Harps are particularly popular among celestials and elves, but humans also find their music pleasing.

Bardic Music: By playing the harp, the musician can impose a  $-2$  morale penalty on the listeners' saves against charm effects.

This is a supernatural, mind-affecting ability.

HARP, AEOLIAN

Although it looks more like a dulcimer than a harp, the aeolian harp (sometimes called a wind harp) sounds very similar to a true harp.

A typical Aeolian harp is 3 feet long but only about 5 inches wide and 2 inches thick.

Its ten to twelve strings are all the same length, though they vary in thickness.

An aeolian harp is usually hung outdoors.

When the wind blows over it, the changing air pressure causes one or more of the strings to quiver, starting with the thinnest and lightest.

This produces a tone just as though a musician had plucked the string.

The more notes sound.

The music of the harp continues for as long as the wind does.

Some find the music of an aeolian harp eerie; others consider it ethereal.

It is popular among elves and humans.

Many a bard has created a magic aeolian harp that produces a countersong effect, which lasts for as long as the music does.

Such an instrument functions as a bard with the same bard level and the same Perform skill modifier as its creator had when he made it.

HARPSICHORD

Though it features one or more keyboards, the harpsichord is essentially an enclosed harp.

Pressing the keys causes the instrument's internal mechanism to pluck the strings rather than strike them, as the clavichord does.

The harpsichord's music is louder than that of a clavichord, but the musician cannot control the volume.

The harpsichord has a delicate sound esteemed by some as waterlike and derided by others as tinkly.

Like the pipe organ, it is a stationary, indoor instrument.

Thus, it is usually found only in great cities or in the homes of music-loving nobles.

Bardic Music: A performer using the harpsichord can maintain only a single bardic music or virtuoso performance effect at a time.

In lieu of a standard bardic music effect, however, the musician can impose a  $-1$  circumstance penalty on saves against charm effects and a  $-2$  circumstance penalty on saves to resist the sleep spell for nonallied listeners.

This is a supernatural, mind-affecting ability.

HAUTBOIS

A softer-toned variant of the shawm (see below), the hautbois has extra fingerholes (a total of ten or more), keys, and sometimes a cupped bell at the end.

The keys increase the number of possible fingering combinations, and the bell-shaped end gives the instrument a softer, more resonant sound than its cousin the shawm.

A hautbois uses narrower reeds than does a shawm.

HORN, NATURAL

Originally these horns were, as the name indicates, actual horns taken from bulls or more exotic beasts.

A natural horn consists of a narrow tip connected to a wider, circular orifice by a hollow, often curved shaft.

The musician plays a natural horn by simply blowing into the small end.

Unless the instrument has fingerholes in the shaft, however, it can produce only a single note.

Natural horns come in all sizes, but those used by Medium-size creatures are typically 1–2 feet in length.

Larger humanoids favor dire horns, which are made from the horns of dire creatures.

Legend holds that minotaurs use horns made from the severed horns of their own kind who suffered defeat in one-on-one contests of honor.

Most magic horns of this type are made from the horns of unnatural creatures, such as demons or devils.

An old legend relates that several members of a noted bardic college once sought to make a magic horn out of one shed by the dreaded tarrasque.

Though they succeeded, they quickly discovered that playing it attracted the attention of the creature itself, which promptly destroyed horn and bards alike.

Natural horns are popular in primitive societies of all kinds.

Hobgoblins and orcs in particular enjoy these instruments for their loud, stirring, martial sound.

Bardic Music: When played to inspire courage, a natural horn raises the morale bonus on attacks and weapon damage from  $+1$  to  $+2$ .

The morale bonus on saves against charm effects, however, drops from  $+2$  to  $+0$ .

HORN, SHELL

This instrument is typically made from a conch shell.

When winded, it gives off a distinctive groan that can vary only in volume, not in pitch.

A shell horn makes an excellent signal device—particularly underwater, since sound travels much faster in water than in air.

Some aquatic races such as merfolk and kuo-toa collect a variety of such shells in different sizes and play them in harmony, in sequence, or both.

The music of these seashell orchestras can achieve a deep, haunting grandeur.

Bardic Music: Shell horns produce the same effects as natural horns do (see above), but only when the listeners are aquatic or marine creatures.

LAP-HARP

A lap-harp typically has seventeen strings; there can be as few as twelve on a smaller instrument or as many as twenty-four on a larger one.

Silver wires are the most common choice for strings, and other materials are occasionally used.

Lap-harps are usually made of wood, though some artisans carve them from bone or ivory.

Whatever their material, most lap-harps are highly polished and elaborately decorated with carvings.

The finest rank as works of art in their own right, quite apart from their status as instruments.

Most are between 2 and 3 feet in height and half as wide as they are tall.

Second only to the lute in popularity, the lap-harp is especially favored by elven bards for its light, soothing sound and gentle, rippling notes.

Elven lap-harps are often handed down from generation to generation, and many eventually acquire names and legends of their own.

Any character with the bardic knowledge ability who examines an elven lap-harp automatically gains a +5 bonus on his or her bardic knowledge check to identify the instrument and its bearers.

Bardic Music: One of the three prime bardic instruments, along with the lute and the fiddle, the lap-harp enables a performer to maintain one bardic music or virtuoso's performance effect while initiating another.

Thus, a bard could maintain a fascinate effect on one listener while inspiring courage in another.

LEATHER COLLAR

This simple piece of gear protects the neck, providing a +4 armor bonus against garrote attacks.

The typical version is between 2 and 4 inches wide, has a hardness of 3, and is held in place by laces.

Leather collars must be custom-made for their wearers, and fashion-conscious owners often have them decorated with stitching, studs, or dye.

While less restrictive than the gorget, the leather collar also makes long periods of exertion difficult.

This item imposes a -2 circumstance penalty on any checks made to perform physical actions that extend over a period of time (running, swimming, breath-holding, and so on).

LONGREACH TONGS

Though this versatile tool has a multitude of potential uses, rogues typically employ it for removing items from shelves, cabinets, chests, or other receptacles without directly endangering their hands.

The tongs do not permit fine manipulation, but the owner can use them to lift an object weighing up to 5 pounds, tug aside a curtain, grip a doorknob or latch, or perform some similar activity.

Some sets of tongs have wooden handles to insulate the user against electrical shocks or other unpleasant effects. A typical set of longreach tongs can extend to a length of 10 feet.

LONG-SPOON THIEVES' TOOLS

Each of these items is a specially modified version of a standard lockpicking tool mounted on a long, thin handle. These tools enable the user to manipulate a latch, tinker with a lock, or probe a trap from a position up to 5 feet away and well to the side of the target device.

A 1-inch-diameter mirror mounted on a similar handle gives the user a good view of the situation.

Though some traps have sufficient range to inflict harm even at that distance, these tools make it possible for a wary rogue to avoid most common hazards, such as poisoned needles or spurting acid.

Using these tools is more time-consuming and less accurate than taking the direct approach; thus, longspoon tools add 2 rounds to the time required and impose a -2 circumstance penalty on any check for which they are used. Note, however, that the masterwork bonus for a finely made set offsets this latter penalty.

LUR

This large horn is about 8 feet long and weighs approximately 50 pounds.

It is curved rather like a mammoth's tusk and culminates in a flat, bronze disk some 3 feet across.

An engraving of a monstrous face usually adorns this disk. Lurs come in pairs, each pair consisting of one right-handed and one left-handed instrument.

The lur is a favorite instrument of those few giants who take music seriously—primarily cloud giants and storm giants.

Since lurs produce music that is at once solemn, grand, and melancholy, they are often played on ceremonial occasions.

Bardic Music: When played to inspire courage, the lur raises the morale bonuses on attack and weapon damage from +1 to +2 for all giant listeners allied with the performer.

LUTE

This ancestor of the guitar has a pear-shaped bowl and a distinctive bent neck with frets for fingering.

Between four and eight strings stretch between the base of the bowl and the top of the neck.

Lutes vary between 30 and 36 inches in length, with the bowl taking up some two-thirds of that total.

The musician either strums or plucks the strings to produce music.

A highly versatile instrument because of its wide range of notes and inflection, the lute is accessible to the beginner but capable of great subtlety in the hands of a master.

The deep bowl gives it a rich, full sound unlike that of any other stringed instrument.

It is by far the most popular instrument with bards, especially half-elf and human ones.

Bardic Music: The most popular of the three prime bardic instruments, the lute enables a performer to maintain one bardic music or virtuoso performance effect while initiating another.

Thus, a bard could maintain inspire competence on one listener while using suggestion on another.

LYRE

A simpler ancestor of the lap-harp, a lyre typically has a body made out of a turtle shell, plus two curved arms and a crossbar to hold its four to six (or more rarely, eight) gut or sinew strings taut.

To play the lyre, the musician holds it in one hand while strumming or plucking the strings with the other.

The very simplicity of a lyre is its charm, since even a novice can strum one to credible effect.

Because of this and the fact that they're easy to make, lyres are popular among the sylvan fey (especially satyrs) and countryfolk in general.

On occasion, however, a true master (such as the legendary Orpheus) adopts it as a signature instrument, producing astonishing effects.

Bardic Music: While playing a lyre, the musician gains a +2 circumstance bonus on Perform checks for countersong, fascinate, or suggestion attempts when the listeners are fey.

MANDOLIN

Essentially a smaller version of the lute, a mandolin is usually between 20 inches and 2 feet long.

It has a straighter neck than does the lute—the end at which the pegs secure the strings tilts back only slightly, if at all.

The mandolin is unusual for the number of strings it holds—from four to six pairs (eight to twelve strings total) or even more.

A mandolin is typically played with a pick, both to protect the musician's fingers and because the strings are too close together to pluck accurately by hand.

The mandolin has a sweeter sound than the lute and, because of its shorter strings, a higher pitch as well.

Its great range of tone and expression have made it a favorite of Small bards, especially gnomes and halflings, who champion it as superior even to the lute.

Bardic Music: See lute, above.

MECHANICAL BURGLAR

Another gnome invention, the mechanical burglar is a tiny, clockwork device that automatically picks mechanical locks.

(It cannot bypass magic locks).

The device is a sophisticated mechanism in which springs extend and retract tiny metal probes to manipulate a lock's inner workings.

To use the mechanical burglar, the owner simply winds it up and inserts it into the lock where the key would normally fit.

The device is not silent; it ticks, whirs, and pings the whole time it is working.

A mechanical burglar takes 1d10 rounds to pick a lock.

The quality of the device determines how complex a lock it can open, according to the following table.

Type	Lock Complexity
I	Very simple (DC 20)
II	Very simple (DC 20) or average (DC 25)
III	Very simple (DC 20), average (DC 25), or good (DC 30)
IV	Very simple (DC 20), average (DC 25), good (DC 30), or amazing (DC 35)

To maintain the device, the owner must keep it dry, oil it occasionally, and protect it from impact.

Failure to take proper care of the mechanical burglar causes it to cease functioning until repaired, which costs half of its original cost.

The mechanical burglar only works on traditional key locks and padlocks.

ORGAN, PIPE

Huge, heavy, and always stationary, the pipe organ is the most complex of all musical instruments.

Each has hundreds of pipes, ranging from as short as 1 inch to as long as 32 feet.

Most of these pipes are vertical metal tubes, but a few upright wooden shafts (typically square rather than circular) provide additional tonal depth.

A great bellows pushes air through the pipes to produce the sound.

A typical organ has two to five keyboards (one for the feet and one or more for the hands), each of which can be set to sound like a different instrument or combination of instruments.

A panel of knobs (called stops) controls which pipes sound—pulling a knob into the “open” position allows the forced air from the bellows to enter a particular pipe or set of pipes when the correct key is depressed.

To play a pipe organ, the performer sets the stops to direct air into the desired pipes, then depresses combinations of keys to generate the sound.

The pipes must be continuously supplied with air throughout the performance.

A musician playing a small pipe organ can “feed” the instrument personally by working the bellows with a foot pump.

Playing a large organ, however, usually requires at least one assistant to pump the bellows.

The volume depends solely on the amount of air entering the pipes, so all notes sound equally loud or soft.

The pipe organ represents the pinnacle of instrument-crafting technology.

Its huge array of different-sized pipes gives it a truly incredible range of sound.

The smaller the pipe, the higher-pitched the sound it produces and, conversely, the larger the pipe, the lower its pitch.

Occasionally, an organ's complement of pipes includes a few so large that their notes are beyond the lower limit of human hearing (although they can still help to create subsonic effects) or so tiny that only animals can hear their sounds.

The keyboards permit the musician to create full, multinode chords by striking two or more keys simultaneously.

Human societies in particular prize the sound of the pipe organ and its relatives, the clavichord and the harpsichord (see above).

Because of their size, expense, and immobility, pipe organs are typically found only in cathedrals and palaces.

Bardic Music: Because of its multiple keyboards, a pipe organ enables the musician to maintain up to three bardic music or virtuoso's performance effects at once.

For example, a performing bard could begin by inspiring courage.

Then, with a successful Concentration check (DC 20 – musician's Perform modifier), he could start a countersong while maintaining the inspire courage effect.

Finally, with another successful Concentration check (DC 25 – musician's Perform modifier), he could attempt to fascinate a character while still maintaining both of the other two effects.

Failure at either Concentration check ends one earlier effect (the one that has been operating the longest) because of the performer's distraction.

PIPES, PAN

A set of pan pipes is a series of hollow reeds or wooden tubes of varying lengths bound together in a row, from smallest to largest.

To play them, the musician blows into the tops of the tubes, producing a sound much like that of several tiny wooden flutes.

By moving the pipes from side to side, the piper can play different notes.

Switching rapidly among notes creates the sweet, rippling effect for which the instrument is known.

Simple yet evocative, pan pipes are favorites of satyrs and other sylvan fey.

Humans and some elves also find their music pleasing.

Bardic Music: Pan pipes grant the musician a +1 circumstance bonus on all Perform checks when the listeners are animals or fey.

PSALTERY

The psaltery looks like a zither (see below) without its fretted fingerboard.

It has only one set of strings, and its music is similar to that of a harp.

A psaltery is played by plucking the strings with fingers, quills, or tiny hooks.

Celestials are particularly fond of psaltery music.

Humans and some elves also find it spiritually uplifting.

Bardic Music: See zither, below.

RECORDER-FLUTE

This ancient instrument originated as a simple, hollow tube that produced a single resonant note when air was blown through it.

The addition of six to eight fingerholes enabled the musician to vary the tone, and an optional thumbhole near the upper opening made it possible to lower the notes by an octave.

These alterations resulted in the instrument called the recorder-flute.

Recorder-flutes come in many sizes, but the most common lengths are 12 inches (for Small musicians) and 18 inches (for Medium-size musicians).

The fact that recorder-flutes are very simple to play and relatively easy to construct makes them popular among those who cannot afford or master more complex instruments.

Some bards have found this very simplicity a benefit—they claim that recorder-flutes soothe an audience and enhance the performer's ability to cast enchantment spells such as sleep, charm person, and the like successfully.

Bardic Music: By playing a recorder-flute, the musician can impose a –1 circumstance penalty on listeners' saving throws against charm and compulsion effects, including the bardic music effects fascinate and suggestion.

This is a supernatural, mind-affecting ability.

REVERSE LOCK

This tricky little device protects the contents of a room or container by frustrating burglars until they give up and go away.

When first encountered, the reverse lock appears to be locked but actually is not.

If a character makes a successful unlocking attempt—an Open Lock check, an open or knock spell, or anything else that accomplishes the same purpose—the device then locks itself but appears unlocked.

A second successful attempt to open the lock by any means causes it to unlock and again appear locked.

SHAWM

This double-reed precursor to the oboe looks a bit like an inverted scepter.

Some shawms are highly decorated, which increases their resemblance to scepters even more.

The typical shawm measures about 26–28 inches in length and has seven or eight fingerholes.

Shawms were developed for open-air performances; thus their music tends to be very loud.

Many aristocratic amateur musicians have adopted the shawm as their instrument of choice, since it is not only attractive to the eye, but also quite distinctive in sound.

Treants adore the sound of any sort of shawm, though they are most partial to the crumhorn (see above).

Bardic Music: A shawm bestows a certain prestige on anyone who can play it properly.

Thus, a successful Perform check made in an aristocratic setting grants the performer a +4 circumstance bonus on Bluff, Diplomacy, Disguise, and Gather Information checks made against listeners for 1d6 hours after the performance ends.

It also shifts the attitude of such listeners by one category in the performer's favor (for example, from indifferent to friendly—see the NPC Attitudes section in Chapter 5 of the Dungeon Master's Guide).

However, it also imposes a –4 circumstance penalty on Intimidate checks against those listeners for the same period.

Creating the above effects is a supernatural, mind-affecting ability.

STONES, WIND

Naturally occurring stones sometimes have holes, grooves, or ridges through which the wind whistles or moans when it blows strongly enough from the right direction.

It was only a matter of time before intelligent creatures decided to imitate and, if possible, improve upon nature. “Wind stone” is a general term for the result of such experimentation—a rock outcropping that has been bored, altered, or placed in such a way as to create music when the wind blows.

Each wind stone has a single distinctive whisper, wail, or groan that lasts from a few seconds to several minutes. The sound of a wind stone is often disquieting to human or halfling listeners, though dwarves and gnomes find it pleasant enough.

Other races tend to either ignore these sounds altogether or imagine them to be the voices of invisible creatures that must be appeased with periodic sacrifices.

Occasionally, a bard creates a magic wind stone that imposes a –4 morale penalty on listeners’ saving throws against fear effects while it sounds and for 1d6 minutes thereafter.

The creator is immune to this effect.

TABOR

This small instrument has a diameter of about 1 foot, a thickness of up to 2 feet, and a drumhead on each end. The tabor is light enough to wear on a bandoleer, belt, or sash draped around the drummer’s neck.

Perfect for martial music and for setting marching rhythms, this instrument gets its distinctive rattle from the bands of gut strung along its lower head, which vibrate when the upper head is struck.

Dwarves in particular enjoy the music of the tabor, with its strong martial sound.

Not only do they play it for entertainment, they also use it to keep cadence while marching to war.

Bardic Music: See drum, above.

TRUMPET, HERALD’S

In time, natural horns gave way to metal horns made of gold, silver, bronze, brass, and occasionally even more exotic metals.

These metal trumpets quickly became popular in human and a few humanoid societies, primarily because they could be made to specific sizes and shapes.

A herald’s trumpet looks like a straight tube made of brass or bronze that flares out into a bell shape at the end.

It is among the loudest instruments available because its volume is limited only by the windpower of the performer. The typical herald’s trumpet is 3–5 feet long and depends on the musician’s tongue and breath to produce variations in tone.

A more complex version has three or more fingerholes on the shaft.

By covering these in different combinations, the musician can play different notes on the same horn.

Since herald’s trumpets produce very clear, very loud notes, they are popular among humans and humanoid races for sending signals, raising alarms, and motivating troops.

Musicians who play complex versions with fingerholes can produce exceptionally beautiful melodies.

Devils are also very fond of trumpets—the louder and more discordant the sound, the better.

Bardic Music: See horn, natural (above).

WATER-PIPE

The water-pipe, or hookah, is widely known among some human cultures, but its properties as a musical instrument were developed at the behest of a bronze dragon who wanted an instrument he could play without assuming anthropomorphic form.

Many other dragons have since adopted this unusual instrument as their own.

Like a smoking hookah, the musical water-pipe works by filtering smoke through water held in a large, vasselike vessel.

Instead of cooling the smoke for inhalation, however, the instrument version uses various special additions to enhance the sound of the bubbling water.

Some water-pipes contain tiny crystal beads that tinkle against the sides of the vessel each time a puff of smoke stirs the water.

Others have chimes or even tiny cymbals hung inside, which strike one another and ring softly whenever air moves within the vessel.

Dragons have seemingly boundless enthusiasm for the water-pipe and its music.

In fact, dragon musicians sometimes spend years contemplating possible improvements and refinements. Most humanoids find water-pipe music soothing, but not particularly interesting.

Occasionally, however, a humanoid sorcerer or a kobold takes up the water-pipe to stress his or her affinity with dragons.

Bardic Music: When played to inspire courage, the water-pipe raises the morale bonus on saving throws against fear effects from +2 to +4 for the performer’s allies.

However, it also reduces the bonus on saving throws against charm effects from +2 to +0 for all such listeners. Because the music of this instrument is so soft, it affects only targets within 30 feet.

WATERPROOFING

This useful compound comes in the form of a thick paste or polish in a tin container.

When rubbed on wooden, leather, paper, parchment, or metal items, it protects them from all water damage for up to 24 hours.

An item so treated suffers no harm from any type of water exposure—be it dampness, a brief shower, or even complete immersion.

One application covers an object the size of a lute or a pair of boots and lasts for seven days or until exposed to water. A tin of waterproofing contains enough polish for ten applications.

Bards in particular find this item useful for protecting their precious instruments from inclement weather and sudden dunkings.

WHISTLE-PIPE

Neither a horn nor a flute, the whistle-pipe is made of metal but played like a woodwind.

It consists of a straight metal tube studded with fingerholes.

The musician plays it by blowing directly through the length of the pipe while covering combinations of holes to produce different notes.

A whistle-pipe is a small instrument, typically about 1 foot in length and only an inch in diameter.

The whistle-pipe produces a high-pitched sound that some consider quite piercing.

Gnomes particularly enjoy its music, however, and many gnome bards adopt it as their instrument of choice.

Bardic Music: A whistle-pipe grants the musician a +5 circumstance bonus on Perform checks for countersong attempts.

ZITHER

A zither looks like a flattened lute with its neck snapped off and glued into a new position along the left side of the instrument.

It has a flat soundbox—usually rectangular, though other shapes are known.

The zither has two sets of gut or metal strings—one stretched across the soundbox and the other along the fretted fingerboard at the side.

A zither is usually either held on the lap or laid flat on a table.

To play it, the musician uses a pick mounted on a thumb ring to pluck a melody on the fingerboard strings while strumming the other set of strings (often with a quill or small stick) to provide background harmony.

The zither is popular with humans and gnomes.

Its light, lilting tones and the intricacy of melodies that its two sets of strings can produce make it a favorite of some bards as well.

Bardic Music: When played to inspire courage, a zither boosts the morale bonus on saves to resist charm and fear effects from +2 to +3.

However, it also reduces the morale bonus on weapon damage rolls from +1 to +0.

AIR PLANT

The air plant is a bizarre form of pond vegetation whose spongy structure produces and stores air, keeping the plant at the surface so it can receive adequate light.

This mass remains alive and continues to produce air even after being cut from the plant, provided it is kept moist and well lit.

When placed in the mouth, a fist-sized piece of this material can provide enough air to sustain a Medium air-breathing creature for 5 minutes.

After that time, the submerged creature must begin holding its breath and risks drowning.

The air plant dies after use and can't be recharged—another portion must be procured.

BARGE

A barge is not much more than a large, flat-bottomed hull designed to haul heavy cargoes by water.

Most barges are intended to be towed by other ships or by teams of draft animals on shore, but some are fitted out as royal yachts or war barges, and equipped with a set of oar sweeps for maneuvering.

Barges of this sort might have large deckhouses or weapon mounts.

A SAMPLE CARAVEL

This caravel is a typical example of the type, although the internal arrangement can vary greatly from ship to ship. Its notable features include:

1. Quarterdeck: The quarterdeck is a raised, open deck at the stern. The ship's wheel is here, along with a small davit for a ship's boat.

2. Foc's'le Deck: This is a raised, open deck atop the fore-castle. The caravel mounts a ballista here; the weapon can't fire straight ahead because of the foremast. On the starboard side is the hawsepipe and tackle for the ship's anchor.

3. Master's Cabin: The largest and most comfortable cabin on the ship is still quite cramped by most standards.

4. Wardroom: The captain, officers, and passengers take their meals here. This room also serves as a drawing room or parlor for the officers and passengers.

5. Main Deck: This open deck features a catapult and two large companionways that descend to the lower deck. The catapult can only be fired to the broadside; it can't train forward or aft (a typical problem with large weapons mounted on small, cluttered ships). The companionways serve as both stairways (ladders, in nautical parlance) and cargo hatches. Chicken coops and pens for goats, lambs, or other small livestock often take up any available space left on the deck.

6. Forecastle: Most of the ship's crew sleeps here, although in Barges are best employed on calm, slow rivers or canals, where maneuvering is not an issue.

(draft 10 ft.); Complement 120; Watch 5 plus 40 rowers; Cargo 50 tons; Cost 6,000 gp.

CARAVEL (SAILING SHIP)

The caravel is a seaworthy, nimble ship that can handle long ocean crossings.

It has a small fore-castle and stern-castle, and three masts. A caravel is a smooth-hulled, full-decked vessel built on a strong internal frame.

It is a relatively advanced design, and not every seafaring people have the skills and knowledge to build one.

The sailing ship mentioned under Transport in Chapter 7 of the Player's Handbook is a caravel.

Caravel: Colossal vehicle; Seaworthiness +4; Shiphandling +2; Speed wind × 30 ft. (average); Overall AC -3; Hull sections 24 (sink 6 sections); Section hp 80 (hardness 5); Section AC 3; Rigging Sections 3; Rigging hp 80 (hardness 0), AC 1; Ram 4d6; Mounts 2 light and 1 heavy; Space 60 ft. by 20 ft.; Height 10 ft. (draft 10 ft.); Complement 30; Watch 7; Cargo 120 tons (Speed wind × 15 ft. if 60 tons or more); Cost 10,000 gp.

good weather many crewmembers prefer to sleep on the open decks. The fore-castle holds a dozen cramped bunks.

7. Galley: The ship's galley is in the forward part of the lower deck. It has a small stove and shelving for all kinds of foodstuffs. The ship's cook and his assistant(s) sleep here.

8. Chain Locker: The ship's anchor chain is stored here. It passes through the hawsepipe in the fore-castle up to the foc's'le deck.

9. Lower Deck: This space serves as the first of the caravel's cargo holds, as well as the crew's mess deck. Crewmembers take their meals sitting on whatever cargo is convenient. If the ship is heavily laden, this deck might be covered to within a foot of the overhead, leaving only a single fore-and-aft passage between the crates, casks, and bundles.

10. Officer's Cabins: These tiny cabins are the private rooms of the ship's officers. Paying passengers usually bump an officer from his or her cabin to the fore-castle.

11. Ship's Office: All the ship's paperwork is kept here, including cargo manifests, pay records, and the ship's paychest (usually in a sturdy, locked chest).

12. Sail Locker: Spare sails, canvas, and sewing gear is stored here, as well as plenty of lines, hawsers, firewood, and heavy tools.

13. Lower Hold: Most of the ship's cargo is stowed here, as well as provisions (including as many casks of fresh water as will fit). Beneath this lower hold lies a small crawlspace where heavy ballast stones help to stabilize the ship.

COG

The cog is the basic medieval-era sailing ship. It is a single-masted sailing ship with a round, sturdy hull. It has a partial deck (the waist of the ship is not decked over, but the ends are) and raised bow and stern platforms that are open, as opposed to being enclosed like a true forecastle or sterncastle.

It is seaworthy, but not very handy in adverse winds. Nefs, roundships, or knorrns use these same statistics. A knorr or roundship also has an oar speed of 5 ft. in addition to the sailing speed.

Cog: Colossal vehicle; Seaworthiness +2; Shiphandling -2; Speed wind × 20 ft. (poor); Overall AC -3; Hull sections 16 (sink 4 sections); Section hp 80 (hardness 5); Section AC 3; Rigging Sections 1; Rigging hp 60 (hardness 0), AC 1; Ram 4d6; Mounts 1 light and 1 heavy; Space 40 ft. by 20 ft.; Height 10 ft. (draft 10 ft.); Complement 20; Watch 4; Cargo 40 tons (Speed wind × 10 ft. if 20 tons or more); Cost 6,000 gp.

CORACLE

A small and very simple boat, the coracle is made from a light wicker or branch frame, over which waterproofed hide or bark is stretched.

A coracle weighs only 40 pounds, and can easily be carried for short distances.

A coracle is too small to have different hull sections, and therefore only has an overall AC and a single hp total for the hull.

Coracle: Medium vehicle; Seaworthiness -4; Shiphandling +0; Speed oars 10 ft. (good); Overall AC 5; Hull hp 10 (hardness 2); Ram —; Mounts —; Space 5 ft. by 5 ft.; Height 1 ft. (draft 2 ft.); Complement 2; Watch 1; Cargo 100 pounds; Cost 5 gp.

DAVIT

A davit is a special hoist and cradle designed to carry small boats on the deck of a larger ship.

Most ships carry a skiff or two stowed on deck, but a davit can accommodate a fairly large boat, and makes launching and recovering the vessel much easier.

A large davit can hold a boat of Large size or smaller, and requires a light mount; a huge davit can hold a boat of Huge size or smaller, and requires a heavy mount.

Launching a boat with a davit requires only a single round and one crewmember; recovering a boat requires 1 minute and two crewmembers for a Large boat or eight crewmembers for a Huge boat.

The cost of the davit does not include the craft carried in the davit.

DHOW

The dhow is a moderately sized sailing vessel with a single mast and a full deck.

It might have a small sterncastle or deckhouse at the stern. Many dhows are made of sewed or stitched hulls—the hull planks are sewed to one another with sturdy cord.

Dhow: Colossal vehicle; Seaworthiness +2; Shiphandling +0; Speed wind × 20 ft. (average); Overall AC -3; Hull sections 18 (sink 4 sections); Section hp 50 (hardness 5); Section AC 3; Rigging Sections 1; Rigging hp 60 (hardness 0), AC 1; Ram 4d6; Mounts 1 light and 1 heavy; Space 60 ft. by 20 ft.; Height 5 ft. (draft 10 ft.); Complement 25; Watch 5; Cargo 60 tons (Speed wind × 15 ft. if 30 tons or more); Cost 7,000 gp.

DIVING BELL

The diving bell is a sturdy weighted barrel or sphere of wood and iron, fitted with several thick glass portholes. It can hold up to two Medium creatures or four Small creatures.

The bell descends on a stout cable from the ship above, and can't move horizontally—it can only ascend or descend at a rate of 10 feet per round.

The bell can descend to a maximum depth of 200 feet.

Bells can be left open on the bottom, allowing a swimmer to easily enter or exit the bell.

The air inside the bell will prevent the water from completely filling the bell, although the deeper you descend, the less headroom you'll have.

An open bell can descend to a maximum depth of 100 feet, at which point everyone inside will be neck-deep in water.

The diving bell apparatus includes a davit or hoist on the ship's deck for raising or lowering the bell, and a crude hand-powered air pump and waterproofed hose of canvas or leather to provide fresh air to the bell.

It takes 2 crewmembers to work the pumps, and 4 crewmembers to operate the winch to raise or lower the bell.

The bell itself weighs 1,000 pounds.

The hoist on deck takes up a 10-foot space and uses a heavy mount.

The price of the diving bell includes the air pump, hoist, and bell.

Diving Bell: Medium vehicle; Seaworthiness +0; Shiphandling —; Speed —; Overall AC 5; Hull hp 80 (hardness 6); Ram —; Mounts —; Space 5 ft. by 5 ft.; Height 0 ft. (draft 5 ft.); Watch 1; Complement 2; Cargo 200 pounds; Cost 4,000 gp (bell) or 7,000 gp (bell, pump, and hoist).

DROMOND (WARSHIP)

The dromond is a medium-sized galley that is fast, nimble, and eminently suitable for warfare.

It has two masts and sails better than it rows with any kind of favorable wind.

It is fully decked, and the rowers are covered from attack.

The dromond usually has a small deckhouse or fighting platform at the stern.

The dromond is the most advanced galley design, and not many seafaring folk have the expertise and skills to build a dromond.

The warship mentioned under Transport in Chapter 7 of the Player's Handbook is a dromond.

Dromond: Colossal vehicle; Seaworthiness +0; Shiphandling +2; Speed wind × 20 ft., or oars 30 ft. (average); Overall AC -3; Hull sections 60 (sink 15 sections); Section hp 80 (hardness 5); Section AC 3; Rigging Sections 2; Rigging hp 80 (hardness 0), AC 1; Ram 4d6; Mounts 4 light, 2 heavy, ram; Space 100 ft. by 20 ft.; Height 15 ft. (draft 15 ft.); Complement 200; Watch 7 plus 100 rowers; Cargo 150 tons (Speed wind × 10 ft. or oars 15 ft. if 75 tons or more); Cost 25,000 gp.

DUGOUT

The dugout is the simplest boat possible—a hollowed-out log hacked into the shape of a boat.

Dugout: Large vehicle; Seaworthiness -3; Shiphandling +1; Speed oars 10 ft. (good); Overall AC 4; Hull hp 40 (hardness 5); Ram 1d6; Space 10 ft. by 5 ft.; Height 2 ft. (draft 2 ft.); Complement 4; Watch 1; Cargo 500 pounds; Cost 20 gp.

ELF WINGSHIP

So named because of its great, sweeping sails that seem more like a bird's wings than a ship's rigging, the elf wingship is the fastest ship on the sea.

Despite its graceful lines and delicate appearance, the wingship is actually quite sturdily built and deadly in a naval battle.

Elves rarely (if ever) sell wingships to non-elves.

Elf Wingship: Colossal vehicle; Seaworthiness +4; Shiphandling +4; Speed wind × 40 ft. (good); Overall AC -3; Hull sections 12 (sink 3 sections); Section hp 150 (hardness 6); Section AC 3; Rigging Sections 2; Rigging hp 80 (hardness 0), AC 1; Ram 4d6; Mounts 2 light and 1 heavy; Space 60 ft. by 10 ft.; Height 10 ft. (draft 10 ft.); Complement 30; Watch 5; Cargo 30 tons (Speed wind × 30 ft. if 15 tons or more); Cost 40,000 gp.

FLOAT BLADDER

This is an emergency flotation device for those who find themselves cast overboard.

It can also be used to support a nonswimmer being assisted through water.

A float bladder is a sack of oiled hide that can be filled with air.

It has a long neck that is knotted shut after filling and ropes or straps to fasten it to the wearer.

A float bladder can keep afloat one Medium creature.

Treat this as a leather object (hardness 2); if it takes 5 or more points of damage, the skin is punctured.

The round after puncturing, the user must begin making Swim checks to remain afloat.

A punctured or deflated float bladder is a burden to a swimmer, imposing a -2 penalty on Swim checks if it is not removed.

GALLEY

Also known as the quinquireme, or great galley, this is the largest oared vessel normally built.

It is fully decked, with a complicated arrangement of oars in multiple banks.

Great galleys are usually warships, vessels whose primary purpose is service in a fleet.

Galley: Colossal vehicle; Seaworthiness +0; Shiphandling -2; Speed wind × 15 ft. or oars 20 ft. (poor); Overall AC -3; Hull sections 78 (sink 19 sections); Section hp 80 (hardness 5); Section AC 3; Rigging Sections 2; Rigging hp 60 (hardness 0), AC 1; Ram 6d6; Mounts 6 light, 3 heavy, ram; Space 130 ft. by 20 ft.; Height 15 ft. (draft 15 ft.); Complement 300; Watch 10 plus 160 rowers; Cargo 150 tons (Speed wind × 10 ft. or oars 15 ft. if 75 tons or more); Cost 30,000 gp.

GRAPPLING RAMP

This structure is a long ramp and frame that resembles a small drawbridge.

When an enemy ship is near, the grappling ramp is dropped, so that it forms a bridge to the other vessel.

The top end of the grappling ramp is usually fitted with iron spikes, cleats, or grapnels so that its drop drives the ramp into the enemy vessel's deck, holding it fast.

A grappling ramp gives you a +4 bonus on Profession (sailor) checks to initiate a grapple with another ship or to maintain a grapple from a foe who wants to escape (see Special Maneuvers, page 27), but no bonus on resisting another ship's attempt to grapple your own vessel.

It also creates a five-foot-wide bridge to the other vessel's deck.

A grappling ramp has a space of 10 feet and weighs 1,000 pounds.

It requires a heavy mount.

GREATSHIP

Fitted with a towering forecastle and sterncastle, this huge, broad-beamed sailing ship is almost a seagoing castle.

It has four masts and is not remotely nimble, but it is large and sturdy and can carry hundreds of sailors and soldiers.

It has multiple decks, and the mainmast often has one or more fighting tops, small platforms suitable for archers to fire down at other ships.

Greatships are sometimes called carracks.

Greatship: Colossal vehicle; Seaworthiness +6; Shiphandling -4; Speed wind × 25 ft. (poor); Overall AC -3; Hull sections 240 (sink 60 sections); Section hp 80 (hardness 5); Section AC 3; Rigging Sections 4; Rigging hp 80 (hardness 0), AC 1; Ram 6d6; Mounts 12 light and 4 heavy; Space 150 ft. by 40 ft.; Height 20 ft. (draft 20 ft.); Complement 500; Watch 20; Cargo 500 tons (Speed wind × 15 ft. if 250 tons or more); Cost 60,000 gp.

HAT, BICORNE

A bicorne is a semicircular hat usually worn by captains and admirals.

It is braided and showy, the better to call out the high rank of its wearer.

HAT, TRICORNE

A tricorne is the classic three-cornered hat.

It is generally worn by the upper classes and can be both civilian and military garb.

A tricorne can range from a simple leather or felt version to a very fancy silk item with feathers.

The price given here is for a well-made felt tricorne.

IRONCLAD

Protected from enemy fire by solid iron plate, the ironclad is slow and clumsy but deadly in a naval battle.

The ironclad is built on a frame of thick wooden timbers, just like most other vessels; armor is then riveted or bolted onto its sides.

Most ironclads are built by seafaring dwarves who turn their remarkable knack for metallurgy and engineering to the construction of these warships.

Ironclad: Colossal vehicle; Seaworthiness -2; Shiphandling -4; Speed wind × 10 ft. or oars 10 ft. (poor); Overall AC -3; Hull sections 72 (sink 18 sections); Section hp 150 (hardness 10); Section AC 3; Rigging Sections 1; Rigging hp 60 (hardness 0), AC 1; Ram 6d6; Mounts 8 light, 2 heavy, ram; Space 80 ft. by 30 ft.; Height 15 ft. (draft 15 ft.); Complement 120; Watch 5 plus 60 rowers; Cargo 20 tons; Cost 50,000 gp.

JUNK

A junk is a large sailing ship often found in eastern waters. It has a flat bottom, no keel, and a high stern, with two masts and a sail reinforced with bamboo ribs.

The junk's hull is partitioned into a number of small, watertight compartments, which makes it unusually seaworthy.

Junk: Colossal vehicle; Seaworthiness +4; Shiphandling +0; Speed wind × 15 ft. (average); Overall AC -3; Hull sections 32 (sink 8 sections); Section hp 50 (hardness 5); Section AC 3; Rigging Sections 2; Rigging hp 80 (hardness 0), AC 1; Ram 4d6; Mounts 2 light and 2 heavy; Space 80 ft. by 20 ft.; Height 10 ft. (draft 10 ft.); Complement 50; Watch 7; Cargo 160 tons (Speed wind × 10 ft. if 80 tons or more); Cost 15,000 gp.

KEELBOAT

This flat-bottomed boat is built for use on rivers and lakes. It is fully decked, with a large deckhouse that takes up most of the boat's center or stern depending on the design.

It has a small sail and eight oars for traveling upstream.

Keelboat: Gargantuan vehicle; Seaworthiness -2; Shiphandling +2; Speed wind × 10 ft. or oars 10 ft. (good); Overall AC 1; Hull sections 3 (sink 1 section); Section hp 50 (hardness 5); Section AC 3; Rigging Sections 1; Rigging hp 60 (hardness 0), AC 1; Ram 3d6; Mounts 1 light; Space 30 ft. by 10 ft.; Height 5 ft. (draft 5 ft.); Complement 16; Watch 2 plus 8 rowers; Cargo 20 tons (Speed wind × 5 ft. or oars 5 ft. if 10 tons or more); Cost 3,000 gp.

LAUNCH

Also known as a whaleboat, the launch is a large, open dinghy with a stout, round-bottomed hull that can stand up to surprisingly rough seas.

Launches are often carried by larger ships for use in landing in places where the larger ship can't go.

A launch is too small to have different hull sections, and therefore only has an overall AC and a single hp total for the hull.

Launch: Huge vehicle; Seaworthiness +0; Shiphandling +2; Speed oars 15 ft. (good); Overall AC 3; Hull hp 50 (hardness 5); Ram 2d6; Mounts —; Space 15 ft. by 5 ft.; Height 5 ft. (draft 2-1/2 ft.); Complement 8; Watch 1 plus 2 rowers; Cargo 4 tons (Speed oars 10 ft. if 2 tons or more); Cost 500 gp.

LONGSHIP

The longship is a sturdy vessel with a single mast.

It does not have a deck, although some longships are built with small walks or platforms at the stern and bow.

The shallow draft of a longship allows it to enter rivers or land on beaches that other vessels couldn't manage.

Longship: Colossal vehicle; Seaworthiness +2; Shiphandling +0; Speed wind × 15 ft., or oars 20 ft. (average); Overall AC -3; Hull sections 14 (sink 3 sections); Section hp 50 (hardness 5); Section AC 3; Rigging Sections 1; Rigging hp 60 (hardness 0), AC 1; Ram 4d6; Mounts 2 light; Space 70 ft. by 20 ft.; Height 5 ft. (draft 5 ft.); Complement 60; Watch 3 plus 40 rowers; Cargo 40 tons (Speed wind × 10 ft. or oars 15 ft. if 20 tons or more); Cost 10,000 gp.

NETTING

Designed to hinder boarders, ship's netting consists of a sturdy net of tarred rope that is rigged 10 feet or more above the gunwales.

A creature attempting to climb over the rail or gunwale and board the ship (or attempting to leave the ship, for that matter) can't pass through the netting, but it's perfectly feasible to make attacks through the netting.

Piercing weapons or ranged weapons can be used through the netting at no penalty; slashing or bludgeoning weapons can only be used against foes adjacent to the netting, and take a -4 penalty on attack rolls.

A 5-foot section of netting has hardness 2 (the rope is heavily tarred) and 20 hit points.

Piercing weapons and bludgeoning weapons deal one-quarter damage to netting instead of the normal one-half damage when attacking an object.

Rigging ship's netting takes 1 hour of work.

The number of crewmembers required depends on the size of the netting: 1 crewmember for Large, 4 for Huge, 8 for Gargantuan, and 12 for Colossal.

OILSKIN SUIT

Inhabitants of rainy climates and misty seacoasts, and those who make their living from the sea, need reliable clothing to keep out the dampness and chill.

An oilskin suit consists of high boots, heavy trousers, a long coat or cape, and a wide-brimmed hat.

These garments are made of heavy-duty cloth such as cotton or linen, then waterproofed with flaxseed oil.

PINNACE

The pinnace is a small, two-masted sailing vessel.

It's sturdy enough to undertake long open-water voyages and handy enough to use close to shore.

A pinnace is fully decked, but its sterncastle is hardly worthy of the name; it's little more than a cramped cabin.

Pinnace: Gargantuan vehicle; Seaworthiness +2; Shiphandling +2; Speed wind × 30 ft. or oars 5 ft. (good); Overall AC 1; Hull sections 4 (sink 1 section); Section hp 50 (hardness 5); Section AC 3; Rigging Sections 2; Rigging hp 60 (hardness 0), AC 1; Ram 3d6; Mounts 2 light; Space 30 ft. by 10 ft.; Height 10 ft. (draft 5 ft.); Complement 15; Watch 3 plus 8 rowers; Cargo 30 tons (Speed wind  $\times$  20 ft. if 15 tons or more); Cost 4,500 gp.

RAFT

While almost anyone can lash a few logs together and make a crude raft, this is a vessel made of sawn planks with logs or empty barrels for floatation.

The raft normally has a small deckhouse or flat for shelter. It is slow and hard to maneuver, and is really only suitable for calm rivers or lakes.

Raft: Huge vehicle; Seaworthiness  $-4$ ; Shiphandling  $+0$ ; Speed oars 5 ft. (poor); Overall AC 3; Hull hp 30 (hardness 5); Ram 2d6; Mounts —; Space 15 ft. by 10 ft.; Height 2-1/2 ft. (draft 2-1/2 ft.); Complement 8; Watch 1 plus 2 rowers; Cargo 2 tons (Speed oars 5 ft. if 1 ton or more); Cost 100 gp.

ROWBOAT

Also called a skiff, punt, or pirogue, this is a flat-bottomed boat for use in calm waters.

Rowboat: Large vehicle; Seaworthiness  $-4$ ; Shiphandling  $+2$ ; Speed oars 10 ft. (good); Overall AC 4; Hull hp 30 (hardness 5); Ram 1d6; Mounts —; Space 10 ft. by 5 ft.; Height 2-1/2 ft. (draft 2-1/2 ft.); Complement 4; Watch 1; Cargo 1,000 pounds (Speed oars 5 ft. if 500 pounds or more); Cost 50 gp.

SEXTANT

A sextant is a sophisticated device used to determine a vessel's position by measuring the angle formed by the sun or stars and the horizon.

It uses mirrors and carefully graduated scales to sight a heavenly body, whose position is compared to a listing in an almanac for the day and year of measurement.

A sextant grants a  $+2$  circumstance bonus on Knowledge (geography) checks to set and hold course (see that skill entry on page 86).

SISIUTL BLOOD

The blood of the sisiutl is famed for its protective powers. Rubbing the fresh blood of a sisiutl (slain within the past 10 rounds) on the skin provides the benefit of a stoneskin spell from a 10th-level caster, although the benefits last only 10 minutes.

Only one creature (of Large size or smaller) can benefit from this effect from any single sisiutl.

Applying the blood is a standard action.

The blood washes off underwater and thus provides no benefit.

STINKPOT

This is a simple chemical weapon, consisting of a clay jar filled with a mix of noxious substances.

When set alight, the mixture produces a foul-smelling smoke that fills a 10-foot cube (as a fog cloud spell, except that a moderate or stronger wind disperses the smoke in 1 round).

Each living creature within the smoke must succeed on a DC 15 Fortitude save or become sickened as long as it remains and for 1d4+1 rounds after it leaves.

Each round a creature remains within the smoke, it must make another save.

The pot's contents are consumed in 3 rounds, and the vapors disperse naturally.

Lighting a stinkpot is a standard action that provokes attacks of opportunity.

SWIMMING GOGGLES

This is a leather frame containing a clear piece of glass (sometimes two) made to fit tightly over the eyes.

Wearing a set of swimming goggles improves visibility underwater.

In clear water, the wearer's vision extends to 6d8 $\times$ 10 feet. Swimming goggles don't make it any easier to see through murky or fast-moving water.

THEURGEME

The theurgeme is a vessel powered by magic.

Without sails or rowers it moves swiftly and tirelessly across the water.

Theurgemes can be powered in a variety of ways, but the most common design is a simple paddlewheel or set of mechanical oars turned or driven by a magical construct, mindless undead, or even a bound elemental.

Many theurgemes are luxuriously appointed with comfortable cabins and exotic décor, as befits the wealthy wizards who most likely own such vessels.

Theurgeme: Colossal vehicle; Seaworthiness  $+2$ ; Shiphandling  $+2$ ; Speed propellers 35 ft. (good); Overall AC  $-3$ ; Hull sections 28 (sink 7 sections); Section hp 150 (hardness 6); Section AC 3; Ram 4d6; Mounts 4 light, 2 heavy, ram; Space 70 ft. by 20 ft.; Height 10 ft. (draft 10 ft.); Complement 40; Watch 1; Cargo 100 tons (Speed oars 20 ft. if 50 tons or more); Cost 80,000 gp.

TRIREME

The average galley is a single-masted bireme or trireme.

While it is quick and nimble in fair weather, it is not very seaworthy and liable to founder in high seas or bad weather.

The galley is partially decked, usually with a walk that runs the length of the ship above and between the rowers' benches.

The rowers are not covered by the deck or the walk.

Trireme: Colossal vehicle; Seaworthiness  $-2$ ; Shiphandling  $+0$ ; Speed wind  $\times$  15 ft., or oars 20 ft. (good); Overall AC  $-3$ ; Hull sections 32 (sink 8 sections); Section hp 50 (hardness 5); Section AC 3; Rigging Sections 1; Rigging hp 60 (hardness 0), AC 1; Ram 4d6; Mounts 1 light, 1 heavy, ram; Space 80 ft. by 20 ft.; Height 10 ft. (draft 10 ft.); Complement 100; Watch 3 plus 70 rowers; Cargo 40 tons (Speed wind  $\times$  15 ft. or oars 15 ft. if 20 tons or more); Cost 12,000 gp.

WAR CANOE

The war canoe is a large, seagoing canoe, often with one or two outriggers for stability.

It has a small stepped mast for sailing on open water. War Canoe: Gargantuan vehicle; Seaworthiness +0; Shiphandling +2; Speed wind × 10 ft. or oars 20 ft. (good); Overall AC 1; Hull sections 2 (sink 1 section); Section hp 30 (hardness 5); Section AC 3; Rigging Sections 1; Rigging hp 40 (hardness 0), AC 1; Ram 3d6; Mounts —; Space 40 ft. by 5 ft.; Height 2-1/2 ft. (draft 2-1/2 ft.); Complement 16; Watch 1 plus 12 rowers; Cargo 2 tons (Speed wind × 10 ft. or oars 15 ft. if 1 ton or more); Cost 1,000 gp.

SWORD AND FIST (3.0)

TWO-PERSON CHARIOT

While most armies favor mounted knights in the cavalry role, some still favor the two-person chariot.

Two heavy warhorses pull a small, two-wheeled platform on which two soldiers stand.

The chariot is made of wood and iron and provides one-quarter cover to its occupants.

The chariot has a speed of 50 feet if being pulled by two horses, but a speed of only 40 feet if being pulled by only one.

It cannot turn more than 90 degrees in a single round. If it takes a double move, it can only turn 45 degrees. If a chariot turns, it must travel at least 30 feet before it turns again, or 40 feet if it is turning in the opposite direction.

Driving the chariot uses most of the same rules as riding a horse and engaging in mounted combat, except Handle Animal is the relevant skill.

Handle Animal Task	DC
Fighting with one hand while driving with the other	5
Cutting a wounded/unconscious horse free of its harness	15
Avoiding a collision	Varies
Making a sideswipe attack	20

Collisions: Chariots are vulnerable to terrain obstacles such as fallen logs, deep mud, or the bodies of the fallen.

If a chariot runs over such an obstacle, the driver must make a Handle Animal check to swerve away.

(The DM sets the DC depending on the severity of the obstacle).

If the driver fails, the chariot upends and passengers and horses take 1d6 points of damage if the chariot was moving at a speed of 40 feet or less, 2d6 if it was moving faster.

Sideswipe Attack: Chariots often have scythe like blades attached to their wheels.

If the driver maneuvers the chariot's side directly adjacent to an opponent's square, the blades make a free attack if the driver succeeds at a Handle Animal check (DC 20).

Treat the sideswipe as a melee attack with a scythe that has +1 attack and damage bonus for every 10 feet the chariot moved that round before it reached the target square.

For example, if the chariot moved 40 feet and made a sideswipe, the blade would attack at +4 and do 2d4+4 damage.

The passenger is generally equipped with a composite shortbow and a longspear, while the driver wields a halfspear (driving the chariot with one hand and fighting with the other).

Ranged attacks from a moving chariot suffer the same penalties as ranged attacks from horseback.

It is possible to fire a longbow from a chariot, however.

If you are using a grid, the chariot is 5 feet wide and 10 feet long.

A typical two-person chariot costs 300 gp +100 gp for scythes attached to the chariot's sides.

It weighs 300 lb. and can carry a further 800 lb., including the riders and their equipment.

It requires at least light warhorses to pull it.

If one of the mounts dies in combat, the chariot driver must immediately make a Handle Animal check (DC 15) to cut the animal free.

If the chariot drivel fails, the body of the horse is treated as an obstacle requiring a Handle Animal check (DC 15) to avoid upending the chariot.

This check must be made every round until the horse is cut free.

Chariot Collision DCs

Of course, a million things exist that you can drive your chariots over, into, and through.

Here are some typical DCs for the Handle Animal checks required to avoid upending your chariot:

Item struck or run over	DC
Light underbrush	10

Medium-size pedestrian	15
Large pedestrian (including horse)	20
Wooden fence	20
Heavy underbrush	20
Hedgerow	25
Another chariot, side or rear	25
Another chariot, head-on	30

ARCANE LAB

This is similar to an alchemist's lab.

It includes beakers, bottles, mixing and measuring equipment, cutting tools, and miscellaneous chemicals and substances.

It's only absolutely necessary for creating golems, but many sorcerers and wizards have one for potion making and spell research.

The lab grants a +2 modifier on Spellcraft checks to determine if a new spell is viable (see Researching New Spells in Chapter 5: Spells).

ARCANE LIBRARY

This is a collection of at least 200 rare volumes used in spell research.

Due to its size and cost, most wizards depend on various professional organizations (see Chapter 1: Arcane Lore) to provide access to a suitable library.

Booksellers in large cities and metropolises sometimes have sufficient numbers of the right books, but even then, whole libraries are seldom accumulated at once.

It can take a week or more to purchase all the necessary volumes, depending on supply and available transportation.

DISAPPEARING INK

After being used to write a message, this blue or red ink vanishes from view at the end of an hour (though ink can be made that disappears after a longer period, such as a day, 10 days, or a month).

Heat (such as a candle flame) applied to the writing surface makes the ink appear again.

A successful Spot or Search check (DC 20) reveals traces of the faded writing.

The Alchemy check DC to make disappearing ink is 15.

FAMILIAR CARRIER

This is a sturdy hutch or box for safely transporting a familiar.

The carrier is made of metal lined with wood and padding to cushion the familiar from impacts.

It is equipped with a door that the familiar can open from inside or outside, as well as an internal latch so the familiar can lock itself in.

The carrier also has viewports that the familiar can shutter: It offers nine-tenths cover when unshuttered and total cover when shuttered.

The carrier has hardness 10, 15 hit points, and a break DC of 23.

FLASHPELLET

You can throw this small alchemical bead as a grenade-like weapon (see Grenade-like Weapon Attacks on page 138 of the Player's Handbook).

When it strikes a hard surface or is struck sharply, it ignites with a bright flash.

Creatures within a 10-foot radius must succeed at Reflex saves (DC 15) or be dazzled.

A dazzled creature suffers a -1 penalty on attack rolls.

The creature recovers in 1 minute.

Sightless creatures are not affected by the flash.

The Alchemy check DC to make a flashpellet is 25.

GLOWPOWDER

This luminescent dust clings to surfaces and creatures, making them glow.

The grains of powder glow about as brightly as sparks from a campfire.

They don't provide illumination, but they are noticeable.

When sprinkled on an object or surface, the powder helps reveal edges and details, granting a +2 circumstance modifier on Search checks made on the treated area.

A creature sprinkled with the powder is likewise easier to detect: Spot checks to see the creature gain a +2 circumstance modifier.

An invisible creature sprinkled with the dust has only 50% concealment (20% miss chance).

Once applied, the dust clings and glows for 1 minute.

A creature sprinkled with the powder can wash it off by taking a full-round action.

The powder usually comes in a tube that allows the contents to be blown or shaken out.

Blowing out the powder is a standard action that draws an attack of opportunity and creates a 10-foot cone. If carefully sprinkled, the powder can cover 125 square feet (five 5-foot squares).

It takes a full-round action to shake out enough powder to cover one 5-foot square.

The Alchemy check DC to make glowpowder is 20.

HEALING SALVE

Rubbing this stinky green paste into wounds promotes rapid healing.

Applying the salve is a full-round action.

One dose cures 1d8 points of damage to a living creature.

The Alchemy check DC to make healing salve is 25.

If you have 5 or more ranks in Profession (herbalist), you get a +2 synergy modifier on checks to craft it.

PHANTOM INK

Similar to disappearing ink, messages written with this ink vanish from view at the end of an hour and thereafter can be read only under the right kind of light.

The usual types specify one of the following: firelight (which includes candles, torches, and other flames), magical light (which includes the dancing lights, light, and continual flame spells), moonlight, and starlight (this last usually isn't discernable unless the reader has darkvision). The Alchemy check DC to make phantom ink is 20.

PORTABLE WRITING DESK

This compact wooden box folds out into a firm writing surface.

It has folding legs that let you set it across your lap or prop it up on the ground.

It also contains drawers for quills, ink, and other writing supplies.

READING LAMP

Similar to a bullseye lantern, this lamp comes with an adjustable stand so you can shine the light on the document you're reading.

SCENTBREAKER

This small bag contains either a collection of aromatic herbs or a strongly scented alchemical mixture. Either version can confound any creature's sense of smell. You can toss the bag as a grenade like weapon with a range increment of 10 feet, or you can scatter the contents someplace where a creature tracking by scent comes across it.

(It covers an area 5 feet square).

Once scattered, the contents remain potent for 1 hour.

A creature can sniff the bag's contents from a direct hit, from a splash, or from sniffing the area where the contents were scattered.

If struck by a direct hit, the creature must succeed at a Fortitude save (DC 18) or lose its scent ability for 1 minute.

After the minute is up, the creature must make a second Fortitude save (DC 18) or lose its scent ability for another hour.

Being splashed or sniffing the scattered contents has the same effect, but the save DC is 15.

A direct hit or splash affects only one creature of Small or larger size.

The contents affect all creatures of Tiny or smaller size in the 5-foot area where a bag of scentbreaker strikes.

The Alchemy check DC to make scentbreaker is 15.

If you have 5 or more ranks in Profession (herbalist), you get a +2 synergy modifier on checks to craft it.

SCROLL ORGANIZER

This long strip of leather has an overlapping series of fifteen pockets sewn along one side, each large enough to hold a scroll of a single spell.

When slipped into a pocket, only the top of a scroll shows, allowing you to scan all the titles.

The outside is fitted with a clip and a sewn-in pouch so that the organizer can be rolled up into a cylinder, slipped in its own pouch, and sealed against the elements.

SECRET COMPONENT COMPARTMENT/POCKET

This is a secret compartment or hidden pocket large enough to hold the components for one spell.

A pocket is added to a garment, while a compartment is built into a tool, weapon, or other item.

The compartment or pocket must be added when the item is first made.

Finding a secret pocket or compartment (if you don't already know where it is) requires a successful Search check (DC 20).

SUREGRIP

This gluey substance improves your grip, granting a -2 circumstance modifier on any check that deals with holding onto something, including Climb checks and grappling attacks.

When applied to a rope, it confers a +2 circumstance modifier on Use Rope checks that involve tying knots or binding creatures or objects.

Applied to the soles of one's footwear or feet, it confers a +2 circumstance modifier on Balance checks made to avoid slipping.

Once applied, suregrip lasts 10 minutes.

The Alchemy check DC to make suregrip is 20.

UNAPPROACHABLE EAST (3.5)

TAER STENCH GREASE

Taers brew a foul-smelling substance derived from their own scent, which they smear on their bodies before entering combat to sicken and disorient foes.

An application of taer stench grease is sufficient to coat one creature and lasts for 1 hour.

Living creatures within 10 feet must succeed on a Fortitude save (DC 15) or be sickened, taking a -2 penalty on all attack rolls, weapon damage rolls, saving throws, skill checks, and ability checks for 1d6+4 minutes.

A delay poison or neutralize poison spell removes the effect from the sickened creature, and taers and creatures immune to poison are unaffected.

UNDERDARK (3.5)

TABLE 5-5: POISONS

Poison	Type	Initial Damage	Secondary Damage	Price
Cave terror	Ingested DC 20	Confusion	1d4 Int damage	200 gp
Drow knockout poison	Injury DC 13	Unconsciousness (1 minute)	Unconsciousness (2d4 hours)	75 gp

Virile madness	Ingested DC 20	+1d2 bonus to Str, +1d2 bonus to Con, 1d4 Int damage, 1d4 Wis damage	+1d2 bonus to Str, 1d4 Int damage, 1d4 Wis damage	1,200 gp

Hardness	Rock Type
6	Sedimentary (sandstone or shale)
7	Sedimentary (limestone)
8	Igneous (basalt, rhyolite)
9	Metamorphic (gneiss, granite, or marble)

ALCHEMIST'S MINERAL ACID

Alchemist's mineral acid is a sticky, adhesive substance that dissolves rock and other minerals.

A flask of mineral acid can be thrown as a splash weapon (see Splash Weapons in the Player's Handbook).

Treat such an attack as a ranged touch attack with a range increment of 10 feet.

A direct hit against a creature with the earth subtype deals 1d6 points of damage.

Every creature with the earth subtype that is within 5 feet of the point where the flask hits also takes 1 point of damage from the splash.

On the round following a direct hit, the target takes an additional 1d6 points of damage.

If poured directly on inert rock or stone, mineral acid ignores hardness and deals 3d6 points of damage (1d6 points per round for 3 rounds).

Alchemist's mineral acid can be created with a DC 22 Craft (alchemy) check.

BARRELSTALK

Stout as a hogshead of ale, the barrelstalk is a large, cask-shaped fungus that grows up to 8 feet in height and 5 feet in diameter.

Its outer layers are tough and woody, but its inner flesh is edible, and its center is filled with a reservoir of water

TABLE 5-4: SPECIAL ITEMS

Item	Cost	Weight
Alchemist's mineral acid (flask)	20 gp	1 lb.
Blackwater (flask)	100 gp	1 lb.
Caveharp	150 gp	3 lb.
Darkoil (vial)	25 gp	—
Darkvision-invisible paint (jar)	20 gp	1/2 lb.
Shriek paste (flask)	50 gp	1 lb.
Spelunker's kit	80 gp	5 lb.

(usually from 20 to 50 gallons) that can be tapped and drained.

The inner flesh turns black and poisonous when barrelstalk begins producing spores, which happens after ten years of growth.

BLACKWATER

A single flask of blackwater rapidly taints a 10-foot-by-10-foot cube of water.

Any aquatic creature that breathes affected water must make a successful Constitution check or begin to drown.

(See the Drowning rule in the Dungeon Master's Guide). The DC for the check is 10 on the first round, but it increases by +1 each succeeding round.

Air-breathing creatures are unaffected by blackwater, unless they are breathing water via a spell or some other artifice.

The taint of blackwater lasts for up to 24 hours in still water but is swept away in 1d6 rounds in a moving stream or surging tide.

Blackwater can be created with a DC 25 Craft (alchemy) check.

BLUECAP

The grain of the Underdark, bluecap fungus is inedible to humanoids, but its spores can be ground to make a nutritious, if bland, flour.

Bread made from bluecap flour is usually known as sporebread.

Bluecap seems to do well with or without faerzress, and most Underdark humanoids cultivate it.

BOXWORK

Boxwork forms when softer rock wears away, leaving a harder crystalline network of thin blades poking out from a ceiling, floor, or wall.

CAVE MOSS

Found only in faerzress-rich regions, cave moss is inedible to humanoids, but it is a favorite grazing food of some giant vermin, as well as rothé.

CAVE PEARL

Sometimes mineral-rich water drips too vigorously to form a coherent stalagmite.

Where this occurs, a piece of gravel or bone might become coated with mineral deposits and polished to a round and smooth shape by the flowing water. Such an object is called a cave pearl.

A well-shaped pearl with good color and texture is worth between 5 gp and 50 gp.

Cost: 25 gp (average).

CAVE TERROR

Distilled from cave creeper fungus (see Chapter 7), this poison can be made with a DC 25 Craft (alchemy) check.

CAVEHARP

This small harp is a masterwork instrument that grants the user a +2 circumstance bonus on Perform checks made while playing it.

Its sound carries for 1d6 miles down unobstructed tunnel passages, so it can both entertain and serve as a long-distance communication device.

CLEAR BLACK ROCK

In its natural state, this rock is found only in the Lowerdark, where it is cut in slave-worked quarries and prepared for export to the Middledark and Upperdark. Clear black rock is not common, but it is certainly available to those willing to pay premium prices.

To regular and low-light vision, this rock looks black, shiny, and perfectly opaque, but to darkvision, it is perfectly clear. Creatures without darkvision often mistake it for obsidian, but drow, mind flayers, and other creatures gifted with darkvision find it a challenging yet worthwhile stone to incorporate into their strongholds and encampments.

COLUMN

When a stalactite and a stalagmite meet and join, they're no longer referred to by their previous names. The resulting formation called a column.

CRUMBLESTONE

This rock breaks very easily and is the bane of miners and travelers anywhere.

Crumblestone exists in a precarious equilibrium with the other rocks or strata surrounding it.

A Small or larger climbing or flying creature that begins to put its weight onto crumblestone must make a DC 15 Balance check or fall when the rock beneath it turns to powder.

For flying creatures, this situation rarely poses a problem, but for climbers, an encounter with crumblestone is often deadly.

If enough crumblestone gives way in a cavern, a cave-in becomes likely.

CRYSSTONE

Beautiful, intricate, and very delicate, crysstone is a rock that resembles spun glass.

It is very hard but not at all durable (hardness 8, 2 hit points per inch of thickness).

Crysstone shatters easily, and sonic damage automatically bypasses its hardness.

Because it is so susceptible to sonic damage, the threat posed by monsters with wide-area sonic attacks increases in areas where crysstone is prevalent.

CRYSTAL FLOWERS

These crystalline formations, also called cave flowers, are valued by several Underdark races for their aesthetic beauty and their commercial value.

Crystal flowers are usually made of halite (simple table salt), gypsum, or some other minerals.

The petals are fibrous or prismatic crystals that resemble growing seedlings.

Halite flowers often grace the table settings of wealthy drow on special occasions.

Even illithids occasionally carry salt in crystal flower form to add earthy spice to their brain meals.

Cost: 25 gp; Weight 1 lb.

CURTAINS, DRAPERIES, AND BLANKETS

These terms refer to dripstone in the form of rippled, wavy, or folded sheets.

Curtains and draperies are thinner, often translucent, and resonant.

Blankets are thicker, so they tend to muffle sound a bit. Often these features have stripes of different colors.

DARKOIL

Darkoil is a rare mineral oil specially prepared with various alchemical reagents.

It protects drowcraft weapons and armor (see Magic Items, below) from the effects of sunlight.

A vial of darkoil is sufficient to protect a weapon for 3 days or a suit of armor for 1 day.

Applying darkoil to any item requires 1 minute.

Darkoil can be created with a DC 20 Craft (alchemy) check.

DARKSTONE

Darkstone seems to drink in light.

In tunnels cut through this material, light sources dim, shedding a glow only half as strong as usual. Thus, a bullseye lantern illuminates a cone only 30 feet long and 10 feet wide, while a torch lights only a 10-foot radius.

A daylight spell in a darkstone area radiates daylight in only a 30-foot radius.

DARKVISION—INVISIBLE PAINT

This special alchemical substance is designed to match the shading and color contrasts of the surface to which it is applied.

This property renders the paint invisible to creatures that depend on darkvision, but it can easily be seen with normal or low-light vision.

Races requiring light to navigate use this paint to warn other such folk of dangers and threats.

A single jar contains enough paint to produce twenty large warning symbols, or two smaller messages of up to 100 words each.

DROW KNOCKOUT POISON

The dark elves are renowned for their use of unconsciousness-inducing poison.

They carefully guard the secret of their venom, and it is difficult to find outside of drow realms and outposts.

EXPLOSIVE GAS

Some naturally occurring gases can explode in the presence of open flames.

If a burning torch or lit lantern is brought into a pocket of explosive gas, the vapor explodes, dealing 3d6 points of damage to each creature in a 10-foot radius (Reflex DC 15 half).

An alert spelunker might notice the danger before causing an explosion, since the open flame often behaves strangely (burning in a different color or exceptionally brightly) right before the explosion.

Allow the creature carrying the light a DC 20 Survival check to observe the danger before the explosion actually occurs.

If an open flame remains in the hazardous area thereafter, there is a 50% chance of an explosion in each subsequent round.

FIRE LICHEN

Pale orange-white in color, fire lichen thrives on warmth, so it grows in regions of geothermal heat or near connections to the Elemental Plane of Fire.

Fire lichen can be ground and fermented into a hot, spicy paste, which is often spread on sporebread to give it flavor. Duergar ferment fire lichen into a fiercely hot liquor.

FLOWSTONE

A layer of deposited material that follows the shape of the underlying walls or floor is called flowstone.

A flowstone formation often has draperies at its lower end.

GEODES

Often found in deserts or volcanic regions, these hollow rocks are lined with crystals.

In the Underdark, some geodes are immense, growing to the size of caves.

One legend tells of a wizard entombed in a 40-foot geode filled with amethyst crystals.

GEYSER

A geyser consists of a deep fissure or well in which water can accumulate and be heated to high temperatures and a thin shaft that leads from this pool of superheated water to the surface.

Periodically, a fountainlike jet of hot water and steam erupts from the opening.

Such an eruption deals 2d6 to 6d6 points of impact damage and 2d6 to 10d6 points of fire damage to any creature it hits. The intervals of eruption can be regular or irregular.

HOT SPRINGS

Water heated by volcanic forces often bubbles up through the ground in hot springs.

Some of these springs make it to the surface; others can be found in caverns underground.

Often, the water is so laden with sulfur and other minerals that it is undrinkable.

IRRITATING FUMES

These gases cause coughing, stinging of the eyes, dizziness, and similar difficulties.

A character exposed to irritating fumes must succeed on a Fortitude save once per minute (DC 15, +1 per previous check) or become sickened.

Recovery from this condition is not possible until the character leaves the affected area.

LAVA TUBES

These tubes form after lava has flowed from a volcano. The surface of the lava cools and solidifies while the interior is still liquid.

This uneven cooling creates a crust that resembles a tube. Lava tubes can branch and fork, following the passage of the lava.

Because the cooling can happen over several intervals, it's also possible to have a tube within a tube.

LUMINESCENT GROWTHS

Rare forms of lichen, fungi, and moss are bioluminescent. In sufficient quantities, these growths can illuminate large caverns.

Most bioluminescent growths are quite dim, so a cavern illuminated by glowing moss or fungi is typically as dark as starlight, although some particularly bright regions might be equal to moonlight.

LUURDEN

Luurden, or bloodfruit, is a rare tree that grows only in areas of strong faerzress.

The barren branches of this pale, gnarled tree seem more dead than alive, but once every 3 to 4 years, it produces a small amount of bitter red fruit that is used to make rare Underdark wines and elixirs.

MAGMA AND LAVA

While molten rock is underground, it is called magma. If it erupts to the surface from a volcano, it is called lava.

MOLTEN ROCK

Areas with exposed pools or streams of magma are illuminated by the dim, ruddy glow of the molten rock. The glare of molten rock is typically equal to moonlight.

PHOTOGENERATIVE ROCK

These rocks grow quickly when exposed to light. In each round of exposure, a photogenerative rock doubles in size until it's sixteen times as large as it was when unlit (4 rounds).

Eliminating the light halts its growth, and each hour of darkness reverses the effect of 1 round of light. Some Underdark undead use photogenerative rock in their demesnes to stall light-bearing adventurers until the undead can ready their defenses.

Photogenerative rock can also be used to seal a doorway and divert light-bearers into more trap-ridden or better-defended areas.

PHOTOSTATIC ROCK

Events that happen in the presence of this rock imprint upon it for a short time.

One cubic foot of photostatic rock picks up impressions in a 10-foot radius and automatically relays them to anyone who touches it later.

The effect is similar to that of a stone tell spell, except that the photostatic property reveals only what happened within its radius in the past hour.

Every additional cubic foot of photostatic rock provides 1 more hour of memory and expands the radius of sensitivity by 10 feet.

A photostatic rock records only what it witnesses (treat its perspective like a burst), so it cannot record what goes on beyond a closed door.

POISON GAS

These gases are deadly.

Anyone who ventures into an area of poison gas must succeed on a Fortitude save once per minute (DC 15, +1 per previous check) or take 1d4 points of Constitution damage.

Some poisonous gases also have the characteristics of irritating fumes, so their presence is obvious.

Others, however, offer no telltale burning of the throat or stinging in the eyes to warn creatures of the danger.

Any creature exposed to poison gas is entitled to a DC 15 Survival check to detect the threat before breathing enough to force a saving throw.

With a successful check, the creature can retreat before risking any damage.

A creature with the scent ability gains a +5 bonus on this check.

POPCORN

This knobby, crystalline growth forms in a wide variety of cave conditions and is sometimes called cave coral.

PUMICE

Rock that has been made liquid and frothy hardens into a light, porous stone called pumice.

QUICKSTONE

Quickstone is the Underdark's answer to quicksand. Like many Underdark features, it's much more terrible than its surface-world equivalent.

Quickstone looks like solid stone and blends into the surrounding rocks, but it functions like quicksand as given in the Dungeon Master's Guide, except that the Difficulty Class for each maneuver increases by 5.

Transmute mud to rock permanently solidifies quickstone, but a success on the spell's Reflex saving throw enables a creature trapped within it to escape.

RADIANT CRYSTAL

Some rare rocks of the Underdark are naturally radiant, ranging in brightness from starlight to full daylight, although daylight equivalence is quite rare.

The great vault of Deep Imaskar is roofed with radiant crystal that is as bright as weak surface daylight.

REFLECTIVE STONE

While not naturally luminescent, caverns made partially of reflective stone can be much more easily illuminated by small light sources than normal.

Reflective stone quadruples the radius of illumination of any light source brought inside.

RIPPLEBARK

A shelflike fungus that resembles nothing so much as a mass of rotting flesh, ripplebark is surprisingly edible without any special preparation, although it tastes much better if cooked properly.

Ripplebark grows naturally in living caves.

ROCK GOURDS

These rocks have been warped by long-term proximity to a portal leading to the Elemental Plane of Water.

Rock gourds are rare, naturally occurring stones, not created magic items, though they register as faint conjuration magic under examination with a detect magic spell.

Shaking a rock gourd causes water to dribble out. The ability of these stones to produce up to a gallon of water per day apiece makes them highly valued commodities in the Middledark and Lowerdark regions, where water is scarce.
Cost: 500 gp; Weight 10 lb.

SHIELD

Water flowing through a cave wall or ceiling sometimes builds up sediment on both sides of its entry point, creating two parallel plates on either side of a thin, sheetlike crack.

SHRIEK PASTE

This oily substance is derived from the fungus with a similar name.

When exposed to light of torch-intensity or brighter, the paste emits a horrific screech that lasts for 1 round. The noise is a useful signal—loud and easy to hear (Listen DC –10, modified for distance, barriers, and other relevant conditions), so Underdark denizens often smear it on areas they wish to protect from surface intruders who require light to see.

Once it has shrieked, the paste becomes inert. Shriek paste can be created with a DC 20 Craft (alchemy) check.

SICKSTONE

Sickstone glows with a nauseating, not-quite-green, not-quite-silver light that provides illumination to a radius of 40 feet.

Any creature within the range of this illumination must make a DC 15 Fortitude saving throw each round or take 1d6 points of Constitution damage.

A successful save reduces the Constitution damage to 1 point.

Anyone in physical contact with sickstone takes a –4 penalty on this saving throw, and any Constitution damage it takes becomes Constitution drain instead.

The damage caused by sickstone results from a magical disease, so creatures immune to magical diseases are immune to the effects of sickstone.

SICKSTONE UNGUENT

This paste is made of powdered sickstone (see Chapter 7) and other virulent poisons. It is usually applied to weapons.

SLICKSTONE

This rock is very smooth to the touch.

Although it is natural stone, it functions at all times as if it had a grease spell cast upon it.

An actual grease spell cast upon slickstone has no additional effect.

SODA STRAWS

These thin flutes, each the width of a drop of water, are how stalactites begin.

SPAR

This term refers to crystal growths in which the crystal faces and structure are visible to unaided sight. Many-faceted crystals that form underwater are called pool spars.

SPELUNKER'S KIT

This kit consists of a headlamp, head protection, protective clothing (including gloves and kneepads), and heavy boots that aid in all sorts of spelunking.

A spelunking kit grants the user a +2 circumstance bonus on Balance, Climb, Escape Artist, and Survival checks made to navigate tough-to-access areas (see Spelunking in Chapter 7).

SPIDERSTONE

Drow architects use this term to refer to obsidian, which they value for its glossy black appearance.

Spiderstone is frequently used in drow buildings that feature spider motifs.

STALACTITE

Mineral-laden water drips downward, creating a build-up of rock on the ceiling of a cavern.

STALACTITES

Stalactites formed by lava happen in two main ways.

Tubular lava stalactites are usually formed by volcanic gases.

Gas flows through lava in which different minerals are solidifying at quicker or slower rates, forming long tubes. The downward drips from such formations may form stalagmites.

The second type of lava stalactite is called a sharktooth stalactite.

This formation occurs when flowing lava coats existing protrusions, resulting in a broad shape that narrows to a point.

STALAGMITE

When mineral-heavy water drips down to the floor, the bits of rock and mineral start to pile up, creating a slowly growing protrusion on the floor.

STALAGMITES

Drip stalagmites form from material that pours off of or out of tubular lava stalactites.

These puddles of lava may mound up in stalagmites.

STUN GAS

The svirfneblin brew this gas from the spores of rare mushrooms.

It can be stored in airtight containers in liquid form, but when such a container is broken, the poison is released as a 5-foot puff of gas.

The deep gnomes create special, glass-headed darts to hold it and throw them at specific enemies or at the walls of caverns to disable large groups.

SUSSUR

Rare and magical, the so-called “deeproot” tree is found only in the largest of caverns. It can grow to a height of 60 feet, and its branches are long and gnarled, with banyanlike.

TORCHSTALKS

These nonmagical mushrooms have combustible, long-burning caps. The caps are hard to light, usually taking 1d4+1 minutes to ignite, but once it is lit, a torchstalk burns steadily for 24 hours and sheds light in a 10-foot radius. These fungi grow wild in the Middledark, especially in the North, and large domesticated crops of them can be found in Gatchorof, Gracklstugh, and most dwarf settlements. Drow rarely use them because they tend to prefer magical light sources when light is needed. One torchstalk subspecies explodes into choking spores when lit.

After burning for 5 rounds, a torchstalk of this variety bursts into fiery spores that can choke unwary travelers. Anyone in a 20-foot radius of a torchstalk when it bursts must make a DC 15 Fortitude save or take 1d4 points of Constitution damage. A DC 18 Knowledge (Underdark local) or Survival check allows an observer to distinguish explosive torchstalks from regular ones. aerial roots.

Few leaves grow on the sussur; it exists almost entirely on faerzress and is often found in caverns where wizard fire is prevalent. A sussur tree can drink in magic from its environs, so most sussurs are surrounded by antimagic fields that extend for hundreds of feet.

VIRILE MADNESS

An admixture of rare earths and magical rocks, virile madness is a dangerous, tempting poison. It grants the imbibor a temporary enhancement bonus to Strength and Constitution, while degrading her mental powers via penalties to Intelligence and Wisdom. It can be made with a DC 25 Craft (alchemy) check.

WATERORB

This bulbous fungus is aquatic. It grows in boulderlike patches underwater wherever the water deposits detritus.

WIZARD FIRE

The rarest and most wondrous of natural illuminations in the Realms Below, wizard fire consists of dancing sheets of dim light, like the northern lights of the surface world. Though it is only as bright as starlight, wizard fire is weird and beautiful.

Gases tend to concentrate in areas that are isolated in some way from the nearby passages. For example, a passage that dips down sharply and then climbs up again forms a natural, low-lying pocket where deadly fumes can accumulate. An air-filled passage sealed by water siphons at either end could also concentrate deadly gases.

ZURKHWOOD

This giant mushroom can reach a height of 30 to 40 feet. Its large spores are edible with proper preparation, but zurkhwood is important primarily because its stalks are hard and woody. Zurkhwood is one of the very few sources of timber (or anything like it) in the Underdark, and many items that would be crafted from wood in the surface world are fashioned from zurkhwood in the Realms Below.

ARROW, ALCHEMIST'S

Each of these projectiles carries a deadly load of alchemist's fire in its hollow shaft.

When it strikes a target, the arrow's shaft shatters, releasing the alchemist's fire directly onto the target.

One round after impact, the alchemist's fire ignites, dealing 1d4 points of damage.

The target can use a full-round action to attempt to extinguish the flames before taking this damage.

It takes a successful Reflex saving throw (DC 15) to extinguish the flames.

Rolling on the ground earns the target a +2 bonus on the save.

Submerging (such as by leaping into a lake) or magically extinguishing the flames automatically kills the flames.

ARROW, BLUNT

These arrows have wooden tips specially crafted to deal subdual damage instead of normal damage.

ARROW, FLIGHT

The light shaft and special design of this masterwork arrow increases a bow's range increment by 25 feet.

ARROW, SIGNAL

This arrow is specially designed to emulate a bird's call when fired.

Elven fletchers craft the arrows to make calls that will be recognized as signals by the elves of the community.

For example, a hawk's cry might signal an attack, and an owl's screech might signal a stealthy advance.

A successful Wilderness Lore check (DC 20) determines whether the sound comes from a bird or another source.

The intricate carving on the arrow shafts makes them clumsy in flight, imposing a –2 circumstance penalty on attack rolls.

ARROW, THUNDER

Thunder arrows are tipped with thunderstones (see Chapter 7 of the Player's Handbook).

A hit from a thunder arrow deals no damage but triggers the thunderstone's sonic attack.

Thunder arrows that miss should be treated as attacks with a grenadelike weapon (see Chapter 8 of the Player's Handbook).

BATTLEPICK, GNOME

A gnome battlepick is crafted and weighted to be used by creatures of Small size.

A Small character can use a gnome battlepick two-handed as a martial weapon.

BLADED GAUNTLET

Unlike with a standard gauntlet, an attack with a bladed gauntlet is not considered an unarmed attack.

The bladed gauntlet has two blades that extend from the back of the wrist following the line of the forearm.

The cost and weight are for a single gauntlet.

BOLAS, TWO-BALL

A set of two-ball bolas consists of two heavy wooden spheres connected by lengths of cord.

It is a ranged weapon used to trip an opponent.

When you throw a set of bolas, you make a ranged touch attack against your opponent.

If you hit, your opponent must succeed on a Dexterity or Strength check opposed by your Strength check or be tripped.

Bolas can only trip Medium-size or smaller targets.

Your opponent cannot trip you when you make a trip attack with a set of two-ball bolas.

BOLT, TUMBLING

A tumbling bolt resembles a standard crossbow bolt except for a few minuscule holes and vents along the shaft.

A channel allows air to pass through the bolt, which causes the bolt to tumble when fired.

The bolt deals +2 damage but only has one-half its normal range increment due to the way the projectile moves through the air.

CALCULUS, GNOME

This oversized sling is made to fire flasks filled with liquid. Common ammunition includes acid, alchemist's fire, and other alchemical substances.

Alchemical ammunition deals damage according to its properties, but it gains the range increment of the gnome calculus.

CHAIN-AND-DAGGER

When wielding the chain-and-dagger, you gain a +2 bonus on your opposed attack roll when attempting to disarm an opponent (including the roll to keep from being disarmed yourself, if you fail to disarm your foe).

You can also use this weapon to make trip attacks, gaining a +2 bonus on your trip attempt.

If you are tripped during your own trip attempt, you can opt to drop the chain-and-dagger instead of being tripped.

CHAKRAM

The chakram is a throwing disk or quoit about 1 foot in diameter, with a sharpened outer rim.

CLAW BRACER

A claw bracer is a metal armband with three steel claws projecting from the top, extending about 4 inches beyond the tip of the wearer's extended fingers.

The wearer can cast spells normally while wearing the bracer and cannot be disarmed.

Many claw bracers are enhanced as magic weapons.

CROSSBOW, GREAT

A great crossbow requires two hands to use effectively, regardless of the user's size.

You draw a great crossbow back by turning a winch.

Loading a great crossbow is a full-round action that provokes an attack of opportunity.

A Medium-size character cannot shoot or load a great crossbow with one hand at all.

With training, a Large creature can shoot, but not load, a great crossbow with one hand at a -4 penalty.

If a Large creature attempts to fire a separate great crossbow in each hand simultaneously, the standard penalties for two-weapon fighting apply.

DOUBLE BOW, ELVEN

This double-stringed longbow can be used as a normal longbow by anyone proficient in that weapon.

Characters with Exotic Weapon Proficiency (elven double bow) can use the bow to fire two arrows at once.

Nocking an arrow on the second string requires a move-equivalent action.

Once the wielder has taken an action to load the second string, his next attack is a double shot that launches both arrows simultaneously at the same target.

The wielder makes one attack roll at a -2 penalty to determine whether or not both arrows strike the target.

If the attack is successful, both arrows deal normal damage.

If the attack is a critical hit, only one arrow deals extra damage, and extra sneak attack damage is applied only once.

DUOM

The duom is a longspear with a standard spearhead, as well as two blades curved so that they point backward along the shaft.

The weapon has reach, allowing you to strike opponents 10 feet away with it.

Those proficient with the duom can also attack adjacent foes with the reversed heads using a practiced "reverse thrust".

Apply a -2 penalty on the attack roll if you use the duom to attack a second, adjacent opponent in the same round you attacked the first opponent.

FUKIMI-BARI (MOUTH DARTS)

These slim, almost needle-like metal darts are concealed in the mouth, then spit at the target.

Their effective range is extremely short, and they deal little damage, but they are highly useful when taking an opponent by surprise.

You can fire up to three fukimi-bari per attack (all at the same target).

Do not apply your Strength modifier to damage with fukimi-bari.

They are too small to carry the extra force that a strong character usually imparts to a thrown weapon.

The cost and weight are for a single fukimi-bari.

FULLBLADE

A fullblade is 18 inches longer than a greatsword and is too large for a Medium-size creature to use with two hands without special training; thus, it is an exotic weapon.

(Medium-size creatures cannot use a fullblade one-handed at all).

A Large creature could use the fullblade with one hand, but it would be assessed the standard  $-4$  nonproficiency penalty on its attack rolls; Large creatures can use the fullblade in two hands as a martial weapon.

A Large creature with the Exotic Weapon Proficiency (fullblade) feat can use the fullblade in one hand, but a Medium-size creature must use both hands even if it has the relevant feat.

A fullblade is also called an ogre's greatsword.

GAUNTLET, SPRING-LOADED

This gauntlet possesses a broad ridge of metal that extends along the bottom of the forearm to the edge of the wrist articulation, where a circular orifice is visible.

This ridge of metal hides a spring-loaded mechanism that can expel a bolt with great force, akin to a miniscule crossbow.

You load the gauntlet by inserting a bolt in the hole and pulling back a hidden lever.

Loading the spring-loaded gauntlet is a move-equivalent action that provokes an attack of opportunity.

You fire the spring-loaded gauntlet by sighting down your arm, then flip your hand back so that your palm faces your opponent—this motion fires the gauntlet.

The cost and weight are for a single gauntlet.

A character who attempts to fire two spring-loaded gauntlets at once incurs the standard penalty for two-weapon fighting.

The Ambidexterity feat lets someone avoid the  $-4$  off-hand penalty.

GREATSWORD, MERCURIAL

This huge blade hides a secret reservoir of quicksilver (also called mercury by alchemists) that runs along the interior of the blade in a slender channel.

When the blade is vertical, the mercury swiftly fills an interior bulb in the haft, but when swung, the heavy liquid flows out into the blade, making it heavier.

In nonproficient hands, this shifting mass penalizes the wielder by an additional  $-3$  penalty on attack rolls, beyond the normal  $-4$  nonproficiency penalty for using an exotic weapon untrained.

GYRSPIKE

A gyrspike is a double weapon.

A stout shaft holds a flail on one end and a longsword on the other.

You can fight with it as if fighting with two weapons, but if you do, you incur all the normal attack penalties for two-weapon fighting, as if you were using a one-handed weapon and a light weapon.

You get a  $+2$  bonus on your opposed attack roll when attempting to disarm an enemy when you wield a gyrspike (including the opposed attack roll to avoid being disarmed yourself if you fail to disarm your enemy).

You can also use this weapon to make trip attacks.

If you are tripped during your own trip attempt, you can drop the gyrspike to avoid being tripped.

HARPOON

The harpoon is a broad-bladed spear forged with barbs. The shaft of the harpoon has a trailing rope attached to control harpooned opponents.

Though designed for hunting whales and other large sea creatures, the harpoon can be used on dry land.

Even with the Exotic Weapon Proficiency (harpoon) feat, creatures smaller than Medium-size take a  $-2$  penalty on their attack rolls due to the harpoon's weight and bulk.

If it deals damage, the harpoon lodges in an opponent who fails a Reflex saving throw against a DC equal to  $10 +$  the damage dealt.

The harpooned creature moves at only half speed and cannot charge or run.

If you control the trailing rope by succeeding at an opposed Strength check while holding it, the harpooned creature can move only within the limits that the rope allows (the trailing rope is 30 feet long).

If the harpooned creature attempts to cast a spell, it must succeed on a Concentration check (DC 15) or fail, losing the spell.

The harpooned creature can pull the harpoon from its wound if it has two free hands and it takes a full-round action to do so, but it deals damage to itself equal to the initial damage the harpoon dealt.

For example, if you hit with a harpoon and deal 8 points of damage, the target takes another 8 points of damage when it removes the harpoon.

A character who succeeds on a Heal check (DC 15) can remove a harpoon without further damage.

JAVELIN, SPINNING

This light, flexible spear intended for ranged attacks resembles a standard javelin except for the spiral grooves that run down its length.

You can loop a throwing string around the shaft (the other end is tied to your finger).

The string imparts spin to the javelin upon release, improving the weapon's accuracy, range, and penetrating power by permitting a harder cast.

Looping a string around the javelin is a move-equivalent action that provokes an attack of opportunity.

Tying a casting string around your finger is a full-round action that provokes an attack of opportunity, but the same string is reused for multiple javelins.

The javelin can be thrown without spinning it, in which case its damage, range, and threat range are those of a standard javelin.

If used in melee, treat the spinning javelin as a standard javelin.

KHOPESH

You can use a khopesh to make trip attacks with its hooklike blade.

If you are tripped during your own trip attempt, you can drop the khopesh to avoid being tripped.

LONGSWORD, MERCURIAL

As the mercurial greatsword, except that in nonproficient hands, the shifting mass and feel of the blade penalizes the wielder by an additional  $-2$  penalty on attack rolls, beyond the normal  $-4$  nonproficiency penalty for using an exotic weapon untrained.

LUCERNE HAMMER

This polearm resembles a pick on a pole and is designed to puncture heavy armor.

MACE, DOUBLE

A stout shaft with a spiked, cylindrical head at each end, this is a double weapon.

You can fight with it as if fighting with two weapons, but if you do, you incur all the normal attack penalties associated with fighting with two weapons as if you are using a one-handed weapon and a light weapon (see Attacking with Two Weapons in Chapter 8 of the Player's Handbook).

A creature wielding a double weapon in one hand can't use it as a double weapon.

MANTI

A manti is a shortspear with four additional spear heads that project vertically from the shaft, creating a star pattern of five blade heads instead of just a single forward-pointing blade.

The advantage of the unusual blade arrangement is that you can make one additional attack of opportunity during the round.

MAUL

The maul is simply a two-handed warhammer of enormous size.

Dwarves favor it.

PANTHER CLAW

The panther claw looks much like a punch dagger with two extra blades.

The weapon retains the punch dagger's deadly force, and the extra blades are useful for disarming opponents.

Wielders proficient with the panther claw gain a  $+4$  circumstance bonus when making disarm attempts with it.

SAI

A sai's pronglike extrusions are designed to help catch and disarm opponents' weapons.

If you attempt to disarm your opponent using a sai, you gain a  $+4$  bonus on the opposed attack roll.

(You don't gain any bonus if someone tries to disarm you of your sai).

A monk using a sai can strike with her unarmed base attack bonus, including her more favorable attacks per round, along with other applicable modifiers.

SAPARA

This ancient sword is a smaller version of the khopesh.

You can use a sapara to make trip attacks with its hooklike blade.

If you are tripped during your own trip attempt, you can drop the sapara to avoid being tripped.

SCIMITAR, DOUBLE

The curved blades of the double scimitar are used most effectively when spinning and twirling with the weapon.

Despite its size, the weapon benefits more from quick, precise movement than from brute force.

The double scimitar is a double weapon.

You can fight with it as if fighting with two weapons, but if you do, you incur all the normal attack penalties associated with fighting with two weapons as if you are using a one-handed weapon and a light weapon (see Attacking with Two Weapons in Chapter 8 of the Player's Handbook).

A creature using a double weapon in one hand can't use it as a double weapon.

SHOTPUT, ORC

Special training turns a grapefruit-sized sphere of crude iron into a deadly projectile.

Even with the Exotic Weapon Proficiency (orc shotput) feat, a wielder must be Medium-size or larger to use the weapon effectively (or take an additional  $-3$  penalty on attack rolls in addition to the standard  $-4$  nonproficiency penalty).

SKIPROCK, HALFLING

These polished, perfectly weighted stones are prized by halflings, for if thrown well enough, they ricochet off one target to strike a second.

If the skiprock hits its target, it ricochets toward another target of the thrower's choice adjacent to the original target (within 5 feet).

The thrower immediately makes a second attack roll for the skiprock against the new target, with an attack bonus equal to the first roll  $-2$ .

Skiprocks could be used as sling bullets, but using a skiprock's ricochet ability in conjunction with a sling requires taking the Exotic Weapon Proficiency feat specifically for that purpose.

STUMP KNIFE

A stump knife is akin to a punching dagger, except that it can be securely attached to the stump of a missing forelimb. For someone proficient in its use, the stump knife becomes an extension of his body.

Against foes to whom you have dealt damage during a continuous melee, the stump knife's threat range is doubled (17–20).

Your opponent cannot disarm you of a stump knife.

SWORD, BUTTERFLY

A monk using a butterfly sword fights with her unarmed base attack bonus, including her more favorable number of attacks per round, along with other applicable modifiers.

THREE-SECTION STAFF

Originally a farm implement for threshing grain, this weapon is composed of three sections of wood of equal length, joined at the ends by chain, leather, or rope.

A monk using a three-section staff (for which she must take an Exotic Weapon Proficiency feat) fights with her unarmed base attack bonus and her more favorable number of attacks per round, along with other applicable attack modifiers.

The three-section staff requires two hands to use.

THROWING IRON

These weapons have complex blades with two or more edged or pointed protrusions.

Unlike most hurled weapons, throwing irons are as often thrown along a horizontal plane as along a vertical one.

TIGER CLAWS

Also known as “bagh nakh”, this is a strap or glove fitted with spikes in the palm and wielded like brass knuckles. Your opponent cannot use a disarm action to disarm you of tiger claws.

An attack with tiger claws is considered an armed attack.

A monk using tiger claws can strike with her unarmed base attack bonus, including her more favorable number of attacks per round, along with other applicable modifiers.

The cost and weight are for a single tiger claw.

A slightly different version, the nekode, is both a weapon and a climbing tool.

Using a pair of nekodes while climbing grants a +1 circumstance bonus on Climb checks.

This bonus does not stack with the +2 bonus from using a climber's kit, because they're essentially the same circumstance.

TONFA

A monk using a tonfa can strike with her unarmed base attack bonus, including her more favorable number of attacks per round, along with other applicable modifiers.

TRIPLE DAGGER

This weapon is used in the off hand as a means to disarm an opponent—you hold it as you would a shield, not another weapon, and so do not take penalties for fighting with two weapons.

When using a triple dagger, you get a +3 circumstance bonus on your opposed attack roll when attempting to disarm an opponent (including the roll to keep from being disarmed if you fail to disarm your opponent).

The triple dagger could also be used as a normal dagger, if desired, but if used in the off hand, all normal penalties for fighting with two weapons apply.

WAR FAN

This weapon appears to the untrained eye as nothing more than a beautifully crafted lady's fan.

In fact, the vanes of the fan are crafted from steel, and the tips are needle-sharp.

When first entering melee using a war fan, you may attempt a Bluff check against an opponent's Sense Motive check.

If you win the contest, you gain a +4 bonus on attacks made against that foe during the first round of combat.

WARD CESTUS

This is a stout leather gauntlet with a well-forged metal weight sewn into it over the knuckles.

A strike with a ward cestus is considered an unarmed attack.

If you take a Total Defense action, you gain an additional +1 bonus to your Armor Class, representing blows you block with the back of your protected hand.

Your opponent cannot disarm you of a ward cestus.

The cost and weight are for a single ward cestus.

WHIP, MIGHTY

A character who takes the Exotic Weapon Proficiency (whip) feat is also proficient in the mighty whip.

A mighty whip is made with especially heavy material that allows a strong wielder to take advantage of an above-average Strength score.

The mighty whip allows you to add your Strength bonus to its subdual damage, up to the maximum bonus indicated.

TABLE 1–5: MIGHTY WHIPS AND WHIP-DAGGERS

Item	Cost	Damage	Crit	Range	Weight	Type

WHIP-DAGGER AND WHIP-DAGGER, MIGHTY

A character who takes the Exotic Weapon Proficiency (whip) feat is also proficient in the whip-dagger. Unlike standard whips, the whip-dagger's ability to deal damage is unhindered by armor bonuses and natural armor bonuses.

Although you keep it in hand, the whip-dagger is treated as a ranged weapon with a maximum range of 15 feet and no range penalties.

Because the whip-dagger can wrap around an enemy's leg or other limb, you can make trip attacks with it.

If you are tripped during your own trip attempt, you can drop the whip dagger to avoid being tripped.

You get a +2 bonus on your opposed attack roll when attempting to disarm an opponent (including the roll to keep from being disarmed yourself if you fail to disarm your opponent).

A mighty whip-dagger is made with especially heavy material that allows a strong user to take advantage of an above-average Strength score.

The mighty whip-dagger allows you to add your Strength bonus to damage, up to the maximum bonus indicated.

BOOK OF EXALTED DEEDS (3.5)

ENTANGLING POLE

The entangling pole is a highly specialized weapon, used to catch and entangle an opponent without causing great harm.

It is normally used to hook and catch the clothing of an opponent.

When you use an entangling pole in this way, you make a grapple attack without provoking an attack of opportunity. You make a melee touch attack with the weapon to “grab” the target's clothing.

This attack does not work against a character in heavy armor, or against most monsters that do not wear clothing (though it does work against a monster with shaggy fur).

If the touch attack is successful, you make an opposed grapple check, using the size modifier for the entangling pole (+4 for a two-handed weapon) instead of your own size.

If you win the opposed check, you have a hold on the target, but you do not deal any damage.

If you lose, you fail to start the grapple.

To maintain the grapple, you do not need to move into your opponent's space.

The entangling pole holds your opponent 10 feet away from you.

While you maintain the grapple, you do not have the option to damage or pin your opponent.

Your opponent can try to escape or wriggle free, attack with a light weapon, or cast a spell with no somatic components and a casting time of 1 standard action.

An entangling pole can also be used as a normal weapon, dealing the damage shown on Table 3–1 but not entangling the opponent.

An entangling pole has reach.

You can strike opponents 10 feet away with it, but you can't use it against an adjacent foe.

GRASPING POLE

The grasping pole is a pole arm designed to capture opponents with a minimum of harm.

A wielder who hits a Small or Medium opponent with a grasping pole can immediately initiate a grapple (as a free action) without provoking an attack of opportunity.

(See Grapple in Chapter 8: Combat of the Player's Handbook for more information).

In addition to the normal options available to a grappler, the wielder of a grasping pole can attempt to pull his target to the ground (the equivalent of a trip attack, though no attack roll is necessary).

A grasping pole has reach.

You can strike opponents 10 feet away with it, but you can't use it against an adjacent foe.

LASSO

A lasso is an entangling weapon that deals no damage, but it entangles only parts of an opponent's body.

When you use a lasso to entangle your opponent's arms, you make a ranged touch attack against your target.

A lasso's maximum range is 30 feet.

If you hit, the target is partially entangled, taking a –2 on attack rolls and a –4 penalty on effective Dexterity.

The creature's speed is not reduced, and it can still charge or run, but if you control the trailing rope by succeeding at an opposed Strength check while holding it, the lassooed creature can only move within the limits that the rope allows.

If the lassooed creature attempts to cast a spell, it must succeed on a DC 15 Concentration check or be unable to cast the spell.

The lassooed creature can escape with a DC 20 Escape Artist check as a full-round action.

The lasso has 2 hp and can be broken with a DC 23 Strength check—also a full-round action.

Alternatively, you can use a lasso to make trip attacks.

If you are tripped during your own trip attempt, you can drop the lasso to avoid being tripped.

TRUNCHEON

A truncheon is essentially a heavier version of the sap—a one-handed martial weapon that deals nonlethal damage. As with a sap, a rogue wielding a truncheon can deal extra nonlethal damage with a sneak attack, but only if she is proficient in its use.

CHAMPIONS OF VALOR (3.5)

HURLCLUB

Hurlclubs are greatclubs modified and specially weighted for throwing.

They are identical to greatclubs in every way (including proficiency and all feats or other abilities related to using a greatclub) except that they cost 10 gp and have a range increment of 5 feet.

Throwing a hurlclub requires two hands.

Despite tavern tales to the contrary, a hurlclub doesn't return to its thrower; however, some Knights attach long chains to their hurlclubs to prevent losing them (add 1 gp to cost).

Once thrown, an attached hurlclub applies a –1 penalty to its user's AC and on Strength- and Dexterity-based ability checks and skill checks until it is pulled back in.

Reeling in and picking up a thrown hurlclub is a full-round action that provokes attacks of opportunity.

CITYSCAPE (3.5)

Martial Weapon	Cost	Dmg (S)	Dmg (M)	Critical	Range Increment	Weight	Type	Search DC
One-Handed Melee Weapons
Cloak, weighted	95 gp	1d4	1d6	x2	--	5 lb.	Bludgeoning	25
Swordcane	60 gp	1d4	1d6	18-20	--	3 lb.	Piercing	25
Ranged Weapons
Lute-bow	250 gp	1d4	1d6	x3	40 ft.	5 lb.	Piercing	30

CLOAK, WEIGHTED

This cloak has an unusually thick lining at the bottom, which is filled with lead shot, a thin chain, or some other weight.

When held with the other end wrapped around the hand, it can be wielded much as a flail, including bonuses to disarm and the ability to trip.

LUTE-BOW

The upper layer of wood to which the strings are attached can be rotated with a standard action, so that the strings now lie perpendicular to the lute itself.

The wood and the strings are treated to offer extra strength and resistance, allowing them to flex like a bow.

Although it is held horizontally, like a crossbow, it is a hand-fired weapon, so it resembles a shortbow in usage.

SWORDCANE

This is the classic “rapier hidden in a cane”.

COMPLETE ADVENTURER (3.5)

TABLE 4-1: WEAPONS

Exotic Weapons	Cost	Dmg (S)	Dmg (M)	Critical	Range Increment	Weight <sup>1</sup>	Type

Longstaff	15 gp	1d4/1d4	1d6/1d6	x2	—	6 lb.	Bludgeoning

EXOTIC WEAPONS FROM COMPLETE WARRIOR

Complete Warrior introduced several exotic weapons that could benefit from allowing those specialized in the use of similar weapons to apply the benefit of certain feats (specifically, Greater Weapon Focus, Greater Weapon Specialization, Improved Critical, Weapon Focus, and Weapon Specialization) to an exotic weapon's use as well. Just as the barbed dagger in this book is similar enough to the dagger that it allows a character to treat it as one for the purpose of several feats, consider expanding this benefit to the following weapons.

Weapon	Treat as . . .
Blowgun, greater	Blowgun
Bolas, barbed	Bolas
Greatbow	Longbow
Greatspear	Longspear
Pick, dire	Pick, heavy
Poleaxe, heavy	Halberd
Warmace	Mace, heavy

DAGGER, BARBED

Barbed daggers, as their name implies, look like normal daggers with long barbs covering the blade.

The design makes the weapon more difficult to wield properly than a normal dagger, but it allows those skilled in the weapon's use to deal more damage with a well-placed attack.

If you have 5 or more ranks in Sleight of Hand and use a barbed dagger, you gain a +2 bonus on damage rolls on any successful sneak attack made with the weapon as it twists in the wound.

This bonus also applies (and is therefore doubled) on successful critical hits with the weapon.

Characters proficient with the barbed dagger can treat it as a dagger for the purpose of any of the following feats:

Greater Weapon Focus, Greater Weapon Specialization, Improved Critical, Weapon Focus, and Weapon Specialization.

LONGAXE

A longaxe looks like a greataxe with an elongated haft. This feature makes the weapon awkward to wield by those unfamiliar with its use, but those proficient with the weapon can use the haft's extra length to attack foes more than 5 feet away as long as they are willing to forgo precision in favor of dealing extra damage.

If you are proficient with the longaxe, you can treat it as a reach weapon any time you use the Power Attack feat to shift 3 or more points of your attack bonus from attack to damage.

When you use a longaxe in this manner, you can strike opponents 10 feet away with it, but you cannot use it against an adjacent foe.

Because you determine the use of the Power Attack feat for an entire turn, you must wield the longaxe as either a reach weapon or a normal weapon until the beginning of your next turn once you make the decision.

You cannot wield it as both a reach weapon and a normal weapon in the same turn.

Characters proficient with the longaxe can treat it as a greataxe for the purpose of any of the following feats: Greater Weapon Focus, Greater Weapon Specialization, Improved Critical, Weapon Focus, and Weapon Specialization.

LONGSTAFF

As its name implies, the longstaff is a longer version of the quarterstaff.

The extra length makes the weapon much more difficult to use, but those skilled in its use are better able to protect themselves from multiple attackers when fighting cautiously.

If you are proficient with the longstaff and you fight defensively or employ the total defense combat maneuver, you cannot be flanked for the rest of the round.

This benefit also applies if you are proficient in the weapon, have the Combat Expertise feat, and shift at least 2 points of your attack bonus to AC for the round.

A longstaff is a double weapon.

You can fight with it as if fighting with two weapons, but if you do, you incur all the normal attack penalties associated with fighting with two weapons, just as if you were fighting with a one-handed weapon and a light weapon (see Two-Weapon Fighting, page 160 of the Player's Handbook).

You can also strike with either end singly.

A creature wielding a longstaff in one hand can't use it as a double weapon—only one end of the weapon can be used in any given round.

The longstaff is a special monk weapon.

This designation gives a monk wielding a longstaff special options (see the flurry of blows description, page 40 of the Player's Handbook).

Characters proficient with the longstaff can treat it as a quarterstaff for the purpose of any of the following feats: Greater Weapon Focus, Greater Weapon Specialization, Improved Critical, Weapon Focus, and Weapon Specialization.

RAPIER, QUICKBLADE

Quickblade rapiers are longer and thinner than normal rapiers, with specially tapered blades and carefully balanced pommels.

The design makes the weapon more difficult to wield properly than a normal rapier, but it allows those skilled in the weapon's use to disarm opponents more easily and to feint more effectively in combat.

Most quickblade rapiers are at least masterwork in quality. If you are proficient with the quickblade rapier, you gain a +2 bonus on opposed attack rolls made to disarm an enemy (including the roll to avoid being disarmed if such an attempt fails).

You also gain a +2 circumstance bonus on Bluff checks made to feint in combat.

You can use the Weapon Finesse feat (see page 102 of the Player's Handbook) to apply your Dexterity modifier instead of your Strength modifier to attack rolls with a quickblade rapier sized for you.

You can't use a quickblade rapier in two hands to apply  $1\frac{1}{2}$  times your Strength modifier to damage.

Characters proficient with the quickblade rapier can treat it as a rapier for the purpose of any of the following feats: Greater Weapon Focus, Greater Weapon Specialization, Improved Critical, Weapon Focus, and Weapon Specialization.

SWORD, SHORT, BROADBLADE

Broadblade short swords have a wider blade and crossguard than normal swords.

This feature makes them more difficult to wield in combat, but the design allows skilled users to defend themselves better when fighting cautiously.

If you are proficient with the broadblade short sword and you fight defensively or employ the total defense combat maneuver, you gain a +2 dodge bonus to AC for the rest of the round in addition to the normal AC bonus from the combat maneuver (+2 for fighting defensively or +4 for total defense).

This bonus also applies if you are proficient with the weapon, have the Combat Expertise feat, and shift at least 2 points of your attack bonus to AC for the round.

Because of its benefit when fighting defensively, the broadblade short sword is a popular off-hand weapon. Characters proficient with the broadblade short sword can treat it as a short sword for the purpose of any of the following feats: Greater Weapon Focus, Greater Weapon Specialization, Improved Critical, Weapon Focus, and Weapon Specialization.

COMPLETE SCOUNDREL (3.5)

TABLE 5-2: SURPRISE WEAPONS

Weapon	Cost	Weight <sup>1</sup>
Bow blade	4 gp	1/2 lb.
Crossbow bayonet, knife	2 gp	1 lb.
Crossbow bayonet, sword	4 gp	2 lb.
Hand crossbow blade	4 gp	1/2 lb.
Boot blade	4 gp	1/2 lb.
Elbow blade	4 gp	1 lb.
Knee blade	20 gp	2 lb.
Sleeve blade	4 gp	1 lb.
Instrument blade	10 gp	1/2 lb.

BOOT BLADE

The most common hidden blade, a boot blade is concealed in the sole of a boot, usually under the toes.

The wearer activates the blade by striking a certain part of the boot (usually the toe) against the ground, which flips the weapon into position.

Treat a boot blade as a dagger.

BOW BLADE

Some archers add blades to the grips or risers of their weapons.

Bowyers can craft bows that allow such blades to be permanently affixed.

Treat a bow blade as a punching dagger.

CROSSBOW BAYONET

Bayonets easily fit onto light or heavy crossbows, attaching to the stock below where the bolt fires.

Crossbow bayonets come in two kinds: knife and sword.

A knife bayonet attached to a crossbow functions as a shortspear, while a sword bayonet attached to a crossbow is treated as a spear.

A crossbow with an attached bayonet cannot be thrown as a true spear can be, though it can be set against a charge.

A hand crossbow is too small to accept a bayonet (but see hand crossbow blade, below).

ELBOW BLADE

Hidden within bracers or the forearm piece of a suit of armor, elbow blades jut out backward and lie flat against the back of the bearer's upper arm.

Activating an elbow blade usually requires a flick or twist of the wrist.

Treat an elbow blade as a punching dagger.

HAND CROSSBOW BLADE

Adding a short blade to the front of a hand crossbow allows you to defend yourself in melee combat without having to draw a different weapon.

The blade functions as a dagger.

INSTRUMENT BLADE

Most stringed or wind instruments have a long, narrow section that can conceal a thin blade.

Releasing a hidden catch allows the blade to spring forth.

Such a blade functions as a dagger.

Any stringed instrument whose neck is designed to hide a blade includes reinforcing metal bars for added support.

KNEE BLADE

Held within the greaves of a suit of armor, a knee blade extends with a quick upward thrust of the knee.

The flat of the blade rests against the bearer's thigh, allowing for full range of movement.

Treat a knee blade as a short sword.

SLEEVE BLADE

Strapped to the forearm of its wearer, a sleeve blade lies hidden under a long-sleeved shirt or dress.

Making a quick downward flick with the wrist triggers the mechanism, extending the blade beyond the top of the wearer's hand.

Treat a sleeve blade as a dagger.

Greatbow, composite	200 gp	1d8	1d10	×3	130 ft.	6 lb.	Piercing

Object Weight	Damage <sup>1</sup>	Examples
Less than 2 lb. <sup>2</sup>	1d3	Mug, torch
2 lb.–5 lb.	1d4	Lantern, manacles
6 lb.–10 lb.	1d6	Chair, shovel
11 lb.–25 lb.	1d8	Ladder, small table
26 lb.–50 lb.	2d6	Barrel (empty)
51 lb.–100 lb.	3d6	Chest (full), big table
101 lb.–200 lb.	4d6	Cart
201 lb.–400 lb.	5d6	Wagon

<sup>1</sup> A sharp object deals damage as an object of twice its weight. For instance, a broken bottle (1 lb.) deals 1d4 points of damage, not 1d3. Conversely, a soft or malleable object, such as a gourd, deals damage as an object of half its weight, and the damage is nonlethal.

<sup>2</sup> If an item has no weight worth noting, it doesn't deal any damage when used as a weapon.

BLOWGUN, GREATER

Like its smaller cousin (see page 145 of the Dungeon Master's Guide), the greater blowgun is often used to deliver poison.

The darts it fires are larger than blowgun needles, but smaller than a thrown dart.

These darts deal damage in addition to delivering poison.

A greater blowgun requires two hands to use or reload.

Loading a blowgun is a move action that provokes attacks of opportunity.

A greater blowgun has a maximum range of five range increments.

BOLAS, BARBED

This weapon is similar to a normal set of bolas, except that its weighted balls are studded with hooked barbs and thus deal lethal (not nonlethal) damage.

Because the barbed bolas can wrap around an enemy's leg or other limb, you can use this weapon to make a ranged trip attack against an opponent.

You can't be tripped during your own trip attempt when using a set of barbed bolas.

For purposes of weapon proficiency and similar feats, barbed bolas are treated as if they were bolas.

Thus, if you have Exotic Weapon Proficiency (bolas), you are also proficient with barbed bolas.

BOOMERANG

The boomerang is a curved throwing stick that returns to its thrower if it misses its target.

To catch a returning boomerang, the thrower must make an attack roll (as if he were throwing the boomerang) and hit AC 10.

Failure indicates the boomerang lands in a randomly determined square adjacent to the thrower (if the thrower is proficient) or 1d4 squares away in a random direction (if not proficient).

BUCKLER-AXE, DWARVEN

At first glance the dwarven buckler-axe appears similar to a standard buckler, but this weapon has enlarged bladelike edges at its top and bottom, allowing the wielder to swing it like an axe.

Thus, in addition to its obvious protective qualities, it proves a capable off-hand weapon or emergency weapon when disarmed.

A dwarven buckler-axe grants its wielder a +1 shield bonus to Armor Class.

As with any shield, when you attack with a dwarven buckler-axe, you do not get the shield bonus to your AC.

The buckler-axe also provides a -1 armor check penalty and incurs a 5% arcane spell failure chance for its wielder.

Like a spiked shield, a buckler-axe can be enhanced as a weapon, as a shield, or both, but such enhancements must be paid for and applied separately.

BULL RUSH

If you perform a bull rush while carrying a big, sturdy object (such as a bench or table), you add a +2 bonus on your Strength check to push back the defender.

DART, BLOWGUN

A blowgun dart resembles a lightweight, undersized arrow. You don't apply your Strength modifier to damage with a blowgun dart.

A blowgun dart can't effectively be used as a melee weapon.

Blowgun darts come in a leather pouch that holds 10 darts.

A dart that hits its target is destroyed; one that misses has a 50% chance to be destroyed or lost.

DEFENSE

Objects with lots of surface area (such as tables) grant you a +2 shield bonus to Armor Class (or a +4 shield bonus to AC if you use the total defense action), but require two hands to use.

DISARM

Any object with a lot of protrusions (such as a chair or a broken wagon wheel) or that can easily ensnare objects (such as a cloak or a ladder) grants the wielder a +2 bonus on opposed attack rolls made to disarm an enemy (including the roll to avoid being disarmed if such an attempt fails).

ENTANGLE

Any sheetlike flexible object (such as a carpet or tapestry) can entangle an opponent with a successful ranged touch attack.

An entangled creature takes a -2 penalty on attack rolls and a -4 penalty to Dexterity, can move at only half speed, cannot run or charge, and may have difficulty casting spells (see the Concentration skill description, page 69 of the Player's Handbook).

Escaping from such an object requires a standard action and a DC 10 Escape Artist check.

These objects are treated as two-handed weapons.

GREATBOW

You need at least two hands to use a bow, regardless of its size.

A greatbow sized for a Medium character is 6 feet or more in length when strung.

A greatbow is too unwieldy to use while mounted.

Like other bows, if you have a penalty for low Strength, apply it to damage rolls when using a greatbow.

If you have a bonus for high Strength, you can apply it to damage rolls when you use a composite greatbow (see below) but not a regular greatbow.

GREATBOW, COMPOSITE

You need at least two hands to use a bow, regardless of its size.

A composite greatbow is too unwieldy to use while mounted.

A composite greatbow sized for a Medium character is 6 feet or more in length when strung.

Composite greatbows follow all of the normal rules for composite bows, including strength ratings.

Each point of Strength bonus granted by the bow adds 200 gp to the cost.

GREATSPEAR

This broad-bladed spear has a long, flat blade, and is too heavy to wield properly without proficiency.

HAMMER, DOUBLE

A double hammer is a double weapon.

You can fight with it as if fighting with two weapons, but if you do, you incur all the normal attack penalties associated with fighting with two weapons as if you were attacking with a one-handed weapon and a light weapon.

(See page 160 of the Player's Handbook for details on fighting with two weapons).

LAJATANG

The lajatang is a staff with a crescent-shaped blade at each end.

A lajatang is a double weapon.

You can fight with it as if fighting with two weapons, but if you do, you incur all the normal attack penalties associated with fighting with two weapons: a one-handed weapon and a light weapon (see page 160 of the Player's Handbook).

A monk who is proficient with the lajatang can treat it as a special monk weapon, as described in the monk class description (page 40 of the Player's Handbook).

Each end counts as a separate weapon for the purpose of the flurry of blows ability, similar to how the quarterstaff works.

LIGHTBLADE, ELVEN

This rapierlike weapon is the size of a short sword, but weighs only as much as a dagger.

Dexterous elf fighters and rogues favor it.

Its thin, flexible blade slips easily into the seams of armor or between the ribs of a foe.

Some elf nobles carry a lightblade—often decorated with intricate filigree and tiny gemstones—as a sign of their station, even if they aren't proficient in its use.

MANCATCHER

City guards and others who prefer to capture their opponents unharmed use the mancatcher.

A wielder who hits a target of its size or one size category smaller than it with a mancatcher can immediately attempt to grapple (as a free action) without provoking an attack of opportunity.

Any grapple check you make using a mancatcher includes the mancatcher's enhancement bonus (if any) and any other bonuses you might have on attack rolls with the weapon (such as from the Weapon Focus feat).

If you grapple a target with a mancatcher, you are considered grappling, but unless your target can reach you, he can't attempt to attack you, damage you, or pin you.

You can escape the grapple automatically by releasing the target as a standard action.

In addition to the normal options available to a grappler, the wielder of a mancatcher can attempt to force his target to the ground (the equivalent of a trip attack, though no attack roll is necessary).

The mancatcher is a reach weapon and cannot be used against adjacent opponents.

MAUL

A maul is too large to use in one hand without special training (the appropriate Exotic Weapon Proficiency feat).

A character can use a maul two-handed as a martial weapon.

PICK, DIRE

A dire pick resembles a heavy pick, but with a longer shaft and a more massive head.

A dire pick is too large to use in one hand without special training (the appropriate Exotic Weapon Proficiency feat).

A character can use a dire pick two-handed as a martial weapon.

POLEAXE, HEAVY

A heavy poleaxe has reach; you can strike opponents 10 feet away with it, but you can't use it against an adjacent foe.

Normally, you strike with the heavy poleaxe's axe head, but the spike on the end is useful against charging opponents.

If you use a ready action to set a heavy poleaxe against a charge, you deal double damage if you score a hit against a charging creature.

REACH

Long objects (such as ladders) have reach, allowing a Small or Medium character to strike at opponents up to 10 feet away (but not at adjacent foes).

These objects are treated as two-handed weapons.

SCOURGE

This multitailed, barbed whip is often dipped in a poison delivered via injury.

You get a +2 bonus on your opposed attack roll when attempting to disarm an opponent (including the roll to keep from being disarmed if the attack fails) with this weapon.

THINBLADE, ELVEN

This rapierlike weapon is the size of a longsword, but much lighter.

Dexterous elf fighters and rogues favor it.

Its thin, flexible blade slips easily into the seams of armor, or between the ribs of an enemy.

You can use the Weapon Finesse feat to apply your Dexterity modifier instead of your Strength modifier to attack rolls with an elven thinblade.

TORTOISE BLADE, GNOME

This contraption is designed to be used by a gnome in his or her off hand.

It is particularly useful in cramped tunnels or warrens where swinging a weapon is difficult or impossible.

It looks like a turtle shell strapped to the wielder's wrist, with a daggerlike blade jutting out where the wielder's fingers should be.

A tortoise blade grants a +1 shield bonus to Armor Class. As with any shield, when you attack with a tortoise blade you do not get the shield bonus to your AC.

A tortoise blade also provides a -1 armor check penalty and incurs a 5% arcane spell failure chance for its wielder.

Like a spiked shield, a tortoise blade can be enhanced as a weapon, as a shield, or both, but such enhancements must be paid for and applied separately.

TRIP

An object with protrusions at the end (such as a hat rack or a barstool) or that can wrap around a leg (such as a chain) can be used to make trip attempts.

If you are tripped during your own trip attempt, you can drop the improvised weapon to avoid being tripped.

WARMACE

Anyone wielding a warmace takes a -1 penalty to Armor Class because the weight of the weapon makes it difficult to recover quickly from swinging it.

A warmace is too large to use in one hand without special training (the appropriate Exotic Weapon Proficiency feat).

A character can use a warmace two-handed as a martial weapon.

DEITIES AND DEMIGODS (3.0)

KHOPESH

Medium-size Exotic Weapon—Melee: Cost 20 gp, Damage 1d8, Critical 19–20/x2, Range —, Weight 12 lb., Type Slashing.

A character can use a khopesh to make trip attacks due to its hooklike blade.

If the wielder is tripped during the trip attempt, the character can drop the khopesh to avoid being tripped.

TIGER CLAWS

Tiny Exotic Weapon—Melee: Cost 5 gp, Damage 1d4, Critical x2, Range —, Weight 2 lb., Type Piercing.

A character using tiger claws cannot be disarmed with the disarm action.

A monk using tiger claws fights with her unarmed base attack bonus, including her more favorable number of attacks per round, along with other applicable attack modifiers.

DRACONOMICON (3.5)

DRAGONBONE BOW

A bow carved from a single bone of a dragon (a thigh bone or similarly large bone) displays superior tensile strength and power.

Such a bow is considered a composite bow (short or long) with a strength rating set by the crafter.

In addition, the bow's range increment is 20 feet longer than normal for the bow's type (90 feet for a composite shortbow or 130 feet for a composite longbow).

Dragoncraft Price: as composite bow +100 gp; Dragon Part: dragon bone; Skill: Craft (bowyer); Weight: 3 lb.

DRAGONFANG WEAPON

Dragonfang weapons are masterwork weapons crafted from the claws and teeth of a dragon.

In addition to the +1 nonmagical enhancement bonus on attack rolls granted by its masterwork quality, a dragonfang weapon deals 1 point of energy damage on each successful hit.

The type of energy is the same as that of the dragon's breath weapon.

If a dragon doesn't have a breath weapon that deals acid, cold, electricity, fire, or sonic damage, dragonfang weapons made from its remains do not deal any extra damage.

This damage is treated as an extraordinary (and thus nonmagical) feature of the weapon.

It doesn't stack with any other energy damage (of the same type) dealt by the weapon.

A single tooth or claw from a dragon can be crafted into a light weapon of the same size category as the dragon, a one-handed weapon of one size category smaller, or a two-handed weapon of two size categories smaller.

A single dragon's body can provide enough material for up to twelve weapons.

Only piercing and slashing weapons may be created as dragonfang weapons.

Dragoncraft Price: 300 gp; Dragon Part: dragon tooth or claw; Skill: Craft (weaponsmithing); Weight: 2 lb.

ANTIMATTER RIFLE

The antimatter rifle is a devastating short-range attack weapon that can be fired no more than once per round. It holds two shots. Reloading it is a standard action.

BALLISTA

The ballista is essentially a very large crossbow.

It makes attacks with a straight attack roll (1d20) with no modifications (no character base attack bonuses, ability modifiers, etc.) except for range. Loading and cocking a ballista is 3 full-round actions. A ballista bolt weighs 5 lbs and costs 2gp.

BLOWGUN

This is used to fire small needles a long distance. It is silent, and its needles most often are used to poison foes.

BOMB

This round gunpowder bomb must be lit before it is thrown. Lighting the bomb is a standard action. The explosive deals 2d6 points of fire damage. Those caught within the blast radius can make a Reflex save (DC 20) to take half damage.

BULLETS

These large, round, lead bullets are sold in bags of 10. The bag has negligible weight.

CATAPULT, HEAVY

A heavy catapult is a large engine capable of throwing rocks or heavy objects with great force.

When fired, one of the crew makes a Profession (siege engineer) check (DC 20).

If successful, where the object actually lands is determined by rolling 1d12 and consulting the Deviation (10 ft. to 16 ft.) Diagram (found in Chapter 3: Running the Game).

The center is the desired target.

If the check is failed, the DM secretly rolls and consults the same deviation diagram.

The result is now where the catapult is actually aimed.

This new result is used as the center to determine the actual deviation of the attack.

For example, a catapult is used to attack a stone tower.

The Profession (siege engineer) check fails, the DM rolls an 11.

By consulting the diagram, she determines that the actual target is 10 feet from the desired target, behind and to the left.

Now, a crew member rolls 1d12 and gets an 8.

After consulting the Deviation (10 ft. to 16 ft.) Diagram to see where the object goes, the DM ascertains that it falls 10 feet short and to the left of the actual target, which is 20 feet to the left of the desired target.

Loading the catapult and preparing it to fire takes the full crew 8 full rounds.

Initially aiming (or reaiming) takes 10 minutes in addition to loading and preparation time.

Three to four crew members can operate the device in three times this time.

Fewer than three crew members cannot operate the device.

CATAPULT, LIGHT

This is a smaller, lighter version of the heavy catapult (see that entry for how to operate it).

Two crew members can load and prepare this device in 5 full rounds and aim (or reaim) in 5 minutes.

One person can crew the engine, but it takes three times the time to aim and prepare.

DYNAMITE

This short, thin cylinder of explosive must be lit before it is thrown or set.

Lighting the dynamite is a standard action.

The explosive has a blast radius of 5 feet and deals 3d6 points of fire damage.

Those caught within the blast radius can make a Reflex save (DC 20) to take half damage.

ENERGY PACK

This small pack fits snugly into the butt of a laser rifle, laser pistol, or antimatter rifle.

It powers a laser pistol or laser rifle for fifty shots or an antimatter rifle for two shots.

FLAMER

The flamer can only be fired once per round and must be reloaded after firing ten times.

Reloading is a standard action.

FUEL PACK

This extremely sturdy pack clips snugly onto the barrel of a flamer near its base.

It contains enough concentrated flamer fuel for ten shots.

GRENADE LAUNCHER

The grenade launcher can fire fragmentation or smoke grenades using its range, but must be reloaded each time it fires, requiring a standard action.

The grenade launcher is a tube set on a metal tripod and equipped with a sighting mechanism.

A single smoke grenade or fragmentation grenade easily slips into the tube.

GRENADE, FRAGMENTATION

A fragmentation grenade looks like a large egg on a 1-foot-long stick with small fins.

If thrown, it uses its range increment, but if launched from a grenade launcher, it uses that weapon's range increment.

Fragmentation grenades are advanced antipersonnel explosives that deal damage that is half piercing damage and half fire damage in a 20-foot radius.

Those caught within the blast radius can make a Reflex save (DC 20) to take half damage.

GRENADE, SMOKE

A smoke grenade looks like a squat cylinder on a 1-foot-long stick with small fins.

If thrown, it uses its range increment, but if launched from a grenade launcher, it uses that weapon's range increment. One round after it lands or hits its target, this nondamaging explosive emits a cloud of smoke in a 20-foot radius that persists in still conditions for 1d3+6 rounds and in windy conditions for 1d3+1 rounds.

Visibility within the smoke is limited to 2 feet.

Everything within the cloud has 90% concealment.

GUNPOWDER

While gunpowder burns (with an ounce consuming itself in 1 round and illuminating as much as a sunrod) or even explodes in the right conditions, it is chiefly used to propel a bullet out of the barrel of a pistol or a rifle, or it is formed into a bomb (see below).

An ounce of gunpowder is needed to propel a bullet.

Gunpowder is sold in small kegs (15-pound capacity and 20 pounds total weight, 250 gp each) and in water-resistant powder horns (2-pound capacity and total weight, 35 gp for a full powder horn).

If gunpowder gets wet, it cannot be used to fire a bullet.

KATANA

While functionally a bastard sword, this sword is the most masterfully made nonmagical weapon in existence.

It counts as a masterwork weapon and grants its wielder a +1 bonus to attack rolls.

A katana is too large to use in one hand without special training; thus, it is an exotic weapon.

A Medium-size creature can use a katana two-handed as a martial weapon, or a Large creature can use it one-handed in the same way.

With Exotic Weapon Proficiency (katana), a Medium-size creature can use it in one hand.

A masterwork weapon's bonus to attack does not stack with an enhancement bonus to attack.

KUSARI-GAMA

This small sickle is attached to a length of chain.

A kusari-gama is an exotic weapon that has reach.

It can strike opponents 10 feet away.

In addition, unlike other weapons with reach, it can be used against an adjacent foe.

It can be used in all respects like a spiked chain (see page 99 in the Player's Handbook) for trip attacks, disarming other foes, and using its wielder's Dexterity modifier instead of her Strength modifier in attack rolls.

LASER PISTOL

Laser pistols fire fifty times before they need to be reloaded and have a rate of fire equal to the attacker's number of attacks.

Reloading is a standard action.

LASER RIFLE

Laser rifles fire fifty times before they need to be reloaded and have a rate of fire equal to the attacker's number of attacks.

Reloading is a standard action.

METAL CARTRIDGE

These lead bullets are jacketed in copper and held in a brass shell.

METAL CARTRIDGE CLIP

These lead bullets are jacketed in copper and held in a brass shell.

They are found in either a 20-round metal clip (for automatic pistols) or a 30-round metal clip (for automatic rifles).

The clip is inserted into the butt of an automatic pistol or the stock of an automatic rifle.

MUSKET

The musket holds a single shot and requires a standard action to reload.

NEEDLES, BLOWGUN

These 2-inch-long iron needles are sold in small wooden cases of 20.

A full case is so light that its weight is negligible.

The tips of the needles are often coated with poison such as greenblood oil, bloodroot, blue whinnis, shadow essence, or even deathblade.

PISTOL

This pistol holds a single shot and requires a standard action to reload.

PISTOL, AUTOMATIC

An automatic pistol can fire twenty times before reloading and can be used to attack more than once per round if the user has the ability to make multiple attacks.

Reloading is a standard action.

PISTOL, REVOLVER

A revolver fires once a round maximum, but it can fire six times before it needs reloading (which requires a fullround action).

RAM

This heavy pole is suspended from a movable scaffold that allows the crew to swing it back and forth against construction.

Make an unmodified attack roll against the AC of the construction, with failed attempts dealing no significant damage.

(See Strike an Object, page 135 in the Player's Handbook, to determine the AC).

The ram can be used to make an attack every 3 rounds if fully crewed.

With five to nine people, it can be used every 6 rounds. Fewer than five people cannot operate it.

RIFLE, AUTOMATIC

An automatic rifle can fire thirty times before reloading and can be used to attack more than once per round if the user has the ability to make multiple attacks.

Reloading is a standard action.

RIFLE, REPEATER

A repeater rifle fires once a round maximum, but it can fire six times before it needs reloading (which requires a full-round action).

SCATTERGUN

The scattergun deals 3d6 points of damage to a target in the first range increment, 2d6 to a target in the second range increment, and 1d6 to anyone in a 5-foot-wide path beyond that distance out to maximum range.

It can fire once a round maximum, but it can fire five times before it needs reloading.

Reloading up to two shells is a standard action.

Reloading more shells than that (up to all five) is a full-round action.

SCATTERGUN SHELLS

These cylindrical cartridges have a built-in firing cap at their base.

They are packed with a mixture of gunpowder and small lead pellets.

SIEGE TOWER

This is a large wooden tower on wheels or rollers that can be rolled up against a wall to allow attackers to scale the tower and thus to get to the top of the wall with cover. The wooden walls are usually 1 foot thick.

SMOKEBOMB

This cylindrical bomb must be lit before it is thrown. Lighting it is a standard action.

One round after it is lit, this nondamaging explosive emits a cloud of smoke in a 20-foot radius that persists in still conditions for 1d3+6 rounds and in windy conditions for 1d3+1 rounds.

Visibility within the smoke is limited to 2 feet.

Everything within the cloud has 90% concealment.

WAKIZASHI

This small, slightly curved short sword is made with a skill only masterful weaponsmiths possess.

It counts as a masterwork weapon and grants its wielder a +1 bonus to attack rolls.

A masterwork weapon's bonus to attack does not stack with an enhancement bonus to attack.

AMMUNITION

Modern era firearms use bullets essentially similar to those used in Renaissance firearms.

Ten bullets weigh 1 pound, and a magazine that holds bullets for an automatic weapon weighs 1/2 pound.

The new weapons on Table 5-5: Modern Era Weapons are detailed below.

ANTIMATTER RIFLE

An antimatter rifle is a devastating short-range attack weapon that can be fired once per round.

It holds an energy cell (weight 1 pound) that is depleted after two shots.

Reloading the weapon is a move action.

BALLISTA

A ballista is essentially a Huge heavy crossbow fixed in place.

Its size makes it hard for most creatures to aim it, as described under Weapon Size on page 113 of the Player's Handbook.

Thus, a Medium creature takes a -4 penalty on attack rolls when using a ballista, and a Small creature takes a -6 penalty.

It takes a creature smaller than Large two full-round actions to reload the ballista after firing.

A ballista takes up a space 5 feet across.

BLOWGUN

This weapon is used to propel small needles a long distance. It is silent, and its needles most often are used to poison foes.

BOMB

This round gunpowder bomb must be lit before it is thrown.

Lighting a bomb is a move action.

The explosive deals 2d6 points of fire damage.

Anyone caught within the blast radius can make a DC 15 Reflex save to take half damage.

BULLETS

These large, round, lead projectiles are sold in bags of 10 for 3 gp.

A bag of bullets weighs 2 pounds.

CATAPULT, HEAVY

A heavy catapult is a massive engine capable of throwing rocks or heavy objects with great force.

Because the catapult throws its payload in a high arc, it can hit squares out of its line of sight.

To fire a heavy catapult, the crew chief makes a special check against DC 15 using only his base attack bonus, Intelligence modifier, range increment penalty, and the appropriate modifiers from the lower section of Table 3-26. If the check succeeds, the catapult stone hits the square the catapult was aimed at, dealing the indicated damage to any object or character in the square.

Characters who succeed on a DC 15 Reflex save take half damage.

Once a catapult stone hits a square, subsequent shots hit the same square unless the catapult is reaimed or the wind changes direction or speed.

If a catapult stone misses, roll 1d8 to determine where it lands.

This determines the misdirection of the throw, with 1 being back toward the catapult and 2 through 8 counting clockwise around the target square.

Then, count 3 squares away from the target square for every range increment of the attack.

Loading a catapult requires a series of full-round actions.

It takes a DC 15 Strength check to winch the throwing arm down; most catapults have wheels to allow up to two crew members to use the aid another action, assisting the main winch operator.

A DC 15 Profession (siege engineer) check latches the arm into place, and then another DC 15 Profession (siege engineer) check loads the catapult ammunition.

It takes four full-round actions to reaim a heavy catapult (multiple crew members can perform these full-round actions in the same round, so it would take a crew of four only 1 round to reaim the catapult).

A heavy catapult takes up a space 15 feet across.

CATAPULT, LIGHT

This is a smaller, lighter version of the heavy catapult.

It functions as the heavy catapult, except that it takes a DC 10 Strength check to winch the arm into place, and only two full-round actions are required to reaim the catapult.

A light catapult takes up a space 10 feet across.

DYNAMITE

This short, thin cylinder of explosive material has a fuse that must be lit before it is thrown or set.

Lighting a stick of dynamite is a move action, and the dynamite goes off in the same round or up to several minutes later (depending on how long the fuse is).

The explosive has a blast radius of 5 feet and deals 2d6 points of bludgeoning damage.

Anyone caught within the blast radius can make a DC 15 Reflex save to take half damage.

It's possible to bind together several sticks of dynamite so they ignite and explode at the same time.

Each additional stick increases the damage by 1d6 (maximum damage 10d6) and the burst radius by 5 feet (maximum burst radius 20 feet).

FLAMER

A flamer can be fired once per round.

Unlike other ranged weapons, it deals damage to every square in a 5-foot-wide stream extending out to the flamer's maximum range (200 feet).

It contains a fuel pack with enough concentrated flamer fuel for ten shots.

Installing a new fuel pack requires a full-round action.

GRENADE LAUNCHER

A grenade launcher can fire fragmentation or smoke grenades using its range increment, but must be reloaded each time it fires, requiring a standard action.

A grenade launcher is a tube set on a metal tripod and equipped with a sighting mechanism.

A single smoke grenade or fragmentation grenade easily slips into the tube.

GRENADE, FRAGMENTATION

A fragmentation grenade looks like a large egg, sometimes mounted on a 1-foot-long stick with small fins.

If thrown, it uses its range increment, but if launched from a grenade launcher, it uses that weapon's range increment.

Fragmentation grenades are advanced antipersonnel explosives that deal slashing damage in a 20-foot radius. Anyone caught within the blast radius can make a DC 15 Reflex save to take half damage.

GRENADE, SMOKE

A smoke grenade looks like a squat cylinder, sometimes mounted on a 1-foot-long stick with small fins. If thrown, it uses its range increment, but if launched from a grenade launcher, it uses that weapon's range increment. One round after it lands or hits its target, this nondamaging explosive emits a cloud of smoke (as the fog cloud spell) in a 20-foot radius.

A moderate wind (11+ mph) disperses the smoke in 4 rounds; a strong wind (21+ mph) disperses the fog in 1 round.

GUNPOWDER

While gunpowder burns (1 ounce consumes itself in 1 round and illuminates like a sunrod) or even explodes in the right conditions, it is chiefly used to propel a bullet out of the barrel of a pistol or a rifle, or it is formed into a bomb (see below).

An ounce of gunpowder is needed to propel a bullet. Gunpowder is sold in small kegs (15-pound capacity, 20 pounds total weight, 250 gp each) and in water-resistant powder horns (2-pound capacity and total weight, 35 gp for a full powder horn).

If gunpowder gets wet, it cannot be used to fire a bullet.

KATANA

While functionally a bastard sword, this sword is the most masterfully made nonmagical weapon in existence.

It counts as a masterwork weapon and grants its wielder a +1 bonus on attack rolls.

A katana is too large to use in one hand without special training; thus, it is an exotic weapon.

A Medium creature can use a katana two-handed as a martial weapon, or a Large creature can use it one-handed in the same way.

With Exotic Weapon Proficiency (katana), a Medium creature can use it in one hand.

A masterwork weapon's bonus on attack rolls does not stack with an enhancement bonus on attack rolls.

KUSARI-GAMA

This small sickle is attached to a length of chain.

A kusari-gama is an exotic weapon that has reach.

It can strike opponents 10 feet away.

In addition, unlike other weapons with reach, it can be used against an adjacent foe.

It can be used in all respects like a spiked chain (see page 115 of the Player's Handbook) for trip attacks, disarming other foes, and using its wielder's Dexterity modifier instead of her Strength modifier in attack rolls.

LASER PISTOL

A laser pistol fires fifty times before a new energy cell (weight 1 pound) needs to be reloaded and has a rate of fire equal to the attacker's number of attacks.

Reloading the weapon is a move action.

LASER RIFLE

A laser rifle fires thirty times before a new energy cell (weight 1 pound) needs to be reloaded and has a rate of fire equal to the attacker's number of attacks.

Reloading the weapon is a move action.

MUSKET

The musket holds a single shot and requires a standard action to reload.

NEEDLES, BLOWGUN

These 2-inch-long iron needles are sold in small wooden cases of 20.

A full case is so light that its weight is negligible.

The tips of the needles are often coated with poison such as greenblood oil, bloodroot, blue whinnis, shadow essence, or deathblade.

PISTOL

This firearm holds a single shot and requires a standard action to reload.

PISTOL, AUTOMATIC

An automatic pistol can fire fifteen times before reloading and can be used to attack more than once per round if the user has the ability to make multiple attacks.

Releasing an empty magazine and inserting a new one is a move action.

PISTOL, REVOLVER

A revolver can fire six times before it needs reloading (which requires a full-round action).

RAM

This heavy pole is sometimes suspended from a movable scaffold that allows the crew to swing it back and forth against objects.

As a full-round action, the character closest to the front of the ram makes an attack roll against the AC of the construction, applying the -4 penalty for lack of proficiency.

(It's not possible to be proficient with this device).

In addition to the damage given on Table 3-26, up to nine other characters holding the ram can add their Strength modifier to the ram's damage, if they devote an attack action to doing so.

For example, ten gnolls (each Str 15, +2 Str modifier) wielding a ram will deal 3d8+20 points of damage on a successful hit.

It takes at least one Huge or larger creature, two Large creatures, four Medium-size creatures, or eight Small creatures to swing a ram.

(Tiny or smaller creatures can't use a ram).

A ram is typically 30 feet long.

In a battle, the creatures wielding the ram stand in two adjacent columns of equal length, with the ram between them.

RIFLE, AUTOMATIC

An automatic rifle can fire thirty times before it needs reloading.

Releasing an empty magazine and inserting a new one is a move action.

As an attack, an automatic rifle can instead spray a space 10 feet across with ten bullets.

If the attacker succeeds on an attack roll against AC 10, everyone in that space must make a DC 15 Reflex save or take the weapon's damage.

RIFLE, HUNTING

A hunting rifle can fire five times before it needs reloading (which requires a full-round action).

SHOTGUN

A shotgun is most effective at close range; on any successful attack, a -1 penalty is applied to the damage roll for each range increment of the attack.

It can fire six times before it needs reloading (which requires a full-round action).

The weapon uses shotgun shells, cylindrical cartridges that have a built-in firing cap at their base.

They are packed with a mixture of gunpowder and small lead pellets.

SIEGE TOWER

This device is a massive wooden tower on wheels or rollers that can be rolled up against a wall to allow attackers to scale the tower and thus to get to the top of the wall with cover.

The wooden walls are usually 1 foot thick.

A typical siege tower takes up a space 15 feet across.

The creatures inside push it at a speed of 10 feet (and a siege tower can't run).

The eight creatures pushing on the ground floor have total cover, and those on higher floors get improved cover and can fire through arrow slits.

Weapon	Cost	Damage	Critical	Range Incr.	Weight	Type
Snap-tong	250 gp	1d10	×2	—	10 lb.	Piercing
Tri-blade	35 gp	2d4	×2	20 ft.	3 lb.	Slashing

SNAP-TONG

This short polearm ends in a sharp spike that has one or more crescent-shaped pincers designed close around it.

A proficient wielder that hits an opponent of at least one size category smaller can attempt to start a grapple as a free action without provoking an attack of opportunity.

SMOKE BOMB

This cylindrical bomb must be lit before it is thrown.

Lighting it is a move action.

Two rounds after it is lit, this nondamaging explosive emits a cloud of smoke (as a fog cloud spell) in a 20-foot radius.

A moderate wind (11+ mph) disperses the smoke in 4 rounds; a strong wind (21+ mph) disperses the fog in 1 round.

WAKIZASHI

This small, slightly curved short sword is made with a skill only masterful weaponsmiths possess.

It counts as a masterwork weapon and grants its wielder a +1 bonus on attack rolls.

A masterwork weapon's bonus on attack rolls does not stack with an enhancement bonus on attack rolls.

FIEND FOLIO (3.5)

ETHERBLADE

Resembling a short glaive topped with a hollow barrel, this favored weapon of the ethergaunts can fire a ray of force as a ranged touch attack for 1d6 points of damage.

The etherblade ray has a range increment of 40 feet.

The weapon can fire 50 times before it is exhausted.

It cannot be recharged.

An etherblade can be used as a two-handed weapon in melee combat to deal 1d10 points of slashing damage.

A fully charged etherblade has a market price of 800 gp.

RIBBON DAGGER

A ribbon dagger is a Small exotic weapon crafted from alchemically treated kaorti resin.

It consists of a resin handle to which is affixed a 1-foot-long flexible strip of resin.

This ribbon of resin is razor-sharp and deals 1d4 points of damage on a hit with a critical multiplier of ×4.

The ribbon can wrap around objects with ease; disarm attacks made with a ribbon dagger gain a +2 bonus.

Cost: 50 gp.

Weight: 1 lb.

FIENDISH CODEX 1 (3.5)

If the wielder gets a hold, the snap-tong grabs the opponent and deals 1d10 points of damage (plus the wielder's Strength modifier) each round the hold is maintained.

TRI-BLADE

This thrown weapon consists of a three-bladed wedge launched from a slinglike device.

Rutterkins usually carry five of these for use in ranged combat.

BLADE BOOT

Custom-fitted to the wearer's boot, this device consists of a sturdy sole assembly concealing a spring-loaded dagger. The buyer can add one blade to either of his boots at the given cost, or buy a matched set for double the amount. The wearer's movement is not impaired when the blades are retracted.

With one or both blades extended, the wearer cannot run or charge.

A monk using a blade boot can strike with his unarmed base attack, including his more favorable number of attacks per round, for normal blade boot damage.

The Weapon Finesse feat can be applied to blade boots. A character proficient with the blade boot can attack with a single blade boot as his primary weapon, or with two blade boots as if attacking with two weapons, provided he makes no attacks with his hands.

He can choose to attack with a weapon in his primary hand and use a single blade boot as his off-hand weapon, but in this case he cannot attack with an off-hand weapon in his secondary hand.

A character cannot attack with a primary weapon, an off-hand weapon, and a blade boot in the same round unless he knows the Multiweapon Fighting feat described in the Monster Manual.

A character wearing blade boots gains a +4 bonus on Escape Artist checks made to escape from rope bonds.

CHAKRAM

The chakram is a throwing disk or quoit about 1 foot in diameter, with a sharpened outer rim.

CLAW BRACER

Popular with sorcerers and wizards of the Cult of the Dragon, a claw bracer is a metal armband with three steel claws projecting from the top, extending about 4 inches beyond the tip of the wearer's extended fingers.

The wearer can cast spells normally while wearing the bracer, and cannot be disarmed.

CUTLASS

The cutlass is a short, heavy, slightly curved blade useful for both stabbing and slashing.

It is popular with many sailors.

Its heavy basket hilt gives the wielder a +2 circumstance bonus on any checks to resist being disarmed.

KHOPESH

The famed sword of Mulhorand, the khopesh looks like a normal longsword whose blade suddenly turns sickle-shaped about a foot from the hilt.

You can use the khopesh to make trip attacks due to its hooklike blade.

MAUL

The maul is simply a two-handed warhammer of enormous size.

It is favored by dwarves.

SABER

A weapon of the Tuigan and the Nars, the saber is a long, heavy sword specialized for the long cuts used in mounted combat.

You gain a +1 circumstance bonus on your attack rolls when you use a saber while mounted.

SCOURGE

A scourge is a multitailed, barbed whip.

The scourge is often dipped in a poison delivered via injury (such as greenblood oil, Medium-size spider venom, or Large scorpion venom).

With a scourge, you get a +2 bonus on your opposed attack roll when attempting to disarm an enemy (including the roll to avoid being disarmed if you fail to disarm your enemy).

You can also use this weapon to make trip attacks.

If you are tripped during your own trip attempt, you can drop the scourge to avoid being tripped.

FROSTBURN (3.5)

TABLE 4-1: FROSTFELL WEAPONS

Razor skipdisk	15 gp	1d4	1d6	18–20/×2	10 ft. <sup>3</sup>	2 lb.	Slashing

1 Weight figures are for Medium weapons. A Small weapon weighs half as much, and a Large weapon weighs twice as much.

2 When two types are given, the weapon is both types if the entry specifies "and," or either type (player's choice at time of attack) if the entry specifies "or."

3 This weapon's range increment increases to 20 feet over smooth solid ground, and to 30 feet over smooth ice.

GLOT

The glot is a specially balanced sphere of metal designed to be thrown low to the ground.

It then skips and bounces across the ground with little reduction in velocity to strike its target.

If the ground between you and your target is solid, flat, and relatively free of obstructions, the glot's range increment increases to 20 feet.

If the ground is also icy, the glot skips even more readily over the frozen ground and its range increment increases to 30 feet.

If you use a glot to attack an airborne target, its range increment is always 10 feet.

You can make ranged trip attacks with a thrown glot.

GOAD

A goad is a long, thin wooden pole mounted with a heavy stone or metal weight and a large spike at one end.

Primarily intended as a tool to direct the movement of large animals, a goad makes an excellent weapon in a pinch.

When you attack with a goad, you must decide if you are attacking with the spike to deal piercing damage or the weight to deal bludgeoning damage.

The flexibility of the goad's shaft absorbs much of the force behind blows made with the bludgeoning head, and all bludgeoning damage dealt by a goad is nonlethal as a result. Piercing damage remains lethal.

If you are proficient with its use, the goad grants a +2 circumstance bonus on all Handle Animal checks made against animals of Huge size or larger.

HARPOON

The harpoon is a broad-bladed spear forged with barbs.

The shaft of the harpoon has a trailing rope attached to control harpooned opponents.

Though designed for hunting whales and other large sea creatures, the harpoon can be used on dry land.

If it deals damage, the harpoon lodges in an opponent who fails a Reflex saving throw (DC 10 + the damage dealt).

A harpooned creature moves at only half speed and cannot charge or run.

If you control the trailing rope by succeeding on an opposed Strength check while holding it, the harpooned creature can move only within the limits that the rope allows (the trailing rope is 30 feet long).

If the harpooned creature attempts to cast a spell, it must succeed on a DC 15 Concentration check or lose the spell.

The harpooned creature can pull the harpoon from its wound if it has two free hands and takes a full-round action to do so, but it deals damage to itself equal to the initial damage the harpoon dealt.

A character who succeeds on a DC 15 Heal check can remove a harpoon without further damage.

ICE AXE

More tool than weapon, the ice axe has a sharp metal head that is perpendicular to the shaft and has a spiked handle.

It grants a +1 circumstance bonus on Climb checks in mountainous and/or icy terrain, even if you do not possess the Exotic Weapon Proficiency (ice axe) feat.

If you do possess this feat, the bonus increases to a +4 circumstance bonus.

An ice axe may be used as a martial weapon, but takes a –2 penalty on attack rolls in this case.

ICECHUCKER

The icechucker appears to be a large crossbow at a casual glance, larger even than a heavy crossbow.

Its launching mechanism is designed to fire large shards of ice (usually icicles) rather than regular crossbow bolts. You draw an icechucker back by pulling on a thick lever on the underside of the weapon. Loading an icechucker is a full-round action that provokes attacks of opportunity. If icicles aren't handy to load into an icechucker, it can also be used to fire a javelin, dealing the same damage.

IUAK

An iuak is a heavily weighted machete-shaped blade, usually made of bone or stone. While it makes an excellent weapon, its primary purpose is to cut through and destroy ice and other hard materials. If used against an object, an iuak ignores the first 3 points of hardness possessed by the object.

RAZOR SKIPDISK

A razor skipdisk is a flat, circular disk of metal with a razor-sharp rim. One surface of the razor skipdisk is slightly convex and smooth, while the other is concave with a small knob protruding from the center. You attack with a razor skipdisk by gripping the knob and then hurling it so the convex surface skips and slides across the ground toward its target. If the ground between you and your target is solid, flat, and relatively free of obstructions, the razor skipdisk's range increment increases to 20 feet. If the ground is also icy, the razor skipdisk skips even more readily over the frozen ground and its range increment increases to 30 feet. If you use a razor skipdisk to attack an airborne target, its range increment is always 10 feet.

RITIIK

A ritiik is a spearlike weapon with an additional hooklike blade protruding from the base of the spear head. When you successfully hit a target with a ritiik, you can twist the weapon and hook this blade into the target's flesh if the target fails a Reflex saving throw (DC 10 + the damage dealt). If you hook the target, you can immediately make a trip attack against the target.

TABLE 1-8: EXOTIC WEAPONS—MELEE

Size	Weapon	Cost	Damage	Critical	Range Increment	Weight	Type
Small	Bola flail*	5 gp	1d6	x2	10 ft.	4 lb.	Bludgeoning

*See the weapon description of this item for special rules.

BOLA FLAIL

This is a 5-foot length of rope with a loop or small metal handle on one end and a 2-pound weight on the other end. With a bola flail, you gain a +2 bonus on your opposed attack roll when attempting to disarm an enemy (including the roll to avoid being disarmed if you fail to disarm your enemy).

If you fail, you can let go of the ritiik to avoid the retaliatory trip attack. The damaged creature can pull the ritiik from its wound if it has two free hands and takes a full-round action to do so, but it deals damage to itself equal to the initial damage the ritiik dealt. A character who succeeds on a DC 15 Heal check can remove a ritiik without further damage.

SUGLIIN

The infamous sugliin was created by primitive tribes more to strike terror into the hearts of their enemies rather than to be an effective weapon. This massive polearm consists of several sets of sharpened caribou and/or megaloceros antlers affixed to a long wooden shaft. You attack with the sugliin as if it were a massive axe or scythe, slashing and chopping at the targets with great arcs. This weapon is so unwieldy and heavy that making a single attack with it is a full-round action. Sugliins are favored weapons for low-level characters who want to deal huge amounts of damage and lack the skill to make additional attacks; higher-level characters only rarely use sugliins due to their awkwardness. The Sugliin Mastery feat (see page 50) allows a character to make attacks with this massive weapon normally. A sugliin has reach. You can strike opponents 10 feet away with it, but you can't use it against an adjacent foe.

TIGERSKULL CLUB

The smilodon's skull is remarkably sturdy; it would have to be, to absorb the impacts of its terrible bite. Many primitive tribes have capitalized on this fact of nature and use smilodon skulls to fashion tigerskull clubs. A tigerskull club consists of a smilodon's skull (sans lower jaw) lashed to a short length of wood. The twin sabers of the skull's upper jaw then function as a highly effective picklike weapon. Disarm and trip attacks made with a tigerskull club gain a +2 circumstance bonus. If you fail to trip your opponent, you may choose to drop your tigerskull club to avoid the retaliatory trip attack.

GHOSTWALK (3.0)

You can also use this weapon to make trip attacks. If you are tripped during your own trip attempt, you can drop the bola flail to avoid being tripped. You can throw the bola flail at a Medium-size or smaller target in an attempt to trip the target instead of dealing damage. You must make a ranged touch attack to do so, and if you hit, your opponent must make a Strength or Dexterity check (DC 15) or be tripped (the defender takes a -4 penalty for every size category smaller than Medium-size). The opponent must then make a grapple check against your attack roll.

If he fails, he is grappled.

A bola flail can trip or grapple only a Small- or Medium-sized target.

An opponent can extricate himself from a bola flail as a full-round action.

When you use a bola flail to make a ranged trip attack, your opponent does not get an opportunity to trip you in return.

CATAPULTS

Although the specific siege engine most people picture when they hear the word “catapult” is more properly called the mangonel (see page 66), in this book the term applies to any type of throwing machine that uses torsion power or counterweights to throw large objects hundreds of feet through the air.

Torsion-powered catapults, such as the ballista, mangonel, and scorpion, use skeins—that is, bundles of twisted ropes often braided from hair or tendon—to fling one or two wooden arms forward, sending a projectile into the air.

Counterweight catapults, such as the trebuchet, power a swinging arm with a huge counterweight attached to one end. The weight is hauled up into the air by a winch or a team of soldiers and latched into place. The team then places a projectile in a sling on the other end of the swing arm. When the latch is released, the counterweight falls, flinging the sling-end up into the air and sending the projectile flying.

Catapults can propel very large objects over incredibly long distances (up to 1,500 feet). Common projectiles include stones weighing from 40 to 150 pounds, massive javelinlike bolts, and even pots of burning oil and alchemist’s fire, which can burn down wooden structures within the stone walls, gutting a castle from the inside.

Troops have been known to load their catapults with anything available, including loose rubble, chains, discarded weapons, odds and ends of armor, dead mounts, the severed heads of fallen enemy soldiers, and even live captives. Often this bombardment will deal more psychological than physical damage to the castle and its inhabitants.

Stone-throwing catapults can also propel bags of “shot.” These are tightly packed sacks of small rocks and pebbles that literally explode upon impact, shredding everything within a small area in a lethal spray of rock fragments.

OPERATING A CATAPULT

Most catapults do not use the normal combat rules for determining the success of their attacks, because typically a catapult is fired not at a particular creature but rather at a specific square on the battlefield. (Ballistae are an exception to this rule, so they use the normal combat rules for determining the success of their attacks.)

First, the catapult crew must aim the catapult at a target square. Doing this requires a DC 15 Profession (siege engineer) check by the crew chief (the lead operator of the catapult) and one or more full-round actions taken by the crew of the catapult. Multiple crew members can perform these full-round actions at the same time, reducing the time it takes to aim the catapult. The number of rounds required varies by the weapon. Other crew members can assist this skill check by making a DC 10 Profession (siege engineer) check, as described under Combining Skill Attempts, pages 65–66 of the Player's Handbook; success on this check grants the crew chief a +2 bonus on his check.

Next, the catapult must be loaded. As with aiming, loading a catapult requires one or more full-round actions taken by the crew members. As before, multiple crew members can perform these full-round actions at the same time, reducing the time it takes to load the catapult (for example, if the catapult requires four full-round actions to load, a crew of four can load it in a single round). The crew chief must succeed on a DC 15 Profession (siege engineer) check, and at least one member of the crew must succeed on a DC 10 Strength check. Other members of the crew can assist with either of these checks by using the aid another action but must choose which check to aid (that is, the same crew member cannot assist in both rolls). Large or larger creatures load a catapult in half the given time, while Small creatures require twice the given time. Tiny creatures can't load a catapult.

Finally, the crew chief makes a special attack roll to fire the catapult. He rolls 1d20 and adds his base attack bonus, his Intelligence modifier, any penalty for range increments (see Table 4–1), and any other modifiers that apply (see the remainder of this sidebar). A square on the battlefield is treated as having AC 15 against a catapult's attack. This attack is a standard action, and the attack roll can't be assisted by the crew.

Catapults (other than ballistae) hurl their ammunition in a high arc. A catapult requires vertical clearance equal to half the range to operate, so subterranean races rarely use such devices. Because of this high arc, catapults can strike squares that aren't in line of sight of the crew, though at a –6 penalty on the attack roll.

If the attack fails to hit a target that is in line of sight of the crew, and the catapult's next shot targets the same square, the crew chief gains a +2 bonus on his special attack roll. If successive shots at the same square continue to miss, this bonus improves by 2 on every additional attempt to hit the same square, up to a maximum of +10 (after five straight misses).

MASTERWORK SIEGE ENGINES

A masterwork siege engine costs double the normal price for that kind of siege engine (see Table 4–1). A masterwork siege engine grants a nonmagical +1 enhancement bonus on attack rolls made with the siege engine. It also adds this bonus to

BALLISTA

This torsion-powered catapult looks rather like a huge crossbow that launches large harpoonlike bolts through the air.

If the targeted square is not in line of sight but can be seen by an observer communicating with the crew, the bonus for successive attempts against the same target starts at +1 and can improve to as much as +5 (after five straight misses). Each of these attack rolls also takes the –6 penalty that applies because the crew cannot see the target.

If the attack roll succeeds, the catapult's payload hits the target square. A stone deals the indicated damage to any object or character in the square. A load of shot deals only half the indicated damage (see Table 4–1) but deals this damage to all creatures or objects in or adjacent to the target square. A creature can attempt a DC 15 Reflex save to avoid the damage from a stone or to reduce the damage from shot by half. Some special forms of ammunition have their own rules (see Magic Siege Engines, page 133).

Once a catapult successfully hits the target square, all subsequent shots automatically hit the same square with no attack roll needed, until the catapult is aimed at a different square.

Attacks that Miss: If the attack misses the target square, roll 1d8 and consult the diagram below to determine the deviation of the throw. The ammunition lands 3 squares away from the target square for every range increment of the attack.

any skill checks made to operate the siege engine (but not to Strength checks to reload the siege engine).

Each individual piece of masterwork siege weapon ammunition costs 300 gp (regardless of the original price of the ammunition).

Firing a ballista requires an attack roll by the crew chief, using the crew chief's base attack bonus and any range increment penalties (since this is a direct attack, no Intelligence modifier applies, unlike with those catapults that make indirect attacks).

Unless the crew chief has the Ballista Proficiency feat (see page 96), he takes a –4 penalty on the attack roll.

Additional members of the crew can use the aid another action to grant the crew chief a +2 bonus on the attack roll by succeeding on a DC 10 Profession (siege engineer) check.

Unlike most other catapults, a ballista aims at either a creature or an object (such as a section of wall) rather than a square.

Loading a light ballista requires two full-round actions (that is, two crew members can load it in a single full round).

Loading a heavy ballista requires four full-round actions. A ballista need not be reaimed; each attack succeeds or fails independent of previous attack rolls.

A light ballista takes up a 5-foot square, while a heavy ballista takes up a 15-foot-by-15-foot space.

BATTERING RAM

The battering ram is a simple device consisting of a heavy pole—either suspended by ropes from a movable scaffold or held aloft by troops—that is repeatedly smashed into a gate or other barrier to break it down.

The end of the pole is often shod in iron, which can be forged into a variety of decorative shapes such as dragon heads.

The typical battering ram is 30 feet long.

Including its scaffolding, it occupies a space 10 feet wide and 30 feet long.

Up to ten Medium or Small troops can occupy the same space as the ram and its scaffolding, in two rows of five (one row on either side).

Larger creatures can contribute to the attack as long as they share at least one square of their space with the ram.

As a full-round action, the character closest to the front of the ram makes an attack roll against the AC of the target construction, applying the -4 penalty for lack of proficiency (it's not possible to be proficient with this device).

In addition to the damage given on Table 4-1: Siege Engines, up to nine other characters holding the ram can add their Strength modifier to the ram's damage, if they devote a full-round action to doing so (the character guiding the ram adds any Strength modifier of his own as well).

For example, ten gnolls (each Str 15, +2 modifier) wielding a ram will deal 3d8+20 points of damage on a successful hit. It takes at least one Huge or larger creature, two Large creatures, four Medium creatures, or eight Small creatures to swing a ram (Tiny or smaller creatures can't use a ram).

If the ram is held aloft rather than suspended from a scaffold, the number of troops required is doubled. (In this case, Small creatures can't operate the ram because not enough of them can be adjacent to it).

The act of operating a battering ram provokes attacks of opportunity.

MANGONEL, HEAVY OR LIGHT

The standard or default catapult described in the Dungeon Master's Guide (pages 99–100), the mangonel is a torsion-powered siege engine.

Its single arm ends in a sling capable of throwing a heavy stone hundreds of feet.

Like all stone-throwing catapults, a mangonel launches projectiles in a high arc, so it can hit squares out of its line of sight.

Loading a light mangonel requires a total of two full-round actions (taking one full round for a crew of two, or two full rounds for a single crew member).

Loading a heavy mangonel requires four full-round actions. A light mangonel takes up a 10-foot-by-10-foot space. A heavy mangonel takes up a 15-foot-by-15-foot space.

SCORPION

This complex, torsion-powered catapult uses an intricate system of pulleys running along both sides of the base to provide as much power as a heavy mangonel in an engine the size of a light mangonel.

Loading or reaiming a scorpion requires two full-round actions.

If the crew fails any check made to load or reaim a scorpion by 5 or more, the pulley system breaks, rendering the scorpion inoperable.

Repairing a broken pulley system requires 10 rounds and a DC 20 Craft (siege weapon) check.

A scorpion takes up a 10-foot-by-10-foot space.

SIEGE TOWER

A siege tower is a large wooden tower built on wheels that troops use to scale castle walls under cover.

The walls of a siege tower are normally 2 inches thick.

A typical three-level siege tower is 30 feet tall and takes up a 15-foot-by-15-foot space.

It can hold nine Medium creatures per level.

A siege tower can be pushed by the nine creatures on the lower level at a speed of 10 feet (siege towers cannot run).

The nine creatures on the lower level have total cover.

Those on higher levels have improved cover and can shoot through arrow slits.

TREBUCHET

A trebuchet uses a heavy counterweight to fire heavy projectiles an extraordinary distance.

