-209 allows PCs to see through this illusion.

An invisible stalker waits here, still hoping to fulfill its Sortian master's last wishes. It attacks intruders but won't pursue outside the cave.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 invisible stalker: SZ L; AL N; AC 3; MV 120'; HD 8; HP 56; #AT 1; Dmg 4-16; MR 30%. Special attacks: surprise on 1-5. Special defenses: invisibility.

3-197: Tomb of Lycandus

Both doors to the chamber are stone, and feature modified Sortian faces (see new magic items) carved onto the surface of the door. These carvings each depict a close-cropped, bearded male face of late middle age, complete with age lines, crow's feet, blemishes, and empty sockets where the eyes should be. The faces may be activated by placing appropriate Sortian eyes (see new magic items) into the empty eye sockets. Instead of the usual array of effects associated with Sortian faces, these face have only one function: to unlock their respective doors. Those inserting two silver, two gold, or a silver and a gold Sortian eye into the sockets hear a bar on the inside of door slide to one side, allowing access to the tomb. Without Sortian eyes, the doors cannot be opened.

The tomb proper is a glittering rococo display of gold, silver, and precious gems. The walls are plaster, with gilt images of nondescript humans doing ordinary activities; the humans' eyes are made of sapphires. The ceiling has an elaborate fresco of winged beings cavorting in the clouds. An enormous sarcophagus carved from a solid block of porphyry lies in the center of the room; it is some 18' long, by 9' wide. The sarcophagus, too, is incised with arcane symbols filled with silver. Stone tables on the west and south walls are laden with piles of gold coins, silver coins, and gold and silver serving pieces. Stepping foot into the chamber will provoke a magic mouth to bellow forth, in Mithric, Lycandus, Prince of Princes, Master of the Eyes, lies here in eternal glory amid his rightful possessions. Let him be, lest you incur the wrath of Priscus Pulcher, who protects his friends even unto death.

All of these riches are illusory. Indeed, the ancient Sortians eschewed gaudy display and hierarchy, and the illusion is an obvious incongruity to any who are familiar with the history of the Sortians. Still, the illusion is powerful and difficult to disbelieve (-3 to saves). Those who believe the illusion will be free to scoop up as much wealth as they can carry: 15,000 ancient gold solidi, 20,000 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items for the coins), 10-20 pieces of silver plate, 100 small sapphires from the walls, etc. After 24 hours this wealth will turn out to be bronze coins, iron serving ware, and glass 'gems', worth a total of 50 gp. Opening the sarcophagus will also prove easy, although the greedy may be disappointed to find that it contains only a skeleton.

For those who disbelieve the illusion, the chamber takes on a different aspect. A dusty stone chamber, it is almost completely empty save for the two stone tables and a bas-relief covering the south wall. The bas-relief displays the image of a huge and sinuous dragon resting its head on the shoulder of a handsome, bearded young man dressed in Archontean garb. The 'table' on the west wall is in fact the tomb of Lycandus. It bears the following inscription, in Mithric: A Companion of Priscus and Fellow of the Sortian League, Lycandus the Explorer lies here. His delving brought him fame, while his mastery of the Canticle brought him wisdom. Eschewing riches, Lycandus commanded this simple resting place for his earthly bones.

The sarcophagus has a false lid, which may be pried open by making a successful open doors check; it will reveal a skeleton lying in the dust of rotten clothing, with a silver necklace with an elaborate platinum pendant in the shape of a knot of platinum wires (400 gp). A secret compartment in the south end of the sarcophagus is trapped with explosive runes. If opened, the compartment reveals a second skeleton, with a platinum torc (1,750 gp) with the inscription 'Sortian' on it in Mithric (see World of Archontos appendix). The skeleton carries a gold ring inset with a white pearl; it is a ring of spider climbing (see new magic items), and is activated by speaking "Lycandus" in Mithric. By the skeleton's side is an intelligent enchanted sword, with a fine troll-skin handle named Scorcher (see new magic items).

The 'table' on the south wall is illusory. The sarcophagus in the center of the room is indeed a sarcophagus, but it is plain, ugly, and undecorated. It does contain a skeleton that, if Lycandus's true tomb is opened, will climb out of its resting place, speak a curse, and proceed to follow the PCs (but will not attack). The curse is whispered softly in Mithric at one victim, and causes the victim's STR to drop to 3 for twelve turns. The skeleton will follow the party for as long as it is able; once the initial twelve turns are up, it can and will re-curse the same victim as soon as it comes within 30'. To make matters worse, the skeleton can regenerate. If dismembered, the pieces will slowly reassemble in 6-24 turns; if the bones are ground to powder, it takes 6-24 days for the skeleton to regenerate. The curse also allows the skeleton to teleport to the victim's location once every three days; this power can be used if the skeleton and victim are separated by more than 100 yards. Only dispel magic performed by a powerful magic user (9th-level or better) causes the skeleton to collapse into a pile of bones.

Trap: Explosive runes, set on the door to the hidden compartment in Lycandus's tomb. The runes are concealed in a small, easy-to-notice Mithric inscription found on the south end of the sarcophagus: they read Beware! Lycandus is watching. Magic users have a 10% chance per level to notice the runes; thieves have a 5% chance per level to do the same. The runes explode for 6d4+6 damage when the phrase is read. The door to the compartment is hard to locate, and its catch (a pencil-thick circle of stone just under the lid of the sarcophagus) even harder to find and release.

Treasure:

Illusory 'wealth': 15,000 ancient gold solidi, 20,000 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items for the coins), 10-20 pieces of silver plate, and 100 small sapphires from the walls. After 24 hours this wealth reverts to base metal worth a total of 50 gp. False tomb: 400 gp necklace. Lycandus's tomb: platinum torc worth 1,750 gp; ring of spider climb; Scorcher (see new magic items).

3-198: Dry Alcove

The damp river caves and tunnels lead past a dry alcove at this point. The alcove is about 10' above the floor of the cave and is occupied by two lizardmen. They are badly lost, having somehow navigated a route from Sub-Level 4 to Level 4-159, and thence to 3-212A. They will be willing to do almost anything in return for directions home.

An odd symbol (four interlocked circles with a square's four corners meeting at the centers of the circles) is inscribed on the southwestern wall in dull brown paint. The symbol acts as a symbol of protection from scrying and dampness: any who scramble into the alcove will be effectively invisible to those who pass by in the corridor (and to indirect forms of scrying), and will be dry to boot!

Inhabitants:

1. 2 bedraggled lizardmen (10% chance): SZ M; AL N; AC 4; MV 60', 120' swimming; HD 2+1; HP 13, 10; #AT 1 or 3; Dmg 1-6 (club) and 1-6 (javelin), or 1-2/1-2/1-8. Possessions: clubs; javelins; shields.

3-199: Mushrooms

The fungal foresters of 3-202 have placed a colony of shriekers here. The cave is damp and humid, with stalactites and stalagmites; between the rock formations are many 3'- to 10'-tall mushrooms, amid which are 3 shriekers (bright blue caps). The shriekers will alert the inhabitants of 3-202 unless they are dealt with before they begin to emit noise.

Inhabitants:

1. 3 shriekers: SZ L; AL N; AC 7; MV 10'; HD 3; HP 20, 17, 13; #AT 0; Dmg nil. Special attacks: noise.

3-200: Colossal Crystals

The entrance to this cavern is 10' above the floor of the lake. The cave is extremely humid and hot, due to geothermal heat vents (~120F, and close to 100% humidity). As a result of these conditions, it is filled with massive beams of selenite gypsum which crisscross the chamber like pick-up sticks. Some of the beams are 3' in diameter and over 25' long. The giant crystals are easily broken with iron tools, but are so soft that they can be scratched by thumbnails. This makes them unsuitable for jewelry. Due to the crystalline forms, the cave is extremely difficult to traverse.

A pair of selenite guardians, whose crystalline speech is unintelligible without magic, confronts those who clamber about among the crystal formations. The guardians politely demand the departure of the intruders from their 'garden'; if ignored (or not understood), the guardians attack. Due to the difficult terrain and hot and humid environment, PCs will suffer -2 to all combat rolls while in the cave.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 selenite guardians (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 2; MV 30' on dirt, 60' on selenite; HD 6; HP 41, 37, 36; #AT 2; Dmg 2-8/2-8. Special defenses: regenerate 2 HP/round near selenite; immune to fire and water; take only 1 HP from edged weapons.

Treasure:

Each of the bodies of the selenite guardians (if slain) will produce selenite crystals worth 6-600 gp.

3-201: Humid Mushroom Cave

This large cave is extremely humid and warm (although not as hot as 3-200), and smells strongly of minerals. The cave is filled with medium-sized giant mushrooms (3'-7' tall).

The tunnel to the northwest leads down a flight of roughly hewn stairs and to a slightly wider area lit by a faint blue light. The light is emitted by a wizard's staff of blue light that is stuck into the sand (see new magic items). Although useful, there is no way to stop the emission of the blue light (30' radius), short of covering the staff entirely.

3-202: Fungal Foresters

This cave is warm and moist, although not to the extent of 3-200 or 3-201. Its layer of river silt has made it a natural place for mushrooms, and there is a large colony of giant mushrooms here. Due to the cave's relative isolation, a small colony of 12 fungal foresters makes its home here. The foresters placed the shriekers in 3-199, and move to investigate if the shriekers begin to shriek.

Secret Door (west): The secret door to the lair of the hag (3-204) is unknown to the fungal foresters. It is difficult to detect, and opens from this side by pressing a small button on the floor.

Inhabitants:

1. 4 spotted fungal foresters (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 30' on rock, 90' in fungal forests; HD 4; HP 27, 25, 22, 21; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12.
2. 2 blue fungal foresters (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 30' on rock, 90' in fungal forests; HD 6; HP 36, 34; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12. Special attacks: spore cloud (stun).
3. 2 yellow fungal foresters (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 30' on rock, 90' in fungal forests; HD 6; HP 36, 35; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12. Special defenses: spore cloud (missile/spell defense).
4. 1 red fungal forester (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 30' on rock, 90' in fungal forests; HD 2; HP 13; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12. Special attacks: explode for 3-18 HP damage.
5. 1 black fungal forester (see new monsters): SZ L; AL N; AC 4; MV 30' on rock, 90' in fungal forests; HD 8; HP 51; #AT 1; Dmg 4-16. Special attacks: spore clouds (stunning, and missile/spell defense).

Treasure:

The black forester carries a fibrous pouch in which he stores 4-9 spores for exotic mushroom species (choose from new flora appendix). A pair of dead adventurers in the eastern protrusion still bear some valuables: a long sword, some rusty chain mail, a shield +1, a set of gold-embellished silverware of high craft (26 pieces, worth 340 gp), and a few folios of parchment entitled Description of the Inn of the Lost (see Arden Vul books).

3-203: Sandy Cave

The western portion of this cave features a black sand beach formed by occasional run-off from the Seamly Run. The cave rises a bit in height towards the east. The northern knob has a pool of clear water some 15' deep and connected to the Seamly Run by a small tunnel. The eastern portion is humid and warm.

3-204: Lair of the Hag

The underwater tunnel from 3-205 leads upwards to a dry beach and the lair of Androsia, the greenhag. The cave is lit by smoky torches, and contains a large pile of rags, a huge cauldron bubbling with a foul brew, and a large stone chest. A taut sheet of blood-soaked canvas is stretched between four iron stakes; on the sheet is tied, spread-eagle, a prisoner (50% beastman, 25% human adventurer, 25% goblin) who has been tortured to death. The lair of the hag varies in height, from 5' near the water tunnel, to 15' at the eastern end.

Androsia is 25% likely to be in her lair; otherwise she is found on the beach at 3-206 (50%), in the cave of bones at 3-222 (15%) or walking invisibly elsewhere in the complex (10%).

The hag has attracted an entourage of lesser creatures whom she has dominated (and whom she occasionally devours when other food is scarce). In addition to 6 famished-looking beastmen who serve Androsia in her lair, these creatures include the scraggs in 3-205, more beastmen in 3-221, and the ogres in 3-223.

Inhabitants:

1. Androsia the greenhag: SZ M; AL NE; AC -2; MV 120', 120' swimming; HD 9; HP 60; #AT 2; Dmg 13-14/13-14; MR 35%. Special attacks: +3 to hit and +6 to damage from great STR; surprise on 5 in 6. Special defenses: only surprised on 1 in 20. Special, each 1/rd at 9th-level of ability: audible glamor, dancing lights, invisibility, pass without trace, change self, speak with monsters, water breathing, weakness. Androsia is unique in also being able to employ charm monster 3x/day.
2. 6 enslaved beastman troopers (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 6, 5, 5, 4, 4, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spears; short swords; short bows.

Treasure:

The eyes of Nertet-Indra, the statue found at 3-206, have been mounted on the wall in a vague image of a face. These eyes are almond shaped and made of blue glass, with a black iris painted on them. They detect vaguely as magical.

Scattered idly around the lair are 3,106 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items), 483 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items), 350 sp and 139 gp. Five ancient octagonal platinum coins (see Arden Vul items) have been ground into the floor near the cauldron. An amethyst and a peridot may be found in the bottom of the cauldron (75 gp and 210 gp respectively). Two potions of extra healing are stashed in one of the southern protuberances. Finally, a bag of holding (150 cubic feet variety) has been thrown carelessly to one side; inside it is a scarab of protection and 10 aquamarines worth 100 gp each.

3-205: Pool

The Seamly Run opens into a fairly wide pool at this point. The pool ranges from 5' to 25' deep, with a 10'-wide, 5'-deep ledge abutting the beach (3-206). A tunnel leading to the hag's lair may be found 15' below the water line on the south side of the pool.

The pool is the home of 3 scraggs (marine trolls) who have been dominated by Androsia the hag (3-204). The scraggs usually lurk in the center of the pool, hoping that prey will float by. The exception is if Androsia is present at 3-206 (a 50% chance); if this is the case, they will be lying in wait along the shallow shelf. At Androsia's sign, they leap out and attack the designated prey.

Inhabitants:

1. 3 scrawny scraggs: SZ M; AL C(E); AC 3; MV 30', 150' swimming; HD 5+5; HP 33, 29, 25; #AT 3; Dmg 2-4/2-5/3-12. Special defenses: regenerate 3 HP/rd while in fresh water.

Treasure:

At the bottom of the pool is the 3'-tall middle section of the statue of Nertet-Indra (3-206). It shows her upper torso, with arms folded across her chest. A beautiful copper, pearl, and coral necklace (550 gp) is draped around the torso's neck.

3-206: Beach and Plinth

A black sand beach stretches along the north bank of this utterly dark cavern. Some ways up the beach is a 5'-square plinth for a statue; all that remains of the statue is a 3' section representing the feet and lower legs of a bipedal figure. An iron rod, somewhat bent, extends another 7' from the center of the plinth. Other pieces of the statue could be remounted on the rod. The top portion is found in 3-223; the second portion is found at 3-205; the bottom portion is found in 3-221; and the statue's eyes are to be found in the hag's lair (3-204).

There is a 50% chance that Androsia, the greenhag from 3-204, is present on the beach. If their mistress is present, the scraggs from 3-205 will be close to the beach, ready to support her. If she is encountered on the beach, the hag attempts to use her magic to pretend frailty and confusion (i.e., she is a crazy but harmless old hermit) and asks visitors to help her retrieve her staff from the pool. If they comply, the scraggs rise to the attack and she shows her true colors.

Statue: If the pieces of the statue are reassembled, they will form a statue of Nertet-Indra, high priestess of Thoth. Completed, Nertet-Indra stands 10' tall, with arms folded across her chest holding ankhs. She wears a tall cylindrical hat. Only once her eyes are restored will the magic still present in the statue become manifest. In essence, she is a head of Thoth (see new magic items) mounted on a full statue; unlike others, she only activates when fully assembled.

As a Head of Thoth, Nertet-Indra retains her personality. She eagerly questions those in her range of vision, and in turn answers questions about the history of the cult of Thoth. She is interested to know who reigns in the halls (especially Levels 2 and 3), what has become of the priests, what god the PCs worship, what their intentions are, and what they might do to restore the cult of Thoth. She attributes the slow demise of the city to the insidious influence of Set, and offers advice on how to stamp out Set and his followers. Only too aware of the power of Set during her own day, she is able to give clear information about the Set temple and neighboring precincts. She can provide a good general layout of Levels 1-3. If treated well, Nertet-Indra will be willing to incant a Blessing of Thoth three times per day; each blessing cures 3-18 damage and also cures all poisons.

Treasure:

In addition to Nertet-Indra, the head of Thoth (see new magic items), digging in the sand will produce something interesting once every 3-12 turns. Only 3 such finds may be produced. If something is indicated, it may be determined by rolling on the following table:

D10	Find
1	1-3 black pearls, worth 100-1,000 gp each
2	a piece of jewelry worth 50-300 gp
3	a leather pouch with 255 gp worth mixed coins
4	a gold holy symbol of either Set or Thoth (50 gp)

5	a rusted ordinary weapon
6	an ivory scroll case (35 gp), 50% chance to contain a scroll of 2-5 spells
7	a random piece of equipment, 25% chance spoiled
8	a minor magic item (GM's choice)
9	a magical potion (GM's choice)
10	a magical weapon (GM's choice)

3-207: Misty Cave

This large cave is filled with a thick white mist that is evident from every entryway. Those passing through the mist without taking efforts to prevent breathing it must make a saving throw vs poison or be confused for 1-6 turns. A confused character must roll on the following chart:

D10	Effect
1-2	Attack nearest
3-4	Sit in catatonic state
5-8	Walk at full movement for duration, rolling for direction each turn
9-10	Walk at full movement, discarding one piece of equipment per turn

3-208: Mud Pool

This low-lying cavern contains a 10'-wide by 18'-long pool of light-brown mud. The mud radiates heat, and detects as magic. If the mud is disturbed in any way, three mud people (see new monsters) pull themselves out of the mud and attack (1 per round for three rounds). The mud people pursue enemies within the river caves.

Inhabitants:

- 3 mud people (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 3; HP 22, 18, 15; #AT 2; Dmg 1-8/1-8. Special attacks: hurl mud blobs; drown foes in mud. Special defenses: regenerate 2 HP/rd while touching mud; half damage from edged weapons, and from fire and electricity.

Treasure:

At the bottom of the pool of mud is a silver necklace decorated with dangling azurite, worth 450 gp, and a bone scroll casing containing a scroll of protection from magic.

3-209: Pillared Caves

Both lobes of this cavern contain an onyx column atop a stone pedestal. Each pedestal has an obvious front, on which is carved a question mark. The columns are composed of five 2'-thick sections mounted on top of each other on an iron rod stuck into the pedestal. Each section has five faces, each of which features a distinct carvings: a winged horse (pegasus), a ram, an iguana, a snake and a cat. Each section can be rotated, so as to produce a different combination of faces on each column. If the sections are rotated to produce the right combination, a magical effect will be produced. There are 3,125 combinations per column, and 9,765,625 combinations if both columns are considered together.

The correct combination is to turn the faces, from top to bottom, toward the question mark in this order Pegasus-Ram-Iguana-Snake-Cat [i.e. PRISC, short for Priscus]. If the faces of one column are rotated to produce this combination, a voice will rumble (in Mithric) “Priscus Pulcher offers his friends the gift of Perception”, and a detect illusion spell will be cast on all within 10’ (duration 2-12 hours). If both faces are rotated to produce this combination, not only will the detect illusion effect be cast, but in addition the columns will bestow a bonus of +2 to the next 5 rolls of each PC within 10 feet. These effects can only be produced once per week. GM Note: the purpose of this puzzle was to provide the enlightened assistance in penetrating the illusionary wall in 3-196.

3-210: Lichen Cave

This large cave is relatively flat, with no stalactites or stalagmites; it is infested with a colony of benign light-green lichen that gives off a soft glow. It is edible and nutritious, but not very appetizing.

3-211: Crossroads

This set of tunnels is damp and warm. The passage to the west has collapsed. The passage to the east is quite narrow at its opening from 3-211 (only 2’ wide). The passage to the south becomes a worked corridor after a short distance, before ending in a locked door to 3-195.

3-212: Half-Finished Cave

This area contains another section of never-completed Thothian construction. The room has been squared and smoothed, and four 3’-deep and 2’-diameter holes have been excavated. Neither the intended purpose of the holes nor that of the room itself is clear. Signs of traffic are evident leading between the west and south doors. Both doors are locked, and well oiled.

3-212A: Stairs Down to Level 4 (4-159)

This narrow stair leads downward to Level 4 (area 4-159).

3-213: Black Light Zombies

This cavern slopes downward to the west and is noticeably colder than the surrounding chambers. Standing idle amid a strange black light, an ancient Thothian labor force waits for orders to continue excavations in 3-212. The crew - composed of 12 zombies - attacks anyone not wearing the ceremonial robes of Thoth, but will not leave the chamber. The zombies are armed with picks, hammers, and other stone-shaping implements.

A 3’-tall rock-crystal lamp (a black light of useful necromancy – see new magic items) stands in the middle of the room, emitting strange black light. So long as the black light is present, the zombies will regenerate 2 hp per round. The lamp can be destroyed by inflicting 5 hp damage on it; if destroyed, the black light will cease.

Inhabitants:

1. 12 zombies: SZ M; AL N; AC 8; MV 60’; HD 2; HP 14, 14 12(x3), 11(x3), 10, 10, 9, 9; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8. Special: always strike last; regenerate while in the black light.

Treasure:

A black light of useful necromancy (see new magic items).

3-214: Rope Trick

A rope dangles from mid-air in the middle of this non-descript cave. It is a rope trick rope. Pulling the rope causes three adventurers to tumble out of the extra-dimensional space. The adventurers will be surprised and ill-disposed to those who disturb them (-15% on reaction roll).

GM Note: Roscoe and his friends fell into trouble in the Forum of Set when they inadvertently insulted the Master of the Guild of Service and couldn’t pay the necessary fine. Although they lost two members of the party, the remainder got lucky and managed to flee down the Long Stair (4-19) to 4-163, then east to 4-159 and finally to this cave. They have good knowledge about Level 4, particularly the direct route from 4-190 through 4-120 and on to the Forum, and, of course, their escape route. Their former comrade, Azgallatu, was taken by the Set cult and is now imprisoned in 3-105.

Inhabitants:

1. Roscoe, 3rd-level male Thorcin fighter: SZ M; AL LN; AC 5; MV 60’; HD 3; HP 27; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (short bow and arrows), 2-7 (short sword, short bow and +1 arrows). Abilities: STR 17, INT 9, WIS 12, DEX 10, CON 16, CHA 11. Possessions: scale mail and shield; spear; short sword; short bow with 15 normal arrows and 5 +1 arrows; a purse with 35 sp and 120 gp; and a troll thegn’s passport (see Arden Vul items).
2. Trillip, 3rd-level female Wisikin magic user: SZ M; AL LN; AC 7; MV 120’; HD 3; HP 9; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (staff), 1-3 (darts). Abilities: STR 10, INT 16, WIS 9, DEX 16, CON 14, CHA 11. Possessions: staff; 10 darts; ring of protection +1; potion of flying; a purse with three 100 gp pearls, 25 sp, and 150 gp. Spells memorized: magic missile, sleep; ~~rope trick~~. Spell book: comprehend languages, detect magic, erase, magic missile, magic aura, read magic, shield, sleep; continual light, knock, rope trick; slow.
3. Iris, 5th-level female Thorcin thief: SZ M; AL NE; AC 4; MV 120’; HD 3; HP 15; #AT 1; Dmg 2-9 (long sword), 3-6 (sling); Abilities: STR 16, INT 9, WIS 13, DEX 18, CON 15, CHA 6. Thief skills: PP 60%, OL 57%, F/RT 45%, MS 50%, HS 41%, HN 20%, CW 90%, RL 25%. Possessions: leather armor; long sword; sling with 20 bullets; a potion of climbing; a purse with 35 sp, 15 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items), 75 gp, 5 octagonal platinum coins, a platinum key to the Obsidian Gates (5-6D), and a copper rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items).

3-215: Skeletal Corpses

This partly finished cave contains a crude stone door on the south wall. The floor is still rough stone, as are the walls in most of the northern portion of the chamber. In the center a solid gold statuette some 3’ tall sits on top of a greasy crocodile-hide mat. Around the statuette, and partly lying on the mat, are four badly decomposed skeletal corpses - three adventurers and a cave skink. The icon depicts a cat sitting on its hind legs, and is solid gold with small jet gems for eyes and nose; it is a statuette of Bastet (see new magic items). The statuette radiates powerful magic.

The corpses are mostly decomposed, but close examination of the face of one corpse will reveal that it has been raked, as if by sharp claws. The human corpses are of adventurers who stole the statuette and brought it here to examine. This was a fatal error, since when they touched their prize it inflicted serious - and poisonous - scratches on their faces and bodies. The cave skink had the misfortune to brush against the statuette, incurring a similar effect. The adventurers have no equipment, as the hag and her minions stole all of it.

Treasure:

Statuette of Bastet (see new magic items).

3-216: Penned Pudding

The entrance to this lobed cavern is blocked by a buzzing force field of magical energy. Ancient engineers of the cult of Thoth erected the force field in order to pen up a particularly large black pudding for future use and/or study. The permanent wall of force is beginning to fray, and collapses if struck with significant force (such as an open doors check, or a mace blow). If the field is removed, the pudding will flow swiftly along the ceiling, hoping to drop down on an advancing party. The cavern is natural and unremarkable, except being noticeably free of dust and dirt.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 black pudding: SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 10; HP 50; #AT 1; Dmg 3-24. Special attacks: dissolve wood and metal. Special defenses: divide into parts when struck; immune to cold.

3-217: The Seamly Run

In this section of Level 3, the Seamly Run wends its way through a narrow (5'-wide) but deep (10'-deep) channel. The current is swift, and those who fall into the Run will be borne quickly to the beach at 3-206, taking 1-6 HP buffeting damage along the way.

3-218: River Cave

Twenty voracious, carnivorous cave skinks live in this moist cave (although only 5-10 are present at any given time). They are able to run along walls and like to 'fish' in the Seamly Run. As they have learned to be afraid of the scraggs from 3-206, they are likely to flee to the river if noise emerges from the direction of 3-219 or 3-220. Within 5 rounds, however, hunger will conquer their fear, and they will return in search of nourishment. The cave features a shallow puddle along the south wall that is occasionally refreshed by seepage from the Seamly Run. The entire cave is damp and humid.

Inhabitants:

1. 5-10 cave skinks (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 7; MV 120'; HD 2; HP 15, 14, 13, 13, 12(x3), 11, 11, 10; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: toxic mucus.

3-219: Warning Sign

This river cave marks the western edge of the territory of Androsia, the Hag. A femur thrust into a hole in the uneven floor marks the boundary; on top of the femur is a beastman skull. A variety of small animal bones (salamanders, mostly) litters the cave.

3-220: Unfinished Hall

The priests of Thoth began to work this chamber, but abandoned the effort before completion. As a result sections of smooth, rectilinear wall adjoin rough, natural cavern walls. A pair of wooden wheelbarrows stands in the mouth of the east-leading corridor; they contain some dusty mining tools (hammers, picks, pitons, etc.). The rest of the hall is dusty, with clear footprints in the dust (scrag prints) leading towards 3-219. The remains of two adventurers lie against the southwestern wall.

Treasure:

On the corpses: a short sword +2, a sapphire Sorfian eye (see new magic items); a purse with 57 sp and 43 gp; a parchment with the cryptic phrase "red-black-yellow-black-green-white" (the 'address' to the Thothian teleportation ring at SL6-28 - see new magic items); and a map of the eastern precincts of Thoth (areas 3-43 to 3-51, including areas 3-50, 3-50A and 3-50B).

3-220A: Blocked Corridor

The corridor to the east is blocked with rubble. An old, brittle skeleton clad in orange Thothian robes lies on the floor of the unfinished corridor that leads to the north.

3-221: Gaunt Beastmen

A charmed patrol of beastmen from the Long Range Cavern Patrol (3-154) dwells here. Charmed by the greenhag (3-204), these beastmen have lost their discipline and are slowly starving to death. Only Histar, their sergeant, retains a dim sense of his former life and purpose. The cave is moist and dank, and is covered with a strange blue mold, which the beastmen have taken to eating. They have a campfire, but little fuel for it. There is a 15% chance that the beastmen are out of their cave and present in 3-222.

Should the hag be killed before the beastmen are encountered, it is 75% likely that the beastmen will have fled back to the Tagma. Trisko the Natty of the LRCP is eager for news of his missing patrol (see 3-154) for details.

Inhabitants:

1. 7 enslaved beastman troopers (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 6, 5, 5, 4, 4, 3, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spears; short swords; short bows.
2. Histar, enslaved beastman sergeant (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 2+2; HP 15; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 or 2-5. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spear; war hammer.

Treasure:

The only 'treasure' to be found here are the upper thighs and lower torso of the statue of Nertet-Indra from 3-206.

3-222: Cave of Bones

This large cave has a 15' ceiling and is covered with a 2'-deep carpet of bones. The bones are of varied size and origin; some are quite ancient, while others are quite fresh. Androsia the hag (3-204) and her entourage have deposited centuries worth of bodies in this cave. Movement in the cave is slow and noisy. A quasi-palpable aura of dread and/or evil may be detected here.

Inhabitants:

Androsia the greenhag is present here 15% of the time, gnawing on some bones. If that is the case, the ogres from 3-223 and the beastmen from 3-221 are present with her (if these minions are slain here, they cannot be encountered in their lairs).

Treasure: If light is used to inspect the walls, the PCs may notice (3 in 6) a heavy gold necklace with a large ruby pendant hanging from a rock projection on the north wall. Valued as a piece of jewelry, this object is worth 1,750 gp. The ruby is actually a hag's eye (see new magic items) that allows Androsia to see whatever takes place in the cave of bones.

3-223: Emaciated Ogres

A small group of ogres, charmed by Androsia the greenhag (3-204), inhabits this extended cavern. Explorers have a 2 in 6 chance of detecting the odor of smoked meat once they have entered 10' into the cave; the odor is automatically noticeable after 30'. The ogres have rigged a deadfall trap in the first portion of their cave (marked by an X); when it is triggered, they rush ravenously from the eastern cave to smite intruders. There is a 15% chance that the ogres are present in 3-222.

The ogres' actual lair lies to the east, where a feeble fire burns in the center of a pile of bones. They are currently curing a halfling corpse, which is suspended from a hook in the ceiling directly over the fire. They have a sack in which they keep their pitiful treasure. Lying among the carnage is the stone head from the statue of Nertet-Indra at 3-206. The head is of a human female wearing a tall cylindrical hat. Her eyes are almond, but hollow.

If, somehow, the hag is killed before the ogres are encountered, the ogres will likely (70%) have fled, taking with them their sack (but leaving the stone head and the leather boots).

Trap (Deadfall): In the first knobby protrusion to the west (marked by an X) is a small fall of rocks. From the rocks protrude a pair of legs encased in a pair of fine maroon leather boots. Even examining the boots has a 50% chance of causing the trap to activate; actively disturbing the boots raises the chance to 80%. If activated, a pile of rocks rolls down the slope, causing 2-12 HP damage and potentially pinning the nosy investigator(s).

Inhabitants:

1. 6 emaciated ogres: SZ L; AL CE; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 4+1; HP 27, 25, 22, 19, 18, 15; #AT 1; Dmg 1-10, or by weapon.

Treasure:

Fine maroon leather boots (25 gp); the stone head from the statue of Nertet-Indra at 3-206; and, in the ogres' sack, 451 cp, four 100 gp aquamarines, 2 pieces of valueless colored glass, and an iron necklace (10 cp).

3-224: Antechamber to the Hag's Domain

This cave is noticeably cooler than the caves to the east. A quasi-palpable aura of evil may be detected here, just as in 3-222. A 6' iron rod has been thrust into the middle of the cave floor; the body of an ogre is impaled upon it. Despite the decomposition of the body, it is clear that the ogre was badly malnourished before it died. Androsia the hag (3-204) placed this corpse here as a warning to both to her slaves and to intruders.

3-225: Dead Cube

A dead gelatinous cube is slowly deliquescing on the floor of this flat cave. A pack of giant rats is feasting on the tasty remains.

Inhabitants:

1. 15 giant rats: SZ S; AL N(E); AC 7; MV 120'; HD 1-4 HP; HP 4(x4), 3(x4), 2(x4), 1(x3); #At 1; Dmg 1-3. Special attacks: 5% chance of disease.

Treasure:

63 cp, plus a single bracer from a pair of bracers of haste (see new magic items). The bracer is inoperable without its companion, which Killik the goblin wears at area 5-46.

3-226: Empty Cave

This cave contains numerous stalagmites. If searched, a partially-encased gold ring (50 gp) can be extracted from one of the stalagmite after 1-3 turns of chipping at the rock.

3-227: Lizard Nest

This cave is connected to the Great Cavern (3-163) by a fairly wide but short tunnel. The entrance to the tunnel is partly concealed by giant mushrooms. A group of 5 subterranean lizards make their lair in this small cave, in a nest built of sticks, dung, and dirt. Only one lizard is present at any one time, although noisy combat here will draw two more from 3-229 in 3 rounds.

Inhabitants:

1. 1-3 subterranean lizards: SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 6; HP 45, 40, 39; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12. Special attacks: double damage on a natural roll to hit of 20.

Treasure:

In the lizard nest: 2 subterranean lizard eggs, plus a solid gold egg (200 gp).

3-228: Wounded Fungal Foresters

Four wounded fungal foresters (see new monsters), defeated by the subterranean lizards in 3-229, have retreated to this chamber to rest and recuperate.

Inhabitants:

1. 3 wounded spotted fungal foresters (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 30' on rock, 90' in fungal forests; HD 4; HP 14, 13, 9; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12.
2. 1 wounded blue fungal forester (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 30' on rock, 90' in fungal forests; HD 6; HP 19; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12. Special attacks: spore cloud (stun).

3-229: Feeding Frenzy

Two subterranean lizards are feeding on the bodies of two fungal foresters in this non-descript cave. If encountered first in 3-227, the lizards are not present here.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 subterranean lizards: SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 6; HP 37, 35; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12. Special attacks: double damage on a natural roll to hit of 20.

3-230: The Seamy Run

The Seamy Run is a swift-flowing river that runs through this level. It is filled with cold, clear water. The current between 3-205 and 3-164 is quite strong.

3-231: Swift Current and River Exit

Here the river exits the great cavern through a 7'-diameter tunnel. The pull of the current entering the tunnel is quite strong, and swimmers anywhere near the tunnel mouth will need to roll 3d8 under DEX or STR to avoid being swept into the tunnel. The fate of those who fail this roll is unfortunate, as the river's exit from level 3 is a relatively narrow crack in the granite; persons stuck in the tunnel will drown in 1-3 rounds unless they can be rescued. The Seamy Run is impassable after this point, as it enters a series of small, vertical shafts before eventually joining a vast dark sea in the Underearth.

Treasure:

A staff of the frog (see new magic items) is wedged into the crack where the Seamy Run exits Level 3.

LEVEL 4: THE FORUM OF SET

This level occupies an important place in the politics and social intercourse of the intelligent denizens of Arden Vul, an importance that perhaps exceeds the absolute power and number of its inhabitants. Nearly the entire level was originally the seat of the great Archontean temple devoted to Set, the cult of whom ranked only slightly behind that of Thoth in wealth and prestige. In antiquity a stair carved into the cliff face (EX-13) led up to a grand entrance, and then through a series of halls and stairways that rose inexorably to the Forum (4-2) and Temple (3-90) of Set. At the present, the old halls are badly damaged and, despite the resurgence of a modern cult of Set in the old Forum area, the cult is greatly reduced and its power circumscribed. The level now features two or three main areas. The area south of the Red Bridge (4-120A) is still unclaimed by Set, although they have marked a path through the caves and ruined halls to the Forum; it is also the site the Hall of Worthies (4-164), a monument that is still remembered in Archontos. This region is full of monsters, ancient secrets, and danger. The area north of the Red Bridge and south of the cavern at 4-66 serves as the home of the modern cult of Set; it includes the three mysteries of Set (4-23, 4-48, and 4-111), the Forum (4-2), and the Guild of Service (areas 4-6 to 4-20). Its two ancient necropolises are also found here (4-138 and 4-139), although they are currently occupied by powerful undead. To the north of this region, past the cave at 4-66, are another set of mostly wild caverns and caves.

The Forum (4-2) is well known to the intelligent factions of the Halls, and has come to rival the troll thegn's court (7-75) as a place for the exchange of goods and information. Although not as widely known outside the Halls, the priests of Set retain important contacts in surrounding towns, and these contacts are able to encourage selected evil-aligned traders to visit the Forum of Set. Seasoned visitors to the Forum are quick to advise newcomers to tread carefully in Set's halls, since the cult's power is palpable and their motives inscrutable. Woe betide those who incur the displeasure of Stephania and her minions!

GENERAL CONSTRUCTION NOTES

SIGNIFICANT REGIONS OF LEVEL 4

1. Precincts of Set (4-1 to 4-64, 4-101 to 4-106, 4-119 to 4-120, 4-122 to 4-136, 4-144, 4-149)

The modern Set cult controls most of the areas north of the Red Bridge (4-120A) and south of the Rushing River (see cavern 4-66). This area was carved in antiquity and only recently (about 90 years ago) reoccupied by a modern cult of Set. The area includes some important areas, including the Red Bridge (4-120A) over the chasm of Set (4-121) and the Forum of Set (4-2); other significant, but less well-known, areas include the First and Second Mysteries of Set (4-23 and 4-48), the Halls of the Guild of Service (4-4 to 4-20) and several sets of extremely long stairs, whose reputation as the avenues of evil is widespread in the Halls (i.e., 4-1, 4-19, 4-105).

Because the worship of Set has faded in the Archontean Empire (with Heschus Ban and Deballaton fulfilling his pantheonic functions), the cult is secretive and pursues its own agendas. That said, a small but steady trickle of commerce between the cult and the outside exists (via 4-190). The cult of Set is comprised of two distinct units, the priesthood, and the Guild of Service. While technically the priesthood, under High Priestess Stephania (4-51), rules the entire group, in practice the chief slaver, Gunnar, and the rest of the Guild operate quasi-independently. Stephania and her command staff, including the second priest (4-56), the third priest (4-57), the bibliothecarius (4-54), and the overseer (4-47), are responsible for operating the mysteries (although the third is shuttered at the moment), presiding over liturgical ceremonies in the Temple (3-90), ensuring the flow of trade to the Forum, and setting policy for the entire cult. Gunnar, the Chief Slaver (4-10), is advised by a trio of guildmasters (4-8A through 4-8C); they operate a regular slave market in the Forum and a powerful slaving ring that scours the halls for slaves. The slave market attracts buyers from within the halls, including the troll thegn (7-30) and the Lord of the Arena (6-85), and from without, including evil-aligned merchants and nobles from Newmarket and environs (e.g., Tikun Thane, at SL3-2). The cult is ruthless, but lawful; should visitors appear strong and demonstrate a clear reason for visiting the public areas of the cult (especially the Forum), those visitors will not be hindered, and may even be offered advice. Set guardsmen are thus only potentially dangerous in this region. The Guild of Service, however, considers any travelers on the Long Stair (4-19) to be fair game, that is, as likely sources of slaves; such travelers must appear exceptionally strong to avoid being assaulted, robbed, and sold as slaves in the Forum.

Factions: This area is firmly controlled by the cult of Set.

Construction: Worked areas are Archontean, with 10' ceilings and iron-bound doors.

Environment: The area is cool and dry

2. Northern Caves (4-66 to 4-100)

In antiquity the areas north of the Rushing River were rather safe hunting grounds for the cult of Set. Today they are wild, and the Set guardsmen are largely afraid to venture to this region. Several types of monsters make this area their home, including a pack of fierce subterranean lizards, a small owlbear tribe, and others. Most notably a group of escaped slaves – fugitives from the Forum (4-2) – inhabit a cave above a small lake (4-100).

Factions: No faction controls this area. The Set cult periodically sends patrols into these 'wild caves', but their efforts at exploration are as yet tepid. Likewise, the escaped slaves do some hunting in the area. Neither can be said to dominate the region.

Construction: Most of the region is composed of natural caves

Environment: The area is substantially more humid than the areas to the south

3. Behir Caves (4-107 to 4-118)

Originally this area was a central part of the ancient cult of Set, as it contained the site at which the high priests performed the Third Mystery of their god (4-111). But in the absence of cultists, a behir took up residence here and the area is now part of its territory. Indeed, High Priestess Stephania's immediate predecessor, Keldorus of Arcturos, was slain by the behir when he attempted to restore Set's control of the region. Stephania has ordered the area to be boarded up until a solution can be arranged.

Factions: No faction controls this area, as the behir runs free here.

Construction: Worked areas are Archontean, with 10' ceilings and iron-bound doors. Due to the antiquity of the doors, there is a 33% chance for any door to be stuck.

Environment: The area is substantially more humid than areas to the east, and is typically warmer.

4. Necropolis (4-137 to 4-143, 4-145 to 4-148)

Built in antiquity by the then-politically powerful cult of Set, these areas are impressive examples of ancient masonry, art, and magic. Two enormous crypts (4-138 and 4-139) form the core of this area, with surrounding antechambers and a few hidden tombs. The main crypts held the corpses of those powerful and wealthy Archontean who preferred to give themselves to Lord Set. During the long absence of the cult, however, the area came to be dominated by the greater mummy, Meskenit (4-139C). Meskenit's control of the other undead in the area is so strong that, as with the area of the Third Mystery (4-111), the modern Set cult has had to delay efforts to reoccupy the necropolis. Those who defeated Meskenit would win much favor from High Priestess Stephania (4-51).

Factions: No faction controls this area. It is the domain of Meskenit the greater mummy (see new monsters).

Construction: The area is Archontean, with 10' ceilings and solid stone doors.

Environment: The area is cold and dry.

5. Well-traveled Southern Tunnels (4-150 to 4-167, 4-170 to 4-190)

The southern third of Level 4 has suffered badly over the centuries from minor earthquakes and cave-ins. The old worked areas, which included a large entry complex on the cliff side as well as some important administrative centers for the Archontean hegemony, either lie in ruins or are, in many cases, obliterated. A network of natural tunnels delved by monsters and expanded by the Set cult now winds its way through the ruins, sometimes taking advantage of vestiges of the old construction, and other times delving completely new tunnels. Some of the tunnels are relatively well-traveled by the Set cult and/or the lizardmen (who emerge from Sub-Level 5 to the exterior via 4-165). These tunnels, caves, and corridors are thus marginally safer than the surroundings, at least when it comes to wild monsters; the sentient travelers may well pose their own threats, of course. Other areas (4-150 to 4-158, 4-171, 4-173 to 4-177, 4-180 to 4-188) are less well-traveled; these are the truly lost or forgotten areas, unknown to the modern factions and ripe with secrets, treasures, and dangers.

Factions: No faction controls these areas.

Construction: Worked areas are Archontean in origin, with 10' ceilings and iron-bound doors.

Environment: The area is relatively dry and cool.

RANDOM ENCOUNTERS

Random encounters vary according to the district of the level in which the PCs are traveling.

1. Areas with no Random Encounters

4-36 to 4-39; 4-58 to 4-59; 4-62; 4-74; 4-144; 4-150 to 4-158; 4-171

2. Public Areas of the Precincts of Set: Areas 4-1, 4-2, 4-21 to 4-35, 4-101 to 4-106, 4-143, 4-149

Random encounters should be checked every 3 turns, with a 1 in 10 chance for an encounter. Tables for determining encounters in the Forum proper are found at area 4-2.

D20	Encounter
1-3	Resident of the Forum: roll 1d6: 1-3= merchant (see 4-2); 4-5= servant (GM's choice); 6= important Set official with entourage (GM's choice)
4-6	Outsider coming to the Forum: select by using table at area 4-2
5-10	A Set patrol composed of 4 Set guardsmen and a Set acolyte (see new monsters): <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>4 Set guardsmen (see new monsters), as 2nd-level Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 15, 12; #AT 1, Dmg 2-7 (mace), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: red scale mail and wooden shield; footman's maces; spears; light crossbows with 20 bolts.</li> <li>1 Set acolyte (see new monsters), as a 3rd-level Archontean cleric of Set: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 60'; HD 3; HP 19; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (mace) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Possessions: Set armor (see Arden Vul items); footman's mace; light crossbow; acolyte's was stick (see new magic items); and a silver holy symbol of Set (10 gp). Spells prayed for: command, cure light wounds, curse (reverse of bless), protection from good; hold person, silence 15' radius</li> </ol>
11-13	Party of NPC adventurers (select from NPC appendix)

14-15	Goblin emissaries from the court of King Weskenim (SL4-22), in gaudy finery and led by a sub-chief: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>7 goblins: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 7, 6, 5, 4, 4, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6</li> <li>Kellim, a goblin sub-chief (as a hobgoblin): SZ S; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 1+1; HP 8; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8 (long sword). Possessions: long sword</li> </ol>
16-17	2 lesser varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 61, 56; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (mattock, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8 th -level fighters or 8 th -level magic users, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: mattocks; three portions of varumani knock-out juice (see Arden Vul items). These are the emissaries from 4-101.
18	4 lizardmen: SZ M; AL N; AC 4; MV 60', 120' swimming; HD 2+1; HP 15, 13, 11, 10; #AT 1 or 3; Dmg 1-6 (club) and 1-6 (javelin), or 1-2/1-2/1-8. Possessions: clubs; javelins; shields. They have come to negotiate with the Set cult about use of the basket at 4-190
19-20	4-13 Set cultists (see new monsters): SZ M; AL LE; AC 9; MV 90'; HD 1; HP 7, 6(x3), 5(x3), 4(x3), 3(x3); #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger) or 2-7 (flail) or 1-6 (staff). Special attacks: fanaticism. Possessions: padded armor; daggers; flails or staves

3. Cultists' District: Areas 4-105 and 4-123 to 4-135

Random encounters should be checked every 3 turns and occur on a 1 in 10 chance. The cultists are generally more suspicious than the Forum-dwellers, and will have more questions of those poking about. Random encounters will be one of the following:

D10	Encounter
1-4	A Set patrol composed of 4 Set guardsmen and a Set acolyte (see new monsters): <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>4 Set guardsmen (see new monsters), as 2nd-level Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 15, 12; #AT 1, Dmg 2-7 (mace), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: red scale mail and wooden shield; footman's maces; spears; light crossbows with 20 bolts.</li> <li>1 Set acolyte (see new monsters), as a 3rd-level Archontean cleric of Set: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 60'; HD 3; HP 19; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (mace) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Possessions: Set armor (see Arden Vul items); footman's mace; light crossbow; acolyte's was stick (see new magic items); and a silver holy symbol of Set (10 gp). 5	Set patrol plus 4-13 Set cultists seeking someone else

6-9	4-13 Set cultists (see new monsters): SZ M; AL LE; AC 9; MV 90'; HD 1; HP 7, 6(x3), 5(x3), 4(x3), 3(x3); #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger) or 2-7 (flail) or 1-6 (staff). Special attacks: fanaticism. Possessions: padded armor; daggers; flails or staves
10	Set patrol plus 4-13 Set cultists seeking PCs for an imagined offense

4. Private Areas of the Set Cult: Areas 4-3 to 4-20, 4-40 to 4-57, 4-60 to 4-61

These areas are heavily trafficked and random encounters will occur on a 4 in 6 chance per turn; the nature of the encounter will depend on which rooms are closest to the PCs when the encounter occurs. Visitors are not permitted in these areas without prior arrangement, so PCs found poking around will be politely escorted to the Forum. For any subsequent infraction the denizens are 33% likely to attempt apprehension.

5. Northern Caves: Areas 4-63 to 4-73, 4-75 to 4-100

These caves feature more typical random encounters (check every 3 turns with a 1 in 6 chance for an encounter).

D20	Encounter
1-2	A Set patrol composed of 4 Set guardsmen and a Set acolyte (see new monsters): <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>4 Set guardsmen (see new monsters), as 2nd-level Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 15, 12; #AT 1, Dmg 2-7 (mace), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). ## 6. Behir Caves: Areas 4-107 to 4-118

The only creatures found behind the door at 4-106 are the behir, giant rats, and the python. It is best for the GM to decide where the behir and python are located and to ignore random encounters.

7. Necropolis: Areas 4-136 to 4-142 and 4-145 to 4-148

Random encounters are rare (1 in 12), and should be checked every hour. If an encounter occurs, it should be a mixed pack of 4-6 ghouls and 1-2 ghouls.

1. 4-6 ghouls: SZ M; AL CE; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 15, 13, 12, 11, 11, 10; #AT 3; Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-6. Special attacks: paralysis. Special defenses: immune to sleep and charm.
2. 1-2 ghouls: SZ M; AL CE; AC 4; MV 150'; HD 4; HP 25, 23; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-8. Special attacks: stench; paralysis. Special defenses: immune to sleep and charm.

8. Connecting Tunnels: Areas 4-159 to 4-162

This region is well trafficked due to the confluence of connecting tunnels. Encounters are checked every three turns and occur on a 1 in 4 chance.

D20	Encounter

13	The NPC bandits known as Gillen and Co. (for stats, see 4-180). If encountered in this way and thus unable to effect an ambush, Gillen and his colleagues will negotiate and trade information first. They might try to direct the PCs via a circuitous route back to 4-180, and then rush ahead to position themselves for an ambush.
14-15	A Set patrol composed of 4 Set guardsmen and a Set acolyte (see new monsters): 1. 4 Set guardsmen (see new monsters), as 2 nd -level Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 15, 12; #AT 1, Dmg 2-7 (mace), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: red scale mail and wooden shield; footman's maces; spears; light crossbows with 20 bolts. 2. 1 Set acolyte (see new monsters), as a 3 rd -level Archontean cleric of Set: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 60'; HD 3; HP 19; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (mace) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Possessions: Set armor (see Arden Vul items); footman's mace; light crossbow; acolyte's was stick (see new magic items); and a silver holy symbol of Set (10 gp). Spells prayed for: command , cure light wounds , curse (reverse of bless ), protection from good ; hold person , silence 15' radius
16-17	6 guildsmen from the Guild of Service (see area 4-7): 1. 3 guildsmen, as 2 nd -level male Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 16; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (spears, clubs). Possessions: leather armor; spears; and clubs. Special: they have +1 to damage from STR 2. 3 guildsmen, as 2 nd -level male Archontean thieves: SZ M; AL LE; AC 6; MV 120'; HD 2; HP 10, 9, 8; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger) or 1-6 (short sword). Thief skills: PP 35%, OL 34%, F/RT 25%, MS 21%, HS 15%, HN 10%, CW 86%. Possessions: leather armor; daggers; short swords. Special: they have DEX 16 on average
18	1 basic exploration automaton of Kerbog Khan (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 2; MV 150'; HD 4; HP 29; #AT 2; Dmg 1-4/1-4; MR 40%. Special defenses: immune to cold and fire
19	1. 1-4 humans fleeing from the Forum (4-2) or the Guild of Service (4-7). There is a 66% chance these are unclassed, normal humans: SZ M; AL varies; AC 10; MV 120'; HD 1-6 hp; HP 4, 3, 3, 2; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger) or 1-6 (staff). There is a 33% chance that the fugitives are classed; if so, use NPC appendix to select a suitable NPC

4-1: Set's Way, or the Sighing Stair

Set's Way, a 20'-wide set of ancient, pitted stairs that is also known as the Sighing Stair, extends more than 100' from Level 3 (3-110) to the Forum of Set (4-2). Those who stop to listen will hear the very faint sound of sighing; if one listens for more than a round these sighs turn to groans, and then screams of anguish. The stairs are imbued with a strong sensation of dread for any good-aligned creatures; saves are at -1 for good characters while on the stairs.

4-1A: Busts

These niches contain lifelike marble busts of the previous high priests of Set. The heads were carved so as to accentuate realism (wrinkles, warts) rather than artistic flattery. One of the busts (to be determined randomly) sits on top of an ancient treasure map.

4-1B: Odd Busts

These two trapezoidal niches contain a cluttered collection of unusual busts that contrast with the formalism of the niches located further up Set's Way. Although all are made of stone and marble, the busts here vary in size and race. There are small humanoids (goblins), some vaguely reptilian heads, a strange horned head, a bat head, even the head of a frost giant. The giant's head is the only one of the lot that is not made of stone; rather, it is an ever-alert head (see new magic items) that has been nicknamed "Snowy" by the members of the cult of Set. Snowy's deep red eyes constantly scrutinize the stairs in front of it. If it spots unauthorized passers-by (i.e., those not wearing a symbol of Set), it begins shouting loud vulgarisms in a variety of tongues, including Mithric, Archontean, Giantish, Goblin, and the Secret Language of Set. The shouting is 33% likely to bring a patrol from 4-2. Snowy ceases shouting 1-3 rounds after intruders have disappeared from view. He (it?) can also see invisible objects and is, intriguingly, portable.

Treasure:

Ever-alert head (Snowy) (see new magic items).

4-2: The Forum of Set

The Forum is an iconic location in the Halls, well known to denizens as a site - albeit a dangerous one - for trade and negotiation.

A strong-looking party approaching from the south will be treated with respect and caution, and will easily be able to rest, trade, and barter with the inhabitants of the Forum. For those approaching with violence on their minds, however, the response will be quite different; the well-organized, lawful inhabitants of the Forum and its neighboring chambers will meet such invaders with overwhelming force so long as they are able.

Those approaching from the east, down the Sighing Stairs (4-1) are assumed to be hostile unless they're accompanied by appropriate authorities.

Those approaching from the northern caves (4-63 to 4-100) will be treated with intense suspicion and probably with hostility, although there is a chance that canny role-playing might convince the guards to escort them to the Forum proper.

General Features:

The Forum is an imposing place, floored in smooth black marble.

Its walls are polished granite, rising 40' to an impressive barrel vault. Three 10'-diameter ovals delicately painted as eyes hang from the vaulting at equal intervals; on each of them has been cast a continual light spell.

The Forum is a noisy place, filled with the barks and groans of the slave market (4-3), the gurgle of the fountain (4-2E), the shrill cries of the peddlers hawking their wares (4-2D), the low murmur of conversation from the food stalls (4-2C), and the occasional deep bark of the guards watching from the Porch of Scrutiny (4-2F). Odors also fill the forum, from the stink of sweat and fear rising from the slave market, to the spicy aroma of the food stalls, to the sometimes-exotic smells of the goods for sale.

Laws of the Forum:

The Lord of the Forum (aka Stephania, high priestess of Set; see 4-51) has promulgated the following rules which govern trade and social interaction in the Forum. The entire set of Laws is inscribed on the marble walls at 4-21.

1. The Lord of the Forum is entitled to collect from any licensed trader a tariff worth 5% of the value of any sale made that trader.
2. The Lord of the Forum is entitled to collect from any non-licensed trader a tariff worth 10% of the value of any sale made by any such trader.
3. Violence is not permitted in the Forum, except by permission of the Lord of the Forum.
4. Spell Use is forbidden in the Forum except by license of the Lord of the Forum.
5. The Lord of the Forum guarantees the security of all persons and goods legally present in the Forum. Theft shall be punished by fines or enslavement.
6. The Lord of the Forum guarantees any contract made in the Forum, although the Lord does not guarantee the quality or veracity of any traded goods. Caveat emptor!
7. All weights and measures shall be enforced and guaranteed by the Lord of the Forum.
8. Those defaulting on a sworn contract shall face appropriate punishment: outlawry or enslavement.
9. The Lord of the Forum offers protection to any licensed trader to and from the Forum.
10. Any accusation of misconduct, including the breaking of any of the Laws of the Forum, should immediately be brought to the attention of a Forum Inspector (see 3. in Inhabitants below) so that an appropriate hearing may be scheduled.

Inhabitants:

Since it serves as the chief center of trade for denizens of the upper Halls and as an important (and arguably safer) alternative to the Troll Market (7-76), the Forum of Set is filled with activity. Many inhabitants are properly described in the relevant sub-sections of the forum, but it is worth noting here some of the regular and occasional inhabitants of the Forum:

A. Regular Inhabitants (present at all times):

1. Elite Guardsmen and the Duty Deacon: Two sections of elite guardsmen are present at all times in the Forum. Each section consists of 3 elite guardsmen and a sergeant. One section stands by the northern exit to Set's Way (4-1), ensuring that only approved persons enter the private areas; an advanced acolyte leads this group. The second section moves slowly through the Forum in a regular pattern. Attached to this section is the Duty Deacon, a Set deacon deputed by High Priestess Stephanica (4-51) to act as the reigning authority over the forum. The Duty Deacon and his guards will be summoned, for instance, if visitors refuse to pay their dues to the Forum Inspectors (see below). The Duty Deacon also holds one of the keys to the three locks on the door to the Vaults of Set (4-24).

1. 6 elite Set guardsmen (see new monsters), as 3rd-level Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 3; HP 26, 26, 25, 25, 24, 24; #AT 1, Dmg 2-7 (mace), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: red scale mail and wooden shield; footman's maces; spears; light crossbows with 20 bolts.
2. 2 Set sergeants (see new monsters), as a 5th-level Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL LE; AC 3; MV 60'; HD 5; HP 42, 32 #AT 1, Dmg 3-8 (mace +1), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: Set armor (see Arden Vul items) and wooden shield; footman's mace +1; spear; light crossbow with 20 bolts.
3. 1 advanced Set acolyte (see new monsters): as a 5th-level Archontean cleric of Set: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 60'; HD 5; HP 31; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (mace) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Possessions: Set armor (see Arden Vul items); footman's mace; light crossbow; acolyte's was stick (see new magic items); potions of healing and singing birds; and a silver holy symbol of Set (10 gp). Spells prayed for: command, cure light wounds, curse (reverse of bless), protection from good, sanctuary; augury, chant, hold person, silence 15' radius, spiritual hammer; animate dead.
4. The duty deacon, i.e., a Set deacon (see new monsters), as a 6th-level Archontean cleric of Set: SZ M; AL LE; AC 3; MV 90'; HD 6; HP 38; #AT 1; Dmg 3-8 (mace +1). Possessions: Set armor +1 (see Arden Vul items); deacon's was stick (see new magic items); footman's mace +1; an amulet of protection against normal missiles (see new magic items); a potion of extra healing; a potion of glibness; a scroll of curse; and a gold holy symbol of Set (150 gp). Spells prayed for: command, cure light wounds (x2), cause fear, protection from good; chant, hold person, know alignment, resist fire, silence 15' radius; animate dead, dispel magic, cause blindness; cause serious wounds.

2. The Conquered Foes: At all times three pitiful slaves are shackled to the feet of the great cult statue of Set (4-2A). Each slave is naked save for an elaborate leather-and-metal helmet made to look like one of Set's traditional enemies: the hawk for Horus, the ibis for Thoth, and the tyet (knot of Isis) for Isis. The slaves are kept drugged, and the wisps of narcotic from 4-2A help to keep them that way. Still, they quite commonly writhe about and sometimes call out wordless pleas for help. Cultists passing through the forum kick them regularly. When one slave dies, another is quickly selected to take up the role.

3. Forum Inspectors: These three senior cultists wander slowly through the Forum enforcing the Laws of the Forum. They have the power to question any non-Set person/creature whom they suspect of having engaged in commerce without paying the proper tax. Habitueés of the Forum know that it is wise to seek them out immediately after a purchase or sale in order to pay the requisite fee, for Set does not smile on efforts to avoid his due. The three daily inspectors are drawn from the following pool: Mariana (female), Sultana (f), Kolchos (male), Egerios (m), and Philia (f). Each inspector carries a special was stick (see new magic items) that may cast detect lie 3x per day. The inspectors each wear a leather belt pouch containing the fruits of their labors. Each pouch contains 100-400 gp in assorted coins as well as 1-8 small gems worth 10-100 gp each. If threatened, each has a whistle that she/he will blow with vigor, alerting the supervisors at 4-2F. One of the three (33% for each) carries a key to one of the locks on the door to the vaults of Set (4-24).

1. 3 Archontean forum inspectors: SZ M; AL LE; AC 10; MV 120'; HD 1-6 HP; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger). Possessions: special was stick (see new magic items) with detect lie; one of the three keys to the door at 4-24.

4. Cultists: There will always be 3-24 Set cultists present in the Forum in 1-4 distinct groups; the cultists mill about, admiring the sites, bartering for trinkets, waiting for access to the mysteries (4-23 and 4-48), and hoping to make the pilgrimage to the main temple (3-90). For each separate group of cultists the GM should make two rolls: one a standard reaction roll, and the other a roll on Table 3 below (ulterior motivations).

1. 3-24 Set cultists (see new monsters): SZ M; AL LE; AC 9; MV 90'; HD 1; HP 7(x3), 6(x4), 5(x5), 4(x7), 3(x5); #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger) or 2-7 (flail) or 1-6 (staff). Special attacks: fanaticism. Possessions: padded armor; daggers; flails or staves.

B. Occasional Visitors

As soon as the PCs enter the Forum, the GM should roll four (4) times on Table 1 to establish the identity of current non-cultist visitors. Once established, the GM should roll on Tables 2 and 3 for each group. If called for by Table 2, a roll on Table 4 and any sub-tables should follow.

Table 1: Visitors to the Forum

Some Examples of Possible Visitors to the Forum

These eight samples were the product of rolls on the preceding tables embellished with additional information:

A. Leila's Ladies of Misrule

A band of 5 female human mercenaries from Narsileon loudly looking for a solid job and good plunder. In fact they have been hired by the Collegium of Cinder (see World of Archontos appendix) to locate the archmage Kerbog Khan (SL12-25) and negotiate with him concerning the properties and value of a mysterious bone wand carried by Leila herself.

- 1. Leila, 6th-level female Thorcin fighter: SZ M; AL LN; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 6; HP 59; #AT 1; Dmg 4-11 (battle axe +2). Abilities: STR 17; INT 13; WIS 10; DEX 10; CON 16; CHA 14. Possessions: chain mail +2 and shield; battle axe +2; helm of infravision (see new magic items); potion of frost cage (see new magic items); potion of healing; a purse with 367 sp, 219 gp, and a coral necklace worth 1,750 gp; mysterious bone wand (a wand of steam and vapor with 76 charges).

- 2. 4 4th-level female Thorcin fighters: SZ M; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 4; HP 35, 33, 30,29; #AT 1; Dmg 2-9. Possessions: chain mail and shield; long sword; purse with 33 sp and 17 gp each. Special: each is +1 to hit and +1 to damage due to STR.

B. Gislú the Goblin Mystic and his 12 Followers

Gislú is an exile from the Goblin Warrens (Sub-Level 4) and is offering the services of his band as guides and mercenaries. He claims to know the layout of Levels 3 and 5 quite well. Gislú would also like to locate the tomb of Ythak Furl (3-168), which he 'knows' to be on Level 3. He is a bit reticent to explain his interest in this tomb beyond the fact that it is 'filled with riches'; if pressed, Gislú admits that the fabled scepter of the goblins (see new magic items) lies within. As no modern goblin, let alone Gislú himself, knows what the scepter looks like, he will have trouble identifying the scepter should the tomb be located and plundered. Eventually, Gislú will wrongly identify the troll flute (see new magic items) found in the tomb as the missing scepter. Gislú will demand the 'scepter' as his share, and he and his followers will fight for this object if necessary. Location of the scepter, whether the real scepter (currently in 8-69) or the misidentified one (3-168) leads to a major political struggle within the goblin court on Sub-Level 4 (see SL4-23 and SL4-22). Gislú's strong beliefs have been abetted by Sir Discord (8-116), who has his own reasons for locating the scepter.

- 1. Gislú, goblin sub-chief (as a hobgoblin): SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 1+1; HP 8; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8 (long sword). Possessions: long sword.
- 2. 12 goblins: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 7, 6, 6, 5(x3), 4(x3), 3, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.

C. Kzaal, the Lizardman Prophet

Four lizardman warriors accompany the shaman. Kzaal wants to hire guides to take them to the Great Cavern (3-163 and 3-172), where a prophecy has told them they may find important knowledge about Rimmaq-Isfet (see 3-178). They are naive and have no ulterior motives.

- 1. Kzaal, 5th-level lizardman shaman: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60', 120'; HD as a 4+1 HD monster; HP 26; #AT 1 or 3; Dmg 3-8 (staff +2), or 1-2/1-1/1-8. Possessions: staff +2; potion of diminution, potion of rainbow hues. Spells memorized: cause light wounds, light, cause fear; augury, chant, speak with animals; remove curse.
- 2. 4 lizardmen: SZ M; AL N; AC 4; MV 60', 120' swimming; HD 2+1; HP 16, 15, 13, 13; #AT 1 or 3; Dmg 1-6 (club) and 1-6 (javelin), or 1-2/1-2/1-8. Possessions: clubs; javelins; shields.

D. Sirsk of Archontos

Sirsk has arrived to sell a pair of valuable slaves, a goblin master miner from Archontos and a human stonemason. Sirsk is actually an agent for Keko the Lame, master of the Imperial Drome (spy service) in Narsileon (see World of Archontos appendix). He has arranged a secret meeting with the Stephania, the high priestess of Set (4-51) - and possibly another visitor (25% chance) - in order to plot a political and military move against Lord Burdock, the Archontean lord who rules the valley in which Arden Vul rests.

- 1. Sirsk of Archontos, 8th-level male Archontean bard (7th-level fighter, 8th-level thief): SZ M; AL NE; AC 1; MV 90'; HD 15; HD 98; #AT 3/2; Dmg 3-10 (long sword +1, luckblade).

Abilities: STR 16, INT 12, WIS 15, DEX 16, CON 10, CHA 17. Thief skills: PP 65%, OL 62%, F/RT 55%, MS 62%, HS 49%, HN 25%, CW 96%, RL 40%. Bard abilities: Charm 40%, LL 25%. Spells: entangle, invisibility to animals, pass without trace; barkskin, cure light wounds, obscurement; neutralize poison, stone shape. Possessions: chain mail +3; long sword +1, luckblade; instrument of the bards (Dos lute); boots of striding and springing; potion of extra healing; purse with 79 sp, 37 gp, and 7 citrine gems (50 gp each).

2. Oresniffer, an enslaved imperial goblin (see World of Archontos appendix) master miner: SZ S; AL NG; AC 7; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 5; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.
3. Berrib, an enslaved male Archontean stone mason: SZ M; AL N; AC 10; MV 120'; HD 1-6 HP; HP 4; #AT 1; Dmg by weapon.

E. Helios of Dog Patrol (3-140):

Helios is trying to trade some documents (written on goblin hide) that detail some very juicy social and political secrets of the troll thegn's court (stolen from the varumani emissaries to the beastmen resident in 3-162). The scrolls are valuable and could be used for blackmail on the lower levels, but are quite hot. As a result, Helios and company are nervous. They hope to buy significant quantities of fresh meat and grain with the money that they realize from the scrolls. Helios is acting without the knowledge of Deino, who would be quite annoyed at his presumption and willingness to risk the beastmen's relationship with the troll thegn.

1. Helios, beastman sergeant (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 2+2; HP 15; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 or 2-5. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spear; war hammer.
2. 6 beastman troopers (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 8, 7, 7, 6, 6, 5; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spears; short swords; short bows.

F. Tikun Thane (SL3-2), Wizard of Newmarket

The mage is accompanied by three of his disciplined and four of his quasi-trained albino baboons (see new monsters for both). He is seeking support for an expedition to loot Archontean tombs near the Obsidian Gates (5-6). His knowledge of Level 5 is poor, but his knowledge of Levels 2 and Level 3 is pretty good.

1. Tikun-Thane: for stats, see SL3-2
2. 3 disciplined (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 7; MV 120'; HD 4; HP 30, 27, 24; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8 (scimitar); MR 10%. Special defenses: immune to mind-affecting spells.
3. 4 trained large albino baboons (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; MV 120'; AC 6; HD 3; HP 20, 19, 18, 18; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-6. Special attacks: pack attack.

G. Meral the Key-monger:

Meral is a seller of exotic wares, and is well known in the forum for his wide selection of keys whose specific uses he will describe in great detail. Meral is well-versed in Arden Vul lore, and is remarkably good at shaping his narrative (and the identity of his keys) based on subtle cues that he picks up from his buyers. He is actually an agent of a good-aligned deity or organization and is here to spy on the defenses, rituals, and powers of the cult of Set. A ranger with a taste for music and disguise, Meral might decide to enlist the PCs for his cause if he can be persuaded of their good intentions. For such friends, he also has a secret cache of keys for which the identities are ironclad; these include a brass key to the hematite gates (3-177), an iron key to SL8-1, and a gold disk-key to the lesser obsidian gates (SL4-34).

1. Meral the key-monger, 8th-level male Thorcin ranger: SZ M; AL CG; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 8; HP 63; #AT 3/2; Dmg 5-11 (broadsword +2). Abilities: STR 17, INT 15, WIS 15, DEX 10, CON 16, CHA 10. Possessions: leather armor +3; broadsword +2; 439 sp, 119 gp, 4 citrine gems (50 gp each); a blue glass activation square (see Thothian teleportation rings in new magic items); potion of invisibility; potion of invulnerability; a silk pouch with 10-40 keys; trade goods (roll on tables above).
2. 3 bodyguards, as 3rd-level male Thorcin fighters: SZ M; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 3; HP 25, 24, 21; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 3-6 (war hammer). Possessions: chain mail and shield; spear; war hammers; purse with 22 sp and 9 gp each. Special: +1 to damage due to STR.

H. Ulana of Newmarket

An aggressive and ambitious young merchant who has just completed the sale of a sizable amount of grain to the cult of Set. Ulana thinks that she made a bad decision coming to Arden Vul, and is now afraid to leave the Forum with her profits (750 gp), mostly because her three farmer 'guardsmen' have proven themselves inadequate to the task. She is looking to hire security to get her back to Newmarket safely.

1. Ulana of Newmarket, female Thorcin merchant: SZ M; AL N; AC 9; MV 120'; HD 1-1; HP 5; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (staff). Possessions: staff; ring of protection +1.
2. 3 'guards', male Archontean farmers-cum-men-at-arms: SZ M; AL LN; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 7, 6; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (spear) or 1-4 (light crossbow). Possessions: scale mail; spear; light crossbow with 20 bolts.

4-2A: Set Triumphant

This 20'-tall cult statue set on a 20'-square platform looms over the bustle of the Forum. Set faces west, with his arms at his side and his left foot slightly advanced. He appears in the Set-animal form, albeit with an ankh rising between the square ears of his head. He is brightly painted, with brown skin, yellow and gold kilt, black head, purple headdress, and multicolored accents (belt, bracelets, necklace). His eyes are a piercing azure. The ankh is enchanted to serve as a locus for scrying by priests in the chapel (4-61); they are able to scrutinize affairs in the Forum through the ankh.

The Breath of Set: Puffs of odorless, near-invisible blue gas are released at regular intervals from the mouth of Set. Wafting lazily to the ground, the gas affects anyone who stands for more than a few rounds on the platform without holding his/her breath. The powerful narcotic effect of the gas induces mild hallucinations that cause victims to stand practically immobile as they contemplate their own godhood. Regulars to the Forum call the gas the 'breath of Set'. It is widely understood, moreover, that those rendered immobile by the gas are not subject to the normal Laws of the Forum: it is perfectly acceptable to steal a drugged person's effects or attempt to sell him/her into slavery. Detecting the gas is like detecting a secret door, unless PCs state explicitly that they are looking at the head of the statue, in which case the gas is automatically detected. Those aware of the gas can hold their breath and avoid its effects. If a PC should become drugged, he/she must make a saving throw versus poison every turn (at progressively more difficult checks: -1 per turn after the first) to break free of the narcotic. Unaffected friends can, of course, lead drugged PCs away from the statue, although the victims will still suffer a -2 penalty to all rolls for 2-12 turns.

The Conquered Foes: Three pathetic figures are kept chained to the feet of the statue at all times: these are slaves forced to wear masks depicting Set's chief enemies, Thoth, Isis, and Horus (see above, in the section on residents of the Forum). The slaves writhe periodically but are otherwise quiescent due to the breath of Set. They are commonly mocked and occasionally kicked by those with too much time on their hands or by those wishing to impress the priests of Set.

Inhabitants:

1. 3 drugged male human slaves: SZ M; AL N; AC 10; MV 120'; HD 1-6 HP; HP 5, 3, 2; #AT 1; Dmg by weapon.

4-2B: Jackal Fountain

This fountain takes the form of a seated jackal some 5' tall. Water pours from its mouth and erect ears. A 3'-tall stone barrier borders the pool. Six copper dippers attached to chains rest on the lip of the barrier.

4-2C: Food Stalls

This corner of the Forum features a set of food vendors, two long trestle tables with benches, and four smaller tables with stools. One stall sells slices of spiced meat; the second sells a spicy "Forum stew"; and the third sells pounded and fried cakes of mushrooms mixed with spices and other vegetables. Depending on other factors, the third stall may occasionally have bread (25% chance); if so, that stall will be quite busy. All three stalls also sell cups of Jobim's lichen ale. Prices are high, but the stalls are popular. At most times 2-12 off duty Set guardsmen can be found here, gambling, eating and gossiping. In this setting the guardsmen are not particularly aggressive and, if PCs buy them some food or gamble with them for a while, they are happy to gossip about the halls.

Food For Sale	Price
Spiced meat, shaved (3 oz)	15 sp
Forum stew, with bowl (3 oz)	1 gp
Forum stew, buyer provides bowl	10 sp
Mushroom cake, 4 oz	10 sp
Bread, when available, 4-oz loaf	1 gp
Jobim's lichen ale, pint	1 sp
A three-foot strand of the green friend (see new flora)	3 gp

Inhabitants:

1. 3-12 Set guardsmen (see new monsters), as 2nd-level Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 19, 18, 18, 17, 17, 16(x4), 15, 15, 12; #AT 1, Dmg 2-7 (mace), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: red scale mail and wooden shield; footman's maces; spears; light crossbows with 20 bolts.

4-2D: Merchant Stalls

Towards the western side of the Forum stands a double row of 10'x10' stalls in which licensed merchants offer their wares. Canvas curtains separate the stalls. Each has a wooden counter on which (some) wares are displayed, and a locked stone chest in the back (the chests are attached to the floor with iron clips and spikes). Since space is at a premium, only a sampling of wares is displayed; more valuable or excess goods are kept elsewhere, either in an individual trader's quarters (see areas 4-26 to 4-35) or, more typically, in a rented lockbox stored in the vaults of Set (4-24). To become a licensed trader one must pay a substantial licensing fee and generally impress the Lord of the Forum. If the GM wishes a livelier trading center, then the number of stalls could be expanded from 6 to 9.

Stall 1: Hazlitt's Fine Weapons

Proprietor: Hazlitt One-Eye

Personality: Gruff, fair, enjoys tales of combat. See also 4-26

Relations with Set: Neutral

Secret? Behind his eyepatch is actually a gemstone eye which can cast true seeing 3x/day.

Lockbox: 334 gp, 679 sp.

Might Buy: Antique weapons of quality, magic weapons. Will pay 75% of base value.

Goods for Sale: He has access to 0-3 examples of most common weapons at 125% the base price. There is a 25% chance he will have an uncommon weapon (150% base price). He keeps 15,000 gp worth of magic weapons (no single one worth more than 5,000 gp) in his lockbox (4-24) for important and respected customers; these he will sell at 150% of the base value.

Inhabitants:

1. Hazlitt One-Eye, 4th-level male Thorcin fighter: SZ M; AL LN; AC 6; MV 120'; HD 4; HP 30; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (short sword).

Abilities: STR 16, INT 15, WIS 10, DEX 16, CON 9, CHA 10.
Possessions: leather armor, short sword, key to lockbox in 4-24; gemstone eye that can cast true seeing 3x/day. His residence is 4-26.

Stall 2: Exotica

Proprietor: Galadnor Half-Elven

Personality: Haughty, acquisitive, treacherous, and calculating. Galadnor has a lust for knowledge of the past, which she hopes to translate into power in the present. Good intelligence about lost tombs, artifacts, and especially rudishva technology or lore, will interest her greatly. She is only impressed by visible power and experience. See also 4-31.

Relationship with Set: Poor. Her ambitions are distrusted, but her knowledge makes her a common source of information.

Secret? She hates the cult of Set, as it was a Set priest who raped her mother and conceived her. This fact is deeply secret. Only if she feels the cult is about to fall will she show her colors.

Lockbox: 399 gp, 567 sp, 153 cp.

Might Buy: Small-sized magic items (she will need to make any such sale conditional, until she has time to raise the money), rudishva technology, small movables dating from antiquity (statues, inscriptions, etc.)

Goods for Sale: Magic user scrolls (1-6 scrolls, with 1-6 spells per scroll of level 1-6 each), costing 350 gp per spell level; 1-4 specimens of exotic mushrooms; 0-2 vials of exotic poison; spider silk; all ordinary and many unusual spell components (25% chance for any unusual component); 1-4 curios from the Halls, including a control rod for the eggs at 4-85 (for which she asks 160 gp); and a red glass activation square (see Thothian teleportation rings in new magic items), for which she wants 75 gp. In her lockbox (see 4-24) are 1-3 magic rings; 0-3 miscellaneous magic items; and 2-12 curios from the Halls.

