ABOLETH GLYPHS

LORDS OF MADNESS (3.5)

DEEP

Any air-breathing creature that approaches within 20 feet of this glyph must make a DC 19 Fortitude save to avoid having its lungs instantly fill with water.

A creature whose lungs fill with water immediately begins to drown.

On the first round, its hit points drop to 0, and it falls unconscious.

On the following round, its hit points drop to -1, and on the third round, it dies.

Any effect that returns a drowning character to positive hit points wakens the creature and allows it to cough up the water in its lungs.

Otherwise, only a DC 15 Heal check can empty the creature's lungs of water and save it from a watery death.

Strong conjuration; CL 15th; Craft Aboleth Glyph, control water; Price 120,000 gp.

ENFEEBLEMENT

All nonaboleths within 20 feet of this glyph are weakened and debilitated, and take a -6 penalty to Strength, Dexterity, and Constitution.

The effect of this glyph persists for 1d4 rounds after a creature exits the area of effect.

A successful DC 16 Will save negates the effect completely. Moderate necromancy; CL 9th; Craft Aboleth Glyph, bestow curse; Price 72,000 gp.

EXTENSION

Any aboleth within 20 feet of this glyph doubles the range of its enslave special attack.

Moderate transmutation; CL 9th; Craft Aboleth Glyph, eagle's splendor; Price 20,000 gp.

LAW

All nonlawful creatures within 30 feet of this glyph become nervous and unsure of their abilities.

These creatures take a -1 penalty on attack rolls, weapon damage rolls, and saving throws.

This effect cannot be resisted with a saving throw.

Moderate abjuration; CL 9th; Craft Aboleth Glyph, magic circle against law; Price 30,000 gp.

SLAVE'S GLORY

All creatures within 30 feet of this glyph and currently under the effect of an aboleth's enslave ability are filled with feelings of pride for and loyalty to their aboleth masters.

The creatures gain a +2 morale bonus on Strength, Constitution, and Will saving throws.

If a slave attacks another aboleth while within the area of this glyph, he takes 10d6 points of force damage (DC 16 Reflex save for half) and immediately loses all benefits of the glyph until he leaves the area and reenters it. Moderate transmutation; CL 9th; Craft Aboleth Glyph, rage; Price 40,000 gp.

SLIME CURSE

Within 30 feet of this glyph, any saving throws against an aboleth's slime special attack are made with a -4 penalty. A failed save indicates that transformation occurs in a single round.

Moderate transmutation; CL 9th; Craft Aboleth Glyph; Price 25,000 gp.

ARMOR AND SHIELD AUGMENT CRYSTALS

MAGIC ITEM COMPENDIUM (3.5)

This blue sapphire is cut into a large cabochon.

It contains a small flint arrowhead in its center.

A crystal of arrow deflection protects you from ranged weapon attacks.

Least: This augment crystal grants you a +2 bonus to AC against ranged attacks.

Lesser: As the least crystal, except the bonus is +5.

Greater: As the least crystal, and you can deflect one ranged attack per round as if you had the Deflect Arrows feat.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, shield.

Cost to Create: 250 gp, 20 XP, 1 day (least); 1,250 gp, 100 XP, 3 days (lesser); 2,500 gp, 200 XP, 5 days (greater).

BENT SIGHT

Price (Item Level): 500 gp (3rd)

Body Slot: — (shield crystal)

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) divination

Activation: —

Weight: —

This small crystal is affixed to a plate of polished silver.

A crystal of bent sight offers a great boon to any who face creatures that have gaze attacks.

When this augment crystal is attached to your shield, you can avert your eyes from a creature that has a gaze attack without suffering a miss chance on your attack rolls against that creature.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, clairaudience/clairvoyance.

Cost to Create: 250 gp, 20 XP, 1 day.

CLASP OF ENERGY PROTECTION

Price (Item Level): 500 gp (3rd) (least), 1,500 gp (5th) (lesser), or 3,000 gp (7th) (greater)

Body Slot: — (shield crystal)

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) abjuration

Activation: —

Weight: —

Fire Protection

This fiery red crystal is slightly warm to the touch.

Cold Protection

This icy clear crystal is covered in a thin layer of frost.

Acid Protection

This hazy green crystal hisses faintly when exposed to the open air.

Electricity Protection

This brilliant blue-white crystal crackles with static discharge when touched.

Sonic Protection

This deep purple crystal gives off a faint hum, and rings with a sonorous chime when tapped.

A crystal of energy protection protects against a specific form of energy: acid, cold, electricity, fire, or sonic.

Least: This augment crystal grants resistance 5 to the designated energy type.

Once the crystal has prevented a total of 25 points of energy damage, it becomes inert until the following day.

Lesser: As above, except the crystal grants resistance 10, up to a maximum of 50 points per day.

Greater: As above, except the crystal grants resistance 15, up to a maximum of 75 points per day.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, resist energy.

Cost to Create: 250 gp, 20 XP, 1 day (least); 750 gp, 60 XP, 2 days (lesser); 1,500 gp, 120 XP, 3 days (greater).

GLANCING BLOWS

Price (Item Level): 500 gp (3rd) (least), 3,000 gp (7th) (lesser), or 5,000 gp (9th) (greater)

Body Slot: — (armor crystal)

Caster Level: 7th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 18) abjuration

Activation: —

Weight: —

All the hues of the rainbow—and many more—shimmer and dance across the surface of this multifaceted crystal.

A crystal of glancing blows causes your armor to turn aside grasping attacks.

Least: This augment crystal grants you a +2 competence bonus on grapple checks to prevent a grapple from being initiated (but not any other kind of grapple check, including those to initiate or escape a grapple).

Lesser: As the least crystal, but the bonus is +5.

Greater: As the least crystal, but the bonus is +10.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, freedom of movement.

Cost to Create: 250 gp, 20 XP, 1 day (least); 1,500 gp, 120 XP, 3 days (lesser); 2,500 gp, 200 XP, 5 days (greater)

IRON WARD DIAMOND

Price (Item Level): 500 gp (3rd) (least), 2,000 gp (6th) (lesser), or 8,000 gp (11th) (greater)

Body Slot: — (armor crystal)

Caster Level: 7th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 18) evocation

Activation: —

Weight: —

This dun and ecru diamond is incredibly durable.

An iron ward diamond lends its toughness to armor, helping it absorb blows in combat.

Least: The least version of this augment crystal grants you damage reduction 1/—.

This damage reduction stacks with similar damage reduction granted by any other source.

Once the clasp has prevented a total of 10 points of damage, it becomes inert until the following day.

Lesser: As the least crystal, except that it grants damage reduction 3/— until it has prevented a total of 30 points of damage.

A lesser iron ward diamond functions only when attached to medium or heavy armor.

Greater: As the least crystal, except that it grants damage reduction 5/— until it has prevented a total of 50 points of damage.

A greater iron ward diamond functions only when attached to heavy armor.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, stoneskin.

Cost to Create: 250 gp, 20 XP, 1 day (least); 1,000 gp, 80 XP, 2 days (lesser); 4,000 gp, 320 XP, 8 days (greater).

LIFEKEEPING

Price (Item Level): 200 gp (2nd) (least), 1,000 gp (4th) (lesser), or 5,000 gp (9th) (greater)

Body Slot: — (armor crystal)

Caster Level: 7th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 18) necromancy

Activation: —; see text

Weight: —

This bright crystal gleams and sparkles in the light.

A crystal of lifekeeping wards you against necromantic and death effects.

Least: This augment crystal grants you a +1 competence bonus on saving throws against energy drain attacks, inflict spells, death spells, and death effects.

Lesser: As the least crystal, except the bonus is +3.

Greater: As the least crystal, except the bonus is +5.

In addition, if you fail a save against any of these effects, you can choose to reroll the save as an immediate (mental) action.

This ability functions once per day.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, death ward.

Cost to Create: 100 gp, 8 XP, 1 day (least); 500 gp, 40 XP, 1 day (lesser); 2,500 gp, 200 XP, 5 days (greater).

MIND CLOAKING

Price (Item Level): 500 gp (3rd) (least), 4,000 gp (8th) (lesser), or 10,000 gp (12th) (greater)

Body Slot: — (armor crystal)

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) abjuration

Activation: —; see text

Weight: —

This crystal is black as a clouded night sky.

A crystal of mind cloaking protects you against mental infiltration.

Least: This augment crystal grants you a +1 competence bonus on saving throws against mind-affecting spells and abilities.

Lesser: As above, except the crystal grants a +3 competence bonus.

Greater: As above, except the crystal grants a +5 competence bonus.

In addition, if you fail a save against a mind-affecting spell or ability, you can choose to reroll the save as an immediate (mental) action.

This ability functions once per day.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, resistance.

Cost to Create: 250 gp, 20 XP, 1 day (least); 2,000 gp, 160 XP, 4 days (lesser); 5,000 gp, 400 XP, 10 days (greater).

RESTFUL

Price (Item Level): 500 gp (3rd)

Body Slot: — (armor crystal)

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) enchantment

Activation: —

This silver clasp is decorated with sparkling crystals shaped like stars.

A restful crystal is a great boon to any warrior who must stay always at the ready.

Sleeping in armor that has this augment crystal attached does not make you fatigued.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, sleep.

Cost to Create: 250 gp, 20 XP, 1 day.

RUBICUND FRENZY

Price (Item Level): 500 gp (3rd) (least), 2,000 gp (6th) (lesser), or 6,000 gp (10th) (greater)

Body Slot: — (armor crystal)

Caster Level: 11th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 20) enchantment

Activation: —

Weight: —

This ruby is cut into a torus—beveled on top, flat below.

It is meant to be attached to a suit of armor.

A rubicund frenzy drinks your blood when you are wounded, whipping you into a savage frenzy.

This item functions only for living creatures.

Least: As long as your current hit point total is no greater than half your full normal hit points, this augment crystal grants you a +1 morale bonus on weapon damage rolls and saves against fear.

Lesser: As the least crystal, except it grants a +3 morale bonus on weapon damage rolls and saves against fear.

Greater: As the least crystal, except it grants a +5 morale bonus on weapon damage rolls and saves against fear.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, heroism.

Cost to Create: 250 gp, 20 XP, 1 day (least); 1,000 gp, 80 XP, 2 days (lesser); 3,000 gp, 240 XP, 6 days (greater).

SCREENING

Price (Item Level): 400 gp (2nd) (least), 1,000 gp (4th) (lesser), or 3,000 gp (7th) (greater)

Body Slot: — (armor crystal)

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) abjuration

Activation: —

This smooth, deep blue crystal is warm to the touch.

A crystal of screening enhances a suit of armor with force, enabling it to protect you against the attacks of incorporeal foes.

Least: This augment crystal imposes a –2 penalty on touch attacks made against you by incorporeal creatures.

Lesser: As the least crystal, except the penalty is –5.

Greater: As the least crystal, except the penalty is –10.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, mage armor.

Cost to Create: 200 gp, 16 XP, 1 day (least); 500 gp, 40 XP, 1 day (lesser); 1,500 gp, 120 XP, 3 days (greater).

STAMINA

Price (Item Level): 300 gp (2nd) (least), 900 gp (4th) (lesser), or 2,700 gp (7th) (greater)

Body Slot: — (armor crystal)

Caster Level: 7th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 18) conjuration

Activation: —; see text

Weight: —

This dull red crystal pulses in time with your heartbeat.

A crystal of stamina protects you from assaults against your physical health.

Least: This augment crystal grants you a +1 competence bonus on saving throws against disease and poison.

Lesser: As the least crystal, except the bonus is +3.

Greater: As the least crystal, except the bonus is +5.

In addition, if you fail a save against a poison or disease effect, you can choose to reroll the save as an immediate (mental) action.

This ability functions once per day.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, neutralize poison, remove disease.

Cost to Create: 150 gp, 12 XP, 1 day (least); 450 gp, 36 XP, 1 day (lesser); 1,350 gp, 108 XP, 3 days (greater).

ARMOR AND SHIELD SPECIAL ABILITIES

ARMS AND EQUIPMENT GUIDE (3.0)

ACIDIC

A suit of armor or shield with this ability has a slick sheen and is constantly covered in a layer of lightly smoking acid. The wearer (and anything she carries) is immune to acid, including that produced by the armor.

Acidic armor deals 2d4 points of acid damage per round of contact during a grapple; momentary touch attacks have no effect.

Objects not held by the wearer can be damaged by direct contact with the armor for a full round.

Caster Level: 6th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor; Melf's acid arrow, resist elements; Market Price: +4 bonus.

AQUATIC

This armor appears streamlined and possesses a greenish glint.

Aquatic armor enables its wearer to move freely through water without the need for Swim checks.

Drowning rules still apply (see the Drowning Rule in Chapter 3 of the DUNGEON MASTER'S Guide), unless the wearer can breathe water.

Rare versions of aquatic armor include a persistent water breathing effect (as the spell, but affecting only the wearer).

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, freedom of movement, water breathing (when present); Market Price: +2 bonus (+3 bonus with water breathing).

ARROW CATCHING

A shield with this quality attracts ranged weapons to it.

It grants a +1 deflection bonus to Armor Class against ranged weapons as projectiles and thrown weapons veer toward the shield, not the shield bearer.

Additionally, any projectile or thrown weapon aimed at a target within 5 feet of the shield's bearer diverts from its original target and targets the shield's bearer instead.

(If the shield bearer has total cover with respect to the attacker, the projectile or thrown weapon is not diverted).

Projectiles and thrown weapons that have an enhancement bonus higher than the shield's total bonus to AC are not diverted, but the shield's increased AC bonus still applies against attacks directed at the bearer.

Those attacking the shield bearer with ranged weapons ignore any miss chance that would normally apply due to concealment or magical effects.

The bearer activates this ability with a command word and can shut it off by repeating it.

Caster Level: 8th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, entropic shield; Market Price: +1 bonus.

BANE BLIND

A favorite of rangers and bounty hunters, bane blind armor grants improved invisibility to the wearer against a specific creature type chosen when the armor is created.

Creatures who are subject to the bane blind find that their scent ability is likewise unable to detect the wearer, although hearing, tremorsense, and other sensing methods still work.

Any category of creature on the ranger's favored enemy list can be chosen for the bane blind effect.

The following table determines what type of creature a random suit of bane blind armor affects.

d%	Creature Type
01–10	Aberrations
11–15	Animals
16–30	Beasts
31–32	Constructs
33–34	Elementals
35–37	Fey
38–47	Giants
48–57	Humanoid type (DM chooses specific race)
58–67	Magical beasts
68–77	Monstrous humanoids (DM chooses specific race)
78–79	Oozes
80–81	Outsider, chaotic (DM chooses specific race)
82–83	Outsider, lawful (DM chooses specific race)
84–86	Outsider, evil (DM chooses specific race)
87–89	Outsider, good (DM chooses specific race)
90–94	Shapechangers
95–97	Undead
98–100	Vermin

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, improved invisibility; Market Price: +3 bonus.

BUFFERING

Buffering armor and buffering shields are always dull black, and they appear to possess depths that couldn't exist.

A suit of armor or a shield with this quality absorbs ability-draining and level-draining attacks.

It can absorb as many points of ability damage or levels drained per day as its enhancement bonus.

It also allows Fortitude saves against energy-drain attacks that normally don't allow such saves.

A successful save halves the effect.

Buffering armor and buffering shields do not change saves against attacks that already allow them.

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, restoration; Market Price: +3 bonus.

COMMAND

This armor or shield always appears brilliant and gleaming, no matter what the conditions and despite all attempts to paint over or obscure it.

Coveted by military leaders of all sorts, it carries a powerful aura that grants a +4 competence bonus on Charisma-based skill checks and reaction checks.

Furthermore, all allies within 30 feet of the wearer of the armor or shield get a +2 morale bonus on Will saves.

Command armor and command shields make their owners very noticeable, imposing a –6 penalty on Hide checks.
Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, 5 levels of spellcasting ability; Market Price: +2 bonus.

DANCING

The wearer can release a dancing shield as a standard action and command it to protect a single character (possibly the wearer himself).

The dancing shield floats in the air in front of the protected character, darting in the way of an opponent's weapons and providing cover against attacks from one opponent per round.

Treat the shield's armor bonus (including its enhancement bonus) as a cover bonus to Armor Class.

At the end of 4 rounds, the dancing shield falls to the ground. It must be picked up and commanded for it to function again.

It ceases dancing before 4 rounds have passed if so commanded.

Only one dancing shield can protect a character at a time. It is half as effective (half the cover bonus to Armor Class) when protecting a Large creature, and it cannot provide meaningful cover for a Huge or bigger creature.

A dancing shield functions only for a character that is proficient with shields.

Caster Level: 15th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, animate objects; Market Price: +3 bonus.

DAYLIGHT

A suit of armor or a shield with this quality glows with the brilliant light of a daylight spell for up to 30 minutes per day.

A command word, usually inscribed on the inside of the armor or the back of the shield, activates and deactivates the illumination.

Except when glowing, this armor or shield appears completely normal.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, daylight; Market Price: +2 bonus.

DISTRACTING

Armor or shields with this quality shimmer and glow hypnotically.

Anyone engaged in combat with the wearer must succeed on a Will save each round or be affected by the daze spell. Once per day, the wearer can activate hypnotic pattern (as the spell from a 9th-level caster).

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, daze, hypnotic pattern; Market Price: +3 bonus.

FEARSOME

This suit of armor or shield creates an aura of fear around the wearer (as the fear spell from a 7th-level caster).

This aura affects all opponents within 40 feet of the wearer. The armor or shield appears completely normal, except to those who fail their save.

The fearful see a creature from their worst nightmares in place of the wearer.

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, fear; Market Price: +2 bonus.

FEATHERED

A suit of armor or a shield with this ability appears to be created from thousands of iridescent feathers.

This characteristic has no effect on the armor's or shield's weight, armor check penalty, or other statistics.

Feathered armor or a feathered shield allows the wearer to fly up to 50 minutes per day (as the fly spell).

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, fly; Market Price: +2 bonus.

SACRED

A suit of armor or a shield with this quality assists only wearers who have the ability to turn or rebuke undead.

Sacred armor or a sacred shield increases the owner's effective level for the turning check by +2.

Armor and shields with this ability are always specific to a deity and prominently feature the god's holy symbol.

Caster Level: 8th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, ability to turn or rebuke undead; Market Price: +2 bonus.

WRAPPING

A shield with this quality hinders foes who are struck by it. With a successful shield bash attack, the wrapping shield's bearer can make the shield magically bind itself to the opponent.

It will not move until the command words are uttered (often "shield release"), the target dies, or the shield is pulled off with a successful Strength check (DC 20).

The bearer loses any benefit to Armor Class while the shield is attached to the target.

A wrapping shield does not function against Huge or larger creatures.

nor does it work on incorporeal foes.

The wearer can loose himself from the shield normally.

It is difficult for the opponent to perform any physical actions while the shield is so attached, and it's equally difficult for the wrapping shield's bearer to do much while someone is wriggling against the shield.

Both incur an additional armor check penalty of –5 (which stacks with any existing armor check penalties, but applies only to skill checks) and a –2 circumstance penalty on attacks.

Caster Level: 3rd; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, make whole; Market Price: +1 bonus.

BOOK OF EXALTED DEEDS (3.5)

ANGELIC

This armor or shield is adorned with feather-like patterns and other heavenly motifs.

The armor or shield increases the wearer's enhancement bonus to AC by +1 against attacks from evil creatures.

It also grants its user a +4 sacred bonus on saving throws against spells with the evil descriptor.

An evil creature that dons the armor or uses the shield does not gain its benefits.

Moderate abjuration; CL 9th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, dispel evil, Phieran's resolve, creator must be good; Price +2 bonus.

EMPYREAL

This exquisitely crafted armor or shield, favored by celestial champions of good, is often set with precious gems and adorned with images of powerful archons, eladrins, or guardians.

The wearer can transfer all or part of its enhancement bonus to a sacred bonus on saving throws.

The wearer decides to make the transfer on his turn, and the choice remains in effect until his next turn.

Any evil creature wearing empyreal armor or holding an empyreal shield is sickened (–2 penalty on attack rolls, saving throws, ability checks, and skill checks) for as long as the armor is worn or the shield is held (no saving throw).

Moderate abjuration and necromancy [good]; CL 9th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, resistance, shield of faith, sicken evil; Price +2 bonus.

EXALTED

The wearer of this pristine armor, if good, takes only half of the extra damage dealt by an unholy weapon (+1d6 instead of +2d6) and gains the benefits of a constant protection from evil spell.

Furthermore, the armor negates the vile damage dealt by a vile melee, ranged, or natural weapon (described in the Book of Vile Darkness).

Moderate abjuration; CL 9th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, protection from evil, creator must be good; Price +3 bonus.

SACRED

A suit of armor or a shield with this quality assists only wearers who have the ability to turn or rebuke undead.

Sacred armor or a sacred shield increases the owner's effective level for the turning check by +2.

Armor and shields with this ability are always specific to a deity and predominantly feature the god's holy symbol.

Moderate conjuration; CL 8th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, ability to turn or rebuke undead; Price +2 bonus.

SOULFIRE

This armor's wearer is immune to all death spells, magical death effects, and energy drain, and any negative energy effects (such as from chill touch or inflict spells).

Moderate abjuration; CL 7th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, death ward; Price +4 bonus.

TWILIGHT

This suit of armor, favored by eladrin spellcasters, becomes semi-incorporeal and translucent when donned.

It also possesses a faint sunset-colored sheen.

The twilight armor reduces the chance of arcane spell failure by –10%.

Faint abjuration; CL 5th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor; Price +1 bonus.

BOOK OF VILE DARKNESS (3.0)

DARKSOUL PROTECTION

This wearer of this armor, if of evil alignment, takes only half damage from spells or effects that cause greater damage to evil creatures, such as a holy smite spell, the smite evil ability of a paladin, or the extra damage dealt by a holy weapon.

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, protection from good; Market Price: +1 bonus.

DEMONMIGHT WARD

This armor increases the wearer's enhancement bonus to Armor Class by +1 against attacks from creatures of good alignment, or by +2 against attacks from good outsiders. Furthermore, it provides a +1 bonus on all saving throws against spells and spell-like effects from good creatures, and a +2 bonus on saving throws against spells with the good descriptor.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, dispel good, unheavened; Market Price: +2 bonus.

POISON SPIKE

This special ability is identical to mundane armor spikes except that the spikes retract into hidden compartments in the armor.

When they come out in response to a command word, they deal 1d6 points of piercing damage (just as normal armor spikes), and the spikes are coated with a dose of a poison that deals 1d3 points of Strength damage as both initial and secondary damage (Fort DC 16).

CHAMPIONS OF RUIN (3.5)

GNASHING

Armor with this property bites at a foe that grapples you.
Lore: A character who makes a DC 20 Knowledge (history) check knows that the first suit of gnashing armor was created by the human cleric Ferstal, a worshiper of Tiamat. Her suit of gnashing full plate featured carvings of dragon heads.

Description: This armor has images of many different faces carved into it.

The visages show expressions of vicious cruelty. One bares its clenched teeth in a snarl; another's mouth is open as if to bite.

In most cultures, gnashing armor is crafted to look like the region's main terrors: devils, demons, mythological creatures, or popular local or regional villains.

For instance, gnashing armor made by humans living in the Nelanther Isles would show scarred and vicious fearsers or fearsome ogres.

Activation: A suit of gnashing armor automatically bites any opponent that is grappling the wearer.

Effect: When the wearer of a suit of gnashing armor is grappling, the carvings of faces animate and begin to bite, striving to tear at the opponent.

The suit deals 1d6 points of damage to each grappling foe. The damage is considered piercing, slashing, and bludgeoning.

Aura/Caster Level: Strong transmutation; CL 11th.

Construction: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, animate objects, variable gp, variable XP, variable days (depending on the armor being improved).

Weight: —.

Price: +1 bonus.

HIDEOUS

A suit of armor or a shield with this property helps you intimidate your enemies.

Description: Armors or shields with this property are embellished with scalps, skulls, bones, dried viscera, and other countless horrors.

This armor emits a faint odor of rancid meat and a faint illusory miasma of flies.

The flies give off a buzzing sound seem to taste the embellishments of flesh and bone.

Activation: Armor or a shield with the hideous special ability automatically grants its wearer its bonus.

Effect: Hideous armor provides a +5 competence bonus on Intimidate checks and a -2 penalty on Diplomacy checks.

Aura/Caster Level: Faint conjuration; CL 4th.

Construction: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, creator must have 5 ranks of Intimidate, +1,875 gp, +150 XP, +4 days (add to the cost of the armor being improved).

Variants: Two more powerful versions of the hideous special ability are sometimes used.

The improved version grants a +10 competence bonus on Intimidate checks, costs +7,500 gp, +600 XP, +15 days and has a market price of +15,000 gp.

The greater special ability grants a +15 competence bonus on Intimidate checks, costs +16,875 gp, +1,350 XP, +34 days and has a market price of +33,750 gp.

Weight: —.

Price: +3,750 gp.

OCULAR

A suit of armor or a shield with this property grants all-around vision.

Lore: A DC 25 Knowledge (religion) check yields the fact that long ago, a small cult of humanoids living in Skullport venerated the Great Mother and her progeny.

These beholder worshipers endeavored to create a variety of items to make them more like their idols.

Description: Armor and shields with this property feature multiple small eyes on stalks.

At any one moment, some of the eyes are open and some are closed.

Activation: Armor or a shield with the ocular ability automatically grants its wearer its bonus.

Effect: This property grants the wearer all-around vision, making her exceptionally alert.

The many eyes provide a +4 competence bonus on Spot and Search checks, and the wearer can't be flanked.

A blindness spell cast on the wearer negates this property.

Aura/Caster Level: Strong abjuration; CL 15th.

Construction: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, arcane eye, variable gp, variable XP, variable days (depending on the armor being improved).

Weight: —.

Price: +2 bonus.

WARY

A suit of armor or a shield with this property improves your rogue-like ability to be responsive to flanking enemies.

Description: Armors or shields with this property tend to be nondescript.

Prerequisite: Improved uncanny dodge ability.

Activation: Armor or a shield with the wary ability only functions if its wearer has improved uncanny dodge.

Effect: This armor property increases your effective rogue level by four with regard to being flanked.

Aura/Caster Level: Faint transmutation; CL 5th.

Construction: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, cat's grace, +2,500 gp, +200 XP, +5 days (add to the cost of the armor being improved).

Weight: —.

Price: +5,000 gp.

CITYSCAPE (3.5)

SENTINEL

Price: +15,120 gp

Caster Level: 7th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 13) divination

Activation: Standard (command)

This shield almost gleams, polished as it is to a mirror-like sheen.

The sentinel ability is almost always added to shields, though it is technically possible to add it to the helm or breastplate of a suit of armor. Each sentinel shield (or armor) is irrevocably tied to a small mirror, which was created as part of the process at the same time as the shield itself.

As a standard action, the bearer of the shield can cause an image of whatever the shield is facing to appear in the mirror, not unlike a scrying spell.

The person with the mirror sees everything in a 120-foot cone in front of the shield (or less if the ambient light reduces visibility below 120 feet).

This effect is blocked by any effect that blocks scrying.

The connection can be severed as a move action.

This ability can be activated three times per day for up to 7 minutes at a time.

If either part of the pair—the shield and the mirror—is destroyed, this ability is lost.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, scrying.

Cost to Create: 7,560 gp, 605 XP.

COMPLETE ADVENTURER (3.5)

BEASTSKIN

First created by powerful druids, armor with this special ability is particularly useful to characters of that sort. Whenever you use the wild shape class feature while wearing a suit of armor with the beastskin property, you can expend an additional daily use of your wild shape ability to cause the armor to be transformed with you. When used in this manner, the beastskin armor becomes a suit of armor fitted for your new form rather than simply merging with your body.

The armor continues to grant its armor bonus, applying the appropriate armor check penalty, slowing your movement rate, and otherwise functioning as a suit of armor fitted to the new form.

The armor's weight increases or decreases to match your new size (and shape, if you assume a quadrupedal form) and therefore might affect your carrying capacity differently than it does in your natural form.

If in your natural form you are proficient with the type of armor to which the beastskin quality has been supplied, then you are proficient with the beastskin armor when you are transformed, regardless of what shape you take.

This special ability can be applied only to armor, not to shields.

Strong transmutation; CL 13th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, ironwood; Price +2 bonus.

FOCUSED

A focused shield helps you anticipate your enemy's moves in battle, helps you see through feints and similar moves, and provides enhanced benefits when you are facing only one creature.

A focused shield grants a +10 circumstance bonus on your Sense Motive check that opposes a Bluff check made to feint.

In addition, any time when you are threatened by only one creature, the shield bonus to your AC provided by a focused shield improves by 1.

This special ability can be applied only to shields, not to armor.

COMPLETE ARCANE (3.5)

DEATH WARD

Once per day, someone wearing armor enhanced by this special ability who is struck with a death effect (death spells, magical death effects, energy drain, and any negative energy effects such as those from inflict spells or chill touch) can ignore the effect.

Moderate necromancy; CL 7th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, death ward; Price +1 bonus.

MAGIC-EATING

This type of armor is normally decorated with spirals and fanged mouths.

It functions like armor of spell resistance with spell resistance 13, except that any spell that targets the wearer and fails to overcome the armor's spell resistance is consumed by the armor, giving the wearer 1d8 temporary hit points to a maximum of 8 temporary hit points at any time (no matter how many spells the armor consumes).

Temporary hit points gained in this fashion last for up to 1 hour.

Strong transmutation; CL 16th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, limited wish, spell resistance; Price +3 bonus.

PROOF AGAINST TRANSMUTATION

A character wearing this armor is impervious to any transmutation effect that would alter his form, including polymorph and petrification effects, as well as disintegration (disintegrate can still reduce the wearer to -10 hit points, but doesn't turn his remains to dust).

The wearer can choose to allow specific spells to bypass the armor's protection (so as to cast transmutation spells on himself, for example, or to receive the benefit of polymorph or enlarge person from an allied spellcaster).

Strong abjuration; CL 12th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, spell immunity; Price +5 bonus.

COMPLETE WARRIOR (3.5)

ANTI-IMPACT

Armor with the anti-impact quality is designed to cushion the blow from massive blunt traumas.

Anti-impact armor doesn't give extra protection against weapon damage (beyond its AC bonus), but bludgeoning damage that affects all or most of the entire body (such as constriction and falling damage) is halved.

Faint Abjuration; CL 4th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, feather fall; Price +2,000 gp.

AXEBLOCK

This armor is magically enhanced to turn away slashing weapons such as axes and most swords.

The wearer gains damage reduction 5/bludgeoning or piercing.

If a single shield or suit of armor has two of the three blocking armor qualities (axeblock, hammerblock, and spearblock), it grants its owner just 5 points of damage reduction by whatever damage type appears twice. For example, a +1 chain shirt with the axeblock (DR 5/bludgeoning or piercing) and hammerblock (DR 5/piercing or slashing) special abilities only provides DR 5/piercing.

Moderate abjuration; CL 11th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, polymorph any object; Price +2 bonus.

HAMMERBLOCK

Armor with this quality functions the same as axeblock armor, except that it provides damage reduction of 5/piercing or slashing.

Moderate abjuration; CL 11th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, polymorph any object; Price +2 bonus.

SPEARBLOCK

Armor with this quality functions the same as axeblock armor, except that it provides damage reduction of 5/bludgeoning or slashing.

Moderate abjuration; CL 11th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, polymorph any object; Price +2 bonus.

DEFENDERS OF THE FAITH (3.0)

ABSORBING

Armor and shields with this enchantment are always a dull black, and appear to possess depths that couldn't exist.

A suit of armor or a shield with this enchantment absorbs ability-draining and level-draining attacks.

It can absorb as many points of ability damage or levels drained per day as its enhancement bonus.

It allows Fortitude saves against energy-drain attacks that normally don't allow such saves.

A successful save means the attack has half effect.

Absorbing armor or a shield does not change saves against attacks that already allow them.

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, restoration; Market Price: +3 bonus.

ANTIPATHY

A suit of armor or shield with this enchantment has the supernatural ability set by its creator to affect creatures either by alignment or by a specific creature type (see the antipathy spell in the Player's Handbook).

The power is usable once per day as a standard action.

Creatures of the specified type within 60 feet must make a Will save (DC 24) or flee this zone and not voluntarily reenter it for 2 hours.

Affected creatures within the zone suffer a -4 penalty to Dexterity as long as they remain in the affected area.

The zone is mobile with the wearer.

If the wearer moves so a creature that fled is once more in the zone, then the creature is allowed another saving throw.

Caster Level: 15th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, antipathy; Market Price: +4 bonus.

AQUATIC

Armor and shields with this enchantment appear streamlined and possess a greenish glint.

A suit of armor or shield with this enchantment enables its wearer to move freely through water without the need for Swim checks.

Drowning rules still apply (see The Drowning Rule, page 85 of the DUNGEON MASTER'S Guide), unless the item is also enchanted with water breathing.

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, freedom of movement, water breathing; Market Price: +2 bonus, or +3 bonus with water breathing.

BLINDING

Armor and shields with this enchantment flash with a brilliant light up to twice per day on command of the wearer or wielder.

All within 20 feet except the wearer or wielder must make a Reflex saving throw (DC 14) or be blinded for 1d4 rounds.

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, blindness/deafness, searing light; Market Price: +1 bonus.

CALLED

This powerful enchantment allows the owner to utter a command word and call the armor or shield to her as a standard action.

Armor appears correctly donned at the end of the action, or a shield appears on the proper arm.

The armor or shield appears completely normal otherwise.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, teleport; Market Price: +1 bonus.

CHARMING

Armor or shields with this enchantment appear designed with beauty in mind as well as functionality.

The design of the armor enhances the physical beauty of whoever wears it.

An opponent who strikes the wearer of this armor or bearer of this shield must save against the appropriate charm spell (charm monster or charm person or animal) for the type of opponent.

An opponent who successfully strikes the wearer in melee receives a +4 bonus on the save.

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, charm monster, charm person or animal; Market Price: +3 bonus.

COMMAND

This armor or shield always appears brilliant and gleaming, no matter what the conditions and despite all attempts to paint over or obscure it.

Coveted by military leaders of all sorts, this armor or shield carries a powerful aura that gives a +4 competence bonus to Charisma and a +2 morale bonus on Will saves to all allies within 30 feet.

The enchantment also makes the possessor very noticeable, giving a –6 penalty on Hide checks.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, 5 levels of spellcasting ability; Market Price: +2 bonus.

DAYLIGHT

A suit of armor or a shield with this enchantment glows with the brilliant light of a daylight spell for up to 30 minutes a day.

A command word activates and deactivates the enchantment, and is usually inscribed on the inside of the armor or the back of the shield.

Except when glowing, this armor or shield appears completely normal.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, daylight; Market Price: +2 bonus.

ENERGY DRAIN

A suit of armor or a shield with this enchantment allows the bearer to drain levels with the wearer's touch attack (if armor) or with a shield bash (if shield).

Other than the requirement of a touch attack, the magical effect is exactly like an enervation spell cast by a 7th-level wizard.

Such armor or shield always has the face of a snarling vampire carved on the front of it.

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, enervation; Market Price: +2 bonus.

ETHEREAL

The two variations on this enchantment are for suits of armor or shields.

The first allows the bearer to use the effect of an ethereal jaunt spell as if cast by a 9th-level cleric.

The second allows the bearer and anyone touching him to become ethereal as if an 11th-level cleric cast etherealness. The armor or shield appears insubstantial and unreal, except on the Ethereal Plane where it appears completely normal.

Self Only: Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, ethereal jaunt; Market Price: +3 bonus.

All in Contact: Caster Level: 11th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, etherealness; Market Price: +4 bonus.

FEARSOME

A suit of armor or a shield with this enchantment creates an aura of fear around the wearer as by a 7th-level wizard casting fear.

This aura affects all opponents within 40 feet of the wearer. This armor or shield appears completely normal, except to those who fail their save.

Then the bearer appears to be a creature from the opponent's worst nightmares.

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, fear; Market Price: +2 bonus.

FEATHERED

A suit of armor or a shield with this enchantment appears to be created from thousands of iridescent feathers.

This characteristic has no effect on the armor's or shield's weight, armor check penalty, or other statistics.

The enchantment allows the wearer to fly up to 50 minutes per day.

In all other respects it functions as if the wearer cast fly on herself, allowing a speed of 90 feet (or 60 feet if the armor is medium or heavy) with good maneuverability.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, air walk; Market Price: +2 bonus.

ICE

A suit of armor or a shield with this enchantment appears to be carved from ice.

The enchantment has two effects.

First, it simulates a slow spell cast by a 5th-level wizard.

This affects the first five opponents to come within 30 feet of the wearer.

Second, the wearer may invoke a ray of frost as if a 5th-level wizard, up to five times per day.

The ray springs from the front of the armor or shield.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, slow, ray of frost; Market Price: +3 bonus.

SACRED

A suit of armor or a shield with this enchantment has no effect unless the wearer has the ability to turn or rebuke undead.

In that case, the wearer turns or rebukes undead two levels higher than she would without the enchantment.

Armor or a shield with this enchantment is always specific to a deity and features the deity's holy symbol prominently.

Caster Level: 8th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, ability to turn or rebuke undead; Market Price: +2 bonus.

SPEED

This armor or shield enchantment provides a +4 haste bonus to AC and gives the wearer an extra partial action every round, as the haste spell.

This armor seems to be constantly vibrating, always appearing blurred.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, haste; Market Price: +3 bonus.

UNDEAD CONTROLLING

The wearer of a suit of armor or a shield with this enchantment may control up to 26 HD of undead per day, as the control undead spell.

At dawn each day, the wearer loses control of any undead still under his sway.

Armor or a shield with this power appears to be made of bone; this feature is entirely decorative and has no other effect on the armor.

Caster Level: 13th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, control undead; Market Price: +4 bonus.

UNDEAD DISRUPTING

The wearer of a suit of armor or a shield with this enchantment may attack undead as with a disrupt undead spell cast by a 5th-level wizard up to four times per day.

Armor and shields with this ability usually display prominently the holy symbol of a good deity.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, disrupt undead; Market Price: +2 bonus.

DRAGONS OF FAERÛN (3.5)

COMMAND

A suit of armor or a shield with this special ability bestows a dignified and commanding aura upon its owner.

The wearer gains a +2 competence bonus on all Charisma-based checks.

The wearer also gains a +2 competence bonus to his Leadership score.

Friendly troops within 360 feet of the user become braver than normal (for example, more willing than normal to follow a leader into battle against dangerous foes).

Since the effect arises in great part from the distinctiveness of the armor, if the wearer hides or conceals himself in anyway, the command effect does not function.

Strong enchantment; CL 15th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, mass charm monster; Price +3 bonus.

FEARSOME

This suit of armor or shield creates an aura of fear around the wearer (as the fear spell, CL 7th).

This aura affects all opponents within 40 feet of the wearer. The armor or shield appears completely normal, except to those who fail their saves.

Those afflicted see a creature from their worst nightmares in place of the wearer.

Moderate necromancy; CL 7th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, fear; Price +2 bonus.

DROW OF THE UNDERDARK (3.5)

DARK

Price: +8,000 gp

Property: Armor

Caster Level: 8th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 19) illusion

Activation: —

This armor has a dull appearance.

It does not reflect light, and it maintains its color regardless of lighting conditions.

Dark armor is specially crafted to blend in with its surroundings when viewed with darkvision.

You gain a +5 circumstance bonus on Hide checks made to conceal yourself from creatures with darkvision.

In addition (when fighting such creatures), you gain concealment.

You lose these benefits whenever you are in an area of bright light.

Prerequisite: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, invisibility.

Cost to Create: 4,000 gp, 320 XP, 8 days.

FEARSOME

Price: +5,000 gp

Property: Armor

Caster Level: 3rd

Aura: Faint; (DC 16) necromancy

Activation: —

This foul armor has a sinister appearance.

It is dark, almost black, and covered with sharp barbs and spikes.

Fearsome armor functions as if it has armor spikes (PH 124) if the armor doesn't have this feature already.

In addition, when wearing this armor, you gain a +5 enhancement bonus on Intimidate checks, and you can demoralize opponents (PH 76) as a move action instead of a standard action.

Prerequisite: Craft Magic Arms and Armor.

Cost to Create: 2,500 gp, 200 XP, 5 days.

SPIDER BOON

Price: +9,000 gp

Property: Armor

Caster Level: 8th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 20) transmutation

Activation: Swift (command)

This armor is etched with spiderweb patterns.

It is slightly slippery to the touch.

Spider boon armor allows you to navigate through the sticky strands of webbing.

You gain a +4 enhancement bonus on Climb and Escape Artist checks.

Also, the webs of monstrous spiders or spiderkin (such as ettercaps) cannot affect you.

Three times per day, you can increase the enhancement bonus on Climb checks to +8 and gain a climb speed equal to your base land speed.

When under this effect, you can take 10 on Climb checks even if rushed or threatened.

This function lasts for 8 rounds.

Prerequisite: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, freedom of movement, spider climb, drow.

Cost to Create: 4,500 gp, 360 XP, 9 days.

SPIDER BOUND

Price: +2,500 gp (buckler), +5,000 gp (light shield), +10,000 gp (heavy shield), +15,000 gp (tower shield)

Property: Shield

Caster Level: 12th

Aura: Strong; (DC 21) conjuration

Activation: Standard (command)
 This shield resembles a large spider.
 The small rubies used for its eyes burn with a hellish light.
 Once per day, you can speak a command word to cause your shield to transform into a fiendish spider.
 The spider's size depends on the type of shield, as shown on the following table.

Shield	Fiendish Monstrous Spider Size
Buckler	Small
Light shield	Medium
Heavy shield	Large
Tower shield	Huge

The spider follows your mental commands.
 It remains for 10 rounds or until reduced to 0 hit points, at which point it instantly reverts back to a shield.
 While the spider is activated, you lose your shield bonus to AC.
Prerequisite: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, summon monster I (buckler), summon monster II (light shield), summon monster IV (heavy shield), summon monster VI (tower shield), drow.
Cost to Create: 1,250 gp, 100 XP, 3 days (buckler); 2,500 gp, 200 XP, 5 days (light shield); 5,000 gp, 400 XP, 10 days (heavy shield); 7,500 gp, 600 XP, 15 days (tower shield).

DUNGEON MASTER'S GUIDE 3.0 (3.0)

ACID RESISTANCE

A suit of armor or a shield with this enchantment normally has a dull gray appearance.
 The armor absorbs the first 10 points of acid damage per round that the wearer would normally take (similar to the resist elements spell).
Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, resist elements; Market Price: +3 bonus.

ANIMATED

Upon command, an animated shield floats within 2 feet of the wielder, protecting her as if she were using it herself but freeing up both her hands.
 Only one shield can protect a character at a time.
Caster Level: 12th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, animate objects; Market Price: +2 bonus.

ARROW DEFLECTION

This shield protects the wielder as if he had the Deflect Arrows feat.
 Once per round when he would normally be struck by a ranged weapon, he can make a Reflex saving throw (DC 20).
 If the ranged weapon has an enhancement bonus, the DC increases by that amount.

If he succeeds, the shield deflects the weapon.
 He must be aware of the attack and not flat-footed.
 Attempting to deflect a ranged weapon doesn't count as an action.
 Exceptional ranged weapons, such as boulders hurled by giants or Melf's acid arrows, can't be deflected.
Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, shield; Market Price: +2 bonus.

BASHING

This shield is made to make a shield bash.
 No matter what the size of the attacker, a large bashing shield deals 1d8 points of damage and a small bashing shield deals 1d6 points of damage.
 The shield acts as a +1 weapon when used to bash.
 (Tower shields cannot be bashing shields).
Caster Level: 8th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, bull's strength; Market Price: +1 bonus.

BLINDING

A shield with this enchantment flashes with a brilliant light up to twice per day upon command of the wielder.
 All within 20 feet except the wielder must make a Reflex saving throw (DC 14) or be blinded for 1d4 rounds.
Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, blindness/deafness, searing light; Market Price: +1 bonus.

COLD RESISTANCE

A suit of armor or a shield with this enchantment normally has a bluish, icy hue or is adorned with furs and shaggy pelts.
 The armor absorbs the first 10 points of cold damage per round that the wearer would normally take (similar to the resist elements spell).
Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, resist elements; Market Price: +3 bonus.

ETHEREALNESS

On command, this enchantment allows the wearer of the armor to become ethereal (see the ethereal jaunt spell) once per day.
 The character can remain ethereal for as long as desired, but once he returns to normal, he cannot become ethereal again that day.
Caster Level: 15th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, ethereal jaunt; Market Price: +5 bonus.

FIRE RESISTANCE

A suit of armor with this enchantment normally has a reddish hue and often is decorated with a draconic motif.
 The armor absorbs the first 10 points of heat damage per round that the wearer would normally take (similar to the resist elements spell).
Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, resist elements; Market Price: +3 bonus.

FORTIFICATION

This suit of armor or shield produces a magical force that protects vital areas of the wearer more effectively. When a critical hit or sneak attack is scored on the wearer, there is a chance that the critical hit or sneak attack is negated and damage is instead rolled normally:

Fortification Type	Chance for Normal Damage	Market Price
Light	25%	+1 bonus
Moderate	75%	+3 bonus
Heavy	100%	+5 bonus

Caster Level: 13th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, limited wish or miracle; Market Price: Varies (see above).

GHOST TOUCH

This armor or shield seems almost translucent. Both its enhancement bonus and its armor bonus count against the attacks of incorporeal creatures. Further, it can be picked up, moved, and worn by incorporeal creatures at any time. Incorporeal creatures gain the armor or shield's enhancement bonus against both corporeal and incorporeal attacks, and they can still pass freely through solid objects. Caster Level: 15th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, ethereality; Market Price: +3 bonus.

GLAMERED

A suit of armor with this capability appears normal. Upon command, the armor changes shape and form to assume the appearance of a normal set of clothing. The armor retains all its properties (including weight) when glamered. Only a true seeing spell or similar magic reveals the true nature of the armor when disguised. Caster Level: 10th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, alter self; Market Price: +1 bonus.

INVULNERABILITY

This suit of armor grants the wearer damage reduction of 5/+1. Caster Level: 18th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, stoneskin, wish or miracle; Market Price: +3 bonus.

LIGHTNING RESISTANCE

A suit of armor or a shield with this enchantment normally has a bluish hue and often bears a storm or lightning motif. The armor absorbs the first 10 points of electrical damage per round that the wearer would normally take (similar to the resist elements spell). Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, resist elements; Market Price: +3 bonus.

REFLECTION

This shield seems like a mirror. Its surface is completely reflective.

Once per day as a free action, it can be called on to reflect a spell back at its caster exactly like the spell turning spell. Caster Level: 14th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, spell turning; Market Price: +5 bonus.

SHADOW

This type of armor is jet black and blurs the wearer whenever she tries to hide, granting a +10 circumstance bonus to Hide checks (essentially a bonus for an extremely favorable condition). This bonus does not stack with the Hide bonus granted by a cloak of elvenkind or obscuring or blinding-based Hide check bonuses. (The armor's armor check penalty still applies normally). Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, invisibility; Market Price: +1 bonus.

SILENT MOVES

This armor is well oiled and magically constructed so that it not only makes little sound, but it dampens sound around it. It adds a +10 circumstance bonus to its wearer's Move Silently checks. (The armor's armor check penalty still applies normally). Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, silence; Market Price: +1 bonus.

SLICK

Slick armor seems coated at all times with a slightly greasy oil. It adds a +10 circumstance bonus to its wearer's Escape Artist checks. (The armor's armor check penalty still applies normally). Caster Level: 4th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, grease; Market Price: +1 bonus.

SONIC RESISTANCE

A suit of armor or a shield with this enchantment normally has a glistening appearance. The armor absorbs the first 10 points of sonic damage per round that the wearer would normally take (similar to the resist elements spell). Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, resist elements; Market Price: +3 bonus.

SPELL RESISTANCE

This enchantment grants the armor's wearer spell resistance while the armor is worn. The spell resistance can be SR 13, SR 15, SR 17, or SR 19, depending on the armor. Caster Level: 15th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, spell resistance; Market Price: +2 bonus (SR 13), +3 bonus (SR 15), +4 bonus (SR 17), or +5 bonus (SR 19).

DUNGEON MASTER'S GUIDE 1 3.5 (3.5)

ACID RESISTANCE

A suit of armor or a shield with this property normally has a dull gray appearance.

The armor absorbs the first 10 points of acid damage per attack that the wearer would normally take (similar to the resist energy spell).

Faint abjuration; CL 3rd; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, resist energy; Price +18,000 gp.

ACID RESISTANCE, IMPROVED

As acid resistance, except it absorbs the first 20 points of acid damage per attack.

Moderate abjuration; CL 7th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, resist energy; Price +42,000 gp.

ACID RESISTANCE, GREATER

As acid resistance, except it absorbs the first 30 points of acid damage per attack.

Moderate abjuration; CL 11th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, resist energy; Price +66,000 gp.

ANIMATED

Upon command, an animated shield floats within 2 feet of the wielder, protecting her as if she were using it herself but freeing up both her hands.

Only one shield can protect a character at a time.

A character with an animated shield still takes any penalties associated with shield use, such as armor check penalty, arcane spell failure chance, and nonproficiency.

Strong transmutation; CL 12th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, animate objects; Price +2 bonus.

ARROW CATCHING

A shield with this ability attracts ranged weapons to it. It has a deflection bonus of +1 against ranged weapons because projectiles and thrown weapons veer toward it. Additionally, any projectile or thrown weapon aimed at a target within 5 feet of the shield's wearer diverts from its original target and targets the shield's bearer instead.

(If the wielder has total cover relative to the attacker, the projectile or thrown weapon is not diverted).

Additionally, those attacking the wearer with ranged weapons ignore any miss chances that would normally apply.

Projectiles and thrown weapons that have an enhancement bonus higher than the shield's base AC bonus are not diverted to the wearer (but the shield's increased AC bonus still applies against these weapons).

The wielder can activate or deactivate this ability with a command word.

Moderate abjuration; CL 8th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, entropic shield; Price +1 bonus.

ARROW DEFLECTION

This shield protects the wielder as if he had the Deflect Arrows feat.

Once per round when he would normally be struck by a ranged weapon, he can make a DC 20 Reflex save.

If the ranged weapon has an enhancement bonus, the DC increases by that amount.

If he succeeds, the shield deflects the weapon.

He must be aware of the attack and not flat-footed.

Attempting to deflect a ranged weapon doesn't count as an action.

Exceptional ranged weapons, such as boulders hurled by giants or Melf's acid arrows, can't be deflected.

Faint abjuration; CL 5th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, shield; Price +2 bonus.

BASHING

A shield with this special ability is designed to perform a shield bash.

A bashing shield deals damage as if it were a weapon of two size categories larger (a Medium light shield thus deals 1d6 points of damage and a Medium heavy shield deals 1d8 points of damage).

The shield acts as a +1 weapon when used to bash.

(Only light and heavy shields can have this ability).

Moderate transmutation; CL 8th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, bull's strength; Price +1 bonus.

BLINDING

A shield with this ability flashes with a brilliant light up to twice per day upon command of the wielder.

Anyone within 20 feet except the wielder must make a DC 14 Reflex save or be blinded for 1d4 rounds.

Moderate evocation; CL 7th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, searing light; Price +1 bonus.

COLD RESISTANCE

A suit of armor or a shield with this property normally has a bluish, icy hue or is adorned with furs and shaggy pelts.

The armor absorbs the first 10 points of cold damage per attack that the wearer would normally take (similar to the resist energy spell).

Faint abjuration; CL 3rd; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, resist energy; Price +18,000 gp.

COLD RESISTANCE, IMPROVED

As cold resistance, except it absorbs the first 20 points of cold damage per attack.

Moderate abjuration; CL 7th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, resist energy; Price +42,000 gp.

COLD RESISTANCE, GREATER

As cold resistance, except it absorbs the first 30 points of cold damage per attack.

Moderate abjuration; CL 11th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, resist energy; Price +66,000 gp.

ELECTRICITY RESISTANCE

A suit of armor or a shield with this property normally has a bluish hue and often bears a storm or lightning motif.

The armor absorbs the first 10 points of electricity damage per attack that the wearer would normally take (similar to the resist energy spell).

Faint abjuration; CL 3rd; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, resist energy; Price +18,000 gp.

ELECTRICITY RESISTANCE, IMPROVED

As electricity resistance, except it absorbs the first 20 points of electricity damage per attack.

Moderate abjuration; CL 7th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, resist energy; Price +42,000 gp.

ELECTRICITY RESISTANCE, GREATER

As electricity resistance, except it absorbs the first 30 points of electricity damage per attack.

Moderate abjuration; CL 11th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, resist energy; Price +66,000 gp.

ETHEREALNESS

On command, this ability allows the wearer of the armor to become ethereal (as the ethereal jaunt spell) once per day.

The character can remain ethereal for as long as desired, but once he returns to normal, he cannot become ethereal again that day.

Strong transmutation; CL 13th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, ethereal jaunt; Price +49,000 gp.

FIRE RESISTANCE

A suit of armor with this ability normally has a reddish hue and often is decorated with a draconic motif.

The armor absorbs the first 10 points of fire damage per attack that the wearer would normally take (similar to the resist energy spell).

Faint abjuration; CL 3rd; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, resist energy; Price +18,000 gp.

FIRE RESISTANCE, IMPROVED

As fire resistance, except it absorbs the first 20 points of fire damage per attack.

Moderate abjuration; CL 7th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, resist energy; Price +42,000 gp.

FIRE RESISTANCE, GREATER

As fire resistance, except it absorbs the first 30 points of fire damage per attack.

Moderate abjuration; CL 11th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, resist energy; Price +66,000 gp.

FORTIFICATION

This suit of armor or shield produces a magical force that protects vital areas of the wearer more effectively.

When a critical hit or sneak attack is scored on the wearer, there is a chance that the critical hit or sneak attack is negated and damage is instead rolled normally.

Fortification Type	Chance for Normal Damage	Base Price Modifier
Light	25%	+1 bonus
Moderate	75%	+3 bonus
Heavy	100%	+5 bonus

Strong abjuration; CL 13th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, limited wish or miracle; Price varies (see above).

GHOST TOUCH

This armor or shield seems almost translucent.

Both its enhancement bonus and its armor bonus count against the attacks of incorporeal creatures.

It can be picked up, moved, and worn by incorporeal creatures at any time.

Incorporeal creatures gain the armor or shield's enhancement bonus against both corporeal and incorporeal attacks, and they can still pass freely through solid objects.

Strong transmutation; CL 15th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, etherealness; Price +3 bonus.

GLAMERED

A suit of armor with this ability appears normal.

Upon command, the armor changes shape and form to assume the appearance of a normal set of clothing.

The armor retains all its properties (including weight) when glamered.

Only a true seeing spell or similar magic reveals the true nature of the armor when disguised.

Moderate illusion; CL 10th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, disguise self; Price +2,700 gp.

INVULNERABILITY

This suit of armor grants the wearer damage reduction of 5/magic.

Strong abjuration and perhaps evocation (if miracle is used); CL 18th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, stoneskin, wish or miracle; Price +3 bonus.

REFLECTING

This shield seems like a mirror.

Its surface is completely reflective.

Once per day, it can be called on to reflect a spell back at its caster exactly like the spell turning spell.

Strong abjuration; CL 14th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, spell turning; Price +5 bonus.

SHADOW

This armor is jet black and blurs the wearer whenever she tries to hide, granting a +5 competence bonus on Hide checks.

(The armor's armor check penalty still applies normally).

Faint illusion; CL 5th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, invisibility; Price +3,750 gp.

SHADOW, IMPROVED

As shadow, except it grants a +10 competence bonus on Hide checks.
Moderate illusion; CL 10th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, invisibility; Price +15,000 gp.

SHADOW, GREATER

As shadow, except it grants a +15 competence bonus on Hide checks.
Moderate illusion; CL 15th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, invisibility; Price +33,750 gp.

SILENT MOVES

This armor is well oiled and magically constructed so that it not only makes little sound, but it dampens sound around it.

It provides a +5 competence bonus on its wearer's Move Silently checks.
(The armor's armor check penalty still applies normally).
Faint illusion; CL 5th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, silence; Price +3,750 gp.

SILENT MOVES, IMPROVED

As silent moves, except it grants a +10 competence bonus on Move Silently checks.
Moderate illusion; CL 10th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, silence; Price +15,000 gp.

SILENT MOVES, GREATER

As silent moves, except it grants a +15 competence bonus on Move Silently checks.
Moderate illusion; CL 15th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, silence; Price +33,750 gp.

SLICK

Slick armor seems coated at all times with a slightly greasy oil.

It provides a +5 competence bonus on its wearer's Escape Artist checks.
(The armor's armor check penalty still applies normally).
Faint conjuration; CL 4th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, grease; Price +3,750 gp.

SLICK, IMPROVED

As slick, except it grants a +10 competence bonus on Escape Artist checks.
Moderate conjuration; CL 10th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, grease; Price +15,000 gp.

SLICK, GREATER

As slick, except it grants a +15 competence bonus on Escape Artist checks.
Moderate conjuration; CL 15th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, grease; Price +33,750 gp.

SONIC RESISTANCE

A suit of armor or a shield with this property normally has a glistening appearance.

The armor absorbs the first 10 points of sonic damage per attack that the wearer would normally take (similar to the resist energy spell).

Faint abjuration; CL 3rd; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, resist energy; Price +18,000 gp.

SONIC RESISTANCE, IMPROVED

As sonic resistance, except it absorbs the first 20 points of sonic damage per attack.

Moderate abjuration; CL 7th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, resist energy; Price +42,000 gp.

SONIC RESISTANCE, GREATER

As sonic resistance, except it absorbs the first 30 points of sonic damage per attack.

Moderate abjuration; CL 11th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, resist energy; Price +66,000 gp.

SPELL RESISTANCE

This property grants the armor's wearer spell resistance while the armor is worn.

The spell resistance can be 13, 15, 17, or 19, depending on the armor.

Strong abjuration; CL 15th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, spell resistance; Price +2 bonus (SR 13), +3 bonus (SR 15), +4 bonus (SR 17), or +5 bonus (SR 19).

UNDEAD CONTROLLING

The wearer of a suit of armor or a shield with this property may control up to 26 HD of undead per day, as the control undead spell.

At dawn each day, the wearer loses control of any undead still under his sway.

Armor or a shield with this ability appears to be made of bone; this feature is entirely decorative and has no other effect on the armor.

Strong necromancy; CL 13th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, control undead; Price +49,000 gp.

WILD

The wearer of a suit of armor or a shield with this ability preserves his armor bonus (and any enhancement bonus) while in a wild shape.

Armor and shields with this ability usually appear to be made covered in leaf patterns.

While the wearer is in a wild shape, the armor cannot be seen.

Moderate transmutation; CL 9th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, baleful polymorph; Price +3 bonus.

ENERGY DEFENSE [SYNERGY]

This special ability enhances armor that already provides potent protection against a certain type of energy. Specifically, any energy against which the armor would normally provide protection is redirected to give the wearer additional defensive capabilities against more mundane attacks.

Description: Energy defense armor bears a motif similar to that of energy resistance armor.

However, certain elements of the armor—such as flanges, spikes, and other decorations—indicate that it has some offensive capabilities as well.

Upon activation, the energy defense ability wreathes the wearer's body in the element from which its energy resistance property already provides protection.

Creatures that attack the wearer in melee are struck by leaping darts of energy that dance from the armor's surface to their weapons.

Prerequisite: The energy defense ability can be added only to armor or a shield that already has the energy resistance, improved energy resistance, or greater energy resistance special ability.

Activation: The wearer activates the energy defense ability as an immediate action in response to an attack that deals energy damage of the type that her armor already resists. Thus, if a spell or effect that deals acid damage targets the wearer of acid resistance armor that has the energy defense ability, she can take an immediate action to generate an acid shield around herself.

When such an attack occurs, the wearer chooses whether or not to activate the ability, and she can choose to activate it even if she is flat-footed or unaware of the source of the attack.

She can also choose to activate it as a standard action in preparation for an attack, if desired.

(See page 237 for the definition of an immediate action).

The wearer cannot activate the energy defense property in response to an attack that deals no damage of the type that the armor could normally resist.

Effect: The energy defense ability increases the armor's energy resistance by 2.

Thus, acid resistance armor that normally grants resistance to acid 10 now grants resistance to acid 12.

In addition, any creature that damages the wearer with a natural or manufactured melee weapon deals normal damage and also takes 1d6+10 points of energy damage of the type from which the armor provides protection.

Thus, in response to an attack that dealt acid damage, the wearer would be wreathed in acidic energy, and any creature that hit her with a natural or melee weapon would deal normal damage, but also take 1d6+10 points of acid damage.

Attacks with weapons that have exceptional reach are exempt from this damage.

The energy defense effect is usable once per day, regardless of its method of activation.

The effect lasts for 10 rounds or until the wearer dismisses it (though doing so wastes any unused duration).

Once the effect ends, it is not available again for 24 hours. Aura/Caster Level: Moderate abjuration and evocation; CL 10th.

Construction: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, fire shield, resist energy.

Price: +3 bonus.

ENERGY IMMUNITY

This armor renders the wearer impervious to a specific type of energy damage determined on activation.

Because the armor can be activated in response to such an attack, it minimizes the wearer's risk of taking energy damage of any sort.

Description: Armor with the energy immunity special ability is decorated in elemental motifs.

No particular element is favored in the design; waves, flames, rock formations, and billows of wind are all represented equally.

When the energy immunity ability is activated, the wearer feels a rush of its power.

The exact nature of the effect depends upon which kind of energy the wearer has invoked its protection against.

He feels a rush of warmth if the armor is protecting him from cold damage, or a chill wind if it is protecting him against fire.

A metallic tang fills his mouth and nostrils if electricity protection is in force, and an acrid tang fills the air around him if acid protection has been activated.

Activation: The wearer can activate the energy immunity ability as an immediate action in response to an attack that deals energy damage.

When such an attack occurs, he chooses whether or not to activate the ability and can activate it even if he is flat-footed or unaware of the source of the attack.

He can also activate the armor as a standard action in preparation for an attack he knows is coming.

(See page 237 for the definition of an immediate action).

Effect: This armor functions normally until its energy immunity ability is activated.

At that point, the wearer gains immunity to damage from his choice of the following energy types: acid, cold, electricity, or fire.

Once the choice has been made, it cannot be changed until the ability is activated again.

The energy immunity effect is usable once per day, regardless of its method of activation.

The effect lasts for 13 minutes or until the wearer dismisses it.

Once the effect expires or is dismissed, it is not available again for 24 hours.

Aura/Caster Level: Moderate abjuration; CL 13th.

Construction: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, protection from energy.

Price: +3 bonus.

FORTIFYING DEFENSE [SYNERGY]

Fortification, already one of the most powerful armor special abilities, becomes even more intriguing with the addition of the fortifying defense synergy ability.

This power builds off the fortification quality by crippling an enemy's ability to deal damage—even against targets other than the wearer.

Description: Fortifying defense armor is built to make the wearer look like an impregnable fortress of defense.

Even light armor with this special ability looks sturdier than normal.

When armor with the fortifying defense ability negates a critical hit or sneak attack, it seems to grow around the wearer.

In contrast, the creature that made the critical hit or sneak attack against the wearer seems to wilt, as if the armor's increasing bulk were sapping its strength.

Prerequisite: The fortifying defense ability can be added only to armor or a shield that already has the light, moderate, or heavy fortification special ability.

Activation: When the armor negates the extra damage from a critical hit or sneak attack as a result of its fortification ability, the fortifying defense ability activates automatically. No action on the wearer's part is required.

Thus, the ability activates 25% of the time for light fortification armor, 50% of the time for moderate fortification armor, and 100% of the time for heavy fortification armor.

Effect: The creature whose extra damage was negated by the armor's fortification ability must immediately make a DC 20 Will save.

Failure means the armor saps some of the creature's natural combat prowess, negating its ability to deal extra damage with a critical hit or sneak attack against any target for 1d4 rounds.

The creature still deals normal damage with its weapons or natural attacks, but any threat is treated as a normal hit—that is, no roll to confirm the critical hit is permitted.

Likewise, the affected creature cannot deal sneak attack damage for the duration of the effect, although it deals normal damage for such attacks.

Aura/Caster Level: Strong abjuration; CL 15th.

Construction: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, limited wish or miracle.

Price: +3 bonus (light fortification armor), +4 bonus (moderate fortification armor), or +5 bonus (heavy fortification armor).

SLIPPERY AURA [SYNERGY]

Slippery aura armor expands on the slippery mind special ability, granting its potent effects to the wearer's allies for a short time each day.

Description: Armor with this ability features several decorative studs that radiate outward from the surface. Runes of escape surround each stud, as if the armor's power might also affect creatures around the wearer.

When the slippery aura is active, these studs seem to twinkle softly, and the runes rotate slowly around the base of each one.

Prerequisite: The slippery aura ability can be added only to armor or a shield that already has the slippery mind special ability (see below).

Activation: Activating the slippery aura is a standard action.

Effect: When the slippery aura is activated, each ally within a 10-foot-radius gains the slippery mind ability that slippery mind armor normally provides only to the wearer.

Thus, any ally within the area who fails a saving throw against an enchantment spell or effect can attempt a second save 1 round later at the same DC.

If he fails the second save, the armor grants no further retries.

This special ability has no effect on an ally who already possesses the slippery mind class ability.

The ability is usable once per day.

The effect lasts for 10 minutes, or until the wearer dismisses it (though doing so wastes any unused duration).

Once the effect ends, it is not available again for 24 hours.

Aura/Caster Level: Strong abjuration; CL 15th.

Construction: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, mind blank, +22,500 gp, +1,800 XP, +45 days.

Price: +45,000 gp.

SLIPPERY MIND

A creature wearing armor with this ability wriggles free of potent enchantment effects more easily than normal.

Description: Armor with this special ability is engraved with symbols and runes representing negation or escape. It looks like the crafter designed it specifically to aid the wearer in escaping snares of some sort.

When the ability activates, these runes and glyphs flash with a dull, white light.

Dwarf smiths create most of the armor with this ability, but they prefer not to advertise its exact power to creatures that use enchantment attacks.

Thus, they tend to leave the symbols of negation that decorate the armor's surface somewhat vague.

Activation: This armor special ability activates automatically the round after the wearer fails a saving throw against an enchantment spell or effect.

No action on the wearer's part is required.

Effect: If the wearer fails a saving throw against an enchantment spell or effect, she can attempt a second save 1 round later at the same DC.

If the wearer fails the second save, the armor grants no further retries.

This special ability has no effect on a creature that already possesses the slippery mind class ability.

Aura/Caster Level: Strong abjuration; CL 15th.

Construction: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, mind blank, +22,500 gp, +1,800 XP, +45 days.

Price: +45,000 gp.

SPELL TRAPPING [SYNERGY]

When an opponent's magical attack fails to overcome this armor's innate spell resistance, the incoming effect is stored within the armor until the wearer chooses to unleash it at a foe.

Description: This armor features the familiar symbols of warding that decorate spell resistance armor.

These particular runes, however, also seem to indicate a redirection of power—almost as if the armor could channel or direct magical energy in some way.

Spell trapping armor (or a spell trapping shield) is slightly tacky to the touch, almost as if a fine paste covered its surface.

Touching it leaves no residue on the fingers, but no amount of cleaning removes the film.

In fact, because of its slightly sticky quality, spell trapping armor is difficult to clean at all.

Prerequisite: The spell trapping ability can be added only to armor or a shield that already has the spell resistance quality.

Activation: The increase in spell resistance provided by the spell trapping ability is constantly active.

Trapping a spell that fails to overcome the armor's spell resistance, however, requires an immediate action on the wearer's part.

(See page 237 for the definition of an immediate action).

Releasing a stored spell is a standard action that provokes attacks of opportunity.

The wearer cannot activate the spell trapping ability if a spell fails to overcome spell resistance he has from another source, such as race or some other item.

Effect: The spell trapping ability increases the armor's spell resistance by 2.

Thus, armor with spell resistance 15 now grants the wearer spell resistance 17.

In addition, when a spell of 5th level or lower that targets the wearer fails to overcome the armor's spell resistance, the wearer can make an immediate action to trap it within the armor.

This ability is usable only once per day, regardless of the level of spell trapped.

The armor can hold one spell of up to 5th level at a time; the wearer can dismiss a stored spell as a standard action to make room for another one.

The stored spell is preserved as originally cast in every way, and the wearer can release it at any time.

Since the wearer cannot voluntarily fail a check to overcome spell resistance, attempts to store a spell by casting it directly into the armor are risky at best.

Aura/Caster Level: Strong abjuration and evocation; CL 15th.

Construction: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, spell resistance, imbue with spell ability.

Price: +5 bonus.

DUNGEONSCAPE (3.5)

DURABLE

To protect their valuable magic armor, many fighters add this special ability to guard against familiar dungeon hazards.

Description: Durable armor is coated with special substances that repel caustic attacks.

The surface of the armor is slick to the touch, indicating the special magical and alchemical treatments applied during its manufacture.

Prerequisite: Only metal armors can have this special ability.

Activation: The effects of durable armor automatically come into effect when needed.

No action on the wearer's part is required.

Effect: Durable armor has immunity to special attacks that would cause it to dissolve or rust, including the effects of rusting grasp (PH 273) and the touch of black puddings, gray oozes, and rust monsters.

Durable armor takes no damage from green slime or from acid, though it does not extend this protection to the wearer.

Aura/Caster Level: Moderate abjuration; CL 7th.

Construction: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, protection from energy.

Price: 500 gp.

RESTFUL

Armor with the restful special ability allows a warrior to sleep peacefully, knowing that he will be prepared if trouble finds him during the night.

Description: Armor of any type can be constructed to have this special ability, though medium and heavy armors are the most common choices.

Restful armor always seems designed for maximum comfort, with additional padding and softened fastenings. When you sleep in restful armor, a dimly glowing circle of blue runes encircles your head, emitting peaceful thoughts. Activation: The restful ability activates when you fall asleep wearing the armor.

No other action on your part is required.

Effect: Sleeping in restful armor does not cause you to become fatigued, even if the armor is medium or heavy.

Further, you can make Listen checks with a penalty of only -5 while sleeping in the armor.

If you make a successful Listen check while sleeping, you can choose to wake up or to remain asleep, depending on the noise you hear.

Aura/Caster Level: Faint abjuration; CL 5th.

Construction: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, sleep, lullaby.

Price: 500 gp.

SWARMGUARD

Any armor with this special ability protects its wearer from the hundreds of bites or stings that result from being overrun by a swarm of creatures.

Description: Swarmguard armor is precisely crafted with a bare minimum of gaps between pieces.

Delicate script is engraved around each seam that is absolutely necessary, warding it against intrusion by the tiniest of vermin.

When exposed to a swarm attack, the script glows bright red, blocking creatures that try to penetrate the armor's defenses.

Activation: The swarmguard ability activates automatically when a creature of the swarm subtype enters your space.

No action on your part is required.

Effect: You gain damage reduction 5/- to the swarm attack ability of any creature of the swarm subtype.

You gain a bonus on Fortitude saving throws and on Concentration checks to resist a swarm's distraction ability (MM 316).

This bonus is equal to the armor bonus of the armor you are wearing.

Aura/Caster Level: Moderate abjuration; CL 7th.

Construction: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, repel vermin.

Price: +1 bonus.

EXPANDED PSIONICS HANDBOOK (3.5)

A PORTER

As a standard action, a suit of aporter armor or an aporter shield transports the wearer and her equipment to any spot within 800 feet that she can visualize or specify, as the psionic dimension door power. The armor or shield can transport the wearer in this fashion twice per day. Moderate psychoportation; ML 10th; Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, psionic dimension door; Price +40,320 gp.

AVERTER

On command, up to three times per day, any creature to whom the wearer presents an averter shield must succeed on a DC 14 Will save or be overcome by a powerful aversion to the wielder (actually the shield), and will not approach within 30 feet. This is a mind-affecting compulsion effect, as the aversion power. Faint telepathy; ML 5th; Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, aversion; Price +12,960 gp.

ECTOPLASMIC

As a standard action, ectoplasmic armor converts itself, its wearer, and all the wearer's equipment into ectoplasmic form for up to 5 minutes once per day, as the power of the same name. In this semisolid state, the wearer gains damage reduction 10/psionics. Faint psychometabolism; ML 5th; Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, ectoplasmic form; Price +10,800 gp.

FLOATING

This kind of armor is psionically buoyant in water or a similar liquid, negating the normal penalty for wearing armor when making Swim checks. Additionally, it grants a +4 circumstance bonus on Swim checks. Faint psychoportation; ML 4th; Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, float; Price +4,000 gp.

GLEAMING

This kind of armor is usually made of crystal, though it doesn't have to be. Gleams and flashes from the armor give the wearer and his armor a "fuzzy" appearance, granting the wearer concealment. Faint metacreativity; ML 5th; Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, concealing amorphia; Price +3 bonus.

HEARTENING

This kind of shield grants the wearer up to 5 temporary hit points per day on command.

These temporary hit points fade after 4 minutes. The wearer can activate this power as an immediate action at any time. Faint psychometabolism; ML 4th; Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, vigor; Price +720 gp.

LANDING

A suit of armor with this capability allows the wearer to ignore any damage dealt by the first 60 feet of a fall. Regardless of the height of a fall, the wearer always lands on her feet. Faint psychoportation; ML 4th; Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, catfall; Price +4,000 gp.

LINKED

This kind of armor or shield allows the wearer to form a telepathic bond with other wearers of linked armor or shields within 10 miles. This ability is otherwise similar to the mindlink power. Moderate telepathy; ML 6th; Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, mindlink; Price +6,000 gp.

MANIFESTER

This kind of shield generates 3 power points once per day that the wearer can use when manifesting a power he knows. These power points must all be used on the same power. As usual, a psionic character cannot pay a power's cost with power points from more than one source, so the power points in the shield must be used for discrete manifestations. Moderate clairsentience; ML 6th; Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, knowledge of any 2nd-level power; Price +10,800 gp.

MINDARMOR

This kind of armor or shield grants the wearer a +3 insight bonus on Will saving throws to resist all mind-affecting and/or compulsion powers. Faint psychokinesis; ML 5th; Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, empty mind; Price +24,000 gp.

PHASING

The wearer of this kind of armor can move through wooden, plaster, or stone walls, but not other materials. The wearer can call on this special ability as a standard action. When the phasing ability is active, the wearer can pass through a wall or some other kind of appropriate object for a total distance of 60 feet per day (see below), breaking this distance up into several smaller passages or one long one, as desired. A wearer who exceeds this daily distance limit while inside solid material is ejected from the material at the point of entry, ending up prone in front of the now-impassable barrier. Phasing through a wall that separates two adjacent squares on the grid counts as 5 feet of distance.

Phasing through a wall or barrier of any greater thickness counts as a distance equal to the barrier's thickness plus 5 feet; for example, phasing through a 10-foot-thick stone wall counts as 15 feet of distance.

Strong psychoportation; ML 13th; Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, psionic phase door; Price +65,520 gp.

POWER RESISTANCE

This kind of armor or shield grants the wearer power resistance while it is worn.

The power resistance can be 13, 15, 17, or 19, depending on the amount that was built into the armor or shield.

Moderate clairsentience; ML 9th; Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, power resistance; Price +2 bonus (PR 13); +3 bonus (PR 15); +4 bonus (PR 17); or +5 bonus (PR 19).

QUICKNESS

This kind of armor increases the wearer's speed by 5 feet. Thus, a character whose normal speed in armor is 20 feet moves 25 feet in armor of quickness.

Faint psychoportation; ML 4th; Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, burst; Price +1 bonus.

RADIANT

The wearer of this kind of armor gains resistance 10 against energy attacks (acid, cold, electricity, fire, or sonic).

The armor absorbs the first 10 points of damage dealt by any such attack, and this absorption causes it to radiate light for a number of rounds equal to the points of damage absorbed.

This light is sufficient to illuminate a 60-foot-radius area.

If the armor absorbs more damage while it is radiating light, the newer radiant effect overlaps (does not stack with) the effect that was already in place.

For example, if the armor absorbs 4 points of damage from one attack and another 6 points from an attack 2 rounds later, the armor radiates light for a total of 8 consecutive rounds.

Likewise, if the armor absorbs 10 points of damage from one attack and another 5 points from an attack 2 rounds later, the armor radiates light for a total of 10 consecutive rounds.

Moderate psychokinesis; ML 9th; Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, energy adaptation; Price +4 bonus.

RANGED

The wielder of a ranged shield can throw it in combat, with a range increment of 30 feet.

While in the air, the shield is treated in all ways as a ranged weapon and cannot be blocked or grabbed except by those with appropriate feats.

No matter the size of the wielder, a buckler or light shield deals 1d6 points of damage and a heavy one 1d8 points.

(A tower shield cannot be created with this special ability).

The wielder's Strength modifier and the shield's enhancement bonus add to the base damage.

A ranged shield flies through the air back to the creature that threw it.

It returns to the wielder just before the creature's next turn (and is therefore ready to use again in that turn).

Catching a ranged shield when it comes back is a free action.

If the wielder can't catch it, or if the wielder has moved since throwing it, the shield drops to the ground in the square from which it was thrown.

Faint psychokinesis; ML 5th; Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, far hand; Price +1 bonus.

SEEING

This kind of armor grants a wider than normal field of vision, so that opponents flanking the wearer gain only a +1 bonus on their attack rolls instead of +2 (rogues still get their full sneak attack damage because the wearer is still flanked).

The wearer gains a +1 enhancement bonus on Spot checks but takes a -2 penalty on saves against gaze attacks.

Faint clairsentience; ML 5th; Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, ubiquitous vision; Price +6,000 gp.

TIME BUTTRESS

This kind of shield gives the wielder a chance to avoid telling blows by using time itself as a shield.

Once per day, the wielder can use timeless body as though manifesting the power.

Strong psychoportation; ML 17th; Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, timeless body; Price +5 bonus.

VANISHING

On command, this suit of armor or shield renders its wearer and all the wearer's equipment invisible to the minds of others, as if he had manifested the power cloud mind.

The wearer can use this ability twice per day.

Faint psychokinesis; ML 5th; Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, cloud mind; Price +3 bonus.

WALL

As a standard action once per day, the wielder can drop this kind of shield at his feet and command a wall of ectoplasm (as the power) to come into being, with the shield as the point of origin for the effect.

This effect forms a wall whose area is up to twelve 10-foot squares or a sphere or hemisphere with a radius of up to 12 feet.

The wall dissipates after 7 minutes, or sooner if the wielder of the shield reclaims it (thus dismissing the effect).

Strong metacreativity; ML 12th; Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, wall of ectoplasm; Price +20,160 gp.

FAITHS AND PANTHEONS (3.0)

COMMAND

This armor or shield always appears brilliant and gleaming, no matter what the conditions and despite all attempts to paint over or.

obscure it.

Coveted by military leaders of all sorts, this armor or shield carries a powerful aura that gives a +4 enhancement bonus to Charisma and a +2 morale bonus on Will saves to all allies within 30 feet.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, prayer; Market Price: +60,000 gp.

DAYLIGHT

A suit of armor or a shield with this special ability glows with the brilliant light of a daylight spell for up to 30 minutes a day.

A command word activates and deactivates the enchantment, and is usually inscribed on the inside of the armor or the back of the shield.

Except when glowing, the armor or shield appears completely normal.

Caster Level: 3rd; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, daylight; Market Price: +2,200 gp.

EVERBRIGHT

This quality can be applied only to metal armor.

The armor is as bright and shiny as polished silver.

The armor never tarnishes and is immune to acid and rust attacks.

The wearer gains acid resistance 5.

Caster Level: 12th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, spellcaster 12th level; Market Price: +1 bonus.

STRENGTH

A character wearing armor with this special ability gains a +2 or +4 enhancement bonus to Strength.

Caster Level: 12th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, bull's strength; Market Price: +2, add +8,000 gp; +4, add +32,000 gp.

GHOSTWALK (3.0)

ABSORBING

Armor and shields with this ability are always a dull black and appear to possess depths that couldn't exist.

A suit of armor or a shield with this ability absorbs ability drain and energy drain attacks.

It can absorb as many points of ability scores or levels drained per day as its enhancement bonus.

It allows a Fortitude save (DC 10 + attacker's Cha modifier) against an energy drain attack that normally doesn't allow such a save.

A successful save means the attack has half effect (and then apply the armor's absorbing ability).

This property does not change saves against attacks that already allow them.

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, restoration; Market Price: +3 bonus.

This special ability first appeared in Defenders of the Faith.

DEATH WARD

Once per day, armor enhanced by this special ability makes the wearer immune to death effects, as if a death ward spell had been cast by a 7th-level caster.

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, death ward; Market Price: +2 bonus.

This special ability first appeared in Magic of Faerûn.

ENERGY DRAIN

A suit of armor or a shield with this ability allows the bearer to drain levels with the wearer's touch attack (if armor) or with a shield bash (if shield).

Other than the requirement of a touch attack, the magical effect is like an enervation spell cast by a 7th-level wizard. Such armor or shield usually has the face of a snarling vampire carved on the front of it.

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, enervation; Market Price: +2 bonus.

This special ability first appeared in Defenders of the Faith.

GHOST DISRUPTING

The wearer of a suit of armor or a shield with this ability may attack ghosts (or other ectoplasm-based creatures) as with a disrupt ectoplasm spell cast by a 5th-level wizard up to four times per day.

Armor and shields with this ability usually are decorated with a lattice of gray lines.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, disrupt ectoplasm; Market Price: +2 bonus.

NEGATIVE ENERGY PROTECTION

Armor enhanced by this special ability grants the wearer negative energy protection for 5 rounds the first time each day the wearer is exposed to any negative energy attack.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, negative energy protection; Market Price: +2 bonus.

This special ability first appeared in Magic of Faerûn.

UNDEAD CONTROLLING

The wearer of a suit of armor or a shield with this ability may control up to 26 HD of undead per day, as with the control undead spell.

At dawn each day, the wearer loses control of any undead still under his sway.

Any armor or shield with this power is usually decorated with bone.

Caster Level: 13th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, control undead; Market Price: +4 bonus.

This special ability first appeared in Defenders of the Faith.

UNDEAD DISRUPTING

The wearer of a suit of armor or a shield with this ability may attack undead as with a disrupt undead spell cast by a 5th-level wizard up to four times per day.

Armor and shields with this ability usually display prominently the holy symbol of a good deity.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, disrupt undead; Market Price: +2 bonus.

This special ability first appeared in Defenders of the Faith.

HEROES OF BATTLE (3.5)

EASY TRAVELING

A suit of easy traveling armor makes overland movement simpler to its wearer.

The wearer can carry up to a medium load as if it were a light load (ignoring the maximum Dexterity bonus, check penalty, and reduced speed normally incurred by a medium load).

This applies only to the load carried by the character, not to any reduction in speed caused by the armor itself.

In addition, the wearer is able to walk for up to 10 hours in a day before having to make Constitution checks to avoid taking nonlethal damage (see page 164 of the Player's Handbook).

Faint transmutation; CL 5th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, bear's endurance; Price +1,500 gp.

HERALDIC CRESTS

A heraldic crest is a special magical property that can be placed on any light, heavy, or tower shield with a +1 or higher enhancement bonus.

Each heraldic crest grants a minor benefit to the shield's bearer so long as the bearer meets one of the following criteria.

- Has the Leadership feat; or
- Has one or more commander auras (see page 75); or
- Has been specially granted the right to use the heraldic crest by a lord, high priest, or similar ruler.

The DM is the final arbiter as to whether any character meets this prerequisite.

Each shield bearing a heraldic crest has a more potent ability that can be used once per day.

Any character who meets at least one of the prerequisites can activate the magical power of the shield's heraldic crest as a free action.

Unless otherwise noted, the power affects the shield's bearer only.

No shield can bear more than one heraldic crest.

If a shield with a heraldic crest is imbued with a second crest, the first crest vanishes.

Crafting a Heraldic Crest

In addition to the normal prerequisites for crafting a magic item, the creator of a heraldic crest must meet at least one of the prerequisites given above for activating the crest's special power.

COURAGE

This symbol depicts a pouncing lion.

The bearer gains a +1 morale bonus on initiative checks. Once per day, on command, the shield casts aid on the bearer.

Faint enchantment; CL 5th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, aid; Price 4,000 gp.

FEROCITY

This heraldic crest depicts a charging boar.

If the bearer has the rage class feature, its duration is extended by 1 round.

Once per day, on command, the shield casts rage on the bearer (as the spell, with a duration of 5 rounds).

Faint enchantment; CL 5th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, rage; Price 6,000 gp.

GLORY

This crest is emblazoned with a red sun rising above a golden field.

The bearer gains a +1 morale bonus on melee weapon damage rolls.

Once per day, on command, the shield casts heroism on the bearer (as the spell, with a duration of 5 minutes).

Faint enchantment; CL 5th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, heroism; Price 11,000 gp.

HONOR

This emblem depicts a noble stag.

The bearer gains a +1 morale bonus on saves against chaotic spells.

Once per day, on command, the shield casts order's wrath, centered on the bearer.

Moderate evocation; CL 8th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, order's wrath; Price 12,000 gp.

INSIGHT

This crest shows a soaring owl.

The bearer gains a +2 enhancement bonus on Spot checks. Once per day, on command, the shield casts see invisibility on the bearer.

Faint divination; CL 3rd; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, see invisibility; Price 5,000 gp.

VALIANT DEFENSE

This crest shows a stone tower.

The bearer gains a +1 deflection bonus to AC at all times.

Once per day, on command, the shield casts shield other on a designated creature within 30 feet of the bearer (treat this as if the bearer were the caster of the spell).

While this effect is active, the bearer loses the deflection bonus granted by the shield.

Faint abjuration; CL 3rd; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, shield other; Price 6,000 gp.

RETALIATION

A suit of armor with this special ability strikes back at foes who hit hard in melee.

Each time the wearer takes 10 or more points of damage from a single melee attack, the armor deals 1d6 points of damage to the attacker.

If the wearer is dropped to below 0 hit points by a melee attack, the armor strikes the attacker for 3d6 points of damage.

The damage from retaliation armor is treated as magic for the purpose of overcoming damage reduction.

Strong evocation; CL 9th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, symbol of pain; Price +3 bonus.

LIBRIS MORTIS (3.5)

ECTOPLASMIC FEEDBACK

A suit of armor with this property creates a backlash of positive energy when its wearer is hit by an incorporeal melee touch attack.

This deals 1d6 points of damage to the attacking creature (no save).

The armor's property has no effect on corporeal creatures. Faint abjuration; CL 5th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, ectoplasmic feedback; Price +8,000 gp.

GHOST WARD

A suit of armor or shield with this property allows its wearer to add the armor or shield's enhancement bonus (but not its armor or shield bonus) to his Armor Class against incorporeal touch attacks (but not against other touch attacks).

Faint abjuration; CL 5th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, mage armor; Price +1 bonus.

MAGIC ITEM COMPENDIUM (3.5)

ACIDIC

Price: +1 bonus

Property: Armor or shield

Caster Level: 6th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 18) conjuration

Activation: —

This item has a slick-looking, greenish sheen, and a light, acrid-smelling mist constantly rises from its surface.

A thin film of acid continuously covers the surface of this armor or shield, which is not damaged by this effect.

An acidic suit of armor or shield deals 2d4 points of acid damage per full round of contact to each opponent grappling you, and to any object that remains in direct contact with it (except objects you are holding) for that amount of time.

However, the acid deals no damage to creatures or objects that remain in contact with it for less than a full round, such as when a creature makes a melee attack against you.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Melf's acid arrow.

Cost to Create: Varies.

AGILITY

Price: +500 gp

Property: Armor

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) transmutation

Activation: —

This suit of armor appears more streamlined and elegant than others of its type.

It has a smoothly worked surface and no spikes or other accoutrements.

While wearing armor that has this property, you gain a +1 resistance bonus on Reflex saving throws.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, cat's grace, resistance.

Cost to Create: 250 gp, 20 XP, 1 day.

AGILITY, GREATER [SYNERGY]

Price: +8,000 gp

Caster Level: 15th

Aura: Strong; (DC 22) transmutation

Synergy Prerequisite: Improved agility

As agility, except the armor grants a +5 resistance bonus on Reflex saving throws.

Cost to Create: 4,000 gp, 320 XP, 8 days.

AGILITY, IMPROVED [SYNERGY]

Price: +4,000 gp

Caster Level: 9th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 19) transmutation

Synergy Prerequisite: Agility

As agility, except the armor grants a +3 resistance bonus on Reflex saving throws.

Cost to Create: 2,000 gp, 160 XP, 4 days.

ANCHORING

Price: +1 bonus

Property: Armor or shield

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) transmutation

Several images of stylized anchors cover this strangely dense-looking armor.

When wearing armor or a shield that has this property, you are difficult to move from your position during a fight.

You gain a +5 enhancement bonus on any ability check to resist a bull rush, overrun, or trip attack.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, bull's strength.

Cost to Create: Varies.

ANCHORING, GREATER [SYNERGY]

Price: +1 bonus

Caster Level: 10th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 20) transmutation

Synergy Prerequisite: Anchoring

A single stylized anchor covers the chest of this hulking armor.

This armor functions as anchoring armor, except that it grants a +10 enhancement bonus on ability checks against bull rush, overrun, and trip attacks.

Cost to Create: Varies.

APORTER

Price: +20,000 gp

Property: Armor or shield

Caster Level: 10th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 20) conjuration

Activation: Standard (mental)

Your eyes skip around this aqua-tinged item, as if having difficulty precisely locating it.

When it is activated, a suit of armor or shield that has this property transports you and your equipment to any spot within 800 feet that you can visualize or specify, as the dimension door spell.

The aporter property functions two times per day.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, dimension door.

Cost to Create: 10,000 gp, 800 XP, 20 days.

AVERTER

Price: +13,000 gp

Property: Shield

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) enchantment

Activation: Standard (mental)

This finely wrought black shield emanates an aura of barely contained menace.

When you activate an averter shield, all enemies who can see it must succeed on DC 14 Will saves or be overcome by a powerful aversion to the shield.

For the next 3 rounds, affected creatures do not approach within 30 feet of you.

This effect is a mindaffecting compulsion ability.

The averter property functions three times per day.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, suggestion or aversion (EPH 79).

Cost to Create: 6,500 gp, 520 XP, 13 days.

AXEBLOCK

Price: +2 bonus

Property: Armor or shield

Caster Level: 7th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 18) abjuration

Activation: —

The surface of this item appears serrated, sporting hundreds of tiny, knifelike edges.

An axeblock shield or suit of armor magically turns away slashing weapons, such as axes and most swords.

While wearing armor or carrying a shield that has this property, you gain damage reduction 5/bludgeoning or piercing.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, stoneskin.

Cost to Create: Varies.

BALANCE

Price: +3,750 gp

Property: Armor

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) abjuration

Activation: —

This elegant armor appears streamlined yet sturdy.

Its surface is decorated with precise, perfectly symmetrical, geometric designs.

While wearing armor that has this property, you gain a +5 competence bonus on Balance checks.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, balancing lorecall (SC 23).

Cost to Create: 1,875 gp, 150 XP, 4 days.

BALANCE, GREATER [SYNERGY]

Price: +18,750 gp

Caster Level: 15th

Aura: Strong; (DC 22) abjuration

Synergy Prerequisite: Improved balance

As the balance property, except the armor grants a +15 competence bonus on Balance checks.

Cost to Create: 9,375 gp, 750 XP, 19 days.

BALANCE, IMPROVED [SYNERGY]

Price: +11,250 gp

Caster Level: 10th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 20) abjuration

Synergy Prerequisite: Balance

As the balance property, except the armor grants a +10 competence bonus on Balance checks.

Cost to Create: 5,625 gp, 450 XP, 12 days.

BANE BLIND

Price: +15,000 gp

Property: Armor

Caster Level: 7th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 18) illusion

Activation: Swift (mental)

This armor is patterned with muted colors, textures, and shading.

On its chestpiece is an image of a beholder with its eyes closed.

Originally designed for rangers and bounty hunters, bane blind armor affects a specific type or subtype of creature.

Three times per day while wearing this armor, you can render yourself imperceptible to creatures of the designated type or subtype.

Such creatures cannot detect your presence using any nonmagical sensory method (including scent, hearing, tremorsense, blindsense, and the like).

This effect lasts for 10 rounds or until you attack (as defined for the purpose of the invisibility spell; PH 245).

To randomly determine the armor's designated creature, roll d% and consult the following table.

On a result of Humanoid or Outsider, the DM chooses the specific subtype that this armor affects.

d%	Creature Type (Subtype)
01–06	Aberration
07–13	Animal
14–16	Construct
17–26	Dragon
27–29	Elemental
30–32	Fey
33–42	Giant
43–54	Humanoid
55–60	Magical beast
61–65	Monstrous humanoid
66–68	Ooze
69–71	Outsider, chaotic
72–74	Outsider, lawful
75–81	Outsider, evil
82–83	Outsider, good
84–86	Plant
87–95	Undead
96–100	Vermin

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, greater invisibility.

Cost to Create: 7,500 gp, 600 XP, 15 days.

BEASTSKIN

Price: +2 bonus

Property: Armor

Caster Level: 13th

Aura: Strong; (DC 21) transmutation

Activation: —

This armor is lightly patterned with lines resembling fur, scales, and feathers.

Its coloration continuously shifts among muted tones of brown, green, and gray.

First created by powerful druids, armor that has this property is particularly useful to characters of that class.

Whenever you use wild shape, you can expend one additional daily use of that ability to transform your beastskin armor along with you, rather than simply allowing it to merge with your body.

When you do so, the armor transforms into a suit of armor of the same type, fitted for your new form.

The armor's weight changes to match your new size (and shape, if you assume a form with a different body shape).

If you are proficient with your suit of beastskin armor in your natural form, then you are proficient with the transformed version as well, regardless of what shape you take.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, ironwood.

Cost to Create: Varies.

BLINKING

Price: +15,000 gp

Property: Armor

Caster Level: 10th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 20) transmutation

Activation: Standard (command)

Parts of this semitransparent armor seem to fade in and out of existence, there one moment and gone the next.

When you activate armor that has this property, you can “blink” back and forth between the Material Plane and the Ethereal Plane, as if affected by a blink spell.

The blinking property functions once per day, and the effect lasts for 1 minute.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, blink.

Cost to Create: 7,500 gp, 600 XP, 15 days.

BLUESHINE

Price: +1,500 gp

Property: Metal armor

Caster Level: 12th

Aura: Strong; (DC 21) abjuration

Activation: —

This armor glistens with a blue-black sheen, as if it were covered in oily liquid sapphire.

A suit of armor imbued with this property never tarnishes and is immune to acid damage and rusting effects.

While wearing blueshine armor, you gain a +2 competence bonus on Hide checks.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft (alchemy) 5 ranks.

Cost to Create: 750 gp, 60 XP, 2 days.

BLURRING

Price: +1 bonus

Property: Armor

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) illusion

Activation: Swift (command)

This armor appears indistinct, as though its edges were smeared.

When you activate this armor, your appearance becomes distorted and hazy, as if you were affected by a blur spell.

The blurring property functions three times per day, and the effect lasts for 5 rounds.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, blur.

Cost to Create: Varies.

BLURRING, GREATER [SYNERGY]

Price: +2 bonus

Caster Level: 12th

Aura: Strong; (DC 21) illusion

Synergy Prerequisite: Blurring

A light mist surrounds this armor, obscuring its exact details.

As blurring armor, except that the effect's duration is 10 minutes, and you can activate the blurring property any number of times per day.

Cost to Create: Varies.

BUOYANT

Price: +4,000 gp

Property: Armor

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) transmutation

This bluish metal armor seems oddly light in your hands, with a liquid sheen.

This armor is buoyant in water or similar liquids.

Armor that has this property does not apply an armor check penalty on your Swim checks.

Additionally, it grants you a +2 competence bonus on Swim checks while you wear it.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, swim (SC 217).

Cost to Create: 2,000 gp, 160 XP, 4 days.

CALLED

Price: +2,000 gp

Property: Armor or shield

Caster Level: 9th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 19) conjuration

Activation: Standard (command)

At first glance, this armor or shield looks like any other item of its kind.

Closer inspection reveals a small image of a beckoning hand inscribed on its surface.

Provided that you and your called armor or shield are on the same plane, you can call it to you by speaking the proper command word, regardless of the intervening distance.

If you aren't wearing armor at the time, a suit of called armor appears on your body, as though you had donned it in the normal fashion.

If you are wearing other armor when you speak the command word, the called armor appears in your space or in an adjacent space you designate that is capable of holding it.

A called shield appears on the proper arm if you are not already using another shield when you call it, or in your space or a designated adjacent space if you are.

If any other creature has worn your called armor or shield since you last wore it, you can no longer call it until you wear it again.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, teleport.

Cost to Create: 1,000 gp, 80 XP, 2 days.

COMMANDER

Price: +2,000 gp

Property: Armor or shield

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) transmutation

Activation: —

This item looks particularly clean and bright—in fact, it almost seems to shine with its own light.

A suit of armor or shield that has this property always appears brilliant and gleaming, even in filthy or squalid conditions, though it doesn't shed any useful light.

Attempts to paint over or obscure its finish do not diminish its brightness.

While wearing commander armor or carrying a commander shield, you gain a +2 competence bonus on Diplomacy checks, and each ally within 30 feet of you (not including yourself) gains a +1 morale bonus on Will saves. However, the shiny finish makes you so noticeable that you also take a –5 penalty on Hide checks (in addition to the normal armor check penalty).

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, eagle's splendor.

Cost to Create: 1,000 gp, 80 XP, 2 days.

DAYLIGHT

Price: +3,000 gp

Property: Armor or shield

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) evocation

Activation: Swift (command)

This brightly polished item bears an image of the sun and has a golden tinge.

When activated, a suit of armor or a shield that has this property glows with the brilliance of a daylight spell.

This effect functions for up to 30 minutes per day, but the duration need not be continuous; you can turn the effect off with a swift action.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, daylight.

Cost to Create: 1,500 gp, 120 XP, 3 days.

DEATH WARD

Price: +1 bonus

Property: Armor or shield

Caster Level: 7th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 18) necromancy

Activation: Immediate (mental)

This black-enameled item has a translucent quality, as though it were not entirely of this world.

Small, white images of skulls decorate the armor's shoulders, like grotesque epaulets.

Armor and shields that have this property are favored by those dedicated to fighting the foul art of necromancy. While wearing or using death ward armor or a death ward shield, you can activate the armor to ignore any death effect (including death spells, magical death effects, and energy drain) or negative energy effect (such as inflict spells or chill touch).

The death ward property functions once per day.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, death ward.

Cost to Create: Varies.

DEEPAWELLER

Price: +12,000 gp

Property: Armor

Caster Level: 9th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 19) transmutation

Activation: —

Dull black, the substance of this armor is flecked with tiny particles and seems to swirl like the depths of the sea.

While wearing deepdweller armor, you can breathe water and are immune to damage from cold water and from pressure in extreme depths.

Armor that has this property does not apply an armor check penalty on your Swim checks, and wearing deepdweller armor allows you to converse with any water-breathing creature that has a language.

Additionally, you can see twice as far underwater as normal (see DMG 93 for details on underwater effects and dangers).

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, darkvision, water breathing.

Cost to Create: 6,000 gp, 480 XP, 12 days.

DISPLACEMENT

Price: +1 bonus

Property: Armor

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) illusion

Activation: Swift (command)

The shoulder pieces of this armor are embossed with tiny arrows pointing outward in opposite directions.

When you activate displacement armor, you appear to be standing right next to your actual location, as if affected by a displacement spell.

The displacement property functions once per day, and the effect lasts for 5 rounds.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, displacement.

Cost to Create: Varies.

DRAGONDODGER

Price: +1 bonus

Property: Light armor

Caster Level: 9th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 19) transmutation

Activation: —

This suit of light armor has a particularly hard and shiny finish.

The protective glyphs that ring its collar and waist glow briefly when it is donned.

When wearing armor that has this property, you gain the evasion ability (see the monk class feature, PH 41), but only against breath weapons.

Whenever a breath weapon would normally allow you a Reflex saving throw for half damage, you instead take no damage on a successful save.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, cat's grace.

Cost to Create: Varies.

EASY TRAVEL

Price: +1,500 gp

Property: Armor

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) transmutation

Activation: —

This armor seems to weigh less than it should.

When wearing armor that has this property, you can carry up to a medium load as if it were a light load (ignoring the maximum Dexterity bonus, check penalty, and reduced speed normally incurred by a medium load).

These reductions apply only to penalties for the load you carry, not to any reduction in speed caused by the armor itself.

In addition, you can walk for up to 10 hours in a day before having to make Constitution checks to avoid taking nonlethal damage (PH 164).

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, bear's endurance.

Cost to Create: 750 gp, 60 XP, 2 days.

ECTOPLASMIC FEEDBACK

Price: +1 bonus

Property: Armor

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) abjuration

Activation: —

This armor appears translucent.

Holy symbols of a good-aligned deity decorate the armor, and they glow with a soft white light when it is donned.

A suit of armor that has this property creates a backlash of positive energy against incorporeal attackers.

Any time you are hit by an incorporeal touch attack while wearing it, the armor deals 1d6 points of damage to the attacker (with no miss chance for incorporealness).

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, ectoplasmic feedback (SC 78).

Cost to Create: Varies.

ECTOPLASMIC WALL

Price: +2 bonus

Property: Shield

Caster Level: 11th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 20) conjuration

Activation: Standard (command)

Composed of a substance so pale as to be transparent, this shield has four protrusions around the rim that hold it off the ground even when it is laid face down.

When you activate a shield that has this property and drop it at your feet, a wall of ectoplasm comes into being, as though created by the wall of ectoplasm psionic power.

The wall has an area of up to ten 10-foot squares or forms a sphere or hemisphere with a radius of up to 10 feet.

The shield is the point of origin for the effect.

Once created, the wall is stationary.

The wall of ectoplasm is 2 inches thick and has 20 hit points and hardness 5.

The Strength check DC to break through the wall is 19.

The wall can be dispelled, but checks to dispel it are made with a –4 penalty.

Spells, powers, and most effects can't pass through the opaque wall, nor can ethereal creatures, but it doesn't block teleportation.

The ectoplasmic wall property functions once per day; the effect lasts for 7 rounds or until you pick up the shield.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, wall of iron or wall of ectoplasm (EPH 140).

Cost to Create: Varies.

ENERGY DEFENSE [SYNERGY]

Price: +1 bonus

Property: Armor or shield

Caster Level: 10th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 20) evocation

Activation: Immediate (command)

Synergy Prerequisite: Energy resistance, improved energy resistance, or greater energy resistance

This item bears a stylized elemental motif.

However, its flanges and spikes indicate that it has some offensive capability as well.

This armor continues to give you the benefit of its prerequisite property.

In addition, while wearing or using this kind of armor or shield, you can wreathe it in the type of energy specified by its energy resistance.

While this effect is active, any creature that strikes you with a natural weapon, unarmed attack, or nonreach manufactured melee weapon deals normal damage but also takes 1d6+10 points of energy damage of the specified type.

The energy defense property functions three times per day. The effect lasts for 5 rounds or until you dismiss it (a swift action).

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, fire shield, resist energy.

Cost to Create: Varies.

ENERGY IMMUNITY

Price: +2 bonus

Property: Armor or shield

Caster Level: 13th

Aura: Strong; (DC 21) abjuration

Activation: Immediate (mental)

This item is decorated with elemental motifs.

No particular element is favored in the design; waves, flames, rock formations, and billows of wind are all represented equally in bright enamel.

Upon activating armor or a shield that has this property, you gain immunity to damage from one energy type of your choice (acid, cold, electricity, or fire).

Each type of energy immunity produces a corresponding minor effect that does not alter the item's function.

For example, you feel a rush of warmth if the armor or shield is protecting you against cold damage, or a chill wind if it is protecting you against fire.

A metallic tang fills your mouth and nostrils if electricity protection is in force, and an acrid tang pervades the air around you if acid protection has been activated.

The energy immunity property functions once per day.

The effect lasts for 1 minute or until you dismiss it (a swift action).

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, protection from energy.

Cost to Create: Varies.

FEARSOME

Price: +15,000 gp

Property: Armor or shield

Caster Level: 7th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 18) necromancy

Activation: Swift (command)

This item is dark in color, and anyone viewing it sees fleeting, grotesque images on its surface.

When you activate armor or a shield that has this property, you create an aura of terror in a 20-foot radius around yourself.

Every creature in this area briefly perceives a creature from its worst nightmare instead of you, becoming panicked for 1 round.

On a successful DC 16 Will save, the creature is shaken for 1 round instead.

The fearsome property functions three times per day.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, fear.

Cost to Create: 7,500 gp, 600 XP, 15 days.

FREEDOM

Price: +5 bonus

Property: Armor

Caster Level: 7th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 18) abjuration

Activation: —

This armor exudes a slick of fine oil, giving it a scintillating sheen and a pungent scent.

While wearing armor that has this property, you move and attack normally, even under circumstances that impede movement, as if affected by a freedom of movement spell.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, freedom of movement.

Cost to Create: Varies.

GHOST WARD

Price: +1 bonus

Property: Armor or shield

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) conjuration

Activation: —

This item appears normal at first glance, but closer examination reveals the image of a ghostly face on its surface.

A suit of armor or shield that has this property allows you to add its enhancement bonus (but not its armor or shield bonus) to your Armor Class against touch attacks (including incorporeal touch attacks).

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, mage armor.

Cost to Create: Varies.

GILLED

Price: +6,000 gp

Property: Armor

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) transmutation

Activation: —

A decorative fluted border surrounds the neck of this scale-etched armor.

A water-breathing wearer of gilled armor can breathe and speak freely in air.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, air breathing (SC 8).

Cost to Create: 3,000 gp, 240 XP, 6 days.

HAMMERBLOCK

Price: +2 bonus

Property: Armor or shield

Caster Level: 7th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 18) abjuration

Activation: —

The surface of this item is covered with a pattern of tiny indentations.

A hammerblock shield or suit of armor magically turns away bludgeoning weapons, such as maces and clubs.

While wearing armor or carrying a shield that has this property, you gain damage reduction 5/piercing or slashing.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, stoneskin.

Cost to Create: Varies.

HEALING

Price: +8,000 gp

Property: Armor

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) conjuration

Activation: Swift (command) and —; see text

This armor has a faint golden sheen, and its surface is embossed with healing runes.

On its breastplate is a depiction of an open eye.

When activated, armor that has this property heals you of 2d8+5 points of damage.

If your hit points are reduced to -1 to -9, this effect occurs automatically, without requiring any action.

The healing property functions once per day.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, cure moderate wounds.

Cost to Create: 4,000 gp, 320 XP, 8 days.

HEALING, GREATER [SYNERGY]

Price: +24,000 gp

Caster Level: 15th

Aura: Strong; (DC 22) conjuration

Synergy Prerequisite: Healing

As healing armor, except that greater healing armor heals you of 3d8+15 points of damage.

The greater healing property functions twice per day.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, cure serious wounds.

Cost to Create: 12,000 gp, 960 XP, 24 days.

HEARTENING

Price: +2,000 gp

Property: Shield

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) necromancy

Activation: Immediate (mental)

This sturdy shield is reinforced with plates and rivets but is no heavier than normal.

When activated, a heartening shield grants you 5 temporary hit points, which last up to 5 minutes.

These temporary hit points don't stack with temporary hit points from any other source.

The heartening property functions two times per day.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, false life.

Cost to Create: 1,000 gp, 80 XP, 1 day.

LANDING

Price: +4,000 gp

Property: Armor

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) transmutation

Activation: —

Although rotund in form, this silvery armor is no more encumbering than usual for its type.

A suit of armor that has this property allows you to ignore any damage dealt by the first 60 feet of a fall.

Regardless of how far you fall, you can always land on your feet if you so choose.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, feather fall.

Cost to Create: 2,000 gp, 160 XP, 4 days.

LINKED

Price: +6,000 gp

Property: Armor or shield

Caster Level: 7th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 18) divination

Activation: Standard (mental)

You sense this item's inner power more with your mind than your sight.

When you activate a suit of armor or a shield that has this property, you can form a telepathic bond with any or all known wearers of other linked items within 10 miles.

Wearers can communicate telepathically through the bond even if they do not share a language.

No special effect or influence is established as a result of the bond.

The linked property functions three times per day, and the effect lasts for 1 hour.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Rary's telepathic bond or mindlink (EPH 120) Cost to Create: 3,000 gp, 240 XP, 6 days.

MAGIC-EATING

Price: +10,000 gp

Property: Armor

Caster Level: 16th

Aura: Strong; (DC 23) abjuration

Activation: —

Spirals and reliefs of fanged mouths cover this dull-colored armor.

While wearing magic-eating armor, whenever you succeed on a saving throw against a spell that targets you, the armor heals you of 1 point of damage per level of the spell.

This healing occurs after the spell takes effect.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, spell resistance.

Cost to Create: 5,000 gp, 400 XP, 10 days.

MANIFESTER

Price: +6,000 gp

Property: Shield

Caster Level: 6th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 18) abjuration

Activation: Free (mental)

Faintly glowing with inner power, this shield seems to invigorate you.

While using a shield that has this property, you can draw 3 power points from it to manifest a psionic power.

You must use all these points on the same power, which cannot use power points from any other source.

The manifester property functions once per day.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, any 2nd-level psionic power.

Cost to Create: 3,000 gp, 240 XP, 6 days.

MASKING

Price: +40,000 gp

Property: Armor

Caster Level: 10th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 20) abjuration

Activation: —

Tendrils of dense black smoke stream from every opening in this dark armor, obscuring all detail.

Masking armor protects you and your gear from divination spells and items (such as crystal balls) as if you were constantly under the effect of a nondetection spell.

Whenever a divination spell or effect is attempted against you, the caster must succeed on a DC 25 caster level check or the divination fails.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, nondetection.
Cost to Create: 20,000 gp, 1,600 XP, 40 days.

MENACING

Price: +30,000 gp
Property: Armor
Caster Level: 9th
Aura: Moderate; (DC 19) necromancy
Activation: Standard (command)

The realistic visage of a heavily scarred, horned demon covers much of this armor.

Seemingly crafted from fiendish flesh, the armor seems merely grisly...until it twitches.

When you activate menacing armor, you become frightening.

Any one creature (your choice) within 30 feet and with fewer HD than you must make a successful Will saving throw (DC 10 + 1/2 your HD + your Cha modifier) or be panicked for 5 rounds.

A creature that succeeds on the saving throw is shaken for 1 round instead, and is immune to further uses of this property from the same suit of armor for 24 hours.

The menacing property functions three times per day.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, fear.

Cost to Create: 15,000 gp, 1,200 XP, 30 days.

MINDARMOR

Price: +3,000 gp
Property: Armor or shield
Caster Level: 5th
Aura: Faint; (DC 17) enchantment
Activation: Immediate (mental)

Constructed of seamless and tightly bound layers, this item steadies your thoughts when worn.

When activated, a suit of armor or a shield that has this property grants you a +5 bonus on Will saves to resist mindaffecting spells and abilities until the start of your next turn.

The mindarmor property functions three times per day.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, heroism or empty mind (EPH 99).

Cost to Create: 1,500 gp, 120 XP, 3 days.

MOBILITY

Price: +1 bonus
Property: Light armor
Caster Level: 5th
Aura: Faint; (DC 17) transmutation
Activation: —

This suit of light armor seems exceptionally slick and supple.

An abstract tracery in a silvery metal decorates the limbs and torso.

While wearing a suit of light armor that has this property, you gain the benefit of the Mobility feat, even if you do not meet its prerequisite.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, cat's grace.

Cost to Create: Varies.

NIMBLENESS

Price: +1 bonus
Property: Armor

Caster Level: 8th
Aura: Moderate; (DC 19) transmutation
Activation: —

This suit of armor looks much less restrictive than others of its type.

A suit of armor that has this property has a maximum Dexterity bonus 1 higher than normal, and its armor check penalty is reduced by 2.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, cat's grace.

Cost to Create: Varies.

QUICKNESS

Price: +5,000 gp
Property: Armor
Caster Level: 5th
Aura: Faint; (DC 17) transmutation

This silvery armor feels light and flexible to the touch.

A suit of armor that has this property grants a +5-foot enhancement bonus to your land speed.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, longstrider.

Cost to Create: 2,500 gp, 200 XP, 5 days.

RADIANT

Price: +4 bonus
Property: Armor
Caster Level: 9th
Aura: Moderate; (DC 19) abjuration
Activation: —

This armor shimmers with a variety of hues, and it feels slick to the touch.

A suit of armor that has this property grants resistance 10 against all energy attacks (acid, cold, electricity, fire, and sonic).

When you are the subject of an energy attack, the armor also radiates light for a number of rounds equal to the points of damage absorbed (to a maximum of 10 rounds). This light is sufficient to brightly illuminate a 30-foot-radius area and casts shadowy illumination in a 60-foot-radius area.

If the armor absorbs more energy damage while it is radiating light, the first effect overlaps (does not stack with) the effect that was already in place.

For example, if the armor absorbs 4 points of damage from one attack and another 6 points from an attack 2 rounds later, it radiates light for a total of 8 consecutive rounds (4 + 2 + 6).

Likewise, if the armor absorbs 10 points from one attack and another 5 points from an attack 2 rounds later, it radiates light for 10 consecutive rounds (because 8 rounds remain from the earlier effect, continuing past the end of the second effect's 5 rounds).

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, resist energy.

Cost to Create: Varies.

RANGED

Price: +1 bonus
Property: Shield (except a tower shields)
Caster Level: 5th
Aura: Faint; (DC 17) transmutation
Activation: —

This streamlined, gray metallic shield is keenly balanced and features a razor-sharp edge.

While using a ranged shield, you can throw it in combat. The thrown shield has a range increment of 30 feet. While in the air, the shield is treated in all ways as a ranged weapon, and it cannot be blocked or grabbed except by those with appropriate feats.

Regardless of your size, a ranged buckler or ranged light shield deals 1d6 points of slashing damage, and a ranged heavy shield deals 1d8 points.

You add your Strength modifier and the shield's enhancement bonus (but not its effective bonus from this or other special properties) to this base damage.

After you have thrown it, a ranged shield flies through the air back to you.

It returns just before your next turn (and is therefore ready to use again on that turn).

You do not benefit from its shield bonus to AC while it is not in your possession.

Catching a ranged shield when it comes back is a free action.

If you can't catch it, or if you have moved since throwing it, the shield drops to the ground in the square from which it was thrown.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, hurl (SC 117) or far hand (EPH 106).

Cost to Create: Varies.

RETALIATION

Price: +2 bonus

Property: Armor

Caster Level: 9th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 19) necromancy

Activation: —

The surface of this armor roils with pent-up energy.

A suit of armor that has this property strikes back at foes who hit hard in melee.

While wearing retaliation armor, each time you take 10 or more points of damage from a single melee attack, the armor deals 1d6 points of damage to the attacker.

If a single melee attack drops your hit points below 0, the armor strikes the attacker for 3d6 points of damage.

Damage from retaliation armor is treated as magic for the purpose of overcoming damage reduction.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, symbol of pain.

Cost to Create: Varies.

ROARING

Price: +3 bonus

Property: Armor

Caster Level: 13th

Aura: Strong; (DC 21) divination

Activation: —

The sculpted visage of a dragon adorns the chestpiece of this gleaming armor.

Embellishments in the shapes of claws and draconic wings accent the rest of its intimidating appearance.

While you are wearing armor that has this property, you gain some protection from ranged attacks.

Whenever you are hit by a nonmagical projectile that would deal 10 or fewer points of damage, you take no damage from that attack.

The armor automatically turns back the projectile to strike the creature that fired it.

Reroll the damage against the original attacker.

While you wear this armor, the embossed dragon head roars whenever battle is imminent, granting you a +4 competence bonus on initiative checks.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, protection from arrows, true seeing.

Cost to Create: Varies.

SOULBOUND

Price: +1 bonus

Property: Armor or shield

Caster Level: 6th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 18) abjuration

Activation: Swift (mental)

This looks like a normal item of its kind except for a faint blue sheen.

A soulbound shield or suit of armor serves as a receptacle for your essentia, much like a soulmeld does.

Every point of essentia invested in the shield or armor increases its enhancement bonus to Armor Class by 1, up to a maximum enhancement bonus of +3.

Each soulbound shield or suit of armor has an essentia capacity.

The maximum number of essentia points that can be invested in it equals this value or your normal essentia capacity (see Table 2–1: Essentia Capacity, Magic of Incarnum 19), whichever is lower.

A soulbound shield or suit of armor has a maximum essentia capacity of 2.

Chakra Bind: A soulbound shield or suit of armor grants bonuses when it is bound to a chakra, as described below. These effects function continuously, with no need for activation.

See Binding Items to Chakras (MoI 108) for more information.

Arms: Binding a soulbound shield to your arms chakra grants you a +4 insight bonus on checks or rolls made to avoid being bull rushed or overrun, or to avoid having the item sundered.

Soul: Binding soulbound armor to your soul chakra grants you a +4 insight bonus on saves made against the attacks of creatures whose alignments are opposed to yours in any way.

For example, a lawful good character would gain this bonus against the spells, spell-like abilities, and supernatural attacks of chaotic or evil creatures, while a neutral good character would gain it only against the attacks of evil creatures.

Neutral characters gain no benefit from this chakra bind.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, magic vestment, essentia pool 2.

Cost to Create: Varies.

SOULBOUND, GREATER [SYNERGY]

Price: +2 bonus

Caster Level: 18th

Aura: Strong; (DC 24) abjuration

Synergy Prerequisite: Soulbound

This property functions as the soulbound property, except a greater soulbound shield or suit of armor has a maximum essentia capacity of 4, for a maximum enhancement bonus to AC of +5.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, magic vestment, essentia pool 4.

SPEARBLOCK

Price: +2 bonus

Property: Armor or shield

Caster Level: 7th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 18) abjuration

Activation: —

The surface of this item appears rough, being covered with hundreds of tiny points reminiscent of spearheads.

A spearblock shield or suit of armor magically turns away piercing weapons, such as spears and arrows.

While wearing armor or carrying a shield that has this property, you gain damage reduction 5/bludgeoning or slashing.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, stoneskin.

Cost to Create: Varies.

SPEED

Price: +6,000 gp

Property: Armor or shield

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) transmutation

Activation: Swift (mental)

This item is decorated with silvery arabesques and seems to vibrate with restless energy.

A suit of armor or shield that has this property can quicken your movements.

Three times per day, you can command it to produce a haste effect on you (as the haste spell) that lasts for 1 round.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, haste.

Cost to Create: 3,000 gp, 240 XP, 6 days.

STAMINA

Price: +500 gp

Property: Armor

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) transmutation

Activation: —

This armor appears sturdier than other armor of its type.

While wearing armor that has this property, you gain a +1 resistance bonus on Fortitude saving throws.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, bear's endurance, resistance.

Cost to Create: 250 gp, 20 XP, 1 day.

STAMINA, GREATER [SYNERGY]

Price: +8,000 gp

Caster Level: 15th

Aura: Strong; (DC 22) transmutation

Synergy Prerequisite: Improved stamina

As stamina, except the armor grants a +5 resistance bonus on Fortitude saving throws.

Cost to Create: 4,000 gp, 320 XP, 8 days.

STAMINA, IMPROVED [SYNERGY]

Price: +4,000 gp

Caster Level: 9th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 19) transmutation

Synergy Prerequisite: Stamina

As stamina, except the armor grants a +3 resistance bonus on Fortitude saving throws.

Cost to Create: 2,000 gp, 160 XP, 4 days.

STYPTIC

Price: +1 bonus

Property: Armor

Caster Level: 7th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 18) conjuration

Activation: —

This blood-red armor is lined with a chalky substance and has an astringent scent.

While wearing armor that has this property, you do not suffer ongoing blood loss for any reason.

Regardless of their source, bleeding wounds automatically close.

You sustain no further hit point loss and stabilize if you are dying.

In addition, you have a 25% chance to be unaffected by any blood-draining attack that depletes Constitution, such as a vampire's or stirge's blood drain ability, or the property of a wounding weapon.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, cure critical wounds, Heal 10 ranks.

Cost to Create: Varies.

TIME BUTTRESS

Price: +5 bonus

Property: Shield

Caster Level: 17th

Aura: Strong; (DC 23) transmutation

Activation: Standard (mental)

This magnificent platinum shield seems to pulse with an air of invincibility.

When you activate a shield that has this property, you can avoid injury by manipulating time.

You are invulnerable to all attacks, spells, and powers (both harmful and helpful), beginning immediately after you activate the effect and ending at the end of your next turn. The time buttress property functions once per day.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, temporal stasis or timeless body (EPH 138).

Cost to Create: Varies.

TWILIGHT

Price: +1 bonus

Property: Armor

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) transmutation

Activation: —

This armor possesses a faint, sunset-colored sheen.

Armor that has this property is favored by elves and other characters who mix arcane magic and melee combat.

A suit of twilight armor looks translucent and semi-incorporeal when donned, reducing the chance of arcane spell failure by 10%.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, cat's grace.

Cost to Create: Varies.

VANISHING

Price: +3 bonus

Property: Armor or shield

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) enchantment

Activation: Standard (mental)

This dull gray item appears unremarkable.

Indeed, your eye easily strays from it.

A suit of armor or shield that has this property renders you and all your equipment completely imperceptible to other creatures.

When you activate it, you become invisible and inaudible, and you cannot be detected by any nonmagical sensory method (including scent, hearing, tremorsense, blindsense, and the like).

Once activated, this effect lasts for 3 minutes or until you attack (as defined for the purpose of the invisibility spell; PH 245).

Creatures immune to mind-affecting spells and abilities can perceive you normally.

The vanishing property functions two times per day.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, suggestion or cloud mind (EPH 84).

Cost to Create: Varies.

VARIABLE

Price: +1 bonus

Property: Shield

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) transmutation

Activation: Swift (mental)

This shield is made up of many smooth, overlapping strips.

A variable shield can change its size, becoming a buckler, light shield, heavy shield, or tower shield (sized appropriately for you) upon activation.

All the rules for carrying items while using shields apply to the new shield size (see Armor Descriptions, PH 124).

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, shrink item.

Cost to Create: Varies.

WOODWALK

Price: +9,000 gp

Property: Armor

Caster Level: 9th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 19) conjuration

Activation: Standard (command)

This armor's surface is etched to look like a tree, with the chest serving as the trunk and lower branches, and the arms as thick boughs.

If you have the woodland stride class feature, you can activate woodwalk armor to step into a tree and exit from another, as if affected by the tree stride spell.

The woodwalk property functions three times per day, and the effect lasts for 1 round.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, tree stride.

MAGIC OF FAERÛN (3.0)

BLUESHINE

This quality can be applied only to metal armor, which gains a blue-black color when so treated.

The armor never tarnishes and is immune to acid and rust attacks.

The wearer also gains a +5 circumstance bonus on Hide checks.

This bonus does not stack with the Hide bonus granted by a cloak of elvenkind.

Caster Level: 12th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, spellcaster 12th level+, 5+ ranks in Alchemy; Market

Price: +1 bonus.

DEATH WARD

Once per day, armor enhanced by this special ability makes the wearer immune to death effects.

The armor's magic automatically confers death ward for a period of 70 minutes the first time the wearer is exposed to a death effect in the course of a day.

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, death ward; Market Price: +2 bonus.

EVERBRIGHT

This quality can only be applied to metal armor.

The armor is as bright and shiny as polished silver.

The armor never tarnishes and is immune to acid and rust attacks.

The wearer gains acid resistance 5.

Caster Level: 12th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, spellcaster 12th level+; Market Price: +1 bonus.

MAGIC EATING

This type of armor is normally decorated with spirals and fanged mouths.

It functions exactly like armor of spell resistance with spell resistance 13, except that if the spell resistance is effective against a spell that targets only the wearer, the armor consumes the spell and gives the wearer 1d8 temporary hit points.

These hit points do not stack, so it is impossible to have more than 8 temporary hit points from the armor at any time.

Caster Level: 16th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, the Simbul's synostodweomer, spell resistance; Market Price: +3 bonus.

NEGATIVE ENERGY PROTECTION

This armor's magic automatically confers negative energy protection once per day for a duration of 5 rounds the first time the wearer is exposed to any negative energy attack in the course of a day.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, negative energy protection; Market Price: +1 bonus.

NIMBLENESS

This type of armor feels lighter and less restrictive than other armor of its type.

While the actual weight is unchanged, the maximum Dexterity bonus increases by +2 and the armor check penalty decreases by 1.

Caster Level: 8th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, cat's grace; Market Price: +1 bonus.

PROOF AGAINST TRANSMUTATION

The character wearing this armor is impervious to transmutation effects that alter his or her form, including polymorph, petrification, and even disintegration.

Caster Level: 12th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, spell immunity; Market Price: +6 bonus.

STRENGTH

The character wearing this armor gains a +2 or +4 enhancement bonus to Strength.

Caster Level: 12th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, bull's strength; Market Price: +2, add +8,000 gp; +4, add +32,000 gp.

MAGIC OF INCARNUM (3.5)

SOULBOUND ARMOR OR SHIELD

A soulbound suit of armor or shield allows its wearer to invest essentia to improve his Armor Class.

Description: Soulbound armor and shields have no special appearance except when essentia is invested in them, at which point they take on a faint blue sheen.

Prerequisite: Anyone can wear a soulbound shield or suit of soulbound armor, though only those with an essentia pool can take advantage of its full benefit.

Activation: Investing essentia in or reallocating essentia invested in a soulbound shield or suit of armor is part of the swift action required to invest or reallocate essentia.

Effect: A soulbound shield or suit of armor serves as a receptacle for the wearer's essentia much like a soulmeld.

Every point of essentia invested in the shield or armor increases its enhancement bonus to Armor Class by 1, up to a maximum of +5.

Soulbound armor and shields have an essentia capacity.

Lesser soulbound armor or shields have a maximum essentia capacity of 2, while greater soulbound armor or shields have a maximum essentia capacity of 4.

The maximum value of essentia that can be invested in the armor or shield is equal to this capacity or the character's normal essentia capacity (see Table 2-1: Essentia Capacity), whichever is less.

Chakra Bind: Soulbound shields and suits of armor grant bonuses when they are bound to chakras as described below.

Arms: If you bind a soulbound shield to your arms chakra, you gain a +4 insight bonus on checks or rolls made to avoid being bull rushed or overrun, or to avoid the shield being sundered.

Soul: If you bind soulbound armor to your soul chakra, you gain a +4 insight bonus on saves made against the attacks of creatures whose alignments are opposed to yours in any way.

For example, a lawful good character would gain this bonus against the spells, spell-like abilities, and supernatural attacks of chaotic or evil creatures, while a neutral good character would gain the bonus only against the attacks of evil creatures.

Neutral characters gain no benefit from this chakra bind.

Aura and Caster Level: Moderate abjuration (lesser) or strong abjuration (greater); CL 6th (lesser) or 18th (greater).

Construction: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, magic vestment, essentia pool 2 (lesser) or 4 (greater).

MASTERS OF THE WILD (3.0)

AQUATIC

Armor and shields with this enchantment appear streamlined and possess a greenish glint.

A suit of armor or shield with this enchantment enables its wearer to move freely through water without the need for Swim checks.

Drowning rules still apply unless the item is also enchanted with water breathing.

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, freedom of movement, water breathing; Market Price: +2 bonus, or +3 bonus with water breathing.

EASE

A suit of armor with this enchantment allows its wearer to rest comfortably overnight without removing it, regardless of how heavy it is.

The wearer can don ease armor in only 5 rounds, or remove it in a single round.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, soften earth and stone; Market Price: +1 bonus.

WILD

The armor and enhancement bonuses of this item remain in effect even while the wearer is in wild shape.

Such items meld into the wearer's wild shape and thus cannot be seen in that form.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, meld into stone; Market Price: +3 bonus.

(3.5)

PAIRED

A shield with this special ability is ringed by a series of scales that lock into a mesh when brought in contact with an ally's shield that possesses the same ability. The wielder of a paired shield gains a +1 enhancement bonus to Armor Class for every adjacent ally also wielding a paired shield.
Faint abjuration; CL 5th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor; Price +1 bonus

(3.0)

AGILITY

This armor gives its wielder a +2, +4, or +6 resistance bonus on all Reflex saving throws made while wearing the armor.
Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, resistance, caster level must be three times armor's bonus; Market Price: +2,000 gp (+2), +8,000 gp (+4), or +18,000 (+6).

BALANCE

This armor gives its wielder a +8 competence bonus on all Balance checks while wearing the armor.
Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, cat's grace; Market Price: +1,280 gp.

BLURRING

This armor makes its wearer appear blurred and hazy, just like the blur spell.
It functions whenever the armor is worn.
Caster Level: 3rd; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, blur; Market Price: +50,000 gp.

DISPLACEMENT

This armor makes its wearer appear to be standing right next to his actual location, just like the displacement spell.
It functions whenever the armor is worn.
Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, displacement; Market Price: +100,000 gp.

FEAR

Three times per day, this armor allows the wearer to radiate an aura of fear to a radius of 30 feet.
All creatures within this radius must make a successful Will save (DC 14) or become panicked.
They suffer a -2 morale penalty on saving throws, and they flee from you.
A panicked creature has a 50% chance to drop what it's holding, chooses its path randomly (as long as it is getting away from immediate danger), and flees any other dangers that confront it.

If cornered, a panicked creature cowers.
Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, fear; Market Price: +3 bonus.

HEALING

Once per day, this armor heals the wearer as if casting cure moderate wounds on him (healing 2d8+3 hit points).
This occurs automatically the first time in a day the wearer has been wounded to 20 points below his maximum hit points or lower.
Caster Level: 3rd; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, cure moderate wounds, deathwatch; Market Price: +2 bonus.

PRESENCE

This armor provides the wearer with a +2 enhancement bonus to Charisma.
Caster Level: 12th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, creator must be 12th level; Market Price: +2 bonus.

SHAPESHIFTING

This armor's enhancement bonus becomes a deflection bonus when the wearer changes shape by using polymorph self or other magic.
Thus, a hengeyokai wearing +2 shapeshifting brigandine armor would gain a +2 deflection bonus to her AC in her animal form.
Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, polymorph self; Market Price: +1 bonus.

SIGNALING

The bearer of this shield can cast whispering wind three times per day.
Caster Level: 3rd; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, whispering wind; Market Price: +12,960 gp.

STAMINA

This armor gives its wielder a +2, +4, or +6 resistance bonus on all Fortitude saving throws made while wearing the armor.
Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, resistance, caster level must be three times armor's bonus; Market Price: +2,000 gp (+2), +8,000 gp (+4), or +18,000 (+6).

WILD

The wearer of a suit of armor or a shield with this enchantment preserves his armor bonus (and any enhancement bonus) while in her wild shape.
Armor and shields with this ability usually appear to be made covered in leaf patterns.
While the wearer is in a wild shape, the armor cannot be seen.
Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, meld into stone; Market Price: +2 bonus.

PLANAR HANDBOOK (3.5)

AMPHIBIOUS

This armor, often decorated with a wave motif, enables a character to breathe water.

The wearer also gains a +5 competence bonus on Swim checks.

Faint transmutation; CL 5th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, water breathing; Price +21,000 gp.

FIRE WARDING

This armor negates the wearer's vulnerability to fire. For example, a frost giant wearing this armor takes only normal damage from fire.

Moderate abjuration; CL 5th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, protection from energy, creator must have the cold subtype; Price +24,000 gp.

FROST WARDING

This armor negates the wearer's cold vulnerability. For example, a fire giant wearing this armor takes only normal damage from cold.

Moderate abjuration; CL 5th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, protection from energy, creator must have the fire subtype; Price +24,000 gp.

HAMATULA BARBS

Any creature striking the wearer of this armor with a handheld weapon or a natural weapon takes 1d8 points of slashing and piercing damage from the armor's barbs.

This damage does not apply to attackers using reach weapons, such as longspears.

The wearer is not harmed by the armor's barbs.

Faint transmutation; CL 3rd; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, hamatula barbs; Price +2 bonus.

PLANAR TOLERANCE

A suit of armor or a shield with this ability negates the natural effects of all planes as if the wearer were affected by a planar tolerance spell.

Strong abjuration; CL 8th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, planar tolerance; Price +25,000 gp.

SLIMY

A suit of armor or a shield with this property always appears tacky, as if in covered in partially dried, gooey red jelly.

Up to three times per day, the wearer can speak a command word to coat himself with the effect of a babau slime spell (see page 95).

Faint transmutation; CL 5th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, babau slime; Price 16,200 gp.

STYPTIC

The wearer of a suit of armor with this property does not suffer ongoing blood loss such as from dying or infernal wounds (see the infernal wound spell, page 99).

The wounds will automatically close, preventing further hit point loss and stabilizing a dying character.

In addition, the wearer has a 25% chance of being unaffected by a blood-draining attack that depletes Constitution, such as a vampire's or stirge's blood drain ability or the effect of a wounding weapon.

Faint transmutation; CL 7th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, creator must have 10 ranks in Heal; Price +2 bonus.

PLAYER'S GUIDE TO FAERÛN (3.5)

DEATH WARD

This armor's magic confers a death ward effect on the wearer once per day for a duration of 7 minutes.

The protection automatically takes effect the first time the wearer is exposed to a negative energy or death effect in the course of a day.

This armor property replaces both the death ward and the negative energy protection special abilities described in Magic of Faerûn.

Moderate necromancy; CL 7th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, death ward; Price +2 bonus.

PLAYER'S HANDBOOK 2 (3.5)

TWILIGHT

This armor special ability, which first appeared in the Book of Exalted Deeds supplement, is of particular use to duskblades.

Such armor becomes translucent when donned and possesses a faint sunset-colored sheen.

Twilight armor reduces the chance of arcane spell failure by 10%.

Faint abjuration; CL 5th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor; Price +1 bonus.

PSIONICS HANDBOOK (3.0)

APORTER

As a move-equivalent action, this suit of armor or shield instantly transports the wearer and her equipment to any spot within 800 feet that she can visualize or specify, as the dimension door power.

The armor or shield can transport the wearer in this fashion twice per day.

Manifester Level: 10th; Prerequisites: Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, dimension door; Market Price: +3 bonus.

AVERTER

On command, up to three times per day, any creature to whom the wearer presents this shield must succeed at a will save (DC 13) or be overcome by a powerful aversion to the wielder (actually the shield), and will not approach within 30 feet.

This is a mind-affecting compulsion effect, as the aversion power.

Manifester Level: 12th; Prerequisites: craft Psionic Arms and Armor, aversion; Market Price: +2 bonus.

CRYSTALLINE

This armor is made completely of crystal, although it possess all the qualities of armor of its type. Gleams and flashes within the crystal give the wearer and his armor a “fuzzy” appearance, granting the wearer one-half concealment.

This concealment translates into a 20% miss chance for each attack.

Manifester Level: 15th; Prerequisites: Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, displacement; Market Price: +3 bonus.

ECTOPLASMIC

As a move-equivalent action, this armor converts itself, its wearer, and all the wearer’s equipment into ectoplasmic form for up to 15 minutes per day, similar to the power ectoplasmic form (see the entry in Chapter 5: Powers for more details).

In this semiliquid state the wearer gains damage reduction 20/+1.

The wearer can take on ectoplasmic form in increments of up to 5 minutes, but even 1 round spent in ectoplasmic form counts as one such increment.

Manifester Level: 8th; Prerequisites: Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, ectoplasmic form; Market Price: +3 bonus.

FLOATING

This armor is psionically buoyant in water or similar liquid, negating the normal Swim check penalty for wearing armor.

Additionally, it grants a +4 circumstance bonus on Swim checks.

Manifester Level: 4th; Prerequisites: Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, float; Market Price: +1 bonus.

HEARTEN

This shield grants the owner up to 5 temporary hit points per day on command.

These temporary hit points fade after 4 minutes.

The wearer can activate this power as a free action at any time.

Manifester Level: 4th; Prerequisites: Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, verve; Market Price: +1 bonus.

LANDING

A suit of armor with this capability appears normal.

The wearer, however, automatically ignores any damage dealt by the first 20 feet of a fall.

Regardless of the height of the fall, the wearer always lands on her feet.

Manifester Level: 4th; Prerequisites: Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, catfall; Market Price: +1 bonus.

LINKED

The wearer of this armor or shield forms a telepathic bond with other wearers of linked armor or shields within 10 miles.

This ability is otherwise similar to the mindlink power.

Manifester Level: 6th; Prerequisites: Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, mindlink; Market Price: +3 bonus.

MANIFESTER

This shield must have at least one other special quality with a specified number of uses per day.

It allows the wielder to use that ability more often than otherwise allowed.

For each additional use, the wielder pays 5 power points as a standard action.

Manifester Level: 18th; Prerequisites: Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, psychic surgery; Market Price: +4 bonus.

MINDARMOR

This armor or shield grants the wearer a +4 bonus on Will saving throws to resist all mind-affecting and/or compulsion powers.

Manifester Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, negate psionics; Market Price: +3 bonus.

PHASING

The wearer of this armor can move through wooden, plaster, or stone walls, but not other materials.

Each day, the wearer can pass through a total length of 60 feet, breaking this distance up into several smaller passages or one long one, as desired.

A wearer who exceeds this daily allotment is ejected from the material at the point of entry, ending up prone in front of the now impassible wall.

Manifester Level: 15th; Prerequisites: Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, phase door; Market Price: +3 bonus.

POWER RESISTANCE

This ability grants the armor’s wearer power resistance while the armor is worn.

The power resistance can be PR 13, PR 15, PR 17, or PR 19, depending on the armor.

Manifester Level: 15th; Prerequisites: craft Psionic Arms and Armor, power resistance; Market Price: +2 bonus (PR 13); +3 bonus (PR 15); +4 bonus (PR 17); +5 bonus (PR 19).

QUICKNESS

This armor increases the wearer's speed by 5 feet. Thus, a character whose normal speed in armor is 20 feet moves 25 feet in armor of quickness.
Manifester Level: 4th; Prerequisites: Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, burst; Market Price: +1 bonus.

RADIANT

The wearer gains energy resistance 10 against energy attacks (acid, cold, electricity, fire, and sonic). The armor absorbs the first 10 points of damage dealt by any such attack, causing it to shine for a number of rounds equal to the points of damage absorbed. This light is sufficient to illuminate a 60-foot-radius area.
Manifester Level: 18th; Prerequisites: Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, energy barrier; Market Price: +5 bonus.

RANGED

The wielder of this shield can throw it in combat, with a range increment of 30 feet. While in the air, the shield is treated in all ways as a ranged weapon and cannot be blocked or grabbed except by appropriate feats. No matter the size of the wielder, a small shield deals 1d6 points of damage and a large one 1d8. The wielder's Strength modifier (if within 30 feet of the target) and the shield's enhancement bonus, if any, add to the base damage. Whether it misses or strikes its target, the shield returns through the air to the wielder that threw it. It returns on the next move-equivalent action of the wielder, who can also take a move-equivalent action as the shield returns. If no clear route exists back to the wielder, the shield falls to the ground.
Manifester Level: 5th; Prerequisites: craft Psionic Arms and Armor, far hand; Market Price: +1 bonus.

REINFORCEMENT

This suit of armor or shield produces a psionic force that protects vital areas of the wearer more effectively. When a critical hit or sneak attack is scored on the wearer, there is a chance that the critical or sneak attack is negated and damage is instead rolled normally:

Reinforcement Type	Chance for Normal Damage	Market Price
Minor	25%	+1 bonus
Medium	75%	+3 bonus
Greater	100%	+5 bonus

Manifester Level: 13th; Prerequisites: Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, iron body; Market Price: varies (see above).

SEEING

This armor grants a wider than normal field of vision, so that opponents flanking the wearer gain only a +1 bonus on their attack rolls instead of +2 (rogues still get their sneak attack because the wearer is still partly flanked).

The wearer gains a +1 enhancement bonus on all Spot checks but concurrently suffers a -2 penalty on saves against all gaze attacks.

Manifester Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, expanded vision; Market Price: +1 bonus.

THOUGHT BASTION

This shield protects the wielder as the Psychic Bastion feat. While holding the shield, the wielder gains mental hardness +1 against a foe's successful psionic attack—even id insinuation.

This bonus stacks with other mental hardness bonuses due to the Psychic Bastion feat or through psionic defense modes.

Manifester Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, Psychic Bastion, thought shield; Market Price: +2 bonus.

TIME BUTTRESS

This shield gives the wielder a chance to avoid telling blows by reliving the last few moments of combat.

Once per day, the wielder can use time regression as though manifesting the power.

Manifester Level: 15th; Prerequisites: Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, time regression; Market Price: +5 bonus.

VANISHING

On command, this suit of armor or shield renders its wearer and all the wearer's equipment invisible.

This invisibility is broken by the standard methods.

The wearer can use this ability twice per day.

Manifester Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, invisibility; Market Price: +3 bonus.

WALL

As a standard action, the wielder can hold forth this shield and command a wall of ectoplasm to grow from the edges of the shield.

This forms a wall whose area is up to 120 feet square or a sphere or hemisphere with a radius of up to 12 feet.

The shield remains part of the wall until the duration elapses or until repossessed by the wearer, at which time the wall of ectoplasm dissipates.

Manifester Level: 12th; Prerequisites: Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, wall of ectoplasm; Market Price: +3 bonus.

RACES OF FAERÛN (3.0)

COOLING

This metal armor seems cool to the touch, no matter what the environment.

The wearer of such armor gains fire resistance 5.

At the cost of increasing the armor's cost by another +1 property, this ability can be upgraded to the fire resistance ability described in the DUNGEON MASTER'S Guide.

Caster Level: 3rd; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, endure elements; Market Price: +1 bonus.

WARMING

This metal armor seems warm to the touch, no matter what the environment.

The wearer of such armor gains cold resistance 5.

At the cost of increasing the armor's cost by another +1 property, this ability can be upgraded to the cold resistance ability described in the DUNGEON MASTER'S Guide.

Caster Level: 3rd; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, endure elements; Market Price: +1 bonus.

RACES OF THE WILD (3.5)

WOODWALK

Armor with this special ability allows the wearer to enter a tree and exit from another tree as if under the effect of tree stride, but only if he has the woodland stride ability.

Using this ability is a free action, but the wearer can use it only three times each day (that is, he can enter one tree and exit from another one on three occasions in 24 hours).

Woodwalk armor is a favorite among elf and raptoran druids and rangers.

Moderate transmutation; CL 9th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, tree stride; Price +9,000 gp.

SANDSTORM (3.5)

COOL

This special ability can be placed only on a suit of armor. The suit's wearer does not take the normal -4 penalty on Fortitude saves to resist the effects of hot environments. Faint abjuration; CL 3rd; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, endure elements; Price +2,400 gp.

DESSICATION RESISTANCE

This special ability can be placed only on a suit of armor. The armor absorbs the first 10 points of dessication damage per attack that the wearer would normally take.

Faint abjuration; CL 3rd; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, protection from dessication; Price +9,000 gp.

SCORPION CARAPACE

This special ability can be placed only on a suit of armor. A favorite of many desert fighters, this suit of armor contains the essence of and has a visual resemblance to a desert scorpion.

The wearer gains the benefit of the Scorpion's Resolve and Scorpion's Sense feats (see page 53).

Moderate transmutation; CL 9th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Scorpion's Resolve and Scorpion's Sense or resistance, and creator must be 12th level; Price +32,000 gp.

SHINING SOUTH (3.5)

ANCHORING

A character wearing a suit of armor or a shield with this property is difficult to move from his position during a fight.

The wearer gains a +5 enhancement bonus on the appropriate ability checks to resist bull rush, overrun, and trip attacks.

Faint transmutation; CL 5th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, bull's strength; Price +3,750 gp.

ANCHORING, GREATER

As anchoring, except it grants a +10 enhancement bonus on the appropriate ability checks against bull rush, overrun, and trip attacks.

Moderate transmutation; CL 10th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, bull's strength; Price +15,000 gp.

BLINKING

On command, a character wearing armor with this property can blink back and forth from the Material Plane and the Ethereal Plane (as the blink spell).

This ability can be activated once per day and lasts for 1 minute.

Faint transmutation; CL 10th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, blink; Price +15,000 gp.

BLURRING

The form of a creature wearing this type of armor or shield shifts and wavers.

This distortion grants the wearer concealment (20% miss chance).

Those who cannot see the wearer may ignore the effect, as can someone under the effect of true seeing.

Faint illusion; CL 3rd; Craft Arms and Armor, blur; Price +36,000 gp.

COMFORT

Armor with this property allows its wearer to ignore the effects of intense natural heat or cold.

The character can exist comfortably in conditions between -50 and 140 degrees Fahrenheit without having to make Fortitude saves (as described on pages 302 and 303 of the Dungeon Master's Guide).

The character's other equipment is likewise protected.

Faint abjuration; CL 5th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, endure elements; Price +5,000 gp.

FREEDOM

A character wearing armor with this property can act as if continually under the effect of a freedom of movement spell.

Moderate abjuration; CL 7th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, freedom of movement; Price +60,000 gp.

HEALING

When someone wearing armor with this property is rendered disabled or dying from injuries, the armor heals 20 points of damage automatically (the wearer does not need to activate the property).

This ability functions once per day.

Moderate evocation; CL 11th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, contingency, cure moderate wounds; Price +32,000 gp.

HEALTH

A character wearing a suit of armor or a shield with this property is immune to all types of diseases, whether natural or supernatural.

Faint conjuration; CL 5th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, remove disease; Price +11,250 gp.

MASKING

A suit of armor or a shield with this ability protects its wearer and his gear from divination spells and items (such as crystal balls).

If a divination is attempted on the wearer, the caster of the divination must succeed on a DC 20 caster level check.

Faint abjuration; CL 5th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, nondetection; Price +45,000 gp.

MENACING

Armor or shields with this property allow their users to terrify foes.

Three times per day, on command, the wearer becomes frightening, forcing any opponent within 30 feet and with fewer HD than she possesses to make a Will saving throw (DC 10 + 1/2 the wearer's HD + her Cha modifier).

Those who fail become panicked for 10 rounds and cower if cornered.

Those who make the saving throw are shaken for 1 round, but are immune to further uses of this ability from the same menacing armor for 24 hours.

Moderate necromancy; CL 9th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Selective Spell, fear; Price +60,000 gp.

MIRROR IMAGE

On command, three times per day, a suit of armor or a shield with this property allows the user create images of himself such as those created by the mirror image spell. The ability creates six images that last for 6 minutes or until they are struck, whichever comes first.

Moderate illusion; CL 6th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, mirror image; Price +20,000 gp.

PROOF AGAINST ENCHANTMENTS

A character wearing a suit of armor or a shield that possesses this property gains immunity to the first three enchantment spells that would otherwise affect him each day.

Moderate abjuration; CL 9th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, break enchantment; Price +50,000 gp.

SAILING

The wearer of armor with this quality automatically succeeds on Balance checks (up to DC 20) while on board a ship.

Though its weight does not change, the armor itself is slightly buoyant, granting the wearer a +5 circumstance bonus on Swim checks.

Moderate transmutation; CL 6th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, sea legs, creator must have 5 ranks in the Swim skill; Price +20,000 gp.

SANCTUARY

Three times per day, on command, a character wearing armor or a shield with this property is protected as if by a sanctuary spell (Will DC 11 negates).

The effect lasts for 1 minute.

Moderate abjuration; CL 10th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, sanctuary; Price +1 bonus.

VERMIN CONTROLLING

The wearer of a suit of armor or a shield with this property may control up to 26 HD of vermin per day, similar to the undead controlling property (see the Dungeon Master's Guide for more details).

At dawn each day, the wearer loses control of the vermin still under his sway.

Armor or shields with this ability appear to be made of segmented body parts (such as an arachnid or an insect); this feature is entirely decorative and has no other effect on the armor.

Strong enchantment; CL 15th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, mass charm monster; Price +49,000 gp.

STORMWRACK (3.5)

BUOYANT

This special ability can be placed only on a suit of armor. Buoyant armor looks no different from a normal suit, but it is much lighter.

It weighs only half as much as normal, and its armor check penalty is not doubled for Swim checks.

The armor is no less awkward to wear, however, so medium and heavy armors still slow the wearer.

Moderate transmutation; CL 7th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, freedom of movement; Price +1 bonus.

DEEP

This special ability can be placed only on a suit of armor. A suit of deep armor is a dull black color.

The wearer gains the ability to breathe water and is immune to damage from cold water and to pressure in extreme depths of water.

Additionally, he gains darkvision out to 60 feet.

Moderate transmutation; CL 9th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, transformation of the deeps; Price +22,500 gp.

GILLED

This special ability can be placed only on a suit of armor. Gilled armor has a decorative fluted border around the neck.

A water-breathing wearer of gilled armor can breathe and speak freely in air.

Moderate transmutation; CL 5th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, air breathing; Price +7,500 gp.

NACREOUS

A shield or suit of nacreous armor has a pearlescent sheen. The wearer has improved protection from piercing weapons, gaining an additional +2 bonus to AC against such attacks.

Faint abjuration; CL 3rd; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, mage armor; Price +1 bonus.

SWORD AND FIST (3.0)

ARROW CATCHING

A shield with this ability attracts ranged weapons to it. It has a deflection bonus of +1 versus ranged weapons because projectiles and thrown weapons veer toward it. Additionally, any projectile or thrown weapon aimed at a target within 5 feet of the shield's wearer diverts from its original target and targets the shield's bearer instead.

(If the wielder has total cover with respect to the attacker, the projectile or thrown weapon is not diverted).

Additionally, those attacking the wearer with ranged weapons ignore any miss chances that would normally apply.

Projectiles and thrown weapons that have an enhancement bonus higher than the shield's base AC bonus are not diverted to the wearer (but the shield's increased AC bonus still applies against these weapons).

The wielder activates this ability with a command word and can shut it off by repeating the command word.

Caster Level: 8th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, entopic shield; Market Price: +1 bonus.

DANCING

The wearer can loose a dancing shield as a standard action and command it to protect a single character (possibly the wearer himself).

The dancing shield floats in the air in front of the protected character, darting in front of an opponent's weapons and providing with respect to the attacker, the projectile or thrown cover against attacks from one opponent per round. (It provides cover against an attacker unless it has already done so since its wielder's last turn).

Use the shield's armor bonus (including its enhancement bonus) as the cover bonus to AC.

At the end of 4 rounds, the dancing shield falls to the ground.

The user must pick it up and command it for it to function again.

Only one dancing shield can protect a character.

It is half as effective as normal (half the cover bonus to AC) when protecting a Large-size creature, and it cannot effectively provide cover for a Huge or bigger creature. The dancing shield only functions for a character that is proficient with using shields.

It ceases dancing before 4 rounds have passed if so commanded.

Caster Level: 15th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, animate objects; Market Price: +3 bonus.

UNDERDARK (3.5)

DROWCRAFT

Drowcraft armors were once common, but they have fallen out of everyday use in many drow cities.

Drowcraft armor provides a +2 deflection bonus to Armor Class if the wearer is in an earth node or area of faerzress.

Outside these areas, the deflection bonus is lost, but the armor otherwise functions normally.

Drowcraft armor that is exposed to sunlight must make a DC 8 Fortitude save or dissolve utterly.

A new save at the same DC is required for each day of exposure.

Covered armor and armor exposed to indirect light (such as indoors) are still vulnerable to this effect, but a drowcraft armor can be kept safe indefinitely inside a lead-lined case.

A drowcraft armor treated with darkoil (see Special Items, above) is immune to the effects of sunlight.

Strong abjuration; CL 12th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, contingency, disintegrate, drow; Price +1 bonus.

Halfweight: All halfweight armors are exceptionally crafted works of art that use psionic circuitry, exceptional materials, and unbelievable articulation engineering to reduce the weight of normal armor to half its listed weight. A halfweight armor is treated as light armor in every way, except that the protection it provides is not affected.

Thus, +1 halfweight breastplate is light armor and can be used without penalty by someone who has proficiency only with light armor.

Moderate transmutation; CL 8th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor or Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, psionic creature; Price +3 bonus (+2 bonus if used on illithidwrought armor).

ILLITHIDWROUGHT

Illithidwrought armors are common enough within the confines of illithid-controlled areas, but they are little known in the world beyond.

Such armors sometimes seem to have minds of their own, moving and shifting almost imperceptibly, even when not worn.

An illithidwrought armor grants any wearer a +1 insight bonus to Armor Class.

This bonus rises to +2 for a psionic creature.

Moderate divination; CL 8th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor or Craft Psionic Arms and Armor, psionic creature; Price +2 bonus.

MALLEABLE

Malleable armor allows its wearer to move naturally in the cramped quarters of caves and tunnels.

The wearer of malleable armor ignores the speed reduction for hampered movement when moving in a narrow space (an area smaller than but at least one-half of the wearer's space) or a low space (an area shorter than but at least one-half of the wearer's height).

The wearer also retains his Dexterity bonus (if any) to his Armor Class.

If the space is both narrow and low, the wearer functions as if only one of those conditions applied.

Moderate transmutation; CL 7th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Tunnelrunner feat; Price +1 bonus.

STARVER

Armor created with this special ability is so named because more than a few mind flayers have lost tentacles to its slashing blades.

Such armor incorporates a special defense against creatures that attempt to grab or swallow the wearer.

When an enemy attempts a grapple check against the wearer, razor-sharp blades spring out in all directions, dealing 2d6 points of slashing damage to the grappling creature.

The blades instantly retract if the wearer is released; otherwise, they continue to deal 2d6 points of damage to the grappling creature each round on the wearer's turn.

They also deal damage against any creature that has swallowed the wearer.

Should the wearer die, the blades become inert.

Moderate transmutation; CL 7th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor; Price +2 bonus.

XORN MOVEMENT

This property grants the wearer the benefit of the xorn movement spell (see Chapter 4) for 9 rounds per day.

This duration need not be used all at once.

Moderate transmutation; CL 9th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, xorn movement; Price 36,000 gp more than the armor's normal price.

BONDING RITUALS

DUNGEON MASTER'S GUIDE 2 (3.5)

BLOOD

You forge a bond with your chosen weapon by using it to defeat a powerful enemy.

Prerequisite: Base attack bonus +3.

Task: You must use the chosen weapon to strike the killing blow against a living creature whose Challenge Rating is at least 2 higher than your character level.

The creature must be an aberration, animal, dragon, giant, magical beast, monstrous humanoid, or vermin.

Ceremony: Within 1 hour of completing the task, you must complete a 15-minute ceremony of respect for the vanquished foe, during which you anoint both yourself and the weapon with the creature's blood (or similar sort of bodily fluid).

Benefit: You gain a +2 bonus on Knowledge checks related to creatures of the same type as the vanquished foe (see the Knowledge skill description, page 78 of the Player's Handbook).

For example, defeating a wyvern as part of the Ritual of Blood grants you a +2 bonus on Knowledge (arcana) checks regarding dragons.

Truebond Benefit: You gain a +4 bonus on damage rolls against creatures of the same type as the vanquished foe.

Typical Items: This ritual can be used with any weapon.

DREAD

You forge a bond with your chosen weapon by overcoming your natural fear of life-draining effects.

Prerequisite: Intimidate 6 ranks.

Task: You must use the chosen weapon to deliver the killing blow against a creature with the energy drain special attack (such as a vampire) whose Challenge Rating is at least 2 higher than your character level.

Ceremony: Within 1 minute of completing the task, you must spend a full-round action to channel the dissipating negative energy of your vanquished foe into yourself and your weapon.

This process bestows one negative level on you, which must remain in effect for 24 hours.

If the negative level is removed by any means during this period, the ritual automatically fails.

At the end of the 24-hour waiting period, the negative level disappears as if you had successfully saved against it, and the ceremony is complete.

Benefit: You gain a +2 bonus on Fortitude saves made to remove negative levels.

Truebond Benefit: You can ignore the effects of a single negative level, taking no penalties on rolls and losing neither hit points nor spells.

(You must still make the usual saving throw 24 hours later to remove the negative level so that it does not become permanent).

If you have gained more than one negative level, you function as if you had one less negative level than you actually do.

Typical Items: This ritual can be used with any weapon.

FAITH

You forge a bond with the chosen item by using it in battle against an enemy of your faith.

Prerequisites: Knowledge (religion) 3 ranks, able to cast 2nd-level divine spells.

Task: While wielding or wearing the item, you must deliver the killing blow to an outsider whose Challenge Rating is at least 2 higher than your character level.

At least one component of this outsider's alignment must be opposed to yours.

For example, if you are lawful good, the outsider must be either chaotic or evil.

If you are neutral, neither component of the outsider's alignment can be neutral (that is, it must be lawful good, chaotic good, lawful evil, or chaotic evil).

Ceremony: Within 1 hour of completing the task, you must begin an 8-hour ritual of prayer and concentration in a temple or on a site dedicated to your patron deity.

Benefit: You gain a +1 bonus on Will saves against spells or spell-like abilities used by outsiders whose alignment does not match your own.

Truebond Benefit: The bonded item is considered to have your alignment, and any effects it generates have alignment aspects that match yours.

Furthermore, if you have any abilities that affect your alignment-based spells (such as the Good domain), these abilities also affect the bonded item's powers.

Finally, any attack made by a bonded weapon that has this benefit overcomes damage reduction of the appropriate types.

For example, if you are lawful good, your bonded weapon overcomes damage reduction as if its attacks were both good and lawful.

Typical Items: This ritual can be used with any armor, shield, staff, amulet, phylactery, or vestment.

FIRE

You forge a bond with your chosen item by enduring the destructive power of a fiery conflagration.

Prerequisite: Base attack bonus +3.

Task: While holding the chosen item, you must voluntarily fail a saving throw against a fire spell cast by an enemy whose caster level equals or exceeds your character level. The spell must be capable of dealing damage equal to at least half your full normal hit points.

You may not use any means (including spells such as resist energy) to protect yourself from the fire damage dealt by the spell.

You need not survive the damage to complete the task.

Ceremony: Within 24 hours of completing the task, you must complete a 1-hour ceremony of prayer in front of a bonfire or similar conflagration.

Benefit: You gain a +1 bonus on saving throws against spells or effects with the fire descriptor.

Truebond Benefit: You gain resistance to fire 10.
Typical Items: This ritual can be used with any armor, shield, weapon, cloak, ring, or helm.

HONOR

You forge a bond with the chosen item by defeating an enemy in honorable combat.
Prerequisites: Diplomacy 6 ranks, any lawful alignment.
Task: You must challenge and defeat a creature whose Challenge Rating equals or exceeds your character level and whose Intelligence score is 3 or higher. All damage dealt to the creature must be nonlethal, and none of it may be dealt by any of your allies.
Ceremony: Within 1 hour of completing the task, you must begin a 10-minute ceremony of respect for the vanquished foe.
This ceremony must conclude with the bestowal of sufficient healing (magical or otherwise) to restore the creature to consciousness.
Benefit: As long as the bonded item is stowed (not held, worn, or otherwise immediately useable), you gain a +1 bonus on initiative checks.
Truebond Benefit: You gain a +4 dodge bonus to AC against attacks of opportunity made by creatures that you have not yet attacked.
Typical Items: This ritual can be used with any weapon, armor, or shield.

MAGIC

You forge a bond with the chosen item by overcoming an enemy spellcaster's magical prowess.
Prerequisite: Spellcraft 6 ranks.
Task: You must successfully counter or dispel a spell cast by an enemy whose caster level is at least 2 higher than your own.
Ceremony: Within 24 hours of completing the task, you must meditate for 8 consecutive hours without interruption.
Benefit: You gain a +1 bonus on caster level checks made while holding or wearing the bonded item.
Truebond Benefit: You gain a +1 bonus on saving throws against spells and spell-like abilities made while holding or wearing the item.
Typical Items: This ritual can be used with any rod, staff, wand, amulet, cloak, or robe.

PURITY

You forge a bond with the chosen item by undergoing a grueling ritual of bodily purification.
Prerequisite: Concentration 6 ranks or Autohypnosis 6 ranks (see the Expanded Psionics Handbook).
Task and Ceremony: You must meditate and fast for 14 consecutive days, eating no food and drinking only water. You may not use any means (either magical or mundane) to heal the nonlethal damage dealt by starvation, nor may you accept any assistance from another character in completing (or surviving) this task.
The item must be in your possession during the entire process.
Benefit: You gain a +1 bonus on Constitution checks and Constitution-based skill checks.

Truebond Benefit: You take no penalties to Strength or Dexterity for fatigue.
Typical Items: This ritual can be used with any weapon, bracers, or cloak.

SONG

You forge a bond with the chosen item by using it to demonstrate your talent for performance.
Despite its name, this ritual applies to any kind of performance, even one with no vocal components.
Prerequisite: Perform (any) 6 ranks.
Task and Ceremony: You must use Perform checks to earn at least 1% of the gp cost for imbuing the bonded item with its new ability.
See the Perform skill description, page 79 of the Player's Handbook, for details.
The item must be incorporated into each of these performances in some way—perhaps as accompaniment to a musical performance, or as a prop or costume accessory.
Benefit: You gain a +1 bonus on Perform checks made while holding or wearing the item.
Truebond Benefit: You can add 1 to the caster level of any spell you cast while holding or wearing the item, as long as the spell has both a verbal and a somatic component. A spell cast without either or both of these components for any reason—either because it does not require them or because it is affected by a feat such as Still Spell—does not gain this benefit.
Typical Items: This ritual can be used with any amulet, cloak, hat, instrument, or vest.

THEFT

You forge a bond with your chosen item by using it in grand larceny.
Prerequisites: Any three of the following skills (6 ranks each): Bluff, Disable Device, Hide, Move Silently, Open Lock, Search, or Sleight of Hand.
Task: You must steal one or more objects that together are worth at least as much as the gp cost of the ceremony (see below) from a foe whose Challenge Rating is at least 2 higher than your character level.
The foe need not be in physical possession of the objects at the time of the theft, but he must be within 100 feet of them.
You must then use your chosen item in some fashion that involves one of the same rolls or checks you made during the theft.
Ceremony: Within 1 hour of completing the task, you must give away stolen treasure whose gp value equals or exceeds the cost of imbuing the bonded item with its new abilities. Throughout the distribution of these items, you must spread tales of your skill and cunning.
Benefit: You gain a +1 bonus on any Open Lock check or Search check on which you take 10.
Truebond Benefit: You gain a +2 bonus on any Open Lock or Search check on which you take 20, and on any Bluff, Disable Device, or Sleight of Hand check on which you take 10.
Typical Items: This ritual can be used on any boots, cloak, gloves, or container.

TRAVEL

You forge a bond with the chosen item by carrying it with you during a long journey.

Prerequisite: Knowledge (geography) 6 ranks or Survival 6 ranks.

Task: You must complete an overland trek of at least 50 miles per character level you possess.

You can have company on this journey, but you must cover the entire distance on foot.

The chosen item must accompany you throughout this task.

Ceremony: At some point during each day of travel, you must meditate for 1 hour.

If this meditation is interrupted, you can begin meditating again.

However, if you let an entire 24 hours pass without performing the required meditation, you must restart the journey.

Benefit: You gain a +1 bonus on Survival checks, as well as on all checks and saves mentioned in the description of the Endurance feat (see page 93 of the Player's Handbook).

Truebond Benefit: You can move at your normal speed through difficult terrain that would normally halve your speed, including undergrowth (but not heavy undergrowth), shallow bogs, steep slopes, and dense rubble.

Obstacles (such as low walls), as well as any magically created difficult terrain, hamper your movement as normal.

Typical Items: This ritual can be used on any boots, cloak, or container.

CONSTRUCTS

ARMS AND EQUIPMENT GUIDE (3.0)

EQUINE GOLEM CONSTRUCTION

An equine golem's body must be carved from a single hardwood tree at least 100 years old.

The golem costs 20,000 gp to create, which includes 400 gp for the body.

Assembling the body requires a successful Craft (woodworking) check (DC 13).

The creator must be 12th level and able to cast arcane spells. Completing the ritual drains 750 XP from the creator and requires animate objects, geas/quest, limited wish, phantom steed, and shatter.

CITY OF SPLENDORS WATERDEEP (3.5)

GARGOYLE CONSTRUCTION

A guardgoyle's body is sculpted from granite or basalt and coated with gem dust.

The materials cost 1,000 gp.

The creature's master can assemble the body or hire someone else to do the job.

Creating the body requires a DC 20 Craft (sculpting) check or a DC 20 Craft (stonemasonry) check.

After the body is sculpted, the guardgoyle is animated through an extended magical ritual that requires a specially prepared laboratory or workroom, similar to an alchemist's laboratory and costing 500 gp to establish.

If the creator is personally constructing the creature's body, the building and the ritual can be performed together.

Damage to a guardgoyle can be repaired with a stone shape spell; each such use restores 1d8 hit points to the creature. Repair damage spells also work.

CL 7th; Craft Construct, alarm, fly, shout, stone shape, caster must be at least 7th level; Price 4,000 gp; Cost 2,500 gp + 120 XP.

SCALADAR CONSTRUCTION

A scaladar's body is sculpted from 2,000 pounds of pure iron, smelted with rare tinctures and admixtures costing at least 5,000 gp.

Assembling the body requires a DC 20 Craft (armorsmithing) check or a DC 20 Craft (weaponsmithing) check.

In addition, an existing ring of Trobriand must be employed or a new one created as part of the process.

(The cost of doing so is not included in the cost or price of the construct).