The great trebuchet uses a 30-foot-long swing arm on a fulcrum with twin buckets filled with rubble attached to one end and a sling for the ammunition attached to the other end.

The counterweight buckets are hauled into the air by a winch system and held in place by a latch.

The light trebuchet, by contrast, uses a bulb-shaped counterweight built into the swing arm.

This arrangement makes the light trebuchet significantly easier to use than the heavy trebuchet but limits its range and can make the engine unstable if it's not winched or loaded properly.

Loads of shot launched by a heavy trebuchet deal damage to all creatures within 2 squares of the target square.

Loading a light trebuchet requires three full-round actions.

Loading a heavy trebuchet requires six full-round actions.

Reaiming a trebuchet requires four times as long as loading it, and the weapon cannot be reaimed while it is loaded.

If the check to load a light trebuchet fails by 5 or more, the weapon tips over, dealing 4d6 points of damage to all crew members (as well as any other creatures adjacent to it).

Righting a fallen trebuchet requires an hour of work by its crew.

A light trebuchet takes up a 20-foot-by-20-foot space, and a heavy trebuchet takes up a 25-foot-by-25-foot space.

†Reach weapon.

§The weapon deals subdual damage rather than normal damage.

BLOWGUN

The blowgun is a long tube through which you blow air to fire needles.

A needle does 1 point of damage, and it can deliver an injury or contact type poison.

BLOWGUN, GREATER

The greater blowgun fires blowgun darts, which are slightly smaller than thrown darts.

These darts do 1d4 points of damage in addition to delivering poisons.

CABER

A caber is a heavy pole that you can throw at one or more targets grouped closely together.

To throw a caber, you must target a 10-foot-square area and hit AC 15.

Success means that everyone in the target area must make a Reflex save (DC = your attack roll) or move 5 feet backward.

If a creature or object in the target area is incapable of movement, it takes 2d6 points of damage.

The caber is normally used for breaking up military formations.

CROSSBOW, WINCH

The winch crossbow fires a rope and pulley attached to a special crossbow bolt.

The bolt is split down the head and center of the shaft, with the split head bending away from the shaft like a two-headed snake.

A thin rope secured to each tip slows the bolt in flight (hence the reduced range increment).

On a successful hit, the bolt snaps apart like a wishbone, taking the attached ropes past the target to wrap around and entangle it.

If the target is a movable object of your size category or smaller, you can use the ropes to pull it toward you.

An entangled creature suffers a –2 penalty on attack rolls and a –4 penalty to Dexterity.

It can move only at half speed and cannot charge or run.

If you control the trailing rope by succeeding at an opposed Strength check while holding it, the entangled creature can move only within the limits that the rope allows.

Casting a spell while entangled requires a successful Concentration check (DC 15).

The entangled creature can escape the ropes with an Escape Artist check (DC 20), which is a full-round action.

The rope has 5 hit points and can be burst (see Chapter 8 of the Player's Handbook) with a Strength check (DC 25, also a full-round action).

A winch crossbow's entangling effect is useful only against creatures between Tiny and Large size, inclusive.

The subdual damage can affect any creature.

A winch crossbow requires two hands for effective use, regardless of the user's size.

Loading a winch crossbow is a full-round action that provokes attacks of opportunity.

A Medium-size or larger creature can shoot, but not load, a winch crossbow with one hand at a -4 penalty.

A Medium-size or larger creature can shoot a winch crossbow with each hand at a -6 penalty, plus the usual -4 penalty for the off-hand attack (-6 primary hand/-10 off hand).

The Two-Weapon Fighting feat does not reduce these penalties because it represents skill with melee weapons, not ranged ones.

The Ambidexterity feat lets you avoid the -4 off-hand penalty, bringing the penalties to -6 for both the primary hand and the offhand.

NAGAIKA

The nagaika is a leather lash studded with glass. Unlike the whip, it deals normal damage and can damage armored foes.

Although you keep it in your hand, treat it as a projectile weapon with a maximum range of 15 feet and no range penalties.

Because the nagaika can wrap around an enemy's leg or other limb, you can make trip attacks with it.

You can drop it to avoid being tripped during your own trip attempt.

You also gain a -2 bonus on your opposed attack rolls when using the nagaika to disarm an opponent (including the roll to keep from being disarmed if your attempt fails).

NAGAIKA, MIGHTY

A character who takes Exotic Weapon Proficiency (nagaika) is also proficient with the mighty nagaika.

This weapon is made of exceptionally strong leather, which allows the user to apply his or her Strength bonus on damage rolls (within the weapon's limit).

MONSTER MANUAL 1 3.0 (3.0)

PINCER STAFF

Many kuo-toa fighters and all whips above 6th level carry this Large exotic weapon.

A pincer staff deals 1d10 points of bludgeoning damage, threatens a critical hit on a 20, and deals double damage on a critical hit.

It has a 10-foot reach and cannot be used against an adjacent opponent.

A wielder that hits an opponent of at least Small but no larger than Large size attempts to start a grapple as a free action without provoking an attack of opportunity.

If the wielder gets a hold, the staff grabs the opponent and deals 1d10 points of damage each round the hold is maintained.

MONSTER MANUAL 1 3.5 (3.5)

PINCER STAFF

Many kuo-toa fighters and all whips of 7th level or higher carry this Large exotic weapon.

A pincer staff deals 1d10 points of bludgeoning damage, threatens a critical hit on a natural 20, and deals double damage on a critical hit.

It has a 10-foot reach and cannot be used against an adjacent opponent.

A wielder that hits an opponent of at least Small but no larger than Large size can attempt to start a grapple as a free action without provoking an attack of opportunity.

If the wielder wins the grapple check, the staff establishes a hold and grabs the opponent, dealing 1d10 points of damage each round the hold is maintained.

MONSTER MANUAL 2 (3.0)

CHATKCHA

This Medium-size exotic ranged weapon is a crystalline throwing wedge.

Its sheer weight makes it unwieldy in the hands of those not proficient with it.

A chatkcha deals 1d6 points of piercing damage and has a range increment of 20 feet.

It deals double damage on a critical hit and threatens a critical hit on an attack roll of 20.

Cost: 1 gp; Weight: 3 lb.

GYTHKA

This Large exotic melee double weapon is a polearm with a blade at each end.

The wielder can fight with it as if fighting with two weapons, but doing so incurs all the normal attack penalties associated with fighting with two weapons, as if the wielder had a one-handed weapon and a light weapon (see Attacking with Two Weapons in Chapter 8 of the Player's Handbook).

A thri-kreen who has the Multiweapon Fighting feat can wield two gythkas at once as double weapons because of its four arms.

Each end of a gythka deals 2d6 points of damage.

Each end is a slashing weapon that deals double damage on a critical hit and threatens a critical hit on an attack roll of 20.

Cost: 60 gp; Weight: 25 lb.

NOTBORA

This Huge exotic double weapon looks like a big quarterstaff with a crook at one end.

A notbora has a hinge in the middle so that it can be folded for storage.

The wielder can unfold the weapon and lock the hinge by pressing a hidden catch (a free action when drawing the notbora).

The notbora's straight end is actually a sheath that can be removed to reveal a blade.

The hooked end can be used to make trip attacks.

A wielder who is tripped during his or her own trip attempt can drop the notbora to avoid being tripped.

Each end of the notbora deals 2d6 points of damage.

The hooked end is a blunt weapon that deals double damage on a critical hit and threatens a critical hit on an attack roll of 20.

With the sheath in place, the straight end functions the same way.

With the sheath removed, the straight end is a slashing weapon that deals double damage on a critical hit and threatens a critical hit on an attack roll of 19 or 20.

Cost: 20 gp; Weight: 2 lb.

MONSTER MANUAL 3 (3.5)

FLINDBAR

A flindbar resembles a pair of chain-linked iron bars, not unlike a flail.

This one-handed exotic weapon costs 30 gp, deals 2d4 points of bludgeoning damage, has a threat range of 19–20, deals double damage on a critical hit, and weighs 2 pounds. Flinds treat a flindbar as a martial weapon instead of an exotic weapon.

The wielder of a flindbar gains a +2 bonus on opposed attack rolls made to disarm an enemy (including the roll to avoid being disarmed if such an attempt fails).

If a proficient wielder threatens a critical hit, he can make a free disarm attempt against that opponent before confirming the critical hit (this disarm attempt doesn't provoke attacks of opportunity).

SAND BLASTER

A sand blaster is a Large exotic ranged weapon made from long tubes.

It creates a 10-foot cone of sand, doing 1d8 points of damage (Reflex DC 22 half).

Living creatures that fail their saves are tormented by itching skin and burning eyes, imposing a –4 penalty to AC and a –2 penalty on attack rolls for 3 rounds.

The save DC is Constitution-based.

(It relies on the user's ability to blow a hearty gust of air through the tube).

A sand blaster uses 5 pounds of sand as ammunition, and packing a sand blaster with one charge of ammunition is a full-round action.

A sand blaster costs 30 gp.

MONSTER MANUAL 4 (3.5)

DRAGONSPLIT

A greenspawn sneak wields a pair of dragonsplits, one-handed exotic melee weapons with which all sneaks are proficient.

A dragonsplit can be used as a piercing weapon like a short sword.

Alternative grips use its long edge for slashing attacks or its short edge for chopping and hacking.

It counts as a light weapon for the purpose of Two-Weapon Fighting and Weapon Finesse.

1d4	1d6	19–20/×2 (P) or ×4 (S)	2 lb.	Piercing or slashing

Dragonsplits are not double weapons.

Instead, a wielder chooses to use either the piercing edge for a greater critical threat range or the slashing edge for a devastating (but rarer) quadruple-damage critical.

GREATHAMMER

Greathorn minotaurs wield these big, heavy hammers, which are considered exotic weapons for other creatures. The incredibly heavy head of the hammer allows it to make devastating Strikes against weapons and shields, granting the wielder a +2 bonus on opposed attack rolls to sunder an enemy's weapon or shield.

1d10	1d12	19–20/×4	30 lb.	Bludgeoning

MAQUAHUITL

Dark Talon lizardfolk champions wield weapons they call maquahuitl.

These martial weapons are greatclubs embellished with teeth or claws so that they deal piercing damage as well as bludgeoning damage.

1d8	1d10	×2	10 lb.	Bludgeoning and piercing

MONSTER MANUAL 5 (3.5)

KUO-TOAN HARPOON

The kuo-toan harpoon is an exotic melee weapon that has the following characteristics.

Cost	Dmg (S)	Dmg (M)	Critical	Range Incr.	Wt.	Type
15 gp	1d8	1d10	x2	30 ft.	6 lb.	Piercing

A kuo-toan harpoon is a spear that has a barbed metal head. A slender, 30-foot-long chain runs from the harpoon's end. If a kuo-toan harpoon deals damage, the target must succeed on a Reflex save (DC 10 + the damage dealt) or be harpooned.

A harpooned creature moves at half speed, cannot charge or run, and must make a DC 15 Concentration check to cast a spell.

On a failed check, it loses the spell.

If a kuo-toa harpooner holds onto the chain, the harpooned creature must make an opposed Strength check to move more than 30 feet away from the harpooner.

As a swift action, the harpooner can wrap his end of the chain around his sticky shield.

In this case, he gains a +5 bonus on the opposed Strength check.

As a standard action, the harpooner can slam his shield to the ground to seal it in place with the chain still attached. If the harpooner does so, the harpooned creature is lashed to within 30 feet of the spot the shield is stuck to and must succeed on a DC 20 Strength check to escape.

A harpooned creature can pull the harpoon out if it has two hands free and takes a full-round action to do so.

Removing the harpoon in this way deals 1d10 points of damage to the harpooned creature.

A successful DC 15 Heal check allows the removal of the harpoon without any additional damage.

RAZORFEATHER AMMUNITION

Razorfeathers can be used to make masterwork arrows or bolts, with each group of fifty requiring a DC 30 Craft (weaponsmithing) check to construct.

Such ammunition is considered to be masterwork and adamantine, and to have the keen weapon property.

‡The dai-kyu (composite longbow) is unusual in that the grip is not centered, being closer to the bottom. This allows the bow to be fired from horseback and kneeling positions.

† Reach weapon.

‡ Double weapon.

¥ Reach or double weapon (see weapon description).

‡ The weapon deals subdual damage rather than normal damage.

<sup>a</sup> If you use a ready action to set this weapon against a charge, you deal double damage if you score a hit against a charging character.

Δ This weapon is not commonly found in Rokugan.

BLOWGUN

The blowgun is a long tube through which you fire needles. A needle can deliver poison of either the injury or contact type.

BLOWGUN, GREATER

The greater blowgun fires blowgun darts (slightly smaller than thrown darts) and can also deliver poisons.

BUTTERFLY SWORD

A monk using a butterfly sword fights with her unarmed base attack bonus, including her more favorable number of attacks per round, along with other applicable modifiers.

CHAIN

Also called the manriki-gusari, this is a simple chain with weighted ends.

It can be whirled quickly, striking with hard blows from the weights.

One end can also be swung out to entangle an opponent.

The chain can be used either as a double weapon or as a reach weapon.

You can fight with it as if fighting with two weapons, incurring all the normal attack penalties as if using a one-handed weapon and a light weapon.

In this case, you can only strike at an adjacent opponent.

If you use the chain as a reach weapon, you can strike opponents 10 feet away with it.

In addition, unlike other weapons with reach, you can use it against an adjacent foe.

In this case, you can only use one end of the chain effectively; you cannot use it as a double weapon.

Because the chain can wrap around an enemy's leg or other limb, you can make trip attacks with it.

If you are tripped during your own trip attempt, you can drop the chain to avoid being tripped.

When using a chain, you get a +2 bonus on your opposed attack roll when attempting to disarm an opponent (including the roll to avoid being disarmed if you fail to disarm your opponent).

You can use the Weapon Finesse feat to apply your Dexterity modifier instead of your Strength modifier to attack rolls with a chain.

CHAKRAM

The chakram is a throwing disk or quoit about 1 foot in diameter, with a sharpened outer rim.

CHIJIIRIKI

The chijiriki is a double weapon, allowing you to strike with the spear end or whip out the chain end to entangle your opponent.

You can fight with it as if fighting with two weapons, incurring all the normal attack penalties as if using a one-handed weapon and a light weapon.

Because the chain end of the chijiriki can wrap around an enemy's leg or other limb, you can make trip attacks with it.

If you are tripped during your own trip attempt, you can drop the chain to avoid being tripped.

DARTS, BLOWGUN

These darts are somewhat smaller than throwing darts and can carry poison.

FUKIMI-BARI (MOUTH DARTS)

These slim, almost needlelike metal darts are concealed in the mouth and then spit at the target.

Their effective range is extremely short, and they do little damage, but they are highly useful when taking an opponent by surprise.

You can fire up to three mouth darts per attack (all at the same target).

Do not apply your Strength modifier to damage with mouth darts.

They are too small to carry the extra force that a strong character usually imparts to a thrown weapon.

The cost and weight are for a single mouth dart.

JITTE

With a jitte, you get a +2 bonus on your opposed attack roll when attempting to disarm an enemy (including the opposed attack roll to avoid being disarmed if you fail to disarm your enemy).

A monk using a jitte can strike with her unarmed base attack bonus, including her more favorable number of attacks per round, along with other applicable modifiers.

KATANA

The katana is a masterwork bastard sword that grants a +1 bonus on your attack rolls.

A masterwork weapon's bonus to attack does not stack with an enhancement bonus to attack.

Like a bastard sword, the katana can only be used in one hand by a character with the Exotic Weapon Proficiency (katana) feat.

A Medium-size character can use a katana two-handed as a martial weapon, or a Large creature can use it one-handed in the same way.

Among the samurai of Rokugan, only Dragons routinely use their katanas one-handed.

For a samurai character, a katana is more than just a sword—it is part of his honor and the honor of his family. It is his personal weapon, not to be used by others.

To touch the scabbard of a sheathed katana is to insult the samurai.

To draw the blade without permission is a grievous insult. A single katana may have been in the same family for generations, becoming a treasured heirloom.

Katanas often have individual names, reflecting the deeds of glory in which they have been used.

To lose such a weapon is a shameful disgrace that can only be swept clean by recovering the weapon and punishing those who took it.

Many samurai have given their lives to recover the family's weapon.

The importance of a samurai's katana is reflected in the ancestral daisho ability of the samurai class.

A katana is the only honorable weapon for a samurai to use in combat against another samurai.

Members of the Crab clan, in particular, are famous for their use of weapons such as the tetsubo, the ono, and the dai tsuchi, but they generally use these weapons only against the nonhuman denizens of the Shadowlands.

Against a samurai, even a Crab samurai must use his katana or face dishonor.

KAU SIN KE

Also called a whipping chain, this weapon is a length of four to six short iron bars connected by links of chain.

KAWANAGA

A kawanaga is a length of light chain with a weight at one end and a sharp-bladed grappling hook on the other.

It can be whirled quickly, striking with hard blows from either end.

One end can also be swung out to entangle an opponent. The kawanaga can be used either as a double weapon or as a reach weapon.

You can fight with it as if fighting with two weapons, incurring all the normal attack penalties as if using a one-handed weapon and a light weapon.

In this case, you can only strike at an adjacent opponent. If you use the kawanaga as a reach weapon, you can strike opponents 10 feet away with it.

In addition, unlike other weapons with reach, you can use it against an adjacent foe.

In this case, you can only use one end of the kawanaga effectively; you cannot use it as a double weapon.

Because the kawanaga can wrap around an enemy's leg or other limb, you can make trip attacks with it.

If you are tripped during your own trip attempt, you can drop the chain to avoid being tripped.

When using a kawanaga, you get a +2 bonus on your opposed attack roll when attempting to disarm an opponent (including the roll to avoid being disarmed if you fail to disarm your opponent).

You can use the Weapon Finesse feat to apply your Dexterity modifier instead of your Strength modifier to attack rolls with a kawanaga.

A kawanaga also serves as a climbing tool.

It is the equivalent of 10 feet of rope with a grappling hook attached.

KUSARI-GAMA

A kusari-gama is a length of chain with a kama at one end. It can be used either as a double weapon or as a reach weapon.

You can fight with it as if fighting with two weapons, incurring all the normal attack penalties as if using a one-handed weapon and a light weapon.

In this case, you can only strike at an adjacent opponent.

If you use the kusari-gama as a reach weapon, you can strike opponents 10 feet away with it.

In addition, unlike other weapons with reach, you can use it against an adjacent foe.

In this case, you can only use one end of the kusari-gama effectively; you cannot use it as a double weapon.

You can choose which end of the kusari-gama to use.

The kama end deals 1d6 points of damage and is a slashing weapon; the chain end deals 1d4 points of damage and is a bludgeoning weapon.

You can make trip attacks with a kusari-gama.

If you are tripped during your own trip attempt, you can drop the kusari-gama to avoid being tripped.

When using a kusari-gama, you get a +2 bonus on your opposed attack roll when attempting to disarm an opponent (including the roll to avoid being disarmed if you fail to disarm your opponent).

You can use the Weapon Finesse feat to apply your Dexterity modifier instead of your Strength modifier to attack rolls with a kusari-gama.

LAJATANG OR KOROBOKURU

LAJATANG

A lajatang is a double weapon.

You can fight with it as if fighting with two weapons, but if you do, you incur all the normal attack penalties associated with fighting with two weapons as if you are using a one-handed weapon and a light weapon.

A creature using a double weapon in one hand, such as a Large creature using a lajatang, can't use it as a double weapon.

A monk using a lajatang fights with her unarmed base attack bonus, including her more favorable number of attacks per round, along with other applicable modifiers. The monk can only use her more favorable number of attacks per round with one end of the weapon.

The korobokuru lajatang is for Small monks.

NAGAMAKI

The nagamaki is a polearm similar to the naginata, but somewhat shorter.

It is commonly used by mounted samurai.

NAGINATA

A naginata has reach.

You can strike opponents 10 feet away with it, but you can't use it against an adjacent foe.

NEEDLES, BLOWGUN

These 2-inch-long iron needles are sold in small wooden cases of 20.

A full case is so light that its weight is negligible.

The tips of the needles are often coated with poison.

NEKODE

A nekode is a strap or glove fitted with spikes in the palm, favored as both a weapon and a climbing tool by ninja.

Your opponent cannot use a disarm action to disarm you of a nekode.

An attack with a nekode is considered an armed attack.

A monk using a nekode can strike with her unarmed base attack bonus, including her more favorable number of attacks per round, along with other applicable modifiers.

Using a pair of nekodes while climbing gives a +1 circumstance bonus on Climb checks.

This bonus does not stack with the +2 bonus from using a climber's kit.

The bagh nakh ("tiger's claws") is a similar weapon to the nekode, wielded more like brass knuckles.

Its statistics are the same, but it does not give a bonus on Climb checks.

NINJA-TO

The ninja-to—a short, straight sword similar to a wakizashi—is the standard sword of the ninja.

True to a ninja's methods, the scabbard of the ninja-to is a multipurpose tool.

It is open at both ends, allowing it to be used as a blowpipe for powders or poisons or as a breathing tube.

It is also stiff and strong, allowing it to be used as the rung of a ladder or even as a weapon (use the statistics for a club).

SAI

A sai's pronglike extrusions are designed to help catch and disarm opponents' weapons.

If you attempt to disarm your opponent using a sai, you gain a +4 bonus on the opposed attack roll required.

(You don't gain any bonus if someone tries to disarm your sai).

A monk using a sai can strike with her unarmed base attack bonus, including her more favorable attacks per round, along with other applicable modifiers.

SANG KAUW

A sang kauw is a double weapon.

You can fight with it as if fighting with two weapons, but if you do, you incur all the normal attack penalties associated with fighting with two weapons as if you are using a one-handed weapon and a light weapon.

A creature using a double weapon in one hand, such as a Large creature using a sang kauw, can't use it as a double weapon.

The buckler in the middle of the sang kauw gives you a +1 shield bonus to your Armor Class if you attack with only one end of the sang kauw in a round.

SASUMATA

The sasumata is a pole arm designed to capture opponents with a minimum of harm.

A wielder who hits a Small or Medium-size opponent with a sasumata can immediately initiate a grapple (as a free action) without provoking an attack of opportunity.

(See Grapple in Chapter 8 of the Player's Handbook for more information).

In addition to the normal options available to a grappler, the wielder of a sasumata can attempt to pull his target to the ground (the equivalent of a trip attack, though no attack roll is necessary).

The sasumata has reach and cannot be used against adjacent opponents.

SHIKOMI-ZUE

This ninja weapon appears to be a stout bamboo or wooden staff, but a quick twist or press of a button causes a spear head to spring from one end.

Without the blade, the shikomi-zue deals the same damage as a quarterstaff (1d6, ×2 critical), and can even be used as a double weapon, like a quarterstaff.

With the blade out, it has the statistics shown on Table 5–7.

SODEGARAMI

The sodegarami, or sleeve-tangler, is a highly specialized weapon, used to catch and entangle an opponent without causing great harm.

It is normally used to hook and catch the clothing of an opponent.

When you use a sodegarami in this way, you make a grapple attack, without provoking an attack of opportunity.

You make a melee touch attack with the weapon to “grab” the target's clothing.

This attack does not work against a character in heavy armor, or against most monsters that do not wear clothing.

If the touch attack is successful, you make an opposed grapple check, using the size modifier for the sodegarami (+4 for a Large weapon) instead of your own size.

If you win the opposed check, you have a hold on the target, but you do not deal any damage.

If you lose, you fail to start the grapple.

To maintain the grapple, you do not need to move into your opponent's space.

The sodegarami holds your opponent 10 feet away from you.

While you maintain the grapple, you do not have the option to damage or pin your opponent.

Your opponent can try to escape or wriggle free, attack with a light weapon, or cast a spell with no somatic components and a casting time of 1 action.

A sodegarami can also be used as a normal weapon, dealing the damage shown on Table 5–7 but not entangling the opponent.

A sodegarami has reach.

You can strike opponents 10 feet away with it, but you can't use it against an adjacent foe.

TAIL SPIKES, RATLING

A nezumi or vanara character who has proficiency with tail spikes can use them to make one extra attack in a round at her highest base attack, in addition to all attacks with a hand-held weapon (or a ratling's natural weapons).

The tail spike attack and each other attack made that round suffer a –2 penalty apiece.

For example, at 6th level, Min'tchap gets two attacks with her nagamaki at +8 and +3 (including her strength bonus and Weapon Focus feat).

If she uses tail spikes in addition, she gets three attacks: two with the nagamaki at +6 and +1, and one with the tail spikes at +6.

This penalty applies for 1 round, so it affects attacks of opportunity the ratling might make before her next action.

THREE-SECTION STAFF

Originally a farm implement for threshing grain, this weapon is composed of three sections of wood of equal lengths, joined at the ends by chain, leather, or rope.

A monk using a three-section staff (for which she must take an Exotic Weapon Proficiency feat due to the weapon's Large size) fights with her unarmed base attack bonus and her more favorable number of attacks per round, along with other applicable attack modifiers.

The three-section staff requires two hands to use.

TONFA

A monk using a tonfa can strike with her unarmed base attack bonus, including her more favorable number of attacks per round, along with other applicable modifiers.

WAKIZASHI

The wakizashi is a masterwork short sword, granting a +1 bonus on your attack rolls.

A masterwork weapon's bonus to attack does not stack with an enhancement bonus to attack.

A samurai's wakizashi is part of a matched pair with his katana, and—like the katana—is an important part of his honor.

Samurai rarely use it in combat, except among the Dragon clan, whose members have developed a style of two-weapon fighting.

Its most prominent use is in the ritual suicide called seppuku.

Nonsamurai characters of the noble caste (primarily shugenjas) may carry a wakizashi without a katana, and often use it when pressed into combat.

WAR FAN

Favored by certain Scorpions, this weapon appears to the untrained eye as nothing more than a beautifully crafted lady's fan.

In fact, the vanes of the fan are crafted from steel, and the tips are needle-sharp.

When the fan is first brought into melee, the wielder may attempt a Bluff check against an opponent's Sense Motive check.

If the wielder wins the contest, he adds a +4 bonus to the attack roll for his first round's attack(s).

This weapon should not be confused with the tessen, a metal "fan" that serves as a shield.

Goad (simple weapon—melee): cost 3 gp, damage 1d4, critical ×2, weight 4 lb., type Piercing.

ANNULAT

This exotic ranged weapon, invented by the neraphim (see page 12), appears as a perfectly circular, nearly paper-thin hoop forged from a dark ironlike metal and sharpened on the outside edge.

The annulat's diameter is a little over 1 foot.

The band of metal, while thin, measures some 2 inches in breadth.

When thrown, an annulat sails through the air with deadly accuracy, its cross-section so thin that it is almost invisible.

Those proficient with the annulat are particularly accurate with the throwing hoop and can make it curve somewhat in flight.

Targets who gain a cover bonus to their Armor Class have that bonus reduced by 2.

Neraphim treat the annulat as a martial weapon.

GEHENNAN LANCET

The lancet is somewhat similar to a punching dagger, but it is weighted to deliver extra clout.

The lancet is a popular criminal weapon in the streets of the Crawling City on Gehenna.

HEAVY SICKLE

This sickle, slightly larger than those generally used as weapons, enjoys popularity among the vicious tieflings that make their home in the Abyss.

JOVAR

Named for the layer of Celestia on which the city of Yetsira sits, the exotic weapon known as a jovar is the preferred weapon of the Heavenly City's archon guards. The greatswordlike weapon is weighted oddly, but in the hands of a trained wielder, the blows landed with the blade are more likely to deal considerable damage.

MUSPELRULE

Originally designed as a punishment rod for Muspelheim fire giant children, this light, clublike shaft is strong enough to be used as a weapon.

RAMHAMMER

This long-handled hammer is an exotic weapon favored among some dwarves of Nidavellir, the third layer of Ysgard.

It is treated as a melee weapon with 10-foot reach, though the wielder doesn't threaten the area into which he can make an attack.

Using a ramhammer provokes attacks of opportunity, just as if the wielder had used a ranged weapon.

Because of the wide hammer head and the considerable force a trained wielder can bring to bear using leverage, it's possible to make bull rush attacks with this weapon.

When using a ramhammer, a wielder does not have to enter his foe's square (and thus does not provoke attacks of opportunity for this move, though, as noted above, the wielder provokes attacks of opportunity from adjacent foes as if making a ranged attack).

The wielder gains a +2 bonus on his opposed Strength check (see the rules for bull rush, page 154 of the Player's Handbook).

If the wielder has the Improved Bull Rush feat, he gains the noted +4 bonus on his opposed Strength check (but the ability to avoid attacks of opportunity for entering his foe's square is irrelevant).

RIPPER

A favorite on many levels of the Abyss, a ripper is a short-shafted spear with grooves in its head designed to improve the penetration of the point.

STABAXE

This weapon is similar to a handaxe, but the blade is refined to a longer, narrower, and straighter form designed to achieve deeper penetration.

It sees some use on Avalas, the first layer of Acheron.

STRAIGHTBLADE

Unlike a standard short sword, a straightblade is wider and slightly heavier, making it an ideal slashing weapon.

The straightblade is a favorite among the "citizens" of the city of Dis.

*See the description of this weapon for special rules.

**When two types are given, the weapon is both types.

‡Double weapon.

§The weapon deals subdual damage rather than normal damage.

†Reach weapon.

*If you use a ready action to set this weapon against a charge, you deal double damage if you score a hit against a charging character.

ARROWS

An arrow used as a melee weapon is Tiny and deals 1d4 points of piercing damage (×2 crit).

Since it is not designed for this use, all characters are treated as not proficient with it and thus suffer a –4 penalty on their attack rolls.

Arrows come in leather quivers that hold 20 arrows. An arrow that hits its target is destroyed; one that misses has a 50% chance to be destroyed or lost.

AXE, ORC DOUBLE

An orc double axe is a double weapon.

You can fight with it as if fighting with two weapons, but if you do, you incur all the normal attack penalties associated with fighting with two weapons, as if you were wielding a one-handed weapon and a light weapon (see Attacking with Two Weapons, page 124).

A creature using a double weapon in one hand, such as an ogre using an orc double axe, can't use it as a double weapon.

AXE, THROWING

A throwing axe is lighter than a handaxe and balanced for throwing.

Gnome fighters often use throwing axes for both melee and ranged attacks.

BATTLEAXE

The battleaxe is the most common melee weapon among dwarves.

BOLTS

A crossbow bolt used as a melee weapon is Tiny and deals 1d4 points of piercing damage (×2 crit). Since it is not designed for this use, all characters are treated as not proficient with it and thus suffer a -4 penalty on their attack rolls.

Bolts come in wooden cases that hold 10 bolts.

A bolt that hits its target is destroyed; one that misses has a 50% chance to be destroyed or lost.

BULLETS, SLING

Bullets are lead spheres, much heavier than stones of the same size.

They come in a leather pouch that holds 10 bullets.

A bullet that hits its target is destroyed; one that misses has a 50% chance to be destroyed or lost.

CHAIN, SPIKED

A spiked chain has reach.

You can strike opponents 10 feet away with it.

In addition, unlike other weapons with reach, you can use it against an adjacent foe.

Because the chain can wrap around an enemy's leg or other limb, you can make trip attacks with it.

If you are tripped during your own trip attempt, you can drop the chain to avoid being tripped.

When using a spiked chain, you get a +2 bonus on your opposed attack roll when attempting to disarm an opponent (including the roll to avoid being disarmed if you fail to disarm your opponent).

You can use the Weapon Finesse feat (see page 86) to apply your Dexterity modifier instead of your Strength modifier to attack rolls with a spiked chain.

CLUB

A wooden club is so easy to find and fashion that it has no cost.

CROSSBOW, HAND

This exotic weapon is common among rogues and others who favor stealth over power.

You can draw a hand crossbow back by hand.

Loading a hand crossbow is a move-equivalent action that provokes attacks of opportunity.

CROSSBOW, HEAVY

A heavy crossbow requires two hands to use effectively, regardless of the user's size.

You draw a heavy crossbow back by turning a small winch.

Loading a heavy crossbow is a full-round action that provokes attacks of opportunity.

A Medium-size or larger character can shoot, but not load, a heavy crossbow with one hand at a -4 penalty.

A Medium-size or larger character can shoot a heavy crossbow with each hand at a -6 penalty, plus the usual -4 penalty for the off-hand attack (-6 primary hand/-10 off hand).

The Two-Weapon Fighting feat does not reduce these penalties because it represents skill with melee weapons, not ranged weapons.

The Ambidexterity feat lets someone avoid the -4 off-hand penalty (-6 primary hand/-6 off hand).

CROSSBOW, LIGHT

A light crossbow requires two hands to use, regardless of the user's size.

You draw a light crossbow back by pulling a lever.

Loading a light crossbow is a move-equivalent action that provokes attacks of opportunity.

A Small or larger character can shoot, but not load, a light crossbow with one hand at a -4 penalty.

A Small or larger character can shoot a light crossbow with each hand as noted for heavy crossbows, above.

CROSSBOW, REPEATING

The repeating crossbow holds five crossbow bolts.

While it holds bolts, you can shoot the crossbow according to your normal number of attacks without reloading.

Loading a new case of five bolts is a full-round action that provokes attacks of opportunity.

DAGGER

The dagger is a common secondary weapon.

You can use the Weapon Finesse feat (see page 86) to apply your Dexterity modifier instead of your Strength modifier to attack rolls with a dagger.

DAGGER, PUNCHING

This dagger puts the full force of the wielder's punch behind it, making it capable of deadly strikes.

DART

A dart is the size of a large arrow and has a weighted head. Essentially, it is a small javelin.

FALCHION

This sword, which is essentially a two-handed scimitar, has a curve that gives it an effectively keener edge.

FLAIL, DIRE

A dire flail is a double weapon.

You can fight with it as if fighting with two weapons, but if you do, you incur all the normal attack penalties associated with fighting with two weapons, as if you were using a one-handed weapon and a light weapon (see Attacking with Two Weapons, page 124).

A creature using a double weapon in one hand, such as an ogre using a dire flail, can't use it as a double weapon.

With a dire flail, you get a +2 bonus on your opposed attack roll when attempting to disarm an enemy (including the opposed attack roll to avoid being disarmed if you fail to disarm your enemy).

You can also use this weapon to make trip attacks.

If you are tripped during your own trip attempt, you can drop the dire flail to avoid being tripped.

FLAIL, HEAVY OR LIGHT

With a flail, you get a +2 bonus on your opposed attack roll when attempting to disarm an enemy (including the roll to avoid being disarmed if you fail to disarm your enemy).

You can also use this weapon to make trip attacks.

If you are tripped during your own trip attempt, you can drop the flail to avoid being tripped.

GAUNTLET

These metal gloves protect your hands and let you deal normal damage with unarmed strikes rather than subdual damage.

A strike with a gauntlet is otherwise considered an unarmed attack.

The cost and weight given are for a single gauntlet.

Medium and heavy armors (except breastplate) come with gauntlets.

GAUNTLET, SPIKED

Your opponent cannot use a disarm action to disarm you of spiked gauntlets.

The cost and weight given are for a single gauntlet.

An attack with a spiked gauntlet is considered an armed attack.

GLAIVE

A glaive has reach.

You can strike opponents 10 feet away with it, but you can't use it against an adjacent foe.

GREATAXE

This big, heavy axe is a favorite of barbarians or anybody else who wants the capability to deal out incredible damage.

GREATCLUB

A greatclub is a two-handed version of a regular club.

It is often studded with nails or spikes or ringed by bands of iron.

GREATSWORD

Adventurers recognize the greatsword as one of the best melee weapons available.

It's reliable and powerful.

GUISARME

A guisarme has reach.

You can strike opponents 10 feet away with it, but you can't use it against an adjacent foe.

Because of the guisarme's curved blade, you can also use it to make trip attacks.

If you are tripped during your own trip attempt, you can drop the guisarme to avoid being tripped.

HALBERD

Normally, you strike with the halberd's axe head, but the spike on the end is useful against charging opponents.

Because of the hook on the back of the halberd, you can use it to make trip attacks.

If you are tripped during your own trip attempt, you can drop the halberd to avoid being tripped.

HALFSPEAR

The halfspear is small enough for a Small character to use it.

HAMMER, GNOME HOOKED

A gnome hooked hammer is a double weapon.

You can fight with it as if fighting with two weapons, but if you do, you incur all the normal attack penalties associated with fighting with two weapons, as if you were using a one-handed weapon and a light weapon (see Attacking with Two Weapons, page 124).

A creature using a double weapon in one hand, such as a human using a gnome hooked hammer, can't use it as a double weapon.

The hammer's blunt head is a bludgeoning weapon that deals 1d6 points of damage (×3 crit).

Its hook is a piercing weapon that deals 1d4 points of damage (×4 crit).

You can use either head as the primary weapon head.

The other head is the off-hand weapon.

HAMMER, LIGHT

This is a small sledge light enough to throw.

It is favored by dwarves.

HANDAXE

Dwarves favor these axes as off-hand weapons.

JAVELIN

This weapon is a light, flexible spear intended for throwing. You can use it in melee, but not well.

Since it is not designed for melee, all characters are treated as not proficient with it and thus suffer -4 on their melee attack rolls.

KAMA OR HALFLING KAMA

A monk using a kama can strike with her unarmed base attack, including her more favorable number of attacks per round, along with other applicable attack modifiers.

The halfling kama is for Small monks.

KUKRI

This heavy, curved dagger has its sharp edge on the inside of the curve.

LANCE, HEAVY OR LIGHT

A lance deals double damage when used from the back of a charging mount.

A heavy lance has reach.

You can strike opponents 10 feet away with it, but you can't use it against an adjacent foe.

Light lances are primarily for Small riders.

LONGBOW

You need at least two hands to use a bow, regardless of its size.

This bow is too unwieldy to use while you are mounted.

LONGBOW, COMPOSITE

You need at least two hands to use a bow, regardless of its size.

You must be at least Medium-size to use this bow while mounted.

Composite bows are made from laminated horn, wood, or bone and built with a recurve, meaning that the bow remains bow-shaped even when unstrung.

They can be made with especially heavy pulls to take advantage of a character's above-average Strength (see Mighty Composite Longbow or Shortbow, page 113).

LONGSPEAR

A longspear has reach.

You can strike opponents 10 feet away with it, but you can't use it against an adjacent foe.

LONGSWORD

This classic, straight blade is the weapon of knighthood and valor.

It is the favored weapon of paladins.

MACE, HEAVY OR LIGHT

A mace is made of metal, even the haft, making it quite heavy and very hard to break.

MORNINGSTAR

This simple weapon combines the impact of a club with the piercing force of spikes.

NET

A fighting net has small barbs in the weave and a trailing rope to control netted opponents.

You use it to entangle opponents.

When you throw a net, you make a ranged touch attack against your target.

A net's maximum range is 10 feet, and you suffer no range penalties to throw it even to its maximum range.

If you hit, the target is entangled.

An entangled creature suffers -2 on attack rolls and a -4 penalty on effective Dexterity.

The entangled creature can only move at half speed and cannot charge or run.

If you control the trailing rope by succeeding at an opposed Strength check while holding it, the entangled creature can only move within the limits that the rope allows.

If the entangled creature attempts to cast a spell, it must succeed at a Concentration check (DC 15) or be unable to cast the spell.

The entangled creature can escape with an Escape Artist check (DC 20) that is a full-round action.

The net has 5 hit points and can be burst with a Strength check (DC 25, also a full-round action).

A net is only useful against creatures between Tiny and Large size, inclusive.

A net must be folded to be thrown effectively.

The first time you throw your net in a fight, you make a normal ranged touch attack roll.

After the net is unfolded, you suffer a -4 penalty on attack rolls with it.

It takes 2 rounds for a proficient user to fold a net and twice that long for a nonproficient one to do so.

NUNCHAKU OR HALFLING

NUNCHAKU

A monk using a nunchaku fights with her unarmed base attack, including her more favorable number of attacks per round, along with other applicable attack modifiers.

The halfling nunchaku is for Small monks.

PICK, HEAVY OR LIGHT

A pick is designed to concentrate its force on a small, penetrating point.

A light or heavy pick resembles a miner's pick but is specifically designed for war.

QUARTERSTAFF

This is the favored weapon of travelers, peasants, merchants, and wizards.

You can strike with either end, allowing you to take full advantage of openings in your opponent's defenses.

A quarterstaff is a double weapon.

You can fight with it as if fighting with two weapons, but if you do, you incur all the normal attack penalties associated with fighting with two weapons as if you are using a one-handed weapon and a light weapon (see Attacking with Two Weapons, page 124).

A creature using a double weapon in one hand, such as a Large creature using a quarterstaff, can't use it as a double weapon.

RANSEUR

A ranseur has reach.

You can strike opponents 10 feet away with it, but you can't use it against an adjacent foe.

With a ranseur, you get a +2 bonus on your opposed attack rolls when attempting to disarm an opponent (including the roll to avoid being disarmed if you fail to disarm your opponent).

RAPIER

You can use the Weapon Finesse feat (see page 86) to apply your Dexterity modifier instead of your Strength modifier to attack rolls with a rapier.

SAP

A sap comes in handy when you want to knock an opponent out instead of killing him.

SCIMITAR

The curve on this blade makes the weapon's edge effectively sharper.

SCYTHE

While it resembles the standard farm implement of the same name, this scythe is balanced and strengthened for war.

The design of the scythe focuses tremendous force on the sharp point as well as allowing devastating slashes with the blade edge.

SHORTBOW

You need at least two hands to use a bow, regardless of its size.

A character who is Medium-size or larger can use this bow while mounted.

SHORTBOW, COMPOSITE

You need at least two hands to use a bow, regardless of its size.

A character who is Small or larger can use this bow while mounted.

Composite bows are made from laminated horn, wood, or bone and built with a recurve, meaning that the bow remains bow-shaped even when unstrung.

They can be made with especially heavy pulls to take advantage of a character's above-average Strength (see Mighty Composite Longbow or Shortbow, page 113).

SHORTSPEAR

Because a shortspear is not as long as a longspear, it can be thrown.

SHURIKEN

You can throw up to three shuriken per attack (all at the same target).

Do not apply your Strength modifier to damage with shuriken.

They are too small to carry the extra force that a strong character can usually impart to a thrown weapon.

SIANGHAM OR HALFLING

SIANGHAM

A monk using a siangham fights with her unarmed base attack, including her more favorable number of attacks per round, along with other applicable attack modifiers.

The halfling siangham is for Small monks.

SICKLE

This weapon is like a farmer's sickle, but it is strengthened for use as a weapon.

It is favored by druids or by anyone who wants a weapon that might be overlooked by guards.

SLING

The sling hurls lead bullets.

It's not as easy to use as the crossbow nor as powerful as a bow, but it's cheap, and easy to improvise from common materials.

Druids and halflings favor slings.

You can hurl ordinary stones with a sling, but stones are not as dense or as round as bullets, so you deal only 1d3 points of damage and suffer a -1 penalty on attack rolls.

STRIKE, UNARMED

A Medium-size character deals 1d3 points of subdual damage with an unarmed strike, which may be a punch, kick, head butt, or other type of attack.

A Small character deals 1d2 points of subdual damage.

The damage from an unarmed strike is considered weapon damage for the purposes of effects that give you a bonus to weapon damage.

You can use the Weapon Finesse feat (see page 86) to apply your Dexterity modifier instead of your Strength modifier to attack rolls with an unarmed strike.

SWORD, BASTARD

A bastard sword is too large to use in one hand without special training; thus, it is an exotic weapon.

A Medium-size character can use a bastard sword two-handed as a martial weapon, or a Large creature can use it one-handed in the same way.

Bastard swords are also known as hand-and-a-half swords.

SWORD, SHORT

This sword is popular as an off-hand weapon or as a primary weapon for Small characters.

SWORD, TWO-BLADED

A two-bladed sword is a double weapon.

You can fight with it as if fighting with two weapons, but if you do, you incur all the normal attack penalties associated with fighting with two weapons as if you were using a one-handed weapon and a light weapon (see Attacking with Two Weapons, page 124).

A creature using a double weapon in one hand, such as an ogre using a two-bladed sword, can't use it as a double weapon.

TRIDENT

This three-tined piercing weapon can be thrown just as a halfspear or shortspear can be, but its range increment is shorter because it's not as aerodynamic as those other weapons.

URGROSH, DWARVEN

A dwarven urgrosh is a double weapon.

You can fight with it as if fighting with two weapons, but if you do, you incur all the normal attack penalties associated with fighting with two weapons as if you were using a one-handed weapon and a light weapon (see Attacking with Two Weapons, page 124).

A creature using a double weapon in one hand, such as an ogre using a dwarven urgrosh, can't use it as a double weapon.

The urgrosh's axe head is a slashing weapon that deals 1d8 points of damage.

Its spear head is a piercing weapon that deals 1d6 points of damage.

You can use either head as the primary weapon head.

The other is the off-hand weapon.

If you use an urgrosh against a charging character, the spear head is the part of the weapon that does damage.

An urgrosh is also called a spear-axe.

WARAXE, DWARVEN

A dwarven waraxe is too large to use in one hand without special training; thus, it is an exotic weapon.

A Medium-size character can use a dwarven waraxe two-handed as a martial weapon, or a Large creature can use it one-handed in the same way.

WARHAMMER

This weapon, favored by dwarves, is a one-handed sledge or maul with a large, heavy head.

WHIP

The whip deals subdual damage.

It deals no damage to any creature with even a +1 armor bonus or at least a +3 natural armor bonus.

Although you keep it in hand, treat it as a projectile weapon with a maximum range of 15 feet and no range penalties. Because the whip can wrap around an enemy's leg or other limb, you can make trip attacks with it.

If you are tripped during your own trip attempt, you can drop the whip to avoid being tripped.

When using a whip, you get a +2 bonus on your opposed attack roll when attempting to disarm an opponent (including the roll to keep from being disarmed if you fail to disarm your opponent).

1 Weight figures are for Medium weapons. A Small weapon weighs half as much, and a Large weapon weighs twice as much.

2 When two types are given, the weapon is both types if the entry specifies "and," or either type (player's choice at time of attack) if the entry specifies "or."

3 The weapon deals nonlethal damage rather than lethal damage.

4 Reach weapon.

5 Double weapon.

ARROWS

An arrow used as a melee weapon is treated as a light improvised weapon (–4 penalty on attack rolls) and deals damage as a dagger of its size (critical multiplier  $\times 2$ ). Arrows come in a leather quiver that holds 20 arrows. An arrow that hits its target is destroyed; one that misses has a 50% chance of being destroyed or lost.

AXE, ORC DOUBLE

An orc double axe is a double weapon. You can fight with it as if fighting with two weapons, but if you do, you incur all the normal attack penalties associated with fighting with two weapons, just as if you were using a one-handed weapon and a light weapon (see Two-Weapon Fighting, page 160).

As its name suggests, it is often found in the hands of powerful orc fighters.

A creature wielding an orc double axe in one hand can't use it as a double weapon—only one end of the weapon can be used in any given round.

AXE, THROWING

A throwing axe is lighter than a handaxe and balanced for throwing.

Gnome fighters often use throwing axes for both melee and ranged attacks.

BATTLEAXE

The battleaxe is the most common melee weapon among dwarves.

BOLAS

A set of bolas consists of two or three heavy wooden spheres connected by lengths of cord.

Because the bolas can wrap around an enemy's leg or other limb, you can use this weapon to make a ranged trip attack against an opponent.

You can't be tripped during your own trip attempt when using a set of bolas.

BOLTS

A crossbow bolt used as a melee weapon is treated as a light improvised weapon (-4 penalty on attack rolls) and deals damage as a dagger of its size (crit  $\times 2$ ).

Bolts come in a wooden case that holds 10 bolts (or 5, for a repeating crossbow).

A bolt that hits its target is destroyed; one that misses has a 50% chance of being destroyed or lost.

BULLETS, SLING

Bullets are lead spheres, much heavier than stones of the same size.

They come in a leather pouch that holds 10 bullets.

A bullet that hits its target is destroyed; one that misses has a 50% chance of being destroyed or lost.

CHAIN, SPIKED

A spiked chain has reach, so you can strike opponents 10 feet away with it.

In addition, unlike most other weapons with reach, it can be used against an adjacent foe.

Because the chain can wrap around an enemy's leg or other limb, you can make trip attacks with the chain.

If you are tripped during your own trip attempt, you can drop the chain to avoid being tripped.

When using a spiked chain, you get a +2 bonus on opposed attack rolls made to disarm an opponent (including the roll to avoid being disarmed if such an attempt fails).

You can use the Weapon Finesse feat (page 102) to apply your Dexterity modifier instead of your Strength modifier to attack rolls with a spiked chain sized for you, even though it isn't a light weapon for you.

CLUB

A wooden club is so easy to find and fashion that it has no cost.

CROSSBOW, HAND

This exotic weapon is common among rogues and others who favor stealth over power.

You can draw a hand crossbow back by hand.

Loading a hand crossbow is a move action that provokes attacks of opportunity.

You can shoot, but not load, a hand crossbow with one hand at no penalty.

You can shoot a hand crossbow with each hand, but you take a penalty on attack rolls as if attacking with two light weapons (see Table 8-10: Two-Weapon Fighting Penalties, page 160).

CROSSBOW, HEAVY

You draw a heavy crossbow back by turning a small winch. Loading a heavy crossbow is a full-round action that provokes attacks of opportunity.

Normally, operating a heavy crossbow requires two hands. However, you can shoot, but not load, a heavy crossbow with one hand at a -4 penalty on attack rolls.

You can shoot a heavy crossbow with each hand, but you take a penalty on attack rolls as if attacking with two one-handed weapons (see Table 8-10: Two-Weapon Fighting Penalties, page 160).

This penalty is cumulative with the penalty for one-handed firing.

CROSSBOW, LIGHT

You draw a light crossbow back by pulling a lever.

Loading a light crossbow is a move action that provokes attacks of opportunity.

Normally, operating a light crossbow requires two hands. However, you can shoot, but not load, a light crossbow with one hand at a -2 penalty on attack rolls.

You can shoot a light crossbow with each hand, but you take a penalty on attack rolls as if attacking with two light weapons (see Table 8-10: Two-Weapon Fighting Penalties, page 160).

This penalty is cumulative with the penalty for one-handed firing.

CROSSBOW, REPEATING

The repeating crossbow (whether heavy or light) holds 5 crossbow bolts.

As long as it holds bolts, you can reload it by pulling the reloading lever (a free action).

Loading a new case of 5 bolts is a full-round action that provokes attacks of opportunity.

You can fire a repeating crossbow with one hand or fire a repeating crossbow in each hand in the same manner as you would a normal crossbow of the same size.

However, you must fire the weapon with two hands in order to use the reloading lever, and you must use two hands to load a new case of bolts.

DAGGER

The dagger is a common secondary weapon.

You get a +2 bonus on Sleight of Hand checks made to conceal a dagger on your body (see the Sleight of Hand skill, page 81).

DAGGER, PUNCHING

This dagger puts more force from your punch behind it, making it capable of deadly strikes.

DART

A dart is the size of a large arrow and has a weighted head. Essentially, it is a small javelin.

FALCHION

This sword, which is essentially a two-handed scimitar, has a curve that gives it the effect of a keener edge.

FLAIL OR HEAVY FLAIL

With a flail, you get a +2 bonus on opposed attack rolls made to disarm an enemy (including the roll to avoid being disarmed if such an attempt fails).

You can also use this weapon to make trip attacks.

If you are tripped during your own trip attempt, you can drop the flail to avoid being tripped.

FLAIL, DIRE

A dire flail is a double weapon.

You can fight with it as if fighting with two weapons, but if you do, you incur all the normal attack penalties associated with fighting with two weapons, just as if you were using a one-handed weapon and a light weapon (see Two-Weapon Fighting, page 160).

A creature wielding a dire flail in one hand can't use it as a double weapon—only one end of the weapon can be used in any given round.

When using a dire flail, you get a +2 bonus on opposed attack rolls made to disarm an enemy (including the opposed attack roll to avoid being disarmed if such an attempt fails).

You can also use this weapon to make trip attacks.

If you are tripped during your own trip attempt, you can drop the dire flail to avoid being tripped.

GAUNTLET

This metal glove protects your hands and lets you deal lethal damage rather than nonlethal damage with unarmed strikes.

A strike with a gauntlet is otherwise considered an unarmed attack.

The cost and weight given are for a single gauntlet.

Medium and heavy armors (except breastplate) come with gauntlets.

GAUNTLET, SPIKED

Your opponent cannot use a disarm action to disarm you of spiked gauntlets.

The cost and weight given are for a single gauntlet.

An attack with a spiked gauntlet is considered an armed attack.

GLAIVE

A glaive has reach.

You can strike opponents 10 feet away with it, but you can't use it against an adjacent foe.

GREATAXE

This big, heavy axe is a favorite of barbarians and anybody else who wants the capability to deal out incredible damage.

GREATCLUB

A greatclub is a two-handed version of a regular club. It is often studded with nails or spikes or ringed by bands of iron.

GREATSWORD

Adventurers recognize the greatsword as one of the best melee weapons available.

It's reliable and powerful.

GUISARME

A guisarme has reach.

You can strike opponents 10 feet away with it, but you can't use it against an adjacent foe.

Because of a guisarme's curved blade, you can also use it to make trip attacks.

If you are tripped during your own trip attempt, you can drop the guisarme to avoid being tripped.

HALBERD

Normally, you strike with a halberd's axe head, but the spike on the end is useful against charging opponents.

If you use a ready action to set a halberd against a charge, you deal double damage on a successful hit against a charging character.

You can use the hook on the back of a halberd to make trip attacks.

If you are tripped during your own trip attempt, you can drop the halberd to avoid being tripped.

HAMMER, GNOME HOOKED

A gnome hooked hammer is a double weapon.

You can fight with it as if fighting with two weapons, but if you do, you incur all the normal attack penalties associated with fighting with two weapons, just as if you were using a one-handed weapon and a light weapon (see Two-Weapon Fighting, page 160).

The hammer's blunt head is a bludgeoning weapon that deals 1d6 points of damage (crit  $\times 3$ ).

Its hook is a piercing weapon that deals 1d4 points of damage (crit  $\times 4$ ).

You can use either head as the primary weapon.

The other head is the offhand weapon.

A creature wielding a gnome hooked hammer in one hand can't use it as a double weapon—only one end of the weapon can be used in any given round.

You can use a gnome hooked hammer to make trip attacks.

If you are tripped during your own trip attempt, you can drop the gnome hooked hammer to avoid being tripped.

Gnomes treat gnome hooked hammers as martial weapons.

HAMMER, LIGHT

This is a small sledge light enough to throw. It is favored by dwarves.

HANDAXE

Dwarves favor these axes as off-hand weapons.

JAVELIN

This weapon is a light, flexible spear intended for throwing. You can use it in melee, but not well. Since it is not designed for melee, you are treated as nonproficient with it and take a  $-4$  penalty on attack rolls if you use a javelin as a melee weapon.

KAMA

The kama is a special monk weapon. This designation gives a monk (see Chapter 3: Classes) wielding a kama special options. Because of a kama's shape, you can use it to make trip attacks. If you are tripped during your own trip attempt, you can drop the kama to avoid being tripped.

KUKRI

This heavy, curved knife has its sharp edge on the inside of the curve.

LANCE

A lance deals double damage when used from the back of a charging mount. It has reach, so you can strike opponents 10 feet away with it, but you can't use it against an adjacent foe. While mounted, you can wield a lance with one hand.

LONGBOW

You need at least two hands to use a bow, regardless of its size.

A longbow is too unwieldy to use while you are mounted. If you have a penalty for low Strength, apply it to damage rolls when you use a longbow.

If you have a bonus for high Strength, you can apply it to damage rolls when you use a composite longbow (see below) but not a regular longbow.

LONGBOW, COMPOSITE

You need at least two hands to use a bow, regardless of its size.

You can use a composite longbow while mounted.

Composite bows are made from laminated horn, wood, or bone and built with a recurve, meaning that the bow remains bow-shaped even when unstrung.

All composite bows are made with a particular strength rating (that is, each requires a minimum Strength modifier to use with proficiency).

If your Strength bonus is less than the strength rating of the composite bow, you can't effectively use it, so you take a  $-2$  penalty on attacks with it.

The default composite longbow requires a Strength modifier of  $+0$  or higher to use with proficiency.

A composite longbow can be made with a high strength rating (representing an especially heavy pull) to take advantage of an above-average Strength score; this feature allows you to add your Strength bonus to damage, up to the maximum bonus indicated for the bow.

Each point of Strength bonus granted by the bow adds 100 gp to its cost.

For instance, a composite longbow ( $+1$  Str bonus) costs 200 gp, while a composite longbow ( $+4$  Str bonus) costs 500 gp.

For example, Tordek has a  $+2$  Strength bonus.

With a regular composite longbow, he gets no modifier on damage rolls.

For 200 gp, he can buy a composite longbow ( $+1$  Str bonus), which lets him add  $+1$  to his damage rolls.

For 300 gp, he can buy one that lets him add his entire  $+2$  Strength bonus.

Even if he paid 400 gp for a composite longbow ( $+3$  Str bonus), he would still get only a  $+2$  bonus on damage rolls and takes a  $-2$  penalty on attacks with it because his Strength is insufficient to use the weapon to best advantage.

The bow can't grant him a higher bonus than he already has.

For purposes of weapon proficiency and similar feats, a composite longbow is treated as if it were a longbow.

Thus, if you have Weapon Focus (longbow), that feat applies both to longbows and composite longbows.

LONGSPEAR

A longspear has reach.

You can strike opponents 10 feet away with it, but you can't use it against an adjacent foe.

If you use a ready action to set a longspear against a charge, you deal double damage on a successful hit against a charging character.

LONGSWORD

This classic, straight blade is the weapon of knighthood and valor.

It is a favorite weapon of many paladins.

MACE, HEAVY OR LIGHT

A mace is made of metal, even the haft, which makes it quite heavy and very hard to break.

NET

A fighting net has small barbs in the weave and a trailing rope to control netted opponents.

You use it to entangle enemies.

When you throw a net, you make a ranged touch attack against your target.

A net's maximum range is 10 feet.

If you hit, the target is entangled.

An entangled creature takes a –2 penalty on attack rolls and a –4 penalty on Dexterity, can move at only half speed, and cannot charge or run.

If you control the trailing rope by succeeding on an opposed Strength check while holding it, the entangled creature can move only within the limits that the rope allows.

If the entangled creature attempts to cast a spell, it must make a DC 15 Concentration check or be unable to cast the spell.

An entangled creature can escape with a DC 20 Escape Artist check (a full-round action).

The net has 5 hit points and can be burst with a DC 25 Strength check (also a full-round action).

A net is useful only against creatures within one size category of you.

For instance, a Small character wielding a net can entangle Tiny, Small, or Medium creatures.

A net must be folded to be thrown effectively.

The first time you throw your net in a fight, you make a normal ranged touch attack roll.

After the net is unfolded, you take a –4 penalty on attack rolls with it.

It takes 2 rounds for a proficient user to fold a net and twice that long for a nonproficient one to do so.

NUNCHAKU

The nunchaku is a special monk weapon.

This designation gives a monk wielding a nunchaku special options.

With a nunchaku, you get a +2 bonus on opposed attack rolls made to disarm an enemy (including the roll to avoid being disarmed if such an attempt fails).

PICK, HEAVY OR LIGHT

A pick is designed to concentrate the force of its blow on a small area.

A light or heavy pick resembles a miner's pick but is specifically designed for war.

QUARTERSTAFF

The quarterstaff is the favorite weapon of many characters, from travelers, peasants, and merchants to monks, rangers, and wizards.

A quarterstaff is a double weapon.

You can fight with it as if fighting with two weapons, but if you do, you incur all the normal attack penalties associated with fighting with two weapons, just as if you were using a one-handed weapon and a light weapon (see Two-Weapon Fighting, page 160).

You can also strike with either end singly, a fact that allows you to take full advantage of openings in your opponent's defenses.

A creature wielding a quarterstaff in one hand can't use it as a double weapon—only one end of the weapon can be used in any given round.

The quarterstaff is a special monk weapon.

This designation gives a monk (see Chapter 3: Classes) wielding a quarterstaff special options.

RANSEUR

A ranseur has reach.

You can strike opponents 10 feet away with it, but you can't use it against an adjacent foe.

With a ranseur, you get a +2 bonus on opposed attack rolls made to disarm an opponent (including the roll to avoid being disarmed if such an attempt fails).

RAPIER

You can use the Weapon Finesse feat (page 102) to apply your Dexterity modifier instead of your Strength modifier to attack rolls with a rapier sized for you, even though it isn't a light weapon for you.

You can't wield a rapier in two hands in order to apply 1-1/2 times your Strength bonus to damage.

SAI

A sai's pronglike extrusions are designed to help catch and disarm opponent's weapons.

With a sai, you get a +4 bonus on opposed attack rolls made to disarm an enemy (including the roll to avoid being disarmed if such an attempt fails).

The sai is a special monk weapon.

This designation gives a monk (see Chapter 3: Classes) wielding a sai special options.

SAP

A sap comes in handy when you want to knock an opponent out instead of killing it.

SCIMITAR

The curve on this blade gives it the effect of a keener edge.

SCYTHE

While it resembles the standard farm implement of the same name, this scythe is balanced and strengthened for war.

The design of the scythe focuses tremendous force on the sharp point, as well as allowing devastating slashes with the blade edge.

Because of a scythe's shape, you can use it to make trip attacks.

If you are tripped during your own trip attempt, you can drop the scythe to avoid being tripped.

SHIELD, HEAVY OR LIGHT

You can bash with a shield instead of using it for defense. See Armor, later in this chapter.

SHORTBOW

You need at least two hands to use a bow, regardless of its size.

You can use a shortbow while mounted.

If you have a penalty for low Strength, apply it to damage rolls when you use a shortbow.

If you have a bonus for high Strength, you can apply it to damage rolls when you use a composite shortbow (see below) but not a regular shortbow.

SHORTBOW, COMPOSITE

You need at least two hands to use a bow, regardless of its size.

You can use a composite shortbow while mounted.

Composite bows are made from laminated horn, wood, or bone and built with a recurve, meaning that the bow remains bow-shaped even when unstrung.

All composite bows are made with a particular strength rating (that is, each requires a minimum Strength modifier to use with proficiency).

If your Strength bonus is lower than the strength rating of the composite bow, you can't effectively use it, so you take a  $-2$  penalty on attacks with it.

The default composite shortbow requires a Strength modifier of  $+0$  or higher to use with proficiency.

A composite shortbow can be made with a high strength rating to take advantage of an above-average Strength score; this feature allows you to add your Strength bonus to damage, up to the maximum bonus indicated for the bow. Each point of Strength bonus granted by the bow adds 75 gp to its cost.

For instance, a composite shortbow ( $+1$  Str bonus) costs 150 gp, while a composite shortbow ( $+4$  Str bonus) costs 375 gp. For example, Tordek has a  $+2$  Strength bonus.

With a regular composite shortbow, he gets no modifier on damage rolls.

For 150 gp, he can buy a composite shortbow ( $+1$  Str bonus), which lets him add  $+1$  to his damage rolls.

For 225 gp, he can buy one that lets him add his entire  $+2$  Strength bonus.

Even if he paid 300 gp for a composite shortbow ( $+3$  Str bonus), he would still get only a  $+2$  bonus on damage rolls and takes a  $-2$  penalty on attacks with it because his Strength is insufficient to use the weapon to best advantage.

The bow can't grant him a higher bonus than he already has.

For purposes of weapon proficiency and similar feats, a composite shortbow is treated as if it were a shortbow.

Thus, if you have Weapon Focus (shortbow), that feat applies both to short-bows and composite shortbows.

SHORTSPEAR

A shortspear is small enough to wield one-handed. It may also be thrown.

SHURIKEN

A shuriken is a special monk weapon.

This designation gives a monk (see Chapter 3: Classes) wielding shuriken special options.

A shuriken can't be used as a melee weapon.

Although they are thrown weapons, shuriken are treated as ammunition for the purposes of drawing them, crafting masterwork or otherwise special versions of them (see Masterwork Weapons, below), and what happens to them after they are thrown.

SIANGHAM

The siangham is a special monk weapon.

This designation gives a monk (see Chapter 3: Classes) wielding a siangham special options.

SICKLE

This weapon is like a farmer's sickle, but it is strengthened for use as a weapon.

It is favored by druids and by anyone who wants a weapon that might be overlooked by guards.

Because of a sickle's shape, you can also use it to make trip attacks.

If you are tripped during your own trip attempt, you can drop the sickle to avoid being tripped.

SLING

A sling hurls lead bullets.

It doesn't shoot as far as a crossbow, nor is it as powerful as a bow, but it's cheap and easy to improvise from common materials.

Druids and halflings favor slings.

Your Strength modifier applies to damage rolls when you use a sling, just as it does for thrown weapons.

You can fire, but not load, a sling with one hand.

Loading a sling is a move action that requires two hands and provokes attacks of opportunity.

You can hurl ordinary stones with a sling, but stones are not as dense or as round as bullets.

Thus, such an attack deals damage as if the weapon were designed for a creature one size category smaller than you (for instance,  $1d3$  instead of  $1d4$ , or  $1d2$  instead of  $1d3$ ) and you take a  $-1$  penalty on attack rolls.

SPEAR

One of the simplest weapons in existence, the spear is favored by druids and sorcerers.

It can be thrown.

If you use a ready action to set a spear against a charge, you deal double damage on a successful hit against a charging character.

SPIKED ARMOR

You can outfit your armor with spikes, which can deal damage in a grapple or as a separate attack.

See Armor, later in this chapter.

SPIKED SHIELD, HEAVY OR LIGHT

You can bash with a spiked shield instead of using it for defense.

See Armor, later in this chapter.

STRIKE, UNARMED

A Medium character deals  $1d3$  points of nonlethal damage with an unarmed strike, which may be a punch, kick, head butt, or other type of attack.

A Small character deals  $1d2$  points of nonlethal damage.

A monk or any character with the Improved Unarmed Strike feat can deal lethal or nonlethal damage with unarmed strikes, at her option. The damage from an unarmed strike is considered weapon damage for the purposes of effects that give you a bonus on weapon damage rolls. An unarmed strike is always considered a light weapon. Therefore, you can use the Weapon Finesse feat (page 102) to apply your Dexterity modifier instead of your Strength modifier to attack rolls with an unarmed strike. Sword, Bastard: bastard swords are also known as hand-and-a-half swords. A bastard sword is too large to use in one hand without special training; thus, it is an exotic weapon. A character can use a bastard sword two-handed as a martial weapon.

SWORD, SHORT

This sword is popular as an off-hand weapon.

SWORD, TWO-BLADED

A two-bladed sword is a double weapon. You can fight with it as if fighting with two weapons, but if you do, you incur all the normal attack penalties associated with fighting with two weapons, just as if you were using a one-handed weapon and a light weapon (see Two-Weapon Fighting, page 160). A creature wielding a two-bladed sword in one hand can't use it as a double weapon—only one end of the weapon can be used in any given round.

TRIDENT

This three-tined piercing weapon can be thrown just as a shortspear or spear can be, but its range increment is shorter because it's not as aerodynamic as those other weapons. If you use a ready action to set a trident against a charge, you deal double damage on a successful hit against a charging character.

URGROSH, DWARVEN

A dwarven urgrosh is a double weapon. You can fight with it as if fighting with two weapons, but if you do, you incur all the normal attack penalties associated with fighting with two weapons, just as if you were using a one-handed weapon and a light weapon (see Two-Weapon Fighting, page 160). The urgrosh's axe head is a slashing weapon that deals 1d8 points of damage. Its spear head is a piercing weapon that deals 1d6 points of damage.

You can use either head as the primary weapon. The other is the off-hand weapon. A creature wielding a dwarven urgrosh in one hand can't use it as a double weapon—only one end of the weapon can be used in any given round. If you use a ready action to set an urgrosh against a charge, you deal double damage if you score a hit against a charging character. If you use an urgrosh against a charging character, the spear head is the part of the weapon that deals damage. An urgrosh is also called a spear-axe. Dwarves treat dwarven urgroshes as martial weapons.

WARAXE, DWARVEN

A dwarven waraxe is too large to use in one hand without special training; thus, it is an exotic weapon. A Medium character can use a dwarven waraxe two-handed as a martial weapon, or a Large creature can use it one-handed in the same way. A dwarf treats a dwarven waraxe as a martial weapon even when using it in one hand.

WARHAMMER

This weapon, favored by dwarves, is a one-handed sledge or maul with a large, heavy head.

WHIP

A whip deals nonlethal damage. It deals no damage to any creature with an armor bonus of +1 or higher or a natural armor bonus of +3 or higher. The whip is treated as a melee weapon with 15-foot reach, though you don't threaten the area into which you can make an attack. In addition, unlike most other weapons with reach, you can use it against foes anywhere within your reach (including adjacent foes). Using a whip provokes an attack of opportunity, just as if you had used a ranged weapon. Because a whip can wrap around an enemy's leg or other limb, you can make trip attacks with a it. If you are tripped during your own trip attempt, you can drop the whip to avoid being tripped. When using a whip, you get a +2 bonus on opposed attack rolls made to disarm an opponent (including the roll to keep from being disarmed if the attack fails). You can use the Weapon Finesse feat (page 102) to apply your Dexterity modifier instead of your Strength modifier to attack rolls with a whip sized for you, even though it isn't a light weapon for you.

† Double weapon.

ARROW, FLIGHT

The light shaft and special design of this masterwork arrow increases a bow's range increment by 20 feet.

ARROW, SEA

These arrows, fletched by aquatic elves, are treated as masterwork, but they don't grant a +1 enhancement bonus on attack rolls.

Instead, when fired from an aquatic longbow, they negate the –2 penalty per 5 feet for making a ranged attack underwater.

ARROW, SIGNAL

This masterwork arrow is specially designed to emulate a bird's call when fired.

Wood elf fletchers craft the arrows to make calls that will be recognized as signals by their fellow elves.

For example, a hawk's cry might be used to signal an attack, while an owl's cry might signal a stealthy advance.

Anyone overhearing the signal may, on a successful Survival check (DC 20), determine whether the call comes from a living bird or another source.

The intricate carving of the arrows makes them clumsy in flight, resulting in a -2 penalty on attack rolls.

ASPERGILLUM, HEAVY

The common aspergillum (detailed in the FORGOTTEN REALMS Campaign Setting, page 95) is a lightweight metal device resembling a small club or light mace with a perforated head for dispensing holy water.

Although not a weapon per se, it can be used in combat to deliver ranged touch attacks.

The heavy aspergillum combines the properties of a common aspergillum with those of a heavy mace and is greatly favored by members of the Impilturan church of Ilmater.

A heavy aspergillum can hold up to 3 flasks of holy water. In addition to serving as a common aspergillum, it can also be used in melee combat.

When a button on the shaft is pressed, tiny holes open in the mace head, allowing holy water to touch a creature struck by the weapon.

Each use of the weapon in this manner uses one flask of holy water per attack whether or not the attack is successful.

If the wielder has multiple attacks per round with the weapon, the holy water can be released multiple times in one round (but no more than once per attack) until it is depleted.

A heavy aspergillum may also be used to make ranged touch attacks with holy water in the manner of a normal aspergillum.

Pouring a flask of holy water into an aspergillum or heavy aspergillum is a standard action that provokes an attack of opportunity.

BATTLE GAUNTLET

This thick band of metal covers the forearm and part of the hand.

Like gauntlets that come with armor, battle gauntlets allow the wearer to make unarmed strikes as if he were armed.

They can be fitted with spikes or blades (making them function as spiked gauntlets or claw bracers).

Because a battle gauntlet covers the hand and the entire forearm, the wearer cannot wear any other magical gauntlet or bracer on that arm (or items that use those spaces on the body) while wearing battle gauntlets.

The price and weight on Table A-1 is for a single battle gauntlet.

BOLAS, TWO-BALL

A set of bolas consists of two heavy spheres made of wood, stone, or metal connected by lengths of cord.

It is a ranged weapon used to trip an opponent.

When you throw a set of bolas, you make a ranged touch attack against your opponent.

If you hit, your opponent must succeed on a Dexterity or Strength check opposed by your Strength check or be tripped.

Bolas can only trip Medium-size or smaller opponents.

Your opponent cannot trip you when you make a trip attack with a set of two-ball bolas.

DART, ACID

When these hollow darts hit a target, they break, splashing the victim with acid.

This does an additional 1d6 points of acid damage in addition to the normal 1d4 piercing damage from the dart itself.

Once used, the dart is useless.

DART, BARBED

This crude and heavy throwing dart is both fletched and barbed.

It measures from two to three feet long.

Lizardfolk usually hurl these at a target before charging into melee.

DART, STUN

When one of these hollow darts hits a target, it releases a small puff of poison gas.

The victim must make a Fortitude save (DC 12) or be stunned for one round.

After one round, the target must make another Fortitude save (DC 12) or be stunned for an additional 1d4 rounds.

GOBLIN STICK

This is a forked and hooked pole arm, first used by bugbears trying to catch hiding goblins.

The wooden stick is 6 to 9 feet long, usually gripped in the middle.

Each end is tipped with three wicked blades.

The central blade is hooked to help extract targets from tight places.

The other blades, which are set off at slight angles and different directions from the center, are used to poke around corners.

A goblin stick is a double weapon and can also be used to make trip attacks.

HARPOON, ARCTIC

Favored by arctic dwarves, the harpoon is a broad-bladed spear forged with cruel barbs.

The shaft of the harpoon has a trailing rope attached to control harpooned opponents.

Though sometimes used for hunting whales and other large sea creatures, the harpoon is equally at home on dry land.

If you deal damage to your opponent, the harpoon may lodge in the victim if it fails a Reflex saving throw against a DC equal to 10 + the damage you dealt.

The harpooned creature moves at only half speed and cannot charge or run.

If you control the trailing rope by succeeding at an opposed Strength check while holding it, the harpooned creature can only move within the limits that the rope allows (the trailing rope is 30 feet long).

If the harpooned creature attempts to cast a spell, it must succeed on a Concentration check (DC 15) or fail, losing the spell.

The harpooned creature can pull the harpoon from its wound if it has two free hands and takes a full-round action to do so, but in so doing it deals damage to itself equal to the initial damage the harpoon caused (in other words, the damage coming out equals the damage going in).

For example, if you hit with a harpoon and deal 8 points of damage, the target takes another 8 points of damage when it removes the harpoon.

A harpoon can be removed safely with a successful Heal check (DC 10 + damage dealt), but this requires 1 minute.

HELMET, HORNED

A horned helmet resembles a normal helmet with bull's horns attached to each side.

A horned helmet deals double normal damage when used during a charge action, but the helmet has a reach of 0 ft.

HELMET, SPIKED

A spiked helmet resembles a normal helmet with a single spike standing straight out from the top.

A spiked helmet deals double normal damage when used during a charge action, but the helmet has a reach of 0 ft.

ICE AXE

In addition to being an effective weapon, the ice axe grants a +2 circumstance bonus on Climb checks to a wielder proficient in its use.

JAMBIYA

This hooked dagger, common among the Calishites and Zakharans, leaves long, thin wounds in its target.

LANCE, FLIGHT

This is a 10-foot wooden shaft topped by blade.

The back end is fletched to keep the lance's flight true.

This weapon is normally used with a charge while flying, hurled at the bottom of a swoop maneuver to impale the target.

It may be used as a melee weapon as if it were a shortspear.

LASSO

A lasso is little more than a thin rope knotted with a slipknot that creates a large loop.

The loop is thrown at a target and the other end is pulled when the loop strikes, causing it to tighten around the target.

You can throw the lasso at a Medium-size or smaller target, which requires a ranged touch attack.

If the touch attack succeeds, you immediately start a grapple against the target with a -4 penalty on your roll (all normal grapple modifiers apply).

If the opponent is grappled by the lasso, you may use an attack to attempt to trip the target.

If you are tripped during your own trip attempt, you can drop the lasso to avoid being tripped.

You cannot damage or pin the opponent with the lasso, and you are not considered to be grappling when using the lasso to grapple.

If you drop the lasso, the grappled creature only needs to succeed at a DC 10 grapple or Escape Artist check to get out of the lasso.

If you secure one end of the lasso to the saddle of your mount, you can use the mount's size and strength modifiers for your grapple checks.

The maximum range for a lasso cannot exceed the length of the rope, minus 5 feet.

LONGBOW, AQUATIC

This weapon, favored by aquatic elves, employs a special kelp string that dampens vibration and turbulence.

The aquatic longbow functions as a normal longbow except when sea arrows are fired from it underwater.

In this case, the weapon fires with the listed range increment and no penalty for being underwater (ranged attacks underwater ordinarily suffer a -2 penalty on attack rolls for every 5 feet of water they pass through).

Mighty composite versions of the aquatic longbow are available (see Player's Handbook pages 113–114), costing 600 gp for +1, 700 gp for +2, 800 gp for +3, and 900 gp for +4.

SKIPROCK

These polished, perfectly weighted stones are prized by halflings, for if thrown properly by a proficient user they ricochet off one target to strike a second.

If the skiprock hits its target, it ricochets toward another target of the thrower's choice adjacent to the original target (within 5 feet).

The thrower immediately makes a second attack roll, with an attack bonus equal to the first roll's attack bonus -2.

Skiprocks can be used as sling bullets, but cannot make ricochet shots when used as ammunition unless thrown from a halfling warsling by a user proficient in both weapons.

A skiprock may be drawn as a free action.

SPIKE SHOOTER

This is a modification of a class of weapons, rather than a specific weapon itself, and thus does not require any additional weapon proficiency.

This spring-driven device can modify any weapon that has a spike at the end of a long pole (such as battleaxes, morningstars, and most polearms).

The spike shooter allows the spike to be launched at a target as a normal ranged attack.

The spike shooter is an inaccurate weapon, and those who use it suffer a -2 penalty on the attack roll. Resetting the spike is a full-round action.

STEELSWORD, CHONDATHAN

Available in the Dalelands, Cormyr, and Sembia, this broad-bladed one-handed sword is treated as a masterwork longsword that grants a +2 bonus when attempting to break a foe's weapon.

WARSLING, HALFLING

Perfect balance and sturdier construction distinguish this sling from its simpler counterparts. The listed damage assumes skiprock ammunition; ordinary sling bullets deal 1d4 points of damage. If a user proficient in both skiprock and the warsling throws skiprocks with a warsling, they can be ricocheted just as if they were thrown.

BUCKLER-AXE, DWARVEN

At first glance, a dwarven buckler-axe appears similar to a standard buckler, but this weapon has enlarged bladelikey edges at its top and bottom, allowing the wielder to swing it like an axe.

Thus, in addition to its obvious protective qualities, it proves a capable off-hand weapon or emergency weapon when disarmed.

A dwarven buckler-axe grants its wielder a +1 shield bonus to Armor Class.

As with any shield, when you attack with a dwarven buckler-axe, you do not get the shield bonus to your AC. A buckler-axe also provides a -1 armor check penalty and a 5% arcane spell failure chance.

Like a spiked shield, a buckler-axe can be enhanced as a weapon, as a shield, or both, but such enhancements must be paid for and applied separately.

CROSSBOW, GREAT

You draw a great crossbow back by turning a small winch. Loading a great crossbow is a full-round action that provokes attacks of opportunity.

Normally, operating a great crossbow requires two hands. However, you can shoot, but not load, a great crossbow with one hand at a -4 penalty on attack rolls.

You can shoot a great crossbow with each hand, but you take a penalty on attack rolls as if attacking with two weapons (see Table 8-10, page 160 of the Player's Handbook). These penalties are cumulative with the penalty for firing the crossbow one-handed.

GREATHAMMER, GOLIATH

This big, heavy hammer is a favorite of goliath barbarians and warriors.

The incredibly heavy head of the hammer allows it to make particularly devastating strikes against weapons and shields, granting the wielder a +2 bonus on opposed attack rolls to sunder an enemy's weapon or shield.

HAMMER, THROWING

Essentially a light hammer that has been carefully balanced for throwing, the throwing hammer is a favorite weapon of dwarf rangers.

QUICKRAZOR, GNOME

The gnome quickrazor is a fast, flashy weapon favored by gnome bards, because it allows them to hold an instrument, attack with a weapon, and still keep one hand free for spellcasting.

In addition, many two-weapon-wielding spellcasters find it a perfect off-hand weapon because it allows them to keep their primary weapon in hand and still cast spells with their off hand.

The quickrazor features a light, wide knife blade with a very small hilt.

The weapon is worn tied to the wielder's wrist in a specially designed sheath.

When you attack with a quickrazor, you flick it out in a quick, slashing circle, catching the hilt in your hand at the end of the arc and then snapping it back into its rest.

Because of this flicking technique, drawing a quickrazor is always a free action, but at the end of your action, you must stow the quickrazor in order to use it properly again on your next turn.

Stowing the weapon after attacking with it in this fashion is a free action.

Because you must stow the quickrazor at the end of each attack with it, you are treated as unarmed during other creatures' actions.

If you draw a quickrazor and simply wield it instead of using its intended attack method, it counts as an improvised weapon, imposing a  $-2$  penalty on attack rolls even if you have the appropriate Exotic Weapon Proficiency feat.

Quickrazors are easier to conceal than most weapons, and they grant a  $+4$  bonus on Sleight of Hand checks to conceal them.

Quickrazors grant a  $+2$  bonus on Bluff checks made to feint in combat.

Attaching a quickrazor and sheath to your wrist so that it can be wielded properly is a full-round action that provokes attacks of opportunity.

A character can have only one quickrazor attached to each wrist at a time.

SPEAR, DWARVEN DOUBLE

A dwarven double spear is a double weapon.

You can fight with it as if fighting with two weapons, but if you do, you incur all the normal attack penalties associated with fighting with two weapons, just as if you were using a one-handed weapon and a light weapon (see Two-Weapon Fighting, page 160 of the Player's Handbook).

A creature wielding a dwarven double spear in one hand can't use it as a double weapon—only one end of the weapon can be used in any given round.

The weapon looks much like a standard spear, although the shaft is a bit thicker.

The spearpoint is also longer and heavier, sharpened on the sides as well as the tip to allow for either slashing or piercing attacks.

In addition, a second identical spear point is fastened to the butt of the spear, making the weapon doubly dangerous.

The tougher pointed ends on the blade allow the wielder to set the weapon against a charge.

If you use a ready action to set a dwarven double spear against a charge, you deal double damage on a successful hit against a charging character.

SWORDCATCHER, GNOME

This short, heavy sword resembles a broad-bladed short sword with two heavy prongs extending up from the hilt. These prongs are designed to help catch and disarm opponents' weapons.

When using a gnome swordcatcher, you gain a  $+4$  bonus on attack rolls made to disarm an opponent (including the roll to avoid being disarmed yourself if such an attempt fails).

TORTOISE BLADE, GNOME

This contraption is designed to be used by a gnome in his or her off hand.

It is particularly useful in cramped tunnels or warrens where swinging a weapon is difficult or impossible.

It looks like a turtle shell strapped to the wielder's wrist, with a daggerlike blade jutting out where the wielder's fingers should be.

A tortoise blade grants a  $+1$  shield bonus to Armor Class. As with any shield, when you attack with a tortoise blade, you do not get the shield bonus to your AC.

A tortoise blade also provides a  $-1$  armor check penalty and a 5% arcane spell failure chance.

Like a spiked shield, a tortoise blade can be enhanced as a weapon, as a shield, or both, but such enhancements must be paid for and applied separately.

WARPIKE, DWARVEN

The dwarven warpike resembles a halberd with a greatly elongated shaft, to the end of which a counterweight has been added.

A dwarven warpike has reach.

You can strike opponents 10 feet away with it, but you can't use it against an adjacent foe.

Normally, you strike with a dwarven warpike's axe head, but the spike on the end is useful against charging opponents.

If you use a ready action to set a dwarven warpike against a charge, you deal double damage on a successful hit against a charging character.

You can use the hook on the back of a dwarven warpike to make trip attacks.

If you are tripped during your own trip attempt, you can drop the dwarven warpike to avoid being tripped.

1 Weight figures are for Medium weapons. A Small weapon weighs half as much, and a Large weapon weighs twice as much.

DOUBLE CROSSBOW, HAND

A hand double crossbow functions like a regular crossbow of the same type, but is constructed with a second crossbow above the foregrip.

Individually loading each hand crossbow takes a move action that provokes an attack of opportunity.

It takes a full-round action to load both hand crossbows.

A character can fire one of the two crossbows as an exotic weapon (hand crossbow) with a standard action, or both crossbows as an exotic weapon (hand crossbow) with a full round action (using multiple attacks gained from a high base attack bonus).

A character with exotic weapon (double crossbow) training can fire both crossbows as a full-round action using their highest base attack bonus, but each attack takes a -2 penalty.

You can shoot a hand double crossbow with each hand, but you take a penalty on attack rolls as if attacking with two light weapons (see Table 8-10: Two-Weapon Fighting Penalties, page 160 of the Player's Handbook).

This penalty is cumulative with the penalty for one-handed firing.

Design Notes

Taking the Exotic Weapon Proficiency (double crossbow) grants no more attacks with a double crossbow than firing a double crossbow twice with a high base attack bonus. The difference is that with the Exotic Weapon Proficiency, both attacks are at your highest base attack bonus, but with a -2 penalty; whereas using the second attack from a high base attack bonus comes with a -5 penalty. For example, a 6th level fighter with Exotic Weapon Proficiency (double crossbow) attacks with a +4/+4, while a 6th level fighter (without with the Exotic Weapon Proficiency feat) can attack with a +6/+1 base attack bonus. The advantage of taking Exotic Weapon Proficiency (double crossbow) is there, and just powerful enough to justify the feat. Taking the Exotic Weapon Proficiency feat for double crossbows essentially offers a benefit identical to the Rapid Shot feat.

DOUBLE CROSSBOW, HEAVY

A heavy double crossbow functions like a regular crossbow of the same type, but is constructed with a second crossbow above the foregrip.

Individually loading each heavy crossbow takes a full-round action that provokes an attack of opportunity.

It takes two full-round actions to load both heavy crossbows.

A character can fire one of the two crossbows as a simple weapon with a standard action, or both crossbows as a simple weapon with a full round action (using multiple attacks gained from a high base attack bonus).

A character with exotic weapon (double crossbow) training can fire both crossbows as a full-round action using their highest base attack bonus, but each attack takes a -2 penalty.

A heavy double crossbow can be fired with one hand, but with a -6 penalty.

You can shoot a heavy double crossbow with each hand, but you take a penalty on attack rolls as if attacking with two one-handed weapons (see Table 8-10: Two-Weapon Fighting Penalties, page 160 of the Player's Handbook).

This penalty is cumulative with the penalty for one-handed firing.

DOUBLE CROSSBOW, LIGHT

A light double crossbow functions like a regular crossbow of the same type, but is constructed with a second crossbow above the foregrip.

Individually loading each light crossbow takes a move action that provokes an attack of opportunity.

It takes a full-round action to load both light crossbows.

A character can fire one of the two crossbows as a simple weapon with a standard action, or both crossbows as a simple weapon with a full round action (using multiple attacks gained from a high base attack bonus).

A character with exotic weapon (double crossbow) training can fire both crossbows as a full-round action using their highest base attack bonus, but each attack takes a –2 penalty.

A light double crossbow can be fired with one hand, but with a –4 penalty.

You can shoot a light double crossbow with each hand, but you take a penalty on attack rolls as if attacking with two light weapons (see Table 8–10: Two-Weapon Fighting Penalties, page 160 of the Player's Handbook).

This penalty is cumulative with the penalty for one-handed firing.

GREATPICK

A greatpick is an extension of the heavy and light pick designs, but considerably heavier and larger, concentrating twice as much force onto a small area with a two-handed heft.

1 Weight figures are for Medium weapons. A Small weapon weighs half as much, and a Large weapon weighs twice as much.

2 When two types are given, the weapon is both types if the entry specifies “and,” or either type (player’s choice at time of attack) if the entry specifies “or.”

3 The weapon deals nonlethal damage rather than lethal damage.

4 Double weapon.

ARROW, BLUNT

These projectiles have blunt tips wrapped in leather instead of pointed arrowheads.

They have a shorter range increment than normal arrows and deal nonlethal damage.

ARROW, DRAGONSBREATH

A dragonsbreath arrow has a shaft soaked in resin or pitch and a slightly enlarged head filled with a dab of alchemist’s fire.

Slots in the head force air into the chamber when the arrow is fired, igniting the alchemist’s fire and the shaft as well.

The slots in the head emit a low screech as the arrow flies through the air.

A dragonsbreath arrow deals an extra 1 point of fire damage when it hits a target, and that target must make a DC 15 Reflex save or catch on fire.

A dragonsbreath arrow can't be reused on a miss.

ARROW, SERPENTSTONGUE

Arrows aren't very useful for attacking objects, so the elves developed the serpentstongue arrow, which has a forked point with sharp edges on the tips and inside the prongs. A skilled archer can neatly sever a rope or leather strap with a serpentstongue arrow.

A serpentstongue arrow deals both piercing and slashing damage, and it deals full damage (rather than the usual half damage) to objects with a hardness of 5 or less.

ARROW, SWIFTWING

These arrows are made slightly longer than normal with a small, aerodynamic head and enlarged fletching (the feathers added to the shaft) for extra stability and accuracy on long shots.

A swiftwing arrow incurs only half the usual penalty for attacking at range (-1 per range increment rather than the usual -2).

BLADE, CLOSE FIGHTING

Elves love swordplay, but even elves recognize that a sword isn't always an ideal weapon.

They developed the close fighting blade for times when they must fight in spaces too constricted for true swordplay.

A close fighting blade is simply a knifelike blade concealed within the hilt or haft of a one-handed or larger melee weapon.

Pressing a catch in the hilt (a free action) releases the spring-loaded blade, which extends and locks into place protruding from the pommel or butt of the larger weapon. A close fighting blade is the equivalent of a dagger in all respects, except that it is a bit more awkward to use.

It is most useful in situations where the wielder is suddenly rendered incapable of using her normal melee weapon, such as when she is grappling or being swallowed by some hulking monster.

While a close fighting blade is extended, the wielder takes a -2 penalty on attack rolls, both with the close fighting blade and with the weapon that normally conceals it (which becomes more awkward to use).

Retracting a close fighting blade is the equivalent of sheathing a weapon (a move action).

Even with the hidden blade extended, a weapon with a close fighting blade is not a double weapon.

The user can employ either the main weapon or the extended blade, but not both in the same round.

A close fighting blade must be enchanted separately from the weapon in which it is housed.

Elves typically include close fighting blades in longswords or rapiers for their own use.

Elf wizards sometimes carry quarterstaves that contain close fighting blades.

In some areas, elves fashion battleaxes, heavy maces, or similar one-handed weapons with close fighting blades, though these items are usually sold to other races.

Adding a close fighting blade to an existing weapon, or including one as part of a new weapon, costs 100 gp.

BOW, ELVENCRAFT

One of the biggest problems facing any archer is deciding what to do when a foe gets within melee reach.

Does one stand fast and take the consequences (which can prove painful if not deadly), fall back (not always practical), or drop the bow and draw a melee weapon (inconvenient at best).

Elf bowyers have made the choice somewhat less difficult by crafting bows that can stand up to melee combat. Thanks to elven ingenuity, these weapons work just as well as melee weapons as they do as ranged weapons. An elvencraft bow is thicker and heavier than a normal bow.

An elvencraft shortbow functions as a club when wielded as a melee weapon.

An elvencraft longbow functions as a quarterstaff when wielded as a melee weapon.

The wielder incurs no penalty on attack rolls when using an elvencraft bow as a melee weapon.

A character wielding an elvencraft bow can freely interchange melee and ranged attacks during the same round.

When wielding an elvencraft bow, the user threatens the squares around him no matter how he last used the weapon.

Magical enhancements to an elvencraft bow only affect its use as a bow.

Enhancements to the melee capabilities of the weapon must be added separately.

An elvencraft bow costs 300 gp more than a normal bow.

FOOT SPIKE

The raptorans developed this exotic weapon for use in aerial combat.

A foot spike resembles a sharp knife blade strapped to the bottom of a sturdy boot.

The spike is spring-loaded and folds into the boot for walking, and thus has no effect on movement.

When a foot spike is unfolded, the wearer's land speed is reduced to 5 feet, and he can't make a 5-foot step (see page 304 of the Player's Handbook).

Extending or retracting a foot spike is a move action, the equivalent of drawing or stowing a weapon.

Foot spikes are primarily intended for use by airborne combatants.

A character who uses a foot spike while on the ground takes a -4 penalty on attack rolls.

A character wearing a pair of foot spikes can attack with both as if wielding two light weapons.

A character can't use a single foot spike as part of a two-weapon attack.

FOOTBOW

This exotic weapon resembles a composite long bow but is designed to be used in flight, with the archer holding the bow in her feet and drawing it with one or both hands. Like a composite longbow (see page 119 of the Player's Handbook), all footbows are made with a particular strength rating.

If a character's Strength bonus is less than the strength rating of the footbow, she can't effectively use it, so she takes a  $-2$  penalty on attacks with it.

The default footbow requires a Strength bonus of  $+0$  or higher to use with proficiency.

A footbow can be made with a high strength rating just as a composite longbow can; each point of Strength bonus granted by the bow adds 100 gp to its cost.

The wielder of a footbow can choose to use both hands to draw it back; in this case she may add  $1-1/2$  her Strength bonus to damage (up to a maximum of  $1-1/2$  the strength rating of the bow), as long as she is strong enough to use it without penalty.

A footbow can be used on the ground, but the archer must be prone to do so and takes a  $-4$  penalty on the attack roll. For raptorans, the footbow is a martial weapon rather than an exotic weapon.

LYNXPAW

A lynxpaw is a double weapon, consisting of a length of finely wrought steel chain with a blade similar to a rapier at one end and a spiked weight at the other.

A character can fight with it as if fighting with two weapons, but if he does, he incurs all the normal attack penalties associated with fighting with two weapons, as if using a one-handed weapon and a light weapon (see Two-Weapon Fighting, page 160 of the Player's Handbook).

The lynxpaw's rapier end is a piercing weapon that deals 1d6 points of damage ( $18-20/\times 2$ ).

The lynxpaw's spiked weight end, which resembles a feline paw with the claws extended (hence the name), is a slashing weapon that deals 1d4 points of damage ( $20/\times 3$ ).

A character can use either end as the primary weapon; the other end becomes the off-hand weapon.

A creature wielding a lynxpaw in only one hand can't use it as a double weapon and can only use one end of the weapon in any given round.

A proficient character can make trip attacks with a lynxpaw's chain.

If he is tripped during his own trip attempt, he can drop the lynxpaw to avoid being tripped.

When using the lynxpaw's chain, the character gets a  $+2$  bonus on opposed attack rolls made to disarm an opponent (including the roll to avoid being disarmed himself if such an attempt fails).

A character can use the Weapon Finesse feat to apply his Dexterity modifier instead of his Strength modifier to attack rolls with a lynxpaw sized for him, even though it isn't a light weapon.

SKIPROCK

Halfling weaponsmiths developed these polished stones. Each skiprock is perfectly weighted and shaped for throwing.

If the skiprock hits its target, it ricochets toward another target of the thrower's choice.

The second target must be adjacent to the original target (no more than 5 feet away).

The thrower immediately makes a second attack roll for the skiprock against the new target, with an attack bonus 2 lower than that of the initial attack.

Although they are thrown weapons, skiprocks are treated as ammunition for the purposes of drawing them, crafting masterwork or otherwise special versions of them, and what happens to them after they are thrown.

Skiprocks can be used as sling bullets, but using a skiprock's ricochet ability in conjunction with a sling requires taking the Exotic Weapon Proficiency (war sling) feat.

SWORD, ELVEN COURTBLADE

These exotic swords seem impossibly long and thin, tapering to a needlelike point.

One edge of the blade is sharpened along its entire length, and the opposite edge is sharpened only for the final quarter near the tip.

A courtblade has a basket-shaped hilt (usually made to resemble leaves and vines), a long grip, and a heavy pommel.

The weapon is intended for thrusting attacks, but the wielder can slash with it as well.

A character with the Exotic Weapon Proficiency (elven courtblade) feat finds the weapon well suited for quick feints and thrusts.

A character can use an elven courtblade in conjunction with the Weapon Finesse feat, applying her Dexterity bonus (if any) to melee attacks she makes with the weapon, though it remains a two-handed weapon and not a light weapon.

Characters proficient with the elven courtblade may treat it as a greatsword for the purpose of any of the following feats: Greater Weapon Focus, Greater Weapon Specialization, Improved Critical, Weapon Focus, and Weapon Specialization.

SWORD, ELVEN LIGHTBLADE

This rapierlike exotic weapon is the size of a short sword but weighs only as much as a dagger.

Dexterous elf fighters and rogues favor it.

Its thin, flexible blade slips easily into the seams of armor or between the ribs of a foe.

Some elf nobles carry a lightblade—often decorated with intricate filigree and tiny gemstones—as a sign of their station, even if they aren't proficient in its use.

Characters proficient with the elven lightblade may treat it as a rapier or a short sword for the purpose of any of the following feats: Greater Weapon Focus, Greater Weapon Specialization, Improved Critical, Weapon Focus, and Weapon Specialization.

SWORD, ELVEN THINBLADE

This rapierlike exotic weapon is the size of a longsword but much lighter.

Like the lightblade, it is favored by dexterous elf fighters and rogues.

A character can use the Weapon Finesse feat to apply his Dexterity modifier instead of his Strength modifier to attack rolls with an elven thinblade. Characters proficient with the elven thinblade may treat it as a rapier or a longsword for the purpose of any of the following feats: Greater Weapon Focus, Greater Weapon Specialization, Improved Critical, Weapon Focus, and Weapon Specialization.

WAR SLING

This exotic weapon is a heavy sling used with a special sidearm throw to hurl a skiprock (see above) with deadly power.

Without skiprock ammunition, a war sling is treated as a normal sling and deals the appropriate damage when used to throw normal sling bullets or stones. A user proficient with both the skiprock and the war sling can ricochet a sling-thrown skiprock just like a hand-thrown skiprock; see the skiprock description, above.

ATLATL

An atlatl is a cross between a thrown weapon and a projectile weapon.

It uses a flat, thin board made of wood or antler, ranging from 1 to 3 feet long.

One end is held in the hand while the butt of a light spear, 2 to 3 feet long, is placed in a groove at the other end.

At the end of the groove is a raised spur or pin to hold the bottom of the spear in place.

You hold the loaded spear and handle end of the atlatl in the same hand.

With a sidearm or overhead throw, you propel the spear with a force far greater than that of a hand-thrown spear.

An atlatl often has a carved stone weight attached to the board's underside, and many feature a thong of hide or cord to attach to the hand.

BATTLEHORN

A battlehorn is a double weapon that consists of two large horns affixed together, facing in opposite directions.

You can fight with it as if fighting with two weapons, but if you do, you incur all the normal attack penalties associated with fighting with two weapons, just as if you were using a one-handed weapon and a light weapon (see Two-Weapon Fighting, page 160 of the Player's Handbook).

A creature wielding a battlehorn in one hand can't use it as a double weapon—only one end of the weapon can be used in any given round.

If you use a ready action to set a battlehorn against a charge, you deal double damage if you score a hit against a charging character.

BOOMERANG

This weapon is a lightweight throwing stick, flat and curved, that returns to you if it misses its target. It does not deal much damage, but it has good range, and being able to retrieve it is useful. Boomerangs are used mainly for hunting birds and other small creatures.

COLLAPSING CRESCENT FAN

Only a few desert societies have the wherewithal to forge the exotic weapon known as the collapsing crescent fan. Of those, the bhukas are most commonly associated with the weapon, and so another name for this weapon is the “bhuka blade”.

When not in use, a crescent blade folds into a compact shape not too much larger than a wand.

However, with a mere flick of the wrist, the many segments of a crescent blade slide into view and lock into place. The vanes of the fan are thin, razor-sharp steel sheets. When you attack a flat-footed foe with it, you gain a +4 bonus on the attack roll.

CRESCENT SCYTHE

Consisting of a staff with a half-disc blade on either end, the crescent scythe is a variation of the standard glaive. The edge of the blade is perpendicular to the shaft, allowing you to whirl the weapon in deadly circles. When used in conjunction with the Whirlwind Attack feat, a crescent scythe deals an extra 1 point of damage.

DESERT THROWING-KNIFE

A desert throwing-knife is unwieldy for melee combat. Even if you are proficient with this weapon, you take a –2 penalty on attack rolls and damage rolls when using it in melee.

EAGLE'S CLAW

The asheratis invented the first eagle's claw. This light, exotic melee weapon has a quarter-circle blade that is equally sharp on both the inner and outer edges. The blade is about 6 inches long and looks very much like an eagle's claw enlarged and forged in steel. The handle of an eagle's claw is slightly curved with a hole at the end to facilitate the use of a finger (middle or index) in wielding the weapon, allowing you to instantly swing the blade between differing grips. You get a +1 bonus on Sleight of Hand checks made to conceal an eagle's claw on your body (see the Sleight of Hand skill, page 81 of the Player's Handbook).

FINGERBLADE

In its most basic definition, a fingerblade is a double-edged short sword.

However, this weapon is customized to your hand. The hilt is something like a hand crossbow grip. It fits snugly in the palm of your hand such that your attack motion with the weapon is akin to a punch. Held correctly, a fingerblade becomes an extension of your forefinger, allowing maximized control. When an attack is properly executed, the hilt pushes into the palm so that no slippage occurs and maximum force is transferred into the thrust.

If you are proficient with a fingerblade, you deal an extra 1d6 points of damage to a foe who is flat-footed on the first round of combat.

Creatures with immunity to extra damage from critical hits and sneak attacks are not subject to this extra damage.

GREAT FALCHION

This heavy executioner's sword has the same basic profile as a falchion, albeit with a much greater blade surface. Because it is an executioner's weapon, it is often crafted as a masterwork weapon, marked with a royal seal, and created with one or more gems in the hilt.

GREAT SCIMITAR

A great scimitar is too large to use in one hand without special training (the appropriate Exotic Weapon Proficiency feat).

You can use a great scimitar two-handed as a martial weapon.

Great scimitars are most often the personal weapons of heroes, crafted as masterwork weapons and inscribed with the hero's deeds and the weapon's name on the blade. Such names commemorate a great event in the hero's life, such as “The Blade of the Hundred-Day Sandstorm”.

KHOPESH

You can use the hooked blade of a khopesh to make trip attacks.

If you are tripped during your own trip attempt, you can drop the khopesh to avoid being tripped.

KHOPESH, DOUBLE

A double khopesh is a double weapon. You can fight with it as if fighting with two weapons, but if you do, you incur all the normal attack penalties associated with fighting with two weapons, just as if you were using a one-handed weapon and a light weapon. A creature wielding a double khopesh in one hand can't use it as a double weapon—only one end of the weapon can be used in any given round. A double khopesh can be used to make trip attacks like a normal khopesh.

KYLIE

This weapon is a heavy, curved throwing stick, 3 to 4 feet long, used for hunting and as a weapon of war.

The shape of the weapon allows it to travel great distances in flat arcs.

MANOPLE

Resembling a sai with blades, a manople is actually a gauntlet worn over your hand.

Since it is worn this way, however, you cannot carry anything else in that hand, nor can you use it to cast spells or use skills.

A manople gives you a +1 shield bonus to AC.

Unlike with a spiked shield, you retain this bonus to AC even on a round in which you make an attack with the manople.

If you lack the appropriate Exotic Weapon Proficiency feat, you do not retain the shield bonus to AC, as you would with a spiked shield.

A manople has no armor check penalty and a 5% arcane spell failure chance.

Like a spiked shield, a manople can be enhanced as a weapon, as a shield, or both, but such enhancements must be paid for and applied separately.

An opponent cannot use a disarm action to disarm you of this weapon.

The cost and weight given are for a single manople.

SCORPION CLAWS

Designed as grappling weapons, scorpion claws are worn over the forearm.

These metal weapons resemble scorpion pincers, and they open and close by means of an internal mechanical handle. Scorpion claws grant you a +4 bonus on grapple checks and can be used to deal slashing damage with a successful grapple check.

The open claws can be used as a slashing weapon in melee combat, while the closed pincers can be used as a piercing weapon.

The claws can be opened or closed as a free action.

Since the claws strap onto the arm, you get a +4 bonus on opposed checks to avoid being disarmed.

Scorpion claws come in pairs; the cost and weight given is for two.

SCORPION-TAIL WHIP

A scorpion-tail whip is made from the dried tail of a Large monstrous scorpion, with the stinger intact.

Used by some of the crueler desert tribes, the whip deals nonlethal damage except on a critical hit.

On a critical hit, the whip deals lethal damage and injects a small amount of Large monstrous scorpion venom (injury, Fortitude DC 18, initial and secondary damage 1d6 Str), which is stored in a small bladder in the stinger.

The bladder can hold only one dose at a time, and adding a dose of venom takes 1 minute.

The whip can hold any other contact or injury poison (see page 297 of the Dungeon Master's Guide for details on other poisons).

THROMBASH

This fearsome weapon features two wicked, hooked blades facing in opposite directions at the end, and a third blade jutting at an angle near the hilt.

A thrombash is an exotic ranged weapon; it can be up to 30 inches long and is awkward to throw without special training.

A character can use a thrombash in melee as a martial weapon.

CHAIN LASH

This is a simple chain with weighted ends. It can be whirled quickly, striking with hard blows because of the weights.

One end can also be swung out to entangle an opponent. Kyttons often wield these weapons in place of their chain rakes and apply their dancing chains ability to them. The chain lash can be used either as a double weapon or as a reach weapon.

You can fight with it as if fighting with two weapons, incurring all the normal attack penalties as if using a one-handed weapon and a light weapon.

In this case, you can only strike at an adjacent opponent. If you use the chain lash as a reach weapon, you can strike opponents 10 feet away with it.

In addition, unlike other weapons with reach, you can use it against an adjacent foe.

In this case, you can only use one end of the chain effectively; you cannot use it as a double weapon. Because the chain lash can wrap around an enemy's leg or other limb, you can make trip attacks with it.

If you are tripped during your own trip attempt, you can drop the chain lash to avoid being tripped.

When using a chain lash, you get a +2 bonus on your opposed attack roll when attempting to disarm an opponent (including the roll to avoid being disarmed if you fail to disarm your opponent).

You can use the Weapon Finesse feat to apply your Dexterity modifier instead of your Strength modifier to attack rolls with a chain lash.

CHAIN, BARBED

This weapon is a length of four to six short, barbed iron bars connected by links of chain.

Kyttons often wield these weapons in place of their chain rakes and apply their dancing chains ability to them.

CHATKCHA

A chatkcha is a heavy crystalline throwing wedge favored by thri-kreen (see Monster Manual II).

CHUUL LASHER

Some chuul manufacture these lashes to extend the reach of their own paralyzing tentacles.

Using a lasher, a chuul can substitute a whip attack for one of its claw attacks.

A successful strike with the whip attack does normal whip damage (1d2 points of subdual damage), and forces a Fortitude save against the chuul's paralysis ability.

GYTHKA

A gythka is a double-weapon favored by thri-kreen (see Monster Manual II).

It is a pole arm with a blade at each end.

You can fight with it as if fighting with two weapons, but if you do, you incur all the normal attack penalties associated with fighting with two weapons, as if you were wielding a one-handed weapon and a light weapon (see Attacking with Two Weapons in Chapter 8 of the Player's Handbook).

A creature using a double weapon in one hand, such as an ogre using an orc double axe, cannot use it as a double weapon.

Thri-kreen (and other creatures with four or more arms) who learn the Multiweapon Fighting feat can wield two gythkas at once as double weapons because of their four arms.

HOWLER JAVELIN

Made from the quill of a howler, this weapon performs as a normal javelin with an additional function.

An opponent hit by a howler javelin must make a Reflex save (DC 16) or have the javelin break off after lodging in his or her flesh.

A lodged javelin imposes a -1 circumstance penalty on attacks, saves, and checks.

Removing the javelin deals 1d6 additional points of damage.

Howler javelins that hit a target cannot be recovered.

Howler javelins that miss their target have a 50% chance of breaking on impact, rendering them useless.

Since a howler javelin is not crafted for melee, all characters are treated as not proficient with it and thus take a -4 penalty on their melee attack rolls.

NOTBORA

This Huge exotic double weapon is made by desmodu (see Monster Manual II) and looks like a big quarterstaff with a crook at one end.

A notbora has a hinge in the middle so that it can be folded for storage.

The wielder can unfold the weapon and lock the hinge by pressing a hidden catch (a free action when drawing the notbora).

The notbora's straight end is actually a sheath that can be removed as a move-equivalent action to reveal a blade.

The hooked end can be used to make trip attacks.

A wielder who is tripped during his or her own trip attempt can drop the notbora to avoid being tripped.

Each end of the notbora deals 2d6 points of damage.

The hooked end is a blunt weapon that deals double damage on a critical hit and threatens a critical hit on an attack roll of 20.

With the sheath in place, the straight end functions the same way.

With the sheath removed, the straight end is a slashing weapon that deals double damage on a critical hit and threatens a critical hit on an attack roll of 19 or 20.

PINCER STAFF

The pincer staff is a kuo-toa pole arm designed to capture opponents with a minimum of harm.

A wielder who hits a Small or Medium-size opponent with a pincer staff can immediately initiate a grapple (as a free action) without provoking an attack of opportunity (see Grapple in Chapter 8 of the Player's Handbook).

In addition to the normal options available to a grappler, the wielder of a pincer staff can attempt to force his target to the ground (the equivalent of a trip attack, though no attack roll is necessary).

The pincer staff is a reach weapon and cannot be used against adjacent opponents.

SALAMANDER SPEARS

These all-metal versions of other spears are somewhat heavier and do more damage for their size than ordinary versions.

They also conduct both heat and electricity, unlike the wood-hafted normal versions.

SCISSORS SWORD

Designed for use by six-armed mariliths, this sword uses a complex, hinged arrangement of three blades and three hilts.

A scissors sword requires six arms to use effectively.

On a successful critical hit, a proficient wielder may choose to grapple the opponent with two of the blades (+2 to wielder's grapple check).

If the grapple check is successful, the opponent is considered grappled and the wielder may automatically deal 1d8 points of damage against that grappled opponent in each round from the third blade.

The wielder cannot attack other targets while using the grappling function.

SHARKTOOTH STAFF

This weapon is a pole arm designed to tear at the flesh of targets.

A wielder who hits a Small or Medium-size opponent with a sharktooth staff does normal damage and can immediately initiate a grapple as a free action without provoking an attack of opportunity (see Grapple in Chapter 8 of the Player's Handbook).

The wielder of a sharktooth staff may choose to deal normal damage for the weapon on subsequent rounds without making further attack rolls against the grappled victim.

SNAKE CHAIN

This chain is woven through a medusa's snakes, allowing her to make melee attacks with a reach weapon in addition to using her gaze attack or shortbow.

A snake chain is a reach weapon.

A medusa can strike opponents 10 feet away with the chain. In addition, unlike most other weapons with reach, she can use it against an adjacent foe.

Because the chain can wrap around an enemy's leg or other limb, the medusa can make trip attacks with it.

If the medusa is tripped during her trip attempt, she cannot drop the chain to avoid being tripped.

When using a snake chain, a medusa gets a +2 bonus on her opposed attack roll when attempting to disarm an opponent (including the roll to avoid being disarmed if she fails to disarm her opponent).

A snake chain does not transmit the poison of the medusa's snakes.

She may choose to attack with the snakes instead of with the snake chain; if so, normal rules and reach for the snakes apply.

TAIL BLADE

This weapon consists of a blade and the sheath and harness necessary to attach it to a creature's tail.

The version presented here is for Medium-size creatures, such as lizardfolk.

When using a tail blade, the creature may make a melee attack with it at its full attack bonus and no other attacks, or it can make a tail blade attack in addition to its other melee attacks.

See Multiweapon Fighting and Multidexterity in the Monster Manual for resulting penalties to attack rolls.

TAIL CLUB

This weapon consists of a club and the sheath and harness necessary to attach it to a creature's tail.

The version presented is for Medium-size creatures, such as lizardfolk.

When using a tail club, the creature may make a melee attack with it at its full attack bonus and no other attacks, or it can make a tail club attack in addition to its other melee attacks.

See Multiweapon Fighting and Multidexterity in the Monster Manual for resulting penalties to attack rolls.

TAIL SCYTHE

A tail scythe consists of a long, curved blade that is designed to be strapped to a serpentine tail.

In fact, the weapon is usable only by creatures possessing such an appendage, since it does not have a handle that lends itself to a humanoid hand.

The design of the tail scythe focuses tremendous force on the sharp point while still allowing devastating slashes with the blade edge.

Because of a tail scythe's shape, you can also use it to make trip attacks.

However, if you are tripped during your own trip attempt, you cannot drop the tail scythe to avoid being tripped.

Donning or removing a tail scythe takes 1 round with the benefit of hands or assistance, or 3 rounds without.

BAYONET

Sometimes a bard finds himself in a situation that requires self-defense at a few seconds' notice.

That's when an instrument-mounted bayonet comes in handy.

A bayonet (a long, thin dagger) affixed to the neck of a lute or other instrument can be used to fend off an attacker, or even to inflict respectable damage if set to receive a charge. However, some risk of damage to the instrument exists from the sudden impact (see the Attack an Object section in Chapter 8 of the Player's Handbook).

CROSSBOW, COVERED HAND

Rogues often find themselves hanging from ropes, clinging to walls, and in other positions that make normal missile fire impossible.

However, a covered hand crossbow, in which a thin sheet of wood holds the bolt in its firing groove, can be fired from any position without the bolt slipping out.

This device is very similar to the cut-down repeating crossbow in appearance, except that it lacks a clip.

The covered hand crossbow loads from the rear and holds only one bolt at a time.

CROSSBOW, GRAPPLE–FIRING

This device helps adventures scale unclimbable walls, bridge chasms, escape down sheer cliffs, and the like.

A grapple-firing crossbow is a heavy crossbow modified to fire a special, grapple-headed metal bolt attached to 100 feet of thin, light rope.

A successful shot at an appropriate target (see the Attack an Object section in Chapter 8 of the Player's Handbook) indicates that the grapple has hooked onto something, anchoring the rope firmly enough for a character to ascend it with a successful Climb check (DC 15).

Failure brings one of three results: that the grapple simply failed to snag anything, that it has lodged but is not secure enough to support a character's weight, or that there's simply nothing up there for it to catch.

In the first case, the user can simply recoil the rope and try again.

In the second case, a successful Use Rope check (DC 15) made before anyone tries to climb reveals the instability. The user cannot free that grapple but may try to fire another.

(Should anyone try to limb the unstable rope, the grapple gives way after the climber has progressed 1d10 feet.

Determine damage normally for the resulting fall).

In the third case, retries automatically fail.

A character can easily anchor a grapple-bolt by hand in a niche or use pitons to secure it on smooth stone.

This provides the same aid for descent without the need to fire the weapon.

GARROTE, CORD

This type of garrote is a simple cord used to strangle an opponent.

Using this weapon requires a special garrote attack (see Chapter 5).

An experienced strangler can also use scarves, sashes, vines, and the like as impromptu cord garrotes.

GARROTE, LOCKING

This nasty variant of the wire garrote comes with a pair of metal grips, each of which contains one portion of a locking mechanism.

Once the garrote has begun to deal damage after a garrote attack, the attacker can link the two ends and twist the grips into their locked position.

This maintains strangling pressure on the victim even after the attacker lets go.

The victim continues to make grapple checks (each one opposed by the last attack roll the attacker made) until freed or unconscious.

The DC for the Disable Device check to free a victim from a locked garrote is 10 if the character attempting the task has Exotic Weapon Proficiency (locking garrote), or 25 otherwise.

If someone other than the victim makes the attempt, a -5 circumstance penalty applies to the check unless the victim is held, unconscious, or otherwise kept from moving.

A character attempting to remove a locking garrote from his or her own neck suffers the same penalty on the Disable Device check, this time for working blind.

Naturally, it's impossible for any character to take 10 or take 20 on this check unless the victim trapped in the device is already dead.

Smashing the locking garrote leaves it frozen in the locked position.

GARROTE, WIRE

This weapon is nothing but a thin wire set into a pair of wooden grips.

Like the cord version, it is used to strangle an opponent. The grips protect the attacker's hands from the wire.

A character using a wire garrote without grips or some other form of hand protection takes 1d3 points of damage per round from the wire.

Using this weapon requires a special garrote attack (see Chapter 5).

SLEEVE, WEIGHTED

Subtle weapons often used for self-defense, weighted sleeves are usually found only in lands where long, loose sleeves are fashionable.

A weighted sleeve consists of one or more metal weights sewn into a sleeve hem.

Tailors who incorporate these weapons into finely made garments take care to spread out the weight so that the clothing hangs normally.

In simpler peasant versions, a small pocket just inside the cuff of each sleeve holds a single metal ball weighing about 1 pound.

Typically, both of a garment's sleeves are weighted.

To use this weapon, the wearer first swings the sleeve around to build momentum, much as if it were a sling.

Instead of releasing a missile, however, the user simply clubs the target with the weight.

Building up sufficient momentum is a move-equivalent action, so only one blow with each sleeve is normally possible in a round.

Attacking with both sleeves simultaneously incurs the standard penalties for fighting with two weapons.

The wielder might also alternate between the left and right sleeves, striking with one and building up speed with the other during one round, then striking with the second sleeve and building momentum with the first on the following round.

This tactic incurs the standard penalty for using a weapon in the offhand each round.

Wearing a garment with weighted sleeves as part of a disguise is a favorite trick of assassins.

Once the assassin has carried out his mission, he can simply discard the weights in the nearest convenient dustbin or pond and continue posing as an unarmed servant or guest in the house, even if a search is conducted.

BALLISTA

As described on page 99 of the Dungeon Master's Guide, the ballista is a Huge heavy crossbow fixed in place.

The ballista is a direct-fire weapon; due to its size a Medium creature takes a -4 penalty on attack rolls when firing a ballista, and a Small creature takes a -6 penalty.

The ballista takes up a space 5 feet across and weighs 400 pounds.

A ballista deals half damage to an enemy vessel.

Reload: Full-round action and DC 10 Strength check to wind to half-cock; Full-round action and DC 10 Strength check to wind from half- to full-cock; full-round action to load bolt.

Normal rate of fire is one shot per 4 rounds.

BOMBARD, GREAT

The heavy bombard is sometimes referred to as a basilisk.

It fires a heavy stone ball with a modest charge of powder.

It is a direct-fire weapon; due to its size a Medium creature takes a -4 penalty on attack rolls when firing a bombard, and a Small creature takes a -6 penalty.

The great bombard takes up a space 10 feet across and weighs 2,000 pounds.

GUNPOWDER?

Bombards might not be available in all D&D worlds. A bombard is an early cannon, requiring gunpowder or something similar to work. Whether or not gunpowder and firearms are available in your campaign is up to the Dungeon Master.

Unavailable: Nothing like gunpowder works in the campaign, so bombards (and other firearms) do not exist.

Smokepowder: Gunpowder is not available, but an expensive alchemical substitute known as smokepowder is. Bombards and

CATAPULT

This is the light catapult described in the Dungeon Master's Guide.

A catapult is an indirect-fire weapon that uses a tensioning device to throw a heavy stone hundreds of feet.

Because the catapult throws its stone in a high arc, it cannot strike a target within 100 feet—the range is simply too close.

The catapult takes up a space 10 feet across and weighs 2,000 pounds.

Reload: Full-round action and DC 10 Strength check to wind to half-cock; full-round action and DC 10 Strength check to wind from half- to full-cock; full-round action and DC 15 Profession (siege engineer) check to load stone; two full-round actions to aim the catapult.

Normal rate of fire one shot per six rounds.

CROSSBOW, AQUATIC

This special version of a light crossbow is strung especially tautly with thicker wire and reinforced so as not to snap under the increased tension.

The aquatic crossbow is not subject to the normal -2 penalty on ranged attack rolls for every five feet of distance

Reload: Full-round action and DC 10 Profession (siege engineer) check to swab out bore; two full-round actions and DC 15 Profession (siege engineer) check to load powder and wad; two full-round actions and DC 10 Strength check to load stone shot; two full-round actions and DC 10 Strength check to tamp the shot; two full-round actions to aim the bombard.

Normal rate of fire is one shot per ten rounds.

BOMBARD, LIGHT

The light bombard—also known as the perier or stone gun—is a relatively short and light piece designed to fire round stone shot with small charges of powder.

Like the ballista, the bombard is a direct-fire weapon; due to its size a Medium creature takes a -4 penalty on attack rolls when firing a bombard, and a Small creature takes a -6 penalty.

The light bombard takes up a space 5 feet across and weighs 500 pounds.

Reload: Full-round action and DC 10 Profession (siege engineer) check to swab out bore; full-round action and DC 15 Profession (siege engineer) check to load powder and wad; full-round action and DC 10 Strength check to load stone shot; full-round action and DC 10 Strength check to tamp the shot; full-round action to aim the bombard.

Normal rate of fire is one shot per six rounds.

other firearms exist, but the price of smokepowder is prohibitive, so they are not widely used or available. Smokepowder can be created by anyone with 9 ranks in Craft (alchemy). One pound of powder costs 25 gp; it takes 1 oz. to fire a pistol or musket, 4 pounds to fire a light bombard, or 20 pounds to fire a heavy bombard.

Gunpowder: Gunpowder is commonplace and inexpensive. Bombards and other firearms are fairly common, and the cost of gunpowder is not a significant factor in arming a ship with bombards.

(see Ranged Attacks Underwater, page 93 of the Dungeon Master's Guide), and uses its normal range increment of 40 feet both in and out of the water.

Aquatic crossbows are favored by aventi, merfolk, and tritons.

CUTLASS

A light slashing weapon especially favored by pirates and other nautical raiders, the cutlass is a heavy blade about 2 feet long with a curved edge.

It is easy to wield in close quarters and can deal vicious gashes to an opponent.

Its heavy basket hilt gives the wielder a +2 circumstance bonus on any checks to resist being disarmed.

FIREBOMB

The firebomb is a special type of ammunition suitable for catapult or bombard shot.

It is a small cask filled with alchemist's fire, designed to set the target ship afire.

A firebomb is about a foot in diameter and weighs 40 pounds.

When the firebomb hits its target, it bursts open and deals 3d6 points of fire damage in a 10-foot radius, DC 15 Reflex save for half.

On the round following, all targets within the radius take 1d6 points of fire damage; DC 15 Reflex save negates.

A ship (or similar wooden structure) struck by a firebomb might catch on fire; see Fires, page 31.

Creatures who fail their Reflex saves against a firebomb catch fire; see Catching on Fire on page 303 of the Dungeon Master's Guide.

FIRESPOUT

The firespout is a device that spews a great gout of alchemist's fire on a nearby enemy ship.

It consists of a long copper tube mounted in the bow, with a large bellows and a reservoir for its highly flammable fuel. When you fire the firespout, you create a 60-foot-long line of alchemist's fire directly in front of your ship.

To use a firespout, you must bring your ship within 60 feet of the enemy (and choose a closing strategy or maneuver, if you are using the narrative combat system described in Chapter 1).

Instead of an attack roll, the commander or captain of your ship makes a DC 5 Profession (sailor) check, modified by your ship's shiphandling modifier.

If you succeed, you strike the enemy ship with your alchemist's fire; on a failure, you miss.

The alchemist's fire deals 6d6 points of fire damage in a 60-foot line; DC 15 Reflex save for half.

On the round following, all targets within the radius take 3d6 points of fire damage; DC 15 Reflex save negates.

A ship (or similar wooden structure) struck by a firespout might catch on fire; see Fires, page 31.

Creatures who fail their Reflex saves against a firespout catch fire; see Catching on Fire on page 303 of the Dungeon Master's Guide.

A firespout takes up a space 10 feet across and weighs 1,500 pounds.

It takes 25 flasks of alchemist's fire (25 pounds, or 500 gp) to fill the firespout.

Reloading: Five full-round actions and DC 10 Profession (siege engineer) check to clear the bellows and fill the reservoir; two full-round actions and DC 15 Profession (siege engineer) check to ready the weapon to fire.

Normal rate of fire is one shot per eight rounds.

HARPOON

The harpoon is a broad-bladed spear forged with barbs. The shaft of the harpoon has a trailing rope attached, to control harpooned opponents.

Though designed for hunting whales and other large sea creatures, the harpoon can be used on dry land.

If it deals damage, the harpoon lodges in an opponent who fails a Reflex saving throw (DC 10 + the damage dealt).

A harpooned creature moves at only half speed and cannot charge or run.

If you control the trailing rope by succeeding on an opposed Strength check while holding it, the harpooned creature can move only within the limits that the rope allows (the trailing rope is 30 feet long).

If the harpooned creature attempts to cast a spell, it must succeed on a DC 15 Concentration check or lose the spell. The harpooned creature can pull the harpoon from its wound if it has two free hands and takes a full-round action to do so, but it deals damage to itself equal to the initial damage the harpoon dealt.

A character who succeeds on a DC 15 Heal check can remove a harpoon without further damage.

LONGBOW, AQUATIC

Made by the aquatic elves, the aquatic longbow functions as a normal ranged weapon out of the water, with a 60-foot range increment.

Underwater, it has a range increment of 10 feet, but it does not take the normal penalty for a ranged attack through water.

If you have the Aquatic Shot feat, the aquatic longbow's range increment improves to 30 feet underwater.

Aquatic longbows are favored by aquatic elves.

SKIPPING BLADE

This is a double-bladed throwing weapon, about the size of a shuriken but heavier.

A skipping blade can't be used as a melee weapon.

The blade is carefully shaped to allow skipping across water or another liquid surface.

The weapon's range increment is increased to 15 feet if there is an intervening body of water between the attacker and the opponent.

Although they are thrown weapons, skipping blades are treated as ammunition for the purposes of drawing them, crafting masterwork or otherwise special versions of them, and what happens to them after they are thrown.

STINGRAY WHIP

The barbed tail of a stingray can be converted into a flexible weapon, something akin to a riding crop.

A stingray whip deals no damage to any creature with a +2 or higher armor bonus or a natural armor bonus +4 or higher.

You can use the Weapon Finesse feat to apply your Dexterity modifier instead of your Strength modifier to attack rolls with a stingray whip sized for you, even though it isn't a light weapon for you.

The stingray tail no longer contains poison glands, but a residue of its venom remains.

A creature that takes damage from the stingray whip must make a DC 12 Fortitude save or take a -1 penalty on attack rolls, damage rolls, and skill checks from painful welts.

Treat a stingray whip as leather for purposes of sunder attempts.

STRONGHOLD BUILDER'S GUIDEBOOK (3.0)

TREBUCHET

The trebuchet is a massive sling that hurls large stones even farther than a heavy catapult can.

It uses the same targeting rules as a catapult (see the Siege Engines section in Chapter 5 of the DUNGEON MASTER'S Guide).

It can fire once every 12 rounds.

It can't be used effectively unless the complete crew is present.

As with catapults, initial set up and aiming time for a trebuchet is 10 minutes.

Masterwork siege weapons cost an additional 1,000 gp. These can receive all the magical enhancements that standard ranged weapons can.

For example, a +1 ballista costs 3,500 gp, and a +2 flaming heavy catapult costs 19,800 gp.

Note that the enhancement bonus of a siege weapon or ammunition adds either to the attack roll (for a ballista) or to the Profession (siege engineer) skill check (for catapults and trebuchets), as appropriate.

The weapon list assumes standard ammunition (catapult stones or ballista bolts).

Masterwork catapult and trebuchet stones and masterwork ballista bolts cost 10 gp each, and they can receive magical enhancements at the same price as arrows or other ammunition (in batches of 50).

In addition, various forms of special siege weapon ammunition exist, as described below.

ALCHEMIST'S ARROW

Marvels of craftsmanship, each alchemist's arrow carries a deadly load of alchemist's fire in its hollow shaft.

When a target is struck the arrow's shaft shatters, releasing the alchemist's fire directly onto the target.

One round after impact, the alchemist's fire ignites on contact with air, dealing 1d4 points of damage.

The target can take a full-round action to attempt to extinguish the flames before taking this additional damage.

It takes a successful Reflex saving throw (DC 15) to extinguish the flames.

Rolling on the ground allows the character a +2 bonus. Submerging (such as by leaping into a lake) or magically extinguishing the flames automatically kills the flames.

BATTLEPICK, GNOME

A gnome battlepick is crafted and weighted to be used by creatures of Small size only.

A Small-size character uses a gnome battlepick two-handed as a martial weapon.

BLADED GAUNTLET

Unlike a standard gauntlet, an attack with a bladed gauntlet is not considered an unarmed attack.

The bladed gauntlet possesses two cruelly sharpened blades that extend from the back of the wrist following the line of the forearm.

The cost and weight are for a single gauntlet.

BOLAS, 2-BALL

A set of 2-ball bolas consists of two heavy wooden spheres connected by lengths of cord.

It is a ranged weapon used to trip an opponent.

When you throw a set of bolas, you make a ranged touch attack against your opponent.

If you hit, your opponent is tripped.

if the opponent fails a grapple check versus your original attack roll, the opponent is grappled.

Bolas only grapple Medium-size or smaller targets.

The opponent can extricate itself from the 2-ball bolas with a full-round action.

Your opponent cannot trip you when making a trip attack with the 2-ball bolas.

CHAIN-AND-DAGGER

You get a +2 bonus on your opposed attack when attempting to disarm an opponent (including the roll to keep from being disarmed yourself, if you fail to disarm your opponent).

You can also use this weapon to make trip attacks, gaining a +2 bonus on your trip attempt.

If you are tripped during your own trip attempt, you can opt to drop the chain- and-dagger instead of being tripped.

CROSSBOW, GREAT

A great crossbow requires two hands to use effectively, regardless of the user's size.

You draw a great crossbow back by turning a winch.

Loading a great crossbow is a full-round action that provokes an attack of opportunity.

A Medium-size character cannot shoot or load a great crossbow with one hand at all.

With training, a Large-size creature can shoot, but not load, a great crossbow with one hand at a -4 penalty.

If a Large-size creature attempts to fire a separate great crossbow in each hand simultaneously, the standard penalties for two-weapon fighting apply.

DUOM

The duom is a longspear with a standard spear-head, as well as two blades curved so that they point backward along the shaft.

The weapon has reach, allowing you to strike opponents 10 feet away with it.

Those proficient with the spear can also use it to attack adjacent foes with the reversed heads with a practiced "reverse thrust".

Apply a +2 bonus to the attack roll for the first attack made by the duom against an adjacent opponent.

FUKIMI-BARI (MOUTH DARTS)

These slim, almost needle-like metal darts are concealed in the mouth and then spit at the target.

Their effective range is extremely short, and they do little damage, but they are highly useful when taking an opponent by surprise.

You can fire up to three mouth darts per attack (all at the same target).

Do not apply your Strength modifier to damage with mouth darts.

They are too small to carry the extra force that a strong character usually imparts to a thrown weapon.

The cost and weight are for a single mouth dart.

FULLBLADE

A fullblade is 18 inches longer than a greatsword, and is too large for a Medium-size creature to use at all.

A Large creature could use the fullblade with one hand, but would suffer the standard -4 nonproficiency penalty to its attack rolls, or with two hands as a martial weapon.

A Large creature with the Exotics Weapon proficiency could use the fullblade in one hand with no penalty.

A fullblade is also called an ogre's greatsword.

GYRSPIKE

A gyrspike is a double weapon.

A stout shaft holds a flail on one end and a longsword on the other.

You can fight with it as if fighting with two weapons, but if you do, you incur all the normal attack penalties for two-weapon fighting, as if you were using a one-handed weapon and a light weapon.

You get a +2 bonus on your opposed attack roll when attempting to disarm an enemy when you wield a gyrspike (including the opposed attack roll to avoid being disarmed yourself if you fail to disarm your enemy).

You can also use this weapon to make trip attacks, if you are tripped during your own trip attempt, you can drop the gyrspike to avoid being tripped.

HARPOON

The harpoon is a broad-bladed spear forged with cruel barbs.

The shaft of the harpoon has a trailing rope attached to control harpooned opponents.

Though intended to be used in hunting whales and other large sea creatures, the harpoon can be used on dry land.

Even if an Exotic Weapon Proficiency is taken for the Harpoon, creatures of less than Medium size suffer a -2 penalty to their attack rolls due to the weapon's weight.

If you inflict damage on your opponent, the harpoon may lodge in the victim if the victim fails a Reflex saving throw against a DC equal to 10 plus the damage you inflicted.

The harpooned creature moves at only half speed and cannot charge or run.

If you control the trailing rope by succeeding at an opposed Strength check while holding it, the harpooned creature can only move within the limits that the rope allows (the trailing rope is 30 feet long).

If the harpooned creature attempts to cast a spell, it must succeed at a Concentration check (DC 15) or fail, losing the spell.

The harpooned creature can pull the harpoon from its wound if it has two free hands and it takes a full-round action to do so, but in so doing it inflicts damage on itself equal to the initial damage the harpoon caused.

If you hit with a harpoon and do 8 points of damage and the target removes the harpoon, it takes another 8 points of damage.

MANTI

A manti is a shortspear with four additional spear heads that project vertically from the shaft, creating a star pattern of five blade heads instead of just a single forward-pointing blade.

The advantage for someone trained to use the manti is that you make one additional attack of opportunity during the round.

MERCURIAL GREATSWORD

This huge blade hides a secret reservoir of quicksilver (also called mercury by alchemists) that runs along the interior of the blade in a slender channel.

When the blade is vertical, the mercury swiftly fills an interior bulb in the haft, but when swung, the heavy liquid flows out into the blade, making it heavier.

In nonproficient hands, this shifting mass penalizes the wielder by an additional  $-3$  penalty to attack rolls, beyond the normal nonproficiency penalty for using an exotic weapon untrained.

MERCURIAL LONGSWORD

As above, except that in nonproficient hands, the shifting mass and feel of the blade penalizes the wielder by an additional  $-2$  penalty to attack rolls, beyond the normal nonproficiency penalty for using an exotic weapon untrained.

SHOTPUT, ORC

Special training turns a grapefruit-sized sphere of crude iron into a deadly missile.

Even with the Exotic Weapon feat, a wielder must be Medium-size or larger to use the weapon effectively (or suffer an additional  $-3$  penalty to attack roll addition to the standard nonproficiency penalty).

SKIPROCK, HALFLING

These polished, perfectly weighted stones are prized by halflings, for if they throw them just so, they ricochet off one target to strike a second.

If the skiprock hits its target, it ricochets toward another target (of the thrower's choice) adjacent to the original target (within 5 feet).

The thrower immediately makes a second attack roll for the skiprock against the new target, with an attack bonus equal to the first roll  $-2$ .

Skiprocks could be used as sling bullets, but using a skiprock's ricochet ability in conjunction with a sling requires taking the Exotic Weapon proficiency specifically for that purpose.

SPINNING JAVELIN

This light, flexible spear intended for ranged attacks resembles a standard javelin, except for the spiral grooves that run down its length.

You can loop a throwing string around the shaft (the other end is tied to your finger).

The string imparts spin to the javelin upon release, improving the weapon's accuracy, range, and penetrating power by permitting a harder cast.

Looping a string around the javelin is a move-equivalent action that provokes an attack of opportunity.

Tying a casting string around your finger is a full-round action that provokes an attack of opportunity, but the same string is reused for multiple javelins.

The javelin can be thrown without spinning it, in which case its damage, range, and critical range is that of a standard javelin.

If used in melee, treat the spinning javelin as a standard javelin.

SPRING-LOADED GAUNTLET

This gauntlet possesses a broad ridge of metal that extends along the bottom of the forearm to the edge of the wrist articulation, where a circular orifice is visible.

This ridge of metal hides a wondrous spring-loaded mechanism whereby a crossbow bolt can be expelled with great force, akin to a very small crossbow.

You load the gauntlet by inserting a bolt in the hole and pulling back a tiny lever.

Loading the spring-loaded gauntlet is a move-equivalent action that provokes an attack of opportunity.

You fire the spring-loaded gauntlet by sighting down your arm, then flip your hand back so that your palm faces your opponent—this motion fires the gauntlet.

A character who attempts to fire two spring-loaded gauntlets at once suffers the standard penalty for two-weapon fighting.

(The Two-Weapon Fighting feat does not reduce these penalties because it represents skill with melee weapons, not ranged weapons.)

The Ambidexterity feat lets someone avoid the  $-4$  off-hand penalty).

The cost and weight are for a single gauntlet.

STUMP KNIFE

A stump knife is akin to a punching dagger, except that it can be securely attached to the stump of a missing forelimb. For someone proficient in its use, the stump knife becomes an extension of his body.

Against foes to whom you have dealt damage during the course of a continuous melee, the stump knife's critical range is doubled (17–20).

Your opponent cannot disarm you of a stump knife.

THREE-SECTION STAFF

Originally a farm implement for threshing grain, this weapon is comprised of three sections of wood of equal lengths, joined at the ends by chain, leather, or rope. A monk using a three-section staff (for which she must take an Exotic Weapon Proficiency feat due the weapon's Large size) fights with her unarmed base attack bonus and her more favorable number of attack per round, along with other applicable attack mod tiers. The three-section staff requires two hands to use. A monk/weapon master may choose the three-section staff as her weapon of choice.

TRIPLE DAGGER

This weapon is used in the off-hand as a means to disarm an opponent—you hold it as you would a shield, not another weapon, and so do not suffer penalties for fighting with two weapons.

When using a triple dagger, you get a +3 bonus on your opposed attack roll when attempting to disarm an opponent (including the roll to keep from being disarmed if you fail to disarm your opponent).

The triple dagger could also be used as a normal dagger desired, but if used in the off-hand, all normal penalties for fighting with two weapons apply.

TUMBLING BOLT

A tumbling bolt resembles a standard crossbow bolt save for a few tiny holes and vent along the shaft. In fact, a tiny channel allows air to pass through the bolt when it is fired which causes the bolt to tumble when fired. Opponents targeted by tumbling bolt can apply only half their Dexterity modifier to their AC (round down) due to the unpredictable tumble of approaching missile.

WAR FAN

This weapon appears to the untrained eye a nothing more than a beautifully crafted lady's fan. In fact the vanes of the fan are crafted from steel, and the tips are needle-sharp. When first brought into melee, the wielder may attempt a Bluff check against an opponent's Sense Motive check. If the wielder wins the contest, he adds +4 bonus to the attack roll for his first round's attack(s).

WARD CESTUS

This is a stout leather gauntlet with well-forged metal weight sewn into it over the knuckles. A strike with a ward cestus is considered an unarmed attack. If you take an All-Out Defense action, you gain an additional +1 deflection bonus to your AC, representing blows you block with the back of your protected hand. Your opponent cannot disarm you of a ward cestus. The cost and weight are for a single ward cestus.

WHIP DAGGER

A character who takes an Exotic Weapon Proficiency in the whip is also proficient in the whip dagger.

(You do not need to take a separate feat to use the whip dagger if you already have a feat for the whip).

The whip dagger is heavier than a standard whip and deals normal damage due to the barbs that run along its length and the dagger-like tip (which inflicts deep wounds when accelerated to strike by a proficient user). Unlike standard whips, armor bonuses and natural armor bonuses do not hinder its ability to deal damage.

Although you keep it in hand, treat it as a ranged weapon with a maximum range of 15 feet and no range penalties. Because the whip dagger can wrap around an enemy's leg or other limb, you can make trip attacks with it.

If you are tripped during your own trip attempt, you can drop the whip dagger to avoid being tripped.

You get a +2 bonus on your opposed attack roll when attempting to disarm an opponent (including the roll to keep from being disarmed yourself if you fail to disarm your opponent).

WHIP OR WHIP DAGGER, MIGHTY

A character who takes an Exotic Weapon Proficiency in the whip is also proficient in the mighty whip (or mighty whip dagger).

A mighty whip or mighty whip dagger is made with especially heavy material that allows a strong character to take advantage of an above-average Strength score. The mighty whip allows you to add your Strength bonus to subdual damage for a whip (and normal damage if the lasher prestige class is chosen), and to standard damage for a mighty whip dagger, up to the maximum bonus listed on the chart above.

DART THRUSTER

This spring-loaded weapon fires darts with great accuracy and force.

Deep gnomes favor the dart thruster because it is a missile weapon, not a thrown weapon, so the wielder's Strength score does not affect the damage roll.

A dart thruster holds up to three darts at a time, and you can fire multiple darts from it in a full attack action.

Reloading the dart thruster is a move action that provokes attacks of opportunity.

FLUTTER BLADE

This exotic weapon has a serrated blade with a center-mounted hinge and handle.

When folded up, it deals piercing damage; when unfolded, it becomes a slashing weapon.

Folding or unfolding a flutter blade is a move action.

NEKODE

This exotic weapon is a strap or glove fitted with spikes in the palm.

It is favored both as a weapon and as a climbing tool by many inhabitants of the Underdark.

Your opponent cannot use a disarm action to disarm you of a nekode, and an attack with it is considered an armed attack.

A nekode is a special monk weapon, so a monk wielding it has special options (see the monk entry in Chapter 3: Classes in the Player's Handbook).

Using a pair of nekodes while climbing gives you a +1 circumstance bonus on Climb checks.

This bonus stacks with the +2 bonus you get from using a climber's kit.

PINCER STAFF

Kuo-toa fighters and whips often employ this two-handed exotic weapon.

It has a 10-foot reach and cannot be used against an adjacent opponent.

If you hit an opponent within one size category of yourself with a pincer staff, you may attempt to start a grapple as a free action without provoking an attack of opportunity. (For instance, a Small wielder may use a pincer staff to grapple a Tiny or a Medium opponent).

If you get a hold, the staff grabs the opponent and deals its normal damage each round the hold is maintained.

RAZORED ARMOR

See armor razors, below.

STEEL FINS

This exotic weapon is made by the kuo-toa and used primarily by monitors.

It resembles a heavy, rubbery glove with sharp steel claws at the tips of the thumb and the middle two fingers. Your opponent cannot use a disarm action to disarm you of this weapon.

Steel fins are a special monk weapon, so a monk wielding it has special options (see the monk entry in Chapter 3: Classes in the Player's Handbook).

PORTALS

CITY OF SPLENDORS WATERDEEP (3.5)

HALASTER'S DRIFTING

The mad archmage of Undermountain long ago devised a number of unique properties for the portals he created in his terrible dungeon, including the odd drifting portals. A drifting portal has its origin or terminus tied to a general area, not a specific fixed location.

The creator of the portal must specify whether this spell affects the origin of a portal or the terminus of a portal during the creation of the device.

Such portals drift continuously and randomly within the radius specified by the portal builder (anything from 10 to 1,000 feet from the focal point) at a rate of 10 feet per round.

To determine the random motion of a drifting portal, roll 1d6 three times per minute to determine a portal's movement; 1–2 means up, left, or forward; 3–4 means no change, no change, or no change; 5–6 means down, right, or backward).

A portal's creator can direct its path through active concentration, which requires a standard action.

Once the creator ceases concentration, the portal resumes its random drift until concentration is resumed.

A portal with the drifting property costs 50% more than it otherwise would.

FORGOTTEN REALMS CAMPAIGN SETTING (3.0)

CREATURE-ONLY

These portals transport only the creatures that use them, not the creatures' clothing and equipment.

Such portals are often used defensively to render intruders vulnerable after they use the portals.

A rare and more difficult variation on this type of portal transports creatures to one area and their equipment to another.

Creature-Only Portals: Creature-only portals cost twice as much to make as standard portals.

If the portal sends intruders' belongings to some place different from the users' destination, it is considered a variable portal with one extra destination.

KEYED

Portal builders often restrict access to their creations by setting conditions for their use.

Special conditions for triggering a portal can be based on the possession of a portal key, the creature's name, identity, or alignment, but otherwise must be based on observable actions or qualities.

Intangibles such as level, class, Hit Dice, or hit points don't qualify.

A keyed portal remains active for 1 full-round.

Any creature who touches the activated portal in the same round also can use the portal, even if such creatures don't have a key themselves.

Many portal keys are rare and unusual objects that the creature using the portal must carry.

Some portals are keyed to work only at a particular time, such as sunrise, sunset, the full moon, or midnight.

Spells can serve as portal keys, as can the channeling of positive or negative energy.

When the portal is the target of the specified spell or within the spell's area or touched by its effect, the spell is absorbed and the portal is activated.

Any form of the spell works to activate the portal, including spell-like effects of creatures or magic items and spells from scrolls.

Keyed Portals: Keyed portal; may be created at no extra cost. The key must be designated during the creation of the device and cannot be changed after that.

LARGER AND SMALLER

A portal can be crafted as small as 1 square foot (about a 6-inch radius), but this does not reduce the cost.

The smallest portal usable by a Medium-size creature is 12 square feet (roughly a 2-foot radius).

Small creatures can use portals as small as 7 square feet (an 18-inch radius), and Tiny creatures can pass through portals of 2 square feet (a 10-inch radius). Diminutive and Fine creatures are the only beings who can pass through portals of 1 square foot.

Larger portals add 100% to the base cost for each extra 300 square feet of area or fraction of 300 square feet.

Large and Huge creatures can pass through a standard portal, but Gargantuan and Colossal creatures generally need double- or triple-sized portals.

LIMITED USE

The prices and construction times noted above are for portals that operate constantly, transporting anyone who passes through them at any time.

If the portal can be used only four times per day or less, the base costs are reduced.

The materials and XP cost of a limited-use portal are based on the number of uses available.

The materials cost is 10,000 gp  $\times$  a portal's uses per day, and the experience point cost is 800 XP  $\times$  a portal's uses per day.

(The second portal in a two-way pair costs half this amount). The market value is twice the materials cost.

The construction time is one day per 1,000 gp of market value.

A portal usable five times per day or more is just as expensive as a continuously active portal.

Portals usable less than once per day can be created by using the appropriate fraction.

For example, a portal usable once per four days effectively has 1/4 a use per day, costs 2,500 gp in materials, and 200 XP.

The minimum cost of a limited-use portal is 1,000 gp and 80 XP for a portal usable once per ten days.

(The portal builder can choose to have a portal operate even less often—once a year, for instance—but this does not reduce the cost or XP expenditure any further).

Each activation of a limited-use portal lasts 1 round.

Once activated, a limited-use portal can transport as many creatures as can touch it that round.

MALFUNCTIONING

The other types of unusual portals are generally created through careful effort by their makers.

Malfunctioning portals, on the other hand, are almost always unintended.

Over the centuries, prodigious forces have swept over Toril, profoundly affecting magic.

Because of decades (or centuries or millennia) of magical wear and tear or the strength of the cataclysmic forces to which they have been exposed many ancient dweomers have gone slowly awry.

Portals are no exception.

A malfunctioning portal is usually at least one hundred years old, but many are far older.

Using one can have many different results.

Roll once on Table 2–2: Portal Malfunction each time a malfunctioning portal is activated.

If such a portal functions continuously, the effect indicated lasts 1d10 rounds, and anyone using the portal during that time is subject to that effect.

TABLE 2–2: PORTAL MALFUNCTION

d%	Effect
01–05	The portal does not function, but draws magical power from the user in an attempt to power itself. The user is affected as though struck by a targeted dispel effect of a greater dispelling spell cast at 17th level.
06–10	The portal does not function, but draws magical power from the user's items in an attempt to power itself. A random number of items (1d10) are struck by an effect similar to a targeted greater dispelling cast at 17th level. Use Table 10–1: Items Affected by Magical Attacks, in the Player's Handbook to determine which items are affected. Successful dispelling suppresses permanent magic items for 1d4 rounds. Charged or limited-use items lose 1d4 charges or uses as if they had been used to no effect and are suppressed for the same number of rounds (if still magical).
11–20	The portal does not function. The user is hurled away as though struck by the violent thrust of a telekinesis spell cast at 17th level. The user is entitled to a Will save (DC 17) to negate the effect and takes 1d6 points of damage if hurled against a solid surface.
21–25	The portal does not function. Instead, a wave of negative (50%) or positive energy (50%) emanates from the portal in a 30-foot radius. Negative energy acts just like an inflict serious wounds spell cast at 17th level (3d8+15 points of damage, Will half DC 14). Positive energy acts just like a cure serious wounds spell cast at 17th level.
26–40	The portal functions, but it sends the user to the wrong destination. To determine where the user ends up, use the table in the teleport spell description (Chapter 11 of the Player's Handbook ) and roll 1d20+80 as on the "false destination" line.
41–50	Nothing happens. The portal does not function.
51–100	The portal functions normally.

ONE-WAY

Any character can build a portal if she knows the Create Portal feat and either the teleport, teleport without error, teleportation circle, or gate spell.

The portal can lead to any locale the builder has personally visited at least once.

The portal fails if the builder chooses a destination that cannot safely hold her (such as inside a solid object or into thin air).

The portal also fails if the destination is a locale where astral travel is blocked (see the teleport spell description).

Base Cost: The builder must spend 50,000 gp on raw materials to create a single, continuously active one-way portal covering an area up to 10 feet in radius (about 500 square feet).

The market value of a portal is twice its cost in raw materials.

Crafting a portal requires one day for each 1,000 gp in its market price, and 1/25 of the market price in XP (one hundred days and 4,000 XP for the base portal).

RANDOM

These portals can only be activated at random times.

They may or may not require a key for activation when they are working.

A fairly common random pattern is a portal that works until 1d6+6 creatures use it, then shuts down for 1d6 days.

Other patterns are possible.

Random Portals: Random portals may be created at no extra cost.

The conditions must be designated during the creation of the portal and cannot be later changed.

TWO-WAY

The builder can create a second portal at the destination point, making a two-way portal, for half price (25,000 gp, fifty days, 2,000 XP).

VARIABLE

These portals are hazardous in the extreme for those who are unfamiliar with their quirks.

Creatures using these portals are transported to any one of several preset locations.

The destination sequence may follow a set pattern or may be random.

Some variable portals have keys that allow users to choose a specific destination served by the portal.

Others function by transporting users to a default location—an inescapable dungeon, the innards of a volcano, or some particularly hostile outer plane—unless the user presents the proper key.

Variable Portals: Variable portals add 25% to the base price per extra destination after the first included in the device. For example, a continuously active portal with two variable destinations costs 62,500 gp to make.

A continuously active portal with three variable destinations costs 75,000 gp to make.

STRONGHOLD BUILDER'S GUIDEBOOK (3.0)

KEYED

Portal builders often restrict access to their creations by setting conditions for their use.

Special conditions for triggering a portal can be based on the possession of a portal key, the creature's name, identity, or alignment, but otherwise must be based on observable actions or qualities.

Intangibles such as level, class, Hit Dice, or hit points don't qualify.

Keyed portals may be created at no extra cost.

The key must be designated during the creation of the device and cannot be changed after that.

A keyed portal remains active for 1 full round.

Any creature that touches the activated portal in the same round also can use the portal, even if such creatures don't have a key themselves.

Many portal keys are rare and unusual objects that the creature using the portal must carry.

Some portals are keyed to work only at a particular time, such as sunrise, sunset, the full moon, or midnight.

Spells can serve as portal keys, as can the channeling of positive or negative energy.

When the portal is the target of the specified spell or within the spell's area or touched by its effect, the spell is absorbed and the portal is activated.

Any form of the spell works to activate the portal, including spell-like effects of creatures or magic items and spells from scrolls.

ONE-WAY

This continuously active portal allows one-way travel only.

It covers an area with radius of anything from 6 inches (about 1 square foot) up to 10 feet (about 300 square feet).

A larger portal adds 100% to the market price for each extra 300 square feet of area or fraction of 300 square feet.

Caster Level: 17th; Prerequisites: Craft Portal, gate or teleport without error, caster level 17; Market Price: 100,000 gp.

TWO-WAY

This construction is actually a matching pair of portals, one at each end of the "trip".

It is otherwise identical to a standard portal.

Caster Level: 17th; Prerequisites: Craft Portal, gate, or teleport without error, caster level 17; Market Price: 150,000 gp.

UNDERDARK (3.5)

IMPASSABLE

A portal with this feature acts as a window to another place but does not allow passage.

Impassable portals can be created at no extra cost.

NONLIVING-ONLY

The opposite of creature-only portals, nonliving-only portals transport only inanimate matter.

This feature supersedes the general rule of portals stating that unattended objects cannot pass through a portal.

Making a portal nonliving-only quadruples its cost.

TRANSPARENT

A transparent portal looks much like a regular doorway opening.

Such a portal can be transparent only in the direction of travel, so a single portal that affords only unidirectional travel is transparent from its origin to its destination, but there is no visible effect at all at the destination point.

Making a portal transparent adds 50,000 gp to its cost.

POSSESSIONS OF THE DEITIES

DEITIES AND DEMIGODS (3.0)

ANUBIS

Anubis possesses a true ankh, a 1-foot-long ankh made of bright blue stone that casts a true resurrection spell when touched to the remains of any creature.

Caster Level: 25th; Weight: 12 lb.

APOLLO

Apollo fires +5 arrows from his bow.

Living creatures struck by these arrows must make Fortitude saves (DC 23) or be afflicted with a supernatural disease, Apollo's plague, which has an incubation period of 1 day.

Caster Level: 25th; Weight: 3 lb.

When Athena is not carrying Zeus's shield, Aegis, she uses a +5 large steel shield with the greater fortification special ability.

The shield also bears the likeness of a medusa.

Mortals within 150 feet must make Will saves (DC 25) or be turned to stone.

Athena can activate or deactivate this power once each round as a free action.

Because of Bloodspear's variable length, Gruumsh can attack foes that are adjacent to him.

When Heimdall sounds his horn Gjallahorn, all living creatures have a chance to hear it (Listen DC 5 on Asgard, 10 on Midgard, and 15 on Niflheim). All Aesir and Vanir hear it automatically, regardless of their location or that of the horn. Anyone other than Heimdall who tries to sound the horn must make a Perform check (DC 40) and a Use Magic Device check (DC 40). Even if that person succeeds, all Aesir and Vanir have a chance to notice something strange in the sound (Listen DC 5). Mortals within one mile of Gjallahorn when it sounds must make a Fortitude save (DC 39) or be stunned for 1d10 minutes. Mortals who fail their saves by 5 or more are deafened permanently.
Caster Level: 25th; Weight: 10 lb.

His most famous possession is his warhammer, Mjolnir, a +5 chaotic distance ghost touch holy mighty cleaving returning thundering warhammer with the following additional properties.

Mjolnir weighs roughly 2 tons, requiring Thor's doubled strength to wield it.

The hammer inflicts 4d8 points of damage.

Victims of a critical hit must make a Fortitude save (DC 55) or be deafened permanently.

In addition, Mjolnir deals 4d8 temporary Constitution damage every round it is held unless the wielder wears Thor's special gauntlets.

Finally, Thor can throw Mjolnir at any target he can see regardless of distance, due to Thor's strength and skill and the warhammer's improved distance enchantments.

Caster Level: 20th; Weight: 2 tons.

TOTH

Toth wields a scepter in battle (treat as a rod) that delivers a destruction spell (heightened to 9th level) by touch.

Such creatures become frightened unless they succeed at a Will save (DC 50).

Caster Level: 25th; Weight: 30 lb.

FAITHS AND PANTHEONS (3.0)

AZUTH

Azuth carries the Old Staff, a long wooden staff shod in iron and inscribed with sigils and runes of all types.

It is topped with a large, bright blue sapphire.

All the powers of this minor artifact function as the spells of the same names cast by an 18th level wizard.

The following powers do not drain charges: detect magic, enlarge, hold portal, light, mage armor, mage hand.

The following powers drain 1 charge per use: dispel magic, continual flame, fireball (heightened to 5th level, 10d6 points of damage, save DC 17), ice storm, invisibility, knock, levitate, lightning bolt (heightened to 5th level, 10d6 points of damage, save DC 17), magic missile (5 missiles), passwall, pyrotechnics, ray of enfeeblement (heightened to 5th level, save DC 17), wall of fire, web.

The following powers drain 2 charges per use: cone of cold (15d6, save DC 15) globe of invulnerability, hold monster (save DC 14), monster summoning IX, plane shift, telekinesis (maximum weight 400 pounds), wall of force (in a 10-foot-diameter hemisphere around the user only), whirlwind.

The Old Staff also grants its wielder spell resistance 23.

This does not stack with Azuth's spell resistance but can be utilized by other wielders.

A wielder who willingly lowers this spell resistance can use the staff to absorb arcane spell energy directed at him or her, exactly as if it were a rod of absorption (see Chapter 8 of the DUNGEON MASTER'S Guide).

The staff uses spell levels as charges, not as spell energy usable by the wielder.

If it absorbs spell levels beyond its charge limit (50) it explodes as if a retributive strike had been made (see below).

The staff does not communicate how many spell levels are being cast at the wielder, as a rod of absorption does.

Absorbing spells is risky, but it is the only way this staff can be recharged.

The wielder also gains a +2 luck bonus to AC and saving throws.

The Old Staff is a +5 quarterstaff, and its user may employ it to smite opponents.

If 1 charge is expended (as a free action) the Old Staff causes double damage (×3 on a critical hit) for 1 round.

On command, the staff automatically reflects spells cast at the wielder, exactly as if spell turning had been cast upon him or her.

The headstone of the Old Staff, known as the Donjon of Facets, can be used to hold enemies trapped by the user's imprisonment spells.

Such foes are trapped in the donjon instead of in a small space below the earth.

The Old Staff can also be broken for a retributive strike.

Such an act must be purposeful and declared by the wielder.

All charges in the staff are released in a 30-foot spread.

Creatures within 10 feet of the broken staff take hit points of damage equal to 8 times the number of charges in the staff, those between 11 feet and 20 feet away take points equal to 6 times the number of charges, and those 21 feet to 30 feet distant take 4 times the number of charges.

Successful Ref saving throws (DC 17) reduce the damage by half.

The character breaking the staff has a 50% chance (a 01–50 result on d%) of traveling to another plane of existence, but if this does not occur (51–100), the explosive release of spell energy destroys the wielder.

After all charges are used up from the staff, it remains a +5 quarterstaff.

Once empty of charges, it cannot be broken in a retributive strike.

Caster Level: 40th; Weight: 4 lb.

BANE

Bane wears the Black Hand of Bane, a +5 gauntlet with the lawful, mighty cleaving, and unholy special abilities.

Caster Level: 25th; Weight: 2 lb.

Chauntea carries a shock of grain that functions as a +5 scythe with the defending, holy, and keen special abilities.

ELISTRAEE

Eilistraee carries the Moonsword, a +5 bastard sword with the dancing and keen special abilities.

Caster Level: 25th; Weight: 6 lb.

POTIONS

ARMS AND EQUIPMENT GUIDE (3.0)

BEETLE ELIXIR

Beetle elixir causes the drinker's skin to bulk up, darken, and gloss over.

Short antennae also sprout from his or her forehead.

The drinker gains a +2 natural armor bonus and darkvision up to 60 feet.

The effects last for 1 hour.

Caster Level: 6th; Prerequisites: Brew Potion, alter self, darkvision, Alchemy skill; Market Price: 8,300 gp.

ELECTRIC EEL ELIXIR

The drinker's skin turns silvery and gains a +1 natural armor bonus.

In addition, the drinker's touch deals 1d8+1 points of electricity damage once while the potion is in effect.

The drinker gains a +3 circumstance bonus on the touch attack if the target is wearing metal armor.

The effects last for 1 hour.

Caster Level: 3rd; Prerequisites: Brew Potion, alter self, shocking grasp, Alchemy skill; Market Price: 2,050 gp.

PORCUPINE ELIXIR

Porcupine elixir toughens the drinker's skin, granting a +1 natural armor bonus.

In addition, hundreds of needle-sharp quills sprout from the drinker's body.

These quills deal 1d6 points of piercing damage with a successful grapple attack.

The quills sprout through light armor or hide armor, but heavier armors prevent the quills from growing.

The effects last for 1 hour.

Caster Level: 3rd; Prerequisites: Brew Potion, alter self, Alchemy skill; Market Price: 2,300 gp.

ANIMAL SENSES

This murky brown potion smells like the pelt of a wet animal.

When imbibed, it grants low-light vision, the scent ability (see Special Qualities in the Monster Manual), and +2 circumstance bonus on all Listen checks for 1 hour.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Brew Potion, creator must be a spellcaster of 5th level; Market Price: 380 gp.

WATERY BREATH

This aquamarine potion is the opposite of the fire breath potion.

It grants the drinker the ability to launch massive amounts of water from her mouth, similar to the geyser effect of the decanter of endless water.

She can breathe water up to three times, creating a 20-foot-long, 1-foot-wide stream of water at 30 gallons per round.

The force of this geyser deals 1d4 points of damage against one target, who must make a Strength check (DC 12) to avoid being knocked down.

The water also douses most normal fires but has no effect against magical flames.

Unused blasts dissipate 1 hour after the potion is consumed.

The potion does not allow the drinker to breathe underwater.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Brew Potion, creator must be a spellcaster of 5th level; Market Price: 300 gp.

QUEEN PHEROMONE ADMIXTURE

When consumed, this potion causes the drinker to exude pheromones that mimic those of a queen ant.

In response, 1d4 giant ants within 60 feet must make a Will save (DC 13).

If they fail, they remain docile and follow the drinker in a line, quietly and slavishly for a week.

After this, the potion wears off and the drinker must take another draught to keep the ants.

Ants who succeed on the Will save or those in range who otherwise do not succumb attack the false "queen" viciously.

Caster Level: 3rd; Prerequisites: Brew Potion; Market Price: 300 gp.

RHINO ELIXIR

The drinker's skin thickens and turns gray, granting a +3 natural armor bonus.

An unfortunate side effect is that the drinker's vision stops at 30 feet.

The effects last for 1 hour.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Brew Potion, alter self, Alchemy skill; Market Price: 17,500 gp.

COMPLETE ARCANE (3.5)

Apples and pomegranates with magical properties are commonplace in mythology.

A potion-fruit might consist of a slice or section of a fruit steeped in a magical libation that produces its effect when consumed.

A small ceramic tile inscribed with a magic rune could hold a potion-type effect.

When it is snapped or broken in one's hand, the effect is released.

SKULL TALISMANS

The skull of a small animal (a bird, mouse, or rat, for example) is enchanted with a single spell.

When crushed in one's hand or underfoot, the skull talisman releases its stored effect.

SPELL WAFERS

A thin wafer of specially prepared bread or dough, stamped with a holy or arcane symbol, can hold a spell as well as a potion bottle can.

When the wafer is consumed, the stored magic takes effect.

DUNGEON MASTER'S GUIDE 3.0 (3.0)

The victim can attempt a Reflex save (DC 12) for half damage.

Unused blasts dissipate 1 hour after the potion is consumed.

Most drinkers suffer from terrible heartburn afterward.

Caster Level: 3rd; Prerequisites: Brew Potion, spellcaster level 8th+; Market Price: 900 gp.

GLIBNESS

This potion enables the imbiber to speak fluently and even to tell lies smoothly, believably, and undetectably for 1 hour (add +30 to Bluff checks).

Even magic investigation, such as the discern lies spell, does not register the speaker's lies as such.

Caster Level: 4th; Prerequisites: Brew Potion, spellcaster level 8th+; Market Price: 500 gp.

HEROISM

This potion grants the drinker a +2 competence bonus to attacks, saves, and skill checks for 1 hour.

Caster Level: 4th; Prerequisites: Brew Potion, spellcaster level 8th+; Market Price: 900 gp.

LOVE

This potion causes the character drinking it to become charmed with the first creature she sees after consuming the draft (as charm person—the drinker must be a humanoid of Medium-size or smaller, Will save, DC 14).

She actually becomes enamored if the creature is of similar race or kind.

The charm effects wear off in 1d3 hours, but the enamoring effect is permanent.

Caster Level: 2nd; Prerequisites: Brew Potion, charm person; Market Price: 150 gp.

OIL OF SLIPPERINESS

This oil adds a +30 bonus to all Escape Artist checks, meaning that it is almost impossible to grapple such a character or to tie or chain him up.