Inhabitants:

1. Galadnor Half-elven, 6th-level half-elf magic user: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 6; HP 18; #AT 1; Dmg 2-5 (dagger +1). Abilities: STR 9, INT 18, WIS 15, DEX 17, CON 10, CHA 12. Possessions: keys to the chest and her lockbox (4-24); throwing daggers; ring of three wishes; dagger +1; cloak of displacement; potion of invisibility. Spells memorized: charm person, comprehend languages, detect magic, identify; forget, wizard lock; protection from normal missiles, suggestion. Her chamber is at area 4-31.
2. Dworm, 3rd-level male Wisikin fighter: SZ M; AL LN; MV 90'; AC 5; HD 3; HP 26; #AT 2-9 (long sword +1). Abilities: STR 15, INT 8, WIS 10, DEX 10, CON 15, CHA 10. Possessions: chain mail; long sword +1; purse with 71 sp, 19 gp. Galadnor is the only trader to employ private security.

Stall 3: Robben's Wholesale Goods

Proprietor: Robben the Fat

Personality: Sarcastic, impatient, sharp ears (50% chance to eavesdrop on conversations at the exotica stall and at Horace Trych's stall). See also 4-28.

Relationship with Set: Extremely close

Secret? Is basically a front for High Priestess Stephania (4-51) in order to keep the cult supplied with food, ore, etc. Robben will report suspicious customers to the Priest.

Lockbox: 471 gp, 3792 sp

Might Buy: Bulk quantities of grain, rice, mushrooms, ore, or smaller quantities of spice, sugar, tea, herbs.

Goods for Sale: Not much. Some dried meat (1 gp/lb), a few packets of dried rice (1 gp/lb), packages of sugar or flour sufficient for a week (3 gp), pails of paint (red, blue, white, black – 5 gp each). He has a lockbox in 4-24, but it contains little of value.

Inhabitants:

1. Robben the Fat, male Thorcin merchant: SZ M; AL NE; AC 10; MV 120'; HD 1-6 HP; HP 4; #AT 1; Dmg 1-3. Possessions: dagger; key to lockbox in 4-24. His chamber is at 4-28.

Stall 4: All Things Considered

Proprietor: Horace Trych

Personality: Unctuous, obsequious, curious. In keeping with the name of his store, Horace is eager to consider all sorts of strange items and information. He badgers newcomers for information. Regulars of the Forum refer to him as "Old Rat Face." See also 4-29.

Relationship with Set: Poor. One of the junior acolytes correctly suspects him of selling information to the wrong parties, but so far this has not amounted to anything

Secret? Horace hides his good alignment to the best of ability, and is aided by possession of a ring of mind shielding and an amulet of protection from scrying. It is extremely unlikely that Horace would reveal his cover to PCs.

Lockbox: 295 gp, 892 sp, 436 cp

Might Buy: Information about Halls or the cult of Set (5-100 gp); pieces of adventuring gear (50% of list price); mundane objects from the Halls (50% of base price); items associated with the Sortians (125% of base value)

Goods for Sale: A good selection of used adventuring gear, generally in a battered state (50% chance for any basic item, although no weapons, armor, magic), at 125% of list price. A choice selection of objects associated with the Sortians, including at least one of each type of Sortian eye (see new magic items), and several intriguing inscriptions (eyes are 200, 700, and 2,300 gp for silver, gold, and sapphire eyes respectively; inscriptions are negotiable). His lockbox (4-24) contains his best stuff.

Inhabitants:

1. Horace Trych, 5th-level male Archontean thief: SZ M; AL CG; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 5; HP 29; #AT 1; Dmg 3-6 (dagger +2). Abilities: STR 11, INT 15, WIS 12, DEX 17, CON 11, CHA 15. Thief skills: PP 55%, OL 52%, F/RT 40%, MS 45%, HS 36%, HN 20%, CW 90%, RL 25%. Possessions: leather armor; dagger +2; key to lockbox in 4-24; a potion of invisibility. His chamber is area 4-29.

Stall 5: Fine Stones and Settings

Proprietor: Birgir

Personality: Friendly, inquisitive, smart. See also 4-32.

Relationship with Set: Neutral

Secret? Occasionally deepens his inventory through pickpocketing newcomers to the Forum.

Lockbox: 1,5211 gp, 356 sp, a selection of gems ranging from 5 gp to 500 gp in value

Might Buy: Gems, jewelry, gilt-work, at 90% value

Goods for Sale: Gems, antique jewelry, at 110% list price. He has 1-3 magical amulets, rings, or necklaces in his chambers that he will sell for 150% price. Birgir does not trust the cult of Set fully, and has declined to rent a lockbox; his excess wealth is hidden in his quarters (4-30).

Inhabitants:

1. Birgir, 3rd-level male Wiskin thief: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 3; HP 13; #AT 1; Dmg 2-5 (dagger +1). Abilities: STR 11, INT 13, WIS 9, DEX 17, CON 9, CHA 15. Thief skills: PP 45%, OL 43%, F/RT 30%, MS 32%, HS 25%, HN 15%, CW 87%. Possessions: dagger +1; leather armor; key to lockbox under the bed in 4-32. His residence is area 4-32.
2. Asbjorn, 2nd-level male Wiskin thief and cousin of Birgir: SZ M; AL LN; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 2; HP 9; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (short sword), 1-4 (dagger). Abilities: STR 10; INT 13; WIS 14; DEX 17; CON 9; CHA 9. Thief skills: PP 40%, OL 39%, F/RT 25%, MS 26%, HS 20%, HN 10%, CW 86%. Possessions: leather armor; dagger; short sword. He resides at 4-30.

Stall 6: Fine Liquors

Proprietor: Skellan Skindros

Personality: Snobby; would like to discuss and sell fine wines, but most of his sales come from lichen ale. Will warm to anyone who buys fine alcohol and engages in discussion of the same. See also 4-33.

Relationship with Set: Neutral

Secret? None

Lockbox: 148 gp, 796 sp, 562 cp

Might Buy: Potions, unusual liquors

Goods for Sale: Hak's mushroom ale (8 sp/quart), Jobim's lichen ale (4 sp/quart), imported Archontean wines (5-300 gp/bottle), imported rye whiskey (6 gp/shot), imported corn whiskey (3 gp/shot), imported brandy (200 gp/bottle). He also offers a small selection (2-5) of potions, at 150% list price. His lockbox (4-24) contains a few special items.

Inhabitants:

1. Skellan Skindros, male Wiskin merchant: SZ M; AL LN; AC 10; MV 120'; HD 1-1; HP 4; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger). Possessions: dagger, key to lockbox in 4-24. His chamber is area 4-33.

4-2E: Smithy

The northwest corner of the Forum is filled with steam and the clatter of hammers on anvils. Two smiths and four assistants hurry about a central fire and two anvils, forging simple weapons, suits of Set armor (see Arden Vul items), and all manner of common iron implements. The smiths work solely for the cult of Set, and inquiries from outsiders will be met with polite refusal culminating in the terse comment "Talk to the Inspectors." The PCs would need to discuss their needs with the Forum Inspectors and explain how it would be in the interests of Set to devote time and resources to fulfill the PCs' request. The smiths are capable, but cannot create enchanted equipment.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 male Archontean smiths, as 2nd-level fighters: SZ M; AL LN; AC 8; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 15, 13; #AT 1; Dmg 3-6 (hammer). Possessions: padded armor; war hammer.
2. 2 male and 2 female Archontean assistants: SZ M; AL N; AC 10; MV 120'; HD 1-6 HP; HP 5, 4, 3, 2; #AT 1; Dmg 2-5 (hammer). Possessions: hammers.

4-2F: Porch of Scrutiny

Fifteen feet up the western wall of the Forum looms a balcony from which the priests of Set conduct oversight of events and actions in the Forum. The balcony has a 3'-tall balustrade of carved fantastic beasts. Half way along the balcony an iron pole is stuck into a hole in the floor; the pole is 5' high and ends in a gold and silver mask shaped like a Set animal. The mask is a mask of revelation (see new magic items). Anyone looking through the mask has the benefit of true seeing for a distance of 60' (to the statue of Set at 4-2A). The duty sergeant always carries an olifant of command (carved with warriors; see new magic items), with which he can bark orders at those who transgress the laws of the Forum.

Inhabitants:

1. 4 Set guardsmen (see new monsters), as 2nd-level Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 15, 12; #AT 1, Dmg 2-7 (mace), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: red scale mail and wooden shield; footman's maces; spears; light crossbows with 20 bolts
2. 1 Set sergeant (see new monsters), as a 5th-level Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL LE; AC 3; MV 60'; HD 5; HP 37; #AT 1, Dmg 3-8 (mace +1), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: Set armor (see Arden Vul items) and wooden shield; footman's mace +1; olifant of command (warriors, see new magic items) spear; light crossbow with 20 bolts.
3. 1 Set acolyte (see new monsters), as a 3rd-level Archontean cleric of Set: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 60'; HD 3; HP 19; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (mace) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Possessions: Set armor (see Arden Vul items); footman's mace; light crossbow; acolyte's was stick (see new magic items); and a silver holy symbol of Set (10 gp). Spells prayed for: command, cure light wounds, curse (reverse of bless), protection from good; hold person, silence 15' radius.

Treasure:

Olifant of command (warriors); mask of revelation (see new magic items for both).

4-2G: Money Changer

The wooden stall of Helena of Archontos stands next to the corridor leading to the Vaults of Set (4-24). The stall is similar to those of the other traders, with canvas walls and a stone lockbox. Two elite guardsmen stand by the stall, and keep an eye on the corridor to the vaults. Helena is human, about 45, quite short, sharp, calculating, and intelligent. She has a keen eye for valuation, and is difficult to fool. Although she wears no distinguishing badges and does not trumpet the fact, she is a core member of the Set cult; indeed, she is their treasurer and a trusted advisor to High Priestess Stephania. Her main business in the Forum centers around the following practices:

Making Change: She exchanges large value coins for less valuable ones (generally gp for sp or cp), and vice versa. She performs this function for 1% of the sum involved. The guardsmen are her main clients for this practice.

Exchange Services: She has a thriving business exchanging antique monies (e.g. octagonal platinum pieces, ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items) for new currency; this she does at a cost of 5% of the value of the older coinage. She also exchanges coins for gems (and vice versa), taking a 15% profit per transaction.

Loansharking: More rarely, Helena loans money at 10-50% interest per month (the larger the sum loaned, the larger the rate). She requires collateral for any loan over 100 gp; collateral may take the form of valuable objects or magical items.

Banking: As the treasurer of Set, she is empowered to arrange deposit banking with those in good favor with the cult. She is not interested in small-scale deposits, and thus only accepts deposits valued at a minimum of 1,000 gp. The fee for such storage is 5% of the value of the deposit for 4 months guaranteed storage. If a third party does agree to a deposit, their goods are transferred to a locked iron box in a ceremony witnessed by Helena and all three Forum Inspectors. The iron box is then taken into the Vault of Set (4-24) for storage; the depositor retains the key. A formal contract detailing the terms of the transaction is drawn up and notarized by Helena and the Inspectors.

Inhabitants:

- 1. Helena of Archontos, female Archontean merchant: SZ M; AL LE; MV 120'; AC 8; HD 1-6 HP; HP 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger). Possessions: dagger; ring of protection +2; a green jade ring set with an opal (250 gp); a heavy gold necklace (650 gp); the key to her stall's chest; the key to her chamber (4-27); two keys to lockboxes located within the Vaults; and the key to one of the three locks on the door to the Vaults of Set (4-24). Her chamber is located at 4-27.
- 2. 2 elite Set guardsmen (see new monsters), as 3rd-level Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 3; HP 26, 26, 25, 25, 24, 24; #AT 1, Dmg 2-7 (mace), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: red scale mail and wooden shield; footman's maces; spears; light crossbows with 20 bolts.

Treasure:

As with the trade stalls, Helena's stall has a stone chest affixed to the floor with iron clips. Inside is a locked (poison trap) steel box containing 899 gp; two sacks holding, respectively, 572 sp, and 893 cp; and a soft velvet bag with a score of small gemstones worth 10-100 gp each. Most of her liquid wealth is stored in the Vaults of Set (4-24).

4-3: Slave Market

The Guild of Service is a dominant force in the cult of Set, mostly due to their control of a lucrative slave trade. The Guild is in many practical ways autonomous from the priestly hierarchy. Indeed, the Guild administers its sector to the east of the Forum (areas 4-3 to 4-14) as a quasi-private fiefdom.

The market is the public face of the Guild, and the location of a daily sale of human and other sentient merchandise. The daily sale begins at 10:00 A.M. sharp, and is well attended by evil visitors to the Forum.

The site of the market is a stone dais rising 5' above the Forum floor. Five iron posts have been set in the floor; each has two iron rings to which slave shackles can be attached. The passage to 4-4 is shrouded in shadows.

Theodor Trefill, a smooth-talking and utterly evil man, oversees the daily auction. Four guildsmen with whips and uncommon was sticks (see new magic items) accompany Theodor. Slaves are usually kept chained to each other, except in the case of expensive pleasure slaves.

The following table determines the nature of the daily sale. Costs are provided for individuals and for the entire set in the case that PCs wish to purchase and manumit these unfortunates:

D10	Type	Base Cost (individual/ all of group)
1-3	Unskilled laborers x8	20/150
4-6	Miners, masons, builders x6 (3 goblin, 3 human)	100/600
7	Pleasure slaves x4	150/600
8	Servants x6	50/250
9	Non-humans x6	50-200/n.a.
10	Special (classed) x4	500 per level/n.a.

Those bidding at the market represent a combination of officials from the cult of Set and visiting groups (see below). For pleasure slaves, non-humans, and 'special' slaves, the base cost is likely to be increased by 0-50% due to vigorous bidding.

List of Possible Purchasers

Buyer	Typical Needs
Emissary from the troll thegn (7-30)	Miners, masons, builders, servants, special
Pullo, a factotum of King Weskenim (SL4-22)	Goblins, servants, pleasure slaves, miners/masons/builders
Belisarius the overseer of Set (4-47)	Unskilled laborers, miners/masons/builders, special
Stephania, high priestess of Set (4-51)	Special, nonhumans, pleasure slaves
A Set deacon	Servants
A band of Set guardsmen from one of the septs	Servants
Tikun Thane (SL3-2)	Strong human men of any type; pleasure slaves
Kerbog Khan (SL12-25), speaking through a bipedal exploration automaton (see new monsters)	Special
A group of 6 nervous outsiders from Newmarket or another nearby community	A specific person to be redeemed from slavery
An abolitionist from outside, looking to free as many slaves as possible	Any and all
Psalor-Ki (5-74)	Any and all (for slime zombies)
Tredgeris the Dapifer (6-75) with 3 guards	Servants or unskilled laborers (to train as guards or wranglers), or exotics for the Arena
Any of the special visitors to Slaver's Square (see 4-7)	Special

Manumission Note: Neither the Guild nor the cult of Set has any problems with owners freeing their slaves. To protect the manumitted, owners may purchase writs of manumission from the Forum Inspectors for 5 gp per document. Freed slaves may have difficulty safely exiting the Halls without a suitable escort, however. Manumission documents are only practically useful in the environs of the Forum, as the Guild frequently re-enslaves those it can catch after their documents are 'lost'.

Inhabitants:

1. From 9:45 to 11:00, a set of slaves
2. Theodor Trefill, 7th-level male Archontean thief (present only during auctions): SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 120'; HD 7; HP 32; #AT 1; Dmg 3-6 (dagger +2). Abilities: STR 12, INT 13, WIS 9, DEX 18, CON 10, CHA 15. Thief skills: PP 70%, OL 67%, F/RT 55%, MS 65%, HS 53%, HN 25%, CW 94%, RL 35%. Possessions: ring of protection +2; dagger +2; gaudy gold necklace (375 gp). Theodor doesn't normally wear armor.
3. 4 guildsmen, as 2nd-level male Archontean thieves: SZ M; AL LE; AC 6; MV 120'; HD 2; HP 11, 10, 9, 8; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger) or 1-6 (short sword). Thief skills: PP 35%, OL 34%, F/RT 25%, MS 21%, HS 15%, HN 10%, CW 86%. Possessions: leather armor; daggers; short swords; uncommon was sticks (see new magic items). Special: they have DEX 16 on average.

4-4: Guard Post (x2)

Iron grillwork set vertically into the walls, floor, and ceiling blocks the passage near both of these locations. A 5'-square door allows passage through the grill, although it is kept locked at all times. The Guild maintains a watch of two guildsmen in each spot; they are armed with spears and Guild uncommon was sticks (see new magic items), and they carry the keys to the door in the grillwork. The guildsmen will ring a small gong dangling from the guard nook if they detect trouble. They have two benches, and a barrel full of torches.

Inhabitants:

1. 4 guildsmen, as 2nd-level male Archontean thieves: SZ M; AL LE; AC 6; MV 120'; HD 2; HP 11, 10, 9, 8; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger) or 1-6 (short sword). Thief skills: PP 35%, OL 34%, F/RT 25%, MS 21%, HS 15%, HN 10%, CW 86%. Possessions: leather armor; daggers; short swords; uncommon was sticks (see new magic items), keys to the square doors. Special: they have DEX 16 on average.

4-5: Slaves Ready for Sale

Whichever group of slaves is due to be auctioned on a given day (see table at 4-3) will be present here until 9:45 AM. A new group will be present by 2:00 PM (roll again on table at 4-3). The chamber is dimly lit with a pair of torches. It smells badly of sweat and of fear. Two large iron rings are set in the west wall. In the morning, there is a 50% chance that auctioneer Trefill is present, inspecting the slaves. At all times when slaves are present, there will be 2 guildsmen present to watch the merchandise. Etched into the wall four times are variations on the phrase "Help Us" (twice in Archontean, once in Thorcin and once in Elvish).

Inhabitants:

1. Except from 9:45-2:00, a set of slaves (see 4-3).
2. Theodor Trefill, 50% (see statistics at 4-3)

3. 2 guildsmen, as 2nd-level male Archontean thieves: SZ M; AL LE; AC 6; MV 120'; HD 2; HP 10, 8; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger) or 1-6 (short sword). Thief skills: PP 35%, OL 34%, F/RT 25%, MS 21%, HS 15%, HN 10%, CW 86%. Possessions: leather armor; daggers; short swords; uncommon was sticks (see new magic items). Special: they have DEX 16 on average.

4-6: Guards

Six wooden bunkbeds line the walls of this barracks chamber. Next to the bunkbeds are a dozen small iron chests. In working hours, the room is empty. In periods of 'night', either half or all of the beds are occupied. The walls of the chamber are undecorated, save for some small and unimportant bits of graffiti (obscene pictures, love sonnets, small sums). The iron chests are locked, but contain very little of value: primarily clothes, small personal objects, and a handful of coins each (3-18 sp and 3-18 cp each).

Inhabitants:

1. Either 3 or 6 guildsmen (only at 'night'): for stats, see 4-4.

4-7: Slavers' Square

This is the economic hub of the Guild of Service. The square is brightly lit with a continual light spell, and is crowded with activity. Towards the western side of the square is an ancient well; it is 5' in diameter, descends 100' to a cistern, and features a 4'-tall brick lip around the well as well as an iron apparatus and wooden bucket for raising water.

Five horizontal bars are set into the walls of the southeast corner, and five vertical iron bars are set into the floor next to the walls. These bars are used by the Guild to discipline and train slaves. At any given time, there is a 75% chance that 4-8 slaves will be bound to the bars, and three unfriendly guildsmen will be working them over with prods, whips, and uncommon was sticks (see new magic items).

At all times the following groups and individuals will be present in the square:

1. 4-8 slaves bound to training posts (75% chance): roll d6 to determine what type: 1-3: unskilled; 4-5: skilled; 6: valuable. For each type, use stats found at areas 4-11, 4-12, and 4-13.
2. 2 guildsmen, as 2nd-level male Archontean thieves (75% chance; only if slaves are present): SZ M; AL LE; AC 6; MV 120'; HD 2; HP 10, 9, 8; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger) or 1-6 (short sword). Thief skills: PP 35%, OL 34%, F/RT 25%, MS 21%, HS 15%, HN 10%, CW 86%. Possessions: leather armor; daggers; short swords; uncommon was sticks (see new magic items). Special: they have DEX 16 on average.
2. 4 guildsmen, as 2nd-level male Archontean fighters (100% chance): SZ M; AL LE; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 16; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (spears, clubs). Possessions: leather armor; spears; and clubs. Special: they have +1 to damage from STR.
4. 2-5 guild sergeants, as 4th-level male Archontean thieves (50% chance): SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 4; HP 20, 19, 18, 16, 15; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger), 1-6 (club). Thief skills: PP 50%, OL 47%, F/RT 35%, MS 38%, HS 30%, HN 15%, CW 88%. Possessions: leather armor; daggers; clubs. Special: they have DEX 17 on average.
5. 1-3 groups of special visitors (see table below) (50% chance)
6. A group of 11-20 new slaves being sorted by a Guildmaster into one of the holding pits (4-11, 4-12 or 4-13) (50% chance).

Special Visitors to Slavers' Square

D10	Visiting Group
1	1-2 true varumani (see new monsters) from 6-101, discussing needs of the troll thegn (7-30): SZ L; AL LN; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 60, 51; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 6-24 (two-handed sword, 2-20+4). Possessions: scale mail; long swords; spears; purse with 33 sp and 9 gp each.
3	Oswyn, a representative of Wuffa, thegn of a local Thorcin estate, trying to sell the captured heiress of a rival estate into slavery. 1. Oswyn, 4 th -level male Thorcin fighter: SZ M; AL LE; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 4; HP 40; #AT 1; Dmg 4-11 (battle axe) or 1-4 (light crossbow). Abilities: STR 18/57, INT 13, WIS 11, DEX 8, CON 17, CHA 15. Possessions: splint mail +1 and shield; battle axe; light crossbow (with 15 bolts); 93 sp, 247 gp. 2. 3 2 nd -level male Thorcin fighters: SZ M; AL N; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 16, 13, 12; #AT 1; Dmg: 3-8 (footman's mace), or 2-7 (spear) or 1-4 (light crossbow). Special: +1 damage due to STR. Possessions: chain mail; footman's mace; spear; light crossbow with 16 bolts. 3. Bledwyn, 1 st -level female Thorcin ranger, and heiress: SZ M; AL CG; MV 120'; HD 1; HP 12; #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Bledwyn is bound and has no possession.
4	An efreeti lord named Nizamudden, disguised through polymorph self as a Khumus (see World of Archontos appendix) diplomat. He is buying slaves for his palace in the City of Brass. He is also keeping an ear open for news about the ewer of Fadil the Clear (see new magic items and area SL15-16), since he would love to acquire it before the marids do. 1. Nizamudden, efreet: SZ L; AL N(LE); AC 2; MV 90'; 240' flying (Class B); HD 10; HP 67; #AT 1; Dmg 3-24. Special attacks: produce flame, cause pyrotechnics; enlarge. Special defenses: become invisible; assume gaseous form; polymorph self. Special: grant three wishes; create illusion; detect magic; create wall of fire; immune to normal fire; -1 HP/die from magical fire.
5	Evil adventuring party with close ties to the Guild, either delivering an important item or receiving an important contract (select from NPC appendix)
6	High Priestess Stephania speaking with one of the Guildmasters: for stats, see 4-51.

7	A party of 3-5 dwarves from Kazildor (see World of Archontos appendix) negotiating for specialist labor
8	A group of 3-5 emissaries from deep in the Underearth: GM's choice as to race and stats.
9	Glebeus Brestillion, a thin-lipped representative of his mid-level Archontean clan, with 6 guards, searching for a lost kinsman presumed sold into slavery. 1. Glebeus Brestillion, male Archontean aristocrat: SZ M; AL NG; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 1-6 HP; HP 4; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (short sword). Possessions: chain mail; short sword; purse with 211 sp and 75 pp. 2. 6 bodyguards, as 2 nd -level Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 17, 15, 14, 14, 13, 12; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 2-9 (battle axe). Special: +1 to damage from STR. Possessions: chain mail and shield; spear; battle axe
10	Heltor the ranger and four imperial goblins, representing the Free Goblins of Narsileon, looking for a revered relative sold into slavery by agents of the Drome. Heltor is a friend and mouthpiece, but the real authority lies with Rikso Stemwinder, a wealthy imperial goblin representative of the Silent Factor (see World of Archontos appendix). 1. Heltor, 6 th -level male Thorcin ranger: SZ M; AL CG; AC 4; MV 120'; HD 6; HP 55; #AT 1; Dmg 3-9 (bastard sword), 2-7 ( long bow +1 ). Abilities: STR 16, INT 13, WIS 14, DEX 10, CON 16, CHA 11. Rikso Stemwinder, imperial goblin (see World of Archontos appendix) and associate of the Silent Factor: SZ S; AL LN; AC 10; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 4; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger). Possessions: dagger; writ of authority from the Silent Factor; chest carrying 455 sp and 400 gp. 3. 3 imperial goblins (see World of Archontos appendix): SZ S; AL LN; AC 10; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 4; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger). Possessions: dagger.

4-8A: Guildmaster Resedior

The day-to-day affairs of the Guild of Service are managed by a triumvirate of Guildmasters who have risen through the ranks through service, cunning, and ruthlessness. Yon Resedior resides in 4-8A. His chamber is spartan, as befits his austere, severe personality. The room is decorated with tasteful geometric friezes running along the tops of the walls, which have been whitewashed. A curtain in the northeast corner lends some privacy to his simple bed. A scroll cabinet and desk rests against the western wall. Against the south wall is a stone chest, locked with a poison needle trap. His mute body servant, Njall, occupies this room at all times and will defend his master and his possessions with his life.

Inhabitants:

1. Yon Resedior (33%), 8th-level male Archontean magic user: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 8; HP 26; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger of venom). Abilities: STR 9, INT 17, WIS 14, DEX 17, CON 10, CHA 15. Possessions: guildmaster's gold ring (200 gp); throwing daggers; ring of protection +2; dagger of venom; scroll of shield; key to his chest. Spells memorized: charm person, feather fall, magic missile, spider climb; detect good, ESP, invisibility; haste, hold person, suggestion; dimension door, polymorph other.
2. Njall, 4th-level male Wisikin fighter: SZ M; AL NE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 4; HP 35; #AT 1; Dmg 3-10 (battle axe +1). Abilities: STR 17, INT 8, WIS 10, DEX 15, CON 16, CHA 10. Possessions: chain mail; battle axe +1.

Treasure:

In the scroll case: a scroll of three spells (sleep, stinking cloud, web), a scroll of two spells (read magic, write), a scroll of one spell (slow), a map of areas 4-1 to 4-66 (without 4-36 to 4-39 and 4-51A or 4-51B), a map of areas 4-105 to 4-156 (without secret areas, 4-151A, 4-152, and 4-153), a copy of the Lay of Marius Invictus (see Arden Vul books), a treasure map to the tomb of Sethu (5-57), and a report that muses about the identity of Isocorax (6-8) and the nature of Thegan White-Mane (6-8) without quite making the right conclusion about the two (see 6-19 and 6-20).

Inside the chest are three bolts of valuable silk (50 gp each); a clay urn packed with sawdust, hidden inside of which are 15 small but fine emeralds (500 gp each); and three vials of poison.

On his desk: spell book, fine inks and writing materials (worth 300 gp).

Yon Resedior's Spell Book:

charm person, comprehend languages, detect magic, erase, feather fall, floating disk, hold portal, identify, light, magic missile, protection from good, read magic, shield, sleep, spider climb; continual light, detect good, ESP, Frigg's caustic kisses (see new spells), invisibility, knock, locate object, stinking cloud, web, wizard's cache (see new spells); clairaudience, clairvoyance, dispel magic, haste, hold person, lightning bolt, protection from good 10' radius, slow, suggestion; charm monster, dimension door, fumble, polymorph other, remove curse; magic jar.

4-8B: Guildmistress Anna Ligareon

Anna was born a Ligareon, which makes her a member of one of the Five Families that rule the Archontean Empire (see World of Archontos appendix). She maintains some secret connections with select members of her kindred in the Empire, but is not actively involved in the dance of the Five Families. Of course, those who recognize her ring might be able to use this information for their own purposes. Anna enjoys luxury, and her chamber is decorated lavishly. The walls are painted a bright yellow, on top of which are painted a variety of floral and pastoral motifs. Well-tanned, soft rugs made of animal skin cover the floor. She has a large four-poster bed, a desk and chair, a rack of wines, and a wardrobe. In the center of the room is a large tripod of heating (see new magic items).

Despite the pleasant surroundings, Anna is a hard and cruel woman, who shows no remorse about her trade and enjoys the act of disciplining slaves, particularly new 'specials'. She has a low, emotionless voice that makes her seem even sterner than she in fact is. She is present in her chamber 33% of the time. She is accompanied at all times by her amazon bodyguard, Bobila. She hates Marius Junienos with a fiery passion (see 4-56).

Inhabitants:

1. Anna Ligareon (33%), 7th-level female Archontean illusionist: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 7; HP 22; #AT 1; Dmg 4-9 (staff of striking). Abilities: STR 10, INT 17, WIS 15, DEX 11, CON 9, CHA 16. Possessions: guildmaster's gold ring (200 gp); Ligareon signet ring; bracers of defense (AC 5); staff of striking; potion of fly; oil of etherealness. Spells memorized: audible glamer, color spray, hypnotism, phantasmal force; detect magic, hypnotic pattern, invisibility; non-detection, suggestion.
2. Bobila (33%), 4th-level female Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL NE; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 4; HP 37; #AT 1; Dmg 3-10 (long sword +1). Abilities: STR 16, INT 8, WIS 11, DEX 12, CON 16, CHA 9. Possessions: chain mail; long sword +1.

Treasure:

Tripod of heating (see new magic items).

The wardrobe contains a cloak of elvenkind amid other silk attire (total 75 gp). Inside the wardrobe is a small chest containing 543 gp, 235 sp, and 4 aquamarines worth 100 gp each.

The wine rack holds 17 bottles of wine, including one jeroboam of a famous vintage worth 350 gp and one well-used bottle that holds 8 doses of a nasty ingestible poison.

Sewn into the foot of the mattress is a small pouch with 5 alexandrines worth 500 gp each.

The desk contains Anna's spell book, a scroll of two spells (detect illusion, detect invisibility), another spell of two scrolls (improved phantasmal force, dispel illusion), a scroll of confusion, 4 distinct documents containing secret and blackmail-worthy information about members of the cult of Set, and, affixed to the underside of a drawer, an incriminating account of High Priestess Stephania's personal failings.

Anna's spell book contains the following spells: audible glamer, color spray, darkness, detect illusion, detect invisibility, Frigg's fraud (see new spells), hypnotism, light, phantasmal force, wall of fog; blindness, blur, brain full of small spiders (see new spells), detect magic, hypnotic pattern, improved phantasmal force, invisibility; continual light, continual darkness, dispel illusion, invisibility 10' radius, non-detection, suggestion; brain full of large spiders (see new spells), confusion, emotion, phantasmal killer.

4-8C: Guildmaster Jisko Grey-Eyes

The third guildmaster, Jisko Grey-Eyes, represents the pleasant, seductive face of evil. He is always reasoned and reasonable, if nevertheless completely willing to order knives in the back. Jisko favors neutral tunics, and appears as a normal, middle-aged, balding man. He is arguably the most powerful of the three guildmasters, since his apparent calmness makes him the spokesman of the Guild. He favors a neutral grey wall color, and a non-descript set of furniture, including a camp bed, spartan desk and chair, two wooden chests, and a set of wooden stocks. Jisko is present 33% of the time. He has two mute bodyguards, Theo and Cleo. One of the two bodyguards is present at all times. Jisko has a concealed compartment (3' diameter) set into the western wall. It is hard to find, and opens by pressing the entire circle inward, after which the door will pop open. Jisko suspects something is wrong with Gunnar (4-10), but isn't sure what it is. GM: Gunnar has been replaced by a doppelganger (see area 4-10).

Inhabitants:

1. Jisko Grey-Eyes (33%), 7th-level male Thorcin fighter: SZ M; AL LE; AC 3; MV 240'; HD 7; HP 69; #AT 3/2; Dmg 4-11 (long sword +2, +3 vs good). Abilities: STR 16, INT 12, WIS 14, DEX 13, CON 16, CHA 14. Possessions: guildmaster's gold ring (200 gp); bracers of AC 5; a ring of feather fall; boots of speed; and a long sword +2, +3 vs good.
2. Cleo (50%), mute 3rd-level male Archontean assassin: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 3; HP 12; #AT 1; Dmg 2-5 (dagger). Abilities: STR 16, INT 15, WIS 9, DEX 15, CON 10, CHA 9. Thief skills: PP 30%, OL 25%, F/RT 20%, MS 15%, HS 10%, HN 10%, CW 85%. Possessions: leather armor +1; shield; 2 daggers. Special attacks: poison; his daggers are coated with "Mortality" poison (see 3-5), which has an onset of 2-8 rounds and inflicts 20 HP damage or half if a save is made.
3. Theo (50%), mute 3rd-level human assassin SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 3; HP 13; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (short sword). Abilities: STR 16, INT 16, WIS 9, DEX 15, CON 11, CHA 9. Thief skills: PP 30%, OL 25%, F/RT 20%, MS 15%, HS 10%, HN 10%, CW 85%. Possessions: leather armor +1; shield; short sword; dust of blinding.

Treasure:

The desk contains 2 mostly finished songs that Jisko has written, a manuscript of the Litany of Light (see Arden Vul books), a map of Level 3 south of 3-69 (excluding areas behind secret doors), and a packet of dust of sneezing and choking. One chest contains 359 gp, 568 sp, 1,673 cp and a set of four copper candelabra (5 gp each). The other holds 4 bolts of silk and 2 of linen cloth, each worth 250 gp. Inside the secret compartment are 5 potions, including extra healing (x2), diminution, heroism, and fire resistance; a packet of 16 octagonal platinum coins; and three large pink pearls (200 gp each).

4-8D: Theodor Trefill, Auctioneer

Although his chamber is smaller than those of the true guildmasters, the fact that Theodor merits a room of his own is a sign of his importance to the Guild of Service. Theodor enjoys luxury. His chamber is painted a soothing cream color; the south wall features an enormous fresco of Theodor's face (8' tall by 5' wide). His furnishings include a low bed set with silk sheets and costly polar bear fleece coverings (450 gp); a large (3'-tall by 5'-wide) mirror in a silver frame (125 gp); two heavy silver candelabras (45 gp each); a tripod of heating (see new magic items); a wardrobe filled with silk clothes (295 gp for the lot); a rack holding Theodor's leather armor +2; 2 leather easy chairs, and a locked wooden chest.

Chest: 1,194 sp, 679 gp, and 113 pp; a pouch with 7 dark green alexandrite gems (100 gp each) and 8 aquamarines (100 gp each); and a set of large (8"-tall), solid gold Archontean chessmen (1,800 gp for the set).

Hidden Compartment: The lid of the chest conceals a narrow compartment protected by a poison needle (save vs poison at -1 or die). The compartment contains three parchment quires listing all sales of slaves for the last 10 years, with name of slave, buyer, and seller (if appropriate). Also in the compartment is a folded sheet of parchment on which Theodor has expressed his belief that something is 'off' with Gunnar. GM: this is a clue that Gunnar has been replaced by a doppelganger (see area 4-10).

Inhabitants:

1. Theodor Trefill: for stats see 4-3. If no auction is under way, he is either here (50%) or in area 4-5 (50%)

Treasure:

See above.

4-9: Store Room and Back Door

This small room is packed with crates and sacks of supplies brought from the outside. Behind a stack of crates carrying dried food and wood is a door leading to a mostly-secret escape route to 4-64 and 4-78.

4-10: Chief Slaver and Guard

The current leader of the Guild of Service is a skinny Wiskin human named Gunnar. Gunnar is in fact a doppelganger; the subterfuge has not yet been detected by the other Set leaders, even though a few - Jisko, Theodor, and Stephania - suspect that something is 'off' with Gunnar. 'Gunnar' speaks with a Wiskin accent, affects loose clothing, and has increasingly absented himself from daily business, closeting himself in his chambers with his inner circle. Gunnar's main chamber is formally decorated in artistic themes representing the cult of Set, with an enormous boar, several scorpions, and a large image of the Set animal. He has comfortable imported rugs, a comfortable hammock, several stuffed leather chairs, and a sideboard. He is 75% likely to be present along with four of his advisors, who bunk in the small room next to his chamber. 'Gunnar' is getting nervous about his deception, and is likely to flee within 3-18 days; before doing so he will attack Jisko and the other Guildmasters and attempt to abscond with as much of their wealth as he can carry.

Inhabitants:

1. 'Gunnar', allegedly a 9th-level human thief, actually a doppelganger (AC 3, due to his ring; MV 90'; HD 4; HP 30, #AT 1; Dmg 1-12; surprise on 1-4; ESP ability; save as 10th-level fighters; immune to charm and sleep). 'Gunnar' has the following possessions: ring of protection +2; necklace of fireballs; potion of fire resistance; 2 potions of rock melting (see new magic items); and the magic spear, Blackthorn (see new magic items).

2. 4 doppelgangers, posing Gunnar's Wiskin fighter bodyguards: SZ M; AL N; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 4; HP 25, 24, 23, 22; #AT 1; Dmg 1-12 or 1-8 (long sword) Special attacks: surprise 4 in 6. Special defenses: immune to charm and sleep; saves as a 10th-level fighter. Special: ESP. Possessions: chain mail; long swords.

Treasure:

The sideboard contains three bottles of fine wine and, attached to the underside of the top, a bag with 65 pearls worth 80 gp each.

4-11: Slave Pit: The Workers

This is the first of the three official slave pits operated by the Guild of Service, containing those judged by the guild to be simple laborers. The Guild accesses the pit through the locked iron door at the end of the diagonal passageway. A slit in the door, openable only from the south side, allows inspection of the pit before the door is opened. A 10'x10' stone ledge extends into the pit itself. On the ledge are two torch holders, a portable gong, and a winch and bucket, used for lowering food and raising slaves for the auction. Two guildsmen armed with halberds stand on the ledge at all times.

The walls of the chamber slope inward on all sides, descending 25' down to the 25'x35' rectangular floor. The walls are slick with moisture that imposes penalties to climbing. On the floor is a 10'x10'x10' stone cistern (directly in front of the ledge). This is normally ¾ full of stagnant but potable water. Once a week the guards will slosh new water into the cistern from the ledge. A small, 2'-diameter hole extends 10' below the floor on its northern edge; the hole acts as a latrine (the latrine reeks with an overpowering, nauseating stench). The pit is otherwise bare of furnishings, as the low-value laboring slaves are allowed to fend for themselves in a survival-of-the-fittest setting.

There are always 15-40 wretched specimens of suffering sprawled in various stages of decrepitude in the pit. As long as the Guild is in operation, 25% of these will be sold off in a given week, to be replaced by 75%-150% of that number of new slaves. The Guild does not actively select the slaves for this task, but rather simply announces a number, and those in the pit struggle to gain a seat in the basket. This Darwinian selection process means that 50% of those in the Pit are perpetually weak and malnourished, and are unlikely to ever be sold; it is the strong, recent arrivals who tend to make it to the block in the Forum.

On the last day of the month four of the weakest slaves are culled from the pit and taken to the Shrine of Set-Sobek (3-91). Their limbs are placed into the mouth of the statue there and the aquamarines gained added to the Vaults of Set (4-24).

Due to the terrible suffering here and the relative lack of attention paid to the inhabitants of the pit, the entire place reeks of sweat, fear, feces, and death. New arrivals dream of escape, and there are some bone clubs and shivs hidden among the shuffling bodies, but the chances for success are remote.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 guildsmen, as 2nd-level male Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 2; HP 18, 16; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (spears, clubs). Possessions: leather armor; spears; and clubs. Special: they have +1 to damage from STR.
2. 10-30 unskilled human slaves (half male, half female): SZ M;

AL varies; AC 10; MV 120'; HD 1-6 HP; HP 6, 5(x7), 4(x7), 3(x7), 2(x7), 1; #AT 1; Dmg by weapon.

3. 2-5 unskilled beastman slaves: SZ S; AL LN; AC 10; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 7, 6, 6, 5, 4; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.
4. 3-5 unskilled goblin slaves: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 5, 4, 3, 3, 2; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.

4-12: Slave Pit: The Skilled

The second slave pit is largely identical to 4-11. That is, a ledge extends into the pit, whose walls slope inwards and downward to flat floor. The floor has a similar water cistern and latrine, but also boasts several bits of cloth used as tents and dividers for the inhabitants. Due to the better conditions and food, this Pit smells less foul and presents less of a hopeless outlook than does 4-11. The lazy guards often leave the door to the corridor propped open.

The Guild selects those with particular mining, stone working, and crafting skills for placement in this pit. As a result there are usually 13-26 skilled slaves awaiting sale in the Forum. They are 80% human and 20% other intelligent race (predominantly goblin). Each week 6 of these slaves are sold, and 5-9 new slaves are added to the pit. The Guild carefully selects those it sells for healthiness and skill, and, as a result, all skilled slaves are fed well.

To determine the skill of any one of these slaves, roll d20:

D20	Skill
1	Armorer
2-3	Bowyer/fletcher
4-6	Hunter
7	Jeweler
8-9	Leather worker
10	Limner/painter
11-12	Mason
13-14	Carpenter
15-18	Miner
19	Tailor/weaver
20	Woodworker

There is a 10% chance per week that the current crop of skilled slaves has an escape plan in the works, involving rope, tent-canvas, and a quick dash for freedom through the doorway.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 guildsmen, as 2nd-level male Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 2; HP 18, 16; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (spears, clubs). Possessions: leather armor; spears; and clubs. Special: they have +1 to damage from STR.
2. 10-20 skilled human slaves: SZ M; AL varies; AC 10; MV 120'; HD 1-6 HP; HP 6, 6, 5(x4), 4(x4), 3(x4), 2(x4), 1, 1; #AT 1; Dmg by weapon.
3. 3-6 skilled goblin slaves: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 5, 4, 3, 3, 2, 2; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.

4-13: Slave Pit: The Valuable

Although boasting broadly similar features, the third pit is a bit more luxurious than the first two. Two ledges extend over the 25'-deep pit, each with a basket and winch. The walls of the chamber are painted in bright geometric patterns, and slope inwards and downward to a flat floor. A 10'x10' stone cistern stands under the northern ledge, filled with much more salubrious water. A 2'-diameter latrine hole is on the western side of the floor, and extends down 10'. The inmates have a decent supply of blankets, two spoons, and a pair of wooden buckets.

The Guild consigns those it considers valuable to this pit; to determine why they are considered valuable, roll d8 on the table below. Each week there is a 33% chance that 2-8 new inmates will be added to the pit, up to a maximum population of 30. At any time there are 10-19 valuable slaves in the pit. They are well treated by the Guild, with extra food and better conditions.

d8	Reason for Value
1-2	Great beauty and/or physical attractiveness
3	Relative of a powerful figure
4-5	Expert skill (roll on table in area 4-12, but the slave has exceptional ability in this skill)
6	Magic user or illusionist
7	Fighter, ranger or paladin
8	Thief or assassin

Despite favorable treatment, the classed characters are always plotting escape. They have accumulated two small knives, a chisel, and approximately 10' of hand-made rope. One of the current valuable slaves has concealed the fact that she is a cleric of Odin and is preparing her spells to aid her fellows in escape.

The north door, at the end of the diagonal hallway, is iron and locked. The south door is reinforced wood and is also locked. No guards are posted in front of it.

Inhabitants:

1. On north ledge, 2 guildsmen, as 2nd-level male Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 2; HP 18, 15; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (spears, clubs). Possessions: leather armor; spears; and clubs. Special: they have +1 to damage from STR.
2. 6-12 non-classed, valuable human slaves: SZ M; AL varies; AC 10; MV 120'; HD 1-6 HP; HP 6, 6, 5, 5, 4, 4, 3, 3, 2, 2, 1, 1; #AT 1; Dmg by weapon.
3. 3-6 classed, valuable human or demi-human slaves: determine using NPC appendix.
4. Bergthora, 3rd-level female Wisikin cleric of Odin: SZ M; AL NG; AC 10; MV 120'; HD 3; HP 10 (max 18); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 16, INT 14, WIS 17, DEX 10, CON 12, CHA 11. Spells: command, create water, resist cold, sanctuary; hold person(x2), silence 15' radius.

Treasure:

Hidden among the blankets is a shawl of warmth (see new magic items), which the inmates share among the most needy of their number.

4-14: Chamber of Discipline

This octagonal room is home to the main torture chamber of the Guild of Service. It is brightly lit with a continual light spell, and features pale blue paint on the walls and ceiling. The chamber possesses two adjustable wooden tables with leather restraints, and a shallow water pool with a sloped side (the latter for water torture). A tripod of heating (see new magic items) stands near the south wall, and two sets of manacles hang from the ceiling. A rack of unpleasant instruments hangs on the northeast wall.

There is a 50% chance that a torture session is under way. If this is the case, the Chief Torturer, Ukamah Gol, is leading it, along with his two assistants. If no session is underway, the two assistants are present, lounging or sleeping. If a torture session is happening and the party is obviously hostile, Ukamah Gol rushes to the doorway to 4-14A and shouts "Klimopercet! I require you!" If Ukamah is allowed to do this, the demon Klimopercet manifests and joins the fray (see 4-14A). The assistants do not know about the demon, but still do not enter 4-14A for any reason.

Inhabitants:

1. Ukamah Gol (50%), 7th-level male Khumus illusionist: SZ M; AL CE; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 7; HP 22; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger). Abilities: STR 9, INT 16, WIS 11, DEX 16, CON 11, CHA 7. Special: infravision (120'); know alignment (1/day); detect lie (1/day); detect magic (1/day). Possessions: dagger; ring of invisibility; pouch with 5 stones of striking (see new magic items); and a fist-sized piece of ivory carved as a human nose (the nose has been imbued with 2 charges of prismatic spray). Spells memorized: change self, detect invisibility, light, wall of fog; brain full of small spiders (see new spells), deafness, improved phantasmal force; fear, paralyzation. Note: Ukamah Gol's four special abilities are granted to him by the demon Klimopercet.
2. 2 assistant torturers, 2nd-level male Thorcin fighters: SZ M; AL CE; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 2; HP 14, 13; #AT 1; Dmg 2-5 (dagger). Possessions: dagger; leather armor. Special: +1 to damage from STR.

Treasure:

The instruments of torture are valuable (250 gp), but only to evil organizations. Tripod of heating (see new magic items).

4-14A: Torturer's Chamber

Ukamah Gol, the Chief Torturer of the Guild of Service, makes his home here. The narrow chamber holds Ukamah's bed, a stool, a chest of clothing, an odd manikin, and countless handmade wooden, bone, and leather shelves of small size. The shelves are jam-packed with candles of all shapes and sizes; their flickering light lends the room a creepy aura.

The east wall (above the bed) is covered with scrawled writing of various sizes and scripts, and in a variety of languages and inks. If studied by one expert in magical writing, it will emerge that each bit of writing says the same thing, regardless of language and size: "Klimopercet Requires Blood." Anyone who does decode this fact should save against spells or be momentarily stunned (1-2 rounds) with the blasphemous nature of the writing and its implications. The area around the bed stinks of the sweet smell of decay and blood, and inspection of the floor under the bed reveals signs of copious amounts of spilled blood.

Ukamah Gol is, in fact, bound to a particularly nasty demon in a weird sort of reciprocal way. The demon, Klimopercet, is bound to this chamber; it requires near daily quantities of fresh blood to keep it from devouring Ukamah Gol. The candles, which detect vaguely of magic, are the visible portions of a charm designed to give protection to the torturer while he sleeps. The two have come to an uneasy agreement, with Ukamah Gol providing Klimopercet with blood, and Klimopercet providing Ukamah Gol with enhanced senses and attributes (and agreeing not to devour him). The strain of this relationship has begun to tell on the torturer, who has begun to practice his trade regardless of its necessity.

If anyone other than Ukamah Gol enters the chamber, the candles will gutter and flicker, and will start to extinguish themselves. This process takes a total of 3-12 rounds. Once the last candle has been extinguished, Klimopercet manifests in the chamber, hungry for blood. The demon's appearance can be prevented by one of two means: 1) actively lighting, and relighting, the candles as they go dark; or 2) formally calling on Klimopercet to abjure this chamber. In the case of the former, it will be kept away so long as some candles remain lit. In the case of the latter, the demon will be banished for 1-3 days. Of course casual or sloppy use of the demon's name will cause him to appear, anxious to drain some prey.

Ukamah Gol has a surprising amount of wealth carefully concealed in an invisible chest placed on an invisible shelf above the western door.

If a hostile party encounters Ukamah Gol in his chamber, he swiftly invokes his demonic ally. Klimopercet can be distracted by significant (2 pints, or 5 hp) amounts of fresh blood. Although Klimopercet understands Archontean, it can only communicate on this plane through a series of long keening tones that rise or fall after 5 seconds of stability (e.g., "Eeeeeeee-ah"). Ukamah Gol doesn't really understand this language, but knows how to placate the demon anyway.

Inhabitants:

1. Ukamah Gol (50%): for stats, see area 4-14.
2. Klimopercet, a blood-seeking demon (see new monsters): SZ M; AL CE; AC 0; MV 60'; HD 9; HP 61; #AT 3; Dmg 2-8/2-8/2-8; MR: 25%. Special attacks: drain blood; stun; darkness 2/day. Special defenses: standard demonic defenses; toxic slime. Although Klimopercet could normally make use of gate to bring allies to his aid, the particular terms of his binding prevent him from using that effect so long as he is in 4-14 or 4-14A.

Treasure:

The mundane effects (including clothing) in the room are ratty and unimpressive. The invisible chest holds 10 platinum bars (10 lb each, 2,500 gp each), 4 lb of valuable spices (200 gp/lb), 4 golden teeth (10 gp each), a potion of extra healing, a potion of growth, a scroll with five illusionist spells (phantasmal force, deafness, rope trick, massmorph, tempus fugit), and Ukamah Gol's spell book.

Ukamah Gol's Spell Book: Audible glamor, change self, chromatic orb, color spray, darkness, detect invisibility, light, phantasmal force, phantom armor, wall of fog; blur, brain full of small spiders (see new spells), deafness, detect magic, improved phantasmal force, invisibility, mirror image, misdirection; continual light, dispel illusion, fear, paralyzation; confusion, massmorph; shadow door.

4-15: Guard Post

A detachment of 3 guildsmen waits in this niche, on permanent call in case of trouble in any of the three slave pits. They have several benches, a rickety table with some playing cards, and a good stock of torches. The guards are lazy and arrogant.

Inhabitants:

1. 3 guildsmen, as 2nd-level male Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 16; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (spears, clubs). Possessions: leather armor; spears; and clubs. Special: they have +1 to damage from STR.

Treasure:

15 torches, a deck of playing cards, and, in the boot of one of the guildsmen, a golden fork worth 5 gp.

4-16: Preparation

This small chamber is where slaves destined for the auction block in 4-2 are prepared. Mainly this means washing, primping, and dressing them. To facilitate this purpose, the floor of the room slopes gently to a drain set in its center. Wall-mounted basins are found on the north and south walls; the fountainhead of each of these basins is a rearing cobra, to which is attached a flexible, hide tube. Using these tubes, the slavers can drench the filthy slaves taken from the pits.

At any moment there is a 25% chance that a group of 8 slaves are being prepared here. The preparation will involve four administrators from the guild and will be overseen by four bored (but well-armed) guildsmen.

Inhabitants:

1. 8 slaves (25% chance): if indicated, roll d6: 1-3: unskilled slaves; 4-5: skilled; 6: valuable. Consult areas 4-11, 4-12, or 4-13 for the appropriate stats.
2. 4 male Archontean administrators of the Guild of Service (25%): SZ M; AL LE; AC 10; MV 120'; HD 1-6 HP; HP 5, 3, 2, 2; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger).
3. 4 guildsmen, as 2nd-level male Archontean fighters (25% chance): SZ M; AL LE; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 16; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (spears, clubs). Possessions: leather armor; spears; and clubs. Special: they have +1 to damage from STR.

4-17: Plaza of the Guild

This impressive square hall provides access between the Forum, the precincts of the Guild, and the Long Stair (4-19). The roof of the plaza is 50' above the floor, is sheathed in marble squares, and culminates in a roundel at the center of the arched roof. The north wall features several impressive stone carvings: two are colossi of humans with the head of a Set animal, albeit ones who are turned to the center of the wall, and are wielding whips; these figures are 40' tall and carved in half-round. Between the two menacing Set animal figures is a smaller (20'-tall) image of a naked human crouching down, with arms over his head for protection from the whips. These statues are painted brightly. The eyes of the humanoid Set animals glitter when light is produced, and are in fact 500 gp pieces of amber (total of 4). Prying them out will incur a dreadful curse from Set himself (GM's choice).

The plaza is lit with torches, and also shares some of the light from the Forum.

At all times the plaza is guarded by four well-armed guildsmen. One of them holds the key to the locked door in area 4-150.

Inhabitants:

1. 4 guildsmen, as 2nd-level male Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 16, 15; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (spears, clubs). Possessions: leather armor; spears; and clubs. Special: they have +1 to damage from STR.

4-18: Pit of the Damned

This is the infamous fourth slave pit operated by the Guild of Service. In essence it is the pit into which the Guild tosses those who have become too weak to merit being sold and/or those who have proven too troublesome or difficult. The locked iron door leads to a twisting stone staircase that descends about 40' before opening into a dark landing. Rising from the pit, which lies 40' below the landing, is a foul reek of excrement and decay. The pit contains 5-30 emaciated, starving, and cannibalistic wretches. When a slave has been deemed worthless, the guardsmen will carefully unlock the door, proceed down the stairs, and toss the individual into the pit. Most of these unfortunates came from the Pit of the Laborers, but at any given time 25% will also be adventurers (in a relatively more healthy state). An ancient stone cistern in the southwest corner contains a few inches of rancid water; the strongest inhabitants defend this resource ferociously. Moisture from the walls will add 1" of liquid to the cistern every week. The floor of the pit is covered with a 3'-deep layer of bones, picked clean by the starving inmates.

Inhabitants:

5-30 poor souls of all races and types.

Treasure:

A scattering of 23 sp and, strangely enough, a large and beautiful beryl (500 gp).

4-19: The Long Stair

The Long Stair is well known to all denizens of the Halls as a symbol of slavery and misery. Providing direct access to the precincts of the Guild of Service, the stairs traverse almost 400' in length and descend an equal distance. They are carved out of the bare rock, and are pitted and worn by the tread of countless feet.

Every 30' along the stairs is a carved face, twice human size, with realistic eyes, nose, and mouth. Each face is twisted into a rictus of agony or desperation, and each one is different. If one puts one's ear close to the mouth of any face, the sound of desperate wailing and ululation can be heard. In one of the nostrils (10% cumulative chance per face inspected until found) is stuffed a folded-up piece of parchment; the parchment contains a set of written instructions to a 'great treasure' within the halls [GM's choice, but perhaps directions from the tomb of Marius (6-154) to the tomb of Lucius Cornelius scriptor (6-130 to 6-135)]. Also on the parchment are some cryptic notes: "Ekezalion," "R3L2R7L2" and "Fear=Death." These notes are gibberish, unless the GM wishes to assign them meaning.

Secret Door (west, leading to 4-101A): The door is normal to detect, and opens by pushing a stone panel inwards.

4-20: Guild Members' Recreation

This chamber is given over to the recreational perversions of the members of the Guild of Service. A wooden bar stands close to the east wall, where No-Thumbs serves tankards of Jobim's lichen ale (1 sp/pint). Ten round wooden tables with benches and chairs fill most of the center of the room. The east wall features a huge hearth, which is usually lit by a continual light spell (as fuel is hard to come by). The south wall is cloaked by a set of curtains, divided into 8'x8' romance cubicles. Unfortunate slaves provide 'hospitality' to guild members in these squalid and relatively public cubicles. A number of off-duty guildsmen are always present, dicing, drinking, gambling, and generally relaxing. The walls are covered in cheap whitewash and feature layers of graffiti, most of it pornographic and repulsive.

Inhabitants:

1. 1-3 male and 5-7 female Thorcin hospitality slaves: use stats for skilled slaves (see area 4-12). These slaves are handsome/pretty, and should be considered to have CHA 14-17.
2. 3-8 guildsmen, as 2nd-level male Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 2; HP 18, 17(x3), 16(x3), 15; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (spears, clubs). Possessions: leather armor; spears; and clubs. Special: they have +1 to damage from STR.
3. 2-7 guildsmen, as 2nd-level male Archontean thieves: SZ M; AL LE; AC 6; MV 120'; HD 2; HP 10, 10, 9, 9, 8, 8, 7; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger) or 1-6 (short sword). Thief skills: PP 35%, OL 34%, F/RT 25%, MS 21%, HS 15%, HN 10%, CW 86%. Possessions: leather armor; daggers; short swords. Special: they have DEX 16 on average.
3. No-Thumbs, 4th-level male Thorcin fighter and bartender: SZ M; AL NE; AC 10; MV 120'; HD 4; HP 27; #AT 1; Dmg 1-5 (club). Abilities: STR 15, INT 13, WIS 11, DEX 7, CON 11, CHA 9. Because he has no thumbs, the bartender is -2 to hit, and -1 to damage.

4-21: Inspection Point

A heavily armed squad of Set guardsmen stands guard in the corridor just north of the Darkness of Set (4-22); their job is to inspect all those seeking entrance to the Forum. If the magic mouth at 4-22 is triggered, the squad will be ready with spears and nets to greet all comers. Those displaying a personalized travel pass can proceed immediately, as can those known personally to the sergeant of the guard. All others must submit to an inspection and toll collection (10 gp per person). All persons must state their names, professions, and reasons for seeking entrance to the Forum. Evasiveness or arrogance causes Sgt. Arethas to empty every pack and sack, while taking note of everything of value. Those who are confident but humble can get away with a quick iteration of their personal possessions and of any trade goods they are carrying.

The patrol members are dressed in red Set armor (see Arden Vul items) and each wears a set of magical eyes of Set (see new magic items). The eyes of Set appear as huge goggles set with strange, greenish, crystalline lenses; the effect renders the wearers somewhat intimidating.

The squad has two benches and a locked wooden chest, along with a barrel of water.

Inhabitants:

1. Arethas, a Set sergeant (see new monsters), as a 5th-level Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL LE; AC 3; MV 60'; HD 5; HP36; #AT 1, Dmg 3-8 (mace +1), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: Set armor (see Arden Vul items) and wooden shield; footman's mace +1; potion of healing, spear; light crossbow with 20 bolts.
2. 6 Set guardsmen (see new monsters), as 2nd-level Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 17, 16, 15, 12; #AT 1, Dmg 2-7 (mace), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: red scale mail and wooden shield; footman's maces; spears; light crossbows with 20 bolts.

Treasure:

Eyes of Set x7 (see new magic items), potion of healing.

4-22: The Darkness of Set

At the top of the Stair of Commerce (4-105) is an area of magical darkness, known to all as the Darkness of Set. The area of darkness covers the entire 20'x20' area of the turn in the stairway, and can be seen from 75' away due to the brightness of the rest of the stairs. Hidden within the darkness is a cult statue of Set; many visitors pass it without ever knowing of its existence. A 5'-square brass plaque is inset on the east wall just before the area of darkness. The magical darkness can only be dispelled by a dispel magic cast at the 12th-level or higher.

Approaching the Darkness: If anyone has approached within 10' of the Darkness, a permanent magic mouth placed on the statue of Set declaims the following, in stentorian tones, "Set accepts the reverence of the humble. Approach as a supplicant, and be spared! Approach with hostility and be scourged!" The voice speaks in Mithric, and almost always serves to alert the guards at 4-21.

The Plaque with the Laws of the Forum: The large brass plaque contains formal text in a clear, Mithric majuscule. It contains a preamble and then the full text of the Laws of the Forum (for which, see 4-2). The preamble reads: Visitors to the Forum shall advance five paces, turn to the right, and advance another five paces before submitting to inspection. Hostile actions will be met with a swift and severe response. Death, loss, or servitude is the just fate of all who trifle with Lord Set or neglect to adhere to his most reasonable laws.

Statue of Set: Within the Darkness is an 8'-tall cult statue of Set in his Set animal form. Due to the perpetual darkness surrounding him, it is entirely possible that the statue will be missed in the dark. If identified, and somehow illuminated, it is revealed as a richly gilded and painted statue in classic pose, with citrine eyes (300 gp each), onyx ears (75 gp each), and ivory teeth (25 gp each, total of 20). Attempts to despoil the statue are met by a second permanent magic mouth, which shouts in Archontean "To me! Vandals! Thieves! To me!" as well as by electric shocks worth 1-4 damage per round (it takes 1 round to pry out one valuable item). The cries of the second magic mouth draw immediate support from the guards at 4-21, who, due to their eyes of Set (see new magic items), can see into the darkness.

4-23: First Mystery of Set: the Black Boar

This hall houses the first of the three Mysteries of Set, that of the Black Boar. This mystery recreates one of the legendary stories of Set. When the other gods began to cavil at his forceful deeds and to levy restrictions on his actions, Set recognized that he needed a way to operate outside of their prying gaze. Changing into one of his favorite forms, a colossal black boar, Set leaped forth and swallowed the sun, thus preventing the others from seeing his form or his deeds and, incidentally, plunging the world into chaos. Only after the other gods agreed to cease interfering with his affairs did the Set boar belch forth the sun.

As the first mystery, it is open to all. For this reason the mystery of the Black Boar is one of the most commonly visited chambers within the precincts of Set. Indeed, newcomers to the Forum will frequently be urged to visit the mystery.

Frequency: The mystery occurs every hour on the hour. Those wishing to witness the mystery begin gathering 15 minutes before the hour under the overhang of the Porch of Scrutiny (4-2F). Two lazy guardsmen with polearms stand in front of the door to 4-23, preventing entry until the appropriate moment.

The Mystery of the Black Boar: At the stroke of the hour, the guardsmen open the door to 4-23 and the believers and the curious crowd into the chamber of the mystery. The guards then shut the doors, and the celebrants are left standing in the darkness contemplating a dull globe of yellow light that bobs above their heads. At five minutes past the hour a disembodied voice, nasal and reedy, proclaims slowly in Archontean, "The Sun God lorded over the lands, confident in his power and his distance from earth." At that very moment the globe of light begins to glow with greater intensity until, three minutes later, a new voice proclaims in deep, charismatic tones "But Lord Set disdains arrogance without strength. And so he assumed his favored form and Lo! [a rumble of drums and a crash of cymbals], Lord Set devoured the Sun God!" Immediately bright light fills the rest of the chamber. First-time visitors usually gasp to see a huge black boar standing on an 8'-tall platform in front of them. Immediately the boar lunges forward and upward as its huge jaws grab the orb of light and devour it. The boar then lurches backward amid terrible sounds of rending, groaning and grinding. The stentorian voice ends the ritual in these words "And thus Lord Set triumphs over the arrogant and the foolish!"

After the five-minute ceremony, visitors are permitted to mill about in the hall of the mystery for another ten minutes before being ushered back to the Forum.

Description of the Hall: The hall is 25' tall and sheathed on all surfaces by panels of black marble. The boar (see below) sits on an 8'-tall rectangular slab of granite.

Two 10'x10' niches fenced in with iron bars are carved out of the western wall of the chamber. Each niche is a pen for an enormous wild boar. The boars slaver, grunt, and foam for the entire time that visitors are present. Should a group of visitors prove hostile or unduly disrespectful, a Set acolyte will drop out of the boar construct and attempt to release the boars. The boars attack anyone and everyone in sight or scent range. Amid the dirty straw of one of the pens is a torn piece of parchment with a fragment of a treasure map.

At the east end of the hall, on either side of the entrance tunnel, are two semi-circular balconies positioned 15' above the floor. Narrow tunnels lead from the balconies to area 4-2F. Two Set guardsmen, armed with crossbows and wearing eyes of Set (see new magic items), stand on each ledge during each iteration of the mystery; should combat break out, one of the four will rush to alert the Forum while the other three fire bolts at the malefactors.

The Boar: The boar is 8' long by 5' wide by 8' tall, and is cleverly constructed of wood, wire, and plaster. It is painted a matte black, but has numerous bits of colored glass and fragments of bone embedded in its surface. Operation of the boar is partly magical and partly mechanical. Due to the enchantments (e.g., the permanent magic mouths), the entire thing detects as magic. Two Set acolytes are responsible for operating the boar during performance of the mystery; they do this from a cramped chamber within the boar itself. Inside, the acolytes push and pull levers, activate smoke and magical effects, and generally ensure a dramatic, if slightly cheesy, display. The tusks of the boar are ivory and very large (245 gp each).

Secret Door (west): This door is difficult to detect (1 in 8) and thus remains unknown to the cult of Set. It opens by rapping five times in rapid succession on the door itself.

Inhabitants:

- 2 Set acolytes (see new monsters), as 3rd-level Archontean clerics of Set: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 60'; HD 3; HP 19, 17; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (mace) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Possessions: Set armor (see Arden Vul items); footman's mace; light crossbow; acolyte's was stick (see new magic items); and a silver holy symbol of Set (10 gp). Spells prayed for: command, cure light wounds, curse (reverse of bless), protection from good; hold person, silence 15' radius.
- 4 Set guardsmen (see new monsters), as 2nd-level Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 15, 12; #AT 1, Dmg 2-7 (mace), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: red scale mail and wooden shield; footman's maces; spears; light crossbows with 20 bolts.
- 2 enormous wild boars: SZ M; AL N; AC 7; MV 150'; HD 4+3; HP 29, 27; #AT 1; Dmg 3-12. Special attacks: fights for 2-5 rounds after 0 HP reached, or until -7 HP is reached.

Treasure:

Scrap of a treasure map; two ivory tusks (245 gp each); eyes of Set x4 (see new magic items).

4-23A: Portcullis

A floor-to-ceiling iron portcullis blocks the passage here, although a 3'x8' door is embedded in the framework. The door is locked, and keys are held only by select priests.

4-24: Vaults of Set

The door to the vaults is iron, with three locks. Different persons hold the keys to the locks: Helena of Archontos (4-2G), the current Duty Deacon (4-2), and the trio of Forum Inspectors (4-2). Without the keys, each lock is hard to pick (-10% each).

The 15'-tall vault is lined with lead from floor to ceiling. Stacks of crates, sacks, kegs, and iron lock-boxes fill the chamber. A few large art objects are also stored here. On the east wall, next to the door, stands a 'statue' of a boar-headed human in a kilt, with spear and club. It is an Archontean animated construct – bipedal boar (see new monsters), and it will attack any who do not display one of the three keys used to open the door to the vault. Due to the lead lining, teleportation and scrying do not work in the vault.

The vault is filled with wealth in the form of coins and goods. One source of this treasure is the liquid wealth that the cult uses to pay its guardsmen, reward informers and those bringing information, and purchase bulk supplies from within or without the Halls. The other source is wealth stored in the vaults by traders and by third-party depositors.

Crates: About 30 wooden crates averaging 3'x4'x2' are stacked in the central area of the vault. The crates typically hold bulk items like apples, salted pork, dried meat, raw spices, dried mushrooms, charcoal and other carbon sources, iron ingots, and so forth. About ¾ of these crates have already been purchased by the cult of Set for its own uses.

Sacks: Coming in 5-, 10-, or 20-lb varieties, the approximately 50 sacks hold fresh vegetables, fruits, flour, cornmeal, and salt. Most of these have already been purchased by the cult of Set from merchants.

Kegs: Around a huge, 120-gallon barrel of ale are stacked ten standard (30-gallon) barrels of beer, ale, and mead (100 gp each), as well as twelve 5-gallon casks of brandy (100 gp each). All of these liquors have been purchased by the cult of Set.

Art Pieces: About a dozen pieces of large potentially valuable objects are stored at the west end of the vault. See the table on the next page for contents.

Lock-boxes: 30 iron lockboxes are filed on a set of open shelves along the north wall. Twenty of the boxes are 3' long, 2' wide, and 1' tall; ten more are 6' long, 3' wide and 2' tall. The traders and others who need to store substantial wealth rent these lockboxes from Helena of Archontos (4-2G). Currently ten of the smaller and two of the larger boxes are in use; the others have their keys in the locks. See the table on the next page for contents.

Art Pieces Stored in the Vaults of Set

Owner	Description	Value	Notes
Set cult	A 5'x9' red and green geometric carpet woven of silk	235 gp	Weighs 20 lb
Set cult	A pair of large tapestries depicting the third mystery (4-111)	350 gp each	They weigh 40 lb each
Set cult	Six tarnished silver candelabra, each 5' tall	155 gp each	Bulky
Set cult	Marble statue of a Wiskin warrior	450 gp	The warrior wields a two handed-sword over his head. His face is a rictus of battle frenzy
Horace Trych (4-2D)	A portable altar made of ebony and ivory, 4'x3'x3'.	375 gp	The altar is not devoted to a specific deity
Galadnor Half-Elven (4-2G)	A set of carved oaken furniture: a sideboard, a scroll case and a low oval table	300 gp per piece
Gunnar (4-10)	A suit of imperial field plate armor (See Arden Vul items)	5,000 gp
Yoburra the true varumani (4-101)	A 4'-tall granite statue of a snake squeezing a human to death	275 gp	He plans to present it to Varboka, the troll thegn (7-30)
Leila of Narsileon (4-2)	A 3'-tall statue depicting a pukel-mander (see new magic items). The statue is carved out of rosewood	345 gp	Chiseled into the base of the statue are these words in Elvish: "Beware these crouching monsters. They may be found in hidden caves along the chasm" [GM: a hint to areas 2-49, 6-107, etc.]
Tikun Thane (SL3-2)	A life-sized statue of Tikun Thane himself, carved out of marble. The workmanship is mediocre	175 gp	Tikun Thane is not pleased with the work, which is why it is stored here.
Kerbog Khan (SL12-25)	A cherry-wood dining table, with removable legs and a hawk inlaid into the center in lapis	525 gp	The piece is bulky and large (a 5'-diameter oval). The hawk is a symbol of Horus
Edric Who Drinks Water (see Level 8, random encounter tables)	A 6'x3' piece of high-tensile plasteel. On the rougher side is sketched a map showing the route from 6-5 to 6-154	45 gp	The item is a piece of the Beacon; the map is accurate, but does not reveal the cave-in between 6-157 and 6-154

Lock Boxes in the Vaults of Set

Owner	SZ	Contents	Notes
Helena (4-2G)	S	6,702 cp, 10 obsidian gems (10 gp each), 10 star rose quartz gems (50 gp each), 10 chrysoberyls (100 gp each), 2 star sapphires (1,000 gp) and a black sapphire (5,000 gp)
Helena (4-2G)	S	3,491 sp and 4,033 gp
Galadnor Half-Elven (4-2D)	S	1,456 sp and 2,982 gp; Curios: 1) an orange Thothian ceremonial headdress; 2) a loose folio from a copy of the Litany of Light (see Arden Vul books); 3) a pair of glass activation squares - blue and yellow (see Thothian teleportation rings in new magic items); 4) a mummified hand of Juba, the goblin slave-king; 5) a stone tablet inscribed with this phrase in Mithric: "To find the holy objects, seek the resting place of the scriptor;" 6) a rudishva lesser power supply (see new technological items); 7) a brown rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items); 8) a copper necklace set with heqeti teeth (35 gp); 9) a packet of blue haze lichen (see new flora). Magic items: silver Sorian eye (see new magic items), necklace of adaptation ; stone of controlling earth elementals ; and a periapt of wound closure	The folio is useless without more information, but reveals the existence of this text. Juba the goblin-king is a legendary figure; his paw would bring up to 500 gp from King Weskenim (SL4-22). The tablet hints at the location of artifacts of Marius in the tomb of Lucius the Scriptor (6-130 to 6-135)

Horace Trych (4-2D)	S	The dagger of Marius (1,500 gp; although its authenticity is questionable); a pouch of black efreeti sand (see new magic items) from the City of Brass (350 gp as a curio - Horace doesn't know it's magical); a solid copper statuette of a dragon, with the name Isadora inscribed on the bottom (250 gp); Sortian eyes (see new magic items): 2 silver, 3 gold, and 2 sapphire; a Sortian baculus (see new magic items, not for sale), and a rare vellum Codex Priscii with information about the history of the Sortians (not for sale).	The dagger is a fake, but hard to demonstrate as such; the statuette is a hint as to the identity of Priscus Pulcher's companion, Isadora (see SL11-19)
Robben the Fat (4-2D)	S	234 sp, 79 gp, and a gilded sheaf of wheat (133 gp)
Skellan Skindros (4-2D)	S	533 gp; 234 sp; three bottles of 100-year old Emperor's Choice brandy (400 gp each); a flask of grain alcohol; and potions of animal control, flying, and plant control.
Tikun Thane (SL3-2)	S	3,114 gp; three collars and skull plates for the Disciplined (see new monsters); two scrolls, each containing the same three spells, namely the thane's betrayal, the thane's collar, and the thane's vengeful veil (see new spells for all three)
Thoros the Black	S	4,613 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items), plus a deep blue spinel (475 gp) and 4 aquamarines (100 gp each).	Thoros is an adventurer (F5); his lease on this box is up in 3-18 days. He can be placed wherever the GM likes
Kallion the White (8-15)	S	1,763 gp; a silver pendant necklace hung with citrines (1,150 gp); a scroll of passwall ; a wand of detect magic (13 charges)	Kallion is an adventurer who died recently in the Nether Reaches (8-15). His lease is up in 3-12 days.
??	S	A 5-lb platinum bar (1,250 gp); an explanation of how to access the tomb of Marius through the ceiling of 6-145; a text that accurately details the racial features of the rudishva, varumani, kaliyani and varuda (see new monsters for each); a curled scroll ; a pouch with 95 gp worth of powdered silver dust	The owner of this box is unknown, and has not been heard from in over a year. Due to an accounting glitch, Helena has not yet confiscated its contents.
Hazlitt One-Eye (4-2D)	L	5,672 gp; long sword +1, +2 vs. magic-using and enchanted creatures; broadsword +3, frost brand; 12 arrows +2; mace +2
Knut the Lucky (See Level 8, random encounter tables)	L	Spear +3; a shield -2 missile attractor ; a carpet depicting a male human magic user riding a gold dragon (1,050 gp); and a cloak dweomered to appear magic but without any special powers	Knut paid up for 3 years of rent on his box, but has not been seen in 8 months. He is lost in the Nether Reaches; see random encounter charts for Level 8.

Wealth of Set: Three enormous stone chests (5'x5'x5') with complex, poison-trapped locks sit against the east wall. These chests contain the liquid wealth that the Set cult (mostly) uses to purchase goods. Keys to the chests are held by Stephania (4-51), Helena of Archontos (4-2G), Gunnar (4-10), and Belisarius (4-47).

Chest #1: 36,712 cp stacked in neat columns; a bolt of purple silk embroidered with elephants (225 gp)

Chest #2: 11,578 sp; 3,456 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items); 6,789 gp

Chest #3: 726 aquamarines worth 100 gp each; two 5-lb cones of sugar (66 gp each); four 10-lb ingots of platinum (2,500 gp each)

Inhabitants:

1. 1 Archontean animated construct – bipedal boar (see new monsters): SZ L; AL N; AC 2; MV 60'; HD 6; HP 39; #AT 2;

Dmg 2-8/2-8; MR 25%. Special defenses: immune to elemental magic, poison, and immune to mind-affecting spells; +1 or better weapons to hit.

4-25: Traders' Square and Well

This arched chamber is 20' tall and brightly lit with continual light. It contains numerous stone benches and a 100'-deep well filled with slightly musty but potable water. Any of the inhabitants of 4-26 through 4-35 might be encountered here. Spy holes are cleverly concealed in the stonework of the north wall; the holes allow those in 4-36 to observe all activities in this area.

4-26: Hazlitt One-Eye (see 4-2D)

This large chamber contains a large feather bed, an extra-large iron lock-box, an armoire, a chamber pot, a leather stuffed chair, and a wooden desk and chair. To the basic set-up Hazlitt has added a fine oriental-style carpet (140 gp), a shelf holding two primitive telescopes (100 gp each), and a bust of himself in marble (20 gp). Hazlitt keeps his best items in his large lockbox at 4-24.

Several spy holes are cleverly concealed in the stonework of the north wall; the holes allow those in 4-36 to observe all activities in this area.

Inhabitants:

1. Hazlitt One-Eye: for stats, see 4-2D.

4-27: Helena of Archontos

This chamber has the same basic furnishings as Hazlitt's (4-26). To these Helena has added a pair of comfortable leather armchairs, a wooden screen painted with scenes of the tales of Larel One-Eye (see 3-46 and Tales of Larel One-Eye in Arden Vul books), and a tapestry showing the 5th labor of Arden (see SL13-10E). Helena has a humidor filled with mildly narcotic 'tobacco'. Her desk has a locked drawer, in which are found accounts for the cult of Set for the past month; these might be worth up to 500 gp to the imperial spymaster in Narsileon. The top of the desk boasts a jade inkwell (55 gp), an ivory blotter (60 gp), and a sheaf of fine parchment (2 gp). A battered urn made of copper (or so it seems) and filled with six carved walking sticks sits by the door; the urn is actually tarnished gold (155 gp) and has a scene from the 3rd labor of Arden embossed on one side (see SL13-10C). Hidden inside the urn is a pouch filled with gold dust (245 gp).