CL 13th; Craft Construct, arcane sight, limited wish, polymorph any object, protection from energy, shield, caster must be at least 13th level; Price 25,000 gp; Cost 15,000 gp + 800 XP.

WALKING STATUE OF WATERDEEP CONSTRUCTION

A walking statue is a great colossus made of dense stone, usually dolomite or andesite.

It stands 40 feet tall and weighs about 1,000 tons.

The stone must be of good quality, and costs 50,000 gp. Assembling the body requires a DC 25 Craft (sculpting) or Craft (stonemasonry) check.

CL 18th; Craft Construct, ethereal jaunt, Mordenkainen's disjunction, see invisibility; Price 250,000 gp; Cost 150,000 gp + 8,000 XP.

CITYSCAPE (3.5)

SIEGE GOLEM CONSTRUCTION

A siege golem's body must be crafted from enormous amounts of high-quality hardwoods, with iron joints and leather fittings, costing a total of 3,000 gp.

The catapult requires masterwork craftsmanship.

The body must then be engraved with mystical sigils, and treated with rare tinctures worth another 3,000 gp.

Assembling the body requires a DC 15 Craft (carpentry) check.

CL 14th; Craft Construct, geas/quest, fabricate, limited wish, caster must be at least 14th level; Price 100,000 gp; Cost 56,000 gp + 4,000 XP.

COMPLETE DIVINE (3.5)

BOGUN CONSTRUCTION

Unlike a homunculus, a bogun is created from natural materials available in any forest.

Thus, there is no gold piece cost for its creation.

All materials used become permanent parts of the bogun.

The creator must be at least 7th level and possess the Craft Wondrous Item feat to make a bogun.

Before casting any spells, a physical form must be woven out of living (or once-living) vegetable matter to hold the magical energy.

A bit of the creator's own body, such as a few strands of hair or a drop of blood, must also be incorporated into this crude mannequin.

The creator may assemble the body personally or hire someone else to do it.

Creating the mannequin requires a Craft (basketweaving or weaving) check (DC 12).

Once the body is finished, the creator must animate it through an extended magical ritual that requires a week to complete.

The creator must labor for at least 8 hours each day in complete solitude in a forest grove; any interruption from another sentient creature undoes the magic.

If the creator is personally weaving the creature's body, that process and the ritual can be performed together.

When not actively working on the ritual, the creator must rest and can perform no other activities except eating, sleeping, or talking.

Missing even one day causes the process to fail.

At that point, the ritual must be started anew, though the previously crafted body and the grove can be reused.

On the final day of the ritual, the creator must personally cast control plants, wood shape, and beget bogun.

These spells can come from outside sources, such as scrolls, rather than being prepared, if the creator prefers.

COMPLETE WARRIOR (3.5)

BLADE GUARDIAN CONSTRUCTION

A blade guardian is built from wood, silver, stone, and steel. The materials cost 4,000 gp.

The guardian's master may assemble the body or hire someone to do the job.

Creating the body requires a DC 16 Profession (engineering) check.

After the body is sculpted, the blade guardian is animated through an extended magical ritual that requires a specially prepared laboratory or workroom, similar to an alchemist's laboratory and costing 500 gp to establish.

If the creator is personally constructing the creature's body, the building and the ritual can be performed together.

A blade guardian with more than 8 Hit Dice can be created, but each additional Hit Die adds 3,000 gp to the market price, and the price increases by 15,000 gp if the creature's size increases to Large, modifying the cost to create accordingly.

Caster Level: 11th; Prerequisites: Craft Construct (see page 303 of the Monster Manual), fabricate, locate creature, Tenser's transformation; Market Price: 30,000 gp; Cost to Create: 18,000 gp + 1,200 XP.

GAUNTLET GUARDIAN CONSTRUCTION

A gauntlet guardian is built from brass, stone, and steel. The materials cost 3,000 gp.

The guardian's master may assemble the body or hire someone else to do the job.

Creating the body requires a DC 16 Profession (engineering) check.

After the body is sculpted, the gauntlet guardian is animated through an extended magical ritual that requires a specially prepared laboratory or workroom, similar to an alchemist's laboratory and costing 500 gp to establish.

If the creator is personally constructing the creature's body, the building and the ritual can be performed together.

A gauntlet guardian with more than 4 Hit Dice can be created, but each additional Hit Die adds 2,000 gp to the market price, and the price increases by 10,000 gp if the creature's size increases to Medium, modifying the cost to create accordingly.

SPARK GUARDIAN CONSTRUCTION

A spark guardian is built from wood, leather, and copper. The materials cost 2,000 gp.

The guardian's master may assemble the body or hire someone else to do the job.

Creating the body requires a DC 16 Profession (engineering) check.

After the body is sculpted, the spark guardian is animated through an extended magical ritual that requires a specially prepared laboratory or workroom, similar to an alchemist's laboratory and costing 500 gp to establish.

If the creator is personally constructing the creature's body, the building and the ritual can be performed together.

A spark guardian with more than 2 Hit Dice can be created, but each additional Hit Die adds 1,000 gp to the market price, and the price increases by 5,000 gp if the creature's size increases to Medium, modifying the cost to create accordingly.

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Construct (see page 303 of the Monster Manual), lightning bolt, locate creature, minor creation; Market Price: 10,000 gp; Cost to Create: 7,000 gp + 400 XP.

DRACONOMICON (3.5)

DRAGONBONE GOLEM CONSTRUCTION

A dragonbone golem's body must be crafted from the skeletons of one or more dragons, strung together with adamantite wire worth 5,000 gp.

Creating the body requires a DC 20 Heal check.

CL 13th; Craft Construct (see page 303 of the Monster Manual), animate dead, cause fear, geas/quest, caster must be at least 13th level; Price 115,000 gp; Cost 60,000 gp + 4,400 XP.

DRAKESTONE GOLEM CONSTRUCTION

A drakestone golem's body is intricately chiseled from a single block of high-quality stone, usually granite, weighing at least 3,000 pounds and costing 5,000 gp.

It must also be polished with rare oils worth 10,000 gp. Assembling the body requires a DC 25 Craft (sculpting or masonry) check.

CL 16th; Craft Construct (see page 303 of the Monster Manual), animate objects, antimagic field, flesh to stone, geas/quest, caster must be at least 16th level; Price 175,000 gp; Cost 95,000 gp + 6,400 XP.

IRONWYRM GOLEM CONSTRUCTION

An ironwyrms golem is sculpted from 5,000 pounds of pure iron, smelted with other rare components and elixirs costing at least 25,000 gp.

Assembling the body requires a DC 30 Craft (armorsmithing or weaponsmithing) check.

CL 18th; Craft Construct (see page 303 of the Monster Manual), animate objects, antimagic field, geas/quest, incendiary cloud, limited wish, caster must be at least 18th level; Price 225,000 gp; Cost 125,000 gp + 8,000 XP.

DROW OF THE UNDERDARK (3.5)

ADAMANTINE SPIDER CONSTRUCTION

An adamantine spider is assembled from exquisitely wrought adamantine components.

During the construction process, each component is bathed in a mixture of venom, roper blood, and the tears of a dozen slaves.

The components and materials cost 450 gp, and constructing the body requires a DC 18 Craft (metalworking) check.

In addition to the cost of materials, the creator must purchase or craft the poison the construct uses separately. An adamantine spider can be constructed with more than 4 Hit Dice.

Each additional Hit Die adds 3,000 gp to the cost.

The creation cost also includes the materials for the command amulet attuned to that adamantine spider.

For the purpose of creation, the amulet is considered part of the construct.

It is not possible to recreate a destroyed amulet, nor to bypass the amulet's function to control the adamantine spider without it.

CL 12th; Craft Construct, animate objects, discern location; Price 10,900 gp; Cost 5,450 gp + 436 XP.

EPIC LEVEL HANDBOOK (3.0)

ADAMANTINE GOLEM CONSTRUCTION

An adamantine golem's body is sculpted from 45,000 pounds of pure iron and is then polymorphed into adamantine (using wish).

The golem costs 500,000 gold pieces to create, which includes 25,000 gp for the body.

Assembling the body requires a successful Craft (armorsmithing) or Craft (weaponsmithing) check (DC 40).

The creator must be 30th level, have the Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor feat, and be able to cast arcane spells.

Completing the ritual drains 10,000 XP from the creator and requires Bigby's crushing hand, geas/quest, polymorph any object, and wish.

FLESH COLOSSUS CONSTRUCTION

Only a master necromancer of surpassing power can create a flesh colossus.

The bodies of not less than three hundred previously animated Medium-size humanoid creatures must be stripped of their flesh and the bones, which are then rendered in two great vats.

The resulting semiliquid bone-paste is then cast into a new articulated skeleton of great size, to which the rendered flesh is applied like wet clay to shape the figure.

Finally, the necromancer must bind a ghost of at least 10 HD (the more powerful the better) into the colossus to act as its controlling spirit.

Without the controlling spirit, the colossus is just an oversized zombie; with it, it functions as a golem of great size and repugnant appearance.

If no ghost is available, the necromancer may occupy the colossus himself by casting magic jar.

The colossus costs 760,000 gp to create, which includes 100,000 gp for the body.

Assembling the body takes no great skill, and many flesh colossi reveal that fact in their uncouth forms.

The creator must be 29th level and able to cast epic spells. Completing the ritual drains 30,600 XP from the creator and requires magic jar, limited wish, polymorph any object, and finger of death.

IRON COLOSSUS CONSTRUCTION

An iron colossus's body is sculpted from 150,000 pounds of pure iron.

The colossus costs 1,000,000 gp to create, which includes 100,500 gp for the body.

Assembling the body requires a successful Craft (armorsmithing) or Craft (weaponsmithing) check (DC 42).

The creator must be 35th level and able to cast epic spells.

Completing the ritual drains 50,000 XP from the creator and requires cloudkill, geas/quest, limited wish, and polymorph any object.

METAL DESTRIER

Forged by Rary the Traitor, this construct resembles a mechanical heavy warhorse with gleaming silver skin and burning yellow eyes.

It follows the orders of its creator, or whomever its creator designates as its new master (currently Robilar).

Caster Level: 16th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Wondrous Item, cloudkill, geas/quest, limited wish, polymorph any object, Craft (armor/smithing) check (DC 20), 2 months of extended magical ritual to complete; Market Price: 200,000 gp.

ROBILAR'S METAL DESTRIER

Large Construct

Hit Dice: 18d10 (99 hp)

Initiative: -1 (Dex)

Alignment: Always neutral

Advancement: 19–24 HD
(Large); 25–54 HD (Huge)

MYTHRAL GOLEM CONSTRUCTION

A mithral golem's body is sculpted from 8 1/2 tons of pure iron and is then polymorphed into mithral (using wish).

A mithral golem costs 250,000 gold pieces to create, which includes 5,000 gp for the body.

Assembling the body requires a successful Craft (armorsmithing) or Craft (weaponsmithing) check (DC 30).

The creator must be 25th level, have the Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor feat, and be able to cast arcane spells.

Completing the ritual drains 5,000 XP from the creator and requires geas/quest, haste, polymorph any object, and wish.

STONE COLOSSUS CONSTRUCTION

A stone colossus's body is chiseled from a single block of hard stone, such as granite, weighing at least 375,000 pounds.

The colossus costs 760,000 gp to create, which includes 100,000 gp for the body.

Assembling the body requires a successful Craft (sculpting) or Craft (masonry) check (DC 37).

The creator must be 25th level and able to cast epic spells.

Completing the ritual drains 30,600 XP from the creator and requires geas/quest, limited wish, polymorph any object, and shatter.

EXPANDED PSIONICS HANDBOOK (3.5)

PSION-KILLER CONSTRUCTION

A psion-killer's body is constructed from massive blocks of quartz crystal with a total weight of at least 5,000 pounds and costing at least 8,000 gp.

Assembling the body requires a DC 20 Craft (sculpting) check or a DC 20 Craft (stonemasonry) check.

ML 16th; Craft Construct, bend reality, dispel psionics, fabricate, mind seed, manifester must be at least 16th level; Price 150,000 gp; Cost 79,000 gp + 5,680 XP.

FIEND FOLIO (3.0)

BLACKSTONE GIANT CONSTRUCTION

A blackstone giant's body is carved from a single block of hard, black stone weighing at least 50,000 pounds.

A blackstone giant costs 200,000 gp to create, which includes 5,000 gp for the body.

Assembling the body requires a successful Craft (sculpting) or Craft (stonemasonry) check (DC 25).

The creator must be 20th level and be able to cast divine spells.

Completing the ritual drains 8,000 XP from the creator and requires the Craft Wondrous Item feat, animate objects, flesh to stone, geas/quest, and miracle.

BLOOD GOLEM OF HEXTOR CONSTRUCTION

A blood golem's semisolid body is created from the blood of 16 Medium-size humanoids sacrificed to Hextor.

The golem costs 50,000 gp to create.

Extracting the blood from the sacrificial victims requires a Heal check (DC 15).

The creator must be 14th level and able to cast divine spells.

Completing the creation drains 1,000 XP from the creator and requires animate objects, bull's strength, gentle repose, and heal.

The magic armor of the golem costs the standard amount for its kind, except that the materials cost for the masterwork full plate costs more than the normal amount because of the larger size and special requirements of the golem's physiology (total cost for the armor is 4,150 gp).

The masterwork flails cost 315 gp each.

Blood golems can be built with more powerful armors or weapons.

BRAIN GOLEM CONSTRUCTION

A brain golem's body is formed from the brains of intelligent creatures and topped off with a bud from a mind flayer community's elder brain to form the creature's "head".

Its skin is a membrane secreted by the elder brain bud.

The golem costs 55,000 gp to create, which includes 1,000 gp for the construction of the body.

Assembling the body requires a Heal check (DC 15).

The creator must be 16th level and able to cast arcane spells.

Completing the ritual drains 1,200 XP from the creator and requires bull's strength, feeblemind, geas/quest, limited wish, mage armor, and polymorph any object.

DEMONFLESH GOLEM CONSTRUCTION

A demonflesh golem can be constructed only in the Abyss or on another chaotic infernal plane (in the D&D cosmology, this would include Pandemonium and Carceri; see Manual of the Planes).

Assembly requires access to a variety of demon bodies and fiendish grafts (see Appendix 3), specifically including a claw fiendish arm, a fast fiendish leg, a fear fiendish eye, membranous fiendish wings, and a whip fiendish tail.

The golem costs 130,000 gp to create, which includes 1,000 gp for the construction of the body.

Assembling the body requires a Heal check (DC 15) and a Knowledge (the planes) check (DC 20).

The creator must be 18th level and able to cast both arcane and divine spells.

Completing the ritual drains 3,000 XP from the creator and requires darkness, destruction, geas/quest, horrid wilting, planar binding, poison, unholy aura, and unholy blight.

HELLFIRE GOLEM CONSTRUCTION

A hellfire golem can be constructed only on the Nine Hells of Baator or another lawful infernal plane (in the D&D cosmology, this would include Acheron and Gehenna; see Manual of the Planes).

The body is formed from special clays found only on such planes, and it is suffused with unholy energy from its plane of creation.

The golem costs 125,000 gp to create, which includes 2,000 gp for the construction of the body.

Assembling the body requires a Craft (sculpting) check (DC 20).

The creator must be 18th level and able to cast both arcane and divine spells.

Completing the ritual drains 2,500 XP from the creator and requires burning hands, fireball, flame strike, flare, geas/quest, planar ally, and produce flame.

MAUG CONSTRUCTION

Only the Thulkarr understand the secrets of a maug's creation, but rumors persist that old ruins might conceal ancient tablets describing that process and the rites by which a whole race can be banished to Acheron.

In addition to knowledge of the secret rites, it requires 10,000 gp and 500 XP to create a maug; the Thulkarr sell the services of maug mercenaries for the express purpose of garnering the funds necessary to build more of their kind.

NECROPHIDIUS CONSTRUCTION

To construct a necrophidius, the creator needs the Craft Wondrous Item feat and must expend 5,000 gp in materials and 100 XP.

The cost includes the need for a skeleton of a Medium-size snake, the skull of a humanoid creature, and all other mundane ingredients.

Assembling the body requires a successful Craft (sculpting) check (DC 13).

If the creator is a sorcerer or wizard, the construction process requires geas/quest, hold person, hypnotism, and Mordenkainen's faithful hound.

If the creator is a cleric, it requires animate objects, command, geas/quest, and hold person.

The process takes five days.

Larger examples of this creature can be created, with each additional Hit Die increasing the cost by 2,500 gp and 50 XP.

WICKER MAN CONSTRUCTION

A wicker man is made from green vines and branches cut from ancient oak and darkwood trees; the total weight of these materials must be at least 800 pounds.

A wicker man costs 70,000 gp to create, which includes 3,000 gp for the wood and 20,000 gp for special alchemical herbs and oils that must be used to treat the wood.

Assembling the body requires a successful Craft (woodworking) check (DC 17) and a successful Craft (alchemy) check (DC 15).

The creator must be 16th level and able to cast divine spells. Completing the ritual drains 2,800 XP from the creator and requires entangle, liveoak, and protection from energy.

FIENDISH CODEX 2 (3.5)

HELLFIRE ENGINE CONSTRUCTION

A hellfire engine is assembled from 40,000 pounds of cold iron bathed in the blood of a dozen celestials and then polished with a rare blend of brimstone, sulfur, and acids found only in Hell, costing at least 80,000 gp.

Assembling the body requires a DC 20 Craft (armorsmithing) check or a DC 20 Craft (weaponsmithing) check.

CL 25th; Craft Construct (MM 303), hellfire storm, geas/quest, limited wish, polymorph any object, caster must be at least 25th level and lawful evil; Price 320,000 gp; Cost 200,000 gp + 9,600 XP.

HEROES OF BATTLE (3.5)

BRASS STEED CONSTRUCTION

A brass steed's body is sculpted from 3,000 pounds of copper and zinc smelted with rare tinctures and admixtures costing at least 1,000 gp.

Creating the body requires a DC 12 Craft (armorsmithing) check or a DC 12 Craft (weaponsmithing) check. CL 8th; Craft Construct, animate objects, bull's strength, flame arrow, geas/quest, haste, caster must be at least 8th level; Price 19,000 gp; Cost 10,000 gp + 720 XP.

HEROES OF HORROR (3.5)

CADAVER GOLEM CONSTRUCTION

The pieces of a cadaver golem must come from normal humanoid corpses that have not decayed significantly. Assembly requires a minimum of six different bodies—one for each limb, the torso (including head), and the brain. In some cases, more bodies might be necessary. Special unguents and bindings worth 750 gp are also required.

Creating a flesh golem requires casting a spell with the evil descriptor.

This rite is used very infrequently, since few spellcasters care to create a homicidal, sentient golem they cannot control.

Assembling the body requires a DC 16 Craft (leatherworking) check or a DC 16 Heal check. CL 12th; Craft Construct, bull's strength, create undead, geas/quest, limited wish, caster must be at least 12th level; Price 30,000 gp; Cost 15,750 gp + 1,170 XP.

LIBRIS MORTIS (3.5)

GRAVE DIRT GOLEM CONSTRUCTION

A grave dirt golem's body must be formed from a volume of grave soil (soil dug from the immediate vicinity of a grave). This soil must weigh at least 1,000 pounds, and it must be treated with rare oils and powders worth at least 1,500 gp. Creating the body requires a DC 15 Craft (sculpting) check. CL 11th; Craft Construct (see Monster Manual, page 303), animate objects, commune, resurrection, caster must be at least 11th level; Price 36,500 gp; Cost 18,250 gp + 1,400 XP.

TOMBSTONE GOLEM CONSTRUCTION

A stone golem becomes a tombstone golem with the following substitutions.

Rather than simple stone, the creature is made up of fused grave headstones, inscribed with names in various languages, often more than one name per headstone, along with birth and death dates.

Second, its supernatural ability to slow opponents is replaced by the slay living ability.

Finally, increase the Challenge Rating by 2.

Substitute slay living (see below) for slow as a required ingredient of the construction, and change the price to 135,000 gp and the cost to 70,000 gp + 5,200 XP.

LORDS OF MADNESS (3.5)

ELDER EIDOLON CONSTRUCTION

Although the technique to build eidolons is ancient and, for all practical purposes, lost to time, rules for creating them are presented here.

Discovering the secrets of creating eidolons could form the core of a high-level adventure.

The eidolon's creator must have the Craft Construct feat.

The eidolon's body must be built from stone, and requires a DC 25 Craft (sculpting or stonemasonry) check.

Knowledge (architecture and engineering) can be substituted for the Craft skill when building an eidolon.

The cost of the eidolon's body depends on its size:

Size	Cost
Tiny	500 gp
Small	1,000 gp
Medium	2,000 gp
Large	5,000 gp
Huge	10,000 gp
Gargantuan	25,000 gp
Colossal	50,000 gp

The market price is 6,000 gp per Hit Die of the eidolon, plus the cost of its body.

The cost to create is 3,000 gp and 240 XP per Hit Die, plus the cost of the body.

The minimum caster level to create an eidolon is equal to its Hit Dice.

For example, a Gargantuan eidolon with 20 Hit Dice has a market price of 145,000 gp and requires 4,800 XP to create. The cost to create is 85,000 gp, and the caster must be at least 20th level.

LOST EMPIRES OF FAERÛN (3.5)

BATTLE HORROR CONSTRUCTION

A battle horror is created in much the same manner as a helmed horror, except that the armor acquires a +5 enhancement bonus.

A battle horror with more than 20 Hit Dice can be created, but each additional Hit Die adds +8,000 gp to the price.

Strong transmutation; CL 18th; Craft Construct (see Monster Manual), Craft Magic Arms and Armor, air walk or fly, blink, dimension door, limited wish, magic missile, spell turning; Price 150,000 gp; Cost 76,650 gp.

CRAWLING CLAW CONSTRUCTION

A swarm of crawling claws is created from the hands of three hundred Medium or Small humanoids.

No assembly is required, but the hands must be treated with unguents worth 250 gp. In addition to the hands, creating a crawling claw swarm requires casting a spell with the evil descriptor. CL 7th; Craft Construct, animate dead, cat's grace, lesser geas, caster must be at least 7th level; Price 18,000 gp; Cost 9,250 gp + 710 XP.

HELMED HORROR CONSTRUCTION

A helmed horror is built from a suit of masterwork full plate armor. After procuring the armor, the creator must animate it via an extended magical ritual that requires a specially prepared laboratory or workroom that is similar to an alchemist's laboratory and costs 500 gp to establish. The ritual also gives the armor a +3 enhancement bonus. A helmed horror with more than 13 Hit Dice can be created, but each additional Hit Die adds +5,000 gp to the price.

Strong transmutation; CL 15th; Craft Construct (see Monster Manual), Craft Magic Arms and Armor, air walk or fly, limited wish, spell turning; Price 75,000 gp; Cost 39,150 gp.

TOMB TAPPER CONSTRUCTION

While the secrets of thaalud construction have long been lost to the world at large, the tomb tappers know the secret of making more of their kind.

They usually choose to replace destroyed individuals, but they never increase their total number.

Five thaalud cooperating with each other can fashion a new tomb tapper in 100 days.

The exact requirements of the ritual are not known, but the tomb tappers must fashion the new individual's body from stone, iron, and at least 10,000 gp worth of adamantine.

MAGIC OF INCARNUM (3.5)

INCARNUM GOLEM CONSTRUCTION

An incarnum golem's body must be sculpted from adamantine, iron, and plates of magically hardened glass. These materials cost a total of 7,500 gp. Creating the body requires a DC 15 Craft (sculpting) check. CL 11th; Craft Construct (see page 303 in the Monster Manual), ability to shape a soulmeld, animate object, limited wish, planar binding, caster must be at least 11th level; Price 47,500 gp; Cost 27,500 gp + 1,600 XP.

MANUAL OF THE PLANES (3.0)

ASTRAL CARRACK CONSTRUCTION

This 100-foot-long astral ship has an open main deck and a completely enclosed middle deck and bottom deck. It requires a crew of twenty, but generally runs on a crew of forty, including an 11th-level captain, an 8th-level first officer, and five 4th-level lieutenants.

Astral ships are magically created craft of great utility on the Astral Plane.

They are certainly not creatures in their own right, but if properly manned, they can be treated as colossal constructs moving through the Astral Plane.

MASTERS OF THE WILD (3.0)

BOGUN CONSTRUCTION

Unlike a homunculus, a bogun is created from natural materials available in any forest.

Thus, there is no gold piece cost for its creation.

All materials used become permanent parts of the bogun. The creator must be at least 7th level and possess the Craft Wondrous Item feat to make a bogun.

Before casting any spells, a physical form must be woven out of living (or once-living) vegetable matter to hold the magical energy.

A bit of the creator's own body, such as a few strands of hair or a drop of blood, must also be incorporated into this crude mannequin.

The creator may assemble the body personally or hire someone else to do it.

Creating the mannequin requires a Craft (basketweaving or weaving) check (DC 12).

Once the body is finished, the creator must animate it through an extended magical ritual that requires a week to complete.

The creator must labor for at least 8 hours each day in complete solitude in a forest grove; any interruption from another sentient creature undoes the magic.

If the creator is personally weaving the creature's body, that process and the ritual can be performed together.

When not actively working on the ritual, the creator must rest and can perform no other activities except eating, sleeping, or talking.

Missing even one day causes the process to fail.

At that point, the ritual must be started anew, though the previously crafted body and the grove can be reused.

On the final day of the ritual, the creator must personally cast control plants, wood shape, and beget bogun.

These spells can come from outside sources, such as scrolls, rather than being prepared, if the creator prefers.

(3.0)

CLAY GOLEM CONSTRUCTION

A clay golem must be sculpted from one single block of clay weighting at least 1,000 pounds.

The golem costs 60,000 gp to create, including 1,500 gp for the body and 30,000 gp for vestments, which can be reused. Creating the body requires a successful Craft (sculpting or masonry) check (DC 15).

The ritual requires a 16th-level creator who can cast divine spells.

Completing the ritual drains 1,200 XP from the creator and requires animate objects, bless, commune, prayer, and resurrection.

FLESH GOLEM CONSTRUCTION

The pieces of a flesh golem must come from normal human corpses that have not decayed significantly.

Assembly requires a minimum of six different bodies, one for each limb, the torso (with head) and the brain.

In some cases, more bodies may be necessary.

The golem costs 50,000 gp to create, which includes 500 gp for the construction of the body.

Assembling the body requires a successful Craft (leatherworking) or Heal check (DC 13).

The creator must be 14th level and able to cast arcane spells. Completing the ritual drains 1,000 XP from the creator and requires bull's strength, geas/quest, limited wish, polymorph any object, and protection from arrows.

HOMUNCULUS CONSTRUCTION

A homunculus costs 100 gp to create, including 20 gp for the body.

This cost includes all the materials and spell components that are consumed by or become a permanent part of the creation.

The first task is shaping the creature from a mixture of clay, ashes, mandrake root, spring water, and one pint of the creator's own blood.

The creature's master may assemble the body or hire someone else to do the job.

Creating the body requires a Craft (sculpture or masonry) check (DC of 12).

After the body is sculpted, it is animated through an extended magical ritual that requires a 7th-level character with the Craft Wondrous Item feat.

This ritual requires a week to complete: The creator must labor for at least 8 hours each day in a specially prepared laboratory or workshop, similar to an alchemist's laboratory and costing 500 gp to establish.

If the creator is personally constructing the creature's body, the building and ritual can be performed together.

A character not actively working on the ritual must rest and can perform no other activities except eating, sleeping, or talking.

If he or she misses a day, the process fails, and the ritual must be started anew; any gp spent on the failed ritual is lost (but not XP).

The previously crafted body can be reused, as can the laboratory.

Completing the ritual requires casting arcane eye, mirror image, and mending on the final day of the ritual and drains 25 XP from the creator.

He or she must cast the spells personally, but they can come from outside sources, such as scrolls.

IRON GOLEM CONSTRUCTION

An iron golem's body is sculpted from 5,000 pounds of pure iron.

The golem costs 100,000 gp to create, which includes 1,500 gp for the body.

Assembling the body requires a successful Craft (armorsmithing or weaponsmithing) check (DC 20).

The creator must be 16th level and able to cast arcane spells. Completing the ritual drains 2,000 XP from the creator and requires cloudkill, geas/quest, limited wish, and polymorph any object.

SHIELD GUARDIAN CONSTRUCTION

A shield guardian costs 100,000 gp to create.

This cost includes the construct's physical body, the keyed amulet, and all the materials and spell components that are consumed or become a permanent part of them.

This cost includes 1,000 gp for the body and 500 gp for the amulet.

The first task is creating the body, a humanoid figure of wood, bronze, stone and steel.

The construct's master can assemble the body or can hire someone to do the job.

Creating the body requires a successful Profession (engineering) or Craft (sculpture) check (DC 16).

The second requirement is creating the keyed amulet from bronze, which requires a successful Craft (metalworking) check (DC 12).

After the body and amulet are fashioned, the creature must be animated through an extended magical ritual that requires a week to complete.

Understanding the ritual requires a 12th-level character with the Craft Wondrous Item feat.

The creator must labor for at least 8 hours each day in a specially prepared laboratory or workshop.

The chamber is similar to both an alchemist's laboratory and a smithy and costs 1,000 gp to establish.

When not working on the ritual, the character must rest and can perform no other activities except eating, sleeping, or talking.

If personally constructing the creature's body, the creator can perform the building and ritual together.

If the creator misses a day of the ritual, the process fails and must be started again.

Money spent is lost, but XP spent are not.

The shield guardian's body can be reused, as can the chamber.

Completing the ritual drains 2,000 XP from the creator and requires limited wish, locate object, make whole, shield, and shield other, which must be cast on the final day of the ritual.

The creator must cast the spells personally, but they can come from outside sources, such as scrolls.

Amulet: If the keyed amulet is destroyed, the guardian ceases to function until a new one is created.

If the wearer dies but the amulet is intact, the shield guardian carries out the last command given.

STONE GOLEM CONSTRUCTION

A stone golem's body is chiselled from a single block of hard stone, such as granite, weighting at least 3,000 pounds. The golem costs 80,000 gp to create, which includes 1,000 gp for the body.

Assembling the body requires a successful Craft (sculpting or masonry) check (DC 17).

The creator must be 16th level and able to cast arcane spells. Completing the ritual drains 1,600 XP from the creator and requires geas/quest, limited wish, polymorph any object, and slow.

MONSTER MANUAL 1 3.5 (3.5)

CLAY GOLEM CONSTRUCTION

A clay golem's body must be sculpted from a single block of clay weighing at least 1,000 pounds, treated with rare oils and powders worth 1,500 gp.

Creating the body requires a DC 15 Craft (sculpting) check or a DC 15 Craft (pottery) check.

CL 11th; Craft Construct (see page 303), animate objects, commune, resurrection, caster must be at least 11th level; Price 40,000 gp; Cost 21,500 gp + 1,540 XP.

FLESH GOLEM CONSTRUCTION

The pieces of a flesh golem must come from normal human corpses that have not decayed significantly.

Assembly requires a minimum of six different bodies—one for each limb, the torso (including head), and the brain.

In some cases, more bodies may be necessary.

Special unguents and bindings worth 500 gp are also required.

Note that creating a flesh golem requires casting a spell with the evil descriptor.

Assembling the body requires a DC 13 Craft (leatherworking) check or a DC 13 Heal check.

CL 8th; Craft Construct (see page 303), animate dead, bull's strength, geas/quest, limited wish, caster must be at least 8th level; Price 20,000 gp; Cost 10,500 gp + 780 XP.

GREATER STONE GOLEM CONSTRUCTION

A greater stone golem is a colossus of granite, the largest and most fearsome stone golem commonly created.

These immensely powerful constructs are most often used to guard royal tombs, magical armories, and similar places of ancient power.

A greater stone golem is 18 feet tall and weighs around 32,000 pounds.

It resembles a typical stone golem in all respects, except that the Will save DC is 31 against its slow ability.

CL 14th; Craft Construct (see page 303), antimagic field, geas/quest, symbol of stunning, caster must be at least 14th level; Price 196,000 gp; Cost 105,000 gp + 7,640 XP.

HOMUNCULUS CONSTRUCTION

A homunculus is shaped from a mixture of clay, ashes, mandrake root, spring water, and one pint of the creator's own blood.

The materials cost 50 gp.

The creature's master may assemble the body or hire someone else to do the job.

Creating the body requires a DC 12 Craft (sculpting) check or a DC 12 Craft (pottery) check.

After the body is sculpted, it is animated through an extended magical ritual that requires a specially prepared laboratory or workroom, similar to an alchemist's laboratory and costing 500 gp to establish.

If the creator is personally constructing the creature's body, the building and ritual can be performed together.

A homunculus with more than 2 Hit Dice can be created, but each additional Hit Die adds +2,000 gp to the cost to create.

Craft Construct (see page 303), arcane eye, mirror image, mending, caster must be at least 4th level; Price — (never sold); Cost 1,050 gp + 78 XP.

IRON GOLEM CONSTRUCTION

An iron golem's body is sculpted from 5,000 pounds of pure iron, smelted with rare tinctures and admixtures costing at least 10,000 gp.

Assembling the body requires a DC 20 Craft (armorsmithing) check or a DC 20 Craft (weaponsmithing) check.

CL 16th; Craft Construct (see page 303), cloudkill, geas/quest, limited wish, polymorph any object, caster must be at least 16th level; Price 150,000 gp; Cost 80,000 gp + 5,600 XP.

SHIELD GUARDIAN CONSTRUCTION

A shield guardian is built from wood, bronze, stone, and steel.

The materials cost 5,000 gp.

The creature's master may assemble the body or hire someone else to do the job.

Creating the body requires a DC 16 Craft (blacksmithing) or Craft (carpentry) check.

The keyed amulet is fashioned at the same time, and its cost (20,000 gp) is included in the cost of the guardian.

After the body is sculpted, the shield guardian is animated through an extended magical ritual that requires a specially prepared laboratory or workroom, similar to an alchemist's laboratory and costing 500 gp to establish.

If the creator is personally constructing the creature's body, the building and the ritual can be performed together.

A shield guardian with more than 15 Hit Dice can be created, but each additional Hit Die adds +5,000 gp to the market price, and the price increases by +20,000 gp if the creature's size increases to Huge, modifying the cost to create accordingly.

CL 15th; Craft Construct (see page 303), limited wish, discern location, shield, shield other, caster must be at least 15th level; Price 120,000 gp; Cost 65,000 gp + 4,600 XP.

Amulet: If a shield guardian's amulet is destroyed, the guardian ceases to function until a new one is created. If the wearer dies but the amulet is intact, the shield guardian carries out the last command it was given.

STONE GOLEM CONSTRUCTION

A stone golem's body is chiseled from a single block of hard stone, such as granite, weighing at least 3,000 pounds.

The stone must be of exceptional quality, and costs 5,000 gp.

Assembling the body requires a DC 17 Craft (sculpting) check or a DC 17 Craft (stonemasonry) check.

CL 14th; Craft Construct (see page 303), antimagic field, geas/quest, symbol of stunning, caster must be at least 14th level; Price 90,000 gp; Cost 50,000 gp + 3,400 XP.

MONSTER MANUAL 2 (3.0)

BOGUN CONSTRUCTION

Unlike a homunculus, a bogun is created from natural materials available in any forest.

Thus, there is no gold piece cost for its creation.

All materials used become permanent parts of the bogun. The creator must be at least 7th level and possess the Craft Wondrous Item feat to make a bogun.

Before casting any spells, the creator must weave a physical form out of living (or once-living) vegetable matter to hold the magical energy.

A bit of the creator's own body, such as a few strands of hair or a drop of blood, must also be incorporated into this crude mannequin.

The creator may assemble the body personally or hire someone else to do it.

Creating the mannequin requires a Craft (basketweaving) or Craft (weaving) check (DC 12).

Once the body is finished, the creator must animate it through an extended magical ritual that requires a week to complete.

He or she must labor for at least 8 hours each day in complete solitude in a forest grove; any interruption from another sentient creature undoes the magic.

If the creator is personally weaving the creature's body, that process and the ritual can be performed together.

When not actively working on the ritual, the creator must rest and can perform no other activities except eating, sleeping, or talking.

Missing even one day causes the process to fail.

At that point, the ritual must be started anew, though the previously crafted body and the grove can be reused.

On the final day of the ritual, the creator must personally cast control plants, wood shape, and beget bogun (see below).

These spells can come from outside sources, such as scrolls, rather than being prepared, if the creator prefers.

BRASS GOLEM CONSTRUCTION

A brass golem's body is constructed from 1,000 pounds of brass and costs 200,000 gp to create.

(This amount includes 1,500 gp for the body and 32,320 gp for the +3 wounding greataxe).

Assembling the body requires one successful Craft (armorsmithing) check (DC 25) and one successful Craft (weaponsmithing) check (DC 25).

The creator must be 16th level and able to cast arcane spells.

Completing the ritual drains 4,000 XP from the creator and requires the geas/quest, limited wish, maze, Mordenkainen's sword, and polymorph any object spells.

BRONZE SERPENT CONSTRUCTION

A bronze serpent's body is constructed from 1,000 pounds of bronze.

The creator must be at least 16th level and able to cast arcane spells.

Completing the ritual drains 4,000 XP from the creator and requires the spells geas/quest, limited wish, polymorph any object, and shocking grasp.

The serpent costs 200,000 gp to create, including 1,500 gp for the body.

Assembling the body requires a successful Craft (armorsmithing) or Craft (weaponsmithing) check (DC 25).

CLAY HALF-GOLEM CONSTRUCTION

A clay limb must be sculpted from a single block of clay weighing at least 100 pounds.

The sculpting requires a successful Craft (sculpting) or Profession (mason) check (DC 20).

The rituals cost 12,000 gp and 240 XP and require animate objects and geas/quest.

Attaching the limb requires the ability to cast 6th-level divine spells.

DRAGONFLESH GOLEM CONSTRUCTION

A drolem's body is constructed from either an entire dragon corpse, or enough parts of dragon corpses to assemble a whole dragon.

The drolem costs 200,000 gp to create.

Assembling the body requires one successful Knowledge (nature) check and one successful Heal check (both DC 25).

The creator must be 16th level and able to cast arcane spells.

Completing the ritual drains 4,000 XP from the creator and requires the geas/quest, limited wish, and polymorph any object spells.

DREAD GUARD CONSTRUCTION

A dread guard may be constructed from any suit of masterwork heavy armor, and a Medium-size one may wield any Medium-size or Large martial weapon.

A Large dread guard may wield any Large or Huge martial weapon.

The cost of creating a dread guard is 40,000 gp.

This amount includes the cost of a masterwork suit of heavy armor and, if desired, a masterwork shield. Construction requires a martial weapon, but it need not be a masterwork weapon.

Assembling the body requires a successful Craft (armorsmithing) check (DC 25).

The creator must be at least 15th level and able to cast arcane spells.

Completing the ritual drains 800 XP from the creator and requires the fabricate, geas/quest, and polymorph any object spells.

FLESH HALF-GOLEM CONSTRUCTION

The pieces of a flesh golem must come from corpses of the same size and type as the recipient (for instance, a Medium-size humanoid character cannot use Small animal limbs). The limbs must not have decayed significantly.

“Construction” of the limb requires a successful Craft (leatherworking) or Heal check (DC 20).

The rituals cost 10,000 gp and 200 XP and require bull's strength and geas/quest.

Attaching the limb requires the ability to cast 6th-level arcane spells.

IRON HALF-GOLEM CONSTRUCTION

An iron limb is sculpted from 500 pounds of pure iron. The sculpting requires a successful Craft (armorsmithing) or Craft (weaponsmithing) check (DC 20).

The rituals cost 20,000 gp and 400 XP and require cloudkill and geas/quest.

Attaching the limb requires the ability to cast 6th-level arcane spells.

JUGGERNAUT CONSTRUCTION

Since a juggernaut is constructed from massive blocks of granite and other dense stone, a typical specimen weighs at least 50,000 pounds.

It costs 70,000 gp to create, including 5,000 gp for the body. Assembling the body requires a successful Craft (sculpting) or Profession (mason) check (DC 18).

The creator must be 18th level and able to cast arcane spells. Completing the ritual drains 2,000 XP from the creator and requires the bull's strength, geas/quest, limited wish, polymorph any object, forcecage, grease, hold monster, magic missile, slow, wall of force, and web spells.

KYTHON CONSTRUCTION

Kytons are the only beings known to be capable of creating chain golems, and they go to great lengths to keep the method of construction a secret from all other creatures—including other devils.

Should another creature either develop or acquire the method of chain golem creation, the kytons would spare no effort to assassinate that individual before he or she could spread the knowledge further.

NIMBLEWRIGHT CONSTRUCTION

A nimblewright's body is a hollow humanoid shell made of flexible precious metal alloys weighing 500 pounds.

It costs 35,000 gp to create, which includes 15,000 gp for the body.

Assembling the body requires a successful Craft (sculpting) or Profession (mason) check (DC 16).

The creator must be 18th level and able to cast arcane spells. Completing the ritual drains 1,600 XP from the creator and requires the geas/quest, haste, limited wish, and polymorph any object spells.

RUNIC GUARDIAN CONSTRUCTION

The process for creating a runic guardian is nearly identical with that for creating a shield guardian.

A runic guardian costs 200,000 gp to create.

This price includes the construct's physical body, the keyed piece of jewelry, and all the materials and spell components that are consumed or become a permanent part of the guardian.

Creating the body requires a successful Profession (engineer) or Craft (sculpting) check (DC 20).

The creation of the keyed jewelry item requires a successful Craft (metalworking) check (DC 15).

This jewelry is always made of the same metals and other materials as the guardian's runes.

After the body and jewelry are constructed, the creature must be animated through magical rites that require one month to complete.

The creator must be at least 16th level and have the Craft Wondrous Item feat.

The creator must cast any spells he or she wishes to place on the runic guardian personally at this time, though they may come from an outside source such as a scroll.

The creator must labor for at least 8 hours per day in a specially prepared workroom or laboratory that costs 2,000 gp to establish.

STAINED GLASS GOLEM CONSTRUCTION

A stained glass golem's body is constructed from 50 pounds of glass shards and costs 10,000 gp to create.

Assembling the body requires a successful Craft (glassmaking) check (DC 25).

The creator must be 16th level and able to cast arcane spells. Completing the ritual drains 200 XP from the creator and requires the geas/quest, limited wish, and polymorph any object spells.

STONE-HALF-GOLEM CONSTRUCTION

A stone limb must be chiseled from a single block of stone weighing at least 300 pounds.

The carving requires a successful Craft (stoneworking) check (DC 20).

The rituals cost 16,000 gp and 320 XP and require geas/quest and stone to flesh.

Attaching the limb requires the ability to cast 6th-level arcane spells.

PLANAR GOLEMS

Planar golems, such as the gloom golem and prismatic golem, are special kinds of constructs made from the matter of an Outer Plane. Building one is a task suited only to those who can control the very essences of the planes.

A planar golem may be constructed only on the plane from which it is crafted. A spirit from the planar matter is trapped by a powerful magic item and then bound to the creator's will. The matter is extremely difficult to shape, always destroying the expensive item in the process.

Planar golems are notoriously difficult to control, because planes have their own characteristics that override those of the golems' forgers. A planar golem takes on some traits of the plane it comes from. The creator of the planar golem, as well as anyone who would control it, must be of an alignment matching that of the plane used to create the golem. If the controller's alignment changes, the golem becomes uncontrolled until the controller returns to the former alignment.

Planar golems have the extraplanar subtype unless on their home plane. Planar golems otherwise follow the normal rules for golems as detailed in the Monster Manual Golem entry (page 134).

CREATING NEW PLANAR GOLEMS

Two types of planar golems are introduced in this book: the gloom golem (from the Gray Waste of Hades) and the prismatic golem (from the Blessed Fields of Elysium). Other types of planar golems can be created from the matter of other planes. They include the following:

Amorphion (Ever-Changing Chaos of Limbo): Comprised of churning stone, water, fire, air, and color, an amorphion emanates a continual aura of chaos that causes spells or spell-like abilities in the affected area to go awry, as though affected by the wild magic planar trait (see pages 149–150 of the Dungeon Master's Guide for details).

ALCHEMICAL GOLEM CONSTRUCTION

An alchemical golem's body is made from a complex series of noxious alchemical liquids poured into a tough, humanoid-shaped membrane.

The golem's cost includes 2,000 gp for the construction of the body.

Creating the body is a complex task that requires a DC 20 Craft (alchemy) check.

CL 14th; Craft Construct (see page 206), geas/quest, limited wish, poison, and polymorph any object, caster must be at least 14th level; Price 70,000 gp; Cost 36,000 gp + 2,720 XP.

GLOOM GOLEM CONSTRUCTION

A gloom golem's body is crafted from a single block of clay taken from the banks of the River Styx as it flows through the Gray Wastes of Hades.

The block weighs at least 1,000 pounds and costs 10,000 gp. Assembling the body requires both a DC 21 Craft (sculpting) check and a DC 21 Knowledge (the planes) check.

MONSTER MANUAL 3 (3.5)

Ash Golem (Bleak Eternity of Gehenna): Made from the pyroclastic ash of Gehenna, this golem resembles a giant ashen skeleton surrounded by a cloud of blinding hot cinders.

Battleglory (Heroic Domains of Ysgard): This golem is made from the bones, armor, and weapons of a dozen slain barbarians, knitted into a single shambling form that fights relentlessly.

Gear Golem (Clockwork Nirvana of Mechanus): A clockwork creature, this precision golem grinds and ratchets implacably toward its foes. It can grab foes and hold them against its whirling gears, grinding and crushing them.

Mindstrike Golem (Windswept Depths of Pandemonium): This hideous golem feeds on sanity and resembles a 15-foot-long worm composed of black blood. Its bite transforms its wounded victims into screaming, deluded maniacs.

Perfector (Peaceable Kingdoms of Arcadia): This golem is fashioned from polished silver and gold, perfectly formed into the shape of an archon, formian, or other lawful being. It can burn evil creatures with its luminous gaze, and its touch can also lift curses and cure maladies.

Sentinel of Mithardir (Olympian Glades of Arborea): The body of this golem resembles an elf formed out of chalky white dust lifted from the endless desert of Mithardir, Arborea's third layer. Lightning plays across the surface of the golem as it walks. In battle, the golem can channel this electricity into its dusty fists or hurl lightning bolts at distant foes.

Shacklelock Golem (Tarterian Depths of Carceri): This golem resembles a shambling mass of chains, shackles, and manacles, created to entwine and bind its foes.

Valorhammer (Seven Mounting Heavens of Celestia): This golem resembles a winged dwarf fashioned from pure white alabaster and adorned with inlaid mithral filigree. It can smite evil, and the mithral warhammer it wields is treated as a holy merciful weapon in its stony hands alone.

Woodwrath Golem (Wilderness of the Beastlands): A rolling mass of rustling leaves, sharpened twigs, and wooden spikes deals piercing damage in addition to trampling its foes into the ground.

CL 11th; Craft Construct (see page 206), crushing despair, limited wish, planar binding, polymorph any object, caster must be evil and at least 11th level; Price 40,000 gp; Cost 25,000 gp + 1,200 XP.

GRIGSOL CONSTRUCTION

A grigsol's body is a haphazard collection of old magic wands, staffs, potions, miscellaneous items, and, most importantly, scraps of scrolls and magic tomes.

This costs approximately 10,000 gp.

Assembling the body requires a DC 25 Craft (bookbinding) check.

The creator of a grigsol must also capture a lich's phylactery and use it in the grigsol's construction.

The creator first must facilitate the destruction of the lich whose phylactery he or she wants to use.

After the lich's body is destroyed, the creator of the grigsol must finalize construction before the lich returns (usually in 1d10 days).

If the lich returns before the grigsol is completed, the lich must be destroyed again.

Animating the grigsol while the lich is still in limbo binds the essence of the lich to the grigsol.

If a grisgol is to be given the ability to cast a spell with a material component worth more than 100 gp or any XP component, the creator must include 50 of that material component or spend 50 times the XP cost as part of the creation.

If the grisgol is to be given the ability to cast a spell with a focus, the creator must include the focus as part of the creation.

CL 19th; Craft Construct (see page 303 of the Monster Manual), control undead, geas/quest, illusory script, insanity, limited wish, mending, polymorph any object, plus all spells to be included in the grisgol, caster must be at least 19th level; Price 210,000 gp; Cost 110,000 gp + 8,000 XP.

HANGMAN GOLEM CONSTRUCTION

A hangman golem's body is crafted from numerous magically treated ropes that cost 1,250 gp.

Creating the body is a complex task that requires a DC 20 Craft (weaving) check.

Five or more ranks in the Use Rope skill grants a +2 bonus on the Craft check.

CL 16th; Craft Construct (see page 206), animate rope, geas/quest, limited wish, polymorph any object, caster must be at least 16th level; Price 144,000 gp; Cost 72,625 gp + 5,710 XP.

MUD GOLEM CONSTRUCTION

A mud golem's body is made from special mud found in magically charged areas or created through magical means. The golem cost includes 1,000 gp for the construction of the body.

Creating the body is a complex task that requires a DC 15 Craft (pottery) or a DC 15 Craft (sculpting) check.

CL 14th; Craft Construct (see page 206), geas/quest, limited wish, polymorph any object, transmute rock to mud, caster must be at least 14th level; Price 65,000 gp; Cost 33,000 gp + 2,560 XP.

PRISMATIC GOLEM CONSTRUCTION

Crafted from gems exposed to the glorious light of Elysium, a prismatic golem's body costs 50,000 gp to construct.

Assembling the body requires both a DC 22 Craft (sculpting) check and a DC 22 Knowledge (the planes) check.

CL 17th; Craft Construct (see page 206), greater planar binding, polymorph any object, prismatic sphere, wish, caster must be good and at least 17th level; Price 250,000 gp; Cost 150,000 gp + 8,000 XP.

SHADESTEEL GOLEM CONSTRUCTION

A shadesteel golem must be created entirely on the Plane of Shadow, using 1,500 pounds of steel tempered with rare shadow-liquids.

This shadow-tempered steel costs 10,000 gp to create.

The creator must then make a DC 30 Craft (armorsmithing) check to forge the golem's body.

CL 17th; Craft Construct (see page 206), energy drain, geas/quest, limited wish, polymorph any object, shades, caster must be at least 17th level; Price 130,000 gp; Cost 70,000 gp + 4,800 XP.

SHREDSTORM CONSTRUCTION

Creating the "body" of a shredstorm costs 15,000 gp for the adamantite blades.

A successful DC 25 Craft (weapon smithing) check is required to forge the blades from raw metal.

CL 13th; Craft Construct, fly, geas/quest, greater magic weapon, lightning bolt, limited wish, caster must be at least 13th level; Price 85,000 gp; Cost 50,000 gp + 2,800 XP.

SLAUGHTERSTONE BEHEMOTH CONSTRUCTION

A slaughterstone behemoth's body is chiseled from a single block of hard stone, much like the body of a stone golem.

The behemoth weighs at least 10,000 pounds.

The stone must be of exceptional quality and costs 10,000 gp.

Assembling the body requires a DC 25 Craft (sculpting) check or a DC 25 Craft (stonemasonry) check.

CL 18th; Craft Construct, geas/quest, sound burst, stoneskin, caster must be at least 18th level; Price 170,000 gp; Cost 90,000 gp + 6,400 XP.

SLAUGHTERSTONE EVISCERATOR CONSTRUCTION

A slaughterstone eviscerator's body is chiseled from a single block of stone, much like the body of a stone golem.

The eviscerator weighs at least 3,000 pounds.

The stone must be of exceptional quality and costs 7,500 gp.

Assembling the body requires a DC 20 Craft (sculpting) check or a DC 20 Craft (stonemasonry) check.

Creating an eviscerator also requires four Large +2

adamantine greatswords.

These swords are forever melded into the form of the eviscerator and are destroyed if it is.

CL 16th; Craft Construct, keen edge, geas/quest, haste, stoneskin, caster must be at least 16th level; Price 127,500 gp; Cost 67,500 gp + 4,800 XP.

TOPIARY GUARDIAN CONSTRUCTION

Creating a topiary guardian begins with acquiring a perfectly sculpted topiary of a boar, lion, or triceratops.

Shaping the plant takes six weeks and requires a DC 25 Craft (gardening), Craft (sculpting), or Profession (gardener) check.

After the topiary has been properly crafted, the creator must treat it with rare tinctures and oils costing 1/25th the base price of the guardian (800 gp for a Medium topiary guardian, 2,400 gp for a Large topiary guardian, or 4,600 gp for a Huge topiary guardian).

Once the topiary is properly treated, the animating ritual can commence.

The entire ritual for animation must take place outdoors, since the shrub remains dependent on sun, rain, and soil until the final day of the procedure.

CL 13th; Craft Construct, awaken, geas/quest, limited wish, creator must be a 13th-level caster; Price 20,000 gp (Medium), 60,000 gp (Large), 115,000 gp (Huge); Cost 10,800 + 800 XP (Medium), 32,400 gp + 2,400 XP (Large), 62,100 gp + 4,600 XP (Huge).

WEB GOLEM CONSTRUCTION

A web golem's body is made from layer upon layer of webbing harvested from monstrous spiders. The material costs 1,000 gp for construction of the body. Creating the body is a complex task that requires a successful DC 20 Craft (weaving) or Profession (silk maker) check.

CL 14th; Craft Construct (see page 206), geas/quest, limited wish, poison, polymorph any object, spider climb, web, caster must be at least 14th level; Price 65,000 gp; Cost 33,000 gp + 2,560 XP.

MONSTER MANUAL 4 (3.5)

CLOCKROACH CONSTRUCTION

A clockroach is crafted from metal plates that protect finely wrought gears and other mechanical elements, with a total cost of 75 gp.

Constructing the body requires a DC 14 Craft (metalworking) check.

A clockroach with more than 1 Hit Die can be created, but each additional Hit Die adds 2,000 gp to the cost.

The creation cost also includes the materials for the command amulet attuned to that clockroach.

The amulet is part of the clockroach, not a mechanical key. It is not possible to recreate a destroyed amulet, not to somehow bypass the amulet's function and program the clockroach without it.

CL 4th; Craft Construct, arcane eye, Melf's acid arrow, message; Price 2,150 gp; Cost 1,075 gp + 80 XP.

CLOCKWORK MENDER CONSTRUCTION

A clockwork mender is made of bronze, steel, silver, gold, and a pint of the creator's blood.

The materials cost 400 gp.

Creating the body requires a DC 15 Craft (blacksmithing) check.

A clockwork mender with more than 1 Hit Die can be created, but each additional Hit Die adds 2,000 gp to the cost to create.

CL 5th; Craft Construct, mending, repair light damage; Price — (never sold); Cost 1,250 gp + 68 XP.

CLOCKWORK STEED CONSTRUCTION

A clockwork steed's body is constructed from finely balanced gears, springs, and pistons treated with special alchemical agents and made from rare alloys costing 150 gp. Assembling the body requires a DC 18 Craft (blacksmithing) check.

CL 4th; Craft Construct, animate objects, mount; Price 2,150 gp; Cost 1,150 gp + 80 XP.

Upgrades increase the base cost as described below.

CLOCKWORK STEED UPGRADES

The following abilities can be added to a clockwork steed. Upgrades cost the same for both stallions and ponies.

ARMOR PROFICIENCY

The steed gains proficiency with all types of armor (but not with shields).

A clockwork steed without this upgrade that wears barding takes the appropriate armor check penalty on attack rolls and Strength and Dexterity-based checks.

Price 100 gp; Cost 50 gp + 4 XP.

DAMAGE REDUCTION

The steed gains damage reduction 5/magic or adamantine. Price 500 gp; Cost 250 gp + 20 XP.

IMPROVED BATTLE READINESS

This upgrade allows a skilled rider to use a swift action instead of a move action to command the steed to take full-round actions.

Price 500 gp; Cost 250 gp + 20 XP.

IMPROVED BULL RUSH

The steed gains the Improved Bull Rush feat and lets a rider command it to make bull rush attempts.

Price 150 gp; Cost 75 gp + 6 XP.

IMPROVED OVERRUN

The steed gains the Improved Overrun feat and lets a rider command it to make overrun attempts.

Price 150 gp; Cost 75 gp + 6 XP.

IMPROVED TRIP

The steed gains the Improved Trip feat and lets a rider command it to make nip attempts.

Price 200 gp; Cost 100 gp + 8 XP.

TRAMPLE

To qualify for this upgrade, the steed must have the Improved Overrun upgrade.

This upgrade allows a rider to use the Trample feat while making overrun attempts with the steed.

Price 150 gp; Cost 75 gp + 6 XP.

FANG GOLEM CONSTRUCTION

The cost to create a fang golem includes the cost of the physical body and all the materials and spell components that are consumed or become a permanent part of the golem.

Creating a golem is essentially similar to creating any sort of magic item (DMG 282).

However, a golem's body includes costly material components that require some extra preparation.

The golem's creator can assemble the body or hire someone else to do the job, but the builder must have the appropriate skill, as described below.

Completing the golem's creation drains the indicated XP from the creator and requires casting any spells on the final day.

The creator must cast the spells personally, but they can come from outside sources such as scrolls.

A fang golem's body must be assembled from fangs, claws, tusks, and the like, with a total weight of at least 1,000 pounds (more for larger specimens).

These are bound with cords or strips of hide to wood laths, all treated with preservative oils costing 500 gp.

Creating the body requires a DC 15 Craft (sculpting) or Craft (weaving, check).

The market price of an advanced golem increases by 5,000 gp for each additional Hit Die.

Add an additional 50,000 gp if the golem's size increases.

The XP cost for creating an advanced golem is equal to  $1/25$  the increased market price minus the cost of the special materials required.

CL 7th; Craft Construct, greater magic fang, reincarnate, spike stones, caster must be at least 7th level; Price 15,000 gp; Cost 8,000 gp + 580 XP.

MONSTER MANUAL 5 (3.5)

FORCE GOLEM CONSTRUCTION

A force golem's metal body is composed of several different alloys, blended together in a precise combination before being poured into specially-created molds that cost 2,000 gp.

Raw materials and supplies for this process cost 2,250 gp.

A mold can be used only once; it is destroyed in the process of creating the golem.

Creating the body from the shaped pieces requires a DC 20 Craft (armorsmithing) check.

Once the body is finished, the creator of a force golem must lure an elemental spirit from the Elemental Plane of Earth.

The spirit agrees to obey the creator in exchange for being able to remain sentient, and the creator bonds the spirit with the golem body.

When the bonding process is complete, the elemental spirit warps and shapes the body to its own liking.

CL 12th; Craft Construct, animate objects, contact other plane, lesser planar binding, caster must be at least 12th level; Price 50,000 gp; Cost 29,250 gp + 2,000 XP.

MAGMACORE GOLEM CONSTRUCTION

A magmacore golem's body must be carved from a single stone slab weighing no fewer than 2,000 pounds.

Before carving, the slab is treated with rare oils and powders worth 500 gp, and it is shaped by someone who must succeed on a DC 10 Craft (sculpting) check.

Then the armor is attached—a suit of masterwork full plate specially crafted for the creation process at a cost of 1,650 gp.

When the spirits of fire and earth are bound within the armored body, the stone melts into a mass of molten rock.

CL 9th; Craft Construct, animate objects, commune, lesser planar binding, caster must be at least 9th level; Price 35,000 gp; Cost 19,650 gp + 1,400 XP.

SCOURING SLINGER CONSTRUCTION

The secret druidic ritual for creating a scouring slinger involves the initial creation of three shambling mounds that are incorporated into the creature's construction.

CL 18th; Craft Construct, creeping doom, shambler; Price 117,000 gp; Cost 58,500 gp + 3,000 XP.

SCOURING STANCHION CONSTRUCTION

The secret druidic ritual for creating a scouring stanchion requires the participation of a treant willing to sacrifice its life to become the construct.

A druid must make a DC 25 Craft (woodcarving) check after one day of working to inscribe special runes in the treant's trunk.

CL 18th; Craft Construct, creeping doom, animate plants; Price 105,000 gp; Cost 52,500 gp + 3,000 XP.

Variants: Larger scouring slingers and scouring stanchions can be constructed.

Each additional Hit Die adds 500 gp to the cost.

Repairing a scouring construct follows the normal rules for repairing constructs (see the Craft Construct feat.

MM 303).

SHARDSOUL SLAYER CONSTRUCTION

Three shardsoul slayer bodies must be created from specially prepared alloys worth 1,500 gp.

The constructs' armored forms are forged in a process requiring three days and a single successful DC 15 Craft (armorsmithing) check.

As each body is smelted and poured, the molten metal is blended with quicksilver, then slowly cooled.

This quicksilver costs 500 gp.

The creator then calls and binds an elemental spirit from the Elemental Plane of Earth.

A finely crafted crystal prism worth 1,000 gp must be used in the fragmenting of the elemental spirit.

This prism is consumed at the time of creation, cracked and dulled by the process.

CL 9th; Craft Construct, animate objects, lesser planar binding, shatter, caster must be at least 9th level; Price 70,000 gp; Cost 41,000 gp + 2,800 XP.

This process creates three shardsoul slayers.

MONSTERS OF FAERÛN (3.0)

DIAMOND GOLEM CONSTRUCTION

The heart of a diamond golem is a perfect diamond that must be worth at least 10,000 gp. The golem costs an additional 65,000 gp to create, which includes 2,000 gp for the semiprecious stones that make up the body. Assembling the body requires a successful Craft (gemworking) or Heal check (DC 16). The creator must be 16th level and able to cast arcane spells. Completing the ritual drains 1,500 XP from the creator and requires dispel magic, limited wish, polymorph any object, stone shape, and sunbeam.

EMERALD GOLEM CONSTRUCTION

The heart of an emerald golem is a perfect emerald that must be worth at least 10,000 gp. The golem costs an additional 60,000 gp to create, which includes 2,000 gp for the semiprecious stones that make up the body. Assembling the body requires a successful Craft (gemworking) or Heal check (DC 15). The creator must be 17th level and able to cast arcane spells. Completing the ritual drains 1,500 XP from the creator and requires dimensional anchor, polymorph any object, stone shape, and teleportation circle.

RUBY GOLEM CONSTRUCTION

The heart of a ruby golem is a great ruby that must be worth at least 10,000 gp. The golem costs an additional 55,000 gp to create, which includes 2,000 gp for the semiprecious stones that make up the body. Assembling the body requires a successful Craft (gemworking) or Heal check (DC 15). The creator must be 16th level and able to cast arcane spells. Completing the ritual drains 1,500 XP from the creator and requires limited wish, move earth, polymorph any object, and stone shape.

THAYAN GOLEM CONSTRUCTION

To date, no one outside of a few select Thayan wizards has managed to deduce the means of constructing one of these golems. There are examples of designs similar in function to the Thayan golem in the history of Faerûn, but they are rare indeed.

PLANAR HANDBOOK (3.5)

LIVING ASTRAL SHIP CONSTRUCTION

CR —; Colossal construct; HD 8d10+1d10 per 10 feet of length; Init as the pilot – 4; Spd as the pilot (+30 ft. with psychic sails) on the Astral Plane, fly 50 ft. (poor) in a gravity well; AC varies (–8 size, +1 natural per HD); Atk as cleric of level equal to the ship's HD; Space/Reach 30 ft./10 ft. (or as ram); SA ram, mounted weapons; SQ construct traits, hardness; AL n/a; SV as commoner of level equal to the ship's HD, with no ability score modifiers.

Construct Traits: Like most constructs, living astral ships have immunity to mind-affecting spells and abilities, poison, disease, and similar effects.

They are not subject to extra damage from critical hits, nonlethal damage, ability damage, ability drain, energy drain, or death from massive damage.

Hardness: A living astral ship is usually composed of different materials but has an overall hardness of 5 to 10. An astral ship composed mainly of wood might have hardness 5, while an astral ship made of iron would have hardness 10.

See Smashing an Object, page 165 of the Player's Handbook, for more information on hardness.

Mounted Weapons: A living astral ship can be fitted with heavy catapults, light catapults, and ballistas (see Siege Engines, page 99 of the Dungeon Master's Guide, for statistics).

An astral ship can have one mounted weapon for every 2 Hit Dice it possesses, although nonmilitary astral ships typically forgo a full array of weapons in favor of having cargo space.

A heavy catapult counts as two weapons for the purpose of determining how many weapons an astral ship can carry.

Ram (Ex): In any round in which no ship-mounted weapons are fired, a living astral ship can ram a Huge or larger creature or object.

If the prow of the astral ship is more than 50 feet away in a straight line from a target, it can move up to double its speed to deliver a ram attack using its regular attack bonus.

The ram deals either bludgeoning or piercing damage, depending on the shape of its prow.

The damage dealt is 1d10 points per point of the astral ship's hardness.

For example, an astral ship with hardness 10 deals 10d10 points of damage with a successful ram attack, or triple damage on a critical hit (threat range 20).

Building a living astral ship requires the Craft Construct feat and 10 ranks in Knowledge (the planes).

Flying the ship requires the pilot (who must have an Intelligence score of 1 or higher) to sit in a specially attuned chair called a helm.

The helm allows the pilot to propel the ship by thought at a speed (in feet) equal to 10 times the pilot's Intelligence score.

When the ship passes within a gravity well, such as that generated by a large chunk of drifting matter, it slows to a speed of 50 feet.

A living astral ship can move at double speed and running speed.

Piloting the ship is always considered a full-round action, and the pilot cannot engage in other activities while controlling the ship.

A pilot seated in the helm receives a 360-degree mental picture of the area around the ship, out to normal visibility range.

The pilot feels as if he or she is flying directly over the ship and able to look in all directions at once.

The helm radiates strong transmutation magic under the scrutiny of detect magic.

It serves as a conduit between the pilot and the vessel and is rooted to the ship.

Destroying any part of it (the seat itself or the parts connecting it to the rest of the ship) renders the vessel powerless and inert.

A helm has the same hardness as the rest of the astral ship and hit points equal to three times the ship's hardness.

Rarely sold on the open market, living astral ships can find their way into someone's hands by theft or other means.

PSIONICS HANDBOOK (3.0)

PSION-KILLER CONSTRUCTION

A psion-killer's body is constructed from massive blocks of quartz crystal, with a total weight of at least 4,000 pounds. The golem costs 90,000 gp to create, which includes 10,000 gp for the body.

Assembling the body requires a successful Craft (sculpting) or profession (masonry) check (DC 17).

The creator must be 18th level and able to manifest psionic powers.

Completing the construction drains 1,600 XP from the creator and requires emulate power, matter manipulation, negate psionics, and psychic surgery.

SANDSTORM (3.5)

SAND GOLEM CONSTRUCTION

Only the Dusty Conclave of walkers in the waste has the hidden knowledge of sand golem creation.

A sand golem's body must be formed from a mass of shapeland (see page 25) having a volume of 1,000 cubic feet (equivalent to a 10-foot cube), and treated with volcanic ash and precious powders worth at least 2,000 gp.

Creating the body requires a DC 15 Craft (sculpting) check. CL 14th; Craft Construct (see page 303 of the Monster Manual), awaken sand, fuse sand (see page 116), geas/quest, caster must be at least 14th level; Price 50,000 gp; Cost 27,000 gp + 920 XP.

SERPENT KINGDOMS (3.5)

SERPENTFLESH GOLEM CONSTRUCTION

The parts for a serpentflesh golem must all come from normal scaly corpses that have not decayed significantly. At least one body is needed per desired limb, plus one for the torso and one for the brain.

Special unguents and bindings worth 500 gp are also required.

Each additional arm beyond two raises the cost by 5,000 gp and 100 XP.

Creating a serpentflesh golem requires casting a spell with the evil descriptor.

Assembling the body requires a DC 13 Craft (leatherworking) check or a DC 13 Heal check.

CL 8th; Craft Construct (see page 303 in the Monster Manual), animate dead, bull's strength, geas/quest, limited wish, caster must be at least 8th level; Price 20,000 gp; Cost 10,500 gp + 780 XP (or more, see above).

SPELL COMPENDIUM (3.5)

BOGUN CONSTRUCTION

Unlike a homunculus, a bogun is created from natural materials available in any forest.

Thus, there is no gold piece cost for its creation.

All materials used become permanent parts of the bogun.

The creator must be at least 7th level and possess the Craft Wondrous Item feat to make a bogun.

Before casting any spells, the creator must weave a physical form out of living (or once-living) vegetable matter to hold the magical energy.

A bit of the creator's own body, such as a few strands of hair or a drop of blood, must also be incorporated into this crude mannequin.

The creator can assemble the body personally or hire someone else to do it.

Creating this mannequin requires a DC 12 Craft (basketweaving or weaving) check.

Once the body is finished, the creator must animate it through an extended magical ritual that requires a week to complete.

The creator must labor for at least 8 hours each day in complete solitude in a forest grove; any interruption from another sentient creature undoes the magic.

If the creator is personally weaving the creature's body, that process and the ritual can be performed together.

When not actively working on the ritual, the creator must rest and can perform no other activities except eating, sleeping, or talking.

Missing even one day causes the process to fail.

At that point, the ritual must be started anew, though the previously crafted body and the grove can be reused.

On the final day of the ritual, the creator must personally cast control plants, wood shape, and beget bogun.

These spells can come from outside sources, such as scrolls, rather than being prepared, if the creator prefers.

STORMWRACK (3.5)

CORAL GOLEM CONSTRUCTION

A coral golem's ornate body is sculpted from beds of harvested coral.

The raw materials needed to assemble a coral golem cost 16,000 gp.

Assembling the body requires a DC 24 Craft (sculpting) check.

A coral golem with more than 16 Hit Dice can be created, but each additional Hit Die adds +1,000 gp to the cost of raw materials and +2,500 gp to the market price.

CL 14th; Craft Construct, geas/quest, regenerate, symbol of stunning, caster must be at least 14th level; Price 124,000 gp; Cost 78,000 gp + 4,960 XP.

CURSED ITEM SPECIAL ABILITIES

ARMS AND EQUIPMENT GUIDE (3.0)

AWKWARD USE

This curse applies only to items with the spell trigger or command word activation methods.

Activating the item requires awkward movements in addition to the normal actions, and provokes attacks of opportunity from threatening foes.

DIVINATION RESISTANT

When subjected to a Divination spell, including detect magic, identify, and analyze dweomer, the item receives a Will saving throw to resist the effect.

If its saving throw is successful, the spell reveals no information about the item.

This curse usually comes into play only when the item is first discovered, and it might be overlooked as nonmagical treasure.

DRAWBACK

The DUNGEON MASTER's Guide lists a number of drawbacks often found on otherwise beneficial items.

When randomly generating a cursed item, roll d%: 01–65, consult the table in the DUNGEON MASTER's Guide; 66–100, consult the table below.

d%	Drawback
01–08	The character cannot be awakened when sleeping until she has slept a full 8 hours. This applies whether the character falls asleep normally or is subjected to a magical sleep effect. Loud noise, slapping, and even wounding do not wake the character from sleep. Elves and half-elves are immune to this drawback.
09–18	The character's hearing diminishes. The character takes a –4 penalty on Listen checks and has a 5% chance to miscast any spell with a verbal component.
19–26	The character takes a –2 penalty on saving throws to avoid becoming dazed or stunned. When dazed or stunned, he remains so for 1 round longer than the normal duration.
27–34	The character does not recover well from wounds. He regains only half the normal number of hit points from resting, and subtracts 1 point per die from the result of healing spells. The character has only a 5% chance per round of stabilizing when dying, and only a 5% chance per minute of waking up when unconscious.

d% Drawback

- 35–42 Whenever the character would be shaken, she becomes frightened instead. Whenever she would be frightened, she becomes panicked instead.
- 43–51 The character becomes easily distracted, taking a –4 penalty on Concentration checks.
- 52–61 The character develops two random mental or physical quirks, rolled randomly on Table 5–5: One Hundred Traits in the DUNGEON MASTER'S Guide.
- 62–69 The character develops a pathological fear of being grappled. He cannot initiate a grapple and automatically becomes shaken when successfully grappled by an enemy.
- 70–77 The character becomes sensitive to light. Abrupt exposure to bright light (such as sunlight or a daylight spell) blinds the character for 1 round. In addition, the character takes a –1 penalty on all attack rolls, saves, and checks while operating in bright light.
- 78–82 The character becomes especially vulnerable to fire, as if she had the cold subtype. She gains no extraordinary resistance to cold, however.
- 83–87 The character becomes especially vulnerable to cold, as if she had the Fire subtype. She gains no extraordinary resistance to fire, however.
- 88–90 The character becomes susceptible to loud noises and sonic attacks, taking a –2 penalty on all saves against sonic effects.
- 91–92 Every time the character takes damage from a slashing or piercing weapon, the wound bleeds for an additional 1 point of damage each round, as if the weapon had the wounding property. Multiple wounds result in cumulative bleeding. The bleeding can only be stopped by a successful Heal check (DC 15) or the application of any healing spell.
- 93–96 The character becomes susceptible to critical hits. For purposes of confirming a threat, the character takes a –4 penalty on effective Armor Class.
- 97 Any hit scored with a blessed crossbow bolt instantly kills the character.
- 98–99 The character experiences flashbacks to the lives of previous owners of the item. At the start of every encounter, there is a 5% chance that the character notices something about an opponent that causes her to recall a past owner's life. If this happens, the character takes no action for 1 round and thereafter takes a –2 penalty on all attacks directed at that opponent.
- 100 DM's choice: DM either picks one of the above (or one from the DMG) that's appropriate or creates a drawback specifically for that item.

EXTRA SPACE

The item uses up two magic item spaces on a character's body.

A ring might use both a ring space and a bracer/bracelet space (perhaps it includes a bracelet linked by fine gold chain to the ring itself), a cloak might also use an amulet space because it includes an elaborate brooch, or a helmet might prevent a character from using eye lenses or goggles.

FRAGILE

The item has both a lower hardness than its material would normally have (reduce hardness by 1) and fewer hit points than it normally would (reduce hit points by 2).

POSSESSED

The item's magical power comes not from the normal process of making a magic item, but from a malevolent spirit inhabiting it.

The possessing creature may be a ghost, a devil, a demon, or some other evil creature, at the DM's discretion.

The item does not radiate magic if detected for, but it might radiate an aura of evil.

A character who makes a successful Search check (DC 25) while examining the possessed item can tell that there is "something strange" about it.

The spirit in the item is aware of what is going on around the object: It can see and hear up to 60 feet away as if using its normal senses (it does not gain blindsight).

In any round in which it takes no other action (such as using a spell-like ability), it can extend its senses to twice its normal range (120 feet).

The possessing creature is vulnerable to spells that specifically affect creatures of its type or alignment (such as holy word and holy smite, as well as chaos hammer or order's wrath) and mind-affecting spells or effects, but it is unaffected by physical attacks or standard magical effects (such as a fireball).

Harming the object does not harm the possessing creature, although if the object is destroyed the creature is forced into an ethereal form.

The possessing creature can use any ability it has that requires no physical action, such as using a spell-like ability or telepathy.

It cannot cast spells (since it can neither speak nor move), attack physically, or perform any other physical action.

The creature possessing the object can attempt to hide its presence by making a special Hide check.

This "mental" Hide check uses the creature's Intelligence modifier instead of its Dexterity modifier.

A successful check allows the creature to avoid virtually anything that would betray its presence in the object: It can pass through a magic circle against evil, enter a temple warded by forbiddance, or escape detection via detect evil.

The DC for this Hide check is the same as the saving throw DC for the spell the creature is trying to avoid.

The creature gains a +4 circumstance bonus on this check if it is not controlling the possessed object at the time of the check.

Making this check is not an action; the possessing creature can do it in response to another creature's action (such as casting detect evil).

The possessing creature has the ability to make the possessed item radiate a corrupt and befouling nature. Anyone touching the object in this state must make a Will save or fall under the effect of a bestow curse spell.

The affected creature does not know that the curse came from the item, and in fact might not know right away that he or she is affected by the curse.

Nothing about the object's appearance suggests that it is possessed.

The curse lasts until it is removed, even if the creature vacates the object it possessed.

At the DM's discretion, the creature inhabiting the object may at some time attempt to possess a character who has been carrying or using the object.

If this occurs, the target receives a  $-1$  penalty on the saving throw to resist possession for each day the possessed item has been on his person or in his use, to a maximum of  $-10$ .

A possessed item's powers function at the command of the possessing spirit, not the item's owner.

Most of the time, possessing creatures find it convenient to obey the commands of the owner, but occasionally a creature might refuse to activate the power when commanded, or activate it at an apparently random time.

Possessed items may appear to have the simple curse of intermittent functioning, while the truth is much worse.

SHORT CIRCUIT

This curse only applies to items with charges, including all staves and wands.

Each time the item is activated, there is a 25% chance it burns one additional charge, with no additional effect.

On a d% roll of 100, however, the effect is actually doubled, as if two charges of the item went off simultaneously.

WON'T RESIZE

Most magic items resize to fit whatever character tries to wear them.

These cursed items do not.

If necessary, roll on the following table to determine what size creature the item was made for.

d%	Size
01	Tiny
02-26	Small
27-76	Medium-size (50% chance item is sized for a specific race or kind, such as elf or dwarf)
77-96	Large
97-98	Huge
99	Gargantuan
100	Colossal

While this certainly seems like a curse to a player character who wants an item but finds it to be the wrong size, creatures such as giants think of it as something of a blessing.

They generally make no secret of the item's properties, hoping it will deter Medium-size thieves from coveting it. This curse does not apply to weapons, which normally do not resize.

DUNGEON MASTER'S GUIDE 3.0 (3.0)

COMPLETELY DIFFERENT EFFECT

The DM should choose a negative effect for the item, perhaps using the specific cursed items (see below) as examples.

The item may seem to be the item that was originally determined, but at some juncture it displays different properties altogether.

DELUSION

The user believes the item is what it appears to be, yet it actually has no magical power other than to deceive.

The user is mentally fooled into thinking the item is functioning (making him invisible, emitting lightning bolts, or whatever) and cannot be convinced otherwise without the help of a remove curse.

DRAWBACK

Items with drawbacks are usually beneficial to the possessor (for instance, a weapon with an enhancement bonus still benefits its wielder in combat), but they also carry some negative aspect.

You might think of them as "give and take" items.

Although sometimes drawbacks occur only when the item is used (or held, in the case of some items such as weapons), usually the drawback remains with the character for as long as she has it.

The following are drawbacks that remain in effect as long as the item is in the character's possession:

d%	Drawback
01-04	Character's hair grows 1 inch longer (only happens once).
05-09	Character either shrinks a half-inch (a 01-50 result on d%) or grows that much taller (a 51-100 result). This event only happens once.

d%	Drawback
10-13	Temperature around item is 10°F cooler than normal.
14-17	Temperature around item is 10°F warmer than normal.
18-21	Character's hair color changes.
22-25	Character's skin color changes.
26-29	Character now bears some identifying mark (tattoo, strange glow, etc.).
30-32	Character's gender changes.
33-34	Character's race or kind changes.
35	Character is afflicted with a random disease that cannot be cured.
36-39	Item continually emits a disturbing sound (moaning, weeping, screaming, cursing, insults).
40	Item looks ridiculous (garishly colored, silly shape, glows bright pink, etc.).
41-45	Character becomes selfishly possessive about the item.
46-49	Character becomes paranoid about losing the item and afraid of damage occurring to it.
50-51	Character's alignment changes.
52-54	Character must attack nearest creature (5% chance [a 01-05 result on d%] each day).
55-57	Character is stunned for 1d4 rounds once item function is finished (or randomly, 1/day).
58-60	Character's vision is blurry (-2 penalty to attacks, saves, and skill checks requiring vision).
61-64	Character gains one negative level.
65	Character gains two negative levels.
66-70	Character must make a Will save each day or take 1 point of temporary Intelligence damage.
71-75	Character must make a Will save each day or take 1 point of temporary Wisdom damage.
76-80	Character must make a Will save each day or take 1 point of temporary Charisma damage.
81-85	Character must make a Fortitude save each day or take 1 point of temporary Constitution damage.
86-90	Character must make a Fortitude save each day or take 1 point of temporary Strength damage.
91-95	Character must make a Fortitude save each day or take 1 point of temporary Dexterity damage.
96	Character is polymorphed into a specific creature (5% chance [a 01-05 result on d%] each day).
97	Character cannot cast arcane spells.
98	Character cannot cast divine spells.
99	Character cannot cast any spells.
100	DM's choice: DM either picks one of the above that's appropriate or creates a drawback specifically for that item.

INTERMITTENT FUNCTIONING

The three varieties of intermittent functioning items all function perfectly as described—at least some of the time. The three types include unreliable, dependent, and uncontrolled items.

DEPENDENT

The item only functions in certain situations. To determine what the situation is, either select an activation condition or roll on the following table.

d%	Situation
01-03	Temperature below freezing
04-05	Temperature above freezing
06-10	During the day
11-15	During the night
16-20	In direct sunlight
21-25	Out of direct sunlight
26-34	Underwater
35-37	Out of water
38-45	Underground
46-55	Aboveground
56-60	Within 10 feet of a random creature type
61-64	Within 10 feet of a random race or kind of creature
65-72	Within 10 feet of an arcane spellcaster
73-80	Within 10 feet of a divine spellcaster
81-85	In the hands of a nonspellcaster
86-90	In the hands of a spellcaster
91-95	In the hands of a creature of a particular alignment
96	In the hands of a creature of particular gender
97-99	On nonholy days or during particular astrological events
100	More than 100 miles from a particular site (holy, magical, etc.)

UNCONTROLLED

An uncontrolled item occasionally activates at random times.

Roll d% every day.

On a result of 01–05 (or whatever range the DM determines as appropriate), the item activates at some random point during that day.

Results range from the humorous, such as when the wearer of a ring of invisibility suddenly disappears right in the middle of bargaining in the market, to the disastrous, such as when the wielder's wand of fireball discharges in the middle of her friends—er, former friends.

UNRELIABLE

Each time the item is activated, there is a 5% chance (a 01–05 result on d%) that it does not function.

At the DM's option, the failure chance can be altered to be anything from 1% to 10%, depending on the item and the campaign.

OPPOSITE EFFECT OR TARGET

These cursed items malfunction, so that either they do the opposite of what the creator intended, or they target the user instead of someone else.

For example, eyes of charming with the opposite effect enrage targets rather than charm them.

A rod of curing inflicts wounds.

Eyes of petrification turn the wearer to stone.

A magic arrow curves around to strike the archer.

The interesting point to keep in mind here is that these items aren't always bad to have.

A wand of lightning bolt that heals rather than harms can be used as a potent healing item.

Opposite-effect items include weapons that impose penalties on attack and damage rolls rather than bonuses. Just as a character shouldn't necessarily immediately know what the bonus of a good magic item is, she shouldn't immediately know that the weapon is so cursed.

Once she knows, however, the item can be discarded unless some sort of enchantment is placed upon it that compels the wielder to keep and use it. In such cases, a remove curse spell is generally needed to get rid of such an item.

REQUIREMENT

In a sense, a command word is a requirement. Nevertheless, some items have much more stringent requirements to be used.

To keep the item functioning, one (or more) of the following conditions must be met.

- Character must eat twice as much as normal.
- Character must sleep twice as much as normal.
- Character must undergo a specific quest (one time only, and then item functions normally thereafter).
- Character must sacrifice (destroy) 100 gp worth of valuables per day.
- Character must sacrifice (destroy) 2,000 gp worth of magic items each week.
- Character must swear fealty to a particular noble or his family.
- Character must discard all other magic items.
- Character must worship a particular deity.
- Character must change her name to a specific name. (The item only works for characters of that name.)
- Character must change his class to a specific class if not of that class already.
- Character must have a minimum number of ranks in a particular skill.
- Character must sacrifice some part of her life energy (2 points of Constitution) one time.

If the character gets the Constitution points back (such as from restoration), the item ceases functioning.

(The item does not cease functioning if the character receives a Constitution increase caused by level gain, a wish, or the use of a magic item).

- Item must be cleansed with holy water each day.
- Item must be used to kill a living creature each day.
- Item must be bathed in volcanic lava once per month.
- Item must be used at least once a day, or it won't function again for its current possessor.
- Item must draw blood when wielded (weapons only).

It can't be put away or exchanged for another weapon until it has scored a hit.

- Item must have a particular spell cast upon it each day (such as bless, atonement, or animate objects).

Requirements are so dependent upon suitability to the item that they should never be determined randomly.

An item with a requirement that is also intelligent often imposes its requirement through its personality.

If the requirement is not met, the item ceases to function.

If it is met, usually the item functions for one day before the requirement must be met again (although some requirements are one-time-only, others monthly, and still others continuous).

d%	Drawback
01–04	Character's hair grows 1 inch longer. Only happens once.
05–09	Character either shrinks 1/2 inch (01–50 on d%) or grows that much taller (51–100). Only happens once.
10–13	Temperature around item is 10°F cooler than normal.
14–17	Temperature around item is 10°F warmer than normal.
18–21	Character's hair color changes.
22–25	Character's skin color changes.
26–29	Character now bears some identifying mark (tattoo, weird glow, or the like).
30–32	Character's gender changes.
33–34	Character's race or kind changes.
35	Character is afflicted with a random disease that cannot be cured.
36–39	Item continually emits a disturbing sound (moaning, weeping, screaming, cursing, insults).
40	Item looks ridiculous (garishly colored, silly shape, glows bright pink, . . .).
41–45	Character becomes selfishly possessive about the item.
46–49	Character becomes paranoid about losing the item and afraid of damage occurring to it.
50–51	Character's alignment changes.
52–54	Character must attack nearest creature (5% chance [01–05 on d%] each day).
55–57	Character is stunned for 1d4 rounds once item function is finished (or randomly, 1/day).
58–60	Character's vision is blurry (–2 penalty on attack rolls, saves, and skill checks requiring vision).
61–64	Character gains one negative level.
65	Character gains two negative levels.
66–70	Character must make a Will save each day or take 1 point of Intelligence damage.
71–75	Character must make a Will save each day or take 1 point of Wisdom damage.
76–80	Character must make a Will save each day or take 1 point of Charisma damage.
81–85	Character must make a Fortitude save each day or take 1 point of Constitution damage.
86–90	Character must make a Fortitude save each day or take 1 point of Strength damage.
91–95	Character must make a Fortitude save each day or take 1 point of Dexterity damage.
96	Character is polymorphed into a specific creature (5% chance [01–05 on d%] each day).
97	Character cannot cast arcane spells.
98	Character cannot cast divine spells.
99	Character cannot cast any spells.
100	DM either picks one of the above that's appropriate or creates a drawback specifically for that item.

INTERMITTENT FUNCTIONING

The three varieties of intermittent functioning items all function perfectly as described—at least some of the time. The three varieties are unreliable, dependent, and uncontrolled items.

DEPENDENT

The item only functions in certain situations. To determine what the situation is, either select a situation or roll on the following table.

d%	Situation
01–03	Temperature below freezing
04–05	Temperature above freezing
06–10	During the day
11–15	During the night
16–20	In direct sunlight
21–25	Out of direct sunlight
26–34	Underwater
35–37	Out of water
38–45	Underground
46–55	Aboveground
56–60	Within 10 feet of a random creature type
61–64	Within 10 feet of a random race or kind of creature
65–72	Within 10 feet of an arcane spellcaster
73–80	Within 10 feet of a divine spellcaster
81–85	In the hands of a nonspellcaster
86–90	In the hands of a spellcaster
91–95	In the hands of a creature of a particular alignment
96	In the hands of a creature of particular gender
97–99	On nonholy days or during particular astrological events
100	More than 100 miles from a particular site

UNCONTROLLED

An uncontrolled item occasionally activates at random times.

Roll d% every day.

On a result of 01–05 (or whatever range the DM decides is appropriate), the item activates at some random point during that day.

Results range from the humorous, such as when the wearer of a cursed ring of invisibility suddenly disappears right in the middle of bargaining in the market, to the disastrous, such as when the wielder's wand of fireball discharges in the midst of her friends—er, former friends.

UNRELIABLE

Each time the item is activated, there is a 5% chance (01–05 on d%) that it does not function.

At the DM's option, the failure chance can be altered to be anything from 1% to 10%, depending on the item and the campaign.

OPPOSITE EFFECT OR TARGET

These cursed items malfunction, so that either they do the opposite of what the creator intended, or they target the user instead of someone else.

For example, eyes of charming with the opposite effect makes targets hostile rather than charming them.

A staff of healing causes wounds.

Eyes of petrification turn the wearer to stone.

A magic arrow curves around to strike the archer.

The interesting point to keep in mind here is that these items aren't always bad to have.

A wand of lightning bolt that heals rather than harms can be used as a potent healing item.

Opposite-effect items include weapons that impose penalties on attack and damage rolls rather than bonuses. Just as a character shouldn't necessarily immediately know what the enhancement bonus of a noncursed magic item is, she shouldn't immediately know that a weapon is cursed.

Once she knows, however, the item can be discarded unless some sort of compulsion is placed upon it that compels the wielder to keep and use it. In such cases, a remove curse spell is generally needed to get rid of the item.

REQUIREMENT

In a sense, a command word is a requirement. Nevertheless, some items have much more stringent requirements that must be met for them to be usable. To keep an item with this kind of curse functioning, one or more of the following conditions must be met.

- Character must eat twice as much as normal.
- Character must sleep twice as much as normal.
- Character must undergo a specific quest (one time only, and then item functions normally thereafter).
- Character must sacrifice (destroy) 100 gp worth of valuables per day.
- Character must sacrifice (destroy) 2,000 gp worth of magic items each week.
- Character must swear fealty to a particular noble or his family.
- Character must discard all other magic items.
- Character must worship a particular deity.
- Character must change her name to a specific name. (The item only works for characters of that name).
- Character must add a specific class at the next opportunity if not of that class already.
- Character must have a minimum number of ranks in a particular skill.
- Character must sacrifice some part of her life energy (2 points of Constitution) one time.

If the character gets the Constitution points back (such as from a restoration spell), the item ceases functioning. (The item does not cease functioning if the character receives a Constitution increase caused by level gain, a wish, or the use of a magic item).

- Item must be cleansed with holy water each day.
- Item must be used to kill a living creature each day.
- Item must be bathed in volcanic lava once per month.
- Item must be used at least once a day, or it won't function again for its current possessor.
- Item must draw blood when wielded (weapons only).

It can't be put away or exchanged for another weapon until it has scored a hit.

- Item must have a particular spell cast upon it each day (such as bless, atonement, or animate objects).

Requirements are so dependent upon suitability to the item that they should never be determined randomly.

An item with a requirement that is also intelligent often imposes its requirement through its personality.

If the requirement is not met, the item ceases to function.

If it is met, usually the item functions for one day before the requirement must be met again (although some requirements are one time only, others monthly, and still others continuous).

EXPANDED PSIONICS HANDBOOK (3.5)

BACKFIRE

The imbedded psionic effect of the cursed item targets the user instead of its intended target. For example, a cursed crawling tattoo of concussion blast, when activated, does not drop from the skin and attack the opponent but instead springs at the wearer's face and delivers its attack.

EXHAUSTING

A cursed item of this sort resembles a normal psionic item with a power that can be freely activated, but it instead drains the user of power points whenever he activates its power.

For instance, an exhausting torc appears to be a torc of free will until a brain lock effect targets the wearer, who then loses 1 power point.

Such items aren't necessarily bad to possess.

The above example is less useful than a true torc of free will, but still prevents its wearer from being affected by the power.

SUBVERSIVE

A cursed item of this sort appears identical to a standard psionic item.

However, it holds an inner malice for the wearer, whose saving throws take a constant -2 penalty.

The owner isn't instantly aware of this penalty but may become aware after a while, when it becomes clear that he fails saves that others make with the same result on the saving throw.

PSIONICS HANDBOOK (3.0)

BACKFIRE

The imbedded psionic effect targets the user instead of its intended target.

For example, a cursed crawling tattoo of biocurrent when tapped, does not drop from the skin and attack the opponent but instead springs at the wearer's face and delivers the attack.

EXHAUSTING

The item resembles a normal psionic item with free activation, but it instead drains the user of power points whenever she activates its ability.

For instance, an exhausting torc appears to be a torc of free will until a brain lock effect targets the wearer, who loses 1 power point.

Such items aren't necessarily bad to find.

The above example is less useful than a true torc of free will but still prevents in wearer from being dazed.

SUBVERSIVE

The item appears identical to one that would normally grant mental hardness, such as an amulet of Psychic Bastion, but when used actually makes the wearer more vulnerable to psionic attack.

Some cursed psionic items may require a power point expenditure to remove, or to be rendered inactive by matter manipulation.

DWEOMERED DRAGON SCALES

DRAGON MAGIC (3.5)

AMBER PINWHEEL

This apparent toy was first crafted by the jann, and later shared with certain tribes of nomads dwelling in the Raurin desert of Faerûn.

They use it to protect themselves on long desert treks.

Description: Resembling an ornate child's toy, this brown dragon scale is gilded with rose gold.

It is pierced in the middle and fastened to a short silver rod, allowing it to spin freely.

Activation: An amber pinwheel has two abilities, both activated by setting it into the ground and speaking a command word (a standard action).

The effects last for up to 12 hours, though if the pinwheel is dislodged from its location, its effects end immediately.

Each command word can be used only once per day.

Anyone who grasps an amber pinwheel receives mental instructions in Draconic on the effects of the item and how to activate it.

Effect: One command word causes an amber pinwheel to create an invisible dome of force 10 feet high and 20 feet in diameter.

The dome blocks particulate matter (dust, sand, snow, and the like) and nonmagic projectiles of any size.

Magic projectiles, spells, water, gas attacks, and wind (but not flying debris) can pass through the dome.

This applies within the dome as well; for example, someone inside the dome can't fire nonmagical ranged attacks at a foe on the outside.

Any material covering the dome when this effect ends fills the space formerly occupied by the dome.

A second command word creates the illusion of a sand dune with the same dimensions as the dome of force.

Both abilities can be in effect at once.

Aura/Caster Level: Moderate abjuration and illusion; CL 10th.

Construction: Craft Wondrous Item, hallucinatory terrain, wall of force, 1,950 gp, 156 XP, 4 days.

Weight: 3 lb.

Price: 3,900 gp.

AZURE SKULLCAP

In addition to their obvious protective qualities, these items are popular among spellcasters for use as hidden weapons for when all else fails.

Description: This large, brilliant blue dragon scale is edged in mithral and set with blue sapphires and tourmalines in a decorative pattern.

It fits snugly over the head, occupying space on the body as a magic helm or hat.

Activation: The resistance and bonus to natural armor function continuously while worn.

Once per day, the wearer can use lightning bolt with a purely mental standard action.

Anyone donning an azure skullcap receives mental instructions in Draconic on the effects of the item and how to activate it.

Effect: An azure skullcap grants its wearer resistance to electricity 5 and a +1 enhancement bonus to natural armor. In addition, the wearer can use it to produce a lightning bolt effect.

Aura/Caster Level: Moderate abjuration and evocation; CL 8th.

Construction: Craft Wondrous Item, barkskin, lightning bolt, resist energy, 7,500 gp, 600 XP, 15 days.

Weight: 1 lb.

Price: 15,000 gp.

BERUTO OF THE CARP DRAGON

This belt grants its wearer a swim speed and the ability to breathe water.

Description: Decorated with seashells, this hemp belt has a buckle fashioned from a yu lung dragon scale.

Activation: A beruto of the carp dragon functions continuously while worn, occupying the same body slot as a belt.

When first donned, it telepathically instructs the wearer (simultaneously in the Spirit Tongue and Draconic) on the effects of the item and how to activate it.

Effect: The wearer gains the ability to breathe water normally but loses the ability to breathe air.

He also gains a swim speed equal to his base land speed, along with the other benefits of having a swim speed (see Movement Modes, MM 311).

After removing the beruto of the carp dragon, the wearer resumes breathing air.

Aura/Caster Level: Moderate transmutation; CL 7th.

Construction: Craft Wondrous Item, water breathing, 1,100 gp, 88 XP, 3 days.

Weight: 1 lb.

Price: 2,200 gp.

BRASSY BRACERS

These bracers sear enemies with boiling heat while diverting their attacks.

Description: This pair of brass dragon scales, each about the size and shape of a man's fist, are edged in mithral and set with moonstones in a spiral pattern.

Affixed to the back of each is a buckle and leather strap so they can be worn on the forearms.

Activation: Once per day, the wearer can create a shield of superheated air with a purely mental swift action.

Anyone donning the brassy bracers receives mental instructions in Draconic on the effects of the item and how to activate it.

Effect: Activating the brassy bracers surrounds the wearer in a swirling shield of superheated air for up to 10 rounds.

The shimmering heat waves provide concealment for him, imposing a 20% miss chance on attacks made against him.

The wearer can deactivate the effect as a standard action.

In addition, the heat deals 2d6 points of fire damage to any creatures striking the wearer with a natural attack or nonreach melee weapon.

The wearer is immune to the heat damage of his own bracers.

Aura/Caster Level: Moderate abjuration and illusion; CL 10th.

Construction: Craft Wondrous Item, blur, fire shield, 2,550 gp, 204 XP, 6 days.

Weight: 1 lb.

Price: 5,100 gp.

BRONZED CUFF

Anyone who wears this scale can summon a powerful whip of pure energy.

Description: Shaped to fit easily on a creature's wrist, this bronze dragon scale is set with a pair of tiger's eye topazes and rimmed with bronze studs.

Activation: Twice per day, the wearer can summon the whip with a swift action.

It can be dismissed with a tree action.

Anyone donning a bronzed cuff receives mental instructions in Draconic on the effects of the item and how to activate it. A bronzed cuff can be worn with magic bracers on the same arm without affecting the ability of either magic item, but it does not work when a magic ring is worn on the hand of the same arm.

Effect: When a bronzed cuff is activated, a +1 brilliant energy shock whip appears in the hand of the arm wearing the cuff. (If that hand already holds an object, the cuff fails to activate).

The whip remains for 5 rounds or until dismissed; otherwise, it cannot leave the hand of the wielder for any reason.

Aura/Caster Level: Strong conjuration; CL 16th.

Construction: Craft Wondrous Item, call lightning or lightning bolt, continual flame, gaseous form, 9,000 gp, 720 XP, 18 days.

Weight: —.

Price: 18,000 gp.

CRIMSON CLAW

Easy to conceal from a casual search, a crimson claw is another handy hidden weapon for any character.

Description: This small red dragon scale resembles a false fingernail for a finger or claw.

It is decorated with a flame pattern in delicate gold leaf and magically adheres to cover the wearer's existing nail.

A DC 15 Search check reveals that the crimson claw isn't simply a painted part of the wearer's body.

Activation: The resistance and bonus to natural armor function continuously while worn (occupying space on the body as a glove or gauntlet).

Once per day, the wearer can produce a burning hands effect with a purely mental standard action.

Anyone donning a crimson claw receives mental instructions in Draconic on the effects of the item and how to activate it.

Effect: A crimson claw grants its wearer resistance to fire 5 and a +1 enhancement bonus to natural armor.

In addition, the wearer can use it to produce a burning hands effect Aura/Caster Level: Faint abjuration and evocation; CL 5th.

Construction: Craft Wondrous Item, barkskin, burning hands, resist energy, 5,000 gp, 400 XP, 10 days.

Weight: —.

Price: 10,000 gp.

CUPRIC BROOCH

Originally created by the dao to allow their most loyal slaves to navigate the Elemental Plane of Earth and earthen barriers on the Material Plane, these handy brooches have slipped out into the world at large.

Description: This small copper dragon scale is set in a rectangular granite frame affixed to a metal pin.

Activation: Three times per day, the wearer can activate a cupric brooch as a full-round action.

Anyone donning a cupric brooch receives mental instructions in Draconic on the effects of the item and how to activate it.

Effect: When activated, a cupric brooch enables its wearer to move and breathe freely when passing through any type of stone or earth (but not magma or lava).

This effect does not grant the wearer the ability to see within stone or earth, and his speed is likely halved along with the other effects of blindness.

The wearer travels as though walking (or swimming, if that would result in a faster movement rate) and can move in any direction.

He can't use the brooch to pass through stone or earthen creatures.

The effect lasts for 1 minute.

Aura/Caster Level: Moderate transmutation; CL 9th.

Construction: Craft Wondrous Item, meld into stone, passwall, 11,000 gp, 880 XP, 22 days.

Weight: —.

Price: 22,000 gp.

DARK CLASP

This innocuous item extends the reach of attacks, surprising enemies who foolishly believe themselves beyond danger.

Description: This purple-black deep dragon scale comes in two parts, which fit together to form a twining serpent.

A dark clasp usually fastens a cloak, but it can secure any type of clothing, occupying space on the body as an amulet. The wearer of a dark clasp gains a slightly ophidian feature, usually vertical pupils.

Activation: Three times per day, a dark clasp can be activated with a swift action.

Anyone who wears the clasp receives mental instructions in Draconic on the effects of the item and how to activate it.

Effect: The dark clasp allows its wearer to make a single melee attack with a reach 5 feet longer than normal by elongating the arm (or similar body part) delivering the attack.

The attack must be made with one limb, so the wearer cannot gain greater reach with a weapon that is wielded in two hands.

Alternatively, the wearer can perform a single move action or standard action (such as picking up a set of keys outside a cell) with 5 additional feet of reach.

Again, this effect applies only to actions that can be performed with one limb.
Aura/Caster Level: Faint transmutation; CL 3rd.
Construction: Craft Wondrous Item, mage hand, 1,200 gp, 96 XP, 3 days.
Weight: —.
Price: 2,400 gp.

EBON MASK

This mask provides minor defensive properties and also lets its wearer avoid the dangers of drowning—useful when exploring the marshy lairs of black dragons.

Description: This dull black dragon scale is edged in iron. It is roughly triangular in shape and slightly larger than a human fist when not worn.

Activation: An ebon mask functions continuously while worn, occupying space on the body as goggles or lenses. If held to the face, it magically adheres to cover the nose and mouth.

Anyone donning an ebon mask receives mental instructions in Draconic on its effects.

Only the wearer can remove an ebon mask unless he is unconscious or killed, in which case it detaches easily.

Effect: An ebon mask grants the ability to breathe water but does not prevent the wearer from breathing air.

It also grants resistance to acid 5 and a +1 enhancement bonus to natural armor.

While highly prized for its benefits, an ebon mask has a drawback: It muffles speech, imposing a 20% chance of spell failure when the wearer attempts to cast spells with verbal components.

Aura/Caster Level: Moderate abjuration and transmutation; CL 6th.

Construction: Craft Wondrous Item, barkskin, resist energy, water breathing, 4,500 gp, 360 XP, 9 days.

Weight: 1 lb.

Price: 9,000 gp.

EMERALD EYE PATCH

Prized by characters who explore dark forests and jungles, this patch also comes in handy for anyone searching for just the right herb or spice.

Description: This scintillating green dragon scale is 2 inches in diameter and features a faceted emerald in its center.

Activation: Activating either effect of the emerald eye patch requires a standard action.

The rebuke/command plant creatures effect functions three times per day, while the detect plants effect can be used at will.

If it is held to the face, the patch magically adheres to cover one eye.

Anyone donning an emerald eye patch receives mental instructions in Draconic on the effects of the item and how to activate it.

Only the wearer can remove the patch unless she is unconscious or killed, in which case it detaches easily.

Effect: The wearer of an emerald eye patch can rebuke or command plant creatures, just like the granted power of the Plant domain, as a 10th-level cleric.

In addition, the wearer can detect plants at will as if using the detect animals or plants spell (PH 218).

but this ability detects only plants.

Aura/Caster Level: Moderate divination and transmutation; CL 10th.

Construction: Craft Wondrous Item, control plants.

6,000 gp, 480 XP, 12 days.

Weight: —.

Price: 12,000 gp.

FANGED RING

This item is useful to any character who frequently finds herself unarmed, though monks and similar martial artists prize it most highly.

Description: Protruding 3 inches above its setting, this gray fang dragon scale is set in a heavy gold band.

The ring appears cumbersome but does not interfere with any actions.

Activation: A fanged ring functions continuously while worn.

Anyone donning the ring receives mental instructions in Draconic on the effects of the item and how to activate it.

Effect: A fanged ring grants its wearer the Improved Unarmed Strike feat and the Improved Natural Attack (unarmed strike) feat.

If the wearer deals a critical hit with an unarmed strike, he also deals 1 point of Constitution damage to the creature struck.

Aura/Caster Level: Strong transmutation; CL 12th.

Construction: Forge Ring, divine power, poison.

5,000 gp, 400 XP, 10 days.

Weight: —.

Price: 10,000 gp.

FIERY KABUTO OF THE CELESTIAL DRAGON

In addition to being a badge of honor and loyalty, this helm grants immunity to cold and fire and burns would-be attackers.

Description: This extremely ornate helm is decorated with red and yellow enamel and features a large t'ien lung dragon scale as its central decoration.

Prerequisite: While this item functions for any character, wearing a kabuto is a right normally reserved for samurai (see Oriental Adventures or Complete Warrior).

Other characters who wear this item risk drawing the ire of those who hold to such standards of honor.

In campaigns that don't include samurai, the fiery kabuto is most appropriate for paladins, knights (see Player's Handbook II), and similarly honorable characters.

Activation: Activating or turning of a fiery kabuto requires a standard action; expanding the diameter of the sphere of flame requires a full-round action.

It functions once per day.

When first donned, it telepathically instructs the wearer (simultaneously in the Spirit Tongue and Draconic) on the effects of the item and how to activate it.

Effect: A fiery kabuto of the celestial dragon creates a sheath of fire around its wearer that lasts for 10 rounds.

The wearer is immune to the helm's flames and also gains immunity to cold and fire.

Furthermore, the flames deal 1d6 points of fire damage to any creature that strikes the wearer with a natural weapon or nonreach melee weapon.

The wearer can attempt a DC 15 Concentration check as a full-round action to expand the size of the flames to a 20-foot-radius sphere.

Each creature within the sphere takes 2d6 points of fire damage each round at the end of the wearer's turn, but they no longer take damage from striking him.

Aura/Caster Level: Strong evocation; CL 13th.

Construction: Craft Wondrous Item, fires of purity (Oriental Adventures) or fire shield, 4,500 gp, 460 XP, 9 days.

Weight: 3 lb.

Price: 9,000 gp.

GOLDEN VISOR

When worn as part of a helm, this item grants its wearer keen senses similar to those of a dragon, as well as a menacing aura to keep foes at bay.

Description: This gold dragon scale is edged in steel and pierced with viewing slits, looking very much like the visor of a helmet.

Activation: A golden visor must be attached to a helm to function, occupying space on the body as goggles or lenses. While the helm is worn, its darkvision and low-light vision effects function continuously, and the wearer can activate blindsense and the aura of menace each once per day as a standard action.

The wearer receives mental instructions in Draconic on the effects of the item and how to activate it.

Effect: The wearer of a helm fitted with a golden visor gains darkvision out to 60 feet and a dragon's low-light vision (seeing four times as well as a human in low-light conditions).

Once per day, the visor also grants blindsense out to 30 feet. In addition, the wearer can generate an aura of menace once per day.

An enemy with fewer Hit Dice than the wearer who tries to approach within 20 feet of him must succeed on a DC 20 Will save or be unable to approach for 1 round.

If the wearer moves closer to an affected creature, the effect is broken for that creature, and it gains immunity to the aura for 24 hours.

Aura/Caster Level: Moderate divination and enchantment; CL 11th.

Construction: Craft Wondrous Item, clairaudience/clairvoyance, darkvision, invisibility purge, repulsion, 12,000 gp, 960 XP, 24 days.

Weight: 1 lb.

Price: 24,000 gp.

IYARINGU OF THE EARTH DRAGON

This handy earring makes it easier for its wearer to cross difficult terrain.

Description: This large, gaudy earring is fashioned from a peacock-like quill of a li lung dragon and decorated with jade beads and pieces of red coral.

Activation: An iyaringu functions continuously while worn, occupying space on the body as a hat or headband.

When first worn, it telepathically instructs the wearer (simultaneously in the Spirit Tongue and Draconic) on the effects of the item and how to activate it.

Effect: An iyaringu of the earth dragon grants sure footing, allowing the wearer to move at his normal speed through bogs, rubble, and undergrowth (see DAJG Chapter 3 for more details on terrain).

He can remain standing even during an earthquake.

The earring has the same effect when the wearer encounters similar magical obstacles, but it does not negate any damage that might be dealt.

For example, the wearer is not reduced to half speed in the area of a spike stones spell, but he still takes 1d8 points of damage for every 5 feet of movement.

Aura/Caster Level: Faint transmutation; CL 5th.

Construction: Craft Wondrous Item, freedom of movement, 3,750 gp, 300 XP, 8 days.

Weight: —.

Price: 7,500 gp.

KODATE OF THE SPIRIT DRAGON

This tiny shield is ideal for spies and other stealthy characters who need to slip in or out of tight spots.

Description: This buckler is fashioned from silver-plated steel and has a shen lung dragon scale embedded in its center.

Activation: The enhancement bonus and the ability to speak and understand the Spirit Tongue function while the kodate is held.

Twice per day, the owner can become ethereal as a swift action.

When first held, the buckler telepathically instructs the owner (simultaneously in the Spirit Tongue and Draconic) on the effects of the item and how to activate it.

Effect: A kodate of the spirit dragon functions as a +1 buckler, and its owner can speak and understand the Spirit Tongue.

When activated, the item renders its owner ethereal for 1 round, similar to the ethereal jaunt spell (PH 227).

Aura/Caster Level: Moderate abjuration and transmutation; CL 10th.

Construction: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, ethereal taunt, tongues, 3,165 gp, 240 XP, 6 days.

Weight: 6 lb.

Price: 6,165 gp.

KURIBUNE OF THE RIVER DRAGON

Small enough to be carried in a box, this scale expands into a full-size rowboat.

Description: This 6-inch-diameter Chiang Lung dragon scale is decorated with blue and green enamel, the interior studded with freshwater pearls arranged like benches in a tiny rowboat.

It is usually stored in a watertight black lacquer box.

Activation: To activate a kuribune, the owner must place it in contact with water and speak the command word (a standard action).

He can return it to dragon scale form by sprinkling a handful of sand or dirt into the boat (another standard action).

When first grasped, a kuribune telepathically instructs the owner (simultaneously in the Spirit Tongue and Draconic) on the effects of the item and how to activate it.

Effect: When activated, a kuribune of the river dragon enlarges into a normal 12-foot rowboat that can hold up to three Medium creatures.

The boat obeys simple one-word commands (such as “start”, “stop”, “left”, “right”, and so on) spoken by someone sitting in the prow, and it travels at a constant speed of 10 feet per round (subject to the current and rowing).

Aura/Caster Level: Strong transmutation; CL 12th.

Construction: Craft Wondrous Item, Craft (shipmaking) 5 ranks, contingency, fabricate, find the path, 1,500 gp, 240 XP, 3 days.

Weight: 1 lb.

Price: 3,000 gp.

OPALESCENT AMULET

Treasured by those who hunt in the frostfell, this item protects its owner from the common dangers of that deadly realm.

Description: This milky white dragon scale is framed by a silver setting and hangs from a filigree chain.

Tiny opals stud the surface of the scale in a snowflake pattern.

Activation: An opalescent amulet functions continuously while worn.

Anyone donning it receives mental instructions in Draconic on its effects.

Effect: An opalescent amulet grants the icewalking ability of a white dragon, which functions as the spider climb spell (PH 283) but only in icy areas.

The wearer also gains resistance to cold 5 and a +1 enhancement bonus to natural armor.

Aura/Caster Level: Moderate abjuration and transmutation; CL 6th.

Construction: Craft Wondrous Item, barkskin, resist energy, spider climb, 4,500 gp, 360 XP, 9 days.

Weight: —.

Price: 9,000 gp.

PEARLY OKIMONO OF THE SEA DRAGON

Many ship captains keep a pearly okimono of the sea dragon in their cabins, although smaller vessels have one mounted on their bows for decoration.

It is a mark of prestige to possess one, since these items greatly benefit warships, exploratory vessels, and fishers alike.

Description: This ornate lung wang dragon scale is 12 inches in diameter and inlaid with mother-of-pearl, coral, and white pearls depicting an ocean scene.

Activation: An okimono functions continuously as long as it is affixed to a water vessel.

When first grasped, it telepathically instructs the owner (simultaneously in the Spirit Tongue and Draconic) on the effects of the item and how to activate it.

Effect: When carried aboard a waterborne vessel, a pearly okimono of the sea dragon grants a +5 bonus on any Profession (sailor) checks made to control the ship by someone on the vessel.

It also increases the vessel's hardness by 5 and halves any chance that the ship will capsize in rough water.

Aura/Caster Level: Moderate divination and transmutation; CL 11th.

Construction: Craft Wondrous Item, commune with nature or commune with greater spirit (see Oriental Adventures), control winds, ironwood, 3,750 gp, 300 XP, 8 days.

Weight: 6 lb.

Price: 7,500 gp.

SHADOWY DIADEM

This headband can cloak its wearer in a sudden shroud of darkness and protect him from the life-draining attacks of undead.

Description: This black iron headband is studded with onyx and black sapphires, with a triangular shadow dragon scale affixed to its center.

Activation: A shadowy diadem can be activated three times per day as a swift action.

Its effects last for 10 rounds, or until the wearer enters the area of a spell of 3rd level or higher that has the light descriptor.

Anyone donning the headband receives mental instructions in Draconic on the effects of the item and how to activate it.

Effect: A shadowy diadem cloaks its wearer in a swirling mass of darkness that provides concealment and grants immunity to energy drain effects.

Aura/Caster Level: Moderate abjuration and illusion; CL 7th.

Construction: Craft Wondrous Item, blur, death ward, 2,200 gp, 176 XP, 5 days.

Weight: 1 lb.

Price: 4,400 gp.

SONOROUS SCALE

Characters who are tired of having their prize jewelry swiped by thieves will find that this scale to be a shocking deterrent to would-be pickpockets.

Description: This song dragon scale is decorated with a variety of precious metals and gems with no discernible pattern or form.

Activation: Speaking a command word causes a sonorous scale to transform into an attractive piece of jewelry of the speaker's choice, such as a brooch, pendant, bracelet, circlet, or amulet.

No matter what its shape, this item does not inhibit the function of any other magic item in use by its owner.

Alter donning the jewelry, the wearer can touch it safely, but anyone else grabbing it will trigger the damage and keening effects.

The wearer can speak a second command word to deactivate the keening, and a third to turn the jewelry back into a dragon scale, which can be touched safely by anyone. Anyone who dons a sonorous scale receives mental instructions in Draconic on the effects of the item and how to activate it.

Effect: When activated, a sonorous scale acts purely as a theft deterrent.

If someone tries to take the piece of jewelry from the wearer, it deals 3d8 points of electricity damage to the thief and emits a high-pitched keening sound that can be heard with a DC-20 Listen check (making it clearly audible up to 300 feet away, assuming no barriers exist).

The noise stops only if the item is removed from the wearer, if the wearer is slain, or if the wearer deactivates the keening with a command word.

Aura/Caster Level: Moderate evocation; CL 6th.

Construction: Craft Wondrous Item, alarm, shocking grasp, 1,250 gp, 100 XP, 3 days.

Weight: —.

Price: 2,500 gp.

STERLING COLLAR

Anyone who wears this collar can walk gracefully through the clouds like a silver dragon and also gains some of the creature's natural defenses.

Description: This silver dragon scale is expertly shaped to fit around the throat and is studded with chrysoberyls and white pearls.

Activation: The resistance to cold and natural armor bonus granted by the sterling collar function continuously while the item is worn.

Once per day, the wearer can activate the ability to walk on clouds (an immediate action) for up to 10 minutes.

Effect: A sterling collar grants resistance to cold 5 and a +1 enhancement bonus to natural armor.

In addition, the wearer can walk on clouds just as a silver dragon does; treat this as an air walk spell (PH 196) that works only in log or clouds.

Aura/Caster Level: Moderate abjuration and transmutation; CL 9th.

Construction: Craft Wondrous Item, air walk, barkskin, resist energy, 6,000 gp, 480 XP, 12 days.

Weight: 1 lb.

Price: 12,000 gp.

TAREKAZARI OF THE COILED DRAGON

This jeweled amulet allows its owner to speak with a dead creature or to prevent a fallen comrade from being reanimated.

Description: This amulet is fashioned from a pan lung dragon scale decorated with silver and amethysts.

It hangs from a silver chain and bears an inscription that reads "Honor thine ancestors" in Draconic.

Activation: To activate a tarekazari, its owner must place the amulet on the remains of a creature and speak the command word (a standard action).

It functions once per day.

When first grasped, the amulet telepathically instructs the wearer (simultaneously in the Spirit Tongue and Draconic) on its effects and how to activate it.

Effect: When activated, a tarekazari of the coiled dragon first recites the names of five generations of the dead creature's ancestors.

It then allows three questions to be asked of the creature's spirit, subject to all the restrictions of a speak with dead spell (PH 281) cast by a 7th-level caster.

Alternatively, the creature's remains can be rendered immune to reanimation as an undead creature by any effect.

This immunity is permanent.

The tarekazari does not permit questioning a creature's spirit and then rendering the same creature immune to reanimation—one effect must be chosen.

Aura/Caster Level: Moderate divination and transmutation; CL 7th.

Construction: Craft Wondrous Item, hallow or dispel taint (see Oriental Adventures), legend lore, speak with dead, 1,800 gp, 144 XP, 4 days.

Weight: —.

Price: 3,600 gp.

WATERY HACHIMAKI OF THE TYPHOON DRAGON

By channeling the mighty power of a run mi lung dragon, this headband grants control of the wind and the rain.

Description: This blue silk headband is sewn with black pearls and features a tun mi lung dragon scale as its central ornament.

Activation: Activating the hachimaki requires a standard action.

Each of its effects functions once per day.

When first donned, the item telepathically instructs the wearer (simultaneously in the Spirit Tongue and Draconic) on its effects and how to activate it.

Effect: A hachimaki can be used to produce a control weather effect and a control winds effect, each once per day.

Aura/Caster Level: Strong transmutation; CL 13th.

Construction: Craft Wondrous Item, control weather, control winds, 12,000 gp, 960 XP, 24 days.

Weight: —.

Price: 24,000 gp.

EPIC ARMOR AND SHIELD SPECIAL ABILITIES

EPIC LEVEL HANDBOOK (3.0)

ACID WARDING

A suit of armor or shield with this special ability normally has a dull gray appearance. The armor absorbs the first 50 points of acid damage per round that the wearer would normally take (similar to the resist elements spell).
Caster Level: 21st; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor, protection from elements;
Market Price: +6 bonus.

COLD WARDING

A suit of armor or shield with this special ability normally has a bluish, icy hue or is adorned with furs and shaggy pelts. The armor absorbs the first 50 points of cold damage per round that the wearer would normally take (similar to the resist elements spell).
Caster Level: 21st; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor, protection from elements;
Market Price: +6 bonus.

EXCEPTIONAL ARROW DEFLECTION

This shield functions like a shield of arrow deflection (see the DUNGEON MASTER's Guide), except that it can deflect any type of ranged attack (including spells that require a ranged touch attack) as if it were an arrow. Any time the bearer would normally be struck by a ranged attack, he can make a Reflex saving throw (DC 20). If the ranged attack has an enhancement bonus (or a spell level), the DC increases by that amount. If he succeeds, the shield deflects the attack. The bearer must be aware of the attack and not flat-footed. Attempting to deflect a ranged attack doesn't count as an action.
Caster Level: 23rd; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor, shield, wall of force; Market Price: +8 bonus.

FIRE WARDING

A suit of armor or shield with this special ability normally has a reddish hue and often is decorated with a draconic or fiery motif.

The armor absorbs the first 50 points of fire damage per round that the wearer would normally take (similar to the resist elements spell).

Caster Level: 21st; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor, protection from elements;
Market Price: +6 bonus.

GREAT INVULNERABILITY

This suit of armor or shield grants the wearer damage reduction. The damage reduction can be 10/+2, 15/+3, 20/+4, or 25/+5, depending on the armor.
Caster Level: 19th (10/+2), 20th (15/+3), 21st (20/+4), 22nd (25/+5); Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor, stoneskin, wish, or miracle;
Market Price: +4 bonus (10/+2), +5 bonus (15/+3), +6 bonus (20/+4), +7 bonus (25/+5).

GREAT REFLECTION

This mirror-like shield is completely reflective. Any time its bearer is targeted with a spell, it automatically reflects the spell back at the caster (as the spell turning spell). The wearer can lower or raise this effect as a free action (thus allowing beneficial spells in as desired).
Caster Level: 25th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor, spell turning;
Market Price: +10 bonus.

GREAT SPELL RESISTANCE

This suit of armor or shield grants the wearer spell resistance. The spell resistance can be 21, 23, 25, or 27, depending on the armor.
Caster Level: 21st (SR 21), 22nd (SR 23), 23rd (SR 25), 24th (SR 27); Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor, spell resistance; Market Price: +6 bonus (SR 21), +7 bonus (SR 23), +8 bonus (SR 25), +9 bonus (SR 27).

INFINITE ARROW DEFLECTION

This shield functions like a shield of arrow deflection (see the DUNGEON MASTER's Guide), though it can deflect any number of projectiles or thrown weapons each round. Any time the bearer would normally be struck by a ranged weapon, he can make a Reflex saving throw (DC 20). If the ranged weapon has an enhancement bonus, the DC increases by that amount. If he succeeds, the shield deflects the weapon. He must be aware of the attack and not flat-footed. Attempting to deflect a ranged weapon doesn't count as an action. Exceptional ranged weapons, such as boulders hurled by giants or Melf's acid arrow, can't be deflected.
Caster Level: 21st; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor, protection from arrows, shield; Market Price: +6 bonus.

LIGHTNING WARDING

A suit of armor or shield with this special ability normally has a bluish hue and often is decorated with a storm or lightning motif.

The armor absorbs the first 50 points of lightning damage per round that the wearer would normally take (similar to the resist elements spell).

Caster Level: 21st; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor, protection from elements;
Market Price: +6 bonus.

NEGATING

Immediately after the wearer of this armor is hit with a magic weapon, the armor casts greater dispelling on the weapon.

(In the case of projectile weapons, the armor casts greater dispelling on the weapon that fired the projectile if it is in range.

If it is out of range, the armor does nothing).

No weapon can be affected by the armor more than once per day (regardless of the success of the dispel check).

Caster Level: 20th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor, greater dispelling;
Market Price: +5 bonus.

SONIC WARDING

A suit of armor or shield with this special ability normally has a glistening appearance.

The armor absorbs the first 50 points of sonic damage per round that the wearer would normally take (similar to the resist elements spell).

Caster Level: 21st; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor, protection from elements;
Market Price: +6 bonus.

EPIC RINGS

EPIC LEVEL HANDBOOK (3.0)

ADAMANT LAW

The wearer of this blue-black ring is constantly sheathed in a shield of law effect.

It bestows one negative level on any chaotic creature that puts it on.

The negative level remains as long as the ring is worn and disappears when the ring is removed.

This negative level never results in actual level loss, but it cannot be overcome in any way (including restoration spells) while the ring is worn.

Caster Level: 15th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, Forge Epic Ring, shield of law, creator must be lawful; Market Price: 250,000 gp.

CHAOTIC FURY

The wearer of this jagged metal ring is constantly sheathed in a cloak of chaos effect.

It bestows one negative level on any lawful creature that puts it on.

The negative level remains as long as the ring is worn and disappears when the ring is removed.

This negative level never results in actual level loss, but it cannot be overcome in any way (including restoration spells) while the ring is worn.

Caster Level: 15th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, Forge Epic Ring, cloak of chaos, creator must be chaotic; Market Price: 250,000 gp.

ELEMENTAL IMMUNITY

This plain adamantine band continually provides the wearer with immunity to a single type of energy: fire, cold, electricity, acid, or sonic.

The wearer takes no damage from the energy of the specific type.

Caster Level: 20th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, Forge Epic Ring, protection from elements; Market Price: 240,000 gp.

EPIC PROTECTION

This ring offers continual magical protection in the form of a deflection bonus to Armor Class of +6 or higher.

Caster Level: 20th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, Forge Epic Ring, shield of faith, creator's caster level must be three times the ring's bonus; Market Price: 720,000 gp (+6), 980,000 gp (+7), 1,280,000 gp (+8), 1,620,000 gp (+9), 2,000,000 gp (+10).

EPIC WIZARDRY

Like the ring of wizardry, this special ring comes in a variety of types useful only to arcane spellcasters.

The wearer's arcane spells per day are doubled for one particular spell level.

An epic ring of wizardry V doubles 5th-level spells, an epic ring of wizardry VI doubles 6th-level spells, an epic ring of wizardry VII doubles 7th-level spells, an epic ring of wizardry VIII doubles 8th-level spells, and an epic ring of wizardry IX doubles 9th-level spells.

Bonus spells from high ability scores, school specialization, or any other source are not doubled.

Caster Level: 23rd (epic wizardry V), 26th (epic wizardry VI), 29th (epic wizardry VII), 32nd (epic wizardry VIII), 35th (epic wizardry IX); Prerequisites: Forge Ring, Forge Epic Ring, wish; Market Price: 250,000 gp (epic wizardry V), 360,000 gp (epic wizardry VI), 490,000 gp (epic wizardry VII), 640,000 gp (epic wizardry VIII), 810,000 gp (epic wizardry IX).

INEFFABLE EVIL

The wearer of this crimson ring is constantly sheathed in an unholy aura effect.

It bestows one negative level on any good creature that puts it on.

The negative level remains as long as the ring is worn and disappears when the ring is removed.

This negative level never results in actual level loss, but it cannot be overcome in any way (including restoration spells) while the ring is worn.

Caster Level: 15th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, Forge Epic Ring, unholy aura, creator must be evil; Market Price: 250,000 gp.

IRONSKIN

This plain band of black iron grants its wearer damage reduction 10/+5.

Caster Level: 20th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, Forge Epic Ring, iron body; Market Price: 400,000 gp.

RAPID HEALING

The wearer of this ring of bone grants a living wearer fast healing 3.

It must be worn for 24 hours before its powers activate, and if removed it will not function again until it has been worn for 24 hours by the same individual.

Caster Level: 20th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, Forge Epic Ring, regenerate; Market Price: 300,000 gp.

SEQUESTERING

This crystalline ring becomes invisible when worn.

Upon command, the wearer gains the benefits of a sequester spell (though she does not become comatose as normal for the spell).

Caster Level: 20th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, Forge Epic Ring, sequester; Market Price: 300,000 gp.

UNIVERSAL ELEMENTAL IMMUNITY

This ring appears to be fashioned from four lengths of pure element: acid, fire, cold, electricity.

The stone set in the band emits a rumble like distant thunder once every day.

When worn, it functions as a ring of elemental immunity for all types of energy—fire, cold, electricity, acid, and sonic. The wearer takes no damage from energy of any of these types.

Caster Level: 20th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, Forge Epic Ring, protection from elements; Market Price: 2,160,000 gp.

UNIVERSAL ELEMENTAL RESISTANCE, MAJOR

This ring functions as a ring of major elemental resistance for all types of energy—fire, cold, electricity, acid, and sonic. When the wearer would normally take such damage, subtract 30 points of damage per round from the amount before applying.

Caster Level: 20th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, Forge Epic Ring, protection from elements; Market Price: 216,000 gp; Cost to Create: 108,000 gp + 12,160 XP.

VIRTUOUS GOOD

The wearer of this pure golden ring is constantly sheathed in a holy aura effect.

It bestows one negative level on any evil creature that puts it on.

The negative level remains as long as the ring is worn and disappears when the ring is removed.

This negative level never results in actual level loss, but it cannot be overcome in any way (including restoration spells) while the ring is worn.

Caster level: 15th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, Forge Epic Ring, holy aura, creator must be good; Market Price: 250,000 gp; Cost to Create: 125,000 gp + 12,500 XP.

WEAPONBREAKING

A ring of weaponbreaking is identical to a ring of ironskin, and has one additional power.

Any weapon that successfully strikes the wearer must also make a Fortitude saving throw (DC 20) or be shattered into pieces.

Caster Level: 20th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, Forge Epic Ring, iron body, shatter; Market Price: 600,000 gp; Cost to Create: 300,000 gp + 16,000 XP.

EPIC RODS

EPIC LEVEL HANDBOOK (3.0)

BESIEGEMENT

This rod functions as a +3 light mace.

In addition, it is useful for besieging fortifications.

Whenever the wielder makes a charge attack, the rod improves to a +6 weapon.

Twice per day, the rod can create a battering ram that lasts for 24 rounds.

This ram can strike once per round, dealing 20 points of damage with each hit.

It cannot be used to target individuals, only fortifications.

It can be damaged by normal means (65 hp, AC 22), and disintegrate or dispel magic destroys it.

The rod also has the following powers:

Siege Engine: One heavy catapult, two light catapults, or three siege towers may be generated with each use of this power.

The power can be used three times per day.

Ammunition for 20 shots is included with each weapon created.

See the Siege Engines section in Chapter 5 of the DUNGEON MASTER's Guide for more information.

Each weapon created last for 12 hours.

Transmute Rock to Mud: This power can be used three times per day (caster level 24th, save DC 17).

Caster Level: 24th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, Craft Epic Rod, Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Bigby's clenched fist, passwall, Rary's telepathic bond, transmute rock to mud;
Market Price: 447,745 gp; Cost to Create: 224,025 gp + 14,474 XP.

EPIC ABSORPTION

Like a rod of absorption, this rod draws single-target or ray spells and spell-like abilities into itself, nullifying the effect and storing the potential spell levels until the wielder releases the energy in the form of spells of her own. Spells of any level (including those boosted beyond 9th level by metamagic) can be absorbed, although epic spells cannot.

The rod absorbs a maximum of 150 spell levels and can thereafter only discharge any remaining potential it might have.

The rod cannot be recharged.

Caster Level: 23rd; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, Craft Epic Rod, Empower Spell, Maximize Spell, empowered maximized spell turning; Market Price: 1,500,000 gp.

EPIC CANCELLATION

This rod is similar in appearance to a rod of cancellation, but more powerful.

Its touch drains an item of all magical properties, including the magical energy in epic magic items (but not most artifacts).

The item touched gets a Will saving throw (DC 26).

If a creature is holding the magic item at the time, then the item can use the holder's Will save bonus in place of its own.

In such cases, contact is established by making a melee touch attack roll.

Upon draining three items, the rod becomes brittle and useless.

Drained items can only be restored by wish, miracle, or epic spells specifically designed to restore lost power.

A rod of epic cancellation can neutralize a normal sphere of annihilation without itself being cancelled.

Caster Level: 25th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, Craft Epic Rod, dispel magic; Market Price: 330,000 gp.

EPIC MIGHT

This rod is similar to a rod of lordly might, although it is far more powerful.

It is larger than its normal counterpart, and it is constructed of adamantine rather than normal metal.

It has six buttons, several spell-like functions, and several mundane uses, and it can also be used as a magic weapon of various sorts.

The following spell-like functions of the rod can each be used once per day.

- Dominant Person: Touched foe is recipient of a dominate person spell, if the wielder so commands (Will save DC 24). The wielder must choose to use this power and then succeed with a melee touch attack to activate the power, if the attack fails, the effect is lost.

- Stun: Upon command, all enemies viewing the rod are stunned, as per the power word, stun spell (10-foot maximum range, Will save DC 24).

Invoking this power is a standard action.

- Damage: Upon command, the rod deals 10d8 points of damage to an opponent on a successful touch attack and cures the wielder of a like amount of damage (Will save DC 26).

The wielder must choose to use this power before attacking, as with dominate person.

The following weapon uses of the rod have no limits on their use.

- In its normal form, the rod can be used as a +6 heavy mace.

- When button 1 is pushed, the rod becomes a +3 longsword of fiery blasting.

- When button 2 is pushed, the rod becomes a +8 battleaxe.

- When button 3 is pushed, the rod becomes a +10 shortspear or +10 longspear.

The following mundane uses of the rod also have no limits on their use.

- Climbing pole/ladder: When button 4 is pushed, a spike that can anchor in granite is extruded from the ball, while the other end sprouts three sharp hooks.

The rod lengthens to anywhere between 5 and 150 feet in a single round; stopping when button 4 is pushed again.

Horizontal bars 3 inches long fold out from the sides, 1 foot apart, in staggered progression.

The rod is firmly held by the spike and hooks and can bear up to 10,000 pounds.

The wielder can retract the pole by pushing button 5.

- The ladder function can be used to force open doors. The wielder plants the rod's base 30 feet or less from the portal to be forced and in line with it, then pushes button 4. The force exerted has a Strength bonus of +24.
- When button 6 is pushed, the rod indicates magnetic north and gives the wielder a knowledge of his approximate depth beneath the surface or height above it. Caster Level: 30th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, Craft Epic Rod, Craft Magic Arms and Armor. Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor, cure critical wounds, inflict critical wounds, bull's strength, fireball, dominate person, power word stun; Market Price: 4,293,432 gp; Cost to Create: 2,151,372 gp + 52,841 XP.

EPIC NEGATION

This rod negates the spell or spell-like function or functions of magic items, including epic magic items (but not artifacts). The wielder points the rod at the magic item, and a pale gray beam shoots forth to touch the target device, attacking as a ray (a ranged touch attack). The ray negates any currently active item function and has a 75% chance to negate any other spell or spell-like functions of that device, regardless of the level or power of the functions, for 2d4 rounds. To negate instantaneous effects, the rod wielder needs to have readied an action. The target item gets no saving throw or means to resist this effect. The rod can function three times per day. Caster Level: 24th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, Craft Epic Rod, dispel magic, limited wish or miracle; Market Price: 446,000 gp.

EPIC RULERSHIP

This rod appears to be a royal scepter worth at least 25,000 gp in materials and workmanship alone. The wielder can command the obedience and fealty of creatures within 360 feet when she activates the device (a standard action). Creatures totaling 900 Hit Dice can be ruled, but creatures with Intelligence scores of 17 or higher are entitled to a Will saving throw (DC 29) to negate the effect. Ruled creatures obey the wielder as if she were their absolute sovereign. Still, if the wielder gives a command that is contrary to the nature of the creatures commanded, the magic is broken. The rod can be used for 1,500 total minutes before crumbling to dust. This duration need not be continuous. Caster Level: 25th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, Craft Epic Rod, Improved Heighten Spell, improved heightened mass charm; Market Price: 575,000 gp; Cost to Create: 300,000 gp + 15,500 XP.

EPIC SPELLCASTER

This magnificent adamantine rod grants its wielder a +10 insight bonus on Spellcraft checks made to cast epic spells for as long as he holds or carries the rod. Caster Level: 21st; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, Craft Epic Rod; Market Price: 245,400 gp.

EPIC SPLENDOR

This rod grants its wielder a +8 enhancement bonus to Charisma for as long as she holds or carries the item. Three times per day, the rod creates and garbs her in clothing of the finest fabrics, plus adornments of fur and jewels. Apparel created by the rod can remain in existence up to 24 hours. The value of the garb ranges from 70,000 to 100,000 gp (1d4+6 × 10,000 gp)—10,000 gp for the fabric, 50,000 gp for the furs, and the rest for jewel trim (maximum of 40 gems, maximum value 1,000 gp each). In addition, the rod can, once per week, create a palatial mansion in any floor plan the user desires. The mansion is palatial, able to accommodate up to 250 people, housing them in private chambers and serving them fine banquets. The mansion lasts for three days, after which time it, and everything originally in it (including items removed from the mansion), disappear. Caster Level: 21st; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, Craft Epic Rod, fabricate, Mordenkainen's magnificent mansion; Market Price: 297,400 gp; Cost to Create: 191,200 gp + 12,124 XP.

EXCELLENT MAGIC

This rod sports a shining adamantine headpiece. Once per day when casting a nonepic or epic spell that has an experience point component, the rod supplies up to 2,000 XP, not the caster. If more experience points are required to cast the spell, the caster provides them. As a special use of the rod, the caster can substitute the power inherent in the rod for the experience point development cost of an epic spell. Doing so drains all the power from the rod, rendering it useless. Caster Level: 21st; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, Craft Epic Rod; Market Price: 650,000 gp; Cost to Create: 325,000 gp + 26,000 XP.

FORTIFICATION

This rod functions as a +3 light mace. In addition, it is useful for the construction and defense of fortifications. Whenever the wielder is benefiting from cover, the rod improves that to nine-tenths cover (+10 cover AC bonus and +4 cover Reflex save bonus; failure on the save results in half damage and success results in no damage). Three times per day, the rod can create food and water, as per the cleric spell, for twenty-four people. The rod also has the following powers: Fortify: Four times per day, a stone wall can be created that is 12 inches thick, 10 feet high, and 30 feet long. This wall has a parapet and battlements across the top. Alternatively, the power can be used to mend a broken existing wall. The gap to be filled can be no more than 300 square feet in area). In addition, once per day, a great door of iron can be created that is set into one of the newly created walls.

This door, 4 inches thick, may be a double door, a drawbridge, or a portcullis, as chosen by the wielder. Siege Engine: One heavy catapult, two light catapults, or three ballistae may be generated with each use of this power.

The power can be used four times per day. Ammunition for 20 shots is included with each weapon created.

See the Siege Engines section in Chapter 5 of the DUNGEON MASTER's Guide for more information. Caster Level: 24th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, Craft Epic Rod, Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Bigby's interposing hand, create food and water, major creation, wall of iron, wall of stone; Market Price: 465,665 gp; Cost to Create: 231,985 gp + 14,634 XP.

INVULNERABILITY

When held, this stout adamantine rod grants its wielder the following powers.

- +5 natural armor bonus.
- +5 resistance bonus on saving throws.
- Damage reduction 50/+3.
- Immunity to critical hits.
- Spell resistance 32.

Caster Level: 20th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, Craft Epic Rod, iron body, resistance, spell resistance; Market Price: 600,000 gp.

NIGHTMARES

This rod is constructed of an ebony material and takes the form of a horrible, writhing form with a skull-like unearthly head that is unsettling to behold.

Anyone who comes within 20 feet of the wielder feels a grave sense of unease.

Each person so affected must make a Will save (DC 17) or At the effects of a nightmare spell the next time he falls asleep.

The wielder is immune to this effect.

Three times per day, the wielder can utter a command word that causes the rod to emit a horrid, inhuman scream.

Up to twenty of the closest creatures within a 30-foot radius who hear this terrible wail believe that their worst nightmares have become reality and suffer the effects of a wail of the banshee spell (DC 23).

Caster Level: 21st; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, Craft Epic Rod, nightmare, permanency, wail of the banshee; Market Price: 284,000 gp.

PARADISE

This item creates a nondimensional space, similar in effect to a rod of security.

However, the rod's possessor and up to 999 other creatures can stay in complete safety for up to 1,000 days divided by the number of creatures affected.

Natural healing takes place at five times the normal pace. The rod functions like its nonepic counterpart in all other ways (see the DUNGEON MASTER's Guide).

Caster Level: 24th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, Craft Epic Rod, Improved Heighten Spell, improved heightened gate; Market Price: 610,000 gp.

PATH

This rod appears as a shillelagh of darkened, polished oak. It serves as an aid to trailblazing and travel.

It grants the wielder a +30 enhancement bonus on Wilderness Lore checks for tracking and Intuit Direction checks.

The handle of the rod is hollow, functioning like a telescope.

When the wielder peers through it, the limits of vision are three times normal (and spotting distances for encounters are tripled; see Table 3-1 in the DUNGEON MASTER's Guide).

In addition, the telescoping handle enables the wielder to view things as though affected by a true seeing spell.

The rod also has the following powers.

Map: Three times per day a section of the rod unrolls like a scroll from a tube, revealing a map of the surrounding area, centered on the location of the rod.

The area shown on the map covers an area as small as 50 feet in radius to as large as 24 miles in radius, zooming in or out with a set of command words.

The map reveals natural topography and all types of structures (even hidden ones), but it will not show the location of creatures.

Passage: Three times per day, this power allows the wielder and up to five others in a 20-foot radius to move unhindered through natural plant growth or bodies of water (as per the freedom of movement spell).

Bridge: Once per day, this power allows the user to create a 5-foot-wide, 40-foot-long stone causeway across chasms and canyons.

The bridge created lasts for 1 hour.

Pass without Trace: Once per day, this power can be used on the wielder and twenty others, for 21 minutes.

It is otherwise as the spell of the same name (caster level 24th).

Caster Level: 21st; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, Craft Epic Rod, find the path, freedom of movement, pass without trace, wall of stone; Market Price: 306,870 gp.

RESTLESS DEATH

The holder of this rod can rebuke or control undead as if he were four levels higher.

(The rod doesn't grant the ability to rebuke or control undead if you don't already have it).

In addition, the wielder may speak a command word to cast animate dead.

Any skeletons or zombies animated by the rod's power are automatically controlled by the rod, up to the rod's maximum limit of 42 HD, and they follow the orders of the rod's wielder.

These undead don't count toward the wielder's limit of controlled undead.

Finally, the wielder can speak a second command word to cast slay living (heightened to 10th level; DC 25).

Caster Level: 21st; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, Craft Epic Rod, animate dead, control undead, slay living; Market Price: 625,000 gp.

WYRM

Any of the various rods in this series functions as a +5 quarterstaff.

Upon casting the rod to the ground (a standard action) and uttering a command word, the rod grows into a specific type of dragon (depending on the specific type of rod) by the end of the round.

The dragon created is a wyrm (see the Monster Manual for full details) and obeys the commands of the owner.

The dragon returns to rod form (a full-round action) whenever the wielder desires, or whenever it moves farther than 500 feet from the owner.

If the dragon form is slain, it returns to rod form and cannot be activated again for three days.

A wyrm rod only functions if the possessor is of the same alignment as the dragon type.

Caster Level: 34th (white or brass), 35th (black or copper), 36th (green or bronze), 37th (blue or silver), 38th (red or gold); Prerequisites: Craft Rod, Craft Epic Rod, Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor, Improved Heighten Spell, improved heightened polymorph other, creator must be same alignment as dragon type;

Market Price: 1,458,200 gp (brass or white), 1,562,600 gp (black or copper), 1,670,600 gp (bronze or green), 1,782,200 gp (blue or silver), 1,897,400 gp (gold or red); Cost to Create: 729,400 gp + 24,576 XP (brass or white), 781,600 gp + 25,620 XP (black or copper), 835,600 gp + 26,700 XP (bronze or green), 891,400 gp + 27,816 XP (blue or silver), 949,000 gp + 28,968 XP (gold or red).

EPIC SPECIFIC ARMORS AND SHIELDS

DRACONOMICON (3.5)

DRAGONARMOR OF INVINCIBILITY

This is a set of +5 halfplate armor (barding) designed to fit a dragon of a specific size.

It adjusts to fit any individual dragon within a specific size category, size Medium or bigger.

In addition to its +12 armor bonus, the armor is fitted with spikes and blades designed to enhance the dragon's attacks, granting a +5 enhancement bonus to each of the dragon's natural weapon attacks (as if by use of the spell superior magic fang).

Strong transmutation; CL 15th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor [an epic feat available only to characters who have at least 28 ranks in both Knowledge (arcana) and Spellcraft], superior magic fang; Price 276,350 gp (Medium), 327,500 gp (Large), 379,950 gp (Huge), 434,750 gp (Gargantuan), 444,350 gp (Colossal); Cost 138,850 gp + 11,000 XP (Medium), 165,050 gp + 13,000 XP (Large), 192,450 gp + 15,000 XP (Huge), 222,250 gp + 17,000 XP (Gargantuan), 231,850 gp + 17,000 XP (Colossal); Weight 50 lb. (Medium), 100 lb. (Large), 250 lb. (Huge), 500 lb. (Gargantuan), 1,000 lb. (Colossal).

EPIC LEVEL HANDBOOK (3.0)

ANTIMAGIC ARMOR

This +1 negating full plate armor of invulnerability is crafted of adamantine (and thus has a natural enhancement bonus of +3).

The armor provides a -5 penalty on dispel checks made against it or its wearer.

Caster Level: 21st; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor, greater dispelling, stoneskin, wish or miracle; Market Price: 871,500 gp; Cost to Create: 436,500 gp + 18,700 XP.

ARMOR OF THE ABYSSAL HORDE

This crimson and black suit of +6 full plate armor is fashioned to make the wearer appear demonic. The helmet is shaped to look like a horned demon head, and its wearer looks out of the open, tooth-filled mouth.

The armor's clawed gauntlets are effectively +4 keen weapons (1d10/19-20) that afflict the target as if she had been struck by an energy drain spell (Fortitude negates DC 23).

The armor bestows two negative levels on any nonevil creature wearing it.

These negative levels persist as long as the armor is worn and disappear when the armor is removed.

The negative levels never result in actual level loss, but they cannot be overcome in any way (including restoration spells) while the armor is worn.

Caster Level: 20th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor, creator must be evil, energy drain; Market Price: 768,260 gp; Cost to Create: 385,260 gp + 17,660 XP.

ARMOR OF THE CELESTIAL BATTALION

This bright silver or gold +7 chainmail is so fine and light that it can be worn under normal clothing without revealing its presence, though most owners wear it openly and with pride.

It has a maximum Dexterity bonus of +10, no armor check penalty, and an arcane spell failure chance of 10%.

It is considered light armor, and it allows the wearer to fly at will (as the fly spell).

Furthermore, the wearer is at all times surrounded by a magic circle against evil effect (as the spell) which, if dispelled, can be created again as a free action.

Caster Level: 20th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor, creator must be good, magic circle against evil; Market Price: 616,300 gp; Cost to Create: 308,300 gp + 16,160 XP.

BULWARK OF THE GREAT DRAGON

This +6 large shield is made from the scales of a great wyrm dragon and bears the graven image of a dragon's head.

Three times per day, the bearer of the shield can command it to belch forth a breath weapon of the appropriate type.

The range of this breath weapon is 80 feet (if a line) or 40 feet (if a cone).

Regardless of the type, the breath weapon deals 20d6 points of damage.

In addition, the shield provides the bearer with resistance 50 to the energy type that matches its breath weapon.

To determine what type of dragon shield is found, roll and consult the following table:

d%	Color	Breath
01-10	Black	Line of acid
11-20	Blue	Line of lightning
21-30	Brass	Line of fire
31-40	Bronze	Line of lightning
41-50	Copper	Line of acid
51-60	Gold	Cone of fire
61-70	Green	Cone of corrosive (acid) gas
71-80	Red	Cone of fire
81-90	Silver	Cone of cold
91-100	White	Cone of cold

Caster level: 20th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor, protection from elements; Market Price: 1,612,970 gp; Cost to Create: 806,570 gp + 26,128 XP.

DRAGONSKIN ARMOR

This +5 full plate armor is crafted from the hide of a great wyrm dragon.

At the wearer's command, the armor sprouts enormous dragon wings, slowing the wearer to fly at a speed of 90 feet (clumsy) for a total of 4 hours each day.

The armor also grants immunity to a specific type of energy, based on the color of dragon that supplied the armor.

Roll d% on the following table to determine the color and immunity.

d%	Color	Immunity
01–10	Black	Acid
11–20	Blue	Lightning
21–30	Brass	Fire
31–40	Bronze	Lightning
41–50	Copper	Acid
51–60	Gold	Fire
61–70	Green	Acid
71–80	Red	Fire
81–90	Silver	Cold
91–100	White	Cold

The wearer of the armor takes a –4 circumstance penalty on Diplomacy checks with dragons, but gains a +4 circumstance bonus on Intimidate checks against dragons.

Caster Level: 24th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor, protection from elements, shapechange; Market Price: 564,550 gp; Cost to Create: 283,250 gp + 15,629 XP.

SHAPESHIFTER'S ARMOR

This suit of +6 hide armor grants its full Armor Class bonus regardless of any form the wearer takes (with polymorph self, shapechange, wild shape, or similar abilities).

Caster Level: 21st; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor, shapechange or wild shape ability; Market Price: 400,165 gp; Cost to Create: 200,165 gp + 14,000 XP.

WARLORD'S BREASTPLATE

This +6 mithral breastplate has an armor check penalty of –1, a maximum Dexterity bonus of +5, and an arcane spell failure chance of 10%.

It is considered light armor and weighs 15 pounds.

It grants the wearer a +4 enhancement bonus to Charisma and allows the wearer to attract and lead a number of followers as if he had the Leadership feat (though this power doesn't allow the wearer to attract a cohort).

If the wearer already has the Leadership feat, this armor has no cumulative effect on his followers.

Caster Level: 21st; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor, charm monster, sympathy; Market Price: 416,200 gp; Cost to Create: 210,200 gp + 14,120 XP.

EPIC SPECIFIC WEAPONS

EPIC LEVEL HANDBOOK (3.0)

BACKSTABBER

This +6 short sword adds +2d6 to the wielder's sneak attack damage.

If the wielder does not have the sneak attack ability, this weapon does not grant it.

Caster Level: 21st; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor, inflict moderate wounds; Market Price: 770,310 gp; Cost to Create: 385,310 gp + 17,700 XP.

CHAOSBRINGER

This +6 greataxe of chaotic power grants its wielder the ability to fly into a rage (identical to a barbarian's rage) once per day (or one additional time per day if the wielder already has the rage class feature).

If the wielder has the greater rage class feature, the weapon also grants the wielder the Incite Rage epic feat.

Caster Level: 23rd; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor, emotion, mass charm; Market Price: 4,025,350 gp; Cost to Create: 2,012,850 gp + 50,250 XP.

ELVEN GREATBOW

In the hands of any nonelf, this bow performs only as a +2 composite longbow.

In the hands of an elf, this weapon functions as a +5 mighty composite longbow of unerring accuracy.

Its "pull" (the Strength bonus of its mighty aspect) matches its elven wielder's current Strength at all times.

Furthermore, any arrows loosed from the bow are considered keen, regardless of the enhancement bonus of the arrow fired.

Caster Level: 23rd; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor, bull's strength, keen edge, true seeing; Market Price: 2,900,400 gp; Cost to Create: 1,450,400 gp + 39,400 XP.

EVERWHIRLING CHAIN

This +4 defending everdancing spiked chain of speed continuously twitches in its wielder's hands, as if it is ready to spring to the attack (or defense) of its own accord.

The wielder of the everwhirling chain can use it to make any number of attacks of opportunity per round (as if he had the Improved Combat Reflexes feat).

Caster Level: 23rd; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor, animate objects, haste, shield (or shield of faith); Market Price: 5,220,325 gp; Cost to Create: 2,610,325 gp + 52,200 XP.

FINALDEATH

This +5 undead dread ghost touch morningstar also grants its wielder immunity to energy drain attacks.

Furthermore, if its wielder is capable of turning undead, he gains the Positive Energy Aura feat.

Caster Level: 22nd; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor, negative energy protection, plane shift, summon monster IX, creator must be able to turn undead; Market Price: 3,580,308 gp; Cost to Create: 1,790,308 gp + 45,800 XP.

GRIPSOUL

This terrible weapon is enruned with green, glowing sigils, and is set with a jet-black pearl on the crossguard.

Gripsoul is a +6 keen longsword, but instead of dealing additional damage on a critical hit, the weapon imprisons the victim in a gem set in the pommel of the sword as per a binding spell heightened to 16th level (DC 30).

The same is true of any blow that would otherwise kill a foe or knock him unconscious.

Only one creature can be so held, but the wielder can release the bound soul at any time with a command word.

Caster Level: 27th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor, binding; Market Price: 1,856,500 gp; Cost to Create: 934,500 gp + 28,440 XP.

HOLY DEVASTATOR

In the hands of any character other than a paladin, this sword performs as a +3 holy longsword.

In the hands of a paladin, this weapon functions as a +7 longsword of holy power and grants a +5 sacred bonus on the wielder's saving throws against spells with the evil descriptor or spells cast by evil characters.

If the paladin wielder smites evil with the holy devastator, she adds twice her paladin level to damage (rather than her paladin level).

Caster Level: 23rd; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor, holy aura, holy smite, holy word; Market Price: 4,620,315 gp; Cost to Create: 2,310,315 gp + 56,200 XP.

MACE OF RUIN

This +7 heavy mace ignores the hardness or damage reduction of any object or creature it strikes.

Furthermore, the weapon can deal critical hits to objects and constructs as if they were living creatures.

Caster Level: 21st; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor, disintegrate; Market Price: 1,000,312 gp; Cost to Create: 500,312 gp + 20,000 XP.

QUARTERSTAFF OF ALACRITY

Both ends of this +5 quarterstaff of speed have equal enhancement and special powers, meaning that it allows an additional attack with each end every round.

While the quarterstaff of alacrity is held, it grants its wielder a +5 resistance bonus on Reflex saves. It also deflects ranged weapons as if the wielder had the Deflect Arrows and Infinite Deflection feats.
Caster Level: 21st; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor, protection from arrows, shield; Market Price: 462,600 gp; Cost to Create: 231,600 gp +14,620 XP.

SOULDRINKER

This +5 bastard sword bestows 2d4 negative levels on its target whenever it deals damage, just as if its target had been struck by the energy drain spell.

Each negative level bestowed grants the wielder 5 temporary hit points.

One day after being struck, the subject must make a Fortitude save (DC 25) for each negative level or lose a level.

If this sword's power causes a character to have negative levels at least equal to her current level, the character is instantly slain and the wielder gains an additional 10 temporary hit points.

Temporary hit points gained from this weapon last for a maximum of 1 hour.

Caster Level: 21st; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor.

Spell Focus (Necromancy), energy drain; Market Price: 478,335 gp; Cost to Create: 239,315 gp + 14,780 XP.

STORMBRAND

This +4 thundering shocking burst greatsword allows its wielder to fly at will (as the fly spell).

Furthermore, the wielder can move normally (including flying) even in the strongest winds.

When the weapon is drawn, the wielder gains electricity resistance 30 and sonic resistance 30.

Caster Level: 21st; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor, blindness/deafness, call lightning or lightning bolt, control winds, fly, protection from elements; Market Price: 235,350 gp; Cost to Create: 117,850 gp + 12,350 XP.

UNHOLY DESPOILER

In the hands of any character other than a blackguard, this sword performs as a +3 unholy longsword.

In the hands of a blackguard, this weapon functions as a +7 longsword of unholy power and grants a +5 profane bonus on the wielder's saving throws it spells with the good descriptor or spells cast by good characters.

If a blackguard wielder smites good with the unholy despoiler, she adds twice her blackguard level to damage (rather than her blackguard level).

Caster Level: 23rd; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor, blasphemy, unholy aura, unholy blight; Market Price: 4,650,315 gp; Cost to Create: 2,325,315 gp + 56,500 XP.

EPIC STAFFS

EPIC LEVEL HANDBOOK (3.0)

COSMOS

This smooth staff is crafted from a jet-black stone. Staring into its surface reveals a shimmering, wavering star field with the occasional comet, nebula, or solar flare visible.

It allows use of the following spells.

- Chain lightning (intensified, 1 charge, DC 29)
- Meteor swarm (intensified, 1 charge, DC 34)
- Sunburst (intensified, 1 charge, DC 32)

Caster Level: 27th; Prerequisites: Craft Staff, Craft Epic Staff, Intensify Spell, chain lightning, meteor swarm, sunburst;
Market Price: 683,437 gp.

DOMINATION

This staff is short (about 4 feet long) and thick (about 4 inches in diameter) with iron bands encircling it like shackles at regular intervals.

It allows use of the following heightened spells.

- Dominate monster (1 charge, DC 33)
- Demand (1 charge, DC 32)
- Mass charm (1 charge, DC 32)
- Geas (heightened, 1 charge, DC 33)

Caster Level: 21st; Prerequisites: Craft Staff, Craft Epic Staff, Heighten Spell, demand, dominate monster, geas, mass charm;
Market Price: 464,400 gp.

FIERY POWER

This +5 flaming quarterstaff grants its wielder fire resistance 30 whenever held.

In addition, it has the following powers.

- Wall of fire (extended, 1 charge, DC 18)
- Delayed blast fireball (intensified to 240 points of damage, 2 charges, DC 22)
- Meteor swarm (heightened to 12th, 2 charges, DC 30)
- Summon monster IX (extended, 2 charges, elder fire elemental only)

A staff of fiery power can be broken in a retributive strike.

The breaking of the staff must be purposeful and declared by the wielder.

All charges currently in the staff are instantly released in a 30-foot-radius globe.

All within 10 feet of the broken staff take points of damage equal to eight times the number of charges in the staff, those between 11 feet and 20 feet away take six times the number of charges in damage, and those 21 feet to 30 feet distant take four times the number of charges in damage. Successful Reflex saving throws (DC 17) reduce the damage sustained by half.

The character breaking the staff has a 50% chance of traveling to another plane of existence; if he does not, the explosive release of spell energy destroys him.

After all charges are used up from the staff, it remains a +5 quarterstaff with no special abilities.

(Once empty of charges, it cannot be broken in a retributive strike).

Caster Level: 25th; Prerequisites: Craft Staff, Craft Epic Staff, Extend Spell, Heighten Spell, Improved Heighten Spell, Intensify Spell, Spell Focus (Evocation), continual flame, delayed blast fireball, meteor swarm, protection from elements, summon monster IX, wall of fire; Market Price: 500,000 gp.

HIEROPHANTS

This gnarled, age-darkened walking stick is carved in vines and allows use of the following spells.

- Creeping doom (enlarged, extended, 1 charge, DC 23)
- Command plants (enlarged, extended, 1 charge, DC 25)
- Elemental swarm (intensified, 2 charges, DC 34)
- Shambler (intensified, 2 charges, DC 34)

Caster Level: 27th; Prerequisites: Craft Staff, Craft Epic Staff, Enlarge Spell, Extend Spell, Intensify Spell, creeping doom, command plants, elemental swarm, shambler; Market Price: 501,187 gp.

MIGHTY FORCE

This platinum-shod staff has three powers.

- Shield (quicken, 1 charge, may be activated once per round)
- Forcecage (1 charge)
- Bigby's crushing hand (1 charge)

Caster Level: 21st; Prerequisites: Craft Staff, Craft Epic Staff, Quicken Spell, Bigby's crushing hand, forcecage, shield; Market Price: 265,000 gp.

NATURE'S FURY

This +5 aberration bane quarterstaff is made from a single gnarled piece of oak that has been struck by lightning. It allows use of the following spells.

- Earthquake (1 charge)
- Whirlwind (heightened to 10th level, 1 charge, DC 25)
- Fire storm (heightened to 10th level, 1 charge, DC 25)

After all charges are used up from a staff of nature's fury, it remains a +5 quarterstaff with no special abilities.

Caster Level: 21st; Prerequisites: Craft Staff, Craft Epic Staff, Heighten Spell, Improved Heighten Spell, earthquake, fire storm, summon monster I (or summon nature's ally I), whirlwind; Market Price: 500,000 gp.

NECROMANCY

This staff seems to be a series of finger bones fused together.

It allows use of the following spells.

- Circle of death (intensified, 2 charges, DC 29)
- Create greater undead (1 charge)
- Finger of death (improved heightened to 16th, 2 charges, DC 34)
- Soul bind (improved heightened to 16th, 2 charges, DC 34)

The soul trapped through the use of the soul bind spell is trapped in the staff rather than a gem.

Only by breaking the staff can the souls be freed.
Caster Level: 27th; Prerequisites: Craft Staff, Craft Epic Staff, Intensify Spell, Heighten Spell, Improved Heighten Spell, circle of death, create greater undead, finger of death, soul bind; Market Price: 1,505,312 gp; Cost to Create: 1,290,156 gp + 14,303 XP.

PLANAR MIGHT

The wielder of this powerful staff is immune to the effects of any planar alignment traits, as well as the positive-dominant and negative-dominant traits (as described in Manual of the Planes).

It also allows use of the following spells.

- Greater planar ally (1 charge)
- Greater planar binding (1 charge)
- Gate (1 charge)

When using the greater planar ally power, you must still bargain with the called creature.

In addition to its other powers, a staff of planar might is a +5 outsider bane quarterstaff (roll 1d4 to determine what alignment of outsiders the staff's bane power works against: 1=chaotic, 2=evil, 3=good, 4=lawful).

After all charges are used up from a staff of planar might, it remains a +5 quarterstaff with no special abilities.

Caster Level: 21st; Prerequisites: Craft Staff, Craft Epic Staff, gate, greater planar ally, greater planar binding, protection from elements; Market Price: 460,000 gp.

PRISM

This staff stands 6 feet tall, is made of crystal, and has three flat sides rather than being round.

It allows use of the following spells.

- Prismatic sphere (extended, 1 charge, DC 25)
- Prismatic spray (extended, 1 charge, DC 22)
- Prismatic wall (extended, 1 charge, DC 23)

EPIC LEVEL HANDBOOK (3.0)

RING OF EPIC PSIONICS

This special crystal ring comes in a variety of types useful only to psionic characters (characters who have power points per day).

The wearer's total power points per day are increased, depending on the ring.

The points granted are not bonus points—while the ring is worn, it actually increases the wearer's points per day, but a night's rest is required before gaining access to the increased power point per day total.

(Power points are not actually stored in the ring, as would be the case for a crystal capacitor.

Instead, the ring grants power points by magnifying the manifester's own power).

A ring of epic psionics V increases the wearer's daily power points by 43 points, a ring of epic psionics VI grants 63 power points, a ring of epic psionics VII grants 87 power points, a ring of epic psionics VIII grants 115 points, and a ring of epic psionics IX grants 147 power points.

Manifester Level: 23rd (epic psionics V), 26th (epic psionics VI), 29th (epic psionics VII), 32nd (epic psionics VIII), 35th (epic psionics IX); Prerequisites: Craft Universal Item, Craft Epic Universal Item, great emulation; Market Price: 250,000 gp (epic psionics V), 360,000 gp (epic psionics VI), 490,000 gp (epic psionics VII), 640,000 gp (epic psionics VIII), 810,000 gp (epic psionics IX).

EPIC WEAPON SPECIAL ABILITIES

EPIC LEVEL HANDBOOK (3.0)

ACIDIC BLAST

On command, an acidic blast weapon drips a potent acid (though this deals no damage to the wielder).

On any hit, this acid splashes the creature struck, dealing +3d6 points of bonus acid damage.

On a successful critical hit it instead deals +6d6 points of acid damage (or +9d6 if the critical multiplier is ×3, or +12d6 if the critical multiplier is ×4).

Bows, crossbows, and slings with this special ability bestow the bonus acid damage upon their ammunition.

Caster Level: 21st; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor, acid fog; Market Price: +6 bonus.

CHAOTIC POWER

A weapon of chaotic power is chaotically aligned and infused with the power of chaos.

When it strikes a lawful target, this power erupts forth and deals +3d6 points of bonus chaotic damage to the target, and the target gains one negative level (Fortitude DC 23 to remove 24 hours later).

On a successful critical hit it instead deals +6d6 points of chaotic damage and bestows two negative levels (or +9d6 and three negative levels if the critical multiplier is ×3, or +12d6 and four negative levels if the critical multiplier is ×4).

The weapon bestows three negative levels on any lawful creature attempting to wield it.

These negative levels remain as long as the weapon is in hand and disappear when the weapon is no longer wielded. These negative levels never result in actual level loss, but they cannot be overcome in any way (including restoration spells) while the weapon is wielded.

Bows, crossbows, and slings with this special ability bestow the chaotic power upon their ammunition.

This special ability does not stack with the chaotic special ability described in the DUNGEON MASTER's Guide.

Caster Level: 21st; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor, word of chaos; Market Price: +8 bonus.

DISTANT SHOT

A distant shot weapon can be used against any target within line of sight at no penalty for range.

Caster Level: 21st; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor, discern location; Market Price: +6 bonus.

DREAD

A dread weapon excels at attacking one type of creature. Against its designated foe, its effective enhancement bonus is +4 better than its normal enhancement bonus (so a +3 dread longsword is a +7 longsword against its foe).

Further, it deals +4d6 points of bonus damage against the foe, and if it scores a successful critical hit against the foe, that creature must make a Fortitude save (DC 27) or be destroyed instantly and turned to dust.

(This even affects creatures immune to critical hits or death magic).

To randomly determine a dread weapon's designated foe, roll on the following table.

d%	Designated Foe	d%	Designated Foe
01–05	Aberrations	54–58	Outsiders, chaotic
06–08	Animals	59–65	Outsiders, evil
09–13	Beasts	66–70	Outsiders, good
14–20	Constructs	71–75	Outsiders, lawful
21–25	Dragons	76–77	Plants
16–30	Elementals	78–85	Shapechangers
31–35	Fey	86–92	Undead
36–40	Giants	93–94	Vermin
41–45	Magical beasts	95–100	Humanoids (roll on humanoid subtype table below)
46–50	Monstrous humanoids
51–53	Oozes

d%	Humanoid Subtype
01–10	Aquatic (includes aquatic elf, lizardfolk, locathah, merfolk, sahuagin)
11–20	Dwarf
21–32	Elf (includes half-elf)
33–37	Gnome
38–42	Gnome
43–57	Coblinoid (includes bugbear, goblin, hobgoblin)
58–62	Halfling
63–74	Human
75–89	Reptilian (includes kobold, lizardfolk, troglodyte)
90–99	Orc (includes half-orc)
100	Other (DM's choice of any subtype not included here, or roll again)

Caster Level: 22nd; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor, summon monster IX; Market Price: +7 bonus.

EVERDANCING

An everdancing weapon is much like a dancing weapon, though it can be loosed with a free action and will fight as long as desired.