In addition, such obstructions as webs (magical or otherwise) do not affect an anointed individual.

Magic ropes and the like do not avail against this oil.

If the oil is poured on a floor or on steps, the spill should be treated as a long-lasting grease spell.

The oil requires 8 hours to wear off normally, or it can be wiped off with an alcohol solution (even wine!).

Oil of slipperiness is needed to coat the inside of a container that is meant to hold sovereign glue (see page 226).

Caster Level: 6th; Prerequisites: Brew Potion, grease, spellcaster level 6th+; Market Price: 900 gp.

OIL OF TIMELESSNESS

When applied to any matter that was once alive (leather, leaves, paper, wood, dead flesh, and so on), this oil allows that substance to resist the passage of time.

Each year of actual time affects the substance as if only a day had passed.

The coated object has a +1 resistance bonus on all saving throws.

The oil never wears off, although it can be magically removed (by dispelling the effect, for instance).

One flask contains enough oil to coat eight Medium-size objects or an equivalent area.

Caster Level: 2nd; Prerequisite: Brew Potion; Market Price: 150 gp.

SNEAKING

This potion grants the drinker the ability to walk softly and dampens sound around her slightly, granting a +10 circumstance bonus to her Move Silently checks for 1 hour.

Caster Level: 2nd; Prerequisites: Brew Potion, spellcaster level 6th+; Market Price: 150 gp.

TRUTH

This potion forces the individual drinking it to say nothing but the truth for 10 minutes (Will negates DC 12). Further, she is compelled to answer any questions put to her in that time, but with each question she is free to make a separate Will save (DC 12). If one of these secondary saves is successful, she doesn't break free of the truth-compelling enchantment but also doesn't have to answer that particular question. No more than one question can be asked each round. This is a mind-affecting compulsion enchantment.
Caster Level: 4th; Prerequisites: Brew Potion, spellcaster level 8th+; Market Price: 500 gp.

VISION

Drinking this potion grants the imbiber the ability to notice acute details with great accuracy (+10 to his Search checks for 1 hour).

SONG AND SILENCE (3.0)

VIAL OF THE LAST GASP

This potion is actually the necromantically preserved last breath of some famous figure, trapped in a vial.

A vial of the last gasp allows the user to draw strength and knowledge from the dead creature.

Anyone who unstoppers the vial and inhales its vapors gains 1d8 temporary hit points, a +2 enhancement bonus to Strength, and a +4 insight bonus on checks using one Craft, Knowledge, or Profession skill possessed by the deceased. The creator specifies the skill to which the bonus applies upon creating the potion, but it is usually the area of the deceased's greatest expertise.

(This does not allow untrained use of trained-only skills. If the potion enhances a Knowledge or Profession skill that the user does not already have, this benefit is useless).

Furthermore, the fumes increase the user's effective caster level by +1.

CHAMPIONS OF VALOR (3.5)

DOOMWARDEN BRACERS

This item was redeemed by the church of Kelemvor in conjunction with a dragon-priest of Torm.

These bracers of armor +3 were carved from the bones of a good-aligned dragon, plated with silver, and inlaid with flat onyx tiles forming a mosaic in the shape of a pair of scales. The bracers allow the wearer to use death ward, consecrate, and holy smite each once per day.

They bestow one negative level on any evil creature that wears them.

The negative level remains as long as the bracers are worn and disappears when they are no longer carried.

This negative level never results in actual level loss, but it cannot be overcome in any way (including restoration spells) while the bracers are worn.

Moderate conjuration; CL 7th; Craft Staff, holy smite, death ward, consecrate; Price 58,300 gp; Cost to Redeem 2,332 XP.

MACE OF THE BRIGHTWALKERS

This redeemed mace of the darkchildren is adorned with sun symbols and has a natural enhancement bonus of +1.

It grants the wielder a +6 sacred bonus on turning checks made to turn or destroy undead.

Moderate necromancy [good]; CL 9th; Craft Wondrous Item, 9th-level cleric; Price 17,000 gp; Cost to Redeem 520 XP.

MASK OF TEARS

This redeemed mask of blood is a simple white mask of wood, metal, or ceramic.

It constantly weeps salty tears when worn.

Any nonplayer character who sees a creature wearing the mask must succeed on a DC 14 Will save or have his attitude shifted one category away from hostile in interactions with the wearer.

The liquid that the mask exudes is normally harmless, but once per day per day the wearer can spit it forth as a ranged touch attack with a range increment of 10 feet.

When used this way, the fluid acts as a cure critical wounds spell upon the creature it strikes.

If a bard wears the mask, the character's spells and bardic music effects that rely on sadness or despair last one round longer than normal.

The mask counts as a pair of lenses for limitations on wearing multiple magic items.

Moderate conjuration (healing); CL 7th; Craft Wondrous Item, crushing despair, cure critical wounds; Price 17,000 gp; Cost to Redeem 680 XP.

STAFF OF CELESTIAL LIGHT

This redeemed staff of fiendish darkness is polished to an incredibly bright shine and topped with a silvery fist or sphere at one or both ends.

It bestows one negative level on any evil creature that holds it.

The negative level remains as long as the staff is in hand and disappears when it is no longer carried.

This negative level never results in actual level loss, but it cannot be overcome in any way (including restoration spells) while the staff is held.

The staff allows the use of the following spells.

- Daylight (1 charge)
- Summon monster IX (leonal guardinal only) (2 charges)
- Dispel magic (2 charges)
- Searing light (2 charges)

Moderate conjuration; CL 17th; Craft Staff, summon monster IX, daylight, dispel magic, searing light; Price 98,200 gp; Cost to Redeem 3,828 XP.

VILEBITER BLADE

This redeemed nightblade normally functions as a +1 dagger, but when used against an evil opponent its enhancement bonus increases to +2, and an evil target must make a DC 16 Will save or take 1 point of damage to a random ability score.

Moderate transmutation; CL 7th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, bestow curse; Price 8,702 gp; Cost to Redeem 336 XP.

RELICS

BOOK OF EXALTED DEEDS (3.5)

BLEEDING STATUE

This life-sized statue depicts a saint and is located in a site where the saint lived for an extended period, performed an important deed, or died.

On certain occasions (no more than once a month, often only once a year, on the anniversary of a special event), blood drips from the statue, emerging from locations that reflect wounds the saint suffered in life.

A taste of the blood acts as a greater restoration spell, and the statue typically produces enough for 1d4+1 doses on each occasion.

The statue constantly provides a hallow effect that encompasses the area where it is located, such as a temple and its grounds, with an attached death ward effect that protects all good creatures in the area.

Caster Level Equivalent: 13th; Market Price Equivalent: 55,000 gp.

EXECUTIONER'S AXE

An instrument of execution used to end the earthly life of a holy person, an executioner's axe relic holds good and evil in tension within itself.

The blade of this greataxe is stained red with the saint's blood.

The axe acts as a holy vorpal greataxe, though it has no enhancement bonus.

However, a good creature wielding the axe takes a –2 penalty on attacks and weapon damage rolls, while evil creatures take the normal penalty for wielding a holy weapon.

Caster Level Equivalent: 18th; Market Price Equivalent: 98,320 gp (equivalent).

RACK OF THE TORTURED SAINT

This torture device is long gone, but fragments of its wooden frame are in wide circulation as minor relics.

Once per day, by clutching one of these relics and invoking the name of the tortured saint, a character gains the benefit of a guidance spell.

Caster Level Equivalent: 1st; Market Price Equivalent: 180 gp.

SACRED VESSEL

This elaborate golden cup is consecrated for use in a temple of good.

Water placed within it becomes holy water.

If an evil creature drinks anything from the vessel, the creature must make a DC 18 Fortitude save or contract the depraved decadence affliction (see Ravages and Afflictions, above).

Caster Level Equivalent: 1st; Market Price Equivalent: 2,000 gp.

SAINT'S BURIAL SHROUD

The shroud laid over a saint after his execution, this fine linen cloth still bears the image of his body faintly limned on its surface.

A good character who touches the shroud is instantly healed of all diseases, while an evil creature that touches it must make a DC 14 Fortitude save or contract the eternal torpor affliction (see Ravages and Afflictions, above).

Caster Level Equivalent: 5th; Market Price Equivalent: 30,000 gp.

SAINT'S FINGERBONE

This small charm grants the character carrying it a +1 resistance bonus on all saving throws.

Caster Level Equivalent: 5th; Market Price Equivalent: 2,000 gp.

SAINT'S THIGHBONE

The bone of a saint known for battling the undead, this powerful relic acts as a holy disruption light mace, though it has no enhancement bonus.

Caster Level Equivalent: 14th; Market Price Equivalent: 32,305 gp.

WEEPING IMAGE

This sacred icon depicts a saint and is located in a site where the saint lived for an extended period, performed an important deed, or died.

On certain occasions (no more than once a month, often only once a year, on the anniversary of a special event), tears form in the eyes of the image, dripping slowly down the image and onto the floor below.

The tears are holy water, and the image typically produces enough to fill a flask each time the tears manifest.

While the image is weeping (over a period of perhaps 8 hours), any character who touches it receives the benefit of a heal spell.

Caster Level Equivalent: 11th; Market Price Equivalent: 65,000 gp.

COMPLETE DIVINE (3.5)

ARMOR OF THE FALLEN LEAVES

This set of nonmetallic +3 wild full plate armor is a riot of red, yellow, and orange leaves sewn together by Ehlonna and presented as a gift to Obad-Hai.

A command word causes the leaves to turn brown and scatter on the breeze—and the wearer disappears.

In fact, the wearer has merged with the leaves, which appear to flutter near the ground but are actually under the wearer's disembodied control.

The wearer can move and interact with its environment as if it were under the effect of a gaseous form spell for up to 30 minutes.

To use this relic, you must worship Obad-Hai and either sacrifice a 6th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 11 HD.

Strong transmutation; CL 15th; Sanctify Relic, Craft Magic Arms and Armor, baleful polymorph, gaseous form, creator must worship Obad-Hai; Price 39,900 gp; Cost 20,775 gp + 1,530 XP.

ARROW, RAPTOR

Legend says these arrows (there are reputedly five) gained relic status when Ehlonna used them to slay a great wyrm green dragon that was rampaging through a forest primeval.

A raptor arrow is a +3 arrow with a variant of the returning quality.

At the beginning of the round after it is fired from a bow, a raptor arrow wrenches itself from whatever it hit (dealing 1d8 points of damage), flies up to 400 feet through the air, and restrings itself in the bow from which it was fired.

Unlike most ammunition, raptor arrows are never destroyed when they hit their target.

If a ranger fires a raptor arrow at a favored enemy, the arrow additionally gains the bane quality against that foe.

To use this relic, you must worship Ehlonna and either sacrifice a 6th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat.

Strong evocation; CL 12th; Sanctify Relic, Craft Magic Arms and Armor, bane bow*, creator must worship Ehlonna; Price 14,500 gp; Cost 7,273 gp + 580 XP.

* New spell described in Chapter 7 of this book.

AXE OF ANCESTRAL VIRTUE

+4 adamantine keen dwarven waraxe, AL LN; Int 10, Wis 17, Cha 17; Speech, telepathy, 120 ft. darkvision and hearing; Ego score 17.

Lesser Powers: Bless 3/day, cure moderate wounds on wielder 3/day, faerie fire 3/day.

Greater Power: Haste on wielder 3/day.

Personality: One of Moradin's high priests volunteered to be bound into the original axe of ancestral virtue ages ago, and his personality has since been duplicated into what few copies of the weapon that exist.

The priest, who refuses to reveal his old name, is a fierce warrior who urges his owner to attack the ancient enemies of the dwarves (goblinoids and giants) at every available opportunity.

He takes great delight in "illuminating targets" (faerie fire), "salving honor-wounds" (cure moderate wounds), and granting "godspeed" (haste).

He judges wielders on how well they adhere to traditional dwarven culture.

He rebels mightily against nondwarves who so much as pick him up.

To use this relic, you must worship Moradin and either sacrifice a 7th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 13 HD.

Strong transmutation; CL 15th; Sanctify Relic, Craft Magic Arms and Armor, bless, cure moderate wounds, faerie fire, haste, creator must worship Moradin; Price 50,230 gp; Cost 26,780 gp + 1,876 XP.

BELT OF THE CHAMPION

Kord gives one of these gem-studded belts to a favorite gladiator each decade.

The wearer gains a +6 bonus on Strength checks and an additional +4 bonus on grapple and bull-rush checks.

If the wearer of a belt of the champion ever fails a save against a fear effect, the belt ceases functioning for 1 hour.

To use this relic, you must worship Kord and either sacrifice a 5th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 9 HD.

Moderate transmutation; CL 11th; Sanctify Relic, Craft Wondrous Item, bull's strength, creator must worship Kord; Price 22,000 gp; Weight 1 lb.

BOOTS OF THE UNENDING JOURNEY

These black leather boots leave no tracks wherever they go. They also render the wearer immune to the effects of fatigue and exhaustion as long as he ends each round at least 10 feet away from where he started it.

It is said that once a century, Fharlanghn gives a pair of boots of the unending journey to a fellow traveler, and then magically endows an ordinary cobbler with the power to make him a new pair.

To use this relic, you must worship Fharlanghn and either sacrifice a 6th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 11 HD.

Moderate conjuration; CL 11th; Sanctify Relic, Craft Wondrous Item, restoration, pass without trace, creator must worship Fharlanghn; Price 23,600 gp; Weight 1 lb.

BOW OF THE WINTERMOON

Corellon gave the original bow of the wintermoon to the elf hero Seskaya more than two thousand years ago, but his clerics have since made four identical copies.

This +4 frost composite longbow adjusts its pull automatically to match its wielder (allowing her to add her full Strength bonus to damage with each arrow fired).

It is considered bane to drow elves (as the weapon special ability).

To use this relic, you must worship Corellon Larethian and either sacrifice a 7th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 13 HD.

Strong conjuration; CL 18th; Sanctify Relic, Craft Arms and Armor, summon monster I; Price 36,300 gp; Cost 18,550 gp + 1,420 XP.

CENSER OF THE LAST BREATH

Nerull's favorite followers fill this censer, a perforated iron ball on a jeweled chain, with ground-up gems rather than incense.

Doing so is a full-round action that provokes an attack of opportunity.

The censer of the last breath then automatically starts burning the gem dust, creating a dangerous cloud that fills a 20-foot radius emanation centered on the caster.

The cloud's effects depend on the kind of gem dust burned in the censer of the last breath.

Gem type	Value	Effect
Diamond dust	250 gp	Solid fog (as the spell, except that only living creatures are slowed)
Emerald dust	500 gp	Cloudkill (as the spell, except that it hovers near caster; Fort partial DC 17)
Sapphire dust	1,000 gp	Acid fog (as the spell, except that only living creatures are slowed)
Ruby dust	2,000 gp	Incendiary cloud (as the spell, except that it hovers near caster; Reflex half DC 22)

The bearer of the censer of the last breath is completely unaffected by the cloud; it doesn't slow movement, deal him damage, or obscure his vision.

The gem dust burns in the censer of the last breath for 15 rounds.

To use this relic, you must worship Nerull and either sacrifice an 8th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 15 HD.

Strong conjuration; CL 15th; Sanctify Relic, Create Wondrous Item, acid fog, cloudkill, incendiary cloud, solid fog, creator must worship Nerull; Price 82,000 gp; Weight 1 lb.

CHAIN OF OBEISANCE

It is said that these +2 unholy spiked chains are made from the shackles in Hextor's hellish prison-fortress.

Despite their size and unwieldiness, they can be wielded in a grapple, and anyone pinned by a foe wielding a chain of obeisance must succeed on a Will save (DC 22) or be dominated (as the dominate monster spell). To use this relic, you must worship Hextor and either sacrifice a 7th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 13 HD.

Strong enchantment; CL 18th; Sanctify Relic, Craft Magic Arms and Armor, dominate monster, creator must worship Hextor; Price 35,600 gp; Cost 17,963 gp + 1,411 XP.

CHROMATIC ROD

Forged in hellfire itself, these iron-shod rods have five dragon heads (black, blue, green, red, and white) facing outward and encircling one end.

A chromatic rod can be used as a +2 morningstar with either the frost, flaming, or shocking qualities (wielder's choice, changed with a command word).

It also has a number of spell-like abilities, each usable once per day.

- Insect plague with a 1,040-foot range, creating five adjacent swarms.
  - Veil with a Will disbelief save of DC 19.
  - Dominate person with a 65-foot range.
- A DC 17 Will save negates the effect.
- Find the path lasting 160 minutes.
  - Wall of ice with a 65-foot range, covering up to sixteen 10-foot squares.

To use this relic, you must worship Tiamat and either sacrifice a 7th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 13 HD.

Strong conjuration; CL 16th; Sanctify Relic, Craft Rod, dominate person, find the path, insect plague, veil, wall of ice, creator must worship Tiamat; Price 71,908 gp; Cost 36,108 gp + 2,864 XP; Weight 5 lb.

CLOAK, DRAGONSCALE

This long, flowing cloak, sewn from a random assortment of miniscule chromatic dragon scales, transforms into functional dragon wings upon command, enabling flight with a speed of 150 feet and poor maneuverability.

The wings last 2 hours per day, divided up as the wearer of the dragonscale cloak wishes.

Additionally, the cloak always provides 10 points each of resistance to fire, resistance to electricity, resistance to cold, and resistance to acid.

To use this relic, you must worship Tiamat and either sacrifice an 8th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 15 HD.

Strong transmutation; CL 12th; Sanctify Relic, Craft Wondrous Item, polymorph, resist energy, creator must worship Tiamat; Price 75,840 gp; Weight 2 lb.

CORNUCOPIA OF THE NEEDFUL

Yondalla wove these conical baskets herself, and then gave them to her high priesthood.

Each morning at dawn, there are 2d4 fruits in each cornucopia of the needful.

When consumed (a full-round action), each fruit has the following effect.

d%	Fruit	Effect
01–15	Apple	Eater healed (as the heal spell).
16–30	Grape cluster	If split into 12 portions, functions as a heroes' feast spell for those that consume it.
31–45	Tangerine	Break enchantment on eater.
46–60	Strawberry	Spell resistance 24 for 12 minutes.
61–74	Cherry	Death ward for 12 minutes.
75–89	Peach	Divine power for 12 rounds.
90–100	Lemon	Neutralize poison on eater for 2 hours.

To use this relic, you must worship Yondalla and either sacrifice a 6th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 11 HD.

Strong conjuration; CL 12th; Sanctify Relic, Craft Wondrous Item, break enchantment, death ward, divine power, heal, heroes' feast, neutralize poison, spell resistance, creator must worship Yondalla; Price 44,600 gp; Weight 8 lb.

CUDGEL THAT NEVER FORGETS

+2 axiomatic heavy mace; AL LN; Int 16, Wis 10, Cha 16; speech; 60 ft. darkvision and hearing; Ego score 16.

Lesser Powers: Continuous deathwatch, 10 ranks Intimidate (total modifier +13), cure moderate wounds 3/day.

Personality: A cudgel that never forgets speaks little except during combat, during which it reminds its wielder in stentorian tones about the transgressions of each enemy, whether witnessed personally ("That bugbear wounded Lidda most grievously") or assumed based on creature type ("That succubus hath surely tempted many good men toward evil").

The imprecations of a cudgel that never forgets count as an attempt to demoralize an opponent with the Intimidate skill (described in Chapter 4 of the Player's Handbook). Unless it's healing its wielder, the cudgel that never forgets attempts to demoralize every round during its wielder's turn.

The cudgel that never forgets speaks Common, Infernal, Abyssal, and Celestial.

A cudgel that never forgets has an additional weapon quality: it remembers which foes have struck its wielder, and delivers them extra damage in retribution.

If an enemy hits the wielder of a cudgel that never forgets with a weapon (including a natural weapon), the weapon thereafter has an effective enhancement bonus of +2 better than its normal enhancement bonus.

It also deals an extra 2d6 points of damage against such a foe.

To use this relic, you must worship St. Cuthbert and either sacrifice a 7th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 13 HD.

Strong conjuration; CL 20th; Sanctify Relic, Craft Magic Arms and Armor, cure moderate wounds, deathwatch, creator must worship St. Cuthbert; Price 82,112 gp; Cost 41,212 gp + 3,272 XP.

DAGGER OF DENIAL

+2 unholy dagger; AL NE; Int 18, Wis 10, Cha 18; speech, telepathy, 120 ft. darkvision, blindsense, and hearing; Ego score 26.

Lesser Powers: Detect magic at will, 10 ranks in Spellcraft (total modifier +14), 10 ranks in Bluff (total modifier +14).

Greater Powers: Continuous detect scrying effect, arcane eye 1/day.

Special Purpose: Defeat/slay divine spellcasters.

Dedicated Powers: Item can cast dispel magic as a 10th-level caster.

Personality: The dagger of denial takes great glee in disrupting other spellcasters, giggling and cackling to its wielder as it counters their spells.

It generally readies an action to counterspell with dispel magic each round, then uses its Spellcraft ability to discern which enemy spells are worth dispelling.

If its wielder attacks in melee, the dagger attempts a feint in combat immediately prior to its wielder's attack.

Four daggers of denial are known to exist; they were originally gifts from Vecna to wizards he charged with keeping his priests in line.

A dagger of denial happily lets anyone wield it, and it'll cheerfully lie about its powers and purpose (using its Bluff skill).

But if a wielder doesn't worship Vecna and obey the relic rules, she doesn't get access to the dagger of denial's powers and the dagger betrays her at the first available opportunity. A dagger of denial who's working against its wielder starts by surreptitiously dispelling the spells of the wielder and her allies, leaving them without the magic that they're depending on.

To use this relic, you must worship Vecna and either sacrifice an 8th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 15 HD.

Moderate abjuration; CL 10th; Sanctify Relic, Craft Magic Arms and Armor, arcane eye, detect scrying, dispel magic, creator must worship Vecna; Price 77,902 gp; Cost 39,102 gp + 3,104 XP.

DAWNSTAR

Originally gifts from Pelor to four solars who rescued a paladin from Hell itself, each dawnstar is a +3 brilliant energy morningstar.

If a dawnstar is ever sundered or otherwise broken, it explodes, dealing 200 points of damage to everything within 10 feet, 150 points of damage to everything within 20 feet, and 100 points of damage to everything within 30 feet.

All those affected can make DC 17 Reflex saves to reduce the damage by half.

A dawnstar has hardness 8 and 8 hp.

To use this relic, you must worship Pelor and either sacrifice a 7th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 13 HD.

Strong transmutation; CL 16th; Sanctify Relic, Craft Magic Arms and Armor, continual flame, gaseous form, creator must worship Pelor; Price 61,908 gp; Cost 31,108 + 2,464 XP.

EHLONNA'S SEED POUCH

This brown fur pouch appears to hold six ordinary acorns within it when examined.

But when a worshiper of Ehlonna flings an acorn from the pouch, she can make one of three things happen.

- Create a treant (as the changestaff spell, but the treant emerges from the acorn) anywhere it will physically fit.
- Create a wall of thorns (as the spell)
- Create an acorn grenade that be hurled up to 100 feet away, dealing 11d6 points of fire damage (as the fire seeds spell, but the damage isn't split up among multiple acorns). Every morning, there are six acorns in Ehlonna's seed pouch, no matter how many were there before.

To use this relic, you must worship Ehlonna and either sacrifice an 8th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 15 HD.

Moderate conjuration; CL 11th; Sanctify Relic, Craft Wondrous Item, changestaff, fire seeds, creator must worship Ehlonna; Price 93,800 gp; Weight 4 lb.

ENVELOPING PIT

Centuries ago, Kurtulmak gave his high priesthood a half-dozen copies of a portable pit trap: the enveloping pit. This functions like a portable hole, except that it is 50 feet deep.

The enveloping pit covers a 10-foot square when opened fully and shrinks down to a 1-foot hole.

It can be picked up and moved when it's at its smallest, and its owner can open or close it with a command word from anywhere within 60 feet.

An enveloping pit opens fully only if it has enough flat space to do so; it halts when an edge hits a wall or other obstruction.

A common tactic is to lie in wait until foes are standing nearby a shrunk enveloping pit, and then open it fully, dropping enemies into a pit that wasn't there a moment earlier.

Those who find an enveloping pit underneath them must succeed on a Reflex save (DC 22) or fall into the pit.

To use this relic, you must worship Kurtulmak and either sacrifice a 6th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 11 HD.

Strong conjuration; CL 16th; Sanctify Relic, Craft Wondrous Item, plane shift, creator must worship Kurtulmak; Price 33,600 gp.

EXECUTIONER'S HOOD

Originally one of three such hoods worn by Xeric IV, who publicly executed every member of his own extended family two centuries ago, the executioner's hoods have been scattered across the globe by tides of war and conquest. The wearer of an executioner's hood (which takes up the headband body slot) can make a coup de grace attacks as a standard action rather than a full action.

Whenever he succeeds at a coup de grace attempt, he gains a +2 bonus to Strength and Constitution for the next 5 minutes that is cumulative with each successful coup de grace attempt (+10 max).

To use this relic, you must worship Erythnul and either sacrifice a 6th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 11 HD.

Moderate transmutation; CL 11th; Sanctify Relic, Craft Wondrous Item, bear's endurance, bull's strength, creator must worship Erythnul; Price 50,400 gp; Weight 1 lb.

GAUNTLETS OF THE BLOOD-LORD

These slick metal gauntlets slowly drip blood, seemingly from nowhere.

They grant their wearer a +4 luck bonus on melee touch attacks.

Furthermore, any touch spell the wearer casts is maximized as though using the Maximize Spell feat, although the spell doesn't use a higher-level spell slot.

To use this relic, you must worship Hextor and either sacrifice a 6th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 11 HD.

Strong universal; CL 17th; Sanctify Relic, Craft Wondrous Item, Maximize Spell, creator must worship Hextor; Price 33,600 gp; Weight 2 lb.

GAUNTLET OF THE TALON

It is said that this silvery spiked set of gauntlets was fashioned by Bahamut himself, then given to the master of a now-defunct order of monks.

A character wearing gauntlets of the talon effectively has natural weapons that deal 1d8 points of slashing damage and count as magic for the purpose of overcoming damage reduction.

If a monk dons the gauntlets of the talon, she is treated as if she were five levels higher for purposes of AC, unarmed damage (which now counts as slashing), and the monk's ki strike ability (this function stacks with the similar functions of a monk's belt).

Gauntlets of the talon function as ghost touch weapons for the purpose of attacking incorporeal creatures.

Finally, the wearer gains a +4 bonus on all grapple checks. To use this relic, you must worship Bahamut and either sacrifice a 4th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 7 HD.

Moderate transmutation; CL 11th; Sanctify Relic, Craft Wondrous Item, righteous might, creator must worship Bahamut; Price 20,000 gp; Weight 2 lb.

GEM OF THE GLITTERDEPTH

This black, thousand-faceted gem is said to be carved by Garl Glittergold himself.

Worn like a brooch, a gem of the glitterdepth grants its owner a +6 enhancement bonus to Wisdom and the instinctive knowledge of where the walls, ceiling, and floor are in any cavern he's in, no matter how big the cavern is or what the illumination is.

To use this relic, you must worship Garl Glittergold and either sacrifice a 5th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 9 HD.

Moderate transmutation; CL 10th; Sanctify Relic, Craft Wondrous Item, owl's wisdom, creator must worship Garl Glittergold; Price 22,000 gp; Weight 1 lb.

HELM, PLATINUM

This smooth helm covers three-quarters of the face and is decorated with a dragon-wing motif.

The original platinum helms were given to seven gold dragons that acted as Bahamut's consorts, but they have since passed to his servants on the Material Plane.

Anyone who wears a platinum helm has the frightful presence of a dragon, potentially affecting everyone with fewer Hit Dice within a 150-foot radius.

Whenever the wearer of the platinum helm attacks, foes must succeed on a Will save (DC 10 +1/2 wearer's HD + wearer's Cha modifier) or be panicked (foes of 4 or less HD) or shaken (foes of 5 or more HD) for 4d6 rounds.

The wearer also gains blindsense with a 60-foot range.

To use this relic, you must worship Bahamut and either sacrifice an 8th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 15 HD.

Strong transmutation; CL 15th; Sanctify Relic, Craft Wondrous Item, shapechange, creator must worship Bahamut; Price 64,000 gp; Weight 3 lb.

HELM OF THE PURPLE PLUME

Helms of the Purple Plume were originally given as trophies to the winners of jousting tournaments among Heironeous's followers, but they have since been passed from noble knight to brave squire through the centuries. A helm of the purple plume gives its wearer a +2 bonus to Charisma.

Not only is the wearer of the helm immune to fear, but exposure to fear emboldens him further.

Whenever the wearer is subject to a fear effect, he instead receives the benefit of a heroism spell for 10 minutes.

To use this relic, you must worship Heironeous and either sacrifice a 5th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 9 HD.

Moderate abjuration; CL 10th; Sanctify Relic, Craft Wondrous Item, heroism, creator must worship Heironeous; Price 22,000 gp; Weight 4 lb.

HOOKED HAMMER OF THE HEARTHFIRE

It is said that Garl Glittergold gave one of these weapons to each of twelve noble families many centuries ago.

Eight are believed to remain among the gnomes.

This +2/+2 flaming gnome hooked hammer becomes a +4 flaming burst/+4 flaming burst hooked hammer in the hands of a gnome.

The hooked hammer of the hearthfire automatically deals its flaming burst damage every round to any kobold or goblinoid unfortunate enough to grasp its handle.

To use this relic, you must worship Garl Glittergold and either sacrifice a 7th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 13 HD.

Strong evocation; CL 18th; Sanctify Relic, Craft Magic Arms and Armor, flame strike, creator must worship Garl Glittergold; Price 35,600 gp; Cost 18,110 gp + 1,400 XP.

MAP OF UNSEEN LANDS

This rolled-up sheet of vellum, often kept in a darkwood tube, is a boon to caravans of halfling pilgrims, who use it to avoid danger and make their way through the wilderness. Once per day, the map of unseen lands can be commanded to spend two minutes redrawing itself, mapping the terrain within a 16-mile radius with total accuracy but only middling detail.

The DM should spend two minutes of real time sketching out such a map, working down the following list in terms of priority.

- General terrain features (mountains, rivers, and so forth) labeled if their names are widely known.
- Structures of more than 5,000 square feet (castles, temples, ruins) named either specifically (Fortress of the Undying) or generally (bardic college).
- Structures important for travel (bridges, dungeon entrances, magic portals), labeled only if they're unusual in some respect.
- Lair of creatures with more than 15 Hit Dice, labeled by creature type only.

The map of unseen lands doesn't function underground.

To use this relic, you must worship Yondalla and either sacrifice a 5th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 9 HD.

Strong divination; CL 15th; Sanctify Relic, Craft Wondrous Item, discern location, creator must worship Yondalla; Price 25,200 gp; Weight 2 lb.

MILLENNIAL CHAINMAIL

This suit of armor feels like mithral chainmail to the touch, but the miniscule rings are a pale green, turning brighter when the millennial chainmail is in the sun.

Millennial chainmail functions as +3 chainmail, but it has a maximum Dexterity bonus of +8, an armor check penalty of -2, and an arcane spell failure chance of 15%.

It is considered light armor.

Millennial chainmail painlessly extends tiny green roots into the wearer's skin, granting fast healing 3 as long as the wearer is standing in better than shadowy illumination.

To use this relic, you must worship Corellon Larethian and either sacrifice a 4th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 7 HD.

Moderate conjuration; CL 10th; Sanctify Relic, Craft Magic Arms and Armor, regenerate, creator must worship Corellon Larethian; Price 18,800 gp; Cost 9,550 gp + 740 XP; Weight 20 lb.

MORNINGSTAR OF THE MANY

It is said that these morningstars have been dipped in the blood of creatures from every known plane on the Great Wheel.

Until the command word is spoken, the morningstar of the many is a +2 morningstar covered with carved, laughing mouths.

But once commanded into action, it becomes a weapon that takes on a different set of weapon qualities each round:

Round	Weapon Qualities
1	+4 anarchic morningstar
2	+4 wounding battleaxe
3	+4 unholy morningstar
4	+1 vorpal longsword
5	+4 flaming burst morningstar
6	+4 vicious shortspear

After the sixth round, the morningstar of the many is again a +2 morningstar until the command word is given anew.

To use this relic, you must worship Erythnul and either sacrifice a 5th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 9 HD.

Strong necromancy and evocation; CL 18th; Sanctify Relic, Craft Magic Arms and Armor, circle of death, creator must worship Erythnul; Price 30,300 gp; Cost 15,304 gp + 1,200 XP.

PIPES OF FRENZIED REVELRY

These pipes, created by a secretive order of bard/cleric devoted to Olidammara, require the piper to succeed on a DC 20 Perform (wind instruments) check each round to function properly.

If the check succeeds, any living creature within 30 feet of the piper must succeed on a DC 16 Will save or suffer a confusion effect—with one exception.

Whenever the die roll calls for the subject to attack someone, the subject makes a mildly amorous advance (such as an embrace or kiss) instead.

The effect lasts as long as the subject remains within 30 feet of the piper.

If the piper is interrupted or fails a Perform check, then resumes piping with a successful check, creatures within 30 feet get to make new save attempts.

Subjects who successfully save are thereafter immune to the pipes of frenzied revelry for 24 hours.

To use this relic, you must worship Olidammara and either sacrifice a 5th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 9 HD.

Moderate enchantment; CL 7th; Sanctify Relic, Craft Wondrous Item, confusion, creator must worship

Olidammara; Price 22,320 gp; Cost 11,320 gp + 880 XP; Weight 3 lb.

RAPIER OF DESPERATE MEASURES

Olidammara awards one of these nondescript rapiers when the whim strikes him.

A rapier of desperate measures has only the faintest magic aura about it and seems otherwise ordinary, except for an inscription near the base of the blade: "Don't be careful".

This +2 keen rapier becomes a +4 keen rapier if its wielder has less than half of his full normal hit points and a +5 vicious keen rapier if its wielder has less than one-quarter of his full normal hit points.

To use this relic, you must worship Olidammara and either sacrifice a 6th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 11 HD.

Faint transmutation; CL 9th; Sanctify Relic, Craft Magic Arms and Armor, keen edge, creator must worship Olidammara; Price 23,920 gp; Cost.

RAPIER OF UNERRING DIRECTION

Originally a gift to Fharlanghn from Olidammara, this rapier has been copied several times by Fharlanghn's most powerful clerics.

This +4 ghost touch rapier ignores all miss chances, whether from concealment, blink, or another source.

To use this relic, you must worship Fharlanghn and either sacrifice a 7th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 13 HD.

Strong divination; CL 15th; Sanctify Relic, Craft Magic Arms and Armor, true seeing, creator must worship Fharlanghn; Price 35,600 gp; Cost 17,920 gp + 1,412 XP.

ROBE OF EBONSILK

Said to be woven from silk extruded by Lolth herself, a robe of ebonsilk gives the wearer a +8 armor bonus, a +4 resistance bonus on all saving throws, and continual spider climb and freedom of movement effects.

To use this relic, you must worship Lolth and either sacrifice an 8th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 15 HD.

Strong abjuration; CL 15th; Sanctify Relic, Craft Wondrous Item, freedom of movement, spider climb, creator must worship Lolth; Price 134,000 gp; Weight 1 lb.

ROD OF REVERSAL

This steel rod looks like a length of thick chain, but it doesn't bend even the slightest.

On command, it automatically reflects the next nine levels of spells cast at the wearer, exactly as if spell turning had been cast upon the wearer.

It also grants its wielder the Improved Counterspelling feat.

Turning a spell changes the rod of reversal's color, depending on the school of the spell turned.

School	Color
Abjuration	Blue
Conjuration	Yellow
Divination	Indigo
Enchantment	Green
Evocation	Red
Illusion	Violet
Necromancy	Black
Transmutation	Orange

To use this relic, you must worship Boccob and either sacrifice an 8th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 15 HD.

Strong abjuration; CL 15th; Sanctify Relic, Craft Rod, spell turning, creator must worship Boccob; Price 132,000 gp; Weight 5 lb.

ROD OF THE RECLUSE

This rod, wielded by some of Lolth's high priestesses, resembles a giant spider leg with its segmentations and coarse, black hairs.

It acts as a +3 light mace that deals no hit point damage. Instead, the wielder injects a poison that deals 2d6 points of Strength damage to any creature she touches with the rod (by making a melee touch attack).

Like any poison, the damage repeats 1 minute later.

If she scores a critical hit, the damage from that hit (both initial and secondary) is ability drain.

In either case, the defender negates the effect with a DC 20 Fortitude save.

To use this relic, you must worship Lolth and either sacrifice a 6th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 11 HD.

Strong necromancy; CL 16th; Sanctify Relic, Craft Rod, poison, creator must worship Lolth; Price 33,600 gp; Cost 16,953 gp + 1,332 XP; Weight 5 lb.

RUBY BLADE

These deep red, crystal daggers are said to be plucked from the gems on the hem of Wee Jas's gown.

Each ruby blade is a +3 axiomatic dagger that enables its wielder to bolster, rebuke, or command undead as if her class level were four levels higher than it actually is.

It also has a continuous status effect.

To use this relic, you must worship Wee Jas and either sacrifice a 6th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 11 HD.

Moderate evocation; CL 11th; Sanctify Relic, Craft Magic Arms and Armor, order's wrath, status, creator must worship Wee Jas; Price 46,902 gp; Cost 23,602 gp + 1,864 XP.

SCROLLS OF UNCERTAIN PROVENANCE

These bundles of rough parchment have long been associated with Wee Jas, although even her lorekeepers don't know where the first ones came from.

Their name is something of a misnomer: The scrolls of uncertain provenance are not spells stored in written form.

Instead, they are a collection of death-obsessed writings in an unknown hand.

Those who can command the lore with a set of scrolls of uncertain provenance, it is said, have power over life and death itself.

But there are several barriers to understanding the lore of the scrolls.

To begin with, they're written in nearly every language, ancient and modern, and they sometimes switch languages within the same sentence.

One hour of reading allows a DC 20 Knowledge (religion) check to learn anything useful from the scrolls, with a +2 bonus for every language the reader speaks.

Multiple readers can assist one another in translation, lending the languages they know automatically, but they share in the risk as well (detailed below).

Read magic and comprehend languages spells don't help a reader understand the scrolls, so cryptic are their wisdom.

A reader—or at least one reader if a group is translating together—must worship Wee Jas to get anything at all from the scrolls.

The second barrier to reading scrolls of uncertain provenance is that the reader often draws near to the border between life and death himself.

Whenever someone spends an hour reading scrolls of uncertain provenance, they must roll on the following table whether or not they learn anything useful.

d%	Effect
01–10	DC 20 Will save or go insane (as the insanity spell).
11–30	DC 20 Will save or the scrolls bestow greater curse upon you.
31–60	DC 20 Will save to receive a geas/quest to perform for Wee Jas.
61–90	Take 1d6 negative levels as energy drain (DC 20 Fort save negates after 24 hours)
91–100	DC 20 Fortitude save or become a ghost for a year and a day.

While the risks of reading scrolls of uncertain provenance are great, so too are the rewards.

A character who successfully reads from the scrolls for the listed time can choose from the following benefits.

Time	Benefit
1 hour	Renewal pact for yourself
2 hours	Renewal pact for another
3 hours	Death pact for yourself
4 hours	Death pact for another
6 hours	True resurrection (and the scrolls disappear)

To use this relic, at least one reader must worship Wee Jas and either sacrifice an 8th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 15 HD.

Strong necromancy; CL 15th; Sanctify Relic, Craft Wondrous Item, death pact, renewal pact, true resurrection, creator must worship Wee Jas; Price 118,000 gp; Weight 10 lb.

SHARD OF THE SUN

This brightly glowing holy symbol of Pelor is mentioned in many religious texts as “Pelor’s gift, which I carry into darkness—a sun that never sets”.

It continuously emits a warm light equivalent to a daylight spell heightened to 5th level (the symbol must be covered completely to douse the light).

On command three times per day, the shard of the sun blasts forth four beams of light that each deal 10d6 points of damage to undead, 5d6 points of damage to constructs and objects, and 5d8 points of damage to other creatures.

Creatures particularly vulnerable to bright light, such as vampires, take 10d8 points of damage.

To use this relic, you must worship Pelor and either sacrifice an 8th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 15 HD.

Moderate evocation; CL 11th; Sanctify Relic, Craft Wondrous Item, daylight, searing light, creator must worship Pelor; Price 73,280 gp; Weight 1 lb.

SHIELD OF THE RESOLUTE

This +2 mithral moderate fortification heavy shield is made from hundreds of strips of mithral, each a different size, riveted together.

It is said that shields of the resolute are assembled from pieces of shields from hundreds of dwarves who fell in battle defending their homelands.

Goblinoids and giants within 30 feet who gaze upon a shield of the resolute must succeed on a Will save (DC 17) or be shaken (if they have the same or more HD than the wielder) or frightened (if they have fewer HD).

This functions like a gaze attack, so the goblinoids and giants must make saves at the beginning of their turns every round unless they take measures to avoid seeing the shield of the resolute (see Chapter 8 in the Dungeon Master's Guide for gaze attack rules).

To use this relic, you must worship Moradin and either sacrifice a 6th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 11 HD.

Strong abjuration; CL 15th; Sanctify Relic, Craft Magic Arms and Armor, fear, limited wish or miracle, creator must worship Moradin; Price 89,620 gp; Cost 45,320 gp + 3,544 XP; Weight 7-1/2 lb.

SHIELD OF THE SEVERED HAND

This shield's provenance is unrecorded, but it is named for the gory, dripping hand emblazoned on it.

The shield of the severed hand is a +4 heavy wooden shield that gives its wielder a free bull-rush attempt at a +4 bonus once per round when the shield is struck in melee by a foe (in other words, when the +6 bonus from the shield was the difference between hitting and missing).

When the foe hits the shield, make an immediate bull rush attempt, even if it isn't your turn; you can follow the opponent who gets pushed back if you wish.

You can't fall prone during this attempt.

To use this relic, you must worship Gruumsh and either sacrifice a 4th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 7 HD.

Strong evocation; CL 18th; Sanctify Relic, Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Bigby's forceful hand, creator must worship Gruumsh; Price 24,800 gp; Cost 12,479 gp + 986 XP.

SKEWER-OF-GNOMES

This Small +3 unholy gnomebane spear is quasi-sentient and can ready itself against a charge, attacking (and dealing double damage) automatically whenever a foe charges the wielder.

The attack uses the wielder's highest base attack bonus and all relevant modifiers, just as if the wielder were making an attack of opportunity.

To use this relic, you must worship Kurtulmak and either sacrifice a 7th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 13 HD.

Strong evocation; CL 20th; Sanctify Relic, Craft Magic Arms and Armor, unholy blight, creator must worship Kurtulmak; Price 61,900 gp; Cost 31,101 gp + 2,464 XP.

SPEAR OF RETRIBUTION

Once in a great while, Gruumsh flings a spear at a cleric he's annoyed with.

If that cleric then atones for the transgression and keeps the spear, it becomes a spear of retribution.

This +2 spear of returning becomes a +4 spear of returning whenever its wielder attacks someone who dealt damage to the wielder in the previous round.

If the wielder received a critical hit in the last round from the target, the spear of retribution becomes a +5 keen spear of returning against that foe.

To use this relic, you must worship Gruumsh and either sacrifice a 5th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 9 HD.

Strong transmutation; CL 12th; Sanctify Relic, Craft Magic Arms and Armor, telekinesis, creator must worship Gruumsh; Price 14,000 gp; Cost 7,151 gp + 548 XP.

STAFF OF THE UNYIELDING OAK

These staves, of which three are known to exist, are treants that have willingly bound themselves into quarterstaff form to aid Obad-Hai's followers.

This ability functions like the changestaff spell, except that the treant is fully real and can control trees and speak to other treants.

If the staff of the unyielding oak is reduced to 0 or less hit points, it reverts to staff form and can't be used again for twenty-eight days.

The staff can take treant form as often as you like, but it must spend at least half of each day (dawn to dawn) in staff form.

To use this relic, you must worship Obad-Hai and either sacrifice an 8th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 15 HD.

Strong transmutation; CL 15th; Sanctify Relic, Craft Wondrous Item, changestaff, creator must worship Obad-Hai; Price 81,600 gp; Cost 41,100 gp + 3,240 XP; Weight 4 lb.

SWORD OF MIGHTY THEWS

Kord's high clerics forged these greatswords as homages to Kord's signature weapon, Kelmar.

A sword of mighty thews is a +3 dragonbane greatsword that renders its wielder immune to a dragon's frightful presence and confers a +4 luck bonus on Reflex saves against a dragon's breath weapon.

To use this relic, you must worship Kord and either sacrifice a 6th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 11 HD.

Strong abjuration; CL 18th; Sanctify Relic, Craft Magic Arms and Armor, resistance, creator must worship Kord; Price 45,600 gp; Cost 22,975 gp + 1,810 XP.

SWORD OF VIRTUE BEYOND REPROACH

This golden +3 holy longsword, one of four commissioned from celestial dwarves by the great paladin Tardalius the Headstrong, grants its wearer a measure of respite from charms and compulsions.

If the wielder of a sword of virtue beyond reproach fails a save against a charm or compulsion, she is free from the effects of the charm or compulsion for 1d4 rounds (DM rolls secretly).

The charm or compulsion is not negated during this time, only suppressed.

When the 1d4 rounds are over, the character who failed the Will save begins to act on any commands received during previous rounds.

To use this relic, you must worship Heironeous and either sacrifice an 8th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 15 HD.

Strong abjuration; CL 20th; Sanctify Relic, Craft Magic Arms and Armor, mind blank, creator must worship Heironeous; Price 50,000 gp; Cost 25,157 gp + 1,988 XP.

TABARD OF THE DISEMBODIED

This tabard, said to be among the burial raiments of Shedlazzar IV, takes the wearer to the Ethereal Plane on command (as the ethereal jaunt spell) for up to 10 rounds per day, which need not be continuous.

The effect is dismissible.

While on the Ethereal Plane, the spells you cast affect the Material Plane normally, unlike those of spellcasters who reach the Ethereal Plane by another means.

To use this relic, you must worship Nerull and either sacrifice a 7th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 13 HD.

Moderate transmutation; CL 10th; Sanctify Relic, Craft Wondrous Item, ethereal jaunt, creator must worship Nerull; Price 68,600 gp; Weight 1 lb.

TABARD OF THE GREAT CRUSADE

These silvery tabards, of which seven are known to exist, are decorated with a simple red cross on the chest.

They provide the wearer with damage reduction of 5/evil and grant everyone within 20 feet of the wearer (including the wearer) a +2 morale bonus on all saving throws.

Once per day, if someone other than the wearer grasps the hem of a tabard of the great crusade (a move action), he is cured of all wounds (as the heal spell from a 15th-level caster).

To use this relic, you must worship St. Cuthbert and either sacrifice an 8th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 15 HD.

Strong conjuration; CL 15th; Sanctify Relic, Craft Wondrous Item, heal, creator must worship St. Cuthbert; Price 68,800 gp.

Tome of Ancient Lore: Allegedly penned by Boccob himself and “borrowed” from his library, this leather-bound book is overstuffed with yellowing sheets of parchment. Its magical pages contain every conceivable spell, but the tome of ancient lore (and copies made since the original left Boccob’s library) is cursed with a deliberately confusing, everchanging system of cross-referencing.

The pages within the tome rearrange themselves, apparently at random.

Finding anything useful by browsing is impossible, but a reader who uses the index at the back has a 90% chance of finding any arcane spell within the tome’s pages (retries for the same spell within 24 hours fail).

Spells read from the tome of ancient lore take half as long to prepare as normal.

To use this relic, you must worship Boccob and either sacrifice a 5th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 9 HD.

Moderate transmutation; CL 10th; Sanctify Relic, Craft Wondrous Item, secret page, creator must worship Boccob; Price 22,000 gp; Weight 2 lb.

TOME OF THE STILLED TONGUE

This thick manuscript has a leatherbound cover with a gory decoration: a desiccated tongue nailed to the front of the book (belonging to a former cleric of Vecna who couldn’t keep her order’s secrets).

Five copies are known to exist.

A tome of the stilled tongue contains instructions for creating a lich’s phylactery and 2d4 wizard spells of each level 6th through 9th.

It also contains 500 blank spell pages that function as those in Boccob’s blessed book.

The tome of the stilled tongue also contains directions for eldritch mental exercises designed to strengthen one’s spellcasting.

Anyone who reads this section of the tome, which takes a total of 48 hours over a minimum of six days, increases his effective caster level by 2 for purposes of determining level-dependent spell variables (such as damage or range) and for caster level checks.

However, the exercises are mystically strenuous, permanently reducing the reader’s Constitution score by 2.

To use this relic, you must worship Vecna and either sacrifice a 7th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 13 HD.

Strong transmutation; CL 17th; Sanctify Relic, Craft Wondrous Item, Scribe Scroll, secret page, creator must worship Vecna; Price 34,850 gp; Weight 5 lb.

MAGIC ITEM COMPENDIUM (3.5)

ARMOR OF THE FALLEN LEAVES [RELIC]

Price (Item Level): 17,350 gp (14th)

Body Slot: Body

Caster Level: 20th

Aura: Strong; (DC 25) transmutation

Activation: Standard (command)

Weight: 15 lb.

A riot of red, yellow, and orange leaves has been sewn together into a rigid suit of armor resembling a breastplate.

This suit of armor functions as a +1 wild breastplate if you are neutral good, lawful neutral, neutral, chaotic neutral, or neutral evil.

Because it is nonmetallic, wearing this armor does not violate a druid’s spiritual oaths, though it has the durability of steel.

Relic Power: If you have established the proper divine connection, once per day you can cause the leaves of the armor to turn brown and scatter on the breeze.

During this process, you merge with the fallen leaves and disappear.

Though the leaves appear to flutter near the ground, they are actually under your disembodied control.

While in this state, you can move and interact with your environment as if you were under the effect of a gaseous form spell.

This effect lasts for up to 30 minutes or until you use a standard action to end it.

To use the relic power, you must worship Obad-Hai and either sacrifice a 4th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 7 HD.

If you sacrifice a 6th-level divine slot (or have the True Believer feat and at least 11 HD), you can use the relic power two times per day.

Lore: The first suit of armor of the fallen leaves was sewn together by Ehlonna and presented as a gift to Obad-Hai (Knowledge [religion] DC 20).

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Sanctify Relic, baleful polymorph, gust of wind.

Cost to Create: 8,500 gp (plus 350 gp for masterwork breastplate), 680 XP, 17 days.

AXE OF ANCESTRAL VIRTUE [RELIC]

Price (Item Level): 8,530 gp (12th)

Body Slot: — (held)

Caster Level: 20th

Aura: Strong; (DC 25) transmutation

Activation: —

Weight: 8 lb.

A holy symbol of Moradin decorates the joint between the head and the haft of this sturdy adamantite waraxe.

When you wield an axe of ancestral virtue, it functions as a +1 keen adamantite dwarven waraxe if you are lawful good, lawful neutral, or neutral good.

Prized by the faithful of the Soul Forger, these weapons have long been used in the defense of dwarf holdings.

Relic Power: If you have established the proper divine connection, an axe of ancestral virtue reveals its intelligence and sentience (AL LN; Int 10, Wis 17, Cha 17; speech, telepathy, darkvision 120 ft., hearing; Ego score 17). In addition, the axe can use bleed, cure moderate wounds (wielder only), and faerie fire, each three times per day. To use the relic power, you must worship Moradin and either sacrifice a 5th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 9 HD.

If you sacrifice a 7th-level divine slot (or have the True Believer feat and at least 13 HD), the weapon can also use haste (wielder only) three times per day.

Lore: Untold years ago, one of Moradin's high priests volunteered to be bound into the original axe of ancestral virtue so that the weapon would have both intelligence and the virtuous nature to serve Moradin well.

This priest's personality has been duplicated into the few copies of the weapon that have been forged since. The weapon has never revealed the priest's original name to any user, but judging from the fact that the axe constantly urges its wielder to attack the ancient enemies of the dwarves (goblinoids and giants), he must have been a fierce warrior indeed.

The weapon takes great delight in "illuminating targets" (faerie fire), "salving honor-wounds" (cure moderate wounds), and granting "godspeed" (haste).

The axe also judges its wielders on how well they adhere to traditional dwarf culture, and it rebels mightily against nondwarves who so much as pick it up (Knowledge [religion] DC 20).

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Sanctify Relic, bleed, cure moderate wounds, faerie fire, haste, keen edge.

Cost to Create: 2,500 gp (plus 3,030 gp for adamantite dwarven waraxe), 200 XP, 5 days.

BELT OF THE CHAMPION [RELIC]

Price (Item Level): 4,500 gp (9th)

Body Slot: Waist

Caster Level: 20th

Aura: Strong; (DC 25) transmutation

Activation: —

Weight: 1 lb.

This belt is forged of thick golden links, each set with a cabochon-cut semiprecious stone.

Its large, oval buckle is embossed with the closed fist of Kord.

These gem-studded belts are sacred to followers of Kord, the god of strength.

When you wear one of these items, it functions as a belt of giant strength +2 if you are chaotic good, neutral good, or chaotic neutral.

All of Kord's followers vie for the honor of winning one of these items, and each belt is passed down through generations of his faithful.

Relic Power: If you have established the proper divine connection, you gain a +5 competence bonus on Strength checks and a +4 morale bonus on saves against fear effects while wearing a belt of the champion.

If you ever fail a save against a fear effect while wearing this belt, its relic power is negated for 1 hour.

To use the relic power, you must worship Kord and either sacrifice a 3rd-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 5 HD.

Lore: The first belt of the champion was forged by a priest of Kord in a tiny village for a traveling hero who, having failed to persuade the villagers to flee before a horde of orcs, offered to stay and defend them.

Each decade since then, Kord has given one of these belts to a favorite follower (Knowledge [religion] DC 20).

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, Sanctify Relic, bull's strength.

Cost to Create: 2,250 gp, 180 XP, 5 days.

BOOTS OF THE UNENDING JOURNEY [RELIC]

Price (Item Level): 4,000 gp (8th)

Body Slot: Feet

Caster Level: 20th

Aura: Strong; (DC 25) conjuration

Activation: —

Weight: 1 lb.

These serviceable black leather boots always seem to bear the dust of the road, regardless of your efforts to clean them.

Travel is a way of life for the followers of Fharlanghn, and these boots give his chosen followers a spring in their step. While wearing boots of the unending journey, you gain a +10-foot enhancement bonus to your speed if you are neutral good, lawful neutral, neutral, chaotic neutral, or neutral evil.

This is a continuous effect and requires no activation.

Relic Power: If you have established the proper divine connection, you are constantly under a pass without trace effect.

Boots of the unending journey also render you immune to the effects of fatigue and exhaustion.

These are continuous effects and require no activation.

To use the relic power, you must worship Fharlanghn and either sacrifice a 4th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 7 HD.

When she died, the boots were offered to the god Fharlanghn, who wore them himself in his earthly travels. ## CENSER OF THE LAST BREATH [RELIC]

Price (Item Level): 2,500 gp (7th)

Body Slot: — (held)

Caster Level: 15th

Aura: Strong; (DC 22) conjuration

Activation: Standard (manipulation)

Weight: 1 lb.

This censer is a perforated iron ball hung from a jeweled chain.

The holy symbol of Nerull is inscribed on a boss at its center.

Nerull's faithful fill the censer of the last breath with ground gems rather than incense.

When you burn 10 gp worth of quartz dust in it, the censer produces an obscuring mist effect, which, if you are neutral evil, neutral, lawful evil, or chaotic evil, you can see through as if it weren't there.

Filling the censer is a standard action.

Once it has been filled, it automatically starts burning the quartz dust, creating a cloud in a 20-foot-radius emanation centered on you.

For the duration of the effect, the cloud moves with you as long as you hold the censer.

The quartz dust burns in the censer for 10 rounds, after which the cloud dissipates.

Relic Power: If you have established the proper divine connection, you can burn other kinds of gem dust in the censer to produce additional effects, as detailed on the table below.

CENSER OF THE LAST BREATH

Spell Level/ Hit Dice	Gem Type	Value	Effect
5th/9	Diamond dust	250 gp	Solid fog (as the spell, except that only living creatures are slowed)
6th/11	Emerald dust	500 gp	Cloudkill (as the spell, except that it hovers near you [Fort DC 17 partial])
7th/13	Sapphire dust	1,000 gp	Acid fog (as the spell, except that only living creatures are slowed)
8th/15	Ruby dust	2,000 gp	Incendiary cloud (as the spell, except that it hovers near you [Reflex DC 22 half])

In each case, the cloud produced is the same size as the one produced by the quartz dust and behaves in the same way, except as noted on the table.

You are always unaffected by the cloud created.

To use the relic power, you must worship Nerull and either sacrifice a divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and a minimum number of Hit Dice.

The spell level and Hit Dice required are given for each entry in the table.

Lore: An ancient high priest of Nerull forged the first censer of the last breath over a fire fueled by the entire hoard of an old red dragon.

Thereafter, he used it to send the souls of countless helpless prisoners to their just reward (Knowledge [religion] DC 20).

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, Sanctify Relic, acid fog, cloudkill, incendiary cloud, obscuring mist, solid fog.

Cost to Create: 1,250 gp, 100 XP, 3 days.

CHAIN OF OBEISANCE [RELIC]

Price (Item Level): 20,400 gp (15th)

Body Slot: — (held)

Caster Level: 20th

Aura: Strong; (DC 25) enchantment

Activation: —

Weight: 12 lb.

This spiked chain is forged of thick metal bands interspersed with long, sharp dagger points.

Followers of Hextor prize these grisly weapons for keeping their prisoners subdued.

A chain of obeisance functions as a +1 unholy spiked chain if you are lawful evil, neutral evil, or lawful neutral.

Relic Power: Despite its size and apparent unwieldiness, if you have established the proper divine connection, you can wield this weapon in a grapple as if it were a light weapon.

If you pin your opponent while wielding a chain of obeisance, the foe must succeed on a DC 22 Will save or be dominated as by the dominate monster spell.

No more than one creature can be dominated at a time; if you use this power on a second creature, the first effect ends.

To use the relic power, you must worship Hextor and either sacrifice a 7th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 13 HD.

Lore: These weapons are forged from the shackles in Hextor's hellish prison-fortress.

The first of them were used by the strongest warriors in Hextor's horde to subdue prisoners taken on the battlefields of the Outer Planes (Knowledge [religion] DC 20).

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Sanctify Relic, dominate monster.

Cost to Create: 10,000 gp (plus 400 gp for masterwork spiked chain), 800 XP, 20 days.

CHROMATIC ROD [RELIC]

Price (Item Level): 12,308 gp (13th)

Body Slot: — (held)

Caster Level: 20th

Aura: Strong; (DC 25) conjuration

Activation: Standard (command)

Weight: 1 lb.

This iron-shod rod is crowned with five dragon heads—one each of black, blue, green, red, and white.

The heads all face outward, their jaws parted as if to breathe.

When you wield a chromatic rod, it functions as a +1 morningstar with the corrosive, frost, flaming, or shock property if you are chaotic evil, neutral evil, or chaotic neutral.

You can select or change the property by speaking the command word, but it can have no more than one such property at a time.

Relic Power: If you have established the proper divine connection, you can also use the chromatic rod's spell-like abilities, as given on the table below.

7th/13 Dominate person (75-ft. range, Will DC 20 negates)

Find the path (duration 200 minutes)

Veil (Will DC 21)

To use these spell-like abilities, you must worship Tiamat and either sacrifice a divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and a certain number of Hit Dice. The spell slot level and Hit Dice required are given for each entry in the table.

Lore: The first chromatic rod was forged in hellfire by the five consorts of Tiamat as a gift for their queen (Knowledge [religion] DC 20).

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Rod, Sanctify Relic, dominate person, find the path, insect plague, veil, wall of ice.

CORNUCOPIA OF THE NEEDFUL [RELIC]

Price (Item Level): 6,000 gp (10th)

Body Slot: — (held)

Caster Level: 20th

Aura: Strong; (DC 25) conjuration

Activation: Standard (command) and standard (manipulation)

Weight: 8 lb.

This conical basket is woven from the bark of various deciduous trees.

Attached to it with a bit of dried grapevine is a clay medallion bearing the holy symbol of Yondalla.

Cornucopias of the needful were created to provide Yondalla's most intrepid followers with aid for their journeys.

For as long as you possess the cornucopia, you can withdraw one fruit from it every morning (roll d% each morning to determine the kind of fruit obtained), provided that you are lawful good, neutral good, or lawful neutral. When consumed by such a character (a standard action), this fruit has an effect based on its type, as given in the table.

CORNUCOPIA OF THE NEEDFUL

d%	Fruit	Effect
01–15	Apple	You are healed (as the heal spell)
16–30	Grape cluster	If split into twelve portions, each portion functions as a heroes' feast spell for the individual who consumes it (only functions for LG, NG, or LN characters)
31–45	Tangerine	This fruit produces a break enchantment effect on you
46–60	Strawberry	You gain spell resistance 25 for 5 rounds
61–74	Cherry	You gain the benefit of a death ward spell for 12 minutes
75–89	Peach	You gain the benefit of a divine power spell for 10 rounds
90–100	Lemon	You gain the benefit of a neutralize poison spell (self only) for 2 hours

Each fruit disappears after 24 hours if not eaten.

The following morning, the cornucopia again yields one fruit.

Relic Power: If you have established the proper divine connection, a cornucopia of the needful contains 1d4+1 fruits each morning (roll d% and consult the table for each) rather than only one.

As before, the cornucopia once again yields 1d4+1 fruits the following morning, regardless of how many were withdrawn and consumed.

To use the relic power, you must worship Yondalla and either sacrifice a 6th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 11 HD.

Lore: Yondalla wove these conical baskets herself, then gave them to her favored high priests to distribute to the followers who needed them most (Knowledge [religion] DC 20).

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, Sanctify Relic, break enchantment, death ward, divine power, heal, heroes' feast, neutralize poison, spell resistance.

Cost to Create: 3,000 gp, 240 XP, 6 days.

CUDGEL THAT NEVER FORGETS [RELIC]

Price (Item Level): 20,312 gp (15th)

Body Slot: — (held)

Caster Level: 20th

Aura: Strong; (DC 25) conjuration

Activation: —; see text

Weight: 8 lb.

This heavy mace has a flanged iron head and a thick wooden shaft wrapped in leather cord.

At its base is an intricately carved metal representation of a stern, bearded face.

This weapon was created to aid the followers of St. Cuthbert in exacting just retribution for wrongful acts. When you wield a cudgel that never forgets, it functions as a +1 axiomatic heavy mace if you are lawful neutral, lawful good, or neutral.

Relic Power: If you have established the proper divine connection, this weapon reveals its intelligence and sentience (AL LN; Int 16, Wis 10, Cha 16; speech [Abyssal, Celestial, Common, and Infernal], darkvision 60 ft., hearing, Intimidate 10 ranks for a total modifier of +13). In addition, the mace can produce a cure moderate wounds effect three times per day.

To use the relic power, you must worship St. Cuthbert and either sacrifice a 5th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 9 HD.

If you sacrifice a 7th-level divine slot (or you have the True Believer feat and at least 13 HD), the cudgel also remembers which foes have struck you and deals extra damage to them in retribution thereafter.

If an enemy hits you with a weapon (including a natural weapon), the cudgel thereafter has an enhancement bonus 2 higher than normal against that foe.

It also deals an extra 2d6 points of damage against that foe. No disguise or shapechanging ability can guard against this ability.

A cudgel that never forgets speaks little except during combat, during which it reminds you in stentorian tones about the transgressions of each enemy, whether it has witnessed them personally ("That bugbear hath wounded Lidda most grievously") or simply assumed wrongdoing based on creature type ("That succubus hath surely tempted many good men toward evil").

The imprecations of a cudgel that never forgets count as an attempt to demoralize an opponent with the Intimidate skill (PH 76).

Unless it's healing you, a cudgel attempts to demoralize an opponent every round during your turn.

Lore: The first cudgel that never forgets was crafted by a master weaponsmith whose city was plagued by shapeshifters that attacked citizens, then disappeared into crowds.

A select group of city guards, armed with the cudgels, quickly sorted out the guilty from the innocent and restored order to the city.

Thereafter, the cudgels were donated to the Church of St. Cuthbert (Knowledge [religion] DC 20).

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Sanctify Relic, cure moderate wounds, true seeing.

Cost to Create: 10,000 gp (plus 312 gp for masterwork heavy mace), 800 XP, 20 days.

DAGGER OF DENIAL [RELIC]

Price (Item Level): 20,302 gp (15th)

Body Slot: — (held)

Caster Level: 20th

Aura: Strong; (DC 25) abjuration

Activation: —; see text

Weight: 1 lb.

This black-bladed dagger has a wavy blade and a hilt set with a chunk of fool's gold.

When you wield this weapon, it functions as a +1 unholy dagger.

Unlike most relics, a dagger of denial functions for a wielder of any alignment, and it retains its sentience and basic relic powers even if you don't establish the proper divine connection, though it will not reveal its intelligence to you or use any relic powers on your behalf.

However, if you aren't neutral, lawful evil, neutral evil, or chaotic evil, the dagger betrays you at the first available opportunity.

A dagger of denial starts working against you by surreptitiously dispelling your spells and those of your allies, leaving you without the magic you depend on for battle.

Relic Power: If you have established the proper divine connection, a dagger of denial reveals its intelligence and sentience (AL NE; Int 18, Wis 10, Cha 18; speech, telepathy, darkvision 120 ft., blindsense, hearing, Intimidate 10 ranks for a total modifier of +13, Spellcraft 10 ranks for a total modifier of +14, Bluff 10 ranks for a total modifier of +14, Ego score 26).

In addition, the dagger can use detect magic at will and greater dispel magic once per day.

To use the relic power, you must worship Vecna and either sacrifice a 6th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 11 HD.

If you sacrifice an 8th-level divine spell slot (or you have the True Believer feat and at least 15 HD), the dagger grants you a continuous detect scrying effect and can use arcane eye once per day.

A dagger of denial takes great glee in disrupting other spellcasters.

It giggles and cackles to you constantly when facing enemy spellcasters.

It generally readies an action to counterspell such a foe's spellcasting with greater dispel magic.

Lore: The four daggers of denial known to exist were originally gifts from Vecna to the wizards he charged with keeping his priests in line (Knowledge [religion] DC 20).

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Sanctify Relic, arcane eye, detect magic, detect scrying, greater dispel magic.

Cost to Create: 10,000 gp (plus 302 gp for masterwork dagger), 800 XP, 20 days.

DAWNSTAR [RELIC]

Price (Item Level): 9,308 gp (12th)

Body Slot: — (held)

Caster Level: 20th

Aura: Strong; (DC 25) evocation

Activation: —

Weight: 2 lb.

This morningstar has a spiked adamantine head and a knob of the same metal bonded to the end of the haft.

The junctures of the haft and the metal portions are decorated with glowing, cabochon-cut rubies.

Created to help bring the light of goodness into places of the darkest evil, a dawnstar is a favorite of Pelor's clergy.

When you wield a dawnstar, it functions as a +2 morningstar if you are lawful good, neutral good, chaotic good, or neutral.

Relic Power: If you have established the proper divine connection, a dawnstar gains the brilliant energy property (DMG 224).

Furthermore, if it is ever sundered or otherwise broken, it explodes, dealing 200 points of damage to every creature and object within 10 feet, 150 points of damage to all within 20 feet, and 100 points of damage to all within 30 feet.

Each affected creature can attempt a DC 17 Reflex save to halve the damage.

You are unharmed by the explosion.

To use the relic power, you must worship Pelor and either sacrifice a 7th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 13 HD.

Lore: Only four dawnstars are known to exist.

They were originally gifts from Pelor to four solars who rescued one of his mortal paladins from Baator (Knowledge [religion] DC 20).

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Sanctify Relic, sunburst.

Cost to Create: 4,500 gp (plus 308 gp for masterwork morningstar), 360 XP, 9 days.

DRAGONSACLE CLOAK [RELIC]

Price (Item Level): 5,000 gp (9th)

Body Slot: Shoulders

Caster Level: 20th

Aura: Strong; (DC 25) transmutation

Activation: Swift (command)

Weight: 2 lb.

This long, flowing cloak is sewn from an assortment of chromatic dragon scales.

While wearing this cloak, you have resistance 5 to an energy type of your choice (acid, cold, electricity, or fire) provided that you are chaotic evil, neutral evil, or chaotic neutral.

You can select or change the resistance by speaking the command word.

Relic Power: If you have established the proper divine connection, you can also transform a dragonscale cloak into functional dragon wings upon command.

The wings (which last for 2 hours per day, divided up as you wish) allow you to fly with a speed of 60 feet and average maneuverability.

Additionally, the value of the cloak's resistance to energy increases to 20.

To use the relic power, you must worship Tiamat and either sacrifice a 6th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 11 HD.

Lore: The first dragonscale cloak is said to have been created from the scales of Tiamat herself by a devoted high priest who visited the dragon queen on her home plane.

Since then, those who ally with evil dragons have occasionally collected assortments of scales with which to duplicate the process (Knowledge [religion] DC 20).

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, Sanctify Relic, polymorph, resist energy.

Cost to Create: 2,500 gp, 200 XP, 5 days.

EHLONNA'S SEED POUCH [RELIC]

Price (Item Level): 1,400 gp (5th)

Body Slot: —

Caster Level: 20th

Aura: Strong; (DC 25) transmutation

Activation: Standard (manipulation and thrown); see text

Weight: 4 lb.

This brown fur pouch is secured with a leather thong threaded through a large brass buckle.

When first opened, this pouch holds three ordinary-looking acorns.

If you are neutral good, lawful good, chaotic good, or neutral, these acorns function as goodberries.

Each morning, the pouch once again holds three acorns, no matter how many were in it before.

Relic Power: If you have established the proper divine connection, you can create one of the following effects (your choice) to occur whenever you fling an acorn from the pouch.

An acorn can be thrown up to 100 feet.

- A treant emerges from the acorn into any space in which it will physically fit.

This effect otherwise functions like the changestaff spell, lasting for 1 hour.

- A wall of thorns (as the spell) springs up from the ground where the acorn lands.

- The acorn functions as a splash weapon that deals 1d6 points of fire damage upon impact.

This effect otherwise functions like the fire seeds spell, except that the damage isn't split up among multiple acorns.

To use the relic power, you must worship Ehlonna and either sacrifice an 8th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 15 HD.

Lore: Legend holds that Ehlonna created the first of these pouches and used it to seed the world's great forests with oaks and treants.

Since then, she has occasionally given a pouch to one of her favored clergy in recognition of service (Knowledge [religion] DC 20).

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, Sanctify Relic, changestaff, fire seeds, goodberry.

Cost to Create: 700 gp, 56 XP, 2 days.

ENVELOPING PIT [RELIC]

Price (Item Level): 3,600 gp (8th)

Body Slot: —

Caster Level: 20th

Aura: Strong; (DC 25) conjuration

Activation: Swift (command)

Weight: —

This flat black square looks like a piece of silken cloth, folded many times upon itself.

Fleeting images of creatures and objects flit across the surface of the fabric.

Kobolds are among the finest trapmakers in the world, but this portable pit trap exceeds even their expertise.

If you are lawful evil, lawful neutral, or neutral evil, an enveloping pit functions like a portable hole, except that it is 50 feet deep.

An enveloping pit covers a 10-foot square when opened fully, but the opening can be as small as 1 foot in diameter if it is laid upon the ground while still folded.

The pit opens fully only if it has enough flat space to do so; it stops opening when an edge hits a wall or an obstruction of similar size.

Relic Power: If you have established the proper divine connection, you can open or close an enveloping pit with a command word from anywhere within 60 feet.

A favorite kobold tactic is to lie in wait until foes are standing close to a concealed enveloping pit, then give the command word to open it.

Any creature that suddenly finds an enveloping pit beneath it falls in.

A successful DC 22 Reflex save allows the creature to move to an adjacent safe square, if one exists.

To use the relic power, you must worship Kurtulmak and either sacrifice a 5th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 9 HD.

Lore: Centuries ago, Kurtulmak gave his high priests a half-dozen of these portable pit traps to aid them in acquiring new lands and wealth (Knowledge [religion] DC 20).

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, Sanctify Relic, plane shift.

Cost to Create: 1,800 gp, 144 XP, 4 days.

EXECUTIONER'S HOOD [RELIC]

Body Slot: Head

Caster Level: 20th

Aura: Strong; (DC 25) transmutation

Activation: —

Weight: —

This black cloth hood is made of coarse fabric.

Two eyeholes have been crudely cut to allow its wearer to see, and it is secured at the neck with a piece of rope tied in the style of a noose.

Death and destruction have accompanied the former wearers of an executioner's hood.

Those who know of this item's dark history are terrified to look upon one.

While wearing an executioner's hood, you can attempt a coup de grace attack as a standard action rather than a full-round action if you are chaotic evil, neutral evil, or chaotic neutral.

Relic Power: If you have established the proper divine connection, each time you make a successful coup de grace attempt, you gain a +1 morale bonus on melee attack rolls and damage rolls and 1 temporary hit point per level.

These benefits last for 5 minutes and stack to a maximum of a +5 bonus and 5 temporary hit points per level.

To use the relic power, you must worship Erythnul and either sacrifice a 5th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 9 HD.

Lore: Legend holds that a high priest of Erythnul created the original three executioner's hoods and distributed them to followers in large cities, who wore them to terrify the local citizens (Knowledge [religion] DC 20).

One executioner's hood was worn by a ruler named Xeric IV, who publicly executed every member of his own extended family two centuries ago.

Since then, the three hoods have been scattered across the globe by tides of war and conquest (Knowledge [religion] DC 20).

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, Sanctify Relic, bear's endurance.

Cost to Create: 6,000 gp, 240 XP, 6 days.

Caster Level: 20th

Aura: Strong; (DC 25) necromancy

Activation: —

Weight: 2 lb.

These heavy spiked gauntlets are made from overlapping metal plates.

Blood drips slowly from the junctures, coating the surface of the gauntlets with a thick, red ooze.

Said to harbor the blood of a thousand victims, each pair of these gauntlets has a long and grisly history.

They function as +1 spiked gauntlets if you are lawful evil, lawful neutral, or neutral evil.

Relic Power: If you have established the proper divine connection, gauntlets of the blood-lord grant you a +2 luck bonus on melee touch attacks while you wear them.

To use the relic power, you must worship Hextor and either sacrifice a 4th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 7 HD.

If you sacrifice a 6th-level divine spell or have the True Believer feat and at least 11 Hit Dice, every 3rd-level or lower melee touch spell that you cast is automatically empowered as by the Empower Spell feat (although such a spell doesn't use a higher-level spell slot and the casting time of the spell isn't increased).

Lore: The first pair of these gauntlets was worn by a priest of Hextor who mercilessly slew entire villages to make way for the Blood-Lord's approaching army (Knowledge [religion] DC 15).

Upon the priest's death, Hextor reclaimed the gauntlets. Since then, he has given a pair to a favored follower at least once every century (Knowledge [religion] DC 20).

GAUNTLETS OF THE TALON [RELIC]

Price (Item Level): 4,000 gp (8th)

Body Slot: Hands

Caster Level: 20th

Aura: Strong; (DC 25) transmutation

Activation: —

Weight: 2 lb.

These elegant gauntlets are made of a silvery metal and have a scaly surface.

Each finger is tipped with a long talon made of sapphire.

Provided that you are lawful good, lawful neutral, or neutral good, gauntlets of the talon grant you two primary natural claw attacks that count as magic weapons for the purpose of overcoming damage reduction.

Each claw deals 1d6 points of slashing damage (if you are Medium).

Relic Power: If you have established the proper divine connection and already have levels in the monk class, you are treated as if you were a monk of five levels higher than you actually are for the purposes of AC, unarmed damage, and the ki strike ability.

This benefit doesn't stack with similar benefits (such as from a monk's belt).

Also, you can treat your unarmed damage as either bludgeoning or slashing damage (chosen each time you attack).

To use the relic power, you must worship Bahamut and either sacrifice a 3rd-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 5 HD.

If you sacrifice a 5th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 9 HD, the gauntlets also function as ghost touch weapons for the purpose of attacking incorporeal creatures.

In addition, you gain a +4 bonus on grapple checks.

Lore: It is said that this silvery set of gauntlets was fashioned by Bahamut himself, then given to the master of a now-defunct order of monks (Knowledge [religion] DC 15).

Members of the order's inner circle eventually discovered the secret of their manufacture, but they managed to make only a few additional sets before their order was destroyed by followers of Tiamat (Knowledge [religion] DC 20).

Relic Power: If you have established the proper divine connection, you also have blindsense out to 30 feet while wearing the gem.

In addition, you know instinctively where the walls, ceiling, and floor are in any cavern you're in, no matter how large or what the illumination.

To use the relic power, you must worship Garl Glittergold and either sacrifice a 5th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 9 HD.

Lore: According to legend, Moradin wrested the five original gems of the glitterdepth from the earth and gave them to Garl Glittergold, who cut and polished them and then hid them for his dedicated clergy to find (Knowledge [religion] DC 20).

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, Sanctify Relic, owl's wisdom.

MAP OF UNSEEN LANDS [RELIC]

Price (Item Level): 5,200 gp (10th)

Body Slot: — (held)

Caster Level: 20th

Aura: Strong; (DC 25) evocation

Activation: — and standard (command)

Weight: —

This rolled-up sheet of vellum is generally kept in a dark-colored scroll tube decorated with wagon wheel motifs.

A map of unseen lands is a boon to caravans of halfling pilgrims, who use it to avoid danger and make their way through the wilderness.

While holding the map, you gain a +5 competence bonus on Knowledge (geography) and Survival checks if you are neutral good, lawful good, chaotic good, or neutral.

Relic Power: Once per day, if you have established the proper divine connection, you can command a map of unseen lands to spend 2 minutes redrawing itself.

Doing so causes it to map the terrain within a 10-mile radius with total accuracy but only middling detail.

This ability doesn't function underground.

When the redraw command is issued, the DM should spend no more than 2 minutes of real time sketching out a map, adding items from the following list in the given order of priority.

- General terrain features (mountains, rivers, and so forth), labeled if their names are widely known.
- Structures encompassing more than 5,000 square feet (castles, temples, and ruins), named either specifically ("Fortress of the Undying") or generally ("bardic college").
- Structures important for travel (bridges, dungeon entrances, and magic portals), labeled only if they are unusual in some respect.
- Lairs of creatures of CR 12 or higher, labeled by creature type only.

To use the relic power, you must worship Yondalla and either sacrifice a 5th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 9 HD.

Lore: The first map of unseen lands was sketched out by Fharlanghn as a gift for Yondalla.

It is considered light armor and has a maximum Dexterity bonus of +8, an armor check penalty of -2, and an arcane spell failure chance of 15%.

Relic Power: If you have established the proper divine connection, a suit of millennial chainmail painlessly extends tiny green roots into your skin when you don it. This effect grants you fast healing 3 as long as you are in brighter than shadowy illumination.

To use the relic power, you must worship Corellon Larethian and either sacrifice a 4th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 7 HD.

Lore: The original suit of millennial chainmail was created by a dryad cleric for her lover, an elf hero who kept the surrounding woodlands safe.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Sanctify Relic, regenerate.

Price (Item Level): 7,308 gp (11th)

Body Slot: — (held)

Caster Level: 20th

Aura: Strong; (DC 25) necromancy

Activation: Swift (command)

Weight: 6 lb.

This austere morningstar glows with an eerie blue light at all times, and its form feels unstable.

It is said that these morningstars have been dipped in the blood of creatures from every known plane on the Great Wheel.

When you wield it, a morningstar of the many functions as a +1 morningstar if you are chaotic evil, neutral evil, or chaotic neutral.

Furthermore, the weapon overcomes damage reduction as if it has all four of the alignment descriptors (chaotic, evil, good, and lawful).

Relic Power: If you have established the proper divine connection, you can command a morningstar of the many to mutate for 6 rounds, taking on a different form and weapon property each round, as given on the following table.

The weapon retains its normal enhancement bonus regardless of its form.

Round	Weapon and Property*
1	vicious morningstar
2	flaming burst shortspear
3	anarchic morningstar
4	wounding battleaxe
5	unholy morningstar
6	vorpal longsword

* See DMG 223–226 for details of these properties.

After the 6th round, a morningstar of the many again becomes a +1 morningstar until you speak the command word again.

This ability functions five times per day.

To use the relic power, you must worship Erythnul and either sacrifice a 5th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 9 HD.

Lore: The six original morningstars of the many were taken from defeated champions from the Upper Planes.

Cost to Create: 3,500 gp (plus 308 gp for masterwork morningstar), 280 XP, 7 days.

PIPES OF FRENZIED REVELRY [RELIC]

Price (Item Level): 3,100 gp (8th)

Body Slot: — (held)

Caster Level: 20th

Aura: Strong; (DC 25) enchantment

Activation: Standard (manipulation)

Weight: 1 lb.

This set of pan pipes is made of hollowed-out reeds lashed together with sturdy vines.

Somewhere on the surface of each reed is the symbol of Olidammara.

When you play these pipes, you gain a +5 competence bonus on Perform (wind instruments) checks if you are chaotic neutral, neutral, chaotic good, or chaotic evil.

Relic Power: If you have established the proper divine connection, you can attempt a DC 25 Perform (wind instruments) check each round that you are playing the pipes.

If you succeed, every living creature within 30 feet must make a successful DC 16 Will save or be affected as if by a confusion spell, with one exception: Whenever the die roll calls for the subject to attack another creature, the subject instead makes a mildly amorous advance (such as an embrace or kiss) toward the target creature.

For each affected creature, this effect lasts as long as the piping continues (a standard action each round) and you are within 30 feet of that creature at the end of your turn. If your playing is interrupted, or you fail a Perform check and then resume piping with a successful check, every creature within 30 feet can make a new save attempt.

Subjects that successfully save are immune to the pipes of frenzied revelry for the next 24 hours.

To use the relic power, you must worship Olidammara and either sacrifice a 5th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 9 HD.

Lore: These pipes were originally created by a secretive order of bard/clerics devoted to Olidammara.

For the past several centuries, members of the order have distributed them to musically inclined followers of the deity (Knowledge [religion] DC 15).

Rumor holds that a satyr named Elovan came into possession of a set of these pipes and used them to woo a fair princess while she was on a picnic in the woods with her court.

Since then, members of that nation's royal family have occasionally displayed odd physical quirks, such as unusually hairy legs and vestigial horns, as well as an unusual aptitude for music (Knowledge [religion] DC 20).

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, Sanctify Relic, confusion.
Cost to Create: 1,550 gp, 124 XP, 4 days.

PLATINUM HELM [RELIC]

Body Slot: Head

Caster Level: 20th

Aura: Strong; (DC 25) transmutation

Activation: Swift (command)

Weight: 3 lb.

This scaled metal helm covers the entire face.

A pair of large, fully spread dragon wings is attached at the temples.

A platinum helm imbues you with the essence of Bahamut, lord of the good dragons.

While wearing it, you are immune to the frightful presence of evil dragons if you are lawful good, neutral good, or lawful neutral.

Relic Power: If you have established the proper divine connection, you can activate the helm as you make an attack to create a frightful presence effect.

When you do so, each foe within 60 feet of you must succeed on a Will save (DC 10 + 1/2 your Hit Dice + your Cha modifier) or be panicked (if it has 4 or fewer HD) or shaken (if it has 5 or more HD) for 4d6 rounds.

This ability functions three times per day.

To use the relic power, you must worship Bahamut and either sacrifice a 5th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 9 HD.

If you sacrifice an 8th-level spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 15 Hit Dice, you can command the helm once per day to grant you blindsense with a 60-foot range for 1 hour.

Lore: The seven original platinum helms were given to the gold dragons that served as Bahamut's consorts.

In the centuries since, they have passed to his servants on the Material Plane (Knowledge [religion] DC 20).

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, Sanctify Relic, fear or frightful presence, true seeing.

Cost to Create: 2,500 gp, 200 XP, 5 days.

RAPIER OF DESPERATE MEASURES [RELIC]

Weight: 2 lb.

The hilt of this rapier is set with three moonstones.

At the base of the blade is an inscription that reads, "Caution is for the cowardly."

Those who live by their wits often find themselves in situations over their heads.

This rapier is an incomparable boon to those in such situations.

When you wield a rapier of desperate measures, it functions as a +2 rapier if you are chaotic neutral, neutral, chaotic good, or chaotic evil.

Relic Power: If you have established the proper divine connection, a rapier of desperate measures gains the keen property (DMG 225) while you have fewer than your full normal hit points, and the speed property (DMG 225) while you have fewer than half your full normal hit points.

To use the relic power, you must worship Olidammara and either sacrifice a 5th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 9 HD.

Lore: The first of these rapiers was crafted by a rogue/sorcerer who had been rescued one too many times by her party's paladin, only to hear a lecture on her erratic behavior.

She gave the rapier to a disguised Olidammara when she met him in a tavern.

Since then, the Laughing Rogue has awarded one of these rapiers to a fellow traveler whenever the whim strikes him (Knowledge [religion] DC 20).

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Sanctify Relic, keen edge.

Cost to Create: 4,500 gp (plus 320 gp for masterwork rapier), 360 XP, 9 days.

Caster Level: 20th

Aura: Strong; (DC 25) divination

Activation: —

Weight: 2 lb.

This rapier has a curved blade and a hand guard of delicate golden filigree.

This deadly weapon can find hidden enemies and pierce the protective magic that veils their true locations.

When you wield a rapier of unerring direction, it functions as a +1 ghost touch rapier.

Relic Power: If you have established the proper divine connection, a rapier of unerring direction automatically ignores all miss chances, whether they stem from concealment, blink, displacement, or some other source.

To use the relic power, you must worship Fharlanghn and either sacrifice a 5th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 9 HD.

Lore: Originally a gift to Fharlanghn from Olidammara, this rapier has since been copied several times by Fharlanghn's most powerful clerics (Knowledge [religion] DC 20).

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Sanctify Relic, true seeing.

Cost to Create: 4,500 gp (plus 320 gp for masterwork rapier), 360 XP, 9 days.

RAPTOR ARROW [RELIC]

Price (Item Level): 6,006 gp (10th)

Body Slot: — (held)

Caster Level: 12th

Aura: Strong; (DC 21) conjuration

Activation: — (ammunition)

Weight: —

This arrow is carved from a straight piece of ash and fletched with feathers from a predatory bird.

Its head is curved at the tip, like a raptor's beak.

Raptor arrows harness the power of the falcon to skewer their prey.

When you fire a raptor arrow, it functions as a +1 arrow with a variant of the returning quality if you are neutral good, lawful good, chaotic good, or neutral.

At the beginning of the round after it is fired from a bow, a raptor arrow flies through the air and restrings itself on the bow from which it was fired.

Unlike most ammunition, raptor arrows are not destroyed when used.

Relic Power: If you have established the proper divine connection, a raptor arrow also gains the bane property (DMG 224) against the targeted foe.

To use the relic power, you must worship Ehlonna and either sacrifice a 4th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat.

Lore: The first of these arrows (reputedly a set of five) gained relic status when Ehlonna used them to slay a great wyrm green dragon that was rampaging through a primeval forest (Knowledge [religion] DC 20) Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Sanctify Relic, summon monster I. Cost to Create: 3,000 gp (plus 6 gp for masterwork arrow), 240 XP, 6 days.

ROD OF REVERSAL [RELIC]

Price (Item Level): 10,000 gp (12th)

Body Slot: — (held)

Caster Level: 20th

Aura: Strong; (DC 25) abjuration

Activation: Standard (command) and —

Weight: 5 lb.

This steel rod looks like a length of thick chain, but its links are fixed in place, preventing it from bending even slightly.

Though they were created for arcane spellcasters who engaged in frequent magical duels, these rods are also a boon to anyone who battles spellcasters.

When you wield a rod of reversal, you can command it to automatically reflect the next three levels of spells that target you, as if you were under a lesser version of a spell turning spell, provided that you are neutral, neutral good, neutral evil, chaotic neutral, or lawful neutral.

This ability functions three times per day.

Turning a spell changes the rod's color, depending on the school of the spell turned, as given on the following table.

School	Color
Abjuration	Blue
Conjuration	Yellow
Divination	Indigo
Enchantment	Green
Evocation	Red
Illusion	Violet

This ability functions five times per day.

To use the relic power, you must worship Lolth and either sacrifice a 6th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 11 HD.

RUBY BLADE [RELIC]

Price (Item Level): 20,302 gp (15th)

Body Slot: — (held)

Caster Level: 20th

Aura: Strong; (DC 25) evocation

Activation: — and standard (command)

Weight: 1 lb.

This deep red, translucent dagger is carved from a single piece of crystal.

It has a rounded, razor-sharp blade and a second blade-shaped head at its other end, though the latter is too small to be usable as a weapon.

Its ornate design pays homage to the gemcutter's art.

When you wield a ruby blade, it functions as a +1 axiomatic dagger if you are lawful evil, lawful neutral, lawful good, or neutral.

Relic Power: If you have established the proper divine connection, and if you have levels in a class that allows you to rebuke undead, your effective level in that class is considered 4 higher for the purpose of bolstering, rebuking, or commanding undead.

This is a continuous effect and requires no activation.

In addition, you can activate a ruby blade to produce the effect of a status spell once per day.

To use the relic power, you must worship Wee Jas and either sacrifice a 6th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 11 HD.

Lore: Legend holds that the first ruby blades were plucked from among the gems on the hem of Wee Jas's gown.

Since then, certain high priests have acquired the skill to create them (Knowledge [religion] DC 20).

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Sanctify Relic, order's wrath, status.

Cost to Create: 10,000 gp (plus 302 gp for masterwork dagger), 120 XP, 20 days.

SCROLLS OF UNCERTAIN PROVENANCE [RELIC]

Price (Item Level): 8,000 gp (11th)

Body Slot: — or — (held)

Caster Level: 20th

Aura: Strong; (DC 25) necromancy

Activation: — or 1 hour; see text

Weight: 5 lb.

This bundle of rough parchment contains scraps of varying shapes and sizes; some appear old and others new.

It is bound with a braided cord and secured with a medallion bearing the holy symbol of Wee Jas.

Scrolls of uncertain provenance are not spells stored in written form, but collections of death-obsessed writings in an unknown hand.

Popular myth holds that those who can command the lore contained in a set of these scrolls have power over life and death.

As long as you possess scrolls of uncertain provenance, you gain a +5 competence bonus on Knowledge checks, provided that you are lawful neutral, lawful evil, lawful good, or neutral.

Relic Power: If you have established a proper divine connection, you can attempt to read from the scrolls once per day for 1 hour.

Understanding their lore, however, is not an easy task. To begin with, the scrolls are written in nearly every language, ancient and modern, and the text sometimes switches languages within the same sentence. Thus, a successful hour of reading requires a successful DC 20 Knowledge (religion) check. You receive a +2 bonus on the check for every language you speak. So cryptic are the scrolls that even read magic, comprehend languages, or other spells don't help you understand them, nor does the Decipher Script skill.

Time	Benefit
1 hour	Renewal pact for yourself
2 hours	Renewal pact for another
3 hours	Death pact for yourself
4 hours	Death pact for another
6 hours	True resurrection for another (and the scrolls disappear)

If your check is successful, you gain temporary understanding of one of the scrolls' secrets depending on how long you have spent reading them. Your hours of successful reading stack for this purpose, so you can read over multiple days to gain a greater benefit, if desired. The time spent need not all be spent at once; you can divide it as you choose for the purpose of gaining benefits. Reading scrolls of uncertain provenance is not without risk, since delving into their mysteries draws you near to the border between life and death. Whenever you spend an hour reading scrolls of uncertain provenance, you must roll on the following table, whether or not you learn anything useful.

d%	Effect
01–10	Go insane (as the insanity spell); Will DC 20 negates.
11–30	The scrolls bestow a permanent curse upon you, applying a –4 penalty on attack rolls, saves, ability checks, and skill checks; Will DC 20 negates.
31–60	Receive a geas/quest to perform for Wee Jas; Will DC 20 negates.
61–90	Gain 1d6 negative levels (Fort DC 20 removes them after 24 hours).
91–100	Become a ghost for a year and a day; Fort DC 20 negates.

To use the relic power, you must worship Wee Jas and either sacrifice a 6th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 11 HD.

Lore: Scrolls of uncertain provenance have long been associated with Wee Jas, although even her lorekeepers don't know where the first ones came from (Knowledge [religion] DC 15).

In fact, they were penned by beings that lost their sanity in the pursuit of arcane knowledge and collected by agents of Wee Jas for the sake of the knowledge they contain (Knowledge [religion] DC 20).

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, Sanctify Relic, death pact (SC 60), renewal pact (SC 173), true resurrection.

Cost to Create: 4,000 gp, 320 XP, 8 days.

SHARD OF THE SUN [RELIC]

Price (Item Level): 3,500 gp (8th)

Body Slot: — (held)

Caster Level: 20th

Aura: Strong; (DC 25) evocation

Activation: — or standard (command)

Weight: 1 lb.

This brightly glowing holy symbol of Pelor is made of hammered gold and set with small diamonds.

A shard of the sun is mentioned in several religious texts as "Pelor's gift, which I carry into darkness—a sun that never sets".

When you hold this item, it continuously emits a warm light equivalent to a daylight spell heightened to 5th level, provided that you are neutral good, lawful good, chaotic good, or neutral.

The symbol must be covered completely to douse its light.

Relic Power: If you have established the proper divine connection, you can command a shard of the sun to fire two simultaneous searing light spells, though each must be aimed at a different target.

Each beam deals 10d6 points of damage to undead, 5d6 points to constructs and objects, and 5d8 points of damage to other creatures.

Creatures particularly vulnerable to bright light, such as vampires, take 10d8 points of damage from these beams. This ability functions three times per day.
To use the relic power, you must worship Pelor and either sacrifice a 6th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 11 HD.
If you sacrifice an 8th-level spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 15 HD, you can fire four searing light beams with each activation (no two at the same target).
Lore: The first shards of the sun were hewn by Pelor himself from the orb of the sun and molded into the shape of his symbol.

Over the centuries, he gifted them to his most favored high priests, and most of them remain in the hands of his clergy today (Knowledge [religion] DC 20).

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, Sanctify Relic, daylight, searing light.

Cost to Create: 1,750 gp, 140 XP, 4 days.

SHIELD OF THE RESOLUTE [RELIC]

Price (Item Level): 5,520 gp (10th)

Body Slot: — (held)

Caster Level: 20th

Aura: Strong; (DC 25) necromancy

Activation: —

Weight: 7 lb.

This shield is made from hundreds of strips of mithral, each a different size, color, and texture, riveted together in a patchwork design.

Like other mithral shields, it is unusually light for its size. Despite its motley appearance, a shield of the resolute is a bulwark of defense.

It functions as a +1 light fortification heavy mithral shield, provided that you are lawful good, neutral good, or lawful neutral.

Relic Power: If you have established the proper divine connection, a shield of the resolute terrorizes enemies of the dwarves.

Every goblinoid and giant within 30 feet of you that gazes upon the shield must succeed on a DC 17 Will save or be shaken (if its Hit Dice are equal to or greater than yours) or frightened (if it has fewer Hit Dice than you do) for 2 rounds.

This effect functions like a gaze attack, so the saves must be made at the beginning of each affected creature's turn every round, unless it takes measures to avoid seeing the shield (see DMG 294 for gaze attack rules).

Unlike with a true gaze attack, you can't use a standard action on your turn to use this effect against a creature. Once a creature has failed the save, the shield's power has no further effect on that creature for 24 hours.

To use the relic power, you must worship Moradin and either sacrifice a 6th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 11 HD.

Lore: Shields of the resolute are said to be assembled from pieces of the shields carried by dwarves who fell in battle defending their homelands.

When the Soul Forger gathers their souls, he creates these shields in his forge in remembrance of their valor (Knowledge [religion] DC 20).

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Sanctify Relic, fear, limited wish or miracle.

Cost to Create: 2,250 gp (plus 1,020 gp for heavy mithral shield), 180 XP, 5 days.

Activation: Immediate (command)

Weight: 10 lb.

The bloody marks appear fresh and wet.

This gory item is favored by orcs for its shock value to enemies, as well as for its special properties.

A shield of the severed hand functions as a +2 heavy wooden shield if you are chaotic evil, chaotic neutral, or neutral evil.

Relic Power: If you have established the proper divine connection, you can activate this shield to make an immediate bull rush attempt (with a +4 bonus on the Strength check) against an adjacent opponent that has just attacked you in melee.

This action does not provoke an attack of opportunity from that opponent.

You can't fall prone during this attempt, and you can't follow the opponent if you push it back.

To use the relic power, you must worship Gruumsh and either sacrifice a 4th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 7 HD.

Lore: The original shield of the severed hand was created when an orc warrior chopped off the hand of an elf king and mounted it on his shield.

Upon the warrior's death, the shield was placed on his blazing funeral pyre.

Afterward, it was found intact amid the ashes, still bearing the palm print of its grisly burden (Knowledge [religion] DC 20).

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Sanctify Relic, Bigby's forceful hand.

Cost to Create: 2,250 gp (plus 157 gp for masterwork heavy wooden shield), 180 XP, 5 days.

When you carry a skewer-of-gnomes, it functions as a Small +1 gnome bane spear if you are lawful evil, lawful neutral, or neutral evil.

Relic Power: If you have established the proper divine connection, the spear also gains the unholy property (DMG 226) and reveals its quasientience and abilities to you.

A skewer-of-gnomes automatically sets itself against a charge, attacking and dealing double damage whenever a foe charges you.

This attack uses your highest base attack bonus and all relevant modifiers, just as if you were making an attack of opportunity.

To use the relic power, you must worship Kurtulmak and either sacrifice a 5th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 9 HD.

Lore: The first four skewers-of-gnomes were created for the kings of the most powerful kobold tribes by weaponsmiths working in cooperation with Kurtulmak's clergy.

Since then, the secret of their manufacture has been passed down from parent to child and is known to only a handful of kobold weaponmakers (Knowledge [religion] DC 20).

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Sanctify Relic, unholy blight.

To use the relic power, you must worship Gruumsh and either sacrifice a 5th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 9 HD.

Lore: Once in a great while, Gruumsh flings a spear at one of his clerics with whom he is annoyed.

STAFF OF THE UNYIELDING OAK [RELIC]

Price (Item Level): 5,600 gp (10th)

Body Slot: — (held)

Caster Level: 20th

Aura: Strong; (DC 25) transmutation

Activation: Standard (command)

Weight: 4 lb.

This sturdy quarterstaff is formed of living wood, as evidenced by the tender shoots and leaves along its length.

A staff of the unyielding oak is actually a treant bound into quarterstaff form.

When you wield this weapon, it functions as a +1/+1 quarterstaff if you are neutral, neutral good, neutral evil, lawful neutral, or chaotic neutral.

Relic Power: If you have established the proper divine connection, you can command this staff to become a treant. This ability functions like the changestaff spell, except that the treant is fully real and can speak to other treants and animated trees.

If a staff of the unyielding oak in treant form is reduced to 0 hit points or fewer, it reverts to staff form and cannot be used again for twenty-eight days.

The staff can take treant form any number of times per day, but can be in that form for only 12 hours overall during any one day.

To use the relic power, you must worship Obad-Hai and either sacrifice a 8th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 15 HD.

Lore: These staffs, of which three are known to exist, are treants that have willingly bound themselves into quarterstaff form to aid Obad-Hai's followers.

Each willingly serves for a year and a day, after which another treant takes over the responsibility (Knowledge [religion] DC 20).

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, Sanctify Relic, changestaff.

Cost to Create: 2,500 gp (plus 600 gp for masterwork/masterwork quarterstaff), 200 XP, 5 days.

SWORD OF MIGHTY THEWS [RELIC]

When you wield a sword of mighty thews, it functions as a +1 dragonbane greatsword, provided that you are chaotic good, neutral good, or chaotic neutral.

Relic Power: If you have established the proper divine connection, you are immune to the frightful presence of dragons as long as you wield the sword.

In addition, you gain a +5 luck bonus on Reflex saves against a dragon's breath weapon.

To use the relic power, you must worship Kord and either sacrifice a 5th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 9 HD.

Lore: Kord's high clerics forged these greatswords in homage to the god's signature weapon, Kelmar.

Since their creation, Kord has awarded one every decade to a hero who has earned his favor (Knowledge [religion] DC 20).

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Sanctify Relic, antidragon aura (SC 14).

Cost to Create: 4,500 gp (plus 350 gp for masterwork greatsword), 180 XP, 9 days.

SWORD OF VIRTUE BEYOND REPROACH [RELIC]

Price (Item Level): 9,315 gp (12th)

Body Slot: — (held)

Caster Level: 20th

Aura: Strong; (DC 25) abjuration

Activation: —

Weight: 4 lb.

A sword of virtue beyond reproach is designed to grant a measure of respite from charms and compulsions.

When you wield this weapon, it functions as a +1 holy longsword if you are lawful good, neutral good, or lawful neutral.

Relic Power: If you have established the proper divine connection and you fail a save against an enemy's charm or compulsion effect while wielding the sword, you are immune to its effects for 1d4 rounds (DM rolls secretly). The effect is only suppressed during this time, not negated. When the period of suppression ends, any effects received during previous rounds take effect.

To use the relic power, you must worship Heironeous and either sacrifice a 6th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 11 HD.

Lore: Four of these longswords were commissioned from celestial dwarves by the great paladin Tardalius the Headstrong, who won favor from Heironeous for his conspicuous valor.

Tardalius presented the swords to his four sons, who followed in his footsteps (Knowledge [religion] DC 20).

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Sanctify Relic, mind blank.

Cost to Create: 4,500 gp (plus 315 gp for masterwork longsword), 180 XP, 9 days.

TABARD OF THE DISEMBODIED [RELIC]

Price (Item Level): 6,000 gp (10th)

Body Slot: Torso

Caster Level: 20th

Aura: Strong; (DC 25) transmutation

Activation: Standard (mental)

Weight: 1 lb.

This misty gray tabard is silky soft to the touch.

It is embroidered with small sequins in a skull motif.

A tabard of the disembodied is connected to the Ethereal Plane, the realm where ghosts hold sway.

Once per day, you can activate this tabard to become ethereal for 1 round, provided that you are neutral evil, lawful evil, chaotic evil, or neutral.

Relic Power: If you have established the proper divine connection, you can activate a tabard of the disembodied to transport yourself to the Ethereal Plane (as the ethereal jaunt spell) for up to 10 rounds per day.

This duration need not be continuous, and the effect is dismissable with another standard (mental) action.

While you are on the Ethereal Plane, the spells you cast affect the Material Plane normally, unlike those of spellcasters who reach the Ethereal Plane by other means.

To use the relic power, you must worship Nerull and either sacrifice a 7th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 13 HD.

Lore: The first of these tabards is said to have been among the burial raiments of Shedlazzar IV, a legendary wizard-king who haunted his castle for decades after his death.

His grandson, a noted necromancer in his own right, wrested the secret of the tabard's creation from his ancestor's ghost using an exceptionally cruel torture technique designed to psychically flay the spirit (Knowledge [religion] DC 20).

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, Sanctify Relic, ethereal jaunt.

Cost to Create: 3,000 gp, 240 XP, 6 days.

TABARD OF THE GREAT CRUSADE [RELIC]

Price (Item Level): 5,500 gp (10th)

Body Slot: Torso

Caster Level: 20th

Aura: Strong; (DC 25) conjuration

Activation: — and move (manipulation); see text

Weight: 1 lb.

This silvery tabard is emblazoned with a stylized sunburst design.

Because of its association with uncommon valor and amazing healing power, a tabard of the great crusade is a welcome sight at any scene of armed conflict.

When you wear one of these garments over armor, you and every ally within 20 feet gains a +1 morale bonus on saving throws, provided that you are lawful neutral, lawful good, lawful evil, or neutral.

This is a continuous effect and requires no activation.

Relic Power: If you have established the proper divine connection, a tabard of the great crusade also provides you with damage reduction 5/evil.

Furthermore, any ally other than you who grasps the hem of the tabard (a move [manipulation] action) can gain the benefit of a heal spell.

This ability functions once per day.

To use the relic power, you must worship St.

Cuthbert and either sacrifice an 8th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 15 HD.

Lore: Only seven of these tabards are known to exist.

Originally made for an elite cadre of warrior-healers, they have since been passed down from one battlefield cleric to another (Knowledge [religion] DC 20).

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, Sanctify Relic, heal.

Cost to Create: 2,750 gp, 220 XP, 6 days.

TOME OF ANCIENT LORE [RELIC]

Price (Item Level): 5,500 gp (10th)

Body Slot: —

Caster Level: 20th

Aura: Strong; (DC 25) transmutation

Activation: 1 hour; see text

Weight: 2 lb.

This ancient, leather-bound book is stuffed to overflowing with yellowing sheets of parchment.

A boon to arcane spellcasters of all sorts, a tome of ancient lore contains every conceivable spell.

Perusing it for 1 hour gives you a +5 competence bonus on Knowledge (arcana) and Spellcraft checks made that day, provided that you are neutral, neutral good, neutral evil, lawful neutral, or chaotic neutral.

The hour spent studying the tome is in addition to any time you spend preparing spells.

Relic Power: Though the pages of this book contain all the world's arcane knowledge, a tome of ancient lore is cursed with a deliberately confusing, ever-changing system of cross-referencing.

Because its pages constantly rearrange themselves, apparently at random, finding any useful information by browsing the book is impossible.

However, if you have established the proper divine connection, you can use a tome of ancient lore while preparing arcane spells to prepare a single spell that isn't in your spellbook.

You have a 50% chance of finding any arcane spell of the highest level you can cast, and a 100% chance to find any other spell that you can cast.

The book functions in this manner once per day.

To use the relic power, you must worship Boccob and either sacrifice a 5th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 9 HD.

Lore: Allegedly penned by Boccob himself and "borrowed" from his library, the original tome disappeared for centuries.

Eventually, copies began to appear in the possession of arcane colleges, spellcasting dragons, and powerful wizards (Knowledge [religion] DC 20).

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, Sanctify Relic, secret page.

Cost to Create: 2,750 gp, 220 XP, 6 days.

TOME OF THE STILLED TONGUE [RELIC]

Price (Item Level): 7,500 gp (11th)

Body Slot: —

Caster Level: 20th

Aura: Strong; (DC 25) transmutation

Activation: See text

Weight: 5 lb.

This thick, leather-bound manuscript has a particularly disgusting decoration—a desiccated tongue nailed to its front cover.

A tome of the stilled tongue is a treasure trove of arcane potential.

If you are neutral evil, chaotic evil, lawful evil, or neutral, the book reveals full instructions for creating a lich's phylactery and offers 500 blank spell pages that function like those in Boccob's blessed book (DMG 249).

Relic Power: A tome of the stilled tongue also contains directions for eldritch mental exercises designed to strengthen your spellcasting.

If you have established the proper divine connection and read the appropriate section of the tome (requiring 1 hour of mental exercises), you can increase your effective caster level for all spells by 1 for 24 hours.

However, because the exercises are mystically strenuous, doing them reduces your full normal hit point total by 1 per character level while the caster level increase is in effect.

This ability functions once per day.

To use the relic power, you must worship Vecna and either sacrifice a 5th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 9 HD.

Lore: The grisly cover decoration on the original tome of the stilled tongue once belonged to a former cleric of Vecna who couldn't keep her order's secrets.

Now five copies are known to exist, but the origins of the other four tongues have never been revealed (Knowledge [religion] DC 20).

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, Sanctify Relic, Scribe Scroll, secret page.

Cost to Create: 3,750 gp, 300 XP, 8 days.

VESTMENTS OF EBONSILK [RELIC]

Price (Item Level): 5,000 gp (9th)

Body Slot: Torso

Caster Level: 20th

Aura: Strong; (DC 25) abjuration

Activation: —

Weight: 1 lb.

These lightweight black robes are covered in a silvery spiderweb tracery.

The clasp at the neck is a silver brooch shaped like a spider with amethyst eyes.

Thus far, the only known vestments of ebonsilk have been found in the possession of drow clerics.

If you are chaotic evil, neutral evil, or chaotic neutral, wearing these vestments grants you a +2 resistance bonus on saving throws.

Relic Power: If you have established the proper divine connection, the vestments also grant you a continual spider climb effect.

To use the relic power, you must worship Lolth and either sacrifice a 4th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat and at least 7 HD.

If you sacrifice a 7th-level spell slot or have at least 13 HD and the True Believer feat, you also gain a continual freedom of movement effect.

Lore: Said to be woven from silk extruded by Lolth herself, vestments of ebonsilk are occasionally awarded to undeserving followers of Lolth as a test to see how quickly her favored clerics can appropriate them (Knowledge [religion] DC 20).

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, Sanctify Relic, freedom of movement, spider climb.

Cost to Create: 2,500 gp, 200 XP, 5 days.

RINGS

ARMS AND EQUIPMENT GUIDE (3.0)

ALIGNMENT COMMAND

Similar in some ways to the mighty rings of elemental command, the four varieties of rings of alignment command grant the wearer great power over outsiders of a certain alignment.

Each appears to be a lesser magic ring until its powers are fully activated, as described in its entry.

The four varieties have the following common properties.

- Outsiders with the alignment subtype (Chaotic, Evil, Good, or Lawful) to which the ring is attuned can't attack the wearer, or even approach within 5 feet of her.

If the wearer desires, she may forego this protection and instead attempt to charm the outsider (as charm monster, Will save DC 17).

If the charm attempt fails, however, absolute protection is lost and no further attempts at charming can be made.

- Outsiders with the alignment subtype to which the ring is attuned who attack the wearer (if a charm attempt fails) take a -1 penalty on their attack rolls.

The ring wearer gains a +2 resistance bonus on saving throws against the creature's attacks.

She also gains a +4 morale bonus on all attacks against such creatures.

Any weapon she uses bypasses the damage reduction of such creatures, regardless of whether it has a sufficient enhancement bonus to do so.

- The wearer of the ring is able to converse with creatures with the alignment subtype to which her ring is attuned. These creatures recognize that she wears the ring.

They show a healthy respect for the wearer if alignments are similar.

If alignments are opposed, creatures fear the wearer if she is strong.

If she is weak, they hate and desire to slay her.

Fear, hatred, and respect are determined by the DM.

- The possessor of a ring of alignment command takes a saving throw penalty as follows:

Alignment	Saving Throw Penalty
Chaotic	-2 against lawful spells
Evil	-2 against good spells
Good	-2 against evil spells
Lawful	-2 against chaotic spells

In addition to the powers described above, each specific ring gives its wearer the following abilities according to its alignment.

Chaotic: This ring has the following powers.

- Random action (unlimited use)
- Shatter (unlimited use)
- Chaos hammer (2/day)
- Dispel law (1/day)

- Animate objects (1/week).

Evil: This ring has the following powers.

- Bane (unlimited use)
- Desecrate (unlimited use)
- Unholy blight (2/day)
- Dispel good (1/day)
- Create undead (1/week).

Good: This ring has the following powers.

- Bless (unlimited use)
- Aid (unlimited use)
- Holy smite (2/day)
- Dispel evil (1/day)
- Blade barrier (1/week).

Lawful: This ring has the following powers.

- Command (unlimited use)
- Calm emotions (unlimited use)
- Order's wrath (2/day)
- Dispel chaos (1/day)
- Hold monster (1/week)

Caster Level: 15th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, planar ally, all appropriate spells; Market Price: 200,000 gp.

FILCHER'S FRIEND

When used, this plain steel ring draws any loose metal object within 1 foot and weighing no more 1 ounce—usually coins and jewelry—toward it.

The objects do not have to be ferrous, simply metal in some way.

The ring grants a +5 circumstance bonus on Pick Pocket checks involving metal objects.

Caster Level: 12th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, mage hand; Market Price: 500 gp.

FORCE ARMOR

This pair of black iron rings must be worn as a set, one on either hand with no other magic ring, to function.

They sheathe their wearer in a field of magical force, granting a +4 armor bonus to AC (as the mage armor spell).

This sheath is harmful to the touch: Any creature whose bare flesh contacts the wearer takes 1d4 points of damage.

The wearer's unarmed strikes gain a +1 enhancement bonus on attacks and deal an additional 1d4 points of damage.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, mage armor, magic weapon, wall of force; Market Price: 45,000 gp.

GREATER COUNTERSPELLING

This seems to be a ring of spell storing upon first examination. However, while it allows a single spell of 1st through 9th level to be cast into it, that spell cannot be cast out of it again.

Instead, should that spell ever be cast upon the wearer, or within 90 feet of the wearer (if the wearer retains line of sight to the caster), the spell is immediately countered, as a counterspell action, requiring no action (or even knowledge) on the wearer's part.

Once so used, the spell cast into the ring is gone.

A new spell (or the same one as before) may be placed in it again.

Caster Level: 18th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, spell turning, wish; Market Price: 16,000 gp.

HIVE MIND

These rings are formed of a brownish-red substance like horn or chitin, resembling the carapace of a formian. A single ring of hive mind provides no benefit to its wearer unless another character with another ring of the same kind is within 1 mile.

All characters wearing rings of hive mind within 1 mile of one another can communicate telepathically among themselves, and their minds mesh in a close joining. If one such character is aware of a particular danger, they all are.

If one character in a group is not flat-footed, none of them are.

No such character in a group is considered flanked unless all of them are.

Caster Level: 17th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, Rary's telepathic bond, wish; Market Price: 180,000 gp.

LOCKPICKING

This ring is made up of tiny prongs, wires, and other small devices that spring to life on command.

The ring grants a +5 competence bonus on Open Lock checks and can cast knock three times a day, as the spell from a 12th-level caster.

Caster Level: 12th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, knock; Market Price: 7,700 gp.

MAGIC FANG

While worn, this ring grants one (and only one) of the wearer's natural weapons (bite, slam, fist, and so on) a +1 enhancement bonus on attack and damage rolls.

Caster Level: 12th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, magic fang; Market Price: 6,000 gp.

MISDIRECTION

This plain silver band is nondescript and unadorned. The wearer is under a continuous misdirection effect, redirecting Divination spells that reveal auras cast upon him.

Such spells automatically target their caster rather than the ring's wearer.

Caster Level: 3rd; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, misdirection; Market Price: 7,000 gp.

THUNDERCLAPS

This ring is made out of lapis lazuli, with a lightning bolt etched along the rim.

Three times per day, the wearer can affect someone with shocking grasp.

Once per day, this effect can combine with a powerful thunderclap that duplicates the effects of a shout spell.

The target must be touched for the shout effect to happen.

Both of these effects are as the spells from a 7th-level caster.

Caster Level: 12th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, shocking grasp, shout; Market Price: 11,200 gp.

UNIVERSAL ELEMENTAL RESISTANCE, MINOR

This ring functions as a ring of minor elemental resistance for all types of energy: fire, cold, electricity, acid, and sonic. Whenever the wearer would normally take such damage, subtract 15 points of damage per round from the amount before applying.

The major version of this ring is an epic magic item described in the Epic Level Handbook.

Caster Level: 15th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, protection from elements; Market Price: 144,000 gp.

BOOK OF EXALTED DEEDS (3.5)

ADAMANTINE TOUCH

When worn, this adamantine ring allows the wearer to make melee weapon attacks and natural attacks as though wielding an adamantine weapon.

Strong transmutation; CL 12th; Forge Ring, touch of adamantine; Price 120,000 gp; Cost to Create 60,000 gp + 4,800 XP.

AFFLICTION

This mithral ring is shaped like a beautiful feathered serpent.

Any natural or unarmed attack made by the ring's wearer forces the target to succeed on a DC 17 Fortitude save or succumb to an affliction of the ring wearer's choice (see the affliction spell description for more information).

Strong necromancy [good]; CL 12th; Forge Ring, affliction, creator must be good; Price 72,000 gp; Cost to Create 36,000 gp + 2,880 gp.

SOLAR WINGS

This brilliant gold ring causes is inlaid with celestial script. When the ring is put on, the wearer grows gleaming white wings (like those of a solar) and gains the ability fly at a speed of 150 feet (good maneuverability).

The wings disappear if the ring is removed.

If the ring is removed while the wearer is in flight, the wearer floats to the ground as per a feather fall spell.

If the wearer already has a functional set of wings, the ring does not create new ones, but the wearer may use the ring's fly speed if it's faster.

Strong transmutation; CL 12th; Forge Ring, feather fall, polymorph; Price 118,000 gp; Cost to Create 59,000 gp + 4,720 XP.

VENGEANCE

This gold ring glows softly when worn by a good-aligned creature.

If the wearer of the ring dies, an arc of divine energy leaps from the ring and deals 15d6 points of damage to the creature that dealt the killing blow.

The damage is of divine origin and of a nonspecific energy type.

The target of the attack can make a DC 19 Reflex save to reduce the damage by half.

Once the ring unleashes its energy, it turns to dust.

Strong abjuration [good]; CL 15th; Forge Ring, vengeance halo, creator must be good; Price 4,500 gp; Cost to Create 2,250 gp + 180 XP.

BOOK OF VILE DARKNESS (3.0)

The wearer of this iron ring, emblazoned with the symbol of a brooding falcon, can deal 3d6 points of damage per round as a free action to anyone wearing a slave ring keyed to it.

Furthermore, the wearer can exchange messages with anyone wearing a slave ring (as if using a sending spell) three times per day.

Typically, a master ring has ten slave rings keyed to it.

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, shriveling, sending; Market Price: 40,600 gp (does not include slave rings; see below).

SLAVE

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring; Market Price: 500 gp.

VILE SPELL

If this ring is worn by a spellcaster, 1 point of damage per spell level from each of the caster's damaging spells is vile damage.

If multiple creatures take damage (such as with a fireball spell), each creature takes the vile damage.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, vile lance; Market Price: 15,000 gp.

VILE WEAPON

This is a black metal band with a small ruby.

When worn, each melee attack made by the wearer deals 1 extra point of vile damage.

WEEPING

This dull gray ring allows the wearer to bestow weeping, crippling sadness by touch.

A humanoid touched by the wearer of a ring of weeping must succeed at a Will save (DC 11) or be incapacitated for 1 round, then take a -3 morale penalty on attack rolls, saving throws, ability checks, and skill checks for 5 rounds.

Each time the ring is used to affect a creature, its wearer takes a -1 morale penalty on attack rolls, saving throws, ability checks, and skill checks for 5 rounds.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, sorrow; Market Price: 3,000 gp.

CHAMPIONS OF VALOR (3.5)

A ring of truth-telling is an item worn by the Heralds of Nimbral to determine the guilt or innocence of anyone they question.

Description: Each of these rings is a simple brass band with alternating triangles etched into its outer surface.

Activation: As a free action, the wearer can utter a command phrase ("speak plainly" in Halruaan) to activate the powers of the ring.

This can be done up to five times per day.

Effect: The ring provides the effects of both a detect thoughts (see page 220 in the Player's Handbook) and a zone of truth (page 303 in the Player's Handbook) spell within a 20-foot-radius area.

The effects allow the wearer to read the surface thoughts of any creature in the area, while at the same time preventing those creatures from speaking any deliberate lies.

These effects last as long as the wearer concentrates, or up to 3 minutes.

Aura/Caster Level: Faint enchantment/divination. CL 3rd.

Construction: Forge Ring, detect thoughts, zone of truth, 13,500 gp, 1,080 XP, 14 days.

Weight: —.

Price: 27,000 gp.

CITY OF SPLENDORS WATERDEEP (3.5)

ARMOR

These rings come in three varieties.

A ring of light armor is equivalent to a ring of protection +1 with the light fortification armor special ability.

A ring of medium armor is equivalent to a ring of protection +1 with the medium fortification armor special ability.

A ring of heavy armor is equivalent to a ring of protection +1 with the heavy fortification armor special ability.

Other varieties, with larger deflection bonuses, exist as well.

Strong abjuration; CL 13th; Forge Ring, limited wish or miracle, shield of faith, caster must be of a level at least three times greater than the deflection bonus of the ring; Price 8,000 gp (light), 32,000 gp (medium), 72,000 gp (heavy); Weight —.

RESEARCH

A ring of research is a simple gold or silver ring set with a colored gemstone.

When worn, it enables the wearer to quickly and unerringly find the right page in the right book or scroll to answer any question, assuming the wearer has access to a library that actually contains the answer.

The practical effect of this power is to double the circumstance bonus on Knowledge checks given by access to a library.

(If no such bonus is specified, assume the ring of research gives a +2 bonus).

Faint divination; CL 5th; Forge Ring, legend lore; Price 2,500 gp; Weight —.

TROBRIAND

A ring of Trobriand enables the wearer to issue mental commands to one or more scaladars.

A ring of Trobriand can issue mental commands only to a scaladar it was associated with during the creation process. Strong evocation; CL 13th; Forge Ring, sending; Price 2,000 gp; Weight —.

COMPLETE ADVENTURER (3.5)

FILCHER'S FRIEND

When activated, this plain steel ring draws toward it any loose metal object within 1 foot and weighing no more than 1 ounce (usually coins, jewelry, or small keys).

The objects do not have to be ferrous, simply metal in some way.

A filcher's friend also grants a +5 bonus on Sleight of Hand checks involving metal objects.

Faint transmutation; CL 12th; Forge Ring, mage hand; Price 2,500 gp.

LOCKPICKING

This ring is made up of tiny prongs, wires, and other small devices that spring to life on command.

A lockpicking ring grants the wearer a +5 competence bonus on Open Lock checks and the ability to use knock once per day if the wearer touches a portal she wishes to open.

Faint transmutation; CL 3rd; Forge Ring, knock; Price 4,500 gp.

COMPLETE ARCANE (3.5)

ARCANE MIGHT

Usually made of bronze, a ring of arcane might is forged in the shape of a serpent devouring its own tail.

When worn by any arcane spellcaster, the ring provides a +1 bonus to arcane caster level for the purpose of spell penetration checks, caster level checks, and all level-based variables of any arcane spell the wearer casts.

Moderate abjuration; CL 8th; Forge Ring, limited wish, greater magic weapon; Price 20,000 gp.

Lore: A creature wearing a lore ring can use legend lore and stone tell each once per week by speaking a command word, and can find magic traps created by glyphs, runes, sigils, and symbols with a successful Search check, just as a rogue does.

Strong divination; CL 12th; Forge Ring, find traps, legend lore, stone tell; Price 23,250 gp.

SPELL-BATTLE

This potent ring is typically made of gold and set with small spheres of silver.

The wearer becomes cognizant of all spellcasting that occurs within 60 feet, and she can identify the spell being cast (even if she can't see its casting or effect) on a successful Spellcraft check (DC 15 + spell level).

If this identification succeeds, the wearer can choose once per day to have the ring counterspell (without readying a counterspell action or making a dispel check) or can change the target or the point of effect of the spell to any target or point within 60 feet (including herself if she chooses to redirect a potentially beneficial spell).

If the wearer chooses an illegal target (an animal for a humanoid-affecting spell, for instance, or a point of effect outside the spell's range as measured from the original caster), the spell functions normally and the redirection is wasted.

If the wearer ends up in the area of a retargeted spell, she experiences the effect of the spell as normal.

Strong divination; CL 14th; Forge Ring, detect magic, dispel magic, spell turning, creator must have 10 ranks in Spellcraft; Price 67,600 gp.

THEURGY

Often carved from a single piece of polished coral, a ring of theurgy functions differently depending on which type of arcane spellcaster wears it.

For wizards and other characters who prepare spells, the ring serves as a small and quickly accessible spellbook capable of storing up to three spells of any level the wearer can cast.

As a move action, the wearer can transfer any spell in the ring to an empty spell slot of the appropriate level, with the spell instantly ready to be cast as if previously prepared.

The wearer can't transfer a spell from a ring of theurgy to an expended spell slot, but only to a spell slot that he deliberately left empty in order to prepare a spell, providing some degree of spontaneity in the spells he has available even though he gains no additional spells per day.

For example, a 5th-level wizard might store fireball, dispel magic, and fly in the ring, then leave one 3rd-level spell slot open to be used for offense, defense, or escape as necessary. Sorcerers and other characters who don't prepare spells gain a different benefit from a ring of theurgy.

Each spell stored in the ring is usable as an additional spell known as long as the character has an unused spell slot of the appropriate level.

The stored spell disappears from the ring when cast, but the wearer can then have spells not on her spell list cast into the ring to be used again.

For example, a bard who doesn't have invisibility sphere on her list of spells known could have the spell put into a ring of theurgy by her party's wizard so that both characters have the spell available if needed.

Any material components or XP components are provided at the time the spell is cast from the ring, not at the time it is put into the ring to be stored for later retrieval.

Moderate universal; CL 12th; Forge Ring, Rary's mnemonic enhancer; Price 20,000 gp.

COMPLETE CHAMPION (3.5)

BEAST

Price (Item Level): 8,000 gp (11th)

Body Slot: Rings

Caster Level: 10th.

Aura: Moderate (DC 20); conjuration.

Activation: —

Weight: —

This tiny ring is carved of smooth wood, and engravings of ivy run along its length.

Whenever you cast a summon nature's ally spell (whether normally or spontaneously), you can treat it as though it were one level higher than it is.

For instance, if you cast summon nature's ally III (or sacrifice a 3rd-level druid spell to spontaneously cast it), you can treat it as if you had cast summon nature's ally IV instead.

However, you cannot use a ring of the beast to cast a summon nature's ally spell of a level higher than you can normally cast (in the class that allows you to cast the summon nature's ally spell).

This ring continues to function even while you are using wild shape.

The ring of the beast is part of a set collectively known as the trappings of the beast.

When you wear it along with armor of the beast (page 135) and a mantle of the beast (see above), you gain additional abilities, as noted in the armor of the beast description.

Cost to Create: 4,000 gp, 320 XP, 8 days.

Prerequisites: Forge Ring, Heighten Spell, summon nature's ally I, wild shape.

COMPLETE MAGE (3.5)

ARCANE SUPREMACY

This simple but potent ring enables you to more effectively penetrate your foe's spell resistance.

Description: This ornate silver ring resembles a serpentine dragon consuming its own tail, in the classic ouroboros position.

The band feels slightly warm to the touch, and the dragon's eyes gleam brightly any time the wearer casts a spell.

Activation: A ring of arcane supremacy requires a free action to activate.

You must declare that you are using the ring's power before the DM declares whether your caster level check (see Effect, below) results in success or failure.

It functions up to three times per day, but not more than once per round.

Effect: The ring grants its wearer the ability to reroll a caster level check made to overcome spell resistance with an arcane spell or invocation.

You must take the result of the reroll, even if it's worse than the original roll.

Aura/Caster Level: Faint abjuration. CL 3rd.

Construction: Forge Ring, true casting (page 121), 6,000 gp, 480 XP, 12 days.

Price: 12,000 gp.

DEADWALKER

This ring empowers your created undead.

Description: A deadwalker's ring is carved from humanoid bone.

It always feels faintly cold to the touch.

Whenever the ring is active, it rotates around the wearer's finger of its own accord and gives off faint creaking sounds, like the clacking of the walking dead.

Activation: You must wear a deadwalker's ring for at least 24 consecutive hours in order for it to function.

It requires no specific action to activate.

Instead, it automatically functions each time you cast a spell that creates undead, up to a maximum of three times per day.

Effect: While you wear the ring, any undead you create by a spell (such as animate dead) gain +2 hit points per HD.

This benefit doesn't stack with the extra hit points granted by the desecrate spell.

Aura/Caster Level: Moderate necromancy. CL 7th.

Construction: Forge Ring, animate dead or desecrate, 2,000 gp, 160 XP, 4 days.

Price: 4,000 gp.

ENDURING ARCANA

Well loved by casters who expect to face rivals with similar abilities, a ring of enduring arcana renders your spells more resistant to dispelling.

Description: This ring is actually a webwork lattice of gold and mithral that takes up most of the length of the finger. (It is jointed in the middle to allow full movement).

The lattice seems to shift and flow any time the wearer casts a spell.

Activation: A ring of enduring arcana remains active constantly, as long as it is worn.

When first donned, however, it requires 24 hours to acclimate to the wearer before it functions.

Effect: You are considered four levels higher than your actual caster level whenever another character attempts to dispel or counter one of your spells.

Aura/Caster Level: Moderate abjuration. CL 9th.

Construction: Forge Ring, dispel magic, 3,000 gp, 240 XP, 6 days.

Price: 6,000 gp.

INSTANT ESCAPE

This potent item allows the wearer to avoid major destructive magic, as well as fooling the enemy into believing they have wounded or slain him.

Description: This ring is constructed of thin wires—gold and black iron—wound around each other over and over into a nearly solid band.

When activated, and for 1d4 rounds thereafter, the ring feels as though it is writhing against the skin, as if the wires were constantly sliding over and through each other.

Activation: A ring of instant escape requires an immediate action to activate.

The ring functions only once per day and resets at midnight.

Effect: When you are subject to a harmful effect that allows a Reflex save to reduce or negate it (such as a fireball or a dragon's breath), you can activate a ring of instant escape to be instantly transported elsewhere, as per dimension door (PH 221), although the range is limited to 40 feet.

This occurs just before the effect resolves, so you are unaffected by it (assuming your destination is outside the area of the effect).

Aura/Caster Level: Moderate conjuration. CL 7th. (A ring of elusive escape, described below, also radiates moderate illusion).

Construction: Forge Ring, dimension door, 9,000 gp, 720 XP, 18 days.

Variants: The rare ring of elusive escape also turns you invisible (as the invisibility spell) and leaves behind a major image (PH 254) of yourself.

Both of these effects last for 1 round.

The image looks as though it has taken damage from the harmful effect and reacts appropriately to further attacks as well, as though you were concentrating on it for the length of its duration.

(Requires invisibility and major image, +7,000 gp, +560 XP, +14 days).

Price: 18,000 gp (instant escape), 32,000 gp (elusive escape).

MIGHTY SUMMONS

This ring enhances summoned creatures, making them as tough as possible, but at the cost of a reduced “life span”.

Description: A ring of mighty summons is an ornate gold band, carved with tiny images of many creatures and the representations of all four elements.

Its surface is rough to the touch.

Whenever the ring is active, the images carved on it seem to twist and move as though alive, and the item smells faintly of ozone.

Activation: A ring of mighty summons requires no specific action to activate, merely an act of will made as part of casting a summoning spell.

It functions up to three times per day.

Effect: When you use this ring while casting a summoning spell, any creature you summon with the spell has maximum hit points per Hit Die.

However, the duration of the spell is halved (to a minimum of 1 round).

Aura/Caster Level: Moderate conjuration. CL 6th.

Construction: Forge Ring, Augment Summoning, Spell Focus (conjuration), summon monster III or summon natures ally III, 7,000 gp, 560 XP, 14 days.

Price: 14,000 gp.

SPELLGUARD

This pair of rings allows a spellcaster to designate an ally temporarily immune to his magic.

Description: Both of a pair of spellguard rings are ornate bands; one is forged of gold, the other of bronze.

Draconic writing around the interior of both rings translates roughly as “Let no friend of mine ever feel the sting of my magic”.

Activation: A spellcaster activates the power of spellguard rings as a free action in conjunction with casting a spell. They function up to three times per day.

Effect: In order for them to function, both spellguard rings must be worn—the gold ring by a spellcaster, the bronze one by anyone else.

When the rings are activated, the wearer of the bronze ring becomes immune to any spell cast by the wearer of the gold ring, as long as that spell is cast within 1 round.

The rings can be useful for pulling off certain tactical maneuvers, such as letting the spellcaster lob a fireball into the midst of a horde of orcs, even though his paladin companion stands right in the center of them.

The construction costs and price below are for a pair of matched rings.

If one ring of a pair is lost or destroyed, the other becomes useless.

Aura/Caster Level: Moderate abjuration. CL 7th.

Construction: Forge Ring, Otiluke's suppressing field (page 112), 2,000 gp, 160 XP, 4 days.

Price: 4,000 gp.

DRACONOMICON (3.5)

CLAWS OF THE RIPPER

These metal, scythe-like blades are designed to fit over one set of a dragon's claws, and they resize to fit any dragon of Large size or bigger.

A dragon wearing claws of the ripper cannot also make use of a magic ring on that claw.

When worn, claws of the ripper increase the damage dealt by the dragon's claws on a critical hit, giving them a  $\times 4$  multiplier (like that of a scythe).

Faint transmutation; CL 6th; Craft Ring; Price 2,000 gp; Weight 10 lb.

DRAGON FRIENDSHIP

This ring is carved to look like a dragon coiled around the wearer's finger.

The wearer gains a +5 enhancement bonus on Diplomacy checks made to influence the attitude of dragons.

No dragon will voluntarily attack or otherwise attempt to harm the wearer.

Once per month, the wearer can use a suggestion effect on a dragon (heightened to 9th level; Will DC 23 negates).

If the wearer attacks a dragon in any way (including by the use of the ring's suggestion power), this ring loses its powers for 24 hours.

(The suggestion effect can continue after the ring stops working).

Strong enchantment; CL 17th; Forge Ring, Heighten Spell, dominate monster, suggestion; Price 28,750 gp.

DRAGONSHAPE

This ring is shaped like a hollowed dragon's claw. It is slipped over the length of the wearer's finger, but doesn't restrict manual dexterity in any way. Once per day, the wearer can activate the ring (as a standard action) to polymorph into a young red dragon (if the wearer is evil) or a young gold dragon (if the wearer is good). This effect functions as the polymorph spell, except that the duration is 1 hour. The effect can be dismissed by the wearer as a standard action. Moderate transmutation; CL 7th; Forge Ring, polymorph; Price 23,000 gp.

DRAGON MAGIC (3.5)

DRACONIC ZEAL

A dragon can lash out at more than one enemy with its claws, teeth, wings, and tail. A lesser ring of draconic zeal grants its wearer a similar ability to attack multiple foes. Description: A lesser ring of draconic zeal is made of ivory carved to resemble hundreds of interlocking dragon scales. When the ring's power is activated, it emits a roar like that of a fearsome dragon. Activation: Once per day, the wearer can invoke the power of the ring (a swift action). Effect: Immediately after activating the ring, the wearer can make one melee attack using his highest base attack bonus against each of three different enemies within reach (a full-round action). This effect applies only during the round in which the ring is activated. If the wearer activates the ring but can't take a full-round action during that round, the effect is wasted. Aura/Caster level: Faint transmutation; CL 10th. Variant: A greater ring of draconic zeal functions lesser ring, except that it allows the wearer to attack up to six adjacent enemies within reach. Construction: Forge Ring, haste, 1,000 gp (or 3,000 gp for greater ring), 80 XP (or 240 XP for greater ring), 2 days (or 6 days for greater ring). Weight: —. Price: 2,000 gp (lesser) or 6,000 gp (greater).

DRAGONS OF FAERÛN (3.5)

DRACONIC DECEPTION

This ring is a favored item by dragons that employ deception and trickery as their weapons of choice. It allows them to simulate the appearances and powers of other dragons.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about rings of draconic deception by making Knowledge (arcana) checks.

DC 20: Claugiyliamatar, an ancient green dragon in the Kryptgarden Forest, created the prototype of this ring so that she could assume the forms of other dragons, for a variety of deceptive purposes.

DC 30: Claugiyliamatar used the ring to pose as a silver dragon and offer to aid the Brokengulf family in ridding their grazing lands of a rampaging green (who was actually Claugiyliamatar herself).

In the form of the silver, she not only decimated the Brokengulf family, but also got a Waterdhavian strike force to slay a young male green dragon with designs on her territory.

Description: These slender silver rings are engraved with long draconic forms.

Activation: A ring of draconic deception has two distinct functions.

Changing appearance to look like another dragon is a standard action for the ring wearer.

Changing the energy type and shape of a breath weapon is part of the action used for the breath weapon.

Effect: At will, this ring allows its wearer to alter her appearance to look like a dragon of another kind.

In addition, three times per day the ring allows its wearer to change the shape and energy type of her own breath weapon (though the damage and save DC remain the same).

Thus, an adult red dragon whose breath weapon is normally a 14d10 cone of fire could use this ability to change her breath weapon to a 14d10 line of lightning.

Only creatures of the dragon type can use this ring.

Moderate illusion and transmutation; CL 7th; Forge Ring, disguise self, breath weapon substitution, creator must have the Shape Breath feat; Price 64,200 gp; Cost 32,100 gp + 2,568 XP.

DRAGONS

These brass rings look like snakes or dragons biting their own tails.

They are created by the Cult of the Dragon and are greatly prized by those in its higher organizational tiers.

The Cult has made about seventy of these rings.

The wearer can use the following abilities.

- Verbally (as with tongues) or telepathically (as with Rary's telepathic bond) communicate with any dragon within line of sight.

- Produce a silent image of a dragon once per day within 60 feet.

The dragon resembles any dragon the wearer has personally seen.

(This ability is typically used as a recognition symbol or a diversion).

Transmit a call to a named dracolich or evil dragon.

The target knows the wearer's location and can home in on the call if he chooses to respond, although no compulsion to do so exists.

The call remains active until the ring is removed, the wearer dismisses the call, or the wearer dies.

Strong divination, evocation, and illusion; CL 15th; Forge Ring, detect thoughts, sending, silent image, tongues; Price 25,000 gp.

SCATTERGLOOM

This slim silver band is infused with shadow essence. It allows its bearer to cast scattergloom once per day. Faint evocation; CL 5th; Forge Ring, shadow walk; Price 5,400 gp.

SHADOWS

This slim ebony band is made of a strange form of black platinum infused with shadow essence. In the hands of any character other than an assassin or shadowdancer, it functions as a ring of see invisibility. When worn by an assassin or shadowdancer, the ring of shadows also allows its bearer to shadow walk twice per day and cast ethereal jaunt once per day. Strong transmutation and illusion; CL 13th; Forge Ring, ethereal jaunt, see invisibility, shadow walk; Price 90,000 gp.

DUNGEON MASTER'S GUIDE 3.0 (3.0)

ANIMAL FRIENDSHIP

On command, this ring affects an animal as if the wearer had cast animal friendship.
The ring wearer can befriend 12 HD worth of animals (see the spell description).
If animal friendship is already on the character's spell list, this ring allows the character to befriend additional animals.
Caster Level: 6th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, animal friendship;
Market Price: 9,500 gp.

BLINKING

On command, this ring makes the wearer blink, as with the blink spell.
Caster level: 7th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, blink; Market Price: 30,000 gp.

CHAMELEON POWER

As a free action, the wearer of this ring can gain the ability to magically blend in with the surroundings.
This adds a +15 bonus to her Hide checks.
As a standard action, she can also command the ring to utilize the spell change self as often as she wants.
Caster Level: 3rd; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, change self, invisibility; Market Price: 12,000 gp.

CLIMBING

This ring is actually a magic leather cord that ties around a finger.
It continually grants the wearer a +10 competence bonus to Climb checks.
Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, creator must have 5 ranks of the Climb skill; Market Price: 2,000 gp.

COUNTERSPELLS

This ring might seem to be a ring of spell storing upon first examination.
However, while it allows a single spell of 1st through 6th level to be cast into it, that spell cannot be cast out of it again.
Instead, should that spell ever be cast upon the wearer, the spell is immediately countered, as a counterspell action, requiring no action (or even knowledge) on the wearer's part.
Once so used, the spell cast within the ring is gone.
A new spell (or the same one as before) may be placed in it again.
Caster Level: 11th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, spell turning;
Market Price: 4,000 gp.

DJINNI CALLING

One of the many rings of fable, this "genie" ring is most useful indeed.
It serves as a special gate by means of which a specific djinni can be called from the Elemental Plane of Air.
When the ring is rubbed, the call goes out, and the djinni appears on the next round.
The djinni faithfully obeys and serves the wearer of the ring, but never for more than 1 hour per day.
If the djinni of the ring is ever killed, the ring becomes nonmagical and worthless.
See the Monster Manual for details of a djinni's abilities.
Caster Level: 17th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, gate; Market Price: 125,000 gp.

ELEMENTAL COMMAND

All four types of elemental command rings are very powerful. Each appears to be nothing more than a lesser magic ring until fully activated (see below), but each has certain other powers as well as the following common properties.
• Elementals of the plane to which the ring is attuned can't attack the wearer, or even approach within 5 feet of him.
If the wearer desires, he may forego this protection and instead attempt to charm the elemental (as charm monster, Will save DC 17).

If the charm attempt fails, however, absolute protection is lost and no further attempt at charming can be made.
• Creatures from the plane to which the ring is attuned who attack the wearer suffer a -1 penalty to their attack rolls.
The ring wearer makes applicable saving throws from the extraplanar creature's attacks with a +2 resistance bonus.
He gains a +4 morale bonus to all attacks against such creatures.

Any weapon he uses bypasses the damage reduction of such creatures, regardless of any qualities the weapon may or may not have.

• The wearer of the ring is able to converse with creatures from the plane to which his ring is attuned.
These creatures recognize that he wears the ring.
They show a healthy respect for the wearer if alignments are similar.

If alignments are opposed, creatures fear the wearer if he is strong.

If he is weak, they hate and desire to slay him.
Fear, hatred, and respect are determined by the DM.

• The possessor of a ring of elemental command suffers a saving throw penalty as follows:

Element	Saving Throw Penalty
Air	-2 against earth-based effects
Earth	-2 against air- or electricity-based effects
Fire	-2 against water- or cold-based effects
Water	-2 against fire-based effects

In addition to the powers described above, each specific ring gives its wearer the following abilities according to its type:

Ring of Elemental Command (Air):

- Feather fall (unlimited use, wearer only)
- Resist elements (electricity) (unlimited use, wearer only)
- Gust of wind (twice per day)

- Wind wall (unlimited use)
- Air walk (once per day, wearer only)
- Chain lightning (once per week)

The ring appears to be a ring of feather fall until a certain condition is met, such as having the ring blessed, single-handedly slaying an air elemental, or whatever the DM determines necessary to activate its full potential. It must be reactivated each time a new wearer acquires it.

ELEMENTAL RESISTANCE, MINOR

This reddish iron ring continually protects the wearer from damage from one type of energy—fire, cold, electricity, acid, or sonic.

When the wearer would normally take such damage, subtract 15 points of damage per round from the total to account for the ring's effect.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, protection from elements; Market Price: 16,000 gp.

ELEMENTAL RESISTANCE, MAJOR

This reddish iron ring continually protects the wearer from even greater damage from one type of energy—fire, cold, electricity, acid, or sonic.

When the wearer would normally take such damage, subtract 30 points of damage per round from the amount before applying.

This amount is enough to survive even on the Elemental Plane corresponding to the energy type (if applicable), but it still won't completely absorb the breath of a nasty dragon or completely negate a powerful fireball.

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, protection from elements; Market Price: 24,000 gp.

EVASION

This ring continually grants the wearer extreme nimbleness, allowing her to avoid damage as if she had the evasion ability.

Whenever she makes a Reflex saving throw to determine whether she takes half damage from an attack, a successful save results in no damage.

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, jump; Market Price: 25,000 gp.

FEATHER FALLING

This ring is crafted with a feather pattern all around its edge.

It acts exactly like a feather fall spell, activated immediately if the wearer falls more than 3 feet.

Caster Level: 1st; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, feather fall; Market Price: 2,200 gp.

FORCE SHIELD

An iron band, this simple ring generates a large shield-sized (and shield-shaped) wall of force that stays with the ring and can be wielded by the wearer as if it were a large shield (+2 AC).

This special creation, since it can be activated and deactivated at will (a free action), has no armor check penalty or arcane spell failure chance.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, wall of force; Market Price: 8,500 gp.

FREEDOM OF MOVEMENT

This gold ring allows the wearer to act as if continually under the effect of a freedom of movement spell.

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, freedom of movement; Market Price: 40,000 gp.

FRIEND SHIELD

These curious rings always comes in pairs.

A friend shield ring without its mate is useless.

Either wearer of one of a pair of the rings can, at any time, command his or her ring to cast a shield other spell with the wearer of the mated ring as the recipient.

There is no range limitation on this effect.

Caster Level: 10th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, shield other; Market Price: 50,000 gp (for a pair).

INVISIBILITY

By activating this simple silver ring, the wearer can become invisible, as the spell.

Caster Level: 3rd; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, invisibility; Market Price: 20,000 gp.

JUMPING

This ring continually allows the wearer to leap about as if a jump spell had been cast upon him, adding a +30 bonus to all his Jump checks and eliminating his usual maximum distances.

Caster Level: 1st; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, jump; Market Price: 2,000 gp.

MIND SHIELDING

This ring is usually of fine workmanship and wrought from heavy gold.

The wearer is continually immune to detect thoughts, discern lies, and any attempt to magically discern her alignment.

Caster Level: 3rd; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, nondetection; Market Price: 8,000 gp.

PROTECTION

This ring offers continual magical protection in the form of a deflection bonus of +1 to +5 to AC.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, shield of faith, caster must be of a level three times that of the bonus of the ring; Market Price: 2,000 gp (ring +1); 8,000 gp (ring +2); 18,000 gp (ring +3); 32,000 gp (ring +4); or 50,000 gp (ring +5).

RAM

The ring of the ram is an ornate ring forged of hard metal, usually iron or an iron alloy.

It has the head of a ram (or a buck goat) as its device.

The wearer can command the ring to give forth a ram-like force, manifested by a vaguely discernible shape that resembles the head of a ram or a goat.

This force strikes a single target, dealing 1d6 points of damage if 1 charge is expended, 2d6 points if 2 charges are used, or 3d6 points if 3 charges (the maximum) are used. Treat this as a ranged attack with a 50-foot maximum range and no penalties for distance.

The ring is quite useful for knocking opponents off parapets or ledges, among other things.

The force of the blow is considerable, and those struck by the ring are subject to a bull rush if within 30 feet of the ring-wearer.

(The ram has Strength 25 and is Large).

The ram gains a +1 bonus to the bull rush attempt if 2 charges are expended, or +2 if 3 charges are expended. In addition to its attack mode, the ring of the ram also has the power to open doors as if it were a character with Strength 25.

If 2 charges are expended, the effect is equivalent to a character with Strength 27.

If 3 charges are expended, the effect is that of a character with Strength 29.

A newly created ring has 50 charges.

When all the charges are expended, the ring becomes a nonmagical item.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, bull's strength, telekinesis; Market Price: 8,600 gp.

REGENERATION

This white gold ring continually allows a living wearer to heal 1 point of damage per level every hour rather than every day.

(This ability cannot be aided by the Heal skill).

Subdual damage heals at a rate of 1 point of damage per level every 5 minutes.

If the wearer loses a limb, an organ, or any other body part while wearing this ring, the ring regenerates it like the spell. In either case, only damage taken while wearing the ring is regenerated.

Caster Level: 15th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, regenerate; Market Price: 90,000 gp.

SHOOTING STARS

This ring has two modes of operation—at night and underground—both of which work only in relative darkness.

During the night under the open sky, the ring of shooting stars can perform the following functions on command.

- Dancing lights (once per hour)
- Light (twice per night)
- Ball lightning (special, once per night)
- Shooting stars (special, three per week)

The first special function, ball lightning, releases one to four balls of lightning (ring wearer's choice).

These glowing globes resemble dancing lights, and the ring wearer controls them in the same fashion (see the dancing lights spell description in the Player's Handbook).

The spheres have a 120-foot range and a duration of 4 rounds.

They can be moved at 120 feet per round.

Each sphere is about 3 feet in diameter, and any creature who comes within 5 feet of one causes its charge to dissipate, taking electricity damage in the process according to the number of balls created.

Number of Balls	Damage per Ball
4 lightning balls	1d6 points of damage each
3 lightning balls	2d6 points of damage each
2 lightning balls	3d6 points of damage each
1 lightning ball	4d6 points of damage

Once the ball lightning function is activated, the balls can be released at any time before the sun rises.

(Multiple balls can be released in the same round).

The second special function, shooting stars, produces glowing projectiles with fiery trails, much like a meteor swarm.

Three shooting stars can be released from the ring each week, simultaneously or one at a time.

They impact for 12 points of damage and spread (as a fireball) in a 5-foot-radius sphere for 24 points of fire damage.

Any creature struck by a shooting star takes full damage from impact plus full damage from the spread.

Creatures not struck but within the spread ignore the impact damage and take only half damage from the fire spread on a successful Reflex save (DC 13).

Range is 70 feet, at the end of which the shooting star explodes, unless it strikes a creature or object before that.

A shooting star always follows a straight line, and any creature in its path must make a save or be hit by the projectile, unless a Reflex save (DC 13) is made.

Indoors at night, or underground, the ring of shooting stars has the following properties.

- Faerie fire (twice per day)
- Spark shower (special, once per day)

The spark shower is a flying cloud of sizzling purple sparks that fan out from the ring for a distance of 20 feet in an arc 10 feet wide.

Creatures within this area take 2d8 points of damage each if not wearing metal armor or carrying a metal weapon.

Those wearing metal armor and/or carrying a metal weapon take 4d8 points of damage.

Caster Level: 12th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, light, faerie fire, lightning bolt, meteor swarm; Market Price: 50,000 gp.

SPELL STORING

A ring of spell storing contains up to ten levels of spells that the wearer can cast.

Each spell has a caster level equal to the minimum level needed to cast that spell.

As with a wand (see the Wands section later in this chapter), the user need not provide any material components or focus, or pay an XP cost to cast the spell, and there is no arcane spell failure chance for wearing armor (since the ring user need not gesture). For a randomly generated ring, treat it as a scroll to determine what spells are stored in it (see the Scrolls section later in this chapter). If you roll a spell that would put the ring over the ten-level limit, ignore that roll; the ring has no more spells in it. (Not every newly discovered ring need be fully charged).

A spellcaster can cast any spells into the ring, so long as the total spell levels do not add up to more than ten.

A wizard could cast two fireball spells and a stoneskin spell into the ring (3 + 3 + 4 = 10).

She could then give the ring to a druid, who casts the stoneskin spell from the ring and then puts four calm animal spells into the ring.

The druid could give the ring to a barbarian, who could use all the spells but could not replace any.

The ring magically imparts to the wearer the names of all spells currently stored within it.

Caster Level: Varies (minimum needed to cast each stored spell); Prerequisites: Forge Ring, imbue with spell ability; Market Price: 90,000 gp.

SPELL TURNING

On command, this simple platinum band automatically reflects spells cast at the wearer, exactly as if spell turning had been cast upon the wearer.

Caster Level: 15th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, spell turning; Market Price: 150,000 gp.

SUSTENANCE

This ring continually provides its wearer with life-sustaining nourishment.

The ring also refreshes the body and mind, so that its wearer needs only sleep 2 hours per day to gain the benefit of 8 hours of sleep.

The ring must be worn for a full week before it begins to work.

If it is removed, the owner must wear it for another week to reattune it to himself.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, create food and water; Market Price: 2,500 gp.

SWIMMING

This silver ring has a wave pattern etched into the band.

It continually grants the wearer a +10 competence bonus to Swim checks.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, creator must have 5 ranks of the Swim skill; Market Price: 2,300 gp.

TELEKINESIS

This ring allows the caster to use the spell telekinesis on command.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, telekinesis; Market Price: 75,000 gp.

THREE WISHES

This ring is set with three rubies.

Each ruby stores a wish spell, activated by the ring.

When a wish is used, that ruby disappears.

For a randomly generated ring, roll 1d3 to determine the remaining number of rubies.

When all the wishes are used, the ring becomes a nonmagical item.

Caster Level: 20th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, wish or miracle; Market Price: 97,950 gp; Cost to Create: 11,475 gp + 15,918 XP.

WARMTH

This ring is brass and set with a single red stone.

It continually keeps the wearer comfortably warm, allowing her to withstand cold weather and cold damage as if she had endure elements (cold) cast upon her (negating 5 points of cold damage per round).

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, endure elements; Market Price: 2,100 gp.

WATER WALKING

This ring, set with an opal, allows the wearer to continually utilize the effects of the spell water walk.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, water walk; Market Price: 15,000 gp.

WIZARDRY

This special ring come in four types (ring of wizardry I, ring of wizardry II, ring of wizardry III, and ring of wizardry IV), all of them useful only to arcane spellcasters.

The wearer's arcane spells per day are doubled for one specific spell level.

A ring of wizardry I doubles 1st-level spells, a ring of wizardry II doubles 2nd-level spells, a ring of wizardry III doubles 3rd-level spells, and a ring of wizardry IV doubles 4th-level spells. Bonus spells from high ability scores or school specialization are not doubled.

Caster Level: 11th (wizardry I), 14th (wizardry II), 17th (wizardry III), or 20th (wizardry IV); Prerequisites: Forge Ring, limited wish (wizardry I–wizardry IV); Market Price: 20,000 gp (wizardry I), 40,000 gp (wizardry II), 70,000 gp (wizardry III), or 100,000 gp (wizardry IV).

X-RAY VISION

On command, this ring gives its possessor the ability to see into and through solid matter.

Vision range is 20 feet, with the viewer seeing as if he were looking at something in normal light even if there is no illumination.

(For example, if the wearer looks into a locked chest, he can see inside even if there's no light within).

X-ray vision can penetrate 20 feet of cloth, wood, or similar animal or vegetable material.

It can see through up to 10 feet of stone or some metals.

Some metals can't be penetrated at all.

Substance Scanned	Thickness Penetrated per Round of X-Raying	Maximum Thickness
	Organic matter (animal)	4ft.
Organic matter (vegetable)	2 1/2 ft.	20ft.
Stone	1 ft.	10ft.
Iron, steel, copper, brass, etc.	1 in.	10 in.
Lead, gold, platinum	Cannot penetrate	—

It's possible to scan an area of up to 100 square feet during 1 round.

For example, during 1 round the wearer of the ring could scan an area of stone 10 feet wide and 10 feet high.

Alternatively, he could scan an area 5 feet wide and 20 feet high.

Secret compartments, drawers, recesses, and doors are 90% likely to be located by X-ray vision scanning.

Using the ring is physically exhausting, causing the wearer 1 point of temporary Constitution damage per minute after the first 10 minutes of use in a single day.

Caster Level: 6th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, true seeing; Market Price: 25,000 gp.

Faint transmutation; CL 5th; Forge Ring, creator must have 10 ranks in the Climb skill; Price 10,000 gp.

COUNTERSPELLS

This ring might seem to be a ring of spell storing upon first examination.

However, while it allows a single spell of 1st through 6th level to be cast into it, that spell cannot be cast out of the ring again.

Instead, should that spell ever be cast upon the wearer, the spell is immediately countered, as a counterspell action, requiring no action (or even knowledge) on the wearer's part.

Once so used, the spell cast within the ring is gone.

A new spell (or the same one as before) may be placed in it again.

Moderate evocation; CL 11th; Forge Ring, imbue with spell ability; Price 4,000 gp.

DJINNI CALLING

One of the many rings of fable, this "genie" ring is most useful indeed.

It serves as a special gate by means of which a specific djinni can be called from the Elemental Plane of Air.

When the ring is rubbed (a standard action), the call goes out, and the djinni appears on the next round.

The djinni faithfully obeys and serves the wearer of the ring, but never for more than 1 hour per day.

If the djinni of the ring is ever killed, the ring becomes nonmagical and worthless.

See the Monster Manual for details of a djinni's abilities.

Strong conjuration; CL 17th; Forge Ring, gate; Price 125,000 gp.

ELEMENTAL COMMAND

All four kinds of elemental command rings are very powerful. Each appears to be nothing more than a lesser magic ring until fully activated (see below), but each has certain other powers as well as the following common properties.

Elementals of the plane to which the ring is attuned can't attack the wearer, or even approach within 5 feet of him.

If the wearer desires, he may forego this protection and instead attempt to charm the elemental (as charm monster, Will DC 17 negates).

If the charm attempt fails, however, absolute protection is lost and no further attempt at charming can be made. Creatures from the plane to which the ring is attuned who attack the wearer take a  $-1$  penalty on their attack rolls. The ring wearer makes applicable saving throws from the extraplanar creature's attacks with a  $+2$  resistance bonus. He gains a  $+4$  morale bonus on all attack rolls against such creatures.

Any weapon he uses bypasses the damage reduction of such creatures, regardless of any qualities the weapon may or may not have.

The wearer of the ring is able to converse with creatures from the plane to which his ring is attuned.

These creatures recognize that he wears the ring.

They show a healthy respect for the wearer if alignments are similar.

If alignments are opposed, creatures fear the wearer if he is strong.

If he is weak, they hate and desire to slay him.

Fear, hatred, and respect are determined by the DM.

The possessor of a ring of elemental command takes a saving throw penalty as follows:

Element	Saving Throw Penalty
Air	$-2$ against earth-based effects
Earth	$-2$ against air- or electricity-based effects
Fire	$-2$ against water- or cold-based effects
Water	$-2$ against fire-based effects

In addition to the powers described above, each specific ring gives its wearer the following abilities according to its kind.

Ring of Elemental Command (Air)

- Feather fall (unlimited use, wearer only)
- Resist energy (electricity) (unlimited use, wearer only)
- Gust of wind (twice per day)
- Wind wall (unlimited use)
- Air walk (once per day, wearer only)
- Chain lightning (once per week) The ring appears to be a ring of feather falling until a certain condition is met, such as having the ring immersed in holy water, single-handedly slaying an air elemental, or whatever the DM determines necessary to activate its full potential.

It must be reactivated each time a new wearer acquires it.

Ring of Elemental Command (Earth)

- Meld into stone (unlimited use, wearer only)
- Soften earth or stone (unlimited use)

A major ring of energy resistance grants 20 points of resistance. A greater ring of energy resistance grants 30 points of resistance.

Faint (minor or major) or moderate (greater) abjuration; CL 3rd (minor), 7th (major), or 11th (greater); Forge Ring, resist energy; Price 12,000 gp (minor), 28,000 gp (major), 44,000 gp (greater).

Strong conjuration; CL 15th; Forge Ring, regenerate; Price 90,000 gp.

SHOOTING STARS

This ring has two modes of operation, one for being in shadowy darkness or outdoors at night and a second one when the wearer is underground or indoors at night. During the night under the open sky or in areas of shadow or darkness, the ring of shooting stars can perform the following functions on command.

- Dancing lights (once per hour)
- Light (twice per night)
- Ball lightning (special, once per night)
- Shooting stars (special, three per week) The first special function, ball lightning, releases one to four balls of lightning (ring wearer's choice).

Each sphere is about 3 feet in diameter, and any creature who comes within 5 feet of one causes its charge to dissipate, taking electricity damage in the process according to the number of balls created.

Number of Balls	Damage per Ball
4 lightning balls	1d6 points of damage each
3 lightning balls	2d6 points of damage each
2 lightning balls	3d6 points of damage each
1 lightning ball	4d6 points of damage

Once the ball lightning function is activated, the balls can be released at any time before the sun rises.

(Multiple balls can be released in the same round).

The second special function produces three shooting stars that can be released from the ring each week, simultaneously or one at a time.

They impact for 12 points of damage and spread (as a fireball) in a 5-foot-radius sphere for 24 points of fire damage.

Any creature struck by a shooting star takes full damage from impact plus full fire damage from the spread unless it makes a DC 13 Reflex save.

Creatures not struck but within the spread ignore the impact damage and take only half damage from the fire spread on a successful DC 13 Reflex save.

Range is 70 feet, at the end of which the shooting star explodes, unless it strikes a creature or object before that. A shooting star always follows a straight line, and any creature in its path must make a save or be hit by the projectile.

Indoors at night, or underground, the ring of shooting stars has the following properties.

- Faerie fire (twice per day)
- Spark shower (special, once per day) The spark shower is a flying cloud of sizzling purple sparks that fan out from the ring for a distance of 20 feet in an arc 10 feet wide. Creatures within this area take 2d8 points of damage each if not wearing metal armor or carrying a metal weapon. Those wearing metal armor and/or carrying a metal weapon take 4d8 points of damage. Strong evocation; CL 12th; Forge Ring, light, faerie fire, fireball, lightning bolt; Price 50,000 gp.

SPELL STORING, MINOR

A minor ring of spell storing contains up to three levels of spells that the wearer can cast.

Each spell has a caster level equal to the minimum level needed to cast that spell.

The user need not provide any material components or focus, or pay an XP cost to cast the spell, and there is no arcane spell failure chance for wearing armor (because the ring wearer need not gesture).

The activation time for the ring is same as the casting time for the relevant spell, with a minimum of 1 standard action. For a randomly generated ring, treat it as a scroll to determine what spells are stored in it (see the Scrolls section later in this chapter).

If you roll a spell that would put the ring over the three-level limit, ignore that roll; the ring has no more spells in it. (Not every newly discovered ring need be fully charged).

A spellcaster can cast any spells into the ring, so long as the total spell levels do not add up to more than three.

Metamagic versions of spells take up storage space equal to their spell level modified by the metamagic feat.

A spellcaster can use a scroll to put a spell into the minor ring of spell storing.

A wizard could cast two magic missile spells and a mage armor spell into the ring (1 + 1 + 1 = 3).

She could then give the ring to a druid, who casts the mage armor spell from the ring and then puts a calm animal spell into the ring.

The druid could give the ring to a barbarian, who could use all the spells but could not replace any.

The ring magically imparts to the wearer the names of all spells currently stored within it.

Faint evocation; CL 5th; Forge Ring, imbue with spell ability; Price 18,000 gp.

SPELL STORING

As the minor ring of spell storing, except it holds up to five levels of spells.

Strong evocation; CL 17th; Forge Ring, imbue with spell ability; Price 200,000 gp.

SPELL TURNING

Up to three times per day on command, this simple platinum band automatically reflects the next nine levels of spells cast at the wearer, exactly as if spell turning had been cast upon the wearer.

Strong abjuration; CL 13th; Forge Ring, spell turning; Price 98,280 gp.

SUSTENANCE

This ring continually provides its wearer with life-sustaining nourishment.

The ring also refreshes the body and mind, so that its wearer needs only sleep 2 hours per day to gain the benefit of 8 hours of sleep.

The ring must be worn for a full week before it begins to work.

If it is removed, the owner must wear it for another week to reattune it to himself.

This ring allows the caster to use the spell telekinesis on command.

Moderate transmutation; CL 9th; Forge Ring, telekinesis; Price 75,000 gp.

THREE WISHES

This ring is set with three rubies.

Each ruby stores a wish spell, activated by the ring.

When a wish is used, that ruby disappears.

For a randomly generated ring, roll 1d3 to determine the remaining number of rubies.

When all the wishes are used, the ring becomes a nonmagical item.

Strong evocation (if miracle is used); CL 20th; Forge Ring, wish or miracle; Price 97,950 gp; Cost 11,475 gp + 15,918 XP.

WATER WALKING

This ring, set with an opal, allows the wearer to continually utilize the effects of the spell water walk.

Moderate transmutation; CL 9th; Forge Ring, water walk; Price 15,000 gp.

WIZARDRY

This special ring comes in four kinds (ring of wizardry I, ring of wizardry II, ring of wizardry III, and ring of wizardry IV), all of them useful only to arcane spellcasters.

The wearer's arcane spells per day are doubled for one specific spell level.

A ring of wizardry I doubles 1st-level spells, a ring of wizardry II doubles 2nd-level spells, a ring of wizardry III doubles 3rd-level spells, and a ring of wizardry IV doubles 4th-level spells. Bonus spells from high ability scores or school specialization are not doubled.

Moderate (wizardry I) or strong (wizardry II–IV) (no school); CL 11th (I), 14th (II), 17th (III), 20th (IV); Forge Ring, limited wish; Price 20,000 gp (I), 40,000 gp (II), 70,000 gp (III), 100,000 gp (IV).

X-RAY VISION

On command, this ring gives its possessor the ability to see into and through solid matter.

Vision range is 20 feet, with the viewer seeing as if he were looking at something in normal light even if there is no illumination.

(For example, if the wearer looks into a locked chest, he can see inside even if there's no light within).

X-ray vision can penetrate 1 foot of stone, 1 inch of common metal, or up to 3 feet of wood or dirt.

Thicker substances or a thin sheet of lead blocks the vision.