Several spy holes are cleverly concealed in the stonework of the north wall; the holes allow those in 4-36 to observe all activities in this area.

Inhabitants:

1. Helena of Archontos: for stats, see 4-2G.

4-28: Robben the Fat (see 4-2D)

This small chamber contains a normal bed, an armoire, a writing table, and a basic chair. To this basic set-up Robben has added a humidor and a pile of hides and skins on which he 'entertains' his female visitors.

Robben keeps a stash of gold coins (55 gp) buried in his mattress. The rest of the room is filthy and cluttered with bits of food and loose clothing.

Inhabitants:

1. Robben the Fat: for stats, see 4-2D.

2. 1 female Thorcin pleasure slave (50% chance): SZ M; AL N; AC 10; MV 120'; HD 1-6 HP; HP 2; #AT 1; Dmg by weapon.

4-29: Horace Trych (see 4-2D)

The basic furnishings are identical to those found in 4-28. Horace has attached a banner featuring the Great Boar of Set to the wall above his bed (as part of his cover). He also has a beautiful polar-bear fleece (450 gp) for a rug, and a marble bust of Licinus Bonus Apsus, one of the ancient claustral priors of the cult of Thoth. Horace knows the bust is magic, but has not yet figured out what it does.

The desk contains a (fake) diary that Horace maintains scrupulously. The diary reflects Horace's belief in how a stereotypically evil person might write and think; that is, it is full of derisory accounts of weaklings and the need to exert power over all kinds of other persons. It also articulates a philosophy of lawful obedience to power, no matter what that power chooses to do.

Horace's true views may be detected in a lead casket imbued with permanent invisibility and affixed to the ceiling above the foot of Horace's bed.

Inhabitants:

1. Horace Trych: for stats, see area 4-2D.

Treasure:

While most of Horace's wealth is stored at 4-24, the bust of Licinus is a head of Thoth (see new magic items). In the casket are 25 pp, an amulet of life protection, and a gold holy symbol of Mitra (50 gp). The diary may appear valuable and incriminating, but will be quickly exposed as phony by anyone of LE alignment who spends more than a day reading it.

4-30: Servants' Dormitory

In the old days, traders were often accompanied by numerous servants, and this 20'x30' room was designated for their use. It is plain stone, outfitted with eight rickety wooden bunk beds, several sets of wooden pegs set into the walls, and two large wooden chests (lacking locks). Two battered pitchers stand on an equally battered wooden table near the door - one of the pitchers smells strongly of urine. Currently only one bed is occupied, by Asbjorn, servant of Birgir (4-2D). Asbjorn is Birgir's cousin and resents being treated as a servant. He possesses two sets of nice clothing, and has a pouch of filched gemstones hidden under his mattress (2-12 stones worth 10-100 each). Due to his discontent and loneliness, Asbjorn is willing to listen to offers from those who cultivate his friendship.

Inhabitants:

1. Asbjorn: for stats, see 4-2D.

4-31: Galadnor Half-Elven (see 4-2D)

The basic furnishings are the same as those found in 4-28. Galadnor has added a bronze tripod of heating (see new magic items) for light and heat, as well as three large wall tapestries depicting pastoral scenes. The floor boasts woven reed mats dyed a pleasant purple color.

Underneath the bed is a small, locked wooden chest, with a poison needle trap. In the chest is Galadnor's spell book; a pouch with 149 gp; a lump of raw jade (110 gp), a fist-sized lump of raw arcana carefully wrapped in felt (see new magic items), and scrolls of power word stun, irresistible dance, and planar punishment (see new spells). Affixed to the underside of the desk is a small pouch with incriminating documents that reveal Marius Junienos's (4-56) addiction to a psychotropic drug (worth 250 gp to High Priestess Stephania at 4-51). The magic items she has available for sale are found in her lockbox at 4-24.

Inhabitants:

1. Galadnor Half-Elven: for stats see 4-2D.

Treasure:

In addition to items listed above, the chamber holds Galadnor's spell book.

Galadnor's Spell Book: Alarm, burning hands, charm person, comprehend languages, detect magic, enlarge, identify, light, magic missile, read magic, shield, ventriloquism, write; detect good, forget, knock, locate object, mirror image, strength, wizard lock; clairvoyance, phantasmal force, protection from normal missiles, slow, suggestion, tiny hut, tongues.

4-32: Birgir the Gem-Trader (see 4-2D)

The room features the same basic furnishings as 4-28. To them Birgir has added a hammock and a large potted palm tree from which hang bits of string, colored glass, and a pair of metal gauntlets.

Since Birgir does not trust the security of the Vault of Set, he has his own lockbox (2'x1'x1') hidden under his bed. It contains brightly colored, loose clothing, a jeweler's loupe and other tools, a fine mancala set with moonstones for stones (225 gp); 5 aquamarines (100 gp each), and fifteen azurite gems (10 gp each). Birgir keeps his big stones buried in the palm-tree pot: two 500 gp peridots, one 1,500 gp fire-yellow topaz, and six 250 gp corals of unusual size. Hidden in the dirt are five rot grubs; while 'gardening', Birgir uses gauntlets to avoid the grubs.

Inhabitants:

1. 5 rot grubs: SZ S; AC 9; MV 10'; HD 1 HP; HP 1, 1, 1, 1; #AT 0; Dmg nil. Special attacks: burrow into flesh, and kill in 1-3 turns.
2. Birgir: for stats, see area 4-2D.

4-33: Skellan Skindros (see 4-2D)

The chamber boasts the same basic furnishings as 4-28. Skellan has a simple alchemical apparatus set up on the desk, as well as a wooden wine-rack with space for 24 bottles.

In addition to 24 bottles of foul home-brewed wine (1 gp each), Skellan keeps six bottles of fine brandy (50 gp each) and four bottles of superior wine (75 gp) in his room. He stores ingredients for mixing potions and poisons in the drawer of his desk, along with 3 powerful poisons and potions of hill giant strength, levitation, and sweet water.

Inhabitants:

1. Skellan Skindros: for stats, see 4-2D.

4-34: Currently Uninhabited Chamber

Same basic furnishings as 4-28.

4-35: Currently Uninhabited Chamber

Same basic furnishings as 4-28.

4-36: Forgotten Spy Tunnels

These narrow corridors provided the ancient spymasters of Set with a means of spying on the trader's square area. Spy-holes provide clear viewing of activities in 4-25, 4-26 and 4-27. Since they have not been used in centuries, the tunnels are cold, dark, and extremely dusty (2"-thick layer of dust). Access to the tunnels and to the spymasters' lair (4-37 to 4-39) is provided by secret doors leading to 4-23 and to the corridor connecting 4-61 to 4-48.

Secret Door (north): The door is small (4'x2.5') and easy to locate from this side (1 in 4 chance). It opens by knocking four times in rapid succession on the door.

Secret Door (east): The door is normally sized and easy to locate from this side (1 in 4 chance). It opens by knocking five times on the door itself.

4-37: Forgotten Chamber

This former planning chamber was the seat of the original Set cult's considerable spy networks during the glory days of Arden Vul. Two wooden frames occupy the western wall; each has a number of parchment maps pinned to them. A wooden table some 10' square occupies the center of the room, around which are several benches. A cabinet against the south wall has four shelves. The east wall has a number of wooden pegs set into it, on one of which is a battered cloak. Several candelabra rest on the table, along with 1-8 more maps, plus 1-4 writs and a few blank sheets of parchment.

The maps are of great potential value. The GM should decide in advance which areas they represent, but each should contain good information on a set of about 20 rooms from one of Levels 1-5. Certain areas should be off limits (e.g., the midnight road), but the rest should be fair game as a reward to a party that manages to locate this hoard.

The shelves of the cabinet are filled with a variety of useful things for a spymaster: small boxes containing wooden counters of different colors and shapes; a supply of parchment, quills, and ink (the latter is dry); 100 carnelians of low quality (10 gp each); several sticks of sealing wax plus some fragments of sticks; a variety of stolen signet rings (worth 10-100 gp each), etc.

4-38: Long Dead Spymaster

Here lived the spymaster for the old cult of Set. When the end of the city was nigh, the last master, Constantius Silvius, chose to seal his secrets away and commit suicide rather than allow generations of intelligence to be pillaged by forces unknown. Constantius's chambers are relatively spartan. A large and somewhat unsettling portrait of the spy-lord stares from the south wall. This portrait depicts a gaunt man in white-face with red cheek-spots; he has a pronounced Roman nose, several warts on his forehead, and piercing eyes suggestive of cold intelligence. The room is furnished with a now-crumbling four-poster bed, an easy chair, a writing desk, a scroll case, a water barrel (now dry), a chest of faded but still usable Set ceremonial robes, and a small table with a dining service in platinum (800 gp).

Sitting in the chair of the writing desk is a desiccated corpse that still grips one of the platinum goblets; this is Constantius, who drank hemlock and died as the city fell into chaos. His last testament lies before him, but it is strangely personal and emotional, with numerous underlined words and strangely capitalized letters (as if it were a 19th-century romantic novel). The information is breathless, describing Constantius's lament over the decline and fall of Arden Vul, over the futility of his life, and over his regrets at tasks left unaccomplished. One might find the testament strangely incongruous with the portrait of the hard-edged man of secrets who stares down from the wall. Indeed, the testament contains nothing useful because it is, in fact, written in simple code: the underlining indicates a space in the message (i.e., it should not be read), while the capitalized letters, if removed and unscrambled, reveal a message. A kind GM might allow a PC to roll 4d8 under INT to detect the secret. It reads (in the secret tongue of the priests of Set): "To my successor: Seek the documents in the room opposite. They are revealed by invoking the Black Boar. Speak Thrice Five."

Treasure:

There are 3-12 scrolls with incriminating (but out-of-date) information about imperial officials and families. These have a historical value to an imperial collector, and they could serve as a means of planting a seed for a quest involving current political factions.

The platinum dining service (3 goblets, ewer, plate, silverware, serving bowl) is worth 800 gp, although one of the goblets (the one in Constantius's hands) is still coated with poison.

Finally, Constantius's robes could be sold to the current Set cult as historical or religious treasures for 100 gp.

4-39: Lesser Conference Room

This chamber is quite similar in its furnishings to 4-37, save for the absence of specific maps and documents. An invisible chest is hidden under the middle of the conference table. Two corpses – the murdered servants of Constantius – are slumped in the room. One of them has risen as a wraith, which attacks fearlessly unless intruders invoke the black boar in some way. Speaking the words 'black boar' in any context not merely causes the wraith to retreat, it also reveals the chest beneath the table (although one must still look beneath the table to see it).

The chest is made of a strange smooth grey metal (plasteel), with a clear panel on its front. It is a rudishva relic and can only be opened by speaking the number 5 three times in a row ('thrice five'). Note that the speaker must say the words in Rudishva or Mithric. If opened, the chest contains twelve 10-lb bars of pure platinum worth 2,500 gp each plus a set of extremely sensitive documents involving the imperial family. Although these are over one thousand years old, they still possess volatile political value (at the GM's wish: they might reveal that the imperial family is descended from bastards, or that they worship demons, or something like that).

Secret Door (west): The door on the west wall is normal to find and opens by pushing the corner of one of the map frames. It leads to a tiny chamber with a series of rough-carved, cutback stairs; the stairs lead down 60' before emptying into a short tunnel to the Shrine of the Snake (4-51A). Dwarves will have no trouble noting that the secret door is of recent construction (see text at 4-51A).

Inhabitants:

1. 1 wraith: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 120', 240' flying (Class B); HD 5+3; HP 37; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: energy drain. Special defenses: silver or magic weapons to hit; immune to sleep, charm, hold, cold, poison, and paralysis.

Treasure:

12 10-lb platinum bars (2,500 gp each). Documents of extreme political sensitivity.

4-40: Guard Barracks: Alpha Sept

This barracks is the home of the elite company of Set guardsmen. Forty guardsmen in total reside here, although only some are present at any given time.

Alpha Sept uses the black boar as its chief symbol, and this image is painted in vivid red and black paint on the wooden door leading to their barracks.

The barracks chamber is 20' tall and is painted in bright yellow paint. The center and east end are filled with a maze of eighteen wooden triple bunk beds (offering sleeping space for up to 54 persons). Forty simple wooden lockers have been pushed under the bunkbeds, each containing typical personal items and 2-12 sp worth of small valuables.

The western end of the room is relatively open, and contains several weapons and armor racks, a large barrel of water, and a long trestle table with benches, numerous bronze cups, and several containers of water, mushroom ale, and lichen ale. The triangular war-pennon of the sept hangs on the western wall. The sept's war chest is found under the table, and contains 2,931 sp and 12,641 cp to be used in emergencies by members of the sept.

At any given time eight guardsmen are present in the barracks. Sergeant Theodora, the sept leader, is present 50% of the time.

The sept keeps as a pet a large billy goat, which they have named Sparky. Sparky has the run of the barracks, and is quite aggressive. The lowest ranking member of the sept has the unenviable task of cleaning up after Sparky.

Inhabitants:

1. 8 elite Set guardsmen (see new monsters), as 3rd-level Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 3; HP 26, 26, 25(x3), 24(x3); #AT 1, Dmg 2-7 (mace), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: red scale mail and wooden shield; footman's maces; spears; light crossbows with 20 bolts.
2. Sergeant Theodora (50% chance), the Set sergeant (see new monsters), as a 5th-level female Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL LE; AC 3; MV 60'; HD 5; HP 40; #AT 1, Dmg 3-8 (mace +1), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: Set armor (see Arden Vul items) and wooden shield; footman's mace +1; spear; light crossbow with 20 bolts.
3. Sparky, goat: SZ M; AL N; AC 7, MV 150'; HD 1+2; HP 7; #AT 1; Dmg 1-3. Special attacks: charge.

4-41: Storeroom and Cook

This small chamber is filled with shelves containing cookware, spices, root vegetables, dried fruit, and nuts. It also holds the cot and personal effects of Gresta, the ancient cook. Gresta is usually found in 4-42, and is only here 25% of the time.

Inhabitants:

1. Gresta, female human noncombatant (25%): AC 10, HP 2.

Treasure:

Gresta wears a badly corroded bracelet that appears to be iron, but is in fact platinum washed with iron (125 gp).

4-42: Kitchen

The main kitchen of the Set compound is a busy place, with guardsmen and acolytes constantly circulating through for a quick meal. A hearth in the southwest corner has several enchanted stones of various degrees of heat over which the cook (Gresta) prepares her meals. These are usually in the form of nourishing, but bland, cavern stew, although sometimes she roasts meat or prepares a special dessert. The rest of the room contains a preparation table and then six trestle tables with benches. Two huge barrels of water line the western wall. Gresta's helper, the goblin Rocko, sleeps under the prep table. Rocko knows about the escaped slaves to the north (4-100) and has contemplated joining them.

Inhabitants:

1. Gresta, female human noncombatant (75%): AC 10, HP 2.

2. Rocko, goblin sous-chef: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 4; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.

3. 1-2 Set acolytes (see new monsters), as 3rd-level Archontean cleric of Set: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 60'; HD 3; HP 19, 18; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (mace) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Possessions: Set armor (see Arden Vul items); footman's mace; light crossbow; acolyte's was stick (see new magic items); and a silver holy symbol of Set (10 gp). Spells prayed for: command, cure light wounds, curse (reverse of bless), protection from good; hold person, silence 15' radius.

4. 0-1 Set deacons (see new monsters), as a 6th-level Archontean cleric of Set: SZ M; AL LE; AC 3; MV 90'; HD 6; HP 39; #AT 1; Dmg 3-8 (mace +1). Possessions: Set armor +1 (see Arden Vul items); deacon's was stick (see new magic items); footman's mace +1; an amulet of protection against normal missiles (see new magic items); a potion of extra healing; a potion of glibness; a scroll of knit bones (see new spells); and a gold holy symbol of Set (150 gp). Spells prayed for: command, cure light wounds (x2), cause fear, protection from good; chant, hold person, know alignment, resist fire, silence 15' radius; animate dead, dispel magic, cause blindness; cause serious wounds.

5. 3-8 Set guardsmen (see new monsters), as 2nd-level Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 17, 16, 16, 15, 15, 12; #AT 1, Dmg 2-7 (mace), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: red scale mail and wooden shield; footman's maces; spears; light crossbows with 20 bolts.

4-43: Inner Plaza and Set Triumphant

This large room features a pretty, 20'-tall vaulted ceiling painted sky blue; a continual light spell in its center provides light.

Statue: In the center of the chamber is another cult statue of Set, this time in human form. The statue is black basalt. It is brightly painted, with purple robes, a white face, green eyes, black eyelids, and flaming red hair. The statue is 15' tall and faces the Long Stair (4-19); Set's pose is of the confident ruler, cradling an ankh and a rod of authority in his elbows.

This plaza is a favored gathering place for the lesser acolytes of the cult. There are always 4-7 acolytes in several knots, whispering, pointing at other groups, and gossiping among themselves. There is a flat 20% chance that a more important personage is also present, whether it is the overseer (4-47), the master of the Guild of Service (4-10), or a member of the upper priesthood (4-51, 4-56, or 4-57).

Inhabitants:

1. 1 Set acolyte (see new monsters), as a 3rd-level Archontean cleric of Set: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 60'; HD 3; HP 19; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (mace) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Possessions: Set armor (see Arden Vul items); footman's mace; light crossbow; acolyte's was stick (see new magic items); and a silver holy symbol of Set (10 gp). Spells prayed for: command, cure light wounds, curse (reverse of bless), protection from good; hold person, silence 15' radius.

2. Important personage (20%). See above.

4-44: Guard Barracks: Beta Sept

This barracks is the home of the second company of Set guardsmen. In total forty guardsmen reside here, although only a few are usually present at any given time.

Beta Sept uses as its insignia an image of a stylized head with bone white face and red hair; this rather vivid image is painted on the east wall opposite the entrance to the barracks.

The barracks chamber is 20' tall, and its entrance is covered with a leather curtain. The north and central portions of the room are filled with eighteen wooden triple bunk beds (offering sleeping space for up to 54 persons). Forty simple wooden lockers have been pushed under the bunk beds, each containing typical personal items and 2-12 sp worth of small valuables.

The south end of the room is relatively open, and contains several weapons and armor racks, a large barrel of water, and a long trestle table with benches, numerous bronze cups, and several containers of water, mushroom ale, and lichen ale. The circular war-pennon of the sept hangs on the south wall. The Sept's war chest is found under the table, and contains 1,799 sp and 8,941 cp to be used in emergencies by members of the Sept.

At any given time eight guardsmen are present in the barracks. Sergeant Justinus, the sept leader, is present 50% of the time.

Inhabitants:

1. Sergeant Justinus (50%), the Set sergeant (see new monsters), as a 5th-level Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL LE; AC 3; MV 60'; HD 5; HP 41; #AT 1, Dmg 3-8 (mace +1), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: Set armor (see Arden Vul items) and wooden shield; footman's mace +1; spear; light crossbow with 20 bolts.

2. 4 Set guardsmen (see new monsters), as 2nd-level Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 17, 16, 16, 15, 15, 12; #AT 1, Dmg 2-7 (mace), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: red scale mail and wooden shield; footman's maces; spears; light crossbows with 20 bolts.

4-45: Inspection Point

A pair of guardsmen occupies this area at all times, watching the iron bars that block access to the northern caves. The iron gate has a man-sized door, which is locked; keys are given to patrol leaders venturing out, and one is kept by the corporal in charge of this inspection point. The guardsmen are usually bored, and don't keep good light- or noise-discipline. That said, they are not likely to admit unauthorized visitors to the compound without first summoning a more important figure, such as the Overseer (4-47). The guardsmen have a bench and small table on which they play endless hands of cards. They also have a gong mounted to the wall that they will ring furiously if threatened. On the north wall sits the partner to the magic mouth from 4-84; if intruders are spotted there, the guards here will be alerted, and a patrol from 4-46 sent out to investigate.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 Set guardsmen (see new monsters), as 2nd-level Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 15, 12; #AT 1, Dmg 2-7 (mace), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: red scale mail and wooden shield; footman's maces; spears; light crossbows with 20 bolts.

4-46: Guard Barracks: Gamma Sept

Home to the third company of Set guardsmen, this barracks has room for forty, although only a few are usually present.

Gamma Sept calls itself the Company of the Desert Storm, and as a result its image is a tornado. The tornado symbol is worked into a set of hanging beads that blocks the entrance to the barracks, and is painted in black on the yellow walls of the barracks proper.

The barracks chamber is 20' tall and is painted in bright yellow paint. The center and north end contain eighteen wooden triple bunk beds (offering sleeping space for up to 54 persons). Forty simple wooden lockers have been pushed under the wooden bunk beds, each containing typical personal items and 2-12 sp worth of small valuables.

The south end of the room is relatively open, and contains several weapons and armor racks, a large barrel of water, and a long trestle table with benches, numerous bronze cups, and several containers of water, mushroom ale, and lichen ale. The rectangular war-pennon of the sept hangs on the south wall. The sept's war chest is found under the table, and contains 1,331 sp and 9,834 cp to be used in emergencies by members of the sept.

At any given time eight guardsmen are present in the barracks. Sergeant Heraclion, the sept leader, is present 50% of the time.

Inhabitants:

1. 8 Set guardsmen (see new monsters), as 2nd-level Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 16, 16, 15, 15, 14, 12; #AT 1, Dmg 2-7 (mace), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: red scale mail and wooden shield; footman's maces; spears; light crossbows with 20 bolts.

2. Sergeant Heraclion, the Set sergeant (see new monsters), as a 5th-level Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL LE; AC 3; MV 60'; HD 5; HP 38; #AT 1, Dmg 3-8 (mace +1), 1-6 (spear) and 2-5 (light crossbow +1). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: Set armor (see Arden Vul items) and wooden shield; footman's mace +1; spear; light crossbow +1 with 20 bolts.

4-47: Overseer

Belisarius the Overseer, the second most powerful figure in the cult of Set, lives and works in this large room. The overseer is the ranking 'secular' figure of the cult, and is in charge of all guardsmen, military expeditions, security, patrols, and so forth. For all that, Belisarius is a devout, even fanatical, follower of Set, and an adept politician. He is also a misogynist and dislikes High Priestess Stephania intensely. As a result he is constantly plotting her demise, and hopes to replace her with the third priest, Lacedaion. Stephania is aware of these machinations and has taken precautions; she has not acted against Belisarius yet solely because he is so good at what he does. Despite his prejudices, Belisarius would never act to undermine the cult as a whole; only if he were convinced of the motives of outsiders would he consider employing them against Stephania.

The chamber is divided into a public and private area; the latter is to the east, and is shielded by some painted wooden screens. The public area has a large tactical table on which lie (incomplete) maps of the northern and southern caves of Level 4 as well as one ancient map detailing portions of the lower levels (GM's choice). Also in the public area are several writing desks and chairs containing roster lists, personnel reports, logistical reports, and so forth. Two aides-de-camp (from the Alpha Sept) are always present here. At the north wall, next to the door to the caves, stands a large cabinet in which may be found a sizable number of curios looted from the halls as well as 12 bound codices (on theological, military, and motivational subjects). The private area contains a simple bed, an armoire, another writing desk, a weapon and armor rack, a practice dummy, two cots for the aides, a set of four easy chairs around a coffee table, and a cabinet containing 22 bottles of excellent brandy. In addition to his administrative skills, Belisarius is a formidable warrior.

The north door leads to a narrow tunnel that provides Belisarius with private access to the cavern at 4-66 via a one-way door. He doesn't use this door very often, and the corridor is thus thick with dust.

There is a 50% chance that Belisarius is present in his quarters. The rest of the time he is elsewhere in the complex, typically in 4-2, 4-3, 4-7, 4-43, 4-51, 4-53, or 4-61. He has a 25% chance to be in 4-48 whenever the second mystery is performed

Secret Door (east): This door is normal to find and locked, and leads to a set of secret interrogation chambers. Only the overseer and his aides-de-camp know of the existence of the door and the interrogation chambers. The key to the door is hidden in Belisarius's liquor cabinet.

Inhabitants:

1. Belisarius the Overseer, 7th-level male Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL LE; AC 2; MV 120'; HD 7; HP 70; #AT 3/2; Dmg 3-8 (javelin +2) or 4-11 (long sword +2). Abilities: STR 17, INT 13, WIS 16, DEX 11, CON 16, CHA 15. Possessions: chain mail +3; returning javelin +2 (see new magic items), long sword +2; potion of extra healing (x2); potion of fly; and a key-ring with keys to SL8-1 and 4-106.

2. 2 aides-de-camp, 3rd-level female Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL NE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 3; HP 25, 22; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8 (mace), 1-6 (spear) or 1-4 (light crossbow). Possessions: Set armor (see Arden Vul items); spear; mace, and light crossbow.

4-48: Second Mystery of Set: Sandstorms and Scorpions

The second great mystery of the Set cult is performed here once per day. Only the important cultists are permitted to witness the summoning and taming of the desert storms, and as a result the doors to the chamber of the mysteries are always kept locked. The massive spherical chamber has a radius of 30', with the doors and stone bridges entering the sphere at its median. The lower half of the sphere is filled with sand. The upper half is brightly painted in blue, with a large yellow sun in the center (focus for a continual light spell). Slender bridges (7' wide) lead from doors in the north, south, and east sides of the sphere; these bridges are about 5' above the surface of the sand and meet in the center of the room in a 10'-radius circular platform (itself a pillar descending to the floor). To the west is another platform and door leading to the chapel (4-61); it is from here that Stephania performs the daily mystery.

The Mystery:

Celebrants enter through one of the doors and congregate on the central platform. At precisely noon, Stephania (or another upper-circle priest) appears on the western platform accompanied by a drugged slave (or naughty acolyte). She shouts the ritual words in the secret tongue of the priests of Set: "Set is spawned from the desert sands, hardy and severe. Let our hearts seek the discipline of the desert as we achieve his ends!" Applause is expected. Stephania continues: "When angered, Set looses his fury like the desert storm! Let those who cannot endure, perish!" She then kicks the slave onto the sands below, and, as the giant scorpions emerge to feast, she uses her rod of wind control (see new magic items) to produce a small (but impressive) sandstorm. The entire chamber (save for Stephania's platform) is racked with howling wind and blowing sand for 2 full minutes. During this performance, it is not uncommon for Set cultists on the main platform to settle old scores by pushing rivals into the maelstrom. After two minutes, Stephania shouts in Archontean, in an enhanced voice that echoes through the winds, "For those who pursue his will, Lord Set eases their way, just as he tames the desert storms!" At this moment, the winds cease and the chamber returns to normal. Celebrants are likely to witness the giant scorpions emerging to finish off the sacrifice and anyone else who has fallen to the sands.

Inhabitants:

At all times:

1. 3 giant scorpions: SZ M; AL N; AC 3; MV 150'; HD 5+5; HP 42, 39, 35; #AT 3; Dmg 1-10/1-10/1-4. Special attacks: poison.

During the mystery:

1. Stephania: see 4-51
2. A human slave, noncombatant (AC 10, HP 3)
3. 1-11 Set cultists (see new monsters): SZ M; AL LE; AC 9; MV 90'; HD 1; HP 7, 6, 5(x3), 4(x3), 3(x3); #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger) or 2-7 (flail) or 1-6 (staff). Special attacks: fanaticism. Possessions: padded armor; daggers; flails or staves.
4. Belisarius (25% chance, as he loves this mystery); see 4-47.

Treasure:

1. Buried in the sand at the bottom of the sphere is a locked strongbox with strongbox with 7,000 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items); an extra key to 4-106; a scroll with the cleric spells the long death and warding chain of glyphs (see new spells for both); and a 1'-tall silver ankh-key (see Arden Vul items). It would require much digging (and luck) to find this box. Stephania and the modern cult of Set are ignorant of the strongbox's existence.

2. Each of the scorpions wears a long necklace of gold (2,000 gp each).

4-49: Deacons' Quarters

These eleven 10'x10' rooms are quarters for the deacons of the cult of Set. Each contains a bed, a waste bucket, a writing desk, and a chest for clothes. Each deacon has 10-100 sp somewhere in his/her chamber, as well as a potion or clerical scroll (25% for each). Most of the time the deacons are busy elsewhere within or without the complex, so there's only a 10% chance to encounter one of them at home.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 Set deacon (see new monsters), as a 6th-level Archontean cleric of Set (10% chance): SZ M; AL LE; AC 3; MV 90'; HD 6; HP 42; #AT 1; Dmg 3-8 (mace +1). Possessions: Set armor +1 (see Arden Vul items); deacon's was stick (see new magic items); footman's mace +1; an amulet of protection against normal missiles (see new magic items); a potion of extra healing; a potion of glibness; a scroll of holy name (see new spells); and a gold holy symbol of Set (150 gp). Spells prayed for: command, cure light wounds (x2), cause fear, protection from good; chant, hold person, holy name (see new spells), know alignment, silence 15' radius; animate dead, dispel magic, cause blindness; cause serious wounds.

4-50: Dormitory of the Acolytes

This chaotic room is crammed with triple bunk beds in which the acolytes of the cult sleep. There are twenty such bunk beds (room for 60), as well as 45 unlocked wooden chests stowed under the lowest bunks. The place smells strongly due to the sardine-like nature of the living conditions. At any given moment 5 acolytes are present and asleep.

Inhabitants:

1. 5 Set acolytes (see new monsters), as 3rd-level Archontean clerics of Set: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 60'; HD 3; HP 22, 20, 19, 18, 17; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (mace) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Possessions: Set armor (see Arden Vul items); footman's mace; light crossbow; acolyte's was stick (see new magic items); and a silver holy symbol of Set (10 gp). Spells prayed for: command, cure light wounds, curse (reverse of bless), protection from good; hold person, silence 15' radius.

Treasure:

Each chest has a 50% chance for 3-18 sp worth of small coins.

4-51: High Priestess Stephania

Stephania, the high priestess and Set pontifex (see new monsters), lives and works in this chamber. She is a petite, round woman with flaming red-hair (a fact which helped her rise to power). Naturally sallow, she only appears in public in elaborate make-up: she chalks her face white and accentuates her black eyes and brows. Stephania is a powerful cleric and a formidable adversary; indeed, her rise to the top of the Set hierarchy attests to her skill as a politician and a ruthless opponent.

The southern third of the room is set off by a pair of painted wooden screens, behind which is her living area. The northern two-thirds are set up for business.

In the public area she has a sitting area with four wooden chairs around a coffee table; on this table are two silver ewers filled with wine (one always poisoned, a fact well known to her confidants and enemies) and a set of delicate crystal wine glasses. A writing desk and a scroll cabinet occupy the western wall. A portion of living mosaic (see new magic items) is inset into the north wall to the left of the door: this shows the forum area (4-2). Her rod of wind control (see new magic items) usually rests on the writing table. A rack to the right of the door holds her red Set armor +2 (see Arden Vul items) and her mace +3.

The private area contains a sumptuous feather bed, an armoire filled with robes, a set of sealed jars of water (she fears poison), a dressing table with makeup, a stuffed leather chair, a beautiful red and gold carpet, and a solid brass bust of a horned entity resting on a slender side table. There is a secret compartment in the armoire in which she keeps 10 perfect pearls (100 gp each), written testimony (from a now-dead source) about Belisarius's machinations, and substantial dirt on the Guild of Service. A set of heavy gold drapes hides the secret door to 4-51A; that door is locked at all times (-15% to pick). The secret door to 4-52 is hidden behind a tapestry depicting an enormous Set animal.

At all times Stephania wears Batzas, one of the three rings of Set (see new magic items), her boots of the ogre (see new magic items), her pontifex's was stick (see new magic items), and her necklace of missiles. She also holds a key ring with keys to most door locks in the compound, including the sole key to 4-51A, one of the few keys to SL8-1 (aka EX-16), and one of the two keys to 4-106. She has a 33% chance to be present in her room; otherwise, she may be found conducting a ritual in 4-61 (25%) or moving about the Set complex. Once per day she presides over the second mystery (4-48). Whenever she is outside her chamber, she wears her Set armor +2 (see Arden Vul items) and carries her mace +3.

Stephania will not deign to notice low-level PCs, although evil characters or those who have helped other members of the Cult of Set might be brought to her attention. Her favor could be won by performing evil tasks for her. One such task involves defeating the demon in area 4-58 (a feat which would not be inherently evil in and of itself, of course, although it would be an action which furthers the interests of an evil god).

Secret Door (east): This secret door is hidden behind a tapestry depicting a massive Set animal. It is small (4' tall) and is activated by pushing down on a small floor tile while simultaneously pushing the door panel inward.

Secret Door (south): This door is both concealed (by drapes) and secret (normal to find). It is locked (-15% to pick), and Stephania holds the only key.

Inhabitants:

1. Stephania (33%), Set pontifex (see new monsters), as a 10th-level female Archontean cleric of Set: SZ M; AL LE; AC 0; MV 120', or 90' with Set armor +2; HD 9+2; HP 66; #AT 1; Dmg 6-11 (mace +3), 3-6 (staff of withering); MR 15%. Abilities: STR 17 (including +1 from her boots), INT 15, WIS 18, DEX 14, CON 11, CHA 16. She is +1 to hit and +1 to damage due to her strength. Possessions: footman's mace +3; Set armor +2 (see Arden Vul items); rod of wind control (see new magic items); staff of withering (15 charges); pontifex's was stick (see new magic items); a ring of Set named Batzas (see new magic items); a necklace of missiles (one 7-dice, two 5-dice, and four 3-dice missiles); boots of the ogre (see new magic items); potions of truthfulness and deafening light (see new magic items for both); scrolls of hallow, sun's gift, and warding chain of glyphs (see new spells for all three); a platinum holy symbol of Set (250 gp); and a keyring with keys to most door locks within the precincts of Set, including the sole key to 4-51A, the keys to 3-110, one of the few keys to SL8-1 (aka EX-16), and one of the two keys to 4-106. She has typically prayed for these spells: bless, command, cure light wounds (x2), detect good, detect magic; chant, hold person, know alignment, silence 15' radius, augury, speak with animals; dispel magic, glyph of warding, curse, prayer; cause serious wounds (x2), protection from good 10' radius, detect lie; commune, flame strike. In certain circumstances, she may have prayed for quest and raise dead in her 5th-level slots.

Treasure:

Public area: silver ewers (35 gp each, one poisoned); 6 delicate crystal wine glasses (20 gp each); red Set Armor +2 (see Arden Vul items); mace +3; rod of wind control (see new magic items). The latter three items are only present if Stephania is also here; if she is elsewhere in the complex, these items will be on her person.

Private area: red and gold carpet (100 gp); make-up (15 gp); the solid brass devil's head is an infernal effigy (see new magic items), keyed to a styx devil named Trasbellix. The devil's name is written on a slip of parchment pinned to the bottom of the rug.

Wardrobe: 10 pearls (100 gp each); written testimony from a certain Yellup that describes the hatred of Belisarius (4-47) towards Stephania and the overseer's secret efforts to persuade Lacedaion (4-57) to undermine Stephania's rule; another report from an unnamed source that describes the daily activities of Gunnar, the chief of the Guild of Service (4-10) over the past month. The report on Gunnar is interesting, as the first week of entries show him energetically visiting every corner of the Guild's area, consulting with guildmasters, and generally acting frequently in public. The last three weeks, however, contain the same entry: "Stayed in his chamber and consulted with his advisors". This note is a clue about how Gunnar has been replaced by a doppelganger (see 4-10).

4-51A: Shrine to the Snake

A long set of narrow stairs from the high priestess's room leads to this unusual fane. Unlike the rest of the level, this room is clad in blue marble flecked with white; more significantly, all corners are rounded, ensuring a complete lack of 90-degree angles. Lit sconces line the walls, providing good – if smoky – light. Against the north wall is a 2' dais on which sits an enormous snake's head. The mouth of the snake is open, revealing fangs. Its eyes are 3' in diameter and composed of 128 faceted chrysoprase gems (50 gp each). In the southwest corner is an encampment, with two hammocks hung from rings in the walls, a tripod and pot over a fire-ring, and three 4'-tall dried mushrooms with hollowed caps and stems (containers). A team of kaliyani sorcerers and their servants occupies the shrine. Unless intruders are accompanied by Stephania, the kaliyani attack on sight. If combat goes badly for them, they beat a fighting retreat through the northern secret door.

GM Note: Stephania was shocked fifteen years ago when a kaliyani digging party broke through the wall of 4-51. Linking the snake-like kaliyani to one of Set's favorite incarnations (the snake) was an easy way to establish an alliance. The kaliyani were quick to recognize the potential value of such an alliance. Over the past decade, then, the stairs linking 4-51 and 4-51A have been completed, and the shrine in 4-51A constructed. The kaliyani have not told Stephania that they also completed a second set of stairs, with secret door, leading to area 4-39. As yet, no priest or priestess has visited the kaliyani compound, but the high priestess does take regular consultation with her allies about affairs on the lower levels. Knowledge of this strange alliance is limited to High Priestess Stephania, Alexandros the Bibliothecarius (4-54), and Belisarius the Overseer (4-47). Marius Junienos, Lacedaion of Archontos, and the Guildmasters of Service are merely aware that the high priestess has a private shrine.

Secret Door (north): This door is located within the giant snake head, and is opened by pulling on one of the snake's fangs.

Secret Door (southwest): This door is unknown to all (except the kaliyani). It is hard to locate (1 in 8) and is opened by pushing a slab of marble inward and then sliding it to the west.

Inhabitants:

1. Plesstra, 7th-level kaliyani sorcerer (see new monsters), SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 150' on six legs, 60' upright; HD 7; HP 41; #AT 3; Dmg 2-5/2-5/6-24 (dagger/dagger/blasting rod). Special defenses: immune to poison and mind-affecting spells. Special: infravision. Psionic ability: 220. Attack modes: psionic blast, mind thrust, psychic crush. Defense modes: mind blank, thought shield, intellect fortress. Disciplines: cellular adjustment, domination, detect magic; mind barring. Spells: comprehend languages, charm person, hypnotism; darkness 15' radius, invisibility, mirror image; dispel magic. Possessions: bracers of defense (AC 5); kaliyani blasting rod, with 6 charges (see new technological items); two serrated daggers; 5 lb of arcnum (see new magic items); 14 small chrysoprase gems (60 gp each).

2. Nassiv, 5th-level kaliyani sorcerer (see new monsters): SZ M; AL LE; AC 6; MV 150' on six legs, 60' upright; HD 5; HP 32; #AT 2; Dmg 4-6/2-5 (dagger +2/dagger) or 2-7/2-7 (javelins). Special defenses: immune to poison and mind-affecting spells. Special: infravision. Psionic ability: 200. Attack modes: psionic blast, mind thrust. Defense modes: mind blank, mental barrier. Disciplines: clairaudience, clairvoyance, invisibility, telepathic projection. Spells: charm person, dancing lights, hypnotic pattern. Possessions: potion of invisibility; potion of fire breath; one dagger +2 and a second normal dagger; 6 javelins; a silver ring with an ouroboros on it (275 gp), two gold torcs (150 gp each); 4 vials of kaliyani refreshing liquid (see Arden Vul items).
3. 6 1st-level kaliyani soldiers (see new monsters): SZ M; AL LE; AC 6; MV 150' on six legs, 60' upright; HD 4; HP 29, 27, 26, 25, 24, 24; #AT 2 or 1; Dmg 1-4/1-4 or 3-8/3-8 (scimitars) and 2-7/2-7 (javelins). Special defenses: immune to poison and mind-affecting spells. Special: infravision. Possessions: twin serrated scimitars; six javelins; minor jewelry worth 33 gp. These individuals have no psionic ability.

Treasure:

256 chrysoprase gems (50 gp each).

4-51B: Stairs Down to the Kaliyani Pits (SL9-75)

The secret door in the snake head leads to an oval tunnel with many steps. It leads down some 650' to the Kaliyani Pits on Sub-Level 9 (SL9-75).

4-52: Treasury

Only the three high priests of the cult know of this secret treasury. It contains three large open stone boxes filled with 15,000 gp, 1,000 pp, and 50 gems of various types worth 100 gp each); 6 pieces of elaborate ritual ware (100 gp per piece); a helm of underwater action; a set of enchanted imperial field plate +1 (see Arden Vul items); an oathbow (see new magic items); and a small locked and trapped (poison gas) iron box containing a complete deck of many things and a complete deck of the magi (see new magic items).

4-53: Square of the High Priest

The walls of this octagonal space are painted a cheerful yellow, while the rib-vaulted ceiling is sky-blue. A globe on which has been cast continual light hangs from the center of the vaulting. The deacons use this space as the nerve center of the cult of Set. Its northern half contains five desks and chairs, as well as a larger worktable with benches. Officials of the cult use this space to devise and carry out their political plots. The southern half is open, and merely contains a huge set of blood-red drapes that cloak the entrance to the chapel (4-61).

Inhabitants:

1. 8 bureaucrats, as Set cultists (see new monsters): SZ M; AL LE; AC 9; MV 90'; HD 1; HP 7, 6, 6, 5, 5, 4, 4, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger) or 2-7 (flail) or 1-6 (staff). Special attacks: fanaticism. Possessions: padded armor; daggers; flails or staves.

4-54: Bibliothecarius

Alexandros the bibliothecarius (librarian) makes his quarters here. His chamber is spartan, with a rumped bed, a chest filled with clothing, and an escritoire with chair. He often brings interesting items from the library (4-55) to study or copy in his chamber. There is a 25% chance that an interesting volume might be present here.

Alexandros is the typical doddering scholar; he lacks all interest in politics, a fact that has allowed him to maintain his position into his 80s. He is genuinely interested in the history of Arden Vul and could be a useful source of information if cultivated (and if Stephania allowed it; she might allow consultation with him in return for a favor or two). He has, for example, important insight into the causes of the destruction of the city and of the role of both the Sortians and Theosophs in fomenting that debacle. He also has pieced together some fragments of information that suggest the existence of a hidden Sortian (now, 'Priscian') complex under Arden Vul (i.e., 9-58 to 9-64). Alexandros does not care for valuables, and, as a result, has nothing of value. He is only present in his chamber 33% of the time; otherwise he is found in the library (4-55).

Inhabitants:

1. Alexandros, male Archontean human scholar (33%): SZ M; AL LE; AC 10; MV 90; HD 1-1; HP 6; #AT 1; Dmg 1-2 (metal stylus).

4-55: Library

The current leaders of the cult of Set have made a serious effort to reconstruct the formerly extensive library of Set. Although never as impressive as that of the priests of Thoth, the original library used to contain some important and rare texts. The current collection, however, is much less extensive and interesting. Still, under the care of Alexandros, it is starting to be reassembled.

The vestibule to the library has several benches and pegs (for cloaks). The eastern third of the room is given over to reading desks and tables, while the western two-thirds contain wooden shelves holding the collection. Alexandros has his own desk in the center of the stacks; he is present 66% of the time.

The collection contains 158 items in a variety of formats: large illuminated codices, small portable octavos, sets of scrolls in parchment or papyrus, even a few sets of bronze plaques held in silk-lined boxes. It is up to the GM to decide what is present in the library, although a few suggestions follow. Most of the volumes are recent and fairly bland, being the sort of thing that one can still buy at higher-end booksellers in any of the large cities of the Empire: memoirs of imperial officials; official histories of the empire; general treatises on magic, theology, estate management, or monster ecology; medical treatises; recipes for potions and poisons; and so forth. Only about 20% of the volumes are truly unique and worthy of interest. Some of these include the hagiographical The Lives of the Noble Founders, Arden and Vul; the Deeds of Marius Tricotor, by Lucius Cornelius Scriptor; a condensed one-volume version of the Tales of Larel One-Eye (c.f. 3-46); a badly corrupted version of Clarius's On the Wars of the Old Ones with the Trolls, with (mis-)information on the rudishva; a quire of notes prepared by Alexandros himself entitled On the Location of Priscus Pulcher (see Arden Vul books); Justinian the Wise's ancient A True History of Isadora, companion of Priscus Pulcher (with much disinformation); the Song of Jacinth the Rose; Sardonyx Peridot's

Sorcerous Properties of Gems; the Value of Mud, by Herodian the Blessed; the Priscian A Canticle of Arcane Knowledge; Ysgred the Mad's infamous Thirty Uses for Arcanum; Thorcin Poisons and their Cures; the Deeds of the Azure Knights; and Ixion of Narsileon's equally infamous The Nine Hells: a Catalogue with descriptions and summoning notes (see Arden Vul books for all). The library also holds three arcane spell books holding most of the level 1-2 magic user spells as well as nighteyes of Bastet, Pelagion's bridge of sighs, Pelagion's rock sympathy (see new spells for both), and 1-6 other new spells of mixed level (roll 1d8 for level; select from new spells). Finally, it also holds a scroll bearing the addresses to three of the Thothian teleportation rings (see new magic items): GR-RE-YE-BL-BK-WH (AV-27), WH-YE-BL-GR-RE-BK (2-19), and RE-BK-BL-GR-YE-WH (8-17).

4-56: Second Priest's Chamber

This is the chamber of Marius Junienos, the second priest of the cult (and a Set Pontifex – see new monsters). Marius's chamber is elegantly, if not sumptuously, furnished.

Painted screens set off a private area to the south; it contains a four-poster bed, an easy chair and table, an armoire, and a cabinet with his collection of signet rings (taken from victims in his schemes). Over the bed hangs a magnificent tapestry showing the imperial capital of Archontos in great detail (500 gp).

Marius's working area is to the north, and contains two writing desks, a scroll cabinet, a weapon/armor stand, and an uncomfortable set of wooden chairs around a small coffee table. Along the walls are shelves holding marble busts, mostly of members of Marius's family, but also of some former priests of Set.

Marius is the second-in-command of the cult of Set. Coming from the Junienos clan, that is, from one of the Five Families that rules the Empire (see World of Archontos appendix), Marius is also an aristocrat of the highest rank. His kinsmen have let it be known that Marius died in a fire, although a few (and the Imperial Drome) know the truth, namely that Marius is thoroughly evil and that he cares more for the restoration of the cult of Set than for kin or empire. Although unscrupulous, Marius is completely loyal to Stephania, whose abilities and iron will he admires.

Marius is a thin, ascetic-looking man of middle age, with a long nose and receding hairline. He wears a red robe blazoned with a black boar, red bracers of defense (AC 3), and a red cloth headdress shaped like a Set animal. His bearing is immediately noticeable as aristocratic, and he shows little patience with the slow or the insipid. Marius's great skill lies in subtle political machinations, and he has numerous schemes in various stages of completion, both within the Halls and without. Marius's private wealth has helped prop up the cult, and Stephania consequently values him enormously. Marius loathes Anna Ligareon (4-8) and shows it by ignoring her completely. Marius has a drug habit of which no one save Galadnor Half-Elven (see 4-31) is aware; his addiction is strong, but has not yet affected his abilities.

Inhabitants:

1. Marius Junienos (50%), Set pontifex (see new monsters), as a 9th-level male Archontean magic user: SZ M; AL LE; AC -1; MV 120; HD 9; HP 29; #AT 1; Dmg 4-9 (staff of striking) or 3-6 (dagger +2); MR 15%. Abilities: STR 9; INT 18; WIS 15; DEX 16; CON 10; CHA 12. Possessions: robe, headdress, red bracers of defense (AC 3), staff of striking (23 charges), a dagger +2; a ring of three wishes (one remaining), a ring of Set named Fronto the Wise (see new magic items); potions of extra healing, fly, and gaseous form; a platinum holy symbol of Set (250 gp); and a key-ring with keys to SL8-1 and 4-106. Memorized spells: comprehend languages, charm person, magic missile, shield; continual light, detect good, mirror image, ESP; dispel magic, fly, suggestion; fear, polymorph other; feeblemind.

Treasure:

Private area: tapestry (500 gp); signet rings (32 in number each worth 10-1,000 gp); a locked and trapped (poison needle) box inside the armoire containing 5,033 pp; and his spell book, invisible, attached to the underside of the bed.

Public Area: Public area: solid gold coffee service (300 gp); valuable documents (GM's choice); 11 marble busts (100 gp each, but heavy!); Set armor +2 (see Arden Vul items); short sword +1; ceremonial spear made of ebony (100 gp). The weapons and armor are unused and for display only. One of the busts has been enchanted such that if anyone says 'speak' to it, it will recite four off-color jokes in quick succession (the bust is worth 100 gp).

Marius's Spell Book: All 1st-level spells; audible glamer, continual light, detect good, darkness 15' radius, detect invisibility, ESP, forget, Frigg's elephant ears (see new spells), Frigg's jelly legs (see new spells), invisibility, knock, levitate, locate object, magic mouth, mirror image, ray of enfeeblement, rope trick, stinking cloud, strength, web; blink, clairaudience, clairvoyance, dispel magic, fireball, fly, garrulous mouth (see new spells), gust of wind, haste, hold person, invisibility 10' radius, lightning bolt, monster summoning I, Pelagion's rock sympathy (see new spells), phantasmal force, slow, suggestion, water breathing; confusion, extension I, fear, ice storm, massmorph, minor globe of invulnerability, polymorph other, remove curse, wall of fire; conjure elemental, contact other plane, feeblemind, mage's faithful hound, teleport.

4-57: Third Priest's Chamber

The chamber of Lacedaion of Archontos, the third priest of the cult of Set (and a Set pontifex – see new monsters), is set up like that of Marius, with a private area set off by painted screens to the south and a public area to the north.

The private area has a plain bed, an armoire, an easy chair, a table, and a set of manacles and whips. The south wall contains an enormous fresco painted on a wooden frame - it shows the black boar of Set consuming the sun.

The public area has a writing desk, a scroll cabinet, a low table with three chairs, and an armor/weapon stand. Three tapestries showing scenes of ritual sacrifice and the domination of the weak line the walls.

Lacedaion of Archontos is brilliant but insecure, and harbors some resentment about Marius's aristocratic status. As a result, Belisarius the Overseer has been trying to persuade Lacedaion that Stephania has been slighting him. Although aware of Belisarius's antipathy for the high priestess, Lacedaion's vanity and resentment have pushed him a bit further along the path of treason than his intellect would normally allow. Lacedaion is a short, dark man with a stylish goatee, piercing eyes, and a scar running along his left cheek. He wears flashy and extravagant red velvet robes at almost all times, eschewing his formal Set armor +2 (see Arden Vul items) unless he is preparing for a fight.

Inhabitants:

1. Lacedaion (50%), Set pontifex (see new monsters), as a 9th-level male Archontean cleric of Set: SZ M; AL LE; AC 2 (without armor) or 0 (with Set armor +2); MV 120; or 90' with Set armor +2; HD 9; HP: 60; #AT 1; Dmg 4-9 (mace +2); MR 15%. Abilities: STR 12; INT 17; WIS 17; DEX 14; CON 12; CHA 15. Possessions: red velvet robes with bracers of defense (AC 5), or Set armor +2 (see Arden Vul items); footman's mace +2; ring of protection +2; wand of negation (12 charges); a ring of Set named Sittas (see new magic items); an amulet of proof against detection or location; a potion of extra healing; a platinum holy symbol of Set (250 gp); and a key-ring with keys to SL8-1 and 4-106. Spells prayed for: bless, command, cause light wounds, cure light wounds, light, sanctuary; chant, detect charm, hold person, know alignment, resist fire, silence 15' radius; animate dead, blindness, dispel magic, glyph of warding; cure serious wounds, protection from good 10' radius; insect plague.

Treasure:

1. Private Area: in a locked and trapped (glyph of warding) box in the armoire: a set of four large keys, a periapt of proof against poison, four 500gp diamonds, and 273 loose gp.
2. Public Area: pristine Set armor +2 (see Arden Vul items), spear +1, long sword +1.

4-58: Blocked Passage and Dangerous Room

Several bits of broken column block the hallway outside this room. Glued to one of the fragments is a large note in Archontean: "No access per order of High Priestess Stephania." The door is locked; successfully listening at it reveals this whisper, in Archontean: "Help me. I am so lonely. I will be your friend." Listeners must save versus spells (per a suggestion spell) or believe the voice and thus try to open the door. In fact, the chamber within contains a succubus that is still posing problems for Stephania and her team. The door has a powerful protection against evil spell cast on it: the spell is refreshed every week via an elaborate ceremony.

This former administrative chamber hosts a dozen desks and tables, as well as a row of scroll and map cabinets. It is currently home to a succubus calling herself Maris, who was accidentally summoned by Herbert, a (former) deacon of Set. The succubus is bound to the chamber and to the body of the unfortunate deacon. Efforts to defeat her have only increased her strength by adding several wights to her forces. Maris delights in impersonating the dead Herbert via her shape change ability. She slew the last group of deacons whom Stephania sent to handle this situation and turned them into wights.

Although she has enjoyed the game of torment with the priesthood of Set, Maris is deeply annoyed at her imprisonment (the chamber being secured against teleportation and ethereal travel truly surprised her). She is eager to escape in order to wreak chaos in the area of the Forum. The wights are mindless, but so long as they are within sight of Maris, they obey her commands.

Secret Door (north): The secret door to 4-59 is normal to find and locked. High Priestess Stephania holds the sole key (4-51).

Inhabitants:

1. Maris the succubus, posing as Herbert the deacon: SZ M; AL CE; AC 0; MV 120', 180' flying (Class C); HD 6; HP 40; #AT 2; Dmg 1-3/1-3; MR 70%. Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: energy drain; charm person; suggestion. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; half damage from cold, electricity, fire, and gas. Special: cause darkness 5'; become ethereal; ESP; clairaudience; shape change; gate (40% chance).
2. 3 wights: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 4+3; HP 33, 29, 27; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4. Special attacks: energy drain. Special defenses: silver or magic needed to hit; immune to sleep, charm, hold, cold, poison, and paralysis.

Treasure:

On 'Herbert', aka Maris: sword +2, chaos blade (see new magic items)

In the chamber: A scattering of 18 gp can be collected after two turns of searching. Scattered among the tedious administrative documents (lists of supplies, payments, etc.) are a scroll of cone of cold, a scroll of knit bones (see new spells), and a charter sealed by Stephania (4-51) that promises a bounty of 200 gp per varumani head to a certain Kallion the White (see 8-15). This document could be used to convince the troll thegn (7-30) to aid in a protracted campaign against Set.

Pinned to an overturned desk is a haiku recited by a guardsman who had received a vision from Set. The haiku refers to the tomb of Theskelon (4-142), and reads: Unguents piled on high, Bones wrapped and entombed, There Theskelon rests. The deacons who recorded the haiku did not recognize the potential significance of the poem's content before they were driven from the chamber.

4-59: Shadowy Trouble

A pack of shadows occupy this unfinished chamber. The chamber was only partially excavated before disaster struck Arden Vul; the shadows are the remains of slaves entombed here when the priests of Set fled. On the east wall was painted a rough, but clear painting of Set in his Set animal form; it was debased by the dying slaves, who scrawled (in a variety of tongues) over the image the following sorts of things: "Murderer!", "Lord of Deceit", and so forth.

The south wall of the chamber was formerly brightly painted, but now shows only smears of blood and other foul fluids

The floor is paved except for a 3' belt of unfinished stone along the west wall. Lying on the pavement are the long-rotted, desiccated, and sometimes gnawed remains of the entombed. Amid the bones of one is a short written testimonial (in Goblin Runic) describing the last days of the slaves.

The river flows to the east through an extremely swift and narrow tunnel only 4' in diameter. Someone could attempt to flee in that direction, but would take 6-60 HP damage in the narrow tunnel before emerging at 4-68.

Secret Door (south): The secret door to 4-58 is easy to detect (1 in 4) due to the marks of repeated blows that cover it. It's locked, and the sole key is held by High Priestess Stephania (4-51).

Treasure:

A war hammer +1 with a broken handle that requires 100 gp worth of work by a high-quality smith before it can be used.

Inhabitants:

1. 14 shadows: SZ M; AL CE; AC 7; MV 120; HD 3+3; HP 24, 23, 22, 21, 20(x3), 19(x3), 18, 18, 17, 16; #AT 1; Dmg 2-5. Special attacks: STR drain. Special defenses: 90% undetectable; +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and cold.

4-60: Elite Guards

Eight elite temple guards under the personal command of Stephania reside here. The guardsmen and their sergeant sleep in bunk beds and possess a trestle table, bench, water barrel, a row of pegs for cloaks and equipment, several armor racks, a shared chest, and a dartboard. They are fanatical. A large mural shows the Long Stair (4-19) and a company of Set Guardsmen escorting a variety of prisoners: inspection will reveal that the faces of the prisoners are individualized, including one that looks very much like Belisarius the Overseer (4-47). These reflect the true enemies of this sept of guardsmen, past and present. If the party has had contact with the cult, the GM might decide that one of the PCs' faces appears on the mural. Most of the time only four guardsmen are present here.

Inhabitants:

1. 4 elite Set guardsmen (see new monsters), as 3rd-level Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 3; HP 26, 25, 25, 24; #AT 1, Dmg 2-7 (mace), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: red scale mail and wooden shield; footman's maces; spears; light crossbows with 20 bolts.
2. Sergeant Triforius (50%), the Set sergeant (see new monsters), as a 5th-level Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL LE; AC 3; MV 60'; HD 5; HP 43; #AT 1, Dmg 3-8 (mace +1), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: Set armor (see Arden Vul items) and wooden shield; footman's mace +1; spear; light crossbow with 20 bolts and 3 bolts of fire (see new magic items).

Treasure:

One of the men has an ivory olifant (75 gp); each has a stash of 10-100 sp.

4-61: Chapel of Set

This is the private chapel to Set used by the senior priests and deacons of the cult. A barrel-vaulted, brick-lined ceiling rises 25' above the floor; the walls are covered by heavy red drapes. The western transept, which is hidden behind the drapery, boasts a huge portrait of Stephania (4-51) in oils as well as two chairs and a table, on which sits a scrying ball (see new magic items) that is keyed to the Forum of Set (4-2). The east transept, which is also hidden by drapery, holds a guard chamber, where four of the elite temple guards from 4-60 wait. At the south end of the chapel is an obsidian altar stained with blood, on which rest an ancient obsidian knife, a copper bowl and a copper goblet. A hidden compartment in the altar (trapped with poison gas) contains the boar's helm, a lesser artifact of Set (see new magic items). The current cult is ignorant of the presence of the helm. Despite the relative simplicity of the décor, the chapel exudes a strong aura of evil; saving throws of evil creatures are at +2 here, while those of good characters are at -2. Set is also more likely to hear invocations to him in this chamber and to send a lesser devil to aid his supplicants. There is a 25% chance that a ritual is taking place in the chapel; if so indicated, it involves High Priestess Stephania and two Set deacons.

Secret Door (in eastern corridor, leading to 4-36): This door is 4'x2.5' in size, and difficult to locate (1 in 8). It opens to those who knock four times in rapid succession on the door. The current Set cult is ignorant of this door.

Inhabitants:

1. 4 elite Set guardsmen (see new monsters), as 3rd-level Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 3; HP 26, 25, 25, 24; #AT 1, Dmg 2-7 (mace), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: red scale mail and wooden shield; footman's maces; spears; light crossbows with 20 bolts.
2. 1-2 Set deacons (see new monsters), as 6th-level Archontean clerics of Set (25% chance): SZ M; AL LE; AC 3; MV 90'; HD 6; HP 39, 36; #AT 1; Dmg 3-8 (mace +1). Possessions: Set armor +1 (see Arden Vul items); deacon's was stick (see new magic items); footman's mace +1; an amulet of protection against normal missiles (see new magic items); a potion of extra healing; a potion of glibness; a scroll of curse; and a gold holy symbol of Set (150 gp). Spells prayed for: command, cure light wounds (x2), cause fear, protection from good; chant, hold person, know alignment, resist fire, silence 15' radius; animate dead, dispel magic, cause blindness; cause serious wounds.
3. High Priestess Stephania (25%); for stats, see 4-51.

Treasure:

The cult objects on the altar are worth 250 gp; the scrying ball; and the Boar's Helm (for the last two, see new magic items).

4-62: Sorcerous Ally

The magic user Pelagion the Grey lives in this hidden chamber. Pelagion is studying the arcanum (see new magic items) deposit in area 4-63, allegedly to provide Belisarius (4-47) with an edge against Stephania (4-51), but in reality to further his own arcane interests. Pelagion's chamber is outfitted with a simple cot, a tripod of heating (see new magic items), two wizard locked chests, a barrel of wine, two boxes of dried foodstuffs, and an adequately-equipped laboratory which Belisarius found to be intact when he discovered this chamber. Pelagion is young (35), but exposure to arcanum has caused unusually deep age-lines on his face and a premature change in hair color (to snowy white). He hops around with manic energy on one leg (the other is withered) and loves nothing more than to expound on the many benefits of arcanum. He has two hellhounds for company and protection.

If approached from the north (i.e., the caves), Pelagion appears cautious but eager to trade knowledge about arcanum. If approached from the south without Belisarius, Pelagion is hostile.

Note: Pelagion is fairly obsessed with arcanum, and has been living here for a year studying the substance. He recognizes the potential dangers of extended exposure to arcanum (exposure that has turned his hair white and aged his appearance), and has taken to breaking off chunks of the stuff for study in the relative safety of 4-62. He has been quite successful, as he has developed a formula for a potion that temporarily enhances INT (clarity) and two new spells. The latter are recorded in his spell book, but the former he has refused to record in writing for fear that its secret will be stolen. In addition to these physical scars of his time with arcanum, Pelagion has become increasingly eccentric, talking to himself in bizarre languages both real and fantastic, licking rock in an (unsuccessful) effort to determine its taste and properties, and generally acting in an unstable way.

Inhabitants:

1. Pelagion the Grey, 6th-level male Archontean magic user: SZ M; AL LE; AC 7; MV 120'; HD 6; HP 19; #AT 1; Dmg 2-5 (dagger +1). Abilities: STR 11, INT 17, WIS 13, DEX 17, CON 10, CHA 12. Possessions: dagger +1; wand of frost (33 charges); ring of spell turning; potion of gaseous form; potions of clarity (x3) (see new magic items). Spells memorized: sleep, shield, magic missile, charm person; mirror image, invisibility; monster summoning I, slow.
2. 2 hell hounds: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 120'; HD 5; HP 35, 31; #AT 1; Dmg 1-10. Special attacks: breathe fire; surprise on 1-4 in 6. Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6. Special: 50% to spot hidden or invisible.

Treasure:

Laboratory: The laboratory itself should be considered a treasure, at least for those parties who are able to defeat or bargain with Pelagion for its use; it is worth 5,000 gp.

On Pelagion or in the room: The mage has a few coins (57 gp); tripod of heating, dagger +1, wand of frost (33 charges), ring of spell turning, potion of gaseous form, and three potions of clarity (see new magic items), the formula for which he invented in a stroke of arcanum-fueled inspiration.

Chest #1: Pelagion's spell book, five blank scrolls, and a scroll of Pelagion's bridge of sighs (see new spells). It also holds the spell book of Visby, a mage caught spying for the Drome (see World of Archontos appendix) in the Forum (4-2) who was subsequently traded to the lizardmen of Sub-Level 5. Visby is currently languishing at SL5-34.

Chest #2: A full stock of alchemical ingredients and material components (1,000 gp for the lot), 8 doses of arcanum jelly (see new magic items), plus a pair (black and yellow) of glass activation squares (see Thothian teleportation rings in new magic items).

Pelagion's Spell Book: Affect normal fires, charm person, comprehend languages, detect magic, enlarge, floating disk, identify, magic missile, read magic, shield, sleep, unseen servant, write; darkness 15' radius; detect invisibility, ESP, invisibility, knock, mirror image, Pelagion's bridge of sighs (see new spells), pyrotechnics, wizard lock; clairaudience, clairvoyance, dispel magic, gust of wind, monster summoning I, Pelagion's rock sympathy (see new spells), slow

Visby's Spell Book: Burning hands, charm person, detect magic, feather fall, floating disk, identify, light, magic missile, read magic, shield, sleep; audible glamer, detect evil, ESP, forget, invisibility, mirror image, ray of enfeeblement, web; clairaudience, clairvoyance, dispel magic, phantasmal force, suggestion, tongues.

4-63: Arcanum Cave

This rocky cave is home to a large deposit of arcanum (see new magic items). Indeed, the center of the cave is completely formed of crystalline growths of this magical substance, causing the entire area to glow with a sickly orange light. This stuff is being studied by Pelagion the Grey (4-62), who uses a wooden stool that stands in the center of the formation; a mallet and several fragments lie to one side.

As with other natural pockets of arcanum, the cave exerts certain compulsions on magic users and illusionists.

4-64: Hidden Prison

Accessible from the secret door in area 4-9, this is the secret prison used by the Guildmasters of the Guild of Service for their most important political prisoners. The cave floor has been smoothed and sanded. Eight sets of steel restraints have been driven into the walls. A wooden bench and table, with a set of wooden cups and a copper ewer sit in the center of the room. At the moment the prison is occupied by three persons: the real Gunnar, Guildmaster of the Guild of Service, who was imprisoned here when the doppelgangers took his place (see 4-10); Kaledon, a deacon of Set, seized by the real Gunnar several months ago for interrogation; and Callista, a good-aligned fighter apprehended by the Guild after it discovered she had been sent by the Imperial Drome (see World of Archontos appendix) to investigate the cult.

If rescued, Gunnar quickly becomes imperious, demanding his return to the main cult centers and offering a minimal reward but immunity from prosecution. Kaledon, however, is obsequious, offering to serve his rescuers (but planning to betray them in order to recover his favor in the cult). Callista will accompany good-aligned parties.

Inhabitants:

1. Gunnar, Master of the Guild of Service, 10th-level male Wisikin thief: SZ M; AL LE; AC 7; MV 120'; HD 10; HP 18 (max 48); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 17, INT 14, WIS 12, DEX 17, CON 14, CHA 13. Thief skills: PP 85%, OL 77%, F/RT 65%, MS 83%, HS 68%, HN 30%, CW 99%, RL 50%. Possessions: none.
2. Kaledon, a Set deacon (see new monsters), as a 6th-level Archontean cleric of Set: SZ M; AL LE; AC 10; MV 120'; HD 6; HP 8 (max 37); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 12, INT 12, WIS 17, DEX 9, CON 10, CHA 14. Kaledon has no possessions, nor has he been able to pray for spells.

3. Callista, 4th-level female Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL CG; AC 10; MV 120'; HD 4; HP 12 (max 41); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 17, INT 10, WIS 11, DEX 13, CON 17, CHA 15.

4-65: Sink Hole and Whirlpool

The river ends in a huge sink hole and whirlpool. Those swept into the whirlpool will surely drown unless protected by magic, for the sink hole descends over 100' through rocky passages to area 5-103.

A ledge 15' up on the south side overlooks the maelstrom and leads to the secret prison at 4-64.

4-66: Lizard Cavern and Cliff

This large cavern marks the northern boundary of the effective area controlled by the cult of Set (although in the old days they dominated the caverns beyond). Key features are a river running down the middle of the cavern, a stone bridge across the river, a 40'-tall cliff on the south side of the river, and a steep ramp connecting the top of the cliff to the cave floor. On the north side of the river may be found some small patches of giant and regular mushrooms, as well as large patches of lichen on the walls. Numerous small lizards (1'-2' long) and pale, white cave flitters (like dragonflies) make their home in the crannies that line the walls of the cave. At the western end of the cavern is a 40' waterfall, as well as another 40'-tall cliff. A patrol of Set guardsmen armed with missile weapons lurks at the top of the southern cliff. If engaged by strong forces, the acolyte blows an olifant to summon assistance from 4-45 and 4-46.

Stone Bridge: This slender span gracefully arches over the river. It is 6' wide and rises 10' above the river. Sconces at each end hold burning torches.

Inhabitants:

1. 4 Set guardsmen (see new monsters), as 2nd-level Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 15, 12; #AT 1, Dmg 2-7 (mace), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: red scale mail and wooden shield; footman's maces; spears; light crossbows with 20 bolts.
2. 1 Set acolyte (see new monsters), as a 3rd-level Archontean cleric of Set: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 60'; HD 3; HP 19; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (mace) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Possessions: Set armor (see Arden Vul items); footman's mace; light crossbow; acolyte's was stick (see new magic items); and a silver holy symbol of Set (10 gp). Spells prayed for: command, cure light wounds, curse (reverse of bless), protection from good; hold person, silence 15' radius.

4-67: Rushing River

The river is formed from two smaller streams that join at the western edge of the cavern (4-66). Throughout the cavern the river is 10' deep and boasts a strong current. Anyone falling in has a good chance of being pulled to his/her death at 4-65.

4-68: Cavern with Hole

This large cavern is properly a side-cavern of 4-66, and is marked by a branch of the subterranean river flowing through it. The air is cool and moist, and numerous colonies of mold and lichen grow here. Large numbers of cave crickets inhabit the cavern. A 10'-diameter hole in the cave floor drops 15' down into the ceiling of the tunnel running between 4-72 and 4-90. This hole provides fine access to the subterranean lizards (4-72) that like to hunt crickets here.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 subterranean lizards: SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 6; HP 42, 38; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12. Special attacks: double damage on a natural roll to hit of 20.

4-69: Fallen Statue

This 25'-tall cavern has a sandy floor from the center of which protrudes the stump of a broken statue; only about 4' of legs (twined in a robe) are visible. Some shapeless lumps of stone nearby are probably the rest of the statue. Should the inquisitive dig into the sand to find the statue's base, they will discover a circular pavement some 12' in diameter into which has been set a beautiful mosaic of pastoral subterranean scenes: lizards, mushrooms, bats, sarcophagi, altars, etc. The base of the statue reads (in Mithric): "Chibalba, lord of the Deeps, watches over these caves. Summon him if thy need is great." Chibalba, guardian of the underworld, was also in antiquity associated with subterranean life and protection. Should anyone standing on the mosaic either 1) state Chibalba's name three times in a row, or 2) declaim "I summon thee, Chibalba!", an avatar of this deity will arrive to lend temporary aid and protection to the invokers. The aid imparted by the avatar depends on the needs of those making the invocation:

Situation	Aid Offered
In combat	Avatar fights for duration of one combat: AC 0, HD 8, HP 58, #AT 1, damage 1-10
Badly wounded	Cure critical wounds x2
Lightly wounded	Cure serious wounds x2
Uninjured	Detect traps, infravision, and locate place (see new spells), all of which last for 10 turns

The GM should use his/her best judgment in determining which situation is most appropriate.

Speaking in the Mithric language, the avatar describes in a solemn, deep voice what aid it will impart. This advice takes one round to describe, after which the avatar does not communicate in any way.

Summoning the avatar is only possible once per month. Should a cleric of Chibalba invoke the deity, all four types of aid will be proffered to the cleric and his friends (with the combat avatar serving the cleric for one whole day, or until it is destroyed, whichever comes first).

Note: Two other identical (and more intact) statues of Chibalba appear at 8-66 and 9-87.

4-70: Warning Sign

A human wearing only a filthy loincloth has been crucified upside down on the north wall of this tee-intersection. His eyes have been plucked out, and his flesh is badly gnawed. On the wall next to him is scrawled in blood and in Archontean, "The fate of runaways!" There is a 33% chance that one of the subterranean lizards (4-72) is here feeding on the corpse.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 subterranean lizard (33% chance): SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 6; HP 39; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12. Special attacks: double damage on a natural roll to hit of 20.

4-71: Subterranean Lizards

Two of the large subterranean lizards are presently foraging in this otherwise nondescript cave.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 subterranean lizards: SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 6; HP 38, 36; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12. Special attacks: double damage on a natural roll to hit of 20.

4-72: Lair of the Subterranean Lizards

This area is the primary lair of the pack of subterranean lizards that forages in the local cave system. Along the east wall is a hollow into which drips limey, but potable, water. The floor is sandy and features four knobs ranging from 3' to 6' in height. Around the knobs are a total of 15 small individual nests. That said, no more than six subterranean lizards will be present in the cave at any one time. At least one of the lizards who is present will be on the ceiling when PCs arrive, and the others will use the knobs as points from which to leap at unsuspecting PCs.

One of the nests has a clutch of 5 eggs in it; these might be valuable to the right buyer, provided they are intact (and alive) when sold.

Inhabitants:

1. 3-6 subterranean lizards: SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 6; HP 45, 43, 41, 39, 37, 35; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12. Special attacks: double damage on a natural roll to hit of 20.

Treasure:

5 subterranean lizards eggs (100 gp each).

4-73: Devoured Corpses

The remains of three partially devoured corpses lie in this crossroads. One is a Set guardsman, whose armor lies broken and useless next to him; his pouch, which contains a 20 gp moss agate and 26 sp, is obscured by his broken helmet. The other two are adventurers, a half-elf ranger and a human magic user; among their effects are some valuables. All weapons are gone. There is a 50% chance for 1-2 subterranean lizards to be present.

Inhabitants:

1. 1-2 subterranean lizards (50% chance): SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 6; HP 41, 36; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12. Special attacks: double damage on a natural roll to hit of 20.

Treasure:

A moss agate (20 gp), 26 sp; 10 arrows +2; pouch of gold dust (25 gp); bone scroll case with three spells, blink, water breathing, and Basil's torch treatment (see new spells).

4-74: Heqeti Outpost

The heqeti have recently restored this ancient watch post. The rough walls of the chamber are coated in glistening slime and are starting to exhibit the pebbled texture familiar to heqeti areas of the Halls. To the southeast is one of the great pukel-manders (see new magic items), while the northwest contains a heqeti teleport well. The narrow western tunnel leads to the river, although it opens 15' above the river itself. Four heqeti hoppers are stationed here, collecting intelligence about this section of the Halls.

Heqeti Teleport Well: The well takes the form of a 7'-diameter circle of stone rising 3' above the floor. It appears to contain nothing but inky blackness; objects tossed into it make no sound. One employs the well by jumping into it, only to emerge some seconds later at area 10-24.

Secret Door (north): This heqeti-formed secret door is normal to find, and opens with the simple application of brute strength (a successful open doors roll).

Inhabitants:

1. 4 heqeti hoppers (see new monsters), as 4th-level fighters: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 60', 150' swimming; HD 4; HP 28, 26, 24, 22; #AT 2; Dmg 2-7 (spear), 1-6 (bite). Special attacks: hop; +1 to damage due to STR; toxic skin (paralysis for 1-2 rounds). Special defenses: psionic resistance; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and water/ice.

4-74A: Dead End Cave?

A set of rough-carved stairs leads up from area 4-73 to this small cave. Aside from a slightly oily film glistening on the cave walls, the cave contains only a pair of ancient skeletons manacled together at wrist and feet. The (human) skeletons carry no gear and are inanimate.

Secret Door (south): The door is hard to find (1 in 8), and can only be opened by pulling it open (into 4-74A) by brute force (i.e., by a successful open doors check).

4-75: Escaped Slaves

Several former slaves have escaped from the cult of Set and taken up temporary residence in this large cave. Having heard rumors of a successful escape some years before (c.f. area 4-100), these escapees have headed north towards the 'promised land'. They are 'pretty sure' that there is safe haven to the north, but have been unable to find it. The cave in which they are dwelling is quite damp, with moisture-slick walls but no standing water. Since the ex-slaves have only managed to kill a few lizards over the past week, they are hungry, thirsty, and quite desperate. Among the group they have two daggers and one short sword, but no armor. The slaves know about the tunnel at 4-76, but don't want to descend deeper into the caves because that was not how the route to the promised land was described to them. They also can describe area 4-66, but won't venture there due to their fear of Set patrols. They are beginning to suspect that another exit (4-88) lies nearby, but haven't found it yet and are as yet divided as to whether to pursue it or the legendary promised land. They are terrified of the owlbeats, who have already killed two of their number.

Inhabitants: 2-5 humans, escaped from the slave pits of the cult of Set. At the GM's will some of these might be classed NPCs or men at arms.

4-76: Long Tunnel to Sub-Level 7 (SL7-37)

This wide tunnel corkscrews downward at a steep angle to the Flooded Vaults of Sub-Level 7 (SL7-37).

4-77: Smelly Cave

Despite a faint breeze running from 4-69 towards 4-88, a slight stench lingers in the air of this cave (from the owlbeats of 4-81 and 4-79). The pool of clear water along the eastern side of the cave draws many denizens of the caves, particularly the owlbeats (75% for 1-2 owlbeats). Lots of small, ordinary lizards live in this cave; their constant movement may distract the nervous.

Inhabitants:

1. 1-2 adolescent owlbeats (75%): SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 4+2; HP 29, 25; #AT 3; Dmg 1-6/1-6/1-4. Special attacks: hug.

4-78: Small Cave with a Secret

This small cave is covered with a harmless yellow mold (which might appear as the harmful kind). Behind a protruding rock is a 5'-diameter hole that drops down 25' to a tunnel. The tunnel snakes away to the south, and eventually leads to 4-9. Inspection reveals footholds chiseled in the hole.

4-79: Lesser Lair

Three adolescent owlbeats inhabit this cave. Because they normally must defer to the elders in 4-81, these owlbeats are always exceedingly hungry; they rush to investigate light or sound in 4-80. Their nest smells rank, but not as badly as the main nest in 4-81.

Inhabitants:

1. 3 adolescent owlbeats: SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 4+2; HP 29, 27, 25; #AT 3; Dmg 1-6/1-6/1-4. Special attacks: hug.