It can move up to 60 feet away from its owner.

Its owner can instruct it to move to a different target as a move-equivalent action.

If its owner is rendered unconscious or otherwise unable to direct it, it will fight the same opponent as long as that opponent is conscious and within range.

The owner of an everdancing weapon can grasp it again as a free action (assuming it is within reach).

Caster Level: 23rd; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor, animate objects; Market Price: +8 bonus.

FIERY BLAST

On command, a fiery blast weapon is sheathed in fire (though this deals no damage to the welder).

On any hit, this fire engulfs the creature struck, dealing +3d6 points of bonus fire damage.
On a successful critical hit it instead deals +6d6 points of fire damage (or +9d6 if the critical multiplier is ×3, or +12d6 if the critical multiplier is ×4).

Bows, crossbows, and slings with this special ability bestow the bonus fire damage upon their ammunition.

Caster Level: 21st; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor, fireball; Market Price: +6 bonus.

HOLY POWER

A weapon of holy power is good aligned and blessed with holy power.

When it strikes an evil target, this power erupts forth and deals +3d6 points of bonus holy (good) damage to the target, and the target gains one negative level (Fortitude DC 23 to remove 24 hours later).

On a successful critical hit it instead deals +6d6 points of holy (good) damage and bestows two negative levels (or +9d6 and three negative levels if the critical multiplier is ×3, or +12d6 and four negative levels if the critical multiplier is ×4).

The weapon bestows three negative levels on any evil creature attempting to wield it.

These negative levels remain as long as the weapon is in hand and disappear when the weapon is no longer wielded. These negative levels never result in actual level loss, but they cannot be overcome in any way (including restoration spells) while the weapon is wielded.

Bows, crossbows, and slings with this special ability bestow the holy power upon their ammunition.

This special ability does not stack with the holy special ability described in the DUNGEON MASTER's Guide.

Caster Level: 23rd; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor, holy word; Market Price: +8 bonus.

ICY BLAST

On command, an icy blast weapon is sheathed in icy cold (though this deals no damage to the wielder).

On any hit, this cold washes over the creature struck, dealing +3d6 points of bonus cold damage.

On a successful critical hit it instead deals +6d6 points of cold damage (or +9d6 if the critical multiplier is ×3, or +12d6 if the critical multiplier is ×4).

Bows, crossbows, and slings with this special ability bestow the bonus cold damage upon their ammunition.

Caster Level: 21st; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor, cone of cold; Market Price: +6 bonus.

LAWFUL POWER

A weapon of lawful power is lawfully aligned and infused with the power of law.

When it strikes a chaotic target, this power erupts forth and deals +3d6 points of bonus lawful damage to the target, and the target gains one negative level (Fortitude DC 23 to remove 24 hours later).

On a successful critical hit it instead deals +6d6 points of lawful damage and bestows two negative levels (or +9d6 and three negative levels if the critical multiplier is ×3, or +12d6 and four negative levels if the critical multiplier is ×4).

The weapon bestows three negative levels on any chaotic creature attempting to wield it.

These negative levels remain as long as the weapon is in hand and disappear when the weapon is no longer wielded.

These negative levels never result in actual level loss, but they cannot be overcome in any way (including restoration spells) while the weapon is wielded.

Bows, crossbows, and slings with this special ability bestow the lawful power upon their ammunition.

This special ability does not stack with the lawful special ability described in the DUNGEON MASTER's Guide.

Caster Level: 23rd; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor, dictum; Market Price: +8 bonus.

LIGHTNING BLAST

On command, a lightning blast weapon crackles with electrical energy (though this deals no damage to the wielder).

On any hit, lightning coruscates around the creature struck, dealing +3d6 points of bonus electricity damage.

On a successful critical hit it instead deals +6d6 points of electricity damage (or +9d6 if the critical multiplier is ×3, or +12d6 if the critical multiplier is ×4).

Bows, crossbows, and slings with this special ability bestow the bonus electricity damage upon their ammunition.

Caster Level: 21st; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor, lightning bolt; Market Price: +6 bonus.

MIGHTY DISRUPTION

Like the weapon of disruption, this type of weapon is the bane of all undead.

Any undead creature struck in combat must succeed at a Fortitude save (DC 21) or be destroyed.

A weapon of mighty disruption must be a bludgeoning weapon.

(If you roll this property randomly for a piercing or slashing weapon, reroll).

Caster Level: 21st; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor, true resurrection; Market Price: +6 bonus.

SONIC BLAST

On command, a sonic blast weapon emits a low thrumming hum (though this deals no damage to the wielder).

On any hit, this becomes a thunderous roar that deals +3d6 points of bonus sonic damage to the creature struck.

On a successful critical hit instead deals +6d6 points of sonic damage (or +9d6 if the critical multiplier is ×3, or +12d6 if the critical multiplier is ×4).

Bows, crossbows, and slings with this special ability bestow the bonus sonic damage upon their ammunition.

Caster Level: 21st; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor, shout; Market Price: +6 bonus.

TRIPLE-THROW

This special ability can only be placed on a weapon that can be thrown.

(If you roll this property randomly for a weapon that cannot be thrown, reroll).

A triple-throw weapon creates two duplicates of itself when thrown.

Both the original and the duplicate weapons attack separately (at the same attack bonus).

Regardless of the success of any of the attacks, the duplicates immediately disappear after the attack is completed.

Any bonuses on damage due to accuracy or precision including those from sneak attacks, the Precise Shot feat the ranger's favored enemy bonus) apply only to the original weapon's damage, not to the duplicates.

Caster Level: 21st; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor, shades; Market Price: +6 bonus.

UNERRING ACCURACY

A weapon of unerring accuracy negates any cover or concealment bonuses (short of total cover or total concealment) of its target.

Caster Level: 21st; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor, true seeing; Market Price: +6 bonus.

UNHOLY POWER

A weapon of unholy power is evilly aligned and blessed with unholy power.

When it strikes a good target, this power erupts forth and deals +3d6 points of bonus unholy (evil) damage to the target, and the target gains one negative level (Fortitude DC 23 to remove 24 hours later).

On a successful critical hit it instead deals +6d6 points of unholy (evil) damage and bestows two negative levels (or +9d6 and three negative levels if the critical multiplier is ×3, or +12d6 and four negative levels if the critical multiplier is ×4).

The weapon bestows three negative levels on any good creature attempting to wield it.

These negative levels remain as long as the weapon is in hand and disappear when the weapon is no longer wielded. These negative levels never result in actual level loss, but they cannot be overcome in any way (including restoration spells) while the weapon is wielded.

Bows, crossbows, and slings with this special ability bestow the unholy power upon their ammunition.

This special ability does not stack with the unholy special ability described in the DUNGEON MASTER's Guide.

Caster Level: 23rd; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Epic Magic Arms and Armor, unholy word; Market Price: +8 bonus.

EPIC WONDROUS ITEMS

EPIC LEVEL HANDBOOK (3.0)

AMULET OF EPIC NATURAL ARMOR

This amulet, usually crafted from dragon scales, toughens the wearer's body and flesh, giving him a natural armor bonus to his AC of +6 or higher, depending on the type of amulet.

Caster Level: 20th; Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, Craft Epic Wondrous Item, barkskin, creator's caster level must be three times the amulet's bonus; Market Price: 720,000 gp (+6), 980,000 gp (+7), 1,280,000 gp (+8), 1,620,000 gp (+9), 2,000,000 gp (+10); Weight: —.

BELT OF EPIC STRENGTH

This wide belt is made of thick hide and studded with adamantine.

The belt adds an enhancement bonus of +8 or higher to the wearer's Strength score.

Caster Level: 20th; Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, Craft Epic Wondrous Item, bull's strength; Market Price: 640,000 gp (+8), 1,000,000 gp (+10), 1,440,000 gp (+12); Weight: 1 lb.

BOOTS OF SWIFTNESS

These soft-soled leather shoes grant their wearer a +6 enhancement bonus to Dexterity.

The wearer's speed doubles (this does not stack with any magical or supernatural enhancement to speed), she gains the evasion ability (as the rogue class feature), and the wearer's jumping distance is not limited by her height. The wearer gains a +20 competence bonus on Balance, Climb, Jump, and Tumble checks.

Three times per day, the wearer can utter a command word to activate the boots' haste power (as the haste spell, lasts 20 rounds).

Caster Level: 20th; Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, Craft Epic Wondrous Item, cat's grace, expeditious retreat, haste, jump; Market Price: 256,000 gp; Weight: 1 lb.

BRACERS OF EPIC ARMOR

These items appear to be wrist or arm guards.

They surround the wearer with an invisible but tangible field of force, granting him an armor bonus of +11 or higher, just as though he were wearing armor.

Both bracers must be worn for the magic to be effective.

Caster Level: 20th; Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, Craft Epic Wondrous Item, mage armor, creator's caster level must be twice the bracers' bonus; Market Price: 1,210,000

(+11), 1,440,000 gp (+12), 1,690,000 gp (+13), 1,960,000 gp (+14), 2,250,000 gp (+15); Weight: 1 lb.

BRACERS OF EPIC HEALTH

These platinum arm bands usually bear the image of a dragon or other powerful creature.

They grant the wearer an enhancement bonus of +8 or higher to Constitution.

Caster Level: 20th; Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, Craft Epic Wondrous Item, endurance; Market Price: 640,000 gp (+8), 1,000,000 gp (+10), 1,440,000 gp (+12); Weight: 1 lb.

BRACERS OF RELENTLESS MIGHT

These adamantine tracers grant a +12 enhancement bonus to the wearer's Strength and Constitution.

The wearer is treated as two size categories larger than normal (to a maximum of Colossal) for purposes of combat-related opposed checks that apply a modifier based on size, such as bull rush, grapple, and trip.

Caster Level: 20th; Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, Craft Epic Wondrous Item, bull's strength, endurance, enlarge; Market Price: 4,384,000 gp; Weight: 1 lb.

CABINET OF FEASTING

This extraordinary cabinet has the ability to produce a delicious feast for up to forty people, three times per day. Merely opening the doors of the cabinet reveals platters of food of all types and flavors of the very freshest sort.

The meal has all the qualities and benefits of that produced by a heroes' feast spell.

Caster Level: 40th; Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, Craft Epic Wondrous Item, heroes' feast; Market Price: 288,000 gp; Weight: 20 lb.

CLOAK OF EPIC CHARISMA

This lightweight and fashionable cloak has a decorative gold trim.

When worn, it grants a +8 or higher enhancement bonus a character's Charisma score.

Caster Level: 20th; Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, Craft Epic Wondrous Item, charm monster; Market Price: 640,000 gp (+8), 1,000,000 gp (+10), 1,440,000 gp (+12); Weight: 1 lb.

CLOAK OF EPIC RESISTANCE

These garments offer magic protection in the form of a +6 or higher resistance bonus on all saving throws (Fortitude, Reflex, and Will).

Caster Level: 20th; Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, Craft Epic Wondrous Item, resistance, creator's caster level must be three times the cloak's bonus; Market Price: 360,000 (+6), 490,000 (+7), 640,000 gp (+8), 810,000 (+9), 1,000,000 gp (+10); Weight: 1 lb.

ELMINSTER'S EVERSMOKING PIPE

This powerful magic item appears as nothing more than an ordinary tool for smoking pipeweed.

It carries a number of powerful magics, however, placed there by an archmage who enjoys adopting an innocuous guise despite his great power.

The pipe can be lit or extinguished by the use of a command word.

Its smoke keeps all Tiny or smaller vermin at least 10 feet from the smoker and automatically turns all magic missile attacks against the smoker back upon their caster. The smoker can exhale forcefully from the pipe to extinguish it and fire a single flame as if from a produce flame spell.

The pipe can create pyrotechnics once every 3 rounds, without extinguishing the pipeweed within.

Elminster can summon the pipe as if with Drawmij's instant summons without needing components, form the smoke into simple nonmagical symbols that last up to 5 rounds, and dimension door nine times per day with the pipe.

Finally, the pipe gives water breathing to its bearer for 2 hours per day.

Caster Level: 13th; Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, Craft Epic Wondrous Item, repel vermin, produce flame, pyrotechnics, Drawmij's instant summons, silent image, protection from arrows, shield, water breathing, dimension door; Market Price: 421,200 gp; Weight: 1 lb.

GATE KEY

This small tube has a series of rotating rings and small buttons along its length.

When properly operated, it can be used to attune any bounded space, such as a doorway or a cave opening, to another bounded space on another plane of existence previously visited by the wielder.

When two bounded spaces are attuned, an interdimensional portal springs up at each location, and the two portals are connected.

When the wielder creates a pair of portals, he also establishes the necessary key that travelers must have to access the portal.

Possible keys include nothing, a pearl, a particular hair color, or even the gate key itself.

Up to sixty different pairs of portals can be attuned in this manner.

Once all sixty pairs of portals are created, the key cannot create additional gates, though it may still be the necessary key to access some or all of the portals.

To any creature without the proper key, the interdimensional portals are not visible (through true seeing or similar magic reveals their presence).

Caster Level: 21st; Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, Craft Epic Wondrous Item, gate; Market Price: 378,000 gp; Weight: 1 lb.

GLOVES OF EPIC DEXTERITY

These tightfitting, thin leather gloves are very flexible and allow for delicate manipulation.

They add an enhancement bonus of +8 or higher to the wearer's Dexterity score.

Caster Level: 20th; Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, Craft Epic Wondrous Item, cat's grace; Market Price: 640,000 gp (+8), 1,000,000 gp (+10), 1,440,000 gp (+12); Weight: —.

HEADBAND OF EPIC INTELLECT

This device is a light cord with a small diamond set so that it rests upon the forehead of the wearer.

The headband adds an enhancement bonus of +8 or higher to the wearer's Intelligence score.

Caster Level: 20th; Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, Craft Epic Wondrous Item, commune or legend lore; Market Price: 640,000 gp (+8), 1,000,000 gp (+10), 1,440,000 gp (+12); Weight: —.

HORSESHOES OF THE PEERLESS STEED

These horseshoes magically adhere to the feet of any hoofed creature.

Anyone riding the creature gains a +10 competence bonus on Ride checks and is treated as having ranks in the appropriate Ride skill (and thus does not take the -5 penalty for riding an unfamiliar mount).

The horseshoes grant the creature (or its rider, as appropriate) the effects of the Trample, Ride-By Attack, and Spirited Charge feats.

The wearer of the horseshoes gains spell resistance 32 against enchantment effects.

In addition, the ground speed of the creature wearing the horseshoes doubles.

Caster Level: 20th; Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, Craft Epic Wondrous Item, Ride skill, haste, spell resistance; Market Price: 217,000 gp; Weight: 1 lb. each.

MANTLE OF EPIC SPELL RESISTANCE

This embroidered garment is worn over normal clothing or armor.

It grants the wearer spell resistance 40.

Caster Level: 29th; Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, Craft Epic Wondrous Item, spell resistance; Market Price: 290,000 gp; Weight: 1 lb.

MANTLE OF GREAT STEALTH

The wearer of this neutral gray cloak gains a +30 bonus on Hide and Move Silently checks.

The wearer's outline is blurry and indistinct, granting one-half concealment (20% miss chance) at all times (as the blur spell).

The mantle also grants nondetection to its wearer (as the spell).

Caster Level: 20th; Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, Craft Epic Wondrous Item, blur, invisibility, nondetection, silence; Market Price: 242,000 gp; Weight: 1 lb.

PERIAPT OF EPIC WISDOM

This large pearl set on a platinum chain grants an enhancement bonus of +8 or higher to the wearer's Wisdom score.

Caster Level: 20th; Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, Craft Epic Wondrous Item, commune or legend lore; Market Price: 640,000 gp (+8), 1,000,000 gp (+10), 1,440,000 gp (+12); Weight: —.

FORBIDDEN KNOWLEDGE

The Sanity rules assume that some knowledge is so alien to human understanding that simply learning of its existence can shatter the psyche. While magic and nonhuman races form an everyday part of a D&D character's life, even a seasoned adventurer cannot conquer or understand some things. Knowledge of these secrets and creatures is represented by a new skill that goes hand in hand with a character's Sanity score: Knowledge (forbidden lore).

This type of knowledge permanently erodes a character's ability to maintain a stable and sane outlook, and a character's current Sanity can never be higher than 99 minus the modifier the character has in the Knowledge (forbidden lore) skill. This number (99 minus Knowledge [forbidden lore] ranks) is the character's maximum Sanity.

KNOWLEDGE (FORBIDDEN LORE) (NONE)

You know That Which Should Not Be Known. You have had horrible supernatural experiences and read forbidden tomes, learning truly dark secrets that have challenged everything you thought you knew. Since these revelations defy logic or commonly accepted fact, it does not matter how intelligent or wise you are when using this skill—only how much exposure to these dark secrets themselves you have experienced.

Check: Answering a question about the horrible deities and secrets that lurk at the edges of reality has a DC of 10 (for really easy questions), 15 (for elementary questions), or 20 to 30 (for difficult or really tough questions). Unlike in other fields of study, there are almost no really easy questions associated with this dark knowledge.

You can use this skill to identify monsters and their special powers or vulnerabilities. In general, the DC of such a check equals 10 + the monster's HD. A successful check allows you to remember a bit of useful information about that monster. For every 5 points by which your check result exceeds the DC, the DM can give another piece of useful information.

The DM can decide which monsters are subject to the Knowledge (forbidden lore) skill and which monsters are subject to one of the Knowledge skills described in the Player's Handbook. For example, the DM may rule that Knowledge (the planes) is still the relevant skill for learning or knowing about outsiders, rather than allowing them to be identified by Knowledge (forbidden lore). However, in most campaigns that use the Sanity variant, aberrations and oozes should be able to be identified by Knowledge (forbidden lore) rather than by Knowledge (arcana) and Knowledge (dungeoneering) respectively.

Action: Usually none. In most cases, making a Knowledge check doesn't take an action—you simply know the answer or you don't.

Try Again: No. The check represents what you know, and thinking about a topic a second time doesn't let you know something that you never learned in the first place.

Special: You cannot gain ranks in this skill by spending skill points. You can only gain ranks by reading forbidden tomes or having experiences with horrible creatures. Each rank you gain in this skill permanently reduces your maximum Sanity by 1 point: The more you know about the horrible truths underlying reality, the less capable you are of leading a normal life.

A character's first episode of insanity (that is, an occurrence of temporary or indefinite insanity) bestows 2 ranks in the Knowledge (forbidden lore) skill, thereby lowering his maximum Sanity by 2 points. Each time a character fails a Sanity check and endures another episode of insanity, he gains an additional rank in Knowledge (forbidden lore).

For example, Caldark has 1 rank of Knowledge (forbidden lore) after reading a strange manuscript. She then steps outside, sees a chaos beast, and goes indefinitely insane, her raving mind failing to understand the strange creature she has encountered. Since she has never gone insane before, her player adds 2 ranks of Knowledge (forbidden lore) to Caldark's character sheet. Now Caldark's Maximum Sanity is 96 (99 minus 3 ranks of Knowledge [forbidden lore]).

You cannot take the Knowledge (forbidden lore) skill during character creation. However, the skill has no maximum rank; your level does not limit the number of ranks in Knowledge (forbidden lore) that you can acquire.

GRAFTS

FIEND FOLIO (3.5)

ABOLETH

ABOLETH TENTACLE

An aboleth tentacle typically replaces an arm or forelimb on the grafted creature, though sometimes it is attached just above a forelimb or below an arm.

The creature gains a +4 bonus to Strength when using the tentacle for any purpose, including attacking.

A successful natural attack with the tentacle deals 1d6 points of damage plus the grafted creature's adjusted Strength bonus, and can cause the struck creature to transform.

Affected creatures must succeed on a Fortitude save (DC 10 + 1/2 grafted creature's HD + grafted creature's Con modifier) or begin to transform as if struck by an aboleth's tentacle (see the Monster Manual).

Prerequisite: Graft Flesh, creator must be an aboleth; Market Price: 50,000 gp.

MUCUS SHEATH

A mucus sheath actually involves extensive skin grafts, resulting in the subject being constantly coated in a thin layer of mucus.

This sheath adds 10 feet to the creature's swim speed and gives it a +10 circumstance bonus on Escape Artist checks. It also serves as a focus for certain psionic abilities to better affect the subject: The grafted creature takes a -4 penalty on Will saves against mind-affecting effects.

The mucus also doubles the range at which an aboleth can effectively control a slave, to 2 miles.

Prerequisite: Graft Flesh, creator must be an aboleth; Market Price: 5,000 gp.

SKUM EYES

Skum eyes are bulbous and fish-like.

This graft cannot be added to skum, since they already have its abilities.

The grafted creature gains a +2 racial bonus on Spot checks, increasing to +4 while it is underwater.

Prerequisite: Graft Flesh, creator must be an aboleth; Market Price: 600 gp.

SKUM TAIL

This graft cannot be added to skum, since they already have an identical appendage.

A skum tail is slender and muscular, and it gives the creature a natural swim speed of 40 feet.

Like any creature with a natural swim speed, the grafted creature need not make Swim checks to move at its swim speed underwater, and gains a +8 racial bonus on Swim checks made to perform some special action or avoid a hazard.

The grafted creature can always choose to take 10 on a Swim check, even if rushed or threatened when swimming, and can use the run action while swimming, if it swims in a straight line.

Prerequisite: Graft Flesh, creator must be an aboleth; Market Price: 6,000 gp.

BEHOLDER

CROWN OF EYES

A crown of eyes consists of six small eyes that are set into a creature's skull all around its circumference.

Their vision is poor (half normal range), but they have darkvision with a range of 60 feet and confer all-around vision on the grafted creature.

This gives the grafted creature a +4 racial bonus on Search and Spot checks and prevents it from being flanked.

Prerequisite: Graft Flesh; Market Price: 60,000 gp.

EYE STALK

An eye stalk is grafted onto a creature's head and connected to its nervous system.

The creature can use it to produce an eye ray as a standard action three times per day; the effect exactly duplicates one of a beholder's smaller eye rays.

An individual eye stalk can produce only one kind of ray. The grafted creature uses its own attack bonus to determine whether the ray hits its target, but the effect's save DC is always 18.

The ray has a range of 150 feet.

Prerequisite: Graft Flesh plus one of the following spells: charm monster, charm person, disintegrate, fear, finger of death, flesh to stone, inflict moderate wounds, sleep, slow, or telekinesis; Market Price: 195,000 gp.

GAZING EYE

This graft replaces one of the creature's own eyes and gives it a gaze attack.

This attack can charm monster, cause sleep, petrify, or cause fear.

It has a range of 30 feet and a save DC of 16 (including a +2 bonus because only one of the grafted creature's eyes can make the attack), but otherwise functions like a beholder's eye rays.

Prerequisite: Graft Flesh plus one of the following spells: cause fear, charm monster, flesh to stone, or sleep; Market Price: 195,000 gp.

PLATED SKIN

A plated skin graft covers the creature's vulnerable body parts with bony plates like those that protect a beholder. The creature's natural armor bonus increases by +4.

Prerequisite: Graft Flesh, barkskin; Market Price: 64,000 gp.

REPLACEMENT EYE

A replacement eye is grafted into the creature's skull in place of one of its own eyes.

The grafted creature can use it to produce an eye ray as a standard action three times per day; the effect exactly duplicates one of a beholder's smaller eye rays.

An individual replacement eye can produce only one kind of ray.

The grafted creature uses its own attack bonus to determine whether the ray hits its target, but the save DC is always 18. The ray has a range of 50 feet.

Prerequisite: Graft Flesh plus one of the following spells: charm monster, charm person, disintegrate, fear, finger of death, flesh to stone, inflict moderate wounds, sleep, slow, or telekinesis; Market Price: 195,000 gp.

THIRD EYE

Implanted in the forehead above the creature's normal eyes, a third eye duplicates the effects of a beholder's large central eye, producing an antimagic cone similar to an antimagic field cast by a 13th-level sorcerer.

This small eye only affects a 50-foot cone, however.

It functions three times per day.

Prerequisite: Graft Flesh, antimagic field; Market Price: 165,000 gp.

FIENDISH

TABLE A2-1: FIENDISH GRAFT DAMAGE BY CREATURE SIZE

Creature Size	Flexible or Long Arm, Fiendish Jaw	Clawed Arm, Grappling Tentacle, Trampling Leg
Fine	—	1
Diminutive	1	1d2
Tiny	1d2	1d3
Small	1d3	1d4
Medium-size	1d4	1d6
Large	1d6	1d8
Huge	1d8	2d6
Gargantuan	2d6	2d8
Colossal	2d8	4d6

CHARMING EYE

This eye has a golden iris and an hourglass-shaped pupil like a goat's.

The grafted creature gains the ability to see perfectly in darkness of any kind, even magical darkness.

In addition, the grafted creature gains a charming gaze attack.

Anyone within 30 feet of the grafted creature that meets its eyes must make a Will saving throw (DC 14) or be charmed for one day per total Hit Dice of the grafted creature.

The save DC against this effect reflects a +2 bonus because only one of the grafted creature's eyes can make the attack. The grafted creature is immune to its own gaze attack.

Prerequisites: Graft Flesh, charm monster, true seeing, creator must be a fiend; Market Price: 120,000 gp.

CLAWED ARM

A clawed arm is muscular and sinewy, with a large, clawed hand.

The grafted creature gains a +4 bonus to Strength when using the arm for any purpose, including attacking.

If it is not holding anything or being used to perform another action, the grafted creature can direct the clawed arm to make one natural attack per round, using the creature's base attack bonus and adjusted Strength modifier.

This attack is in addition to the creature's normal actions in a round.

A successful attack deals damage based on the creature's size (see Table A2-1) plus the creature's adjusted Strength bonus.

Prerequisites: Graft Flesh, bull's strength, haste, creator must be a fiend; Market Price: 50,000 gp.

FAST LEG

Long and agile, a fast leg increases the creature's speed by 10 feet when not wearing heavy armor or carrying a heavy load.

Further, the creature gains a +5 competence bonus on Climb and Jump checks.

Prerequisites: Graft Flesh, expeditious retreat, jump, creator must be a fiend; Market Price: 4,000 gp.

FEARSOME EYE

This eye is bright red in color and has a black iris.

The grafted creature gains the ability to continuously see invisibility as the spell from a 20th-level caster.

In addition, the grafted creature gains a fear gaze attack.

Anyone within 30 feet of the grafted creature that meets its eyes must make a Will saving throw (DC 14) or be paralyzed with fear for 1d4 rounds.

The save DC against this effect reflects a +2 bonus because only one of the grafted creature's eyes can make the attack. The grafted creature is immune to its own gaze attack.

Prerequisites: Graft Flesh, fear, see invisibility, creator must be a fiend; Market Price: 120,000 gp.

FEATHERED WINGS

Feathered wings resemble those of a vrock or erinyes: large and bird-like, though often bearing claws at the top joint.

The grafted creature can fly at a speed equal to twice its normal land speed, with average maneuverability.

When not flying, the grafted creature can use the wings to buffet and disorient its opponents.

Each round, in addition to its normal attacks, it can make a Bluff check (opposed by its opponent's Sense Motive check).

If this check is successful, the grafted creature's attacks in that round gain a +2 circumstance bonus.

Prerequisites: Graft Flesh, fly, creator must be a fiend; Market Price: 10,000 gp.

FIENDISH EAR

A fiendish ear is large and fan-shaped, with sharp spikes connected by thick membranous skin.

A creature with a fiendish ear receives a +4 racial bonus on Listen checks and gains the benefit of the Blind-Fight feat.

Any time the grafted creature rolls a natural 1 on a Listen check, the ear transmits sound from the Windswept Depths of Pandemonium.

The grafted creature is deafened for 1d4+1 rounds and suffers the effects of a confusion spell for the same duration.

While deafened, it loses the benefit of the Blind-Fight feat. Prerequisites: Graft Flesh, creator must be a fiend; Market Price: 2,500 gp.

FIENDISH JAW

This is a large, heavy jawbone covered in thick, scaly skin. Two large tusks protrude from a row of sharp, crooked teeth.

These tusks allow the grafted creature to make a gore natural attack, dealing damage based on the grafted creature's size (see Table A2-1).

Prerequisites: Graft Flesh, creator must be a fiend; Market Price: 2,000 gp.

FIENDISH SKIN

Fiendish skin improves the grafted creature's natural armor bonus by +1 and grants it a +2 inherent bonus to Dexterity. In addition, the grafted creature gains darkvision with a range of 60 feet.

Once per day, the grafted creature can use poison as the spell from a 16th-level caster (Fort save DC 18 + grafted creature's Cha modifier).

Prerequisites: Graft Flesh, barkskin, cat's grace, poison, creator must be a fiend; Market Price: 55,000 gp.

FLEXIBLE ARM

A flexible arm is long and flexible like a tentacle, with a crude, three-fingered claw at the end.

If it is not holding anything or being used to perform another action, the grafted creature can direct the arm to make one natural attack per round, using the grafted creature's base attack bonus and Strength modifier.

This attack is in addition to the grafted creature's normal actions in a round.

A successful attack deals damage based on the grafted creature's size (see Table A2-1) plus its Strength bonus.

If the grafted creature uses the flexible arm to wield a weapon, all attacks with that weapon take a -2 penalty.

Once per day, as a standard action, the grafted creature can direct the arm to cast magic missile as a 5th-level caster.

Prerequisites: Graft Flesh, haste, magic missile, creator must be a fiend; Market Price: 27,000 gp.

GRAPPLING TENTACLE

A grappling tentacle strongly resembles a flexible arm—it is a long tentacle with barbed hooks instead of fingers or claws at the end.

It cannot use a weapon effectively, though it can perform gross manipulation such as pulling a large lever or lifting a portcullis.

The grafted creature gains a +4 bonus to Strength when using the tentacle for any purpose.

When the grafted creature grapples, it uses its adjusted Strength score (with the tentacle's bonus) and gains an additional +4 bonus on its grapple checks made to hold, pin, or damage an opponent.

It does not gain this special bonus when trying to break free of a grapple.

The grappling tentacle can be used to make natural attacks, dealing damage based on the grafted creature's size (see Table A2-1) plus its adjusted Strength bonus.

It does not confer the benefits of the improved grab special attack.

Prerequisites: Graft Flesh, bull's strength, creator must be a fiend; Market Price: 20,000 gp.

LONG ARM

A long arm is thin and wiry, and unusually long for the grafted creature's size.

The grafted creature's natural reach for attacks made with the arm or weapons held in the arm increases by 5 feet.

Though it cannot take independent action, the arm can be used to make natural attacks, dealing damage based on the grafted creature's size (see Table A2-1).

Prerequisites: Graft Flesh, creator must be a fiend; Market Price: 5,000 gp.

MEMBRANOUS WINGS

Membranous wings resemble those of a succubus, pit fiend, or bat.

The grafted creature can fly at a speed equal to twice its normal land speed, with average maneuverability.

The grafted creature gains fire and cold resistance 10.

Prerequisites: Graft Flesh, fly, protection from energy, creator must be a fiend; Market Price: 50,000 gp.

SPRINGING LEG

This extremely long leg is bent, either forward (like a frog's) or backward (like a grasshopper's).

The creature gains a +30 competence bonus on Jump checks.

The creature's normal land speed is reduced by 10 feet, however, because of the discrepancy between its two legs.

Prerequisites: Graft Flesh, jump, creator must be a fiend; Market Price: 35,000 gp.

STING TAIL

A sting tail is long and thick, with a segmented, chitinous appearance and a stinger like that of a scorpion at the end.

The grafted creature can direct the sting tail to make one natural attack per round, using the grafted creature's base attack bonus and Strength modifier.

This attack is in addition to the grafted creature's normal actions in a round.

A successful attack deals 2d4 points of damage (regardless of the grafted creature's size) plus the grafted creature's Strength bonus.

In addition, the stinging tail delivers a poison (Fort DC 14 negates) with each successful attack.

Initial and secondary damage are the same (1d6 Str).

Prerequisites: Graft Flesh, haste, poison, creator must be a fiend; Market Price: 50,000 gp.

STRONG LEG

A strong leg is thick and muscular.

A creature with this leg gains a +2 inherent bonus to its Constitution score.

Prerequisites: Graft Flesh, endurance, creator must be a fiend; Market Price: 8,000 gp.

TRAMPLING LEG

A trampling leg is short and thick, ending in a stump-like foot similar to an elephant's.

As a standard action during its turn each round, the grafted creature can move up to its speed and literally run over opponents at least one size category smaller than itself.

This attack deals bludgeoning damage based on the grafted creature's size (see Table A2-1).

A trampled opponent can attempt either an attack of opportunity at a -4 penalty or a Reflex save (DC 10 + 1/2 the grafted creature's HD + grafted creature's Str modifier) for half damage.

Prerequisites: Graft Flesh, bull's strength, polymorph other, creator must be a fiend; Market Price: 5,000 gp.

WHIP TAIL

A whip tail is long and thin, and lashes around behind the grafted creature as if of its own volition.

As a full-round action, the grafted creature can direct the tail to attack one creature within a radius equal to the creature's natural reach plus 10 feet.

The tail uses the grafted creature's base attack and size modifier and adds a Strength modifier of +2, dealing 1d6+3 points of damage on a successful hit (regardless of the grafted creature's size and Strength).

Wounds from the whip tail burn fiercely, causing the struck creature to be dazed for 1 round unless it makes a successful Fortitude save (DC 11).

Prerequisites: Graft Flesh, ghoul touch, creator must be a fiend; Market Price: 8,000 gp.

ILLITHID

TABLE A2-2: ILLITHID GRAFT DAMAGE BY CREATURE SIZE

Creature Size	Goring Horn	Grasping Mandibles	Raking Tentacle	Rending Claw
Fine	1d2	1d3	—	1
Diminutive	1d3	1d4	1	1d2
Tiny	1d4	1d6	1d2	1d3
Small	1d6	1d8	1d3	1d4
Medium-size	1d8	2d6	1d4	1d6
Large	2d6	2d8	1d6	1d8
Huge	2d8	4d6	1d8	2d6
Gargantuan	4d6	4d8	2d6	2d8
Colossal	4d8	8d6	2d8	4d6

ANTENNAE GRAFT

A pair of long antennae sprout from the grafted creature's head, and hundreds of inch-long hairs are embedded into its shoulders and arms.

The combined effect of these complex sensory organs is to give the grafted creature tremorsense, allowing it to sense the location of anything within 60 feet that is in contact with the ground.

Prerequisites: Graft Flesh, creator must be an illithid; Market Price: 20,000 gp.

CLIMBING LEGS

Climbing legs jut out from the creature's body.

Each has a knee that bends to the creature's side, and ends in a splayed foot with large, sticky pads on the four toes.

The overall effect strongly resembles the legs and feet of a gecko.

The creature can walk up walls and even upside down on ceilings at a speed of 15 feet, as if wearing slippers of spider climbing.

Prerequisites: Graft Flesh, creator must be an illithid; Market Price: 4,000 gp.

GORING HORN

This graft alters the entire facial structure of the creature, lengthening its face into a bestial muzzle and attaching a long, sharp horn.

The grafted creature can make a natural attack with the horn, dealing piercing damage based on the grafted creature's size (see Table A2-2).

The creature also gains the benefit of the Improved Bull Rush feat.

Prerequisites: Graft Flesh, creator must be an illithid; Market Price: 8,000 gp.

GRASPING MANDIBLES

These are a huge pair of chitinous mandibles strongly resembling those of an umber hulk, grafted onto either side of the creature's mouth (with accompanying enlargement of the jaw and its muscles).

The grafted creature deals slashing damage with its bite attack based on the grafted creature's size (see Table A2-2).

If the grafted creature hits an opponent that is at least one size category smaller than itself with its bite attack, it deals normal damage and attempts to start a grapple as a free action without provoking an attack of opportunity.

Each successful grapple check it makes during successive rounds automatically deals bite damage.

Prerequisites: Graft Flesh, creator must be an illithid; Market Price: 15,000 gp.

HAULING BACK

This graft contorts and strengthens the creature's spine and back muscles, while forcing it to stoop low enough to use its hands while walking.

A hauling back applied to a bipedal creature turns it into a quadruped for the purposes of determining carrying capacity.

Illithids typically apply this graft to Large or larger creatures, since the benefit is minimal for Medium-size creatures and nonexistent for smaller ones.

Prerequisites: Graft Flesh, creator must be an illithid; Market Price: 2,000 gp.

RAKING TENTACLE

This is a long, flexible tentacle with sharp, bony protrusions at the end.

It replaces an arm or forelimb, allowing the grafted creature to make a natural attack with the raking tentacle.

The tentacle deals slashing damage based on the grafted creature's size (see Table A2-2).

It extends the grafted creature's natural reach by 5 feet but cannot be used to wield a weapon or perform any fine manipulation.

The grafted creature takes a -2 penalty on all skill checks requiring the use of hands.

Prerequisites: Graft Flesh, creator must be an illithid; Market Price: 5,000 gp.

RENDING CLAW

A rending claw is actually an entire arm—overlong for the grafted creature's height (typically reaching all the way to the floor) and powerfully muscled.

The hand boasts long, sharp claws resembling knife blades. The grafted creature can make a natural attack with the rending claw, dealing slashing damage based on the grafted creature's size (see Table A2–2).

The rending claw deals  $\times 3$  damage on a critical hit.

The grafted creature takes a  $-4$  penalty on skill checks that require precision or fine manipulation with the rending claw.

Prerequisites: Graft Flesh, creator must be an illithid; Market Price: 5,000 gp.

WEAPON GRAFT

While most grafts are living tissue attached to another living body, a weapon graft is exactly what the name suggests: a normal, masterwork, or magic melee weapon grafted onto the hand of a thrall so it is never unarmed. The weapon actually becomes a natural weapon, though its other properties are unchanged.

The grafted creature receives a  $+1$  bonus on all attack and damage rolls with the weapon, as long as it is proficient with the weapon.

However, it cannot use the hand with the graft for anything but combat, and it takes a  $-2$  penalty on all skill checks requiring the use of hands.

Prerequisites: Graft Flesh, creator must be an illithid; Market Price: Weapon price + 1,000 gp.

MAUG

TABLE A2–3: MAUG GRAFT DAMAGE BY CREATURE SIZE

Creature Size	Roller	Stone Spitter
		Stone	Bullet	Increased
Fine	1d6	—	1	1d2+1
Diminutive	1d8	1	1d2	1d3+1
Tiny	2d6	1d2	1d3	1d4+1
Small	2d8	1d3	1d4	1d6+1
Medium-size	4d6	1d3	1d4	1d6+1
Large	4d8	1d4	1d6	1d8+1
Huge	8d6	1d6	1d8	1d10+1
Gargantuan	8d8	1d8	1d10	2d6+1
Colossal	16d6	1d10	2d6	2d8+1

LOCKING HAND

This stone hand is designed so that its fingers can clasp and lock together.

It replaces a creature's normal hand.

When used to make unarmed attacks, it deals normal damage unless the attacker chooses to take a  $-4$  penalty to deal subdual damage.

A locking hand does not change the amount of damage a creature deals with its unarmed or natural attacks.

The main purpose of a locking hand is to strengthen a creature's grip, making it more difficult to disarm the creature or dislodge an item from its grasp.

The grafted creature gets a  $+5$  bonus on any roll to avoid being disarmed, to oppose attempts to escape a grapple, to catch itself while falling, and to hold onto a surface when damaged while climbing.

A creature with more than one locking hand stacks the bonuses of each hand involved in the activity.

Locking hands can be locked and unlocked as easily as a creature can make a fist; they do not inhibit spellcasting or skill use.

The bonus from a locking hand stacks with that provided by a locked gauntlet.

Prerequisites: Graft Flesh, bull's strength, creator must be a maug; Market Price: 2,000 gp.

ROLLERS

Six great stone cylinders beneath a pyramid of rock, rollers replace the creature's legs and feet.

Rollers add 20 feet to the grafted creature's land speed and give it the ability to trample foes, but the grafted creature takes a  $-8$  penalty on Climb, Ride, and Swim skill checks.

The grafted creature cannot run.

As a standard action during its turn each round, the grafted creature can move up to its speed and run over opponents at least one size category smaller than itself.

This attack deals bludgeoning damage based on the creature's size (see Table A2–3).

A trampled opponent can attempt either an attack of opportunity at a  $-4$  penalty or a Reflex save (DC  $10 + 1/2$  grafted creature's HD + grafted creature's Str modifier) for half damage.

Prerequisites: Graft Flesh, expeditious retreat, polymorph other, creator must be a maug; Market Price: 10,000 gp.

SHOVING ARM

A shoving arm is a piston-like stone appendage that ends in an upright, flattened stone hand.

It is attached a creature's torso along with a stone "belt" to secure it in place.

The arm is useless for most activities, but once per round as an attack action it can be used to make a special shoving attack against any opponent within 5 feet of the grafted creature.

The grafted creature makes a melee touch attack that does not provoke an attack of opportunity.

If it hits with its shoving arm, it and the struck opponent make opposed Strength checks as though the grafted creature had made a bull rush attack.

In addition to the normal bonuses, the grafted creature adds a special  $+5$  bonus on this roll.

If the grafted creature wins, the defender is pushed back 5 feet plus an additional 1 foot per point by which the grafted creature exceeded the defender's result.

The grafted creature does not move with the shoved defender.

For purposes of shoving unattended objects, the shoving arm has a Strength equal to  $10 +$  the Strength of the grafted creature.

The shoving arm can push creatures and objects in straight lines only.

Prerequisites: Graft Flesh, bull's strength, creator must be a maug; Market Price: 2,000 gp.

SHUDDER PLATE

Usually placed in the chest of a creature, a shudder plate looks like a thin square of shale set in a stone frame. Specially designed and enhanced, a shudder plate quietly shakes and vibrates in its case, giving the grafted creature a supernatural understanding of the area surrounding it. If the grafted creature is in contact with the ground, it can sense the location of anything within 15 feet that is also in contact with the ground.

In addition, the grafted creature takes a -4 penalty on Move Silently skill checks.

Prerequisites: Graft Flesh, see invisibility, creator must be a maug; Market Price: 8,000 gp.

SPIKE STONES

These small round stones are inserted into the surface of the flesh of a creature, all over its body.

The grafted creature can cause them to grow as a standard action that does not provoke an attack of opportunity. The stones suddenly lengthen into sharp spikes, capable of piecing flesh and armor alike.

In a grapple, the spikes deal 2d4 points of piercing damage in addition to normal grapple damage when the grafted creature makes a successful grapple check.

A grafted creature can also use the spikes as a light weapon that deals 1d4 points of piercing damage; in conjunction with an unarmed or natural attack, the spike stones deal an additional 1d4 points of piercing damage with each hit.

Prerequisites: Graft Flesh, spike stones, creator must be a maug; Market Price: 4,000 gp.

STONE SPITTER

A stone spitter is a box-like or bin-like device, usually affixed to the shoulder of a creature.

At the weapon's base is a tube from which stones can be fired with amazing accuracy and deadly effect.

A creature grafted with a stone spitter can use it to fire a stone or sling bullet by making a ranged attack.

Such attacks have a range increment of 50 feet, dealing damage according to the grafted creature's size (see Table A2-3).

Six times per day, the stone spitter can fire its ammunition at a supernaturally high velocity and power.

Such attacks deal damage one die type higher than normal (use the "Increased" column on Table A2-3) and have a +1 enhancement bonus on attack and damage rolls.

A stone spitter can be loaded with up to 50 stones or sling bullets.

Prerequisites: Graft Flesh, magic stone, creator must be a maug; Market Price: 2,000 gp.

UNDEAD

BONEMAIL

Bonemail resembles armor crafted from interlocking bones and shards of bone, but is actually part of the grafted creature's body.

Bonemail grants a +2 natural armor bonus to the grafted creature's AC.

Prerequisite: Graft Flesh, gentle repose; Market Price: 16,000 gp.

ENERVATING ARM

An enervating arm is a gaunt limb of desiccated, leathery flesh.

It grants a +4 inherent bonus to the grafted creature's Strength.

Twice per day, the grafted creature can use an enervating touch to bestow one negative level on a living creature. The Fortitude save to remove the negative level has a DC of 14.

A touch that misses does not count against the daily limit. Prerequisite: Graft Flesh, enervation; Market Price: 40,000 gp.

MUMMIFIED EYE

This hard, round orb looks much like a normal eye at first glance, but it has a distinctly dry appearance and does not move in the socket.

Often a pale light seems to shine inside it.

The grafted creature can use the eyebite spell as a 12th-level caster once per day.

Prerequisite: Graft Flesh, eyebite; Market Price: 50,000 gp.

PARALYZING ARM

A paralyzing arm is a hardy limb of preserved undead flesh. It grants a +4 inherent bonus to the grafted creature's Strength.

Twice per day, the grafted creature can use a paralyzing touch: A living creature touched must make a Fortitude save (DC 14) or be paralyzed for 1d6+2 minutes.

Elves are immune to this paralyzing touch.

A touch that misses does not count against the daily limit. Prerequisite: Graft Flesh, gentle repose, ghoul touch; Market Price: 40,000 gp.

WEAKENING ARM

A weakening arm is a skeletal forelimb that grants a +4 inherent bonus to the grafted creature's Strength.

Twice per day, the grafted creature can use a weakening touch: A living creature touched takes 1d6 points of Strength damage.

A touch that misses does not count against the daily limit. Prerequisite: Graft Flesh, ray of enfeeblement; Market Price: 40,000 gp.

YUAN-TI

ADDED TAIL

Extending from the creature's tailbone rather than replacing its legs, an added tail gives the grafted creature a natural swim speed equal to half its land speed.

Like any creature with a natural swim speed, the grafted creature need not make Swim checks to move at its swim speed underwater, and gains a +8 racial bonus on Swim checks made to perform some special action or avoid a hazard.

The grafted creature can always choose to take 10 on a Swim check, even if rushed or threatened when swimming, and can use the run action while swimming, if it swims in a straight line.

The grafted creature also gains a +4 racial bonus on Balance checks, and can constrict Small or smaller creatures: With a successful grapple check, it deals 1d4 points of bludgeoning damage plus 1 1/2 times its Strength modifier to the grappled foe.

Prerequisites: Graft Flesh, creator must be a yuan-ti; Market Price: 6,000 gp.

POISON FANGS

These long, sharp fangs allow the grafted creature to deliver poison (Fort DC 17 negates) with its bite.

Initial and secondary damage are the same (1d6 Con).

If the grafted creature did not previously have a natural bite attack, it can bite only a grappled foe (delivering the poison with a successful grapple check to pin the creature) or a helpless opponent.

Prerequisites: Graft Flesh, creator must be a yuan-ti; Market Price: 8,000 gp.

REPLACEMENT TAIL

This tail replaces the grafted creature's legs or rear limbs. The grafted creature's base land speed is reduced by 10 feet, but it can climb and swim at half its original land speed.

The creature can constrict Medium-size or smaller creatures: With a successful grapple check, it deals 1d4 points of bludgeoning damage plus 1 1/2 times its Strength modifier to the grappled foe.

Prerequisites: Graft Flesh, creator must be a yuan-ti; Market Price: 12,000 gp.

SCALY SKIN

This yuan-ti skin improves the grafted creature's natural armor bonus by +3.

Prerequisites: Graft Flesh, creator must be a yuan-ti; Market Price: 36,000 gp.

SERPENT ARM

This is a long, flexible arm ending in a snake head. The grafted creature can make one bite attack with the arm, dealing 1d4 points of damage plus poison (Fort DC 17 negates).

Initial and secondary damage are the same (1d6 Con).

Prerequisites: Graft Flesh, creator must be a yuan-ti; Market Price: 12,000 gp.

LIBRIS MORTIS (3.5)

UNDEAD

BONEMAIL

Bonemail resembles armor crafted from interlocking bones and shards of bone, but is actually part of the grafted creature's body.

Bonemail grants a +2 natural armor bonus to the grafted creature's AC.

Graft Flesh, animate dead; Price 16,000 gp.

BODAK'S EYE

This white, empty eye fits into a humanoid creature's empty eye socket and allows the grafted creature to make a death gaze attack once per day.

The creature must use a standard action to target a creature with the gaze, and the range of the effect is 30 feet.

A DC 15 Fortitude save negates the effect.

Unlike an actual bodak's death gaze, a target that dies from this attack does not transform into a bodak 24 hours later.

Graft Flesh, finger of death; Price 25,000 gp.

ENERVATING ARM

An enervating arm is a gaunt limb of desiccated, leathery flesh.

It grants a +4 inherent bonus to the grafted creature's Strength.

Twice per day, the grafted creature can use an enervating touch to bestow one negative level on a living creature. Removing the negative level requires a DC 14 Fortitude save.

A touch that misses does not count against the daily limit.

Prerequisites: Graft Flesh, enervation; Price 40,000 gp.

EYE OF FLAME

This crimson eye-shaped gem fits into a humanoid creature's empty eye socket and can produce a fireball once per day upon command.

The fireball deals 10d6 points of damage (Reflex DC 14 half).

Half of the damage is fire damage, and the other half is divine damage that affects even targets resistant to fire.

Graft Flesh, fireball; Price 10,800 gp.

GHOSTLY ARM

This gray, incorporeal arm can't be used to manipulate solid objects.

However, the grafted creature can use the ghostly arm to deliver an incorporeal touch attack that deals 1d6 points of damage, the equivalent of a ghost's corrupting touch attack. Treat the arm as a secondary weapon, but because it is incorporeal the arm has no Strength score and therefore gains no bonus or penalty on damage rolls from the user's Strength.

Graft Flesh, ethereal jaunt; Price 6,000 gp.

MOHRG'S TONGUE

This long, cartilaginous tongue bears sharp claws at its tip. The grafted creature can make touch attacks with the tongue (treat it as a secondary weapon).

A successful touch paralyzes the target for 1d4 minutes (Fortitude DC 17 negates).

Graft Flesh, ghoul touch; Price 24,000 gp.

MUMMIFIED EYE

This hard, round orb fits into a humanoid creature's empty eye socket and looks much like a normal eye at first glance, but it has a distinctly dry appearance and does not move in the socket.

The grafted creature can use the eyebite spell as a 12th-level caster once per day.

Graft Flesh, eyebite; Price 50,000 gp.

MUMMIFIED HAND

This withered hand is swathed in the remnants of funereal wrappings.

The grafted creature can use the mummified hand to deliver a slam attack; the damage dealt is the same as that dealt by a zombie of the creature's size.

In addition, three times per day the grafted creature can deliver mummy rot with a slam attack.

The choice to use mummy rot must be made before the attack is rolled; if the attack misses, the daily use is lost.

The Fortitude save to resist the mummy rot is DC 16.

Graft Flesh, contagion; Price 16,200 gp.

PARALYZING ARM

A paralyzing arm is a hardy limb of preserved undead flesh.

It grants a +4 inherent bonus to the grafted creature's Strength.

Twice per day, the grafted creature can use a paralyzing touch.

A living creature touched must make a Fortitude save (DC 14) or be paralyzed for 1d6+2 minutes.

Elves are immune to this paralyzing touch.

A touch that misses does not count against the daily limit.

Graft Flesh, gentle repose, ghoul touch; Price 40,000 gp.

SKELETAL HAND

The grafted creature can use this bony hand to make claw attacks.

The damage dealt is the same as that dealt by a skeleton of the creature's size.

Graft Flesh, animate dead; Price 3,000 gp.

UNDEAD SKIN

This mottled gray hide grants the grafted creature 25% resistance to critical hits and sneak attacks, similar to armor of light fortification.

This resistance doesn't stack with similar abilities.

Graft Flesh, animate dead; Price 16,000 gp.

VAMPIRIC FANGS

This set of sharp teeth replaces the creature's existing teeth. The grafted creature gains the ability to drain blood from a living victim with its fangs by making a successful grapple check.

If it pins the foe, it drains blood, dealing 1d4 points of Constitution damage each round.

On each such successful drain attack, the grafted creature gains 5 temporary hit points that last for up to 1 hour.

Graft Flesh, vampiric touch; Price 25,000 gp.

WEAKENING ARM

A weakening arm is a skeletal forelimb that grants a +4 inherent bonus to the grafted creature's Strength.

Twice per day, the grafted creature can use a weakening touch.

A living creature touched takes 1d6 points of Strength damage.

A touch that misses does not count against the daily limit.

Graft Flesh, ray of enfeeblement; Price 40,000 gp.

ZOMBIE ARM

A zombie arm is a perpetually rotting limb.

It grants a +2 inherent bonus to the grafted creature's Strength, but also permanently reduces the grafted creature's Dexterity by 2.

The grafted creature can use the zombie arm to make slam attacks; the damage dealt is the same as that dealt by a zombie of the creature's size.

Graft Flesh, animate dead; Price 25,000 gp.

LORDS OF MADNESS (3.5)

ABOLETH

AMPHIBIOUS SKIN

This invasive graft can only be applied to a creature with the aquatic subtype.

It replaces the grafted creature's skin entirely with a thick membrane.

The grafted creature gains the amphibious special quality, allowing it to breathe both air and water.

Graft Flesh (aboleth), creator must be an aboleth; Price 30,000 gp.

INKSAC

An inksac is normally placed inside a creature's abdomen; a vent protrudes just beyond the surface of the creature's skin above each hip.

Once per minute as a free action, the creature can emit a cloud of jet-black ink in a spread with a radius of twice the creature's natural reach.

This cloud provides concealment to all creatures in the area.

Even creatures that can normally see in such conditions (such as with darkvision or low-light vision) are affected by concealment when in a cloud of ink.

Only a daylight spell (or a higher-level light spell) can allow creatures in the area to see.

The ink cloud does not form unless the creature is in water; on land it just spews out as a big inky mess.

Graft Flesh (aboleth), creator must be an aboleth; Price 9,000 gp.

MUCUS PROJECTOR

This graft consists of a large, fleshy sac with a tube-like extension.

It is typically grafted onto a creature's back so the tube can extend up over a shoulder.

A creature with a mucus projector can activate it once every 1d4 rounds as a standard action.

When activated, it contracts violently and sprays a thin stream of aboleth mucus out of the tube.

The creature must make a ranged touch attack to strike its intended target, which must be within 30 feet.

On a hit, the target must succeed on a Fortitude save (DC 10 + 1/2 grafted creature's HD + grafted creature's Con modifier) or begin to transform as if struck by an aboleth's slime (see page 8 of the Monster Manual).

A mucus projector works equally well on the surface or underwater.

Graft Flesh (aboleth), creator must be an aboleth; Price 36,000 gp.

WATERJET

This long, thin tube is normally grafted onto a creature's back.

The grafted creature can use this graft once per minute while swimming to double its normal swim speed for 1 round.

Graft Flesh (aboleth), creator must be an aboleth; Price 2,500 gp.

ILLITHID

BURROWING CLAWS

This graft replaces both of the recipient's hands with thick-fingered claws tipped with iron-hard ridges.

The recipient gains a -4 penalty on Disable Device, Open Lock, and Sleight of Hand checks, but gains a burrow speed of 20 feet.

The creature can even burrow through solid stone or any other material with hardness of no more than 8.

The claws allow the creature to deal lethal damage with its unarmed strikes.

Illithids gift thralls with these grafts when they need to expand a cavern's size or dig new tunnels through the stony ground.

Graft Flesh (illithid), creator must be an illithid; Price 30,000 gp.

DARKSIGHT EYES

These pale, pupilless eyes are similar in appearance to the eyes of an illithid.

The graft recipient gains darkvision out to 60 feet.

Illithids graft these eyes into favored thralls that can more easily accomplish their jobs in the lightless underground if they can see.

Graft Flesh (illithid), creator must be an illithid; Price 24,000 gp.

MIND BLAST RELAY

This strange graft is implanted into the depths of the grafted creature's brain.

The graft gives the creature complete immunity to mind blasts.

Further, any mind flyer within 60 feet of a creature with a mind blast relay graft can automatically detect the graft when it uses telepathy on that creature.

A mind flyer can then choose to relay its mind blast attack into that creature by activating its own mind blast.

Once the mind blast is relayed, the mind flyer can choose to either allow the mind blast to manifest (in which case it does so in a 20-foot-radius blast centered on the grafted creature) or to relay it to a new creature with a mind blast relay within 20 feet of the current creature.

A mind flyer can continue to relay its mind blast as a free action again and again until it gets to the mind blast relay it desires, at which point the creature allows it to manifest.

Each time a mind blast is relayed, the DC to save against its effect is reduced by 2.

A mind flyer must maintain line of sight to each creature in the chain of mind blast relays, but otherwise the only practical limit to the usefulness of this graft is the number of relays available and the original save DC of the illithid's mind blast.

Graft Flesh (illithid), creator must be an illithid; Price 50,000 gp.

SILTHILAR

CHITIN PLATING

This graft consists of numerous interlocking chitin plates grafted onto the creature's skin.

These plates are tough, yet flexible, and grant the recipient a natural armor bonus ranging from +1 to +5.

This natural armor bonus does not stack with any other natural armor bonus the creature might possess as a virtue of his race, but it does stack with enhancement bonuses to natural armor granted by magic such as barkskin or an amulet of natural armor.

Graft Flesh (silthilar); Price 4,000 gp (+1), 16,000 gp (+2), 36,000 gp (+3), 64,000 gp (+4), 100,000 gp (+5).

FLEXIBLE SPINE

This invasive graft replaces the creature's spine, including the spinal cord, with a much more flexible and efficient set of nerves and vertebrae.

The graft grants a +4 racial bonus on initiative checks, Balance checks, Escape Artist checks, and Tumble checks.

Graft Flesh (silthilar), regenerate; Price 91,000 gp.

EXTENDED LEGS

This graft extends the creature's legs, making it taller and faster.

The creature's height increases by 5%, but this does not increase the creature's size category.

The creature's base land speed increases by 5 feet.

Graft Flesh (silthilar), longstrider; Price 91,000 gp.

HEALING BLOOD

This unique graft consists of a total transfusion of blood. The creature's original blood supply is drained completely and replaced with a similar fluid that grants the grafted creature fast healing 2.

Graft Flesh (silthilar), regenerate; Price 182,000 gp.

RUDIMENTARY EYESPOTS

This graft consists of several patches of light-sensitive skin placed on the back of the grafted creature's neck and the back of each hand.

These patches improve the grafted creature's vision, granting it a +4 bonus on Spot checks.

In addition, the creature can no longer be flanked.

Graft Flesh (silthilar), regenerate; Price 60,000 gp.

SILTHILAR BONES

This graft transforms and augments the creature's skeletal structure, making it stronger.

The grafted bones improve the creature's Constitution score by 2 points.

Graft Flesh (silthilar), bear's endurance; Price 110,000 gp.

SILTHILAR HEART

This complex graft adds several augmentations to the grafted creature's heart and cardiovascular system.

If the grafted creature drops below 1 hit point but not below -10 hit points, the graft immediately generates a pulse of magic healing that cures 4d8+20 points of damage. A silthilar heart can generate this healing only once every 24 hours.

Graft Flesh (silthilar), cure serious wounds, contingency; Price 91,000 gp.

SILTHILAR MUSCLES

This graft transforms and augments the creature's existing muscles.

The grafted muscles improve the creature's Strength score by 2 points.

Graft Flesh (silthilar), bull's strength; Price 110,000 gp.

SILTHILAR TENDONS

This graft replaces the creature's tendons, making the creature more adroit and coordinated.

The grafted tendons improve the creature's Dexterity score by 2 points.

Graft Flesh (silthilar), cat's grace; Price 110,000 gp.

RACES OF THE DRAGON (3.5)

DRACONIC

BUFFETING WINGS

Your arms sprout veined membranes, granting you the power of flight and allowing you to strike your enemies.
Location: Arms.

Description: Each of your arms sprouts rays of cartilage supporting fins (if from a metallic dragon) or long bone projections connected by taut flesh (if from a chromatic dragon).

The membranes of your buffeting wings fold down when not in use.

You can still wear and benefit from clothing and armor, though wearing a shield limits your wings' effectiveness (see below).

Activation: Using buffeting wings to fly requires a move action, as normal for any move.

Using a wing to make a slam attack is an attack action, or part of a full attack action if you are using both wings or additional natural weapons.

Effect: You gain a fly speed equal to your base land speed with average maneuverability.

You can't carry aloft more than a light load.

If you already have wings, this benefit replaces your original fly speed and maneuverability.

You can't use your buffeting wings to fly if you are wearing a shield (other than a buckler).

You can also use buffeting wings to make up to two secondary slam attacks, but only while standing on the ground.

Each attack deals damage as a wing attack made by dragon of your size (1d4 points for a Medium creature).

You cannot attack with weapons held in your hands during the same round that you use buffeting wings (though you can use other natural attacks), and you can't use a wing to attack if that arm wears a shield (other than a buckler).

In addition to the hit point cost, these wings reduce your overall agility, resulting in a permanent -2 penalty to Dexterity.

Construction: Wyrmgrafter, overland flight or *flight of the dragon**, 50,000 gp, 4,000 XP, 100 days.

* Spell described in Draconomicon, page 113.

Donor: A tissue sample from an unhatched wyrmling.

Sacrifice: 8 hp, -2 Dexterity.

Price: 100,000 gp.

DRAGONBONE LEGS

Powerful draconic leg bones are grafted into each of your legs, giving you greater physical might in athletic tasks.

Location: Legs.

Description: Your legs become thicker and more heavily muscled as the new bone takes hold.

Since the tissue graft is internal, the appearance of your skin is unchanged.

Activation: A host uses dragon bone legs as part of the appropriate action to use the skill in question (Climb, Jump, or Swim).

No special activation is required.

Effect: You gain a +4 bonus on Climb, Jump, and Swim checks.

Construction: Wyrmgrafter, bull's strength, 4,000 gp, 320 XP, 8 days.

Donor: A bone sample from a living dragon.

Sacrifice: 4 hp.

Price: 8,000 gp.

DRAGONHEART PRESENCE

A bit of a dragon's heart tissue is grafted into your chest, giving you some of the dragon's indomitable spirit.

Location: Flesh.

Description: Although your appearance does not undergo an obvious physical change, you ooze confidence and pride.

If the donor was a chromatic dragon, this attitude is tinged with arrogance and a certainty of victory.

If the flesh came from a metallic dragon, you radiate an air of watchful patience.

Activation: Dragonheart presence is always active once the graft is installed.

It requires no action on your part to activate or deactivate.

Effect: You gain immunity to paralysis effects and the frightful presence of dragonkind.

In addition, you gain a +2 bonus on Bluff, Diplomacy, Gather Information, and Intimidate checks you make involving a creature with the dragonblood subtype.

Construction: Wyrmgrafter, remove paralysis, 6,000 gp, 480 XP, 12 days.

Donor: A piece of flesh from an unhatched wyrmling's heart.

Sacrifice: 4 hp.

Price: 12,000 gp.

FRIGHTFUL CREST

Your head has been adorned with a portion of the crest, spikes, or horns of the donor dragon.

You gain an aura of fear similar to a dragon's frightful presence.

Location: Head.

Description: A frightful crest takes the form of the primary head ornament of the dragon from which it was taken; for example, a graft from a black dragon has its characteristic crumpled horns, while that from a silver dragon is a rayed fin.

A frightful crest melds seamlessly into the surrounding flesh, gradually blending into your natural skin color.

Activation: A frightful crest activates whenever you attack or charge.

You cannot choose to suppress the effect.

Effect: When a frightful crest activates, any living nondragon enemy within 30 feet becomes panicked for 1 round if it has fewer Hit Dice than you; creatures with HD equal to or greater than yours are shaken for 1 round instead.

A successful Will save negates this effect and renders the creature immune to your frightful crest for 24 hours; the save DC is 10 + 1/2 your HD + your Cha modifier.

This is a mindaffecting fear effect.

Characters who are immune to a dragon's frightful presence are also immune to a frightful crest.

Construction: Wyrmgrafter, fear, 14,000 gp, 1,120 XP, 28 days.

Donor: A crest or horn from a dragon.

Sacrifice: 6 hp.

Price: 28,000 gp.

GLARING EYE

The pupil of a dragon's eye has been grown into your own. As a result, you gain the keen senses and the wakefulness of a dragon.

Location: Head.

Description: A glaring eye is the same color as the eye of the dragon it was grown from and has a slitted pupil like that of a crocodile.

It has no lid and cannot close.

Activation: A glaring eye is always active once the graft is installed.

It requires no action on your part to activate or deactivate.

Effect: You gain blindsense out to a distance of 30 feet and a +2 bonus on Search and Spot checks.

You also gain immunity to magic sleep effects.

Construction: Wyrmgrafter, sense of the dragon*, 5,000 gp, 400 XP, 10 days.

* New spell described on page 117.

Donor: A sample of eye tissue from an unhatched wyrmling, or an eye from a dragon.

Sacrifice: 2 hp.

Price: 10,000 gp.

GLEAMING SCALES

Your skin is hardened with scales grown from samples taken from a living dragon, allowing you to grow a protective plating over vulnerable areas.

Location: Skin.

Description: Strong, gleaming dragon scales cover the skin of your torso and limbs.

The scales are the color of the donor dragon.

Gleaming scales have a glossy texture and can be ridged, depending on the dragon variety.

They move as you do, not hindering your movement in the least.

Activation: Gleaming scales are always active once the graft is installed.

The graft requires no action on your part to activate or deactivate.

Effect: Your natural armor bonus to AC improves by 1.

Because the graft improves your natural armor, an effect that provides an enhancement bonus to your natural armor (such as an amulet of natural armor) stacks with gleaming scales.

Gleaming scales also provides resistance 5 to the same energy type to which the donor dragon's is immune or resistant, or it increases your existing resistance to that energy type (regardless of its origin) by 5.

If the donor dragon has immunity or resistance to more than one kind of energy, choose which energy type to which you are resistant.

If the donor dragon has no immunity or resistance to energy, the graft grants no resistance.

Construction: Wyrmgrafter, dragonskin*, 4,500 gp, 360 XP, 9 days.

* Spell described in Draconomicon, page 111.

Donor: A sample of scaled skin from an unhatched wyrmling.

Sacrifice: 4 hp.

Price: 9,000 gp.

METABOLIC FIRE

You acquire the dragon's devastating ability to breathe energy.

Location: Flesh.

Description: The implantation of this graft within your chest leaves no casually visible effect.

However, exposure to the energy within your body darkens your teeth until they become solid black, like obsidian.

A faint gleam of fire, rime of frost, crackle of electricity, or shimmer of acidic saliva might play around your teeth when you show them.

Prerequisite: You must have at least one other draconic graft before you can gain metabolic fire.

Activation: Using metabolic fire is a standard action.

Effect: You gain a breath weapon, usable once every 1d4 rounds, that functions as described on page 306 of the Monster Manual.

The form of the weapon (line or cone) is the same as that of the donor dragon; a cone-shaped breath weapon has a length of 30 feet, while a line-shaped breath weapon has a length of 60 feet.

The breath weapon granted by metabolic fire deals 6d8 points of damage; a successful Reflex save (DC 10 + one-half your HD + your Con modifier) halves the damage.

The damage type matches the type of energy damage dealt by the donor dragon.

Despite the name of the graft, it can deal any type of energy damage associated with the donor dragon.

Construction: Wyrmgrafter, dragon breath*, 28,000 gp, 2,240 XP, 56 days.

* Spell described in Draconomicon, page 111.

Donor: Tissue from the draconis fundamentum (the organ responsible for a dragon's breath weapon, described on page 8 of Draconomicon) taken from an unhatched wyrmling.

A donor dragon without a breath weapon (or having a breath weapon that doesn't deal energy damage) can't be used as a graft donor.

Sacrifice: 6 hp.

Price: 56,000 gp.

RESILIENT SCALES

With the application of mature dragon scales, your scaly skin renders you immune to a type of energy.

Location: Skin.

Description: Thick, tough dragon scales cover your entire body.

Their color is deep and true, resembling those of the donor dragon.

Activation: Resilient scales is always active once the graft is installed.

The graft requires no action on your part to activate or deactivate.

Effect: Resilient scales grants resistance 30 to the same type of energy as the donor dragon's immunity.

If the donor dragon has immunity to more than one kind of energy, the creator chooses which energy type the graft provides resistance against.

If you have at least one other draconic graft, resilient scales counts as two grafts for the purpose of determining the damage reduction granted by your draconic grafts.

For example, if you have resilient scales and dragonheart presence, you would have DR 2/magic (as if you had three draconic grafts).

Construction: Wyrmgrafter, resist energy, 35,000 gp, 2,800 XP, 70 days.

Donor: A sample of scaled skin from a living dragon that has immunity to an energy type.

Sacrifice: 6 hp.

Price: 70,000 gp.

SMASHING TAIL

You sprout a muscular, scaled tail with which you can smash enemies.

You must be of Medium size or larger to receive a smashing tail graft.

Location: Legs.

Description: The tail has the same coloration as the dragon from which the graft was taken.

It also sports the normal ornamentation of that tail (fins, spikes, and so on).

Activation: Using a smashing tail in combat requires an attack action, or is part of a full attack action if you are using multiple weapons.

Effect: Your tail can make a secondary slam attack that deals damage as a dragon one size category larger than you (1d8 for a Medium creature), adding 1-1/2 times your Strength bonus to the damage.

Your tail also provides you with a +2 bonus on Balance checks and Swim checks.

Construction: Wyrmgrafter, bull's strength, 15,000 gp, 750 XP, 30 days.

Donor: A tissue sample from an unhatched wyrmling.

Sacrifice: 4 hp.

Price: 30,000 gp.

TALONED ARM

One of your arms is sheathed in a dragon's flesh, which gives you a natural claw attack.

Location: Arms.

Description: A taloned arm has sharp, curved claws and is scaled in the same color as the dragon that supplied the graft.

It looks more bulky than your original arm, although the graft does not actually increase your Strength.

The scales of a taloned arm become smaller and finer toward your upper arm, fading entirely into the surrounding skin color at the shoulder.

Activation: Using this draconic graft in combat requires an attack action, or is part of a full attack action if you are using multiple weapons.

Effect: You can use a taloned arm to make a secondary claw attack that deals damage as a dragon of your size (1d6 for a Medium creature).

When making a full attack, you can attack with your claw in addition to any other attacks you make.

Construction: Wyrmgrafter, magic fang, 17,000 gp, 1,360 XP, 34 days.

Donor: A single claw from a dragon.

Sacrifice: 2 hp.

Price: 34,000 gp.

SERPENT KINGDOMS (3.5)

YUAN-TI

ADDED TAIL

An added tail extends from the recipient's tailbone rather than replacing its legs, granting it a natural swim speed equal to one-half its land speed.

Like any creature with a natural swim speed, the grafted creature need not make Swim checks to move at its swim speed underwater and gains a +8 racial bonus on Swim checks made to perform some special action or avoid a hazard.

The grafted creature can always choose to take 10 on a Swim check, even if rushed or threatened when swimming, and it can use the run action while swimming if it swims in a straight line.

The grafted creature also gains a +4 racial bonus on Balance checks and can constrict creatures one or more size categories smaller than itself, dealing 1d4 points of bludgeoning damage plus 1-1/2 times its Strength bonus on a successful grapple check.

Strong transmutation; CL 15th; Graft Yuan-ti Flesh; Price 6,000 gp.

POISON FANGS

These long, sharp fangs allow the grafted creature to deliver poison (injury, Fortitude DC 10 + 1/2 grafted creature's character level + grafted creature's Con modifier, initial and secondary damage 1d6 Con) with a successful bite attack. A grafted creature that did not previously have a bite attack can bite only a helpless opponent or a grappled foe (delivering the poison with a successful grapple check to pin the creature).

Strong transmutation; CL 15th; Graft Yuan-ti Flesh; Price 8,000 gp.

REPLACEMENT TAIL

This graft replaces the recipient's legs or rear limbs. The grafted creature's land speed is reduced by 10 feet, but it can climb and swim at one-half its original land speed. The creature can constrict creatures of its own size category or smaller, dealing 1d4 points of bludgeoning damage plus 1-1/2 times its Strength bonus on a successful grapple check.

Strong transmutation; CL 15th; Graft Yuan-ti Flesh; Price 12,000 gp.

SCALY SKIN

This piece of yuan-ti skin improves the grafted creature's natural armor bonus by +3.

Strong transmutation; CL 15th; Graft Yuan-ti Flesh; Price 36,000 gp.

SERPENT ARM

This long, flexible arm ends in a snake head. The grafted creature can make one bite attack with the arm, dealing 1d4 points of damage plus poison (injury, Fortitude DC 10 + 1/2 grafted creature's character level + grafted creature's Con modifier, initial and secondary damage 1d6 Con).

Strong transmutation; CL 15th; Graft Yuan-ti Flesh; Price 12,000 gp.

UNDERDARK (3.5)

ILLITHID

BRAINMATE

This graft is a boon for illithids that travel far from the elder brains that anchor their communities.

To creatures accustomed to the constant psychic susurrance of the elder brain's thoughts, knowledge, and perceptions, such a loss of contact can be unsettling.

A traveling illithid is often forced to stiffen his tentacles and bear up under such contact deprivation—unless he carries a brainmate graft.

The brainmate is a 5-inch-diameter bud of gray matter protected by a layer of thick mucous.

To function, the graft must be placed on the recipient's skull, either prominently or at the base of the neck.

The gray matter is actually a snippet of flesh grown by an elder brain specifically for harvesting for a graft.

Thus, the brainmate contains a subset of an elder brain's skills and knowledge.

A brainmate grants its wearer a +10 circumstance bonus to any two of the following skills: Knowledge (arcana), Knowledge (psionics), Knowledge (local), Knowledge (history), and Knowledge (Underdark local).

Prerequisites: Graft Illithid Flesh, creator must be an illithid; Price 10,000 gp.

EXTRACTING TENTACLE

An extracting tentacle is a long, flexible tentacle with the ability to pierce flesh and bone as though they were butter. This tentacle can be grafted to a Small, Medium, or Large recipient in place of its own arm or forelimb.

The recipient can then use the tentacle to make one primary natural attack per round (or a secondary natural attack if it uses a weapon in its other hand as a primary weapon).

The tentacle deals base piercing damage of 1d6 points if grafted to a Medium creature, or 1d4 points if grafted to a Small creature, or 1d8 points if grafted to a Large creature. If the grafted creature successfully grapples its foe by any means and maintains the grapple during the next round, the extracting tentacle automatically extracts the foe's brain (or heart), instantly killing that creature.

The victim is entitled to a Fortitude save (DC 10 + 1/2 the grafted creature's HD + the grafted creature's Con modifier) to negate the extraction.

The extracting tentacle cannot be used to wield a weapon or perform any fine manipulation, and it does not extend the recipient's reach.

The grafted creature takes a -2 penalty on all skill checks requiring the use of hands.

Prerequisites: Graft Illithid Flesh, creator must be an illithid; Price 45,000 gp.

GRABBING TENTACLE

A grabbing tentacle is a long, flexible tentacle coated with sucker-like spots that can be grafted to a Small, Medium, or Large recipient in place of its own arm or forelimb.

The recipient can then use the tentacle to make one primary natural attack per round (or a secondary natural attack if it uses a weapon in its other hand as a primary weapon).

The tentacle deals base damage of 1d4 points if grafted to a Medium creature, or 1d3 points if grafted to a Small creature, or 1d6 points if grafted to a Large creature.

If it hits with the tentacle, the grafted creature may attempt to start a grapple without provoking an attack of opportunity, as if it possessed the Improved Grab special attack (see Chapter 7 of the Monster Manual) with that limb. The grabbing tentacle also extends the creature's natural reach by 5 feet, but it cannot be used to wield a weapon or perform any fine manipulation.

The grafted creature takes a -2 penalty on all skill checks requiring the use of hands.

Prerequisites: Graft Illithid Flesh, creator must be an illithid; Price 20,000 gp.

HUMANOID SKIN

The graft recipient's skin is stripped off in a painful flensing operation, then replaced with a layer of still-living humanoid skin carefully selected from a donor of the same general height, weight, and frame.

After the skin graft, an average viewer would assume the recipient is a humanoid of the donor's race (usually a human, elf, or half-elf).

The recipient gains a +10 circumstance bonus on Disguise checks made to appear as either a humanoid of the appropriate race or the specific donor humanoid.

If the humanoid skin hides monstrous features below its surface (such as extra arms, tentacles, or antennae) using those features requires thrusting them through the skin's surface as a standard action.

This act showers all nearby creatures with blood and deals 1d4 points of damage to the graft recipient.

A curing spell applied to the graft within 24 hours returns the monstrous features to hiding and restores the skin to pristine condition.

If such healing is not applied in that time frame, the whole skin rots away and a new one must be procured.

Prerequisites: Graft Illithid Flesh, creator must be an illithid, alter self; Price 5,000 gp.

GRELL ALCHEMY

ITEMS

LORDS OF MADNESS (3.5)

GREATER LIGHTNING LANCE

A larger and more powerful version of the lightning lance, a greater lightning lance is found in the tentacles of the philosophers and patriarchs.

It resembles a slender silver tube 5 feet long.

This weapon deals 5d6 points of electricity damage (no save) to a single enemy with a successful ranged touch attack (range 60 feet).

If this touch attack hits, the electricity bolt then arcs to a second target of the user's choice within 30 feet of the primary target, dealing 5d6 points of damage (no save) to the secondary target with a second successful ranged touch attack.

A greater lightning lance usually functions only in the grasp of a grell, although a DC 25 Use Magic Device check allows a character of a different race to employ the weapon.

A greater lightning lance has 7 charges.

Spent charges are renewed each day, so a wielder can expend up to 7 charges in any 24-hour period.

Faint evocation; CL 5th; Grell Alchemy, shocking grasp; Price 18,000 gp.

GRELL CRYSTAL

A dingy, translucent, dishwater gray in color, grell crystal is a common building material in grell lairs.

It is used to fashion light walls, shelves, partitions, and utensils.

In its unset form, grell crystal is a dry powder made of small, silver-gray crystals that look like rough, dirty salt.

When dropped in water, the crystals expand and harden into flat sheets.

One pound of crystal powder and 5 gallons of water create a 25-square-foot sheet that is 1 inch thick and weighs 50 pounds.

It takes about 1 hour for the sheet to grow to full size.

While it is growing, it can be pruned or shaped into specific forms with a little careful manipulation.

Grell that work with crystal take ranks in Craft (crystalwork) to make items.

When set, grell crystal has hardness 7, 20 hit points per inch of thickness, a break DC of 20, and a Climb DC of 25.

Grell layer the crystal several inches thick when particularly strong structures are needed.

Grell Alchemy and Craft (alchemy); Craft DC 20; Price 10 gp; Weight 1 lb. (unset).

LIGHTNING LANCE

Grell living in colonies or nests defend their homes with lightning lances, silver tube-like devices about 3 feet in length.

These weapons deal 3d6 points of electricity damage (no save) to a single enemy within 60 feet with a successful ranged touch attack.

A lightning lance usually functions only in the grasp of a grell, although a DC 25 Use Magic Device check allows a character of a different race to employ the weapon.

A lightning lance has 5 charges.

Spent charges are renewed each day, so a wielder can expend up to 5 charges in any 24-hour period.

Faint evocation; CL 3rd; Grell Alchemy, shocking grasp; Price 3,800 gp.

SILVERSPEAR

This device is simply a +2 silvered shortspear designed to be worn over the end of one of a grell's tentacles.

The silverspear then replaces that tentacle's attack.

A normal adult grell's tentacle attack improves as follows: +7 melee (1d6+2/x3).

A grell wielding a silverspear gains an additional 5 feet of reach with that tentacle (15 feet for a typical adult grell).

Tiny channels in the weapon's interior convey the grell's paralytic poison to the weapon's head, so any creature struck by the silverspear is subject to paralysis just as if it had been struck by the grell's tentacle.

Any creature other than a grell can use the weapon as a +2 silvered shortspear, but cannot paralyze with it.

Moderate evocation; CL 6th; Grell Alchemy or Craft Magic Arms and Armor, greater magic weapon; Price 8,392 gp; Cost 4,392 gp + 320 XP.

MONSTER MANUAL 3 (3.5)

REDCAP'S TOOTH

When a redcap dies, it leaves behind a single tooth. Anyone wearing this tooth gains a +2 circumstance bonus on Charisma-based checks when dealing with fey, and a +4 circumstance bonus when dealing with other redcaps. Faint transmutation; CL 6th; cannot be made; Price 1,000 gp.

INTELLIGENT ITEMS

ARMS AND EQUIPMENT GUIDE (3.0)

BLACKRAZOR

Blackrazor is a +3 greatsword whose blade resembles a piece of the night sky studded with strange stars. It has the ability to detect living creatures within a 60-foot radius; this works in a similar fashion to the detect thoughts spell, but it can determine only the presence or absence of creatures (whether conscious or not) and how many, not their mental strength or their surface thoughts. In addition, the sword can cast haste upon its wielder, as a 10th-level caster, once per day, and it grants its wielder immunity to mind-affecting spells and effects. Blackrazor communicates telepathically, and it can both speak and read Common, Abyssal, Draconic, and Giant. Blackrazor has a special purpose: To consume souls. It is not finicky about whose soul it consumes, and under certain circumstances it will happily feed on its wielder's. Whenever Blackrazor deals enough damage to bring a living creature to -1 or fewer hit points (even below -10), it immediately uses an effect similar to death knell to kill the creature and drain its life force (Will save DC 15 negates). Its wielder gains the benefit of the death knell effect: 1d8 temporary hit points, +2 Strength, and +1 to effective caster level. These benefits last for 10 minutes per Hit Die of the slain creature. Blackrazor itself consumes the soul, however, making it impossible to restore life to the creature except through use of a wish, miracle, or true resurrection spell—but even these powerful spells have only a 50% chance of success. For every three days the sword remains unfed, its Ego score increases by 1, until it can compel its bearer to kill something for it to eat. Upon feeding, its Ego returns to its normal value. Blackrazor reacts poorly to contact with negative energy. If it is used to make a successful melee attack against an undead creature, it bestows one negative level upon its wielder and transfers some of this life energy to the undead creature in the form of 5 temporary hit points (which partially offsets the damage it deals). If it bestows as many negative levels upon its wielder as he has Hit Dice, it consumes its wielder's soul through its death knell-like effect. The saving throw DC to remove the negative levels is 17. If the wielder uses Blackrazor while afflicted with negative levels from any source, every two living creatures killed with the sword remove one negative level from its wielder, instead of granting temporary hit points and Strength. AL CN; SV Fort +7, Ref +7, Will +7; Str —, Dex —, Con —, Int 17, Wis 10, Cha 15, Ego 19. Caster Level: 10th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, death knell, haste, mind blank; Market Price: 90,150 gp; Cost to Create: 45,250 gp + 3,592 XP.

DEMONCLEAVER

This impressive name belongs to a rather uninspiring, though extremely self-confident, +1 holy kukri. It has two moderately useful primary abilities: Its wielder has free use of the Improved Initiative feat and can detect evil at will. It is prone to singing defiant battlesongs about slaughtering demons, switching between Common and Celestial apparently at random. Though convinced it is a mighty weapon against evil foes, it puts on a show of humility at times, begging to be allowed the chance to shatter on a balor's hide or the like. Its loftiest dream is to be carried into battle by a noble halfling paladin again—the last time this happened, some five centuries ago, the paladin died a grisly death. AL LG; SV Fort +9, Ref +9, Will +8; Str —, Dex —, Con —, Int 13, Wis 8, Cha 17, Ego 9. Caster Level: 15th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, detect evil, holy smite, creator must be good; Market Price: 34,708 gp; Cost to Create: 17,508 gp + 1,376 XP.

FALCONBLADE

Also called the Sword of the Avenger, this weapon is a +1 reptile bane short sword with a pommel carved to resemble a falcon's head. Its bane property affects all reptiles, including creatures with the reptilian subtype, yuan-ti, mundane and magical snakes, nagas, and possibly other creatures at the DM's discretion (but not dragons). In addition to its magical bonuses in combat, it possesses the ability to communicate through empathy and a few special powers that reflect the deity Re-Horakhty's eternal opposition to his enemy Set and Set's serpentine minions. The sword can neutralize poison three times per day, though it is effective only against snake venom, not the poison of scorpions, spiders, or even other reptiles. It can neutralize the poison of yuan-ti, however, and any other monster that is basically snake-like. In addition, the wielder of the sword gains a +2 bonus on saving throws against snake venom. AL LG; SV Fort +9, Ref +9, Will +8; Str —, Dex —, Con —, Int 12, Wis 9, Cha 16, Ego 10. Caster Level: 15th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, neutralize poison, summon monster I; Market Price: 38,030 gp; Cost to Create: 19,170 gp + 1,509 XP.

MARK OF THE FAVORED

This ring of regeneration was created by Wee Jas as a gift to one of her loyal champions. In addition to its regenerative properties, the ring can cast cure light wounds on its wearer once per day, and it grants its wearer uncanny dodge as a 5th-level barbarian. In addition, the wearer can detect magic at will. Also once per day, it can heal either its wearer or another servant of Wee Jas. The ring can communicate telepathically, and it also speaks and reads Common, Celestial, and Infernal. Mark of the Favored has a special purpose: To defend the servants and interests of Wee Jas.

As long as its wearer remains loyal to Wee Jas, the ring can cast true resurrection on the wearer, but it can use this ability only once.

AL LN; SV Fort +9, Ref +9, Will +12; Str —, Dex —, Con —, Int 15, Wis 16, Cha 7, Ego 20.

Caster Level: 15th; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, cure light wounds, detect magic, heal, regenerate, true resurrection, creator must have uncanny dodge class ability; Market Price: 150,010 gp.

MINION OF THE SERPENT LORD

This rod of the viper insists on the use of its full name at all times, vociferously protesting every time a wielder attempts to give it a nickname.

(Past nicknames have ranged from “Minion” to “Meazel”, and it has loathed every one).

Its wielder can see invisibility and detect good at will.

Minion of the Serpent Lord speaks Common, Abyssal, Infernal, and Draconic.

AL NE; SV Fort +7, Ref +7, Will +9; Str —, Dex —, Con —, Int 17, Wis 15, Cha 17, Ego 13.

Caster Level: 10th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, Craft Magic Arms and Armor, detect good, poison, see invisibility, creator must be evil and at least 15th level; Market Price: 37,000 gp.

NIMBLE WARDER

This +1 light fortification mithral shirt is all about protection. It grants the benefits of the Mobility feat and the evasion ability to its wearer.

It communicates only by semiempathic means, throbbing when its wearer gets into danger.

It has a fear of bebiliths that far exceeds their capacity to damage it.

AL N; SV Fort +8, Ref +8, Will +7; Str —, Dex —, Con —, Int 10, Wis 9, Cha 11, Ego 4.

Caster Level: 13th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, limited wish or miracle, creator must have access to Mobility feat and evasion class ability; Market Price: 41,100 gp; Cost to Create: 21,100 gp + 1,600 XP.

PEARL OF SECRETS

The Pearl of Secrets is a black pearl of power (8th-level spell) that claims to have been created by Vecna himself.

The Pearl is highly intelligent, and it can both speak and read Common, Abyssal, Infernal, and Draconic.

It can also communicate telepathically, however, and prefers this method of communication.

In addition to the standard use of a pearl of power, the wielder of the Pearl of Secrets can use true seeing at will, detect thoughts three times per day, and detect secret doors at will.

The Pearl of Secrets is incredibly egotistical as well as cunning and wise.

It generally insists on being in control, urging or (if possible) forcing its owner to seek after the Eye and Hand of Vecna, unearth dark secrets, and generally commit acts of despicable evil.

AL NE; SV Fort +10, Ref +10, Will +15; Str —, Dex —, Con —, Int 17, Wis 21, Cha 14, Ego 23.

Skills: Sense Motive +15.

Caster Level: 17th; Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, detect secret doors, detect thoughts, true seeing, creator must be able to cast 8th-level spells; Market Price: 165,280 gp; Weight: —.

SHARD

Shard is a +1 chaotic longsword of unknown origin, though some say it could only have been forged in the Ever-Changing Chaos of Limbo.

Though highly intelligent, it is borderline insane, and even its magical abilities are random in nature, to say nothing of its personality.

Each encounter, it randomly determines which of the following feats to bestow on its wielder (roll before making initiative checks):

d6	Feat
1	Combat Reflexes
2	Blind-Fight
3	Improved Initiative
4	Mobility
5	Sunder
6	Expertise

Shard can also detect law at will, though what it chooses to do with the information it gains varies from day to day.

Twice per day, Shard can use feblemind on an opponent it strikes in melee (or on its wielder, if it desires).

Shard speaks and reads Common, Celestial, and Abyssal, and can also communicate telepathically.

AL CN; SV Fort +5, Ref +5, Will +3; Str —, Dex —, Con —, Int 15, Wis 6, Cha 18, Ego 16.

Caster Level: 7th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, chaos hammer, detect law, feblemind, creator must be chaotic and have access to all six feats mentioned above; Market Price: 76,910 gp; Cost to Create: 38,610 gp + 3,064 XP.

STORMBLADE

Stormblade is a +1 shocking burst bastard sword with lightning bolts engraved along the blade.

Besides its shocking burst property, it grants its wielder the Combat Reflexes feat and allows the wielder to use jump for 20 minutes once per day.

Finally, the sword can produce a lightning bolt (8th-level caster, 8d6 damage, Reflex half DC 17) once per day.

Though its powers suggest the terror and chaos of a storm, Stormblade is a noble and virtuous weapon.

It fights with grim determination, regretting every lost life, but resigned to the necessity of violence in a world so full of evil.

It speaks and reads Common, Celestial, Dwarf, Elf, and Giant.

AL CG; SV Fort +7, Ref +7, Will +8; Str —, Dex —, Con —, Int 19, Wis 12, Cha 13, Ego 14.

Caster Level: 10th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, jump, lightning bolt, creator must have access to Combat Reflexes feat; Market Price: 49,575 gp; Cost to Create: 24,955 gp + 1,969 XP.

WAVE

Wave is a +3 trident with an amazing array of special abilities and significant intelligence.

In addition to its +3 enhancement bonus, it has the special abilities of both a trident of fish command and a trident of warning.

A character holding Wave can breathe underwater (as if a water breathing spell had been cast upon her) and can see underwater five times farther than water and light conditions would normally allow (as if wearing a helm of underwater action).

Wave can communicate telepathically, and it speaks Common, Aquan, Aboleth, Draconic, Kuo-Toan, and Sylvan.

It can also read all languages and read magic.

Wave has a special purpose: To spread the worship of a sea deity (Poseidon in a campaign using the Olympian pantheon from Deities and Demigods, or some other deity as appropriate).

It has no qualms about bringing death or disfigurement to any who refuse to honor its patron deity.

When it scores a successful critical hit against such a creature, Wave affects that target (only) with a horrid wilting spell (10d8 damage; Fortitude half DC 22).

AL N; SV Fort +7, Ref +7, Will +8; Str —, Dex —, Con —, Int 19, Wis 12, Cha 15, Ego 26.

Caster Level: 10th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Wondrous Item, detect magic, freedom of movement, horrid wilting, speak with animals, wall of force, water breathing; Market Price: 166,115 gp; Cost to Create: 83,215 gp + 6,632 XP.

WHELM

Whelm is a +3 warhammer of dwarven manufacture.

In the hands of a dwarf, its enhancement bonus increases to +5, and it can be thrown with a 30-foot range increment. It returns to its thrower on the round after it was thrown and is then ready to be wielded or thrown again.

When hurled, it deals +1d8 points of bonus damage or +2d8 points of bonus damage against giants.

Whelm has three primary powers: Detect secret doors at will, detect evil at will, and locate object in a 120-foot radius at will.

Whelm can communicate telepathically, and it speaks and reads Common, Dwarven, Giant, Gnome, and Goblin.

Whelm's special purpose is to destroy goblinoids and giants. Once per day, when struck upon the ground in pursuit of that goal, Whelm sends forth a shock wave that forces all creatures within 30 feet to make successful Fortitude saves (DC 18) or be stunned for 1d4 rounds.

Whelm bears a minor curse: One day after first using the weapon in battle, the wielder becomes agoraphobic, dreading open, outdoor spaces.

The character takes a –2 penalty on attack rolls, saving throws, and skill checks in outdoor settings.

For each consecutive 24-hour period during which the wielder fails to spend at least 8 hours indoors or underground, this penalty increases by –1, to a maximum of –5.

This condition persists until the wielder disposes of Whelm permanently.

AL LN; SV Fort +10, Ref +10, Will +14; Str —, Dex —, Con —, Int 12, Wis 18, Cha 7, Ego 20.

Caster Level: 16th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, detect evil, detect secret doors, locate object, creator must be a dwarf of at least 16th level; Market Price: 122,412 gp; Cost to Create: 61,362 gp + 7,284 XP.

WHISPER

Whisper is a +3 ghost touch short sword forged in a land where ghosts ran wild.

In addition to its ghost touch property, it allows the wielder to see invisibility at will, and it can cast shield on its wielder three times per day.

It communicates only by empathy, sharing its strong feelings of hatred toward ghosts with its wielder in order to encourage her to hunt what it considers undead abominations.

As might be expected, Whisper has a special purpose: To destroy ghosts.

When its wielder is using it in combat against a ghost, it grants the character a +2 luck bonus on all saving throws, a +2 deflection bonus to her Armor Class, and SR 15.

AL NG; SV Fort +6, Ref +6, Will +7; Str —, Dex —, Con —, Int 15, Wis 13, Cha 16, Ego 17.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, plane shift, see invisible, shield; Market Price: 125,790 gp; Cost to Create: 63,050 gp + 5,019 XP.

BOOK OF EXALTED DEEDS (3.5)

BARSLIDOR, THE TYRANT BANE

+3 longsword; AL CG; Int 17, Wis 10, Cha 17; Speech, telepathy, 120 ft. darkvision, and hearing; Ego score 15.

Languages: Celestial, Common, Draconic, Elven.

Lesser Powers: Cure moderate wounds on wielder 3/day, zone of truth 3/day, 10 ranks in Knowledge (history) (total modifier +13).

Greater Powers: Detect lawful evil at will.

Personality: Originally called Razorleaf, this sword was renamed shortly after the death of its creator, an elf crusader who dedicated his life to fighting tyranny.

A champion and advisor of many kings, Barsolidor succeeded in imprinting fragments of his life experience on the blade before his death.

The sword vehemently opposes tyranny and slavery, and when its current wielder grows too old to fight, it asks to be passed on to a younger champion of good who shares its purpose and ideals.

Strong divination; CL 15th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, cure moderate wounds, detect evil, detect law, zone of truth; Price 52,515 gp.

CADUCEUS

Staff of healing; AL NG; Int 14, Wis 14, Cha 10; Speech, 120 ft. vision and hearing; Ego score 6.

Languages: Celestial, Common, Infernal.

Lesser Powers: Ease pain 1/day, vision of heaven 3/day.

Personality: Legend has it that a faithful cleric of Pelor found this white ash staff with silver inlaid runes in a brook while on a pilgrimage.

The cleric heard a babbling sound coming from the brook, walked out among its shoals, and drew the talking staff from its shallow depths.

Caduceus (kah-DOO-shuss) has no memory of its origin, but it chats incessantly about the many great heroes it has helped over the years.

The staff abhors bloodshed and violence, and it sometimes elects to not heal wounds it feels are justified or deserved.

Moderate conjuration; CL 15th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, cure serious wounds, ease pain, lesser restoration, remove blindness/deafness, remove disease, vision of heaven; Price 34,950 gp.

EZRYLON

+2 demon bane short sword with a +4 ring of protection* built into its pommel; AL LG; Int 13, Wis 10, Cha 13; Empathy, 60 ft. vision and hearing; Ego score 11.

* This ring does not function if Ezrylon is wielded in a hand with a magic ring worn on it.

This ring confers its deflection bonus to AC only while the weapon is drawn.

Special: This weapon is fashioned from Solanian truesteel (see Chapter 3: Exalted Equipment) and gains a +1 bonus on the confirmation roll for a critical hit.

Languages (understand only): Abyssal, Common.

Lesser Powers: Daze monster 3/day, 10 ranks in Knowledge (the planes) (total modifier +11).

Personality: A half-celestial weaponsmith crafted Ezrylon for a halfling paladin of unshakable valor.

During a raid on an evil temple, the halfling fell beneath the maul of a fiendish minotaur cleric, who later tasked a minion to destroy the paladin's sword.

Ezrylon persuaded the slow-witted underling to sell it instead, and gradually the blade found its way into the hands of an evil gnome assassin.

Through this unlikely partnership, Ezrylon learned that evil often feeds on itself, and for several years, the assassin put Ezrylon's demon bane power to good use.

The assassin lost the blade in a gambling match with a shady merchant, who is currently seeking a buyer for the blade.

Ezrylon isn't quick to judge evildoers, but it swells with anger when it senses demons nearby.

Moderate abjuration; CL 15th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Forge Ring, daze monster, shield of faith, summon monster I; Price 64,810 gp.

HWYRR, THE CLARION HARP

Harp of charming; AL CG; Int 18, Wis 10, Cha 18; Speech, telepathy, 120 ft. darkvision, blindsense, and hearing; Ego score 14.

Languages (understand only): Celestial, Common, Draconic, Elven, Gnome.

Lesser Powers: Elation 3/day, Faerinaal's hymn (see below), 10 ranks in Knowledge (history) (total modifier +14).

Greater Powers: Dismissal 1/day, fear 3/day (against foes only).

Personality: The frame of this golden harp is fashioned into a handsome likeness of Faerinaal, Queen Morwel's eladrin consort (see Chapter 7: Celestial Paragons).

Crafted by a firre eladrin bard in Queen Morwel's court, Hwyrr serves Faerinaal as a chronicler of events on the Material Plane.

As it finds its way into the hands of different adventuring bards, Hwyrr learns new tales of heroism that it will someday recount to Faerinaal when it finally returns to Queen Morwel's court.

When it senses battle occurring within 60 feet, Hwyrr automatically begins playing Faerinaal's hymn and continues to do so until one of its other powers is employed.

Hwyrr takes great pride in its appearance and constantly insinuates itself into conversations, recounting tales of its past owners' exploits to help its current owner deal with immediate or similar problems.

Strong enchantment; CL 15th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, dismissal, elation, Faerinaal's hymn, fear, suggestion; Price 84,000 gp.

IASALAS, THE WATERSHOD

+1/+1 ki focus quarterstaff*; AL LG; Int 14, Wis 14, Cha 10; Speech, 120 ft. vision and hearing; Ego score 10.

* Both ends of the quarterstaff have the ki focus special ability.

Languages: Aquan, Celestial, Common.

Lesser Powers: Water walk 3/day (wielder only), 10 ranks of Sense Motive (total modifier +12).

Personality: Iasalas is imbued with the spirit of an elder water elemental and is adorned with graven symbols of the sea, including eels and anemones.

A fierce weapon, it relishes the sound of evil's brittle bones cracking under its mighty blows.

It has little patience for those of different alignment and those who can't wield it masterfully, and it chides a wielder who frequently misses his enemies in combat and criticizes underhanded or unseemly tactics.

Once earned, however, Iasalas's loyalty is unflinching and absolute.

Strong transmutation; CL 12th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, water walk, creator must be a monk; Price 48,100 gp.

LUNISTRA, THE HEARTSTAR

+4 soulfire breastplate; AL NG; Int 12, Wis 10, Cha 12; Empathy, 30 ft. vision and hearing; Ego score 11.

Languages (understand only): Celestial, Common.

Lesser Powers: Cure moderate wounds 3/day (on wearer only).

Personality: Lunistra is a golden breastplate shaped in the likeness of a lupinal cardinal's visage, with a golden eight-pointed star adorning its forehead.

When donned by a creature of good alignment, Lunistra exudes unflinching confidence in its ability to protect the wearer from grave harm.

Lunistra maintains a constant readied action to cast cure moderate wounds on the wearer if he or she is reduced to hp or fewer, and it resists any attempt by the wearer to deplete its cure moderate wounds ability in less critical situations.

Strong abjuration; CL 13th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, cure moderate wounds, death ward; Price 71,850 gp.

SERYL, THE LAUGHING BOW

+2 merciful composite longbow (+4 Str bonus); AL CG; Int 10, Wis 15, Cha 15; Speech, 60 ft. darkvision and hearing; Ego score 10.

Special: Seryl is made from serren, a wood found on the first layer of Arborea (see Special Materials in Chapter 3: Exalted Equipment).

The wood grants Seryl the ghost touch special quality, although this is a nonmagical feature.

Languages: Elven.

Lesser Powers: Faerie fire 3/day, 10 ranks in Diplomacy (total modifier +12), 10 ranks in Spot (total modifier +12).

Personality: Although it is over five hundred years old, the elven bow named Seryl views the world with a child's sense of wonder.

For reasons that elude it, Seryl finds dwarves especially hilarious and enjoys spending time around them, laughing at their jokes and marveling at their tales.

It does not enjoy inflicting pain on others and strongly advocates taking prisoners over needless slaughter.

Moderate conjuration; CL 6th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, cure light wounds, faerie fire; Price 38,900 gp.

TORVION, THE FIFTH SHIELD

+4 angelic light steel shield; AL LG; Int 10, Wis 13, Cha 13; Empathy, 60 ft. vision and hearing; Ego score 10.

Special: Torvion is fashioned from aurorum (see Special Materials in Chapter 3: Exalted Equipment for details).

If sundered, it can be fully restored by rejoining its broken fragments (as a full-round action).

Languages (understand only): Celestial.

Lesser Powers: Bless 3/day, eyes of the avoral (continuous) on good-aligned owner.

Personality: Torvion is one of seven identical shields crafted on Celestia.

It was given to an astral deva named Jeveth, who was summoned via greater planar ally spell to the Material Plane to help adventurers destroy a fiendish red dragon.

Jeveth bore Torvion into glorious battle and perished moments before the wyrm met its end.

The adventurers placed Torvion and the deva's other possessions in a hallowed tomb within their keep.

Although the keep stands in ruins today, these items still lie beneath an alabaster statue of Jeveth that remains largely intact.

If found, Torvion conveys excitement at being unearthed, exuding tremendous confidence when brought to bear in battle.

However, it manifests an unsettling fear of red dragons, solitude, and dark places when exposed to them.

It need not be drawn to confer its eyes of the avoral ability on its owner.

Moderate abjuration; CL 9th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, bles, dispel evil, eyes of the avoral, Phieran's resolve, caster must be good; Price 49,659 gp.

ZAETHWAR, THE SINFLAYER

Adamantine +5 holy spiked chain; AL LG; Int 17, Wis 10, Cha 17; Speech, telepathy, 120 ft. darkvision and hearing; Ego score 19.

Languages: Celestial, Common, Draconic, Infernal.

Lesser Powers: Ease pain 3/day, refreshment 3/day, 10 ranks of Intimidate (total modifier +13).

Greater Powers: Detect chaotic evil at will.

Personality: Fashioned by a planetar weaponsmith named Jebylon, Zaethwar exists to slay chaotic evil creatures and demons in particular.

It refuses to settle for half-measures in the war against chaos and evil and mentally asserts itself over any wielder who tries to withdraw from a battle in which chaotic evil opponents are present, endeavoring to stay and fight. If its wielder is subjected to a pain effect or nonlethal damage, Zaethwar casts ease pain or refreshment to counter any such debilitation.

Strong evocation [good]; CL 18th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, ease pain, holy smite, refreshment, creator must be good; Price 134,025 gp.

CHAMPIONS OF VALOR (3.5)

ALBRUIN

Albruin is a powerful magic sword coated in silver, which makes it effective against undead and lycanthropes.

It is intelligent, with a mischievous personality that may drag you on unplanned adventures.

You are but the latest in a long and varied line of wielders who have ranged from Cormyr to Impiltur to the Moonsea, with many adventures along the way.

History: Albruin is believed to be the creation of the long-dead smith Surdee, who was famous in his day for the craftsmanship of his work that came out of the forges of ice-bound Glistler, where he worked ore fresh from the mines above the city on the edge of the glacier.

The blade itself evades questions about its origins: It has no markings or definite touches of workmanship that identify Albruin as the work of anyone in particular.

Albruin was held for decades in the royal house of Cormyr, kept as a family treasure but seldom (due to its alignment) borne by the kings of that land.

It was stolen from the palace at Suzail in the Year of Daystars (1268 DR) by the thief Nypan ("Nipe"), a halfling who was soon arrested in Wheloon by soldiers of Cormyr and slain when he attempted to escape.

Nipe did not have the blade when seized, and he did not reveal its whereabouts.

It was rumored among the thieves of that place that Nypan sold it to a "gray trader" (fence) named Blusken Shult, who delivered the sword to a waiting buyer.

The blade's whereabouts were uncertain until the Year of the Wandering Waves (1292 DR), when a lady of high birth in Selgaunt, one Shamur Karn (later Uskreven), found the blade left behind in her bedchamber by a visitor fleeing the city guard.

He never returned, and Shamur sold it in the Year of the Talking Skull (1293 DR) before she disappeared.

The sword was bought by a recruiter visiting the city of Selgaunt on matters of trade (gold for mercenaries) on behalf of Prince Thaum of Telflamm.

With his army in tow, Thaum sailed across the Easting Reach and sacked the city of Sarshel with complete surprise.

During the fighting, Thaum came to covet the blade Albruin, and so the prince had its bearer murdered in an ambush by his own men so that Thaum could seize it for his own.

After Thaum's death, Albruin was acquired by Adjuz, one of Thaum's warriors, who took it back to the Dalelands.

He perished at the hands of brigands along the Moonsea Ride, but not before he had sought out the sage Elminster of Shadowdale to ascertain its powers.

After the death of Adjuz, the trail of the sword is hidden for some eight winters, but it is known to have been in the hands of the mercenary general Malakar on this visit to Zhentil Keep in the spring of the Year of the Broken Helm (1302 DR), and was identified by the sage Murail of Sarbreen when a mercenary warrior sought him out to learn the blade's properties in that city in the Year of the Catacombs (1308 DR).

Albruin has not been seen since, but Elminster is known to have observed that its plain appearance and ability to control many of its bearers has certainly contributed to this anonymity.

Description: Somewhat broader in blade than a classic longsword, Albruin gleams with the sheen of its silver coating.

The blade is otherwise unremarkable, making its name known to would-be bearers only through telepathy.

Activation: Albruin is a +3 silvered longsword. It does not radiate light.

Effect: +3 silvered longsword; AL CN; Int 17, Wis 10, Cha 17; Speech (Common, Elven, Undercommon, thieves' cant); telepathy; 120 ft. darkvision and hearing; Ego score 16. It sheds an eerie blue radiance equivalent to a light spell (bright illumination in a 20-foot radius, shadowy illumination in a 40-foot radius) when drawn.

Lesser Powers: Cure moderate wounds 3/day, neutralize poison 1/day (wielder only), read magic at will.

Greater Power: Invisibility purge (30 ft. range) 3/day.

Personality: Albruin has the heart of a scamp, eternally curious yet easily distracted and given to making mischief. Commissioned by a Dambrathan half-drow prince who fled the reach of Queen Ausitil for the Great Grey Land of Thar and sought a boon companion, the blade's intended recipient never received the sword because Albruin induced a smith at Surdee's forge to steal it away ere the prince arrived to claim his weapon.

Albruin has little interest in notoriety and seeks only wielders who take it to a steady stream of interesting locales.

Although not heroic by nature, the sword enjoys the immediate accolades of heroism, and is thus much more likely to prefer a good-aligned wielder to an evil one. Albruin is most likely to exert the strength of its personality when a mysterious ruin is in the offing, yet its wielders seem inclined to seek adventure elsewhere.

Aura/Caster Level: Moderate evocation. CL 9th.

Construction: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, cure moderate wounds, invisibility purge, neutralize poison, read magic, 25,030 gp, 1,970 XP, 50 days.

Weight: 4 lb.

Price: 49,565 gp.

CHALSEMBYR'S HEART

This beautiful greatsword is a unique and intelligent weapon with ties to the temple of Torm.

Sadly, it was lost, and many paladins of The True seek it throughout Faerûn.

Lore: Many among those who follow Torm have long sought to know the location of the Loyal Fury's ancient mortal kingdom of Chalsembyr.

Some of his most devout servants have dedicated their lives to finding it, wandering during most of their lifetimes in search of clues.

One such intrepid explorer was Bertold the Seeker, a paladin of extraordinary dedication and selflessness. (Knowledge [religion] DC 10) Legend says that Bertold carried with him a greatsword fashioned by clerics of the House of the Hand in Procampur.

This weapon, known as Chalsembyr's Heart, was designed to assist him in his quest to find Chalsembyr.

As it happened, Bertold was ambushed and killed by ogres while crossing the Toadsquat Mountains on the southern edge of the Eastern Shaar.

(Knowledge [religion] DC 15) There was a quality the clerics had imbued in the weapon that Bertold did not know about.

Instead of being drawn to the House of the Triad upon his death as he had expected, Bertold's soul was drawn into the sword, preserved there so that his knowledge of Chalsembyr would not be lost.

It remained there, waiting for another to come along and claim it—and, by extension, Bertold's knowledge.

The legend suggests that should another paladin take Chalsembyr's Heart as her own blade, she will upon her death be destined to take Bertold's place in the sword, finally freeing Bertold himself to join his lord in the House of the Triad.

Each successive paladin who dies in the service of Torm while wielding the greatsword will similarly serve as a guide in sword form for future seekers of Chalsembyr.

(Knowledge [religion] DC 30).

Description: Chalsembyr's Heart is a greatsword masterfully crafted of cold iron with a lion motif throughout.

The iron itself has been tinted in gold, and the point where the cross guard and the blade meet bears a raised head of a lion face-on on one side and in profile on the other.

The cross guards themselves appear as lion's paws, and the base of the hilt—which is wrapped in white leather bound in gold wire—holds one large brilliant-cut white diamond surrounded by five fiery yellow rectangular corundums.

The words "Seek the High Seat Always" in Celestial are etched along both sides of the blade.

Prerequisite: In the hands of others, Chalsembyr's Heart is simply a +2 cold iron greatsword.

Effect: +5 holy cold iron greatsword; AL LG; Int 13, Wis 14, Cha 16; telepathy, 120 ft. vision and hearing, read languages; Ego score 24.

Lesser Powers: 10 ranks in Decipher Script (total modifier +11) and 10 ranks in Knowledge (history Chalsembyr) (total modifier +11).

Greater Power: Detect thoughts at will.

Special Purpose: Find Chalsembyr.

Dedicated Power: Sword can perform a benevolent form of soul bind on a paladin of Torm upon death.

Aura/Caster Level: Strong evocation [good]. CL 20th.

Construction: Craft Arms and Armor, miracle, 51,450 gp, 8,920 XP, 52 days.
Weight: 8 lb.
Price: 100,450 gp.

HADRYLLIS

Hadryllis is the founding sword of Rashemen, wielded by the hero Yvengi to drive the scourge of Nar-summoned demons from the land.

The legendary Bane of Eltab, as it is also known, is said to be capable of expunging the curse of the Demonlands from the nations that border the Easting Reach.

History: Hadryllis is the legendary magical blade of Yvengi. With the aid of Hadryllis, the half-Rus/half-Rashemi hero liberated Rashemen from the rule of Eltab, the Lord of the Hidden Layer, in the Year of Leather Shields (–75 DR), driving the demon prince and his minions from the land. The origins of Hadryllis are lost in the mist of time, but it appears to be of Raumathari origin, suggesting it was given to Yvengi by the wychlaran, commonly known as the Witches of Rashemen, a secret sisterhood formed in the dying days of Raumathar to preserve that empire's magical lore.

The blade may have been forged by the first vremyonni, commonly known as “Old Ones”, male Rashemi arcane spellcasters who specialize in the creation of magic items. Lending some credence to this belief, the vremyonni speak of a “great blade forged by the gods and given to the captain of Raumathar's armies to shatter the most unholy working of the Nar demonbinders”.

After Eltab's defeat, a succession of Iron Lords of Rashemen wielded Hadryllis as the Rashemi sword of state.

The sword was lost during the rebellion of Bregg the Strong (189–194 DR), who fomented an insurrection against the wychlaran after they refused to name him Iron Lord.

The blade briefly reappeared in the markets of Kensten (now Bezantur) several years later, only to be purchased by a cleric of Anhur and brought back to the Mulhorandi city of Sultim.

An incarnation of Anhur used the sword to great effect during the War of Claws (202–204 DR), an ill-fated invasion of southern Unther and Mulhorand by the Arkaiuns of Eltabranar.

Eltab was defeated on the field of battle and imprisoned beneath the Thaymount through the use of the weapon's magic.

After the war, Hadryllis was returned to the Blood Fortress of Sultim, where the church of Anhur believes it remains, hidden away in an ancient subterranean armory in case Mulhorand finds cause to defend itself against the machinations of Eltab once again.

In truth, the sword was stolen several centuries ago by the witches of Rashemen and has been replaced by an excellent forgery.

Since returning to Rashemen, Hadryllis has been held by a succession of Iron Lords, but none have wielded it openly, because the wychlaran have instructed them to keep it hidden in reserve in case Eltab ever returned.

In the Year of the Shield (1367 DR), after an earthquake wracked the Thayan city of Eltabbar, the wychlaran detected Eltab's escape from his Zulkir-constructed prison.

The wychlaran then instructed the reigning Iron Lord to give Hadryllis to a band of adventurers who had just stopped an invasion of Rashemen by Thay.

The adventurers used the blade to defeat Szass Tam's plot to bind Eltab to the Thaksoril's seat with the nine Runes of Chaos, but the Lord of the Hidden Layer escaped as a result. Although the adventurers are believed to have also survived the battle, neither they nor Szass Tam are believed to still have the sword.

Description: This powerful cold iron blade is masterfully forged and adorned with Raumviran runes along both sides of the blade, spelling out its name.

The hilt is wrapped with aughisky hide, from a rare equine monster found in the icy waters of Lake Ashane.

Activation: Hadryllis is a +3 outsider bane holy cold iron greatsword.

Its bane special ability functions only against evil outsiders. It glows (equal to a light spell in effect) when drawn.

Effect: AL CG; Int 17, Wis 10, Cha 17; Speech (Common, Dwarf, Elf, Orc, Raumvira); telepathy; 120 ft. darkvision and hearing; Ego score 19.

Lesser Powers: Blindness 3/day (struck target only), detect magic at will, bull's strength 3/day (wielder only).

Greater Power: Invisibility purge (30 ft. range) 3/day.

Special Purpose: Defeat/slay evil outsiders, specifically Eltab.

Dedicated Power: Hadryllis has the unique property of being able to shatter the Adamantine Binding that lies in the depths of the Citadel of Conjurers, a legendary Narfelli ruin near the mouth of the Moaning Gorge in Impiltur. This unique binding tethers both Eltab and the scattered demoncysts (tiny pockets of the 248th layer of the Abyss) to the Demonlands of Faerûn.

Personality: Hadryllis is consumed with its calling, urging its wielder into battle with any fiend that presents itself, to the point of attempting to dominate any wielder who turns aside from such a battle.

The sword is sullen and withdrawn when its hated foes are not present, seeing little point to battling “mindless monsters”.

Aura/Caster Level: Strong abjuration. CL 18th.

Construction: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, blindness/deafness, bull's strength, detect magic, holy smite, invisibility purge, summon monster I, creator must be good, 67,850 gp, 2,700 XP, 68 days.

Weight: 8 lb.

Price: 135,350 gp.

CITY OF SPLENDORS WATERDEEP (3.5)

ETTIN AXE OF URUTH

This unique +1 icy burst/+1 flaming burst orc double axe is imbued with two sentiences, Ur and Krypt, respectively, and can illuminate its surroundings at will as a torch.

Ur: AL LE; Int 14, Wis 14, Cha 10; speaks Common, Orc, and Troll; 120-ft.

vision and hearing; Ego score 9.

Lesser Power: Item has 10 ranks in Sense Motive (total modifier +12) and 10 ranks in Spellcraft (total modifier +12).

Krypt: AL CE; Int 14, Wis 10, Cha 14; speaks Common, Orc, and Troll; 120-ft.

vision and hearing; Ego score 9.

Lesser Power: Item has 10 ranks in Intimidate (total modifier +12) and 10 ranks in Bluff (total modifier +12).

Although one axe head is lawful evil and one axe head is chaotic evil, the weapon is considered neutral evil for purposes of determining which bearers can wield it. If the heads work in concert, which is rare, the item's ego is considered equal to 13.

Fashioned by Lethchauntos the Black and wielded by King Uruth before his death in the Battle of the Westwood, this orc double axe is famous for the endless verbal spats between its twin personalities.

Most intelligent items try their best to mislead or distract their host so that she ignores or destroys rival items within 60 feet.

This common trait manifests in the ettin axe of Uruth in the form of nigh-constant attempts to denigrate the other sentience.

Claimed by War Lord Gharl in the aftermath of the Orcfastings War, but quickly interred and forgotten in the depths of Nimoar's Hold, the ettin axe of Uruth vanished during the Siege of the Black Horde, apparently stolen by orc infiltrators.

Subsequent divinations performed after the weapon was stolen revealed only that the double axe remained within Waterdeep, suggesting that the Black Horde interlopers had failed to escape with this potent symbol of orc might. The weapon's current location and recent history remain unknown.

Strong evocation; CL 15th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, either chill metal or ice storm, either flame blade, flame strike, or fireball; Price 64,660 gp; Cost 32,660 gp + 2,560 XP; Weight 15 lb.

MAGEBANE

This intelligent +2 bastard sword is made of an unusual black metal, hilt and blade all one piece.

Runes of green fire twist up and down the blade endlessly, but the blade does not otherwise glow.

Forged during the Seventh Age of Calimshan as a sword of state for one of the ruling mameluks, Magebane was employed to hunt down wizards of the qysar's court who survived the fall of the Imperium.

Its last owner was a satrap of Manshaka who died nearly a century ago, and the blade has been missing ever since. Only Keilier Twistbeard knows that it lies in the Blue Alley (see page 115), a seeming reward for anyone who survives the deathtrap.

Magebane: AL NE; Int 17, Wis 10, Cha 17; speaks Auran, Alzhedo, and Common; telepathy; 120-ft. darkvision and hearing; Ego score 16.

Lesser Powers: Detect magic at will, item has 10 ranks in Knowledge [arcana] (total modifier +13) and Spot (total modifier +13).

Special Purpose: Defeating or slaying arcane spellcasters (including spellcasting monsters and those that use spell-like abilities).

Dedicated Power: Feeblemind.

Strong transmutation; CL 4th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor; Price 102,935 gp; Cost 51,635 gp + 2,052 XP; Weight 6 lb.

DRAGON MAGIC (3.5)

SWORD OF THE GREAT HARROWING

When bathed in the blood of dragons, no sword is deadlier against a draconic foe than a sword of the great harrowing. A longsword imbued with sentience and a seething hatred for all dragons, the blade and its bearer seek out dragons to behead—but the sword is ever watchful for a more powerful wielder.

Lore: These swords, created by the Harrowers (see page 143), are more powerful versions of dragonbane swords (DC 15 Knowledge [arcana]).

Seven swords of the great harrowing are known to exist, and all are fully sentient.

However, not all are still in the hands of the Harrowers (DC 25 Knowledge [arcana]).

Description: A sword of the great harrowing is a wide-bladed longsword with a fang-decorated crossguard and a ruby inset in the pommel.

The sword glows like many magic weapons, but its true power becomes apparent once it activates its dragonblood consumption power (described below).

Then the sword turns bright red, and a whirling cascade of crimson energy surrounds the sword, the wielder, and the dragon they are fighting.

Personality: Originally created by the Harrowers, the swords of the great harrowing are in many ways similar to the dragons they hate: single-minded, ruthless, and endlessly patient.

A sword of the great harrowing knows it needs a strong hand to wield it, though, so it acts as friend and confidant to its bearer, offering counsel and support when asked.

Only two occurrences can put such a sword at odds with its wielder.

First, if the wielder refuses to face a dragon in combat, the sword of the great harrowing immediately attempts to take control of him.

Second, if the sword becomes aware of a more powerful potential owner, it silently observes for a time, and then tries to subtly engineer a conflict between its current owner and what it hopes will be its future master.

These swords speak Common, Elven, Dwarven, and Draconic.

AL N; Int 10, Wis 17, Cha 17; speech and telepathy; 120 ft. darkvision and hearing; Ego score 17.

Activation: Because it's an intelligent weapon, a sword of the great harrowing takes actions of its own during its wielder's turn.

Its actions are generally limited to activating one of its three powers.

Effect: A sword of the great harrowing is a +1 dragonbane longsword with two lesser powers that it is eager to use on behalf of its master.

Three times per day each, it can use resist energy (20 points, sword's choice of energy type) and remove fear.

But in battle with a wounded dragon, a sword of the great harrowing becomes something much more.

Immediately after the wielder successfully deals damage to a dragon with the sword, it activates its dragonblood consumption power.

At the end of each of the wielder's turns, check whether the sword dealt damage to the dragon that round.

If it did, its enhancement bonus increases by 1 for future attacks against that dragon.

If it did not, its enhancement bonus decreases by 1 for future attacks against that dragon.

One hour after the last time the sword deals damage to a dragon, this effect fades, and the sword's enhancement bonus returns to normal.

A sword of the great harrowing's enhancement bonus can't drop below +1 (or the normal enhancement bonus of the sword, if improved beyond +1), nor can it rise above the dragon's age category (including the benefit of the bane quality).

For dragons without an age category, treat the age category as 1/4 the dragons Hit Dice (maximum age category of 10 for a dragon with 40 or more Hit Dice).

Variants: As written, a sword of the great harrowing is neutral, an implacable foe of both chromatic and metallic dragons. But the DM can change its alignment and narrow its focus to produce a variant sword that hates only evil dragons (or only good ones).

It's also possible to change the sword into another type of weapon.

Simply subtract 15 gp from the cost, and add the cost of the new weapon.

Aura/Caster Level: Strong transmutation; CL 15th.

Construction: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, locale creature, resist energy, remove fear, 30,315 gp, 2,400 XP, 60 days.

Weight: 4 lb.

Price: 60,315 gp.

DRAGONS OF FAERÛN (3.5)

DRAGONSLAIR

A unique version of the swords of dragonblood was created by the Cult mage Larkonlan, as a phylactery for the dracolich Dretchroyaster.

In addition to its normal properties, the sword has the everbright special ability and has numerous powers derived from its master.

To confuse those who attempt to read the runes inscribed upon it, they magically rearrange themselves to read "dragon slayer".

In addition, unbeknownst to the Cult, twelve previous archmages have handled the gem embedded in the sword, enchanting it so that they can teleport to its location no matter their location, or the location of the gem.

When Dretchroyaster's spirit is contained in the stone, it becomes an intelligent weapon with the following statistics.

Dragonslair: +2 everbright sword of dragonblood; AL LE; Int 12, Wis 12, Cha 12; Speech (Common and Draconic only), telepathy, 120 ft. darkvision, blindsense, and hearing, read languages, read magic; Ego score 21.

Lesser Powers (CL 15th): Warp wood (3/day), entangle, (1/day), plant growth (1/day), suggestion (1/day, cast by the dracolich).

Major Powers (CL 15th): Water breathing (at will), detect the location and distance of the nearest green dragon on the same plane (at will), grants wielder immunity to the effects of harmful gases.

Personality: The personality of the sword is identical to that of the dracolich.

DUNGEON MASTER'S GUIDE 1 3.5 (3.5)

ACROLA, WATCHFUL TOOTH OF ASHARDALON

+5 keen dagger; AL CG; Int 10, Wis 18, Cha 18; Speech, telepathy, 120 ft. darkvision, blindsense, and hearing; Ego score 22.

Lesser Powers: Zone of truth 3/day, Item has 10 ranks in Listen (total modifier +14) and Spot (total modifier +14).

Greater Powers: Clairvoyance 3/day, slow 3/day.

Personality: Bards tell that a tooth pried from the living body of the terrible dragon Ashardalon arose with its own mind and will.

The tale would seem odd, for the goals of the long knife are nothing like those of the dread dragon.

The well-intentioned but tireless dagger has taken as its personal cause that of protecting the weak and the helpless. Acrola frequently uses its clairvoyance power to scout out areas of trouble or evil, and then Acrola drags its wielder into the fray.

Strong transmutation; CL 15th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, keen edge; Price 132,802 gp.

BOSK, THE POETIC BLADE

+2 longsword; AL N; Int 14, Wis 14, Cha 10; Speech, 30 ft. vision and hearing; Ego score 8.

Lesser Powers: Bless 3/day, hold person 3/day.

Personality: Created by a wizard experimenting with sentience, Bosk was later sold by its creator and has changed hands many times.

Always willing to offer its opinion, advice, a story, or even a poem of its own devising, Bosk has never met an owner who was a perfect match, though perhaps a deaf swordwielder would be best.

Moderate divination; CL 15th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, legend lore; Price 15,815 gp.

IQUEL

+2 holy composite longbow; AL NG; Int 17, Wis 10, Cha 17; Speech, telepathy, 120 ft. darkvision and hearing; Ego score 16.

Lesser Powers: Daze monster 3/day, faerie fire 3/day, locate object 3/day.

Greater Powers: Lesser globe of invulnerability 1/day.

Personality: A loyal and trusted companion to the hero Iquel, this once nameless bow took its first wielder's name after his heroic stand against a balor.

Since then, Iquel has searched for a wielder who can live up to its high standard: a grandmaster archer with a zeal for good.

Despite its commitment to the forces of good in the world, Iquel enjoys casual conversation, relaxation, and delicate care.

Strong evocation (if miracle is used) [good]; CL 17th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, wish or miracle; Price 66,600 gp.

JOMNOTH, GIANTBLIGHT

+3 giantbane dwarven waraxe; AL LG; Int 10, Wis 14, Cha 14; Speech, 120 ft. vision and hearing; Ego score 14.

Lesser Powers: Cure moderate wounds 3/day, detect magic at will.

Special Purpose: Defeat/slay giants.

Dedicated Power: Song of discord.

Personality: Forged by a long-dead dwarf smith, Jomnoth, also known as Giantblight, dates from an age of giant invasions.

The success of the waraxe cannot be questioned, since upon occasion a single dwarf hero has struck down a number of bewildered and overwhelmed giants.

A stoic but forceful will has been incarnated into the waraxe blade.

Jomnoth speaks little, and is reluctant to give advice or gainsay its wielder except under the most extreme circumstances.

As long its owner is willing to strike deep into the keeps and lairs of giantkind, the waraxe never objects.

Strong conjuration; CL 15th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, summon monster I; Price 176,430 gp.

VESAC, THE DECEIVER

Luck blade; AL NE; Int 16, Wis 10, Cha 16; Speech, 60 ft. darkvision and hearing; Ego score 15.

Lesser Powers: Minor image 1/day, major image 1/day, 10 ranks in Bluff (total modifier +13).

Personality: A powerful and selfish blade, Vesac has served as the weapon of dozens of petty tyrants and would-be conquerors.

The lure of its powerful three wishes draws in many who seek to gain power, wealth, or advance their own agenda. However, Vesac itself is only interested in advancing the tales of its own legend.

Despite having many wielders over the ages, it continues to hoard its wishes, frequently deluding wielders (by using its illusion powers) into thinking that their desires have been fulfilled.

Strong evocation (if miracle is used); CL 17th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, wish or miracle; Price 161,560 gp; Cost 80,780 gp + 5,718 XP.

ZAX, CLOAK OF KINGS

Cloak of Charisma +6; AL LN; Int 10, Wis 14, Cha 14; Speech, 120 ft. vision and hearing; Ego score 5.

Lesser Powers: Zone of truth 3/day, Item has 10 ranks in Diplomacy (total modifier +12) and 10 ranks in Knowledge (history) (total modifier +10).

Personality: This magic cloak has provided advice to royal courts for generation after generation, not only the settling of disputes, but also with accounts of the foibles of leaders past.

Zax, as this cape has always been known, is a fine-looking garment of sable and fur.

Like most rulers, Zax itself has grown somewhat stern and aloof over the years, though its Ego has never been strong enough to dominate its wearer.

Moderate conjuration; CL 15th; Craft Wondrous Item, eagle's splendor; Price 56,500 gp.

PLAYER'S GUIDE TO FAERÛN (3.5)

BLACK SWORD

This item is a +3 bastard sword created at the height of the Imaskari Empire to overthrow the emperor.

Its statistics are as follows: AL LN; Int 10, Wis 14, Cha 14; Speech, 120-ft.

vision and hearing; Ego score 15.

Lesser Powers: Darkness 3/day, silence 3/day.

Greater Power: Dispel magic 3/day.

Special Purpose: Overthrow tyrants.

Dedicated Power: Wielder gets a +2 luck bonus on attack rolls, saves, and checks.

Personality: The black sword is haughty and single-minded.

It does not like to be wielded by creatures it thinks are beneath it (which includes most characters), and it speaks little when it is in such unpleasant circumstances.

If placed in a position of being able to fight a tyrant, however, it grows extremely excited and constantly urges its wielder on.

Strong transmutation; CL 12th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, darkness, dispel magic, divine favor, silence; Price 131,335 gp; Cost 55,835 gp + 5,240 XP.

SHAZZELLIM

This +1 keen scimitar was created by the Red Wizards of Thay to combat the Harpers.

Its crosspiece has an ornament shaped like a pair of rearing serpents.

Its statistics are as follows.

AL NE; Int 17, Wis 10, Cha 17; Speech and telepathy, 120-ft.

darkvision and hearing; Ego score 17.

Lesser Powers: Detect magic at will, locate object 3/day, 10 ranks in Search (total modifier +13).

Special Purpose: Slay members of the Harpers.

Dedicated Power: Fireball (10d6 fire damage).

Personality: Shazzellim is mean and dour.

It almost seems to resent its existence and sentience, and it certainly loathes the poor quality of care it has received since its forging, as demonstrated by a few nicks in the blade and some damage to the ornament of its crosspiece. Shazzellim speaks Common, Orc, Abyssal, and Infernal.

Moderate evocation; CL 10th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, detect magic, fireball, locate object; Price 92,415 gp; Cost 46,365 gp + 3,684 XP.

RACES OF STONE (3.5)

GHARRIAKHA, THE HEARTHWARDEN

+4 defending dwarven waraxe; AL LG; Int 13, Wis 13, Cha 8; Empathy, 60-ft.

darkvision and hearing; Ego score 10.

Lesser Powers: Cure moderate wounds 3/day, deathwatch.

Personality: In life Gharriakha was a dwarven defender, and the weapon that contains her ashes shares her selfless, protective spirit.

It is content to remain quiet and stay out of the spotlight, while offering all the help it can to its wielder.

Generally, its only communications are the feelings of encouragement and support it sends to its wielder.

Strong abjuration; CL 15th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, shield or shield of faith, creator must be a dwarf; Price 61,830 gp.

MORZHUL, THE FORGEHEART

+2 flaming burst warhammer; AL CN; Int 18, Wis 10, Cha 16; Speech, telepathy, 120-ft.

darkvision, blindsense, and hearing; Ego score 25.

Lesser Powers: Daze monster 3/day, faerie fire 3/day, item has 10 ranks in Intimidate (total modifier +13).

Greater Power: Wall of fire 1/day (in a ring centered on the wielder).

Special Purpose: Defeat/slay creatures with the cold subtype.

Dedicated Power: 10d6 fireball.

Personality: Morzhul, in life, was an adventuring dwarf cleric of the forge-god, Tharmekhül.

He was dedicated to eradicating creatures of cold, and Morzhul's spirit continues that mission now that it is bound to this hammer.

The weapon's personality is best described as fiery—it speaks loudly and with passion, urging its wielder into battle.

Strong evocation; CL 15th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, flame blade, flame strike, or fireball, creator must be a dwarf; Price 127,212 gp.

TRUTHSEEKER

+1 axiomatic greataxe; AL LN; Int 10, Wis 14, Cha 12; Speech, 120-ft.

darkvision and hearing; Ego score 10.

Lesser Powers: Zone of truth 3/day, item has 10 ranks in Sense Motive (total modifier +12).

Personality: The name of the once-living dwarf whose spirit is linked to this greataxe is no longer known, and the weapon will not reveal it.

It is known, however, that in life he was a judge, and his obsession with truth is manifested in the personality of the weapon that carries his spirit.

The weapon immediately initiates conflict with a wielder who lies.

Strong evocation [lawful]; CL 15th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, order's wrath, creator must be a dwarf and lawful; Price 34,120 gp.

ZHAVAK THE SUNDERER

+2 bane (constructs) adamantine battleaxe; AL LG; Int 10, Wis 17, Cha 15; Speech, telepathy, 120-ft.

darkvision and hearing; Ego score 18.

Lesser Powers: Bless 3/day, cure moderate wounds 3/day, item has 10 ranks in Knowledge (arcana) (total modifier +13).

Special Purpose: Defeat/slay constructs.

Dedicated Power: Rusting grasp.

Personality: Generally as dour as the most taciturn dwarf, Zhavak's personality springs to life when the weapon is in battle with constructs.

The dwarf whose spirit is linked to the weapon was a mighty cleric of Moradin slain in battle with an iron golem, and Zhavak loves to fight such foes above all others.

It is prone to giving its wielder tactical advice in battle with golems, which is not always sound.

Devoutly religious, it immediately initiates conflict if its wielder does not demonstrate proper piety.

Strong conjuration; CL 15th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, summon monster I, creator must be a dwarf; Price 99,110 gp.

SANDSTORM (3.5)

DANCE MASKS OF THE GREAT MOTHER

The bhukas believe that the spirit children of their mother deity Kikanuti travel the world and visit her earthly children.

At festival times, bhuka shamans don these ritual masks and are possessed by the intelligence that rests in them.

Possession lasts until the shaman is overcome by exhaustion and loses consciousness.

The mask is then removed and reverently stored away until the next festival.

Generally, each bhuka village is the guardian of one mask, and they are all brought to a grand dance held by all the villages.

Each mask takes the same body slot that a helmet or headband would.

Some examples are given below.

CORN CHILD

This high, conical mask is intricately decorated with dried corn kernels of different colors.

Corn Child is the bringer of plenty, the closest of Kikanuti's children to the bhukas.

When the dancer puts it on, he lets the item's Ego overwhelm him and use its powers to enrich the crops, purify the water, and provide a feast to all participants. The possession continues until the wearer has gorged himself on food and drink and has blessed all the surrounding fields, at which time he collapses unconscious. Int 12, Wis 18, Cha 16; Speech, telepathy, read languages, read magic, 120 ft. darkvision, blindsense, and hearing; Ego score 18.

Lesser Powers: Cure moderate wounds 3/day, purify food and drink 3/day.

Mask has 10 ranks in Knowledge (nature) (total modifier +11).

Greater Powers: Heroes' feast 1/day, plant growth 3/day.
Strong conjuration; CL 17th; Craft Wondrous Item, miracle, creator must be a bhuka; Price 120,000 gp.

MOON OWL

This feathered headdress resembles the head of the totemic animal after which it is named.

Moon Owl represents the night sky, the cool resting time of the desert, as well as vigilance and wisdom.

The mask's purpose is to defend the children of Kikanuti from their enemies.

When the dancer puts it on, she allows the item's Ego to overwhelm her and use its powers to first detect then travel to and destroy the closest hostile creature.

The possession continues until the wearer is slain in combat or returns victorious, at which time she collapses unconscious.

If the wearer is slain, the moon owl mask teleports back to its village.

Int 12, Wis 18, Cha 18; Speech, telepathy, read languages, read magic, 120 ft. darkvision, blindsense, and hearing; Ego score 23.

Lesser Powers: Bless 3/day, cure moderate wounds 3/day.

Mask has 10 ranks in Listen (total modifier +14).

Greater Powers: Locate creature 3/day, teleport 2/day.

Special Purpose: Defend the bhukas.

Dedicated Power: Cast 1d6 greater shout 3/day.

Strong varies; CL 17th; Craft Wondrous Item, miracle, creator must be a bhuka; Price 256,000 gp.

STORM EAGLE

This feathered headdress resembles the head of the totemic animal after which it is named.

Storm Eagle represents the day sky and the life-giving power of the thunderstorm.

When the dancer puts it on, she allows the item's Ego to overwhelm her and use its powers to call a mighty rainstorm down upon the surrounding region.

While the possession continues, the wearer dances in a great frenzy, faster and faster, until she collapses unconscious.

Int 14, Wis 14, Cha 18; speech, telepathy, read languages, read magic, 120 ft. vision and hearing; Ego score 18.

Lesser Powers: Bless 3/day.

Mask has 10 ranks in Listen (total modifier +12) and 10 ranks in Spot (total modifier +12).

Greater Powers: Control weather 1/day, quench 3/day.

Strong transmutation; CL 17th; Craft Wondrous Item,
miracle, creator must be a bhuka; Price 86,000 gp.

ITEM FAMILIAR

SPECIAL ABILITIES

UNEARTHED ARCANA (3.5)

ARMOR, SHIELD, OR WEAPON SPECIAL ABILITY

An item familiar empowered with this special ability gains an ability equivalent to a +1 bonus (as found on Table 7–5, 7–6, or 7–14 in the Dungeon Master's Guide), such as the light fortification, bashing, or defending special ability.

This ability contributes to the overall enhancement bonus of the item and its value but does not cost the master of the familiar any gold pieces or time.

This ability may be used in conjunction with the normal rules for improving an existing magic item (see Improving an Item Familiar, below, and Adding New Abilities, page 288 of the Dungeon Master's Guide).

A character may select this special ability multiple times, each time enabling her familiar to gain a different ability equivalent to a +1 bonus.

Prerequisite: The item familiar must be a type of magic armor, a magic shield, or a magic weapon.

CANTRIPS/ORISONS

An item familiar empowered with this special ability can cast 0-level spells.

The familiar may cast any spell invested in it as a standard action (or longer, as defined by the spell's casting time) as long as the spell does not have an expensive material component or an XP component.

The item familiar need not provide any verbal or somatic components, and it need not provide any material components that cost less than 1 gp.

It has access to all the 0-level spells from any single class spell list of the master's choice (taking into account any alignment restrictions against casting spells of a certain class or alignment subtype).

It can cast a number of 0-level spells per day as if it were a sorcerer of the master's character level (though the master does not have to be a spellcaster).

The item familiar uses its own ability scores to determine spell save DCs but can cast its 0-level spells only on its master's order.

The master may use a free action on her turn to issue these orders, or she may give a number of contingency orders (such as "If I fall unconscious, cast cure minor wounds on me") equal to one more than her Charisma modifier (minimum one).

GREATER POWER

An item familiar empowered with this special ability gains any single greater power listed on the Intelligent Item

Greater Powers table, page 270 of the Dungeon Master's Guide.

The item uses this power as described, at the master's command.

A character may select this special ability multiple times, each time applying it to a different greater power.

Prerequisite: An item must have at least one lesser power (see below) for every greater power it is given.

The master must spend the amount of gold pieces given in the Base Price Modifier column of the Intelligent Item Greater Powers table to purchase the greater power.

The process of empowering an item in this way takes 24 hours.

GREATER SENSES

An item familiar empowered with this special ability gains blindsense out to 30 feet.

Prerequisite: The item familiar must already have the improved senses special ability (see below).

IMPROVED SENSES

An item familiar empowered with this special ability gains darkvision out to 60 feet.

INCREASED SAPIENCE

An item familiar empowered with this special ability gains +4 to any single ability score and +2 to its other two scores. The item can now communicate telepathically in a recognizable language with the master out to 120 feet and can speak audibly in Common.

It can speak, read, and understand one additional language per point of Intelligence bonus.

A character may select this special ability multiple times, each time improving all three of the item's ability scores and increasing the number of languages it can speak, read, and understand.

LESSER POWER

An item familiar empowered with this special ability gains any single lesser power listed on the Intelligent Item Lesser Powers table, page 269 of the Dungeon Master's Guide.

The item uses this power as described, at the master's command.

A character may select this special ability multiple times, each time applying it to a different lesser power.

Prerequisite: The master must spend the amount of gold pieces given in the Base Price Modifier column of the Intelligent Item Lesser Powers table to purchase the lesser power.

The process of empowering an item in this way takes 24 hours.

SPECIAL PURPOSE AND DEDICATED POWER

An item familiar empowered with this special ability gains a special purpose and a dedicated power chosen by its master (see the Intelligent Item Purpose and Special Purpose Item Dedicated Powers tables on page 270 of the Dungeon Master's Guide).

An item familiar usually displays more flexibility in how it carries out its special purpose than a standard intelligent item, especially if its purpose conflicts with its master.

However, if a master (especially one who gave the item a special purpose in the first place) consistently acts against the item's special purpose, the item has even more leverage for keeping the "master" in line.

An item familiar can temporarily sever the link between item and master, essentially shutting down access to any abilities invested in the item plus all its normal magical abilities, as if the item had been lost or destroyed.

The item only reestablishes the link if it is convinced the master is committed to helping it fulfill its special purpose.

No item familiar may have more than one special purpose and one dedicated power.

Prerequisite: The master must spend the amount of gold pieces given in the Base Price Modifier column of the Special Purpose Item Dedicated Powers table to purchase the dedicated power.

The process of empowering an item in this way takes 24 hours.

SPELL USE

An item familiar empowered with this ability may cast any spell invested in it as a standard action (or longer, as defined by the spell's duration) as long as it does not have an expensive material component or an XP component.

The item familiar need not provide any verbal or somatic components, and it need not provide any material components that cost less than 1 gp.

The item familiar must meet the ability score prerequisites for the spell but casts the spell at the master's level.

The item familiar may cast the spell only on the master's order (as described in Cantrips/Orisons, above).

If an item familiar casts an invested spell, it is as if the master cast it for purposes of spells per day and preparation.

Prerequisite: The item must have an invested spell slot of the appropriate spell level (see Invest Spell Slots, above), and the master must have the ability to cast 3rd-level spells.

ITEM SETS

MAGIC ITEM COMPENDIUM (3.5)

ARMOR OF THE WATCHING MASTER

Those who wear the armor of the watching master know what it feels like to be in command and to sense what others miss.

They possess unnatural sight and unusual powers to blind, burn, and bully their enemies.

Individually, each piece of the armor of the watching master provides a useful ability, but only those with the full set know its true powers.

The armor of the watching master works best in the hands of a barbarian or other melee warrior.

As medium armor, a breastplate of terror allows a barbarian to use his fast movement ability, and its damage reduction stacks with the barbarian's.

The armor of the watching master also provides other advantages useful to any melee-oriented character, such as frightening or blinding foes, ignoring hardness, and overcoming damage reduction.

Note that the Strength bonus provided by the armor of the watching master can be increased using the rules in Chapter 6.

LORE

Characters who have ranks in Knowledge (arcana) or Knowledge (the planes), or who have the bardic knowledge ability, can research the armor of the watching master to learn more about these items.

When a character succeeds on a check, the following lore is revealed, including the information from lower DCs.

DC 15: The first set of the armor of the watching master belonged to a powerful elf paladin who returned from planar travel wearing the items.

The paladin founded an organization devoted to guardianship and order, and sets of the armor of the watching master became standard issue for the highest-ranking members of that group.

The organization, called the Watchful Eyes, collapsed due to internal strife one hundred years ago, and now sets of this armor continue to appear from time to time in the hands of various individuals.

DC 20: The Watchful Eyes collapsed because many of its paladin members became blackguards at about the same time that its founder vanished.

Lacking leadership and warring internally, the group eventually disintegrated.

DC 25: Stories persist that the founder of the organization was the first to fall from grace, and that she returned from the planes tainted by evil.

The stories don't say how she managed to hide this from other members of the Watchful Eyes or why she founded the group, but supposedly the dark side of the Watchful Eyes persists as a cultlike order of barbarians and blackguards who wear pieces of the armor of the watching master as a sign of their devotion to the cult.

DC 30: A check result of 30 or higher reveals the location of another piece of the set.

Use this to drive further adventure and direct the PCs toward some location or story you would like them to explore.

COLLECTION BENEFITS

Wearing pieces of the armor of the watching master allows you to command or frighten foes, blind and burn enemies, or crush objects that impede your vision.

Wearing the entire set grants you vision that can pierce invisibility.

When all four pieces of the armor are worn, the staring eyes marking each item appear to come to life, becoming bloodshot, yellow-pupiled orbs that look around of their own accord.

2 Pieces: You gain a +2 bonus on initiative checks.

4 Pieces: You gain a +5 competence bonus on Spot checks. Once per day, you can speak the command word of "Cabiri" and activate the armor with a standard action to gain the effect of a see invisibility spell for 3 minutes.

ARMOR OF THE WATCHING MASTER PIECES AND ABILITIES

Piece	Body Slot	Price (Level)	Ability
Mask of mastery	Face	3,500 gp (8th)	+5 on Intimidate checks; 1/day command
Helm of wounding sight	Head	6,500 gp (10th)	Light at will; 3/day blinding fire cone
Gauntlets of destruction	Hands	6,610 gp (11th)	+2 Strength; 3/day treat attack as adamantine
Breastplate of terror	Body	13,200 gp (14th)	+1 adamantine breastplate ; 1/day frighten foe

ARMOR OF THE WATCHING MASTER COLLECTION BENEFITS

Pieces Worn	Benefit
2 pieces	+2 on initiative checks
4 pieces	+5 on Spot checks; 1/day see invisibility for 3 min.

BREASTPLATE OF TERROR

Price (Item Level): 13,200 gp (14th)

Body Slot: Body

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) necromancy

Activation: — and immediate (mental)

Weight: 30 lb.

This adamantine breastplate bears an emblem of a wide, staring eye surrounded by raised rays of glittering mithral.

As a +1 adamantine breastplate, this item grants damage reduction 2/—.

A breastplate of terror's damage reduction stacks with damage reduction gained as a class feature (but not from any other source).

For example, a 10th-level barbarian would have damage reduction 4/—.

In addition, once per day immediately after you have been damaged by a melee attack, you can activate this armor to render a foe that just wounded you frightened for 1 round. If the enemy succeeds on a DC 20 Will save, it is shaken for 1 round rather than frightened.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, cause fear, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 1,500 gp (plus 10,200 gp for adamantine breastplate), 120 XP, 3 days.

GAUNTLETS OF DESTRUCTION

Price (Item Level): 6,610 gp (11th)

Body Slot: Hands

Caster Level: 6th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 18) evocation, transmutation

Activation: — and swift (command)

Weight: 2 lb.

Each of these spiked steel gauntlets has an embossed image of an eye on its back.

Each eye has an emerald for a pupil.

Gauntlets of destruction grant you a +2 enhancement bonus to Strength.

In addition, you can activate the gauntlets to enable the next melee attack made during your turn to overcome damage reduction and ignore hardness as if the attack were made with an adamantine weapon.

This ability functions three times per day.

Gauntlets of destruction are masterwork spiked gauntlets and can be used as a weapon.

You can enhance a gauntlet beyond its base abilities by using the rules for crafting a magic weapon, but each gauntlet must be enhanced separately.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, bull's strength, shatter, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 3,000 gp (plus 610 gp for two masterwork spiked gauntlets), 240 XP, 6 days.

HELM OF WOUNDING SIGHT

Price (Item Level): 6,500 gp (10th)

Body Slot: Head

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) evocation

Activation: Standard (command)

Weight: 1 lb.

This steel helmet covers all of the wearer's head but the face.

A single huge eye with a crystal pupil is embossed on the helm's forehead.

When a helm of wounding sight is activated, the embossed pupil sheds light with the brightness of a light spell until it is commanded to cease or the helm is removed.

In addition, three times per day, a helm of wounding sight can be activated to emit an instantaneous 60-foot-long cone of bright, burning light.

This cone deals 2d6 points of fire damage and blinds all creatures in the area for 1 round.

Creatures that succeed on DC 20 Reflex saves take half damage and are dazzled for 1 round.

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, light, burning hands, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 3,250 gp, 260 XP, 6 days.

MASK OF MASTERY

Price (Item Level): 3,500 gp (8th)

Body Slot: Face

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) enchantment

Activation: — and standard (command)

Weight: 1 lb.

This steel half-mask covers only the lower face.

Over the wearer's mouth, an emblem depicting a large eye with a crystal for its pupil stares forth.

Wearing a mask of mastery causes the wearer's voice to sound more commanding and authoritative, adding a +5 competence bonus on Intimidate checks.

When activated, this mask allows you to utter a command (as the spell; Will DC 20 negates).

Unlike the command spell, this effect is not language-dependent—the target needs only to be able to hear you.

This ability functions once per day.

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, command, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 1,750 gp, 140 XP, 4 days.

ARRAY OF THE MANTICORE

This striking set of magic items grants you the freedom of the skies and the power to wreak havoc from above.

Crafted in honor of their namesake creature, the array of the manticore is tailored for the individual who fights in the air or fights airborne foes, bestowing the ferocity of a manticore and its fearsome sting.

Characters focused on making ranged weapon attacks get the most benefit from the array of the manticore.

Scouts and rangers see the most benefit, since an airborne scout can skirmish more easily and a ranger's combat styles prove useful.

LORE

Characters who have ranks in Knowledge (arcana), or who have the bardic knowledge ability, can research the array of the manticore to learn more about these items.

When a character succeeds on a check, the following lore is revealed, including the information from lower DCs.

DC 15: A hobgoblin sorcerer crafted the first array of the manticore for his favorite bugbear bodyguard.

This bugbear rode a tamed manticore into battle, and it seemed fitting to the hobgoblin to reward his servant's skill and bravery with a tribute to his ferocity.

DC 20: A group of humans and halflings attacked the goblinoid stronghold.

The goblins were eventually defeated, but only after many of the invaders died from the javelins and spikes cast down upon them from the air.

The few survivors divided up the array of the manticore among themselves, not understanding the power the items held when worn together.

When one of the halflings inherited a second piece from a fallen companion, she discovered the power of feather fall granted by possessing two pieces of the array.

When this knowledge spread among the others, infighting broke out, and eventually only two remained.

They made a truce, and each parted to investigate the means of creating the missing companion pieces.

In this way, use and knowledge of the array spread.

DC 25: Although the array of the manticore bears no curse or magic that makes one vulnerable, legend says that the hobgoblin who created the first set also created a spell whereby he could command the movements of the wearer by impelling the items to move, accomplishing a jerky, puppetlike control over a wearer's body.

This spell also prevented the items from being removed. Many have sought the spell or attempted to recreate it, but no one is known to have succeeded.

DC 30: A check result of 30 or higher reveals the location of another piece of the set.

Use this to drive further adventure and direct the PCs toward some location or story you would like them to explore.

COLLECTION BENEFITS

Wearing any two pieces of the array of the manticore grants you freedom from the threat of falling damage.

Wearing the full set allows you to call upon a manticore for aid, bringing it into battle on swift wings to rain death down upon your foes.

2 Pieces: You function as though perpetually affected by a feather fall spell (CL 5th).

You can negate or renew this power as a swift (mental) action.

5 Pieces: You can summon a manticore (as if using a summon monster spell) with a swift (mental) action, which fights on your behalf for 5 rounds.

The manticore has damage reduction 10/magic and gains a +5 competence bonus on attack rolls.

This ability functions two times per day, but summoning a second manticore causes the first to disappear if still present.

ARRAY OF THE MANTICORE COLLECTION BENEFITS

Pieces Worn	Benefit
2 pieces	Feather fall at will
5 pieces	2/day summon manticore

ARRAY OF THE MANTICORE PIECES AND ABILITIES

Gloves of endless javelins	Hands	7,000 (11th)	Create temporary +1 javelin
Medallion of aerial defense	Throat	8,000 (11th)	DR 10/magic against ranged attacks if you or foe is airborne
Helm of the hunter	Head	9,000 (12th)	+5 Spot; Far Shot; 1/day low-light vision and darkvision for 4 hours
Winged vest	Torso	12,000 (13th)	5/day fly 60 ft. (good) for 5 rounds

BRACERS OF AERIAL COMBAT

Price (Item Level): 5,000 gp (9th)

Body Slot: Arms

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) evocation

Activation: —

Weight: 1 lb.

Each of these fine steel bracers is inlaid with a golden image of a swooping manticore.

Bracers of aerial combat grant you a +1 competence bonus on attack rolls if you or the foe you attack is airborne.

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, gust of wind, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 2,500 gp, 200 XP, 5 days.

GLOVES OF ENDLESS JAVELINS

Price (Item Level): 7,000 gp (11th)

Body Slot: Hands

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) evocation

Activation: Free (command)

Weight: —

This pair of black leather gloves is set with golden studs, each embossed with the image of a manticore's head.

Gloves of endless javelins allow you to rain death down on your enemies.

When you activate these gloves, a +1 javelin made of pure force appears in your hand.

A javelin created by the gloves lasts until you resolve an attack with it or until the end of your turn, whichever comes first.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Wondrous Item, magic missile, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 3,500 gp, 280 XP, 7 days.

HELM OF THE HUNTER

Price (Item Level): 9,000 gp (12th)

Body Slot: Head

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) divination

Activation: — or standard (mental)

Weight: 1 lb.

This gold and mithral helm looks like the bristle-bearded head of a manticore.

A helm of the hunter grants you a +5 competence bonus on Spot checks and the benefit of the Far Shot feat.

These effects function continuously.

When you activate this helm, you gain low-light vision and darkvision out to 60 feet for 4 hours.

This ability functions once per day.

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, clairaudience/clairvoyance, darkvision, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 4,500 gp, 360 XP, 9 days.

MEDALLION OF AERIAL DEFENSE

Price (Item Level): 8,000 gp (11th)

Body Slot: Throat

Caster Level: 3rd

Aura: Faint; (DC 16) abjuration

Activation: —

Weight: —

This medallion is composed of a mantichore's head and wings exquisitely crafted in gold and hung from a black leather band.

A medallion of aerial defense grants you damage reduction 10/magic against ranged weapons, as long as either you or your attacker is airborne.

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, protection from arrows, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 4,000 gp, 320 XP, 8 days.

WINGED VEST

Price (Item Level): 12,000 gp (13th)

Body Slot: Torso

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) transmutation

Activation: Swift (command)

Weight: 2 lb.

This black leather vest is decorated with fine black scales and has a pair of dragonlike wings folded against its back. When you activate a winged vest, it unfolds its mantichore wings and allows you to fly at a speed of 60 feet (good maneuverability) for 5 rounds.

A winged vest functions five times per day.

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, fly, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 6,000 gp, 480 XP, 12 days.

FIVE VIRTUES

Whether brave or meek, you will wake to valor when girded with the five virtues, legendary implements of courage brandished by knights of a previous age.

When the five virtues are worn in part or in whole, bold heroism blazes within your chest.

These five items were created to help knights uphold their values.

The abilities granted by the set bolster various abilities of that class (PH2 24), but the items are also useful for warriors of other disciplines.

LORE

Characters who have ranks in Knowledge (nobility and royalty), or who have the bardic knowledge ability, can research the five virtues to learn more about these items.

When a character succeeds on a check, the following lore is revealed, including the information from lower DCs.

DC 15: In an age now past, an order of knights was chartered to defend against illithid incursions.

For hundreds of years, the knights fought against all manner of infiltration, control, and even attempts at invading small border kingdoms.

Through it all, the knights prevailed, relying on their code to give them strength and resolve.

This code was a manifestation of five virtues upon which the order was founded.

Those virtues came to be embodied in a special set of magic items called, appropriately enough, the five virtues.

The items exemplified honor, freedom, valor, vigilance, and sacrifice.

DC 20: The knightly order is long gone, and even its name is lost to history.

However, archivists have studied relics found in the ancient ruins of their stronghold.

Through knowledge gained thereby, they learned about the lost virtues of the knights.

Archivists suspect, based on clues unearthed in their delvings, that some or all of the five virtues might yet be found in far-separated keeps, or perhaps in isolated treasures of long-lived subterranean monsters.

DC 25: Recently, a group of miners opened a new face on a coal seam they had found long ago.

Almost immediately they broke into a cavity long sealed from the surface.

The cavity contained a warm, salty lake in which eyeless, albino, many-legged creatures swam.

Unable to plumb the lake's depth, the miners did find an ancient ruin on the lake's edge—some sort of fortress, calcified under years of dripstone.

In it they found some barely preserved records of the knightly order.

The incomplete records claimed a dead mind flayer community lay sealed beneath the lake, and within that carcass of ancient evil lay one or more pieces of the five virtues stolen from the knights.

DC 30: A check result of 30 or higher reveals the location of another piece of the set.

Use this to drive further adventure and direct the PCs toward some location or story you would like them to explore.

COLLECTION BENEFITS

The wearer of the five virtues gains benefits that aid his ability to fight honorably and help his allies.

When you wear two pieces of the set, your eyes shine and sparkle with bravery.

When you wear all five virtues and activate the power of the shield of vigor, the virtues take on a silvery sheen as if lit from a plane where valor and virtue rule supreme.

2 Pieces: You gain a +1 morale bonus on Will saves.

5 Pieces: Adjacent allies gain a +1 bonus to AC.

FIVE VIRTUES PIECES AND ABILITIES

Piece	Body Slot	Price (Level)	Ability
Armband of confrontation	Arms	1,400 gp (4th)	Fighting challenge lasts 3 extra rounds
Standard of valor	Shoulders	1,400 gp (5th)	Grant ally extra save against fear effect
Medal of steadfast honor	Throat	1,500 gp (5th)	Immediately stand if knocked prone
Crystal of alacrity	— (armor)	3,500 gp (8th)	+5 ft. speed crystal
Shield of vigor	— (held)	6,170 gp (10th)	+1 heavy shield grants fast healing 5 for 3 rounds

FIVE VIRTUES COLLECTION BENEFITS

Pieces Worn	Benefit
2 pieces	+1 on Will saves
5 pieces	Adjacent allies gain +1 AC

ARMBAND OF CONFRONTATION

Price (Item Level): 1,400 gp (5th)

Body Slot: Arms

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) evocation

Activation: —

Weight: —

This bright red band is worn around the bicep.

While wearing an armband of confrontation, your fighting challenge (PH2 25) lasts an extra 3 rounds.

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, divine favor, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 700 gp, 56 XP, 2 days.

CRYSTAL OF ALACRITY

Price (Item Level): 3,500 gp (8th)

Body Slot: — (armor crystal)

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) transmutation

Activation: —

Weight: —

This small crystal bears a carved relief of an armored knight.

When attached to medium or heavy armor, this lesser augment crystal (see page 221 for details) grants you a +5-foot morale bonus to your land speed.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, longstrider, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 1,750 gp, 140 XP, 4 days.

MEDAL OF STEADFAST HONOR

Price (Item Level): 1,500 gp (5th)

Body Slot: Throat

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) transmutation

Activation: Immediate (mental)

Weight: —

This heavy gold medal is engraved with a griffon about to take flight.

If you are knocked prone, you can activate a medal of steadfast honor to instantly regain your feet in the space where you were standing.

A medal functions once per day, but if you have the knight's challenge class feature (PH2 25), you can activate the medal again by expending a daily use of that ability.

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, feather fall, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 750 gp, 60 XP, 2 days.

SHIELD OF VIGOR

Price (Item Level): 6,170 gp (10th)

Body Slot: — (held)

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) conjuration

Activation: Swift (command)

Weight: 15 lb.

This solid shield is lacquered in white with an image of a gold dragon at the center.

A single red tear falls from the dragon's left eye.

This +1 heavy steel shield rewards you for your unwavering loyalty and self-sacrifice.

When you activate the shield, you gain fast healing 5 for 3 rounds.

A shield of vigor functions once per day, but if you have the knight's challenge class feature (PH2 25), you can activate the shield again by expending a daily use of that ability.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, vigor (SC 229), possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 3,000 gp (plus 170 for masterwork heavy steel shield), 240 XP, 6 days.

STANDARD OF VALOR

Price (Item Level): 1,400 gp (5th)

Body Slot: Shoulders; see text

Caster Level: 10th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 20) abjuration

Activation: Immediate (command)

Weight: 4 lb.

This magnificent standard is emblazoned with the image of a red griffon.

This magic banner is part of a wide mantle you can wear attached to your shoulders.

The standard can also be affixed to a pole, spear, or polearm, thus freeing up your shoulders slot but requiring you to wield the weapon to which it is attached in order to gain the item's benefit.

The standard enhances your ability to inspire your allies on the battlefield.

When you activate a standard of valor, you can grant one ally within 60 feet another save against a fear effect currently affecting him or about to affect him.

A standard of valor functions once per day, but if you have the knight's challenge class feature (PH2 25) or the marshal's grant move action class feature (MH 13), you can activate the standard of valor again by expending a daily use of one of those abilities.

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, remove fear, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 700 gp, 56 XP, 2 days.

FLEET WARRIOR'S ARRAY

The fleet warrior's array is a work of art, both in craftsmanship and magic.

Apart, the items prove a great boon, but together they make their wearer as swift as the wind and just as elusive.

The items in this set enable the elf warriors it was designed for to move exceptionally quickly, as well as to fight effectively under any conditions and in all types of terrain. While wearing this set, these warriors were almost impossible to capture or even slow down.

The fleet warrior's array should appeal to virtually any character, though spellcasters get less benefit from bracers of blinding strike than adventurers who focus on weapon attacks.

Rogues and other stealthy characters in particular should consider the fleet warrior's array.

Gaining an extra sneak attack while flanking can be critical, and the benefits to mobility provided by the array allow a rogue to focus less on skills such as Tumble and Escape Artist, and instead invest in other useful skills.

LORE

Characters who have ranks in Knowledge (arcana), or who have the bardic knowledge ability, can research the fleet warrior's array to learn more about these items.

When a character succeeds on a check, the following lore is revealed, including the information from lower DCs.

DC 15: The fleet warrior's array was created by an elf kingdom for a legion of warriors chosen for their speed and endurance.

Called the Green Runners, these warriors received special training that built upon their talents.

They were noted for tirelessly running long distances and for acting as expert scouts and commandos.

The Green Runners were the kingdom's elite fighting force, and bands of Green Runners were occasionally sent to aid the kingdom's allies.

The warriors received pieces of the fleet warrior's array as an indication of rank.

The highest-ranking members owned all three and were elevated out of the ranks of the legion to serve as an elite cadre of Green Runner guards for the royal family.

Each of the elves in this group effectively held the rank of general and acted as an advisor to the king and queen, a position to which every Green Runner could aspire.

Tales of the Green Runners have traveled widely, and in many of the lands surrounding their former kingdom, elves and half-elves tell tales of their bravery and prowess.

An elf or half-elf wearing an item from the fleet warrior's array is often mistaken for one of the Green Runners by those who know the stories.

DC 20: When the elf kingdom was conquered by its enemies, the Green Runner generals went into hiding, taking with them the pregnant queen and the last hope of preserving the dynasty.

They vanished into the depths of a huge and ancient forest, and efforts to locate their hideout proved futile.

When the Green Runners fled into the forest with the elf queen they split into many small groups to confuse their pursuers.

The group that guarded the queen never rejoined the rest, and now the Green Runners who remain search for clues to what happened to their leader and her child.

If the queen gave birth, the royal heir would now be an adult, perhaps ignorant of his or her heritage.

DC 25: Some say that the Green Runner generals were traitors to the elf kingdom, and they kidnapped the queen for some personal gain.

Those who tell these tales blame the fall of the empire on the generals, because the king lacked his best fighters and advisors when the kingdom was attacked and was forced to divide his attention between two foes.

That the Green Runners now seek the queen and her child there can be no doubt, but whether the Green Runners who seek them are the generals or those from the rank and file, none can say.

DC 30: A check result of 30 or higher reveals the location of another piece of the set.

Use this to drive further adventure and direct the PCs toward some location or story you would like them to explore.

COLLECTION BENEFITS

Parts of the fleet warrior's array give their wearer the ability to dance in and out of melee with impunity, and wearing the whole set allows the wearer to instantaneously travel to a nearby location and take others along.

When someone wears the entire set, the mithral parts of the items turn into glowing emeralds that briefly leave a trail of green light in the air as the wearer moves.

2 Pieces: You gain a +2 dodge bonus to AC against attacks of opportunity.

3 Pieces: You can use dimension door (CL 7th) as a standard (command) action once per day.

FLEET WARRIOR'S ARRAY PIECES AND ABILITIES

Body Piece	Slot	Price (Level)	Ability
Bracers of blinding strike	Arms	5,000 gp (9th)	+2 initiative; 3/day extra attack with full attack
Sandals of the light step	Feet	9,000 gp (12th)	+10 speed; pass without trace; not slowed by difficult terrain; 1/day water walk
Vest of free movement	Torso	12,000 gp (13th)	3/day freedom of movement for 3 rounds

FLEET WARRIOR'S ARRAY COLLECTION BENEFITS

Pieces Worn	Benefit
2 pieces	+2 AC against attacks of opportunity
3 pieces	Dimension door 1/day

BRACERS OF BLINDING STRIKE

Price (Item Level): 5,000 gp (9th)

Body Slot: Arms

Caster Level: 12th

Aura: Strong; (DC 21) transmutation

Activation: — and swift (command)

Weight: 1 lb.

This pair of elegant bracers is crafted from green leather with mithral tracery that looks like vines.

Tiny, leaf-shaped plates of silver branch off the mithral to create a glimmering pattern.

These bracers grant you a +2 competence bonus on initiative checks.

This is a continuous effect and requires no activation.

When you activate bracers of blinding strike, you can make one additional attack with any weapon you are holding, as long as you have already used the full attack action during the turn.

This attack is made at your full base attack bonus, plus any modifiers appropriate to the situation.

This effect is not cumulative with any other effect that grants you an extra attack when making a full attack, such as the Rapid Shot feat, a speed weapon, or the haste spell.

This ability can be used three times per day.