Using the ring is physically exhausting, causing the wearer 1 point of Constitution damage per minute after the first 10 minutes of use in a single day.

Moderate divination; CL 6th; Forge Ring, true seeing; Price 25,000 gp.

DUNGEON MASTER'S GUIDE 2 (3.5)

GREATER COUNTERSPELLS

The ring of counterspells described in the Dungeon Master's Guide is a potent item that allows the wearer to automatically negate a single spell stored within it.

In addition to this quality, however, the ring of greater counterspells grants an even more powerful ability to anyone who has the innate ability to counterspell.

Specifically, any spellcaster who wears it can attempt to counterspell a spell once per day, even if caught unprepared.

Description: A ring of greater counterspells is made of white gold forged in a braided pattern.

A single ruby set in its center flickers and pulses with magical energy as long as a spell is stored within the ring.

The ruby flashes if the stored spell is used as a counterspell.

If the wearer is a spellcaster who activates the ring's more potent, secondary effect, the braids of white gold seem to twist and writhe on his finger, and the metal glows faintly as if it were growing hot, although the wearer feels no heat.

Activation: Countering a spell using the stored spell requires no action, as noted in the description of the ring of counterspells, page 230 of the Dungeon Master's Guide.

Activating the ring's secondary effect, however, is an immediate action (see page 237).

Effect: This ring can hold a spell of 1st through 6th level, much like a ring of counterspells.

This ability is usable by anyone.

Once stored, a spell cannot be cast out of the ring.

Instead, should that spell ever be cast upon the wearer, it is immediately countered, as a counterspell action, requiring no action (or even knowledge) on the wearer's part.

Once so used, the spell stored within the ring is gone, and a new spell (or the same one as before) can be placed in it.

A spellcaster capable of countering a spell on his own can access the ring's secondary ability—to counter a spell.

Once per day as an immediate action, the wearer can attempt to counter a single spell cast by a spellcaster he can see, provided the latter is within 100 feet.

Like the ring's other power, using this one requires no preparation or knowledge on the wearer's part.

He need not make a Spellcraft check to identify the spell being cast, and the spell he uses to counterspell can be of any level.

This counterspell attempt functions like dispel magic used to counter a spell, except that the wearer adds his caster level to the counterspell check (maximum +20).

Thus, a 12th-level wizard wearing a ring of greater counterspells would roll 1d20+12 when activating this ability. (See page 237 for the definition of an immediate action).

Aura/Caster Level: Strong evocation and abjuration; CL 15th.

Construction: Forge Ring, imbue with spell ability, dispel magic, 8,000 gp, 640 XP, 16 days.

Weight: —.

Price: 16,000 gp.

MENTAL FORTITUDE

Not every adventurer possesses the strength of will necessary to defeat menaces that control the mind. Mind flayers, aboleths, and dark spellcasters favor magic that crush the will or control the actions of others. The ring of mental fortitude helps the wearer face down such threats.

Description: The bumpy, ridged surface of this platinum ring is disturbingly reminiscent of a brain. Small flakes of gold lie within some of the cracks, as if protecting the “brain” from intrusion. When the wearer is subjected to a mind-affecting spell or ability, the ring glows with a dim, gray light. This visible signal that a mind-affecting attack has been directed at the wearer is enough to make adventurers prize this ring.

Activation: While the ring is worn, its power is continuously active.

No action is required on the wearer’s part to ward off the mental attacks of foes.

Effect: This ring protects the wearer against all mind-affecting spells and abilities as long as it is worn. She need not make any saving throws against these effects; they simply fail to affect her.

Aura/Caster Level: Strong abjuration; CL 15th.

Construction: Forge Ring, mind blank, 55,000 gp, 4,400 XP, 110 days.

Weight: —.

Price: 110,000 gp.

Market Price: 6,000 gp.

Caster Level: 6th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, mirror image;

Market Price: 12,960 gp; Weight: —.

UNIVERSAL ELEMENTAL RESISTANCE, MINOR

This ring functions as a ring of minor elemental resistance for all types of energy: fire, cold, electricity, acid, and sonic. When the wearer would normally take such damage, subtract 15 points of damage per round from the amount before applying.

This is a nonepic magic item.

Caster Level: 15th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, protection from elements; Market Price: 144,000 gp.

FAITHS AND PANTHEONS (3.0)

LORE

Caster Level: 12th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, legend lore, stone tell, find traps; Market Price: 23,250 gp; Cost to Create: 14,750 gp + 680 XP.

FROSTBURN (3.5)

FLOATING

This clear crystal ring seems slightly cold when worn. As long as this ring is worn, you float upon any liquid or similar surface, and cannot swim below the surface.

If you are underwater when you put this ring on, you rise toward the surface at a speed of 30 feet.

Faint transmutation; CL 1st; Forge Ring, float; Price 2,000 gp.

ICY SOUL

This ring seems to be made of ice, but never melts in even the hottest temperature.

As long as this ring is worn, you gain the cold subtype. You gain immunity to cold, but have vulnerability to fire.

You take half again as much (+50%) damage as normal from fire, regardless of whether a saving throw is allowed, or if the save is a success or a failure.

Medium transmutation; CL 9th; Forge Ring, mantle of the icy soul; Price 100,000 gp.

WHITE WYRM

A ring of the white wyrm is fashioned from the tooth of a great wyrm white dragon.

The ring can produce the following effects on command.

- Icewalking (at will): As spider climb, but the surfaces the wearer climbs must be icy.
- Freezing fog (2/day): As solid fog, but the effect also causes a rime of slippery ice to form on any surface the fog touches, creating the effect of a grease spell.

The wearer of the ring is immune to the grease effect because of the icewalking power the ring imparts.

- Wall of ice (1/day) In addition, the wearer gains the ability to speak and understand the Draconic language as long as the ring is worn, and the ring grants the wearer resistance to cold 10.

The primary function of the ring, however, is to infuse the wearer with the energy and power of a dragon.

Once per day, the wearer may call upon the ring to transform herself into a half-dragon.

This is a full-round action that provokes attacks of opportunity, and the transformation lasts for 1 hour.

While transformed, the wearer gains the following benefits.

- +4 natural armor bonus to AC.
- Bite and claw attacks as a half-dragon of the same size as the wearer.
- Breath weapon usable once per transformation (30-ft. cone, 3d6 cold damage, Reflex DC 16 half).
- Immunity to cold.
- +8 Strength, +2 Constitution, +2 Intelligence, +2 Charisma.

These bonuses are considered racial bonuses and stack with other racial bonuses the wearer may have.

The ring's transformation power also changes the wearer's appearance into a draconic form.

The wearer's general shape and size does not change, although her equipment is altered in shape so it can still be utilized.

Unlike polymorph, the user's equipment does not merge with the new form; it remains in place and fully functional while the user is in half-dragon form.

Dragons and half-dragons cannot benefit from the effects of the ring's transformation powers, although they can utilize the ring's other abilities.

Rumors abound that other rings exist that are keyed to different dragons, granting different powers.

Strong transmutation; CL 13th; Forge Ring, polymorph, protection from elements, wall of ice, solid fog, spider climb, creator must be a dragon or half-dragon; Price 64,000 gp.

GHOSTWALK (3.0)

BONE

These rings are carved from stone or ivory as often as from bone, but are never made of metal.

The wearer is immune to energy drain and to ability drain (but not to ability damage).

A bone ring has 50 charges when made.

Each level of energy drain or point of ability drain prevented costs 1 charge.

For example, a successful slam attack from a vampire, which normally bestows two negative levels, drains 2 charges from the ring.

Caster Level: 12th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, negative energy protection; Market Price: 36,000 gp.

This item first appeared in Magic of Faerûn.

MANIFESTING

These plain iron rings are sometimes carved with the shapes of ghostly people.

They are naturally ghost touch items.

If one is put on by an incorporeal creature, it causes the creature to manifest fully as long as the ring is worn.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, forced manifestation; Market Price: 10,000 gp.

LORDS OF DARKNESS (3.0)

ANTIVENOM

This ring has 25 charges of the neutralize poison spell. The ring is activated by a command word.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, neutralize poison; Market Price: 6,750 gp.

LORDS OF MADNESS (3.5)

LIGHTNING FLASHES

Made from interwoven bands of copper and electrum, a ring of lightning flashes offers a unique defense against monsters that grapple, engulf, swallow, or otherwise get entirely too close to the wearer.

As a purely mental standard action, the wearer can cause the ring to emit a powerful blast of lightning that deals 5d6 points of electricity damage (Reflex DC 13 half) to all other creatures within 5 feet.

Any creature that is currently in physical contact with the ring's wearer (grappling, engulfing, and so forth) receives no saving throw against the blast.

The ring's wearer can invoke the lightning flash even when grappled, swallowed, engulfed, or paralyzed.

A ring of lightning flashes is usable three times per day.

Faint evocation; CL 5th; Forge Ring, lightning bolt; Price 11,250 gp.

REDUCTION

On command, this ring reduces the wearer's size as described in the spell reduce person, except that any intelligent creature can be affected, not just humanoids. This reduces the wearer to the next smaller size category. A reduced creature gains a +2 size bonus to Dexterity, a -2 size penalty to Strength, and the size modifiers to attack rolls and Armor Class appropriate to its new size. The wearer remains small until he removes the ring or commands it to restore him to his proper size. Moderate transmutation; CL 9th; Forge Ring, reduce person, permanency; Price 20,000 gp.

LOST EMPIRES OF FAERÛN (3.5)

CREATION

This elegant double band of platinum looks like two intertwining tongues of flame. Its wearer can use minor creation three times per day and major creation once per day. Each of these functions requires a different command word. Moderate conjuration; CL 9th; Forge Ring, minor creation, major creation; Price 33,000 gp.

FIENDRING

Fiendrings appear as small, rusty bands of jagged iron. Once per day, the wearer of a fiendring can take the form of any fiendish creature, demon, or devil that can be summoned by a summon monster I, II, III, or IV spell. Only one form can be assumed with each use, but the wearer gains all the assumed form's extraordinary, spell-like, and supernatural abilities. The wearer's type changes to outsider, rendering him vulnerable to spells and effects that affect evil outsiders. Effects that would otherwise banish the wearer to another plane instead end the effect immediately, leaving the wearer staggered for 1 round. Otherwise, the transformation lasts 12 minutes. Nar demonbinders forged dozens of these bizarre rings so that they could take on the shapes of fiendish beings. Some used their fiendrings to fight alongside their summoned demons; others used them to assume a more durable form in order to mate with fiends they had summoned. Moderate transmutation; CL 12th; Forge Ring; fiendform; Price 30,000 gp.

WHISPERED THOUGHTS

A ring of whispered thoughts enables its wearer to haunt opponents from afar. The wearer can use whispering wind three times per day, suggestion once per day, and mass suggestion once per week. Either of the suggestion effects can be used in conjunction with the whispering wind function if desired.

In such a case, the mass suggestion effect targets all creatures in the area of the whispering wind, whereas the suggestion effect targets one randomly determined creature in the whispering wind's area. Moderate enchantment; CL 11th; Forge Ring, whispering wind, mass suggestion; Price 50,000 gp.

Until the end of your turn, that weapon is considered both magic and good-aligned for the purpose of overcoming the damage reduction of an evil creature, as well as for the purpose of affecting incorporeal evil creatures.

A ring of brief blessing functions once per day.

Once it is activated, its glow fades.

However, while wearing the ring you can expend a turn undead attempt as a standard (command) action to recharge it (which also restores its glow).

Any two or more ring wearers need only touch their rings together (a standard action) and speak the command word in unison to attune the rings to each other.

ENTROPIC DEFLECTION

Price (Item Level): 8,000 gp (11th)

Body Slot: Ring

Caster Level: 3rd

Aura: Faint; (DC 16) abjuration

Activation: —; see text

Weight: —

This platinum ring is set with a large, hypnotic white opal.

A ring of entropic deflection provides a mobile wearer with protection against ranged attacks.

At the end of any turn, if you are at least 10 feet from the point where you started your turn, this ring creates a field of warping energy that lasts until the start of your next turn.

This field functions as an entropic shield spell.

Any ranged attacks directed at you that require an attack roll have a 20% miss chance.

This is a continuous effect and requires no activation.

If you also wear a magic item that provides a bonus to your speed, the miss chance provided by the ring increases to 50%.

Prerequisites: Forge Ring, entropic shield.

Cost to Create: 4,000 gp, 320 XP, 8 days.

ESSENTIA

Price (Item Level): 6,000 gp (10th)

Body Slot: Ring

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) necromancy

Activation: —

Weight: —

This plain silver band is set with a small sapphire, which shimmers faintly when invested with essentia.

Any creature that has an essentia pool can transfer 1 point of essentia from its pool into a ring of essentia simply by touching it and willing the transfer to occur (a standard action).

Doing so reduces the size of the donor's essentia pool by 1.

The ring can hold no more than 1 point of essentia.

At any time within the next 24 hours, you can use this essentia as if it were part of your own essentia pool—even if you don't have essentia of your own—simply by willing its release while you wear the ring.

The stored essentia returns to its original owner automatically after you use it, or after 24 hours if it remains unused.

Alternatively, the donor of the stored essentia can reclaim it earlier by touching the ring and willing it to return (a standard action).

Prerequisites: Forge Ring, essentia pool, soul boon (MoI 104).

Cost to Create: 3,000 gp, 240 XP, 6 days.

Prerequisites: Forge Ring, float (EPH 108).

Cost to Create: 1,000 gp, 80 XP, 2 days.

FORCE ARMOR

Price (Item Level): 30,000 gp (16th)
Body Slot: Ring; see text
Caster Level: 9th
Aura: Moderate; (DC 19) evocation
Activation: —
Weight: —

Each of these black iron rings is set with smooth pieces of jet all around its band.

This pair of black iron rings must be worn as a set, one on each hand, to function.

When so worn, they sheathe you in a field of magical force, granting you a +5 armor bonus to AC.

This bonus applies even against incorporeal touch attacks.

The sheath is harmful to the touch, dealing 1d4 points of force damage to any creature that successfully strikes you with a nonreach weapon.

In addition, your unarmed strikes deal an extra 1d4 points of damage and can affect incorporeal creatures as if they were force effects.

Prerequisites: Forge Ring, mage armor, magic weapon, wall of force.

Cost to Create: 15,000 gp, 1,200 XP, 30 days.

FOUR WINDS

Price (Item Level): 2,000 gp (6th)
Body Slot: Ring
Caster Level: 3rd
Aura: Faint; (DC 16) evocation
Activation: Immediate (command)
Weight: —

Four clouds, each a different shade of green or blue, adorn this simple wooden ring.

The faces of four old men puffing up their cheeks are also carved into the sides.

When you activate a ring of the four winds, it creates gusts of wind that grant you a +2 deflection bonus to AC against a single attack.

Alternatively, you can activate it to use a feather fall effect on yourself.

This ring functions a total of four times per day.

Prerequisites: Forge Ring, feather fall, gust of wind, shield of faith.

Cost to Create: 1,000 gp, 80 XP, 2 days.

GREATER COUNTERSPELLS

Price (Item Level): 16,000 gp (14th)

Body Slot: Ring
Caster Level: 15th
Aura: Strong; (DC 22) abjuration
Activation: — and immediate (command)
Weight: —

This white gold ring is forged in a braided pattern.

A single ruby set in its center flickers and pulses with magical energy.

A ring of greater counterspells can hold a spell of 1st through 6th level, much like a ring of counterspells.

You cannot cast a stored spell out of the ring, but should that spell ever be cast upon you, it is immediately countered, as a counterspell action, requiring no action (or even knowledge) on your part.

This use causes the ruby stone to flash once and uses up the stored spell.

Once it is gone, a new spell (or the same one as before) can be placed into the ring.

If you are a spellcaster capable of countering a spell on your own, you can also access the ring's secondary ability.

Once per day as an immediate action, you can attempt to counter a single spell cast by a spellcaster you can see, provided he is within 100 feet.

Like the ring's other ability, this one requires no preparation or knowledge on your part.

You need not make a Spellcraft check to identify the spell being cast, and the spell you use to counterspell can be of any level.

This counterspell attempt functions like greater dispel magic used to counter a spell, except that you add your caster level to the counterspell check (maximum +20).

Thus, a 12th-level wizard wearing a ring of greater counterspells would roll 1d20+12 when activating this ability. When you activate this secondary effect, the braids of white gold seem to twist and writhe on your finger, and the metal glows faintly as if it were growing hot, although you feel no heat.

Prerequisites: Forge Ring, greater dispel magic, imbue with spell ability.

Cost to Create: 8,000 gp, 640 XP, 16 days.

ICY SOUL

There seems to be little physical substance to this ring.

It resembles a fine, circular sliver of fragile ice surrounded by a blue-white mist of incredible cold.

You gain resistance to cold 20, but you also gain vulnerability to fire and lose any resistance or immunity to fire you already have.

You take 1-1/2 times the normal amount of damage from fire, regardless of whether a saving throw is allowed, or if the save is a success or a failure.

Prerequisites: Forge Ring, mantle of the icy soul (SC 138).

Cost to Create: 9,000 gp, 720 XP, 18 days.

Using a lockpicking ring grants you a +5 competence bonus on Open Lock checks.

This is a continuous effect and requires no activation.

In addition, you can activate the ring once per day to use knock.

You must touch the ring to the portal you want to open.

Prerequisites: Forge Ring, knock.

Activation: —; see text
Weight: —

These thin, interlocking rings are made of different metals, including silver, adamantite, mithral, and platinum.

A ring of master artifice functions only if you can imbue infusions (see the EBERRON Campaign Setting).

Assembling the ring from its various components requires 5 minutes and a successful DC 22 Intelligence check, which you can attempt any number of times.

Once assembled, a ring of master artifice must be worn for 24 hours for its magic to take effect.

After that time, you gain the ring's benefit every time you concentrate to regain your daily allotment of infusions.

The ring increases the number of infusions you can imbue daily.

A ring of master artifice provides one bonus 3rd-level infusion and one bonus 4th-level infusion.

Prerequisites: Forge Ring.

MYSTIC DEFIANCE

Price (Item Level): 7,500 gp (11th)

Body Slot: Ring

Caster Level: 7th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 18) abjuration

Activation: Immediate (command) and —

Weight: —

This white gold ring bears a square-cut ruby.

Arcane runes are inscribed around its band.

A ring of mystic defiance protects you from damaging magical effects.

When you activate the ring, you ignore up to 10 points of damage dealt by a spell or spell-like ability.

You can activate the ring after you learn the damage a spell or spell-like ability will deal to you, but before the damage is actually dealt.

This ability functions three times per day.

This ability does not protect you from other magical effects (such as those generated by magic items, unless they specifically mimic spells).

For example, the ring wouldn't protect you from the extra damage dealt by a flaming sword, but it would protect you from a fireball cast from a scroll, wand, or other item.

If you also wear a magic item that grants an enhancement bonus to your Intelligence or Charisma, you can add half that item's bonus as an insight bonus on your Fortitude saves against spells and spell-like abilities (up to a maximum bonus of +3).

This is a continuous effect and requires no activation.

Prerequisites: Forge Ring, spell immunity.

Cost to Create: 3,750 gp, 300 XP, 8 days.

Spending 1 or more charges grants a bonus to the amount of damage you deal with the next fire spell you cast before the end of your turn.

(If the fire spell doesn't normally deal fire damage, this expenditure has no effect).

1 charge: +2d6 fire damage.

2 charges: +3d6 fire damage.

3 charges: +4d6 fire damage.

Prerequisites: Forge Ring, fireball or flame strike.

Cost to Create: 3,750 gp, 300 XP, 8 days.

This effect triggers automatically, requiring no action on your part.

Also, once per day as an immediate action, you can expend a charge when you fail a saving throw to treat the saving throw as a success.

A ring of nine lives has 9 charges when created, but most are discovered with only 2d4 charges left.

Prerequisites: Forge Ring, heal, limited wish.

Cost to Create: 22,500 gp, 1,800 XP, 45 days.

PIERCING SPELLS

When you activate this ring, the next melee touch spell you cast against an enemy you are flanking deals an extra 2d6 points of damage.

Furthermore, spells that channel positive energy—typically cure spells—have no effect on you.

Prerequisites: Forge Ring, protection from positive energy (LM 70).

Aura: Strong; (DC 22) abjuration

Activation: — and immediate (mental)

Weight: —

This simple gold band looks like a tiny armored girdle set with small spheres of silver.

A ring of spell-battle informs you of all spellcasting that occurs within 60 feet of you, as well as allowing you to attempt a Spellcraft check (DC 15 + spell level) to identify the spell being cast (even if you can't see its casting or effect).

This is a continuous effect and requires no activation.

Once per day, when you succeed in identifying a spell in this manner, you can activate the ring to counterspell that spell as if with dispel magic, or change the target of the spell to any target within 60 feet of you.

If you choose an illegal target (because of the spell's range limitation or other restrictions), the spell functions normally and the effect is wasted.

Cost to Create: 6,000 gp, 480 XP, 12 days.

The wearer is immune to energy drain and ability drain (but not to ability damage).

A bone ring has 50 charges when made.

Each level of energy drain or point of ability drain prevented costs 1 charge.

For example, a successful slam attack from a vampire, which normally bestows two negative levels, drains 2 charges from the ring.

Caster Level: 12th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, negative energy protection; Market Price: 36,000 gp.

COMMANDER

The war wizards of Cormyr forge these rings for use by the Cormyrian military.

The rings provide a +2 resistance bonus on saves and a +2 deflection bonus to AC.

With the proper command word, a commander's ring can produce feather fall, knock, wall of force, and daylight effects each three times per day.

A character wearing a commander's ring always knows the direction and distance to any purple dragon rings within a 100-foot radius.

This power can penetrate barriers, but 1 foot of stone, 1 inch of common metal, a thin sheet of lead, or 1 yard of wood or dirt blocks it.

A commander's ring can be worn on the same hand as a purple dragon ring, and the pair counts as only one ring worn.

Caster Level: 12th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, feather fall, knock, wall of force, daylight, locate object; Market Price: 120,000 gp.

DARKHIDDEN

This ring is usually made of tarnished silver and inscribed with images of closed eyes.

The wearer of the ring is invisible to darkvision, although he is fully visible in normal light.

Caster Level: 3rd; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, invisibility; Market Price: 6,700 gp.

DISEASE IMMUNITY

The wearers of these rings are immune to all types of infections and diseases (including contagion spells, lycanthropy, and mummy rot).

The wearer also heals 1 extra hit point per day of rest.

Caster Level: 12th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, cure minor wounds, remove disease; Market Price: 8,000 gp.

DRAGONS

These brass rings look like snakes or dragons biting their own tails.

They are created by the Cult of the Dragon and are greatly prized by its higher organizational tiers.

The Cult has made about seventy of them.

The wearer can use the following abilities.

- Verbally (as with tongues) or telepathically (as with Rary's telepathic bond) communicate with any dragon within the wearer's line of sight.

- Cast a silent image of a dragon once per day within 60 feet of himself.

The dragon resembles any dragon the user has personally seen.

(This power is typically used as a recognition symbol or a diversion).

- Transmit a call to a named dracolich or evil dragon.

The target knows the wearer's location and can home in on the call if he chooses to respond, although no compulsion to do so exists.

The call remains active until the ring is removed, the wearer dismisses the call, or the wearer dies.

Caster Level: 15th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, detect thoughts, sending, silent image, tongues; Market Price: 25,000 gp.

Lore: A creature wearing this ring can cast legend lore and stone tell each once per tenday with a command word, and may find magic traps created through glyphs, runes, sigils, and symbols with a successful Search check, just as a rogue does.

Caster Level: 12th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, legend lore, stone tell, find traps; Market Price: 23,250 gp; Cost to Create: 14,750 gp + 680 XP.

MIGHT

These rings are forged by clerics of Tyr. The wearer of a ring of might is treated as armed even when unarmed (as the Improved Unarmed Strike feat). His unarmed attacks deal 1d8 points of damage (normal damage, not subdual). Any target damaged by a punch bears a little imprint of a hammer from the blow until the damage is healed. Caster Level: 1st; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, magic weapon, creator must be a cleric of Tyr; Market Price: 4,000 gp.

NINE LIVES

This ancient ring is made of ivory and carved to resemble a snarling cat's face on one end. If the wearer ever drops to 0 hit points or below, the ring expends one of its charges to cast a heal spell upon her. The wearer can also expend a charge if she fails a saving throw, allowing her to treat the saving throw as a success. A ring of nine lives has 9 charges when created, but most are discovered with only 2d4 charges left. Caster Level: 13th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, heal, limited wish; Market Price: 70,000 gp; Cost to Create: 41,750 gp + 4,960 XP.

PURPLE DRAGON

These rings are brass and engraved with the purple dragon symbol of the Obarskyr royal family. The wearer may use it to create light once per round, either on the ring or up to 40 feet away. This effect lasts 10 minutes. (Unlike the light spell, the ring wearer cannot dismiss the effect). Its second power is to detect poison on command by touch. When this power is activated and the ring touched to a creature or object (typically food or drink), it glows an eerie gold-green if the substance is poisonous. The ring cannot identify what sort of poison is present, nor can it detect poisons in an area. The Purple Dragons use these rings to protect the royal family from assassination attempts by poison. Over 4,000 of these rings have been made. Rings with similar functions are in common circulation, created for nobles or merchants fearing poison. A purple dragon ring can be worn on the same hand as a commander's ring, and the pair counts as only one ring worn. Caster Level: 1st; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, light, detect poison; Market Price: 2,125 gp.

SPELL-BATTLE

This potent ring is typically made of gold and set with small spheres of silver. The ring informs its wearer of all spellcasting that occurs within 60 feet of it, and if the wearer makes a Spellcraft check (DC 15 + spell level), he can identify the spell being cast (even if he can't see its casting or effect). If this identification succeeds, the wearer can (once per day) choose to have the ring cast dispel magic as a counterspell to that spell or can change the target of the spell to any target within 60 feet of the ring wearer. (The wearer can do this even if he hadn't readied a counterspell action).

If the wearer chooses an illegal target (because of the spell's range limitation or other restrictions), the spell functions normally and the redirection is wasted.

Caster Level: 14th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, detect magic, dispel magic, spell turning, creator must have 10 ranks in Spellcraft; Market Price: 67,600 gp.

MAGIC OF INCARNUM (3.5)

ESSENTIA

The ring of essentia stores a small quantity of another character's personal soul energy for the wearer's use. Description: The ring of essentia is a plain silver band set with a small sapphire. When invested with essentia, the sapphire glows and shimmers faintly. Prerequisite: Any character can wear the ring, but only those capable of using essentia will gain any benefit from it. Activation: No activation is required to use the essentia stored within the ring (other than the normal action required to invest or reallocate essentia, typically a swift action). Storing essentia within the ring, reclaiming essentia stored in the ring, or releasing the essentia stored, requires a standard action. Effect: Any character with an essentia pool can touch the ring of essentia to bestow 1 point of essentia from his essentia pool into the ring. This reduces the size of his essentia pool by 1. The wearer of the ring can use this essentia as if it were part of his own essentia pool (even if he doesn't have essentia of his own). The ring can hold no more than 1 point of essentia. The essentia stored within the ring remains for 24 hours before it dissipates, returning to the character who placed it there. Before that time, it can be released in one of two ways. The wearer of the ring can release the essentia from the gemstone as a standard action, in which case it immediately returns to the essentia pool of its original owner. Alternatively, if the character who bestowed the essentia touches the ring, he can reclaim his essentia as a standard action. Aura and Caster Level: Faint necromancy; CL 5th. Construction: Forge Ring, soul boon, essentia pool; cost 8,000 gp; 640 XP, 16 days. Price: 16,000 gp.

SOULBOUND PROTECTION

The ring of soulbound protection allows its wearer to invest essentia to improve his defenses in combat. Description: The ring of soulbound protection is a sturdy band of mithral set with either two (lesser) or four (greater) tiny sapphires.

Prerequisite: Any character can gain the basic effect of the ring of soulbound protection, though only those with an essentia pool can benefit from the essentia investment feature.

Activation: Investing or reallocating essentia in the ring of soulbound protection is a swift action (and can be done as part of the normal swift action used for reallocating essentia).

Effect: A ring of soulbound protection grants a +1 deflection bonus to the wearer's Armor Class.

In addition, it serves as a receptacle for the wearer's essentia, much like a soulmeld.

Every point of essentia invested in the ring increases its deflection bonus to AC by 1.

A ring of soulbound protection has an essentia capacity.

Lesser rings of soulbound protection have a maximum essentia capacity of 2, while greater rings have a maximum essentia capacity of 4.

The maximum value of essentia that can be invested in the ring is equal to this capacity or the character's normal essentia capacity (see Table 2–1: Essentia Capacity), whichever is less.

Aura and Caster Level: Moderate abjuration (lesser) or strong abjuration (greater); CL 6th (lesser) or 18th (greater).

Construction (lesser): Forge Ring, shield of faith, essentia pool 2; cost 5,000 gp, 400 XP, 10 days.

Construction (greater): Forge Ring, shield of faith, essentia pool 4; cost 13,000 gp, 1,040 XP, 26 days.

Price: 10,000 gp (lesser) or 26,000 gp (greater).

MINIATURES HANDBOOK (3.5)

COMMUNICATION

Each of these silver rings is inscribed with the Draconic word for friendship.

While a ring of communication is worn, the wearer can clearly hear anything said (even if whispered quietly) by anyone else within 1 mile who is wearing another ring of communication to whom the wearer is attuned.

To become attuned, two or more ring of communication wearers need to touch their rings together and speak the command word.

Any number of ring wearers can become attuned to one another, so long as they are all attuned together at the same time.

The wearer remains attuned until he removes the ring (or until all other wearers to which he is attuned remove theirs) or attunes himself to a different ring wearer.

Faint divination; CL 5th; Forge Ring, detect thoughts; Price 2,000 gp.

PLANAR HANDBOOK (3.5)

ELEMENTAL ADAPTATION

This gold ring is set with four tiny gemstones: a ruby, an emerald, a sapphire, and a garnet.

The wearer can ignore many of the dangers of travel on element-dominant planes (including the Elemental Planes themselves), as follows.

The wearer runs no risk of suffocation on earth-dominant planes, such as the Elemental Plane of Earth.

However, the ring confers no ability to burrow out of earth; if a character traveling to an earth-dominant plane arrives in solid earth, he still has to dig his way out.

The wearer ignores the high heat of fire-dominant planes, such as the Elemental Plane of Fire.

The wearer does not take the usual 3d10 points of fire damage every round, nor do his clothing or flammable possessions catch fire.

The ring provides no other protection against fire damage.

The wearer can breathe normally on water-dominant planes, such as the Elemental Plane of Water.

The ring does not provide the same benefit in ordinary water, however.

Finally, the wearer gains a +5 bonus on Spellcraft checks to cast spells or use spell-like abilities that would be impeded by an Elemental Plane's magic traits.

Strong abjuration; CL 12th; Forge Ring, avoid planar effects; Price 24,000 gp.

ETHEREAL TRAVEL

Donning this tarnished silver ring transfers the wearer to the Ethereal Plane.

Removing the ring ends the effect and returns the wearer to the plane he previously occupied.

However, if a character wearing a ring of ethereal travel becomes nonethereal by some other means (such as passing through an ethereal curtain), removing the ring has no effect—the character remains where he is, though if he subsequently dons the ring again, he again becomes ethereal.

Strong transmutation; CL 13th; Forge Ring, ethereal jaunt; Price 182,000 gp.

FREE MAGIC

This platinum ring, etched with arcane symbols, is designed to counteract the effects of planes with the limited magic trait.

By expending charges from a ring of free magic, the wearer can cast spells of the prohibited school, subschool, descriptor, or level as if the limited magic trait didn't exist. The number of charges expended is equal to the level of the spell the wearer wishes to cast.

A newly created ring of free magic has 50 charges.

When all the charges are expended, the ring becomes a nonmagical item.

Strong evocation; CL 12th; Forge Ring, imbue with spell ability; Price 45,000 gp.

LIMBO CONTROL

With this mithral ring, the wearer can establish control over a raw area of the Ever-Changing Chaos of Limbo without making the usual Wisdom check.

The wearer merely visualizes what sort of environment he wants, and the ring creates it, in a 25-foot-radius sphere centering on the wearer.

Further, even if the wearer falls unconscious, the sphere of control retains the form the wearer specified. The wearer can change the form of the controlled area once per round as a free action. Strong conjuration; CL 12th; Forge Ring, major creation; Price 120,000 gp.

NEGATIVE PROTECTION

This gleaming white gold ring enables the wearer to ignore the 1d6 points of damage dealt by negative-dominant planes, such as the Negative Energy Plane. Additionally, the wearer cannot gain negative levels while he wears this ring, making the item popular with those who battle undead. Strong abjuration; CL 12th; Forge Ring, negative energy protection; Price 72,000 gp.

POSITIVE PROTECTION

This black iron ring enables the wearer to ignore the blinding effect of positive-dominant planes, such as the Positive Energy Plane. In addition, the wearer does not gain the fast healing ability usually conferred by a positive-dominant plane, nor does the character gain additional hit points when he reaches his normal maximum. Spells that channel positive energy—typically healing spells—have no effect on the wearer (making this item very popular with intelligent undead). Strong abjuration; CL 12th; Forge Ring, positive energy protection; Price 72,000 gp.

WATER BREATHING

This silver ring is shaped to show a fish biting its own tail. It enables the wearer to breathe freely in water. Faint transmutation; CL 5th; Forge Ring, water breathing; Price 12,000 gp.

PLAYER'S GUIDE TO FAERÛN (3.5)

AKKABAR'S BATTLEBLADE

On close inspection, this ring of twisted metal looks like an endless ring of swords, their blades intertwining like vines. Once per day, the wearer may speak a command word and cause the ring to fly off his finger, growing and expanding into a curtain of slashing blades placed as the wearer designates, as per the blade barrier spell. When the duration of the spell expires or the wearer dismisses the effect, Akkabar's battle lade ring shrinks back to its normal size. It returns to its wearer's finger 1 round later, provided that he is alive and within 60 feet, and there is no obstructing object that the ring cannot circumvent (such as a wall or door) between him and the ring. If the ring cannot return to the wearer, it instead drops to the ground at the location where the blade barrier was centered.

Moderate evocation [force]; CL 12th; Forge Ring, blade barrier; Price 25,920 gp.

ANNULUS CONFLAGROS

This twisted copper ring resembles a loop of dancing flames, and the rubies and topazes with which it is set seem to reflect the different colors within a fire. Each annulus conflagros ring bestows resistance to fire 10 upon its wearer and allows her to activate the following abilities with the appropriate command words. Pyrotechnics (at will)
Burning hands (3/day)
Fireball (2/day)
Wall of fire (1/day)
Moderate evocation [fire]; CL 6th; Forge Ring, burning hands, fireball, pyrotechnics, resist energy, wall of fire; Price 92,340 gp.

VELSHAROON'S BINDING

This peculiar item is actually a pair of rings designed to be worn on the pinky and index fingers, though it still counts as only one ring for the purpose of magic item limitations. A fine silver chain joins the two rings. The ring of Velsharoon's binding protects its wearer against undead beings, as if via a protection from evil spell, except that the bonuses are granted against undead rather than against any evil creature. The wearer also gains a +3 resistance bonus on saving throws against spells of the necromancy school. Faint abjuration; CL 5th; Forge Ring, halt undead; Price 33,500 gp.

SANDSTORM (3.5)

BLAZING SUN

This ring is made of polished fire opal and is always very warm to the touch, as though it has been lying in the sun for several hours. The wearer gains the fire subtype while wearing the ring. Strong transmutation; CL 15th; Forge Ring, mantle of the fiery spirit; Price 135,000 gp.

SANDFORM

On command, this sandstone ring allows the wearer to take the form of living sand, as the sandform spell. The wearer can remain in sandform for up to 10 minutes per day, and the duration need not be consecutive rounds or minutes. Moderate transmutation; CL 10th; Forge Ring, sandform; Price 24,000 gp.

SANDSTRIDING

This brass ring has the shape of a coiled rattlesnake. The wearer gains the benefit of the Sandskimmer feat (see page 52).

Faint transmutation; CL 3rd; Forge Ring, creator must have the Sandskimmer feat or the innate ability to move easily through sand; Price 5,000 gp.

SAVAGE SPECIES (3.0)

GROWTH

This ring allows the wearer to speak a command word and instantly grow in size, doubling its height and multiplying its weight by 8.

This growth increases the creature's size category by one, which grants it a +4 size bonus to Strength, a -2 penalty to Dexterity (to a minimum of 1), and a -1 penalty on attack rolls and AC.

The growth may also increase the wearer's natural reach and face (see Table 8-7 in the Player's Handbook).

The ring can be employed once per day, and the effect lasts for 9 minutes (or less, if the wearer desires).

The ring does not change the wearer's speed.

If insufficient room is available for the desired growth, the wearer attains the maximum possible size and may make a Strength check (using its increased Strength) to burst any enclosures in the process.

If it fails, it is constrained without harm by the materials enclosing it—the ring cannot be used to crush a creature by growth.

All equipment worn or carried by the wearer is affected by the ring.

A melee weapon enlarged by one size category deals more damage (as shown on Table 5-1).

Magical properties of items are not affected by the growth. Any enlarged item that leaves the enlarged creature's possession (including a projectile or thrown weapon) instantly returns to its normal size.

This means that thrown weapons deal their normal damage (projectiles deal damage based on the size of the weapon that fired them).

Multiple magical effects that increase size do not stack.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, animal growth; Market Price: 18,000 gp.

SHRINKING

This ring allows the wearer to speak a command word and instantly diminish in size, halving its height, length, and width and dividing its weight by 8.

This reduction in size decreases the creature's size category by one, which grants it a +2 size bonus to Dexterity, a -4 penalty to Strength (to a minimum of 1), and a +1 bonus on attack rolls and AC.

The change in size may also affect the wearer's natural reach and face (see Table 8-7 in the Player's Handbook).

The ring can be employed once per day, and the effect lasts for 9 minutes (or less, if the wearer desires).

The ring does not change the wearer's speed.

All equipment worn or carried by a creature is affected by the ring.

A melee weapon reduced by one size category deals less damage (as shown on Table 5-1).

Magical properties of items are not affected by the reduction.

Any reduced item that leaves the reduced creature's possession (including a projectile or thrown weapon) instantly returns to its normal size.

This means that thrown weapons deal their normal damage (projectiles deal damage based on the size of the weapon that fired them).

Multiple magical effects that reduce size do not stack.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, reduce; Market Price: 3,600 gp.

WORDTWISTING

This ring grants a +2 insight bonus on Bluff, Diplomacy, and Sense Motive checks.

If worn by someone of orc blood, the ring grants a +4 insight bonus on Bluff, Diplomacy, Intimidate, and Sense Motive checks, and the wielder acts as if the subject of a tongues spell cast by a 5th-level wizard.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, tongues; Market Price: 23,508 gp.

SERPENT KINGDOMS (3.5)

SERPENT

Fashioned of plain brass and shaped to resemble an open-mouthed snake wrapped around its own tail to form a band, serpent rings are often used as pass tokens by serpentfolk, scalykind, and cultists of Tiamat, Set, Sseth, and Varae. (They are especially common in the Sauringar tribe of the yuan-ti).

Spell wards in temples dedicated to these deities are often keyed to allow passage by the bearer of such rings.

An openly displayed serpent ring attracts immediate, suspicious attention from those who venerate serpentkind.

The wearer of a serpent ring is immune to all serpent venom and gains a +3 bonus on saving throws against poison or acid damage.

In addition, a viper weapon never attacks the wearer of a serpent ring, whether or not it is openly displayed.

Moderate abjuration and conjuration; CL 7th; Forge Ring, neutralize poison, protection from energy (acid); Price 5,000 gp.

VIPER

Fashioned of green serpentine stone, this ring is carved in the shape of a tiny viper biting its own tail.

When the wearer makes a successful unarmed attack, the viper releases its tail and automatically bites the same target.

The wearer's attack deals 1 extra point of damage and injects venom into the target (injury, Fortitude DC 11, initial and secondary damage 1d6 Con).

Moderate conjuration and necromancy; CL 7th; Forge Ring, poison, summon monster I; Price 8,000 gp.

SILVER MARCHES (3.0)

SENDING

Each of these simple silver rings bears a single piece of ravenar, a glossy black variety of tourmaline.

On the stone is engraved an eye and a star.

Each of these rings is part of a set; the stone of each ring in the set is a polished piece of a larger uncut ravenar stone (a typical set of sending rings is five to 11 rings).

Once per tenday the wearer can activate a ring's power, broadcasting a short message to all other bearers of rings in that set, as if using a multiple-target sending spell.

Each other ringbearer may give a short response, as described in the sending spell.

The ring cannot receive or send a message if it is not worn.

There is no way for a wearer to know who might be wearing the other rings (for example, if a ring were stolen and fell into the wrong hands), so secret messages are best sent in code or by other means.

Normally these rings are created as a group and handed out to individuals who live far apart but may need to contact each other in emergencies.

Several rings in the same set have been given to the stewards of key fortifications along the Silver Marches border, allowing them to warn the interior cities of impending invasions.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, Rary's telepathic bond, sending; Market Price: 10,000 gp.

STORMWRACK (3.5)

FOUR WINDS

The ring of the four winds is favored and coveted by mariners and sea-going adventurers for its ability to harness the four winds to do the ring-bearer's will.

The ring creates small gusts of wind when the wearer is attacked, granting a +2 deflection bonus to the wearer's AC. Additionally, the character can use feather fall upon herself as an immediate action at any time, even when it isn't her turn.

Finally, with a command word the wearer can use the ring to bring about a stormrunner's ward effect three times per day.

Moderate abjuration, evocation [air], transmutation; CL 3rd; Forge Ring, feather fall, mage armor, stormrunner's ward; Price 20,000 gp.

LANDWALKING

This brass ring has a pattern of fish scales etched into it. An aquatic humanoid or monstrous humanoid who dons the ring develops legs and feet (if it does not already have them), which persist as long as the ring is worn.

It loses its swim speed, but gains a land speed of 30 feet.

The ring also confers air breathing on the wearer.

Strong transmutation; CL 5th; Forge Ring, air breathing, fins to feet; Price 10,000 gp.

VORTEX

This platinum ring is fitted with an aquamarine.

On command, the ring of the vortex allows the wearer to take the form of a vortex (see Huge water elemental on page 101 of the Monster Manual).

While in vortex form, the wearer does not need to breathe and has a swim speed of 120 feet but no land speed (and cannot leave the water).

The wearer can take no actions other than moving, does not threaten the area around him, and does not provoke attacks of opportunity for moving.

The wearer can remain in this form for up to 10 rounds per day; the duration of this effect need not be consecutive rounds.

Strong transmutation; CL 15th; Forge Ring, control water, shapechange; Price 44,000 gp.

SWORD AND FIST (3.0)

MAGE ARMOR

This ring protects the wearer as with the mage armor spell (+4 armor bonus to AC).

Caster Level: 1st; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, mage armor; Market Price: 12,000 gp.

SHOCKING BLOWS

On command, this ring imbues the wearer's hands with electrical energy.

The wearer can make one touch attack each round that does 1d8+3 electrical damage.

As with a regular touch spell, the wearer can also simply make unarmed attacks normally, the ring discharging whenever the wearer successfully hits.

Caster Level: 3rd; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, shocking grasp; Market Price: 13,000 gp.

TOME OF MAGIC (3.5)

NULLIFICATION

This ring protects you from one attack of almost any sort per day.

Description: A ring of nullification appears to be a plain band of dull metal with an onyx gem set in it.

When activated, the onyx glows as brightly as a torch for an instant, then it darkens to jet black until the next midnight.

Activation: At any time, you can specify the type of attack against which the ring will protect you.

Doing this requires a standard action.

The ring then activates instantly and automatically should you be targeted by that sort of attack.

Effect: Once per day, the ring nullifies a single attack against you.

You must have declared ahead of time what sort of attack will activate the ring.

You can specify a type of damage ("the next time I take fire damage" or "the next time I take strength damage") or a method of attack (the next time someone strikes me with a weapon” or “the next time someone casts a damaging spell on me”).

The ring negates 20 points of hit point damage (or 2 points of ability damage) from the next specified attack.

It then goes dormant for 24 hours.

Aura/Caster Level: Moderate abjuration. CL 10th.

Construction: Forge Ring, aura of shade, shadow skin, 1,600 gp.

128 XP, 4 days.

Price: 3,200 gp.

UNDERDARK (3.5)

ANTIVENOM

This ring renders the wearer immune to all natural poisons and grants her a +5 resistance bonus on saving throws against any magic or supernatural poison.

The ring must be worn for a full week before it begins to work.

If it is removed, the owner must wear it for another week before it will function again.

Moderate conjuration; CL 7th; Forge Ring, neutralize poison; Price 60,000 gp.

ANTIVENOM, FRUGAL

Once per day, the wearer of this ring can speak a command word to activate a neutralize poison effect upon herself.

Moderate conjuration; CL 7th; Forge Ring, neutralize poison; Price 10,000 gp.

DETECT THOUGHTS

On command, this ring allows the wearer to read thoughts, as though with the detect thoughts spell.

Faint divination; CL 3rd; Forge Ring, detect thoughts; Price 10,800 gp.

ENSLAVEMENT

These sinister rings are always created in sets of six: one master ring and five servant rings.

Master Ring: The wearer can use detect thoughts at will against anyone wearing a servant ring created in conjunction with that master ring.

Servant Ring: This ring is considered a cursed item and cannot be removed except by a remove curse spell.

It functions exactly like an amulet of inescapable location, with the following additional properties.

While wearing this ring, the wearer is not permitted a saving throw against the detect thoughts ability of the master ring.

When donned, and each ten days thereafter, the ring exerts a dominate person effect upon the wearer, granting control to the wearer of the master ring.

The dominate person effect ends if the ring is removed.

Moderate enchantment; CL 10th; Forge Ring, bestow curse, detect thoughts, dominate person; Price 120,000 gp (master ring and five servant rings).

RODS

ARMS AND EQUIPMENT GUIDE (3.0)

CONSTRUCT CONTROL

This rod is in the shape of a muscular humanoid carved from a single piece of marble.

If the wielder is within 60 feet of a construct with no Intelligence score, the rod of construct control allows the bearer to override any commands that the construct might have and replace them with new commands as if the wielder were the creator of that construct (see the Golem entry in the Monster Manual).

Against constructs with Intelligence scores, the construct must succeed on a Will save (DC 23) or the wielder takes control.

If its creator is within 60 feet, an intelligent construct gains a +4 bonus on the Will save.

Caster Level: 17th; Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, dominate monster; Market Price: 68,850 gp.

EMBASSY

There are actually many varieties of this item, and they vary so widely in appearance that it is practically impossible to characterize them at all.

Each kind of rod of embassy is keyed to a different plane of existence, most to a specific Outer Plane.

In general, the design and decoration of a given rod is strongly reminiscent of the plane it is keyed to.

Thus, a rod of embassy keyed to the Seven Mounting Heavens of Celestia is made of precious metals and includes images of archons, while one keyed to the Ever-Changing Chaos of Limbo is almost amorphous, resembling an elongated ooze, though careful examination reveals the likenesses of slaadi lightly etched into its surface.

When a creature carries a rod of embassy keyed to its home plane, it is considered to be on that plane for as long as it holds the rod.

The creature's type does not change, but it is no longer considered an extraplanar creature.

Thus, it cannot be sent away by banishment or dismissal, or even the powerful blasphemy, dictum, holy word, and word of chaos spells.

In addition, it can use similar spells to banish other extraplanar creatures as if it were on its home plane.

If a creature holds a rod of embassy keyed to a plane that is not that creature's home plane, the rod has no effect.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, plane shift; Market Price: 20,000 gp.

FORCE

This rod is made of black iron, 18 inches long and a half-inch wide.

The rod has three functions, any of which can be used, in any combination, five times per day.

- Blast of Force: A blast of force projects from the rod with a range of 100 feet.

This is a ranged touch attack and deals 10d6 points of damage.

- Wall of Force: As the spell.

- Blade of Force: A 3-footlong glowing blade of force springs forth from the rod that lasts for 10 rounds.

This can be used as a +1 brilliant energy longsword.

Caster Level: 13th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, magic missile, Mordenkainen's sword, wall of force; Market Price: 125,000 gp.

GHOST

This ornate scepter is made of bluish glass.

Though not suitable for use as a normal melee weapon, it can be used to make a special touch attack against incorporeal creatures.

If this touch attack succeeds, the creature takes 2d4 points of damage.

Once per day, the wielder of a ghost rod can become incorporeal.

This allows the character to harm other incorporeal creatures normally, as well as passing through walls and all the other benefits (and drawbacks) of an incorporeal state, as described in the DUNGEON MASTER's Guide.

The character is not ethereal and has no connection to the Ethereal Plane, unlike a true ghost.

He can remain incorporeal for a maximum of 15 rounds, after which he becomes fully material again.

Caster Level: 15th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, plane shift; Market Price: 50,000 gp.

MIMICRY

This strange, short rod is crowned with an image of a mynah.

When held, its wielder can mimic any voice or sound she has heard.

Listeners must succeed on a Will save (DC 17) to detect the ruse.

The wielder also receives a +10 competence bonus on Disguise, Forgery, and Use Magic Device checks, and can use the ventriloquism spell at will.

Caster Level: 6th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, change self, ventriloquism; Market Price: 30,000 gp.

PARALYSIS

This rod is created out of sickly pink coral and topped with spikes like those on a puffer fish.

The spikes constantly produce an exotic venom that has paralytic qualities.

These rods are commonly created by kuo-toas, who are immune to the effects they produce.

Anyone struck by the rod must succeed on a Fortitude save (DC 25) or be paralyzed for 1d4 rounds.

The wielder can also expend a charge to cast hold person and hold animal twice per day and hold monster once per day (as the spells from a 9th-level caster).

The rod holds 50 charges for the spells, but the poison lasts indefinitely.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, hold monster, hold person; Market Price: 22,000 gp.

TENTACLE

This rod comes in two varieties, greater and lesser. Each appears to be a long, sinuous rod of unknown (but presumably organic) composition. The lesser rod ends in three “branches”, while the greater has six.

Upon command, these branches animate and grapple like tentacles, using their own attack bonus (including the rod’s +3 enhancement bonus) rather than the wielder’s bonus. The rod’s attacks count as a standard action for the wielder. The tentacle attacks follow all the normal rules for grapple attacks, with two exceptions: These attacks don’t incur attacks of opportunity, and the wielder need not move into the target’s space to maintain the grapple. The tentacle, not the wielder, is considered to be the grappler (and the wielder doesn’t suffer any of the drawbacks of grappling).

Treat the rod as a Medium-size creature for purposes of the special size modifier to the grapple check.

Each rod also has one or more special powers that affect any target touched by three (or six) of its tentacles in the same round (regardless of whether the tentacles actually grapple the target).

If all three of the lesser rod’s tentacles touch a target, it must succeed on a Fortitude save (DC 14) or be affected by a slow spell for 12 rounds.

If any three of the greater rod’s tentacles touch a single target, it must succeed on a Will save (DC 14) or be affected by a bestow curse spell (a permanent –4 enhancement penalty on attacks, saves, and checks).

If all six of the greater rod’s tentacles touch a single target in the same round, the victim must succeed on a Fortitude save (DC 17) or take 1 point of permanent Dexterity drain. Each tentacle has hardness 10, 20 hp, and a break DC of 30.

Rod	Number of Attacks	Attack Bonus/ Grapple Check <sup>1</sup>	Damage*	Str
Lesser	3	+9	6 points	16
Greater	6	+15	9 points	22

Caster Level: 12th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, animate objects, bestow curse (greater rod only), Evard’s black tentacles, slow (lesser rod only); Market Price: 21,000 gp (lesser rod) or 57,000 gp (greater rod).

TRACKING

These two identical copper rods are a foot long and topped with a smooth clear crystal.

Taking a full action and doing nothing else, the wielder can determine the exact distance and direction of the other rod. By spending another full action, the wielder can determine if the rod is being held by a creature and what that creature’s current physical status is (alive and healthy, injured, dying, or unconscious).

It does not determine the mental status (dazed, stunned, and the like) or any magical effects (such as charmed or dominated).

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, locate creature, status; Market Price: 37,800 gp.

TREES

This wooden rod resembles a small staff of the woodlands, having a shape that suggests natural growth.

It can be used as a melee weapon as if it were a cudgel with shillelagh cast upon it: It strikes with a +1 enhancement bonus on attack and damage rolls and deals 1d10 points of damage (+1 for its enhancement bonus).

It also grants its wielder a +5 natural armor bonus.

The wielder of a rod of trees can animate trees as a treatant. She can animate trees within 180 feet, controlling up to two trees at a time and no more than two trees per day.

It takes a full round for a normal tree to uproot itself.

Thereafter it moves at a speed of 10 feet and otherwise fights as a treatant in all respects.

The ability is otherwise similar to liveoak from a 12th-level caster.

Caster Level: 12th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, barkskin, liveoak, shillelagh; Market Price: 120,000 gp.

WARNING

This slender, 4-foot-long rod breaks down into four separate sections.

When all four of these sections are planted at least halfway into the ground, they cast alarm and detect scrying as from a 9th-level caster.

The area is defined by the location of the rods and is, in theory, unlimited.

In practice, however, most users find a 300-foot diameter to be the largest useful area.

The alarm lasts until the person who placed a section removes it.

If anyone other than that person removes a section, then the alarm automatically triggers.

The user can also choose what does not trigger the alarm, such as creature type, specifying size from Fine to Gargantuan.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, alarm, detect scrying; Market Price: 58,000 gp.

BOOK OF VILE DARKNESS (3.0)

CELESTIAL BANE

Deep blood red in color, this metal rod is about 2 feet long and topped with a curved spike.

All celestials within 60 feet of the rod take a –4 profane penalty on attack and damage rolls, saving throws, and skill checks.

There is no saving throw against this effect, nor does spell resistance apply.

Caster Level: 13th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, bestow curse, limited wish, creator must be an evil outsider; Market Price: 56,000 gp; Weight: 3 lb.

FLESHEATER

This brown scepter is topped with a device that looks like a tooth-filled mouth.

Once per day, the wielder can summon horrible little creatures of greenish energy that look like minuscule imps or quasits.

These creatures tear at the flesh of one target, eating it as they swarm around.

The flesheaters are not actual creatures, but instead magical effects.

They can be dispelled, but not attacked; attacks directed against them hit the rod's target instead.

The target must succeed at a Fortitude save (DC 18) to resist the flesheaters.

If this save is failed, the target takes 3d6 points of damage per round for 1d6+1 rounds.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, summon monster III; Market Price: 18,000 gp; Weight: 3 lb.

HARROW

This black, slightly twisted metal rod sprays a cone of acid up to 30 feet.

Anyone in the area takes 9d6 points of acid damage (Reflex DC 17 half).

The harrow rod can be used three times per day.

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, cone of cold, Melf's acid arrow; Market Price: 54,000 gp; Weight: 3 lb.

POSSESSION

This rod allows a willing user to draw a fiend or malevolent ghost into himself for possession.

When the rod is activated, the wielder is automatically possessed by the nearest appropriate possessing creature, even if the creature is unwilling.

The identity and attitude of the nearest spirit are often at the DM's discretion.

This rod is frequently used in unspeakable rituals of black magic.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, imprison soul, impotent possessor; Market Price: 20,000 gp; Weight: 3 lb.

COMPLETE ARCANES (3.5)

FURY

A rod of this sort typically has its top carved to resemble the head of an angry deity.

In addition to giving the bearer a deflection bonus to Armor Class (+1 to +5, depending on the type of rod), a rod of fury allows a spellcaster to increase the effectiveness of one spell of 6th level or lower per day, altering it as if it were under the effect of the Empower Spell feat.

Activating this ability is a free action and does not affect the spell level or casting time of the altered spell (even for sorcerers and other spontaneous casters).

Strong abjuration; CL 17th; Craft Rod, Empower Spell, Spell Focus, protection from chaos/evil/good/law, creator's caster level must be at least three times that of the bonus placed in the rod; Price 26,800 gp (+1), 38,800 gp (+2), 58,800 gp (+3), 77,600 gp (+4), 95,600 gp (+5).

INTERFERENCE

This potent device prevents the operation of other magic items.

On command up to three times per day, a rod of interference shoots forth a brilliant sapphire beam that unerringly strikes a single target creature within 60 feet.

The targeted creature must succeed on a DC 19 Will save, or the functions of all magic items currently in its possession are suppressed for 1 minute, as if they were under the effect of a targeted dispel magic.

Moderate abjuration; CL 11th; Craft Rod, greater dispel magic; Price 72,000 gp.

METAMAGIC

Metamagic rods hold the essence of a metamagic feat but do not change the spell slot of the altered spell.

The metamagic rods presented here (modeled after the new metamagic feats presented in Chapter 3 of this book) function in all respects as those described on page 236 of the Dungeon Master's Guide.

Lesser and Greater Metamagic Rods: Normal metamagic rods can be used with spells of 6th level or lower.

Lesser rods can be used with spells of 3rd level or lower, while greater rods can be used with spells of 9th level or lower.

CHAINING

The wielder can cast up to three spells per day that are chained as though using the Chain Spell feat.

Strong (no school); CL 17th; Craft Rod, Chain Spell; Price 27,200 gp (lesser), 108,000 gp (normal), 243,000 gp (greater).

COOPERATION

The wielder can cooperatively cast up to three spells per day as though using the Cooperative Spell feat.

Strong (no school); CL 17th; Craft Rod, Cooperative Spell; Price 2,700 gp (lesser), 10,500 gp (normal), 24,300 gp (greater).

SCULPTING

The wielder can cast up to three spells per day whose areas can be modified as though using the Sculpt Spell feat.

Strong (no school); CL 17th; Craft Rod, Sculpt Spell; Price 5,400 gp (lesser), 21,600 gp (normal), 48,600 gp (greater).

SUBSTITUTION

Four different types of the metamagic rod of substitution exist, each keyed to a different type of energy (acid, cold, electricity, or fire).

The wielder can cast up to three spells per day as though using the appropriate Energy Substitution feat. Strong (no school); CL 17th; Craft Rod, Energy Substitution for the appropriate energy type; Price 2,700 gp (lesser), 10,500 gp (normal), 24,300 gp (greater).

WARLOCK'S SCEPTER

This fearsome device is a +2 light mace with a head in the shape of a demonic horned skull.

When held, it confers a +2 profane bonus on ranged touch attack rolls made with it.

In addition, a warlock (or any other character capable of invoking an eldritch blast) can choose to spend charges from the scepter to increase the amount of damage his eldritch blast deals.

Extra Damage	Charges
+1d6	1 charge
+2d6	2 charges
+3d6	3 charges
+4d6	5 charges

The rod's wielder can expend up to 5 charges in any 24-hour period.

A rod is created with 50 charges.

After all charges are used, the rod remains a +2 light mace, but no longer provides a bonus on ranged touch attack rolls.

Moderate necromancy; CL 10th; Craft Rod, bestow curse; Price 28,000 gp; Weight 3 lb.

COMPLETE MAGE (3.5)

ELDRITCH POWER

Beloved by warlocks, these rods augment the user's eldritch blast.

Description: Although the various types of rods of eldritch power vary somewhat in appearance, they are all made of black iron.

They average 2 feet in length and are carved to resemble the straightened spine of a demonic creature.

A sculpted fiendish or fey-like head, clearly too small for the spine, protrudes from one end.

When the rod is used, the wielder's eldritch blast comes from the carved eyes and mouth of the sculpted head, rather than from his hand.

Activation: A rod of eldritch power requires a swift action to activate.

It functions five times per day.

Effect: Each rod of eldritch power has one invocation—either a blast shape invocation or an eldritch essence invocation—contained within it.

You can will it to apply this invocation to any eldritch blast you fire while holding it.

This allows you to make use of blast shape or eldritch essence invocations you might not normally have, but it does not change the normal restriction that only one invocation of each type can be applied to any given blast. Aura/Caster Level: Varies by equivalent level of the invocation.

Least: Faint, no school. CL 1st.

Lesser: Moderate, no school. CL 6th.

Greater: Moderate, no school. CL 11th.

Dark: Strong, no school. CL 16th.

Construction: Craft Rod, plus whichever invocation is attached to the rod.

The precise costs depend on the grade of the invocation within the rod.

Least: 2,000 gp, 160 XP, 4 days.

Lesser: 8,000 gp, 640 XP, 16 days.

Greater: 18,000 gp, 1,440 XP, 36 days.

Dark: 32,000 gp, 2,560 XP, 64 days.

Weight: 3 lb.

Price: 4,000 gp (least), 16,000 gp (lesser), 36,000 gp (greater), 64,000 gp (dark).

ELEMENTAL MIGHT

Coveted by wu jen everywhere, a rod of elemental might grants you mastery of an additional element.

Description: Rods of elemental might are long, slender rods, inscribed with ancient symbols of power.

The substance of which they are made depends on the element over which they grant mastery: heavy crystal for air, marble for earth, obsidian for fire, coral for water, and mahogany for wood.

Prerequisite: A rod of elemental might functions only for wu jen (or another character with the elemental mastery class feature).

Activation: A rod of elemental might functions as long as you hold it with at least one hand.

It requires no activation.

Effect: You gain the benefits of elemental mastery (+2 effective caster level when casting spells of that element, and a +2 competence bonus on saves against spells of that element) applied to whichever element the rod represents. This benefit is in addition to whichever elemental mastery you already possess.

If you are already a master of the rod's element, the item grants you no further benefits.

Aura/Caster Level: Moderate, no school. CL 17th.

Construction: Craft Rod, creator must be a wu jen with mastery of the relevant element, 4,800 gp, 384 XP, 10 days.

Weight: 3 lb.

Price: 9,600 gp.

MAGICAL PRECISION

A boon to all casters but particularly to combat-focused arcanists, this item improves your accuracy with magical ranged attacks.

Description: A rod of magical precision is a slender rod, almost wand-like in appearance.

Runes and arcane symbols travel up the rod in a spiral pattern, culminating in one great rune printed on the tip.

When the rod is active, the runes pulse with energy, starting at the handle and working up to the top.

The spell appears to emanate from the rod rather than from your own hand.

Activation: The primary function of a rod of magical precision works as long as you hold the item in one or both hands, requiring no action to activate.

It has no limit on daily uses.

The secondary function of the rod requires no specific action to activate, merely an act of will made as part of casting a spell.

It functions up to three times per day.

Effect: While you are holding a rod of magical precision, any ranged attack you make with a spell or spell-like ability at an opponent engaged in melee does not take the standard –4 penalty on your attack roll.

In addition, you can choose for your spell or spell-like ability to ignore the miss chance granted to a target by concealment or total concealment.

In the case of a target that has total concealment, you must still aim at the correct square.

Aura/Caster Level: Faint divination. CL 3rd.

Construction: Craft Rod, true strike, 6,000 gp, 480 XP, 12 days.

Weight: 1 lb.

Price: 12,000 gp.

MANY WANDS

This device, perhaps one of the stranger rods ever created, allows you to utilize more than one wand at a single time.

Description: A rod of many wands is made of steel and constructed in two distinct parts.

The handle end, wrapped in leather, is roughly as thick as the handle of a mace, while the top end is roughly twice that in diameter.

Each makes up about half the length of the rod.

The upper end contains three depressions running down its length, each one designed to hold a wand in place.

Activation: In order to make use of a rod of many wands, you must first load it with as many as three wands you wish to use.

Each wand requires a full-round action to load (or a move action to remove).

After one or more wands are loaded into the rod, they can all be activated by a single command word unique to the rod.

This utterance is a complex phrase in Draconic, and speaking it requires a full-round action, rather than the standard action normally required for command word activation.

Effect: With this rod, you can trigger multiple wands at once.

Although you are not required to fill all three depressions, you cannot selectively activate the wands that you have loaded; activating the rod triggers every wand connected to it.

This process drains a number of charges from each wand equal to the number of wands loaded into the rod.

For instance, if you have fully loaded the rod, each use drains three charges from each wand.

Aura/Caster Level: Moderate, no school. CL 17th.

Construction: Craft Rod, Craft Wand, 13,500 gp, 1,080 XP, 27 days.

Weight: 5 lb.

Price: 27,000 gp.

SHADOWBLENDING

This strange and mysterious tool infuses the wielder's illusions with the stuff of shadow, making them almost real.

Description: A rod of shadowblending is roughly 2 feet in length, but it would likely be a full 3 if it were straight. It resembles a gnarled branch, with odd kinks and twists, but is in fact made of a dark metal that absorbs light rather than reflects it.

When the rod is activated, a black smoke seeps out of both ends of it, swiftly dissipating mere inches from the metal.

Activation: A rod of shadowblending requires a swift action to activate.

You must take advantage of its power within 2 rounds of activation, or the charge dissipates and you must activate it again.

It can be activated up to three times per day.

Effect: A rod of shadowblending infuses your normal illusions with shadow, making them partially real.

This effect allows you to transform any casting of either minor image or major image into a casting of shadow conjuration, and any casting of major image into shadow evocation.

Aura/Caster Level: Moderate illusion. CL 9th.

Construction: Craft Rod, shadow evocation, shadow conjuration, 4,500 gp, 360 XP, 9 days.

Weight: 3 lb.

Price: 9,000 gp.

SPELL CHANNELING

Sought by those who share a link with a familiar, a rod of spell channeling allows you to deliver spells other than touch spells through your companion.

Description: A rod of spell channeling appears to be a short wooden or bone shaft, with numerous animalistic shapes and symbols engraved up and down its length.

Upon activation, the rod hums very lightly, duplicating the call of the species to which your familiar belongs.

Activation: Activating a rod of spell channeling is a free action that you take as you cast the spell to which you wish to apply its effects.

Your familiar must be within 60 feet, and you must have line of sight to it.

The rod can be used three times per day.

Effect: You can cast any spell with a range greater than touch or 0 feet with its source as your familiar, rather than from your own person.

If the spell affects one or more targets, both you and your familiar must have line of sight to any target selected.

For all other purposes (including attack rolls, save DCs, and so on), treat the spell as if you were the caster.

You can apply this effect to spells of 3rd level or lower if using a lesser rod of spell channeling, to spells of 6th level or lower if using a normal rod of spell channeling, and to spells of 9th level or lower if using a greater rod of spell channeling.

Aura/Caster Level: Strong, no school. CL 17th.

Construction: Craft Rod, must have a familiar, 4,500 gp, 360 XP, 9 days (lesser); 16,250 gp, 1,300 XP, 33 days (normal); 36,500 gp, 2,920 XP, 73 days (greater).

Weight: 2 lb.

Price: 9,000 gp (lesser), 32,500 gp (normal), 73,000 (greater).

SPELLHOLDING

This small item acts as a repository of magic, allowing the wearer to “hold” a touch spell while casting other spells, or even to touch other individuals without triggering the spell.

Description: A rod of spellholding is unusually small for a rod; it is only about 1 foot in length and a little over 1 inch in circumference.

A series of tiny symbols that spiral up the length of the rod is revealed, on close inspection, to be a chain of linked hands.

Activation: A rod of spellholding requires a swift action to activate.

This action must be taken in the same round when you cast the touch spell you wish the rod to “hold”.

The rod can hold only a single spell at a time.

Effect: You can hold a touch spell in the rod, allowing you to cast other spells or to touch other creatures, without triggering the spell.

(Normally, you cannot cast other spells while holding a touch spell, and any creature you touch suffers the effect). You can use the held spell by using a standard action and making a melee touch attack; the held spell is expended if you succeed on your attack roll, and it has the normal effect.

The rod cannot hold a spell indefinitely, however; the spell fades in 6 minutes if you have not already used it.

The spell is also lost if the rod of spellholding ever leaves your hands.

Aura/Caster Level: Moderate, no school. CL 6th.

Construction: Craft Rod, 4,500 gp, 360 XP, 9 days.

Weight: 1 lb.

Price: 9,000 gp.

WARBRINGER

A boon to warriors everywhere, a warbringer's rod allows soldiers and fighters to mystically augment their abilities without waiting for assistance from an allied spellcaster.

Description: A warbringer's rod is a heavy bar of iron with a steel head at the top.

The head is flanged, allowing it to function as a mace.

When one of the rod's magical abilities is activated, the handle grows warm, and the wielder hears a battle cry reverberating in his head.

Activation: The normal enhancement bonus of a warbringer's rod and the feat-related benefit require no activation to function.

The spell effects contained within a warbringer's rod require a command word to activate; this takes a standard action.

The specific words vary from rod to rod, but include phrases such as “Grant me strength!” and “Let blood flow!”

Once it is activated, a warbringer's rod cannot be activated again until an arcane spell of 3rd level or higher has been placed into it (much as the way a ring of spell storing functions, though the precise spell doesn't matter).

Effect: A warbringer's rod functions as a +1 heavy mace.

If the wielder has any feats that apply only to a specific weapon (such as Weapon Focus), he can apply the feats' benefit to this weapon as well.

In addition, when it is activated, the rod casts both bear's endurance and bull's strength on the wielder simultaneously.

These spells remain active as long as the wielder holds the rod (up to the normal duration of each spell).

Aura/Caster Level: Faint transmutation. CL 5th.

Construction: Craft Rod, Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Weapon Focus (any), bear's endurance, bull's strength, greater magic weapon, 4,312 gp, 320 XP, 8 days.

Weight: 8 lb.

Price: 8,312 gp.

COMPLETE SCOUNDREL (3.5)

ROPES

This versatile item meets your every rope-related need.

Description: Crafted from the darkest teak and repeatedly stained until it holds a lustrous black shine, this rod is a sculpted, 18-inch-long baton.

Closer inspection (Search DC 15) reveals three barely perceptible concave indentations in the middle third of the rod.

Activation: The three indentations act as buttons.

Pressing any one of the rod's buttons requires a move action.

Effect: The rod has three functions, each of which can be employed an unlimited number of times.

However, no two functions can be used at the same time

Rope: When you press button 1, rope begins to extrude from one end of the rod at the rate of 60 feet per round.

The rod can extrude 300 feet of rope in this manner.

Pressing the button a second time stops the rope from extruding.

Pressing it a third time draws the rope back in, also at a rate of 60 feet per round.

Any knot in the rope automatically unties when it comes within 30 feet of the rod.

This rope has the same hardness and hit points as the rest of the rod.

Grappling Hook and Rope: When you press button 2, a small leather wrist loop springs from one end of the rod and three sharp grappling hooks sprout from the other end.

Pressing the button again launches one-third of the rod (the end with the three hooks) in the direction you aim it.

A length of rope up to 300 feet long trails behind the launched section and connects it with the end you hold; all 300 feet of rope can discharge in 1 round.

The rope stops unreeling if the hooks strike something solid (including a creature) or if you give the rod a quick backward jerk.

Pressing the button a third time retracts the rope, drawing the held end toward the hooked end if it is secured properly.

The retracting feature can pull up to 1,000 pounds with it, drawing up 60 feet of rope per round.

The rope has the same hardness and hit points as the rest of the rod.

This function can be used to attack and push back opponents within 30 feet (beyond that distance it lacks sufficient power).

On a successful ranged attack (no range increment) the hooked end deals 1d6 points of damage.

The force of the blow is considerable, and those struck by it are subject to a bull rush effect (treat the hooked end as having a +5 bonus on its opposed check).

The hooked end cannot pursue a pushed opponent.

Grappling Hooks and Slide: When you press button 3, three sharp grappling hooks sprout from each end of the rod. Pressing the button again launches the two ends of the rod (each one-third of its length) in opposite directions simultaneously.

A length of rope up to 300 feet long trails behind each launched section and connects it with the middle third you hold (all 600 feet of rope can discharge in 1 round).

The grappling hooks work exactly as described above, including the possibility of bull rushing opponents.

Pressing the button a third time causes part of the middle section to expand slightly in diameter and slide freely along the extruded rope.

The slide can be released from the remaining part of the middle section by squeezing it to loosen it.

Two hand loops allow you to slide down the rope if it is at an angle.

Regardless of the angle of the rope or the load on it (up to 1,000 pounds), if attached firmly the rope does not sag.

Pushing any button a second time returns the rod to its previous (unactivated) state.

Aura/Caster Level: Moderate transmutation; CL 10th.

Construction: Craft Rod, animate rope, 2,000 gp, 160 XP, 4 days.

Weight: 4 lb.

Price: 4,000 gp.

Price: 20,576 gp; Weight: 6 lb.

DRACONOMICON (3.5)

DRAGON MASTERY

This scepter functions much like a rod of rulership, though it affects only dragons.

The wielder can command the obedience and fealty of dragons within 500 feet when she activates the device (a standard action).

Dragons totaling 300 Hit Dice can be ruled, but those with Intelligence scores of 16 or higher are entitled to a DC 22 Will save to negate the effect.

Ruled dragons obey the wielder as if she were their absolute sovereign.

Still, if the wielder gives a command that is contrary to the nature of the dragons commanded, the magic is broken.

A rod of dragon mastery can be used for 500 minutes before it crumbles to dust.

This duration need not be continuous.

There are two versions of this powerful magic item.

The crimson rod of dragon mastery affects only evil and neutral dragons, while the golden rod of dragon mastery affects only good and neutral dragons.

Strong enchantment; CL 20th; Craft Rod, mass charm monster; Price 120,000 gp.

DRAGON MAGIC (3.5)

DRAGON HEART

Dragon lords (see page 38) and other war leaders hold these rods aloft in battle, letting a wave of fear wash over their foes, much as if a dragon were present.

Description: A rod of the dragon heart is an iron shaft about 1 foot long with a small cage at the top.

Within the cage is a purple crystal shaped like a dragon's heart.

When its bearer is engaged in battle, fleeting apparitions of tiny dragons appear in the air above the rod of the dragon heart.

The apparitions are clearly not real, and each remains for just a second or two before vanishing.

But for opponents of the rod's bearer, the brief images have an unsettling, sinister quality.

Activation: To activate a rod of the dragon heart, the wielder's current hit points must equal or exceed half his full normal hit points.

He must hold the rod in one hand and utter the command word (a standard action), which is often an ancient dragon's name, such as "Paelchronithrax" or "Tueranachtrus".

The rod is active for a maximum of 10 rounds per day, split up however the wielder likes.

He can turn off the rod with a mental command (a free action).

While the rod is active, if the wielder's current hit points fall below half his full normal hit points, the rod immediately turns off.

Effect: Enemies within 30 feet of the wielder when he activates the rod (or who come within 30 feet of an already active rod) must attempt DC 16 Will saves.

Foes who fail their saves are shaken as long as they remain within 120 feet of the rod.

Foes who make their saves are immune to the effects of the rod of the dragon heart for 24 hours.

Creatures immune to a dragon's frightful presence are immune to the rod's effect.

Aura/Caster level: Moderate necromancy; CL 7th.

Construction: Craft Rod, fear, 4,000 gp, 160 XP, 8 days.

Weight: 5 lb.

Price: 8,000 gp.

DRAGON'S BLOOD

This potent rod feeds off the wielder's draconic bloodline to enhance his magical abilities.

While a sorcerer can access the rod's power, true dragons gain even greater benefit.

Description: This 5-foot-long, russet-stained rod is carved from the bone of a dragon and covered in draconic runes. When the rod is activated, dark red blood runs down the rod, soaking the hand of the wielder.

Prerequisite: A lesser rod of dragon's blood functions only for characters of the dragon type or the dragonblood subtype, as well as for any character with at least 1 level of sorcerer.

Activation: Activating a lesser rod of dragon's blood requires the same action normally required to cast the chosen spell (see Effect, below). The rod can be activated three times per day.

Effect: When activated, a lesser rod of dragons blood allows the wielder to recast any spell of up to 2nd level that he cast in the previous round.

Doing this doesn't use another spell slot.

Only spells with a casting time of 1 standard action or less can be recast using the lesser rod of dragons blood.

Wielders of the dragon type instead can reuse any spell-like ability of up to 2nd level that they used in the previous round.

This doesn't count against their normal daily limit for that spell-like ability.

The rod also functions as a quarterstaff.

Variant: A greater rod of dragon's blood allows the wielder to recast any spell of up to 4th level he cast in the previous round, or to reuse any spell-like ability of up to 4th level it used in the previous round.

It otherwise functions as a lesser rod of dragon's blood.

Aura/Caster Level: Strong transmutation; CL 17th.

Construction: Craft Rod, creator must be able to cast spells without preparation, 5,000 gp (or 20,000 gp for greater rod), 400 XP (or 1,600 XP for greater rod), 10 days (or 40 days for greater rod).

Weight: 4 lb.

Price: 10,000 gp (lesser) or 40,000 gp (greater).

DRAGONS OF FAERÛN (3.5)

DARK LADY

Priests of Tiamat created these rods to help them combat the minions of Xymor.

The rods grant their wielder abilities that offset the powers and advantages of good dragons.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about rods of the Dark Lady by making Knowledge (arcana) or Knowledge (religion) checks.

DC 20: These rods were first created by Shudu-Ab, the former high priestess of the church of Tiamat in Unther. She created them to take away the advantages that good dragons had over the evil cultists.

DC 30: Shudu-Ab relished the idea of confounding the noble dragons by making their fights unfair.

She knew that these rods were frustrating items to the dragons, and that even the threat of their presence in a battle tended to diminish the prowess of the metallic dragons.

Description: This rod is a thick baton of solid obsidian.

It seems to absorb light around it, tracing lines of darkness in the air.

Effect: Twice per day, on command, the wielder of a rod of the Dark Lady can fire a chromatic ray (see page 113) at a good dragon.

Once per day, the wielder can use a shadow of the Dark Queen effect (see page 118), to block and harm good dragons.

In addition, the rod can be used as a divine focus, granting a +2 bonus to caster level when a wielder casts a spell that uses it as a component.

Moderate Divination; CL 9th; Craft Rod, chromatic ray, shadow of the Dark Queen; Price 55,000 gp; Cost 27,500 gp + 2,200 XF.

DRAGON DOWSING

This kind of rod was created to help its wielder sense the directions of dragons.

It pulls its wielder toward the nearest individual dragon or the nearest dragon of a particular kind.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about dragon dowsing rods by making Knowledge (religion) checks.

DC 20: Shamanic giants who worshiped Memnor (the evil cloud giant deity of evil, cunning, and knowledge) developed the prototype for these rods.

They used the rods to locate wyrmling metallic dragons and slay, torture, or enslave them.

DC 30: The formula for the rods was stolen from the shamans of Memnor by a coalition of priests of Hiatea, Stronmaus, and Iallanis (good deities of giants).

They used it to counteract the activities of the shamans of Memnor by rescuing the dragons and turning them over to the protection of the Talons of Justice.

Description: When the command word is spoken, the rod unfolds to become a device similar to a weather vane, but about half the size.

Effect: In order to use the rod, the wielder must concentrate on an individual dragon or a kind of dragon (such as silver, brown, green, half-deep, or smoke drake) for 10 minutes.

After this period, the vane will spin for 1 round, then point in the direction of the nearest dragon of that kind.

If the wielder of the rod continues to hold the rod and travels in the direction indicated, he feels the rod pulling him toward the target.

The closer the wielder gets to the target, the stronger the rod pulls.

Only a mind blank spell or the intervention of a deity can hide the location of a dragon from this rod.

The rod can be used no more than three times per day and no more than once on a single dragon (or kind of dragon) per day.

Strong divination; CL 15th; Craft Rod, discern locations Price 50,000 gp; Cost 25,000 gp + 2,000 XP.

SCEPTER OF CIMBAR

The scepter of Cimbar is the traditional rod of office of the Sceptenar of Cimbar.

Although only one of these items exists, it is theoretically possible to create other scepters that have a similar function.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about the scepter of Cimbar by making Knowledge (arcana) or Knowledge (history) checks.

DC 20: The scepter of Cimbar has been wielded by the Sceptenar of Cimbar, nominal ruler of Chessenta, since Tchazzar's disappearance in the Year of the Dracorage (1018 DR).

DC 30: During his reign, the Father of Chessenta sought to distance himself from the mundane tasks of government that might undermine his claims to divinity.

As such, he appointed a faceless, voiceless viceroy to deal with the daily tasks of government, an office (traditionally held by a powerful arcane spellcaster) that came to be known as the Sceptenar of Cimbar.

The first sceptenar crafted this rod of office according to Tchazzar's specifications.

Description: The scepter of Cimbar is a 2-foot-long silver rod inset with pieces of jet, which have been carved and positioned to resemble a stylized dragon rampant.

The scepter's ball-shaped hilt has a hole through its center, so that the scepter can be hung on a sash cord around the waist.

Effect: The scepter of Cimbar changes the appearance of the bearer to that of a faceless, androgynous humanoid of average build and hue, as the veil spell.

If the bearer can cast arcane spells, he can use detect thoughts at will.

Furthermore, if the bearer can cast arcane spells, he can send a telepathic message to anyone whose surface thoughts he is reading (allowing two-way communication while still allowing the bearer to hide his identity).

Strong illusion; CL 11th; Craft Rod, detect thoughts, veil; Price 152,200 gp; Cost 76,125 gp + 6,090 XP.

DROW OF THE UNDERDARK (3.5)

ARACHNID

Price (Item Level): 12,000 gp (13th)

Body Slot: — (held)

Caster Level: 8th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 19) conjuration

Activation: Standard (manipulation)

Weight: 5 lb.

This 3-foot-long rod is made of pale wood bound with bone bands. Images of black dancing spiders cover each band.

Three times per day, you can shoot forth sticky webbing as a ranged touch attack out to a range of 60 feet.

Targets struck are entangled and must succeed on a DC 20 Escape Artist check to wriggle free or a DC 24 Strength check to break through the sticky bindings.

As with webs created by the web spell, this webbing is extremely flammable: It is burned away after taking 10 points of fire damage.

As one or more of your uses per day, you can shoot a sticky strand of webbing out to a range of 120 feet.

The strand remains attached to the end of the rod until you release it (a move action).

You can cause the rod to reel in the strand (a standard action) at a rate of 10 feet per round.

The strand is strong enough to bear up to 500 pounds of weight, so if you fire the strand at a ledge overhead, you can reel in the strand, lifting you toward the ledge at a rate of 10 feet per round.

If this function is used against a creature, you must succeed on a ranged touch attack.

The creature can break free of the strand by attacking it (hardness 5, hp 10), burning it (as above), or succeeding on a DC 24 Strength check to break free.

If you reel in the creature, it must succeed on a DC 24 Strength check or be pulled forward.

If the Strength check fails by 5 or more, the target falls prone.

Prerequisite: Craft Rod, web, drow.

Cost to Create: 6,000 gp, 480 XP, 12 days.

DEMON

Price (Item Level): 20,308 gp (15th)

Body Slot: — (held)

Caster Level: 18th

Aura: Strong; (DC 24) conjuration

Activation: — and full-round (manipulation)

Weight: 6 lb.

This red and black rod is three feet long.

Black, barbed thorns sprout from its surface.

It is warm to the touch.

The demon rod functions as a +1 morningstar.

Good creatures struck with it must succeed on a DC 20 Will save or be shaken for 1 round.

Three times per day, you can spend a full-round action to make a melee touch attack with the demon rod.

If you hit, the target takes no damage, but must make a DC 20 Will save or become panicked for 3 rounds.

While you wield a demon rod, chaotic evil outsiders you summon gain a +2 profane bonus on melee attack rolls and damage rolls and gain +2 hit points per Hit Die for 6 additional rounds.

Finally, once per day, you can use the demon rod to conjure a vroek demon.

The vroek appears anywhere within 45 feet and remains for 6 rounds.

When it appears, you must make an opposed Charisma check as a free action to exert your control over it.

If you succeed, the demon follows your commands as is normal for a summon monster VIII spell, if you fail, the demon attacks you instead.

If you do not have an evil alignment, the demon rod bestows one negative level for as long as you carry it; this negative level disappears when you drop the rod.

The negative level never results in actual level loss, but it cannot be overcome in any way (including restoration spells) while you carry the rod.

Prerequisite: Augment Summoning, Craft Rod, fear, summon monster VIII, chaotic evil.

Cost to Create: 10,000 gp (plus 308 gp for masterwork morningstar), 800 XP, 20 days.

Sharp metal barbs cover one end, while the other is wrapped in black leather.

Upon grasping a flaying rod, you cause the barbs to slip free of the head on thin adamantine chains.

The flaying rod functions as a +1 scourge of speed.

(A scourge deals 1d8 points of damage, threatens a critical hit on a 20, and does ×2 damage on a confirmed critical hit).

If you confirm a critical hit with a flaying rod, the creature struck is wracked with pain and cowers for 1 round.

Creatures immune to critical hits are immune to this effect.

When you cast spells with the fear descriptor when holding a flaying rod, your caster level increases by 1.

Prerequisite: Craft Rod, daze monster, fear, haste, drow.

Once per day.

you can use one of the following: clairaudience/clairvoyance, discern lies, dispel magic, or suggestion.

If you are not a female drow, the rod bestows one negative level for as long as you carry it; this negative level disappears when you drop the rod.

DUNGEON MASTER'S GUIDE 3.0 (3.0)

ABSORPTION

This rod acts as a magnet, drawing spells or spell-like abilities into itself.

The magic absorbed must be a single-target spell or a ray directed either at the character possessing the rod or her gear.

The rod then nullifies the spell's effect and stores its potential until the wielder releases this energy in the form of spells of her own.

She can instantly detect a spell's level as the rod absorbs that spell's energy.

Absorption requires no action on the part of the user if the rod is in hand at the time.

A running total of absorbed (and used) spell levels should be kept.

For example, a rod that absorbs a 6th-level spell and a 3rd-level spell has a total of nine absorbed spell levels.

The wielder of the rod can use captured spell energy to cast any spell she has prepared, without expending the preparation itself.

The only restrictions are that the levels of spell energy stored in the rod must be equal to or greater than the level of the spell the wielder wants to cast, that any material components required for the spell be present, and that the rod be in hand when casting.

Continuing the example above, the rod wielder could use the nine absorbed spell levels to cast one 9th-level spell, or one 5th-level and one 4th-level spell, or nine 1st-level spells, and so on.

For casters such as bards or sorcerers who do not prepare spells, the rod's energy can be used to cast any spell of the appropriate level or levels that they know.

The rod of absorption absorbs a maximum of fifty spell levels and can thereafter only discharge any remaining potential it might have.

The rod cannot be recharged.

The wielder knows the rod's remaining absorbing potential and current amount of stored energy.

A more specific example: Jozan the cleric uses a brand-new rod of absorption to nullify the effect of a suggestion spell cast at him by a sorcerer.

The rod has now absorbed three spell levels and can absorb forty-seven more.

Jozan can cast any 1st-, 2nd-, or 3rd-level spell he has prepared, without loss of that preparation, by using the stored potential of the rod.

Let's assume he casts hold person back at the sorcerer who just attacked him.

This spell is 2nd level for him, so the rod still holds one spell level of potential, can absorb forty-seven more, and has disposed of two spell levels permanently.

To determine the absorption potential remaining in a newly found rod, roll d% and divide the result by 2.

Then roll d% again: On a result of 01–30, half the levels already absorbed by the rod are still stored within.

For example, if the first roll determines that the rod has thirty-four levels of absorption potential remaining, that means the rod has absorbed sixteen levels' worth of spells. Half of sixteen is eight, so there's a 30% chance that it still holds eight absorbed spell levels ready for use.

Caster Level: 15th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, spell turning;

Market Price: 50,000 gp.

ALERTNESS

This rod is indistinguishable from a +1 light mace.

It has eight flanges on its mace-like head.

The rod bestows a +1 initiative bonus.

If grasped firmly, the rod enables the holder to detect evil, detect good, detect chaos, detect law, detect magic, discern lies, or see invisibility.

The use of these powers can be done freely with the rod, each different use taking a separate standard action.

If the head of a rod of alertness is planted in the ground, and the possessor wills it to alertness (a standard action), the rod senses any creature within 120 feet who intends to harm the possessor.

Each of the flanges on the rod's head then casts a light spell along the direction it faces (usually north, northeast, east, southeast, south, southwest, west, and northwest) out to a 60-foot range.

At the same time, the rod creates the effect of a prayer spell upon all creatures friendly to the possessor in a 20-foot radius.

Immediately thereafter, the rod sends forth a mental alert to these friendly creatures, warning them of possible danger from the unfriendly creature or creatures within the 120-foot radius.

These effects last for 10 minutes, and the rod can perform this function once per day.

Last, the rod can be used to simulate the casting of an animate objects spell, utilizing any eight (or fewer) objects located roughly around the perimeter of a 5-foot-radius circle centered on the rod when planted in the ground.

Objects remain animated for 10 minutes.

The rod can perform this function once per day.

Caster Level: 14th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, light, detect magic, alarm, detect chaos, detect evil, detect good, detect law, discern lies, see invisibility, prayer, animate objects; Market Price: 72,000 gp.

CANCELLATION

This dreaded rod is a bane to magic items, for its touch drains an item of all magical properties.

The item touched gets a saving throw (DC 19).

If a creature is holding it at the time, then the item can use the holder's Will save bonus in place of its own if the holder's is better.

In such cases, contact is made by making a melee touch attack roll.

Upon draining an item, the rod itself becomes brittle and cannot be used again.

Drained items are only restorable by wish or miracle.

(If a sphere of annihilation and a rod of cancellation negate each other, nothing can restore either of them).

Caster Level: 15th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, dispel magic; Market

Price: 11,000 gp.

ENEMY DETECTION

This device pulses in the wielder's hand and points in the direction of any creature or creatures hostile to the bearer of the device (nearest ones first).

These creatures can be invisible, ethereal, hidden, disguised, or in plain sight.

Detection range is 60 feet.

The rod can be used three times each day, each use lasting up to 10 minutes.

Activating the rod is a standard action.

Caster Level: 10th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, discern lies; Market

Price: 23,500 gp.

FLAILING

Upon the command of its possessor, the rod activates, changing from a normal-seeming rod to a +3 dire flail. The dire flail is a double weapon, which means that each of the weapon's heads can be used to attack (see the weapon description in Chapter 7: Equipment, page 100 in the Player's Handbook).

The wielder can gain an extra attack (with the second head) at the cost of making all attacks at a –2 penalty (as if she had the Two-Weapon Fighting and Ambidexterity feats).

Once per day the wielder can use a free action to cause the rod to grant her a +4 deflection bonus to Armor Class and a +4 resistance bonus to saving throws for 10 minutes.

The rod need not be in weapon form to grant this benefit. Transforming it into a weapon or back into a rod is a move-equivalent action.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, Craft Magic Arms and Armor, bleed; Market Price: 40,000 gp.

FLAME EXTINGUISHING

This rod can extinguish Medium-size or smaller nonmagical fires with simply a touch (a standard action). Extinguishing a Large or larger nonmagical fire, or a magic fire of Medium-size or smaller (such as that of a flaming weapon or a burning hands spell), expends 1 charge.

Continual magic flames, such as those of a weapon or a fire creature, are suppressed for 6 rounds and flare up again after that time.

To extinguish an instantaneous fire spell, the rod must be within the area of the effect and the wielder must have used a ready action, effectively countering the entire spell.

When applied to Large or larger magic fires, such as those caused by fireball, flame strike, or wall of fire, extinguishing the flames expends 2 charges from the rod.

If the device is used upon a fire creature, a successful attack roll deals 6d6 points of damage to the creature. This requires 3 charges.

The rod has 10 charges, renewed each day.

Caster Level: 12th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, pyrotechnics; Market Price: 15,000 gp.

IMMOVABLE

This rod is a flat iron bar with a small button on one end. When the button is pushed (a move-equivalent action), the rod does not move from where it is, even if staying in place defies gravity.

Thus, the owner can lift or place the rod wherever he wishes, push the button, and let go.

Adventurers have found the immovable rod useful for holding ropes, barring doors, and all sorts of other utilitarian tasks.

Many adventurers have found it useful to have more than one.

Several immovable rods can even make a ladder when used together (although only two are needed).

An immovable rod can support up to 8,000 pounds before falling to the ground.

If a creature pushes against an immovable rod, it must make a Strength check (DC 30) to move it up to 10 feet in a single round.

Caster Level: 10th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, levitate; Market Price: 7,500 gp.

LORDLY MIGHT

This rod has functions that are spell-like, and it can also be used as a magic weapon of various sorts.

It also has several more mundane uses.

The rod of lordly might is metal, thicker than other rods, with a flanged ball at one end and six stud-like buttons along its length.

(Pushing any of the rod's buttons is equivalent to drawing a weapon).

It weighs 10 pounds.

The following spell-like functions of the rod can each be used once per day.

- Hold person upon touch, if the wielder so commands (DC 14).

The wielder must choose to use this power and then succeed with a melee touch attack to activate the power.

If the attack fails, the effect is lost.

- Fear upon all enemies viewing it, if the wielder so desires (10-foot maximum range, DC 16).

Invoking this power is a standard action.

- Deal 2d4 hit points of damage to an opponent on a successful touch attack and cure the wielder of a like amount of damage (DC 17).

The wielder must choose to use this power before attacking, as with hold person.

The following weapon uses of the rod have no limits on their use.

- In its normal form, the rod can be used as a +2 light mace.
- When button 1 is pushed, the rod becomes a +1 flaming longsword.

A blade springs from the ball, with the ball itself becoming the sword's hilt.

The weapon lengthens to an overall length of 4 feet.

- When button 2 is pushed, the rod becomes a +4 battleaxe.

A wide blade springs forth at the ball, and the whole lengthens to 4 feet.

- When button 3 is pushed, the rod becomes a +3 shortspear or longspear.

The spear blade springs forth, and the handle can be lengthened up to 12 feet (wielder's choice), for an overall length of from 6 feet to 15 feet.

At its 15-foot length, the rod is suitable for use as a lance.

The following mundane uses of the rod also have no limits on their use.

- Climbing pole/ladder. When button 4 is pushed, a spike that can anchor in granite is extruded from the ball, while the other end sprouts three sharp hooks.

The rod lengthens to anywhere between 5 and 50 feet in a single round, stopping when button 4 is pushed again.

Horizontal bars three inches long fold out from the sides, 1 foot apart, in staggered progression.

The rod is firmly held by the spike and hooks and can bear up to 4,000 pounds.

The wielder can retract the pole by pushing button 5.

- The ladder function can be used to force open doors.

The wielder plants the rod's base 30 feet or less from the portal to be forced and in line with it, then pushes button 4.

The force exerted has a +12 Strength bonus.

- When button 6 is pushed, the rod indicates magnetic north and gives the wielder a knowledge of his approximate depth beneath the surface or height above it.

Caster Level: 19th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, Craft Magic Arms and Armor, inflict light wounds, bull's strength, flame blade, hold person, fear; Market Price: 70,000 gp.

METAL AND MINERAL DETECTION

This rod pulses in the wielder's hand and points to the largest mass of metal within 30 feet.

However, the wielder can concentrate on a specific metal or mineral (gold, platinum, quartz, beryl, diamond, corundum, and so on).

If the specific mineral is within 30 feet, the rod points to any places it is located, and the rod wielder knows the approximate quantity as well.

If more than one deposit of the specified metal or mineral is within range, the rod points to the largest cache first.

Each operation requires a full-round action.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, locate object; Market Price: 10,500 gp.

NEGATION

This device negates the spell or spell-like function or functions of magic items.

The wielder points the rod at the magic item, and a pale gray beam shoots forth to touch the target device, attacking as a ray (a ranged touch attack).

The ray negates any currently active item function and has a 75% chance to negate any other spell or spell-like functions of that device, regardless of the level or power of the functions, for 2d4 rounds.

To negate instantaneous effects, the rod wielder needs to have used a ready action.

The target item gets no saving throw or means to resist this effect, although the rod can't negate artifacts (even minor artifacts).

The rod can function three times per day.

Caster Level: 16th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, dispel magic, and limited wish or miracle; Market Price: 44,600 gp.

PYTHON

This rod is longer than normal rods.

It is about 4 feet long and weighs 10 pounds.

It strikes as a +2 quarterstaff.

If the user throws the rod to the ground (a standard action), it grows to become a 25-foot-long Huge constrictor snake (see the Monster Manual for complete statistics) by the end of the round.

The python obeys all commands of the owner.

(In animal form, it lacks the +2 enhancement bonus to attacks and damage possessed by the rod form).

The serpent returns to rod form (a full-round action) whenever the wielder desires, or whenever it moves farther than 100 feet from the owner.

If the snake form is slain, it returns to rod form and cannot be activated again for three days.

A python rod only functions if the possessor is good.

Caster Level: 10th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, Craft Magic Arms and Armor, polymorph other, creator must be good; Market Price: 13,000 gp.

RULERSHIP

This rod looks like a royal scepter worth at least 5,000 gp in materials and workmanship alone.

The wielder can command the obedience and fealty of creatures within 120 feet when she activates the device (a standard action).

Creatures totaling 300 Hit Dice can be ruled, but creatures with Intelligence scores of 12 or higher are entitled to a Will saving throw (DC 16) to negate the effect.

Ruled creatures obey the wielder as if she were their absolute sovereign.

Still, if the wielder gives a command that is contrary to the nature of the creatures commanded, the magic is broken. The rod can be used for 500 total minutes before crumbling to dust.

This duration need not be continuous.

Caster Level: 20th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, mass charm; Market Price: 60,000 gp.

SECURITY

This item creates a nondimensional space, a pocket paradise.

There the rod's possessor and as many as 199 other creatures can stay in complete safety for a period of time, up to 200 days divided by the number of creatures affected.

Thus, one creature (the rod's possessor) can stay for 200 days, four creatures can stay for 50 days, or a group of 60 creatures can stay for three days.

All fractions are rounded down, so that a group numbering between 101 and 200 inclusive can stay for one day only.

In this pocket paradise, creatures don't age, and natural healing take place at twice the normal rate.

Fresh water and food (fruits and vegetables only) are in abundance.

The climate is comfortable for all creatures involved.

Activating the rod (a standard action) causes the wielder and all creatures touching the rod to be transported instantaneously to the paradise.

Members of large groups can hold hands or otherwise maintain physical contact, allowing all connected creatures in a circle or a chain to be affected by the rod.

Unwilling creatures get a Will saving throw (DC 17) to negate the effect.

If such a creature succeeds at its save, other creatures beyond that point in a chain can still be affected by the rod. When the rod's effect expires or is dispelled, all the affected creatures instantly reappear in the location they occupied when the rod was activated.

If something else occupies the space that a traveler would be returning to, then his body is displaced a sufficient distance to provide the space required for reentry.

The rod's possessor can dismiss the effect whenever he wishes before the maximum time period expires, but the rod can only be activated once per week.

Caster Level: 20th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, gate; Market Price: 61,000 gp.

SPLENDOR

The possessor of this rod gains a +4 enhancement bonus to her Charisma score for as long as she holds or carries the item.

Once per day, the rod creates and garbs her in clothing of the finest fabrics, plus adornments of furs and jewels. Apparel created by the magic of the rod remains in existence for 12 hours.

However, if she attempts to sell or give away any part of it, to use it for a spell component, or the like, all the apparel immediately disappears.

The same applies if any of it is forcibly taken from her.

The value of noble garb created by the rod ranges from 7,000 to 10,000 gp (1d4+6 times 1,000 gp)—1,000 gp for the fabric alone, 5,000 gp for the furs, and the rest for the jewel trim (maximum of twenty gems, maximum value 200 gp each).

In addition, the rod has a second special power, usable once per week.

Upon command, it creates a palatial tent—a huge pavilion of silk 60 feet across.

Inside the tent are temporary furnishings and food suitable to the splendor of the pavilion and sufficient to entertain as many as one hundred persons.

The tent and its trappings last for one day.

At the end of that time, the tent and all objects associated with it (including any items that were taken out of the tent) disappear.

Caster Level: 12th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, fabricate, major creation; Market Price: 25,000 gp.

THUNDER AND LIGHTNING

Constructed of iron set with silver rivets, this rod has the properties of a +2 light mace.

Its other magical powers are as follows:

- Thunder: Once per day, the rod can strike as a +3 light mace, and the opponent struck is stunned from the noise of the rod's impact (Fortitude negates DC 13).

Activating this power counts as a free action, and it works if the wielder strikes an opponent within 1 round.

- Lightning: Once per day, a short spark of electricity can leap forth when the rod strikes an opponent to deal the normal damage for a +2 light mace (1d6) and +2d6 points of bonus electricity damage.

Even when the rod might not score a normal hit in combat, if the roll was good enough to count as a successful melee touch attack hit, then the +2d6 points of bonus electrical damage still applies.

The wielder activates this power as a free action, and it works if he strikes an opponent within 1 round.

- Thunderclap: Once per day as a standard action, the rod can create a deafening noise, just as a shout spell (DC 14, 2d6 points of sonic damage, target deafened for 2d6 rounds).

- Lightning Stroke: Once per day as a standard action, a 5-foot-wide lightning bolt (9d6 points of damage, DC 14) can blast from the rod to a range of 200 feet.

- Thunder and Lightning: Once per week as a standard action, the rod can combine the thunderclap described above with a forked lightning bolt, as in the lightning stroke.

The thunderclap affects all within 10 feet of the bolt.

The lightning alone deals 9d6 points of damage (count rolls of 1 or 2 as rolls of 3, for a range of 27 to 54 points), plus 2d6 more for the thunderclap.

A single Reflex saving throw applies for both effects (DC 14), with deafness and half damage suffered by those who are successful.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, Craft Magic Arms and Armor, lightning bolt, shout; Market Price: 23,000 gp.

VIPER

This rod strikes as a +1 heavy mace.

Once per day, upon command (a free action), the head of the rod becomes that of an actual serpent for 10 minutes. During this period, any successful strike with the rod deals normal damage and poisons the creature hit.

The poison deals 1d10 points of temporary Constitution damage immediately (Fortitude negates DC 14) and another 1d10 points of temporary Constitution damage 1 minute later (Fortitude negates DC 14).

The rod only functions if the possessor is evil.

Caster Level: 10th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, Craft Magic Arms and Armor, poison, creator must be evil; Market Price: 19,000 gp.

WITHERING

The rod of withering acts as a +1 light mace that deals no hit point damage.

Instead, the wielder deals 1d4 points of temporary Strength damage and 1d4 points of temporary Constitution damage to any creature she touches with the rod (by making a melee touch attack).

If she scores a critical hit, the damage from that hit is actually permanent ability drain.

In either case, the defender negates the effect with a Fortitude save (DC 14).

Caster Level: 13th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, Craft Magic Arms and Armor, contagion; Market Price: 17,000 gp.

WONDER

The rod of wonder is a strange and unpredictable device that randomly generates any number of weird effects each time it is used.

(Activating the rod is a standard action).

The usual effects are shown on the table below, but you may alter these for any or all of these as you see fit for your own campaign.

Typical powers of the rod include all of the following:

ROD OF WONDER

d%	Wondrous Effect
01-05	Slow creature pointed at for 10 rounds (DC 13).
06-10	Faerie fire surrounds the target (DC 11).
11-15	Deludes wielder for 1 round into believing the rod functions as indicated by a second die roll (no save).
16-20	Oust of wind , but at windstorm force; see Weather Hazards, page 87 (DC 13).
21-25	Wielder learns target's surface thoughts (as with detect thoughts ) for 1d4 rounds (no save).
26-30	Stinking cloud at 30-ft. range (DC 12).
31-33	Heavy rain falls for 1 round in 60-ft. radius centered on rod wielder.
34-36	Summon an animal—a rhino (01-25 result on d%), elephant (26-50), or mouse (51-100).
37-46	Lightning bolt (70 ft. long, 5 ft. wide), 6d6 points of damage (DC 13).
47-49	Stream of 600 large butterflies pours forth and flutters around for 2 rounds, blinding everyone (including wielder) within 25 ft. (Reflex save DC 14 to avoid).
50-53	Enlarge target 50% if within 60 ft. of rod (DC 11).
54-58	Darkness , 30-ft.-diameter hemisphere, centered 30 ft. away from rod.
59-62	Grass grows in 160-sq.-ft. area before the rod, or grass existing there grows to ten times normal size.
63-65	Turn ethereal any nonliving object of up to 1,000 lb. mass and up to 30 cu. ft. in size.
66-69	Reduce wielder to 1/12 height (no save).
70-79	Fireball at target or 100 ft. straight ahead, 6d6 damage (DC 13).
80-84	Invisibility covers rod wielder.
85-87	Leaves grow from target if within 60 ft. of rod. These last 24 hours.
88-90	10-40 gems, value 1 gp each, shoot forth in a 30-ft.-long stream. Each gem causes 1 point of damage to any creature in its path: roll 5d4 for the number of hits and divide them among the available targets.

- 91-95 Shimmering colors dance and play over a 40-ft.-by-30-ft. area in front of rod. Creatures therein are blinded for 1d6 rounds (Fortitude negates DC 12).
- 96-97 Wielder (50% chance) or target (50% chance) turns permanently blue, green, or purple (no save).
- 98-100 Flesh to stone (or stone to flesh if target is stone already) if target is within 60 ft.

Caster Level: 10th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, confusion, creator must be chaotic; Market Price: 12,000 gp.

DUNGEON MASTER'S GUIDE 1 3.5 (3.5)

ABSORPTION

This rod acts as a magnet, drawing spells or spell-like abilities into itself.

The magic absorbed must be a single-target spell or a ray directed at either the character possessing the rod or her gear.

The rod then nullifies the spell's effect and stores its potential until the wielder releases this energy in the form of spells of her own.

She can instantly detect a spell's level as the rod absorbs that spell's energy.

Absorption requires no action on the part of the user if the rod is in hand at the time.

A running total of absorbed (and used) spell levels should be kept.

For example, a rod that absorbs a 6th-level spell and a 3rd-level spell has a total of nine absorbed spell levels.

The wielder of the rod can use captured spell energy to cast any spell she has prepared, without expending the preparation itself.

The only restrictions are that the levels of spell energy stored in the rod must be equal to or greater than the level of the spell the wielder wants to cast, that any material components required for the spell be present, and that the rod be in hand when casting.

Continuing the example above, the rod wielder could use the nine absorbed spell levels to cast one 9th-level spell, or one 5th-level and one 4th-level spell, or nine 1st-level spells, and so on.

For casters such as bards or sorcerers who do not prepare spells, the rod's energy can be used to cast any spell of the appropriate level or levels that they know.

A rod of absorption absorbs a maximum of fifty spell levels and can thereafter only discharge any remaining potential it might have.

The rod cannot be recharged.

The wielder knows the rod's remaining absorbing potential and current amount of stored energy.

A more specific example: Jozan the cleric uses a brand-new rod of absorption to nullify the effect of a suggestion spell cast at him by a sorcerer.

The rod has now absorbed three spell levels and can absorb forty-seven more.

Jozan can cast any 1st-, 2nd-, or 3rd-level spell he has prepared, without loss of that preparation, by using the stored potential of the rod.

Let's assume he casts hold person back at the sorcerer who just attacked him.

This spell is 2nd level for him, so the rod still holds one spell level of potential, can absorb forty-seven more, and has disposed of two spell levels permanently.

To determine the absorption potential remaining in a newly found rod, roll d% and divide the result by 2.

Then roll d% again: On a result of 71-100, half the levels already absorbed by the rod are still stored within.

For example, if the first roll determines that the rod has thirty-four levels of absorption potential remaining, that means the rod has absorbed sixteen levels' worth of spells. Half of sixteen is eight, so there's a 30% chance that it still holds eight absorbed spell levels ready for use.

Strong abjuration; CL 15th; Craft Rod, spell turning; Price 50,000 gp.

ALERTNESS

This rod is indistinguishable from a +1 light mace.

It has eight flanges on its mace-like head.

The rod bestows a +1 insight bonus on initiative checks.

If grasped firmly, the rod enables the holder to use detect evil, detect good, detect chaos, detect law, detect magic, discern lies, light, or see invisibility.

Each different use is a standard action.

If the head of a rod of alertness is planted in the ground, and the possessor wills it to alertness (a standard action), the rod senses any creature within 120 feet who intends to harm the possessor.

At the same time, the rod creates the effect of a prayer spell upon all creatures friendly to the possessor in a 20-foot radius.

Immediately thereafter, the rod sends forth a mental alert to these friendly creatures, warning them of possible danger from the unfriendly creature or creatures within the 120-foot radius.

These effects last for 10 minutes, and the rod can perform this function once per day.

Last, the rod can be used to simulate the casting of an animate objects spell, utilizing any eleven (or fewer) Small objects located roughly around the perimeter of a 5-foot-radius circle centered on the rod when planted in the ground.

Objects remain animated for 11 rounds.

The rod can perform this function once per day.

Moderate abjuration, divination, enchantment, and evocation; CL 11th; Craft Rod, alarm, detect chaos, detect evil, detect good, detect law, detect magic, discern lies, light, see invisibility, prayer, animate objects; Price 85,000 gp.

CANCELLATION

This dreaded rod is a bane to magic items, for its touch drains an item of all magical properties.

The item touched must make a DC 23 Will save to prevent the rod from draining it.

If a creature is holding it at the time, then the item can use the holder's Will save bonus in place of its own if the holder's is better.

In such cases, contact is made by making a melee touch attack roll.

Upon draining an item, the rod itself becomes brittle and cannot be used again.

Drained items are only restorable by wish or miracle. (If a sphere of annihilation and a rod of cancellation negate each other, nothing can restore either of them).
Strong abjuration; CL 17th; Craft Rod, Mordenkainen's disjunction; Price 11,000 gp.

ENEMY DETECTION

This device pulses in the wielder's hand and points in the direction of any creature or creatures hostile to the bearer of the device (nearest ones first).

These creatures can be invisible, ethereal, hidden, disguised, or in plain sight.

Detection range is 60 feet.

If the bearer of the rod concentrates for a full round, the rod pinpoints the location of the nearest enemy and indicates how many enemies are within range.

The rod can be used three times each day, each use lasting up to 10 minutes.

Activating the rod is a standard action.

Moderate divination; CL 10th; Craft Rod, true seeing; Price 23,500 gp.

FLAILING

Upon the command of its possessor, the rod activates, changing from a normal-seeming rod to a +3 dire flail.

The dire flail is a double weapon, which means that each of the weapon's heads can be used to attack (see the weapon description on page 117 of the Player's Handbook).

The wielder can gain an extra attack (with the second head) at the cost of making all attacks at a -2 penalty (as if she had the Two-Weapon Fighting feat).

Once per day the wielder can use a free action to cause the rod to grant her a +4 deflection bonus to Armor Class and a +4 resistance bonus on saving throws for 10 minutes.

The rod need not be in weapon form to grant this benefit. Transforming it into a weapon or back into a rod is a move action.

Moderate enchantment; CL 9th; Craft Rod, Craft Magic Arms and Armor, bless; Price 50,000 gp.

FLAME EXTINGUISHING

This rod can extinguish Medium or smaller nonmagical fires with simply a touch (a standard action).

For the rod to be effective against other sorts of fires, the wielder must expend 1 or more of the rod's charges.

Extinguishing a Large or larger nonmagical fire, or a magic fire of Medium or smaller (such as that of a flaming weapon or a burning hands spell), expends 1 charge.

Continual magic flames, such as those of a weapon or a fire creature, are suppressed for 6 rounds and flare up again after that time.

To extinguish an instantaneous fire spell, the rod must be within the area of the effect and the wielder must have used a ready action, effectively countering the entire spell.

When applied to Large or larger magic fires, such as those caused by fireball, flame strike, or wall of fire, extinguishing the flames expends 2 charges from the rod.

If the device is used upon a fire creature (a melee touch attack), it deals 6d6 points of damage to the creature.

This use requires 3 charges.

A rod of flame extinguishing has 10 charges when found.

Spent charges are renewed every day, so that a wielder can expend up to 10 charges in any 24-hour period.
Strong transmutation; CL 12th; Craft Rod, pyrotechnics; Price 15,000 gp.

IMMOVABLE

This rod is a flat iron bar with a small button on one end. When the button is pushed (a move action), the rod does not move from where it is, even if staying in place defies gravity.

Thus, the owner can lift or place the rod wherever he wishes, push the button, and let go.

Adventurers have found the immovable rod useful for holding ropes, barring doors, and all sorts of other utilitarian tasks.

Many adventurers have found it useful to have more than one.

Several immovable rods can even make a ladder when used together (although only two are needed).

An immovable rod can support up to 8,000 pounds before falling to the ground.

If a creature pushes against an immovable rod, it must make a DC 30 Strength check to move the rod up to 10 feet in a single round.

Moderate transmutation; CL 10th; Craft Rod, levitate; Price 5,000 gp.

LORDLY MIGHT

This rod has functions that are spell-like, and it can also be used as a magic weapon of various sorts.

It also has several more mundane uses.

The rod of lordly might is metal, thicker than other rods, with a flanged ball at one end and six stud-like buttons along its length.

(Pushing any of the rod's buttons is equivalent to drawing a weapon).

It weighs 10 pounds.

The following spell-like functions of the rod can each be used once per day.

- Hold person upon touch, if the wielder so commands (Will DC 14 negates).

The wielder must choose to use this power and then succeed on a melee touch attack to activate the power.

If the attack fails, the effect is lost.

- Fear upon all enemies viewing it, if the wielder so desires (10-foot maximum range, Will DC 16 partial).

Invoking this power is a standard action.

- Deal 2d4 hit points of damage to an opponent on a successful touch attack (Will DC 17 half) and cure the wielder of a like amount of damage.

The wielder must choose to use this power before attacking, as with hold person.

The following weapon functions of the rod have no limit on the number of times they can be employed.

- In its normal form, the rod can be used as a +2 light mace.

- When button 1 is pushed, the rod becomes a +1 flaming longsword.

A blade springs from the ball, with the ball itself becoming the sword's hilt.

The weapon lengthens to an overall length of 4 feet.

- When button 2 is pushed, the rod becomes a +4 battleaxe.

A wide blade springs forth at the ball, and the whole lengthens to 4 feet.

- When button 3 is pushed, the rod becomes a +3 shortspear or +3 longspear.

The spear blade springs forth, and the handle can be lengthened up to 12 feet (wielder's choice), for an overall length of from 6 feet to 15 feet.

At its 15-foot length, the rod is suitable for use as a lance. The following other functions of the rod also have no limit on the number of times they can be employed.

- Climbing pole/ladder.

When button 4 is pushed, a spike that can anchor in granite is extruded from the ball, while the other end sprouts three sharp hooks.

The rod lengthens to anywhere between 5 and 50 feet in a single round, stopping when button 4 is pushed again. Horizontal bars three inches long fold out from the sides, 1 foot apart, in staggered progression.

The rod is firmly held by the spike and hooks and can bear up to 4,000 pounds.

The wielder can retract the pole by pushing button 5.

- The ladder function can be used to force open doors. The wielder plants the rod's base 30 feet or less from the portal to be forced and in line with it, then pushes button 4. The force exerted has a Strength modifier of +12.

- When button 6 is pushed, the rod indicates magnetic north and gives the wielder a knowledge of his approximate depth beneath the surface or height above it. Strong enchantment, evocation, necromancy, and transmutation; CL 19th; Craft Rod, Craft Magic Arms and Armor, inflict light wounds, bull's strength, flame blade, hold person, fear; Price 70,000 gp.

METAL AND MINERAL DETECTION

This rod pulses in the wielder's hand and points to the largest mass of metal within 30 feet.

However, the wielder can concentrate on a specific metal or mineral (gold, platinum, quartz, beryl, diamond, corundum, and so on).

If the specific mineral is within 30 feet, the rod points to any places it is located, and the rod wielder knows the approximate quantity as well.

If more than one deposit of the specified metal or mineral is within range, the rod points to the largest cache first.

Each operation requires a full-round action.

Moderate divination; CL 9th; Craft Rod, locate object; Price 10,500 gp.

METAMAGIC

Metamagic rods hold the essence of a metamagic feat but do not change the spell slot of the altered spell.

All the rods described here are use-activated (but casting spells in a threatened area still draws an attack of opportunity).

A caster may only use one metamagic rod on any given spell, but it is permissible to combine a rod with metamagic feats possessed by the rod's wielder.

In this case, only the feats possessed by the wielder adjust the spell slot of the spell being cast.

Possession of a metamagic rod does not confer the associated feat on the owner, only the ability to use the given feat a specified number of times per day.

A sorcerer still must take a full-round action when using a metamagic rod, just as if using a metamagic feat he possesses.

Lesser and Greater Metamagic Rods: Normal metamagic rods can be used with spells of 6th level or lower.

Lesser rods can be used with spells of 3rd level or lower, while greater rods can be used with spells of 9th level or lower.

EMPOWER

The wielder can cast up to three spells per day that are empowered as though using the Empower Spell feat. Strong (no school); CL 17th; Craft Rod, Empower Spell; Price 9,000 gp (lesser), 32,500 gp (normal), 73,000 gp (greater).

ENLARGE

The wielder can cast up to three spells per day that are enlarged as though using the Enlarge Spell feat. Strong (no school); CL 17th; Craft Rod, Enlarge Spell; Price 3,000 gp (lesser), 11,000 gp (normal), 24,500 gp (greater).

EXTEND

The wielder can cast up to three spells per day that are extended as though using the Extend Spell feat. Strong (no school); CL 17th; Craft Rod, Extend Spell; Price 3,000 gp (lesser), 11,000 gp (normal), 24,500 gp (greater).

MAXIMIZE

The wielder can cast up to three spells per day that are maximized as though using the Maximize Spell feat. Strong (no school); CL 17th; Craft Rod, Maximize Spell feat; Price 14,000 gp (lesser), 54,000 gp (normal), 121,500 gp (greater).

QUICKEN

The wielder can cast up to three spells per day that are quickened as though using the Quicken Spell feat. Strong (no school); CL 17th; Craft Rod, Quicken Spell; Price 35,000 gp (lesser), 75,500 gp (normal), 170,000 gp (greater).

SILENT

The wielder can cast up to three spells per day without verbal components as though using the Silent Spell feat. Strong (no school); CL 17th; Craft Rod, Silent Spell; Price 3,000 gp (lesser), 11,000 gp (normal), 24,500 gp (greater).

NEGATION

This device negates the spell or spell-like function or functions of magic items.

The wielder points the rod at the magic item, and a pale gray beam shoots forth to touch the target device, attacking as a ray (a ranged touch attack).

The ray functions as a greater dispel magic spell, except it only affects magic items.

To negate instantaneous effects from an item, the rod wielder needs to have used a ready action.

The dispel check uses the rod's caster level (15th).

The target item gets no saving throw, although the rod can't negate artifacts (even minor artifacts). The rod can function three times per day. Strong varied; CL 15th; Craft Rod, dispel magic, and limited wish or miracle; Price 37,000 gp.

PYTHON

This rod is longer than normal rods. It is about 4 feet long and weighs 10 pounds. It strikes as a +1/+1 quarterstaff. If the user throws the rod to the ground (a standard action), it grows to become a giant constrictor snake (see page 280 of the Monster Manual for complete statistics) by the end of the round. The python obeys all commands of the owner. (In animal form, it retains the +1 enhancement bonus on attacks and damage possessed by the rod form). The serpent returns to rod form (a full-round action) whenever the wielder desires, or whenever it moves farther than 100 feet from the owner. If the snake form is slain, it returns to rod form and cannot be activated again for three days. A python rod only functions if the possessor is good. Moderate transmutation; CL 10th; Craft Rod, Craft Magic Arms and Armor, baleful polymorph, creator must be good; Price 13,000 gp.

RULERSHIP

This rod looks like a royal scepter worth at least 5,000 gp in materials and workmanship alone. The wielder can command the obedience and fealty of creatures within 120 feet when she activates the device (a standard action). Creatures totaling 300 Hit Dice can be ruled, but creatures with Intelligence scores of 12 or higher are entitled to a DC 16 Will save to negate the effect. Ruled creatures obey the wielder as if she were their absolute sovereign. Still, if the wielder gives a command that is contrary to the nature of the creatures commanded, the magic is broken. The rod can be used for 500 total minutes before crumbling to dust. This duration need not be continuous. Strong enchantment; CL 20th; Craft Rod, mass charm monster; Price 60,000 gp; Cost 27,500 gp + 2,200 XP.

SECURITY

This item creates a nondimensional space, a pocket paradise. There the rod's possessor and as many as 199 other creatures can stay in complete safety for a period of time, up to 200 days divided by the number of creatures affected. Thus, one creature (the rod's possessor) can stay for 200 days, four creatures can stay for 50 days, or a group of sixty creatures can stay for 3 days. All fractions are rounded down, so that a group numbering more than 100 can stay for one day only and a group of 201 or more cannot be affected by the rod. In this pocket paradise, creatures don't age, and natural healing take place at twice the normal rate.

Fresh water and food (fruits and vegetables only) are in abundance. The climate is comfortable for all creatures involved. Activating the rod (a standard action) causes the wielder and all creatures touching the rod to be transported instantaneously to the paradise. Members of large groups can hold hands or otherwise maintain physical contact, allowing all connected creatures in a circle or a chain to be affected by the rod. Unwilling creatures get a DC 17 Will save to negate the effect. If such a creature succeeds on its save, other creatures beyond that point in a chain can still be affected by the rod. When the rod's effect expires or is dispelled, all the affected creatures instantly reappear in the location they occupied when the rod was activated. If something else occupies the space that a traveler would be returning to, then his body is displaced a sufficient distance to provide the space required for reentry. The rod's possessor can dismiss the effect whenever he wishes before the maximum time period expires, but the rod can only be activated once per week. Strong conjuration; CL 20th; Craft Rod, gate; Price 61,000 gp.

SPLENDOR

The possessor of this rod gains a +4 enhancement bonus to her Charisma score for as long as she holds or carries the item. Once per day, the rod creates and garbs her in clothing of the finest fabrics, plus adornments of furs and jewels. Apparel created by the magic of the rod remains in existence for 12 hours. However, if the possessor attempts to sell or give away any part of it, to use it for a spell component, or the like, all the apparel immediately disappears. The same applies if any of it is forcibly taken from her. The value of noble garb created by the rod ranges from 7,000 to 10,000 gp (1d4+6 × 1,000 gp)—1,000 gp for the fabric alone, 5,000 gp for the furs, and the rest for the jewel trim (maximum of twenty gems, maximum value 200 gp each). In addition, the rod has a second special power, usable once per week. Upon command, it creates a palatial tent—a huge pavilion of silk 60 feet across. Inside the tent are temporary furnishings and food suitable to the splendor of the pavilion and sufficient to entertain as many as one hundred persons. The tent and its trappings last for one day. At the end of that time, the tent and all objects associated with it (including any items that were taken out of the tent) disappear. Strong conjuration and transmutation; CL 12th; Craft Rod, eagle's splendor, fabricate, major creation; Price 25,000 gp.

THUNDER AND LIGHTNING

Constructed of iron set with silver rivets, this rod has the properties of a +2 light mace. Its other magical powers are as follows.

• Thunder: Once per day, the rod can strike as a +3 light mace, and the opponent struck is stunned from the noise of the rod's impact (Fortitude DC 16 negates).

Activating this power counts as a free action, and it works if the wielder strikes an opponent within 1 round.

• Lightning: Once per day, when the wielder desires, a short spark of electricity can leap forth when the rod strikes an opponent to deal the normal damage for a +2 light mace (1d6+2) and an extra 2d6 points of electricity damage.

Even when the rod might not score a normal hit in combat, if the roll was good enough to count as a successful melee touch attack hit, then the 2d6 points of electricity damage still applies.

The wielder activates this power as a free action, and it works if he strikes an opponent within 1 round.

• Thunderclap: Once per day as a standard action, the wielder can cause the rod to give out a deafening noise, just as a shout spell (Fortitude DC 16 partial, 2d6 points of sonic damage, target deafened for 2d6 rounds).

• Lightning Stroke: Once per day as a standard action, the wielder can cause the rod to shoot out a 5-foot-wide lightning bolt (9d6 points of electricity damage, Reflex DC 16 half) to a range of 200 feet.

• Thunder and Lightning: Once per week as a standard action, the wielder of the rod can combine the thunderclap described above with a lightning bolt, as in the lightning stroke.

The thunderclap affects all within 10 feet of the bolt.

The lightning stroke deals 9d6 points of electricity damage (count rolls of 1 or 2 as rolls of 3, for a range of 27 to 54 points), and the thunderclap deals 2d6 points of sonic damage.

A single DC 16 Reflex save applies for both effects.

Moderate evocation; CL 9th; Craft Rod, Craft Magic Arms and Armor, lightning bolt, shout; Price 33,000 gp.

VIPER

This rod strikes as a +2 heavy mace.

Once per day, upon command, the head of the rod becomes that of an actual serpent for 10 minutes.

During this period, any successful strike with the rod deals its usual damage and also poisons the creature hit.

The poison deals 1d10 points of Constitution damage immediately (Fortitude DC 14 negates) and another 1d10 points of Constitution damage 1 minute later (Fortitude DC 14 negates).

The rod only functions if its possessor is evil.

Moderate necromancy; CL 10th; Craft Rod, Craft Magic Arms and Armor, poison, creator must be evil; Price 19,000 gp.

WITHERING

A rod of withering acts as a +1 light mace that deals no hit point damage.

Instead, the wielder deals 1d4 points of Strength damage and 1d4 points of Constitution damage to any creature she touches with the rod (by making a melee touch attack).

If she scores a critical hit, the damage from that hit is permanent ability drain.

In either case, the defender negates the effect with a DC 17 Fortitude save.

Strong necromancy; CL 13th; Craft Rod, Craft Magic Arms and Armor, contagion; Price 25,000 gp.

WONDER

A rod of wonder is a strange and unpredictable device that randomly generates any number of weird effects each time it is used.

(Activating the rod is a standard action).

The usual effects are shown on the table below, but you may alter any of these as you see fit for your own campaign. Typical powers of the rod include the following.

d%	Wondrous Effect
01–05	Slow creature pointed at for 10 rounds (Will DC 15 negates).
06–10	Faerie fire surrounds the target.
11–15	Deludes wielder for 1 round into believing the rod functions as indicated by a second die roll (no save).
16–20	Gust of wind, but at windstorm force; see Winds, page 95 (Fortitude DC 14 negates).
21–25	Wielder learns target's surface thoughts (as with detect thoughts ) for 1d4 rounds (no save).
26–30	Stinking cloud at 30-ft. range (Fortitude DC 15 negates).
31–33	Heavy rain falls for 1 round in 60-ft. radius centered on rod wielder.
34–36	Summon an animal—a rhino (01–25 on d%), elephant (26–50), or mouse (51–100).
37–46	Lightning bolt (70 ft. long, 5 ft. wide), 6d6 damage (Reflex DC 15 half).
47–49	Stream of 600 large butterflies pours forth and flutters around for 2 rounds, blinding everyone (including wielder) within 25 ft. (Reflex DC 14 negates).
50–53	Enlarge person if within 60 ft. of rod (Fortitude DC 13 negates).
54–58	Darkness, 30-ft.-diameter hemisphere, centered 30 ft. away from rod.
59–62	Grass grows in 160-sq.-ft. area before the rod, or grass existing there grows to ten times normal size.
63–65	Turn ethereal any nonliving object of up to 1,000 lb. mass and up to 30 cu. ft. in size.
66–69	Reduce wielder to 1/12 height (no save).
70–79	Fireball at target or 100 ft. straight ahead, 6d6 damage (Reflex DC 15 half).
80–84	Invisibility covers rod wielder.
85–87	Leaves grow from target if within 60 ft. of rod. These last 24 hours.
88–90	10–40 gems, value 1 gp each, shoot forth in a 30-ft.-long stream. Each gem deals 1 point of damage to any creature in its path: Roll 5d4 for the number of hits and divide them among the available targets.
91–95	Shimmering colors dance and play over a 40-ft.-by-30-ft. area in front of rod. Creatures therein are blinded for 1d6 rounds (Fortitude DC 15 negates).
96–97	Wielder (50% chance) or target (50% chance) turns permanently blue, green, or purple (no save).
98–100	Flesh to stone (or stone to flesh if target is stone already) if target is within 60 ft. (Fortitude DC 18 negates).

Moderate enchantment; CL 10th; Craft Rod, confusion, creator must be chaotic; Price 12,000 gp.

DUNGEON MASTER'S GUIDE 2 (3.5)

AVOIDANCE

A rod of avoidance is a powerful tool for escaping extreme danger.

It protects its wielder with a nearly impassable shield of invisible force that turns most attacks harmlessly aside. This field is so powerful that even the great energies of the rod cannot maintain it for very long.

But even though it cannot protect the wielder from more than a handful of attacks, it can easily mean the difference between life and death when used at the right moment.

Description: A rod of avoidance is made of solid gold and has a relatively simple design.

The emeralds running along its length give it a subtle beauty that matches its obviously valuable components.

Activation: This item requires a standard action to activate.

Effect: Upon activating the rod, the wielder gains a +20 deflection bonus to Armor Class that lasts until the beginning of his next action.

The rod is usable three times per day.

Aura/Caster Level: Strong abjuration; CL 15th.

Construction: Craft Rod, shield.

Weight: 3 lb.

Price: 10,000 gp.

CONDUIT

Conduit rods are powerful magical enigmas that alter the fundamental ways in which magical energies interact.

When activated, a conduit rod weakens the energy resistance of the user and all nearby creatures.

Although powerful, these effects are temporary and limited to the elemental energy types common to evocation spells.

Description: Each end of this slender, ebony rod is set with a clear, jagged crystal.

A wild energy seems to flicker in the depths of these stones, and anyone who stares intently into one occasionally sees minute flares of fire, tiny sparks of electricity, and other glimpses of the magical energy types.

Activation: A conduit rod requires a standard action to activate.

Effect: As a standard action, anyone holding a conduit rod chooses an energy type (acid, cold, electricity, fire, or sonic).

When the rod is activated, the wielder and all adjacent creatures are treated as if their existing resistance to energy of the chosen type were 20 points lower than normal.

This effect lasts for 1 entire round, ending at the beginning of the rod wielder's next action.

The rod has no effect on creatures that have immunity to the chosen energy type or have no resistance to it at all.

A conduit rod is usable three times per day.

Aura/Caster Level: Strong abjuration; CL 13th.

Construction: Craft Rod, antimagic aura.

Weight: 3 lb.

Price: 10,000 gp.

GRIEVOUS WOUNDS

This powerful rod worsens the wounds of nearby creatures. Uninjured creatures within its area are not affected, but any wounded creature experiences an increase in pain.

No meaningful resistance to the effect of this rod has ever been recorded.

Description: Every inch of this long, stark-white, ivory scepter is adorned with abstract carvings.

The tiny lines of the engraved symbols twist and twine together to form one complete and complex design.

Other than its elaborate appearance, nothing about this scepter suggests its magical powers.

Activation: A rod of grievous wounds requires a standard action to activate.

Effect: When the rod is activated, every creature adjacent to the wielder that has fewer than its normal maximum hit points takes 1d8 points of damage.

A rod of grievous wounds is usable five times per day.

Aura/Caster Level: Moderate necromancy; CL 8th.

Construction: Craft Rod, inflict light wounds.

Weight: 3 lb.

Price: 2,000 gp.

MAGIC SIPHON

A magic siphon drains the magical energy out of existing spell effects, rendering them powerless and ineffective in the same manner that a dispel effect would.

Description: This powerful rod is a short burgundy scepter with a spiral design running along its length and an open, claw-like sculpture at each end.

When the magic siphon is activated, the claws at each end fill with a brilliant, blue-white energy.

Activation: A magic siphon requires a standard action to activate.

Effect: Any creature adjacent to the wielder when she activates the magic siphon is affected as though by a targeted greater dispel magic spell (caster level 20th).

The rod's power is usable once per day.

Aura/Caster Level: Strong abjuration; CL 20th.

Construction: Craft Rod, greater dispel magic.

Weight: 3 lb.

Price: 25,000 gp.

SOUL ANCHOR

This strange and powerful rod magically roots creatures in place so that the wielder and his allies can finish them off while remaining safe from danger.

Description: Thin iron bands entwine around jagged fragments of jet-black obsidian to form the haft of this cruel-looking rod.

Activation: A soul anchor requires a standard action to activate.

Effect: When the rod is activated, each creature adjacent to the wielder must succeed on a DC 18 Will saving throw or be unable to move from its current location.

Creatures that are flying or sinking when the spell takes effect are magically held in place, neither falling nor sinking farther until the rod's effect ends.

Affected creatures are neither paralyzed nor entangled, but they are magically prevented from moving out of their respective 5-foot-by-5-foot spaces.

They otherwise fight and cast spells normally. Each affected creature can spend a standard action every round to attempt a new saving throw at the same DC. Success renders the creature mobile again. The immobility imposed by this spell prevents all voluntary movement that would allow a creature to leave its square (including teleportation magic as well as spells and items that allow movement), but it does not preclude involuntary movement, such as that resulting from a bull rush. If an affected creature is involuntarily moved out of its current space for any reason, the effect ends immediately. The rod is usable three times per day. Aura/Caster Level: Moderate enchantment; CL 9th. Construction: Craft Rod, hold monster. Weight: 3 lb. Price: 10,000 gp.

SURE STRIKING

With a simple word of command, the wielder of this rod magically imbues her next attack with uncanny accuracy. Description: Pale blue crystals adorn each end of this silvery rod, giving it a simple beauty that matches its magical might. Activation: A rod of sure striking requires a standard action to activate. Effect: When the rod is activated, every creature adjacent to the wielder gains a +10 bonus on its next attack roll, provided that the attack occurs before the beginning of the wielder's next turn. Any attack that occurs after that point does not gain the bonus. The rod is usable three times per day. Aura/Caster Level: Moderate divination; CL 7th. Construction: Craft Rod, true strike. Weight: 3 lb. Price: 4,000 gp.

FROSTBURN (3.5)

ICICLE

An icicle rod looks like nothing more than a 3-foot-long icicle. The rod remains cold to the touch at all times but never melts. While it is held, the wielder gains resistance to cold 10. It may be wielded in melee as a +1 frost short sword. Three times per day the wielder may fire a small icicle from the rod as a standard action. This icicle has a maximum range of 1,000 feet, and attacks made with it are resolved as ranged touch attacks that do 2d4 points of cold damage on a hit. Once it hits, the icicle quickly begins to spread frost and ice over the target, doing an additional 2d4 points of cold damage each round for a total of five additional rounds after the initial hit. An icicle rod can also produce these additional effects.

- Entomb (1/day)
- Maximized ice storm (1/day) Strong evocation (cold); CL 15th; Craft Rod, Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Maximize Spell, entomb, ice storm, resist elements; Price 120,000 gp.

PIERCING COLD

This short rod appears to be made entirely out of ice, and comes to a needle-sharp point at one end. It can be used as a +2 frost dagger in combat. Up to three times per day, the owner of a rod of piercing cold can enhance one spell cast with the Piercing Cold metamagic feat, with no alteration to the spell's effective level. This rod is a metamagic rod; a caster may only use one metamagic rod on a spell at a time. Normal rods of piercing cold can be used with spells of 6th level or lower. Lesser rods of piercing cold can be used with spells of 3rd level or lower, while greater rods of piercing cold can be used with spells of 9th level or lower. Strong (no school); CL 17th; Craft Rod, Piercing Cold; Price 21,430 gp (lesser), 29,300 gp (normal), 42,800 gp (greater); Cost 10,500 gp + 840 XP (lesser), 14,500 gp + 1,160 XP (normal), 21,400 gp + 1,700 XP (greater).

HEROES OF BATTLE (3.5)

ARMING

This adamantine rod allows the wielder to store a complete set of battle regalia and recall it with a moment's notice. When fully armed and armored, the bearer of this rod can instantly remove her armor and weapons, storing them magically within the rod. Anytime thereafter, the bearer can use the power of the rod to put on her armor and wield her weapons instantaneously. If the bearer is wearing armor or weapons when she calls armor back from the rod, then that armor or weapons are swapped with those within the rod. Using the rod to store or retrieve armor and weapons is a standard action. Moderate transmutation; CL 10th; Craft Rod, shrink item; Price 15,000 gp.

LEADERSHIP

This mithral truncheon is banded in gold. The possessor gains a +2 enhancement bonus to his Leadership score for as long as he holds or carries the item. Once per day he can gain a +5 bonus on an attempt to rally troops (see page 73). Once per week the rod can be used to create a command tent. The tent is 30 feet across, and the inside is protected from harsh weather conditions such as extreme heat, cold, wind, or rain. The tent is furnished suitably for a military command post and contains a map table upon which is a detailed map showing the terrain within a ten-mile radius of the tent. The tent lasts for up to 24 hours, at the end of which time it disappears along with anything (but not anyone) that was inside it. Strong conjuration, transmutation, and divination; CL 12th; Craft Rod, eagle's splendor, major creation, scry; Price 25,000 gp.

LIBRIS MORTIS (3.5)

UNDEAD MASTERY

This metal rod is carved to resemble a stack of miniature skulls. Anyone who holds the rod can control twice as many undead than he normally could. Moderate necromancy; CL 10th; Craft Rod, desecrate; Price 10,000 gp.

LORDS OF MADNESS (3.5)

FREEDOM

A potent weapon against monsters that charm or enslave other creatures, a rod of freedom is the equivalent of a +3 silver heavy mace. It has three special powers. First, the user can choose to deal nonlethal damage with no penalty on her attack rolls. (She must decide before she makes the attack roll if she will deal lethal or nonlethal damage). Second, any time she uses the rod to strike a creature that is under a charm or compulsion effect, she makes a special caster level check (1d20+9) to dispel the effect (DC 11 + caster level of the effect). A rod of freedom can be used five times per day.

Third, as long as the rod of freedom is in her hand, the user gains a +4 morale bonus on saving throws against charm or compulsion effects. Moderate evocation; CL 9th; Craft Rod, break enchantment; Price 53,000 gp; Weight 6 lb.

In addition, you can activate a rod of freedom as a free (mental) action at will to deal nonlethal damage without penalty on your next attack roll.

You must decide before you make the attack whether you will activate this ability.

Third, any time you strike a creature that is under a charm or compulsion effect with the rod, you can activate it as a swift (command) action to make a special caster level check (1d20+9) and attempt to dispel the effect (DC 11 + caster level of the effect).

This ability functions five times per day.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Rod, break enchantment.

Cost to Create: 9,000 gp (plus 402 gp for masterwork silver heavy mace), 720 XP, 18 days.

FROST

Price (Item Level): 1,400 gp (5th)

Body Slot: — (held)

Caster Level: 9th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 19) evocation

Activation: Standard (command)

Weight: 5 lb.

This 2-foot-long rod of steel-hard, ice-blue glass is bound with iron bands.

Three times per day, you can fire a 30-foot line of frost from the rod.

The line of frost deals 2d6 points of cold damage to all creatures in the area (Reflex DC 14 half).

Natural fires in the area of the line are automatically extinguished, and open water in the area of the line freezes to a depth of 1 foot—thick enough for a Large creature to walk upon safely.

The ice melts normally.

Prerequisites: Craft Rod, ray of frost.

Cost to Create: 700 gp, 56 XP, 2 days.

This is an enchantment (compulsion), mind-affecting ability.

A rod of fumbling functions two times per day.

Prerequisites: Craft Rod, command.

Cost to Create: 1,150 gp, 92 XP, 3 days.

This short burgundy scepter has a spiral design running along its length and an open, clawlike sculpture at each end.

A magic siphon drains the magical energy from existing spell effects, rendering them powerless and ineffective in the same manner that dispel magic would.

Every creature adjacent to you when you activate a magic siphon is affected as though by a targeted greater dispel magic spell.

This rod functions once per day.

Prerequisites: Craft Rod, greater dispel magic.

Cost to Create: 12,500 gp, 1,000 XP, 25 days.

METAMAGIC

A metamagic rod holds the essence of a metamagic feat but does not change the spell slot of the altered spell.

Activation: —

Weight: 3 lb.

Several glyphs that promise power over the undead are incised along the length of this plain steel baton.

If you can turn or rebuke undead, holding a scepter of the netherworld allows you to do so as if your level in the relevant class were three levels higher.

Prerequisites: Craft Rod, turn or rebuke undead.

Cost to Create: 4,500 gp, 360 XP, 9 days.

SILENCE

Price (Item Level): 4,000 gp (8th)

Body Slot: — (held)

Caster Level: 9th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 19) evocation

Activation: — and standard (command)

Weight: 2 lb.

This 4-foot-long rod of black metal bears the impression of a single cat's paw at one rounded end.

While holding this rod, you gain a +4 bonus on saving throws against effects that have the sonic descriptor or that deal sonic damage.

Once per day, you can surround yourself with a field of silence, which functions as a silence spell except it affects only you and can be dismissed as a free (mental) action on your turn.

The rod can also create a shout effect once per day, although this ability cannot be used while the silence effect is in operation.

Prerequisites: Craft Rod, shout, silence, resistance.

Cost to Create: 2,000 gp, 160 XP, 4 days.

SLIDING

Price (Item Level): 1,400 gp (5th)

Caster Level: 9th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 19) transmutation

Activation: Standard (command)

Weight: 3 lb.

Small magnets are set into the ends of this iron rod.

When activated, this rod can either push a targeted creature 5 feet farther away from you or pull it 5 feet closer to you.

The target must be within 30 feet of you and must end its movement in an unoccupied square.

The movement does not provoke attacks of opportunity.

An unwilling creature is entitled to a DC 11 Will saving throw to negate the effect.

A rod of sliding functions three times per day.

Prerequisites: Craft Rod, slide (SC 191).

Cost to Create: 700 gp, 56 XP, 2 days.

SOUL ANCHOR

Price (Item Level): 10,000 gp (12th)

Body Slot: — (held)

Caster Level: 9th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 19) enchantment

Activation: Standard (command)

Weight: 3 lb.

Thin iron bands twine around jagged fragments of jet-black obsidian to form the haft of this cruel-looking rod.

When you activate a soul anchor, each creature adjacent to you must succeed on a DC 18 Will saving throw or be unable to move from its current space for 1 round.

Creatures that are flying or sinking when the spell takes effect are magically held in place.

However, affected creatures are neither paralyzed nor entangled, so they can fight and cast spells normally.

The power of a soul anchor prevents all voluntary movement that would allow the affected creatures to leave their respective spaces (including teleportation magic or other spells and items that allow movement).

However, it does not preclude involuntary movement, such as that resulting from a bull rush.

If an affected creature is involuntarily moved out of its space for any reason, the effect on that creature ends immediately.

This ability functions five times per day, but it can't be activated in consecutive rounds.

Prerequisites: Craft Rod, hold monster.

Cost to Create: 5,000 gp, 400 XP, 10 days.

SPIDER

Price (Item Level): 15,000 gp (14th)

Caster Level: 9th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 19) necromancy

Activation: Standard (command)

Weight: 3 lb.

A complex relief of webs and tiny arachnids covers this silvery rod. Its surface is strangely sticky to the touch.

A spider rod has two different abilities that each function three times per day.

Silk Strand: The rod produces an entangling strand of silk as a ranged touch attack (range 100 feet).

A target hit by this strand is entangled for 1 minute (Reflex DC 20 negates entanglement, but the creature's speed is still halved for the duration of the effect).

Treat this as a net attack, except that the strand has 15 hit points and takes double damage from fire.

Poison Touch: You can make a melee touch attack with the rod to deliver a virulent contact poison (Fort DC 16, 1d6 Con/1d6 Con).

Prerequisites: Craft Rod, poison, web.

Cost to Create: 7,500 gp, 600 XP, 15 days.

SURE STRIKING

Prerequisites: Craft Rod, true strike.

Cost to Create: 2,000 gp, 160 XP, 4 days.

SURPRISES

Price (Item Level): 6,000 gp (10th)

Body Slot: — (held)

Caster Level: 8th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 19) illusion, transmutation

Activation: Standard (manipulation)

Weight: 2 lb.

Numerous seams, hinges, and bolts cover this otherwise simple-looking blunt metal rod.

At one end, five black buttons jut forth.

Similar to a rod of lordly might, a rod of surprises has both combat and utilitarian features.

Its buttons can be depressed, singly or in various combinations, to cause the rod to lengthen and even sprout a blade.

It can be used as a javelin, kama, long spear, quarterstaff, scythe, shortspear, short sword, or spear.

A rod is treated as a +1 weapon in any of these forms.

The rod can store a message of up to twenty-five words as the magic mouth spell, replaying the message when the triggering conditions are met (such as when a specific word is spoken).

You can reset the message as a standard action, and you choose the trigger.

The rod can also lengthen up to 60 feet and support up to 800 pounds without bending.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Rod, levitate, magic mouth, wood shape.

Cost to Create: 3,000 gp, 240 XP, 9 days.

TENTACLE

Price (Item Level): 14,000 gp (14th)

Body Slot: — (held)

Caster Level: 6th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 18) transmutation

Activation: Standard (command)

Weight: 3 lb.

Three long, russet-colored tentacles sprout from the end of this 2-foot-long rod, writhing sinuously.

When activated, a tentacle rod makes three attacks (one per tentacle) against a single target within your melee reach that you designate.

The rod uses its own attack bonus (+12) rather than yours, and each attack deals 6 points of bludgeoning damage.

Treat the rod as a magic weapon for the purpose of overcoming damage reduction.

If all three tentacles strike the same living creature in a round, that creature becomes slowed (as the slow spell) for 5 rounds (Fort DC 14 negates).

Lore: The secret to crafting the first tentacle rod was learned through nightmarish visions granted by the Elder Elemental Eye (a vile and mysterious divine entity) to its most devoted followers (Knowledge [religion] DC 20).

Wielding one of these gruesome items soon became a status symbol among the cult's leaders, which led to a need for a greater version for the most powerful followers of the Elder Elemental Eye (Knowledge [religion] DC 25).

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Rod, animate objects, Evard's black tentacles, slow.

Cost to Create: 7,000 gp, 560 XP, 14 days.

TENTACLE, GREATER

Price (Item Level): 36,000 gp (17th)

Caster Level: 12th

Aura: Strong; (DC 21) transmutation

Weight: 6 lb.

Six long violet tentacles sprout from the end of this 2-foot-long rod, writhing sinuously when you grasp the handle.

When activated, a greater tentacle rod makes six attacks (one per tentacle) against a single target within your melee reach that you designate.

The rod uses its own attack bonus (+18), and each attack deals 9 points of bludgeoning damage.

Treat the rod as a magic weapon for the purpose of overcoming damage reduction.

If at least three of a greater tentacle rod's tentacles strike the same living creature in a round, that creature becomes fatigued (Fort DC 20 negates); creatures already fatigued suffer no additional effect.

If all six tentacles strike the same living creature in a round, that creature instead becomes exhausted (Fort DC 20 negates).

Lore: See tentacle rod, above.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Rod, animate objects, Evard's black tentacles, ray of exhaustion, ray of fatigue.

Cost to Create: 18,000 gp, 1,440 XP, 36 days.

An unwilling creature gets a DC 13 Will saving throw to negate this effect.

A rod of transposition functions three times per day.

Prerequisites: Craft Rod, baleful transposition (SC 23).

Cost to Create: 3,000 gp, 240 XP, 6 days.

For instance, if you can normally control 12 HD of undead, you can control 24 HD of undead while holding the rod.

Prerequisites: Craft Rod, desecrate.

Cost to Create: 5,000 gp, 400 XP, 10 days.

VISCID GLOBS

Price (Item Level): 2,000 gp (6th)

Body Slot: — (held)

Caster Level: 9th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 19) transmutation

Activation: Standard (command)

Weight: 2 lb.

An ooze of amber fluid leaks from this strangely sappy mahogany rod.

The rod's surface is carved with tumorous bumps and weeping cysts.

A rod of viscid globs fires a sphere of sticky material that acts like a tanglefoot bag.

The rod can fire a glob up to 100 feet, and a glob acts as a splash weapon.

A rod of viscid globs can be used three times per day.

Prerequisites: Craft Rod, entangle.

Cost to Create: 1,000 gp, 80 XP, 2 days.

WHIPS

Price (Item Level): 15,000 gp (14th)

Body Slot: — (held)

Caster Level: 12th

Aura: Strong; (DC 21) transmutation

Activation: Standard (command)

Weight: 2 lb.

Tightly wrapped and knotted strands of black leather make up this short rod, allowing for a solid grip, which nonetheless looks incomplete.

On command, a rod of whips grows a magic tendril of force from one end that functions as a whip.

Once activated, a rod of whips acts as a +1 dancing whip that can strike incorporeal creatures as a force effect.

A rod of whips can be activated three times per day, and each activation lasts for 10 rounds.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Rod, animate objects, spiritual weapon.

Cost to Create: 7,500 gp, 600 XP, 15 days.

MAGIC OF FAERÛN (3.0)

CATS

This 7-foot rod is made of black wood and topped with a carved knob that resembles a cat's head.

It functions as a +1 quarterstaff.

When it is held, the bearer gains low-light vision and gets a +10 competence bonus on Climb, Hide, and Move Silently checks.

Once per day the wielder can make the rod of cats the target of a darkness spell, although the wielder and anyone else touching the rod can see through this darkness as if it didn't exist.

The rod has a secret compartment (Search DC 25 to find) large enough to hold a set of thieves' tools or a scroll.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, Craft Magic Arms and Armor, cat's grace, darkness, darkvision, spider climb;

Market Price: 25,000 gp.

DISPLACEMENT

This rod was invented during the glory of Myth Drannor.

When held, it acts as a minor cloak of displacement.

Twice per day the wielder can use jump and knock, and once per day she can create a 5-foot-radius spherical ward that repels open water or other nonmagical water-based liquids

(but not creatures), allowing her to cross shallow rivers or fully enter deep bodies of water and remain dry.

The rod generates fresh air within this space, so no chance of suffocation exists, and the power lasts 10 minutes.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, control water, blur, jump, knock; Market Price: 48,600 gp.

DIVERGENCE

This rod protects against one sort of energy, and the type of energy cannot be changed once the item is completed.

When wielded, it provides resist elements for the wielder against that type of energy.

If the wielder is ever targeted with an effect of that kind of energy that can be affected by spell turning, once per day the rod automatically and fully turns the attack upon its source.

The wielder can also cause the rod to glow with faerie fire at will.

Caster Level: 13th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, faerie fire, resist elements, spell turning; Market Price: 32,600 gp.

FURY

These rods, first created by the wizards of Mulhorand, typically have the top end carved to resemble the head of one of the Mulhorandi deities.

In addition to giving the bearer a deflection bonus to AC (+1 to +5, varying depending upon the type of rod), the rod allows a spellcaster to increase the effectiveness of one spell per day.

The spell must be of 6th level or lower and is altered as if it were under the effects of the Empower Spell feat.

Activating this ability is a free action and does not affect the spell level or casting time of the altered spell.

Caster Level: 17th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, Empower Spell, Spell Focus, protection from chaos/evil/good/law; Market Price: 26,800 gp (+1), 38,800 gp (+2), 58,800 gp (+3), 77,600 gp (+4), 95,600 gp (+5).

MIRRORS

Once per day the rod can form a 2-foot-diameter mirror-like area at its top end.

The wielder can look through the back side of the mirror and view the scene as with true seeing.

The mirror also protects the wearer from all gaze attacks and illusion (pattern) effects coming from one-half of the battlefield (see the shield spell for information on orienting such an effect).

The mirror is completely insubstantial and remains for 11 minutes.

The wizard Glendar, a patron of adventurers with a hatred for medusas and basilisks, created the first rod of mirrors.

He eventually became evil and transformed himself into a lich, only to be destroyed by some of the adventurers he had once sponsored.

Caster Level: 11th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, obscuring mist, true seeing; Market Price: 40,200 gp; Cost to Create: 13,850 gp +1, 108 XP.

SILENCE

This rod is carved with symbols of cat's paws and owls.

When held, the bearer gets a +4 resistance bonus on all saving throws against sonic effects.

Once per day the bearer can surround herself with a field of silence, functioning as the silence spell except it only affects the character and can be dismissed as a free action on the bearer's turn.

The rod can also create a shout effect once per day, although this ability does not function when the silence effect is in operation.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, shout, silence, resistance; Market Price: 24,200 gp.

SPHERES

The rod of spheres can, three times per day, create a 4-foot-diameter spherical bubble that lasts for 2 hours.

This transparent, faintly shimmering sphere appears up to 30 feet from the wielder and levitates in place 3 feet from the ground.

The faint blue glow emanating from the sphere is the equivalent of candlelight.

The skin of the bubble is not solid, though anything placed within it remains within the sphere, which can hold up to 33 cubic feet of material, to a maximum weight of 200 pounds.

The bubble maintains its distance and position relative to the wielder, though its top speed is 30 feet.

(If the wielder moves too fast, the bubble lags behind until the wielder slows or stops to allow it to catch up).

The wielder can also move the bubble up to 60 feet as a move-equivalent action.

A single point of damage from any source destroys a bubble from a rod of spheres.

A bubble cannot impact an object or creature hard enough to cause itself or the target any damage.

At the end of the duration, or if the bubble is destroyed, whatever was within the bubble drops slowly to the ground as if under the effect of a feather fall spell.

Caster Level: 3rd; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, dancing lights, Tenser's floating disk, feather fall; Market Price: 3,240 gp.

SPIDER

Three times a day, the wielder can command this rod to produce a strand of silk that shoots out up to 100 feet.

Treat this as a ranged touch attack with no range increment.

A creature struck by this strand of silk must make a Reflex save (DC 20) or be entangled for 1 minute.

With a successful save, the creature is not entangled, though it can move at only half speed for 1 minute.

Breaking free of the entanglement effect requires a Strength check (DC 25) or an Escape Artist check (DC 20).

The strand has 15 hit points (no hardness) and takes double damage from fire, though any fire applied to the strand also deals 2d4 points of damage to the entangled character.

Casting a spell while entangled requires a Concentration check (DC 15) to avoid losing the spell.

The rod may also be used to deliver a poison melee touch attack (Fort DC 16, 1d10 Con/1d10 Con).

This power functions an unlimited number of times.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, web, poison; Market Price: 40,000 gp.

SURPRISES

Similar to a rod of lordly might, this rod has combat and utilitarian features.

It can be commanded to lengthen and even sprout a blade, allowing it to be used as a halbspear, javelin, kama, longspear, quarterstaff, scythe, shortspear, or a long-handled short sword, acting as a +1 weapon of the appropriate type.

It can also lengthen up to 60 feet and can support up to 800 pounds without bending.

The rod can store a message of up to twenty-five words as the magic mouth spell, replaying the message when the wielder's triggering conditions have been met (such as when a particular word is spoken).

The wielder may reset the message as a standard action. Caster Level: 8th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, Craft Magic Arms and Armor, levitate, magic mouth, wood shape; Market Price: 21,600 gp.

TUNING

The rod of tuning is a powerful magic device that serves to ward against outsiders in addition to its mundane function. Bards, clerics of Milil, and others who rely on song value these items for their ability to sound any note desired by the wielder.

To do so, the wielder need only strike the rod lightly against any hard surface (or with a hard object) to cause a pure, clear note to sound forth from the rod.

This note is audible to anyone within 120 feet (subject to intervening barriers).

In addition, the rod functions as a focus for any song-based or sonic spell.

No other focus is necessary to cast such spells.

The rod's wielder also has access to more powerful magic as well.

Once per day, the rod of tuning can sound forth a single note that is anathema to outsiders.

This note acts as a banishment spell against up to 28 HD of creatures.

This note affects any outsiders within 30 feet of the wielder. Treat the note as having three aspects the creature hates, fears, or otherwise opposes, granting the wielder a +3 on his level check to overcome the creatures' spell resistance, if any, and requiring each of the creatures to make a Will save (DC 26).

In addition, once per day the rod can sound forth a note that acts as a holy word spell (DC 20).

This function affects any creatures of evil alignment within 30 feet of the wielder.

These powers are song-based magical effects and may be countered by a bard's countersong ability or any magic that prevents such effects (silence, for example).

Caster Level: 14th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, banishment, holy word; Market Price: 84,400 gp.

VISCID GLOBS

This silver metal rod fires a sphere of sticky material that acts as a tanglefoot bag.

The material created by the rod dissolves in alcohol, a flask of wine being sufficient to remove it after 1 full round.

The rod can fire the globs up to 100 feet as a grenade-like weapon.

It can be used up to five times per day.

Caster Level: 3rd; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, entangle, grease; Market Price: 6,000 gp.

WHIPS

On command, the rod of whips grows a magic tendril of force from one end that functions as a whip.

Once activated, the rod of whips acts as a +1 dancing whip that can strike incorporeal creatures as a spiritual weapon.

The rod of whips can be activated three times per day, and each activation lasts for 1 hour.

Caster Level: 12th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, Craft Magic Arms and Armor, animate objects, spiritual weapon; Market Price: 21,600 gp.

MINIATURES HANDBOOK (3.5)

SLIDING

Small magnets are set into each end of this iron rod. Once per day, the wielder may target a creature up to 30 feet away.

Upon command, the wielder can push the targeted creature 5 feet farther away into an unoccupied square, or she can pull the targeted creature 5 feet closer into an unoccupied square.

This movement does not provoke attacks of opportunity. An unwilling creature gets a DC 11 Will saving throw to negate the effect.

Moderate transmutation; CL 9th; Craft Rod, slide*; Price: 7,200 gp.

* New spell described earlier in this chapter.

TRANSPOSITION

Small bolts of light arc from one end to the other end of this rod.

Once per day, the rod allows its wielder to exchange positions with another creature within 30 feet.

An unwilling creature gets a DC 13 Will saving throw to negate the effect.

Moderate conjuration; CL 7th; Craft Rod, baleful transposition*; Price 11,200 gp.

* New spell described earlier in this chapter.

ORIENTAL ADVENTURES (3.0)

SAPLING

This thin and flexible sapling branch has the strength of adamantine.

Three times per day, the wielder can ignore all effects of natural or magical wind, from a gust of wind spell to an air elemental's whirlwind for 3d4 minutes.

Once per day, the wielder can eliminate a wind effect, automatically dispelling a spell or controlling natural winds, and forcing air elemental creatures to make successful Fortitude saves (DC 20) or be instantly banished to their home plane.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, control winds, freedom of movement; Market Price: 45,000 gp; Weight: 5 lb.

PLANAR HANDBOOK (3.5)

CELESTIAL MIGHT

Carved from a single length of arrow-straight ash, its ends shod in gold and silver bands, this rod is meant to be carried into battle by those who seek to conquer the Lower Planes.

A rod of celestial might functions as a +2/+2 quarterstaff.

If the rod strikes an evil outsider, its wielder can trigger a holy smite effect centered on the creature struck.

This is a free action and may be used three times per day.

If the wielder is within 60 feet of an evil outsider, he can summon an avoral guardinal as a standard action (as summon monster VII).

Strong varied; CL 13th; Craft Rod, Craft Magic Arms and Armor, summon monster VII, holy smite; Price 110,600 gp; Cost 55,600 gp + 4,400 XP.

ENERVATING STRIKE

Crafted from wood exposed to a doldrum (a minor negative-dominant zone) on the Negative Energy Plane itself, a rod of enervating strike functions as a +1 heavy mace.

In addition, any creature it strikes in melee is subject to an inflict light wounds spell.

If the rod scores a critical hit, the creature is instead targeted by an inflict serious wounds spell.

When used on a minor negative-dominant plane, the rod's spell effects are empowered (as by the Empower Spell feat).

When used on a major negative-dominant plane, these effects are maximized (as by the Maximize Spell feat).

Strong necromancy; CL 15th; Craft Rod, inflict serious wounds; Price 47,312 gp; Cost 23,812 gp + 1,880 XP.

PLAYER'S GUIDE TO FAERÛN (3.5)

DIVERGENCE

Each of these rods is engraved with various protective runes and capped with a gem.

The type of gem depends upon the form of energy the rod of divergence is designed to protect against (an emerald for acid, a sapphire for cold, a topaz for electricity, a ruby for fire, or a diamond for sonic).

When any effect of the appropriate energy type is targeted at the wielder or at any point within 10 feet of him, he may expend 3 charges from the rod as a free action to redirect the attack to any point of his choosing within 60 feet. An area spell must be centered on a point within 10 feet of the wielder to be subject to redirection.

(In other words, a fireball cast at a point 15 feet away could not be redirected, even though parts of the effect would come within 10 feet of the wielder).

Additionally, a rod of divergence can duplicate the effects of a faerie fire spell.

Use of this ability costs no charges.

A rod of divergence has 50 charges when first created.

Strong abjuration; CL 13th; Craft Rod, faerie fire, spell turning; Price 117,000 gp.

SPHERES

Elminster reportedly designed the first of these rare and strange rods, but wizards all over Toril have since made many copies.

The sole function of a rod of spheres is to create large, transparent bubbles, each with a radius of 3 feet. These bubbles glow softly, giving off light equivalent to that of a candle.

The bubbles float along gently at a speed of 20 feet per round as directed by the wielder of the rod, and each can hold up to 140 pounds of creatures or items.

Any object within a bubble is protected from exposure to the elements (rain, wind, snow, or the like, though the bubbles provide no special bonuses or resistances against energy attacks) and is affected as if by a feather fall spell should it fall more than 10 feet.

The bubbles last up to 8 hours or until ruptured.

A bubble is not a prison; any intelligent being that is not securely bound can break a bubble with ease.

The rod of spheres has 50 charges when it is created, and the formation of each bubble costs 1 charge.

Moderate evocation [force]; CL 9th; Craft Rod, feather fall, Tenser's floating disk; Price 25,000 gp.

SANDSTORM (3.5)

SAND REPELLING

This clear glass rod forces sand, dust, ash, grit, and similar loose soils away in a 10-foot-radius sphere.

This ability functions on command.

The user can travel through sand and loose soil as the rod pushes the material away.

Breathing is not a problem as long as the surrounding area is not poisonous or a vacuum.

It cannot keep duststorms at bay, but it does protect against any of the effects of the suspended grit in the storm (such as nonlethal damage and potential suffocation).

Strong abjuration; CL 15th; Craft Rod, wind wall; Price 60,000 gp.

STORMWRACK (3.5)

LEGENDARY MARINER

Crafted of brass and a piece of highly polished driftwood, the rod of the legendary mariner makes life aboard a ship easier, granting its bearer a +5 bonus on Profession (sailor) checks.

Additionally, the rod of the legendary mariner can be used to bring forth a purify food and drink effect three times per day, a create water effect three times per day, and a detect ship effect once per day.

Moderate varies; CL 5th; Craft Rod, purify food and water, create water, detect ship, must have at least 8 ranks in Profession (sailor); Price 20,000 gp.

TOME OF MAGIC (3.5)

For instance, a rod of empower mystery allows the wielder to empower three mysteries per day.

UNDERDARK (3.5)

DEAD

Touching the rod of the dead to a corpse animates it, as though with the animate dead spell.

In addition, the rod enables the wielder to rebuke or command undead as if she were four levels higher than she actually is, provided that the wearer already has the ability to affect undead in this way.

The rod can animate up to 20 HD of undead per day.

Moderate necromancy; CL 10th; Craft Rod, animate dead, creator must be a cleric; Price 75,000 gp.

DOWSING

This rod, made from white birch, always feels cool, damp, and supple to the touch.

It points to the nearest source of potable water within 520 feet.

Faint divination; CL 3rd; Craft Wondrous Item, locate object; Price 12,000 gp; Weight 1 lb.

FAERZRESS NEGATION

Faerzress causes difficulties for many Underdark travelers. The rod of faerzress negation is a costly but often worthwhile way of countering the effects of this condition.

At will, the wielder can negate the effects of faerzress in a 10-foot radius for up to 1 hour per day.

(This duration need not be continuous).

Faerzress remains negated in that area until the wielder chooses to turn the effect off or the duration expires.

Moderate abjuration; CL 10th; Craft Rod, antimagic field; Price 50,000 gp.

PORTAL FINDER

This rod pulses in the wielder's hand and points to the nearest portal within 60 feet.

The rod wielder knows the destination of the portal and whether it can be activated.

Moderate divination; CL 9th; Craft Rod, analyze portal (FRCS), locate object; Price 36,000 gp.

WEBSPINNING

This rod is embellished with spider and web motifs.