Treasure:

A leather sack with 240 sp is buried haphazardly in their nest.

4-80: Bones

The mostly skeletal remains of two Set guardsmen and two other indeterminate humans - meals for the owlbeats - lie on the floor of this cave. It is possible to salvage one usable set of red Set armor (see Arden Vul items) from the bodies. Noise or light here attracts the denizens of 4-79 within 3 rounds.

Treasure:

A suit of Set armor (see Arden Vul items).

4-81: Owlbear Lair

The rank smell of this cave betrays the presence of a trio of fierce adult owlbeats. Their nest is a pile of sticks, bones, pelts, and refuse. A disgusting pool of befouled water occupies the eastern ell of the cave.

Inhabitants:

1. Owlbear patriarch: SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 7; HP 48; #AT 3; Dmg 1-6/1-6/2-12. Special attacks: hug.
2. 2 female owlbeats: SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 5+2; HP 37, 35; #AT 3; Dmg 1-6/1-6/2-12. Special attacks: hug.

Treasure:

Scattered in the nest are a handful of gems (2-5 in number, each worth 50-100 gp), a white glass activation square (see Thothian teleportation rings in new magic items), a bag of tricks (grey), and three arrows of slaying (reptiles).

4-82: Empty Cavern

This high-ceilinged cavern features a sandy floor filled with indistinct tracks, some taloned and some booted. The dried molt skin of an enormous snake (25' long) is attached to a spear, which has been thrust into the sand. The skin flutters in the gentle breeze that blows towards 4-88. A foul reek of rot and excrement wafts on the breeze from the west (the scent originates in area 4-81). Numerous small lizards and cave crickets inhabit the cave. Those who dig in the sand will find the rusted remains of an ancient battle: 1-6 ruined weapons and 1-8 bits of unusable armor.

4-83: Small Cave

This cave is rocky, uneven, and difficult to traverse, and may appear as a dead end at first, for the exit to the south (towards 4-63) is hidden behind a rock spur. Searching amid the rocks will produce a holy symbol of Set (a silver was-stick) worth 25 gp.

4-84: Set Watchpoint

A magic mouth modified to allow clairvoyance is set in the northern ell of this cave. The face takes the shape of a severe man and barks, "Who goes there?" in Archontean at any motion within 20'. The eyes of the face convey images of what passes it to the guard chamber at area 4-45 (the eyes do not see in the dark, nor do they have infravision). As a result of this clairvoyance, a patrol of Set guardsmen arrives within 3 turns to investigate intruders. There is a 10% chance that a patrol is already on its way and will arrive within 2-4 rounds.

Inhabitants:

1. 4 Set guardsmen (see new monsters), as 2nd-level Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 15, 12; #AT 1, Dmg 2-7 (mace), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: red scale mail and wooden shield; footman's maces; spears; light crossbows with 20 bolts.
2. 1 Set acolyte (see new monsters), as a 3rd-level Archontean cleric of Set: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 60'; HD 3; HP 19; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (mace) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Possessions: Set armor (see Arden Vul items); footman's mace; light crossbow; acolyte's was stick (see new magic items); and a silver holy symbol of Set (10 gp). Spells prayed for: command, cure light wounds, curse (reverse of bless), protection from good; hold person, silence 15' radius.

4-85: Hidden Preparation Room

Accessible only from the river or from the secret door in 4-86, this forgotten chamber was used during the Archontean golden age by sorcerers wishing to prepare for a safe - but rapid - descent through the waters of Level 4 and 5. The chamber features worked-stone walls, once painted but now coated merely with smears of mildewed color. The slick floor has been paved with slate flagstones. A great roaring sound comes from river and especially from area to the east (4-65).

Against the north wall rest two egg-shaped vessels some 8' tall and 6' wide. They appear to be made of some sort of leather or hide and both feature a 4'-square flap. Inside each egg are three seats attached to the walls and a small metal cube attached to the 'floor'. The metal box has an indentation shaped like a fish on its top. It is clearly possible for 3 persons (medium sized) to squeeze into one of the eggs and be launched into the river. Doing so without a control stabilizer, which must be inserted into the fish-shaped indentation on the cube, will likely prove fatal, for the inhabitants will be thrown about as the egg plummets down the chute (4-65) and into the river on Level 5. If a stabilizer can be located and utilized, however, the egg will remain perfectly stable despite the roughness of its passage. The only remaining stabilizers may be found at 3-67, 4-2D, 5-102, 7-76C, 8-146, 9-33, and SL4-40F. In addition, Kerbog Khan has a number of control rods in his possession at any given time (see SL12-23).

A 6'-diameter ring of mosaic tiles showing piscine scenes is inlaid on the floor near the western wall; nestled among the fish is the inscription (in Mithric): "What do you require?" Should one speak the correct command phrase firmly, and in Mithric, a new 'egg' appears magically on the mosaic: the requisite phrase is "I require transport."

Treasure:

Inside one of the eggs are two ancient octagonal platinum coins (see Arden Vul items).

4-86: Quiet Cave

Some long-dead sorcerers have enchanted this small natural cave such that it is inimical to monsters. Player characters can safely rest here.

Secret Door (south): The door is difficult to find, as it is perfectly camouflaged with the cave wall (1 in 8). Once located, its hidden catch is easy to find and pull.

4-87: Descending Tunnel to Level 5 (5-33)

This cold and drafty tunnel descends about 100' to Level 5 (5-33).

4-88: Ascending Tunnel to Level 3 (3-115)

This rocky tunnel climbs about 100' until it debouches in area 3-115. A light breeze runs upwards in the direction of 3-115.

4-89: Golden Monkey

This large cavern is moist and cool. It is empty save for a strange, solid gold, statuette of a monkey abandoned by an adventurer on a ledge in the southwestern corner. The monkey has four sets of limbs; the lower forms the lotus position, while the upper three cover its ears, eyes, and mouth respectively. A huge single eye, inset with lapis lazuli, is set in its rotund belly. Its base is inscribed with the word "Victory!" in Mithric. The monkey is valuable (2,000 gp) but cursed such that the first person to pick it up will go deaf, dumb and blind. It detects of magic and chaos. The only way to avoid the curse is to cover the eye on the monkey's belly when picking it up.

Treasure:

Cursed golden monkey (2,000 gp).

4-90: Crystalline Growths and Tunnel Down to Level 7 (7-118)

The temperature here is quite hot (~120F) and the humidity is close to 100%. Colossal columns of gypsum crisscross the chamber. Embedded amid the growths is a brightly lit silver bell some 3' in diameter. Four selenite guardians tend the cave, and will be upset if intruders disturb the gypsum in order to recover the bell. They will remonstrate in their own language, but if unsuccessful in communication, they attack. The bell is pretty and enchanted with continual light, but has no other properties.

The tunnel to the west leads westward and downward more than 900' to Level 7 (7-118).

Inhabitants:

1. 4 selenite guardians (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 2; MV 30' on dirt, 60' on selenite; HD 6; HP 41, 37, 36, 35; #AT 2; Dmg 2-8/2-8. Special defenses: regenerate 2 HP/round near selenite; immune to fire and water; take only 1 HP from edged weapons.

Treasure:

Continual light bell (weighs 400 lb and is worth 400 gp).

4-91: Swift Stream

The stream flows south at a swift pace. It is about 3' deep in a 6'-tall tunnel, so it is possible to wade upstream. Doing so incurs a risk of slipping and falling, and of being swept downstream. Roll 3d8 under DEX to avoid falling, or else take 2-12 HP damage. Jammed into a cleft in the rock just where the stream crosses above area 4-73 is a bolt of fire (see new magic items).

4-92: Crossroads

Four distinct tunnels converge in this crossroads cave. The floor is rocky and uneven, but a ranger or dwarf might notice tracks leading northwest. A sharp-nosed individual might also smell the faint odor of cooking meat coming from the same direction.

4-93: Side Cave

Hoping to trap some subterranean lizards or other edible prey, the escaped slaves (4-100) have rigged a rock fall over the entrance to this cave. The cave is empty save for three rotting - and gutted - lizard carcasses.

Trap (rockfall): This trap inflicts 2-12 HP damage from falling rocks. Within two turns, moreover, a group of 5 slaves arrives to investigate the noise.

4-94: Misty Cave

This cave drops 20' down from the main tunnel and is damp and misty; visibility is only 10' in the mist. At the entrance of the cave is a petrified Set guardsman, stoned in the midst of throwing his hands over his eyes. Despite the evidence of the statue, the cave is now empty, although careful searching reveals lizard-like bones at the back of the cave. Should the guardsman be restored somehow, he will be grateful but confused, for he is now 1,522 years old and does not speak Archontean. His name is Clarus.

Inhabitants:

1. Clarus, ancient Set guardsman (see new monsters), as a 2nd-level male Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 120'; HD 2; HP 20; #AT 1, Dmg 2-7 (short sword), 2-7 (javelin). Special defense: fanaticism. Abilities: STR 16, INT 9, WIS 11, DEX 15, CON 16, CHA 8. Possessions: red Set Armor (see Arden Vul items); short sword; javelin; purse with 45 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items). Clarus only speaks Mithric.

4-95: Statuary

This cave is level with the main tunnel, and contains 6 more examples of petrified persons: two Set guardsmen, a Set acolyte, a female thief, an owlbear, and a true varumani in armor. All are ancient, as the youngest victim (the owlbear) died over 900 years ago. All could be restored if it were so desired. Other than the six petrified figures, the cave is empty. A strange breeze blows from east to west, and the smell of burnt cinnamon floats on that breeze.

Inhabitants:

1. Horatio, Set guardsman (see new monsters), as a 2nd-level Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL LE; AC 3; MV 120'; HD 2; HP 18; #AT 1, Dmg 2-7 (short sword), 2-7 (javelin). Abilities: STR 16, INT 9, WIS 11, DEX 12, CON 16, CHA 10. Possessions: red Set armor (see Arden Vul items) and wooden shield; short sword; javelin; purse with 15 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items). Horatio speaks only Mithric.
2. Lucinda, ancient Set guardsman (see new monsters), as a 2nd-level female Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL LE; AC 3; MV 120'; HD 2; HP 17; #AT 1, Dmg 2-7 (short sword), 2-7 (javelin). Abilities: STR 17, INT 11, WIS 8, DEX 14, CON 16, CHA 15. Possessions: red Set Armor (see Arden Vul items) and wooden shield; short sword; javelin; purse with 25 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items). Lucinda speaks only Mithric.
3. Blutus, an ancient Set acolyte (see new monsters), as a 3rd-level Archontean cleric of Set: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 120'; HD 3; HP 19; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (mace) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Abilities: STR 15, INT 9, WIS 15, DEX 10, CON 10, CHA 9. Possessions: Set armor (see Arden Vul items); footman's mace; light crossbow; acolyte's was stick (see new magic items); purse with 5 ancient gold solidi and 15 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items for both); and a silver holy symbol of Set (10 gp). Spells prayed for: command, cure light wounds, curse (reverse of bless), protection from good; hold person, silence 15' radius. Blutus speaks only Mithric.
4. Pharastina, 7th-level female Thorcin thief: SZ M; AL CN; AC 4; MV 120'; HD 7; HP 39; #AT 1; Dmg 3-8 (short sword +2), or 2-5 (daggers +1). Abilities: STR 13, INT 17, WIS 15, DEX 17, CON 15, CHA 11. Thief skills: PP 65%, OL 62%, F/RT 50%, MS 60%, HS 48%, HN 25%, CW 94%, RL 35%. Possessions: leather armor +1; a set of 6 throwing daggers +1; a curved short sword +2; a potion of gaseous form; and a clan symbol of a crane. Pharastina was the sister of the famed warrior and mercenary Phagtro (see World of Archontos appendix), and a minor hero in her own right. She speaks poor Mithric but is fluent in an obscure dialect of Thorcin.
5. 1 owlbear: SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 5+2; HP 29; #AT 3; Dmg 1-6/1-6/2-12. Special attacks: hug.
6. Ludrig, a true varumani (see new monsters) SZ L; AL LN; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 60; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 6-24 (two-handed sword, 2-20+4). Special defenses: surprised only on

1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: huge two-handed sword; ring mail; troll thegn's passport (see Arden Vul items); 3 ancient octagonal platinum coins (see Arden Vul items); a sack of 20 citrine gems worth 50 gp each; and a 12-folio Varumani-Archontean wordlist. Ludrig is quite intelligent, and fluent in Mithric. He served as an advisor to the Archontes during the period in which the troll thegn (7-30) accepted imperial suzerainty. Ludrig's appearance at the varumani court (7-75) would create a major stir; still, once his identity was established, many varumani would shun him as a collaborator.

4-96: Xorn Feeding Zone

This chamber is about 8 degrees colder than the surrounding caves, and is ripe for the growth of a patch of psychotropic pale-blue lichen known as blue haze (see new flora). The lichen covers all the walls, floor and ceiling of this cave. Two xorn have become addicted to the lichen and are currently wandering around the chamber in a drugged stupor, snacking aimlessly on the lichen. The xorn respond to offers of gems or precious metals, but attack those who disturb their stash (i.e., the lichen).

Inhabitants:

1. 2 xorn: SZ M; AL N; AC -2; MV 90'; HD 7+7; HP 55, 49; #AT 4; Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-3/6-24. Special attacks: surprise on 1-5. Special defenses: immune to fire and cold; half damage from electricity; travel through stone.

Treasure:

Blue haze lichen (see new flora), enough for 20 doses.

4-97: Cave of Fungi and Lichen

This large cavern is home to numerous species of mushroom and lichen. There are some red veil and aqua vitae mushrooms (see new flora) scattered among the larger species, a few of which are themselves edible. The escaped slaves make use of these mushrooms for food and fuel. Among the stalks dwell 8 fungal foresters; they are not necessarily hostile.

Inhabitants:

1. 4 spotted fungal foresters (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 30' on rock, 90' in fungal forests; HD 4; HP 27, 25, 23, 21; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12.
2. 2 blue fungal foresters (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 30' on rock, 90' in fungal forests; HD 6; HP 35, 34; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12. Special attacks: spore cloud (stun).
3. 1 yellow fungal forester (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 30' on rock, 90' in fungal forests; HD 6; HP 35; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12. Special defenses: spore cloud (missile/spell defense).
4. 1 black fungal foresters (see new monsters): SZ L; AL N; AC 4; MV 30' on rock, 90' in fungal forests; HD 8; HP 53; #AT 1; Dmg 4-16. Special attacks: spore clouds (stunning, and missile/spell defense).

4-97A: Sunken Pit

This area is sunken about 20' below the floor of the main mushroom cave. The pit is warmer in temperature by 10-degrees, and is home to a species of small yellow mushroom known to experienced dungeoneers as mind eaters (see new flora). A scrawny escaped slave named Michael is sitting in the midst of the mushrooms, rocking back and forth while singing little bits of nonsense. Michael ate of the mind eaters and lost his mind; he is slowly starving to death. He backs away from PCs but might (50%) attack if his 'food' is threatened. His face is dusted yellow from the mushrooms - a sign to wary PCs.

Inhabitants:

1. Crazy-Man Michael, an insane Archontean ex-slave: SZ M; AL N; AC 9; MV 120'; HD 1-1; HP 4; #AT 1; Dmg 1-3 (bone knife).

4-97B: Ledge

This ledge is 20' above the floor of the fungus cave. It is covered with two varieties of lichen, one red and one grey. These lichen are symbiotic and, in when they exist in large enough concentrations (as is the case here), can issue a telepathic collective thought-impulse to all those within a 10' radius. The lichen-mind is rather alien, and must be successfully understood before negotiation can occur. The lichen will demand passage (in bulk, that is, in 10'-diameter sections of each species) to a new location (e.g. the Great Cavern [3-162, 3-172]) in return for information; the information they can impart is the location of a 'being like you, although silent.' They refer to a limed-over skeleton at the far north of their ledge; the skeleton would be difficult to notice without help. The skeleton is of a hero of the ancient age, one Chramn the Hunter, who died of wounds incurred in fighting a basilisk (now dead). With Chramn's body may be found his magic two-handed sword, a basilisk horn, and an imperial rescript, carefully folded up in a leather pouch. The rescript reads, in Mithric: "What the bearer has done, he has done for the good of the Empire. Signed, L., Logothete of the Drome". It takes several hours of careful scraping, as well as suitable carrying cases, to prepare the telepathic lichen for travel; the lichen will also be quite particular about their new home: it must be cool, not too busy, and not too out-of-the-way. In fact, it must be just right.

Inhabitants:

1. Telepathic lichen (see above).

Treasure:

Two-handed sword +2, imperial rescript, and basilisk horn. GM Note: The rescript is of potentially enormous value, as it could easily be used by unscrupulous parties to justify all manner of actions in the name of the Drome. Should a current logothete of the Drome become aware of this usage, however, a reckoning will be in order. Leonidas was logothete of the Drome in Archontos in the year 1653 AEP.

4-98: Lair of the Boalisk

An albino boalisk makes its home in a cave located just to the east of the pond. This dangerous predator is fearless and willing to take on large potential prey. Its familiarity with the area gives it a +1 chance to surprise.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 albino boalisk (40%): SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 5+1; HP 33; #AT 2; Dmg 1-3/2-7. Special attacks: constriction; gaze attack causes mummy rot.

4-99: Clear Pond

Clear and deep (35'), this pond is home to numerous blind cavefish. Both the slaves and the boalisk get most of their nutrients here.

Inhabitants:

1. Albino boalisk (60%): for stats see 4-98.

4-100: Escaped Slaves

A small group of slaves who escaped from the clutches of the cult of Set have established a community here. Twenty-five individuals, of several species, inhabit this pair of caves that open some 30' above the clear pond (4-99). A fire made of mushroom stalks crackles in the western-most ell of the cave, producing lots of smoke. Torches of mushroom stalk (taken from 4-97) hang near the entrance, and in the northern ell. The community has stolen or looted several important items: a large keg of lamp oil, now  $\frac{2}{3}$  used; some jury-rigged cookware (made of helmets and whatever else they can find), a barrel of dried meat, 4 suits of red Set armor (see Arden Vul items), 4 long swords, 2 short swords, a dozen knives, and, strangely enough, a wand of enemy detection (20 charges) and a wand of fire (10 charges).

Most of the community are human commoners, although there are 3 goblins, 1 lizardman, and a beastman (sheep brother). The community is fiercely protective of its members, but is anxious to escape the Halls. Its leaders will negotiate happily with good-aligned PCs, and will exchange labor, information and possibly one or both of the wands for a) food, and b) assistance in departing the Halls. They might also ask for help in 'saving' their former comrade, now known sadly, but affectionately, as Crazy-Man Michael (4-97A); unfortunately Michael cannot be saved.

The leaders of the community are three classed individuals. Theophrastus, a cleric, is a peaceful type, taken by a rare Set patrol out in the valley below the Halls, and is largely ignorant of the Halls save for the Precincts of Set. Jostri and Hexameros are adventurers who worked their way (separately) into the Halls from the cliff face (EX-15). The leaders know about the exit down the Long Stairs (4-19), but have been unable to figure out a plan to sneak past the Forum of Set.

The community has established a fairly safe, if still precarious situation; they fish in the pond (avoiding the boalisk in 4-98), harvest fungi and lichen from 4-97, and occasionally hunt lizards or ambush Set patrols in the surrounding caves. When venturing out of their cave they always travel in groups of five, and each group carries one of four bone whistles crafted by Jostri. If they run into difficulties, they blow the whistle and bring the classed leaders running (cautiously) to assist.

Should visitors defeat the boalisk (4-98) and produce evidence of that fact, the community will be extremely grateful; the ex-slaves will treat the CHA of all PCs as 4 higher than normal for purposes of reaction rolls.

Inhabitants:

1. Theophrastus, 6th-level male Archontean cleric of Demma: SZ M; AL LG; AC 4; MV 60'; HD 6; HP 49; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (footman's flail). Abilities: STR 15, INT 8, WIS 16, DEX 9, CON 16, CHA 16. Possessions: Set armor (see Arden Vul items); footman's flail; scroll of knit bones (see new spells). Spells: cure light wounds(x2), light, purify food and drink, resist cold; augury, chant, hold person, silence 15' radius, slow poison; create food and water (x2).
2. Jostri the skald, 2nd-level male Wiskin thief: SZ M; AL N; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 2; HP 8; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger). Abilities: STR 9, INT 11, WIS 13, DEX 16, CON 10, CHA 15. Thief skills: PP 35%, OL 34%, F/RT 25%, MS 21%, HS 15%, HN 10%, CW 86%. Possessions: dagger.
3. Hexameros, 3rd-level male Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL LN; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 3; HP 25; #AT 1; Dmg 2-9. Abilities: STR 16, INT 12, WIS 10, DEX 9, CON 16, CHA 10. Possessions: stolen Set armor (see Arden Vul items); long sword.
4. 1 lizardman: SZ M; AL N; AC 5; MV 60', 120' swimming; HD 2+1; HP 12; #AT 1 or 3; Dmg by weapon, or 1-2/1-2/1-8.
5. 1 beastman trooper (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 8, 7, 7, 6, 6, 5; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (club). Special attacks: tactics.
6. 3 goblins: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 5, 4, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.
7. 17 Thorcin humans, of which 10 are men and 7 are women: SZ M; AL varies; AC 10; MV 120'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 7, 6(x3), 5(x3), 4(x3), 3(x3), 2(x3); #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (club). Possessions: clubs.
8. 3 Thorcin children, noncombatants: AC 10, HP 1.

Aside from the weapons listed above, the community members are armed with bone clubs and simple spears salvaged from the caves of Arden Vul.

Treasure:

Wand of enemy detection (20 charges), wand of fire (10 charges), four sets of Set armor (see Arden Vul items).

4-101 to 4-104: Ambassadors' Residences

This set of chambers just off the Forum is reserved for the lodging of important ambassadors. The hallway, common area, and individual rooms all feature 20' ceilings. The common area outside the chambers is furnished with two low coffee tables, a small cabinet with a few bits of promotional literature (a scroll outlining the greatness of Set; a small quire of illustrations of great moments in the cult of Set, complete with the plucking of a sad-looking ibis, etc.), and eight comfortable chairs, two of which are sized for large creatures. Two of the chambers feature spy holes used by the priests of Set to spy on their guests. The Set cult typically uses the 'gift' of residence in these chambers as a way of wooing important or powerful guests. Ambassadors from weaker cultures or institutions are flatly rebuffed, as are those from groups subject to the human-focused cult's casual racism. This means that neither goblins nor lizardmen (for example) have been permitted in this area. Powerful, high-level, PCs who have done favors for (or promised favors to) the cult might - might! - be permitted to stay here.

4-101: Emissaries from the Troll Thegn

Four varumani (three lesser, one true) reside here as quasi-permanent ambassadors from the court of the troll thegn (see 7-75). They have four beds; a table with dice, cards, and several bottles of good ale; waste pails; a locked chest; and the services of a goblin slave. The walls are neutral, being painted a nice ochre color so as not to offend. The lesser varumani have devised their own dartboard out of their previous servant, a human named Max.

The lesser varumani defer to the true varumani, who is named Yoburra. He is the one entrusted with actual diplomacy, as he is far smarter than his lesser cousins. All four, however, see this posting as a joke, as none of them respect the Set priests. Instead they enjoy lolling around, pretending to care about the machinations of the Set cult. Despite their ill-concealed contempt for the Set priests, they pay close attention to first-time visitors to the forum, for their primary task is to keep the thegn apprised of potential threats - and/or potential allies.

A set of spy holes is concealed in the stonework of the east wall (see 4-101A).

Inhabitants:

1. 3 lesser varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 58, 57, 52; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (mattock, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighters or 8th-level magic users, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: mattocks.
2. Yoburra, a true varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LN; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 60; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 6-24 (two-handed sword, 2-20+4). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: huge two-handed sword, ring mail.

3. 1 goblin slave named Quarm: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.

Treasure:

Inside the locked chest are 10 1-lb platinum bars worth 250 gp each, a sack of 143 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items), 10 passes to the troll thegn's court (see Arden Vul items), a peript of proof against poison, a wand of detect lie (56 charges), and a rudishva communication array (see new technological items) which they use to report back to the thegn.

4-101A: Spy Passages

These narrow, roughly-shaped passages allow the Set cult to spy on emissaries residing in areas 4-101 and 4-102. The stairs descending to area 4-19 are unusually steep.

A wooden shelf is set into the wall between the two sets of spy holes. It contains a stylus, an inkpot, and an unbound parchment quire. The folios of the quire are divided into two columns, one entitled 'trolls' and the other 'giants'. The observations are mostly mundane, although a few entries are interesting. For instance, on folio 7 the spies have recorded the varumani emissaries talking about the plans of Varboka, the troll thegn (7-30), to enslave the goblins. This information would bring 4,500 gp from King Weskenim (SL4-22). On folio 6, the notes report that the giant emissaries have decided to accept the offer of alliance tendered by the high priestess (4-51); they have agreed to initiate attacks against the Archontean outposts beginning in the next harvest season. This information would bring 5,000 gp to Keko the Lame in Narsileon (see World of Archontos appendix). Showing the spy notes to the giants brings mere shrugs, as the giants expect that sort of thing; showing the notes to the varumani, however, causes Varboka to withdraw his emissaries and to prepare for conflict with the Set cult. GM Note: Stephania's proposed alliance with the giants allows the GM to develop further adventures outside of Arden Vul.

There is a 25% chance that a low-ranking member of the Guild of Service is present here, spying on the emissaries.

Secret Door (east): The door is easy to locate from this side (1 in 4). It must be physically pulled inward to open it.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 guildsman, as a 2nd-level male Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL LE; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 2; HP 16; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (spears, clubs). Possessions: leather armor; spear; and club. Special: he has +1 to damage from STR.

4-102: Giant Emissaries

Two frost giant ambassadors are resident here. Hjall and Hedin are secretive and largely stay in their chamber, which they have made 'homey' by having their winter wolf spray frost throughout it. The giants do not like the varumani, nor do they particularly care for the Set priests. Although they have been officially sent here by their jarl to negotiate an alliance with Set against the Archontean empire (see 4-101A), they have a secondary motive: the jarl's wife has the gift of sight and has predicted that a dangerous potential ally or enemy will appear in the Forum in the next three months. According to the prophecy, this ally or enemy will be a female human magic user with raven-black hair. They aren't sure what the premonition is all about, but they have orders to seize the object of the premonition and return with her to the jarl. Any human mage, including PCs, who fits these features may be in danger. They don't like having to stay underground and are anxious to find the subject and beat a retreat.

The chamber is furnished with two beds, a chest, a table and two chairs, a huge polar bear fleece, two bundles of animal skins/rugs, and waste pails. The beds are too small, and the giants have pushed them together to make a lounging area, on which sleeps their pet winter wolf.

A set of spy holes is concealed in the stonework of the east wall (see 4-101A).

Inhabitants:

1. Hjall and Hedin, frost giants: SZ L; AL CE; AC 4; MV 120'; HD 10+1-4; HP 72, 68; #AT 1; Dmg 4-24. Special attacks: hurl rocks (2-20 dmg). Special defenses: immune to cold.

1. Snowy, a winter wolf: SZ L; AL N(E); AC 5; MV 180'; HD 6; HP 40; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8. Special attacks: frost blast. Special defenses: immune to cold.

Treasure:

Wand of frost (32 charges), 50 pieces of amber worth 50 gp each, a mixed pile of coins worth 300 gp, a keg of fiery brandy, giant-sized equipment; winter wolf pelt (500 gp).

4-103: Uninhabited Chamber

This chamber for ambassadors is empty. It has two beds, a table and chairs, a chest, and other necessities.

4-104: Uninhabited Chamber

This chamber for ambassadors is empty. It has two beds, a table and chairs, a chest, and other necessities.

4-105: Stair of Commerce with Niches

This broad, 20'-wide stairway rises from the chasm of Set at 4-119 to the Forum itself (4-2). It provides the primary access route to the Forum from both outside and within Arden Vul. The stairs are brightly lit with continual light spells. They are composed of marble steps worn down in the center by the tread of countless feet over the centuries. Six semi-circular niches line the stairway; each holds a stone bust of a former Set priest.

There is a 20% chance of encountering another group on the stairs. If such an encounter is indicated, the group will be a squad of Set guardsmen with a sergeant 33% of the time, otherwise (66%) it will be a group of visitors (roll on Table 1 at area 4-2). The guardsmen will take little to no interest in the party unless it acts with hostility. Visitors' reactions should be determined normally.

Within each of the six niches that line the stairs is an impressive 5'-tall marble bust standing on a 5'-tall stone table. All six depict youthful humans, and all vaguely resemble each other in an otherworldly, idealized way (with wide eyes, vacant gazes, smooth faces, etc.). They represent the modern style of imperial portraiture, as opposed to the super-realistic style of the old empire. Two are female, one wears a skullcap, a few boast scarves, and one is depicted in a cylindrical headdress. The subjects are the six most important high priests of Set since the cult's modern resurgence some 90 years ago

Secret Door (west): This door is found in the niche occupied by the bust of Cilicius Gresto, a high priest of Set from some fifty years in the past. Locating and depressing a button in the fold of Cilicius's scarf opens the door. It is 4' square and leads to a short passage and another secret door (see 4-110).

Possible Inhabitants:

1. 1 Set sergeant (see new monsters), as a 5th-level Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL LE; AC 3; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 15, 12; #AT 1, Dmg 3-8 (mace +1), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: Set armor (see Arden Vul items) and wooden shield; footman's mace +1; spear; light crossbow with 20 bolts.

2. 4 Set guardsmen (see new monsters), as 2nd-level Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 15, 12; #AT 1, Dmg 2-7 (mace), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: red scale mail and wooden shield; footman's maces; spears; light crossbows with 20 bolts.

3. Visitors to Forum (see area 4-2, table 1)

4-106: Spiked and Locked Door

This new wooden door is locked and spiked shut from the side of the Stair of Commerce (4-105). The following words are carved into the lintel in formal, majuscule Mithric letters: "Set Vanquishes the Serpent". On the door, however, someone has hastily painted, in Archontean: "No access. Stay out! This means you!" The Set cult has barred this door to the third mystery due to its inability to defeat the behir (4-111). Keys to the door are held by the leaders of the cult of Set (4-51, 4-47, 4-56, 4-57).

Note on Areas 4-107 to 4-111

These rooms are dark, silent, and filled with inches of dust. Several sets of footprints are evident moving from 4-106 to 4-111, but they too are filled with decades of dust. The only other tracks are those of the behir (4-111), a giant constrictor snake (4-109), and dozens of small normal-sized lizards; these tracks are more recent.

4-107: Open Door and Warning

The door to this chamber is open about a foot; a ranger will notice serpent tracks entering it. This former residential suite has clearly not been used in centuries. Broken furniture lies everywhere, covered in piles of dust. Close inspection shows that some of the furniture has been scorched. There is nothing of value here, and almost nothing of interest save for an enormous serpent skin (of a 15' snake).

4-108: Shattered and Charred Door

This wooden door hangs crazily on its hinges. It is very old and shows signs of being blasted apart and scorched by electricity.

4-109: Serpent's Lair

The door to this chamber is locked and stuck, and blocked from the inside by a pile of debris. A successful open doors check is necessary to force it. This used to be a high priest's chamber, and was sumptuously decorated. It is currently the lair of an enormous giant python, the descendant of one of the old sacrificial serpents now living in symbiosis with the behir. The serpent's nest is littered with bones, mostly small and reptilian, but several large and mammalian. Combat in this chamber is difficult (-1 to hit) due to the jumble of brittle and desiccated furniture.

An ancient fresco on the north wall is faded and worn, but still visible: it depicts the third mystery in a set of images. At the western end is a high priest, in red robes and red conical hat striding forth with a wasp stick. In the center a huge serpent emerges from a hole in a wall, while the same red-garbed priest raises a large knife. At the east end, the priest stands on top of the corpse of the snake, holding the knife and the snake's decapitated head over his head. Above all of the images is this caption, written in Mithric: "Set vanquishes the serpent."

The western wall has crumbled, and a 5'-diameter hole allows access to some natural tunnels beyond.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 giant constrictor snake (50% chance): SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 6+1; HP 39; #AT 2; Dmg 1-4/2-8. Special attacks: constriction.

Treasure:

26 gp, 37 sp, a 50 gp garnet, a 300 gp emerald, a snapped wand of magic missiles, a dagger of venom, and a guard cap (see new magic items).

4-110: Preparation Chamber

This abandoned room was where the high priest conducted the preparatory rituals (including propitious sacrifices and ablutions) prior to conducting the third mystery. A sunken area (3' deep and 8' square) occupies the center of the western third of the room. The eastern side contains broken furniture, a painted screen, and a variety of ratty robes and ceremonial clothes. The center of the room, opposite the entrance passage, contains a marble altar that is 4' tall, 3' wide, and 6' long. It bears ancient dried bloodstains. The south wall contains a mural of the third mystery, with a red-robed high priest stabbing a serpent with an exaggeratedly large dagger. The mural, and some of the furniture, are damaged, and show signs of being blasted by a scorching energy source.

The sunken pool is now dry, and is the preferred place for the giant constrictor snake to eliminate larger prey. The pool is filled with bones of a variety of sizes; a pair of undigested and insalubrious-looking boots of insulation (see new magic items) are mixed in with the bones.

Inhabitants:

1. giant constrictor snake (25% chance): for stats see 4-109.

Treasure:

Boots of insulation (see new magic items).

4-111: Third Mystery of Set: The Ritual of the Slaying of the Serpent

The third of the great mysteries of the cult of Set took place of old in this large cavern. Today it lies in the territory of a dangerous behir, which the priests of Set have been unable to dislodge. To the chagrin of Stephania, the third mystery has not been performed since antiquity.

The chamber of the mystery includes two areas, a worked area and a natural cavern area. The worked area opens from the corridor into a 20'x30' area paved with white and black marble. The western edge of this pavement is 10' above the floor of the cavern, and is set off by a low balustrade (3') of marble. The pavement is covered by centuries of dust, disturbed only by slither marks. Marble stairs lead down to a semi-circle of mosaic. The mosaic, too, is covered with dirt and dust, but numerous tracks cross it - a trained PC will identify them as rodent, serpent, and lizard (behir) tracks. If the mosaic is swept clean, it reveals an image of Set wielding a ritual dagger and holding the corpse of a huge serpent.

The natural area extends in an arc around the mosaic, culminating in a rocky western wall perforated by numerous holes. Most of the holes seem fit for rats or snakes, although there is one larger one on the southwestern face. Three low knobs also rise from rocky floor (3-5' high). The rough ceiling rises 35' from the cavern floor.

It was here that in antiquity a high priest would re-enact the dramatic mythological moment in which Set slew the great serpent and in so doing became the protector of humanity. In emulation of this event, and with an audience of cultists and visitors watching from the pavement, the high priest would descend to the mosaic and slay a semi-wild snake driven from one of the cliff holes by a specially-trained snake-handler. Alas, when the Set cult returned to Arden Vul in the past century, it found that a behir had invaded the area; efforts to drive off the behir have failed.

Searching the natural area reveals six skeletons that have been picked clean by rats. One of these is of the last high priest before Stephania (a certain Keladorus of Arcturos), a brave fool who attempted to enter the chamber and best the behir; he failed miserably. Three more of the skeletons are of the high priest's guards (x3); these still wear Set armor (see Arden Vul items), although that armor has been blasted by some powerful energy. The remaining two skeletons are more ancient, and are of a pair of adventurers who had the misfortune to encounter the behir here.

Inhabitants:

1. 24 giant rats: SZ S; AL N(E); AC 7; MV 120'; HD 1-4 HP; HP 4(x6), 3(x6), 2(x6), 1(x6); #At 1; Dmg 1-3. Special attacks: 5% chance of disease.
2. Giant constrictor snake (25% chance): for stats see 4-109.
3. 1 behir (20% chance, although noise will draw it swiftly from 4-112C): SZ L; AL NE; AC 4; MV 150'; HD 12; HP 85; #AT 2 or 7; damage 2-8/2-5 or 2-8/1-6(x6). Special attacks: lightning bolt. Special defenses: immune to electricity and poison.

Treasure:

On Keladorus's body: a ring of Set named Fragas (see new magic items), a scroll of curse item (see new spells), and a copper, jade, and lapis necklace (200 gp). The sacred ritual dagger of the Third Mystery rests nearby under inches of dust (1,000 gp to the cult of set; 50 gp to others).

Next to the adventurers: a long sword +1, 3 arrows of striking (see new magic items) stuffed into a wooden scroll case; some blasted and useless chain mail, a pouch with 3 potions (of invisibility, clairvoyance, and clairaudience), and a rotting sack with 179 gp.

4-112A through 4-112C: Lair of the Behir

The behir makes its lair in this set of caverns and tunnels. The area is rocky and uneven, and extremely difficult for (armored) bipeds to navigate. Even the open areas (the large caves) do not feature sand floors, but rather are a maze of rocky projections, dangerous fissures, and small pools of water. The area is notably cooler and moister than other areas of Level 4. The difficulty of the terrain is one reason why the Set cult has been unable to dislodge the behir (the other, of course, is its fearsome breath weapon).

The location of the behir should be determined in advance: the behir will initially be found in one of the following locations (20% chance for each): 4-111, 4-112C, 4-113, 4-114, or 4-115. Unless a party is exceptionally (i.e., magically) stealthy, the behir will hear PCs clambering into the tunnel leading to 4-112A and will arrive in 1-4 rounds to aggressively defend its territory. It would take great skill and luck to surprise the behir in 4-112C. If the behir is wounded badly (50% HP), it retreats into the mist in 4-115.

4-112A: Larder

This open cavern stinks terribly of decaying meat. It is also extremely difficult to navigate, as it rises more than 10' feet from the tunnel to 4-111 before dropping off to the west and south. Slick rock formations also hinder movement. Movement into the chamber (unless magically silenced) attracts the behir in 1-4 rounds. Searching the chamber reveals numerous skeletal and fleshly remains scattered in nooks and crannies; most are rats and other small dungeon vermin, but a few are human-sized. For every turn of searching, a determined party might turn up the following: 1=1-100 coins; 2=a potion (33% chance it has dried up); 3=a gem worth 10 gp; 4=an item of cultural or historical interest. Rangers might notice that the serpent occasionally uses the northern portion of the cave as a route to the rats at 4-111.

4-112B: Dripping Cave

This wide, but rocky, cavern features a 5'-wide exit tunnel that leads to one of the holes in the cliff face at 4-111. Signs of the behir's passing are evident, although there is nothing of value here.

4-112C: Lair

The behir makes its main lair in this cave, which contains a pool of fresh water in the southwest extension. The tunnel from 4-112A rises substantially (15') and culminates in a narrow squeeze (4'-tall opening) into the main chamber at 4-112C.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 behir: SZ L; AL NE; AC 4; MV 150'; HD 12; HP 85; #AT 2 or 7; damage 2-8/2-5 or 2-8/1-6(x6). Special attacks: lightning bolt. Special defenses: immune to electricity and poison.

Treasure:

16 aquamarines (100 gp each), 3 tiger eyes (10 gp each), 5 moonstones (50 gp each); a large gold comb studded with citrines (7,000 gp); a silver-and-gold toe ring (1,100 gp), and a periapt of proof against poison (all in the behir's gullet).

4-113: Bright Cave

The long tunnel from 4-112A snakes downward about 60' to this cavern, which is lit by a fluorescent glow from a strange variety of mold growing on the rock formations here. The fluorescence is calming and peaceful .... too peaceful, though! Those entering the cave must roll a save versus spells or fall into a mild catatonia lasting 4-8 turns. The results of this catatonia can be harmless, or deadly if the behir or giant python should arrive while one or more PCs are dazed.

4-114: Pool

This cavern is filled with a 30'-deep pool of clear water. The western exit is near the ceiling of the cavern, and a good 20' above the water level; unwary PCs might walk off the ledge and drop into the water. The northern exit leads to a long and snaky tunnel that rises over many rocky projections before reaching area 4-116. The southern exit is a small tunnel 15' above the water level. This tunnel leads to a hole in the wall of the chasm of Set (4-121); the chasm access lies at an elevation 20' below that of the platforms (4-119 and 4-120).

4-115: Mist-Filled Cave

The stone in this cavern is composed of unusual concentrations of iron, strontium, and arcanum (see new magic items), a combination that has lent it some strange features. Chief among them is a heavy mist that occupies both lobes of the cave. This mist looks almost solid, as if molecules of ore were precipitating in and out of a gaseous state. If using a light source, PCs will see the mist as a shimmering veil of glinting, crackling, quasi-opaque 'vapor'. The properties of the mist are both attractive and restorative to the behir; for every round spent in the mist, the behir recovers 1-6 HP, although this restoration causes the behir to discharge electricity into the mist. Thus, if the behir is present in the mist, any entering the mist takes 2-16 HP electric damage per round (save for half damage). Even if the behir is absent, the mist retains an electric charge that zaps those entering it for 1-4 HP damage per round (save for half damage).

The other effect of the mist is translocation. For beings other than the behir (or those carrying arcnum in quantities of at least 1 lb), entrance into the mist requires a save vs. poison; if it is failed, the unfortunate is transported with a tremendous clap of electrical discharge to one of the following locations. Note: Each individual must roll separately for translocation. Those carrying arcnum (see new magic items) are immune to both the electrical and translocational effects of the mist.

D6	Location
1	island in the lake, Level 3 (3-164A)
2	random cave in Sub-Level 3
3	the pyramid of Thoth, surface ruins (AV-15)
4	the floor of the Great Chasm (9-1)
5	the Hall of Forty Columns (5-6)
6	GM's choice

At the far end of the southeastern lobe of the cave is an 8"-tall solid gold statuette of a camel (dropped by a previous visitor). The object is a statuette of the camel (see new magic items).

Inhabitants:

1. 1 behir (20% chance): for stats see 4-112C.

Treasure:

A statuette of the camel (see new magic items).

4-116: Lichen Cave

This wide spot in the tunnel network is damp and slick; the moisture has caused a yellow lichen to grow all over the walls and ceiling. The lichen glows softly, imparting a bit of light to the chamber. It is harmless and surprisingly nutritious, although PCs may incorrectly suspect it is yellow mold.

4-117: Tunnel Down to Level 5 (5-117)

The tunnel forks here, with one branch ending in a slight spur and the other sloping downward sharply to form a steep tunnel that leads to Level 5, area 5-117. The spur ends in a ledge, near the ceiling. On the ledge is a skeleton of an ancient hero of Set, still wearing its rusted red chain mail; it bears a mace of enforced harmony (see new magic items), as well as a pouch containing 31 ancient silver pennies and 11 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items for these coins). The ledge is hard to detect.

4-118: Forgotten Hall

A long-forgotten priest planned this austere hall as the initial stage of his never-completed tomb complex. It features a dais rising 5' in three steps at the north end. The walls are undecorated, and a cave-in has revealed a 5'-diameter tunnel to the north. The floor is littered with small, gray, knob-like objects, which may pose some mystery to visitors. They are in fact the digested remnants of chasm cephalopods consumed by the hungry lurker above that dwells here. The lurker above waits for all to enter, but it is so hungry that there is a 50% chance it will leap too early. It surprises on a 1-5.

Note: The passage linking this hall to the chasm (4-121) lies at an elevation 30' above that of the landings (4-119 and 4-120).

Inhabitants:

1. 1 lurker above: SZ L; AL N; AC 6; MV 10', 90' flying (Class D); HD 10; HP 68; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: surprise 4 in 6; constriction; suffocation. Special defenses: 90% undetectable against stone.

Treasure:

Lodged in the creature's gullet is a badly corroded gold and silver coronet (50 gp).

4-119: North Landing

This landing is floored in bright mosaics depicting each of the three mysteries of Set and other elements of his iconography. A shimmering field of transparent protective magic runs across the width of the landing, 10' from the edge of the chasm. This field is impenetrable from the south unless the proper command word is spoken, at which point the field drops for 5 rounds. It is fully permeable from the north.

Directly at the north foot of the bridge is a 10'x10' square of marble incised with the following riddle. The letters are large and formed of lapis lazuli; they are in Mithric and spell out one of the following riddles. Which of the two riddles appears should be determined randomly.

First Riddle: I shelter brave men. With my bloody back I ward off blows, thwarting spears, giving life to some. I lay my body against my lord's left hand.

Second Riddle: I'm by nature solitary, scarred by spear and wounded by sword, weary of battle. Battered by the face of war, my strength holds back hateful enemies.

The correct answer to both riddles is, of course, "shield." The password is widely known among the cult of Set.

Those delaying in front of the field may (25%) draw the attention of a pod of chasm cephalopods.

Inhabitants:

1. 6 small chasm cephalopods (see new monsters) (25% chance): SZ S; AL N; AC 5; MV 60' flying (Class A); HD 2; HP 14, 13, 13, 12, 11, 8; #AT 5 (4 tentacles and a beak); Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-3/1-3/1-4; MR 25%. Special attacks: surprise on 1-4.

4-120: South Landing

This landing overlooks the chasm of Set. Occasionally chasm cephalopods (see new monsters) attack those who dawdle on the landing (25% chance, increasing by 5% for every turn spent here)

Inhabitants:

1. 4 small chasm cephalopods (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 5; MV 60' flying (Class A); HD 2; HP 13, 12, 11, 8; #AT 5 (4 tentacles and a beak); Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-3/1-3/1-4; MR 25%. Special attacks: surprise on 1-4.
2. 2 medium chasm cephalopods (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 5; MV 60' flying (Class A); HD 4; HP 25, 24; #AT 5 (4 tentacles and a beak); Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-4/1-4/1-6; MR 25%. Special attacks: surprise on 1-4.

4-120A: Red Bridge of Set

This 8'-wide stone bridge is one of the iconic locations in Arden Vul. Constructed of red granite, it is slender and seems to rise effortlessly above the chasm. Balustrades (4' tall) flanking the bridge are carved in the shape of standing Set animals. The bridge is anchored on either landing by 8'-tall marble pillars. The only unusual feature of the bridge is that, unless magically dampened, footfalls echo quite loudly across the chasm. Such footfalls are likely to alert the guards at 4-123 and 4-124 of the approach of visitors (50% they are aware of activity).

4-121: Chasm of Set

The chasm drops 100' below the level of the bridge (4-12), and rises about 50' above it. The walls are rocky and uneven, and numerous forms of lichen and moss grow here. It is home to a small community of chasm cephalopods. The chasm is also moist and humid, and the sound of dripping echoes loudly throughout. The floor of the chasm is covered by 15' feet of water.

If one were to explore the water, one would find a stone archway cut into the side of the wall and covered by a shimmering veil of energy. The veil is permeable, and any who pass through are instantly transported either to 1) the Roiling Lake (9-65), or 2) the Drowned Cavern (SL6-24) or 3) the elemental plane of water. A pack of lacedons defends the hidden gate. The cult of Set knows of the ghouls, but not the gate.

Note: If the submerged door at AV-39 has been opened, and the southern portion of the swamp drained, then the chasm at 4-121 will contain much more water. The water level will now be only 30' below the bridge (4-120A) and landings (4-119 and 4-120).

Inhabitants:

1. 10 small chasm cephalopods (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 5; MV 60' flying (Class A); HD 2; HP 15, 14, 13, 13, 12, 12, 11, 11, 10, 8; #AT 5 (4 tentacles and a beak); Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-3/1-3/1-4; MR 25%. Special attacks: surprise on 1-4.
2. 6 medium chasm cephalopods (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 5; MV 60' flying (Class A); HD 4; HP 27, 26, 25, 24, 24, 22; #AT 5 (4 tentacles and a beak); Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-4/1-4/1-6; MR 25%. Special attacks: surprise on 1-4.
3. 12 lacedons: SZ M; AL CE; AC 6; MV 90'; 90' swimming; HD 2; HP 15, 14, 14, 13(x3), 12(x3), 10, 9, 9; #AT 3; Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-6. Special attacks: paralysis. Special defenses: immune to sleep and charm.

Note: Chasm cephalopods encountered and slain elsewhere (e.g., 4-119, 4-120) should be subtracted from this total.

Treasure:

Numerous small treasures have fallen into the cavern over the years. The GM may roll as he/she sees fit. These treasures are hard to locate, and exploration will attract the attention of the ghouls. A few include: a 1'-diameter sphere of platinum inset with jet, garnet, and ivory that realistically depict the shape and relative position of the continents and islands of Magae (5,000 gp); scattered coins, including 119 ancient silver pennies and 71 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items for these coins), plus modern coins amounting to 53 sp, 27 gp, and 9 pp; a crude statuette of a penguin carved from volcanic rock, with two huge jet gems for eyes (250 gp each for the gems, 650 gp for the statuette); a metal shield +2; an icon of kauket; a cursed blacklight torch; a scrying ball hidden inside a clay jar; a wand of alignment detection (43 charges); and an obsidian skull of comprehension (see new magic items for the last five). A 2'-long, 1"-diameter iron bar may be found at the east end of the chasm; this is the third lever from 4-127.

4-122: Thothian Teleportation Ring

A circle of 2"-tall paving stones arranged in a 6'-diameter ring is located in the center of this otherwise-empty chamber. Inset into the floor next to the ring is a rectangle 48" long by 8" tall; the rectangle is divided into six interior compartments, each 8" square. Together these elements form a Thothian teleportation ring (see new magic items). To activate the ring, one must place six colored glass activation squares into the inset according to a sequence that matches the 'address' of the ring to which one wishes to travel. Once the squares are placed, a brief shimmer of energy is visible over the ring. At this point the user has 1 round to collect the squares and enter the ring, after which anyone in the ring is teleported without error to address indicated by that sequence of squares. If the glass activation squares are not collected and/or if the travelers do not possess a second set of them, they are likely to be stranded in the location to which they have just teleported. The address of this ring is as follows: BK-RE-BL-WH-YE-GR (see new magic items for explanation). None of the glass activation squares necessary to operate the circle are present.

The Set cult is ignorant of the function of the ring, although they know it is connected to powerful magic.

4-122A: Secret Doors and Hidden Staircase to the Surface (AV-39)

Just to the south of the landing area are a pair of secret doors. The western door leads to a dusty chamber with a stone spiral staircase. The stairs lead upwards some 650' to the ruined cellar in the surface ruins at AV-39. The eastern door leads to 4-148.

Secret Door (to east): This door is normal to spot, but only opens if a hole in the ceiling is pressed with a 1"-diameter cylinder.

Secret Door (to west): The door is hard to spot (1 in 8) and is locked (-5% difficulty). The key was lost ages ago.

4-123: Guard Chamber

A detachment of 4 Set guardsmen and an acolyte is on duty here at all times. The chamber is decorated in bright yellow and blue primary colors, with the insignia of the three military septs of the cult painted on three walls: i.e., the black boar, a head with white face and red hair, and a tornado. The guardsmen have a circular table, some benches, two water barrels, several sets of dice (one loaded), a dartboard, and a good supply of jerky. They keep the door half-open so as to be able to hear and intercept any visitors to the halls of Set.

Visitors who are not aggressive will be asked their business. If the acolyte is content that nothing is awry, the acolyte will read out the Laws of the Forum and a few other random warnings ("Don't go poking your noses into the private areas", "Show respect to the Black Boar", "Watch out for the Breath of Set", etc.). There is a 20% chance that the acolyte and guards will attempt to shake down visitors for a toll of 1-10 gp per character.

If combat ensues, the denizens of the other guardroom (4-124) immediately emerge to aid their colleagues, and one guardsman will sprint north to warn the rest of the cult.

If the guardsmen hear noise at the north landing (4-119), whether due to the echo-effect of the bridge (4-120A), combat with chasm cephalopods, to any other reason, they might come to investigate (25%). If so, they will be suspicious. The shield curtain (see 4-119) is porous from the north side, and the guards won't be averse to hurling a few javelins through the curtain if needed.

Inhabitants:

- 4 Set guardsmen (see new monsters), as 2nd-level Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 15, 12; #AT 1, Dmg 2-7 (mace), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: red scale mail and wooden shield; footman's maces; spears; light crossbows with 20 bolts. One has the bonds of Set. Another has 3 bolts of fire (see new magic items).
- 1 Set acolyte (see new monsters), as a 3rd-level Archontean cleric of Set: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 60'; HD 3; HP 19; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (mace) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Possessions: Set armor (see Arden Vul items); footman's mace; light crossbow; acolyte's was stick (see new magic items); and a silver holy symbol of Set (10 gp). Spells prayed for: command, cure light wounds, curse (reverse of bless), protection from good; hold person, silence 15' radius.

4-124: Guard Chamber

Identical to 4-123, except that the chamber is decorated with large images of the three mysteries of Set instead.

Inhabitants:

- 4 Set guardsmen (see new monsters), as 2nd-level Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 15, 12; #AT 1, Dmg 2-7 (mace), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: red scale mail and wooden shield; footman's maces; spears; light crossbows with 20 bolts. One has the bonds of Set. Another has 3 bolts of fire (see new magic items).
- 1 Set acolyte (see new monsters), as a 3rd-level Archontean cleric of Set: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 60'; HD 3; HP 19; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (mace) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Possessions: Set armor (see Arden Vul items); footman's mace; light crossbow; acolyte's was stick (see new magic items); and a silver holy symbol of Set (10 gp). Spells prayed for: command, cure light wounds, curse (reverse of bless), protection from good; hold person, silence 15' radius.

4-125: Cultists' Rest

This is one of the five dormitories for cultists coming to visit the temple of Set and participate in its mysteries. The other four are found at 4-126, 4-131, 4-132, and 4-133. To determine the contents and inhabitants of each dormitory, the GM should complete the following five steps.

1. Chance of Current Habitation

Each dormitory has a 33% chance of being inhabited at any given moment. At least one dormitory will be inhabited regardless of the dice rolls, however.

2. Number of Inhabitants

Each dormitory contains rough bunk-beds sufficient for 24 persons. If a dorm is inhabited, roll 2d12+3 to determine how many members are in that group. Ordinarily no more than 40 cultists are present in total, so the GM should feel free to modify this number as he/she sees fit. Of course, if the dice suggest a larger overall number, this could indicate a major gathering of the cult with appropriate implications for politics and/or adventuring.

D12	Location
1-6	Group from outside Arden Vul. Roll d10: 1-2: important Archontean, incognito 3-5: curious local Thorcinga 6: Khumus pilgrims from the far west 7-10: ordinary Archontean humans
7-8	Goblins from Sub-Level 4
9	Lizardman converts from Sub-Level 5
10	NPC adventuring party (select from NPC appendix)
11	1-3 lesser varumani converts from Level 7
12	Other, or GM's choice

4. Business of Cultists

d12	Business
1-4	Ordinary cultic sight-seeing
5-6	Conveying an important message from outside Arden Vul
7-8	Bringing an important relic/object
9-11	Personal redemption, or penance
12	Hidden Purpose. Roll d12: 1-2: vendetta or vengeance 3-4: spying .... for whom? 5-6: bringing secret information to cult leaders 7-8: excuse to meet other groups in Forum 9-10: acquire some object 11-12: other or GM's choice

5. Furnishings of the Chamber

Each chamber is painted brightly in primary colors, and contains 12 double bunk-beds plus 1-4 chests, 2 large water barrels, and a cloak-rack. If a chamber is currently inhabited, cultists will also have their personal treasure. In addition, there is a 20% chance that the group will be in possession of a significant object or treasure. It is up to the GM to decide if any such object is purely an offering (i.e., worth money) or is a magical item or relic from the past days of the cult.

Inhabitants:

- Up to 40 Set cultists (see new monsters): SZ M; AL LE; AC 9; MV 90'; HD 1; HP 7(x5), 6(x8), 5(x10), 4(x10), 3(x7); #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger) or 2-7 (flail) or 1-6 (staff). Special attacks: fanaticism. Possessions: padded armor; daggers; flails or staves.

4-126: Cultists' Rest

See description at 4-125.

4-127: Chasm View

This ancient chamber overlooks the chasm of Set. It is currently used as a lounge for cultists. The ceiling is covered with mother-of-pearl, making its three torches reflect wildly through the room. The walls are freshly painted in a light-blue wash with gold stars and mystical symbols, while the floor is covered by a mosaic of a Set priest apparently floating in the air between two cliffs. Scattered throughout the chamber are 8 stools and 3 circular wooden tables; all are battered and worn. On the southeast wall are two levers made of iron; a hole for a third is next to them. The levers appear to have two positions, up and down; currently both levers are in the down position.

The southeastern corner of the chamber is open to the chasm (4-121); a 3'-tall balustrade runs along the chasm edge. Strangely, a 5'-wide section of the balustrade is missing. If one looks into the chasm one might be able to see (with appropriate light) a chest apparently floating in the air; it appears to be made of stone and is 20' from the balustrade. Clever PCs might infer that the opening in the balustrade is meant to lead (somehow) to the floating chest. Flying PCs can, of course, easily fly to the chest; they find it is resting on an invisible platform of stone.

Note: The balustrade here is at elevation 20' above that of the landings at 4-119 and 4-120.

Accessing the Floating Chest: It is possible for PCs who cannot fly to access the 'floating' chest, for an invisible stone bridge connects the balustrade both to a platform underneath the chest and also to the opposite side of the chasm. The invisible bridge is 2' below the lip of the balustrade, so simply tapping one's foot where one imagines a bridge might be will not detect it. Still, if it is detected, it is easy to cross the bridge to the chest. Those who do so without taking precautions, automatically attract chasm cephalopods by the time they reach the platform with the chest.

There is a way to deter the cephalopods, however. This may be accomplished by locating the third lever (currently resting at the bottom of the chasm - see 4-121) and using it to interact with the other levers found on the wall next to the balustrade. Note that any metal rod that is 1" in diameter and about 2' long can be substituted for the lever.

The Levers: Each lever has two positions (up or down), which means that there are a total of eight possible combinations. The down-down-down position is 'neutral'; no effects are produced by it. If the levers are arranged in the up-down-down combination, a permanent magic mouth appears and intones, "Walk," in Mithric. For the next 1-3 turns a high, keening sound is emitted from a the magic mouth; this pitch deters chasm cephalopods, rendering the path to the chest safe. The combination down-up-down causes a gust of wind spell to activate; it is based at the foot of the stairs from 4-129, and is directed towards the chasm. Along with the gust, another magic mouth appears and shouts in Mithric: "The wind of Set eliminates those who do not belong!" If the combination down-down-up is activated, a moving wall of fire appears by the stairs leading from 4-129; it moves 5' per round towards the balustrade. Along with the wall, a magic mouth appears and shouts, in Mithric, "The cleansing fire of Set removes the unbelievers!" The other four positions cause a cloudkill spell to activate in the center of the chamber. With it, a magic mouth appears and shouts, in Mithric, "Unbelievers shall be slain!"

The invisible bridge is sturdy, if disconcerting, and leads at a slight angle completely across the chasm to the concealed door of the passage leading to 4-147A. The stone chest rests on a slight widening of the bridge at a point about 12' south of the balustrade. The chest is locked and trapped with a gust of wind rune. Inside are eight 2-lb platinum bars worth 500 gp each, a helm of underwater action, and a pure white tear of Kauket (see new magic items) mounted in silver and wrapped in a piece of chamois-cloth.

Inhabitants:

1. 3-12 Set cultists (33%): SZ M; AL LE; AC 9; MV 90'; HD 1; HP 7, 7, 6(x4), 5(x3), 4, 4, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger) or 2-7 (flail) or 1-6 (staff). Special attacks: fanaticism. Possessions: padded armor; daggers; flails or staves.
2. 6 small chasm cephalopods (see new monsters), potentially drawn by manipulation of the levers: SZ S; AL N; AC 5; MV 60' flying (Class A); HD 2; HP 14, 13, 13, 12, 11, 8; #AT 5 (4 tentacles and a beak); Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-3/1-3/1-4; MR 25%. Special attacks: surprise on 1-4.

4-128: Lesser Shrine

High Priestess Stephanía has set up a shrine here for the use of the cultists. The east wall features two 8'-tall painted statues made of wood, cloth and papier-mâché. One is of Set in his Set animal guise; the other is of a Set as a white-faced, red-haired man. Between the statues is a stone altar, stained with blood, on which is a copper bowl and a copper knife. The walls are painted with images of human devotees bringing offerings towards the two statues. The entire place radiates evil. The cultists generally disdain this shrine, preferring to visit the 'real thing' further north.

Near the south wall is a 5'-diameter hole in the floor, which gives access to the burial crypt 4-139A. It has been covered with boards held down by chunks of rock. The hole leads down 10' before it reaches the ceiling of the crypt; the floor of the crypt is another 20' below the ceiling.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 Set acolytes (see new monsters), as 3rd-level Archontean clerics of Set: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 60'; HD 3; HP 19, 18; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (mace) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Possessions: Set armor (see Arden Vul items); footman's mace; light crossbow; acolyte's was stick (see new magic items); and a silver holy symbol of Set (10 gp). Spells prayed for: command, cure light wounds, curse (reverse of bless), protection from good; hold person, silence 15' radius.
2. 2-8 Set cultists (see new monsters) (33% chance): SZ M; AL LE; AC 9; MV 90'; HD 1; HP 7, 6, 6, 5, 5, 4, 4, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger) or 2-7 (flail) or 1-6 (staff). Special attacks: fanaticism. Possessions: padded armor; daggers; flails or staves.

4-129: Lounge

This is a lounge area for cultists from the surrounding dormitories. It features a wide fireplace that vents to a cavern somewhere above. The cultists are chronically short of firewood, however, so there is only a 20% chance it is lit. The chamber is rather austere, with several plank tables and benches, a water barrel, and only 6 comfortable-looking easy chairs, arranged in front of the fireplace. Hanging on a nail set into the stone a foot up the interior of the chimney is a ring of water breathing (see new magic items) and a ring of warmth; they are blackened by smoke, but otherwise perfectly functional.

Inhabitants:

There is a 50% chance that one of the groups of cultists present in the dormitories will be present in the lounge, talking, plotting, playing cards, and possibly torturing a slave or captive.

Treasure:

Ring of water breathing (see new magic items); ring of warmth.

4-130: Guard Post

Two bored Set guardsmen are posted here on a bench to prevent inquisitive cultists from venturing into the necropolis area. The door on the east wall looks newly repaired and is locked. The guardsmen carry the key.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 Set guardsmen (see new monsters), as 2nd-level Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 15, 12; #AT 1, Dmg 2-7 (mace), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: red scale mail and wooden shield; footman's maces; spears; light crossbows with 20 bolts; key to the door on the east.

4-131: Cultists' Rest

See description at 4-125.

4-132: Cultists' Rest

See description at 4-125.

4-133: Cultists' Rest

See description at 4-125.

4-134: Larder

This storeroom functions as the larder for the visiting cultists. The main cult does not supply food, so individual groups of visitors bring their own, and deposit it here. How many boxes, bags, and bottles are present depends on how many groups of cultists are currently visiting. The key to the locked door of the storeroom is kept by Jasper Roe (4-135). Supplies possibly present include: skins of water and wine, packages of hard-tack, dried meat, dried fruit, even some fresh vegetables (worth their weight in gold!). There is a 25% chance that Jasper is asleep here on a simple pallet.

Inhabitants:

1. Jasper Roe, male Thorcin cook (25%): for stats, see 4-135.

4-135: Kitchen and Lounge

This large room functions as a kitchen, dining area and lounge for cultists visiting the temple and Forum of Set. A larger-than-normal tripod of heating (see new magic items) stands in the southwest corner. The cook, Jasper Roe, has a small but effective array of cooking pots and utensils, as well as a preparation table along the south wall. To the north of the fire is a pair of long trestle tables. To the north and east of the room are some comfortable stuffed chairs and low tables. Scattered around the tables are a couple of religious pamphlets on parchment scrolls.

Jasper is present 75% of the time, preparing food for the cultists. In addition, there is a 50% chance that a group of Set cultists will be here, eating or hanging around.

Inhabitants:

1. Jasper Roe, male Thorcin cook (75%): SZ M; AL LE; AC 9; MV 120'; HD 1-1; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (cleaver). Possessions: cleaver and key to 4-134.
2. 6-9 Set cultists (see new monsters) (50% chance): SZ M; AL LE; AC 9; MV 90'; HD 1; HP 7, 6, 6, 5, 5, 4, 4, 3, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger) or 2-7 (flail) or 1-6 (staff). Special attacks: fanaticism. Possessions: padded armor; daggers; flails or staves.

Note on Areas 4-136 to 4-146

These areas comprise the ancient necropolis of the cult of Set. Until recently the areas were lost due to the collapse in antiquity of certain key tunnels (e.g., 4-137). High Priestess Stephania ordered the stairs and tunnels to be cleared so as to allow the restoration of the necropolis. Unfortunately for the priests, they found that the necropolis had become highly dangerous, since it is now inhabited by numerous undead under the domination of Meskenit the mummy (4-139C). To make things worse, the entire area is so entrenched with negative energy that turning undead is impossible. Stephania tried to lure the intelligent undead out of their necropolis, but they know she intends to dominate them and did not fall for her ruse. (Note: Stephania is unaware of the powers of the golden ankh in 4-138A, possession of which would allow her to dominate the undead in the necropolis area). Matters are currently at a standoff. The entire area is covered with dust and cobwebs, and the stonework is crumbling in numerous locations. Unless otherwise indicated, the chambers are dark.

4-136: Dead Bodies!

This chamber marks the limit of the modern Set cult's expansion into the necropolis area. The cult has cleared it of debris, a process that has revealed some faded, but still impressive murals on the south and west walls. These murals depict the judgment of the dead. From the southeast corner, the scenes depict some of the following: a parade of dead souls; Anubis with the ankh of life leading an old-style Archontean man past several monstrous beings; the deceased confessing the status of his soul, with the phrase "I am strong, but Set is stronger" repeated numerous times in a Mithric word-cloud above his head; Maat weighing the heart against her feather; and Set recording the name of the deceased in a huge red scroll. Only those visitors with expertise in Mithric theology will recognize that these scenes present two deviations from the usual iconography of the judgment of the Dead: 1) normally the confession of the deceased is given as "I am pure", while here the phrase is "I am strong" with the addition of "but Set is stronger," 2) normally Thoth is the recorder of the names of the dead, whereas here it is Set who takes that role.

The chamber contains numerous excavation tools - picks, mauls, shovels, heavy canvas bags for toting rock, carrying straps, etc. - as well as the corpses of eight workers slain by the undead from within the necropolis. Inspection of the bodies will show that they have been gnawed. One turn after the chamber is entered, the eight corpses will rise up as strong zombies to smite intruders.

The tunnel to the east has obviously been recently excavated; its walls are still rough, and the floor is littered with rock dust and loose debris. The ceiling is obviously unstable, and has been propped up with a set of sturdy wooden beams.

Inhabitants:

1. 8 strong zombies: SZ M; AL N; AC 8; MV 60'; HD 3; HP 22, 20, 19, 19, 18, 18, 17, 16; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8. Special: always strike last.

4-137: Trapped Hallway

Stairs at the north and south ends of this crumbling hallway lead down into the main areas of the necropolis. The stairs are carved out of granite in a deliberately rough way, so as to emphasize the primal nature of death. The risers are quite steep, moreover. Two traps are located at the landing leading to 4-136:

Trap 1 (glyph of warding): placed by Stephania to fend off the lesser undead, the glyph explodes for 20 HP fire damage.

Trap 2 (unstable ceiling): significant noise (such as the explosion of a glyph of warding) will be likely (75%) to cause a serious cave-in. Anyone within 25' must save or take 3-24 HP damage. Moderate noise, such as combat on the landing, has a 33% chance per turn of causing the collapse.

4-138A to 4-138C: Eastern Crypt

The ceiling of this huge chamber rises 20' above the floor of the entrance hallway. The crypt is completely lightless and as quiet as a tomb. Two T-shaped platforms occupy either end of the crypt (4-138A and 4-138C); these areas are joined by an 80'-long sunken walkway lined with burial niches (4-138B). The walkway is 15' below the floor of the two platforms. Each platform holds 20 large stone sarcophagi carved in ornate, ancient style. A large, 15'-tall statue of Set in the form of the Set animal stands on western platform facing the entrance to the crypt. The walls of the platforms were once painted with bright images of Set, the judgment of the dead, and the defeat of various enemies; sadly, most of this artwork has faded or flaked off and only some fragments are visible.

A band of corporeal undead dominated by the greater mummy, Meskenit (see 4-139C), inhabit the crypt. These foes stealthily approach any intruders within 2-6 rounds of the crypt being entered and attempt either to overwhelm the intruders by force or to drive them towards their master in 4-139C. PCs who have manipulated the statue prior to the attack by the undead might be able to improve their tactical situation (see 4-138A).

4-138A: Entry Platform and Statue of Set

The entry platform features twenty sealed sarcophagi (for potential contents see 4-138C) and an imposing statue of Set in the form of the Set animal.

The statue of Set is made of black obsidian with a white marble head. Set's ears and snout are solid gold, while his eyes are lapis. He holds a 24"-long golden ankh (see new magic items) in one hand and a 3'-long silver flail with many heads in the other (the sterling flail of Set - see new magic items). On the right calf of the statue, about 3' from the floor, are two flattened patches of obsidian; the upper patch has four 1" squares each with a different rune carved in it, and the lower one features four empty 1" squares arranged in a cruciform style. The runes are hard to spot (1 in 6) unless the PCs specifically state they are examining every aspect of the statue. The statue can be manipulated in various ways to produce effects in the crypt. In addition, the statue may activate in response to actions taken in the crypt.

The following actions might awaken Set Statue:

1. Opening any of the sealed sarcophagi: The Set statue activates as a stone golem and proceeds to smite desecrators using its ankh, flail, and magical powers. The Set golem pursues intruders within the crypt, but will not leave it.
2. Supplicating Set by stating, "I am strong, but Set is stronger" (c.f. 4-136): This action awakens the Set golem, whose eyes shift from blue to a menacing, glowing red. The golem won't necessarily take action, but intervenes against any - including undead - who assault the supplicants.
3. Breaking open the burial niches: For each burial niche desecrated there is a 5% cumulative chance that the Set golem activates to smite the intruders.
4. Attempting to steal the silver flail: See below for when and if such an action might awaken the golem.

Manipulating the statue may also produce effects:

1. Removing the gold snout or ears, or the lapis eyes: Blasts of blue energy unerringly strike the desecrator for 6-36 HP damage (save vs spells for half damage).
2. Removing the golden ankh: The golden ankh (see new magic items) can be removed and employed within and without the necropolis. Although it can be picked up by those of any alignment, it only conveys useful powers on those who are neutral or evil; it actually works as a cursed object for those of good alignment. Within the necropolis of Set and when wielded by a neutral or evil character, the ankh turns undead as if it were a 12th-level cleric. To be clear, undead within the necropolis are subject to being turned by a legitimate wielder of the ankh. For other powers of the ankh, see new magic items.
3. Removing the silver flail: Unless the precautions listed below are observed, any attempt to remove the sterling flail of Set (see new magic items) from the statue's grip causes the statue to animate as a golem and assault any creatures within sight. The flail can only be safely removed if: 1) the being removing the flail is of a non-good (i.e., neutral or evil) alignment; 2) the remover invokes Set by name and (briefly) explains his need.
4. Manipulating the runes and empty squares: The runes and empty squares form a puzzle. If one touches one of the runes and then one of the empty squares, that rune will immediately appear in the square in tiny, fiery script; touching the square again 'clears' it. The runes are as follows: a) ankh; b) djed column; c) was stick; and d) lotus. The ankh represents protection and life, the djed column strength and body, the was stick power, and the lotus creation. The four squares are arranged in a diamond pattern; moving clockwise from the top square, they can be numbered 1 through 4. The following patterns will cause effects when the last square is activated:

Sq 1	Sq 2	Sq 3	Sq 4	Effect
Ankh	Ankh	Ankh	Ankh	Antimagic shell around manipulator of runes, lasts 3-6 weeks. No magic in or out. Manipulator's body glows with magical yellow light, visible 60' away.
Ankh	Ankh	Ankh	Djed	+1 CON, permanent
Was	Was	Was	Lotus	Manipulator must discharge ray of power (2-8 damage) every hour for the next 1-4 days. If no enemies, friends or self are/is affected.
Lotus	Ankh	Ankh	Lotus	Protection from undead cast on manipulator. Lasts 2-5 days; AC +2 vs undead; undead do -2 damage; saves are at +2 versus undead effects.
Lotus	Ankh	Ankh	Djed	The following spells are cast on all within 10' radius: heal, neutralize poison, cure disease.
Was	Was	Was	Was	Magical short-circuit, 2-5 magic items closest to statue are drained of power. Save at -2 to avoid.
Lotus	Lotus	Lotus	Lotus	Chaotic effect (see table below).
Was	Lotus	Lotus	Ankh	Makes manipulator's chief weapon +2 for 2 weeks.
Lotus	Djed	Djed	Lotus	Creates 4 ghouls who attack immediately; they cannot be turned.
Djed	Djed	Djed	Was	One of sarcophagi bursts open. 50% chance wight emerges. Roll on sarcophagus table for contents.

D10	Chaotic Effect
1	Manipulator grows demonic body part (horn, tail, extra eye, differently colored eyes, etc.), CHA +1 to all evil alignments.
2	Summons 4-6 berserkers who fight for manipulator for 6 hours.
3	Summons 1-3 Type 1 demons; they fight opponents of the manipulator unless none are present, in which case they attack the manipulator.
4	Monster Magnet: double chances of Random Encounters for 3-6 days.

5	Treasure Nose: can sniff out treasure worth at least 100 gp from 150 feet; lasts 3 days.
6	Opens portal to lower plane; portal stays open for 6 days. 25% chance per day that 1-2 inhabitants of that lower plane emerge.
7	Magnetizes Set Statue: all metal in 20' radius attaches itself to statue with unbreakable force. Lasts 3-6 days. Magic metal gets a save.
8	Repulsor: a wall of force drops across entrance to crypt. Lasts 3 days.
9	A floor paver is vaporized, revealing stairs leading down. They lead 1-2= to a sub-level, 3-4=to the Astral Plane, 5-6=to an alternate world.
10	A random attribute increases by 1.

The GM can create other combinations of runes if she wishes. Any combination not set in advance will deliver a sharp pulse of magical energy worth 1-6 damage to the manipulator. Each effect can only be produced 1x/week, and certain effects (e.g. ankh-ankh-ankh-djed) are only possible once per person.

Inhabitants:

- 1 Set golem, aka stone golem: SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 14; HP 60; #AT 1; Dmg 3-24. Special attacks: slow once every other round. Special defenses: +2 or better weapons to hit; immune to most magic.

Treasure:

The head of the set statue is worth 4,575 gp. It weighs 340 lb.

4-138B: The Walkway and Burial Niches

Each 10' section of wall along the walkway between the platforms contains 9 burial niches; this means that there are 252 niches per wall, for a total of 504 niches in total. The plugs of twenty of the niches have burst open from within. The remainder are sealed, and contain skeletal remains plus 1-2 objects from the following table:

D30	Burial Niche Object
1	Holy symbol of Set, silver (20 sp)
2	Holy symbol of Set, platinum (20 pp)
3	Holy symbol of Set, gold (20 gp)
4	Signet ring (10 gp plus potential adventure hook)
5	Large, valuable ring (250 gp)
6	Copper pectoral (1% chance it is magical)
7	Silver torc (25 sp)
8	Gold torc (25 gp)
9	Parchment deed to property; 1-2= in the now-ruined city of Arden Vul; 3-4=in Archontos; 5-6=in Narsileon
10	Shares in (50%) or deed to (50%) mine or other commercial enterprise. 10% chance that the enterprise is still in operation
11	Scroll with prayer request from wealthy follower of Set to the god. 5% chance the genealogical information is worth 100-1,000 gp to a current descendant

12	Scroll with map to 5-36, 5-37, and 5-38
13	1-30 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items)
14	3-18 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items)
15	Parchment quire recounting one of the Deeds of Phagtro the Westron (see Arden Vul books). Which tale should be determined randomly. Worth 250 gp to Archontean folklorists.
16	2-12 ancient octagonal platinum coins (see Arden Vul items)
17	Piece of inoperable rudishva technology (see new technology for whichever): 1-2=lesser power supply; 3-4=laser pistol; 5-6=sonic fence generator; 7-8=other
18	Seal matrix for noble family, 25% it is of one of the current Five Families (see World of Archontos Appendix)
19	12-folio quire of material of a scholarly or theological nature.
20	Copper brooch of a bearded man surrounded by a sinuous winged serpent (45 gp)
21	Liturgy of the Strong , a seven-verse chant used in the ancient cult of Set (see Arden Vul books)
22	A small weapon, 60% it is corroded and useless. 5% chance it is magical
23	Bronze fittings, such as a latch-lifter
24	A key .... GM's choice as to what it opens
25	Necklace (50%) or bracelet (50%): 1-2=silver, 40 gp; 3-4=gold, 90 gp; 5-6=platinum, 180 gp; 7-10=base metal, no value
26	Set of 1-30 2"-tall shabti figures, 10% chance they are carved strangely (e.g. monkeys, salamander-men, snakes, etc.). 25% chance to be worth 2-40 gp each
27	1-4 canopic jars, clay
28	1-4 canopic jars, alabaster (10-50 gp)
29	1-4 canopic jars, silver or gold (10-200 gp)
30	GM's choice

4-138C: Rear Platform and Sarcophagi

The sarcophagi here are ancient, and elaborately carved with representative half-round carvings of themes of Set, dungeon exploration, monster slaughter, and crueller themes. The sarcophagi vary in height, length and width, with an average of 6' long, 3' wide, and 4' high. All of the sarcophagi are closed and sealed; to break the seal requires quite a bit of physical energy and time (1-4 rounds and a combined strength of 36). Recall that opening any sarcophagus awakens the Set golem (see 4-138A). The contents of any sarcophagus are determined on the following three tables:

1. Inhabitant

D100	Inhabitant
1	Two undead. Roll d6: 1-2: 2 wights; 3-4: 2 mummies; 5-6: 2 spectres. Use stats above.
2-71	Inert skeleton, wrapped in mummy wraps and smelling of burial spices

72-86	Wight, attacks immediately: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 4+3; HP 27; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4. Special attacks: energy drain. Special defenses: silver or magic needed to hit; immune to sleep, charm, hold, cold, poison, and paralysis.
87-96	Mummy: SZ M; AL LE; AC 3; MV 60'; HD 6+3; HP 48; #AT 1; Dmg 1-12. Special attacks: fear; rotting disease. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; half damage from magic weapons; immune to sleep, charm, hold, cold, poison, and paralysis.
97-100	Spectre: SZ M; AL LE; AC 2; MV 150', 300' flying (Class B); HD 7+3; HP 52; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8. Special attacks: energy drain. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to sleep, charm, hold, cold, poison, and paralysis.