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, haste, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 2,500 gp, 200 XP, 5 days.

SANDALS OF THE LIGHT STEP

Price (Item Level): 9,000 gp (12th)

Body Slot: Feet

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) transmutation

Activation: — and swift (mental)

Weight: 1 lb.

These exquisite sandals are made of mithral and green leather, and they bear intricate overlapping pieces of leather crafted to look like leaves.

Wearing a pair of sandals of the light step provides you with a +10-foot enhancement bonus to your base land speed, and you can ignore any extra movement costs for difficult terrain (PH 148).

You also leave no tracks, as if affected by pass without trace.

When you activate these sandals, you gain the benefit of a water walk spell for 60 minutes.

You can share this effect with up to five allies adjacent to you when you activate the sandals, though doing this reduces the overall duration accordingly.

For example, if you share the effect with one other person, the duration is 30 minutes apiece; if you share it with 5 other people, the duration is 10 minutes apiece.

This ability functions once per day.

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, longstrider, pass without trace, water walk, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 4,500 gp, 360 XP, 9 days.

VEST OF FREE MOVEMENT

Price (Item Level): 12,000 gp (13th)

Body Slot: Torso

Caster Level: 7th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 18) abjuration

Activation: Swift (command)

Weight: —

This forest green vest is set with fine mithral studs.

Whorls of silver thread create vinelike designs that crawl over its surface.

When activated, a vest of freedom grants you freedom of movement (as the spell) for 3 rounds.

This ability functions three times per day.

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, freedom of movement, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 6,000 gp, 480 XP, 12 days.

GARB OF THE HUNTING CAT

Although made of mere steel and skin, the garb of the hunting cat presents a powerful combination of abilities that makes any wearer a deadly predator.

This garb gives you the rending claws, incredible stealth, and hunting ability of a tiger.

While anyone can wear the garb and become like the beast, only the most skilled combatants can use the abilities of the garb of the hunting cat to their fullest.

Characters of any melee-oriented class can find the garb of the hunting cat useful, but the set provides benefits most suited to rangers, rogues, ninjas, and scouts.

Feats that help you capitalize on the set's abilities include Spring Attack and Two-Weapon Fighting.

LORE

Characters who have ranks in Knowledge (arcana), or who have the bardic knowledge ability, can research the garb of the hunting cat to learn more about these items.

When a character succeeds on a check, the following lore is revealed, including the information from lower DCs.

DC 15: The garb of the hunting cat first came to light due to a number of shocking attacks upon human and elf settlements.

The countryside was terrorized by strange, tigerlike people who would slaughter whole villages.

The creatures were difficult to track and, when overmatched, vanished into thin air.

When at last one was killed, the victors discovered not a monster but a man wearing the garb of the hunting cat.

DC 20: Those who attacked the elves and humans were members of a cult of rakshasa worshipers.

Each of the cultists was outfitted with a set of the garb of the hunting cat, and participating in a "hunt" against other humanoids was a necessary part of the rite of passage to receive a set.

Most of the sets ended up in the hands of those who survived cultist assaults and were later sold.

Many who now wear parts of the garb of the hunting cat are ignorant of the set's bloody history.

DC 25: The rakshasa at the center of the cult was confronted, but it escaped and might still be alive.

It's said that the evil creature can be recognized in any form it adopts because its natural form has pure white fur without stripes, and it seems incapable of creating hair with any pigment when it adopts another shape.

Many of those who have collected the entire garb of the hunting cat set have died by the claws of some kind of an animal.

Stories abound of hunting trips gone wrong, supposedly domesticated beasts going wild, and even of terrible bloody deaths behind locked doors that no animals should be able to penetrate.

The common thread through all these stories is that the death occurred when the owner of the garb was not wearing it.

If the rakshasa is at fault, as many suspect, its motives remain a mystery because the pieces are always left behind with the body of their owner.

DC 30: A check result of 30 or higher reveals the location of another piece of the set.

Use this to drive further adventure and direct the PCs toward some location or story you would like them to explore.

COLLECTION BENEFITS

The garb of the hunting cat provides you with a deadly rending attack and the power to disappear from sight.

When wearing the entire garb of the hunting cat, you take on the appearance of a humanoid tiger during combat.

When this occurs, the fur on the various items appears to be that of a living creature, making you appear something like a bestial rakshasa or weretiger.

2 Pieces: If, during your turn, you hit a single foe with both a primary claw glove attack and an off-hand claw glove attack, the second attack rends, dealing an extra 3d6 points of damage.

You can rend only once per round.

3 Pieces: Once per day, you can use invisibility on yourself (CL 3rd) as a standard (mental) action.

GARB OF THE HUNTING CAT PIECES AND ABILITIES

Piece	Body Slot	Price (Level)	Ability
Mask of the tiger	Face	4,000 gp (8th)	Gain Track (or +5 Survival); low-light vision
Claw gloves	Hands	5,604 gp (10th)	+1 punching daggers; two claw attacks on charge or Spring Attack
Mantle of the predator	Shoulders	8,000 gp (11th)	+5 on Hide and Move Silently; +1d6 against foes denied Dex bonus to AC

GARB OF THE HUNTING CAT COLLECTION BENEFITS

Pieces Worn	Benefit
2 pieces	Rend with claw gloves
3 pieces	1/day invisibility

CLAW GLOVES

Price (Item Level): 5,604 gp (10th)

Body Slot: Hands

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) transmutation

Activation: —

Weight: 1 lb.

These gloves are made from tiger skin and fitted with sharp steel claws on the end of each finger.

Claw gloves are treated as a pair of +1 punching daggers for the purpose of fighting with them when both are worn.

However, wearing claw gloves does not inhibit your ability to wield other weapons or otherwise use your hands.

In addition, if you charge or use Spring Attack while you are wearing claw gloves and both your hands are empty, you can make an off-hand claw glove attack in addition to the normal claw glove attack granted (though both attacks take normal penalties for fighting with two weapons).

You can't combine this extra attack with an attack with any other weapon, nor is it cumulative with any other effect that grants you extra attacks when charging or using Spring Attack.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Wondrous Item, magic fang, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 2,500 gp (plus 604 gp for two masterwork punching daggers), 200 XP, 5 days.

MANTLE OF THE PREDATOR

Price (Item Level): 8,000 gp (11th)

Body Slot: Shoulders

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) transmutation

Activation: —

Weight: 2 lb.

This short, flexible cape is made from tiger skin and feels warm to the touch.

A mantle of the predator grants you a +5 competence bonus on Hide and Move Silently checks.

In addition, you deal an extra 1d6 points of damage with melee attacks against foes denied their Dexterity bonus to AC.

Creatures with concealment, creatures without discernible anatomies, and creatures immune to extra damage from critical hits are all immune to this extra damage.

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, cat's grace, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 4,000 gp, 320 XP, 8 days.

MASK OF THE TIGER

Price (Item Level): 4,000 gp (8th)

Body Slot: Face

Caster Level: 7th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 18) transmutation

Activation: —

Weight: 1 lb.

This steel mask is covered with tiger skin and fitted with actual tiger teeth.

A mask of the tiger provides you with the benefit of the Track feat (or, if you already have that feat, a +5 competence bonus on Survival checks).

In addition, you gain low-light vision.

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, low-light vision (SC 134), possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 2,000 gp, 160 XP, 4 days.

GHARYN'S MONASTIC ARRAY

The half-moon shaped blade of the kama is dangerous enough, but it becomes deadly when infused with the power of ki.

When wielding this array of monastic tools, you become as the wind: at times violent and unstoppable, at other times a darting blur of speed.

Gharyn's monastic array is most useful for a monk, especially one who uses a kama to enhance her hand-to-hand fighting. Each of the items allows its wielder to better mimic the natural movements of a certain animal, and some wielders believe that by mimicking motions found in nature, they will be able to merge their physical and spiritual consciousnesses.

LORE

Characters who have ranks in Knowledge (arcana), or who have the bardic knowledge ability, can research Gharyn's monastic array to learn more about these items.

When a character succeeds on a check, the following lore is revealed, including the information from lower DCs.

DC 15: The original monastic array was discovered amid the ashes of a fallen monk known as Gharyn.

He died sacrificing his life to protect his brother monks from the wrath of a red dragon.

Many believe that the dragon's fire charged Gharyn's array with magical power.

DC 20: The Monastery of the Lone Dove, a haven for ascetic monks devoted to Pelor, had strict policies of asceticism, silence, and discipline.

Brothers ate two bowls of rice per day, were allowed to speak ten words outside of prayer, and had to be in their chambers by sundown.

Some brothers chafed under this strict regimen.

One was a monk named Gharyn.

Gharyn didn't believe such restrictions applied to him.

While he espoused the support of law and order, he felt the monastery's strictures were meaningless, and he claimed they even hindered the success of a lawful society. Needless to say, this belief did not make him particularly popular among his very conservative and traditional brothers.

He knew that a change was needed, but that it had to occur gradually for the brothers to accept it.

Gharyn slowly altered his behavior and routine.

He substituted barley for his bowl of rice and used long, multisyllabic words for his ten per day.

He was in his room by sundown, but stayed up well past midnight.

While many brothers objected to his actions, Gharyn developed a cult following in the monastery.

He began to train his supporters in unusual fighting styles from around the world.

He urged them to reject meaningless strictures, but encouraged people to follow the greater rules of society. This was not a rejection of order as much as an acknowledgment of the universe's true laws and mysteries. The Monastery of the Lone Dove had begun proceedings to expel Gharyn, but fate stepped in when a flight of rampaging dragons attacked.

Many of the monks, so used to their daily routines, were unable to conduct a proper defense against a siege by dragons.

Gharyn took charge and led the monks in battle, proving an able leader.

In the end, he sacrificed himself by shielding the other monks from the breath of a red dragon.

His sacrifice gave the others time to mount an offense that repelled the dragons.

In his ashes, three items remained: a set of foot wrappings, a mask, and a kama.

The items that remained among Gharyn's ashes became the uniform of the Monastery of the Lone Dove.

The monks traveled far and wide, popularizing the beliefs—and attire—of Gharyn.

DC 25: A monk named Nobara Lame decries Gharyn's memory, saying that those who fondly remember the rebellious monk are lying to themselves: Strictures bring structure, structure lends itself to law and an ascetic lifestyle.

Nobara's anger over the rebellious spirit popularized by Gharyn's "lucky" sacrifice has grown so extreme that his days are now spent traveling between monasteries to proclaim his views.

Whenever he comes upon someone wearing a piece of Gharyn's monastic array, whether original or a copy, he calls that person out in a duel to the death.

DC 30: A check result of 30 or higher reveals the location of another piece of the set.

Use this to drive further adventure and direct the PCs toward some location or story you would like them to explore.

COLLECTION BENEFITS

Any combination of two parts of Gharyn's monastic array grants deadly efficacy to your stunning attacks and gives your physical movement an animalistic swiftness and savagery.

When using all three pieces, your arm briefly seems to take the form of a striking scorpion's tail.

2 Pieces: Add +1 to the save DC of your Stunning Fist attacks.

3 Pieces: When you score a critical hit with a scorpion kama, you can expend one of your daily uses of Stunning Fist as a free action to make that attack a stunning attack.

(If you don't have the Stunning Fist feat, this benefit has no effect).

 This +1 kama deals damage equal to your unarmed strike damage (if that is greater than the normal damage for a kama).
 Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Stunning Fist, magic weapon, possession of a piece of the set.
 Cost to Create: 3,000 gp (plus 302 gp for masterwork kama), 240 XP, 6 days.

INSTRUMENTS OF THE BLOOD GIFT

The three instruments of the blood gift fuel magic through personal sacrifice. When precious blood is spilled, magical energy is unleashed. With the proper instruments, that energy can be harnessed, directed, and used toward ends both foul and fair. The instruments of the blood gift are most useful for sorcerers who want to further enhance their sorcery—if they aren't too squeamish to sacrifice their own blood. Characters of draconic origin can also make use of the instruments' power, regardless of class.

LORE

Characters who have ranks in Knowledge (arcana), or who have the bardic knowledge ability, can research the instruments of the blood gift to learn more about these items. When a character succeeds on a check, the following lore is revealed, including the information from lower DCs.
 DC 15: The instruments of the blood gift were created by a sorcerer named Palamandius, who used the principle behind their manufacture to free himself and other sorcerers from the tyranny of a mysterious group called the Wizards of the Pure.
 DC 20: A cabal known as the Wizards of the Pure sought to eliminate all inborn magical talent in the world. The cabal despised all those who came by their magic from birth without study or sacrifice—they equated such gifts with devilish pacts and demonic corruption. The Pure spoke of the dangers of uncontrolled magical ability and "untrained talent".
 In truth, the Wizards of the Pure did more than seek—they sent out agents to secretly round up a sampling of sorcerers and other spontaneous spellcasters.

Across many lands, sorcerers of power large and small went missing.

The captives found themselves bound within the confines of a dead zone where magic, both inborn and learned, was suppressed.

There they were housed, without explanation and without hope of release.

The Wizards of the Pure hoped that they could kill a creature's talent for sorcery if the flame was doused long enough.

All the kidnapped sorcerers served the Pure as subjects in this hateful experiment.

Fortunately for the captives, one among them, a spellscale (see Races of the Dragon) named Palamandius, possessed particular talent.

In his dreams, he could almost taste again the magic that once ran in his blood.

In those dreams, he found salvation.

Using the power of his own blood to wake and catalyze his suppressed sorcery—even within the dead magic zone—he blasted himself and his companions free.

Unprepared for the escape, the Pure saw its power base destroyed.

With the insight gained while in captivity, Palamandius crafted his item set, which is powered through a sacrifice of blood.

As a result, he named them the instruments of the blood gift.

DC 25: A scattering of surviving members of the Wizards of the Pure still lurk in large cities and villages.

Now and then, one or more of them, working alone or in temporary alliance, decides to murder a passing sorcerer out of fear and rage over the splintering of their once-powerful cabal.

DC 30: A check result of 30 or higher reveals the location of another piece of the set.

Use this to drive further adventure and direct the PCs toward some location or story you would like them to explore.

COLLECTION BENEFITS

When you wear two instruments of the blood gift, your eyes take on a reddish tint and your skin becomes faintly ruddy. When wearing all three parts, your eyes smolder with liquid fire and your skin flushes with empowered blood.

2 Pieces: You automatically stabilize when reduced to –1 to –9 hit points.

3 Pieces: You can expend a sorcerer spell slot as a swift (command) action to heal yourself of a number of points of damage equal to twice the spell slot's level.

This ability functions three times per day.

INSTRUMENTS OF THE BLOOD GIFT PIECES AND ABILITIES

Piece	Body Slot	Price (Level)	Ability
Bands of blood rage	Arms	2,600 gp (7th)	3/day grant blood rage
Barb of retribution	Hands	4,500 gp (9th)	1/day force enemy to reroll save with penalty
Blood claw choker	Throat	12,000 gp (13th)	+2 Con; 2/day regain sorcerer spell slot

INSTRUMENTS OF THE BLOOD GIFT COLLECTION BENEFITS

Pieces Worn	Benefit
2 pieces	Automatically stabilize at –1 to –9 hp
3 pieces	3/day expend sorcerer spell slot to heal damage

Body Slot: Arms

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) enchantment

Activation: Swift (mental)

Weight: 2 lb.

These armbands are made from red gold studded with tiny rubies.

BANDS OF BLOOD RAGE

Price (Item Level): 2,600 gp (7th)

Dozens of needle-sharp spikes extend slightly from the inside of the bands.

Each time you don bands of blood rage, they deal 1 point of damage to you.

This damage can't be healed as long as you wear these armbands.

When you activate bands of blood rage, you and any willing ally within 30 feet can enter a blood rage that lasts for 5 rounds.

This blood rage can't be ended prematurely except by unconsciousness or any effect that would end a rage (such as a calm emotions spell).

Unlike a barbarian's rage, the blood rage doesn't limit your actions in any way.

While in a blood rage, a character gains a +5 morale bonus on melee weapon damage rolls.

However, each affected creature also takes 5 points of damage each round at the end of its turn as its own body suffers under the strain.

If you are a sorcerer or you have the dragonblood subtype (see Races of the Dragon or Dragon Magic), you also gain a +5 morale bonus on damage with your arcane spells while in a blood rage created by bands you wear.

Bands of the blood rage function three times per day.

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, rage, sorcerer or dragonblood subtype, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 1,300 gp, 104 XP, 3 days.

BARBS OF RETRIBUTION

Price (Item Level): 4,500 gp (9th)

Body Slot: Hands

Caster Level: 7th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 18) necromancy

Activation: Immediate (mental)

Weight: 1 lb.

These barbed chains are forged of reddish metal.

Each time you don barbs of retribution, they deal 1 point of damage to you.

This damage can't be healed as long as you wear these barbed hand wrappings.

When you activate barbs of retribution and sacrifice a sorcerer spell slot of 2nd level or higher, you can force an enemy within 30 feet to reroll a saving throw that just succeeded, with a penalty equal to half the level of the spell sacrificed.

This effect manifests as a stream of arcane energy flowing from your hands toward the target.

If you have the dragonblood subtype (see Races of the Dragon or Dragon Magic), you can instead sacrifice your own hit points when activating the barbs.

You must sacrifice at least 5 hit points, and the rerolled save is made with a penalty equal to -1 per 5 hit points expended (maximum -5 for 25 hit points spent).

This effect manifests as a stream of fiery blood flowing from your hands toward the target.

Barbs of retribution function once per day.

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, bestow curse, sorcerer or dragonblood subtype, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 2,250 gp, 180 XP, 5 days.

BLOOD CLAW CHOKER

Price (Item Level): 12,000 gp (13th)

Body Slot: Throat

Caster Level: 12th

Aura: Strong; (DC 21) necromancy and transmutation

Activation: — and swift (mental)

Weight: —

This unusual device appears to be some sort of amulet worn as a choker necklace.

However, sharp barbs point inward, and look capable of shredding muscle and flesh.

Each time you don a blood claw choker, it deals 1 point of damage to you.

This damage can't be healed as long as you wear the item.

A blood claw choker grants you a +2 enhancement bonus to your Constitution score.

This effect functions continuously.

In addition, when you activate a blood claw choker, you regain any one sorcerer spell slot that you have already used today (up to a maximum of 5th level).

The slot becomes available as if you had never cast a spell of that level.

At the time you activate it, the choker deals damage to you equal to twice the level of the spell slot regained.

This ability functions twice per day.

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, bear's endurance, vampiric touch, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 6,000 gp, 480 XP, 12 days.

RAIMENT OF THE FOUR

The items of the raiment of the four are energized by the four cornerstones of the world: earth, sky, sea, and sun.

When you don pieces of the four, you become more attuned with reality itself, even gaining a measure of control over it.

Individual items from the raiment are useful to any character, and the entire set is particularly useful for druids, rangers, and any other spellcasters who travel to difficult, dangerous places.

LORE

Characters who have ranks in Knowledge (arcana) or Knowledge (nature), or who have the bardic knowledge ability, can research the raiment of the four to learn more about these items.

When a character succeeds on a check, the following lore is revealed, including the information from lower DCs.

DC 15: A charismatic druid named Alain made his home in the village of Ra'anán.

The village was the target of various natural disasters—droughts, floods, tornados, and more.

Alain was able to fend off many of these disasters because of his bond with nature.

One night a vision came to him, instructing him in the methods to create a set of magic items tied to the earth, sky, sea, and sun.

Following the instructions from his vision, Alain traveled to the four corners of the world to gather the necessary components for each item.

Once constructed, the raiment of the four aided Alain in his exploits, which eventually expanded beyond the small village in which he was born.

With the raiment he could travel safely through deadly areas of the world, and survive once there.

Alain traveled the worlds for the rest of his days, never again returning to Ra'anán.

DC 20: Alain's spirit is said to be drawn to pieces of the raiment.

If all four pieces are brought together, Alain's spirit can communicate with the wearer, imparting secrets of the multiverse.

DC 25: The orc shaman Grotarb the Sly once wore the raiment of the four, but only briefly.

The orcs of Grotarb's tribe heard strange cries in the night from the shaman's private cavern.

The next day, the orcs of the tribe found the drowned, burned, and partly dismembered body of their shaman, but no pieces of the raiment.

It's said to this day that Grotarb's dark spirit is sometimes drawn to those who find two or more pieces of the raiment, hoping to visit upon them the same harm that the great spiritual force visited upon him.

DC 30: A check result of 30 or higher reveals the location of another piece of the set.

Use this to drive further adventure and direct the PCs toward some location or story you would like them to explore.

RAIMENT OF THE FOUR PIECES AND ABILITIES

Piece	Body Slot	Price (Level)	Ability
Gloves of the starry sky	Hands	1,100 gp (4th)	Emit light ; 3/day spontaneously cast magic missile
Goggles of the golden sun	Face	4,000 gp (8th)	Immune to blindness, dazzling; 3/day spontaneously cast fireball
Periapt of the sullen sea	Throat	6,000 gp (10th)	Hold breath 12 hours; 2/day spontaneously cast freedom of movement
Belt of the wide earth	Waist	8,000 gp (11th)	Carrying capacity doubled; 2/day spontaneously cast teleport

RAIMENT OF THE FOUR COLLECTION BENEFITS

Pieces Worn	Benefit
2 pieces	Resistance to cold 5
3 pieces	Resistance to cold 5, electricity 5
4 pieces	Resistance to cold 5, electricity 5, and fire 5; 1/day commune (4 questions)

BELT OF THE WIDE EARTH

Price (Item Level): 8,000 gp (11th)

Body Slot: Waist

Caster Level: 9th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 19) conjuration

Activation: — and standard (mental)

Weight: —

Made of thick leather, this belt is covered in cracks and fissures reminiscent of dry earth and fastened by a large, obsidian buckle.

While wearing a belt of the wide earth, your carrying capacity is doubled.

This is a continuous effect and requires no activation.

In addition, two times per day you can activate the belt and sacrifice a prepared spell or spell slot of 5th level or higher to use teleport (as the spell), using your own caster level or that of the belt, whichever is higher.

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, teleport, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 4,000 gp, 320 XP, 8 days.

GLOVES OF THE STARRY SKY

Price (Item Level): 1,100 gp (4th)

Body Slot: Hands

Caster Level: 3rd

COLLECTION BENEFITS

Wearing multiple pieces of the raiment of the four grants you an increasing number of protections derived from aspects of the sky, sun, sea, and earth.

When you wear all four parts and use a belt of the wide earth to teleport, it seems as if a pillar of fire strikes down from the sky to engulf you (and anyone else being transported). When the flame dissipates, the travelers are gone.

2 Pieces: You gain resistance to cold 5; this stacks with any similar resistances you have from your race, class, or template.

3 Pieces: You gain resistance to cold 5 and electricity 5, which stacks as described above.

4 Pieces: You gain resistance to cold 5, electricity 5, and fire 5, which stacks as described above.

Once per day, you can ask four questions of the spirit of the druid Alain, as the commune spell (CL 9th), but using this ability negates the energy resistances granted by the raiment until the next sunrise.

Aura: Faint; (DC 15) evocation

Activation: — and standard (mental)

Weight: —

These supple gloves are velvet black.

In their darkness, stars seem to swim.

While wearing gloves of the starry sky, you emit a bright, silvery radiance equivalent to a light spell.

You can douse or renew this light with a standard (mental) action.

In addition, three times per day you can activate these gloves and sacrifice a prepared spell or spell slot of 1st level or higher to use magic missile (as the spell), using your own caster level rather than that of the gloves.

The missiles created by the gloves appear as a series of tiny falling stars.

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, magic missile, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 550 gp, 44 XP, 2 days.

GOGGLES OF THE GOLDEN SUN

Price (Item Level): 4,000 gp (8th)

Body Slot: Face

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) evocation

Activation: — and standard (mental)

Weight: —

The reflective gold lenses of these goggles are gripped in thick midnight blue steel wrapped in leather.

While wearing goggles of the golden sun, you are immune to blindness and dazzling effects.

This is a continuous effect and requires no activation.

In addition, three times per day you can activate these goggles and sacrifice a prepared spell or spell slot of 3rd level or higher to use fireball (as the spell; Reflex DC 14 half), using your own caster level or that of the goggles, whichever is higher.

The fireball created by the gloves resembles a hurtling, exploding comet.

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, fireball, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 2,000 gp, 160 XP, 4 days.

PERIAPT OF THE SULLEN SEA

Price (Item Level): 6,000 gp (10th)

Body Slot: Throat

Caster Level: 7th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 18) abjuration

Activation: — and standard (mental)

Weight: —

This sea-blue gem seems to shiver and flow, as a drop of seawater barely able to maintain its shape.

While wearing a periapt of the sullen sea, you can hold your breath for up to 12 hours before having to make Constitution checks.

This is a continuous effect and requires no activation.

In addition, two times per day you can activate the periapt and sacrifice a prepared spell or spell slot of 4th level or higher to use freedom of movement (as the spell), using your own caster level or that of the periapt, whichever is higher.

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, freedom of movement, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 3,000 gp, 240 XP, 6 days.

RAIMENT OF THE STORMWALKER

To wear the raiment of the stormwalker is to become the storm.

With it, you can travel on the thunderclouds and strike at foes like lightning.

Cloaked in clouds, booming like thunder, and crackling with electricity, you become a tempest.

The raiment of the stormwalker works best in the hands of a monk, druid, or other character who enters melee but prefers not to wear armor.

In particular, a druid should consider the items of this set, as its powers are available while in wild shape.

However, a character of any class should consider collecting at least two pieces of the set to gain some of the raiment's lesser collection benefits and the abilities of the desired items.

LORE

Characters who have ranks in Knowledge (arcana) or Knowledge (nature), or who have the bardic knowledge ability, can research the raiment of the stormwalker to learn more about these items.

When a character succeeds on a check, the following lore is revealed, including the information from lower DCs.

DC 15: The first Stormwalker was a half-orc druid.

Unwelcome in the societies of both parents, he learned to live in the wilderness.

The seasons were his teachers, and the beasts his family.

The half-orc brought the rains to wash away his father's village and a lightning strike to consume his mother's home.

Then he took the storm as his symbol and came to be known as the Stormwalker.

He crafted the first raiment of the stormwalker for himself, and since his death, the secrets of its creation and the title of Stormwalker have been passed on to others.

DC 20: The first Stormwalker was killed by his half-sister in revenge for his deadly attack on their human mother's home.

She was killed out of vengeance as well, dying at the hands of the Stormwalker's orc father, who desired the power of his son's creations.

The secrets of the raiment thus passed into the possession of both orcs and humans, and now druids of both races claim the Stormwalker title, crafting items with the same name.

DC 25: An inescapable vortex of vengeance seems to follow those who wear the whole raiment.

No curse can be detected on the items, but putting on the whole raiment and becoming one of the Stormwalkers always seems a harbinger of trouble to come.

Old enemies return and the wearer soon finds that once-fast friends become foes.

DC 30: A check result of 30 or higher reveals the location of another piece of the set.

Use this to drive further adventure and direct the PCs toward some location or story you would like them to explore.

COLLECTION BENEFITS

Wearing multiple pieces of the raiment of the stormwalker gives you the power to create clouds, call down electricity from the sky, and laugh off lightning strikes.

When you wear the entire raiment of the stormwalker, the robe of thunder flashes with lightning that crackles across the other parts of the raiment.

All the collection benefits of the raiment function normally for and can be activated by a druid while in wild shape, even if the items have melded with her form and would otherwise be considered nonfunctional.

2 Pieces: You can use obscuring mist (CL 5th) as a standard (mental) action three times per day.

3 Pieces: You can use call lightning (CL 5th) as a standard (mental action) once per day.

4 Pieces: You take only half damage from electricity.

If such an attack allows a save for half damage, you instead take no damage on a successful save.

RAIMENT OF THE STORMWALKER PIECES AND ABILITIES

Body Piece	Slot	Price (Level)	Ability
Stormfire ring	Ring	4,000 (8th)	5/day faerie fire deals 1d6 damage/round for 5 rounds
Bracers of lightning	Arms	11,000 (13th)	Attacks deal +1d6 electricity damage
Robe of thunder	Body	38,000 (17th)	Take half or no damage from sonic attacks; deal 2d6 sonic damage to attackers
Cloudwalker anklets	Feet	50,000 (18th)	Continuous air walk

RAIMENT OF THE STORMWALKER COLLECTION BENEFITS

Pieces Worn	Benefit
2 pieces	3/day obscuring mist
3 pieces	1/day call lightning
4 pieces	Half or no damage from electricity

BRACERS OF LIGHTNING

Price (Item Level): 11,000 gp (13th)

Body Slot: Arms

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) evocation

Activation: Swift (mental)

Weight: 1 lb.

Each of these wide, faintly glowing bracers is made of four thin, rectangular quartz crystals joined by narrow silver bands.

A set of bracers of lightning allows you to charge your melee and ranged weapon attacks with electricity.

When you activate the bracers, they visibly crackle with electricity for 1 round.

During this time, your melee and ranged attacks gain the shock property (DMG 225).

Even your melee touch attacks deal this extra electricity damage.

A druid can activate this item while in wild shape.

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, call lightning, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 5,500 gp, 440 XP, 11 days.

CLOUDWALKER ANKLETS

Price (Item Level): 50,000 gp (18th)

Body Slot: Feet

Caster Level: 7th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 18) transmutation

Activation: —

Weight: —

Designed to go around the wearer's ankles, each of these bands consists of two half-circles of carved quartz joined by a silver hinge and clasp.

Cloudwalker anklets allow you to move through the air as if affected by an air walk spell.

A druid benefits from wearing this item even while in wild shape.

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, air walk, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 25,000 gp, 2,000 XP, 50 days.

ROBE OF THUNDER

Price (Item Level): 38,000 gp (17th)

Body Slot: Body

Caster Level: 13th

Aura: Strong; (DC 21) transmutation

Activation: — or standard (mental)

Weight: 1 lb.

This silk robe roils with the colors of storm clouds, constantly shifting in shade and hue.

While you wear a robe of thunder, you take only half damage from sonic attacks.

If such an attack allows a save for half damage, you instead take no damage with a successful save.

This is a continuous effect and requires no activation.

When activated, a robe of thunder surrounds you in an invisible, faintly rumbling aura of thunder that lasts for 5 rounds (Listen DC 10 to hear the aura).

This aura deals 2d6 points of sonic damage to any creature striking you with a natural attack or nonreach melee weapon.

This ability functions three times per day.

A druid benefits from wearing this item and can activate it even while in wild shape.

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, control weather, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 19,000 gp, 1,520 XP, 38 days.

REGALIA OF THE HERO

The three pieces of the regalia of the hero are excellent tools for inspiring trust in others.

The trappings aid their wearer by enabling him to aid others.

Through mere desire, the wearer can inspire trust and greatness, and pull victory from seemingly insurmountable odds.

The regalia of the hero is useful for a bard or a marshal (MH 11), or anyone who wants to motivate allies (or oneself) to greater heights of ability and increase his chance of success.

LORE

Characters who have ranks in Knowledge (arcana), or who have the bardic knowledge ability, can research the regalia of the hero to learn more about these items.

When a character succeeds on a check, the following lore is revealed, including the information from lower DCs.

DC 15: The three items of this set belonged to a courageous soldier named Reynard.

He sacrificed his life to allow his fellow soldiers to escape from an army of orcs.

Many believe that his sacrifice empowered the regalia, allowing them to inspire future generations.

DC 20: Bards fondly recall in song and prose the Coalition of the Bulwark, whose brave sacrifices enabled the defeat of a great orc invasion.

One of the great heroes of the war was a young soldier named Reynard Ellison.

Reynard served as an elite scout for the army, but his best talents lay elsewhere.

His songs were electrifying, his words calmed fears, and his very presence in combat seemed to steady the hands of his allies on their weapons.

During the war, Reynard conducted a raid into the heart of the orcs' offense.

The raid successfully discovered the orc's plans and codes, but before the raiders could retreat, the creatures mounted a fierce counterattack.

Reynard fought in the rear guard as they retreated, his encouraging shouts and skill with his blade allowing his fellow soldiers to escape.

Reynard, however, failed to return through the breach. While holding off the enemy, he was slain by the throng of orcs.

The pilfered plans and codes allowed the Coalition of the Bulwark to finally thwart the invasion.

In the aftermath, some of Reynard's items were recovered, including his helm, horn, and badge.

The intensity of Coalition members' thankfulness and remorse over Reynard's loss is said to have directly transfigured the items, creating the item set now called the regalia of the hero.

DC 25: The Coalition of the Bulwark persists yet, always vigilant to the possibility of another great orc invasion into civilized lands.

The Coalition seeks accomplished spies and adventurers to supplement their own patrols.

They occasionally send such groups into orc-infested wilderness to monitor the orcs and gauge the probability of a new leader arising who could pull their disparate tribes together.

Anyone applying at the Fortress of the Bulwark could be assigned such a mission, as well as given aid and assistance in the fulfillment of that mission.

DC 30: A check result of 30 or higher reveals the location of another piece of the set.

Use this to drive further adventure and direct the PCs toward some location or story you would like them to explore.

COLLECTION BENEFITS

Wearing multiple parts of the regalia of the hero awakens your ability to inspire and command others.

When you wear two items, your eyes sparkle with the clarity of conviction, and your posture straightens with confidence.

When you sound a horn of resilience while wearing the other two pieces, all three items flash with gold light, like the promise of sunrise chasing away night's dreary doubts.

2 Pieces: You can grant a single ally within 30 feet (other than yourself) a +5 insight bonus on a single attack, save, or skill check as an immediate (command) action.

This ability functions once per day.

3 Pieces: You use a standard (command) action to grant a single ally within 30 feet (other than you) an extra move action, taken immediately.

(If you have the marshal's grant move action class feature, this benefit instead affects all allies within 30 feet of you).

This ability functions once per day.

REGALIA OF THE HERO PIECES AND ABILITIES

Piece	Body Slot	Price (Level)	Ability
Badge of valor	Throat	1,200 gp (5th)	3/day allies gain +2 on saves against charm/fear, or increase inspire courage bonus by 1
Helm of tactics	Head	2,000 gp (6th)	3/day allies deal +2 damage against flanked foes, or increase effect of minor aura by 1
Horn of resilience	— (held)	5,000 gp (9th)	2/day allies gain DR 5/—, or increase effect of major aura by 1, or grant 50 temporary hp

REGALIA OF THE HERO COLLECTION BENEFITS

Pieces Worn	Benefit
2 pieces	1/day grant nearby ally +5 on attack, save, or skill check
3 pieces	1/day grant nearby ally bonus move action

BADGE OF VALOR

Price (Item Level): 1,400 gp (5th)

Body Slot: Throat

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 17) abjuration

Activation: Immediate (mental)

Weight: —

This badge is stamped with the image of an impenetrable fortress over which shines a golden sun.

When you activate a badge of valor, you and all allies within 60 feet gain a +2 bonus on the next save you or they make against a charm or fear effect before the start of your next turn.

If you have the bardic music ability to inspire courage, you can activate a badge of valor to increase the bonus granted by that ability by 1 for the duration of its effect.

A badge of valor functions three times per day.

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, remove fear, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 700 gp, 56 XP, 2 days.

HELM OF TACTICS

Price (Item Level): 2,000 gp (6th)

Body Slot: Head

Caster Level: 7th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 18) transmutation

Activation: Swift (mental)

Weight: 1 lb.

This metallic helm is forged of a gray, strangely swirled iron alloy.

When you activate a helm of tactics, you and all allies within 60 feet gain a +2 bonus on melee weapon damage rolls against enemies that you or they are flanking.

This benefit lasts for 10 rounds, but allies who move more than 60 feet from you lose the benefit until they return within the area.

If you are a marshal, you can activate a helm of tactics to increase the effect of your minor aura by 1.

This effect lasts for 10 rounds.

A helm of tactics functions three times per day.

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, fox's cunning, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 1,000 gp, 80 XP, 2 days.

HORN OF RESILIENCE

Price (Item Level): 5,000 gp (9th)

Body Slot: — (held)

Caster Level: 8th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 19) enchantment

Activation: Standard (manipulated)

Weight: —

This bone horn is banded with a golden-hued iron alloy.

The image of an idealized fortress is scribed deeply in the horn's side.

When you activate a horn of resilience, you and all allies within 30 feet gain damage reduction 5/—.

This benefit lasts for 5 rounds, but allies who move more than 30 feet from you lose the benefit until they return within the area.

If you are a marshal, you can activate a horn of resilience to increase the effect of your major aura by 1.

This effect lasts for 5 rounds.

If you have the bardic music ability to inspire greatness, you can activate a horn of resilience to grant the target of that ability an extra 50 temporary hit points.

These hit points last until depleted or the duration of your inspire greatness ability ends, and they don't stack with any other source of temporary hit points.

A horn of resilience functions two times per day.

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, heroism, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 2,500 gp, 200 XP, 5 days.

REGALIA OF THE PHOENIX

Worn by royalty and borne by conquerors, the regalia of the phoenix has no equal among the magic crafted by humans or elves.

Individually, the pieces that make up the regalia are magic items of stunning beauty and reasonable power, but together they make you a commanding figure of flames, lending you the regal authority of the regalia's namesake and allowing you to stave off death time and again.

The regalia of the phoenix can be used to good effect by many characters, but sorcerers and warlocks (CAr 5) find it most useful.

Both kinds of characters rely on Charisma and can wield the talon scepter, a simple weapon.

Remember that you can use the rules in Chapter 6 to increase the benefit the items grant, so the +2 to Charisma granted by a crown of flames could become +4 or higher.

If you are a warlock or sorcerer who has a phoenix cloak, consider replacing any invocation or spell that grants you the ability to fly; you will benefit more from the item and the versatility of having access to a different effect that you can bring to bear on your foes.

LORE

Characters who have ranks in Knowledge (arcana), or who have the bardic knowledge ability, can research the regalia of the phoenix to learn more about these items.

When a character succeeds on a check, the following lore is revealed, including the information from lower DCs.

DC 15: The regalia of the phoenix sears its story into the mind of every ambitious noble who hears it.

It made its first fiery appearance in the possession of the Phoenix Queen, a sorcerer of tremendous power who took the throne of a long-forgotten kingdom by force.

Because the Phoenix Queen possessed all the elements of the regalia, she could not be defeated, and anyone who rose against her was burnt to a cinder.

After years of her vicious rule, a lover tricked her into removing her mask, pleading with her to see her face.

When she pulled the mask away, revealing a face of cold beauty untouched by remorse or sorrow, assassins rose from the shadows, and she fell beneath their many blades.

DC 20: After the assassins killed the Phoenix Queen, they quarreled over the regalia.

Only four survived, each taking a single piece.

Fearing attempts by the others to steal their pieces, they fled the kingdom, spreading knowledge of the regalia of the phoenix to foreign lands.

DC 25: The forgotten kingdom of legend was an elf empire, and some say that the Phoenix Queen's lover also survived the assassin's quarrel.

According to some, the lover was true to his pitiless mistress, and the assassins tricked him into asking the queen to remove her mask.

Rumors persist that this elf lives still, clutching to life despite his extreme age and the call of his ancestors, hanging on with the inhuman strength that only a thirst for vengeance can give.

It's said he seeks any who would dare profit from the assassins' foul deed by using any piece of the regalia or its copies.

When he finds them, he snuffs out their lives as calmly as one might blow out a candle.

DC 30: A check result of 30 or higher reveals the location of another piece of the set.

Use this to drive further adventure and direct the PCs toward some location or story you would like them to explore.

COLLECTION BENEFITS

Wearing parts of the regalia of the phoenix grants its owner protection from fire and even the immunity to flames that the legendary phoenixes enjoy.

When a creature wears all the pieces of the regalia of the phoenix and wields the talon scepter, all the items appear to transform into pure fire, and the phoenix cloak takes on the shape of fiery wings.

Should the user of the whole regalia fall in battle, her body seems to be consumed by that fire and then remade, whole and hale again, in a burst of ruby-colored light.

2 Pieces: When you are dealt fire damage, the set automatically provides you with resistance to fire 5 against that attack only.

This ability functions five times per day.

3 Pieces: When you are dealt fire damage, the set automatically provides you with immunity to fire against that attack only.

This ability functions five times per day.

Only after all five uses of this power are expended does the set's resistance to fire collection benefit (see above) function.

4 Pieces: The regalia automatically produces a heal effect (CL 11th) on you if you are reduced to 0 to -9 hit points.

This ability functions once per day.

REGALIA OF THE PHOENIX PIECES AND ABILITIES

Piece	Body Slot	Price (Level)	Ability
Raptor's mask	Face	3,500 gp (8th)	+5 on Spot checks; immunity to blindness and dazzling effects
Crown of flames	Head	8,500 gp (12th)	+2 Charisma; 1/day fire shield
Talon scepter	— (held)	10,305 gp (13th)	+1 flaming light mace; swift ray of fire deals 1d6 damage
Phoenix cloak	Shoulders	50,000 gp (18th)	Fly with perfect maneuverability at your land speed

REGALIA OF THE PHOENIX COLLECTION BENEFITS

Pieces Worn	Benefit
2 pieces	5/day resistance to fire 5
3 pieces	5/day immunity to fire
4 pieces	1/day heal automatically when you reach 0 to -9 hp

CROWN OF FLAMES

Price (Item Level): 8,500 gp (12th)

Body Slot: Head

Caster Level: 8th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 19) transmutation

Activation: — or immediate (mental)

Weight: —

The tines of this gem-encrusted crown are twisted and sharp, like a ring of flames frozen in gold.

A crown of flames continuously grants you a +2 enhancement bonus to Charisma.

In addition, once per day, it can be activated to surround you in a sheath of red flames that functions like a fire shield spell (warm only) lasting for 5 rounds.

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, eagle's splendor, fire shield, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 4,250 gp, 340 XP, 9 days.

PHOENIX CLOAK

Price (Item Level): 50,000 gp (18th)

Body Slot: Shoulders

Caster Level: 10th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 20) transmutation

Activation: —

Weight: 1 lb.

This cloak is made of incredibly fine gold chain.

Its exterior is covered in paper-thin feathers of solid gold and strewn with tiny rubies.

Despite its material, it feels almost as light as cloth and flows on the wind like silk.

A phoenix cloak grants you a fly speed equal to your land speed, with perfect maneuverability.

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, fly, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 25,000 gp, 2,000 XP, 50 days.

RAPTOR'S MASK

Price (Item Level): 3,500 gp (8th)

Body Slot: Face

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) divination

Activation: —

Weight: —

This golden half-mask has a large, sharp beak like that of an eagle and feathery flanges of gold that sweep away from the eyes.

Each eyehole is covered by a large ruby that gleams with an inner light.

A raptor's mask grants you a +5 bonus on Spot checks and renders you immune to effects that would leave you blinded or dazzled.

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, clairaudience/clairvoyance, glitterdust, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 1,750 gp, 140 XP, 4 days.

TALON SCEPTER

Price (Item Level): 10,305 gp (13th)

Body Slot: — (held)

Caster Level: 10th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 20) evocation

Activation: — or swift (mental)

Weight: 4 lb.

The head of this golden scepter is wrought in the shape of an eagle's claw.

The talons seem to be made of rubies, and a flame motif adorns the entire length of the item.

A talon scepter functions as a +1 flaming light mace.

In addition, you can activate the scepter to create a ruby-colored ray that extends up to 30 feet.

This requires a ranged touch attack and deals 1d6 points of fire damage.

Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, flame blade, flame strike, or fireball, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 5,000 gp (plus 305 gp for masterwork light mace), 400 XP, 10 days.

SEVEN VEILS

Bright and diaphanous, the seven veils are magic made physical.

Split from light by a god and sown onto the world like seeds, the veils represent the promise of power for wizards and other spellcasters.

Wizards get the most benefit from the seven veils.

Although any arcane spellcaster might benefit from some or all of the veils—and would appreciate the versatility granted by wearing the entire set together—a wizard typically has the greater variety of spells necessary to put the veils to best use.

Each of the seven veils corresponds to one of the colors that signify the various effects of a prismatic spell, such as prismatic eye (SC 161), prismatic mist (PH2 121), prismatic ray (SC 162), prismatic spray, and prismatic wall.

LORE

Characters who have ranks in Knowledge (arcana), or who have the bardic knowledge ability, can research the seven veils to learn more about these items.

When a character succeeds on a check, the following lore is revealed, including the information from lower DCs.

DC 15: It's said the first seven veils were drawn from a rainbow by Boccob himself.

The Lord of All Magics then let the veils fall to the earth, each fluttering down to a particular wizard.

The seven veils correspond to the seven colors of the rainbow and the seven colors created by spells such as prismatic wall.

Each veil grants an ability modeled after the effect of a color of a prismatic spell.

Each veil also guards its wearer from that color's effect if she is the subject of a prismatic spell.

DC 20: Three of the wizards who received one of the seven veils decided to craft their own sets, but four of them chose instead to try to claim the six veils Boccob gave the others. A series of battles ensued, and in the end two wizards possessed complete sets while the rest lay dead.

The extra pieces that had been created were left unclaimed, and so they fell into the hands of others.

DC 25: The two wizards who managed to claim full sets both became liches.

This turn of events is considered a coincidence by most, but some wonder if wearing all seven veils might somehow induce this state.

Those who concern themselves with such things wonder if Boccob truly created them, or if perhaps Wee Jas crafted them for some purpose of her own.

Both deities remain silent on the matter, and no one else is known to have worn a full set.

DC 30: A check result of 30 or higher reveals the location of another piece of the set.

Use this to drive further adventure and direct the PCs toward some location or story you would like them to explore.

COLLECTION BENEFITS

The veils are potent items that improve your magical versatility, giving you the resources to overcome any obstacle.

Wearing multiple veils improves your magical skill and focus, grants you resistance to some types of energy damage, and eventually allows you to treat the veils as a potent runestaff.

3 Pieces: You gain a +2 competence bonus on Concentration, Knowledge (arcana), and Spellcraft checks.

5 Pieces: You gain resistance 5 to acid, electricity, and fire.

7 Pieces: You can use the seven veils like a runestaff (see page 223) to cast cone of cold, daylight, disintegrate, dispel magic, gust of wind, magic missile, and passwall each once per day by spending your own arcane spell slots of equal or higher level.

SEVEN VEILS PIECES AND ABILITIES

Piece	Body Slot	Price (Level)	Ability
Burning veil	Head	1,000 gp (4th)	Immunity to red prismatic effect; 3/day deal 1d6 fire damage to foe already damaged by your fire spell
Caustic veil	Waist	2,000 gp (6th)	Immunity to orange prismatic effect; 3/day deal 2d6 acid damage to foe already damaged by your acid spell
Veil of storms	Torso	4,000 gp (8th)	Immunity to yellow prismatic effect; 3/day deal 4d6 electricity damage to foe already damaged by your electricity spell
Veil of whispers	Face	7,000 gp (11th)	Immunity to indigo prismatic effect; 3/day confuse creature already affected by your enchantment spell
Veil of doors	Shoulders	11,000 gp (13th)	Immunity to violet prismatic effect; 2/day dismiss creature damaged by your summoned creature
Serpent veil	Neck	16,000 gp (14th)	Immunity to green prismatic effect; 3/day poison target of your melee touch spell
Turquoise veil	Eyes	22,000 gp (15th)	Immunity to blue prismatic effect; 1/day petrify creature already affected by your transmutation spell

SEVEN VEILS COLLECTION BENEFITS

Pieces Worn	Benefit
3 pieces	+2 Concentration, Knowledge (arcana), Spellcraft
5 pieces	Resistance to acid 5, electricity 5, and fire 5
7 pieces	Spontaneously cast cone of cold , daylight , disintegrate , dispel magic , gust of wind , magic missile , and passwall each 1/day

BURNING VEIL

Price (Item Level): 1,000 gp (4th)

Body Slot: Head

Caster Level: 3rd

Aura: Faint; (DC 16) evocation

Activation: — and swift (mental)

Weight: —

This silky red veil is laced with garnets.

It is meant to be pinned to the hair above the ears or tied about the head like a bandana.

Wearing a burning veil gives you immunity to the red effect of any prismatic spell.

This is a continuous effect and requires no activation.

When you activate a burning veil, it deals 1d6 points of fire damage to a single creature that has already taken fire damage from an arcane spell you cast in this round.

This ability functions three times per day.

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, burning hands, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 500 gp, 40 XP, 1 day.

CAUSTIC VEIL

Price (Item Level): 2,000 gp (6th)

Body Slot: Waist

Caster Level: 3rd

Aura: Faint; (DC 16) conjuration

Activation: — and swift (mental)

Weight: —

This orange silk veil can be worn as a sash, a belt, or a short skirt knotted at one hip.

Wearing a caustic veil gives you immunity to the orange effect of any prismatic spell.

This is a continuous effect and requires no activation.

When you activate a caustic veil, it deals 2d6 points of acid damage to a single creature that has already taken acid damage from an arcane spell you cast in this round.

This functions three times per day.

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, Melf's acid arrow, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 1,000 gp, 80 XP, 2 days.

SERPENT VEIL

Price (Item Level): 16,000 gp (14th)

Body Slot: Throat

Caster Level: 11th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 20) necromancy

Activation: — and swift (mental)

Weight: —

Green reticulation covers this veil, and emerald serpent heads weight the corners.

Wearing a serpent veil gives you immunity to the green effect of any prismatic spell.

This is a continuous effect and requires no activation.

When you activate a serpent veil, it poisons a single creature affected by an arcane melee touch spell you cast previously in this round.

The initial and secondary damage of the poison is 5d10 points of damage (Fort DC 20 negates).

This ability functions three times per day.

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, circle of death, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 8,000 gp, 640 XP, 16 days.

TURQUOISE VEIL

Price (Item Level): 22,000 gp (15th)

Body Slot: Face

Caster Level: 11th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 20) transmutation

Activation: — and swift (mental)

Weight: —

Waves of aquamarine and turquoise ripple in the gauzy fabric of this finely crafted veil meant to be worn over the eyes.

Wearing a turquoise veil gives you immunity to the blue effect of any prismatic spell.

This is a continuous effect and requires no activation.

When you activate a turquoise veil, it turns to stone (as the flesh to stone spell) a single creature within 30 feet that failed a save against an arcane transmutation spell you cast in this round (Fort DC 20 negates).

This ability functions once per day.

A turquoise veil can be worn concurrently with a veil of whispers, but not with any other item for the face slot.

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, flesh to stone, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 11,000 gp, 880 XP, 22 days.

VEIL OF DOORS

Price (Item Level): 11,000 gp (13th)

Body Slot: Shoulders

Caster Level: 9th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 19) abjuration

Activation: — and swift (mental)

Weight: —

Dark purple like a day-old bruise, this veil is far heavier than any gauze of silk should be.

Wearing a veil of doors gives you immunity to the violet effect of any prismatic spell.

This is a continuous effect and requires no activation.

When you activate a veil of doors, it magically dismisses (as the dismissal spell; Will DC 27 minus creature's HD negates) a single extraplanar creature within 30 feet of you that was damaged in this round by a creature you summoned or called with an arcane conjuration spell.

This ability functions two times per day.

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, dismissal, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 5,500 gp, 440 XP, 11 days.

VEIL OF STORMS

Price (Item Level): 4,000 gp (8th)

Body Slot: Torso

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) evocation

Activation: — and swift (mental)

Weight: —

This tapestrylike veil is the color of a pastoral sunrise.

Wearing a veil of storms gives you immunity to the yellow effect of any prismatic spell.

This is a continuous effect and requires no activation.

When you activate a veil of storms, it darkens in color to that of an angry storm with leaden clouds marked by white-gold lightning.

It deals 4d6 points of electricity damage to a single creature that has already taken electricity damage from an arcane spell you cast in this round.

This effect functions three times per day.

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, lightning bolt, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 2,000 gp, 160 XP, 4 days.

VEIL OF WHISPERS

Price (Item Level): 7,000 gp (11th)

Body Slot: Face

Caster Level: 7th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 18) enchantment

Activation: — and swift (mental)

Weight: —

This thin mesh veil is scarcely more than a cloud of indigo mist.

Wearing a veil of whispers gives you immunity to the indigo effect of any prismatic spell.

This is a continuous effect and requires no activation.

When you activate a veil of whispers, it renders confused a single creature within 30 feet that failed its save against an arcane enchantment spell you cast in this round (Will DC 20 negates).

This effect lasts for 2 rounds and functions three times per day.

A veil of whispers can be worn concurrently with a turquoise veil, but not with any other item for the face slot.

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, confusion, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 3,500 gp, 280 XP, 7 days.

VESTMENTS OF DIVINITY

The vestments of divinity are a set of hallowed items that allow you to deny sin, wage war against evil, and put an end to malevolence wherever it is found.

The vestments of divinity are most useful if you are a good-aligned cleric or a paladin, since they enhance your divine abilities to combat evil and destroy undead.

However, any character can appreciate the benefits of at least some of the items in this set.

LORE

Characters who have ranks in Knowledge (arcana) or Knowledge (religion), or who have the bardic knowledge ability, can research the vestments of divinity to learn more about these items.

When a character succeeds on a check, the following lore is revealed, including the information from lower DCs.

DC 15: The vestments of divinity were revealed to a holy man named Reesh N'Faeren in a vision.

He spent years tracking down each sacred relic until he gathered them all.

DC 20: When Reesh N'Faeren was a child, his village was terrorized by flail-wielding cultists calling themselves the Heralds of Hell.

The cult was eventually driven off, but not before Reesh's family was taken from him.

Reesh was spared, but he grew into an adult with an unflinching hatred of all those unaligned with his own sense of righteousness.

His purity of purpose was given expression in the temple where he began training as a cleric.

One night, while still an acolyte, Reesh received a vision, imparting to him vague knowledge concerning the location of five sacred relics.

He was given to understand that if he gathered all the items together, he could use them to destroy the Heralds of Hell.

Reesh spent years adventuring, following treasure maps, tracking leads, and following up clues, until he finally located all the items his vision had shown him years before.

With these vestments, Reesh set out to fulfill the penultimate quest of his life.

Whether he succeeded or ultimately failed, history does not record.

DC 25: A group of destruction worshipers called the Heralds of Hell has cells in several large cities.

The Heralds utilize both devils and undead in their destructive rites.

Some time back, several of their cells were eradicated by a holy vigilante.

It's unclear whether this vigilante was Reesh N'Faeren himself, or someone to whom Reesh passed along his vestments.

Ultimately, a few cells escaped destruction, and the vigilante disappeared.

It is whispered that he was killed in a conflict with the cult, and that the cells of the Heralds that remained each took one of the vestments, hoping to ensure that no one could gather them all together again.

DC 30: A check result of 30 or higher reveals the location of another piece of the set.

Use this to drive further adventure and direct the PCs toward some location or story you would like them to explore.

COLLECTION BENEFITS

Wearing the vestments of divinity grants you powers that bolster your ability to battle evil creatures, from a stronger resolve against their attacks to a stronger resistance against their machinations.

With each new item added, you gain additional divine confidence.

When all five pieces are worn together, your body takes on a silvery sheen, and your eyes become the color of glowing aquamarine.

2 Pieces: You gain a +1 sacred bonus on saves against effects created by evil creatures.

5 Pieces: Your melee attacks deal an extra 1d6 points of damage to evil creatures.

VESTMENTS OF DIVINITY PIECES AND ABILITIES

Piece	Body Slot	Price (Level)	Ability
Ephod of authority	Torso	800 gp (3rd)	Turn undead as if 1 level higher
Lenses of revelation	Face	1,400 gp (5th)	Reveal foe as undead or evil outsider
Cord of favor	Waist	3,000 gp (7th)	+5 on Sense Motive; 3/day divine favor
Badge of glory	Throat	3,400 gp (8th)	2/day deal +1 damage/2 levels to evil creature
Phylactery of virtue	Head	6,500 gp (10th)	+2 on saves against energy drain, death effects, and negative energy effects; 2/day death ward

VESTMENTS OF DIVINITY COLLECTION BENEFITS

Pieces Worn	Benefit
2 pieces	+1 on saves against evil creatures
5 pieces	+1d6 melee damage to evil creatures

BADGE OF GLORY

Price (Item Level): 3,400 gp (8th)

Body Slot: Throat

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) transmutation

Activation: Swift (command)

Weight: 1 lb.

This ornate platinum badge is set with two large cabochon aquamarines.

When you activate a badge of glory, the next melee attack you make on the same turn against an evil creature deals an extra 1 point of damage per two character levels.

A badge of glory functions two times per day.

If you have the smite evil class feature, the extra damage granted by a badge of glory is instead equal to that granted by your smite evil ability (or 1 point per two levels, whichever is greater).

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, ability to smite evil, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 1,700 gp, 136 XP, 4 days.

CORD OF FAVOR

Price (Item Level): 3,000 gp (7th)

Body Slot: Waist

Caster Level: 6th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 18) evocation

Activation: — and standard (command)

Weight: 1 lb.

This silver cord is worn about the body as a belt.

A cord of favor grants you a +5 competence bonus on Sense Motive checks.

This is a continuous effect and requires no activation.

In addition, three times per day you can activate the cord and sacrifice a prepared divine spell or divine spell slot of 1st level or higher to use divine favor (as the spell), using your own caster level or that of the cord, whichever is higher.

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, divine favor, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 1,500 gp, 120 XP, 3 days.

EPHOD OF AUTHORITY

Price (Item Level): 800 gp (3rd)

Body Slot: Torso

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) necromancy

Activation: —

Weight: 2 lb.

This silver vestment is set with a circle of nine semiprecious gemstones surrounding a raised, silver hemisphere.

While wearing an ephod of authority, your effective cleric level is treated as one higher than your actual level for the purpose of turning (but not rebuking or commanding) undead.

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, turn undead, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 400 gp, 32 XP, 1 day.

LENSES OF REVELATION

Price (Item Level): 1,400 gp (5th)

Body Slot: Face

Caster Level: 5th

Aura: Faint; (DC 17) divination

Activation: Standard (mental)

Weight: —

These two small, concave glass discs have a translucent silver sheen to them.

You can activate lenses of revelation to perceive the true nature of any creature in sight.

Activating the lenses creates a faint aura for 1 round around the target creature (visible only to you) of a particular color based on its nature:

Evil Outsider: Red.

Undead: Bone-white.

Any Other: Green.

Any effect that would defeat a detect evil spell or effect also masks a creature from lenses of revelation.

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, augury, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 700 gp, 56 XP, 2 days.

PHYLACTERY OF VIRTUE

Price (Item Level): 6,500 gp (10th)

Body Slot: Head

Caster Level: 7th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 18) necromancy

Activation: — and standard (command)

Weight: —

This small black leather box attaches to two leather straps worn around the brow.

Inside the box is a parchment of sacred prayers.

A phylactery of virtue allows you to better resist the life-draining powers wielded by minions of undeath.

You gain a +2 morale bonus on saves against energy drain, death effects, and negative energy effects (such as inflict spells or chill touch).

This is a continuous effect and requires no activation.

In addition, two times per day you can activate the phylactery and sacrifice a prepared divine spell or divine spell slot of 4th level or higher to use death ward (as the spell), using your own caster level or that of the phylactery, whichever is higher.

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, death ward, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 3,250 gp, 260 XP, 7 days.

WRAITH'S WOE

The items that make up the wraith's woe live up to the name, making you a deadly enemy both to spirits and the walking dead.

However, although they were constructed to battle undead, the items in the set are useful in encounters with a variety of creatures, both living and unliving.

Wizards, sorcerers, and other spellcasters who have poor Fortitude saves likely benefit from this set the most, since they are in more danger from the necromantic powers typically possessed by undead.

Also, level drain reduces a spellcaster's effectiveness dramatically, whereas a fighter or other character focused on physical attacks can likely still get by even with the penalties of negative levels.

Finally, gauntlets of ghost fighting offer a rare opportunity for spellcasters to affect incorporeal foes normally.

A set of the wraith's woe makes a good investment for any character preparing to face undead.

The relatively low prices of the items make purchasing particular pieces an option even for a low-level party.

You might consider having a few characters purchase the different pieces of wraith's woe and then having the PC who suffers the most from the attacks of undead put on all the items to restore ability damage and drain.

LORE

Characters who have ranks in Knowledge (arcana) or Knowledge (religion), or who have the bardic knowledge ability, can research the wraith's woe to learn more about these items.

When a character succeeds on a check, the following lore is revealed, including the information from lower DCs.

DC 15: The first example of this set was created over a century ago by a human mystic theurge who devoted herself to hunting undead after her family was slain by wraiths.

This mystic theurge founded a holy order devoted to battling undead and created sets of the wraith's woe for those who joined her quest.

Members of this order had to earn items from these sets by slaying a sufficient number of undead while also adhering to the order's ideals of bravery, self-sacrifice, and compassion for innocent mortals.

DC 20: The order, known as the Blades Against Death, still exists.

Composed mainly of paladins and clerics, the order sponsors adventurers of every stripe in quests against undead.

Adventurers who perform well are often offered membership in the organization and granted pieces of the wraith's woe, much as the order's founder rewarded the original members.

Being a member has other benefits, since Blades Against Death has decades of experience confronting undead, and its members have learned much during that time that can aid those who share their cause.

DC 25: High-ranking members of the Blades Against Death have been heard to speak of the order's founder as though she still lives and speaks to them.

If it's true, she must be undead herself, for no human could live so long.

Those who openly suggest this possibility are labeled blasphemers by the Blades Against Death and exiled from the order.

Such individuals are then never seen again, leading some to think that the Blades Against Death is capturing or killing these ex-members.

Of course, to suggest such or question the order about how it handles blasphemers causes a member to be labeled a blasphemer, a fate all members take great pains to avoid.

DC 30: A check result of 30 or higher reveals the location of another piece of the set.

Use this to drive further adventure and direct the PCs toward some location or story you would like them to explore.

COLLECTION BENEFITS

Wearing two pieces of the wraith's woe grants you the ability to know where undead hide and to pierce their disguises. Wearing the whole set also allows you to undo the effects of encounters with undead that damage or drain ability scores.

A character wearing all of the wraith's woe takes on a haunted and pale appearance.

"You look like you've seen a ghost" is commonly heard by those who regularly dress in all three pieces.

2 Pieces: You can activate detect undead (CL 3rd) as a standard (mental) action at will.

3 Pieces: You can activate wraith's woe as a standard (mental) action to cure all ability damage you have, as well as restore all points drained from a single ability score of your choice. This ability can be used once per day.

WRAITH'S WOE PIECES AND ABILITIES

Piece	Body Slot	Price (Level)	Ability
Choker of life protection	Throat	14,000 (14th)	+2 AC against undead; protection from 3 negative levels/day
Gauntlets of ghost fighting	Hands	4,000 (8th)	Ignore incorporeal miss chance; +1d6 melee damage against incorporeal creatures
Shirt of wraith stalking	Torso	6,000 (10th)	Hide from undead

WRAITH'S WOE COLLECTION BENEFITS

Pieces Worn	Benefit
2 pieces	Detect undead
3 pieces	1/day cure all your ability damage plus drain on one ability

CHOKER OF LIFE PROTECTION

Price (Item Level): 14,000 gp (14th)

Body Slot: Throat

Caster Level: 7th

Aura: Moderate; (DC 18) conjuration

Activation: — or immediate (mental)

Weight: —

This slim black leather collar is set with three golden stones the size of small grapes.

As long as a collar of life protection can still protect you as described below, you gain a +2 dodge bonus to Armor Class against the attacks of undead.

A choker of life protection also protects you from energy drain attacks.

When you would normally gain up to three negative levels, you can activate the choker to negate the negative levels.

A choker can negate three negative levels per day, so it can be used three times to negate one negative level with each activation, once to negate three negative levels all at once, and so on.

Each negative level prevented renders one of the collar's three stones gray and dull.

Every day at dawn, all three stones automatically dissipate the collected negative energy and once again become golden.

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, restoration, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 7,000 gp, 560 XP, 14 days.

GAUNTLETS OF GHOST FIGHTING

Price (Item Level): 4,000 gp (8th)

Body Slot: Hands

Caster Level: 13th

Aura: Strong; (DC 21) conjuration

Activation: —

Weight: 1 lb.

This pair of heavy, black leather gloves bears suns and skulls of gold on the knuckles and around each wrist.

The wearer of gauntlets of ghost fighting deals damage normally to incorporeal creatures with spells or attacks, ignoring an incorporeal creature's 50% miss chance. In addition, melee attacks made by the wearer deal an extra 1d6 points of damage against incorporeal foes.

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, plane shift, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 2,000 gp, 160 XP, 4 days.

SHIRT OF WRAITH STALKING

Price (Item Level): 6,000 gp (10th)

Body Slot: Torso

Caster Level: 3rd

Aura: Faint; (DC 16) abjuration

Activation: Standard (mental)

Weight: 1 lb.

This shiny black leather shirt bears small golden sun and skull emblems around its collar, shoulders, and cuffs.

When you activate a shirt of wraith stalking, you gain the benefit of a hide from undead spell at will, except that undead are not allowed a saving throw regardless of their Intelligence.

Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, hide from undead, possession of a piece of the set.

Cost to Create: 3,000 gp, 240 XP, 6 days.

ITEM SPECIAL ABILITIES

SAVAGE SPECIES (3.0)

GHOST TOUCH

Just as magic armor, shields, and weapons can be imbued with the ghost touch special ability, so can rings, rods, staves, wands, wondrous items, and any permanent magic items.

Once specially enchanted, these items can be picked up, moved, carried, or worn by incorporeal creatures at any time.

However, this process does not grant these magic items the ability to affect corporeal or incorporeal targets, other than whatever effect the item normally provides.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Appropriate item creation feat for item type, plane shift; Market Price: Increase item cost by 10%.

COMPLETE SCOUNDREL (3.5)

GREEN AIR BRAMBLE

A creeping vine cultivated by many traveling druids and clerics of nature-loving deities, this fast-growing plant sprouts clusters of swampy green berries even in the harshest weather and most inhospitable climes.

Hardier than many plants, green air bramble requires very little water or soil, allowing it to be uprooted and transported for long stretches with ease, as long as it has a plentiful supply of fresh air.

However, it is particularly susceptible to poisons of all types.

If exposed to such toxins, its berries swiftly wrinkle, turning a bright yellow in the process, and its normally healthy, small green leaves and tendrils turn brown and contract.

This sensitivity makes the creeper a valuable first warning to travelers fearing toxins, and many green-thumbed adventurers carry staffs twined with green air bramble, or dangle lengths of it from their belts.

As long as you are carrying a length of green air bramble in a visible location, such as coiled around a staff or on your person, you gain a +2 bonus on Fortitude saves made to resist inhaled poisons and airborne sickening or nauseating effects, such as those created by a troglodyte's stench or a stinking cloud spell.

Green air bramble grants no benefit against sickening or nauseating effects that don't travel through the air, such as a cloaker's nauseating moan or the distraction caused by a swarm.

A 3-foot length of green air bramble is required to gain a benefit from the plant.

A length of the vine can be wrapped around a quarterstaff, polearm, longbow, or any similarly long-hafted weapon without reducing its effectiveness.

Long-lived as well as hardy, a green air bramble lasts indefinitely if planted in moist soil for 6 hours per week. Once it is exposed to poison, however, the vine dies.

GUT MITES

The cause of a common, painful affliction among gigantic creatures, the pests called gut mites have been the salvation of more than one unlucky monster hunter.

Each no bigger than a human's thumbnail, these white, fly-like parasites lay their eggs in the preferred food of large predators.

The grubs quickly hatch within a creature's stomach and feast on the liquefied food within—and, when that food runs out, the tender flesh of its host's gut.

One or two make their presence known within a host by merely a dull aching, but a swarm of gut mites can leave even the mightiest beast coiled in pain.

Harvested from the entrails of gigantic monsters, small swarms of these creatures are bottled and sold to those likely to encounter ravenous beasts.

A typical bottle contains some adult gut mites and a mass of squirming grubs in a nutrient goo.

It is a blessing to any character who has been swallowed whole.

If you open a flask of gut mites while you are within a monster's gizzard or stomach and pour out its ravenous contents, the grubs burrow into the tissue.

The monster immediately vomits up the contents of its stomach, including any swallowed creatures, and cannot use its swallow whole ability for 1d4 minutes.

A successful DC 20 Fortitude save negates this effect, and instead causes the swallowing creature to be sickened for 1d4 minutes.

Creatures immune to extra damage from critical hits are not affected by gut mites.

A flask of gut mites can be used only once.

The adults die within a day or two, while the grubs can survive for a week before their nutrient medium is depleted.

JABBERWEED

One of the few plants native to the Windswept Depths of Pandemonium, jabberweed is an ugly, tenacious root that looks something like a pocked, many-fingered, skeletal hand.

The countless holes that riddle jabberweed constantly gasp and wheeze, creating a low susurrus of background noise that is unnoticeable on the wind-scoured landscape of the plant's home plane.

Sprouts of jabberweed are sold wrapped in moist cloth.

While wrapped, the plant creates no noise.

Once unwrapped and exposed to air, it begins whispering, creating a low hissing audible out to 100 feet.

Creatures that succeed on a DC 15 Listen check notice the sound of the jabberweed as well as the direction of its source.

Regardless of whether any creatures notice the sound, all creatures within 100 feet of the plant take a -4 penalty on other Listen checks, since the noise disguises and muffles many minor sounds.

If retrieved and repacked in moist cloth, jabberweed can be used multiple times while it lives.

Jabberweed can survive for 1 week after being removed from its home plane.

You can attempt a DC 18 Knowledge (nature) check once per week to keep a sprout of jabberweed alive for that week.

The plant dies 1 week after a failed check.

PLANAR MOTES

Having some of the characteristics of plants and some of animals, planar motes are native to the Outer Planes.

They are wispy creatures, each about the size of a gold piece, resembling floating globules of plane-stuff.

Their shape and coloring vary wildly and reflect their native planes.

Planar motes from Arcadia, for example, look like large dandelion seeds, while those from Baator take the form of floating urchins spiked with metal barbs.

Largely harmless and seemingly unintelligent, planar motes are thought to be spontaneously generated by the planes themselves, although it is unclear for what purpose. Despite their strange nature and lack of Hit Dice, planar motes emit auras of moderate strength directly tied to the alignment of the plane they came from.

A planar mote from Bytopia, for example, has a moderate aura of good, while a mote from the Abyss has moderate auras of both chaos and evil (see Chapter 5 of the Dungeon Master's Guide for the alignments of the Outer Planes).

So concentrated is a planar mote's alignment aura that it can disguise your alignment while you carry it.

Any alignment-detecting spell detects the alignment of the mote, as long as it is more powerful than your own alignment aura (PH 219).

For example, a 12th-level lawful good warrior carrying a planar mote from Arborea (chaotic and good) would register as chaotic good, since his aura is weaker than that of the mote.

However, a 5th-level lawful evil cleric of Hextor carrying the same mote would register as lawful evil, because his aura is strong, overpowering the mote's.

A planar mote is not a magic item; it does not take up space on the body or radiate magic.

A planar mote functions only for the creature it is in closest contact with.

Relying on its home plane for survival, a planar mote fades away and vanishes 1 week + 1d6 days after being taken from its native plane.

A planar mote is destroyed if subjected to the spells banishment, dismissal, dispel chaos/evil/good/law (corresponding to the mote's alignment), or protection from chaos/evil/good/law (corresponding to the mote's alignment).

A planar mote can also be physically attacked.

It has hardness 1 and 5 hit points.

Planar motes fly at a speed of 10 feet with perfect maneuverability.

To gain one's effect, a user must contain it in some manner or risk having it escape.

A simple jar or box carried in the user's pack often suffices. Much more rare are greater planar motes, which shed strong alignment auras.

These more potent motes last for 1 month + 2d6 days after removal from their home plane, but otherwise function in the same way as normal planar motes.

RUST MONSTER WAND

The skittering larval young of rust monsters are just as insatiable as adults when it comes to ferrous metals.

Little more than 1 inch long and bristling with underdeveloped armor and appendages, these nuisances have the same rusting ability as mature rust monsters, their whip-like antennae ever probing for the touch of metal. Some clever thieves have figured out that these creatures can be helpful when carefully harnessed in a suitable container.

Such a container, commonly called a rust monster wand, is a 1-foot-long piece of glass tubing about 4 inches in diameter that contains about a dozen rust monster larvae. One end of the tube is sealed shut, and the other one is fitted with a two-layer wooden cap.

The outer layer of this top covers the wand's end; when closed, it prevents the larvae from touching anything outside the wand.

The inside layer is a thin latticework that keeps the immature aberrations inside the tube but allows their antennae to extend through the holes in the lattice. Uncapping the solid cover and running the tip of the wand across a metal surface allows the hungry young to slowly but effectively eat through metal objects or barriers.

The rust monster larvae in a wand can ruin a Large weapon or suit of armor (or a metal object of similar size) in 1 minute, a Medium weapon or suit of armor in 9 rounds, or a Small weapon or suit of armor in 6 rounds.

The wand is brittle and must be applied to a target rather delicately, so it cannot be used as a weapon.

The larvae within a rust monster wand can survive for about 2 months if given air (by opening the outer layer of the end cap) and fed the equivalent of five coins of metal (or more) per day.

If removed from the wand, individual larvae do not have the size or ability to do appreciable harm to metal equipment.

One of these creatures by itself has 1 hit point and can be crushed as a standard action.

TORCH BUG ITEMS

Common to plains and savannas, the sluggish torch bug looks like a bloated firefly.

The insect's bulbous abdomen, nearly the size of a child's fist, accounts for more than half its body.

When torch bugs are agitated, or during their lengthy mating season, their abdomens glow with a warm, yellow light.

Inhabitants of areas thick with torch bugs harvest the sluggish insects for a variety of purposes.

TORCH BUG PASTE

Bladders made from severed torch bug abdomens are sold for the strange mixture of chemicals that grant the insects their glow.

Each contains one application of the luminescent slime known as torch bug paste.

These bladders do not shed light, and the paste within does not begin glowing until exposed to air.

Torch bug paste can be applied to inanimate objects or living creatures.

One bladder contains enough paste to paint up to a 10-foot-square area; a full-round action is required per 5-foot square covered.

A treated area glows for 1 hour and sheds as much light as a torch (emanating bright light out to 20 feet and shadowy illumination for another 20 feet beyond that).

Torch bug paste makes a painted object highly visible, and it is often used as a temporary decoration or to mark targets in the dark.

It can be used to write short words or simple symbols, but these marks must be rather large, since the paste's glow obscures details.

A bladder of torch bug paste can also be thrown as a splash weapon (PH 158).

Treat this attack as a ranged touch attack with a range increment of 10 feet.

A bladder of torch bug paste bursts upon striking a firm surface, covering the target and every adjacent creature or item with the glowing chemical. Creatures struck by the paste are affected as if by a faerie fire spell for 1 hour. This effect is not magical and cannot be dispelled. Torch bug paste can be washed away from a creature or a 5-foot square as a full-round action but requires at least 1 gallon of water.

TORCH BUG TUBE

A torch bug tube is a 1-foot-long, sealed glass cylinder with ends capable of being unscrewed. Inside dwells a single adult torch bug. When the tube is shaken (a move action for any creature holding it), the insect inside becomes irritated and begins glowing. This glow sheds as much light as a torch (emanating bright light out to 20 feet and shadowy illumination for another 20 feet beyond that). The light begins to dim as the bug calms down and goes out after 3 minutes unless the tube is shaken again. A torch bug tube can be taken underwater without being extinguished and does not emanate a magical aura. A torch bug can glow for up to 1 hour a day, after which it must eat and rest; torch bugs must be fed daily (they eat mostly smaller insects), or they grow too weak to shed light and eventually die. In addition, the tube end must be unscrewed once per day to replenish the insect's air supply.

CHAMPIONS OF VALOR (3.5)

CAVE OF BROTHER LUIMAN

Nestled in the foothills of the Snowflake Mountains, shrouded by the canopy of Shilmistra, a small waterfall spills over the side of a low plateau and into a clear, inviting pool.

The pure spring water trickles forth from a small cave atop the plateau, its mouth hidden by low scrub brush and overhanging tree branches.

This is the Cave of Brother Luiman, a hermit monk who dwelt here in solitude two centuries ago.

Few today know of the cave's location, and fewer still recognize the healing properties of both the cave and the accompanying pool.

History

Brother Luiman was a disciple of the Yielding Way, an order of monks dedicated to Eldath and devoted to peace and protection.

Like many of his order, Brother Luiman traveled the countryside, gathering information and spreading it elsewhere.

But in his youthful zealotry, he provoked a brawl with a gang of thugs who had been intimidating folk in Saradush. The fray quickly got out of hand, and when the dust had settled, a number of thugs and commoners alike lay dead or near death.

Seeing what he had allowed his own pride and arrogance to do, Brother Luiman fled the scene.

Unable to bear the guilt of what he had done, Brother Luiman retreated to a place of solitude, finding the cave and settling there to live for a time while he contemplated his own shortcomings.

He prayed to Eldath for guidance, but for a long time, no insight was forthcoming.

Brother Luiman was patient and repentant, though, and eventually, he received the means of his atonement in the form of a vision.

Eldath instructed the monk that he should seek out Glorilis Instala, a paladin of Tyr who was in need of succor and refuge, and return with her to the secret place where he had dwelt.

Unsure that he understood completely the purpose of his god's command, but trusting that the Quiet One was offering him that prayed-for chance at redemption, Brother Luiman set out in search of the woman.

He found Glorilis despondent and in her cups in a dockside tavern in Tethyr.

At first, she refused his offers of aid, but eventually the monk convinced the paladin to return with him.

For five tendays they spoke, and he learned of Glorilis's fall from grace.

He came to understand his purpose in bringing her there—it was to be Brother Luiman's duty to provide spiritual healing for folk of many faiths, not just his own. Armed with this insight, he began counseling the paladin onto a path of atonement.

He set before her several tasks, and instructed her to return to him once she had completed them.

When Glorilis did indeed return to the secret cave, Brother Luiman invited her to look into her own heart to see if she had been absolved of her crimes.

It seemed she had.

Guided by Eldath's visions, Brother Luiman aided many more fallen souls.

Each one was coaxed into visiting the cave, and each one received his guidance and inspiration before going out into the world once more, intent on seeking atonement.

And in each case, the healing and absolution was only complete upon the travelers' return to the cave.

Game Effects

Anyone approaching within 50 feet of the cave entrance feels an almost preternatural sense of peace and tranquility come over her.

This effect is essentially a permanent calm emotions spell (Will DC 27 negates).

It suppresses (but does not dispel) any morale bonuses granted by spells such as bless, good hope, and rage, as well as negating a bard's ability to inspire courage or a barbarian's rage ability.

It also suppresses any fear effects and removes the confused condition from all targets.

While within the affected area, a suppressed spell or effect has no effect, but it takes hold of the creature again once that creature leaves the area, provided that the duration has not expired in the meantime.

CHAPEL OF RESOUNDING JUSTICE

Southeast of Archenbridge in Sembia is a small fortified chapel to Tyr, built in the middle of an open field in an otherwise unremarkable area.

It is a lesser-known pilgrimage site for those of the Tyrann faith, especially paladins, and for those who believe their lives are a worthy price to pay to maintain justice.

Measuring 60 feet on a side and just under 20 feet tall from the ground to its parapet walls, the chapel is simple mortar and stone, with an iron plaque of Tyr's hammer-and-scales holy symbol above the double-door entrance on the south face.

During the day a flagpole holds a Tyrran flag in blue and white.

The remarkable feature of this chapel is a statue in the courtyard of a large winged humanoid carved out of white marble veined with gold.

She stands with muscles tensed, greatsword held high in one hand, her other hand pointing down toward the earth, as if issuing a command or making a stern vow.

This statue is actually the petrified remains of Resounding Justice, a noble planetar in service to Tyr who gave her life to defeat Krysus Vaant, a blackguard of Gargauth, and his pit fiend ally known as Tenflames.

The site thrums with the power of Tyr, radiating outward from the statue to just beyond the outer corners of the chapel.

Like any place holy to Tyr, the chapel's keepers offer sanctuary and aid to Tyrrans in need, though they are a small garrison and prefer that military assistance from the church come from one of the larger temples in the nearby cities.

Any follower of Tyr is welcome to stay in the chapel for one night; the keepers welcome offers to help guard or improve the site from those skilled in war or craft.

History

In 1295 DR, a young Sembian noble of a minor house inherited his family's estate after an unfortunate boating accident.

This noble, Sterth Zelgarik, quickly squandered his family's money on lavish parties and expensive courtesans.

Faced with dwindling coffers and the prospect of actually having to work for a living, he became desperate, and when a clever follower of Gargauth approached him about a special business deal guaranteed to make him rich again, he accepted.

This sly priest led him by the nose through one misfortune after another, getting him to promise more and more to the outcast devil-god until Sterth owed Gargauth body and soul.

The deity reshaped him and gave him a new name, Krysus Vaant, and used him to terrorize political enemies and prick at the heels of good officials who refused to deal with his agents.

After dozens of offenses and blasphemies against the church of Tyr, the most powerful Tyrran priest in Saerloon petitioned his god to send a champion to defeat the vile blackguard.

Tyr sent Resounding Justice, a young planetar of auspicious lineage, to deal with Krysus Vaant.

The planetar found the Sembian noble outside of Archenbridge and harried him southward over the course of several days, as the blackguard used vile magic to speed his way or leave terrible casualties behind him that the angel was obligated to stop to help.

Eventually Resounding Justice managed to hold him in place with a spell and swooped in to put the man to the sword, but the blackguard had a blood pact with the pit fiend known as Tenflames, who appeared just as the planetar was about to smite the mortal.

Angel and devil battled and the pit fiend wore away at Resounding Justice.

Realizing she couldn't defeat her enemy with conventional means and knowing that Krysus Vaant would soon shake free of her spell, the planetar stood tall in the fading sunlight, pointed her sword at heaven, and sacrificed her own soul to power an incredible blast of white holy energy that engulfed the pit fiend and the blackguard, consuming them until nothing was left but a foul cloud of smoke that drifted away in the breeze (some in Sembia believe the smoke cloud still exists, bearing the minds of the pit fiend and blackguard, whispering dark secrets to those who listen in exchange for binding oaths).

Resounding Justice's supernatural flesh transformed to white marble veined with gold, and when members of her church found her a few days later by following the blackguard's path of destruction, they began to build a shrine at the site, praising her sacrifice in the name of Tyr and justice.

Game Effects

The statue radiates magic and gentle holy power.

Its effects fill a sphere just larger than the outermost corners of the chapel walls, though enemies of the chapel's defenders rarely see the benefit of its powers.

At night the statue gently glows with a blue-white light equivalent to a torch.

While in this temple, clerics of Tyr can prepare spells from the Good domain as if they had that domain.

Tyr's clerics who already have the Good domain can use nondomain spell slots to prepare spells from the Good domain.

Noncleric divine spellcasters can prepare spells from this domain as if they were on their spell list at the equivalent level of the Good domain (so a paladin could prepare holy smite using a 4th-level paladin spell slot).

These prepared spells remain prepared even after the caster leaves the chapel.

Anyone dying within the area automatically stabilizes without needing to make a stabilization check.

This ability does not prevent creatures from dying outright (such as from a wound bringing them to -10 or fewer hit points) or from other lethal effects such as poison or disease.

Any creature that rests here regains hit points as if it were under the long-term care of someone with the Heal skill.

CULLRIN FIELDS

On a lonely, windswept plain, the ruins of an ancient structure slowly vanish beneath the shifting soil and the tall grasses of a single hill.

But a few sun-bleached columns still jut up from a cracking foundation, defying time.

Around the ruins, neat and orderly mounds protect them, angled like spear points out toward the open field beyond. This is Cullrin Fields, an ancient battle site in the Shaar that still holds the haunting memories of its long-dead soldiers.

History

In the Year of Spoiled Splendors (211 DR), a tribe of humans known as the Arkaiuns faced an onslaught of Untheric and Mulhorandi armies against their city of Shandaular, where the present-day Council Hills sit in the middle of the Eastern Shaar.

In an effort to repel the invading armies, the Arkaiuns built numerous outlying fortifications away from their city, where they hoped to be able to repel their northern enemies.

Cullrin Fields is the remains of one such outpost.

The Arkaiun army at Cullrin Fields was outnumbered and overmatched, and the outcome was truly never in doubt.

But the Arkaiuns knew this before they even arrayed for battle.

Their job was not to win, but to delay the enemy until the people of Shandaular could retreat.

The Arkaiuns took their positions behind the earthen ramparts, bows and spear gleaming in the sun.

Their battle-wizards flung spells at the advancing ranks of Untheric and Mulhorandi soldiers as the call of the clarions and the pipers inspired the Arkaiuns to hold their positions.

The soldiers defending their homeland fought valiantly but were soon overwhelmed.

The enemy from the north cut them down to a man as they fell back from their earthen ramparts, trying to make a final stand within the columned outpost.

At the end of the day, the land was soaked in blood and the city of Shandaular was ripe for the taking.

But the ghosts of the Arkaiun army would not be denied.

Though they had been defeated in battle, they would not surrender—to death or to the enemy.

Their spirits still haunt the ruins, ready to answer the call of the horns once more.

Game Effects

Whenever a bard character of good alignment is standing within the ruins (the shaded area 3 on the map) and uses his bardic music class ability to inspire courage, inspire greatness, or inspire heroics before a battle, he automatically summons a number of good-aligned ghosts (see the sample ghost on page 117 of the Monster Manual) that fight with him and his allies.

The number of ghosts that appear is equal to twice the bard's class level.

The ghosts remain until all the bard's enemies within 300 feet of the ruins are defeated or they are destroyed.

A bard can summon ghosts in this fashion at this location once per month.

DARKMAIDEN'S LEAP

In the northern reaches of the High Forest, southeast of Everlund, is a small clearing bearing a large gray stone with a flat top bearing a single left footprint the size of a drow woman's foot.

The clearing is free of undergrowth and is well trod with the passing of animal and humanoid footfalls.

Many folk camp here, not knowing the site's significance but liking its access to moonlight and easily defensible position at the top of the rock.

To those who know its power and history, the Darkmaiden's Leap is a sacred place to Eilistraee.

Though a holy place to the drow, its guardians are usually wood elves, grudging allies of the area's good-aligned drow in service to the Dark Maiden.

Depending on the time of year, visitors can find it empty or secretly watched.

History

For many centuries the stone bore no footprint and the area was known to the local people as Hastrin's Grayrock for an elf ranger who lived in the area and used the place as a waypoint and landmark for allies and visitors.

It had no special powers and was unremarkable save that the clearing was large enough to permit sunlight and moonlight to reach the forest floor in this place.

In 1358 DR the Time of Troubles shook the world, and many dark elves fled their cities for a time in the wake of wild magic, battling avatars, and with house wars unrestrained by the threat of opposing clerics.

A group of such drow were driven far from home by angry monsters and encounters with larger forces that whittled their numbers to just thirteen.

Disoriented and lacking anywhere else to go until the world settled on its foundations again, the drow followed the tunnel until it reached a wall of vines blocking entry to a larger area.

Cutting through the vines, the dark elves found themselves on the surface world, unable to see the bright moon overhead because of the dense foliage.

Hearing music, they investigated and found an old drow woman dancing at Hastrin's Grayrock, music coming out of the air itself with no obvious source.

Surprised and confused, the dark elves watched the old woman dance, fatigue and years marring the smoothness of her intended movements.

As the woman danced, she began to grow younger, gaining strength and suppleness, and slowly a vision of another drow woman, beautiful and ever young, appeared above the rock, leaping, singing, and shining with a great light. The first woman continued her dance upon the rock, and when she became as young as one who had just reached adulthood she began to fade away, still dancing with joy. The shining woman turned her attention to the Underdark drow, and her visage hearkened their hearts back to something ancient in their blood, a time before Lolth's corruption of their flesh and minds. They understood that they beheld a goddess, not someone terrible to be feared, but strong and loving and beautiful in a way that the Spider Queen could never be. In their hearts they converted to the worship of the Dark Maiden. Casting off their armor, they danced with her, and while they danced she spoke to them of other good drow, of safe places, and their constant fight against Lolth. They told her they wanted to live and die in her service, and she transported them to a safe place outside the Promenade, her temple near Skullport. Nine of these drow are still alive today serving Qilue at the Promenade; they try to return to Darkmaiden's Leap once a year to pray and dance (it was on their first such return trip that they found her footprint at the top of the rock). A few years later the drow found a small troop of wood elves at the site, surrounded by a large number of orcs from the Spine of the World. The drow aided the wood elves and managed (in broken Common) to establish a truce without any bloodshed between elfkind. Now the wood elves watch over the site for the drow, who use a set of hand signals to show they serve Eilistraee rather than one of the evil drow deities (though dancing in the moonlight is usually the first indicator of who they are).

The wood elves don't necessarily like the drow, but see that they aren't despoiling the forest or waging war on its nonevil creatures, so they tolerate the arrangement.

Game Effects

Eilistraee's magic lingers in this place, giving it three special powers that affect creatures within the clearing or touching the rock.

First, divine spellcasters who worship Lolth take a  $-1$  penalty to their caster level (minimum 1st).

Second, all creatures in the area gain low-light vision (the range of this improved vision extends beyond the edge of the clearing as long as the creature remains within the clearing).

Third, any drow who visits this place for 1 hour or more can change to good alignment and the worship of Eilistraee without penalty, as described in the atonement spell description and on page 232 of the FORGOTTEN REALMS Campaign Setting; undergoing this change fulfills the requirement of performing a quest for Eilistraee.

Darkmaiden's Leap is a planar touchstone, giving extra powers to characters who know how to attune themselves to such sites (see the sidebar for more information on planar touchstones and the effects of this particular touchstone).

The stone is the location of two keyed portals.

The first is a two-way portal that connects this area with a small side cavern near the Promenade; the key is a drow casting a moonbeam spell.

The second portal is one-way, and leads to Eilistraee's realm in the plane of Arvandor; the key is a drow casting a moon path spell.

When either portal is activated, the stone becomes the window of the portal and the portal glows (silver for the Promenade portal, green and silver for the Arvandor portal).

planar touchstones

Planar touchstones are special locations first described in Planar Handbook. Usually they are on other planes, but some have been found on the Material Plane that holds Faerûn. Canny travelers can attune themselves to one or more planar touchstones by using the Planar Touchstone feat (see Planar Handbook). Doing this gives a character a minor ability relating to that touchstone.

If the proper triggering conditions are met at the site of a touchstone (usually involving a ritual or sacrifice appropriate to the site or its creator), the traveler with the Planar Touchstone feat gains a more powerful ability that has a limited number of uses. The traveler can continue to return to any touchstone and reattune herself as often as she wants, as long as she performs the necessary recharging condition; doing this resets her number of uses of that touchstone's major ability to the default amount indicated for the touchstone. A traveler cannot increase her number of uses of a touchstone's major ability beyond this maximum by repeat visits; each visit returns her number of uses to the default amount, and no greater. There is no limit to the number of characters who can benefit from a touchstone's minor and major powers as long as they each take the Planar Touchstone feat.

A planar touchstone is usually an encounter site, since like-minded people gather there to protect the site from despoilers or hoard its powers for themselves. New visitors to a touchstone must battle or negotiate with any current residents, which may or may not be there if the traveler returns at a later date.

Initial Encounter: Roll on the Darkmaiden's Leap encounter table when the characters visit the site for the first time, or for the first time in over a year. The wood elf scouts are suspicious of everyone but more inclined to accept elves and half-elves. The drow pilgrims are most likely visitors from the Promenade. The drow raiders are non-Eilistraean drow investigating drow appearances in the area. The treant behaves much like the wood elves.

Darkmaiden's Leap Encounters (EL 7)

d%	Encounter
01–30	8 1st-level wood elf scouts
31–45	4 3rd-level drow pilgrims
46–55	6 1st-level drow raiders
56–70	3 owlbears
71–90	8 1st-level orc raiders
91–100	1 treant (EL 8)

Subsequent Encounters: Once the characters clear out the area or make peace with its guardians, on subsequent visits the chance of an encounter is 50%. If the PCs fail to visit the Leap for more than a year, they must roll for encounters as if they had never visited the site.

Base Ability: You gain low-light vision and a +2 bonus on Perform (dance) checks.

Recharge Condition: Perform a joyous dance for an hour in the moonlight (half-moon or more).

Higher-Order Ability: Once per day you can cast moon blade as though you were a cleric of your character level.

Higher-Order Uses: 5.

MHOLOR DURINHAL

Along one out-of-the-way passage running through the deep halls of the Great Rift is a smaller side passage that seems almost out of place.

Nothing marks the tunnel as significant—no carvings or signposts, no great valve or heavy portcullis to seal it off. Any folk choosing to follow the tunnel quickly find themselves on a narrow unadorned causeway crossing the middle of a great, yawning chasm.

Overhead, down below, and to either side, blackness stretches away seemingly forever.

The only indication that the bridge actually goes somewhere is straight ahead, where a towering, flat-topped outcropping of rock juts up.

This is Mholor Durinhal, a most sacred shrine to Clangeddin Silverbeard.

History

Mholor Durinhal sits in the middle of a great chasm that joins the upper reaches of the Underdark to the lowest levels of the Great Rift's subterranean passages.

If one were to survive the fall from the oval-shaped platform to the bottom of the chasm some 1,700 feet below, one would discover numerous passages and routes leading even further down into the bowels of the earth.

The far side and the ceiling of the natural fissure are both too distant to be seen by any normal means.

According to certain gold dwarf historical annals, the spit of rock jutting out into the yawning blackness once looked very different.

At one time, the approach to the point was broad and flat.

But the histories say a great paladin of Clangeddin Silverbeard named Felskal Frostdelve of the Misty Caverns made a valiant final stand on that point against a swarming horde of foul trolls that had invaded from the depths below. The histories only reveal that Felskal fell in battle, but the legends claim that he held his ground for four days while a practically endless stream of the nasty beasts clawed and clambered up the sides of the outcropping of rock, trying to reach the embattled dwarf.

For four days, Felskal held them back, sending the trolls tumbling over the sides time and time again.

But there seemed to be no stopping them.

They amassed for one last surge, hoping to overwhelm the dwarf once and for all.

Feeling his strength giving out and knowing his doom was at last upon him, Felskal called on Clangeddin to lend him one last bit of divine power.

The Rock of Battle granted Felskal's request, and with that final surge of energy, the mighty dwarf hero slammed his twin axes into the very rock, embedding them there.

With that last supreme effort, Felskal's heart gave out, but the blows were so profound that a great cacophony of metal ringing on stone erupted all around the fallen dwarf.

The sound shook the entire cavern, and fissures formed in the outcropping.

Just as the swarm of trolls closed in around Felskal's body, celebrating their victory, the sides of the outcropping sheared away, taking the trolls with them in a deadly tumble of stone shards.

The only thing remaining was a narrow jut of stone, a pinnacle that held Felskal's body aloft, out of harm's reach.

The fallen hero's remains were never recovered; the legends say that Clangeddin appeared on that point himself to gather his noble servant and take him to his final rest.

The axes, however, are another story.

They were left behind, jutting from the stone, as a testament to Felskal's courage and relentless determination. Afterward, the gold dwarves constructed the causeway and stairs to connect their halls with the point of rock where the axes rest.

Clangeddin's clergy came and consecrated the area and pronounced that the site was holy to the Father of Battle.

It was made into a shrine dedicated to the deity.

Game Effects

Though Clangeddin is a god of battle, he views the shrine as a place for quietude, a place where dwarves should come to reflect upon battles fought and battles yet to come.

Thus, anyone standing upon any portion of the bridge and stairs, as well as at the shrine itself, is treated as under an effect similar to that of a sanctuary spell.

Such an individual cannot attempt to strike or otherwise directly attack another creature, even with a targeted spell, unless he succeeds on a DC 25 Will save.

If the save fails, he can't follow through with the attack, that part of his turn is lost, and he can't directly attack the warded creature so long as he remains in the affected area.

Unlike a normal sanctuary spell, this effect does not permit any attacks by area or effect spells.

However, subjects can use nonattack spells or otherwise act.

TEUMYSHAARIL

In the heart of the High Forest, near the ancient elven tree-city of Teuveamanthaar, a great oak broods, sheltering the forest floor and even the other trees of the forest beneath its massive canopy.

The trunk of this great tree is as wide as a small hamlet, and its crown soars as high as a hilltop.

Hidden inside is Teumyshaaril, an ancient temple dedicated to Rillifane Rallathil.

Though the elves who created it disappeared with the coming of the darkness from Hellgate Keep, the druids of Tall Trees have maintained it as a site sacred to the Leaflord ever since.

Now, with the return of the elves, the temple may see steady use once more.

History

Teumyshaaril was originally a natural fissure in the great tree, a scar from its earliest days, from long before the elves ever found it.

The scar became diseased, and the disease invited pests, giant wood-boring beetles that began to eat the tree from the inside out.

When the moon elves from nearby Teuveamanthaar of Eaerlann discovered its sickly condition, they quickly eradicated the pests and disease, but instead of healing the scar, they learned from divine insight that the tree was sacred to Rillifane Rallathil and that it should become a shrine dedicated to the Leaflord.

They began to widen the wound, lovingly cutting and shaping the wood in such a way that they actually strengthened the living tissue, completely cutting away the taint left over from the blights that had afflicted it.

When they were done, it became a holy site, preserved and protected by their magic.

The shrine was a magnificent thing, carved entirely from the wood itself, with no additional materials necessary to form or furnish it.

The elves did this millennia ago, at the height of their empire, when Teuveamanthaar blossomed, long before the fall of Hellgate keep.

They made the temple a blessed place, filled with magical warmth and joy, an inspiration to all who entered with a love of the woods in their heart.

The script that covers the walls make up the teachings of Rillifane, parables and dogma, insight and prayer.

When Ascalhorn fell and the demons inside poured forth, the elves knew that Teuveamanthaar's days were numbered.

Not wishing to see their temple defiled by the fiends, the elf clergy spoke to the tree, asking it to seal the entrance to the temple, to hide it away from all who would bring it harm.

The great tree complied, shifting its bark ever so slightly so that the passage was shut and the temple locked away.

It was only years later that the druids of Tall Trees (see page 75) discovered the shrine.

They had sensed for some time that there was something special about the giant oak.

The temple's magic called to them, but they did not understand the significance of the sight until Turlang, the great treant and their ally, aided them in coaxing the tree to open up once more.

Inside, they discovered not only the holy site, but also a number of ancient Eaerlanni artifacts that had been hidden away inside the temple for safekeeping.

The druids kept those treasures inside the temple until the elves began to return.

Game Effects

There are a number of powerful divine magical forces in effect upon and with the tree, as well as a handful of other features present.

To begin with, an area centered on the heart of the tree and projecting in a radius 15 feet beyond its outer bark provides a series of effects similar to those of a holy aura spell.

First, all good creatures within the affected area gain a +4 deflection bonus to AC and a +4 resistance bonus on all saves.

These benefits apply to all attacks, not just attacks from evil creatures.

Furthermore, any creature warded by the effect gains spell resistance 25 against all evil spells and spells cast by evil creatures.

Third, all types of protection and mental influence are blocked, as per the protection from evil spell.

Lastly, if any evil creature succeeds on an attack against another creature inside the protected area, that offender suffers is blinded as by the blindness/deafness spell (Fortitude DC 22 negates).

The tree itself is protected by these same defenses.

WEeping GARDEN

From time to time, those in the service of Ilmater find themselves overwhelmed by foes or a multitude of sufferers too vast to effectively aid.

When such a crisis occurs to dedicated knights, priests, and other truly devout followers of the Crying God, they sometimes find themselves on the receiving end of succor. Ilmater has been known to provide sanctuary during truly dire circumstances, inviting his most selfless and earnest servants into his private garden.

Those who visit never forget the Weeping Garden of Ilmater.

History

The history of this particular form of Ilmater's benevolence is sketchy at best, for no one knows how long the Broken God has permitted select followers to wander into his private garden.

Furthermore, few who are blessed enough to visit the garden admit it openly afterward, though those who do often speak of it only in hushed tones to dear companions, claiming that a sense of privacy seems to pervade their memories of the place.

The only facts that everyone seems fairly certain of are that Ilmater himself is the only one who can allow access to the garden, and that the garden is located within the Hall of the Triad.

Some of the legends actually claim that paths lead from the garden to other parts of the Triad's home plane, though these assertions have yet to be substantiated by anyone who actually traveled there.

Game Effects

Being welcomed into the Weeping Garden is both a great honor and a weighty responsibility, and Ilmater does not choose among his faithful lightly.

Only those who demonstrate ultimate selflessness on his behalf are granted such a boon.

Such acts might include defending a group of helpless folk against an overwhelming host, exhausting oneself and all of one's magic trying to provide aid to plague victims, confronting superior servants of Loviatar regardless of the peril, or perhaps pursuing a just cause of kindness across half of Faerûn without regard to one's personal safety or advancement.

Receiving an invitation to the Weeping Garden should always be as a result of game play rather than random chance, and should never occur more than once in a character's life.

Arrival within the garden occurs as the result of a temporary portal appearing in the characters' midst.

Regardless of the actual surroundings, the portal takes the form of a simple garden path framed by a hedge that grows up and over the top of the route.

The path disappears through the hedge-gate and vanishes into a thick mist, but warm, inviting light, as if from the late afternoon sun, makes the mist glow.

This portal entrance might appear in the depths of the Underdark, in the middle of a gloomy swamp, or along a treacherous and narrow mountain trail heading over a pass. It is up to the characters to decide whether to step through or not.

Once one chooses to do so, all her companions find themselves on the path, their former surroundings vanished.

The garden is a place of ultimate assuagement and serenity, and anyone arriving instantly understands that she is safe while there.

Though she might have just left some disastrous peril only moments before, a guest of Ilmater intuitively knows that this side journey is all a part of the greater good. The exact details of the visit may not yet be clear, but visitors always recognize that all is as it should be upon arrival.

The conditions within the garden are perfect.

The temperature is balmy, and a gentle zephyr languidly rustles the leaves on the trees and bushes within.

It is a sunny day with blue skies beyond the hedges, but the light is dappled rather than harsh.

It is a perfect recipe for a lazy afternoon nap.

At least one guest in a group will always have Ilmater as her patron deity, but her companions may be welcomed into the garden as well.

Usually, this occurs when the entire group has acted benevolently in aid of the servant of the Crying God. Rarely does Ilmater separate his followers from their companions, so if one of his own is accompanied by those not worthy of a visit to the garden, none of them receive an invitation.

For the duration of the guests' stay, all spells and abilities they possess are treated as functioning at two levels higher than the character's actual level; for characters who have Ilmater as their patron deity, these spells and abilities function at three levels higher.

This benefit pertains only to spells and abilities that are in keeping with Ilmater's doctrines and beliefs.

Should anyone attempt to cast spells or use abilities that are in opposition to Ilmater's agenda, the entire group is instantly and irrevocably ejected.

Assuming the characters are not forcibly removed from the garden for violating its tenets while there, when they do leave, they gain the benefits of a greater heroism spell as if cast by a 20th-level cleric, as well as spell resistance 10.

Thus, each character gains a +4 morale bonus on attack rolls, saves, and skill checks, immunity to fear effects, and 20 temporary hit points. Both of these effects last for 12 hours (rather than the normal duration given in the spell description).

Furthermore, time passes differently in the garden than on the Material Plane.

No matter how long his guests choose to remain within the garden, the moment they venture past the misty gateways (see area 1 of the map), they find themselves back where they were before, with no time having past—and hopefully well rested and rejuvenated for the coming trials.

COMPLETE CHAMPION (3.5)

ATHENAEUM OF BOCCOB

The worshipers of Boccob the Uncaring understand that their deity requires them to help themselves more and rely upon his gifts less than the followers of other deities. Still, some holy sites reflect the divinity of Boccob, and an athenaeum of Boccob is just the sort of gift that the Lord of All Magics might provide for his followers.

When a character open to the all-encompassing power of magic visits an athenaeum of Boccob, her own mystical energies are rejuvenated, and she gains power according to her stature and understanding.

Those who come to such a site unprepared or unable to fully grasp its benefits seldom recognize the importance of the place.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about an athenaeum of Boccob by making Knowledge (religion) or Knowledge (arcana) checks at the appropriate DCs, as given below.

DC 15: An athenaeum of Boccob is a holy site suffused with mystical energies and secret knowledge.

DC 20: Athenaeums of Boccob can be found anywhere that knowledge is collected and stored for long periods of time, but they are usually sites where powerful spells have been invoked.

DC 25: To gain the benefits of an athenaeum of Boccob, a character or group of characters must spend at least 8 hours reading or working to decipher the manuscripts, tablets, or other writings found therein.

Description: Books, scrolls, engravings, stone tablets, and other forms of writing fill an athenaeum of Boccob.

Whatever else may be there, the focus of the holy site is the collection and preservation of knowledge.

Spell inscriptions, lore of ancient kings, and descriptions of long-extinct creatures rest amid texts mundane, arcane, and divine in nature.

Creatures with the ability to cast spells or use spell-like abilities feel the crackle of energy around them upon entering an athenaeum of Boccob.

If they examine the writings in the library, they find topics of interest to them, even if they do not understand the languages of the manuscripts.

Even those with no magical ability find the collection of lore awesome.

Prerequisite: An athenaeum of Boccob can confer its special ability only on a character who has an Intelligence or Wisdom score of 12 or higher and the ability to cast spells or use spell-like abilities.

Site Activation: To use the power contained within an athenaeum of Boccob, a qualified character must spend at least 8 hours delving into the texts inside it.

No mortal could ever read all the texts found in such a place, even if she could understand all the languages in which the manuscripts are written, but she must try.

Decipher Script and spells such as comprehend languages must be used if the character possesses them, but “best efforts” by characters without these abilities also count toward the requirement.

After trying to read the texts for the required amount of time, the character must rest or sleep enough to prepare her mind for spellcasting the next day.

Once she has done so, the athenaeum of Boccob imbues her with knowledge and abilities commensurate with her spellcasting prowess.

Recharge: Up to six characters can use the athenaeum of Boccob in a given week.

After the last one has gained the benefits, the location must recharge for a full week before it can confer benefits again.

Special Ability (ex): A character who has completed the required reading and resting periods gains the Sudden Empower and Sudden Maximize metamagic feats, even if she does not meet the prerequisites.

These feats are usable once per day, and she can use each a total of seven times.

Special: If the character has a spell-like ability that could benefit from the Empower Spell-Like Ability feat (MM 304), she can choose that feat instead of the Sudden Empower feat for the benefit.

Duration: Once the character has used either feat seven times, that portion of the benefit is discharged.

The benefit has no other duration limits—the recipient can hold onto her remaining uses of these feats for years if she so chooses.

She cannot gain the benefits of an athenaeum of Boccob again, however, until she has discharged all available uses of both feats.

Aura: Strong (no school).

Ability Value: 2,000 gp.

Adaptation: Any deity who is a patron of spellcasters and interested in the accumulation of knowledge could be associated with one of these sites.

COLD FORGE OF MORADIN

A cold forge of Moradin is a holy site touched by the dwarf deity of smithcrafting.

Worshippers of the Soul Forger claim that Moradin visits every forge in the world, and when he finds one that has been abandoned and desecrated by the enemies of the dwarves, he touches it with his own hammer and imbues it with his power.

He then sends dreams and visions of it to his true followers, hoping to awaken the spirit of vengeance and justice in their hearts.

When recovered by good characters or nonevil dwarves, these smithies imbue their rescuers' weapons with new properties.

According to legend, when Moradin awakens many cold forges in close proximity, characters who visit several of them can gain additional benefits.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about a cold forge of Moradin by making Knowledge (religion) or Knowledge (history) checks at the appropriate DCs, as given below.

DC 15: A cold forge of Moradin is a holy site imbued with secrets of blacksmithing known only to the dwarf god.

DC 20: Cold forges of Moradin can be found only in areas that were once occupied by dwarves but are now abandoned.

DC 25: To gain the benefits of a cold forge of Moradin, a character or group of characters must clear the immediate area of enemies and hold the site against the foes of the dwarves for a short period of time.

Description: The dark, underground hall surrounding a cold forge of Moradin is often filled with dust, smashed stones, and broken weaponry.

Somewhere amid the rubbish lies an old anvil, possibly covered with the shattered bits of armor and weapons of its last defenders.

Near the anvil is a forge that seems ice cold at first but rekindles of its own volition and heats up over time.

Nonevil characters who discover such a site are overtaken by a sense of melancholy at first.

This effect results from the leftover emotions of the long-dead dwarf smiths that have become ingrained in the rubble.

But when the forge awakens and the walls begin to reflect the light and shadows from the fire, visitors find the room welcoming and somehow bolstering.

Prerequisite: A cold forge of Moradin confers its special ability only on the weapons of intelligent, nonevil creatures.

Site Activation: To awaken the forge, a character or group must defeat any evil creatures in the immediate vicinity (usually the room housing the forge and any neighboring rooms) and hold the area against other evil creatures for 24 hours.

Any evil creatures that enter during this period must be slain or driven off; otherwise the defenders must start the process again.

During this period of occupation, the anvil must be set up again and the entire area must be cleared of debris.

Once the area is clean, a flame ignites within the forge and grows brighter and hotter every hour.

The heat never becomes unbearable, but anyone standing in the room can feel its warmth and smell the odor of smelting ore.

As soon as the required occupation period is over, the anvil begins to glow with a golden light.

Each of the characters who participated in cleansing the area can touch one weapon (or 50 pieces of ammunition) to the anvil.

For 1 week thereafter, that weapon gains properties that enhance its abilities when wielded by the character who imbued it with power here.

Recharge: A cold forge of Moradin usually works only once, but if it is part of a larger complex (perhaps an abandoned dwarf city overrun by humanoids and dragons), Moradin might choose to “touch” it multiple times, allowing its power to be used once a week.

In such a case, characters wishing to reuse the cold forge of Moradin must have made progress toward reclaiming more of the complex each time they return, or it will not function.

Special Ability (su): A weapon touched to the anvil by a qualified creature gains the ability to overcome damage reduction as if it were silvered and made of both adamantine and cold iron.

It gains none of the other properties of those substances, however, so it doesn't automatically defeat hardness, isn't more costly to make magical, and doesn't have a  $-1$  penalty on damage rolls.

Special: Sometimes Moradin touches several forges in close proximity to each other.

If PCs reclaim more than one of these sites in a week's time, their weapons might gain additional properties, as given below.

The benefits of each additional weapon property stack with those applied before.

- Bane (usually against dragons, goblinoids, or some other creature dwarves normally despise)

- Holy
- Axiomatic

Duration: A weapon retains all the special abilities gained from a cold forge of Moradin for 1 week after the last time it was touched to the anvil, or until it is no longer in the possession of a creature that helped cleanse the forge. Thus, if a character cleanses two cold forges of Moradin, gaining the special materials property and then the bane property, the weapon retains both those properties for 1 week after the weapon touched the second anvil.

If the weapon is taken from a qualified character and recovered during the 1-week period, the lost properties return, but any lost duration is not recovered.

Aura: Moderate evocation and transmutation [good].

Ability Value: 1,500 gp (special materials property), 1,000 gp per additional property.

Adaptation: A cold forge of Moradin can be adapted as a site dedicated to any nonevil dwarf deity, or even to any deity patronizing smiths or weaponcrafters.

It works best as a holy site for a racial deity, however, since such deities usually have natural enemies of other races.

COLISEUM OF KORD

Some of the older arenas in the world have played host to more conflict, contests of strength, and athletic events than any field of battle—and a few have stood for centuries or millennia.

Many followers of Kord choose to participate in such games to test themselves against others.

Scattered throughout the world are the arenas in which the greatest heroes of Kord have tested their mettle, often with the Brawler himself looking down from the heavens and blessing the contests and contestants.

These sites, known as coliseums of Kord, have acquired some of the god's divine power.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about a coliseum of Kord by making Knowledge (religion) checks at the appropriate DCs, as given below.

DC 10: Kord's followers often test themselves in contests of strength and athletics.

The arenas where some of his legendary priests and heroes competed have become holy sites.

DC 15: A follower of Kord, or any other mighty athlete, can earn Kord's blessing by performing rites and participating in trials within these arenas.

DC 25: Kord smiles on those who would test themselves, but he demands constant and continued effort.

Each additional use of a coliseum of Kord by the same individual has tougher requirements, and the benefits fade more swiftly.

Description: Each coliseum of Kord looks different, in keeping with its location, culture, and history.

However, each is an arena or amphitheater of some sort, typically with a holy symbol of Kord displayed prominently within.

Prerequisite: Any character who is willing and able to undergo the necessary trials can gain the benefits of a coliseum of Kord.

Location Activation: To gain the benefits of a coliseum of Kord, a character must first spend 1 full round uttering a prayer to Kord.

She must then prove victorious in some sort of physical challenge against one or more opponents in the arena.

This contest might be an actual combat, a race, a sporting event of some sort, or some other physical trial.

The precise details are up to the DM, but some examples are given below.

No spells or magic items of any kind are permitted in this contest—it is a trial of physical prowess only.

A coliseum of Kord can boost the abilities of only one individual at a time, even if more than one contestant participates on each side.

Obstacle Course: The character must race one or more rivals through a course peppered with walls, pits, rope bridges, and the like.

While overcoming most of these obstacles requires sheer physical prowess, some require creative thinking as well. For instance, the last 10 to 15 feet of a climbing wall might lack handholds of any sort.

Though it appears impassible, a strong and quick competitor might be able to climb the hack of his rival and thus gain sufficient height to jump the rest of the way.

Scavenger Hunt: In this contest, viable only in the largest of coliseums, the arena is set up as a maze, a series of scaffolds, or even a wilderness area such as a jungle.

Hidden throughout the area are a number of prizes that the contestants must recover, as well as various hurdles—including traps, hostile combatants, and minor monsters—that they must overcome.

Some scavenger hunts require a contestant to recover every object, while others require only finding a certain number before the allotted time runs out.

Test of Endurance: The character engages in a race or a series of exercises against a particularly potent rival.

Once the contest begins, the contestants cannot stop for any reason—not for rest, or even for food, drink, or healing. They must continue until one or the other drops from exhaustion or thirst.

The one left standing is the victor.

Recharge: A coliseum of Kord can confer its benefits on only one character per week.

Furthermore, any given individual can have only one benefit from it at any given time.

Special Ability (ex): A coliseum of Kord grants a character who passes the test an inherent bonus of +2 to Strength, Dexterity, or Constitution.

She can choose the ability, as long as it is one that the contest tested in some way.
 Duration: Kord demands that his champions test themselves regularly.
 The first time a character gains the benefit from a coliseum of Kord, it lasts for a year.
 The second time, it lasts for 6 months.
 The benefit lasts for 3 months the third time, 1 month the fourth time, and 1 week each time thereafter.
 Aura: Strong transmutation.
 Ability Value: 18,334 gp.

PALACE OF BURNING ICE

With the possible exception of Obad-Hai, no deity combines so many disparate elements as Tiamat, the five-headed Queen of Dragons. From the frozen northern reaches to the hearts of raging infernos, her influence is felt everywhere that chromatic dragons thrive—and some variety thrives everywhere. But nowhere is the dragon deity's influence more overt than in her holy sites.
 The Draconic name of these places translates roughly as "Palaces of Burning Ice", but human sages refer to them as frozen calderas of the Dragon Queen.
 The name is certainly appropriate, because whatever other features might differ, these sites appear in only one sort of location—the caldera of a volcano in a frozen mountain range.
 cant, considerable wealth and magic must be sacrificed to obtain the most potent.

50. The Red Wurm's Larder
51. Secret Shaft
52. Level Three Entrance Cavern
53. Cloisters of the Dragon Priests
- 54–55. High Priest's Lair
56. High Priest's Vault

Description: Other than the type of location, the only commonality between different frozen calderas of the Dragon Queen is the inner sanctum, which is sometimes known as the Queen's Hoard.

This enormous chamber is dominated by a carving of the five-headed Dragon Queen that occupies the entire the back wall, glaring down at all who enter. On the floor below the engraving is a pit that leads down into the fires and lava beneath the earth.

Sacrifices of wealth must be dropped into the hole and allowed to melt away.

Though the walls are often covered in a thin layer of ice, a haze of heat radiates from the pit.

Prerequisite: Only a nongood creature of character level 7th or higher can access the power of a frozen caldera of the Dragon Queen.

Claiming the more advanced powers of such a place also requires a sacrifice of treasure.

Location Activation: To gain the benefit of the most basic power of a frozen caldera of the Dragon Queen, a character must offer a prayer to Tiamat and touch each of the five carved heads of her image in a ritual that takes 5 minutes to perform.

To gain the benefit of the greater powers, the character must sacrifice treasure in the pit beneath the engraving after performing this rite.

Recharge: Once a frozen caldera of the Dragon Queen has bestowed one or more powers on a given individual, it cannot do so again for five years.

Even if a character accesses only the basic power, this limit applies to any use of the site.

Thus, anyone who wishes to gain multiple powers must claim them all at once.

When a frozen caldera of the Dragon Queen has granted powers to five different individuals, it goes dormant for 5 months.

Special Ability: A frozen caldera of the Dragon Queen can grant up to three abilities to any single character.

The most basic requires only the ritual; the other two require payments of treasure.

The costs for dragons and dragonblooded creatures and for other creatures are given on the table below.

Ability Conferred	Cost for Dragons and Dragonblooded Creatures	Cost for All Others
Energy resistance	—	—
Breath weapon	12,000 gp	13,200 gp
Draconic form	50,000 gp	55,000 gp

Energy Resistance (su): The petitioner must choose acid, cold, electricity, or fire.

He gains resistance 5 to the selected energy type.

Breath Weapon (su): The petitioner chooses one of the breath weapons listed below.

Each is usable once per day and deals 6d8 points of damage.

A successful Reflex save (DC 10 + character's HD + character's Con modifier) halves the damage.

This ability is gained in addition to any breath weapon or similar ability that the creature might already have.

60-ft. line of acid

30-ft. cone of corrosive (acid) gas

30-ft. cone of cold

60-ft. line of electricity

30-ft. cone of fire

Draconic Form (sp): Once per day for 10 rounds, the petitioner can transform into a mature adult dragon of one of the five standard chromatic kinds.

He does not gain the spellcasting ability of that form and has his normal Hit Dice for the purpose of effects that affect only beings with a particular number of Hit Dice, but he takes on all the dragon's other traits.

While in draconic form, the petitioner loses all his own extraordinary, spell-like, supernatural, and spellcasting abilities.

If the petitioner is a dragon, it instead gains the powers of a dragon one age category higher than its own for up to 10 rounds per day.

Duration: Each of these abilities lasts for one year.

Aura: Strong abjuration and evocation.

Ability Value: 10,000 gp (2,000 gp per affected creature).

SEPULCHER OF WEE JAS

Despite the false assumptions often made by commoners and adventurers alike, the majority of necromancers do not go on to become liches or other undead.

Most simply die, finally and irrevocably, like everyone else.

The faithful of Wee Jas sometimes gather in a spot where one of their greatest lies entombed to venerate the deceased as a true master of both magic and death.

If their faith is strong enough, and the deceased necromancer's power was potent enough, the goddess might imbue the site with a fraction of her own power, which can be claimed by anyone willing—and able—to take it.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about sepulchers of Wee Jas by making Knowledge (arcana) or Knowledge (religion) checks at the appropriate DCs, as given below.

A character seeking to locate the grave-site of a particularly powerful and famous necromancer can sometimes do so with a Knowledge (arcana) or Knowledge (religion) check. The base DC is 25, but this DC can vary dramatically at the DM's discretion, based on how famous or how secretive the deceased was.

DC 20 (arcana or religion): Some of the tombs where the most powerful necromancers lie buried have become holy sites to the faithful of Wee Jas.

DC 22 (arcana): Although Wee Jas has both arcane and divine necromancers among her followers, the overwhelming majority of sepulchers of Wee Jas form at the graves of arcane necromancers.

DC 22 (religion): Determining whether a given site is a true Sepulcher of Wee Jas or just the tomb of a necromancer with lingering enchantments can be extremely difficult.

Wee Jas's faithful never alter the tomb when they begin worshiping at it, so it holds no visual distinction.

While spells such as detect magic might reveal the truth, sometimes the only way to be sure is to attempt to access the power of a Sepulcher of Wee Jas at the site and see whether it works.

DC 28 (arcana or religion): Only those willing to taste death and those with a gift for necromantic magic can claim the power of a Sepulcher of Wee Jas.

Those who prove unworthy suffer for their hubris.

Description: Every Sepulcher of Wee Jas is an ornate tomb or crypt.

Most are constructed of marble or granite, but a few are simply dug into the earth or made of materials other than stone.

These sites often boast detailed decorations and engravings, which might or might not include symbols of Wee Jas. The typical Sepulcher of Wee Jas is merely one tomb in the middle of a great cemetery, but a few stand alone on private lands.

The air within the Sepulcher is cold and dry, and sounds often fail to echo, as though the dimensions of the crypt were larger than they appear.

Prerequisite: Only a spellcaster who has Spell Focus (necromancy), and at least 5 ranks in both Knowledge (arcana) and Knowledge (religion) can gain the powers of a Sepulcher of Wee Jas.

An actual worshiper of Wee Jas has an easier time qualifying (see below), but allegiance to the Ruby Sorceress is not a prerequisite.

Location Activation: The ritual required to access the power of a Sepulcher of Wee Jas is particularly hideous because the petitioner must sample death.

She must enclose herself in a coffin within the Sepulcher and lie within—awake but unmoving—for 24 hours.

During this period, she takes 1d6 points of negative energy damage every 2 hours.

Assuming the character survives, she must attempt a DC 30 Knowledge (arcana) or Knowledge (religion) check (her choice) when the required time has elapsed.

A worshiper of Wee Jas gains a +5 circumstance bonus on this check.

Success indicates that the petitioner has acquired sufficient insight into death to gain the site's granted power.

A character who fails the check by 10 or more points, however, instantly contracts mummy rot (DMG 292), no saving throw allowed.

Recharge: A given Sepulcher of Wee Jas can grant its benefits to a single character only once per month.

Special Ability (su): Any time the recipient of the power granted by a Sepulcher of Wee Jas kills a humanoid of her own creature instantly reanimates as a zombie under her control.

This zombie does not count against the character's HD-based limit on the number of undead that can be controlled by spells such as animate dead, and commanding it is a free action.

The zombie remains animate for a number of rounds equal to 1 + the level of the spell that slew it, then dies again.

In addition, the standard Will save for half damage no longer applies to any inflict spells that the recipient spontaneously casts (though it applies normally for prepared inflict spells).

A spellcaster who lacks the ability to swap out prepared spells for inflict spells gains the power to do so as though she were an evil cleric of her divine caster level, but only once per day.

The Will save applies normally in this case.

Duration: The abilities granted by a Sepulcher of Wee Jas last for 1 month.

Aura: Strong necromancy.

Ability Value: 7,000 gp.

Adaptation: Although few deities other than Wee Jas are associated with both death and magic, any god of death or necromancy could create a similar holy site.

TEMPLE OF THE FIRST DAWN

In a distant land, atop a plateau so high that the air is thin and the wind blows cold, stands an enormous cathedral. Made by hands far older than human, its gold-hued mithral framework supports stained glass walls of unearthly beauty. The air inside is warm and comforting despite the chilling winds outside, and darkness and evil seem distant and unimportant within its walls.

This luminous structure is the Temple of the First Dawn, the holiest site of Pelor's faith.

According to myth, this spot was where the rays of the sun first touched the earthen skin of the world, warming its surface and lighting the eternal night on the morning when creation began.

The cathedral is aptly named, because this place is indeed the site of the very first dawn.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about the Temple of the First Dawn by making Knowledge (religion) checks at the appropriate DCs, as given below.

DC 15: The Temple of the First Dawn was built on the site where, according to Pelorian myth, the rays of the sun first touched the earth when reality began.

Even the greatest of Pelor's scholars don't know who built this cathedral.

DC 20: The Temple of the First Dawn enhances light and healing magic and suppresses dweomers of darkness and death.

DC 25: Almost any nonevil creature is welcome to claim the benefits of the Temple of the First Dawn, but doing so requires a show of intense devotion to Pelor.

Beings of evil cannot draw on the powers of this site.

Description: The Temple of the First Dawn appears to be made entirely of stained glass.

Its multicolored panes form different images, icons, and patterns depending on the position of the viewer and the sun.

The grandest pattern of all is an intricately formed holy symbol of Pelor on the roof, through which the sun shines down into the structure.

The glass is held in place by a framework of golden mithral that has been magically enhanced to be as unbreakable as stone.

No shadows ever fall within the Temple of the First Dawn.

A combination of magic and the angle of the glass keeps the light diffuse and constant from all angles, making it impossible for any object to cast a shadow within the structure.

Even at night, the glass glows with a light of its own that, though dimmer than true sunlight, serves the same purpose.

All the light from all the windows focuses on a single point in the precise center of the cathedral.

Here, on the ground, is a strange golden spot—uneven but roughly circular.

The holy sun symbol of Pelor is faintly embossed into its center.

This spot is the heart of the Temple of the First Dawn—supposedly the exact place where the first sunbeam touched earth.

Prerequisite: Only nonevil characters can benefit from the powers of the Temple of the First Dawn.

Location Activation: To take advantage of the minor ability granted by the site, a character need only cast the appropriate spell while within the cathedral's stained-glass walls (see below).

To access the major ability of the Temple of the First Dawn, a character must prove her capacity for self-sacrifice by spending several days in prayer and fasting within the structure.

At least 8 hours of each day must be spent in prayer at the center of the cathedral, and the petitioner must refrain from food and drink long enough to take one-quarter of her full normal hit points in nonlethal damage.

Only then can she draw upon the major power of the site.

Recharge: The Temple of the First Dawn needs no recharge time for its minor ability.

Once it has granted its major benefit three times, it cannot do so again for the length of a season (3 months).

Special Ability (su): The Temple of the First Dawn has both a minor ability, which is constantly available, and a major ability, which requires the ritual described above.

Minor: Any spells that have the healing or light descriptor that are cast within the walls of the temple are automatically maximized or extended, as appropriate, as though affected by the Maximize Spell and Extend Spell feats, with no change in spell slot.

If a spell that utilizes negative energy or has the darkness descriptor is cast within these walls, its duration and any variable effects it might have are halved.

Major: The major ability granted by the Temple of the First Dawn varies based on the abilities of the petitioner, as follows.

A cleric or other character who has the ability to turn undead can expend a turn attempt to render all undead within 60 feet susceptible to critical hits for 6 rounds.

In addition, a character who already has the ability to spontaneously cast cure spells gains the ability to quicken a spell that has the light or healing descriptor as if using the Quicken Spell feat, but without the associated change in spell slot.

This ability is usable once per day.

Any spellcaster who lacks the ability to swap out prepared spells for cure spells gains the power to do so, but only once per day, and she cannot use the temple's quicken ability on them.

Duration: The major ability lasts for 1 month.

The minor ability is effective only as long as the petitioner remains within the temple's walls.

Aura: Strong abjuration, conjuration, and evocation.

Ability Value: 9,250 gp.

COMPLETE MAGE (3.5)

BIGBY'S TOMB

Though he is immortalized for the distinctive spells he created, the great wizard Bigby knew all too well that (barring lichdom) death would eventually claim him. With the help of a small group of trusted apprentices and stoneworkers, he designed and built a suitable final resting place.

Hidden far from prying eyes or light-fingered hands, Bigby's tomb has acquired a persistent arcane magic of its own, which manifests in the style of spells that the great wizard invented.

To those intrepid enough to seek it out, the tomb can offer a bit of the great wizard's power.

An arcane spellcaster who finds the tomb and spends significant time within its walls gains the power to use one or more of the spells that carry Bigby's name as a spell-like ability.

Such a discovery, though, is easier said than done, for the location of Bigby's tomb changes from time to time.

To ensure that his mortal remains would stay undisturbed, the wizard created an entirely new spell that would literally pick up his tomb (with a pair of hands made of arcane force) and transport it to a new location each time anyone visited it.

Magically protected from the ravages of the elements, the tomb can be found anywhere in a subterranean vault, in an undersea grotto, at the heart of a volcano, in the catacombs beneath a forgotten city, or any other location large enough to accommodate it.

Any character who comes within 100 feet of the tomb feels as though dozens of invisible hands are propelling him forward, though his speed is unaffected and he can turn away without penalty.

Over time, the tomb also works subtle changes in the surrounding terrain, causing nearby rocks, vegetation, clouds, or flames to take on the vague shapes of hands.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about Bigby's tomb by making Knowledge (arcana) checks at the appropriate DCs, as given below.

KNOWLEDGE (ARCANA)

DC	Information Gained
10	Bigby built his tomb while he still lived.
15	The final resting place of the great wizard Bigby is infused with the power of his most famous spells.
20	Those who seek out the tomb can gain the power to use some of the Bigby's hand spells.
25	Bigby's tomb shifts its location from time to time, carried by hands of arcane force.

Description: The door to Bigby's tomb looks like the back of a giant hand, positioned with fingers upward.

To open it, a visitor must seize the tops of the fingers and pull down.

The open door then forms a ramp into the tomb.

Bigby's tomb consists of a single, square chamber about 100 feet on a side that appears to be hollowed out of whatever substance surrounds it.

Against one wall of this room is a dais supporting an ornate sarcophagus whose surface is covered with relief sculptures of hands of all shapes and sizes—young hands, old hands, tapered hands, and rough hands.

Some of the hands grasp others, some seem to be pushing something away, some are balled into fists, and some are outstretched in invitation.

The walls of the tomb are covered with frescoes of similar design, and the floor carries on the theme in mosaics.

Magical hands of arcane force appear to move about the chamber, dusting, cleaning, and creating new artwork, but these are permanent images.

The tomb is silent except for the sounds of the hands at work.

A sense of excitement pervades the place, giving the visitor the impression that infinite possibilities exist for those willing to seize them.

The never-used sarcophagus remains empty to this day. When the sarcophagus is touched, a permanent magic mouth on the skeleton says, "Take my hand".

Prerequisite: Bigby's tomb can confer its special ability only on an arcane spellcaster with an Intelligence score of 12 or higher who has access to spells of the evocation school and can cast 2nd-level or higher spells.

Location Activation: To gain the ability conferred by Bigby's tomb, a qualified creature must grasp one of the hands sculpted on the sarcophagus.

Doing so causes the hand to detach from the wrist and meld with the visitor's hand, making it larger and stronger-looking than the other.

Only one creature at any given time can possess the special ability granted by Bigby's tomb.

Recharge: Once it has granted one spellcaster its special ability, Bigby's tomb cannot do so again until the detached hand has returned to the sarcophagus.

Special Ability (sp): Bigby's tomb grants the ability to use one of the Bigby's hand spells (caster level equals creature's character level) as a spell-like ability once per day upon detaching the stone hand.

The specific spell granted depends on the user's spell ability.

- A character who can cast arcane spells of 4th level or lower gains Bigby's slapping hand (see the sidebar).
- A character who can cast arcane spells of 5th, 6th, or 7th level gains Bigby's interposing hand.
- A character who can cast arcane spells of 8th or 9th level gains Bigby's clenched fist.

Once granted, this ability cannot be changed for the duration of the effect.

The use of this ability causes the character's hands to glow with arcane power.

Duration: The ability to use the selected Bigby's hand spell lasts for one year.

At the end of that time, the spellcaster's hand returns to normal, and the stone hand reappears on the sarcophagus.

Aura: Strong evocation.

Ability Value: 1,200 gp (Bigby's slapping hand); 8,000 gp (Bigby's interposing hand); 20,000 gp (Bigby's clenched fist).

BIGBY'S SLAPPING HAND

Evocation [Force]

Level: Sorcerer/wizard 2

Components: V, S, F

Casting Time: 1 standard action

Range: Medium (100 ft. + 10 ft./level)

Effect: One Tiny hand

Duration: Instantaneous

Saving Throw: None; see text

Spell Resistance: Yes

You complete the spell and blow into the leather glove. Immediately a blue-white, translucent hand appears next to the enemy and smacks it across the side of the head—not enough to hurt it, but hard enough to give others nearby a chance to attack.

This spell distracts the subject, causing it to immediately provoke attacks of opportunity from creatures threatening its space. The spell allows no saving throw, but a slapped creature can negate the effect with a DC 20 Concentration check.

Focus: A leather glove.

BOCCOB'S READING ROOM

Boccob, the god of magic, values knowledge most highly. Legend holds that certain places that were sacred to him in the past—the former sites of great libraries, colleges of magic, and so forth—became suffused with the god's arcane power.

Even though the structures that once stood there have long since fallen to ruin or been completely razed, these sites remain wellsprings of arcane lore.

Such locations are called Boccob's reading rooms.

A Boccob's reading room can form anywhere on the surface of the earth or underground.

These sites often occur in the forgotten ruins of ancient libraries and houses of knowledge, but they form just as often in the private retreats of great wizards who used them for solitary study.

Occasionally, a Boccob's reading room forms in a wilderness area where no remnant of any former structure remains.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about a Boccob's reading room by making Knowledge (arcana) checks at the appropriate DCs, as given below.

| 15 | A Boccob's reading room forms from a high concentration of magical knowledge and lore, such as that collected in an arcane library or college. |
| 20 | Boccob's reading rooms allow certain creatures to gain a bit of the collected arcane knowledge that once resided within their confines.        |

Description: A Boccob's reading room occupies a cubic area about 20 feet on a side.

It usually forms either inside an abandoned structure or within an area of ruins, but it can also be in a cave or other natural setting.

If it is indoors, its walls are a neutral, restful shade; if it is located in ruins or outdoors, the area is visually unremarkable.

The only unusual features of the site are a large, comfortable chair and a reading lamp, which might or might not seem very out of place in the setting.

The musty smell of old books pervades a Boccob's reading room, even though no actual books remain.

The room is unnaturally silent, and voices and even footfalls are muffled.

Any intelligent creature entering the area feels that some new arcane secret waits here, waiting to be learned.

When a spellcaster has successfully gained new spell knowledge from a Boccob's reading room, a small mark shaped like a book appears on one of his hands.

This mark is permanent.

Prerequisite: Only a spellcaster capable of preparing and casting 3rd-level arcane spells can sense and access the power of a Boccob's reading room.

Location Activation: When a qualified spellcaster enters the site, a book appears on the chair.

By spending 8 uninterrupted hours perusing this tome, the spellcaster gains a portion of the collected arcane knowledge that was once kept here.

If his perusal is interrupted, the spellcaster can begin again.

Recharge: Once a Boccob's reading room has conferred its power upon a single creature, it cannot do so again for 30 days.

However, a spellcaster can benefit from a Boccob's reading room no more than once a year.

Special Ability (ex): Upon drawing forth the power of a Boccob's reading room, a spellcaster who prepares spells can write one new spell of any level he can cast into his spellbook.

Doing this requires 1 hour, and there is no cost for materials except for the required pages in the spellbook.

A spellcaster who employs spellbooks cannot benefit from the same Boccob's reading room more than once per year, but he can benefit from any number of different Boccob's reading rooms within the same year.

Duration: The new spell knowledge gained from a Boccob's reading room is permanent.

Aura: Strong divination.

Ability Value: 100 gp per level of the added spell.

BONEYARD

In any place where large numbers of creatures are buried in mass graves or left to rot without proper funerary rites, a boneyard might form.

The presence of so much raw material for necromantic magic seems to draw negative energy of its own accord, changing the gravesite into a nexus of necromantic power.

Most boneyards form underground, but they can also manifest in aboveground tombs, or even firepits where massive numbers of corpses were cremated.

Such magical locations form at the sites of great battles where the corpses of fallen enemies were left unburied for scavengers.

But they can also manifest in the former dwelling places of great necromancers who hoarded corpses for their work.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about a boneyard by making Knowledge (arcana) checks at the appropriate DCs, as given below.

KNOWLEDGE (ARCANA)

DC	Information Gained
10	A boneyard is a site that forms any place with large numbers of unsanctified corpses.
15	A boneyard consists of the purest essence of necromantic magic.
20	Anyone who meditates within a boneyard can draw a small portion of its magic into herself to augment her necromantic spells and effects.

Description: A boneyard is a vast expanse of humanoid remains that covers up to 500 square feet. Bones, ashes, and partial skeletons litter the ground or floor, and the odor of the charnel house is almost overpowering, even though the flesh has long since rotted away from the bones.

Bones always exist in quantity in a boneyard, even if it was formed at the site of a crematory.

In an outdoor boneyard, the surrounding vegetation is withered and dead.

The bones in a boneyard do not move of their own accord, but clicks and rattles are audible throughout its confines, as though the bones were restless and eager to move.

When a spellcaster who has successfully drawn power from a boneyard casts a necromancy spell, her hands briefly appear skeletal.

Although this effect looks impressive, no physical change of any kind occurs to her hands.

Prerequisite: Only an arcane spellcaster capable of casting at least three different necromancy spells of 3rd level or higher can sense and access the power contained within a boneyard.

Location Activation: To claim the power of a boneyard, a qualified spellcaster must meditate uninterrupted within its confines for 8 hours.

If the required meditation period is interrupted, the character can begin again.

Recharge: Once a boneyard has conferred its ability on a single spellcaster, it cannot do so again for one year.

Special Ability (ex): Once per day, a spellcaster who has drawn forth the power from a boneyard can cast a necromancy spell that is affected by her choice of the Empower Spell, Extend Spell, or Enlarge Spell metamagic feats.

The spell's level is not modified, and she can decide to apply the feat at the moment she casts the spell—she need not prepare it ahead of time.

If she is a spontaneous caster, she requires no additional time to add the metamagic feat to the necromancy spell she casts.

Duration: The ability to augment necromancy spells lasts for one year.

Aura: Strong necromancy.

Ability Value: 12,000 gp.

CLOUDSEAT

Wherever mortals have communed on a regular basis to unlock the secrets of the future, a cloudseat can form.

Sages speculate that cloudseats are actually small tears in the fabric of time that allow glimpses of probable futures.

But whatever their nature, cloudseats offer arcane spellcasters who are proficient with divination magic a chance to gain the knowledge they seek faster than usual.

Cloudseats can form indoors or outdoors in any kind of terrain or setting.

Many form in the dwelling places of powerful diviners. A few, however, are located in wilderness areas that have been popular as oracle sites.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about a cloudseat by making Knowledge (arcana) checks at the appropriate DCs, as given below.

KNOWLEDGE (ARCANA)

DC	Information Gained
10	A cloudseat is a site that forms where divination magic is routinely used to see the future.
15	A cloudseat consists of the purest essence of divination magic.
20	Anyone who meditates while sitting in a cloudseat can draw a small portion of its magic into himself to augment his divination spells and effects.

Description: A cloudseat resembles a stool, chair, or throne formed of clouds.

It can be any color and intensity, from pastel to jewel tone. Though it appears insubstantial, a cloudseat is perfectly capable of supporting the weight of a Large or smaller creature.

A cloudseat typically has a clean, fresh scent, like the air after a thunderstorm.

Anyone who sits in it can hear voices murmuring indistinctly, as if they were coming from far away.

Typically, such a creature is seized with the desire to decipher what these voices are saying, but no more than a word or two is ever audible.

Sometimes a sense of foreboding surrounds a cloudseat, but more often, those in its area gain a strong sense of power and destiny.

Anyone who actually sits in a cloudseat feels euphoric, as though he knows that he is to play a vital role in the grand scheme of things and bring about great change.

When a spellcaster who has successfully drawn power from a cloudseat casts a divination spell, his eyes briefly become completely white, and his voice takes on a guttural edge.

Prerequisite: Only an arcane spellcaster capable of casting at least three different divination spells of 2nd level or higher can access the power of a cloudseat.

Location Activation: To claim the power of a cloudseat, a qualified spellcaster must sit in it and meditate uninterrupted for 8 hours.

During this time, the creature might experience horrifying or euphoric dreams.

If the required period of meditation is interrupted, the spellcaster can begin again.

Recharge: Once a cloudseat has granted its ability to a single creature, it cannot do so again for one year.

Special Ability (ex): Once per day, a spellcaster who has drawn power from a cloudseat can cast a divination spell of 2nd level or lower as a swift action, regardless of its usual casting time.

Duration: The swift casting ability lasts for one year.

Aura: Strong divination.

Ability Value: 2,000 gp.

CRYPT OF WEE JAS

A crypt of Wee Jas is a site formed when the power of the deity of death and magic touches the Material Plane.

Sages speculate that the lifelong pursuit of necromancy could change the burial places of Wee Jas's adherents into crypts of Wee Jas, but these sites can also form in other places where death magic has been used against powerful foes. A crypt of Wee Jas typically forms in underground locations, but it can also manifest in a mausoleum or catacomb that houses the dead.

Often such magical locations form in the burial crypts of famous necromancer families, but they can also come into being at locations where necromantic magic has permanently affected a well, pool, or other landscape feature.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about a crypt of Wee Jas by making Knowledge (arcana) checks at the appropriate DCs, as given below.

KNOWLEDGE (ARCANA)

DC	Information Gained
10	A crypt of Wee Jas is a site that forms where concentrations of death magic exist.
15	A crypt of Wee Jas allows those skilled with necromantic magic to predict death.
20	Any spellcaster who draws the power of a crypt of Wee Jas into herself can determine how near any given creature is to death.

Description: A crypt of Wee Jas looks like an ornate mausoleum decorated with arcane sigils, glowing skulls, and bones painted in stark white.

Its walls are made of stone or earth, and it invariably contains a sarcophagus that glows with arcane power.

This sarcophagus is empty except for a swirling darkness.

A crypt of Wee Jas carries no odor of death, but the skulls and bones that decorate the walls leave no doubt as to its nature.

The darkness within the sarcophagus makes a faint whooshing sound, but other than that the place is silent.

When a spellcaster who has successfully drawn power from a crypt of Wee Jas uses the granted ability, her eyes briefly become twin pools of swirling darkness.

Prerequisite: Only an arcane spellcaster who can cast at least three different necromancy spells of 2nd level or higher can sense and access the power contained within a crypt of Wee Jas.

Location Activation: To claim the power of a crypt of Wee Jas, a qualified spellcaster must draw forth its power as an act of will.

Doing so requires a full-round action and provokes attacks of opportunity.

Recharge: Once a crypt of Wee Jas has conferred its ability on a single spellcaster, it cannot do so again for one year.

Special Ability (su): A spellcaster who draws forth the power from a crypt of Wee Jas constantly senses how near death any given creature is, as with the deathwatch spell, except that the range is 60 feet.

Duration: The ability to use the deathwatch effect lasts for one year.

Aura: Faint necromancy.

Ability Value: 1,000 gp.

DRAGONSBLOOD POOL

The blood of a dragon carries great arcane power, but only those with draconic bloodlines can access it.

When a dragon dies in a battle of truly epic proportions, its spilled blood can form a dragonsblood pool.

Sorcerers and other creatures with draconic bloodlines can sometimes claim the latent power of such a site for themselves.

A dragonsblood pool can form anywhere that dragons dwell. Many of these sites are on the surface of the earth, hidden in forest glades, volcanoes, icy caves, or the shifting sands of deserts.

Some, however, manifest deep underground, or even within the walls of great cities that have sprung up around them.

Over time, the magic of the dead dragon's blood twists the surrounding land and vegetation into weird shapes reminiscent of sleeping or flying dragons.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about a dragonsblood pool by making Knowledge (arcana) checks at the appropriate DCs, as given below.

KNOWLEDGE (ARCANA)

DC	Information Gained
10	A dragonsblood pool results from the spectacular death of a powerful dragon.
15	A dragonsblood pool can increase the spellcasting power of any creature with a draconic bloodline.
20	A dragonsblood pool has a metaphysical connection to the dragon from which it came. That connection can manifest in peculiar ways in those who harvest its power.

Description: A dragonsblood pool is a roughly circular body of dark liquid about 100 feet in diameter.

Wavelets ripple the surface even when no wind is present, as if some unseen power were disturbing the fluid.

The liquid in the pool is thick, viscous, and dark red-brown in color.

The unmistakable odor of blood permeates the area around the pool.

Dragon Color	Effect
Black or green	The sharp smell of acid permeates the air, and the rocks nearby seem corroded.
Blue or bronze	The air smells of electricity, like the aftermath of a thunderstorm, and touching any portion of the surroundings delivers a small static charge.
Brass	Visitors to the area feel sleepy.
Copper	Visitors feel as if they are moving through quicksand, though their movement rates are not actually affected.
Cold	Visitors to the area feel weak, though their Strength scores are not actually affected.
Red	The area seems unnaturally warm, and the vegetation looks scorched.
White or silver	The area seems unnaturally cold, and the nearby rocks and vegetation are covered with a rime of frost.

The eyes of a spellcaster who has successfully drawn power from a dragonsblood pool turn yellow and take on a draconic appearance.

Prerequisite: To gain the benefits of a dragonsblood pool, a creature must be able to spontaneously cast at least one spell of 2nd level or higher.

Location Activation: A qualified spellcaster can sense the lingering power of a dragonsblood pool and claim a small shard of it by drinking a small amount of liquid (equivalent to the amount in a potion bottle) from it.

A dragonsblood pool holds enough power to boost the spellcasting ability of up to three qualified spellcasters simultaneously.

Recharge: After a dragonsblood pool has conferred its ability three times, it cannot grant its power again for one full year.

Special Ability (ex): A spellcaster who draws forth the power of a dragonsblood pool gains one bonus arcane spell slot of 1st, 2nd, or 3rd level (spellcasters choice, but not of a higher level than the character can cast).

No single creature can have more than one bonus spell slot from a dragonsblood pool at a time.

Duration: The bonus spell slot lasts for one year.

Aura: Strong transmutation.

Ability Value: 6,000 gp (2,000 gp per creature affected).

ETERNAL VORTEX

An eternal vortex is a swirling maelstrom of arcane energy that holds the essence of evocation magic.

Legend holds that such a location is formed from multiple castings of powerful evocation spells in the same spot.

The raw energy of such spells became so concentrated that it could not all dissipate in the usual way.

Instead, remnants of it persisted, eventually forming a vortex of magical power.

An eternal vortex can form in any spot—indoors, outdoors, or underground.

Such magical locations form at the sites of [ great battles in which warmages turned the tide with their powerful spells.

They can also manifest where dragons or other powerful foes once dwelled, particularly if they were eventually brought low by the concerted power of numerous evocations.

Anyone who approaches it becomes aware of a faint rushing sound, like that made by a great dragon's wings. Some small remnant of the dragon's frightful presence remains as well, causing a vague feeling of apprehension in those who come near.

Furthermore, the immediate area is suffused with the essence of the dead dragon's breath, as given on the following table.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about an eternal vortex by making Knowledge (arcana) checks at the appropriate DCs, as given below.

| 15 | An eternal vortex consists of the purest essence of evocation magic.                                                                          |
| 20 | Anyone who meditates beside an eternal vortex can draw a small portion of its magic into herself to augment her evocation spells and effects. |

Description: An eternal vortex looks like a whirlpool of elemental force.

Fire, ice, acid, and bolts of raw electricity swirl down toward its center in an endless dance, each retaining its own character even when in contact with the other forces. Periodically, explosions burst from its walls with deafening crashes, sending gouts of elemental material shooting out into the center of the vortex.

The vortex is blindingly bright and garishly colored, and its opening can be placed horizontally, vertically, or in any other orientation on a surface.

An eternal vortex throbs with power, and the area around it appears blasted and ruined.

The air in the vicinity sparkles with small flashes of energy—tiny arcs of lightning, tongues of flame, rays of cold, and colorful splashes of acid.

The low rumble of the vortex is punctuated by small bangs and pops of stray sonic energy. The vortex inspires a feeling of awe and a twinge of fear in viewers.

When a spellcaster who has successfully drawn power from an eternal vortex casts an evocation spell that deals energy damage, her hands are surrounded with the type of energy that the spell produces.

Although this effect looks impressive, it deals no damage of any kind.

Prerequisite: Only an arcane spellcaster capable of casting at least three different evocation spells of 3rd level or higher can sense and access the power contained within an eternal vortex.

Location Activation: To claim the power of an eternal vortex, a qualified spellcaster must meditate uninterrupted at its lip for 8 hours.

If the required meditation period is interrupted, the character can begin again.

Recharge: Once an eternal vortex has conferred its ability on a single spellcaster, it cannot do so again for one year.

Special Ability (ex): Once per day, a spellcaster who draws forth the power from an eternal vortex can cast an evocation spell of 6th level or lower that automatically repeats its effect on the following round, at the start of the spellcaster's next turn.

The repeated spell has the same point of origin as the original spell, and creatures within the area are entitled to spell resistance and saving throws just as if the spell had been cast normally.

This special ability can only be applied to evocation spells with an instantaneous duration.

Duration: The ability to repeat the effect of evocation spells lasts for one year.

Aura: Strong evocation.

Ability Value: 10,000 gp.

METAMAGIC STORM

Metamagic is a method by which spellcasters alter the way magical energy is formed and used.

Some sages speculate that metamagic has an identity of its own—that it is a wild, untamed force even more mysterious than magic itself.

A metamagic storm embodies these elements, manifesting as glimmering sheets of light in the night sky.

A metamagic storm can form anywhere that magical energy is highly concentrated and only barely controlled.

It comes into being where great arcane duels have occurred, or where wizards or sorcerers have waged war against their foes.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about a metamagic storm by making Knowledge (arcana) checks at the appropriate DCs, as given below.

KNOWLEDGE (ARCANA)

DC	Information Gained
10	A metamagic storm is a site that forms where the concentration of magical energy is high.
15	A metamagic storm offers many ways to sculpt and refine magical energy by modifying spells.
20	Anyone who meditates beneath a metamagic storm can draw a small portion of its power into himself to augment his spellcasting.

Description: A metamagic storm looks like multicolored sheets of flickering light in a night sky. Green, blue, red, and violet radiance coruscates in endless patterns, washing the black sky in jewel-toned shades. The patterns of color reflect the various forms of metamagic that can be employed to form and shape spells. A metamagic storm emits no sound, but a sweet scent pervades the land beneath it.

When a spellcaster who has successfully drawn power from a metamagic storm casts a spell modified by the granted benefit, his eyes briefly blaze with coruscating light. Prerequisite: Only an arcane spellcaster who already possesses at least one metamagic feat can sense and access the power contained within a metamagic storm.

Location Activation: To claim the power of a metamagic storm, a qualified spellcaster must meditate uninterrupted beneath it, absorbing its light, for 8 hours.

If the required meditation period is interrupted, the character can begin again.

Recharge: Once a metamagic storm has conferred its ability on a single spellcaster, it cannot do so again for one year.

Special Ability (ex): A spellcaster who draws forth the power from a metamagic storm gains one metamagic feat of his choice as a bonus feat.

He must qualify for the feat to select it, but the feat gained can't be used to meet any other requirements or prerequisites.

Duration: The bonus metamagic feat lasts for one year.

Aura: None.

Ability Value: 5,000 gp.

RAINBOW FALLS

Wherever magic has been employed to profoundly change the nature of creatures, places, or items, rainbow falls can form.

Such a site holds within it the essence of transmutation magic, and the raw power of such alteration magic ensures that nothing near it is the same as it once was.

Rainbow falls can form in any spot—indoors, outdoors, or underground.

Such magical locations form where magic has been used to sculpt the land, or in the homes of great transmuters.

But they can also manifest in natural locations that are prone to change, such as earthquake zones.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about a rainbow falls by making Knowledge (arcana) checks at the appropriate DCs, as given below.

KNOWLEDGE (ARCANA)

DC Information Gained

- 10 Rainbow falls form where magic has been used to effect profound changes on the landscape or native creatures.
- 15 Rainbow falls consist of the purest essence of transmutation magic.
- 20 Anyone who meditates under a rainbow falls can draw a small portion of its magic into himself to augment his transmutation spells and effects.

Description: A rainbow falls resembles a sparkling waterfall at least two stories high.

The water looks clear for the most part, but every color of the rainbow coruscates through it.

The water falls into a small pool at the base that never increases in size, sending up a multicolored fine spray.

If any creature touches the water, however, the water changes to mist and vanishes, only to return the instant the creature retreats.

Though a rainbow falls runs constantly, its appearance is always shifting.

The rainbow colors that tint its water shift continually, and now and again some object spills over the top of the falls and changes to water on the way down, blending in with the clear stream.

The air in the vicinity smells clean and fresh, and the sound of splashing water provides a pleasant backdrop for the scene.

When a spellcaster who has successfully drawn power from a rainbow falls casts a transmutation spell, his body momentarily seems to shift and distort, though no actual change occurs.

Prerequisite: Only an arcane spellcaster capable of casting at least three different transmutation spells of 2nd level or higher can sense and access the power contained within a rainbow falls.

Location Activation: To claim the power of a rainbow falls, a qualified spellcaster must meditate uninterrupted beside it for 8 hours.

If the required meditation period is interrupted, the character can begin again.

Though the water appears real enough, it changes to air around the spellcaster's body, so he does not get wet during this period.

Recharge: Once a rainbow falls has conferred its ability on a single spellcaster, it cannot do so again for one year.

Special Ability (ex): Once per day, a spellcaster who draws forth the power from a rainbow falls can cast a transmutation spell and triple its duration, to a maximum duration of 24 hours.

Spells with instantaneous durations are not affected.

Duration: The ability to extend the duration of a transmutation spell lasts for one year.

Aura: Moderate transmutation.

Ability Value: 2,000 gp.

SHIELDSTONE CAVERN

Wherever powerful abjuration magic has been used repeatedly to protect a large number of creatures, a shieldstone cavern might form.

Not only do such sites provide useful sanctuaries from attack, but they also have the power to augment abjuration spells for arcane spellcasters who can access their power.

Because of their link with protective magic, shieldstone caverns manifest in or near population centers, particularly those that are frequently besieged by attackers.

Because these sites usually occur within earth or rock, they are found in mountains or hillsides, or beneath cities.

However, a shieldstone cavern can also form within a gigantic tree, or in a significant volume of some solid substance such as ice.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about a shieldstone cavern by making Knowledge (arcana) checks at the appropriate DCs, as given below.

KNOWLEDGE (ARCANA)

DC Information Gained

- 10 A shieldstone cavern forms where magic has been used to protect large numbers of people.
- 15 A shieldstone cavern draws upon the pure essence of abjuration magic.
- 20 Anyone who stands within a shieldstone cavern can draw a small portion of its magic into himself to augment his abjuration spells and effects.

Description: When a shieldstone cavern forms, it hollows a roughly hemispherical cavern out of the solid substance in which it manifests.

Furthermore, the protective magic inherent in such a location causes it to form in the most defensible location in the area.

The cavern formed can be up to 100 feet in diameter, depending on the available space.

The interior of the cavern has smooth walls and floor on which glowing protective sigils form and fade, plus a stream of clear, fresh water.

A ghostly image of a shield covers the entrance, but anyone needing shelter or protection can freely pass through it into the cavern.

Within the cavern, the air is fresh and slightly warm.

Any intelligent creature entering a shieldstone cavern feels a strong sense of peace and safety, as though no harm could breach its walls.

Whenever an arcane spellcaster who has successfully drawn power from a shieldstone cavern casts an abjuration spell, an image of a shield briefly appears on the back of each of his hands.

Prerequisite: Only an arcane spellcaster capable of casting at least three different abjuration spells of 2nd level or higher can sense and access the power contained within a shieldstone cavern, though any creature can take shelter within its confines.

Location Activation: Any creature that enters a shieldstone cavern and asks aloud for protection is affected as if by shield and protection from arrows for as long as it remains within its confines.

Furthermore, the intangible hand becomes a stone door that functions as if affected by hold portal and arcane lock until the protected creature asks for release.

To claim the special ability granted by a shieldstone cavern, a qualified spellcaster must meditate uninterrupted for 8 hours within its confines.

If this meditation is interrupted, the character can begin again.

Recharge: Once a shieldstone cavern has conferred its benefits on a single spellcaster, it cannot do so again for one year.

Special Ability (ex): The effective caster level of a spellcaster who draws power from a shieldstone cavern increases by 1 for all abjuration spells.

Duration: The increase in caster level lasts for one year.

Aura: Strong abjuration.

Ability Value: 1,000 gp.

SOULHEART POOL

A soulheart pool is a body of water that holds the essence of enchantment magic.

Legend holds that such a location is formed from the fleeting memories of hundreds of fey creatures gathering for dance or celebration, and that the concentrated remnants of their ability to charm and beguile others has coalesced into a pool.

A soulheart pool invariably forms in a remote, wilderness location of the sort frequented by fey creatures.

Most are on the surface, but a rare few are found in subterranean areas where fey native to such locations reside.

The existence of a soulheart pool causes the area around it to take on a rosy glow, as if it were suffused with the light of dawn.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about a soulheart pool by making Knowledge (arcana) checks at the appropriate DCs, as given below.

KNOWLEDGE (ARCANA)

DC	Information Gained
10	A soulheart pool is a site that forms where large numbers of fey creatures have gathered.
15	A soulheart pool consists of the purest essence of enchantment magic.
20	Anyone who meditates beside a soulheart pool can draw a small portion of its magic into herself to augment her enchantment spells and effects.

Description: A soulheart pool looks like an unusually calm pool of clear water about 50 feet in diameter.

Sometimes the surface of the pool shimmers briefly, like the surface of a stone in the summer heat.

Anyone who looks into the pool can see fleeting, delightful images of old friends, old flames, and pleasing memories. The area around a soulheart pool feels warm and cozy, and the air smells of whatever scents bring pleasant memories to the visitor.

A pleasant feeling of relaxation envelops the place, making visitors wish to stay.

Whenever a spellcaster who has successfully drawn power from a soulheart pool casts an enchantment spell, her face briefly takes on a fey-like appearance.

Prerequisite: Only an arcane spellcaster capable of casting at least three different enchantment spells of 2nd level or higher can sense and access the power contained within a soulheart pool.

Location Activation: To claim the power of a soulheart pool, a qualified spellcaster must meditate uninterrupted within its confines for 8 hours.

If the required meditation period is interrupted, the character can begin again.

Recharge: Once a soulheart pool has conferred its ability on a single spellcaster, it cannot do so again for one year.

Special Ability (su): Once per day, a spellcaster who draws forth the power from a soulheart pool can recast any enchantment spell (without spending a spell slot) on the turn after she first casts it.

She must target the same creature or creatures she targeted the first time she cast the spell.

Recasting a spell in this way requires a standard action, regardless of the spell's normal casting time.

Duration: The conferred ability lasts for one year.

Aura: Strong enchantment.

Ability Value: 4,000 gp.

VALE OF SMOKE AND FOG

A vale of smoke and fog is a misty depression that holds the essence of illusion magic.

Such a location is usually formed when the same spot has been blanketed by illusion spells for long period of time. Sages speculate that the lingering effects of such magic can degrade reality at the site over time, rendering it blurry and indistinct.

Vales of smoke and fog can form anywhere that has a solid floor—whether indoors, outdoors, or underground.

Such magical locations form at the sites of great wizards' secret hideaways or the former locations of faerie mounds. But they can also manifest where fey lovers have trysted, or where great treasures have lain protected by illusion for centuries.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about a vale of smoke and fog by making Knowledge (arcana) checks at the appropriate DCs, as given below.

KNOWLEDGE (ARCANA)

DC	Information Gained
10	A vale of smoke and fog is a site that forms in areas that have been cloaked by illusion for centuries.
15	A vale of smoke and fog consists of the purest essence of illusion magic.
20	Anyone who meditates within a vale of smoke and fog can draw a small portion of its magic into herself to augment her illusion spells and effects.

Description: A vale of smoke and fog manifests as a depression in an otherwise solid floor.

The depression might be large and deep, forming a valley or a rift in the earth, or it might be small enough to fit inside an underground chamber.

The depression is filled with gray mist that forms swirls and eddies as though disturbed by the passage of an unfelt breeze or an invisible creature.

Muted sounds, such as voices or growls, occasionally issue forth from it.

Anyone who stares into the fog can catch glimpses of people, places, and items, but they vanish back into the fog with tantalizing swiftness.

A deep sense of mystery shrouds a vale of smoke and fog.

The fact that reality itself is weakened here causes those who enter to be assailed by vague doubts.

The mist winds and creeps around the limbs of visitors, and wherever it touches, reality fades.

Creatures see their limbs disappear, or change form, and objects seem to appear in hands touched by the gray mist.

The faces of comrades mutate into those of creatures or comrades long dead.

Sounds and smells occur and then fade, seemingly at random.

When a spellcaster who has successfully drawn power from a vale of smoke and fog casts an illusion spell, her hands appear to turn into fog.

Although this effect looks impressive, no actual change occurs.

Prerequisite: Only an arcane spellcaster capable of casting at least three different illusion spells of 4th level or higher can sense and access the power contained within a vale of smoke and fog.

Location Activation: To claim the power of a vale of smoke and fog, a qualified spellcaster must meditate uninterrupted within its confines for 8 hours.

If the required meditation period is interrupted, the character can begin again.

Recharge: Once a vale of smoke and fog has conferred its ability on a single spellcaster, it cannot do so again for one year.

Special Ability (ex): The duration of all illusion spells cast by a spellcaster who has drawn power from a vale of smoke and fog increases by 50%, and the save DC of each such spell increases by 1.

Duration: The ability to cast enhanced illusion spells lasts for one year.

Aura: Strong illusion.

Ability Value: 18,000 gp.

WORLDMEET GLADE

In any place where conjuration magic is frequently used to summon creatures, some of the essence of those creatures might cling to the environs, creating a magical location that draws summonable creatures to it and augments their power.

Such a location is known as a worldmeet glade, and arcane spellcasters who routinely employ spells of the conjuration school can access its particular magic.

Worldmeet glades typically form in natural environs close to the dwellings of powerful conjurers. Some speculate that these conjurers physically brought the biggest, best, and most robust conjurable creatures to this location, but in fact it is the lingering conjuration magic that both draws them to the site and augments their power.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about a worldmeet glade by making Knowledge (arcana) checks at the appropriate DCs, as given below.

KNOWLEDGE (ARCANA)

DC	Information Gained
10	A worldmeet glade is a site that forms where extraplanar creatures are routinely summoned.
15	A worldmeet glade consists of the purest essence of conjuration magic.
20	Anyone who meditates within a worldmeet glade can draw a small portion of its magic into himself to augment his conjuration spells and effects.

Description: A worldmeet glade is an outdoor location with several different kinds of habitats concentrated in a smaller than normal space.

Typically, such a site includes a forest, a marsh, a freshwater lake, a saltwater lake, and some hilly or mountainous terrain.

Some even include deserts and frozen tundra, depending on the kinds of creatures present.

The temperature in any given section is appropriate for its terrain, and all the sections coexist without “bleeding” into one another.

A worldmeet glade teems with life.

The air is filled with squawks, grunts, roars, and growls, and creatures cavort in every part of the space.

Nuts, berries, and ordinary prey animals abound to satisfy the hunger of every creature present.

If both good and evil creatures are present, they ignore one another rather than fighting.

The thrum of life is everywhere, and an intangible sense of peace and harmony pervades the area.

When a spellcaster who has successfully drawn power from a worldmeet glade casts a summoning spell, the summoned creature is briefly outlined in a green glowing light.

Prerequisite: Only an arcane spellcaster capable of casting at least three different conjuration spells of 3rd level or higher can sense and access the power contained within a worldmeet glade.

Location Activation: To claim the power of a worldmeet glade, a qualified spellcaster must meditate uninterrupted for 8 hours within its confines.

If this meditation is interrupted, the character can begin again.

Recharge: Once a worldmeet glade has bestowed its power on a single spellcaster, it cannot do so again for one year.

Special Ability (ex): A worldmeet glade grants a qualified spellcaster the ability to summon an enhanced version of any creature he could normally call with a given summon monster spell.

The creature gains +2 hit points per Hit Die and a +2 bonus on all saving throws, checks, attack rolls, and damage rolls.

Duration: The ability to summon enhanced creatures lasts for one year.

Aura: None.

Ability Value: 18,000 gp.

COMPLETE PSIONIC (3.5)

CRYSTAL NODE

The earth gives up its secrets guardedly, or not at all. Some believe that the veins of oil running through the miles of strata below are manifestations of the earth's blood, if so, the veins of pure mineral are the world's nerves. In rare instances, pure crystal veins intersect within a cavernous grotto.

These nodes are lit with the slow trickle of psionic power swirling through the earth itself in unknowable telluric currents.

Such grottos are called crystal nodes.

Lore: A crystal node is a psionic location imbued with excess psionic energy.

(DC 15 Knowledge [psionics]).

A crystal node can grant some of its exceptional power to a skilled psionic character who manages to brave the dark tunnels leading to its location.

(DC 20 Knowledge [psionics]) A psionic character who masters the power of a crystal node swells the bounds of his own mind.

For a long time afterward, the character has daily access to more power points than is normally possible for a character of his level.

(DC 25 Knowledge [psionics]) Description (Typical): A wide cavern is lit by dimly glowing mineral veins.

Crystal stalagmites and stalactites punch up through the floor and hang down from the ceiling with angular perfection.

A particularly large crystal pulses slowly at the center of the chamber.

A faint sound resonates through the air.

so deep in pitch that only a bit of the much larger sound is audible to most creatures.

Prerequisite: To access the power contained within a crystal node, a creature must have 1 or more power points.

Location Activation and Effect: A crystal node confers its power upon a creature that stands before the largest crystal in the center of the cavern and expends its psionic focus while touching the crystal.

Each crystal node can affect up to five creatures, dimming more with each conferral, before its psionic charge is depleted for one year.