The wielder is continuously protected by a spiderskin effect, which grants her a +2 enhancement bonus to her natural armor bonus, a +2 racial bonus on saves against poison, and a +2 racial bonus on Hide checks.

In addition, the wielder can speak a command word to activate a web spell three times per day.

The wielder can also move and attack through natural and magical webs as if under a freedom of movement effect, except that it applies only to webs.

Moderate transmutation and abjuration; CL 7th; Craft Rod; freedom of movement, spiderskin, web; Price 90,000 gp.

RUNE CIRCLES

RACES OF STONE (3.5)

DEEP HOLLOW

Bound to the Elemental Plane of Earth, a deep hollow circle strengthens the power of summoning magic used within its boundaries.

This powerful bond allows spellcasters to summon more creatures than they otherwise could.

Whenever a creature within this 20-foot-radius circle uses a summon monster or summon nature's ally spell to summon a creature with the earth sub type, she summons an additional creature.

This creature is identical to the one summoned normally and is treated as a creature summoned by the original spell cast.

This means, for example, that the second creature can be dismissed, it vanishes if it goes beyond the range of the spell, and so on.

Only one additional creature is summoned with each casting, regardless of the number of creatures that the spell itself summons.

After being summoned, the creatures have no special link to one another.

They function just like multiple monsters summoned by the same summoning spell.

If a dwarf or gnome spellcaster uses a deep hollow circle, the creatures summoned are also improved as if the spellcaster had the Augment Summoning feat.

Strong conjuration; CL 18th; Craft Rune Circle, Earth Sense, summon monster or summon nature's ally (any level); Price 50,000 gp.

DWARFHEIM

This powerful rune circle magnifies the spellcasting power of all dwarf spellcasters within its bounds.

Any dwarf who stands within this 20-foot-radius circle can use spells as if they had been improved by the Quick en Spell metamagic feat.

Already quickened spells are unaffected, as are spells from magic items.

Spells so quickened are still prepared and cast at their unmodified levels, and even spontaneous casters gain the benefit of the circle.

As with the Quick en Spell feat, only one quickened spell can be cast per round.

In addition, any dwarf standing within the circle can activate one spell-like ability per round as a free action.

Using the circle in this manner counts against the limit of casting one quickened spell per round.

Strong transmutation; CL 18th; Craft Rune Circle, Quick en Spell, creator must be a dwarf; Price 50,000 gp.

DWARVEN HOLDFAST RING

Dwarf cities are built to be defensible, with numerous fallback positions designed to let a few stout dwarf warriors hold off large numbers of enemy forces.

A key part of these plans involves strategically placed rune circles that increase the defender's martial abilities and help them resist magical attacks.

Any dwarf who stands within this 10-foot-radius circle gains a +2 morale bonus on attack rolls.

Dwarves within the circle also gain a +2 deflection bonus to Armor Class against attacks made by evil creatures and a +2 resistance bonus on saves against effects created by evil creatures.

Furthermore, the circle protects dwarves within from mental control just like the protection from evil spell.

These bonuses activate instantly as soon as a dwarf steps into the circle, and they are lost immediately upon leaving.

Moderate enchantment and moderate abjuration; CL 11th; Craft Rune Circle, heroism, magic circle, creator must be a dwarf; Price 20,000 gp.

GNOME CHANTING

Many gnome villages include a chanting circle.

The circle is infused with the spirit and liveliness of the gnome race, allowing gnome bards to share their songs and stories with more passion and skill, and infusing the music of gnome bards with the power of the earth.

Any creature standing in a gnome chanting circle gains a +5 bonus on Perform checks.

In addition, illusion spells cast by a spellcaster standing within the circle are harder to resist than normal.

Increase the DC needed to resist illusion spells cast by spellcasters (of any type) standing within the circle by 1.

Any gnome who stands within this 20-foot-radius circle can concentrate on one bardic music ability each round as a free action.

Strong conjuration; CL 18th; Craft Rune Circle, Spell Focus (illusion), greater harmonize; Price 15,000 gp.

GNOME CHARMING

Gnome communities blend into the countryside, since gnomes prefer to live without walls or other defenses separating them from the natural world.

This lifestyle leads to tranquil communities and a peaceful environment, but occasionally monsters take advantage of this lack of defenses to attack a community.

At other times, dangerous animals simply wander through a gnome settlement.

One gnome bard standing within a charming circle can usually resolve these and even more sinister incursions peacefully.

Any gnome who stands within this 20-foot-radius circle can use one of his daily uses of bardic music to cast charm monster as the spell with a caster level equal to his bard level (or the level of the class that grants him the bardic music ability).

Strong enchantment; CL 12th; Craft Rune Circle, bardic music ability, charm monster, creator must be a gnome; Price 15,000 gp.

GOLIATH RAGE RING

The barbarian warriors of the goliath tribes fight with a nearly unmatched ferocity, but this rage fatigues the warriors, making them less effective in prolonged battles. To ensure that these warriors can defend their villages and homes with the peak of their abilities, goliath spellcasters create rune circles that support the rage of their warrior allies with the endurance of the earth itself.

Any round during which a creature remains completely inside the boundary of a goliath rage ring does not count against the duration of the creature's rage ability.

If the creature leaves the 40-foot-radius circle at any point during a battle, that round counts against the duration of the creature's rage ability as normal.

Moderate enchantment; CL 10th; Craft Rune Circle, rage;
Price 10,000 gp.

GOLIATH SPEAKING

Goliath shamans work diligently to keep their far-flung and relatively primitive race together.

In times of trouble, they must be able to communicate quickly over rough mountain terrain.

Through generations of careful work, the shamans have built a simple network of rune circles that allow such communication.

The expense of these rune circles means that only a few exist, and those near the largest and most prosperous goliath villages.

Even such sporadic communication has allowed the villages to support one another by sending warriors quickly should one of the villages need aid.

Any creature standing within this 5-foot radius circle can use sending, as the spell, as a full-round action.

This special version of sending can only be used to contact individuals within the bounds of another (different) goliath speaking circle, but the caster need not know the creature contacted—he need only attempt to contact creatures within the bounds of a specific goliath speaking circle.

Moderate evocation; CL 10th; Craft Rune Circle, sending;
Price 20,000 gp.

HEALING

The energy of life flows through this rune circle and into any spellcaster using healing magic within its boundaries. Many powerful churches use this powerful rune circle to improve their healing spells.

Rune circles built in this manner are often made to blend seamlessly with the rest of the temple's decor.

Any creature standing within this 10-foot-radius circle casts all conjuration (healing) spells as if they were improved by the Maximize Spell metamagic feat.

Already maximized spells and spell-like abilities are unaffected, as are spells from magic items.

Spells so maximized are still prepared and cast at their unmodified level.

Strong conjuration; CL 18th; Craft Rune Circle, Maximize Spell, mass cure light wounds; Price 50,000 gp.

SCEPTERS

LOST EMPIRES OF FAERÛN (3.5)

NETHERESE BLAST

Relatively short and thick-handled, a blast scepter contains an empowered lightning bolt (caster level 10th, 2 charges) that deals 15d6 points of electricity damage and a maximized shocking grasp (caster level 7th, 1 charge) that deals 30 points of electricity damage.

Moderate evocation; CL 10th; Craft Scepter (see page 8), lightning bolt, shocking grasp; Price 48,000 gp.

SILVER ANKH OF RA

Shaped like a loop-headed cross, the silver ankh was common in ancient Mulhorand.

To use it, the wielder must grasp the loop and point the base of the cross toward the target.

A silver ankh contains the spells searing light and cure serious wounds (both caster level 10th, 1 charge).

Faint evocation and conjuration; CL 10th; Craft Scepter (see page 8), searing light, cure serious wounds; Price 33,750 gp.

SCION WEAPONS

UNEARTHED ARCANA (3.5)

DRAGONBLADE

Reputedly carved from the fang of a great wyrm red dragon, the bastard sword known as Dragonblade has served many masters over the centuries, from bloodthirsty warlords to treasure-seeking adventurers.

It is a legendary weapon that provides many benefits to its wielder, but most of the benefits apply only if the wielder has levels in the battle scion prestige class.

Requirements: Any character can wield Dragonblade as a +2 bastard sword and also gain the benefit of the bravery special ability described below.

A battle scion who wields Dragonblade gains additional special abilities if the character fulfills the following criteria.

Base Attack Bonus: +9.

Skills: Knowledge (arcana) 6 ranks.

Feats: Improved Critical (bastard sword), Iron Will.

Attributes: Dragonblade has the following attributes.

Hardness/Hit Points: 20/55.

Caster Level: 15th.

Value: To any character other than a battle scion who meets the above requirements, Dragonblade appears to be worth as much as a Medium +2 bastard sword that grants the bravery special ability (market price 14,335 gp).

Special Abilities: Dragonblade provides a number of special abilities to its wielder, depending on the character's class level in the battle scion prestige class (see the table below).

Initial Abilities: When first acquired, Dragonblade functions as a +2 bastard sword.

Anyone who wields it, whether a battle scion or not, also benefits from the bravery ability (see below).

ABILITIES GRANTED BY DRAGONBLADE

Battle Scion Level	Ability Gained
—	Bravery
1st	Bane (dragons)
2nd	Resistance to energy 10
3rd	Enhancement bonus +3 (+5 against dragons)
4th	Intimidating presence
5th	Resistance to energy 20
6th	Enhancement bonus +4 (+6 against dragons)
7th	Dodge bonus
8th	Resistance to energy 30
9th	Frightful presence
10th	Enhancement bonus +5 (+7 against dragons)

Bravery (ex): The wielder of Dragonblade has immunity to a dragon's frightful presence ability.

All allies within 30 feet of the wielder gain a +4 morale bonus on saves against the frightful presence of dragons.

Bane (Dragons) (su): When wielded by a battle scion, Dragonblade gains the bane (dragons) special ability.

Its enhancement bonus is treated as 2 points higher when attacking a dragon, and it deals an extra 2d6 points of damage on a successful strike against a dragon.

Resistance to Energy (su): Once per day, when a battle scion of 2nd level or higher wielding Dragonblade is dealt at least 1 point of damage from any type of energy (acid, cold, electricity, fire, or sonic), the scion gains resistance 10 to that form of energy for 1 hour thereafter (including against the damage that activated the ability).

For example, if the scion were engulfed in a fireball, the resistance would immediately take effect, reducing the damage taken by the fireball (and any other source of fire damage for the next hour) by 10 points.

Once the energy type is determined, it cannot be changed for the current use of the ability.

If two or more types of energy strike the scion simultaneously, he may select the energy type against which his resistance protects.

When a battle scion attains 5th level, the resistance granted by this ability increases to 20 points.

At 8th level, it increases to 30 points.

Intimidating Presence (ex): A battle scion of 4th level or higher wielding Dragonblade may add his class level as a bonus on Intimidate checks made against dragons (or one-half his class level as a bonus on Intimidate checks made against nondragons).

Dodge Bonus (ex): At 7th level and higher, a battle scion wielding Dragonblade gains a +2 dodge bonus to Armor Class against creatures at least two size categories larger than himself.

Frightful Presence (ex): A battle scion of 9th level or higher wielding Dragonblade can unsettle foes with his mere presence.

This ability takes effect automatically whenever the scion attacks or charges.

Creatures within a radius of 60 feet are subject to the effect if they have fewer Hit Dice than the scion's character level.

A potentially affected creature that succeeds on a Will save (DC 10 + class level + scion's Cha modifier) remains immune to that scion's frightful presence for one day.

On a failure, creatures with 4 or less HD become panicked for 4d6 rounds and those with 5 or more HD become shaken for 4d6 rounds.

Even dragons can be affected by the scion's frightful presence.

HAMMER OF ALL SOULS

The Hammer of All Souls is said to have been crafted by Moradin Dwarffather himself in the image of his own weapon, Soul hammer.

It symbolizes the glory of the dwarven race.

Requirements: Any character can wield the Hammer of All Souls as a +2 adamantine warhammer and also gain the benefit of the Craft bonus and lore of souls special ability described below.

A faith scion who wields the Hammer of All Souls gains additional special abilities if the character fulfills the following criteria.

Race: Dwarf.

Alignment: Lawful good.

Base Attack Bonus: +7.

Skills: Craft (armorsmithing) or Craft (weaponsmithing) 10 ranks.

Feats: Armor Proficiency (heavy), Great Fortitude, Power Attack, Weapon Focus (warhammer).

Spells: Ability to cast protection from evil as a divine spell.

Restrictions: Should the wielder of the Hammer of All Souls become an alignment other than lawful good, or attack a lawful good, lawful neutral, or neutral good-aligned dwarf, he loses all special abilities granted by the faith scion prestige class.

To regain these abilities, the scion must receive an atonement spell from a dwarf cleric of Moradin.

Maintenance: A wielder of the Hammer of All Souls must strike the hammer against an anvil at least once every seven days.

Failure to perform this task reduces the hammer's enhancement bonus by 1.

Multiple failures are not cumulative (that is, if the hammer goes two weeks without striking an anvil, the reduction does not increase to 2).

Attributes: The Hammer of All Souls has the following attributes.

Hardness/Hit Points: 30/76.

Caster Level: 15th.

Value: To any character other than a faith scion who meets the above requirements, the Hammer of All Souls appears to be worth as much as a Medium +2 adamantine warhammer that grants the Craft bonus and lore of all souls special ability (market price 21,812 gp).

Special Abilities: The Hammer of All Souls provides a number of special abilities to its wielder, depending on the character's class level in the faith scion prestige class (see the table below).

Initial Abilities: When first acquired, the Hammer of All Souls functions as a +2 adamantine warhammer.

Anyone who wields it, whether a faith scion or not, also benefits from the Craft bonus and lore of souls ability (see below).

ABILITIES GRANTED BY THE HAMMER OF ALL SOULS

Faith Scion Level	Ability Gained
—	Craft bonus
—	Lore of souls
1st	Smite evil 1/day
2nd	Fortitude of souls +2
3rd	Throw and return
4th	Enhancement bonus +3
5th	Smite evil 2/day
6th	Fortitude of souls +4
7th	Enhancement bonus +4
8th	Fortitude of souls +6
9th	Smite evil 3/day
10th	Enhancement bonus +5

Craft Bonus (ex): The owner of the Hammer of All Souls gains a +5 insight bonus on all Craft checks related to stone or metal.

This bonus increases by an additional +1 for every faith scion class level gained, including 1st level.

Lore of Souls (su): Three times per day, the owner of the Hammer of All Souls can use a full-round action to consult the knowledge of his dwarven ancestors.

This gives the character a bonus on any one Knowledge check (made as part of the action) equal to his faith scion level (if any) + his Wisdom bonus (if any).

(At the DM's discretion, if the Knowledge check is directly related to dwarvenkind, the bonus granted by the character's faith scion level is doubled).

The check is treated as a trained skill check, even if the character has no ranks in that Knowledge skill.

Smite Evil (su): Once per day, a faith scion wielding the Hammer of All Souls may smite evil with an attack.

The attack may be a melee attack or a ranged attack, but must be delivered by the Hammer of All Souls.

The wielder adds 4 to his attack roll and deals 2 extra points of damage per faith scion level.

If the wielder accidentally smites a creature that is not evil, the smite has no effect, but the ability is still used up for that day.

A wielder may use this ability twice per day at 5th level and three times per day at 9th level.

Fortitude of Souls (su): A faith scion of 2nd level or higher wielding the Hammer of All Souls derives endurance from the support of his ancestors, gaining a +2 enhancement bonus to Constitution.

At 6th level, the bonus increases to +4, and at 8th level to +6.

Throw and Return (su): Three times per day, a faith scion of 3rd level or higher wielding the Hammer of All Souls can treat the weapon as a throwing returning weapon (see the special ability descriptions on pages 225 and 226 of the Dungeon Master's Guide).

Activating this ability is a free action, and it lasts for 1 round.

IONON, THE BURNING STAFF

Created by a wizard from pure elemental fire, Ionon is a conduit between the wielder and the Elemental Plane of Fire.

The staff is made of polished obsidian and is wreathed at all times in wispy blue-white flame.

This flame deals no damage to the wielder.

Requirements: Any character can wield Ionon as a +1 flaming/+1 flaming quarterstaff and also gain the benefit of the resistance to fire special ability described below.

A spell scion who wields Ionon gains additional special abilities if the character fulfills the following criteria.

Alignment: Any nonlawful.

Skills: Knowledge (arcana) 5 ranks, Knowledge (the planes) 5 ranks, Spellcraft 10 ranks.

Feats: Empower Spell.

Spells: Ability to cast 4th-level arcane spells, including at least three spells with the fire descriptor.

Special: Must have been reduced to -1 or less hit points on at least one occasion from a hit that dealt fire damage.

Restrictions: If Ionon is grasped by a creature with vulnerability to cold, the weapon's flame goes out temporarily.

This renders all the staff's special abilities (except for its enhancement bonus) inactive.

The creature grasping the staff takes 1 point of fire damage in every round when the weapon remains grasped.

Maintenance: Ionon must be kept in a warm environment to remain at full power.

If the staff spends at least 1 hour in an area where the temperature is below 50°F, its flame goes out temporarily.

This renders all the staff's special abilities (except for its enhancement bonus) inactive.

This loss of special abilities can be postponed by dealing at least 5 points of fire damage to Ionon every hour. (Damage dealt to the staff "counts" for this purpose even if the staff actually takes no damage, such as because of its hardness).

Attributes: Ionon has the following attributes.

Hardness/Hit Points: 14/45.

Caster Level: 15th.

Value: To any character other than a spell scion who meets the above requirements, Ionon appears to be worth as much as a Medium +1 flaming/+1 flaming quarterstaff that grants the resistance to fire ability (market price 24,600 gp).

Special Abilities: Ionon provides the following special abilities to its wielder, depending on the character's class level in the spell scion prestige class (see the table below).

Initial Abilities: When first acquired, Ionon functions as a +1 flaming/+1 flaming quarterstaff.

Anyone who wields it, whether a spell scion or not, also benefits from the resistance to fire ability (see below).

ABILITIES GRANTED BY IONON

Spell Scion Level	Ability Gained
—	Resistance to fire 5
1st	Resistance to fire 10, empowered spells
2nd	Recall spell 1/day
3rd	Fire shield
4th	Resistance to fire 20
5th	Enhancement bonus +2/+2, recall spell 2/day
6th	Plane shift
7th	Resistance to fire 30
8th	Recall spell 3/day
9th	Enhancement bonus +3/+3
10th	Immunity to fire

Resistance to Fire (ex): The wielder of the staff gains resistance to fire 5, even if she has no levels in the spell scion class.

A spell scion who wields the staff gains resistance to fire 10. At 4th level, the resistance improves to 20, and at 7th level to 30.

This resistance does not stack with any other resistance to fire the wielder may have.

Empowered Spells (su): Three times per day, a spell scion wielding Ionon can empower (as the Empower Spell feat) any arcane spell she casts that has the fire descriptor. She may apply this effect to any spell whose level is equal to or less than her spell scion level, and may even apply it to spell-like abilities cast by the staff itself.

Activating this power is a free action and has no effect on the spell's level or its casting time.

Recall Spell (su): As a free action, a spell scion of 2nd level or higher can recall any arcane spell she has just cast, as long as that spell has the fire descriptor, up to a maximum spell level equal to her spell scion level.

She either restores that spell to her list of prepared spells (if she prepares spells) or regains that spell slot (if she does not prepare spells).

She may only recall a spell cast in the same round that she uses this ability.

This ability can be used once per day at 2nd level, twice per day at 5th level, and three times per day at 8th level.

Fire Shield (sp): Once per day, when wielded by a spell scion of 3rd level or higher, Ionon can wreath the wielder in a warm fire shield of blue flames.

Enhancement Bonus (ex): When Ionon is wielded by a spell scion of 5th level or higher, the staff's enhancement bonus improves from +1/+1 to +2/+2.

The bonus increases to +3/+3 when the wielder attains 9th level as a spell scion.

Plane Shift (sp): Once per day, Ionon can transport a spell scion of 6th level or higher to the Elemental Plane of Fire, just as if it had cast plane shift.

Additional willing characters can accompany the scion, as described in the plane shift spell.

The effect is more accurate than normal for plane shift, delivering the scion 5 to 500 yards (not miles) from her intended destination.

The spell scion must have her own method of return, since Ionon provides no return trip.

Immunity to Fire (ex): At 10th level, a spell scion wielding Ionon gains immunity to fire.

DREAMSTRIKER

A cabal of halfling clerics created the bow called Dreamstriker long ago.

Since then, it has been passed down along a line of elite rangers and rogues, but was recently lost when its wielder was slain while away from her village.

Requirements: Any character can wield Dreamstriker as a +2 composite shortbow (+2 Str bonus) and also gain the benefit of the stealth special ability described below.

A swift scion who wields Dreamstriker gains additional special abilities if the character fulfills the following criteria.

Base Attack Bonus: +6.

Skills: Hide 10 ranks, Move Silently 10 ranks.

Feats: Point Blank Shot, Far Shot, Stealthy.

Special: The wielder must be of Small size.

Restrictions: Dreamstriker does not grant its stealth ability to a wielder who is not of Small size, though its enhancement bonus is still effective.

Attributes: Dreamstriker has the following attributes.

Hardness/Hit Points: 15/55.

Caster Level: 15th.

Value: To any character other than a swift scion who meets the above requirements, Dreamstriker appears to be worth as much as a Small +2 composite shortbow (+2 Str bonus) that grants the stealth ability (market price 10,525 gp).

Special Abilities: Dreamstriker provides a number of special abilities to its wielder, depending on the character's class level in the swift scion prestige class (see the table below).

Initial Abilities: When it is first acquired, Dreamstriker functions as a +2 composite shortbow (+2 Str bonus).

Any Small character who wields it, whether a swift scion or not, also benefits from the stealth ability (see below).

Stealth (su): The wielder of Dreamstriker may use her Wisdom bonus (if any) as a bonus on her Hide and Move Silently checks.

ABILITIES GRANTED BY DREAMSTRIKER

Swift Scion
Level	Ability Gained
—	Stealth
1st	Invisibility
2nd	Ghost touch
3rd	Ephemeral presence (trackless)
4th	Enhancement bonus +3
5th	Dreamstrike arrows
6th	Greater invisibility
7th	Enhancement bonus +4
8th	Ephemeral presence (scentless)
9th	Etherealness
10th	Enhancement bonus +5

Invisibility (sp): A swift scion wielding Dreamstriker can become invisible once per day as a free action.

The effect lasts for 1 round per class level.

For a swift scion of 6th level or higher, the invisibility granted by this power is the equivalent of greater invisibility.

The duration remains 1 round per class level.

Ghost Touch (su): When Dreamstriker is wielded by a swift scion of 2nd level or higher, any arrow fired from the bow can damage incorporeal creatures as if it had the ghost touch special ability.

Ephemeral Presence (su): A swift scion of 3rd level or higher bearing Dreamstriker leaves no trail and cannot be tracked.

At 8th level, a swift scion bearing the weapon no longer gives off a scent.

Creatures with the scent ability cannot detect her presence by means of that ability, nor can she be tracked by scent.

Enhancement Bonus (ex): When Dreamstriker is wielded by a swift scion of 4th level or higher, the bow's enhancement bonus improves from +2 to +3.

The bonus increases to +4 at 7th level and +5 at 10th level.

Dreamstrike Arrows (su): Three times per day (but no more than once per round), a swift scion of 5th level or higher can fire a special arrow from Dreamstriker.

The arrow strikes as a touch attack (ignoring armor, shield, and natural armor bonuses to AC).

The arrow deals only half the normal damage, but the damage dealt is Wisdom damage, not hit point damage.

Bonus damage dice, if any, do not apply to the damage dealt by a dreamstrike arrow.

Etherealness (su): At 9th level or higher, a swift scion bearing Dreamstriker can become ethereal for up to 10 rounds per day (which need not be spent all at one time).

Activating this power, or deactivating it to become material, is a standard action.

SCROLLS

COMPLETE ARCANE (3.5)

GEMSTONE

A complex series of gestures and sounds is completed with a specially prepared gemstone in hand, and the spell stored within it is released when the final words are spoken. Like the parchment on which a scroll is scribed, a gemstone is emptied by casting but can be reused again.

INCENDIARY

A spell is stored in a special mix of powders and glyph-covered paper. To use an incendiary, a spellcaster speaks the last words of the spell while simultaneously igniting the prepared device (usually by means of a minor magical property of the incendiary form that requires no additional action to activate). The incendiary is consumed in a brilliant colored flash or haze of strangely coiling smoke, completing the spell.

MACRAME

A spell is held in a small, complex weave of precisely tied knots. The user pulls apart the knotted square by choosing the right strands while speaking the spell's activation words. When a scroll is found in the course of a campaign, deciphering its magical text is usually the first step to using it, but since variant scroll forms that don't have spells stored in written form can't be deciphered with read magic, they must be identified with a successful Spellcraft check (DC 20 + spell level).

SHRINES

CHAMPIONS OF RUIN (3.5)

BLOODY ROCK

At the northern edge of the Far Forest, where hills and crags from the Nether Mountains break through the canopy, lies a deadly shrine to the Beastlord, Malar, where the bones of the unlucky are doomed to lay.

The forest around the shrine is densely packed with both trees and animals, and hunting is forbidden in the immediate area.

While Malar's followers venerate the hunting of all creatures, this shrine is for the deliberate destruction of sentient creatures only.

Surrounded by thick clusters of tall evergreen trees, this clearing is almost impossible to find unless the precise location and the path to it are known.

The surrounding terrain is rocky and hilly, obscuring vision and making travel by horseback impossible.

Bloody Rock is a dagger-shaped stone that juts out of the earth to a height of nearly 30 feet.

Every edge on the rock is jagged, and any creature that attempts to climb the rock would find its hands and feet sliced by every hold.

A dozen standing stones of unknown origin, placed here by the Beastlord himself according to legend, surround the rock.

The final feature in the clearing is a curved stone called the Claw, which has a flat area on which victims are laid as well as a sharp, upturned spike of stone where many a sacrifice has met its end.

Not only is hunting around the area forbidden, but the beasts that roam it are considered aspects of Malar himself. The god even sent a Beast of Malar into the area when it became clear that hostile adventurers had come to destroy the shrine.

All animals in a 500-foot radius around the shrine are automatically hostile to anyone not of Malar's faith, and they are immune to any magical charms and compulsions that would change this (although they can still be calmed by successful skill checks and other mundane means).

Animal companions and familiars are unaffected by this, but trained animals must succeed at a DC 15 Will save or be lost to the Beastlord's influence forever.

Bloody Rock Ritual: Clerics and druids of Malar know that a fresh kill is one of the greatest tributes they can pay their master.

The ritual of Bloody Rock is the most direct way to offer up such a sacrifice to the Beastlord, although the shrine only accepts sentient beings (living creatures with an Intelligence score of 3 or higher) as proper offerings.

The creature is strapped to the Claw and ripped over and over again by the ritual leader, using either his own claws or with a special tool made from the claws of a bear or large predatory cat.

As the sacrifice's blood flows downward, it is absorbed into the Claw and disappears.

The ritual takes 2 hours to complete, and the leader must make a successful DC 20 Heal check in order to keep the victim alive while slowly draining his blood.

If the ritual is properly performed, Bloody Rock begins to bleed as if punctured in several places.

The blood is gathered in a special container for the ritual leader to drink, and that act ends the ritual.

Ritual Benefit: Whoever drinks the blood collected from Bloody Rock is protected and revitalized by the elixir.

Over the next 24 hours, if the character is injured in combat, he is immediately targeted by a cure serious wounds spell.

Taking damage from another source, such as a triggered trap or falling from a great height, does not invoke the effect.

The spell has a caster level of 20th, and only the ritual leader can benefit from this effect.

Baleful Effect: Any creatures other than the ritual leader that drink the blood (including faithful followers of Malar) suffer no obvious ill effects, although they might detect a slight increase in their heartbeat.

In truth, their blood thins and runs quicker for 24 hours, causing all wounds they suffer to bleed for an additional 1 hit point of damage per round until such characters receive magical healing.

A cleric of another faith who attempts the ritual, drinks the blood, or tries to channel divine energy while within the shrine suffers greatly.

In addition to being subject to the bleeding effect described above, he must make a DC 15 Fortitude save or be hit with internal bleeding as his veins begin to split and burst.

The character immediately takes 2 points of Constitution damage, and must make another save each hour to avoid further damage of the same sort.

This condition persists until the character dies, makes three consecutive saving throws, or is the target of a heal or miracle spell.

Sample Encounter (EL 10): Ritual leader (CE werewolf druid 6), 4 acolytes (CE human druid 2), 4 guards (CE human fighter 2).

PIT OF MANY COLORS

During the Time of Troubles, Tiamat walked the face of Faerûn alongside most of the other gods.

She took advantage of the opportunity to slay Gilgeam, a rival power in the Untheric pantheon.

A deep pit opened at the site where Gilgeam's blood was spilled, and Tiamat quickly claimed the site as her own before Gilgeam could "corrupt" it and possibly use it as an avenue for resurrection.

She used the pit to hoard the wealth she collected while in mortal form; once swallowed, the loot was transported safely back to her realm.

Today, the pit still stands in an abandoned section of the town of Unthalass, and Tiamat's followers and supplicants use the pit to give the spoils of their crusade to their queen. The pit is a 20-foot-wide hole in the earth shaped vaguely like a falling man.

The bottom is filled with reddish-black mud that stays soft no matter what the weather is like.

Gems of various colors as well as coins of all types from every nation on the continent can be seen glittering atop the muddy surface, giving the pit its common name.

These objects are always present, although their composition changes from time to time. Followers of Tiamat come here to pay her tribute in the form of coins and gems, which they throw into the muddy pit.

The treasure immediately sinks into the pit, and what happens to it after that is a matter of theological speculation.

Certainly, no one has ever attempted to excavate the pit or dig underneath it to find what would presumably be one of the largest treasure hoards in Faerûn.

The ground on the edges of the pit is treacherous, often sliding down into the pit and taking whoever was standing nearby with it.

Despite this erosion, the pit never seems to grow any larger. Parts that slide into the mud are replaced the next time followers approach the pit, and even Tiamat's clerics never know where these mudslides might occur next.

Anyone standing in the area of a mudslide must make a DC 15 Reflex save to avoid falling in as well.

If a creature falls into the pit, the mud acts like quicksand with all check DCs increased by 5 (see page 88 of the Dungeon Master's Guide).

A cleric of another deity takes 2d6 points of unholy damage per round that he is in contact with the mud.

Pit of Many Colors Ritual: The ritual of the pit requires the sacrifice of treasure and a personal risk by the leader of the ritual.

First, an amount of coins and gems with a gold piece value equal to 20 times the petitioner's level must be sacrificed in the name of Tiamat (thrown into the pit, that is).

Then the petitioner must walk the entire edge of the pit while chanting to the Dragon Queen.

Clerics of Tiamat who sacrifice enough treasure and are in good standing do not have to worry about falling into the pit, because the goddess protects them from harm.

All others must successfully avoid three mudslides in order to complete the ritual.

Falling into the pit is either a sign of the goddess's displeasure or the unworthiness of the ritual leader.

In either instance, no benefit is gained and the petitioner is at risk of drowning in the quicksand.

Ritual Benefit: A petitioner who gains the favor of the Dragon Queen takes on the aspect of one of her children.

The character's physical form changes to resemble a dragon in subtle ways.

This effect confers a +4 bonus on Intimidate checks for 24 hours, since the character can manifest her draconic presence.

Also, once during the 24-hour period, the character can unleash the breath weapon of the dragon she now resembles.

The form and characteristics of this breath weapon are just like those of a half-dragon of the appropriate type (see page 147 of the Monster Manual).

Baleful Effect: A nonfollower of Tiamat can attempt the ritual and succeed, although he must sacrifice twice as much treasure (level  $\times$  40 gp) in order to have any chance of succeeding.

Those who do not succeed are thrown into the pit as described above, the same fate suffered by followers who fail to please the Dragon Queen.

A cleric of another god who attempts the ritual, casts a spell, or channels divine energy within 20 feet of the pit catches the attention of the Dragon Queen, who sends one of her children (see below) to destroy the offender. The dragon does not attack while the character is in Unthalass, but waits for the offender and those traveling with him to leave the city, at which time it ambushes the group at the first opportunity.

☛ Antasillix: Male juvenile green dragon; CR 8; Large dragon (air); HD 14d12+42; hp 133; Init +4; Spd 40 ft., swim 40 ft., fly 150 ft.

(poor); AC 22, touch 9, flat-footed 22; Base Atk +14; Grp +22; Atk +17 melee (2d6+4, bite); Full Atk +17 melee (2d6+4, bite) and +12/+12 melee (1d8+2, 2 claws) and +12/+12 melee (1d6+2, 2 wings) and +12 melee (1d8+6, tail slap); Space/Reach 10 ft./5 ft. (10 ft. with bite); SA breath weapon, spells; SQ blindsense 60 ft., darkvision 120 ft., immunity to acid, magic sleep effects, and paralysis, low-light vision, water breathing; AL LE; SV Fort +12, Ref +9, Will +11; Str 19, Dex 10, Con 17, Int 14, Wis 15, Cha 14.

Skills and Feats: Bluff +16, Diplomacy +16, Escape Artist +14, Intimidate +16, Knowledge (local) +9, Knowledge (nature) +9, Listen +18, Search +18, Spellcraft +16, Spot +18; Alertness, Blind-Fight, Improved Initiative, Flyby Attack, Wingover.

Languages: Chessentan, Draconic, and Untheric.

Breath Weapon (Su): 40-foot cone of corrosive (acid) gas; 8d6 acid; Reflex DC 20 half.

Sorcerer Spells Known (5/4 per day, caster level 1st): 0—dancing lights, ghost sound, mage hand, detect magic; 1st—charm person (DC 13), shield.

STING

In the heart of the artistic city of Cimbar lies a secluded glade that holds one of the city's most painful secrets.

Priests of Loviatar, the Maiden of Pain, have truly found a home in this decadent and tolerant city.

Many of their rites do not even have to be hidden from the populace at large, and those that do are easily explained away as underground pleasure parties.

Everyone is invited to these affairs, and Loviatar has gained a number of converts from this city of artists and free thinkers.

Only a special few, however, gain access to the holy shrine known as the Sting.

The Sting is a natural courtyard surrounded by a house used by initiates of Loviatar for purposes of their faith.

The courtyard area is composed of soft earth covered completely by grass, and various trees obscure the vision of those within.

Four walkways made of stepping stones lead from various mansion doors to the center of the courtyard, where Loviatar can be properly worshiped.

At the center stands a misshapen willow tree that has thick leaves and covered with thorns.

This is where the faithful make their prayers.

The Tree of Loviatar is not alive, but it is the conduit for Loviatar's power when the ritual is properly conducted.

Its leaves are tough and whiplike, and the thorns can be used to cause grievous wounds or painful stings as necessary.

Should the tree or worshipers come under attack, the tree will spring to life in defense of the shrine (see below for the tree's statistics).

It attacks all nonworshippers mercilessly until it is destroyed or the shrine is free of invaders.

The Sting Ritual: The ritual leader must provide seven objects that have been inside seven different individuals' bodies and caused them pain.

These items could be weapons that were used to puncture someone's body, sharp barbs or caltrops that were swallowed and regurgitated, or any number of other things. These items are placed on a special platform carved into the trunk of the Tree of Loviatar, at which time the ritual leader kneels and begins to pray to Loviatar.

The tree slowly begins to animate—a limb shakes, a leaf jerks, a root creaks—until the branches are all shaking and the leaves whipping around in a fury.

If the goddess is pleased with the offering and prayers, the ritual leader's body will be stung by a hundred shallow cuts from the thorns on the tree's leaves; if the goddess is not pleased, the tree animates and attacks.

Ritual Benefit: The character becomes virtually immune to pain for 24 hours, gaining damage reduction 2/— for the duration of the effect.

Baleful Effect: Should the ritual leader fail to please Loviatar, or a nonaffiliated cleric attempt to cast a spell or channel divine energy within the shrine, the tree animates and attacks.

Clerics of Loviatar are not immune to the tree's attacks, but the tree will not kill such a character.

It will attack for a few rounds to teach the errant cleric a lesson, and then drop him to the ground, bleeding and properly chastised.

☛ Tree of Loviatar: CR 14; Huge construct; HD 26d10+40; hp 181; Init +0; Spd 0 ft.; AC 18, touch 8, flat-footed 18; Base Atk +19; Grp +36; Atk +26 melee (1d8+9, thorny whip); Full Atk +26 melee (1d8+9, 8 thorny whips); Space/Reach 15 ft./15 ft.; SA frenzy, improved grab; SQ construct traits, damage reduction 10/good, darkvision 60 ft., fast healing 5, low-light vision, resistance to cold 20, electricity 20, and fire 20, spell resistance 25; AL NE; SV Fort +8, Ref +3, Will +3; Str 28, Dex 10, Con —, Int —, Wis 1, Cha 1.

Skills and Feats: —.

Frenzy (Ex): The Tree of Loviatar can fly into a frenzy, striking all creatures in reach with 2d4 thorny whips.

Doing so strains the tree, however, causing it to be inactive for 1 round after such an attack.

It can maintain its hold on grappled creatures during its down time, but does not deal damage to them.

Improved Grab (Ex): To use this ability, the Tree of Loviatar must hit with a thorny whip attack.

It can then attempt to start a grapple as a free action that does not provoke attacks of opportunity.

The tree has dozens of thorny whips, so it can grapple as many creatures as it likes and still make full attacks against nongrappled opponents.

THUNDER ROOM

The worshipers of Bane have grown more cohesive since the god's return and the appointment of Fzoul Chembryl as Bane's infallible mortal representative.

They have begun to work more efficiently toward his goals, and their projects continue to become more ambitious.

In a fit of religious fervor, a Banite general in Mintar named Daren Timbide (see page 121 for statistics and other details) took over an old government building and built a shrine to his god.

He rebuilt the interior of the building to resemble a gladiatorial arena he had once fought in on the Dragon Coast, and he dubbed it the Thunder Room.

The Thunder Room started as nothing more than a place for ritual combat, where slaves, captured monsters, and volunteers from the Banite army squared off for fun and profit.

The crowds grew quickly, and a new level of seating was erected over the roof of the original building.

As with all things in the city, the arena quickly attracted the attention of Teldorn Darkhope, the city's ruler, who is also an incredibly powerful priest of Bane.

He attended a three-day festival of violence and gore, even opening the event with a ritual sacrifice in the god's name. The reaction was immense, and Bane himself noticed this sudden upswell in the faithfulness of his followers.

It did not take long for Teldorn to requisition the use of the arena several days per month for celebrations, invocations, and newly christened holidays.

Bane was pleased.

A popular feature of the Thunder Room was the percussion show that opened each event.

Heavy-sounding drums pounded out rhythms as cymbals and hollow shells told the stories of Bane's greatest triumphs as well as his resurrection.

Teldorn crafted a ritual around these rhythms that involved the severe beating of a cleric devoted to one of the weaker gods.

The first time he performed the ritual, he could feel Bane's power surging within him.

Fearing that the power Bane had directed to him might be misdirected during one of the many fights, Teldorn directed General Timbide to construct an underground chamber linked to the arena but well outside the area of battle.

That chamber is now complete, and has a ritual beating circle as well as a stage for the fourteen percussionists it requires to beat out the stories of Bane.

While everyone who lives in Mintar knows of the Thunder Room, very few know of the secret shrine to Bane built underneath the city.

Those who do know of it wish they had never found out, because they are usually the ones being used in the rituals.

Thunder Room Ritual: Fourteen percussionists and a cleric or follower of Bane must be assembled in the shrine beneath Mintar in order to perform this ritual.

The musicians are assembled in their staging area, where they perform the Glorious History of Bane the Conqueror, a series of percussive vignettes that tells the story of Bane's rise, fall, and resurrection.

During the rites, which take just over 2 hours to complete, the performer of the ritual must ceaselessly beat a prisoner in the center of the circle.

While any prisoner will suffice for the ritual to take place, the prisoner must be a cleric of another faith in order for the performer to gain the ritual benefit.

The prisoner cleric's level of power does not matter; even the lowliest clergyman will do.

Ritual Benefit: The work of beating an individual for more than two straight hours is not without its rewards.

If the victim was a member of the clergy of some other deity, the ritual performer feels the strength of Bane flowing through him, making him better able to strike down the enemies of the Lord of Darkness.

The character gains the ability to smite his foes (as the Destruction domain's granted power, but substituting character level for cleric level) a number of times per day equal to his Charisma modifier (minimum one) for a tenday.

Baleful Effect: It is hard to imagine anyone other than a follower of Bane attempting the Thunder Room ritual, but should the cleric of another god attempt to cast a spell or channel Bane's divine energy, the deity shows him the folly of his hubris.

His arms fill with weakness, and his resolve in combat crumbles.

The character is so affected for 24 hours, during which time all damage he causes in melee combat is considered nonlethal damage.

Sample Encounter (EL 11): Ritual performer (LE cleric of Bane 8), 1 lieutenant (LE human fighter 4), 4 soldiers (LE half-orc fighter 3), 14 musicians (N human expert 3).

VALE OF WHISPERS

The supplicants of Shar value secrets above gold.

Many of Shar's faithful spend their entire lives gathering and keeping secrets, using them as currency to increase their standing within the church and to stay in the favor of their goddess.

Every secret whispered to a priest or follower of the Lady of Loss is heard by the deity as well, and she stores them all in an unholy shrine known as the Vale of Whispers.

The "vale" is actually a 100-foot-radius, dome-shaped cave created by an overhang of rock at the southern end of the Graypeak Mountains, just northwest of the Marsh of Chelimber.

The cave is said to be as old as Faerûn itself, and its floor and ceiling are covered by thousands of needlelike rock formations.

In the evening, when the light of the setting sun streams in through the cave's only entrance, these stony teeth give one the impression of walking into the maw of a creature of legendary evil.

It is only after one walks inside that the true nature of the place can be determined.

All the whispered secrets of Faerûn make their way here, and they bounce around the cave ceaselessly.

A hushed cacophony persists in the cave at all times as whispers echo off the walls and stones.

No matter where one stands within the cave, every minute or so a secret will reverberate to precisely his spot, that whisper briefly becoming much louder and clearer than the others.

Otherwise he hears only the gurgle of the other secrets as they flow around the room.

Animals cannot stand the sound of this incessant whispering and have learned to avoid the cave.

It requires a successful DC 15 Diplomacy check or Handle Animal check to coerce a familiar or animal companion (respectively) into the cavern; all other animals will refuse to set foot inside.

Occasionally the secrets seem to take form and flit like shadows around the room.

In reality, this disturbance is a flock of ultrapowerful shadows bound by Shar to guard the Vale of Whispers against faithless intruders.

Anyone not of the Sharran faith (or not accompanied by a cleric or follower in good standing) who spends more than a few rounds inside the cavern comes under immediate attack by the shadows.

Fighting them is made even more difficult by the preponderance of stalagmites and stalactites, which provide no barrier to the shadows but cause major problems for corporeal creatures trying to target their attackers.

Even if the shadows are slain, they reappear within the vale in 2d20 hours.

Vale of Whispers Ritual: The ritual used to invoke the shrine's power is quite simple.

A supplicant must find her way to the center of the chamber, where thousands of simultaneous whispers can be clearly heard.

She must kneel here and listen to the whispers until she can discern a single secret that repeats itself over and over again.

Doing so requires a successful DC 15 Intelligence check followed by up to 1 hour of meditation.

For every 2 points by which her check result exceeds the DC, the time necessary to discern the secret is lessened by 5 minutes.

A priest of Shar automatically succeeds at the ritual, although if she fails her Intelligence check she must meditate for the full hour in order to receive the ritual's benefit.

Ritual Benefit: The character gains a +20 circumstance bonus on all Bluff checks related to a single course of action for 24 hours.

Thus, if the character was on a campaign to convince a town mayor that each of his staff members was corrupt, the bonus would apply to all Bluff checks made to sway the mayor.

If, during that period, the character used a Bluff check to feint in combat or bypass the mayor's guards, the bonus would not apply.

Baleful Effect: Nonfollowers who attempt the ritual are struck with a powerful curse.

They suffer the effect of a bestow curse spell that reduces their highest ability score by 6 points for 24 hours.

There is no save against this effect, and it cannot be removed by any means short of a limited wish, wish, or miracle spell.

Clerics of other gods who attempt the ritual, or try to cast a divine spell, or attempt to turn the shrine's shadow guardians suffer even more.

Not only are they hit with the above curse, but they must also make a Concentration check (DC 15 + spell level) in order to cast any spell during the next 24 hours, as Shar whispers their darkest fears directly into their minds every time they attempt to draw upon their god's power.

☛ Shadow Guardians (10): CR 8; Large undead (incorporeal); HD 10d12; hp 65; Init +7; Spd fly 50 ft. Skills and Feats: Hide +11*, Listen +11, Search +7, Spot +11; Alertness, Dodge, Flyby Attack, Improved Initiative.

Strength Damage (Su): The touch of a shadow guardian deals 2d4 points of Strength damage to a living foe.

A creature reduced to Strength 0 by a shadow guardian dies.

This is a negative energy effect.

Create Spawn (Su): Any humanoid reduced to Strength 0 by a shadow guardian becomes a shadow under the control of its killer within 1d4 rounds.

Shadow guardians have a +2 racial bonus on Listen and Spot checks and a +4 racial bonus on Search checks.

* A shadow guardian gains a +4 racial bonus on Hide checks in areas of shadowy illumination.

In brightly lit areas, it takes a -4 penalty on Hide checks.

AMBROSIA (DISTILLED JOY)

A mysterious substance made from distilled joy, ambrosia is celestial food, the heavenly sustenance of Celestia.

Created by means of the distilled joy spell, ambrosia can be used as a special spell component, in addition to the other uses mentioned in the spell description.

As an optional component, ambrosia automatically increases the effective caster level of a single good spell by +2.

This increase doesn't stack with previous applications of distilled joy or any other bonuses to effective caster level.

ANGEL RADIANCE

Captured in glass by a special process known only to angels themselves, the radiance of an angel is a potent component. Used as a component for a banishment or dismissal spell, or a dispel evil spell used to drive a fiend back to its home plane, a phial of angel radiance increases the saving throw DC by +1.

It also grants the caster a +1 bonus on her caster level check to overcome the target's spell resistance.

Angel radiance sheds light as a torch.

BLINK DOG TOOTH

A spell to which this component is applied has a 50% chance to confer the ghost touch ability and negate miss chances due to blur, displacement, entropy, or phasing abilities.

CELESTIAL BLOOD

If a spell to which this component is applied deals damage, there is a 30% chance that the spell deals an extra +2d6 points of damage to an evil target.

The celestial who gave the blood must still be alive for this to function.

COUATL FEATHER

A spell to which this component is applied has a 35% chance to have its effective caster level increased by +2.

COUATL SCALE

A spell to which this component is applied has a 30% chance to have its saving throw DC increased by +1.

When the scale is used by a bard, the chance increases to 60%.

PEGASUS FEATHER

If this component is used when casting detect good or detect evil, the caster learns the number of evil auras and the power of the most potent aura in the first round of concentration instead of the second, and the power and location of each aura in the second round instead of the third.

PHOENIX FEATHER

A spell to which this component is applied has a 10% chance to remain prepared even after being cast. Casters who do not prepare spells gain no advantage from this component.

UNICORN BLOOD

The blood of a living unicorn is a powerful alchemical substance.

It can be formed into a ravage (see Ravages and Afflictions, above) that saps the strength of evil creatures.

Also, if a spell to which this component is applied requires a Fortitude save, there's a 40% chance that the saving throw DC is increased by +1.

In either case, unicorn blood retains its potency only as long as the unicorn that gave it remains alive.

UNICORN HORN (SLIVER)

Removing a unicorn's entire horn kills it, but a unicorn may on rare occasions give a sliver of its horn to a favored ally.

If a spell to which this component is applied requires a touch attack (melee or ranged), there's a 40% chance that the caster receives a +1 sacred bonus on the attack roll.

COMPLETE CHAMPION (3.5)

ANGEL'S BLOOD

Those who manage to shed celestial blood often collect a few drops for sale to other, equally vile souls.

Price: 85 gp.

ASHES OF POWER

When a used scroll is burned and its ashes are mixed with holy water and mystical inks, the resulting paste houses an ember of true magic.

When used as a component in the casting of dispel magic, greater dispel magic, or break enchantment, this powder allows the caster to make two dispel checks and choose the better result.

Price: 1,750 gp.

AURIAL SAPPHIRE

On rare occasions, the winds of the Elemental Plane of Air capture various particles whipping about in the emptiness and drive them together over the course of years.

The result is a crystal marbled in various shades of blue. Called arial sapphires, these gemstones are sometimes found on the Material Plane, usually at high altitudes where the winds blow most fiercely.

When an arial sapphire is used as a component in the casting of any Air domain spell or spell that has the air descriptor, the spell is affected as if by the Quicken Spell feat, but without any level increase.

Price: 215 gp.

CRYPT POWDER

During the long years in which a powerful necromancer lies decaying in his tomb, some of the magic that infused his bones seeps into the surrounding walls.

If one of these stones is then shattered in a particular way, the resulting dust sometimes retains that power.

When used as a component in the casting of any spell that targets either corpses or undead, this powder increases both the save DC and the caster level by 1.

Price: 150 gp.

DOPPELGANGER BILE

This viscous fluid aids in deceptive magic.

When specially distilled and used as a component in the casting of any spell that grants invisibility or a bonus on Disguise checks, doppelganger bile doubles the duration of the effect.

Price: 95 gp.

DRAGON RUBY

Gold dragons like to feast on pearls and gems.

Occasionally, a few gems pass through such a dragon's system undigested.

If one of those gems is a ruby, it absorbs a bit of the creature's fiery nature and becomes a dragon ruby.

When used as a component in the casting of any spell that has the fire descriptor, a dragon ruby doubles that spell's area.

Price: 175 gp.

ESSENCE OF ORDER

When various powdered herbs are mixed with the inner fluids of an inevitable, the resulting oily substance emits a potent vapor known as essence of order.

Anyone breathing this vapor is cured of 1 point of mental ability damage caused by a poison or disease.

A single dose is usable only once.

When used as a component in the casting of any spell that has the law descriptor, essence of order increases the save DC by 1.

Price: 300 gp.

FEATHER OF THE FAR REACHES

When coated in a thin layer of powdered mithral, the tailfeathers of an albatross or an arrowhawk gain a degree of magical power.

If one of these so-called feathers of the far reaches is used as a component in the casting of any Travel domain spell, it either adds 10 feet to the speed (if the spell grants a new or improved mode of movement) or increases the effective caster level by 1.

Price: 95 gp.

GAME OF FATE

Long ago, someone discovered that a die carved from the shell of a large tortoise attracts the attention of the deities of luck.

When used as a component in the casting of any spell that grants a bonus on attack rolls, damage rolls, saving throws, or checks, such a die—known as a game of fate—produces one of three effects: +1 caster level (01–45), double duration (46–90), or restoration of a spell as per a pearl of power (91–100).

Price: 550 gp.

GUARDINAL FEATHER

The feathers of a guardinal, when given freely, have protective properties.

When one is used as a component in the casting of any spell that grants either energy resistance or a bonus to Armor Class, it increases the value of that protection by 2.

Price: 600 gp.

HERO'S TEARS

Tears taken from a champion of good who weeps over a fallen comrade become a potent aid to virtuous casters when sanctified with bless water.

If these hero's tears are used as a component in the casting of any spell that has the good descriptor, they increase the effective caster level by 2.

Price: 675 gp.

HORN OF GORGON

Gorgon horns soften when soaked in a particular kind of rare vinegar.

If this horn of gorgon is then used as a component in the casting of any spell that enhances Strength—whether by an enhancement bonus, a size increase, or any other means—it adds 2 to the subject's Strength, on top of the spell's normal effects.

Price: 575 gp.

KISS OF DISCORD

An herb known by sages as lusiri blossom, kiss of discord has dull red leaves that vaguely resemble lips.

When ingested, it causes hallucinations (1d3 hours, Fort DC 13 negates, treat as confusion).

If used as a component in the casting of any spell that has the chaos descriptor, it increases the effective caster level by 2.

Price: 310 gp.

OBADDIS LEAF

A rare variety of holly, this plant retains some of the magic that passes through it when it is used as a divine focus by a druid.

If it is then used as a component in the casting of a Plant domain spell or any spell that specifically targets plants, it doubles both the area and the duration.

Price: 130 gp.

PEARL OF THE WAVES

A pearl of the waves results when an oyster forms a pearl around the tiniest fragment of a magic item, such as a sliver of a magic blade or wood from a broken staff.

If this pearl is used as a component in the casting of any Water domain spell or a spell that has the water descriptor, the spell is affected as if by the Quicken Spell feat, but without any change in spell slot.

Price: 225 gp.

SCHOLAR'S DREAMS

Some say that ivy growing on the gravestone of a truly learned sage feeds upon the knowledge of the deceased.

When used as a component in the casting of any Knowledge domain spell, this ivy—known as scholar's dreams—doubles both the range and the duration.

Price: 175 gp.

SOIL OF STONE

Taken from beneath the palaces of the dao (genie's of Elemental Earth), this powdered stone retains traces of both that plane and its masters.

If this so-called soil of stone is used as a component in the casting of any Earth domain spell or a spell that has the earth descriptor, it doubles the duration.

Price: 65 gp.

SUNFLOWER OF PELOR

For reasons unfathomable to sages, large sunflowers often grow in the soil where an undead creature has been reduced to ash by a cleric's turn undead ability.

The petals of these sunflowers of Pelor, if properly treated with various unguents, grant power to sun-related spells. When used as a component in the casting of any Sun domain spell or a spell that has the light descriptor, these petals double its area.

Price: 100 gp.

TALON OF EHLONNA

When an animal dies while under the effect of a magic fang or greater magic fang spell, one of its claws or teeth sometimes retains a spark of that magic.

This so-called talon of Ehlonna resists decay and gains a gold-bronze luster over time.

When used as a component in the casting of any Animal domain spell or a spell that specifically targets animals, the talon increases the effective caster level by 2.

Price: 370 gp.

TRUE WARRIOR'S BLADE

A weapon wielded by a deity's champion, then broken in combat, can be consecrated with holy water and unguents to become a true warrior's blade.

When used as a component in the casting of any divine spell that deals hit point damage, this blade increases the damage dealt by 2 points per spell level.

Price: 650 gp.

TWILIGHT GREEN

A distant relative of belladonna, this herb is a deadly poison (ingestion, DC 14 Fortitude negates, primary and secondary damage 1d4 Constitution).

When used as a component in the casting of any spell that deals negative energy damage, however, twilight green increases that damage by 1 point per spell level.

Price: 250 gp.

UNICORN HORN

If a horn taken from a unicorn that has died of natural causes is used as a component in the casting of any touch spell that has the healing descriptor, it transforms the spell into a ray with a 30-foot range.

Price: 190 gp.

COMPLETE MAGE (3.5)

TABLE 5-6: OPTIONAL SPELL COMPONENTS

Item	Weight	Cost
Angel down	*	100 gp
Devil's eye	1/10 lb.	150 gp
Dragon's tear	*	200 gp
Fairy button	1/10 lb.	200 gp
Fairy dust	*	100 gp
Golden desert honey	*	300 gp
Possibility dust	*	100 gp
Primal essence	*	150 gp
Serpents' tongue	*	120 gp
Singing shell	*	200 gp

* These items have no weight worth noting.

ANGEL DOWN

Popular lore has it that this fluffy golden material is reputedly made up of pinfeathers from celestials' wings. In fact, it is pollen gathered from various rare flowers found growing on the Upper Planes. When angel down is used as a component in an abjuration spell, the spell's duration is doubled as if affected by the Extend Spell feat.

DEVIL'S EYE

These small, translucent stones seem a little warm to the touch. They also at least faintly resemble an eye with a vivid red sclera, a white or yellow iris, and a black, catlike pupil. Despite the name, devil's eyes are natural crystals found in volcanic areas, often streambeds or collections of glacial debris. The warm feeling comes from a weak acid that forms on the stone's surface. When a devil's eye is used in a divination spell, the spell's level is increased by one (as if by Heighten Spell).

DRAGON'S TEAR

Reputedly the dried tears of dragons, these irregular little crystals have a milky white color with a faint blue tinge. They are found near mineral springs and volcanic vents (both locales with a decidedly draconic character). When used in any fire or mind-affecting spell, a dragon's tear increases the spell's level by one, as if affected by the Heighten Spell feat.

FAIRY BUTTON

These small bits of stone resemble brightly colored mushrooms or flowers. They occur naturally in caverns where the groundwater has the correct mineral content. They get their name from their minuscule size and bright colors—usually red, yellow, green or purple or some variegated combination that includes some or all of those hues.

When incorporated into an illusion spell, a fairy button doubles the area of the spell, as if affected by the Widen Spell feat.

FAIRY DUST

This fine powder is all but invisible in daylight, but it gleams with a silvery sheen in moonlight. Fey creatures supposedly collect it from newly blossomed wood flowers each spring. In fact, fairy dust is made of the dried and powdered cocoons of certain rare moths that breed in the spring. When used in any transmutation spell, fairy dust doubles the duration of the spell, as if affected by the Extend Spell feat.

GOLDEN DESERT HONEY

Actually lumps of dried of dried sap from a rare desert tree, this material is a vital ingredient in expensive incenses and perfumes. When used in a summoning spell with a casting time of 1 round, golden desert honey reduces the casting time to 1 standard action, as if affected by the Rapid Spell feat (see Complete Divine).

POSSIBILITY DUST

This iridescent gray material is gathered in the depths of the Astral Plane. Planar scholars believe that possibility dust is literally distilled reality that somehow seeps from the Material Plane to the Astral Plane, where it settles as fine dust. This assertion is unproven; however, spellcasters have found the substance useful when attempt to create something out of nothing. When possibility dust is incorporated into any creation spell, the spell's duration doubles, as if affected by the Extend Spell feat.

PRIMAL ESSENCE

This granular material appears as metallic sand, though it actually comes from the Ethereal Plane. Spellcasters have found that they can shape it as part of spellcasting to take on other forms. Unlike other components described here, spells of higher than 1st level don't automatically require multiple units of primal essence. A pinch of primal essence dust can be substituted for any material component (but not a focus) that costs 100 gp or less. Multiple pinches have an additive effect; three pinches, for example, could substitute for the 250 gp of diamond dust required by stoneskin.

SERPENTS' TONGUE

This material resembles dried snake's tongues, hence the name. In fact, it is a mixture of cured tongues of various rare birds and reptiles and the dried stamens of several kinds of tropical flowers.

All the ingredients must be painstakingly gathered by hand and carefully mixed in the correct proportions. When used in an enchantment spell, serpent's tongue doubles the spell's duration, as if affected by the Extend Spell feat.

SINGING SHELL

These little shells resemble miniature conch shells. They come from a rare mollusk found along jungle coastlines.

Searching for the shells is time-consuming in the murky water and exposes the gatherer to attack from predators that lurk both in the water and on land.

When a singing shell is used in a spell with the sonic descriptor, the spell's area doubles, as if affected by the Widen Spell feat.

If the spell doesn't affect an area, its range doubles instead, as if affected by the Enlarge Spell feat.

MONSTER MANUAL 4 (3.5)

SKIURID NUGGET

Skiurids do not collect treasure, but their stores of life energy are prized by many beings.

Necromancers in particular seek out skiurid hoards and pay well for them; a nugget of coalesced shadow is worth 1,000 gp.

Skiurids share their dens, so obtaining a hoard usually requires defeating large numbers of them (as well as any other creatures found in the den).

A skiurid nest typically contains one shadow nugget per four adults, representing the excess stored by the colony for lean times and for rearing young.

A nugget of stored life energy can serve as an optional material component for necromancy spells.

It has a 50% chance of increasing such a spell's effective caster level by 2.

UNEARTHED ARCANA (3.5)

TABLE 5-2: METAMAGIC COMPONENTS

Spell Name	Metamagic Effect	Metamagic Component	Minimum Cost
Acid fog	Extended	Powdered gorgon hoof	940 gp

BEHIND THE CURTAIN: METAMAGIC COMPONENTS

If you use this variant, you may find that characters are less likely to take metamagic feats because they can just pay for the occasional metamagic effect by using a metamagic component instead. Spellcasters who use metamagic components repeatedly may fall behind the other PCs in terms of wealth, because metamagic components are quite expensive. Although using a metamagic component is more expensive than casting from a scroll with the metamagic version of the spell, a spellcaster gets more bang for her buck with a metamagic component, because she can use her own caster level and ability score to set the spell's parameters such as save DC, damage, and range. Metamagic components give spellcasters more flexibility, because they can either cast a spell normally or get the extra benefit of the metamagic component, and they don't have to decide until the moment spellcasting begins.

Metamagic components are an effective tool for NPC spellcasters in particular, who often have only a few rounds to cast spells before the encounter ends. But because metamagic components are expensive, such NPCs may use up more of their treasure than is typical.

SPECIAL MATERIALS

ARMS AND EQUIPMENT GUIDE (3.0)

ASTRAL DRIFTMETAL

This extraordinarily rare mineral is mined only on islands of matter floating on the Astral Plane.

It is very similar to iron but has a single extraordinary feature: It has a 25% chance of being effective against an incorporeal attack, as if it were made of force.

It is not malleable enough to be worked into chainmail or scale mail; only a breastplate, shield, or any form of heavy armor can be made from Astral driftmetal.

A suit of driftmetal armor weighs 5 pounds more than the same armor made of steel, but the other statistics of the armor (maximum Dexterity bonus, armor check penalty, spell failure chance) are unchanged.

Astral driftmetal has a hardness of 12 and 30 hit points per inch of thickness.

Its market price modifier is +1,000 gp.

BAATORIAN GREEN STEEL

Deep in the mines of the Nine Hells of Baator, veins of green-flecked iron run through the rock.

This rare metal, when alloyed into steel, can be used to create weapons of amazing sharpness.

Any slashing or piercing weapon created with Baatorian green steel has a natural enhancement bonus of +1 to damage.

This bonus does not stack with any other enhancement bonus.

Thus, a green steel (+1 to damage) longsword with a +4 enhancement bonus effectively has a +4 enhancement bonus on both attacks and damage.

In an area where magic does not function, it still retains its natural +1 enhancement bonus on damage.

A masterwork green steel slashing or piercing weapon would have a +1 bonus on both attack and damage rolls (from a combination of masterwork and the green steel).

Though green steel is a common component of keen weapons produced in the Lower Planes, it grants no other special ability to such weapons.

The market price modifier for such a weapon is +2,000 gp. Baatorian green steel has a hardness of 12 and 30 hit points per inch of thickness.

BLENDED QUARTZ

This rare, naturally occurring blend of iron and quartz is cumbersome and difficult to work.

Armor and shields made from blended quartz weigh twice as much as normal and incur the normal armor check penalty.

The DC of relevant Craft checks involving blended quartz increases by 5.

But blended quartz is a surprisingly good conduit of magical energy.

Spell failure chances for blended quartz armor and shields are reduced by 20%.

Weapons made from blended quartz weigh twice as much as normal but gain no additional benefits.

Blended quartz has a hardness of 8 and 15 hit points per inch of thickness.

Item	Market Price Modifier
Light armor	+2,000 gp
Medium armor	+5,000 gp
Heavy armor	+10,000 gp
Shield	+2,000 gp/lb.

BRONZEWOOD

This exceptionally hard wood is useful for making both armor and weapons.

Unlike most woods, bronzewood can be used instead of metal to fashion heavy armor and weapons.

Although dense and weighty compared to other woods, it is still lighter than most metal: Items weigh 10% less when made from bronzewood rather than metal.

Armor made of bronzewood is also less obtrusive than similar armor made of metal.

The armor check penalty from bronzewood armor and shields does not affect Hide checks made in woodland environments.

The following armors can be made from bronzewood: breastplate, banded mail, splint mail, half-plate, and full plate.

Although bronzewood can replace metal in most weapons, chain weapons such as the spiked chain cannot be made from it.

Bronzewood has a hardness of 10 and 20 hit points per inch of thickness.

Item	Market Price Modifier
Light armor	+1,000 gp
Medium armor	+4,000 gp
Heavy armor	+9,000 gp
Other items	500 gp/lb.

CHITIN

Difficult to work and dangerous to obtain, the exoskeletons of massive insects are still used to construct weapons and armor, especially in areas where metal is scarce.

Weapons and armor made from chitin weigh half as much as similar metal items.

Although chitin can replace metal in most items, chain weapons such as the spiked chain cannot be made from chitin, nor can chainmail armor or chain shirts.

Giant insects and similar creatures are the only sources of chitin plates big enough for crafting armor.

To provide workable chitin, the creature must have a +5 natural armor bonus or better.

Much as they can work choice bits of dragonhide into armor, armorsmiths can make one suit of banded mail for a creature up to two sizes smaller than the source creature, one suit of half-plate for a creature three sizes smaller, or one breastplate or suit of full plate for a creature four sizes smaller.

In each case, there is enough material left over to create a large or small shield, one Large or Medium-size weapon, two Small weapons, or 50 arrow or bolt heads, provided that the source creature is Large or bigger.

Chitin has a hardness of 5 and 10 hit points per inch of thickness.

Item	Market Price Modifier
Heavy armor	+10,000 gp
Shield	+2,000 gp

DARKLEAF, ELVEN

Similar to elven leafweave armor (see below), elven darkleaf armor is made of carefully cured and beautifully carved pieces of darkwood (see Chapter 8 of the DUNGEON MASTER's Guide), supplemented by alchemically treated leaves.

Making armor out of darkleaf reduces its spell failure chance by 5% because the armor is so flexible.

The maximum Dexterity bonus of darkleaf armor is increased by +1, and armor check penalties are reduced by 2.

Most darkleaf armors are one category lighter than normal for purposes of movement and other limitations (for example, whether a barbarian can use his fast movement ability).

If made of elven darkleaf, heavy armor is treated as medium, medium armor is treated as light, but light armor is still treated as light.

Only armors generally made of metal can be constructed from elven darkleaf.

Creating elven darkleaf armor requires a successful Alchemy check (DC 25) in addition to the normal Craft (armorsmithing) checks required to make armor.

ELUKIAN CLAY

Although barely malleable in its natural state, this rough, gray stone can be shaped into weapons and armor in a process similar to sculpting.

Also known as sea-stone, elukian clay is formed in part by seepage from the Elemental Plane of Water.

It has a strong affinity to water, so those traveling in or over large bodies of water value it greatly.

Items made from elukian clay do not count against the wearer's weight total when calculating armor check penalties on Swim checks.

Although it can be shaped into a point, elukian clay does not hold an edge very well.

Only piercing and bludgeoning weapons can be made from elukian clay.

Armor and shields made from elukian clay have their armor check penalty increased by 1.

Once formed, an item made from elukian clay takes three days to harden.

Items used before the hardening is complete are easily ruined; such items have 0 hardness and only one-tenth their normal hit points.

Once dried, elukian clay items have a hardness of 10 and 30 hit points per inch of thickness.

Shaping elukian clay into armor requires the Craft (sculpture) skill.

Item	Market Price Modifier
Light armor	+1,000 gp
Medium armor	+2,000 gp
Heavy armor	+4,000 gp
Other items	+200 gp/lb.

ENTROPIUM

Githzerai armorsmiths in the Ever-Changing Chaos of Limbo have found a way to alloy ordinary iron with some of the shifting chaos-stuff of their native plane.

The resulting metal, called entropium, is heavier than iron but can be used to make effective armor.

A suit of entropium armor actually shifts as its wearer moves, allowing incredible flexibility at the cost of increased weight.

Light entropium armor is considered medium and weighs 2 pounds more than normal, medium armor is heavy and weighs 5 pounds more than normal, and heavy armor is simply more so, weighing 10 pounds more than normal. Shields also weigh 2 pounds more than their steel counterparts.

The armor check penalty of the armor increases by 2 for Strength-related skills (Climb and Jump) and decreases by 2 for Dexterity-related skills (Balance, Escape Artist, Hide, Move Silently, Pick Pockets, and Tumble).

The arcane spell failure chance decreases by 10% (to a minimum of 5%), and the maximum Dexterity bonus increases by +2.

Naturally, entropium improves only armors made primarily of metal, including chain shirts, all medium armors except hide, all heavy armors, and steel shields.

Entropium has a hardness of 15 and 40 hit points per inch of thickness.

Item	Market Price Modifier
Light armor	+750 gp
Medium armor	+2,000 gp
Heavy armor	+8,000 gp
Shield	+750 gp

GEHENNAN MORGHUTH-IRON

This volcanic mineral is unique to the steep mountains of the Bleak Eternity of Gehenna, where it is occasionally mined by neutral evil fiends called yugoloths and other creatures on that forbidding plane.

It forges poorly, making weapons that appear pocked and pitted and have a -1 attack and damage penalty.

However, morghuth-iron is extremely toxic, rapidly poisoning the blood.

A slashing or piercing weapon made of Gehennan morphuth-iron is naturally poisonous. The weapon delivers its poison (Fortitude save DC 12) with each successful attack. The initial damage is 1 point of temporary Dexterity; the secondary damage is 1d4 points of temporary Dexterity. The market price modifier for a weapon made of morphuth-iron is +4,000 gp. Gehennan morphuth-iron has a hardness of 9 and 20 hit points per inch of thickness.

LEAFWEAVE, ELVEN

Elven artisans weave suits of armor from forest leaves, which are then treated by a special alchemical process that makes them as tough and flexible as leather, with considerably less weight and encumbrance. Such suits are made in both “springtime” and “autumn” styles: Springtime leafweave armor is vivid green, while the autumn style is made up of red, orange, and yellow leaves. The spell failure chance for elven leafweave armor is reduced by 5% due to its increased flexibility, the maximum Dexterity bonus is increased by +1, and armor check penalties are reduced by 2. Armors that are generally constructed of metal cannot be duplicated with elven leafweave. Creating elven leafweave armor requires a successful Alchemy check (DC 25) in addition to the normal Craft (armorsmithing) checks.

SOLANIAN TRUESTEEL

Mined on the fourth layer of the Seven Mounting Heavens of Celestia, this fine iron needs no alloy and shines with a silvery gleam. When forged into a weapon, it gives the wielder a +1 bonus on the confirmation roll for a critical hit. The market price modifier for such a weapon is +1,000 gp. Solanian truesteel has a hardness of 11 and 25 hit points per inch of thickness.

URDRUKAR

Urdrukar, often referred to as “mind steel”, is a dark metal found only in the deepest recesses of the Underdark. Naturally resistant to divination magic, items made from urdrukar are greatly prized by those who do not wish to be found. Every 5 pounds of urdrukar that a character wears or carries increases the DC for all attempts to scry on that character by +2. Armor and shields made from urdrukar have double the normal arcane spell failure chance. Urdrukar is heavier and harder to work with than most other metals: Armor made from it tends to be somewhat clumsier, making gestures more difficult. Urdrukar has a hardness of 15 and 30 hit points per inch of thickness. Metal items made from urdrukar cost an additional 500 gp per pound.

YSGARDIAN HEARTWIRE

This incredibly fine, flexible metal is found only in the deep mines of Nidavellir in the Heroic Domains of Ysgard. It is not suitable for making an entire suit of armor, but small sections of heartwire mail can be incorporated into chain shirts, chainmail, or heavy armor to reinforce vital areas. This reinforcement has the effect of increasing the wearer's AC by +2 solely for purposes of the roll to confirm a critical hit. The heartwire is so fine and light that it does not increase the armor's weight. The market price modifier for such a suit of armor is +1,500 gp.

BOOK OF EXALTED DEEDS (3.5)

AURORUM

This luminous steel gleams with varying hues of pink and indigo. An aurorum weapon, shield, or suit of armor that has been sundered can be reformed by bringing together its fragments (a full-round action). The broken pieces bond quickly and seamlessly, restoring the item to its previous state. The market price modifier for an aurorum weapon, shield, or suit of armor is +4,000 gp. Aurorum has the same hit points per inch of thickness and hardness as regular steel.

FRYSTALLINE

This mineral grows in the icy mountain caves of Eronia, the second layer of the Blessed Fields of Elysium. Its resilient, pale-gold crystals contain divine energy that emanates from a god that sleeps beneath the mountains. Any weapon made of frystalline is treated as good-aligned for the purpose of overcoming damage reduction. The market price modifier for such a weapon is +2,000 gp. Frystalline has 15 hp per inch of thickness and hardness 10.

MOONBLOOD

Celestials use this silvery substance as warpaint, painting their faces and other exposed areas of their bodies with elaborately entwined holy runes before entering battle. Proper application of moonblood warpaint takes 1 hour and requires a DC 22 Craft (painting) check; a failed check means no benefits are gained and the moonblood is wasted. When the moonblood runes are properly applied, the warpaint grants a +2 sacred bonus to Armor Class. The warpaint lasts for 1 day, then is absorbed harmlessly into the skin. An evil creature that touches moonblood takes 1d6 points of damage. One application of moonblood costs 1,500 gp.

SERREN

Serren trees grow on Arvandor, the uppermost of Arborea's three layers.

The trees serve as vessels for nature spirits, and any branch that falls from a serren tree can be fashioned into a bow, arrow, or crossbow bolt imbued with a portion of the tree's spirit.

Serren bows, arrows, and bolts have the ghost touch special quality, although this property is not magical.

The market price modifier for a serren weapon (one bow or 50 arrows or bolts) is +4,000 gp.

Serren has the same hit points per inch of thickness and hardness as regular wood.

SOLARIAN TRUESTEEL

Mined on the fourth layer of the Seven Mounting Heavens of Celestia, this fine iron needs no alloy and shines with a silvery gleam.

When forged into a weapon, it gives the wielder a +1 bonus on the confirmation roll for a critical hit.

The market price modifier for such a weapon is +1,000 gp.

Solarian truesteel has 25 hp per inch of thickness and hardness 11.

STORM TEARS

This milky rain falls on the Upper Planes and usually heralds the death of a powerful champion of good or the birth of a stillborn child.

These milky tears can be collected.

A single vial of storm tears duplicates the effects of a heart's ease spell (see Chapter 6: Magic for details).

Storm tears are nonmagical in nature, and each vial has a market price of 750 gp.

YSGARDIAN HEARTWIRE

This incredibly fine, flexible metal is found only in the deep mines of Nidavellir in the Heroic Domains of Ysgard. It is not suitable for making an entire suit of armor, but small sections of heartwire mail can be incorporated into chain shirts, chainmail, or heavy armor to reinforce vital areas.

This reinforcement has the effect of increasing the wearer's AC by +2 solely for purposes of the roll to confirm a critical hit.

The heartwire is so fine and light that it does not increase the armor's weight.

The market price modifier for such a suit of armor is +1,500 gp.

CHAMPIONS OF VALOR (3.5)

GLASSTEEL

Made by the avariels and sun elves in an alchemical process requiring extensive knowledge of both metallurgy and glassblowing, glassteel combines strength beyond iron with the transparency of glass.

It mostly finds use as a building material in fantastic castles, but it can also be fashioned into weapons and armor (although glassteel armor is much more costly to craft than even the most ornate blade).

Glassteel is stronger and lighter than iron and completely transparent, lacking the greenish tint of common glass.

Items made of glassteel weigh only half what they otherwise would.

Items not primarily made of metal are not meaningfully affected by being partially made of glassteel.

(A breastplate can be made of glassteel, but hide armor cannot).

Glassteel armor counts as one armor category lighter than normal for purposes of movement and other limitations.

Heavy armors are treated as medium, and medium armors are treated as light, but light armors are still treated as light.

Arcane spell failure chances for armors and shields made of glassteel are decreased by 10%, maximum Dexterity bonus is increased by 2, and armor check penalties are lessened by 3 (to a minimum of 0).

Glassteel has hardness 20 and 40 hit points per inch of thickness.

Weapons and armor fashioned from glassteel are treated as masterwork items with regard to creation times, but the masterwork quality does not affect the enhancement bonus of weapons nor the armor check penalty of armor.

Item Cost Modifier: Light armor +2,000 gp, medium armor +6,000 gp, heavy armor +12,000 gp, shield +2,000 gp, weapon +500 gp, other items +100 gp/lb.

This description updates and supersedes previous descriptions of glassteel.

COMPLETE ARCANE (3.5)

STARMETAL

This superior alloy is made from meteoric iron—specifically, ore refined from meteors that fall during the rare appearances of the comet Alhazarde.

Starmetal is extraordinarily hard, and is equal to adamantine for all purposes (see page 283 of the Dungeon Master's Guide), including overcoming damage reduction or granting damage reduction when used in armor construction.

Starmetal also possesses an inherent magical connection to the Material Plane, meaning that weapons made of the alloy are especially effective against creatures from other planes.

Weapons made of starmetal deal an extra 1d6 points of damage to any extraplanar creatures while they are on the Material Plane.

Creating a weapon from starmetal costs 5,000 gp more than creating a similar weapon of steel.

Creating armor from starmetal has the same costs as armor created from adamantine.

COMPLETE WARRIOR (3.5)

PANDEMONIC SILVER

Mined from thin veins of ore on the plane of Pandemonium, pandemonic silver has all the properties of alchemical silver (see page 284 of the Dungeon Master's Guide).

In addition, a thin, unearthly scream issues forth from a bladed weapon made of pandemonic silver whenever it's unsheathed in at least a light breeze.

This scream is a sonic, mind-affecting compulsion that is a fear effect.

Other than the wielder, those within 30 feet who hear the scream must succeed on a Will save or cower for 1d4 rounds.

The DC of the Will save depends on the strength of the wind, as indicated on the table below.

Wind Force	Save DC
Light (0–10 mph)	10
Moderate (11–20 mph)	13
Strong (21–30 mph)	16
Severe (31–50 mph)	19
Windstorm (51–74 mph)	22
Hurricane (75–154 mph)	25
Tornado (175–300 mph)	28

Pandemonic silver can be used to coat the striking surface of any slashing or piercing weapon made of steel. The cost of the weapon increases as shown below.

Type of Pandemonic Silver Item	Item Cost Modifier
Light slashing or piercing weapon	+9,000 gp
One-handed slashing or piercing weapon, or one head of a slashing or piercing double weapon	+11,000 gp
Two-handed slashing or piercing weapon, or both heads of a slashing or piercing double weapon	+13,000 gp

SUSALIAN CHAINWEAVE

Made by a technique known only to the greatest elven armorsmiths, susalian chainweave is an elaborate system of chainmail links knitted together to provide additional protection against some blows.

When an attack with a slashing or bludgeoning weapon hits a character wearing susalian chainweave, the armor stiffens at the point of contact and disperses the force of the attack.

This quality gives the wearer damage reduction 3/piercing as long as the susalian chainweave armor is worn.

Type of Susalian Chainweave Item	Item Cost Modifier
Light armor	+28,000 gp
Medium armor	+35,000 gp
Heavy armor	+42,000 gp

THINAUN

This dark, glittering steel alloy holds an attraction to souls recently released from their bodies.

Obviously, this has application for melee weapons.

If a thinaun melee weapon is touching a creature when it dies, that creature's soul is sucked into the weapon rather than passing on to its final reward.

The soul remains in the thinaun weapon until the weapon is destroyed or another creature dies while touching the thinaun weapon (the new soul displaces the old one).

Raise dead, resurrection, and similar spells won't bring back a creature whose soul is trapped by a thinaun weapon unless the caster has the weapon in his possession.

Because the soul is nearby, fewer material components are required for such spells: Reincarnation, raise dead, resurrection, and true resurrection require half as much of the relevant material component (unguents or diamonds) to cast if the soul is within a thinaun weapon.

A thinaun weapon captures a soul from anyone killed while touching the weapon.

This means that if the thinaun weapon's wielder dies, her weapon captures her soul.

Only melee weapons made primarily of metal can be crafted as thinaun weapons.

Type of Thinaun Item	Item Cost Modifier
Light weapon	+10,000 gp
One-handed weapon, or one head of a double weapon	+15,000 gp
Two-handed weapon, or both heads of a double weapon	+20,000 gp

DUNGEON MASTER'S GUIDE 3.0 (3.0)

ADAMANTINE

Found only in meteorites and the rarest of veins in magical areas, this ultrahard metal adds to the quality of a weapon or suit of armor based on how much of the material is used.

Thus, adamantine plate offers a greater increase in protection (as well as a higher cost) than adamantine chainmail, and an adamantine battleaxe offers a greater increase in offensive capability than an adamantine dagger. Weapons fashioned from adamantine have a natural enhancement bonus to attack and damage.

Armor fashioned from adamantine has a natural enhancement bonus to AC.

These bonuses do not stack with any other enhancement bonuses.

Thus, an adamantine (+2) sword enchanted with a +5 enhancement bonus effectively has a +5 enhancement bonus.

In an area where magic does not function, it still retains its natural +2 enhancement bonus.

Weapons and armor fashioned from adamantine are treated as masterwork items with regard to creation times, but the masterwork quality does not affect the enhancement bonus of weapons or the armor check penalty of armor.

Adamantine has a hardness of 20 and 40 hit points per inch of thickness.

Item	Enhancement Bonus	Market Price Modifier
Light armor	+1	+2,000 gp
Medium armor	+2	+5,000 gp
Heavy armor	+3	+10,000 gp
Shield	+1	+2,000 gp
Weapon damage 1d4 or 1d6	+1	+3,000 gp
Weapon damage 1d8, 1d10, or 1d12	+2	+9,000 gp

DARKWOOD

This rare magic wood is as hard as normal wood but very light.

Any wooden or mostly wooden item (such as a bow, an arrow, or a spear) made from darkwood is considered a masterwork item and weighs only half as much as a normal wooden item of that type.

Items not normally made of wood or only partially of wood (such as a battleaxe or a mace) either cannot be made from darkwood or do not gain any special benefit from being made of darkwood.

Armor check penalties for darkwood shields are reduced by 2.

To determine the price of darkwood items, use the original weight but add +10 gp per pound to the price of a masterwork version of that item.

Darkwood has a hardness of 5 and 10 hit points per inch of thickness.

MITHRAL

Mithral is a very rare silvery, glistening metal that is lighter than iron but just as hard.

When worked like steel, it becomes a wonderful material from which to create armor and is occasionally used for other items as well.

Most mithral armors are one category lighter than normal for purposes of movement and other limitations (for example, whether a barbarian can use her fast movement ability while wearing the armor or not).

Heavy armors are treated as medium, and medium armors are treated as light, but light armors are still treated as light. Spell failure chances for armors and shields made from mithral are decreased by 10%, maximum Dexterity bonus is increased by 2, and armor check penalties are decreased by 3.

Nonarmor or nonshield items made from mithral weigh half as much as the same item made from other metals. Note that items not primarily of metal are not meaningfully affected.

(A longsword is affected, while a spear is not).

Weapons or armors fashioned from mithral are treated as masterwork items with regard to creation times, but the masterwork quality does not affect the enhancement bonus of weapons or the armor check penalty of armor.

Mithral has a hardness of 15 and 30 hit points per inch of thickness.

Item	Market Price Modifier
Light armor	+1,000 gp
Medium armor	+4,000 gp
Heavy armor	+9,000 gp
Shield	+1,000 gp
Other items	+500 gp/lb.

DRACONOMICON (3.5)

DRAGONHIDE

Armorsmiths can work with dragon hides to produce masterwork armor or shields for the normal cost (see Special Materials, page 283 of the Dungeon Master's Guide). The armor created has no special properties other than its masterwork quality.

(An armorsmith who also has the Dragoncrafter feat can imbue even greater powers into the armor created; see Dragoncraft Items, below).

Table 3–2: Dragonhide Armor shows the types and sizes of armor a dragon's body can supply.

The terms on the table are defined below.

Armor Type and Size: These four columns show which kinds of armor can be made from dragonhide, and the largest size a single set of armor can be if made from a dragon of a certain size.

For example, a Medium dragon's hide is large enough to make one suit of hide armor for a Small creature, or one suit of banded mail for a Tiny creature.

A single hide can yield more than one set of armor if the armor is sized for creatures smaller than the size given on the table.

For each size category of the finished armor smaller than the size given on the table, double the number of sets of armor can be made.

For instance, when making banded mail from the hide of a Colossal dragon, an armorsmith can make one suit of Huge armor (as the table indicates), two suits of Large armor, four suits of Medium armor, eight suits of Small armor, sixteen suits of Tiny armor, thirty-two suits of Diminutive armor, or sixty-four suits of Fine armor.

Shield?: A "Yes" entry in this column indicates that enough hide is left over after the armorsmithing process to create one heavy or light shield or a buckler sized for a character the same size as the dragon.

An armorsmith can choose to make shields instead of armor out of all or part of a dragon's hide.

Creating a tower shield uses up as much hide as a suit of hide armor.

Creating two heavy shields or two light shields or two bucklers uses up as much hide as a suit of hide armor.

Many characters favor dragonhide armor simply because it looks good.

TABLE 3–2: DRAGONHIDE ARMOR

Dragon Size	Hide	Armor Type and Size				Shield?
		Banded Mail	Half-Plate	Full Plate or Breastplate
Tiny	Diminutive	Fine	—	—	No
Small	Tiny	Diminutive	Fine	—	No
Medium	Small	Tiny	Diminutive	Fine	No
Large	Medium	Small	Tiny	Diminutive	Yes
Huge	Large	Medium	Small	Tiny	Yes
Gargantuan	Huge	Large	Medium	Small	Yes
Colossal	Gargantuan	Huge	Large	Medium	Yes

In combat, dragonhide armor isn't any better than normal armor; however, the armor itself remains immune to energy damage of the same type as the breath weapon of the dragon that supplied the hide. For example, red dragon armor is impervious to fire. The character wearing the armor does not benefit from this property.

DUNGEON MASTER'S GUIDE 1 3.5 (3.5)

ADAMANTINE

Found only in meteorites and the rarest of veins in magical areas, this ultrahard metal adds to the quality of a weapon or suit of armor.

Weapons fashioned from adamantine have a natural ability to bypass hardness when sundering weapons or attacking objects, ignoring hardness less than 20.

Armor made from adamantine grants its wearer damage reduction of 1/– if it's light armor, 2/– if it's medium armor, and 3/– if it's heavy armor.

Adamantine is so costly that weapons and armor made from it are always of masterwork quality; the masterwork cost is included in the prices given below.

Thus, adamantine weapons and ammunition have a +1 enhancement bonus on attack rolls, and the armor check penalty of adamantine armor is lessened by 1 compared to ordinary armor of its type.

Items without metal parts cannot be made from adamantine.

An arrow could be made of adamantine, but a quarterstaff could not.

Only weapons, armor, and shields normally made of metal can be fashioned from adamantine.

Weapons, armor and shields normally made of steel that are made of adamantine have one-third more hit points than normal; for instance, an adamantine greatsword has 13 hit points instead of the normal 10 for steel.

Adamantine has 40 hit points per inch of thickness and hardness 20.

Type of Adamantine Item	Item Cost Modifier
Ammunition	+60 gp
Light armor	+5,000 gp
Medium armor	+10,000 gp
Heavy armor	+15,000 gp
Weapon	+3,000 gp

DARKWOOD

This rare magic wood is as hard as normal wood but very light.

Any wooden or mostly wooden item (such as a bow, an arrow, or a spear) made from darkwood is considered a masterwork item and weighs only half as much as a normal wooden item of that type.

Items not normally made of wood or only partially of wood (such as a battleaxe or a mace) either cannot be made from darkwood or do not gain any special benefit from being made of darkwood.

The armor check penalty of a darkwood shield is lessened by 2 compared to an ordinary shield of its type.

To determine the price of a darkwood item, use the original weight but add 10 gp per pound to the price of a masterwork version of that item.

Darkwood has 10 hit points per inch of thickness and hardness 5.

DRAGONHIDE

Armorsmiths can work with the hides of dragons to produce armor or shields of masterwork quality.

One dragon produces enough hide for a single suit of masterwork hide armor for a creature one size category smaller than the dragon.

By selecting only choice scales and bits of hide, an armorsmith can produce one suit of masterwork banded mail for a creature two sizes smaller, one suit of masterwork half-plate for a creature three sizes smaller, or one masterwork breastplate or suit of full plate for a creature four sizes smaller.

In each case, enough hide is available to produce a small or large masterwork shield in addition to the armor, provided that the dragon is Large or larger.

Because dragonhide armor isn't made of metal, druids can wear it without penalty.

Dragonhide armor costs double what masterwork armor of that type ordinarily costs, but it takes no longer to make than ordinary armor of that type.

Dragonhide has 10 hit points per inch of thickness and hardness 10.

IRON, COLD

This iron mined deep underground, known for its effectiveness against fey creatures, is forged at a lower temperature to preserve its delicate properties.

Weapons made of cold iron cost twice as much to make as their normal counterparts.

Also, any magical enhancements cost an additional 2,000 gp. For example, a longsword made of cold iron would cost 10,330 gp, because the price doubles for the longsword itself (15 gp to 30 gp), the +2 enhancement bonus costs 8,000 gp, and enhancing cold iron costs an additional 2,000 gp. (The price includes 300 gp for the masterwork component). Items without metal parts cannot be made from cold iron. An arrow could be made of cold iron, but a quarterstaff could not. A double weapon that has only half of it made of cold iron increases its cost by 50%. A two-bladed sword with one end of cold iron and the other end steel would cost 150 gp. Cold iron has 30 hit points per inch of thickness and hardness 10.

MITHRAL

Mithral is a very rare silvery, glistening metal that is lighter than iron but just as hard.

When worked like steel, it becomes a wonderful material from which to create armor and is occasionally used for other items as well.

Most mithral armors are one category lighter than normal for purposes of movement and other limitations (for example, whether a barbarian can use her fast movement ability while wearing the armor or not).

Heavy armors are treated as medium, and medium armors are treated as light, but light armors are still treated as light. Spell failure chances for armors and shields made from mithral are decreased by 10%, maximum Dexterity bonus is increased by 2, and armor check penalties are lessened by 3 (to a minimum of 0).

An item made from mithral weighs half as much as the same item made from other metals.

In the case of weapons, this lighter weight does not change a weapon's size category or the ease with which it can be wielded (whether it is light, one-handed, or two-handed).

Items not primarily of metal are not meaningfully affected by being partially made of mithral.

(A longsword can be a mithral weapon, while a scythe cannot be).

Weapons or armors fashioned from mithral are always masterwork items as well; the masterwork cost is included in the prices given below.

Mithral has 30 hit points per inch of thickness and hardness 15.

Type of Mithral Item	Item Cost Modifier
Light armor	+1,000 gp
Medium armor	+4,000 gp
Heavy armor	+9,000 gp
Shield	+1,000 gp
Other items	+500 gp/lb.

SILVER, ALCHEMICAL

A complex process involving metallurgy and alchemy can bond silver to a weapon made of steel so that it bypasses the damage reduction of creatures such as lycanthropes.

On a successful attack with a silvered weapon, the wielder takes a -1 penalty on the damage roll (with the usual minimum of 1 point of damage).

The alchemical silvering process can't be applied to nonmetal items, and it doesn't work on rare metals such as adamantite, cold iron, and mithral.

Alchemical silver has 10 hit points per inch of thickness and hardness 8.

Type of Alchemical Silver Item	Item Cost Modifier
Ammunition	+2 gp
Light weapon	+20 gp
One-handed weapon, or one head of a double weapon	+90 gp
Two-handed weapon, or both heads of a double weapon	+180 gp

EXPANDED PSIONICS HANDBOOK (3.5)

CRYSTAL, DEEP

Deep crystal is crystal of above-average quality found at the hearts of large veins or deposits of mundane crystal (see below).

Deep crystal is renowned for its strength and its psionically resonant nature.

Mundane crystal is used for many items of psionic manufacture, such as dorjes, power stones, and psicrystals.

Deep crystal is a better grade.

While a weapon made of deep crystal is no different from a mundane crystal weapon for a nonpsionic character, a psionic wielder of a deep crystal weapon can focus psionic power through it, increasing the damage that weapon deals.

As a free action that does not provoke attacks of opportunity, the wielder can channel psionic power into a melee weapon or ranged weapon made of deep crystal.

For 2 power points, the deep crystal weapon deals an extra 2d6 points of damage.

The weapon will stay charged for 1 minute or until it scores its next hit.

Bows, crossbows, and slings bestow this power on their ammunition.

All missile weapons lose this effect if they miss.

However, they may be recovered and charged again.

Any weapon made of deep crystal costs 1,000 gp more than its noncrystal counterpart.

Any item could potentially be made out of deep crystal.

Because deep crystal armor is considered to be made out of metal, druids cannot wear it.

Deep crystal has 30 hit points per inch of thickness and a hardness of 10.

CRYSTAL, MUNDANE

Mundane crystal can be used in place of metal in weapons or armor, using a special forging process.

The fortified crystal possesses the properties of a similar masterwork steel weapon or armor, except for visual appearance.

Weapons and armor made of mundane crystal cost the same amount to make as their masterwork counterparts.

Any item could potentially be made with mundane crystal. Because mundane crystal armor is considered to be made out of metal, druids cannot wear it. Mundane crystal properly forged has 25 hit points per inch of thickness and a hardness of 8.

FIENDISH CODEX 2 (3.5)

BAATORIAN GREEN STEEL

Mined in deep shafts on Avernus, Baatorian green steel is light and harder than normal metal.

The near-continuous fighting or Hell's first layer makes large-scale mining operations difficult, but because this metal is well-suited for use in weaponcrafting, the effort is often worth the price.

Any slashing or piercing weapon created with Baatorian green steel deals an extra 1 point of damage.

This bonus stacks with enhancement bonuses provided by magic.

A weapon crafted from Baatorian green steel costs an additional 1,000 gp.

Baatorian green steel has hardness 12 and 30 hit points per inch of thickness.

FROSTBURN (3.5)

BLUE ICE

Found only in the depths of the most ancient glaciers, veins of blue ice are often sought out by glacier dwarves.

It appears as dark blue, opaque ice that sparkles in light as if it were coated with a tiny film of gemstones; this is merely a thin layer of frost that forms over its surface when exposed to air.

The material is cold and feels identical to regular ice upon casual observation, but blue ice only melts under intense and direct application of heat, similar to iron.

Those who mine this material from the ancient glaciers often do so simply by melting away the surrounding ice; this is a dangerous procedure, though, since it can rapidly destabilize the surrounding ice.

As a result, only the most gifted miners attempt to mine blue ice.

Blue ice can be forged, shaped, and utilized as if it were iron.

Blue ice is much lighter than iron, and when forged into a slashing weapon it keeps its edge much longer and is much sharper than an equally forged iron weapon.

Slashing weapons made of blue ice have a +1 enhancement bonus on damage.

Bludgeoning or piercing weapons can be made of blue ice, but they gain no bonuses to damage.

All weapons made of blue ice weigh half as much as normal.

Blue ice isn't just useful to make slashing weapons, though; it can be used to build anything that is normally built of iron.

Many dwarven fortresses in the frostfell make heavy use of blue ice for metal components such as nails, tools, door hinges, utensils, and pretty much anything else they can think of; blue ice goblets and mugs are especially popular for export to warmer climates since they keep their contents chilled.

A room lined with sheets of blue ice remains at a constant temperature of about freezing, making for an effective way to create refrigerated chambers for food storage.

Items made out of blue ice weigh half as much as normal.

Blue ice armor is much lighter than normal armor, although it can be uncomfortable to wear for creatures not immune or resistant to cold.

Only armor normally fashioned of metal can be made from blue ice.

Most blue ice armors are one category lighter than normal for purposes of movement and other limitations, so that medium armor counts as light armor, and heavy armor counts as medium armor.

Light armor remains light armor.

Spell failure chances for arcane spells remains unchanged, with the exception of spells with the cold descriptor, which can be cast while wearing blue ice armor with no chance of spell failure.

Maximum Dexterity bonus is increased by 1, and armor check penalties are lessened by 2.

If the creature wearing the armor is not resistant or immune to cold, he takes a -1 penalty on Reflex saving throws and initiative checks from the general numbness caused by the armor.

The Cold Endurance feat is enough to prevent this effect. Blue ice has 20 hit points per inch of thickness and hardness 10.

Type of Blue Ice Item	Item Cost Modifier
Light armor	+750 gp
Medium armor	+3,000 gp
Heavy armor	+7,000 gp
Shield	+750 gp
Slashing weapon	+500 gp
Other items	+400 gp/lb.

RIMEFIRE ICE

This form of ice is found only in icebergs inhabited by rimefire eidolons.

These icebergs are approximately 95% normal ice, but the remaining 5% consists of veins of pale blue ice that glows softly, providing illumination equal to that of a torch.

Rimefire ice is especially cold to the touch, and any creature that comes in contact with it takes 1 point of cold damage per round of contact.

Any amount of resistance or immunity to cold or the Mark of Hleid feat provides complete protection from this cold damage.

The most unusual aspect of rimefire ice is that it is approximately as flammable as wood; it does not melt when heat is applied to it.

Burning rimefire ice does not deal fire damage, though, even if it is ignited by an open flame.

Rather, burning rimefire ice deals cold damage on anything unfortunate enough to get too close.

Rimefire ice could make an interesting material to forge weapons out of; rimefire ice has about the same amount of resilience and strength as wood.

It cannot be used to make any appreciable armor, but it can be used to create any weapon that is normally made out of wood (or nearly completely of wood, as in the case of a spear or javelin).

Rimefire ice weapons glow with blue light, providing illumination to a 20-foot radius.

They also deal +1 point of cold damage on each successful hit.

Since rimefire is workable as wood, it can be used to build any object that can normally be made of wood.

Rimefire ice objects glow blue, provide illumination as a torch, and retain their ability to cause 1 point of cold damage per round of contact to anything touching it.

Rimefire ice brought into warmer climates does not melt into water; it melts into thick white clouds of water vapor with great rapidity.

Each minute a piece of rimefire ice is exposed to temperatures above 40° F, it takes 1d6 points of damage (this damage overcomes the ice's hardness and is not halved, as is most energy damage applied to objects).

For each additional 10 degrees hotter than this, the ice takes an additional 1d6 points of damage per round.

Rimefire ice has 5 hit points per inch of thickness and hardness 3.

Type of Rimefire Ice Item	Item Cost Modifier
Weapon	+750 gp
Other objects	+500 gp/lb.

STYGIAN ICE

This extraplanar ice comes from Stygia, the fifth layer of Hell.

Infused with the soulless evil of that realm, along with the magical waters of the river Styx, stygian ice is black and constantly crawls with a thin layer of pale blue mist. Stygian ice is much colder than normal ice, and it melts slowly in nonfreezing environs.

The coldness that this ice exudes is magical in nature, and freezes the mind much more rapidly than flesh.

Stygian ice deals 1d6 points of cold damage per round of contact.

Worse, if a creature takes damage from this supernatural cold, it must make a DC 12 Will saving throw or take 2 points of Wisdom damage as its memories are slowly frozen.

If a creature's Wisdom is reduced to 0, further contact causes Constitution damage.

A creature whose Constitution is reduced to 0 by Stygian ice rises as a wraith in 2d4 rounds.

Stygian ice is not much harder than normal ice, so it doesn't make effective armor.

Weapons made of Stygian ice are somewhat fragile, and each time they deal damage the wielder must make a DC 15 Reflex save to avoid dealing the same amount of damage on the weapon itself.

Stygian ice weapons deal 1d6 points of additional cold damage on a hit; if the creature hit takes cold damage, it must make a DC 12 Will saving throw or take 2 points of Wisdom damage (or Constitution damage, if Wisdom is at 0).

This damage applies to the wielder of the weapon as well; a character who wishes to wield a weapon made of Stygian ice is advised to seek out protection from cold damage. Stygian ice has 5 hit points per inch of thickness and hardness 3.

Magical fire damage is not halved when applied to stygian ice.

An object made of Stygian ice takes 1 point of damage per hour it exists in an environment above 40° F; this damage overcomes the ice's hardness.

As it melts, the ice gives off foul vapors that nauseate anyone within 5 feet who fails a DC 12 Fortitude saving throw.

Type of Stygian Ice Item	Item Cost Modifier
Weapon	+6,000 gp
Other objects	+2,000 gp/lb.

MAGIC OF FAERÛN (3.0)

ADAMANTINE

Adamantine is an incredibly hard metal described in the DUNGEON MASTER's Guide.

Some folk in Faerûn believe that metallic adamantine is made by combining adamantine ore and the correct proportions of silver and electrum, or even by combining steel and mithral, but dwarves and others in the know scoff at such tales.

Weapons fashioned from adamantine have a natural enhancement bonus on attack and damage, as listed below and explained on page 242 of the DUNGEON MASTER's Guide.

Adamantine weighs the same as steel, has hardness 20, and has 40 hit points per inch of thickness.

Item	Enhancement	Market Price
	Bonus	Modifier
Light armor	+1	+2,000 gp
Medium armor	+2	+5,000 gp
Heavy armor	+3	+10,000 gp
Shield	+1	+2,000 gp
Weapon damage up to 1d6	+1	+3,000 gp
Weapon damage 1d8 or higher	+1	+9,000 gp

ARANDUR

Arandur is a rare natural metal found in igneous rock, usually as streaks of blue-green ore amid vitreous glass. When refined and forged, the metal is silver-blue with a green reflective shine.

It is famous for holding a sharp edge even when abused and is the favored material for making keen weapons.

Armor made from arandur grants sonic resistance 2.

Items not primarily of metal are not meaningfully affected. (A suit of chainmail is affected, while a suit of studded leather is not).

Arandur weighs the same as steel, has hardness 12, and has 30 hit points per inch of thickness.

Market Price Modifier: Armor +2,000 gp.

COPPER

Quite familiar to poor folk across the world, copper is known by spellcasters to be a magical purifier, aiding in magic that negates sickness and poison.

While its brilliant color makes it popular for ornamental items, its relative softness makes it unsuitable for armor or weapons unless magically treated (which also activates its resistance).

However, it is often used in items that provide protection from cold.

Armor made from magically treated copper grants cold resistance 2.

Items not primarily of metal are not meaningfully affected. (A suit of chainmail is affected, while a suit of studded leather is not).

Magically treated copper weighs the same as steel, has hardness 10, and has 30 hit points per inch of thickness.

Market Price Modifier: Armor +2,000 gp.

DARKSTEEL

Darksteel is silvery in hue when polished or cut, but its exposed surfaces have a deep, gleaming purple luster.

The process for making this type of steel was once lost, but has been recently rediscovered thanks to some ancient dwarven texts.

The alloy is made from meteoric iron tempered with a variety of special oils.

Armor made from darksteel grants acid resistance 2.

Weapons forged of darksteel inflict +1 point of electricity damage each time they hit (this is cumulative with other abilities, such as shock or shocking burst).

Items not primarily of metal are not meaningfully affected. (A longsword or a suit of chainmail is affected, while a spear or a suit of studded leather is not).

Darksteel weighs the same as steel, has hardness 10, and has 30 hit points per inch of thickness.

Market Price Modifier: Armor +2,000 gp; weapon +1,500 gp.

DLARUN

This bone-white metal, sometimes known as icesteel, can take a high polish and is often mistaken for ivory when seen in finished items, but has a distinctive greenish sheen in candlelight.

Dlarun ore is found in the clay dug from riverbanks, and when first refined it is soft and easily carved.

A second heating makes it hard and durable.

This property makes the metal ideal for decorative work and figurines.

Armor made from dlarun grants fire resistance 2.

Weapons forged of dlarun inflict +1 point of frost damage each time they hit (this is cumulative with other abilities, such as frost or icy burst).

Items not primarily of metal are not meaningfully affected. (A longsword or a suit of chainmail is affected, while a spear or a suit of studded leather is not).

Dlarun can never be used in a magic item that uses fire effects, such as a flaming or flaming burst weapon.

Dlarun weighs the same as steel, has hardness 10, and has 30 hit points per inch of thickness.

Market Price Modifier: Armor +2,000 gp; weapon +1,500 gp.

DUSKWOOD

This species of tree grows widely all over Faerûn, and is named for the eerie appearance of its tightly growing groves.

Smooth, with small branches at the top of 60-foot trunks, duskwood trees have black bark and smoky gray wood that is as tough as iron.

Any steel or mostly steel weapon (such as a sword or a mace) made from duskwood is considered a masterwork item and weighs only half as much as a normal steel item of that type.

Weapons not normally made of steel or only partially of steel (such as a club or a battleaxe) either cannot be made from duskwood or do not gain any special benefit or penalty from being made of duskwood.

Duskwood doesn't work well as armor; it can't be shaped into rings like steel, and overlapping plates don't flex well. (Even the wood shape spell can't create the level of detail needed).

However, duskwood breastplates are possible, with the following statistics: armor bonus +5, maximum Dex bonus +4, armor check penalty -2, arcane spell failure 20%.

A duskwood breastplate is treated as light armor for the purposes of movement and other limitations.

Duskwood weighs half as much as steel, has hardness 10, and has 30 hit points per inch of thickness.

Market Price Modifier: Weapon +1,500 gp; breastplate +3,000 gp.

FEVER IRON

In some volcanic craters, pools of molten metal collect and are never allowed to fully cool.

Sometimes these pools of semisolid metal attract the raw energy of the Weave and are transformed into what the dwarves call fever iron.

Fever iron can be made fully solid through a magical process that includes application of intense cold, after which it can be worked like normal iron.

Armor made from fever iron grants fire resistance 2.

Weapons forged of fever iron inflict +1 point of fire damage each time they hit (this is cumulative with other abilities, such as flaming or flaming burst).

Items not primarily of metal are not meaningfully affected. (A longsword or a suit of chainmail is affected, while a spear or a suit of studded leather is not).

Fever iron can never be used in a magic item that uses cold effects, such as a frost or icy burst weapon.

Fever iron weighs the same as steel, has hardness 12, and has 30 hit points per inch of thickness.

Market Price Modifier: Armor +2,000 gp; weapon +1,500 gp.

GOLD

While most use gold as a currency, spellcasters know of gold's magical properties.

When magically refined and treated, gold can be made as hard as steel.

The following information refers to magically treated gold.

Armor made from treated gold grants acid and fire resistance 2.

Gold armors are one category heavier than normal for purposes of movement and other limitations (for example, whether a barbarian can use his fast movement ability while wearing the armor or not).

Light armors are treated as medium, and medium and heavy armors are treated as heavy.

Spell failure chances for armor and shields made from gold are increased by 10%, maximum Dexterity bonus is decreased by 2 (which may bring it below 0), and armor check penalties are increased by 3.

Gold weapons are considered heavy weapons (see the sidebar on Heavy Weapons).

Magically treated gold weighs twice as much as steel, has hardness 10, and has 30 hit points per inch of thickness.

Item	Market Price Modifier
Armor	+5,000 gp
Weapon damage up to 1d3	+1,500 gp
Weapon damage 1d4 or 1d6	+2,500 gp
Weapon damage 1d8 or higher	+7,000 gp

Heavy weapons

Heavy weapons, such as those made from gold or platinum, are unwieldy but inflict additional damage. Without the proper Exotic Weapon Proficiency feat (for instance, heavy longsword), you suffer a -4 penalty on attack rolls with a heavy weapon. Only weapons made entirely or largely of metal (such as swords or axes) are affected; other weapons (such as spears) are not.

A character can wield a heavy weapon one size category smaller than his own in two hands to avoid the attack penalty. For instance, a human swinging a light mace made of gold with both hands, or an ogre wielding a platinum longsword with two hands, does not suffer the attack penalty.

You can never use the Weapon Finesse feat with a weapon made of a heavy metal.

Weapons made of a heavy metal inflict increased damage, as shown in the following table:

Old Damage (Each Die)	New Damage
1	1d2
1d2	1d3
1d3	1d4
1d4	1d6
1d6	1d8
1d8 or 1d10	2d6
1d12	2d8

HIZAGKUUR

This rare pale silvery gray metal is named for its discoverer, a dwarf from long ago.

It is found only in scattered, but very rich, deposits deep in the Underdark as a soft, greenish-gray clay-like ore or a flaky mud.

One misstep in its refining, and it remains useless mud.

Armor made from hizagkuur grants cold resistance 2.

Weapons forged of hizagkuur inflict +1 point of electricity damage and +1 point of fire damage each time they hit (this is cumulative with other abilities).

Items not primarily of metal are not meaningfully affected. (A longsword or a suit of chainmail is affected, while a spear or a suit of studded leather is not).

Hizagkuur can never be used in a magic item that uses cold effects, such as a frost or icy burst weapon.

Hizagkuur weighs the same as steel, has hardness 10, and has 30 hit points per inch of thickness.

Market Price Modifier: Armor +2,000 gp; weapon +1,500 gp.

LIVING METAL

Powerful sources of life energy, such as druid circles or sites holy to Chauntea, sometimes leach energy into the soil, which changes the properties of the natural deposits of iron buried nearby.

This living metal usually has a light gray-green color and has properties of natural repair and reshaping.

It is favored in the construction of rings of regeneration.

Over time, armor made of living metal naturally shapes itself to fit its wearer.

After one tenday of regular wearing, increase the maximum Dexterity bonus by 1, reduce the armor check penalty by 1, and reduce the arcane spell failure chance by 5% for living metal armor.

Armor not primarily of metal is not meaningfully affected. (A suit of chainmail is affected, while a suit of studded leather is not).

In addition, an item made of living metal naturally repairs damage to itself, healing 1 hit point per minute.

It cannot repair itself if brought to 0 hit points or destroyed (such as through disintegration).

Living metal weighs the same as steel, has hardness 12, and has 30 hit points per inch of thickness.

Item	Market Price Modifier
Light armor	+700 gp
Medium armor	+2,000 gp
Heavy armor	+4,500 gp
Other items	+100 gp/lb.

MITHRAL

Mithral is light and hard metal described in the DUNGEON MASTER's Guide.

Some foolish bards believe that mithral can be combined with steel to form adamantine, but such tales only cause uproarious laughter in dwarven communities.

Mithral weighs half as much as steel, has hardness 15, and has 30 hit points per inch of thickness.

Item	Market Price Modifier
Light armor	+1,000 gp
Medium armor	+4,000 gp
Heavy armor	+9,000 gp
Shield	+1,000 gp
Other Items	+500 gp/lb.

PLATINUM

This silvery-white metal superficially resembles aluminum but is extremely heavy.

Because it is so malleable, it must be magically altered to the rigidity of steel so it can maintain its shape even when used in combat.

This process also catalyzes its magical properties.

The following information refers to magically treated platinum.

Armor made from treated platinum grants cold and sonic resistance 2.

Platinum armors are one category heavier than normal for purposes of movement and other limitations (for example, whether a barbarian can use his fast movement ability while wearing the armor or not).

Light armors are treated as medium, and medium and heavy armors are treated as heavy.

Spell failure chances for armor and shields made from platinum are increased by 10%, the maximum Dexterity bonus is decreased by 2 (which may bring it below 0), and armor check penalties are increased by 3.

Armor not primarily of metal is not meaningfully affected. (A suit of chainmail is affected, while a suit of studded leather is not).

Platinum weapons are considered heavy weapons (see the Heavy Weapons sidebar).

Magically treated platinum weighs twice as much as steel, has hardness 10, and has 30 hit points per inch of thickness.

Item	Market Price Modifier
Armor	+5,000 gp
Weapon damage up to 1d3	+1,500 gp
Weapon damage 1d4 or 1d6	+2,500 gp
Weapon damage 1d8 or higher	+7,000 gp

SILVER

Long valued for its purity and beauty, silver is also used to make weapons and armor.

It is commonly used in items involving light and moon magic, as well as bane weapons dedicated to battling shapechangers.

With the proper magical treatments, silver gains the rigidity of steel.

The following information refers to magically treated silver.

Armor made from silver grants electricity resistance 2.

Weapons forged of treated silver can damage creatures whose damage reduction type is silver, and they deal +1 damage to such creatures.

Items whose striking point or surface is not primarily metal are not meaningfully affected.

(A longsword or a spear is affected, while a club is not).

Magically treated silver weighs as much as steel, has hardness 10, and has 30 hit points per inch of thickness.
Market Price Modifier: Armor +2,000 gp; weapon +1,000 gp.

ZALANTAR (DARKWOOD)

This wood from the zalantar subtropical tree is black, hence its Northern name: "blackwood".

Zalantar has all the properties of darkwood (see page 243 of the DUNGEON MASTER's Guide), and any darkwood item manufactured on Faerûn is actually made of zalantar.

Zalantar has a hardness of 5 and 10 hit points per inch of thickness.

Market Price Modifier: As masterwork +10 gp/lb.

ORIENTAL ADVENTURES (3.0)

JADE

Oni cannot regenerate damage dealt by a jade weapon, and their damage reduction does not apply to even nonmagical jade weapons.

Jade is also effective at staving off the effects of the Shadowlands Taint, at harming ghosts, and at binding other spirits.

Jade weapons have the properties of a ghost touch weapon, except that incorporeal creatures cannot use jade weapons themselves.

A character who possesses a jade weapon receives a +4 sacred bonus on Fortitude saving throws made to resist the Shadowlands Taint.

(Even unworked jade is effective in staving off the Taint; see Chapter 12: The Shadowlands for details).

OBSIDIAN

Obsidian is almost as effective as jade in certain circumstances: Oni cannot regenerate damage dealt by an obsidian weapon, and their damage reduction does not apply to even nonmagical obsidian weapons.

It is not an effective substitute for jade's other uses, however, and it carries the danger of a deadly curse.

A randomly generated obsidian weapon has a 30% chance of carrying the curse of the now-dead moon deity, Onnotangu.

The first time a cursed obsidian weapon deals damage to a creature with the Shadowlands Taint, the weapon's wielder must make a Will save (DC 10).

This saving throw must be repeated once every full moon, and the DC of each successive saving throw increases by 5. When the character fails the save, he falls into a blind fury, seeking to commit barbaric atrocities against his closest friends and kin.

Believing that he has been betrayed, the character attacks the nearest ally and continues to fight until unconscious or dead or until no allies remain in his sight.

If the character fails five saving throws in a row, the madness becomes permanent.

Discarding the obsidian weapon reverses the curse.

Each full moon thereafter, the Will save's DC decreases by 5 until the character is free of the weapon's ill effects.

TABLE 8–29: JADE AND OBSIDIAN WEAPONS

Weapon Damage	Jade Price Modifier*	Obsidian Price Modifier*
1d6 or lower	+6,500 gp	+1,000 gp
1d8 or higher	+7,000 gp	+2,000 gp

*Add these values to the price for a masterwork weapon of the appropriate type to determine the total cost of the weapon.

PLANAR HANDBOOK (3.5)

ABYSSAL BLOODIRON

In the Abyss, cataclysmic battles have raged for eons, laying down a sediment of iron, blood, and spent magic.

Abyssal bloodiron is mined from thin deposits of mixed blood and ferrous mineral, compacted over the years, then forged at a low temperature to preserve its innate powers. Weapons forged of the metal usually appear dark except for their cutting edges, which are as red as freshly spilled blood.

A weapon forged of Abyssal bloodiron is treated as a cold iron weapon (see page 284 of the Dungeon Master's Guide), except that its wielder gains a +4 bonus when rolling to confirm a critical hit.

Abyssal bloodiron has the same weight as iron or steel. A weapon made of Abyssal bloodiron costs an additional 10,000 gp, and any magical enhancements cost an additional 2,000 gp, just as with cold iron.

(The price includes 300 gp for the masterwork component).

Abyssal bloodiron has hardness 10 and 30 hit points per inch of thickness.

ASTRAL DRIFTMETAL

This extraordinarily rare mineral is mined only on Tu'narath and other islands of matter floating in the Astral Plane.

It is very similar to iron but has a single remarkable feature. Armor crafted from astral driftmetal is fully effective against incorporeal attacks, as if it were made of force. The armor's full armor bonus to Armor Class (including any enhancement bonus) applies to the wearer's touch Armor Class against incorporeal attacks.

Astral driftmetal is not malleable enough to be worked into chainmail or scale mail; only a breastplate, shield, or any form of heavy armor can be made from it.

A suit of driftmetal armor weighs the same as a suit of armor made of steel.

Other statistics of the armor (maximum Dexterity bonus, armor check penalty, and arcane spell failure chance) are unchanged.

Astral driftmetal has hardness 12 and 30 hit points per inch of thickness.

Its market price modifier is +12,000 gp.

PSIONICS HANDBOOK (3.0)

FERROPLASM

Mined from secret locations in the Astral Plane, this malleable metal holds its shape only in the hands of a psionic being.

When an item forged with ferroplasm is unattended or held by a nonpsionic creature, it melts and temporarily loses all special powers.

But when wielded by, psionic creature, such an item immediately springs bad into its true shape and regains all abilities.

In its proper form, a ferroplasm item glows with a violet light (illuminating a 10-foot-radius), unless the item's owner mentally quenches it.

In an area where psionic powers do not function, it collapses as if in the hands of a nonpsionic creature.

Ferroplasm adds to the quality of a weapon or suit of armor based on how much of the material is used.

Thus, ferroplasm full plate offers greater protection (as well as a greater cost) than ferroplasm chainmail, and a ferroplasm greatsword offers greater offensive capability than a ferroplasm quarterstaff.

Weapons fashioned from ferroplasm have a natural enhancement bonus to attack and damage.

Armor fashioned from ferroplasm has a natural enhancement bonus to AC.

These bonuses do not stack with other enhancement bonuses.

Weapons or armor fashioned from ferroplasm are treated as masterwork items with regard to creation times, but the masterwork quality does not affect the enhancement bonus of weapons or the armor check penalty of armor.

Ferroplasm has hardness 20 and 40 hit points per inch of thickness when in its true form, and a hardness of 5 and 10 hit points per inch of thickness when soft.

Item	Enhancement Bonus	Market Price Modifier
Light armor	+1	+1,500 gp
Medium armor	+2	4,000 gp
Heavy armor	+3	+8,000 gp
Shield	+1	+1,500 gp
Weapon damage 1d4 or 1d6	+1	+2,500 gp
Weapon damage 1d8, 1d10, or 1d12	+2	+7,500 gp

RACES OF FAERÛN (3.0)

CAMOUFLAGE DYE

Wood elves use natural compounds derived from the plants of their forest home to make dyes that perfectly match the surrounding foliage.

Camouflage dye can be applied to padded, leather, hide, or studded leather armor, granting the wearer a +4 circumstance bonus on Hide checks in that specific forest. Applying camouflage dye takes three days and costs 300 gp.

GLASSTEEL

Made by the avariels and sun elves in an alchemical process requiring extensive knowledge of both metallurgy and glassblowing, glassteel combines strength beyond iron with the transparency of glass.

Mostly used as a building material in fantastic castles, glassteel can also be fashioned into weapons and armor.

Glassteel is stronger and lighter than iron—but it's fantastically expensive.

Just as does adamantine, glassteel grants a nonmagical enhancement bonus to weapons and armor made with it. And like mithral, glassteel armor counts as one category lighter (although light armor is still light), spell failure chance is decreased by 10%, maximum Dexterity bonus is increased by 2, and armor check penalties are decreased by 3.

Nonweapon and nonarmor items made of glassteel weigh half what they otherwise would.

Glassteel weapons and armor are hard to spot at a distance (–4 penalty on Spot checks), but just because armor is transparent doesn't mean that the person underneath the armor is likewise concealed.

In combat, glassteel's transparency is mostly a decorative curiosity rather than a tactical advantage.

Glassteel has a hardness of 20 and 40 hit points per inch of thickness.

Weapons and armor fashioned from glassteel are treated as masterwork items with regard to creation times, but the masterwork quality does not affect the enhancement bonus of weapons nor the armor check penalty of armor.

Glassteel Item	Enhancement Bonus	Market Price Modifier
Light armor	+1	+9,000 gp
Medium armor	+2	+16,000 gp
Heavy armor	+3	+25,000 gp
Shield	+1	+4,000 gp
Weapon (1d4 or 1d6 damage)	+1	+1,500 gp/lb.
Weapon (1d8, 1d10, or 1d12 damage)	+2	+2,500 gp/lb.
Other items	—	+1,000 gp/lb.

RACES OF THE DRAGON (3.5)

CHITIN

Kobold armorsmiths have recently begun mass-producing suits of armor made from the organic hides of giant beetles (MM 204–205).

The smiths claim that this advance results from their own hard work and study, though it is widely believed that they were taught the basic secrets of chitin armorworking by the troglodytes.

Though less durable than dragonhide, chitin armor (also known as beetleback armor) has other advantages.

Chitin is less restricting than metal, even though it weighs the same amount.

The maximum Dexterity bonus of an armor or shield made of chitin is 1 greater than that of the same type of armor made from metal.

Breastplates, half-plate armor, full plate armor, and shields can be made from chitin.

(Typically, the only kind of shield crafted from chitin is a tower shield, since most shields don't have a maximum Dexterity bonus).

A single giant beetle provides enough material to create a single breastplate or tower shield sized for a character of the same size category as the beetle (or two such items for a character two or more sizes smaller than the beetle).

For example, a Large giant stag beetle has enough chitin to make either a breastplate or a tower shield sized for a Large character, or two such items for Medium or smaller characters.

A suit of half-plate or full plate armor takes twice as much chitin, while a light shield or heavy shield takes half as much.

(A chitin buckler can be made from the cast-off bits of any giant beetle).

The chitin from multiple giant beetles can be combined; a Small beetle counts as half of a Medium beetle, a Medium beetle as half of a Large beetle, and so forth.

Because chitin armor isn't made from metal, druids can wear it without penalty.

Armor and shields fashioned from chitin are always masterwork items; the masterwork cost is included in the prices given below.

Chitin armor or shields cost double what masterwork armor of that type ordinarily costs, but take no longer to make than ordinary armor of that type.

Chitin armor has 10 hit points per inch of thickness and hardness 5.

COLORED METAL

Kobolds and spellscales working together have perfected the process of smelting certain minerals into metal ore to create colored or tinted ingots.

Any shade of red, orange, yellow, green, blue, indigo, violet, black, or white can be created to suit any preference with marginal effort.

Though the effect is only superficial, colored metal items still typically cost 10% to 25% more due to the extra care required in creating the items.

Spellscales are the primary purchasers of armor and weapons made from colored metal.

Colored metal has no effect on a weapon or armor's game statistics.

RACES OF THE WILD (3.5)

LEAFWEAVE

As the name suggests, leafweave armor is made from forest leaves, which are then treated with a special alchemical process that makes them as tough and flexible as leather, with considerably less weight and encumbrance.

The arcane spell failure chance for leafweave armor is reduced by 5% compared to ordinary armor of the same sort, due to its increased flexibility.

The armor's maximum Dexterity bonus is increased by +1, and its armor check penalty (if any) is lessened by 2. Leafweave versions of padded, leather, studded leather, and hide armor exist; leafweave studded leather typically incorporates darkwood studs to make it druid-friendly. Creating leafweave armor requires a single successful DC 25 Craft (alchemy) check in addition to the normal Craft (armorsmithing) checks.

Leafweave armor costs 740 gp more than ordinary armor of the same sort.

It has hardness 2 and 5 hit points per inch of thickness.

THISTLEDOWN

This lightweight fabric gets its name from its soft feel and dove-gray color.

Elves have made padded armor from this material for centuries, and it is well liked by arcane spellcasters.

Thistledown padded armor weighs only half as much as normal padded armor.

It grants its wearer a +2 circumstance bonus on Hide checks in areas of darkness or shadowy illumination, as it blends in with the dim background.

It is treated as masterwork armor (the masterwork cost is included in the armor's given cost).

Thistledown has 2 hit points per inch of thickness and hardness 0.

WILDWOOD

The rare saelas tree (saelas is an Elven word that translates as "wildwood" in Common) produces wood with a peculiar set of qualities.

Not only is it extraordinarily flexible for days after harvesting, but items crafted of wildwood regrow after being damaged.

At the hands of an armorsmith also skilled in woodworking, wildwood can be crafted into lightweight armor nearly as strong as steel.

It is prized by druids, who can wear it without sacrificing their class abilities.

Wildwood armor provides 1 less point of armor bonus than ordinary armor of the same sort.

However, the armor's maximum Dex bonus increases by 1, its armor check penalty is reduced by 1 (minimum 0), and its arcane spell failure chance is reduced by 5%.

In addition, the wearer of a suit of wildwood armor can ignore its armor check penalty on Hide checks made in areas of undergrowth or heavy undergrowth.

Armor made from wildwood weighs three-quarters as much as the same item made from metal.

Armor not primarily made of metal is not meaningfully affected by being partially made from wildwood.

As long as it is exposed to sunlight for at least 1 hour per day, a suit of wildwood armor naturally "heals" 1 point of damage every 24 hours.

If it is left to soak in at least one gallon of water while exposed to sunlight for 8 hours, it heals 5 points of damage.

Armor made from wildwood is always of masterwork quality (the masterwork cost is included in the armor's given cost).

Wildwood armor costs double what ordinary masterwork armor of the same sort costs, but it takes no longer to make than masterwork armor of that sort.

For each Craft (armorsmithing) check required to create a suit of wildwood armor, a Craft (woodworking) check against the same DC is also required (though the same character need not make both checks).

Wildwood has 10 hit points per inch of thickness and hardness 6.

SANDSTORM (3.5)

KHEFERU

Quarried from rare meteorite craters, kheferu ore is an extremely hard, red substance.

When forged as an alloy with iron, carbon, and other trace metals, the resultant material has a consistency and ductility like that of a standard steel alloy.

This final product, simply called kheferu, is distinctive in its glossy sheen and crimson hue.

Many kinds of items can be crafted from kheferu, but weapons are the best choice because of the alloy's particular qualities.

A weapon forged from kheferu is bright red.

Salt crystals grow on the sides of the weapon if it is left untended for more than a few months, but these are easily wiped away.

A kheferu weapon bypasses the damage reduction of any creature of the earth subtype, regardless of the type of damage reduction the creature possesses.

Weapons made of kheferu cost twice as much to make as their normal counterparts.

Also, any magical enhancements placed on the weapon cost an additional 2,000 gp.

Items without metal parts cannot be made from kheferu.

An arrow could be made of kheferu, but a quarterstaff could not.

A double weapon that is only half made of kheferu increases its cost by 50%.

Kheferu has hardness 10 and 30 hit points per inch of thickness.

STORMWRACK (3.5)

PEARLSTEEL

A strange metal crafted by secretive avanti metallurgists working near volcanic vents in the ocean floor, pearlsteel is gleaming, shining steel covered with a blue-white sheen like mother of pearl.

Created from fine steel and rare silvery pearls found only in the ocean depths where the pressures alone would kill a land walker, pearlsteel is highly prized by all undersea races and constitutes a major trade item for the avanti.

Pearlsteel is very light, especially in water.

Pearlsteel items weigh 25% less than their normal equivalents.

Item	Market Price Modifier
Light armor	+500 gp
Medium armor	+1,000 gp
Heavy armor	+1,500 gp
Shield	+500 gp
Weapon	+1,500 gp

Type of Riverine Item	Item Cost Modifier
Light armor	+9,000 gp
Medium armor	+16,000 gp
Heavy armor	+25,000 gp
Shield	+4,000 gp
Other items	+2,000 gp/lb.

Pearlsteel also slices more smoothly through the resistance that water presents.

When a slashing weapon made of pearlsteel is used in the water, its damage is reduced by  $-1$  rather than the normal  $-2$  for fighting in the water with a slashing weapon, and its damage is reduced by  $-2$  instead of half.

Likewise, damage dealt underwater by a bludgeoning weapon made of pearlsteel is reduced by  $-2$  rather than reduced by half.

The market price modifier for such a weapon is  $+1,500$  gp.

RIVERINE

This unusual material is made from water under extremely high pressure, usually obtained from the Elemental Plane of Water but sometimes from the blackwater trenches far below the ocean's surface.

The water swirls and flows continuously, sandwiched between fields of magical force.

Half of the Armor Class bonus from armor and shields made from riverine is a deflection bonus (round down).

For example, a suit of riverine chainmail would provide a  $+2$  armor bonus and a  $+3$  deflection bonus to AC.

This substance is considered masterwork and can be enhanced magically as any other armor.

Riverine is sometimes also used to create walls and even containers.

Being enclosed in magical force, it is immune to all damage and is unaffected by most spells.

However, disintegrate immediately destroys an item made of riverine, as does a rod of cancellation, a sphere of annihilation, or a Mordenkainen's disjunction spell, causing the water to spill out in a sudden rush.

Armor and shields made of riverine do not form a complete enclosure, so breath weapons and spells do still affect the wearer.

However, walls of riverine block ethereal travel, breath weapons, and spell effects, just as a wall of force does.

TOME OF MAGIC (3.5)

SHADOW SILK

This material is woven from shadow itself.

Description: Shadow silk is a very faint material, translucent and flimsy.

It has the look and feel of deep black silk.

Activation: Shadow silk armor continually grants its wearer its benefits.

In brighter light, it feels heavier and in areas of shadowy illumination or darkness, it feels lightweight and fluid.

Effect: The wearer of shadow silk armor moves more quietly and blends into shadow more effectively.

It grants its wearer a  $+2$  bonus on Hide and Move Silently checks.

Only armor that is made from cloth or leather can be crafted using shadow silk.

Padded, leather, or hide armor can be made from the material. These shadow silk armors are treated as light armor.

The maximum Dexterity bonus is increased by 2.

and armor check penalties are lessened by 2 (to a minimum of 0).

The arcane spell failure chance in areas of shadowy illumination or darkness is reduced by 15% (minimum 0%).

An item made from shadow silk weighs approximately one-quarter as much as the same item made from other materials.

Armor fashioned from shadow silk is always masterwork; the masterwork cost is included in the prices given below.

Shadow silk armor has 10 hit points and hardness 1.

The material knits itself back together in areas of shadowy illumination or darkness, restoring 1 hit point per round unless it is destroyed (hit points 0 or lower).

Shadow Silk Armor	Armor Cost	Maximum Bonus	Armor Dex Bonus	Arcane Spell Check Penalty	Speed Failure Chance	(30 ft.)	(20 ft.)	Weight
Padded	1,500 gp	+1	+10	0	5% (light)/0% (shadow)	30 ft.	20 ft.	2.5 lb.
Leather	1,750 gp	+2	+8	0	10% (light)/0% (shadow)	30 ft.	20 ft.	4 lb.
Hide	2,500 gp	+3	+6	-1	20% (light)/5% (shadow)	30 ft.	20 ft.	5.5 lb.

UNAPPROACHABLE EAST (3.5)

BLUEWOOD

Volodni craftsfolk often fashion armor and weapons from the wood of blueleaf trees grown with care, sculpted with wood shape, and then magically treated to be as hard as steel. A bluewood weapon has the same hardness and characteristics as a normal metal armor or weapon of that sort but weighs half as much.

Bluewood armor and weapons created in this fashion are considered masterwork items and gain the appropriate bonuses.

Bluewood items have the following additional costs:

Light armor	+300 gp
Medium armor	+600 gp
Heavy armor	+1,200 gp
Shield	+300 gp
Weapon (1d4 or 1d6)	+400 gp
Weapon (any other)	+800 gp

The process of treating bluewood to harden it requires ten days of work by someone knowledgeable in the process. This is either a volodni with 10 ranks in Craft (alchemy or woodworking), or a nonvolodni with the same skills and 2 ranks in Knowledge (local—volodni).

SPECIFIC ARMORS AND SHIELDS

ARMS AND EQUIPMENT GUIDE (3.0)

ARMOR OF WEAPON CREATION

This +1 half-plate has built-in armor spikes and spiked gauntlets (see Armor Descriptions in Chapter 7 of the Player's Handbook).

As a standard action, the armor can produce any of the following simple melee weapons: dagger, punching dagger, light mace, sickle, halfspear, heavy mace, or morningstar. The weapon forms out of the armor itself, in whichever hand the wearer chooses.

The wearer can also choose to create a weapon in each hand, although it requires another action to do so.

The weapon type can be changed each round.

Weapons created by the suit cannot be removed, and the wearer cannot be disarmed of any such weapon.

Created weapons last indefinitely or until the wearer chooses to get rid of them.

If a weapon is destroyed, the armor cannot create a new weapon for 24 hours.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, major creation; Market Price: 42,305 gp; Cost to Create: 21,555 gp + 1,660 XP.

BALE EYE

This suit of +2 half-plate is completely covered with engravings of sinister-looking eyes.

Three times per day, the owner can cast emotion (fear only) as an 11th-level sorcerer.

The wearer also gains a +4 morale bonus on Will saves against fear effects.

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, emotion, remove fear; Market Price: 38,360 gp; Cost to Create: 19,805 gp + 1,504 XP.

DISARMOR

This +2 scale mail has an irregular overlapping pattern. Seemingly indiscriminate, the scales overlap down, up, and sideways.

Three times per day, the wearer may direct the armor to execute a disarm attempt when an opponent scores a hit with a melee weapon.

The scales seem to come alive and attempt to wrench the opponent's weapon out of his or her hands as if the wearer had the Improved Disarm feat and a readied attempt to disarm.

When disarming in this fashion, the armor uses the wearer's melee attack bonus with an additional +5 bonus.

Caster Level: 6th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor; Market Price: 10,875 gp; Cost to Create: 5,538 gp + 427 XP.

GAZEBANE

Created for the ranger Arilus, this armor helped him eliminate several nests of medusas that infiltrated his swampy home.

This +1 chain shirt is extremely polished, actually allowing someone to see their reflection in its chain links.

Three times per day, the wearer can ignore the effects of any gaze attacks.

Caster Level: 13th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, limited wish; Market Price: 74,050 gp; Cost to Create: 37,150 gp + 2,952 XP.

PLANTBANE

This +1 leather armor is the color of dried leaves and dead wood.

It is excellent for clearing pathways through thickly forested terrain, although it does leave an obvious trail of dead and dying plants.

Druids, elves, and other nature lovers take a dim view of uncontrolled use of this armor.

It continually produces a diminish plants effect, and once per day the wearer can cast antiplant shell (as the spells from a 7th-level caster).

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, antiplant shell, diminish plants; Market Price: 41,240 gp; Cost to Create: 20,700 gp + 1,643 XP.

SKIN PAINT

Skin paint armor was brought to civilization from remote barbarian tribes.

This magic paint is mixed from rare dyes and herbs found only in remote parts of the world and comes in small pots. One pot contains three applications; one application lasts for 24 hours.

The paint imbues its wearer with a +5 armor bonus to AC. This is considered light armor that has no maximum Dexterity bonus and no armor check penalty.

Its weight is negligible.

It takes 4 minutes to apply skin paint armor (2 minutes if another character does nothing but assist you), 1 minute to do so hastily, and 1 minute to remove (30 seconds if another character does nothing but assist you).

Caster Level: 15th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Alchemy 5 ranks; Market Price: 5,000 gp; Cost to Create: 2,500 gp + 200 XP.

SPIDER SHIELD

A painting of a stylized red spider pierced by a spike adorns this +2 small steel shield.

The spike continually oozes spider poison (injury; DC 11, 1d3 Str/1d3 Str).

Once per day, the shield can be commanded to turn into a Small monstrous spider that fights on behalf of its owner.

The spider is a normal creature in all respects.

If the spider is killed, it immediately reverts into shield form and cannot be activated again for 24 hours.

If the spider is killed using disintegrate, it is completely destroyed and does not turn back into a shield.
Caster Level: 15th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, poison, polymorph any object; Market Price: 40,809 gp; Cost to Create: 20,489 gp + 1,626 XP.

STONECUNNING

This dwarf-sized +1 full plate is beautifully engraved with images of dwarven stonemasons practicing their craft. Humans who wear the armor gain the stonemasonry ability.

Dwarves who wear the armor gain a +4 circumstance bonus on any stonemasonry checks, which stacks with their racial bonus.

In addition, the dwarf can use stone shape and stone tell once per day.

Caster Level: 11th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, stone shape, stone tell; Market Price: 32,130 gp; Cost to Create: 16,890 gp + 1,220 XP.

SWARM SHIELD

This shield appears to be a single bracer when first worn. When the command word is spoken, thousands of flying insects swarm toward the bracer, converging in a circular shape the size of a small shield.

The insects move with the wearer's arm and act as a +1 small shield.

Once per day, when the wearer speaks a second command word, the insects stream away from the wearer's arm toward a target as if the wearer had cast summon swarm (with the flying beetles swarm type).

The swarm lasts as long as the wearer concentrates, but she has no shield while the swarm is active.

Caster Level: 3rd; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, summon swarm; Market Price: 6,160 gp; Cost to Create: 3,155 gp + 241 XP.

TESSELLATED ARMOR

This curiosity usually appears to be an ornate, lacquered box containing hundreds of identical metallic shapes. Numerous variations exist for the shapes, including lizards, beetles, mounted riders, and Peloran suns.

When the command word is spoken, the shapes stream from the box and flow over the wearer's body, interlocking perfectly to create a single, smooth suit of +2 full plate.

This armor is lighter and more flexible than normal full plate and is considered medium armor rather than heavy. Its armor check penalty is -4, and it has an arcane spell failure chance of 25%.

Once per day on command, the shapes wriggle and move about the wearer's body, creating a hypnotic pattern effect.
Caster Level: 8th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, hypnotic pattern; Market Price: 11,560 gp; Cost to Create: 6,605 gp + 397 XP.

USEFUL BUCKLER

This +1 buckler has the ability to transform into a variety of different tools on command.

To determine which tools the buckler has, roll five times on the following table, ignoring duplicate results:

d10	Tool
1	Saw, wood
2	Wrench, adjustable
3	Grappling hook
4	Hacksaw
5	Grappling hook
6	Bolt cutters
7	Spike/chisel
8	Bow drill
9	Shovel, small
10	Tongs, large

Small symbols of the tools the buckler can turn into are engraved on the inside face.

The wearer says a command word to transform the shield into a tool or to switch between tools, although he must be touching the shield/tool to activate the ability.

The tools are also made of metal and have the same break point as the shield (hardness 10, 5 hp).

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, fabricate; Market Price: 10,265 gp; Cost to Create: 5,215 gp + 404 XP.

VAMPIRE HUNTER

This +3 banded mail was created to assist brave adventurers in the struggle against vampires.

It is usually found in the armories of churches dedicated to vanquishing these bloodsuckers.

Protective symbols from benevolent gods cover vampire hunter armor, which has noticeably thick neck protection. On command, the armor produces daylight and protection from evil.

Once per day, it can produce sunburst and holy smite as the spells from a 15th-level cleric.

Vampire hunter armor grants a +4 morale bonus on Will saves against domination attempts.

Energy drain attacks by vampires (and only vampires) are reduced from two negative levels to one negative level.

Vampire hunter armor also has armbands made of wood that can "grow" wooden stakes that appear against the upper arm.

These can be removed and used as +1 weapons (1d3 damage, threat range 19–20, piercing).

It takes a full-round action to regrow a stake once it has been removed from an armband.

The armor bestows one negative level on any nongood creature wearing it.

This negative level persists as long as the armor is worn and disappears when the armor is removed.

The negative level never results in actual level loss, but it cannot be overcome in any way (including restoration spells) while the armor is worn.

Caster Level: 15th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, daylight, holy smite, minor creation, protection from evil, sunburst; Market Price: 100,000 gp; Cost to Create: 50,200 gp + 3,984 XP.

VARIABLE SHIELD

A variable shield, normally a +1 small steel shield, can change its size on mental command.

As a standard action, the shield can shrink or grow from a buckler to a tower shield.

All the rules for carrying items with shields apply to the new shield size (see Armor Descriptions in Chapter 7 of the Player's Handbook).

You cannot use a weapon in your hand if it also carries a small shield, and you must drop an item in that hand if you're carrying a large or tower shield.

Characters not proficient in shields take an additional -2 armor check penalty during the following round if the variable shield's size changes during combat.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, enlarge; Market Price: 6,560 gp; Cost to Create: 3,360 gp + 257 XP.

BOOK OF VILE DARKNESS (3.0)

ARMOR OF THE DREAD EMPEROR

This suit of +1 full plate has four 5-foot chains connected to it at the waist.

Each chain has a ring manacle sized to fit around a humanoid neck.

If people are placed in these manacles by either the armor's wearer or his minions, the armor is ready to display its true power.

Whenever the wearer takes damage, the captives held by the chains take half the damage themselves.

If the chains hold more than one person, divide the half damage among all of them.

Operating in this armor with chains attached to other people is difficult.

The wearer takes an additional -5 armor check penalty unless the victims are somehow magically subdued or controlled, such as by stupor or dominate person.

If the captives are children, the additional armor check penalty is only -2.

If the captives are subdued or controlled children, there is no additional armor check penalty.

Caster Level: 8th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, shield other; Market Price: 14,650 gp.

FLESHSHIFTER ARMOR

If the other creature succeeds at a Fortitude save (DC 16), the creature takes no damage and the wearer of the grim defender armor takes double damage.

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, shield other; Market Price: 11,350 gp.

RAZOR ARMOR

Made of layers and layers of razor-sharp scales, this +2 scale armor deals 2d6 points of slashing damage with a successful grapple check and when the wearer is grappling.

Caster Level: 3rd; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, magic weapon; Market Price: 5,600 gp.

CHAMPIONS OF RUIN (3.5)

HELLSTEEL

This dark, red-veined armor can sheath its wearer in a protective fiery aura.

Lore: A DC 20 bardic knowledge check reveals that an abishai armorsmith named Nirzayal crafted the first suit to bear the name Hellsteel, but other similar suits have appeared since, and not all of them crafted in the fiery pits of the Nine Hells.

A DC 30 bardic knowledge or Gather Information check reveals that a vengeance knight named Cordelia Flametongue (see page 71) possesses one such suit.

Description: This suit of black full plate armor is made from the scales of a remorhaz tempered in the fires of the Nine Hells.

Red, marble-like veins run through it.

Upon speaking a command word, the wearer can use a warm fire shield once per day.

Aura/Caster Level: Moderate evocation; CL 10th.

Construction: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, fire shield, resist elements, +12,825 gp, +1,026 XP, +12 days.

Weight: 50 lb.

Price: 25,650 gp.

Aura: Moderate (DC 20); transmutation.

Activation: —

Weight: 20 lb.

This suit of studded leather armor is held together with bits of bone and scale rather than metal rivets.

The breastpiece is engraved with an abstract image resembling a tree, whose branches cross over the armor's shoulders.

If you have the wild shape class feature, this suit of +1 wild studded leather armor grants you one additional use of that ability per day.

(It does not, however, grant that ability if you do not already possess it).

This extra use stacks with the one provided by a druid's vestment (DMG 268).

Armor of the beast is part of a set known collectively as the trappings of the beast, which also includes the ring of the beast (page 141) and the mantle of the beast (page 140).

When you wear all three of these items, you gain a +5 competence bonus on wild empathy checks.

In addition, you are treated as one level higher than you are for the purpose of using wild shape.

(For instance, an 11th-level druid clad in the trappings of the beast could assume the form of a plant creature).

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, wild shape ability.

Cost to Create: 13,000 gp (plus 175 gp for masterwork studded leather); 1,040 XP, 26 days.

BASTION OF RIGHTEOUS WAR

Price (Item Level): 18,170 gp (14th)

Body Slot: — (held) Caster Level: 7th.

Aura: Moderate (DC 18); evocation.

Activation: — and immediate

Weight: 15 lb.

The border of this chevron-shaped shield is emblazoned with symbols of warfare.

When it is carried, the image of a deity's holy symbol forms in the center.

This +1 heavy steel shield functions best in the hands of a cleric or paladin.

If an enemy scores a critical threat against you, you can expend a turn or rebuke undead attempt as an immediate action to negate the critical threat.

You must make this decision before your opponent rolls to confirm the critical threat, and you still take the normal damage from the attack.

The cost (in turn/rebuke attempts) to activate the bastion of righteous war increases by 1 for every additional multiple of damage (beyond ×2) that would normally be dealt by the attack's critical hit.

For example, negating a critical threat from a heavy pick (which deals four times normal damage on a critical hit) would cost three turn/rebuke undead attempts, rather than one.

The bastion of righteous war is part of a set known collectively as the regalia of righteous war, which also includes the blade of righteous war (see below) and the helm of righteous war (page 139).

When you hold this blade while wearing the other items in the set, you can spend a turn/rebuke undead attempt as an immediate action to make an attack of opportunity with the blade against any foe that successfully strikes an ally in melee combat, even if you have already made one against that opponent that round.

(You must threaten the foe in order to make this attack of opportunity).

The holy symbol pictured on the shield always matches the deity worshiped by the wearer (if any).

Cost to Create: 9,000 gp (plus 170 gp for masterwork heavy steel shield), 720 XP, 18 days.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, divine power, magic vestment, turn or rebuke undead.

BULWARK OF THE LIVING

DRACONOMICON (3.5)

ARMOR OF DRAGONSHAPE

This suit of +3 dragoncraft hide armor grants its wearer resistance 5 against a specific type of energy, as appropriate to the dragon from whose scales it was crafted (acid for black, copper, or green; cold for silver or white; electricity for blue or bronze; or fire for brass, gold, or red).

This resistance is treated as an extraordinary (and thus nonmagical) feature of the armor.

If the wearer has the wild shape ability, she may change into a Small or Medium dragon of the same color as the armor once per day, and may remain in that form for up to 7 hours.

This change doesn't count against the character's normal limit of daily wild shape uses.

Moderate transmutation; CL 7th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Dragoncrafter, wild shape ability; Price 23,165 gp; Cost 14,665 gp + 680 XP; Weight 25 lb.

ARMOR OF MOBILITY

DRAGONDODGER ARMOR

DRAGONRIDER ARMOR

This suit of +1 full plate armor is crafted from the cast-off scales of a dragon (rather than those harvested from a slain dragon).

It grants resistance 10 to form of energy associated with the dragon from whose scales it is created (acid, cold, electricity, or fire, as appropriate).

It also grants its wearer a +5 bonus on Ride checks whenever riding a dragon, and activates a feather fall spell whenever the rider falls more than 5 feet.

DRAGON MAGIC (3.5)

SHIELD OF THE WINGED CRUSADE

Devised by notable members of the swift wing prestige class (see page 50), a shield of the winged crusade provides protection in melee combat and against area attacks such as a dragon's breath weapon.

Description: Shields of the winged crusade are heavy shields of dull red metal.

Their design has a scaly appearance.

A split second before a shield's translocation effect activates, it emits a harsh buzzing sound, which fades a second or two after the translocation is complete.

Activation: The shield's +1 enhancement bonus to Armor Class is always active.

Once per day, the wearer can use its translocation effect as an immediate action.

Effect: A shield of the winged crusade is a +1 heavy steel shield that can save its wearer from an area attack.

A wearer who is within the area of an instantaneous-duration effect that allows a Reflex save to reduce its effect (such as a fireball spell or a breath weapon) can activate the shield's translocation effect.

By doing so, he instantaneously moves 10 feet in any direction of his choosing.

If the movement takes him beyond the boundary of the area attack, he doesn't need to attempt the Reflex save.

Aura/Caster Level: Moderate abjuration; CL 8th.

Construction: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, dimension door, 1,670 gp, 120 XP, 3 days.

Weight: 15 lb.

Price: 3,170 gp.

DUNGEON MASTER'S GUIDE 3.0 (3.0)

ABSORBING SHIELD

This +1 large steel shield is flat black in color and seems to absorb light.

Every other day, it can be commanded to absorb a single Large or smaller object or creature that touches its front, annihilating the thing that touches it as a sphere of annihilation does.

The shield therefore can deliver devastating shield bashes, but it is also useful for destroying an opponent's weapon.

Caster Level: 17th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, disintegrate; Market Price: 50,170 gp; Cost to Create: 25,170 gp + 2,000 XP.

He must take whatever consequences come from the second roll, since not all luck is good.

The wearer's player must decide whether to have the attack roll rerolled before damage is rolled.

Caster Level: 12th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, bless; Market Price: 18,900 gp; Cost to Create: 10,150 gp + 700 XP.

Friendly troops within 360 feet of the user become braver than normal (for example, more willing than normal to follow a leader into battle against dangerous foes). Since the effect arises in great part from the distinctiveness of the armor, the wearer cannot hide or conceal herself in any way and still have the effect function.

The armor bestows one negative level on any nonevil creature wearing it.

You can bash an opponent with a wight shield, using it as an off-hand weapon.

See Table 7–5: Weapons on page 116 of the Player's Handbook for the damage dealt by a shield bash.

Used this way, a wight shield is a martial bludgeoning weapon.

For the purpose of penalties on attack rolls, treat a wight shield as a light weapon.

If you use your shield as a weapon, you lose its Armor Class bonus until your next action (usually until the next round).

An enhancement bonus on a shield does not improve the effectiveness of a shield bash made with it.

When you successfully deal damage to a living creature with a wight shield bash, the creature must make Fortitude save DC 14 or gain a negative level.

Strong necromancy; CL 12th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Knowledge (religion) 5 ranks, create undead; Price 16,309 gp; Weight 6 lb.

WRAPPED TOWER

LORDS OF MADNESS (3.5)

DAMPSUIT

A dampsuit is a close-fitting bodysuit of slick leather that covers a mind flayer from head to toe.

It seals in a creature's precious body moisture when the illithid ventures away from the dark, clammy warrens where it normally lives.

The suit itself consists of several complex layers, each moistened and lubricated with mucus for easy movement. The suit traps all moisture that escapes from the wearer's body and recirculates it.

Wearing a dampsuit, a mind flayer can operate in dry, hot conditions that would quickly exhaust or kill an unprotected illithid.

Under normal conditions, a mind flayer's tentacles remain curled up inside a special pouch designed for just that purpose on the front of the suit.

When needed, they can be thrust out through a valve in the face mask, then withdrawn (along with a brain) when their work is done.

A dampsuit is a suit of +1 slick leather armor that protects its wearer with an endure elements effect.

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) conjuration, transmutation

This finely crafted shield is engraved with the image of a holy warrior healing a wounded beggar.

A shield of mercy functions as a +1 heavy steel shield and also allows you to channel your destructive power into healing.

You can expend a smite attempt (such as from a paladin's smite evil class feature or the granted power of the Destruction domain) to heal a creature by touch.

The touched creature is healed of a number of points of damage equal to the extra damage that you would have dealt with the smite attack.

If you also wear a magic item that grants an enhancement bonus to your Wisdom score, you add the item's bonus to the amount of damage healed by the shield of mercy.

EARTHSKIN

This +1 dendritic armor is fashioned by urdunnir dwarves, who can simply stone walk into and out of the living crystal armor whenever they don't need to wear it.

Others must succeed on a Strength check (DC 22) to break out of the armor.

If even part of the earthskin survives damage, however, it regrows in 8 hours.

Caster Level: 3rd; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor; Market Price: 3,150 gp; Cost to Create: 2,650 gp + 40 XP.

ROARING ARMOR OF AMMARINDAR

These twelve sets of +2 breastplate are decorated with silver elven runes on the front and are carved with a bear or dragon head on the back.

Any nonmagical arrow, bolt, sling bullet, or similar missile that strikes the wearer of the armor for 10 or fewer points of damage is automatically turned back by the armor to strike at the creature that fired it (the damage is re-rolled against the attacker and the wearer suffers no damage from the attack).

Because the bear or dragon head on the armor roars whenever danger approaches from the rear, the wearer gains the uncanny dodge ability of a 6th-level rogue (he retains his Dex bonus to AC even when flat-footed or struck by an invisible attack, and cannot be flanked except by a rogue of at least 10th level).

All twelve of these breastplates are believed to be in the hands of the tanarukks of Hellgate Keep, who plundered them from Ammarindar.

Caster Level: 13th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, protection from arrows, true seeing; Market Price: 49,350 gp; Cost to Create: 24,850 gp + 1,960 XP.

RACES OF THE WILD (3.5)

BEARSKIN ARMOR

A favorite of many elf fighters and barbarians, this +5 breastplate has an outer layer of shaggy brown or black fur. The wearer can use bear's endurance on himself once a day. The armor also gives the wearer a +2 competence bonus on grapple checks.

For up to 10 rounds a day, the wearer gains the scent special quality (see page 314 of the Monster Manual).

Activating this effect is a free action; the rounds when this effect is in use need not be continuous.

As a free action, the wearer can cause the armor to sprout a pair of claws (dealing 1d6 points of damage for a Medium wearer, or 1d4 for a Small one).

When using the claws, the wearer's natural reach increases by 5 feet.

The wearer can attack with both claws as though they were natural weapons.

With the full attack action, he can use both claws at his full attack bonus, provided he does not attack with any other weapons during his full attack.

When using this option, the wearer does not get extra attacks due to a high base attack bonus.

Alternatively, the wearer can use a single claw to make an attack as a natural secondary weapon (-5 on the attack roll, no effect on the wearer's other attacks).

The character cannot use the claw as a natural secondary attack if he already has made an off-hand attack, or vice versa.

The wearer can use the claws for up to 10 rounds a day, and those rounds need not be continuous.

Moderate transmutation; CL 9th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, bear's endurance, polymorph or wild shape ability; Price 38,550 gp; Cost 19,450 gp + 1,528 XP.

FOXHIDE ARMOR

This +2 leather armor has an outer layer covered with red-gold or gray fur with white trim.

The armor wearer can use fox's cunning on herself once a day.

The armor also gives the wearer a +2 competence bonus on Hide and Move Silently checks.

For up to 10 rounds a day, the wearer gains the scent special quality (see page 314 of the Monster Manual).

Activating this effect is a free action; the rounds when this effect is in use need not be continuous.

Once per day, the wearer can use pass without trace on herself; while the spell is in effect, the wearer also gains the woodland stride ability (see page 36 of the Player's Handbook).

Moderate transmutation; CL 9th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, fox's cunning, pass without trace, polymorph or wild shape ability; Price 18,960 gp; Cost 9,560 gp + 752 XP.

HAWKFEATHER ARMOR

This +3 studded leather armor is popular with halfling and elf rogues and bards.

It has an outer layer covered with golden feathers.

The armor wearer can use eagle's splendor on himself once a day.

The wearer gains a +8 competence bonus on Spot checks while wearing the armor.

For up to 10 rounds a day, the wearer can sprout wings and fly at a speed of 60 feet (good), provided he carries no more than a light load.

Activating this effect is a free action; the rounds in which this effect is in use need not be continuous.

Moderate transmutation; CL 9th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, eagle's splendor, polymorph or wild shape ability; Price 28,775 gp; Cost 14,475 gp + 1,144 XP.

OWLFATHER ARMOR

This +1 leather armor is popular with folk who wish to spend time with the raptorans.

The armor has an outer layer covered with gray feathers speckled with black.

The armor wearer can use owl's wisdom on herself once a day.

The wearer gains a +8 competence bonus on Spot checks made in areas of shadowy illumination.

The wearer also receives a +4 competence bonus on Listen and Move Silently checks.

For up to 10 rounds a day, the wearer can sprout wings and fly at a speed of 40 feet (good), provided she carries no more than a light load.

Activating this effect is a free action; the rounds in which this effect is in use need not be continuous.

Moderate transmutation; CL 9th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, owl's wisdom, polymorph or wild shape ability; Price 20,175 gp; Cost 10,525 gp + 828 XP.

TIGERSKIN ARMOR

This +4 chain shirt is popular with elf rangers.

It has an outer layer of striped fur.

The armor wearer can use cat's grace on herself once a day.

The armor also gives the wearer a +2 competence bonus on Hide checks.

In areas of tall grass or undergrowth, the Hide bonus increases to +4; the wearer also receives a +2 competence bonus on Climb, Jump, and Swim checks.

In each case, the armor's armor check penalty applies normally.

For up to 10 rounds a day, the wearer gains the scent special quality (see page 314 of the Monster Manual).

Activating this effect is a free action; the rounds when this effect is in use need not be continuous.

As a free action, the wearer can cause the armor to sprout a pair of claws (dealing 1d4 points of damage for a Medium wearer, or 1d3 for a Small one).

The wearer can attack with both claws as though they were natural weapons.

With the full attack action, she can use both claws at her full attack bonus, provided she does not attack with any other weapons during her full attack.

When using this option, the wearer does not get extra attacks due to a high base attack bonus.

Alternatively, the wearer can use a single claw to make an attack as a natural secondary weapon (-5 on the attack roll, no effect on the wearer's other attacks).

The character cannot use the claw as a natural secondary attack if he already has made an off-hand attack, or vice versa.

The wearer can use the claws for up to 10 rounds a day, and those rounds need not be continuous.

If the wearer of tigerskin armor charges a foe while using the claws, she can make a full attack against the foe (clawing twice at her full attack bonus).

Moderate transmutation; CL 9th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, cat's grace, polymorph or wild shape ability; Price 33,150 gp; Cost 6,750 gp + 1,312 XP.

SAVAGE SPECIES (3.0)

KYTON ARMOR

This +1 mithral shirt looks like an unraveling sweater because of the strips of chain hanging from the hem.

Once per round the wearer may command one of the strips to activate for up to 5 rounds.

When first made, this armor has five chain strips capable of animation, but combat may destroy some of them.

The strips function like Small animated objects.

The strips fight independently of the wearer and attack as +1 weapons.

They do not attack any friend or ally of the wearer unless he commands them to do so.

If no chains are left, the armor remains a +1 mithral shirt.

➤ Animated Chain Strips (1 to 5): CR 1; Small construct; HD 1d10; hp 5; Init +1; Spd 0 ft.; AC 14, touch 12, flat-footed 13; Atk +2 melee (1d6+1, +1 chain rake); SQ construct traits; AL N; SV Fort +0, Ref +1, Will -5; Str 10, Dex 12, Con -, Int -, Wis 1, Cha 1.

Construct Traits: Immune to mind-affecting effects (charms, compulsions, phantasms, patterns, and morale effects), and to poison, sleep, paralysis, stunning, disease, death effects, necromantic effects, and any effect that requires a Fortitude save unless it also works on objects; cannot heal damage; not subject to critical hits, subdual damage, ability damage, ability drain, or energy drain; not at risk of death from massive damage, but destroyed when reduced to 0 hit points or less; cannot be raised or resurrected; darkvision 60 ft.

When wearing this armor, a kytton cannot use its dancing chains ability with the animated chain strips.

It can, however, use that ability with up to four other chain strips that can be hung from the hem.

Weight: 25 lb.

Caster Level: 11th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, animate object; Market Price: 13,980 gp.

SERPENT ARMOR

This +3 leather armor appears to be made from the skin of one or more big snakes.

Though some claim serpent armor is made of naga hide, no one has proven it.

In addition to its value as armor, serpent armor provides its wearer a +2 insight bonus on Reflex saving throws, and the wearer acts as if she had the Combat Reflexes feat.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, cat's grace; Market Price: 21,660 gp.

Weight: 15 lb.

WIGHT ARMOR

This +1 shadow studded leather armor gives the wearer darkvision to a range of 60 feet and the protection of invisibility to undead as if cast by a 5th-level cleric.

Caster Level: 6th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, invisibility to undead; Market Price: 26,175 gp.

Weight: 20 lb.

SILVER MARCHES (3.0)

SILVER MAIL OF THE UNICORN QUEEN

This +1 elven chainmail bears a small symbol of Lurue at the center of the chest.

The wearer is protected as if carrying a periap of proof against poison and may cast cure light wounds three times per day.

The wearer gains a +4 competence bonus to Charisma-based skill checks as they relate to dealings with good-aligned magical beasts such as unicorns, pegasi, and giant eagles.

The armor bestows one negative level on any nongood creature wearing it.

This negative level persists as long as the armor is worn and disappears when the armor is removed.

The negative level never results in actual level loss, but the wearer cannot overcome it in any way (including with restoration spells) while wearing the armor.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, cure light wounds, neutralize poison; Market Price: 23,950 gp; Cost to Create: 14,050 gp + 792 XP.

SONG AND SILENCE (3.0)

BARRICADE BUCKLER

The correct command word transforms this +1 buckler into a tower shield.

Like any other tower shield, it does not modify AC directly; rather, it provides up to total cover for any one character behind it.

A second command word shrinks the barricade buckler back to its original size.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, enlarge; Market Price: 4,165 gp; Weight: 5 lb.

in buckler form, 45 lb.

in tower shield form.

SINGING SWORD

This intelligent +2 dancing longsword is a unique weapon that has been passed from bard to bard over the centuries. It loves two things to the exclusion of all others: singing and fighting.

If its owner doesn't display a passion for both of those activities, a personality conflict occurs (see the Items Against Characters section in Chapter 8 of the Dungeon Master's Guide).

Should that occur, the sword demands that its owner either actively share its interests (by gaining ranks in Perform and perhaps even taking up the bard class) or turn it over to a more suitable owner.

In the hands of a bard who enjoys battle, however, the singing sword truly shines.

Not only is it a formidable weapon in combat, but it can also harmonize with its owner, granting him a +6 enhancement bonus on any Perform checks that involve singing.

For the first few weeks after acquiring a suitable new owner, the singing sword is content and eager to please.

Over time, however, personality conflicts can occur if other characters (especially lawful ones) prevent the bard from singing or fighting.

The singing sword always urges its owner forward into combat and up onto the stage at every opportunity.

The singing sword has 10 ranks in Sense Motive, which, combined with its Wisdom modifier, give it a total bonus of +14 on Sense Motive checks.

In addition, the sword can detect law, and it grants its wielder free use of the Blind-Fight feat.

Finally, it can cast haste (duration 10 rounds) on its wielder once per day.

The singing sword is chaotic neutral, with Int 11, Wis 19, Cha 15, and Ego 19.

It speaks Common and can communicate telepathically with any creature that has a language.

Caster Level: 12th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, animate objects, detect law, haste; Market Price: 127,855 gp; Weight: 4 lb.

STORMWRACK (3.5)

ELECTRIC EEL HIDE

This suit of +2 buoyant slick hide armor is black and slimy looking.

Opponents that hit the wearer with natural weapons, unarmed attacks, or weapons composed mostly of metal (such as a sword or pick, but not a wooden-hafted spear) take 1d6 points of electricity damage.

In addition, three times per day, on command, the wearer can deal 5d6 points of electricity damage by making a melee touch attack.

Underwater, the wearer can instead spend a daily use to produce an electrified burst with a 5-foot radius.

All creatures within this area other than the wearer take 2d6 points of electricity damage.

Moderate conjuration, evocation, and transmutation; CL 9th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, freedom of movement, grease, shocking grasp; Price 23,015 gp; Cost 11,590 gp + 914 XP.

WINDRUNNER'S SHIRT

This +1 mithral shirt seems to ripple and flash like sunlight on running water.

On command, the wearer can extrude sail-like membranes that reach from wrist to knee.

By spreading her arms, the wearer causes these sails to fill with air and push her along the surface water with the speed of a small sailcraft in a moderate wind.

(The wearer can choose to take advantage of existing winds instead).

The wearer can use this ability for up to 1 hour each day. The duration of the effect need not be consecutive.

Moderate conjuration, evocation, and transmutation; CL 6th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, favorable wind, minor creation, water walk; Price 20,820 gp; Cost 10,960 gp + 789 XP.

UNDERDARK (3.5)

CORTICAL ARMOR

This +1 halfweight illithidwrought full plate armor is formed from articulated plates of leaf-thin, mucous-coated steel.

(Illithidwrought armor grants a psionic wearer an additional +2 insight bonus to Armor Class, so cortical armor functions as +3 full plate armor when worn by such a creature.

When worn by a nonpsionic creature, it functions as +2 full plate armor).

The wearer is also continuously protected by a mind blank effect (caster level 15th).

Strong varied; CL 15th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor or Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, mind blank, psionic creature; Price 146,650 gp; Cost 74,150 gp + 5,800 XP.

DEATH ARMOR (DROW)

This +3 glamered shadow slick silent drowcraft spiked leather armor is legendary.

While wearing it, an Underdark assassin can complete his mission under almost any conditions and in any guise.

In addition to its other properties, it allows the wearer to use greater invisibility (caster level 8th) on himself once per day, as a standard action.

Strong varied; CL 12th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, contingency, disintegrate, greater invisibility, drow; Price 75,730 gp; Cost 37,970 gp + 3,021 XP.

EXOARMOR (ILLITHID)

This +2 illithidwrought full plate armor is composed of bulky, reinforced metallic plates and braces interwoven between thin metallic layers that give the wearer a carapaced look. (Illithidwrought armor grants a psionic wearer an additional +2 insight bonus to Armor Class, so exoarmor functions as +4 full plate armor when worn by a psionic creature.