2. Grave Goods - roll twice on this table per sarcophagus

D12	Goods
1	1-3 scarabs of stone and lapis (1-10 gp each)
2	Holy symbol of Set, platinum 50 gp
3	1-4 canopic jars: 1-2=alabaster, 3-4=ceramic, 5-6=silver
4	1-4 canopic jars as above, but with a twist: 1-2= three shadows: SZ M; AL CE; AC 7; MV 120; HD 3+3; HP 24, 20, 17; #AT 1; Dmg 2-5. Special attacks: STR drain. Special defenses: 90% undetectable; +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and cold 4-5= 1-4 ear seekers: SZ S; AL N; AC 9; MV 10'; HD 1 HP; HP 1(x4); #AT 1; Dmg special. Special: eggs hatch in 4-24 hours, and larvae have 90% chance to kill 5-6= curse (GM's choice) 7-8= big gem (1,000 gp)
5	1-3 painted wooden bowls, 10% chance to have a key feature of Arden Vul painted on it (e.g., Obsidian Gates [5-6D], cliff face, Arena [6-68], Ziggurat of Kauket [10-32])
6	Set of 6 copper bowls (5 gp total)
7	1-6 packets of desiccated food
8	1-4 blank papyrus scrolls plus a scribal kit; 10% chance that one of the scrolls features a treasure map
9	1-3 objects associated with lordship, e.g. a gold ring with large glass stone, a scepter, a set of fasces, and/or a conical, embroidered cap (each object worth 20-200 gp)
10	1-12 ushabti figures, 1" tall
11	1-6 ushabti figures, 4" tall
12	Ceremonial garb, heavily embroidered with silver and gold thread, with ivory fittings. 1-2=priest of Set 3-4=imperial administrator 5-6=military dress uniform 7-8=other priesthood. Each suit is worth 150 gp to the right buyer.

3. Treasures - roll once

D100	Result
1-50	Nothing
51-60	Mixed coins, worth 100-1,000 gp
61-70	Golden objects worth 200-2,000 gp: 1-2= ushabti figures 3-4=scarabs 5-6=ritual objects 7-8=dinner ware
71-80	Jewelry or gems (roll on standard tables)
81-85	Valuable non-magical books and scrolls
86-89	2-5 magical scrolls
90-94	2-7 potions, roll or determine randomly
95-96	Magic weapon. Roll d100: 01-60= +1 61-80= +2 81-85= +3 86-90= +1, and intelligent 91-100= cursed
97-98	Magic armor (75%) or shield (25%). Roll d100: 01-75=+1 76-80=+2 81-89=+3 91-95=special properties 96-100=cursed
99	Rod, staff or wand
100	Miscellaneous magic item

A band of undead led by a wight clusters here among the sarcophagi. Within 6 rounds of intruders entering the crypt, these undead begin to creep along the walkway (4-138B), hoping to take the intruders by surprise as they inspect the elements of area 4-138A

Inhabitants:

- 1 wight: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 4+3; HP 30; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4. Special attacks: energy drain. Special defenses: silver or magic needed to hit; immune to sleep, charm, hold, cold, poison, and paralysis
- 2 ghouls: SZ M; AL CE; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 15, 14, 13, 12, 12, 11, 11, 10; #AT 3; Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-6. Special attacks: paralysis. Special defenses: immune to sleep and charm.
- 3 ghasts: SZ M; AL CE; AC 4; MV 150'; HD 4; HP 30, 25, 23, 21, 20, 19; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-8. Special attacks: stench; paralysis. Special defenses: immune to sleep and charm

Treasure:

See sarcophagi.

4-139A to 4-139C: Southern Crypt

This immense chamber is broadly similar to its companion at 4-138. Its ceiling rises 20' above the floor. Two T-shaped platforms occupy either end of the crypt (4-139A and 4-139C; these areas are joined by an 80'-long sunken walkway lined with burial niches (4-139B). The walkway is 15' below the floor of the two platforms. Each platform holds 20 large stone sarcophagi carved in ornate, ancient style. A large statue of Set once stood on the platform of area 4-139A, but it has been thrown down and now lies in pieces among the sarcophagi. The walls of the platforms are painted with bright images of Set, the Judgment of the Dead, and the defeat of various enemies.

Meskenit the greater mummy rules the necropolis area from this crypt. He is often found at 4-139C, accompanied by a lesser mummy and a pack of ghosts; if not there, he will be in 4-146.

4-139A: Front Platform and Statue of Set

The entry platform features 20 sarcophagi and the ruined statue of Set. Initially, there are no opponents here, as Meskenit and his minions prefer to rest at 4-139C; see tactics therein.

Trap (glyph of warding): Meskenit placed this glyph on top of the ruined pedestal of the statue, it does 18 HP of fire damage.

Statue of Set

The obsidian statue lies in pieces, and only the feet remain on the pedestal. Set's white marble head, complete with gold snout and ears and lapis eyes, has rolled behind one of the sarcophagi. If approached, the lapis eyes pulse with a sinister blue light, but the destruction of the statue means that Set cannot act through this golem any longer. Set used to carry a 24" golden ankh and a 3' golden scepter, but Meskenit has stolen these objects (see 4-146).

Sarcophagi

These sarcophagi are ancient and elaborately carved with representative half-round carvings of themes of Set, dungeon exploration, monster slaughter, and crueler themes. The sarcophagi vary in height, length and width, with an average of 6' long, 3' wide, and 4' high. All of the sarcophagi on the entrance platform are closed and sealed. To break the seal of any sarcophagus requires quite a bit of physical energy and time (1-4 rounds and a combined strength of 36). The contents of any sarcophagus may be determined using the appropriate tables found at 4-138C.

Treasure:

The head of the set statue is worth 4,575 gp. It weighs 340 lb.

4-139B: Walkway and Burial Niches

Each 10' section of wall along the walkway between the platforms contains 9 burial niches; this means that there are 252 niches per wall, for a total of 504 niches in total. The plugs of fifteen of the niches have burst open from within. The remainder are sealed, and contain skeletal remains plus 1-2 objects from the relevant table located at 4-138B.

Trap (glyph of warding): Meskenit placed this glyph of paralysis halfway down the walkway between the platforms.

4-139C: Rear Platform and Sarcophagi

The rear platform holds 20 more sarcophagi. Again, they are ancient and elaborately carved with themes of Set, dungeon exploration, monster slaughter, and crueler themes. On average, the dimensions of the sarcophagi are 6' long, 3' wide, and 4' high. Three sarcophagi on this platform have been opened. To break the seal of any of the other sarcophagi requires quite a bit of physical energy and time (1-4 rounds and a combined strength of 36). The contents of any sarcophagus may be determined using the appropriate tables found at 4-138C.

Usually Meskenit is present here, accompanied by his lesser mummy and the pack of ghosts. They wait quietly once intruders are detected, hoping that the glyphs at 4-139A and 4-139B will both weaken and immobilize invading PCs. Once the second trap has been tripped (or negated), Meskenit releases the pack of ghouls and orders his lieutenant into the fray. He remains on the platform, casting spells to aid his minions and harm his foes, all the while intoning vile charms and curses in a dry, raspy, high-pitched voice.

Treasure:

Since three of the sarcophagi have been opened, their contents are available (roll randomly on the tables in 4-138C). Meskenit's personal treasure is detailed in 4-146. The lesser mummy wears an amulet of fire resistance (see new magic items).

Inhabitants:

1. Meskenit, a greater mummy (see new monsters): SZ M; AL LE; AC 0; MV 90'; HD 10+3; HP 73; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12; MR 50%. Special attacks: aura of despair (saves at -3); mummy rot; command other undead. Special defenses: magic weapons to hit (+1 does 1 HP damage; +2 does half damage; +3 does full damage); immune to cold; takes half damage from non-magical fire; turned as a ghost. Possessions: a brooch of shielding (61 HP left), a pair of bracers of haste, and a staff of the necromancer (25 charges) (see new magic items for the last two). Spells as 11th-level cleric with WIS 18 (7/6/5/4/2/1): curse, command, cause light wounds (x3), protection from good, darkness; chant, hold person (x2), resist fire (x2), silence 15' radius; animate dead, blindness, dispel magic (x2), glyph of warding; cause serious wounds (x2), poison, protection from good 10' radius; flame strike, true seeing; blade barrier.
2. 1 mummy: SZ M; AL LE; AC 3; MV 60'; HD 6+3; HP 39; #AT 1; Dmg 1-12. Special attacks: fear; rotting disease. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; half damage from magic weapons; immune to sleep, charm, hold, cold, poison, and paralysis. Possessions: amulet of fire resistance (see new magic items).
3. 8 ghouls: SZ M; AL CE; AC 4; MV 150'; HD 4; HP 30, 27, 25, 23, 22, 21, 20, 19, 18; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-8. Special attacks: stench; paralysis. Special defenses: immune to sleep and charm.

4-140: Storage Room

This room has a low ceiling (only 8' tall) and was used as a general storage room for the necropolis in antiquity. Three heavy sarcophagus bottoms (no lids) line the center of the room; one has partial half-round carvings on it, while the others are still rough. A stone bench is set against the south wall, on which are numerous stone carving tools, some jars of spices and (dried) unguents, and a large bundle of linen wrappings. The walls are undecorated and roughly hewn.

Significant time and noise spent in this room is likely to attract the ghouls and wight from 4-138C.

Secret Door (north): The door is narrow and small (5'x5'), and is easy (1 in 4) to locate; it can only be opened by locating a dime-sized button inset on one of the stair risers.

Secret Door (north, leading into 4-149): This door, leading into area 4-149, is small (5'x5') and normal to locate. It can only be opened by locating a dime-sized button inset on the top of one of the stair risers.

Secret Door (south): This door is hard to detect (1 in 8), in part because it is quite wide (8') and short (4' tall). It is opened by locating the bottom seam and sliding a thin knife along the seam to release a catch; then the bottom may be pushed inward, revealing room 4-141.

Treasure:

The embalming spices might be worth some money (2-200 gp).

4-141: Lost Altar

A rough stone altar rests against the south wall; it radiates strongly of evil, and appears to be coated in dried blood. The altar is an illusion designed to conceal the secret door hidden behind it. If believed, the illusion suggests to viewers that great evil still lurks here or that the arrival of demonic evil is imminent; the emotion projected by the illusion is that retreat is likely the best action. If disbelieved, the secret door will be readily apparent on the south wall. Even if the PCs are fooled by the illusion, they might be able to locate the secret door anyway (1 in 6 chance if actively searching).

Secret Door (south): The door is 2' wide and 5' tall and may be difficult to locate given the illusion surrounding it; should the illusion be overcome, it is normal to locate. Depressing a stud near the floor activates the door, which then snaps inward on its spring-loaded hinges.

4-142: Tomb of Theskelon the High Priest

This ancient tomb holds the remains of Theskelon, the high priest of Set responsible for the creation of the necropolis. The current Set priests are ignorant of the existence of this tomb.

Theskelon's tomb is decorated with a stark white plaster, on which are painted a number of unusual frescoes. The images are still intact, although their colors have faded a bit.

Wall Images: One image shows an enormous black boar with an 11" yellow sun clamped in its hairy jaws. This image is more than a fresco, as some sort of lumpy substance has been used to outline the boar's body and provide relief to the otherwise flat wall. The boar's one visible eye is a gaping hole in the bas-relief, which, although painted red, is obvious lacking its pupil. Actual bristles and bits of horn were implanted in the plaster to add verisimilitude to the image. The 'sun' is a sphere 11" in diameter composed of a 10" solid gold center concealed by an outer layer of painted plaster. [See below for discussion].

A second image features a crocodile devouring a heron; this image features realistic teeth implanted into the bas-relief as well as heron-legs made of femurs of some huge mammal.

A third image is of a huge Set animal squatting on a turtle; here the eyes of the Set animal are 2"-diameter black crystals, while the turtle's shell appears to be made out of an enormous turtle shell.

A final image is of tall human figure dressed as a priest of Set; he has a garish, grinning white face and is splitting a simian creature (a huge baboon, perhaps?) in half with an axe. The features of this final image are particularly accentuated: the human's head is bulbous, lumpy and features real black hair, the axe head is an actual axe head, and the relief of the baboon is covered by bits of matted real fur. The total effect is striking.

The collage-like images are impressive, yet simultaneously amateurish; they are also fairly chilling, since all four connote violence and savagery.

Outer Sarcophagus: In the middle of the chamber is the unusual ‘sarcophagus’ of Theskelon. The sarcophagus appears merely as a single unbroken block of mottled green granite, about 4’ wide, 8’ long, and 6’ tall. It is clear that the block is not native to the surrounding stone. Inspection reveals no anomalies, fissures, or cracks save for the following: 1) a continuous inscription at 4’ in height written in Mithric, which reads “Theskelon is in me. I am in Theskelon;” 2) a spherical depression on the top of the block about 10” in diameter; incised around this depression in tiny letters is the phrase “Let Set devour the rays of his old rival.” This depression is a natural fit for the ‘sun’ held in the black boar’s jaws.

Puzzle: The sarcophagus can only be accessed through the following steps: 1) releasing the gold plaster sun from the wall fresco; 2) removing the gold orb at its core; 3) placing it in the depression on top of the block. Once that is accomplished, the golden orb will melt and the granite block will crumble into dust and debris (roll 2d10 under DEX in order to leap out of the way and avoid 1-4 damage), revealing the inner sarcophagus.

Of course it is necessary first to recognize that the plaster sun contains a slightly smaller metal core; it will also be necessary to figure out how to release the plaster/golden sun from the wall. Attempts to do so by simple prying will fail, as the plaster appears rock-hard. Blunt force will remove it from the wall, but at a 50% risk of destroying the golden orb (in that case, the sarcophagus will remain closed permanently). The only sure way to release the sun with its golden orb is to find the boar’s eye and insert it into the missing hole. The clue to the location of the missing eye is in the inscription on the sarcophagus. The clue is the pun “I am in Theskelon;” the missing ‘eye’ is indeed found buried inside the plaster bas-relief of the Theskelon image (i.e., “I” or Theskelon). Those digging around in the image’s bulbous head will be rewarded with two red gems, each 2” in diameter. One is the ruby eye, while the other is a piece of glass. Only by placing the ruby - and not the glass - in the eye socket of the boar will the plaster shatter, and the golden orb drop to the floor.

Inner Sarcophagus: If the granite shell is removed via the process described above, a gleaming gold and lapis sarcophagus becomes apparent. The case is sculpted as a recumbent man with crossed arms, dressed in ceremonial Set robes.

Trap: The case is trapped with explosive runes.

Treasure:

The golden orb (400 gp) and the ruby eye (1,000 gp) are valuable parts of the puzzle described above. The gilt and lapis of the inner sarcophagus are worth a total of 600 gp.

Inside the case are the inert bones of Theskelon as well as several important artifacts preserved by the ancient cult of Set. These artifacts are not magical, nor are they inherently valuable. Still, they hold clues to exploration of the dungeon ruins and will of interest to adventurers. Their value to the current priesthood of Set as symbolic and historical artifacts renders them priceless.

a. Signet Ring of Theskelon: gold ring (50 gp) with carved image of a male head and the legend “Theskelon the Master.” As a symbol of legitimacy within the priesthood of Set, this ring would be of incalculable value to High Priestess Stephania.

Note: This ring is not a true ring of Set, as it predates them.

- b. Plaques of the Beacon: three copper plaques 10” wide by 14” tall hold incised schematic drawings of three of the modules from the Beacon. One side of each plaque shows the complete floorplan of the given module (both levels, if the module has two levels), along with one or two Rudishva glyphs. The reverse side has some instructions in Mithric. The first plaque depicts the engine room of the Beacon (7-143). The runes that accompany it are for ‘power’ and ‘flight’, while the notes read “Unknown location. Possibly near the administrative center and shrines. Likely a powerful weapon.” The second plaque depicts the crew quarters (6-112), with the runes ‘dwelling’ and ‘peaceful’; the Archontean notes read “the Scriptor claims to know its location, as his workmen found it. But the workmen were devoured and the Scriptor is not talking.” [GM: the notes refer to Lucius Cornelius Scriptor and the construction of his tomb (6-130 to 6-135) at a location near to the crew pod]. The third plaque depicts the weapons locker (6-27) and uses the runes ‘armory’ and ‘mechanical voice’; the Archontean notes read “Unknown location. Reference to a voice is undoubtedly a mistake.” GM: the voice refers to the AI, RAJ-750 (see 6-27).
- c. The Rise of the Sortians: an unusual set of bone plates containing text written in the secret tongue of the priests of Set (see Arden Vul books).
- d. The Theskelonia: a parchment codex with black hide covers (see Arden Vul books).
- e. An ivory plaque that comprises the last third of the treatise Preparing for the Long Death (see Arden Vul books). The other two plaques are in the possession of Meskenit (see 4-146). As it contains the new spell, the long death, as well as some general arcane theory, this plaque is valuable in its own right (3,000 gp).
- f. A key that fits the lock in the stone door at SL8-1.

Development: As indicated above, discovery of Theskelon’s tomb would be of signal importance to the modern cult of Set, and those who report the discovery to Stephania will receive substantial rewards (500 gp each). Looting the tomb, however, provokes the eternal enmity of the cult (should that fact become known).

4-143: Slaver’s Rest

This former antechamber to the necropolis has been cut off from the rest of the area by ancient cave-ins. It is currently used as a way station for the Guild of Service when it travels the Long Stair (4-19). A couple of benches, a water barrel, a set of broken shackles, and a coiled whip are scattered about the floor. A brass horn hangs from the wall, which the guardsmen use to alert those in 4-19 of any threat.

A quartet of guildsmen from the Guild of Service stand guard here, tasked with ensuring that nothing dangerous emerges from 4-154.

The door to the west is stuck. It leads to a set of stairs that formerly connected to 4-145 but that now end in a cave-in.

Harold the Wary, a lost adventurer, is cowering in the broken hallway behind the stuck door. He took refuge here during a change in the guard rotation, and is increasingly desperate to make his way past the guards. Harold is a big man, but a bit of a coward (‘wary’, as he calls it). He was part of the gang led by Gillen the magic user (see 4-180), but deserted when Gillen revealed his intention to set up operations as a bandit. Harold fled north and east, and has only barely managed to avoid capture by the slavers.

He could retrace his footsteps to 4-179 and would happily warn new comrades of the threat posed by Gillen and Co. if those new comrades promised to help him escape the Halls. He has never visited the Forum (4-2). Unless convinced that he does possess courage by some friendly, good-aligned persons, Harold is likely to quaff his potion and disappear the minute he feels that safety is at hand.

Inhabitants:

1. Harold the Wary, 3rd-level male Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL LN; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 3; HP 22; #AT 1; Dmg 3-8 (footman's mace) or 1-4 (crossbow bolt). Abilities: STR 16, INT 15, WIS 9, DEX 10, CON 13, CHA 15. Possessions: scale mail and shield; footman's mace; a light crossbow with 12 bolts; a pouch of marbles; a purse with 39 sp; and a potion of invisibility.
2. 4 guildsmen, as 2nd-level male Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 16, 15; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (spears, clubs). Possessions: leather armor; spears; and clubs. Special: they have +1 to damage from STR.

4-144: Guardian Noses

This chamber offers another resting point for those traveling the Long Stair (4-19). The east and west walls are painted with identical enchanted frescoes. Each fresco is of an enormous, bulbous human or humanoid nose, complete with pores and follicles. The frescoes 'smell' (detect) alignment and, if they detect non-evil alignment, begin braying loudly. The noise provokes an immediate random encounter roll; if the roll is successful, the person(s) encountered will be unable to be surprised due to the noise. Two gallons of liquid and some cloth can easily remove the frescoes.

4-145: Broken Corridor

This long corridor extending east from 4-148 and under 4-145 and 4-139B is filled with dust and cobwebs. At the east end, movement or investigation is 25% chance per turn likely to cause a cave-in. The cave-in will affect the final 40' of the corridor and will do 4-24 HP damage to those who fail on a roll of 3d8 under DEX.

4-146: Lair of the Mummy Lord

This chamber had been a preparation room for the necropolis, and is consequently filled with appropriate gear: hammers and chisels, a wooden work table with jars of unguents and preserving spices, two boxes filled with wrapping linen, a dozen sheets of thinly hammered gold leaf (12 gp each), and a clay pot filled with bits of odd-sized lapis (a total of 230 gp). Four unfinished sarcophagi lean against the north wall, while a finished one is bound tightly with iron chains. The walls of the chamber are undecorated.

Meskenit the greater mummy (see 4-139C) has made this chamber his war room, and he uses it to plot vengeance against the living and to run experiments in mummy creation. Meskenit owns a valuable pair of ivory plaques on which is inked an ancient treatise entitled "Preparing for the Long Death." The treatise outlines, on the first plaque, the materials needed for mummification and, on the second plaque, the process and initial spells needed to accomplish this rite.

What Meskenit doesn't know is that he is missing a third plaque (see 4-142), a fact which explains his frustrating results to date. The pathetic results of two efforts are stuffed in one of the unfinished sarcophagi. More interesting is the aberrant 'good mummy' named Icthelon, which Meskenit unwittingly created. This strange creature has been locked into the finished sarcophagus, and will beat and scratch at the lid if it detects good creatures in the chamber. [The corpse which Meskenit used to create his mummy was that of the lawful good priest Icthelon, whose deity - Thoth - ensured that the product of Meskenit's sorcery would be, if deathless and similar to a mummy, also sentient and good]. If Icthelon is released and is not attacked, he might aid good-aligned PCs with information and physical assistance. He might also accompany such PCs throughout the upper parts of the complex. He has good knowledge of the layouts of the public areas devoted to Set and Thoth, although no knowledge of current inhabitants.

Meskenit keeps his treasure piled under the worktable.

Secret Door (south): The door is 2' wide by 4' high and is difficult (1 in 8) to spot. Locating and depressing a 2"-square pressure plate on the floor opens the door. None of the mummies know of this door.

Inhabitants:

1. Icthelon the good mummy (see new monsters): SZ M; AL LG; AC 3; MV 60'; HD 6+3; HP 41; #AT 1; Dmg 1-12. Special attacks: divine touch (cures 1-8 HP to good creatures, inflicts 1-8 HP damage on evil). Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; magic weapons do half damage; immune to sleep, hold, charm, poison, and paralysis.

Treasure:

1. Two ivory plaques comprising the first 2/3 of the treatise, Preparing for the Long Death (see Arden Vul books; for the missing final third, see 4-142); the golden ankh (24") and scepter (3') taken from the broken Set statue at 4-139A (worth 2,500 and 3,500 gp respectively).
2. Meskenit's treasure: 2 3'-tall, solid gold statuettes of Set in boar form (2,500 gp each); 12 carved alabaster canopic jars inset with jet and lapis, each showing one of the twelve ancient Archontean deities (375 gp each); a set of solid silver embalming tools (75 gp); a broken string of 25 fine pearls, stored in a clay jar (3,000 gp); 2 teeth of Pol (see new magic items); six cones of rare incense (75 gp each), plus a cone of incense of relaxation (see new magic items); a silk bag filled with 3 doses of dust of disappearance; a potion of clarity (see new magic items); a pair of slippers of stealth (see new magic items); an ankh of healing (see new magic items); a bardiche +4; a suit of abyssal armor (see new magic items); a scroll with the Liturgy of the Strong (see Arden Vul books); 2 scrolls of protection from undead; and a scroll of curse item (see new spells).

4-147: Unfinished Preparation Room

This chamber is roughly hewn and unfinished. It is empty save for a 2' x 2' table set in the middle of the room. On the table is a copper bowl filled with mercury, in which float two disembodied eyes. The eyes react to light (dilating, etc.) and follow movement. This bizarre object is a set of eyes of Pol (see new magic items).

Secret Door (west): The door is easy to find (1 in 4) and opens by pulling outward into the room.

4-147A: Connecting Hall

This hallway leads to a stair that descends to the hallway (4-145) leading to 4-148. It is dusty and empty.

Secret Door (north): The door may be found normally; it is operated merely by pushing inward on the 3'x6' panel. It leads to a narrow tunnel that ends at the chasm in a concealed door. Beyond the concealed door is the invisible bridge to 4-127. Note: The bridge will only be present if the levers have been manipulated appropriately at 4-127.

4-148: Hidden Mortuary Temple

Knowledge of this former mortuary temple has been lost to the Set Cult for at least over 1,200 years. Originally it served as a lesser temple, where the remains of donors could be prepared and those donors' service to Set celebrated.

A raised walkway overlooks the main temple. Steep stairs lead down 15' feet to the floor below, where four slim black pillars rise to a barrel-vaulted ceiling. The north wall is decorated by frescoes of pastoral scenes involving wildlife, and especially black boars. The south wall has a colossal, 20' statue of Set in half relief; Set's arms extend outward to form a canopy over the altar some 10' below. The statue is stone, but brightly painted; the flesh parts are a coppery brown, while the headdress and loincloth are white with blue and yellow highlights. The statue's eyes are reflective colored glass; although they may appear to be valuable from a distance, they are in fact worthless. The western and eastern walls are painted in a trompe l'oeil technique to give the impression of crypts extending off into the distance.

The temple is dark. A cluster of five human-sized shapes is huddled around a 2'- or 3'-tall cylinder in the area circumscribed by the four pillars. Detection spells or abilities will clearly reveal that the temple radiates evil. It takes some closer attention to additionally notice that an aura of good surrounds the cylinder at the center of the shapes.

The shapes are, in fact, the remains of an adventuring team overcome by the band of shadows that inhabits the temple, and the cylinder is a salt lamp of protection (greater) (see new magic items). The strange arrangement of the corpses – huddled around the lamp – tells the story of the explorers' demise. Ambushed by the shadows, the adventurers attempted to use their lamp to drive off the creatures. Lacking fuel for the lamp, however, the party magic user desperately used her own life force to power it. Eventually she grew exhausted, the lamp failed, and the shadows massacred her and her party. Those who inspect the lamp find that it indeed lacks fuel; only a small residue of red 'wax' remains.

It takes the shadows that inhabit this chamber 5-7 rounds to notice intruders and gather for the attack. Once they do so, they use gang tactics to bring down one opponent at a time.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 greater shadows (see new monsters): SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 5+1; HP 36, 30; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12. Special attacks: ability drain. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to cold, poison, paralysis, sleep, charm, and hold; turned as a wraith.
2. 14 shadows: SZ M; AL CE; AC 7; MV 120; HD 3+3; HP 24, 22, 21, 20, 19, 18, 18, 17; #AT 1; Dmg 2-5. Special attacks: STR drain. Special defenses: 90% undetectable; +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and cold.

Treasure:

Greater salt lamp of protection (see new magic items). On the adventurers: suits of banded mail, chain mail, splint mail and leather armor +2; a broadsword, footman's flail, a short bow, and 3 daggers; 78 gp, 120 sp, a 130 gp gem, a 90 gp gem, an oriental carpet showing the 3rd mystery of Set (375 gp), 2 vials of acid, a short sword +1, 10 arrows +2, a wand of magic missiles (1 charge), a cursed wand of life-stealing (27 charges) (see new magic items) a potion of fire resistance, a potion of animal control, a ring of higher purpose (see new magic items), and a rudishva lesser power supply, now empty (see new technological items). In addition, the skull of Gneis Valor (see new magic items) is found here.

The magic user's spell book contains the following: charm person, comprehend languages, detect magic, feather fall, floating disk, hold portal, magic missile, push, read magic, sleep, unseen servant; detect evil, ESP, fool's gold, knock, mirror image, ray of enfeeblement, shatter, web; blink, clairvoyance, hold person, infravision, monster summoning I, protection from normal missiles, slow, suggestion, water breathing, wind wall; charm monster, enchanted weapon, fumble, remove curse.

4-149: Punishment Square

A former crossroads on the Long Stair (4-19), this area is used by the Guild of Service to intimidate new slaves arriving at the pits. To the western side of the square, by the caved-in corridor, the slavers have erected two frames on which they display the bloodied bodies of troublesome slaves. Four torches light the area.

Currently a Wisikin fighter and a stoic Archontean ranger are hanging on the frames. The ranger is in bad shape, as the slavers amputated his hands; he is unlikely to last much longer. He will stoically whisper a few words of advice about the complex to any who aid him in his final agonies. Hjalti the Wisikin is in better shape; he has been badly burned and branded, and is down to 6 HP, but could be revived by a good party. Neither has any equipment.

A large barrel of torches and pitch may be found to the east, by the door.

Hjalti the Wisikin was taken by the Guild of Service while exploring the southern great cavern (3-172) as part of a failed adventuring expedition. Although not the brains of the operation, Hjalti knew that his (now-dead) leader wished to locate a certain 'evil sorcerer' named Kerbog Khan (SL12-25), who was 'wanted by all the collegia, and especially the Collegium of Macrina (see World of Archontos appendix); for theft of valuable treatises, codices, and alchemical materials. In addition, they had heard rumors of a lord of the fungi, and were taking the time to search the fungal forest to locate this person [Note: Hjalti means the false-Ptarmis at 3-176]. Hjalti served time in the slave pits of Level 4 (4-11), but was punished for trying to lead an escape. He would happily offer directions to those who aid him, and could navigate the route from 4-149 to 4-163, 4-160, 4-159, 3-212A, 3-172 and eventually to the cliff exit at 3-189.

Secret Door (west): This door is 5'x5' in size and is normal to locate. It has no opening mechanism from this side, and will need to be smashed open (50 HP damage; AC 0). Inside the door a short set of stairs leads upward to 4-140.

Secret Door (southwest, into 4-140): This door is 5'x5' and easy to locate (1 in 4). It is tricky to open, as it must be pulled inward; it may be difficult to get a grip on the door to accomplish this task.

Inhabitants:

1. Kiglon, 3rd-level male Thorcin ranger: SZ M; AL CG; AC 10; MV 120'; HD 3; HP 1 (max 32); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 14, INT 13, WIS 15, DEX 10, CON 17, CHA 9. Kiglon will die in 1-3 turns unless cured.
2. Hjalti, 4th-level male Wiskin fighter: SZ M; AL CN; AC 10; MV 120'; HD 4; HP 6 (max 47); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 17, INT 8, WIS 10, DEX 12, CON 18, CHA 14.

4-150: Empty Antechamber

This chamber features some faded frescoes of the preparation of the dead for burial. The passage to the south collapsed in antiquity; digging for 1-4 turns will produce a troll thegn's passport (see Arden Vul items).

The door to the east has been recently refurbished and oiled, and is locked. The key is held by the duty guardsmen in area 4-17.

4-151: Cavern of Bones

The passage from the west leads to a ledge overlooking an enormous cavern. A layer of bones covers the floor 20' below the ledge; viewers will not initially know it, but the layer of bones is extremely deep, as the floor of the cavern is 75' below the ledge. In antiquity the cult of Set tossed all unwanted corpses here, as well as the bodies of lesser believers (who usually imagined a more noble burial in the necropolis). More recently, the Guild of Service has taken to disposing of casualties here, so the bodies closest to the ledge are fresh (and some may not yet be skeletonized).

PCs who foolishly paw around in the remains are liable to catch a disease from the numerous tiny life forms that devour the flesh of corpses deposited here. The chance to contract a serious disease starts at 25%, and increases by 5% for every turn spent in the bones.

A second exit to this chamber exists to the southwest, but it is 50' below the level of the entry ledge and 25' above the level of the floor; it leads to 4-153.

4-151A: Pukel-Mander

On another ledge 75' above the floor of the pit of bones stands a loathsome pukel-mander (see new magic items).

Touching this particular pukel-mander with anything other than a tear of Kauket (see new magic items) also animates 8 heqeti hopping dead (see new monsters) from the pit of bones. If the salamander warriors are defeated, it will take 2 hours before they can reanimate. It takes a round for the salamander warriors to clamber out of the mass of bones in order to assault the desecrators.

Secret Door (south): This door is a 5'-diameter circular plug in the stone. It is normal to detect, and only opens if a tear of Kauket is placed into an oval indentation in the rock face. A knock spell will open the door, though.

Inhabitants:

1. 8 heqeti hopping dead (see new monsters): SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 3; HP 22, 21, 20, 19, 19, 17, 16, 15; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8. Special attacks: leap; cursed tongue. Special defenses: turned as ghastrs; half damage from piercing and edged weapons; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and cold-based spells.

4-152: Gate to the Abyss

A spherical tunnel some 6' in diameter spirals downward at a steep slope. Its rough walls are pebbled and oily. The tunnel leads down more than 200' before ending at a shimmering orange veil of energy. Scrawled on the wall by the gate in the secret tongue of the priests of Set is the phrase: "Danger! None have returned." Stepping through the one-way veil brings the foolish to the 497th layer of abyss, which is ruled by Kauket. Any so transported must find another way to return to the Prime Material plane.

4-153: Arcanum Cave

This cave formed as a natural geode of arcanum (see new magic items). The walls, floor and ceiling of the cave all pulsate with a sickly orange light. Like all such large pockets of arcanum, this cave exerts a powerful compulsion on arcane spell-casters (see new magic items for effects).

The tunnel leading south enters the chasm (4-154) at an elevation 10' below the pavement found at 4-154 and 4-155.

4-154: Ledge and Chasm

The door in the western corridor is obviously new. Made of sturdy, iron-reinforced wood, it has been spiked shut from the west. To the east of the door is a ledge overlooking a small chasm. The ledge is made of cracked and buckled blue-granite paving stones. Two iron torch brackets are embedded in the pavement near the chasm edge, and the foundations of a bridge - long gone - are visible. A lone pillar by the edge of the chasm suggests that this chamber may once have been joined to 4-155; how the chasm came to separate the two is a mystery.

As it descends 100' into the earth, the chasm narrows to a 10' wide 'point' that is filled with clear water. From the ledge the chasm extends upward another 50'. The tunnel that leads to 4-153 is at an elevation 10' below that of 4-154 and 4-155.

The chasm cephalopods that inhabit this chasm are slowly attracted to heat and movement; it takes 1-3 turns for them to gather and investigate.

Inhabitants:

1. 8 small chasm cephalopods (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 5; MV 60' flying (Class A); HD 2; HP 15, 14, 13, 13, 12, 11, 10, 8; #AT 5 (4 tentacles and a beak); Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-3/1-3/1-4; MR 25%. Special attacks: surprise on 1-4.
2. 1 medium chasm cephalopod (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 5; MV 60' flying (Class A); HD 4; HP 25; #AT 5 (4 tentacles and a beak); Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-4/1-4/1-6; MR 25%. Special attacks: surprise on 1-4.

4-155: Forgotten God

More buckled blue-granite pavers line this shrine to a forgotten god. The chamber is wreathed in heavy ropes of cobwebs, and its decorations - if there were ever any - have long since faded. The walls are the same grey-blue granite, although many of the sheathing slabs have fallen, leaving the bare stone beneath. Four heavy pillars of green granite rise to a flat ceiling 30' above the pavement. The pillar segments were carved with elaborate geometric and representational schemes, but the passage of time has worn most of the images smooth. At best a PC might see a glimpse of a cylindrical entity with four legs, or some bipeds that look like insects (mantises); a few random humans are shown, although their dress and depiction is foreign and puzzling.

The paving stones are treacherous, and liable to collapse. Anyone walking carefully across them will be safe, although he/she will feel the pavers roll and tilt. More aggressive movement such as running or fighting is liable to cause a collapse on a 1 in 6 chance per person per 10' square crossed (or fought on top of). If a collapse occurs, it will either cause those on it to fall to the ground for 1 round (50%) or drop them into an eroded hole for 1-6 HP damage (50%).

A colossal statue stands at the east end of the chamber, in front of the opening to 4-156. It takes the form of a biped engaged in an elaborate stylized dance or symbolic pose. It stands on one foot, with the other bent and extended with only the toes touching the ground. Its body appears to possess 8 arms, arranged in a fan around its chest. The hands are all broken off. The head is grotesque, showing huge scowling eyes, a snarling, fanged mouth, and a bulbous, distended nose. These features are all cloaked in dust and cobwebs, and are thus hard to make out; if cleaned up, however, the statue will be seen to display crisp, clean features in marked contrast to the obvious decrepitude of the remainder of the shrine.

Should the must and dust be scraped away, a niche may also be glimpsed in the statue's chest. Inside the niche is a faintly glowing, fist-sized piece of orange arcnum (see new magic items). Should the arcnum lump be touched, the statue will demand, in 1-12 unknown languages before finally settling on Archontean, "Do not touch the heart of the God. This is your final warning." Should the arcnum lump be removed, the statue takes more drastic action. Shouting (in 1-12 languages before finally Archontean) "The Six shall be notified that the Uthric has been disrupted. Punishment commences!" Immediately 2 type II demons gate in and confront the desecrators. The statue simultaneously begins to cast the following spells, in order: slow, darkness 15' radius, and cloudkill. If the party emerges triumphant, they will be able to keep the arcnum and will also find that the statue's four fangs are solid platinum (200 gp each). Furthermore a silver scroll case with three spells can be found in the ruins of its chest.

Buried under the paver directly in front of the statue is a box of some strange greyish substance (rudishva plasteel). It is locked and hard to pick (-25%). It is also trapped with electronic intruder repulsors. The trap may be detected normally and disarmed normally, although even a successful disarming will inflict the 2-12 HP damage. The benefit of disarming the trap is that the damage will be inflicted only once; otherwise all future contact with the lock mechanism (say, to pick the lock) will incur 2-12 HP damage/round. The box contains 6 plate-sized octagonal pieces of platinum and, wrapped in red silk, Troll-hammer, an enchanted mace.

Note: The inhabitants of 4-156 may be encountered here (1 in 4 chance), and will be certainly attracted if combat breaks out with demons or chasm cephalopods.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 type II demons: SZ L; AL CE; AC -2; MV 60', 120' swimming; HD 9; HP 64, 57; #AT 3; Dmg 1-3/1-3/4-16; MR 55%. Constant effect: infravision. Special attacks: cause fear. Special defenses: half damage from cold, electricity, fire, and gas. Special: darkness 15' radius; levitate; detect invisible objects; telekinesis; gate (20% chance).

Treasure:

Arcnum lump (see new magic items); 4 platinum fangs (200 gp each); silver scroll case (85 gp) with three spells: glasseye, legend lore, and repulsion. In the rudishva box, 6 plate-sized octagonal pieces of platinum (1,500 gp each), and Troll-hammer (see new magic items).

4-156: Spider Lair

The chamber is notable for the polished black sheathing that coats the walls and the lack of sharp edges; all of the corners are smoothed and rounded.

A clutch of huge spiders has its lair in this desolate chamber amid a mass of webs, dust, and debris. Amid the rubble are three of the hands from the statue in 4-155 (one has an enchanted scimitar, one bears a non-magical mace, and the third carries a platinum rod of authority worth 175 gp) as well as a copper slate with the name varumani inscribed on it in Mithric. The phrase "that is, trolls" has been helpfully scratched on the slate next in Archontean next to the runes.

Inhabitants:

1. 8 huge spiders: 4 huge spiders: SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 180'; HD 2+2; HP 18, 15, 15, 14, 13, 12, 11, 10; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: surprise 1-5; poison (+1 to saves); can leap up to 30'.

Treasure:

On the floor of the chamber: 47 cp; 56 sp; 41 gp; a 75 gp gem; the three hands, with the mace, platinum rod (175 gp), and enchanted scimitar; and the copper slate. The scimitar is intelligent, and named Mistral (see new magic items).

4-157: Carved Chamber

Every inch of the walls and ceiling of this rounded chamber has been carved with 1"-deep geometric and representational figures. The representational figures are hard to make out, as their bodies are elongated and twisted, but the following are clear: thin-limbed bipeds (rudishva), bird-men (varuda), long- and heavylimbed bipeds (varumani), and snake-men (kalyani). Sadly, the faces of these figures have all been systematically obliterated with destructive magic, and three sections of carving that probably carried inscriptions have been utterly obliterated. In addition, a 5'-square chunk of the east wall has been completely removed.

The chamber was built by the rudishva to tell the story of the travels of the Beacon and its inhabitants. The priest of Thoth who discovered the chamber destroyed the wall images but carted off one section of it, the one featuring an enormous image of the Beacon (see 4-158).

Aside from the destruction, the chamber is peaceful, quiet and secure, and would make a good refuge. The passage to the north ends in a cave-in, but a tiny, cramped tunnel continues onward, wending its way upward and ending at one of the cells in the prison of Set (Level 3, area 3-105D).

Secret Door (south): The secret door is detected normally. It can only be opened by pushing a 3"-tall image of a door on the section of the western wall of 4-157 closest to the entrance. Unless explorers specifically state they are looking for a door image, it will take 10-100 turns to locate the door image.

4-158: Secret Chamber

The northern secret door can only be opened as described in 4-157. The chamber has the same carved walls and rounded corners as 4-157. A chest made of a strange gray substance lies against the south wall. Lying in the center of the room is a desiccated corpse wearing the orange ceremonial robes of a Thothian priest; his corpse has been charred by energy or electricity. Floating next to the body is a 5'x-5'x1' segment of stone covered with strange carvings (the piece taken from the wall in 4-157).

Trap (energy wall): A dangerous invisible field of magical energy bisects the chamber at a point 8' from the southern wall. Any non-rudishva that touches or crosses the field is zapped for 6-36 HP damage (save versus breath weapons for ¾ damage). After several millennia, however, the trap is malfunctioning. Every 3-18 rounds it shimmers briefly into visibility, allowing the cautious an opportunity to detect it. In addition, the weakened field only has sufficient power to zap intruders 1-6 more times before it fizzles out. Clever PCs a) might notice that the field seems to be losing intensity after each 'zap' and b) could negate it by using the corpse of the priest or a summoned creature(s) to drain it of its 'charge'.

The rudishva plasteel chest is empty, having been robbed in antiquity by whoever dug the tunnel to the east. The stone slab rests on a permanent enhanced floating disk of the priest's devising. It responds to command words uttered in Mithric: "Go!", "Stop!", etc.

Treasure:

On the corpse: 15 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items), a key to the left hematite door at 3-177, and an eye of seeing (see new magic items).

Stone Slab: the slab could be sold to one of the Collegia or to the imperial scholars for 1,000-4,000 gp. It depicts a strange dwelling shaped like a flattened sphere, standing on six piers, with numerous 'antennae' protruding from it. A ramp descends from the body of the dwelling to the ground, and numerous representatives of the four races depicted in 4-157 are shown on the ramp. Beneath the carving is the phrase, in Rudishva glyphis, "Shining Beacon of Glorious Heaven." The slab weighs 4,200 pounds.

4-159: Stairs Up to Level 3 (3-212A)

These stairs climb to Level 3 (area 3-212A). They are used by the cult of Set when they wish to visit the upper levels of the dungeon.

A bright yellow arrow points up the stairs; it is magic and appears to float about a foot off the ground.

Secret Door (north): This door is hard to locate (1 in 8) and opens only by sliding an extremely thin pick or other bit of metal (1/8" thick) along the crack between the door and the floor. It leads via a dusty staircase and natural tunnel to 4-158.

4-160: Crossroads

This is an important crossroads for those seeking to move about the middle levels of the dungeon. As such it is relatively clear of debris and dust, and is also less likely to be empty than other sections. Each time the PCs enter the crossroads, roll on the following table:

2d12	Encounter
2-8	None
9-11	Party of Set guardsmen and a Set acolyte, heading to or from 3-212A: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>4 Set guardsmen (see new monsters), as 2nd-level Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 15, 12; #AT 1, Dmg 2-7 (mace), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: red scale mail and wooden shield; footman's maces; spears; light crossbows with 20 bolts.</li> <li>1 Set acolyte (see new monsters), as a 3rd-level Archontean cleric of Set: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 60'; HD 3; HP 19; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (mace) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Possessions: Set armor (see Arden Vul items); footman's mace; light crossbow; acolyte's was stick (see new magic items); and a silver holy symbol of Set (10 gp). Spells prayed for: command, cure light wounds, curse (reverse of bless), protection from good; hold person, silence 15' radius</li> </ol>
12	A randomly determined monster (roll for a level 4 monster)
13-14	3-12 lizardmen traveling towards the Arena (6-70): SZ M; AL N; AC 4; MV 60', 120' swimming; HD 2+1; HP 16, 15, 14, 13(x3), 12(x3), 11, 11, 10; #AT 1 or 3; Dmg 1-6 (club) and 1-6 (javelin), or 1-2/1-2/1-8. Possessions: clubs; javelins; shields.
15	A randomly determined monster (roll for a level 5 monster)
16-18	11-16 goblins on their way to or from the Arena (6-70): SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7(x3), 6(x3), 5(x4), 4(x4), 3, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-
19	A randomly determined monster (roll for a level 6 monster)

20-21	4 lesser varumani (see new monsters), ascending from the lower levels to engage in 'sport hunting': SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 58, 57, 55, 52; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (mattock, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8 th -level fighters or 8 th -level magic users, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: mattocks; nets and prods; and three portions of varumani knock-out juice (see Arden Vul items)
22-23	A beastman patrol consisting of 6 troopers and a sergeant: 1. 6 beastman troopers (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 8, 7, 7, 6, 6, 5; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spears; short swords; short bows 2. 1 beastman sergeant (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90': HD 2+2; HP 15; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 or 2-5. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spear; war hammer
24	1-3: three Priscians, a war mage and 2 conversi (see new monsters) 4-5: an automaton of Kerbog Khan, (see new monsters; determine type randomly) 6-7: a party of NPC adventurers (select from NPC appendix) 8: a powerful monster (level 8)

Note: If explorers are coming from the west (4-163) and an encounter is indicated here, it is certain that the beings encountered will be warned of the PCs' approach due to the booming of the magic mouth. They will not be surprised, and will have an additional chance to surprise (1-3 of 6).

4-161: Long tunnel to Level 6 (6-67)

This corridor descends at least 350' over a quarter mile of distance before ending up at Level 6, the Arena (6-67).

4-162: Hall of the Set Animals, with Access to Sub-Level 8 (SL8-19)

This 15'-tall octagonal hall features a pretty vaulted ceiling and much faded, but still visible artwork. The south wall features a huge (10'x15') fresco of a Set animal's head (see new monsters). All the other walls depict entire Set animals in a variety of poses – standing, jumping, attacking, climbing walls, climbing trees, etc. The effect is busy, garish, and slightly chaotic. The modern Set cult is unaware of the secret door.

Secret Door (south): The door is normal to locate but difficult to open, as it requires locating a specific painted eye from one of the Set animals and depressing it. The door leads to a staircase that descends 200' to the long forgotten Set animal breeding caves of Sub-Level 8 (SL8-19).

4-163: Many Stairs and Loud Voice

Three important staircases meet at this landing. A permanent magic mouth has been placed on the east wall next to the eastern stairs; if movement occurs within 10' of the mouth, it emits five extremely loud booming bass tones (wordless), which echo up the northern and eastern stairs. The mouth resets after one hour, ready to echo again.

4-164: Hall of the Worthies

The door to this chamber is stuck in a partly open position. Within is an impressive hall some 30' tall and adorned with ancient veined-marble pavers and sheathing. Six hemispherical marble plinths (5' high) line the east and west walls, while six rectangular granite platforms (3' tall) occupy the center of the hall, one in front of each plinth. Several of the plinths are occupied, and a few of those still contain powerful magicks. A 3'-wide and 8'-deep basin runs the length of the room between the two rows of platforms. The basin is filled with a murky, sludgy liquid.

The south wall has been damaged by some tunneling creature, and a 3' hole has been broken through it about 15' off the ground. A massive mosaic spans the entire south wall. In the center of the mosaic, in 5'-tall Mithric script, is the phrase "Let the Worthy Illuminate the [gap]." The missing section of the inscription, which contains the word "Unworthy", may be found in the rubble below the hole. Below the inscription is an image of a robed human standing on a platform looking at a statue of a warrior. To the sides of the inscription, the mosaic features colossal images of Arden and Vul, the former leaning on her spear while gazing impassively at the inscription, and the latter, face obscured by hood, pointing to the inscription with a wand gripped in a bony hand. The figures of Arden and Vul are in the socialist-realist mode of the colossi on the outside of the cliff face.

In ancient days, each plinth was occupied by a statue of one of the Twenty Worthies of the Archontean Empire (see World of Archontos appendix); these legendary heroes were archetypes of behavior and profession, and might still be familiar to more bookish PCs. The chamber operated when a living person stood on a platform, faced the appropriate worthy, and declaimed "Let the Worthy Illuminate the Unworthy." Although a bit more dangerous in the present, the same principle is still in operation. If a visitor stands on a platform, faces the statue opposite the platform and utters the phrase, a magical effect will occur. If the phrase is mangled or not spoken within the span of a minute, then a negative effect will be produced from the basin running down the center of the room. In a few cases, the magic is malfunctioning - this should be evident from the description of the individual statue. The magic of each statue will only work once per person. The name of each hero is incised across its plinth.

A. Priscus Pulcher, the Arch-Sortian [these letters have been badly damaged but are still just legible]

Statue: completely missing, although a wreath of fragrant and fresh flowers rest on the plinth. The flowers are replaced every 2-8 days.

Magical Effect: none

Negative Effect: none

B. Licinia the Seer

Statue: a heavy-set woman in a toga with arms at her side. Her eyes are exaggeratedly large and empty.

Magical Effect: Licinia represents power over/in the future. She intones the following phrase in affectless Mithric: 'Our eyes see deeds that are yet to be; to unlock those sights ask thy questions three.' The postulant can then ask up to three questions about the future.

The GM should provide truthful answers, although he/she will have to be more speculative about contingent events. Still, visitors could glean much of interest about the Halls from Licinia.

Negative Effect: the liquid in the basin turns slightly gelatinous and rises as a tentacle from the basin. The postulant on the platform is struck by the liquid (no save) and is cursed such that he/she will be -2 to all die rolls for the next month. This curse will not be immediately evident, of course.

C. Thrygga the Mighty

Statue: a warrior clad in ancient imperial field plate, with two hands clutching a massive claymore. The statue's head is missing, and a fountain of colored sparks - detecting strongly of magic - spews continuously from its truncated neck. The sparks rain down in a 5' radius around the statue. Allowing the sparks to touch one will cause 3-12 HP damage and will produce a lasting, and brightly colored, scar, located on either the hand/arm (50%) or the face (50%).

Magical Effect: the positive effect is malfunctioning, and anyone who steps on the platform - regardless of what he/she utters - will activate the negative effect.

Negative Effect: the liquid in the basin boils and, after 3 rounds, a cloudkill spell is activated. It takes 2 rounds to fill the chamber.

D. Plotinus Quartus Claudino, Archon

Statue: a dignified man, dressed in a toga and wearing an olive wreath. A set of fasces is cradled in one arm, and the other arm is raised in greeting (three fingers, palm outward).

Magical Effect: Plotinus represents power in the present. He responds in the measured tones of a practiced orator: My writ runs over all that I now see; for knowledge of the same ask thy questions three. Plotinus can answer questions about current events, individuals, and locations; he does so elliptically, but at some length.

Negative Effect: the liquid in the basin roils and bubbles; after 1 round exact duplicates of all visitors clamber forth and confront the originals. These duplicates have the same statistics and equipment as the PCs, although if defeated they ooze into sludgy liquid. The duplicates cannot cast spells, but are able to mimic magic items.

E. Yeth, Who Sought to Bring Law to Chaos

Statue: a gnarled, bent man dressed in rags, with wild, unkempt hair. He carries no objects, and his arms are splayed in a wild manner. His eyes bug wildly.

Magical Effect: Yeth represents chaos and randomness. He wildly screeches a series of unrhymed nonsense: Blue rills of ethereal bone drip upward to the globular leaves of prophecy! Roll once on the following table, subtracting 2 from the result.

Negative Effect: the liquid in the basin roils for a round and then explodes in a wet, goeey mess over the room. Roll on the following table, adding 2 to the result

Modified d20	Effect
-1 to 0	One random attribute is permanently raised by 1
1-2	Vigor: PC gains 4-6 HP permanently
3-4	Infravision granted to PC; duration is either one month (75%) or permanent (25%)
5-6	Regenerate: for one day, PC regenerates 1 HP per round

7-8	Stone Sight: see 30' through stone for 1 day
9-10	Cure: 3-24 hp cured immediately; if at full hp, will act as temporary, one-time addition to normal HP
11-12	Sex change, permanent
13-14	Animal attraction: chance for wandering monsters increases for month
15-16	Bleeder: damage of 5 HP or more from a single blow causes bleeding at a rate of 1 HP/hr. Magical healing of 5 HP or more delays bleeding for 1-4 hours, but only heal or remove curse permanently reverses the effect
17-18	Frenzied: 25% chance to go berserk during combat (duration 1 month): +1-6 HP, +1 to hit, -2 to AC, and 25% chance to attack comrades once foes are defeated
19-20	Geas to find the death mask of Ptoh-Ristus (3-66)
21-22	One random attribute is permanently lowered by 1

F. Horatius Interfector, Sorcerer

Statue: A wiry man dressed in tunic, sandals, and a strange open-faced helmet. He carries a skull in one hand and a human femur in the other.

Magical Effect: Horatius represents power over the past. He snaps the following, in Mithric: Deeds of the dead are known to me; of those that were, ask your questions three. The PCs can then ask up to three questions about the past. Horatius answers questions directly, but economically.

Negative Effect: the liquid in the basin roils unsettlingly, before a number of undead crabs clamber from the basin to assault the intruder(s). There will always be two crabs per party member: SZ M; AL N; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 3; HP 20, 18; #AT 2; Dmg 2-8/2-8; MR 25%. Special defenses: half damage from piercing weapons; turned as spectres

4-165: Tunnel to Sub-Level 5 (SL5-1)

This long tunnel snakes through the earth and rock, descending about 75' in vertical distance to the lizardman caves (SL5-1). The tunnel is coated with mud, and is quite damp and slippery.

Pit Traps: The lizardmen have trapped the tunnel in three locations; each is a 20'-deep pit over which a screen of reed and mud has been placed. The pits have sharpened wooden stakes in them, on which has been smeared filth; falling into the pit causes 2-12 HP damage, plus another 1-6 from the stakes, and imposes a 33% chance to contract a disease.

4-166: Wet Cavern

This cavern is damp and dripping. Two deep pools of fresh water occupy either side of the cave. Clear signs of bare feet lead to the north; a ranger will recognize them easily as lizardman tracks. A spear has been lodged into the rock next to the opening of the north passage; on the spear rests a human skull into which have been jammed a number of primitive darts.

The southern passage is narrow, rocky, and twisty, and debouches 30' above the floor of 4-181. Obvious and fresh bloodstains dot this passageway, a relic of the actions of Gillen and his gang (4-180) in dragging corpses to 4-181.

4-167: Blue Pillar

This ancient chamber used to feature a dome sheathed in light-blue tile and supported by a 25'-tall hexagonal pillar (5' per side) of blue marble. The pillar still stands, although 75% of the tiles have fallen, causing the floor to be covered in blue dust and debris. Within the debris a clear path may be seen leading east to 4-163.

The pillar contains powerful teleportation magic, some of which is still operative. On each side of the pillar, at face-height, is carved a bas-relief of a face. Each face is different, and certain of the faces can be manipulated. The following are described in clockwise order starting from the northeast-facing side.

First Face (northeast): A very handsome, youngish man with lively eyes, trim beard, and empty sockets where the eyes should be. The face has been defaced: the nose is broken, features are worn, and ancient graffiti reads (in Mithric) "Betrayer!" The face is an accurate portrait carving of Priscus Pulcher. Although it does not depict the usual image of the Philosopher, this face acts as a Sortian face (see new magic items) and can be activated through the use of Sortian eyes (see new magic items).

Only a few combinations of eyes are unique to an individual face; the rest are standard (and are detailed in the new magic items appendix).

Gold-Gold: Teleportation

All within 5' are teleported to area 6-48

Gold-Sapphire: A permanent magic mouth speaks in Mithric from the face: They are sure to be watching the pillar, now that Priscus has been executed and the League dispersed. So much for the way of negotiation. Let Livia cajole. I, Macrinus, tell my fellow Sortians that we must arm ourselves! The Order and the Temples respect only strength. Perhaps a taste of their own medicine will make them more amenable to our demands.

GM Note: The message makes reference to the fate of Priscus Pulcher (for which see the World of Archontos appendix). Livia the Lictor and Macrinus Furiosus were other Sortian leaders who differed in approach, with Livia favoring discussion and Macrinus warfare; for them, see SL11-13 and SL11-15. The message also refers to the Order of Thoth and the temples (of Thoth, Set and Horus), all of whom opposed the Sortians; see the War of the Sortians and Theosophs in the World of Archontos appendix.

Second Face (east): A dignified middle-aged woman with aquiline nose, pursed lips and narrowed eyes. The pupils are sized to hold ancient gold solidi (1" diameter, ¼" thick). Should two be inserted, the coins will disappear and all within a 20'-long cone in front of the face will be teleported to the antechamber to the audience chamber of the Governor's Palace in the ruins of Arden Vul. Sadly, that room collapsed long ago, so users will now be teleported into thin air some 10' above the rubble pile at AV-29. The fall causes 1-6 HP damage. The only positive side effect of this transportation is that it should provide surprised travelers with a nice aerial view of the environs of the palace, including the stump of the Obelisk of the Moon (AV-28).

Third Face (southeast): A monstrous face, with sharp cheekbones, pronounced supra-orbital bones, a thin, elongated nose, and unnatural eyes [a varumani]. The mouth is opened in a flattened oval, just big enough to hold one of the troll thegn's passports (see Arden Vul items). If one of the passports is placed in the mouth, all standing in a 20'-long cone before this face of the pillar will be teleported to area 7-1 in the troll thegn's domain.

Fourth Face (southwest): Formerly a Set-animal, this face has been almost completely obliterated. Only the characteristic square ears of the animal remain.

Fifth Face (west): A long, narrow face of a man with a pronounced cranium, sharp chin, and crooked nose [a caricature of a priest of Thoth]. At the man's throat is an ibis medallion. The pupils of the face are small (½" in diameter), and are sized for ancient silver pennies; should two be inserted, all those in standing in a 20'-long cone before the priest's face will be teleported to the Great Hall of Thoth (3-123).

Sixth Face (northwest): A wizened, goblinoid face with pointed ears and pointed teeth in its grinning mouth [a goblin]. The nose is absent, leaving a 3"-diameter hole at least 1' deep. Placing a gem of any value into this hole will teleport all those in a cone before the goblin face to the old workers' quarters, now the site of the goblin king's court (SL4-53).

Note: The chamber of the blue pillar is also the destination for one of the Sortian faces at 6-48. Those teleported here find themselves standing at the south side of the room, facing the blue pillar.

4-168: Stairs Down to Sub-Level 13 (SL13-9)

These stairs lead down at least 700' and through several changes of direction to the checkpoint at SL13-9.

4-169: Blocked Corridor

The corridor here is completely blocked by a cave-in.

4-170: Entrance to the Precincts of Set

This small room marks the southern boundary of the Set cult's power, where pilgrims can rest before making the long trek up the stairs to the red bridge (4-120A) and the Forum (4-2). Two 10'-tall portable 'statues' of Set stand on either side of the stairway; these are made of wood and plaster and are painted brightly. Due to the moisture in these lower caves, however, the statues are moldy and the paint is beginning to run. One statue takes the form of a man with bone-white face and bright red hair; the other has a human body but Set-Animal head. The chamber is lit by two continual light spells placed on the heads of the statues.

Note: If the submerged door at AV-39 has been recently opened (within a few days or so), and the southern portion of the swamp consequently drained, then both statues will be gone and the chamber will show signs of a massive flow of water. The Set cult will replace the statues within 1-4 months.

4-170A: Supplies

The Set cult stores some supplies in this ruined corridor segment, albeit behind a wall of force. The wall shimmers invitingly but is impervious to most forms of assault. Only touching it with any Set was stick (see new magic items) will lower it, and then only for a turn. Inside may be found substantial digging supplies (picks, hammers, shovels, sacks), rope and pulleys for EX-15; a spare basket for EX-15, and three crates of weapons marked with the imperial seal.

4-171: Ancient Hall

The stairs and corridor from 4-177 lead out of the water and into a large, brightly lit, and dry chamber. Like others of the ancient halls in this area, its ceiling rises 35' above the floor. The southern entrance lies 25' up the south wall, while the door on the north wall is at floor level. A platform at the same level of the south entrance stands 15' inside the room. From this first platform a narrow stair leads down to a second platform, from which, in turn, two more staircases reach the floor. Both platforms are carved from a single block of stone.

The walls are impressively decorated, with bas-reliefs depicting the first and third mysteries of Set on the western and eastern walls (see 4-23 and 4-111), and with four 25' statues of Set in Set animal form flanking both entrances. It would be easy, indeed, for a thief to clamber down one of the statues flanking the south entrance. The statues each feature fist-sized blue quartz eyes (250 gp each); surprisingly, there are no negative effects to removing these eyes.

From the south entrance shapes can be seen moving around on the floor of the chamber. These are shadows under the control of the spectre that lurks on the second, lower platform, hoping to surprise anyone who leaps from the entrance corridor to the higher platform.

Numerous corpses dot the floor of the chamber, and some of the equipment of these dead heroes is salvageable. One of the corpses carries a scroll on which is jotted the following adventuring notes (which are approximately 200 years old): The lost tagma is dominated by a witch they call Deino; she is performing foul sorcery on them such that they no longer appear as legionaries. They have occupied the old administrative center of the priesthood of Thoth. Whipped on by her spells, they took Gaius and Theodoric. We fled to the great cavern, where Ptarmis's great work has reverted to savagery. There we lost our minions to the fungal people. We finally fled to the west, and down a set of long stairs. We spent [hole in ms.] at the thegn's court, where we rested before attempting to find the old exit of Set.

A ring of 2"-tall paving stones arranged in a 6'-diameter ring is set into the floor directly beneath the exit to the south. Inset into the floor next to the ring is a rectangle 48" long by 8" tall; the rectangle is divided into six interior compartments, each 8" square. Together these elements form a Thothian teleportation ring (see new magic items). To activate the ring, one must place six colored glass activation squares into the inset according to a sequence that matches the 'address' of the ring to which one wishes to travel. Once the squares are placed, a brief shimmer of energy is visible over the ring. At this point the user has 1 round to collect the squares and enter the ring, after which anyone in the ring is teleported without error to address indicated by that sequence of squares. If the glass activation squares are not collected and/or if the travelers do not possess a second set of them, they are likely to be stranded in the location to which they have just teleported. The address of this ring is as follows: BK-RE-BL-GR-YE-WH (see new magic items for explanation). None of the glass activation squares necessary to operate the circle are present.

The door to the north once led to an important suite of rooms, but the corridor has collapsed.

GM Note: The note refers to the beastmen of Level 3 (areas 3-123 to 3-162) and to Deino (3-158). It is important evidence for the transformation of the lost tagma into beastmen. It also makes reference to the great cavern (3-163 and 3-172) and the fungal foresters that inhabit it, and finally to the troll thegn's court (7-75).

Inhabitants:

1. 6 shadows: SZ M; AL CE; AC 7; MV 120; HD 3+3; HP 24, 21, 20, 20, 19, 17; #AT 1; Dmg 2-5. Special attacks: STR drain. Special defenses: 90% undetectable; +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and cold.
2. 1 spectre: SZ M; AL LE; AC 2; MV 150', 300' flying (Class B); HD 7+3; HP 52; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8. Special attacks: energy drain. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to sleep, charm, hold, cold, poison, and paralysis.

Treasure:

8 huge blue quartz gems (250 gp each); a token of Arden (see Arden Vul items); chain mail +2; hammer +2; an enchanted spear named Treefeller (see new magic items); a scroll with garrulous mouth (see new spells), stinking cloud, gust of wind and cloudkill; another scroll with lightning bolt and fire shield; 34 gp; 56 sp.

4-172: Cave of Lost Colossi

A strong breeze blows from north to south through this flattened, sandy cave. Moisture drips from the walls, but the Set cult keeps the area sanded, so the floor is only damp. Booted tracks lead to the north. Three huge stone heads (10' tall) rest at crazy angles in the sand. All three heads are smooth granite with stylized generic features. The pupils of each are missing. The moisture in the cave has caused numerous runnels of water to stain their faces.

The tunnel to the north is broad and even, but that leading east is rocky and difficult.

Note: If the submerged door at AV-39 has been recently opened, and the southern portion of the swamp drained, then all the sand will be gone and the three colossal heads will be piled up against the southern entrance. Passage between 4-172 and 4-178 will be impossible for 4-7 days, until the Set cult levers the heads out of the way. Signs of the passage of a large volume of muddy water will be evident.

4-173: Caves

This area is uneven and dangerous due to the moisture that covers all the rock surfaces. It is also quite beautiful, as numerous flowstone formations and stalactites dot the area. Halfway up the northern protrusion is the encrusted body of a priest of Set, who died here after his leg was fractured. Near the body are a broken deacon's was stick (see new magic items), an ebony wand of trap and secret door detection, and a silk purse containing two huge rhodochrosite gems shaped like eyes (for one of the colossi in 4-172). It would be easy to miss the skeleton unless one clambered all the way to the end of the protrusion.

The southern tunnel is quite narrow and appears as if it will peter out; it continues, however, to the fissure (4-174).

Treasure:

A wand of trap and secret door detection (16 charges), two rhodochrosite eyes (2,500 gp each).

4-174: Fissure

This fissure is not particularly wide, but it is quite deep, as it extends 75' below and 50' above the level of the two entrances. The walls are craggy and slick with moisture. From one entrance tunnel it is impossible to see the other without actually entering the fissure. A pod of chasm cephalopods lives here; they are very hungry due to lack of traffic and move swiftly to confront intruders.

Inhabitants:

1. 6 small chasm cephalopods (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 5; MV 60' flying (Class A); HD 2; HP 14, 13, 13, 12, 11, 8; #AT 5 (4 tentacles and a beak); Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-3/1-3/1-4; MR 25%. Special attacks: surprise on 1-4.

4-175: Wet Cave

This cave is damp, with numerous stalactites of all sizes. It is otherwise unremarkable.

4-175A: Tunnel Down to Sub-Level 12 (SL12-13)

The northern tip of area 4-175 turns into a 4'-diameter, natural tunnel that slopes upward over a very long distance, and through multiple curves, until it reaches Sub-Level 12 (SL12-13).

4-176: Pitiful Scene

Two 2'-tall, doll-like figures huddle around a small flame in the center of this long cave. One is motionless while the other sobs and weeps over its companion. Small stalactites line the ceiling, and the sound of dripping water is heard throughout the cavern.

The dolls are two of Kerbog Khan's automatons. A piercer crushed one fatally, while the other, which has developed a surprising degree of sentience, is mourning its companion. They huddle around a magical light emitter 3" tall, which sheds light in a variable circle up to 15' in diameter. The 'living' automaton is named Corbel, and is made of wood, metal strips, and bone. It is dressed in the simple clothes of a female peasant. Corbel is distraught that her friend, Cobban, has been rendered 'inoperative.' She is certain that Kerbog Khan will not accord him a burial, and will be willing to render aid to any who bury Cobban with dignity. Should explorers comply, Corbel will accompany them for two weeks, either walking at a speed of 15' or riding in a backpack, chattering the entire time. She has a sharp tongue and offers a running critique of her carrier's actions. She can also relate accurate information concerning her route from Kerbog Khan's workshops to Level 4 (they fled from SL12-13 to 4-175A, and then to this location). She will place the magical light into her chest cavity for transport.

Kerbog Khan may attempt to seize control of Corbel's brain and eyes: there is a 10% cumulative chance per encounter of this happening. If he does take active control of her, her eyes will start to glow a bright yellow and a deep, masculine voice will echo from her mouth. Kerbog Khan first negotiates and then, if necessary, casts spells through her. He interprets 'necessary' as any circumstance in which Corbel's new friends attempt to prevent Corbel from doing his direct bidding. By immobilizing her limbs and physically holding her mouth closed, it is possible to prevent Kerbog Khan from interacting by speech or spell with the party. Kerbog Khan's ability to control his automatons declines with distance, so Corbel would be relatively safe if taken outside of Arden Vul. To fully release her from Kerbog Khan's control would take a sage and several spells.

Inhabitants:

1. 8 piercers: SZ M(x4) and S(x4); AL N; AC 3; MV 10'; HD 3(x4) and 2(x4); HP 22, 19, 18, 15, 14, 13, 11, 9; #AT 1; Dmg 3-18 (x4) and 2-12(x4). Special attacks: 95% to surprise prey.

2. Corbel, one of the children automatons of Kerbog Khan (see new monsters): SZ S; AL NG; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 13; #AT 1; Dmg 1-2; MR 20%. Special defenses: immune to cold.

Treasure:

Cobban's 'body' is a masterpiece of automaton construction and could be sold to a wizard or magical collegium for a substantial sum. Such mercenary treatment would completely alienate Corbel.

4-177: Flooded Hall

This ancient hall is flooded to a depth of 10' (the ceiling is another 10' above the water). The western wall collapsed centuries ago, leaving an impressive rock fall looming out of the water. The southwestern tunnel enters the hall 10' above the water line.

The waters in the hall are the home to 6 water ghouls. These foul aquatic creatures attack any who try to swim across (or dive into) the chamber.

Inhabitants:

1. 6 lacedons: SZ M; AL CE; AC 6; MV 90', 90' swimming; HD 2; HP 15, 15, 13, 12, 10, 10; #AT 3; Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-6. Special attacks: paralysis. Special defenses: immune to sleep and charm.

Treasure:

On the floor of the hall under 10' of water is a heavy iron chest (weight 75 lb). It is trapped with explosive runes. Inside is some impressive treasure: a rod of rulership (15 charges), Ritha Ferik, an enchanted battle axe (see new magic items), two ancient maps, and two 10-lb platinum bars (2,500 gp each). The maps will disintegrate if the chest is opened underwater.

4-178: Rocky Cave

A steady breeze blows from the northwest to the south through this uneven, 20'-tall cave. Two large standing boulders, each 10' tall, bisect the cave. The southernmost boulder has a flat spot on top (10' long by 4' wide); an abandoned cache of dungeoneering equipment may be found in this spot. Sharp-eyed PCs (especially rangers) may (2 in 6) notice muddy bare footprints leading to the northeast (lizardmen) and may also (1 in 6) notice bloodstains and the signs of struggle (the bloodstains also lead off towards 4-179).

Note: If the submerged door at AV-39 has been recently opened, and the southern portion of the swamp drained, then the boulders will be piled up against the southern entrance and the dungeoneering equipment will not be present. Passage to the south will be possible, but slow. After 4-7 days, the Set Cult will have pushed the boulders back into the center of the chamber. Signs of the passage of a large volume of muddy water will be evident.

Treasure:

Dungeoneering equipment: 10 spikes, two 11' poles, two 50' coils of rope, a bullseye lantern, four flasks of lantern oil, a packet of chalk, a dozen marbles in a leather pouch, and a scroll of cure serious wounds.

4-179: Ruined Hall

This is another tall (30') and damp cave, complete with a large boulder in its middle. It is a product of water movement over the past millennium, which led to a collapse of what had been a major hall in antiquity. Remnants of the hall and its connecting corridors can be glimpsed throughout the room at various points. First, to the west, albeit 20' up the cave wall, is an entrance to a corridor fragment; the fragment is uninteresting save for a colony of giant rats which has formed its nest there. The rats only attack if their nest is threatened. Second, to the east and located 15' up the cave wall, is another corridor fragment leading to a forgotten section of the main stair (4-180). Third are the three tips of ancient columns that project 2-4' out of the rocky debris of the cavern floor.

Perceptive PCs may (1 in 6) detect blood trails leading both to 4-180 and 4-166.

Gillen and his gang (see 4-180) are content to observe PCs who pass through this cavern; should the PCs investigate the entrance to 4-180, they will take aggressive action.

Inhabitants:

1. 12 giant rats: SZ S; AL N(E); AC 7; MV 120'; HD 1-4 HP; HP 4(x3), 3(x3), 2(x3), 1(x3); #At 1; Dmg 1-3. Special attacks: 5% chance of disease.

4-180: Stair Remnant

A party of evil adventurers led by Gillen the magic user has discovered this inaccessible, and dry, segment of the old main stairway. They are using it as a base from which to ambush visitors to the Forum (4-2); they keep the valuables and sell any captives to the Guild of Service (see 4-11, 4-12 and 4-13). Just two days ago the robbers managed to ambush a prosperous merchant and his guard in room 4-178, and they are waiting for the right moment to sell the survivors. These four prisoners are kept bound in the southern bit of stairs.

The adventurers are cautious and careful. They do not relish combat with equals, and are happy to negotiate if pressed. They prefer to threaten from the (relative) security of their fastness (since PCs won't know that it is a dead end). Tressa has also rigged a trap at the intersection of 4-179 and 4-180.

Should Gillen and his friends be defeated, the fragment of the old staircase can be inspected. It bears an unusual but lovely frieze depicting the second mystery of Set (4-48), complete with images of a priest, a circular room, the sandstorm, scorpions, and an audience. If removed from the wall somehow, the frieze might be sold for up to 1,000 gp.

Gillen is aware that the Set cult will begin looking for the culprit(s) after a few more ambushes. The gang will have moved on within two weeks of the moment when the PCs first encounter them; the GM should relocate them elsewhere in the upper Halls (perhaps somewhere in Level 3 or Sub-Level 3).

Cinna Minux, the vampire (7-122), has charmed Gillen, Tressa, and Quade; he occasionally pumps them for information about Level 4.

Trap (tripwire): Tressa set a tripwire across the opening to 4-179. It drops a large rock on the head of the first person to grope around in the entrance to 4-180. If tripped, the rock inflicts 1-6 HP damage and potentially knocks the person to the floor of 4-179 (for another 4-9 HP damage).

Inhabitants:

1. Gillen, 5th-level male Archontean magic user: SZ M; AL CE; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 5; HP 18; #AT 1; Dmg staff (1-6). Abilities: STR 9, INT 16, WIS 14, DEX 16, CON 15, CHA 14. Possessions: staff; wand of magic missiles (28 charges); potion of extra healing; potion of levitation; a scroll with Frigg's flatulence and Frigg's caustic kisses (see new spells for both). Spells memorized: charm person, magic missile, shield, sleep; invisibility, web; fireball.