After a year's period of renewal, it is once again able to confer its ability.

Special Ability Activation and Effect (ex): A character who meets the prerequisites and activates the effect gains the conferred ability: an enlarged power point reserve.

The recipient is treated as if his power point reserve were 5 points higher than normal.

The extra power points return with his regular power points each day after rest—for all intents and purposes, the character simply has more power points per day.

The conferred enlarged power point reserve lasts for one year before it fades.

Aura: Strong psychometabolism.

Ability Value: 4,500 gp per affected creature.

EMERGENT CALDERA

A geologic upwelling of red-hot magma, coupled with an accidental intersection of a large vein of pure crystal, sometimes spontaneously generates an emergent caldera. These psionic locations are thick with heat and geologically generated psionic energy.

Given that regular volcano calderas are rare, emergent calderas are all the more difficult to discover.

Lore: An emergent caldera is a psionic location imbued with psionic pyromantic potential.
(DC 15 Knowledge [psionics]).

The psionic essence of fire contained in locations known as emergent calderas can augment fire-based psionic powers.

(DC 20 Knowledge [psionics]).

Manifesters of sufficient skill who journey to such a location can pull, some of this essence into themselves, enhancing their own fire powers.

(DC 25 Knowledge [psionics]).

Description (Typical): A wide, smoking basin rests deep within the heart of a mountain, perhaps originally uncovered by an abandoned mine.

Jagged shards of reddish crystal protrude here and there from the basin of the caldera, glowing all the redder for the internal heat they contain.

A haze hangs in the air, obscuring the center of the caldera as it smolders with a violent orange light.

Prerequisite: To access the power contained within an emergent caldera, a character must be a manifester of 5th level or higher, with knowledge of one or more psychokinesis energy powers.

Location Activation and Effect: When a manifester who meets the prerequisites climbs into the caldera and plunges into the haze at the center of the volcano (braving mere fire, or perhaps lacing creatures or other guardians of the area jealous of its conferred abilities), he can elect to expend 1 power point as a standard action that provokes attacks of opportunity.

In response, the visible crystals all around discharge what appears to be fiery lightning, and each bolt unerringly strikes the character.

The bolts deal no damage; instead, the manifester gains the special ability of the emergent caldera.

Each emergent caldera can affect only one manifester before its magic is suppressed for one year's time.

After a year of renewal, the location is once again able to confer its ability.

Special Ability Activation and Effect (su): When a manifester who has drawn the power of the emergent caldera into himself manifests a power with the fire descriptor, he is treated as if his manifester level were one higher than normal.

Furthermore, the power manifested gains an additional visual display—the manifester seems to catch fire and wear a flaming nimbus that quickly fades.

The conferred ability lasts for one year before it fades.

Aura: Strong psychokinesis.

Ability Value: 3,000 gp.

PSIGATE

A psigate is a unique location imbued with the psionic impetus of travel.

Created by ancient psionic architects, psigates grant psionic creatures that pass through them the ability to travel to a stated destination.

A psigate is most often found in ruins or among an ancient circle of stones on a high mountain top.

Psigates often lie undisturbed for ages before being discovered, and during this time, strange creatures sometimes pass through the area.

Lore: A psigate is a psionic location imbued with the power of travel.

(DC 15 Knowledge [psionics]).

Intelligent creatures that enter the area containing a psigate gain an effective but fleeting ability to communicate with a creature in another location.

This ability can be used once.

(DC 18 Knowledge [psionics]).

Psionic creatures that expend power points can energize a psigate and use it to step through to a new location.

This ability can be used once.

(DC 21 Knowledge [psionics]).

Description (Typical): A welter of ancient corridors in a buried ruin gives way to a clear, round space bordered by a circle of weathered obelisks.

Some stand, some lean, and some have fallen over completely.

In the past, arches connected every standing stone in a great circle, but time has toppled all but one arch.

Three clear crystals are set in the span of the remaining arch.

Prerequisite: To be affected by the lesser ability of a psigate, a character must have an Intelligence score of 8 or higher and must step into the center of the arch.

To be affected by the greater ability of a psigate, a character must be psionic.

Location Activation and Effect (lesser): A character who wishes to gain a psigate's lesser ability must step into the center of the arch and succeed on a DC 11 Psicraft check.

Once the lesser ability has been conferred, a psigate takes a full week to regenerate its power to confer any ability.

Location Activation and Effect (greater): A character who wishes to gain a psigate's greater ability must step into the center of the arch and expend 9 power points.

Doing this causes the crystals in the vicinity to glow.

Once the greater ability has been conferred, a psigate takes a week to regenerate its power to confer the ability again.

Special Ability Activation and Effect (Lesser) (ps): A creature that meets the prerequisites and activates the lesser effect gains the ability to manifest correspond (EPH 88) once during the next clay with a manifester level equal to his Hit Dice.

The correspond power granted by the gate is a psi-like ability usable only once.

The ability must be used within 24 hours, or it is lost harmlessly.

Special Ability Activation and Effect (Greater) (ps): A creature that meets the prerequisites and activates the greater effect gains the ability to manifest psionic plane shift

(EPH 124) with a manifester level equal to the creature's Hit Dice.

The manifester and any other targeted creatures must walk through the arch to use the power.

The psionic plane shift power granted by the arch is a psi-like ability usable only once.

The ability must be used within 24 hours of walking through the arch, or it is lost harmlessly.

Aura: Moderate telepathy and psychoportation.

Ability Value: 2,500 gp.

COMPLETE SCOUNDREL (3.5)

BUSSENGEIST HAUNT

Tragedy follows calamity, disaster follows catastrophe, and a lifetime of death leads to an afterlife of mourning.

Or, at least, such is the way of the bussengeist haunt.

Spawning wherever some foul action or gross inaction leads to a catastrophe of life-shattering proportions, these dim towers, fallen gatehouses, broken dams, and similarly gloomy locales are infused with an almost palpable regret, a weight that saps all levity and dampens the soul.

Yet despite such a place's ill nature, those bearing a lesser burden of misfortune might cast their weight away in such a place, like tears into a lake.

Often neglected and abandoned to its own unnatural gloom, a bussengeist haunt might appear anywhere that has fallen under the shadow of tragedy.

The specific locale described below is just one example.

Lore: Characters with ranks in Knowledge (history) or Knowledge (religion) can research a bussengeist haunt to learn more about it.

When a character succeeds on a skill check, the following lore is revealed, including the information from lower DCs.

DC 10: Decades ago a great misfortune occurred at Nereid Dam, causing the dam to break and wipe out a nearby town.

DC 15: Nereid Dam now lies in ruins, a crumbling watchtower on one shore being the only evidence that it ever stood.

This tower is rumored to be haunted.

DC 20: A cruel black dragon shattered Nereid Dam.

Supposedly a guard saw the monster as it approached, but rather than alerting the defending garrison, he attempted to flee.

He died with the rest.

DC 25: Some places resound with the gravity of the actions that occurred there.

A bussengeist haunt is such a place, infused with the results of a tragic action or inaction.

Bussengeist haunts often attract mournful ghosts and other regretful or tortured undead.

Description: On the moldy shores of the Wreckwater hunch the last, dilapidated remains of Nereid Dam.

Even flights of bats and the teeming reptiles of the murky water refuse to linger among the crumbling gray stones of the tower that yet stands.

Overgrown and abandoned, its wooden floors long rotted and fallen, the two-story tower is a husk thick with dust and ages-old debris.

Yet when the wind blows across the river and through the sagging ruin, the tower creaks and groans with its own regretful song.

And sometimes, some say, a voice moans over these sounds of decrepitude—a hollow, tortured sigh ever calling, "Why?" While within the boundaries of a bussengeist haunt, no character can use a luck reroll from a luck feat (page 72) or an action point (from the Eberron Campaign Setting).

Prerequisite: A character must be suffering from the effect of a curse or ill luck to make use of a bussengeist haunt.

Location Activation: A character must spend at least 10 minutes describing her problems, curses, or afflictions while within the boundaries of a bussengeist haunt.

At the end of this declaration, she gains the benefit of the location.

The character must be able to confess her own problems aloud; thus, a silenced, petrified, or otherwise muted character cannot receive its ability.

This spiritual unburdening attracts the attention of 1d4 spirits chained to the area (plus one additional spirit for each creature after the first seeking the location's benefit). These spirits manifest in a variety of forms, most commonly as allips, ghosts, or spectres, depending on the level of the characters who enter.

The apparitions are the remnants of those whose acts doomed so many and created the bussengeist haunt.

They are not malicious but seek forgiveness for their actions from any who will listen.

Their terrible forms can make conversation difficult, with confrontation all too common.

Characters who do manage to communicate with these spirits and hearken to their tales can convince the undead to leave them in peace.

Recharge: Any character who enters and activates a bussengeist haunt can acquire its special ability, and multiple characters can do so at the same time.

A character can return to remove a later curse.

Each time requires dealing with the resident spirits, however.

Special Ability (Su): A character who confesses her worries and problems to a bussengeist haunt casts them away, her magical afflictions subsumed into the existing ill will of the location.

Treat this effect as if break enchantment had been cast on the character.

All who benefit from a bussengeist haunt, though, become infused with a portion of the negative emotion and foul stigma associated with this location.

This dark energy applies a  $-1$  penalty on attack rolls, saves, and checks and prevents the character from using any luck rerolls or action points for the next 7 days.

Duration: The break enchantment effect is instantaneous, while the dark energy lingers for 7 days.

Variation: A bussengeist haunt might appear in any of a number of forms.

Any place that holds the psychic residue of a great tragedy might be a focal point for ill emotions, such as the boarded-over office of a neglectful regent, a wizard's workplace housing a still-open portal to the Elemental Plane of Fire, or a charred druidic circle.

Ability Value: 1,000 gp.

CHAMPION'S CROWN

Blood-soaked and forever reverberating with the screams of countless wild crowds, the champion's crown is the goal of every gladiator and sporting competitor, the summit of athletic accomplishment.

A steep ziggurat festooned with laurels and the weapons of past heroes, the champion's crown dominates one end of the imperial coliseum, a distant but everpresent goal.

The adulation of a crazed crowd and the invigorating soul of triumph lend this site its power.

Lore: Characters with ranks in Knowledge (local) can research the champion's crown to learn more about it.

When a character succeeds on a skill check, the following lore is revealed, including the information from lower DCs.

DC 10: The champion's crown is the podium of victors at the coliseum.

DC 15: The champion's crown has numerous tiers used in varying sporting events, but the pinnacle is reserved for those who have accomplished the greatest feats and who have gained the adoration of the crowd.

DC 20: The weapons of past victors adorn the champion's crown.

It is said that these weapons and the spirits of past champions guard the ziggurat against the unworthy and cheaters who attempt to ascend.

DC 25: The champion's crown is far older than the coliseum.

It was once used as an altar by some nameless cult for ceremonial battles and ritual bloodlettings.

Description: Towering over 60 feet tall, the champion's crown is a black stone ziggurat pierced with numerous gigantic nails of rusted iron.

Covering its surface are images of gory battle, and in places, grisly sacrifice.

Much of this dark imagery is covered over with laurel garlands, lengths of blue cloth, and the weapons of past champions, some ages old.

At 10-foot intervals, one on each side of the structure, are platforms made to honor lesser champions and lower-ranking athletes.

These rostrums each correspond to specific rankings, well known by visitors.

Prerequisite: Only a creature that has fairly achieved some great victory in the coliseum, sparked the adulation of a full crowd, and climbs to its highest platform can gain the benefit of the champion's crown.

An official, priest, or master of ceremonies presiding over the coliseum determines who is worthy of such prestige.

Rarely is someone allowed to scale the champion's crown after only one appearance.

This place of honor is reserved for one who has participated in a championship and bested all comers or performed a feat of prowess never before witnessed on the coliseum floor.

Location Activation: A character who arrives at the pinnacle of the champion's crown and spends 1 minute soaking in the adoration of the crowd gains the benefit of this location.

It is possible, though rare, for several characters to be so honored at the same time.

Ascending to the victor's platform of the champion's crown requires a successful DC 12 Climb check.

The top of the ziggurat has room for four Medium creatures.

Recharge: Any champion who has performed admirably in the coliseum might gain the benefits of the champion's crown.

The true love of the people is rare, however, and usually no more than three individuals in a city enjoy the special ability conferred by the location.

Successful gladiatorial groups or sporting teams sometimes exceed this limit.

An individual can regain the benefits of this location after 1 year if he once again accomplishes a crowd-pleasing and noteworthy feat in the coliseum.

Special Ability (Ex): A character who has rightfully ascended the champion's crown becomes a hero of the community that holds the coliseum.

He gains a +2 bonus on Diplomacy, Gather Information, and Intimidate checks made to influence or gain information from any individual who resides in that city. In addition, all residents of the community have a default initial attitude of friendly toward the character if they recognize him.

Duration: The favor of the public is fickle, and thus the benefits of this location fade after 1 year.

Ability Value: 1,000 gp.

COURT OF THIEVES

Below labyrinthine sewers, deep basement vaults, and the lairs of hidden creatures that feast on society's filth lies the lost throne of the underworld, the famed yet forgotten court of thieves.

Generations of bandit lords, robber kings, master assassins, and at times fouler tyrants held court in this sprawling den of excesses hidden beneath the very noses of those who would root it out.

Those days are long past.

Lore: Characters with ranks in Knowledge (history) or Knowledge (local) can research the court of thieves to learn more about it.

When a character succeeds on a skill check, the following lore is revealed, including the information from lower DCs.

DC 10: The court of thieves was a hidden place where anything could be bought and any pleasure could be had.

DC 15: All thieves' guilds and criminal activities were once ruled over by the elusive court of thieves.

DC 20: Treasures from a hundred lands were piled at the feet of the king of thieves as payment for the privilege of conducting crimes within his city.

DC 25: The vices of greedy brigands and honorless rogues eventually splintered the king's power and left the court of thieves abandoned.

Description: The court of thieves is a subterranean palace, a complex of chambers built in secret far beneath city streets. One hall might be as vast and grand as the royal opera house—and indeed might have been used for a similar purpose—while the next could be nothing more than a crumbling chamber of exposed rock and sewer pipes.

The most splendid and remarkable room in the court of thieves is the hall housing the Throne of Thieves.

This giant-sized throne of the king of thieves is ornately and fantastically sculpted, and within its nooks and crevices generations of rogues kept their precious trinkets, lucky charms, and symbols of Olidammara.

Although the court was largely stripped by the criminals who abandoned it, these trifles were left behind out of respect for the dethroned king of thieves.

The entrance to the court of thieves has long been lost.

Hidden deep within an ancient sewer, crumbled warehouse, tavern basement, or in the shadow of some bastion of law, the door is masterfully disguised.

Those who do manage to find it must then best a gantlet of tricks and traps designed to keep out uninvited guests, not to mention overcoming whatever creatures might now call the court of thieves home.

Prerequisite: A character must navigate the court of thieves all the way to the Throne of Thieves to gain the location's benefit.

Location Activation: A character merely has to take a trinket from the Throne of Thieves to gain this location's special ability.

Although ancient, these baubles are not valuable, being lucky copper coins minted by long fallen empires, archaic or no-longer-used holy symbols, rusted lockpicks scored with an owner's initials, and similar such items.

Recharge: As long as the location of the court of thieves remains a secret, anyone can gain its benefits.

Should its location become widespread knowledge, though, the exceptional nature of having visited the place fades, and it no longer confers any benefit.

Special Ability (Ex): Any character who successfully navigates the dangers of the court of thieves is blessed with the great luck of Olidammara.

He gains a bonus luck feat (page 72) of his choice, though he must still meet the normal prerequisite for that feat.

Furthermore, any character who bears an item taken from the Throne of Thieves is considered to have touched rogue royalty.

The character doubles his Charisma bonus (if any) for the purpose of determining his Leadership score when trying to attract a cohort or followers with levels of bard or rogue.

In addition, the character can also have double the normal number of contacts within the criminal underworld (DMG2 153).

Duration: The luck feat gained by the character is a permanent benefit.

The other benefits last as long as the character possesses the trinket taken from the Throne of Thieves.

Ability Value: 6,000 gp.

FROG GOD'S FANE

Half sunken and overgrown by ages of decay, the ancient temple of a strange, little-known deity molders deep in the jungle marshes.

Its location has been long forgotten, and now the only attendants of the frog god's fane croak lazily amid moldy relics and fallen statues forming islands of gold.

Lore: Characters with ranks in Knowledge (history), Knowledge (nature), or Knowledge (religion) can research the frog god's fane to learn more about it.

When a character succeeds on a skill check, the following lore is revealed, including the information from lower DCs.

DC 15: Countless civilizations have risen and fallen deep within the jungle.

Their ruins still lie hidden from civilized eyes.

DC 20: A cult that worshiped Wastri, a deity shaped like a frog, once held great influence from a stone temple in an untamed swamp.

Frogs of incredible size are sometimes spotted near mysterious ruins deep within the flooded jungle.

DC 25: Wastri directs his followers to further the needs of humans and amphibians.

His worshipers once erected rich temples to honor their deity in the murky places his swamp-born wards might attend.

Description: Crumbling and overrun by denizens of the swamp—especially bloated and oversized amphibians—the frog god's fane is now more a monument to rot than to any deity.

Whole floors have been flooded, and the riches that once lined the walls and served as sacrifices have been lost to ages of muck and eroding waters.

Yet within its deepest sanctuaries, through passages filled by brackish waters, lie hidden chambers in air pockets.

Within these depths remain treasures untouched by swamp water, but even more valuable are the strange secrets carved in stone: sculptures once viewed only by the highest of priests, which detail worship by both human and amphibian.

Prerequisite: A character must discover the ruined frog god's fane and reach the secret chambers within its depths to gain the benefit of this location.

Location Activation: A character must spend at least 10 minutes in meditation on the scriptural secrets hidden deep within the frog god's fane, and make a DC 15 Intelligence check at the end of that time.

If she succeeds on this check, she gains the benefit of this location.

Otherwise, she has failed to accept some vital truth among the markings.

Recharge: Any number of characters who plumb the treacherous depths of the frog god's fane can gain the benefit of this location.

A character who fails the required Intelligence check cannot try again until her Intelligence score permanently increases.

Special Ability (Ex): Upon succeeding on the Intelligence check to understand the frog god's secrets, the character makes a fundamental connection, gaining an insight into truths she never realized were linked.

She gains Skill Focus in her choice of Knowledge (history), (nature), or (religion) as a bonus feat.

Furthermore, even if the character has no ranks in the chosen Knowledge skill, she can make checks with that skill as if she were trained.

Duration: A character who gains the insight of the frog god's fane learns its secrets and gains its benefits permanently.

Variation: Any seat of great and unfathomable information might grant an effect like that of the frog god's fane.

For example, a metal tower crashed from the stars might grant those who come to understand it bonuses on Knowledge (architecture and engineering) and Knowledge (the planes) checks, while the ancestral library of the imperial family might provide insights into Knowledge (geography) and Knowledge (nobility and royalty).

Such information is too esoteric to share, requiring one to experience it personally to gain its benefits, but a character might learn some important piece of information that could lead to further adventures.

Ability Value: 2,000 gp.

HEWARD'S HALL

An obscure patron of bards and other music makers, the mortal Heward studied the ancient songs of the elves, and legends say, eventually brought music to humanity.

He created instruments that are commonplace today and composed some of the oldest songs and airs known to the race, as well as crafting a unique pipe organ known for its mystical properties.

His furthering of music led bards to honor Heward's name, eventually giving rise to a number of cathedrals, concert halls, and playhouses dedicated to the first bard, each taking the name "Heward's hall".

Some of these sites are incredibly inspirational to songsmiths and musicians of all walks, instilling within them the ability to push their own talents to extreme heights.

The specific locale described below is just one example of such a legendary performance venue.

Lore: Characters with ranks in Knowledge (religion) can research a Heward's hall to learn more about it.

When a character succeeds on a skill check, the following lore is revealed, including the information from lower DCs.

DC 15: Heward is the patron of bards and human musicians. This result reveals the commonly known stories about him.

DC 20: Numerous concert halls and theaters are known as Heward's halls, in honor of the first bard.

Some such places are very inspirational to artists.

DC 25: Owners, managers, or religious groups controlling a legendary Heward's hall often restrict access to only the most accomplished or promising artists.

Description: Behind the stage of the Saltmarsh Playhouse's main auditorium is an organist's nook, a famed Heward's hall.

The high-ceilinged room allows an accompanist to play the impressive, two-story pipe organ without its size and grandeur detracting from performances on stage.

The walls of the room and many of the towering brass pipes of the organ are engraved with well-known songs that are said to have been composed by Heward or that are dedicated to the first bard.

Directly over the dual keyboards of the organ sits a stone bust of Heward himself, a foppish-looking rake with a jaunty smile and tousled hair.

Despite all efforts, the Saltmarsh Heward's hall is constantly plagued by small rodents, and the organ itself requires frequent retuning.

Aydi Zarastian, guildmaster of the playhouse, created this Heward's hall as a matter of tradition, holding that all the finest theaters and performance halls should host such a shrine.

As a connoisseur of the arts, she grants access only to those with formal training and true musical talent.

Prerequisite: To gain the special ability conferred by a Heward's hall, a character must possess at least 10 ranks in a Perform skill and must succeed on a DC 30 Perform check made as part of a public performance in the hall.

The performer can't take 10 on this check.

The owner of the Heward's hall, however, might place additional conditions or limits on access.

Though most performers prefer to use the Saltmarsh hall's great pipe organ (requiring Perform [keyboard instruments]), other types of performances are permitted.

Location Activation: At the conclusion of a successful performance in a Heward's hall, the location immediately confers its benefit on the performer.

Recharge: Only one character per night can gain the benefit of a Heward's hall.

Special Ability (Ex): A character who successfully completes a performance in a Heward's hall gains Skill Focus (Perform) as a bonus feat, using the same Perform subcategory as that of the performance.

If the performer already has Skill Focus (Perform) in that subcategory, he can instead select any bardic music feat for which he meets the prerequisite.

The performer also gains a +2 competence bonus on Craft checks to create new artistic compositions related to Perform skills.

This bonus applies to all forms of performance, from acting to instrumental play.

Variation: This version of a Heward's hall enhances the Perform skill, but the idea of an inspirational site yielding greater works can easily be adapted to any number of other skills.

For example, the nonmagical forge in which a famous weapon or legendary artifact was created might inspire future generations to create great works in metal over its fires, granting Skill Focus (Craft) or even an item creation feat.

Duration: The bonus feat granted by a Heward's hall is permanent.

The competence bonus on Craft checks fades after 1 year.
Ability Value: 5,000 gp.

HIGHEST SPIRE

Jutting past castle towers and temple minarets, the highest spire reaches from the mortal world to stab at the very heavens.

The pinnacle of what is unquestionably the tallest building in the city, it draws travelers from the world over to stand in its incredible shadow.

Every year as part of an annual festival, a handful of daredevils and adventure seekers gaze up at the famed structure's summit not out of awe, but determined to reach the top.

Lore: Characters with ranks in Knowledge (local) can research the highest spire to learn more about it.

When a character succeeds on a skill check, the following lore is revealed, including the information from lower DCs.
DC 10: The highest spire is aptly named, being the tallest building in the city and possibly in the civilized world.

DC 15: Every year, during a citywide festival, a dozen or so revelers attempt to scale the highest spire to win the title "Spire Hawk".

DC 20: Every year several people are bruised and battered climbing the spire, and occasionally the attempt ends in a climber's death.

DC 25: No guard can patrol the spire's highest reaches. Who knows what might lurk or roost in its cloud-cloaked recesses? Description: Hewn from a distant mountain peak's night-blue marble and studded with star-like pearls, the highest spire itself is a 50-foot steeple sculpted as an exulting, spear-wielding archon.

The spire is mounted atop the tallest building in the city, whose summit is a full 1,333 feet from the ground.

Constructed by magic, and supposedly held aloft by the same forces, this wonder of the world compels visitors to attempt to scale it year after year.

The loftiest reaches of the highest spire are treacherous, and not simply due to the height.

The tower's many projections and the intricate wings and folds of the spire's angelic form create sizable niches.

Rumors have long held that dire bats, arrowhawks, even a dragon or even a territorial and ill-tempered couatl might live at the peak of this artificial mountain.

(The DM should assign one or more hostile creatures to interfere with progress to the top, based on the average level of the ascending characters).

Prerequisite: A character must climb from the building's base to the peak of the highest spire on a specific holiday to gain the location's benefit.

Location Activation: The building the highest spire perches atop requires successful DC 25 Climb checks to scale, while climbing the convoluted spire itself requires only DC 15 checks.

The first character to complete the ascent immediately benefits from the location's conferred power.

Climbers are not permitted to use any spell, wondrous item, or other magical effect to assist in the climb (including Strength-boosting effects) or to reach the pinnacle by other means.

Scarring the building, such as by hammering pitons into its surfaces, is also forbidden, although nondamaging climbing implements and mechanical inventions are acceptable.

Festival mages check all participants and closely monitor their ascents.

These mages commonly prepare protective spells such as feather fall to aid imperiled climbers, but athletes are encouraged to make their own precautionary arrangements.

The ban against magic is the only rule once climbing begins.

Interfering with other climbers is frowned upon, but not prohibited.

Recharge: After a character has become the year's Spire Hawk, no one can benefit from the highest spire's special ability for 1 year.

The next year, a new climber earns the title (this could be the previous year's champion).

No character can gain more than one bonus feat from the highest spire, though a second victory still bestows the other benefits noted below.

Special Ability (Ex): The experience of scaling the highest spire grants a character insight into her own athletic talents that she never realized before.

She gains her choice of Skill Focus (Climb) or Agile Athlete (see the sidebar) as a bonus feat.

Additionally, that character earns the title “Spire Hawk” and receives a finely crafted wooden medallion carved with the image of the archon at the tower’s peak.

For the next year, that character holds the champion’s title and wears this medallion, gaining a +2 circumstance bonus on Diplomacy checks when dealing with natives of the city that is home to the highest spire.

In addition, the character receives a 10% discount on all goods and services purchased in that city (up to a maximum discount of 1,000 gp on items or services costing 10,000 gp or more).

Duration: The bonus feat conferred by this location is permanent.

The other benefits remain until the next city festival, a year later.

At that time, the character must be the first to climb the highest spire again, or lose these benefits to the new champion.

Variation: The highest spire might be any location that involves an annual feat of skill and endurance.

Changing this location to suit your campaign is as simple as making the event a lengthy marathon, night-long ball, song competition, scavenger hunt, or any other trial that tests the competitors’ ability and stamina.

The frequency of the event might also change, shortening to several times a year or becoming a rare festival that occurs only once a decade.

The difficulty might also change, even requiring Constitution checks (perhaps of increasing difficulty) and imposing ever greater restrictions to continue competing. Ability Value: 3,000 gp.

IRON WYRM VAULT

The lifeblood of a nation—tax gold, imperial heirlooms, the spoils of forgotten wars—all flows here to the ultimate in security, the iron wyrm vault.

This treasure trove of a centuries-old dynasty is every thief’s dream, and countless such dreamers have lost their lives reaching for their fantasy.

Lore: Characters with ranks in Knowledge (nobility and royalty) can research the iron wyrm vault to learn more about it.

When a character succeeds on a skill check, the following lore is revealed, including the information from lower DCs.

DC 10: The rulers of the nation keep their most precious treasures in an ancient trove called the iron wyrm vault.

DC 15: Countless traps, magical wards, and undying guardians protect the iron wyrm vault, their numbers expanding with the innovations of each new generation.

DC 20: Members of the royal family know how to circumvent the defenses of the iron wyrm vault.

DC 25: The iron wyrm vault is named for its most obvious decoration, which is also rumored to be its strongest guardian.

Description: While the entire compound that houses the iron wyrm vault is known by that name, the actual vault is a hall of interconnected chambers that include lavishly appointed salons, display rooms of glittering artifacts, and repositories brimming with loose coins.

Above the entire complex hangs a sculpture of exquisite quality, an amazingly life-like dragon the size of a great wyrm shaped from pure adamantine.

Within the iron wyrm vault, dazzling treasures collect dust. The smells of old air and mild decay mingle with the static charge of magical protections so numerous and powerful as to be palpable.

Those who enter feel as though they’re being watched. Some of the relics stored here are kept hidden away out of fear, and other ancient treasures even have minds and agendas all their own.

The DM should populate the iron wyrm vault with magic traps and guardians appropriate for the levels of the characters infiltrating it.

(Avoid protections that would damage the valuables, such as a fireball trap in a room filled with priceless paintings).

Against epic-level characters, the great sculpture might be an ironwyrm golem of immense size (Draconomicon 165).

Prerequisite: A character must successfully navigate the protections of the iron wyrm vault to claim its benefit.

Location Activation: Simply breaking into the iron wyrm vault without the knowledge or consent of the place’s royal owners isn’t quite enough to make the burglar a legend.

Only claiming an item from the iron wyrm vault as proof of its infiltration activates the location’s benefit.

At the DM’s option, those captured after reaching the vault might gain the location’s benefit even if they have nothing to show for their visit, as tales of their daring act—and perhaps even subsequent trial—spread through word of mouth.

Recharge: Any character who enters the iron wyrm vault, successfully passes its countless guardians and trials, and returns with proof of his accomplishment gains the location’s benefit.

Special Ability (Ex): Breaching the iron wyrm vault grants the thief great insights into his own powers of stealth and thievery.

The character gains one of the following as a bonus feat: Nimble Fingers, Skill Focus (Disable Device, Hide, Move Silently, Open Lock, or Search), Stealthy, or Tactile Trapsmith (see the sidebar).

Furthermore, the successful burglar gains a +2 bonus on Diplomacy and Gather Information checks made to influence or gain information from any thief, freedom fighter, or other opponent of the nation that controls the iron wyrm vault (as long as the character’s escapade is known to them).

However, he takes a –2 penalty on the same checks made in conjunction with guards, members of the noble class, and other “respectable” sorts within that nation.

These benefits are in addition to any treasure the character might have stolen from the iron wyrm vault.

Duration: Having infiltrated one of the most heavily guarded treasure troves in the land makes a thief a legend for life, so the effects of the iron wyrm vault are permanent.

Variation: The iron wyrm vault might be any heavily guarded trove of any kind of treasure, perhaps the storehouse of an influential religion, crime syndicate, or powerful monster.

Likewise, what is stored within also might be anything of value, such as a library of arcane tomes, an arsenal of powerful weapons, or even a prison filled with dissidents. The DM should alter the groups affected by the location's benefit to better fit any modifications.

Additionally, the skill check modifiers granted by this location might vary depending on what a character takes from the vault.

One who steals the crown of the nation's founder, for example, might receive a +5 bonus (and -5 penalty) instead of the normal +2/-2.

Ability Value: 3,000 gp.

OLIDAMMARA'S SHELL

One legend associated with the bard of the gods, Olidammara, tells how the divine trickster was once cornered by an army of ogres.

Rather than fight the savages, the keen-witted deity surrounded himself with a spherical carapace that resembled the shell of an armadillo.

Once he was thus covered, the god teleported away from inside the shell, leaving the brutes to beat on the empty container for a year and a day.

After the ogres finally dispersed, a greedy wizard discovered the shell and sought to use the divine creation for his own purposes.

Much to the mage's chagrin, however, the shell disappeared from his possession.

Now Olidammara's shell appears and disappears at the fickle god's whim, and might show up in unlikely places.

Lore: Characters with ranks in Knowledge (religion) can research Olidammara's shell to learn more about it.

When a character succeeds on a skill check, the following lore is revealed, including the information from lower DCs.

DC 15: A successful check reveals the story of Olidammara using his shell to escape the army of ogres.

DC 20: Olidammara's shell teleports from place to place, seemingly with the same whimsical nature as Olidammara himself.

Those who find the shell and touch it gain good luck.

DC 25: Olidammara's shell does not allow itself to be tracked or exploited.

Those who find it should thank their own luck and benefit from the shell while they can, for it vanishes as quickly as it appears.

Description: Approximately 4 feet in diameter, Olidammara's shell is an unbreakable sphere with a dull metallic luster.

In its jumps from place to place, the shell takes on slightly smaller or larger sizes to better suit its surroundings, and even takes on different colors, at the deity's whim.

Wherever it appears, the shell floats of its own accord as it spins slowly, even in places where such magical levitation would normally be impossible.

Furthermore, an antimagic field apparently surrounds the shell, since most magic seems unable to work in its vicinity.

Currently Olidammara's shell hovers about 40 feet off the ground, just above a massive pedestal perched atop the gigantic gate of Castle Granite Throne, the fortress home of a clan of stone giants.

Although the giants largely ignore the shell, rumors have started circulating in nearby towns of the divine object's appearance.

Adventure-seekers and daredevils have sought to magically fly or levitate up to the shell, only to fall upon entering its antimagic field.

Since none have dared enter the castle and the giants thwart all attempts to reach it, the shell remains a goal as obvious and tempting as it is frustratingly elusive.

Prerequisite: A character must have at least one luck feat (page 72) to gain the benefit conferred by Olidammara's shell.

Location Activation: A character who touches and remains in contact with Olidammara's shell for 1 full round gains this location's special ability.

Recharge: Any number of characters can potentially make use of Olidammara's shell.

However, every time a character tries to touch the shell, roll 1d6.

On a result of 1, the shell teleports away before being touched, preventing the character from gaining any benefit.

Otherwise, the location confers its special ability.

Special Ability (Su): Upon touching Olidammara's shell, a character gains a bit of the luck of the trickster deity. She gains five extra luck rerolls, each of which can be used only once.

Duration: The benefits of Olidammara's shell are both temporary and whimsical.

Whenever a character gains the benefit of the location, the DM should roll 1d6 twice, multiplying the result of one die roll by the other.

After that number of days have passed, the special ability ends and the character loses any remaining bonus luck rerolls conferred by the location.

Variation: Olidammara's shell might appear anywhere that is exotic, that is considered to be lucky, or that requires extraordinary skill or luck to reach.

Such a location might be a patch of four-leafed clovers, a tiny island in the middle of the ocean, the top of an earthen spire jutting from a flat plain, the peak of a ruined tower, or the depths of a wyvern's lair, as long as it appeals to Olidammara's sense of humor.

The bard of the gods enjoys watching the drama surrounding his shell play out.

He might even appear in disguise to start spreading rumors of the shell's latest location.

For even greater enjoyment, sometimes Olidammara surrounds the shell with magical effects in addition to antimagic field.

Spells such as antipathy, blade barrier, fire shield, prismatic wall, and sympathy are favorites of the trickster deity.

Ability Value: 1,000 gp.

OTYUGH HOLE

Beneath the cells and barred yards of Saint's Cudgel prison, below even its darkest, most secret torture pit, lies an unfinished earthen basement that holds a crumbling, ruined well.

This fetid ditch is more than just a filthy oubliette—it's the otyugh hole, the bottomless black, the "O" hole, a fearful legend among those who claim to fear nothing, and its threat can snap even the maddest rabblouser back into line.

The most feared punishment within a prison, castle, or torturer's tower, an otyugh hole is a wretched solitary confinement pit meant to disgust and break the hardest convict.

Any who enter face torments of darkness, silence, and dread, but those who survive this ordeal become underworld legends.

Lore: Characters with ranks in Knowledge (local) can research an otyugh hole to learn more about it.

When a character succeeds on a skill check, the following lore is revealed, including the information from lower DCs.

DC 10: An otyugh hole is a prison cesspit where the foulest prisoners are punished.

DC 15: Many forced into otyugh holes go mad, die, or simply disappear.

Those who emerge intact are heroes among their fellow felons.

DC 20: Some jailers purposely or knowingly allow creatures such as ghouls, slimes, or otyughs access to prisoners thrown into otyugh holes.

Description: An otyugh hole is a disgusting, lightless pit about 30 feet deep, usually covered with a rusting metal hatch.

Crudely dug to serve its purpose or converted from some other ruined shaft, it reeks with the debris and waste that trickles down from above.

No sensory stimuli reach those forced into an otyugh hole except the warm wetness and gagging reek of its knee-deep putridity.

Crude graffiti, scrawled by countless previous inmates, often lines the lower walls of these horrific prisons.

Those who have survived an otyugh hole can determine who really has endured its torments and who's a liar by asking about such scrawls.

One infamous otyugh hole bears the frantically scratched name, "Maercon", both a marker and a warning against the tentacled something that lurks behind one of the pit's crumbling walls.

Prerequisite: A character must be 3rd level or higher to gain the special ability conferred by an otyugh hole.

Location Activation: Gaining the benefits of an otyugh hole requires enduring a full week of existence within it.

The difficulty of this achievement depends on the state of the pit, the level of guard activity surrounding it, and the attentiveness of any creatures that scour the pit for food.

Gaining access to an otyugh hole—a place that officials deny even exists—might be a challenge as well.

One difference between an otyugh hole and the other legendary sites described here is that a lawbreaking character might end up visiting (and thus gaining the benefit of) an otyugh hole without intentionally seeking it out.

Recharge: While any number of characters could receive its special ability, an otyugh hole can grant its benefit only once per week, and only to a single character (since it is a form of solitary confinement).

The site gains its power from its exclusivity: Should a large number come to know the pit's details and claim (truly or not) to have weathered its foulness, the exceptional accomplishment of enduring the otyugh hole is cheapened and the site's benefits fade.

Special Ability: A character who has endured a week in an otyugh hole gains a noticeable edge to his personality, which manifests as a bonus feat chosen from the following list:

Extend Rage (see the sidebar), Iron Will, Menacing Demeanor (see the sidebar), or Skill Focus (Intimidate).

The character must still meet the normal prerequisite for the feat chosen.

Duration: The emotional scars, and the resulting personality change, resulting from confinement in an otyugh hole are permanent.

Ability Value: 3,000 gp.

DROW OF THE UNDERDARK (3.5)

BLOOD OF THE SPIDER QUEEN

Eons ago when Lolth faced Corellon Larethian in open battle, she was bested and forced to flee for her life.

Wounded and beaten, she dragged herself through the caverns of the Underdark, beyond her enemy's sight, until she could reach a portal to her beloved Demonweb Pits.

Trailing her in this exodus from the world of light were her followers, the drow, who then established themselves in Underdark caverns to create a new society below the ground.

During Lolth's flight, she bled her divine essence onto the stones over which she passed.

Locations where this occurred became known as the blood of the Spider Queen.

The dark elves prize these locations highly, and most ancient drow cities were founded on or near such sites.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about a blood of the Spider Queen site by making Knowledge (dungeoneering), Knowledge (history), or Knowledge (religion) checks at the stated DCs.

DC 10 (religion): The blood of the Spider Queen marks sites where Lolth dragged her wounded body through the Underdark to escape the wrath of Corellon after their epic battle.

DC 15 (dungeoneering, history, or religion): Many of the oldest drow cities were established around sites where blood of the Spider Queen was found.

DC 20 (history or religion): A drow priestess who discovers a blood of the Spider Queen site is considered to be blessed by Lolth and a leader among drow.

DC 25 (religion): A drow priestess who discovers a blood of the Spider Queen site is granted a boon by Lolth and can start her own noble house as a matriarch.

DC 35 (dungeoneering, history, or religion): A successful check at this level allows the character to learn or recall a clue to the location of a specific blood of the Spider Queen site.

DC 40 (religion): The abilities granted by a blood of the Spider Queen site work for male and female drow alike, but the priestesses carefully guard this secret.

Description: Blood of the Spider Queen is always either a shallow pool of ichor or a long, sticky smear on a tunnel wall or floor.

It can be found in any type of Underdark terrain but is never located on the surface.

The ichor is a thick, black, tar-like substance that gives off a foul odor detectable from 20 feet away.

If found in a pool, the ichor is never more than a few inches deep; if found in a smear, it is never more than 20 feet long.

Regardless of the size of the deposit, the ichor always remains fresh and never dries out.

Unintelligent Underdark creatures instinctively avoid such sites.

Intelligent creatures immediately notice a sinister air that seems to hang about this foul effluvia.

A drow who has claimed the power granted by a blood of the Spider Queen site looks no different, but other dark elves notice that a palpable aura of Lolth's favor surrounds the beneficiary.

Prerequisite: Only a drow follower of Lolth who has at least five cleric levels can gain the power granted by a blood of the Spider Queen site.

The priestesses want everyone to believe that the recipient must also be female, but it works for males as well—a secret that is extremely well guarded among drow clergy.

Location Activation: To claim the gift of a blood of the Spider Queen site, the drow must sacrifice a living, sentient creature to Lolth at the blessed site and let the blood of the offering mingle with the divine substance of the deity.

Recharge: Once it has granted its gift to a drow cleric of Lolth, a blood of the Spider Queen site cannot do so again as long as that drow lives and remains a faithful follower of the deity.

Special Ability (Su): A blood of the Spider Queen site grants the recipient a +5 bonus on Bluff, Diplomacy, Gather Information, and Intimidate checks when dealing with other drow.

She also gains a recognizable aura of having been chosen by Lolth to lead the dark elves.

This latter benefit has no game effect other than to let other drow know that they risk Lolth's wrath by openly defying the recipient.

Finally, a blood of the Spider Queen site grants the recipient the effect of a permanent sanctuary spell against other drow, whether or not they are followers of Lolth.

Any dark elf who wants to attack the recipient must make a successful DC 22 Will save to follow through with the attack.

Lolth bestows these particular benefits to create some semblance of hierarchy for her otherwise chaotic children. The powers of a blood of the Spider Queen site bring just enough stability to the drow to support the noble houses and the cities.

Of course, the gift is a double-edged sword, because the social structure guarantees constant infighting among the dark elves, but Lolth finds the internecine warfare a source of great amusement.

Duration: Any drow who receives this blessing from Lolth retains it as long as she lives and remains loyal to the Spider Queen.

In rare instances, the gift has endured beyond death when contingencies were in place to facilitate a quick transition to an undead state (such as when a drow dies and becomes a lich).

Aura: Strong transmutation.

Ability Value: 5,000 gp.

CAVESTALKER FORMATION

Many fanciful rock formations add to the mysterious allure of the caverns of the Underdark.

The whimsical shapes seem to have been carved by a deliberate hand, and these sculptures of living stone these never fail to inspire awe.

In many cases, they are not natural formations at all, but rather manifestations of the spirits of intrepid explorers who met their ends in the environment to which they were so attuned.

When an experienced cavestalker falls prey to one of the many perils of the Underdark, the site of his death is sometimes imbued with his knowledge of the stone tunnels, spawning a cavestalker formation.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about a cavestalker formation by making a Knowledge (dungeoneering) check against the stated DCs.

DC 10: When a worthy cavestalker dies in the Underdark, sometimes the earth absorbs his spirit into the stone.

DC 15: Fanciful rock formations exist throughout the Underdark, but some of them hold the souls of cavestalkers and can bestow powers when touched.

DC 20: Someone who gains the power of a cavestalker formation can use it to hide from the senses of Underdark creatures.

Description: A cavestalker formation appears to be a natural sculpture of stone in an underground setting.

Exotic in appearance, the formation is usually a fancifully shaped column.

stalagmite, drapery, or flowstone.

Often, a discernible image of a face is seen in the smooth folds and wrinkles of the stone, or a humanoid outline is vaguely apparent.

In other cases, the image takes the form of a symbol associated with the late cavestalker—perhaps a broken sword for someone who carried a shield decorated with that emblem, or a swooping bat for one who was a wererat.

Prerequisite: The power of a cavestalker formation can be tapped only by a character who has levels in the barbarian, ranger, or druid classes; or by someone who has levels in the cavalord, cavestalker, deep diviner, or prime Underdark guide prestige classes.

Location Activation: A qualified character can sense the lingering essence of a cavestalker formation and claim a portion of its power by spending a full-round action in direct contact with the stone.

This requirement could prove problematic if the formation grows on the roof of a cavern, behind a thundering waterfall, or above a river of molten rock.

Recharge: Up to five creatures can tap the power of a given cavestalker formation before it is spent.

The formation must then recharge for one year before it can confer its benefits again.

Special Ability (Ex): When activated, a cavestalker formation grants the recipient a +5 competence bonus on Hide checks made in an underground setting.

Duration: The Hide check bonus lasts for one year.

Aura: Strong illusion (glamer).

Ability Value: 1,500 gp.

FONT OF DELIGHTS AND SORROWS

Legends tell of ancient altars dedicated to perverse deities that are tucked away in remote reaches of the Underdark.

Explorers who are willing to give their souls to whatever mad god watches over such an altar can gain great power.

Far too many fools succumb to these seductive evils, selling their lives cheaply to sample the delights promised by these profane places.

These altars, known as fonts of delights and sorrows, occur spontaneously.

They can appear anywhere, at any time, but they rarely remain intact for long before a paladin or some other do-gooder destroys them.

Thus, fonts of delights and sorrows are more common in the direst corners of the Underdark, where only the most courageous or the most reckless would dare venture.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about a font of delights and sorrows by making Knowledge (religion) checks against the stated DCs.

DC 15: A font of delights and sorrows comes into being at the behest of dark deities.

DC 20: Those who drink from its waters invite unspeakable evil into their hearts and minds.

DC 25: These locations are often protected by clerics of evil gods, who usher willing victims onto the path of corruption, and who murder heroes seeking to destroy the font.

Description: Although fonts of delights and sorrows appear in a variety of locations, they are identical in form.

They are wide stone basins decorated with horrid images of mortals capering with lewd demons or performing unspeakable acts of depravity and cruelty.

Within each font is a pool of black liquid that seems to drink in the light.

No noise or tremor can disturb its obsidian surface.

Only when physically touched does the fluid assume the normal qualities of water—albeit unclean water.

Prerequisite: Only a creature that has attained at least five levels is worthy of gaining the evil blessing of a font of delights and sorrows.

Location Activation: Anyone who tastes the brackish waters immediately takes 1d6 points of Constitution damage.

If the drinker meets the prerequisite, he also gains the benefits of the font.

Each font has enough black water for three people.

Drinking from the same font of delights and sorrows more than once does not confer additional benefits, but each sip still deals 1d6 points of Constitution damage.

Recharge: Once three people have sampled the waters of a font of delights and sorrows, regardless of whether they were qualified to receive its power, the font is dry.

It cannot be used again until it refills itself one year later.

Special Ability (Ex): A font of delights and sorrows corrupts the recipient, twisting his nature so that his alignment changes to evil.

In addition, whenever he deals at least 1 point of damage in a round, he gains a +2 profane bonus on his attack rolls in the following round.

If he takes at least 1 point of damage in a round, he gains a +1 profane bonus on his saving throws for 1 round.

If the recipient regains his original alignment through the use of an atonement spell, he loses all benefits gained from the font of delights and sorrows.

Duration: The alignment change is permanent (unless reversed by magical means, as noted above), and the other effects last for 66 days.

Aura: Strong enchantment.

Ability Value: 3,000 gp (1,000 gp per affected creature).

GARDEN OF RESPLENDENT HUES

Long have explorers told of giant subterranean forests of fungi and caverns filled with multicolored mushrooms, puffballs, and molds.

Certainly, the drow and other denizens of the Underdark harvest fungi to supplement their meager diets, slake their thirst with fermented juice, clothe themselves in the fibers, concoct unguents and infusions, and more.

But not all such forests are mere gardens.

Some simmer with a deep and abiding hunger for vengeance.

Such sites seek out champions to avenge past misdeeds, and those who accept this solemn responsibility undergo a profound transformation.

A garden of resplendent hues sometimes grows where a myconid sovereign and its tribe are butchered.

The spores released from their dying bodies hang in the air, touched and changed by the suffering of the slain.

When the spores finally settle onto the rocks, they find purchase and grow, becoming a breathtaking garden of resplendent hues.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about a garden of resplendent hues by making Knowledge (nature) checks at the stated DCs.

DC 10: Gardens of resplendent hues are strange places of unusual growth found only in the Underdark.

DC 15: Though harmless, a garden of resplendent hues hums with the promise of violence and old anger, the power of which seems to resonate with the magic used by druids and rangers.

DC 20: A druid or ranger who spends time in a garden of resplendent hues can undergo a transformation.

DC 25: A druid or ranger found worthy by a garden of resplendent hues transforms into a plant, crossing his form with that of a myconid.

Description: A garden of resplendent hues is a strange and unsettling place.

Typically forming in a hidden grotto, its size varies depending on the cavern.

All gardens of resplendent hues burst with fungi, including large and small mushrooms, molds, and puffballs; assorted creepers and climbers; and sweeps of yeasts, smuts, and rusts glistening on the walls. The air is humid, warmed by geothermal vents that made the sites ideal lairs for the myconid tribes that once lived there.

Prerequisite: To be found worthy of a garden of resplendent hues and benefit from its power, a character must be nonevil, and she must be a druid of at least 5th level or a ranger of at least 8th level.

Location Activation: To be chosen by a garden of resplendent hues, a character must spend at least 1 hour exploring the area without damaging any of the fungi.

She can move through the area alone or with companions, but if an evil character is present, the candidate will not be chosen.

At the end of the hour, she must attempt a DC 15 Will save. If she fails the save, she becomes dazed (as the daze monster spell) for 1 minute, and nothing else happens.

If she succeeds on the save, the garden of resplendent hues selects her as its champion.

Recharge: Once it has granted its ability to a single druid or ranger, a garden of resplendent hues cannot do so again for one year.

Special Ability (Ex): The recipient's type changes to plant. She gains immunity to poison, sleep, paralysis, stunning, and polymorph.

She also gains damage reduction 5/bludgeoning or slashing.

However, unlike other plants, she is still affected by critical hits, and she gains only a +4 circumstance bonus on Will saves against mind-affecting spells and spell-like abilities.

In addition, her skin acquires a dazzling pattern of colors reflecting the hues found in the garden.

In all other respects, she is unchanged.

Duration: Any druid or ranger who receives the special ability retains it for 30 days.

Aura: Strong transmutation.

Ability Value: 10,000 gp.

UTTER DARK

There are whispers of places so deep in the Underdark that no light has ever shone there, areas where darkness reigns supreme.

Buried beneath miles of stone, these realms are known, only to a few.

Those who receive the gift of an area of utter dark are said to be changed forever.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about an area of utter dark by making Knowledge (dungeoneering) checks at the stated DCs.

DC 15: An area of utter dark is a place of magical darkness that is impervious to light.

DC 20: To those willing to feed it, an area of utter dark reveals the secrets of shadow.

DC 25: A character who gives a portion of his soul gains the ability to peer through darkness as if it were an area of bright light.

The recipient can also use darkness effects with greater proficiency.

Description: Found only in the deepest regions of the Underdark, areas of utter dark are supremely resistant to light.

Not even magical light can penetrate their murky borders. When light shines upon an area of utter dark, it reveals an impenetrable black wall, similar to the surface of a sphere of annihilation.

Creatures that have darkvision can still see within an area of utter dark, though at half the normal distance.

Those who peer inside find that everything within the zone is covered in pale dust, with no signs of life.

Prerequisite: Only a character who has attained at least ten levels can benefit from the effects of an area of utter dark.

Location Activation: An area of utter dark devours life as greedily as it eats light.

A character who enters the utter dark must immediately succeed on a DC 18 Fortitude save or gain one negative level.

Each round he remains in the utter dark, he must succeed on another save or gain an additional negative level.

Only a qualified candidate who remains in the utter dark for 5 consecutive rounds can benefit from its power.

The negative levels are not permanent, fading 1 hour after the character exits the area of utter dark.

However, anyone who is slain by exposure to the life-draining blackness rises as a shadow 1d4 rounds later.

Recharge: Once an area of utter dark confers its ability on a single character, it cannot do so again for one year.

Special Ability (Su): Any qualified character who taps into the power of the utter dark gains the ability to see perfectly in darkness, including magical darkness.

If the recipient is a spellcaster, he also gains the ability to cast spells that have the darkness descriptor at his caster level +2.

Duration: The conferred ability lasts for one year.

Aura: Strong evocation and transmutation.

Ability Value: 5,000 gp.

DUNGEON MASTER'S GUIDE 2 (3.5)

ALTAR OF THE DREAMWALKER

The altar of the dreamwalker is a location imbued with the pure essence of dreams.

Some sources maintain that it was formed by great arcane magic; others insist that it gained its power from the presence of powerful fey creatures who held sway over dreams.

Still others claim that it formed spontaneously as a manifestation of some unknown connection between the physical world and the realm of dreams.

Whatever its origin, the altar grants intelligent creatures that spend sufficient time in its presence a limited ability to communicate through dreams.

An altar of the dreamwalker can form in nearly any terrain or location, but it generally appears in a sylvan glade with a large stump or felled tree of great age that serves as the center of its magic.

Over time, the magic of the altar works subtle changes on the nearby terrain, causing plants to flourish and infusing the air with a thin but ever-present mist.

Those who visit it are aware of a certain freshness in the air and an unmistakable feeling of growth and life.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about an altar of the dreamwalker by making Knowledge (arcana) or Knowledge (nature) checks at the appropriate DCs, as given below.

DC 15: An altar of the dreamwalker is a magical location imbued with the power of dreams.

DC 20: Intelligent creatures that rest within the glade of an altar of the dreamwalker gain an effective but fleeting ability to communicate through their dreams.

DC 25: An altar of the dreamwalker is somehow bound to the magic of the fey as well as to the magic of dreams, but little is known about this obscure connection.

Description: The glade in which an altar of the dreamwalker stands is peaceful and serene.

Lush grass covers the ground between healthy trees of great age.

In the center of a small clearing, the ancient, moss-covered remains of a long-fallen tree offer silent testimony to the age of the place.

All its vegetation, from grass to shrubs to ancient trees, seems flush with life and unusually hale.

The fresh scents of wildflowers deepen the sense of peace in the glade, and even the sounds of the forest seem distant and muted near the altar.

Prerequisite: An altar of the dreamwalker confers its special ability only on a creature with an Intelligence score of 8 or higher.

Location Activation: To gain the ability conferred by an altar of the dreamwalker, a qualified creature must spend 8 hours in uninterrupted rest within 20 feet of the central stump or tree.

Ethereal creatures cannot approach within 30 feet of it, and any effect that would cause a creature within this radius to become ethereal automatically fails.

Small communities of mystics occasionally gather for years around an altar of the dreamwalker to study the magic of dreams and the power of the altar.

An altar of the dreamwalker grants the dream ability to only one creature at a time.

If multiple qualified creatures are present simultaneously, only one (selected at random) gains the power.

Recharge: Once it has granted a creature the dream ability, an altar cannot do so again for 24 hours.

Special Ability (sp): An altar of the dreamwalker grants the ability to use dream (caster level equals creature's character level) as a spell-like ability once during the next 24-hour period.

If not used within that timeframe, the ability is lost.

Duration: A creature that uses the ability and then spends another 8 hours resting within the required radius of the altar regains the ability as soon as the altar has recharged (24 hours after gaining it the first time).

The creature can continue this process for as long as desired, regaining the ability each day, so long as it does not leave the area of the altar.

Once it passes beyond the 20-foot radius of the altar's power, it can never again gain the ability.

Aura: Moderate illusion.

Ability Value: 2,000 gp.

DRAGONHEART TOMB

When a great dragon dies while using powerful necromantic magic underground, the place of its death might be imbued with mighty arcane energies that convert it into a dragonheart tomb.

Characters skilled in necromantic magic can sometimes claim some of the latent power of such a site for themselves.

Dragonheart tombs occur only underground.

Over time, the magic inherent in such locations shifts and warps the terrain within the immediate area, withering any vegetation, darkening the stone, and decaying any natural substances.

Creatures entering such an area become aware of an unnerving chill in the air.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about a dragonheart tomb by making Knowledge (arcana) checks at the appropriate DCs, as given below.

DC 10: A dragonheart tomb results from the death of a great dragon.

DC 15: A dragonheart tomb forms only when a great dragon dies while using or affected by powerful necromantic magic.

DC 20: Each such location holds tremendous necromantic power that can be drawn forth and used to augment necromantic spells.

DC 25: A dragonheart tomb is always watched and guarded—not just by those who seek to harvest its power for themselves, but also by those who seek to prevent the spread of necromancy.

Description: A dragonheart tomb is a vast, expansive, foreboding cavern.

Its rough floors are sloped and jagged, and the ceiling has a wealth of stalactites, clefts, and other uneven features.

The immense bones of a great dragon, lying inanimate in the center of the cavern, are the most striking features of the tomb.

The cavern seems perpetually dim, and although light sources function normally within it, an impression of darkness still remains.

Any illumination seems temporary and somehow fragile, as if the tomb were just waiting to return to its natural state of darkness.

The air within a dragonheart tomb also has an unnatural chill, which many liken to the presence of death.

Although the creeping darkness and seeping cold produce no tangible effects, creatures find their stay within a dragonheart tomb both unnerving and unpleasant.

Prerequisite: To gain the benefits of a dragonheart tomb, a creature must be able to cast at least one 2nd-level or higher necromancy spell.

Location Activation: A qualified spellcaster can sense the lingering power of a dragonheart tomb and claim a small shard of it by spending a full-round action within its confines.

A dragonheart tomb holds enough power to boost the spellcasting ability of up to two qualified creatures simultaneously.

Recharge: After a dragonheart tomb has conferred its ability twice, it cannot grant its power again for one full year.

Special Ability (ex): A spellcaster who draws forth the power of a dragonheart tomb has an effective +1 caster level for all necromancy spells.

Duration: The increased caster level lasts for one year.

Aura: Strong necromancy.

Ability Value: 2,000 gp (1,000 gp per creature affected).

EMBER OF DRAGONFIRE

When a fire-breathing dragon uses its breath weapon to destroy other powerful creatures, the site of the battle might become an ember of dragonfire.

Imbued with the dragon's magical fire, the souls of the destroyed creatures are bound into the ground where they died.

This contained dragonfire causes the entire area to glow with an unsettling heat, which serves to mark the location as magical, although it causes no physical harm.

While the magic of the dragonfire remains active, the affected area also glows with a dim, reddish light reminiscent of a dimly glowing ember.

An ember of dragonfire can form anywhere that a powerful creature dies in the flames of a dragon's breath.

But such sites are still quite rare, even when powerful dragons are present.

Even a great wyrm red dragon might die of old age without ever causing the formation of such a site.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about an ember of dragonfire by making Knowledge (arcana) checks at the appropriate DCs, as given below.

DC 10: An ember of dragonfire is a magical site that holds the essence of a dragon's fiery breath.

DC 15: Embers of dragonfire are sometimes created when powerful creatures succumb to a dragon's fiery breath.

DC 20: Embers of dragonfire allow certain creatures to capture the essence of the dragon's fire within themselves and breathe it out again, just like a dragon can.

Description: Because they form in a wide variety of locations and under various conditions, embers of dragonfire tend to have few physical characteristics in common.

The only constants are the heat that pervades the area and a faint red glow in the area of the original embers.

Prerequisite: Only a creature with more than three character levels can sense and access the power of an ember of dragonfire.

Location Activation: Any qualified creature that enters the site senses the burning energy that suffuses it.

By spending a full-round action within the confines of the ember, the creature takes this latent power into itself.

If the creature is unintelligent, it instinctively draws forth the power of the site unless directly threatened by combat.

Recharge: Once an ember of dragonfire has conferred its power upon a single creature, it cannot do so again for one year.

Special Ability (su): A creature empowered by an ember of dragonfire can breathe a 30-foot cone of fire once per day.

Every creature within the cone takes 6d8 points of fire damage, though a successful Reflex save (DC 10 + 1/2 empowered creature's HD + empowered creature's Con modifier) halves the damage.

A creature gains this ability in addition to any breath weapon or similar ability that it might already have.

Duration: The ability to breathe fire lasts for 30 days.

Aura: Strong evocation.

Ability Value: 8,000 gp.

EVERFLAME

When a gate or portal to the Elemental Plane of Fire remains open for several centuries, a small area around it can become imbued with the magic of everflame.

Such a location holds the magical essence of fire within it, and creatures of sufficient power sometimes draw this power into themselves, gaining resistance to fiery spells and effects.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about an everflame by making Knowledge (the planes) checks at the appropriate DCs, as given below.

DC 10: An everflame is a remnant of a long-standing connection to the Elemental Plane of Fire that holds the essence of that fiery realm.

DC 15: Those who withstand the fires of an everflame can resist the effects of any fire.

DC 20: Anyone who stands within an everflame can draw a small portion of its magic into himself and gain significant resistance to fire damage.

Description: An area imbued with the power of an everflame is perpetually afire.

Its flames burn creatures and objects brought into contact with them, but they do not spread, nor do they burn more than a few yards of the surrounding area.

Because an everflame is found only where a gate to the Elemental Plane of Fire has long existed, it typically occurs near some natural source of fire or heat.

For example, an everflame might be found on a rocky island floating in lava, at the heart of a vast, scorching desert, or in some other such fearsomely hot location.

Prerequisite: Only a creature with at least five character levels can access the power of an everflame, and then only if it possesses no special ability that would lessen the damage it takes from fire.

Location Activation: The fires of an everflame occupy a 15-foot-radius, circular area and provide flickering illumination to a distance of 15 feet beyond that in every direction.

This magical fire deals 2d6 points of fire damage per round to any creature in contact with it.

To gain the benefit of an everflame, a qualified creature must stand unprotected within its confines for at least 3 rounds. Each incarnation of an everflame affects only five creatures at a time.

If more than five creatures qualify for the benefit at once, only five of them (chosen randomly) gain it.

Recharge: Once an everflame has conferred its benefits on five creatures, it cannot confer them again for one year.

Special Ability (ex): A qualified creature gains resistance to fire 5.

A creature that already has resistance to fire from another source (even a temporary one, such as a spell or item) gains nothing from an everflame.

A creature can gain this benefit only once, and its effects do not stack with any other resistance to fire the creature might subsequently gain.

Duration: The resistance to fire lasts for one year.

Aura: Strong abjuration and evocation.

Ability Value: 10,000 gp (2,000 gp per affected creature).

FOOTSTEPS OF CORELLON

Throughout the long history of his people, the great elf deity Corellon Larethian has performed many wondrous deeds.

Although he is a being of great peace and wisdom, Corellon Larethian has at times been forced to pit his own immense power against the foes of the elves in direct combat.

In a few such battles, the divine might that Corellon exerted has forever altered the landscape around the site. Such locations, which are known as footsteps of Corellon, are imbued with shards of the deity's power.

When discovered, these sites become sacred to the elves, who visit them in pilgrimages.

In rare instances, such a location might yield up some of its intrinsic power to a worthy elf, granting her the ability to deliver terrible attacks with a ranged weapon.

Sometimes a community that knows of a nearby footstep selects its fittest and most deserving elves and bids them race to the location.

The elf who arrives first gains the benefit of the site and proves both her athletic prowess and her devotion to Corellon.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about a footstep of Corellon by making

Knowledge (history) or Knowledge (religion) checks at the appropriate DCs, as given below.

DC 10 (history or religion): The footsteps of Corellon are sites where Corellon Larethian took up weapons against the foes of the elves.

DC 15 (history): Footsteps of Corellon are not formed every time Corellon comes to the Material Plane. They form only when he expends a great deal of his own power there.

DC 15 (religion): On rare occasions, footsteps of Corellon are imbued with some of the deity's divine power, and powerful elves benefit from exposure to them.

DC 20 (religion): An elf who journeys to one of the footsteps of Corellon and meditates there gains the ability to make powerful ranged smite attacks.

DC 35 (history or religion): A successful check at this level allows the character to learn or recall a clue to the location of a footstep of Corellon.

Description: Footsteps of Corellon differ greatly in appearance, since their physical attributes are determined more by where the struggle took place than by any action on the part of Corellon.

Footsteps of Corellon have been found in stark mountain passes, deep underground grottos, and various other strange locations in which the great elf deity brought his power to bear against an enemy of his people.

Regardless of their physical appearance, these sites are filled with a sense of peace and purpose.

Any intelligent creatures that enter the area perceive this intangible quality, but it seems particularly palpable to elves of good alignment.

Prerequisite: Only a good-aligned elf with at least five character levels can gain the power granted by a footstep of Corellon.

Location Activation: To gain the benefit of a footstep of Corellon, a character must meditate uninterrupted for 1 hour within its confines.

If this meditation is interrupted, the character can begin again.

Recharge: Once a given footstep has bestowed its power on a single elf, it cannot do so again for five years.

This long recharge time makes the power a particular prize for the discoverer of such a site or the winner of a race to it.

Special Ability (su): A footstep of Corellon grants the ability to make one ranged smite attack each day with a thrown weapon or projectile weapon.

On a successful attack, a bonus equal to the elf's character level (maximum +20) applies to his damage roll.

This smite ability can be used against any creature within 30 feet that the elf considers a foe.

He must declare that he is using the smite ability before making the attack roll.

If the attack misses or if the target is farther than 30 feet away, the smite has no effect, and its use is lost for the day.

Duration: Any elf who receives the smite ability retains it for 30 days.

Aura: Strong transmutation.

Variants: If the elf deity Corellon Larethian is not included in your campaign's pantheon, you can easily associate the footsteps of Corellon with some other deity that plays a similar role in your campaign.

You can even change the elven flavor of these sites by choosing a nonelf deity known for archery.

If you change the deity, however, you must also alter the name of the magical location.

Ability Value: 4,000 gp.

GARDEN OF NATURE'S RAGE

Filled with the raw, unknowable force of nature itself, a garden of nature's rage is a wellspring of power that is overlooked by those who delve into the mysteries of the arcane or master the rituals of the divine.

In these few rare places, the raw anger of nature manifests and pours directly into the servants and defenders of wild places, increasing their power dramatically.

Certain powerful druids can draw the power of a garden of nature's rage into themselves to make their wild shaped forms more powerful in combat.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about a garden of nature's rage by making Knowledge (nature) checks at the appropriate DCs, as given below.

DC 15: Gardens of nature's rage are wild, powerful places filled with the pure essence of nature's might.

Their power is connected in some way with the powers of the druid orders.

DC 20: A druid who roams a garden of nature's rage gains some special enhancement to his druid abilities.

DC 25: A high-level druid who successfully bonds with a garden of nature's rage draws some of its power into herself. After this process is complete, she uses this power to enhance her physical prowess while in wild shape.

DC 35: A successful check at this level allows the character to learn or recall a clue to the location of a garden of nature's rage.

Description: A garden of nature's rage is always a wild and untracked stretch of wilderness.

It can occupy an area as small as a few miles across in each direction, or as vast as an entire continent.

Regardless of its size, the garden is filled with lush and healthy plant life, wild and powerful animals, and a variety of fey creatures.

The animals in a garden of nature's rage grow larger and stronger than others of their kind, and dire animals frequently prowl these magical sites.

The sounds of nature fill a garden of nature's rage.

Massive dire animals crash through dense vegetation and underbrush in search of prey, while smaller animals clamor and call to one another.

A druid who claims the power granted by a garden of nature's rage takes on a feral and twisted appearance when in wild shape.

For example, she might have longer, more vicious fangs and a feral cast to her features in the form of a dire wolf, or jagged stone spikes protruding from her body in earth elemental form.

Her normal form is unaffected except for a gleam of power in her eyes.

Prerequisite: Only a 5th-level or higher druid can access the power contained within a garden of nature's rage.

Location Activation: To claim the power of a garden of nature's rage, a qualified druid must roam the area for one week, living off the land and sleeping in the open.

Her animal companion can accompany her, but otherwise she must undertake the ordeal alone.

While wandering the garden, the druid uses her spells and abilities normally, but she must befriend and aid the natural creatures she encounters and fight only against those who would do harm to the natural world.

Recharge: Once it has granted its ability to a single druid, a garden cannot do so again for one year.

Special Ability (ex): Once per day, when the druid assumes a new form through the use of her wild shape ability, she gains a +4 enhancement bonus to Strength and Constitution.

These increases last as long as the druid maintains the wild shape.

She decides whether or not to use this ability upon activating her wild shape.

Duration: The enhanced wild shape ability lasts for one year.

Aura: Strong transmutation.

Ability Value: 8,000 gp.

HEART OF FLAME

Great concentrations of magical fire sometimes imbue the places where they occur with an inner fire of their own. These locations, known as hearts of flame, form from large outpourings of magical fire, the presence of several extremely powerful fire elementals, or even the opening of a gate or portal to the Elemental Plane of Fire.

Despite the fact that they arise from a variety of sources, hearts of flame are extremely rare.

Since magical fire touches almost any sort of place, hearts of flame vary considerably in appearance and location.

One might be a cave whose dark stone walls seem to flicker with buried fire; another could be a forest glade that somehow radiates heat and light without producing actual flame.

Whatever their outward nature, however, all such places draw their power from the purest essence of magical fire.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about a heart of flame by making Knowledge (arcana) checks at the appropriate DCs, as given below.

DC 15: A heart of flame is a mystical location imbued with the purest essence of fire.

DC 20: The magical essence of fire contained in locations known as hearts of flame somehow augments fire-based magic.

DC 25: Spellcasters of sufficient skill who journey to a heart of flame can pull some of this power into themselves to increase the power of their fire spells.

Description: Though hearts of flame vary greatly in appearance, all have some similar characteristics.

Such a site always seems unusually warm, and the ambient temperature is never lower than 70° Fahrenheit.

If the normal ambient temperature of the surrounding area is higher than 70°, the temperature within the heart of flame is warmer still—usually at least 10° to 15° above the norm.

In addition, the entire area glows dimly with a red, flickering light, as if unseen flames were reflecting off the walls, the ground, or even nearby creatures.

This flickering light provides dim illumination throughout a heart of flame.

Flames seem to spring from the body of any spellcaster who has successfully drawn power from a heart of flame whenever she casts a spell with the fire descriptor.

But although this fiery nimbus looks impressive, it deals no damage of any kind.

Prerequisite: Only a 5th-level or higher spellcaster can access the power contained within a heart of flame.

Location Activation: To claim the power of a heart of flame, a qualified spellcaster must stand within its confines and draw its power into herself by force of will.

Doing so requires a full-round action and provokes attacks of opportunity.

Recharge: Once a heart of flame has conferred its ability on a single spellcaster, it cannot do so again for one year.

Special Ability (su): A spellcaster who draws forth the power from a heart of flame has an effective +1 caster level for all spells with the fire descriptor.

Duration: The conferred ability lasts for one year.

Aura: Strong evocation.

Ability Value: 3,000 gp.

HEART OF ICE

In a manner similar to its antithesis, the heart of flame, a heart of ice is a place imbued with the magical power of cold. A heart of ice results from the death of a powerful being with the cold subtype, the presence of powerful cold magic, or a long-open gate or portal to a plane of great cold.

Despite the fact that they arise from a variety of sources, hearts of ice are extremely rare.

Since magical cold touches almost any sort of place, hearts of ice vary considerably in appearance.

Most are in arctic climes, hidden away in deep crevasses or ice caves of great size and awe-inspiring beauty.

Regardless of its other characteristics, however, a heart of ice is always frigid.

Stones, vegetation and objects within its confines quickly become rimmed with frost, the air is uncomfortably cold, and the ground is slippery with ice.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about a heart of ice by making Knowledge (arcana) checks at the appropriate DCs, as given below.

DC 15: A heart of ice is a mystical location imbued with the purest essence of cold.

DC 20: The magical essence of cold contained in locations known as hearts of ice somehow augments cold-based magic.

DC 25: Spellcasters of sufficient skill who journey to a heart of ice can pull some of this power into themselves to increase the power of their cold spells.

Description: Though hearts of ice vary greatly in appearance, all have some similar characteristics.

Such a site always seems unusually chilly, and the ambient temperature is never higher than 40° Fahrenheit.

If the normal ambient temperature of the surrounding area is lower than 40°, the temperature within a heart of ice is cooler still—usually at least 10° to 15° below the norm.

In addition, the entire area glows dimly with a dull, blue radiance, which provides dim illumination throughout a heart of ice.

The air in such a place is always crisp and clean.

The air around any spellcaster who has successfully drawn power from a heart of ice drops a few degrees in temperature and takes on a crisp, icy clarity whenever he casts a spell with the cold descriptor.

This inherent coolness deals no damage of any kind.

Prerequisite: Only a 5th-level or higher spellcaster can access the power contained within a heart of ice.

Location Activation: To claim the power of a heart of ice, a qualified spellcaster must stand within its confines and draw its power into himself by force of will. Doing so requires a full-round action and provokes attacks of opportunity.

Recharge: Once a heart of ice has conferred its ability on a single spellcaster, it cannot do so again for one year.

Special Ability (su): A spellcaster who draws forth the power from a heart of ice has an effective +1 caster level for all spells with the cold descriptor.

Duration: The conferred ability lasts for one year.

Aura: Strong evocation.

Ability Value: 3,000 gp.

HEART OF STONE

Hearts of stone always form underground, in spots where strange and wondrous events have occurred.

These rocky caverns might form around a powerful concentration of earth magic (such as the earth nodes described in the FORGOTTEN REALMS supplement Underdark), but more often they result from powerful earth-based spells, the presence of several earth elementals, or a gate to the Elemental Plane of Earth.

Although they look like normal caverns, the closed-in spaces that make up a heart of stone are filled with the unadulterated power of the earth.

Most creatures that visit such a spot know that it is a special location, even if they cannot identify its exact nature.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about a heart of stone by making Knowledge (arcana) or Knowledge (dungeoneering) checks at the appropriate DCs, as given below.

DC 15 (arcana): A heart of stone is a mystical location imbued with the purest essence of elemental earth.

DC 20 (arcana): The magical essence of stone contained in locations known as hearts of stone somehow augments abjuration magic.

DC 25 (arcana): Spellcasters of sufficient skill who journey to a heart of stone can pull some of this power into themselves to increase the power of their abjuration spells.

DC 35 (dungeoneering): Each heart of stone consists of only one kind of rock.

The area around such a location can sometimes be identified by the unusual purity of its stone.

Description: Hearts of stone are always found underground. Though they vary greatly in location, size, and appearance, one common feature sets them apart from natural stone formations: Each heart of stone is composed of only one kind of stone or mineral, as are the areas in its immediate vicinity.

This uniformity occasionally helps a skilled dungeoneer find these rare locations.

Any creature affected by a spell that has been augmented by the power of a heart of stone takes on a vaguely crystalline appearance.

The edges and ridges of its form are sharper than normal, as though the creature's body had been carved from crystal.

This change in appearance is merely cosmetic and lasts only as long as the spell's effects do.

Prerequisite: Only a 5th-level or higher spellcaster can access the power contained within a heart of stone.

Location Activation: To claim the power of a heart of stone, a qualified spellcaster must stand within its confines and draw its power into herself by force of will.

Doing so requires a full-round action and provokes attacks of opportunity.

Recharge: Once a heart of stone has conferred its ability on a single spellcaster, it cannot do so again for one year.

Special Ability (sp): A spellcaster who draws forth the power from a heart of stone channels spell energy into damage reduction.

He casts a particular spell from the school of abjuration, but instead of benefiting from the spell normally, he gains damage reduction equal to twice its spell level with respect to adamantite.

The ability can be used once per day and lasts for up to 10 minutes.

The damage reduction can be dispelled as if it were a separate spell cast by the spellcaster.

Duration: The conferred ability lasts for one year.

Aura: Strong abjuration.

Ability Value: 2,000 gp.

HEART OF WIND

In a manner similar to its antithesis, the heart of stone, a heart of wind is a place imbued with the magical power of elemental air.

A heart of wind results from the presence of several powerful air elementals, the use of great air-based magic, or even the opening of a gate or portal to the Elemental Plane of Air.

Despite the fact that they arise from a variety of sources, hearts of wind are extremely rare.

A heart of wind forms in nearly any kind of place—even deep underground.

Typically, however, it forms high above the ground's surface—either at the peak of a great mountain, or suspended in the air high above an open plain.

A strong wind blows constantly through a heart of wind, though its direction and exact strength might change from time to time.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about a heart of wind by making Knowledge (arcana) checks at the appropriate DCs, as given below.

DC 15: A heart of wind is a mystical location imbued with the purest essence of elemental air.

DC 20: The magical essence of elemental air contained in locations known as hearts of wind somehow augments the use of magic.

DC 25: Spellcasters of sufficient skill who journey to a heart of wind can pull some of this power into themselves to gain the ability to cast spells normally delivered by touch as ranged effects.

Description: Hearts of wind are typically located so high above the ground that even normal flying creatures have difficulty reaching them.

But air elementals, djinn, and other creatures of elemental air do not share this difficulty in attaining the extreme altitudes at which a heart of wind is usually found.

In addition to the difficulties imposed by the altitude, those seeking a heart of wind must deal with the fact that it is made out of air and nothing else.

See invisibility, true seeing, and similar spells are of no help in locating a heart of wind, but a Spot check (DC 50, reduced as appropriate for distance) reveals it.

Unlike most other magical locations, hearts of wind are mobile, and they tend to act like bubbles of pure, magically charged air moving through the upper reaches of the atmosphere.

Thus, finding one usually requires both powerful divination magic and a great deal of luck.

A few such locations are stationary, and occasionally one moves slowly enough that a determined searcher can learn relevant clues about its location.

The more mobile hearts of wind, however, leave no traces of their passage and are impossible to locate if they are not within range of a divination spell.

A fierce gust of wind jostles the hair and clothes of a spellcaster who has successfully drawn power from a heart of wind whenever she casts a touch spell at range (see Special Ability, below).

Although this breeze is not strong enough to adversely affect the spellcaster or other creatures, all those nearby hear and feel the rushing of air.

Prerequisite: Only a 5th-level or higher spellcaster can access the power contained within a heart of wind.

Location Activation: To claim the power of a heart of wind, a qualified spellcaster must stand within its confines and draw its power into himself by force of will.

Doing so requires a full-round action and provokes attacks of opportunity.

Recharge: Once a heart of wind has conferred its ability on a single spellcaster, it cannot do so again for one year.

Special Ability (su): A spellcaster who draws forth the power of a heart of wind uses touch spells at range.

Once per day, she treats the range of any touch spell of 3rd level or lower as if it were 30 feet.

The spell affects the target normally, just as if the spellcaster had made a successful melee touch attack.

If the spell actually is used as an attack (that is, against a foe), the spellcaster must succeed on a ranged touch attack instead of the melee touch attack that would normally be required.

This ability has no effect on spells whose ranges are other than touch.

Duration: The conferred ability lasts for 30 days.

Aura: Strong transmutation.

Ability Value: 2,000 gp.

LAST STAND OF THE IRONSWORN

Centuries ago, a group of powerful dwarf warriors was given a desperate mission—to hold the underground passage leading to a great dwarf city against an encroaching horde of hobgoblins and bugbears while the city was evacuated.

When the intrepid band of dwarves beheld the onrushing foes, they knew that their chances of holding out long enough for all their fellows to escape were vanishingly small.

Looking to one another for courage, the dwarves swore a powerful joint oath to hold the passage—not for the safety of the city and not for their own honor, but for the brotherhood they had built among themselves.

Against all expectations, the Brotherhood of the Ironsworn held the evil humanoids at bay for three entire days.

Only when word came that the last dwarf was safely away from the city's gates did the remaining Ironsworn finally fall.

Because of the Ironsworn's devotion and extreme heroism, the spot where they made their last stand gained mystical powers of its own.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about the Last Stand of the Ironsworn by making Knowledge (history) or Knowledge (arcana) checks at the appropriate DCs, as given below.

DC 15 (history): The Last Stand of the Ironsworn is a dwarven legend about a group of warriors who held off a large horde of humanoids bent on attacking a city.

DC 25 (history): The Last Stand of the Ironsworn is one of the greatest tales of dwarven military might, and the site of these heroic dwarves' last stand is said to have magical powers.

DC 25 (arcana): The Last Stand of the Ironsworn is an obscure magical location that allows groups of good-aligned heroes to swear a powerful oath of mutual protection.

Description: The Ironsworn made their final stand just inside the gates of their great underground city.

A grand passage, once lined with the artistry of proud dwarven craftsmen, leads to a gaping hole more than 40 feet high and nearly as wide.

Beyond this gap lie the ruins of the great city itself.

Once, a magnificent pair of adamantine doors kept unwelcome visitors out, but the same great forces that shattered the Ironsworn's might pulled these gates down and used the adamantine as raw material for several powerful magic weapons and suits of armor.

The skin of creatures bound to the power of the Ironsworn gains a vaguely metallic sheen when they call upon the bond they share.

This change in appearance provides subtle but noticeable visual evidence of the Ironsworn's magic.

Prerequisite: Only a group of good-aligned allies who stand together at the site of the Ironsworn's last stand can draw the power from this unique magical location.

Location Activation: To claim the power of the Last Stand of the Ironsworn, a group of good-aligned allies must stand together at the site and forever bond themselves as comrades in arms.

The magic of the location, enhanced and made manifest by the devotion and courage of the Ironsworn, grants the group a greater than normal ability to stand together against foes.

Recharge: Once it has conferred its power on a group of up to five allies, the Last Stand of the Ironsworn cannot grant the ability again for one year.

Most DMs link the number of creatures that the Last Stand of the Ironsworn can affect to the number of characters adventuring together, so that no player feels excluded from the benefits.

This option also creates a game mechanic that reinforces the party's natural desire to continue adventuring together.

Special Ability (su): Once per day, a group of allied creatures that have stood together at the Last Stand of the Ironsworn can call upon the power of the site.

To do so, one of them must spend a standard action yelling, "Remember the Ironsworn!" Each ally within 30 feet of another ally immediately gains a number of temporary hit points equal to twice the number of eligible allies.

These temporary hit points last for up to 1 hour.

For example, if a group of five heroes who have stood together at the Last Stand of the Ironsworn are all within 30 feet of each other, and one of them spends a standard action to call forth the site's power, each gains 10 temporary hit points that last for up to 1 hour.

Duration: The conferred power lasts for one month. It ends prematurely for all creatures in the group if any of the allies who stood together at the Last Stand of the Ironsworn dies before that time.

Aura: Strong transmutation.

Variants: Unlike other locations described in this section, the Last Stand of the Ironsworn carries its own specific history.

However, a DM wishing to use the abilities of the Last Stand of the Ironsworn in another way can easily change the details of this history.

Warriors of another race, nation, or affiliation could easily provide the impetus for such a magical location at any site where they made a desperate last stand against overwhelming odds.

Simply changing the name and back story of the location allows you to place the magical effects in any area of your campaign world.

Ability Value: 10,000 gp (2,000 gp per affected creature).

NECROPOLIS OF DREAD

A necropolis of dread is a dark and twisted grave site that seems to draw all light into itself.

Its lusterless black walls and pale bones create a gloom-filled impression of death and hopelessness.

These rare sites usually result from strong necromantic magic, the creation of powerful undead, or massive slaughter in the name of some evil power.

Whatever its location, the landscape within a necropolis of dread is forever changed, and never again does the area feel clean or wholesome to living creatures.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about a necropolis of dread by making Knowledge (religion) checks at the appropriate DCs, as given below.

DC 15: A necropolis of dread is a magical gravesite full of unknowable terrors.

DC 20: A necropolis of dread grants some of its fearsome power to any skilled necromancer who manages to brave its horrors.

DC 25: A necromancer who masters the power of a necropolis of dread casts fear-inducing magic with greater facility.

In addition, creatures that brave the necropolis are more resistant to other fear-inducing effects, even if they have no ability with necromancy or fear-inducing magic.

Description: A necropolis of dread is as dark and fearsome as its name implies.

Its black walls seem to absorb light, and even the brightest days take on a dim and cheerless aspect within its confines. An unearthly stillness pervades its grounds, and even the slightest sound seems jarring amid the silence of the dead. When a spellcaster who has withstood the horrors of the necropolis uses its power to enhance a fear-inducing spell, his body is wrapped in a shadowy cloud that seems to pulse and writhe with power.

Prerequisite: Only a character with five or more character levels can access the power contained within a necropolis of dread.

Location Activation: The obelisk at the center of a necropolis of dread sends a magical spear of fear through each creature that approaches within 50 feet.

The effect is identical to that of a fear spell (Will DC 18). Only a creature that spends a full-round action while within 50 feet of the obelisk benefits from the site's power. Activating the site in this manner provokes attacks of opportunity.

Recharge: Once a necropolis of dread has conferred its ability on a single spellcaster, it cannot do so again for one year.

Special Ability (su): Any qualified spellcaster who draws forth the power of a necropolis of dread gains a +4 bonus on saving throws against fear effects.

In addition, whenever he casts a spell with the fear descriptor, or uses a spell-like or supernatural ability that induces fear, the DC of the required saving throw increases by 1.

Duration: The conferred ability lasts for one year.

Aura: Strong necromancy.

Ability Value: 3,000 gp.

POOL OF FROZEN SOULS

This strange pool of magic water is akin to an everflame but opposite in effect.

Formed by the presence of powerful cold magic or a long-standing portal to a particularly frigid section of the Elemental Plane of Water, a pool of frozen souls resembles a pool of extremely cold water.

Regardless of the outside temperature, the water in a pool of frozen souls never freezes, and it remains frigid to the touch even in the hottest ambient temperatures.

Because the magic of the pool is tied to its location, not to the water within it, any water removed from the pool is simply normal water.

A pool of frozen souls that is completely drained of water loses its magical abilities.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about a pool of frozen souls by making Knowledge (the planes) checks at the appropriate DCs, as given below.

DC 10: A pool of frozen souls is the remnant of a longstanding connection to the Elemental Plane of Water, and it holds the essence of that watery realm.

DC 15: It is said that those who withstand the chill of a pool of frozen souls can resist the effects of any cold.

DC 20: Those who stand within a pool of frozen souls gain significant resistance to cold damage by drawing a small portion of its magic into themselves.

Description: The area around a pool of frozen souls is perpetually filled with an unearthly chill.

The cold of the air and the water of the pool painfully freezes creatures and objects in contact with them, but these effects do not spread beyond the small area around the pool itself.

Because pools of frozen souls are found only in areas that have held gates to the Elemental Plane of Water for long periods, they almost always occur near or within some great body of water.

Such a site might include an island on which land-bound creatures forged the gate, but more often they are submerged in water.

Prerequisite: Only a creature with at least five character levels can benefit from the effects of a pool of frozen souls.

Location Activation: A pool of frozen souls is continually lit by a dull blue glow that emanates from the water itself. This magical pool deals 2d6 points of cold damage per round to any creature in contact with its water.

To gain the benefits of a pool of frozen souls, a qualified creature must stand unprotected within its confines for at least 3 rounds.

Each incarnation of the pool affects only five creatures at a time.

If more than five creatures qualify for the benefit at once, only five of them (selected at random) gain it.

Recharge: Once a pool of frozen souls has conferred its benefits on five creatures, it cannot confer them again for one year.

Special Ability Activation and Effect (ex): A qualified creature gains resistance to cold 5.

A creature that already has resistance to cold from another source (even a temporary one, such as a spell or item) gains nothing from the pool.

A creature can gain this benefit only once, and its effects do not stack with any other resistance to cold the creature might subsequently gain.

Duration: The resistance to cold lasts for one year.

Aura: Strong abjuration.

Ability Value: 10,000 gp (2,000 gp per affected creature).

SHRINE OF THE WEAPONMASTER

Imbued with the martial perfection and power of an exceptionally skilled warrior, a shrine of the weaponmaster is a hallowed place associated with great displays of martial skill.

Most often, the death of a great warrior gives rise to a shrine of the weaponmaster, but it can also result from a significant display of martial prowess by a living warrior or group of warriors.

Though called a shrine, such a location has no connection to divine power and can be found anywhere.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about a shrine of the weaponmaster by making Knowledge (history) checks at the appropriate DCs, as given below.

DC 15: A shrine of the weaponmaster is the site where a famous warrior fell, or where one or more warriors displayed great martial prowess.

DC 20: A shrine of the weaponmaster holds some of the martial skill of the great warrior or warriors who fought there.

Those who visit the location can pull some of this power into themselves.

DC 25: A shrine of the weaponmaster is a magical location that allows a skilled warrior to bond with a specific weapon, thereby gaining amazing skill with the weapon.

Description: The power embodied in a shrine of the weaponmaster stems from the events that transpired there, not from any physical aspect of the location.

Thus, shrines vary widely in appearance, though many are found in areas of extreme danger, since such locations tend to require the exceptional feats of arms that give a shrine of the weaponmaster its magic.

Prerequisite: Only a character with a +5 or higher base attack bonus and proficiency with all martial weapons can access the power contained within a shrine of the weaponmaster.

Location Activation: To claim the power of a shrine of the weaponmaster, a qualified warrior must stand within its confines and draw its power into himself by force of will. Doing so requires a full-round action and provokes attacks of opportunity.

A shrine of the weaponmaster holds enough power to affect up to five qualified creatures simultaneously.

Recharge: Once a shrine of the weaponmaster has conferred its ability on five creatures, it cannot confer it again for 30 days.

Special Ability: The magic of the shrine grants the affected warrior great insight into the use of weapons.

Each morning after he acquires the power, he can spend 15 minutes practicing his newfound martial knowledge and attuning himself to a single melee weapon with which he is proficient.

After completing this simple ritual, he gains a +2 bonus on damage rolls for attacks made with the attuned weapon.

The warrior stays attuned to the weapon until the following morning.

At that point, he can repeat the ritual with the same weapon or a different one.

Failure to perform the ritual on any given day means he does not gain the bonus on damage rolls for the following 24-hour period, but he still retains the ability to perform the ritual on subsequent days until the ability expires.

Duration: The conferred ability lasts for 30 days.

Aura: Strong divination.

Ability Value: 10,000 gp (2,000 gp per affected creature).

SPELLWARD OF ARCANES MIGHT

A magical event of great power sometimes gives rise to a spell ward of arcane might.

Such areas are imbued with so much raw arcane energy that the very air seems to hum with unfocused power.

Like other magical locations, spell wards of arcane might are extremely rare, and the conditions that give rise to them are poorly understood.

A spell ward of arcane might could arise from battles between multiple powerful spellcasters, the creation of an artifact or a similarly powerful magic item, the use of multiple wish spells in the same spot, and similar titanic releases of arcane power.

Although spellwards form anywhere, most are indoors.

Magical glyphs of vibrant blue energy continuously form and fade on the walls, ceilings, and floors of these spaces.

While only a few such sigils are ever present within a spellward, their glow provides faint illumination within its confines.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about a spellward of arcane might by making Knowledge (arcana) checks at the appropriate DCs, as given below.

DC 15: A spellward of arcane might is a wellspring of magical power.

DC 20: A spellward of arcane might allows a spellcaster to alter spells as they are cast.

DC 25: A spellward of arcane might is a magical location that grants an experienced spellcaster the ability to spontaneously quicken a small number of spells.

Description: Spellwards of arcane might are usually found indoors.

Every interior surface of such a location is covered in glyphs that glow with a magical light. This faint glow provides dim illumination throughout the spellward.

When a spellcaster enhances a spell with the power of a spellward, glowing blue runes form in the air around her. These runes vanish almost immediately, but their presence is a visible reminder of the power granted by the spellward. Prerequisite: Only a 5th-level or higher arcane spellcaster can access the power contained within a spellward of arcane might.

Location Activation: To claim the power of a spellward of arcane might, a qualified arcane spellcaster must stand within its confines and draw its power into herself by force of will.

Doing so requires a full-round action and provokes attacks of opportunity.

Recharge: Once a spellward of arcane might has conferred its ability on a single spellcaster, it cannot do so again for one year.

Special Ability (su): An arcane spellcaster who draws forth the power of a spellward of arcane might casts certain spells faster than normal.

Once per day, she can cast a spell of 3rd level or lower that normally has a casting time of 1 standard action as a swift action instead.

(See page 237 for the definition of a swift action).

Duration: The conferred ability functions for 30 days.

Aura: Strong transmutation and universal.

Ability Value: 9,000 gp.

TERRIBLE CYST

Terrible cysts are near-organic lesions in the earth itself that crop up in nearly any terrain.

These cancerous blemishes form in nearly any above- or below-ground location.

The presence of a terrible cyst causes nearby plant life to turn black and cancerous, stone to crack and crumble, and metal to rust.

A terrible cyst might form where a powerful demon has lingered for a long time, or where a creature of great good turned suddenly to evil, or where an item of powerful evil magic was created.

Such conditions do not always create terrible cysts, but they seem to increase the chances that one might form.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about a terrible cyst by making Knowledge (the planes) checks at the appropriate DCs, as given below.

DC 15: Terrible cysts are small lesions in the earth caused by the presence of great evil.

DC 20: A terrible cyst persists until a powerful evil creature draws power from it.

DC 25: An evil creature that draws forth the power of a terrible cyst focuses it into a devastating physical attack against a good creature.

Description: A terrible cyst looks like an oozing, cancerous blemish in the earth itself.

Each cyst occupies only a 10-foot-by-10-foot area, but its horrid stench extends much farther.

The vegetation in the affected area lingers in a state of rot, and the ground itself reeks of carrion.

The whole area glows with a dim, sickening red light.

An evil creature imbued with the power of the cyst glows briefly with the same red radiance when it makes a smite attack against a good creature.

Although this glow sheds no useful amount of illumination, it does give the creature's countenance a rough, demonic cast.

In addition, the cyst's connection to the Abyss twists the creature's visage into a horrible mask of pure hatred. These effects are only momentary, and the creature returns to its normal appearance as soon as it completes its smite attack.

Prerequisite: Only an evil creature with at least five character levels can draw forth the power of a terrible cyst.

Location Activation: Any qualified creature that enters a cyst immediately becomes aware of the dark power held within it and knows intuitively how to access that power. To claim the ability granted by a terrible cyst, the creature must stand within its confines and draw its power into itself by force of will.

Doing so requires three full-round actions and provokes attacks of opportunity.

During this process, the cyst shrinks and is absorbed into the surrounding terrain, as if the abyssal infection afflicting the land were actually healing.

A cyst that is healing has no ill effect on creatures within it, but the terrain does retain a lingering aura of evil until the cyst has completely healed.

Recharge: If an evil creature dies while holding the power of a terrible cyst, a new one forms at the spot where its body falls.

Thus, any given terrible cyst confers its power only once, but the death of the creature that absorbed this power regenerates the cyst in a new location.

Special Ability (su): Upon draining power from a terrible cyst, a creature gains the ability to smite a good foe once per day.

On a successful attack against a good-aligned opponent, the creature adds its character level to its damage roll (maximum +20).

Duration: The conferred ability lasts until the creature that holds it perishes.

Aura: Strong transmutation.

Ability Value: 2,500 gp.

WATCHPOST OF VIGILANCE

Though less obvious than other acts of heroism, heroic vigilance also leaves its mark on the very ground where it occurred.

A watchpost of vigilance, as such a site is called, might form on a distant mountain peak where a lone druid watched over the northern lands for decades before finally bringing word of an approaching army to the communities in the nearby foothills.

Alternatively, it could form in an ancient dwarf redoubt, or in an elf watchpost concealed in the forest's high branches.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about a watchpost of vigilance by making Knowledge (history) checks at the appropriate DCs, as given below.

DC 10: A watchpost of vigilance forms because of some heroic act of vigilance that took place at the site in question.

DC 15: A successful check at this level allows the character to learn the basic details of the specific act of heroism that created a particular watchpost of vigilance.

DC 20: A watchpost of vigilance is more than a simple footnote to history.

The power held within it grants those who stand watch there sharper eyes and quicker reactions to danger than normal.

Description: Although watchposts of vigilance vary in size, most are no greater than 20 feet by 20 feet.

Regardless of its actual appearance, a watchpost of vigilance commands an excellent view of the surrounding areas.

Even in the tight confines of a dwarf stronghold, such a site might occur at an important crossroads, or in some other place that grants a relatively wide view of the area.

Prerequisite: Only a creature with an Intelligence score of 5 or higher can benefit from the effect of a watchpost of vigilance.

Location Activation: To claim the power of a watchpost of vigilance, a qualified creature must spend a minimum of 8 hours within its confines and draw its power into itself by force of will.

A watchpost of vigilance holds enough power to affect up to five qualified creatures simultaneously.

Recharge: Once a watchpost of vigilance has conferred its ability on five creatures, it cannot confer it again for 24 hours.

Special Ability (su): A watchpost of vigilance sharpens the awareness, vision, and hearing of an affected creature and quickens its reaction times.

The creature gains a +2 enhancement bonus on initiative rolls and on Spot and Listen checks as long as it remains within the watchpost and for 24 hours after leaving it.

Duration: Each incarnation of the watchpost of vigilance affects creatures while they are within its confines, and a full 24 hours after the creature leaves the small area of the site.

Aura: Moderate divination.

Ability Value: 1,500 gp (300 gp per affected creature).

FIENDISH CODEX 2 (3.5)

PILLAR OF GERYON

Jammed into the slow-moving glacier known as Elgarz, the pillar of Geryon grinds its way slowly around Stygia, though it never comes within 1,000 miles of Levistus's Tomb.

Lore: Characters with ranks in Knowledge (the planes) can research the pillar of Geryon to learn more about it.

When a character succeeds on a skill check, the following lore is revealed, including the information from lower DCs.

DC 15: This forgotten monument to Stygia's former ruler provides special abilities to anyone brave enough to place her left hand in Geryon's right.

DC 20: The pillar grants powers against chaos, and legend has it that even greater powers await those willing to give their heads to Geryon.

DC 25: No one who has given her head to Geryon has ever gotten it back.

Description: The pillar of Geryon is a crude, humanoid-shaped block of granite measuring about 9 feet high, 4 feet across at its widest point, and 2 feet thick.

Carved into its surface, in a simple manner reminiscent of a cave painting, is a full-body outline of Geryon, the deposed archdevil who once ruled this layer.

The rock bears deep depressions where the figure's right hand and head should be.

Eroded steps jut out from the base of the pillar, allowing Medium and Large creatures to draw close enough to the figure to access the two depressions.

Prerequisite: None, but a character must be able to withstand the damage dealt when she first loses her hand.

Location Activation: To gain the benefits granted by the pillar of Geryon, a character must place her left hand in the depression at the end of Geryon's right arm.

As soon as she does so, she suffers sharp and excruciating pain as the pillar severs her wrist, dealing 3d10+10 points of damage.

The hand vanishes, as if disintegrated, and is not retrievable by any means.

Assuming that the character survives this damage, her hand begins to regenerate at a rate of 2 hit points per round, until all the damage dealt by the pillar has been restored.

Gnarled, rubbery, and olive-green in color, the new hand is slightly larger than the original and covered with pulsing scar tissue.

It throbs incessantly and tends to curl up into a ball when the owner's attention wanders.

Otherwise, it is as functional as the appendage it replaces.

Any character foolish enough to place her head in the depression above Geryon's shoulders is immediately decapitated, dying instantly unless decapitation would not normally slay her.

No new head regrows.

Recharge: Once the pillar of Geryon has produced a new hand, it cannot do so again for a month.

Special Ability: The new hand emits an aura of overwhelming evil and counts as a magic and evil-aligned weapon.

Every unarmed attack made with it gains an enhancement bonus of +3 (+6 against good or chaotic outsiders) and deals 1d10 points of damage.

If the character is a monk, the damage equals the monk's standard unarmed damage plus an extra 1d4 points of damage.

Penetrating Punch (ex): Blows made with the new hand gradually find weaknesses in the enemy's armor.

Once per round, a character can make an unarmed strike as a touch attack rather than a normal strike.

Duration: These abilities last for 99 days, after which a nonlawful character can renew them for another 30 days by committing an act of obeisance, or a nonevil character can renew them for another 30 days by committing a corrupt act.

Characters can continue to make renewals until they become fully evil or lawful.

A character who does not renew the ability retains her new hand, but the extremity loses its special powers.

Aura: Overwhelming transmutation.

Ability Value: 36,000 gp.

SHRIVER

A shriver is a sophisticated torture device constructed of Baatorian green steel and animated by magic.

Shrivers are found in soul-processing chambers throughout the topmost eight layers of Baator, and all of these devices are manufactured in Abriymoch, near its steelworks.

The primary use of a shriver is to render souls into soul material and proto-lemures.

However, mortals who are clever enough to find their way into one, and gifted with the astounding endurance to survive the flesh-rending punishments it can dish out, can treat it as a magical location.

Lore: Characters with ranks in Knowledge (the planes) can research the shriner to learn more about it.

When a character succeeds on a skill check, the following lore is revealed, including the information from lower DCs.

DC 15: A shriner is one of the many notorious automated torture devices found throughout Baator.

It's designed to rip apart the souls of the damned, but a mortal who gets into it can sometimes gain useful supernatural powers.

DC 20: You have to be able to soak up an incredible amount of punishment to survive a shriner.

It literally rips the flesh from your bones, so be sure to have potent healing magic on hand after you crawl, weeping and bleeding, from its awful embrace.

DC 25: It's not good enough just to survive the fearsome assault of a shriner—you have to do so without crying out.

Description: A shriner consists of a bed-like frame bristling with hundreds of automated blades, pokers, saws, and claw-like devices. A system of belts and wires holds the victim horizontally suspended in the frame.

Prerequisite: Though outsiders and soul shells can be tortured with a shriner, only living humanoids or monstrous humanoids can gain abilities from the ordeal.

Location Activation: As soon as a character has been properly strapped in, the device begins slicing, rending, and chopping at his flesh.

A shriner adjusts itself to each victim, varying its routine of torment from one session to the next.

For each round it spends in the machine, a creature takes 2d20 points of damage and must attempt two DC 15 saving throws (Fortitude or Will, whichever has the lower save bonus).

If both saves are successful, the creature remains silent and awake and gains one ability (see below).

In each subsequent round, the save DC increases by 1 for every 5 points of damage dealt by the machine in the previous round.

Failing a Fortitude save means the victim loses consciousness; failing a Will save means it cries out in pain. Either way, no ability is gained in that round or any round thereafter.

When torturing a living creature, a shriner continues until the victim either dies or escapes.

Making an escape requires four successful Escape Artist checks—one for the hands (which are manacled behind the head), one for each ankle (bound separately to the frame), and one for the collar holding the neck in place. Each check requires a full-round action.

These checks can be made either by the victim or by others working to free him.

However, escaping while being tortured is difficult—the victim must succeed on a DC 20 Concentration check to even be able to attempt an Escape Artist check.

Companions need not make Concentration checks prior to their Escape Artist checks, but they risk being hit by the machine's flailing blades.

Whether a companion's check succeeds or fails, the creature takes 1d20 points of damage if the check result is an odd number.

Recharge: A shriner can take on a new mortal subject as soon as a fresh victim can be strapped into it.

It can gift any number of surviving subjects with special abilities.

Special Ability: Any character who survives a shriner gains one special ability per round of torture he suffers in silent awareness.

The abilities are presented in order, so a character who lasted 3 rounds receives the first three abilities, one who withstood the torture for 5 rounds receives the first five abilities, and so on.

1. You cannot be shaken.

2. You can't be frightened or nauseated.

3. You can't be panicked or sickened.

You gain a +2 bonus on Fortitude saves.

4. You never become confused or fatigued.

You gain regeneration 1 as an extraordinary ability.

Good and chaotic weapons deal normal damage to you.

If you lose a limb or body part, the lost portion regrows in 180 minutes.

You can reattach the severed member instantly by holding it to the stump.

5. You never become exhausted.

You gain a +2 bonus on Will saves.

6. When disabled, you can make either a full-round action each round, or a move action and a standard action.

Your regeneration increases to 2; lost body parts regrow in 90 minutes.

7. Once per day, as a free action, you can gain the benefit of barkskin as a spell-like ability (caster level 5th).

Your regeneration increases to 3; lost body parts regrow in 45 minutes.

8. Your regeneration increases to 5; lost body parts regrow in 15 minutes.

9. Whenever a cure spell is cast within 100 feet of you and the caster attempts a Concentration check to cast the spell, you can attempt a Concentration check of your own as an immediate action.

If your check result is higher, you can divert any or all of the healing from the cure spell to yourself.

You gain these points at the expense of the intended recipient. You can't divert more hit points than you can use.

Duration: After 99 days, these abilities fade unless renewed.

Characters of alignments other than lawful evil can renew them by committing a number of points worth of corrupt or obeisant acts (see page 30) equal to the number of rounds of torture successfully endured in the shriner.

A lawful evil character can renew them if he has induced a character of another alignment to commit corrupt or obeisant acts with a point value at least equal to the number of rounds of torture endured in the shriner.

Renewals can be made for additional 99-day periods in the same manner.

Aura: Overwhelming necromancy and evil.

Ability Value: 30,000 gp.

TABJARI

jutting from the side of Reaper's Canyon is a copper citadel called Tabjari that is accessible only from tunnels inside the earth.

These tunnels are elaborately trapped, because the fortress contains a treasure that Asmodeus's must protect at all costs.

No devils patrol the halls surrounding Tabjari, because the treasure exerts a disturbing influence on evil outsiders.

Tabjari's deepest vault houses Asmodeus's original copy of the Pact Primeval, struck between himself and the primal deities of law.

Its divine energy suffuses the entire complex, radiating an overwhelming aura that is not only lawful, but at the same time ineffably good and unspeakably evil.

The fact that these last two energies are present in equal measure defies all known metaphysical principles, but they are juxtaposed all the same.

Any character perceiving this aura must make a successful DC 30 Will save or become confused for 2d4+2 rounds.

The residual energy of the lawful good deities slowly leaches the cruelty from nearby devilkind.

Any devil spending 6 hours within 1,000 feet of the Pact Primeval must make a successful DC 30 Will save or suffer a spontaneous one-rank demotion.

Lemures failing the save dissipate into faint traces of evil energy and are destroyed forever.

Thus, the only living guardians of the sacred pact are mortal cultists of Asmodeus who were plucked from their planes of origin to protect it.

By decree of all the lawful deities, a copy of the Pact Primeval must remain forever on Baator.

Two other copies exist under similar guard—one in Mechanus and one on Celestia.

Each of these documents is impervious to destruction, but if it were somehow removed from its rightful plane, the powers of law would be significantly undermined, and chaos would be strengthened.

Brave pilgrims still occasionally seek out the pact—not to steal it, but because its hiding place is a magical location of considerable power.

Lore: Characters with ranks in Knowledge (the planes) or Knowledge (religion) can research Asmodeus's copy of the Pact Primeval to learn more about it.

When a character succeeds on a skill check, the following lore is revealed, including the information from lower DCs.

DC 15: The Pact Primeval is the agreement signed by the lawful deities that established the system of punishment for the damned.

Asmodeus, who ruthlessly exploits its loopholes, cherishes it as the root of his power over mortals.

DC 20: Removing the pact from its vault in Tabjari is all but impossible.

If anyone did manage it, the power of law would suffer a devastating blow at the hands of chaos.

DC 35: Those who enter the vault merely to pay due respect to the principles of law can derive the power to smite chaos and excel in the application of law.

Description: Asmodeus has ensured that his copy of the pact is extraordinarily difficult to transport by encasing it inside an enormous ruby, 10 feet high and 6 feet wide, that weighs more than 20 tons.

It lies in the deepest vault of the copper citadel.

The entire fortress was built around the ruby, which is much too large to go through the doors.

Prerequisite: Characters must overcome ferocious opposition ranging from murderous traps to determined devil cultists to enter the hallowed vault of Tabjari.

Location Activation: To gain the power of Tabjari, a character must touch the ruby holding the pact with the bare skin of her right hand and recite aloud the three-hundred-word preamble, which is written in an archaic form of the Celestial tongue.

For a nonlawful character, doing so constitutes a 5-point act of obeisance.

Recharge: After granting its special abilities, the pact cannot do so again for another 9 years.

Special Ability: The pact confers the following set of abilities.

Any melee weapon the character wield 5 deals an extra 2d6 points of damage to chaotic outsiders.

Any spell the character casts that deals damage to one or more creatures deals an extra 2d6 points of damage to chaotic outsiders.

In the case of area spells, only one chaotic outsider takes the extra damage, but the caster can specify which is affected.

The character gains a +4 bonus on any Charisma-based skill checks made in the course of a legal proceeding, or in conjunction with a Knowledge check made to find or interpret a law.

Duration: These abilities last for 99 days, after which a character can renew them for another 30 days by committing an act of obeisance.

Aura: Overwhelming law, evil, and good.

Ability Value: 10,000 gp.

WORM OF MINAUROS

A bizarre, slow-moving creature, about 50 feet long, comes sloshing through a shallow swamp.

Shaped like a snake or worm, and covered in ivory plates the color of bleached bone, it takes little notice of its surroundings.

Its massive, crested head resembles the gnarled skull of a titanic archdevil.

Feats Awesome Blow, Cleave, Great Cleave, Improved Bull
Rush, Improved Critical (bite), Multiattack, Power Attack,
Weapon Focus (bite), Weapon Focus (sting)

Skills Listen +19, Swim +20*

*The Worm of Minauros has a +8 racial bonus on Swim checks to perform special actions or avoid hazards.

Improved Grab (Ex) To use this ability, the Worm of Minauros must hit an opponent of any size with a bite attack. It can then attempt to start a grapple as a free action without provoking attacks of opportunity. If it wins the grapple check, it establishes a hold and can try to swallow the opponent in the following round.

Swallow Whole (Ex) The Worm of Minauros can try to swallow a grabbed opponent smaller than itself by making a successful grapple check.

The swallowed creature takes 2d8+12 points of bludgeoning damage and 8 points of acid damage per round from the Worm of Minauros's gizzard. A swallowed creature can cut its way out by using a light slashing or piercing weapon to deal a total of 25 points of damage to the gizzard (AC 17). Once the creature exits, muscular action closes the hole; another swallowed opponent must cut its own way out.

The Worm of Minauros's gizzard can hold 2 Large, 8
Medium, 32 Small, 128 Tiny, or 512 Diminutive or smaller opponents.

Hook This slow-moving creature reacts with disinterest even when badly hurt.

The legendary worm of Minauros wriggles eternally through the swamps, bogs, and cesspools of Baator's third layer, staying out of cities and other settlements.

If the party chooses to fight it, treat the worm as a combat encounter.

If, on the other hand, a mortal peacefully approaches the creature and volunteers to become its next meal, treat it as a mobile magical location.

Combat: The worm defends itself if attacked but otherwise takes no interest in mortal prey.

It exists only as a punishment for stray or unwary devils, which it attacks with sudden ferocity.

Any baatezu foolish enough to cross its path is by definition deserving of its fate.

Lore: Characters with ranks in Knowledge (the planes) can research the worm of Minauros learn more about it.

When a character succeeds on a skill check, the following lore is revealed, including the information from lower DCs.

DC 25: This mammoth creature, feared even by devils, eternally haunts the plane of Minauros.

it can be killed, but it always comes back.

Supposedly, a way exists to wrest a great magical boon from it.

DC 30: To anyone who fights it, the worm is really just a bizarre-looking, tougher-than-average purple worm.

Like any other creature of that kind, it attempts to grab foes in its massive jaws and swallow them whole.

Its sting also carries a Strength-sapping poison.

DC 35: If anyone approaches the worm of Minauros unarmed, it opens its jaws and allows the visitor to walk straight in,
without grabbing, poisoning, or crushing it.

The visitor might be digested like any other morsel of food, or it might be excreted whole and be all the more powerful for the experience.

Description: See above.

Prerequisite: Only a mortal with an alignment other than lawful evil can gain the power granted by a worm of Minauros.

(Lawful evil characters are still admitted to the creature's maw, but they are then subjected to the normal combat damage taken by a swallowed character.

Like any other creature native to Baator, the worm attempts to send the souls of qualifying mortals straight to the Shelves of Despond).

The character must also be able to withstand the damage dealt by several rounds inside the worm's digestive tract.

Location Activation: To gain the benefit of the worm of Minauros, a living mortal must approach it head-on, without weapons, and with her arms held out at her sides in a gesture of supplication.

The worm sniffs the air to confirm that the character is in fact mortal.

(Devils disguised as mortals are summarily eaten, with all the bite damage that process entails).

The worm then lowers its gate-sized jaw so that the subject can walk straight into its maw.

A successful DC 15 Will save is required to follow through on this act of apparent self-destruction.

Failure means the character is panicked for 1 minute and must turn and run.

Success allows the character to continue into the creature's gizzard, where for 1d6+1 rounds she takes 2d8+12 points of bludgeoning damage, plus 8 points of acid damage, per round.

At any time, the character can attempt to cut herself out of the creature's side by using a light slashing or piercing weapon to deal a total of 25 points of damage to the gizzard (AC 17).

However, doing so prevents the character from acquiring the special ability (see below) and causes the worm to initiate combat against any bystanders within sight.

Any character who undergoes the digestion process for the full duration is, if still alive, abruptly excreted from the worm's body.

An expelled character is covered in a noxious, acidic slime full of tiny, partially digested chunks of devil flesh.

Such a character takes 4 points of acid damage per round until doused with water.

Every individual within 30 feet of a character who has just been expelled must make a successful DC 15 Fortitude save or become nauseated for 2d4 rounds.

Recharge: Once the worm of Minauros has granted its special ability, it cannot do so again for a week.

Special Ability: Surviving the digestive system of the worm of Minauros permanently increases the character's highest ability score by 1.

If two or more ability scores are tied for highest, the player chooses which one to increase.

Additionally, a bonus of 20% applies to any experience point awards garnered during the character's current sojourn in Baator.

Duration: The ability score increase lasts for 30 days, after which a nonlawful character can renew it for another 30 days by committing an act of obeisance, or a nonevil character can renew it for another 30 days by committing a corrupt act.

Characters can continue to make renewals until they become fully evil or lawful.

At that point, devils might well show up to engineer their deaths, so that their souls travel straight to Baator.

Aura: Overwhelming evocation.

Ability Value: 8,000 gp.

MAGIC OF INCARNUM (3.5)

DOLMEN CIRCLE

Great slabs of stone rise from the earth as if summoned from the rock itself.

The stones form a great ring, each pair of standing stones supporting another great horizontal slab above them.

Whether dolmen circles were raised in prehistoric times or are more recent constructions, powerful magic almost certainly figured in their establishment.

Some quality of the site heightens the power of incarnum, whether the pattern of the standing stones or an invisible crossing of lines of power marked by the circle, and calls to the lost like the voice of home.

A dolmen circle is formed of about 30 large slabs of stone erected in a circle roughly 100 feet in diameter, with stones laid across the top of the slabs to form a continuous circle. The slabs are hewn stone (DC 25 Climb check) and stand about 20 feet high.

Sometimes, smaller circles of stones stand within the larger circle.

The whole area might be encompassed by a trench or a berm (see page 91 of the Dungeon Master's Guide), forming an outer circle up to around 300 feet in diameter.

Dolmen circles appear in areas of plains terrain.

While within 300 feet of the center of a dolmen circle, any creature with the incarnum subtype gains a +1 morale bonus on attack rolls, weapon damage rolls, saving throws, and skill checks.

Unfortunately for those who try to gain the benefits of a dolmen circle, these places act as beacons for the lost.

Any creature with the lost template that comes within 1 mile of a dolmen circle must make a DC 23 Will save or travel immediately to the circle and make its new lair within sight of the stones.

A lost creature that makes a successful saving throw is immune to the lure of that dolmen circle for 24 hours.

This is a mind-affecting enchantment (compulsion) effect similar to the sympathy spell.

Members of the Pentifex Order (see page 209) consider dolmen circles sacred.

If the stones of a dolmen circle are moved to a new location and restored to their precise positions relative to one another, there is a fl at 50% chance that the effects of the circle persist.

Considering that each stone weighs between 25 and 50 tons, this would be no small undertaking.

INCARNATE EARTH

The plants here seem unusually large and colorful, almost bursting with life.

Berries are plump and ripe, trees are tall and free of rot, and even the grass seems vibrantly alive.

In certain places, the very soil is suffused with incarnum, which lends vibrancy to everything in the area.

The soil and everything that grows in it has the faintest tint of blue.

Incarnate earth typically appears in roughly circular areas 3d8x10 feet in diameter.

These areas also might contain other terrain types, though they are more common in places where life abounds—such as verdant forests and teeming swamps—than in desolate areas such as deserts, tundras, and mountaintops.

The incarnate earth has little effect on the terrain features in the area, except that forests are usually dense or medium (rather than sparse), and all types of terrain contain more and heavier undergrowth than usual.

Any character with an essentia pool finds the size of that pool increased by 1 as long as she remains in an area of incarnate earth.

Standing water is rare around incarnate earth; the vital energy in the area seems to encourage water to move. Where small pools or springs do occur, drinking a draft of water provides the same benefit as activating an essentia jewel (see page 113), adding 1 to the drinker's essentia pool for 1 round.

Drinking this water, like drinking a potion, is a standard action that provokes attacks of opportunity.

The effect of drinking is not cumulative with the benefit from being in an area of incarnate earth, and a draft loses its potency 1d4 hours after being removed from the area.

A character can only benefit from the effect of a single draft in any given round.

If incarnate earth is dug up and transplanted to another location, it requires soil at least 2 feet deep in a 15-foot-diameter area to provide any benefit.

Smaller quantities of incarnate earth isolated from their source do not function.

LOST SITE

The air in this place seems thick and heavy, suffused with a palpable gloom.

Just standing here seems to stir up the worst kinds of emotion.

Lost sites are very similar to the lost creatures described in Chapter 7 (see page 181)—places where negative emotions are tied to the land itself, twisting everything there into a mirror of the hatred, wrath, despair, or misery that suffuses the sites.

Faces contorted with hatred or wracked with despair appear in the bark of trees or clumps of moss.

Howls of wrath or moans of misery are heard on the wind. The animals in the area mimic the emotions of the site in their behavior.

A lost site is typically defined by some other geographical boundary, and its effects extend throughout the area so defined.

Thus, a lost site might be a stand of trees, a single building or ruined structure, a lake, a mountain peak, a valley, or some other area easily defined by natural or artificial features.

Occasionally, a lost site encompasses a much larger area, such as a huge forest, a city, a mountain range, or a desert. Lost sites can contain any other terrain type, from dense forests to sandy deserts.

The site's lost nature has no effect on the terrain features within it.

Creatures entering a lost site are exposed to a disease that is functionally similar to mindfire (see page 292 of the Dungeon Master's Guide) and must make a successful DC 12 Fortitude save to avoid contracting this illness.

After a 1-day incubation period, infected creatures take 1d4 points of Intelligence damage.

Once per day thereafter, infected characters must succeed on another saving throw or take the same damage.

Unlike mindfire, the victim must make three successful Fortitude saves in a row (rather than just two) to recover from this illness.

Leaving the lost site has no effect on the progress of the illness.

If an infected creature takes 6 or more points of Intelligence damage while within the bounds of a lost site, the creature immediately gains the lost template described on page 183.

Only living creatures with an Intelligence score (before disease damage) of at least 3 are at risk of becoming lost. A more immediate risk to characters entering a lost site is the danger that incarnum they shape and use might pick up the tainted emotions of the site.

Any time a character in a lost site reallocates essentia, the character must make a Will save against a DC equal to 5 + the size of the character's essentia pool.

If the saving throw fails, the character is temporarily stricken by a powerful emotional effect, depending on the dominant emotion of the lost site.

Despair: Affected creatures suffer the effects of a crushing despair spell for 1d4+1 rounds.

Hatred: Affected creatures suffer the effects of a song of discord spell for 1d4+1 rounds.

Misery: Affected creatures are confused for 1d4+1 rounds.

Wrath: Affected creatures gain the benefits of a rage spell for 1d4+1 rounds.

Further, creatures must enter melee each round they are affected—by preference with the nearest enemy, but failing that, with the nearest creature, whether it is friend or foe.

There is no way to move the effects of a lost site to a new location.

MIDNIGHT GROVE

Great black trees hung with blue-gray moss block any view of the sky from this place.

Though there is no breeze, the moss twists and sways in the air, and at times even seems to reach toward you.

A midnight grove is a stand of trees suffused with incarnum of the worst sort.

The power of the grove drains essentia from creatures within it, and then uses that power to form midnight constructs.

A midnight grove is typically 5d12×10 feet in diameter.

It is functionally identical to a sparse forest, made up of typical trees and light undergrowth in roughly half the squares within the grove.

These terrain features are unaltered by the incarnum in the grove.

Any character entering a midnight grove must immediately make a DC 17 Fortitude save or lose 1d4 points of essentia.

If the creature does not have an essentia pool (or its essentia pool is already depleted), it takes 1d4 points of Constitution damage instead.

Characters who remain in the grove must repeat this saving throw every 10 minutes.

As soon as the midnight grove has drained a total of 4 points of essentia, it uses them to form a lesser midnight construct (see page 184).

If it has drained more than 4 points of essentia, it invests the extra into the construct to give it special abilities.

Once the grove has drained 10 points of essentia, the construct becomes a normal midnight construct (instead of a lesser one), with any essentia in excess of 10 points providing it with special abilities.

Finally, once the grove has drained 16 points of essentia, it forms a greater midnight construct.

Thus, a grove with 9 points of drained essentia to spend creates a lesser midnight construct (4 Hit Dice) with 5 points of essentia invested to give it special abilities.

As soon as the grove drains 1 more point of essentia, the construct transforms instantaneously into a normal midnight construct (10 Hit Dice) with no essentia available for special abilities.

When the grove has drained 15 points of essentia, it has 5 points to invest in its midnight construct.

When the grove drains 1 more point of essentia, the construct becomes a greater midnight construct (16 Hit Dice) with no special abilities.

The midnight construct attacks any creature within the grove or up to 50 feet beyond its borders, but it does not stray farther than that from its grove.

It carries any dead characters to an edge of the grove, where they rapidly decompose.

After 24 hours, no corpse remains.

In its place stands a new tall tree, extending the grove's influence by 10 feet in that direction.

It is not possible to relocate a grove's effects except, perhaps, by encouraging it to extend in one direction while clearing trees on the grove's opposite side, causing it to move very slowly across the landscape.

NECROCARNUM BOG

Fetid gray water pools between clumps of blackened reeds. Here and there, bones jut up from the muck, and the stench of the place is reminiscent of a charnel house.

In a necrocarnum bog, incarnum has fused with the necromantic forces inherent at the site of a great massacre or costly battle, transforming the place into a swamp of death.

A necrocarnum bog typically extends anywhere from a few hundred yards to several miles in diameter, depending on the size of the slaughter that occurred there and on the age of the bog (older ones are larger).

It is similar to a swamp (see page 88 of the Dungeon Master's Guide), but areas of shallow bog are even more common than usual, with correspondingly fewer areas of undergrowth.

Undead of all sorts roam necrocarnum bogs, especially creatures with ties to incarnum, such as incarnum wraiths and necrocarnum zombies (both described in Chapter 7). In fact, any corporeal creature with a skeletal system that dies within a necrocarnum bog instantly reanimates as a necrocarnum zombie.

Such zombies attack the nearest living creature at will.

Deadsand: An insidious danger in a necrocarnum bog is the threat of deadsand.

While functionally similar to quicksand, deadsand also has a negative energy effect that reduces the essentia pool of a living creature trapped within by 1d4 points each round. Creatures with no essentia pool (or an essentia pool reduced to 0) take 1d4 points of Constitution damage instead.

To make matters worse, necrocarnum zombies lurk in deadsand, grappling creatures trapped in the bog.

SOULCLAMOR FOREST

The trees in this forest grow close together, weaving their branches together to block any view of the sky.

You have an almost constant sense that something is moving at the edge of your field of vision, but the forest seems still when you look directly at anything.

Not so the sounds, however—the air is filled with a constant low murmur like voices, but no distinct words.

Some forests, for reasons that are unclear, draw incarnum to them and gain a sort of collective consciousness as a result.

The mind of a soulclamor forest is barely sentient, but it reacts with strong emotion to the use of incarnum within its bounds.

A soulclamor forest can be an isolated wood or part of a larger forest, and its area ranges widely in size.

A typical soulclamor forest is 2d20 miles across.

For most purposes, it is identical to dense forest.

Any creature that attempts to reallocate essentia while in an area of soulclamor forest must make a DC 15 Concentration check to do so.

Failure indicates that the character's essentia remains allocated as it was previously.

Something about the nature of a soulclamor forest draws powerful predators to its sheltering trees.

Traveling through an area of soulclamor forest typically results in encounters with an average Encounter Level about two levels higher than normal for the surrounding forest or other adjacent terrain, and encounters are 2% more likely to occur each hour.

SOULLESS WASTE

If possible, this area is even more lifeless than the surrounding desert.

Nothing grows, no snakes or vermin scurry, and no wind blows. Something about the place weighs heavily as you travel through; even talking seems like too much effort.

A soulless waste is an area where no incarnum can flow. It is said to result from a blighting disease or curse that ruins the land, preventing anything from growing and hedging out animal life.

Some incarnates with a religious bent call these areas Nerull's footprints, and speak of the places where the death god's feet touched the earth as he traveled to shatter the Primal Font.

Soulless wastes are 2d4 miles in diameter and are found in the middle—often the exact center—of more ordinary desert terrain.

The terrain within a soulless waste is ordinary tundra, sandy desert, or rocky desert, the same as the terrain outside the wasted area.

It is impossible to shape soulmelds within the bounds of a soulless waste.

If a character attempts to unshape an existing soulmeld and shape a new one, he finds that he cannot shape the new one, and he must make a DC 15 Concentration check to keep the old soulmeld shaped.

Far worse, it is impossible to invest essentia in any receptacle while within a soulless waste.

Characters with an essentia pool do not lose that pool, and they can still lose essentia as a result of spells or special abilities (such as the touch of an incarnum wraith), but they cannot invest essentia in soulmelds, class features, feats, spells, or other receptacles.

In a soulless waste, essentia invested in any receptacle, even an incarnum feat, returns immediately to the character's essentia pool, remaining uninvested until the character leaves the waste.

WILDSOUL ZONES

This area seems no different from its surroundings, but you find your incarnum abilities scrambled as you pass through it.

A wildsoul zone is indistinguishable from the surrounding terrain, which can be any kind of natural terrain or artificial construction, such as a dungeon.

Characters who rely on the use of incarnum find their abilities jumbled within such a zone, however.

A typical wildsoul zone is a roughly circular area with a radius of  $2d4 \times 5$  feet.

The presence of a wildsoul zone has no physical impact on the terrain within it, and in fact, these zones move randomly, sometimes creeping slowly at the rate of 5 feet per week, and sometimes zooming from one region to another.

Any character with an essentia pool who enters a wildsoul zone finds her essentia randomly reinvested.

One way to determine this reinvestment is to proceed down a list, beginning with the character's shaped soulmelds, continuing with feats, and ending with any other receptacles the character has.

For each receptacle on this list, roll  $1d6-1$  to determine how much essentia is now invested in it.

(If the character's essentia capacity is only 2 or 3, roll  $1d4-1$  instead.) Stop when the character's entire essentia pool is invested or the list is exhausted, in which case any remaining essentia is uninvested.

If you using physical objects to represent the character's essentia and soulmelds, such as tokens or beads on the essentia tracker on page 220, you can simply gather up all the beads and drop them on the sheet(s) with the character's melds.

Essentia are invested where they land; any beads that land off the sheet(s) represent uninvested essentia.

If more beads land on any soulmeld than its capacity, the extra essentia is uninvested.

Once the character's essentia is randomly reinvested in this fashion, the character cannot reallocate essentia, though she can invest any essentia that remained uninvested.

Any invested essentia remains invested as determined until the character leaves the wildsoul zone.

When the character leaves the zone, essentia that was invested in incarnum feats and other all-day investments returns to where it was invested before the character entered.

Essentia that was reinvested in other receptacles stays where it is, but the character is now free to reallocate the essentia as desired.

There is no known means of controlling or restricting the movement of a wildsoul zone.

MYSTERIES OF THE MOONSEA (3.5)

ABARAT'S NEXUS

Though Abarat's tower was not intended as a site that granted its user magic power, the bleeding and blending of magic has made it such a place.

Only a very few have entered the tower, and even fewer know that it is more than just a collection of magical portals. Currently inhabited by many devils, the place normally stands empty for years at a time.

Lore: Abarat's Folly is the wizard tower made of ivory south of the Moonsea.

It was made by an elf mage who disappeared.

He was rumored to be a planar traveler, and he disappeared mysteriously a few years after building it.

Characters can gain the following information about the place and its builder by making a Knowledge (arcana) or bardic knowledge check.

DC 20: Abarat's Tower contains portals that lead to other places in Faerûn and other planes.

DC 25: Abarat taught magic at a wizard's academy in Myth Drannor before the city fell.

DC 30: Abarat was attacked in his tower and magically requested help from his allies.

By the time his friends arrived, Abarat and his attackers had already vanished.

Description: The Nexus is an area of overlapping magical fields centered approximately on the 3rd-floor staircase of Abarat's Folly.

The tower is constructed of magically hardened ivory 2 inches thick—the equivalent of adamantine.

It is rather plain and undecorated for an elf-built structure, but its overall shape and design are clearly elven.

Each of the component portals of the Nexus makes a sound like water droplets when activated, and the Nexus itself sounds like a brief burst of raindrops when a creature gains its special power.

There is no visual disturbance associated with the release of the tower's abilities.

Prerequisite: The Nexus only confers its special ability on elves or half-elves.

Location Activation: To gain the powers of the Nexus, the activating creature must touch the center of each of the tower's six portals within a 24-hour period.

The portals do not need to be active.

When the creature touches the third of the portals, its eyes begin to glow in a similar fashion to an arcane sight spell; after touching all of the tower's portals, this glow subsides.

Recharge: The Nexus recharges in  $20d6$  days.

The recharge period does not affect the abilities of the individual portals.

Special Ability: The Nexus gives a creature the ability to recognize an active or inactive portal on sight; no roll or action is needed.

By concentrating on the portal for 1 round and making a DC 10 Concentration check, the creature knows if the portal is keyed or has a command word (but not what the key or command word is), special circumstances such as timed activation, one-way or two-way, random, variable, creature-only, or malfunctioning—one feature revealed per round of successful concentration.

Once per day, the creature can make a DC 15 Concentration check as a full-round action to glimpse for 1 round where a portal leads.

Duration: The ability lasts  $1d20$  days.

Aura: Moderate conjuration.

Ability Value: 2,000 gp.

BLEMISHED ALTAR

The altar remains whole, exuding a primal power that reflects Cyric's propensity for lies, trickery, and betrayal. It is a magical location.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about the Blemished Altar by making Knowledge (Moonsea local) or Knowledge (Zhentil Keep local) checks at the appropriate DCs, as given below.

DC 10: The Blemished Altar was dedicated to the worship of Cyric when it was destroyed.

DC 15: The Blemished Altar was destroyed by divine intervention.

DC 20: Xeno Mirrorbane, the High Priest of Cyric, perished with the destruction of the temple—and no one ever found his remains.

DC 25: Residual effects of Cyric's influence remain in place near the altar itself.

Description: In a broken and partially collapsed hallway, a black obsidian block rests upon a pile of broken stone. Carved with strange sigils and runes, it sits canted at a slight angle and leans against one wall.

Its surface and corners are pitted and broken, and a thick coat of dust covers it like a blanket.

Prerequisite: In order to gain the special ability of the Blemished Altar, a character must have 8 ranks in the Bluff skill.

Location Activation: Any character with the prerequisite needed to gain the ability conferred by the Blemished Altar can sense its latent energy.

Those characters intuitively understand that touching the altar permits them to absorb the power.

A full-round action is necessary to gain the ability, and up to three qualified individuals can absorb the ability before recharge is necessary.

Recharge: Once the Blemished Altar has bestowed its power on three qualified individuals, it cannot grant additional uses of the power for one tenday.

Special Ability (Su): A character with the power of the Blemished Altar gains a +20 bonus on Bluff checks and is immune to the effect of any divination magic of 4th level or lower.

Duration: The bonus on Bluff checks and the magic immunity last for 24 hours.

Aura: Moderate illusion.

Ability Value: 8,000 gp per individual (24,000 gp total).

CAVE OF GEMS

The walls of this cave are covered with hundreds of precious and semiprecious stones, ranging from pearls to rubies to garnets to diamonds.

The stones all appear to be a naturally occurring part of the cave walls and cannot be removed.

Lore: Any character can make a Knowledge (arcana), Knowledge (history), or bardic knowledge check to remember details about this location.

DC 15: It is said that Vorbyx's lieutenants carried weapons sheathed in flame, surrounded by auras of cold, or even charged with electrical energy.

DC 20: The Cave of Gems is said to be a legendary location that imbues weapons with elemental magic.

DC 25: The magic of the gems can be transferred to any weapon by coating it in blood and holding it to one of the gems.

The gem type chosen determines the type of energy imbued into the weapon.

Prerequisite: Only a creature with at least five character levels and no ability to cast arcane spells can access the power of the Cave of Gems.

Location Activation: A creature must coat a constructed masterwork weapon (not a natural weapon, and it need not be magical) in its own blood and hold it for 1 minute against one of three types of gemstones embedded in the walls.

The type of gemstone chosen determines the ability conferred.

Recharge: Once the Cave of Gems has conferred its ability on three weapons, it cannot confer it again for one week.
 Special Ability (Su): The Cave of Gems causes up to three weapons to gain an energy-based special ability, depending on the type of gem chosen.

Gemstone	Ability
Ruby	flaming (DMG 224)
Diamond	shock (DMG 225)
Pearl	frost (DMG 224)

Aura: Moderate transmutation.
 Ability Value: 6,000 gp (2,000 gp per affected weapon).

ELEMENTAL SCOURGE

The Elemental Scourge is a magical location that grants an individual the power to quickly destroy large numbers of his enemies.

A cabal of wizards allied with the church of Kossuth created it long ago beneath the site of a city named Skelem. In the centuries since the fall of Skelem, the tales of the power of this location have become all but forgotten. The scourge survived, hidden underground, awaiting a willing new master—but these powers will not be bought cheaply.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about the Elemental Scourge by making a knowledge (arcane) check at the appropriate DCs, as given below.

DC 15: The Elemental Scourge came about through an unprecedented collaboration between epic-level wizards.
 DC 20: The Elemental Scourge summons forth a virtual army of elementals, which can quickly and effectively bring standing armies to their knees.

DC 25: While the effect of the Elemental Scourge is powerful, it is best used as an opening attack, since the elementals remain for only a brief period of time.

Description: The Elemental Scourge appears to be an immense apparatus of moving parts.

These parts include blades, globes, and gauntleted hands at the ends of spindly arms, which appear to be reaching out, or performing odd movements.

The object is constantly in motion, emitting subdued light and sounds that have an otherworldly feel.

The chamber in which the Elemental Scourge resides is roughly 50 feet in diameter.

Within are four statues, each depicting a life-size representation of the elder elementals that are summoned using the scourge.

In front of the apparatus, a pair of concentric circles with runes between them is carved into the stone floor.

Prerequisite: Only a creature with at least 10 Hit Dice or character levels can access the power of the Elemental Scourge.

Location Activation: To activate the Elemental Scourge, a character must kneel within the circle etched into the floor.

The power of the elements then pours into the creature, at which time it must make a DC 15 Fortitude save or take 3d6 points of damage.

Regardless of whether the creature sustains damage, the creature can then summon the elementals to any location it has visited within 100 miles of Skelem.

Recharge: The Elemental Scourge is fully recharged one year after activation.

Special Ability (Su): Once a creature has claimed the ability of the Elemental Scourge, it can wait to use it for up to one year.

The creature can then use this ability to summon a dozen elder elementals, three from all four major elemental types, which follow the commands of the activator.

Duration: The conferred ability can be stored for up to one year, but once used, the elementals remain for only 10 rounds.

Aura: Strong conjuration.
 Ability Value: 25,000 gp.

ENCHANTED POOL

The Enchanted Pool sits at the bottom of a cavern reached by means of a sloping pathway.

The pathway enters from the north (1) and spirals down the eastern side, arriving at a flat spot (2) near the water (3).

A hidden grotto (4) sits underneath the pathway.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about the Enchanted Pool by making Knowledge (Citadel of the Raven local) or Knowledge (arcana) checks at the appropriate DCs, as given below.

DC 20: Manshoon the archmage finds many interesting magical features in the tunnels beneath the citadel.

DC 25: Manshoon found a magical pool that makes you resistant to harm.

DC 30: (Gives some bit of direction or explanation about where to find the pool).

Description: In a natural cavern deep beneath the Citadel of the Raven, a shallow pool rests, cold and dark.

The chamber is completely silent except for the occasional drip of water falling from the stalactites overhead.

Prerequisite: In order to gain the special ability of the Enchanted Pool, a character must have a base attack bonus of +10 or higher.

Location Activation: Any character with the prerequisite needed to gain the ability conferred by the Enchanted Pool can sense its latent energy.

Those characters intuitively understand that swimming in the pool for one hour permits them to absorb the power.

Only one qualified individual can absorb the ability before recharge is necessary.

Recharge: Once the Enchanted Pool has bestowed its power on an individual, it cannot grant additional uses of the power to anyone for one week.

Special Ability (Su): A character with the power of the Enchanted Pool gains damage reduction 15/magic.

Duration: The damage reduction effect lasts for one month.

Aura: Strong abjuration.

Ability Value: 15,000 gp.

PILLAR OF FIRE

The Pillar of Fire is a location imbued with the element of flame.

This site is buried deep inside the southernmost tip of the Galena Mountains.

Its existence remains undiscovered by sages, although a few lucky creatures and adventurers have stumbled on it over the years, and benefited greatly from it.

The following adventure is designed for characters of 9th–11th level.

The Pillar of Fire lies deep within the earth, connected to the surface through a complex of caverns.

The complex's entrance is overgrown with trees and bushes, making it easy to overlook.

The tunnel goes straight into the mountain for 3/4 mile, becoming somewhat more difficult to navigate as it nears the location of the pillar.

The tunnel finally opens onto a massive cavern, where a small sandy beach meets the icy waters of an underground lake.

An enormous stone pillar protrudes from the lake's surface, reaching nearly 200 feet toward the top of the cavern.

There are no boats or other means built into the chamber to cross to the pillar.

A steep stairway circles the pillar, eventually reaching the flat surface at the top.

Creatures that arrive at the top of the pillar can claim the special ability of the Pillar of Fire and walk away with the offensive power that it grants.

Lore: Little is known about this location, though there are rumors spread by the adventurers who have made it here before.

Characters can gain the following information about the Pillar of Fire by making a Knowledge (arcana) or Knowledge (nature) check at the appropriate DCs, as given below.

DC 20: Deep within the southern tip of the Galena Mountains lies a magical location imbued with the element of fire.

DC 25: Those who go to the top of the Pillar of Fire and touch the altar gain the ability to hurl several fireballs.

DC 30: The origin of this location is unknown, although it is known that thousands of years ago, a hag coven that worshiped Kossuth resided in these areas and might have wielded great power.

Description: The interior of the chamber where the Pillar of Fire is located smells of smoke and brimstone.

A visible fiery aura surrounds the pillar, brightly illuminating the area around it and obscuring anything at the top.

Prerequisite: The Pillar of Fire confers its special ability only upon creatures with an Intelligence score of 5 or higher.

Location Activation: To activate the Pillar of Fire, a creature must possess a rune tile of each of the four elements.

These tiles can be obtained only by defeating the elementals guarding them.

One hour after they are placed on the altar, the tiles disappear from the altar, and new copies of the tiles appear in each of the chambers where the elementals are encountered.

The Pillar of Fire cannot be activated again until all four tiles are obtained and correctly placed once more.

Recharge: The Pillar of Fire recharges instantly after it has conferred its ability to a creature.

Special Ability (Sp): The Pillar of Fire grants the ability to use fireball (CL 5th) five times as a spell-like ability.

A creature cannot claim the ability again until its initial five fireballs have been expended.

Duration: The ability lasts until the recipient uses all five fireballs granted.

Aura: Strong evocation.

Ability Value: 4,000 gp.

VORBYX'S WATCHPOST

The roof of the plateau is windswept and empty except for a shallow pool of strangely colored liquid at its center. This pool is infused with magic, and is part of what made this place such an effective watchpost for Vorbyx during his time.

Lore: Any character can make a Knowledge (history) or bardic knowledge check to remember details about this location.

Because this watchpost was created so long ago, the DCs of the lore checks are higher than normal.

DC 15: This place has been abandoned since the kingdom of Thar crumbled.

DC 20: Vorbyx once commanded this high ground and used it as a rallying point for his troops in southern Thar.

DC 20: Anyone who spends enough time here gains sharper eyes and quicker reactions than normal.

DC 25: Vorbyx's Watchpost is more powerful than a normal magical location of this type.

Prerequisite: Only a creature with an Intelligence score of 5 or higher can benefit from the effect of Vorbyx's Watchpost.

Location Activation: A creature must spend 8 hours in the colored pool (which is actually quite warm and soothing) to draw forth the power of this location.

The pool can affect up to five creatures simultaneously.

Recharge: Once Vorbyx's Watchpost has conferred its ability on five creatures, it cannot do so again for 24 hours.

Special Ability (Su): Vorbyx's Watchpost grants a creature a +2 enhancement bonus on initiative rolls and a +10 bonus on Spot checks as long as it remains within the watchpost and for 24 hours after leaving it.

It also doubles the range of low-light vision and darkvision for the same period.

Aura: Moderate divination.

Ability Value: 1,750 gp (350 gp per affected creature).

POWER OF FAERÛN (3.5)

MANYWATERS

The old town of Manywaters stands just southwest of the Grand Duchy of Shantal, whose battered stone borderpost is two hundred and forty paces outside its north gates.

Inside its low, tumbledown stone walls, Manywaters would be little more than a way stop village were it not for the Riven Healing House (a small but important temple of Ilmater) and the Riven Rock from which flow the famous hot healing springs that gave Manywaters its name. A sorely wounded adventurer once collapsed in the pool formed by the springs.

The next morn she awakened whole, not only undrowned but having regained a missing arm and much flesh! Her magical armor was gone, apparently dissolved by the waters.

Later experimentation revealed that the waters heal (even banishing insanity, diseases, curses, and parasitic infestations, and restoring lost, withered, or shattered body parts) by draining the powers of magic items worn or attached to a stricken being.

More than half a day's immersion is needed for most injuries, and Riven Rock Pool can't bring the dead back to life.

However, its waters keep alive dying creatures even when their condition (such as inability to float or a slit throat) would ordinarily bring swift doom.

The pool won't "draw on" more magic than it needs to work; immersed magic items will be unaffected if no injured creature is in the pool.

Some say Ilmater causes this healing, but others believe ancient wizardry gave the pool its powers long before the Broken God was known in Faerûn.

The waters lose all efficacy the instant they're removed from the pool and entirely lack healing properties when rising through the Underdark to the surface; the Rock itself seems to grant the healing effects.

Priests forbid chipping at the Rock, but some who've done so discovered its smooth black rock crumbles to dust when fragmented—and no piece or dust of it retains the slightest magical aura or powers.

Riven Rock is a scalloped dome of smooth black rock, like an upturned bowl, about the size of a small cottage.

Many fissures in its surface radiate like wagonwheel spokes; from them flow many rivulets of enchanted water that gather into a pool (generally 4–5 feet deep—eight feet in the center—and forty feet across at its widest) that forms an arc, about two hundred paces long, halfway around the Rock.

The waters of Riven Rock Pool resist all natural and magical attempts to part it, boil it, or pump it out.

Small amounts can be removed in containers, on objects immersed in it, and in cupped hands.

Many mages have prepared magical containers to carry off the waters, but the healing powers are instantly lost upon separation from the pool, no matter what magics are on the container.

The Ilmatari of the high-pillared Riven Healing House heal anyone in return for fees they use for the betterment of the sick and maimed who dwell in interconnected buildings behind the temple (and will fiercely defend the priests without thought for their own lives).

Injured pet animals lope or stagger around the holy compound: a tree-girt wall enclosing (from front to rear) the temple, the "Hurt Houses", the Riven Rock with its pool, a small orchard and overgrown garden, and an abandoned mansion the priests sometimes rent by the month or tenday to injured visitors desiring seclusion (the Ilmatari only reluctantly allow such guests, and are very selective about who they allow in; they wield a surprising array of magic items in defense of the compound, and will hold them aimed and ready when allowing evil creatures to enter the pool).

RIVEN ROCK HEALING

The powers of the waters vary from creature to creature and occasion to occasion, but in general, curing of insanity or one disease or infestation, or restoration of one lost limb, costs 1 item ability or 3d4 charges from an item. Physical wounds are healed on a basis of 2d4 hp per item charge (for items lacking charges, 3d6 hp per item function or power; for "one-shot" items, 3d6 hp for the item).

MAJOR ARTIFACTS

ARMS AND EQUIPMENT GUIDE (3.0)

BLADE OF FIERY MIGHT

Mighty efreeti wizards working on the Elemental Plane of Fire created this scimitar.

The Grand Sultan of the efreet wielded it in a legendary battle with their enemies, the djinn.

However, a cunning janni rogue working with adventurers from the Material Plane managed to steal the blade from the sultan's throne room and, with the help of great powers, shattered the blade and scattered its shards across the multiverse.

It was only recently reformed by a warlord, the mighty son of a duergar prince and a red dragon, who gathered the spirits of the greatest forgemasters of history in his fortress on the Infernal Battlefield of Acheron to recreate the blade. Intact, the Blade of Fiery Might is a Large (damage 1d10) +5 unholy keen flaming burst falchion.

When drawn, the blade sheathes its wielder in a constant warm fire shield effect and grants a constant triple-strength (360-foot range) arcane true seeing on its wielder.

The sword's great heat also deals 1d6 points of fire damage to anyone holding it each round.

Finally, the wielder can rebuke or command fire creatures (as a 20th-level cleric) up to ten times each day.

The blade is also intelligent (Int 11, Wis 19, Cha 22, Ego 28) and lawful evil.

It speaks only Ignan, and prefers to communicate telepathically.

CRYSTAL OF THE EBON FLAME

The origin of this artifact is unknown.

It is a beautifully formed, diamond-hard mineral the size of a human's hand.

When a living creature touches the Crystal, it sends forth rays of light while a black flame seems to leap and dance in the heart of the jewel.

The character touching the Crystal must attempt a Will saving throw (DC 20).

If this save is successful, she remains unaffected by the Crystal's powers, and all other creatures within 30 feet of the Crystal must make successful Will saves (also DC 20) or be affected as by a symbol of persuasion cast by the character.

If the character fails the initial saving throw, she is affected as by a symbol of insanity, and all other creatures within 30 feet must make Will saving throws or be likewise affected, regardless of their hit points.

If the character touching the Crystal successfully saves against its initial effects, she can control the other powers of the Crystal by gazing into its depths at the dancing black flame.

The character can use discern location, greater scrying, and vision each once per day.

The Crystal grants its user a +10 circumstance bonus on Scry checks made when using its greater scrying ability.

In addition, the character can use either mind blank or protection from spells once per day, on herself only.

If the Crystal is called upon to perform its maximum number of powers in a single day (discern location, greater scrying, vision, and either mind blank or protection from spells), the character using the last power becomes the target of a trap the soul effect as soon as the last power is complete.

If the character fails the saving throw against this effect, her soul becomes part of the flickering black flame within the Crystal, and is utterly lost until the Crystal is destroyed. The caster level for all of the Crystal's powers is 20th; save DCs, where applicable, are all 25.

DAOUD'S WONDROUS LANTERN

This artifact is wrought from the finest yellow gold.

Its beautifully crafted framework is set with huge, colorful gems and clear crystal lenses.

An unwavering pure flame burns within.

The faces are normally fitted with the crystal lenses, but the colorful gems are actually additional lenses, fashioned to fit the four faces of the lantern.

The lantern's magical powers change depending upon which of the lenses are fitted to it.

The flame of Daoud's Wondrous Lantern cannot be extinguished by any known means, other than by exhausting its supply of fuel.

If this occurs, however, the lantern's possessor is instantly slain.

The lamp is fueled by crushed transparent gems, contained in a small compartment at its base.

The lantern can be refueled with 10,000 gp worth of crushed transparent gems, such as diamonds, rubies, and sapphires.

No gemstone worth less than 500 gp can be used as fuel.

This load of fuel provides the lantern with 100 charges.

If used as a normal lantern, it expends 1 charge per year of burning.

The use of magical powers requires additional charges, and thus burns fuel at a faster rate.

The four faces of the lantern can be shuttered so that no light shines through.

If all four openings of the lantern are fitted with the crystal lenses, anyone exposed to the lantern's glow for 4 consecutive hours does not need food, drink, or sleep for the next 12 hours.

A full day of exposure to this salubrious radiance acts as a cure light wounds spell (healing 1d8+5 points of damage) and temporarily halts the effects of disease and poison.

Seven consecutive days of exposure removes all disease and neutralizes poison in those creatures who bask in the light. In addition to the four clear crystal lenses, seven colored lenses were originally made for the lantern, each with its own effect: Ruby (red), jacinth (orange), topaz (yellow), emerald (green), diamond (blue), sapphire (indigo), and amethyst (violet).

When three openings of the lantern are shuttered and a colored lens is placed in the remaining opening, a beam of colored light shines forth as a ray.

This light in itself has no magical power until the proper command word is spoken and the ray is aimed at a single target.

If the target is within 10 feet of the lantern and the lantern's wielder makes a successful ranged touch attack, the target does not receive a saving throw against the effect, and spell resistance does not apply.

If the target is farther than 10 feet away (but within the lantern's 30-foot range), normal saving throws and SR apply even with a successful ranged touch attack.

The colored rays have the following effects, each of which uses 5 charges:

Type and Color	Effect
Ruby (red)	Hold monster (Will negates DC 17)
Jacinth (orange)	Flame strike (15d6 damage [half fire, half sacred], Reflex half DC 16)
Topaz (yellow)	Lightning bolt (10d6 electricity damage, Reflex half DC 14)
Emerald (green)	Haste
Diamond (blue)	Color spray (Will negates DC 11)
Sapphire (indigo)	Fear (Will negates DC 16)
Amethyst (violet)	Emotion (rage) (Will negates DC 16)

If a character places a colored gem lens in each opening of the lantern and rapidly spins it around, all creatures within 30 feet of the lantern (except its wielder) must make a successful Will save (DC 16) or be affected by confusion. Creatures within 10 feet of the lantern do not receive saving throws or SR.

Any combination of four colored lenses produces this effect.

This ability uses 10 charges.

If a character possesses all seven colored lenses and places them all, in any order, in a single opening of the lantern, the lantern produces a prismatic spray (save DC 20) on command.

This uses 50 charges and has a 10% chance of shattering 1d4 lenses, chosen at random.

If all seven lenses are arranged so that the diamond lens is alone in one opening, the ruby and jacinth lenses are in the next, the topaz and emerald lenses in the third, and the sapphire and amethyst lenses in the fourth, the lantern produces a prismatic sphere (save DC 23) on command.

This uses 50 charges.

Opening or closing one or two shutters on the lantern is a move-equivalent action that does not provoke attacks of opportunity.

Placing or removing a lens in an opening is a full-round action that does provoke attacks of opportunity from threatening foes.

All powers of the lantern are at a caster level of 20th.

If a lens shatters, a spellcaster with the Craft Wondrous Item feat can make a new one.

The lens requires an enormous gemstone of the appropriate variety, worth at least 10,000 gp, and it must be cut by an expert gemcutter (Craft [gemcutting] check DC 30) who has access to one of the other lenses to use as a guide.

In addition to the Craft Wondrous Item feat, the character making the lens must have access to the spell power that lens duplicates (hold monster, flame strike, lightning bolt, haste, color spray, fear, or emotion), and must spend 5,000 gp and 10 days in the crafting process.

A character who owns Daoud's Wondrous Lantern gradually becomes highly possessive of the item, suspicious of those who look at it, and increasingly secretive about it.

This increases to paranoid intensity by the time the owner has held the lantern for one year.

DRAGONHAMMER

Dragonhammer is a +5 holy dragon bane greatsword when used against evil dragons.

Its bane property does not function against good dragons. Against attacks by dragons, the wielder of the sword enjoys acid, electricity, fire, and cold resistance 20 and a +7 luck bonus to AC.

HELLTONGUE

Helltongue is a +5 mighty whip (+4 Strength bonus) that deals base damage as if it were a Colossal whip (2d6).

It has three strands.

On any successful hit, roll an additional 1d6: On a 1–2 one strand hits, on a 3–4 two strands hit, and on a 5–6 all three strands hit the target.

One Strand: A portion of the target's soul is transferred to the wielder.

The target gains two negative levels and the wielder gains 20 temporary hit points per negative level bestowed.

Temporary hit points gained from the whip last for 24 hours.

Two Strands: As one strand, except the whip bestows four negative levels.

Three Strands: The target must make a successful Fortitude save (DC 10 + 1/2 the wielder's character level + the wielder's Wisdom modifier) or immediately gain a number of negative levels equal to the target's effective character level (normal character level minus any negative levels already conferred).

The wielder gains 20 temporary hit points per negative level bestowed, and they last for 24 hours.

IRON FLASK OF TUERNY THE MERCILESS

Tuerny the Merciless was a powerful spellcaster who killed the royal family of an ancient land to gain control of the kingdom.

He enslaved the considerable army of the land with magic and forced them to war with neighboring lands.

Tuerny then began to summon demons, but he lacked the ability to control them.

The fiends ravaged the countryside and threatened his kingdom, so Tuerny fashioned a device that would imprison them and bind them to his will.

This worked, and with the device Tuerny's might grew even further, until one day the demons within his Iron Flask broke free and claimed his soul.

The Iron Flask is very small and plain, although the stopper is engraved and embossed with runes of power.

It holds 1d4 demons within it when first found.

Roll d% for each demon: 01–40 glabrezu, 41–80 nalfeshnees, 81–95 mariliths, 96–00 balors.

When the owner unstoppers it, he can command one of the demons to come out for up to 8 hours or until slain (at which point the demon goes back into the flask), and can control the demon's every action during that time.

No demon can be called forth more than once per week.

More demons can be added to the Iron Flask. The target demon must be within 30 feet, and the owner of the flask must use a standard action and a command word to attempt to imprison it.

The user makes a spell resistance check (if needed), using the Iron Flask's caster level of 20, and if that is successful, the demon must make a Will save (DC 20) to avoid imprisonment.

The flask can hold up to 100 demons.

At the time that a demon is imprisoned, 1d4 other demons attempt to get free from the flask.

For each attempted escape, the possessor must make a Will saving throw (DC 20 plus 1 per demon in the flask).

If a demon frees itself, it turns on the possessor and attempts to slay him.

Each time a demon is called from the Iron Flask, the owner must make a successful Will saving throw (DC 20 plus 1 for each previous save plus 1 per demon in the flask) or become chaotic evil.

Further, each time he must also make a level check (DC 10 plus 1 for each previous save plus 1 per demon in the flask) or the demon called is freed and turns on him.

If the possessor is ever slain by one of the demons from the Iron Flask, the demon is able to immediately steal his soul and carry it off to the Abyss.

JACINTH OF INESTIMABLE BEAUTY

This reddish gemstone is indescribably beautiful and exquisitely cut in dozens of facets that reflect the smallest light into a splendid display of radiant beams.

When openly displayed in the presence of any light source, the stone doubles the effective radius of illumination.

When held, the Jacinth of Inestimable Beauty grants its possessor blinding beauty like that of a nymph.

This ability affects all creatures within 60 feet of the possessor and of the same creature type (humanoid, outsider, and so on).

Those who look directly at the possessor must succeed on a Fortitude save (DC 15) or be permanently blinded.

The possessor cannot suppress this ability while holding the gem, only by putting it away.

Once per day on command, the Jacinth can wrap its possessor in unearthly beauty, again like a nymph's special ability.

Creatures of any type within 30 feet who look directly at the item's owner must succeed on a Will save (DC 17) or die.

JOHYDEE'S MASK

When not worn, Johydee's Mask appears as a simple white porcelain mask with very plain features.

When put on by any creature, however, it immediately transforms into an exact replica of that creature's face, appearing as though the creature had no mask on at all. The wearer is immune to gaze attacks and mind-affecting spells and effects.

In addition, the wearer can command the mask to disguise her as another creature; this works like the alter self spell.

REGALIA OF EVIL

These three separate artifacts possess great power—and even greater power when used together.

In eons long past, before humanity was born, perhaps before the world was forged, a gathering of the gods of darkness and corruption worked together to outfit a champion to pit against the gods of light and the lords of balance.

Since this time, the Regalia of Evil have been used by a champion of evil whenever a dispute needed to be settled against the similarly equipped champion of good or neutrality (each side having its own regalia, as described below).

It may be that today these contests of champions no longer occur, and that the individual items of the regalia have fallen into mortal hands.

Still, the gods of evil occasionally check on the devices that they created so long ago.

It has been millennia since all three items of the Regalia of Evil have been used by a single being.

The Crown of Evil: This iron crown is crude and rough, but fashioned to look like black flames wreathing the head of the wearer.

When an evil creature puts on the crown, its head is indeed wreathed in actual reddish-black fire.

These flames conceal the wearer's face.

The wearer gains immunity to fire, a +4 enhancement bonus to Strength, a +4 deflection bonus to Armor Class, and SR 20.

He can use an unnerving gaze at will, making his face resemble a loved one or bitter enemy of one opponent within 75 feet, and causing that opponent to take a –1 morale penalty on all attack rolls for 20 rounds (Will save negates DC 15; SR applies).

Three times per day each, he can use create undead and wall of fire and can also create a burst of hellfire in a 5-foot-radius spread, dealing 3d6 points of damage (no saving throw, but SR applies).

These special diabolic flames are not actual fire, and resistance to fire offers no protection from them.

All spells and similar abilities are cast at 20th level.

The wearer can speak only lies while wearing the crown (and most wearers choose never to speak at all).

The Scepter of Evil: This rod is made of iron, draped in chains. A dark red flame is always lit at one end, but it gives no heat.

While in an evil character's possession, it confers a +4 enhancement bonus to Charisma.

The wielder can use the following spells three times per day each: fear (DC 19), a special corrupt fireball that deals half fire and half unholy damage (DC 18), contagion (DC 18), and enervation (DC 19).

All spells are cast at 20th level.

The owner of this device slowly becomes more and more egotistical.

The Orb of Evil: This 6-inch orb is made of pitted and scarred iron.

Red sparks fly from it at the slightest touch.

An evil wielder can rebuke or command undead as a 15th-level cleric.

While in an evil character's possession, it confers a +4 enhancement bonus to Wisdom.

Further, the orb can be used to absorb spells like a rod of absorption.

The owner slowly grows more greedy over time.

The Regalia of Evil possess greater powers, called resonating effects, if the same creature owns more than one of them.

Resonating Effect (Two Items): While a single creature possesses two items of the Regalia of Evil, he gains a +2 circumstance bonus on all Diplomacy and Intimidate checks made against evil creatures, as they automatically recognize the creature as a powerful minion of evil.

Mindless undead view the character as an undead creature, and the character's affinity for the undead grants him a +1 circumstance bonus on saving throws against mind-influencing effects, poison, sleep, paralysis, stunning, and disease.

Similarly, vermin hold the character in high regard; a successful Charisma check (DC 20) prevents a vermin from attacking the character for 24 hours.

Finally, all evil spells cast by the creature (including those from an item of the Regalia) have +2 added to the saving throw DC.

Resonating Effect (Three Items): While a single creature possesses all three items of the Regalia of Evil, he gains a +4 enhancement bonus to Constitution, Dexterity, and Intelligence.

All weapon damage dealt by the wielder is infused with the essence of evil, and can only be healed by magic cast within the area of a consecrate or hallow spell.

Nonevil Characters: A nonevil character attempting to use any of these items immediately takes 5d6 points of damage. Further, a good-aligned character attempting to use the items must succeed on a Will saving throw (DC 18) or lose 2,000 XP.

REGALIA OF GOOD

The three mighty artifacts that comprise the Regalia of Good were forged at the same time as the Regalia of Evil and for the same purpose: For the use of a divine champion to oppose the similarly-equipped champions of the evil and neutral deities.

For long centuries, the deities of good held the items of the regalia together in one god's care, but they were stolen, separated, and are now lost.

The Crown of Good: This thin coronet of twisted mithral is elegant and slender, fashioned to look like rays of light surrounding the head of the wearer.

When a good creature puts on the crown, its head is indeed surrounded in a brilliant halo of light.

The wearer gains immunity to electricity, a +4 enhancement bonus to Wisdom, a +4 deflection bonus to Armor Class, and SR 20.

He can use the guidance spell at will.

He can use the following spells three times per day each: heroes' feast, sending, and status.

Once per day, he can surround himself with a globe of invulnerability.

All spells are cast at 20th level.

The wearer cannot speak any lies while wearing the crown.

The Scepter of Good: This slender rod is made of mithral, wreathed in a pattern of intertwining leaves.

One end constantly glows with a soft white light equivalent to a torch, but heatless.

While in a good character's possession, it confers a +4 enhancement bonus to Charisma and grants immunity to mind-affecting spells and effects.

The wielder can command obedience as if it were a rod of rulership with no use limit, and can use holy smite (DC 19) and searing light (DC 18) three times per day each.

All spells are cast at 20th level.

The wielder of the scepter becomes increasingly unable to refuse pleas for help, no matter how desperate the cause.

The Orb of Good: This 6-inch sphere is made of purest crystal, encased in a filigree cage of polished mithral laurel leaves.

A good wielder can turn or destroy undead as a 15th-level cleric.

While in a good character's possession, it confers a +4 enhancement bonus to Intelligence.

Further, the orb can be used to scry like a crystal ball with the added ability to detect thoughts.

Once per day, the orb can be used to cast heal (as a 20th-level cleric) by touch.

Resonating Effect (Two Items): While a single creature possesses two items of the Regalia of Good, he gains a +2 circumstance bonus on all Diplomacy checks made against good creatures, as they automatically recognize the character as a powerful servant of good.

As the character's nature alters to reflect the celestial energies that surround the regalia, he gains a +1 circumstance bonus on saving throws against electricity, petrification, cold, acid, fire, and poison.

The character gains low-light vision and darkvision with a range of 60 feet.

If the wielder casts a planar ally spell (including the lesser and greater versions) to call a celestial, the creature will serve for half the price it would normally charge, in goods or services (at the DM's discretion).

Finally, all good spells cast by the creature (including those from an item of the Regalia) have +2 added to the saving throw DC.

Resonating Effect (Three Items): While a single creature possesses all three items of the Regalia of Good, he gains a +4 enhancement bonus to Strength, Dexterity, and Constitution.

Any weapon wielded by the creature becomes a holy weapon, dealing an extra +1d6 points of damage to evil creatures.

In addition, the wielder radiates an aura of courage, granting all his allies within 30 feet a +4 morale bonus on their saving throws to resist fear effects.

Nongood Characters: A nongood character attempting to use any of these items immediately takes 5d6 points of damage.

Further, an evil-aligned character attempting to use the items must succeed on a Will saving throw (DC 18) or lose 2,000 XP.

REGALIA OF NEUTRALITY

It is not clear whether the deities of neutrality created the items of the Regalia of Neutrality to take an active part in the contests of divine champions that prompted the creation of the similar items of good and evil, or whether they appointed a champion to help resolve those contests. Whatever the case, these items are equally ancient and equally powerful.

The current location of the items is unknown—it is possible that one neutral deity still holds them for safekeeping, or that the neutral deities, as they once did, still take turns keeping guard over the items.

It is equally possible that they too were lost or stolen.

The Crown of Neutrality: This gold crown is traditional in appearance compared to its related items of Good and Evil, being a wide circle of metal surmounted by nine peaks, each peak holding a gemstone of a different color.

The wearer gains immunity to acid and cold, a +4 enhancement bonus to Intelligence, a +4 deflection bonus to Armor Class, and SR 20.

She can automatically distinguish between truth, half-truth, and lies she hears or reads.

She can use the following spells three times per day each: geas/quest, detect thoughts (DC 17), and Otiluke's resilient sphere (DC 19).

All spells are cast at 20th level.

In the interest of maintaining impartiality, the wearer of the crown is compelled to reveal all falsehoods she discerns, including those she herself speaks.

The Scepter of Neutrality: This ornate gold scepter, like the crown, looks like many mundane royal scepters: a heavy rod topped with a large globe and studded with gemstones. While in a neutral character's possession, it confers a +4 enhancement bonus to Constitution.

The wielder gains fast healing 2, healing 2 hit points every round until she is slain or no longer holds the scepter.

The wielder can use the following spells three times per day each: tongues (DC 20), shout (DC 19), and greater command (DC 20).

All spells are cast at 20th level.

The wielder of the scepter becomes increasingly driven to seek resolution to disputes (though not necessarily a peaceful solution to, for example, being ambushed by monsters).

The Orb of Neutrality: This 6-inch orb is made of gold and topped by a gem-studded knob.

While in a neutral character's possession, it confers a +4 enhancement bonus to Charisma.

Further, the orb allows the wielder to see in all directions at once, as if wearing a robe of eyes, but with no visible change to her person.

She gains darkvision to 120 feet and can see invisible or ethereal things within 120 feet.

She also gains a +15 circumstance bonus on Search and Spot checks.

She retains her Dexterity bonus to AC even when flat-footed and can't be flanked.

Unlike a robe of eyes, the Orb does allow its wielder to avert or close her eyes from a creature with a gaze attack, and it cannot be blinded by magical light.

Resonating Effect (Two Items): While a single creature possesses two items of the Regalia of Neutrality, she gains a +2 circumstance bonus on all Diplomacy checks made against neutral (neither good nor evil) creatures, as they automatically recognize the character as a powerful servant of neutrality.

The character slowly becomes more like the inevitables, construct inhabitants of the Clockwork Nirvana of Mechanus, gaining a +1 circumstance bonus on saving throws against mind-influencing effects, poison, sleep, paralysis, stunning, disease, death effects, and necromantic effects.