When worn by a nonpsionic creature, it functions as +3 full plate armor).

Exoarmor also grants its wearer a +4 enhancement bonus to Strength and Constitution.

Moderate divination and transmutation; CL 8th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor or Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, bull's strength, bear's endurance, psionic creature; Price 81,650 gp; Cost 41,650 gp + 3,200 XP.

SPECIFIC CURSED ITEMS

ARMS AND EQUIPMENT GUIDE (3.0)

AMULET OF SICKLISSNESS

This golden disk appears as an amulet of health +6 and functions as such until the wearer takes damage from an enemy with a Challenge Rating equal to or greater than his level.

At that moment and thereafter, the amulet imposes a  $-6$  penalty on the wearer's Constitution, including commensurate hit point loss.

Once the curse is activated, an amulet of sickliness can be removed only by means of a remove curse spell.

Caster Level: 16th; Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, endurance, bestow curse; Market Price: 1,300 gp; Weight: —.

ARMOR OF VULNERABILITY

Any type of magic armor can have this property.

Analyze dweomer and similar divinations reveal that the armor protects the wearer from critical hits, like the fortification property.

In fact, all critical rolls against the wearer are automatically successful (so every threat is a critical hit).

Caster Level: 16th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, limited wish or miracle; Market Price: +1 bonus.

BELT OF CAT'S STRENGTH

This wide metal-studded leather belt is decorated with images of lions and appears to be a belt of giant strength +6. It functions as such until the wearer attacks an enemy with a Challenge Rating equal to or greater than his level.

At that moment and thereafter, the belt imposes a  $-6$  penalty on the wearer's Strength, and the lion images change to house cats.

Once the curse is activated, a belt of cat's strength can be removed only by means of a remove curse spell.

Caster Level: 16th; Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, bull's strength, bestow curse; Market Price: 1,300 gp; Weight: 1 lb.

CLOAK OF AFFRONT

This handsomely tailored cloak appears to be a cloak of Charisma +6 and actually functions as such until the wearer attempts a Bluff or Diplomacy check.

At that moment and thereafter, the cloak imposes a  $-6$  penalty on the wearer's Charisma and makes his personality coarse and grating.

Once the curse is activated, a cloak of affront can be removed only by means of a remove curse spell.

Caster Level: 16th; Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, charm monster, bestow curse; Market Price: 1,300 gp; Weight: 1 lb.

GOGGLES OF NIGHTBLINDNESS

While they appear exactly like goggles of night, the effect of these lenses is almost completely opposite.

When first worn, they grant the wearer darkvision with a range of 60 feet.

As soon as the wearer attacks a creature while using darkvision, however, she becomes completely unable to see except in conditions of bright light (such as sunlight or the daylight spell) thereafter.

Once the curse is activated, the goggles of nightblindness can be removed only by means of a remove curse spell.

Caster Level: 16th; Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, darkvision, bestow curse; Market Price: 1,000 gp; Weight: —.

HEADBAND OF HOSTILITY

This simple circlet functions as a headband of intellect +4.

However, whenever the wearer casts a Conjunction (summoning) or Conjunction (calling) spell, the conjured creature is hostile to the wearer and attacks her instead of her enemies.

Once this function has activated, the headband can be removed only by means of a remove curse spell.

A variation of this item that works as a periapt of Wisdom +4 also exists.

Caster Level: 16th; Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, charm monster, commune or legend lore, bestow curse; Market Price: 13,000 gp; Weight: —.

HEADBAND OF SIMPLEMINDEDNESS

This device appears to be a headband of intellect +6 and functions as such until the wearer attempts a skill check based on Intelligence.

At that moment and thereafter, the headband imposes a  $-6$  penalty on the wearer's Intelligence.

Once the curse is activated, a headband of simplemindedness can be removed only by means of a remove curse spell.

Caster Level: 16th; Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, commune or legend lore, bestow curse; Market Price: 1,300 gp; Weight: —.

NECKLACE OF THE VAMPIRE

This elegant necklace is formed of bloodstones, and a large ruby hangs at its center.

To all appearances, it is a beneficial and powerful item, granting several magical abilities to its wearer.

It grants the wearer darkvision with a range of 60 feet and doubles her rate of natural healing.

Three times per day, the wearer can use vampiric touch.

Once per day, she can use finger of death.

The first time the wearer uses finger of death, the necklace adheres itself to the wearer.

At this point it cannot be removed unless the wearer dies or a remove curse is cast.

The evil magic of the necklace is such that it entices the wearer to use this power, causing the command word to spring to mind every time she becomes angry, for example. Each successive use of that power causes the necklace to become more and more a part of the wearer's body, gradually being covered over with skin until, after ten uses of the power, the ruby of the necklace reaches the wearer's heart, killing her forever and turning her into a vampire. Caster Level: 20th; Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, create greater undead, finger of death, vampiric touch; Market Price: 90,000 gp; Weight: —.

PERIAPT OF OBLIVION

A black pearl on a light silver chain, this amulet appears to be a periapt of Wisdom +6 and functions as such until the wearer attempts a Spot or Listen check. At that moment and thereafter, the periapt imposes a  $-6$  penalty on the wearer's Wisdom. Once the curse is activated, a periapt of oblivion can be removed only by means of a remove curse spell. Caster Level: 16th; Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, commune or legend lore, bestow curse; Market Price: 1,300 gp; Weight: —.

DUNGEON MASTER'S GUIDE 3.0 (3.0)

-2 SWORD, CURSED

This longsword gives off a magical aura and performs well against targets in practice, but when used against an opponent in combat, it penalizes its wielder's attack rolls by  $-2$ .

Only by careful observation can this penalty be detected. All damage dealt is also reduced by 2 points, but never below a minimum of 1 point of damage on any successful hit.

After one week in the character's possession, the sword always forces her to employ it rather than another weapon. The sword's owner automatically draws and fights with it even when she meant to draw or ready some other weapon. It can be gotten rid of only by means of limited wish, wish, or miracle.

Caster Level: 15th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, bestow curse, and limited wish or miracle; Market Price: 1,500 gp.

AMULET OF INESCAPABLE LOCATION

This device is typically worn on a chain or as a brooch. It appears, to magical analysis, to prevent location, scrying (crystal ball viewing and the like), or detection or influence by detect thoughts or telepathy. Actually, the amulet doubles the likelihood and/or range of these location and detection modes. Item identification attempts, including identify, analyze dweomer, detect magic, and so on, do not reveal its true nature.

Caster Level: 10th; Prerequisites: Create Wondrous Item, bestow curse; Market Price: 1,000 gp.

ARMOR OF ARROW ATTRACTION

Magical analysis indicates that this armor is a normal suit of  $+3$  full plate.

However, the armor is cursed. It works normally in regard to melee attacks but actually serves to attract ranged weapons.

The wearer has twice the normal chance to be selected as a random target of a ranged weapon.

In cases where each individual in a group is the target of a set number of ranged weapons (such as in large-scale combats with multiple archers), the wearer has twice as many weapons fired at him.

Furthermore, the magical protection of the armor does not apply for ranged attacks.

The true nature of the armor does not reveal itself until the character is fired upon in earnest—simple experiments (throwing rocks, for example) do not suffice.

Caster Level: 16th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, bestow curse; Market Price: 9,000 gp.

ARMOR OF RAGE

This armor is similar in appearance to armor of command and functions as a suit of  $+1$  full plate.

However, when it is worn, the armor causes the character to suffer a  $-4$  Charisma penalty.

All unfriendly characters within 300 feet have a  $+1$  morale bonus on attacks against her.

The effect is not noticeable to the wearer or those affected. (In other words, the wearer does not (immediately) notice that donning the armor is the cause of her problems, nor do foes understand the reason for the depth of their enmity).

Caster Level: 16th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, bestow curse; Market Price: 1,600 gp.

BAG OF DEVOURING

This bag appears to be an ordinary sack.

Detection for magical properties makes it seem as if it were a bag of holding.

The sack is, however, a lure used by an extradimensional creature—in fact, one of its feeding orifices.

Any substance of animal or vegetable nature is subject to “swallowing” if thrust within the bag.

The bag of devouring is 90% likely to ignore any initial intrusion, but any time thereafter that it senses living flesh within (such as if someone reaches into the bag to pull something out), it is 60% likely to close around the offending member and attempt to draw the whole victim in.

The bag has a Strength of 23 for purposes of pulling someone in.

The bag radiates magic and can hold up to 30 cubic feet of matter.

It acts as a bag of holding (bag 1), but each hour it has a 5% cumulative chance of swallowing the contents and then spitting the stuff out in some non-space or other plane. Creatures drawn within are consumed in 1 round, eaten, and gone forever.

Caster Level: 17th; Prerequisites: In effect, this is a minor artifact and cannot be created; Market Price: 15,500 gp (but note that the bag cannot be created, since it is a creature).

BOOTS OF DANCING

These boots initially function as one of the other types of useful boots (DM's choice) and are indistinguishable from other magic boots.

But when the wearer is in (or fleeing from) melee combat, the boots of dancing impede movement, making him behave as if Otto's irresistible dance had been cast upon him.

Only a remove curse enables the boots to be removed once their true nature is revealed.

Caster Level: 16th; Prerequisites: Create Wondrous Item, Otto's irresistible dance; Market Price: 30,000 gp.

BRACERS OF DEFENSELESSNESS

These appear to be +5 bracers of armor and actually serve as such until the wearer is attacked in anger by an enemy with a Challenge Rating equal to or greater than her level.

At that moment and thereafter, the bracers inflict a –5 penalty to AC.

Once their curse is activated, bracers of defenselessness can be removed only by means of a remove curse spell.

Caster Level: 16th; Prerequisites: Create Wondrous Item, mage armor, bestow curse; Market Price: 1,200 gp.

BROOM OF ANIMATED ATTACK

This is indistinguishable in appearance from a normal broom, except that detection spells reveal it to be magical. It is identical to a broom of flying by all tests short of attempted use.

Using it reveals that a broom of animated attack is a very nasty item.

If a command ("Fly", "Go", "Giddy-up", or some similar command) is spoken, the broom does a loop-the-loop with its hopeful rider, dumping him on his head from 1d4+5 feet off the ground (no falling damage, since the fall is less than 10 feet).

The broom then attacks the victim, swatting the face with the straw or twig end and beating him with the handle end. The broom gets two attacks per round with each end (two swats with the straw and two with the handle, for a total of four attacks per round).

It attacks with a +5 bonus on each attack.

The straw end causes blindness for 1 round if it hits.

The handle causes 1d6 points of damage when it hits.

The broom has an AC of 13, 18 hit points, and a hardness of 4.

Caster Level: 10th; Prerequisites: Create Wondrous Item, fly, animate objects; Market Price: 5,200 gp.

CLOAK OF POISONOUSNESS

This cloak is usually made of a wool-like material, although it can be made of leather.

It radiates magic.

The cloak can be handled without harm, but as soon as it is actually donned the wearer is stricken stone dead unless she succeeds at a Fortitude save (DC 28).

A detect poison spell registers the poison impregnated in the fabric.

Once donned, a cloak of poisonousness can be removed only with a remove curse spell—this destroys the magical properties of the cloak.

If a neutralize poison spell is then used, it may be possible to revive the victim with a raise dead or resurrection spell, but not before.

Caster Level: 15th; Prerequisites: Create Wondrous Item, poison, and limited wish or miracle; Market Price: 62,000 gp.

CRYSTAL HYPNOSIS BALL

This cursed item is indistinguishable from a normal crystal ball.

It radiates magic, but not evil, to appropriate detection spells.

In fact, it doesn't function as a crystal ball at all.

However, anyone attempting to use the scrying device becomes hypnotized, and a telepathic suggestion is implanted in his mind (Will negates DC 19).

The user of the device believes that the desired creature or scene was viewed, but actually he came under the influence of a powerful wizard, lich, or even some power or being from another plane.

(The DM should choose the controller to fit his or her campaign).

Each further use brings the crystal hypnosis ball gazer deeper under the influence of the controller, either as a servant or a tool.

The DM decides whether to make this a gradual or sudden affair, according to the surroundings and circumstances peculiar to the finding of the crystal hypnosis ball and the character locating it.

Note that throughout this time, the user remains unaware of his subjugation.

Caster Level: 17th; Prerequisites: In effect, this is a minor artifact and cannot be created by a player character; Market Price: — (cannot be created).

DUST OF SNEEZING AND CHOKING

This fine dust appears to be either dust of appearance or dust of disappearance.

If cast into the air, however, it causes those within a 20-foot spread to fall into fits of sneezing and coughing.

Those failing a Fortitude save (DC 15) take 2d6 points of temporary Constitution damage immediately.

In addition, those failing a second Fortitude save (DC 15) 1 minute later are dealt 1d6 points of temporary Constitution damage.

Those who succeed on either saving throw are nonetheless disabled by choking (treat as stunned) for 5d4 rounds.

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Create Wondrous Item, poison; Market Price: 2,400 gp.

FLASK OF CURSES

This item looks like an ordinary beaker, bottle, container, decanter, flask, or jug.

It has magical properties, but detection does not reveal the nature of the flask of curses.

It may contain a liquid, or it may emit smoke.

When the flask is first unstoppered, all within 30 feet must make a Will save (DC 17) or be cursed, suffering a –2 penalty to attack rolls, saving throws, and skill checks until a remove curse spell is cast upon them.

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Create Wondrous Item, bestow curse; Market Price: 2,100 gp.

GAUNTLETS OF FUMBLING

These gauntlets may be of supple leather or heavy protective material suitable for use with armor (ring, scale, chain, and so on).

In the former instance, they appear to be gloves of Dexterity. In the latter case, they appear to be gauntlets of ogre power.

The gauntlets perform according to every test as if they were gloves of Dexterity or gauntlets of ogre power until the wearer finds herself under attack or in a life-and-death situation.

At that time, the curse is activated.

The wearer becomes fumble-fingered, with a 50% chance each round of dropping anything held in either hand.

(If items are held in both hands, roll only once. If the d% result is 01–50, roll again: even = right hand, odd = left hand).

The gauntlets also lower Dexterity by 2 points.

Once the curse is activated, the gloves can be removed only by means of a remove curse spell, a wish, or a miracle.

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Create Wondrous Item, bestow curse; Market Price: 1,300 gp.

HELM OF OPPOSITE ALIGNMENT

This metal hat looks like a typical helmet.

When placed upon the head, however, its curse immediately takes effect (Will save negates DC 15).

The alignment of the wearer is radically altered—good to evil, chaotic to lawful, neutral to some extreme commitment (LE, LG, CE, or CG)—to an alignment as different as possible from the former alignment.

Alteration in alignment is mental as well as moral, and the individual changed by the magic thoroughly enjoys his new outlook.

Only a wish or a miracle can restore former alignment, and the affected individual does not make any attempt to return to the former alignment.

(In fact, he views the prospect with horror and avoids it in any way possible).

If a character of a class with an alignment requirement is affected, an atonement spell is needed as well if the curse is to be obliterated.

Note that this is a one-use item: once a helm of opposite alignment has functioned, it loses all magical properties.

Caster Level: 12th; Prerequisites: Create Wondrous Item, creator must be 12th level; Market Price: 4,000 gp; Weight: 3 lb.

INCENSE OF OBSESSION

These blocks of incense exactly resemble incense of meditation.

If meditation and prayer are conducted while incense of obsession is burning nearby, its odor and smoke cause the priest to become totally confident that her spell ability is superior, due to the magic incense.

The priest is determined to use her spells at every opportunity, even when not needed or when useless.

The priest remains obsessed with her abilities and spells until all are cast or until 24 hours have elapsed.

Caster Level: 6th; Prerequisites: Create Wondrous Item, confusion or bestow curse; Market Price: 200 gp.

MACE OF BLOOD

This +3 heavy mace must be coated in blood every day, or its bonus fades away (until the mace is coated again).

The character using this mace must make a Will save (DC 13) every day it is within his possession or become chaotic evil.

Caster Level: 8th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, creator must be at least 9th level and chaotic evil; Market Price: 16,000 gp.

MEDALLION OF THOUGHT PROJECTION

This device seems like a medallion of thoughts, even down to the range at which it functions, except that the thoughts overheard are muffled and distorted, requiring a successful Will save (DC 15) to sort out.

However, while the user thinks she is picking up the thoughts of others, all she is really hearing are figments created by the medallion itself.

These illusory thoughts always seem plausible and thus can seriously mislead any who rely upon them.

What's worse, unknown to her, the cursed medallion actually broadcasts her thoughts to creatures in the path of the beam, thus alerting them of her presence.

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Create Wondrous Item, detect thoughts, ghost sound; Market Price: 1,800 gp.

NECKLACE OF STRANGULATION

A necklace of strangulation appears to be a rare and wondrous piece of valuable jewelry and, short of the use of something as powerful as a miracle or a wish, can only be identified as a cursed item when placed around a character's neck.

The necklace immediately constricts, inflicting 6 points of strangulation damage per round.

It cannot be removed by any means short of a limited wish, wish, or miracle and remains clasped around the victim's throat even after his death.

Only when he has decayed to a dry skeleton (after approximately one month) does it loosen, ready for another victim.

Caster Level: 18th; Prerequisites: Create Wondrous Item, slay living; Market Price: 60,000 gp.

NET OF SNARING

This net offers a +3 bonus to attack rolls but can only be used underwater, thus making it a limited item rather than what most would really call a "curse".

Underwater, it can be commanded to shoot forth up to 30 feet to trap a creature.

Caster Level: 8th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, freedom of movement; Market Price: 10,000 gp.

PERIAPT OF FOUL ROTTING

This engraved gem appears to be of little value. If any character keeps the periapt in her possession for more than 24 hours, she contracts a terrible rotting disease that can be removed only by application of a remove curse spell followed by a cure disease and then a heal, miracle, limited wish, or wish spell.

The rotting can also be countered by crushing a periapt of health and sprinkling its dust upon the afflicted character. Otherwise, the afflicted loses 1 point each of Dexterity, Constitution, and Charisma per week (as if permanently drained).

Caster Level: 10th; Prerequisites: Create Wondrous Item, contagion; Market Price: 17,000 gp.

POTION OF POISON

This potion has lost its once potent magical abilities and has become a potent poison.

The imbiber must make a Fortitude save (DC 16) or take 1d10 points of temporary Constitution damage.

A minute later he must save again (DC 16) or take 1d10 points of temporary Constitution damage.

Caster Level: 12th; Prerequisites: Brew Potion, poison; Market Price: 5,000 gp.

ROBE OF POWERLESSNESS

A robe of powerlessness appears to be a robe of another sort, and detection discovers nothing more than the fact that it has a magical aura.

As soon as a character dons this garment, she suffers an immediate -10 effective penalty to Strength and Intelligence scores, forgetting all spells and magic knowledge.

The robe can be removed easily, but in order to restore mind and body, the character must receive a remove curse spell followed by a heal.

Caster Level: 13th; Prerequisites: Create Wondrous Item, bestow curse, permanency; Market Price: 5,500 gp.

ROBE OF VERMIN

The wearer notices nothing unusual when the robe is donned, other than that it offers great magical defense (as a cloak of protection +4).

However, as soon as he is in a situation requiring concentration and action against hostile opponents, the true nature of the garment is revealed: The wearer immediately suffers a multitude of bites from the insects that magically infest the garment.

He must cease all other activities in order to scratch, shift the robe, and generally show signs of the extreme discomfort caused by the bites and movement of these pests.

The wearer suffers a -5 initiative penalty and a -2 penalty on all attack rolls, saves, and skill checks.

If he tries to cast a spell, he must make a Concentration check (DC 20 + spell level) or lose the spell.

Caster Level: 13th; Prerequisites: Create Wondrous Item, summon swarm, creator must be at least 8th level; Market Price: 16,500 gp.

RING OF CLUMSINESS

This ring operates exactly like a ring of feather falling. However, it also makes the wearer clumsy.

She suffers a -4 penalty to Dexterity and has a 20% chance of spell failure for all arcane spells that require a somatic component.

(Note: This chance of spell failure stacks with other types of arcane spell failure chances).

Caster Level: 15th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, feather fall, bestow curse; Market Price: 500 gp.

SCARAB OF DEATH

This small pin appears to be any one of the various beneficial amulets, brooches, or scarabs.

However, if it is held for more than 1 round or placed within a soft container (bag, pack, etc).

within 1 foot of a warm, living body for 1 minute, it changes into a horrible burrowing beetle-like creature.

The thing tears through any leather or cloth, burrows into flesh, and reaches the victim's heart in 1 round, causing death.

A Reflex save (DC 25) allows the wearer to tear the scarab away before it burrows out of sight, but he still takes 3d6 points of damage.

The beetle then returns to its scarab form.

Note that placing the scarab in a container of hard wood, ceramic, bone, ivory, or metal prevents the monster from coming to life and allows for long-term storage of the item.

Caster Level: 19th; Prerequisites: Create Wondrous Item, slay living; Market Price: 80,000 gp.

SPEAR, CURSED BACKBITER

This is a +2 shortspear, but each time it is used in melee against a foe and the attack roll is a natural 1, it damages its wielder instead of her intended target.

When the curse takes effect, the spear curls around to strike its wielder in the back, automatically striking her for normal damage.

The curse even functions when the spear is hurled, but in that case the damage to the hurler is doubled.

Caster Level: 10th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, bestow curse; Market Price: 2,000 gp.

STONE OF WEIGHT (LOADSTONE)

This stone appears to be a dark, smoothly polished stone. It reduces the possessor's speed to one-half of normal.

Furthermore, once picked up, the stone cannot be disposed of by any nonmagical means—if it is thrown away or smashed, it reappears somewhere on his person.

If a remove curse spell is cast upon a loadstone, the item may be discarded normally and no longer haunts the individual.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Create Wondrous Item, slow; Market Price: 1,000 gp.

SWORD, BERSERKING

This performs by every test, except that of the heat of battle, as a +2 greatsword.

However, in actual battle its wielder goes berserk (gaining all benefits and drawbacks of a barbarian rage).

He attacks the nearest creature and continues to fight until unconscious or dead or until no living thing remains within 30 feet.

Although many see this sword as a curse, others see it as a boon.

Caster Level: 8th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, feblemind; Market Price: 17,500 gp.

VACUOUS GRIMOIRE

A book of this sort is identical in appearance to a normal one on some mildly interesting topic, although a detect magic spell reveals it to have a magical aura.

Any character who opens the work and reads so much as a single glyph therein must make two Will saving throws (DC 15 each).

The first is to determine if 1 point of Intelligence is permanently drained.

The second is to find out if 2 points of Wisdom are permanently drained.

To destroy the book, a character must burn it while casting remove curse.

If the grimoire is placed with other books, its appearance instantly alters to conform to the look of these other works.

Caster Level: 20th; Prerequisites: Create Wondrous Item, feblemind; Market Price: 6,000 gp.

DUNGEON MASTER'S GUIDE 1 3.5 (3.5)

-2 SWORD, CURSED

This longsword performs well against targets in practice, but when used against an opponent in combat, it causes its wielder to take a -2 penalty on attack rolls.

All damage dealt is also reduced by 2 points, but never below a minimum of 1 point of damage on any successful hit.

After one week in a character's possession, the sword always forces that character to employ it rather than another weapon.

The sword's owner automatically draws it and fights with it even when she meant to draw or ready some other weapon.

The sword can be gotten rid of only by means of limited wish, wish, or miracle.

Strong evocation; CL 15th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, bestow curse, and limited wish or miracle; Price 1,500 gp.

AMULET OF INESCAPABLE LOCATION

This device is typically worn on a chain or as a brooch.

It appears, to magical analysis, to prevent location, scrying (crystal ball viewing and the like), or detection or influence by detect thoughts or telepathy.

It seems to be an amulet of proof against detection and location.

Actually, the amulet gives the wearer a -10 penalty on all saves against divination spells.

Moderate abjuration; CL 10th; Create Wondrous Item, bestow curse; Price 1,000 gp.

ARMOR OF ARROW ATTRACTION

Magical analysis indicates that this armor is a normal suit of +3 full plate.

However, the armor is cursed.

It works normally with regard to melee attacks but actually serves to attract ranged weapons.

The wearer takes a -15 penalty to AC against any attack by a ranged weapon.

The true nature of the armor does not reveal itself until the character is fired upon in earnest—simple experiments (throwing rocks, for example) do not suffice.

Strong abjuration; CL 16th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, bestow curse; Price 9,000 gp.

ARMOR OF RAGE

This armor is similar in appearance to armor of command and functions as a suit of +1 full plate.

However, when it is worn, the armor causes the character to take a -4 penalty to Charisma.

All unfriendly characters within 300 feet have a +1 morale bonus on attack rolls against her.

The effect is not noticeable to the wearer or those affected.

(In other words, the wearer does not immediately notice that donning the armor is the cause of her problems, nor do foes understand the reason for the depth of their enmity).

Strong necromancy; CL 16th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, bestow curse; Price 1,600 gp.

BAG OF DEVOURING

This bag appears to be an ordinary sack.

Detection for magical properties makes it seem as if it were a bag of holding.

The sack is, however, a lure used by an extradimensional creature—in fact, one of its feeding orifices.

Any substance of animal or vegetable nature is subject to “swallowing” if thrust within the bag.

The bag of devouring is 90% likely to ignore any initial intrusion, but any time thereafter that it senses living flesh within (such as if someone reaches into the bag to pull something out), it is 60% likely to close around the offending member and attempt to draw the whole victim in.

The bag has a +8 bonus on grapple checks made to pull someone in.

The bag can hold up to 30 cubic feet of matter.

It acts as a bag of holding type I, but each hour it has a 5% cumulative chance of swallowing the contents and then spitting the stuff out in some non-space or on some other plane.

Creatures drawn within are consumed in 1 round.

The bag destroys the victim's body and prevents any form of raising or resurrection that requires part of the corpse.

There is a 50% chance that a wish, miracle, or true resurrection spell can restore a devoured victim to life.

Check once for each destroyed creature.

If the check fails, the creature cannot be brought back to life by mortal magic.

Moderate conjuration; CL 17th; In effect, this is a creature and cannot be created; Price n/a.

BOOTS OF DANCING

These boots initially appear and function as one of the other kinds of magic boots (DM's choice). But when the wearer is in (or fleeing from) melee combat, boots of dancing impede movement, making him behave as if Otto's irresistible dance had been cast upon him. Only a remove curse spell enables the wearer to be rid of the boots once their true nature is revealed. Strong enchantment; CL 16th; Create Wondrous Item, Otto's irresistible dance; Price 30,000 gp.

BRACERS OF DEFENSELESSNESS

These appear to be bracers of armor +5 and actually serve as such until the wearer is attacked in anger by an enemy with a Challenge Rating equal to or greater than her level. At that moment and thereafter, the bracers cause a –5 penalty to AC. Once their curse is activated, bracers of defenselessness can be removed only by means of a remove curse spell. Moderate conjuration; CL 16th; Create Wondrous Item, mage armor, bestow curse; Price 1,200 gp.

BROOM OF ANIMATED ATTACK

This item is indistinguishable in appearance from a normal broom. It is identical to a broom of flying by all tests short of attempted use. Using it reveals that a broom of animated attack is a very nasty item. If a command ("Fly", "Go", "Giddy-up", or some similar word) is spoken, the broom does a loop-the-loop with its hopeful rider, dumping him on his head from 1d4+5 feet off the ground (no falling damage, since the fall is less than 10 feet). The broom then attacks the victim, swatting the face with the straw or twig end and beating him with the handle end. The broom gets two attacks per round with each end (two swats with the straw and two with the handle, for a total of four attacks per round). It attacks with a +5 bonus on each attack roll. The straw end causes a victim to be blinded for 1 round when it hits. The handle deals 1d6 points of damage when it hits. The broom has AC 13, 18 hit points, and hardness 4. Moderate transmutation; CL 10th; Create Wondrous Item, fly, animate objects; Price 5,200 gp.

CLOAK OF POISONOUSNESS

This cloak is usually made of a woolen material, although it can be made of leather. A detect poison spell can reveal the presence of poison impregnated in the cloak's fabric. The garment can be handled without harm, but as soon as it is actually donned the wearer is killed instantly unless she succeeds on a DC 28 Fortitude save. Once donned, a cloak of poisonousness can be removed only with a remove curse spell; doing this destroys the magical property of the cloak.

If a neutralize poison spell is then used, it is possible to revive the victim with a raise dead or resurrection spell, but not before.

Strong abjuration; CL 15th; Create Wondrous Item, poison, and limited wish or miracle; Price 62,000 gp.

CRYSTAL HYPNOSIS BALL

This cursed item is indistinguishable from a normal crystal ball.

However, anyone attempting to use the scrying device becomes fascinated for 1d6 minutes, and a telepathic suggestion is implanted in his mind (Will DC 19 negates). The user of the device believes that the desired creature or scene was viewed, but actually he came under the influence of a powerful wizard, lich, or even some power or being from another plane.

(The DM should choose the controller to fit his or her campaign).

Each further use brings the crystal hypnosis ball gazer deeper under the influence of the controller, either as a servant or a tool.

The DM decides whether to make this a gradual or sudden affair, according to the surroundings and circumstances peculiar to the finding of the crystal hypnosis ball and the character locating it.

Note that throughout this time, the user remains unaware of his subjugation.

Moderate divination; CL 17th; In effect, this is a minor artifact and cannot be created; Price n/a.

DUST OF SNEEZING AND CHOKING

This fine dust appears to be dust of appearance.

If cast into the air, it causes those within a 20-foot spread to fall into fits of sneezing and coughing.

Those failing a DC 15 Fortitude save take 2d6 points of Constitution damage immediately.

In addition, those failing a second DC 15 Fortitude save 1 minute later are dealt 1d6 points of Constitution damage.

Those who succeed on either saving throw are nonetheless disabled by choking (treat as stunned) for 5d4 rounds.

Faint conjuration; CL 7th; Create Wondrous Item, poison; Price 2,400 gp.

FLASK OF CURSES

This item looks like an ordinary beaker, bottle, container, decanter, flask, or jug.

It may contain a liquid, or it may emit smoke.

When the flask is first unstoppered, all within 30 feet must make a DC 17 Will save or be cursed, taking a –2 penalty on attack rolls, saving throws, and skill checks until a remove curse spell is cast upon them.

Moderate conjuration; CL 7th; Create Wondrous Item, bestow curse; Price 2,100 gp.

GAUNTLETS OF FUMBLING

These gauntlets may be of supple leather or heavy protective material suitable for use with armor (ring, scale, chain, and so on).

In the former instance, they appear to be gloves of Dexterity. In the latter case, they appear to be gauntlets of ogre power.

The gauntlets perform according to every test as if they were gloves of Dexterity or gauntlets of ogre power until the wearer finds herself under attack or in a life-and-death situation.

At that time, the curse is activated.

The wearer becomes fumble-fingered, with a 50% chance each round of dropping anything held in either hand.

The gauntlets also lower Dexterity by 2 points.

Once the curse is activated, the gloves can be removed only by means of a remove curse spell, a wish, or a miracle.

Moderate transmutation; CL 7th; Create Wondrous Item, bestow curse; Price 1,300 gp.

HELM OF OPPOSITE ALIGNMENT

This metal hat looks like a typical helmet.

When placed upon the head, however, its curse immediately takes effect (Will DC 15 negates).

On a failed save, the alignment of the wearer is radically altered to an alignment as different as possible from the former alignment—good to evil, chaotic to lawful, neutral to some extreme commitment (LE, LG, CE, or CG).

Alteration in alignment is mental as well as moral, and the individual changed by the magic thoroughly enjoys his new outlook.

A character who succeeds on his save can continue to wear the helmet without suffering the effect of the curse, but if he takes it off and later puts it on again, another save is required.

The curse only works once; that is, a character whose alignment has been changed cannot change it again by donning the helmet a second time.

Only a wish or a miracle can restore former alignment, and the affected individual does not make any attempt to return to the former alignment.

(In fact, he views the prospect with horror and avoids it in any way possible).

If a character of a class with an alignment requirement is affected, an atonement spell is needed as well if the curse is to be obliterated.

When a helm of opposite alignment has functioned once, it loses its magical properties.

Strong transmutation; CL 12th; Create Wondrous Item, creator must be 12th level; Price 4,000 gp; Weight 3 lb.

INCENSE OF OBSESSION

These blocks of incense appear to be incense of meditation. If meditation and prayer are conducted while incense of obsession is burning nearby, its odor and smoke cause the user to become totally confident that her spell ability is superior, due to the magic incense.

The user is determined to use her spells at every opportunity, even when not needed or when useless.

The user remains obsessed with her abilities and spells until all have been used or cast, or until 24 hours have elapsed.

Moderate enchantment; CL 6th; Create Wondrous Item, bestow curse; Price 200 gp.

MACE OF BLOOD

This +3 heavy mace must be coated in blood every day, or its bonus fades away (until the mace is coated again).

The character using this mace must make a DC 13 Will save every day it is within his possession or become chaotic evil. Moderate abjuration; CL 8th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, creator must be at least 9th level and chaotic evil; Price 16,000 gp.

MEDALLION OF THOUGHT PROJECTION

This device seems like a medallion of thoughts, even down to the range at which it functions, except that the thoughts overheard are muffled and distorted, requiring a DC 15 Will save to sort out.

However, while the user thinks she is picking up the thoughts of others, all she is really hearing are figments created by the medallion itself.

These illusory thoughts always seem plausible and thus can seriously mislead any who rely upon them.

What's worse, unknown to her, the cursed medallion actually broadcasts her thoughts to creatures in the path of the beam, thus alerting them to her presence.

Faint divination; CL 7th; Create Wondrous Item, detect thoughts, ghost sound; Price 1,800 gp.

NECKLACE OF STRANGULATION

A necklace of strangulation appears to be a rare and wondrous piece of valuable jewelry and, short of the use of something as powerful as a miracle or a wish, can only be identified as a cursed item when placed around a character's neck.

The necklace immediately constricts, dealing 6 points of damage per round.

It cannot be removed by any means short of a limited wish, wish, or miracle and remains clasped around the victim's throat even after his death.

Only when he has decayed to a dry skeleton (after approximately one month) does the necklace loosen, ready for another victim.

Strong conjuration; CL 18th; Create Wondrous Item, slay living; Price 60,000 gp.

NET OF SNARING

This net provides a +3 bonus on attack rolls but can only be used underwater, thus making it a somewhat useful item rather than what most would really call a cursed item.

Underwater, it can be commanded to shoot forth up to 30 feet to trap a creature.

Moderate evocation; CL 8th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, freedom of movement; Price 10,000 gp.

PERIAPT OF FOUL ROTTING

This engraved gem appears to be of little value.

If any character keeps the periapt in her possession for more than 24 hours, she contracts a terrible rotting affliction that permanently drains 1 point of Dexterity, Constitution, and Charisma every week.

The periapt (and the affliction) can be removed only by application of a remove curse spell followed by a cure disease and then a heal, miracle, limited wish, or wish spell.

The rotting can also be countered by crushing a periapt of health and sprinkling its dust upon the afflicted character (a full-round action), whereupon the periapt of foul rotting likewise crumbles to dust.

Faint abjuration; CL 10th; Create Wondrous Item, contagion; Price 17,000 gp.

POTION OF POISON

This potion has lost its once beneficial magical abilities and has become a potent poison.

The imbiber must make a DC 16 Fortitude save or take 1d10 points of Constitution damage.

A minute later he must save again (DC 16) or take 1d10 points of Constitution damage.

Moderate conjuration; CL 12th; Craft Wondrous Item, poison; Price 5,000 gp.

ROBE OF POWERLESSNESS

A robe of powerlessness appears to be a magic robe of another sort.

As soon as a character dons this garment, she takes a –10 penalty to Strength and Intelligence, forgetting spells and magic knowledge accordingly.

The robe can be removed easily, but in order to restore mind and body, the character must receive a remove curse spell followed by heal.

Moderate transmutation; CL 13th; Create Wondrous Item, bestow curse, permanency; Price 5,500 gp.

ROBE OF VERMIN

The wearer notices nothing unusual when the robe is donned, other than that it offers great magical defense (as a cloak of protection +4).

However, as soon as he is in a situation requiring concentration and action against hostile opponents, the true nature of the garment is revealed: The wearer immediately suffers a multitude of bites from the insects that magically infest the garment.

He must cease all other activities in order to scratch, shift the robe, and generally show signs of the extreme discomfort caused by the bites and movement of these pests.

The wearer takes a –5 penalty on initiative checks and a –2 penalty on all attack rolls, saves, and skill checks.

If he tries to cast a spell, he must make a Concentration check (DC 20 + spell level) or lose the spell.

Moderate abjuration; CL 13th; Create Wondrous Item, summon swarm, creator must be at least 13th level; Price 16,500 gp.

RING OF CLUMSINESS

This ring operates exactly like a ring of feather falling.

However, it also makes the wearer clumsy.

She takes a –4 penalty to Dexterity and has a 20% chance of spell failure when trying to cast any arcane spell that has a somatic component.

(This chance of spell failure stacks with other arcane spell failure chances).

Strong transmutation; CL 15th; Forge Ring, feather fall, bestow curse; Price 500 gp.

SCARAB OF DEATH

This small pin appears to be any one of the various beneficial amulets, brooches, or scarabs.

However, if it is held for more than 1 round or carried by a living creature for 1 minute, it changes into a horrible burrowing beetle-like creature.

The thing tears through any leather or cloth, burrows into flesh, and reaches the victim's heart in 1 round, causing death.

A DC 25 Reflex save allows the wearer to tear the scarab away before it burrows out of sight, but he still takes 3d6 points of damage.

The beetle then returns to its scarab form.

Placing the scarab in a container of wood, ceramic, bone, ivory, or metal prevents the monster from coming to life and allows for long-term storage of the item.

Strong abjuration; CL 19th; Create Wondrous Item, slay living; Price 80,000 gp.

SPEAR, CURSED BACKBITER

This is a +2 shortspear, but each time it is used in melee against a foe and the attack roll is a natural 1, it damages its wielder instead of her intended target.

When the curse takes effect, the spear curls around to strike its wielder in the back, automatically dealing the damage to the wielder.

The curse even functions when the spear is hurled, and in such a case the damage to the hurler is doubled.

Moderate evocation; CL 10th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, bestow curse; Price 7,500 gp.

STONE OF WEIGHT (LOADSTONE)

This stone appears to be a dark, smoothly polished stone. It reduces the possessor's base land speed to one-half of normal.

Once picked up, the stone cannot be disposed of by any nonmagical means—if it is thrown away or smashed, it reappears somewhere on his person.

If a remove curse spell is cast upon a loadstone, the item may be discarded normally and no longer haunts the individual. Faint transmutation; CL 5th; Create Wondrous Item, slow; Price 1,000 gp.

SWORD, BERSERKING

This item appears to have the characteristics of a +2 greatsword.

However, whenever the sword is used in battle, its wielder goes berserk (gaining all the benefits and drawbacks of the barbarian's rage ability).

He attacks the nearest creature and continues to fight until unconscious or dead or until no living thing remains within 30 feet.

Although many see this sword as a cursed object, others see it as a boon.

Moderate evocation; CL 8th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, rage, bestow curse; Price 17,500 gp.

VACUOUS GRIMOIRE

A book of this sort looks like a normal one on some mildly interesting topic.

Any character who opens the work and reads so much as a single word therein must make two DC 15 Will saves.

The first is to determine if the reader takes 1 point of permanent Intelligence drain.

The second is to find out if the reader takes 2 points of permanent Wisdom drain.

To destroy the book, a character must burn it while casting remove curse.

If the grimoire is placed with other books, its appearance instantly alters to conform to the look of those other works.

Strong enchantment; CL 20th; Create Wondrous Item, feblemind; Price 6,000 gp.

EXPANDED PSIONICS HANDBOOK (3.5)

REVERSE CAPACITOR

A reverse capacitor doesn't store power points—it drains them, to the surprise and chagrin of a psionic character taken in by its resemblance to a cognizance crystal.

Powers that identify psionic items incorrectly identify a reverse capacitor as a cognizance crystal 50% of the time.

A psionic character attempting to use the power points supposedly stored in a reverse capacitor instead loses 1d6 power points per round for 7 rounds.

A crackling arc connects the brow of the character with the stone.

If the character can put more than 40 feet between himself and the reverse capacitor, the effect ends.

If the reverse capacitor drains more power points than the psionic character possesses, the draining effect ends.

The drained power points are simply lost.

Each new attempt to use the power points supposedly stored in the reverse capacitor initiates the draining effect anew.

Strong telepathy; ML 15th; Craft Universal Item, bend reality, power leech; Price 112,000 gp; Weight 1 lb.

MINIATURES HANDBOOK (3.5)

COLLAR OF OBEDIENCE

This plain band of iron can be worn as a bracelet or necklace.

The item imposes a –2 penalty on the wearer's Will saving throws.

When using the skirmish or mass battle rules, this effect makes a creature easier to command, reducing its Difficult rating by 2.

Faint enchantment; CL 3rd; Craft Wondrous Item, doom; Price 3,000 gp.

COLLAR OF SLAVERY

This black collar can be worn as a bracelet or necklace. The item imposes a –10 penalty on the wearer's saving throws against fear effects.

It also imposes a –10 penalty on level checks to oppose Intimidate checks.

When using the skirmish or mass battle rules, a creature or unit using this item is considered to belong to any faction.

Moderate enchantment; CL 7th; Craft Wondrous Item, charm monster; Price 8,000 gp.

ARMS AND EQUIPMENT GUIDE (3.0)

ACID FANG DAGGER

Etched with a seemingly random pattern of thin lines, this +1 dagger is constantly covered with a thin sheen of acid. Although the weapon's magic prevents the acid from harming the wielder, an acid fang dagger deals an additional +1d6 points of acid damage with each hit. In addition, the wielder gains power over reptilian animals, including snakes.

Once per day, the dagger can cast a specialized version of the animal friendship spell that affects only snakes and reptiles.

The dagger's wielder can befriend a maximum of 8 Hit Dice worth of creatures at one time.

While holding the dagger, the wielder can speak with reptiles as the speak with animals spell.

Caster Level: 4th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, animal friendship, speak with animals, Melf's acid arrow; Market Price: 19,102 gp; Cost to Create: 9,702 gp + 752 XP.

ARROW OF DISINTEGRATION

When this arrow strikes a target, the target must succeed on a Fortitude save (DC 19) or vanish as though struck with a disintegrate spell.

Like the spell, the arrow can be used to disintegrate nonliving matter as well as creatures.

A creature that makes a successful saving throw takes 5d6 points of damage.

The arrow is consumed in the attack.

Caster Level: 11th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, disintegrate; Market Price: 3,307 gp; Cost to Create: 1,657 gp + 132 XP.

ARROW OF EYES

The fletching of this +1 arrow is painted with brightly colored eyes.

When fired, an arrow of eyes allows its wielder to see through a magical sensor located within its fletching.

The sensor behaves exactly like an arcane eye spell cast by a 10th-level sorcerer, except that it moves only when the arrow moves.

The wielder must concentrate to use the magical sensor, which lasts for 10 minutes.

If the arrow lodges in a moving object, the sensor moves with it.

Neither the arrow nor the sensor provide any illumination of their own.

The arcane eye ability functions only once.

If an arrow of eyes is recovered intact after firing, it functions only as a +1 arrow.

Caster Level: 10th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, arcane eye; Market Price: 1,047 gp; Cost to Create: 527 gp + 42 XP.

ARROWDEATH FLAIL

This +2/+1 dire flail provides excellent protection against projectile attacks.

While holding an arrowdeath flail, the wielder can deflect projectiles and thrown weapons as if she had the Deflect Arrows feat.

When taking the total defense action, an arrowdeath flail grants an additional +2 deflection bonus to Armor Class that applies only to ranged weapon attacks.

Caster Level: 13th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, protection from arrows; Market Price: 33,690 gp; Cost to Create: 17,190 gp + 1,320 XP.

AXE OF ANGER

This +2 greataxe allows its wielder to push himself beyond the normal limits of rage.

Whenever a character wielding the axe of anger uses the barbarian rage ability, he may sustain the rage for 2 additional rounds.

In addition the raging character is not limited by height when using the Jump skill.

Caster Level: 14th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, creator must have the rage ability, emotion; Market Price: 18,320 gp; Cost to Create: 9,320 gp + 720 XP.

AXE OF FALLS

This +2 returning throwing axe of distance can be thrown normally, or it can be thrown in a special sweeping attack that can trip foes.

When making a ranged trip attempt with the axe of falls, the wielder makes a touch attack, and if successful, makes an opposed Strength check against the target.

This opposed check works exactly like a normal trip attempt, but if the wielder loses there is no return trip attempt possible.

The axe of falls provides no bonus on normal trip attacks. Feats that affect normal trip attempts, such as Improved Trip, do not apply to the ranged trip attack.

Caster Level: 6th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, clairaudience/clairvoyance, grease, telekinesis; Market Price: 50,308 gp; Cost to Create: 25,308 gp + 2,000 XP.

AXE OF PAIRS

This +2 handaxe is easier to wield as an off-hand weapon. Whenever the axe of pairs is used in the off hand, its wielder may make one additional off-hand attack at a -5 penalty. This penalty is subtracted from the wielder's worst off-hand attack bonus.

For example, a fighter with a base attack of +6/+1 and the Ambidexterity, Two-Weapon Fighting, and Improved Two-Weapon Fighting feats wielding an axe of pairs in the off-hand would get five attacks.

The two attacks with the primary weapon would be at +4/-1, and the attacks with the axe of pairs in the off hand would be at +4/-1/-6.

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, haste; Market Price: 50,306 gp; Cost to Create: 25,306 gp + 2,000 XP.

AXE OF SHARDS

This +3 dwarven waraxe has a clear, crystalline blade. Three crystal spikes protrude from the back of the axe head. Although the main blade is as hard as normal steel, all of the three crystal spikes can easily be removed by the weapon's wielder.

Each sharp, balanced spike is treated as a masterwork throwing dagger.

The spikes last for only one day once removed from the axe, and they cannot be reattached.

Once a spike is removed from the axe, a new one begins to grow slowly in its place.

It takes a spike three days to grow, and spikes cannot be removed from the axe before they are completely formed.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, fabricate; Market Price: 19,330 gp; Cost to Create: 9,830 gp + 760 XP.

AXE OF STORMS

This powerful orc double axe has two intricately carved heads joined by a shaft made of a strange blue-tinted wood. Each head bears an ability that gives the weapon part of its name.

One head is thundering, and the other is shock.

Furthermore, the axe is imbued with a flexible enhancement bonus.

At the beginning of each round, the wielder of an axe of storms may allocate the weapon's +4 enhancement bonus between its two heads (minimum +0).

The allocation lasts until the beginning of the wielder's next round.

For example, on one round the wielder could allocate +2 to each head of the weapon, then change the allocation to +3 shock in the primary hand and +1 thundering in the off hand on the following round.

Caster Level: 17th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, blindness/deafness, call lightning or lightning bolt; Market Price: 98,660 gp; Cost to Create: 49,660 gp + 3,920 XP.

AXE OF THE JOYOUS DANCE

This +3 dancing handaxe always looks well-polished and new, and its blade is covered with light etchings of satyrs dancing.

Once per day while dancing, the axe can, at the mental command of its owner, produce Tasha's hideous laughter (as the spell from a 4th-level caster) instead of making a normal attack.

Creatures affected can make a Will save (DC 19) to resist the axe's effects.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, animate objects, Tasha's hideous laughter; Market Price: 107,906 gp; Cost to Create: 54,106 gp + 4,304 XP.

AXE OF THE WINDS

This +3 battleaxe gives its possessor great power over the wind.

The possessor is unaffected by severe winds, including magical effects such as the gust of wind spell.

Furthermore, three times per day the wielder can cause a gust of wind by swinging the axe of the winds over his head as a standard action.

Once per day, the wielder can create a wind wall in a similar manner.

Both effects are as the spells from an 11th-level caster.

Caster Level: 11th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, gust of wind, wind wall; Market Price: 65,830 gp; Cost to Create: 33,070 + 2,621 XP.

BADGERCLAW

This +2 light pick grants its wielder powerful abilities to shape and move stone.

Three times per day its wielder may swing it at stone and have the weapon cast stone shape as a 5th-level caster.

In addition, the wielder may meld into stone once per day as a 5th-level caster.

Caster Level: 6th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, meld into stone, stone shape; Market Price: 32,304 gp; Cost to Create: 16,304 gp + 1,280 XP.

BALOR'S SWORD OF FLAME

The traditional weapon of the balor demon is a Large +1 vorpal bastard sword that can detect good as the spell from a 12th-level caster, except that its range is 30 feet.

These weapons are often mistaken for flaming swords because they look like tongues of flame.

Caster Level: 12th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, death spell, detect good, keen edge; Market Price: 115,870 gp; Cost to Create: 58,270 gp + 4,608 XP.

BALOR'S SWORD OF LIGHTNING

A variation on the traditional balor's blade is this Large +1 brilliant energy shock bastard sword.

This weapon can detect law as cast by a 12th-level sorcerer, but with a range of 30 feet.

These weapons resemble bolts of lightning.

Because the market price of this item is the same as for the balor's sword of flame, it can be substituted for that weapon with no adjustment to the balor's treasure.

Caster Level: 16th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, continual flame, detect law, gaseous form, and call lightning or lightning bolt; Market Price: 115,870 gp; Cost to Create: 58,270 gp + 4,635 XP.

BALOR'S SWORD OF SMITING

This Large +5 unholy bastard sword allows its wielder to smite good once per day.

The wielder adds his Charisma modifier (if positive) to his attack roll and deals +10 damage, in addition to the +2d6 points of unholy damage the weapon normally deals.

This special smite attack is in addition to any smite ability the wielder might already have, but the wielder cannot use two different smite abilities on the same attack.

This weapon looks like a bolt of red lightning.

Because the market price of this item is close to that of the balor's sword of flame, it can be substituted for that weapon with no adjustment to the balor's treasure.

Caster Level: 15th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, unholy blight, creator must be evil and have a smite ability; Market Price: 118,670 gp; Cost to Create: 59,670 gp + 4,720 XP.

BALOR'S SWORD OF SOUL STEALING

The most fearsome weapon carried by the balors, this Large +3 vorpal bastard sword appears as a crackling black-and-purple flame.

A precious black sapphire is set in the weapon's pommel. When it severs the head of a living creature, the sword draws forth the soul of the victim and imprisons it in the black sapphire, as the soul bind spell.

The victim receives a Will save (DC 23) to avoid the soul bind effect.

If the weapon severs the head of a creature with more than 30 Hit Dice, the sapphire shatters without imprisoning the soul, and it must be replaced.

The sapphire can contain only one soul at a time, but balors are rumored to know mystic rituals that can draw the soul out of the gem, allowing them to use it for various vile purposes.

This item is significantly more expensive than the standard-issue balor weapon.

A balor equipped with a sword of soul stealing typically has only its sword and its whip, and no additional treasure.

Caster Level: 17th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, death spell, keen edge, soul bind; Market Price: 219,870 gp; Cost to Create: 125,270 gp + 7,568 XP.

BATTLEAXE OF THE BULL

This +2 battleaxe has a thick, heavy blade and a large spike on the top of its haft ideal for charging foes.

The axe grants the Improved Bull Rush feat to anyone holding it.

If used in both hands, the axe's powerful blows can push foes back.

When used to make a two-handed melee attack, any successful hit forces the target 5 feet directly away from the wielder in addition to dealing normal damage.

Creatures bigger than Large are immune to this effect.

Caster Level: 10th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, bull's strength; Market Price: 32,310 gp; Cost to Create: 16,310 gp + 1,280 XP.

BLADE OF DECEPTION

The flat steel blade of this +3 rapier is hard to follow in combat.

Any time the wielder uses the Bluff skill to feint in combat while wielding the blade of deception, the blade provides a +2 enhancement bonus on the Bluff check.

The blade of deception provides no bonus on other Bluff checks.

In addition, any time a feint is successful in combat, the wielder can move freely without provoking attacks of opportunity from the target of the feint.

Anyone not the target of the feint may take attacks of opportunity against the wielder normally.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, blur; Market Price: 19,820 gp; Cost to Create: 10,070 gp + 780 XP.

BLADE OF THE DUELIST

A potent weapon in nearly any situation, this +2 rapier is doubly effective when facing a single opponent in melee combat.

When threatened by only one foe in melee, the wielder gains a +2 insight bonus to AC effective only against melee attacks from that opponent, and a +2 bonus on all disarm checks made with the blade of the duelist.

If at any time during the round the wielder is threatened by more than one opponent, she loses these benefits until the beginning of her next turn.

Attacks and spells made from a distance do not remove the benefits.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, minor image, shield; Market Price: 16,320 gp; Cost to Create: 8,320 gp + 640 XP.

BLADED CROSSBOW

This +2 heavy crossbow is magically strengthened and fitted with sharp metal blades.

In addition to functioning as a normal +2 heavy crossbow, the bladed crossbow can be used as a melee weapon with a +2 enhancement bonus that deals 1d8+2 points of damage (critical  $\times 2$ ).

Unless the wielder takes the Exotic Weapon Proficiency (bladed crossbow) feat, melee attacks made with the weapon incur the -4 nonproficiency penalty.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, blade barrier; Market Price: 32,350 gp; Cost to Create: 16,350 gp + 1,280 XP.

BOLT OF FREEDOM

These +1 bolts are constantly coated with a thin film of oil or grease.

They leave a thin, oily residue wherever they lie, and even the fletching seems soaked in oil.

Any target hit by a bolt of freedom is covered with a thin layer of grease.

This coating grants a +10 bonus on Escape Artist checks and on grapple checks made to escape a grapple.

A creature so coated takes a -10 penalty on grapple checks made to hold another creature.

The effect lasts for 1d4 rounds.

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, grease; Market Price: 247 gp; Cost to Create: 127 gp + 10 XP.

BOLT OF VOICES

These +2 bolts have bright fletching and often have brightly painted shafts as well.

Also known as magebane bolts, they are feared by many spellcasters.

Anyone hit by a bolt of voices must succeed on a Will save (DC 16) or suffer from the bolt's distracting effects.

Targets who fail their saves hear voices that seem to whisper inside their heads.

Those affected by a bolt of voices must make a Concentration check (DC 16 + spell level) to cast any spells.

This effect lasts for 1d6 rounds.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, feblemind; Market Price: 767 gp; Cost to Create: 387 gp + 31 XP.

BONEBREAKER HAMMER

This massive +2 warhammer glows on command with a fierce red light.

The hammer sheds light as the light spell.

On a critical hit, the bonebreaker hammer deals 1d6 points of temporary Dexterity damage in addition to its normal damage.

Caster Level: 13th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, harm; Market Price: 18,312 gp; Cost to Create: 9,312 gp + 720 XP.

BOW OF ARCANE MIGHT

This +1 mighty (+2) composite longbow is covered in intricate arcane runes.

The bow of arcane might allows its wielder to channel the energy of arcane spells through it to make attacks with the bow more damaging.

As a move-equivalent action that does not provoke an attack of opportunity, the wielder can sacrifice a prepared arcane spell from memory (or a unused spell slot if a spontaneous arcane caster).

Doing so adds a damage bonus equal to the sacrificed spell's level to the next attack made with the bow of arcane might.

This damage bonus stacks with the normal enhancement bonus from the bow and any magic arrows used in the attack.

Caster Level: 15th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, greater magic weapon; Market Price: 8,600 gp; Cost to Create: 4,600 gp + 320 XP.

BOW OF FORCE

This +2 mighty (+3) composite longbow imbues each arrow shot from it with magical force.

Arrows shot from the bow of force become force attacks that have no miss chance against incorporeal targets and bypass damage reduction, but they don't damage creatures immune to force effects.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, magic missile; Market Price: 32,700 gp; Cost to Create: 16,700 gp + 1,280 XP.

BOW OF MIGHTY PULLING

Made of thick but flexible wood, this +3 composite shortbow allows its wielder to put all of his strength into a shot.

While using the bow of mighty pulling, the wielder may take a move-equivalent action to pull the bow.

This allows the wielder to apply up to his full Strength modifier to damage on the next single shot with the bow, provided that shot occurs within 1 round of the pull action.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, bull's strength; Market Price: 26,375 gp; Cost to Create: 13,375 gp + 1,040 XP.

BOW OF RADIANCE

On command, this +2 longbow radiates light out to 60 feet as the daylight spell.

Furthermore, every arrow shot from the bow of radiance sheds light as the spell.

There is no limit to the amount of time that the bow itself can radiate light, but the light shed by an arrow shot from the bow lasts only 10 minutes.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, light, daylight; Market Price: 40,375 gp; Cost to Create: 20,375 + 1,600 XP.

BOW OF THE SOLARS

This Large +2 mighty (+5) composite longbow turns any arrow it fires into a slaying arrow targeting any creature type the wielder chooses.

Caster Level: 13th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, finger of death; Market Price: 100,100 gp; Cost to Create: 50,500 gp + 3,968 XP.

BOW OF SONGS

Made from fine wood by elven hands, this +2 shortbow blends music with every shot to deadly effect.

As a move-equivalent action that does not provoke an attack of opportunity, the wielder may give up one daily use of bardic music to add his Charisma bonus to attack and damage rolls on the next single attack made with the bow of songs.

Caster Level: 8th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, creator must be elven, creator must have bardic music ability, sculpt sound; Market Price: 32,330 gp; Cost to Create: 16,330 gp + 1,280 XP.

BOW OF THE STEPPES

The magical properties imbued in this +2 mighty (+2) composite shortbow make it easier to use when mounted.

Shots fired from the bow of the steppes while mounted incur only a -2 penalty on attacks if the wielder's mount takes a double move.

Shots fired while the wielder's mount is running take only a -4 penalty on attacks.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, phantom steed; Market Price: 18,525 gp; Cost to Create: 9,525 gp + 720 XP.

BOW OF SYMPATHETIC ENHANCEMENT

In addition to its own magical enhancement, this +2 shortbow imparts a temporary enhancement bonus to any arrow shot from it.

Arrows shot from the bow of sympathetic enhancement are treated as +1 arrows for 1 round.

Arrows that were magic to begin with gain no additional benefit.

Caster Level: 10th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, greater magical weapon; Market Price: 32,330 gp; Cost to Create: 16,330 gp + 1,280 XP.

BOWSTAFF

As a move-equivalent action, the wielder can change this thin, flexible +2 quarterstaff into a +2 longbow or back again. Both forms perform exactly like a regular magic weapon of their type.

Caster Level: 15th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, polymorph any object; Market Price: 10,975 gp; Cost to Create: 5,975 gp + 400 XP.

BREAKING BLADE

Cleverly shaped and magically enhanced to shatter opponent's weapons, the breaking blade grants its wielder the Sunder feat while she holds the weapon.

This +2 halberd is particularly effective when used against simple and martial reach weapons.

When attacking such weapons, it deals double damage. The metal haft of the breaking blade has a hardness of 15 and 20 hit points.

Caster Level: 11th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, shatter; Market Price: 18,310 gp; Cost to Create: 9,310 gp + 720 XP.

BRUTAL AXE

This +1 keen battleaxe has a thick haft and a heavy, almost unbalanced head.

If the brutal axe is used in two hands, the wielder can apply 1 1/2 times his Strength bonus to this trip attempt.

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, keen edge; Market Price: 18,310 gp; Cost to Create: 9,310 gp + 720 XP.

CHAIN OF ENTANGLING

This hooked +2 spiked chain wraps around foes, entrapping them and dealing continuous damage.

On a successful hit, the chain of entangling allows its wielder to attempt to grapple the target.

On subsequent attacks, the wielder can attempt to hold the target in the chain.

Treat the attack as a normal hold attempt that it deals the damage of the spiked chain rather than unarmed damage.

The target may attempt to break the grapple as normal.

Caster Level: 6th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Evard's black tentacles; Market Price: 32,325 gp; Cost to Create: 16,325 gp + 1,280 XP.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, keen edge; Market Price: 18,305 gp; Cost to Create: 9,305 gp + 720 XP.

CLAWS OF THE LEOPARD

This pair of +2 spiked gauntlets have been shaped to look like the paws of an oversized cat.

In addition to their enhancement bonus, they provide several feline-like advantages.

While wearing the claws of the leopard, the wielder gains low-light vision and a +10 enhancement bonus on Climb checks.

During the first round of combat, the wielder can leap on a foe, allowing her to make a full attack with the claws of the leopard even if she has already taken a move action.

This ability functions exactly like the leopard's pounce ability (see Appendix 1: Animals of the Monster Manual).

Caster Level: 6th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, creator must have 5 ranks in Climb, cat's grace; Market Price: 38,305 gp; Cost to Create: 19,305 gp + 1,520 XP.

The two thin hollows in this +2 light crossbow's stock have a magical affinity with wands.

The wielder of the deathwand crossbow is considered to be holding either of the wands when she wields the crossbow, and she can use either wand normally without letting go of the crossbow.

Removing or stowing a wand in the crossbow takes a move-equivalent action.

If the crossbow is destroyed, any wands it holds are also destroyed.

Caster Level: 11th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Leomund's secret chest; Market Price: 10,335 gp; Cost to Create: 5,335 gp + 400 XP.

CROSSBOW, DWARVEN MAULER

This Large +2 heavy crossbow is covered with dwarven runes, and the intricate stock has been carved to resemble the head of a hammer.

Because of its increased size, the dwarven mauler deals 1d12 points of damage on a successful hit.

This increase in size does not affect the time it takes to load the crossbow.

Furthermore, against all giants and goblinoids, the dwarven mauler's critical multiplier is increased to  $\times 4$ .

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, creator must be a dwarf; Market Price: 18,700 gp; Cost to Create: 9,700 gp + 720 XP.

Crossbow, Inevitable: The stock and rest of this +1 light crossbow are covered in carvings, each resembling a slightly different eye.

If a bolt from an inevitable crossbow misses, the wielder's next shot, if aimed at the same target, gains an additional +1 insight bonus on the attack roll.

If the second shot misses, the insight bonus increases to +2. As long as the wielder continues to fire at the same target and continues to miss, subsequent shots gain bigger insight bonuses, increasing by +1 each time, up to a maximum of +5.

This sequence of shots must occur on consecutive rounds; if a round passes without the wielder shooting at the same target, the crossbow's insight bonus reverts to +0.

Caster Level: 15th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, true strike; Market Price: 18,335 gp; Cost to Create: 9,335 gp + 720 XP.

CROSSBOW OF RETRIEVING

This +2 hand crossbow has a cleverly carved stock that resembles a beckoning hand.

Any inanimate object struck by a bolt from a crossbow of retrieving is affected by a mage hand spell.

See Attack an Object in Chapter 8 of the Player's Handbook for rules on attacking inanimate objects.

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, mage hand or telekinesis; Market Price: 13,400 gp; Cost to Create: 6,900 gp + 520 XP.

CROSSBOW OF TRAILING FLAME

Made from a deep red-hued wood, this +1 flaming repeating crossbow is strengthened by bands of wrought iron and carved with shallow markings that resemble flickering flames.

Anytime the crossbow of trailing flame is fired more than once in the same round, its additional property is activated.

Each shot after the first in the round deals a cumulative +1 point of fire damage.

For example, the second shot in a round deals 1d8+1 normal damage and 1d6+1 fire damage, and the third shot in the same round deals 1d8+1 normal damage and 1d6+2 fire damage.

Caster Level: 13th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, flame blade, flame strike, or fireball; Market Price: 18,550 gp; Cost to Create: 9,550 gp + 720 XP.

CUTLASS OF SURETY

The magical properties of this +2 shortsword make it impossible for the wielder to be disarmed.

The sword grants no bonus on disarm attempts initiated by the wielder.

Caster Level: 6th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, magic weapon; Market Price: 18,310 gp; Cost to Create: 9,310 gp + 720 XP.

DAGGER OF DEFENSE

This +4 defending dagger has a long, thin blade and a broad guard, and is an excellent parrying weapon.

As long as the wielder holds the dagger of defense in his off hand, he cannot be flanked.

Rogues of 16th level or higher can flank the character normally.

Caster Level: 12th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, shield; Market Price: 58,302 gp; Cost to Create: 29,302 gp + 2,320 XP.

DAGGER OF ENTRY

Greatly prized by rogues and others with larceny on their minds, a dagger of entry looks like a plain, if finely crafted dagger.

This +1 dagger's one oddity is its strangely shaped hilt, which looks like an oversized key.

The dagger is capable of opening almost any door, allowing its possessor to cast knock once per day as a 9th-level caster. In addition, the dagger allows its wielder to cast find traps once per day and detect secret doors once per day (both as the spells from a 9th-level caster).

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, detect secret doors, find traps, knock; Market Price: 18,502 gp; Cost to Create: 9,402 gp + 728 XP.

DART OF PINNING

Although it looks more like a large needle than an instrument of war, this +2 dart has the deadly ability to hold a foe motionless.

Targets struck by a dart of pinning must make a successful Fortitude save (DC 13) or be paralyzed as though by carrion crawler brain juice (see Poison in Chapter 3 of the DUNGEONMASTER'S Guide).

The effect lasts for 7 rounds.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, hold monster; Market Price: 18,300 gp; Cost to Create: 9,300 gp + 720 XP.

DESERT'S HEART

The dark metal of this +2 flaming falchion is imbued with a deep red tint.

Any creature holding desert's heart is immune to fire damage and takes double damage from cold effects.

Creatures with the cold subtype do not gain this benefit.

Instead, desert's heart bestows a negative level on them, which persists as long as they hold the blade.

This negative level never results in actual level loss, but it cannot be overcome in any way (including restoration spells) while the weapon is wielded.

Caster Level: 8th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, fireball, protection from elements; Market Price: 71,175 gp; Cost to Create: 35,775 gp + 2,832 XP.

DISARMING FLAIL

The magic chain on this +2 heavy flail gives the weapon a greater ability to pull opponents' weapons from their grasp.

The disarming flail grants a +2 circumstance bonus on disarm checks and allows the wielder to make disarm attempts as though she possessed the Improved Disarm feat.

This bonus stacks with the normal bonus flails receive on disarm checks.

Caster Level: 6th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, magic weapon; Market Price: 18,395 gp; Cost to Create: 9,355 gp + 723 XP.

DOORBREAKER

This plain-looking +1 battleaxe resembles mundane wood-chopping axes more than other battleaxes, and it is especially effective against wood and similar materials.

A doorbreaker deals double damage to all objects made predominantly of wood and to plant creatures.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, warp wood; Market Price: 8,310 gp; Cost to Create: 4,310 gp + 320 XP.

DRAGONTOOTH

Made from a single tooth of an ancient blue dragon, this +2 shock rapier projects a fearsome aura around its wielder.

Foes within 5 feet of the wielder must succeed on a Will save (DC 16) or suffer the effects of the fear spell from an 8th-level caster.

Once foes have made a successful saving throw against the fear aura, they are immune to the aura's effects for one day.

Caster Level: 8th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, fear, lightning bolt; Market Price: 40,720 gp; Cost to Create: 20,520 gp + 1,616 XP.

ELECTRIC LASH

The blue-tinged leather of this +2 shock whip seems to spark with small motes of electric energy.

Three times per day, the wielder of the electric lash may make an arcing strike.

This attack deals an additional +2d6 points of electricity damage (3d6 total) to the target if the attack is successful.

Furthermore, the electric jolt arcs to any one creature within 5 feet of the target.

That target takes half as much electricity damage as the first target did.

If more than one creature is within 5 feet of the target, roll randomly to see which one is affected by the arc of electricity.

Arcing strike damage is not multiplied by critical hits.

Caster Level: 8th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, lightning bolt; Market Price: 50,301 gp; Cost to Create: 25,301 gp + 2,000 XP.

ELVEN LEAF ARROW

These +2 arrows are tipped with magically strengthened leaves rather than metal tips.

Anyone firing an elven leaf arrow can, as a free action, declare that the arrow deals subdual rather than regular damage.

Furthermore, whenever an elven leaf arrow deals subdual damage in a temperate woodland environment, the target must succeed on a Will save (DC 11) or be charmed as the charm monster spell from a 10th-level caster.

Caster Level: 10th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, creator must be an elf, charm monster; Market Price: 1,167 gp; Cost to Create: 587 gp + 47 XP.

EMERALD CALTROPS

These magic caltrops dissolve into small puddles of acid when stepped on.

Like normal caltrops, emerald caltrops are scattered on the ground to slow enemies, but the act of scattering them also activates their magic.

One 2-pound bag covers an area 5 feet square.

Each time a creature moves into an area covered by emerald caltrops, make an attack roll (with a +1 bonus) using the rules for caltrops found in Chapter 7 of the Player's Handbook.

Any creature struck by the caltrops takes an additional +1 point of damage and 1d6 points of acid damage.

Emerald caltrops turn to vapor 1 hour after being removed from their original container.

Caster Level: 4th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Melf's acid arrow; Market Price: 166 gp; Cost to Create: 86 gp + 7 XP.

EQUESTRIAN'S SPEAR

The magical properties of this +2 longspear make it suited for use on foot or on horseback.

When used by a character on foot, the equestrian's spear functions exactly like a longspear.

When used by a mounted character proficient with the heavy lance, the equestrian's spear is treated in all respects as a heavy lance.

Mounted characters not proficient in the heavy lance may still use the weapon as a longspear.

Caster Level: 10th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, phantom steed, polymorph any object; Market Price: 26,615 gp; Cost to Create: 13,615 gp + 1,040 XP.

ERYTHNUL'S SLAUGHTER

This +2 unholy morningstar is sacred to clerics of Erythnul, the god of slaughter.

Any cleric wielding Erythnul's slaughter can prepare spells as if he had access to the War domain in addition to his other domains.

Clerics who already have access to the War domain gain no additional benefit.

If for any reason the cleric loses possession of Erythnul's slaughter, all prepared spells from the War domain are lost, unless the cleric normally has access to that domain.

Caster Level: 11th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, creator must have access to War domain, unholy blight; Market Price: 72,308 gp; Cost to Create: 36,308 gp + 2,880 XP.

ETHEREAL BOLT

These +1 bolts, once fired, flicker between the Material Plane and Ethereal Plane.

This jumping between planes gives the bolts a hazy, insubstantial appearance.

Flickering between the planes gives the bolts several powers.

Although they provide no ability to see onto the Ethereal Plane, the bolts themselves affect ethereal creatures normally.

Furthermore, they can pass through solid objects.

For each 5 feet of solid material the bolt passes through, there's a 50% chance that the bolt is on the Material Plane when it passes, stopping the bolt and ending its flight.

All attacks with ethereal bolts have a 20% miss chance.

The planar flickering lasts only for one shot; if recovered intact after being fired, an ethereal bolt is thereafter treated as a normal +1 bolt.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, blink; Market Price: 797 gp; Cost to Create: 402 gp + 32 XP.

EVERBURNING CHAIN

On command, this +2 flaming spiked chain turns into a column of fire.

Like other flaming weapons, the fire does not harm the wielder.

As a standard action, the wielder can sweep the chain around her head, spreading flame in a 10-foot radius.

This attack deals 1d6 points of damage to creatures within the area of effect (Reflex half DC 13) and can cause flammable materials to ignite.

Trip attacks made with an everburning chain may ignite the target's clothing if it is flammable.

Caster Level: 10th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, burning hands, fireball; Market Price: 22,725 gp; Cost to Create: 11,525 gp + 896 XP.

FEY ARROW

This light, slender +1 arrow has a small point and brightly colored fletching.

On a successful hit, a pale glow surrounds the target.

The glow functions exactly like the faerie fire spell from a 5th-level caster, preventing an outlined target from gaining the benefits of concealment caused by darkness, blur, displacement, invisibility, or similar effects.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, faerie fire; Market Price: 297 gp; Cost to Create: 152 gp + 12 XP.

FELLSTONE

This +3 heavy pick is made entirely from stone, and its magical properties give its wielder great power over stone. Earth creatures struck with fellstone must succeed on a Fortitude save (DC 13) or be dazed until the beginning of the wielder's next action.

Whenever both the wielder and her opponent are touching the ground, fellstone grants a +1 bonus on attacks and damage.

If an opponent is airborne or waterborne, the wielder takes a -4 penalty on attacks and damage.

Furthermore, as long as the wielder is touching the ground, she can start a bull rush without provoking an attack of opportunity.

The combat modifiers given above for melee attacks also apply to the wielder's opposed Strength check when attempting a bull rush.

Caster Level: 12th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, stone shape, summon monster VI; Market Price: 32,308 gp; Cost to Create: 16,308 gp + 1,280 XP.

FLAIL OF SHADOWS

Made from forge-blackened iron and darkwood, this +2 shadowstrike heavy flail has a powerful bond with the Plane of Shadow.

In addition to its shadowstrike ability, the flail of shadows allows its wielder to cast dimension door with a command word (as the spell from an 11th-level caster, but the dimension door must originate and terminate in an area of shadow).

Caster Level: 11th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, dimension door, shadow conjuration, shadow walk; Market Price: 48,155 gp; Cost to Create: 24,235 gp + 1,914 XP.

FLAMESHROUD AXE

Made from an incredibly hard red metal (hardness 15, 30 hp), this +3 flaming battleaxe can wrap its wielder in a protective shield of fire.

Once per day, the flameshroud axe can produce an effect similar to the fire shield spell (chill version) from an 11th-level sorcerer.

Activating the axe's fire shield ability is a full-round action that provokes an attack of opportunity.

Caster Level: 13th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, fireball, fire shield; Market Price: 51,510 gp; Cost to Create: 25,910 gp + 2,048 XP.

FOE REAPER

This +2 mighty cleaving scythe can cut through foes three at a time.

During extra attacks granted by the Cleave feat or the scythe's mighty cleaving ability, its threat range is doubled. Foe reaper is treated as a keen weapon for purposes of spells interacting with it, meaning it cannot be the target of keen edge or bless weapon, nor can it receive the vicious ability.

Caster Level: 15th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, divine power, keen edge; Market Price: 32,318 gp; Cost to Create: 16,318 gp + 1,280 XP.

FORCE WEB

This +4 net is made of pure magical force and can hold even incorporeal creatures.

A creature entangled in a force web can attempt to escape as a full-round action (Escape Artist check, DC 20).

The net has a hardness of 10 and 30 hit points and can be burst with a DC 40 Strength check as a full-round action.

Caster Level: 13th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, forcecage; Market Price: 72,320 gp; Cost to Create: 36,320 gp + 2,880 XP.

FORETELLING BLADE

Otherwise unadorned, the pommel of this +2 longsword is carved to look like a large, unblinking eye.

Once per day, the possessor of the foretelling sword may roll 1d20.

Once over the course of the ensuing day, the wielder may choose to use the result of that roll instead of making an attack roll.

To use this ability, the wielder must announce this choice before making the attack roll.

For the chosen attack, the wielder simply uses the result of the earlier 1d20 roll as if that were his attack roll.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, augury; Market Price: 18,315 gp; Cost to Create: 9,315 gp + 720 XP.

FROST SHARD DAGGER

This completely translucent +1 dagger radiates cold and looks as if it is sculpted out of ice.

Despite its appearance, the dagger is as resilient as normal steel until used to make a successful melee or ranged attack.

The first successful attack made with a frost shard dagger causes it to explode in a burst of cold energy, dealing 3d6 points of cold damage to everyone within 5 feet of the target.

All creatures other than the original target may attempt a Reflex save (DC 17) to take half damage.

The frost shard dagger is destroyed after one successful attack.

Caster Level: 3rd; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, cone of cold; Market Price: 1,052 gp; Cost to Create: 677 gp + 30 XP.

GHOST HANDS

These roughly wrought iron gauntlets remain a dull, dark gray regardless of how often they are polished.

Despite their crude appearance, ghost hands are a surprisingly light pair of +1 ghost touch gauntlets.

While wearing ghost hands, the wielder is immune to the magic jar spell and a ghost's malevolence ability.

Ghost hands provide a +1 enhancement bonus on attack and damage rolls but attacks with them are still considered unarmed for purposes of provoking attacks of opportunity.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, plane shift, protection from evil; Market Price: 18,302 gp; Cost to Create: 9,302 gp + 720 XP.

GLAIVE OF TORMENT

This +1 wounding glaive gains additional power in the hands of a barbazu or any other creature with a natural wounding ability.

Whenever such a creature wields the weapon, those struck by it are racked with pain, taking a -4 penalty on attack rolls, skill checks, and ability checks, for 3 rounds.

A successful Fortitude save (DC 16) lessens the penalty to -2.

Caster Level: 10th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, bestow curse, Mordenkainen's sword; Market Price: 74,308 gp; Cost to Create: 37,308 gp + 2,960 XP.

GNOME STEAM BOW

Covered with levers and small repositories for alchemical fluids, and strung with a system of pulleys, this +1 shortbow offers several advantages.

The wielder can choose from the following three options, each requiring a move-equivalent action to activate.

The wielder can remove any penalty on damage rolls from a low Strength score for the next shot from the bow.

The wielder can add his Intelligence modifier to the attack roll for the next shot from the bow.

Finally, the wielder can double the range increment of the bow for the next shot from it.

None of these actions provokes an attack of opportunity.

If the wielder spends the time, it's possible to set up a shot that benefits from all three abilities.

Caster Level: 8th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, bull's strength, clairaudience/clairvoyance, true strike; Market Price: 18,530 gp; Cost to Create: 9,430 gp + 728 XP.

GNOME'S TOOLKIT

Covered in hooks, small sliding compartments, and tiny nooks perfect for potion vials, this +2 light crossbow can hold several small items.

The gnome's toolkit stores a set of masterwork lockpicks, a magnifying glass, and a small silver mirror.

These items are magically bonded to the crossbow, and they disappear if taken more than 20 feet from it.

Items removed like this reappear within the crossbow after 1 minute.

The gnome's toolkit can also hold up to six more small items such as keys or potion vials.

No item stored in the crossbow can be more than 2 inches long or weigh more than 6 ounces.

Additional stored items do not become bonded to the crossbow and function normally if removed.

While holding a gnome's toolkit, the wielder can retrieve any item stored in the crossbow as a free action.

Caster Level: 11th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Leomund's secret chest; Market Price: 10,335 gp; Cost to Create: 5,335 gp + 400 XP.

GRASPING DAGGER

In addition to its main blade, this +3 keen punching dagger has two large barbs that project from the dagger's hilt.

On a successful critical hit, these barbs can hook into the target's flesh, holding it fast.

After a successful critical hit, the wielder may make a grapple attempt as a free action.

If successful, the target is hooked on the dagger's barbs. While grappling in this manner, the wielder can attack with the grasping dagger normally.

Caster Level: 10th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, hold person, keen edge; Market Price: 50,302 gp; Cost to Create: 25,302 gp + 2,000 XP.

GRAY SNARE

The rubbery gray strands of this +1 net are tightly woven and give off a tangy, acidic scent.

Although the gray snare lacks the hooks of other combat nets, its sticky strands are just as hard to escape.

Once per day on command, the net transforms into a gray ooze.

If the net transforms while it entangles a target, the ooze is considered to have grappled the target.

The transformation takes a full round, and once complete the ooze acts on the wielder's initiative.

The wielder has no special ability to control the ooze but can transform it back into a net with a command word.

See the Ooze entry in the Monster Manual for more information on the gray ooze.

If killed while in ooze form, the net is destroyed.

Caster Level: 10th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, summon monster IV; Market Price: 74,320 gp; Cost to Create: 37,320 gp + 2,960 XP.

GRUUMSH'S REVENGE

This +3 longspear is greatly prized by clerics of Gruumsh. The wielder of Gruumsh's revenge can take a standard action and expend a rebuke undead attempt to imbue the spear with divine power.

If the next successful attack with the longspear hits an elf, the spear deals an additional 1d6 points of divine damage per point of the wielder's Charisma bonus (minimum 1d6).

Caster Level: 13th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, creator must be an evil humanoid with the ability to rebuke undead, unholy blight; Market Price: 50,305 gp; Cost to Create: 25,305 gp + 2,000 XP.

GUARDIAN BOW

The magical properties imbued in this +2 mighty (+3) composite longbow protect its wielder when enemies are near. The guardian bow provokes an attack of opportunity only from the target of its attack.

If someone fires the guardian bow while surrounded by enemies, only the foe shot at may take an attack of opportunity, even if other opponents threaten the archer.

Caster Level: 14th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, shield; Market Price: 50,700 gp; Cost to Create: 25,700 gp + 2,000 XP.

GUERRILLA SPEAR

This +2 shortspear is extremely effective when used in ambush.

Whenever the wielder makes a successful attack against an opponent who is denied his Dexterity bonus to Armor

Class, the guerrilla spear deals an additional 2d6 points of damage.

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, invisibility; Market Price: 32,302 gp; Cost to Create: 16,302 gp + 1,280 XP.

GUISARME OF LONG FALLS

The curved blade at the end of this +2 guisarme is hooked even more than that of a normal guisarme and can cause particularly jarring falls.

Whenever the wielder uses the guisarme of long falls to make a successful trip attempt, the target must succeed on a Fortitude save (DC 16) or be stunned for one round.

Caster Level: 11th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, telekinesis; Market Price: 18,309 gp; Cost to Create: 9,309 gp + 720 XP.

HALBERD OF VAULTING

This +2 halberd allows its wielder to make powerful leaping attacks.

The halberd of vaulting gives its wielder a +30 bonus on Jump checks and removes the usual maximums for jumping distance.

Whenever the wielder takes the charge action, she may attempt a vaulting charge.

If the wielder can make a running high jump at least 5 feet high during the charge, the charge attack deals double damage.

To make a vaulting charge, the wielder must have a clear path through the air to the target.

In an area with a low ceiling or overhanging obstructions, a vaulting charge might not be possible.

Caster Level: 11th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, jump; Market Price: 20,310 gp; Cost to Create: 10,310 gp + 800 XP.

HALFLING'S EXIT

These +2 sling bullets provide a ready cover for those needing a quick escape and are often carried by rogues in case such situations arise.

These gray sling bullets seem filled with swirls of thick, black fog, and their surface roils with constant motion.

On a successful hit, the bullet releases a billowing cloud of fog that fills a 30-foot radius with a fog cloud (as the spell from a 6th-level caster).

The fog lasts for 1 hour, although it can be dispersed by strong wind.

The cloud blocks all sight, including darkvision, beyond 5 feet.

A creature within 5 feet has one-half concealment (20% miss chance).

Creatures farther away have total concealment (50% miss chance and the attacker can't use sight to locate the target).

Each halfling's exit creates fog only once; bullets recovered intact are thereafter +2 sling bullets.

Caster Level: 6th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, creator must be a halfling, fog cloud; Market Price: 247 gp; Cost to Create: 127 gp + 10 XP.

HAMMER OF THE MAGESMITH

This +1 warhammer is useful when creating other magic weapons.

When used in the forging of another magical weapon, the hammer of the magesmith reduces the cost of the raw materials that must be supplied by 5%.

This reduction applies only to the gold piece cost of materials, not the XP requirement.

In addition, once per day the hammer of the magesmith can imbue another weapon with temporary magic power. This works exactly like the magic weapon spell from a 10th-level caster, including the requirement that the hammer of the magesmith touch its target.

Caster Level: 10th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, magic weapon; Market Price: 45,912 gp; Cost to Create: 23,112 gp + 1,824 XP.

HAMMER OF SACRIFICE

Heavier than other weapons of its type, this +2 warhammer weighs 16 pounds and is made entirely from a single piece of black iron ore.

At the beginning of each round, the wielder of the hammer of sacrifice can sacrifice up to 5 hit points.

Hit points sacrificed in this manner are then added to the damage of each successful attack made with the hammer until the beginning of the following round.

Hit points sacrificed to the hammer are treated as normal damage to the wielder.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, vampiric touch; Market Price: 32,312 gp; Cost to Create: 16,312 gp + 1,280 XP.

HAND OF HEIRONEOUS

This +3 longsword is greatly prized by paladins and clerics of Heironeous.

The wielder of the hand of Heironeous can take a standard action and expend a turn undead attempt to imbue the sword with divine power.

If the next successful attack by the sword hits an undead target, the sword deals an additional 1d6 points of divine damage for each point of the wielder's Charisma bonus (minimum 1d6).

Caster Level: 13th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, creator must have the turn undead ability, creator must be good, divine power, searing light; Market Price: 50,315 gp; Cost to Create: 25,315 gp + 2,000 XP.

HAVOC BLADE

This +3 keen chaotic greataxe is a powerful weapon of disorder.

In addition to its other properties, a havoc blade causes confusion (as the spell from a 5th-level caster) with a successful critical hit.

The target is allowed a Will save (DC 19) to avoid the confusion effect.

A target who fails the Will save is confused for 5 rounds.

An ungainly-looking weapon at best, a havoc blade is a swirl of three different metals, apparently only partly blended.

The shaft is also slightly twisted, as if warped by long exposure, although it can still be wielded without penalty.

Caster Level: 15th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, chaos hammer, confusion, keen edge, creator must be chaotic; Market Price: 98,320 gp; Cost to Create: 49,320 gp + 3,920 XP.

ICE TALON

With blades carved from the pale claws of an ancient white dragon, this +2 frost greataxe radiates cold.

The area within 5 feet of an ice talon is always 10 degrees cooler than the ambient temperature.

Even without the aura of cold, an ice talon's frosty nature is evident from its appearance; the pale dragon claws sit atop a haft of magically strengthened ivory, making the entire weapon an eerie shade of white.

An ice talon grants its wielder the ability to withstand cold as the endure elements (cold) spell from a 10th-level caster. In addition, the wielder's movement is never reduced due to snow or ice, and she never needs to make a Balance check to keep her footing on ice.

Although it is made from ivory, an ice talon has a hardness of 15 and 20 hit points due to its magical reinforcement.

Caster Level: 10th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, cone of cold; Market Price: 24,320 gp; Cost to Create: 12,320 gp + 960 XP.

INCANDESCENT SWORD

This +4 holy greatsword glows with a bright light (a 30-foot radius equivalent to a sunrod) when it is held by a character of chaotic good alignment.

It is the preferred weapon of ghaele eladrins.

Caster Level: 12th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, holy smite, light, creator must be chaotic good; Market Price: 72,400 gp; Cost to Create: 36,375 gp + 2,882 XP.

IOUN BLADE

This +1 dagger can hold any one ioun stone in a special socket in its pommel.

As long as the wielder holds the ioun blade, any stone held in the pommel affects her as if it were spinning around her head normally.

Placing or removing an ioun stone from the socket is a move-equivalent action that provokes an attack of opportunity.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, fabricate; Market Price: 6,302 gp; Cost to Create: 3,302 gp + 240 XP.

JAVELIN OF CHAIN LIGHTNING

This dangerous magic weapon becomes a bolt of chain lightning when thrown.

The character who throws the javelin chooses the primary target, but the secondary bolts arc to the nearest eleven creatures within 30 feet of the target.

The thrower has no control over the secondary bolts.

The primary bolt deals 11d6 points of damage to the target (Reflex half DC 19) and 5d6 points of damage to secondary targets (half with a successful save).

The javelin is consumed in the attack.

Caster Level: 11th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, chain lightning; Market Price: 3,301 gp; Cost to Create: 1,651 gp + 132 XP.

JAVELIN OF LIGHTNING, GREATER

When thrown, this javelin becomes a 10d6 lightning bolt. It is consumed in the attack.

Caster Level: 10th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, lightning bolt; Market Price: 1,501 gp; Cost to Create: 751 gp + 60 XP.

JAVELIN OF OBLITERATION

When thrown, this javelin becomes a disintegrator ray that functions as a disintegrate spell from a 15th-level caster. The wielder makes a touch attack using her normal ranged touch modifier to determine whether or not the ray hits. The javelin is consumed in the attack.

Caster Level: 15th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, disintegrate; Market Price: 9,301 gp; Cost to Create: 4,801 gp + 360 XP.

JAVELIN OF PRECISION

This +3 javelin has a long, narrow point and incredible balance.

When thrown, the javelin ignores cover bonuses to AC. This ability does not allow the wielder to make attacks that would otherwise not be possible, so total cover prevents attacks from the javelin of precision.

In addition to ignoring cover, the wielder never takes a penalty on her attack roll when throwing the javelin of precision into melee.

The javelin does not reduce the effects of concealment. Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, true strike; Market Price: 50,301 gp; Cost to Create: 25,301 gp + 2,000 XP.

KAMA OF PURE AIM

This +2 kama allows a wielder with great mental fortitude to ignore many effects that would disrupt his aim.

Each round, the wielder of the kama of pure aim can attempt a Wisdom check (DC 20).

If this check is successful, the wielder may ignore any miss chance created by concealment, including effects such as blur and invisibility, but not miss chances from other conditions such as incorporeality or the blink spell.

Although the kama of pure aim can potentially remove the miss chance from an invisible foe, the attacker must still target the correct space.

The wielder does not automatically know which space an invisible or otherwise concealed foe is in.

The weapon is otherwise identical to a +2 kama. Caster Level: 15th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, creator must have a Wisdom score of 20, true seeing; Market Price: 32,302 gp; Cost to Create: 16,302 gp + 1,280 XP.

KHOPESH OF THE LOYAL MINION

This +1 khopesh is a favored weapon of minions of Set (an evil god detailed in Deities and Demigods).

When the wielder changes into a form that has a natural claw attack (such as an animal form), the khopesh merges with the new form and grants its +1 enhancement bonus to one of the creature's claw attacks, as if the magic fang spell had been cast on the creature.

When the wielder returns to a form that uses weapons, the khopesh returns to its normal form and functionality as well.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, polymorph self or creator must have a shape-altering ability (including wild shape or alternate form); Market Price: 6,320 gp; Cost to Create: 3,320 gp + 240 XP.

KNIGHT'S SWORD

This +2 bastard sword is extremely effective from horseback. When riding a mount and performing the charge action, the wielder can double the damage dealt with the knight's sword during the attack.

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, phantom steed; Market Price: 18,335 gp; Cost to Create: 9,335 gp + 720 XP.

KUKRI OF CRIPPLING

The curved blade of this +2 kukri has been imbued with magic capable of laming a foe.

Anytime the wielder of the kukri of crippling scores a critical hit, the target's move rate is halved.

This reduction lasts for one day, until the creature is successfully treated with the Heal skill (DC 15), or until it receives at least 1 point of magical healing.

Creatures with multiple movement rates have only one of their movement rates reduced by each critical hit.

Roll randomly to determine which movement rate is affected.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, slow; Market Price: 18,308 gp; Cost to Create: 9,308 gp + 720 XP.

LANCE OF BRAVERY

As long as a mounted rider holds the lance of bravery, both she and her mount are immune to all fear effects.

The lance of bravery is otherwise identical to a +2 heavy lance.

Caster Level: 11th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, remove fear; Market Price: 30,310 gp; Cost to Create: 15,310 gp + 1,200 XP.

LANCE OF JOUSTING

This +3 light lance was created to put smaller riders on par with their larger counterparts.

When in the hands of a Small humanoid, the lance of jousting has a reach of 10 feet.

In all other respects, the weapon functions like a normal +3 light lance.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, enlarge; Market Price: 32,306 gp; Cost to Create: 16,306 gp + 1,280 XP.

LANCE OF MANGLING

This +2 heavy lance can destroy an opponent's shield with a successful critical hit.

If the wielder scores a successful critical hit against an opponent using a shield, the opponent's shield is torn away and ruined in addition to the attack's normal effect.

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, shatter; Market Price: 18,310 gp; Cost to Create: 9,310 gp + 720 XP.

LANCE OF THE UNENDING CHARGE

This +2 mighty cleaving heavy lance allows a charging wielder to plow through multiple foes.

Whenever the wielder takes the charge action, she gains the ability to move great distances between Cleave attempts.

Anytime during a charge that the wielder is granted an extra attack by the Cleave feat, she can continue moving in the direction of her charge up to the limit of her mount's movement before making that extra attack.

The same benefit applies to the extra attack granted by the weapon's mighty cleaving quality.

Caster Level: 13th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, expeditious retreat, haste; Market Price: 50,310 gp; Cost to Create: 25,310 gp + 2,000 XP.

LARETHIAN PROTECTOR

This +2 longbow is greatly prized by clerics of the elven god Corellon Larethian.

The wielder of the Larethian protector can take a standard action and expend a turn undead attempt to imbue the bow with divine power.

The next arrow from the bow that hits an evil humanoid deals an additional 1d6 points of divine damage per point of the wielder's Charisma bonus (minimum 1d6).

Caster Level: 13th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, creator must be an elf with the ability to turn undead, holy smite; Market Price: 50,375 gp; Cost to Create: 25,375 gp + 2,000 XP.

LIVING NET

This well-made +2 net seems to writhe of its own accord. The wielder of the living net can attack targets up to 20 feet away.

Any time a foe is entangled by the living net, the wielder may make a trip attack as a free action.

If the wielder is tripped during his own trip attempt, he may drop the living net's trailing cord to avoid being tripped.

Folding the living net is a move-equivalent action that provokes an attack of opportunity.

Caster Level: 11th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, animate objects; Market Price: 18,320 gp; Cost to Create: 9,320 gp + 720 XP.

MACE OF FORM

This +2 bane (shapechanger) light mace protects its wielder from shapechanging magic and can dispel such effects on others.

Any successful hit against a creature not in its natural form forces the target to succeed on a Fortitude save (DC 22) or return to its natural form.

This effect does nothing to prevent subsequent shapechanging effects.

In addition, the wielder of the mace of form cannot change shape.

While holding the mace of form, the wielder simply ignores the effects of all shapechanging magic, including self-targeting spells such as alter self.

Note that the mace of form does nothing to prevent illusory changes to appearance from taking effect, so spells like change self still function normally for the wielder.

Caster Level: 15th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, polymorph any object; Market Price: 100,312 gp; Cost to Create: 50,312 gp + 4,000 XP.

MACE OF THE SNAIL

This +2 heavy mace has an unadorned shiny metal head. Three times per day, the mace of the snail allows its wielder to cast slow as a 7th-level caster.

Targets must make a Will save (DC 14) to resist this effect.

In addition, whenever its wielder takes the total defense action, the mace grants an additional +2 bonus to Armor Class that stacks with all other bonuses.

Caster Level: 6th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, shield, slow; Market Price: 30,992 gp; Cost to Create: 15,612 gp + 1,224 XP.

MACE OF UNLIFE

This +3 heavy mace can bring the dead back as undead servants of its wielder.

Whenever the mace of unlife is used to deliver the killing blow to a creature, its wielder can cause that creature to rise as a zombie.

Using this ability is a full-round action.

Zombies raised in this manner are under the control of the mace's wielder.

Up to 20 Hit Dice of zombies may be controlled at any one time.

Any condition that would normally prevent a creature from being animated as a zombie prevents the mace of unlife from working as well.

Caster Level: 10th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, animate dead, control undead; Market Price: 138,312 gp; Cost to Create: 69,312 gp + 5,520 XP.

MACE OF VOICES

The bell-shaped head of the mace of voices produces several sonic effects, from peals of thunder to soothing tones that magically enhance the wielder's oratory.

This +2 thundering heavy mace allows clerics who wield it to channel divine energy to produce magically infused oratory.

Once per day, while holding the mace of voices, a cleric can give up one turn undead attempt to cast enthrall.

The spell is treated as if cast by the cleric himself, and the save DC and caster level are figured accordingly.

In addition, the mace of voices grants a +2 bonus on the wielder's Diplomacy checks to adjust a creature's attitude.

Caster Level: 13th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, blindness/deafness, enthrall; Market Price: 37,712 gp; Cost to Create: 19,012 gp + 1,496 XP.

MAGEBLADE

This +2 longsword of spell storing is covered in arcane symbols.

While holding a mageblade, the wielder can sacrifice a prepared arcane spell from memory as a move-equivalent action that does not provoke an attack of opportunity. Doing so removes the nonproficiency penalty (if any) for using the mageblade for a number of rounds equal to the sacrificed spell's level.

Furthermore, if the sacrificed spell dealt damage of a particular energy type, the mageblade deals an additional 1d6 points of damage of that energy type with each successful hit.

The energy damage lasts 1 round per level of the sacrificed spell.

If the sacrificed spell has more than one energy type associated with it, the mageblade wielder may choose the energy type.

Caster Level: 17th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, creator must be at least 15th level; Market Price: 50,315 gp; Cost to Create: 25,315 gp + 2,000 XP.

MANTICORE BLADE

The wavy blade of this +3 greatsword begins in an oversized hilt adorned with six spikes.

As an attack action, the wielder can launch one of the spikes from the sword at a ranged target.

The spikes have a range increment of 20 feet, deal 1d6 points of piercing damage, and grant a +1 enhancement bonus on attack and damage rolls.

When making a ranged attack with a spike, the wielder applies her Dexterity modifier to her attack roll and her Strength modifier to her damage roll.

Making a ranged attack with a spike provokes an attack of opportunity just like making a normal ranged attack.

The spikes crumble to dust 1 round after being launched from the sword.

The sword regenerates spikes at the rate of one per day.

Caster Level: 10th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, magic missile; Market Price: 20,350 gp; Cost to Create: 10,350 gp + 800 XP.

MAUL OF CONSTRUCTION

This Large +2 warhammer gives its wielder power over stone.

Because of its size, a maul of construction deals 2d6 base damage, weighs 16 pounds, and must be used in two hands by Medium-size characters.

The maul allows its wielder to cast stone shape and wall of stone once per day each, as the spells from a 15th-level caster.

Caster Level: 15th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, stone shape, wall of stone; Market Price: 51,824 gp; Cost to Create: 26,224 gp + 2,048 XP.

MIRROR BLADE

Shined to a mirror-bright brilliance, this +2 longsword sheds magical light in a 20-foot radius.

The light glimmers along the sword's blade and through the many gems in its hilt, creating a dazzling pattern of light.

All creatures that remain within 5 feet of the wielder for an entire round must succeed on a Will save (DC 15) or become dazzled by the sword's light.

Creatures without eyes are not susceptible to this effect. Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, flare, hypnotic pattern, light; Market Price: 38,315 gp; Cost to Create: 19,315 gp + 1,520 XP.

MOONSILVER SHARD

This silvery dart turns into a small bolt of magical force when thrown and unerringly strikes its target for 1d4+1 points of damage.

Once thrown, a moonsilver shard behaves in all manner like a dart from the magic missile spell, except that it has an effective range of 150 feet.

Attempting to throw a moonsilver shard at a target beyond this range causes the dart to transform and then dissipate harmlessly.

A moonsilver shard vanishes after one use.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, magic missile; Market Price: 50 gp; Cost to Create: 25 gp + 2 XP.

MORNINGSTAR OF EXHILARATION

The magical properties imbued in this +2 morningstar grant the wielder tremendous benefits if she is victorious in combat.

Whenever a successful hit from the morningstar of exhilaration drops a foe below 0 hit points, the wielder gains 6 temporary hit points and a +1 morale bonus on attack rolls and saving throws.

The temporary hit points and morale bonus last for 10 rounds.

Repeat triggering of this power does not stack.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, aid, bless; Market Price: 28,308 gp; Cost to Create: 14,308 gp + 1,120 XP.

NUNCHAKU OF MASTERY

Joined by a wrought-iron chain, the jet-black handles of this +2 nunchaku reflect almost no light.

By spending a full-round action twirling the nunchaku of mastery around his head and body, the wielder gains a +20 bonus on his next attack roll with the nunchaku, provided that the attack occurs on the following round.

In all other respects, this effect functions exactly like the true strike spell from a 7th-level caster.

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, true strike; Market Price: 22,302 gp; Cost to Create: 11,302 gp + 880 XP.

This +2 bane (gnoll) light flail is feared and revered by gnolls. Its head, carved to resemble the snarling visage of a gnoll, inspires obedience in any gnoll who sees it.

While holding the packmaster flail, the wielder gains a +10 bonus on Intimidate and Diplomacy checks made against gnolls.

Furthermore, once per day the wielder can summon 1d3 fiendish gnolls.

Caster Level: 10th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, flame blade, flame strike, or fireball; Market Price: 35,610 gp; Cost to Create: 18,810 gp + 1,400 XP.

PLAGUE SPREADER

The head of this perpetually filthy +3 heavy flail always appears dingy and ill cared for. Even the chain of the flail appears rusted and caked with small bits of long-rotten matter. Any successful hit from the plague spreader can potentially infect the target with filth fever.

A target hit by the plague spreader must succeed on a Fortitude save (DC 20) or be infected with the disease. The disease has an incubation period of 1d3 days, after which it deals 1d3 points of temporary Dexterity damage and 1d3 points of temporary Constitution damage. See Disease in Chapter 3 of the DUNGEON MASTER'S Guide for more information.

Creatures immune to disease are immune to this effect. Caster Level: 15th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, contagion; Market Price: 104,715 gp; Cost to Create: 52,515 gp + 4,176 XP.

Anytime the wielder hits the same target with the first attack made with her primary hand and the first offhand attack during the same round, the wielder may make an extra attack with the raking blade.

This extra attack is at -5 on the wielder's best attack bonus. Caster Level: 12th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, cat's grace, haste; Market Price: 116,700 gp; Cost to Create: 58,700 gp + 4,640 XP.

Created to deal with formations of polearm-wielding foes, this completely unadorned +2 glaive looks like a normal soldier's weapon.

When used in combat, its fearsome powers become evident.

While using a rankbreaker glaive, the wielder can act as if he had the Cleave feat.

A wielder who already has the Cleave feat gains no additional benefit.

Whenever the wielder takes a charge action using a rankbreaker glaive, he deals an additional 1d6 points of damage on each successful hit.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, righteous might; Market Price: 32,308 gp; Cost to Create: 16,308 gp + 1,280 XP.

RANSEUR OF READINESS

The magical properties of this +2 eager ranseur make it a deadly tool against charging foes. Any time the wielder gets an attack of opportunity against a charging foe, he may make that attack as if he had readied an action to set the ranseur against the charge.

Attacks set in this manner deal double damage to charging foes.

Anytime the wielder readies a ranseur of readiness against a charging foe, any attacks of opportunity triggered by that foe are also resolved normally.

This ability does not allow the wielder to make two double-damage attacks against one charging attacker in the same round.

RINGSWORD

The narrow end of this +3 longsword's hilt fits a magic ring perfectly.

While holding the ringsword, the wielder gains the benefit of the ring held on its hilt without compromising her ability to wear a magic ring on each hand.

Only one magic ring may be attached to the sword at a time.

Removing or attaching a ring to the ringsword is a move-equivalent action that does not provoke an attack of opportunity.

SAP OF STUNNING

With each stunning attack, the target must succeed on a Fortitude save (DC 15) or be stunned for 1 round.

Caster Level: 6th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, sound burst; Market Price: 32,301 gp; Cost to Create: 16,301 gp + 1,280 XP.

This irregular +1 club always has a leaf or three adorning it, and the wood retains the resiliency of a freshly cut branch. By spending a full-round action holding the sapling club to the ground, the wielder can cause the club to transform into a treant.

The treant acts as a summoned creature, attacking the nearest foe unless the wielder commands otherwise. A sapling club may spend up to 12 rounds as a treant each day, although the rounds need not be consecutive.

At any time, the wielder of the club can utter a command word to transform the sapling club back to its original form. If killed while in treant form, the sapling club is destroyed. Caster Level: 12th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, changestaff; Market Price: 32,540 gp; Cost to Create: 16,420 gp + 1,290 XP.

Two rounds later, the bonus increases to +4.

Two rounds after that, the bonus subsides to +2, and 2 rounds after that, the bonus fades entirely.

For the next 10 rounds, the wielder takes 2 points of temporary Strength damage every other round. Once the command word is uttered, the progression of increasing and decreasing Strength continues regardless of whether the wielder continues to use or even possess the scimitar of exertion.

Caster Level: 8th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, bull's strength; Market Price: 18,315 gp; Cost to Create: 9,315 gp + 720 XP.

Caster Level: 10th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, animate objects; Market Price: 12,350 gp; Cost to Create: 6,350 gp + 480 XP.

Self-Loading Crossbows and the Rapid Reload feat
If the wielder has the Rapid Reload feat described in Sword and Fist, loading a self-loading crossbow is a free action, and the weapon does not restrict the wielder's ability to make multiple attacks in a round.

SHADOW'S HAND

Although it is made from obsidian, the magical properties of this +2 wounding shuriken make it as strong as steel.

Once per day, the wielder can make a blinding strike with shadow's hand.

To make a blinding strike, the wielder makes a normal ranged attack with the weapon.

If the attack is successful, the target must succeed on a Fortitude save (DC 14) or be blinded as the blindness/deafness spell from a 10th-level caster.
Caster Level: 10th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, blindness/deafness, Mordenkainen's sword; Market Price: 30,301 gp; Cost to Create: 15,301 gp + 1,200 XP.

SKULLSHAKER HAMMER

This +2 warhammer is favored by dwarven clerics of Moradin.
If a skullshaker hammer is ever discovered in enemy hands, followers of Moradin go to great lengths to recover it.
The hammer delivers painful, ringing blows that are said to echo with the sounds of Moradin's forge.
Three times per day, a skullshaker hammer deals an additional 1d6 points of temporary Wisdom damage on a successful hit.
Caster Level: 6th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, creator must be a dwarf, spiritual weapon; Market Price: 18,312 gp; Cost to Create: 9,312 gp + 720 XP.

SKYBOW

This +2 longbow functions as a bane weapon against all earth creatures.
In addition, once per day the wielder may launch an arrow against any target known to be in range, and the arrow travels to the target around all forms of cover, even around corners.
This ability functions in all respects like the seeker arrow class feature of the 4th-level arcane archer, except that the wielder of a skybow must be under the open sky to use this ability.
Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, gust of wind, true strike; Market Price: 25,975 gp; Cost to Create: 13,175 gp + 1,024 XP.

SLING OF MISDIRECTION

This +1 bane (construct) sling temporarily robs constructs of their ability to follow their instructions.
Any construct hit by a bullet or stone from a sling of misdirection must succeed on a Will save (DC 12) or suffer the effects of the random action spell.
This ability affects even creatures otherwise immune to mind-influencing magic.
Caster Level: 4th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, random action; Market Price: 30,300 gp; Cost to Create: 15,300 gp + 1,200 XP.

SOLDIER'S REST

The magical properties of this +1 glaive are a great boon to anyone engaging in long marches, protracted battles, or other extended physical exertion.
While holding soldier's rest, the wielder ignores the effects of fatigue.
Anytime the wielder becomes fatigued, he does not take the penalties associated with the condition.
Although helpful, soldier's rest does not allow unending exertion.
If the character becomes exhausted, he takes the normal penalties associated with that condition.
Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, endurance; Market Price: 4,808 gp; Cost to Create: 2,558 gp + 180 XP.

SONGBLADE

Every move made with this +1 rapier fills the air with sweet sounds.
While holding songblade unsheathed, the sword's wielder gains a +2 enhancement bonus on Perform checks.
A bard wielding the songblade may use his bardic music abilities one additional time per day.
The blade is scored in a beautiful, intricate pattern, and air moving across this magic etching generates the music of the songblade.
Thus, the blade's musical qualities do not function underwater, in a vacuum, or in other environments where air cannot freely pass over the blade.
Caster Level: 8th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, creator must have the bardic music ability, sculpt sound; Market Price: 6,400 gp; Cost to Create: 3,360 gp + 243 XP.

SORCERER'S HAND

The stock of this +2 light crossbow has been carved to resemble a humanoid forearm ending in a closed hand with two outstretched fingers.

Despite its unusual appearance, this crossbow is a potent tool for casting ray spells.

If held and used as an additional arcane focus when casting a ray spell, the spell's effective caster level is increased by 1. This increase affects all aspects of the spell, including damage, range, and duration.

Furthermore, the sorcerer's hand grants a +2 enhancement bonus on attack rolls for rays.

Caster Level: 11th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, any ray spell; Market Price: 18,335 gp; Cost to Create: 9,335 gp + 720 XP.

SPEAR OF IMPALING

The barbed head of this +2 longspear holds foes fast once they have been run through.

After a successful critical hit, the wielder of a spear of impaling may make a grapple attempt as a free action.

If this grapple attempt succeeds, the wielder may then make a pin attempt as part of the same action.

Grapples and pins caused by a spear of impaling can be broken normally.

If a foe is grappled in this manner, but not pinned, the wielder can use subsequent attacks to attempt to deal damage or initiate a pin.

Opponents grappled by a spear of impaling can make an opposed grapple check to break the pin and escape the grapple, but not to deal damage or initiate pins of their own.

Caster Level: 10th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, hold person; Market Price: 32,305 gp; Cost to Create: 16,305 gp + 1,280 XP.

SPEAR OF THE HUNT

This shaft of this light +1 bane (animal) shortspear is eternally fresh, appearing to be newly cut wood.

The spear is tipped with a bone point rather than metal, but its magic ensures that it is no less effective than a typical spear.

When outdoors, the spear of the hunt grants its wielder the Track feat, if the wielder does not already have it.

The spear grants no bonus on Wilderness Lore or Search checks.

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, creator must have the Track feat; Market Price: 28,302 gp; Cost to Create: 14,302 gp + 1,120 XP.

SPEAR OF SKIRMISHING

This +2 returning halfspear grants its wielder superior speed in combat.

Any round in which the wielder throws the spear of skirmishing, he may add 10 feet to his speed.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, expeditious retreat, telekinesis; Market Price: 32,301 gp; Cost to Create: 16,301 gp + 1,280 XP.

SPELL SHIELD FALCHION

This +2 falchion is particularly effective against spellcasters. Any round in which the wielder takes the total defense action, spells targeting her reflect back at their caster.

This ability works exactly as if spell turning protecting against seven spell levels.

This protection applies only on rounds in which the wielder takes the total defense action and is renewed at the beginning of each such round.

Caster Level: 13th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, spell turning; Market Price: 38,708 gp; Cost to Create: 19,541 gp + 1,533 XP.

SPIDER'S NEST BULLET

This oddly shaped sling bullet consists of a tightly packed cluster of small spheres rather than one smooth mass.

On a successful hit, a spider's nest bullet creates a web, as the spell from a 7th-level caster, and releases 2d4 Small monstrous spiders.

The spiders move through the web freely and swarm over any creatures caught in it.

The spiders do not leave the web and are destroyed if it is. The spiders and the web last for 10 minutes.

Caster Level: 10th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, summon monster III, web; Market Price: 1,057 gp; Cost to Create: 532 gp + 42 XP.

SPINNING BLADE

This +2 returning throwing scimitar is ideal for knocking opponents' weapons out of their hands.

In addition to making normal attacks, the wielder can make a special ranged disarm attack with the spinning blade.

This functions exactly like a melee disarm attempt except that it does not provoke an attack of opportunity.

The spinning blade does nothing to prevent attacks of opportunity that the wielder provokes for other reasons, such as attacking with a ranged weapon while threatened in melee.

Ranged disarm attempts with the spinning blade incur the normal penalties for range.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, magic stone, telekinesis; Market Price: 50,315 gp; Cost to Create: 25,315 gp + 2,000 XP.

STAFF OF BALANCE

Longer and thinner than most, this +2 quarterstaff improves the wielder's sense of equilibrium.

Any round in which the wielder holds the staff of balance in both hands and does not make a melee attack, the staff grants a +10 enhancement bonus on Balance checks.

While holding the staff in this manner, the wielder can move at his full movement rate without incurring penalties on Balance checks made during that round.

In addition, the wielder gains a +4 enhancement bonus on Strength checks made to resist being tripped.

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, cat's grace; Market Price: 26,600 gp; Cost to Create: 13,600 gp + 1,040 XP.

STAFF OF DISCIPLINE

This +2 lawful quarterstaff reinforces a monk's martial abilities.

While wielding the staff of discipline, a monk may make attacks using her better unarmed rate.

She can use the staff of discipline as a double weapon and still get the benefit of her increased rate of attacks, but she takes all of the normal penalties while doing so.

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, creator must be lawful, order's wrath; Market Price: 50,600 gp; Cost to Create: 25,600 gp + 2,000 XP.

STAFF OF MEMORY

More the tool of a wizard than a warrior, this sturdy +1 quarterstaff can enhance the memory of its wielder.

Once per day, the wielder can lose a prepared spell from memory in order to recall a spell of lower level that she has already cast.

The recalled spell is treated exactly as if the spell caster had prepared it normally.

Exchanging prepared spells in this manner is a standard action that does not incur an attack of opportunity.

Caster Level: 17th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, creator must be at least 12th level, Rary's mnemonic enhancer; Market Price: 32,600 gp; Cost to Create: 16,600 gp + 1,280 XP.

STANDARD OF ULEK

Each side of this +2 mithral dwarven waraxe is engraved with the red axe symbol of the Principality of Ulek.

Dwarves allied with the wielder gain a +1 morale bonus on their attack rolls as long as they stay within 10 feet of the wielder.

The wielder does not benefit from the morale bonus.

Caster Level: 11th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, bless; Market Price: 23,830 gp; Cost to Create: 15,830 gp + 640 XP.

STIRGE BOLT

These +3 bolts are hollow tubes designed to draw out the blood of the target.

Each has a metal tip, hollow like the rest of the bolt, with thin flanges molded to look like the double wings of a stirge.

The round after a successful hit, the bolt begins to drain the target's blood, dealing 1d4 points of temporary Constitution damage each round until destroyed.

As a Tiny wooden weapon, each stirge bolt has a hardness of 5 and 1 hit point.

While draining blood from a target, the bolt has an AC of 12 (+2 size).

Stirge bolts that miss their targets are consumed.

Caster Level: 12th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, poison; Market Price: 1,007 gp; Cost to Create: 507 gp + 40 XP.

STONE SPEAR

Made entirely from magically augmented stone, this +2 shortspear weighs 10 pounds.

Because of its weight and unwieldy nature, the stone spear has a range increment of only 10 feet.

A stone spear deals double damage against any creatures with the Air subtype on a successful hit.

If a wielder standing on the ground uses a ready action to set the stone spear against a charge, it deals triple rather than double damage.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, wall of stone; Market Price: 32,302 gp; Cost to Create: 16,302 gp + 1,280 XP.

SUMMONING ARROW

The head of a summoning arrow is sculpted to look like a bird of prey, and the fletching is always made of feathers from the same bird.

When launched from a bow, a summoning arrow transforms into an eagle (see the Animals section of the Monster Manual) and attacks the foe that the arrow was fired at.

If not launched at a specific target, a summoning arrow turns into an eagle when it's 30 feet away from the wielder, then attacks the nearest creature.

The eagle remains for 5 rounds or until slain, whichever comes first.

After 5 rounds, the eagle flies away.

It does not return to arrow form.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, summon monster I; Market Price: 257 gp; Cost to Create: 132 gp + 10 XP.

SWORD OF AVOIDANCE

Also called the coward's sword, this +3 longsword grants its wielder a better chance to avoid mishaps of all kinds.

Whenever the wielder takes the total defense action while holding the sword of avoidance, he gains a +4 luck bonus to AC and on all saving throws.

This bonus lasts until the beginning of the wielder's next turn.

Caster Level: 10th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, bless; Market Price: 38,315 gp; Cost to Create: 19,315 gp + 1,520 XP.

SWORD OF COUNTERING

This +1 longsword is feared by spellcasters for its ability to disrupt their spells.

Three times per day, a sword of countering can use dispel magic to counterspell, as the spell from a 13th-level caster.

The sword of countering is incapable of dispelling existing effects.

Caster Level: 13th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, dispel magic; Market Price: 33,905 gp; Cost to Create: 17,110 gp + 1,344 XP.

SWORD OF CRYPTS

The blade of this elegant +2 holy longsword is inscribed with runes and symbols sacred to the clergy of Heironeous.

While holding the sword of crypts, a cleric gains one extra turn undead attempt per day.

In addition, if the wielder is a cleric of Heironeous, the sword provides a +2 enhancement bonus on the wielder's turn damage on all attempts to turn undead.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, creator must be good, holy smite; Market Price: 42,315 gp; Cost to Create: 21,315 gp + 1,680 XP.

SWORD OF THE DIPLOMAT

The gold hilt of this +3 defending short sword is elaborately carved to resemble the folded wings of a bird. The possessor of this ornate blade is shielded by a constant aura of magical force.

This force effect functions exactly like a permanent version of the mage armor spell, providing a +4 armor bonus to the possessor's AC.

Like the mage armor spell, this bonus applies to incorporeal attacks.

Caster Level: 15th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, mage armor, shield; Market Price: 64,310 gp; Cost to Create: 32,310 gp + 2,560 XP.

SWORD OF ESCAPE

This +2 short sword allows its user to escape almost any confining situation.

For up to 10 rounds per day, the wielder can act normally regardless of magical effects that impede movement.

This power is similar to the granted power of the Travel domain in that the effect occurs automatically as soon as it applies, lasts until it runs out or is no longer needed, and can operate multiple times per day up to the total daily limit of rounds.

In addition, when used against a creature or object holding the wielder, the sword of escape grants an additional +1 bonus on attack and damage.

The sword of escape can be used to attack in a grapple even if it is not a light weapon for the wielder (see Grapple in Chapter 8 of the Player's Handbook).

Caster Level: 10th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, freedom of movement; Market Price: 88,310 gp; Cost to Create: 44,155 gp + 3,532 XP.

SWORD OF GRACEFUL STRIKES

This +3 short sword allows graceful wielders to deal extra damage based on agility, not brute force.

All melee attacks made with the sword of graceful strikes add the wielder's Dexterity modifier to damage rather than his Strength modifier.

Furthermore, an unsuccessful disarm attempt made with the sword of graceful strikes does not allow the target a chance to disarm the wielder.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Tenser's transformation; Market Price: 72,310 gp; Cost to Create: 36,310 gp + 2,880 XP.

SWORD OF JUDGMENT

This +2 lawful longsword prevents those near it from lying. Up to three times per day, the wielder may utter a command word and cause the sword to emit a zone of truth. Creatures coming within 25 feet of the sword of judgment must succeed on a Will save (DC 13) or be unable to speak any deliberate and intentional lie.

Caster Level: 13th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, creator must be lawful, order's wrath, zone of truth; Market Price: 43,115 gp; Cost to Create: 21,715 gp + 1,712 XP.

SWORD OF THE MAMMOTH

This +2 greatsword grants its wielder an enhanced ability to withstand blows.

Anyone holding a sword of the mammoth gains 6 temporary hit points.

These hit points are added to the wielder's maximum and current totals.

Unlike other temporary hit points, the bonus hit points supplied by the sword of the mammoth are not lost first.

Instead, should the wielder ever lose hold of the sword, the hit points are subtracted from both his maximum and current total.

The only way to regain these hit points in such a situation is to regain the sword.

Caster Level: 11th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, endurance; Market Price: 18,350 gp; Cost to Create: 9,350 gp + 720 XP.

SWORD OF OPPORTUNITY

This +2 longsword allows its wielder to take advantage of openings in its opponent's defenses.

A sword of opportunity grants its wielder the ability to make one additional attack of opportunity per round.

This ability stacks with the Combat Reflexes feat, but any condition that would prevent that feat from being used also prevents the additional attack of opportunity from the sword.

Caster Level: 6th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, cat's grace; Market Price: 18,315 gp; Cost to Create: 9,315 gp + 720 XP.

SWORD OF READINESS

The wielder of this +2/+2 two-bladed sword can anticipate foes' movements and attack accordingly.

When readying an action to attack with the sword of readiness, the wielder can ready a full attack action.

The wielder can do nothing else in the turn she readies the action.

Caster Level: 10th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, haste; Market Price: 36,700 gp; Cost to Create: 18,700 gp + 1,440 XP.

SWORD OF RETRIBUTION

This +3 bastard sword allows the wielder to return blows against successful attackers.

Whenever the wielder is wounded in melee combat, the sword of retribution adds a +2 morale bonus on both the attack and damage rolls of the wielder's next attack, as long as that attack is directed against the opponent who damaged him.

The bonus lasts for only 1 round after the wielder is struck, and it is lost if the wielder does not attack that foe with his next attack action.

If more than one foe strikes the wielder in melee combat in a round, the bonus applies only to attacks against the source of his most recent injury.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, righteous might; Market Price: 72,335 gp; Cost to Create: 36,335 gp + 2,880 XP.

SWORD OF SANCTUARY

A +2 longsword, the sword of sanctuary offers its wielder temporary protection when in battle. Once per day, the sword of sanctuary can create a sanctuary effect centered on the sword (as the spell heightened to 3rd level by a 5th-level caster).

While protected by the sword's sanctuary, any opponent attempting to attack the wielder must succeed on a Will save (DC 14) to do so.

In addition, the sword can cast an obscuring mist spell once per day (heightened to 3rd level by a 5th-level caster).

If the wielder drops or otherwise loses possession of the sword of sanctuary, these effects cease to function.

Caster Level: 6th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, obscuring mist, sanctuary; Market Price: 19,115 gp; Cost to Create: 9,715 gp + 752 XP.

SWORD OF THE SOLARS

This awesome weapon is a Large +5 dancing vorpal bastard sword.

It always shines light equivalent to a torch (20-foot radius). This weapon's high effective enhancement bonus makes it an epic weapon, beyond the reach of most player characters.

The Epic Level Handbook has rules for creating such weapons.

Caster Level: 18th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor, animate objects, death spell, keen edge; Market Price: 3,920,335 gp; Cost to Create: 1,960,335 gp + 49,200 XP.

SWORD OF VERSATILITY

As a move-equivalent action that does not provoke an attack of opportunity, the wielder can transform this +2/+2 two-bladed sword into two +1 longswords.

Recombining the swords is also a move-equivalent action. Both halves of the sword of versatility function exactly like normal +1 longswords when separated from each other.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, make whole, shatter; Market Price: 36,700 gp; Cost to Create: 18,700 gp + 1,440 XP.

SWORD OF ZEAL

This +2 holy bastard sword is doubly effective in the hands of a paladin.

Attacks with the sword of zeal ignore outsiders' damage reduction.

In addition, paladins wielding the sword of zeal can channel their positive energy from their lay on hands ability through the sword against evil outsiders and undead. When channeling the ability in this way, the paladin can give up points of her daily healing allotment in order to add an equivalent amount of damage to her next attack with the sword of zeal.

The paladin decides how many points of lay on hands to use in this manner after the attack hits.

The attack with the sword of zeal is always a regular melee attack, dealing normal damage in addition to the channeled energy from lay on hands.

Creatures other than evil outsiders and undead are not affected by the channeled energy.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, creator must be good, bless weapon, holy smite; Market Price: 72,335 gp; Cost to Create: 36,335 gp + 2,880 XP.

THIRSTING BLADE

This +4 longsword can dehydrate those it strikes. Whenever the wielder scores a successful critical hit, the thirsting blade deals an additional 1d6 points of subdual damage.

This damage cannot be recovered unless the victim first imbibes at least 1 quart of water.

Creatures who take subdual damage from a thirsting blade are also considered fatigued (see Environment in Chapter 3 of the DUNGEON MASTER'S Guide).

Outsiders and creatures immune to critical hits are immune to this subdual damage.

Caster Level: 12th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, disintegrate; Market Price: 72,315 gp; Cost to Create: 36,315 gp + 2,880 XP.

TOURNEY LANCE

This +2 lawful heavy lance is prized by any who wish to fight without killing their opponents.

If the wielder of the tourney lance strikes to deal subdual rather than normal damage, she takes no attack penalty.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, creator must be lawful, hold person, order's wrath; Market Price: 50,310 gp; Cost to Create: 25,310 gp + 2,000 XP.

TRIDENT OF THE DEPTHS

This +1 trident allows its wielder to move through water with ease.

While holding a trident of the depths, the wielder can swim at a speed of 30 feet.

When submerged in water of any kind, the trident gains an additional +1 bonus on attack and damage.

When submerged in ocean water, this bonus increases to +2; the bonus for being underwater stacks with the trident's enhancement bonus.

Caster Level: 6th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, water walk; Market Price: 8,315 gp; Cost to Create: 4,315 gp + 320 XP.

TRUESTONE HAMMER

This utilitarian +2/+1 gnome hooked hammer is useful as a tool as well as a weapon.

Three times per day, when in contact with an illusion or an object that is the target of an Illusion spell, the hammer can dispel magic (as the spell cast by a 15th-level caster, except that it affects only spells from the school of Illusion).

Once per day, a truestone hammer can be used to cast stone shape, as the spell from a 15th-level caster.

Caster Level: 15th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, dispel magic, stone shape; Market Price: 51,120 gp; Cost to Create: 25,870 gp + 2,020 XP.

TWIN BLADE

Each side of this +3 guisarme's blade is etched with the image of a miniscule guisarme.

Twice per day, the wielder of the twin blade can create a spiritual weapon (as the spell from an 8th-level caster). The spiritual weapon has the +6 attack bonus of an 8th-level cleric, and the wielder of the twin blade directs it as a free action.

Only one of a twin blade's weapon counterparts can be in existence at one time.

Creating the second always causes the first to disappear harmlessly.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, spiritual weapon; Market Price: 29,829 gp; Cost to Create: 15,069 gp + 1,181 XP.

VANISHING BLADE

A vanishing blade is a +3 rapier that allows its wielder to travel short distances instantaneously.

Once per day, after a successful melee attack, the wielder of the vanishing blade may transfer himself instantaneously to any spot within 800 feet.

This effect functions exactly as the dimension door spell from a 10th-level caster.

Caster Level: 10th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, dimension door; Market Price: 47,120 gp; Cost to Create: 23,720 gp + 1,872 XP.

VIGILANT HALBERD

Each side of this +4 defending halberd is etched with the faint image of a disembodied eye hovering over an unadorned shield.

The vigilant halberd is a powerful weapon of good. When a paladin uses her smite evil ability and successfully attacks with a vigilant halberd, the smite deals 2 points of damage per level instead of 1 point of damage per level.

Caster Level: 12th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, creator must be good, holy word, shield or shield of faith; Market Price: 72,310 gp; Cost to Create: 36,155 gp + 732 XP.

VIPER WHIP

This +2 whip is made of braided pieces of multicolored leather cut to look like the scaly skin of a snake.

On command, the tip of the weapon transforms into the head of a Tiny viper.

While transformed, the weapon delivers poison with each successful melee attack.

The poison deals 1d6 points of temporary Constitution damage (both initial and secondary).

Struck opponents must succeed on a Fortitude save (DC 11) to resist the poison.

The weapon can remain transformed for a total of 10 rounds each day, and these need not be consecutive.

Caster Level: 15th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, polymorph any object, summon nature's ally I; Market Price: 38,301 gp; Cost to Create: 19,301 gp + 1,532 XP.

WARRENGUARD

The hilt of this well-crafted +2 short sword has been shaped to resemble a heavily armored gnome soldier standing at attention.

Small characters wielding warrenguard underground gain a +1 morale bonus on their melee attack damage for each ally within 5 feet.

Warrenguard also helps its wielder coordinate blows with companions.

If the wielder and an ally flank an opponent, the wielder of a warrenguard gains a +4 flanking bonus on his attack roll instead of the usual +2 bonus.

Caster Level: 8th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, bles; Market Price: 40,310 gp; Cost to Create: 20,310 gp + 1,600 XP.

WEAPON EATER

This +3 club can cause most metal weapons to instantly rust away.

In order to activate the rusting ability, the wielder of a weapon eater must attack his opponent's weapon.

Unless the wielder has the Sunder feat, this provokes an attack of opportunity from the target.

If the wielder succeeds in striking a metal weapon in this manner, the target must succeed on a Fortitude save (DC 16) or the struck weapon instantly crumbles to dust.

Magic weapons struck in this manner provide a bonus equivalent to their enhancement bonus on their wielder's saving throw.

After 50 uses of the rusting ability, a weapon eater crumbles to dust itself.

Caster Level: 10th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, rusting grasp; Market Price: 58,300 gp; Cost to Create: 29,300 gp + 2,320 XP.

WHIRLING AXE

This +2 greataxe gives its wielder the ability to make tremendous, whirling attacks.

Once per day, the wielder of a whirling axe can make an attack that has a chance of striking all opponents within 5 feet.

This functions like the Whirlwind Attack feat and requires a full action.

Instead of making his regular attacks, the wielder instead makes one melee attack at his full base attack bonus against each adjacent opponent.

Caster Level: 11th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, haste; Market Price: 18,320 gp; Cost to Create: 9,320 gp + 720 XP.

WHISPERBLADE

Three times per day, the wielder of this +4 greataxe can make a special silent attack.

If the attack hits, the target must make a successful Will save (DC 14) or be affected by silence (as the spell heightened to 3rd level by a 5th-level caster).

If the attack misses, the use is wasted.

Otherwise plain, a whisperblade's sturdy blade bears stylized dwarven runes that read, "Let dissenting voices be still".

Caster Level: 12th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, silence; Market Price: 48,520 gp; Cost to Create: 24,420 gp + 1,928 XP.

BOOK OF EXALTED DEEDS (3.5)

BOW OF THE SOLARS

Strong necromancy; CL 13th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, finger of death; Price 100,100 gp; Cost to Create 50,500 gp + 3,968 XP.

CELESTIAL BLADE

This Large +3 bastard sword is the favored weapon of planetars.

It always shines light equivalent to a torch (20-foot radius, with shadowy illumination out to a range of 40 feet), and its blade is typically engraved with the symbol of the deity served by the planetary.

Moderate evocation; CL 9th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor; Price 18,335 gp; Cost to Create 9,335 gp + 720 XP.

CELESTIAL MACE

This +3 disruption heavy mace is the favored weapon of astral devas.

It always shines light equivalent to a torch (20-foot radius, with shadowy illumination out to a range of 40 feet).

Strong transmutation; CL 14th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, disrupting weapon; Price 50,312 gp; Cost to Create 25,312 gp + 2,000 XP.

DART OF THE PHOENIX

This red and gold +1 returning dart has a tail made of phoenix feathers.

Throwing the dart requires a sacrifice of 1d4 points of temporary Strength damage.

However, any creature struck by the dart, regardless of whether it takes damage, must succeed on a DC 20 Fortitude save or be instantly slain and reduced to a small pile of ashes.

If the save succeeds, the creature takes 13d6 points of fire damage instead.

If a creature makes its saving throw but is slain by the damage, it is reduced to a pile of ashes as well.

Any creature reduced to ashes by the dart reforms after 2d6 rounds, appearing in the exact spot where it died and in whatever state it was before being incinerated.

Although damage from the actual dart remains, all fire damage is instantly restored.

Creatures immune to fire take no fire damage and are not incinerated.

Fire resistance applies to damage dealt if a creature makes its Fortitude save.

Strong necromancy [fire, good]; CL 13th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, phoenix fire; Price 99,400 gp plus 5 sp; Cost to Create 49,900 gp plus 5 sp + 3,960 XP.

DEMONDOOM

Favored by dwarven foes of the tanar'ri, this +2 holy demon bane warhammer is fashioned from cold iron with a head shaped like two clenched fists.

Once per day, the wielder can make a blinding strike against a demon.

The wielder must declare he is using the blinding strike before making the attack roll; if the attack hits and the hammer bypasses the demon's spell resistance with a successful level check (1d20+15), the demon is blinded as if by a power word blind spell.

If the attack misses or the blinding strike is used on a creature other than a demon, the blinding strike is wasted. Strong enchantment; CL 15th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, holy smite, power word blind, creator must be good; Price 51,512 gp; Cost to Create 25,912 gp + 2,048 XP.

HELLPIERCER

Tested in battle against the fiendish legions of Hell, this colorful +3 shocking burst arrow or +3 shocking burst bolt is treated as a silvered weapon for the purpose of overcoming damage reduction.

Furthermore, the head of the arrow or bolt contains a tiny reservoir of purified couatl venom (see Ravages and Afflictions in Chapter 3: Exalted Equipment).

This ravage harms only evil creatures, including outsiders that are normally immune to poison (such as devils).

Moderate evocation and transmutation; CL 11th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, silvered weapon; Price 4,007 gp per arrow or bolt; Cost to Create 2,007 gp + 40 XP per arrow or bolt.

NIGHTBLADE OF ARVANDOR

This +2 longsword appears to be made of black steel.

Within the blade, one can see miniscule twinkling stars. Upon command, the sword launches star-like pulses of light.

Each round, as a standard action, the nightblade can fire as many stars from its blade as the wielder has ranged attacks. Using the sword in this fashion provokes attacks of opportunity, and each star requires its own ranged touch attack roll.

A nonevil creature struck by a star takes 1d8 points of damage, half of which is nonlethal damage (rounded down).

An evil creature struck by a star takes 1d8 points of lethal damage.

The stars are magical force, not weapons, so they ignore damage reduction and incorporeality.

Moderate evocation [good]; CL 6th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, stars of Arvandor, creator must be good; Price 44,315 gp; Cost to Create 22,315 gp + 1,760 XP.

TRIPLE FLAIL

Yeenoghu wields a Huge +5 triple flail.

This is a unique exotic weapon.

Each time a hit is scored, roll 1d3 to see how many of the heads hit the target.

Each head deals 1d12+24 points of damage.

If more than one head hits the same target, the victim must make a Fortitude save (DC 17) or be paralyzed for 2d6 rounds.

If all three hit, the target must also make a Will save (DC 17) or be confused for 10 rounds.

Bel uses a Huge +3 flaming greatsword that gains a +5 enhancement bonus on attack and damage rolls when used against demons.

This is a Blood War legacy, and he has killed literally thousands of demons with it.

WARPSWORD

This +2 greatsword infects anyone it strikes with warp touch (see Diseases in Chapter 2) if the target fails a Fortitude save (DC 14).

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, contagion, cloak of chaos; Market Price: 78,350 gp; Weight: 10 lb.

CHAMPIONS OF RUIN (3.5)

FLENSING GAUNTLET

This hideous spiked gauntlet literally strips flesh from its target.

Description: A flensing gauntlet is a ragged-looking, tattered glove and armband of untanned humanoid skin.

When the item is activated, the fleshy tatters writhe, and bony hooks sprout from the palm and fingers.

It is otherwise a +1 spiked gauntlet.

Activation: As a move action, curl your gloved hand into a claw to activate the gauntlets.

The effect lasts for 1 round.

You can activate the gauntlets up to three times per day.

Effect: A successful attack with an activated gauntlet tears a strip of flesh away from a living corporeal opponent, causing pain and trauma that weakens as well as dealing damage.

This effect occurs even if the opponent is wearing armor. The opponent takes an extra 1d6 points of damage plus 1d4 points of Constitution damage and 1d4 points of Charisma damage.

A Fortitude saving throw negates the ability damage and halves the extra hit point damage.

Incorporeal creatures or creatures of a gaseous nature (such as air elementals) are not affected by this item.

Aura/Caster Level: Strong evocation; CL 12th.

Construction: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, flensing (see page 70 of the FORGOTTEN REALMS Campaign Setting), 8,805 gp, 680 XP, 17 days.

Weight: 1 lb.

Price: 17,305 gp.

ROD OF FOUR MOONS

The Rod of Four Moons functions as a +2 defending holy heavy mace.

The wielder can use each of the following spells once per day: Hold monster, lightning bolt, polymorph, and rope trick.

To use this relic, the wielder must worship Selûne and either sacrifice a 7th-level divine spell slot or have the True Believer feat plus at least 13 HD.

Moderate abjuration; CL 9th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Rod, Sanctify Relic, polymorph, hold monster, holy smite, lightning bolt, rope trick, shield or shield of faith, creature must be good; Price 151,112 gp.

CHAMPIONS OF VALOR (3.5)

DORNAVVER

Dornavver, also known as Demonbane, is a legendary scourge of fiends from the Lower Planes, borne by a succession of paladins to cleanse Faerûn of their taint. You carry a legendary weapon that makes even the most powerful demons quail.

History: Named for the master swordsmith who forged it, Dornavver is only rarely called by its true name.

Most sages and historians prefer the imagery that springs to mind when it is referred to as Demonbane, and many tales and fragments of lore surrounding the blade refer to it in this fashion.

The sword was fashioned in the Year of the Wrath Sword (275 DR) in response to the proliferation of evil artifacts created during the reign of the Qysar Shoon IV of the Shoon Imperium.

Relics such as Kuraltaar “the Demonshield”, Jaralth “the Fiendspike”, and Morthinmar “the Sallet of Sorrow” convinced the clergy of Ilmater that the faith required more than just prayer to combat the spread of evil throughout the South.

As recorded in the book Relics of the Righteous by the Sage of the Just Gods, Thontoros the Learned, the Feast of the Moon in Uktar of 275 DR saw a great, holy gathering at the ancient stone circle known as Allyn’s Anvil, where the legendary Demonsbane shields had been consecrated by the Just God himself more than two centuries before. Present were Archsufferer Irmakul “Bloodthews” of Memnon, Revered Brother Filithan of Bormton (a now-ruined village north of present-day Trademeet), Exalted Servant Volshur the Crooked, and a host of other senior priests of the Crying God.

On that night, their fervent prayers, interspersed with their cries of suffering, infused Dornavver with its mighty enchantments.

The sword was entrusted to the Holy Warriors of Suffering, a knightly order of paladins affiliated with the Church of Ilmater that at the time had its fortress at what is now known as Castle Dasaaik, east of the Purple Hills.

It is known that over one hundred winters after the sword was entrusted to the Holy Warriors, one of their number took up the blade and traveled north, coming to the tower of Ulmoon, “the Mage of Fangs”.

The wizard Ulmoon was a ruthless—some say insane—spellhurler who consorted with many denizens of the Lower Planes.

He established the small realm of Torsil in the lands north of the Cloud Peaks and grew fond of summoning fiends of all types to send against rival holds that bordered his realm, as well as the elves of Askavar, who had their homes in nearby Glimmerwood (the present-day Wood of Sharp Teeth).

The tale of how this unnamed paladin, wielding the mighty Dornavver, vanquished Torsil and the fiends therein is recounted in a ballad titled “Ulmoon’s Doom”, a popular song still sung by bards of the Sword Coast today.

After the fall of Torsil, the blade known as Demonbane was taken by its wielder west of the Heartlands and disappeared from recorded history for over a century.

It is known that during the tragic procession of battles that preceded the fall of Myth Drannor, many Dalesmen and more than a few War Wizards of Cormyr took up arms to assist the elves and other races who called the City of Songs home.

The court records of King Draxius the Neverdying of Cormyr recount how the ambitious Mindal Rowanmantle, a noble younger son, gathered a ragtag army of volunteers made up of Dalesfolk and warriors of Cormyr and led them to fight alongside the forces of Cormanthyr.

The only known description of this campaign is found in the diary of the War Wizard Landraul Skatterhawk, which now rests in the Royal Cormyrean Archives in Suzail. Landraul wrote about a blade that fit the description of Dornavver as being in the possession of the paladin Sarshel Elethlim and wielded by him in the Battles of Snowsblood Trail and Standing Stone’s Blood during the Year of the Firedrake (713 DR).

Sarshel Elethlim went on to lead the Triad Crusade against the fiend army that overran and despoiled Impiltur more than a decade after the fall of Myth Drannor.

Sarshel wielded Dornavver throughout the many battles of the Fiend Wars (729–732 DR) and used it to devastating effect when he shattered the Crown of Narfell in the Citadel of Conjurers, breaking the power of Orcus over the last demon army and sending it into headlong retreat.

His bravery and leadership saw him crowned king of Impiltur, and Dornavver became one of the royal blades of the kingdom.

After the death of Sarshel, Demonbane was borne, but seldom wielded, by monarchs of the realm, out of reverence for the man who had led the realm out of darkness. In the years that followed, the sword was employed in battle only twice.

In 786 DR, Prince Nord and his brothers donned all the holy regalia of Impiltur, including the legendary Demonsbane shields, to banish the balor Ndulu and his demon host from their realm.

In that storied battle, Nord wielded Dornavver and gained for himself eternal glory.

The only other time that Demonbane was wielded in battle prior to the fall of Old Impiltur in 926 DR was during the time of King Beldred.

His reign is famous for “the Scouring”, a yearlong campaign in the Year of the Empty Throne (850 DR) that saw the young king lead an army of holy knights deep into the depths of the Rawlinswood, slaying and driving forth pockets of demons that had survived the Fiend Wars. While this campaign averted an age-old threat to the kingdom, it unfortunately released a horde of harried demons on the tribes of Narfell to the north of Impiltur. The tribesmen sought their revenge on Impiltur in the Year of the Risen Sword (893 DR) when they united under the chieftain Galush and rode forth to invade the realm and claim, as the sage Ithyran described, the “warm lands of their ancestors”.

Despite being defeated at the Battle of Twelvepikes on the banks of the Soleine River, the nomads managed to do great damage to the outlying eastern borders of the realm, but did little to weaken the realm proper.

Their defeat and the death of their leader saw the nomad horsemen turn tail and flee back to the Nar steppes, closing another chapter in Impiltur’s “golden age”.

As with all the other blades of Imbrar’s Royal Guard that make up Soargar’s Legacy, Dornavver was safely kept by the Mage Royal Soargar in his tower in Lyrabar until the victory of Imphras the Great over the hobgoblin hordes in the Year of the Dawndance (1095 DR) and the reestablishment of the monarchy two years later.

Most sages and historians of Impiltur believe that King Imbrar himself wielded Demonbane when he marched north from his lands in 1127 DR to quell the hobgoblin menace stirring once again in the Giantspire Mountains; others state that he gave the blade to his general and commander of the Royal Guard, Lord Osper Wellhaven. The only thing that the sages seem prepared to agree on is that the whereabouts and fate of Dornavver remain a mystery that is yet to be solved.

Description: Dornavver is forged of some unknown alloy, and its blade is multihued.

The long hilt is wrapped with silver wire and the crosspiece is also plated with this holy metal.

The pommel is etched with the symbol of Ilmater, the Broken God.

Activation: The sword is a +3 outsider bane bastard sword. Its bane special ability functions only against evil outsiders. It glows with a cold, blue light (equal to a light spell in effect) when brought within 60 feet of a demon.

Effect: The bearer of the blade is rendered immune to charm effects created by demons, and is granted a +3 bonus on all saves against spells, spell-like effects, and supernatural abilities employed by demons.

Any demon struck by the blade must make a DC 20 Will save or be blocked from summoning others of its kind for the next hour.

Finally, the bearer of Dornavver receives Improved Initiative as a bonus feat.

The blade bestows one negative level on any evil creature that holds it.

The negative level remains as long as the sword is in hand and disappears when it is no longer carried.

This negative level never results in actual level loss, but it cannot be overcome in any way (including restoration spells) while the sword is held.

Demonbane is legendary among demonkind, and can be readily recognized by any demon with a successful DC 10 Knowledge (the planes) or Intelligence check.

The bearer receives a +2 circumstance bonus on Intimidate checks against demons that recognize the blade.

The attitude of any demon seeing this blade immediately shifts to hostile (see page 72 of the Player’s Handbook) with respect to the wielder.

Most demons will immediately communicate the sword’s location and ownership to their fellows once they learn of it.

Aura/Caster Level: Strong evocation. CL 11th.

Construction: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Improved Initiative, banishment, detect evil, holy smite, searing light, summon monster I, creator must be good, 131,335 gp, 10,480 XP, 131 days.

Weight: 6 lb.

Price: 262,335 gp.

OATH-HAMMER

This dwarven warhammer gains additional power if its wielder swears an oath to destroy an enemy who has wronged him.

It extracts a price if the wielder fails to avenge himself or if he wastes its power on trivial challenges.

Lore: Created by a dwarf priest who lost his two sons in an attack by the drow, Oath-Hammer was his way of bringing vengeance to the dark elves.

(Knowledge [history] DC 15) He made a vow of silence and battled the drow for a year before they managed to kill him

(Knowledge [history] DC 20) The hammer was traded to a duergar merchant and hasn’t been seen since.

(Knowledge [history] DC 25).

Description: This dwarf-crafted warhammer even looks angry; the shape of its head and the slant of its inscription in Dwarven indicate a simmering rage in its creator that endured during the entire time it was forged and crafted.

The Dwarven script reads: “For my sons, Khondar and Khondos Stonebreaker, slain at the hands of the dark elves, whose spilt blood I will avenge a hundredfold before I die, so I swear before the faces of Moradin, Berronar, and Gorm”.

When wielded, the weapon radiates a faint feeling of restrained anger.

When its vengeance powers are activated, this emotion escalates to a seething hate that pours off the hammer like a blistering heat and lightens its weight so it feels feather-light in its wielder’s hand.

Activation: To activate the hammer’s special powers, the wielder must swear an oath in Dwarven (repeating it phonetically from another person if the wielder doesn’t speaking Dwarven) to uphold a sacred vow until some specified act of vengeance is completed. The wielder must state the nature of the necessary act (such as "Kill the man who murdered my parents"), and achieving this revenge must be a good act (an evil character cannot use the hammer's special powers to gain revenge on good heroes); otherwise the attempt fails.

The special powers end if the conditions of the vengeance are met, or if the wielder abandons his task, or dies.

The hammer can only enforce one oath at a time, and cannot accept a new oath until the previous one is fulfilled or abandoned, or the previous oathmaker dies or gives up the hammer.

Effect: Oath-Hammer is normally a +2 warhammer.

If activated by swearing an oath, it becomes a +5 warhammer, deals an extra 2d6 points of damage, and its critical multiplier increases to  $\times 4$ ; these improvements only apply against creatures directly associated with the wielder's path of vengeance.

Against all other creatures, the activated hammer functions like a masterwork weapon without any enhancement bonuses.

As stated earlier, for the wielder to activate the weapon, he must take a sacred vow and uphold it until his vengeance is complete.

Vows of abstinence, chastity, and purity are suitable vows, all of which are presented as feats in Book of Exalted Deeds; choosing one of these vows also provides the benefit associated with that feat.

Other possible vows include silence, never smiling or laughing, eating only bread and water, and so on; these sorts of vows provide no game benefits other than activating the hammer's increased power.

When the wielder achieves his righteous vengeance, the hammer once again becomes a +2 warhammer.

The wielder immediately gains one negative level.

If the wielder breaks his oath or abandons his quest for vengeance, the hammer temporarily loses all its magical bonuses and the wielder gains two negative levels.

Aura/Caster Level: Strong evocation. CL 15th.

Construction: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, geas/quest or creator must have the Sacred Vow feat, 15,600 gp, 1,200 XP.

Variants: Flaming or drow-bane (+14,000 gp), throwing returning (+32,000 gp), doomwarding (+38,500), knockback (+54,000 gp).

Price: 30,600 gp.

RELUCTANT FOUR

This weapon thrums with power and goodness. Markings in the Celestial language describe its abilities, command words, and purpose.

All of its powers are nonlethal but some are quite capable of defeating multiple enemies and are intended to defeat good enemies without causing lasting harm.

Lore: Hundreds of years ago, four allied members of several good Faerûnian churches feared that Bane and other evil deities might somehow turn the good churches and countries of the world against each other.

The allies created four magic weapons imbued with the ability to subdue opponents without harm, hoping that these weapons would allow saner heads to bring about peace without loss of life.

These weapons are called the Reluctant Four, named for their creators' reluctance to ever see good fighting good. (Knowledge [history] DC 20) After the weapons were finished, the allies magically hid them, tying them with invisible spells that would bring them out of hiding when they were needed and put them in the hands of those who could set things right.

(Knowledge [history] DC 25) In the past few years, two of the weapons have been sighted; diplomats worry that this foretells armed strife between good governments and faiths, but some believe that wild magic during the Time of Troubles damaged the hiding-spells, which have since unraveled and some of the weapons have been found. (Knowledge [history] DC 30).

Description: The Reluctant Four are different weapons but have common elements in their appearance.

All of them are made of light-colored materials, whether bright steel or pale wood.

All bear inscriptions in Celestial giving the weapon's name, its powers, and the purpose of all four weapons; anyone holding the weapon automatically understands the writing and knows that it is written in Celestial.

Anvil of Hope: This dwarven warhammer has mithral inlays on its head in the shape of a hammer and anvil.

Its handle is wrapped in ghost rothé leather.

When the hammer's powers are active, the mithral inlays shine like a forge and the weapon whispers a Dwarven chant.

Lady Justice: This longsword has a pristine leather-wrapped hilt.

The crossguard is engraved with a small abstract symbol of a pair of balanced scales.

When its powers are active, the sword glows with a bronze-like color and the blade rings like a bell when struck.

Lord of Sleep: This fine elven longbow has a string that sometimes appears to be silver and at other times looks no more substantial than dust in a sunbeam.

Where the bearer's fingers would hold the bow are four crescent moon symbols, one for each finger.

When its powers are active, the bow emits a soothing warmth and seems to hum to itself in an Elven tune.

Maid of the Waters: This quarterstaff looks more like a walking stick than a weapon, since it is thicker on one end and somewhat gnarled around a smooth place where a walker would hold it.

Running on one side for the entire length of the staff is a stylized waterfall, emptying into a carving of a pool that circles the entire bottom of the staff.

When its powers are active, the waterfall engraving slowly leaks cool, clean water and the staff smells like a fresh patch of clover.

Prerequisite: Only creatures that have one or more exalted feats (see page 26) can use these weapons without penalty.

The weapons bestow one negative level on any other good or neutral creature that tries to use them.

They bestow two negative levels on any evil creature that tries to use them.

The negative level or levels remain as long as the weapon is in hand and disappear when the weapon is no longer wielded.

These negative levels never result in actual level loss, but they cannot be overcome in any way (including restoration spells) while the weapon is wielded.

None of the magical properties of the weapons function in the hands of an evil creature (including granting the ability to read the Celestial writing on the weapon).

Activation: All of the powers of the weapons are command word activated.

Since the command words are written on each weapon, any nonevil creature can use a particular weapon by invoking its command word.

Effect: Each of the Reluctant Four is a +1 merciful weapon with unique properties.

Three of them appear to have a rudimentary personality, though no records exist of the weapons actually communicating with anyone; it is more a feeling or understanding on the part of the wielder that the weapon is more than an object.

Anvil of Hope is designed to prevent good dwarves from harming each other.

It can produce a good hope effect once per day.

It emits a 60-foot aura that only affects good dwarves; any such opponent within the aura must make a DC 11 Will save or leave the battle to think for the next hour about why he is fighting and if the battle serves the purpose of good and the dwarf race as a whole.

Affected dwarves stop attacking and leave the battle in the safest way possible; if the wielder or his allies attacks an affected dwarf during this time, the effect on that dwarf immediately ends.

A dwarf who makes his saving throw against this effect is immune to it for the next 24 hours.

This weapon does not seem to have a personality.

Lady Justice is designed to free opponents from magic that forces them to fight or makes them believe the wielder is their enemy.

If the wielder's opponent is under the effect of such magic (including charm spells cast by the wielder's enemies and confusion spells causing the target to attack the nearest creature), hitting the opponent with the sword lets the wielder try to dispel it by making a caster level check (d20+10) against the caster level of the controlling magic. This ability can be used at will.

Lady Justice radiates a protective aura in a 20-foot radius that gives creatures in the area a +4 resistance bonus on saving throws against mind-affecting spells and abilities.

Lady Justice has a stern female personality; her wielder senses when she is displeased by some apparent failing he has exhibited.

Lord of Sleep is designed to quickly disable opponents before they can sound an alarm or endanger others.

While the bow can fire arrows normally, the wielder can also use it to fire rays of light that cause a target with 4 HD or less to make a DC 11 Will save or fall asleep for 10 minutes as if affected by a sleep spell.

The bow can fire up to five of these "arrows" per round (subject to the number of attacks the wielder can make per round).

Once per day it can produce a solid fog effect.

Lord of Sleep has an older male personality, conveying a grandfatherly sort of feeling, and his wielder senses when the bow is trying to steer him toward or away from a particular course of action.

Maid of the Waters is designed to quickly end hostilities and get people talking again.

The staff radiates a calm emotions effect; a creature that saves against this effect is immune to it for 24 hours thereafter.

Once per day the staff can twist to form a symbol of persuasion; all creatures affected by the symbol view the wielder as a friend and impartial speaker.

If the wielder takes hostile action against one of the creatures affected by the symbol, the effect is broken for all of them.

Maid of the Waters has a sad female personality, like that of a woman who regrets that her children want to leave home in search of trouble.

Her wielder senses when she is upset about a plan that is dangerous.

Aura/Caster Level: Moderate transmutation. CL 10th.

Construction: Craft Magic Arms and Armor plus one of the following lists of spells and costs depending on the particular weapon.

Anvil of Hope: Good hope, cure light wounds, charm person, 11,112 gp, 864 XP, 22 days.

Lady Justice: Dispel magic, magic circle against evil, cure light wounds, 12,815 gp, 1,000 XP, 25 days.

Lord of Sleep: Solid fog, cure light wounds, sleep, 16,575 gp, 1,296 XP, 33 days.

Maid of the Waters: Symbol of persuasion, calm emotions, cure light wounds, 19,000 gp, 1,472 XP, 37 days.

Price: Anvil of Hope 21,912 gp, Lady Justice 25,315 gp, Lord of Sleep 32,775 gp, Maid of the Waters 37,400 gp.

BOW OF HOSARK

Carved from an unknown creamy-white wood resembling ivory, this unique weapon has been in the possession of Travis Deepdell for over thirty years, despite the efforts of Elaith Craulnobar and others to steal it.

No sages have been able to identify the bow's origin, and legend lore spells only produce the beautiful illusion of an elf maiden's face that cryptically asks the bearer to "take care of the Horn of Moon's Dawning".

Some rangers and druids who gaze at the bow see a faint carved outline of a unicorn's head along its outer curve, suggesting the weapon is connected in some way to Mielikki or Lurue.

The bow of Hosark is a beautiful +2 distance mighty composite longbow (+5 Str bonus).

When the bow is held or worn over the back, it acts as an amulet of proof against detection and location.

Two times per day, the wielder can add the brilliant energy special ability to any arrow shot from the bow (so long as the total arrow bonus, including the brilliant energy special ability, does not exceed +10).

Strong transmutation; CL 15th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Wondrous Item, clairaudience/clairvoyance, continual flame, gaseous form, nondetection; Price 102,900 gp; Cost 51,900 gp + 4,080 XP; Weight 3 lb.

GURT'S GREATAXE

In the Year of the Icy Axe (123 DR), Gurt, Lord of the Pale Giants, fell to Uthgar Gardolfsson—leader the folk who would become the Uthgardt barbarians—in an epic battle that marked the ascendance of humankind over the giants in the Dessarin River valley.

Gurt's greataxe is said to have been buried in Morgur's Mound until the Second Trollwar, when it was brought back to Waterdeep by Amphail the Just.

After decades of obscurity, lying forgotten in the city's vaults, Piergeiron gave the legendary weapon to Harshnag the Grim in recognition of his service to Waterdeep.

Gurt's greataxe is a Large +1 human bane thundering greataxe. It sheds light as a torch when the temperature drops below 0° F.

It cannot be concealed when drawn, nor can its light be shut off in these conditions.

Once per day, the greataxe can use a chill metal effect upon command.

Moderate conjuration; CL 8th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, blindness/deafness, chill metal, summon monster I; Price 22,660 gp; Cost 11,500 gp + 893 XP; Weight 24 lb.

LANCE OF BURNING BLACKFIRE

Favored by the griffon-riders of Waterdeep, these otherwise rare +1 corrosive flaming heavy lances are fashioned from the trunk of a zalantar or "blackwood" tree and inscribed with sacred runes of Mystra.

(Zalantar has the properties of darkwood, as detailed in Magic of Faerûn and the Dungeon Master's Guide).

Moderate evocation; CL 10th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, acid fog, acid storm, Melf's acid arrow, or storm of vengeance, and flame blade, flame strike, or fireball; Price 18,410 gp; Cost 9,410 gp + 720 XP; Weight 5 lb.

MUIRAL'S DECAPITATOR

Custom-made by Halaster for Muiral (see page 28) during his days as the Mad Mage's bodyguard, this +3 adamantine vorpal greatsword is now a Large weapon, as Muiral had it reforged by a renegade of Clan Melairkyn after his transformation.

Magic items touched or struck by the blade glow with a pale radiance for 1d4+1 rounds.

Muiral's decapitator is still in Muiral's possession, and given the power and temperament of its owner, it's probably not going anywhere else soon.

Strong necromancy and transmutation; CL 18th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, detect magic, circle of death, keen edge; Price 135,400 gp; Cost 67,900 gp + 5,400 XP; Weight 16 lb.

QUARTERSTAFF OF ALCEDOR

Custom-made by Alcedor Kolat for his own use, this 7-foot-long +3 spellstrike/+3 shattermantle quarterstaff is made from a gnarled duskwood branch with its ends shod in brass.

Moderate evocation; CL 10th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, shatter, resistance; Price 64,600 gp; Cost 32,600 gp + 2,560 XP; Weight 4 lb.

SPIKED GAUNTLET OF ULBAERAG

This unique +3 wounding spiked gauntlet drips blood for as long as a victim wounded by it continues to bleed. (The victim suffers damage from the wounding effect normally).

After serving as the symbol of authority in Bloodhand Hold for Ulbaerag and his successors, the gauntlet was lost during Nimoar's sacking of the settlement.

The Shadow Thieves found it centuries later, and the Citadel of the Bloody Hand (see page 116) is the gauntlet's namesake.

Ulbaerag's gauntlet was lost again after the Shadow Thieves were banished from Waterdeep, but the weapon is believed to remain within the City of Splendors.

Moderate evocation; CL 10th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Mordenkainen's sword; Price 50,305 gp; Cost 25,305 gp + 2,000 XP; Weight 1 lb.

VIPERFANG

Custom-built to the Black Viper's specifications by Hadrhune, making it a Shadow Magic item, this unique black +2 corrosive assassin's dagger of venom has a curved blade and serrated edge.

It allows the wielder to use a poison effect (as the spell, save DC 14) upon a creature struck by the blade once per day. The wielder can decide to use the power after he has struck. Doing so is a free action, but the poison effect must be invoked in the same round that the dagger strikes.

In addition, the dagger provides a +1 bonus to the DC of the Fortitude save forced by the death attack of an assassin. Moderate necromancy; CL 15th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, acid fog, acid storm, Melf's acid arrow, or storm of vengeance, poison; Price 50,302 gp; Cost 25,302 gp + 2,000 XP; Weight 4 lb.

Weight: 4 lb.

A blood groove runs down the center of this weapon's blade.

Set into the pommel is a blood-red ruby, and within its crimson depths floats a deity's holy symbol.

This +1 longsword is favored by paladins and certain clerics. Any time you roll a critical threat with the blade of righteous war, you can sacrifice a turn/rebuke undead attempt as a free action to gain a +4 bonus on the roll made to confirm the critical threat.

You must make this decision before making the confirmation roll.

The blade of righteous war is part of a set known collectively as the regalia of righteous war, which also includes the helm of righteous war (page 139) and the bastion of righteous war (see above).

When you use all three together, you gain an additional benefit as noted in the description of the bastion of righteous war.

The holy symbol pictured in the weapon's pommel always matches the deity worshiped by the holder (if any).

Cost to Create: 6,000 gp (plus 315 gp for masterwork longsword), 480 XP, 12 days.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, divine power, turn or rebuke undead.

BOW OF ELVENKIND

Gleaming white wood and horn have been lovingly shaped into a massive, recurved longbow.

The string shimmers like silver, and the bow hums when drawn, as if the wood had been tuned for musical purposes.

This +1 composite longbow (+0 Str bonus) automatically adjusts its pull to match the Strength of any elf who wields it.

In the hands of a cleric of Corellon Larethian, a bow of elvenkind gains the seeking weapon property (DMG 225), and any critical hit with an arrow fired from the bow renders the target shaken for 5 rounds (a mind-affecting fear effect; Will DC 14 negates).

Furthermore, any elf or cleric of Corellon Larethian who uses the bow with arrows from the quiver of elvenkind (page 144) gains the benefit of the Far Shot feat.

Cost to Create: 7,000 gp (plus 700 gp for masterwork composite longbow), 560 XP, 14 days.

Ivy vines carved into the shaft provide a textured grip.

In the hands of most wielders, this weapon is a simple +1 spear that also grants its wielder a +2 competence bonus on Knowledge (nature) and Survival checks.

If you are a druid, a ranger, or a cleric with the Animal domain, the spear of the wild automatically casts baleful polymorph on any creature upon which it scores a critical hit.

A successful Fortitude save (DC 15 + your Wis modifier) negates this effect.

This effect functions three times per day.

Cost to Create: 12,000 gp (plus 302 gp for masterwork spear), 960 XP, 24 days.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, baleful polymorph, Knowledge (nature) 10 ranks, Survival 10 ranks.

The staff of the vagabond is part of a set known collectively as the garb of the vagabond, which also includes the cloak of the vagabond, the robe of the vagabond, and the sandals of the vagabond.

When you wield the staff of the vagabond while wearing any two of the other items, each end gains the merciful property (DMG 225).

COMPLETE PSIONIC (3.5)

CHAIN OF CONVOLUTION

This powerful spiked chain can be used to trip or disarm an opponent from a distance.

Description: A chain of convolution is a +2 spiked chain.

It is a crystalline spiked chain that is as hard as steel and pulses with a red glow from within.

When the weapon's telekinetic ability is activated while attacking, the red glow appears to leap away in arcs and rays as the weapon is whipped about.

Activation: A chain of convolution always benefits from its base qualities.

A standard action and a mental command is required to activate the chain's telekinetic ability, which can be activated twice per day.

Effect: When activated, a chain of convolution grants you the benefit of telekinetic maneuver (EPH 135).

However, you can perform only the bull rush, disarm, and trip maneuvers with the weapon.

Aura/Manifestation Level: Moderate psychokinesis.

ML 11th.

Construction: Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, telekinetic maneuver, 15,350 gp, 1,216 XP, 40 days.

Weight: 10 lb.

Price: 30,705 gp.

EARTH HAMMER

This weapon can create a powerful psychokinetic shock wave that travels along the ground.

Description: An earth hammer is a +1 thundering warhammer.

It appears as an intricate warhammer with a large green crystal embedded on each side of the hammer's head.

Circular lines etched into the steel extend out from the crystals, as though depicting ripples in water.

When the weapon is activated, the green crystals create an arc of psychokinetic energy that meets over the head of the hammer, crackling and spitting.

Activation: When you wield an earth hammer, you can activate the stomp power (EPH 133) by striking the earth with the weapon as a standard action.

Effect: This +1 thundering warhammer produces the effect of the stomp power as augmented by a 5th-level manifester.

Any creature standing on the ground in a 20-foot cone-shaped spread must succeed on a DC 11 Reflex save or be knocked prone and take 5d4 points of nonlethal damage.

Aura/Manifester Level: Faint psychokinesis.

ML 5th.

Construction: Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, stomp, 6,150 gp.

492 XP, 7 days.

ETHEREAL REAVER

This ghostly longsword exists on both the Material Plane and the Ethereal Plane simultaneously.

granting its wielder the ability to see into one plane from the other and attack creatures on either plane equally.

Description: An ethereal reaver is a +2 longsword.

Its blade appears to be constructed of a ghostly, ethereal substance, though it is as hard as steel.

The pommel and hilt are constructed of adamantine and worked through with inlaid platinum.

An ethereal reaver emits a low hum when drawn.

Its blade leaves a trail of wispy smoke in the wake of its swing.

When activated, the blade emanates a dim silvery glow as it pulses to life.

Activation: As a standard action, upon command, an ethereal reaver is sheathed in a dim silver glow that illuminates a 5-foot-radius area.

An ethereal reaver can be deactivated by another command, also as a standard action.

Effect: When activated, an ethereal reaver allows you to see onto the Ethereal Plane, as though under the effect of the power psionic see invisibility (page 98).

You can attack any creature that exists on the Ethereal Plane as though it were on the Material Plane.

Likewise, if you are on the Ethereal Plane, you can attack any creature that exists on the Material Plane within the area you threaten, as though it were on the Ethereal Plane with you.

While the blade of this weapon exists on both planes, the pommel and hilt exist only on the plane where you currently reside.

So, while you can be disarmed by an opponent on a plane opposite your own, the foe could not pick up the ethereal reaver.

Aura/Manifester Level: Moderate psychoportation.

ML 7th.

Construction: Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, psionic see invisibility 20,000 gp, 1,600 XP, 20 days.