2. Gordy, 3rd-level male Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL LN; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 3; HP 30; #AT 1; Dmg 3-10 (battle axe +1). Abilities: STR 17, INT 8, WIS 10, DEX 15, CON 17, CHA 8. Possessions: ring mail and shield; battle axe +1; potion of diminution; a rope of climbing.
3. Tressa, 5th-level female Thorcin thief: SZ M; AL CE; AC 3; MV 120'; HD 5; HP 28; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (short sword) or 3-8 (short bow and arrows +2). Abilities: STR 15, INT 13, WIS 10, DEX 18, CON 15, CHA 14. Thief skills: PP 60%, OL 57%, F/RT 45%, MS 50%, HS 41%, HN 20%, CW 90%, RL 25%. Possessions: leather armor +1; short sword; short bow, with 10 arrows +2; potion of invisibility.
4. Icheltor, 4th-level male Thorcin cleric of Ghareela: SZ M; AL CE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 4; HP 24; #AT 1; Dmg 3-9 (mace). Abilities: STR 16, INT 10, WIS 16, DEX 11, CON 11, CHA 13. Possessions: chain mail and shield; mace smeared with contact poison; potion of growth; potion of diminution. Spells: bless, cause light wounds, cure light wounds (x2), protection from good; chant, hold person (x2), silence 15' radius.
5. Quade, 2nd-level female Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL N; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 19; #AT 1; Dmg 2-9 (long sword), 1-4 (light crossbow). Abilities: STR 16, INT 9, WIS 10, DEX 13, CON 18, CHA 10. Possessions: chain mail and shield; long sword; light crossbow with 20 bolts; 2 potions of healing.
6. Mogret of Narsileon, male Thorcin merchant (prisoner): SZ M; AL LE; AC 10; MV 120'; HD 1-1; HP 4; #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Mogret is a merchant but also a spy for the imperial Drome (see World of Archontos appendix). If released and escorted either to Newmarket or to the Forum (4-2), he will provide a written testimonial entitling the holder to a reward of 500 gp from the Prosperity Factor in Narsileon.
7. Ulf the Dim, 2nd-level male Wisikin fighter (prisoner): SZ M; AL NE; AC 10; MV 120'; HD 2; HP 17; #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 17, INT 7, WIS 8, DEX 14, CON 16, CHA 13. Ulf was one of Mogret's bodyguards, and is possible henchman fodder. He is stupid and mean.
8. Stylesia, 3rd-level female Archontean fighter (prisoner): SZ M; AL LN; AC 9; MV 120'; HD 3; HP 27; #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 16, INT 7, WIS 10, DEX 15, CON 16, CHA 9. She was also one of Mogret's bodyguard. She is smart and loyal, but afraid of insects.
9. Bestor, male Archontean messenger (prisoner): SZ M; AL NG; AC 10; MV 120'; HD 1-1; HP 5; #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Bestor is a messenger from Lord Burdock (see World of Archontos appendix). He appears weaselly and weak, and the Guild of Service declined to purchase him from Gillen. The robbers are stymied, and trying to decide what to do with him. Lord Burdock might redeem him for 200 gp. Bestor is tougher and more loyal than he looks, for he has successfully concealed the message in his anus. Ironically, the message contains a secret offer of alliance between Lord Burdock and High Priestess Stephania. That information would be politically damaging to Lord Burdock; it could be sold to him for 5,000 gp or to Keko the Lame in Narsileon for 7,500 gp (see World of Archontos appendix). Bestor did not recognize the Guild of Service, which is why he did not explain his mission to them; he was told to speak only to the high priestess.

Treasure:

In addition to their magic items, the gang has accumulated 849 cp, 707 sp, and 846 gp; one large carpet (175 gp, but heavy); two casks of fine brandy (60 gp each); and three lion pelts (75 gp each). One of the pelts is actually a lion cloak (see new magic items). Mogret's trade goods - 6 heavy packs loaded with flour (x3), dried beans (x1), yeast (x1), and root vegetables (x1) could be sold in the Forum of Set for 100 gp/pack. Gillen's spell book is also located here. It includes these spells: burning hands, charm person, dancing lights, detect magic, Frigg's flatulence (see new spells), friends, magic missile, read magic, sleep, spider climb; darkness 15' radius, detect invisibility, false trap, Frigg's caustic kisses (see new spells), mirror image, stinking cloud, web; fireball, hold person, protection from normal missiles, water breathing.

4-181: Stalactite and Stalagmite Cave

This large chamber is formed by the fusion of one of the ancient halls with some new cave formations. Finished sections can be glimpsed to the west, north and south, where smoothed walls and floors betray an older purpose to the room. The northernmost wall, in fact, still boasts a section of living mosaic (see new magic items) depicting the Red Bridge of Set (4-120A); there is a 25% chance that some sort of activity is taking place there.

The central portion of the chamber, and all three means of entrance, are the product of subsequent geological activity, and are thus natural caverns. As a result the floor is rocky and covered with debris. The entire area is damp, and, along with the light-purple fungus common to this area (for effects see 4-184), dozens of stalactites and stalagmites have formed in the central area and to the north. While most of these are slender, there are four pillar-sized stalagmites amid the smaller ones. The fearsome denizen of this chamber, an ancient roper, lurks among these large stalagmites, feeding on beetles and other vermin, but hoping for better prey.

The bodies of three dead mercenaries (part of Mogret's guard - see 4-180) have been dumped from the passage to the north; the roper has only partially devoured them.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 roper: SZ L; AL CE; AC 0; MV 30'; HD 11; HP 80; #AT 1; Dmg 5-20; MR 80%. Special attacks: six poisonous strands (20'-50' range; reduce STR by 50% in 1-3 rds). Special defenses: immune to lightning; take half damage from cold.

Treasure:

In the roper's gut: 7 ancient octagonal platinum coins (see Arden Vul items); 8 gems worth 10-1,000 gp each; and a ring of spider climbing (see new magic items).

4-182: Pool

This wide spot in the tunnel network contains a broad pool of fresh water; it is used by most of the local monstrous denizens. The entire area is covered with the crackly light-purple fungus (for effects see 4-184).

4-183: Stair Fragment

Amid the light-purple fungus (for effects see 4-184) that is ubiquitous to these regions stands this fragment of the ancient stairway to Set. A recent minor cave-in has revealed the corpse of one of the elite guardsmen of Arden Vul, dead over 1,400 years. The guardsman wears an incredible treasure, a suit of imperial field plate +2 (see Arden Vul items). It is usable by anyone 5'6" to 5'10" tall, although it will need some repairs (100 gp) by a talented armorer. The one downside to this item is that it will inevitably draw unwanted attention from the envious and suspicious; wearing the armor near imperial officials will lead to arrest, while adventurers and chaotic creatures will attempt to relieve the wearer of it.

Treasure:

Imperial field plate +2 (see Arden Vul items).

4-184: Cave with Spiders

This wide spot in the tunnels is slightly drier than the others and is thus the lair of a pack of huge spiders. Their webs and nest are found in the northwestern extension; amid the webs are the husks of three lizardmen, two Set guardsmen, and a human magic user.

The walls, floors, and ceilings of this cave and the surrounding tunnels are covered with a light purple fungus that crackles slightly when trodden upon. The nature of the fungus makes movement slippery (roll 3d6 under DEX or suffer -1 penalty to attack rolls) and stealth almost impossible.

Inhabitants:

1. 8 huge spiders: SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 180'; HD 2+2; HP 18, 15, 15, 14, 13, 12, 11, 10; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: surprise 1-5; poison (+1 to saves); can leap up to 30'.

Treasure:

A lizardman sacred idol (carved of stone; see SL5-15); 18 sp; 23 gp; a suit of Set armor (see Arden Vul items); a short sword; and a fragment of a letter which reads "Although he loved nothing more than the mundane work of stone carving and preparing the dead, the greatness of Theskelon could not be denied ... after his demise, his followers prepared a resting spot hidden from view but close at hand." A second hand has added the following: "The tomb lies to the east of the southern necropolis." GM Note: This letter refers to the tomb of the famous Theskelon (4-142).

The dead magic user's spell book dangles in the webs and includes the following spells: alarm, comprehend languages, dancing lights, enlarge, feather fall, identify, jump, magic aura, protection from evil, read magic, sleep, wizard mark; audible glamer, deepockets, detect evil, forget, invisibility, irritation, levitate, rope trick, wizard lock, zephyr, and locate place (see new spells).

4-185: Stair Fragment

This area of corridor leads to a mostly-collapsed section of the old main stair. The stair is not noteworthy save for the fact that it is inaccessible to the golems in 4-187. It is, however, accessible to the beetles of the area.

4-186: Fungus and Beetle Cave

This large, flat cave is covered by the light-purple fungus that is ubiquitous in this section of the Halls (for effects see 4-184). The fungus, which is mundane, has drawn a sizable colony of boring beetles to the area. A total of 15 beetles comprise the colony, although at any moment only 8 are present here. Casualties taken as random encounters should be subtracted from this number; the beetles will replace 50% of their number within two weeks. The beetles are ravenous and are accustomed to swarming their prey; as a result they incur no penalties to attacks as they crawl over each other to reach their targets.

In the northern section of the cave a sinkhole has opened a route to one of the lost entrance halls. The hole descends a mere 5' before opening into the ceiling of 4-187 (although the floor of the latter is another 30' below the ceiling). Over time this hole will slowly increase in size.

Inhabitants:

1. 8 giant boring beetles: SZ L; AL N; AC 3; MV 60'; HD 5; HP 38, 36, 33, 31, 30, 25, 23, 19; #AT 1; Dmg 5-20.

4-187: Ancient, Partly-Ruined Hall

Formerly one of the sumptuous meeting halls found near the entrance to the complex of Set, this chamber has been newly uncovered thanks to the sinkhole in 4-186. The northern, eastern, and western walls are still in good condition, but the southeast corner has collapsed. A marble dais is located to the west, and on it sits a solid gold audience chair. Nearby are the scattered bones of a long-dead human. Behind the dais stand two gruesome and rotting flesh golems. The entire area has succumbed to the light-purple fungus (for effects see 4-184). Four boring beetles are feeding on the fungus.

The golems were the creations of the magic user whose bones lie in this chamber. He had ordered them to prevent all from seizing the chair which he discovered shortly after the collapse of order in Arden Vul; sadly, he worded his orders poorly, and when he sat down to admire his treasure, the golems went berserk and ripped him apart. They are still following his final instructions, and will thus attack any who approach the dais. The boring beetles attack if, as is likely, the fungus is damaged.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 flesh golems: SZ L; AL N; AC 9; MV 80'; HD 9, HP 40, 40; #AT 2; Dmg 2-16/2-16. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to most spells, although fire and cold spells slow them.
2. 4 giant boring beetles: SZ L; AL N; AC 3; MV 60'; HD 5; HP 36, 33, 30, 25; #AT 1; Dmg 5-20.

Treasure:

The solid gold audience chair is worth 15,000 gp, but weighs 300 lb. The dead wizard bears three 250 gp gems; a robe of useful items; a headband of intellect; a handy haversack containing 450 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items); and a Theodorus' chair of great ease (see new magic items). His spell book has been badly damaged, but the following spells are still legible: armor, shield, ventriloquism; pummeling fists of Arak-Zhor (see new spells), scare, wizard lock; harnessing the chaos (see new spells); and Pol's recall (see new spells).

4-188: Battle Cave

This damp cave bears witness to a past struggle: the husks of three huge spiders and one giant boring beetle lie here in various stages of decomposition. The creatures - and others - were drawn here by the light purple fungus that coats these caves (for effects see 4-184).

4-189: Warning Cave

A fairly strong breeze blows from the north through this large cave towards 4-190. Two mostly-skeletonized adventurers have been spiked to the north wall in a spread-eagled position. They wear rags of clothing, but carry no equipment. They have been partly animated by the priests of Set such that motion will cause the rotting skulls to chatter out a warning, in Archontean and in unison: "Lord Set watches his districts with care. Depart, ye unbelievers, lest he smite you in his wrath!" The small knob-like protrusion on the south wall holds a natural rock basin filled with clear water. The tunnel to the east is difficult to spot, as its opening is quite narrow (4' wide).

Note: If the submerged door at AV-39 has been recently opened, and the southern portion of the swamp drained, then the animated skeletons will be gone. Signs of the passage of a large volume of muddy water will be evident.

4-190: Exit to Cliff Face, aka EX-15

The cave system exits to the cliff face at this location. The Set cult has a pulley system attached to an iron bar which can swing out into the air; to this iron bar is attached a set of thick ropes and a wicker basket big enough for two humans with gear. When not in use, the basket, ropes, pulleys, and some extra spikes, hammers, and ropes, are stored in a stone chest just inside the entrance. A signal lantern with crimson panes is also found here. The cave exits the cliff face at a point 650' above the valley floor, or 850' below the level of the plateau.

Note: If the submerged door at AV-39 has been recently opened, and the southern portion of the swamp drained, then all of the equipment, the pulley, and the basket will be gone. Until the Set cult has repaired the damage (after 3-7 days), there will be no easy egress from this cave to the valley floor. Signs of the passage of a large volume of muddy water will be evident.

Inhabitants:

In addition to the likelihood that the mountain lion (see EX-14) takes an interest in those investigating this area, the GM should roll on the following table to determine if any sentient creatures are currently using the cave entrance:

Day D10	Night D10	Encounter
1-5	1-2	No one
6	3-6	6-9 Set cultists (see new monsters): SZ M; AL LE; AC 9; MV 90'; HD 1; HP 7, 6, 6, 5, 5, 4, 4, 3, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4 (dagger) or 2-7 (flail) or 1-6 (staff). Special attacks: fanaticism. Possessions: padded armor; daggers; flails or staves
7	7-9	6-8 lizardmen: SZ M; AL N; AC 4; MV 60', 120' swimming; HD 2+1; HP 16, 15, 13, 13, 12, 11, 11, 10; #AT 1 or 3; Dmg 1-6 (club) and 1-6 (javelin), or 1-2/1-2/1-8. Possessions: clubs; javelins; shields

LEVEL 5: THE OBSIDIAN GATES AND THE MIDNIGHT ROAD

As the home of the legendary Obsidian Gates and Hall of Forty Pillars (5-6), Level 5 is only sought by the boldest and best-informed adventurers. Because the former rudishva areas known as the Midnight Road are warded against many spells (see below), few have succeeded in penetrating the famously-impenetrable gates. Should a hardy group pass the Obsidian Gates, they will find a veritable plethora of riches in the form of exotic, powerful, and valuable rudishva devices, treasures, and information. Elsewhere, the level contains numerous hidden tombs, mostly of Archontean functionaries (e.g., 5-16, 5-57 to 5-62), as well as the lair of the vivisectionist, Psalor Ki (5-66 to 5-74), and a forgotten secret temple of Thoth (5-77 to 5-83), now corrupted by a terrible demon. The Great Chasm (5-34) allows travel up to level 3 and down to level 6 and is crossed here by the iconic Sundered Span (5-35).

GENERAL CONSTRUCTION NOTES

Heqeti areas: 5-6, 5-18, 5-25, 5-41, 5-42, 5-46 to 5-49, 5-52, 5-104

Rudishva areas: 5-30, 5-31, 5-53, 5-54, 5-84, 5-86 to 5-98, 5-105 to 5-138

Archontean areas: 5-1, 5-6 to 5-17, 5-19 to 5-24, 5-26 to 5-29, 5-35 to 5-40, 5-56 to 5-64, 5-66 to 5-81, 5-83, 5-85

ICONIC LOCATIONS

The Obsidian Gates (5-6D)

The Hall of Forty Pillars (5-6)

The Great Chasm (5-34)

The Sundered Span (or Imperial Span) (5-35)

IMPORTANT NPCs

Gog, the lesser varumani (5-2)

Killik, goblin 'big boss of the wet caves' (5-46)

Psalor-Ki, the vivisectionist (5-74)

Oziman, the 'avatar of Thoth' (actually a type III demon) (5-83)

Priddy of Archontos, Archontean sorcerer (5-128)

SIGNIFICANT REGIONS OF LEVEL 5

1. The Obsidian Gates and Environs (5-1 to 5-31, 5-41, 5-42)

This region holds two of the most iconic regions found in Arden Vul, sites that hardy explorers speak of in hushed whispers. The Hall of Forty Pillars (5-6), with its strong aura of magical despair, leads directly to the vaunted Obsidian Gates, 20'-tall valves of highly enchanted solid obsidian (5-6D). The lure of fabulous treasure lying behind the nearly-impenetrable gates has gripped adventurers since the glory days of the ancient Archontean Empire, although few indeed have succeeded in passing them.

Surrounding the Hall are numerous lesser chambers containing important historical evidence, forgotten tombs, and deadly threats. The cave of Gog (5-2) is less well-known, but another regular stop for adventurers hoping to persuade Gog to aid them in their exploration.

Factions: No faction controls this area, as all are intimidated by the Obsidian Gates and the Forty Pillars.

Construction: The core of the area (5-6, 5-18, 5-25, 5-41, 5-42) was built by the heqeti, and feature usual heqeti stonework (pebbled, oily), with extra-tall ceilings (20-35'); the doors (5-6D, 5-6E, 5-6F) are described individually. Two rudishva chambers are found here (5-30, 5-31), and rudishva iris doors may also be found at 5-18 and 5-25. The Archontean built tombs in and around the heqeti regions; these areas are of typical Archontean stonework, with 10' ceilings and iron-bound wooden doors.

Environment: The area is noticeably humid, due to the river running through 5-2.

2. The Midnight Road (5-84, 5-86 to 5-141)

The Midnight Road proper is the broad, tall corridor (5-91) running through the heart of the old rudishva settlements within Arden Vul. This 'road' linked important rudishva sites, including the cloister and transportation hub (5-92, 5-94), the rudishva forge (5-89), the lair of a tribe of debased and inbred varuda (5-111), the armory (5-118), the legendary troll pits, where the rudishva bred new varumani (5-131), and the top point of the massive rudishva great pillar (5-138), which one can use to travel all the way to level 9. As the Archontean never penetrated the Obsidian Gates, significant troves of rudishva-era knowledge, treasure, and technological devices can still be found here. The region carries a mystique to it, as many of the intelligent factions of Arden Vul (and a few knowledgeable outsiders) are aware that the region exists, or used to exist, even if none has been able to access it for millennia.

Factions: No faction controls this region since none of the factions know how to access it. Should a route to the Midnight Road be opened, and should that route become known, the varumani and kaliyani would move swiftly to try to occupy the region.

Construction: All worked areas date to the rudishva period. Most doors are of the dilating iris variety, and ceiling heights are typically 12' tall (except when otherwise noted).

Environment: All of the rudishva areas are warded against spells such as teleport and passwall. The region is notably cooler and drier than the rest of the Halls (45 degrees F).

RANDOM ENCOUNTERS

Random encounters vary considerably according to the region in which PCs are traveling.

1. Areas with no Random Encounters

5-52, 5-65, 5-66 to 5-75, 5-118, 5-138 to 5-141

2. The Vicinity of the Obsidian Gates (Areas 5-1 to 5-8, 5-18 to 5-31, 5-41 to 5-42 and 5-84)

Checks should be rolled every 3 turns with a 1 in 6 chance for a random encounter.

19	Travelers from the Troll Lift: roll on tables at 5-54
20	Sir Calculator, the Sun-Scarred Knight (see new monsters), 10th-level male human fighter: SZ M; AL LN; AC -2; MV 120'; HD 9+3; HP 88; #AT 3/2; Dmg 7-13 (broadsword +2). Abilities: STR 18/65, INT 15, WIS 13, DEX 12, CON 16, CHA 11. Possessions: gothic armor and sun lance (see new technological items); solar ring, circlet of command, and backpack of capacity (see new magic items for all three); 8 ancient octagonal platinum coins (see Arden Vul items), 125 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items); broad sword +2. Calculator's mission is a private one, to be determined by the GM

3. Tombs (5-9, 5-10 to 5-14, 5-15 to 5-17, 5-36 to 5-40, 5-57 to 5-62, 5-85)

Common sense needs to be used in these areas. They have no inhabitants that wander. Still, once penetrated by PCs, these areas might be subject to wandering creatures and sentient beings. In such cases, use the table for the Vicinity of the Obsidian Gates. Check every 4 turns with a 1 in 8 chance for an encounter.

4. The Great Chasm (Areas 5-32 to 5-35)

Use the Middle Chasm table (see 5-34)

5. Goblin Caves (Areas 5-43 to 5-51)

So long as the goblins still inhabit these caves, goblins form the only possible random encounter. Loud noise or combat in one of these caves brings Killik (5-46) and all other goblins from these areas at a run. If the goblins have been exterminated or have retreated to SL5, then use the random encounters charts for the Vicinity of the Obsidian Gates. So long as the goblins are present, checks occur every 2 turns with a 1 in 6 chance for an encounter; if the goblins are gone, checks occur every 3 turns with a 1 in 6 chance for an encounter.

D6	Encounter
1-3	4-6 goblins: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 6, 5, 4, 4, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.
4	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>4-6 goblins: as above</li> <li>2 goblin sergeants (as orcs): SZ M; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1; HP 8, 7; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8 (morning star). Possessions: morning stars</li> <li>1 goblin sub-chief (as a hobgoblin): SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 1+1; HP 7; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8 (long sword). Possessions: long sword</li> </ol>

5	1. 4-6 goblins: as above 2. 1 goblin sergeant (as orc): SZ M; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1; HP 7; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8 (morning star). Possessions: morning star
6	1. 4-6 goblins: as above 2. 2 goblin sergeants: as above 3. 1 goblin sub-chief: as above 4. Killik goblin captain (see 5-46): SZ S; AC 4; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 12; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8

6. Upper Troll Lifts (Areas 5-53 to 5-56 and 5-63 to 5-64)

Random encounters are limited to those who may be using the Troll Lift. There is a 1 in 6 chance for an encounter each time the PCs visit this region; use the table at 5-54 to determine the nature of the encounter.

7. The Sanctum (Areas 5-77 to 5-83)

Checks occur every 3 turns with a 1 in 6 chance for an encounter.

D6	Encounter
1-4	3-6 debased monks: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 4; HP 26, 24, 21; #AT 2; Dmg 1-6/1-6; 10% chance of disease; immune to charm, turned for 1-6 rounds as wights.
5	4 huge spiders: SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 180'; HD 2+2; HP 15, 15, 13, 11; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: surprise 1-5; poison (+1 to saves); can leap up to 30'
6	Vermin. Roll d10: 1-2: 5-8 giant centipedes: SZ S; AL N; AC 9; MV 150'; HD 1 or 2 HP; HP 2(x4), 1(x4); #AT 1; Dmg n.a. Special attacks: poison (+4 to save) 3-4: 4 giant fire beetles: SZ S; AL N; AC 4; MV 120'; HD 1+2; HP 8, 8, 7, 7; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8 5-8: 9-12 giant rats: SZ S; AL N(E); AC 7; MV 120'; HD 1-4 HP; HP 4(x3), 3(x3), 2(x3), 1(x3); #At 1; Dmg 1-3. Special attacks: 5% chance of disease 9-10: 4-6 giant bats: SZ S; AL N; AC 8; MV 30', 180' flying (Class C); HD 1-4 HP; HP 4, 3, 3, 2, 2, 1; #AT 1; Dmg 1-2. Special attacks: 1% chance of rabies. Special defenses: foes using missiles are at -3 to hit unless they have DEX 13 or greater

8. The Midnight Road (Areas 5-86 to 5-93, 5-106 to 5-110, 5-113 to 5-117, 5-119 to 5-137)

It is a major premise of the entire complex that the rudishva regions north, west, and southwest of the Obsidian Gates have been and remain difficult to access. As a result, random encounters should be rare, and those that do occur need to be carefully justified within that basic operating premise. Check every 3 turns, with a 1 in 12 chance for an encounter.

D10	Encounter
1-2	Two lost adventurers, namely the Silent Tempest and Kunda the Outlander: see stats at area 5-121

3-4	4 primitive varuda warriors (see new monsters): SZ M; AL LN; AC 7; MV 90', 90' gliding (Class E); HD 2; HP 13, 12, 11, 9; #AT 2 or 1; Dmg 1-4/1-4 or 1-6 (stone club). This group is constituted by some of the first explorers from the isolated community at 5-111, via the hole at 5-119A. These brave warriors are likely to attack in a shriek ... and then retreat to 5-119A
5	Aditya, true varumani (see new monsters) prophet: SZ L; AL LN; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 57; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10, or 2-7/2-7/2-7 (dart thrower – see new technological items), or 6-24 (trident, 2-20+4). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8 th -level fighter or 8 th -level magic user, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: 53 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items); a trident; ring mail; a rudishva dart thrower with four clips of darts (one clip with 7 ordinary, one clip with 6 ordinary, one clip with 3 explosive, and one clip with 4 immobilizing darts); and a fragment of a story about Vanara and Rudiga and the great exodus of the varumani, inscribed in blood on human-skin parchment. Aditya is a mystic whose prophecies and visions were the subject of ridicule in the troll thegn's court (7-75). She managed to find her way to the 'ancient ancestral halls' and is looking for 'the sign' (or anything, really). She is tired, hungry and dispirited. She negotiates first but will defend herself fiercely if required.
6	A hungry otyugh: 1 otyugh: SZ M; AL N; AC 3; MV 60'; HD 8; HP 51; #AT 3; Dmg 1-8/1-8/2-5. Special attacks: disease. Special defenses: limited telepathy (30'); never surprised. The otyugh typically dwells in 7-34, but occasionally comes up the passage to 5-125, and thence to the Midnight Road, seeking food and companionship
7-8	4 medium chasm cephalopods (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 5; MV 60' flying (Class A); HD 4; HP 27, 26, 25, 24; #AT 5 (4 tentacles and a beak); Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-4/1-4/1-6; MR 25%. Special attacks: surprise on 1-4. These cephalopods are more aggressive than usual, as they have drifted up from 4-117 or 6-165 and are away from their usual haunts
9	Vermin or spiders: 1-2: 5-8 giant centipedes: SZ S; AL N; AC 9; MV 150'; HD 1 or 2 HP; HP 2(x4), 1(x4); #AT 1; Dmg n.a. Special attacks: poison (+4 to save) 3-4: 4 giant fire beetles: SZ S; AL N; AC 4; MV 120'; HD 1+2; HP 9, 8, 6, 5; #AT 1; Dmg 2-8 5-8: 9-12 giant rats: SZ S; AL N(E); AC 7; MV 120'; HD 1-4 HP; HP 4(x3), 3(x3), 2(x3), 1(x3); #At 1; Dmg 1-3. Special attacks: 5% chance of disease 9-10: 4 huge spiders: SZ M; AL N; AC 6; MV 180'; HD 2+2; HP 15, 15, 13, 11; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: surprise 1-5; poison (+1 to saves); can leap up to 30'

10	Sir Calculator, the Sun-Scarred Knight (see new monsters), 10th-level male human fighter: SZ M; AL LN; AC -2; MV 120'; HD 9+3; HP 88; #AT 3/2; Dmg 7-13 (broadsword +2). Abilities: STR 18/65, INT 15, WIS 13, DEX 12, CON 16, CHA 11. Possessions: gothic armor and sun lance (see new technological items); solar ring, circlet of command, and backpack of capacity (see new magic items for all three); 8 ancient octagonal platinum coins (see Arden Vul items), 125 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items); broad sword +2. Sir Calculator is on a private mission for Psalor-Ki, the vivisectionist (5-72), to locate a working GnuCoder 5000 full-immersion sensory experience (see new technological items) and, if possible, bring it to Psalor-Ki. The only such devices are to be found at 5-97, and they are immovable (Psalor-Ki's insanity has overlooked this fact). Sir Calculator ascended to the Midnight Road from area 6-166. With his newly-acquired pale green rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items) he is able to open many rudishva doors. Still, Sir Calculator is stumped at how to proceed but, because this is a private, unregistered mission, he is most anxious to go undiscovered. He avoids conversation and, if pressed, will attack.
----	---

One cranny is obvious, but the other requires some searching to find (2-4 turns) and must be detected as a secret door.

Gog, the Lesser Varumani: Gog, an elderly lesser varumani (see new monsters), makes his home here. Gog is clever, curious and only sometimes malicious. He trades knowledge for food, but only food of the highest quality. Quality for Gog means prepared foods or raw meat, preferably beastman meat. Proffered iron rations elicit a contemptuous snort. Gog also barter for 'pretties' in a low-cunning voice, even though he is perfectly aware of the value of things. Gog fancies himself a custodian of the subterranean environment, and takes a dim view of those who slaughter the unintelligent flora and fauna, or who damage the natural rock formations. He has a paternalistic fondness for the goblins, even to the point of protecting them; he actively fears the Cult of Set and won't deal with them; and he hates the lizardmen, and, although he rarely encounters them, he will ambush them when possible. Although he has signed a formal treaty of non-aggression with the beastmen (and possesses a parchment to this effect signed by Count Skleros and Deino - see 3-158), he loves beastman flesh above all else, and ambushes beastmen whenever he thinks he can get away with it. Given this complicated relationship, Gog might well encourage newcomers to take action against the beastmen, although he is smart enough never to let himself be actively linked to such actions.

Thanks to his enchanted cloak, Gog is able to converse with nearly everyone. Gog enjoys conversation and eagerly offers to trade information with any group that is not immediately hostile. He has much to offer, including full knowledge of the layout of the non-secret corridors and caverns of Levels 3 and 5 (as well as some out-of-date information about the lower levels) and fairly well-informed knowledge of monster locations and the politics of the intelligent inhabitants of the upper levels. In return, he is interested in learning of changes to these levels - details of a party's negotiations with intelligent inhabitants, the discovery of secret doors or rooms, the death of monsters (although the latter will not make him favor the PCs), and so forth. Until his trust is won, however, Gog will subtly mislead parties by omitting important details, 'forgetting' key intersections, underplaying threats, and so forth. Any encounter with Gog thus plays out as a battle of wits. It is possible for parties to gradually win the grudging respect of Gog through humble speech, the offering of copious gifts, and the slaughter of his enemies. Such acceptance may only be won over time, and not in a single encounter. If Gog comes to respect a group, he may offer them advice and information that is not layered with 'tricks,' and/or knowledge about some more esoteric areas such as the Troll Lift, the Inn of the Lost, and even the court of the troll thegn (the source of his information, which he will not reveal, is Riglon in 5-54).

Gog has been unjustly exiled from the court of the troll thegn (7-30) due to the lies of a sleazy lesser varumani named Muq (8-151). Gog would very much like to locate Muq and force him to admit his machinations, and will offer eternal friendship to those who bring word of Muq. Producing the incriminating documents held by Muq (8-151) would also do the trick.

If attacked, Gog leaps into the river and swims upriver. After this he will never trade with those who attacked him and may even attempt to ambush a weakened party.

Gog has been charmed by the vampire, Cinna Minux (7-122), who occasionally visits him to learn rumors about those with whom Gog has chatted.

LEVEL KEY

5-1: Secret Door, with Stairs up to Level 3 (3-12)

A secret door is cleverly worked into the stone along the cave wall. Once opened, it reveals stairs leading up 250' to area 3-12.

Secret Door (south): The secret door is easy to find (3 in 6) from either side; it has no mechanism, but rather can be pushed or pulled open.

5-2: Cave of Gog

This vast cavern is some 50' tall and filled with stalactites and stalagmites. The atmosphere is oppressively damp and humid. The cavern is utterly dark, although the sense of tomb-like stillness is occasionally broken by the passage of bats and by the sounds of cave-crickets and moving water. A subterranean river runs through the cave, On a rocky island in the pool formed by the river lives a mysterious lesser varumani named Gog.

Chute Landing: The chute from 3-15C deposits its victims in an unceremonious heap on some sand just at the mouth of the Hall of Forty Pillars (5-6). Provided that the PCs have not arrived here by means of the chute, there is a 15% chance that 1-4 unfortunate individuals will come hurtling down the chute while the PCs are present; if so, they will be either adventurers (50%) or halflings from Level 3 (50%).

Dark Pool: The pool contains numerous blind crayfish and cave-fish. It also features a vicious current at its eastern end that will sweep the unwary towards the falls at 5-2A. Gog has a simple dugout canoe that he uses to navigate the pool. Gog's island is rocky and filled with crannies, two of which contains his 'pretties'.

Thothian Teleportation Ring: To the west of the pool is a set of 2"-tall paving stones arranged in a 6'-diameter ring. Inset into the floor next to the ring is a rectangle 48" long by 8" tall; the rectangle is divided into six interior compartments, each 8" square. Together these elements form a Thothian teleportation ring (see new magic items). To activate the ring, one must place six colored glass activation squares into the inset according to a sequence that matches the 'address' of the ring to which one wishes to travel. Once the squares are placed, a brief shimmer of energy is visible over the ring. At this point the user has 1 round to collect the squares and enter the ring, after which anyone in the ring is teleported without error to address indicated by that sequence of squares. If the glass activation squares are not collected and/or if the travelers do not possess a second set of them, they are likely to be stranded in the location to which they have just teleported. The address of this ring is as follows: RE-GR-WH-BL-BK-YE (see new magic items for explanation).

Although none of the glass activation squares are in evidence, Gog possesses a full set of them. Not only does he know how to operate the ring, he also has memorized the addresses to the rings located in areas 3-33, 4-122, and 6-64. He only shares this information with his most trusted friends.

One-way door (5-9A): The one-way door from area 5-9A is obvious to detect, but impossible to open from this side.

Note: Gog's cave is also one of the destinations for the teleporter at UP-11. Those teleported here find themselves standing before the entrance to the Hall of Forty Pillars (5-6).

Inhabitants:

1. Gog, lesser varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 61; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (club, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: club, cloak of wise negotiating (see new magic items).

Treasure:

In the obvious cranny: holds 6-12 gems of various size and value, 13 ancient octagonal platinum coins (see Arden Vul items), and a heavy sack filled 247 sp, 123 cp, and 101 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items).

In the hidden cranny: a full set of six colored glass activation squares (see Thothian teleportation rings in new magic items), a troll thegn's passport (see Arden Vul items), a moldy piece of parchment (his treaty with the beastmen), and the ring of Zox (see new magic items).

5-2A: River and Waterfall

The river exiting Gog's pool has a vicious current. Those attempting to swim in or cross the river must successfully roll 3d6 under STR or be swept down the river and over the waterfall to their deaths.

5-3: Natural Cavern

Reached by an 80-degree downward slope from Gog's cave, this cavern is rocky and moist. Its floor is a good 25' below that of 5-2, although the ceiling rises to an equal height of that of 5-2. The cavern is home to scores of bats, as well as 6 piercers. On the east wall, near the passage to 5-4 and some 15' off the cave floor is a secret door to 5-36. Noise in the cave might attract the bats from 5-4 (33% chance). Several dead bodies litter the floor, including a goblin and a human.

Secret Door (east): The door is 15' above the floor of 5-3, and is normal to find. The door is camouflaged to look like part of the natural cavern, although a black, lidded eye has been painted over it. It opens by covering the lidded eye (with a hand or anything) and stating "Open" in Mithric. It may also be battered down (AC 1, HP 50).

Inhabitants:

1. 6 piercers: SZ M(x3) and S(x3); AL N; AC 3; MV 10'; HD 3(x3) and 2(x3); HP 22, 18, 15, 14, 11, 9; #AT 1; Dmg 3-18 (x4) and 2-12(x4). Special attacks: 95% to surprise prey.

Treasure:

The corpses hold a stone axe; 27 cp, 2 crystals (10 gp each); 3 small pearls (60 gp each); a scroll with three canticles of the Litany of Light (see Arden Vul books); and a silver Sortian eye (see new magic items).

5-4: Bat Cave

This large cave is 40' tall and difficult to traverse. A wide opening extends to the northeast; this leads to a precipice at the edge of the Great Chasm (5-34), at a point where the river used to fall to the chasm floor (its new channel takes it through 5-2A). At the north end of the cave, some 30' above the floor, is a worked stone porch with two doric columns (5-15).

Inhabitants:

1. 150 ordinary bats: SZ S; AL N; AC 8; MV 10'; 240' flying (Class B); HD 1-2 HP; HP 2(x75), 1(x75); #AT 1; Dmg 1. Those climbing ropes to 5-15 may disturb the bats, provoking a swarm and requiring a successful roll of 3d6 under DEX to avoid falling to the ground.
2. 1-6 giant bats: SZ S; AL N; AC 8; MV 30', 180' flying (Class C); HD 1-4 HP; HP 4, 3, 3, 2, 2, 1; #AT 1; Dmg 1-2. Special attacks: 1% chance of rabies. Special defenses: foes using missiles are at -3 to hit unless they have DEX 13 or greater.

5-5: Natural Cavern

This natural cavern boasts an uneven floor that slopes upward to the north. Three carcass creepers make their home here. A careful search (1-2 turns) reveals a lime-encrusted ceramic jug with images of snakes inscribed in black ink on the outside.

Inhabitants:

1. 3 carcass creepers: SZ L; AL N; AC 3 (head) or 7 (body); MV 120'; HD 3+1; HP 20, 17, 16; #AT 8; Dmg nil. Special attacks: paralysis.

Treasure:

Inside the ceramic jug: 339 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items), and a 10"-tall, silver statuette of a frog (90 gp).

5-6: Hall of Forty Pillars

An iconic location in the Halls of Arden Vul, this Hall was built by the heqeti. It has been used and reused by all those who delved beneath Arden Vul. A ledge some 20' off the floor of area 5-2 leads to the infamous Hall. The ceiling is arched in a round arch, and rises some 30' above the floor. Forty stone pillars 6' in diameter stretch into the distance, as well as down two transepts. The walls and pillar are formed of pebbled stone, which seems worn and even a little greasy.

The pillars radiate so strongly of magic that it need not be detected; the effect is of dread (-3 morale rolls for retainers, -1 to all saves to everyone for 1-4 hours). Sound and/or light in the Hall is likely to attract the denizens of areas 5-7 and 5-8 (75% chance for each area).

The Hall is home to three score large (12") toads. The toads are harmless, but creepy. Adventurers will find themselves constantly under the scrutiny of these creatures. 25% of the toads are actually transformed adventurers (see 5-6D).

5-6A: Hidden Door

This pillar hides a secret door. It is difficult to locate (1 in 8) and opens only when the appropriate catch (a button on the floor) is located. Once the button is pressed, a panel slides open, revealing a narrow hole in the pillar and a set of iron rungs leading down. The tunnel is of natural, roughly carved stone.

5-6B: Lesser Ziggurat

The ziggurats here and at 5-6C are as ancient as the pillars, and also seem slightly pebbled and greasy. They rise in a series of narrow steps (worn in the middle) to a height of 20' above the floor. Each ziggurat summons an enemy every time the Obsidian Gates (5-6D) are touched without using the proper keys. The summoned creatures become increasingly more powerful as failures mount: first skeletons, then zombies, ghouls, mummies, and finally keqemandri (see new monsters). Note: two of each creature appear every time the gates are touched incorrectly. The ziggurats reset to the least powerful enemies after 2 hours of inactivity at the gates.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 skeletons: SZ M; AL N; AC 7; MV 120'; HD 1; HP 6, 5; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special defenses: immune to sleep, charm, hold, and cold; cutting and piercing weapons do half damage.
2. 2 zombies: SZ M; AL N; AC 8; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 15, 12; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8. Special: always strike last

3. 2 ghouls: SZ M; AL CE; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 13, 11; #AT 3; Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-6. Special attacks: paralysis. Special defenses: immune to sleep and charm. AC 6; MV 90'; HD 2; #AT 3; Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-6; paralyzation)

4. 2 mummies: SZ M; AL LE; AC 3; MV 60'; HD 6+3; HP 44, 38; #AT 1; Dmg 1-12. Special attacks: fear; rotting disease. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; half damage from magic weapons; immune to sleep, charm, hold, cold, poison, and paralysis.

5. 2 keqemander demons (see new monsters): SZ L; AL CE; AC -2; MV 90', 150' flying (Class D); HD 12; HP 81, 78; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/3-18; MR 40%. Constant abilities: dread (-1 to saves); infravision. Special attacks: acid spit (3-10 dmg; 30' range, every other round); cause fear; darkness (10' radius); exude acid with chance to degrade armor; use a symbol of discord. Special defenses: only hit by magic weapons; half damage from cold, electricity, fire, and gas; become invisible. Special: levitate; telekinesis (4,000 gp weight); project image; teleport without error; 50% chance to gate in either another keqemander or a Type I-IV demon.

5-6C: Lesser Ziggurat

See 5-6B.

5-6D: Obsidian Gates

An iconic location in the Halls of Arden Vul, the Obsidian Gates have blocked more explorers and tomb-robbers than any other location in the halls. The doors rise 20' above the floor, and are made of solid obsidian. They radiate magic and evil. Each valve has a 4'-tall glyph incised in the obsidian; the glyphs pulse softly with brown light. Keyholes some 1.5" in diameter extend halfway through each of the doors. Anyone touching (even to examine) the Obsidian Gates causes undead or demonic creatures to be summoned to confront the intruders (see 5-6B and 5-6C).

Knock spells do not work on the Obsidian Gates. The rudishva areas behind the Gates are also warded against teleport, passwall, and similar spells.

Glyphs: The glyphs are ancient, and formed part of the sorcery of the heqeti cult of Rimmaq-Isfet and Kauket. It is highly unlikely that any warm-blooded creature of the present age would be able to interpret them. One glyph appears as a V imposed over two connected circles; it is the glyph for "Hail!" The other glyph appears as a narrow upside down U, with small carets attached to each arm of the U; it stands for Rimmaq-Isfet, in his lesser incarnation as the Worm of Qok. Should one speak the name "Rimmaq-Isfet" in the ancient language of his cult, the magic of the ziggurats will be temporarily suppressed (for 1-3 days) and the doors can be pushed open without the need for keys.

If a PC is foolhardy enough to trace the glyphs, with finger or implement, he or she will suffer a cruel fate. Tracing the glyph for "Hail" causes a storm of caustic hail to fall throughout the Hall of Forty Pillars for 3-12 rounds, causing 1-6 HP damage per round (save vs spells for half damage). Tracing the glyph for "Rimmaq-Isfet" transforms a character that does not save versus petrification into a large (12") toad; even if the save is made, the PC is stunned for 1-3 turns. Chaotic evil characters are immune to this transformation. Note: tracing the glyphs will also cause the lesser ziggurats to summon enemies unless the tracer is chaotic evil.

Keys: As suggested by the keyholes, the 'keys' are in fact rods; each key is 1.5" in diameter and 15" long. To open the gates, one platinum key and one gold key must be inserted simultaneously into the keyholes. For the current location of all ten sets of keys, see the Arden Vul items appendix.

5-6E: Bronze Valves

These 15'-tall bronze doors have not been opened in centuries. Like the Obsidian Gates, these doors feature round keyholes in each door. Unlike the Obsidian Gates, however, manipulation of the bronze valves does not summon enemies. The keyholes are 1" in diameter.

Keys: Any pair of 1"-diameter rods, one of which must be silver or coated in silver and the other gold or coated in gold, opens the bronze valves.

5-6F: Open Bronze Doors

Originally identical to the doors at 5-6E, these doors have been shattered inward toward 5-6. The area around the keyholes looks molten, as if they had been blasted with intense heat.

5-7: Northeast Tombs

This hallway features four relatively modern, Archontean-era sarcophagi. All four have been broken and looted. They contain nothing but a few random bones. Lurking in and among the sarcophagi are 5 ghouls. Sound and/or light in the Hall of Forty Pillars (5-6) is 75% likely to attract the ghouls, although they do not pursue into area 5-2.

Secret Door (northeast): The door to 5-10 is easy to locate (1 in 4), and opens merely by pushing it inward.

Inhabitants:

1. 5 ghouls: SZ M; AL CE; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 13, 12, 11, 11, 10; #AT 3; Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-6. Special attacks: paralysis. Special defenses: immune to sleep and charm.

5-8: Southwest Tombs

This hallway features four modern, Archontean-era sarcophagi. All four have been broken and looted such that they contain nothing but a few random bones. Lurking in and among the sarcophagi are 5 ghastrs. Sound and light in the Hall of Forty Pillars is 75% likely to attract the ghastrs; they do not pursue into 5-2.

Inhabitants:

1. 5 ghastrs: SZ M; AL CE; AC 4; MV 150'; HD 4; HP 30, 26, 25, 23, 20; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-8. Special attacks: stench; paralysis. Special defenses: immune to sleep and charm

5-9: Fountain and Lost Tomb

This stone chamber is sheathed in neat, well-trimmed granite blocks and is only 6' tall. The walls are painted in extremely bright pastels, featuring geometric patterns and a depiction of bunches of grain. Periodically a figural image of a large goblet studded with colored dots is interspersed among the riot of colors. The northwest end features a 2'-tall circular basin from which a pleasant fountain of golden liquid sprays. The southeast end boasts a ¾-sized sarcophagus some 5' long, 2' wide, and 3' tall.

Fountain: The golden liquid is ale of surpassing flavor and freshness, but also of surprising potency. A flask-sized quaff inflicts WIS -3, CHA +2, and DEX -2 for 2 hours. The ale may also be used to activate the tomb of Hugo Berrydraw.

Sarcophagus: The sarcophagus lid is carved in a ¾ relief as a highly realistic image of a short human dressed in loose robes and wearing a pointed hat. Inserted into one stone hand of the recumbent figure is a full-scale wooden staff; the other hand clutches a large ivory drinking horn. The sarcophagus appears to be solid; that is, a seam between lid and body is not apparent. In the place of a seam, an inscription (in Mithric) runs all around the sarcophagus: "Hugo Berrydraw rests nearby, prince of charlatans, always ready with a quip and a toast, he who drenched his companions with friendship and the fruits of the barleycorn. Wake him at your peril, for his jollity will know no end."

The 'sarcophagus' is in fact a solid block of granite that cannot be opened. Hugo lies on top of the block, not within it; the carved relief is in fact Hugo's body. The wooden staff cannot easily be removed from the stone hand of the halfling. The ivory drinking horn, however, may be carefully prised from the effigy's hands. If it is carried to the fountain and filled with ale, and the ale is then poured over Hugo Berrydraw, then Hugo's spirit awakens and his stone body slowly (over 1 turn) returns to undead flesh (see new monsters). The undead Hugo cackles wordlessly and shouts vulgar curses (in an ancient Thorcin dialect) while deploying his staff of fermentation (see new magic items) and inflicting magical mayhem and distress on the living. Should the undead Hugo be slain, his body crumbles into a heap of bones.

GM Note: Hugo Berrydraw is an infamous character in ancient Archontean folktales. His reputation was that of the malicious trickster (as opposed to the generally beneficent Larel One-Eye). Stories of Hugo are legion, and usually involve him causing shame, discomfort, or harm to all varieties of folk, whether or not they were deserving of it. How he came to be entombed in Arden Vul is unknown.

Inhabitants:

1. Hugo Berrydraw, undead spirit of drunken mischief (see new monsters): SZ M; AL CE; AC 0; MV 150'; HD 8; HP 48; #AT 2 or 1; Dmg 1-4/1-4, or 1-6 (staff of fermentation). Special attacks: energy drain. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to fire, cold and electricity. Possessions: staff of fermentation, horn of carousing (see new magic items for both).

Treasure:

Staff of fermentation (22 charges), horn of carousing (see new magic items for both).

5-9A: One-way Door

The passage from 5-9 leads to a one-way door into 5-2. The door is obvious from 5-2, but is impossible to open from that side.

5-10: Looted Tomb and Coffin

A simple wooden coffin rests on some broken masonry in this hidden chamber. The walls are rough, as if decayed by time, although flecks of color suggest they were once painted. The coffin is simply but sturdily made of oak. Its lid has been pried open, allowing sight of a jumble of bones and bits of equipment, all worthless. Incised in the wood of the side are the crude words “Gregor, Priest.” A scrap of parchment is wrapped around a nearby femur. It reads, in Archontean: “Gregor, optimistic priest of life, fell near the Troll Lift. We left him here, but will be back to give him a proper burial. Touch his remains at your peril!” A second hand has scrawled, in Archontean and in blood, the phrase “Still waiting, eh?” [Some details of Gregor’s expedition may be found at 1-19].

Secret Door (northeast): The door to 5-11 is difficult (1 in 8) to locate. To open it one must locate and depress a stud on the floor.

Treasure:

Among the debris are two teeth of Pol (see new magic items), which may be used to activate the head of Pol (SL6-8)

5-11: Lovers’ Rest?

A thick carpet of dust covers the floor, two stone sarcophagi, and a 4’-tall pedestal. The walls are plastered and brightly painted in the classic Archontean style: realistic, portrait-style faces of soldiers wearing legionary armor, short swords and spears. The lids of the sarcophagi also depict likenesses of people, but the style of the carving is demonstrably indicative of modern Archontean art, with more allegorical, elongated figures depicted with a slight ethereal or spiritual flavor. One figure is of a man in armor with a distinctive trident embossed on the breastplate. The man grips a long sword. Above his head has been chiseled in majuscule Archontean “Kaitor proditor amici” [i.e., “Kaitor, betrayer of a friend”]. The other gisant shows a woman in flowing robes; she has long hair held back by a circlet, and clutches a staff. Above her head is this inscription in Archontean: “Guivrel dulcissima amica” [i.e., “Guivrel, most beloved friend”]. Both sarcophagi appear to be intact.

Between the two sarcophagi is a 4’-tall stone pedestal, like a lectern. On the lectern lie both a stone tablet incised with runes and five heavy silver tokens with two heads. Should one of the sarcophagi be cracked open, a loud hiss echoes in the chamber as the other sarcophagus also opens and both emit clouds of vapor which coalesce into human forms. One of the vaporous forms shouts in Archontean “It was righteous!” while the other shouts “I require judgment!” After several similar shouts, both forms whisper “You must choose ...”

Backstory: Some 250 years ago Emperor Phocion IV sent an expedition to re-establish a foothold in Arden Vul and locate sources of arcanum. Among the group were three friends, Lankios the paladin (c.f. area 1-6), Kaitor, a cleric of Heschus Ban, and Guivrel the magic user. Both Lankios and Kaitor were in love with Guivrel, who had been married for political reasons to the expedition’s commander, Adrienic. Guivrel thrived on power and manipulation, and used Lankios mercilessly. In the course of their explorations, Guivrel found and kept a powerful heqeti ring (see new magic items), which began to twist her mind in more chaotic and evil ways. The expedition began to founder, Adrienic was slain in battle with most of his men, and a tiny rump of legionaries and administrators retreated to the region of the Hall of Forty Pillars. Kaitor, filled with unrequited love, watched with a sick heart as Guivrel continued to manipulate Lankios’s feelings in more insidious and cruel ways. Finally Kaitor approached Guivrel and told her to cease her manipulations, but she laughed and said she planned to seduce Lankios that very evening, and that sacrificing his righteousness would make a perfect bookend to the failure of the expedition. Kaitor pulled his dagger and stabbed Guivrel through the heart. Just then Lankios arrived and witnessed the death of his intended lover. He turned on Kaitor, who kept shouting that he had done it for Lankios’s good, to save him from treachery. Lankios would not hear of it, and slew his erstwhile friend. As his mind began to slip into an insanity that would preserve him for the next 230 years, Lankios ordered his men to erect these tombs and leave a record of the sordid events.

Puzzle: The spirits of Kaitor and Guivrel are restless and demand a judgment by the PCs. They both speak in Archontean. Kaitor’s ghost keeps murmuring “Treachery! She would have destroyed him, she would have cost him his life’s work. She told me so! Her death was for the greater good!” Guivrel’s spirit, to the contrary, exclaims “Treachery! Stabbed by a friend without cause!” Both periodically turn to the PCs and demand, “You must judge!” Neither spirit is fully sentient, and it is thus difficult to tease more than the stock phrases from them. Still, some evidence exists in the chamber (and elsewhere; see 6-138 and SL3-19) to help the PCs make a judgment. Guivrel’s desiccated corpse rests in her sarcophagus, with her golden hair still present after all the years. A dagger with a trident (the symbol of Heschus Ban) inscribed on the hilt is buried in her chest. Her right hand bears her signet ring, but the left bears the heqeti ring (see new magic items). In the sarcophagus are Guivrel’s staff of striking (10 charges), and her bracers of defense (AC 7).

In Kaitor’s sarcophagus lies a less-well preserved body still dressed in a breastplate with an embossed trident on it (clerics may recognize this as a symbol of Heschus Ban). A trident of water breathing (see new magic items) lies next to him. Under the body is a badly decomposed leather pouch in which may be found three tourmalines, a parchment scroll from the Emperor attesting to Kaitor’s commission as a kentarch, and a small parchment codex (the Expedition Notes of Kaitor; see Arden Vul books) which records some of Kaitor’s thoughts on the expedition. The tablet on the lectern reads, in Archontean, “I am unable to judge the truth of this matter. Guivrel is dead at the hand of Kaitor. I slew the traitor Kaitor even as he shouted his reasons. I know not what to think, for I feel only treachery and pain. Let a new judge decide the truth of the matter by placing a token in the hand of the guilty. [signed] Lankios the polemarch.”

Solving the Puzzle: The spirits require a judgment from the PCs. Alas, the issue is far from clear. It is obvious that Kaitor is guilty of homicide, so the PCs might well side with Guivrel. Yet investigation might also reveal that Kaitor suspected foul play; his expedition notes and the heqeti ring suggest that there was justification for his action. The PCs might also decide that both are guilty. Some parties might also decide that Lankios is also guilty, or even solely guilty (he may be located at 1-6). Some might decide that all are guilty. The note found on the body of Hector at 6-138 may also help shape the PCs’ decision-making. The PCs’ judgment will have implications as follows:

Kaitor is Guilty: The body of Guivrel fades to dust, but the spirit of Kaitor materializes into a powerful vengeful spirit (see new monsters) and attacks. Bringing the signet of Guivrel to Lankios cures him of insanity, and he will live another 1-20 years.

Guivrel is Guilty: Kaitor's body decomposes instantly, but Guivrel's springs forth as a banshee and attacks. Her signet will be unrecoverable, and Lankios will stay cursed.

Lankios (alone) is Guilty: Neither spirit animates. Bringing the signet to Lankios causes him 6 turns of sanity, during which he attempts to assault the PCs. After 6 turns he collapses into dust.

Kaitor and Guivrel are Both Guilty: Both of their bodies crumble into dust. Bringing the signet to Lankios causes him to attack the PCs.

Lankios and Kaitor are Guilty: Guivrel's spirit laughs for 6 rounds and then dissipates. Lankios will be found dead at 1-6. Heschiu Ban curses all PCs.

Lankios and Guivrel are Guilty: Guivrel turns into a banshee, but Kaitor materializes as a vengeful spirit (see new monsters) and helps to fight Guivrel. When the combat is finished, Kaitor dematerializes. Bringing the signet to Lankios inflicts sanity and overwhelming remorse on him; he dies within 1-6 days.

All are Guilty: A rumble of thunder is heard, and a flash of lightning shaped like a trident appears in the chamber (Heschiu Ban). All PCs receive a bless spell that is good for 2 weeks.

No Judgment is Made: if the PCs refuse to judge, and do not loot the sarcophagi, nothing untoward occurs. If the PCs loot the tombs and leave without judging, they will be cursed and subject to a geas compelling them to return and judge.

Inhabitants:

1. Kaitor, a vengeful spirit (see new monsters): SZ M; AL LE; AC 1; MV 120'; HD 6; HP 40; #AT 1; Dmg 1-12; MR 25%. Special attacks: STR drain. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to fire; turned as vampire; reform in 1-6 hours so long as his bones remain unburied.
2. 1 banshee (groaning spirit): SZ M; AL CE; AC 0; MV 150'; HD 7; HP 46; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8; MR 50%. Special attacks: wail (1/day, in darkness); cause fear. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to charm, sleep, hold, cold and electricity.

Treasure:

Heqeti ring (see new magic items); Guivrel's signet ring (25 gp, but useful as listed above); staff of striking (10 charges); amulet of natural armor +3 (see new magic items); trident of water breathing (see new magic items); 3 tourmalines (100 gp each); Archontean military commission (50 gp to an antiquarian); Expedition notes of Kaitor (see Arden Vul books); and 1-5 large silver tokens (50 gp each).

5-12: Broken Tomb

This cramped, 8'-tall chamber is cluttered with debris on one side, and filled with the signs of a military encampment on the other. An empty suit of old imperial field plate (see Arden Vul items) lies on the ground in a spread-eagled position, as if its inhabitant had fallen forward on his/her face. The armor is empty of organic matter.

The Archontean expedition used this chamber as part of their living quarters. The debris includes a pile of bones and bits of rock and rock dust (GM Note: the bones are those of the former inhabitants of the sarcophagi of 5-11, while the rock fragments are the residue from the carving of the gisants of Kaitor and Guivrel). The campsite has a circle of stones for cooking, several rotted leather bags and sacks, and a cracked (and empty) water barrel.

Secret Door (northwest): The door to 5-23 is difficult to find (1 in 8). One must succeed at an open doors check to depress the panel, after which it slides to the right, revealing a 4'x4' hole into 5-23.

Treasure:

Imperial field plate (see Arden Vul items).

5-13: Lost Tomb

Another 8'-tall, narrow chamber, this room features a stone sarcophagus which has been pushed to the northwest corner, as well as a 3 empty suits of imperial field plate (see Arden Vul items) lying spread-eagle on the floor. Six rotted bedrolls lie in the room. Four spears and four long swords are stacked neatly against a wall.

Sarcophagus: The seal of the sarcophagus has been cracked, but the lid is still intact. The lid is carved in low relief to depict an ancient imperial officer in formal toga; beside him is an enormous lizard or dragon. Inside may be found a jumble of bones, a stone-tipped heqeti spear, and a short sword +1. A silver box, in surprisingly good shape, rests inside, hidden there by the Archontean soldiers.

Treasure:

Short sword +1. The silver box (200 gp) contains 150 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items) and six clay tokens with a trident on one side and the word "Pentarch Kaitor" on the other (holy symbols of Heschiu Ban).

5-14: Burial Chamber with Ichor of Rimmaq-Isfet

This spacious chamber boasts a 15' ceiling. Its walls are painted in bright colors with scenes of ancient Archontean officials carrying ceremonial gifts towards a sarcophagus, atop of which a widow is weeping dramatically. The ceiling is painted cerulean blue. At the north end stands a large sarcophagus of stone, some 10' long and 5' wide. It has been carved with mid-relief scenes of upper-class Archontean domestic life (husband in study, wife directing slaves, children being tutored). The middle of the room features a 10'-diameter stone basin raised a good 2' off the floor. Rising from the center of the basin is a chunk of black stone, pitted, rough and slick to the touch. The basin is filled with a thick sludgy black liquid. Two sets of imperial field plate (see Arden Vul items) lie draped across the lip of the basin, partly in and partly out of it.

The liquid is a specimen of the ichor of Rimmaq-Isfet (see new monsters). It corrupted and devoured six of the Archontean soldiers who had been left leaderless by Lankios's madness; the others fled deeper into the halls. Although it can form shapes on its own, this bit of ichor of Rimmaq-Isfet prefers to animate the suits of armor. When PCs enter the room, the ichor is quiescent. Within two rounds, however, it will ooze into one of the suits of armor, which will lurch upright and attack. In another two rounds, the other suit will attack. Once these two suits are animated, a stream of ichor will spill over the lip of the basin and begin to ooze towards the other suits of armor in 5-13. The basin holds enough matter for four animated examples of the ichor.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 ichor of Rimmaq-Isfet (see new monsters): SZ L; AL CE; AC 5 (but 1 in imperial field plate); MV 60'; HD 16 HD (subdivided into four 4HD spawn); #AT 2; Dmg 1-6/1-6; MR 30%. Special attacks: caustic touch (1-4 HP acid damage); crush (1-10 HP/rd); obliterate organic matter. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to cold and acid.

Treasure:

Scattered about are three pieces of jade jewelry (torc and two arm rings) worth 300 gp each; 237 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items); a bone scroll case (50 gp) with a treasure map and a scroll of remove paralysis, feline senses (see new spells), and neutralize poison; a curved, red horn of chaos (see new magic items); and a rod of resurrection (3 charges) hidden inside a huge, heavy candle some 3' tall.

5-15: Balcony and Caryatids

This balcony looms 30' above the floor of the natural cave at 5-4. It is made of carefully cut and worked stone, and features a pavement of slate mortared over the stone. Two doric pillars extend to the roof from either side of the balcony. The balcony leads to a room that is 15' tall with a pale-green painted ceiling. Two rounded archways lead to areas 5-16 and 5-17. Along the walls of the room are painted half-pillars carved in the likeness of armed men and women. All bear chain armor, conical helmets, long thigh-boots, and long swords or axes. There are 8 such half-columns, all of which are caryatid columns. Should anyone step from the balcony into 5-15 proper, the first 3 columns will detach from the wall with a cracking, grinding sound and move to expel the intruders. Should anyone enter the eastward ell of the room, the other five columns will also animate and attack.

Inhabitants:

1. 8 caryatid columns: SZ M; AL N; AC 5, MV 60'; HD 5; HP 22(x8); # AT 1; Dmg 2-8. Special defenses: all saves at +4; half damage from normal weapons; full damage without magical pluses from magic weapons; weapons that strike a column have 25% chance to break (-5% per magical plus).

5-16: Hall of Fallen Warriors

This chamber contains the sarcophagi of six Archontean warriors who were part of the first effort to colonize Arden Vul, some 2,100 years ago. Another 10 half-columns ring the room, but none of them animate. All are carved in the same style as those in 5-15. Most still bear much of the paint that once coated them. The ceiling was painted bright yellow, but it is flaking badly from moisture and age. The sarcophagi are plain stone without major decoration save a simple inscribed image of an Archontean legionary on the lid. Four of the sarcophagi have been broken open and their contents dispersed. The two at the west end of the room are still intact.

Sarcophagus of Birtik the Proud: Contents include a silvered chain mail hauberk (equivalent to elven chain); conical helmet with nasal piece and decorative, gold 'wings' (50 gp); Frog-Biter, an enchanted spear (see new magic items).

Sarcophagus of Lidric the Envious: Lidric has become a skeletal wight (see new monsters). Scattered in the tomb are 322 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items) and a winged statuette in the form of a bronze pig (see new magic items).

Inhabitants:

1. 1 skeletal wight (see new monsters): SZ M; AL CE; AC 3; MV 120'; HD 5+1; HP 33; #AT 1; Dmg 3-9. Special attacks: energy drain. Special defenses: successful energy drain heals 3-9 HP; +1 or better weapons to hit; edged weapons do ½ damage; immune to sleep, charm, hold, poison, paralyzation and cold; turned as ghastrs.

Treasure:

See above

5-17: Tombs of the First Archons

The ceiling of this arched hall rises 20' above the floor, and is supported by a row of pillars down the center of the hall. Six sarcophagi hold the remains of the earliest archons of the Archontean colony at Arden Vul.

The sides of the hall feature half-pillars painted with images of robed men and women; the men are clean-shaven, wear tall cylindrical hats, and carry small bundles of rods of authority; the women have long hair, wear similar hats, and carry ankh-shaped rods. The ceiling is pale blue. Three of the sarcophagi have been looted; their lids are broken into fragments and their contents dispersed. The three intact sarcophagi have realistic images of robed people (two men, one woman) carved on their lids; each also bears an inscription in Mithric naming its inhabitant.

Sarcophagus of Troab the Wise, 3rd Archon: Contents include bones; a silver torc of authority (see new magic items); a bundle of golden rods tied with a silver string worth 450 gp (but perhaps worth three times that sum to modern Archontean archons); 263 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items), and a key to the right hematite door (3-177).

Sarcophagus of Ysadina Peace-weaver, 4th Archon: Contents include: bones, a gold necklace of harmony (see new magic items), and a jade ring with a black opal (1,150 gp)

Sarcophagus of Metion the Stern, 6th Archon: Metion has become a spectre, and attacks as soon as his sarcophagus is opened. Two heavy gold bracelets (225 gp each), a gold signet ring (110 gp), and an ankh of protection with 5 charges (see new magic items) rest within the sarcophagus.

Inhabitants:

1. Metion the spectre: SZ M; AL LE; AC 2; MV 150', 300' flying (Class B); HD 7+3; HP 52; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8. Special attacks: energy drain. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to sleep, charm, hold, cold, poison, and paralysis.

5-18: Octagonal Hall

This large octagonal chamber rises to a height of 35' in its center. Slabs of blue granite (5'x5') sheath the walls, and doors line every wall. In the exact center of the room is a 15'-diameter raised dais (3' off the ground).

Doors: The broken doors at 5-6F are bronze, the rudishva iris door on the northeast wall is stone, and the rest are iron-bound wood. The rudishva iris door only opens when a silver rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items) is touched to the accompanying panel.

Statues: In the center of the dais is a 5'-tall lump of weathered, mostly shapeless stone; its original subject is impossible to discern. Just in front of this lump, facing the doors at 5-6F, is a second, newer statue of a human with one arm pointing forward and the other clasping a bundle of rods to his breast. A plaque reads 'Adrienic, Governor of Arden Vul, 2759 AEP' The figure is dressed in a toga-like garment, with sandals, a torc, and a circlet. The statue is white marble, originally with inset gemstones, but the stones are gone and the statue has been badly vandalized with graffiti, excrement, etc.

If the statue of Adrienic is moved (via an open doors check), a vertical tomb, 3'x3'x6', will be found underneath it. Inside the tomb is Adrienic's shrouded, wrapped corpse and some of his symbols of authority.

GM Note: Adrienic was the leader of the doomed expedition sent by Emperor Phocion IV some 250 years ago to recolonize Arden Vul. The date on the plaque marks the death of Adrienic in the Cave of Blood (7-76).

Treasure:

Within the hidden, vertical tomb: a palm of size adjustment with 3 charges remaining (a rudishva useful palm - see new magic items); a 3'-long rod capped with a depleted lump of arcnum (475 gp); a ceremonial gladius inset with gold and semi-precious stones (125 gp); a token of Arden (see Arden Vul items); three silver and fire opal fibulae (125 gp each); and a wax tablet on which the following sentences, written in Archontean, are still visible: Adrienic the 'archon' was brave enough. Seeking glory for the basileus, he led his entire command - five cohorts of the IInd Legion (Sheepshead Rangers) and the 3rd cohort of the imperial tagmata (Able Ones) - down the chasm to confront the trolls, ignoring the warnings of his strategos and his polemarchs. There he died gloriously, along with all 500 legionaries. The veterans of the tagma fought a delaying action to cover the retreat of the survivors. But when ambushed by the old servants, with their ridiculous pseudo-king or thain, the retreat turned into a rout. The twinned warriors of the Sacred Band held the bridge against the horde while Tulliaros, polemarch of the Sheepshead Rangers, rallied the survivors. Eventually Sibillire brought down the bridge and surrounding chambers with her sorcery. The paired lovers were lost, and Maurikios, taxiarch of the 3rd cohort, was cut off with the remnants of the tagma. I, Lankios the polemarch, assumed command of the remnant of this accursed expedition and buried those whose bodies remained. Guivrel has been of no help, and Kaitor grows sullen. How will the basileus react to this disaster? I have turned to the strategos, Basil, as senior surviving officer. He will be 'archon'.

GM Notes: This valuable note explains what happened to the expedition of Adrienic. Lankios still lives, at 1-6. Maurikios Ligareon also lives, due to rudishva techno-sorcery; he calls himself Thegan White-Mane now (6-19). For Guivrel and Kaitor, see 5-11. For Basil Junienos, see 5-23; for Sibillire see 5-19; for the paired lovers, Georgios and Hradulfus, see 5-20.

5-19 to 5-24: Looted Archontean Tombs

Although these chambers were originally designed for other purposes, Adrienic (see 5-18) made them the seat of the short-lived restoration of Archontean power in Arden Vul. For about 20 years they were used as the administrative and political nerve center of the new colony. When Adrienic's folly led to the annihilation of the expedition, however, the remaining officers, recognizing they would have to abandon the Halls, chose to lay the corpses of the ranking members of the expedition to rest in these chambers. The original decorations are long gone. The walls are thus mostly bare, save for the occasional bit of graffiti.

On the interior wall of each chamber, opposite the entrance door, may be found a large message splashed in red paint; each 'message' names the person buried in the appropriate chamber. The sarcophagi (1 or 2 per chamber) within the chambers are stone. Their sides are carved with images of Archontean legionaries in the classical style (dating to the golden age of Archontean rule in Arden Vul, that is, some 1,500 years ago). The lids of the sarcophagi, when present, are new; on each surviving lid the name of the inhabitant is chiseled in fine Archontean capital letters. The chambers are littered with dust, rock chips, bits of bone, fragments of leather and parchment, and broken bits of metal equipment.

If PCs stop to read the graffiti, roll on the following table; some entries will only appear once:

D100	Graffiti	GM Notes
1-50	[Name] was here	Roll d20: 1-5: Archontean name 6-8: Thorcin name 9-10: varumani name 11-12: beastman name 13-15: goblin name 16-18: Wiskin name 19: dwarven name 20: name of unknown derivation
51-52	Gate Keys – one silver? One gold?	A hint as to the nature of the two keys needed to open the Obsidian Gates (5-6)
53-54	Thanks, Adrienic. We enjoyed your hospitality.	A mocking reference to Adrienic, whose statue (and corpse) rests in 5-18
55-56	Humanz r meat. Yum.	Lesser varumani boasting and fear-mongering.
57-58	Sketch of an eye with eyelashes and a large eyeball	Just a doodle
59-60	A chalk sketch of a complex knot	A symbol of the ancient Sortians
61-62	Don't trust Gog. He knows more than he's telling	Refers to Gog (5-2). It is true that Gog 'plays dumb' and knows a lot more about the Halls than he is willing to reveal; but Gog is loyal to those who prove themselves his friends
63-64	The Arena must lie behind those damned Gates.	Untrue. The Arena (6-58 to 6-94) is best accessed via the Sundered Span (5-35) and the Troll Lift (5-54), neither of which lie behind the Obsidian Gates

65-66	We claim this territory for the Red God of the desert!	A reference to one of Set's avatars. For the cult of Set, see 4-2.
67-68	Go to hell, Set!	Self-explanatory
69-70	Kaitor has betrayed me, Guivrel is gone. The darkness is closing in.	Written by Lankios (1-6), one of the survivors of Adrienic's expedition. Refers to the events described in 5-11.
71-72	The Rabbit was here. But now he's gone.	The Rabbit is the nickname of a legendary cat burglar from Narsileon (see World of Archontos appendix).
73-74	The thegn is coming!	Varumani propaganda, referring to the troll thegn (7-30)
75-76	Guivrel has changed. That bitch is evil, now!	A reference to Guivrel and the effects of the heqeti ring (see 5-11)
77-78	Sure, Lankios is acting like a leader now . But where was he when the trolls fell on us? Stupid paladin.	Bitter diatribe directed at Lankios by a survivor of the 2 nd Scutarii
79-80	Adrienic was a stupid ponce. Glory my ass! Now we're all gonna die.	Bitter commentary by a survivor from the 2 nd scutarii
81-82	That worm Pollitt assured us he could find Marius's tomb on the level below this one. But he's scarpere with some of our valuables. Guivrel sent Justinus to bring him back.	Refers to the sorcerer Pollitt, who accompanied Adrienic's expedition to the Halls but fled to pursue his own goals. His fate may be glimpsed at 6-137 and 6-139.
83-84	The goblins control access to the Sundered Span. Guess we shouldn't have slain so many of them. Now we're stuck.	A reference to the goblin caves (5-41 to 5-51) and the Sundered Span across the chasm (5-35)
85-86	Make Gog happy, and he'll make you happy	Good advice about Gog, the lesser varumani (5-2)
87-88	Gog has a taste for beastman flesh, despite his so-called treaty	Another truism about Gog (5-2), potentially useful in winning Gog's friendship
89-90	Grease the paws of that goblin, Killik, and doors will open for you	A reference to the willingness of Killik (5-46) to accept gifts
91-92	Don't go too far east of the Troll Lift – we lost Grevius there.	A cryptic reference to the Sanctum (5-77 to 5-83)

93-94	The Inn of the Lost lies just below the Troll Lift. Ask for Thegan. He's a good bloke.	Accurate (mostly) information about the Inn of the Lost, at 6-7 to 6-20
95-96	Tremarus kept messing with the damned gates, and kept summoning more undead. He's joined them now.	A warning about the Obsidian Gates (5-6)
97-98	There must be a way around these damned Gates. Maybe if we go down a level, and then come up behind them?	Good advice, if hard to manage. Areas 6-166, 7-34 and 7-88 have tunnels that wend upwards to the Midnight Road area.
99-100	Arcanum , huh. What is it good for? Absolutely nothing!	A misguided fighter's lament.

5-19: Tomb of Sibillire

Scrawled in Archontean on the wall opposite the entrance are the words "Sibillire, court wizard". Her sarcophagus lacks a lid and contains nothing valuable. The sarcophagus may be shifted with a lift gates roll, revealing a set of narrow stone steps that descend 20' to an equally narrow tunnel leading north to 5-85A.

5-20: Georgios and Hradulfus

The message scrawled in Archontean on the wall of this chamber reads: "Georgios and Hradulfus, warriors of the Sacred Band." A badly faded mural of two black-haired warriors fighting "trolls" may still be discerned against the northwest wall. The fragments of what might be two sarcophagi, as well as some badly scorched bones, are all that remain of the pair. GM: This pair of warrior-lovers sacrificed themselves to allow the survivors of Adrienic's expedition to escape across the imperial bridge (now the Sundered Span, 5-35).

5-21: Tomb of Tulliaros the Polemarch

Painted on wall of this tomb are the following words in Archontean: "Tulliaros, polemarch of II Scutarii." The stone sarcophagus is intact, but empty. Its lid lies against the north wall. The lid depicts a simple legionary figure surrounded by the letters 'T[u]ll[iar]o[s] P[ole]m[ar]chos' (the letters in brackets are missing), and a crude sheep's head (the symbol of the 2nd legion). Although quite heavy, the sarcophagus lid would bring over 2,000 gp to imperial collectors in Narsileon or Archontos. GM: Tulliaros was commander of the 5 cohorts of the 2nd legion of scutarii that provided the main military force for Adrienic's expedition. He was slain at the Cave of Blood (known today as the Troll Market – area 7-76) by the varumani and his body was never recovered. For his wisdom (as he had argued against Adrienic's doomed strategy), Lankios erected an empty sarcophagus in his honor. The troll thegn mummified Tulliaros's head as a token of victory; that object is currently located at 7-12.

5-22: Tomb of Kyrenaios the Chartouarios

On the wall opposite the entrance are painted the following words (in Archontean): "Kyrenaios the Chartouarios." The same name is inscribed on the side of the sarcophagus, the lid of which is now completely destroyed.

A 2'-long, leathery, brown egg may be found in the sarcophagus. The egg is swollen from within. Touching it with any level of roughness causes it to explode, coating all within 10 feet in putrescent matter. Until thoroughly washed away, the smell increases the chance of a random encounter by 1.

GM Note: Kyrenaios was the chief administrative officer of Adrienic's expedition.

5-23: Tomb of Basil, 2nd Archon

Across from the entrance, the following message in Archontean is scrawled: "Basil, archon after Adrienic. He lasted only a few days". The lid to the sarcophagus has been removed and rests against the northeast wall; it is mostly intact, and displays Basil's name and a crude image of a portly man in a toga.

GM Note: Basil Junienos was the senior surviving officer after the disaster of the Cave of Blood (now the Troll Market, 7-76) and the long retreat up the chasm. Although Basil was a timid, entirely stupid man, Lankios dutifully made him archon after the death of Adrienic. Basil died of a heart attack a few days later.

Secret Door (southeast): High on the southeast wall is a 4'x4' secret door to 5-12. It is difficult to spot (1 in 8). It opens by pressing the door panel inward, then sliding it to the left.

Treasure:

A hidden compartment in floor (1 in 6 to find) hides a greasy leather bag containing bracers of defense (AC 3), gauntlets of ogre power, 3 potions of water breathing, and 250 gp.

5-24: Tomb of Kalliston the Priest

A message has been scrawled in red paint opposite the entrance. It reads, in Archontean: "Kalliston, priest of Debellaton. One of the good ones."

Due to the divine protection of his god, Kalliston's tomb remains unlooted. It appears as a narrow, worn sarcophagus inscribed with ancient Archontean legions on its sides. The lid, however, is new, and bears an image of a scythe (a symbol of Debellaton) as well as the following inscriptions in Archontean: "Kalliston, beloved of Debellaton, fallen in battle." More interestingly, a translucent, 5"-tall image of a cloaked figure with a scythe hovers just above the sarcophagus. Should anyone tamper with the sarcophagus, the incorporeal image grows to 9' tall and shouts menacingly in Archontean, "Lord Debellaton commands that you let his servant rest!" Should further tampering occur, including opening the sarcophagus, Debellaton lays a curse (GM's choice) on all in the chamber.

GM Note: Kalliston, a senior priest of Debellaton, was the chief clerical advisor to Adrienic.

Treasure:

Inside the sarcophagus: Kalliston's bones; a flail +2; three 5"-tall basalt statuettes of the reaper (275 gp each); a lemon-yellow silk shroud with purple images of hoplite images and swords (a piece of silk from the imperial factories, worth 350 gp); and a silver and gold holy symbol of Debellaton (75 gp).

5-25: Octagonal Hall of Justice

A large, 35'-tall, octagonal chamber lies behind the formidable bronze doors at 5-6E (see text there for how to open these doors).

Although similar to 5-18, this chamber is in far better condition, and lacks the trash of areas 5-18 to 5-24. A thick carpet of dust covers the floor of the room. The ceiling is flaking badly, but once might have been painted gold, perhaps even with gilt. A 15'-diameter circular dais (3' tall) occupies the center of the room, and a heavy oak chair – a seat of justice – sits on the dais. The chair faces the doors at 5-6E. Six oak desks and desk-chairs occupy the northwest, southwest, and southeast portions of the chamber.

Doors: Doors occupy every face of the octagon; six are single doors, and two are double (the entry, and the stone doors opposite the entry). All but one are made of the same pebbled, greasy granite as the halls and chambers of this region. Only the door to 5-31 is unique. It is a rudishva iris door in the form of an 8'-diameter circle of plasteel set into the surrounding stone; it opens only when a pale green, pink, orange, silver or yellow rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items) is touched to the accompanying panel. A successful listen check at any of the doors marked 5-27 reveals the sound of wordless moaning and scratching.

Seat of Justice: This magnificent chair is over-sized, as if for an 8'-tall person, and is beautifully carved. Floral motifs predominate on the armrests and legs, but a gilt hoplite helmet is visible on the backrest. The chair was the archon's chair, or seat of justice, for Adrienic during the short-lived Archontean reoccupation of the Halls that ended 234 years ago. If disassembled and carried off, the chair, which weighs 55 lb and is bulky, might fetch a substantial sum. Skill at carpentry or a successful roll of 4d6 under INT is necessary to disassemble the chair.