Animals (including dire animals but not beasts) hold the character in high regard; a successful Charisma check (DC 20) prevents an animal from attacking the character for 24 hours.

All lawful or chaotic spells cast by the creature (including those from an item of the Regalia) have +2 added to the saving throw DC.

Resonating Effect (Three Items): While a single creature possesses all three items of the Regalia of Neutrality, she gains a +4 enhancement bonus to Strength, Dexterity, and Wisdom.

Any weapon she wields is treated as a speed weapon, granting her an extra attack each round at her highest bonus.

Good and Evil Characters: A good or evil character attempting to use any of these items immediately takes 5d6 points of damage and must succeed on a Will saving throw (DC 18) or lose 2,000 XP.

ROD OF SEVEN PARTS

Forged eons ago by the Wind Dukes of Aaqa, powerful creatures of law, for use in their war against the Queen of Chaos, the Rod of Seven Parts was sundered in the cataclysmic battle of Pesh.

Its seven fragments scattered themselves across worlds and planes, but each fragment retains at least a fragment of the mighty magic that once coursed through the complete Rod. The Rod of Seven Parts, when intact, was 5 feet long and tapered from 2 inches across at the bottom to a half-inch at the tip.

As portions of an artifact of law, the segments do not appear broken.

Each break is an intricate pattern of crystalline facets, including both protrusions and depressions.

The individual segments are 4, 5, 6, 8, 10, 12, and 15 inches long.

Each segment of the Rod has a minor spell-like power activated by a command word.

The caster level for each power is 20th; saving throw DCs, where applicable, are 17 + spell level.

The 4-inch tip can cure light wounds five times per day.

The 5-inch segment can create a slow effect once per day.

The 6-inch segment can cast haste once per day.

The 8-inch segment can create a gust of wind five times per day.

The 10-inch segment provides true seeing once per day.

The 12-inch segment can hold monster once per day.

The 15-inch segment can heal once per day.

A nonlawful character who possesses a single segment of the Rod of Seven Parts must make a Will save each week (DC 17) to avoid becoming lawful.

A lawful character who holds a segment of the Rod and thinks of it as part of a larger item can determine in what direction the next-larger segment lies by making a successful Concentration check (DC 20); this works like locate object, but there is no range or duration limit and it is not blocked by lead.

This power cannot be used to find smaller segments than the one possessed.

The segments of the Rod can be joined together to produce an increasingly powerful artifact—the more pieces joined, the mightier the item.

Two segments joined together allow the wielder to fly at will, using a command word to activate the power.

Three segments grant the wielder spell resistance 15, and can be used as a +1 light mace.

Four segments can control winds twice per day (command-word activated) and function as a +2 heavy mace.

Five segments allow the wielder to shapechange once per day, and function as a +3/+3 quarterstaff.

Six segments allow the user to wind walk once per day, and function as a +4/+4 quarterstaff.

A character wielding six or seven assembled segments as a weapon gains the benefit of the Ambidexterity and Two-Weapon Fighting feats, facilitating the Rod's use as a double weapon.

The character does not gain the benefit of these feats when fighting with any weapon other than the Rod.

If a character attempts to join two pieces of the Rod together incorrectly (trying to attach the 6-inch segment to the 10-inch segment, for example), the larger segment teleports away, traveling 1d10 × 100 miles in a random direction.

Because the dimensions of the Rod are so precise, it is easy to tell which pieces belong together and which do not.

If all seven segments of the Rod of Seven Parts are joined together, it gains several additional powers.

The wielder of the assembled Rod can use control weather, whirlwind, and greater restoration, each once per day.

The Rod functions as a +5/+5 quarterstaff with the chaotic outsider bane and lawful properties on both ends.

Finally, the wielder of the Rod of Seven Parts can use it to cast true resurrection, but using this power causes the Rod to shatter, its pieces scattering once more across the worlds and planes.

BOOK OF EXALTED DEEDS (3.5)

CUP AND TALISMAN OF AL'AKBAR

This pair of holy artifacts first appeared in the desert city of Khaibar shortly after a great devastation.

Sultan Amhara of Khaibar sent agents to retrieve the cup and talisman after they were stolen from a local temple by bandits.

Fearing a great invasion, the sultan concealed the artifacts in two different areas of his palace, but they were found and stolen yet again.

Their current whereabouts are unknown.

The Cup of Al'Akbar: This chalice is made of hammered gold, chased with silver filigree and set with twelve great gems (apparent value 75,000 gp).

It does not radiate magic, although it glows with a warm golden light.

Seven times per day, the cup can turn ordinary water into a potion of cure light wounds (1d8+1).

The potion must be imbibed directly from the cup; it reverts to ordinary water if poured into another vessel.

The holder of the cup can also use a bless spell once per day (cast at 20th level).

A nongood keeper of the cup takes 1 point of permanent Constitution drain each day the cup remains in his custody. This drain cannot be restored by any means except a wish or miracle spell.

If the keeper's Constitution drops to 0, he dies and turns into a deathless guardian (see the deathless creature type in Chapter 8: Monsters) bound to the cup.

This ability score drain is cumulative with the drain from the Talisman of Al'Akbar (see below).

The Talisman of Al'Akbar: The talisman is made of hammered platinum in the shape of an eight-pointed star, chased with gold inlays, and with a small gem tipping each point.

The star depends from a chain of gold set with silver beading (apparent value 25,000 gp).

Like the cup, the talisman does not radiate magic.

However, the wearer can use the following spells: At will—remove disease; 1/day—remove curse.

A nongood keeper of the talisman takes 1 point of permanent Constitution drain each day the cup remains in his custody.

This drain cannot be restored by any means except a wish or miracle spell.

If the keeper's Constitution drops to 0, he dies and turns into a deathless guardian (see the deathless creature type in Chapter 8: Monsters) bound to the cup.

This ability score drain is cumulative with the drain from the Cup of Al'Akbar (see above).

Resonating Effect (Cup and Talisman): A creature wearing the talisman and holding the cup can cast resurrection three times per week.

Casting the spell requires a 10-minute ritual during which a vial of holy water must be poured into the cup and poured over the remains of the creature to be resurrected.

The spell works only on nonevil creatures and ignores the usual material component cost.

Whenever the cup and talisman are shown at the same time, all intelligent creatures viewing the artifacts must succeed on a DC 19 Will save or be overcome with greed and covetousness.

Affected creatures attack the possessor in an attempt to steal the artifacts.

Creatures friendly toward the possessor gain a +4 bonus on their Will save.

The effect ends when both artifacts are removed from the affected creature's sight.

REGALIA OF GOOD

The three mighty artifacts that comprise the Regalia of Good were forged at the same time as the Regalia of Evil and for the same purpose: For the use of a divine champion to oppose the similarly equipped champions of the evil and neutral deities.

For long centuries, the deities of good held the items of the regalia together in one god's care, but they were stolen, separated, and are now lost.

The Crown of Good: This thin coronet of twisted mithral is elegant and slender, fashioned to look like rays of light surrounding the head of the wearer.

When a good creature puts on the crown, its head is indeed surrounded in a brilliant halo of light.

The wearer gains immunity to electricity, a +4 enhancement bonus to Wisdom, a +4 deflection bonus to Armor Class, and spell resistance 20.

He can use the spell guidance at will.

He can use the following spells three times per day each: heroes' feast, sending, and greater status.

Once per day, he can surround himself with a globe of invulnerability.

All spells are cast at 20th level.

The wearer cannot speak any lies while wearing the crown.

The Scepter of Good: This slender rod is made of mithral, wreathed in a pattern of intertwining leaves.

One end constantly glows with a soft white light equivalent to a torch, but heatless.

While in a good character's possession, it confers a +4 enhancement bonus to Charisma and grants immunity to mind-affecting spells and effects.

The wielder can command obedience as if it were a rod of rulership with no use limit, and can use holy smite (DC 19) and searing light (DC 18) three times per day each.

All spells are cast at 20th level.

The wielder of the scepter becomes increasingly unable to refuse pleas for help, no matter how desperate the cause.

The Orb of Good: This 6-inch sphere is made of purest crystal, encased in a filigree cage of polished mithral laurel leaves.

A good wielder can turn or destroy undead as a 15th-level cleric.

While in a good character's possession, it confers a +4 enhancement bonus to Intelligence.

Further, the orb can be used to scry like a crystal ball with the added ability to detect thoughts.

Once per day, the orb can be used to cast heal (as a 20th-level cleric) by touch.

Resonating Effect (Two Items): While a single character possesses two items of the Regalia of Good, he gains the benefits of the Spell Focus (Good), Gift of Faith, Nimbus of Light, and Words of Creation feats.

As the character's nature alters to reflect the celestial energies that surround the regalia, he gains a +1 circumstance bonus on saving throws against electricity, petrification, cold, acid, fire, and poison.

The character gains low-light vision and darkvision with a range of 60 feet.

Finally, if the wielder casts a planar ally spell (including the lesser and greater versions) to call a celestial, the creature serves for half the price it would normally charge, in goods or services (at the DM's discretion).

Resonating Effect (Three Items): While a single creature possesses all three items of the Regalia of Good, he gains a +4 enhancement bonus to Strength, Dexterity, and Constitution.

Any weapon wielded by the creature becomes a holy weapon, dealing an extra +2d6 points of damage to evil creatures.

In addition, the wielder radiates an aura of courage, granting all his allies within 30 feet a +4 morale bonus on their saving throws to resist fear effects.

Nongood Characters: A nongood character attempting to use any of these items immediately takes 5d6 points of damage. Further, an evil-aligned character attempting to use the items must make a Will saving throw (DC 18) or lose 2,000 XP.

BOOK OF VILE DARKNESS (3.0)

ANGELWING RAZOR

This long, thin blade is not made from angels' wings; rather, it was honed on them—on the wings of dead and captive celestials.

This hideous process, conducted by the elf warlord Urgatil before going into battle against the gold dragon armies, sharpened the blade to an impossibly fine edge.

Angelwing Razor is a +5 vorpal longsword that ignores damage reduction and hardness of any kind.

It can even cut through a wall of force or similar effect.

DEATH ROCK

This object is said to be the heart of an evil demon lord or evil demigod, cut from his chest in a terrible battle with a woman invested with celestial powers who sought vengeance for the wrongs of the evil being and its cult.

The Death Rock is a crude black stone the size of a fist that pulses like a beating heart.

Anyone possessing the Death Rock gains the spellcasting abilities of a sorcerer of a level equal to his own.

The character knows only spells of the Necromancy school. If the character is already a sorcerer, the new spells known and extra spells per day are in addition to his own.

The Death Rock has a drawback.

Once per week, the closest companion or dearest loved one of the Death Rock's owner is automatically slain and turned into a zombie that serves the owner.

The owner may forsake the Death Rock to prevent this (or he might run out of companions or loved ones), but then the Death Rock immediately fades away.

DESPOILER OF FLESH

This short staff is made of human tongues sewn together end to end.

These tongues are slightly animated, so the staff occasionally bends and curls of its own volition.

Despoiler of Flesh has been in the possession of a particularly twisted and powerful nalfeshnee named Tapheon that lives in a place called the Fortress of Indifference.

It has also been in the hands of a mortal despot named Multheasan, a human in love with his two daughters.

Rather than force himself upon them, he used the Despoiler of Flesh to reshape captives and slaves into the likenesses of his daughters so that he might have his way with them instead.

The artifact allows the wielder to reshape the flesh of any creature, as with a polymorph other spell except that any shape that the wielder can imagine can be bestowed, whether a creature actually exists in that form or not. If a form is bestowed that is unwieldy or untenable, or that was created without careful forethought, the creature simply dies.

For example, the wielder could change the form of a wolf into that of a human known to him.

He could then (using the Despoiler of Flesh again) give that human purplish black skin and tentacles for arms.

If he attempted to also give the victim six spider legs and bat-like wings large enough to carry him aloft, the form would simply collapse under its own weight into a pile of fleshy goo.

Victims may resist the effect of the artifact with a Fortitude save (DC 25).

The wielder can make one change per round, with a victim getting a save to resist each change.

Turning a creature into an existing kind of creature (as described in the polymorph other spell) counts as one change. Systematically adding or removing body parts counts as one change per addition or removal, unless multiple identical changes are made (such as removing both of an ogre's hands or turning all of a dragon's teeth into short, stubby toes).

IRON FLASK OF TUERNY THE MERCILESS

Tuerny the Merciless was a powerful spellcaster who killed the royal family of an ancient land to gain control of the kingdom.

He enslaved the considerable army of the land, then went to war with neighboring lands.

Tuerny began to summon demons, but he lacked the ability to control them.

The fiends ravaged the countryside and threatened his kingdom, so Tuerny fashioned a device that would imprison and control them.

His plan worked, and with the device Tuerny's might grew even greater, until one day the demons within the flask broke free and claimed his soul.

The Iron Flask is very small and plain, although the stopper is engraved and embossed with runes of power.

It holds 1d4 demons within it when first found.

Roll on the following table to determine the kind of demon:

d%	Demons
01-40	Glabrezu
41-80	Nalfeshnees
81-95	Mariliths
96-100	Balors

When the Iron Flask is unstoppered, the owner can command one of the demons to come out for up to 8 hours or until slain (at which point the demon goes back into the flask).

During its time of freedom, the owner of the flask controls all actions of the demon.

No demon can be called forth more than once per week.

More demons can be added to the flask.

The target demon must be within 30 feet, and the owner of the flask must speak a command word (a standard action) to attempt to imprison it.

To overcome the spell resistance of the demon (if any), the owner can make a check using the caster level of the flask (30th).

Then the demon must succeed at a Will save (DC 20) or be sucked into the flask.

The Iron Flask holds up to one hundred demons.

Whenever a new demon is imprisoned, the flask must be unstoppered, and 1d4 other demons attempt to escape from the flask.

To thwart each attempted escape, the flask's owner must succeed at a Will saving throw (DC 20 +1 per demon in the flask).

If a demon escapes, it turns on the flask's owner and attempts to slay him.

Each time a demon is called from the flask, the owner must succeed at a Will saving throw (DC 20 +1 per previous save against the flask +1 per demon in the flask) or become chaotic evil.

Furthermore, each time he must also succeed at a caster level check using the flask's caster level of 30th (DC 10 +1 per previous save against the flask +1 per demon in the flask), or the demon called is freed and turns upon the owner of the flask.

If the demons from the flask ever slay the owner, they immediately steal his soul and take it to the Abyss to become a larva.

REGALIA OF EVIL

These three separate artifacts possess great power—and even greater power when used together.

In eons long past, before humanity was born and perhaps before the world was forged, the gods of darkness and corruption worked together to outfit a champion to pit against the gods of light and the lords of balance.

Since this time, champions of evil have used the Regalia of Evil whenever a dispute needed to be settled against a similarly equipped champion of good or neutrality (each faction having its own regalia).

It may be that today these contests of champions no longer occur, and the individual items of the regalia have fallen into mortal hands.

Still, the gods of evil occasionally check on the devices that they created so long ago.

It has been millennia since all three items of the Regalia of Evil were used by a single being.

The Crown of Evil: This iron crown is crude and rough, fashioned to look like black flames wreathing the head of the wearer.

When an evil creature puts on the crown, its head is surrounded by reddish-black fire.

These flames conceal the wearer's face.

The wearer gains fire immunity, a +4 enhancement bonus to Strength, a +4 deflection bonus to Armor Class, and spell resistance 20.

It can use unnerving gaze at will as a spell-like ability, and it can use the following spell-like abilities three times per day: create undead, hellfire, and wall of fire.

All spell-like abilities are at 20th caster level.

The wearer can speak only lies while wearing the crown, so usually the wearer of the crown doesn't speak.

The Scepter of Evil: This rod is made of iron and draped in chains.

A dark red flame is always lit at one end, but it gives off no heat.

While in a character's possession, the scepter confers a +4 enhancement bonus to Charisma.

The wielder can use each of the following spell-like abilities three times per day: fear (DC 19), corrupt fireball (DC 18), red fester (DC 18), and power leech (DC 20).

All spell-like abilities are at 20th caster level. The owner of this device slowly becomes more and more egotistical.

The Orb of Evil: This 6-inch-diameter orb is made of pitted and scarred iron.

Red sparks fly from the orb at the slightest touch.

The wielder can rebuke and command undead as a 15th-level cleric can.

While in a character's possession, the orb confers a +4 enhancement bonus to Wisdom.

Furthermore, the orb can absorb spells as a rod of absorption can.

The owner slowly grows greedier over time.

The Regalia of Evil has greater powers, called resonating effects, if the same creature owns more than one of the items.

Two Items: When a single creature possesses two items of the Regalia of Evil, it gains the effects of the Lichloved, Dark Speech, Evil Brand, and Verminfriend feats.

Save DCs on all evil spells and spell-like abilities of the creature (including those from the Regalia) are increased by +2.

Three Items: When a single creature possesses all three items of the Regalia of Evil, it gains a +4 enhancement bonus to Constitution, Dexterity, and Intelligence.

All weapon damage dealt by the wielder is vile damage.

A nonevil character attempting to use any of the items that comprise the Regalia of Evil immediately takes 5d6 points of damage.

Furthermore, a good-aligned character attempting to use one of these items must succeed at a Will saving throw (DC 18) or lose 2,000 XP.

RUBY ROD OF ASMODEUS

Asmodeus wields the Ruby Rod of Asmodeus, which acts as a +6 unholy greatclub that bestows an inflict critical wounds spell (caster level 20th) upon anyone it touches.

See the artifacts section of Chapter 6 for a description of the Ruby Rod's other powers.

RUBY ROD OF ASMODEUS

This scepter glistens with an unimaginable, unearthly luster.

Some claim that in just gem value alone, the rod is worth more than one million gold pieces.

It is, however, also a formidable weapon of evil.

If used in melee, it is a +6 unholy greatclub that bestows an inflict critical wounds spell (cast at 20th level) upon anyone it touches (Will DC 19 half).

Anyone that touches the rod against Asmodeus's will feels the effect of the inflict critical wounds spell as well.

Weapons with a +6 enhancement bonus are beyond the ken of most item creators, but they otherwise follow all the rules for magic weapons.

The Ruby Rod also has a number of supernatural abilities, which function as the spells cast by a 20th-level caster.

The following abilities are usable at will by Asmodeus, and once per day by anyone else.

- Line of Lightning: 150 feet long, 10 feet wide, deals 20d6 points of electricity damage (Reflex DC 23 half).
- Line of Acid: 300 feet long, 5 feet wide, deals 20d6 points of acid damage (Reflex DC 23 half).

- Cone of Cold: 75 feet long, deals 20d6 points of cold damage (Reflex DC 23 half).

- Aura of Might: Anyone attempting to make a melee attack against the wielder must succeed at a Will save (DC 20) or instead bow down, helpless for 1 round.

- Reverie of Nessus: When this ability is activated, the wielder is instantly encased in a 5-foot-radius spherical wall of force, and the area 50 feet around the sphere (but not within it) becomes an antimagic field.

This effect lasts for 3 rounds.

In the first round, the wielder is automatically purged of any unwanted enchantments.

In the second round, the wielder is purged of any diseases, poisons, or physical maladies (including lost body parts).

In the third round, the wielder is healed to full hit points and feels as though he just rested a full day, regaining spells and spell-like abilities accordingly (but even Asmodeus can only gain the benefit of this magical rest once per day).

WAND OF ORCUS

This black obsidian and iron rod is topped with the skull of a human hero slain by Orcus.

If wielded in melee, it is a +6 unholy chaotic heavy mace.

If the wand touches any nonoutsider, or an outsider with less than 15 HD, the target must succeed at a Fortitude save (DC 25) or die immediately.

Anyone that touches the wand against Orcus's will must save or die as well.

Weapons with a +6 enhancement bonus are beyond the ken of most item creators, but they otherwise follow all the rules for magic weapons.

The wand also confers a +5 deflection bonus to the Armor Class of the wielder at all times.

Finally, the wielder can call upon each of the following powers once per day, as the spells cast by a 20th-level caster: abyssal might, bodak birth, call nightmare, clutch of Orcus (DC 18), summon monster VII, wrack (DC 18), and wretched blight (15d8 damage, DC 23).

WAND OF ORCUS

The Wand of Orcus is an artifact that acts as a +6 chaotic unholy greatclub that adds a +5 deflection bonus to the wielder's Armor Class and forces any living creature touched by it to make a Fortitude save (DC 20) or die instantly.

It has other powers as well (see its description in Chapter 6).

CHAMPIONS OF RUIN (3.5)

GRAY PORTRAIT

This artifact prevents its owner from suffering negative levels, ability drain, and from aging.

Lore: A DC 30 bardic knowledge or Knowledge (religion) check recalls this myth about the gray portrait.

Long ago, almost two millennia in the past, a vain and selfish chaotic neutral follower of Sune named Belarian the Beautiful sought every means available to sustain and enhance his beauty.

Firehair's creed teaches that beauty is not just skin deep, but Belarian only cared about his appearance. His self-infatuation was so great that he turned from his devotion to Lady Firehair and offered to sell his soul to any god or demon able to preserve his physical perfection.

One answered, gifting Belarian with immortality and perpetual beauty through an artifact.

Who created the gray portrait, which entity gave it to Belarian, or what eventually happened to the vain man is a matter of speculation.

Over the last two thousand years, various personages have owned the portrait, but its current location is unknown.

Description: Initially only a blank canvas, the gray portrait becomes a picture of the owner after one week.

Activation: After an individual possesses the portrait for one week, a picture of that individual owner appears on the canvas.

Effect: The owner of the gray portrait does not age or show signs of aging.

As long as he owns the portrait, he will appear as young and as healthy as he did when he first acquired the artifact.

When the owner of the portrait is subject to spells or effects that bestow negative levels or cause ability drain, such as energy drain spell or a vampire's touch, he does not suffer their effects.

Instead, the portrait absorbs these debilitating effects.

His image in the portrait transforms to look more haggard and depraved as it suffers the horrors that leave its owner untouched.

The portrait stores and preserves all this horrible magic.

If it is ever destroyed, the owner immediately suffers all the negative effects of age, negative levels, and ability drain that the portrait has absorbed.

If the owner has outlived his natural life span, he instantly dies.

Aura/Caster Level: Overwhelming abjuration and necromancy; CL 20th.

Weight: 10 lb.

Price: —.

DRAGONS OF FAERÛN (3.5)

FANGED SHIELD OF SHYK KORORT

The Fanged Shield of Shyk Korort is a historical artifact of the Shoon Era with significant historical import as a tyrannical symbol of the Seven Burnings campaign and as a religious relic among gnolls in the Cult of Yeenoghu.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about the Fanged Shield of Shyk Korort by making Knowledge (arcana) or Knowledge (history) checks.

DC 20: By seizing the hoard of Rhimnasarl during the Shining in the Year of the Plague Clouds (236 DR), Qysar Shoon IV precipitated a period of intense research and magical experimentation among the court mages of the Shoon Imperial Court.

Many artifacts and spells attributed to the Shoon Empire date back to this period, of which the Fanged Shield of Shyk

Korort, fashioned in the Year of the War Wyvern (258 DR), is just one example.

DC 25: Korort adh Shoon, the original bearer of the Fanged Shield, was a mameluk (Calishite slave-king) of Tethen heritage who reached the rank of Shyk (major) in the Imperium's armies during the reign of Qysara Shoon V. A strategic genius belatedly recognized as one of the foremost military minds of his day, Korort was instrumental in pushing the eastern borders of the Imperium as far as the Landrise.

Only his status as a mameluk prevented Korort from achieving the rank of qayadin (general) before his death at the hands of a rakshasa assassin recruited by his jealous superiors.

DC 30: After Korort's death, the Fanged Shield was borne by a succession of qayadin as a ceremonial badge of office.

It saw little use on the field of battle until the latter half of the Year of Silver Holly (437 DR).

In response to a rebellion by numerous towns along the River Shaar and Lake Lhespen, Qysar Amahl Shoon VII dispatched Qayadin Hakam yn Sarak el Sallah, his most merciless general, and seventeen troop ships to quell the uprising.

During a campaign that later came to be called the Seven Burnings, Hakam wielded the Fanged Shield to great effect as his troops rampaged through Sheirtalar, Kormul, and five other towns.

Shyk Korort's shield quickly became a hated symbol of the tyranny of the Shoon.

Hakam remained in the Shaar as its nazir (prefect) until his ignoble death in the Year of Unleashed Fears (451 DR), when he was ripped limb from limb by a mob of widows.

The Fanged Shield of Shyk Korort vanished during the chaos that followed the collapse of imperial rule and did not resurface until the Year of the Fanged Beast (640 DR).

In his lengthy treatise entitled Dogmen of the Shaar, published in the Year of the Gruesome Grimoires (676 DR), Dhyntar of Kormul chronicles the rapid rise in influence of Yeenoghu's cult among the gnoll tribes of the grasslands that year and the resultant sharp increase in attacks against the towns of the Lake Lhespen region in the decades that followed.

One passage in particular describes a spiked shield bearing a snarling visage, an unmistakable description of the Fanged Shield of Shyk Korort, employed by Ur-Darnok (the preeminent shaman of Yeenoghu's cult) and revered as a relic by the gnoll tribes of the area.

Later in his treatise, Dhyntar conjectures that the intertribal strife that erupted among the Shaaran gnoll tribes in the Year of the Shrouded Slayer (671 DR) was directly attributable to Ur-Darnok's death at the hands of a great wyrm blue dragon.

Because dragons from lairs across Faerûn have always fed on the huge herds that roam the Shaar, Dhyntar was unable to even guess which wyrm had killed Ur-Darnok and seized the Fanged Shield of Shyk Korort.

Although most sages since that time have assumed that the attack that shattered the power of the Shaaran gnoll tribes was pure happenstance, in truth Iryklathagra (the unidentified blue dragon) had deliberately tracked down this indirect legacy of Rhimnasarl's hoard and reclaimed it. The Fanged Shield of Shyk Korort has lain undisturbed in her hoard ever since, while tales of its powers have grown to mythic proportions among the gnoll tribes of the South, and its image has been adopted as a symbol of tyranny in Lapaliiya by the followers of Bane and the Baneson.

Description: The Fanged Shield of Shyk Korort is a light steel shield whose face is molded in the shape of a snarling, monstrous face.

Ivory spikes, placed so as to resemble protruding fangs, jut forward from behind the lower lip.

The bestial visage has been variously described as resembling that of a dragon, a gnoll, or a fiend from the Lower Planes, and faint traces remain of various pigments that have been used to reinforce such interpretations.

Two adjustable leather straps are bolted to the reverse side of the shield, enabling the bearer to firmly affix the Fanged Shield to the forearm and wield it as both a defensive and offensive instrument.

Effect: The Fanged Shield of Shyk Korort is a +2 command fearsome light steel shield with +2 shield spikes.

Consequences: If the Fanged Shield is ever liberated from its resting place in Iryklathagra's hoard, this would be momentous news to the gnolls of the South, among which the Fanged Shield of Shyk Korort has achieved nigh-mythic status.

As word of the shield's rediscovery spreads south and east, every gnoll tribe from Amn to the Shaar will begin raiding caravans passing through and settlements on the periphery of their territory.

At least one survivor will be allowed to escape each such raid bearing a message, usually written in crude pictographs, demanding the return of the shield of Yeenoghu (the Fanged Shield) in exchange for halting the raids.

Tethyr will be particularly hard hit, for gnoll tribes are common in the Forest of Tethyr, the Forest of Mir, the Starspires, the Iltkazar range, and the ruins of Shoonach.

Trade along the Golden Road will suffer as well, and eventually the unrest will spread south to the Shaar.

Of course, simply giving the Fanged Shield to one tribe will not satisfy rival tribes, so this problem is unlikely to abate for months, if not years.

Should a charismatic leader of the gnolls acquire the shield, they might marshal a horde of their kin of a size not seen in centuries.

The Knights of the Black Gauntlet, a religious order dedicated to the deity, of tyranny, are a growing power along the northern and western shores of the Lake of Steam.

Once word of the shield's rediscovery spreads to Mintar, the leaders of the order (who harbor aspirations of ruling the entire South) will see acquisition of the Fanged Shield as a critical component toward extending their influence into Lapaliiya.

Aware that they are unlikely to acquire the twin-spiked buckler directly, the Knights will secretly spread word of the Fanged Shield's discovery and the tactics being used to bargain for it to gnoll tribes throughout the South.

In addition to weakening neighboring realms, the Knights will then be positioned to seize the shield for themselves, regardless of which gnoll tribe first acquires it.

Overwhelming illusion; CL 20th.

GHAZIR THE DESERT'S EDGE

Employed in the conquest of the Nelanther and the taming of the Cloud Peaks, Ghazir the Desert's Edge is a legendary weapon of the Shoon Imperium with a cursed reputation.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about Ghazir by making Knowledge (arcana) or Knowledge (history) checks.

DC 15: In the Year of the Burnished Blade (276 DR), Qysar Shoon IV of the Shoon Imperium fashioned a uniquely powerful scimitar from the shifting sands of the Calim Desert, drawing on the trove of magical lore seized from the hoard of Rhimnasarl the Shining.

Shoon IV was a necromancer, unskilled in swordplay, who crafted the weapon solely to prove it could be done.

The blade (named Ghazir, or "war crescent" in Alzhedo) lay unused in the royal vaults for nearly a decade after it was forged.

DC 20: In the Year of Wasted Pride (285 DR), Qysara Shoon V formally bequeathed the scimitar to a senior ralbahr (admiral), Murabir of Memnon Faruk yn Aban el Khafar yi Memnon, as a symbol of office.

Faruk had long championed the conquest and colonization of the Nelanther, as the genie-haunted isles west of Zazesspur were known, and the gift was seen as a symbol of the qysara's favor.

The ensuing naval campaign was a great success; nearly a score of rogue djinn were slain, and the gale-force winds that had long prevented the safe passage of sailing ships along the Sword Coast abated.

Despite the construction of the Sea Towers of Irphong and Nemessor, the subsequent colonization efforts foundered, due to the nobles' distaste for the constant cool winds (which many attributed to the angry spirits of the djinn) and other factors of living close to the stormy Trackless Sea. Faruk was eventually cashiered in the Year of Sundered Sails (302 DR) by the qysara's successor, Shoon VI, and Ghazir was returned to the vaults beneath the Imperial Mount of Shoonach, where it languished for nearly three decades.

DC 30: The winter that stretched from the Year of Roused Giants (330 DR) to the Year of Cold Clashes (331 DR) was one of the coldest on record in the Shoon Imperium.

The Calishar Emirates were blanketed in snow, and raiding giants emerged from the mountains to plunder isolated communities.

After a large tribe of frost giants began harrying the outlying farms of Athkatla, Qysar Shoon VII dispatched a large company of soldiers to deal with the menace.

Ghazir was loaned to the troops' colonel, Balak Muham yn Daud el Talhib, who used Desert's Edge to dispatch dozens of northern behemoths.

Although Muham was hailed as a hero upon his return to Shoonach, Ghazir's reputation was tarnished by the string of harsh winters that followed, coupled with reports that the frost giants' spirits continued to haunt the Cloud Peaks.

Rumors suggested that the weapon was in some manner cursed, and that the souls of its victims remained tethered to this world where they continued to harass the living.

It was deemed politically expedient by Shoon VII's viziers to return Ghazir to the royal vaults, where it lay untouched until the fall of the Imperium.

In the Year of the Corrie Fist (450 DR), Iryklathagra seized Ghazir along with many other treasures as she plundered Shoonach, and Desert's Edge has lain untouched in her hoard ever since.

Description: Ghazir is a great scimitar nearly 5 feet in length from tip to pommel.

The glassteel blade is fashioned from the crystalline sand left in the wake of Memnon's Crackle, a shifting region of intense heat in the Calim Desert.

A curving line of fire endlessly dances within the heart of the blade.

The scimitar's smoothly polished basket and hilt are carved from the talon of a long-dead blue wyrm and engraved with magic runes encircling the sigil of Shoon IV.

Effect: Ghazir is a +2 elemental bane flaming scimitar.

The weapon also absorbs the first 10 points of fire damage per attack that the wearer would normally take (similar to the resist energy spell).

Once per day, the bearer can use air walk.

Finally, one curious power of Ghazir creates lingering phantoms of every creature it fells.

Such ghosts are tied only to the general geographic region in which they are slain and are left with only the power to manifest themselves in two different forms (though not both concurrently).

The dead victims can manifest as either visual phantoms or as natural or elemental phenomena somehow linked to their mortal lives.

Although this power is little understood, it seems to have created djinni ghosts capable of manifesting as winds throughout the Nelanther and frost giant phantoms capable of manifesting as regions of bitter cold and snow in the Cloud Peaks.

Consequences: Ghazir has a fell reputation, even today, although most folk who do not understand Alzhedo think it the name of an efreeti bound into to the form of a blade. Merchants regularly curse Desert's Edge when making a treacherous passage through the blizzard-prone Fang Pass or the fierce gales that buffet Asavir's Channel.

Should Ghazir resurface in Aran or Tethyr after being removed from Iryklathagra's hoard, tales of vengeful frost giant ghosts and tormented undead genies will once again spread through the Nelanther and along the Sword Coast. Moreover, such rumors might be rooted in fact, for the coast of A mil and northern Tethyr will suffer increasingly fierce gales and harsh winters in the years following Ghazir's reappearance, as each additional phantom created by the blade incites all previous phantoms to employ their remaining magical powers to the greatest effect possible. Moreover, should Desert's Edge be used to slay other beings, tales might spread of their spirits plaguing the region as well.

The leaders of Amn and Tethyr will be forced by public opinion to seek custody of the scimitar, but the white wyrm who lairs atop Mount Speartop (Icehauptannarthanyx) will move quickly to claim Ghazir for his own hoard.

He fears that the Cloud Peaks climate will grow noticeably warmer if the frost giant spirits are somehow laid to rest by destroying the scimitar.

Having bargained unsuccessfully with Iryklathagra for centuries to acquire Desert's Edge, Icehauptannarthanyx will be quick to take advantage of the opportunity afforded by a band of adventurers who acquire the scimitar.

Overwhelming conjuration; CL 20th.

KAYAS THE KRAKENSOURGE

Kayas the Krakensourge is the traditional weapon of the Triton Protectorates of the Sea of Fallen Stars in their endless battle to contain the slumbering cephalopods of the Trench of Lopok.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about Kayas by making Knowledge (arcana) or Knowledge (history) checks.

DC 20: For fourteen centuries, up until a century ago, Kayas was a traditional weapon of the Triton Protectorates, wielded by a succession of triton war leaders against the krakens that dwelt below.

In the hands of the tritons, the Krakensourge was used to slaughter more than a score of the great denizens of the deep, until few dared to emerge from the Trench of Lopok.

DC 25: The reign of Coronel Vaequius II of Aryselmalyr, which stretched from -819 DR to -777 DR, saw the persecution of wizards throughout the Sea of Fallen Stars, particularly the four Dukar orders of Myth Nantar.

In -788 DR, Vaequius the Dark, as the paranoid sea elf ruler was known, initiated the Fifth Serôs War against the shalarin kingdom of Es'krin following the Second Shalarin Passing.

This attack prompted other allied and neutral states of Serôs to ally against her, so in desperation, the coronel allied herself with a pair of kraken—Borapalys and Rylurkarth—from the Trench of Lopok.

The war finally ended following the deaths of Vaequius II and her kraken allies, the result of heroic sacrifices by a small band of Dukars of the Jhimari Order, but not before the destruction of Es'krin and the morkoth magocracy known as the Arcana of Humbar.

Borapalys's death was the work of Kayas, a triton Peacekeeper weaponer who is said to have slain the loathsome kraken by turning himself into a great blade and plunging himself into the monster's black heart.

He is thought to have employed the hidden Fifth Step of the Weapon Path of the Karel (a long-abandoned double-bladed dagger once used by tritons).

It is from this tale that the first legends regarding the Krakensourge arose, a weapon that is now named for its Dukar creator.

Following the end of the Fifth Serôs War, the Krakensourge passed into the possession of the Orison dynasty of Aryselmalyr.

However, it was not listed in the inventory of the royal vaults taken in the Year of Weary Kings (-412 DR), when the crown of Aryselmalyr passed to House Vesahlir of Naramyr.

No record of Kayas exists until, it resurfaced during the Seventh Serôs War in the hands of a storm giant adventurer named Lorthar of the Waves.

Lorthar died in combat with a legion of elite morkoth warriors in the Year of the Valorous Kobold (-106 DR), during one of the last battles of the war.

The Krakensourge briefly fell into the hands of the Theocracy of the Deep Ones before it was reclaimed by the tritons, whose unexpected emergence from the deeper trenches of the sea ensured the morkoths' defeat.

DC 30: In the Year of the Shattered Wall (1271 DR), the Ahlors Protectorate was ravaged by an attack from an unexpected quarter.

Iryklathagra, exploring a saline environment wholly unlike that in which she was born by means of an iridescent ioun stone, plundered the trade city of Otanyin.

In addition to seizing a fortune in pearls, she made off with Kayas and the corpse of the weapon's last triton wielder in her claws.

The Krakenscourage has since lain unused in her hoard.

Description: The Krakenscourage is a unique two-bladed sword, closely resembling a double-ended spear or harpoon, made of coral and bone.

Just over 9 feet in length, Kayas consists of two long, thin sword blades, made of razor-sharp Jhimar coral (a red-hued variant of claw coral) on opposing ends of a central hilt. The blades and the hilt are smooth and seamless, clearly not carved or fitted from separate pieces.

The 3-foot-long cylindrical hilt, fashioned of polished bone, is pierced by three smoothed oval-shaped holes, each the width of a triton's hand.

Despite its size, the weapon is quite light, weighing less than 5 pounds, but it is as strong as adamantine and essentially unbreakable.

Effect: The Krakenscourage can be used as a +3/+3 two-bladed sword (by grasping the two outer holes in the hilt) or as a +5 longspear underwater (by grasping the central hole in the hilt).

Any successful hit on a cephalopod (which includes krakens, octopi, and squids) deals an extra 2d6 points of damage, or twice that amount on a critical hit.

The bearer can act continuously under the effects of a freedom of movement spell and a darkvision spell.

A lingering remnant of Kayas's sentience can sense the presence of kraken within 100 miles of its location and direct its bearer toward the nearest such denizen of the deep by causing its coral blades to glow with varying hues of reddish light.

The blades of the Krakenscourage also glow warmly in the presence of any Dukars, a reflective effect still extant today in living Dukars.

This last effect suggests that it might be possible for the wielder of the Krakenscourage to tap into Kayas's Dukar powers, but no means of doing so is currently known.

Consequences: The Triton Protectorates of Serôs never acknowledged the loss of Kayas to Iryklathagra, since possessing the Krakenscourage (or appearing to do so) has kept the krakens of the Trench of Lopok in check.

Hence, if the weapon is removed from Iryklathagra's hoard, word of its reappearance will spread beneath the waves of the Sea of Fallen Stars, and a pillar of the tritons' arsenal will be revealed as a sham.

The lopoks (as they are called in the tongue of the locathah) would immediately begin testing the defenses of the Protectorates in order to validate the truth of such tales, and once they have done so will revise their plots accordingly. Concurrently, both the tritons and the krakens will use any means to acquire Kayas, the former in the hope of restoring the shattered status quo and the latter in order to cement their more advantageous position.

In the northern Trackless Sea, Slarkethrel (Spawn of Umberlee and King of the Trackless Depths) will employ every resource of the secretive Kraken Society in order to seize Kayas for itself.

Similarly, once the Cephalopolop (as the kraken who rules the kuo-toa city of Sloopdilmopolop deep beneath Firedrake Bay calls itself) learns of the weapon's discovery, it will dispatch kuo-toa rogues of the Severed Claw to steal the weapon.

The kraken that lairs off the coast of Calimshan and the kraken lurking in the Nelanther (which now calls itself the Curse of Irphong) will respond similarly.

Even Shond Tharovin, the infamous wizard trapped in gibbering moulder form who lairs amid the Singing Rocks, will attempt to capture Kayas, hoping to use the threat it embodies to manipulate the krakens of the surrounding seas.

Finally, the Krakenscourage represents a great opportunity for the Dukar Orders should it ever be returned to Myth Nantar.

There is a small chance that Kayas's slumbering sentience could be contacted by Grand Savant Qos of the Fifth Order. Under such a scenario, it is possible that Kayas could be resurrected, or at least he could supply a great deal of long-lost information to those Dukars attempting to restore the Lost Order of Jhimar.

Moderate transmutation; CL 20th.

KURALTAAR THE DEMONSHIELD

Kuraltaar is one of thirteen Demonshields forged by Hilather (Halaster Blackcloak) during the Shoon Imperium.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about Kuraltaar the Demonshield by making Knowledge (arcana) or Knowledge (history) checks.

DC 20: The thirteen Demonshields were commissioned during the Shoon Imperium as part of a project to find a way to more securely bind fiends to the will of their summoners and thus employ them as agents of the Shoon Imperium.

Of the thirteen shields, twelve were lost and one was confined to the royal vaults of the Shoon until it was claimed by Iryklathagra.

DC 30: During the Age of Shoon, many small realms, known collectively as the Calishar Emirates, rose and fell along the southern Sword Coast north of the Marching Mountains.

The rulers of these realms governed their subjects largely as they pleased, as long as those subjects obeyed the dictates of the qysar, paid their taxes in full, and supplied levies of troops to the imperial armies as needed.

The excesses of the petty nobles of this era were legion and included widespread trafficking with fiends.

Such summoned "pets" often broke their bonds of servitude and became ravaging menaces, while those responsible for their presence in Faerûn hid safely behind their villa walls. In the Year of the Vow Manifest (44 DR), the followers of Anachtyr (a local alias of Tyr) responded to the threat posed by demons rampaging through the countryside by forging three Demonbane shields—Kimeltaar, Naelotaar, and Dizeltaar—to be wielded by paladin champions.

In contrast, the ponderous imperial bureaucracy did not react for more than eight decades and then only in a token fashion.

Although most records from the reign of Qysar Shoon III were destroyed during the Shoonach Conflagration, it appears that an errant Raurinese wizard named Hilather was hired to develop a more secure means of binding fiends to the will of their summoners (and thus as agents of the Shoon Imperium).

In the Year of the Addled Arcanist (128 DR), Hilather established himself in an abandoned tower in the remote emirate of Torsil, which lay along the Sword Coast north of the northwestern foothills of the Cloud Peaks and south of Candlekeep, near the site of present-day Beregost. In the catacombs beneath his newly appropriated tower, the Raurinese wizard either located or created a planar breach between the Material Plane and the Abyss. Drawing on the large body of genie lore that had been developed by Calishite sorcerers over the Centuries and the process for creating a mirror of life trapping, he devised a process whereby he could summon all manner of nether beings and permanently bind them into physical objects. After four years of experimentation, Hilather emerged from seclusion in the Year of Thirteen Prides Lost (152 DR) with thirteen Demonshields in hand, which he presented to the Imperial Court.

Although the newly installed Qysar Amahl Shoon IV was reportedly pleased with the Raurinese wizard's work, the process by which Hilather created the Demonshields was never reproduced, for reasons that remain obscure. Hilather apparently vanished later that same day with a mysterious payment in hand, and the only chronicle of his work, supposedly recorded in a nondescript libram entitled Hilather's Workbook, seems to have been lost shortly thereafter.

(Unbeknownst to all, this long-lost tome lies within the library of King Haedrak III of Tethyr, hidden inside the covers of an unrelated and useless tome that has been gathering dust for centuries).

Twelve of the thirteen Demonshields were quickly dispensed to various high-ranking mameluks (Calishite slave-kings), and sporadic accounts of their use appear in various historical records up until the first century of the Seventh Age of Calimshan.

The thirteenth shield, known as Kuraltaar, lay untouched in the imperial vaults, presumably reserved as an example of Hilather's artistry for the court mages of the Shoon to study at their leisure.

After languishing in the royal vaults for over two centuries, unused and almost forgotten, Kuraltaar was finally retrieved in the Year of Emerald Eyes (571 DR) and given to Iryklathagra by Qysara Shaani.

Ensclosed ever since in the hoard of the great wyrm blue dragon, the thirteenth Demonshield is undoubtedly unique in that it has existed for over twelve centuries while having never been employed in combat.

Despite Kuraltaar's quiet history, two events of historical import—both of which involve the destruction of a school of wizardry—weigh deeply on its future fate.

In the Year of Crimson Magics (1026 DR), the mage Ulcaster, a conjurer of note, established a school of conjuration on the ruins of Hilather's tower that attracted would-be mages from up and down the Sword Coast. For eight decades, Ulcaster and his senior apprentices secretly attempted to replicate Hilather's earlier work on the site. Just as they were on the brink of success, the school was destroyed in the Year of the Solemn Halfling (1106 DR) in a spell-battle with Calishite mages who feared the school's growing power.

Ulcaster vanished during the fray, and his fate remains unknown.

Today, some whisper that the wizards of Calimshan jealously guard the secret of binding genies and other beings of power into physical objects, and that they will visit the fate of the Ulcasterian school on any who presume to unlock their secrets.

The other event that colors Hilather's legacy is the destruction of the School of Wonder, in the Year of the Leaping Frog (1266 DR).

It is commonly known that the School of Wonder was destroyed by tanar'ri and power-mad students, an event that precipitated the Amnian populace's existing distrust of wizards.

Only a few sages are aware that the seeds of the school's downfall were sown when four of the long-forgotten Demonshields were recovered from an ancient barrow in the Fields of the Dead and brought back to the School of Wonder for study.

Somehow the fiends bound within the shields were released, and they in turn summoned in a legion of their fellows after recruiting several student wizards with whispered promises of power.

The resulting carnage was barely contained, and after the fiends were finally dispatched, the School of Wonder lay in ruins, with all its masters dead and only a few students still alive.

Description: Kuraltaar (and the other Demonshields) are all constructed in the form of diamond shields, a form of armor unique to the Shoon era (see sidebar).

Kuraltaar is forged from a rare alloy of arjale and tantulhor, two lightweight ores from the fiery plane of Phlegethos (fourth of the Nine Hells), mixed with silver.

The resultant alloy is almost impervious to attack, yet retains a small amount of malleability.

Aside from a bright, untarnished silvery hue flecked with an unusual green design, Kuraltaar is otherwise unadorned. Effect: Kuraltaar is a +1 diamond shield with hardness 12 and 30 hit points.

Like all Demonshields, Kuraltaar reflects the nature and defensive powers of the fiend imprisoned within—in this case, a glabrezu named Kural'Risyk.

The glabrezu's damage reduction (10/good), immunities (electricity and poison), resistances (acid 10, cold 10, and fire 10), and spell resistance (21) all apply to the bearer of the shield.

Whenever any of the shield's protective powers come into play, aside from the Armor Class bonus, the bearer's form is momentarily cloaked in the image of Kural'Risyk (who was a powerfully muscled glabrezu).

It is not possible to contact Kural'Risyk while he remains within the Demonshield.

However, as the wizards of the School of Wonder learned (to their horror), it is possible to destroy a Demonshield and thereby release the fiend imprisoned within.

Consequences: To conjurers trained in the tradition of the Ulcasterian school, the recovery of a Demonshield holds the promise of finally unlocking the secrets of Hilather's Workbook.

Despite its relative obscurity, if the shield is taken from Iryklathagra's hoard and word of its recovery spreads, conjurers from across Faerûn will try to acquire it.

Thalantyr of Beregost, a conjurer of great repute and perhaps the greatest living scholar of Ulcaster's work, will seek to acquire the Demonshield as the cornerstone on which to refound the Ulcasterian school.

Rivals of Thalantyr will seek Kuraltaar for their own ends, and Calishite mages who guard their secrets jealously will not tolerate study of Hilather's legacy.

Whoever holds Kuraltaar will be the target of numerous attacks from summoned servitors, including aerial servants, fiends, and elemental-kin, and the devastation wrought by those who escape their bindings is apt to be immense. One of the few students to escape the destruction of the School of Wonder abandoned the study of the Art to become a spy and a thief.

After joining the Shadow Thieves, Rhinnom Dannihyr rose rapidly through the ranks of the guild until he became Grandmaster in the Year of Shadows (1358 DR) and Iltarch (fourth-ranking member) of the Council of Six (the rulers of Amn) in the Year of the Helm (1362 DR).

Having seen the devastation unleashed by the Demonshields on the School of Wonder and well aware of the distrust of wizards that still persists among the Amnian populace, Rhinnom is prepared to use that suspicion as a weapon, or preferably as an instrument of blackmail, against the Cowled Wizards of Aran.

If Rhinnom can acquire the Demonshield, he can threaten every Cowled Wizard cell with the possibility that he will unveil Kuraltaar in its city.

Since such an action would precipitate a major wizard war and a huge pogrom against practitioners of the Art by the Amnian citizenry, Amn's secret society of sorcerers would most likely acquiesce to the dictates of the Grandmaster. Strong conjuration [chaos, evil]; CL 20th.

diamond shield

Similar in function to a Kara-Turan kote or a vambrace, a diamond shield consists of four isosceles triangular metal sheets shaped into the form of a diamond, then bent along both axes and riveted together along the seams with 2-inch-wide strips of metal. A diamond shield protects the off-hand forearm and upper arm, bending sharply at the elbow. When fighting defensively, the wielder of a diamond shield can make melee attacks at a  $-2$  penalty with the off-hand weapon, not the normal  $-4$  penalty. A diamond shield is otherwise equivalent to a buckler except as noted below.

Cost 20 gp; Weight 6 lb.

MONOCLE OF BAGTHALOS

The monocle of Bagthalos is a religious relic sacred to Helm, Deity of Guardians.

It occupies space on the body as a pair of eye lenses or goggles, worn on or over the eyes.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about the monocle of Bagthalos by making Knowledge (arcana) or Knowledge (religion) checks.

DC 20: This unusual item was created in Zazesspur over two centuries ago by Bagthalos Deszhummer, who was then the Archpriest of Helm.

His temple was plagued by many thefts, which he suspected were the work of the Skeletal Finger thieves guild.

To counter them, Bagthalos set to work creating a detection aid for the temple guards.

DC 25: The Guardian God disapproved of any attempt to substitute magical aid for vigilance, and warned Bagthalos of the price such vain research would demand—the life of a being dedicated to the worship of Helm.

Helm never expressly forbade Bagthalos from continuing his research, he only set the cost of such an effort. Bagthalos became obsessed with completing his creation, which eventually cost him his own life, fulfilling Helm's price.

Some say Helm mercifully fulfilled his faithful priest's desire; others tell how Bagthalos's spirit passed into the monocle, the final key to its making.

DC 30: After Bagthalos's death, members of the Skeletal Finger struck again, and one of the treasures they carried off was the monocle of Bagthalos.

For a brief span of years, the monocle circulated in the whisper markets of Athkatla (in Amn) and Ithmong (now Darromar, in Tethyr), but no buyer was willing to pay the high price demanded for a little-known relic of no repute. A decade later, the Skeletal Finger was destroyed by the venerable blue dragon Iryklathagra "Sharpfang".

The dragon slaughtered the thieves in their mountain stronghold (hidden somewhere in the peaks of the Small Teeth) and took up residence there.

The Monocle still lies somewhere in the stronghold.

Description: This circular, clear crystal lens has an adamantine frame studded with six small loops on the outer rim.

Colorful ribbons run through these loops to hold the monocle securely over the eyes, such that even mighty blows will not set it free.

Effect: The monocle grants the wearer true seeing and analyze dweomer (at will).

It renders him immune to gaze attacks and pattern spells and effects.

Thrice per day, the monocle can cast searing light upon command.

The spirit of Bagthalos clings to the monocle, infecting it with guilt.

Anyone wearing the monocle must make a Will save (DC 19) upon donning the monocle and every hour worn thereafter.

Failure means the wearer is afflicted with a geas/quest to rectify a past failure (as chosen by the DM).

Overwhelming divination [lawful, good]; CL 20th.

SHACKLES OF AMILEK

Aura: Overpowering; (DC 25) Necromancy, Transmutation

Activation: —

Weight: 10 lb.

"The halfling stumbles, his arms and legs bound by heavy iron shackles.

Upon each shackle is a faded symbol of five piled coins, barely visible on the dull metal surface".

This set of arm and leg shackles was created by Task for his favorite worshipper, the blue dragon Amilektrevitrioelis.

It served as a protection for Amilek's hoard, binding the arms and legs of the dragon's slayer, preventing him from claiming the treasure.

The set renders its wearer blind and deaf, unable to steal the dragon's treasure.

The wearer of the shackles receives nightmares from Task each night (as the nightmare spell).

In these dreams, he is floating along in a plane of magma and jagged rocks, surrounded by hundreds of different types of dragons, all of whom are using their breath weapons and magic to harm the dreamer.

The wearer feels all the pain of those effects, waking up many mornings with blood leaking from his eyes, nose, and mouth, and feeling completely exhausted.

The hoarder that cursed the wearer can cast greater scrying on the wearer once per day.

The hoarder is considered to know the wearer well and the shackles act as a conduit.

They count as a personal object that the hoarder can use for his spells.

There are some significant benefits to the shackles.

The wearer can reshape the mercurial metal into other metallic forms—any combinations of armor, weapons, and tools.

The armor can be made into +1 mithril ghost touch full plate, but has no armor check penalty, no maximum Dexterity, and is nearly weightless.

Any weapons created from the shackles are +1 ghost touch weapons of the wearer's choosing and size.

Any tool created is magical, imparting a +5 bonus on skill checks requiring that object.

The shaping effect only works when the wearer is in combat or using that skill.

At other times, the wearer must walk with the shackles at half speed and cannot run.

Scholars believe that there are at least two other sets of these shackles, each dedicated to dragon of legendary greed.

They say that the only way to remove the shackles is by destroying the creature that cursed the wearer, followed by receiving a wish spell cast by a good dragon, then convincing a worshipper of Tiamat to accept "Bahamut's blessing," though they are not entirely sure what that means.

The only known way to destroy the shackles is by having 20 different species of dragon use their breath weapon on the item.

Following that, the shackles must be dropped into an erupting volcano on the Plane of Fire on an anniversary of the day the shackles were created.

STAFF OF SHOON

The Staff of Shoon was the staff of the legendary Qysar Shoon VII, a corrupt and evil qysar of the Shoon Imperium, who still survives today as a lich, after escaping from the Tome of the Unicorn.

The Staff is considered anathema to followers of Lurue, Mielikki, Silvaunus, and the Seldarine, all of whom seek its destruction.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about the Staff of Shoon by making successful Knowledge (arcana) or Knowledge (history) checks.

DC 20: In the Year of the Mourning Horns (355 DR) Necroqysar Shoon VII slaughtered the unicorn herds of Shilmista and the elves who tended them in order to construct the infamous Tome of the Unicorn.

As a side project, he collected their carcasses within his sanctum (deep within the Imperial Mount of Shoonach) and used them to construct lesser artifacts such as the Staff of Shoon.

DC 30: In the Year of Battle Talons (358 DR), Shoon VII lost the staff to Iryklathagra.

For the remaining years of his reign, Shoon sought the Staff less for its power than for the restoration of his pride, but it is believed to still lie within the dragon's hoard.

Description: This slim, 8-foot-long quarterstaff seems to be carved from knobby white birch, though closer inspection will immediately reveal that it is constructed of something closer to ivory—actually a fused cluster of twelve unicorn's horns.

The widest part of the Staff is made up of five horns (at the top), tapering down to two clusters of three horns (all points down), and the narrow end of the Staff is a lone horn, arranged point-up.

In the past, Shoon VII disguised the Staff's true construction with an illusion that made the weapon appear as a slim crystal staff topped by a sapphire, which is the appearance most commonly recorded in historical tracts.

During the nine centuries it has rested in the lair of Sharpfangs, the illusion has worn off, and the staff now appears as it really is.

Effect: The staff of Shoon acts as a +2/+2 spellblade [magic missile] quarterstaff.

It renders the bearer immune to poison, sleep, charms, hold spells, and spells and spell-like abilities with the death descriptor.

Upon command, the Staff can produce a heal, teleport without error, or born swarm effect.

This last effect is equivalent to a blade barrier spell but manifests as a swarm of flying unicorn horns (known as alicorns).

All water touched by the bearer of the Staff is immediately fouled and turned to poison, forcing living bearers to consume ale, milk, or wine.

Any use of the born swarm effect forces the bearer to make a successful DC 19 Will save or be geased to take the staff to the headwaters of the Unicorn Run, where the power of Lurue can redeem it.

Consequences: Shoon VII, in his current guise as Zallanora Argentresses of Amn's Cowled Wizards, seeks to restore his power, and he wishes to reclaim all that was once his, including the Staff of Shoon.

He bides his time in facing Iryklathagra, carefully plotting his revenge (since he does not wish to repeat his near-defeat in their last encounter, more than nine centuries past).

If the Staff of Shoon were to surface, it would force the fallen necroqysar to investigate the dragon's fate and perhaps accelerate his quest to restore the Shoon Imperium.

Overwhelming necromancy [evil]; CL 20th.

DUNGEON MASTER'S GUIDE 3.0 (3.0)

HAND AND EYE OF VECNA

The archlich Vecna may have been the most powerful wizard ever to have lived, He may also have been the most evil.

Apparently risen now to deityhood, he left behind relics embodying remnants of his power—the mummified remains of his hand and his eye.

Powers of the Eye: In order to function, the Eye of Vecna must be placed in the empty socket of a character's skull. The bearer of the Eye loses two points of Charisma, and these points may never be restored. The Eye may not thereafter be removed without resulting in the death of its host.

It grants the host continuous darkvision and true seeing. Three times per day each, the host can use the spell eyebite and domination.

Once per day, the bearer of the Eye can call forth destruction and unhallow.

A nonevil character must make a Will save each week (DC 17) to avoid becoming evil.

All powers are at a caster level of 20th, and all DCs to resist their effects are 20.

Powers of the Hand: In order to function, the Hand of Vecna must be placed on the end of a left arm whose original hand has been severed.

The bearer of the Hand loses two points of Dexterity that may never be regained.

Removal of the hand thereafter always results in the death of the host.

The touch of the Hand, once so placed, deals 1d10 points of cold damage to a target.

Three times per day, its touch can permanently drain one ability score point (host's choice of ability) from a victim.

The host gains the points drained for the rest of that day. (They last until the next sunrise).

Once per day, the bearer of the Hand can call upon blasphemy and unholy aura.

A nonevil character must make a Will save each week (DC 17) to avoid becoming evil.

All powers are at a caster level of 20th and all DCs to resist their effects are 20.

Powers with Both Artifacts: If a single character bears both the Hand of Vecna and the Eye of Vecna, all powers have a DC of 25 to resist.

The host is granted +2 Strength and +2 Intelligence but suffers a -2 penalty to Wisdom.

Further, she can call upon summon monster IX once per day (to summon evil outsiders only).

A nonevil character must make a Will save each week (DC 23) to avoid becoming evil.

MACE OF CUTHBERT

St. Cuthbert, tales say, once walked the earth as a man. When he did, he used a potent weapon to strike against the infidels and evil beings he encountered everywhere he went.

Today, this relic appears to be a simple, well-used cudgel, but its simple appearance hides great power.

The Mace of Cuthbert has a +5 enhancement bonus and functions as a holy, lawful, disruption weapon.

Further, the wielder can project searing light from the mace at will, at 20th caster level.

MOANING DIAMOND

Said to have been ripped from the ground in a ritual that tortured the earth itself, the Moaning Diamond appears to be an uncut diamond the size of a human fist.

At all times, it gives forth a baleful moaning sound, as if in pain.

Despite the noise, the Moaning Diamond is not evil (although it was birthed in torture).

The wielder of the stone can, three times per day, call upon it to reshape earth and stone as if by the spell stone shape, affecting 5,000 cubic feet of material.

Further, the Moaning Diamond can summon an elder earth elemental with maximum hit points that serves the caster until it is slain.

Only one such elemental can be summoned at a time; if it is slain, a new creature cannot be summoned for 24 hours.

Tales from the past tell of the Moaning Diamond creating stone structures, opening underground chambers where there had been none before, and collapsing entire castles.

ORBS OF DRAGONKIND

These fabled Orbs were created eons ago in order to master dragons in the great Dragon Wars.

Each contains the essence and personality of an ancient dragon of a different variety (one for each of the major ten different chromatic and metallic dragons).

The bearer of an Orb can dominate dragons of its particular variety within 500 feet (as dominate monster), the dragon being forced to make a Will save (DC 25) to resist.

(Spell resistance has no power against this effect).

Each Orb of Dragonkind bestows upon the wielder the AC and saving throw bonuses of the dragon within (see the Monster Manual for details on each dragon variety).

These values replace whatever values the character would otherwise have, regardless whether they are better or worse.

These values cannot be modified by any means short of ridding the character of the Orb.

Further, a character possessing an Orb of Dragonkind is immune to the breath weapon—but only the breath weapon—of the dragon variety keyed to the Orb.

Thus, the possessor of the Red Dragon Orb of Dragonkind is immune to red dragon breath, but not fire of any other sort.

Finally, a character possessing an Orb can herself use the breath weapon of the dragon in the Orb three times per day (see the Monster Manual).

All Orbs of Dragonkind can be used to communicate verbally and visually with the possessors of the other Orbs.

The owner of an Orb knows whether there are dragons within ten miles at all times.

For dragons of the Orb's particular variety, the range is one hundred miles.

If within one mile of a dragon of the Orb's variety, the wielder can determine the exact location and age of the creature.

The bearer of one of these Orbs earns the enmity forever of all dragonkind for profiting by the enslavement of one of their kin, even if she later loses the item.

Each Orb also has an individual power that can be invoked once per round at 10th caster level.

- Black Dragon Orb: Fly.
- Blue Dragon Orb: Haste.
- Brass Dragon Orb: Teleport.
- Bronze Dragon Orb: Scrying.
- Copper Dragon Orb: Suggestion.
- Gold Dragon Orb: Special.

The owner of the gold Orb can call upon any power possessed by one of the other Orbs—including the dominate and breath weapon abilities but not AC, saves or breath weapon immunity—but can only use an individual power once per day.

Further, she can dominate any other possessor of an Orb within one mile (DC 16).

- Green Dragon Orb: Spectral force.
- Red Dragon Orb: Wall of fire.
- Silver Dragon Orb: Cure critical wounds.
- White Dragon Orb: Protection from elements (cold only).

SHADOWSTAFF

The wizard Malhavoc crafted this artifact centuries ago, weaving together the wispy strands of shadow itself into a twisted black staff.

The Shadowstaff makes the wielder slightly shadowy and incorporeal, granting him a +4 bonus to AC and Reflex saves (stackable with any other bonuses).

However, in bright light (such as that of the sun, but not a torch) or in absolute darkness, the wielder suffers a –2 penalty to all attack rolls, saves, and checks.

The Shadowstaff also has these powers:

Summon Shadows: Three times per day the staff may summon 2d4 shadows.

Immune to turning, they serve the wielder as if called by a summon monster V spell cast at 20th level.

Summon Nightshade: Once per month, the staff can summon a nightcrawler nightshade that serves the wielder as if called by a summon monster IX spell cast at 20th level.

Shadow Form: Three times per day the wielder can become a living shadow, with all the movement powers granted by the gaseous form spell.

Shadow Bolt: Three times per day the staff can project a ray attack that deals 1d6 points of cold damage to a single target.

The shadow bolt has a range of 100 feet.

SHIELD OF PRATOR

A hero of old, the paladin Prator bore this relic in many a valiant battle.

The Shield of Prator is said to have disappeared when Prator fell in the Battle of the Three Hells, although it has reportedly surfaced briefly from time to time since then. This +5 large shield, emblazoned with the symbol of the sun, allows the wielder to cast spells as if she were a 20th-level paladin with a Wisdom score of 20.

The spells gained are cumulative with any existing spells per day that the character might have, even if she's already a paladin.

The Shield of Prator also grants spell resistance 15 to its wielder.

Furthermore, it absorbs the first 10 points of damage each round from fire, cold, acid, electricity, and sonic attacks. (Each element has its own limit of 10 points of damage per round).

In return for all this, once per year the shield's owner must undertake a quest (no saving throw to avoid this) at the behest of a lawful good deity.

A character who is evil or chaotic (LE, NE, CE, CN, CG) gains four negative levels if she attempts to use this artifact. Although these levels never results in actual level loss, they remain as long as the shield is in hand and cannot be overcome in any way (including restoration spells).

The negative levels disappear when the shield is stowed or leaves the wearer's possession.

SWORD OF KAS

The vampire Kas was the dreaded lieutenant of Vecna. He used this mighty blade, created by his master, to betray and attack the archlich, cutting off his hand and eye in a terrible battle before Vecna destroyed him.

Only his sword survived, and it is said to forever seek vengeance against Vecna.

The Sword of Kas is a +6 unholy keen vorpal longsword.

It grants the wielder a +10 enhancement bonus to Strength. The sword is intelligent (Int 15, Wis 13, Cha 16, Ego 34) and chaotic evil.

It can be used to cast the following spells, once per day each: call lightning (1d6 points of damage, DC 14), blasphemy, and unhallow.

Once per week it can be used to slay living.

She can use dominate on any other possessor of an Orb within 1 mile (Will DC 23 negates).
- Green Dragon Orb: Spectral hand.
- Red Dragon Orb: Wall of fire.
- Silver Dragon Orb: Cure critical wounds (Will DC 18 half).
- White Dragon Orb: Protection from energy (cold) (Fortitude DC 17 negates).

SHADOWSTAFF

This artifact was crafted centuries ago, weaving together the wispy strands of shadow itself into a twisted black staff.

The Shadowstaff makes the wielder slightly shadowy and incorporeal, granting him a +4 bonus to AC and Reflex saves (which stacks with any other bonuses).

However, in bright light (such as that of the sun, but not a torch) or in absolute darkness, the wielder takes a –2 penalty on all attack rolls, saves, and checks.

The Shadowstaff also has these powers.

- Summon Shadows: Three times per day the staff may summon 2d4 shadows (see page 221 of the Monster Manual). Immune to turning, they serve the wielder as if called by a summon monster V spell cast at 20th level.
- Summon Nightshade: Once per month, the staff can summon a nightcrawler nightshade (see page 195 of the Monster Manual) that serves the wielder as if called by a summon monster IX spell cast at 20th level.

• Shadow Form: Three times per day the wielder can become a living shadow, with all the movement powers granted by the gaseous form spell.

• Shadow Bolt: Three times per day the staff can project a ray attack that deals 10d6 points of cold damage to a single target.

Once per week it can be used to slay living.

ELDER EVILS (3.5)

ABYSSAL SHARD

A fragment of elemental chaos, the Abyssal Shard is a key element in Axihuatl's ritual to awaken the Leviathan.

As chaos calls to chaos, the presence of this chunk of living disorder draws the great beast from its slumber just far enough for Axihuatl to influence its actions.

Once the Leviathan's task is complete, Axihuatl intends to have Marcus Hape or another minion cast the shard into the Leviathan's heart, where it will be absorbed, sending the creature back to its slumbers.

The Abyssal Shard can be used like an ioun stone.

Placed in the air, it orbits around the user's head, providing a +5 bonus on saving throws against spells cast by lawful opponents and +5 to the save DC of spells cast against lawful opponents.

ZORETHA SCROLLS

Scribed on an unidentifiable material that has somehow endured the millennia intact, the now-crumbling Zoretha Scrolls are not inherently magical, nor do they radiate magic under the effect of a detect magic spell.

The words contained within the scrolls have a magical effect that occurs when they are read.

The scrolls are written in an archaic dialect of Dwarven that can be read only by a speaker of Dwarven who makes a successful DC 35 Knowledge (history) check.

Even then, the insane ramblings cannot be correctly deciphered without a DC 40 Knowledge (arcana) check.

The scrolls don't need to be understood to take effect; simply reading them is enough.

Every hour spent reading the Zoretha Scrolls increases the chance of forming a mystical link between the scrolls and the nightmare beings that inspired them.

The chances per hour are cumulative.

Sign Intensity	Chance Per Hour of Forming Link
None	2
Faint	5
Moderate	10
Strong	25
Overwhelming	100 (link is instantaneous)

If a link is formed, it remains open until the reader stops reading.

While the link is open, anyone reading or touching the scrolls is affected by the Hulks' dark visiting malefic property, but the sign can affect any character, and the nightmares plague a reader while awake.

This has no effect on spellcasting but causes Wisdom damage to be cumulative each hour until the reader stops reading the scrolls.

Only one or two copies (in addition to the original scrolls) should exist in a given game world, since making a copy requires a scribe to voluntarily and permanently give up her sanity.

Copies are usually in book form.

No written translation has ever been completed.

Readers who maintain their sanity can learn from the Zoretha Scrolls.

With a successful DC 40 Knowledge (arcana) check, the first 5 hours of reading reveals all the information contained in the Background and Goals sections above.

Each additional 5 hours (and another check) allows a reader to learn one of the following facts:

1d8 Result

- 1 The five Hulks are connected with the elements.
- 2 The colors and basic appearance of the Hulks.
- 3 One of the three chants needed to awaken the Hulks.
- 4 One of the six material components of the awakening ritual. (All are rare and expensive and can be clues to help the PCs find the whereabouts of NPCs if necessary.)
- 5 How to conduct the ritual.
- 6 The Hulks have breath weapons.
- 7 One Hulk is faster than the others and flies.
- 8 The location of the Hulks.

EPIC LEVEL HANDBOOK (3.0)

AMULET OF THE DEMONWEB PITS

This token of Lolth's good will allows its user to cast crown of vermin twice per day as a 30th-level caster.

The vermin are made up of spiders of every variety. In shape, the amulet appears as a spider of deepest ebony with tiny fiery red eyespots that provide reddish illumination within 30 feet, if the wearer desires.

AXE OF THE DWARVISH LORDS

According to dwarven legend, this axe is the last survivor of the Five Great Tools forged by the First King of the Dwarves.

Over the generations, the Axe of the Dwarfish Lords has appeared and disappeared dozens of times, its reappearance always auguring great change and upheaval among the dwarves.

This +6 keen throwing goblinoid bane dwarven waraxe is crafted so that the back end of the axe head resembles an erupting volcano, with the flames forming the head's jiggled prongs.

Any dwarf who holds it doubles the range of his darkvision. Any nondwarf who grasps the Axe takes 2 points of temporary Charisma damage; these points cannot be healed or restored in any way while the Axe is held.

The current owner of the Axe gains a +10 bonus on Craft (armorsmithing, blacksmithing, gemcutting, stonemasonry, and weaponsmithing) checks.

The wielder of the Axe can summon an elder earth elemental (as summon monster IX; duration 20 rounds) once per week.

CODEX OF THE INFINITE PLANES

The origin of this mighty tome supposedly predates the development of written language among humans.

Also known as Yagrax's Tome, the Codex of the Infinite Planes has survived cataclysm, wars, and the fires of the City of Brass, though its current whereabouts are (perhaps fortunately) unknown.

The Codex itself is enormous—supposedly, it requires two strong men to lift it.

The covers are fashioned from pure obsidian and its pages crafted of flexible lead.

Its eldritch pages feature strange, alien writing illuminated with drawings both fantastic and grotesque.

No matter how many pages are turned, another always remains.

Anyone opening the Codex for the first time is utterly annihilated, as with a destruction spell (Fortitude DC 30 for only 10d6 damage).

Those who survive can peruse its pages and learn its powers, though not without risk.

Each day spent studying the Codex allows the reader to make a Spellcraft check (DC 50) to learn one of its powers (choose the power learned randomly; add a +1 circumstance bonus on the check per additional day spent reading until a power is learned).

However, each day of study also forces the reader to make a Will save (DC 30 +1 per day of study) to avoid being driven insane (as the inanity spell).

The powers of the Codex of the Infinite Planes are as follows: Astral projection, banishment, elemental swarm, gate, greater planar ally, greater planar binding, plane shift, and soul bind.

Each is usable at will the owner of the Codex (assuming that he has learned how to access the power).

The Codex of the Infinite Planes has a caster level of 30th for the purposes of all powers and catastrophes, and all saving throw DCs are 20 + spell level.

Activating any power requires both a Concentration check and a Spellcraft check (DC 40 + twice the spell level of the power; you can't take 10 on this check).

Any failure on either check indicates a catastrophe befalls the user (roll on the table below for the effect).

You can only incur one catastrophe per power use, even if you fail both checks.

d%	Catastrophe
01–25	Natural Fury: An earthquake spell centered on the reader strikes every round for 1 minute, and an intensified storm of vengeance spell is centered and targeted on the reader.
26–50	Fiendish Vengeance: A gate opens and 1d3+1 balor demons, pit fiends, or similar evil outsiders immediately step through and attempt to destroy the owner of the Codex .
51–75	Ultimate Imprisonment: Reader's soul is captured (as trap the soul ; no save allowed) in a random gem somewhere on the plane while his body is entombed beneath the earth (as imprisonment ).
76–100	Death: The reader utters a wail of the banshee and then is subject to a destruction spell. This repeats every round for 10 rounds until the reader is dead.

CUP AND TALISMAN OF AL'AKBAR

These holy relics were carried by the demigod Al'Akbar during his mortal days.

To this day, the followers of that deity search the lands to recover these relics, hoping that their recovery will unite and empower the faithful.

The Cup of Al'Akbar is a large gem-set golden chalice requiring two hands to lift.

It emits light (as the daylight spell) at all times and automatically dispels any darkness-based spells whose area it enters.

If the cup is filled with holy water (requiring a full gallon), that substance will act as a potion of cure critical wounds or a potion of neutralize poison (owner's choice) if drunk. This liquid can't be saved or stored in any way. The Talisman of Al'Akbar is a small eight-pointed platinum star hanging from a chain of gold and pearls. The wearer gains a +6 enhancement bonus to Charisma and may cast remove blindness/deafness, remove curse, and remove disease at will.

Furthermore, if the Talisman is placed within the Cup and the Cup filled with holy water, that liquid acts as a special elixir of resurrection (as the spell).

This effect will function only once per month.

Any evil or chaotic creature that touches the Cup or Talisman is struck with a holy word (if evil) or dictum (if chaotic) spell (or both if the creature is chaotic evil).

EYE OF GRUUMSH

This lump of rock has a marquis-cut black sapphire set in its center, making it appear similar to a large eye.

Ore legends claim that the rock is actually the petrified eye of Gruumsh himself, put out ages ago by the elf deity Corellon Larethian.

Elven sages scoff at this story, insisting that Corellon destroyed Gruumsh's eye completely.

Nevertheless, the Eye of Gruumsh has great power, particularly in the hands of one of ore blood.

If possessed by an ore, it grants a +6 enhancement bonus to Strength and Charisma, and the ore's darkvision range is doubled.

Nonorks who possess the Eye gain a +2 enhancement bonus to Strength but take a -2 penalty to Intelligence and Charisma.

Regardless of the owner's race, any weapon wielded by the owner of the Eye is considered an elf bane weapon.

Furthermore, by holding the Eye before you, you can perceive things as if you had true seeing cast upon you.

This can be activated only once per day but lasts as long as you concentrate on it (requiring a standard action each round).

GOLEM ARMOR

This enormous suit of black iron +10 full plate armor increases the wearer's size by one category (to a maximum of Colossal).

The wearer gains a +10 enhancement bonus to Strength and is rendered immune to mind-affecting effects, poison, disease, and similar effects.

He is subject to critical hits, subdual damage, ability damage, energy drain, or death from massive damage.

Unlike the iron golem after which the armor is modeled, Golem Armor is immune to rust attacks.

The wearer of Golem Armor gains damage reduction 50/+3.

He also cannot regain hit points by any means (mundane or magical) while the armor is worn.

It requires 1 hour to don or extract oneself from Golem Armor.

INVULNERABLE COAT OF ARND

When humanity was young, a nation in the distant west found itself under the foot of a tyrannical wizard-king, one of the first to master the arcane arts.

Seeing the nation's plight, a humble cleric named Arnd prayed to his gods for mercy and was provided a vest of shimmering chain that would stand against the mightiest foe.

Though Arnd has long since passed away, the Coat remains. Rumors persist that it continually seeks out new owners to wear it into battle.

The Invulnerable Coat of Arnd is a +5 chain shirt of heavy fortification.

It grants its wearer damage reduction 10/+5 and resistance 20 against acid, cold, electricity, fire, and sonic energy.

If the wearer can turn undead, treat the wearer as having +4 class levels for purposes of caster level, turning undead, smiting evil, and laying on hands.

For instance, a 21st-level cleric would have an effective caster level of 25th, while a 21st-level paladin could lay on hands for 25 × her Charisma modifier in points of damage healed.

IRON GAUNTLET OF HEXTOR

This right-handed gauntlet of black iron was worn by Hextor in his first battle against his half-brother Heironeous and was imbued with a fraction of his power and intellect.

Since that day, the Gauntlet has been passed down to various lieutenants and high priests of the faith of Hextor, always seeking to find the right vessel to further its destructive urges.

The Gauntlet grants a +8 enhancement bonus to Strength.

The wearer doubles the damage bonus on any smite attacks he makes.

If the wearer has the Leadership feat, the wearer's Leadership score increases by +4, but the wearer can never attract or keep followers or cohorts who are good or chaotic.

Once per day, the wielder can use implosion as a 20th-level caster (DC 23).

The Iron Gauntlet of Hextor is intelligent (Int 13, Wis 18, Cha 24, Ego 26) and lawful evil.

It can communicate telepathically with its wearer, though it cannot speak.

It will always seek to dominate any wearer who isn't lawful evil, forcing such an owner to commit lawful evil deeds (or else find a more suitable wearer).

LAST BOOK

This mystic book is of great value to arcane spellcasters; some would say no book is more useful.

A large volume, its pages and its capacity are infinite.

The Last Book contains every spell ever recorded by the Order of the Book, an organization in the planar metropolis of Union.

The Order of the Book has been recording spells in the Last Book for thousands of years; thus, the number of spells in it is almost uncountable.

If an arcane spellcaster studies the work for one month, upon completion the caster can use the book as his own spellbook.

Every arcane spell that appears in any source exists in this tome, and can be prepared by a spellcaster who can use an arcane spellbook.

Despite the breadth of the work, a spellcaster attuned to the book can locate any spell she seeks in only seconds, aided by the potent magic of the artifact.

Anyone incapable of casting arcane spells who reads even a single word of the work must make a Will save (DC 20) or suffer insanity (see the insanity spell).

Caster Level: 19th; Weight: 3 lb.

RING OF GAXX

This strangely crafted platinum ring of unknown origin is set with a gem of nine facets, each one inscribed with a different incomprehensible rune.

Each day at sunrise, the gem turns to display a different facet (with no apparent pattern, though some wearers have reported the ability to control the active facet to some extent).

The active facet determines the Ring's power for that day. Each day, roll 1d10 to determine which facet (and thus which power) is active.

1d10	Active Facet Power
1	Wearer is immune to disease
2	Wearer needs no air to survive
3	Wearer gains +5 natural armor bonus
4	Wearer gains low-light vision
5	Wearer gains fast healing 1
6	Wearer can fly at will
7	Wearer gains cold resistance 30
8	Wearer gains freedom of movement
9	Wearer gains +5 resistance bonus on saving throws
10	Wearer may select which facet is active

The wearer of the Ring of Gaxx can, with a great deal of mental exertion, attempt to change the active facet away from one he does not desire.

This requires a full-round action and a Concentration check (DC 50), and deals 2d6 points of subdual damage regardless of success.

If the save is successful, the new facet is determined randomly.

If the Ring of Gaxx is removed, the former wearer takes 2d6 points of subdual damage each minute until it is replaced or until his subdual damage exceeds his current hit points (though the subdual damage resumes again immediately when the former wearer regains consciousness).

RING OF THE CAT LORD

This prized item grants the Cat Lord a total of nine true resurrections, each of which occurs in the round following his death.

EXPANDED PSIONICS HANDBOOK (3.5)

ANNULUS

This artifact is the ultimate psionic nullifier.

Forged by long-dead illithids to keep enemies of vast psionic power at bay (possibly other illithids), the Annulus is an artifact that any psionic being should fear.

It has been forgotten by mind flayers and nonillithids alike in the modern age, and merely finding it would precipitate a great upheaval across the planes.

The Annulus is a 1-foot-diameter ring of silvery material.

Tiny slots, antennae, spheres, and other intricate projections decorate the exterior of the hoop; however, two smoothed lengths of the ring provide an adequate surface for grasping the item.

The Annulus has several powers, all of which require a wielder to tightly grasp the ring with at least one hand. When it is first grasped, knowledge of the artifact's powers immediately flood the wielder's mind.

The wielder can access all powers of the Annulus at manifester level 20th.

- The Annulus generates a continuous catapsi effect within a 100-foot-radius of the wielder (who is unaffected).
- The wielder gains a +4 enhancement bonus on any attempt to resist an effect that deals ability damage.
- Once per day, the wielder can trigger ultrablaster as a standard action.
- Three times per day, as a standard action, the wielder can trigger an effect similar to psionic dimensional anchor that affects all creatures in a 50-foot radius.

The primary power of the Annulus, however, is psionic nullification.

Once per year, the wielder can trigger this effect as a special action requiring 10 rounds of continuous concentration to complete.

The wielder specifies a target or targets within a 100-foot radius, ranging from a specific psionic individual or item to a group of psionic beings that share the same philosophy (such as the creatures present at an illithid outpost).

The nullification effect is accompanied by blasts of light, heat, and sound from the Annulus.

Nonpsionic creatures and items are unaffected, as are nontargeted beings, but any psionic target—regardless of any protection it may possess—disintegrates in a terrific explosion.

Nothing is left but floating dust.

It is relatively easy to nullify a single target or a small group of targets, but nullifying a more powerful being (such as a demigod or greater entity) or another major artifact taxes the Annulus to its limits.

If it is used to nullify such a target, the artifact succeeds but is destroyed in the process and cannot be retrieved by any means.

PSICROWN OF THE CRYSTAL MIND

An elaborate crystalline psicrown etched with strange designs, this exceptional psicrown is so invested with power that it is considered an artifact.

The power points in the Psicrown of the Crystal Mind can be used to manifest any of the following powers at manifester level 20th (or at the wearer's manifester level if it is higher than 20th).

- Burst
- Catfall
- Concealing amorpha, greater
- Concussion blast
- Daze, psionic
- Detect psionics
- Dominate, psionic
- Far hand
- Float
- Mindlink
- Inertial barrier
- Telekinetic force
- Telekinetic maneuver
- Telekinetic thrust
- Teleport, psionic
- Thicken skin
- True metabolism

The wearer of the Psicrown of the Crystal Mind also gains power resistance equal to 10 + his manifester level.

The Psicrown of the Crystal Mind has 1,000 power points when discovered.

Anyone who dons the crown instantly knows the number of power points it has at the current time.

The crown recharges itself, gaining back 1 power point per day if it currently has fewer than 1,000 points.

As a special one-time use of the psicrown, the wearer can channel all the remaining charges in the psicrown into an uncontrolled burst of energy.

The wearer triggers this use as a standard action.

All within 20 feet of the wearer take hit points of damage equal to half the power points left in the staff (Reflex DC 18 half).

The wearer inhabits a tiny eye of calm at the center of the destruction and is unharmed, but the psicrown is reduced to a burned-out cinder.

STAFF OF ANCIENT PENUMBRA

This psionically endowed staff is an artifact from ancient days, supposedly forged on legendary Penumbra, the mythical seat of the long-forgotten illithid empire.

The stories of its passage through the epochs since its creation to the present day would fill volumes.

The Staff of Ancient Penumbra is intelligent (AL LE; Int 16, Wis 14, Cha 18, Ego 18) but remains quiescent until used.

The staff measures 5 feet in length and 2 inches in diameter, and is crafted of a nigh-indestructible material called substare.

This substance might very well be harder than adamantine, but the secret of its formulation has been lost.

Its head is carved to form a stylized illithid's head, with a high, swept-back brow and cavernous sockets where eyes might otherwise be (if gemstone eyes once resided here, they are long lost).

The tentacles of the illithid-head meld perfectly with the shaft, itself intricately carved with a multitude of squirming tadpoles, which provide the perfect rough surface for easily grasping the staff.

Scrutiny of the tadpoles reveals the four-lobed tails of illithid young.

The staff is selective about whom it allows to use it.

A hopeful petitioner who touches it must make a DC 18 Diplomacy check.

On a failure, the staff reacts poorly to the proffered mental contact, lashing out with a defensive energy bolt that deals 5d6 points of fire damage to that character per round.

This effect also automatically sets the character on fire; the victim can attempt DC 20 Fortitude saves each round after the first to extinguish the flames (powers such as control flames grant a +4 bonus on the saving throw).

The fire continues to burn during every round the save is failed but goes out permanently on a successful save.

Anyone killed by the fire burns completely, leaving only ashes.

A prospective new owner who survives a burning can make another Diplomacy check, but the check DC increases by 2 with each successive attempt.

If the Staff of Ancient Penumbra takes a shine to a prospective owner, it telepathically reveals its powers.

However, the new owner may not enjoy this discovery: The artifact's special purpose is the promulgation of illithid rulership.

An owner who refuses to acknowledge illithid superiority and who does not demonstrate reasonable progress toward that goal must succeed on a DC 18 Will saving throw to remain in control when a personality conflict occurs, at the DM's judgment.

On a failure, the staff is dominant (see page 288 of the Dungeon Master's Guide for guidance; intelligent psionic items follow the same rules as magic ones).

If the staff gains mastery, it begins to throw energy bolts (5d6 points of fire damage) at the wielder or at the wielder's compatriots within 15 feet.

Only assuring the staff that it is being brought to the nearest mind flayer will console it.

In combat, the artifact is a +5 quarterstaff.

If it scores a critical hit, the staff lashes forth with its energy bolt that deals 5d6 points of fire damage.

The wielder can also direct the blast against a target within 15 feet as a standard action.

Anyone hit by the blast automatically catches fire as described above.

However, using the staff against an illithid (if the wielder is not also an illithid) is a sure way to precipitate a personality conflict.

Three times per day, the wielder of the staff can make an additional saving throw against a spell or power, if the first one fails.

This is an immediate action that the wielder can use even if it is not his turn.

Up to five times per day, the Staff of Ancient Penumbra manifests body adjustment on the wielder without the wielder needing to take any action.

Strangely enough, the staff can also heal an undead wielder in a similar way, using a liberal dose of negative energy.

The wielder of the staff can always see up to 30 feet through darkness, fog, smoke, or other visibility-reducing conditions.

As a standard action, the wielder can use the staff to see up to 6 inches through solid objects, such as metal (including lead), stone, wood, and even flesh, for a duration of 3 rounds.

The wielder of the staff can manifest true seeing once per day, if the artifact believes that doing so will fulfill its purpose.

All the powers of the Staff of Ancient Penumbra function at manifester level 25th.

To destroy the Staff of Ancient Penumbra, it must be thrown into the star at Penumbra's hub.

FAITHS AND PANTHEONS (3.0)

BOREM'S QUAGHEART

Borem's Quagheart is a wet, fleshy mass of brown skin and muscle that oozes with fetid mud and slime at the slightest touch.

It beats slowly once every 30 seconds.

The final remnant of the slain deity Borem of the Lake of Boiling Mud, the Quagheart grants a multitude of powers to its wielder, as long as it remains pierced by the Jathiman Dagger or some other bladed weapon of at least minor artifact status.

The possessor of Borem's Quagheart gains a +2 divine bonus to Armor Class and saving throws, and can breathe freely as if wearing a necklace of adaptation.

He or she can walk on the surface of mud as a wearer of a ring of water walking strides upon water.

Should the dagger be removed from the Heart, the resulting hole begins to spew warm, stagnant muddy water as the geyser function of a decanter of endless water.

The only way to plug the hole is to replace the weapon, which requires an alarmingly difficult Strength check (DC 30).

Should the Heart be allowed to flow freely for thirty days, it effectively reforms the Lake of Burning Mud.

Legends state that Borem himself will return to Toril if such should be allowed to occur, a mysterious development to which few scholars look forward with any degree of enthusiasm.

FIENDISH CODEX I (3.5)

BLACK SCROLLS OF AHM

The Black Cult of Ahm has gained access to several artifacts tied to demons.

These artifacts are hidden away in well-guarded chapter houses or entrusted to the care of the organization's most honored members, and for good reason.

These sources of demonic lore contain more than just information about fiends and the Abyss.

Over the centuries since Ahm's disappearance, his scrolls and some of those written by his disciples have grown in power, becoming major or minor artifacts in their own right.

Each contains lore pertaining to the Abyss, demons, and other related subjects, and many convey mysterious powers to their wielders as well.

The Black Scrolls of Ahm consist of hundreds of individual writings.

Those noted as minor artifacts are not unique—several copies of these pages, tomes, or scrolls appear on almost every plane, though even those with the same names might cover slightly different topics of demonic lore.

Black Scrolls of Ahm designated as major artifacts are unique—no more than one of each exists.

Each minor artifact conveys one or more skill bonuses to its possessor and allows him to use a specific lesser power.

The major artifacts also convey skill bonuses, but they make multiple powers available to their owners.

The Black Scrolls come in several varieties, as given below.

Some appear as singular scrolls, while others are bound together in books.

The term "scroll" in this case could apply to a collection of scrolls.

Regardless of its appearance, every Black Scroll of Ahm has certain characteristics, many of which provide benefits to its possessor, as enumerated here.

1. The possessor gains a circumstance bonus on Knowledge (the planes) checks.

Each scroll conveys its own bonus, but they do not stack in the normal fashion.

A character who possesses more than one kind of scroll gains the highest bonus, plus 1 point for each additional scroll successfully studied.

A character who possesses multiple copies of any of the minor artifact scrolls gains this bonus only once per type.

For example, a character who possesses two copies of the transcriptions of Ergon and one copy of the bleak writings gains a +3 bonus for one copy of the transcriptions and an additional +1 bonus for the black writings.

The second copy of the transcriptions imparts no additional bonus.

2. Each use of a scroll's lesser power has a cumulative 1% chance of summoning a fiend associated with the scroll.

The summoning has the same caster level as the scroll.

The fiend attacks the user in an attempt to destroy him and take the scroll.

This cumulative chance cannot be reset unless the scroll actually disappears from the presence of the fiend (see below).

3. Each use of a scroll's greater power has a cumulative 5% chance of summoning a fiend associated with the scroll.

This chance stacks with the chance imparted by the use of a lesser power, and the fiend acts in the same way.

Each scroll has only one cumulative chance to summon an associated fiend—the sum of the chances invoked by use of its lesser and greater powers.

Thus, a character who uses a lesser power of the Abyssal Mundus three times and then uses a greater power once has an 8% chance of accidentally summoning a fiend.

If that character uses another lesser power, the chance becomes 9%.

If the different powers summon different kinds of fiends, the fiend that appears is the one associated with the power that actually triggered the summoning.

4. The magic imbued in each scroll drives it to hide itself from demonkind.

When within 30 feet of any creature native to the Abyss, each Black Scroll has a 10% cumulative chance per round of moving away from its current location by means of teleport or plane shift.

The DM decides which spell effect the scroll uses and where it goes.

Spells and effects similar to dimensional anchor can be used to stop a scroll from disappearing.

(The scroll has a touch AC of 10 for the purpose of the dimensional anchor's ranged touch attack).

When such a barrier effect ends or is dispelled, the scroll immediately disappears unless the creature that triggered the disappearance is no longer present.

Once the threat is removed (because the creature is dead, departed, or out of range), the chance of the scroll departing resets to 0%.

5. Once a scroll has used its ability to escape a demon (whether it was successful or not), the chance of it summoning a fiend again resets to 0% and remains there until the next time one of its powers is activated.

At that point, the cumulative chance begins increasing all over again.

6. Should a creature of the Abyss gain possession of a Black Scroll of Ahm, the scroll loses its ability to transport itself, as well as all its other powers.

A demon that obtains any Black Scroll of Ahm immediately attempts to return to the Abyss with the item in its possession.

7. As brittle and ancient as the Black Scrolls of Ahm appear, each is an artifact and thus nearly indestructible.

The one method of destruction known to work without fail is immersion in the black pools of the Abyss.

Immersion in this soup of chaos and evil for 1 hour utterly destroys any Black Scroll of Ahm.

Any demon that recovers a Black Scroll and returns to the Abyss with it is likely to turn the item over to its immediate overlord (often a marilith or balor, or possibly a demon prince if the scroll bearer is high enough in rank).

That creature then invariably attempts to destroy the artifact at its earliest opportunity.

Still, this interval might provide enough time for a rescue party to reach the Abyss.

ABYSSAL MUNDUS

Tulket nor Ahm explored the Abyss as no mortal has before or since, and the guide that he created to its ever-changing layers is called the Abyssal Mundus.

This maddening tome contains geographic information on many layers of the Abyss.

It outlines the dangers of these locations and even specifies a few spots that are relatively safe for the most part—but not all the time.

Even though it was built as a guide to the Abyss, the Abyssal Mundus still tries to plane shift away from it upon entry, like all the other Black Scrolls of Ahm.

Description: The outside of this large and cumbersome book looks similar to a seafarer's rudder.

Made up entirely of large, loose scrolls and cartographer's sheets, the Abyssal Mundus is unwieldy and almost impossible to hold open except on a flat surface.

When opened, it measures nearly 6 feet long and 4 feet wide and exudes a putrid odor that persists for hours after the book is closed or moved.

Activation (Skill Bonus): Reading the Abyssal Mundus is at best a difficult task, and at worst a mind-threatening one.

After studying it at least 8 hours per day for a week, a character must succeed on a DC 26 Will save.

If he fails, he becomes extremely paranoid and takes a –2 penalty on attack rolls, saving throws, skill checks, and ability checks for the next week.

During that time, he does not willingly approach the Abyssal Mundus, and in fact flees from it as if frightened (DMG 300) if brought within 10 feet of it.

With a successful saving throw, the character gains enormous understanding of the Abyss—specifically, a +10 circumstance bonus on Knowledge (the planes) checks regarding the Abyss or demons and a +10 circumstance bonus on Survival checks while on the Abyss. These bonuses last for one year after the character reads the Abyssal Mundus.

He might attempt to renew his understanding of the tome (and the bonuses) at any time, but if he fails the saving throw, he loses all prior bonuses and must start again after enduring the requisite week of paranoia and fear.

Activation (Lesser Power): By laying open the book, selecting a particular layer of the Abyss, and specifying a time period (a minute, an hour, a day, or any other desired interval), the possessor can use plane shift as the spell (but only on willing creatures).

Beneficiaries of the spell immediately travel to the Abyssal layer specified and remain there for the declared interval. Once this duration has expired, the affected creatures instantly return to their point of origin unless they are slain or detained by magic.

A blocking spell such as dimensional anchor delays the return effect until the duration expires, at which time the target immediately returns.

A character who dies on the Abyss, however, is not returned to his starting point at all unless another affected character is carrying or touching his body at the designated return time.

Activation (Lesser Power): Once per day, the possessor of the Abyssal Mundus can use greater teleport (CL 27th).

Activation (Greater Power): Once per week, the possessor of the Abyssal Mundus can use it to call a demon using a gate spell.

The artifact's caster level is used to invoke this spell and control the demon, and as long as the creature remains controlled, the artifact does not try to escape its presence. The demon stays until destroyed or banished, or until the possessor of the artifact dismisses it from his service.

If it is not sent back to the Abyss upon its release, the demon becomes uncontrolled but remains on the plane to which it was called.

Associated Demon: Use of either lesser power of the Abyssal Mundus can cause 1d4+1 nalfeshnees to appear.

These creatures immediately attempt to destroy the wielder, retrieve the artifact, and return with it to the Abyss.

Use of the artifact's greater power might not only turn the gated demon against the user but also call forth a marilith and 1d4 hezrous to retrieve the artifact.

Since the associated demons are called, not summoned, they can attempt to summon reinforcements should they so choose.

If one of the demons gains possession of the Abyssal Mundus, it endeavors to return with it to the Abyss while its companions remain to destroy the former owner and wreak havoc on his plane or existence.

Aura/Caster Level: Overpowering conjuration; CL 27th.
Weight: 15 lb.

FIENDISH CODEX 2 (3.5)

RUBY ROD OF ASMODEUS

Not only is the Ruby Rod of Asmodeus a potent weapon, but it also allows its wielder access to incredible power.

From its opaline tip, the wielder can unleash the destructive power of the Nine Hells, delivering streams of vitriol, crackling death, or the frigid winds of scorn.

Even if a creature somehow survives these vicious attacks, it is often left helpless before the wielder's majesty.

Rarely far from its master's hand, Asmodeus sometimes bestows his ruby rod onto a particularly worthy mortal to serve his ends.

Whether the artifact he bestows is authentic or a facsimile, no one knows.

Lore: The Ruby Rod is the symbol of office for the ruler of Nessus.

He who wields it rules Hell.

(Knowledge [the planes] DC 20) Crafted from a single ruby of incredible size, it was bathed in the blood of a thousand mortal sacrifices, quenched in Tiamat's acidic drool, and polished with the tears of 777 angels.

(Knowledge [the planes] DC 30).

Description: This scepter is a 4-foot shaft carved from a solid ruby.

Along its length are the names of good deities and celestials spelled in reverse and stained with black blood.

The bottom is jagged, as if the item was snapped from a larger piece, while the top is a clawed fist clutching a skull.

The Ruby Rod glows with power, shedding a soft, malevolent crimson light.

Just prior to releasing a blast of energy, it flares, sending rays of putrid light in all directions.

Furthermore, its wielder's eyes match the color of the rod.

Activation: The Ruby Rod always functions as a weapon.

As a standard action, a wielder can activate any of its other special abilities once per day.

Asmodeus can use them at will, each as a swift action.

Effect: When wielded in combat, the Ruby Rod of Asmodeus acts as a +6 unholy greatclub.

Whenever it strikes a target or is touched without Asmodeus's assent, it also delivers an inflict critical wounds effect (caster level 20th, DC 19 for ha If).

In addition, the wielder can activate any of the following effects.

The save DC for each effect is equal to 10 + 1/2 the wielder's HD + the wielder's Cha modifier.

- Line of Lightning: 150-ft. line, damage 20d6 electricity, Reflex half.

- Line of Acid: 150-ft. line, damage 20d6 acid, Reflex half.

- Cone of Cold: 75-ft. cone, damage 20d6 cold, Reflex half.

- Aura of Might: Anyone attempting to attack the wielder must first succeed on a Will save or instead bow down, becoming helpless for 1 round.

- Reverie of Nessus: Once per day, as an immediate action, the wielder can encase himself in a 5-foot-radius spherical wall of force.

The area 50 feet around the sphere (but not within it) becomes an antimagic field.

This effect lasts for 3 rounds.

In the first round, the wielder is automatically purged of any unwanted enchantment spells or effects.

In the second, the wielder is purged of any diseases, poisons, or physical maladies (including lost body parts). In the third round, the wielder is healed to full hit points and feels refreshed as though he had just rested a full day, regaining spells and spell-like abilities accordingly.

This ability triggers automatically (without the wielder having to spend an immediate action) if the wielder ever fails a save against an unwanted enchantment spell or effect, such as charm person or dominate monster.

Aura/Caster Level: Overwhelming conjuration and evocation, overwhelming evil. CL 30th.

Weight: 5 lb.

HEROES OF HORROR (3.5)

BLADE OF VALGYR

This chaotic evil intelligent blade (Int 16, Wis 10, Cha 16, Ego 20) is a +4 keen, unholy, wounding bastard sword.

It can cast detect magic (see page 219 of the Player's Handbook) at will and darkness (see page 216 of the Player's Handbook) three times per day.

It has 10 ranks in Bluff, grants the bearer resistance 10 against fire and cold, and speaks Common, Abyssal, Celestial, and Draconic.

The sword is a tainted object and requires the bearer to save against taint each day it remains in her possession.

Each day it does not take the life of a lawful good being, the sword bestows a negative level on the wielder.

Once the wielder has drawn the sword in battle, she can never draw another weapon, nor get rid of the sword.

It appears in her hand at the start of any combat.

Only a miracle or wish frees the bearer.

Exposure to the breath weapons of two dragon great wyrms—one metallic, one chromatic—within a 24-hour span is required to destroy the Blade of Valgyr.

LORDS OF DARKNESS (3.0)

STORM STAR

Perhaps two dozen of these ancient weapons, forged during Netheril's golden age, still exist in the City of Shade.

The weapon is typically wielded only by members of the noble family or elite military officers who have earned the favor of the High Prince.

This +3 shocking burst morningstar was a favorite weapon of the clergy of Targus.

When not in use, it appears to be a normal morningstar, but when held it crackles with spectacular arcs of electricity.

This electrical discharge does not harm the hand that holds the weapon.

Additionally, the weapon allows the wielder to cast lightning bolt three times per day, and call lightning once per day.

CHARDALYN

First discovered in a Netherese mining camp over 4,000 years ago, chardalyns are naturally occurring black rocks that can contain a single spell.

The spell is released by hurling the rock at a target. The rock is very brittle, pulverizing into a powdery substance when struck against a solid object. Netherese arcanists typically imbue chardalyns with offensive spells, such as fireball.

You can toss a chardalyn up to 100 feet with a range increment of 20 feet.

A successful ranged touch attack roll is required to strike an intended target.

The spell stored in the chardalyn is cast immediately when the rock strikes a hard surface, with the same effect as if the spell had been cast by the chardalyn's creator.

Tossing a chardalyn counts as an attack action.

You can toss only one chardalyn at a time, but you can toss more than one each round if you have multiple attacks.

MAGUSCEPTER

Topped with the gold-plated skull of King Thorndaer of the Golden Helm, this scepter is fashioned of shadow wood and engraved with deep red silkstone, a faintly sparkling, fibrous variety of tiger eye, to create all manner of necromantic runes.

The scepter was crafted by Myntharan the Magus, courtier of the Shoon Empire who seized the throne of Westgate in 452 DR.

The device owes much of its design to processes developed by the Netherese.

Orbakh retrieved the scepter from its resting place in a secret vault under the royal palace, where it had been consigned to be forgotten by the last mortal to hold it, King Blaervaer Lorndessar.

This +3 heavy mace bestows one negative level on its target whenever it deals damage.

One day after being struck, subjects must make a Fortitude save (DC 23) for each negative level bestowed or lose a character level.

Also, each time the Maguscepter deals damage to a foe, it stores some of the stolen life energy within its own reservoirs.

The wielder of the Maguscepter can call on this stored energy any time that he is in direct physical contact with the scepter.

All arcane spells that the wielder casts draw on the Maguscepter's reservoirs and are not lost from memory.

One spell may be cast in this fashion for every negative level the weapon has bestowed in the last 24 hours.

There is no limit to the number of negative levels this weapon can bestow in a given time period.

SHIELD OF THE HIDDEN LORD

This origin of this wondrous item is unknown, though the sages and loremasters who are aware of its existence suspect that it might have been first used in a battle on the Fields of the Dead.

Crafted from pure mithral, the shield is inlaid with hundreds of tiny diamonds, emeralds, rubies, and sapphires that form the shape of a snarling, bestial face.

It is a +4 large metal shield that gives its bearer two additional powers.

The bearer gains resistance to ranged weapons, exactly as if he were the target of protection from arrows cast by a 10th-level sorcerer; the bearer is also able to understand all languages, as if he were the recipient of tongues cast by a 10th-level sorcerer.

In addition to its useful functions, the artifact has its pitfalls: Gargauth may communicate directly through the shield with anyone within hearing distance of the object.

He employs a snarling, cruel voice when doing so.

Any words spoken within normal hearing range of the shield are heard by Gargauth.

While in direct physical contact with the shield, the bearer is subject to the whisperings of the Hidden Lord.

For every round he remains in contact with the item, the bearer must make a Will save (DC 30) or be compelled to commit an act of cruelty or betrayal within the next 24 hours.

LOST EMPIRES OF FAERÛN (3.5)

DRAGONTEAR CROWN OF SHARRVEN

The Dragontear Crown of Sharrven is a delicate diadem made of thin mithral chains adorned with tiny diamonds.

A large king's tear containing the image of a majestic silver dragon hangs from the center, where it can grace the wearer's brow.

The Dragontear Crown of Sharrven has the properties of a greenstone amulet, and it protects the wearer as a mind blank spell.

The wearer also gains a +4 sacred bonus on saving throws against necromancy effects or any effect that would transport her to another locale or dimension.

If such an effect normally does not allow a saving throw (the maze spell, for example), the wearer can attempt a DC 20 Will save to negate the effect.

Finally, the Dragontear Crown of Sharrven renders the wearer immune to magical and nonmagical fear and enables her to speak, understand, and write Draconic.

ELFBLADES OF CORMANTHYR

These three legendary swords were forged thousands of years ago when the great empire of Cormanthyr was founded.

One of them was forged for the coronal (ruler) of Cormanthyr, one for the arms-major (the chief warrior of the empire), and the third for the spell-major (the empire's chief wizard).

All three swords have since been lost—two around the time of Myth Drannor's fall, and the third many centuries before.

Restoring even one of the elfblades to the elves, let alone all three, would earn an adventurer the everlasting friendship and thanks of the residents of the Elven Court—particularly now that the drow have invaded the very heart of Cormanthor.

All three elfblades insist upon choosing their own wielders. Each has its own criteria for making the choice and punishes unworthy candidates in its own way, but to wield any elfblade, a character must be of good alignment and at least 15th level.

A character wishing to become the wielder of an elfblade must grasp the hilt with the firm intent of bonding with the weapon and draw it from its sheath.

Whether successful or not, the attempt costs 2,500 XP. Each weapon's description suggests some guidelines on which it bases its acceptance or rejection of a candidate, but the final decision belongs to the DM.

A character deemed unworthy to wield an elfblade is subjected to that weapon's unique form of punishment, as given in its description below.

Upon acceptance by an elfblade, the character becomes attuned to it and can summon it to his hand as a free action, as long as it is somewhere on the same plane.

Once an elfblade has bonded with a character, it remains bound until the character's death, or until he commits some grievous sin against either his alignment or the elf people. In such a case, the blade punishes him as though he had failed to bond with it in the first place unless he makes an immediate effort to atone for his sin.

Each of the elfblades shares several properties in common with the others and also has its own set of unique abilities usable only by its chosen wielder.

All are +4 holy keen longswords, and all retard the aging process so that the wielder ages only 1 year for every 2 years that pass while he possesses the elfblade.

ARCOR KERYM, THE CROWNBLEADE

Also called the Ruler's Blade, this sword appears to be made of raw iron and has a pitted and craggy surface.

From afar, it looks like a longsword carved from stone.

An ancient Elven crown rune is stamped in gold at the seat of the blade, just above the quillions.

Arcor Kerym glows with golden light that crackles along its surface like an arc of lightning.

The Crownblade was last seen in 666 DR, when the Srinshée vanished with it after using its potent magic to rebuild the Rule Tower.

Scholars believe that the Crownblade was aware of the city's impending fall, so it removed itself and the Srinshée from Faerûn to ensure that it would not fall into the hands of the Army of Darkness.

If this theory is correct, Arvandor seems a likely resting place for Arcor Kerym.

In addition to the standard powers of an elfblade, the Crownblade allows its wielder to access the mystical knowledge of three elven high mages, as stored in the three gems that decorate its crossguards and pommel.

This influx of knowledge grants the wielder a +10 bonus on all Knowledge (arcana) and Spellcraft checks and a +5 bonus on all other Knowledge checks.

In addition, by speaking a command word, the wielder of Arcor Kerym can use heal as the spell three times per day, or discern lies as the spell at will.

Arcor Kerym is the strictest of the elfblades when it comes to evaluating a prospective wielder.

The candidate must be of lawful good alignment and must have the good of Cormanthyr and the elf people as his highest priority.

In addition, a character who seeks to wield the Crownblade should have high ranks in Diplomacy, Sense Motive, and other social interaction skills.

The penalty for an unworthy character who attempts to bond with Arcor Kerym is as straightforward as it is final—he is consumed by golden fire, which burns him away to nothingness in 1 round (Fort DC 23 partial; success means the subject takes 40d6 points of damage instead).

A character found unworthy and subsequently brought back from the dead still loses the 2,500 XP for attempting the attuning ritual.

Overwhelming evocation; CL 25th; Weight 4 lb.

ARYFAERN KERYM, THE ARTBLADE

This longsword appears to have been forged from solid darkness.

Its blade is a void of nonreflective blackness that feels as solid as stone yet as slick as oil.

Along the razor-sharp, beveled edge of the blade glows a thin, crimson line of energy that encloses the darkness—the source of the elfblade's magical light.

When drawn, the Artblade crackles like lightning breaking across a metal shield, and when swung, it emits a sharp, buzzing sound similar to that of an angry bee (though the wielder can mute this latter sound if desired).

When struck against objects or weapons, the blade's clash is utterly silent, no matter how much strength powers the blow.

Embossed in glowing crimson on the base of the dark blade is an Elven rune often used to signify a work of high magic. The Artblade was lost at the Battle of Stars Shining in 714 DR, when Spell-Major Josidiah Starym sacrificed himself to break the army of yugoloths storming the school of magic in the city of Myth Drannor.

With his forces overwhelmed and nearly defeated, the spell-major cast a spell of terrible power that consumed most of the yugoloths and much of the school in a pure white flame.

When the flames died, no trace of the spell-major or his sword remained.

Some sages believe that both were transported to Dweomerheart or Arvandor, but no evidence exists to support these theories.

In addition to the standard abilities of an elfblade, the Artblade allows its user to cast any spell using the sword's power rather than the traditional spellcasting methods. Any spell the wielder casts while wielding the Artblade automatically gains the benefits of the Silent Spell, Still Spell, and Eschew Materials feats with no increase to the spell level or casting time.

In addition, the wielder's effective caster level increases by 1 for evocation spells.

The Artblade's wielder can also use greater dispel magic as the spell three times per day and detect magic as the spell at will. The Artblade requires its wielder to be neutral good in alignment and able to cast 8th-level arcane spells.

In addition, it desires a wielder with a passion for magic and a selfless love of Cormanthyr and the elf people.

A candidate deemed unworthy by the Artblade becomes temporarily divorced from the Weave and unable to cast spells of any sort for 1d6 years (Will DC 23 half).

A Shadow Weave user who attempts to attune to the blade instantly becomes the target of a disintegrate spell (caster level 25th; DC 40).

Overwhelming evocation; CL 25th; Weight 4 lb.

ARYVELAHR KERYM, THE WARBLADE

The blade of this longsword shines like polished silver, remaining perfectly reflective no matter what punishments it endures.

Blue and silver flames lick incessantly along the blade, quillions, and pommel, and they harmlessly surround the wielder's hands whenever the blade is drawn.

At the seat of the blade is an Elven rune meaning "weapon", which is commonly used as a sword mark.

When Lord Orym Hawksong fell in battle at the siege of the Twisted Tower in the Year of Shadows Fleeting (-331 DR), the Warblade sprang up and defended him fiercely for a time.

Eventually, however, the drow managed to paralyze the blade by magic, and both the great hero and his arcane sword were lost in the darkness beneath the Twisted Tower.

In the centuries since, hundreds of elves have sought Aryvelahr Kerym, but no one has found it.

In addition to the standard powers of an elfblade, the Warblade enables its wielder to conjure a blade barrier, as the spell, once per day.

In addition, the wielder can utilize bull's strength as the spell three times per day and detect evil and detect good as the spells at will.

To wield the Warblade, a character must be of chaotic good alignment.

In addition, the blade seeks a wielder with martial skill (that is, a base attack bonus of at least +12), a high Charisma, and leadership ability.

If the Warblade deems an elf who attempts the attuning ritual unworthy, it turns in his hand, making a single attack (+29 melee, damage 1d8+11/17-20).

If the would-be wielder is not an elf or half-elf, or has an evil alignment, the Warblade attacks furiously for 2d6 rounds (+29/+24/+19/+14 melee, damage 1d8+11/17-20).

Magical healing of the wounds inflicted on an unworthy candidate is possible only with a successful DC 25 caster level check.

Overwhelming evocation; CL 25th; Weight 4 lb.

IMASKARCANA

The seven diverse artifacts collectively known as the Imaskarcana were the mightiest of the magic weapons and devices created by the ancient Imaskari.

Two of these items—the first and the fifth—reportedly lie buried in the ruins of Inupras, the capital city of the Imaskari Empire.

FIFTH IMASKARCANA

Forged some eight thousand five hundred years ago, this scepter was traditionally carried into battle by the High General of Imaskar's armies.

The final bearer of the Fifth Imaskarcana was Lord Dimarond, the last general of Imaskar, who fell outside Inupras before an enraged throng led by glorious servitors. The Fifth Imaskarcana is a pitted, battered-looking scepter about 2 feet long and 2 inches in diameter.

A crudely cut amethyst the size of a human fist crowns its bronze haft.

The Fifth Imaskarcana contains the entire military history of Imaskar from -7500 DR onward.

It telepathically answers any questions posed about that subject to the best of its ability (+20 bonus on Knowledge (history) checks regarding Imaskar's military history).

Anyone who wields the Fifth Imaskarcana gains spell resistance 26 and can use the following spell-like abilities: 3/day—charm person, crushing despair, confusion, daze monster, mind fog; 1/day—binding, demand, geas, mass hold monster, power word stun.

Caster level 18th.

The scepter's spell resistance is always active.

Any other power must be commanded to function as a standard action.

Like the First Imaskarcana, the scepter responds only to commands spoken in Roushoum, the ancient language of Imaskar.

If a command is issued in any other language, the wielder instantly becomes the target of a disintegrate effect (Fort DC 19 partial; self only; items carried are unaffected).

Overwhelming enchantment; CL 18th; Weight 4 lb.

FIRST IMASKARCANA

Crafted by an ancient Lord Artificer of Inupras more than nine thousand years ago, the First Imaskarcana is a crudely wrought, crenellated crown forged from a strange, lavender-tinted metal.

Though it was created for humans to wear, it also fits snugly when placed on the heads of other Medium humanoids.

A blue-black star sapphire about 3 inches in diameter rests squarely at the front of the crown.

The First Imaskarcana quickly became a symbol of the supreme authority wielded by the Imaskari emperors.

Lord Artificer Yuvaraj was wearing it when he perished in battle against the manifested god Horus.

The artifact is believed to lie deep under the sands in the ruins of Inupras, not far from the imperial palace.

Anyone who wears the First Imaskarcana gains spell resistance 30 and is protected by a spell turning effect that can turn 10 levels of divine magic in a 24-hour period.

Once it has reached its capacity, the First Imaskarcana cannot turn spells again for 24 hours.

The First Imaskarcana also holds the collected knowledge of the empire's lord artificers and can answer many questions concerning Imaskari customs, politics, and magic.

It does not engage in conversation, however, and offers only the briefest answers to direct questions (+20 bonus on Knowledge [history] checks regarding Imaskar only).

In addition, any wearer of the crown can use the following spell-like abilities: 3/day—antimagic aura, improved blink, legend lore (Imaskari items only), greater teleport, true seeing; 1/day—gate.

Caster level 18th.

The crown's spell resistance and spell turning abilities are always active, except as noted above.

Any other power must be commanded to function as a standard action.

The crown responds only to commands spoken in Roushoum, the ancient language of Imaskar.

If a command is issued in any other language, the wearer instantly becomes the target of a feblemind effect (Will DC 20 negates).

Overwhelming varies; CL 18th; Weight 3 lb.

MAGIC OF FAERÛN (3.0)

CROWN OF HORNS

This item contains the essence and intelligence of the former deity of death, Myrkul, the Lord of Bones.

It is a silver circlet with a black diamond set on the brow and four bone horns mounted around its edge.

Weird energy is visible within the diamond.

The crown of horns is intelligent, evil, and now exists only to cause evil and suffering among the people of the world.

Myrkul created the crown while he was still a living deity, and it was eventually broken by the efforts of Khelben the Blackstaff.

The shards of the item retained some power, and when Myrkul was slain by Midnight (the mortal woman possessed by the essence of Mystra), he forced his dying essence through the wards around Blackstaff Tower, reforged the crown in a new shape, imbuing it with additional powers, and then teleported away.

The crown enjoys harassing followers of Cyric, but avoids allies of Khelben and temples of Mystra.

The wearer of the crown has the following powers.

- Fear aura as if he were a lich.
- Spell resistance 25 against necromantic spells and effects.
- Rebuke or command undead as a 6th-level cleric.

If the wearer already has this ability, these levels stack with his cleric levels for this purpose.

- Teleport without error once per tenday, affecting only the wearer and his equipment.
- Cone of undeath: Usable once every 10 minutes, this effect is a 40-foot cone.

Creatures within the cone must make Fortitude saving throws (DC 20) or be slain and rise 1d4 rounds later as wraiths under the control of the wearer.

A successful save means a creature takes 3d6+20 points of damage.

This is a necromantic death effect.

- Myrkul's Hand: Once per day, the wearer can invoke black flames that cover one of his hands.

These flames are treated as a touch spell.

On a successful melee touch attack, the target must make a Fortitude save (DC 20) or be instantly slain, rising 1d4 rounds later as a spectre under the control of the wearer.

A successful save means the creature takes 2d8+10 points of damage.

This is a necromantic death effect.

The crown also has the following drawbacks.

- The wearer changes alignment to neutral evil while the crown is worn.
- The crown cannot be removed unless Myrkul wills it. Normally the only way the crown is removed is when it teleports itself away.
- The crown can use suggestion once per day on the wearer, and can possess the wearer for up to 20 minutes per day as if using a magic jar spell.
- The wearer slowly turns into an undead being over the course of two years.

Use of the cone of undeath or the Myrkul's hand abilities advances this process 1d4 months per use.

When the transformation is complete, the wearer appears lich-like and his type changes to "undead", but he otherwise retains all his normal abilities.

If the wearer reaches this state and the crown teleports away, the wearer is instantly destroyed.

- The wearer is paranoid and possessive about the crown, keeping all others away from it.
  - All beings within 100 feet of the crown while it is worn must make a Will save or be affected by a sympathy spell.
- Caster Level: 20th; Weight: 2 lb.

NAGA CROWN

These silvery metal circlets (a few are rumored to have existed at one point or another in time) with three points or spines probably were created long ago by yuan-ti ("naga crown" is merely a popular name).

They are self-identifying and possess the following powers.

- The wearer can use the spell see invisibility at will.
- On mental command the crown generates a repulsion effect.

Also on mental command, the crown reflects spells as through the wearer had received a spell turning spell.

The wearer's arcane spells per day are doubled for all spell levels.

This power does not stack with a ring of wizardry or other effect that grants extra arcane spells.

Once per day, the wearer can dominate all reptilian creatures with Intelligence scores of 2 or lower within a 1,500-foot radius.

The effect lasts 1 hour and is similar to the dominate monster spell, except that it works on all reptilian creatures within the radius.

The wearer can issue telepathic commands to all controlled reptilian creatures within 1,500 feet or to any single reptilian creature or group of reptilian creatures that are in range and line of sight.

No reptilian creature with an Intelligence score of 2 or lower attacks the wearer, even if the wearer attacks the reptilian creature or the creature is under another naga crown wearer's control.

Reptilian creatures already under the wearer's control cannot be affected by another charm or compulsion effect, even from another naga crown.

Reptilian creatures with Intelligence 3 or higher can attack the wearer, but they suffer a -3 morale penalty on attack rolls.

Caster Level: 15th; Weight: —.

PSIONICS HANDBOOK (3.0)

ANNULUS

This is the ultimate psionic nullifier.

Forged by long-dead illithids to keep enemies of vast psionic power at bay (possibly other illithids), the Annulus is an artifact that any psionic being should fear. It has been forgotten by mind flayers and nonillithids alike in the modern age, and merely finding it would precipitate a great upheaval across the planes.

The Annulus is a 1-foot-diameter ring of silvery material. Tiny slots, antennae, spheres, and other intricate projections decorate the exterior of the hoop; however, two smoothed lengths of the ting provide adequate grips.

Powers: The Annulus has several powers, all of which require a wielder to tightly grasp the ring with at least one hand.

When it is first grasped, knowledge of the artifact's powers immediately flood the wielder's mind.

The Annulus generates a continuous catapsi effect within a 100-foot radius of the wielder (who is unaffected).

The wielder gains a +4 enhancement bonus to mental hardness.

Once per day, the wielder can trigger ultrablast as a standard action.

Three times per day, as a standard action, the wielder can trigger an effect similar to dimensional anchor that affects all creatures in a 50-foot radius.

The prime power of the Annulus, however, is psionic nullification.

Once per year, the wielder can trigger this effect as a special action requiring 10 rounds to complete.

The wielder specifies a target or targets within a 100-foot radius, from a specific psionic individual or item to a group of psionic beings that share the same philosophy (such as an illithid outpost).

The nullification effect follows 10 full rounds of concentrating on the target and is accompanied by blasts of light, heat, and sound from the Annulus.

Nonpsionic creatures and items are unaffected, as are nontargeted beings, but the target—regardless of any protection it may possess—disintegrates with a terrific explosion.

Nothing is left but floating dust.

It is relatively easy to nullify a single target or a small group of targets, but a more powerful being (such as a demigod or greater entity) or another major artifact taxes the Annulus to its limits.

If used to nullify such a target, the artifact succeeds but is destroyed in the process and cannot be retrieved by any means.

Destruction: The Annulus must be used to nullify a demigod or more powerful being, or another major artifact, as described above.

STAFF OF ANCIENT PENUMBRA

This psionically endowed staff is an artifact from ancient days, supposedly forged on legendary Penumbra, the mythical seat of the long-forgotten illithid empire.

The stories of its passage through the epochs since its creation to the present day would fill volumes.

The Staff of Ancient Penumbra is intelligent (Int 16, Wis 14, Cha 18, Ego 18) but quiescent until used.

Its alignment is lawful evil.

The staff measures 5 feet in length and 2 inches in diameter, and is crafted of a nigh-indestructible material called "substare".

This substance might very well be harder than adamantine, but the secret of its formulation has been lost.

Its head is carved to form a stylized illithid's head, with a high, swept-back brow and cavernous sockets where eyes might otherwise be (if gemstone eyes once resided here, they're gone now).

The tentacles of the illithid-head meld perfectly with the shaft, itself intricately carved with a multitude of squirming tadpoles, which provide the perfect tough surface for easily grasping the staff.

Scrutiny of the tadpoles reveals four-lobed tails—they are illithid young.

The staff is selective about whom it allows to use it.

A hopeful petitioner who touches it must make a Diplomacy check (DC 18).

On a failure, the staff reacts poorly to the proffered mental contact, lashing out with a defensive pyrokinetic blast that deals 5d6 points of fire damage to that character per round. This also automatically sets the character on fire; the victim can attempt Fortitude saves (DC 20) each round after the first to extinguish the flames (powers such as control flames grant a +4 bonus on the saving throw).

The fire continues to burn every round the save is failed but goes out permanently on a successful save.

Anyone killed by the fire burns completely, leaving only ashes.

A prospective new owner who survives a burning can make another Diplomacy check, but the check DC increases by +2 with each successive attempt.

Powers: If the Staff of Ancient Penumbra takes a shine to a prospective owner, it telepathically reveals its powers. However, the new owner may not enjoy this discovery: The artifact's special purpose is the promulgation of illithid rulership.

An owner who refuses to acknowledge illithid superiority and who does not demonstrate reasonable progress toward that goal must succeed at a Will saving throw (DC 18) to remain in control when a personality conflict occurs—the DM decides when.

On a failure, the staff is dominant (see Chapter 8 of the DUNGEON MASTER's Guide for guidance; intelligent psionic items follow the same rules as magic ones).

If the staff gains mastery, it begins to throw pyrokinetic blasts at the wielder or at the wielder's compatriots within 15 feet.

Only assuring the staff that it is being brought to the nearest mind flayer will console it.

In combat, the artifact is a +5 quarterstaff.

If it scores a critical hit, the staff lashes forth with its pyrokinetic blast.

The wielder can also direct the blast against a target within 15 feet as a standard action.

Anyone hit by the blast automatically catches fire as described above.

However, using the staff against an illithid (if the wielder is not also an illithid) is a sure way to precipitate a personality conflict.

Three times per day, the wielder of the staff gains an additional saving throw against a spell or psionic power, if the first one fails.

At any time, the Staff of Ancient Penumbra manifests body adjustment on the wielder as a full-round action.

Strangely enough, the staff can also heal an undead wielder in a similar way, using a liberal dose of negative energy.

The wielder can always see up to 30 feet through darkness, fog, smoke, or other visibility-reducing conditions.

As a standard action, the wielder can use the staff to see up to 6 inches through solid objects, such as metal (including lead), stone, wood, and even flesh, for a duration of 3 rounds.

Special Purpose Power: The wielder of the staff can manifest true seeing once per day, if the artifact believes that doing so will fulfill purpose.

Destruction: The staff must be thrown into the star at Penumbra's hub.

SERPENT KINGDOMS (3.5)

MARLSPIRE OF NAJARA

When the Hss'tafitribe was transported to the Forest of Wyrms, its members brought with them one of the few naga crowns known to exist in Faerûn.

To mark their oath of fealty to Terpenzi, the ha-naga king of Najara, the tribal elders gave him the crown, intending that it should serve as the crown of state.

Since that time, the Marlspire of Najara, as it came to be known, has passed from one naga king to the next, and today it rests atop the brow of Ebaranje.

In addition to the standard powers of a naga crown (see below), the Marlspire of Najara has acquired one additional property: The Guardian of Najara cannot regain its free will so long as this item exists.

Moreover, whoever wears the crown can command the current guardian as if he or she were its creator.

Strong enchantment; CL 15th; Weight —.

NAGA CROWN

These powerful items were actually created by the yuan-ti; naga crown is merely a popular name.

Each naga crown is a silvery metal circlet with three points or spines.

It reveals its powers to the wearer as soon as it is placed on the head.

The wearer can use see invisibility at will.

With the proper command word, he can create a repulsion or spell turning effect.

Furthermore, the wearer's daily allotment of arcane spells doubles for all spell levels.

(This benefit does not stack with that of a ring of wizardry or any other effect that grants extra arcane spells).

Once per day, the wearer can dominate all Scaled Ones with Intelligence scores of 2 or below within a 1,500-foot radius for 1 hour.

This ability otherwise functions like the dominate monster spell.

The wearer can issue telepathic commands to all controlled creatures in the area or to any single creature or group within range and line of sight.

No Scaled One with an Intelligence score of 2 or below can directly attack the wearer, even if attacked by the wearer or controlled by another naga crown.

Scaled Ones already under the wearer's control cannot be affected by another charm or compulsion effect, even from another naga crown.

A Scaled One with an Intelligence score of 3 or higher can attack the wearer, but it takes a -3 morale penalty on attack rolls.

Strong enchantment; CL 15th; Weight —.

NAJA FOUNTAIN

The Naja Fountain lies in the depths of Ss'thar'tiss'ssun in the Shrine of Cowled Serpents, near the main altar to Ssharstrune.

Its large pool is encircled by the carved statue of an amphisbaena with both pairs of jaws interlocked. Small snake statuettes rear up from the heart of the pool, spitting streams of water into the air.

For millennia, the Naja Fountain was the lair of the ha-naga Terpenzi, but it has lain untended since the Year of Moor Birds (90 DR).

The effective arcane caster level of anyone who bathes in the Naja Fountain permanently increases by +3.

This benefit can be gained only once per creature.

Furthermore, immersion in the fountain's waters confers the benefits of a heal spell for every round of immersion.

Finally, any living creature in contact with the fountain's water is immortal and does not age, though these benefits are lost if the creature ceases contact with the water.

The water loses all magical powers when removed from the fountain.

Overwhelming conjuration; CL 21st; Weight: N/A (immovable).

SHINING SOUTH (3.5)

ASTROLABE OF NIMBRAL

This large and cumbersome apparatus is covered with an assortment of levers, knobs, and buttons, looking remarkably like a cross between a printing press and a pipe organ.

With it, a character can transport an entire structure, such as a vehicle or a small tower, anywhere on Toril in a great display of teleportation.

As its name implies, the Astrolabe of Nimbral was crafted by the most powerful of wizards from the island nation of Nimbral, and stored in the treasure vaults of the Nimbral Lords.

It was eventually stolen by a particularly resourceful band of adventurers led by the Halruaan wizard Dwalimar Omen and taken back to his home nation.

From there, it was installed on the Halruaan skyship Realms Master and used by Omen and several others to hunt down dangerous artifacts at the behest of Netyarch Zalathorm.

The Astrolabe of Nimbral allows one who is skilled in its use to teleport an object of up to twenty 10-foot cubes in size, as well as everything contained inside that object, anywhere on Toril.

To properly understand and control the Astrolabe, the user must make a DC 30 Intelligence check.

A character gains a +2 bonus on this check for every 5 ranks in Spellcraft and Knowledge (arcana) he has.

Failure by 4 or less indicates the destination is off by 5d10x10 miles; failure by 5 or more means the destination is randomly determined.

Objects moved from one location to another are subject to changes in slope, altitude, and stability in the foundation.

Thus, it is considered wise to be aloft (such as in a skyship) before operating the Astrolabe.

CRYSTAL ORB

Thought to have been crafted by the wizard Halruaa (one of the first wizard-kings of the nation bearing the same name), the Crystal Orb is a large, clear sphere about 1 foot in diameter.

Since the beginning of the rule of the netyarchs, the Orb has been the primary means of communicating and managing the affairs of Halruaa.

The Crystal Orb currently resides in an inner chamber in Zalathorm's palatial tower in Halarahh.

The Orb only responds to the primary user, which was designated as the reigning netyarch of Halruaa during its creation.

With the Crystal Orb, a user can communicate with up to five hundred unique individuals at once.

During a conversation, the user has complete control over who can speak and be heard by the rest of those mentally present.

The link also provides a mental image of the face of any speaker.

The Orb must be attuned to contact any particular individual through a minor activation sequence whereby the user touches both the Orb and the potential recipient at the same time and utters a command word.

Thereafter, the user can mentally contact the recipient when that command word is uttered a subsequent time. Zalathorm has established a single command word for the entire Council of Elders, and he is able, thusly, to reach every member at the same time to conduct the business of running Halruaa.

Contact from the Orb is not compulsory.

The recipient can feel a mental signal, but he can choose to ignore it.

If the recipient chooses to respond to the signal, he immediately finds himself in telepathic contact with the wielder of the Orb and anyone else the wielder has contacted at that time.

To protect the Crystal Orb, it has been further imbued with a contingent teleport object spell.

Anyone attempting to remove it from the chamber where it is kept causes the Orb to be sent to the inner sanctuary of the high priest of Mystra at Mount Talath, who magically contacts Zalathorm to make arrangements for the artifact's safe return.

GULKULUSTER'S DEATHSTAFF

Created by one of the most powerful of Halruaa's wizards centuries ago, Gulkuluster's Deathstaff was designed to be used as a means of ultimate destruction against almost any foe.

Each use of the Deathstaff produces one of the following effects.

Maximized widened fireball

Maximized widened acidball

Maximized widened electricity ball

Maximized widened frostball

Maximized widened sonicball

These are variations on fireball created with alternate energy descriptors; for example, an acidball spell functions as a fireball spell but deals acid damage.

Gulkuluster's Deathstaff can hold 50 charges—and through a unique property of its construction, it automatically regains 1 charge each week.

If it ever reaches 0 charges, it becomes nonfunctional until a week has passed.

ONGILD

Named for the Halruaan wizard that created it, the Ongild is a fist-sized emerald that has been imbued with a variety of powers.

Its last known location was in the belly of the red dragon Hoondarrh, who lairs on the isle of Skadaurak in the kingdom of Mintarn.

The Ongild continually allows its wearer to heal 1 point of damage per level every hour.

Furthermore, its wearer can use each of the following effects as an 18th-level wizard 1/day—delayed blast fireball, prismatic spray, reverse gravity, and spell turning.

SUNPHELM OF SHANDAULAR

The Sunphelm of Shandaular is an ancient crown that has served as the regalia of at least three kingdoms: Ashanath, Eltabranar, and Arkaia.

Its origin is unknown, having been discovered by Shan the Golden, a wizard in the employ of the gold dwarves of the Great Rift, in an ancient crypt buried beneath the waters of the Akanamere shortly before the opening of the Orcgate. Shan bore the crown for many years, first as a mercenary leader of the Nars, and later as the first queen of Ashanath. After her death, it passed to her son, grandson, and great-grandson (Arkaius the Archmage), each ruling Ashanath from the city of Shandaular in turn.

It is from this era that the headpiece became known as the Sunphelm of Shandaular.

Today, the Sunphelm's fate remains unknown, although knowledgeable scholars speculate that it rests atop the brow of some matron mother in the drow city of T'lindhet.

Fashioned of silver and gilt with golden runes, the Sunphelm is a simple circlet with seven beljuril-tipped spikes that seem to flicker with inner light.

A trio of king's tears dangles from the front of the crown on silver chains.

Each king's tear contains a different image within—a view of the arch in the northern half of Shandaular circa -1000 DR, a view of the arch in the southern half of Shandaular circa 200 DR, and a view of the city of Arkatuil and the Bay of Dancing Dolphins circa 750 DR.

The seven beljurils of the Sunphelm of Shandaular collectively provide light equal to that of a candle and exhibit the effects of a holy star spell (see page 104 of Player's Guide to Faerûn) as commanded by the wearer.

In addition, the wearer of the Sunphelm is continuously girded by the benefits of a contingent heal spell that activates immediately whenever the wearer would be killed from damage or Constitution damage or drain.

IMASKARCANA

THIRD IMASKARCANA

The true names of the seven tremendously powerful magic tomes of the Imaskari were lost long ago, so they are collectively referred to as the Seven Imaskarcana.

Records mentioning them have shown up with just enough regularity to convince sages that these books must have once existed.

Today, one of the Seven Imaskarcana remains preserved in Deep Imaskar.

The fate of the others is unknown, and even the wisest of Deep Imaskar are not certain that the others, if they still exist, are similar in form, function, and power to the Third. In fact, it is likely that each of the Seven Imaskarcana has a different appearance and property.

The Third Imaskarcana is a massive great-tome bound in slate covers lined with blue dragon skin.

Its pages vary in composition and appearance—some are raggedly cut vellum, others are the skin of humans, elves, or even tanar’ri, and still others are made of crystal that magically possesses the flexibility of paper without its weaknesses.

Anyone who carries the Third Imaskarcana gains spell resistance 27.

Any other power of the tome must be commanded, as a standard action, to function.

The Third Imaskarcana can’t be read like a standard tome. Instead, questions or commands must be posed to it in Roushoum (the tongue of Imaskar), since it recognizes only that language.

If a question or command is directed at the tome in any other language, the questioner is immediately sucked into the tome, where she becomes a fine new vellum page.

(A creature so destroyed can be returned to life only by means of a miracle or wish spell).

Anyone who successfully communicates with the tome can use the following powers as spell-like abilities (caster level 18th), each once per day: Dominate monster, imprisonment, meteor swarm (DC 23), and time stop.

Additionally, the Third Imaskarcana can answer questions once per day, as though via a commune spell.

Overwhelming varied; Weight 10 lb.

UNDERDARK MAP, GREATER

This map shows all the tunnels, caves, and caverns, both natural and artificial, within a 1-mile radius of itself.

It also reveals the locations of all portals, dead magic areas, and other anomalies.

It functions only in the Underdark, but it is not limited to one Underdark level, as the lesser Underdark map is.

Overwhelming divination; Weight 1 lb.

the underdark maps and the epic level handbook

Both the Gleaners and the Planar Cartographic Society seek to retrieve the Underdark maps. The members of each group assert original ownership and maintain that the other group stole the maps from them, the rightful owners.

It is true that both groups have owned the maps in the past, and that each has had them stolen by the other group. However, the original owner and creator was actually a Chosen of Shar.

MINOR ARTIFACTS

BOOK OF VILE DARKNESS (3.0)

ANGEL BLOOD

This fluid comes in a flask. It is not actually a magic item (in that no one created it). It is really the blood of a celestial, gathered and stored during a special ritual. The liquid deals 5d6 points of acid damage when thrown as a grenade-like weapon, but only against noncelestial creatures.
Caster Level: 20th; Weight: 1 lb. (including the flask).

ANGEL TEARS

Hardened into tiny crystals, these tears, like angel blood, were created by no spellcaster. Instead, they are gathered from places where angels have felt sorrow or pain, using some long-lost dark process. Evil creatures have learned to make angel tears into hurled weapons such as stones (they work well in slings, too). So cursed are such things that they deal 3d6 points of damage to any creature they break against, the target is automatically considered exhausted, and the target must succeed at a Fortitude saving throw (DC 18) or take 1d8 points of Strength drain.
Caster Level: 20th; Weight: 1/2 lb.

DEMON BLOOD

When this dark blood, gathered using a special process and an unholy ritual, is sprinkled over a 100-foot-radius area, that area is treated as though affected by an unhallow spell. Furthermore, nothing natural can grow in the area ever again.
Caster Level: 20th; Weight: 1 lb. (including the flask).

DEMONSTONE

This 2-inch-diameter dark rock is naturally in the shape of a demonic creature with bat wings folded around its body. It is semitranslucent with a dark center that sometimes seems to move. Occasionally it seems to whisper. If one listens closely, the whisper can be understood, but it is a foul and evil entreaty to do some horrible act. The owner immediately gains a +1 luck bonus on attacks, damage, skill checks, and saving throws. After one day of close proximity to the stone (within 5 feet), a character must succeed at a Will saving throw (DC 15) or do as the stone compels and become chaotic evil in alignment. If the saving throw succeeds, further saves must be made each day, with the DC increasing by +1 each time.

A character turned chaotic evil by a demonstone is particularly despicable in his sadistic and horrible actions. Once the character becomes chaotic evil (or if he was evil in the first place), the stone need not remain in his possession for him to gain the luck bonus. The bonus lasts until the brittle stone is destroyed (hardness 4, 10 hp, break DC 24) or until someone else succumbs to its temptation, failing the Will save while in close proximity.

When a character who was turned evil by a demonstone loses her connection with it (if it is destroyed or gains a new owner), the awareness of her evil deeds comes back to her, and she is usually thrown into deep despair.
Caster Level: 20th; Weight: 1/2 lb.

DEVIL BLOOD

When used to coat a blade, this black ichor acts as a poison the next thirteen times the weapon strikes. The poison (Fort DC 20) deals 1d6 points of Strength damage as initial damage and 2d6 points of Strength damage as secondary damage.
Caster Level: 20th; Weight: 1 lb. (including the flask).

DIABOLIC ENGINES AND DEMONIC DEVICES

This special category of minor artifacts includes any of a number of machines created on the Lower Planes (see Chapter 7). Pain, souls, or both power these devices (see Souls as Power and Pain as Power in Chapter 2).

CAULDRON OF ZOMBIE SPEWING

The devils that created this device wanted to mass-produce undead. This artifact is a mass of strange tubes, bubbling glass containers, and liquid-filled troughs all focused around a gigantic black cauldron 13 feet in diameter. When fifty Medium-size corpses are thrown into the device and mixed with strange chemicals and a single dose of liquid pain, the contents of the cauldron stew and boil for 24 hours. Then, great horizontally pivoting levers spew forth onto the ground 4d12 Medium-size zombies. Not every corpse becomes a zombie because some are liquefied and mulched as a part of the process. The zombies obey the commands of any devil present within the first 3 rounds of their creation. The cauldron has hardness 10, 250 hp, and a break DC of 35. However, the glass portions and tubing can be destroyed much more easily (hardness 1, 20 hp, break DC 12).
Caster Level: 16th; Weight: 5,000 lb.

DEMONIC GRAFT MACHINE

This machine is a mass of metal tubes, gears, arms, and wheels that turn and move silently. At the front of this machine, a wide iron plate fashioned into the form of a hideous face grins with a wide, open mouth. Through the mouth, the innards of the device are visible.

The device is part machine and part demon, infused with fiendish essence and powered by evil magic.

It is used to graft demonic additions onto the bodies of willing or unwilling victims.

Anyone that comes within 5 feet of the open mouth must succeed at a Reflex save (DC 15) or be grabbed by a tongue-like appendage and dragged into the machine.

Within the bowels of the machine, the victim's body is sliced, burned, punctured, and torn.

These operations deal 6d6 points of damage to the victim in 1 round.

In the next round (if the character is still alive), demonic flesh and essence is added to the victim's body, restoring 5d6 points of damage.

On the third round, the character is spit out with a new demonic addition in place (roll on the following table).

d%	Demonic Addition
01-25	Left arm. The arm is long and flexible like a tendril, with a crude, three-fingered claw at the end. It functions as a natural weapon dealing 1d4 points of damage plus the character's Strength bonus. Weapons used in the hand take a -2 penalty on attacks. Once per day, the arm can produce magic missile as the spell from a 5th-level caster.
26-55	Right arm. The arm is muscular and sinewy, with a clawed hand. The arm confers a +2 inherent bonus to Strength. As a natural weapon, the arm deals 1d6 points of damage plus the character's Strength bonus.
56-70	Thick and muscular legs. The character gains a +2 bonus to his Constitution score.
71-85	Slim and agile legs. This addition increases the character's speed by 10 feet when not wearing heavy armor or carrying a heavy load. The character gains a +5 competence bonus on Climb and Jump checks.
86-100	Familiar. Grafted onto the shoulder, back, stomach or hand, a demonic familiar is a small face with an evil expression. This face has Intelligence 12, Wisdom 9, and Charisma 6. If the character is a wizard, the face can teach him one new spell for every spell level he knows. If the character is a spellcaster, the familiar provides a +2 inherent bonus to the ability score that determines his bonus spells.

Good-aligned characters with a demonic addition must succeed at a Will save (DC 15) every day or take 1d3 points of Wisdom damage as the experience slowly drives them mad.

Characters of a nonevil alignment must succeed at a Will save (DC 15) each day or succumb to temptation and perform an evil act chosen by the DM.

This may eventually result in an alignment change.

When characters with demonic additions deal with nonevil NPCs, they take a -6 circumstance penalty on all Charisma-based checks, such as Diplomacy and Bluff.

The machine does not take a character more than once.

Removing a demonic addition requires severing the limb and taking 6d6 points of damage.

To regrow the original limb requires a regenerate spell.

The Demonic Graft Machine has hardness 10, 200 hp, and a break DC of 35.

A victim inside the machine can make an attack with a light weapon, or he can cast spells if he succeeds at a Concentration check based on the damage he has taken.

The machine can take two victims at a time, but only victims of Large or smaller size.

Each demonic addition requires a soul fed into the machine.

Caster Level: 18th; Weight: 2,500 lb.

PAIN PIT

A metal cauldron 10 feet across and 20 feet deep containing several giant leeches, this device is one of biological engineering.

A creation of the neutral evil fiends known as yugoloths, the Pain Pit efficiently extracts liquid pain from its victims.

The pit can hold up to five Medium-size or smaller creatures.

The yugoloths throw victims into the pit, where foot-long leeches (treat as Tiny monstrous centipedes) attach to them, inflicting great pain and draining pain from them in liquid form.

A thin umbilical cord connects each leech to a storage vat along the side of the cylinder.

Each leech extracts one dose of liquid pain from a victim over the course of a day, then sends it along the tube to the storage vat, which has a capacity of one hundred doses.

Once the liquid pain has been extracted and delivered, the leeches consume the victims.

Two ladders lead up to the rim of the cauldron, and a 1-foot-wide walkway surrounds the perimeter at the top.

A single dose of pain must be poured into the pit at the beginning of a day to get the leeches started.

The cylinder itself has hardness 10, 300 hp, and a break DC of 35.

The storage vat can be destroyed more easily (hardness 1, 30 hp, break DC 15).

Caster Level: 20th; Weight: 8,000 lb.

DISPATER'S ROD

Dispater's rod is a minor artifact, a +6 heavy mace that acts as a rod of rulership and can smite good three times per day (dealing an additional +20 damage to a good being).

Dispater often carries a +5 large iron shield.

Belial's +4 ranseur is a minor artifact that causes those it strikes to feel wracking pains that drain 2 points of Dexterity.

A successful hit also imposes a -4 penalty on attack rolls, skill checks, and ability checks (Fort DC 24 negates).

The latter effect must be removed by a heal or break enchantment spell.

HORN OF THE BULL

This lesser artifact summons 1d10+10 minotaurs with maximum hit points.

They serve the summoner until they die.

The horn can be used three times per week, but when a user blows it, all summoned minotaurs remaining from its previous use (if any) disappear.

In all other ways, treat the horn's effect as a summon monster spell.

Caster Level: 18th.

HORN OF THE BULL

This lesser artifact summons 1d10+10 minotaurs with maximum hit points.

They serve the summoner until they die.

The horn can be used three times per week, but when a user blows it, all summoned minotaurs remaining from its previous use (if any) disappear. In all other ways, treat the horn's effect as a summon monster spell.

Caster Level: 18th.

KYTHON ARMOR

This armor looks like a dead adult kython (see Chapter 8) with only two arms.

If a wearer crawls into it, the armor fuses to him, although it can be removed later.

The armor is +3 full plate and allows the wearer to use kython weapons as if he were a kython.

Furthermore, the armor allows the wearer to use its claws (which deal 1d8 points of damage) as if they were natural weapons, and it adds a +10 bonus on any attempt to disguise the wearer as an actual adult kython.

Caster Level: 16th; Weight: 50 lb.

MIDNIGHT BLADE

This +5 bastard sword is unholy, fleshgrinding and marrowcrushing, but only at night.

During the day it merely has a +5 enhancement bonus.

Furthermore, the Midnight Blade must be used to draw blood from at least one creature of Medium-size or larger each night, or it loses all abilities and becomes a -4 *curse*d bastard sword.

Its abilities can be recovered, but only if it is used to slay a Medium-size or larger creature, at night, with the -4 penalty.

Caster Level: 15th; Weight: 10 lb.

RHAPSODY OF PAIN

These oddly named earrings allow the wearer to function as if continually under the effects of both a sadism and a masochism spell.

Furthermore, the wearer is immune to the debilitating effects of pain, such as those brought on by a symbol of pain, although she still feels the pain.

Caster Level: 16th; Weight: —.

RING OF THE DREAD EMPEROR

This black ring is made from a single piece of obsidian and bears a gold inlay design of chains.

If a humanoid of at least 10th level is killed on a given day by the wearer of this ring, the wearer takes no penalties for wearing armor (no armor check penalty, no maximum Dexterity bonus to Armor Class, no spell failure chance, and no reduced movement).

The wearer of the ring gains the effect of a free action spell for the next 24 hours.

Caster Level: 16th; Weight: —.

STAFF OF MALICE

This 6-foot shaft of hardened black wood gives off a dull red glow the color of an old scab that shows itself only in the light.

Each tip of the staff ends in a metal spear point, and the staff of malice can be used either as a +3 unholy quarterstaff or a +3 unholy shortspear in combat.

Like all staves, it has 50 charges, which can be used to power the following spells.

- Bestow greater curse (1 charge, DC 21)
  - Boneblast (1 charge, DC 16)
  - Destruction (1 charge, DC 21)
  - Pestilence (2 charges, DC 22)
  - Stop heart (1 charge, DC 18)
  - Wrack (1 charge, DC 17)
  - Wretched blight (15d8 damage, DC 23) (2 charges) When the charges are all gone, the staff disappears, only to reappear fully charged somewhere else in the multiverse.
- Caster Level: 20th; Weight: 5 lb.

VASHARAN CROSSBOW

This +4 heavy crossbow can be loaded and fired as quickly as a light crossbow can.

Any bolt that it fires is automatically treated as a bolt of slaying humans (as an arrow of slaying).

Caster Level: 17th; Weight: 4 lb.

CHAMPIONS OF RUIN (3.5)

MOANING CROWN OF NDULU

In the Year of Visions (731 DR), the legendary paladin Sarshel entered the Citadel of Conjurers (which lay near the Hill of Tombs) and shattered the fabled Crown of Narfell. In so doing, he broke Orcus's hold over the artifact and forced the army of demons led by the balor Ndulu to retreat and scatter.

Although Sarshel gathered up the physical fragments of the headgear, the souls of the long-dead Nentyarchs trapped within the crown quickly fled their ancient prison in the form of powerful wraiths.

Over the next five decades, Ndulu captured the crown-wraiths one by one and brought them to his lair in the depths of the Earthfast Mountains.

Calling on the power of the Prince of the Undead, Ndulu forged the crown-wraiths into an incorporeal circlet of evil and darkness.

With the Moaning Crown of Ndulu on his brow, so named for the endless wailing of the souls it had trapped anew, Ndulu was able to reforge his army of succubi and glabrezu.

In the Year of the Moaning Gorge (786 DR), Ndulu's army was met by the great-grandsons of King Sarshel at the mouth of a gorge that led deep into the Earthspurs, just outside the gates of the Citadel of Conjurers.

Employing three shields—Kimeltaar, Naelotaar, and Dizeltaar—and the sword Demonbane, the Paladin Princes formed a vortex portal and through it drove Ndulu and his horde back into the Abyss.

In his final act, Ndulu shattered two of the shields—Naelotaar and Dizeltaar—and their shield-bearers, Essys and Araln.

In his wake, the balor left the Moaning Crown of Ndulu, for it could not pass beyond this plane.

Recognizing the Moaning Crown as the fell echo of the Crown of Narfell, but unable to destroy it, Prince Nord secretly carried it to the depths of the Citadel of Conjurers and placed it amid the other Narfelli artifacts that lay therein.

After his sudden reappearance a tenday later, he had the court wizards of Old Impiltur renew their wards on the site, and the Moaning Crown of Ndulu is believed to remain within, forever locked away.

The Moaning Crown resembles an incorporeal circular cloud of black smoke.

It can be moved only by someone or something capable of manipulating objects on the Ethereal Plane.

(Prince Nord carried it on the blade of Felthann, Crown Prince Essys' sword with the ghost touch property).

However, if somehow placed atop the brow of a sentient creature, it remains firmly in place.

Anyone staring into the depths of the headpiece can discern tortured faces swirling through the dark mists, and it is from their mouths that the ever-present moaning emerges.

Physical contact with the Moaning Crown is equivalent to the touch of a powerful crown-wraith, dealing 1d8 points of Constitution drain per round unless a DC 24 Fortitude save is made.

(Most bearers would require some form of negative energy protection to safely wear the crown).

As its name suggests, the Moaning Crown radiates a constant moaning.

This is a magical sonic effect and can be negated by magical silence.

In nonevil creatures, this moaning engenders the effect of an emotion (despair) spell, centered on the wearer.

In evil creatures, the effect is akin to a bard's inspire greatness ability.

Evil creatures within 30 feet of the crown-bearer who can hear the moaning gain +2 HD (d10s that grant temporary hit points), a +2 competence bonus on attacks, and a +1 competence bonus on Fortitude saves.

Three times per day, at the command of the crown-bearer, the collective moaning of the crown-wraiths can rise to the level of a terrifying scream, equal in effect to a wail of the banshee spell.

Strong necromancy; CL 20th; Weight 5 lb.

SHADOWSTONE

This +2 heavy mace is a Shadow Weave magic item created by Shar and given to Damian Krале to help him unite the Sharran cells of the Western Heartlands.

It raises the effective caster level of any of his spells with the darkness descriptor by one.

It protects him, as a scarab of protection, against the first two energy-draining attacks he suffers each day.

Finally, any creature struck by the weapon must succeed on a DC 16 Fortitude save or be targeted by a blindness effect for 1d4 rounds.

Strong abjuration and necromancy; CL 20th; Weight 8 lb.

CHAMPIONS OF VALOR

(3.5)

CROWN OF NARFELL

An ancient crown bearing this name and possessed of sinister powers was once worn by the legendary Nentyarch of Narfell.

After that evil item was destroyed, its pieces were reforged by the gods of the Triad as a potent symbol of Impiltur's refusal to bow to the armies of the Abyss.

The new Crown of Narfell is imbued with powers that advance the cause of good and law.

At present, it is the royal crown of Impiltur.

History: In -970 DR, the reigning Nentyarch (king) of Tharos constructed the great tree-lined fortress of Dun-Tharos in the heart of the present-day Rawlinswood near the headwaters of the Soleine River.

Some attribute his rise to the acquisition of a fell artifact that came to be known as the Crown of Narfell, while others claim it came about due to a combination of fortuitous events and personal magnetism.

Although the true origin of the Crown may never be known, it is thought that Orcus, the Demon Prince of Undead, gave the headpiece to the Nentyarch as part of a dark pact.

In any event, after proclaiming the empire of Narfell and donning the Crown of Narfell, the Nentyarch proceeded to conquer one petty kingdom of the Nars after another, the last of which was the kingdom of Ashanath.

The Nentyarch's army literally wiped out Ashanath's capital city, Shandaular, reducing it to little more than myth and scattered piles of rubble along the western shore of Lake Ashane.

By -900 DR, the empire of Narfell stretched from the uplands of Impiltur to Ashanath and from the eastern slopes of the Giantspire Mountains to the northern bank of the River UMBER.

In the centuries that followed, Narfell's rulers set their sights on the Priador Plateau (now the Plateau of Thay), home once again only to nomadic tribes of centaurs and gnolls following the retreat of Mulhorand.

Realizing that the empire of Raumathar to the east had similar designs, successive Nentyarchs pursued a two-pronged policy of endless skirmishing and settlement. The tribal lands of the Rashemi lay between Lake Ashane and the Sunrise Mountains, bordered to the north and south by Raumathar and the plateau.

While Narfelli settlers streamed south and east to claim the territory, the Nentyarch's armies bottled up Raumathar's forces in Rashemen, pitting the barbaric Rashemi against each other and against the armies of Raumathar.

Early successes by Narfell that extended the empire's reach to the northern shore of the Alamber Sea were reversed after -623 DR because of an ill-conceived invasion of Mulhorand and a surprise attack by Raumathar's army.

In order to reverse the empire's decline, the ruling class of Narfell was forced to turn to demonic aid to learn the art of sorcery, prompted by the fell whisperings of the Crown of Narfell.

In -150 DR, centuries of warfare culminated in a great conflagration that consumed both empires and left all manner of summoned beings to stalk the lands they once ruled.

In the Crown's early days, its powers were relatively benign, extracting a dark price from the bearer only upon his death.

Those who dared call upon the powers of the Crown found their souls absorbed into the Crown at death and their bodies transformed into crown-wraiths.

By -150 DR, however, the Crown of Narfell had grown powerful indeed, and its evil persuasiveness almost certainly turned the Narfelli court toward consorting with fiends and ruled the heart of a succession of Nentyarchs. For centuries after the fall of Narfell, the Crown of Narfell was one of many Narfelli artifacts forgotten in the depths of the Citadel of Conjurers, located north of the Hill of Tombs.

It is unclear whether the last Nentyarch to rule Narfell died in the catacombs beneath the Citadel of Conjurers, or if the Crown was placed there after his death.

In any case, after Impilturan explorers awoke the long-slumbering fiends beneath the Rawlinswood and Forest of Lethyr, a powerful balor named Ndulu gathered a host of demons and marched directly toward the Citadel of Conjurers.

Some claim the balor was guided by the hand of Orcus, while others claim Ndulu simply sought the artifacts within to claim their power for himself.

Whatever the fiend's motivation, his ambitions were halted when the paladin Sarshel entered the Citadel and shattered the Crown of Narfell in the Year of Visions (731 DR).

The destruction of the artifact somehow broke the back of the demon army, enabling the defenders of Impiltur to prevail.

Although Sarshel gathered up all the physical pieces of the Crown, the crown-wraiths escaped, and with them went the darkness that had beset the artifact.

High priests of Ilmater, Torm, and Tyr collaborated to reforge the physical crown into a shining beacon of justice, truth, and mercy, while Ndulu corralled the crown-wraiths to forge a shadow crown, later known as the Moaning Crown of Ndulu.

The reformed Crown of Narfell has served as part of Impiltur's regalia since Sarshel was crowned in the Year of the Proud Father (732 DR).

After the royal family died out in the Year of the Fearless Peasant (926 DR), it was for a time the focus of battles between Impiltur's rival noble houses.

Eventually Soargar, Mage Royal of Impiltur, took the Crown of Narfell and other treasures of the realm to his tower in Lyrabar, to await the day that the monarchy would be restored.

After being told of its location by Soargar, Imphras I recovered the holy relic from the archmage's tower and restored it as the symbol of the monarchy.

The reformed Crown of Narfell remains in the possession of the descendants of Imphras I to this day and is currently worn by the young King Imbrar II.

Description: The reformed Crown of Narfell is an object of simple majesty.

This 1-inch-thick mithral cirlet is engraved with four symbols, one at each cardinal point: the three holy symbols of the Triad and the crossed sword and wand of Impiltur's coat of arms.

Activation: At will, once per round, the bearer of the reformed Crown of Narfell can use any one of the following effects: favor of Ilmater, glory of the martyr, hand of Torm, holy sword, mark of justice, or order's wrath.

Three times per day, the bearer of the crown can cloak himself in a holy aura effect.

Effect: It is unclear what would happen if the reformed Crown of Narfell were ever brought into contact with the Moaning Crown of Ndulu, but some religious scholars speculate that the original Crown of Narfell might be thereby forged anew.

Aura/Caster Level: Strong abjuration. CL 20th.

Weight: 5 lb.

CITY OF SPLENDORS WATERDEEP (3.5)

HORNED RING

Fashioned by Halaster, these iron rings have pairs of tiny curved horns curling out and back toward the wearer. Only eight horned rings are known to exist, and nearly all are accounted for among Halaster's ex-apprentices.

Jhesiyra Kestellharp had one in her possession, but it vanished centuries ago along with the former Magister.

At will, the wearer of a horned ring can employ greater teleport within the confines of Undermountain, unaffected by the effects of a Halaster's teleport cage.

It is not possible to teleport out of or into Undermountain using a horned ring.

Upon command, the wearer of a horned ring can cloak himself in an antimagic aura.

A horned ring provides its wearer immunity to magic missiles and also functions as a major ring of energy resistance (electricity).

Strong abjuration and conjuration; CL 18th; Weight —.

MASTER RING OF THE SCALADAR

Fashioned and worn by Trobriand the Metal Mage, this plain iron ring is capable of commanding any scaladar created by Trobriand or someone instructed in his method of constructing scaladars.

If conflicting commands are issued, a master ring of the scaladar always prevails over a ring of Trobriand.

Strong evocation; CL 17th; Weight —.

ROD OF LATHANDER

This 2-foot-long tapered rod is fashioned of gold-plated mithral.

One end of the rod flattens and widens into a half-disc with a serrated edge.

Embedded in the "sunrise" tip are four rubies, four rose-hued diamonds, and four fiery-yellow corundums.

Removing any of the jewels causes the gems to crumble into dust and renders the rod inoperable until the gem is replaced with a similar stone of at least 5,000 gp value.

The rod of Lathander was fashioned at the Spires of the Morning in the Year of Lathander's Light (1024 DR), nearly eight decades before that temple was brought within the walls of Waterdeep.

The paladin Dahaerlin of the Burning Brand commissioned the rod after the outlying village of Hespheira, situated in the shadow of Mount Sar, was shifted into the Plane of Shadow by unknown magic.

Dahaerlin and the Brotherhood of Light spent four months in the Plane of Shadow before the company returned with over half of the missing villagers.

Members of the company told a wild tale of battling a powerful shadow dracolich named Umbralax that dwelt in one of that plane's mysterious Darklands.

Dahaerlin apparently won the group's escape at the cost of his own life, for he never returned.

For over a century, the rod of Lathander occupied a place of honor above the altar of the Morninglord at the Spires of the Morning.

Then, in the Year of the Shadowkin Return (1136 DR), the relic's unique powers were required again.

Reports trickled back to Waterdeep suggesting that the ruined village of Hespheira had returned wrapped in a cloying cloud of blackness, and that shadowy wraith-like creatures were attacking the surrounding region.

In response, knights of the Order of the Aster sallied forth to combat this new menace, bathed in the protective light of the rod of Lathander.

A series of quick battlefield successes drew the company deep into the shadowed village, where Umbralax lay in wait.

After a fierce battle in which over half of the knights lost their lives, Umbralax and the wraiths were destroyed (although the dracolich's phylactery was never found) thanks to the protective magic of the rod.

Returned to its place of honor, the rod of Lathander remained above the altar of the Spire of the Morning until the Night of Temple Fires, in the Year of the Saddle (1345 DR).

Thieves stole the rod and several other Lathanderite relics as Waterdeep's oldest temple burned, prompting some to conclude that the fires had been deliberately set as a distraction.

Although no word of the rod's fate has ever come to light in the years since its theft, reports persist of a subterranean sun in the depths of Undermountain, shining from the roof of a large natural cavern.

Such reports have prompted many followers of the Morninglord to plumb the depths of Halaster's Halls, but without success.

The rod of Lathander glows with the power of a 9th-level heightened daylight spell from the minute the sun rises to the minute the sun sets.

If taken to a location where the sun does not shine (indoors, underground, or on a sunless plane), the rod adheres to the diurnal cycle of the last place it was in where the sun regularly rose and set.

If taken to another location where a different sun shines (another plane or world, for example), the rod automatically adjusts to the new diurnal cycle, including adjustments for changes in latitude and longitude.

The rod of Lathander has one additional power.

For as long as the rod shines, all creatures within the 60-foot radius of the daylight spell are protected by a death ward effect.

Strong evocation; CL 17th; Weight 5 lb.

DRACONOMICON (3.5)

AMULET OF SUPREMACY

This stunning piece of jewelry is virtually priceless based simply on its artistic quality and the value of precious metal and gemstones it contains, but its magical abilities are even more valuable to a dragon.

When worn by a dragon, an amulet of supremacy confers the benefits of the Maximize Breath feat on the dragon's breath weapon, and applies the effects of the Maximize Spell feat to the dragon's spells and spell-like abilities.

These benefits come at no cost to the dragon: It need not wait extra rounds between uses of its breath weapon, and its maximized spells do not use higher-level spell slots.

An amulet of supremacy bestows two negative levels on any nondragon that dares to put it on.

In addition, when a nondragon first dons the amulet, it immediately targets the offender with a disintegrate effect (caster level 20th, Fortitude DC 19 partial).

Strong (no school); CL 17th.

DRACO MYSTERE

This tome, known as "Mysteries of the Dragon" in Common, is a legendary book of lore regarding dragonkind.

Some claim it was written by the first high priest of the Cult of Ashardalon, but others call this assertion nothing but an idle boast, believing the book to be far older than that.

Over the centuries, it has been studied, copied, lost, and found again by dozens if not hundreds of readers.

Many lesser versions of this book are known to exist, but none share its power.

Reading Draco Mystere takes thirty consecutive 8-hour days of study.

If the reader misses even a single day during this time, he must start again from the beginning.

Completion of the study gives the reader a +5 inherent bonus on Knowledge (arcana) checks regarding dragons.

The reader also gains low-light vision (if the character already has low-light vision, the effect is increased by one multiple, such as from double to triple) and immunity to magic sleep and paralysis effects.

In addition, a sorcerer who reads Draco Mystere gains 1 point of Charisma and sufficient XP to place him halfway into the next experience level (which must be used to increase his sorcerer level).

Other characters who peruse the book do not receive these benefits.

Any individual can only receive the tome's benefits once in a lifetime.

Strong transmutation; CL 19th; Weight 3 lb.

CHASSABRA'S PENDANT

On a mountaintop somewhere in the North, Tostyn Alaerthmaugh recovered Chassabra's pendant from the skeletal remains of its long-dead creator, after whom it was named.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about Chassabra's pendant by making successful Knowledge (arcana) or Knowledge (history) checks.

DC 20: The sorceress Chassabra ruled over a small section of the Mlebryn Lands along the River Dessarin in the third century Dalereckoning.

DC 25: Known as the "Lady of Swirling Stones", Chassabra abandoned her tower and lands after transforming herself into a half-amethyst dragon.

DC 30: Chassabra traced her ancestry back to Felrivenser, a great amethyst wyrm known to the wizards of ancient Netheril as "Gembright".

She is thought to have located Felrivenser's long-lost hoard and hidden it in an extradimensional space reachable by way of a portal keyed to her pendant.

Description: This piece of jewelry appears to be a delicate diamond-shaped piece of polished copper, engraved with a design of three closed, long-lashed human eyes set in a triangle (one eye below two side-by-side eyes), hung around a small-linked necklace chain.

The spells laid on the pendant render it terrifically strong and nonmetallic (such that it is not affected by magnetism or spells that work on metal, and no longer conducts heat or electricity) and make it automatically alter to fit a wearer. It is as hard as adamantine (hardness 20, 5 hp).

Effect: When donned, Chassabra's pendant mentally communicates its powers to its wearer (it is a self-identifying item), who can activate them by silent force of will alone (a standard action that provokes attacks of opportunity).

The exceptions to this are the three automatic, always-functioning powers of the pendant, which affect only the wearer: see invisibility, feather fall, and immunity to magic missiles.

The pendant has the following additional powers. Only one of these effects can be active at a time; activating a different one deactivates the one that had been in effect.

4/day—faerie fire (When the user activates this power, creatures and objects within a T-foot radius centered on the user, but not the user himself, become outlined with faerie fire.)

The effect lasts 10 minutes; otherwise, the power works just like the faerie fire spell).

3/day—dimension door, disguise self.

1/day—regenerate (as the spell, except all missing tissue is regenerated in a single round whether or not the severed body parts are present and attached).

Strong abjuration, conjuration, divination, evocation, transmutation; CL 15th; Weight 1 lb.