Weight: 4 lb.

Price: 40,000 gp.

FLAYER

This heavy flail possesses a shaft of adamantine, to which four greenish-mauve chains are attached.

The tentacle-like chains can remove the brains of unlucky foes.

Description: A flayer is a +2 heavy flail with some visual embellishments.

The wicked-looking weapon appears to be a heavy flail whose chains are designed so that each resembles articulated mind flayer tentacles.

The chains sometimes seem to writhe and move of their own volition.

Activation: Using this weapon is as simple as wielding it.

To activate the weapon's special effect, you must roll a natural 20 on an attack roll, followed by a successful roll to confirm the critical hit.

The special effect of the weapon is effective only against living creatures that possess a brain.

Illithids, half-illithids (see Fiend Folio page 90), and those with the Illithid Heritage feat (page 62) are automatically proficient with a flayer.

Effect: If the special effect is activated, the four chains of the flail strike like coordinated asps, penetrating the skull of the target and drawing out the brain, killing the target instantly.

Aura/Manifester Level: Strong psychometabolism.

ML 18th.

Construction: Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, creator must be an illithid, half-illithid, or someone with the Illithid Heritage feat, 49,158 gp, 3,933 XP, 50 days.

Weight: 4 lb.

Price: 98,315 gp.

LIFEQUENCHER

This bastard sword has psionic qualities as well as a permanent conduit to the Negative Energy Plane.

Description: A lifequencher is a +1 sundering bastard sword.

Its blade is blackened, and light within 1 foot of it seems to swirl along its surface and disappear.

Activation: The base quality of the weapon is always active. As a swift action, you can imbue the blade with the effect of the stygian weapon power (page 102) three times per day.

Effect: You can attack a foe's weapon as if you possessed the Improved Sunder feat.

When stygian weapon is activated in conjunction with a successful strike, the foe gains 1d4 negative levels for 1 round in addition to taking damage normally.

If the foe has at least as many negative levels as it has Hit Dice, it is stunned for 1 round instead.

On the following round, the subject regains lost levels. Usually, negative levels have a chance of permanently draining the victim's levels (or killing creatures with Hit Dice equal to or less than the number of negative levels gained), but the negative levels from stygian weapon don't last long enough to do so.

Aura/Manifester Level: Moderate psychometabolism. ML 9th.

Construction: Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, stygian weapon, 7,400 gp, 592 XP, 8 days.

Price: 14,800 gp.

QUIETUS STILETTO

This wicked-looking kukri is used to send the undead to their final rest, disrupting the flow of negative energy that keeps them going.

Description: A quietus stiletto is a +1 keen kukri with a blade constructed entirely of jade.

The ivory handle is inlaid with golden runes in the forgotten language of Talaire.

In that lost tongue, the runes spell out "quietus stiletto", hinting at this sacred blade's purpose.

When drawn, the blade of this kukri shimmers slightly. But when one or more undead are within 60 feet, a pale, blue-green light dances along its razor edge, and the blade emits a threatening hum that grows louder as the undead move closer to you.

Activation: The light and hum of the weapon are always active.

An experienced wielder can gauge the proximity of undead by the volume of the blade's drone.

Effect: When a quietus stiletto scores a critical hit on undead creatures, it can sever their connection to the Negative Energy Plane, cutting them off from that source of power and instantly destroying them.

Intelligent undead receive a DC 20 Will save to resist the effect, but a quietus stiletto automatically severs the link of mindless undead, such as skeletons and zombies.

This weapon does not deal extra damage to undead on a critical hit, but you still roll to confirm a critical hit to determine if the weapon's destructive power activates.

Aura/Manifester Level: Strong psychometabolism. ML 13th.

Construction: Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, stygian disruption, 25,308 gp, 2,012 XP, 51 days.

Weight: 2 lb.

Price: 50,308 gp.

SOUL IN IRON

This greatsword has psionic qualities as well as a permanent conduit to the Positive Energy Plane, channeling the energy into a bright, sun-like aura that damages undead creatures.

Description: A soul in iron is a +2 collision undead bane greatsword.

The weapon glows with a white, sun-like radiance.

To a living creature, this aura of energy has a warm, comforting feeling.

Undead creatures are uncomfortable even looking at the energy.

Activation: The base weapon qualities (collision and undead bane) are always active.

As a standard action, upon command, you can sheathe the weapon in a brilliant white radiance that illuminates a 30-foot-radius area.

This glow can be deactivated by another command, also as a standard action.

As a standard action, you can call on the effects of the stygian erasure power (page 101) once per day, removing up to four negative levels you possess.

Effect: When the weapon strikes any creature, its collision special ability (EPH 165) deals an additional 5 points of damage to the target.

The greatsword's undead bane quality grants it a total enhancement bonus of +4 against undead, and the weapon deals an additional 2d6 points of damage to undead foes.

When, commanded, brilliant white light illuminates a 30-foot radius.

When commanded, you gain the benefit of stygian erasure and remove up to four negative levels you possess (if any) once per day.

Aura/Manifester Level: Moderate psychometabolism. ML 9th.

Construction: Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, stygian erasure, 26,250 gp, 2,100 XP, 27 days.

Price: 52,500 gp.

COMPLETE WARRIOR (3.5)

BURROWING ARROW

This +1 arrow sticks into its target on a successful hit and embeds itself in the wound.

A burrowing arrow must be pulled out before natural healing can occur, and this removal deals a further 1d8 points of damage.

If the target receives magical healing, the burrowing arrow immediately deals 1d8 points of damage as the magic forces it out of the wound.

LANCE OF THE LAST RIDER

Faint transmutation; CL 5th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, bull's strength; Price 8,306 gp; Cost 4,306 gp + 320 XP.

OGLIEN'S FINAL ANSWER

This +2 spiked chain has a glittering sheen, but most spellcasters don't identify it as magic due to the persistent nondetection effect on it.

A DC 25 Spellcraft check is required for a spellcaster to detect the magic of Oglien's final answer.

The weapon gives its wielder a +5 bonus on Perform (weapon drill) checks.

(See the section on skills near the end of Chapter 3).

Oglien, a noted gladiator from a bygone age, used his "final answer" to get an edge in the arena.

Since his death, the weapon has passed from gladiator to gladiator, with many unaware of its magical nature. Moderate transmutation and abjuration; CL 10th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, nondetection; Price 26,325 gp; Cost 13,325 gp + 1,040 XP.

DRACONOMICON (3.5)

BLADE OF DRAGONDOOM

The wielder of this +3 greatsword may, as a free action, choose to deliver a smite attack upon a dragon.

For every size category of the dragon larger than Medium, the smite attack deals an extra 1d6 points of damage (+1d6 against a Large creature, +2d6 against Huge, +3d6 against Gargantuan, and +4d6 against Colossal).

The smite function may be used three times per day, but no more than once per round.

The wielder must declare the use of the smite before the attack is made, and if the attack misses, the smite is wasted.

Moderate transmutation; CL 7th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, fell the greatest foe; Price 34,350 gp; Cost 17,305 gp + 1,360 XP; Weight 15 lb.

BOW OF THE MIGHTY DRAGONHUNTER

This +2 dragon bane composite longbow (+4 Str bonus) is carved from the thigh bone of a Huge or larger dragon (and is thus considered a dragonbone bow; see Dragoncraft Items, above).

If an arrow fired from this bow hits a dragon, the dragon takes 1 point of Strength damage.

Furthermore, any critical hit inflicted on a dragon by an arrow fired from this bow deals  $\times 5$  damage, not  $\times 3$  (this benefit doesn't stack with any quality that improves the critical multiplier of a weapon).

Thus, a critical hit deals normal arrow damage  $\times 5$  plus 5 points of Strength damage.

(Other effects related to threatening or confirming critical hits, such as the keen edge or bless weapon spells, don't function if applied to this bow or the arrows it fires).

Moderate transmutation and necromancy; CL 9th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Dragoncrafter, keen edge, ray of enfeeblement; Price 36,900 gp; Cost 18,900 gp + 1,440 XP; Weight 3 lb.

LONGSPEAR OF PIERCING

Three times per day, the wielder of this +3 longspear may ignore the natural armor (including any enhancement bonuses) of a target he attacks with the weapon.

The wielder decides to use this ability as a free action before the attack roll is made.

Armor bonuses and all other bonuses to AC still apply normally.

Moderate divination; CL 9th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, find the gap; Price 28,305 gp; Cost 14,305 gp + 1,120 XP; Weight 9 lb.

DRAGONS OF FAERÛN

(3.5)

DRAGONTOOTH OF LARETH

A dragontooth of Lareth is a dagger made from a fang of the fallen King of Justice in the wake of Sammaster's Rage and given to an elite member of the Talons of Justice (see page 99).

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about a dragontooth of Lareth by making successful Knowledge (arcana) or Knowledge (history) checks.

DC 15: A dragontooth of Lareth is given to each of the leading members of the Talons of Justice, an order of dragonblood creatures who follow the Ptarian Code.

There are believed to be twelve such daggers in existence.

DC 20: Lareth, the last gold dragon King of Justice, succumbed to madness while attempting to shield the followers of Bahamut from the effects of Sammaster's Rage. A dragontooth of Lareth is crafted from one of Lareth's fangs and commemorates his sacrifice.

DC 25: Lareth's spirit is said to linger near Faerûn, giving guidance to anyone who wields a dragontooth in penance for his own failures.

Description: A dragontooth of Lareth is a curved dagger with a serrated blade made from a dragon's tooth and a gold, dragon-shaped hilt and pommel.

The "mouth" of the dragon pommel holds a large ruby.

Effect: A dragontooth of Lareth is a +1 flaming burst dragonfang dagger.

As a dragonfang weapon, it has the extraordinary property of dealing 1 point of fire damage on each successful hit.

Once per round, the bearer of a dragontooth of Lareth can cast guidance as a swift action, in effect calling upon the wisdom of the fallen King of Justice.

Strong divination and evocation [good]; CL 12th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Dragoncrafter, Quicken Spell, Craft (weaponsmithing), flame blade, flame strike, or fireball plus guidance; Price 39,900 gp; Cost 21,100 gp + 1,584 XP.

SILVER SICKLES OF SORANTH

The silver sickles of Soranth are the legendary weapons of a fallen hierophant of Mielikki.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about the silver sickles of Soranth by making Knowledge (arcana) or Knowledge (history) checks.

DC 15: The legendary druid Soranth forged the twin silver scimitars known as the silver sickles of Soranth, which were wielded by six successive archdruids after his death.

DC 25: Over a century ago, a druid oracle prophesied that all of Arvandaar would be encased in fiery ice should the twin crescents shed the blood of the seventh child of Soranth. It is unclear whether the prophecy refers to the silver sickles or, if it does, what it means, but no druid has dared wield them since.

DC 30: At present, the silver sickles of Soranth lie hidden within the hoard of Gildenfire the Druid Dragon for safekeeping.

Description: Each silver sickle is forged in the shape of a crescent moon.

Four pictographs (one on each side of each blade) depict one of the elements killing a wolf-like beast.

One shows the canine drowning, one shows the canine burning, one shows the canine being crushed under a rock, and one shows the canine gasping for air.

The handles are made of duskwood and wrapped in the blackened leather of a werewolf pelt.

Effect: The silver sickles of Soranth are both +1 silvered lycanthrope bane sickles.

When employed together, they grant the wearer the Two-Weapon Fighting feat.

Moderate conjuration; CL 8th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, summon monster I; Price 18,326 gp each (46,652 gp as a pair); Cost 23,652 gp + 1,840 XP.

Weight 2 lb. each.

SWORD OF DRAGONBLOOD

These swords revel in the opportunity to slay dragons.

The more dragons a sword of dragonblood slays, the more it aids its owner in killing wyrms in the future.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about swords of dragonblood by making Knowledge (arcana) checks.

DC 20: The first swords of dragonblood date from the Year of the Crown (1351 DR).

They were created to fight the green dragon Dretchroyaster (before he became a dracolich).

The Merry Marauders nearly killed him in battle using these swords and their wizardry.

DC 25: The Merry Marauders slew a number of lesser dragons as practice for their fight with Dretchroyaster, which in turn strengthened the powers of the swords.

DC 30: Larkonlan, a wizard in the Cult of the Dragon's Sembia cell, created these swords in order to provide a weapon that might scare Dretchroyaster into questioning his own mortality.

He hired the Merry Marauders, and their attack was a significant part of the reason the dragon agreed to become a dracolich.

Description: These swords appear to be made from fine steel forged in Sembia.

They each bear a number of small tally marks at the bottom of the blade near the hilt.

Effect: The swords are typically +2 dragon bane longswords (though they can be other types of weapons).

In addition to those enchantments, they have a special power in relation to dragons.

When the wielder of a sword of dragonblood slays a dragon with the weapon for the first time, he or she gains a +1 bonus on any subsequent attack roll against a dragon once per day.

For each additional dragon slain by the sword, this daily bonus increases by 1.

The wielder can spend any or all of this bonus at any time during a day, using all of it on a single attack roll or splitting it up among two or more rolls.

Only true dragons count for the purpose of gaining this bonus—not half-dragons, drakes, dragon turtles, or other draconic creatures.

The bonus resets at sunrise each day, if any points were spent during the preceding 24 hours. If the weapon changes hands, the new wielder gains no bonus until he or she kills a dragon with the sword. Should the sword ever be separated from its wielder for more than 24 hours, any bonus it has accrued is lost. For example, Dreilin Thenzington, a member of the Merry Marauders, possesses a sword of dragonblood. He has previously slain six dragons with the blade. This means that on any given day, Dreilin has 6 points that he can add to one or more of his attack rolls against dragons. Should he slay more dragons in the future, his daily bonus will increase.

Activation: Nothing is required to activate the sword other than swinging it, but using the pool saved within requires a free action.

Moderate conjuration; CL 10th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, summon monster I; Price 25,000 gp; Cost 12,500 gp + 1,000 XP; Weight 4 lb.

The frost brand sword also has a 50% chance of extinguishing any fire into which its blade is thrust. This power extends to a 10-foot radius and includes lasting effects such as wall of fire but excludes instantaneous effects such as fireball, meteor swarm, and flame strike.

(Only the area dispel is possible, not the targeted dispel or counter-spell versions of dispel magic).

It is consumed in the attack.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, lightning bolt; Market Price: 751 gp; Cost to Create: 526 gp + 18 XP.

LIFE-DRINKER

This +1 greataxe bestows two negative levels on its target whenever it deals damage, just as if its target had been struck by an undead creature.

One day after being struck, subjects must make a Fortitude save (DC 23) for each negative level or lose a character level.

However, each time a life-drinker deals damage to a foe, it also bestows one negative level on the wielder.

The negative level gained by the wielder lasts until the axe is put down.

The axe can't be used again for 1 hour without the wielder once again gaining the negative level.

Caster Level: 13th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, enervation; Market Price: 40,320 gp; Cost to Create: 20,320 gp + 1,600 XP.

LUCK BLADE

This +1 short sword gives its possessor a +1 luck bonus to all saving throws and contains five wish spells when newly created.

When randomly rolled, the luck blade can contain fewer than five wishes (1d6-1, minimum 0).

The DM should keep the number of wishes left a secret. When the last wish is used, the sword remains a +1 short sword, and it still grants the +1 luck bonus.

Caster Level: 17th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, wish or miracle; Market Price: 170,560 gp; Cost to Create: 22,935 gp + 26,810 XP.

MACE OF SMITING

This +3 heavy mace has a +5 enhancement bonus against constructs, and any critical hit dealt to a construct completely destroys it (no saving throw).

Furthermore, a critical hit dealt to an outsider deals  $\times 4$  critical damage rather than  $\times 2$ .

Caster Level: 13th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, finger of death; Market Price: 75,312 gp; Cost to Create: 37,812 gp + 3,000 XP.

MACE OF TERROR

This +2 heavy mace has a potent spell-like ability allowing the wielder to envelop himself in a terrifying aura.

His clothes and appearance are transformed into an illusion of darkest horror, such that all within 20 feet who view him must roll successful Will saving throws (DC 16) or be struck motionless with terror (treat as hold person).

Those who succeed on their saves are shaken.

Each time the mace is used to cause terror, there is a 20% chance the wielder permanently loses 1 point from his Charisma score.

Caster Level: 13th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, fear, hold person; Market Price: 17,812 gp; Cost to Create: 9,062 gp + 700 XP.

NINE LIVES STEALER

This longsword always performs as a +2 longsword, but it also has the power to draw the life force from an opponent. It can do this nine times before the ability is lost.

At that point, the sword becomes a simple +2 longsword (with perhaps a hint of evil about it).

A critical hit must be dealt for the sword's death-dealing ability to function.

The victim is entitled to a Fortitude saving throw (DC 17) to avoid death.

If the save is successful, the sword's death-dealing ability does not function, no charge is used, and normal critical damage is determined.

This sword is evil, and any good character attempting to wield it gains two negative levels.

These negative levels remain as long as the sword is in hand and disappear when the sword is no longer wielded.

These negative levels never result in actual level loss, but they cannot be overcome in any way (including restoration spells) while the sword is wielded.

Caster Level: 13th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, finger of death; Market Price: 25,315 gp; Cost to Create: 12,815 gp + 1,000 XP.

OATHBOW

Of elven make, this white +1 longbow whispers "Swift defeat to my enemies" in Elven when nocked and pulled.

If the firer swears aloud to slay her target, the bow's whisper becomes the low shout "Swift death to those who have wronged me".

Against such a sworn enemy, the bow has a +3 enhancement bonus, and arrows launched from it deal double normal damage (and  $\times 4$  on a critical hit instead of the normal  $\times 3$ ).

However, if the firer does not deal the killing blow on the sworn enemy within 24 hours, the bow falls inert for one week, during which it possesses no magical abilities or bonuses at all.

Further, the character is demoralized and suffers a -1 morale penalty to attack rolls, saving throws, and skill checks during that week.

Caster Level: 15th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, creator must be an elf; Market Price: 27,875 gp; Cost to Create: 14,125 gp + 1,100 XP.

RAPIER OF PUNCTURING

Three times per day, this +2 rapier of wounding allows the wielder to make a touch attack with the weapon that deals 1d6 points of temporary Constitution damage by draining blood.

Caster Level: 13th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, harm; Market Price: 50,320 gp; Cost to Create: 25,320 gp + 2,000 XP.

SCREAMING BOLT

One of these +2 bolts screams when fired, forcing all enemies of the firer within 20 feet of the path of the bolt to succeed at a Will save (DC 14) or become shaken.

This is a mindaffecting fear effect.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, scare; Market Price: 257 gp; Cost to Create: 132 gp + 10 XP.

SLAYING ARROW

This +1 arrow is keyed to a particular type of creature.

If it strikes such a creature, the target must make a Fortitude save (DC 20) or die (or, in the case of unliving targets, be destroyed) instantly.

Note that even creatures normally exempt from Fortitude saves (undead and constructs) are subject to this attack.

When keyed to a living creature, this is a death effect (and thus death ward protects a target).

To determine the type of creature the arrow is keyed to, roll on the following table:

d%	Target Type
01-05	Aberrations
06-08	Animals
09-13	Beasts
14-20	Constructs
21-25	Dragons
26-30	Elementals
31-35	Fey
36-40	Giants
41-45	Magical beasts
46-50	Monstrous humanoid
51-53	Oozes
54-58	Outsiders, chaotic
59-65	Outsiders, evil
66-70	Outsiders, good
71-75	Outsiders, lawful
76-77	Plants
78-85	Shapechangers
86-92	Undead
93-94	Vermin
95-100	Humanoid (choose subtype)

A greater slaying arrow functions just like a normal slaying arrow, but the DC to avoid the death effect is 23.

Caster Level: 13th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, finger of death (slaying arrow) or heightened finger of death (greater slaying arrow); Market Price: 2,282 gp (slaying arrow) or 4,057 gp (greater slaying arrow); Cost to Create: 1,144 gp 5 sp + 91 XP (slaying arrow) or 2,032 gp + 162 XP (greater slaying arrow).

SLEEP ARROW

This strange +1 arrow is painted white and has white fletching.

If it strikes a foe so that it would normally deal damage, it instead bursts into magical energy that deals subdual damage (in the same amount as would be normal damage) and forces the target to make a Will save (DC 11) or fall asleep.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, sleep; Market Price: 132 gp; Cost to Create: 69 gp 5 sp + 5 XP.

SUN BLADE

This sword is the size of a bastard sword.

However, its enchantment enables the sun blade to be wielded as if it were a short sword with respect to weight and ease of use.

(In other words, the weapon appears to all viewers to be a bastard sword, and deals bastard sword damage, but the wielder feels and reacts as if the weapon were a short sword).

Any individual able to use either a bastard sword or a short sword with proficiency is proficient in the use of a sun blade.

Likewise, Weapon Focus and Weapon Specialization in short sword and bastard sword apply equally.

In normal combat, the glowing golden blade of the weapon is equal to a +2 bastard sword.

Against evil creatures, its enhancement bonus is +4.

Against Negative Energy Plane creatures or undead creatures, the sword deals double damage (and  $\times 3$  on a critical hit instead of the usual  $\times 2$ ).

Furthermore, the blade has a special sunbeam power.

Once a day, the wielder can swing the blade vigorously above her head while speaking a command word.

The sun blade then sheds a bright yellow radiance that is like full daylight.

The radiance begins shining in a 10-foot radius around the sword wielder and spreads outward at 5 feet per round for 10 rounds thereafter, to create a globe of light with a 60-foot radius.

When the wielder stops swinging, the radiance fades to a dim glow that persists for another minute before disappearing entirely.

All sun blades are of good alignment, and any evil creature attempting to wield one gains one negative level.

The negative level remains as long as the sword is in hand and disappears when the sword is no longer wielded.

This negative level never results in actual level loss, but it cannot be overcome in any way (including restoration spells) while the sword is wielded.

Caster Level: 10th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, daylight, creator must be good; Market Price: 50,335 gp; Cost to Create: 25,335 gp + 2,000 XP.

SWORD OF LIFE STEALING

This black iron +2 longsword bestows a negative level when it deals a critical hit.

The sword wielder gains 1d6 temporary hit points each time a negative level is bestowed on another.

These temporary hit points last 24 hours.

Caster Level: 17th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, energy drain; Market Price: 30,315 gp; Cost to Create: 15,315 gp + 1,200 XP.

SWORD OF THE PLANES

This longsword has an enhancement bonus of +1 on the Material Plane, but on any Elemental Plane its enhancement bonus increases to +2.

(The +2 enhancement bonus also applies on the Material Plane when the weapon is used against elementals).

It operates as a +3 longsword on the Astral or Ethereal plane or when used against opponents from either of those planes.

On any other plane, or against any outsider, it functions as a +4 longsword.

Caster Level: 15th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, plane shift; Market Price: 52,315 gp; Cost to Create: 26,315 gp + 2,080 XP.

SWORD OF SUBTLETY

A +1 short sword with a thin, dull gray blade, this sword adds a +4 bonus to its wielder's attack roll and damage when he is making a sneak attack with it.

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, blur; Market Price: 15,310 gp; Cost to Create: 7,810 gp + 600 XP.

SYLVAN SCIMITAR

This +3 scimitar, when used outdoors in a temperate climate, grants its wielder the use of the Cleave feat and deals +1d6 points of bonus damage.

Caster Level: 11th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor; divine power or caster must be druid level 7th+; Market Price: 55,815 gp; Cost to Create: 28,065 gp + 2,220 XP.

TRIDENT OF FISH COMMAND

The magical properties of this +1 trident with a 6-foot-long haft enable its wielder to cause all water-dwelling animals within a 60-foot radius to make a Will saving throw (DC 12).

This uses 1 charge of the trident.

Animals failing this save are completely under the empathic command of the wielder and will not attack her or any of her allies within 10 feet of her.

The wielder can make the controlled marine animals move in whatever direction she desires and convey messages of emotion to them (in other words, fear, hunger, anger, indifference, repletion, and so on).

Animals making their saving throw are free of empathic control, but they will not approach within 10 feet of the trident.

A school of fish should be checked as a single entity.

A newly created trident has 50 charges.

When all the charges are used, it remains a +1 trident.

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Speak with Animals; Market Price: 3,815 gp; Cost to Create: 2,065 gp + 140 XP.

TRIDENT OF WARNING

A weapon of this type enables its wielder to determine the location, depth, species, and number of hostile or hungry marine predators within 240 feet.

A trident of warning must be grasped and pointed in order for the character using it to gain such information, and it requires 1 round to scan a hemisphere with a radius of 240 feet.

The weapon is otherwise a +2 trident.

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, detect magic; Market Price: 9,815 gp; Cost to Create: 5,065 gp + 380 XP.

A frost brand extinguishes all nonmagical fires in its area. As a standard action, it can also dispel lasting fire spells such as wall of fire, but not instantaneous effects such as fireball, meteor swarm, and flame strike, though you must succeed on a dispel check (1d20 +14) against each spell to dispel it.

This javelin becomes a 5d6 lightning bolt when thrown (Reflex DC 14 half).

It is consumed in the attack.

Faint evocation; CL 5th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, lightning bolt; Price 1,500 gp; Cost 750 gp + 30 XP.

LIFE-DRINKER

This +1 greataxe is favored by undead and constructs, who do not suffer its drawback.

A life-drinker bestows two negative levels on its target whenever it deals damage, just as if its target had been struck by an undead creature.

One day after being struck, subjects must make a DC 16 Fortitude save for each negative level or lose a character level.

Each time a life-drinker deals damage to a foe, it also bestows one negative level on the wielder.

Any negative level gained by the wielder in this fashion lasts for 1 hour.

Strong necromancy; CL 13th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, enervation; Price 40,320 gp; Cost 20,320 gp + 1,600 XP.

LUCK BLADE

This +2 short sword gives its possessor a +1 luck bonus on all saving throws.

Its possessor also gains the power of good fortune, usable once per day.

This extraordinary ability allows its possessor to reroll one roll that she just made.

She must take the result of the reroll, even if it's worse than the original roll.

In addition, a luck blade may contain up to three wishes (when randomly rolled, a luck blade holds 1d4-1 wishes, minimum 0).

When the last wish is used, the sword remains a +2 short sword, still grants the +1 luck bonus, and still grants its reroll power.

Strong evocation; CL 17th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, wish or miracle; Price 22,060 gp (0 wishes), 62,360 gp (1 wish), 102,660 gp (2 wishes), 142,960 gp (3 wishes); Cost 11,030 gp + 882 XP (0 wishes), 31,180 gp + 2,494 XP (1 wish); 51,330 gp + 4,106 XP (2 wishes), 71,480 gp + 5,718 XP (3 wishes).

MACE OF SMITING

This +3 adamantine heavy mace has a +5 enhancement bonus against constructs, and any critical hit dealt to a construct completely destroys it (no saving throw).

A critical hit dealt to an outsider deals ×4 damage rather than ×2.

Moderate transmutation; CL 11th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, disintegrate; Price 75,312 gp; Cost 39,312 gp + 2,880 XP.

MACE OF TERROR

On command, this +2 heavy mace causes the wielder's clothes and appearance to transform into an illusion of darkest horror such that living creatures in a 30-foot cone become panicked as if by a fear spell (Will DC 16 partial).

They take a -2 morale penalty on saving throws, and they flee from the wielder.

The wielder may use this ability up to three times per day. Strong necromancy; CL 13th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, fear; Price 38,552 gp; Cost 19,276 gp + 1,542 XP.

MASTERWORK COLD IRON LONGSWORD

This nonmagical longsword is crafted out of cold iron. As a masterwork weapon, it has a +1 enhancement bonus on attack rolls.

No aura (nonmagical); Price 330 gp.

NINE LIVES STEALER

This longsword always performs as a +2 longsword, but it also has the power to draw the life force from an opponent.

It can do this nine times before the ability is lost.

At that point, the sword becomes a simple +2 longsword (with a hint of evil about it).

A critical hit must be dealt for the sword's death-dealing ability to function, and this weapon has no effect on creatures not subject to critical hits.

The victim is entitled to a DC 20 Fortitude save to avoid death.

If the save is successful, the sword's death-dealing ability does not function, no use of the ability is expended, and normal critical damage is determined.

This sword is evil, and any good character attempting to wield it gains two negative levels.

These negative levels remain as long as the sword is in hand and disappear when the sword is no longer wielded.

These negative levels never result in actual level loss, but they cannot be overcome in any way (including restoration spells) while the sword is wielded.

Strong necromancy [evil]; CL 13th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, finger of death; Price 23,057 gp; Cost 11,528 gp 5 sp + 922 XP.

OATHBOW

Of elven make, this white +2 composite longbow (+2 Str bonus) whispers "Swift defeat to my enemies" in Elven when nocked and pulled.

Once per day, if the firer swears aloud to slay her target (a free action), the bow's whisper becomes the low shout "Swift death to those who have wronged me".

Against such a sworn enemy, the bow has a +5 enhancement bonus, and arrows launched from it deal an additional 2d6 points of damage (and ×4 on a critical hit instead of the normal ×3).

However, the bow is treated as only a masterwork weapon against all foes other than the sworn enemy, and the wielder takes a -1 penalty on attack rolls with any weapon other than the oathbow.

These bonuses and penalties last for seven days or until the sworn enemy is slain or destroyed by the wielder of the oathbow, whichever comes first.

The oathbow may only have one sworn enemy at a time. Once the wielder swears to slay a target, he cannot make a new oath until he has slain that target or seven days have passed.

Even if the wielder slays the sworn enemy on the same day that he makes the oath, he cannot activate the oathbow's special power again until 24 hours have passed from the time he made the oath.

Strong evocation; CL 15th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, creator must be an elf; Price 25,600 gp; Cost 13,100 gp + 1,000 XP.

RAPIER OF PUNCTURING

Three times per day, this +2 wounding rapier allows the wielder to make a touch attack with the weapon that deals 1d6 points of Constitution damage by draining blood.

Creatures immune to critical hits are immune to the Constitution damage dealt by this weapon.

Strong necromancy; CL 13th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, harm; Price 50,320 gp; Cost 25,320 gp + 2,000 XP.

SCREAMING BOLT

One of these +2 bolts screams when fired, forcing all enemies of the wielder within 20 feet of the path of the bolt to succeed on a DC 14 Will save or become shaken.

This is a mindaffecting fear effect.

Faint enchantment; CL 5th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, doom; Price 267 gp; Cost 128 gp and 5 sp + 10 XP.

SHATTERSPIKE

Wielders without the Improved Sunder feat use Shatterspike as a +1 longsword only; wielders with the Improved Sunder feat add a +4 bonus (including the sword's +1 enhancement bonus) to the opposed roll when attempting to strike a foe's weapon.

If successful, Shatterspike deals 1d8+4 points of damage plus the wielder's Strength modifier to the target weapon (the target weapon's hardness must still be overcome with each hit).

Shatterspike can damage weapons with an enhancement bonus of +4 or lower.

Strong evocation; CL 13th; Str 13, Craft Arms and Armor, Power Attack, Improved Sunder, shatter; Price 4,315 gp; Cost 2,315 gp + 160 XP; Weight 4 lb.

SHIFTER'S SORROW

This +1/+1 two-bladed sword has blades of alchemical silver. The weapon deals an extra 2d6 points of damage against any creature with the shapechanger subtype.

When a shapechanger or a creature in an alternate form (such as a druid using wild shape) is struck by the weapon, it must make a DC 15 Will save or return to its natural form.

Strong transmutation; CL 15th; Craft Arms and Armor, baleful polymorph; Price 12,780 gp; Cost 6,780 gp + 480 XP; Weight 10 lb.

SILVER DAGGER, MASTERWORK

This masterwork alchemical silver dagger is nonmagical. As a masterwork weapon, it has a +1 enhancement bonus on attack rolls.

No aura (nonmagical); Price 322 gp.

SLAYING ARROW

This +1 arrow is keyed to a particular type or subtype of creature.

If it strikes such a creature, the target must make a DC 20 Fortitude save or die (or, in the case of unliving targets, be destroyed) instantly.

Note that even creatures normally exempt from Fortitude saves (undead and constructs) are subject to this attack.

When keyed to a living creature, this is a death effect (and thus death ward protects a target).

To determine the type or subtype of creature the arrow is keyed to, roll on the previous table.

A greater slaying arrow functions just like a normal slaying arrow, but the DC to avoid the death effect is 23.

Strong necromancy; CL 13th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, finger of death (slaying arrow) or heightened finger of death (greater slaying arrow); Price 2,282 gp (slaying arrow) or 4,057 gp (greater slaying arrow); Cost 1,144 gp 5 sp + 91 XP (slaying arrow) or 2,032 gp + 162 XP (greater slaying arrow).

SLEEP ARROW

This +1 arrow is painted white and has white fletching. If it strikes a foe so that it would normally deal damage, it instead bursts into magical energy that deals nonlethal damage (in the same amount as would be lethal damage) and forces the target to make a DC 11 Will save or fall asleep.

Faint enchantment; CL 5th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, sleep; Price 132 gp; Cost 69 gp 5 sp + 5 XP.

SUN BLADE

This sword is the size of a bastard sword. However, a sun blade is wielded as if it were a short sword with respect to weight and ease of use. (In other words, the weapon appears to all viewers to be a bastard sword, and deals bastard sword damage, but the wielder feels and reacts as if the weapon were a short sword).

Any individual able to use either a bastard sword or a short sword with proficiency is proficient in the use of a sun blade.

Likewise, Weapon Focus and Weapon Specialization in short sword and bastard sword apply equally, but the benefits of those feats do not stack.

In normal combat, the glowing golden blade of the weapon is equal to a +2 bastard sword.

Against evil creatures, its enhancement bonus is +4.

Against Negative Energy Plane creatures or undead creatures, the sword deals double damage (and  $\times 3$  on a critical hit instead of the usual  $\times 2$ ).

The blade also has a special sunlight power.

Once per day, the wielder can swing the blade vigorously above her head while speaking a command word.

The sunblade then sheds a bright yellow radiance that is like full daylight.

The radiance begins shining in a 10-foot radius around the sword wielder and extends outward at 5 feet per round for 10 rounds thereafter, to create a globe of light with a 60-foot radius.

When the wielder stops swinging, the radiance fades to a dim glow that persists for another minute before disappearing entirely.

All sun blades are of good alignment, and any evil creature attempting to wield one gains one negative level.

The negative level remains as long as the sword is in hand and disappears when the sword is no longer wielded.

This negative level never results in actual level loss, but it cannot be overcome in any way (including restoration spells) while the sword is wielded.

Moderate evocation; CL 10th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, daylight, creator must be good; Price 50,335 gp; Cost 25,335 gp + 2,000 XP.

SWORD OF LIFE STEALING

This black iron +2 longsword bestows a negative level when it deals a critical hit.

The sword wielder gains 1d6 temporary hit points each time a negative level is bestowed on another.

These temporary hit points last for 24 hours.

One day after being struck, subjects must make a DC 16 Fortitude save for each negative level or lose a character level.

Strong necromancy; CL 17th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, enervation; Price 25,715 gp; Cost 12,857 gp and 5 sp + 1,029 XP.

SWORD OF THE PLANES

This longsword has an enhancement bonus of +1 on the Material Plane, but on any Elemental Plane its enhancement bonus increases to +2.

(The +2 enhancement bonus also applies on the Material Plane when the weapon is used against elementals).

It operates as a +3 longsword on the Astral Plane or the Ethereal Plane or when used against opponents native to either of those planes.

On any other plane, or against any outsider, it functions as a +4 longsword.

Strong evocation; CL 15th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, plane shift; Price 22,315 gp; Cost 11,157 gp and 5 sp + 893 XP.

SWORD OF SUBTLETY

A +1 short sword with a thin, dull gray blade, this weapon provides a +4 bonus on its wielder's attack and damage rolls when he is making a sneak attack with it.

Moderate illusion; CL 7th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, blur; Price 22,310 gp; Cost 11,155 gp + 892 XP.

SYLVAN SCIMITAR

This +3 scimitar, when used outdoors in a temperate climate, grants its wielder the use of the Cleave feat and deals an extra 1d6 points of damage.

Moderate evocation; CL 11th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, divine power or creator must be a 7th-level druid; Price 47,315 gp; Cost 23,657 gp and 5 sp + 1,893 XP.

TRIDENT OF FISH COMMAND

The magical properties of this +1 trident with a 6-foot-long haft enable its wielder to charm up to 14 HD of aquatic animals (Will DC 16 negates, animals get a +5 bonus if currently under attack by the wielder or his allies), no two of which can be more than 30 feet apart.

The wielder can use this effect up to three times per day. The wielder can communicate with the animals as if using a spell with animals spell.

Animals making their saving throw are free of control, but they will not approach within 10 feet of the trident.

The trident can be used up to three times per day.

Moderate enchantment; CL 7th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, spell with animals; Price 18,650 gp; Cost 9,325 gp + 746 XP.

TRIDENT OF WARNING

A weapon of this type enables its wielder to determine the location, depth, kind, and number of aquatic predators within 680 feet.

A trident of warning must be grasped and pointed in order for the character using it to gain such information, and it requires 1 round to scan a hemisphere with a radius of 680 feet.

The weapon is otherwise a +2 trident.

Moderate divination; CL 7th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, locate creature; Price 10,115 gp; Cost 5,057 gp and 5 sp + 405 XP.

DUNGEON MASTER'S GUIDE 2 (3.5)

Description: The dagger is of light gray metal, exquisitely inscribed with a tracery of decorative lines across the blade. The hilt is wrapped in oiled black leather.

When first drawn from its sheath for the day, the dagger gleams with white light, a light that seems to pass to into its wielder.

Once per day, when the dagger is first drawn from its scabbard in any given 24-hour period, the dagger grants 1d10+10 temporary hit points.

Effect: This +1 defending dagger grants the wielder a +2 resistance bonus on all saving throws as long as it is wielded.

These temporary hit points last for up to 10 hours.

GHOST GAUNTLET

This magical gauntlet allows you to attack spiritual beings and other normally immaterial creatures.

Description: This strange gauntlet is made of a pale gray metal that seems almost transparent at times.

When the gauntlet is worn, the gauntlet fades into near complete transparency, leaving behind runes along the fingers that look almost like tattoos.

Activation: Wearing the gauntlet activates all its various effects as you desire.

Any weapon gripped by your gauntleted hand also gains the ghost touch special ability.

The gauntlet's most impressive feature, though, is its ability to make parts of itself (and the corresponding portions of your hand inside) incorporeal.

You can apply the effect to portions of your hands, leaving bits of your fingertips intact, so that you can reach inside locks and objects to manipulate their mechanisms.

Thus, the gauntlet grants you a +5 competence bonus on Disable Device and Open Lock checks.

In addition, a ghost gauntlet can be used to transport an object that you touch with it to a distant location on the Ethereal Plane, as though by the teleport object spell.

This ability is usable once per day.

EPIC LEVEL HANDBOOK (3.0)

BLADE OF BLACK ICE

This +5 keen icy burst bastard sword is said to have been forged by Iuz, and was gifted to Robilar by Mordenkainen shortly before Robilar's disastrous legendary last foray into Castle Greyhawk.

Tenser, who was present at the time, claims that the blade had been enchanted with special dispelling magics that aided Robilar in his release of the Old One from his magical prison beneath that great edifice.

Seemingly made of ice, the Blade of Black Ice deals an additional 1d6 points of cold damage on every strike, plus an additional 1d10 points of cold damage on a critical hit (which, due to its keen edge, it is quite likely to achieve).

Its wielder is protected from heat and fire, because the sword absorbs the first 10 points of fire damage each round that the wielder would otherwise take.

The Blade of Black Ice also has a 50% chance of extinguishing any fire into which its blade is thrust.

This power extends to a 10-foot radius and includes lasting effects such as wall of fire but excludes instantaneous effects such as fireball.

Caster Level: 14th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armors, ice storm, dispel magic, protection from elements; Market Price: 128,335 gp; Cost to Create: 64,335 gp + 2,474 XP.

EXPANDED PSIONICS HANDBOOK (3.5)

SILVER SWORD, GITHYANKI

Powerful githyanki warriors carry these impressive weapons, which are typically +1 silvered greatswords.

The weapon looks much like a standard weapon while still in its sheath.

When drawn, the silver sword transforms into a column of silvery liquid, alternating the weapon's balance round by round as the blade's shape flows and shimmers.

A silver sword has the additional quality of reaching into the minds of the foes it strikes, disrupting their psionic powers.

A target hit by the weapon must succeed on a DC 17 Fortitude save or lose any psionic abilities for 1d4 rounds.

By using the sunder attack action, the wielder of a githyanki silver sword can attack an astral traveler's silvery cord.

The cord trails 5 feet behind the traveler it is attached to, and can only be attacked by someone adjacent to the traveler who is wielding a silver sword.

The normally insubstantial cord is treated as a tangible object with the owner's Armor Class, a hardness of 10, and 20 hit points.

If an astral traveler's cord is damaged, he must succeed on a DC 13 Fortitude save or be forced to return to his physical body.

If the silver cord is severed, the traveler is slain instantly.

While this power can be applied to any melee weapon, githyanki make only greatswords with this ability.

This ability can be applied only to a melee weapon manufactured with alchemical silver (see the Dungeon Master's Guide, page 284).

Moderate psychometabolism; ML 11th; Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, creator must be a githyanki, weapon must be made of alchemical silver, psionic banishment; Price 50,530 gp; Cost 25,530 gp + 2,000 XP.

This is a necromantic death effect.

The wand also confers a +5 deflection bonus to the Armor Class of its wielder.

A pain devil can create a new one as a swift action.

If it loses possession of its hell scourge, the weapon crumbles into worthless dust.

HELLFIRE CROSSBOW

Built from brass and bone, this crossbow lacks a drawstring. Instead, any devil that carries it can use a move action to focus the crossbow on a single target and let loose a stream of pure hellfire as a ranged touch attack.

This energy appears as flame, but it has no energy type (and thus ignores resistances and immunities).

A hellfire crossbow has a maximum range of 400 feet and no range increment.

This weapon functions only in the hands of a baatezu.

Other creatures are unable to focus the energy needed to spawn the bolt of energy from it.

HELLSPEAR

This weapon is unique to orthons.

It is a longspear with a variety of sharp blades projecting along its shaft, making it useful against distant and close opponents.

This exotic weapon has reach but, unlike most other reach weapons, it is also usable against opponents within its wielder's normal reach.

RUBY ROD

This lesser version of Asmodeus's own weapon acts as +2 unholy heavy mace.

The ruby rod that the aspect of Asmodeus carries is a lesser version of Asmodeus's own weapon.

It is carved from a single ruby and worth a fortune (at least 50,000 gp) to the right people.

It carries the taint of evil, though, and is very hard to sell in normal channels.

Anyone the PCs approach with it can recognize it on a DC 10 Knowledge (religion) check.

TRIPLE FLAIL

Yeenoghu wields a unique triple-headed +3 adamantine heavy flail.

Each time he scores a hit with this item, roll 1d3 to see how many of the heads hit the target.

A hit with the flail deals the same amount of damage no matter how many heads strike.

If more than one head hits the same target, the victim must succeed on a DC 32 Will save or be confused for 2d4 rounds.

If all three hit, the target must also make a successful DC 32 Fortitude save or be paralyzed for 1d4 rounds.

Only Yeenoghu can use the weapon to confuse and paralyze targets.
The save DCs are Strength-based.

FROSTBURN (3.5)

PICK OF ICEPARTING

This +2 cold bane heavy pick can score critical hits against creatures of the cold subtype normally immune to critical hits.

Once per day, a pick of iceparting can be swung at an icy surface (such as a glacial wall, the surface of a frozen lake, or an iceberg) as a standard action.

Three tiny fractures radiate out from the point you struck toward any three points within 50 feet; these three points can be chosen by you but must be connected to the initial impact point by a solid sheet of ice.

When the cracks reach their targets, they cause the ice located there to explode violently.

Any creature within 5 feet of this explosion takes 3d6 points of piercing damage (Reflex DC 14 half).

HEROES OF BATTLE (3.5)

SIEGE ENGINES AND AMMUNITIONS

ACID STONE

This spherical clay ball is filled with acid. It deals 1d6 points of bludgeoning damage to its target. In addition, upon impact it breaks apart, dealing 2d6 points of acid damage to any creature or object in the square it hits and 1d6 points of acid damage to any creature or object in an adjacent square.

ALCHEMIST'S STONE

This spherical clay ball is filled with alchemist's fire. It deals 1d6 points of bludgeoning damage to its target. In addition, upon impact it breaks apart, dealing 2d6 points of fire damage to any creature or object in the square it hits and 1d6 points of fire damage to any creature or object in an adjacent square. Any creature or object exposed to the alchemist's fire also catches fire; creatures and attended objects can avoid this by succeeding on a DC 15 Reflex save.

BALLISTA BOLT, ADAMANTINE

An adamantine ballista bolt ignores hardness of less than 20 possessed by any object it strikes. No aura (nonmagical); Price 3,001 gp.

BATTERING RAM, ADAMANTINE

A bane to any gate or wall that stands in its way, the adamantine ram ignores hardness of less than 20 possessed by any object it strikes. With an adamantine head cast in the likeness of a mountain ram, this is an expensive but effective way of breaking down barriers. No aura (nonmagical); Price 16,000 gp.

CATAPULT STONE, ADAMANTINE

Though most weaponsmiths would decry this as an inexcusable waste of precious metal, there is no doubt as to the effectiveness of a huge chunk of adamantine thrown from a catapult. An adamantine catapult stone ignores hardness of less than 20 possessed by any object it strikes. No aura (nonmagical); Price +100 gp/lb. (see Table 4-1, page 67)

DRAGONFIRE RAM

The head of this battering ram depicts a fearsome dragon in mid-breath. The dragon's mouth flickers with fire, and each blow of the ram sends flaming embers flying. Each strike of the ram deals an extra 1d6 points of fire damage to any wooden or flammable object it strikes, ignoring hardness.

If the ram breaks through the object it strikes, it immediately breathes a 30-foot cone of fire through the opening, dealing 2d6 points of fire damage (Reflex DC 15 half).

It can breathe fire once per day. Faint evocation; CL 3rd; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, scorching ray; Price 4,000 gp.

DRAGONSHOT CATAPULT

A dragonshot catapult appears much like a typical catapult bearing an elaborate rendition of a dragon's head at the end of the throwing arm.

Instead of loading normal shot or stone, the operator can choose to load a gemstone of the appropriate type and value listed below.

Activating the firing mechanism hurls the gemstone as if it were a stone appropriately sized for the catapult.

When the gemstone strikes the ground, it explodes in a burst of energy.

All nearby creatures and objects take damage as detailed below.

White: All within 5 feet of the target square take 2d6 points of cold damage (Reflex DC 14 half).

The gemstone used must be a pearl worth at least 50 gp.

Black: All within 10 feet of the target square take 4d4 points of acid damage (Reflex DC 14 half).

The gemstone used must be a piece of obsidian worth at least 100 gp.

Green: All within 15 feet of the target square take 4d6 points of acid damage (Reflex DC 16 half).

The gemstone used must be an emerald worth at least 400 gp.

Blue: All within 20 feet of the target square take 4d8 points of electricity damage (Reflex DC 16 half).

The gemstone used must be a sapphire worth at least 500 gp.

Red: All within 30 feet of the target square take 4d10 points of fire damage (Reflex DC 18 half).

The gemstone used must be a ruby worth at least 1,000 gp. Strong transmutation; CL 15th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor; Price +10,000 gp.

ELEMENTAL ROCKSHOT

This ordinary-looking catapult stone can be fired from a scorpion or heavy mangonel.

After it impacts (dealing damage as normal), elemental rockshot transforms into a Small earth elemental, attacking nearby enemies for 5 rounds before crumbling into dust. Faint conjuration; CL 5th; Craft Wondrous Item, summon monster III or summon nature's ally II; Price 750 gp.

HELLWASP SHOT

This ammunition resembles a hardened mound of mud and can be loaded into any stone-throwing catapult.

On impact, hellwasp shot deals no damage but instead breaks open and spews out a magically summoned swarm of hellwasps (see Monster Manual page 238).

The swarm fills a 10-foot cube and attacks all creatures within that area for 10 rounds before disappearing.

If hellwasp shot lands in a unit of creatures of 6 HD or less, it forces a morale check (see page 72).

Moderate conjuration; CL 10th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, summon monster V; Price 2,500 gp.

HOLY/UNHOLY STONE

This spherical clay ball is filled with the equivalent of five flasks of holy or unholy water. It deals 1d6 points of bludgeoning damage to its target. In addition, it breaks apart upon impact, allowing the holy stone version to deal 4d4 points of damage to any undead creature or evil outsider in the square it hits, and 2d4 points of damage to any such creature in an adjacent square. An unholy stone deals the same amount of damage to good outsiders.

LIGHTNING BALLISTA

This magic light ballista does not use traditional ammunition. Instead, it fires a 60-foot line of lightning when triggered. Creatures in the path of the bolt take 5d6 points of electricity damage (Reflex DC 14 half). A lightning ballista can be fired only once per minute (except in a stormy environment, where it can be fired every other round). A lightning ballista requires no loading time or attack roll. Moderate evocation; CL 5th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, lightning bolt; Price 15,000 gp.

SCORCHING BALLISTA

This magic light ballista does not use traditional ammunition. Instead, it fires a 60-foot ray of fire when triggered. The operator of a scorching ballista makes an attack roll as normal for firing a ballista; however, he need only succeed on a ranged touch attack to strike his target. A target hit by the ray takes 4d6 points of fire damage. A scorching ballista can be fired only once per minute but requires no loading time. Faint evocation; CL 3rd; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, scorching ray; Price 6,000 gp.

SELF-LAUNCHING STONE

A self-launching stone provides all the benefit of a catapult, without the trouble of constructing or maintaining a machine. On command, a self-launching stone flies into the air and strikes as if fired from a light mangonel, automatically hitting the target square. A self-launching stone only functions once, just like other magic siege weapon ammunition. Moderate transmutation; CL 9th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, telekinesis; Price 500 gp.

SPIDER SHOT

This clay pot is filled with hundreds of venomous spiders and sealed with a large cork stopper. It deals 1d6 points of bludgeoning damage to its target. In addition, the contents spread over a 10-foot-by-10-foot square, creating a spider swarm (see Monster Manual page 239).

This swarm attacks all creatures in or adjacent to its space but does not attack any creatures more than 5 feet away.

TANGLEFOOT SHOT

This ammunition is essentially an enormous tanglefoot bag. It deals no damage to its target. Instead, all creatures within 5 feet of the impact square are affected as if they had come into contact with a tanglefoot bag (see Player's Handbook page 128); the creature in the impact square takes a -5 penalty on its save to avoid being glued to the floor.

LORDS OF DARKNESS (3.0)

BANESWORD

These +1 lawful longswords have been appearing in greater numbers in the hands of devout Banites. This item originally appeared in Magic of Faerûn. Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, enervation; Market Price: 8,702 gp; Cost to Create: 4,502 gp + 336 XP.

ARMATHOR'S SLING STONES

These +1 sling bullets were crafted especially for Sammkol Thistlestar, one of the only two halfling armathors of Myth Drannor.

Each stone produces a slow effect (Will DC 14 negates) on any creature it strikes, so that a halfling's shorter legs will not prove disadvantageous when chasing down a malefactor.

At least two hundred armathor's sling stones were created before Sammkol's murder in 519 DR.

These items are usually found in groups of fifty.

Faint transmutation; CL 5th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, slow; Price 12,305 gp for 50 stones; Cost 6,305 gp + 480 XP for 50 stones.

DELIMBIYRA'S SHINING BOW

Crafted of phandar wood before the fall of Eaerlann, this +1 composite longbow (+4 Str bonus) glows with a silvery light equivalent to that of a torch.

Arrows shot from this longbow become silvered weapons in flight, and any creature struck by one is subject to the effects of a silverhued faerie fire spell.

The weapon has never been recovered from fallen Myth Glaurach, and legend asserts that it still lies within the City of Scrolls.

Faint evocation; CL 4th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, faerie fire; Price 6,800 gp; Cost 3,800 gp + 240 XP.

NIMBLESTEP

A small number of these psionically empowered +1 short swords were retrieved from the basin floor of the Vilhon Reach by the traveling merchant Vodarn (CN male water genasi rogue 7), who sells recovered sunken treasures in markets throughout the Dragon Reach.

The genasi claims the blades originated from the ruins of the drowned Jhaamdathan city known as Corrant.

A psionic character wielding a nimblestep can take a move action instead of a full-round action to become psionically focused.

A psionic wielder also gains Up the Walls as a bonus feat, but only so long as he carries the weapon in his hand.

In addition, a psionically focused wielder of a nimblestep can expend his psionic focus to gain a +10 bonus on a single Jump check.

Moderate psychometabolism; ML 5th; Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, Psionic Meditation, Up the Walls; Price: 18,310 gp; Cost 9,310 gp + 720 XP.

SPEAR OF MORGUR

Plundered from Illusk by Uthgar Gardolfsson's raiders, this duskwood lance is tipped with a spearhead fashioned from dragon bone and bathed in rose-hued flames.

Upon its owner's death, it passed on to one of Uthgar's twelve sons, eventually becoming the traditional weapon of the leader of the Red Pony tribe.

The spear of Morgur was lost when a Red Pony chieftain ventured into the Underdark by way of a passage beneath the One Stone ancestor mound.

The spear of Morgur is a +1 brilliant energy longspear.

In addition, any creature touched by it is bathed in rose-hued faerie fire for 1 round.

In the hands of a tomb tapper, the weapon gains the throwing and returning special abilities.

A thaalud that loses its maul searches tirelessly for it.

If a maul is destroyed, the thaalud that created it can make a new one from 100 pounds of adamantine after one year.

Weight: 15 lb.

The head of this massive warhammer is made of living rock.

A galeb duhr hammer acts as a +1 warhammer.

In addition, if you have the stonecunning racial ability, the hammer gains an extra ability.

Whenever you score a critical hit with a galeb duhr hammer against a creature standing on the ground, the surface your target is standing on attempts to hold the creature in place. For 5 rounds, the victim's speed falls to 5 feet and it takes a –2 penalty on attack rolls and to AC.

Lore: Galeb duhrs are enigmatic and taciturn rock creatures.

A galeb duhr hammer is actually the nascent form of a galeb duhr, as yet unintelligent, gifted by the clan fathers to certain dwarves and other earth friends to serve as a living weapon against common enemies.

Someone who wields a galeb duhr hammer without the permission of the hammer's creator faces the possibility of being hunted down and crushed (Knowledge [arcana] DC 15).

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, stone shape.

Cost to Create: 2,500 gp (plus 312 gp for masterwork warhammer), 200 XP, 5 days.

GHOST NET

Price (Item Level): 8,320 gp (11th)

Body Slot: — (held)

Caster Level: 13th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 21) abjuration

Activation: —

Weight: 1 lb.

This sheet of gossamer-thin netting has an iridescent sheen.

You can throw this item at a target as though it were an ordinary net.

It has no effect against corporeal targets, but any incorporeal target hit by a ghost net is treated as corporeal for the purpose of dealing damage to it with physical or magical attacks (though the net doesn't entangle an incorporeal target).

It can be hit with normal weapons (though its normal damage reduction, if any, still applies), and it does not have the usual 50% chance to ignore damage from corporeal sources.

A creature ensnared by a ghost net also cannot turn ethereal (or, if snared on the Ethereal Plane, can't return to the Material Plane).

The creature retains all its other special abilities and can extract itself from the net with a successful DC 20 Escape Artist check as a full-round action.

However, a ghost net can't be burst with a Strength check as a normal net can.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, ghost trap (SC 103).

Cost to Create: 4,000 gp (plus 320 gp for masterwork net), 320 XP, 8 days.

LASH OF SANDS

Body Slot: — (held)

Caster Level: 12th

Aura: Strong; (DC 21) necromancy

Strips of camel skin wrap the handle of this strange whip, but the rest of its length seems to be a ribbon of cohesive sand.

This +1 desiccating burst whip is twice as heavy as a normal whip, deals lethal damage, and is effective even against opponents in armor.

Once per day, you can activate the whip when you strike an opponent with it.

Doing so creates a mass of leather bindings that enwrap the target, entangling it as if with a net (PH 119) for 3 rounds or until it escapes.

Each round the creature remains entangled, it takes 1d4 points of damage, or 1d8 points if it is a plant or an elemental that has the water subtype.

Nonliving creatures take no damage from this effect.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, animate rope, desiccate (Snd 114).

Cost to Create: 11,000 gp (plus 301 gp for masterwork whip), 880 XP, 22 days.

This greatsword has a wavy blade and an oversized hilt adorned with six spikes.

Manticore greatswords were designed to mimic the spike-throwing ability of their namesake creature.

Such a weapon functions as a +1 greatsword.

When you activate this weapon, you can launch either one spike (a standard action) or all six spikes (a full-round action) from its hilt as a ranged attack that provokes attacks of opportunity.

Treat the spikes as thrown weapons.

Each spike deals 1d6 points of piercing damage and has a range increment of 20 feet.

The spikes have an enhancement bonus equal to that of the weapon, and are treated as being made of the same material and having the same alignment (if any) as the weapon.

The spikes crumble to dust 1 round after they are launched from the weapon.

A manticore greatsword regenerates any thrown spikes at dawn each day.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, magic missile.

The effects last for 1 round.

1 charge: The dagger gains the returning property.

2 charges: The dagger gains the flaming and returning properties.

3 charges: The dagger gains the flaming and returning properties (DMG 224–225).

The stylized image of a stern, bearded dwarf glowers from the center of the weapon.

Three times per day, you can touch any object created of force (such as Bigby's forceful hand or a wall of force) with this +1 heavy pick.

Treat this touch as a touch attack against the touch AC provided by the spell or AC 0, if the spell does not provide the force effect with an AC of its own.

A successful touch attack destroys the object as if you had cast disintegrate on it.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, disintegrate.

Cost to Create: 4,500 gp (plus 308 gp for masterwork pick), 360 XP, 9 days.

While wielding this +1/+1 quarterstaff, you can attempt to disarm opponents as if you had the Improved Disarm feat. In addition, a quarterstaff of battle has three abilities you can use when you activate the weapon.

1. For the next 2 rounds, the staff automatically deflects all ranged attacks from Medium or smaller attackers, as well as all ranged attacks created by spells of 2nd level or lower, that target you or any ally adjacent to you. This ability functions three times per day.

2. Both ends of the staff gain the speed weapon property (DMG 225) for 5 rounds. This ability functions once per day.

3. Your next attack with the quarterstaff of battle on this turn is a battlestrike.

If the battlestrike hits, the quarterstaff deals an extra 2d6 points of damage, and the target is knocked prone and stunned for 1 round (Fort DC 22 negates the stun and prone effects).

This ability functions once per day.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, haste, protection from arrows, Tenser's transformation.

Cost to Create: 12,000 gp (plus 600 for masterwork/masterwork quarterstaff), 960 XP, 24 days.

The effect ends prematurely if you stop holding the rogue blade.

This effect can be used twice per day.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, blink.

Cost to Create: 6,000 gp (plus 320 gp for masterwork rapier), 480 XP, 12 days.

Activation: —

Weight: 2 lb.

The black leather lashes of this terrible scourge are covered in lengths of rusted wire, bits of broken red glass, and tiny fangs.

The target takes a -4 penalty on attack rolls, saving throws, and checks for 1d4 rounds (Fort DC 17 negates).

Multiple strikes on the same creature don't stack.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, symbol of pain.

Cost to Create: 13,000 gp (plus 320 gp for masterwork scourge), 1,040 XP, 26 days.

SPECTRAL DAGGER

Price (Item Level): 6,000 gp (10th)

Body Slot: — (held)

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) necromancy

Activation: —

Weight: 1 lb.

This pocked and notched piece of yellowed bone seems to have once been used as the pommel for a dagger, though the blade is now missing.

When you grasp the hilt of a spectral dagger, a "blade" of ghostly light coalesces into existence.

The weapon has no enhancement bonus (and can't be imbued with one).

Attacks with a spectral dagger are treated as touch attacks, but the weapon does not deal damage normally.

Instead, any target struck by the weapon is affected by a chill touch spell (Fort DC 11 partial or Will DC 11 negates; see PH 209).

A spectral dagger fades away if it leaves your hand, so the weapon can't be used to make ranged attacks.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, chill touch.

Cost to Create: 3,000 gp, 240 XP, 6 days.

SPIDER FANG

Price (Item Level): 5,302 gp (9th)

Body Slot: — (held)

Caster Level: 5th

Activation: — and standard (command)

Weight: 1 lb.

Of grotesque design, this seemingly organic dagger appears to be made from sharpened layers of purple-black chitin.

Sinister weblike patterns cover its surface, and the blade occasionally twitches and jerks of its own accord.

This +1 dagger quickly cuts through webs (magical or otherwise) without getting stuck.

As a move action, you can cut through a web entangling you or another creature.

You can move through webs created by a web spell at half your normal speed (although the weapon doesn't prevent you from being stuck in either of these webs in the first place).

These are continuous effects and require no activation.

Once per day, you can activate a spider fang to create a freestanding 10-foot-by-10-foot vertical curtain of cobwebs.

This curtain doesn't block movement, but does provide concealment to creatures behind it.

Anyone touching the curtain causes it to collapse, dealing 2d4 points of acid damage to that creature.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Melf's acid arrow, web.

Cost to Create: 2,500 gp (plus 302 gp for masterwork dagger), 200 XP, 5 days.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, sound burst.

Cost to Create: 3,750 gp (plus 300 gp for masterwork sling), 300 XP, 8 days.

SWORDBOW

Price (Item Level): 6,375 gp (10th)

Body Slot: — (held)

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) transmutation

Activation: Free (command)

Weight: 3 lb.

The limbs of this bow appear to be made of sharpened metal, as if the bow had been crafted from two thin, flexible swords.

This +1 longbow changes into a +1 longsword (or vice versa) when activated.

You can interchange bow and sword attacks as part of the same full attack action.

In sword form, the weapon features a bowlike grip and a pommel that resembles the curving tip of a bow.

In bow form, the weapon is made of metal, and each limb of the bow resembles a sword blade.

In either form, a swordbow has the same enhancement bonus.

A swordbow's enhancement bonus can be improved as if improving two separate weapons (for example, improving a +1 swordbow to a +2 swordbow costs 12,000 gp, just as if you were improving two +1 weapons to +2).

A swordbow can have special weapon properties added to it (such as flaming); such properties cost twice the normal amount (again, as if improving two separate weapons) and apply to both weapons if possible.

If a property can't apply to both weapons (such as vorpal or distance), it applies only to the swordbow when it is in an eligible form (for instance, a +1 swordbow of distance is a distance weapon only in bow form).

If a property can apply to the weapon in only one of its forms, it does not cost double the regular price.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, shrink item, elf.

Cost to Create: 3,000 gp (plus 375 gp for masterwork longbow), 240 XP, 6 days.

SWORDBOW, GREAT

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, shrink item, elf.

Cost to Create: 3,000 gp (plus 775 gp for masterwork composite longbow), 240 XP, 6 days.

SWORDBOW, LIGHT

Price (Item Level): 6,330 gp (10th)

Weight: 2 lb.

Small and compact, this bow seems made of thin, but strong, metal sharp enough to rival the deadliest of swords.

This item functions as a swordbow, except that its two forms are a +1 shortbow and a +1 rapier.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, shrink item, elf.

Forged long ago by dwarf hands, the fist is a +1 adamantine spiked gauntlet.

While wearing the gauntlet, you are protected from chill metal and heat metal spells.

This is a continuous effect and requires no activation.

In addition, once per day you can activate the fist.

When you do, your next attack with the gauntlet before the end of your turn deals an extra 2d6 points of damage, knocks the target prone, and stuns it for 1 round (Fort DC 22 negates the stun and prone effects).

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Bigby's clenched fist, endure elements.

Cost to Create: 2,000 gp (plus 3,005 for adamantite spiked gauntlet), 160 XP, 4 days.

Activation: Standard (command)

Weight: 4 lb.

This trident looks almost delicate, with fine points on its gradually curving prongs.

Silver and pearl inlays form lazy swirls down the weapon's haft.

When you activate this +1 trident, it creates a calm emotions effect centered on you (Will DC 16 negates).

The effect lasts for 5 rounds and does not require concentration.

Any creature that successfully saves against this effect is immune to further uses of that ability for 24 hours.

This ability functions three times per day.

Lore: Originally created by aquatic elves for use against the blood frenzy of sahuagin, this weapon has become equally useful in fending off savage barbarians who raid coastal areas (Knowledge [arcana] DC 15).

The hilt of this dagger is shaped like a snake, and the twisted blade looks like an impossibly long tongue.

Created by cults that worship serpent deities, these +1 daggers are prized for their ability to secrete toxic venom.

A viperblade has 5 charges, which are renewed each day at dawn.

Spending 1 or more charges envenoms the blade (at no risk to you) for the next attack you make during this turn.

The poison deals 1d6 points of Constitution damage (both primary and secondary).

The save DC depends on the number of charges spent: 1 charge: Fortitude DC 12.

2 charges: Fortitude DC 15.

3 charges: Fortitude DC 18.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, poison.

Cost to Create: 3,000 gp (plus 302 gp for masterwork dagger), 300 XP, 6 days.

Activation: — or swift (mental); see text

Weight: 3 lb.

This sturdy ebony rod is surmounted by a carving of a demonic, horned skull.

This +1 light mace confers a +1 profane bonus on your ranged touch attack rolls while you hold it.

This is a continuous effect and requires no activation.

Furthermore, a warlock's sceptor has 5 charges, which are renewed each day at dawn.

Spending 1 or more charges improves the damage of the next eldritch blast (CAr 7) you make in that round.

1 charge: +1d6 damage.

3 charges: +2d6 damage.

5 charges: +4d6 damage.

After these charges have been expended, the rod remains a +1 light mace, but it no longer provides a bonus on ranged touch attack rolls until its charges are restored.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Rod, bestow curse.

Cost to Create: 4,000 gp (plus 305 gp for masterwork light mace), 320 XP, 8 days.

WATER WHIP

Price (Item Level): 20,301 gp (15th)

Body Slot: — (held)

Caster Level: 8th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 19) transmutation

Activation: — and standard (command)

Weight: 2 lb.

This strange weapon looks less like a traditional whip and more like a tube of water, tapering along its length to icicle sharpness at one end.

The handle is crafted from a pale blue crystal shard.

This +1 whip shimmers and undulates with deceptive grace when held.

Unlike a normal whip, a water whip deals lethal damage and can affect armored creatures.

Furthermore, while wielding a water whip, you are difficult to disarm.

If the whip is knocked from your grasp, it immediately flows back into your hand at the beginning of your next turn (even if it is within someone else's grasp) as long as it is within 30 feet of you.

Doing this requires no action on your part.

In addition, drawing a water whip is always a free action.

Both a fire elemental and water elemental are bound within a water whip, allowing it to emanate either of two energy properties, flaming or frost (DMG 224).

You choose the property when you activate the whip, and it deals an extra 1d6 points of the appropriate kind of damage (fire or cold).

Lore: The first water whip was created by a sahuagin druid named Ak'ash'eck, who roamed the fringes of a great reef a decade ago (Knowledge [history] DC 20).

Ak'ash'eck enjoyed preying on unwary folk sailing south to trade with other sahuagin.

He was famous for the trick of ensnaring a victim near the railing of a ship passing at night, then pulling the victim overboard before an alarm could be raised (Knowledge [history] DC 30).

Prerequisites: Bind Elemental (ECS 51) or Craft Magic Arms and Armor, planar binding.

Cost to Create: 10,000 (plus 301 gp for masterwork whip), 800 XP, 20 days.

The wielder of the gauntlet is protected from chill metal and heat metal spells.

Once per day the wielder can declare a piledriver blow, which deals an additional +2d6 points of damage on a successful hit (if the attack misses, the piledriver blow is wasted for that day).

A creature struck by the piledriver blow must make a Fortitude save (DC 22) or be stunned for 1d4 rounds and a Reflex save (DC 22) to avoid being knocked prone.

Caster Level: 15th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Bigby's clenched fist, resist elements; Market Price: 23,305 gp; Cost to Create: 13,305 gp + 800 XP.

GOLDEN AXE OF THE GREAT RIFT

These +1 aberration bane battleaxes have dwarven runes inlaid in gold along both sides of the blade.

Created by the gold dwarves of the Great Rift, they are much in demand in regions where tunnels to the Underdark are common.

Caster Level: 8th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, summon monster I; Market Price: 18,310 gp; Cost to Create: 9,310 gp + 720 XP.

IT BEARS AN UNUSUAL CURSE

If it successfully strikes a creature and inflicts damage, the wielder randomly assumes a new shape as if someone had successfully cast polymorph other on him.

To determine the shape assumed, flip to a random page in the Monster Manual and select a creature whose form can be assumed with polymorph other.

The transformation lasts until the wielder makes another successful hit with the dagger, at which point he assumes a different random form.

If the new form doesn't use equipment, its primary attack natural method (such as a bite or claw) gains a silvered appearance, and this primary attack counts as the dagger for the purposes of assuming a new form.

If the wielder discards the dagger, he remains in his transformed shape.

Caster Level: 15th; Prerequisite: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, polymorph other; Market Price: 106,302 gp; Cost to Create: 53,000 gp + 4,240 XP.

JUSTICE BLADE

The church of Torm has manufactured many of these +1 holy mighty cleaving longswords.

Seemingly made of magically hardened bronze and inscribed with the hammer and scales symbol of Tyr, a justice blade always sheds pure white light in a 20-foot radius when drawn.

Caster Level: 8th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, divine power, holy smite, creator must be good; Market Price: 32,315 gp; Cost to Create: 16,315 gp + 1,280 XP.

LANCE OF FAERÛN

This lance is fashioned of hardwood and capped with a steel point.

Created specifically for mounted combat by warriors who follow Torm, some of these have found their way into the hands of other good-aligned orders as well.

Most (90%) of these are heavy lances; a few Small warriors also employ light lances in combat, and the remaining 10% are designed for their use.

The lance of Faerûn is a +2 holy lance that grants its wielder the ability to use the Spirited Charge feat.

In addition, if the wielder's patron is Torm, the lance gains a bane effect against evil outsiders.

Caster Level: 8th; Prerequisites: Craft Arms and Armor, summon monster I, holy smite, creator must be good; Market Price: 98,310 gp.

LIT WITH DANGER

Once per day when the wielder is attacked in melee by an invisible creature, this +1 shortspear automatically casts a faerie fire on the attacking creature immediately after the attack resolves.

Caster Level: 8th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, faerie fire; Market Price: 18,302 gp; Cost to Create: 9,302 gp + 720 XP.

LUIREN SHORTBOW

These +1 seeking shortbows have become well known in the northern lands because of the many Luiren halflings bearing them.

Some of them have been sold by down-on-their-luck kin and become prized by other folk.

Caster Level: 10th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, keen edge; Market Price: 8,330 gp; Cost to Create: 4,330 gp + 320 XP.

MACE OF THE DARKCHILDREN

This adamantine heavy mace has a natural enhancement bonus of +2.

It grants the wielder a +6 profane bonus on turning checks made to rebuke or control undead.

The wielder treats his level as two higher when determining how many Hit Dice of undead he can control.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, animate dead; Market Price: 17,000 gp; Cost to Create: 13,000 gp + 320 XP.

NAMARRA

This +2 keen longsword glows pale mauve when drawn, shedding light equal to a candle.

Carved on one side of the blade is the word "Namarra", and on the other is carved "Never sleeps".

When the weapon strikes metal, it spits white sparks.

The sword floats on water as if it were wood, and the sword can cast a silence spell upon itself at the owner's command as often as desired.

The effect ends if the wielder sheathes or loses contact with the weapon.

This weapon is old, with no tales that date its creation or relate themselves to "before Namarra was forged".

It is known as "the sword that never sleeps" because of its inscription, although none of its powers relate to watchfulness in any way.

Caster Level: 10th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, keen edge, silence, water walk; Market Price: 30,315 gp; Cost to Create: 15,315 gp + 1,200 XP.

NIGHTBLADE

The Red Wizards make these +1 daggers for their spies and counterspies.

When used against opponents of good alignment, the enhancement bonus of a nightblade increases to +2, and a good target hit must make a Will save (DC 16) or take 1 point of temporary damage to a random ability score.

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, enervation; Market Price: 8,702 gp; Cost to Create: 4,502 gp + 336 XP.

ONE THOUSAND BROKEN DREAMS

This mithral elven warblade is a +3 holy drow bane longsword created by the elven hero Datharian Mistwatcher, a worshiper of Sehanine Moonbow, when dark elves destroyed his home city thousands of years ago.

While he fell in battle to a host of driders shortly after the weapon was created, it eventually reached the hands of another elven hero known only in ballads as the Stargazer, who used it to slay hundreds of drow over the course of her life.

The Stargazer died of grief after the Battle of Nine Arrows when she realized her sister had been slain, and a young elven archer left with the weapon before drow reinforcements could arrive and seize it.

The sword has appeared in the hands of an elf at least once every few hundred years since that battle, only to disappear again each time.

The sword bestows one negative level on any evil creature that holds it.

The negative level remains as long as the sword is in hand and disappears when it is no longer carried.

This negative level never results in actual level loss, but it cannot be overcome in any way (including restoration spells) while the sword is held.

It is rumored that if the sword is ever drawn by a good-aligned drow, it would shatter into a thousand small (50 gp) moonstones.

If the rumor is true, each of these moonstones could be used once as an atonement spell to redeem a dark elf.

Caster Level: 16th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, holy smite, summon monster I, creator must be a good elf; Market Price: 100,315 gp; Cost to Create: 51,315 gp + 1,960 XP.

PRAYER OF ANGER

This +2 greatsword is inscribed with the holy symbol of Tempus.

Its bearer is immune to fear effects, and if the character has the ability to rage, each rage lasts 1 round longer than normal.

Caster Level: 8th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, remove fear; Market Price: 14,350 gp; Cost to Create: 7,350 gp + 560 XP.

QUARTERSTAFF OF BATTLE

This +3 quarterstaff of speed cannot be damaged by piercing or slashing attacks.

The wielder of the quarterstaff of battle may attempt to disarm opponents as if she had the Improved Disarm feat, and gains a +4 bonus on any attack roll made to disarm.

Three times per day the wielder can, as a standard action, activate the quarterstaff's arrow deflection ability.

This power lasts for 2 rounds.

While active, the quarterstaff automatically deflects all ranged weapon attacks (of weapons up to Medium-size) and absorbs any missiles or ranged attacks created by spells of 2nd level or less (such as magic missile or Melf's acid arrow) that target the wielder or any ally within 5 feet of the wielder.

The quarterstaff takes no damage from any attacks or spells it deflects or absorbs in this manner.

Once per day, the wielder can create a repulsion effect on command.

Also once per day, the wielder can turn any hit from the staff into a battlestrike.

A battlestrike deals double damage (triple if it is a critical hit).

The battlestrike's target must also make a Reflex save (DC 22) to avoid being thrown to the ground and a Fortitude save (DC 22) to avoid being stunned for 1d4 rounds.

Caster Level: 12th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, protection from arrows, repulsion, Bigby's clenched fist; Market Price: 162,600 gp; Cost to Create: 81,600 gp + 6,480 XP.

RUNEHAMMER

This +1 warhammer made of darksteel (see Special Materials later in this chapter) bears a large rune on its head, representing a spell stored in the hammer.

Unlike with a spell storing weapon, a runehammer's spell is not expended, and can be used once per day.

Rune powers common to the runehammers are.

- Alhalbrin: Heat metal upon the target.
- Faerindyl: Burning hands upon the target.
- Thundaril: Polymorph other on target (typically into a snail or toad).

As a darksteel weapon, the runehammer inflicts +1 point of electricity damage each time it hits.

If this treasure is generated randomly, roll 1d6 to determine which runehammer is found: 1–2 Alhalbrin; 3–5 Faerindyl; 6 Thundaril.

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Inscribe Rune, burning hands, heat metal, or polymorph other, creator must be at least 12th level; Market Price: 11,912 gp (Alhalbrin), 11,712 (Faerindyl), 17,912 (Thundaril); Cost to Create: 6,912 gp + 400 XP (Alhalbrin), 6,812 gp + 392 XP (Faerindyl), 9,912 gp + 640 XP (Thundaril).

SCIMITAR OF THE FOOL

This +1 scimitar gives the creature that carries it a –3 morale penalty on all Will saves.

These weapons are popular with tyrants who don't entirely trust their guards.

Caster Level: 6th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, cause fear; Market Price: 3,000 gp.

SEMBIAN GUARDBLADE

These +1 defending rapiers are fairly common among the nobility of Sembia, particularly those who study the twin sword style of fighting.

Caster Level: 10th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, keen edge; Market Price: 8,320 gp; Cost to Create: 4,320 gp + 320 XP.

SILVERMANE'S AXE

This +3 evil outsider bane battleaxe is inscribed with the symbol of Moradin and a phrase in dwarven: "Let the fiends fall before me, to the greatest glory of my clan, as I stand upon their heaped corpses and bellow the Soul Forger's name".

Caster Level: 8th; Prerequisite: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, summon monster I, creator must be a dwarf and at least 9th level; Market Price: 50,302 gp; Cost to Create: 25,302 gp + 2,000 XP.

SINGING SWORD

These silver +1 greatswords were created for use by the Harpers.

When drawn, they sing loudly and constantly.

As long as the bearer can hear the sword's song, she gains a +2 morale bonus on attack and damage rolls with the singing sword.

Furthermore, she gains a +3 morale bonus on saves against mind-affecting spells and effects.

The song is a sonic, mind-affecting effect.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, bleed, emotion, creator must have 3 ranks of Perform (melody); Market Price: 24,450 gp; Cost to Create: 12,450 gp + 960 XP.

SPECTRAL DAGGER

Fashioned from a bone of a creature that died violently, this appears to be just a dagger hilt made of bone.

When a creature grasps the hilt, a dagger "blade" of light appears.

(Treat the weapon as a dagger for proficiency, feats, and so on).

The blade "winks out" when the hilt leaves the wielder's hand.

The blade has no attack bonus and deals no damage, but any target struck is affected by a chill touch spell (DC 11).

Striking with the spectral dagger is considered a touch attack.

Creatures with multiple attacks may use the spectral blade in a full attack option to strike more than once per round just as if they wielded a normal dagger.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, chill touch; Market Price: 20,000 gp.

SPIDER FANG

This +1 dagger is black or dark purple.

It quickly cuts through webs (magical or otherwise) without getting stuck, allowing the wielder to move through an existing web at half her normal speed (although it does not prevent her from becoming stuck in a web if she fails her saving throw).

The wielder can use the dagger to create a web once per day.

Once per day it can also create a curtain of cobwebs, a 10-foot-square plane of wispy strands that grants one-half concealment to creatures hiding behind it.

Any creature that touches the curtain causes it to collapse upon the creature and deal 2d4 points of acid damage.

Caster Level: 3rd; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, grease, Melf's acid arrow, web; Market Price: 11,782 gp; Cost to Create: 6,042 gp + 459 XP.

STAFF OF MIGHTY SWEEPING

This sturdy ash +2 sweeping quarterstaff also grants the wielder the Improved Trip feat.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, bull's strength; Market Price: 28,600 gp; Cost to Create: 14,600 gp + 1,120 XP.

TALOSIAN SHORTSPEAR

These +1 flaming shock shortspears are fairly common among the experienced members of the church of Talos.

Caster Level: 10th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, electricity spell (call lightning, lightning bolt, or mystic lash), fire spell (fireball, flame blade, or flame strike); Market Price: 18,302 gp; Cost to Create: 9,302 gp + 720 XP.

TARAGARTH

This unique +3 mighty cleaving bastard sword is made of fire-blackened steel.

Just ahead of the crossguard is a rune.

When unsheathed, resist elements (fire) and feather fall protect the bearer automatically.

When gripped (even when sheathed), the bearer is protected by nondetection.

Forged by Elfgar of Silvermoon in the early days of the North, it got its nickname "the Bloodbrand" from its use at the Long Battle, where the champion Aeroth brandished the blood-slick blade in victory over fallen trolls time and again.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, divine power, feather fall, nondetection, resist elements; Market Price: 86,335 gp; Cost to Create: 43,335 gp + 3,440 XP.

VIPER DAGGER

Once per day, this +2 dagger can turn into a Small viper under the control of the dagger's owner.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Wondrous Item, summon nature's ally II, creator must be 6th level; Market Price: 10,462 gp; Cost to Create: 5,382 gp + 406 XP.

MAGIC OF INCARNUM (3.5)

TROLLBANE

One of the more famous works of the legendary ironsoul forgemaster Adrulzul Fireheart, Trollbane is a +3 adamantine flaming burst giantbane warhammer.

Three times per day, a wielder who has either an essentia pool or the ability to bind a soulmeld to his hands chakra can use haste as the spell (CL 9th; self only).

When this ability is activated, the weapon begins to smoke with a weird, blue, flickering flame whenever a troll comes within 100 feet of it.

This flame is harmless to the wielder or anyone else handling the weapon.

Strong evocation; CL 9th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, essentia pool, summon monster I, haste, plus flame blade, flame strike, or fireball; Price 86,000 gp; Cost 43,156 gp; Weight 5 lb.

MANUAL OF THE PLANES (3.0)

SILVER SWORDS

These impressive weapons are carried by githyanki combatants of 7th level and higher.

Of githyanki make, a silver sword is a +3 greatsword that looks much like a standard githyanki weapon.

However, when the weapon is drawn in melee, the blade transforms into a column of silvery liquid, altering the weapon's balance round by round as the blade's shape flows and shimmers.

In the hands of someone without the appropriate Exotic Weapon Proficiency feat, the weapon is clumsy (-4 penalty on attack rolls) and possesses only its enhancement bonus.

A proficient user on the Astral Plane, however, is able to attack the silver cord that connects the astral form to its material counterpart.

The normally insubstantial cord is treated as a tangible object with the owner's AC, hardness 10, and 20 hit points (see Attack an Object page 135 of the Player's Handbook).

A silver cord visibly trails 5 feet behind an astral traveler before fading into the astral medium.

Attacking it draws an attack of opportunity from the astral traveler.

When the cord is damaged, the astral traveler must succeed at a Fortitude save (DC 13) or be immediately forced to return to its body—which might be a good idea anyway if the traveler is not up to fighting githyanki on their home plane.

Severing the silver cord destroys both the astral form and the body on the Material Plane.

Silver swords with an enhancement bonus of +5 and vorpal characteristics exist, but these are minor artifacts, relatively few, and only handed down to heroes of the race.

If a silver sword falls into the hands of a nongithyanki, githyanki kill the possessor if they can, steal the weapon if they have to, negotiate if they must, or ally with the thief's most potent foe as a last resort.

Caster Level: 11th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, creator must be a githyanki; Market Price: 98,350 gp; Cost to Create: 49,000 gp + 3,920 XP.

MASTERS OF THE WILD (3.0)

ARROW OF CURE LIGHT WOUNDS

When this otherwise normal +1 arrow strikes a target, it does no damage.

Instead, the target is affected as if by a cure light wounds spell, which cures 1d8+1 points of damage.

If such an arrow strikes an undead target, the creature is entitled to spell resistance and a Will save (DC 11) for half damage.

An arrow of cure moderate wounds cures 2d8+3 points of damage and has a save DC of 12.

An arrow of cure serious wounds cures 3d8+5 points of damage and has a save DC of 13.

An arrow of cure critical wounds cures 4d8+7 points of damage and has a save DC of 14.

Caster Level: 1st (light), 3rd (moderate), 5th (serious), 7th (critical); Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, cure light wounds (light), cure moderate wounds (moderate), cure serious wounds (serious), or cure critical wounds (critical); Market Price: 107 gp (light), 607 gp (moderate), 1,507 gp (serious), or 2,807 gp (critical); Cost to Create: 57 gp + 4 XP (light), 307 gp + 24 XP (moderate), 757 gp + 60 XP (serious), or 1,407 gp + 112 XP (critical).

BERSERKER BLADE

The enhancement bonus of this +1 or +2 bastard sword increases by +1 when the wielder flies into a barbarian rage.

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, emotion (rage); Market Price: 6,335 gp (+1 weapon) or 15,335 gp (+2 weapon); Cost to Create: 3,335 gp + 240 XP (+1 weapon) or 7,835 gp + 600 XP (+2 weapon).

MINIATURES HANDBOOK (3.5)

BULLET OF SOUND

If this +1 sling bullet strikes a foe, it blasts an area with a tremendous cacophony.

Every creature within a 10-foot radius takes 1d8 points of sonic damage and must succeed on a DC 13 Fortitude saving throw to avoid being stunned for 1 round. Faint evocation; CL 3rd; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, sound burst; Price 196 gp.

CROSSBOW OF RELOADING

An elegantly designed weapon, this +1 light crossbow is decorated with ancient symbols of wind and energy along its handle.

Reloading this weapon is a free action instead of a move action.

Moderate transmutation; CL 7th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, haste; Price 6,335 gp.

DEMONWARD

This weapon is a +1 holy greatsword made of cold iron. Demonward weapons were crafted for use in planar wars against terrifying opponents from the deepest pits of the underworld.

They are scarred and notched from their frequent contact with demonic skin.

Moderate evocation [good]; CL 7th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, holy smite, creator must be good; Price 20,400 gp.

DEVILWARD

This weapon is a +1 holy greatsword made with alchemical silver.

Devilward weapons were forged in heavenly fires to be used against pit fiends and similar powers of hell. The alchemical silver material of this weapon imposes a -1 penalty on its damage, effectively canceling the +1 enhancement bonus.

Moderate evocation [good]; CL 7th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, holy smite, creator must be good; Price 18,480 gp.

LIVING CHAIN

This weapon seems possessed of some basic form of sentience.

When it is used on an attempt to trip an opponent, this +2 spiked chain coils around the victim's limbs, adding a +4 bonus on the wielder's Strength check to trip the opponent. This bonus is in addition to the normal benefits that chains get when attempting to trip.

Moderate transmutation; CL 7th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, bull's strength; Price 12,325 gp.

WEAPON OF TRANSMUTATION

This plain-looking +1 longsword has been designed to deal with foes of any origin.

After its wielder successfully hits a creature that has damage reduction (with the normal effects), over the next round the weapon transforms itself, taking on the properties required to overcome that creature's damage reduction.

The change takes effect at the beginning of your next turn. Once changed, the weapon overcomes that type of damage reduction for 10 rounds or until it strikes a creature with a different type of damage reduction (at which point it changes to overcome that type).

If the creature struck has multiple types of damage reduction, the weapon overcomes all of them.

If the creature gains a new type of damage reduction after initially being struck, such as from changing its form, the weapon must change before being able to overcome the new type.

The weapon does not gain any other benefit of the properties it takes on, and it always deals its normal damage.

Strong transmutation; CL 13th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, limited wish; Price 50,315 gp.

MONSTER MANUAL 1 3.5 (3.5)

GITHYANKI SILVER SWORDS

These impressive weapons are typically carried by githyanki combatants of 9th level and higher.

Of githyanki make, a silver sword is a +1 silvered greatsword that looks much like a standard weapon while still in its sheath.

But when drawn, the silver sword transforms into a column of silvery liquid, altering the weapon's balance round by round as the blade's shape flows and shimmers.

A silver sword has the additional quality of reaching into the minds of the foes it strikes, disrupting their psionic powers. A target hit by the weapon must succeed on a DC 17 Fortitude save or lose any psionic abilities for 1d4 rounds.

High-level githyanki often take the Improved Sunder feat, using their silver swords to attack astral travelers' silver cords (see the astral projection spell, page 201 of the Player's Handbook).

The normally insubstantial cord is treated as a tangible object with the owner's AC, hardness 10, and 20 hit points.

It is rumored that each githyanki warrior has but one silver sword, and if the weapon is lost or stolen, the githyanki must seek it out at all costs or be killed by its superiors.

That may be only a legend, but githyanki have been known to exact terrible revenge upon those who steal their silver swords or win them in battle.

Some silver swords (belonging to particularly high-level githyanki) have additional enhancements.

Enhancing a silver sword is just like working with any other weapon that has existing abilities.

A normal githyanki silver sword is treated as having a +2 enhancement for this purpose: +1 for its bonus on attack and damage rolls and another +1 for the sword's antipsionic ability.

MYSTERIES OF THE MOONSEA (3.5)

HAMMER OF VORBYX

The Hammer of Vorbyx is named after its last owner, an ogre king who ruled Thar.

However, Vorbyx allegedly plundered the weapon from an ancient unmarked barrow, so its true origins are lost in time.

More than a mere scepter, it served as a symbol of Vorbyx's authority over the unruly ogre and orc tribes of Thar, and when he died without a worthy successor, his most loyal followers buried the weapon with him, believing that he would need it to wage wars in the afterlife.

Lore: Characters can learn the above information with a successful DC 20 Knowledge (history) check.

The following bits of information about the Hammer of Vorbyx can be gained by making Knowledge (history) checks at the appropriate DCs, as given below.

DC 25: An ogre mage hermit named Essul Blackmoon once prophesied that the weapon would find its way into the hands of a "true king", and that this king would found an empire, precipitate a war, and condemn his enemies to "eternal darkness".

Vorbyx might have believed that Essul's prophecy spoke of him, although his death seems to suggest otherwise.

DC 30: Vorbyx spent most of his plundered wealth on the construction of a small portal network.

The ogre king hoped to use the portals to move his forces quickly from one location to another.

He paid a cabal of wizards to build the portals and attuned them to his hammer, so that only he could activate them.

Description: The Hammer of Vorbyx is a hefty maul with a crude iron head, a thick wooden handle, and iron bands holding it together.

It does not shed light.

Activation: Drawing or wielding the weapon is sufficient to activate its base qualities described below.

Effect: The Hammer of Vorbyx is a +1 thundering maul that resizes as appropriate for any Small, Medium or Large wielder (see FRCS 97 for the maul's statistics).

In addition, once every 24 hours the weapon grants 1d10+10 temporary hit points to anyone who draws it. These temporary hit points last for up to 10 hours.

In addition to its abovementioned qualities, the Hammer of Vorbyx is the "key" to activating a small network of portals that Vorbyx paid vast amounts of treasure to build.

Vorbyx made certain that the locations of the various portals were never recorded, and it's uncertain how many of the portals were completed before his death.

The sly ogre king took that knowledge to his grave.

Aura/Caster Level: Strong necromancy; CL 10th.

Construction: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, blindness/deafness, false life, 8,157 gp, 653 XP, 8 days.

Weight: 20 lb.

(when sized for a Medium creature).

Price: 16,315 gp.

The master smiths use only Hida steel in their blades, claiming that it far outshines any other in the Empire. A Kakita blade is distinguished by its light weight and flexibility, and by the fine lines of bluish damask running down the cutting edge, causing the entire blade to shine with a slight tint.

These blades are usually bestowed only upon samurai who have proven their honor and courage, and only very rarely upon samurai who are not of the Crane clan.

A nonmagical Kakita katana has a natural +2 enhancement bonus.

Caster Level: —; Prerequisites: —; Market Price: 9,400 gp.

NEKODE OF SPIDER CLIMBING

When worn, this pair of +1 nekodes enables movement on vertical surfaces or even upside down, though both the wearer's hands must be used for climbing.

SERPENT'S TOOTH

This +2 initiative yari is made of an unusual green wood, and its blade is shaped such that it makes a hissing noise as it moves through the air.

As a full action, the wielder of a serpent's tooth can attack with a flurry of blows, making one extra attack at her highest attack bonus.

All the wielder's attacks in that round suffer a -2 penalty, however, including the extra attack.

Caster Level: 8th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, haste; Market Price: 38,302 gp; Cost to Create: 19,302 gp + 1520 XP.

SPIRIT SWORD

This passage scimitar has nine rings set into the back edge of the blade.

It has an enhancement bonus of +1 on the Material Plane, but in the Spirit World, the Shadowlands, or any other plane its enhancement bonus increases to +3.

(The +3 enhancement bonus also applies on the Material Plane when the weapon is used against elementals, outsiders, or spirits).

Caster Level: 15th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, plane shift; Market Price: 52,215 gp; Cost to Create: 26,265 gp + 2,076 XP.

PLANAR HANDBOOK (3.5)

AFTERLIFE

This +2 consumptive burst unholy greatsword hungers for the life force of its victims.

In addition to its evil nature, once per day the wielder can use death knell as a standard action when the wielder touches the tip of Afterlife to the body of a fallen foe.

Moderate evocation; CL 7th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, death knell, unholy blight, creator must be evil; Price 105,550 gp; Cost 52,950 gp + 4,208 XP.

CONFLAGRANT

This +1 ignan flaming burst long spear can be used in melee or as a thrown weapon.

In addition to its fiery traits, once per day the wielder can use fireball as a standard action.

If the wielder wishes, he may choose to activate the fireball use for the day in conjunction with throwing the spear (this attack does not require an extra standard action beyond making the ranged attack).

In such a case, the fireball detonates only if the spear successfully strikes its target.

Moderate evocation; CL 7th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, fireball, creator must be of the fire subtype; Price 60,305 gp; Cost 30,305 gp + 2,400 XP.

LETHE'S LASH

A spellcaster struck by this +1 whip loses one spell or spell slot from the highest spell level he can cast.

If two or more spells fit this criterion, the caster decides which one becomes inaccessible.

The lost spell becomes available again the next time the caster rests and regains spells.

Moderate enchantment; CL 7th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, modify memory; Price 22,301 gp; Cost 11,301 gp + 880 XP.

QUENCHER

This +1 aquan bane (fire outsiders) warhammer is a fire elemental's worst nightmare.

Once per day, the wielder can cast quench as a standard action with a range of touch.

Moderate evocation; CL 7th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, quench, summon monster I, creator must be of the water subtype; Price 40,312 gp; Cost 20,312 gp + 1,600 XP.

PLAYER'S GUIDE TO FAERÛN (3.5)

BANEBLADES OF DEMRON

The six powerful swords known as the baneblades of Demron were created over the course of 300 years.

Though the archmage Demron receives the credit for their creation, the weapons were actually cooperative efforts, created jointly by all the races that inhabited Myth Drannor before its fall.

Each of the blades was keyed to one particular type of wielder.

(In game terms, only members of a specific race or class may use a given baneblade).

The baneblade functions as a masterwork, nonmagical weapon if the wielder is of an inappropriate race and/or class.

All of the baneblades are +4 holy, evil outsider and undead bane swords.

Each sheds light equivalent to that of a torch, though the wielder may suppress this light with a mental command.

The individual blades also have their own additional powers, as described below.

Unless otherwise noted, each power of a baneblade is activated by command word.

DRAGATHIL

This slightly curved rapier is sized for Medium creatures. It has a row of small rubies down the center of the blade and a large basket hilt in the form of roses twined around three harps.

Dragathil glows with a fierce red light when drawn, but despite its fearsome appearance, it is designed to subdue opponents peacefully rather than smite them with arcane fire or razor-sharp steel.

Dragathil has the standard baneblade properties, and it is also a merciful weapon that allows the wielder to use hold person once per day.

Only a character skilled at persuasion and negotiation (one who possesses at least 5 ranks of Diplomacy) may wield Dragathil.

Strong evocation [good]; CL 12th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, cure light wounds, hold person, holy smite, creator must be good; Price 125,720 gp; Cost 63,020 gp + 5,016 XP; Weight 2 lb.

EVAELATHIL

This short sword is sized for Small wielders and usable only by halflings.

It glows with a soft green light when drawn.

In addition to the standard baneblade abilities, Evaelathil grants its wielder resistance to fire 10 and allows her to use charm person and locate creature once per day each.

Strong evocation [good]; CL 12th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, charm person, holy smite, locate creature, resist energy, creator must be good; Price 161,045 gp; Cost 161,045 gp + 6,429 XP; Weight 1 lb.

FAERVIAN

This longsword is sized for Medium creatures and may be wielded only by an arcane spellcaster.

Faervian looks as though it were forged from one solid piece of burnished steel, and it glows a deep purple when drawn.

The craftsmanship of this blade, unlike the others, is distinctly elven.

Faervian has the standard powers described above, and it is also a spell storing weapon.

Furthermore, it allows its wielder to cast up to three spells each day as if using the Still Spell metamagic feat.

Strong evocation (plus aura of stored spell) [good]; CL 12th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, holy smite, Still Spell; Price 134,970 gp; Cost 67,642 gp + 5,386 XP; Weight 4 lb.

MHAORATHIL

This short sword is sized for Medium creatures and is usable only by dwarf characters.

Originally designed for the dwarven defenders of Myth Drannor, it sheds a bright orange light when drawn.

In addition to the standard baneblade abilities, Mhaorathil allows its wielder to use cure light wounds, disrupting weapon, and remove disease once per day each.

Strong evocation [good]; CL 12th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, cure light wounds, disrupting weapon, holy smite, remove disease, creator must be good; Price 150,297 gp; Cost 75,303 gp + 5,999 XP; Weight 2 lb.

MORVIAN

This impressive greatsword is sized for a Medium creature. Unlike its predecessors, Morvian is not limited to users of a single race.

The only restriction upon its use is that the wielder must be lawful good.

When drawn from its scabbard, Morvian glows with a fierce yellow light like that of the sun.

Morvian has the standard properties of all baneblades, and it is also an axiomatic weapon that allows its wielder to use daylight once per day.

Strong evocation [good, lawful]; CL 12th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, daylight, holy smite, order's wrath, creator must be lawful good; Price 158,389 gp; Cost 79,369 gp + 6,321 XP; Weight 8 lb.

KERYVIAN

The last of the baneblades, Keryvian was also the most powerful of Demron's swords.

This bastard sword's blade is tinted a light shade of blue, and its hilt is shaped in the likeness of a great blue dragon clutching the blade in its "teeth".

When wielded in battle, Keryvian glows and crackles with blue energy.

Only a fighter, paladin, or ranger of good alignment may wield it.

Keryvian has the standard baneblade powers, and it is also a keen weapon that allows its wielder to use jump, feather fall, and alarm at will.

The alarm is always of the audible variety, and it is triggered only when someone other than Keryvian's owner touches it. Furthermore, each time Keryvian scores a critical hit, it bestows one negative level on the target.

The wielder receives 1d6 temporary hit points that last for 24 hours each time a negative level is bestowed.

One day after being struck, the victim must make a DC 16 Fortitude save for each negative level or lose a character level.

Strong evocation [good]; CL 12th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, alarm, enervation, feather fall, holy smite, jump, spell turning; Price 207,070 gp; Cost 103,692 gp + 8,270 XP; Weight 4 lb.

CALATHANGAS

Also called the rat blade and the sting of Xerastos, this +1 rapier first appeared in the Dalelands nearly a century ago.

Any humanoid who wields it must make a DC 15 Fortitude save each ten days that the blade is in his possession; failure indicates that he has contracted lycanthropy and become an afflicted wererat.

Likewise, any humanoid hit by the blade must succeed on a DC 15 Fortitude save or contract lycanthropy of the same sort.

Calathangas glows only when there are rats within 50 feet of it.

Once per day, the wielder can call forth 1d6+1 rat swarms or a pack of 3d6 dire rats as a standard action.

These creatures arrive in 2d6 rounds and serve the wielder for up to 1 hour.

Moderate conjuration; CL 6th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, summon nature's ally III; Price 15,800 gp; Cost 8,060 gp + 620 XP.

CHELDAORN KATAR

This +1 punch dagger, carved from the tooth of a black dragon, functions identically to a dagger of venom.

The first of these weapons was crafted by a renegade elf assassin from the city of Ascalhorn, which is now known as Hellgate Keep.

Since Hellgate Keep's destruction, copies of this weapon have begun appearing in the hands of hired killers across Faerûn.

Faint necromancy; CL 5th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, poison; Price 8,302 gp; Cost 4,302 gp + 320 XP; Weight 1 lb.

CRAEMMOL'S HAMMER

Owned by a dwarf warrior legendary for both his battle prowess and his greed, this +3 warhammer sheds bright yellow light equivalent to that of a torch.

Whenever a drow comes within 60 feet of the wielder, the weapon makes a loud ringing sound like a tremendous bell. If the wielder concentrates on the hammer for 1 full round, she learns the precise location of the nearest drow and the total number of drow that are within the weapon's detection radius.

Moderate evocation; CL 11th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, true seeing; Price 43,312 gp; Cost 21,812 gp + 1,720 XP; Weight 5 lb.

DYERWAEN

Forged by the elves of old Myth Drannor, this +2 bastard sword was given as a token of friendship to the first human settlers in the Dalelands.

It grants a number of magical abilities to its wielder.

In forest settings, a character carrying Dyerwaen is camouflaged, gaining a +5 competence bonus on Hide checks.

In addition, she can use pass without trace at will in such an environment and intuit direction at will anywhere.

She also gains a +2 competence bonus on Survival checks.

On command, Dyerwaen can produce a hide from animals effect (usable at will) and a speak with plants effect (usable once per day).

Finally, the wielder gains a +2 competence bonus on Diplomacy checks against elves, fey, and woodland creatures of good alignment.

Dyerwaen is a chaotic and good weapon, so it can bypass the damage reduction of certain lawful or evil outsiders.

Moderate abjuration; CL 11th; creator must be a druid; Price 29,335 gp; Cost 14,667 gp and 5 sp + 1,173 XP.

ELQILLAR

A Calishite illusionist named Akhir Ahad, who intended it to help him escape assassination at the hands of political rivals, crafted this +1 scimitar.

At the wielder's command, Elqillar can transform into a scimitar, dagger, kukri, or sword of any kind sized for a Small, Medium, or Large creature.

Whatever its guise, it retains its +1 enhancement bonus, and multicolored runes spelling its name appear on its blade.

A character who has Elqillar on his person can use disguise self at will.

When holding the weapon in his hand, he is immune to detect thoughts, discern lies, and any attempt to magically discern his alignment, as though he were wearing a ring of mind shielding.

Finally, when Elqillar strikes a creature that is in any form other than its natural one, that creature must make a DC 18 Will saving throw or immediately revert to its natural form (humanoid or giant is the natural form for both afflicted and natural lycanthropes).

Strong illusion; CL 12th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, disguise self, nondetection, polymorph; Price 167,315 gp; Cost 83,815 gp + 6,680 XP.

EVITHYAN'S BLADE

This +3 longsword was fashioned in Myth Drannor by the ancient elf hero whose name it carries, then used to fight the drow in the Underdark.

Similar to a bane weapon, Evithyan's blade becomes a +5 longsword against drow.

Rather than dealing extra damage as a bane weapon would, however, it deals 2d4 points of Constitution damage to any drow it hits.

A DC 20 Fortitude save reduces the Constitution damage by half.

Strong evocation; CL 13th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Mordenkainen's sword; Price 72,315 gp; Cost 36,315 gp + 2,880 XP.

HEARTCLEAVER

Originally wielded by the nycaloth lord Gaulguth, this fearsome +2 vorpal battleaxe is sized for a Large creature.

Heartcleaver's blade constantly drips a foul, greenish ichor, which inhibits magical healing of the wounds it inflicts.

Any character attempting to cast a conjuration (healing) spell on a creature that has been struck by Heartcleaver must make a DC 20 caster level check, or the spell has no effect.

This inhibiting effect wears off once a creature wounded by Heartcleaver has been restored to full normal hit points (either through rest and natural healing or through magical healing that overcomes the weapon's special power).

Heartcleaver was last seen in the hands of a great hero who died at the Final Stand on the Evening Star, when the city of Myth Drannor fell.

It is believed to lie somewhere within the rubble of the city.

Strong evocation; CL 18th; Craft Magic Weapon, circle of death, keen edge, bestow curse; Price 314,320 gp; Cost 157,320 gp + 12,560 XP; Weight 12 lb.

ILBRATHA, MISTRESS OF BATTLE

This +1 longsword was forged at the behest of King Azoun I of Cormyr, but it was subsequently lost in a storm at sea.

In addition to its enhancement bonus, Ilbratha allows the wielder to use jump three times per day, blink once per day, and mirror image once per day with the proper command words.

It also rings like struck chimes when it touches spell effects or magic items.

Faint transmutation; CL 5th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, blink, detect magic, jump, mirror image; Price 31,115 gp; Cost 15,715 gp + 1,232 XP.

LASHING SWORD OF SAMOS THE SKULLREAPER

This peculiar +1 short sword, once owned by a dwarf undead hunter, trails a luminous arc of blue energy that resembles a whip from its pommel.

This whip harmlessly and insubstantially passes through most creatures, but it is devastating to undead.

The wielder of the lashing sword may use this energy "whip" to make a touch attack against an undead creature, which must make a DC 17 Will save or be destroyed.

A character need not be proficient with the whip to make this attack.

Moderate conjuration; CL 9th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, disrupting weapon; Price 56,310 gp; Cost 27,310 gp + 2,160 XP; Weight 2 lb.

NIGHTWATCHER

This adamantine +3 longsword is a relic of ancient Netheril. Its blade is black and its pommel is silver, worked in ivory and set with a large black pearl.

Nightwatcher's bearer gains low-light vision, and the blade disperses magical darkness within 30 feet if it succeeds on a caster level check (as if casting dispel magic).

When planted firmly into the ground, Nightwatcher hums loudly if anyone with intent to harm its owner approaches within 60 feet.

Moderate evocation; CL 9th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, alarm, dispel magic, light; Price 89,315 gp; Cost 44,815 gp + 3,560 XP.

NYCHYAELLA'S HEALING SPEAR

This +2 spear has a shaft of shadowtop-wood and a head of gleaming alchemical silver.

Three times per day on a successful attack, the wielder may drain hit points from the victim and heal herself of the same amount of damage, as if affected by a vampiric touch spell.

She may elect to use this ability after a successful attack has been made.

Moderate necromancy; CL 10th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, vampiric touch; Price 44,392 gp; Cost 22,392 gp + 1,760 XP; Weight 6 lb.

RUSTBLADE

These +1 daggers always look pitted and rusted, though they suffer no adverse effects of corrosion.

Any object made of iron or iron alloy that is touched by a rustblade crumbles away as if affected by a rusting grasp spell.

Moderate transmutation; CL 7th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, rusting grasp; Price 58,302 gp; Cost 29,302 gp + 2,320 XP; Weight 1 lb.

TARAGARTH, THE BLOODBRAND

This +1 short sword was forged in Silverymoon in the early days of the North and first wetted in battle against the trolls of the Evermoors.

While holding it unsheathed, the wielder gains resistance to fire 10 and is immune to detect thoughts, discern lies, and any attempt to magically discern her alignment.

Faint abjuration; CL 3rd; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, nondetection, resist energy; Price 42,310 gp; Cost 21,310 gp + 1,680 XP.

TWINBLADES ALIGHT

This double-headed battleaxe is forged half of cold iron and half of adamantine, allowing it to overcome the damage reduction of creatures resistant to either material.

In the hands of a lawful good dwarf, it glows softly and functions as a +2 axiomatic holy battleaxe.

When wielded by anyone else, it is simply a +2 battleaxe and does not glow.

Strong necromancy and transmutation; CL 18th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, circle of death, keen edge; Price 82,215 gp; Cost 40,515 gp + 3,216; Weight 4 lb.

TYRANNY'S KNELL

This golden warhammer functions like a dwarven thrower with the following additional abilities.

Once per tenday, the wielder of Tyranny's Knell may strike the hammer against the ground (a standard action) to create an effect identical to that of the earthquake spell.

Each time the hammer strikes a creature of the giant type, the target must make a DC 16 Fortitude save or be affected as if by a reduce person spell (even though that spell normally affects only humanoids).

Moderate evocation and transmutation; CL 10th Craft Magic Arms and Armor, reduce person, creator must be a dwarf of at least 10th level; Price 154,312 gp; Cost 77,312 gp + 6,160 XP; Weight 5 lb.

PSIONICS HANDBOOK (3.0)

SILVER SWORDS

These impressive weapons are carried by githyanki combatants of 7th level and higher.

Of githyanki make, a silver sword is a +3 greatsword that looks much like a standard githyanki weapon.

However, when drawn in melee, the blade transforms into a column of silvery liquid, altering the weapon's balance round by round as the blade's shape flows and shimmers.

In the hands of someone without the appropriate Exotic Weapon Proficiency feat, the weapon is clumsy (–4 penalty on attack rolls) and possesses only its enhancement bonus. A proficient user on the Astral Plane, however, is able to attack the silver cord that connects many astral travelers to their physical forms; the normally insubstantial cord is treated as a tangible object with the owner's AC, hardness 10, and 20 hit points (see Attack an Object in Chapter 8 of the Player's Handbook).

A silver cord visibly trails 5 feet behind an astral traveler before fading into the astral medium.

Attacking it draws an attack of opportunity from the astral traveler.

When the cord is damaged, the astral traveler must succeed at a Fortitude save (DC 13) or be immediately forced to return to its body—which might be a good idea anyway if the traveler is not up to fighting githyanki on their home plane.

If the silver cord is completely severed, the creature's material body (and astral echo) is slain instantly.

The cords of travelers with the mind blank power active are immune to silver swords.

Silver swords with an enhancement bonus of +5 and vorpal characteristics exist, but these are minor artifacts, relatively few, and only handed down to heroes of the race.

If a silver sword falls into the hands of any other creature, githyanki will kill the possessor if they can, steal it if they have to, negotiate if they must, or ally with the thief's most potent foe as a last resort.

Manifester Level: 11th; Prerequisites: Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, creator must be a githyanki; Market Price: 98,350 gp; Cost to Create: 49,000 gp + 3,920 XP.

RACES OF FAERÛN (3.0)

AXE OF THE SEA REAVERS

This +2 greataxe of Illuskan manufacture gives its wielder the ability to float atop the water, no matter what his weight.

Furthermore, the wielder can, with the war cry engraved into the haft, give all allies within 15 feet a +2 morale bonus on saving throws, attack rolls, ability checks, skill checks, and weapon damage rolls for one round.

By saying the command word engraved on the blade itself, the wielder can force all foes within 15 feet to make a Will save (DC 16) or flee, as the emotion (fear) spell from a 7th-level caster.

The war cry and the command word can each be used once per day.

Market Price: 13,920 gp; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, emotion; Cost to Create: 7,120 gp + 544 XP.

BURNING BATTLE GAUNTLETS

Created by the fiends of Hellgate Keep for their tanarukk minions, these +1 flaming battle gauntlets are not actually on fire but are constantly hot to the touch and deal fire damage whenever the wearer punches an opponent.

The weapons also deal their fire damage when they are hot enough to ignite flammable objects just as easily as an open flame would.

The constant heat of the gauntlets means that anyone wearing them also suffers 1d6 fire damage per round, making them unsuitable weapons for anyone not resistant to fire damage.

Burning battle gauntlets are crafted singly; a tanarukk with two of them is considered very wealthy and powerful.

Caster Level: 10th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, flame blade, flame strike, or fireball; Market Price: 8,310 gp; Cost to Create: 4,320 gp + 320 XP.

FIENDHUNTER TWO-BLADED SWORD

This two-bladed sword has one tip that crackles with green sparks and another limned with a dull red glow.

Evil outsiders worry about the green side of the sword, but in the hands of a competent wielder they should fear the red end even more.

The green side of the weapon is a +1 sure striking weapon that forces any evil extraplanar creature hit by it to succeed at a Will save (DC 16) or suffer a dismissal effect, as the spell from an 8th-level caster.

This effect functions three times per day.

The red side of the weapon is also a +1 sure striking weapon, but evil extraplanar creatures hit by it are unable to engage in extradimensional travel (as the dimensional anchor spell) for 8 minutes.

This traps fiends near the wielder of the fiendhunter, denying them the escape route they may need.

The dimensional anchor effect also works three times a day. Caster Level: 8th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, dimensional anchor, dismissal; Market Price: 32,380 gp; Cost to Create: 16,540 gp + 1,267 XP.

FOESPLITTER AXE

Crafted by the shield dwarves of the North, a Foesplitter axe is a +1 keen battleaxe with a steel haft (hardness 10, 25 hp).

Caster Level: 6th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, keen edge, shield dwarf; Market Price: 7,480 gp; Cost to Create: 3,895 gp + 287 XP.

KERRENDERIT ARROW

Fashioned by the arctic dwarves, these +1 arrows are made from ice crystals from the Great Glacier.

Kerrenderit arrows have the wounding special ability (see DUNGEON MASTER's Guide).

In addition, they have a range increment 25 feet farther than normal arrows.

If kerrenderit arrows are exposed to temperatures above 50 degrees for more than 1 hour, their icy arrowheads melt into uselessness.

Caster Level: 12th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, chill metal, creator must have access to arctic dwarf ice caves; Market Price: 350 gp; Cost to Create: 172 gp + 14 XP.

SCIMITAR OF THE SIROCCO

Graced by a pommel shaped like the head of a desert hawk, this elegant and graceful weapon is a +1 keen scimitar.

It also doubles the speed of any horse or equine creature the bearer rides, much like horseshoes of speed.

Caster Level: 8th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, haste, keen edge, creator must be Calishite; Market Price: 9,530 gp; Cost to Create: 4,922 gp + 367 XP.

SPEAR OF IMPALING

These +1 wounding shortspears are deadly to elves and dwarves.

If the spear hits an elf or dwarf, the target must succeed at a Reflex save (DC 19) or be impaled by the spear (treat as an extra attack from the spear that hits automatically but cannot score a critical hit).

Caster Level: 12th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, divine power; Market Price: 32,301 gp; Cost to Create: 16,301 gp + 640 XP.

STONEREAPER

This +2 greataxe has a slightly curved cleaving blade on one side of its head and a long chisel-point pick on the opposite side.

The weapon is specifically designed for dwarves, taking into account their size, strength, physique, and magical ties to the stone.

In the hands of a dwarf, a stonereaver gains the construct bane (against any construct primarily made of earth, stone, or metal only) and earth elemental bane special abilities.

Caster Level: 8th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, summon monster I, creator must be a dwarf; Market Price: 50,320 gp; Cost to Create: 25,320 gp + 2,000 XP.

TRIDENT OF SERENITY

A +1 trident, this item has the additional quality of suppressing any effects or class features within 15 feet that rely on anger or fear, including a barbarian's ability to rage, a sahuagin blood frenzy, and a black dragon's frightful presence.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, emotion; Market Price: 5,315 gp; Cost to Create: 2,815 gp + 200 XP.

RACES OF THE WILD (3.5)

SWORDBOW

The magical swordbow takes the concept of the elvencraft bow (see page 166) and does it one better.

As the name implies, the weapon can transform from a sword to a bow (or vice versa) upon a mere thought by the wielder (a free action).

A wielder can even interchange bow and sword attacks as part of the same full attack action.

In sword form, the weapon features a bow-like grip and a pommel that resembles the curving tip of a bow.

The blade is often decorated with an arrow.

In bow form, the weapon is made of metal, and each half of the bow's arc resembles a sword blade.

In either form, a sword bow has the same enhancement bonus.

A swordbow's enhancement bonus can be improved as if improving two separate weapons (for example, improving a +1 swordbow to a +2 swordbow costs 12,000 gp, just as if you were improving two +1 weapons to +2).

A swordbow may have special abilities added to it (such as flaming); such abilities cost twice the normal amount (again, as if improving two separate weapons) and apply to both weapons if possible.

If a special ability is added that can't apply to both weapons (such as vorpal or distance), it applies only to the swordbow when it is in an eligible form (for instance, a +1 swordbow of distance is a distance weapon only in bow form).

Elves typically produce swordbows of the following kinds.

Light Swordbow: This weapon can change between rapier and shortbow form.

It is favored by elf rogues.

Each weapon has a +1 enhancement bonus.

Swordbow: This weapon can change between longsword and longbow form.

It is favored by elf rangers.

Each weapon has a +1 enhancement bonus.

Great Swordbow: This weapon can change between greatsword and composite longbow form.

It is favored by elf fighters.

Each weapon has a +1 enhancement bonus.

The composite longbow may have any desired strength rating at the time of creation; the example below has a +4 Str bonus.

Faint transmutation; CL 5th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, shrink item, creator must be an elf, Price 6,650 gp (light swordbow), 6,690 gp (swordbow), or 7,150 gp (great swordbow), Cost 3,650 gp + 240 XP (light swordbow), 3,690 gp + 240 XP (swordbow), or 4,150 gp + 240 XP (great swordbow).

SANDSTORM (3.5)

LASH OF THE SANDS

This +2 desiccating burst whip is formed of permanently stabilized shapeland.

It is twice as heavy as a normal whip and deals lethal damage, which is effective even against opponents in armor.

The whip can also entangle an opponent that it hits, as an animate rope spell (caster level 12th).

The entangled opponent takes 1d6 points of desiccation damage per round it remains entangled.

Strong necromancy; CL 12th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, animate rope and desiccate, wither, or horrid wilting; Price 56,400 gp; Cost 28,400 gp + 2,256 XP.

SAVAGE SPECIES (3.0)

ASSASSIN WHIP

This +1 whip appears to be a living vine of some sort, with leaves shaped like human hands and small clusters of fruit that resemble wild grapes.

Gnarled and covered with brown, stringy bark, the assassin whip can be used as a normal whip, but twice a day the wielder can use it to make a ranged touch attack against a single Medium-size or smaller target, causing grasses, weeds, bushes, and even trees to wrap, twist, and entwine about her, holding her fast.

If no vegetation is in the area, the assassin whip causes vines to spring up from the ground.

The entangling plants constrict their target, each round dealing 1d6+7 points of damage with a successful grapple check (the plants' grapple check modifier is +8).

An entangled creature takes a -2 penalty on attack rolls, takes a -4 penalty to Dexterity, and cannot move.

An entangled character who attempts to cast a spell must make a Concentration check (DC 15) or lose the spell.

She can break free by using a full-round action to make a Strength check or an Escape Artist check (DC 20).

The entangle effect is independent of the whip, and the wielder can attack other targets after entangling someone.

Note: The DM may alter the effects of the whip somewhat, based on the nature of the entangling plants.

Caster Level: 3rd; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor plus entangle or web; Market Price: 11,021 gp.

BAG OF BOULDERS

When found, this pouch holds 1d4 stones the size of sling bullets.

(A newly created bag has four stones).

When thrown (range increment 10 feet), a stone from the bag of boulders instantly grows to 12 inches in diameter and deals 3d6 points of damage on a successful attack.

If the attack misses, treat it as a grenade-like weapon.

Once all four stones are thrown, the magic of the bag is gone.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, shrink item; Market Price: 1,200 gp (new) or 300 gp per stone (partial bag); Weight: 1/2 lb. per stone.

BEAST CLAWS

Usually found in a size that fits a Medium-size humanoid, this pair of +1 spiked gauntlets sports claws at the tips of the fingers.

They allow the wearer to make claw attacks (1d4/x2 slashing damage for Medium-size characters; see Changing Weapon Size earlier in this chapter to adjust for wearer's size).

If worn by a creature that already has a claw attack, beast claws have an enhancement bonus of +2 instead of +1.

The creature does its normal claw damage while wearing beast claws plus an additional 1d6 points of damage.

Creatures of animal intelligence will usually not willingly wear coverings on their forelimbs.

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, polymorph self or ability to wild shape; Market Price: 9,610 gp.

BLADE OF WIND

This +2 dancing short sword allows its wielder to fly, as the spell cast by a 6th-level wizard, for up to an hour per day, while holding the blade of wind.

The time in flight need not be continuous.

When wielded by a creature of the air subtype, the blade of wind changes its size in proportion to its wielder, remaining a light weapon.

For example, a storm giant would wield it as a Large short sword.

In addition, creatures of the air subtype gain a +4 enhancement bonus to Dexterity while wielding a blade of wind, and against creatures of the earth subtype the blade of wind's threat range and critical multiplier improve to 17–20/x3.

Caster Level: 6th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, animate objects, fly; Market Price: 97,510 gp.

BRIMSTONE HAMMER

When wielded by a fiendish or half-fiendish creature, this +2 unholy warhammer allows its wielder to smite good one additional time per day, provided the wielder uses the brimstone hammer for that attack.

Caster Level: 12th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, unholy blight, divine power, creator must be evil; Market Price: 45,812 gp.

DWARF CRUSHER

Made by giants to destroy the works of their dwarf foes, this +2 greatclub has additional powers when wielded by creatures with high Strength scores and the Power Attack feat.

Creatures with Strength of at least 25 who use Power Attack at the highest possible level (devoting their entire base attack bonus to damage) ignore the hardness of nonliving materials when wielding this hammer.

Targeting an opponent's weapon, shield, or armor invites an attack of opportunity normally.

Animated objects, constructs, and elementals (but not undead) do not get the benefit of natural armor against this weapon.

Caster Level: 6th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, bull's strength, creator must be a giant; Market Price: 26,305 gp.

ELF BREAKER

This +1 morningstar has a special affinity for goblinoids.

In the hands of a goblinoid, elf breaker's enhancement bonus increases to +2.

In the hands of a goblinoid in combat with an elf or with a group that includes at least one elf, it grants the wielder a +4 enhancement bonus to Constitution for the duration of the encounter.

Caster Level: 6th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, endurance; Market Price: 26,305 gp.

ELF EDGE

This +1 longsword has a special affinity for those of elven blood.

In the hands of someone who has elven blood, it grants the wielder a +4 enhancement bonus to Dexterity.

Caster Level: 6th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, cat's grace; Market Price: 18,315 gp.

FOE REAVER

Made by frost giants, this +1 greataxe has a pale blue sheen and proves a great surprise to those seeking to exploit frost giants' weakness.

In the hands of a frost giant, this weapon grants its wielder fire resistance 20.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, protection from elements, creator must be a frost giant; Market Price: 18,320 gp.

FISHGUTTER

Weapons similar to this appear among many amphibious cultures, and from there have spread to fully aquatic ones. Fishgutter is a +2 scimitar that allows its wielder to act as if under the influence of a freedom of movement spell cast by a 7th-level cleric.

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, freedom of movement; Market Price: 64,315 gp.

FLAME REAVER

This +1 flaming glaive, when wielded by creatures of the fire subtype, feeds off their natural energy and produces additional powers.

On a critical hit, a flame reaver does normal critical damage, and in addition the opponent must make a Reflex save (DC 15) or catch on fire (see Catching on Fire in Chapter 3 of the DUNGEON MASTER's Guide).

Creatures of the fire subtype ignore this ignition effect if struck by a flame reaver.

Treat objects struck by a flame reaver as having half their usual hardness, because the extreme heat of the weapon causes the target to soften.

Hardness does not lessen further if an object is struck multiple times.

Caster Level: 6th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor plus flame blade, flame strike, or fireball; Market Price: 26,308 gp.

FLINT BASHER

This +2 greatclub allows its wielder to use stone shape as the spell cast by a 5th-level cleric, once per day, while holding a flint basher.

In addition, creatures of the earth subtype gain a +4 enhancement bonus to Constitution while wielding a flint basher, and against creatures of the air subtype the flint basher's threat range and critical multiplier improve to 19–20/x3.

Caster Level: 6th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, endurance, stone shape; Market Price: 32,305 gp.

GAUNTLET OF GRUUMSH

This single +1 gauntlet allows the wielder to make a melee touch attack and blind the target of the attack instead of doing damage.

The target gets a Fortitude saving throw (DC 14) to negate the blinding effect.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, blindness/deafness; Market Price: 24,805 gp.

ICE SCYTHE

This weapon is a +1 frost scythe.

When wielded by creatures of the cold subtype, it feeds off their natural energy and produces additional powers.

On a critical hit, an ice scythe does normal critical damage, and the opponent must make a Will save (DC 14) or be affected as if by a slow spell cast by a 5th-level wizard. Creatures of the cold subtype ignore this slow effect if struck by an ice scythe.

Treat objects struck by an ice scythe as having half their usual hardness, because the extreme cold of the weapon causes the target to become unusually brittle.

Hardness does not lessen further if an object is struck multiple times.

Caster Level: 6th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, slow, and chill metal or ice storm; Market Price: 26,318 gp.

ORC RAZOR

This +1 falchion has a special affinity for those of orc blood. In the hands of someone who has orc blood, it grants the wielder a +2 enhancement bonus to Dexterity and a +2 enhancement bonus to Constitution.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, cat's grace, endurance; Market Price: 17,375 gp.

PIXIE ARROWS

Pixies sometimes employ arrows that deal no damage but can erase memory or put a creature to sleep.

MEMORY LOSS

An opponent struck by the arrow must succeed on a Fortitude save (DC 15) or lose all memory. The subject retains skills, languages, and class abilities but forgets everything else until he or she receives a heal spell or memory restoration by means of limited wish, wish, or miracle.

Caster Level: 11th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, modify memory; Market Price: 607 gp.

SLEEP

Any opponent struck by the arrow, regardless of Hit Dice, must succeed on a Fortitude save (DC 15) or be affected as though by a sleep spell.

Caster Level: 1st; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, sleep; Market Price: 107 gp.

ROGUE BLADE

This +2 rapier provides the effect of the blink spell as cast by a 6th-level wizard when wielded.

Because blink denies opponents their Dexterity bonuses to Armor Class, a rogue wielding a rogue blade always gets to add her sneak attack damage (provided her opponent is susceptible to such).

Caster Level: 6th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, blink; Market Price: 44,320 gp.

RUSTING CLUB

This +1 greatclub allows the wielder to make a touch attack against an opponent's armor or weapon and deliver a rusting grasp spell as if cast by a 7th-level druid instead of normal damage.

This effect can be used up to three times per day.

Any iron or iron alloy item a rusting club touches becomes instantaneously rusted, pitted, and worthless, effectively destroyed.

If the item is so large that it cannot fit within a 3-foot radius (such as a large iron door or the effect of a wall of iron spell), a 3-foot-radius volume of the metal is rusted and destroyed. Magic items made of metal are immune to this effect.

When using a rusting club in melee, the wielder can choose to make a melee touch attack.

If successful, the attack instantaneously negates 1d6 points of Armor Class gained from metal armor (up to the maximum amount of protection the armor offered) through corrosion.

For example, full plate armor (+8 AC) could be reduced to +7 or as low as +2 in protection, depending on the die roll. A metal weapon that is hit is destroyed.

Note: Striking at an opponent's weapon provokes an attack of opportunity.

In addition, you must touch the weapon and not the other way around.

Against ferrous creatures, a rusting club deals 3d6 points of damage +1 per caster level of the creator (maximum +15) on a successful attack.

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, rusting grasp; Market Price: 35,905 gp.

SCALED JAVELIN

This +2 javelin gains the special abilities of distance and returning when used by creatures of the reptilian subtype. Caster Level: 12th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, clairaudience/clairvoyance, telekinesis; Market Price: 26,301 gp.

SERRATED TERROR

Made by fire giants, this jagged +1 greatsword proves a great surprise to those seeking to exploit fire giants' weakness. In the hands of a fire giant, this weapon grants its wielder cold resistance 20.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, protection from elements, creator must be a fire giant; Market Price: 18,350 gp.

SKYSPEAR

When wielded by a celestial or half-celestial creature, this +2 holy longspear allows its wielder to smite evil one additional time per day, provided the wielder uses the skyspear for that attack.

Caster Level: 12th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, holy smite, divine power, creator must be good; Market Price: 45,805 gp.

STAFF OF THE WHIP

This +1 pincer staff (see the description earlier in this chapter) has an additional function when wielded by a kuo-toa.

As an attack action, the wielder may deliver 1d8+6 points of electrical damage (as a shocking grasp spell from a 6th-level caster) to a creature already grappled by the staff of the whip. Caster Level: 6th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, shocking grasp; Market Price: 10,408 gp.

STORM GAUNTLETS

This pair of +1 spiked gauntlets grants electricity resistance 10 and has the following abilities:

Shocking Grasp: As the spell cast by a 9th-level wizard, save DC 13.

This power uses 1 charge.

Lightning Bolt: As the spell cast by a 9th-level wizard, save DC 15.

This power uses 2 charges.

Ball Lightning: You create four 2-foot-diameter balls of concentrated electricity that shed light as candles and move under your control.

A ball of lightning deals 2d6 points of electricity damage to anything it touches, including creatures that attack it or move through it.

When you create the balls of lightning, you mentally program them to move as you desire, even around corners.

Once programmed, a ball's orders cannot be changed.

A ball can move up to 100 feet per round and flies with perfect maneuverability.

When a ball of lightning strikes a creature, the ball stops and remains in place for the remainder of the spell's duration.

A ball dissipates if the distance between you and it exceeds 190 feet.

A ball can only "see" under the available light conditions (including the light the ball itself sheds).

For example, you could program one lightning ball to follow the left wall of a corridor and strike the first creature it "sees", another to follow the right wall and do the same, and the remainder to follow 5 feet behind you in a semicircle.

The first two lightning balls would turn corners to remain following the walls, even if this took them out of your line of sight, and strike the first creature they "see", which would fulfill their program and leave them in their target's square.

A creature struck by a lightning ball or that touches one with a natural or melee weapon gets a Reflex saving throw for half damage (DC 17).

Damage from two balls resting in the same square stacks. A creature struck by multiple balls of lightning in a round (or entering a square with two lightning balls) gets a saving throw for each.

A creature with spell resistance makes separate spell resistance checks against each lightning ball, with success meaning that particular ball cannot harm the creature.

This power uses 4 charges.

Storm gauntlets have 50 charges when new.

After the last charge is expended, storm gauntlets remain +1 spiked gauntlets.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor plus shocking grasp or lightning bolt; Market Price: 52,360 gp.

SWORD OF THE SCHEMER

This +2 greatsword grants its wielder a +4 enhancement bonus to Intelligence, and +2 enhancement bonuses to Wisdom and Charisma.

The bonuses only apply when the owner wields the blade. Sheathing the sword or hanging it by a strap of some sort does not provide the bonuses.

Caster Level: 6th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor; Market Price: 32,350 gp.

WAVE PIERCER

This +2 trident grants freedom of movement to its wielder if that individual has the aquatic subtype.

When wielded by aquatic creatures against creatures of the fire subtype, a wave piercer's threat range and critical multiplier increase to 19–20/×3.

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, freedom of movement; Market Price: 56,315 gp.

WHIP OF WEBS

The wielder of this whip can use it as a +2 whip (see Chapter 7 of the Player's Handbook for details on and special rules concerning whips), or may make a ranged touch attack with it to wrap a target in a web of leather straps.

An entangled character takes a –2 penalty on attack rolls and a –4 penalty to effective Dexterity.

An entangled character can move at half speed but cannot run or charge.

An entangled character who attempts to cast a spell must make a Concentration check (DC 15) or lose the spell.

The wielder and the whip are not attached to the entangled character in any way and may attack other targets freely.
Caster Level: 6th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, entangle or web; Market Price: 10,301 gp.

SERPENT KINGDOMS (3.5)

MANYFANG DAGGER

This +1 dagger looks like a normal masterwork dagger, but when it hits, three phantom blades briefly whirl into existence around the main blade, stabbing and slicing the same target, then winking into nothingness again.

A manyfang dagger thus deals quadruple damage on each successful hit, or quintuple damage on a critical hit. Moderate evocation; CL 10th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor; major creation, Price 32,302 gp; Weight 1 lb.

SCOURGE OF FANGS

Favored by the yuan-ti and drow clerics of Lolth, this +2 scourge has a handle made of adamantite and five serpentine constructs as lashes.

The snakes are extensions of the wielder's will that hiss and writhe in response to her thoughts and emotions. The weapon deals damage normally, and in addition, at the wielder's mental command, the serpents can attack as separate and independent creatures, using the statistics below.

If the wielder chooses to attack only with the snakes, she can substitute her own base attack bonus for that of the snakes in their attacks.

The enhancement bonus of the scourge ion already included in the attack bonuses of the snakes in the statistics below.

When a scourge of fangs is used with an attack action, only one serpent lash can attack; when it is used with a full attack action, all five can attack.

If a good-aligned character tries to wield the scourge, the snakes attack the wielder instead of the intended target. If a serpent lash is slain, it falls off the whip.

The remaining heads continue to function normally until all are destroyed.

☛ Serpent Lash (5): CR 1; Tiny construct; HD 2d10; hp 11; Init +3; Spd 0 ft., AC 17, touch 15, flat-footed 14; Base Atk +1; Grp —; Atk +8 melee (1d2–2 plus pain, bite); Full Atk +8 melee (1d2–2 plus pain, bite); Space/Reach 2–1/2 ft./0 ft.; SA pain; SQ construct traits, darkvision 60 ft., low-light vision; AL N; SV Fort +0, Ref +3, Will +0; Str 6, Dex 17, Con —, Int —, Wis 11, Cha 1.

Skills and Feats: Hide +11; Weapon Finesse.

Pain (su): Anyone hit by a serpent lash's bite attack takes a –4 penalty on attack rolls, skill checks, and ability checks for 2d4 rounds because of the wracking pain its venom produces.

A successful DC 11 Fortitude save reduces the penalty to –2.

Construct Traits: A serpent lash has immunity to poison, sleep effects, paralysis, stunning, disease, death effects, necromancy effects, mind-influencing effects (charms, compulsions, phantasms, patterns, and morale effects), and any effect that requires a Fortitude save unless it also works on objects or is harmless.

It is not subject to critical hits, nonlethal damage, ability damage, ability drain, fatigue, exhaustion, or energy drain. Cannot heal damage, but can be repaired.

Darkvision 60 ft. and low-light vision.

Moderate necromancy and transmutation; CL 11th; Craft Construct, Craft Wondrous Item, animate objects, bestow curse; Price 32,000 gp; Weight 5 lb.

SCOURGE OF TIAMAT

This +1 corrosive viper scourge is favored by the Dark Scaled Ones (high priests of Tiamat) in the city of Unthalass.

The weapons date back to the height of Okoth, the ancient sarrukh realm located in what is now southern Mulhorand. Most of the existing scourges of Tiamat have been recovered from the scattered remnants of that civilization.

In addition to its normal properties, each viper head of a scourge of Tiamat can spit its corrosive venom up to 30 feet as a ranged attack.

A target hit by this attack is affected by the poison of the viper and also takes 1d6 points of acid damage for the corrosive special ability (see Magic of Faerûn for details of this ability).

Strong conjuration; CL 17th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Spit Venom, Melf's acid arrow, storm of vengeance, summon monster II; Price 60,320 gp.

SHINING SOUTH (3.5)

GREAT RIFT BLAZING SKYLANCE

This +2 lance is specifically designed for use by Great Rift skyguards.

Three times per day, the lance can be commanded to fire a cone of searing flames out to a distance of 15 feet from the tip, dealing 5d4 points of fire damage to targets within the cone's area.

Victims can make a DC 13 Reflex save for half damage. Faint evocation; CL 5th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, burning hands; Price 14,334 gp.

GREAT RIFT FORCEFUL SKYLANCE

A variation on the Great Rift blazing skylance, this +2 lance can produce a magic missile effect on command, three times per day, firing three missiles with each use.

These missiles can be aimed at up to three targets within 150 feet of the lance.

Faint evocation; CL 5th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, magic missile; Price 14,334 gp.

PICK OF PIERCING

Crafted by the dwarves of the Great Rift, this +1 heavy pick destroys objects made of force, such as Bigby's forceful hand or a wall of force.

To destroy such objects, the wielder of the pick must touch them with the pick.

Moderate transmutation; CL 11th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, disintegrate; Price 13,508 gp.

SCOURGE OF PAIN

This +1 scourge is covered in razor-sharp barbs. Each time it strikes, it deals an extra 1d8 points of nonlethal damage and causes agonizing pain in the creature struck. The target must succeed on a DC 17 Fortitude save or take a -4 penalty on attacks, saving throws, and checks for 1d4 rounds. Priestesses of Loviatar are fond of these weapons. Moderate necromancy; CL 9th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, symbol of pain; Price 26,320 gp.

STUN BOLT

This +1 bolt has been specially enhanced so that it deals normal damage and stuns a creature struck by it. A target struck by a stun bolt must make a DC 20 Will save or be stunned for 1d6 rounds. Creatures immune to mind-affecting spells and abilities are also immune to stun bolts. Strong enchantment; CL 13th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, symbol of stunning; Price (50 bolts) 9,630 gp.

WHIP OF CONSTRICTING

This +2 whip has the ability to entangle and crush opponents it strikes. A Large or smaller creature struck by the whip takes normal damage and must make a DC 15 Reflex save or become entangled, if the wielder so wishes. A creature capable of spellcasting that is bound by the whip must make a DC 15 Concentration check to cast a spell. An entangled creature can slip free with a DC 20 Escape Artist check. If you've commanded the whip to entangle someone, you can't continue to use it as a weapon. Once per day, the whip's wielder may command it to constrict whatever it has entangled. For 17 rounds, the whip gains a Strength score of 35 and a grapple bonus of +41. Every grapple check that succeeds against the entangled creature deals 2d6+12 points of damage. Strong evocation; CL 17th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, animate rope, Bigby's crushing hand; Price 97,381 gp.

SILVER MARCHES (3.0)

GRAYBROTHER

This +2 shortspear of a very old style is obviously of orc manufacture. Its gray wooden haft and dull steel blade are carved with orc runes representing murder, hate, and power. It deals +2d6 points of damage to humans and elves. Unlike bane weapons, the spear's enhancement bonus is not +2 greater than normal against humans or orcs. This weapon is legendary among the tuskers of the North. Many tribal leaders over the centuries have searched ruins and dark places for it, as the clerics of Gruumsh say the orc who wields it is favored by He Who Watches and will be able to amass a great unbeatable army to sweep over the human and elven lands, reducing the inhabitants to slaves.

Caster Level: 8th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, summon monster I; Market Price: 32,302 gp; Cost to Create: 16,302 gp + 1,280 XP.

HORNBLADE

This famous weapon is a +3 dancing spell storing longsword with three unusual properties. First, as a standard action, the bearer can create a sending to up to five individuals of the bearer's choosing at the same time. The sending consists of a distinctive, warning horncall; no other message is possible. Second, the Hornblade possesses the ability to store two spells, not just one. It otherwise functions as a normal spell storing weapon. Taern customarily stores dispel evil and heal. Finally, the blade is attuned to the ward initiates of Silverymoon. In the hands of anyone other than a ward initiate, the Hornblade is only a +1 dancing longsword. This sword is good, and any evil character attempting to wield it gains two negative levels. These negative levels remain as long as the sword is in hand and disappear when the sword is no longer wielded. These negative levels never result in actual level loss, but they cannot be overcome in any way while the sword is wielded. Caster Level: 18th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, animate objects, imbue with spell ability, sending; Market Price: 227,115 gp; Cost to Create: 113,715 gp + 9,072 XP.

NIGHTBREAKER

This +1 ghost touch disruption heavy mace is a sacred item to the church of the Morninglord, having been wielded by a successive line of paladins of the Order of the Aster. The item was lost in 1344 DR, when its bearer left to destroy a lair of specters, and has not been seen since. Certain members of the clergy believe this item to be the "rightful sign" of Lathander's favor described in the Rhyester's Matins (temple) entry in the Silverymoon section of The Silver Marches. Caster Level: 14th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, heal, plane shift; Market Price: 32,312 gp; Cost to Create: 16,312 gp + 1,280 XP.

ORCBLINDER

At the command of Lady Alustriel, the churches and wizards of the Silver Marches commissioned a large number of these +1 arrows decorated with distinctive fletching bearing eye-like markings. Said to pierce orc eyes with amazing frequency, they deal an additional +2d6 hit points of damage to orcs. Unlike bane weapons, their enhancement bonus is not +2 greater than normal against orcs. They are destroyed when used, just like normal arrows. Crossbow bolts with this power exist but are less common. Caster Level: 8th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, summon monster I; Market Price: 167 gp; Cost to Create: 87 gp + 7 XP.

SCOURING SUNLIGHT

This +1 holy light mace sheds light when drawn. At the end are three large gems, one red, one orange, and one a brilliant yellow, each carved with Lathander's holy symbol.

Once per day the mace can invoke searing light. The weapon was lost in a crusade against the forces of Ghaunadaur, drow god of oozes, and has not been seen for nearly 100 years.

Certain clergy members believe this item to be the "rightful sign" of Lathander's favor described in the Rhyester's Matins (temple) entry in the Silvermoon section of The Silver Marches.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, holy smite, searing light, creator must be good; Market Price: 28,305 gp; Cost to Create: 14,305 gp + 1,120 XP.

SELÛNE'S MOON-ARROWS

Crafted in greater numbers in recent years by the church of the Moonmaiden to combat the People of the Black Blood, these +1 arrows are made of silver from tip to fletching. They deal an additional +2d6 hit points of damage to evil lycanthropes.

Unlike bane weapons, their enhancement bonus is not +2 greater than normal against lycanthropes.

They are destroyed when used, just like normal arrows.

Caster Level: 8th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, summon monster I; Market Price: 167 gp; Cost to Create: 87 gp + 7 XP.

STORM STAR

These magical morningstars are of ancient design and thought to have been created in Netheril.

Made of electrum-plated steel, these weapons display small arcs of lightning that play up and down the weapon's length when wielded, although they do not harm the wielder or anyone the weapon strikes.

Once per day the weapon can invoke a weakened chain lightning spell at caster level 8.

Most storm stars have a +1 enhancement bonus, but some have been created with +2 or even +3 bonuses.

Caster Level: 3rd; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, chain lightning, creator's caster level must be three times the enhancement bonus; Market Price: 20,308 gp (+1), 26,308 gp (+2), 36,308 gp (+3); Cost to Create: 10,308 gp + 800 XP (+1), 13,308 gp + 1,040 XP (+2), 18,308 gp + 1,440 XP (+3).

TUSKREAPER

This +1 orc-bane longsword was created by a young elf wizard. It has an Elvish name which means "The blade that causes orcs to fall like drops of rain in the hardest storm", but most call it by its Common nickname.

Its hilt is decorated with an overlapping leaf pattern, enameled with green and white markings.

If a reaver's cutlass attaches to an opponent, it twists into the wound as though alive and continues to deal Constitution damage each round it remains attached.

To remove it, an opponent must achieve a pin and spend one full round wrenching it free.

The weapon makes a grapple check as the wielder (even though she no longer holds it) and takes no size penalty. Strong evocation; CL 12th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, animate objects, Mordenkainen's sword; Price 26,310 gp; Cost 13,310 gp + 1,040 XP.

SHARKDOOM SPEAR

An aquatic creature that takes damage from the sharkdoom spear must succeed on a DC 13 Fortitude save or be affected as by a sink spell (–10 ft. penalty to its swim speed, sink 5

A creature already affected by the sink effect takes no additional penalty for multiple hits.

Well-trained troops know to rush toward the ballista bolt when they see it land nearby.

The ballista bolt of healing deals 1d8+5 points of damage to undead within 20 feet on the round after it lands.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, healing circle; Market Price: 2,260 gp.

Caster Level: 3rd; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, scare; Market Price: 310 gp.

BURROWING RAM

This ram, tipped with a massive drill-like screw, starts turning of its own volition when it comes into contact with a flat surface.

Those with more than 6 HD and those who survive the Fortitude save take 1d10 points of damage each round in the cloud.

The cloud moves away from the impact point at a speed of 10 ft.

It can be dispersed by wind just as a fog cloud can.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, cloudkill; Market Price: 2,260 gp.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, fireball; Market Price: 760 gp.

FLAMING CATAPULT STONE

This catapult (or trebuchet) stone has a secondary bulb that breaks on impact, releasing alchemist's fire.

On the round following a direct hit, the target takes an additional 1d6 points of fire damage.

The target can take a full-round action to attempt to extinguish the flames before taking this additional damage. It takes a successful Reflex saving throw (DC 15) to extinguish the flames, and rolling on the ground allows the character a +2 bonus.

The flaming catapult stone deals splash damage to targets within 5 feet of where it lands, just as with alchemist's fire.

Cost: 30 gp.

FOGSTONE

Often used to provide cover for advancing troops, the fogstone is a catapult (or trebuchet) stone that covers a 30-foot radius area with a 20-foot high fogbank within 1 round of impact.

The fog obscures all sight, including darkvision, beyond 5 feet.

This fog can be dispersed by the wind just as the fog cloud spell can.

Unlike a wand, the bow casts the spell any number of times.

Both arcane archers and initiates of the bow favor bows of true arrows.

SHATTERSPIKE

Wielders without the Sunder feat use Shatterspike as a +1 longsword only; wielders with the Sunder feat can use it as above, but also may use it to attack a foe's weapon without provoking an attack of opportunity.

Furthermore, a wielder with the Sunder feat adds a +4 bonus (including the sword's +1 enchantment) to the opposed roll when attempting to strike a foe's weapon. If successful, Shatterspike deals 1d8+4 points of damage plus the wielder's Strength modifier to the target weapon (the target weapon's hardness must still be overcome with each hit).

Shatterspike can damage enchanted weapons of up to +4. Caster level: 13th; Prerequisites: Str 13, Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Power Attack, Sunder, shatter; Market Price: 4,315 gp; Cost to Create: 2,315 gp +160 XP; Weight: 4 lb.

EBON LASH

Created by and for Red Wizards, the ebon lash is a +2 scourge that inflicts searing agony on its victims.

Any living creature struck by the scourge in a successful melee attack must make a Fortitude save (DC 11) or be dazed for 1 round and crippled by pain for 6 rounds, taking a -2 penalty on all attack rolls, saving throws, and checks.

Spellcasters suffering from this effect are distracted and must make Concentration checks to cast spells (see the Concentration skill in the Player's Handbook).

The pain effect is the same as that caused by the spell Nybor's gentle reminder, as if cast by a 6th-level sorcerer.

Caster Level: 6th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Nybor's gentle reminder; Market Price: 20,320 gp; Cost to Create: 10,320 gp + 800 XP.

On command, the flamelance can fire a jet of white-hot flame as Aganazzar's scorcher cast by a 6th-level sorcerer. This deals 3d8 points of damage (Reflex half DC 13) in a 5-footwide path 40 feet long.

The flamelance can produce fifty such blasts before this power is exhausted, after which it is simply a +1 flaming burst lance.

Caster Level: 12th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Aganazzar's scorcher, and flame blade, flame strike, or fireball; Market Price: 39,910 gp; Cost to Create: 20,110 gp + 1,584 XP.

SPECTRAL DAGGER

Fashioned from a bone of a creature that died violently, this appears to be just a dagger hilt made of bone.

When a creature grasps the hilt, a dagger "blade" of light appears.

(Treat the weapon as a dagger for proficiency, feats, and so on).

The blade winks out when the hilt leaves the wielder's hand.

The spectral dagger has no attack bonus and deals no damage, but any target struck is affected by a chill touch spell (DC 11).

Striking with the spectral dagger is considered a touch attack. Creatures with multiple attacks may use the spectral dagger in a full attack action to strike more than once per round just as if they wielded a normal dagger.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, chill touch; Market Price: 20,000 gp.

THAYAN BOMBARD

The Thayan bombard is a magical cannon that can launch a variety of dangerous or noxious bombs.

The effects depend on the missile launched.

Firing the weapon is a standard action, requiring a ranged touch attack to strike the desired space.

(The touch AC of an empty square is 5).

The Thayan bombard has a range increment of 150 feet, and like any projectile weapon, can fire up to 10 range increments at the normal -2 penalty per range increment. If the ranged touch attack misses, resolve the bomb's effect as a grenade-like weapon (see Chapter 3: Running the Game in the DUNGEON MASTER's Guide).

Once fired, the Thayan bombard requires three separate Profession (siege engineer) skill checks (DC 10) to clear, load with a new bomb, and prepare for firing.

A skilled crew of four can fire the weapon every round with a little cooperation, while a smaller or less proficient crew takes longer (although a single skilled character can fire the bombard once every 4 rounds, provided he makes successful checks).

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, telekinesis; Market Price: 22,500 gp; Weight: 500 lb.

Typical bombs are listed below.

Most bombs are single-use magic items that can be triggered only through being launched from a Thayan bombard, although similar actions such as being flung from a catapult or hurled by a giant might also work.

A bomb is a thick glass sphere about 1 foot in diameter and weighing 20 pounds.

CLOUDKILL BOMB

This bomb is filled with a bilious green liquid.

When it hits, it creates a cloudkill spell triggered at and centered on the point of impact.

The cloudkill is stationary and does not move away from the point of impact.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, cloudkill; Market Price: 1,125 gp; Weight: 20 lb.

DEATH BOMB

Black and cold, this bomb is covered with sinister blue runes.

It creates a circle of death triggered at and centered on its point of impact, slaying 1d4 Hit Dice of creatures.

Caster Level: 5th, 6th, or 10th, for 3d6, 6d6, or 10d6 fireball, respectively; Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, fireball; Market Price: 375 gp (3d6), 450 gp (6d6), or 750 gp (10d6); Weight: 20 lb.

SNOWBALL SWARM BOMB

This bomb is blue and frost-covered.

It creates a Snilloc's snowball swarm that deals 3d6 points of cold damage, triggered at and centered on the point of impact.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, Snilloc's snowball swarm; Market Price: 250 gp; Weight: 20 lb.

STINKING CLOUD BOMB

Filled with a sickly yellow concoction, this bomb creates a stinking cloud triggered at and centered on the point of impact.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, stinking cloud; Market Price: 375 gp; Weight: 20 lb.

STONE SHOT

Not a magical bomb at all but a simple stone shaped to fit the Thayan bombard, a stone shot deals 3d6 points of damage.

The shot must be aimed at a creature, not a square, and it is resolved through a ranged attack (not a ranged touch attack).

Market Price: 5 gp; Weight: 30 lb.

Like a spiked chain, it may be used to strike adjacent opponents or opponents 10 feet away.

THYRSUS OF THE DRUID

The wood elf druid Craenoth Driel of Eaelrann crafted the first known thyrsus more than six hundred years ago.

The great druid was slaughtered while defending the High Forest against tanarukk forces from Hellgate Keep.

His thyrsus was carried back to that foul rift as part of the war spoils of the demon lords, but its current location is unknown.

Several of Craenoth's bereaved acolytes created their own versions of this staff to honor their slain master.

Dozens of variants now exist and can be found in the hands of capable druids as far north as Lurkwood and as far east as the forests of Cormanthor.

A typical thyrsus of the druid appears as a gnarled staff carved from a single piece of oak, duskwood, or weirwood, with a large pine cone mounted securely upon its top.

Its shaft is wrapped in coils of leafy vines that remain green all year round.

The thyrsus of the druid allows the use of the following spells.

- Plant growth (1 charge)
- Speak with plants (1 charge)
- Animate plants (2 charges)
- Thorn spray (2 charges)
- Control plants (3 charges)

Strong varied; CL 15th; Craft Staff, animate plants, control plants, plant growth, speak with plants, thorn spray; Price 53,000 gp.

TOKENS

SILVER MARCHES (3.0)

SILVERYMOON

Silverymoon's wards have four sorts of tokens, all of them pierced (for wearing with necklaces) silver items about the size of a large thimble.

It's not known how many of each token type exist, but spares aren't stored where they can easily be found or reached, even by a skilled rogue.

No ward token can ever physically leave the wards—the instant a token leaves the wards, it crumbles into useless powder.

This fate cannot be prevented by extradimensional transport such as portals, planar travel, or attempts to place tokens in extradimensional places.

Silvaeren deemed trustworthy by Alustriel or Taern are given adrath tokens to keep; visitors are loaned these tokens, for return upon departure.

Creatures who need duraph tokens to enter the city must satisfy the senior officer at the entry point as to their business, and come under both armed escort and Spellguard scrutiny immediately.

Spellcasters with business inside the Vaelun are issued lauthaul tokens at guardposts when entering only if a Spellguard officer or higher-ranking initiate deems it suitable, and those spellcasters must surrender the tokens when leaving the inner ward.

Individuals who need a duraph token will never also be allowed a lauthaul token unless Alustriel is personally present to grant permission.

ADRATH

This sort of token allows bearers to cast conjuration (summoning) spells, evocation [fire] spells, and spells with the teleportation descriptor in the outer ward areas of Silverymoon, and use items with those effects.

Without the token, castings of these types of spells are wasted.

Adrath tokens are crafted in the shape of unicorn heads.

DURAPH

This sort of token negates the antipathy and detect scrying effects otherwise prevalent in Silverymoon's wards.

Duraph tokens are diamond-shaped.

LAUTHAUL

This token functions like the adrath token, except it extends those effects into the inner ward.

It allows bearers to cast conjuration (summoning) spells, evocation [fire] spells, and spells with the teleportation descriptor in the Vaelun.

A small number of lauthaul tokens are keyed to permit entry into otherwise barred portions of the palace.

Lauthaul tokens look like shields.

THELBANE

Only a few dozen persons know these tokens exist, and there are believed to be less than ten of the tokens in existence.

Alustriel and Taern carry one each at all times when in Silverymoon, and several are in the safekeeping of various Chosen of Mystra.

They're kept as secret as possible because bearers can suspend ward powers indefinitely (or reinstate them instantly) with a full-round action.

Thelbane tokens look like tiny six-pointed stars depending from one horn of a crescent moon.

DARKMAIDEN'S LEAP (EL 7)

In the northern reaches of the High Forest, southeast of Everlund, is a small clearing bearing a large gray stone with a flat top bearing a single left footprint the size of a drow woman's foot.

The clearing is free of undergrowth and is well trod with the passing of animal and humanoid footfalls.

Many folk camp here, not knowing the site's significance but liking its access to moonlight and easily defensible position at the top of the rock.

To those who know its power and history, the Darkmaiden's Leap is a sacred place to Eilistraee.

Though a holy place to the drow, its guardians are usually wood elves, grudging allies of the area's good-aligned drow in service to the Dark Maiden.

Depending on the time of year, visitors can find it empty or secretly watched.

Initial Encounter: Roll on the Darkmaiden's Leap encounter table when the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in over a year.

The wood elf scouts are suspicious of everyone but more inclined to accept elves and half-elves.

The drow pilgrims are most likely visitors from the Promenade.

The drow raiders are non-Eilistraean drow investigating drow appearances in the area.

The treant behaves much like the wood elves.

Subsequent Encounters: Once the characters clear out the area or make peace with its guardians, on subsequent visits the chance of an encounter is 50%.

If the PCs fail to visit the Leap for more than a year, they must roll for encounters as if they had never visited the site.

Base Ability: You gain low-light vision and a +2 bonus on Perform (dance) checks.

Recharge Condition: Perform a joyous dance for an hour in the moonlight (half-moon or more).

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day you can cast moon blade as though you were a cleric of your character level.

Higher-Order Uses: 5.

MAGIC OF INCARNUM (3.5)

BASTION OF SOULS (EL 9)

Faceted crystal surfaces glow with the emerald, sapphire, and other hues of precious gems.

Clear crystalline trees sprout thickly from the floor, laden with brilliant points of white light.

The sound of thousands of crystal leaves constantly chiming like bells fills the air.

A blaze of brilliant light shines in the center of this area.

The Bastion of Souls is one of several founts of preincarnate souls, created before there were deities and existing without any divine influence.

Incarnum flows like water through the heart of the Bastion, passing from the Bastion to the Material Plane to enter mortal flesh.

The Bastion is made of solidified positive energy—unbreakable, impenetrable to magical entry, and unresponsive to magical methods to learn about the interior.

Creatures inside it cannot summon aid with calling or summoning spells.

Inside the Bastion, the visual brilliance of the Positive Energy Plane is absent and gravity becomes objective (rather than subjective), but it otherwise conforms to the traits of the Positive Energy Plane.

Inside the Bastion of Souls, crystalline trees sprout preincarnate souls, which appear like brilliant points of light.

When “ripe,” a soul falls from the tree in a flash of brighter light and the preincarnate soul flies off, soon to incarnate somewhere in the multiverse.

If picked before it is ripe, the preincarnate soul withers and dies within 10 rounds, dooming a creature somewhere in the multiverse to a soulless birth.

At the center of the Bastion is the Node, where soulstuff coalesces from the very fabric of the Positive Energy Plane. From the Node, it is drawn to nurture the crystal trees where the souls grow, but soul energy also flows from the Node directly to the Material Plane in the form of incarnum.

Location: The Positive Energy Plane.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Bastion of Souls encounter table when the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in over a year.

PLANAR HANDBOOK (3.5)

ARTHENMYR'S WRATH (EL 6)

Niflheim, the second gloom of Hades, is a place covered in thick, obscuring mists.

Somewhere in this bleak landscape is a small dell where the fog takes on a yellowish tinge and the air is filled with a sulfurous stench.

Anyone who enters takes 1d6 points of acid damage every round they stand in the poisoned fog.

The dell is known as Arthenmyr's Wrath, and at its center stands a bone-white chapel dedicated to a nameless god.

Arthenmyr is a barbazu sorcerer who has seen every companion he has ever known die in the Blood War.

He decided that rather than perpetuating the pointless battle, he would seek to end it in a most fitting manner.

At the heart of the chapel is a magic fountain filled with acid that continually roils and sends up clouds of poisonous gas that mix with the fog and make the dell unlivable.

If Arthenmyr has his way, he will someday discover a way to spread the effect to all of Niflheim and, eventually, the entirety of Hades.

Location: Niflheim, the second gloom (layer) of Hades.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Arthenmyr's Wrath encounter table when the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in over a year.

Subsequent Encounters: Once the characters clear out the area, on subsequent visits the chance of an encounter is only 10%.

If the PCs fail to visit the location for more than a year, they must roll for encounters as if they had never visited the site. Once Arthenmyr has been defeated, reroll any result of 81–100.

Base Ability: You gain resistance to acid 5.

Recharge Condition: Place your bare hand into the fountain at the center of Arthenmyr's Wrath.

Doing this causes 3d6+1 points of acid damage.

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day, you may cast rusting grasp as though you were a 10th-level druid.

Cure and heal spells work only if the caster makes a DC 17 caster level check.

Beard (Ex): If Arthenmyr hits with both claws, he automatically hits with his beard for 1d8+3 points of damage and delivers the disease of devil chills (Fort DC 17 to avoid infection, incubation 1d4 days, damage 1d4 Strength).

ASHARDALON'S TONGUE (EL 13)

Khalas, the first layer of the bleak eternity of Gehenna, has hundreds, perhaps thousands, of lava flows pouring constantly across its sloped face.

The largest and most destructive of these is known as Ashardalon's Tongue.

Named after an ancient red dragon that terrorized several planes of existence, Ashardalon's Tongue is aptly named. It is wide and deep where it bursts from the ground high up on the mountain, but it tapers to a forked point lower down on the slopes where it cools.

Additionally, the bottom end is in more or less constant motion-like a geologically slow snake's tongue flicking here and there.

The tip of Ashardalon's Tongue only moves about 300 feet a day, but it travels over a range of about 8 miles, and there is no way to accurately predict where it will go next.

Location: Khalas, the first layer of Gehenna.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Ashardalon's Tongue encounter table when the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in over a year.

ASHARDALON'S TONGUE ENCOUNTERS

Subsequent Encounters: Once the characters clear out the area, on subsequent visits the chance of an encounter is only 10%.

If the PCs fail to visit the location for more than a year, they must roll for encounters as if they had never visited the site. Base Ability: You gain a +1 bonus on unarmed melee attack rolls.

Recharge Condition: Plunge your bare fists into Ashardalon's Tongue.

Doing this deals 5d6 points of fire damage (no save).

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day, for a number of rounds equal to your character level, all unarmed melee attacks you make become flaming attacks.

Your unarmed melee attack deals an extra 1d6 points of fire damage on a successful hit.

Higher-Order Uses: 4.

ASTRAL SOJOURNER (EL 8)

Once a mighty githyanki astral galleon, the Astral Sojourner is now, effectively, a ghost ship.

Lost during a particularly violent psychic storm, the ship's captain is said to have promised a powerful demon that he would give anything, if only his ship could reach home once again.

The truth behind this story is unknown, for the Sojourner, when it appears, is always seen in the midst of a violent psychic storm, and the crew is long since gone.

Those who can steer the Astral Sojourner back out of the psychic storm are able to reap great rewards.

Location: A psychic storm on the Astral Plane.

Initial Encounters: When first encountered, the Astral Sojourner is always in the midst of a psychic storm; the characters can reach the lost ship only by braving the dangers of the storm.

Roll once on the tables below for the characters' group and once for each individual.

PSYCHIC STORM ENCOUNTERS

Location Effect, Travelers in Physical Form

d%	Effect

MENTAL EFFECTS

d%	Effect
01–40	Stunned for 1d6 minutes (no saving throw)
41–50	Confused, as confusion spell, for 3d8 minutes (Will DC 20 negates)
51–60	Unconscious for 1d10 hours (Fort DC 20 negates)
61–80	Fear, as fear spell, for 2d10 minutes (Will DC 20 negates)
81–90	Feeble-minded, as feeblemind spell, for 2d10 hours (Will DC 20 negates)
91–95	Pain, as symbol of pain , for 2d10×10 minutes (Fort DC 25 negates)
96–100	Insanity, as insanity spell (Will DC 25 negates)

Subsequent Encounters: Once the characters have steered the Astral Sojourner clear of the psychic storm, there is a 20% chance that the Sojourner will find its way back into another psychic storm.

If the PCs fail to visit the location for more than a year, they must roll for encounters as if they had never visited the site.

Base Ability: You treat all destinations on the Astral Plane as being one step more familiar than they normally are.

Areas you have studied carefully become “very familiar” to you, areas you have seen casually are considered to have been “studied carefully,” and so on.

(The best result you can get, however, is “very familiar”).

Recharge Condition: Pilot the Astral Sojourner safely out of the psychic storm.

This requires a DC 25 Profession (sailor) check and can be attempted once per hour.

If the check fails, the character can try again in 1 hour.

For each hour, roll once on the Mental Effects table, above, for each person aboard the ship.

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day, you can summon a small contingent of githyanki—the Sojourner's original crew—to aid you, either in battle or in handling a ship.

The crew, consisting of one 5th-level githyanki fighter, two 3rd-level githyanki fighters, and ten 1st-level githyanki warriors, remain until the battle is over or the character's ship is out of danger, then vanish.

They each have maximum ranks in Profession (sailor)—4 ranks for the captain, 3 ranks for the two mates, and 2 ranks for the crew (it's a cross-class skill for these classes)—and either perform any task that needs doing on a ship or aid a character already performing the task.

Though they understand the characters' language, no matter what tongue the characters speak, the githyanki do not speak themselves.

Higher-Order Uses: 2.

BLAZING FORGE (EL 7)

In the deep caverns of Nidavellir, dwarves, gnomes, and drow contest ownership of a magic forge capable of creating anything—weapons, armor, food, drink, even living beings—out of iron, copper, and brass.

Naturally, a forge with such awesome abilities is highly sought after, but because it cannot be removed from its current location without losing all of its magical abilities, the forge has become the focal point for countless underground battles between those who would make use of its power.

Location: Nidavellir, the third layer of the Heroic Domains of Ysgard.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Blazing Forge encounter table when the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in over a year.

None of the beings encountered are particularly happy to see armed intruders arriving to take up their valuable time with the forge, but the dwarves and the gnomes are at least willing to negotiate, rather than rush right into battle.

BLAZING FORGE ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–10	6th-level dwarf expert and 4 2nd-level dwarf warriors
11–20	5th-level dwarf cleric and 2 1st-level dwarf fighters
21–30	5th-level dwarf fighter and 5th-level dwarf cleric
31–40	4 3rd-level dwarf fighters
41–50	6th-level gnome expert and 4 2nd-level gnome warriors
51–60	5th-level gnome wizard and 2 1st-level gnome fighters
61–70	5th-level gnome fighter and 5th-level gnome wizard
71–80	4 3rd-level gnome fighters
81–90	4th-level drow wizard and 4 2nd-level drow warriors
91–100	1 6th-level drow cleric and 4 1st-level drow warriors

Subsequent Encounters: The Blazing Forge never sits unattended for long.

No matter whether the characters negotiated or fought to gain access to it, the forge is in someone else's hands every time the characters return.

Roll on the encounter table again.

Base Ability: You gain a +2 bonus on Craft checks involving metals, and your cost for creating masterwork items is halved.

Recharge Condition: Either provide 100 pounds of pig iron (costing about 20 gp) for the forge, or operate the bellows for one hour, taking 1d6 points of fire damage each minute.

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day, you can fix anything made of metal in a single round, as if a make whole spell were cast.