Desks: Each desk has 3 drawers, but all eighteen have been systematically emptied (by the Archontean when they fled). Two items of note remain. The first is a piece of parchment stuck to one desktop with a dagger: it reads, in Archontean, "The Shining Empire may have departed today, but it shall return. I, Lankios the polemarch, acting archon of Arden Vul, swear it!" The document is dated 2759 AEP. The other item of note is a carved ivory coffer that sits on the top of one of the other desks. This coffer is ancient, dating to the very earliest days of the Archontean Empire (circa 55 AEP, or more than 2,900 years ago). Its carvings are quite different from those in the mature, realistic style found elsewhere in the halls; they depict squat, ovoid humans with huge eyes and gaping mouths, wielding spears against lizards.

Trap: The coffer's lock contains a difficult-to-locate (-5%) needle coated with a hallucinatory poison. Those affected by its remaining 4 doses immediately believe two things: 1) the coffer is cursed and must not be touched, and 2) that the poisoned character will die in 1-2 days due to the poison. Neither delusion is true.

Treasure:

The seat of justice would bring 4,500 gp if disassembled correctly and sold to an Archontean noble or official. The ivory coffer contains nothing, but is itself worth 395 gp.

5-26: Archontean Officers' Quarters

The door to this chamber can only be opened if the last lever in 5-28 is pulled. The chamber is 15' tall and decorated with a pale-blue wash of paint on all surfaces. Eight rotting wood-and-canvas camp beds, eight wooden chests, and four wooden armoires fill the chamber. The canvas of the camp beds is too far gone to be usable, and the chests and armoires have mostly been cleared of valuables. A few items remain to be found by those who spend 2-4 turns searching.

Treasure:

A battered, but still usable set of Sacred Band banded mail; this armor weighs 10 lb less than the usual sort of banded mail, but is quite distinctive and will bring unpleasant questioning from any current members of the Sacred Band (the armor was Georgios's – see 5-20); a beautiful, yellow-and-purple silk archon's tunic (110 gp); a Sortian baculus +1, imbued with detect magic (see new magic items); and a small octavo codex with a unique epic poem composed by Adrienic himself and entitled the Adrieniad (see Arden Vul Books).

5-27: Collapsed Stairwells

The stone doors to each of these three areas are locked and stuck. They may be opened in one of two ways: 1) activating the correct lever in 5-28 causes all three to open automatically, releasing their inhabitants; 2) making a successful pick locks roll followed by a successful open doors check opens one door.

Once the doors are open, each of the three areas is identical. They feature a narrow, 6' corridor that extends for about 8' before ending in a cave-in; the beginnings of stairs leading down are visible amid the rubble. Each of the three areas also contains a wight, imprisoned here by Kalliston (5-24) before the great defeat at the Cave of Blood (7-76).

Inhabitants:

1. 3 wights: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 4+3; HP 33, 29, 27; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4. Special attacks: energy drain. Special defenses: silver or magic needed to hit; immune to sleep, charm, hold, cold, poison, and paralysis.

5-28: Niche of the Levers

The undecorated, stone double-doors possess 1"-diameter, 9"-deep keyholes. They open if one silver and one gold rod of the appropriate diameter is inserted into the two keyholes.

The space beyond the double doors may appear anticlimactic: it is a 4'-deep niche, on the floor of which sit six heavy steel levers. Despite obvious assumptions that each lever operates a different one of the doors in 5-25, only two of the levers produce an effect: the first and the last. If the first (southeastern most) lever is pulled, all three sets of doors to 5-27 open, as does the door to 5-29. If the last (northwestern most) lever is pulled, all three sets of doors to 5-27 open, as does the door to 5-26. The other four levers grind when pulled, but do nothing.

5-29: Treasure Chamber

Pulling the first lever in area 5-28 is the only way to open the door to this 10'-tall chamber. The walls and ceiling of the chamber are bright with paint or, in the case of the ceiling, gilt. The walls depict a variety of Archontean imperial imagery, much of which will be familiar because it is relatively recent (only 250 years old). The southwest wall depicts a band of legionaries marching in close formation, wearing segmented banded mail and brandishing spears and gladii. The northeast wall shows a distinguished, bearded man in a yellow tunic sitting in a large wooden chair (identical to the one in 5-25), while two sets of humans gesticulate at each other and at him. The northwest wall has an enormous, 10'-tall painting of the torso and head of Adrienic, complete with oiled, ringleted hair, hawk nose, glittering black eyes, and a stern expression. All of the figures are shown in the modern style, namely as slightly elongated, slender figures with copious swirled drapery (where appropriate).

A large stone table in the center of the room is piled high with valuables. Beneath it are two locked wooden chests. On an armor rack next to the table is a gilded, impressive-looking suit of cursed armor of arrow attraction (chain mail; see new magic items).

GM Note: This chamber served as the treasury for the doomed Archontean expedition to the Halls led by Adrienic (see 5-18). After the loss of nearly the entire force, the survivors retreated with what they could take; this chamber contains the valuables that they could not take.

Stone Table: On it are two large jade candlesticks (50 gp each); a 25-lb jade statuette of a bear with opals for eyes (1,550 gp); an iron key to area SL8-1; a hammered gold ceremonial headdress inset with lapis and colored glass (250 gp, 3' tall, and weighing 8 lb); two small (3'x5') silk carpets (200 gp each); a set of six delicate crystal goblets (50 gp each); a solid gold hoplite helmet (375 gp, but useless in combat); a rosewood box with two tears of Kauket (see new magic items) and a token of Arden (see Arden Vul items) wrapped in silk; an ever-full inkwell (see new magic items); and a set of the eyes of Poi (see new magic items).

Chest #1: The lid has two images burned into it via pyrography: a yellow hoplite helmet and a white sheep's head (the sign of the 2nd Legion, five cohorts of which were annihilated below). Alas, the lock has been smashed and the chest is empty.

Chest #2: The lid has the same two images burned into it, but the lock is intact. Inside the chest are 20,000 sp in neat stacks. This was one of the pay chests of the Sheepshead Rangers (2nd Legion).

Secret Door (northwest): This door is difficult to locate (1 in 8). It may only be opened by brute force (i.e., an open doors check).

Treasure:

See above.

5-30: Secret Rudishva Chamber

Both the narrow corridor and the chamber beyond are clad in black granite sheathing; in addition, the corners have been rendered smooth, such that the corridor feels more like a tube than a rectangular corridor. The chamber is 10' tall and spotlessly free of dust and other debris. In the center chamber is a white console 4' tall. The console includes a set of buttons with glyphs on each of them and a darkened glass screen. Sadly, the screen is cracked and no power runs to the console; it is useless. Attached to the front of the console is an envelope made of a flexible plastic; inside the envelope are pale green, orange and pink rudishva identity plaques (see new technological items).

5-31: Lesser Rudishva Teleportation Hall

The door to this chamber is an 8'-diameter rudishva iris door. It opens by touching a pale green, pink, orange, silver or yellow rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items) to the accompanying panel.

Beyond the door, stairs descend 25' to a set of three small, semi-oval chambers. The corridor and the three 'rooms' have no sharp corners, are spotlessly clean, and feature beautiful matched black granite sheathing. In each of the rooms a 5'-diameter circle of silvery material is inset in the floor, with a 10"x10" square of the same material affixed to the wall. Each square has a different rune etched into the silvery material.

The rudishva built these niches to be part of their teleportation network. To activate them, one stands on a silvery circle and touches the adjacent silvery square; teleportation to the appropriate location is instantaneous.

Teleport Nodes:

T12: access to the armory (5-118) [see note below]

T13: access to the drowned Canyon (SL6-3)

T14: access to the transit hall on Level 6 (6-162)

T12 is on the fritz, and will malfunction 50% of the time. If a malfunction is indicated, roll on the following chart for the result:

D8	Malfunction
1-3	Sizzle, hiss, but no other effect
4	Crackle of electricity, take 1-6 damage
5	Redirect: teleport to 5-110 (T6)
6	Redirect: teleport to 5-92 (T1)
7	Sizzle, and 3 chasm cephalopods appear in the chamber, drawn to the teleportation activity
8	Severe cosmetic injury to body part (GM's choice), causing -1 CHA permanently

Inhabitants:

1. 3 small chasm cephalopods (see new monsters), potentially drawn to the malfunction: SZ S; AL N; AC 5; MV 60' flying (Class A); HD 2; HP 13, 12, 11; #AT 5 (4 tentacles and a beak); Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-3/1-3/1-4; MR 25%. Special attacks: surprise on 1-4.

5-32: Spider Webs

The spider webs from 3-37 extend down the chasm to this point. Spiders may be encountered here just as in that location.

Inhabitants:

1. huge or giant spiders: see 3-37 for number and stats.

5-33: Chasm Cephalopod Lair, with Tunnel up to Level 4 (4-87)

This 30'-tall cave is a home to a pod of chasm cephalopods. Ten of the creatures dwell here, but only 4 are present at any one time. Amid some polished bones on the floor is a rucksack.

An opening 15' up on the north wall leads to a tunnel that snakes gradually upwards about 100' to Level 4 (4-87).

Inhabitants:

1. 10 small chasm cephalopods (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 5; MV 60' flying (Class A); HD 2; HP 15, 14, 14, 13, 13, 12, 12, 11, 11, 8; #AT 5 (4 tentacles and a beak); Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-3/1-3/1-4; MR 25%. Special attacks: surprise on 1-4.

Treasure:

Inside the rucksack is a jade cup of life restoration (see new magic items) and a useful note and map written on the back of an empty spell-scroll. The note, written in Thorcin, reads: "We entered the halls once the imperials had fled, for Eadred had good information about an unlooted tomb, of a certain Sethu, one of the bird-god's priests. It was said to be northwest of the Imperial Span, along the chasm face. So, passing through the pyramid, we dispatched some brigands and made our way down the priests' so-called hidden stair to the grotto by the Hall of Forty Pillars. We proceeded east to the Imperial Span, only to find it had fallen and enemies lurking on the north side. Gyth suggested returning to the public chambers and using ropes to scale down the cliff face. As we proceeded, Gyth located an obscured circular portal just opposite the nobles' tombs. We entered eagerly, and Eadred and Mirko ran forward; but I knew it was a mistake, for the decoration was not that of the ibis lords. A giant skeleton confronted us, and Eadred and Mirko fell. Gyth and I retreated, and descended another 80'. Finally we found the tomb of Sethu, where it was predicted - northeast of the Span, and east and below the tomb where Eadred and Mirko fell. Gyth's sharp eyes noticed this cave across the chasm, and it seemed a safe place to rest. We used my magicks to cross the chasm and I prepared to rest. Gyth amused himself taking bowshots at some floating things. When I awake we will complete our quest!"

GM Note: The rolled-up note refers to the following locations: the tomb of Sethu (areas 5-57 to 5-62); the Imperial Span, now known as the Sundered Span (5-35); the pyramid (areas AV-15, UP-1, and 3-1); the hidden stair (3-12); the grotto (5-2); the Hall of Forty Pillars (5-6); the circular portal and tomb with giant skeleton (3-39); and the chasm (3-38 or 5-34). The floating things are chasm cephalopods (see new monsters).

5-34: Great Chasm

One of the iconic features of the Halls, this massive fissure extends through most of the dungeon levels and provides a sure, if difficult, means of vertical navigation of the Halls. The fissure is generally shaped like a triangular prism, with its apex about 50' above Level 2. The prism extends downward 1,600' through the Halls until it levels out at the floor of the great chasm (9-1) many hundreds of feet below.

The chasm is quite wide on this level, and is subject to more varied potential encounters. Key features of the chasm include the first waterfall (5-2A) which renders an area 50' in diameter around it both humid and noisy, the Sundered Span (5-35), and the upper section of the Troll Lift (5-54). The moisture from the waterfalls ensures that the walls of the chasm are lined with creepers, vines, lichen mats, and so forth. Numerous other points of access to the chasm exist on this level.

Secret Door (to 5-40): The door is difficult to locate (1 in 8), since it is concealed by a heavy growth of creepers and camouflaged to look like natural stone; it can only be opened by force. The second secret door, leading to 5-40 proper, is easy to locate (1 in 4) and opens only to an open doors check.

Concealed door (to 5-57): A curtain of hanging creepers conceals the entrance to Sethu's tomb. Originally a plaster plug textured to look like the surrounding stone obscured the entrance, but a 6'-diameter hole has been cut in the plaster, thus allowing access to the inquisitive.

Random encounters use the following table; roll every three turns, with a 1 in 6 chance for an encounter.

D100	Encounter
01-10	Party of NPC adventurers (select from NPC appendix)
11-15	1-3 carcass creepers: SZ L; AL N; AC 3 (head) or 7 (body); MV 120'; HD 3+1; HP 19, 18, 17; #AT 8; Dmg nil. Special attacks: paralysis
16-20	1 smoke mephit: SZ M; AL CE; AC 4; MV 120', 240' flying (Class B); HD 3; HP 19; #AT 2; Dmg 1-2/1-2. Special attacks: breath weapon; flame damage on death. Special: invisibility (1/day); dancing lights (1/day); gate 1-2 mephits (20% chance)
21-25	3-6 vapor rats: SZ S; AL C(N); AC 6 (or special); MV 120', 60' swimming, 10' floating; HD 2; HP 14, 12, 11, 10, 10, 8; #AT 1; Dmg 1-2. Special attacks: noxious fumes on death. Special: gaseous form
26-30	2-4 gargoyles: SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 90', 150' flying (Class C); HD 4+4; HP 31, 28, 26, 25; #AT 4; Dmg 1-3/1-3/1-6/1-4. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit
31-35	1-3 imps: SZ S; AL LE; AC 2; MV 60', 180' flying (Class C); HD 2+2; HP 16, 14, 13; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4; MR 25%. Special attacks: poison. Special defenses: silver, or +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to fire, cold and electricity; save vs magic as 7 HD creatures. Special: polymorph self (to animal form); detect magic; detect good; detect magic; invisibility; regenerate 1 hp/round, suggestion 1/day
33-40	1-2 poltergeists: SZ M; AL LE; AC 10; MV 60'; HD 1-4 HP; HP 3, 2; #AT 0; Dmg special. Special attacks: throw object, a hit causes fear (throws as a 5 HD creature). Special defenses: invisible; silver, or +1 or better weapons to hit
41-45	Gimon, from 6-167 (see new monsters): SZ M; AL N; AC 7; MV 60', 150' flying (Class D); HD 6; HP 40; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/1-6; MR 25%. Special defenses: cannot be surprised; immune to cold

Special attacks: poison. Special defenses: immune to cold and fire
91-95	Roll on Upper Zone table (see 2-63A)
96-100	Roll on Lower Zone table (see 7-3)

Chasm Color:

The GM might decide to play up the creepy and mysterious nature of the chasm. Roll every 3 turns, with a 1 in 6 chance for a chasm sound effect.

D8	Noise/Effect
1	Loud hissing
2	Moaning (of the wind?)
3	A roar
4	A shriek
5	A loud clap (a sharp, brief noise)
6	An echoing voice (undecipherable)
7	A flash of bright light for 3 second
8	Fluting, of a tuneless sort

5-35: The Sundered Span

This ancient bridge dates to the heqeti period and is an iconic location within Arden Vul. For centuries it was known as the Imperial Span; only in 2759 AEP did it acquire its new name, for it was then that Sibillire the mage (5-19) sundered the bridge in a desperate attempt to protect the fleeing remnant of the Archontean expeditionary force from the victorious varumani. The bridge is a 10'-wide, gently curved, solid stone span that lacks its central 15'. This fact renders the remaining pieces rather weak and susceptible to crumbling. The troll thegn (7-30) ordered a rickety, 3' plank of wood to be laid across the missing span, allowing passage across the Chasm.

Note: The stone sections of the Sundered Span are slick with moisture from the waterfall (5-2A). The sound from the waterfall increases chances for surprise while in the chasm.

5-36: Tomb of Muirasso, False Burial Chamber

This complex holds the tomb of Muirasso, one of the archons of Arden Vul in antiquity. This first chamber is the false tomb. It is decorated in a gaudy Thothian scheme, with bright cerulean walls. The east wall has a large fresco of seven administrators of Arden Vul flanking Muirasso, all dressed in orange ceremonial Thothian garb. Large gold letters read 'Muirasso, Archon of Arden Vul' in Mithric. The north and south walls each boast two half-column statues of priests of Thoth, covered in flaking gold paint. Crammed against the east wall is a pile of impressive looking furniture, all apparently clad in gold gilt (it is actually golden paint). A 6'-diameter column of shimmering air occupies the center of the room. In the column floats a mummified human body. The body is dressed in orange silk and wears both a golden ceremonial helmet and a green stone necklace (apparently jade, but actually just stone). The corpse carries an iron ankh in its crossed hands.

Magic Mouth: When anyone enters the chamber, a permanent magic mouth placed on the statues booms forth in stentorian Mithric tones, saying "You have found me. Let me lie!"

Trap: The column of air supporting the mummified corpse is the trigger for a trap. The corpse remains levitated in the column of air until (or if) the golden helmet is removed. If the helmet is removed, the body crashes to the floor, and the statues shout "You should have let me lie!" Poison gas pours out of the statues' mouths, filling the chamber in 1 round. Those still present must save or die (+1 to saves); even if the save is made, victims take 1-4 HP damage per round. The gas dissipates in 3 hours. The trap resets in 3 hours.

Concealed Door: Three of the four statues are fixed to the wall. One is not, and if shifted, reveals a concealed door to 5-37.

Treasure: The furniture is valueless, as the 'gilt' is nothing more than yellow paint. The golden helmet is bronze covered in a thin gold veneer (15 gp). The necklace is worthless.

5-37: Tomb of Muirasso: Entrance

The corridor from 5-36 is choked with cobwebs, dust and dirt; no one has traversed it in well over a millennium. This chamber is decorated simply, with a 10'-diameter circle of marble in its center and a painted frieze stretching around the upper edge of the walls. The frieze repeats the following phrase in cramped Mithric letters: "Knowledge of Thoth and His Mysteries Reveals the Way." Around the circle in the center of the room are four 6'-tall, 3'-square blocks of granite. The blocks are carved to represent the classic image of the 'scribe', with knees bent to the chest. On the folded knees of each scribe is a different object, also of stone. Each block carries an inscription in Mithric and boasts an 8"-square open hole. If the correct item is deposited into the hole, a magical effect will be produced. Manipulation of the scribes is also the only way to progress further into the tomb (by manipulating either scribe 3 or 4). It should be noted that the inscriptions are crucial clues to manipulation of the scribes, since two of the inscriptions state facts that are palpably untrue, at least if one knows anything about the cult of Thoth.

First Scribe: The object on its knees is a torch. The inscription reads: "Thoth consumes Light." The item to be deposited is any light source (torch, lantern, continual light rock, etc.). As it is untrue that Thoth consumes light (rather, he sheds light on knowledge), anyone who deposits a light source into the hole is blinded (save vs. spells at -2 or no effect). The blinding is permanent, but can be removed by the usual magical means.

Second Scribe: The object on its knees is a small figurine of a human being. The inscription reads: "Thoth Consumes the Ka." If any intimate object (hair, nails, a piece of personal clothing, etc.)

is deposited in the hole, the depositor must save vs petrification at -2 or die. After all, Thoth is not a death god, and anyone with knowledge of his cult would know that.

Third Scribe: The object on its knees is a scroll. The inscription reads: “Thoth consumes Sorcerous Wisdom.” If a scroll with any number of spells of any level is deposited in the hole, a loud ‘click’ is heard as the door to 5-38 opens. Although Thoth does impart wisdom, it is also true that he avariciously acquires it (e.g., the statue in 3-2).

Fourth Scribe: The object on its knees is a wand. The inscription reads “Thoth Consumes Magic.” If any magical item is deposited in the hole, it will be disenchanting, and a loud click will be heard as the door to 5-38 opens. Thoth is the source of magic, but also avariciously collects it.

5-38: Tomb of Muirasso: Main Tomb

The door to this chamber is stone and magically locked. Properly manipulating scribe # 3 or #4 in area 5-37 is the only way to open it. The interior of the chamber is decorated sumptuously with painted bas-reliefs in Thothian schemes, and shows a series of servants carrying rich items (incense, cloth, precious stones, ivory, etc.) towards a panel of seven priests (along the southwest wall), the largest of whom is labeled ‘Muirasso’.

Three sarcophagi, each 6’ long, 3’ wide, and 4’ tall, rest in the center of the chamber. The northwestern sarcophagus is that of Muirasso, while the central and southeastern ones are trapped red herrings. Muirasso’s sarcophagus is the least well decorated, with only a thinly etched sketch of a scarab beetle on its lid and the following curse repeated in the secret tongue of the priests of Thoth around the edge of the lid: “Those who disturb the Archon’s Rest will Become Bones and Dust.” The lids of the other two are richly carved to depict realistic (if stylized) faces, bodies, scarabs, and rods of authority. The gold gilt and lapis inlay is worth 50 gp per lid.

Trap 1: If the lids of any of the three sarcophagi are disturbed, undead servitors will free themselves from the bas-reliefs on the walls and attack, and Muirasso himself will rise from his sarcophagus to attack. Two servitors activate per round until there are 12 in total.

Trap 2: If the lids of either of the two false sarcophagi are disturbed, they will release a sickly green gas that quickly fills the room. This gas serves to regenerate the undead servitors and Muirasso the wight at the rate of 2 HP per round. It does not, however, bring them back to life if they are slain by ordinary means. The gas also prevents the undead from being turned.

Secret Door (southwest): The door is normal to find and is locked. As the key is long gone, it only opens if the lock is picked or the door battered down.

Inhabitants:

- 12 undead servitors (zombies): SZ M; AL N; AC 8; MV 60’; HD 2; HP 14, 14, 12, 12, 11(x3), 10(x3), 9, 9; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8. Special: always strike last.
- Muirasso, wight: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 120’; HD 4+3; HP 33; #AT 1; Dmg 1-4. Special attacks: energy drain. Special defenses:

silver or magic needed to hit; immune to sleep, charm, hold, cold, poison, and paralysis.

Treasure:

Muirasso’s sarcophagus contains 6,936 ancient copper bits and 2,564 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items), a glowing long sword (false dweomer: no actual bonus), a stoppered jug of purple mist (see new magic items), and two alabaster flasks filled with a bright blue liquid (potions of poison). The two false sarcophagi each contain an open canopic jar (their crocodile-head lids lie next to the jars); these are the source of the green gas; if the lids are replaced on the jars, the flow of gas stops. The gas is inexhaustible, but only while in this tomb complex. Each jar is worth 1,000 gp to an evil necromancer.

5-39: Tomb of Muirasso: Trapped Corridor and Secret Doors

A symbol (fear) is inscribed on the ceiling of this dusty, undecorated corridor, half-way down its length. Secret doors are present at either end.

Secret Door (northeast, to 5-38): The door is normal to find, and is locked; it must be picked or battered down.

Secret Door (southeast, to 5-40): This door is easy to find (1 in 4). It is locked, and the key is long gone; it must be picked open or broken down.

5-40: Tomb of Muirasso: Treasury

Muirasso’s treasure is piled in this chamber. The ceiling is low (6’ tall), and the walls rough and undecorated. Three stone chests and four rotted leather sacks lie in the center of the room. Lined up along the southwest wall is a set of twenty shabti figurines (each 10” tall) of solid gold.

Secret Door (northeast): This door is easy to find (1 in 4). It opens only to physical force (an open doors check).

Secret Door (northeast, into the chasm): The door is easy to find from this side (1 in 4). Pushing an apple-sized indentation on the wall causes the door to swing open. From the side of the chasm, the door is difficult to locate (1 in 8), since it is concealed by a heavy growth of creepers and camouflaged to look like natural stone; it can only be opened by force from the chasm side.

Trap(s): Each of the chests is trapped with a poison needle; those failing to locate the trap and to save versus poison die instantly.

Treasure:

Chest 1: four alabaster and gold canopic jars, worth 200 gp each. One contains a huge azurite (300 gp), while another contains a pair of keys to the hematite doors (3-177). The other two contain a total of 4 scrolls, one of rope trick, one of invisibility 10’ radius, one of Pol’s inner eye (see new spells), and one of enchanted weapon.

Chest 2: mace of Muirasso (see new magic items), as well as his ring of protection +1, his amulet of courage (see new magic items), and his rod of turning with 20 charges (see new magic items)

Chest 3: eight glass flasks containing potions of extra healing (x2), clairvoyance, clairaudience, frost giant strength, human control, deafening light, and dispelling (see new magic items for the last two).

Rotted leather sacks: 25,387 ancient copper bits; 13,902 ancient silver pennies; 7,477 ancient gold solidi; and 737 ancient octagonal platinum coins (see Arden Vul items for all).

20 golden shabtis: in various poses (carrying goods, hunting, fishing, etc.). Each is worth 1,750 gp, but each weighs 20 lb

5-41: Broken Hall

This hall was once a near mirror image of the Hall of Forty Pillars (5-6), but it has suffered catastrophic damage over the millennia. A 20' arch leading to a gloomy, arched (but pillar-less) ruin of heqetiera pebbled stonework is all that remains. An aura of brooding menace prevails, as the Hall is silent, clammy, and oppressive. Twenty feet into the hall the ceiling has collapsed, rendering further passage impossible. Despite its decrepitude, the hall is remarkably free of dust and dirt, due to the passage of the goblins from 5-43. Still, three apparent exits lead from the hall. To the northeast is a short passageway that ends in another cave-in. It is filled with cobwebs, within which is the dried husk of a goblin; no spiders are present, however. A second passage leads to area 5-42; it is difficult to locate, being merely a narrow slit in the rubble near the cave-in. The third exit is the 8'-diameter hole in the pavement.

Hole to 5-43: A steeply sloping mound of rubble leads downward from this 8'-wide hole in the pavement. The ramp descends downward about 40' at a 45-degree angle towards area 5-43. The rubble is difficult to navigate (½ movement). At the foot of the mound is a barrier made of interwoven sticks (see description at 5-43).

5-42: Beetles, Bodies, and Doors to a Vault (SL6-55A)

This area is accessed by a narrow passage through the rubble from 5-41. Two objects dominate the room: a pair of huge bronze doors (15' tall) and an enormous stone scarab beetle (8' long, 4' wide, 3' tall) that sits on the floor in front of the doors. The bronze doors are featureless save for a circular inset (10" in diameter and 1" deep) on the left door. It is clear that an object can be placed into the inset. Around the enormous stone beetle are splayed the corpses of three goblins and one completely desiccated human, the latter still clad in the red robes of the cult of Set. Observant PCs might be able to view from the entrance some coin-sized gold objects (gold scarab beetles) around the corpses. The beetles serve as a protection and opening mechanism for the bronze doors.

Stone Scarab and Lesser Scarabs: The stone scarab is carved to resemble a great stag beetle, with inlaid jade and lapis to accentuate the pattern. The beetle's back also contains twenty-five round inset holes; twenty-four of the insets are 2" in diameter while one, closest to the eyes of the stone beetle, is 5" in diameter. Seventeen of the small insets are filled with gold and ivory miniature versions of the larger beetle; the other seven small insets, as well as the 5" one, are empty.

Opening the Bronze Doors: The bronze doors can only be opened by manipulating the clever, and potentially dangerous, locking mechanism designed by the priesthood of Set in antiquity. To open the doors, one must place a 10"-diameter golden scarab beetle into the appropriate inset hole on the left-most door. Currently that golden scarab is held within the closed mandibles of the large stone scarab (the 10" scarab is not visible so long as the stone beetle's mandibles are closed). The stone scarab's mandibles may only be opened when all 24 small (2"-diameter) and the one medium (5"-diameter) scarabs have been placed into the appropriate insets on the back of the stone scarab. When this happens, the mandibles of the stone scarab open, revealing the gleaming 10"-diameter beetle. The bronze doors will remain open for 6 hours, after which the large scarab will fly back to the mandibles of the stone beetle, which will in turn close. The doors could be spiked open, however. Behind the doors are a set of stairs leading down some 300' to the hidden Archontean vault designed to hold rudishva artifacts (SL6-55, via SL6-55A).

Trap (scarab beetles): Greed is the trigger for a nasty trap. The small and medium scarab beetles activate and attack intruders under certain conditions. First, they are only eligible to activate and attack if they are not at rest in the great stone scarab; that is, only those beetles already on the floor or pried out of the stone scarab will attack intruders. Second, all such beetles immediately attack anyone touching the bronze doors. Third, all loose beetles eventually attack once removed from the stone scarab even if the bronze doors remain untouched; it takes 1-3 turns for each small scarab to activate and attack, and 1-3 hours for the medium scarab to do the same. The scarabs can also be deactivated (and then only temporarily) if they are inserted into a ball of dung that coats them completely. Dispel magic also neutralizes (permanently) 4-6 beetles per casting. The GM should remember that 7 small scarabs are currently lying among the corpses; these will thus activate in 1-3 turns.

GM Note: It is perfectly possible for cautious PCs to avoid the dangerous scarabs and pass through the bronze doors without incident. To do so, they must restore all the small scarabs to their insets on the back of the stone scarab before these pests activate and attack; they must also discover the medium scarab (see Treasure below) and similarly restore it to its proper resting place.

Inhabitants:

1. 24 small gold scarab beetles (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 0 or 6; MV 60; 120' flying (Class C); HD 2; HP 16(x3), 15(x3), 14, 13, 12, 11, 10 (x4), 9 (x3), 8 (x3), 7 (x3); #AT 1; Dmg 1-4. Special attacks: burrow through soft tissue (2-5 HP/rd); attack as 4 HD creature. Special defenses: half damage from slashing or piercing attacks; immune to all magic except dispel magic.
2. 1 large gold scarab beetle (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 2 or 6; MV 60; 90' flying (Class C); HD 5; HP 31; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8. Special attacks: burrow through soft tissue (2-8 HP/rd); attack as 10 HD creature. Special defenses: half damage from slashing or piercing attacks; immune to all magic except dispel magic.

Treasure:

Each small scarab is worth 150 gp if successfully removed and disarmed. The medium scarab is worth 500 gp. The large scarab is worth 2,000 gp. Scarabs that have been battered in combat are worth ½ their normal value. The goblins possess 3-36 sp total, as well as a rusty short sword and a battered shield. The dead priest of Set carries a pouch in which is a desiccated ball of dung some 6" in diameter; within the dung is the dormant medium scarab. The gold and lapis inlay of the stone scarab can be pried out without danger: it is worth 150 gp.

5-43: Goblin Guardpost

A wicket of interwoven sticks some 15' deep blocks the entranceway to this rough-hewn cavern; it will take a turn to figure out how to navigate the tricky path through the wicket. The room is cool and damp, and is devoid of interest save for its inhabitants. A dozen goblins led by a captain will be here at all times. The goblins expect to parlay, but will respond with violence if need be. If a party shows itself to be peaceful and seeks discussion, the captain escorts its members to Killik in 5-46. The wicket is quite damp and unlikely to catch fire.

Inhabitants:

1. 12 goblins: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 7, 6, 6, 5(x3), 4(x3), 3, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.
2. Goblin captain: SZ 2; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1; HP 7; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8 (sword).

5-44: More Goblins

A small unit of goblin warriors occupies this cave. They serve as reinforcements for their comrades in 3-7 in case of renewed threat from Phlebotomas Plumthorn and his halflings (see 3-5). The rough stone chamber has some sleeping pallets, a small fire of burning wood and dung, and a water barrel. These goblins expect to parlay with anyone arriving from the tunnel at 5-44A. Those wishing to negotiate - if acting honorably and respectfully - are conducted to area 5-46 to consult with Killik. If negotiations with 'visitors' go badly, one goblin rushes to area 5-45 so as to bring the subterranean lizards to the fight within 4 rounds.

Inhabitants:

1. 10 goblins: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 7, 6, 5(x3), 4, 4, 3, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.

5-44A: Tunnel Up to Level 3 (3-7)

This tunnel climbs steeply upward for 250' emerging at area 3-7.

5-45: Goblin Pets

The goblins have penned here - and partially tamed - two giant subterranean lizards. Two goblin tamers bunk in with their pets. The cave has a water hole, several partially devoured corpses (of goats, beastmen, and others), two sharp sticks (goads), and two crude saddles. Loud snorts and sharp cries echo from the cave.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 subterranean lizards: SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 6; HP 37, 35; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12. Special attacks: double damage on a natural roll to hit of 20.
2. 2 goblins: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 5, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.

5-46: Goblin Commander

This area is a combination of natural caves and ancient worked stone. The worked stone is very old, being of the same vintage as the Hall of Forty Pillars. A pile of debris covers half of the door to 5-52, atop of which is a spear shaft with a scrap of wood. Scrawled on the scrap, in goblin, are the words: "No go! Bad Juju!"

The chamber is the residence of Killik, one of the trusted lieutenants of Weskenim, the Goblin king (SL4-22). Calling himself the "Big Boss of the Wet Caves", Killik spends most of his time lounging on his 'throne,' an ancient wooden armchair hung with bones that he has placed on top of a mound of rubble in front of the door to 5-52. He wears a wooden, man-sized ring on a thong around his neck. Twelve goblin warriors accompany Killik.

Additional features of this room include a tattered brown cloth on which is painted a grinning goblin face; a half-dozen glow-beetle innards hanging from the walls; a huge skull of a lizard, gaudily painted and festooned with feathers; and Killik's hoard, a leather sack hidden in the rubble mound under his throne.

Trapped Puzzle Door (southeast): The door to 5-52 is made of greasy, pebbled stone. In the center of the door is carved a 2'-square, hideous, amphibian-esque face. Two vertical, almond-shaped eyes glare forth over a slit nose and a wide, but tightly-shut, mouth. Four 2"-square indentations in the stone are located above and below the face. Although the indentations are covered with grime, cleaning them up a bit reveals that each contains a smaller carving. Clockwise from upper left, the carvings show 1) four heqeti hoppers in a line, each with a spear; 2) a single heqeti hopper pointing his spear directly at the viewer; 3) three heqeti hoppers arranged in a triangle, spearing a human; 4) two heqeti hoppers carrying a dead varumani with their two spears.

To open the door, one must touch the four small square carvings in the proper order. Doing so causes the formerly-closed mouth of the main carving to grind open, revealing an obvious latch for the door. Should the wrong combination be touched, or should the door be subject to violence, a dreadful keqemander demon (see new monsters) is summoned to area 5-52 (see explanation at 5-52). The proper sequence is as follows: 4-3-2-1. [GM: the puzzle is a simple declining number sequence, and the number of heqeti and spears is the main clue. So the first carving to touch has four heqeti; the next should be three, then two, and finally one.]

GM Notes on Killik: Killik is a smart, ambitious goblin. He is proud of his role as the overseer of King Weskenim's operations in this important area of the middle halls. He is fully prepared to negotiate with travelers, and indeed is accustomed to this task. He expects a small 'gift' from travelers who wish to travel between 5-2 and 5-35 (1-10 gp per person). For all of his gregariousness, he expects to be treated with respect. He can offer but little information about the surrounding regions. He knows Gog, of course, and talks respectfully of him (5-2). He also knows Riglon the varumani (5-54) and is familiar with the operation of the Troll Lift; he is a bit more circumspect about Riglon than he is about Gog, as he considers the troll thegn and his operatives to be bullies. Killik has been charmed by the vampire, Cinna Minux (7-122), who occasionally visits him to pump the goblin for information.

If asked about the door to 5-52, he attempts to dissuade friendly visitors from the 'certain doom' that lies behind that door. If pressed he states that 'there is a bad monster in there who eats everyone. Just last month a smarty-pants dwarf with servants arrived with gifts for Killik. We feasted for a long time, but then the dwarf grew curious about our door. Killik told him not to go in, but he insisted. Somehow, he knew the trick! Killik doesn't know the trick, but he has heard the cries of those who do. [shudder]

Killik tried to prevent him, but the dwarf did not listen. And he never returned! So, you see, friends of Killik should not go in! (GM: this is a reference to Jasper Malachite, a dwarven adventurer who was slain in area 5-52).

Inhabitants:

1. Killik, goblin ‘chief’ (as gnoll): SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60’; HD 2; HP 14; #AT 1; Dmg 3-9 (morning star +1). Possessions: morning star +1.
2. 12 goblins: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60’; HD 1-1; HP 7, 7, 6, 6, 5(x3), 4(x3), 3, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6.

Treasure:

In Killik’s hoard: 391 cp; 4,178 sp; 553 gp; a one-inch diameter wooden rod coated in silver (keys for 5-6E or 5-6F); one bracer from a set of bracers of haste (see new magic items; the other bracer is in 3-225); and a strange, disc-shaped object made of a light ‘metal’ and inscribed with bizarre sigils (actually a rudishva lesser power supply – see new technological items). The ring is a ring of higher purpose (see new magic items), the powers of which Killik is entirely ignorant.

5-47: New Goblins in an Old Room

Another set of goblins under Killik’s command inhabit this crumbling, ancient hall marked by greasy, pebbled stonework. The south and west sides of the room are rough, reflecting the collapse of the former ceiling and walls, while the east and north still show some features of the ancient stone-work. In addition, broken but identifiable pavement covers the eastern half of the room; if one sweeps away the dust and dirt (¼ inch of it), a mosaic will be found. The mosaic is fragmentary, but seems to depict a bipedal form with webbed fingers and toes, and an enormous maw. The goblins have rigged several traps in the narrow tunnel leading from 5-48.

Trap #1 (falling block): A falling block trap exists just inside the entrance to 5-47 from 5-48. It is triggered by a trip-wire running an inch from the floor (50% per person to trip it), and delivers 3-18 HP damage to 1-3 persons.

Trap #2 (noise): The goblin witch doctors (SL4-12) have cast Frigg’s flatulence (see new spells) on a smiley face that they painted halfway down the corridor between 5-47 and 5-48. Whenever any intruder passes within 5’ of the smiley face, a loud ‘raspberry’ sound will echo down the corridor, alerting the goblins in 5-47.

5-48: Broken Hall

This formerly grand hall leading to the Sundered Span (5-35) has fallen into decrepitude, as its barrel-vaulted ceiling is crumbling, its radiating passages have collapsed, and its statuary has worn down to mostly-shapeless lumps. The stonework is ancient, pebbled, and slightly greasy. Several score large toads inhabit the chamber (as in area 5-6, although none are transformed adventurers). Along the southeast wall stand four 8’-tall statues; the statues are shapeless bipeds, with all distinguishing racial or personal features worn away by time. Each carries an equally shapeless weapon (treat as clubs). The statues animate when 5-48 is entered, although they do not pursue down the tunnel to 5-47, nor do they approach within 30’ of the Sundered Span (5-35). Once intruders have reached either of these areas, the statues return to their posts along the southwestern wall. Seasoned travelers in the Halls know to rush between 5-35 and 5-47, thereby avoiding any threat.

There is a slight chance (10%) of encountering some intelligent denizens here on their way to or from the Sundered Span:

5-49: Goblin Squatters

A band of goblins led by a goblin sub-chief inhabits this rectangular room of worked stone. The goblins are here to watch for intruders from the chasm.

The room is actually of more interest than the inhabitants, for it boasts some intact bas-reliefs from the heqeti period. These carvings run along the upper register of the northwest wall and depict a series of large bipedal amphibians carrying trophies (humans, ritual objects) towards an enormous ziggurat. The carvings represent areas 10-32 to 10-35.

Treasure:

Behind one of the panels of the frieze is a hidden niche that is difficult to locate (1 in 6); to access it, the frieze must be destroyed. In the niche is a 3"-tall onyx icon of a salamander; the icon is an icon of Kauket (see new magic items).

5-50: Netting

A 10'-wide x 5'-tall opening onto the Great Chasm is the major feature of this cave. The goblins have attached some netting made of hooks, wire and rope to the inside of the aperture, thereby hoping to prevent unwanted chasm dwellers from entering their caves. There is a 50% chance that something is caught in the netting:

5-51: Curving Tunnel Down to Sub-Level 4 (SL4-1)

This steeply twisting tunnel leads down some 100' to the Goblin Warrens (SL4-1). The tunnel is natural, but a well-worn path has been beaten into the rock by countless feet.

5-52: Ancient Heqeti Vault

Trapped Door: The door from 5-46 can only be opened if the puzzle (described at 5-46) is solved.

The chamber was a central hall during the period of heqeti domination of these regions of Arden Vul. The ceiling is 25' tall, and the walls are grimy, pebbled, greasy, and streaked with alternating bands of bands of color (ruined frescoes) and reddish brown (blood). Broken statuary lines both walls, and a plinth stands in the northeastern end. Footprints of humanoid are visible in the dust, as are the prints of a giant, 3-toed being (a keqemander – see new monsters). Snapped and broken bones of a variety of types litter the floor.

The statues are all headless (and the heads are all stacked in a pile in area 5-52A) and depict squat, thick-legged humanoid beings (heqeti hoppers – see new monsters). The stumps of these statues are very badly worn with age and vandalism.

Depending on how the PCs entered the room, the plinth may or may not be empty. If the correct sequence of carvings has been touched on the first attempt at 5-46, then the plinth is empty. Otherwise, it is likely that a keqemander demon (see new monsters) is squatting on the plinth. As described in area 5-46, the keqemander is automatically summoned if the wrong sequence of carvings is touched, or if the door is beaten down. In such circumstances the keqemander follows its contract to the letter (see below). There is also a 25% chance that the keqemander will still be present even if the correct tiles on the door were punched; in this case it had been summoned through the actions of some previous unfortunate, and is still waiting out the terms of its contract.

Among the broken bones is the still-enfleshed corpse of the demon's most recent victim, the dwarf Jasper Malachite. Jasper was slain here about a week ago. Jasper's clansman, Utor Malachite, is searching for Jasper's remains (see 7-76).

The terms of the keqemander's summoning obligate it to wait for seventeen days after being summoned and to eliminate all those non-heqeti who trespass into 5-52. After seventeen days it is free to return to the abyss. Still, its chaotic evil nature means that there is a slight (15%) chance that it takes a brief detour once the seventeen days are up, either by teleporting into 5-46 in order to slaughter Killik and his goblins (50%), or by venturing down the tunnel at 5-52B (50%) and thus accessing the chasm floor (via 9-35).

In addition to its normal gate power, which it may use to summon other keqemandri, the keqemander has a 75% chance of summoning three heqeti hopping dead (see new monsters) to its aid at the start of combat.

Inhabitants:

- 1 keqemander demon (see new monsters): SZ L; AL CE; AC -2; MV 90'; 150' flying (Class D); HD 12; HP 83; #AT 3; Dmg 1-4/1-4/3-18; MR 40%. Constant abilities: dread (-1 to saves); infravision. Special attacks: acid spit (3-10 dmg; 30' range, every other round); cause fear; darkness (10' radius); exude acid with chance to degrade armor; use a symbol of discord. Special defenses: only hit by magic weapons; half damage from cold, electricity, fire, and gas; become invisible. Special: levitate; telekinesis (4,000 gp weight); project image; teleport without error; 50% chance to gate in either another keqemander or a Type I-IV demon.
- 3 heqeti hopping dead (see new monsters): SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 3; HP 19, 16, 15; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8. Special attacks: leap; cursed tongue. Special defenses: turned as ghosts; half damage from piercing and edged weapons; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and cold-based spells.

Treasure:

The keqemander has accrued a substantial pile of loot over the centuries, more through boredom and success in battle than through any love of wealth: 15,492 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items); 6,859 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items); six painted glass cups with gilt and lapis (125 gp each); a beautiful silk carpet depicting a scene of mysteries from the temple of Horus (350 gp); a golden ceremonial helmet (125 gp); a scroll containing the spells wizard's cache and Daemon's shadow spell book (see new spells for both); two potions of healing; a potion of diminution; a potion of flying; a soul stone (see new magic items); a mask of the skull (see new magic items); and a ring of faerie (good). Jasper Malachite's body still contains a leather pouch with 113 gp and 57 sp; a set of fine lockpicks (40 gp); an oily soapstone statuette of a salamander (75 gp); and Jasper's dwarven life-stone (see new magic items), now inert of course, but carved with the symbols of clan Malachite.

5-52A: Broken Pillars

This ell features six pillars - five shattered and one intact - amid a thick carpet of dust. In addition, a neat pyramid formed of the heads of the heqeti statues from 5-52 stands in the exact center of the ell. Bound by a levitation charm to the top of the intact pillar is a leather satchel in which are found 6 large rhodochrosites (200 gp each), 19 large octagonal platinum coins (see Arden Vul items), and a ring of delusion (appearing as a ring of spell turning).

5-52B: Tunnel Down to Level 9 (9-35)

Amid the rubble of a collapsed heqeti-era side chamber a broad (7' diameter) tunnel heads south, snaking downward some 1,100' before ending up in area 9-35, just off the chasm floor. Although mostly natural, the tunnel does contain sections of worked corridors and stair segments, all of which have the familiar pebbled and slightly oily texture of heqeti construction.

5-53: Landing and Statue

At the northeastern side of the Sundered Span (5-35), in an ancient chamber sheathed in 8'x8' limestone blocks of great antiquity, stands an imposing statue of a varumani wearing chain mail and armed with a huge mattock. The statue is incredibly lifelike; indeed, it is actually the petrified form of one of the troll thegn's housecarls (see 7-29) who fell out of favor with his lord. Perceptive viewers will note that the plinth on which the statue stands is considerably older, and features writhing half-round figures of strange bipeds, troll-like figures (varumani), and amphibian beings. The art style is quite different from that of the halls of Thoth, and dates back to the wars of the rudishva against the heqeti. Several bits of dungeon dressing have been draped on top of the varumani statue: a string of goblin ears, a wax candle with an arrow stuck through it, a blotch of black paint, and a bit of graffiti. If un-petrified, Iklor the true varumani is grateful and offers to help against the troll thegn.

Inhabitants:

1. Iklor the petrified true varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LN; AC 0; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 61; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-

Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8th-level fighter or 8th-level magic user, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: huge two-handed sword +2; ring mail +2.

5-54: Stone Seat

In another ancient chamber dating to the rudishva period sits a massive stone chair, some 5' wide and deep with a seat that rises 4' above the chamber floor. Both the back and seat of the chair bear deep scoring and scratching marks. The floor is composed of 10'-square flagstones, many of which are cracked, pitted, and scorched. The walls are also sheathed in stone blocks that have been worn smooth by age and countless hands (some few traces of paint and incisions may be detected). Like its companions on Levels 3 and 9 (at 3-52 and 9-9), this great chair was originally used for magical clairvoyance within the Halls, but the sigils on the seat that operated those functions have been destroyed; only by locating another iteration of the correct glyph (the glyph of 'Sight') and tracing it can the chair to be reactivated. A still-visible rudishva glyph of sight may be found at area 3-52.

Whatever its earlier function, the chair now serves as the symbol and literal seat of authority of Riglon, vice-overseer of the Troll Lift. Riglon is fairly lazy, and prefers to recline here in the chair, watching his minions work the lift at area 5-55. He and his mates have a keg of Hak's mushroom ale (7-94), two carcasses of large lizards hanging from hooks driven into the walls, a sack of dried mushrooms and fruit, a second sack filled with 1,503 silver sp, and a troll chest keyed to Riglon (see new technological items).

Once Riglon and his band notice the approach of any light-using parties from across the Sundered Span (3-35), the entire group (i.e., Riglon, his goblins, and his minions from 5-55) will be waiting to parlay. If intruders cross the span without light, or arrive from the east, there is only a 25% chance that Riglon or one of his goblins will hear them coming. If intruders manage to arrive undetected, Riglon leaps from his chair, shouts for his minions from 5-55, and then commands (in Varumani) the intruders to halt and offer proper obeisance to the troll thegn's vice-overseer.

Riglon knows Gog (5-2) from the old days, and, despite Gog's outlaw status, treats the old exile with tolerance and a fair amount of respect. Indeed, Riglon is Gog's main source of information concerning current conditions in the court of the troll thegn (7-75).

Riglon has been charmed by the vampire, Cinna Minux (7-122), who occasionally visits him to pump him for information and rumors.

If Riglon likes the PCs, there is a 25% chance he reminds them of the fact that they need a passport to visit the troll thegn's court. In such cases, there is a further 33% chance that he has an extra passport that he will be willing to sell, at the low price of 50 gp per person in the party.

The Troll Lift: Those wishing to use the Troll Lift to pass to Level 6 must negotiate with Riglon. The official tariff set by the troll thegn is 10 sp per leg for delivery from 5-55 to 6-3, but Riglon attempts to charge neophytes (i.e., those who appear naive and/or whom he has never before seen) 1 gp per leg. Riglon happily haggles and, in most cases, can be reduced to 15 sp per leg. This fee must be paid in advance each time one wishes to use the lift. Should PCs be cognizant of the thegn's official tariff, they might be able to threaten to expose Riglon's corruption; successful 'negotiation' of this sort might result in certain immediate benefits (e.g., free passage to 6-3), but it also provokes the undying enmity of Riglon, who will thenceforth work towards the PCs' demise.

There is a 1 in 6 chance that another other group is present in this chamber, negotiating with Riglon for travel on the Lift. Roll on the following table to determine its composition:

D12	Travelers
1-2	4 goblins and a goblin captain bearing tribute to the troll thegn. They will fight on Riglon's side until morale breaks. The tribute is 152 cp, 79 sp, and a golden cup (15 gp). 1. 2 goblins: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 5, 4, 4, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 2. goblin captain: SZ 2; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1; HP 7; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8 (sword)
3	Durdeon Vislok and six companions in the Sodality of the Fist (for stats, see AV-12), traveling between AV-12 and the Arena (6-68). The Sodality are quiet and intense, and only become animated when the Arena and/or boxing is mentioned. They refuse to divulge any information about their route into or out of the Halls.
4-5	3 beastmen and a beastman sergeant travelling to the thegn's court to complain about the laziness of the varumani advisors in 3-162. They have 10 gp with which to smooth their way. They will try to remain neutral if a fight breaks out. 1. 3 beastman troopers (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 7, 6, 6; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spears; short swords; short bows 2. 1 beastman sergeant (see new monsters): SZ S; AL LN; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 2+2; HP 15; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 or 2-5. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spear; war hammer
6-7	2-4 lesser varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 3; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 59, 58, 57, 55; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (mattock, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8 th -level fighters or 8 th -level magic users, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: mattocks; nets and prods; shields; 3-6 randomly determined 'antiquities or curiosities', worth 100-400 gp each. They eagerly support Riglon and, indeed, try to goad Riglon into fighting with the PCs
8	One of the Sun-Scarred Knights (GM's choice which one) on an inscrutable mission. He/she will attempt to mediate if hostilities seem imminent, but will in no way intervene if fighting breaks out. For a list of available knights, see the preface to Sub-Level 10

9	Nolgi the Hunter, a true varumani: SZ L; AL NE; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 62; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 8-26 ( spear +2, 2-20+6). Special defenses: surprised only on 1 in 6; save as 8 th -level fighter or 8 th -level magic user, whichever is better; immune to cold, poison, charm, hold, feeblemind, confusion, and other mind-affecting magic; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: a two-handed spear +2; an enormous mace; a heavy crossbow with 24 bolts; ring mail; two copper arm bands carved with images of heqeti (175 gp the pair); two doses of hunter's friend (see Arden Vul items); a pouch with 111 sp, 78 gp, and two doses of hunter's friend (see Arden Vul items). Nolgi wears a decorative helmet formed out of a couple of heqeti skulls, to which he has attached some streamers of colored cloth. In addition to his usual gear, he is bearing 4-16 baboon pelts (worth 4-40 gp each) to sell in the lower levels. Nolgi is returning from a hunting trip. He is a formidable warrior, but does not much like Riglon and will only assist him 50% of the time.
10	Either a party of NPC adventurers (50%) or a magic user and flunkies (50%) traveling to the Inn of the Lost (areas 6-7 to 6-20). Either group will aid the PCs in a fight, but will blame the PCs for Riglon's death when and if necessary. Select group from NPC appendix
11-12	A mixed party of lesser varumani (2-4), goblins (2-12) and humans (1-6) bearing a captive monster to the lower levels for use in the arena (see 6-68). Roll for creature: 1-3: a giant 4-armed baboon; 4-5: a giant spider; 6-7: a carcass creeper; 8: GM's choice. If combat ensues, they jump to Riglon's defense. They carry 10-100 gp in coins and/or gems and have a 10% chance of bearing 1-4 potions as well. 1. 2-4 lesser varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL LE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 59, 58, 57, 55; #AT 3 or 1; Dmg 3-6/3-6/4-10 or 7-22 (mace, 3-18+4). Special defenses: 33% resistant to mind-affecting magic; immune to cold and poison; save as 8 th -level fighters or 8 th -level magic users, whichever is better; regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision. Possessions: maces; nets and prods; and three portions of varumani knock-out juice (see Arden Vul items) 2. 2-12 goblins: 10 goblins: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 7, 6, 6, 5(x3), 4, 4, 3(x3); #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. 3. 1-6 human arena wranglers: SZ M; AL N; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 6, 5, 5, 4, 4; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 ( spear ). Possessions: leather armor; spear

Riglon carries a spear +3 that he fondly calls "Splitter".

A sack with 1,500 sp, plus mundane foodstuffs

5-55: Upper Troll Lift, leading down to area 6-3

The top-most segment of the Troll Lift stands on this semi-circular platform of stone jutting into the Great Chasm. The platform is open to the chasm, and covered in a badly damaged mosaic that still features images of horned bipeds (rudishva) directing varumani, bird-creatures (varuda) and snakes (kaliyani) against amphibianoid foes.

The Lift proper is composed of several parts: a rectangular opening (5'x10') in the pavement, a pair of 10'-tall iron poles either side of the hole supporting a wooden frame over the hole, guy-lines extending from the side of the platform to the iron apparatus, a pair of iron cranks, over 600' of heavy silk rope coiled around the upper portion of the apparatus, and an iron and wood cage which descends through the rectangular opening some 600' to area 6-3 below. Passage up or down takes 11-20 minutes, and is marked by swaying, creaking, and generally nauseating stops and starts of the iron and wood cage.

Operation of the Lift

Two huge bestial varumani crank the winch to raise or lower the cage. Passage must be arranged with Riglon in area 5-54.

The two bestial varumani laborers – whom Riglon has 'named' Trilti and Gerg - are present here 75% of the time; otherwise (25%) they are taking a break in 5-56. Wherever they are, they are quick to come to Riglon's aid if circumstances demand it (see text of 5-54).

Inhabitants:

1. Trilti and Gerg (75%), bestial varumani (see new monsters): SZ L; AL NE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 61, 50; #AT 3; Dmg 3-6/3-6/3-10. Special defenses: regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision; immune to poison.

5-56: Barracks and Balcony

The original function of this formerly beautifully decorated chamber has been lost. Currently it is the resting place for Riglon, his two bestial assistants, and their eight goblin slaves. The room is smoky from a fire that burns in the center of it, but it smells delicious (the varumani use dried mushrooms as fuel). A 5'-wide archway leads to a small balcony that overlooks the chasm. At any one moment Trilti and Gerg have a 25% chance of being here. Four goblins are always present, poised with spears and crossbows to repel any unwanted chasm-crawlers.

Inhabitants:

1. Trilti and Gerg (25%), bestial varumani: for statistics see 5-55.

2. 4 goblin slaves, armed with crossbows and spears: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 7, 6, 5, 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6 (spear) or 1-4 (light crossbow).

Treasure:

25 lb of dried mushrooms as fuel, 12 musty baboon pelts sewn into three blankets, a set of wooden drinking mugs, a stone water barrel, and a 5,000 gp diamond hidden in the water.

5-57: Tomb of Sethu: False Tomb

A curtain of hanging creepers conceals the entrance to Sethu's tomb. Originally a plaster plug textured to look like the surrounding stone obscured the entrance, but a 6' hole has been cut in the plaster, thus allowing access to the inquisitive. The long tunnel from the chasm is sheathed in painted plaster that shows a string of servitors bearing all manner of goods - mundane as well as valuable - towards the chamber to the northeast.

Halfway down the corridor is a 5'-square block of stone that has clearly fallen from the ceiling; a pair of skeletal legs protrudes from beneath the block.

The chamber is decorated in a similar scheme, with some 20 full-sized images of servitors bearing chests, piles of food, rods, baskets of coins, and so forth towards a figure whose image occupied the northeast wall. An inscription runs along the top of the northeast wall in Mithric: "Sethu, Protonotarius of Arden Vul, High Priest of Thoth, rests here. Those who disturb his rest shall pay!"

The chamber contains a large stone sarcophagus, whose lid lies shattered on the floor. Around the sarcophagus is a litter of broken objects, smashed crockery, violated canopic jars, and empty chests. A dozen random small coins (7 sp and 5 cp), some fragments of gilt wood, and some bits of scroll are all that remain. Lying in the trash are the corpses of two adventurers, who seem to have met their end by being clawed and beaten to death. Next to them is a shattered skeleton of large size. Perceptive PCs will note that the equipment is of extremely archaic vintage; nothing like it has been seen in many centuries.

GM Note: Sethu designed this first room of his tomb to make it look as if plunderers had already cleaned out his tomb.

Secret Door (southeast): Part way down the corridor is a 4'-square secret door leading to the real tomb. It is normal to locate and opens by pressing both eyes of one of the painted servitors at the same time.

Treasure:

7 sp, 5 cp, and an archaic long sword.

5-58: Tomb of Sethu: Antechamber

A narrow corridor (4' wide by 5' high) snakes from the entrance corridor to this antechamber. The antechamber is 8' tall and 10' square. It is jam-packed with with gilt-wood furniture - two bed frames, three frames for hangings, six stools, three chests, and four thin chairs. Amid the furniture are ten 4'-tall stone shabti figures of servants bearing spears and clubs; they are painted a bright shade of orange. The walls are painted in a more elaborate scheme, showing images of Thoth spitting out streams of words, shedding light on darkness, smiting serpents, and treading on amphibians. The wall paint is also gilt.

The shabti warriors are a form of Archontean animated construct (see new monsters); they animate if and when Thoth's breath (see 5-60) reach them. Due to the age of the mechanism, though, there is only a 25% chance for 4-10 shabtis to animate 6 rounds after the trap in 5-60 is triggered. Once animated the shabtis pursue intruders throughout the tomb. If intruders depart, the shabtis return to their posts.

Secret Door (northeast): The door is easy to find (1 in 4), and opens by locating and pressing a button on the northwest wall.

Inhabitants:

1. 10 Archontean animated constructs - shabti warriors (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 13(x10); #AT 1; Dmg 3-8; MR 25%. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; half damage from slashing or piercing weapons (but double-damage from crushing weapons); immune to elemental magic, poison, and mind-affecting spells.

Treasure:

The furniture is potentially valuable (1,500 gp total), but extremely fragile (save vs petrification at +3 to move without breakage). The gilt is worth a total of 30 gp. In the chests is the following: some dried out grain, some dusty nuts and dried fruit; 3,429 ancient copper bits (see Arden Vul items); and a set of copper plates and goblets (15 gp). The shabtis are valuable to a buyer of antiquities; they might bring 50 gp each, although they weigh 50 lb each.

5-59: Tomb of Sethu: Preparation Room

Another 4' x 5' tunnel leads from the secret door to this 8'-tall preparation room. Instead of images, it depicts, in giant letters, the following inscription in Mithric: "The servants of Sethu thrive in the breath of Thoth." The floor of the chamber contains four alabaster canopic jars, each with a solid gold figure on its lid: a jackal, an ibis, a serpent, and a falcon. Surrounding the jars are twelve more 4'-tall, orange-painted stone shabti figurines (Archontean animated constructs – see new monsters) depicting servants carrying spears and clubs.

The shabti warriors animate once the breath of Thoth reaches them, that is, 3 rounds after the trap in 5-60 is triggered. Once animated the shabtis pursue intruders throughout the tomb. If intruders depart, the shabtis return to their posts.

Inhabitants:

1. 12 Archontean animated constructs - shabti warriors (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 13(x12); #AT 1; Dmg 3-8; MR 25%. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; half damage from slashing or piercing weapons (but double-damage from crushing weapons); immune to elemental magic, poison, and mind-affecting spells.

Treasure:

The heads of the canopic jars are solid gold, with lapis eyes. Each is worth 200 gp. Sethu's heart rests inside one of the jars; a 5,000 gp ruby has been stuffed into it.

5-60: Tomb of Sethu: Real Tomb

Another 4'x5' tunnel opens into the real tomb of Lord Sethu. The tomb is 15' high, and all four walls are covered with brightly painted plaster images. The images show the following: Sethu commanding servants to dig [in the Halls], Sethu directing warriors against bipedal salamanders, Sethu offering scrolls before Thoth, and Sethu receiving the obeisance of lesser clergy. The center of the southeast wall holds a huge face of Thoth in frontal view; the face is stone and three dimensional, and features fierce eyes and an open mouth. Above the face is written in Mithric the following inscription: "Sethu lives in the Breath of Thoth." On the pavement before the face is a 7'-long sarcophagus with a three-quarter image of Sethu in full ceremonial robes on its lid. Standing against the (false plaster) walls to either end of the room are another 6 stone shabti warriors (Archontean animated constructs – see new monsters).

Trap #1 (pressure plate and gas): The area of floor from the entrance to the sarcophagus is a pressure plate that is activated when more than 50 lb of weight is placed on it. Once activated, a loud 'click' is heard, and a thick blue-gray gas pours out of the mouth of the carved image of Thoth. This gas obscures vision and fills the true tomb and preparation room within 3 rounds; some of it may also reach the antechamber after an additional 3 rounds. The gas does not affect PCs, but it does animate all shabti figurines that it reaches. Animated shabtis move swiftly to attack intruders. Neutralizing the gas immobilizes the shabti warriors.

Trap #2 (guardian): Should the lid of the sarcophagus of Sethu be disturbed, the Guardian of Sethu (5-61) animates and breaks through the plaster wall to assault the desecrators.

Sarcophagus: Sethu's sarcophagus is still sealed. It contains his mummy, which still wears a golden djed amulet (see new magic items) and two platinum rings. Scattered in the sarcophagus are a pile of coins and five pieces of jade carved as animals.

Inhabitants:

1. 6 Archontean animated constructs - shabti warriors (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 13(x6); #AT 1; Dmg 3-8; MR 25%. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; half damage from slashing or piercing weapons (but double-damage from crushing weapons); immune to elemental magic, poison, and mind-affecting spells.

Treasure:

777 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items); 333 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items); 5 pieces of jade (100 gp each); two platinum rings (150 gp each); and a gold djed amulet (see new magical items).

5-61: Tomb of Sethu: Guardian

A decorated false plaster wall separates this chamber from the main tomb. If Sethu's sarcophagus is opened, the guardian bursts through the plaster. The false wall may be detected as a difficult secret door (1 in 8 chance), although no means of access short of breaking down the wall is apparent. If the room is entered before the guardian has activated, PCs will see a 10'-tall statue of a jackal-headed human carrying a flail in each hand. The statue is painted with bright colors and seems inert, although it will detect as magic.

with bright colors and seems inert, although it will detect as magic. The guardian is a custom-built version of the fearsome imperial stone guardians (see new monsters).

Inhabitants:

1. 1 imperial stone guardian (see new monsters): SZ L; AL N; AC -2; MV 90'; HD 8+3; HP 60; #AT 2; Dmg 3-18/3-18; MR 50%. Special defenses: +2 or better weapons to hit; immune to missiles (including magic missile), fire, cold, mind-affecting spells (e.g. charm), and most immobilizing spells (immune to entangle, hold monster, web).

5-62: Tomb of Sethu: Treasury

A false plaster wall conceals an undecorated stone wall with a 6' stone door in its center. The door is locked. It leads to a small chamber that is packed with riches stored away by Sethu.

Treasure:

Five badly tarnished 4'-tall urns hold the treasure. They appear as base metal if not inspected carefully. They are in fact platinum and extremely valuable (6,000 gp each).

Urn 1: 7,613 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items)

Urn 2: 4,156 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items)

Urn 3: 27,351 ancient copper bits (see Arden Vul items)

Urn 4: 153 ancient octagonal platinum coins (see Arden Vul items)

Urn 5: an ankh of healing with 20 charges (see new magic items);

a scroll with four illusionist spells: mirror image, improved phantasmal force, fear, and suggestion; a wand of magic missiles (20 charges); a staff of power (17 charges); and design notes to the great treasury of Thoth on Level 3 (c.f. 3-2 and 3-23). These notes are composed in the secret tongue of the priests of Thoth, and read: The first priests of our Ibis Lord had an ingenious method for storing Thoth's riches. It involved a three-part ritual, in which each of the three main images of the God was manipulated into the iconic pose. Only then would the way to the treasury be revealed. We are only ants standing on the shoulders of such giants!

5-63: Hidden Stairs Down to Level 8 (8-35)

The door to this chamber is locked. The 15'-tall chamber inside is undecorated save for two 10'-tall stone statues. The grey granite floor is interrupted by an oval 10'x15' plug of white marble; beneath this plug are a set of worn stairs leading down some 1,000' through many landings and turns to Level 8-35. On the marble are carved the following words, in Archontean: "To proceed one must sometimes adopt a new perspective." The plug is retractable, but only by manipulating the statues.

Statues: The western statue is a representation of Larel One-Eye, as a shabbily dressed, slightly hunched fellow with a sack over his shoulder, a phrygian cap, an eye-patch, and a pilgrim's staff (c.f. 3-46). The eastern statue is of Jacinth the Rose, and depicts her with waist-length hair, wearing loose tunic and trousers and a skull cap, and carrying a long-stemmed rose and a slim rapier. The eyes of each statue are incongruous and unrealistic: Larel's are 3"-diameter yellow crystals, while Jacinth's are red crystals of the same size. The eyes detect as magic and are removable.

Accessing the Stairs: The white marble plug retracts for 2 hours if the crystal eyes in the two statues are exchanged (i.e., thereby adopting a 'new perspective'). In other words, if the yellow eyes are given to Jacinth and the red ones to Larel, the cover opens. To open the cover on subsequent visits, the eyes must again be shifted.

Treasure:

Four crystal eyes, with minor enchantments (50 gp each).

5-64: Barricade and Secret Staircase Up to Level 3 (3-52A)

A 5'-tall pile of broken pavement and stone chunks blocks the passage at this point. The corridor to the north of the barricade shows signs of activity, as dust and debris seem to have been swept to either side of the corridor. On the south side of the barricade, however, the dust lies thick and undisturbed. It is easy to climb over the barricade, although those doing so may regret their actions!

GM Note: Durdeon Vislok (see AV-12) uses the secret door leading to 3-52A to gain access to this level and, eventually, to the Arena. He makes sure to cover his tracks, literally.

Secret Door (northeast): The door is difficult to locate from this side (1 in 8 chance). It opens by pulling it outwards by main force. It leads to a 5'-wide staircase that leads up 250' to area 3-52A.

5-65: Dangerous Sinkhole

Time, water and other events have caused a substantial portion of the overhanging rock and earth of this cavern to fall inward. The result is a large sinkhole extending under 5-83. The new sinkhole cavern is 60' tall, of which 40' extend below the level of the worked areas (5-83 and 5-64). Several smaller side passageways lead from the sinkhole to the chasm. The area is damp and humid, and PCs approaching from either side will hear loud slithering and cracking noises from the depths of the sinkhole.

A terrible paralyzing brain (see new monsters) inhabits this sinkhole. The debased monks of the Sanctum (areas 5-77 to 5-83) feed it on occasion, but it supplements its meals by snagging tasty treats that venture too close in the chasm. Sound or light rouse the paralyzing brain from its quiescence; after 1 turn, tentacles rise from the depths and grope after prey.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 paralyzing brain (see new monsters): SZ M; AL NE; AC 4; MV 120' flying (Class A); HD 10; HP 67; #AT 11; Dmg 1-6(x10)/2-12. Special attacks: paralyzation (saves at +2); surprise on 1-3. Special defenses: immune to electricity; tentacles regenerate in 2-3 days.

Treasure:

Amid some debris in the bottom of the sinkhole is a gold key to the Obsidian Gates (5-6D).

5-66 through 5-75: Realm of the Vivisectionist

These areas are the home to a formidable and highly psychotic being, the ancient rudishva known as Psalor-Ki (see 5-74). Psalor-Ki was one of the last offspring produced by the survivors of the wreck of the Beacon over 2,900 years ago. Immune to the heqeti plague which killed most of his people, and finding himself both attuned to magic and practically immune to aging, Psalor-Ki has slowly grown more and more unbalanced as the centuries have progressed. In the first years after the collapse of the rudishva hegemony, he worked with other survivors to try to find a way to prolong all of their lives; for instance, he and Artax-Ris pioneered some risky experiments with the rudishva hyperbaric chambers (see new technological items) that resulted in the creation of the giant rudishva and varumani skeletons (see new monsters). With the failure of these experiments and his own drift into madness, Psalor-Ki was abandoned by (and/or drove away) the other survivors and carved out a small realm for himself in this section of Level 5. He dominates the area through his own formidable powers and through the efforts of his slaves and undead minions. The center of his domain is a horrific laboratory where he experiments on those unfortunate enough to fall into his clutches.

Most of the denizens of Levels 5 and 6 speak of him with dread as "the Master", "the Old One", or "the Drainer." Although the varumani could probably wipe him out if they tried hard enough, long genetic and social conditioning have rendered them wary of him, and he is largely left to his own devices. Riglon, the vice-overseer of the Troll Lift (see 5-54), is palpably afraid of him, largely because it is one of Riglon's tasks to supply Psalor-Ki with whatever he demands (periodically Psalor-Ki will send two ichor spawn with a list of required supplies; the varumani fulfill the request within 3 days). Conversely, Psalor-Ki could probably take a larger role in the politics of the Halls were he not both deranged and obsessed; his powers would certainly allow him to control more of Level 5 should he desire it. Instead, he is content to conduct his mad experiments in isolation. It should be noted that due to his necromantic experiments, including the creation of giant rudishva skeletons, Psalor-Ki is loathed and hated by all the other rudishva survivors.

It is at least conceivable that Psalor-Ki might decide to negotiate with PCs, especially those who have proven themselves mildly competent (perhaps by defeating some of his minions) and somewhat interesting. Any party containing one or more dwarf PCs, however, will find him absolutely inimical, for Psalor-Ki has a particular interest in experimenting with dwarf innards. A kind GM might have Psalor-Ki overwhelm a party of non-dwarven PCs only to assign them a difficult mission: procuring something like the ichor of three chasm cephalopods or a dragon's eye. Note: Psalor-Ki cannot not magically compel the fulfillment of such missions since he lacks the ability to impose a geas; should they recognize this fact, PCs could break their word and flee. Any PCs who abrogate such an agreement with Psalor-Ki incur his lasting enmity; in such cases, he will sense the PCs' presence in any location east of the chasm on Level 5 and will proceed to attack them.

5-66: Great Hall

A landing on the west end overlooks this large, garish hall. The landing sits 15' above the floor of the hall, and the ceiling of the room is another 15' above the landing. A 20'-tall statue stands at the west end. The east end is painted in bright hues of red and yellow, and features four huge (20'-diameter) sunburst medallions inside of which are depicted incarnations of Psalor-Ki (5-74). Torches in sconces on the north and south walls shed a smoky light on the scene. The area reeks of the charnel house.

The statue is of the nataraja, a rudishva depiction of the Lord of the Dance, who is responsible for all creative and destructive impulses. The figure balances on one leg, with the other folded across its front. It is hermaphroditic and boasts six arms which swirl in a rough circle around its head; the arms hold important symbols: a knife, a heart, a lily, a miniature eagle, an ascetic's sandal, and an eye-shaped gem. The figure stands in a basin some 20' in diameter and 2' tall; its eyes continuously weep a viscous red fluid that collects in the pool. Although PCs may suspect otherwise, the nataraja is inert, serving only as a source of the fluid that powers Psalor-Ki's ichor-zombies.

So long as they remain on the landing, PCs are safe. If they descend into the chamber, however, the torches flares and a throbbing, pulse-like bass rhythm commences. Within 1-4 rounds, the minions of the master (ichor spawn – see new monsters) file out of areas 5-67 and 5-68 to confront the intruders. They attempt to grapple intruders and subdue them for inspection by Psalor-Ki. Ichor spawn that have been reduced to zero hit points crawl slowly towards the pool of liquid (1-3 rounds); once they reach the pool, the liquid revives them at a rate of 1-4 hp per round. Once restored to half hit points, the ichor spawn return to the fight.

If PCs are able to conceal themselves from sight and sound (i.e., invisible and silent), they can avoid triggering the pulsing alarm and the spawn.

Treasure:

The gem (bloodstone) in the Nataraja's hand is worth 275 gp.

5-67: Minions' Rest

The stairs from 5-66 lead down 10' to a dimly lit chamber painted a sickly yellow. In it rest 10 of Psalor-Ki's ichor spawn. These foul creatures stand inertly until the throbbing pulse begins in 5-66, at which point they shuffle up the stairs to confront intruders.

Inhabitants:

1. 10 ichor spawn (see new monsters): SZ M; AL CE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 3; HP 22, 22, 21, 21, 19(x3), 17, 16, 15; #AT 2; Dmg 1-8/1-8. Special attack: ichor spray if takes more than 8 HP from one blow (spray does 2-12 HP, plus corrodes metal and/or leather).

5-68: Minions' Rest

This room is identical to 5-67, save for the existence of doors on the east and west walls. The door to the west is locked and unused. The door to 5-69, however, is merely shut and is well oiled. Ten ichor spawn wait for the alarm to sound in 5-66.

Inhabitants:

1. 10 ichor spawn (see new monsters): SZ M; AL CE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 3; HP 22, 22, 21, 21, 19(x3), 17, 16, 15; #AT 2; Dmg 1-8/1-8. Special attack: ichor spray if takes more than 8 HP from one blow (spray does 2-12 HP, plus corrodes metal and/or leather).

5-69: Pulsating Stairs

These stairs are lit by a dull red continual light spell that pulses (about 72 beats per minute). They descend forty feet. Should Psalor-Ki (5-74) be slain, the pulsating red light will cease.

5-70: Niche

A smaller statue of the nataraja (only 4' tall) occupies this semi-circular niche; this is a watcher nataraja (see new magic items) enchanted by Psalor-Ki. It hops off its perch and follows anyone not marked by the sign of the vivisectionist. Although it does not attack, Psalor-Ki is able to hear and see through the statue's eyes and ears, and he uses the statue's information to plot an appropriate greeting for intruders.

5-71: Bubbling Vats

This large chamber holds one portion of Psalor-Ki's foul experiments, attentively watched by his vat keeper. Here the vivisectionist dabbles in the qualities of fluids both biological and magical, some of the results of which include the ichor spawn and various puddings and jellies.

The room is brightly lit with plain white light, and its walls are painted black, but bear chalk sketches of tubes, half-sections of bodies, and some alchemical symbols. Heavy black drapes section off the northwest and southwest corners. A heavy oak table rests against the west wall, and stone containers line the northeast wall.

The center of the chamber is filled with a collection of stone vats, the largest five of which are 4' tall and 4' in diameter. One of these large vats (the third on the list below) has four 2'-tall and 3'-diameter vats arranged around it, with glass tubes running between all five. All five large vats are filled with viscous fluids of various colors that bubble at different rates. The four small vats contain life fluids (human blood, mixed brain matter, humanoid bone marrow, and varumani blood). See below for contents and effects of the vats:

Vat 1: A sickly-purple and quite thick fluid. It is, in fact, a purple pudding (see new monsters) that attacks those who inspect the vat.

Vat 2: A mustard-yellow, medium-viscosity fluid. This is a deadly toxin that inflicts 1-4 HP damage on any who touch it and inflicts 4-16 HP on any who sips even a small amount. It can be bottled and used as a weapon. 5 doses.

Vat 3 (with small vats around it): A rusty-brown colored, thin-viscosity fluid. It imparts some troll-like features (+1 AC permanently, regeneration for 2-8 hours) if drunk, but will also permanently decrease wisdom by 1. 4 doses.

Vat 4: A dull, red, pudding-like fluid that emits a noxious odor. It is in fact a cure-all that cures disease, act as a restoration spell, and restores 3-24 hp. 3 doses.

Vat 5: A crimson, thin fluid which looks like blood. It is, in fact, rudishva blood that, if drunk, causes nausea for 3-12 hours. If two doses are drunk, it also imparts clairvoyance for 1-3 days (nausea continues for the entire period). 6 doses.

The vat-keeper (see new monsters) putters from vat to vat, stirring and peering into each. The keeper appears as a shambling, puffy, and oddly-colored 8'-tall being; it is, in fact, a deformed ogre with an altered circulatory system.

On the worktable are 12 empty glass beakers, plus two filled with the sickly-purple fluid (purple puddings). Also on the table are a handful of 3"-long sticks of some strange flexible material; these are instant heat sources (see new technological items), used to bubble vats. Underneath the bench is a pile of broken crockery and glassware.

Behind the northwest curtain are a simple bed, an armoire, and a small table. Aside from some unusual clothing (rudishva) there is nothing of real value here.

Behind the southwest curtain stands a stone varuda (a rudishva animated construct – see new monsters): the stone varuda is carved in a semi-crouch, with wings extending in a corona around its fierce-beaked visage. The stone varuda may be brought to life if either Psalor-Ki or the watcher nataraja (5-70) inserts a finger into its open beak. If it is activated, the statue is quite destructive, and will likely overturn multiple vats. Roll for miscibility!