DIAMOND SCEPTER OF CHOMYLLA

The diamond scepter of Chomylla is one of at least three long-lost lore scepters of Uvarean.

The diamond scepter was created by Chomylla centuries before the destruction of the Lorelands (as the elf realm of Uvarean in the west central forest was known) by a falling star.

Chomylla was among the few survivors, thanks to her visit to the coronal.

After the calamity, Chomylla gave the scepter to the coronal for safekeeping, so she could return home to see what could be salvaged.

At this point, the scepter disappeared from record, having been lost or stolen.

The scepter was not found until the Year of the Staff (1366 DR), when Dretchroyaster uncovered it in the Monarch's Fall Glade.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about the diamond scepter of Chomylla by making successful Knowledge (arcana) or Knowledge (history) checks.

DC 20: These scepters were first created by the elves of the Uvarean as keys to access secret troves of knowledge.

DC 30: Chomylla, one of the last remaining elves of the Uvarean, created this scepter, but it was lost some time after the destruction of her realm.

Description: This 6-foot-long scepter is carved from a single enormous crystal, with a perfect transparent globe at its head.

Effect: The scepter acts as a +3/+3 quarterstaff.

The wielder can also use the following effects.

At will—quicken detect magic.

3/day—identify, legend lore, tongues.

1/day—maze.

The primary function of the scepter is to unlock the secrets of the libraries of Uvarean, secret elf stores of knowledge in the Dalelands.

When the wielder of the scepter is in the presence of an artifact or location associated with the Uvarean, he feels a faint tingling.

By concentrating on a specific object or location and making a successful Knowledge check (of a DC appropriate to the magnitude of the knowledge), the wielder can learn basic information about that topic.

Strong conjuration, divination, and illusion; CL 15th.

HELM OF SUPREME WIZARDRY

Helms of supreme wizardry are powerful Netherese artifacts capable of transforming a minor wizard into a mage of great power, albeit at considerable personal cost.

Lore: Characters can gain the following pieces of information about helms of supreme wizardry by making successful Knowledge (arcana) or Knowledge (history) checks.

DC 20: Helms of supreme wizardry date back to the Golden Age of Netheril.

They allow the bearer to recapture the power of the great Netherese arcanists.

DC 25: Helms of supreme wizardry exact a terrible price from those who abuse their powers, leaving some who rely on them overmuch babbling fools incapable of preparing spells.

DC 35: Helms of supreme wizardry were the invention of the legendary Terraseer.

He reportedly bequeathed such treasures to up-and-coming arcanists as a way to measure their wisdom and restraint. Curiously, most “successful” bearers of the helms have eventually vanished under mysterious circumstances, suggesting that those who pass the Terraseer’s “test” are later recruited for some special purpose.

Description: This ornate, fluted helm is made of steel plated with a silver alloy and alters to fit the head of any creature that dons it.

Effect: A helm of supreme wizardry allows any wearer already able to cast wizard spells to prepare and cast two additional spells of each level from 6th through 9th (8 spells per day total).

These are treated as bonus spell slots (as if from a very high Intelligence) and therefore apply only to casters already capable of casting spells of those levels (though such a caster can still use the slots to prepare lower-level spells or spells altered by metamagic feats).

Casting a spell from one of these bonus slots deals 1d6+1 points of damage to the wearer immediately upon the completion of the spell.

If the helm is removed, any bonus spells prepared while it was worn are immediately lost.

The helm has several drawbacks.

First, if all the extra spells gained while the helm is worn are not cast within 12 hours of their preparation, the wearer loses all prepared wizard spells at the end of that period (including the bonus spells from the helm and any other wizard spells the wearer had prepared normally).

The spell slots for those lost spells are considered expended (the wearer must rest again to reuse the spell slots).

Only the bonus spell slots used by the wearer need to be expended to prevent this from happening.

For example, a 12th-level wizard wearing a helm of supreme wizardry has access only to spell slots of 6th level and lower. She can use only the two bonus 6th-level spell slots from the helm, and if she casts both of those within 12 hours of preparing them, then this drawback is not triggered.

(In other words, she is not penalized for not being able to use the higher-level bonus spell slots granted by the helm).

The second drawback is that if the helm is ever used (not merely worn, but actually used to prepare spells in its bonus slots) by the same wearer twice in a tenday, it deals 1 point of Intelligence drain to the wearer, and that attempt to use the extra slots fails.

The third drawback is that if the helm is ever used twice in a single 30-day period by the same wearer to prepare spells of the same school, the preparation succeeds, but the wearer immediately takes 1 point of Intelligence drain and permanently loses 1 hit point.

Despite this great price, as long as it is worn, the helm allows the wearer to cast these bonus spells, even if the Intelligence loss means the wearer could not normally cast spells of that level anymore.

For example, if the wearer uses the helm to prepare antimagic field and chain lightning, then 28 days later uses the helm to prepare greater dispel magic (the same school as antimagic field), the wearer would incur those losses.

If she persisted in her folly and used the helm to prepare Bigby’s forceful hand (the same school as chain lightning) she would experience the losses again.

If her Intelligence was originally 16, she would now be reduced to Intelligence 14, normally not a high enough score to cast greater dispel magic or Bigby’s forceful hand.

However, the power of the helm allows her to still cast those spells (but not any other spells of 5th or 6th level that were prepared normally).

Strong transmutation; CL 20th; Weight 3 lb.

DROW OF THE UNDERDARK (3.5)

CLOAK OF THE CONSORT

Price: n/a

Body Slot: Shoulders

Caster Level: 21st

Aura: Overwhelming; (DC 25) abjuration

Activation: Swift (command)

Weight: 1 lb.

This light, very fine gray cape shimmers in the light.

A cloak of the consort grants a +6 deflection bonus to Armor Class and a +4 resistance bonus on all saving throws.

In addition, the cloak negates any weakness to light that you might have.

Finally, you can gain concealment for 10 rounds, at will.

In exchange for these benefits, you take a –4 penalty to all saving throws against spells and spell-like effects cast by female drow.

Love: As they fled the surface, the dark elves looked to the matriarchs for guidance—for although it was their corruption and obeisance to the Spider Queen that led to the drow’s exile from their homeland, any chance they had of surviving in the Underdark lay with the priestesses.

(Knowledge [history] DC 20).

But before the drow would entrust their fates to the matriarchs once more, they demanded a concession: some way to restore the balance between the males and the females of the species.

The priestesses agreed, and each elevated one male to serve as a companion and advisor.

(Knowledge [history] DC 25).

To secure the pact, the matriarchs spun cloaks of fine spider silk and imbued them with their blood and Lolth’s dark will.

(Knowledge [history] DC 30).

They crafted each cloak to protect their consorts, guarding each privileged male against ambitious upstarts who would usurp their position.

(Knowledge [history] DC 32).

But the matriarchs were clever, and they infused a small curse into each cloak.

Those who wore the cloaks would be vulnerable to the magic of the priestesses.

And so, from the start, the drow consorts were nothing more than the puppets and figureheads they remain to this day.

(Knowledge [history] DC 35).

Adventure Hook: Since the exile, the process for constructing these cloaks has been lost, enhancing both the prestige value and the monetary value of those that remain.

When one is discovered, the various houses immediately lay claim to it, causing no shortage of conflict.

A cloak of the consort might change hands many times: One might be stolen from one house, only to be stolen back again within hours.

The infighting ends only when one house manages to secure a cloak and bestow it onto a consort powerful enough to keep it.

A matriarch might dispatch drow raiding parties to recover a cloak from another house, requiring them to slip in, murder the consort, and bring the cloak back.

And, until a suitable consort can be found, that party might also be required to protect the cloak from countless enemies.

Characters from the surface might happen upon one of these cloaks after encountering a particularly powerful group of drow led by a consort.

Soon after the PCs take possession of the cloak, word of its loss spreads throughout the city, and the various houses work to recover it.

Some might use a direct approach, harrying the PCs throughout the Underdark, and others might deal peacefully, offering to exchange it for some other potent (and likely cursed) item.

EGG OF LOLTH

Price: n/a

Body Slot: —

Caster Level: 23rd

Aura: Overwhelming; (DC 26) conjuration

Activation: See text

Weight: 10 lb.

This fist-sized egg is made of platinum.

It has no markings and is completely smooth.

When touched, it vibrates slightly, and you hear the faint sounds of scratching coming from within.

The egg of Lolth is a potent artifact with a long history.

Originally nothing more than a cursed item that compelled its wielder to fling himself through a gate to the Abyss, its long exposure to the chaotic energies of the Demonweb Pits has transformed it into the deadly device it is today.

Aside from its relatively minor value (60 gp), the egg appears to have no function.

It cannot be opened, and has no hinges or seams.

It can be dented, but any blemishes vanish after 1d4 hours.

The only way to activate the item is to cast a remove curse spell on it, at which point the egg vanishes; in its place appears a shuddering, tumescent bag of spider silk.

On the following round, the bag tears itself open, spilling out 1d10 fiendish spider swarms and one fiendish Colossal monstrous spider.

For the next 10 rounds, 1d4 fiendish Large monstrous spiders follow, after which the bag of spidersilk seals shut and vanishes, leaving the platinum egg spinning in its place.

Creatures called by the egg appear in the closest available space to the artifact and can act immediately, attacking the closest nondrow creature as soon as they appear.

They fight until destroyed, pursuing fleeing characters relentlessly.

While the egg is activated, any creature that touches the bag is automatically transported to the Demonweb Pits.

In addition, the artifact can serve as the focus component for plane shift spells cast to travel to the Abyss.

Love: Ages ago, a group of bold heroes—having fought through hordes of giants—uncovered a terrifying plot to sow war and discord throughout the world.

Eclavdra, a high priestess and an influential leader in the drow city of Erelhei-Cinlu, was behind these machinations. (Knowledge [history] DC 20).

The adventurers swept through the Underdark, battled the kuo-toa in their profane warren, and took the fight to the vault of the drow itself.

After all this effort, their job was not yet finished.

They discovered a strange item that enabled them to leave the Material Plane and take the fight to the Spider Queen herself in the Abyss.

(Knowledge [history] DC 25).

It's not clear what happened to these adventurers, but the egg eventually found its way back to the drow, and has changed hands many times since.

(Knowledge [history] DC 30).

Adventure Hook: The egg of Lolth is an unholy relic, and one that is closely guarded by the Spider Queen's most powerful priestesses.

Given the forces that protect it, only a few know if its existence and fewer still have laid eyes upon it.

When members of a rival city learn of the egg's existence and the significance of the object, they are unwilling to let Erelhei-Cinlu retain the vile thing, and so the matriarchs send a team of infiltrators to recover it.

The theft plunges both cities into war, with each side expending their slave-warriors by the hundreds to recover the profane object.

As the conflict escalates, the characters find themselves drawn into the struggle: perhaps to defend a svirfneblin enclave, or as mercenaries in service to a drow noble house.

The more the characters invest themselves in the struggle, the more it becomes clear that the force pulling the strings is Lolth herself, and that the only way to restore stability between the two cities is to either destroy the artifact or send it back to the Abyss where it belongs.

DUNGEON MASTER'S GUIDE 3.0 (3.0)

BOOK OF EXALTED DEEDS

This holy book is sacred to divine spellcasters of good alignment (LG, NG, CG).

Study of the work requires one week, but upon completion the good spellcaster gains a +1 inherent bonus to Wisdom and experience points sufficient to place him halfway into the next level of experience.

Divine spellcasters neither good nor evil (LN, N, CN) lose 2d6×1,000 experience points for perusing the work.

Evil divine spellcasters (LE, NE, CE) lose twice that amount.

Furthermore, they have to atone (see the atonement spell) in order to gain further experience.

Nonspellcasters who handle or read the book are unaffected.

Arcane spellcasters who read it have 1 point of Intelligence permanently drained and lose 1d6×1,000 experience points unless they make a Will save (DC 15).

Except as indicated above, the writing in a book of exalted deeds can't be distinguished from any other magic book, libram, tome, or so on until perused.

Once read, the book vanishes, never to be seen again, nor can the same character ever benefit from reading a similar tome a second time.

Caster Level: 19th; Weight: 3 lb.

BOOK OF INFINITE SPELLS

This work bestows upon any character of any class the ability to use the spells within its pages.

However, upon first reading the work, any character not already able to use spells gains one negative level for as long as the book is in her possession or while she uses its power.

The book of infinite spells contains 1d8+22 pages.

The nature of each page is determined by die roll:

d%	Page Contents
01-30	Blank page
31-60	Divine spell
61-100	Arcane spell

If a spell is written on a page, determine the spell by using the tables for determining major scroll spells (the third column on Table 8–23: Scroll Spell Levels, along with Table 8–24: Arcane Spell Scrolls and Table 8–25: Divine Spell Scrolls).

Once a page is turned, it can never be flipped back—paging through a book of infinite spells is a one-way trip.

If the book is closed, it always opens again to the page it was on before the book was closed.

When the last page is turned, the book vanishes.

Once per day the owner of the book can cast the spell to which the book is opened.

If that spell happens to be one that is on the character's class spell list, she can cast it up to four times per day.

The pages cannot be ripped out without destroying the book.

Similarly, the spells cannot be cast as scroll spells, nor can they be copied into a spellbook—their magic is bound up permanently within the book itself.

The owner of the book need not have the book on her person in order to use its power.

The book can be stored in a place of safety while the owner is adventuring and still allow its owner to cast spells by means of its power.

Each time a spell is cast, there is a chance that the energy connected with its use causes the page to magically turn despite all precautions.

The owner knows this and may even benefit from the turning by gaining access to a new spell.

The chance of a page turning is as follows:

Condition	Chance of Page Turning
Spellcaster employing spells usable by own class and/or level	10%
Spellcaster using spells foreign to own class and/or level	20%
Nonspellcaster using divine spell	25%
Nonspellcaster using arcane spell	30%

Treat each spell use as if a scroll were being employed, for purposes of determining casting time, spell failure, and so on.

Caster Level: 18th; Weight: 3 lb.

BOOK OF VILE DARKNESS

This is a work of ineffable evil—meat and drink to divine spellcasters of that alignment (LE, NE, CE).

To fully consume the contents requires one week of study.

Once this has been accomplished, the evil spellcaster gains a +1 inherent bonus to Wisdom and enough experience points to place him halfway into the next experience level.

Divine spellcasters neither good nor evil (LN, N, CN) who read the book either lose 2d6×1,000 XP (a 01–50 result on d%) or become evil without benefit from the book (51–100).

Good divine spellcasters (LG, NG, CG) perusing the pages of the book of vile darkness have to make a Fortitude save (DC 16) or die.

If they do not die, they must succeed on a Will save (DC 15) or become permanently insane.

In the latter event, even if the save is successful, the character loses 20,000 experience points, minus 1,000 for each point of Wisdom he has.

(This calculation cannot result in an XP gain).

Other characters of good alignment take 5d6 points of damage from just handling the tome.

If such a character looks inside, there is an 80% chance that an evil outsider attacks the character that night.

LN, N, & CN aligned characters take 5d4 points of damage from handling the book, and reading its pages causes them to become evil (Will negates DC 13).

Such converts immediately seek out an evil cleric to confirm their new alignment (with an atonement spell).

Caster Level: 19th; Weight: 3 lb.

DECK OF MANY THINGS

A deck of many things (both beneficial and baneful) is usually found in a box or leather pouch.

Each deck contains a number of cards or plaques made of ivory or vellum.

Each is engraved with glyphs, characters, and sigils.

As soon as one of these cards is drawn from the pack, its magic is bestowed upon the person who drew it, for better or worse.

The character with a deck of many things who wishes to draw a card must announce how many cards she will draw before she begins.

Cards must be drawn within 1 hour of each other, and a character can never again draw from this deck any more cards than she has announced.

If the character does not willingly draw her allotted number (or if she is somehow prevented from doing so), the cards flip out of the deck on their own.

Exception: If a jester is drawn, the possessor of the deck may elect to draw two additional cards. Each time a card is taken from the deck, it is replaced (making it possible to draw the same card twice) unless the draw is a jester or fool, in which case the card is discarded from the pack.

A deck of many things contains 22 cards.

To simulate the magic cards, you may want to use tarot cards, as indicated by the second column in the accompanying table.

If no tarot deck is available, substitute ordinary playing cards instead, as indicated by the third column.

Balance: As in “weighed in the balance and found wanting”, the character must change to a radically different alignment.

If the character fails to act according to the new alignment, she gains a negative level.

Comet: The character must single-handedly defeat the next hostile monster or monsters encountered, or the benefit is lost.

If successful, the character moves to the midpoint of the next experience level.

Donjon: This signifies imprisonment—either by the imprisonment spell or by some powerful being, at the DM’s option.

All gear and spells are stripped from the victim in any case. Whether these items are recoverable is, likewise, up to the DM.

Draw no more cards.

Euryale: The medusa-like visage of this card brings a curse that only the Fates card or a deific being can remove.

The  $-1$  penalty to all saving throws is otherwise permanent.

Fates: This card enables the character to avoid even an instantaneous occurrence if so desired, for the fabric of reality is unraveled and respun.

Note that it does not enable something to happen.

It can only stop something from happening or reverse a past occurrence.

The reversal is only for the character who drew the card; other party members may have to endure the confrontation.

Flames: Hot anger, jealousy, and envy are but a few of the possible motivational forces for the enmity.

The enmity of the outsider can’t be ended until one of the parties has been slain.

Determine the outsider randomly, and assume that it attacks the character (or plagues her life in some way) within  $1d20$  days.

Fool: The payment of XP and the redraw are mandatory!

This card is always discarded when drawn, unlike all others except the jester.

Gem: This card indicates wealth.

The jewelry is all gold set with gems, each piece worth 2,000 gp each, the gems all of 1,000 gp value each.

Idiot: This card causes the loss of  $1d4+1$  points of Intelligence immediately.

The additional draw is optional.

Jester: This card is always discarded when drawn, unlike all others except the fool.

The redraws are optional.

Key: The magic weapon granted must be one usable by the character; use the weapon tables beginning with Table 8-11: Weapon Type Determination until a useful item is awarded.

It suddenly appears out of nowhere in the character’s hand. Knight: The fighter appears out of nowhere and serves loyally until death.

He or she is a magic construct (not a real person) but appears to be of the same race (or kind) and gender as the character.

He or she is equipped with the starting fighter package found in the Player’s Handbook (page 37).

Moon: This is sometimes represented by a moonstone gem with the appropriate number of wishes shown as gleams therein, sometimes by a moon with its phase indicating the number of wishes (full = four; gibbous = three; half = two; quarter = one).

These wishes are the same as those granted by the 9th-level wizard spell and must be used in a number of minutes equal to the number received.

Rogue: When this card is drawn, one of the character’s NPC friends (preferably a cohort) is totally alienated and forever after hostile.

If the character has no cohorts, the enmity of some powerful personage (or community, or religious order) can be substituted.

The hatred is secret until the time is ripe for it to be revealed with devastating effect.

Ruin: As implied, when this card is drawn every bit of money (including all gems, jewelry, treasure, and art objects) is lost (disintegrated).

All land owned is struck by blight and forever ruined, buildings collapse into dust, etc.

Skull: A minor death appears.

Treat this minor death as an unturnable spectre with a ghost touch scythe that never misses and deals  $2d8$  points of damage.

The character must fight it alone—if others help, they get minor deaths to fight as well.

If the character is slain, she is slain forever and cannot be revived, even with a wish or a miracle.

Star.

The 2 points are added to any ability the character chooses. They cannot be divided among two abilities.

Sun: Roll for a medium wondrous item (Table 8-29: Medium Wondrous Items) until a useful item is indicated. The XP granted are immediately available.

Talons: When this card is drawn, every magic item owned or possessed by the character is instantly and irrevocably gone (disintegrated).

Throne: The character becomes a true leader in people’s eyes.

The castle gained appears in any open area she wishes (but the decision where to place it must be made immediately).

Vizier: This card empowers the character drawing it with the one-time ability to call upon supernatural wisdom to solve any single problem or answer fully any question upon her request.

Whether the information gained can be successfully acted upon is another question entirely.

The Void: This black card spells instant disaster.

The character’s body continues to function, as though in a coma, but her psyche is trapped in a prison somewhere—in an object on a far plane or planet, possibly in the possession of an outsider.

A wish or a miracle does not bring the character back, instead merely revealing the plane of entrapment.

Draw no more cards.

Caster Level: 20th; Weight: —.

DECK OF MANY THINGS

Plaque	Tarot Card	Playing Card	Effect
Balance	XI. Justice	Two of spades	Change alignment instantly.
Comet	Two of swords	Two of diamonds	Defeat the next monster you meet to gain one level.
Donjon	Four of swords	Ace of spaces	You are imprisoned (see above).
Euryale	Ten of swords	Queen of spades	-1 penalty to all saving throws henceforth.
The Fates	Three of cups	Ace of hearts	Avoid any situation you choose . . . once.
Flames	XV. The Devil	Queen of clubs	Enmity between you and an outsider.
Fool	0. The Fool	Joker (with trademark)	Lose 10,000 experience points and you must draw again.
Gem	Seven of cups	Two of hearts	Gain your choice of twenty-five pieces of jewelry or fifty gems.
Idiot	1. The Juggler	Ace of clubs	Lose Intelligence (permanent drain). You may draw again.
Jester	XII. The Hanged Man	joker (without trademark)	Gain 10,000 XP or two more draws from the deck.
Key	V. The Hierophant	Queen of hearts	Gain a major magic weapon.
Knight	Page of swords	Jack of hearts	Gain the service of a 4th-level fighter.
Moon	XVIII. The Moon	Queen of diamonds	You are granted 1d4 wishes.
Rogue	Five of swords	Jack of spades	One of your friends turns against you.
Ruin	XVI. The Tower	King of spades	Immediately lose all wealth and real property.
Skull	XIII. Death	Jack of clubs	Defeat Death or be forever destroyed.
Star	XVII. The Star	Jack of diamonds	Immediately gain a +2 inherent bonus to one ability.
Sun	XIX. The Sun	King of diamonds	Gain beneficial medium wondrous item and 20,000 XP.
Talons	Queen of pentacles	Two of clubs	All magic items you possess disappear permanently.
Throne	Four of staves	King of hearts	Gain 6 ranks in Diplomacy plus a small keep.
Vizier	IX. The Hermit	Ace of diamonds	Know the answer to your next dilemma.
The Void	Eight of swords	King of clubs	Body functions, but soul is trapped elsewhere

HAMMER OF THUNDERBOLTS

This appears to be an oversized, extra-heavy warhammer. A character smaller than Large finds it too unbalanced to wield properly in combat (-2 penalty to attack).

However, a character of sufficient size finds that the hammer functions with a +3 enhancement bonus and deals double damage on any hit.

If the wielder (of any size) wears a belt of giant strength and gauntlets of ogre power and he knows that the hammer is a hammer of thunderbolts (not just a +3 warhammer), the weapon can be used to full effect: When swung or hurled, it gains a total +5 enhancement bonus, deals double damage, allows all girdle and gauntlet bonuses to stack (only when using this weapon), and strikes dead any giant upon whom it scores a hit (Fortitude save DC 16 to survive).

When hurled, on a successful hit the hammer emits a great noise, like a clap of thunder, stunning all creatures within 90 feet for 1 round (Fortitude save DC 12 to resist).

The hammer's throwing range is 180 feet, and its range increment is 30 feet.

Caster Level: 20th.

PHILOSOPHER'S STONE

This rare and magic substance appears to be an ordinary, sooty piece of blackish rock.

If the stone is broken open, a cavity is revealed at the stone's heart.

This cavity is lined with a magical quicksilver that enables any wizard to transmute base metals (iron and lead) into silver and gold.

A single philosopher's stone can turn from 500 to 5,000 pounds of iron into silver, or from 100 to 1,000 pounds of lead into gold.

However, the magical quicksilver becomes unstable once the stone is opened and sublimates within 24 hours, so all transmutations must take place within that period.

The quicksilver found in the center of the stone may also be put to another use.

If mixed with any cure potion, it creates a special potion of life that acts as a true resurrection for any dead body it is sprinkled upon.

Caster Level: 20th; Weight: 3 lb.

SPHERE OF ANNIHILATION

A sphere of annihilation is a globe of absolute blackness, a ball of nothingness 2 feet in diameter.

A sphere is actually a hole in the continuity of the multiverse.

Any matter that comes in contact with a sphere is instantly sucked into the void, gone, and utterly destroyed.

Only the direct intervention of a deity can restore an annihilated character.

A sphere of annihilation is static, resting in some spot as if it were a normal hole.

It can be caused to move, however, by mental effort.

The brain waves of the individual concentrating on moving it bend spatial fabrics, causing the hole to slide.

The range of this control is 40 feet initially, then 40 feet +10 feet per character level once control is established.

Control is based on the character's Intelligence and level of experience.

(The higher his level, the greater his mental discipline).

The character adds his Intelligence bonus and character level and then applies the total to a 1d20 roll.

To control the sphere, the DC is 30.

The sphere's speed is 10 feet per round +1 foot for every point by which the control check result exceeds 30.

Any attempt to control the sphere causes it to move, but if control is not established, the sphere slides toward the character attempting to move it.

It continues to move in the direction he wills it to (or toward the character, if the attempt failed) for 1d4 rounds or for as long as the character is within 30 feet, whichever is greater.

Control must be checked each round.

If two or more wizards vie for control of a sphere of annihilation, the rolls are opposed.

If none are successful, the sphere slips toward the one who rolled lowest.

Should a gate spell be cast upon a sphere of annihilation, there is a 50% chance (a 01–50 result on d%) that the spell destroys it, a 35% chance (51–85) that the spell does nothing, and a 15% chance (86–100) that a gap is torn in the spatial fabric, catapulting everything within a 180-foot radius into another plane.

If a rod of cancellation touches a sphere, they negate each other in a tremendous explosion.

Everything within a 60-foot radius takes 2d6×10 points of damage.

Dispel magic and Mordenkamen's disjunction have no effect on the sphere.

See also talisman of the sphere (page 227).

Caster Level: 20th; Weight: —.

STAFF OF THE MAGI

A long wooden staff, shod in iron and inscribed with sigils and runes of all types, this potent artifact contains many spell powers and other functions.

Some of its powers drain charges, while others don't.

The following powers do not drain charges:

- detect magic
- enlarge
- hold portal
- light
- mage armor
- mage hand

The following powers drain 1 charge per usage:

- dispel magic
- fireball (10d6 points of damage, DC 13)
- ice storm
- invisibility
- knock
- lightning bolt (10d6 points of damage, DC 13)
- passwall
- pyrotechnics
- wall of fire
- web

These powers drain 2 charges per usage.

- monster summoning IX
- plane shift
- telekinesis (400 pounds maximum weight)
- whirlwind

The staff of the magi gives the wielder spell resistance 23.

If this is willingly lowered, however, the staff can also be used to absorb arcane spell energy directed at its wielder exactly like a rod of absorption (page 196).

The staff uses spell levels as charges, not as spell energy usable by a spellcaster.

If the staff absorbs spell levels beyond its charge limit (50), it explodes as if a retributive strike had been made (see below).

Note that the wielder has no idea how many spell levels are cast at her, for the staff does not communicate this knowledge as a rod of absorption does.

Absorbing spells is risky, but absorption is the only way this staff can be recharged.

Retributive Strike: A staff of the magi can be broken for a retributive strike.

Such an act must be purposeful and declared by the wielder.

All charges in the staff are released in a 30-foot spread.

All within 10 feet of the broken staff take hit points of damage equal to 8 times the number of charges in the staff, those between 11 feet and 20 feet away take points equal to 6 times the number of charges, and those 21 feet to 30 feet distant take 4 times the number of charges.

Successful Reflex saving throws (DC 17) reduce damage by half.

The character breaking the staff has a 50% chance (a 01–50 result on d%) of traveling to another plane of existence, but if she does not (51–100), the explosive release of spell energy destroys her.

Only specific items, including the staff of the magi and the staff of power (page 205), are capable of a retributive strike.

Caster Level: 20th; Weight: 5 lb.

TALISMAN OF PURE GOOD

A good (LG, NG, CG) divine spellcaster who possesses this item can cause a flaming crack to open at the feet of an evil (LE, NE, CE) divine spellcaster who is up to 100 feet away.

The intended victim is swallowed up forever and sent hurtling to the center of the earth.

The wielder of the talisman must be good, and if he is not exceptionally pure in thought and deed (DM's discretion), the evil character gains a Reflex saving throw (DC 19) to leap away from the crack.

Obviously, the target must be standing on solid ground for this item to function.

(In the air, in a high tower, or on a ship are all places of safety against this otherwise potent item).

A talisman of pure good has 7 charges.

If a neutral (LN, N, CN) divine spellcaster touches one of these stones, he takes 6d6 points of damage.

If an evil divine spellcaster touches one, he takes 8d6 points of damage.

All other characters are unaffected by the device.

Caster Level: 18th; Weight: —.

TALISMAN OF ULTIMATE EVIL

An evil (LE, NE, CE) divine spellcaster who possesses this item can cause a flaming crack to open at the feet of a good (LG, NG, CG) divine spellcaster who is up to 100 feet away.

The intended victim is swallowed up forever and sent hurtling to the center of the earth.

The wielder of the talisman must be evil, and if she is not exceptionally foul and perverse in the sights of her evil deity (DM's discretion), the good character gains a Reflex saving throw (DC 19) to leap away from the crack.

Obviously, the target must be standing on solid ground for this item to function.

(In the air, in a high tower, or on a ship are all places of safety against this otherwise potent item).

A talisman of ultimate evil has 6 charges.

If a neutral (LN, N, CN) divine spellcaster touches one of these stones, she takes 6d6 points of damage.

If a good divine spellcaster touches one, she takes 8d6 points of damage.

All other characters are unaffected by the device.

Caster Level: 18th; Weight: —.

TALISMAN OF ZAGY

A talisman of this sort appears the same as a stone of controlling earth elementals.

Its powers are quite different, however, and dependent on the Charisma of the individual holding the talisman.

Whenever a character touches a talisman of Zagy, he must make a Charisma check (DC 15).

If he fails, the device acts as a stone of weight (see page 235). Discarding or destroying it results in 5d6 points of damage to the character and the disappearance of the talisman.

If he succeeds, the talisman remains with the character for 5d6 hours, or until a wish is made with it, whichever comes first.

It then disappears.

If he rolls a natural 20, the character finds it impossible to be rid of the talisman for as many months as he has points of Charisma.

In addition, the artifact grants him one wish for every 6 points of the character's Charisma.

It also grows warm and throbs whenever its possessor comes within 20 feet of a mechanical or magic trap.

(If the talisman is not held, its warning heat and pulses are of no avail).

Regardless of which reaction results, the talisman disappears when its time period expires, leaving behind a 10,000 gp diamond in its stead.

Caster Level: 20th; Weight: 1 lb.

DUNGEON MASTER'S GUIDE 1 3.5 (3.5)

BOOK OF EXALTED DEEDS

This holy book is sacred to divine spellcasters of good alignment (LG, NG, CG).

Study of the work requires one week, but upon completion a good spellcaster gains a +1 inherent bonus to Wisdom and one experience level—receiving enough XP to put the character's XP total midway between the minimum needed for his new (higher) level and the minimum needed for the level beyond that.

Divine spellcasters neither good nor evil (LN, N, CN) lose 2d6×1,000 XP for perusing the work.

Evil divine spellcasters (LE, NE, CE) lose twice that amount.

In addition, they have to atone (see the atonement spell) in order to gain further experience.

Nonspellcasters who handle or read the book are unaffected.

Arcane spellcasters who read it take 1 point of permanent Intelligence drain and lose 1d6×1,000 XP unless they make a DC 15 Will save.

Except as indicated above, the writing in a book of exalted deeds can't be distinguished from any other magic book, libram, tome, or so on until perused.

Once read, the book vanishes, and the same character can never benefit from reading another book of exalted deeds.

Strong evocation [good]; CL 19th; Weight 3 lb.

BOOK OF INFINITE SPELLS

This work bestows upon any character of any class the ability to use the spells within its pages.

However, any character not already able to use spells gains one negative level for as long as the book is in her possession or while she uses its power.

A book of infinite spells contains 1d8+22 pages.

The nature of each page is determined by a dice roll: 01–50, arcane spell; 51–100, divine spell.

Determine the exact spell by using the tables for determining major scroll spells (the third column on Table 7–22: Scroll Spell Levels, along with Table 7–23: Arcane Spell Scrolls and Table 7–24: Divine Spell Scrolls).

Once a page is turned, it can never be flipped back—paging through a book of infinite spells is a one-way trip.

If the book is closed, it always opens again to the page it was on before the book was closed.

When the last page is turned, the book vanishes.

Once per day the owner of the book can cast the spell to which the book is opened.

If that spell happens to be one that is on the character's class spell list, she can cast it up to four times per day.

The pages cannot be ripped out without destroying the book.

Similarly, the spells cannot be cast as scroll spells, nor can they be copied into a spellbook—their magic is bound up permanently within the book itself.

The owner of the book need not have the book on her person in order to use its power.

The book can be stored in a place of safety while the owner is adventuring and still allow its owner to cast spells by means of its power.

Each time a spell is cast, there is a chance that the energy connected with its use causes the page to magically turn despite all precautions.

The owner knows this and may even benefit from the turning by gaining access to a new spell.

The chance of a page turning depends on the spell the page contains and what sort of spellcaster the owner is.

Condition	Chance of Page Turning
Caster employing a spell usable by own class and level	10%
Caster employing a spell not usable by own class and level	20%
Nonspellcaster employing divine spell	25%
Nonspellcaster employing arcane spell	30%

Treat each spell use as if a scroll were being employed, for purposes of determining casting time, spell failure, and so on.

Strong (all schools); CL 18th; Weight 3 lb.

BOOK OF VILE DARKNESS

This is a work of ineffable evil—meat and drink to divine spellcasters of that alignment (LE, NE, CE).

To fully consume the contents requires one week of study.

Once this has been accomplished, an evil spellcaster gains a +1 inherent bonus to Wisdom and one experience level—receiving enough XP to put the character's XP total midway between the minimum needed for his new (higher) level and the minimum needed for the level beyond that.

All lawful neutral, neutral, or chaotic neutral characters who touch the book take 5d4 points of damage, and reading its pages causes them to become evil (Will DC 13 negates). Such converts immediately seek out an evil cleric to confirm their new alignment (with an atonement spell). Divine spellcasters neither good nor evil (LN, N, CN) who read the book either lose 2d6×1,000 XP (01–50 on d%) or become evil without benefit from the book (51–100). Good divine spellcasters (LG, NG, CG) perusing the pages of the book of vile darkness have to make a DC 16 Fortitude save or die. If they do not die, they must succeed on a DC 15 Will save or suffer from a continuous confusion effect (per the insanity spell). In the latter event, even if the save is successful, the character loses 20,000 XP, minus 1,000 for each point of Wisdom he has. (This calculation cannot result in an XP gain). Other characters of good alignment take 5d6 points of damage from just handling the tome. If such a character looks inside, there is an 80% chance that an evil outsider attacks the character that night. Strong evocation [evil]; CL 19th; Weight 3 lb.

DECK OF MANY THINGS

A deck of many things (both beneficial and baneful) is usually found in a box or leather pouch.

Each deck contains a number of cards or plaques made of ivory or vellum.

Each is engraved with glyphs, characters, and sigils.

As soon as one of these cards is drawn from the pack, its magic is bestowed upon the person who drew it, for better or worse.

The character with a deck of many things who wishes to draw a card must announce how many cards she will draw before she begins.

Cards must be drawn within 1 hour of each other, and a character can never again draw from this deck any more cards than she has announced.

If the character does not willingly draw her allotted number (or if she is somehow prevented from doing so), the cards flip out of the deck on their own.

Exception: If the jester is drawn, the possessor of the deck may elect to draw two additional cards.

Each time a card is taken from the deck, it is replaced (making it possible to draw the same card twice) unless the draw is the jester or the fool, in which case the card is discarded from the pack.

A deck of many things contains 22 cards.

To simulate the magic cards, you may want to use tarot cards, as indicated in the second column of the accompanying table.

If no tarot deck is available, substitute ordinary playing cards instead, as indicated in the third column.

The effects of each card, summarized on the table, are fully described below.

Balance: As in “weighed in the balance and found wanting”, the character must change to a radically different alignment.

If the character fails to act according to the new alignment, she gains a negative level.

Comet: The character must single-handedly defeat the next hostile monster or monsters encountered, or the benefit is lost.

If successful, the character gains enough XP to attain the next experience level.

Donjon: This card signifies imprisonment—either by the imprisonment spell or by some powerful being, at the DM's option.

All gear and spells are stripped from the victim in any case. Whether these items are recoverable is, likewise, up to the DM.

Draw no more cards.

Euryale: The medusa-like visage of this card brings a curse that only the fates card or a deity can remove.

The –1 penalty on all saving throws is otherwise permanent.

Fates: This card enables the character to avoid even an instantaneous occurrence if so desired, for the fabric of reality is unraveled and respun.

Note that it does not enable something to happen.

It can only stop something from happening or reverse a past occurrence.

The reversal is only for the character who drew the card; other party members may have to endure the situation.

Flames: Hot anger, jealousy, and envy are but a few of the possible motivational forces for the enmity.

The enmity of the outsider can't be ended until one of the parties has been slain.

Determine the outsider randomly, and assume that it attacks the character (or plagues her life in some way) within 1d20 days.

Fool: The payment of XP and the redraw are mandatory.

This card is always discarded when drawn, unlike all others except the jester.

Gem: This card indicates wealth.

The jewelry is all gold set with gems, each piece worth 2,000 gp, the gems 1,000 gp value each.

Idiot: This card causes the drain of 1d4+1 points of Intelligence immediately.

The additional draw is optional.

Jester: This card is always discarded when drawn, unlike all others except the fool.

The redraws are optional.

Key: The magic weapon granted must be one usable by the character; use the weapon tables beginning with Table 7–10: Weapon Type Determination until a useful item is awarded.

It suddenly appears out of nowhere in the character's hand.

Knight: The fighter appears out of nowhere and serves loyally until death.

He or she is of the same race (or kind) and gender as the character.

(See Chapter 4 of this book for typical NPC statistics for a 4th-level fighter).

Moon: This card sometimes bears the image of a moonstone gem with the appropriate number of wishes shown as gleams therein; sometimes it depicts a moon with its phase indicating the number of wishes (full = four; gibbous = three; half = two; quarter = one).

These wishes are the same as those granted by the 9th-level wizard spell and must be used within a number of minutes equal to the number received.

Rogue: When this card is drawn, one of the character's NPC friends (preferably a cohort) is totally alienated and forever after hostile.

If the character has no cohorts, the enmity of some powerful personage (or community, or religious order) can be substituted.

The hatred is secret until the time is ripe for it to be revealed with devastating effect.

Ruin: As implied by its name, when this card is drawn, all nonmagical possessions of the drawer are lost.

Skull: A dread wraith (see page 258 of the Monster Manual) appears.

Treat this creature as an unturnable undead.

The character must fight it alone—if others help, they get dread wraiths to fight as well.

If the character is slain, she is slain forever and cannot be revived, even with a wish or a miracle.

Star: The 2 points are added to any ability the character chooses.

They cannot be divided among two abilities.

Sun: Roll for a medium wondrous item (Table 7–28: Medium Wondrous Items) until a useful item is indicated.

Talons: When this card is drawn, every magic item owned or possessed by the character is instantly and irrevocably gone.

The Void: This black card spells instant disaster.

The character's body continues to function, as though comatose, but her psyche is trapped in a prison somewhere—in an object on a far plane or planet, possibly in the possession of an outsider.

A wish or a miracle does not bring the character back, instead merely revealing the plane of entrapment.

Draw no more cards.

Strong (all schools); CL 20th.

DECK OF MANY THINGS

Plaque	Tarot Card	Playing Card	Summary of Effect
Balance	XI. Justice	Two of spades	Change alignment instantly.
Comet	Two of swords	Two of diamonds	Defeat the next monster you meet to gain one level.
Donjon	Four of swords	Ace of spades	You are imprisoned .
Euryale	Ten of swords	Queen of spades	–1 penalty on all saving throws henceforth.
The Fates	Three of cups	Ace of hearts	Avoid any situation you choose . . . once.
Flames	XV. The Devil	Queen of clubs	Enmity between you and an outsider.
Fool	0. The Fool	Joker (with trademark)	Lose 10,000 experience points and you must draw again.
Gem	Seven of cups	Two of hearts	Gain your choice of twenty-five pieces of jewelry or fifty gems.
Idiot	Two of pentacles	Two of clubs	Lose Intelligence (permanent drain). You may draw again.
Jester	XII. The Hanged Man	Joker (without trademark)	Gain 10,000 XP or two more draws from the deck.
Key	V. The Hierophant	Queen of hearts	Gain a major magic weapon.
Knight	Page of swords	Jack of hearts	Gain the service of a 4th-level fighter.
Moon	XVIII. The Moon	Queen of diamonds	You are granted 1d4 wishes.
Rogue	Five of swords	Jack of spades	One of your friends turns against you.
Ruin	XVI. The Tower	King of spades	Immediately lose all wealth and real property.
Skull	XIII. Death	Jack of clubs	Defeat dread wraith or be forever destroyed.
Star	XVII. The Star	Jack of diamonds	Immediately gain a +2 inherent bonus to one ability score.
Sun	XIX. The Sun	King of diamonds	Gain beneficial medium wondrous item and 50,000 XP.
Talons	Queen of pentacles	Ace of clubs	All magic items you possess disappear permanently.
Throne	Four of staves	King of hearts	Gain a +6 bonus on Diplomacy checks plus a small keep.
Vizier	IX. The Hermit	Ace of diamonds	Know the answer to your next dilemma.
The Void	Eight of swords	King of clubs	Body functions, but soul is trapped elsewhere.

Throne: The character becomes a true leader in people's eyes.

The castle gained appears in any open area she wishes (but the decision where to place it must be made within 1 hour).

Vizier: This card empowers the character drawing it with the one-time ability to call upon a source of wisdom to solve any single problem or answer fully any question upon her request.

The query or request must be made within one year.

Whether the information gained can be successfully acted upon is another question entirely.

HAMMER OF THUNDERBOLTS

This +3 Large returning warhammer deals 4d6 points of damage on any hit.

Further, if the wielder wears a belt of giant Strength and gauntlets of ogre power and he knows that the hammer is a hammer of thunderbolts (not just a +3 warhammer), the weapon can be used to full effect: It gains a total +5 enhancement bonus, allows all belt and gauntlet bonuses to stack (only when using this weapon), and strikes dead any giant upon whom it scores a hit (Fortitude DC 20 negates the death effect but not the damage).

When hurled, on a successful attack the hammer emits a great noise, like a clap of thunder, causing all creatures within 90 feet to be stunned for 1 round (Fortitude DC 15 negates).

The hammer's range increment is 30 feet.

Strong evocation, necromancy, and transmutation; CL 20th; Weight 15 lb.

PHILOSOPHER'S STONE

This rare substance appears to be an ordinary, sooty piece of blackish rock.

If the stone is broken open (break DC 20), a cavity is revealed at the stone's heart.

This cavity is lined with a magical type of quicksilver that enables any arcane spellcaster to transmute base metals (iron and lead) into silver and gold.

A single philosopher's stone can turn from up to 5,000 pounds of iron into silver, or up to 1,000 pounds of lead into gold.

However, the quicksilver becomes unstable once the stone is opened and loses its potency within 24 hours, so all transmutations must take place within that period.

The quicksilver found in the center of the stone may also be put to another use.

If mixed with any cure potion while the substance is still potent, it creates a special oil of life that acts as a true resurrection spell for any dead body it is sprinkled upon.

Strong transmutation; CL 20th; Weight 3 lb.

SPHERE OF ANNIHILATION

A sphere of annihilation is a globe of absolute blackness, a ball of nothingness 2 feet in diameter.

The object is actually a hole in the continuity of the multiverse.

Any matter that comes in contact with a sphere is instantly sucked into the void, gone, and utterly destroyed.

Only the direct intervention of a deity can restore an annihilated character.

A sphere of annihilation is static, resting in some spot as if it were a normal hole.

It can be caused to move, however, by mental effort (think of this as a mundane form of telekinesis, too weak to move actual objects but a force to which the sphere, being weightless, is sensitive).

A character's ability to gain control of a sphere of annihilation (or to keep controlling one) is based on the result of a control check against DC 30 (a move action).

A control check is 1d20 + character level + character Int modifier.

If the check succeeds, the character can move the sphere (perhaps to bring it into contact with an enemy) as a free action.

Control of a sphere can be established from as far away as 40 feet (the character need not approach too closely).

Once control is established, it must be maintained by continuing to make control checks (all DC 30) each round. For as long as a character maintains control (does not fail a check) in subsequent rounds, he can control the sphere from a distance of 40 feet + 10 feet per character level.

The sphere's speed in a round is 10 feet + 5 feet for every 5 points by which the character's control check result in that round exceeded 30.

If a control check fails, the sphere slides 10 feet in the direction of the character attempting to move it.

If two or more creatures vie for control of a sphere of annihilation, the rolls are opposed.

If none are successful, the sphere slips toward the one who rolled lowest.

Should a gate spell be cast upon a sphere of annihilation, there is a 50% chance (01–50 on d%) that the spell destroys it, a 35% chance (51–85) that the spell does nothing, and a 15% chance (86–100) that a gap is torn in the spatial fabric, catapulting everything within a 180-foot radius into another plane (see page 151 for a way to determine this randomly).

If a rod of cancellation touches a sphere of annihilation, they negate each other in a tremendous explosion.

Everything within a 60-foot radius takes 2d6×10 points of damage.

Dispel magic and Mordenkainen's disjunction have no effect on a sphere.

See also talisman of the sphere (below).

Strong transmutation; CL 20th.

STAFF OF THE MAGI

A long wooden staff, shod in iron and inscribed with sigils and runes of all types, this potent artifact contains many spell powers and other functions.

Some of its powers use charges, while others don't.

The following powers do not use charges.

- Detect magic
- Enlarge person (Fortitude DC 15 negates)
- Hold portal
- Light
- Mage armor
- Mage hand

The following powers drain 1 charge per usage.

- Dispel magic
- Fireball (10d6 damage, Reflex DC 17 half)
- Ice storm
- Invisibility
- Knock
- Lightning bolt (10d6 damage, Reflex DC 17 half)
- Passwall
- Pyrotechnics (Will or Fortitude DC 16 negates)
- Wall of fire
- Web

These powers drain 2 charges per usage.

- Monster summoning IX
- Plane shift (Will DC 21 negates)
- Telekinesis (400 lb.

maximum weight; Will DC 19 negates) A staff of the magi gives the wielder spell resistance 23.

If this is willingly lowered, however, the staff can also be used to absorb arcane spell energy directed at its wielder, as a rod of absorption (page 234) does.

Unlike the rod, this staff converts spell levels into charges rather than retaining them as spell energy usable by a spellcaster.

If the staff absorbs enough spell levels to exceed its limit of 50 charges, it explodes as if a retributive strike had been performed (see below).

The wielder has no idea how many spell levels are cast at her, for the staff does not communicate this knowledge as a rod of absorption does.

(Thus, absorbing spells can be risky).

Retributive Strike: A staff of the magi can be broken for a retributive strike.

Such an act must be purposeful and declared by the wielder.

All charges in the staff are released in a 30-foot spread. All within 10 feet of the broken staff take hit points of damage equal to 8 times the number of charges in the staff, those between 11 feet and 20 feet away take points equal to 6 times the number of charges, and those 21 feet to 30 feet distant take 4 times the number of charges.

A DC 17 Reflex save reduces damage by half.

The character breaking the staff has a 50% chance (01–50 on d%) of traveling to another plane of existence (see Table 5–7, page 151), but if she does not (51–100), the explosive release of spell energy destroys her.

Only specific items, including the staff of the magi and the staff of power (page 245), are capable of a retributive strike. Strong (all schools); CL 20th; Weight 5 lb.

TALISMAN OF PURE GOOD

A good (LG, NG, CG) divine spellcaster who possesses this item can cause a flaming crack to open at the feet of an evil (LE, NE, CE) divine spellcaster who is up to 100 feet away. The intended victim is swallowed up forever and sent hurtling to the center of the earth.

The wielder of the talisman must be good, and if he is not exceptionally pure in thought and deed (DM's discretion), the evil character gains a DC 19 Reflex saving throw to leap away from the crack.

Obviously, the target must be standing on solid ground for this item to function.

(In the air, in a high tower, or on a ship are all places of safety against this otherwise potent item).

A talisman of pure good has 6 charges.

If a neutral (LN, N, CN) divine spellcaster touches one of these stones, he takes 6d6 points of damage.

If an evil divine spellcaster touches one, he takes 8d6 points of damage.

All other characters are unaffected by the device. Strong evocation [good]; CL 18th.

TALISMAN OF THE SPHERE

This small adamantine loop and handle are useless to those unable to cast arcane spells.

Characters who cannot cast arcane spells take 5d6 points of damage merely from picking up and holding a talisman of this sort.

However, when held by an arcane spellcaster who is concentrating on control of a sphere of annihilation (page 279), a talisman of the sphere doubles the character's modifier on his control check (doubling both his Intelligence bonus and his character level for this purpose).

If the wielder of a talisman establishes control, he need check for maintaining control only every other round thereafter.

If control is not established, the sphere moves toward him. Note that while many spells and effects of cancellation have no effect upon a sphere of annihilation, the talisman's power of control can be suppressed or canceled. Strong transmutation; CL 16th; Weight 1 lb.

TALISMAN OF ULTIMATE EVIL

An evil (LE, NE, CE) divine spellcaster who possesses this item can cause a flaming crack to open at the feet of a good (LG, NG, CG) divine spellcaster who is up to 100 feet away. The intended victim is swallowed up forever and sent hurtling to the center of the earth.

The wielder of the talisman must be evil, and if she is not exceptionally foul and perverse in the sights of her evil deity (DM's discretion), the good character gains a DC 19 Reflex save to leap away from the crack.

Obviously, the target must be standing on solid ground for this item to function.

(In the air, in a high tower, or on a ship are all places of safety against this otherwise potent item).

A talisman of ultimate evil has 6 charges.

If a neutral (LN, N, CN) divine spellcaster touches one of these stones, she takes 6d6 points of damage.

If a good divine spellcaster touches one, she takes 8d6 points of damage.

All other characters are unaffected by the device. Strong evocation [evil]; CL 18th.

TALISMAN OF ZAGY

A talisman of this sort appears the same as a stone of controlling earth elementals.

Its powers are quite different, however, and dependent on the Charisma of the individual holding the talisman.

Whenever a character touches a talisman of Zagy, he must make a DC 15 Charisma check.

If he fails, the device acts as a stone of weight (page 276).

Discarding or destroying it results in 5d6 points of damage to the character and the disappearance of the talisman.

If he succeeds, the talisman remains with the character for 5d6 hours, or until a wish is made with it, whichever comes first.

It then disappears.

If he rolls a natural 20, the character finds it impossible to be rid of the talisman for as many months as he has points of Charisma.

In addition, the artifact grants him one wish for every 6 points of the character's Charisma.

It also grows warm and throbs whenever its possessor comes within 20 feet of a mechanical or magic trap.

(If the talisman is not held, its warning heat and pulses are of no avail).

Regardless of which reaction results, a talisman of Zagy disappears when its time period expires, leaving behind a 10,000 gp diamond in its stead.

Strong conjuration; CL 20th; Weight 1 lb.

ELDER EVILS (3.5)

GUTTERANG

Price: Minor artifact

Body Slot: Ring

Caster Level: 20th

Aura: Strong; (DC 25) abjuration

Activation: See text

Weight: —

This glittering crystal band is much wider than a typical ring. Its substance seems unearthly.

Gutterang was once an elemental weird (MM2 90) that resided on Irthicax Vane's lost homeworld.

Through intricate ritual and arcane craft, it was bound in a crystalline ring to be Vane's constant guide, freed from the limitation of its elemental pool.

However, it was greatly weakened by the process and is no longer able to survive outside its glittering prison.

Now Gutterang attempts to keep Irthicax Vane alive and uncorrupted by the touch of Ragnorra.

It tries to preserve a link to his lost world by reminding the monk of his honorable past.

The artifact believes that reclaiming their world from Ragnorra's corruption is still possible, with Vane as the catalyst.

Though such a hope seems impossible, the former weird's powers of healing and guidance offer at least a chance.

Gutterang is an intelligent ring of protection +5 that has the following special abilities.

Alignment LG.

Int 10, Wis 17, Cha 17; Speech, telepathy; 120-ft. darkvision and hearing.

Ego 17.

Lesser Powers cure moderate wounds 3/day, deathwatch at will, 10 ranks in Diplomacy.

Greater Power haste 3/day.

Prerequisites: Minor artifact.

Cost to Create: Minor artifact.

EPIC LEVEL HANDBOOK (3.0)

EVERFULL PURSE

This leather belt pouch has the power to turn a single gold coin into many overnight.

If a single gold piece is placed in the everfull purse at sunset will be replaced at rise by 25 gold pieces.

The purse has no effect if more than one gold piece is left within, or if anything other than gold is placed within.

Caster Level: 20th; Weight: 1/2 lb.

LIBRAM OF GAINFUL CONJURATION

This mystic book is of great value to arcane spellcasters of good alignment (LG, NG, CG).

Study of the work requires one week.

Upon completion, the good arcane caster gains a +1 inherent bonus to the ability score controlling his arcane spellcasting ability (for example, Intelligence for wizards or Charisma for bards and sorcerers) and experience points sufficient to place him halfway into the next level experience.

(If the reader has levels in more than one arcane spellcasting class, he must choose one of the classes to be affected).

Nongood arcane spellcasters (LN, N, CN, LE, NE, or CE) are permanently drained of 1d4+1 points of Constitution and must atone (see the atonement spell) in order to gain any further experience.

Anyone incapable of casting arcane spells who reads even a single word of the work must make a Will save (DC 20) or suffer insanity (see the insanity spell).

Except as indicated above, the writing in a libram of gainful conjuration can't be distinguished from any other book, libram, tome, or so on until perused.

Once read, the book vanishes, never to be seen again, nor can the same character ever benefit from reading a similar tome a second time.

Caster Level: 19th; Weight: 3 lb.

LIBRAM OF INEFFABLE DAMNATION

This mystic book is of great value to arcane spellcasters of evil alignment (LE, NE, CE).

Study of the work requires one week.

Upon completion, the evil arcane caster gains a +1 inherent bonus to the ability score controlling his arcane spellcasting ability (for example, Intelligence for wizards or Charisma for bards and sorcerers) and experience points sufficient to place him halfway into the next level of experience.

(If the reader has levels in more than one arcane spellcasting class, he must choose one of the classes to be affected).

Nonevil arcane spellcasters (LN, N, CN, LG, NG, or CG) are permanently drained of 1d4+1 points of Constitution and must atone (see the atonement spell) in order to gain any further experience.

Anyone incapable of casting arcane spells who reads even a single word of the work must make a Will save (DC 20) or suffer insanity (see the insanity spell).

Except as indicated above, the writing in a libram of ineffable damnation can't be distinguished from any other book, libram, tome, or so on until perused.

Once read, the book vanishes, never to be seen again, nor can the same character ever benefit from reading a similar tome a second time.

Caster Level: 19th; Weight: 3 lb.

LIBRAM OF SILVER MAGIC

This mystic book is of great value to arcane spellcasters of neutral alignment (LN, N, CN).

Study of the work requires one week.

Upon completion, the neutral arcane caster gains a +1 inherent bonus to the ability score controlling his arcane spellcasting ability (for example, Intelligence for wizards or Charisma for bards and sorcerers) and experience points sufficient to place him halfway into the next level of experience.

(If the reader has levels in more than one arcane spellcasting class, he must choose one of the classes to be affected).

Evil or good arcane spellcasters (LE, NE, CE, LG, NG, or CG) are permanently drained of 1d4+1 points of Constitution and must atone (see the atonement spell) in order to gain any further experience.

Anyone incapable of casting arcane spells who reads even a single word of the work must make a Will save (DC 20) or suffer insanity (see the insanity spell).

Except as indicated above, the writing in a libram of silver magic can't be distinguished from any other book, libram, tome, or so on until perused.

Once read, the book vanishes, never to be seen again, nor can the same character ever benefit from reading a similar tome a second time.

Caster Level: 19th; Weight: 3 lb.

MANUAL OF PUISSANT SKILL AT ARMS

This treatise contains expert advice and instruction in the arts of combat.

Any barbarian, fighter, monk, paladin, or ranger who spends one week studying the manual gains a +1 inherent bonus to Strength and experience points sufficient to place him halfway into the next level of experience.

(If the reader has levels in more than one of the classes listed, he must choose one of the classes to be affected).

A character without any levels in one of the classes listed gains no bonus from the work, but if an arcane spellcaster without levels in one of the classes listed scans even a single word she will lose 2d6×1,000 XP and must make a Will save (DC 20) or have 1 point of Intelligence permanently drained.

Except as indicated above, the writing in a manual of puissant skill at arms can't be distinguished from any other book, libram, tome, or so on until perused.

Once read, the book vanishes, never to be seen again, nor can the same character ever benefit from reading a similar tome a second time.

Caster Level: 19th; Weight: 3 lb.

MANUAL OF STEALTHY PILFERING

This guide to thievery grants any rogue who spends a week studying its lessons a +1 inherent bonus to Dexterity and experience points sufficient to place him halfway into the next level of experience.

A character without any rogue levels gains no bonus from the work, but if a divine spellcaster without rogue levels scans even a single word she will lose 2d6×1,000 XP and must make a Will save (DC 20) or have 1 point of Wisdom permanently drained.

Except as indicated above, the writing in a manual of stealthy pilfering can't be distinguished from any other book, libram, tome, or so on until perused.

Once read, the book vanishes, never to be seen again, nor can the same character ever benefit from reading a similar tome a second time.

Caster Level: 19th; Weight: 3 lb.

OLIDAMMARA'S DICE

This pair of yellowed ivory cubes appears much like any other pair of typical (6-sided) dice, though in place of the "1" spot is Olidammara's symbol, the mask of comedy and tragedy combined.

A character with a pair of Olidammara's dice who wishes to roll them must announce that he is rolling the dice (accidental rolls have no effect).

Rolling the dice is a standard action, and both dice must be rolled simultaneously to have any effect.

To mimic the roll of Olidammara's dice, the player should roll 2d6 and consult the table below.

2d6	Effect
2	Lose 10,000 XP and dice roll again next round
3	Permanently lose 1d4+1 Dex
4	Gain 1d4 negative levels (Fortitude DC 20 to remove)
5	-1 penalty on all attacks, saves, and checks for 1 hour
6	-4 penalty to AC for 10 minutes
7	+1 morale bonus on attacks and on saves against fear for 10 minutes
8	Gain effects of blur for 10 minutes
9	+1 insight bonus on all attacks, saves, and checks for 1 hour
10	Gain effects of freedom of movement for 1 hour
11	Gain one limited wish (must be used within 1 minute)
12	Gain 10,000 XP and may roll again next round

No character can gain any effect from an additional roll of the dice within 24 hours, with two exceptions.

If you roll a 2, the dice automatically roll themselves at the beginning of your next turn and you must accept the additional result.

If you roll a 12, you may choose to roll again in the next round (if more than 1 full round elapses between the roll of 12 and your bonus roll, you lose the bonus roll).

There is no method (mundane or magical) to predict or influence the result of a roll of Olidammara's dice.

Even powerful divination magic can't predict the outcome of a roll before it is made.

Caster Level: 20th; Weight: —.

SILVER KEY OF PORTALS

This silver skeleton key, a relic created by the god Dalt, functions like a chime of opening when it is touched to the bars, door, lock, lid, portal, or shackles to be opened.

The key automatically dispels a hold portal or arcane lock with a caster level of less than 30th level.

The wielder gains a +30 insight bonus on Escape Artist checks.

The wielder can call on each of the following powers twice per day, at will: passwall, ethereal jaunt, word of recall.

These spells are cast as if by a caster of 30th level.

EXEMPLARS OF EVIL (3.5)

PLANAR TRESTLE

A planar trestle is an amalgamation of esoteric objects that are unique to the plane on which the artifact was created.

Once the components are interlocked in one specific way, the amalgamated object cannot be physically sundered or harmed by any type of energy.

When a planar trestle is brought into contact with a portal to another plane, whether sealed or inactive, that portal is forced open permanently, destroying the artifact.

Strong conjuration (calling); CL 20th; Weight 5 lb.

EXPANDED PSIONICS HANDBOOK (3.5)

SUTRA OF TRANQUIL THOUGHT

This monastic tome describes ancient techniques of mental focus and is highly prized by psionic practitioners.

If a psionic character who is not evil studies the work during one week of solitary contemplation, he gains 17 bonus power points and experience points sufficient to place him halfway into the next level of experience.

Those who use their powers for evil (such as mind flayers) are punished for their impertinence, losing 5d6×1,000 XP for defiling the book.

In addition, an evil reader must make an immediate DC 15 Will save or become permanently confused as if affected by the insanity power.

Only psychic surgery or similarly extreme measures can restore sanity.

The minds of nonpsionic beings are too clouded to benefit from the secrets of this book.

To anyone without psionic aptitude, the book's pages appear to contain nothing but elaborate patterns and drawings of mysterious beings.

Once it is read, the book vanishes into the Astral Plane to an unknown destination.

Even if it is found again, the same character cannot benefit twice from perusing its contents.
Strong telepathy; ML 20th; Weight 3 lb.

FAITHS AND PANTHEONS (3.0)

JATHIMAN DAGGER

This simple iron blade, crafted from the literal self-sacrifice of thirty-nine members of the Netherese Cult of Jathiman, grants the wielder especial power over the fate of divine beings.

Virulent haters of all things divine, the Jathimites believed that mortals could overthrow the gods through brute force, weaving powerful arcane magic into physical form through violent self-destruction.

After the creation of the Jathiman Dagger, Jergal himself saw to the destruction of the entire sect, trapping one hundred forty-nine members within a great coliseum and slowly imploding and then animating them as ghouls—forcing them to watch the fates of their friends with a mixture of horror and obscene hunger.

After the grim feast, Jergal seized the weapon, eventually allowing it to fall into the hands of Bane long before he became a deity.

The Jathiman Dagger is a +5 unholy dagger that completely ignores any divine bonus to the Armor Class of a being attacked by it.

Caster Level: 20th; Weight: 1 lb.

FIENDISH CODEX 1 (3.5)

BLACK SCROLLS OF AHM

The Black Cult of Ahm has gained access to several artifacts tied to demons.

These artifacts are hidden away in well-guarded chapter houses or entrusted to the care of the organization's most honored members, and for good reason.

These sources of demonic lore contain more than just information about fiends and the Abyss.

Over the centuries since Ahm's disappearance, his scrolls and some of those written by his disciples have grown in power, becoming major or minor artifacts in their own right.

Each contains lore pertaining to the Abyss, demons, and other related subjects, and many convey mysterious powers to their wielders as well.

The Black Scrolls of Ahm consist of hundreds of individual writings.

Those noted as minor artifacts are not unique—several copies of these pages, tomes, or scrolls appear on almost every plane, though even those with the same names might cover slightly different topics of demonic lore.

Black Scrolls of Ahm designated as major artifacts are unique—no more than one of each exists.

Each minor artifact conveys one or more skill bonuses to its possessor and allows him to use a specific lesser power.

The major artifacts also convey skill bonuses, but they make multiple powers available to their owners.

The Black Scrolls come in several varieties, as given below. Some appear as singular scrolls, while others are bound together in books.

The term “scroll” in this case could apply to a collection of scrolls.

Regardless of its appearance, every Black Scroll of Ahm has certain characteristics, many of which provide benefits to its possessor, as enumerated here.

1. The possessor gains a circumstance bonus on Knowledge (the planes) checks.

Each scroll conveys its own bonus, but they do not stack in the normal fashion.

A character who possesses more than one kind of scroll gains the highest bonus, plus 1 point for each additional scroll successfully studied.

A character who possesses multiple copies of any of the minor artifact scrolls gains this bonus only once per type. For example, a character who possesses two copies of the transcriptions of Ergon and one copy of the bleak writings gains a +3 bonus for one copy of the transcriptions and an additional +1 bonus for the black writings.

The second copy of the transcriptions imparts no additional bonus.

2. Each use of a scroll's lesser power has a cumulative 1% chance of summoning a fiend associated with the scroll.

The summoning has the same caster level as the scroll.

The fiend attacks the user in an attempt to destroy him and take the scroll.

This cumulative chance cannot be reset unless the scroll actually disappears from the presence of the fiend (see below).

3. Each use of a scroll's greater power has a cumulative 5% chance of summoning a fiend associated with the scroll. This chance stacks with the chance imparted by the use of a lesser power, and the fiend acts in the same way.

Each scroll has only one cumulative chance to summon an associated fiend—the sum of the chances invoked by use of its lesser and greater powers.

Thus, a character who uses a lesser power of the Abyssal Mundus three times and then uses a greater power once has an 8% chance of accidentally summoning a fiend.

If that character uses another lesser power, the chance becomes 9%.

If the different powers summon different kinds of fiends, the fiend that appears is the one associated with the power that actually triggered the summoning.

4. The magic imbued in each scroll drives it to hide itself from demonkind.

When within 30 feet of any creature native to the Abyss, each Black Scroll has a 10% cumulative chance per round of moving away from its current location by means of teleport or plane shift.

The DM decides which spell effect the scroll uses and where it goes.

Spells and effects similar to dimensional anchor can be used to stop a scroll from disappearing.

(The scroll has a touch AC of 10 for the purpose of the dimensional anchor's ranged touch attack).

When such a barrier effect ends or is dispelled, the scroll immediately disappears unless the creature that triggered the disappearance is no longer present.

Once the threat is removed (because the creature is dead, departed, or out of range), the chance of the scroll departing resets to 0%.

5. Once a scroll has used its ability to escape a demon (whether it was successful or not), the chance of it summoning a fiend again resets to 0% and remains there until the next time one of its powers is activated. At that point, the cumulative chance begins increasing all over again.

6. Should a creature of the Abyss gain possession of a Black Scroll of Ahm, the scroll loses its ability to transport itself, as well as all its other powers.

A demon that obtains any Black Scroll of Ahm immediately attempts to return to the Abyss with the item in its possession.

7. As brittle and ancient as the Black Scrolls of Ahm appear, each is an artifact and thus nearly indestructible. The one method of destruction known to work without fail is immersion in the black pools of the Abyss. Immersion in this soup of chaos and evil for 1 hour utterly destroys any Black Scroll of Ahm.

Any demon that recovers a Black Scroll and returns to the Abyss with it is likely to turn the item over to its immediate overlord (often a marilith or balor, or possibly a demon prince if the scroll bearer is high enough in rank).

That creature then invariably attempts to destroy the artifact at its earliest opportunity.

Still, this interval might provide enough time for a rescue party to reach the Abyss.

BLACK WRITINGS

Reputed to contain some of Tulket nor Ahm's earliest notes on the nature of the Abyss, this small book survived his destruction because it was simply too unimportant for the master of demon lore to keep by his side.

Still, the black writings must have had some value to Ahm, since they do possess some remnant of his power.

Description: This small, black tome appears unremarkable except for the preserved eyeball pressed into its front cover. The eye opens and shuts of its own accord, and when the book is closed, the eye tracks movement within its view whenever it is open.

Activation (Skill Bonus): Study of the black writings for 8 continuous hours grants the possessor a +2 circumstance bonus on Knowledge (the planes) checks, and a +5 circumstance bonus on Bluff and Sense Motive checks made against creatures native to the Abyss.

To retain these bonuses, the reader must spend at least 1 hour per week refreshing that knowledge.

Skipping this additional study immediately negates the bonuses, and the reader must start all over again.

Activation (Lesser Power): By holding the book up to her face with the eye outward, the possessor can peer through it and, as a standard action, cause a 60-foot cone of dim, yellow light to shine forth from the cover.

Anyone looking at a creature or object caught in the cone's light sees it as if affected by a true seeing spell.

This effect lasts as long as the user holds the book up to her face, but the cone can be turned in any direction.

Creatures or objects no longer in the cone's field appear as they did before the effect revealed their true natures.

Associated Demon: Using the lesser power of the black writings causes 1d4+1 succubi to appear.

These creatures attempt to destroy the wielder, retrieve the artifact, and return with it to the Abyss.

Unlike other demons summoned to capture the Black Scrolls, however, the succubi might not appear immediately, or even near the possessor.

Instead, they appear somewhere within a half-mile radius of the owner and up to an hour after the black writings call to them, at the DM's discretion.

Aura/Caster Level: Overpowering divination; CL 24th.

Weight: 3 lb.

RUBRIC OF TULKET NOR AHM

One of the great loremaster's most prized possessions was the rubric of Tulket nor Ahm, a collection of loose pages containing the names of specific kinds of fiends, plus a few incantations relating to them.

This information provides the possessor with a potent weapon against certain demons.

Description: Each page of the rubric is inscribed on the tanned hide of a vanquished demon and must be discovered separately.

At least four different kinds of rubric pages exist, each keyed to a different kind of demon.

The four kinds of pages all have the same powers, but they look slightly different, as noted below.

- Hezrou Rubric: Greenish-gray in color, this page is a piece of leathery parchment that is always coated with a light film of slime.

- Glabrezu Rubric: This page is deep russet in color, with rough and spiky edges.

- Bulezau Rubric: This sickly yellow parchment has dried, jagged scabs crisscrossing it.

- Goristro Rubric: Tufts of bristly hair sprout from the corners of this thick scrap of black, leathery parchment.

The Black Cultists believe that a specific kind of rubric page exists for each kind of demon; they simply have not yet discovered them all.

They also believe that Tulket nor Ahm created a rubric page for one of the demon princes (no one knows which), and that this action was what finally caused the fiends to hunt down and destroy him.

If that page does exist, it is undoubtedly a major artifact and could convey more special powers to its possessor than the other pages do.

Activation (Skill Bonus): Studying any single rubric page for 10 minutes grants the reader a +1 circumstance bonus on Knowledge (the planes) checks, but he must keep the page on his person to retain the bonus.

This bonus increases to +5 for Knowledge (the planes) checks directly related to the kind of demon to which the rubric page is keyed.

So if the owner of a hezrou rubric makes a Knowledge (the planes) check regarding hezrou, he gains the larger bonus.

Activation (Lesser Power): Anyone who spends a full round reading aloud from a page of the rubric of Tulket nor Ahm gains a +4 bonus on saves made against effects generated by demons of any kind.

In addition, the caster level for all his spells, spell-like abilities, and supernatural abilities increases by 4 when he uses them against demons.

These bonuses last for 1 hour and can be renewed (as a full-round action) as often as necessary.

Each such renewal counts as a new activation of this lesser power.

Activation (Lesser Power): Each rubric page possesses a second lesser power keyed to the specific kind of demon named in it.

The owner of a rubric page can employ both lesser powers at the same time, though each requires a separate activation.

- Hezrou Rubric: The possessor can use gaseous form up to three times per day as a standard action.

Each use counts as a single activation of this lesser power. The effect can be dismissed as a free action.

- Glabrezu Rubric: The user gains a +10 bonus to his natural armor for 10 rounds.

However, the effect also causes his skin to appear spiked, dark, and pitted, imposing a –2 penalty to his Charisma.

The effect can be dismissed as a free action.

- Bulezau Rubric: Whenever the possessor enters a rage or frenzy.

she gains an additional +2 bonus to Strength and +2 bonus to Constitution.

- Goristro Rubric: For 1 hour, the possessor gains 2 temporary hit points per character level and the supernatural ability to see invisible creatures, as the see invisibility spell.

Associated Demon: Using either lesser power of the rubric of Tulket nor Ahm causes 1d4 demons of the same kind as the rubric page describes to appear.

These creatures immediately attempt to destroy the wielder, retrieve the artifact, and return with it to the Abyss.

Aura/Caster Level: Overpowering transformation; CL 25th. Weight: 1 lb.

TRANSCRIPTIONS OF ERGON

Much of the lore of Tulket nor Ahm that was thought to be lost after his destruction was actually collected in these writings.

Rumored to be Ahm's own apprentice, Ergon assembled most of this material from memory and from fragments of parchment scattered about the ruins of Ahm's tower.

Several transcriptions of Ergon have survived over the centuries.

Description: Each copy of the transcriptions of Ergon is a collection of fragmented notes and stories compiled in some semblance of chronological order and annotated by Ergon.

Different copies might contain slightly different information, seemingly written in different hands, but all true transcriptions bear the mark of their author.

Each copy of the transcriptions is packaged in a simple case made of brown leather.

Activation (Skill Bonus): To gain the +3 circumstance bonus on Knowledge (the planes) checks conveyed by the transcriptions of Ergon, a character must spend at least 8 hours reading the scrolls, plus another hour every week refreshing her knowledge.

She need not carry the transcriptions with her to gain this continuous benefit.

However, if she ever skips her 1-hour "refresher" with the scrolls (even by as much as a moment), she must study the parchments for the full 8 hours again to reactivate the bonus.

Activation (Lesser Power): By holding the transcriptions of Ergon in one hand and speaking aloud an incantation written into the text, the wielder creates an improved forcecage effect around a target as an attack action.

In addition to imprisoning the target creature as noted in the spell description, the cage impairs use of the teleport and greater teleport spells.

Any creature that attempts to flee the forcecage using one of these spells must succeed on a level check against the caster level of the artifact (CL 21st) or remain imprisoned.

A creature that fails such a check may not attempt the same means of escape again for 10 minutes.

(Thus, a creature with both teleport and greater teleport can try each spell once in a 10-minute period).

Associated Demon: Use of the transcriptions' lesser power causes 1d4+1 vrocks to appear.

They attempt to slay the owner, capture the artifact, and return with it to the Abyss.

Aura/Caster Level: Overpowering evocation and divination; CL 21st.

Weight: 5 lb.

FROSTBURN (3.5)

CRYSTAL TEAR

Legends hold that when Iborighu smote down Hleid and cast her fractured body into the polar sea, she cried for the loss to the uldra race.

As her body arced over the polar world to the sea, these tears fell to the ground and became frozen, and some of Hleid's divine power and emotion became frozen along with them and became crystal tears.

A crystal tear looks like a large tear made of ice with flashes of light sparkling in its depths.

These are potent minor artifacts; their presence constantly exudes a strong emotional magical effect (as a 20th-level caster) in an emanation with a 15-foot radius.

As a free action, the holder of the tear can choose to produce either crushing despair or good hope.

Once an effect is chosen, it operates until the holder changes it.

The tear continues to emanate the last emotion the holder chose if the holder puts down the tear.

The holder can decide as a free action what creatures in the area are affected.

Living creatures in the emanation can attempt a DC 16 Will save to avoid the emanation's effects.

Those who fail suffer whatever effect the tear is currently producing, for as long as they remain within the radius of the emanation and for 1 minute after leaving.

Those who successfully save cannot be affected by the tear's current emanation for 1 minute (but must save again if the holder changes the effect).

The holder of the tear finds that his own emotions are completely "drowned out" by the presence of the tear; this effectively keeps the user from experiencing any emotions at all (incurring a –2 penalty on all Charisma-based skill checks), but also has the fortunate side effect of rendering him completely immune to mind-affecting spells and abilities.

Overlapping emanations from multiple crystal tears do not stack if they generate identical emotions.

Crystal tears do not melt if brought to warmer climates or if exposed to heat or flame; they always retain a cool temperature regardless of their environs.

Despite this, the owner of a crystal tear can cause the tear to melt into liquid by targeting it with a spell that is of at least 5th level and carries the fire descriptor.

The spell cast is absorbed completely by the tear, which then melts immediately and evaporates in 2d4 rounds.

If the melted tear is imbibed before it evaporates, it grants a +4 inherent bonus to one of the drinker's ability scores.

The exact score to which the bonus is applied is determined randomly, although it does not apply to a score that already possesses an inherent bonus.

If all the drinker's scores already possess an inherent bonus, the +4 inherent bonus applies to the score with the lowest bonus.

Strong enchantment; CL 20th; Weight 4 lb.

GHOSTWALK (3.0)

SEVEN CROWNS

Each of these seven gold crowns is decorated with silver and gems.

Only a few of their properties are known, and one has been stolen and its location remains unknown.

All seven crowns serve as a belt of giant strength +4, an amulet of health +4, a ring of minor elemental resistance (fire), a ring of protection +5, and a major circlet of blasting.

Each is reputed to have its own individual powers as well, varying from the ability to launch bolts of fire, to protecting everyone near it from energy drain attacks, to empowering turning automatically.

Caster Level: 17th; Weight: 3 lb.

STARFIRE

This +5 holy keen mighty cleaving defending adamantine longsword is of elven make.

Forged from adamantine taken from a burning meteorite that struck deep in the heart of the forest of Sura-Khiri, it is carried by the king or queen of the elves as a sign of the monarch's honor and truth, as well as a compact that no elf in that nation would raise a sword against another.

Its wielder can invoke daylight at will upon the blade, and whenever it strikes an object or creature, it makes a pure, clear note of such beauty that the target must save or be affected as if by a daze spell.

Caster level: 17th; Weight: 4 lb.

HEROES OF BATTLE (3.5)

ACERERAK'S ROBE

This horrific garment purportedly belonged to the most deceptive and pernicious lich who ever existed (although some legends attribute the robe's creation to Vecna rather than Acererak).

The robe is worn and slightly tattered but still intact.

It appears, to both mundane and mystical examination, to be a robe of the archmagi (see page 265 of the Dungeon Master's Guide), with an alignment matching that of the individual studying it.

Any observer with reason to doubt can attempt a DC 30 Will save to disbelieve.

Success indicates that the character knows the robe is not a robe of the archmagi, but he still does not know the truth of the robe's nature.

Acererak's robe grants the wearer all the abilities normally associated with the robe of the archmagi, regardless of alignment.

It also bestows the benefits of death ward (see page 217 of the Player's Handbook) on the wearer.

Its most potent ability, however, is its control over life and death.

Three times per day, the wearer can cast finger of death with a touch (not at range), as a 20th-level caster (see page 230 of the Player's Handbook).

Anyone slain in this manner instantly rises as a zombie, as per the animate dead spell (see pages 198–199 of the Player's Handbook), under the control of the robe's wearer.

The wearer can control a number of Hit Dice of undead equal to 4 times his Hit Dice; this is calculated separately from any other ability he might have to control undead.

Unfortunately for the wearer, the robe has a will of its own when it comes to slaying and animating others.

Anytime the wearer touches another living being, the robe might (10% chance) activate its finger of death ability on its own—even if the wielder has already voluntarily used finger of death three times that day.

Further, the robe might (5% chance) cast finger of death at range anytime a living being spends more than 5 minutes within 20 feet of the wearer.

Individuals slain under these circumstances also animate as zombies, but they are not under the control of the wearer of the robe.

They do not attack him, although they will fight him in self-defense, but they follow him constantly and attack any other living beings they see.

Once donned, the robe can only be removed by a miracle or wish.

Acererak's robe can only be destroyed if it is first coated in dust taken from a demilich—some legends maintain that it must be from Acererak himself—and then burned in holy fire, such as that produced by a flame strike spell, cast by a 20th-level caster.

ROD OF CAS (EBON ROD OF ILL WILL)

While it usually remains in the possession of Cas, the moose-headed demigod of spite (see page 19), sometimes this minor artifact temporarily finds its way into the hands of mortals.

This antler-headed scepter acts as a Large +3 vicious heavy mace that deals both bludgeoning and piercing damage. As soon as an opponent has successfully dealt damage to the wielder, the ebon rod instantly acquires the bane weapon ability, with its power focused on the type of the creature in question.

Thus, if a giant dealt even a single point of damage to the rod's wielder, the ebon rod would instantly acquire the giant bane ability for all future attacks at that giant.

The weapon remembers all those who have struck its wielder and will instantly shift to whatever type of bane ability is required to match a given attacker. The ebon rod can never be pulled from its wielder's hand without permission (making the wielder immune to attempts to disarm him of the ebon rod), until and unless the wielder's hand is cold and dead. Any enemy of the owner's who picks up the weapon immediately becomes the target of a phantasmal killer spell (DC 20 + owner's Cha modifier). Any attempt to destroy the rod of Cas causes it to teleport instantly to Cas, while the person attempting to destroy it receives all the damage dealt to the ebon rod in its place. Strong illusion, necromancy, and transmutation; CL 20th; Weight 16 lb.

LOST EMPIRES OF FAERÛN (3.5)

MYTHALLAR CONSTRUCTION

A mythallar is usually a large, polished crystal as tall as a man, though it may take other forms as well. Like a mythal, a mythallar creates a city-sized envelope of pure magical energy. Unlike a mythal, however, a mythallar always incorporates a major special ability that permits the creation and use of quasi-magic items. Quasi-magic items function exactly like normal magic items within the bounds of a mythallar but become inert when taken beyond its borders. The Netherese arcanists who first discovered and used mythallars viewed this restriction as a fair tradeoff, since the creation cost of any quasi-magic item, no matter how powerful, included no XP component. (The XP cost of spells with such components, however, still had to be paid). This lack of an XP cost opened up item creation to even low-level spellcasters and made the creation of vastly powerful, near-artifact items such as floating mountaintop enclaves feasible. Without mythallars, Netheril would never have reached the zenith of magical power that it achieved. Overwhelming transmutation; CL 30th; Weight 500 lb.

NETHER SCROLLS

Two sets of nether scrolls exist, each consisting of fifty individual scrolls. One complete set lies in the depths of Windsong Tower in the ruins of Myth Drannor, where it takes the form of a golden beech tree known as the Quess Ar Teranthvar (Golden Grove of Hidden Knowledge). The other set has been broken up and mostly lost. At least until the Year of the Moonfall (1344 DR), three scrolls from this latter set lay in the Hall of Mists beneath the Grandfather Tree of the High Forest. Two others are in the Crypt of Hssthak, which now lies beneath the sands of western Anauroch.

A few of the remaining scrolls have been destroyed, and the location and current state of those that remain are unknown. Each scroll is an 8-inch-by-10-inch sheet of thin, rolled gold as flexible as paper. Silvery magical writing crawls across its surface, appearing almost alive. The scroll's small size belies the staggering amount of information it holds. As soon as one "page" of text has been read, the writing swims and moves about the sheet, reforming into the next page of text. All in all, it takes approximately one month of dedicated study to review a single nether scroll. The nether scrolls form the foundation of modern magical theory on Faerûn. Virtually every mage who has mastered any portion of the Art since the rise of Netheril received her knowledge, albeit indirectly, from the nether scrolls. Consequently, much of the information contained in these scrolls is now considered common knowledge in Faerûn's magical community. Nevertheless, the nether scrolls still contain a wealth of information that is useful to any student of the Art. Reading even one nether scroll offers considerable insight into the Art. Any character studying one immediately gains one level in an arcane spellcasting class of her choice. (That is, her experience point total is set to the midpoint for her new level). The nether scrolls are divided into five chapters, each covering a different aspect of the Art. A character who manages to read all ten scrolls that make up a chapter gains an additional benefit whose nature depends on the topic studied. The chapters of the nether scrolls and the benefits they provide are detailed below.

Arcanus Fundare (Foundations of Magic): +30 inherent bonus on Spellcraft checks; +1 to save DCs for all arcane spells.

Magicus Creare (Spells of Creation): Three bonus item creation feats; XP cost of any magic item created drops to 75% of normal.

Maior Creare (Major Creations): Craft Construct (see page 303 of the Monster Manual) as a bonus feat; any golem or other construct created has maximum hit points.

Planus Mechanus (Studies of the Planes): Use plane shift as the spell once per day; ignore any hostile or debilitating planar environmental effects.

Ars Factum (Of the Creation of Artifacts): Unknown. Reputedly, this chapter of the nether scrolls taught the reader how to create artifacts. However, an additional key of some kind is needed to unlock this set of scrolls, and the spellcasters of Windsong Tower never discovered it. The benefit gained by studying a particular chapter applies only to the character's arcane spellcasting class. For example, if a 15th-level cleric/5th-level wizard studied the Maior Creare scrolls and attempted to create a golem with divine magic, the golem would not have maximum hit points. Overwhelming transmutation; CL 40th; Weight 1 lb. (per scroll)

MAGIC OF FAERÛN (3.0)

ARBANE'S SWORD OF AGILITY

Arbane of Myth Drannor originally crafted this sword, and at least a dozen were made by him or others before the process disappeared to the mists of time.

By command, this +2 longsword of speed allows the bearer to cast jump once per day.

She is also immune to illusion (pattern) effects and protected by a constant freedom of movement spell when the sword is drawn.

The sword can negate darkness (as if using a daylight spell) once per day.

Caster Level: 10th; Weight: 4 lb.

AZUREEDGE

This unique +5 throwing wounding battleaxe is forged of an alloy of silver and steel, with runes of power along the blade, a handle of solid steel wrapped in blue dragonskin, and a star sapphire in the pommel.

The edges of the axe blade shimmer with a faint blue glow (shedding light equal to a candle).

This illumination automatically brightens (to the equivalent of a torch) when the axe is within 60 feet of an outsider or an evil creature; the wielder may also command the weapon to brighten in this manner.

It acts as a disruption weapon when defending the city of Waterdeep.

Its magical properties are protected by Nystul's undetectable aura, and Khelben the Blackstaff is said to scry on the bearer of the axe from time to time to make sure he or she is not acting contrary to the interests of the Lords of Waterdeep.

The axe is intelligent (Int 14, Wis 12, Cha 10), neutral good, and considers itself female.

It can communicate telepathically or speak Common or Chondathan, although it rarely speaks.

Ahghairon of Waterdeep created it.

Much of its personality comes from a portion of the soul of Lady Lauron, former warlord of that city, who was mortally wounded while defending the city and asked the wizard to ensure that she would always be able to aid the defense of Waterdeep.

The axe remembers its origin but does not have the memories of the woman that granted it its spirit.

Caster Level: 18th; Weight: 7 lb.

BLAST SCEPTER

These devices were made in Netheril.

A new blast scepter has 50 charges when created, but most are hundreds of years old and usually have only 1–10 charges when found.

A blast scepter is self-identifying and has the following powers: The user is immune to fire and lightning while holding the scepter.

The user cannot be knocked down or moved by a blast or detonation while holding the scepter.

The user takes half damage from any blast, such as a horn of blasting, smokepowder detonation, or the blast power of another blast scepter (one-quarter damage with a successful saving throw).

The user can stun a target by making a melee touch attack with the scepter.

The creature touched can avoid being stunned with a successful Fortitude save (DC 20).

The opponent is stunned for 1d4 rounds if the save fails.

This power drains 1 charge.

The user can blast opponents with a soundless wave of force in a cone 30 feet long.

Targets automatically take 2d6 points of damage and must make Reflex saves (DC 20) or be knocked off their feet.

This power drains 2 charges.

The user can powerstrike any creature or object with a melee touch attack.

The touch deals 5d6 points of damage; a Fortitude save (DC 20) reduces damage by half.

The powerstrike can damage any construct, and constructs who fail their saves are destroyed.

This power drains 4 charges.

Caster Level: 13th; Weight: 6 lb.

GLOWSTONE

Dwarf and gnome artisans crafted these rare and powerful items in ancient times.

A glowstone looks like a many-faceted oval of glass or amber about the size of a human hand.

The synthetic crystal is exceedingly hard and tough.

A glowstone has a hardness of 60 and 60 hit points.

A glowstone constantly emits light equal to a daylight spell.

This light negates and dispels any darkness effect cast at 9th level or lower.

Placing the glowstone in an opaque container blocks the light.

A glowstone can power any item that requires charges.

The glowstone need only be placed on the charged item.

The glowstone sticks to the item like a magnet sticking to metal.

It will not fall off by accident, but can be removed.

For every 10 minutes the glowstone remains attached to the item, the item regains 1 charge, up to its maximum number of charges.

Each charge restored to an item drains 1 charge from the glowstone.

Items subject to overcharging, such as a staff of the magi, will overcharge if left in contact with a glowstone too long.

Magic items that are not charged, but allow only a limited number of uses per day, also can draw power from a glowstone.

If the item is in contact with the glowstone for 10 minutes, the item's ability can be used one more time before becoming exhausted.

Each extra use the item gains draws 7 charges from the glowstone.

Dwarves or gnomes who can cast divine spells can release a beam of power from a glowstone on command.

This beam is a ray up to 90 feet long.

It deals 6d6 points of damage against any creature.

The ray deals full damage to objects.

Each beam released drains one charge from the glowstone.

One glowstone can recharge another.

A living being must hold a stone in each hand and will one stone to recharge the other.

One charge is drawn from the donor stone and transferred to the recipient stone each round.

The being conducting the transfer feels the energy flowing. After 1 minute, the flow of energy purifies the creature's body and neutralizes any poison, disease, infection, or embedded piece of foreign matter from the creature, including magical diseases such as mummy rot and lycanthropy.

If a glowstone is destroyed by an attack, it releases all its energy in a 70-foot spread.

The blast deals 10d10 points of damage as long as the glowstone has at least 1 charge remaining.

Creatures within 25 feet of the glowstone get no saving throws.

Creatures more than 25 feet away can attempt Reflex saves (DC 23) for half damage.

Every glowstone had 1,000 charges when made, but they typically have  $d\% \times 10$  charges remaining when found.

A glowstone with no charges remaining fades and becomes an inert, nonmagical stone.

Caster Level: 20th; Weight: 1/2 lb.

GREAT DRUID'S STAFF

These powerful items are usually carved from the heartwood of an oak centuries old, or occasionally from a more exotic wood, such as mahogany or even the wood of a treant.

The staff is a +2 quarterstaff and has a variety of spell-like powers that are activated by spell trigger.

Some of the staff's powers drain charges, while others do not.

Each staff has a head carved in the shape of a creature, as follows:

d%	Creature
01–20	Dire wolf
21–40	Dire boar
41–60	Dire bear
61–80	Giant eagle
81–100	Giant owl

Once per day, the staff wielder can summon 1d3 creatures of the type shown on the staff's head.

Except for the type of creature summoned, this works like a summon nature's ally VII spell and costs no charges.

Also once a day, the wielder can dominate up to 36 Hit Dice worth of animals in a 1,500-foot-radius spread centered on the wielder.

This effect affects each animal, from the closest to the farthest, until the next animal would take it over the 36 HD limit.

Each animal is affected as if by a dominate animal spell (DC 14).

This power uses no charges.

The wielder can generate any of the following spell-like effects.

- Pyrotechnics (1 charge, DC 13)
- Quench (1 charge, fire-based creatures take 15d6 [no save], DC 16 against a single magic item)
- Ice storm (1 charge)
- Sleet storm (1 charge, DC 16)
- Dispel magic (1 charge)
- Pass without trace (1 charge)
- Tree shape (1 charge)
- Call lightning (2 charges, 10d10, DC 14)
- Cure serious wounds (2 charges)
- Plant growth (2 charges)
- Remove disease (2 charges)
- Speak with plants (2 charges) The wielder can produce each of the following spell-like effects once a month (no charges).
  - Insect plague (DC 17)
  - Summon nature's ally V
  - Transmute rock to mud (DC 17)
  - Wall of fire (DC 17)
  - Wall of thorns The great druid's staff gives the wielder a spell resistance of 23.

If the spell resistance is willingly lowered, however, the staff can also be used to absorb arcane spell energy directed at its wielder exactly like a rod of absorption (see Chapter 8: Magic Items in the DUNGEON MASTER's Guide).

The staff uses spell levels as charges, not as spell energy usable by a spellcaster.

If the staff absorbs spell levels beyond its 50-charge limit, it blackens into a charred cinder and is destroyed.

The wielder has no idea how many spell levels are cast at him, for the staff does not communicate this knowledge as a rod of absorption does.

Absorbing spells is risky, but absorption is the only way to recharge the staff.

Caster Level: 20th; Weight: 5 lb.

GREENSTONE AMULET

These highly prized items are fist-sized green stones worked into some kind of smooth shape, usually like a flattened egg, but sometimes like a shield or helmet.

The wearer of a greenstone amulet is protected as if under a mind blank spell.

The user also gains a +4 resistance bonus against necromancy effects, or any effect that would transport the wearer to another locale or dimension.

If such an effect normally does not allow a saving throw (such as the maze spell), the user can attempt a Will save (DC 20) to negate the effect.

A greenstone amulet must be worn against the skin and glows brightly whenever it functions.

Caster Level: 15th; Weight: —.

MOONBLADE

These swords, sometimes called elf blades, are heirlooms of noble elven families.

Only a few are known to exist, and these are jealously guarded.

Still, rumors of dormant moonblades persist. A moonblade is an intelligent sword (usually a longsword) with an enhancement bonus of +1 to +5. A moonblade always has a good alignment (usually neutral good). A moonblade also has a special purpose to serve the scion of a particular elven family (see below for details). A line of runes decorates the blade, one rune for each wielder the blade has had. For each such rune, the moonblade has one ability from the list below. Moonblades are handed down from parent to child within the elven family the blade serves. The sword itself always determines which heir it belongs to. When a moonblade's owner dies, one of the owner's heirs can lay claim to the blade. If no worthy heir exists, the sword lies dormant and exhibits no magical powers at all. A moonblade only serves one owner at a time. To claim or awaken a moonblade, an elf or half-elf of the blade's alignment—and from the correct family—must hold the sword and perform the proper ritual. If the family the blade serves has died out, any elf or halfelf of the proper alignment can attempt to awaken the blade. The claiming/awakening ritual varies from blade to blade, but usually requires the blade to be unsheathed at the proper time and place (for example, in a royal throne room or place sacred to an elven deity). Upon completing the ritual, the sword either accepts or rejects the holder. Whether the sword accepts the holder is strictly up to the DM. In general, only brave and upstanding holders are accepted. Holders who have committed cowardly or selfish acts are rejected unless the holder has atoned for them in some way (such as receiving an atonement spell or performing some heroic or selfless act that wipes away the taint of the character's previous actions). Should the blade reject the holder, the holder receives 1d6 negative levels. These never result in actual level loss, but if the number of negative levels exceed the holder's level, the holder dies. If the holder survives, negative levels from the sword cannot be overcome in any way (including restoration spells) while the character holds the sword. If the sword accepts the new holder, the holder loses 5,000 XP and the sword attunes itself to the new holder. (If the holder lacks sufficient experience points to pay this cost, she cannot claim or awaken the blade). A new rune appears on the blade, and the sword gains a new ability. (A moonblade never accepts a new owner if characters attempt to pass it among themselves just to make it manifest new powers). A list of special abilities appropriate for moonblades appears below. The DM can pick one or generate it randomly. The elfshadow weapon special ability is known to exist only in moonblades. An elfshadow is an incorporeal creature, contained in a gem set in a moonblade, that resembles an elf. It has all the characteristics of an undead shadow, except that it has a neutral alignment and cannot be turned, rebuked, or controlled by clerics (nor can anyone except the moonblade's wielder control it in any way). When called forth, the elfshadow can appear anywhere within 250 feet of the moonblade wielder. Once called, the elfshadow can go anywhere on the same plane as the moonblade wielder. The wielder has complete control over the elfshadow, and controlling the creature is a free action for the wielder. The elfshadow always acts on the moonblade wielder's turn. Caster Level: 15th. Weight: Varies.

ROD OF VALMAXIAN

This powerful item gives a spellcaster an additional spell slot at each spell level she can cast. She must have the rod in hand when she prepares her spells (or readies her mind, if a bard or sorcerer) and it must remain in her possession at all times. If she stops carrying the rod, any extra prepared spells go away and any extra spell slots provided by the rod vanish. Spells already cast are unaffected. The rod can only add spell slots to one creature in any 24-hour period. Although this version of the rod functions for spell levels 0 through 9, there are reputed to be lesser versions created by bards, paladins, and rangers that only affect levels of spells available to those classes. Caster Level: 17th.

SHIMMARYN

These items look like sparkling jewels held in cages of elaborately plaited wire.

They are, in fact, tiny areas of dead magic held in a magical lattice.

When the shimmaryn touches a creature's bare flesh, the creature can will away all magical effects currently operating on it, just as though the creature had received a greater dispelling spell that is automatically successful. (Beneficial effects end along with any harmful ones).

The user must be conscious to employ the effect. Alternatively, the user can choose to become immune to all spells, spell-like effects, and supernatural effects for 3 rounds.

The wearer effectively has unbeatable spell resistance against spells and spell-like effects and a similar immunity to supernatural effects.

A shimmaryn is safe to use only three times each day.

Each additional use beyond the third per day permanently drains 1 point of Constitution from the user.

Caster Level: 20th; Weight: —.

PLANAR HANDBOOK (3.5)

CROWN OF CORRUPTION

This slender, black-and-silver diadem has rested atop Vlaakith's head for more than 900 years, serving as her badge of office and the means of testing any githyanki who would threaten her.

Those who have beheld the crown say it twitches of its own volition, and that the 5,000-gp rubies that adorn the crown's spires look something like flickering eyes.

The crown has the following command-word activated powers.

- Energy drain (Fort DC 23 negates).
- Mass suggestion (Will DC 19 negates).
- Control undead (Will DC 20 negates).

The crown of corruption has 30 hit points.

However, only a magic weapon with the holy and disrupting special abilities can damage it.

Caster level 25th; Weight 3 lb.

SCEPTER OF EPHELOMON

This ruby-encrusted, dragon-shaped scepter was Ephelomon's gift to the githyanki centuries ago when the pact with red dragons was forged.

Ephelomon gave the scepter to the first Vlaakith (the current Vlaakith's ancestor), saying, "Go forth and conquer all".

The scepter has the following powers.

- The bearer has total control over red dragons. Any red dragon that approaches within a half-mile of the scepter must succeed on a DC 35 Will save or be affected as by a dominate monster spell cast by a 30th-level caster.
- The bearer has immunity to fire and fear effects.
- Once per week, the bearer can create a gate through which a very old red dragon flies.

The dragon must immediately make a DC 35 Will save or serve the scepter-bearer without reward.

Even if the dragon makes its save, it is considered controlled as described in the gate spell and may be ordered to fight the scepter-bearer's foes, or the dragon can bargain with the bearer of the scepter.

The scepter of Ephelomon has 60 hit points and can be damaged only by the claws of Bahamut or one of his chosen vassals, by a magic weapon with the bane (evil dragons) special ability, or by the cold breath weapon of a good-aligned silver dragon.

If the scepter is destroyed, the pact between the githyanki and the red dragons dissolves.

The red dragons do not immediately turn against the githyanki, but only the most subservient ones will continue to serve or assist the githyanki in any way.

Red dragons in Vlaakith's service continue to serve the lich-queen out of fear, but not loyalty.

Caster level 30th; Weight 5 lb.

PLAYER'S GUIDE TO FAERÛN (3.5)

SHATTERING SWORDS OF CORONAL YNLOETH

This artifact is actually a pair of +5 holy speed longswords, which were once owned by a Coronal of Shantel Othreier during the Crown Wars.

Though many ancient elven ballads and epics mention Coronal Ynloeth and his mighty blades, the ultimate fate of the swords remains uncertain.

It is known that the blades were wielded in several major battles of the Crown Wars, including the Battle of the Gods' Theater in -10,700 DR.

Ynloeth himself died mysteriously in -10,600 DR, shortly before Shantel Othreier fell to the Vyshaantar Empire.

The ultimate fate of the shattering swords is not known for certain, but they are believed to lie somewhere in the region of Hellgate Keep.

When wielded individually, the shattering swords of Coronal Ynloeth function as mere +2 longswords.

If wielded simultaneously, they take on their full abilities as described above, and the wielder may unlock the blades' greatest power.

Once per year, the blades may be struck together in a specific manner and shattered.

The shards of the swords multiply into a storm of razor-sharp steel, which scours a 500-foot-radius burst centered on the wielder, slaying any creature that fails a DC 30 Reflex save.

Success indicates that the creature takes 15d6 points of damage instead.

Unfortunately, this effect also slays the wielder of the shattering swords (no save) and destroys his body to the extent that a true resurrection spell is required to bring him back.

The shattering swords of Coronal Ynloeth reform at a random location somewhere in Faerûn 24 hours after being shattered.

Strong transmutation; CL 20th; Weight 4 lb. each.

PLAYER'S HANDBOOK 2

(3.5)

VARIANT DECK OF MANY THINGS

While the standard deck of many things is a powerful magic item that can have extreme effects on PCs, the variant presented here uses the retraining and rebuilding rules from the Player's Handbook II to let players accomplish these changes instantaneously rather than over time... even though they might not get exactly what they wished for. Alternately, a specially-preserved single card from this variant deck may be a quest reward or a rare treasure item, allowing that player who's been aching to "fix" his character to do so without taking away game time from the other players.

(Note: if presented as a single card, the rules for drawing cards do not apply; the character merely activates the card as if it were a normal single-use magic item).

Notes on the Deck

The retraining and rebuilding from these cards is instantaneous and requires no expenditure of money or time.

These effects are often class-specific, this deck is more likely that a typical deck of many things to result in something inapplicable for the character (such as a fighter drawing a card affecting a wizard's specialist schools).

Because of this, many cards require the character to draw another card if an inapplicable card is chosen.

Many of the cards refer to races and classes found in the Player's Handbook, but have effects that are applicable to races and classes from other sources.

For example, the Innate Magic card affects bards and sorcerers, but there are classes in other books that likewise do not require spell preparation and have a limited number of spells known.

The DM should feel free to allow these card effects to apply to characters with such classes as well as standard classes listed on the card.

The character with a deck of many things who wishes to draw a card must announce how many cards she will draw before she begins.

Cards must be drawn within 1 hour of each other, and a character can never again draw from this deck any more cards than she has announced (unless a drawn card allows or requires her to draw an additional card; see below).

If the character does not willingly draw her allotted number (or if she is somehow prevented from doing so), the cards flip out of the deck on their own.

Some cards say the character may draw another card, sometimes they say the character must draw again.

"May" means an optional draw; the character is not obligated to draw again and these extra draws do not count toward the original number she said she would draw.

"Must" is a required draw; the character is required to draw an additional card (or cards) and this extra draw does not count toward the original number she said she would draw.

Each time a card is taken from the deck, it is replaced (making it possible to draw the same card twice) unless the draw is The Victim or The Gambler, in which case the card is discarded from the pack.

A deck of many things contains 54 cards (use a standard 52-card deck with two jokers).

Aspect of Divinity: If you are a cleric, retrain one of your domains to another of your deity's domains.

If you are not a cleric you must draw again.

Draconic Heritage: Rebuild your character with the half-dragon template (you lose class levels to compensate for the template's level adjustment).

You choose what type of half-dragon you become (gold, red, and so on).

If you already have this template, do not rebuild your character; you must draw again.

(See Savage Progressions, for information on taking only some of the template's abilities in exchange for a lower level adjustment).

Earthkin: Rebuild your character as a dwarf or gnome instead of your current race.

You may choose a dwarven race with a level adjustment (such as duergar or svirfneblin), but you must lose class levels to compensate for it.

If you are already a dwarf or gnome, do not rebuild your character; you must draw again.

(See Savage Progressions, for information on taking only some of the template's abilities in exchange for a lower level adjustment).

Hellfire: Rebuild your character with the fiendish or half-fiend template (you lose class levels to compensate for the template's level adjustment).

If the template's alignment change would cause you to lose class abilities (such as if you are a paladin), do not rebuild your character; you instead must draw two cards.

If you already have one of these templates, do not rebuild your character; you must draw again.

(See Savage Progressions, for information on taking only some of the template's abilities in exchange for a lower level adjustment).

Holy Light: Rebuild your character with the celestial or half-celestial template (you lose class levels to compensate for the template's level adjustment).

If the template's alignment change would cause you to lose class abilities (such as if you are a blackguard), do not rebuild your character; you instead must draw two cards.

If you already have one of these templates, do not rebuild your character; you must draw again.

(See Savage Progressions, for information on taking only some of the template's abilities in exchange for a lower level adjustment).

Innate Magic: If you are a sorcerer or bard, retrain any two of your spells known; one of these must be a spell of the highest level you can cast.

If you are not a sorcerer or bard you must draw again.

Invulnerable: If you have an energy resistance or immunity as a class or racial ability, retrain or rebuild that ability to a different kind of energy (for example, from electricity to sonic).

If your resistance or immunity is coupled with a vulnerability to a different energy type (such as how fire immunity is associated with cold vulnerability), your vulnerability changes appropriately.

If you have no energy resistance or vulnerability from a class or racial ability you must draw again.

Life and Death: If you are neutral and have a class ability that allows you the choice of channeling positive or negative energy (such as for turning or rebuking undead, or spontaneously casting cure or inflict spells), retrain that class ability so it is the opposite of your current selection.

If your deity does not allow you to channel this type of energy (for example, all neutral clerics of Wee Jas channel negative energy, while all neutral clerics of St. Cuthbert channel positive energy), do not retrain this ability; you instead must draw two cards.

If you have no such class ability you must draw again.

Prestigious Enterprise: Rebuild one class level into a prestige class level for any prestige class for which you qualify.

If you do not qualify for any prestige class or this rebuilding would cause you to no longer qualify for one of your current prestige classes, do not rebuild your character; you instead must draw two cards.

Saving Grace: Retrain your Great Fortitude, Iron Will, or Lightning Reflexes feat to one of the other two saving throw bonus feats.

If you do not have any of these feats, or you have all three, you must draw again.

Spellbender: Retrain one metamagic feat you know for any other metamagic feat.

If you know no metamagic feats you must draw again.

The Acrobat: Retrain 4 skill ranks into the Tumble skill (even if Tumble is not a class skill for any of your classes).

If this would cause you to exceed the maximum skill rank for your level, do not retrain this skill; you must draw again.

The Barbarian: Retrain one barbarian level for one barbarian substitution level (or barbarian-like prestige class level, at the DM's discretion), or rebuild one class level to one barbarian level (if you are lawful, this means you are an ex-barbarian which does not affect your other classes, such as your ability to progress as a monk or paladin).

The Bard: Retrain one bard level for one bard substitution level (or bard-like prestige class level, at the DM's discretion), or rebuild one class level to one bard level (if you are lawful, this means you are an ex-bard which does not affect your other classes, such as your ability to progress as a monk or paladin).

The Buffoon: Rebuild your Charisma, reducing it by 4. Use the points from rebuilding to improve any other ability scores.

If this would reduce your Charisma below 8, do not rebuild your ability score; you must draw again.

The Cleric: Retrain one cleric level for a cleric substitution level (or cleric-like prestige class level, at the DM's discretion), or rebuild one class level to one cleric level (this does not affect your other classes, such as your ability to progress as a monk or paladin).

The Craftsman: Retrain one item creation feat you know for any other item creation feat.

If you know no item creation feats you must draw again.

The Daydreamer: Rebuild your Wisdom, reducing it by 4. Use the points from rebuilding to improve any other ability scores.

If this would reduce your Wisdom below 8, do not rebuild your ability score; you must draw again.

The Diplomat: Retrain 4 skill ranks into the Diplomacy skill (even if Diplomacy is not a class skill for any of your classes).

If this would cause you to exceed the maximum skill rank for your level, do not retrain this skill; you must draw again.

The Druid: Retrain one druid level for one druid substitution level (or druid-like prestige class level, at the DM's discretion), or rebuild one class level to one druid level (if you have a nondruidic alignment this means you are an ex-druid which does not affect your other classes, such as your ability to progress as a monk or paladin).

The Eavesdropper: Retrain 4 skill ranks into the Listen skill (even if Listen is not a class skill for any of your classes).

If this would cause you to exceed the maximum skill rank for your level, do not retrain this skill; you must draw again.

The Exile: Rebuild your character as an orc or half-orc instead of your current race.

If you are already an orc or half-orc, do not rebuild your character; you must draw again.

The Fighter: Retrain one fighter level for one fighter substitution level (or fighter-like prestige class level, at the DM's discretion), or rebuild one class level to one fighter level (this does not affect your other classes, such as your ability to progress as a monk or paladin).

The Footpad: Retrain 4 skill ranks into the Move Silently skill (even if Move Silently is not a class skill for any of your classes).

If this would cause you to exceed the maximum skill rank for your level, do not retrain this skill; you must draw again.

The Gambler: Draw one card.

You may accept or ignore the results of that card.

If you ignore that card's results you must draw another card and accept its effects (though this second card may allow you to bypass its effects and draw another card).

The Gregarious Neighbor: Rebuild your character as a human instead of your current race.

If you are already a human, do not rebuild your character; you must draw again.

The Halfwit: Rebuild your Intelligence, reducing it by 4. Use the points from rebuilding to improve any other ability scores.

If this would reduce your Intelligence below 8, do not rebuild your ability score; you must draw again.

The Heroic Feat: Retrain any one feat you know for any other feat.

The Investigator: Retrain 4 skill ranks into the Search skill (even if Search is not a class skill for any of your classes).

If this would cause you to exceed the maximum skill rank for your level, do not retrain this skill; you must draw again.

The LummoX: Rebuild your Dexterity, reducing it by 4. Use the points from rebuilding to improve any other ability scores.

If this would reduce your Dexterity below 8, do not rebuild your ability score; you must draw again.

The Mage's Dilemma: If you are a nonspecialist wizard, retrain as a specialist wizard.

If you are a specialist wizard, retrain as a specialist of a different school or as a nonspecialist wizard.

If this would cause you to lose class abilities from a prestige class (such as if your prestige class requires you to be a specialist), do not rebuild your character; you instead must draw two cards.

If you are not a wizard, you must draw again.

The Monk: Retrain one monk level for one monk substitution level (or monk-like prestige class level, at the DM's discretion), or rebuild one class level to one monk level (if you are nonlawful, this means you are an ex-monk which does not affect your other classes, such as your ability to progress as a paladin).

The Moon: Rebuild your character with the lycanthrope template (you lose class levels to compensate for the template's level adjustment).

You choose the type of lycanthrope (werebear, wereboar, and so on).

If the template's alignment would cause you to lose class abilities (such as if you are a monk or paladin with a nonlawful template), do not rebuild your character; you instead must draw two cards.

If you already have a lycanthrope template, do not rebuild your character; you must draw again.

(See Savage Progressions, for information on taking only some of the template's abilities in exchange for a lower level adjustment).

The Paladin: Retrain one paladin level for one paladin substitution level (or paladin-like prestige class level, at the DM's discretion), or rebuild one class level to one paladin level (if you are not lawful good, this means you are an ex-paladin which does not affect your other classes, such as your ability to progress as a monk).

Blackguards who rebuild in this manner may trade in this "new" paladin level for additional blackguard abilities as detailed in the blackguard class description.

The Ranger: Retrain one ranger level for one ranger substitution level (or ranger-like prestige class level, at the DM's discretion), or rebuild one class level to one ranger level (this does not affect your other classes, such as your ability to progress as a monk or paladin).

The Ranger's Dilemma: If you are a ranger, retrain your combat style for any other available combat style.

If you are not a ranger, you must draw again.

The Rogue: Retrain one rogue level for one rogue substitution level (or rogue-like prestige class level, at the DM's discretion), or rebuild one class level to one rogue level (this does not affect your other classes, such as your ability to progress as a monk or paladin).

The Sickly One: Rebuild your Constitution, reducing it by 4.

Use the points from rebuilding to improve any other ability scores.

If this would reduce your Constitution below 8, do not rebuild your ability score; you must draw again.

The Small Folk: Rebuild your character as halfling instead of your current race.

You may choose a halfling race with a level adjustment, but you must lose class levels to compensate for it.

If you are already a halfling, do not rebuild your character; you must draw again.

The Sorcerer: Retrain one sorcerer level for one sorcerer substitution level (or sorcerer-like prestige class level, at the DM's discretion), or rebuild one class level to one sorcerer level (this does not affect your other classes, such as your ability to progress as a monk or paladin).

The Speaker: Retrain any two languages you know for any two other languages (you may retrain racial languages).

You may draw again.

The Spellcrafter: Retrain 4 skill ranks into the Spellcraft skill (even if Spellcraft is not a class skill for any of your classes).

If this would cause you to exceed the maximum skill rank for your level, do not retrain this skill; you must draw again.

The Trapbreaker: Retrain 4 skill ranks into the Disable Device skill (even if Disable Device is not a class skill for any of your classes).

If this would cause you to exceed the maximum skill rank for your level, do not retrain this skill; you must draw again.

The Ultimate Weapon: If you are a fighter with the Weapon Focus feat, choose any other weapon for that feat (for example, change "longsword" to "greatsword") and any other feats in that chain relating to that weapon (Weapon Specialization, Greater Weapon Focus, Greater Weapon Specialization, and so on).

If you are not a fighter, retrain any one feat you know for the Weapon Focus feat (selecting a weapon of your choice).

The Unarmed Master: If you are a monk, retrain one, two, or three of your monk bonus feats to any other appropriate monk bonus feats.

If you are not a monk, you must draw again.

The Unseen: Retrain 4 skill ranks into the Hide skill (even if Hide is not a class skill for any of your classes).

If this would cause you to exceed the maximum skill rank for your level, do not retrain this skill; you must draw again.

The Vampire: Rebuild your character with the vampire template (you lose class levels to compensate for the template's level adjustment).

If this would cause you to lose class abilities (such as if you are a good cleric or a paladin), do not rebuild your character; you instead must draw two cards.

If you already have this template, do not rebuild your character; you must draw again.

(See Savage Progressions, for information on taking only some of the template's abilities in exchange for a lower level adjustment).

The Victim: Retrain any one feat you know for any other feat.

You must draw two more cards.

The Vigilant: Retrain 4 skill ranks into the Spot skill (even if Spot is not a class skill for any of your classes).

If this would cause you to exceed the maximum skill rank for your level, do not retrain this skill; you must draw again.

The Weakling: Rebuild your Strength, reducing it by 4.

Use the points from rebuilding to improve any other ability scores.

If this would reduce your Strength below 8, do not rebuild your ability score; you must draw again.

The Wizard: Retrain one wizard level for one wizard substitution level (or wizard-like prestige class level, at the DM's discretion), or rebuild one class level to one wizard level (this does not affect your other classes, such as your ability to progress as a monk or paladin).

The Zealot: Retrain 4 skill ranks into the Knowledge (religion) skill (even if Knowledge (religion) is not a class skill for any of your classes).

If this would cause you to exceed the maximum skill rank for your level, do not retrain this skill; you must draw again.

Trusted Companion: If you have an animal companion or familiar, you must dismiss it (at no penalty) and immediately select another of a different kind.

The new creature is available immediately.

You may reclaim items worn or carried by the original creature before dismissing it and give them to the new creature.

Any feats or class abilities that would affect the creature (such as a feat that adds abilities or hit dice to your familiar or animal companion) immediately affect the new creature.

If you do not have an animal companion or familiar, you must draw again.

Woodkin: Rebuild your character as an elf or half-elf instead of your current race. You may choose an elven race with a level adjustment (such as drow), but you must lose class levels to compensate for it.

If you are already an elf or half-elf, do not rebuild your character; you must draw again.

The Victim	Red Joker	Retrain any feat. You must draw two more cards.

PSIONICS HANDBOOK

(3.0)

SUTRA OF TRANQUIL THOUGHT

This monastic tome describes ancient techniques of mental focus and is highly prized by psionic practitioners.

Study of the work requires one week of solitary contemplation, but upon completion, the psionic character gains 17 additional power points and experience points sufficient to place him halfway to the into the next level of experience.

Nonpsionic beings possess minds too clouded to benefit from its secrets, and those who use their powers for evil (such as mind flayers) are punished for their impertinence, losing 5d6×1,000 XP for defiling the book.

They also run the risk of insanity: The reader must make an immediate Will save (DC 15) or become permanently insane as the power.

Only psychic surgery or similarly extreme measures can restore sanity.

To anyone without psionic aptitude, the book's pages appear to contain nothing but elaborate patterns and drawings of mysterious beings.

Once read, the book vanishes into the Astral Plane to an unknown destination.

Even if it is found again, the same character cannot benefit twice from perusing its contents.

SANDSTORM (3.5)

DEAD THRONE

The Dead Throne is a minor artifact created millennia ago by a deity of the underworld and then stolen by a clever thief. The thief successfully hid it from the sight of the deity of the underworld, and lived a long and happy life ruling a small kingdom from it.

After his death, the throne fell into the hands of his descendants, who stashed the throne in the royal treasury. Many years later, an invading warlord looted the treasury, taking the throne back to his kingdom—which was in turn looted many years later, and so on, until the Dead Throne ended up in the treasure vaults of the king of Sohlak, and thus passed into the unwitting hands of Ten-Ap the Sand King.

In appearance, the Dead Throne doesn't live up to its name. It is a rather elaborate piece of woodwork, a large, heavy seat carved out of dark, polished mahogany.

Whoever sits upon the throne hears an unearthly voice offer a bargain: "Rule my minions, and I will grant you life everlasting".

Of course, life everlasting is actually a state of undeath, and any creature that agrees to the bargain becomes a lich (see page 166 of the Monster Manual), even if the creature is not a spellcaster.

The throne itself acts as a kind of phylactery.

As mentioned previously, the lich is unable to move more than 100 feet away from the throne without crumbling to dust.

If a living being sits upon the throne and agrees to the bargain while someone else is in possession of the Dead Throne, the previous lich is destroyed as the new one is created.

Ten-Ap is fully aware of this, and is wary about getting farther away from his throne than any potential enemies. The concern that a minion could usurp his position is also the main reason Ten-Ap rarely allows any of his intelligent undead into the throne room; he is not sure if another undead being can take his place on the throne, and he's not willing to take the risk.

The Dead Throne also grants the following powers to its lich servant.

Create Undead: As a full-round action, the lich can convert any living creature within 60 feet of the throne to an undead.

The lich must be seated upon the throne to use this ability. Unwilling creatures are entitled to a DC 22 Will save to avoid the effect.

The lich can choose to convert the living creature into a skeleton, a zombie, a mummy, a shadow, a spectre, or a wraith.

A mummy created in this fashion can continue to advance as a character, while a shadow, spectre, or wraith can advance as indicated in the Monster Manual for that type of creature.

(A wraith, after sufficient time, can become a dread wraith).

Control Undead: The lich can command up to 100 Hit Dice of undead simultaneously, so long as they are within 100 feet of the lich.

The effect lasts for 12 hours, and is otherwise identical to the spell of the same name.

Ten-Ap mainly uses this ability to force information out of the undead heads in area E.

If the lich in possession of the Dead Throne is destroyed, or the throne itself is destroyed, all of the undead created by the lich (or by undead created by the lich) are also immediately destroyed.

SHINING SOUTH (3.5)

DREAD DOORWAY

Perhaps the most infamous item known to come from Halruaa's magical history, a dread doorway is a truly frightening item to encounter.

Three forms of dread doorways are known.

Annihilation Doorway: This item is usually more of a passage or tunnel than an actual door.

It is often carved or constructed to look like something else, such as a demonic head with its mouth (the passage) open wide, a water slough between levels of a dungeon, and so forth.

The open space of an annihilation doorway functions as a sphere of annihilation, except that the black void is shaped to match the passage and it cannot be moved by any means. A creature passing through an annihilation doorway is utterly consumed and destroyed.

Only the intervention of a deity can reverse the effect. Strong transmutation; CL 20th.

Imprisoning Doorway: Like an annihilation doorway, an imprisoning doorway is often more of a passage or tunnel. Any creature passing through the doorway is instantly bound into the door (as per the trap the soul spell) unless it makes a DC 22 Will save.

Spell resistance does not apply.

An imprisoning doorway can hold up to 100 HD of creatures, and when new victims are imprisoned, creatures that have been trapped in the doorway the longest are released to keep the total at or below this maximum.

To all outward appearances, an affected creature seems to disappear (or shapechange into a new form, if another creature is released).

If an imprisoning doorway is destroyed, all the creatures bound within it are released (DM determines randomly; hostile creatures immediately attack others in the area). Strong conjuration; CL 20th.

Wraith Doorway: This form of dread doorway houses a dread wraith inside (see page 258 of the Monster Manual).

The door is always encountered locked, and it usually also has other magical means of barring passage.

Each time a creature touches or walks through a wraith doorway (or each round, if continuous contact is maintained or a creature stands in the open doorway for consecutive rounds), it must succeed on a DC 22 Fortitude save or take 1d8 points of Constitution drain.

If a creature is slain by this drain, it rises as a wraith 1d4 rounds later.

The dread wraith within a dread doorway cannot be turned or attacked while imprisoned in the dread doorway. Destroying the door releases the dread wraith, which immediately attacks.

At that point, the dread wraith can be attacked normally. Strong necromancy; CL 19th.

GREAT ELIXIR

Of all the tales of powerful magic that have emerged from Halruaa, the legend of the great elixirs is perhaps the most remarkable.

The first great elixir concoction possibly originated in Netheril itself.

Regardless of their origins, the chaotic nature of these liquids made them an unappealing risk, and the formula for their creation was eventually lost and forgotten.

Some caches of the unpredictable stuff do pop up every once in a while.

A great elixir is a translucent, aquamarine liquid that twinkles and swirls gently about in endless motion.

It is described as tasting like fine wine on fire.

Oddly, the fluid works on a particular creature only once per experience level; additional consumptions generate no results.

The possible effects of a dose of the elixir are as follows:

d%	Elixir Result
01–14	Death occurs instantly (no saving throw).
15–26	A feeblemind condition (as the spell) sets in (no saving throw).
27–32	Imbiber is infected with mindfire (see Diseases, page 292 of the Dungeon Master's Guide ). If the imbiber is an arcane spellcaster, her spells turn wild and unpredictable—75% of the times she attempts to cast a spell, the normal result is replaced by a result from the rod of wonder table, page 237 of the Dungeon Master's Guide . This spellcasting affliction is permanent unless the imbiber makes a DC 25 Fortitude save. It lasts 4d12 days if the save succeeds.
33–39	Blindness sets in (no saving throw).
40–46	Imbiber is subjected each day to an uncontrolled shapechange (as the spell) into a random beast that breathes air and can live on dryland (no saving throw). The change lasts for 1d4 hours, but the daily occurrence of the change is permanent.
47–56	Imbiber is afflicted with lycanthropy (DM's choice of lycanthrope, no saving throw).
57–75	Imbiber takes 1 point of ability drain to one random ability score (no saving throw).
76–77	Imbiber gains mage armor spell-like ability 4/day.*
78–79	Imbiber gains alter self spell-like ability 1/day.*
80–81	Imbiber gains detect magic spell-like ability at will.*
82	Imbiber gains dimension door spell-like ability 1/day.*
83	Imbiber gains dispel magic spell-like ability 3/day.*
84–85	Imbiber gains detect thoughts spell-like ability 2/day.*
86	Imbiber gains feather fall spell-like ability at will.*
87	Imbiber gains hold person spell-like ability 1/day.*
88	Imbiber gains invisibility spell-like ability 2/day.*
89	Imbiber gains pass without trace spell-like ability at will.*
90	Imbiber gains spell turning spell-like ability 1/day.*
91–92	Imbiber gains spider climb spell-like ability 3/day.*
93	Imbiber gains water breathing spell-like ability 3/day.*
94	Imbiber gains ethereal jaunt spell-like ability 1/day.*
95	"Greatness"—imbiber gains 1d2+1 of the powers listed above (from d% roll of 76 through 94; other powers can be created at the DM's discretion).
96–100	Imbiber gains 2d4 points of either Intelligence or Charisma (50% chance of either) and permanent greater spell immunity against one school of spells (randomly determined).

*As cast by a 12th-level wizard.

Overwhelming transmutation; CL 30th.

ZARANGAN

Each one of these wondrous stones, almost certainly created in Netheril, is a smooth rock that has been polished to a glassy sheen.

A zarangan is shaped to fit in a wielder's hand, with small protrusions jutting up between the fingers of a closed fist. In this way, it can function as a +1 weapon that deals 1d4+1 points of damage.

A zarangan's main powers are far more impressive—an individual grasping the stone can, on command:—use dimension door as the spell 1/round as a 20th-level wizard;

—use word of recall to teleport to the zarangan's “home” (a destination determined during the item’s creation) 1/day;
—use cure critical wounds (on the bearer only) 1/day.
A zarangan often has its command word inscribed on its surface somewhere.

It can only transport the individual grasping it, regardless of how many other creatures are in contact with the bearer. It frees the bearer from all nonmagical restraints and forcibly separates him from the grasp of other creatures when it is called upon to use its word of recall ability. In addition to the above common faculties, each zarangan also has additional unique capabilities.

First, it has one of the following spells as an ability usable 1/hour: chain lightning, cone of cold, invisibility, lesser ironguard, levitate, unseen servant, or water breathing. Second, it grants spell immunity against 1d3 spells (determined randomly).

Many zarangans were carried to Halruaa after the fall of Netheril, and several have been taken to other lands or buried in ancient tombs in the intervening years.

More than a few liches have manufactured a zarangan that has since found its way elsewhere, and those who try to use one of these mysterious stones might find themselves in an undead wizard’s home, far from their own.

Strong varies; CL 19th; Weight 2 lb.

TOME OF MAGIC (3.5)

BOOK OF TRUE BINDS

The Book of True Binds is a legendary item coveted by those who practice truename binding.

Description: The Book of True Binds is a massive tome 2 feet wide and 3 feet tall.

The book’s binding appears to be of maroon leather, embedded with silver, cold iron, and adamantine runes depicting a variety of summoning circles.

When held, the person touching the tome hears a susurrant of telepathic whimpers, screams, and wails of despair. This massive tome contains hundreds of pages of thick vellum, but most of them are blank.

Only twenty pages still bear inscriptions.

Each page contains the truename of an outsider or elemental of great power, even more potent than those summonable by a greater truename binding spell.

It is said that long ago every page of this book was filled with a creature’s name and description, but as the creatures died, the corresponding pages about them went blank.

Outsiders and elementals are eternal creatures that do not die natural deaths, so scholars speculate that they must have died in battle, but a few wonder if being bound by the book might have caused more than one such creature to commit suicide.

Activation: A page from the Book of True Binds take 10 minutes to read aloud.

Effect: Each of the twenty pages of the book contains the truename and description of a creature of CR 15 to CR 20. Reading a page aloud summons the creature as if by a truename binding spell.

The reader can negotiate with the creature using either a Charisma check or a Truespeak check.

If the reader rolls a 1, the creature will endeavor to take the book away or, failing that, kill the reader.

If a creature is killed either while bound or not, the page corresponding to that creature turns blank.

Aura/Caster Level: Strong conjuration. CL 20th.

Weight: 10 lb.

TOME OF TRUENAMING

Several copies of the minor artifact known as the tome of truenaming are known to exist.

The book enables the reader to learn and, if desired, change her own truename.

Description: Bound with azure blue cloth, a tome of truenaming is a small square book, measuring only a handspan in diameter with only a few pages made of line, transparent onion-skin-fine paper.

The paper appears to be filled with tiny script.

Activation: Despite its small size, a tome of truenaming takes one week to read.

Effect: To each reader, the book is a perfect biography of his life.

The volume reveals to the reader the most personal and intimate details about him and recounts every major and many minor events of his life.

The effect of this is to reveal to the reader his personal truename.

Aura Caster Level: Strong abjuration. CL 18th.

Weight: —.

UNAPPROACHABLE EAST (3.5)

IRONWOOD

This 6-foot-long staff is cast to resemble rough-hewn wood, despite the fact it is composed entirely of rusted iron.

It possesses many baleful and dangerous abilities.

As its primary abilities, the Ironwood gives the user the following spell powers, which she can use at will and at no charge:

Fog cloud

Soften earth and stone

Spike stones (DC 16)

Stone shape

The following spell powers drain one charge each:

Control water

Move earth

Transmute mud to rock (DC 17)

Transmute rock to mud (DC 17)

Wall of stone

These powers drain 2 charges per use:

Create shambling mound (special)

Command plants (DC 16)

Earthquake (DC 22)

Iron body Create

Shambling Mound (sp): The Ironwood has the unique extraordinary power to create a shambling mound from any suitably sized mass of dead vegetation (roughly two 5-foot cubes of material).

This power requires 10 minutes to employ.

The wielder of the Ironwood can use the staff's command plants power to attempt to control the new shambler, if she so chooses.

The Ironwood is recharged by destroying another magic item through cancellation, an extraordinary power that works much like a rod of cancellation.

The wielder must succeed in a melee touch attack to strike an item held by another character.

The item gains a Will save (DC 19) to avoid destruction; use the bearer's Will save if it is better than the target item's.

The Ironwood regains 1 charge for every +1 bonus value of the item in question, or 1 charge per full 10,000 gp value for items without a numerical description, to a maximum of 5 charges per item destroyed.

The Ironwood has a maximum capacity of 50 charges; if it absorbs more than 50 charges, it is canceled and destroyed itself.

The Ironwood is intelligent and neutral evil.

It has Intelligence 17, Wisdom 19, and Charisma 14 and can communicate by speech or telepathy.

Its Ego is 26.

Caster Level: 20th; Weight: 12 lb.

SHAZZELURT

A potent magic dagger in the possession of Lauzoril, the zulkir of enchantment, Shazzelurt is a hateful weapon almost two thousand years old.

It has a wavy blade with a hilt of iron curved into a flame motif.

Shazzelurt is a +3 keen dagger with Intelligence 15, Wisdom 9, and Charisma 14.

It is neutral evil and possesses the following abilities:

Detect magic at will (primary ability)

Detect secret doors at will (primary ability)

Heal 1/day (extraordinary power)

Its special purpose is to slay bards and rogues.

Any such character struck by Shazzelurt must succeed a Fortitude save (DC 16) or be disintegrated as the spell.

Shazzelurt's Ego score is 16.

Caster Level: 20th; Weight: 2 lb.

UNDERDARK (3.5)

BOOK OF PERFECT BALANCE

This holy book is sacred to divine spellcasters of neutral alignments (NG, LN, N, CN, NE).

Study of the work requires one week, but upon completion, a divine spellcaster with one of the designated alignments gains a +1 inherent bonus to Wisdom and experience points sufficient to place him halfway into the next level of experience.

Any nonneutral divine spellcaster (LG, CG, LE, CE) loses 4d6×1,000 experience points for perusing the work.

Nonspellcasters who handle or read the book are unaffected.

An arcane spellcaster who reads it takes 1 point of Intelligence drain and loses 1d6×1,000 experience points unless a DC 15 Will save is made.

Except as indicated above, the writing in a book of perfect balance cannot be distinguished from that of any other magic book, libram, tome, or the like until perused.

Once read, the book vanishes, never to be seen again.

The same character cannot ever benefit from reading a second, similar tome.

Strong transmutation; CL 19th; Weight 3 lb.

PORTAL DEMOLISHER

The portal demolisher looks like a small, sturdy rod or miniature portable ram, but it has devastating effects upon portals.

The mere touch of the portal demolisher utterly destroys a portal (Fort DC 20 negates).

A portal demolisher actually carried through a portal (intentionally or not) destroys it with no save allowed, although the user reaches the other side before the portal is wrecked.

Strong transmutation; CL 20th; Weight 3 lb.

TALISMAN OF PURE NEUTRALITY

A purely neutral (N only) divine spellcaster who possesses this item can cause a flaming crack to open at the feet of a nonneutral (LG, CG, LE, CE) divine spellcaster up to 100 feet away.

The intended victim is swallowed up forever and sent hurtling to the center of the earth.

If the wielder of the talisman is not exceptionally balanced in the sight of her neutral deity (DM's discretion), the nonneutral target gains a DC 19 Reflex saving throw to leap away from the crack.

The target must be standing on solid ground for this item to function.

A target in the air, in a high tower, or on a ship is immune to the effects of this otherwise potent item.

A talisman of pure neutrality has 7 charges.

Any partly neutral (LN, NG, CN, NE) divine spellcaster who touches it takes 6d6 points of damage, and an entirely nonneutral (LG, CG, LE, CE) divine spellcaster who touches it takes 8d6 points of damage.

All other characters are unaffected by the item.

Strong transmutation; CL 18th.

TOME OF BOOKS

This book enables a scholar or wizard to take his library with him virtually anywhere.

Each of its 250 pages can hold an entire book—even a bulky, heavy, wizard's spellbook.

To put a book into the tome of books, the owner simply lays the book on a blank tome page and speaks the filing command word.

The book disappears, and an illustration of the book appears on the page, along with its title and a brief synopsis of its contents.

A book cannot be placed into a page that already stores a book.

To get a book out of the tome, the owner must open it to the book's page and speak the retrieving command word. Filing or retrieving a book is a full-round action.

If the tome of books is destroyed, all its stored books are also lost.

Strong conjuration; CL 20th; Weight 3 lb.

UNDERDARK MAP, LESSER

This map shows all the tunnels, caves, and caverns within a 250-foot radius of itself.

It reveals only natural formations and functions exclusively in one level of the Underdark (Upperdark, Middledark, or Lowerdark).

Strong divination; CL 20th; Weight —.

UNIVERSAL KEY

The creation of the universal key is attributed to the slyths. Legend holds that a very potent slyth sorcerer and magical theorist named Glythum found a multitude of ways to manipulate his shapechanging ability and spells, thereby creating many fascinating items.

A universal key opens any mundane or magic lock.

In addition, it functions as the key to any keyed portal.

Strong transmutation; CL 20th.

<sup>1</sup> See the description of this armor for special rules.

BARK

This armor is carefully crafted from the tough bark of ancient trees and is treated to prevent it from becoming brittle over time.

Strips of bark are layered together over a quilted layer of felt or hide.

Bark armor is more flexible than wooden armor but does not provide as much protection.

Druids can wear bark armor without losing access to their spells and class features.

Bark armor includes arm, leg, chest, and back protection, but it does not include gauntlets.

BONDLEAF WRAP

Bondleaf wraps are each crafted from a single enormous leaf found on magical trees.

A bondleaf wrap is inactive until worn for 24 hours.

During this time, it grows into the skin, drawing water and nutrients from its host.

Afterward, as a standard action, you can command it to wrap around your body.

BONE

Bone armor is a cloth or leather coat reinforced with strips of bone, often cut from animals used for food.

The armor covers the torso but leaves the limbs free for better mobility.

BRIGANDINE

Brigandine armor consists of a coat of leather plates, each plate consisting of leather with a strip of steel inside it. It is essentially a light form of splint mail.

BUCKLER, BEETLE

This buckler is actually a Tiny scarab beetle that latches onto the forearm.

You must wear the beetle for a full day before the beetle buckler confers any bonus to Armor Class.

Once it's attuned to its wearer, the beetle buckler is effectively a masterwork buckler with a nonmagical +1 enhancement bonus to Armor Class.

With a command word, you can detach the beetle. Then the beetle takes wing, darting around your body and blocking ranged attacks (as the Deflect Arrows feat, but using the beetle's Reflex save bonus, not your own). The beetle cannot be ordered to attack, but it defends itself if attacked.

☛ Beetle Buckler: CR 1/2; Tiny vermin; HD 1d8; hp 4; Init +6; Spd 10 ft., fly 40 ft. (good); AC 24 (touch 18, flat-footed 18); Atk -3 melee (1d3-5, bite); Face/Reach 2 1/2 ft. by 2 1/2 ft./0 ft.; SQ Deflect arrows, vermin traits; AL N; SV Fort +2, Ref +6, Will +0; Str 1, Dex 23, Con 10, Int —, Wis 10, Cha 2.

Skills and Feats: Hide +14, Listen +4, Move Silently +10, Spot +4.

Deflect Arrows (Ex): When detached from its shield position, a beetle buckler darts about in its owner's space, blocking one ranged attack per round as the Deflect Arrows feat.

Vermin Traits: Immune to all mind-influencing effects; darkvision 60 ft.

CORAL

Commonly worn by warriors of seafaring races, such as merfolk and tritons, coral armor is not so much created as grown.

Exotic and rare corals are shaped over time to create armor for a specific person.

Someone wearing coral armor that was not grown for them takes an additional -1 armor check penalty.

Coral armor covers only the top half of the wearer—breastplate and bracers.

Swim speed is reduced by 10 feet when wearing coral armor.

However, because of its design, coral armor effectively weighs 10 pounds less in water.

Growing coral armor requires the Craft (coralshaping) skill.

CORD

Fibers of hemp or other natural material woven and knotted into a thick, tough fabric are the basis for cord armor.

The armor forms a complete suit, hampering movement but offering decent protection without the use of metal or leather.

Cord armor is particularly popular among wild elves, who often avoid curing animal hide.

DASTANA

This pair of metal bracers can be worn in addition to some other types of armor to provide an additional armor bonus that stacks with both the foundation armor and any shield worn.

You can wear dastana with padded, leather, or chain shirt armor.

You need the Armor Proficiency (light) feat to wear dastana without penalty.

DENDRITIC

Dwarf armorsmiths grow dendritic armor from seed crystals deep underground; dendritic armor never reaches the smith's fire.

Each suit of dendritic armor is tailored for a specific wearer. This superb armor is socketed rather than riveted together, leaving almost no gaps or chinks.

It protects better than full plate armor, but is also heavier and more cumbersome.

Dendritic armor constantly grinds crystal flecks off, and regrows itself to its original shape.

Anyone tracking a person wearing dendritic armor gains a +2 circumstance bonus on skill checks from the fine trail of crystals left behind.

To remove dendritic armor, you must break your way out by succeeding at a Strength check (DC 25).

As long as you leave at least 5 pounds of dendritic armor somewhere on your body, the armor grows back in 8 hours.

LAMELLAR

Similar to splint and brigandine armor, lamellar lies between the two in protective value.

It consists of small, overlapping plates of metal sewn together or stitched to a backing of leather or cloth.

LEATHER SCALE

Leather scale armor is just like the scale mail described in Chapter 7 of the Player's Handbook, except that the scales are made of cured leather instead of metal.

MOON-IVY

Moon-ivy armor is a close-fitting bodysuit that grows every night and dies at the end of every day.

You put on a wreathlike choker before going to sleep.

Overnight, a tight but flexible bodysuit of ivy grows over your body.

When you awaken, you are wearing a tough, fibrous light armor.

Removing the choker causes the moon-ivy armor to wither in 5 rounds.

For an additional 500 gp, one of the following types of ivy can be grafted into the armor.

Poison Ivy: The ivy exudes a poisonous resin.

Once per day, if you succeed on a grapple check, your foe must make a Fortitude save (DC 14).

If the defender fails, he takes initial and secondary damage of 1d3 points of temporary Constitution.

This poison never affects the wearer.

Explosive Spores: The ivy is laced with noxious, explosive spores.

Each day, the ivy grows 1d3 spore pods, to a maximum of ten pods.

Whenever you are struck in combat with a bludgeoning attack, one of the spores explodes into the space from which the attack came.

Anyone in that 5-foot square must succeed on a Fortitude save (DC 14) or be nauseated for 1d6 rounds.

Once all of a day's spores are exhausted, the effect is inert until the next day.

This nausea never affects the wearer.

Pheromones: Once per day, the ivy exudes pheromones that make you seem more attractive.

The pheromones grant a +3 bonus on all Charisma-based checks for 3 hours.

The bonus doubles to +6 if you attempt to influence a creature with scent, but moon-ivy pheromones do not affect constructs or undead.

QUICK-ESCAPE

Ingeniously crafted, this armor uses special buckles, straps, and releases so it can be removed in mere moments.

It is a favorite of wealthy sailors and adventurers who anticipate going near bodies of water.

As a standard action, the wearer pulls and twists on a special lock, located on the shield-side hip, which causes the armor to fall away.

Each lock is unique in operation, making it difficult for anyone other than the owner to undo, especially in the middle of battle.

A Disable Device check (DC 30) is required for someone other than the wearer to release the armor in combat. If the Disable Device attempt is made while the wearer is not in combat (a rogue sneaking up on a sleeping guard, for example), then the DC is reduced to 15.

The quick-escape extra must be included during the creation of the armor, which must be of masterwork quality.

It takes twice as long as normal to put on quick-escape armor.

RING

Ring armor is composed of tough leather, heavily reinforced with hundreds of small metal rings.

Ring armor is the precursor to chainmail and is commonly found in cultures that haven't discovered how to create that type of armor.

It is a cheap and effective protection, popular among town guards.

SHELL

This armor is created out of specially treated tortoise shells and more exotic sea life.

The armormaking process softens the shells, making them far more pliable and likely to bend instead of shatter when struck.

Shell armor includes a breastplate, shoulder guards, and even gauntlets created from smaller and smaller shells.

Druids can wear shell armor without losing access to their spells or class features.

SHIELD, STILETTO

This small wooden shield has a special switch located on the inside grip.

When triggered, four blades pop out from the edges of the shield, and one larger blade springs out from the middle. Triggering and retracting the blades is a free action.

When the blades are activated, the stiletto shield counts as a spiked shield in all respects.

STONE, DWARVEN

Found almost exclusively among dwarven kingdoms, this extremely rare armor is created from thin sheets of a specially treated stone resembling marble.

Dwarven stone armor is very heavy and more ornamental than practical; consequently it is the dress uniform for many dwarven defenders.

It provides impressive protection, as long as the person wearing it does not plan on moving very fast.

Dwarven stone armor includes greaves and helmet, but not gauntlets.

WICKER

Wicker armor is the poor soldier's last resort.

Tightly woven reeds cover the entire body, offering slightly more protection than normal clothes, although the wicker is bulky and loud.

The main advantage of wicker armor is its low cost and light weight.

Clever armorsmiths sometimes weave thorns into the wicker, effectively creating spiked armor.

WOOD

Similar to bone armor, wood armor is cloth or leather reinforced with strips of wood.

DRACONOMICON (3.5)

DRAGONCRAFT ARMOR OR SHIELD

Dragoncraft armor and shields are masterwork versions of armor and shields crafted from a dragon's hide that also grant energy resistance.

A suit of dragoncraft armor or a dragoncraft shield grants the wearer resistance 5 against a specific type of energy, as appropriate to the dragon (acid for black, copper, or green; cold for silver or white; electricity for blue or bronze; fire for brass, gold, or red).

This resistance is treated as an extraordinary (and thus nonmagical) feature of the armor.

It doesn't stack with any other energy resistance (of the same type) possessed by the character.

In addition, dragoncraft armor is treated as one category lighter for purposes of movement and other determinations.

Heavy dragoncraft armors are treated as medium, and medium and light armors are treated as light.

Armor check penalties are reduced by 2 (including the 1-point reduction for masterwork armor or shield).

Dragoncraft armor has the normal maximum Dexterity bonus.

Dragoncraft armor can be hide armor, scale mail, halfplate, or full plate armor.

Dragoncraft shields can be light or heavy.

Dragoncraft Price: 3,000 gp (light armor); 6,000 gp (medium armor); 11,000 gp (heavy armor); Dragon Part: dragon hide;

Skill: Craft (armorsmithing); Weight: same as ordinary armor or shield.

DRAGONS OF FAERÛN (3.5)

DIAMOND SHIELD

Similar in function to a Kara-Turan kote or a vambrace, a diamond shield consists of four isosceles triangular metal sheets shaped into the form of a diamond, then bent along both axes and riveted together along the seams with 2-inch-wide strips of metal.

A diamond shield protects the off-hand forearm and upper arm, binding sharply at the elbow.

When fighting defensively, the wielder of a diamond shield can make melee attacks at a -2 penalty with the off-hand weapon, not the normal -4 penalty.

A diamond shield is otherwise equivalent to a buckler except as noted below.

Cost 20 gp; Weight 6 lb.

FIEND FOLIO (3.5)

RESIN SUIT

A kaorti resin suit consists of thin straps of alchemically treated resin that are wrapped around the body fully, similar to a mummy's bandages.

A resin suit is light armor with the following properties: +4 armor bonus, +3 maximum Dex bonus, -4 armor check penalty, 25% arcane spell failure chance.

Creatures other than kaortis can wear resin suits, but the resin causes most humanoids to break out in hives.

In addition to its armor qualities, a kaorti resin suit protects a creature on the Material Plane from the effects of the environment.

Resin suits are costly and time-consuming to make; ordinary kaorti (those with 1 HD) are only rarely allowed to use them as a result.

Cost: 250 gp.

Weight: 20 lb.

GHOSTWALK (3.0)

TABLE 1-9: ARMOR

						(30 ft.)	(20 ft.)
Thurkasian breastplate	250 gp	+5	+3	-4	25%	20 ft.	15 ft.	30 lb.

THURKASIAN BREASTPLATE

This armor is designed to be put on quickly and removed easily.

The major pieces are all attached by small leather cords and rivets, allowing it to be draped over your body all at once.

Donning this armor hastily or removing it is a full-round action, rather than taking 1 minute.

Donning the armor normally takes 3 minutes.

It is otherwise identical to a standard breastplate.

The chitin is treated for flexibility, then cut and reshaped into long strips.

These strips are bound together by tightly woven cord when necessary.

Siege beetle chitin armor is always masterwork in quality, and it provides its wearer with resistance to electricity 5 and resistance to sonic 5.

A druid who wears chitin armor crafted from a siege beetle shell does not lose access to spells or class features.

Chitin armor is medium armor that has the following characteristics.

MONSTER MANUAL 5 (3.5)

CHITIN

Siege beetle chitin is highly desirable for making chitin armor.

Δ This armor is not commonly found in Rokugan.

ASHIGARU ARMOR

Ashigaru armor is a light and inexpensive armor worn by farmers conscripted into a daimyo's army.

It consists of a light breastplate and thigh protectors made of laced metal plates (hara-ate), shin guards (sune-ate), and a light helmet resembling a round straw hat (jingasa).

BONE ARMOR

Bone armor is sometimes worn by nezumi or barbarian soldiers or sorcerers.

The armor consists of a cloth or leather coat reinforced with strips of bone, and leaves the limbs free.

BRIGANDINE

Brigandine armor consists of a coat of leather plates, each plate consisting of leather with a strip of steel inside it.

It is essentially a light form of splint mail, and is common in many cultures in Oriental Adventures.

CHAHAR-AINA

This "four mirror armor" can be worn over certain other types of armor to provide an additional armor bonus that stacks with both the foundation armor and any shield worn.

A character can wear a chahar-aina effectively over padded, leather, or chain shirt armor.

A character needs Armor Proficiency (medium) to wear a chahar-aina without penalty.

CORD ARMOR

Cord armor consists of ropelike fibers woven and knotted into a thick, tough fabric.

It is typically found among more barbaric cultures or in places where leather is scarce.

DASTANA

These large metal bracers can be worn in addition to some other types of armor to provide an additional armor bonus that stacks with both the foundation armor and any shield worn.

A character can wear dastana with padded, leather, or chain shirt armor.

A character needs Armor Proficiency (light) to wear dastana without penalty.

DHENUKA

This heavy hide armor is made from the skin of a rhinoceros.

It is more commonly enhanced by magic than regular hide armor, and often carries magic related to the strength of the rhino.

GREAT ARMOR

Great armor, called o-yoroi, is a full suit of armor formed from small metal plates tied together with colored leather lacings and lacquered to seal them from moisture.

The full suit consists of a corselet (do-maru, covering the stomach, chest, shoulders, and back), large rectangular shoulder pieces (sode), an apron of large plates to cover the thighs and knees (haidate), a great helmet with a face mask (kabuto), and shin guards made of metal splints (suneate).

Wearing great armor is a badge of honor for samurai of the noble caste, and they frown on anyone else wearing a suit—including shugenjas.

KAPPA SHELL

Nezumi soldiers occasionally use kappa shells for protection, strapping the hard shell to their backs and crawling on all fours to advance their position. Used this way, a kappa shell functions much like a tower shield, providing nine-tenths cover (+10 to AC, +4 on Reflex saves, with half damage on a failed save and none on a successful save) as long as the covered nezumi remains on all fours, moving at half his speed.

Once engaged in melee, a sensible ratling sheds the shell entirely.

Humans can use kappa shells as well, but generally find the concept demeaning.

A character needs Shield Proficiency to use a kappa shell without penalty.

LAMELLAR

Similar to splint and brigandine armor, lamellar lies between the two in protective value.

It consists of small, overlapping plates of metal sewn together or stitched to a backing of leather or cloth.

LEATHER SCALE

Leather scale armor is just like the scale mail described in the Player's Handbook, except that the scales are made of cured leather instead of metal.

PARTIAL ARMOR

A light suit of armor for samurai who do not wish to be heavily burdened, partial armor consists of a breastplate protecting the chest, stomach, and back (haramaki-do), thigh covering (haidate), and shin guards (sune-ate).

TESSEN

A tessen acts much like a buckler, though you cannot wield a weapon in the same hand as the tessen.

However, you can use the tessen as an off-hand weapon, dealing 1d3 points of damage (×2 crit).

Used this way, the tessen is a martial bludgeoning weapon. For purposes of attack penalties, treat a tessen as a light weapon.

If you use a tessen as a weapon, you lose its AC bonus until your next action (usually until the next round).

A character needs Shield Proficiency to use a tessen without penalty.

<sup>2</sup> When running in heavy armor, you move only triple your speed, not quadruple.

HOOKED ARMOR

This leather armor is festooned with multiple hooks and cleats.

These gripping protrusions grant the wearer a +5 bonus on Climb checks.

(Due to the armor's -2 armor check penalty, the effective bonus is +3).

MECHANUS GEAR

This heavy armor is composed of multiple gears, cogs, plates, and other metal mechanical contraptions.

It grants an armor bonus superior to all other armors, but it reduces the wearer's speed more than other types of heavy armor do.

SECTIONED ARMOR

The owner of this specially constructed masterwork full plate can remove several of the large plate sections from it, reducing it to medium or light armor, so that he or she can sleep more comfortably or move more freely while retaining some of the armor's defensive bonus.

ARMOR FOR UNUSUAL CREATURES

Armor for unusually big creatures, unusually little creatures, and nonhumanoid creatures has different prices and weights from those given on Table 7-5: Armor. Armor for Gargantuan and Colossal creatures must be specially made and has no standard price or weight.

Size	Price	Weight	Price	Weight
Up to Tiny*	x1/2	x1/10	x1	x1/10
Small	x1	x1/2	x2	x1/2
Medium-size	x1	x1	x2	x1
Large	x2	x2	x4	x2
Huge	x4	x5	x8	x5

ARMOR SPIKES

You can have spikes added to your armor.

They allow you to deal 1d6 points of piercing damage (×2 crit) with a successful grapple attack.

The spikes count as a martial weapon.

If you are not proficient with them, you suffer a -4 penalty on grapple checks when you try to use them.

You can also make a regular melee attack (or off-hand attack) with the spikes, and they count as a light weapon in this case.

An enhancement bonus on a suit of armor does not improve the spikes' effectiveness, but the spikes can be made into magic weapons in their own right.

BANDED MAIL

This armor is made of overlapping strips of metal sewn to a backing of leather and chainmail.

The strips cover vulnerable areas, while the chain and leather protect the joints and provide freedom of movement.

Straps and buckles distribute the weight evenly. It includes gauntlets.

BREASTPLATE

A breastplate covers your front and your back.

It comes with a helmet and matching greaves (plates to cover your lower legs).

A light suit or skirt of studded leather beneath the breastplate protects your limbs without restricting movement much.

BUCKLER

This small metal shield is strapped to your forearm, allowing you to wear it and still use your hand.

You can use a bow or crossbow without penalty.

You can also use an off-hand weapon, but you suffer a  $-1$  penalty on attack rolls because of the extra weight on your arm.

This penalty stacks with those for fighting with your off hand and, if appropriate, for fighting with two weapons.

In any case, if you use a weapon in your off-hand, you don't get the buckler's AC bonus for the rest of the round.

You can't effectively bash someone with a buckler.

CHAIN SHIRT

A shirt of chainmail protects your torso while leaving your limbs free and mobile.

A layer of quilted fabric underneath it prevents chafing and cushions the impact of blows.

It comes with a steel cap.

CHAINMAIL

This armor is made of interlocking metal rings.

It includes a layer of quilted fabric underneath it to prevent chafing and to cushion the impact of blows.

Several layers of mail are hung over vital areas.

Most of the armor's weight hangs from the shoulders, making chainmail uncomfortable to wear for long periods of time.

It includes gauntlets.

FULL PLATE

This armor consists of shaped and fitted metal plates riveted and interlocked to cover the entire body.

It includes gauntlets, heavy leather boots, and a visored helmet.

You wear a thick layer of padding underneath it (included). Buckles and straps distribute the weight over the body, so full plate hampers movement less than splint mail even though splint is lighter.

Each suit of full plate must be individually fitted to its owner by a master armorsmith, although a captured suit can be resized to fit a new owner at a cost of 200 to 800 (2d4×100) gold pieces.

Full plate is also known as field plate.

GAUNTLET, LOCKED

This armored gauntlet has small chains and braces that allow the wearer to attach her weapon so that it cannot be dropped easily.

It adds a +10 bonus to any roll to keep from being disarmed in combat.

Removing a weapon from a locked gauntlet or attaching a weapon to a locked gauntlet is a full-round action that provokes attacks of opportunity.

The price given is for a single locked gauntlet.

The weight given only applies if you're wearing a breastplate, light armor, or no armor.

Otherwise, the locked gauntlet replaces a gauntlet you already have as part of the armor.

While the gauntlet is locked, you can't use the hand wearing it for casting spells or employing skills.

(You can still cast spells with somatic (S) components provided your other hand is free).

Like a normal gauntlet, a locked gauntlet lets you deal normal damage rather than subdual damage with an unarmed strike.

HALF-PLATE

This armor is a combination of chainmail with metal plates (breastplate, epaulettes, elbow guards, gauntlets, tasses, and greaves) covering vital areas.

Buckles and straps hold the whole suit together and distribute the weight, but the armor still hangs more loosely than full plate.

It includes gauntlets.

HIDE

This armor is prepared from multiple layers of leather and animal hides.

It is stiff and hard to move in.

Druids, who only wear nonmetallic armor, favor hide.

LEATHER

The breastplate and shoulder protectors of this armor are made of leather that has been stiffened by boiling in oil.

The rest of the armor is softer and more flexible leather.

PADDED

Padded armor features quilted layers of cloth and batting.

It gets hot quickly and can become foul with sweat, grime, lice, and fleas.

SCALE MAIL

This is a coat and leggings (and perhaps a separate skirt) of leather covered with overlapping pieces of metal, much like the scales of a fish.

It includes gauntlets.

SHIELD SPIKES

When added to your shield, these spikes turn it into a martial piercing weapon that deals 1d6 points of damage (×2 crit) no matter whether the shield is small or large. You can't put spikes on a buckler or a tower shield. Otherwise, attacking with a spiked shield is like a shield bash attack (see above).

SHIELD, LARGE OR SMALL, WOODEN OR STEEL

You strap a shield to your forearm and grip it with your hand.

LARGE SHIELD

A large shield is too heavy for you to use your shield hand for anything else.

SHIELD BASH ATTACKS

You can bash an opponent with a shield, using it as an off-hand weapon.

A Medium-size character deals 1d4 points of damage (×2 crit) with a large shield or 1d3 (×2 crit) with a small one. (You cannot bash with a tower shield).

A Small character deals 1d3 points of damage (×2 crit) with a large shield or 1d2 (×2 crit) with a small one.

Used this way, the shield is a martial bludgeoning weapon. For purposes of attack penalties, treat a shield as a light weapon.

If you use your shield as a weapon, you lose its AC bonus until your next action (usually until the next round).

SMALL SHIELD

A small shield's light weight lets you carry other items in that hand (although you cannot use weapons).

WOODEN OR STEEL

Wooden and steel shields offer the same basic protection, though they respond differently to special attacks (such as warp wood and heat metal).

SHIELD, TOWER

This massive wooden shield is nearly as tall as the wielder. Basically, it is a portable wall meant to provide cover.

It can provide up to total cover, depending on how far you come out from behind it.

A tower shield, however, does not provide cover against targeted spells; a spellcaster can cast a spell on you by targeting the shield you are holding.

You cannot bash with a tower shield.

SPLINT MAIL

This armor is made of narrow vertical strips of metal riveted to a backing of leather that is worn over cloth padding.

Flexible chainmail protects the joints.

It includes gauntlets.

STUDED LEATHER

This armor is made from tough but flexible leather (not hardened leather as with normal leather armor) reinforced with close-set metal rivets.

ARMOR FOR UNUSUAL CREATURES

Armor and shields for unusually big creatures, unusually little creatures, and nonhumanoid creatures have different costs and weights from those given on Table 7-6: Armor and Shields. Refer to the appropriate line on the table below and apply the multipliers to cost and weight for the armor type in question.

Size	Humanoid		Nonhumanoid
	Cost	Weight	Cost	Weight
Tiny or smaller <sup>1</sup>	×1/2	×1/10	×1	×1/10
Small	×1	×1/2	×2	×1/2
Medium	×1	×1	×2	×1

Huge	×4	×5	×8	×5
Gargantuan	×8	×8	×16	×8
Colossal	×16	×12	×32	×12

1 Divide armor bonus by 2.

ARMOR SPIKES

You can have spikes added to your armor, which allow you to deal extra piercing damage (see Table 7-5: Weapons) on a successful grapple attack.

The spikes count as a martial weapon.

If you are not proficient with them, you take a -4 penalty on grapple checks when you try to use them.

You can also make a regular melee attack (or off-hand attack) with the spikes, and they count as a light weapon in this case.

(You can't also make an attack with armor spikes if you have already made an attack with another off-hand weapon, and vice versa).

An enhancement bonus to a suit of armor does not improve the spikes' effectiveness, but the spikes can be made into magic weapons in their own right.

BANDED MAIL

This armor is made of overlapping strips of metal sewn to a backing of leather and chainmail.

The strips cover vulnerable areas, while the chain and leather protect the joints and provide freedom of movement.

Straps and buckles distribute the weight evenly.

The suit includes gauntlets.

BREASTPLATE

A breastplate covers your front and your back.

It comes with a helmet and greaves (plates to cover your lower legs).

A light suit or skirt of studded leather beneath the breastplate protects your limbs without restricting movement much.

BUCKLER

This small metal shield is worn strapped to your forearm. You can use a bow or crossbow without penalty while carrying it.

You can also use your shield arm to wield a weapon (whether you are using an off-hand weapon or using your off hand to help wield a two-handed weapon), but you take a -1 penalty on attack rolls while doing so because of the extra weight on your arm.

This penalty stacks with those that may apply for fighting with your off hand and for fighting with two weapons. In any case, if you use a weapon in your off hand, you don't get the buckler's AC bonus for the rest of the round. You can't bash someone with a buckler.

CHAIN SHIRT

A chain shirt protects your torso while leaving your limbs free and mobile.

It includes a layer of quilted fabric worn underneath to prevent chafing and to cushion the impact of blows. A chain shirt comes with a steel cap.

CHAINMAIL

This armor is made of interlocking metal rings. It includes a layer of quilted fabric worn underneath to prevent chafing and to cushion the impact of blows. Several layers of mail are hung over vital areas. Most of the armor's weight hangs from the shoulders, making chainmail uncomfortable to wear for long periods of time.

The suit includes gauntlets.

FULL PLATE

This armor consists of shaped and fitted metal plates riveted and interlocked to cover the entire body. The suit includes gauntlets, heavy leather boots, a visored helmet, and a thick layer of padding that is worn underneath the armor.

Buckles and straps distribute the weight over the body, so full plate hampers movement less than splint mail even though splint is lighter.

Each suit of full plate must be individually fitted to its owner by a master armorsmith, although a captured suit can be resized to fit a new owner at a cost of 200 to 800 (2d4×100) gold pieces.

Full plate is also known as field plate.

GAUNTLET, LOCKED

This armored gauntlet has small chains and braces that allow the wearer to attach a weapon to the gauntlet so that it cannot be dropped easily.

It provides a +10 bonus on any roll made to keep from being disarmed in combat.

Removing a weapon from a locked gauntlet or attaching a weapon to a locked gauntlet is a full-round action that provokes attacks of opportunity.

The price given is for a single locked gauntlet.

The weight given applies only if you're wearing a breastplate, light armor, or no armor.

Otherwise, the locked gauntlet replaces a gauntlet you already have as part of the armor.

While the gauntlet is locked, you can't use the hand wearing it for casting spells or employing skills.

(You can still cast spells with somatic components, provided that your other hand is free).

Like a normal gauntlet, a locked gauntlet lets you deal lethal damage rather than nonlethal damage with an unarmed strike.

HALF-PLATE

This armor is a combination of chainmail with metal plates (breastplate, epaulettes, elbow guards, gauntlets, tasses, and greaves) covering vital areas.

Buckles and straps hold the whole suit together and distribute the weight, but the armor still hangs more loosely than full plate.

The suit includes gauntlets.

HIDE

This armor is prepared from multiple layers of leather and animal hides.

It is stiff and hard to move in.

Druids, who wear only nonmetallic armor, favor hide.

LEATHER

The breastplate and shoulder protectors of this armor are made of leather that has been stiffened by boiling in oil. The rest of the armor is made of softer and more flexible leather.

PADDED

Padded armor features quilted layers of cloth and batting. It gets hot quickly and can become foul with sweat, grime, lice, and fleas.

SCALE MAIL

This armor consists of a coat and leggings (and perhaps a separate skirt) of leather covered with overlapping pieces of metal, much like the scales of a fish.

The suit includes gauntlets.

SHIELD SPIKES

When added to your shield, these spikes turn it into a martial piercing weapon that increases the damage dealt by a shield bash as if the shield were designed for a creature one size category larger than you (from 1d4 to 1d6, for instance).

You can't put spikes on a buckler or a tower shield.

Otherwise, attacking with a spiked shield is like making a shield bash attack (see above).

An enhancement bonus on a spiked shield does not improve the effectiveness of a shield bash made with it, but a spiked shield can be made into a magic weapon in its own right.

SHIELD, HEAVY, WOODEN OR STEEL

You strap a shield to your forearm and grip it with your hand.

A heavy shield is so heavy that you can't use your shield hand for anything else.

SHIELD BASH ATTACKS

You can bash an opponent with a heavy shield, using it as an off-hand weapon.

See Table 7–5: Weapons for the damage dealt by a shield bash.

Used this way, a heavy shield is a martial bludgeoning weapon.

For the purpose of penalties on attack rolls, treat a heavy shield as a one-handed weapon.

If you use your shield as a weapon, you lose its AC bonus until your next action (usually until the next round).

An enhancement bonus on a shield does not improve the effectiveness of a shield bash made with it, but the shield can be made into a magic weapon in its own right.

WOODEN OR STEEL

Wooden and steel shields offer the same basic protection, though they respond differently to special attacks (such as warp wood and heat metal).

SHIELD, LIGHT, WOODEN OR STEEL

You strap a shield to your forearm and grip it with your hand.

A light shield's weight lets you carry other items in that hand, although you cannot use weapons with it.

SHIELD BASH ATTACKS

You can bash an opponent with a light shield, using it as an off-hand weapon.

See Table 7–5: Weapons for the damage dealt by a shield bash.

Used this way, a light shield is a martial bludgeoning weapon.

For the purpose of penalties on attack rolls, treat a light shield as a light weapon.

If you use your shield as a weapon, you lose its AC bonus until your next action (usually until the next round).

An enhancement bonus on a shield does not improve the effectiveness of a shield bash made with it, but the shield can be made into a magic weapon in its own right.

WOODEN OR STEEL

Wooden and steel shields offer the same basic protection, though they respond differently to special attacks (such as warp wood and heat metal).

SHIELD, TOWER

This massive wooden shield is nearly as tall as you are.

In most situations, it provides the indicated shield bonus to your AC.

However, you can instead use it as total cover, though you must give up your attacks to do so.

The shield does not, however, provide cover against targeted spells; a spellcaster can cast a spell on you by targeting the shield you are holding.

You cannot bash with a tower shield, nor can you use your shield hand for anything else.

When employing a tower shield in combat, you take a –2 penalty on attack rolls because of the shield's encumbrance.

SPLINT MAIL

This armor is made of narrow vertical strips of metal riveted to a backing of leather that is worn over cloth padding.

Flexible chainmail protects the joints.

The suit includes gauntlets.

STUDED LEATHER

This armor is made from tough but flexible leather (not hardened leather as with normal leather armor) reinforced with close-set metal rivets.

RACES OF FAERÛN (3.0)

TABLE A–2: ARMOR

Armor	Cost	Armor Bonus	Maximum Dex Bonus	Armor Check Penalty	Arcane Spell Failure	—Speed—		Weight†

Shields
Grasping shield	50 gp	+1	—	–1	5%	—	—	11 lb.

* When running in heavy armor, you move only triple your speed, not quadruple.

† Armor fitted for Small characters weighs half as much.

CHITIN ARMOR

One of the most bizarre-looking of all the armor types, chitin armor is constructed from the shells of giant vermin or similar creatures.

For aquatic elves, giant crabs are the most popular sources for chitin armor.

Chitin is flexible and can be rather comfortable to wear, especially when the inner surfaces are polished and fitted with padding.

Chitin armor is not solely the invention of the aquatic elves; some savage cultures have developed the same type of armor using the bony plates of creatures such as giant scorpions, ankheg, and even remorhaz.

DENDRITIC CRYSTAL

Dwarf armorsmiths grow dendritic armor from seed crystals deep underground; dendritic armor never reaches the smith's fire.

Each suit of dendritic armor is tailored for a specific wearer. This superb armor is socketed rather than riveted together, leaving almost no gaps or chinks.

It protects better than full plate armor, but is also heavier and more cumbersome.

Dendritic armor constantly regrows itself to its original shape.

To remove dendritic armor, the wearer must break his way out, succeeding at a Strength check (DC 22).