You accomplish this amazing task with a DC 20 Craft (blacksmithing) check; if the check fails, you lose one use of this ability, but the item is not destroyed.

Higher-Order Uses: 6.

BLEAK TOWER (EL 13)

Ages ago, a powerful lich created a swampy demiplane in which to build her stronghold—a single obsidian structure known as the Bleak Tower.

Although the bog seemed to surround the tower for miles in every direction, the plane was really only 1 mile in diameter.

The lich made the plane self-contained so that no one who entered could move very far from her clutches.

For centuries the lich remained in her tower, researching new and innovative ways to turn dead flesh into undead servants.

Whenever she needed new subjects for her experiments, she opened a portal from her demiplane to some other place in the multiverse.

The creatures pulled into the swampy plane through such portals were never seen again—at least not in any recognizable form.

No one knows what happened to the lich, but she has not been seen or heard from in millennia.

The demiplane's boundaries have grown so weak that it periodically breaches them, spilling into swampy regions of other planes.

When such a tear occurs, the Bleak Tower beckons to all the undead in the region, augmenting its own forces.

Location: A nameless demiplane.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Bleak Tower Encounter Table below when the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in more than a year.

BLEAK TOWER ENCOUNTER TABLE

d%	Encounter
01–20	1 dread wraith
21–35	6 balor skeletons*
36–60	1 lich
61–85	1 elite vampire, 13th-level half-elf monk/shadowdancer
86–100	1 mature adult black dragon

Subsequent Encounters: Once the characters clear out the area, the chance of an encounter is only 25% on each subsequent visit.

If the PCs fail to visit the location for more than a year, they must roll for encounters as if they had never visited the site.

Base Ability: You gain a +1 bonus on all Fortitude saving throws.

Recharge Condition: Walk across the demiplane, beginning at the entrance to the Bleak Tower and walking away in a straight line until you arrive at the entrance again. Traversing the demiplane in this manner is possible because it is self-contained.

While walking, you have a 50% chance of having an encounter, in addition to any encounters that may occur as a result of your arrival on the demiplane.

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day, you may use inflict serious wounds (caster level 10th) as a spell-like ability.

Higher-Order Uses: 5.

➤ Balor Skeleton: CR 8; Large undead; HD 20d12; hp 130; Init +12; Spd 40 ft.; AC 19, touch 17, flat-footed 11; Base Atk +10; Grp +26; Atk +21 melee (1d10+12, slam) or +21 melee (1d6+12, claw) or +14 melee (1d8+13/19–20, +1 vorpal longsword); Full Atk +21 melee (1d10+12, 2 slams) or +21 melee (1d6+12, 2 claws) or +14/+9 melee (1d8+13/19–20, +1 vorpal longsword) and +22 melee (1d2+1 plus 1d6 fire, +1 flaming whip); Space/Reach 10 ft./10 ft.; SQ damage reduction 5/bludgeoning, darkvision 60 ft., immunity to cold, undead traits; AL NE; SV Fort +6, Ref +14, Will +12; Str 35, Dex 27, Con —, Int —, Wis 10, Cha 1. Skills and Feats: Hide +4, Jump +16, Listen +8, Spot +8; Improved Initiative(B).

Undead Traits: A balor skeleton is immune to mind-affecting effects, poison, sleep effects, paralysis, stunning, disease, death effects, and any effect that requires a Fortitude save unless it also works on objects or is harmless. It is not subject to critical hits, nonlethal damage, ability damage to its physical ability scores, ability drain, energy drain, fatigue, exhaustion, or death from massive damage. It cannot be raised, and resurrection works only if it is willing.

Possessions: None.

BLINDING TOWER (EL 7)

The rumors of a “shining citadel” of color and light, located at the very heart of the Plane of Shadow, may be fueled by the Blinding Tower—a mysterious edifice from which emerges a blinding light.

This light sweeps out for hundreds of feet, slowly circling. Shadow creatures caught in the light suffer excruciating pain, but the light moves slowly enough that some are able to scurry past and assault the tower, seeking a way to extinguish the beam.

Location: The Plane of Shadow.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Blinding Tower encounter table when the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in over a year.

All of the beings encountered attack intruders.

BLINDING TOWER ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–10	1 shadow jelly
11–40	2 shadow mastiffs
41–60	4 shadows
61–80	2 wraiths
81–100	1 bodak

Subsequent Encounters: Once the characters rid the area of creatures, on subsequent visits the chance of an encounter is only 50%.

If the PCs fail to visit the location for more than a year, they must roll for encounters as if they had never visited the site.

Base Ability: You gain darkvision out to 60 feet, or your existing darkvision distance increases by 30 feet.

Recharge Condition: Look directly into the light from the Blinding Tower (DC 20 Fort save or be blinded for 1d4 hours).

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day, you can shine a light from your eyes that heals damage as a cure moderate wounds spell (2d8 +1 point per character level, maximum +10), with the usual effects against undead creatures.

Using this ability against an unwilling target requires a successful ranged touch attack.

Higher-Order Uses: 6.

BREACHING OBELISK (EL 11)

In one of the many nameless demiplanes, there stands a single squat metallic obelisk carved with many faded runes whose meanings are obscure, or perhaps without meaning. The four-sided obelisk (60 feet by 60 feet by 97 feet high) is forged of astral driftmetal (see Chapter 4: Equipment and Magic Items).

In addition to serving as a planar touchstone, the Breaching Obelisk and its environs commonly breach on extraplanar and Material Plane locations (see Planar Breaching in this chapter), according to a complicated schedule.

The demiplane that contains the Breaching Obelisk is only about 1,000 feet in radius.

It has all the traits of the Material Plane, plus one additional trait that usually leaks into the destination plane when breaching occurs: wild magic.

The breaching schedule is somehow controlled by the obelisk itself.

The DM may determine his own schedule, or use this: The obelisk visits one location on each of the planes of the DUNGEONS & DRAGONS cosmology, one every other day, for a breach duration of 1 day each.

Those who succeed on a DC 40 Knowledge (the planes) check can choose the destination plane and intraplanar location if allowed 8 hours of uninterrupted concentration while maintaining physical contact with the obelisk prior to a breach.

Location: A demiplane.

Initial Encounters: Roll twice on the Breaching Obelisk encounter table when the characters visit the site for the first time.

Because the Breaching Obelisk serves as such a handy way to travel, a wide variety of creatures can be found, sometimes existing in harmony, other times at each other's necks, according to their natures.

BREACHING OBELISK ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–15	1d3 noble djinn
16–25	1d3 mind flayers
26–40	1 night hag and 1 nightmare
41–50	1d4 efreet
51–65	1 devourer
66–75	10th-level human cleric and 10th-level goblin rogue
76–90	1 young adult red dragon
91–100	1 astral deva

Subsequent Encounters: The Breaching Obelisk is always collecting new hopeful travelers or those who stumble upon it.

Roll twice each time the characters visit the obelisk if more than two days have passed since their last visit.

Base Ability: You gain a +3 competence bonus on Knowledge (the planes) checks.

Recharge Condition: Maintain continuous physical contact with the obelisk for at least 8 hours.

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day, you can instantly enter another time frame, speeding up so greatly that all other creatures seem frozen, though they are actually still moving at their normal speeds.

You are free to act for 1 round of apparent time.

Normal and magical fire, cold, acid, and the like can still harm you.

While you are accelerated, other creatures are invulnerable to your attacks and spells; you cannot target such creatures with any attack or spell.

A spell that affects an area and has a duration that is longer than the remaining duration of your temporal acceleration has its normal effects on other creatures once the power ends.

You cannot move or harm items held, carried, or worn by a creature stuck in the standard time frame, but you can affect any item that is not in another creature's possession.

While accelerated, you are undetectable and cannot enter an area of dead magic.

When the acceleration lapses, you are disoriented on your return to the standard time frame.

You take a -4 penalty on all attack rolls, saving throws, and skill checks for 2 rounds.

Higher-Order Uses: 2.

BREATH OF THREPHOCRIS (EL 8)

In the secret hollows of the petrified body of a dead god lost on the Astral Plane, sparks of power yet remain.

The forgotten deity Threphocris contains many such hollows, though not all connect to one another.

One long tunnel holds a forest of crystal stalagmites and stalactites strung with pearly ectoplasm.

A wind comes from nowhere and seemingly goes nowhere, but it cools the long tunnel as if a breeze on an otherwise too-warm summer day.

(All the hollows within Threphocris appear to be naturally formed caverns of gray stone covered with a thin crystalline lattice, like a geode.)

Pale, wispy-white ectoplasm drifts through the caverns, ephemeral and essentially harmless.

The floating milky strands and gossamer draperies lend the caves an otherworldly quality.

The ectoplasm is sensitive to psionic energy and is naturally pushed out of any square occupied by any creature that manifests a psionic power or has innate psionic spell-like abilities).

Location: The petrified body of Threphocris, which drifts through the Astral Plane.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Threphocris encounter table when the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in over a year.

THREPHOCRIS ENCOUNTERS

Base Ability: You gain a +1 insight bonus on Wisdom-based skill checks.

Recharge Condition: Stay within the tunnel hollow for at least 1 hour, breathing in the lost breath of Threphocris.

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day, you can breathe forth a cone of air that is charged with positive energy.

The cone can be as short as 10 feet or as long as 60 feet. This cures 1d8+9 points of damage to all creatures in the cone or deals the same to undead, though they may attempt a Will save (DC 15 + your Wis modifier) for half damage.

Higher-Order Uses: 3.

➤ Githyanki Mageknife: Githyanki wizard 5/fighter 6; CR 13; Medium humanoid (extraplanar); HD 6d10+6 plus 5d4+5; hp 61; Init +1; Speed 40 ft. ## BURNING RIFT (EL 5)

The Burning Rift is situated upon a solidified plain of free-floating magma on the Elemental Plane of Fire, some 200 feet above the infinite expanse of fire and ash below.

The floating plain is bisected, forming a great rift from which wells up a great river of fire called the Rift River.

The Rift River flows out along the rift and into empty space, creating a magnificent cascade of fire.

The “headwaters” of the Rift River are a magnet to native creatures.

Location: The Elemental Plane of Fire.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Burning Rift encounter table when the characters visit the location for the first time, or for the first time in over a year.

The elementals are randomly drawn to the site, while the magmin and salamanders have attempted to make a home there.

BURNING RIFT ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–25	2 Medium fire elementals
26–50	1 Large fire elemental
51–75	1 magmin firehand (see below)
76–97	1 average salamander
98–100	1 noble salamander

Subsequent Encounters: Once the characters clear out the Burning Rift, it is theirs.

However, if they fail to visit the location for more than a year, they must roll for encounters as if they had never visited the site.

Base Ability: You gain a +4 bonus on saving throws against fire effects.

Recharge Condition: Drink from the “headwaters” of the Rift River (which inflicts 5d6 points of fire damage, no save).

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day, you can create a fireball (as the spell), dealing 1d6 points of fire damage per character level (maximum 10d6).

Caster level is equal to your character level.

Save DC 13 + Charisma bonus.

Higher-Order Uses: 5.

☛ Magmin Firehand: Magmin monk 3; CR 6; Small elemental (extraplanar, fire); HD 2d8+2 plus 3d8+3; hp 30; Init +0; Speed 40 ft.; AC 18 (+1 size, +6 natural, +1 Wisdom), touch 12, flat-footed 18; Base Atk +3; Grp +1; Atk +6 melee touch (1d8 fire plus combustion, burning touch) or +7 melee (1d4+3 plus combustion, slam); Full Atk +6 melee touch (1d8 fire plus combustion, melee touch) or +7 melee (1d4+3 plus combustion, slam) or +5/+5 melee (1d4+3 plus combustion, flurry of blows); Space/reach 5 ft./5 ft.; SA combustion, fiery aura, flurry of blows, evasion, still mind;

SQ damage reduction 5/magic, darkvision 60 ft., elemental traits, immunity to fire, melt weapons, vulnerability to cold; AL CN; SV Fort +6, Ref +6, Will +4; Str 15, Dex 11, Con 13, Int 8, Wis 12, Cha 10.

Skills and Feats: Climb +4, Spot +4; Combat Reflexes, Great Fortitude, Stunning Fist, Weapon Focus (unarmed attack/slam), Planar Touchstone.

Combustion (Ex): Anyone a magmin touches must succeed on a DC 12 Reflex save or take an extra 1d8 points of fire damage as clothes ignite or armor becomes searing hot. The damage continues for another 1d4+2 rounds after the magmin’s last successful attack.

Magmins can also ignite flammable materials with a touch. The save DC is Constitution-based.

Fiery Aura (Ex): Anyone within 30 feet of a magmin must succeed on a DC 12 Fortitude save or take 1d6 points of fire damage per round from the intense heat.

The save DC is Constitution-based.

Melt Weapons (Ex): Any metal weapon that strikes a magmin must succeed on a DC 12 Fortitude save or melt away into slag.

The save DC is Constitution-based.

Evasion (Ex): If exposed to any effect that normally allows an attempted Reflex saving throw for half damage, a magmin takes no damage with a successful saving throw.

Still Mind (Ex): +2 bonus on saving throws against enchantment spells and effects.

Burning Rift (Su): Can throw one 6d6 fireball-like burst 1/day (see above).

Three charges remaining.

CATALOGUES OF ENLIGHTENMENT (EL 8)

Resting on its own separate cog on the Clockwork Nirvana of Mechanus, the Fortress of Disciplined Enlightenment is teeming with clerks, functionaries, legal aides, translators, mathematicians, philosophers, and bureaucrats who have made it their goal to learn each and every law of the cosmos.

Their stronghold contains seemingly endless stacks of books and tomes, manuals and librams, each discussing or explaining some facet of natural or universal law—in effect, the source code of the multiverse.

Once they have collated all of these laws, these mortal researchers believe, they will hold the very same power of the deities who originally created the multiverse.

Location: The Fortress of Disciplined Enlightenment on the Clockwork Nirvana of Mechanus.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Catalogues of Enlightenment encounter table when the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in over a year.

The functionaries of the fortress do not mind allowing seekers of knowledge access to the libraries, but they are adamant that only the most learned and wise should gain access to the fortress’s greatest secrets, such as the higher-order abilities granted by the Catalogues.

Thus, whoever seeks access must debate the nature of the multiverse with a philosopher.

If the supplicant can defeat the philosopher in an opposed Knowledge check (see below for the subject), the character can gain access.

The philosopher, an 8th-level expert, has a total skill modifier of +18 in the indicated Knowledge field.

CATALOGUES OF ENLIGHTENMENT ENCOUNTERS

d%	Debate Subject
01–25	Knowledge (arcana)
26–50	Knowledge (nature)
51–75	Knowledge (religion)
76–100	Knowledge (the planes)

Subsequent Encounters: Once admitted to the Catalogues, a character need not debate a philosopher again unless a year has passed between visits.

The debate at that point is largely a question of new procedures, rather than any particular doubt as to the character's knowledge.

A character who loses the debate is shown outside, along with his companions, and not allowed to return for six months.

Base Ability: Choose a cleric domain; you gain the granted power of that domain.

Recharge Condition: A character who desires to recharge his planar touchstone higher-order ability at the Catalogues of Enlightenment has three options:

- Add to the body of knowledge in the Catalogue by spending 1d4 weeks writing a detailed account of her activities since her last visit.
- Spend 1d4 weeks indexing books in the Catalogue.
- Track down an error in the Catalogue.

Once per day, make a DC 25 Intelligence check to uncover a translation error, misplaced decimal, mathematical anomaly, or so forth.

You may take 20 on this check (requiring 20 days).

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day, you may cast a spell from the cleric domain you have chosen, as though you had prepared the spell normally.

You must be of sufficient character level to cast the spell and have a Wisdom equal to 10 + the spell's level.

Higher-Order Uses: 3.

CAVERN OF THE SELF (EL 10)

In the stygian depths of Pandemonium is a cavern where the plane's eternal winds have eroded the walls to the point that they are as smooth as glass.

In fact, every surface in the cave reflects light like a mirror. However, the chaotic nature of the plane makes this more than a place for mere vanity.

When a creature enters the Cavern of the Self, he sees himself reflected hundreds, perhaps thousands, of times. (Part of the magic of the cave is that no matter how many creatures are in the cave simultaneously, each one sees only reflections of himself).

Each reflection, though, is slightly different.

Each one shows the viewer at a different stage in his life or in the grips of a different emotion, and no two reflections are identical.

Somewhere in the jumble is a reflection of how the creature is at that moment in time.

It is said that if one can find and concentrate on the true reflection, he will gain a great insight into himself and his relationships with all other creatures.

As in a carnival's hall of mirrors, all the reflections make it difficult to move around in the Cavern of the Self.

Anyone within the cave takes a –4 penalty on all attack rolls, Reflex saving throws, and Dexterity-based skill checks.

Creatures that do not rely on eyesight, or those with the blindsense special quality, have immunity to this effect. Likewise, a character may choose to close his eyes while in the cave, taking all the penalties associated with that action.

Location: Pandemos, the first layer of Pandemonium.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Cavern of the Self encounter table when the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in over a year.

CAVERN OF THE SELF ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–15	1 half-fiendish medusa
16–35	1 gray slaad
36–60	2 mind flayers
61–80	1 death slaad
81–100	Squad of githyanki

Subsequent Encounters: Once the characters clear out the area, on subsequent visits the chance of an encounter is only 10%.

If the PCs fail to visit the location for more than a year, they must roll for encounters as if they had never visited the site.

Base Ability: You gain a +1 bonus on all Bluff checks.

Recharge Condition: Stand in the Cavern of the Self and locate the reflection of your current self.

This requires a successful DC 20 Will saving throw.

Each attempt takes a number of minutes equal to 20 minus your total Will saving throw score (minimum 1).

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day, you may cast charm monster as if you were a 10th-level wizard.

Higher-Order Uses: 4.

CUSP OF THE TRYST (EL 14)

The 148th layer of the Abyss is a rocky, wind-blasted plain named Torrent.

Dark blue and green clouds roil endlessly through the sky, and bolts of lightning strike the ground incessantly.

Only creatures made of lightning—or those with immunity to its effects—can live in this dismal place.

Any creature standing on the surface of Torrent will eventually be struck by lightning.

The inhabitants consider such an event joyous—a sensual joining between the sky and the earth via the body of a fortunate intermediary.

Most visitors, however, have no such romantic notions about several million volts of electricity coursing through their bodies.

The tallest point on Torrent is a relatively small mountain that the locals call the Cusp of the Tryst because it is struck by lightning more frequently than any other spot.

Many of Torrent's inhabitants consider it a sacred place, and those who travel to it can enjoy the kiss of the lightning more than ten times per hour.

Location: Torrent, the 148th layer of the Abyss.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Cusp of the Tryst Encounter Table below when the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in more than a year.

In addition, every 10 minutes that a group of characters remains above ground on Torrent, one of them may (25% chance) be struck by a natural lightning bolt. This chance increases to 50% every 5 minutes for characters standing atop the Cusp of the Tryst. Each of Torrent's lightning bolts deals 5d6 points of electricity damage (Reflex DC 15 half).

CUSP OF THE TRYST ENCOUNTER TABLE

d%	Encounter
01–15	1 young adult blue dragon
16–30	3 vrocks
31–65	1 glabrezu
66–90	3 hezrous
91–100	1 mature adult blue dragon

Subsequent Encounters: Once the characters clear out the area, the chance of an encounter is only 20% on each subsequent visit.

If the PCs fail to visit the location for more than a year, they must roll for encounters as if they had never visited the site. The chance of a lightning strike does not change.

Base Ability: You gain electricity resistance 5.

Recharge Condition: Climb to the top of the Cusp of the Tryst and stand there until lightning strikes you.

The lightning deals 5d6 points of electricity damage (no save).

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day as a full-round action, you can create an effect similar to that of the lightning bolt spell, except that it deals 1d6 points of electricity damage for every two character levels you have achieved (maximum 10d6, Reflex DC 3 + your character level).

Higher-Order Uses: 5.

DEEPING POOL (EL 11)

The Deeping Pool is actually a small lake, perhaps a quarter mile wide and several miles long.

It lies hidden within a broadleaf forest on Krigala, the realm of eternal day.

Though the sun shines perpetually overhead, the forest's thick canopy casts the whole area in a green twilight gloom—except for the exact center of the lake, where shafts of golden light stream down and make the waters sparkle like a field of precious diamonds.

The pool's depth has never been precisely determined, perhaps because its verdant surroundings are so lovely that no one has ever bothered to do so, or perhaps because it is bottomless indeed.

The Deeping Pool is the only sizable body water for hundreds of miles in any direction.

Thus, for inexperienced travelers, the forest surrounding the pool is effectively a cool, green desert.

At any given hour, dozens or even hundreds of animals visit the pool to slake their thirst.

Most of these visitors are harmless enough, but some come here for more than a cool drink.

Location: The first layer of the Beastlands.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Deeping Pool Encounter Table below whenever the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in more than a year.

DEEPING POOL ENCOUNTER TABLE

d%	Encounter
01–15	1 gaspar
16–30	5–8 dire wolves
31–70	6–11 giant crocodiles
71–85	1–2 dire tigers
86–100	3–6 celestial unicorns

Subsequent Encounters: The Deeping Pool serves as a watering hole for all manner of wildlife.

PCs who make an effort to clear the area of monsters find it just as busy each time they visit.

If they make a concerted effort to clear out the bigger predators in the area, however, treat an encounter with dire animals or giant crocodiles as no encounter during subsequent visits.

If the characters don't visit for a year or more, go back to using the regular encounter table.

Base Ability: You gain a +2 bonus on all Handle Animal checks and on Survival checks made to forage for food and water.

Recharge Condition: Share a drink from the pool with an animal.

To do so, you must be adjacent to an animal, and the two of you must drink from the pool at the same time.

For the purpose of recharging the pool's higher-order ability, an "animal" is any creature with the animal type or the augmented animal subtype.

Characters with animal companions should find meeting this condition fairly simple, but others must calm or control the animal in some fashion.

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day, you can assume one of the following animal traits for 1 minute per character level. The duration of the ability need not be consecutive minutes or rounds, and starting or suspending the effect is a standard action for you.

Choose from the following traits each time you use the ability.

- Gain the low-light vision special quality.
- Gain the scent special quality.
- Increase your current natural armor bonus by +2.
- Gain a climb speed equal to the base land speed for your race (maximum 30 feet).

Higher-Order Uses: 3.

DENSAHL'S CHALLENGE (EL 13)

Every day on the Plain of Ida, warriors and champions test themselves and their prowess in contests of skill and martial cunning.

Valiant heroes from across the multiverse engage in games of strategy, speed, and raw strength.

The most famous of the latter is known as Densahl's Challenge.

At first, Densahl's Challenge seems like nothing more than a rocky tor sticking out from the grassy field.

It stands about 20 feet tall and is made of a rose-colored stone very similar to granite.

Long ago, a mighty dwarf warrior named Densahl (who had just won an ale-quaffing competition) stumbled into the tor and took exception to it being in his way.

He climbed to the top of the rock and announced that he would break it to a thousand pieces so that it never bothered anyone again.

He only managed one swing of his hammer before passing out, but that single blow broke off a boulder the size of Densahl's head and shoulders.

The crowd was impressed, but many claimed they could do better.

One by one, they climbed the stone to try, and the tradition continues to this day.

Densahl's Challenge is quite simple.

Contestants carry sledgehammers to the top of the tor, call out their names and affiliations, and then swing the hammer with all their might.

The goal is to break off as large a piece of the rock as possible.

The record blow was struck by none other than Kord himself—a boulder the size of a workhorse.

No matter how many warriors break off significant chunks of the stone, though, each day the tor is just as tall as ever.

Although the warriors who frequent the Plain of Ida can be quite competitive, and many climb the tor time and again to outdo their rivals, Densahl's Challenge is a friendly competition.

No matter what the result of an individual swing, the onlookers (a crowd of spectators is always present at Densahl's Challenge) raise a mighty cheer in the contestant's honor.

Location: Ysgard, the top layer of Ysgard.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Densahl's Challenge encounter table when the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in over a year.

The creatures they meet may well be arrogant or belligerent, but they will not be evil.

The PCs have a relatively good chance of negotiating these encounters peacefully—or at least without serious injury (contests of strength or martial prowess may take the place of actual battle).

DENSAHL'S CHALLENGE ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–18	3 avoral guardinals
19–46	1 leonal guardinal*
47–72	1 astral deva
73–88	1 trumpet archon
89–100	1 old brass dragon

* From Manual of the Planes.

Subsequent Encounters: Once the characters have established their presence in the area, on subsequent visits the chance of an encounter is only 50%.

If the PCs fail to visit the location for more than a year, they must roll for encounters as if they had never visited the site.

Base Ability: You gain a +1 bonus on melee damage rolls.

Recharge Condition: Participate in Densahl's Challenge.

To gauge your results, make a single melee attack roll using a sledgehammer (treat as a warhammer) with the following results.

Unless you roll a 1, the blow lands true (rolling a 1 results in the hammer breaking).

If you threaten a critical hit, roll to confirm the critical hit even though you're attacking an object.

The weight of the piece of rock you break off depends on how much damage you deal.

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day, after rolling a successful melee attack but before rolling the damage, you may add a bonus equal to your character level to the damage dealt by the blow.

Higher-Order Uses: 3.

DESTINY POINT (EL 6)

Along the shore of Celestia's Glass Tarn, a spit of land sticks out into the water like a finger pointing forward.

This islet is known as Destiny Point, and it is considered the most auspicious place from which to access the lake's prophetic powers.

It is said that merely standing at the water's edge along Destiny Point is enough to fill a person with a sense of purpose.

What's more, some claim that this physically changes a person so that others will see her as one who is favored by fate—a person with an important role to play in the multiverse.

Whether or not any truth lies in these claims, it is one of the most picturesque spots along the shoreline, and an especially good spot from which to view the constellations.

Location: Venya, the third layer of Celestia.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Destiny Point encounter table when the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in over a year.

The cleric will generally be a character similar to the PCs who has come to the Glass Tarn to glean information about his future.

The lantern archons may be members of the local constabulary, or simply be wandering for their own purposes.

DESTINY POINT ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–13	1d6 celestial lions
14–38	1d6 lantern archons
39–66	7th-level human cleric
67–88	1d4 +6 lantern archons
89–100	1 juvenile silver dragon

Subsequent Encounters: Once the characters have established their presence in the area, on subsequent visits the chance of an encounter is only 10%.

If the PCs fail to visit the location for more than a year, they must roll for encounters as if they had never visited the site.

Base Ability: You gain a +1 bonus on Diplomacy checks.

Recharge Condition: Pick a stone from the shore of the Glass Tarn, and throw it across the water so that it skips at least three times.

To count how many skips you get per throw, make a Dexterity check.

The number of skips is based on the check result; the stone skips once for every 5 full points of the result (so a result of 0–4 would not skip at all, a result of 5–9 would skip once, a result of 10–14 would skip twice, and so on).

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day as a full-round action, you can urge your companions on to extraordinary levels of capability.

You may affect a number of allies equal to one-quarter of your character level (round down, minimum 1).

The subjects receive a +1 morale bonus on attack rolls and weapon damage rolls, and a +2 morale bonus on saving throws against charm and fear effects.

The bonuses last for a number of rounds equal to your character level.

This ability will not work on anyone who has immunity to mind-affecting spells and abilities.

Higher-Order Uses: 5.

ECHOLOST (EL 9)

Where no tunnels reach, there can be found the closed cavern of Echolost.

Vast in size, echoes chase each other across the wide space for eternity.

Some are so complex that they may be considered creatures in their own right, though they could not exist outside the space of Echolost.

One side of the cavern in particular, known as the Wall of Echoes, is special.

It appears as a flat black expanse of dense, rock-like material.

It absorbs any sound that falls upon it, then once again emits that sound minutes, hours, days, or sometimes many years later.

Sages sometimes come here just to listen to the wall, hoping to hear whispers of knowledge long lost.

The other major feature of the cavern, the Earthpool, is a basin of dust so fine that it appears to be liquid, though woe to those who mistake the pale dust for water.

Location: The Elemental Plane of Earth.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Echolost encounter table when the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in over a year.

If an earthurge is encountered, it is attempting to establish (or has established) a lair.

ECHOLOST ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–10	6 earth mephits
11–50	1 greater earth elemental
51–75	2 Huge earth elementals
76–97	4 Large earth elementals
98–100	1 earthurge (see below), 4 earth mephits, and 1 Large earth elemental

Subsequent Encounters: Once the characters clear the site, on subsequent visits the chance of an encounter is only 10%.

If the PCs fail to visit the location for more than a year, they must roll for encounters as if they had never visited the site.

Base Ability: You gain a +2 bonus on saving throws you make while in a subterranean environment (or while on the Elemental Plane of Earth).

Furthermore, you gain a +1 bonus on your Hide, Move Silently, Search, and Spot checks while in a subterranean environment or on the Elemental Plane of Earth.

Recharge Condition: Chisel a stone from the Wall of Echoes.

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day for a period of 1 minute per character level, you gain the ability to burrow through dirt at a speed of 20 feet and through rock at a speed of 5 feet.

You cannot charge or run while burrowing.

You do not leave behind tunnels that other creatures can use because the material you tunnel through fills in behind you, but you can bring one other creature with you ahead of the fill whose size is equal to or smaller than your own.

Higher-Order Uses: 5.

Earthurge: Earth elemental sorcerer 9; CR 12; Large elemental (earth, extraplanar); HD 4d8+12 plus 9d4+27 plus 3; hp 85; Init -1; Speed 20 ft.; AC 24 (-1 Dex, +9 natural, +4 mage armor, +2 ring of protection), touch 9, flat-footed 22; Base Atk +7; Grp +7; Atk +7 melee (1d8, slam); Full Atk +7/+2 melee (1d8, slam); Space/reach 5 ft./5 ft.; SA earth mastery, push, spells; SQ darkvision 60 ft., earth glide, elemental traits; AL N; SV Fort +10, Ref +5, Will +9; Str 10, Dex 8, Con 17, Int 10, Wis 11, Cha 18.

Skills and Feats: Concentration +9, Listen +7, Search +2, Spellcraft +9, Spot +6; Iron Will, Lightning Reflexes, Toughness, Spell Penetration, Craft Wand.

Earth Mastery (Ex): An earth elemental gains a +1 bonus on attack and damage rolls if both it and its foe are touching the ground.

If an opponent is airborne or waterborne, the elemental takes a -4 penalty on attack and damage rolls.

(These modifiers are not included in the statistics block).

Push (Ex): An earth elemental can start a bull rush maneuver without provoking an attack of opportunity.

The combat modifiers given in Earth Mastery, above, also apply to the elemental's opposed Strength checks.

Earth Glide (Ex): An earth elemental can glide through stone, dirt, and almost any other sort of earth (except metal) as easily as a fish swims through water.

Its burrowing leaves behind no tunnel or hole, nor does it create any ripple or other signs of its presence.

A move earth spell cast on an area containing a burrowing earth elemental flings the elemental back 30 feet, stunning the creature for 1 round unless it succeeds on a DC 15 Fortitude save.

Sorcerer Spells Known (6/7/7/7/5): 0—dancing lights, daze, detect magic, ghost sound, mage hand, ray of frost, read magic, resistance; 1st—cause fear (DC 15), mage armor, magic missile, obscuring mist, sleep (DC 15); 2nd—blur, flaming sphere (DC 16), invisibility, spectral hand; 3rd—dispel magic, lightning bolt (DC 17), vampiric touch; 4th—ice storm, stoneskin.

Possessions: +2 ring of protection, wand of icestorm (10 charges).

EMPYREA MERE (EL 4)

This cold, clear mountain lake overlooks the great City of Tempered Souls, with its healing fountains and curing waters.

In fact, the city's healing waters are drawn from the Mere. Those looking in the Mere see the truth about themselves—all their strengths, flaws, and weaknesses, it is said—and those who bathe in the water are healed of all curses and spiritual hurts.

Location: Mertion, the fifth layer of Celestia, near the City of Tempered Souls.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Empyrea Mere encounter table when the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in over a year.

The creatures encountered are initially suspicious of those seeking the Mere, but diplomacy may turn their hostile attitudes to a less aggressive posture.

EMPYREA MERE ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–10	2 lantern archons
11–50	1 hound archon
51–75	2 hound archons
76–97	1 celestial lion
98–100	1 bralani eladrin

Subsequent Encounters: Once the players negotiate a peace (or clear the location), on subsequent visits the chance of an encounter is only 10%.

If the PCs fail to visit the location for more than a year, they must roll for encounters as if they had never visited the site.

Base Ability: You gain +3 hit points.

Recharge Condition: Drink of the Mere from a silver chalice.

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day, your touch upon the target creature can wipe away one of the following ailments or conditions: ability damage, blinded, confusion, dazed, dazzled, deafened, disease, exhaustion, fatigue, feeble-mindedness, insanity, nausea, sickness, stun, poison (ongoing), or hit point damage (up to 90 points).

Your touch has no effect on undead creatures.

Higher-Order Uses: 4.

EYE OF GU'N'RAGH (EL 11)

The Astral Plane is perhaps the most desolate place in the multiverse, with only a smattering of solid matter, the petrified bodies of dead gods, and the rolling astral winds to disturb the endless silver void.

The winds, however, sometimes coalesce into a psychic storm that disturbs the eternal silence, making it impossible for anyone to travel across that particular part of astral space.

These storms usually pass relatively quickly, but from time to time, a squall will flare into a psychic tempest that ravages the astral landscape for decades or even centuries. Tempest Gu'n'ragh is the largest and longest-lived psychic storm ever recorded.

It has been raging for well over 2,500 years and shows no signs of abating.

During that time, Gu'n'ragh has wandered over a huge area, wreaking damage on dozens of githyanki communities and even shattering the remains of several smaller dead deities. Although Tempest Gu'n'ragh is incredibly destructive, like a terrestrial hurricane, it whirls around a calm center, known as its "eye".

Unlike terrestrial storms, though, a psychic tempest is roughly spherical in shape, so it is impossible to see this eye or approach it from a relatively safe angle.

However, some have braved the ravages of the storm to find and enter the eye.

They report that it is the most transcendently peaceful place they have ever visited and that they experienced complete clarity of thought and emotion that forever changed their outlooks on life.

Location: The Astral Plane.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Eye of Gu'n'ragh encounter table when the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in over a year.

EYE OF GU'N'RAGH ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–05	1 astral kraken
06–15	1 githyanki mageknife (see Breath of Threphocris touchstone )
16–25	1 devourer
26–40	1d4 efreet
41–55	1 cauchemar (nightmare)
56–85	1d3 mind flayers
86–100	1d3 noble djinn

Subsequent Encounters: On subsequent visits to the site, the chance of an encounter is only 5%.

If the PCs fail to visit the location for more than a year, they must roll for encounters as if they had never visited the site.

Base Ability: You gain a +1 bonus on Will saving throws.

Recharge Condition: Travel through the psychic tempest to reach the Eye of Gu'n'ragh.

To find the center requires three successful DC 30 Knowledge (the planes) checks or six successful DC 30 Survival checks.

Each time you attempt a check, you must also make a DC 13 Will saving throw.

If the saving throw fails, you (or your silver cord) take 1d10 points of damage.

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day, you can use mind fog as though you were a 12th-level wizard.

Higher-Order Uses: 3.

FIELDS OF AUTUMN (EL 12)

In Mertion, the fifth layer of Celestia, a vast open plain is dotted with small groves of elm and oak trees that eternally wear their colorful autumn foliage.

Orange, red, and yellow leaves hang heavy on the trees and blow lazily through the mountain air.

These fields are a favorite training ground for paladins and celestials who favor bows, crossbows, and other ranged weapons.

There is plenty of space to set up archery ranges, and the task at hand is made all the more challenging because of the leaves that float distractingly between the archer and the target.

In fact, a favorite test of skill is to shoot a leaf of a particular color out of midair, pinning it to a target (hopefully in the bullseye).

Location: Mertion, the fifth layer of Celestia.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Fields of Autumn encounter table when the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in over a year.

FIELDS OF AUTUMN ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–22	Hound archon squad (3–5) plus 1 8th-level human paladin
23–46	1d6+1 6th-level human fighters
47–71	1d3 celestial dire bears
72–86	9th-level half-elf sorcerer riding young adult silver dragon
87–100	1 planetar

Subsequent Encounters: Once the characters clear out the area, on subsequent visits the chance of an encounter is only 10%.

If the PCs fail to visit the location for more than a year, they must roll for encounters as if they had never visited the site.

Base Ability: You gain a +1 bonus on ranged attack rolls.

Recharge Condition: Using a ranged weapon, shoot a red leaf from the air and pin it to a specific target or tree.

This is the equivalent of hitting Armor Class 30.

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day, for a number of rounds equal to your character level, you gain a +5 competence bonus on ranged attacks.

Furthermore, for the duration of this effect, you may double the range increment of any ranged weapon you fire.

Higher-Order Uses: 3.

FOUNTAIN OF SCREAMS (EL 7)

On the 245th layer of the Abyss, on an island of black glass in a vast sea of acid, stands the ruins of a small town made entirely of that same black glass.

Embedded in the walls of this town are its former inhabitants, creatures that seem human but might be half-elves or even aasimars.

All are frozen in attitudes of extreme agony, their mouths open as if to utter one last scream.

In the center of this macabre village sits a large public fountain, still working after countless centuries—though rather than spraying out water, the fountain sprays out potent, searing acid.

Location: The 245th layer of the Infinite Layers of the Abyss.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Fountain of Screams encounter table when the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in over a year.

Though each creature encountered is thoroughly evil, they are less interested in combat than in the spectacle of someone bathing in the Fountain of Screams.

In their excitement, they might even attempt to help someone into the fountain sooner than that person is ready—perhaps even holding that person under to ensure immersion for the “full duration”.

FOUNTAIN OF SCREAMS ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–20	1 babau
21–50	8 dretches
51–75	1 babau and 2 dretches
76–90	1 succubus
91–100	1 vroock

Subsequent Encounters: Because a great many creatures of the Abyss make this vast acid sea their home, the chance of an encounter on every subsequent visit is 60%.

If the PCs fail to visit the location for more than a year, they must roll for encounters as if they had never visited the site.

Base Ability: You can spit a small glob of acid as a standard action.

The glob of acid has a range increment of 5 feet, with a maximum range of 20 feet, and deals 1d3 points of damage. The acid does no harm to you, and becomes inert in less than a round.

Recharge Condition: You must bathe in the Fountain of Screams (which deals 2d6 points of acid damage per round).

At least 1 round of bathing must consist of complete immersion (which deals 10d6 points of acid damage).

The longer you immerse yourself in the Fountain of Screams, the more effective the higher-order ability is.

Higher-Order Ability: Immediately after emerging from the Fountain of Screams, you gain the ability to become resistant to acid for short periods.

Once per day as a free action, you gain resistance to acid 10, and it lasts for a number of rounds equal to the number of rounds you bathed in the Fountain of Screams (to a maximum of 20).

For each round you were fully immersed in the Fountain of Screams, you may activate this ability one additional time per day.

Each activation still counts toward the total number of uses. Higher-Order Uses: 6.

GREAT ORRERY (EL 12)

In the heart of the endless sea of cogs, flywheels, and spindles that make up the Clockwork Nirvana of Mechanus, a relatively small cog ticks in perfect harmony with its surroundings.

This cog would be completely unremarkable except for the spinning circular mechanism that sits at its center.

The mechanism, called the Great Orrery, is a perfect model of the multiverse from the heart of the Material Plane to the most distant Outer Plane.

(See the map of the planes, page 137).

No one ever sees the Great Orrery move, but every time one looks away for even an instant—even for the blink of an eye—the mechanism has advanced a turn or the arrangement of individual cubes and spheres has been changed.

No one knows who designed or built the Great Orrery, let alone why.

Indeed, no one even understands why it functions the way it does.

The internal gears are not in synch with the observed external movements, sometimes moving only in tiny increments, but other times completely rearranging themselves several times within a few minutes.

It is said, though, that by studying the Orrery, you gain a glimpse into how the multiverse functions (at least at that moment in time).

Location: Mechanus.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Great Orrery encounter table when the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in over six months.

The formian astronomer is at the Orrery to measure the progress of the multiverse and make predictions about the future.

It may be friendly or antagonistic toward the PCs as the DM deems most appropriate.

GREAT ORRERY ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–23	3d6 formian warriors
24–41	Formian astronomer (see below)
42–71	1 kolyarut
72–87	4 zelehkuts
88–100	Formian myrmarch and 3d6 formian warriors

Subsequent Encounters: Once the characters establish their presence in the area, on subsequent visits the chance of an encounter is only 15%.

If the PCs fail to visit the location for more than six months, they must roll for encounters as if they had never visited the site.

Base Ability: You gain a +2 bonus on Knowledge (the planes) checks.

Recharge Condition: Study the Great Orrery for 1 hour without interruption.

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day, you gain the effects of the plane shift spell as if cast by a 10th-level cleric.

This ability allows for more accurate travel than the spell usually provides.

Instead of arriving 5d% miles away from the intended target, characters using this ability arrive 2d10+5 miles away.

Higher-Order Uses: 3.

➤ Formian Astronomer: Formian myrmarch bard 3; CR 11; Large outsider (lawful, extraplanar); HD 12d8+60 plus 3d6+15; hp 139; Init +8; Spd 50 ft.; AC 30, touch 13, flat-footed 26; Base Atk +14; Grp +21; Atk +16 melee (2d4+3 plus poison, sting); Full Atk +16 melee (2d4+3 plus poison, sting) and +14 melee (2d6+1, bite) or +17/+12 ranged (1d6+3, javelin); SA poison, spell-like abilities; SQ fast healing 2, hive mind, immunity to poison/petrification/cold, resistance to electricity 10 and fire 10 and sonic 10, SR 25, bardic music (countersong, fascinate, inspire courage +1, inspire competence) 3/day,

HEART OF THE SEA (EL 5)

The Heart of the Sea is a configuration of four bubbles of breathable air that float through the infinite depths of the Elemental Plane of Water.

The bubbles align themselves in a shape reminiscent of the four chambers of a human heart, and a stream of fast-moving water flows through them in roughly the same path that blood would take through a heart.

Inhabitants of the plane sometimes use the heart as a way to test the mettle and valor of visitors.

If a “bubble breather” can swim upstream through all four chambers of the Heart of the Sea, she is considered to have been embraced by Mother Ocean.

Location: The Elemental Plane of Water.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Heart of the Sea encounter table when the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in over a year.

HEART OF THE SEA ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–18	1 water mephit
19–39	1 Large water elemental
40–55	1 aboleth
56–82	1 Huge water elemental
83–100	1 elder tojanida

Subsequent Encounters: Once the characters clear out the area, on subsequent visits the chance of an encounter is only 10%.

If the PCs fail to visit the location for more than a year, they must roll for encounters as if they had never visited the site.

Base Ability: If you fail a Fortitude saving throw to keep from drowning, you may attempt the saving throw a second time.

You must accept the results of the second roll. (See Drowning, page 304 of the Dungeon Master's Guide).

Recharge Condition: You must swim one complete circuit through the Heart of the Sea, swimming against the flow of the stream, without taking a breath during the course of the circuit.

(See Water Dangers, page 304 of the Dungeon Master's Guide).

You must do this without the benefit of a water breathing spell or any other magical effect that allows you to ignore the effects of having no air to breathe.

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day, you gain the benefits of water breathing as though it were cast solely on you by a 20th-level cleric.

Higher-Order Uses: 5.

ICE CATACOMBS (EL 7)

At the core of one of the larger ice pockets on the Elemental Plane of Water lies a great iceberg easily the size of a mountain.

Into one side of this mountain of ice runs a great tunnel leading to a vast hall of ice, with columns so tall that the ceiling is lost to view, hundreds of feet overhead.

In this hall dwell aboleths and ice paraelementals, though none of them is responsible for the construction of the mighty hall.

In fact, the craftsmanship of the Ice Catacombs suggests dwarven manufacture, as though a dwarf citadel were constructed in the heart of a mountain, somehow turned to ice (mountain and all), and transported to the Elemental Plane of Water.

Location: The Elemental Plane of Water.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Ice Catacombs encounter table when the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in over a year.

Most of the mephits and ice paraelementals claim the site as their home, but the greater ice paraelemental considers the Ice Catacombs its personal palace, and defends it aggressively.

Remember that entering an ice pocket on the Elemental Plane of Water deals 1d6 points of cold damage each minute to any creature within the area.

ICE CATACOMBS ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–40	4 water mephits
41–60	4 ice mephits
61–80	4 Medium ice paraelementals*
81–95	2 Large ice paraelementals*
96–100	1 Huge ice paraelemental*

* From Manual of the Planes

Subsequent Encounters: Should the characters kill or drive off all the mephits and paraelementals, on subsequent visits to the Ice Catacombs the chance of an encounter is only 30%.

If the PCs fail to visit the location for more than a year, they must roll for encounters as if they had never visited the site.

Base Ability: You gain resistance to cold 5.

Recharge Condition: Embed treasure worth 500 gp (gems or jewelry) in the ice of the Catacombs' floor.

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day, you can create an area of intense cold about yourself in a 10-foot radius.

This zone of cold drains heat from everything in the area, dealing 1d6 points of cold damage per character level (maximum 10d6) to everything in the area.

Higher-Order Uses: 3.

JUIBLEX'S GRASP (EL 11)

One part of the Slime Pits is very much the same as any other—a bubbling morass of ooze and sludge dotted here and there with multicolored fungus.

Many visitors have difficulty navigating the realm of Juiblex because they cannot tell one place from another, but one area is like no other: Juiblex's Grasp.

Juiblex's Grasp is a shallow bay of slime that completely covers a rich forest of mushrooms.

The hidden fungus makes negotiating the passage treacherous, tripping unwary pedestrians.

In addition, the flow of the slime is so funneled that in several places vicious riptides and undertows can suck a Medium humanoid several hundred feet away in just a few seconds.

Tales speak of seasoned adventurers losing their footing, falling into the slime, and never being seen again.

Location: The Slime Pits, the 22nd layer of the Abyss.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Juiblex's Grasp encounter table when the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in over a year.

JUIBLEX'S GRASP ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–12	3d6 ooze mephits

Base Ability: You gain a +1 bonus on Fortitude saving throws.

Recharge Condition: Submerge your whole body in the slime and pick a mushroom from the bed underneath.

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day, you gain the benefits of freedom of movement for a number of minutes equal to ten times your character level.

Higher-Order Uses: 4.

LIBRARY OF IGNORANCE (EL 6)

Agathys, the innermost layer of Carceri, is a dark sphere of black ice.

The wind howls endlessly, and little light or shelter can be found anywhere.

At the base of one glacial cliff sits a tiny, lonely stone building known as the Library of Ignorance.

The library consists of a main level and a balcony that runs around three sides.

Each wall of the building is filled from floor to ceiling with rows of bookshelves—all empty.

None of them holds even a single book.

In the center of the main floor sits a wooden table, a single chair, and a small, pot-bellied stove.

On the table rests a tremendous volume whose cover reads "Book of Knowledge".

The library's sole occupant is a derro wizard by the name of Dreschm.

Once, Dreschm was an adventurer who wandered the planes, learning all he could from anyone who would speak with him.

Now he is irretrievably mad (even for a derro).

Though no one is certain how he came to be in this state, it is presumed that somewhere in his adventuring, he earned the ire of Nerull.

Every day, Dreschm sits at the table and fills one page in the book with memories from his long-ago travels across the multiverse.

However, since he has no other source of heat, he also tears one page from the book and tosses it into the stove to feed the flame.

Despite the wretched conditions, Dreschm has no desire to leave his library, and will actively fight anyone who tries to "rescue" him or otherwise make him leave.

Location: Agathys, the innermost sphere of Carceri.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Library of Ignorance encounter table when the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in over a year.

Some of the encounters are with creatures that wander the frozen waste; others are with visitors who come to torment Dreschm.

No matter when one visits the library, Dreschm will be there, sitting at his table, either writing or tearing out a page to feed into the stove.

LIFE MOLDS OF NEUMANNUS (EL 12)

On a free-floating, clock-like cog wheel some 900 feet in diameter stands a building bristling with smokestacks, which projects from either side of the two-dimensional cog. Called Neumannus, this is a factory of sorts that turns out creatures known as inevitables.

Inevitables are constructs that have taken it upon themselves to uphold the laws of the cosmos.

But not all inevitables follow the law.

Living entities are not allowed to visit Neumannus, or usually suffered even to know its location.

However, certain constructs with less moral character than their counterparts allow living visitors access through secret "back doors" and into a mold chamber.

This is where inevitables take form, gaining animation.

And, with the proper knowledge, it is where biologicals can be subtly modified with machine features.

Location: Mechanus.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Life Molds encounter table when the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in over a year.

LIFE MOLDS OF NEUMANNUS ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–10	1 iron golem
11–50	1 kolyarut
51–75	2 zelekhts
76–97	1 zelekhut enforcer (see below)
98–100	1 marut

Subsequent Encounters: Once the characters make an initial contact within the Life Mold complex, on subsequent visits the chance of an encounter is only 10%. If the PCs fail to visit the location for more than a year, they must roll for encounters as if they had never visited the site.

Base Ability: You have a construct-inspired resistance to certain weaknesses of the flesh, granting you a +2 bonus on saving throws against disease, paralysis, poison, or stunning.

Recharge Condition: Deliver several quarts of your blood (which some inevitables prize for their own reasons) to the construct currently running the secret "life molds" out of Neumannus.

Upon payment, the inevitable will enclose your body in a mold and instigate the special process that recharges your higher-order ability.

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day, your body is sheathed in a slim layer of flexible iron for 1 minute per character level.

You gain damage reduction 5/adamantine, resistance to fire 5 and acid 5, and a +4 enhancement bonus to your Strength, but you take a –2 penalty to your Dexterity score (to a minimum of 1).

You need not (and cannot) breathe while protected by your "construct shell".

You have a 25% chance to turn critical hits or sneak attacks into regular hits.

You have an arcane spell failure chance of 25% and a –4 armor check penalty.

You cannot drink (and thus can't use potions) or play wind instruments.

Your unarmed attacks deal damage equal to a club sized for you (1d4 for Small characters or 1d6 for Medium characters), and you are considered armed when making unarmed attacks.

Your weight increases by a factor of five, causing you to sink in water.

However, you could survive the crushing pressure and lack of air at the bottom of the ocean—at least until the duration of the power expires.

Higher-Order Uses: 2.

Caster level 8th.

Skills: A zelekhut has a +4 racial bonus on Search and Sense Motive checks.

Feats: Due to its centaur-like construction, a zelekhut enforcer qualifies for feats as if it had the Mounted Combat feat.

LIP OF PURITY (EL 11)

A river winds its way down the slopes of Mount Clangeddin and across the plains of Abellio, the first layer of the Peaceable Kingdoms of Arcadia.

Eventually, this river runs off the edge of the layer to feed into a lake at the center of Buxenus, the second layer. (While it is true that Abellio has an edge and Buxenus has a center, it is also true that both layers are infinite in size. These are just two of the many seeming contradictions to be found in the boundless reaches of the multiverse).

Although the river rushes wildly as it approaches the precipice, it becomes calm and tranquil at a spot just before the water plunges over the edge.

This location is known as the Lip of Purity, and it is a meditation spot favored by many devotees of law.

It is a perfect metaphor, they say, for the way that adherence to the rules of nature provides peace, purity, and protection in even the most dangerous situations.

Location: Abellio, the first layer of Arcadia.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Lip of Purity encounter table when the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in over a year.

LIP OF PURITY ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–32	1d6 celestial brown bears
33–47	1 greater water elemental
48–63	3d6 formian warriors
64–90	1 celestial roc
91–100	1 planetar

Subsequent Encounters: Once the characters clear out or establish their presence in the area, on subsequent visits the chance of an encounter is only 10%.

If the PCs fail to visit the location for more than a year, they must roll for encounters as if they had never visited the site.

Base Ability: You gain a +2 bonus to your Armor Class when being attacked by any chaotic creature.

Recharge Condition: Wade into the Lip of Purity while wearing no armor or weapons, and submerge your whole body in the waters.

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day, you can gain a +2 morale bonus on all attacks made against evil creatures.

You also deal an extra 2d6 points of damage against chaotic foes.

The bonus and the extra damage last for 10 minutes.

Higher-Order Uses: 3.

MAUSOLEUM OF ICY FEAR (EL 11)

A cemetery in the Abyss whose graves are carved into the surface of a frozen ocean hosts many mausoleums, gravestones, and buried tombs.

In fact, the entire cemetery is actually just part of a far greater necropolis, though it doesn't pay to wander in the greater city, where its war-like legions of retrievers, vampiric giants, and lichs rule a greater population of zombies, ghouls, wights, and motionless, decaying corpses. No, better to remain among the towering funeral obelisks, crypt parapets, and icy mausoleums of this corner of the cemetery where the dead are mostly quiet.

Here, a mausoleum carved directly from the icy substrate stands.

Its doors, though, are bone panes on which carved glyphs warn away trespassers.

Inside is an empty space, a chasm that plunges straight into the icy ocean.

No one has ever plumbed its depths.

And from these unknown depths issues the icy presence of fear.

Any creature who opens the bone doors is subject to a fear spell as cast by a 20th-level caster (DC 30).

Location: The city of Naratyr in the 113th layer of the Abyss.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Mausoleum encounter table when the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in over a year.

MAUSOLEUM ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–10	1 bodak and 1 spectre
11–50	1 vrock
51–75	2 flesh golems and 1 vampire, 5th-level human fighter
76–97	2 bodaks and 1 spectre
98–100	1 nalfeshnee

Subsequent Encounters: Once the characters clear out the site, on subsequent visits the chance of an encounter is only 40%.

If the PCs fail to visit the location for more than four months, they must roll for encounters as if they had never visited the site.

Base Ability: You gain a +4 bonus on saving throws against cold effects.

Recharge Condition: Descend at least 100 feet into the shaft capped by the mausoleum (which inflicts 5d6 points of cold damage, no save).

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day, you can consume the ebbing life force of a creature.

If you make a successful touch attack against a living creature that has –1 or fewer hit points, the subject must make a Fortitude save (DC 14 + your Wis modifier) or die. If the target dies, you gain 1d8 temporary hit points and a +2 bonus to Strength.

Your effective caster level goes up by one, improving spell effects dependent on caster level.

(This increase in effective caster level does not grant you access to more spells).

These effects last for 10 minutes per level or Hit Die of the target creature.

Higher-Order Uses: 2.

METACUBE (EL 9)

Nearly hidden among the buildings, arches, and doorways of Sigil sits a cube, 10 feet on a side and composed entirely of mithril.

Unlike practically every other structure in the city, this cube has no doors, windows, or other portals.

It's simply a solid block of metal with no filigree or adornments—with one bizarre exception.

Anyone who looks at the cube long enough will see what at first appears to be a shadow or reflection moving across its surface.

Closer inspection will reveal that this is actually a sequence of numbers and letters that carve themselves into the mithril—a great equation that progresses across the face of the cube.

The equation develops, moving at about an inch per second. It extends about 4 feet long, with the tail end constantly melting back into smooth mithril as the front end continues to build.

It does not move in a straight line, curving from time to time for no fathomable reason, and occasionally splitting in two (or more) with each mini-equation following a different path for a while before they meet and rejoin a few minutes later.

One of the most interesting qualities of the equation is that it can be stopped.

If someone puts a hand or other living body part in its path, the series of numbers and symbols stop their progression. (Unliving material has no effect on the equation).

Once stopped, the only way to get it going again is for someone to use a knife or other sharp instrument to carve out the next three numbers or symbols in the equation, after which the process will continue on its own again.

Scholars know that the equation is part mathematics, part arcane notation, and part divine symbology, but they cannot be certain what it means.

Most believe that it is an academic notation for the state of the multiverse at that particular moment.

They say that the secrets of reality can be found if one studies the equation long enough.

So far, however, no one has come up with the answer.

Location: The city of Sigil, floating above the Spire in the center of the Outlands.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Metacube encounter table when the characters visit the touchstone for the first time, or for the first time in over a year.

METACUBE ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–18	1d3+2 hound archons
19–32	1 half-celestial 6th-level dwarf bard
33–58	1d4 formian taskmasters
59–83	3 erinyes
84–100	2 leonals

Subsequent Encounters: Once the characters establish themselves in the area, on subsequent visits the chance of an encounter is only 25%.

If the PCs fail to visit the location for more than a year, they must roll for encounters as if they had never visited the site.

Base Ability: You gain a +2 bonus on Knowledge (architecture and engineering) checks.

Recharge Condition: Stop the equation, then restart its progress by carving the next three symbols yourself.

This requires a DC 15 Intelligence check or a DC 25 Knowledge (the planes) check.

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day as a full-round action, you can improve the sturdiness and durability of one building, piece of sculpture, piece of furniture, or other constructed object.

To do this, you must spend the full round touching the object in question.

At the end of that period, the object gains a number of hit points equal to your character level, which may make the object better than new, even more sturdy than when it was first constructed.

Higher-Order Uses: 2.

MIMSHAN'S CURTAIN (EL 6)

Mimshan's Curtain can be found in the mountains outside the city of Fortitude on the Concordant Domain of the Outlands.

It is a thin veil of a waterfall that feeds into a crystal clear pool of chilly water.

The spot got its name because it was favored by a legendary monk named Mimshan who would sit under the waterfall and meditate for days on end.

He claimed that the purity of the waters helped to cleanse his mind and heal his body.

Mimshan was secretive about the location of his waterfall. He never took anyone there with him, and never marked the spot on a map.

Then, one day, the monk left his home to visit the site but never returned.

Some say he was waylaid by greedy merchants or rival monks who wanted to know the location of his famous retreat.

Others believe that he achieved such enlightenment while sitting under the waterfall that he simply became one with the multiverse.

The truth of the matter will never be known.

In the intervening years, though, many individuals claim to have found Mimshan's Curtain.

And even more people have sat shivering under waterfalls in the mountains of the Outlands, generally to no effect other than catching a cold.

Location: The Outlands, in the mountains outside the city of Fortitude.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Mimshan's Curtain encounter table when the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in over a year.

MIMSHAN'S CURTAIN ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–12	1 celestial unicorn
13–31	2 fiendish lions
32–56	2 formian warriors
57–82	1 arrowhawk
83–100	5th-level lillend monk

Subsequent Encounters: Once the characters clear out or establish themselves in the area, on subsequent visits the chance of an encounter is only 10%.

If the PCs fail to visit the location for more than a year, they must roll for encounters as if they had never visited the site.

The monk is another seeker who wishes to find the legendary Mimshan's Curtain.

It is left to the DM to decide whether he is a worthy pilgrim or a would-be exploiter.

Base Ability: You gain a +2 bonus on Heal checks.

Recharge Condition: Sit under the waterfall meditating for 24 hours.

You may wear only a light cotton tunic or breeches, and you may not take any food or drink during the period of meditation.

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day, you gain the benefits of one of the following spells (as if cast by a 10th-level cleric): cure serious wounds, magic circle against evil, remove blindness/deafness, remove curse, or remove disease.

Higher-Order Uses: 5.

MONASTERY OF ZERTH'AD'LUN (EL 7)

A githzerai monastery overseen by a 16th-level githzerai monk named Belthomais, the Monastery of Zerth'Ad'lun teaches zerthi—a form of martial arts that emphasizes anticipating an opponent's next move.

The practitioners of zerthi claim to be able to see a moment into the future as a result of their training, but in a secret shrine inside the monastery, the monks meditate over a small pool that grants the same ability.

Location: The Ever-Changing Chaos of Limbo.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Monastery of Zerth'Ad'lun encounter table when the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in over a year.

Although the monks welcome visitors, they may require that the supplicant prove his martial prowess before being admitted to the chamber of the pool.

Such matches are carried out without weapons, though a monk's unarmed damage is perfectly acceptable.

Most monks strike for nonlethal damage rather than dealing lethal damage.

MONASTERY OF ZERTH'AD'LUN ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–20	5th-level githzerai monk
21–40	6th-level githzerai monk
41–80	7th-level githzerai monk
81–95	8th-level githzerai monk
96–100	9th-level githzerai monk

Subsequent Encounters: Once a character has proven herself worthy of a visit to the chamber of the pool, there is only a 25% chance that the monks will insist on another test on a subsequent visit.

If the PCs fail to visit the location for more than a year, they must meet the challenge again.

Base Ability: You gain a +1 dodge bonus against melee attacks.

If a melee opponent makes a full attack (two or more melee attacks) against you, your dodge bonus increases to +2.

Recharge Condition: Spend one week training with the githzerai monks and abiding by their grueling schedule (DC 18 Constitution check or suffer from the effects of fatigue for 1d4 days after leaving the monastery).

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day as a free action, you can look into the immediate future to determine what a melee opponent will do in the next round.

You may then declare that you are readying an action against that opponent, without specifying what your action will be, or what conditions will trigger it.

In essence, you are able to allow your opponent to begin acting, then interrupt him at some point to take either a standard action, a move action, or a free action.

If you do not use your special readied action before your next action, this use of the ability is wasted.

Higher-Order Uses: 3.

MOUNT SANGAREE (EL 6)

Over 100 miles "tall," this vast mountain of ice floats on the Elemental Plane of Air, shrouded in cold fogs and howling wind.

Local gravity gives the otherwise directionless location a sense of height and danger.

At the apex, a blot of super-chilled yet unfrozen water lies trapped beneath a thin veneer of ice.

It is easy enough to break through the coating to reach the water beneath, but the very air freezes soon after, once more encasing the liquid in ice.

Location: The Elemental Plane of Air.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Mount Sangaree encounter table when the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in over a year.

If a frost giant is encountered, it is attempting to establish a lair.

MOUNT SANGAREE ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–10	1 Large air elemental
11–50	3 ice mephits
51–75	3 giant eagles
76–97	2 Large air elementals
98–100	1 frost giant

Subsequent Encounters: Once the characters clear out the mount, on subsequent visits the chance of an encounter is only 10%.

If the PCs fail to visit the location for more than a year, they must roll for encounters as if they had never visited the site.

Base Ability: You gain a +4 bonus on saving throws against cold effects.

Recharge Condition: Submerge yourself in the superchilled water (which deals 5d6 points of cold damage).

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day, you can create an area of intense cold around yourself—in effect, you emanate a 20-foot-radius burst of cold.

All creatures within the affected area take 1d6 points of cold damage for each of your character levels (maximum 10d6), unless they succeed on a Reflex save (DC 15 + your Cha modifier).

Higher-Order Uses: 5.

MUNDELLIR LAKE (EL 4)

A floating earthberg some 100 miles in rough diameter holds a windswept lake that constantly spills over the edges.

Great freshwater pearl beds dot the shallow portion of the lake's bottom some 90 feet below the surface (though the lake is far deeper).

In addition to the encounters noted on the table below, fishermen from the surrounding earthbergs of Ysgard sometimes wait on the lake's surface, casting great nets into its deepest portion, hoping to dredge up a great haul of fish or a trophy worthy of a heroic Ysgardian.

Location: The top layer of Ysgard (also called Ysgard).

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Mundellir Lake encounter table when the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in over a year.

MUNDELLIR LAKE ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–10	2 octopi
11–50	2 crocodiles
51–75	1 sea hag
76–97	2 skum
98–100	2 scrag trolls

Subsequent Encounters: Once the characters clear out the lake, on subsequent visits the chance of an encounter is only 10%.

If the PCs fail to visit the location for more than a year, they must roll for encounters as if they had never visited the site.

Base Ability: You gain a +2 bonus on Swim checks and add +10 to your swim speed.

Recharge Condition: Retrieve a pearl from the seabed (each has a value of 1d10 gp).

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day, you can breathe water freely for up to 1 hour per character level (and you can still breathe air, too).

During this same period, you can also choose to stay above the water, treading upon it as if it were firm ground, though your feet actually hover an inch above the surface.

This ability works in mud, oil, snow, quicksand, and ice in addition to water.

Should you decide to begin treading on the substance while beneath its surface, you are borne toward the surface at 60 feet per round until you stand above it.

Higher-Order Uses: 5.

OMORE'S FOLLY (EL 5)

The Underworld is as bleak and desperate a place as one will find anywhere in the multiverse.

The gray, blasted landscape is home to thousands of petitioners—the spirits of those who have recently died—who are slowly being drained of the last vestiges of their emotions and spiritual strength.

Legends tell of heroes who traveled to the Underworld to rescue lovers or family members from untimely deaths, though these stories rarely speak of the hundreds of would-be saviors who failed in the attempt.

Saddest among these is Omore.

Omore came to Hades and scaled the wall of the Underworld to retrieve the spirit of his recently departed love, the beautiful but morally shallow Jeilut.

Against all odds, the young man found his lover's spirit and managed to get her up the same wall he climbed on his way in.

At the top, he paused and told her to look back so that she would see how much he loved her—what he was willing to dare for her sake.

Unfortunately, it was at just that moment that Jeilut's resolve crumbled.

Being a woman of poor character to begin with, she transformed into a larva, attacked Omore, and killed him with a single bite.

The section of wall on which this unhappy incident occurred has been known ever since as Omore's Folly.

Location: The Underworld within Pluton, the third gloom (layer) of Hades.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Omore's Folly encounter table when the characters visit the location for the first time, or for the first time in over a year.

OMORE'S FOLLY ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–19	1 yeth hound
20–38	1d4 +1 dretches
39–63	3d6 larvae
64–87	2d6 yeth hounds
88–100	1 bebilith

Subsequent Encounters: Once the characters clear out the area, on subsequent visits the chance of an encounter is only 40%.

If the PCs fail to visit the location for more than a year, they must roll for encounters as if they had never visited the site.

Base Ability: You gain a +1 bonus on Will saving throws.

Recharge Condition: Climb to the top of Omore's Folly.

This requires a DC 15 Climb check.

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day, as a move action, you may affect one creature's ability to resist being dominated. The next time the target attempts a Will saving throw, he gains a circumstance bonus equal to your base Will save bonus.

Higher-Order Uses: 5.

OXYRHYNCHUS (EL 10)

In the midst of an infinite desert is a ruined city, buried below the shifting sands, but sometimes revealing itself in small part in the aftermath of a windstorm.

Once it had enclosing walls miles long, with five mighty gates; colonnaded streets, each a mile long, connecting to the central square; a coliseum with seating for thirty thousand people; and a grand temple to a long-forgotten, jackal-headed deity.

On one side were quays, and on the other, a great road led up to the desert and camel-routes to the oases and gates off-plane.

All around lay small farms and orchards, irrigated by an annual flood.

Most of the city has been worn away, but in the center square of Oxyrhynchus, a stone pyramid still stands, its lines sharp, brooding silently over the ruin all around.

Inside, if one can bypass the traps, is a domed chamber.

On the ceiling of this large room, luminescent stars are painted, still bright after thousands of years.

Someone standing in the center of this chamber may invoke great power from ancient days.

Location: Demiplane.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Oxyrhynchus encounter table when the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in over a year.

Traps are reset by creatures that come to inhabit the pyramid, or the traps reset themselves, sometimes in new, previously clear locations.

Such is the power of the site.

OXYRHYNCHUS ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–10	Wide-mouth spiked pit with poisoned spikes (CR 9) <sup>1</sup>
11–50	Crushing room (CR 10) <sup>1</sup>
51–75	Wail of the banshee trap (CR 10) <sup>1</sup>
76–97	2 dark nagas
98–100	1 iron golem (with jackal head)

Subsequent Encounters: Once the characters clear the site, on subsequent visits the chance of an encounter is only 40%.

If the PCs fail to visit the location for more than six months, they must roll for encounters as if they had never visited the site.

Traps change their places, so maps are not always accurate.

Base Ability: Choose a weapon with which you are proficient.

If you can catch an opponent when he is unable to defend himself effectively from your attack (i.e., flat-footed) with your chosen weapon, you can make an additional free attack at your base attack bonus –5.

You can make this extra attack during any round that you can make multiple attacks, but only with your chosen weapon type.

This means that if you are of a high enough level to make additional attacks (you have at least a +6 or higher base attack bonus), you could make two additional attacks at your base attack bonus –5.

Recharge Condition: Hold forth your chosen weapon and recite a string of ancient words inscribed around the periphery of the dome.

Doing this takes at least 2 minutes and involves calling on “the sentinel of Oxyrhynchus to energize the implement of guardianship”.

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day, you can call up the power stored in the weapon you charged at the center of Oxyrhynchus.

The weapon is now considered a consumptive weapon (a new weapon special ability introduced in Chapter 4) and for 10 rounds, the weapon is sheathed in light-sucking negative energy.

The energy does not harm the wielder.

A consumptive weapon deals an extra 1d6 points of damage on a successful hit.

Bows, crossbows, and slings so crafted bestow the energy upon their ammunition.

Higher-Order Uses: 4.

PEAK OF CONTINUATION (EL 14)

The Peak of Continuation is not one of the tallest mountains in Shurrock, one of the two facing layers of the Twin Paradises of Bytopia.

It is, however, one of the most challenging to climb.

The mountain has a double summit—twin peaks that are separated by a 100-foot-wide chasm over nothing but the steep, gravelly slopes.

The peaks are connected by a simple rope bridge.

In a land that is renowned for harsh weather, formidable terrain, and being an especially difficult place for even the most skilled outdoorsmen to simply survive a few days in the wild, the Peak of Continuation is a challenge that even the hardest of locals usually shy away from. The winds blow nearly constantly in excess of 100 miles per hour, the air is bitterly cold, and the mountain is home to several dangerous carnivores.

Still, those who have succeeded at crossing the span atop the Peak of Continuation say that it was a life-changing experience.

They now have looked death in the face without blinking, and they feel prepared to do so again.

Location: Shurrock, one of the layers of Bytopia.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Peak of Continuation encounter table when the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in over a year.

PEAK OF CONTINUATION ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–16	3d6 trolls
17–38	3 winged auditors (see below) riding giant eagles
39–62	1 old white dragon
63–86	1 frost giant jarl, 8th-level blackguard
87–100	2 planetars

Subsequent Encounters: Once the characters clear out or establish themselves in the area, on subsequent visits the chance of an encounter is only 10%.

If the PCs fail to visit the location for more than a year, they must roll for encounters as if they had never visited the site.

Base Ability: You gain the ability to shrug off some amount of injury from any source of damage. Subtract 1 from the damage you take from any source. This ability works in conjunction with other sources of damage reduction.

Recharge Condition: Cross the rope bridge from one peak to the other (requiring a DC 25 Balance check).

Higher-Order Ability: If your hit point total drops below –10, you become the target of a resurrection spell (as though it had been prepared ahead of time using the contingency spell).

This ability can be used only once per day.

Higher-Order Uses: 1.

Winged Auditor: Elf bard 8/arcane archer 3; CR 11; Medium humanoid; HD 8d6+8 plus 3d8+3; hp 52; Init +4; Spd 30 ft.; AC 21, touch 14, flat-footed 17; Base Atk +9; Grp +11; Atk +12 melee (1d8+3/19–20, longsword) or +16 ranged (1d8+4/×3 plus 1d6 fire, +1 flaming burst composite

Bard Spells Known (3/4/4/1): 0—dancing lights, daze (DC 12), detect magic, know direction, light, summon instrument; 1st—charm person (DC 13), comprehend languages, cure light wounds, feather fall; 2nd—animal messenger, cat's grace, cure moderate wounds, heroism; 3rd—charm monster, (DC 15) dispel magic, waste.

Possessions: +1 flaming burst composite longbow (+2 Str bonus), gauntlets of ogre power, +2 mithral breastplate, 40 arrows, masterwork longsword.

PILGRIM'S REST (EL 10)

Pilgrim's Rest is a graveyard on both the Material Plane and the Ethereal Plane.

On the Material Plane, it is a pauper's field where the bodies of those who could afford no comfort or solitude in life find eternal rest under similar conditions.

Mass graves are the norm, and remains are rarely laid in restful repose—they are generally thrown into the earth haphazardly.

What's more, murderers often use the field as a convenient place to hide the evidence of their handiwork.

On the Ethereal Plane, the spirits of those who cannot or refuse to go on to their eternal rest linger.

Some are eternally bound to the spot where their body lies. Others have no idea who killed them, and so have no idea where to go in search of revenge.

Still others simply feel that they have unfinished business in the world of the living but have no place other than this from which to center their activities and no way to communicate with the living to get their final affairs in order.

Pilgrim's Rest is one of the most profoundly sorrowful places in the multiverse.

Sadness permeates both the Material and Ethereal sides of the location.

From time to time, however, an altruistic soul comes here for the express purpose of easing another's pain.

Through magic or psionics, she discovers a simple task that one of the departed souls needs performed and acts as a proxy for that tortured spirit, hopefully allowing it to leave its former life behind and move on to its next level of existence.

Location: The Material Plane and the Ethereal Plane.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Pilgrim's Rest encounter table when the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in over a year.

Some of the spirits in Pilgrim's Rest are malevolent, while others are peaceful.

The DM may decide the specific temperament and goals of whatever creature the characters encounter.

PILGRIM'S REST ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–12	1d3 ghosts, 5th-level human fighters
13–33	1 succubus
34–61	1d3 ghost trolls
62–88	1d8 phase spiders
89–100	1 ethereal 15th-level wizard

Subsequent Encounters: Once the characters have established their presence in the area, on subsequent visits the chance of an encounter is only 50%.

If the PCs fail to visit the location for more than a year, they must roll for encounters as if they had never visited the site.

Base Ability: You gain a permanent connection to the Ethereal Plane.

Because of this, whenever you are on the Material Plane, you gain a +1 bonus to your Armor Class.

Recharge Condition: Perform a simple task (pass a message to a loved one, fix a broken window, and so on) for one of the spirits in Pilgrim's Rest.

The DM may determine the exact nature of this task, but it should not take more than half a day to accomplish, nor should it require combat.

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day, you gain the benefits of ethereal jaunt for a number of rounds equal to your character level.

Higher-Order Uses: 2.

PILLAR OF SKULLS (EL 12)

On the first of the Nine Hells of Baator is a mountainous pile of skulls collected as trophies in the Blood War.

The skulls can be as large as a house or as tiny as a pebble, and they are in various states of decay.

The devils leave them here in part as a way to celebrate their victories, but just as much as a way to show fealty to Tiamat, the five-headed queen of all evil dragons, whose cave is nearby.

It has long been rumored that the skulls themselves contain some magical power.

Some say that they are enchanted and can be fashioned into impregnable armor, while others say that if properly treated with alchemical elixirs, they become highly unstable and explode upon even the slightest impact.

None of these rumors is true, but enough treasure seekers have come skulking around the pillar that a cadre of osyluths has been assigned to stand guard.

They will attack anyone they catch approaching the Pillar of Skulls, no matter how outmatched they might be—they fear Tiamat's retribution more than they do death in battle.

Location: Avernus, the first layer of Baator.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Pillar of Skulls encounter table when the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in over a year.

PILLAR OF SKULLS ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–14	1 devourer
15–33	2d6+4 half-black-dragons, 4th-level human fighters
34–59	1 gelugon
60–88	Bone guardian (see below)
89–100	1 pit fiend

Subsequent Encounters: Once the characters clear out the area, on subsequent visits the chance of an encounter is only 40%.

If the PCs fail to visit the location for more than a year, they must roll for encounters as if they had never visited the site.

Base Ability: You gain a +2 dodge bonus to your Armor Class when being attacked by any creature with the tanar'ri subtype.

Recharge Condition: Smash one demon skull from the Pillar of Skulls.

(The skulls generally have hardness 8 and 15 hit points).

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day, you may force any outsider with the tanar'ri subtype back to its proper plane if it fails a special Will save (DC 10 + your class level minus the creature's HD).

This spell functions similarly to the dismissal spell.

Higher-Order Uses: 4.

➤ Bone Guardian: Bone devil fighter 5; CR 14; Large outsider (baatezu, evil, extraplanar, lawful); HD 10d8+70 plus 5d10+35; hp 167; Init +10; Spd 40 ft.; AC 28, touch 16, flat-footed 22; Base Atk +15; Grp +26; Atk +22 melee (1d8+9, bite); Full Atk +22 melee (1d8+9, bite) and +20 melee (1d4+3, 2 claws), and +20 melee (3d4+5 plus poison, sting); SA spell-like abilities, fear aura, poison, summon baatezu; SQ damage reduction 10/good, darkvision 60 ft., immunity to fire and poison, resistance to acid 10 and cold 10, see in darkness, spell resistance 21, telepathy 100 ft.; AL LE; SV Fort +18, Ref +14, Will +11; Str 25, Dex 23, Con 25, Int 14, Wis 13, Cha 16.

Possessions: Ring of protection +1, amulet of natural armor +1.

RED PIT (EL 11)

The Bastion of Last Hope on Carceri boasts what are widely considered to be the bleakest, most soul-crushingly dismal dungeons in the multiverse.

They are not the cruelest, nor the most inescapable, but something about their nature seems to sap a prisoner's resolution and will to survive.

Worst among these is known as the Red Pit.

Although the residents of the Bastion refer to it as a "cell," the Red Pit really is no more than a rough-hewn, 100-foot-deep hole in the ground into which the most hard-bitten criminals are thrown.

An iron gate is then placed over the opening and the prisoner is left there, rarely for longer than a day or two.

When the gate is withdrawn and the offender is removed, he is a mere shell of his former self.

Most visitors to the Red Pit enter with overwhelming self-confidence and bravado but come out scared of their own shadows.

Exactly what gives the pit this effect is uncertain, but it does have some striking characteristics.

Foremost, about halfway down, the rock appears to change color from a mottled brown to a deep red the color of blood.

This is considered to be an optical illusion, because samples removed from the wall have no noticeable discoloration when examined under torch or sunlight.

Location: Othrys, the first layer of Carceri.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Red Pit encounter table when the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in over a year.

If the encounter happens in the Red Pit (as opposed to some nearby chamber within the Bastion of Last Hope), everyone in the pit is subject to the effects granted by meeting the recharge condition.

RED PIT ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–13	3d6 howlers
14–36	2 mind flayers
37–61	2d6 barbazu
62–87	Squad of githyanki
88–100	1 glabrezu

Subsequent Encounters: Once the characters clear out the area, on subsequent visits the chance of an encounter is only 10%.

If the PCs fail to visit the location for more than a year, they must roll for encounters as if they had never visited the site.

Base Ability: You gain a +1 bonus on Escape Artist checks.

Recharge Condition: Spend 30 minutes at the bottom of the Red Pit.

At the end of this time, your higher-order ability is recharged, but you must also attempt a DC 20 Will saving throw.

If the save fails, you take a –5 penalty on all attack rolls and saving throws for a number of days equal to 20 minus your character level.

(Those who spend more than 30 minutes in the Red Pit must make one saving throw for every hour or portion thereof they spend in the hole).

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day, for a number of minutes equal to your character level, you gain a +5 bonus on Escape Artist, Hide, Move Silently, Listen, and grapple checks.

Higher-Order Uses: 5.

RESTYN'S LAST STAND (EL 13)

Among the Battleplains of Avalas, the first layer of the infernal battlefield of Acheron, is a small cube that orbits Scourgehold, the cube that holds Hextor's realm.

The tiny cube hosts the ruins of what was once a modest fortress, the home of a Heironeous-worshiping planetar named Restyn.

She chose this location despite (indeed, because of) its proximity to Hextor's domain.

Her fellow angels told her that she was mad—the cube was small and worthless, and Hextor was welcome to it.

These words did not faze Restyn in the least.

For years that stretched into decades and eventually into centuries, she and her followers defended their chosen home against attacks from the nearby bastion of evil. Wave after wave of Hextorites threw themselves against the fortress, only to be driven back by Restyn's righteous fury.

However, no defense is impenetrable, and the tide of opponents was never-ending.

Restyn and her followers eventually fell.

Although they crushed the planetar and the forces of good at her command, the Hextorites were unable to lay claim to the cube.

Every time they tried, a force of Heironean angels drove them back to Scourgehold.

The angels, it seemed, now considered the cube sacred ground, hallowed by the determination and blood of Restyn and her followers.

They would now pay any price to keep it free from Hextor and his followers.

The irony of this fact is not lost on the Heironeans, but it does nothing to soften their stance.

Among the ruins of the fortress now stands a small marble monument engraved with Restyn's final words.

"There is no island so small and insignificant that it is not worth defending.

Inch by inch is how evil subverts the pure heart".

Location: Avalas, the first layer of Acheron.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Restyn's Last Stand encounter table whenever the characters visit the site.

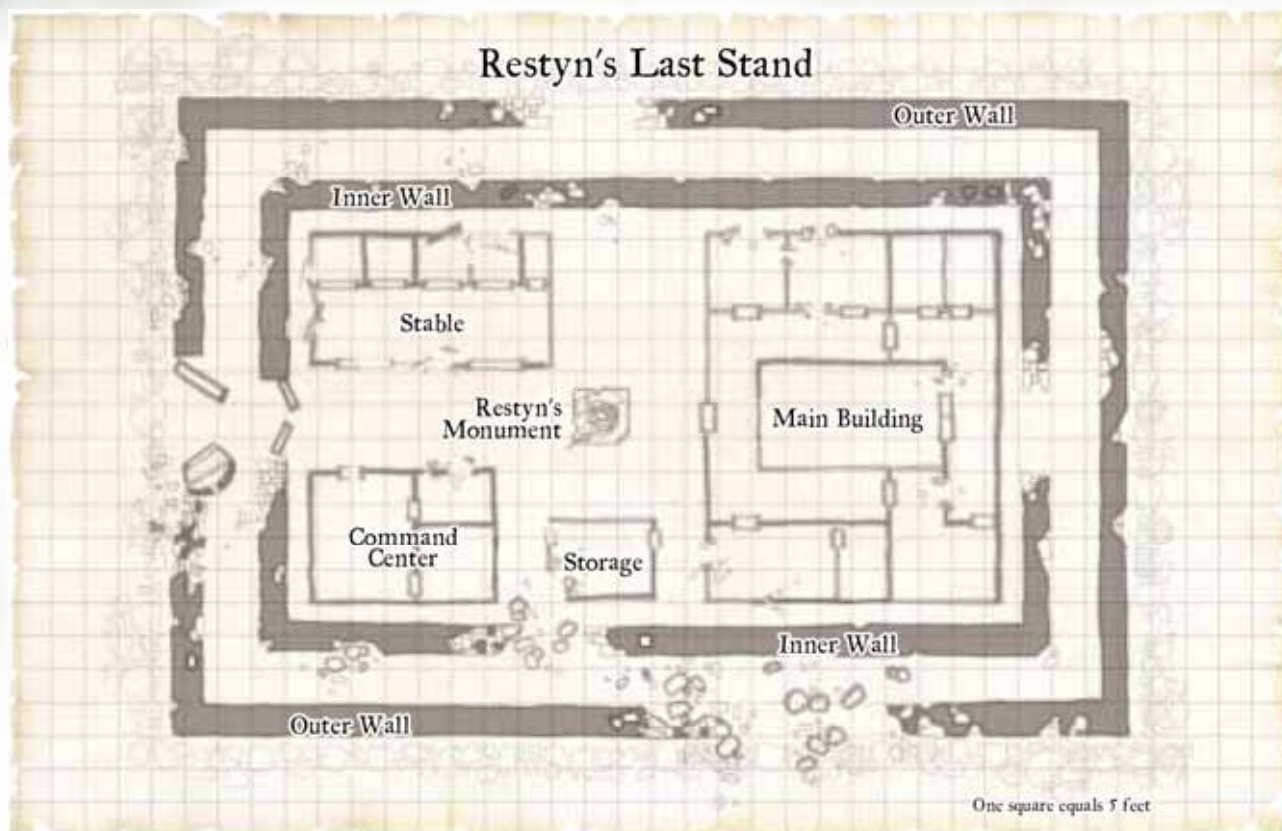

The Heironeans and the Hextorites each have the goal of driving from the cube anyone who is not specifically aligned with them.

If the characters are not their allies, then they will be treated as enemies.

RESTYN'S LAST STAND ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–21	2 bebiliths
22–34	1 death slaad
35–57	1 trumpet archon
58–82	2 cornugons
83–100	1 solar

Restyn's Last Stand

Subsequent Encounters: The characters will have encounters every time they visit Restyn's Last Stand—the Hextorites and the Heironeans fight a never-ending battle. Indeed, the DM should roll for subsequent encounters once every  $2d10+10$  minutes.

Base Ability: You gain a +1 bonus on all melee attacks.

Recharge Condition: Overcome one encounter.

Then place on Restyn's monument a single stone bearing the blood of one creature that fought in the encounter.

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day, when you threaten a critical hit with a melee attack, you may automatically confirm the critical without rolling the die.

Higher-Order Uses: 2.

SARGASSO OF ENTROPY (EL 14)

The Negative Energy Plane is an endless void that is darker than the blackest night and emptier than the most evil heart.

Here and there, one can find voidstones—negative energy so densely concentrated that it becomes solid matter.

But in one especially dismal corner of the plane, a number of voidstones have accumulated to form a shifting congregation of annihilation known as the Sargasso of Entropy.

The sargasso is one of the most deadly locations in the multiverse.

Every one of the voidstones is powerful enough to completely wipe out anything it touches.

Together, swirling in the unpredictable, chaotic way they do, the voidstones are practically unavoidable—getting any closer to the sargasso than a few dozen feet is practically an act of suicide.

The Sargasso of Entropy is a sacred site for those who worship Wee Jas, Nerull, and other deities associated with death.

Champions of life, on the other hand, occasionally visit the spot because it is so closely attuned to death.

They believe that seeing it and feeling its power will focus their resolve to resist the inevitable, withering end that waits for all creatures.

Location: The Negative Energy Plane.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Sargasso of Entropy encounter table when the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in over a year.

Pale raiders are a cult of death slaadi clerics who have rededicated themselves to the pursuit of magical power for the purpose of honoring death in all its myriad forms.

SARGASSO OF ENTROPY ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–17	2d6+1 wraiths
18–34	2d6 vampire spawns
35–67	2d6 xeg-yis
68–84	2 glabrezu
85–100	1 pale raider (see below)

Subsequent Encounters: Once the characters clear out the area, on subsequent visits the chance of an encounter is only 10%.

If the PCs fail to visit the location for more than a year, they must roll for encounters as if they had never visited the site.

Base Ability: You gain a +1 bonus on Fortitude saving throws.

Recharge Condition: Throw an item weighing at least 2 pounds into the sargasso.

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day, you can make a withering melee touch attack that, if successful, inflicts 10d6 points of damage.

The subject may attempt a DC 15 Fortitude save to halve the damage.

If the melee touch attack fails, the ability is still expended for that day.

Higher-Order Uses: 2.

☛ Pale Raider: Death slaad cleric 5; CR 15; Medium outsider (chaotic, extraplanar); HD 15d8+90 plus 5d8+30; hp 210; Init +10; Spd 30 ft.; AC 29, touch 16, flat-footed 23; Base Atk +18; Grp +24; Atk +25 melee (3d6+6 plus stun, claw); Full Atk +25 melee (3d6+6 plus stun, 2 claws) and +22 melee (2d10+3, bite); SA stun 3/day, spell-like abilities, summon slaad, rebuke undead; SQ change shape, DR 10/lawful, darkvision 60 ft., fast healing 5, immunity to sonic, resistance to acid 5 and cold 5 and electricity 5 and fire 5, telepathy 100 ft.; AL CN; SV Fort +19, Ref +16, Will +20; Str 23, Dex 22, Con 23, Int 19, Wis 24, Cha 22.

White Feather Bridge (EL 14):

Amoria is not only the topmost layer of Elysium, but it is also the most populated.

Sprinkled throughout the forests and rolling hills are towns and villages, and the land is crisscrossed with roads, trails, and paths that people use to get from place to place.

Along a particularly well-traveled stretch of road, a wooden bridge crosses a rushing river.

The span, known as White Feather Bridge, is hand-carved and painted to resemble a great white swan stretching her wings from bank to bank.

It is considered one of the finest pieces of art on the plane.

However, it was constructed during a time when the road did not see so much traffic, and it is too narrow to allow more than a single creature to pass at a time.

Some have talked about replacing or adding to the bridge. Others have gone so far as to build a new, wider bridge across the river only a few hundred feet to the north. But travelers still prefer to cross at the White Feather Bridge.

They say, "Even the divine skies of Elysium look brighter when viewed from the span of the White Feather Bridge; it is more than just a convenience, it is a tradition that no one should be denied".

Location: Amoria, the topmost layer of Elysium.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the White Feather Bridge encounter table when the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in over a year

WHITE FEATHER BRIDGE ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–21	1d4 celestial dire tigers
22–42	2 leonals
43–63	1 astral deva
64–94	2d6+3 12th-level elf clerics
95–100	1 old green dragon

Subsequent Encounters: Once the characters clear out the area, on subsequent visits the chance of an encounter is only 10%.

If the PCs fail to visit the location for more than a year, they must roll for encounters as if they had never visited the site.

Base Ability: Once per day, you may add a +1 luck bonus to one check, saving throw, attack roll, or damage roll.

You may use this ability after rolling the d20, but you must do so before the DM announces the result.

Recharge Condition: Cross the White Feather Bridge.

However, you must allow a traveler going in the opposite direction to cross the bridge before you do.

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day, you may cast the planar ally spell.

Higher-Order Uses: 2.

SENTINEL GROVE (EL 9)

The towering oaks of the sentinel grove are massive and ancient even by the standards of Arborea.

Many rise hundreds of feet into the air and have boles more than 20 feet across.

A thick bed of moss, fallen leaves, and delicate ferns blankets the ground under these trees, except where occasional gaps in the canopy let in shafts of pure sunlight. Beds of gorgeous wildflowers thrive in such locations, filling the air with their heady perfume.

In the heart of this grove stands an ancient temple—ruined, yet still magnificent.

Flowering vines twine around its stately marble columns, and within the roofless sanctuary lies a pond filled with lilies.

The remains of friezes depicting epic battles between heroes and all manner of terrible foes decorate the interior walls, but no clues reveal the identity of the deity to whom the temple was dedicated.

Some say the building is simply a monument to struggle, and that it was created as a ruin to indicate the fleeting nature of glory.

Location: The first layer of Arborea.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Sentinel Grove Encounter

Table below when the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in more than a year.

SENTINEL GROVE ENCOUNTER TABLE

d%	Encounter
01–15	1 celestial treant
16–30	3–5 anarchic satyrs
31–70	4–7 anarchic dryads
71–85	3–5 celestial giant eagles
86–100	3–5 celestial giant owls

Subsequent Encounters: Once the characters clear out the area, the chance of an encounter is only 50% on each subsequent visit.

If the PCs fail to visit the location for more than a year, they must roll for encounters as if they had never visited the site.

The creatures of the sentinel grove resent constant intrusions but are basically good-natured.

They may consent to give the characters access to the grove in return for some service rather than simply fighting.

Base Ability: When standing upright on any natural terrain, you gain a +1 bonus on any opposed checks you make to resist bull rush, trip or overrun attempts, and on saving throws to resist being moved against your will (by wind effects or telekinesis, for example).

Recharge Condition: You must climb to the top of the tallest oak in the grove, harvest an acorn, and plant it in fertile soil.

The relative heights of the trees may change from time to time because of irregularities in growth and vagaries in the weather, so a fresh determination of the correct tree is necessary with each visit.

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day, you can create a heroes' feast effect, as the spell (caster level equals your character level).

Higher-Order Uses: 2.

SHRINE OF ACERERAK (EL 11)

On Pandemonium, a great statue carved of strange, night-dark stone stands alone before a sealed mausoleum of cold iron.

The statue is of a humanoid skull and measures 5 feet in diameter.

Jewel-like stones glint in the eyesockets and in place of the skull's teeth.

The mausoleum is but one of many tombs and unmarked graves studding a vast tunnel along which howling winds blow mournfully.

Undead of various sorts prowl this forgotten graveyard.

Location: Cocytus, the second layer of Pandemonium.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Shrine of Acererak encounter table when the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in over a year.

The base undead are randomly drawn to the site, but the lich, if encountered, is attempting to establish a permanent position at the shrine.

SHRINE OF ACERERAK ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–25	4 spectres
26–50	4 vampires, 5th-level human fighters
51–75	2 bone devils
76–97	1 dread wraith
98–100	1 lich, 11th-level human wizard, and 4 spectres

Subsequent Encounters: Once the characters clear out the shrine, on subsequent visits the chance of an encounter is only 10% (reroll any result of a lich encounter).

If the PCs fail to visit the location for more than a year, they must roll for encounters as if they had never visited the location.

Base Ability: Mindless undead ignore you unless you attack them, after which they react normally (attacking a single undead that belongs to a group of adjacent undead causes all in the group to likewise treat you normally).

Recharge Condition: Kiss the idol of Acererak.

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day, you can influence one undead within 50 feet.

To influence the undead, you must indicate a course of activity (limited to a sentence or two).

This direction may not be to take some obviously harmful act such as to impale itself or leap into a vat of acid; however, an undead may be directed to leave the area, defend you, or defeat a former ally or master.

An influenced undead acts on its direction until one of the following conditions is met: its assigned task is completed, a number of hours equal to your character level have passed, the undead is redirected, or someone else with the ability to turn or command undead successfully affects the directed undead.

The direction can continue for the entire duration (a number of hours equal to your character level).

If the direction can be completed in a shorter time, the effect ends when the undead finishes what it was asked to do.

You can instead specify conditions that will trigger a special activity during the duration.

For example, you might suggest that an undead give directions to the first traveler it meets.

If the condition is not met before the duration expires, the activity is not performed.

Higher-Order Uses: 5.

SILENT TEMPLE (EL 8)

In the steaming jungles of Smargard, a massive temple lies nestled in the forking branches of a vast tree, so high up that the ground (if any exists) cannot be seen.

All around is the susurrus of the jungle, with occasional shrill cries or harsh growls of prey and predator.

Inside the great temple, all is deadly quiet, and the structure seems deserted.

But lurking in its labyrinthine depths, the children of Merrshaulk, the yuan-ti deity, slither through ancient passageways and perform rites that even their own god has forgotten.

Location: Smargard, one of the layers of the Infinite Layers of the Abyss.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Silent Temple encounter table when the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in over a year.

Any yuan-ti that are encountered attempt to thwart the characters from fulfilling the recharge conditions of the Silent Temple's higher-order ability, waiting until the characters are preoccupied before striking.

SILENT TEMPLE ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–10	Fusillade of greenblood oil darts <sup>1</sup>
11–30	Well-camouflaged pit trap <sup>1</sup>
31–50	Deathblade wall scythe <sup>1</sup>
51–70	Insanity mist vapor trap <sup>1</sup>
71–85	5th-level yuan-ti pureblood ranger
86–97	3rd-level yuan-ti halfblood wizard
98–100	1st-level yuan-ti abomination cleric

Subsequent Encounters: Once the characters defeat a trap, there is a 50% chance that yuan-ti arrive and reset or replace it.

If the characters defeat the yuan-ti, there is a 20% chance that more yuan-ti arrive to take their place before the characters return.

If the PCs fail to visit the location for more than a year, they must roll for temple encounters as if they had never visited the site.

Base Ability: You gain a +2 competence bonus on Move Silently checks, and you gain a +5 circumstance bonus on Hide checks made in heavily wooded settings (including jungles).

Recharge Condition: Find and retrieve a citrine (worth 50 gp) in a 20-foot-by-20-foot pit filled with venomous snakes, enduring 1d4+4 attacks per round from (roll d6) a Small viper (1–3), a Medium viper (4–5), or a Large viper (6).

Finding the citrine requires a DC 25 Search check, though magical means can suffice.

The citrine must then be placed in a bowl of similar gemstones at an idol farther inside the temple.

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day, you can polymorph yourself into a viper of your same size category.

This transformation lasts for 1 minute per your character level, or until you choose to change back to your natural form.

Higher-Order Uses: 4.

SPIRE OF THORNS (EL 9)

The sprawling forests of Arvandor, topmost layer of the Olympian Glades of Arborea, are home to a nearly infinite number of different plants, trees, and shrubs.

Far from Corellon's Court, or indeed any settlement, in a stretch of woods that grows so thick that the sun never reaches the forest floor, a single, poisonous bramble has grown so tall and strong that it has become a tower whose top fairly scrapes the canopy of leaves overhead.

Called the Spire of Thorns by the elves of Arvandor, this tower has become a way that foresters, rangers, barbarians, and other folk who relish the wild life use to prove their mettle.

They climb the tower barehanded while wearing only a light tunic.

The spire's thorns are coated in a poison that addles the wits and dulls the senses, but completing the task is said to toughen the body against all toxins.

Location: Arvandor, the topmost layer of Arborea.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Spire of Thorns encounter table when the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in over a year.

The elf barbarian is there to test his mettle by climbing the spire.

The elf may be friendly or antagonistic, at the DM's discretion.

SPIRE OF THORNS ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–18	1d6+3 dire wolves
19–32	1 treant
33–58	9th-level elf barbarian
59–83	1 Colossal monstrous spider
84–100	4 9th-level elf barbarians

Subsequent Encounters: Once the characters clear out the area, on subsequent visits the chance of an encounter is only 10%.

If the PCs fail to visit the location for more than a year, they must roll for encounters as if they had never visited the site.

Base Ability: You gain a +2 bonus on saves against poison.

Recharge Condition: Climb to the top of the spire.

This requires a successful DC 20 Climb check; you may take 10 on this check, but you may not take 20.

Each attempt inflicts 1d6 points of damage.

If the Climb check fails, you must succeed on a DC 14

Fortitude saving throw or fall prey to the bramble's poison.

The poison has an initial damage of 1 point of Wisdom and a secondary damage of 1 point of Dexterity.

Higher-Order Ability: You gain the ability to cast neutralize poison on yourself once per day.

The spell functions as if cast by a 15th-level ranger.

Higher-Order Uses: 5.

STORMVAULT (EL 8)

Controlling the weather on the two layers of the Peaceable Kingdoms of Arcadia are four once-mortal beings now known as the Storm Kings: Rain, Wind, Lightning, and Cloud.

Each dwells in a mighty castle, arranged precisely at equidistant points around Arcadia's Orb of Day and Night, and from here they work together to provide just the right mixture of rain and shine for all of Arcadia.

The one place they share together is the Stormvault, a great subterranean cistern containing the power of the storms.

Each of the Storm Kings visits the Stormvault from time to time, withdrawing power when particularly large atmospheric phenomena are called for, or returning power when a storm has run its course.

And though they are precise in their measurements, even beings as powerful as the Storm Kings cannot be everywhere, especially on the infinite layers of Abellio and Buxenus.

Thus, the Storm Kings reward those who aid them in their duties—everything from rounding up stray air elementals to controlling the winds and calling the lightning from the skies and back into the vault.

Location: The Peaceable Kingdoms of Arcadia.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Stormvault encounter table when the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in over a year.

Air elementals in the vicinity of the Stormvault are stray powers of the Storm Kings, who would not appreciate their destruction.

An arrowhawk, on the other hand, has wandered in from the Elemental Plane of Air and become curious about the power contained in the Stormvault.

STORMVAULT ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–40	4 Medium air elementals
41–65	2 Large air elementals
66–90	1 Huge air elemental
91–100	1 elder arrowhawk

Subsequent Encounters: Bits of the Storm Kings' power are always getting loose or wandering back to the Stormvault after doing their work on the layers of Arcadia.

Every time the characters return to the Stormvault, roll a new encounter as though it was their first visit.

Base Ability: Add +1 to the DC for all saving throws against any spells you cast that deal with rain, wind, lightning, or clouds.

Recharge Condition: Stand upon the Stormvault and cast call lightning, fog cloud, gust of wind, sleet storm, or ice storm.

Higher-Order Ability: Choose one of the four Storm Kings. Once per day, you can cast control weather to create weather conditions associated with that king, depending on the climate and season in your current environment.

- Rain: Sleet storm (spring), torrential rain or hailstorm (summer), sleet (autumn), or snow (winter);
- Wind: Tornado (spring), gentle breezes (summer), chill winds (autumn), or freezing winds (winter);
- Lightning: Thunderstorm (spring, summer, or fall) or blizzard (winter);
- Cloud: Hot weather (spring), humidity (summer), fog (spring or autumn), or frigid cold (winter).

The conditions you create last for 4d12 hours, or until you activate this ability again and change the weather.

You may choose a different Storm King each time you recharge this higher-order ability.

Higher-Order Uses: 2.

TEMPLE OF RADIANCE (EL 12)

The Temple of Radiance sits atop a tiny spit of rock that juts from the waters of Thalasia, the bottommost layer of Elysium.

It is a temple to Pelor, god of the sun, built in the classic style.

Walls, columns, and arches measure out the forms of various rooms and chambers—including a large central chapel—but none of these areas has even the pretense of a roof or other covering.

The entire building is open to the sky so that worshipers may follow the sun along its celestial journey.

Some claim that this was the very first shrine ever built in Pelor's name; others say that it is merely the most beautiful.

Whatever the truth, the Temple of Radiance is one of the most popular pilgrimage destinations for worshipers who have the wherewithal to travel to and within Elysium.

The temple generally receives anywhere from a dozen to several hundred visitors per day.

Of course, since the Temple of Radiance is so highly valued by worshipers, it occasionally comes under attack from enemies of Pelor (in particular, by worshipers of Nerull).

To protect the pilgrims from this and other dangers, a cadre of holy warriors, known as the Radiant Guardians, protect the island.

Location: Thalasia, the lowest layer of Elysium.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Temple of Radiance encounter table when the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in over a year.

The Radiant Guardians are cautious if visitors arrive heavily armed, but they will welcome anyone who has come to worship at the Temple.

TEMPLE OF RADIANCE ENCOUNTERS

41–65	3d6 6th-level human cleric pilgrims

Subsequent Encounters: Once the characters establish a relationship with the Radiant Guardians (or clear the location), the chance of an encounter on subsequent visits is only 25%.

If the PCs fail to visit the location for more than a year, they must roll for encounters as if they had never visited the site. Base Ability: You gain a +1 bonus on saving throws against evil creatures or effects.

UNSEEN PATH (EL 5)

On the whole, the plane of Pandemonium is a dark, befuddling place.

The ground is generally uneven, rocky terrain, there are no natural sources of light, and winds howl constantly, bringing odd sounds from every direction.

This makes it difficult, even at the best of times, for a visitor to get her orientation, and walking even a few steps can be an adventure.

Of all the disorienting places in Pandemonium, the section of tunnel known as the Unseen Path is perhaps the most baffling.

Approximately 300 feet long and laid with fine cobblestones, the Unseen Path was clearly carved by some intelligent hand.

Because of the nature of gravity on Pandemonium, the fact that this path wanders unpredictably from floor to wall to ceiling and back is not all that strange.

What is strange is that the tunnel has been enchanted so that if one wanders off the path, gravity reverses itself, causing unwary pedestrians to unexpectedly “fall” the entire width of the tunnel (about 50 feet).

This would be troublesome enough, but there is a second enchantment on the Unseen Path.

The entire length of the passageway is cloaked by a series of deeper darkness spells, making traversing the span an especially dangerous proposition.

Location: Cocytus, the second layer of Pandemonium.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Unseen Path encounter table when the characters visit the location for the first time, or for the first time in over a year.

UNSEEN PATH ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–13	1 fiendish gelatinous cube
14–32	3d6 skeletons
33–67	1d3+1 formian workers
68–81	1 invisible stalker
82–100	1 fiendish umber hulk

Subsequent Encounters: Once the characters clear out the area, on subsequent visits the chance of an encounter is only 10%.

If the PCs fail to visit the location for more than a year, they must roll for encounters as if they had never visited the site.

Base Ability: You gain a +1 bonus on Listen checks.

Recharge Condition: Walk the entire length of the Unseen Path.

You do not have to keep on the cobblestone path for the whole distance; you merely have to traverse the entire tunnel.

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day, you can use darkvision for a number of minutes equal to 10 × your character level.

Higher-Order Uses: 6.

VALLEY OF THUNDER (EL 10)

Among the rolling hills of Brux, the second layer of the Wilderness of the Beastlands, is a valley that is home to the massive reptiles known as dinosaurs.

On most worlds, dinosaurs ruled the land until the rise of dragons or until some natural calamity culled their numbers enough to allow a humanoid race to flourish.

In the Valley of Thunder, though, they remain the undisputed masters, and any creature that knows what's good for itself will give the ancient lizards as wide a berth as possible.

Not all the dinosaurs are dangerous, of course.

Some are carnivorous and some are vegetarian, but like most animals, they want nothing more than to live out their lives following nature's simple requirements—eating, sleeping, and mating at the appropriate times.

But being as big as they are, dinosaurs can cause trouble for smaller creatures in many unintended ways.

And, of course, the great hunters, such as the Tyrannosaurus, consider anything that moves to be a potential meal.

Location: Brux, the second layer of the Beastlands.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Valley of Thunder encounter table when the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in over a year.

VALLEY OF THUNDER ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–17	2d4+2 deinonychus
18–43	1 tyrannosaurus
44–68	1d6+3 megaraptors
69–89	1d4+1 tyrannosaurus
90–100	2d4 triceratopses

Subsequent Encounters: On subsequent visits, the chance of an encounter is only 25%.

If the PCs fail to visit the location for more than a year, they must roll for encounters as if they had never visited the site.

Base Ability: You gain a +1 bonus to your Armor Class.

Recharge Condition: Find a bone or tooth from a freshly killed dinosaur (one that has been dead for no more than a week), grind it into a powder, and sprinkle the powder over your head.

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day as a full-round action, you can cause your skin to harden into a dinosaur-like armor plating.

This provides you with damage reduction 5/magic for a number of rounds equal to your character level.

Higher-Order Uses: 4.

VEIL (EL 5)

The Plane of Shadow is an ever-changing landscape of stark contrast.

The sky is always black and the land a powdery white, with no shade or hue anywhere (except for subtle gray tones that hint at an object's texture and depth).

In one area, however, the line of stark delineation ripples and blurs—the Veil.

From a distance, the Veil looks like a small dust devil or smoke from a smoldering fire.

But as one draws closer, it becomes clear that the Veil is even more ephemeral.

It is a ripple in the air, a distortion through which colors appear to morph into their opposites and back again many times a second.

Since the only two colors on the Plane of Shadow are black and white, this means that anything viewed through the Veil has a soft gray tone, almost like highly realistic drawings done in charcoal.

Creatures native to the plane find this effect disturbing, even profane, and avoid it at all costs.

Some of them believe that merely looking through the Veil can addle a person's mind, making it difficult for him to make decisions or understand opposing concepts.

Visitors are more likely to see it as a peculiar but intriguing natural wonder.

Location: The Plane of Shadow.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Veil encounter table when the characters visit the location for the first time, or for the first time in over a year.

VEIL ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–15	1d3 shadows
16–35	1 wraith
36–60	1 shadow owlbear*
61–85	1d4 dusk beasts*
86–100	1 shadow gray render*

* From Manual of the Planes

Subsequent Encounters: Once the characters clear out the area, on subsequent visits the chance of an encounter is only 10%.

If the PCs fail to visit the location for more than a year, they must roll for encounters as if they had never visited the site.

Base Ability: You gain a +1 bonus on Hide checks.

Recharge Condition: Stand on the opposite side of the Veil from an object or person.

Using chalk, pencil, or charcoal, make as good a drawing as you're able of what you see.

Then look at the drawing through the Veil.

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day, as long as you are within 10 feet of some sort of shadow, you can hide from view in the open without anything to actually hide behind.

You cannot, however, hide in your own shadow.

Higher-Order Uses: 5.

WERE GLADE (EL 7)

Deep in a forest of continual night, the trees part.

A circle of ancient obelisks scrawled with generations of beastmarks seems to keep the trees at bay.

The opening in the trees allows the silver moon above to cast its radiance down unhindered.

Where the silver shaft touches the stones, they take on an inner, answering light.

Were wolves often meet in the glade, to dance under the lambent moon.

The Stone of Wailing and the Stone of Lament are huge boulders that push up from the earth, revealing just their tips.

It is uncertain how these formations received their name.

Location: Karasuthra, third layer of the Beastlands.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Were Glade encounter table when the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in over a year.

If a werewolf lord is encountered, it is attempting to establish a lair.

WERE GLADE ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–10	1 weretiger
11–50	2 werebears
51–75	3 wereboars
76–97	4 werewolves
98–100	1 werewolf lord

Subsequent Encounters: Once the characters clear out the glade, on subsequent visits the chance of an encounter is only 10%.

If the PCs fail to visit the location for more than a year, they must roll for encounters as if they had never visited the site. Base Ability: You gain a +2 bonus on Handle Animal, Diplomacy, Bluff, and Sense Motive checks when dealing with animals, magical beasts, or shapechangers.

Recharge Condition: Scratch a “beastmark” of your own onto one of the obelisks in the Were Glade.

A beastmark can be a simple scoring on the stone, or a series of scratches that represents a bestial image.

Higher-Order Ability: You gain limited wolf lycanthropy. Once per day, you can become a werewolf, either a full wolf or a hybrid between your normal form and that of a wolf. Once changed, you can maintain your new form for up to 9 hours.

Changing back to your normal form ends the effect and counts as one use.

While in your alternate form, you retain full control of your actions and gain most of the benefits of the lycanthrope template; however, you cannot pass on the curse of lycanthropy.

Once you’ve made your first visit to the Were Glade, you permanently retain the shapechanger subtype, even if you’ve exhausted all your uses of the higher-order ability. For full details of the template, see Creating a Lycanthrope and associated text on page 175 of the Monster Manual.

Higher-Order Uses: 2.

WIDOW’S WALK (EL 8)

Nestled in a quiet corner of Lolth’s Demonweb Pits is a high spire draped all about with webs.

Atop this spire, a pair of glittering black opals sits at each of the four corners.

Throughout the webs climb thousands of black widow spiders of all different sizes, paying their own special homage to their Spider Queen.

Those who clamber up the webbing to clear the webs from the opals—and thus, be seen by the spire’s “eyes”—are granted special favors.

Location: The Demonweb Pits, the 66th layer of the Infinite Layers of the Abyss.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Widow’s Walk encounter table when the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in over a year.

WIDOW’S WALK ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–25	8 Large monstrous spiders
26–60	1 Huge monstrous spider and 2 Large monstrous spiders
61–80	2 Huge monstrous spiders
81–95	1 Gargantuan monstrous spider
96–100	2 driders

Subsequent Encounters: The Demonweb Pits have no shortage of spiders.

On every subsequent visit, roll a new encounter.

Base Ability: You gain a +2 competence bonus on Climb skill and add +10 feet to your climb speed.

Recharge Condition: Climb 200 feet up the webs of the spire and clean each of the black opals, enduring 1d6+6 attacks per round from (roll 1d6) a Small monstrous spider (1–3), a Medium monstrous spider (4–5), or a Large monstrous spider (6).

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day, you can either spider climb as the spell or cast web as the spell.

In either case, use your character level as the caster level.

Higher-Order Uses: 6.

YONDALLA’S TEETH (EL 9)

Amid the ever-changing chaos of Limbo is an area where a jumble of alabaster boulders and rocks tumbles through the miasma, crashing into one another and anything else in its way.

The boulders seem to be drawn to a central point of gravity. More than anything, they look like a great maw of teeth chewing up everything in their path.

This phenomenon is just a part of the unpredictable nature of Limbo—the lawful good goddess Yondalla has nothing to do with it.

The place earned its name because acrobats and tumblers from all over the multiverse travel to the Teeth in order to hone their prowess at avoiding injury even in the most chaotic of circumstances.

A disproportionate number of these visitors are halflings, and so it became widely, albeit erroneously, supposed that their goddess had something to do with it.

Every round that a character spends inside Yondalla’s Teeth, she takes 2d6 points of damage.

A successful DC 15 Reflex save halves the damage.

Location: Limbo.

Initial Encounters: Roll on the Yondalla’s Teeth encounter table when the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in over a year.

The rogues are there to test their skills inside Yondalla’s Teeth and may be friendly or antagonistic as the DM prefers.

YONDALLA’S TEETH ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–12	1 hellcat
13–27	3d6 formian workers
28–56	1d4 7th-level human rogues
57–81	1 devourer
82–100	Celestial 12th-level halfling rogue

Subsequent Encounters: Once the characters clear out the area, on subsequent visits the chance of an encounter is only 10%.

If the PCs fail to visit the location for more than a year, they must roll for encounters as if they had never visited the site.

Base Ability: You gain a +1 bonus on Spot checks.

Recharge Condition: Spend a number of rounds equal to half your character level, rounded down, inside Yondalla’s Teeth.

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day as a move action, you can gain a +4 dodge bonus to your Armor Class for a number of rounds equal to half your character level, rounded down.

Higher-Order Uses: 5.

SANDSTORM (3.5)

BLUE DRAGONS' GRAVEYARD (EL 17)

Deep in a cave hidden beneath an overhang in a canyon wall lays a huge pit filled with the gigantic bones of countless blue dragons.

Unaccountably drawn here from all quarters of the world since the beginning of time, ancient blue wyrms journey to this place, lie down their heads one last time, and die.

Treasure seekers sometimes brave the trackless wastes to seek the Blue Dragons' Graveyard but rarely find anything worth taking back—a horn here and some scales there. The real treasure is the great store of electrical energy the dragons have left behind.

Initial Encounter: Roll on the Blue Dragons' Graveyard Encounters table when the characters first visit the site.

Adventurers are likely in search of treasure and do not know of the powers of the graveyard.

Blue dragons are either in search of treasure or have come to die.

BLUE DRAGONS' GRAVEYARD ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–40	Adventurers (4 13th-level NPCs)
41–45	1d4+1 juvenile blue dragons
46–50	1d2 young adult blue dragons
51–55	Blue dragon, adult
56–65	Blue dragon, mature adult
66–80	Blue dragon, old
81–90	Blue dragon, very old
91–95	Blue dragon, ancient
96–98	Blue dragon, wyrm
99–100	Blue dragon, great wyrm (dying; Str 30, Dex 8, and Con 13)

Subsequent Encounters: The Blue Dragons' Graveyard is never completely abandoned.

Even if the characters clear the area, there is still a 40% chance of an encounter each time they visit the place.

Base Ability: You gain electricity resistance 5.

Recharge Condition: Deal 50 points of electricity damage to the bones of the Graveyard in a single attack, casting, or activation.

Higher-Order Ability: You can breathe a line of lightning, the length of which is determined by your size.

The line of lightning deals 1d8 points of damage for every two character levels you have.

A successful Reflex save (DC 10 + 1/2 your character level + your Con modifier) halves the damage.

Higher-Order Uses: 4.

CITY OF THE DEAD (EL 7)

Used as a necropolis by a long-lost dynasty of wasteland plains folk, this crumbling city has been abandoned for ages, though its ancient traps and undead sentinels are still active.

Said to contain the riches of generations of emperors, the City of the Dead is a place many seek, but from which few return.

Labyrinthine passages below the desert sands lead to burial chambers long closed and sealed, each of which, in turn, is filled with all manner of deadly traps to ward off grave robbers.

Those clever enough to outmaneuver the traps must still face legions of mummies, wraiths, and specters that seek to convert intruders into unliving slaves.

The greatest treasure, however, are the intricate mosaics of the Hall of the First King.

Those who translate their elaborate instructions gain fantastic powers.

Initial Encounter: Roll on the City of the Dead Encounters table when the characters visit the site for the first time.

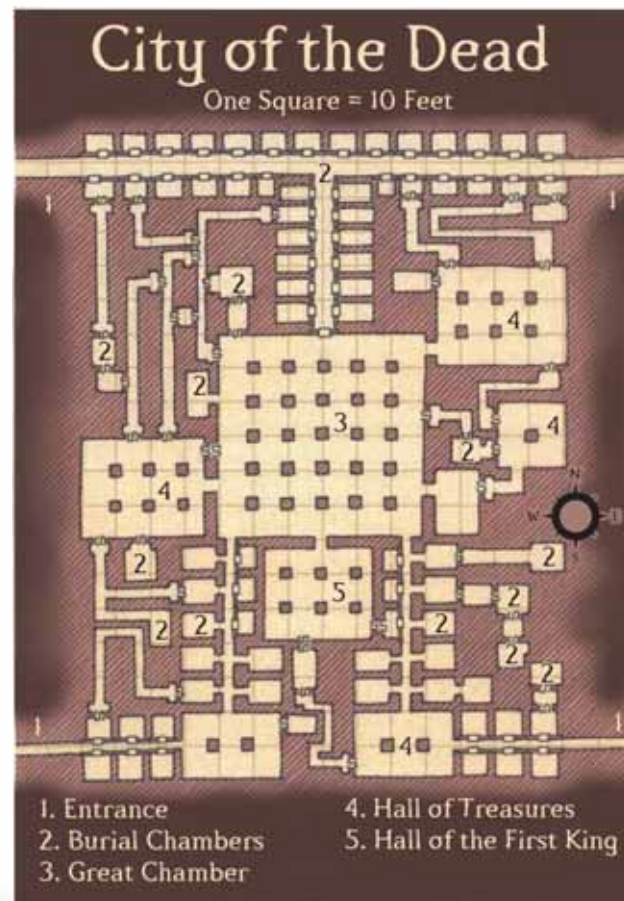

Any undead encountered try to thwart attempts at fulfilling the recharge conditions of the city's higher-order ability.

They wait until the characters are preoccupied before striking.

CITY OF THE DEAD ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–10	Acid fog trap <sup>1</sup>
11–20	Fusillade of greenblood oil darts trap <sup>1</sup>
21–30	Compacting room trap <sup>1</sup>
31–40	Well-camouflaged pit trap <sup>1</sup>
41–50	Spiked pit trap <sup>1</sup>
51–70	2 mummies
71–80	2 wraiths
81–85	3 mummies
86–90	3 wraiths
91–98	Spectre
99–100	Mummy lord (10th-level cleric)

Subsequent Encounters: Once the characters defeat a trap, there is a 50% chance mummies of the City of the Dead reset or replace it before the characters return. If the characters defeat undead, 10% of the time their ranks are replenished.

If the heroes fail to visit the location for more than a year, roll for an encounter as if they had never visited the city. If the characters dally in the Hall of the First King (see Recharge Condition below), roll on the City of the Dead encounter table once per day, rerolling trap results. The undead are not idle while the characters linger. Base Ability: You gain a +1 insight bonus on all Charisma-based checks.

Your Charisma-based spells get a +1 insight bonus on caster level checks made to overcome a creature's spell resistance. Recharge Condition: Find the Hall of the First King. There, translate the instructions on one of the many mosaics, either by means of a spell or magic item, by learning the ancient language, or by making a DC 35 Decipher Script check.

Higher-Order Ability: Once per week, you can use mass charm monster as a spell-like ability on creatures that share one element of your alignment (chaotic, evil, good, lawful, neutral).

The total Hit Dice you can affect is equal to three times the caster level or one creature regardless of Hit Dice.

Your caster level is equal to your character level.

Higher-Order Uses: 4.

CRYPT OF BADR AL-MOSAK (EL 7)

In the midst of rocky, low-lying hills, a few broken pillars form a circle surrounding a terraced bowl.

Stone columns lay scattered and broken within the basin, seeming to point to the sarcophagus at the center of what might have once been an amphitheater.

The massive stone crypt stands 10 feet high and is of one piece with the stone upon which it seems to rest.

The grand sarcophagus is that of a pharaoh named Badr Al-Mosak.

The stone coffin doesn't open—it is actually a statue.

While the area beneath the statue does, in fact, contain haunted crypts and treasures of old, few have ever thought to check and merely believe the ruined amphitheater to be a touchstone site.

Initial Encounter: Roll on the Crypt of Badr Al-Mosak Encounters table when the characters visit the site for the first time.

CRYPT OF BADR AL-MOSAK ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–10	Pyrohydra, 5-headed
11–50	2 ettin skeletons
51–75	Sand dragon, juvenile †
76–97	Flesh golem
98–100	Androsphinx

Subsequent Encounters: Once the characters clear the area around the crypt, subsequent visits have a 10% chance of an encounter.

If the visitors fail to visit the location for more than six months, roll for an encounter as if they had never visited the location.

Base Ability: Within the sight or presence of the Crypt of Badr Al-Mosak, you gain a +4 bonus on saving throws against necromancy spells, as well as a +4 bonus on any saving throw to resist the special attacks of undead.

Outside the crypt's presence, you must succeed on a DC 15 Concentration check to gain this benefit.

Check each time you are asked to make an appropriate save. Recharge Condition: Pray at the foot of the sarcophagus.

Higher-Order Ability: You can use undead to death (as the spell) as a spell-like ability.

Your caster level is equal to your character level.

Higher-Order Uses: 2.

DUSTY CONCLAVE (EL 12)

In the deepest part of the most inhospitable depths of the waste is a grotesque gallery.

What seem at first to be statues arrayed in a circle are soon revealed as petrified, fossilized, and transformed remnants of once-living creatures.

Crude lumps of salt are scattered amid leathery corpses still holding the poses in which they died.

This is the secret meeting place of the Dusty Conclave, a gathering of the strange desert wanderers known as walkers in the waste.

At midsummer noon each year, the walkers gather to perform powerful magic rituals.

Initial Encounter: Roll on the Dusty Conclave Encounters table the first time the PCs approach the rift.

DUSTY CONCLAVE ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–20	4 12-HD ashwoms †
21–50	36-HD brine ooze †
51–65	2 dunewinders †
66–75	4 salt mummies ††
76–100	Sand dragon, old †

Subsequent Encounters: If the visitors enter this region again, they have a 50% chance of another encounter.

If the characters fail to visit the location for more than six months, roll for an encounter as if they had never visited the location.

Base Ability: Your natural armor bonus improves by 1.

Recharge Condition: You must restore life to a creature petrified by flesh to stone or flesh to salt within the circle of statues.

Higher-Order Ability: You can use flesh to stone as a spell-like ability.

Your caster level is equal to your character level.

Higher-Order Uses: 2.

ETERNAL BREATH OF SENEFERU (EL 8)

The Eternal Breath of Seneferu is not static—it moves across the face of the desert as a permanent sandstorm. One doesn't so much find the Eternal Breath as get found by it.

However, one can track the Eternal Breath by the trail it leaves in the sand after its passage—the Eternal Breath usually moves only a few feet per hour, though it sometimes surges ahead at a speeds of up to 15 miles per hour (130 feet per round).

Seneferu is the name of a wizard who once lived in the desert where the Eternal Breath roams.

He sought the heart of the desert, a mystical force that drives desertification into living lands.

Legend records that he found it in a tomb buried by the sands (some say buried in a divine sandstorm that lasted a year and a day).

Only a few know of the Eternal Breath's touchstone qualities.

These creatures can call to Seneferu.

If such seekers are sufficiently deep into the desert, the Eternal Breath responds, arriving 1d4 days from the moment it was first called.

The Eternal Breath of Seneferu manifests as a sandstorm (see Sandstorms, page 16).

Unlike a standard sandstorm, fell creatures move within the gritty winds of the Eternal Breath, immune to its biting sand.

They attack anything they find within the storm.

Initial Encounter: Roll on the Eternal Breath of Seneferu Encounters table when the characters track down the roving sandstorm for the first time.

ETERNAL BREATH OF SENEFERU ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–10	2 average xorns
11–50	3 average xorns
51–75	Death scarab swarm†
76–97	Mohrg
98–100	Elder xorn

† New monster described on page 184.

Subsequent Encounters: Unlike many touchstones, the Eternal Breath of Seneferu constantly draws to it the creatures noted in the encounter table.

Thus, any time seekers track down or call the Eternal Breath after a span of more than five days has passed since the last visit, roll on the encounter table again.

Base Ability: You are less affected by powerful winds; moreover, you are refreshed and invigorated in windy environments.

For the purposes of wind effects (see Table 3–24: Wind Effects, page 95 of the Dungeon Master's Guide) you are treated as a creature two sizes larger than your actual size. Any time you are exposed to an average wind speed of at least 21 miles per hour, you gain a +4 bonus on all Fortitude and Will saving throws.

Moreover, you gain damage reduction 2/– against nonlethal damage dealt by a sandstorm.

Recharge Condition: Remain for 5 minutes within the Eternal Breath of Seneferu.

Higher-Order Ability: You can use gust of wind as a spell-like ability.

Unlike the blast of air created by the normal gust of wind spell, the wind you create blows at 70 miles per hour (with the appropriate effects as indicated on Table 3–24 in the Dungeon Master's Guide).

Your caster level is equal to your character level.

Higher-Order Uses: 8.

HEALING WATERS OF ABU-IMA (EL 5)

Like the shrine at Kahar, the pool found amid the ruins of an ancient temple at Abu-Ima is reputed to have the ability to heal the sick and cure the afflicted.

However, unlike the shrine at Kahar, the pool lost in the ruins of Abu-Ima is not a popular destination—the curse that fell on Abu-Ima killed all its inhabitants, and now awful creatures and visions of hell are said to roam its sand-filled lanes.

Initial Encounter: Roll on the Healing Waters of Abu-Ima Encounters table when the characters visit the site for the first time.

HEALING WATERS OF ABU-IMA ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–10	Dune hag†
11–50	2 dune hags†
51–75	Saurosphinx†
76–97	Desert devil†
98–100	Wasteland troll†

† New monster described in Chapter 6.

Subsequent Encounters: Once the characters clear the area around the pool of foes, subsequent visits have a 10% chance of an encounter.

If the characters fail to visit the location for more than a year, roll for an encounter as if they had never visited the location.

Base Ability: Once per day, you can use either cure serious wounds or remove disease as a spell-like ability.

Caster level equals your cleric level.

Recharge Condition: While bathing in the pool, channel positive energy into the pool by expending one of your daily uses of turn undead.

Higher-Order Ability: Once per week, you can use raise dead as a spell-like ability.

Your caster level equals your character level.

Higher-Order Uses: 2.

PYRAMID OF AMUN-RE (EL 6)

Amid the vast desert sands, the last relic of a dead civilization rears from the ashen dunes, four-sided and stately.

Surrounded by the broken foundations of a once mighty city, the great pyramid itself seems hardly weathered by the ages.

Over 700 feet square at the base and rising to a height of 700 feet, the pyramid's four surfaces face the points of the compass.

While the pyramid of Amun-Re is reputed to contain hidden chambers, trapped galleries, ancient curses, guardians, and monsters in its own right, as a whole the pyramid is also a touchstone site, though few recognize this fact.

Initial Encounter: Roll on the Pyramid of Amun-Re Encounters table when the characters visit the site for the first time.

01–10	1d6+5 bhuka explorers (bhuka warriors) †
11–50	1d6+5 asherati bandits (asherati warriors) †
51–75	1d6 tomb robbers (3rd-level rogues and fighters)
76–97	2 mummies
98–100	3 mummies

Subsequent Encounters: Any time visitors return to the pyramid after more than five days, roll on the encounter table again.

Base Ability: When in the presence of the Pyramid of Amun-Re, you can take a standard action to grant yourself a number of temporary hit points equal to your character level.

Outside the presence of the pyramid, you can attempt to grant yourself the same number of temporary hit points with a DC 15 Concentration check.

These temporary hit points last 1 hour.

You can attempt this ability only once per day.

Recharge Condition: Travel to the top of the pyramid.

Higher-Order Ability: The temporary hit points you gain from the base ability last for 24 hours.

Higher-Order Uses: 6.

SALT STATUARY (EL 7)

A great crack in the earth opened up a buried salt deposit, exposing the crystals to the elements.

Staggered protrusions of the mineral jut from the broken surface, and strange forms of gleaming salt lie exposed in places weather cannot reach.

They resemble statues of living things, but the forms are of creatures known in no history.

They might be religious carvings or unfortunate beings transmuted to salt.

Initial Encounter: Roll on the Salt Statuary Encounters table the first time the PCs approach the rift.

SALT STATUARY ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–26	4 salt mephits
27–50	Brine ooze †
51–70	Behir
71–85	Salt mummy ††
86–100	Waste crawler †

Subsequent Encounters: Later visits to the site have a 25% chance of another encounter.

If the characters wait a year or longer to visit the chasm, roll for an encounter as if they had never visited the location.

Base Ability: You gain the Improved Heat Endurance feat.

Recharge Condition: You must successfully cast flesh to salt (see page 116) on a living creature within the region.

Higher-Order Ability: You can use parching touch (see page 118) as a spell-like ability.

Your caster level is equal to your character level.

Higher-Order Uses: 12.

SHRINE AT KAHAR (EL 3)

The tiny shrine at the Kahar oasis draws thousands of worshipers every year, each hoping to receive the blessing of Solanil, the deity of oases.

Many visitors have claimed minor (or even major) miracles as a result of having prayed at the shrine.

However, only those with true faith receive the real blessing of the deity, for only they who do her holy work best know how to use her gifts.

Initial Encounter: A long line of supplicants can always be found at the shrine.

Since gaining the blessing of Solanil requires placing one's hands upon the shrine, a visitor can expect to wait 3d4 hours before reaching it.

One can hurry to the front of the line, however.

Roll twice on the Shrine at Kahar Encounters table whenever the characters first visit the site.

If someone is able to provide what the injured parties need, the rest of those assembled are so impressed that they allow that character to go straight to the shrine.

(Other needy souls might also approach the character after he goes to the shrine).

A character who pushes his way to the front of the line, or otherwise ignores the pleas of the disadvantaged, does not benefit from the blessing of the shrine even if he possesses the Touchstone feat.

He can return after six months and try again.

SHRINE AT KAHAR ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–20	Injured child (requires cure light wounds )
21–50	Injured adult (requires cure moderate wounds )
51–75	Hysterical person (requires calm emotions )
76–90	Afflicted person (requires lesser restoration )
91–100	Paralyzed person (requires remove paralysis )

Subsequent Encounters: Because many supplicants visit the shrine at Kahar many times a year, word of a character's ability to heal travels quickly through the oasis. There is a 60% chance that someone recognizes the character and ushers him to the shrine each time he returns.

Base Ability: Once per day, you can use one of the following spell-like abilities: aid, calm emotions, cure moderate wounds, lesser restoration, or remove paralysis.

Your caster level equals your cleric level.

Recharge Condition: Channel positive energy into the shrine by expending one of your daily uses of your ability to turn undead while laying hands on the shrine.

Higher-Order Ability: You may cast create food and water as a spell-like ability.

Your caster level equals your character level + 3.

Higher-Order Uses: 12.

SKYSEA (EL 9)

Formed during a fiery battle between a mighty wizard-king and an efreeti lord, the Skysea appears at first as only a remote shimmer.

Eventually, to the distant eye, dunes seem to flatten and their hue appears bluish.

Those who continue to approach notice that the sky itself seems to wrap down and around, and become part of the desert, while the desert seems to drop off into the sky. Clouds float deep within this strange expanse.

Those who approach closer still see that the ground seems to drop away into deep sky.

A shoreline of small dunes stretches to either side as far as the eye can see, beyond which is only an empyreal vastness. A haze of heat dances across the sky, and the air at the shoreline is so dry and hot that it burns the lungs.

A small island seems to float in the center of the Skysea (the focus of this touchstone site).

The Skysea is great stretch of mirrored glass (see Glass Sea Terrain, page 29).

Its surface is almost perfectly smooth, worn down by sandstorms over centuries, and the glass is an average of 10 feet thick.

Skysea varies somewhat from typical glass seas—it is solid glass throughout, has no slope (or other terrain hazards associated with natural glass seas), and is slippery (a creature can move more than half speed only by making a DC 15 Balance check).

The Skysea's temperature hovers around 150 degrees (see Heat Dangers, page 12) during the day, so most who travel across it do so at night.

Initial Encounter: Roll on the Skysea Encounters table when the characters first journey out onto the Skysea.

SKYSEA ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–10	2 average salamanders
11–50	2 hellcats
51–75	Waste crawler†
76–97	Androsphinx
98–100	Purple worm (punches up from below the glass)

† New monster described on page 191.

Subsequent Encounters: The Skysea covers miles of area, with a 5% chance of encounter every hour.

Base Ability: You gain a +6 bonus on saving throws against heat and fire.

Recharge Condition: Reach the mile-wide island at the center of the Skysea, where the ruins of an abandoned city lie.

Higher-Order Ability: You can use desiccate (see page 114) as a spell-like ability.

Your caster level is equal to your character level.

Higher-Order Uses: 6.

SUNKEN BARGE (EL 10)

The wreckage of an ancient barge lies in the Salt Waste, half buried in the salt.

Once the royal vessel of an ancient king of the plains folk, it capsized in a storm and sank, lost for thousands of years.

Looters have long since stripped away anything of value, but have overlooked the greatest prize: the barge itself.

Built by the high priests of Tem-Et-Nu, and blessed by the deity herself, those who carry a piece of the barge can call it to them, and sail it upon any river by Tem-Et-Nu's grace.

Initial Encounter: Roll on the Sunken Barge Encounters table when the characters first visit the site.

The ghosts are always hostile.

SUNKEN BARGE ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–15	Brine ooze†
16–25	4 ghost giant crocodiles
26–45	Ghost hippopotamus†
46–98	2 ghost hippopotami†
99–100	Ghost dire hippopotamus†

† New monster described in Chapter 6.

The Sunken Barge

1. Royal Cabin
2. Crew Quarters
3. Cargo Storage
4. Galley

One Square = 5 Feet

BARGE

Colossal vehicle; Profession (sailor) -2; Spd oars 5 ft. (nautical clumsy); Overall AC -3; Section hp 50 (hardness 5); Section AC 3; Ram —; Space 40 ft.; Height 10 ft. (draft 10 ft.); Crew 10 (40 phantom rowers); Cargo 100 tons. See the Arms and Equipment Guide for more information on barges and other ships.

Subsequent Encounters: The ghosts that inhabit the area of the barge are numerous and tenacious.

If the characters did not manage to permanently lay to rest ghosts they previously encountered at the barge, the same creatures might be there.

Otherwise, roll again on the encounter table every time the characters visit the site.

Base Ability: You gain the ability to water walk as a spell-like ability for up to 10 minutes per day.

The time need not be used consecutively, but a minimum of 1 minute is consumed with any use.

Unlike the spell, this ability also allows you to walk on softsand and slipsand (see Chapter 1).

Your caster level is equal to your character level.

Recharge Condition: Pour water all around the barge, so that wherever the barge touches the salt flats, it is at least damp.

This requires 200 gallons of water.

Then carve off a small piece of the damp barge to carry with you.

Higher-Order Ability: Once per week, you can drop or throw half of your piece of the barge into water to cause a phantom version of the vessel to appear on that spot (which must be large enough to support the barge's Colossal size, or nothing happens).

You can then command the barge to voyage to any point on the water within one day's travel (about thirteen miles upriver—double that when traveling downriver).

When one full day has passed, the barge sinks to the bottom, along with anything and anyone still aboard, and vanishes, although your piece of the barge appears in your hand at the same time.

Higher-Order Uses: 2.

SUNKEN CITY OF PAZAR (EL 4)

The upper half of a marble statue thrusts from the ash dunes of the surrounding desert.

The statue's noble face is pockmarked and scarred by the ravages of the elements, and it holds a tablet, partially buried in sand.

If uncovered, the tablet is too scoured by the sands for anyone to comprehend what might once have been inscribed upon it.

The weight of those who spend any time at all in front of the statue causes a stone in the buried dome beneath to give way, dropping the visitors down onto the side of a sand pile inside the buried dome.

(The sand blunts the 30-foot fall, dealing only 2d6 points of damage).

Within a small complex of ruins beneath the dome (which is half filled with sand) is a platform on which a large brass lamp is permanently affixed.

It once held a potent magic.

Initial Encounter: Roll on the Sunken City of Pazar Encounters table when the characters visit the site for the first time.

SUNKEN CITY OF PAZAR ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01-10	2 Medium monstrous scorpions
11-65	Large monstrous scorpion
66-75	2 Large monstrous scorpions
76-97	Chekryan†
98-100	Djinni

† New monster described on page 142.

Sunken City of Pazar

Subsequent Encounters: Once the characters clear the sunken city of foes, subsequent visits have a 10% chance of an encounter.

If the PCs fail to visit the location for more than a year, roll for an encounter as if they had never visited the location.

Base Ability: Once per day, for a period of 1 minute, you function in many ways as if you were one size larger than normal.

While so functioning, you gain the bonuses associated with being one size larger for the purposes of opposed checks (such as grapple checks and bull rush attempts), but not the penalties.

You are also considered one size larger for the purposes of the effects of any ability (such as improved grab or swallow whole).

Further, while this ability functions, you can use weapons designed for a creature one size category larger than you without penalty.

Your space and reach remain those of a creature of your actual size.

The benefits of this ability do not stack with any similar ability.

Recharge Condition: Rub the brass lamp and defeat the summoned djinni in a grappling contest.

Higher-Order Ability: You maintain your altered size for 8 hours (or until you dismiss the effect).

Higher-Order Uses: 4.

TEMPLE OF THREE (EL 10)

A long row of statues, called the Avenue of Sphinxes, leads to the main entrance of this temple, which was originally a small part of a greater temple compound.

Of that compound, only the Temple of Three remains. The rest of the buildings are tumbled ruins, and even the Temple of Three has seen better days.

Passing through the outer pylons into the nave of the temple, visitors discover a triple shrine dedicated to the worship of three mighty deities of old: Set, Sobek, and Apep.

A grand frieze on the back wall of the nave depicts each of these deities, Apep in the ascendant.

While the depictions of Set and Sobek seem faded and crumbling, Apep's relief sculpture seems vital, fresh, and so life-like that it seems poised to leap into reality at any moment.

Initial Encounter: Roll on the Temple of Three Encounters table when the characters first arrive at the temple.

TEMPLE OF THREE ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–10	2 spectres
11–50	2 ogre magi
51–75	Dunewinder†
76–97	Salamander noble
98–100	Abyssal greater basilisk

† New monster described on page 159.

Subsequent Encounters: Once the PCs clear the temple, subsequent visits have only a 10% chance of an encounter. If the characters fail to visit the location for more than six months, roll for an encounter as if they had never visited the location.

Base Ability: You gain a +6 bonus on Handle Animal and wild empathy checks with snakes and snake-like magical beasts.

Recharge Condition: Sacrifice precious gems worth at least 500 gp before Apep's visage.

Higher-Order Ability: You can use summon monster VI as a spell-like ability.

Your caster level is equal to your character level.

The only creature you can summon with this ability, however, is a fiendish giant constrictor snake.

Higher-Order Uses: 6.

VALE OF DEAD TREES (EL 9)

Some trees in the petrified forests of the wastes were once treants, though they too fell prey to the same geological processes that created the colorful stone trees.

In places where a great many treants gathered to await their inevitable end, some vestige of their collective consciousness survives.

Those who seek out those ancient locales, and show the proper reverence to the spirits of the treants, can gain their favor.

Initial Encounter: Roll on the Vale of Dead Trees Encounters table when characters visit the site for the first time.

Those who dwell in the Vale feel a certain responsibility for the spirits of the treants and suspect the motivations of anyone who comes seeking power.

These local denizens might not immediately attack interlopers, but they certainly pay close attention to what goes on in the Vale.

VALE OF DEAD TREES ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–30	4 3rd-level painted elf rangers
31–60	4 3rd-level painted elf rangers plus a 5th-level painted elf druid
61–90	4 5th-level painted elf rangers plus a 7th-level painted elf druid
91–100	4 5th-level painted elf rangers plus 2 7th-level painted elf druids

Subsequent Encounters: Once a character has proven herself worthy of a visit to the Vale of Dead Trees, the painted elves have a 25% chance of choosing to interact with the party.

However, if the composition of the group has changed significantly, the painted elves assume it's a different group, and an encounter is guaranteed.

Base Ability: You gain damage reduction 2/slashing.

Recharge Condition: You must cast commune with nature at least once per day for three days while within the vale.

Higher-Order Ability: You gain the spell-like ability to animate a tree within 180 feet as a standard action.

The tree takes 1 full round to uproot itself.

Thereafter, it moves at a speed of 10 feet and has the statistics of a treant in all other respects.

The animated tree loses its ability to move if you are dying, dead, or move out of range.

This ability is otherwise similar to liveoak.

Your caster level is equal to your character level.

Higher-Order Uses: 4.

WELL OF AL-SHARAZ (EL 8)

All that remains of a fabled city of wonders, the Well of Al-Sharaz is an unremarkable stone well found deep in the barren waste of the Al-Sharaz desert, surrounded only by fallen and broken rock.

The well is very narrow—about 2-1/2 feet wide—and very deep.

The bottom cannot be seen, though pebbles dropped in return a distant splashing noise.

Those who drink of the water from the well are said to gain the wisdom of the deities.

Initial Encounter: Roll on the Well of Al-Sharaz

Encounters table whenever the characters visit the site.

Unless otherwise noted, all the creatures mentioned below attack intruders.

WELL OF AL-SHARAZ ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–15	1d3+1 jann (do not attack)
16–25	2 djinn (do not attack)
26–40	4 hieracosphinxes
41–55	Threskisphinx†
56–70	Criosphinx
71–75	Noble djinni (does not attack)
76–90	Gynosphinx
91–100	2 efreet

† New monster described on page 188.

Well of Al-Sharaz

Subsequent Encounters: Once the characters rid the area of creatures, subsequent visits have only a 50% chance of an encounter.

If the characters fail to visit the location for more than a year, roll for an encounter as if they had never visited the location.

Base Ability: Once per day, you can use augury as a spell-like ability.

Your caster level is equal to your character level.

Recharge Condition: Drink three times in a row from the well, each time making a DC 20 Wisdom check.

If any of the checks fail, you are so overwhelmed by the knowledge flowing through your mind that you become confused, as the confusion spell, for the next 24 hours.

Higher-Order Ability: You can use divination as a spell-like ability.

Your caster level is equal to your character level.

Higher-Order Uses: 12.

WOMB OF KIKANUTI (EL 10)

The bhukas emerged from below the earth in vast antiquity, and they claim to be the only race still in contact with Kikanuti, the deity who nurtured all life in her subterranean womb until the proper time.

Every bhuka phratry protects a relic of the Emergence. These relics are more than just ritual totems.

When placed together in the correct pattern, they produce a stylized map that leads to the Womb of Kikanuti.

Sometimes the deity's children come to the bhukas and bring a message, requiring a pilgrimage to the Womb.

Sometimes the sacred site is defiled by the unworthy, and the normally peaceable bhukas go on a holy war to rescue and purify it.

The Womb is the very essence of life and water.

The Womb of Kikanuti is a deep, water-carved cavern located beneath a vast, shallow salt lake.

In the floor of the cave is a small, pure pool of water that grants healing to those who immerse themselves in it.

When the bhukas first arrived on the surface, the opening to the Womb was in a dry valley, but they sealed the entrance and Kikanuti diverted a stream into the lower ground to hide it.

The stream is intermittent, pouring muddy water into the lake after storms and remaining bone-dry the rest of the year.

Initial Encounter: Roll on the Womb of Kikanuti Encounters table when the PCs first enter the lake.

WOMB OF KIKANUTI ENCOUNTERS

d%	Encounter
01–35	12 brine swimmers †
36–60	6 giant crocodiles
61–75	20-HD giant banded lizard †
76–90	Gray render
91–95	Sand dragon, young adult †
96–100	Sand dragon, adult †

Subsequent Encounters: Once the PCs rid the lake of creatures, they can attempt to find the hidden entrance to the Womb.

However, violating the sanctum brings a party of ten 3rd- to 4th-level bhuka rangers, fighters, and rogues led by a 10th- to 12th-level druid (EL 12 to 14).

If the PCs manage to survive and approach the area again after less than a year has passed, there is a 50% chance they encounter a bhuka patrol of six 3rd-level bhuka rangers led by an 8th-level bhuka druid (EL 10).

If the heroes fail to visit the location for more than a year, roll for an encounter as if they had never visited.

Base Ability: You gain a number of temporary hit points at the beginning of each day equal to your Wisdom bonus (minimum 1).

Temporary hit points retained from the previous day do not overlap with the temporary hit points from a new day.

Recharge Condition: You must bring an offering of turquoise, worth at least 100 gp, which you must place into the pool in the Womb's floor while intoning a prayer to Kikanuti.

Then make a DC 20 Will save; if you fail, you gain no benefit and you fall unconscious for 1d4 hours.

The offering is always consumed.

Higher-Order Ability: You gain fast healing 2 for 24 hours.

Higher-Order Uses: 2.

UNIVERSAL ITEMS

COMPLETE PSIONIC (3.5)

CRYSTAL ANCHORS

ALERTNESS

When planted in the ground, this crystal anchor grants all creatures in the affected area an enhanced ability to see and hear.

For details on crystal anchors, see page 172 of Expanded Psionics Handbook.

Description: A crystal anchor of alertness is a shaft of transparent crystal 4 feet in length, with a sharpened, spear-like head on one end.

The crystal anchor has Armor Class 7, 15 hit points, a hardness of 8, and a break DC of 20.

When activated, the shaft burns with a clear light, providing illumination equal to that of a lantern.

Activation: The crystal anchor is activated by plunging the sharp head into the ground, leaving the shaft freestanding (a standard action).

The effect is deactivated by pulling the shaft out of the ground.

The anchor can be used any number of times per day.

Effect: When activated, a crystal anchor of alertness radiates a field of alertness such that all creatures within 30 feet of the anchor gain a +5 bonus on their Spot and Listen checks.

Aura/Manifester Level: Faint telepathy.

ML 5th.

Construction: Craft Universal Item, zone of alertness, 2,500 gp, 200 XP, 3 days.

Weight: 1/2 lb.

Price: 10,000 gp.

CRYSTALLINE SPIDER BEAD

A crystalline spider bead can erupt to unleash a swarm of ectoplasmic spiders upon anyone in the area.

Description: A crystalline spider bead is a small spider carved from crystal, about 4 inches in diameter.

A faint amber light shines from within the bead.

Close observers can notice that the eyes on the crystalline spider bead appear to move to follow those nearby.

After being thrown and activated, a crystalline spider bead explodes (and is destroyed), unleashing an ectoplasmic swarm (page 129)—a sparkling swarm of gem-encrusted spiders that attack the nearest creature.

Activation: As a standard action, you shout the command word and throw the crystalline spider bead to a point within 30 feet where you would like the swarm to appear.

The command word is what activates the item, which means the bead can be placed in advance and triggered with the command word by anyone standing within 30 feet of the item.

At the beginning of the activator's next round of actions, the bead explodes and unleashes an ectoplasmic swarm.

The ectoplasmic swarm remains active for 7 rounds before disappearing back onto the Astral Plane.

Effect: A crystalline spider bead calls an ectoplasmic swarm that attacks the nearest creature in the round after it is activated.

If the victim dies or is trapped within an ectoplasmic cocoon, the swarm moves on to attack the next closest creature, and so on until it disappears, returning to the Astral Plane.

If you have one or more crystalline spider beads, keep the statistics for an ectoplasmic swarm handy, along with details regarding the ectoplasmic cocoon power.

Aura/Manifester Level: Moderate psychoportation.

ML 7th.

Construction: Craft Universal Item, ectoplasmic swarm, 700 gp.

56 XP, 2 days.

Weight: 1/4 lb.

Price: 1,400 gp.

CRYSTAL MASKS

A crystal mask is a psionically charged face mask of clear crystal that grants its wearer a particular ability.

The examples described below appear much the same as any crystal mask—transparent and blurring the wearer's features.

A crystal mask is a type of universal item.

For details on crystal masks, see page 173 of Expanded Psionics Handbook.

DELUDED PERCEPTION

This crystal mask traps a creature in a world of its own imagining.

Description: When initially donned, the mask gives off a sharp crack of energy accompanied by the stink of burning flesh as the mask attempts to graft itself to the wearer.

Activation: As a standard action, the mask can be applied to a helpless psionic humanoid (or a creature with a humanoid-like head, such as an illithid).

The mask automatically resizes to fit any size head.

Nonpsionic creatures can wear the mask, but it has no effect on them.

It's impossible to place the mask on a resisting creature.

Effect: If the wearer makes a DC 15 Will saving throw, the mask deals 1d6 points of damage as it tries to adhere to her face and tails, tailing away.

If the wearer fails the save, the crystal mask of deluded perception affects her as cerebral phantasm (page 80).

The victim begins to see horrors dredged up from her own subconscious.

She also takes 1d6 points of damage as the mask begins to graft to her face.

If the wearer donned the mask accidentally (as opposed to having it forced on her), she can attempt another saving throw 1 round later.

If this second save succeeds, the mask falls away, but she is dazed for 1 round.

If the second save fails, she takes an additional 1d6 points of damage as the mask settles permanently into place.

Once the mask is in place, the victim's senses are overlaid with horrible images that daze her, though she continues to scream, cry, and froth until exhaustion forces unconsciousness.

When the wearer wakes the next morning, it is only to another day of dreadfulness.

The wearer can remove the mask by dealing it enough damage to destroy it.

Unfortunately, she takes as much damage as the mask does and doesn't benefit from the mask's hardness.

The mask has hardness 10 and 50 hit points.

Alternatively, the mask can be removed with powers such as psychic surgery (EPH 126) and bend reality (EPH 80).

Aura/Manifester Level: Strong telepathy.

ML 15th.

Construction: Craft Universal Item, cerebral phantasm, 60,000 gp, 4,800 XP, 60 days.

Weight: 1/2 lb.

Price: 120,000 gp.

ENTRENCHED PSYCHE

This crystal mask prevents a psionic creature from using its psionic or psi-like abilities.

Description: When initially donned, the mask gives off a sharp crack of energy accompanied by the stink of burning flesh as the mask attempts to graft itself to the wearer.

Activation: As a standard action, the mask can be applied to a helpless psionic humanoid (or a creature with a humanoid-like head, such as an illithid).

The mask automatically resizes to fit any size head.

Nonpsionic creatures can wear the mask, but it has no effect on them.

It's impossible to place the mask on a resisting creature.

Effect: If the wearer makes a DC 15 Will saving throw, the mask deals 1d6 points of damage as it tries to adhere to his lace and tails, falling away.

If the wearer fails the save, the crystal mask of entrenched psyche affects him as the psychic containment power (page 96).

The victim is immediately cut off from his psionic abilities, including psi-like abilities and manifested powers, as well as any racial extraordinary and supernatural abilities that are psionic in nature.

The victim also takes 1d6 points of damage as the mask begins to graft to his face.

If the wearer donned the mask accidentally (as opposed to having it forced on him), he can attempt another saving throw 1 round later.

If this second save succeeds, the mask tails away, but its residual effect continues to block his psionic abilities for 5 more rounds.

If the second save fails, he takes an additional 1d6 points of damage as the mask settles permanently into place.

Once the mask is in place, the wearer can remove it by dealing enough damage to the mask to destroy it.

Unfortunately, the wearer takes as much damage as the mask does and doesn't benefit from the mask's hardness.

The mask has hardness 10 and 50 hit points.

Alternatively, the mask can be removed with powers such as psychic surgery (EPH 126) and bend reality (EPH 80).

Aura/Manifester Level: Strong telepathy.

ML 15th.

Construction: Craft Universal Item, psychic containment, 60,000 gp, 4,800 XP, 60 days.

Weight: 1/2 lb.

Price: 120,000 gp.

OTHERWORLDLY GAZE

This crystal mask allows you to view other locations on the Material Plane as if you were on the Ethereal Plane.

Description: When the mask is donned and activated, a wavy, silvery sphere rises from the center of the forehead on the mask, then quickly disappears onto the Ethereal Plane.

Activation: You can activate the worn mask once per day as a standard action.

Effect: When a crystal mask of otherworldly gaze is activated, it creates a sensor that duplicates the effect of the ethereal agent power (page 88).

You must concentrate on the sensor to maintain it.

If concentration lapses, the sensor stands inert; it fades after 5 rounds unless you renew your concentration.

You can maintain your concentration up to a maximum of 90 minutes before the effect ends.

Aura/Manifester Level: Moderate clairsentience.

ML 9th.

Construction: Craft Universal Item, ethereal agent, 8,100 gp, 648 XP, 9 days.

Weight: 1/2 lb.

Price: 16,200 gp.

PSYCHOMETRY

This crystal mask allows you to view the recent past of the spot upon which you stand.

Description: When the mask is activated, the eyes of the mask glaze over with an inky black film, obscuring your present sight so that you can better view the past.

Activation: You can activate the worn mask once per day as a standard action.

Effect: When a crystal mask of psychometry is activated, you can see images of events that occurred within the local area in the recent past, as the psychometry power (page 96) manifested by an 11th-level manifester.

Aura/Manifester Level: Moderate clairsentience.

ML 11th.

Construction: Craft Universal Item, psychometry, 11,880 gp, 950 XP, 12 days.

Weight: 1/2 lb.

Price: 23,760 gp.

TERROR

This crystal mask projects an aura of fear that affects everyone but the wearer.

Description: When a crystal mask of terror that you wear is activated, your features seem to melt and distort into an awful, horrifying mess of flesh, worms, mouths, and other frightening elements.

Activation: You can activate the worn mask once per day as a standard action.

Effect: When a crystal mask of terror is activated, one target within 100 feet, who is chosen by you and to which you have line of sight, is affected as if by the cerebral phantasm power (page 80).

If the target fails a DC 15 Will saving throw, she sees the horror lurking in her subconscious on the face of the mask, takes 3d6 points of nonlethal damage, and is dazed for 1d4 rounds, though she continues to scream, cry, and froth during that time.

If the target makes her Will save, she takes no damage and is not dazed.

Aura/Manifester Level: Strong telepathy.

ML 16th.

Construction: Craft Universal Item, cerebral phantasm, 2,700 gp, 216 XP, 3 days.

Weight: 1/2 lb.

Price: 5,400 gp.

VISUAL INSIGHT

This crystal mask allows you to briefly ignore the concealment of any nearby creature.

Description: When the mask is donned and activated, the eyes of this mask light up, glowing with a blue radiance.

Activation: You can activate the worn mask three times per day as a swift action.

Effect: When a crystal mask of visual insight that you wear is activated, you can ignore the effects of concealment (but not invisibility) enjoyed by any creature within 30 feet for 1 round.

Regardless of what effect is creating concealment—such as fog, shadow, or absolute darkness—you can see through it to any targets in range for a brief moment.

Aura/Manifester Level: Strong clairsentience.

ML 15th.

Construction: Craft Universal Item, moment of insight, 5,400 gp, 432 XP, 6 days.

Weight: 1/2 lb.

Price: 10,800 gp.

ELEMENTAL EFFIGY

An elemental effigy becomes one of the four kinds of elemental stewards (page 130)—arctine, emberling, geodite, or tempestan—for a short time, as determined by the carving of the effigy itself.

Description: Each of the four kinds of elemental effigy appears to be a miniature statuette of an elemental steward about 3 to 5 inches high.

Though carved from stone, each effigy has its own unique feel.

The emberling effigy is warm to the touch, while the arctine effigy is cool.

The geodite effigy emits a very low hum that can be heard if the statuette is held up to the ear, while the tempestan effigy is prone to static electric discharge.

When activated, an elemental effigy becomes an elemental steward of the appropriate type and serves the owner of the effigy for a brief period.

The steward always considers the creature that activated the elemental effigy to be the item's owner, which might or might not be true.

Activation: As a standard action, you set the effigy on the ground and utter the command word (typically, the name of the elemental steward).

Effect: Once activated, in the following round the effigy grows into the appropriate elemental steward of regular size.

The elemental steward obeys and serves the owner of the effigy.

If an elemental effigy is broken or destroyed in its statuette form, it is forever ruined and has no more magic or power.

If the elemental steward is slain, it reverts to statuette form and can be used again at a later time (though no sooner than one week).

An elemental effigy can maintain its steward form for up to 12 hours per day, but the duration need not be continuous. If you have an elemental effigy, keep the statistics for the appropriate elemental steward handy.

Aura/Manifester Level: Strong psychoportation.

ML 16th.

Construction: Craft Universal Item, elemental steward, 6,000 gp, 240 XP, 6 days.

Weight: 1 lb.

Price: 25,000 gp.

PSIONIC BANDS

Psionic bands come in pairs; one is worn on each hand. Each pair of bands described below takes up space on the body as a pair of gloves or gauntlets.

ETHEREAL ABDUCTION

This pair of metallic bands allows you to send troublesome foes onto the Ethereal Plane.

Description: These metallic bands are finely crafted. Each bears a small clear crystal that rests across the top of the knuckles.

The bands are thin and almost translucent in bright light. When activated, the crystals glow with a pale white light.

Activation: To activate the bands, you give a mental command while simultaneously bringing both worn bands together so they touch (a standard action).

The bands can be activated once per day.

Effect: When activated, the bands project a 15-foot cone-shaped burst that has a chance of sending toes tumbling headlong onto the Ethereal Plane.

A DC 19 Will saving throw negates the effect.

Creatures that fail their saving throws are forced temporarily onto the Ethereal Plane along with their equipment.

They remain there for 11 rounds unless they have another way of leaving.

The bands can also be used from the Ethereal Plane against a target that exists on the Material Plane, pulling the target to your ethereal location.

Aura/Manifester Level: Moderate psychoportation.

ML 11th.

Construction: Craft Universal Item, ethereal abduction, 23,760 gp, 1,900 XP, 24 days.

Weight: 1/2 lb.

Price: 47,530 gp.

EXTENDED RANGE

This pair of metallic bands allows you to increase the range of thrown weapons.

Description: These metallic bands are finely crafted.

Each bears a small violet crystal that rests across the top of the knuckles.

When activated, the crystals generate a purplish aura that encompasses the wearer's hands.

Activation: To activate the bands, you need only put them on.

Effect: Whenever you wear the bands and use a throwing weapon (classified as a weapon typically capable of being thrown), the bands give the weapon a telekinetic push, doubling its range increment as if you enjoyed the effect of extend range (page 89).

Aura/Manifester Level: Faint psychokinesis.

ML 5th.

Construction: Craft Universal Item, extend range, 1,000 gp, 80 XP, 1 day.

Weight: 1/2 lb

Price: 2,000 gp.

MINDFIRE

This pair of metallic bands allows you to inflict a mentally crippling disease upon those you touch.

Description: These metallic bands are finely crafted.

Each bears a small amber crystal that rests across the top of the knuckles.

The bands appear to be pitted and decayed, even though the metal they are composed of is quite sound.

When the bands are activated, the crystals glow brightly.

A sickly, grayish-brown aura encompasses the hands of the wearer.

Activation: To activate the bands, you give a mental command while simultaneously bringing both worn bands together so they touch (a standard action).

The bands can be activated once per day.

Effect: When activated, the bands project a 15-foot cone-shaped burst of mental sickness that has a chance of affecting those in the area with the mindfire disease.

A DC 14 Fortitude saving throw negates the effect.

Creatures that fail their saving throws contract a virulent form of mindfire.

Mindfire has no incubation period; a victim immediately takes 1d4 points of Intelligence damage.

Each day thereafter, the victim must succeed on a DC 14 Fortitude saving throw or take another 1d4 points of Intelligence damage.

If the victim makes her Fortitude save for two days in a row, she fights off mindfire and recovers, taking no more damage.

Aura/Manifester Level: Faint psychometabolism.

ML 5th.

Construction: Craft Universal Item, mindfire, 5,500 gp, 440 XP, 6 days.

Weight: 1/2 lb.

Price: 11,000 gp.

BLAZING ARC

This pair of metallic bands is capable of projecting fire in a small, cone-shaped burst.

Description: These metallic bands are finely crafted.

Each bears a small red crystal that rests across the top of the knuckles.

Flames etched into the steel give the bands a fiery appearance.

When the bands are activated, each band's crystal glows brightly as waves of searing heat project out from the wearer's outstretched hands.

A faint aroma of brimstone is present after activation.

Activation: To activate the bands, you give a mental command while simultaneously bringing both worn bands together so they touch (a standard action).

The bands can be activated three times per day.

Effect: When activated, the bands project a 15-foot cone-shaped burst of flame that deals 4d4+4 points of fire damage to anything caught in the area.

A DC 14 Reflex saving throw reduces the damage by half.

Aura/Manifester Level: Moderate psychokinesis.

ML 7th.

Construction: Craft Universal Item, energy arc, 2,835 gp.

226 XP, 3 days.

Variants: Bands have been created for the other energy types common to psionic energy powers.

Bands of the electric arc deal 4d4 points of electricity damage with a save DC of 16, bands of the frozen arc deal 4d4+4 points of cold damage with a save DC of 14, and bands of the thundering arc ignore hardness and deal 4d4-4 points of sonic damage with a save DC of 14.

These variants have no change in cost or aura.

Weight: 1/2 lb.

Price: 6,300 gp.

PSYCHOACTIVE SKINS

A psychoactive skin is a psionically charged mass of ectoplasm that grows to cover its wearer's body, forming a second skin that grants a specific psionic ability.

A psychoactive skin is a type of universal item.

For details on psychoactive skins, see page 175 of Expanded Psionics Handbook.

CELESTIAL

A skin of the celestial allows you to take on the celestial template for a short period of time.

Description: At first sight, this skin appears to be a white glob of ectoplasm approximately 6 inches in diameter.

When donned, it melds over your skin, becoming a stainless white epidermis complete with a shimmering golden halo.

Activation: As a standard action, you can activate the skin by projecting a command thought, causing it to spread over your body.

The skin's effect lasts for 7 rounds, after which it automatically removes itself from you and shrinks back down to its quiescent state (a small glob of ectoplasm).

A skin of the celestial can be activated once per day.

Effect: The skin grants you the benefit of the celestial template (MM 31).

Each time the skin is activated, you gain the template for 7 rounds.

Aura/Manifester Level: Moderate psychometabolism.

ML 10th.

Construction: Craft Universal Item, planar apotheosis, 5,000 gp, 400 XP, 10 days.

Weight: 1 lb.

Price: 10,000 gp.

CELESTIAL EMBRACE

The skin of celestial embrace allows you to take on the half-celestial template for a short period of time.

Description: At first sight, this skin appears to be a pearlescent glob of ectoplasm approximately 6 inches in diameter.

When donned, it melds over your skin, becoming an iridescent white epidermis complete with a shimmering golden halo.

Activation: As a standard action, you can activate the skin by projecting a command thought, causing it to spread over your body.

The skin's effect lasts for 15 rounds, after which it automatically removes itself from you and shrinks back down to its quiescent state (a small glob of ectoplasm).

A skin of celestial embrace can be activated once per day.

Effect: The skin grants you the benefit of the half-celestial template (MM 144).

Each time the skin is activated, you gain the template for 15 rounds.

Aura/Manifester Level: Strong psychometabolism.

ML 15th.

Construction: Craft Universal Item, planar embrace, 24,000 gp, 1,920 XP, 48 days.

Weight: 1 lb.

Price: 48,000 gp.

ECTOPLASMIC ARMOR

A skin of ectoplasmic armor covers you in a suit of protective armor.

Description: At first sight, this skin appears to be a silver ball of ectoplasm approximately 6 inches in diameter.

When donned, it appears as a suit of silvery, ectoplasmic full plate armor.

The armor feels soft to the touch, though it immediately becomes as hard as iron at the exact spot of contact if struck with any kind of force.

Activation: As a standard action, you can activate the skin by projecting a command thought, causing it to spread over your body.

The same command thought causes the skin to shrink back down to its original form.

The skin can be activated at will.

Effect: A skin of ectoplasmic armor gives you a +8 armor bonus (which does not stack with armor bonuses provided by other armor, powers, spells, or effects).

The skin is somewhat bulky and penalizes you with a +2 maximum Dexterity bonus, an armor check penalty of -6, and a 25% arcane spell failure chance.

The skin does not penalize your speed.

Successfully dispelling this psychoactive skin causes it to shrink back to its original form and remain inert for 1d4 rounds.

Aura/Manifester Level: Moderate metacreativity.

ML 9th.

Construction: Craft Universal Item, 1,500 gp, 120 XP, 15 days.

Weight: 1 lb.

Price: 3,000 gp.

A skin of the fiend allows you to take on the fiendish template for a short period of time.

Description: At first sight, this skin appears to be a red glob of ectoplasm approximately 6 inches in diameter.

When donned, it melds over your skin, becoming a deep red epidermis complete with tiny horns on the forehead.

Activation: As a standard action, you can activate the skin by projecting a command thought, causing it to spread over your body.