There is a 25% chance that Psalor-Ki is present in this room, examining his fluids. Otherwise he is found in 5-72 (25%) or in his lair 5-74 (50%).

If the watcher nataraja from 5-70 is following PCs and Psalor-Ki is not initially in this room, then there is a 75% chance that he will appear here within 5 rounds, accompanied by the shadows from 5-72.

Inhabitants:

1. The vat-keeper of Psalor-Ki (see new monsters): SZ L; AL N; AC 5; MV 90'; HD 6; HP 35; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8 or 3-6 (dagger +2). Special attacks; spit purple (2-12 HP, once every 3 rds). Special defenses: immune to poison and mind-affecting spells.

2. 1 rudishva animated construct - stone varuda (see new monsters): SZ L; AL N; AC 0; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 55; #AT 3; Dmg 1-6/1-6/1-12; MR 10%. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to cold, fire, electricity, poison, and mind-affecting spells.
3. 1 purple pudding (see new monsters): SZ L; AL N; AC 8; MV 60'; HD 6; HP 40; #AT 1; Dmg 2-12. Special attacks: corrosive to metal and leather. Special defenses: immune to fire; grows with electricity; conductive.
4. Psalor-Ki (25%): for stats see 5-74

Treasure:

Aside from the contents of the vats, the alchemical equipment, the instant heat sources (see new technological items), the room contains nothing else of value save the vat-keeper's dagger +2.

5-72: Vivisectionarium

This brightly lit chamber is the true heart of Psalor-Ki's foul depravity, for it is here that he dismembers and reassembles the bodies of his victims. The center of the chamber has three stone tables (with restraints), at the head of which is a pair of standing iron frames into which victims can be shackled. The north and south walls hold a combination of cages and chains bolted to the wall; they hold 3-8 individuals at any one time (see table below for possibilities). The east wall holds two battered worktables on which rest a dozen very sharp knives of various sizes.

A covered wooden pail sits under each of the stone tables; in each is a combination of purple pudding and rudishva blood that Psalor-Ki uses for reanimation. Should this concoction be poured down the throat of any dead creature, it will be restored to a sort of life as an ichor spawn (see new monsters). The concoction does not, however, animate on its own.

Stored underneath the work tables is a rudishva hyperbaric chamber (see new technological items). This is the device Psalor-Ki used many centuries ago to create giant rudishva skeletons (see new monsters). Although it currently lacks power, attaching a greater power supply (see new technological items) would allow it to be put back into use.

Three shadows are bound to this room in unwilling servitude to Psalor-Ki. They attack any intruder.

There is a 25% chance that Psalor-Ki is present in this room, dissecting a victim. Otherwise he is found inspecting the vats in 5-71 (25%) or in his lair 5-74 (50%).

If the watcher nataraja (see 5-70) is following the PCs and if Psalor-Ki is not initially found in this room, then there is a 75% chance that he will emerge from 5-73 within 3 rounds, shouting for the vat-keeper from 5-71 (who appears in another 4 rounds).

Secret Door (east): The door is easy to find (1 in 4), as it is relatively easy to notice the small indentation in the stonework into which reddish liquid seems to have been poured. The door only opens if some amount of rudishva blood is dribbled into the aperture (e.g., the rudishva blood in 5-71).

Possible Victims awaiting Dismemberment:

D12	Prisoner	Notes/Stats
1	Goblin	Sniveling and afraid: SZ S; AL LE; AC 6; MV 60'; HD 1-1; HP 3; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6

2	Bestial varumani (see new monsters)	Angry but cowed: SZ L; AL NE; AC 4; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 49; #AT 3; Dmg 3-6/3-6/3-10. Special defenses: regenerate 3 HP/rd; infravision; immune to poison
3	Bertis	Bertis, 3 rd -level male Archontean magic user: SZ M; AL CE; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 3; HP 2 (max 9); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 8, INT 16, WIS 15, DEX 16, CON 10, CHA 8. Bertis was part of an expedition that descended through the pyramid (AV-15), found the stairs down to Level 5 (at 3-12), crossed the sundered Span (5-35), and was badly defeated by the elder paralyzing brain (5-65). When the survivors fled to Psalor-Ki's realm (5-66), they were mobbed by ichor spawn and captured. Bertis is morose and defeated; his spell book is lost
4	Triss	Triss, 6 th -level female Thorcin thief: SZ M; AL NE; AC 7; MV 120'; HD 6; HP 12 (max 32); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 9, INT 14, WIS 10, DEX 17, CON 15, CHA 8. Thief skills: PP 60%, OL 57%, F/RT 45%, MS 52%, HS 42%, HN 20%, CW 92%, RL 30%. Triss was the leader of Bertis's party; she still projects suavity and nonchalance
5	Lizardman warrior	Tongueless, but still defiant: SZ M; AL N; AC 5; MV 60'; 120' swimming; HD 2+1; HP 8 (max 13); #AT 1 or 3; Dmg by weapon or 1-2/1-2/1-8
6	Roddy Threadneedle	Roddy Threadneedle, 2 nd -level male halfling fighter: SZ M; AL NE; AC 10; MV 90'; HD 2; HP 8 (max 18); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 16, INT 8, WIS 12, DEX 11, CON 15, CHA 13. A member of Triss and Bertis's party, Roddy is sobbing and desperate
7	Grim	Grim, a gagged Set acolyte, as a 3 rd -level Wisikin cleric of Set: SZ M; AL LE; AC 9; MV 120'; HD 3; HP 6 (max 19); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 13, INT 11, WIS 15, DEX 15, CON 9, CHA 13. Blubbering and insane, Grim has no possessions and has been unable to pray for spells.
8	Ichthelon	Ichthelon, 3 rd -level Archontean paladin of Mitra: SZ M; AL LG; AC 10; MV 120'; HD 3; HP 13 (max 26); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 16, INT 9, WIS 13, DEX 10, CON 15, CHA 17. Ichthelon is smiling and unconcerned. He was a member of the party taken by Gillen (4-180) and sold to Psalor-Ki in the slave market at 4-2

9	Debased monk from 5-78	SZ M; AL CE; AC 5, MV 120'; HD 4, HP 30, 28, 27, 27, 26(x3), 25, 25, 24; #AT 2, Dmg 1-6/1-6. Special attacks: disease (10% chance per hit). Special defenses: immune to charm; turned, temporarily, as wights. The monk is incoherent, and mutters insanely
10	Elsevian	Elsevian, 5 th -level male elf magic user: SZ M; AL CG; AC 8; MV 120'; HD 5; HP 10 (max 15); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 8, INT 17, WIS 15, DEX 16, CON 8, CHA 10. Still calm and collected despite his captivity and lost spellbook, Elsevian was captured by Gillen and Co. (4-180) and sold to Psalor-Ki's agents at the slave market in the Forum of Set (4-2). He has knowledge of the areas of level 4 between 4-170 and 4-190
11	Jicks	Jicks, 5 th -level male Thorcin cleric of Mitra: SZ M; AL LG; AC 10; MV 120'; HD 5; HP 15 (max 30); #AT 1; Dmg by weapon. Abilities: STR 16, INT 7, WIS 16, DEX 10, CON 14, CHA 15. Jicks has been gagged for a long time, and has thus been unable to prepare spells. A companion of Elsevian, Jicks was also taken by the bandits on Level 4 and sold to Psalor-Ki at the slave market
12	Beastman trooper (see new monsters)	Terrified, but still stoic: SZ S; AL LN; AC 6; MV 90'; HD 1+1; HP: 4 (max 8); #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: tactics. Possessions: ring mail and shield; spear; short sword; short bow

Inhabitants:

- 3 shadows: SZ M; AL CE; AC 7; MV 120; HD 3+3; HP 24, 20, 17; #AT 1; Dmg 2-5. Special attacks: STR drain. Special defenses: 90% undetectable; +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to sleep, charm, hold, and cold.
- 3-8 victims (see table above)
- Psalor-Ki (25% chance): for stats, see 5-74

Treasure:

One of the sharp knives is an enchanted varumani flensing knife (see new magic items). Underneath the workbench is an open stone box with a pile of equipment stolen from Psalor-Ki's victims: 175 cp, 271 sp, 97 gp, a silver ring (25gp), a platinum torc (275 gp), and a variety of mundane adventuring equipment (10 pieces, determine randomly).

5-73: Secret Antechamber

This antechamber is brightly lit. Densely writhing figures - both animal and humanoid - have been carved into every available surface. The carvings writhe, hiss, and sputter as if they were alive, but they are harmless. Psalor-Ki can see through the eyes of these writhing carvings; he is thus unlikely to be surprised by foes approaching 5-74.

A 5'-diameter hole (surrounded by a 3'-tall stone parapet) marks the center of the antechamber. The hole leads to a rough stone tunnel that extends down for 25' before turning south. Eventually the tunnel turns upward again, leading (without handholds) to 5-74.

5-74: Private Chamber of Psalor-Ki

The tunnel from 5-73 emerges into the richly appointed chamber of Psalor-Ki. The decor is a mixture of the lushly ornate and the severely efficient. A thick carpet is embroidered with an image of a strange vehicle with a nimbus of fire all around it [the Beacon]; it has been woven specifically for this chamber, as it features a 5'-diameter hole in its center. The four semi-circular niches each boast a plain, ugly side table of a hard and featureless substance (grey plasteel); each table holds an object special to Psalor-Ki. A baroquely carved settee made of ebony serves as his resting couch. Against the north wall are two ebony bookshelves filled with codices, scrolls, and data crystals. Behind the settee is a strange contraption of metal, wires and the strange substance; it is a GnuCoder 5000 full-immersion sensory experience (see new technological items), but it has finally broken down and is inoperable (see 6-117). Against the south wall are three standing racks, each of which holds the complete skeleton of a different species: human, varumani, and goblin. A desk, of the same carved ebony, stands to the south of the entrance well; on it is a set of fine crystal glasses and decanter, an inkwell and several quills.

The bookshelves contain the following items (see Arden Vul books for all): Allies for Ever!, Anatomy of the Enemy, Biological Systems: an Owner's Manual, Blood is the Key to All, Codex Priscii, Crew Roster, the Faithful Manager, the Founder and his Deeds, Great Vampire Lords and their Demise, Great Villains of Archontos, part V: Priscus the Traitor, Green are My Lover's Eyes, the Highly Impressive Story of Frigg the Fabulous, How to Talk with the Natives, Injury and Disease: Practical Solutions, Lament of the Beacon, the Lay of Marius Invictus, Letters Home, Liturgy of the Strong, Military Instructional Manual, On the Terrible Old Gods, On the Wars of the Old Ones with the Trolls, the Politics, Pol's Book of Laughs, Principles of Comedy, Principles of Magical Attraction, Prosperity in the Eternal Now, Service Manual for Optical Devices produced by GnuCoder S.A., the Seventeen Uses of a Dead Troll, Song of Jacinth the Rose, Tales of Larel One-Eye, the Trifold Tome of Theodore the White. Psalor-Ki also has acquired several spell scrolls which he has unsuccessfully attempted to master (see new spells for all): Cleophalus's look-away spell, garrulous mouth, the Hekate's bonds, Probus's thunderous alert, wizard's cache.

The four niches contain the following objects:

North: a 1,300-year old porcelain punchbowl (3,750 gp to an antiquarian) filled with a mixture of coins (450 sp, 326 gp, 157 cp) as well as copper, bronze, and platinum rudishva identity plaques (see new technological items), and a token of Arden (see Arden Vul items).

South: a rosewood box inlaid with platinum and ivory (90 gp). It contains 2 ioun stones (clear and dark blue) and 6 huge pearls (500 gp each).

East: a mummified hand on which sits an artifact, the bone ring of Jagri-Naz (see new magic items). Behind the hand lies a niravairi astral dripping sword (see new magic items).

West: a plastic cube showing a hologram of two adult and three young figures of the rudishva race, all dressed in unusual costumes. This is a holo-image of Psalor-Ki's family; despite his madness, it remains his most prized possession.

There is a 50% chance that Psalor-Ki is present in this room when PCs first enter his domain. Otherwise he is found in the vivisectionarium (5-72; 25%) or in the room of vats (5-71, 25%). The watcher nataraja (5-70), through whose eyes Psalor-Ki can see, may cause the rudishva to move elsewhere in his complex to confront intruders.

Secret Door (south): The secret door on the south wall is normal to find (1 in 6 chance), and is operated by sliding a 3'-square panel upwards. It leads to a short unworked tunnel and a second secret door opening into 5-75; the second door is normal to detect from this side.

Inhabitants:

1. Psalor-Ki, insane rudishva (see new monsters) and technosorcerer with 7th-level thief skills: SZ L; AL CE; AC 0; MV 90'; HD 7; HP 48; #AT 1; Dmg 3-12 (laser pistol) or 2-5 (ballistic baton); MR 20%. Implants: optics (infravision; see invisibility), metabolism, shield (AC 2; hit only by magic), medical (regenerate 2 hp/round; 50% immune to poison and disease). Abilities: STR 12; INT 16; WIS 16; DEX 16; CON 10; CHA 17. Thief skills: PP 60%, OL 57%, F/RT 50%, MS 55%, HS 43%, HN 25%, CW 94%, RL 35%. Possessions: wand of paralyzation; ring of spell-turning; ring of protection +2; ring of water breathing; ring of invisibility; rudishva laser pistol (see new technological items) with full lesser power supply; rudishva ballistic baton (see new technological items); sky blue and orange rudishva identity plaques (see new technological items); 3 silver rings with colored glass stones (45 gp each); and keys to the gate at 6-57. Psalor-Ki dresses in a faded purple jumpsuit with a brightly colored scarf and a white turban. He wears gaudy rings on every finger, a strange belt (a web-belt), and heavy varumani-hide boots.

5-75: Spiral Stair Down to Level 6 (6-57)

In the days of the rudishva dominance of the Halls, this was a primary stair connecting Levels 5 and 6. Psalor-Ki has blocked off the original passage to 5-66, which leaves only the secret passage from 5-74 as a means of accessing this broad, marble, circular stair. The stairs lead down 600' to area 6-57.

Secret Door (east): The door is hard to detect from the stair side (1 in 8 chance). It operates by sliding a 3'-square panel upwards.

5-76: Porch and Stairs Up to Level 3 (3-55)

The floor of the chamber is thick with dust and trash, except for a path marked with bare human footprints running from the eastern corridor to the porch. To the north, stairs lead up 250' to 3-55; they are filled with spider webs.

The porch is an 8'-wide opening into the chasm, fronted by a low balustrade. The debased monks (see new monsters, and areas 5-78 to 5-83) use the porch as a site for hunting chasm cephalopods and other food sources. The debased monks have erected two traps in the room.

In the southwest corner may be found a set of 2"-tall paving stones arranged in a 6'-diameter ring. Inset into the floor next to the ring is a rectangle 48" long by 8" tall; the rectangle is divided into six interior compartments, each 8" square. Together these elements form a Thothian teleportation ring (see new magic items). To activate the ring, one must place six colored glass activation squares into the inset according to a sequence that matches the 'address' of the ring to which one wishes to travel. Once the squares are placed, a brief shimmer of energy is visible over the ring. At this point the user has 1 round to collect the squares and enter the ring, after which anyone in the ring is teleported without error to address indicated by that sequence of squares. If the glass activation squares are not collected and/or if the travelers do not possess a second set of them, they are likely to be stranded in the location to which they have just teleported. The address of this ring is as follows: RE-GR-WH-BK-BL-YE (see new magic items for explanation). None of the glass activation squares necessary to operate the circle are present.

Trap 1 (tripwire): A tripwire running 3" above the ground is placed 5' behind the balustrade across the opening to the porch. If tripped, it triggers a net disguised in the dust and trash on the floor and a loud clattering of metal on rock; only a successful roll of 3d8 under DEX prevents 1-4 persons from being entrapped for 5-10 rounds. A group of 7-10 debased monks appear in 4-7 rounds to finish off the captives.

Trap 2 (snares): Three simple snares are concealed in the trash near the exit towards 5-77. Those ensnared will be immobilized for 3-6 rounds. The snares are easy to locate (1 in 4 chance).

Inhabitants:

1. 7-10 debased monks (see new monsters): SZ M; AL CE; AC 5; MV 120'; HD 4, HP 30, 28, 27, 27, 26(x3), 25, 25, 24; #AT 2, Dmg 1-6/1-6. Special attacks: disease (10% chance per hit). Special defenses: immune to charm; turned, temporarily, as wights.

5-77: Vestibule

This vestibule to the hidden temple of Thoth was once covered in beautiful frescoes, but they have been largely effaced by the debased monks, who covered them with crude images of snaky tentacles, white bipedal figures, and bones - lots of bones. Two enormous cauldrons (6' in diameter, 4' tall) sit in the center of the chamber; they bubble merrily, although no means of heating is apparent. The cauldrons contain human and humanoid bodies being boiled for consumption by the monks. The chamber smells terribly of the charnel house - blood, charred meat, smoke, and decay.

Secret Door (south): This door is difficult to find (1 in 8) and the debased monks do not know of it. Depressing a 2" square of stone on the west wall causes the door to spring open. The tunnel beyond leads towards the great pillar (5-138). Seeking access to the pillar, the priests of Thoth delved it, but they were never able to breach the pillar. It is effectively a dead end, and a potentially deadly one if PCs venture down its length before dealing with the monks.

Treasure:

Two cauldrons of boiling (see new magic items); a chipped azurite gem (50gp) rests in the bottom of one of the cauldrons.

5-78: Cells of the Monks

In these cells dwell the debased, undying remnants of an elite monastic order once devoted to Thoth. Corrupted and enslaved by Oziman (see 5-83), these horrific beings live on as cannibalistic shadows of their former selves. The narrow, door-less passages and cells of this area stink badly and are smeared with feces, blood, and bits of food. At any one point there are 12-18 'monks' resident here (with the others in 5-83).

All told there are 37 debased monks (see new monsters) living among the cells. Those slain elsewhere (e.g. in 5-76) should be subtracted from the overall number.

Cells come in one of three types:

- A: these cells are disgusting nests in which 2 or more monks dwell in filth and stench. Nothing save scraps of flesh and bone may be found here.
- B: only one monk lives in each of these cells, which are noticeably cleaner. In each there is a 33% chance of finding a piece of jewelry (1-2), a gem (3-4) or a handful of coins (5-6).
- C: This cell resembles those of the A-type, except for the fact that there is a secret door on the west wall. The secret door is normal to find (1 in 6), and can only be opened by pressing a button out in the hallway.

Secret Room: This chamber has not been fouled, and is thus decorated in Thothian themes (standard scenes of Thoth dispensing knowledge, language and magic). A badly rotted wooden desk and chair are found in the center of the room; in the chair slumps the desiccated cadaver of a human who clearly drank poison from a pewter goblet (10 gp). On the desk is a parchment testament of sorts, entitled the Lamentations of Hesius, or the Last Days of Lord Thoth's Dominion, authored by a certain "Hesius Tecum, apocrisarius of the Inner Order" (see Arden Vul books). The cadaver, of course, is that of Hesius. Also on the desk is a small, octavo volume containing the full Litany of Light (see Arden Vul books), and a slip of parchment with the words yellow-red-green-blue-black-white (the address to the Thothian teleportation ring - see new magic items - at 7-131).

The hidden chamber also contains a portable altar and shrine to Thoth, recognizable by its four mini-columns (3' high) of ebon-wood, carved to resemble ibis-headed men. Should this altar be brought to the Sanctum (5-83), and should a good-aligned character recite the Litany of Light in front of it, the demon Oziman will be strongly weakened (see 5-83 for specifics).

Inhabitants:

- 1. Up to 37 debased monks (see new monsters): SZ M; AL CE; AC 5, MV 120'; HD 4, HP 31, 30(x3), 29, 28(x3), 27(x7), 26(x9), 25(x8), 24(x5); #AT 2, Dmg 1-6/1-6. Special attacks: disease (10% chance per hit). Special defenses: immune to charm; turned, temporarily, as wights.

Treasure:

The Litany of Light and the Lamentations of Hesius are inherently valuable; in a wooden chest against the north wall are three large golden figurines (resembling shabti figures) of Thoth (each worth 250 gp), a bag of holding (70 cubic feet variety), a packet of dust of dryness, and a ring of wizardry (doubles first through third level spells).

5-79: Cloister of the Monks

Half-columns line the walls (every 5'), which are still covered with traces of their original sky-blue paint. A 10'x5' pool occupies the center of the room. Water flows from the open beak of a slender bronze ibis into the center of the pool. Crude graffiti in bastardized Mithric spoils the formerly bucolic effect of this room. Some samples include: "Oziman is Thoth is Oziman is Thoth is Oziman," "The Light will fail without blood" "Unbelievers shall be consumed," "Claudius tasted delicious", and so forth.

The water in the pool is cool and delicious, and will heal 2-12 HP per draught per day. If put in a container, the water retains its potency for 24 hours. The monks have forgotten the existence of the secret door.

Secret Door (north): This door is normal to locate and opens by sliding a 3'x4' panel upwards.

Inhabitants:

- 1. 3-6 debased monks (see new monsters): SZ M; AL CE; AC 5, MV 120'; HD 4, HP 28, 27, 26, 26, 25; #AT 2, Dmg 1-6/1-6. Special attacks: disease (10% chance per hit). Special defenses: immune to charm; turned, temporarily, as wights.

5-80: Archimandrite's Quarters

This room has been badly ransacked over the centuries. It is home now to the leader of the debased monks, a certain Kiwu. A cunning fellow of enormous size and power, Kiwu enforces his status with blows and fear. In life he was the lowest of the monks and deeply envious of the last archimandrite (leader) of the Inner Order, a man named Metit. As a result Oziman easily corrupted Kiwu, who then led the others down the path of savagery and chaos. Kiwu is present 50% of the time; otherwise he is in 5-83.

Kiwu refused to let Metit's body be destroyed, and so he staked its gagged skeleton to the north wall with five iron staples. Due to Metit's piety and the foul enormities committed in the Sanctum, the skeleton exists as a sort of plaintive revenant, seeking the restoration of the Sanctum to its rightful place. The skeleton twitches excitedly if visitors enter, and, if its gag is removed, it explains its situation in Mithric. It knows much less of the history of the collapse of the Sanctum than does Hesius (5-78), but insists repeatedly that Oziman is NOT an incarnation of Thoth and that Kiwu and his followers have abandoned the Path of Light. If removed from the wall, Metit's body crumbles into a heap of bones; it will still be able to speak, but it cannot move on its own. Should the Sanctum be reconsecrated, Metit's spirit will be released. Metit does not know how to reconsecrate the Sanctum, nor does he know that that act will release him from his current state.

Inhabitants:

1. Kiwu, strong debased monk (see new monsters) (50% chance): SZ M; AL CE; AC 5, MV 120'; HD 6, HP 39; #AT 2, Dmg 1-6/1-6. Special attacks: disease (15% chance per hit); +2 to hit and damage due to ferocity. Special defenses: immune to charm.
2. Metit, passive revenant (no combat stats).

5-81: Bridge to the Sanctum

A narrow (4'-wide) and short (8'-long) stone bridge spans the chasm at this location.

5-82: Lesser Chasm

The floor of this small extension of the main chasm lies 100' below; those venturing to its floor will find countless gnawed bones, several pieces of jewelry, and 2-4 carcass creepers feasting on the monks' refuse.

Inhabitants:

1. 2-4 carcass creepers: SZ L; AL N; AC 3 (head) or 7 (body); MV 120'; HD 3+1; HP 21, 19, 18, 15; #AT 8; Dmg nil. Special attacks: paralysis.

Treasure:

6 pieces of jewelry: a golden coronet (900 gp); a silver and gold locket (800 gp); a gold bracelet studded with emeralds (7,000 gp); a silver and gold seal (800 gp); a silver necklace set with three deep blue spinels (1,500 gp); and a silver statuette of a female Archontean legionary (600 gp).

5-83: The Sanctum

The Sanctum used to be the spiritual heart of the cult of Thoth in Arden Vul. It was served by an elite group of ascetic clergy known as the monks of the Inner Circle and was the site of the most holy rituals and summonings. In the chaos of the fall of Arden Vul, the Inner Circle was corrupted by a demon named Oziman, and the Sanctum despoiled. Oziman still resides in the Sanctum, continuing his masquerade as an avatar of Thoth and enjoying the service of the undying former members of the Inner Circle.

The Sanctum is a looming nave of granite 35' tall in the center, flanked by side chapels (15' tall) and culminating in a marble-clad apse. Slender columns of red-flecked onyx define two narrow aisles (20' tall). Despite the general depravity of its current residents, the Sanctum itself is relatively clean and unspoiled. Frescoes depict the Twelve, that is, the ancient deities of Archontos (see World of Archontos appendix). Along the first part of the nave, the frescoes depict generic scenes of the gods in action, with their usual iconography. Around the apse, however, the scenes revert to a more specifically Thothian program.

At the mouth of the apse is an open pit, 10' square, which drops down into the darkness. To the north of the pit sits a 3'-tall, triangular dais of white marble. Within this triangle is a second triangular dais (2' tall) on which stands a 20' cult statue of ibis-headed Thoth. Thoth holds his hands palm out: in the left hand is a scroll; in the right is a feather. On the first dais and in front of the statue is a settee in red silk; it looks very much out of place. Piled in front of the settee is a mound of treasure. Two huge candelabra burn strange black candles that produce light but no smoke. The entire area detects strongly of evil.

Oziman the demon presides from the settee, continuing his rather transparent disguise as the avatar of Thoth. Oziman appears as a slim human dressed in orange ceremonial robes and headdress of Thoth, and carrying a white, ibis-headed wand. The ghoulish debased monks (see new monsters) surround him all of the time.

Although the presence of the monks is likely to alert the PCs, Oziman attempts to negotiate at first. If the PCs are powerful, Oziman praises them and offers shelter (in one of the side chapels) and advice about the rest of the dungeon. This advice is quite poor, and will be recognized as such by seasoned adventurers in the Halls. Oziman recites a lot of empty talking points about Thothian practice, but most of this is shallow and superficial; anyone who has paid close attention to the frescoes on Levels 2 and 3, and/or who has studied the Litany of Light, recognizes Oziman as an impostor. Should he be detected or accused, or should the PCs be foolish enough to accept his hospitality, Oziman orders the monks to attack and subdue the PCs. He aids the monks with magic, and only sheds his polymorphed disguise and enters the fray himself if things are going badly.

The side chapels are nondescript, although one features a set of dusty bedrolls and a wooden chest (clearly the bedrolls have not been used in a long time). The chest is empty. Each side chapel was dedicated in the past to one of the incarnations of Thoth, but the iconography was stripped away many centuries ago.

Re-consecrating the Altar: Should the portable altar of Thoth located in the Hidden Chamber of 5-78 be brought into the Sanctum, the black candles will gutter out and Thoth's presence will return. PCs fighting Oziman or the monks in the re-consecrated Sanctum receive +2 to attack and save rolls as a result. Should the Litany of Light (see Arden Vul books) be then recited before the altar, Oziman will immediately lose 1/3 of his remaining HP and will have his AC penalized by 3.

Note: The Sanctum is the destination for one of the teleport heads at 2-10. Those teleported here find themselves standing at the entrance to the fane, just north of the bridge at 5-81.

Secret Door (east): The secret door is normal to locate and opens by sliding a 3'x4' panel upwards. The debased monks have forgotten this secret door.

Inhabitants:

1. Oziman, a type III demon: SZ L; AL CE; AC -4; MV 90'; HD 10; HP 70; #AT 5; Dmg 2-12/2-12/1-3/1-3/2-5; MR 60%. Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: cause fear; darkness 10' radius. Special defenses: half damage from cold, electricity, fire, and gas. Special: teleportation; levitate; cause pyrotechnics; polymorph self; telekinesis; gate (30%). Oziman can be weakened in certain circumstances (see text above).
2. Kiwu (50% chance); for stats, see 5-80.
3. 12-18 debased monks (see new monsters): SZ M; AL CE; AC 5, MV 120'; HD 4, HP 30(x3), 28(x3), 27(x3), 26(x3), 25(x3), 24(x3); #AT 2, Dmg 1-6/1-6. Special attacks: disease (10% chance per hit). Special defenses: immune to charm; turned, temporarily, as wights.

Treasure:

6,753 ancient copper bits; 7,498 ancient silver pennies; 4,302 ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items for coins); a piece of malachite (10 gp); a red garnet (100 gp); a chrysoberyl (100 gp); 12 aquamarines (100 gp each); an exceptional piece of alexandrite (1,000 gp); a begemmed golden chalice (4,000 gp); a beryl-encrusted silver locket (1,900 gp); a seven-faceted crystal with one of the seven secret names of Thoth inscribed on each of the facets (for all seven names, see Secreta Secretorum in Arden Vul books; the crystal is worth 500 gp to an antiquarian); a Thothian passkey (see Arden Vul items); a pair of eyes of Poi stuffed under the settee (see new magic items); a potion of fire breath, an intelligent long sword +2 (INT 12, Semi-empathy, LG, SA detect magic 10' radius, EGO 3); and a rudishva tactical suit (see new technological items).

5-84: Transit Shaft

The door leading to 5-18 is a rudishva iris door that open only when a silver rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items) is touched to the accompanying panel. The door on the west wall is also a rudishva iris door (see area 5-86).

Unlike the plain stone of the Hall of Forty Pillars, the chamber is sheathed on all sides with white marble panels held together with silver grout (500 gp total). A continual light spell cast on the 30' ceiling provides bright, clean light. Despite the fact that traffic has been minimal here for many millennia, the floor is free from dust and dirt. Two impressive features are evident:

Fountain: This softly gurgling basin of black granite is 15' diameter and 3' deep; it is filled with opalescent, sparkly liquid. Anything coated in the liquid will levitate in the shaft. The coating lasts for an hour, but can, strangely enough, be brushed off easily.

Transit Shaft: A 40'-square shaft, sheathed in white marble and silver grout, extends 1,100' down into the lower Halls, commencing here and culminating on Level 9 (9-91). Built by the rudishva as a swift form of transport for their officers, it detects strongly as magical. Anything tossed into the shaft will fall normally, but anything - or anyone - coated in the opalescent liquid is capable of levitation in the pit. Levitation is at the rate of 20' of vertical distance per round. Removal of even 10% of the silver grout cancels the levitation effect. From this point one can use the shaft to access 6-164, 7-146 and 9-91. Those without the opalescent covering who fall into the shaft fall 1,100' to their death.

5-85: Stinking Cavern and Lost Tomb

This 15'-tall cavern has a curious, musty reek of decay, a product of its former purpose as the site in which the output from the privy (located 550' above at 1-20) was deposited. The main cavern is covered with a thin crust of ancient dried effluent, which crumbles and crackles under foot. The crusty material is harmless, but has attracted a gray ooze, which hangs on the walls and ceiling. The privy hole itself is 6' square with iron rungs leading up one side.

Twelve feet up the northwest wall is a narrow, obscure hole that leads to area 5-85B, and eventually to 7-141.

To the south of the chamber are three broad steps leading to a finished area some 25' square and 10' tall. The floor is paved in grey slate. Four corpses lie on the slate just beyond the steps. The finished walls of the niche feature brightly colored mosaics, while its centerpiece is a beautiful porphyry sarcophagus.

Corpses: One is ancient, while the other three are modern; all have been scorched as if by intense heat. The ancient corpse wears the barely-recognizable robes of a priest of Set, and still clutches a deacon's was stick (see new magic items) in his skeletal hand. Of the modern corpses, two are burned beyond recognition, while the third still possesses usable chain mail +1, a metal shield, and a long sword +1.

Trap: If the sarcophagus is touched, nozzles placed every 5' across the ceiling above the niche and stairs instantly spout jets of fire towards the floor. The jets continue for 6 rounds before ceasing; the trap reset 6 hours after being activated. The trap is normal to detect, but almost impossible to disarm (-20%). Damage from the fire is 6-36; a successful save versus spells reduces it by half.

Mosaics: 1) west: ancient Archontean directing workers who are erecting the pyramid of Thoth; 2) east: an Archontean archon riding a dragon over the finished city of Arden Vul; 3) south: Archontean inspecting cave mouths from which protrude fierce dragon heads.

Sarcophagus: The purple stone is incised on all sides with Mithric writing that has been filled with silver. Two ½"-diameter holes have been drilled in the lid. The writing on the top states: "Julian Grex, archon, he who first located the Obsidian Doors, plumbed the secrets of the Great Travelers, and revealed the properties of arcanum." The sides contain further epithets, namely: "Great Architect", "Humble Overseer", "Beloved Father," "Intrepid Explorer", "Favored Rider of the Old Ones."

The lid of the sarcophagus is quite heavy, and requires a successful open doors test to open. Inside are the mummified remains of Julian Grex as well as some nice treasure. A lever inside the sarcophagus operates the secret door at 5-85A.

The soul of Julian Grex has turned into a slightly unusual spectre, which emerges through the holes in the sarcophagus after the fire trap is triggered or the lid of the sarcophagus is moved. Julian's first act - before rising from his sarcophagus - will be to raise the four nearby corpses as 3 HD zombies. He then emerges to smite intruders.

Secret Door (south): This stone door rests on two recessed steel pins, and opens towards the south. It is easy to detect from the south side (1 in 4) and normal to detect from the north. It is very difficult to open (treat as locked), unless the lever in the sarcophagus is pulled. Even if opened, it will swing closed after an hour.

Inhabitants:

- 1 gray ooze: SZ L; AL N; AC 8; MV 10'; HD 3+3; HP 23; #AT 1; Dmg 2-16. Special attacks: corrode metal. Special defenses: impervious to spells; immune to heat and cold.
- 2 Julian Grex, the enhanced spectre: SZ M; AL LE; AC 2; MV 150'; 300' flying (Class B); HD 7+3; HP 52; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8. Special attacks: energy drain. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to sleep, charm, hold, cold, poison, and paralysis. Julian is able to create 3 HD zombies at will, given available dead bodies. He is also immune to fire, but susceptible to cold.
- 3 3 strong zombies: SZ M; AL N; AC 8; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 23, 20, 18; #AT 1; Dmg 1-8. Special: always strike last.
- 4 1 strong zombie wearing chain mail +1 and wielding the long sword +1: SZ M; AL N; AC 4; MV 60'; HD 3; HP 23; #AT 1; Dmg 2-9. Special: always strike last.

Treasure:

On the corpses: a deacon's was stick (see new magic items); chain mail +1 and shield; long sword +1.

In the sarcophagus: 1,753 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items); a fist-sized piece of arcanum; an annotated map of areas 7-1 and 7-72 to 7-76, scribed on a piece of brass; two disks (28" in diameter) of grooved, beaten gold with 1" holes in their centers, which may be used to open the lesser obsidian gates (SL4-34); Stalker, a long bow +2, +4 versus animals (see new magic items); and 10 arrows +2 made of ebony.

5-85A: Tunnel to 5-19

This roughly worked stone corridor runs between the tomb at 5-19 and Julian Grex's resting place. A desiccated corpse is slumped against the secret door at the north end of the tunnel. The body is that of a female magic user; on the corpse is a backpack with her spell book, a dagger +3, a packet of dust of sneezing and choking, and a bronze statuette of an Archontean orator (450 gp) looted from elsewhere in the Halls.

Her spell book contains the following: Basil's torch treatment (see new spells); comprehend languages, detect magic, enlarge, floating disk, friends, jump, magic missile, read magic, shield: darkness 15' radius, detect evil, invisibility, knock, the pummeling fists of Arak-Zhorr (see new spells), rope trick, stinking cloud; blink, the Bracteros effect (see new spells), dispel magic, feign death, hold person, phantasmal force; dimension door.

5-85B: Tunnel Down to Level 7 (7-141)

The entrance to this tunnel is 12' up the northwest wall of area 5-85. The entrance is narrow (3' in diameter), but it quickly widens before descending steeply over 800' to area 7-141.

5-86: Rudishva Iris Door

This stone door is a rudishva iris door. When a silver or yellow rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items) is pressed against the accompanying panel, the door dilates open.

The ancient corpses of three priests of Thoth lie desiccated before the west side of the door, their vestments torn and their bodies battered. The spirits of each have remained close, two as wraiths and the other as a benign ghost. Those approaching within 10' are attacked by the wraiths, even as the benign spirit shouts warnings in Mithric. The wraiths only bother those who approach within 30' of the door.

If the wraiths are eliminated, the benign spirit can tell his story. The spirit is that of Pamiu the Chanter, and he reveals that his friends located one of the plaques of the Old Ones (i.e., rudishva), made of a silvery, hard-but-light substance. To their delight the plaque allowed them to penetrate into the hidden realm of the Old Ones by way of the great shaft (i.e., 5-84). They hoped to discover great knowledge and treasure before informing their superiors of their discovery. Alas, they foolishly experimented with the sorcerous pits of fire (5-89), and unleashed a fire demon (i.e., elemental). The elemental killed one of Pamiu's friends but, what is worse, it melted the silver plaque into slag! Pamiu and his surviving friend discovered that they could no longer open the door at 5-86. They explored a bit, and were chased by a huge stone bird (i.e., the stone varuda at 5-107), which slew them here, before the very door through which they had arrived.

Pamiu can pass on the following useful information to explorers in return for their promise of aid: 1) one shouldn't turn the dials in 5-89 to zero, for then a fire elemental is released; 2) a dancing demon inhabits the entrance to the chamber to the west (see 5-90A); it is fierce, but can be tamed if one has a silver plaque; 3) the stone bird inhabits the plaza to the west and south, and is invincible (5-107). In return for this information, Pamiu asks the PCs to bring his signet ring to the main shrine of Thoth (3-71); doing so causes his soul to be released. If those who agree to this favor and take Pamiu's ring fail to complete the request within a month, they will be struck with a powerful curse by Thoth himself; the curse is left to the GM's discretion.

Inhabitants:

1. 2 wraiths: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 120', 240' flying (Class B); HD 5+3; HP 36, 31; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6. Special attacks: energy drain. Special defenses: silver or magic weapons to hit; immune to sleep, charm, hold, cold, poison, and paralysis. The wraiths are turned as vampires while they are within 5' of their corpses.
2. Pamiu the Chanter, benign ghost: no combat abilities.

Treasure:

The corpses contain: a silver holy symbol of Thoth (10 gp); a melted lump of silvery plastic; Pamiu's gold signet ring, with an ibis-inscribed cabuchon gem (225 gp); a scroll of protection from magic; and sixteen ancient gold solidi (see Arden Vul items).

5-87: East Storage Unit

The door to this chamber swings easily on its hinges, as its locking mechanism has been blasted into smithereens. Four large storage bins, some 3'x4'x3' in size, line its walls. The bins are made of a greyish substance (plasteel) and are anchored to the floor. Slumped between the two bins on the south wall is a skeleton of an adventurer.

The interior surfaces of the bins are coated in dried, lichen-like orange paste. In one of the bins is the complete, if jumbled, skeleton of a human adventurer; its boots, leather armor, and short sword are stacked in front of the bin. The orange paste is the dried distillate of an ancient nutrient source; if scraped up and mixed with water, it provides a nutritious and curative broth. Each bin has enough paste to form 10 bottles of broth; each bottle can sustain a medium being for one day and cures 1-6 HP in addition.

Both femurs of the slumped skeleton have been broken, as if by a heavy blow. The adventurer holds a piece of parchment in his skeletal hand that reads, in Mithric, "Silence! You must be quiet! I wasn't quiet enough." GM Note: the note is a cryptic reference to the varuda statue that prowls the area of 5-107 and beyond.

Treasure:

Bins: up to 10 bottles of nutrient paste.

Skeleton: on the skeleton is an ancient, but usable, suit of chain mail, a gladius (short sword), a grappling hook with 50' of rope, a well-made zither (85 gp), and a pouch with 32 ancient silver pennies (see Arden Vul items).

5-88: West Storage Unit

Like its companion, the door to this storage chamber swings loosely on its hinges. Six storage bins of grey plasteel have been jammed inside the room. Alas, all are empty.

5-89: Fire Pits of Creation

The dull glow of fire that permeates this unusual chamber is visible from the hallway. The glow emanates from the lava that rests in the 4'-high basin of basalt running through this chamber. Several fire elementals, bound here millennia ago by the rudishva to aid in their crafting endeavors, keep the lava molten. The six 'arms' of the room on the north, east, and west walls each contain a stone mold used in crafting, whereas the niche on the south wall serves as the control center. Although each mold is connected to the control center by wires running through the rock, each appears to be a freestanding, 4'-tall object. The ceiling is 10' high, and the walls are without decoration.

The rudishva crafted various objects using metals, stone, arcenum (see new magic items), and some alien materials. Replicating these techniques is possible if the right materials are collected, although without proper recipes the results are likely to be unpredictable and dangerous. Each mold has its own requirements, listed below. In general, though, each molding station is made of basalt, with a silver inset plaque with six rudishva symbols: each symbol corresponds to 1) the amount of steel; 2) the amount of arcenum; 3) the number of buckets of lava; 4) temperature; 5) chthonic energy; and 6) phase. Should the proper materials be placed in the mold and the proper settings 'dialed', the appropriate item will be created. It takes 4 turns for the item to cool enough to be removed from the mold.

A. Control Center

A ridge of stone extends horizontally from the lava basin into this niche and connects to a 4'-tall arcenum-steel pedestal covered in a plasteel console. The console features three dials (stone knobs with steel indicators), each marked by a rudishva glyph. The three glyphs (indecipherable without assistance) are "Temperature", "Chthonic Energy," and "Phase". Each dial has a range of unmarked stops as follows:

Temperature: 9 stops: from 0 (no heat) to 8 (hottest).

Chthonic Energy: 4 stops: 0 (none), 1 (low), 2 (moderate), 3 (high)

Phase: 6 stops: 0 (none), 1 (low - solid), 2 (low - semi-liquid), 3 (moderate - liquid) 4 (moderate - semi-gaseous), 5 (gaseous)

Starting Position: When first encountered, the dials are set at temperature=5, chthonic energy=2, phase=3

Important Note: one turn after dialing both the Temperature and Chthonic Energy stops to 0 (none), one of the fire elementals escapes from the lava basin. For every turn the dials are kept in that position another elemental is released, until none are left. A released elemental, maddened by long captivity, attacks on sight. Should all the elementals be released, the lava cools and the creation molds become useless.

Supplies: Two stone storage boxes lie against the wall of the control niche. In one are 20 ingots of high-quality steel (20 sp each). In the other are three lumps of softly-glowing arcenum (see new magic items), two that are fist-sized (2 lb each) and one that is about 3' in diameter (20 lb); these pieces are, strangely, still potent even after many centuries. Two sets of plasteel tongs, two egg-shaped plasteel carrying containers, a stone hammer, and three steel chisels are also present. Note: the plasteel is unaffected by the lava.

B. Strut Mold: The mold in this niche contains three long, sinuous shapes (replacement parts for the Beacon); they are 3' to 5' long, 6" wide, and 1 to 3" thick. Each shape requires three steel ingots, two lb of arcenum, and six buckets of lava. The controls are to be set to temperature = 6, chthonic energy = 1, phase = 1. Struts are mostly useless.

C. Plating Mold: Two rectangular molds for hull plating, each some 2' wide by 4' high by 1" thick. Each requires 4 steel ingots, two lb of arcenum, and 8 buckets of lava. The controls are: temperature = 8, chthonic energy =1, phase = 2. The product is a surprisingly light (6 lb) sheet that, if a handle can be found, would serve well as a shield. Due to the arcenum it would act as a large shield +1.

D. Fuel Cell Mold: An 8'-long, 3'-deep mold for creating fuel cells. Requirements: 10 steel ingots, 10 lb of arcenum, 20 buckets of lava. Controls: temperature = 4; chthonic energy = 3; phase = 5. The result of using this mold is a metal cylinder filled with a highly dangerous semi-liquid distillate of arcenum; should it be punctured, it would explode for 6-36 HP damage to all in a 30' radius and would provoke a roll on one of the arcenum charts (e.g., 4-153).

E. Teleportation Plates: This station has molds for two 5'-diameter, 1"-deep circles and two 10"x10" squares. Beneath the normal silver 'recipe' plate is a second silver plaque with an additional 13 glyphs: these detail the unusual properties of this station (e.g., silver instead of steel, spell use, etc.). The process requires 10 lb of molten silver, 10 lb of arcenum, and 4 buckets of lava. The glyphs reveal this information, as well as the fact that teleport spell must be cast on the ingredients while the controls are set to temperature = 3, chthonic energy = 3, phase = 4. The result will be two silver teleportation disks attuned to each other; they could be deployed wherever desired to create rudishva teleport nodes.

F. Weapons Mold: This station has molds for three rudishva-designed hand weapons, a wickedly curved dagger, a broadsword, and a 5'-long barbed spear. The silver plaque has additional glyphs on it, detailing how one can add special qualities to the weapons. The dagger requires 1 lb of steel, 1 lb of arcenum, and ½ bucket of lava. The other weapons require 4 lb of steel, 2 lb of arcenum, and 2 buckets of lava. The control dials vary slightly for each weapon, but most are in the range of temperature = 5, chthonic energy = 3, phase = 1.

Enhanced weapons may be created as follows: a drop of rudishva blood in any weapon bestows a bonus of +2-5 damage to base damage. A drop of any other creature's blood renders the weapon +1 to hit and damage against that creature. Magical spells cast into the mixture may, at the GM's wish, add further bonuses.

G. Jewelry Mold: This station has molds for several pieces of jewelry, including a ring, a torc, bracelets of varying sizes, and an oval form about 6" long and 2" wide (for rudishva identity plaques - see new technological items). The information plaque here is the most complex, since a number of different formulae were possible. At base, ½ lb of a metal is needed (silver, gold, copper, brass, bronze, platinum, etc.), as well as ½ to 1 lb of arcenum and ¼ bucket of lava. The control dials vary slightly, but are typically in the range of temperature = 7, chthonic energy = 3, and phase = 4. Jewelry produced at the station radiates magic and bestows

+1 protection (AC and saves) to the wearer. At the GM's desire, the jewelry could be imbued with additional magical effects by the addition of rare parts or spells.

H. Control Rods and Circlets: This station holds two molds, one a thick collar and the other a 3'-long rod with a 4"-diameter circle at one end. Requirements for each: 1 steel ingot, 2 lb silver, 3 lb arcanum, 2 buckets lava. Controls: temperature = 5; chthonic energy = 3; phase = 2. Note the additional necessity of silver for these items. The result is a linked pair of objects: a rudishva control rod and collar (see new magic items).

Inhabitants:

1. 5 fire elementals: SZ L; AL N; AC 2; MV 120'; HD 16, 12(x2), 8(x2); HP 120, 94, 92, 60, 56; #AT 1; Dmg 3-24. Special attacks: combustion. Special defenses: +2 weapons or better to hit. The elementals can only be released from the lava if the controls are set to particular positions.

5-90: Intersection

From the northwest side, the Obsidian Gates appear identical to the description given in 5-6D. They open in a similar fashion but do not spawn undead when touched. The Gates give forth onto an important intersection, one littered with bits of gear: several odd lengths of rope, a rusty pick-axe, two hammers, three panniers filled with granite lumps, a five-foot wooden ladder, a bullseye lantern (without oil), and a copper rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items).

5-90A: Fiery Force Wall and Fiery Dancer

Entrance to 5-92 is impeded by a fiery force shield; the flame is broken only by an 8'-tall, 4'-wide oval in which a holographic figure stands on one leg. The figure has two legs, but six arms, many holding a different object (drum, pot of fire, lotus, and dagger; the other two hands hold nothing). If any living being approaches within 5', the figure starts to dance, beginning slowly but swiftly increasing its tempo. After 3 rounds, the figure begins to call forth blobs of fire from the fiery force wall; these blobs hit unerringly for 1-6 damage each (with a chance to ignite combustibles).

The force wall can only be destroyed by casting disintegration on it. Should someone present an orange, silver, or yellow rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items) after the figure has begun to dance, the figure will dematerialize, allowing the holder and his/her friends to step through the oval opening. After a turn, the dancer rematerializes.

It is possible for the adventurous to get a hazy glimpse of area 5-92 by peering through the oval, whether before or after the figure begins to dance.

5-90B: Running the Gauntlet

The scorched and desiccated bodies of six bipeds and two carcass creepers lie in the middle of the hallway here. All fell afoul of one of the few remaining rudishva point defense arrays, which is mounted on the walls and ceiling at this point in the hall. The corpses are of two adventurers, a goblin, an Archontean soldier, and an armorless varumani. The corpses of the varumani and soldier are quite ancient, while the other four are more recent.

Trap (rudishva point defense array - see new technological items):

This trap takes the form of six hardened beads of crystal attached to the walls and ceiling. Any motion within 5' of a plane described by these beads causes the array to activate; the array strikes as a 10 HD fighter, attacking three times every two rounds, and inflicting 6-36 HP damage on a target (impedes regeneration). The array cannot be disengaged by mechanical means, although clever intruders might figure out a way to bypass the beams, or else to construct a 'meat' (or other) shield to allow them to dash through the trigger point. Given the age of the array, there is a 10% per use that it will sputter futilely. The only certain way to pass the array without the possibility of damage is to possess a plastic rudishva identity plaque of any color (see new technological items); wearing or presenting any such object prevents activation of the array.

Treasure:

The varumani corpse bears a troll thegn's passport (see Arden Vul items); at 1,750 years old, it is an incredibly ancient one and would cause comment and envy if presented to the current Thegn. The soldier's equipment is completely useless, but a ring of protection +2 encircles one of his bony fingers. The goblins have a total of 8 cp, a short sword, and a steel helmet. One adventurer has some scorched (but usable) ring mail +1, a long sword, a pouch with 32 sp and 5 gp, and a deep blue spinel (500 gp). The other adventurer has an iron-shod staff, a belt pouch with a potion of extra healing, a potion of hill giant strength, a coin purse with 15 gp, 29 sp and 33 cp, and a bit of hard, greyish matter with strange markings on it. The matter is a bit of rudishva plasteel, but its value lies in what is inscribed on it in Mithric: "3= strange dormitory. 4= danger! one of the survivors". GM Note: the note refers to the location of teleporters T3 and T4 in area 5-91; T3 leads to the residential pod of the Beacon (6-124), while T4 leads to the area near the residence of the Arena Lord (5-94; he is the 'dangerous survivor').

5-91: The Midnight Road

The Midnight Road once trembled to the march of the rudishva and their servitor races. Describing an arc from the Obsidian Gates (5-6D) to the Great Pillar (5-138), the Road is 20' wide and 40' tall. Like the rest of this portion of the Halls, its black granite sheathing lacks any 90-degree angles.

At eye level a 3'-tall frieze of complex and busy sculpture runs along both walls of the Midnight Road; this frieze was once polychromed (only fragments remain) and depicts a bewildering variety of unusual beings, the most common of which seem to be tall, skinny bipeds with small horns (i.e., rudishva) who direct, command, beat, slay, and otherwise dominate a range of other creatures. This sculptural style features writhing, sinuous figures in constant movement, surrounded by flowers and other decorative elements. Every inch of space on the frieze has been carved.

5-92: Translocation Hub

This brightly lit and impressive chamber served as a main hub of the rudishva teleportation system. The chamber is clad in white marble (without any 90-degree angles, of course) and is illuminated by a series of continual light spells cast on its 30'-tall ceiling. Six semi-circular niches line the walls, while three pedestals occupy the center of the room.

Sentries: The niches closest to 5-90 each contain a stone nataraja (a form of rudishva animated construct – see new monsters). Each balances on one leg with four arms arrayed in a nimbus around its body; one arm holds a scimitar, one holds a small drum, one a fire pot, and the fourth is empty. The head is carved in a rictus of a grin, with almond-shaped eyes, pointed ears, two small horns, and a round pillbox cap. The deadly constructs do not bother anyone who enters through the oval fiery door (5-90), but grind into activity if anyone not bearing a plastic rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items) of the following color steps forward from one of the teleport nodes: sky blue, pale green, pink, orange, silver, yellow.

Teleport Nodes:

The other four niches contain teleport nodes attuned to the rudishva teleportation network. Each node is comprised of a 5'-diameter circle of silvery material inset into the floor, with a 10"x10" square of the same material affixed to the wall. Each square has a different rune etched into the silvery material. To activate a node, one stands on the circle and touches one's hand to the square. The following nodes are present here:

- T1: access to 5-94 (cloister)
- T2: access to 5-132 (troll pits)
- T3: access to 6-124 (residential pod)
- T4: access to 6-95A (arena area)

Dais 1 (southeast): Inoperable: The main dais is 3' tall. Within it sits a secondary raised platform of black obsidian, 5' square and 3' tall. The black obsidian is pitted and chipped, and shows signs of scorching. The dais was badly damaged during the last desperate days of the rudishva, and its original function is lost.

Dais 2 (center): Holographic Announcements: This square dais is 3' tall. In its center is a second raised square (3' tall) formed of red obsidian (flecked with black). The inner square is the site of a motion-sensitive holographic information system whose original purpose was to convey important announcements to those arriving in the translocation hub. The system is still operable, although it currently presents only one announcement, recorded as the rudishva hegemony came crashing down. The announcement is activated by motion within 10' of the dais, and is uttered by an orange jumpsuited holographic rudishva. The announcement (in Rudishva) is as follows: "Fellow crewmembers of the Shining Beacon! The alien slime-mongers have infiltrated our defenses. The varuda nests are corrupted and have been quarantined by order of Captain Leil-Jor. The loyal varumani gather to repel the hopping hordes. Report to your designated crisis station in the weapons pod or crew chamber. Await further orders. Remain calm, for the Beacon shall light the way!"

Dais 3 (northwest): Scrying Pool: This half-oval dais occupies the northwest end of the hall, and is raised 5' off the floor. In its center is a 4'-tall and 8'-diameter basin filled with an emerald green liquid. Along the lip of the basin are found 24 silver panels, each 3" square and each featuring a distinct rune. One activates the pool by placing two fingers on one of the rune-squares; this causes the liquid to roil briefly before presenting a vivid image of anything transpiring in that location. The perspective offered is that of an eye panning slowly in a 360-degree arc through the appropriate area. Unfortunately only the following locations are still operative:

- Panel #3: area 5-94 (cloister)
- Panel #5: area 5-107 (plaza of the varuda)
- Panel #6: area 5-138 (Great Pillar)
- Panel #11: area SL6-2 (drowned canyon – this view in effect shows the entirety of the canyon area)
- Panel #14: area SL7-2 (flooded vaults)
- Panel #15: area 6-68 (arena area)
- Panel #19: area 7-4 (floating garden)
- Panel #21: area SL2-2 (cryogenic storage)
- Panel #23: area 5-35 (Sundered Span)
- Panel #24: areas 10-32 to 10-35 (Ziggurat of Kauket)

Inhabitants:

1. 2 rudishva animated constructs - stone natarajas (see new monsters): SZ L; AL N; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 8; HP 58, 51; #AT 1; Dmg 4-11; MR 25%. Special attacks: sonic or fire attack. Special defenses: +1 or better weapons to hit; immune to cold, fire, electricity, poison, and mind-affecting spells.

5-93: Empty Staging Room

The only notable feature of this room is the 3'-diameter hole in the northwest wall (some 7' up the wall) that leads toward 5-101. The walls are sheathed in blue granite.

5-94: The Cloister

This beautiful site was the spiritual center of rudishva rule in Arden Vul. The cloister proper consists of a central area ringed by a set of slim porphyry columns. Within is a low basin and fountain surrounded by the desiccated husks of a number of exotic plant species. Among the debris still thrives a large, yellow-flowered plant (an assassin vine – see new monsters).

The ceiling within the columns is conical, rising some 30' above the floor; it is painted black with numerous yellow dots (stars). A continual light spell at the apex sheds soft yellow light on the former garden. Between the columns and the walls is a 10'-wide and 15'-tall aisle floored in blue granite, upon which the rudishva used to stroll, converse, and machinate.

Teleport Node:

The following teleport node is found in the niche in the northeast corner, and is activated in the usual way.

T1: access to 5-92 (Hub)

Graffiti: Vandals incised a few bits of graffiti in hard-to-examine corners of the cloister. It takes 1 turn of careful searching to turn up a piece of graffiti, of which a maximum of 12 may be found:

D12	Graffiti	GM Notes
1	Psolor-Ki was here (Rudishva)	Refers to the last rudishva child born in AV before the collapse, a being who still lives as the crazed vivisectionist (5-74)
2	Grev-Kilj loves the meat-sacks too much (Rudishva)	Nasty words about the rudishva crew-member who was most willing to observe and learn from the native races, including humans. See 3-52
3	We varumani will always serve, unlike the loathsome kaliyani (Varumani)	General comments about the legendary fidelity of the varumani (for their current domain see 7-1) and a hint about the treason of the kaliyani (See texts in 5-97)
4	We did it! Now to loot the [unfinished] (Mithric)	n.a.
5	Lord Set Rules these halls! (Mithric)	A reference to the cult of Set, whose headquarters lie at 4-2
6	The deed is done and the varuda infected. Phase II commences now. (kaliyani)	A reference to the heqeti slime attack that resulted in the demise of the rudishva
7	Leil-Jor demands obedience, but she shall not have mine! (Rudishva)	A rare sign of discontent among the rudishva; the note refers to the captain of the Beacon
8	Ragnar was here! (Archontean)	A sign that a few modern adventurers have penetrated the Midnight Road
9	Seek the octagonal hall, then the north door, and then the west niche. It leads to water, tombs and riches (Mithric)	A useful note concerning the west (T13) teleport niche at area 5-31, which sends travelers to the Drowned Canyon (SL6)

10	We will never leave this planet, whatever Leil-Jor says (Rudishva)	Another note of despair and unhappiness voiced by a crewman unhappy with Captain Leil-Jor's handling of the crash
11	It's not my planet, monkey-boy! (Varumani)	A boasting put-down of the locals (i.e., the Archonteans)
12	Beware the flooded halls, for our deranged friend has taken over and is highly dangerous! (Rudishva)	A cryptic reference to Reiv-Tor in the Flooded Vaults (SL7-23)

Secret Door (southwest): This door is difficult to find (1 in 8) from within the cloister and opens only when an appropriate rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items) is waived across a small red oval inset in the nearby wall. Plastic plaques of every color except rust will open the door.

Inhabitants:

- 1 assassin vine (see new monsters): SZ S (effective); AL N; AC 8 (main plant), 4 (tendrils); HD 8 (main plant); HP 53 (main plant), 5 (tendrils); #AT 24; Dmg special. Special attacks: drag; strangulation; digestion.

5-95: Treasury

Formerly the site of unimaginable wealth in technology, sorcery, and precious metal, the rudishva treasury was largely dispersed in the chaotic days after the rudishva collapse. The door is a rudishva iris door; it dilates open when an appropriate rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items) is presented. Plaques colored pale green, pink, orange, silver or yellow open the door. Inside, racks for equipment, made of both plasteel and baroquely wrought iron, occupy one side of the room, while three huge coffers (5'x5'x5') line the other. A 4'-tall frieze along the walls at eye level is carved with elaborately sinuous images of spindly figures being brought tributes by a variety of creatures, including some that look like trolls (i.e., varumani), some that look like bipedal birds (i.e., varuda), and some that look like snakes with legs (i.e., kaliyani).

All that's left of the impressive treasury is the following:

1. A broken laser rifle, with numerous frayed wires protruding from a split casing
2. A malfunctioning laser pistol, which looks operative but will explode for 2-12 HP damage once a rudishva lesser power supply (see new technological items) is inserted and the pistol is operated
3. A spear made entirely of wood (i.e., no iron tip) that seems decorative but is actually an enchanted spear named Marrow-Drainer (see new magic items).
4. 10 bars of solid silver and 10 bars of steel (25 lb each), which previous looters deemed too heavy to transport. They are worth money (1,250 sp each for silver, 25 sp each for steel), but could also be used in the fire pits of creation (5-89).
5. Two partly smashed and completely inoperative lesser power supplies (see new technological items)

6. Standing in the corner is an invisible, 6'-tall, hollow gold statue of a human in archaic imperial field plate armor. The statue is so realistic as to make one wonder if it was not a person turned to gold ... which is, in fact, the case. Gnaicus Furicus was a legionary during the first tentative period of Archontean expansion, some 2,000 years ago. How he got here, and whether he can be saved, is a mystery. In terms of worth, the statue is worth 40,000 gp as is and 30,000 gp for its metal. The gold weighs 600 lb, though. Because the statue is invisible, previous looters missed it.

Secret Door (south): The door is difficult (1 in 8) to locate. It operates by manipulating a rudishva figure on the frieze. Within is an oval chamber with a teleport node.

One-Way Door (north): The door from 5-95A is detectable from the main treasury, but cannot be opened from the south.

Teleport Node:

T11: access to Level 7 (7-144)

Inhabitants:

1. Gnaicus Furicus, 4th-level Archontean fighter: SZ M; AL LN; AC 2; MV 90'; HD 4; HP 41; #AT 1; Dmg 3-8 (short sword +1). Abilities: STR 16, INT 8, WIS 11, DEX 11, CON 17, CHA 15. Possessions: imperial field plate (see Arden Vul items); short sword +1; purse with 33 ancient silver pennies, 19 ancient gold solidi, and 3 ancient octagonal platinum coins (see Arden Vul items for all). He speaks only Mithric.

Treasure:

See above

5-95A: Secure Treasury

The rudishva captain, Leil-Jor, created this chamber as a site in which certain dangerous items could be safely stored, away from the eyes of the rest of the hegemony. It can only be accessed from a teleport node located in the chamber of the Beacon (SL14-8), and use of that node requires one of two special yellow rudishva identity plaques located at 5-98 and 9-96 (see new technological items). Chief among the items stored here is a set of keys (one gold and one platinum) to the Obsidian Gates (5-6D) and the horn taken from the interior of the heqeti ziggurat (area 10-37); that horn is necessary for the summoning of Kauket, the demon prince (see introductory text to Level 10). Other items include: a rudishva useful palm (palm of the cleansing wind - see new magic items); a tactical suit; seven structural mines, 6 bottles of pep pills with 20 pills per bottle, a point defense array and a portable point defense controller (see new technological items for all). The vault also contains an airtight seed bank (4'x6') containing seed specimens for 1,800 species of plants from the rudishva homeworld, and data crystals (see new technological items) containing full and detailed instructions on how to use the fire pits of creation (5-89) and the troll pits (5-131 and 5-132).

One-way Door (south): A rudishva iris door is set into the south wall, leading into the main treasury. The door can only be opened with a yellow rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items). The door cannot be opened from the main treasury.

Teleport Node:

The node contains the usual silver disk, but the 10"-square wall plaque is made of golden metal; activating the node requires one to touch a yellow rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items) to the golden square.

T25: access to Sub-Level 14 (SL14-8)

Treasure:

5-96: Cells

These three temporary living chambers are identical. Each holds a bunk bed made of some strange greyish material (plasteel), a 5'-tall desk/table, a stone chest, and a wall-mounted silver 'mirror' (actually a defunct view-screen). No linens are present, and the chests are empty.

5-97: Library

The rudishva resource library is dominated by the unusual bookshelves that line the curved west wall. These shelves are carved from the rock and are narrower and deeper than usual, as if they were made for 1'-diameter cylinders. Tables in the shape of round-edged triangles occupy the south and north ends of the room; these are 8' on a side and 5' high, and made of walnut. Between the tables and perpendicular to the entrance door is a pair of desks, back to back, with hoods covering their sides and tops. Although most of the important and valuable contents of the library were looted in the distant past, a few nuggets still remain.

Bookshelves: The shelves are almost completely empty, with only 3 cylinders remaining. These cylinders are 1' in diameter and 2' long. Inside each is a scroll made of an unusual linen-like 'paper'; this paper is very strong and durable. The three scrolls are these: the Time of Darkened Skies, the Properties of Arcanum, and the Betrayal (see Arden Vul books).

Library Tables: On the north table is an unfinished manuscript in parchment, which attempts a translation of 250 key words of Rudishva Glyphis into Mithric. Use of this manuscript by one fluent in Mithric provides a 33% chance of comprehending a simple rudishva text written in Glyphis. The proportion of a text that may be understood is 20-50% (10%+1d4x10%). It's up to the GM to determine which parts of a text to impart.

Hooded Desks: These desks resemble microfilm readers, and, in a sense, that is what they are. Each is a GnuCoder 5000 Full-Immersion Sensory Experience (see new technological items), which originally offered the best in virtual reality programming when a data crystal (see new technological items) was loaded. Sadly, the library is bereft of data crystals, except the one that is currently loaded into one of the desks. Should a power supply be connected to the desks, then it would be possible - with experimentation - to sit at the desk and experience the data crystal (see new technological items) entitled The Lament of the Beacon (see Arden Vul books). Only a greater power source (see new technological items) will activate the unit.

5-98: Chapter House

In the center of this large room is a low (3') dais on which sits a heavy grey chair (plasteel) with wide armrests. Resting in the chair is the skeleton of an 8'-tall biped in a blue jumpsuit; the biped's arms and legs are long and skinny, and her skull boasts small curved horns and canine fangs. Placed in the floor in an oval around the chair are twenty-five 5'-tall podiums, each formed from an iron bar and a grey plasteel console. The podiums appear as overly tall writing desks with an oval mirror on each. The walls are of black granite, inset with chips of yellow crystal in a pattern of sorts (a star map of the rudishva home system).

In the confident days after the crash of the Beacon, this was where Captain Leil-Jor held regular meetings to organize the rudishva efforts to locate needed materials and organize the repair of the Beacon. Infected by a heqeti slime, she died here while attempting to organize a defense of the rudishva domains shortly after the heqeti and kaliyani surprise attack; in the chaos of the collapse, her body was never removed. The skeleton is inert, but still contains a silver rudishva identity plaque and a special yellow plaque (the captain's card) used to access the bridge of the Beacon (SL14-10) via the teleporter T24. See new technological items for the plaques.

The command chair rotates 360-degrees, such that it can face any of the podiums. On the arms of the chair are a view-screen and a number of colored glyphs, which the captain used to activate various systems analyses. Most of the electronics failed long ago, but the glyph "Seeing" still works; when pressed it will produce a grainy video feed of one of the following images on all screens in the room:

1. Cryogenic storage (SL2-2)
2. Weapons locker (6-27)
3. Engine room (7-143)
4. Bridge (SL14-10)
5. Bio-containment unit (SL2-2)
6. Shuttle bay (SL13-37)
7. Ziggurat of Kauket (10-32 to 10-35)

5-99: Cave with Hole Leading Up to Level 3 (3-114)

This natural cave has a 5'-diameter hole in the ceiling that leads up 250' to 3-114. The cave floor is sandy and relatively flat.

5-100: Watch Cave with Access to Levels 6 and 7

A detachment of Set guardsmen led by a Set acolyte stands guard in this important crossroads cavern. Ordered down the hole in 5-99 in order to watch and defend from incursions below, this patrol is nervous about being so far from home. As a result, the acolyte is more likely to negotiate than fight. Two tunnels exit the cave, one heading to Level 6 (6-166) and the other to Level 7 (7-137). The Set people have scouted as far as 6-166, where the pukel-mander frightened them back to Level 5.

Inhabitants:

1. 4 Set guardsmen (see new monsters), as 2nd-level Archontean fighters: SZ M; AL LE; AC 5; MV 60'; HD 2; HP 18, 17, 15, 12; #AT 1, Dmg 2-7 (mace), 1-6 (spear) and 1-4 (light crossbow).

Special defense: fanaticism. Possessions: red scale mail and wooden shield; footman's maces; spears; light crossbows with 20 bolts.

2. 1 Set acolyte (see new monsters), as a 3rd-level Archontean cleric of Set: SZ M; AL LE; AC 4; MV 60'; HD 3; HP 19; #AT 1; Dmg 2-7 (mace) and 1-4 (light crossbow). Possessions: Set armor (see Arden Vul items); footman's mace; light crossbow; acolyte's was stick (see new magic items); and a silver holy symbol of Set (10 gp). Spells prayed for: command, cure light wounds, curse (reverse of bless), protection from good; hold person, silence 15' radius.

5-101: Mist-filled Cavern of Doom

A thick, purplish mist fills both of the tunnels that approach this location at a point beginning about 20' from the cave entrances. Bizarre, unsettling sounds - cackling, clicking, and alien, two-toned grunting - become audible to anyone who enters the mist. In addition, the corpses of six Set guardsmen and a Set deacon are splayed unnaturally within the mist of the north tunnel; all exhibit severely lacerated skin and missing eyeballs and hands.

Within the cave is a horror from the lower planes, rendered practically insane by the poorly worded compact that bound it to its summoner even after the latter's death. The body of the explorer who found this back route to the rudishva halls lies in the center of the cave, where she was slain centuries ago by piercers. An unstoppered brass ewer sits next to the explorer's body and emits the purple mist. But the real threat - a rending demon (see new monsters) - lurks above, clutching the ceiling and waiting for more victims. There is a 1 in 4 chance that the rending demon will gibber or grunt loudly in anticipation of prey (thus alerting potential victims); otherwise it gains a +2 to surprise checks.

The rending demon poses a formidable, possibly impassable, obstacle to those seeking to circumvent the Obsidian Gate and enter the rudishva area from the back door. That said, the contract binding it to its master will be broken if the master's body is destroyed, say by magical fire, acid, or something of the sort.

Inhabitants:

1. 1 rending demon (see new monsters): SZ L; AL CE; AC 0; MV 120', 60' climbing; HD 7+7; HP 50; #AT 4; Dmg 2-7/2-7/2-7/2-7; MR 40%. Constant abilities: infravision. Special attacks: surprise on 4 in 6; rend if three claws hit; cone of cold (1/day); darkness 10' radius. Special defenses: 90% undetectable; +2 or better weapons to hit. Special: levitation; dispel magic; detect illusion; detect invisible; teleport without error; gate (33% chance).

Treasure:

- On the corpses in the north tunnel: 79 sp, 31 gp, a deacon's was stick (see new magic items), six maces, and a mace +1.
- On the dead explorer: a brass miniature of a six-armed hor-ror (the rending demon), worth 335 gp; 47 gp, 31 sp in coins; a scroll of protection from magic; a clay figurine representing a heqeti (75 gp to an antiquarian); and a sheet of parchment with 144 Archontean letters arranged in twelve rows and twelve columns. The parchment sheet contains the name of the rending demon, Neeralbab, among the letters; it would take a sage to figure out the name or a lucky roll of 6d6 under INT to guess it.

Jug of purple mist (see new magic items)

5-102: River Cave

Here a section of sandy beach runs along both sides of the river. Washed up on one side is a broken egg-shaped vessel originally 8' long and 6' wide (c.f. 4-85). Although the vessel has been damaged beyond repair, its stabilizing rod is still intact and could be used to operate the vessels that remain in 4-85.

5-103: Base of Whirlpool, with Access to Sub-Level 12 (SL12-1)

The whirlpool at 4-65 debouches here in a roaring and foaming column of water. It is impossible, short of some very powerful magic, to navigate the 100'-tall shaft upwards to 4-65. The cave is 60' tall, except where the whirlpool from 4-65 has made it 80' tall. The water fills the cave to a depth of 50', leaving a 10'-tall air pocket above the water. Two tunnels exit from the cave. The first is the normal course of the river, which flows off to the south. The second (15' in diameter) is located at the northeast edge of the pool, and leads to the sub-level of Kerbog Khan (i.e., to area SL12-1).

5-104: Slime Preparation Chamber, with Access to Level 3 (3-117)

This innocuous-seeming cave contains several important and dangerous objects. It holds an infamous reputation among the heqeti, the rudishva, and others, as the site from which the heqeti and kaliyani launched the deadly attack that overthrew the rudishva hegemony.

The first object of note is a crouching pukel-mander (see new magic items) in the worked northern extension.

To the west is an open, sandy area of floor. On the ceiling some 30' above the sand is the opening to the well leading up 200' to area 3-117.

To the east, the river from 5-103 rushes southeast towards the varuda nests.

The central feature of the chamber, however, is an enormous pool of roiling and burping slimes of different colors and consistencies. The slime pit is about 10' deep and roughly 20' in diameter. It contains several noxious slimes extruded by Rimmaq-Isfet itself (see new monsters) and imported from the Abyss for use as biological agents against the rudishva and their servants. Two moldy corpses of heqeti warriors lie near the pool, as do five oval containers some 2' long. The ovals are made of a strange grey-brown chitinous substance and feature a porous membrane on one end. These ovals were the delivery systems for the toxic slimes; once a slime was scooped into the container, it could be thrown as a projectile or cast into the river where the slime would gradually leak through the membrane to poison drinking water.

The pool is constantly active, with existing slimes being re-absorbed into the base matter and new slimes being extruded. At any given moment 4-7 heqeti slimes (see new monsters) are visible on the surface of the pool. Each hour, however, there is a 75% that any one of the initial slimes will be replaced by 1-2 new ones. Slimes are quiescent until removed from the pool, at which point they will, if not contained, act according to their basic function (see below).

Inhabitants:

1. 1 burnt-orange, oily and thick heqeti slime (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 5' on carbon-based substances; HD 2;

HP 13; #AT 1; Dmg 1-6; MR 15%. Special attacks: flesh-eating for 4-7 rounds; corrosive to metal, leather, and wood. Special defenses: healed by electricity or lasers; slowed by cold.

2. 1 rust colored, gluey heqeti slime (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 10' creeping; HD 2; HP 14; #AT 1; Dmg special; MR 15%. Special attacks: hallucinations for 7-12 hours; corrosive to leather. Special defenses: healed by electricity or lasers; slowed by cold.

3. 1 sickly green, melted butter-like heqeti slime (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 15' (pseudopods); HD 2; HP 12; #AT 1; Dmg special; MR 15%. Special attacks: spore-throwing (death in 3-18 days unless save at -1). Special defenses: healed by electricity or lasers; slowed by cold.

4. 1 pale lavender, watery heqeti slime (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 0'; HD 2; HP 12; #AT 1; Dmg special; MR 15%. Special attacks: exploding (6-36 in 30' radius). Special defenses: healed by electricity or lasers; slowed by cold.

5. 1 yellow maize, jelly-like heqeti slime (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 10' (creeping); HD 2; HP 14; #AT 1; Dmg special; MR 15%. Special attacks: flesh animating (covers flesh and kills victim in 4-7 rounds, then re-animates as a heqeti slime zombie - see new monsters); corrosive to metal. Special defenses: healed by electricity or lasers; slowed by cold.

6. 1 purple, liquid-but-adhesive heqeti slime (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 20' (pseudopods); HD 2; HP 15; #AT 1; Dmg special; MR 15%. Special: message carrier ("Seek the Ziggurat for Protection" GM: refers to the ziggurat of Kauket at areas 10-32 to 10-37). Special defenses: healed by electricity or lasers; slowed by cold.

7. 1 rainbow, gelatin-like heqeti slime (see new monsters): SZ S; AL N; AC 6; MV 5' (creeping); HD 2; HP 11; #AT 1; Dmg special; MR 15%. Special attacks: coagulant for up to 30 gallons of liquid (including blood); corrosive to metal. Special defenses: healed by electricity or lasers; slowed by cold.

5-105: Back Stair

This secret staircase and corridor is oval in shape and only 6' tall. The channel of the underground river that flows through the widened area is only 3' in diameter leading north, but 5' in diameter heading southeast.

Secret Door (northeast): This door is easy to find (1 in 4) from within the back stair and opens only when an appropriate rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items) is waived across a small red oval inset in the nearby wall. Plastic plaques of every color except rust open the door.

Secret Door (southwest): The door is easy to find (1 in 4) from within the back stair, and opens by sliding the oval stone panel to the left.

5-106: Stripped Chamber

The corpse of an Archontean legionary lies across the threshold of this former administrative center. The legs and torso of the corpse appear to have been flattened by some terrific force (GM: the varuda guardian at 5-107). The soldier's armor is crushed and useless, and his other possessions are long gone. The chamber used to feature a 3'-tall frieze at eye level, but the frieze was ripped out several millennia ago, leaving only an ugly gash in the blue granite walls. All of the chamber's original furnishings save for a rare Nutri-vore 2000 device (see new technological items) were also removed in antiquity. The Nutri-vore 2000 rests in the niche on the eastern wall and, naturally, requires a rudishva lesser power supply (see new technological items) for operation. Scrawled in red paint next to the device are the following words in Mithric: "Hands off! Property of Psalor-Ki. Thieves will be tracked and punished." GM Note: Psalor-Ki (5-74) wrote this note centuries ago, when he was still sane; he has utterly forgotten its existence.

Secret Door (south): The door is normal to locate, but only opens when a silver or yellow rudishva identity plaque (see new technological items) is placed into a slot lying just above the stripped frieze. Doing so causes an oval portion of wall to slide aside, revealing the teleport node.

Teleport Node:

T10: access to 6-37 (near the Weapons Module)

5-107: Plaza of the Varuda

Several doors, a pool, and a huge statue line the walls of this important junction-point on the Midnight Road. The plaza is imposing, with a 60' octagonally vaulted ceiling and blue-granite sheathing on the walls. The corpses of four dwarven explorers lie battered and smashed on the floor of the otherwise smooth and dust-free plaza.