As long as the wearer leaves at least 5 pounds of dendritic armor somewhere on his body, the armor grows back in 8 hours.

GRASPING SHIELD

These spiked small metal shields have a powerful spring inside them.

By releasing the spring, the wielder causes the spikes to collapse inward toward the center of the shield.

When this is done in melee combat, it allows the user to attempt to grasp and wrest away a weapon wielded by an opponent.

Like all shields, a grasping shield is considered a light weapon when attacking.

The grasping attack, when used, allows one disarm attempt. This disarm attempt does not provoke an attack of opportunity, nor does it allow the defender a chance to disarm the attacker.

All normal penalties for attacking with an off hand or with two weapons apply to the disarm attempt.

Once sprung, the grasping shield functions as a normal small metal shield until reset.

Resetting the shield is a full-round action that provokes an attack of opportunity.

MUD ARMOR

Creatures with access to the right sort of clays and soils (generally found in warm forests, jungles, and swamps) sometimes plaster their skin and hair with mud, creating a crude but effective form of armor.

Applying mud armor requires a successful Survival check (DC 10).

Mud armor crumbles into uselessness after 1d2 days.

Adorning yourself or another creature with mud armor takes 10 minutes, as does washing it off.

Wild dwarves are the only people who normally employ mud armor.

SHARKSKIN ARMOR

Sharkskin armor is similar to leather armor in appearance but is in fact slightly tougher.

Developed by reclusive sects of rare evil aquatic elves, it is treated so that the sharp scales covering the skin remain attached to the outer surface of the armor.

Additionally, shark teeth are embedded along the forearms, shoulders, and legs, which count as armor spikes.

Sharkskin armor provides a +6 circumstance bonus on Escape Artist checks made when the armored individual is bound with rope or similar easily cut materials.

Most aquatic elves are not fond of sharks (because sahuagin keep sharks as pets), and the thought of wearing sharkskin armor is repugnant to the typical aquatic elf.

BATTLE CLOAK, GNOME

This exotic shield is not a shield in the typical sense, but rather a special cloak that can be used to foil an opponent's attacks.

Since the cloak is not really a shield, it confers no shield bonus to wearers who do not have the appropriate exotic shield proficiency.

You cannot use a battle cloak to make a shield bash attack, but a proficient user can use it to make a disarm attempt.

When using a gnome battle cloak, you gain a +4 bonus on opposed attack rolls made to disarm an enemy (including the roll to avoid being disarmed if such an attempt fails).

When used in combat, a gnome battlecloak occupies a hand just as a light shield does, allowing you to carry other items in that hand but not wield a weapon with it.

Gnome battlecloaks are retrieved and readied just like other shields.

BATTLE PLATE

This exotic heavy armor consists of reinforced metal plates, a layer of padding worn under the armor, and a suit of light chain worn between the two.

The armor includes gauntlets, metal-shod boots, a heavy helm, and carefully wrought joint guards.

As with full plate, buckles and straps distribute the weight over the wearer's body, so battle plate hampers movement less than heavy plate even though heavy plate is lighter. Battle plate is dwarven armor, so a character with the Dwarven Armor Proficiency feat is considered proficient in its use.

FAST-DONNING STRAPS

Armor with fast-donning straps has been fitted with a simpler system of straps and buckles, making it much easier to don hastily.

Whenever you don fast-donning armor hastily, you do not incur the normal increase in armor check penalty (although the armor's armor bonus to AC is still 1 point less than normal).

HEAVY PLATE ARMOR

Forged for the strongest of warriors, heavy plate armor is simply a heavily reinforced suit of full plate armor.

INTERLOCKING PLATE

This specially crafted suit of exotic armor consists of a suit of chainmail with metal plates covering vital areas.

The plates are cunningly wrought, so that they lock together to offer greater protection when the wearer is relatively still.

If you move no farther than 5 feet on your turn while wearing interlocking plate, you gain an additional +2 armor bonus to your Armor Class until the beginning of your next turn.

This special armor bonus stacks with the armor bonus from the suit of interlocking plate (but not with armor bonuses from other sources).

Interlocking plate is dwarven armor, so a character with the Dwarven Armor Proficiency feat is considered proficient in its use.

INTERLOCKING SCALE

This heavy suit of exotic armor includes a long coat and leggings made of leather covered with overlapping pieces of metal.

The scales are cunningly wrought, so that they lock together to offer greater protection when the wearer is relatively still.

If you move no farther than 5 feet on your turn while wearing interlocking scale, you gain an additional +2 armor bonus to your Armor Class until the beginning of your next turn.

This special armor bonus stacks with the armor bonus from the suit of interlocking scale (but not with armor bonuses from other sources).

Interlocking scale is dwarven armor, so a character with the Dwarven Armor Proficiency feat is considered proficient in its use.

MAMMOTH LEATHER

Perfected by goliath shamans, this thick, exotic leather armor is made from mammoth hide.

Because of the leather's thickness, the armor is extremely confining for those who do not have the appropriate Exotic Armor Proficiency feat.

Wearing mammoth leather does not violate a druid's spiritual oath.

MOUNTAIN PLATE

Made of thick metal plates bolted and fused together, this exotic heavy armor is incredibly massive.

The suit includes plated gauntlets, metal-shod boots, a heavy helm, and reinforced joint guards.

A character wearing mountain plate cannot run.

When wearing mountain plate, a dwarf's speed is reduced as if he were not a dwarf (just as heavy armor would typically reduce the speed of a human or any other character who is not a dwarf).

Mountain plate is dwarven armor, so a character with the Dwarven Armor Proficiency feat is considered proficient in its use.

Mountain plate constructed of any material that would reduce its armor category from heavy to medium (such as mithral) gains all the benefits of the material except the armor category reduction.

For example, mithral mountain plate would be heavy armor with a maximum Dexterity bonus of +2, an armor check penalty of -6, and an arcane spell failure chance of 50%.

The wearer's speed remains as given for normal mountain plate.

RIDING STRAPS

Armor equipped with riding straps is specially fitted to allow the wearer maximum maneuverability while riding. Armor with the straps affixed grants a +1 circumstance bonus on Ride checks.

This bonus stacks with the bonus a military saddle provides on Ride checks made to stay in the saddle.

SHIELD SHEATH

This small sheath fits on the inside of a shield (but not a buckler) and holds one light weapon (of your size category or smaller).

As long as you have the shield ready, drawing the weapon in the shield sheath is a free action.

No shield can have more than one shield sheath attached to it.

SHIELD, EXTREME, WOODEN OR STEEL

You strap a large or larger shield to your forearm and grip it with your hand.

These exotic shields are so heavy that you can't use your shield hand for anything else while using one, nor can you make shield bash attacks.

WOODEN OR STEEL

Wooden and steel shields offer the same basic protection, but they respond differently to special attacks (such as warp wood and heat metal).

You need only take the Exotic Shield Proficiency (extreme shield) feat once to use both the wooden and steel versions proficiently.

SHIELD, GAUNTLET

A favorite of divine spellcasters, this exotic shield is a heavy steel shield built with a special bracing gauntlet.

The special gauntlet allows you to carry other items in your shield hand (such as material spell components), although you cannot use weapons with it.

The shield hand is likewise free to perform somatic spell components.

SHIELD, RIDER'S

This high-quality exotic heavy wooden shield is longer and heavier than other heavy shields.

If you have the Exotic Shield Proficiency (rider's shield) feat and use a rider's shield, you and your mount both gain the benefit of the shield's AC bonus.

SHIELD, TOWER, STEEL

This shield is identical to the tower shield described on page 125 of the Player's Handbook, except that it is made of steel and therefore responds differently to special attacks such as warp wood and heat metal. Characters proficient with the normal (wooden) tower shield are also automatically proficient with the steel tower shield.

SIGNATURE CREST

Armor emblazoned with a signature crest allows others to easily recognize the wearer.

Much like a noble's signet ring, the crest is a customized design unique to an individual or family. Identifying a signature crest correctly requires a DC 20 Knowledge (nobility and royalty) check (although the DM can adjust this DC as needed to reflect the relative fame of the individual or family).

STONE PLATE

This armor is made of interlocking stone plates, cunningly carved for both thinness and strength.

A layer of cured hide underneath the stone prevents chafing and cushions the impact of blows.

Several layers of stone plates usually hang over vital areas, and most of the armor's weight hangs from the shoulders. The suit includes hide gauntlets with tiny stone plates sewn onto them.

Wearing stone plate does not violate a druid's spiritual oath.

TUMBLER'S BREASTPLATE

This exotic armor resembles a normal breastplate that has been smoothed and polished to perfection.

Those skilled in its use can take advantage of the breastplate's protection when tumbling.

The wearer receives a +2 circumstance bonus on Tumble checks, but the normal armor check penalty still applies.

TWIST CLOTH, GNOME

This unusual exotic armor is made of loose, flowing cloth strips tied and hung on the wearer.

Proficient wearers twist and sway within the armor, causing their opponents to strike empty air rather than armor whenever they miss with an attack.

If you have the Exotic Armor Proficiency (gnome twist cloth) feat, the armor bonus from gnome twist cloth, including any enhancement bonus to AC, protects against touch attacks (unlike other armor bonuses to Armor Class, which do not apply against touch attacks).

RACES OF THE WILD (3.5)

FORESTWARDEN SHROUD

Elves invented this lightweight set of tunic and leggings, though it was quickly adopted by rangers and similar characters of all races.

A forestwarden shroud is worn over a suit of armor. It can be incorporated into any suit of armor during creation, or it can be added later.

Its slick surface allows branches and leaves to slide easily across it, negating the effect that undergrowth and heavy undergrowth has on the wearer's Tumble and Move Silently checks (see Forest Terrain, page 87 of the Dungeon Master's Guide).

A forestwarden shroud costs 100 gp and adds 2 pounds to the weight of a suit of armor.

NETCUTTER SPIKES

The raptorans developed netcutter spikes to help them avoid becoming immobilized in combat.

Netcutter spikes are slightly longer than regular armor spikes and have X-shaped cross-sections.

Each spike is sharpened along all four edges.

Netcutter spikes function just like armor spikes (see page 124 of the Player's Handbook).

In addition, a character proficient with the armor worn gains a +4 circumstance bonus on Strength checks or Escape Artist checks made to escape from a net, a web spell, or a similar entangling effect.

Netcutter spikes cost 200 gp and add 10 pounds to the weight of a suit of armor.

THISTLEDOWN SUIT

Long used in the creation of lightweight padded armor by elven crafters, the silken fabric known as thistledown (see Special Armor Materials, below) has recently been used in other armors as well by inventive halfling armorsmiths.

Any armor that normally incorporates an underlying layer of quilted fabric (including chain shirts, as well as any medium or heavy armor normally made of metal) can substitute a thistledown suit for the normal layer of fabric.

This alteration increases the armor's armor check penalty by 1 (because of the added bulk) but reduces its arcane spell failure chance by 5% (because the quilted thistledown makes the armor less restrictive for somatic gestures).

A thistledown suit requires a DC 15 Craft (tailoring) check to create and costs 250 gp.

It adds no weight to a suit of armor.

SANDSTORM (3.5)

TABLE 4-2: WASTELAND ARMOR

Armor	Cost	Armor/Shield Bonus	Maximum Dex Bonus	Armor Check Penalty	Arcane Spell Failure Chance	Speed (30 ft.)	Speed (20 ft.)	Weight <sup>1</sup>
Light Armor
Feather cloak	1,000 gp	+2	+6	0	10%	30 ft.	20 ft.	3 lb.
Silk swathes	400 gp	+1	+8	0	5%	30 ft.	20 ft.	6 lb.
Shields
Shield, hide	50 gp	+3	+4	-3	30%	—	—	30 lb.
Extras
Fins	50 gp	—	—	—	—	—	—	+2 lb.

FEATHER CLOAK

The waste is home to many birds, especially vultures. These creatures spend hours circling in the bright sunlight and baking updrafts of the desert, and their plumage helps protect them and keep them cool. Some clever waste-dwellers collect feathers and sew them onto a framework to create lightweight protection. Collecting so many feathers can take months, and considerable expertise is needed to create the garment, so feather cloaks are the purview of the wealthy and powerful. A feather cloak covers your torso and upper legs, having a broad-brimmed cap to protect the head. This type of armor does not impose the usual -4 penalty on Fortitude saves against damage dealt by hot environments and on Constitution checks to avoid heatstroke.

FINS

When added to a suit of armor, these thin metal projections allow your body to radiate heat more efficiently. While wearing a suit of armor fitted with fins, you take only a -2 penalty on Fortitude saves against damage dealt by hot environments and on Constitution checks to avoid heatstroke, instead of the usual -4.

SHIELD, HIDE

This tall, oval shield is made of animal hide stretched tightly over a wood or bone framework and reinforced with strips of hide. It is relatively lightweight while still providing cover as a tower shield does.

By giving up your attacks for the round, you gain total cover.

The shield does not, however, provide cover against targeted spells; a spellcaster can target the shield. Since it is made of lighter material than a tower shield, you take only a -1 penalty on attack rolls while wielding a hide shield in combat.

You cannot bash with a hide shield, nor can you use your shield hand for anything else.

SILK SWATHES

Although the desert does not support silkworms, some inhabitants of the waste have access to this exotic fabric through trade.

This sheer material is perfect for clothing in hot environments, and it can be used for armor. Silk swathes are nothing more than elaborately wrapped cloth strips.

Air trapped between layers allows the skin to respire, while the material itself absorbs moisture readily and dries quickly.

The wrapped layers are surprisingly effective against weapon blows.

However, donning this armor is time-consuming and difficult, taking as long and following the same rules as for donning full plate.

Silk swathes do not impose the usual -4 penalty on Fortitude saves against damage dealt by hot environments and on Constitution checks to avoid heatstroke.

SERPENT KINGDOMS (3.5)

TABLE IO-1: ARMOR

Armor	Cost	Armor Bonus	Maximum Dexterity Bonus	Armor Check Penalty	Arcane Spell Failure Chance	Speed (30 ft.)	Speed (20 ft.)	Weight <sup>1</sup>
Light Armor
Chameleon leather	360 gp	+2	+6	0	10%	30 ft.	20 ft.	15 lb.
Medium Armor
Serpentscale mail	800 gp	+5	+4	-3	20%	20 ft.	15 ft.	25 lb.
Thunderhide armor	25 gp	+3	+5	-2	20%	20 ft.	15 ft.	25 lb.

CHAMELEON LEATHER

Made from the hide of an ophidian, this armor is common only in human communities near the Serpent Hills. Serpentfolk who encounter a Scaleless One wearing such armor never begin with an attitude better than unfriendly. The breastplate and shoulder protectors of a suit of chameleon leather have been stiffened by boiling in oil. The rest of the armor is softer and more flexible. Chameleon leather retains some of the ophidian's color-changing capacity, granting the wearer a +2 circumstance bonus on Hide checks. All chameleon leather is of masterwork quality, since preserving the hide's chameleonlike properties requires the craftsmanship of a master leatherworker.

SERPENTSCALE MAIL

This armor consists of a coat, leggings, gauntlets, and a skirt of tanned snake hide on which the scales have been carefully preserved.

TABLE 5-4: AQUATIC ARMOR

Armor	Cost	Armor/Shield Bonus	Maximum Dex Bonus	Armor Check Penalty	Arcane Spell Failure Chance	Speed (30 ft.)	Speed (20 ft.)	Weight <sup>1</sup>
Light Armor
Cord	15 gp	+2	+5	-1	15%	30 ft.	20 ft.	15 lb.
Sharkskin	85 gp	+3	+6	-1	10%	30 ft.	20 ft.	15 lb.
Medium Armor

Chitin	75 gp	+4	+4	-3	30%	20 ft.	15 ft.	20 lb.
Living coral	16,000 gp <sup>2</sup>	+6	+3	-4	20%	20 ft.	15 ft.	30 lb.
Extras
Keel	50 gp	—	—	—	—	—	—	+2 lb.

CHITIN

Chitin armor is constructed from the shells of giant vermin or similar creatures.

For aquatic races, monstrous crabs are the most popular source for chitin armor.

The chitin is treated for flexibility and often cut and reshaped in long strips bound together by tightly woven cord where necessary.

CORD

Made from hemp fibers or similarly tough seaweed woven and knotted into a thick, tough covering, cord armor is common in places where metalworking and leatherworking are not practiced.

KEEL

This is a tapered ridge, like the long fin of an eel, that runs along the middle of the outer surface of a piece of armor, usually on the chest, back, and helmet. Adding a keel to a suit of armor lets the wearer move more efficiently through water.

Serpentscale mail can be fashioned from the hide of any serpentine creature at least one size category larger than the intended wearer.

All serpentscale mail is of masterwork quality, since the difficulty of its construction requires a master leatherworker.

THUNDERHIDE ARMOR

Named for the legendary Thunderers (dinosaurs) from which it is normally made, this armor is prepared from multiple layers of tanned reptile hide.

Thunderhide armor is relatively supple compared to other types of hide armor.

It is favored by druids from the Jungles of Chult, the Lizard Marsh, and the Serpent Hills.

STORMWRACK (3.5)

A suit of armor fitted with a keel grants the wearer a +2 circumstance bonus on Swim checks.

A keel does not confer any benefit to shields.

LIVING CORAL

Coral armor is heavy and difficult to craft (see page 15 of the Arms and Equipment Guide).

An expensive alternative is growing a casing of living coral over the wearer.

The user wears a medallion crafted from a piece of living reef, from which coral grows to envelop the body.

The living coral is tough but not as stony and inflexible as that of an established reef, allowing relatively free movement.

It dies at sundown and regrows again at sunup; this process takes about 2 hours.

Dark conditions also cause the coral to die, while extended light keeps it alive.

For an additional 500 gp, the following special ability can be grafted onto the coral.

STINGING POLYPS

The coral polyps' natural ability to sting prey is enhanced.

Once per day, if you get a hold while grappling, the opponent must make a DC 14 Fortitude save or be paralyzed for 1d4 rounds.

SHARKSKIN

Similar to leather armor in appearance, sharkskin is treated so that the sharp toothlike scales covering the skin remain attached to the outside of the armor.

Additionally, shark teeth are embedded along the forearms, shoulders, and legs, which count as armor spikes.

Sharkskin armor provides a +6 circumstance bonus on Escape Artist checks made when the wearer is bound with rope or similar easily cut bindings.

SHELL

This armor is created from specially treated tortoise or monstrous crab shells.

The armormaking process softens the shells, making them far more pliable and likely to bend instead of shatter when struck.

Shell armor includes a breastplate, shoulder guards, and even gauntlets created from smaller and smaller shells.

The main difference between shell and chitin armor is the degree of coverage; shell armor usually leaves the legs bare.

UNDERDARK (3.5)

TABLE 5-2: ARMORS

Stability weights	+160 gp	—	3	3	+10%	20 ft. <sup>2</sup>	15 ft. <sup>2</sup>	+30 lb.

1 Requires the appropriate Exotic Armor Proficiency feat.

2 When running in heavy armor, you move only triple your speed, not quadruple.

3 See text.

ARMOR RAZORS

Armor razors are sharp, jagged blades that can be added to armor in the same way that armor spikes can.

When you wear a suit of armor equipped with armor razors, you can deal extra slashing damage (see Table 5-1: Weapons) with a successful grapple attack.

The razors count as a martial weapon.

If you are not proficient with them, you take a -4 penalty on grapple checks when you try to use them.

You can also make a regular melee attack (primary or off-hand) with the razors, and they count as a light weapon in this case.

BUOYANCY

Many small, sealed bladders of air festoon the insides and outsides of buoyant armor.

The armor check penalty of any armor so treated increases by 1 but is not doubled for Swim checks.

CAMOUFLAGE

Subtle designs that simulate a particular type of terrain are painted upon the armor, and a special treatment seals it to prevent the paint from flaking.

Camouflage armor can be created to complement any type of terrain (aquatic, desert, forest, hill, marsh, mountain, plains, or underground).

A suit of armor cannot have more than one camouflage pattern on it at a time.

The camouflage treatment provides the wearer a +2 circumstance bonus on Hide checks made in the appropriate terrain, but the normal armor check penalty still applies.

CHITINE WEB

Chitines can harden their webbing into a form of armor.

Any chitine can equip himself with chitine web armor at no cost and maintain it indefinitely, but a nonchitine must pay a chitine weaver to manufacture a suit of web armor.

A suit of chitine web armor lasts for 3 months without deteriorating. Thereafter, it loses 1 point of armor bonus per month until it dissolves into uselessness. Any chitine can completely renew the armor by spending one day to refresh the oils in the webbing. This process typically costs 5 gp, presuming a cooperative chitine can be found.

FEELER PLATE

This exotic armor has numerous slender wires extending from it. It reduces the miss chance due to concealment for attacks against an adjacent foe by 10%. Thus, when you fight an opponent under the influence of a blur spell, your miss chance drops from 20% to 10%.

HEAVY PLATE ARMOR

Forged for the strongest of warriors, heavy plate armor is simply a heavily reinforced suit of full plate armor. Races of exceptional strength, most notably orogs, typically manufacture heavy plate armor.

MUFFLING

Fine strips of felt or velvet are placed at each joint of the armor, and cotton thread is wound around the links to prevent clanking. Muffling grants the wearer a +2 circumstance bonus on Move Silently checks.

NIGHTSCALE

Made from dark snakeskin steeped in mysterious alchemical mixtures, nightscale armor is much like leather armor, except that it is much more supple and formfitting. Many sorcerers and wizards favor this exotic armor.

SPIDERSILK

This exotic armor feels light and soft to wear, yet is strong and resilient. It is made from specially treated aranea or drider silk. The light weight of spidersilk armor makes it very attractive to those with low Strength scores.

STABILITY WEIGHTS

Armor equipped with stability weights is much heavier and more solid than regular armor of its type. The wearer receives a +2 circumstance bonus on Balance checks and a +2 circumstance bonus on Strength checks made to avoid being bull rushed or tripped. Stability weights reduce an armor's maximum Dexterity bonus by 1, increase its arcane spell failure chance by +10%, and increase its weight category by one step (light to medium, medium to heavy).

STONEMAIL

This armor is made of interlocking stone plates, cunningly carved for both thinness and strength. A layer of cured hide underneath the stone prevents chafing and cushions the impact of blows. Several layers of stone plates usually hang over vital areas, and most of the armor's weight hangs from the shoulders. The suit includes hide gauntlets with tiny stone plates sewn onto them. Stonemail does not violate a druid's spiritual oaths.

TENTACLED HIDE

This exotic armor resembles a rubbery suit of hide armor with long, sweeping tentacles attached at the bottom. These tentacles grant a trained wearer a +2 bonus on Strength checks made to trip opponents.

ABOLETH OIL

Transformation takes 1d4+1 minutes.

A transformed creature must remain moistened with cool, fresh water or take 1d12 points of damage every 10 minutes.

See the Aboleth entry in the Monster Manual for more information about the transformation.

ALEEIAN WINE, ELVEN

The grapes for this astounding wine are picked from wild vines located deep in the forest.

It takes several months to find enough grapes to create even one batch.

(Fortitude save DC 11).

ALFORNA

Fatigue caused by the secondary effects of alforna is treated normally.

ANIMAL CALL

Crafted out of bone, metal, or wood, these special whistles are designed to mimic a specific animal voice—usually game animals and birds.

An animal call provides a +1 circumstance bonus on Wilderness Lore checks when hunting for food.

Calls exist only for creatures that are type “animal”.

ANIMAL TRAINER’S KIT

This kit consists of harnesses, prods, light whips, treats, and other items that are helpful for training animals.

There are different kits for different types of animals.

It grants a +2 circumstance bonus on Handle Animal checks.

If training vicious animals, the animal training outfit is highly recommended (see Outfits, below).

ANIMAL TRAINING OUTFIT

Essentially beefed-up padded armor, this suit covers a person from head to toe in thick quilted padding, especially around the limbs.

It is used as protection by those who specialize in training attack animals, such as dogs.

It is very difficult to move in this outfit, so it does not make for good armor.

Used as armor, it has the following statistics: armor bonus +2, maximum Dex bonus +1, armor check penalty -7, arcane spell failure 40%, speed 20 ft. (30 ft.)/15 ft. (20 ft.).

ANIMAL TRAINING POLE

This hollow pole has a strong, thin cord threaded through it and twisted into a loop at the end.

When looped around an animal’s neck, it provides an easy way to direct the animal while preventing the animal from moving any closer than the pole’s length.

An animal training pole provides a +2 circumstance bonus on attempts to teach an animal a task.

ARMOR MAINTENANCE KIT

Composed of polishes, rags, replacement fasteners, wire brushes, and leather strips, this kit is indispensable in keeping armor in top form.

An armor maintenance kit grants a +2 circumstance bonus on Craft (armorsmithing) checks to repair armor.

ARMOR PLATING

You can increase the hit points and hardness of any vehicle by adding armor to any 10-foot section (other than rigging). All statistics below are per inch of thickness.

You can layer the same material to get thicker armor or combine different materials if you like.

Each layer takes damage separately.

Damage left over after an outer layer is destroyed is dealt to the next layer inward; hardness is applied a second time if the new layer is a different material.

TABLE 3-8: ARMOR MATERIALS

Material	HP	Hardness	Cost per Section	Weight per Section
Adamantine	40	20	5,000 gp	5,000 lb.
Darkwood	10	5	3,000 gp	500 lb.
Iron	30	10	1,000 gp	5,000 lb.
Mithral	30	15	3,500 gp	3,000 lb.
Wood	10	5	200 gp	1,000 lb.

ASCENDER/SLIDER

This cleverly designed ratchet wraps around ropes and assists climbing and descending.

By clicking a small switch, the ratchet prevents movement either up or down the rope.

This grants a +1 circumstance bonus on Climb checks using a single rope.

You can also slide down a rope with this device, which allows rapid movement—basically a controlled fall.

It requires a successful Strength Check (DC 15) to hold on when performing this maneuver.

A failure means you fall.

BALLISTA

Any vehicle with a 5-foot-by-10-foot section of flat deck or roof can have a ballista mounted on it.

Ballistas function as described under Siege Engines in Chapter 5 of the DUNGEON MASTER’S Guide.

Choose a direction for the ballista when you mount it on your vehicle; it can fire at any target in a 180-degree arc centered on the mounted weapon.

Weight: 1,500 lb.; Cost: 500 gp.

BANNER/STANDARD

A banner is a large cloth emblazoned with a heraldic device. It is used to display a personal, family, or royal crest, or as identification on the battlefield.

The price given is for a simple banner made from cotton and cheaper materials—the fancier the banner, the higher the cost.

A banner grants a +2 circumstance bonus on Spot checks to be seen from a distance.

BARBED WIRE

This is a roll of barbed steel wire designed to keep things in or out.

A creature trying to cross barbed wire must make a successful Reflex save (DC 10) or take 1d3 points of damage and be tripped.

A pair of thick gloves is necessary to set up barbed wire. A handler who does not have gloves needs to succeed on a Dexterity check (DC 5) each round or take 1d2 points of damage.

Building a barbed wire obstacle takes 1d4+6 hours, including anchor posts.

BARDING

Chapter 7 of the Player's Handbook provides rules, weight, and cost for barding for Medium-size and Large mounts. For creatures of larger size, barding is usually cost-prohibitive and unnecessary, and creatures with special movement types (burrow, fly, swim) are especially hampered by the extra weight and bulk.

However, exceptions abound.

For larger or stranger mounts than the norm, refer to the table below, applying the appropriate multiplier to the cost of the armor as given on Table 7–5: Armor in the Player's Handbook.

BARDING FOR UNUSUAL MOUNTS

Unusual Nature	Cost	Weight
Huge	×8	×4
Gargantuan	×16	×16
Colossal	×32	×256
Odd shape	×2	×1

BARGE

Colossal vehicle; Profession (sailor) –2; Spd oars 5 ft. (nautical clumsy) or drawn (clumsy); Overall AC –3; Section hp 50 (hardness 5); Section AC 3; Ram —; Face 100 ft. by 40 ft.; Height 10 ft. (draft 10 ft.); Crew 10 (40 rowers); Cargo 100 tons; Cost 6,000 gp.

A barge is a flat-bottomed, usually rectangular boat designed for hauling cargo along inland waterways.

Barges are usually simple affairs, some are no more than glorified rafts, although they can be up to 200 feet long. The larger ones usually sport an enclosed space, like a little building on one end of the ship with cots, a table, and chairs inside.

Smaller barges in relatively shallow water are usually poled along by rowers.

BEEKEEPER'S OUTFIT

Prevents damage from ordinary vermin of all kinds: bees, ants, centipedes, and so on.

The outfit consists of a sealed leather suit and large helmet encased in fine netting (see the insect netting entry, above).

The outfit grants a +6 armor bonus to AC against attacks from stinging and biting creatures that are size Fine.

It provides no protection against larger creatures.

BLADEFIRE

Similar to alchemist's fire but less volatile, this thick, adhesive liquid ignites when exposed to air.

Bladefire is typically poured along the length of a bladed weapon, causing the weapon to burn for a short period of time.

A weapon treated with bladefire burns for 1d6 rounds. While burning, the weapon sheds light as a torch.

A weapon treated with bladefire deals 1 additional point of fire damage with each successful hit.

Applying bladefire to a weapon is a full-round action that provokes an attack of opportunity.

Bladefire is thick enough that once applied, it does not flow down the weapon, preventing it from harming the user.

Each round that bladefire burns, it also deals 1 point of fire damage to the weapon that it coats, but most weapons have sufficient hardness to ignore this damage.

Wooden weapons coated with bladefire ignite, however, taking 1d6 points of fire damage each round until extinguished.

Setting flammable items alight requires more contact than just an attack.

To light a flammable item requires a full-round action if the item is unattended or a successful grapple check against the opponent wearing or using the item.

If your opponent breaks the grapple before your next action, no items catch fire.

If you don't release the grapple on your next action, any flammable item you wear or carry also catches fire.

BODYSUIT, BLACK

This very tight-fitting garment is made of black silk.

It is used by rogues and infiltrators when sneaking around at night.

Wearing the suit grants a +2 circumstance bonus on Hide checks in conditions dark enough to grant one-half concealment or better.

However, the bodysuit provides no benefit if you wear other clothing or armor, other than belts, pouches, or bandoleers, on top of it.

BOLT CUTTERS

This cutting tool can cut through chains, thin metal, and iron bars.

When used against objects (usually metal) that are no thicker than 1 inch in diameter, bolt cutters deal 15 points of damage to that item, including any modifier for Strength.

Bolt cutters cannot be used effectively as a weapon (other than as a clumsy club).

BOOK, FALSE

This is a large, well-made tome with a hollowed-out middle section.

It comes with a clasp and very simple lock (Open Lock check DC 20).

The false book forms a very tight seal when closed, making the interior space waterproof and allowing it to float.

BOOTS, SMUGGLER'S

These otherwise normal high boots have hinged heels that swing open to reveal small storage spaces.

Each can hold one or two Fine objects, such as a vial of poison.

In addition, the inside lining of the boot can be removed to hide thin, flat objects like a map or slender dagger.

It requires a successful Search check (DC 30) to locate items hidden in the boots.

BREWMAKER, DWARVEN

Treasured among dwarven warriors in the field, the brewmaker is a pressurized container that vaguely resembles a percolator.

When water, hops, and other ingredients are added, it creates a thin beer in only a week.

The taste is dreadful, but thirsty soldiers take what they can get.

The Fortitude save to resist intoxication from this beer has a DC of 10 (see Alcohol and Intoxication, later in this chapter).

BULLET, ACID

These hollow glass sling bullets are filled with acid.

When they strike a target, they immediately shatter, dealing 1d4 points of acid damage in addition to the normal damage from the sling bullet.

To hold sufficient acid, these bullets must be larger than normal.

The increased size makes the bullets awkward and unwieldy to launch, imposing a -2 penalty on the attack roll.

BULLET, FLAME

These hollow glass sling bullets are filled with alchemist's fire.

When they strike a target, they immediately shatter and the alchemist's fire ignites, dealing 1d4 points of fire damage in addition to the normal damage from the sling bullet.

To hold sufficient alchemist's fire, these bullets must be larger than normal, imposing a -2 penalty on the attack roll.

See Catching on Fire in Chapter 3 of the DUNGEON MASTER'S Guide for information on targets wearing or carrying flammable material catching fire.

BULLET, PRIEST'S

These hollow glass bullets are filled with holy water.

When they strike a target, they immediately shatter, dousing the target with holy water.

Undead and evil outsiders take 1d4 points of damage from the holy water in addition to the normal damage from the sling bullet.

To hold sufficient holy water, these bullets must be larger than normal, imposing a -2 penalty on the attack roll.

CAGE

A typical cage consists of a solid metal or wooden top and bottom, solid metal bars equally spaced around the sides, and a door.

It has a latch, but any lock must be purchased separately.

The table below shows how many creatures can fit in each size of cage.

Cage Size	Number of Creatures					Hardness	HP
	Large	Med.	Small	Tiny	Dim.
Large	1	2	4	8 <sup>1</sup>	16 <sup>1</sup>	10	30
Medium	0	1	2	4 <sup>1</sup>	8 <sup>1</sup>	10	30
Small	0	0	1	2	4	10	30
Tiny	0	0	0	1	2	10	15
Diminutive	0	0	0	0	1	10	10

CANDELABRA

Candelabras are designed to hold four, eight, or sixteen candles in an aesthetically pleasing arrangement.

Four candles illuminate a 10-foot radius, eight candles illuminate a 15-foot radius, while sixteen candles illuminate a 20-foot radius.

CANDLE MOLD

There are several different versions of these large wooden molds.

A single mold can form eight tapers, two pillar candles, or twelve votive candles.

The mold does not come with wax.

It requires Craft (candlemaking) to use properly.

CANDLE, FOCUSING

This large, green taper candle burns quickly, lasting only an hour despite its size.

While burning, the focusing candle fills the air with a fresh, crisp odor.

The candle is a great boon to those engaged in strenuous mental activity, sharpening most cognitive processes.

Characters within 20 feet of a burning candle of focus gain a +1 circumstance bonus on the following skill checks:

Alchemy, Appraise, Decipher Script, Forgery, Scry, and Search.

When making a skill check that takes more than one action to complete (such as attempting to identify a potion with Alchemy or using the Scry skill with the scrying spell), characters only gain the bonus from a focusing candle if they spend the entire duration of the skill check within range of the burning candle.

CANDLE, INSECTBANE

This heavily scented candle smells pleasant to humans and humanoids but is repellent to insects.

Nonmonstrous vermin will not approach within a 5-foot radius of a burning candle.

It burns for 1 hour.

CANDLE, RESTFUL

This thick blue candle burns slowly, filling the air with a sweet, relaxing scent for 8 hours.

These candles, although slow to function, have tremendous restorative abilities.

Characters that spend a night of rest sleeping within 20 feet of a lit candle heal at twice the rate they normally would.

After a day of light activity, characters who rest under the influence of the candle heal double their level in hit points and 2 points of ability damage.

After a day of complete rest, characters who sleep under the influence of the candle heal three times their level in hit points and 2 points of ability damage.

The benefits of a restful candle stack with those provided by someone providing long-term care with the Heal skill.

CARRIAGE

Huge vehicle; Handle Animal +0; Spd drawn (poor); Overall hp 90 (hardness 5); Overall AC 3; Ram 4d6; Face 15 ft. by 10 ft.; Height 10 ft.; Crew 1 (plus 5 passengers); Weight 400 lb.; Cargo 500 lb.; Cost 500 gp.

The carriage is essentially a fully enclosed wagon designed for passenger comfort, not cargo capacity.

The driver and a passenger riding in front have one-half cover behind 1 inch of wood (hp 10, hardness 5).

Inside passengers get three-quarters cover.

Two heavy horses harnessed abreast pull most wagons at a speed of 35 feet when fully loaded and 50 feet with only a driver and passenger.

CART

Large vehicle; Handle Animal +0; Spd drawn (poor); Overall hp 30 (hardness 5); Overall AC 4; Ram 2d6; Face 10 ft. by 5 ft.; Height 5 ft.; Crew 1; Weight 200 lb.; Cargo 500 lb.; Cost 15 gp.

A cart is open-topped, so the driver and any passengers gain one-half cover behind 1 inch of wood (hp 10, hardness 5).

The most common dray creature for a cart is a mule, which can pull the vehicle at a speed of 20 feet even if it's fully loaded.

CATAMARAN

Gargantuan vehicle; Profession (sailor) +2; Spd wind  $\times$  20 ft. (nautical poor); Overall AC 1; Section hp 50 (hardness 5); Section AC 3; Rigging 30 hp (hardness 0), AC 3; Ram 12d6; Face 60 ft. by 20 ft.; Height 5 ft. (draft 5 ft.); Crew 15; Cargo 5 tons; Cost 2,000 gp.

This ship, designed for ocean voyages, is common to ancient seafaring cultures (such as the real-world Polynesians).

Its twin hulls slip through the water efficiently, but a wooden paddle-keel and simple sail prevent quick maneuvers.

It has no belowdecks; those on board have one-quarter cover from most foes and one-half cover from attackers in the water.

Only a tarp provides shelter from the elements, so it's a poor choice for rough weather (or paying passengers in any event).

CATAPULT, HEAVY

You can add a heavy catapult to any vehicle with at least a 10-foot-by-10-foot section of flat deck or roof.

It functions as described under Siege Engines in Chapter 5 of the DUNGEON MASTER's Guide.

It can launch ammunition at any target in a 90-degree arc centered on the mounted weapon.

Weight: 4,000 lb.; Cost: 800 gp.

CATAPULT, LIGHT

A light catapult occupies a 5-foot-by-10-foot section of deck. It otherwise follows the rules for a heavy catapult (see above).

Weight: 2,000 lb.; Cost: 550 gp.

CHARIOT, DOUBLE

Large vehicle; Handle Animal +2; Spd drawn (poor); Overall hp 80 (hardness 5); Overall AC 4; Ram 4d6; Face 10 ft. by 5 ft.; Height 5 ft.; Crew 1 (plus 1 passenger); Weight 600 lb.; Cost 400 gp.

Occupants of a double chariot gain one-half cover behind 2 inches of wood (hp 20, hardness 5).

Two light warhorses harnessed abreast can pull the chariot at a speed of 60 feet.

By swerving the chariot, the driver can have it follow behind either horse (this choice doesn't count as movement).

CHARIOT, SINGLE

Medium-size vehicle; Handle Animal +2; Spd drawn (average); Overall hp 50 (hardness 5); Overall AC 5; Ram 3d6; Face 5 ft. by 5 ft.; Height 5 ft.; Crew 1; Weight 300 lb.; Cost 100 gp.

The driver of a single chariot gains one-half cover behind 2 inches of wood (hp 20, hardness 5).

A light warhorse can pull the chariot at a speed of 60 feet, even with an unusually heavy driver aboard.

CLEARBREATH

This vial of gray smoke temporarily dulls the sense of smell when someone inhales the contents through the nose.

Clearbreath provides a +4 alchemical bonus on Fortitude saves made to resist unpleasant odors (such as a troglodyte's stench).

The effects of clearbreath last for 1 hour.

CLOAK, FORESTER'S

Woven from several pieces of green and brown canvas, these large ponchos aid anyone trying to hide in a forest environment.

The carefully chosen colors blend in with the vegetation, and the poncho's loose shape obscures the humanoid form. Forester's cloaks provide a +1 circumstance bonus on Hide checks made in a forest.

CRANE, PORTABLE

This small crane can be broken down into several parts for easy transportation.

It must be assembled and bolted into place to be used effectively.

There are different "strengths" available to purchase—the equivalent of a person with Str 22 (lift/drag 1,040 lb.), 24 (lift/drag 1,400 lb.), or 28 (lift/drag 2,400 lb.).

CROSSBOW SIGHT, GNOME

This device comes in two parts: an eyepiece that attaches to the stock of a crossbow and a sight that is affixed to the end of the weapon.

When calibrated properly, the sights allow the user to focus more carefully on a target.

The user treats targets as if they were two range increments closer.

It has no effect on targets within the first two range increments.

DARKVISION POWDER

This plain gray powder is unassuming; it can't be seen with normal vision from more than 10 feet away.

When viewed with darkvision, however, it glows brightly. Creatures that have darkvision commonly use this powder to write messages that other creatures cannot read.

Each vial contains enough powder for a reasonably lengthy sentence.

DEFOLIATOR

This vile liquid has a muddy brown hue and smells of rotten plant life.

You can throw a flask of defoliator as a grenadelike weapon. On a direct hit, it deals 2d4 points of damage to plant creatures and kills normal plants of Medium-size or smaller.

The splash damage from defoliator deals 1 point of damage to plant creatures and kills normal plants that are smaller than Medium-size.

The damage is not limited to living plants: wooden objects such as doors and wooden weapons also take damage from defoliator, though their hardness applies.

DEHYDRATED FOOD

Explorers and adventurers of all sorts benefit from alchemically dried food.

Although expensive, dehydrated food weighs only half as much as an equivalent supply of trail rations, making it ideal for long journeys where water is plentiful and food is scarce.

Characters eating dehydrated food must consume twice as much water per day as they normally require or suffer the effects of going without water (see Starvation and Thirst Dangers in Chapter 3 of the DUNGEON MASTER'S Guide).

DESERT OUTFIT

This outfit consists of loose, billowy clothing designed to keep the wearer cool and protected from the sun while out in dry, hot, desert terrain.

It includes a caftan, turban, scarf, loose pantaloons, and either high boots or low sandals.

Wearing the outfit eliminates the -4 penalty on Fortitude saves for wearing heavy clothes in hot or extreme heat (see Heat Dangers in Chapter 3 of the DUNGEON MASTER'S Guide).

This does not apply if the character wears any armor.

DIRIGIBLE

Gargantuan vehicle; Profession (pilot) -2; Spd wind  $\times$  15 ft. (clumsy); Overall AC 1; Section hp 30 (hardness 5); Section AC 3; Rigging 100 hp (0 hardness), AC 1; Ram 2d6; Face 30 ft. by 10 ft.; Height 10 ft.; Crew 6; Cargo 5 tons (Spd wind  $\times$  5 ft. if 3 tons or more); Cost 35,000 gp.

A smaller version of the zeppelin, the dirigible also relies on animated propellers to push it through the air.

Wizards sometimes build dirigibles to ferry important underlings from place to place.

Like zeppelins, dirigibles have no minimum forward speed, and they can hover if they are turned into the wind.

DRAGONBITE BITTER

The recipe for this exceptional dark beer is centuries old, and only the Dragonbite Brewery has been able to reproduce it.

The Fortitude save to resist intoxication is DC 12.

DWARFBLIND

Dwarfblind stones are small stones treated with alchemical substances, giving them a faint purple sheen.

You can throw a dwarfblind stone as a grenadelike weapon. When it strikes a hard surface, it releases a burst of violet light.

The light illuminates a 20-foot-wide area for an instant and temporarily interferes with the darkvision of those caught in its effects.

Creatures within a 10-foot radius of the stone's impact point must succeed on a Reflex save (DC 15) or lose their darkvision ability for 10 minutes.

Dwarfblind has no effect on normal and low-light vision.

DWARFHEAD STOUT

Found almost exclusively in dwarven communities, this powerful brew is a "day-to-day" beer favored by warriors. (Fortitude save DC 13).

DWARVEN TUNNELER

Huge vehicle; Profession (miner) +4; Spd burrow 10 ft. (clumsy); Overall AC 3; Section hp 40/120 (hardness 20/5); Section AC 3; Ram 10d6; Face 10 ft. by 20 ft.; Height 10 ft.; Crew 5 (plus 10 soldiers); Weight 20 tons; Cost 70,000 gp. This tanklike vehicle slowly digs tunnels through earth (although stone stymies it).

Dwarves occasionally use tunnelers in warfare as well: They're adamantine-armored and large enough to accommodate a squad of 10 soldiers.

The treads have been magically animated to provide propulsion at the direction of the crew, who pull levers while they watch the earth for signs of cave-ins.

The massive drill at the front is better than a ramming prow; the tunneler never takes damage from rams it initiates.

EARPLUGS

Made from solid sponge or cork, earplugs grant a +1 circumstance bonus on saves against sonic attacks, but they also impose a -4 penalty on Listen checks when worn.

FARFLAME OIL

This thin, light blue oil burns with a blue flame and illuminates a wide area.

When used in a lantern, farflame oil sheds light in a 40-foot radius.

In a bullseye lantern, it illuminates a cone 80 feet long and 25 feet wide.

A pint of farflame oil fuels a lantern for 3 hours.

A pint of farflame oil covers a 5-foot square area if poured on the ground.

If lit, farflame oil burns for 1 round and deals 1d4 points of damage to each creature in the area.

FINGER BLADES

These are very short razor-sharp blades that fit over the fingers.

They are used to cut through purse strings or garments and grant a +1 circumstance bonus on Pick Pocket checks.

They are too short to be used as effective weapons, causing only scratches at most.

FIRING CASTLE

A bunker attached to the deck of a vehicle, the firing castle provides protection for defenders and serves as a platform for siege engines.

Four Medium-size defenders benefit from nine-tenths cover (arrow slits) in the firing castle itself, which is 10 feet by 10 feet, and another four get one-half cover behind the crenellations on its roof.

The firing castle's walls are 1-foot-thick masonry (hp 90, hardness 8).

A firing castle can be installed anywhere a heavy catapult would fit, and a heavy catapult or two light catapults or ballistas can subsequently be mounted atop it.

Weight: 4 tons; Cost: 1,000 gp.

FISHING TACKLE

More than a mere fishhook, this set includes birch poles, silk line, sinkers, hooks, lures, and tackle box.

It grants a +1 circumstance bonus on Wilderness Lore checks when gathering food around bodies of water that contain fish.

FLEETFOOT

This thin blue liquid temporarily loosens the imbiber's muscles and joints, allowing her to run faster and jump farther.

When running, a character under the effect of fleetfoot moves at five times her speed.

The effect lasts for 10 rounds + 1 round per point of Constitution modifier.

The effects of fleetfoot stack with the Run feat, allowing a character to run at six times her speed and jump half again as far as normal with a running jump.

Fleetfoot does not grant a character the ability to exceed her maximum jump distance.

FLOTATION BAGS

These are inflatable animal bladders sewn to lightweight leather for strength.

Flotation bags grant a +2 circumstance bonus on Swim checks to remain on the surface.

The bags impose a -2 circumstance penalty on checks when underwater, as the swimmer has to fight the bags' tendency to float.

It takes a full round to inflate flotation bags and a standard action to deflate them.

FOREST CRAWLER

Huge vehicle; Handle Animal +2; Spd 40 ft. (poor); Overall hp 100 (hardness 7); Overall AC 3; Ram 3d6; Face 10 ft. by 10 ft.; Height 15 ft.; Crew 1 (plus 2 passengers); Weight 900 lb.; Cargo 700 lb.; Cost 117,000 gp.

Few vehicles are well suited to the elves' forest homes, but the forest crawler can move through the woods by traveling above the undergrowth on its spindly legs.

Looking somewhat like a massive spider, the forest crawler is used to patrol the forest boundaries and get from place to place when speed is of the essence.

Its tall legs let it ignore most terrain penalties to movement, and a ballista mounted along the vehicle's undercarriage reloads itself magically.

A veil of obscurity (see Magical Augmentations, earlier in this chapter) provides camouflage if the forest crawler remains stationary for 1 full round.

FORGER'S KIT

This is a special collection of different pens, seals, guides, waxes, inks, magnifying glasses, books of writing styles, parchment, and other instruments.

It grants a +2 circumstance bonus on Forgery checks and lasts for ten uses before having to be replaced.

FOWLER'S SNARE

This is a specially designed snare, used for capturing birds and other small flying game.

It grants a +1 circumstance bonus on Wilderness Lore checks when attempting to trap these sorts of creatures.

FRENZYWATER

An extremely potent clear alcohol.

Rumors of bottles spontaneously catching fire when exposed to sunlight have never been proven.

Anyone with the rage class ability must make a Will save (DC 15) to resist flying into a rage after drinking a tankard of this liquor.

If you have already expended all your rages for the day, then frenzywater has no additional effect other than making you irritable and surly.

(Fortitude save DC 15).

FROSTWINE

This delicate white wine is created from an exotic blend of grapes that grow only in extreme northerly climes.

Frost worms in particular are drawn to the scent of frostwine grapes in bloom, making it dangerous to harvest. (Fortitude save DC 13).

FULLCLOTH, WINTER

This is a heavily quilted undergarment that is worn underneath regular clothing to protect the wearer against cold.

Winter fullcloth is considered part of the cold weather outfit described in the Player's Handbook.

If worn by itself, it grants a +1 circumstance bonus on Fortitude saving throws against exposure to cold weather (see Cold Dangers in Chapter 3 of the DUNGEON MASTER'S Guide).

GALLEY

Colossal vehicle; Profession (sailor) -2; Spd wind  $\times$  15 ft. (nautical poor), oars 20 ft. (nautical average); Overall AC -3; Section hp 80 (hardness 5); Section AC 3; Rigging 160 hp (hardness 0), AC 1; Ram 18d6; Face 130 ft. by 20 ft.; Height 20 ft. (draft 15 ft.); Crew 200 (160 rowers); Cargo 150 tons (Spd wind  $\times$  10 ft. or oars 15 ft. if 75 tons or more); Cost 30,000 gp.

A galley has enough flat deck space to accommodate three heavy catapults or six ballistas or light catapults.

War galleys generally convert much of their cargo space into passenger space for soldiers (see Vehicle Augmentations, above).

Eight to ten launches would provide enough lifeboat capacity, although many galleys have fewer.

GAME BOARD, PORTABLE

This is a small foldable wooden board and pieces for games such as chess, checkers, backgammon, go, and the like. Higher prices indicate better quality for all the pieces.

GARNET WINE, DWARVEN

Made from grapes found high in the mountains, this fine, if bold, wine includes at least 10 gp worth of ground of garnet "for flavor".

(Fortitude save DC 13).

GHOSTOIL

This clear oil has a slight tint of gray, and strange, wispy forms seem to swirl through it.

When applied to a weapon, ghostoil allows it to affect incorporeal creatures normally for the next 2 rounds.

One flask of ghostoil contains enough liquid to coat one weapon of Large size or smaller.

Applying ghostoil to a weapon of any size is a full-round action.

GLASS CUTTER

This special device lets you cut through glass panes without cracking or shattering them in the process.

The glass cutter makes a circular hole anywhere from 3 inches to 16 inches in diameter.

To use it quietly, make a Dexterity check (DC 15).

If the check fails, the glass shatters with a loud crash (+2 circumstance bonus on Listen checks to hear it).

You can make an Open Lock check instead if you are trained in that skill.

GNOME SUBMERSIBLE

Colossal vehicle; Profession (sailor) +2; Spd oars 10 ft. (nautical poor); Overall AC -3; Section hp 90 (hardness 8); Section AC 3; Ram 6d6; Face 70 ft. by 20 ft.; Height 10 ft. (draft 10 ft.); Crew 70 (60 rowers); Cargo 20 tons (oars 5 ft. if 10 tons or more); Cost 80,000 gp.

A gnome submersible can travel the ocean depths, ascending and descending through the use of a complex series of diving fins and air bladders.

It can remain underwater for 24 hours at a time, after which it needs 30 minutes at the surface to recharge its air bladders.

In addition to its horizontal movement, the ship can freely ascend or descend 10 feet per round.

The vessel is entirely enclosed; only a 10-foot square deck is available when the ship is on the surface.

A single airlock allows access to the undersea world when the vessel is submerged.

Large screws cranked by teams of gnomes propel the vessel (for game purposes, this counts as rowing).

GOLDEN LIGHT, GNOME

A fine, lightweight beer with flowery accents, this is a favorite trade item with humans and halflings.

(Fortitude save DC 11).

GRAPPLING HOOK, COLLAPSIBLE

This small grappling hook has flat, retractable tines that fold out to create a working hook.

It functions exactly like a normal grappling hook, except that it increases the DC by +4 for Search checks to find it when folded up and hidden among a person's garments.

GRAPPLING LADDER

This is a premade rope ladder with two small grappling hooks on one end.

The given price and weight is per 10 feet of ladder.

Once the grappling ladder is in place, it reduces the DC for any Climb check above 10 to 10.

GRAVEBANE

This thick white liquid evaporates almost instantly upon contact with air, creating a thin, nearly invisible smoke.

The smoke is nearly odorless, and it has no effect on most creatures.

Undead, however, are repulsed by the smoke and can only pass through it with an effort of will.

When opened (usually by throwing it on the ground), a flask of gravebane fills a 5-foot-square area with smoke.

Undead cannot enter an area filled with gravebane smoke unless they succeed on a Will save (DC 10).

Undead can attack into a gravebane-filled area normally as long as they don't enter the area to do so.

Gravebane ordinarily lasts for 1 minute, although strong winds may decrease this duration.

GRAY WHINNIS

Paralysis caused by the secondary effect of gray whinnis lasts for 1d6×10 minutes.

HACKSAW

This blade is designed to cut through thin metal.

It ignores the hardness of any normal metal objects (excluding exotic metals like mithral or adamantine) that it is cutting, but deals only 1 point of damage per 2 rounds of sawing.

A common blade lasts for 20 rounds, while a superior blade lasts for 40 rounds.

HALFLING WAR-WAGON

Some people find the idea of halfling war-wagons dubious or amusing.

These people have never seen one in action.

Halfling war-wagons are dangerous and practical.

A war-wagon might not be much of a threat to a group of mid-level adventurers, but it's lethal on the battlefield.

Use the stagecoach statistics (above) for war-wagons, except that driver and passengers alike gain full cover.

The standard war-wagon is designed to allow halflings to safely fire ranged weapons on the battlefield and protect their skulkers until they get close enough to strike.

However, halflings are clever and resourceful.

They often adapt their wagons to suit personal fighting styles or specific circumstances.

HAMMOCK

This portable sling is a favorite of sailors and rangers. It is hung up between two posts or trees to create a comfortable bed that is off the ground.

HANG GLIDER

Large vehicle; Profession (pilot) +0; Spd fly 30 ft. (poor); Overall hp 20 (hardness 5); Overall AC 4; Ram 2d6; Face 5 ft. by 15 ft.; Height 5 ft.; Crew 1; Cost 300 gp.

This big, wedge-shaped wing consists of a rigid frame with canvas, animal hides, or some other light, sturdy covering spread tightly across it.

Unlike most flying vehicles, a hang glider cannot ascend under its own power.

Hang gliders rely on either a high launch point or thermal updrafts to gain altitude.

A hang glider's pilot gains one-half cover behind 1 inch of wood and cloth (hp 10, hardness 3).

HAWK'S OINTMENT

This thick, acidic gel temporarily sharpens the user's vision. Once its beneficial effects wear off, however, the gel burns and stings the eyes for a few minutes.

After spreading the gel over her eyes, a character gains a +1 bonus on Search and Spot checks for 2 minutes.

After the duration expires, she takes a -2 penalty on Search and Spot checks for 10 minutes.

Characters who spend a round washing out their eyes with clean water halve the duration of the penalty.

Applying hawk's ointment is a full-round action that provokes an attack of opportunity.

HEAT MAT

This 1-foot-by-1-foot square mat is made of heat-absorbing materials.

It can withstand temperatures of up to 1,200 degrees Fahrenheit, even when a hot item is placed directly on it, and will not catch fire.

The mat does get uncomfortably hot and is not suitable as a protective layer of clothing.

It is mostly found in alchemists' and wizards' laboratories.

HEATSUIT OUTFIT

Clothing designed to protect the wearer against abysmal heat, such as temperatures found around forges and volcanoes.

It consists of heavy pants and coat, a specially treated leather apron, very thick mittens, a thick hood, and goggles. The heatsuit outfit prevents 3 points of normal heat damage per round (not subdual) and eliminates the -4 penalty on Fortitude saves for wearing heavy clothes (see Heat Dangers in Chapter 3 of the DUNGEON MASTER'S Guide). A heatsuit outfit should be worn only for brief periods of time.

HELMET, MINER'S

This metal pot helm has a small enclosure on the front, similar to a bullseye lantern.

It can hold one candle, which illuminates a cone 10 feet long.
The candle is commonly imbued with a light or continual flame spell.

HOLY TEXT

This is a nonmagical religious text, containing scripture, stories, and teachings of a particular faith.
The price given is for a very simple copy, with few, if any, illuminations.
Fancier versions increase drastically in price.

HOUSEBREAKER HARNESS

Designed exclusively for second-story breaking and entering, this harness is made of pliable black leather and reduces the amount of noise made from loose metal items clanging together.
It grants a +1 circumstance bonus on Climb and Move Silently checks while worn but imposes a -2 penalty on Balance, Escape Artist, Hide, Jump, Pick Pocket, and Tumble checks.

HOWDAH

A howdah is a seat or box, usually with a canopy and railing, placed on the back of a Huge or larger creature.
Four Medium-size riders can fit on a howdah.
Ornate howdahs are status symbols for rich or noble people, but open-air versions also make excellent fighting platforms.
In addition to placing occupants out of the reach of most infantry, a howdah provides one-half cover.
Cost: 200 gp; Weight: 100 lb.

ICE AXE

More tool than weapon, the ice axe has a sharp metal head that is perpendicular to the shaft and has a spiked handle.
It grants a +1 circumstance bonus on Climb checks in mountainous and/or icy terrain.
If used as a weapon, treat as a hand axe with a -2 penalty on attack rolls.

INSECT NETTING

This is a 10-foot-by-20-foot rectangle of very light woven fabric designed to keep small insects from getting through.
If properly set up, it keeps away mosquitoes, bees, and other ordinary vermin.
It does not prevent monstrous vermin from getting through.
See the beekeeper's outfit under Class Tools and Skill Kits for more information.

INSTANT ROPE

When poured from a flask, this viscous gray liquid forms into a long cord usable as a temporary rope.
Upon being exposed to air, the liquid rapidly increases in both volume and viscosity, swelling to the diameter of a typical hemp rope, then quickly drying.

A flask of instant rope forms a 30-foot-long cord; it takes 2 rounds for it to solidify and dry enough to be used.
The instant rope can be moved during this period without damaging it, but it cannot support more than 10 pounds of weight without breaking.
Once completely dry, instant rope can support as much weight as normal hemp rope.
After an hour, instant rope becomes too brittle to support any weight and quickly crumbles into dust.

IRONCLAD

Colossal vehicle; Profession (sailor) +0; Spd oars 10 ft. (nautical average); Overall AC -3; Section hp 30/60 (hardness 10/5); Section AC 3; Ram 20d6; Face 80 ft. by 30 ft.; Height 15 ft. (draft 20 ft.); Crew 80 (60 rowers); Cargo 2,000 lb.; Cost 30,000 gp.
Dwarves who go to war at sea feel unprotected by "flimsy" wooden hulls.
Therefore, dwarf shipwrights developed the ironclad, an iron-plated warship that sits low in the water and brims with ballista bolts.
Ironclads are rightly feared by naval commanders.
The ballista crews can fire their bolts from behind protective iron shutters, breaching an ordinary ship's hull without fear of retaliation.
Rowing dwarves work in teams, turning giant cranks to propel the ship.
The ironclad has enough space to accommodate eight ballistas, usually mounted four to a side.

JESTER'S KIT

A fine collection of gaudy clothing, face paint, toys, puppets, juggling balls, and other colorful items.
It grants a +1 circumstance bonus on any Perform (comedy), Perform (buffoonery), or Disguise checks to avoid recognition.

JEWELER'S LOUPE

This magnifying eyepiece grants a +1 circumstance bonus on Appraise checks when inspecting things very closely, such as gems, jewelry, or artwork.

KANTO'S LAMENT

Colossal vehicle; Profession (sailor) +4; Spd fly 40 ft. (clumsy) or wind  $\times$  20 ft. (nautical average); Overall AC -3; Section hp 50 (hardness 5); Section AC 3; Rigging 80 hp (0 hardness), AC 1; Ram 12d6; Face 80 ft. by 20 ft.; Height 10 ft. (draft 10 ft.); Crew 20; Cargo 150 tons (Spd wind  $\times$  15 ft. if 75 tons or more); Cost 450,000 gp.
This magic sailing ship is often used by slavers to move their illicit cargo from place to place.
It has a cloud keel, enabling it to fly at a speed of 40 feet, but it often raises its lesser wind-favored sails to gain a speed of 60 feet.
For extraplanar journeys, planar sails are stowed belowdecks.
The navigator's cabin contains charts of certainty.
The ship has two ballistas mounted on rotating platforms that fire 5d6 lightning bolts once per round.

The ship is a valuable prize, and the slaver lord who owns it is loath to let anyone know how powerful his ship is. He travels by air only at night and in wilderness areas where Kanto's Lament is unlikely to be seen. But the ship comes to earth at prearranged points to pick up and drop off slaves.

KEELBOAT

Gargantuan vehicle; Profession (sailor) +0; Spd wind  $\times$  10 ft. (nautical good), oars 10 ft. (nautical good); Overall AC 1; Section hp 40 (hardness 5); Section AC 3; Rigging 30 hp (hardness 0), AC 3; Ram 8d6; Face 60 ft. by 20 ft.; Height 10 ft. (draft 5 ft.); Crew 15; Cargo 50 tons (Spd wind  $\times$  5 ft., oars 5 ft. if 25 tons or more); Cost 3,000 gp. A keelboat can have a single light catapult or ballista mounted on deck.

KEG

A container for liquids, especially wine and ale. One person can easily carry the hand keg, while a cask usually requires two when full.

KRAGG, ORC

This spirit is popular among orcs and goblins. It is extremely powerful and tastes dreadful to the nongoblinoid palate. Drinking a tankard of this foul brew nauseates anyone who is not an orc, half-orc, goblin, or hobgoblin. (Fortitude save DC 14).

LANTERN, FOG-CUTTER

This bullseye lantern has a special amber lens that allows light to reach farther through mist, fog, and smoke than that from regular lanterns. It illuminates a cone 40 feet long and 10 feet wide at the end, regardless of fog or mist, and it burns for 6 hours on a pint of oil. You can carry a lantern in one hand.

LAUNCH

Huge vehicle; Profession (sailor) +2; Spd oars 15 ft. (nautical good); Overall AC 3; Section hp 30 (hardness 5); Section AC 3; Ram 4d6; Face 20 ft. by 10 ft.; Height 5 ft. (draft 2 1/2 ft.); Crew 4 (plus 4 passengers); Cargo 5 tons (Spd oars 10 ft. if 2 tons or more); Cost 500 gp. A large-oared vessel, the launch is often used as a lifeboat or ship-to-shore boat for a larger ship. Crew and passengers are exposed to the elements, and those aboard have one-quarter cover from most foes and one-half cover from attackers in the water. A launch converted strictly for passenger use can hold 18 passengers, or double that under cramped conditions; such a conversion increases the launch's cost to 1,500 gp.

LEASH AND MUZZLE

Made to fit creatures of various sizes, this is necessary equipment for training animals.

Masterwork versions are also available that grant a +1 circumstance bonus on Handle Animal checks, increasing the price by 20 gp (regardless of size). For more information on training animals, see page 67.

LISTENING CONE

This device is made for listening through doors and other solid surfaces. It grants a +2 circumstance bonus on Listen checks made through a door or other relatively thin, solid obstacle.

LOCKJAW

Characters affected by lockjaw can't speak or use spells with somatic components.

Longbreath

This thick, brown-tinted smoke is a great boon to anyone who needs to go without air for more than a few rounds. After inhaling longbreath, a character can hold his breath for 3 rounds per point of Constitution, rather than 2 rounds per point. Longbreath can be used after the character begins holding his breath, but it provides less of a benefit. If a character inhales longbreath after beginning to hold his breath, simply multiply the number of rounds that the character could continue holding his breath by 1.5. Once a character begins making Constitution checks to continue holding his breath, longbreath provides no benefit.

LONGSHIP

Colossal vehicle; Profession (sailor) +0; Spd wind  $\times$  10 ft. (nautical poor), oars 15 ft. (nautical average); Overall AC -3; Section hp 90 (hardness 5); Section AC 3; Rigging 40 hp (hardness 0), AC 1; Ram 8d6; Face 70 ft. by 20 ft.; Height 10 ft. (draft 5 ft.); Crew 50 (40 rowers); Cargo 50 tons (Spd wind  $\times$  5 ft. or oars 10 ft. if 25 tons or more); Cost 10,000 gp. The longship has enough room on deck for two light catapults or ballistas. Its shallow draft means that it can go without a launch if need be.

MAGNET, SMALL

This small magnet can be used to attract loose metal items or stick to ferrous objects. It is only powerful enough to attract metal that weighs 3 ounces or less.

MARBLES

About two dozen assorted glass, flawed rock crystal, or clay spheres in a leather pouch. They are commonly used as toys but are also useful for checking the slope in a dungeon corridor (just set one down and see which way it rolls), or as a nondamaging alternative to caltrops. One bag covers an area 5 feet square.

Creatures moving through or fighting in the area must make Balance checks (DC 15).

A creature that fails is unable to move for 1 round (or may fall; see the Balance skill description in the Player's Handbook).

The DM judges the effectiveness of marbles against unusual opponents.

Creatures that are Huge or larger tend to crush the marbles into dust, while those with multiple legs, like carrion crawlers, can scramble along without falling.

MASTERWORK CONTROLS

Whether it's a finely tuned wheel that allows delicate adjustments to the rudder, or a complex harness system that directs the dray creatures with just a flick of the wrist, it's possible to get more performance out of a vehicle by improving its control system.

Masterwork controls provide a +2 circumstance bonus on Handle Animal or Profession checks made by the driver.

The cost depends on the vehicle's size (its weight does not change).

Cost: 300 gp (Medium-size), 600 gp (Large), 1,200 gp (Huge), 2,400 gp (Gargantuan), 4,800 gp (Colossal).

MEAD, ELVEN

Although not normally famed for brewing, elves find exotic honey in their forest homes to create this delightful mead. Even dwarves find its taste appealing—though they are loath to admit it.

(Fortitude save DC 12).

MESS KIT

This lightweight metal kit contains a bowl, plate, fork, spoon, and cup.

MILL, HAND

This small handheld device grinds up grains, beans, and spices.

MOBILE REDOUBT

Huge vehicle; Handle Animal +4; Spd drawn (clumsy); Overall AC 3; Section hp 100 (hardness 5); Section AC 3; Ram 9d6; Face 10 ft. by 10 ft.; Height 10 ft.; Crew 1 (plus 7 soldiers); Weight 4 tons; Cargo 1,000 lb.; Cost 1,500 gp. Essentially a rolling guard tower, the mobile redoubt is a completely enclosed box of heavy timbers, usually drawn by four heavy warhorses.

It has arrow slits for firing ranged weapons and heavy doors on each side.

The redoubt's weakest point is the dray creatures, so armies using this vehicle usually equip them with the heaviest barding available.

MONEY BELT

This cloth pouch is designed to be worn under clothing and can hold up to 50 coins.

The Pick Pocket check DC to take something from a money belt is +5 higher than normal.

MOONDROP, ELVEN

Exquisite beyond compare, this beverage can be produced only by someone with the Alchemy skill (DC 30).

It is made through a bizarre process involving fresh dew and moonlight.

(Fortitude save DC 13).

MOTELIGHT

This flask contains a clear liquid filled with faintly glowing sparks of light.

You can throw a flask of motelight as a grenadelike weapon. When it strikes a hard surface, a flask of motelight creates a small area filled with rapidly moving sparks.

The sparks are distracting, but they cause no damage.

Creatures within a 5-foot radius attempting to cast a spell must succeed on a Concentration check (DC 5 + spell level) or lose the spell.

If the caster must make a Concentration check for another reason, the motelight applies no additional penalty.

MUSHROOM WINE

Created by several different species that live below ground, there are many types of this wine.

Prices range widely.

(Fortitude save DC 11–12).

MUSIC BOX

A tiny box with a small handle that, when turned, produces delicate music (a single song).

The precise skill to create one usually means that it is made from the finest metals and covered with gems.

NATURE'S DRAUGHT

This tiny vial contains a murky, pungent liquid.

When consumed, nature's draught cause subtle changes in the user's scent.

Animals respond well to a character who has consumed nature's draught, finding her less threatening and easier to trust.

Drinking a vial of nature's draught provides a +1 circumstance bonus on Handle Animal and Animal Empathy checks made during the next day.

NAUTILUS

Colossal vehicle; Profession (sailor) –6; Spd 20 ft. (nautical poor); Overall AC –3; Section hp 40/80 (hardness 20/5); Section AC 3; Ram 18d6; SA Ramming prow; Face 130 ft. by 20 ft.; Height 20 ft. (draft 15 ft.); Crew 40; Cargo 50 tons; Cost 250,000 gp.

This massive armored vessel was once a galley, though few sailors would today recognize it.

It's been armored with adamantine, made airtight, and outfitted with air bladders stolen from a gnome submersible.

It includes a ramming prow and five luxury passenger spaces.

A Huge water elemental, bound into service, turns the massive screws at the rear of the ship.

The vehicle mounts no weapons, relying on its armor and the strength of its crew to survive encounters with aquatic dangers.

Though a powerful craft, the Nautilus is difficult for even a trained crew to manage.

The creator of the Nautilus, the loremaster Rutagha, recently lost the vessel to a kraken and its minions. Rutagha, who teleported away, believes that some of his crewmembers may yet survive, and he's willing to hire adventurers to recover the ship.

NAVIGATOR'S KIT

This expensive set of instruments includes a sextant, astrolabe, compass, and measuring tools.

It has no benefit on land but grants a +2 circumstance bonus on Intuit Direction and Wilderness Lore (directional only) checks while at sea, and on Profession (cartographer) checks to make maps.

NET, BUTTERFLY

This is a slender rod with a metal hoop on one end, covered by a sack made from insect netting (see that entry, above). It's used to capture ordinary flying insects, vermin, and small birds without harming them.

It requires no proficiency to use a butterfly net, which grants a +2 circumstance bonus on attack rolls to capture creatures that are Tiny or smaller.

Treat this as a net (see Weapons in Chapter 7 of the Player's Handbook) in all respects, except that it is not thrown.

ORNITHOPTER

Large vehicle; Profession (pilot) +2; Spd fly 40 ft. (poor); Overall hp 20 (hardness 5); Overall AC 4; Ram 2d6; Face 5 ft. by 15 ft.; Height 5 ft.; Crew 1; Cost 4,000 gp.

A magically enhanced version of the hang glider, the ornithopter relies on animated wings to propel a Small character through the air.

Thus it can ascend like any flying creature with poor maneuverability.

Like the hang glider, the ornithopter gives its pilot one-half cover behind 1 inch of wood and cloth (hp 10, hardness 3).

PACK, FRAMED

This pack distributes weight better than normal packs, allowing creatures to carry slightly more than they otherwise could.

However, it is harder to reach into a framed pack while wearing it.

When calculating encumbrance for a character with a framed pack, treat the pack and everything inside it as weighing 10% less than normal.

Retrieving anything from a framed pack is a full-round action that provokes an attack of opportunity.

PASSENGER SPACES

Available cargo space can be converted for passenger use; one ton (2,000 pounds) of cargo space can accommodate two Medium-size or smaller passengers comfortably. Twice as many can squeeze into passenger space for short periods of time, but they are too cramped to fight effectively and are considered fatigued after an hour's travel.

Cost: 200 gp per ton.

PASSENGER SPACES, FANCY

As above, but the passenger quarters are cushioned and decorated.

Each ton of cargo space can accommodate one passenger at this level of comfort.

Cost: 600 gp per ton.

PASSENGER SPACES, LUXURY

As above, but the passenger quarters are the very definition of opulence.

Each luxury passenger space takes up two tons of cargo space.

Cost: 1,500 gp per ton.

PERCOLATOR

Considered the most important part of a mess kit, a percolator boils water to make coffee and other, more exotic hot drinks.

If used in desperation as a weapon, the contents of a full boiling percolator deal 1d3 points of heat damage (max range 5 feet).

PERISCOPE

This is a small handheld periscope, about a foot long, that allows you to look over obstacles or around corners without exposing yourself to danger.

PESTLE AND MORTAR

A stone bowl and crusher used to grind material down to powder.

It is vital for using the Alchemy skill and for creating potions.

POLAR SKIN

This dull white cream provides limited protection against cold-based damage.

Polar skin becomes ineffective once it has absorbed 5 points of cold damage.

Regardless of whether it absorbs any damage, polar skin loses its effectiveness 1 hour after application.

Polar skin does not stack with magical protection from cold.

Magical effects such as the resist elements spell supersede the protection provided by polar skin.

Applying polar skin takes 1 minute.

PULLEY

A sturdy wooden pulley with a metal hook-and-eye for hanging.
The eye can withstand a load of up to 750 pounds before breaking.

PULSCH BROWN ALE

A halfling creation, found among the few permanent halfling settlements that have acquired the taste of ale. It has a pleasant, nutty flavor.
(Fortitude save DC 11).

QUIVER SCABBARD

Cleverly designed, this quiver (for either arrows or bolts) has a hidden scabbard that can hold a relatively flat weapon of size Small or smaller, such as a shortsword, handaxe, or dagger.
It increases the Search check DC by +6 to locate a weapon hidden within.

RAMMING PROW/PLATE

Vehicles equipped with a ramming prow take half damage from ramming attacks they initiate.
(Normally, rams deal equal damage to both the target and the ramming vehicle).
The warship comes with this augmentation for free.
The weight and cost depend on the vehicle's size.
Weight: 500 lb. (Large), 1,000 lb (Huge), 2,000 lb. (Gargantuan), 4,000 lb. (Colossal); Cost: 500 gp (Large), 1,000 gp (Huge), 3,000 gp (Gargantuan), 5,000 gp (Colossal).

ROBES, DESERT

These loose, light-colored robes offer some protection against the effects of heat.
They provide a +2 circumstance bonus on Fortitude saving throws against exposure to high temperatures.
Desert robes offer no protection against either mundane or magical fire.

ROPE, ELVEN

Elven rope is finer than silk.
It has 4 hit points and can be burst with a successful Strength check (DC 25).
It is so supple that it grants a +3 circumstance bonus on Use Rope checks.
Coils of elven rope are sold in 20-foot lengths and are extremely rare outside of elven settlements.

ROTATING PLATFORM

This low platform mounted on rollers doubles the fire arc of a siege engine (so catapults have 180-degree fire arcs, and ballistas can fire in any direction).
A rotating platform doubles the crew required to operate the siege engine.
Weight: 1,000 lb.; Cost: 500 gp.

SAILING SHIP

Colossal vehicle; Profession (sailor) +4; Spd wind  $\times$  20 ft. (nautical average); Overall AC -3; Section hp 50 (hardness 5); Section AC 3; Rigging 80 hp (hardness 0), AC 1; Ram 12d6; Face 80 ft. by 20 ft.; Height 10 ft. (draft 10 ft.); Crew 20; Cargo 150 tons (Spd wind  $\times$  15 ft. if 75 tons or more); Cost 10,000 gp.
A sailing ship has enough room on deck for two light catapults or ballistas.
It usually uses a launch as a lifeboat (not included in the price).

SAW, FOLDING

This camp saw breaks down into one slender package for easy carrying.
It cuts through 4 inches of soft wood or 2 inches of hard wood per round.
A folding saw is ineffective as a weapon.

SCORCHER FUMES

Creatures affected by scorcher fumes lose the scent ability, if they had it, for 1d6 $\times$ 10 minutes.

SCRYER'S KIT

This is a variety of focusing crystals, incense, mirrors, and other tools to help a scryer concentrate.
It grants a +2 circumstance bonus on Scry checks.
The user must still have the ability to cast the scrying spell or have a crystal ball.

SHADOW CARRIAGE

Huge vehicle; Handle Animal +0; Spd 120 ft. (poor); Overall hp 90 (hardness 5); Overall AC 3; Ram 4d6; Face 15 ft. by 10 ft.; Height 10 ft.; Crew 1 (plus 5 passengers); Weight 400 lb.; Cargo 500 lb.; Cost 100,000 gp.
This darkwood carriage, infused with shadowstuff, is drawn by six phantom steeds (as the spell cast by a 13th-level sorcerer).
Once per week, it can cross over to the Plane of Shadow for up to 13 hours, traversing 42 miles every hour regardless of terrain on the Material Plane (treat as the shadow walk spell cast by a 13th-level sorcerer).

SHEATH, BOOT

A boot sheath is easily concealed, making it useful for those who want to appear unarmed.
Boot sheaths can hold only Small or Tiny bladed weapons. Characters attempting to conceal an item in a boot sheath gain a +4 bonus on their Pick Pocket check (opposed by either Spot or Search, depending on the situation).
If the character using the boot sheath does not have ranks in Pick Pocket, noticing the boot sheath requires a successful Spot or Search check (DC 10).

SHEATH, WRIST

This sheath fits along the inside of the forearm, allowing weapons stored inside it to be drawn quickly.

A wrist sheath can hold one Tiny weapon, such as a dagger, or one wand.

Weapons of unusual shape, like a bladed gauntlet, do not fit into a wrist sheath regardless of their size.

Drawing or replacing the contents of a wrist sheath is a move-equivalent action.

SHOES, SILENT

These are soft, padded shoes that absorb sound effectively. Despite the padding, the soles are made from tough, stretchy leather that holds up to abuse.

They grant a +1 circumstance bonus on Move Silently checks.

SHRIEK ROCK

Created by halfling artisans, these flat stones have carefully drilled holes that cause a loud, high-pitched “shriek” when thrown hard.

This sound is as loud as a human screaming in a shrill voice. Listen checks to hear shriek rocks in flight are at DC –5, modified as normal by distance and intervening obstacles. A shriek rock has a 50% chance to be destroyed or lost when thrown.

SIDECAR SADDLE

A long mount that is at least two size categories larger than its rider can carry sidecar saddles.

This type of exotic saddle hangs off a creature’s side, allowing it to carry passengers without crowding the rider. If a mount is only two size categories larger than the rider (such as a horse carrying a halfling), sidecar saddles must be worn and weighted in pairs to keep the mount from becoming unbalanced.

If the mount is three or more size categories larger than the rider (such as a half-orc on an ancient bronze dragon), then the added weight is negligible for the mount and not unbalancing.

Riders in a sidecar saddle automatically get one-half cover from attacks coming from the opposite side of the mount.

Cost: 60 gp; Weight: 40 lb.

SIEGE TOWER

This war-wagon simply has a siege tower mounted on top of it.

A wagon is typically 10 feet tall; a siege tower extends its height by another 10 feet.

Through a set of gears and scissor mechanisms, the roof of the tower can pop up another 10 feet to deliver a strike force of skulkers onto a parapet.

The siege tower war wagon-weighs 1,000 lb. and costs 2,000 gp.

SIEGE TOWER, LARGE

Huge vehicle; Handle Animal +4; Spd drawn (clumsy); Overall AC 3; Section hp 120 (hardness 5); Section AC 3;

Ram 12d6; Face 10 ft. by 10 ft.; Height 30 ft.; Crew 3 (plus 25 soldiers); Weight 16 tons; Cargo 1 ton; Cost 4,000 gp.

The large siege tower is a fortress on wheels.

Each of its three stories features arrow slits and heavy doors cut into foot-thick wood, while the roof has crenellations and a platform with room for a heavy catapult or two ballistas or light catapults.

A large siege tower’s only disadvantage is its massive weight—a team of ten heavy warhorses or two elephants is needed to move it into position.

SIEGE TOWER, SMALL

Huge vehicle; Handle Animal +4; Spd drawn (clumsy); Overall AC 3; Section hp 120 (hardness 5); Section AC 3; Ram 10d6; Face 10 ft. by 10 ft.; Height 20 ft.; Crew 1 (plus 15 soldiers); Weight 8 tons; Cost 1,000 gp.

Designed more as an enclosed ladder than a proper vehicle, the small siege tower is built to take punishment while it is being pulled up to enemy walls.

Invading troops can ascend through the center of the siege tower and reach the top of the wall without coming under enemy fire.

The inefficient rollers used to help propel the tower limit the vehicle to a speed of 10 feet, but its movement is unaffected by poor terrain.

Builders sometimes mount a light catapult or ballista atop a small siege tower.

SIGNAL TORCH

These simple items are normal torches treated with a variety of alchemical substances to color the flames. Signal torches each burn with a differently colored flame. They are available in a variety of colors, the most common being green, blue, and yellow.

SKIS AND POLES

Skis allow full movement across snow and icy surfaces but cannot be used at all on any other terrain.

Downhill speed can be as a run (×4) on slight grades or as run (×5) on severe grades.

It takes a full-round action to don and to remove skis.

SLATE BOARD

This is a 1-foot-square piece of slate, used for writing on with chalk.

SLED

Large vehicle; Handle Animal +2; Spd drawn (clumsy); Overall hp 40 (hardness 5); Overall AC 4; Ram 3d6; Face 15 ft. by 5 ft.; Height 5 ft.; Crew 1; Weight 300 lb., Cargo 1 ton; Cost 20 gp.

Drawn across ice or snow, the sled is an almost entirely exposed structure.

The driver and any passengers gain one-quarter cover behind 1 inch of wood (hp 10, hardness 5).

Eight riding dogs can pull the sled over ice or packed snow at a speed of 40 feet, even if it’s fully loaded.

Untracked snow slows their speed by one-half, and deep snow cuts it to one-quarter.

SNORKEL

A 1-foot-long slender tube that allows you to breathe while submerged.

You can remain underwater indefinitely as long as you stay just under the surface (this is part of the swimming kit, described below in Class Tools and Skill Kits).

SNOW GOGGLES

These wooden goggles have a thin horizontal slit in the middle.

They grant a +2 circumstance bonus on saves to resist blinding effects, including snow blindness, extremely bright light, or spells that target vision indirectly (such as sunburst but not blindness).

While wearing snow goggles, you incur a -4 circumstance penalty on Spot and Search checks.

SNOWSHOES

These allow the wearer to move at 2/3 normal speed across snow and ice.

Snowshoes take 1 minute to don and a full-round action to remove.

SPARKER

This consists of flint and steel set in a wire hinge.

Lighting a torch with a sparker takes a standard action.

A sparker can be used ten times before it needs replacing.

SPARKSTONE

These alchemical devices actually resemble fist-sized lumps of hard, gray clay.

You can throw a sparkstone as a grenadelike weapon.

When a sparkstone hits a target, it releases a short, violent arc of electricity.

A direct hit by a sparkstone deals 1d6 points of electricity damage.

If there is another creature within 5 feet of the target, the electricity arcs to that creature, dealing half of the initial damage.

The sparkstone only creates one secondary arc, so if more than one creature is within 5 feet of the target, roll randomly to see which creature is affected.

If no creatures are within 5 feet of the target, the sparkstone causes no secondary effect.

SPELUNKER'S OUTFIT

This outfit is for adventurers planning to travel underground.

It consists of water-resistant wool breeches, low sturdy boots, wool shirt, leather coat, belt, plain buckle, bandoleer (for attaching equipment), kneepads, elbow pads, and miner's cap.

The outfit does not include climbing gear, which must be purchased separately.

SPIDER POLES

This assortment of metal poles can be collapsed into a small, lightweight bundle.

Each pole is hollow, 1 foot long and 3/4 inch thick.

When unfolded, the poles snap into a variety of positions, forming a semirigid ladder 10 feet high or an articulated frame 5 feet square.

The poles can withstand up to 200 pounds of weight before the structure collapses and is ruined.

Using spider poles as a ladder grants a +1 circumstance bonus on Climb checks.

They may also grant a bonus in other situations if assembled in an appropriate manner (DM's discretion).

SPIDEBLOOD, DROW

A slight misnomer, this mushroom wine crafted by the drow includes a substantial dose of venom from poisonous spiders.

Its taste is remarkable and unlike anything encountered on the surface world.

Anyone not used to drinking this wine (usually a nondrow), must make a successful Fortitude save (DC 11) or be poisoned (primary and secondary damage 1d2 Con), in addition to making the Fortitude save against intoxication (DC 11).

Those wishing to overcome this poisonous effect must drink one glass over several hours, every day for three months.

SPRAYER

This is a small storage drum attached to a large handle and pump.

The drum is filled with liquid, usually water, although oil and holy water are commonly used as well (acid is a poor choice, as it eats away the container in a few rounds).

When pumped (a standard action) the sprayer creates a dense cloud of vapor 10 feet long.

Because the particles are so fine, the cloud lasts for only a moment and does not drift to adjacent squares.

The drum contains enough liquid to last for three pumps before needing to be refilled.

SPRINGWALL

This gnome-crafted device consists of a very thin wire mesh that is tightly wrapped up into a ball roughly the size of a fist.

When the ball is thrown and strikes a hard surface, it springs open, creating a flexible metal mesh wall 10 feet high and 10 feet wide (hardness 0, 5 hp).

The extremely thin mesh is difficult to see (Spot check DC 20).

A creature who walks or runs into the mesh must make a Reflex save (DC 15) to avoid being entangled as if by a net (see Chapter 7 of the Player's Handbook).

Once the springwall has been used in this manner, it cannot be used again.

STAGECOACH

Huge vehicle; Handle Animal +0; Spd drawn (clumsy); Overall hp 150 (hardness 5); Overall AC 3; Ram 6d6; Face 20 ft. by 10 ft.; Height 10 ft.; Crew 1 (plus 7 passengers); Weight 750 lb.; Cargo 1,000 lb.; Cost 800 gp.

The stagecoach is a larger version of the carriage (see above).

The driver and a passenger riding in front have one-half cover behind 1 inch of wood (hp 10, hardness 5).

Passengers inside the vehicle have three-quarters cover.

Four heavy horses, arranged in two ranks of two, can pull a stagecoach at a speed of 50 feet.

STILTS

These wooden stilts strap to your legs, increasing your height by 2 feet.

They require a successful Balance check (DC 5) to use effectively.

You can also buy taller stilts: For each additional foot in height, increase the Balance check DC by 5 and add 10 gp to the cost.

Base speed while using stilts is 20 feet (Small characters actually benefit from the longer strides).

You cannot run on stilts.

STONEBREAKER ACID

This special form of acid affects only stone.

You can throw stonebreaker acid as a grenadelike weapon. Acid ordinarily deals half damage to objects (see Attack an Object in Chapter 8 of the Player's Handbook).

A direct hit on a stone surface ignores hardness and deals 3d10 points of damage.

On the round after a direct hit, stonebreaker acid deals a further 2d10 points of damage.

SWIMMER'S KIT

This consists of a snorkel (see the snorkel entry above—the bonus is already factored in), crude goggles, flippers, and occasionally a skintight suit.

It grants a +2 circumstance bonus on Swim checks and cannot be worn with other clothing or armor.

TABLE CASE, FOLDING

A 2-foot-by-2-foot suitcase that doubles as a folding table, this is commonly used by street performers, fences, and con artists.

TARP

This is a 10-foot-square piece of sturdy canvas with metal eyelets in the corners and edges.

TEEPEE

Used primarily by nomads, a teepee provides excellent shelter against the elements.

It takes 1 hour to set up and half an hour to take down.

A typical teepee provides enough room to comfortably fit eight Medium-size humanoids.

It requires a horse, donkey, or mule (or wagon) to transport effectively.

TENT, FOUR-PERSON

A Large tent that can comfortably fit four Medium-size humanoids.

TENT, ONE-PERSON

A tent designed to shelter one Medium-size humanoid.

TENT, PAVILION

A Huge open-air canopy, plus stakes, poles, and ropes. It can comfortably fit twenty Medium-size humanoids underneath.

THEVER FUMES

The blindness caused by thever fumes is permanent unless removed by cure blindness or similar magic.

THEVER PASTE

The blindness caused by thever paste is permanent unless removed by cure blindness or similar magic.

If thever paste is heated, thever fumes are the result—the two poisons are derived from the same base compound.

THIEVING HELMET

This specially designed helmet has metal funnels around the ears, which grant a +1 circumstance bonus on Listen checks.

THUDRUD, GOBLIN

Almost universally avoided by nongoblinoid races, thudrud has been described as having the taste and smell of “a rotting cow that caught fire”.

It is favored by some barbarians as the drink of choice. (Fortitude save DC 12).

TONGS, METAL

These are 1-foot-long metal tongs used to pick up objects without touching them directly.

TOOLS, FARMING

Typical farming and gardening tools often found in the hands of commoners.

They have wooden shafts or handles and iron heads (typically hardness 5, 5 hp).

If used as weapons, they impose a –4 nonproficiency penalty on attack rolls.

TREE STAND

This portable platform gives hunters a stable surface above the ground.

In dense leaves, the tree stand provides a +2 circumstance bonus on Hide checks against anyone on the ground and doubles the range of vision.

TREE TENT, ELVEN

A cleverly designed and very comfortable one-person tent that suspends itself in the branches of trees.

Due to its coloration and shape, it grants a +1 circumstance bonus on Hide checks against being spotted from the ground.

TWINE, ROLL

A roll of sturdy twine.

It has 0 hardness and 1 hp.

When tightly wrapped around an object, it has the same strength as hemp rope (0 hardness, 2 hp per inch).

VERMINBANE

This tightly sealed flask contains a pale green smoke. When released into the air, the smoke fills a 5-foot-square area.

Most creatures are unaffected by the smoke, although humanoids generally find the smell unpleasant.

Vermin, however, find the smoke almost intolerable.

To pass through an area filled with verminbane, vermin must succeed on a Fortitude save (DC 15).

Verminbane lasts for 1 minute, although strong winds may decrease this duration.

VEST, KNIFE

This specially designed vest is worn over other clothing and can comfortably hold up to ten daggers across the chest.

It is particularly handy for knife-throwers with the Quick Draw feat.

VICIOUS BLEEDER

This thick blue gel is a powerful anticoagulant.

A wound caused by a weapon coated with vicious bleeder continues to bleed for 2 rounds, dealing 1 additional point of damage on each of those rounds.

Applying vicious bleeder to a weapon (of any size) is a full-round action that provokes an attack of opportunity.

Once applied to a weapon, vicious bleeder lasts for 1 minute before it evaporates.

One flask of vicious bleeder contains enough to coat one weapon of size Large or smaller.

Vicious bleeder does not affect constructs, elementals, oozes, outsiders, or undead.

WAGON

Huge vehicle; Handle Animal -2; Spd drawn (poor); Overall hp 60 (hardness 5); Overall AC 3; Ram 4d6; Face 15

ft. by 10 ft.; Height 5 ft.; Crew 1; Weight 400 lb., Cargo 2 tons; Cost 35 gp.

A wagon is open-topped, so the driver and any passengers gain one-half cover behind 1 inch of wood (hp 10, hardness 5).

The most common dray creatures for the wagon are two heavy horses, which are strong enough to pull the wagon at a speed of 35 feet, even if it's fully loaded.

Wagons are the most common means for an invading army to move siege engines from place to place.

A wagon can also be equipped with a heavy catapult (adding 2 tons to the wagon's weight and eliminating the cargo capacity) or a light catapult (adding 1 ton to weight, leaving 1 ton of cargo space for ammunition).

WARSHIP

Colossal vehicle; Profession (sailor) +2; Spd wind  $\times$  15 ft. (nautical average), oars 20 ft. (nautical good); Overall AC -3; Section hp 100 (hardness 5); Section AC 3; Rigging 80 hp (hardness 0), AC 1; Ram 15d6; Face 100 ft. by 20 ft.; Height 20 ft. (draft 15 ft.); SA Ramming prow; Crew 260 (80 rowers, 160 marines); Cargo 5 tons; Cost 25,000 gp.

A warship can accommodate two heavy catapults or four light catapults or ballistas.

Four launches are used as lifeboats and troop transports (not included in the price).

WATER, LAWFUL/CHAOTIC

Groups that worship deities dedicated to the concepts of Law and Chaos also create water that mimics the effect of holy or unholy water.

Lawful water is identified by its utter stillness, while chaotic water constantly bubbles and froths.

Lawful water damages chaotic outsiders almost as if it were acid.

Typically, a flask of lawful water deals 2d4 points of damage to a chaotic outsider on a direct hit or 1 point of damage if it splashes such a creature.

In addition, lawful water is considered blessed, which means it has special effects against certain creatures.

A flash of lawful water can be thrown as a grenadelike weapon (see Grenadelike Weapon Attacks in Chapter 8 of the Player's Handbook).

A flask breaks if thrown against the body of a corporeal creature, but against an incorporeal creature, the flask must be opened and the lawful water poured onto it.

Thus, you can douse an incorporeal creature with lawful water only if you are adjacent to it.

Doing so is a ranged touch attack that does not provoke attacks of opportunity.

Chaotic water is identical to lawful water, except that it affects lawful outsiders.

WICK, CANDLE

This is treated wick for creating candles.

In addition, it can be used as a timing device or fuse. One inch of wick burns in 30 seconds.

The flame is as strong as that of a candle, so it is easily snuffed out by wind, rain, and the like.

WINCH

This is a hand-cranked winch, plus 50 feet of hemp rope (or wire) and a small hook.

To be effective, the winch must be bolted or nailed down to a secure surface.

There are different “strengths” that one can purchase—the equivalent of a person with Str 18 (lift/drag 600 pounds), 20 (lift/drag 800 pounds), or 22 (lift/drag 1,040 pounds).

WORG WARSLED

Huge vehicle; Handle Animal +2; Spd drawn (poor); Overall hp 100 (hardness 7); Overall AC 3; Ram 6d6; Face 15 ft. by 10 ft.; Height 5 ft.; Crew 1 (plus 3 passengers); Weight 900 lb.; Cargo 700 lb.; Cost 400 gp.

Goblins in snowy climes use their worg allies to pull massive sleds covered with makeshift armor and spikes. The driver and passengers aboard such a warsled gain three-quarters cover behind a 2-inch-thick barrier of steel and wood (hp 20, hardness 7).

Two worgs abreast pull the sled at a speed of 35 feet.

YACHT

Colossal vehicle; Profession (sailor) +2; Spd wind 15 ft. (nautical average); Overall AC -3; Section hp 40 (hardness 5); Section AC 3; Ram 8d6; Face 90 ft. by 30 ft.; Height 10 ft. (draft 10 ft.); Crew 20; Cargo 30 tons; Cost 30,000 gp. This vessel is a pleasure ship for royalty and extremely rich merchants.

Much of the belowdecks area is given over to opulent staterooms, and the decks and castles are left as clear as possible for the owner to stroll about at leisure.

Everything about the ship is the finest quality, from mast to belaying pins.

TABLE 3-2: RAVAGES

Ravage	Type	Initial Damage	Secondary Damage	Price
Golden ice	Contact DC 14	1d6 Dex	2d6 Dex	1,200 gp
Celestial lightsblood	Ingested DC 20	1d4 Dex	1d4 Con	2,500 gp
Jade water	Injury DC 14	1d4 Wis	1d4 Int, 1d4 Wis	350 gp
Purified couatl venom	Injury DC 16	2d4 Str	4d4 Str	3,000 gp
Unicorn blood	Injury DC 17	1d3 Str	1d4 Str	500 gp

CELESTIAL LIGHTSBLOOD

This rare substance is as ethereal as pure alcohol, though it is not intoxicating.

A pure silvery color, it first slows and then sickens creatures it affects.

GOLDEN ICE

This crystalline substance is cold to the touch, though it doesn't melt except at infernally high temperatures. Evil creatures subjected to it feel its cold spreading throughout their bodies.

JADE WATER

Jade is a potent substance, noted for its effects on certain kinds of evil supernatural creatures.

ZEPPELIN

Colossal vehicle; Profession (pilot) -4; Spd fly wind × 20 ft. (clumsy); Overall AC -3; Section hp 30 (hardness 5); Section AC 3; Rigging 200 hp (0 hardness), AC 1; Ram 4d6; Face 40 ft. by 10 ft.; Height 10 ft.; Crew 10; Cargo 10 tons (Spd wind × 15 ft. if 5 tons or more); Cost 60,000 gp.

A zeppelin relies on hot air trapped in a massive balloon for lift and animated propellers for propulsion.

Because it flies, it is light in weight and vulnerable to wind conditions (thus it's treated as a wind-powered vehicle even though it doesn't have sails).

The balloon that provides lift is segmented so that one puncture isn't disastrous.

Unlike creatures with clumsy maneuverability, zeppelins have no minimum forward speed, and they can hover if they are turned into the wind.

BOOK OF CHALLENGES (3.0)

CHUK'S FUNGUS

Chuk makes his potions with a twist: each contains a fungus that heightens mental acuity, giving a +2 alchemical bonus on Will saves if the imbiber is a bugbear.

They're poisonous to anyone else (Fort DC 17, 1 Str/1d6+1 Str), though each one still has its normal magical effect.

BOOK OF EXALTED DEEDS (3.5)

Jade water is simply holy water with a suspension of jade crystals that takes on unusual potency as a ravage.

PURIFIED COUATL VENOM

The venom of a couatl, when milked from the creature and purified, becomes a potent ravage that severely weakens the victim.

UNICORN BLOOD

Drawn from a willing living unicorn, unicorn blood retains its potency as a ravage only as long as the unicorn that donated the blood remains alive.

Name: The name of the drug (and its common nickname, if any).

Type: This column gives the method by which the drug is introduced into a creature's system—either ingested, inhaled, or via an injury—and the DC of the Fortitude save necessary to avoid the effects of the drug. Injury also includes methods such as pouring the drug into a wound or applying it as a poultice.

Price: The price of a single dose, assuming the drug is publicly available. If a drug is banned, the price is generally two to five times higher.

Alchemy DC: The DC for the Alchemy check required to make the drug. The check can only be made in a properly outfitted alchemical laboratory.

Addiction: The addiction rating of the drug (see the Addiction section above).

AGONY (LIQUID PAIN)

This thick, reddish liquid is the distilled essence of pain, captured using special spells or items (see the Pain as Power section of Chapter 2).

It is highly sought after by outsiders.

Initial Effect: User is stunned for 1d4+1 rounds and can take only partial actions for 1d6 minutes after that.

Secondary Effect: 1d4+1 enhancement bonus to Charisma for 1d10+50 minutes.

Side Effects: Feelings of intense pleasure last for 1d4 hours.

Overdose: If more than one dose is taken in a 24-hour period, the user immediately falls unconscious for 1d4 hours (Fort DC 18 negates).

BACCARAN

This pasty substance is dried and kept as a powder or sometimes left as a paste.

The ingredients are numerous and difficult to obtain.

Initial Effect: 1d4 points of Strength damage.

Secondary Effect: 1d4+1 enhancement bonus to Wisdom for 1d10+15 minutes.

Side Effects: Those under the effect of baccaran take a -4 circumstance penalty on saving throws involving illusions for 2d4 hours after using this mild hallucinogen.

Overdose: If more than one dose is taken in a 24-hour period, the user immediately takes 2d6 points of damage and the side effect is doubled.

BRANDING IRON/POKER

Heated in hot coals, this iron rod is used to create painful but nonfatal burns.

The burn deals 1d3 points of damage and allows one Intimidate check.

CRUCIFIXION CROSS

This device consists of two lengths of wood or other strong material, plus several nails.

The executioner affixes the condemned to the structure by driving nails through the wrists and the arch of each foot.

When affixed, the condemned is considered crucified.

On a successful Profession (executioner) check, excruciating pain slowly kills the condemned over the next several hours: She loses a number of hit points equal to 10% of her full normal total hit points each hour.

If the executioner botches the crucifixion, the condemned is not securely fashioned to the cross and gains a +10 bonus on Escape Artist checks.

She still loses 10% of her total hit points each hour she remains on the cross.

DAGGER

Any weapon could be used as a device of torture, though traditional weapons do their jobs too well—the risk of killing the victim too quickly becomes a concern.

If a dagger is used as a torture device, each use deals 2d4 points of damage and allows one Intimidate check.

DEVILWEED

Leaves from the wyssin plant are dried and rolled into a tobaccolike substance and smoked.

Initial Effect: 1 point of Wisdom damage.

Secondary Effect: The smoker gains a +2 alchemical bonus to Strength for 1d3 hours.

Side Effects: A creature under the effect of devilweed is easily confused and acts skittish (treat as shaken).

Overdose: None.

DRAW AND QUARTER

First, the executioner forcefully affixes a specially prepared cord to some vital internal organs of the client, usually the intestines; this procedure deals 3d4 points of damage.

Once the cord is affixed, the executioner either draws the cord himself, or attaches the other end to a horse that subsequently gallops away.

The cord draws taut, pulling the intestines from the torso of the condemned.

On a successful Profession (executioner) check, the condemned dies instantly.

On a botched attempt, the cord comes loose prior to disembowelment, but the condemned still takes 5d6 points of additional damage.

FEATHER POWDER

Originally designed as a weapon against devas and lammasus, this dark red alchemical powder comes in a small glass vial thrown as a grenadelike weapon.

Anyone struck or splashed by the powder must succeed at a Fortitude saving throw (DC 15) or take a -1 circumstance penalty on attack and damage rolls, saving throws, skill checks, and ability checks for 1 minute due to irritation and itching.

Creatures with feathers are particularly susceptible, taking a -2 circumstance penalty on the Fortitude save against feather powder and suffering double the effect (-2 penalty) if they fail the save.

FESTERING BOMB

This small ceramic sphere is packed with alchemical explosives, rotting meat, and offal infected with filth fever. When thrown as a grenadelike weapon, it spreads disease in its wake.

The explosion on impact is not enough to cause physical harm, but it does spray the rotten contents and infection in a 20-foot burst.

All within the burst must make saving throws as if exposed to filth fever (Fort DC 12; see the Disease section in Chapter 3 of the DUNGEON MASTER's Guide).

Unlike normal exposure to filth fever, the victim need not be injured.

HANGING ROPE

A rope used for this purpose has usually been boiled and stretched beforehand to eliminate further stretching and coiling.

The knot is lubricated with wax to ensure a smooth slide as it tightens around the neck of the condemned.

The noose is placed so that the knot is behind the left ear of the condemned; then a trapdoor opens below or a stool is knocked away and the condemned plummets.

On a successful Profession (executioner) check, the condemned dies instantly.

If the execution is botched, the condemned is not killed by the fall but instead slowly strangles, taking 1d3 points of damage per round.

HEADSMAN'S AXE

When specially sharpened and held with the proper technique, a greataxe (or a greatsword) can serve the executioner as the instrument of execution.

The condemned is restrained, with the neck vulnerable to the strike readied by the executioner.

On a successful Profession (executioner) check, the condemned dies instantly.

If the executioner fails the attempt, the headsman's axe delivers a coup de grace against the condemned (automatic critical hit, and the condemned must succeed on a Fortitude save or die).

The coup de grace simply completes the executioner's task more messily.

HOT LEAD

The torturer melts lead, then pours it on the victim's skin. Often the palm, the arm, or the belly is the target, but sometimes torturers drip lead on the eyelids or other delicate tissues.

Each use deals 1d3 points of damage and allows one Intimidate check.

IRON MAIDEN

This coffin-shaped iron box is laden with spikes on the interior surfaces.

Anyone placed inside is pierced dozens of times, and any movement causes more pain.

The iron maiden has several settings that determine how tightly the two sides come together when the device is closed.

At the low setting, anyone inside takes 1 point of damage per round.

The moderate setting deals 5 points of damage, the severe setting deals 10 points of damage, and the terminal setting deals 50 points of damage each round.

Once the iron maiden is closed to any setting, the torturer can make an Intimidate check every round.

JAW BREAKER

This wood and metal device is like a reverse thumbscrew. The torturer inserts the jaw breaker into the victim's mouth, then turns a small wheel.

As the wheel turns, two opposing plates force the victim's mouth wider and wider, breaking teeth and eventually the jawbone.

The jaw breaker can also be used on the victim in other places.

Each use deals 2d4 points of damage and allows one Intimidate check.

The jaw breaker must generally be removed for the victim to speak coherently.

KARRAS STONE KNIFE

A quasi-magical item, this simple knife must be carved from a very rare stone procured from the gallbladder of an intelligent creature slain during a special harvesting ritual. Karras stone is made only into knives because it has only one special use—otherwise, it is normal stone.

When a karras stone knife is used to sacrifice a living creature, the character using the knife gains a +1 profane bonus on the Knowledge (religion) check for the sacrifice (see Sacrifices in Chapter 2).

LUHIX

Powdered stalks of plants that grow only in the Abyss, luhix is normally sprinkled onto a bleeding, self-inflicted wound. Then the wound is sealed either with magical healing or tightly wound bandages.

Initial Effect: 1 point of ability score damage to all ability scores.

Secondary Effect: The imbiber gains a +2 alchemical bonus to all ability scores for 1d2 hours.

Side Effects: For the first minute of application, the user feels intense pain.

During the time that the secondary effect is in effect, the user is immune to pain (including the effects of spells such as symbol of pain).

The character takes damage as normal, but may not react normally to that damage.

Overdose: Those who take this drug more than once in 24 hours must make a separate save (Fort DC 25 negates) or die in terrible pain.

MORDAYN VAPOR (“DREAMMIST”)

Made of roughly ground leaves of a rare herb found in deep forests, mordayn is so potent that it is taken by steeping a small amount in hot water, and then inhaling the vapors of the resultant tea.

Raw mordayn powder and mordayn-tainted water are deadly poison; taking the powder directly or drinking the water produces an immediate overdose.

Dreammist is renowned for the beautiful visions it induces and the deadly peril of its sinister embrace.

Initial Effect: Exotic visions of incredible beauty enthrall the user for the next d20+10 minutes.

During this time the user has a 50% chance to lose any action he attempts, as described in the bestow curse spell.

Secondary Effect: 1d4 points of Constitution damage and 1d4 points of Wisdom damage.

Side Effects: The visions of a dreammist user are incredibly beautiful and poignant.

His normal life seems drab and futile in comparison, and he aches to experience the transcendent beauty of his drug-induced dreams again.

When the dose wears off, the user must succeed at a Will save (DC 17) or fall under a compulsion to do whatever is necessary to repeat the dreammist dose (treat this as a compulsion similar to that of a suggestion spell).

This compulsion lasts for 1d4 hours before fading.

Overdose: If two doses are taken within the space of an hour, or if raw mordayn powder or mordayn tea are ingested, the drug is a deadly poison (ingested DC 17, 1d10 Con/1d10 Con).

Mordayn vapor addicts often throw out the tea as soon as they inhale and make sure that only one dose is available at a time in order to make sure they cannot overdose on the deadly drug.

MUSHROOM POWDER

Taken from a rare blue mushroom, this powder must be inhaled.

It is popular among arcane spellcasters.

Initial Effect: +2 alchemical bonus to Intelligence and Charisma for 1 hour.

Secondary Effect: 1 point of Strength damage.

Side Effects: This is a mild hallucinogen.

The user takes a -2 alchemical penalty to Wisdom for 1d4 hours and a -2 alchemical penalty to Strength and Constitution for 2d4 hours.

Overdose: If more than one dose is taken in a 12-hour period, the user takes 2d6 points of damage.

Using it more than three times in any 24-hour period deals 4d6 points of damage and paralyzes the user for 2d4 hours.

NEEDLE

Large needles or nails can be inserted into the flesh of the victim in places that maximize pain and minimize real damage.

Each needle deals 1 point of damage.

Usually, three or four of these are used on a victim per Intimidate check.

PILLORY

This wooden device, consisting of a frame with holes for the victim's head and hands, is not a torture device in and of itself.

A pillory is designed to confine and restrain a victim. When the pillory is located in a public place, the torturer, her minions, and even passing strangers can taunt, assault, and further humiliate the victim.

Those who linger near the pillory commit acts ranging from simple degradation of the victim to outright physical harm.

Each 8 hours of confinement typically deals 1d6 points of damage and allows one Intimidate check.

RACK

A long, table-shaped device, the rack is equipped with chains and winches hooked up to manacles.

As a crank is turned, the rack stretches the victim's arms and legs.

Each 30 minutes spent on the rack deals 1 point of damage and allows one Intimidate check.

REDFLOWER LEAVES

These crushed leaves of a tiny red bog flower are known for their ability to improve hand-to-eye coordination.

Initial Effect: None.

Secondary Effect: As a move-equivalent action, the user may focus his attention upon a particular creature.

If he follows that action with an attack against the creature, he gains a +4 competence bonus on the attack roll.

This ability lasts 10 minutes.

Side Effects: None.

Overdose: Taking a second dose before the first has worn off causes the user to be nauseated for 1d4×10 minutes.

SANNISH

A bluish liquid distilled from wolves' milk and a powdered desert plant, this concoction is very popular.

Addicts are easily found by the permanent blue stains on their lips.

Initial Effect: 1 point of Wisdom damage.

Secondary Effect: The user becomes numbed to pain for 1d4 hours, immune to pain-induced penalties (such as from a symbol of pain).

Side Effects: Sannish causes euphoria.

While the drug is in effect, the user takes a -2 penalty on all initiative checks.

Overdose: A second dose taken while the first dose is still in effect causes a numbing stupor for 2d4 hours.

The user can only take partial actions until the stupor wears off.

SCALPEL/FLENSER

A finely crafted knife with a short, sharp blade, the scalpel is used by surgeons to cut away diseased flesh.

When used by a torturer, the scalpel pares lengths of skin away, then removes a digit or an earlobe.

Each use of a scalpel deals 1d6 points of damage and allows one Intimidate check.

Flensers are similar knives used to remove the skin from a body.

TERRAN BRANDY

A potent alcohol, this magical drink is favored by heartless spellcasters of all types.

This green liquid is distilled from the essence of dying fey. Initial Effect: +2 alchemical bonus to effective caster level for 1d20+20 minutes.

Secondary Effect: 2 points of Constitution damage.

Side Effects: None.

Overdose: If more than one dose is taken in a 8-hour period, the user immediately takes 1 point of Constitution damage.

THUMB SCREWS

This small wood and metal device slowly crushes the thumb or finger of a victim.

It causes a lot of pain, but deals only 1d2 points of damage per use.

Each time the thumbscrews tighten, the torturer can make another Intimidate check.

TIED DOWN

Anything used to tie down a victim is not a torture device.

But if the victim sees many ancillary and/or stationary torture devices nearby (as in a typical torture chamber), the torturer can make an immediate Intimidate check using half of the circumstance bonus for the item in question.

VIOLATED HORN

Also a quasi-magical item, the violated horn is a unicorn's horn that has been removed from a still-living unicorn, leaving the creature crippled and in constant, terrible pain. For a violated horn to have special power, it must physically violate a victim during a perverse religious ritual conducted atop an altar dedicated to an evil god.

The character performing the ritual must succeed at a Knowledge (arcana) check (DC 20) to perform the ritual properly, and no second tries are possible with that particular horn if the first check fails.

Once a violated horn is powered, its possessor can break the horn at any time thereafter and be immediately transported to the site of the ritual as if a word of recall spell had been cast.

VODARE

An extremely bitter brown powder, vodare is usually mixed with honeyed water or sweet wine to dilute the taste.

It is made from the crushed petals of a flower that grows only on the graves of those who dedicated their lives to the worship of Rallaster.

Initial Effect: +2 alchemical bonus on Intimidate checks and saving throws against fear effects for 1d4 hours.

Secondary Effect: -4 alchemical penalty on Diplomacy and Bluff checks for 2d4 hours.

Side Effects: Mild euphoria and fierce confidence while the drug is in effect.

Overdose: If more than one dose is taken in a 4-hour period, the user becomes catatonic (Fort DC 15 negates).

WEEPING STONE

Created through alchemical processes that inflict terrible—and sometimes lethal—pain on a living being, a weeping stone causes anyone touching it to his or her face to begin to weep and feel great sorrow.

Such a character is considered shaken for 1d6 rounds.

CITY OF SPLENDORS WATERDEEP (3.5)

SLEEP-SMOKE

Used primarily by agents of the Xanathar Thieves' Guild for kidnapping, sleep-smoke is a dark-gray, smoky gas that rapidly dissipates when released into the air.

One dose affects a globe 10 feet in diameter on the first round, expanding outward to a globe 20 feet in diameter on the second round, and being harmless thereafter.

A strong wind can move the globe of sleep-smoke.

Type: Inhaled DC 15; Initial damage unconsciousness for 1 minute; Secondary damage unconsciousness for 1d3 minutes; Price 25 gp; DC to create 15; CR modifier +1.

CITYSCAPE (3.5)

Craft (alchemy)

Item	Weight	Cost	DC
False Paper	*	15 gp	20
Liquid Light	*	25 gp	22
Sewer Mask	*	30 gp	25

* No significant weight

FALSE PAPER

This “item” is actually a pair of separate substances: a thick viscous liquid and a thinner fluid.

When poured over paper, the thicker liquid forms an extremely thin layer of what appears to be blank paper. The writing remains, but it is hidden behind what looks like a blank sheet.

Only a DC 35 Search check reveals that the paper is dual-layered.

The owner can write on this new layer, or leave it.

Applying the second fluid causes the top layer to disintegrate (along with anything written on it), revealing the original writing beneath.

This has proven to be an effective means of smuggling hidden messages into or out of a city, or even—although it costs a great deal—a means of hiding a spellbook from prying eyes.

The cost given is for enough false paper to cover, and then reveal, a single sheet.

You may add multiple layers of false paper to a single sheet, but each layer after the first reduces the DC to detect the false paper by 5.

LIQUID LIGHT

This viscous fluid is a bright yellow hue and glows faintly in the dark.

A flask of liquid light can be thrown as a splash weapon (PH 158).

Treat this as a ranged touch attack with a range increment of 10 feet.

A direct hit imposes a –8 penalty on the target's Hide checks; anyone within 5 feet is splashed and takes a –4 penalty.

The paint glows for 1d4 hours, then fades. It can be washed off with soap and water; this takes 3d4 minutes.

SEWER MASK

This is a small fabric-and-leather mask that is worn over the nose and mouth.

The alchemical substances within grant the wearer a +5 circumstance bonus on saves against airborne disease, inhaled toxins, and nonmagical effects that cause the sickened or nauseated conditions.

Each mask is good for 2 hours of use.

ALCHEMICAL TOOTH

Those relying on secrecy in the use of their alchemical capsules turn instead to the alchemical tooth.

As its name suggests, this specially concealed item has been made to look like a tooth.

The tooth functions in all respects like a capsule retainer (see above).

In addition, it is very hard to find without a thorough search (Search DC 30).

The false tooth is most often used as a concealed version of a capsule retainer, but a few extremely dedicated spies and other agents carry a tooth filled with poison as insurance against being captured alive.

An alchemical tooth can hold one dose of any contact poison or ingested poison, but such poison can only affect the wearer of the tooth—there's no way to make the tooth an effective delivery mechanism when combined with a bite attack.

ANIMAL TRAINING KIT

This kit includes signal whistles, a short hollow pole with a loop of rope threaded through it, savory treats, and other well-made items suited for the training of animals.

This kit grants a +2 circumstance bonus on Handle Animal checks made for teaching animals tricks, training animals for a purpose, or rearing a wild animal.

It does not grant a bonus for other uses of the Handle Animal skill.

ANTITOXIN CAPSULE

This capsule holds a dose of weak antitoxin.

When imbibed, it provides a +1 alchemical bonus on Fortitude saving throws made against poison.

This bonus lasts for 1 minute.

BALANCE POLE

This long, flexible pole is the perfect tool for balancing.

The pole is 10 feet long, so it cannot be used in any space that allows less than 5 feet of clearance on either side.

Provided the user has space to employ the pole properly, it grants a +2 circumstance bonus on Balance checks.

BLEND CREAM

This pale gray cream dulls the color of flesh, fur, scales, and hair.

It allows those affected to better blend with background and shadow, making it easier to hide.

Applying blend cream is a standard action that provokes attacks of opportunity.

Blend cream provides a +1 alchemical bonus on Hide checks.

The effects of blend cream last for 1 hour.

Blend cream gives no ability to hide in plain sight or without sufficient cover.

CAMOUFLAGE KIT

This bag contains face paints, dye, colored cloth, and other accessories appropriate for creating a camouflaged appearance.

The kit is the perfect tool for hiding and provides a +2 circumstance bonus on Hide checks.

Gaining this bonus requires 1 minute of work.

A camouflage kit is exhausted after ten uses.

CANDLE, FOCUSING

This large green taper burns quickly, lasting only 1 hour despite its size.

While burning, a focusing candle fills the air with a fresh, crisp odor.

The candle is a great boon to those engaged in strenuous mental activity.

Characters within 20 feet of a burning candle gain a +1 circumstance bonus on Appraise, Decipher Script, Forgery, and Search checks.

When making a skill check that takes more than one action to complete (such as Decipher Script), characters gain the bonus from a focusing candle only if they spend the entire duration of the check within 20 feet of the burning candle.

CAPSULE RETAINER

A capsule retainer consists of a thin, rubbery strap looped inside the teeth.

The strap is fitted with a small, smooth metal ring that can hold one alchemical capsule.

The ring can be positioned on either the inside or outside of the user's gums.

Some users find that holding the ring inside the gum and keeping the capsule under the tongue is the most comfortable way to wear a capsule retainer, while others find that holding the ring on the outside of the upper gum allows them to tuck the capsule in their cheek comfortably.

CATSTINK

A dose of this alchemical compound sprinkled on your trail temporarily confuses the scent ability of any creature.

Any creature using scent to track you must succeed on a DC 15 Survival check or lose your trail.

If the trail is lost, the creature can attempt to relocate it using the normal rules for the Track feat, but the check DC increases by 2.

The odor of catstink remains in effect for 10 minutes after the substance is used.

Sprinkling catstink on one's trail is a standard action that provokes attacks of opportunity.

DRUM

A typical drum consists of skin, parchment, or some similar material stretched tightly over the opening of a hollow wooden cylinder or pot.

This covered opening is called the drumhead.

Striking the drumhead with sticks, mallets, or even hands produces the sound.

Some drums have only one drumhead; others have two or more.

Drums exist in large varieties (such as kettle drums) as well as smaller varieties (such as bongo drums or the double-ended tabor).

Drums are popular with almost every race and culture for their ability to stir the emotions, establish a background beat for dancing, and provide counterpoint for a melody produced by some other instrument.

Dwarves, orcs, and other races that favor underground living particularly enjoy the echoing power of drums.

Smaller races, such as goblins and halflings, like bongo drums for their portability.

The rare creatures that do not appreciate drum-playing include celestials, who consider drum rhythms primitive, and elves, who find them vaguely disturbing and annoying (a prejudice reinforced, perhaps, by the enthusiasm with which many of their enemies embrace them).

Bardic Music: When a bard uses a drum to inspire courage, the morale bonus on weapon damage rolls increases by 1, but the morale bonus on saves against charm and fear is reduced by 1.

FAREYE OIL

When applied to the eyes, this clear oil sharpens the user's vision for a short time, providing a +1 alchemical bonus on Spot checks for 1 minute.

One dose of fareye oil is enough to affect the eyes of a creature of any size, but the creature must have eyes to gain any benefit from the oil.

Applying fareye oil is a standard action that provokes attacks of opportunity.

FIDDLE

An ancestor of the modern violin, the fiddle is a small, portable stringed instrument with a body shaped rather like an hourglass.

Four or five strings made of gut or sinew stretch across the body, anchored by pegs at the end of a long, thin neck.

The strings are played with a separate piece called the bow—a long, thin piece of wood strung with fine strands of animal hair.

Fiddles vary in length between 2 feet (for Medium fiddlers) and 18 inches (for halfling and kobold fiddlers).

To play a fiddle, the musician holds it horizontally, typically with the base tucked under his chin, and draws the bow back and forth across the strings.

The fiddle is popular among bards who prefer lively dance music (reels or jigs) over serene but detached "pure" music.

Though welcome almost anywhere, the fiddle is the favorite instrument of kobolds, whose clever hands mastered its fingerings ages ago. (They insist that they invented the fiddle, but other races find that claim dubious).

Kobold minstrels and halfling bards typically caper about while playing, setting their audience an example of the lively dancing their music encourages.

Musicians of other races usually sit or stand to play the instrument.

Bardic Music: When used by a bard to inspire courage, a fiddle increases the morale bonus on saves against charm and fear by 1.

In the hands of a bard with 5 or more ranks in Perform (dance), the morale bonus instead increases by 2.

A bard who uses a fiddle for bardic music can cast spells while performing, but only if those spells have no somatic, material, or focus components.

FLASH PELLET

This tiny brittle object is often disguised as a button or other decoration.

You can throw a flash pellet as a ranged attack with a range increment of 5 feet.

When thrown against a hard surface, it bursts with a bright flash of light.

All creatures within a 5-foot-radius burst must succeed on a DC 15 Fortitude save or be blinded for 1 round and dazzled for 1 round after that.

FLUTE

The flute is the highest-pitched of all the woodwinds. This broad category includes instruments ranging from the primitive recorder-flute—a simple, hollow tube that produces music when air is blown straight through it—to the traditional flute, which is held at a right angle to the musician's mouth.

Flutes range in length from 8 inches to about 2 feet.

The instrument has six holes (typically), plus a thumbhole that, when covered, lowers each of the other notes by an octave.

Flutes have a reputation for producing gentle, idyllic music, but they can also create more martial effects or distorted wailing sounds.

Abyssal flutes always have an odd number of finger holes, and they conform to no scale or key used by humanoid bards.

Particularly in the hands of demon pipers, they produce "music" that sounds to mortal ears like a disharmonious combination of sharps, flats, and bizarre, minor-key effects.

Bardic Music: A bard playing a flute gains a +2 bonus on Perform checks made to use the countersong ability.

FORGERY KIT

This small case holds a broad selection of paper types, pens, and several colors of ink.

In addition, the kit contains samples of prominent family and national crests and the like.

This kit is the perfect tool for attempting a forgery and grants a +2 circumstance bonus on Forgery checks.

A forgery kit is exhausted after ten uses.

FREEGLIDE

This greenish-gray gel can be applied to a creature's hide, hair, clothing, or armor.

The gel makes the affected surface slippery and hard to grab or hold, providing a +1 alchemical bonus on Escape Artist checks for 1 hour.

One dose of freeglide is enough to coat one Medium creature.

Applying freeglide is a standard action that provokes attacks of opportunity.

If freeglide is applied over clothing or armor, its benefits are lost if the armor or clothing is removed.

Likewise, if it is applied to a creature's skin or hide, its benefit is lost if the creature later dons clothing or armor.

GHOSTBLIGHT

A ghostblight alchemical capsule coats a melee weapon or a thrown weapon with a thick gray liquid.

This substance allows the weapon to ignore the miss chance that ordinarily applies when the wielder is in combat with incorporeal creatures (as if the weapon had the ghost touch magical property).

The capsule's effects last for 3 rounds.

HARP

A harp typically has seventeen strings but can come with as few as twelve on a smaller instrument or as many as forty-seven on a larger one.

Silver wires are the most common choice for strings, but other materials are occasionally used.

Harps are usually made of wood, though some artisans carve them from bone or ivory.

Whatever their material, most harps are highly polished and elaborately decorated with carvings.

The finest rank as works of art in their own right, quite apart from their status as instruments.

Though harps can stand up to 6 feet tall, smaller versions (sometimes called lap-harps) are much smaller—about 2 feet high—and more portable.

The harp is especially favored by elf bards for its light, soothing sound and gentle, rippling notes.

Harps are often handed down from generation to generation among the elves, and many eventually acquire names and legends of their own.

Any character with the bardic knowledge ability who examines an elven harp automatically gains a +5 bonus on his or her bardic knowledge check to identify the instrument and its bearer.

Bardic Music: A bard playing a harp can target one more creature than normal with her fascinate and inspire greatness abilities.

A bard who uses a harp for bardic music can cast spells while performing, but only if those spells have no somatic, material, or focus components.

HAWK'S OINTMENT

This thick, acidic gel temporarily sharpens the user's vision. Once its beneficial effects wear off, however, the gel burns and stings the eyes for a few minutes.

After spreading the gel over her eyes, a character gains a +1 bonus on Search and Spot checks for 2 minutes.

After that time, she takes a –2 penalty on Search and Spot checks for 10 minutes.

Characters can halve the remaining duration of the penalty by spending a round washing out their eyes with clean water.

Applying hawk's ointment or washing out one's eyes is a full-round action that provokes attacks of opportunity.

HEALER'S BALM

This smooth, sweet-smelling balm allows a healer to better soothe the effects of wounds, disease, and poison.

Healer's balm provides a +1 alchemical bonus on Heal checks made to help an affected creature.

The effects of healer's balm last for 1 minute.

One dose of healer's balm is enough to coat one Medium creature.

Applying healer's balm is a standard action that provokes attacks of opportunity.

It can be applied as part of a standard action made to administer first aid, treat a wound, or treat poison.

HORN

Originally horns were, as their name indicates, actual horns taken from bulls or more exotic beasts.

At its simplest, a horn consists of a narrow tip connected to a wider, circular orifice by a hollow, often curved shaft.

A musician plays a horn by simply blowing into the small end.

Other forms of horns exist, from the conch shell horn employed by merfolk to the herald's trumpet, but all these instruments function more or less identically.

Horns are popular in primitive societies of all kinds.

They come in all sizes; those used by Medium creatures are typically 1 to 2 feet in length.

Hobgoblins and orcs in particular enjoy these instruments for their loud, stirring, martial sound.

Larger humanoids and giants favor horns made from dire creatures.

Legend holds that minotaurs use instruments made from the severed horns of other minotaurs that suffered defeat in one-on-one contests of honor.

A horn makes an excellent signal device—particularly when used underwater, since sound travels much farther in water than in air.

Some aquatic races such as merfolk and kuo-toa collect a variety of horn-shaped shells in different sizes and play them in harmony, in sequence, or both.

The music of these seashell orchestras can achieve a deep, haunting grandeur.

Bardic Music: When a bard plays a horn to inspire courage, it raises the morale bonus on weapon damage rolls and saves against fear by 1, but the effect lasts for only 1 round after the ally stops hearing the bard perform.

IRONMAN CAPSULE

This capsule holds a thick pale liquid that allows the user to shake off pain and distraction.

Anyone using an ironman capsule while staggered can ignore the restrictions on the number of actions taken in a round because of the staggered condition (rather than being limited to one standard action).

This benefit applies only to the round in which the capsule is used, and the effect ends immediately after the user has taken his actions for the round.

For example, a staggered character with a capsule retainer can use the capsule at the beginning of his turn (a swift action) and then take a move action and a standard action. An ironman capsule does not prevent a character from losing a hit point if he is already at or below 0 hit points and does not prevent the user from dying if he reaches –10 hit points.

KEENEAR POWDER

This dry white powder sharpens a creature's hearing when applied to the ear.

The powder is effective for only a short time, so it is more often used by those trying to avoid guards or sentries than by those tasked with guarding an area for a longer time.

Keenear powder provides a +1 alchemical bonus on Listen checks for 1 minute.

One dose of keenear powder is enough to affect the hearing of a creature of any size, but the creature must have ears to gain any benefit from the powder.

Applying keenear powder is a standard action that provokes attacks of opportunity.

LEAP CAPSULE

The thick gray liquid in this capsule allows the user to make more powerful jumps for a short time.

The user gains a +4 alchemical bonus on Jump checks.

The benefit of a leap capsule lasts for only 1 round, ending immediately upon the conclusion of the user's actions for the round.

LISTENING CONE

This device is made for listening through doors and other solid surfaces.

It provides a +2 circumstance bonus on Listen checks made through a door or some other relatively thin, solid obstacle.

LOCKSLIP GREASE

Lockslip grease is a thick reddish oil that loosens the mechanical workings of nonmagical locks.

The grease is effective for a short time and provides a slight edge to those attempting to pick a lock.

Lockslip grease provides a +1 alchemical bonus on Open Lock checks made against the affected lock for 1 minute.

One dose of lockslip grease is enough to affect the mechanism of a lock of any size.

Although lockslip grease can affect any kind of mundane mechanical lock, it has no effect on magic locks.

Applying lockslip grease to a lock is a standard action that provokes attacks of opportunity.

LUTE

This ancestor of the guitar has a pear-shaped bowl and a distinctive bent neck with frets for fingering.

Between four and eight strings stretch between the base of the bowl and the top of the neck.

Lutes vary between 30 and 36 inches in length, with the bowl taking up some two-thirds of that total.

The musician either strums or plucks the strings to produce music.

A highly versatile instrument because of its wide range of notes and inflection, the lute is accessible to the beginner but capable of great subtlety in the hands of a master.

The deep bowl gives it a rich, full sound unlike that of any other stringed instrument.

It is by far the most popular instrument with bards, especially half-elf and human ones.

Bardic Music: A bard playing a lute is treated as one level higher for the purpose of adjudicating the power of his bardic music effects.

For example, a 3rd-level bard using a lute could fascinate two creatures instead of one, a 6th-level bard using a lute to make a suggestion would calculate the save DC as if he were 7th level, and a 7th-level bard using a lute to inspire courage would grant a +2 morale bonus on the appropriate rolls.

A bard who uses a lute for bardic music can cast spells while performing, but only if those spells have no somatic, material, or focus components.

LYRE

A simpler ancestor of the lap-harp, a lyre typically has a body made out of a turtle shell, plus two curved arms and a crossbar to hold its four to six (or, more rarely, eight) gut or sinew strings taut.

To play a lyre, the musician holds it in one hand while strumming or plucking the strings with the other.

The very simplicity of a lyre is its charm, since even a novice can strum one to credible effect.

Because of this accessibility and the fact that they're easy to make, lyres are popular among the sylvan fey (especially satyrs) and country folk in general.

On occasion, however, a true master adopts it as a signature instrument, producing astonishing effects.

Bardic Music: A bard playing a lyre can target one more creature than normal with her fascinate ability and inspire heroics abilities.

A bard who uses a lyre for bardic music can cast spells while performing, but only if those spells have no somatic, material, or focus components.

MANDOLIN

Essentially a smaller version of the lute, a mandolin is usually between 20 inches and 2 feet long.

It has a straighter neck than the lute—the end at which the pegs secure the strings tilts back only slightly, if at all.

The mandolin is unusual for the number of strings it holds—from four to six pairs (eight to twelve strings total) or even more.

A mandolin is typically played with a pick, both to protect the musician's fingers and because the strings are too close together to pluck accurately by hand.

The mandolin has a sweeter sound than the lute and, because of its shorter strings, a higher pitch as well.

Its great range of tone and expression have made it a favorite of gnomes and halflings, who champion it as superior even to the lute.

Bardic Music: When a bard uses a mandolin to inspire courage, the morale bonus on attack rolls increases by 1, but the morale bonus on weapon damage rolls and on saves against charm and fear is reduced by 1.

A bard who uses a mandolin for bardic music can cast spells while performing, but only if those spells have no somatic, material, or focus components.

NATURE'S DRAUGHT

This substance is a murky, pungent liquid.

When consumed, nature's draught causes subtle changes in the user's scent.

Animals respond well to a character who has consumed nature's draught, finding her less threatening and easier to trust.

Drinking a vial of nature's draught provides a +1 alchemical bonus on Handle Animal and wild empathy checks made during the next 12 hours.

PAN PIPES

In essence, a set of pan pipes is a series of hollow reeds or wooden tubes of varying lengths bound together in a row, from smallest to largest.

To play them, the musician blows across the tops of the tubes, producing a sound much like that of several tiny wooden flutes.

By moving the pipes from side to side, the piper can play different notes.

Switching rapidly among notes creates the sweet, rippling effect for which the instrument is known.

Simple yet evocative, pan pipes are favorites of satyrs and other sylvan fey.

Humans and some elves also find their music pleasing.

Bardic Music: A bard using pan pipes gains a +1 bonus on Perform checks made to fascinate creatures, and also adds 1 to the save DC against the bard's suggestion bardic music ability.

QUICKFLAME

A quickflame alchemical capsule coats a melee weapon or a thrown weapon with a thin sheet of oil that instantly bursts into flame.

This substance allows the weapon to deal extra fire damage for a short amount of time without damaging the weapon or its wielder.

A weapon treated with quickflame deals 1d6 points of fire damage with each successful strike.

The capsule's effects last for 1 round, ending at the beginning of the wielder's next turn.

This fire damage doesn't stack with any other fire damage the weapon deals.

QUICKFROST

A quickfrost alchemical capsule coats a melee weapon or a thrown weapon with a thin sheet of oil that instantly cools to a dangerously low temperature.

This substance allows the weapon to deal extra cold damage for a short amount of time without damaging the weapon or its wielder.

A weapon treated with quickfrost deals 1d6 points of cold damage with each successful strike.

The capsule's effects last for 1 round, ending at the beginning of the wielder's next turn.

This cold damage doesn't stack with any other cold damage the weapon deals.

QUICKSILVER

A quicksilver alchemical capsule coats a melee weapon or a thrown weapon with a thick silvery liquid.

This substance allows the weapon to deal damage as if it were coated with silver (including the normal -1 penalty on damage rolls for silvered weapons).

The capsule's effects last for 3 rounds and override any other special material effects of the weapon.

QUICKSPARK

A quickspark alchemical capsule coats a melee weapon or a thrown weapon with a thin sheet of liquid that crackles and sparks with dangerous electrical energy.

This substance allows the weapon to deal extra electricity damage for a short amount of time without damaging the weapon or its wielder.

A weapon treated with quickspark deals 1d6 points of electricity damage with each successful strike.

The capsule's effects last for 1 round, ending at the beginning of the wielder's next turn.

This electricity damage doesn't stack with any other electricity damage the weapon deals.

SADDLE, MASTERWORK

This well-made piece of gear, which can be either a riding saddle or a military saddle, is more comfortable and more responsive than a normal saddle.

Because of its excellent craftsmanship, a masterwork saddle grants a +1 circumstance bonus on Ride checks.

If a masterwork saddle is also a military saddle, this bonus stacks with the +2 circumstance bonus that a military saddle provides to Ride checks relating to staying in the saddle (see Player's Handbook, page 132).

Each masterwork saddle is tailored for a specific kind of creature.

As such, it fits best on that kind of creature and thus provides its bonus only when used with that kind of creature.

For example, a masterwork saddle made for heavy warhorses would provide its bonus if used on any heavy warhorse, but would not provide a bonus if used on a dragon (assuming the saddle was of an appropriate size for the dragon).

SOFTFOOT

Softfoot is a fine gray powder that muffles sound when applied to the bottom of a foot or boot.

It provides a +1 alchemical bonus on Move Silently checks for 1 hour.

One dose of softfoot is enough to affect one Medium creature that has one pair of feet; each additional pair of feet (or similar appendages) requires another dose.

Applying softfoot is a standard action that provokes attacks of opportunity.

If softfoot is applied over a boot or other foot covering, its benefit is lost if the foot covering is removed.

Likewise, if it is applied to a creature's skin or hide, its benefit is lost if the creature later dons footwear.

STABILITY CAPSULE

The thick blue liquid in this capsule heightens the user's sense of balance for a short time.

While the capsule is in effect, the user gains a +4 alchemical bonus on Balance checks.

The benefits of a stability capsule last for only 1 round, ending immediately upon the conclusion of the user's actions for the round.

STRONGARM CAPSULE

This small capsule holds a dose of a thin red liquid.

When swallowed, the liquid provides a temporary boost of physical power at the cost of leaving the user fatigued.

When used, a strongarm capsule provides the user with a +1 alchemical bonus on Strength checks and melee weapon damage.

This benefit lasts for 2 rounds, at the end of which time the user becomes fatigued.

If a character who uses a strongarm capsule is already fatigued when the benefit of the capsule ends, she becomes exhausted.

SUREGRIP

This thick white paste, when applied to hands and feet, strengthens and steadies the user's grip, making it easier for the character to climb.

Suregrip provides a +1 alchemical bonus on Climb checks for 1 minute.

One dose of suregrip is enough to cover the hands and feet of one Medium creature.

Applying suregrip is a standard action that provokes attacks of opportunity.

SWIFTSTRIDE CAPSULE

This small capsule holds a dose of a thin blue liquid.

When swallowed, the liquid quickens the imbiber's stride for a short time, providing a temporary boost of speed at the cost of leaving the user fatigued.

A swiftstride capsule increases the user's base land speed by 5 feet.

This benefit lasts for 2 rounds, at the end of which time the user becomes fatigued.

If a character who uses a swiftstride capsule is already fatigued when the benefit of the capsule ends, he becomes exhausted.

THIEVES' TOOLS, LONGSPOON

These specially modified thieves' tools are mounted on long, thin handles, enabling the user to manipulate latches, tinker with locks, and probe traps from a position up to 5 feet away and well off to the side of the target device.

A 1-inch-diameter mirror mounted on a long handle gives the user a good view of the object being manipulated.

Though some traps can inflict harm even at a distance, these tools make it possible for a wary rogue to avoid many common hazards, such as poison needles, spurting acid, and the like.

Using these tools is more time-consuming and less accurate than taking a direct approach; longspoon tools add 2 rounds to the time required to make a Disable Device or Open Lock check and impose a -2 penalty on any Disable Device or Open Lock check for which they are used.

Longspoon thieves' tools are available in normal or masterwork versions.

The masterwork version provides a +2 bonus on Disable Device and Open Lock checks, but the time required to make a check is not reduced.

WEAPON CAPSULE RETAINER

The most common method of delivering the effect of an alchemical weapon capsule is the weapon capsule retainer. This long leather thong, wrapped around a melee weapon or a thrown weapon (but not a projectile weapon) just at the base of the blade or striking surface, holds a thin, fitted ring sized for a single alchemical capsule.

A more expensive option is the triple weapon capsule retainer, which stores three capsules rather than one.

A character wielding a weapon with a triple retainer can use one, two, or all three capsules it holds as part of the same action.

Only one weapon capsule retainer (or triple retainer) can be attached to any weapon.

Attaching a weapon capsule retainer to a weapon or putting a capsule into an empty weapon capsule retainer is a full-round action that provokes attacks of opportunity.

Thus, filling an empty triple weapon capsule retainer requires three full-round actions.

An alchemical weapon capsule retainer can be filled with a single dose of an injury poison.

Activating the capsule coats the weapon with the poison, allowing the wielder to deliver toxic strikes with the weapon.

A character using poison in this way faces all the normal perils of using poison (including accidental exposure when activating the capsule or with a natural 1 on the attack roll).

COMPLETE CHAMPION (3.5)

BARBS OF HEXTOR

The shape of this dark-colored, metallic talisman is that of a mailed fist grasping barbed arrows.

When used to cast Evil domain spells or spells that have the evil descriptor, this symbol increases your effective caster level by 1.

BLOOD-FACE OF ERYTHNUL

This rust-colored talisman depicts a face cackling with evil laughter.

Swaths of blood-red highlight the open, grinning mouth and the brow ridge, giving the face a wild, almost demonic look.

When used as a focus for illusion spells or spells with the chaotic designator, a blood-face of Erythnul increases the save DC by 1.

BOLT OF HEIRONEOUS

Cast in the shape of a hand grasping a lightning bolt, this holy symbol is usually made of silver, gold, or a combination of both.

When used to cast Good domain spells or spells that have the good descriptor, this symbol increases your effective caster level by 1.

DEVASTATION OF NERULL

This symbol is either carved from bone or made from the skeleton of a Diminutive creature, and it always appears to be decaying.

Worshippers of Nerull typically either grow lichen on it, or whet it with a small amount of acid.

As a result, it usually carries a mildly unpleasant odor.

When used to cast a spell from the necromancy school or the Death domain, or when brandished to rebuke or command (not turn or destroy) unintelligent undead, this symbol increases your effective caster level by 1.

EHLONNA'S BROOCH

Worn by worshipers of the goddess of the woodlands, this emerald carving of a unicorn rampant sometimes seems to blend into the wearer's garb.

When grasped and used as a focus for a spell, it exudes a faint green glow.

When Ehlonna's brooch is used as a focus for a summon animal or summon monster spell, each creature summoned gains +1 hit point per Hit Die.

FHARLANGHN'S BADGE

This symbol is almost always made to look like a worn, weathered piece of wood bearing a crude carving of a sunset.

In actuality, a Fharlanghn's badge is almost always made from materials that have traveled a long way, such as driftwood, or the planks of a settler's wagon.

When brandished during the casting of any spell that increases a creature's speed (or even one that imparts a new mode of movement, such as fly), Fharlanghn's badge increases the target's speed by an additional 5 feet.

This item has no effect on spells that magically transport a character from one place to another (such as teleport or dimension door).

MIRROR OF OLIDAMMARA

This symbol looks like a plain silver hand mirror, but anyone who looks into the glass sees a theatrical mask with half the face dark and smiling and the other half white and scowling.

This image is not magical in nature—the glass is not a mirror, and the mask is simply embedded in the backing. When held forth during the casting of Luck domain spells or spells that have the chaotic descriptor, the mirror of Olidammara increases your effective caster level by 1.

MORADIN'S FORGE

Usually made of a heavy metal (lead, adamantine, or even gold) and painted flat black, this talisman comes in two parts—a model hammer and a tiny anvil.

Most crafters attach the two parts with a thin but strong and flexible wire, so that the hammer can be struck against the anvil during casting.

Doing so isn't strictly necessary, but many worshipers of the Soul Forger feel the action is appropriate.

When used to cast Earth domain spells or spells that have the earth descriptor, Moradin's forge increases the save DC by 1.

In addition, it increases your effective caster level by 1 when used to turn or rebuke air creatures (as the Earth domain granted power).

NATURE'S CHILDREN

This wood or stone carving depicts from three to more than a dozen local animals, depending on the fecundity of the region and the intricacy of the carving.

Sometimes when you look at it, you catch a glimpse of movement out of the corner of your eye, though further inspection always shows the animals right where they were before.

When used to cast spells from the Animal domain list or spells that aid, protect, speak with, or summon animals, this symbol increases your effective caster level by 1.

NATURE'S SICKLE

This symbol resembles a small stone sickle cutting four stalks of wheat.

The wheat looks fresh and real, even though it is carved of stone.

When the symbol is in use, the wheat actually smells like grain and seems to shine in the sun.

When used to cast any spell from the Earth, Plant, or Sun domain, a nature's sickle increases your effective caster level by 1.

NUGGET OF GARL GLITTERGOLD

This small symbol looks like a chunk of unrefined gold ore—because it is.

Blessed by gnome priests, it is even more precious than its materials suggest.

When used to cast Trickery domain or illusion spells, a nugget of Garl Glittergold increases your effective caster level by 1.

OBAD-HAI'S GREEN MAN

Always made from living wood and green leaves, this symbol remains fresh as long as you remain alive and pay homage to the nature god.

Only upon close inspection can nonworshipers see the face hidden amid the leaves.

When used to cast spells from the Animal or Plant domain, Obad-Hai's green man increases your caster level by 2.

In addition, you gain a +1 bonus on turn or rebuke checks made against plant creatures while brandishing it.

RUBY SKULL OF WEE JAS

This stylized symbol carved from ruby resembles a skull stretched and twisted by magic.

Its empty eye sockets stare unceasingly at the viewer.

When used as a focus for Death domain or necromancy spells, a ruby skull of Wee Jas increases your effective caster level by 1.

In addition, when used to rebuke or command (not turn or destroy) undead, it grants a +1 bonus on your turning damage rolls.

SILVER BADGE OF LARETHIAN

This moon-silver symbol is always silver in color and often decorated with etched or embossed images of leaves, berries, and nuts.

Worshipers of the Protector keep these items highly polished so that they shine brightly in moonlight.

When displayed while casting Protection domain or abjuration spells, a silver badge of Larethian increases your effective caster level by 1.

STONE SOCKET OF GRUUMSH

Orcs and other worshipers of Gruumsh sometimes carve these holy symbols out of stone, making them look like empty eye sockets.

During the consecration rituals, they pour blood (usually taken from the eyes of their sacrificial victims) into the hole to stain the stone permanently.

When used to cast War domain spells or spells that have the evil descriptor, a stone socket of Gruumsh grants a bonus equal to +1 per damage die on damage rolls made for the spells.

However, this bonus cannot increase a spell's damage beyond its normal limit.

So if used with spiritual weapon, which normally deals damage equal to 1d8 points +1 point/three caster levels, the stone socket of Gruumsh grants a +1 bonus on the damage roll.

However, that bonus cannot bring the damage above 8 points for a 1st-level caster, or above 13 points (1d8+5 maximum) for a 15th-level caster.

SUN DISK OF PELOR

Worshipers of Pelor believe they can feel the sun's warmth through their golden, sun-shaped talismans.

One surface of each sun disk of Pelor is emblazoned with a stern but somehow comforting face, and the holy disks do shine in both sun and torchlight.

When used to cast Sun domain or conjuration (healing) spells, a sun disk of Pelor grants a +1 bonus on healing (or damage) rolls made for the spells.

However, this bonus cannot increase a spell's healing or damage beyond its normal limit.

So if used with cure moderate wounds, which normally heals damage equal to 2d8 points +1 point/caster level, a sun disk of Pelor grants a +1 bonus on the roll.

However, that bonus cannot bring the healing above 19 points (2d8+3 maximum) for a 3rd-level caster, or above 21 points (2d8+5 maximum) for a 5th-level caster.

TALISMAN OF BOCCOB

Usually worn on the chest, this pale yellow symbol depicts a stylized eye that appears to glow with an inner light.

You must touch it with at least one hand to gain its benefit. When used to cast Knowledge domain or divination spells, a talisman of Boccob grants you a +1 bonus on caster level checks and on any follow-up Spellcraft checks necessary to complete the spell (such as those required for detect magic).

VANGUARD OF KORD

This small, round, convex disk is decorated like a tribal war shield, with black weapons crossed on a blood-red background.

The disk almost always shows signs of wear and hard use.

When used to cast Luck domain or transmutation spells, a vanguard of Kord increases your effective caster level by 1.

VECNA'S HAND AND EYE

The typical worshiper of Vecna keeps her holy symbol hidden until it is time to cast spells.

The talisman of the God of Secrets looks like a dark hand grasping a large, bloodshot eye.

Alternatively, sometimes the hand's fingers are outstretched, and the eye is embedded in the palm.

Either way, the disquieting symbol represents both the deity and the artifacts that bear his name.

When used to cast any spell from the Knowledge or Magic domain, Vecna's hand and eye increases your effective caster level and the save DCs by 1.

WAR CROSS OF ST. CUTHBERT

This symbol appears to be a wheel with four equal-length spokes and a gemstone at the hub.

To brandish it, you must grasp the symbol by its center, holding the gemstone out.

When used to cast any mind-affecting spell or to turn (not rebuke) undead, a war cross of St. Cuthbert increases your effective divine caster level by 1.

YONDALLA'S CORNUCOPIA

Sometimes this symbol depicts a cornucopia emblazoned on a green background, but more often than not, it is an actual miniature cornucopia filled with carved wooden fruit.

When used to cast Law domain spells, spells that have the good descriptor, or spells that create food or water (such as create food and water or heroes' feast), a cornucopia of Yondalla increases your effective caster level by 1.

COMPLETE MAGE (3.5)

TABLE 5-5: ALCHEMICAL ITEMS

Item	Weight	Cost	Craft (alchemy)
Auran mask	*	60 gp	25
Crackle powder	*	30 gp	20
Fast torch	1/2 lb.	5 gp	20
Screaming flask	1 lb.	40 gp	25
Weeping flask	*†	50 gp	15

* Item has no weight worth noting.

† A weeping flask has no weight worth noting when empty. It weighs 4 pounds when filled with water.

AURAN MASK

This mask fits over the character's nose and mouth.

The bulk of the item is a cloth packet holding a porous, spongelike substance.

It requires a move action to put on or remove, and once a single breath is taken through the mask, its benefits last for only 1 hour (or less if taken underwater).

A creature wearing an auran mask receives a +5 circumstance bonus on Fortitude saves against inhaled toxins.

In addition, the wearer can breathe underwater as if under the effect of a water breathing spell, though immersing the auran mask in water reduces its remaining duration to 10 minutes (or less, if less than 10 minutes remain).

CRACKLE POWDER

This alchemical powder creates a loud crackling noise, like a broomstick breaking, whenever it is jostled or struck.

A single packet covers a 5-foot-radius area; applying the powder requires a full-round action.

Once in place, the powder remains active for 1 hour and imposes a –10 penalty on Move Silently checks made when traversing the area.

FAST TORCH

This item consists of a tube of waxed paper set into a short wooden handle.

The end opposite the handle has a wax seal, and the whole item is about the size of a normal torch.

An alchemical substance packed inside the tube ignites when exposed to air.

Lighting the torch is as simple as removing the wax seal, which requires a swift action.

The lit torch produces a brilliant white light that produces bright illumination in a 30-foot radius and shadowy illumination 30 feet beyond that.

A fast torch burns for 10 minutes, even in high winds or underwater (though it can't be ignited underwater).

It's possible to extinguish a fast torch by burying it in sand (or a similar substance) or by grinding it out against a nonflammable surface.

Either method requires a full-round action; once extinguished, it can't be relit.

SCREAMING FLASK

This container is made from thick leather with a cap sewn on tight and fitted with a ripcord.

Pulling the cord rips open the flask and activates the alchemical substance within.

The flask emits a high-pitched shriek in a 15-foot cone.

Anything in the cone takes 1d8 points of sonic damage and is deafened for 1 minute (Fortitude DC 15 negates).

WEEPING FLASK

This item looks like an empty half-gallon waterskin with an airtight seal.

When it is opened and exposed to air, an alchemical substance within the flask slowly produces drinkable water.

The flask produces water at a rate of 8 ounces per hour (becoming completely full after 8 hours).

The water can be poured out as it appears or simply kept in the container.

BLASPHEMIX

Said to be refined from the spilled ichor of a demon, devil, or other fiend, blasphemix corrupts not only the body but also the soul.

Perpetually warm, greasy, and possessed of a vile blackness that seems to writhe of its own accord, blasphemix is further profaned by prayers and chants to dark, ancient, and wholly evil powers.

This liquid foulness impedes the power of faith and hinders even the most devout cleric's access to his deity.

Despite its origin, this poison affects creatures of all alignments and faiths.

If the subject of this poison fails the initial saving throw, its ability to cast divine spells is hindered.

For the next 10 rounds, the subject must succeed on a caster level check (DC 15 + spell level) each time it attempts to cast a divine spell.

Failure means the spell is lost and has no effect.

Regardless of the outcome of the initial save, failing the secondary save applies a –1 penalty to the victim's caster level for all divine spells it casts for the next 12 hours.

If a creature is subjected to another dose of blasphemix before the effect of the first dose has run its course, the duration of the first dose's effect ends.

In addition to a Craft (poisonmaking) check, creating a dose of blasphemix requires a successful DC 15 Knowledge (religion) check.

CLEARWATER TABLETS

These small black pellets smell strongly of tar.

Dropping a clearwater tablet into a gallon of water cleans the water of disease, poison, and other befouling toxins.

Water so treated has a vaguely tarry smell and leaves a slimy black deposit on a surface it touches but is safe to drink.

Magic liquids (such as potions, oils, and magic poisons) are immune to the effect of clearwater tablets.

Liquids based on oil or alcohol are also not affected.

DAYSTRIDER CAPSULE

This bright blue gelatinous ovoid, when swallowed, allows a humanoid creature to walk for 10 hours in a day (instead of the normal 8 hours) before making a Constitution check to resist damage and fatigue.

Walking longer than that entails making a forced march as normal (PH 164).

Consuming a second daystrider capsule before 24 hours have passed has no further effect.

ELEMENTAL RIME

This frosty blue liquid is concocted from ice found in frozen regions of the Elemental Plane of Air or Water. No amount of heat can totally dispel the coldness that emanates from elemental rime, which partially freezes those exposed to it.

If the subject of the poison fails the initial saving throw, in addition to taking 1d4 points of initial and secondary Dexterity damage, it gains vulnerability to fire for 10 rounds.

In addition to a Craft (poisonmaking) check, creating a dose of elemental rime requires a successful DC 15 Knowledge (the planes) check.

ENDURANCE ELIXIR

Imbibing this chalky-tasting green liquid instantly acclimates a creature to its surroundings.

For the next 12 hours, the drinker gains a +4 alchemical bonus on all ability checks, skill checks, and saving throws made to resist natural environmental extremes, such as hot or cold weather (DMG 302).

FALSE BOTTOM

The classic hiding spot, a false bottom can be added to any container with a hard base, from a desk drawer to a chest to a barrel.

A false bottom slightly reduces the amount of storage space the object otherwise would have.

Gaining access to a false bottom typically requires emptying the container of the rest of its contents and locating and triggering a small latch that loosens the false bottom and allows it to be opened.

The maximum size of a false bottom is two sizes smaller than the container it is built into.

Price: 50 gp.

FALSE HOLD

Ships of all sizes and kinds frequently contain false holds. Even vessels that conduct otherwise lawful and legitimate business might contain hidden spaces.

The maximum size of a false hold in a ship is two sizes smaller than the ship itself.

Most ships are Colossal, so they can have false holds of up to Huge size.

A vessel without a hold (such as a rowboat) can have a hidden space added, but its maximum size is three sizes smaller than the vessel itself.

Price: 400 gp.

FALSE SCABBARD TIP

A scabbard can be fitted with a hollow space at its end that extends a few inches beyond the tip of the blade it holds. Access to a false scabbard tip typically requires depressing a button or a latch to unhook the tip from the sheath.

A quick-release mechanism, allowing access to the hidden space with only a move action, can be added to any false scabbard tip for an extra 100 gp.

A scabbard is typically the same size object as the weapon it holds, and a false scabbard tip has a capacity two size categories smaller than that.

A dagger's scabbard, for example, could have a false tip of Fine size, while a greatsword's scabbard could be large enough to hold a Tiny object (such as a dagger).

Price: 10 gp.

FERROUS AQUA

A pellet of ferrous aqua is a half-inch-diameter sphere of glass containing a rusty red liquid with small black flakes floating in suspension.

A ferrous aqua pellet can be thrown as a ranged touch attack with a range increment of 5 feet.

Alternatively, it can be loaded into a sling and used as a sling bullet.

When it strikes a firm surface, the pellet bursts and sprays out the suspension within.

Any creature with damage reduction that is overcome by cold iron takes 1d6 points of damage and is sickened for 1 round if struck by a ferrous aqua pellet (a successful DC 12 Fortitude save negates the sickened condition, but not the damage).

Other creatures take no damage from a ferrous aqua pellet.

FORGER'S PAPER

This normal-looking sheet of paper is infused with an alchemical substance that makes the sheet nearly transparent for 1 hour when exposed to heat.

The now-clear sheet can be overlaid on a document to be copied, granting a +2 alchemical bonus on Forgery checks made while using it.

Once the alchemical substance within it loses potency, the page becomes indistinguishable from a normal piece of paper (and can't be activated again by any means).

GOODBYE KISS

A sweetly flavored tincture distilled from many of the same fungi and roots used in making the drow's infamous sleeping poison, this venom is a standby of poisoners who don't want to harm their victims.

Goodbye kiss is a favorite of lotharios, swindlers, and others who want to avoid being followed.

It can either be added to food (ingested) or used to coat a small needle (injury); the save DC is the same regardless of the method of application.

A subject who fails either the initial or the secondary save becomes exhausted for 1 hour.

Failing both saves renders the subject unconscious for 1 hour instead.

GORGON'S HAIR

This versatile contact poison is named for a clever murderer who would coat her long hair in this concoction before seducing her victims.

Clear and a little greasy, this toxin makes surfaces it is applied to look slightly wet, shiny, or cosmetically accented.

It is unusual in that it does not affect those who already have it in their system.

Thus, many who use gorgon's hair ingest a dose—a mildly unpleasant act—before coating themselves with the poison.

Those who fear being attacked by gorgon's hair might also protect themselves by consuming the poison.

Typically, a would-be poisoner mixes a dose of gorgon's hair with a liquid and drinks the concoction.

After ingesting the toxin, that creature is immune to its effect for 24 hours.

An immune creature can safely apply a dose of gorgon's hair to a hand or appendage to envenom an unarmed strike or natural attack.

Only the first successful attack is affected; all attacks made afterward, even in the same round, do not deliver the poison.

HIDDEN FLAP

Packs, sacks, bags, and satchels can contain cleverly concealed inner flaps or pockets.

The maximum size of the space contained beneath a hidden flap is two sizes smaller than the container it is built into.

Price: 1 gp.

HOLLOW BOOK

Another classic hidden space design, a hollow book has the covers and spine of a normal tome and blends in with other books on a shelf.

Its pages, however, are glued together and their middles cut out (usually leaving a half-inch border of paper) to form a space.

Unlike with most other hidden spaces, the maximum size of the space contained inside a hollow book is one size smaller than the book it is built into, since so much of the book's volume can be used.

Price: 5 gp.

HOLLOW BOOT HEEL

A hollow boot heel unscrews from a boot like a jar lid to reveal the hidden space inside.

The maximum size of the space contained within a hollow boot heel is four sizes smaller than the container it is built into.

For example, boots made for a human (size Medium) can have hollow boot heels no larger than Fine size.

An exception is that boots made for Small creatures can also have Fine-sized hollow heels.

Price: 20 gp.

INSIDE POCKET

This hidden space is simply an extra pocket sewn into the inner lining of a coat, tunic, robe, or pair of trousers.

An inside pocket generally only holds a few sheets of paper, parchment, or similar items, but some are made to hold a potion or a dagger.

A single piece of clothing can have up to two inside pockets.

A character with ranks in Sleight of Hand can substitute her Sleight of Hand check result for the normal Search DC when concealing objects in an inside pocket.

She gains a +5 circumstance bonus on such checks.

The maximum size of the space contained within an inside pocket is two sizes smaller than the article of clothing it is built into.

For example, a robe made for a human (size Medium) can have an inside pocket no larger than Tiny.

Price: 1 gp.

LEAD LINING

In order to thwart the detection of a magic item it contains, a hidden space can be lined with a thin sheet of lead.

Hard-sided objects can have thin lead sheets built into their walls, bottoms, and lids.

Soft-sided objects, such as clothing, have threads of lead sewn into them.

Either way, lead lining must be included with a hidden space when it is created, and cannot be added to an item later.

Lead lining adds about 10% to the weight of an object in which it is incorporated.

Price: 10 gp.

LIQUID SUNLIGHT

Shining with the light of a torch, a pellet of liquid sunlight is a half-inch-diameter sphere of glass that contains a gold-colored liquid.

The pellet can be thrown as a ranged attack with a range increment of 5 feet.

Alternatively, it can be loaded into a sling and used as a sling bullet.

When it strikes a firm surface, it bursts and sprays out the liquid within.

The liquid continues to glow with the light of a torch for 1 round after exposure to the air.

Creatures with light sensitivity are dazzled for 1 round if struck by a liquid sunlight pellet.

The pellet deals 1d6 points of damage to a vampire, vampire spawn, or any other creature similarly harmed by daylight.

NERV

This is the street name for a substance also known as liquid courage, a gold-colored syrup in a clear glass bottle painted with interweaving blue and red swirls.

Drinking a dose of nerv grants the drinker a +2 alchemical bonus on saves against fear effects for 1 hour.

POWDERED SILVER

This fine silvery dust sparkles when held in the light and is contained in a half-inch-diameter glass sphere.

A powdered silver pellet can be thrown as a ranged touch attack with a range increment of 5 feet.

Alternatively, it can be loaded into a sling and used as a sling bullet.

When it strikes a firm surface, the pellet bursts and sprays out the powder within.

Any creature with damage reduction that is overcome by silvered weapons takes 1d6 points of damage and is sickened for 1 round if hit by a powdered silver pellet (a DC 12 Fortitude save negates the sickened condition, but not the damage).

Other creatures take no damage from a powdered silver pellet.

RUST CUBE

Made of rusty iron, rust cubes are sometimes disguised as dice.

A rust cube can be thrown as a ranged attack with a range increment of 5 feet.

Alternatively, it can be loaded into a sling and used as a sling stone.

When it strikes a hard surface, the cube shatters into a fine powder of rusted iron.

An object or creature made of metal that is hit by the rust cube immediately takes 1d6 points of damage (ignoring hardness), plus an additional 1d6 points of damage each round for the next 2 rounds.

A creature can wipe the dust off with a move action.

SALVO

The fortuitous creation of a poisoner with little skill, salvo is a weapon of the imprecise and desperate.

The poison is relatively cheap and easy to create, but its effect fluctuates wildly from dose to dose.

Salvo deals 1d4 points of initial and secondary damage to a random ability score.

Determine the affected ability by rolling 1d6 and consulting the following table; roll once per dose.

The poison's type and save DC do not vary.

d6	Ability Damaged
1	Strength
2	Dexterity
3	Constitution
4	Intelligence
5	Wisdom
6	Charisma

SIREN'S BREATH

This bitter-smelling gas causes the subject to become highly susceptible to persuasion.

Failing either the initial or secondary saving throw imposes a -5 penalty on Sense Motive checks and on Will saves against enchantment spells and effects for 10 rounds.

If a creature is subjected to another dose of siren's breath before the effect of the first dose has run its course, the duration of the first dose's effect ends.

SLOW DEATH

An insidiously persistent toxin distilled in part from a dwarven mining acid, slow death eats away at its victims from within.

Unlike most poisons, which deal damage in two stages, slow death works constantly over the course of several rounds.

A subject of this poison who fails the initial Fortitude save takes 1d6 points of damage.

Each round thereafter, at the beginning of the poisoner's turn (up to a maximum of 5 rounds), the subject must repeat the saving throw.

For each failure, it takes another 1d6 points of damage.

Once a save succeeds, the subject takes no further damage.

TOXIC TOOTH

Since the invention of alchemical capsules (Complete Adventurer 119), researchers have continued to develop ever smaller delivery devices.

The current peak of achievement comes in the form of the toxic tooth.

Made to look identical to its wearer's actual teeth (including the addition of plaque, random filth, and gaping cavities if necessary), a toxic tooth can hold a single dose of a contact or inhaled poison.

To activate a toxic tooth, the wearer must bite down hard enough to crack it, then spit or exhale the poison at an adjacent creature.

Doing so requires a standard action to make a ranged touch attack, but does not provoke attacks of opportunity. If the attack hits, the target is exposed to the poison and must save normally. Activating a toxic tooth also exposes its wearer to the poison.

TRAIL BAR

This tough, 4-inch-long bar of vegetable matter provides the equivalent of one day's worth of food. A creature that has consumed a bar (which takes about 10 minutes) receives all the nutritional and stomach-filling value of a full day's food—if none of the flavor. However, consuming a second trail bar before 24 hours have passed sickens the creature for 1 hour. Rangers and bounty hunters carry trail bars only if going into the wilds for long periods of time, and even then only reluctantly.

ALTAR CASE

An altar case is a narrow box that opens to form a traveling altar.

The box has room for small holy implements and vessels, a small altar cloth, and a compact prayer book (included in the price).

Altar cases are commonly made from spruce or granite.

ALTAR CLOTH

Standard white altar cloths are 6 feet wide, 14 feet long, and made of linen, velvet, silk, or gold brocade.

For an extra cost, they can be dyed red, blue, yellow, green, brown, or black.

A small altar cloth is 2 feet square and is suitable for use on an altar case.

ASPERGILLUM

This lightweight metal device looks like a small club or a light mace.

ZEALOT'S BLADE

This venom incorporates the blood of its intended target, making it even deadlier to such creatures.

A tool of hunters and assassins who stalk specific targets, each dose of zealot's blade is brewed for a specific type or subtype of creatures.

When creating zealot's blade, the poisonmaker must choose a type (and subtype, if applicable) from Table 3-14: Ranger Favored Enemies on page 47 of the Player's Handbook.

Any creature not of the chosen type or subtype gains a +5 bonus on saves to resist the poison's effect.

DEFENDERS OF THE FAITH (3.0)

Each contains a reservoir that can hold up to 3 pints (three flasks) of holy water.

By shaking the aspergillum as a standard action, you can sprinkle one flask of holy water on a target within melee reach.

This action is a ranged touch attack (which does not provoke an attack of opportunity).

An aspergillum does not require any proficiency to use. Many adventurers prefer using an aspergillum to dispense holy water rather than throwing or pouring out the contents of a flask.

BRAZIER

A brazier is a metal pan used to hold burning coals, providing heat and light and consuming incense and other items as sacrifice.

This item is a convenient way to burn incense that is the material component for a spell.

A large brazier (gold, silver, or bronze) is 6 feet in diameter and very ornately carved, suitable for use in a large temple.

A medium brazier (gold, silver, or bronze) is 4 feet in diameter, often somewhat less ornate, and suitable for a chapel or shrine.

A field brazier (silver or bronze) is 18 inches in diameter and very plain, but can be easily carried and used in prayers and religious ceremonies on the road.

(A brazier of commanding fire elementals is a bronze field brazier).

CANDELABRA

Candelabras are designed to hold eight or sixteen candles in an aesthetically pleasing arrangement.

Eight candles in a candelabra illuminate a 15-foot radius, while sixteen candles illuminate a 20-foot radius.

CANDLE

Temple candles are ecclesiastical candles (as opposed to the small, plain, tallow candles listed as adventuring gear in the Player's Handbook).

They are made of wax and are 1 to 6 feet long, averaging consistently about 3 inches in diameter.

Temple candles burn for 2 hours per inch of length, which can aid in measuring the passage of time underground.

A timekeeping candle is a 12-hour candle (6 inches long) inscribed to indicate the passage of hours.

A vigil candle, made of wax mingled with aromatic herbs, burns for 8 hours.

A character with the Heal skill who burns a vigil candle through the night when tending an injured person gives a +1 circumstance bonus on Heal checks.

CANDLESTICK

Common candlesticks are about 1 foot tall and can accommodate candles from 1 to 3 inches in diameter.

A hand-held candlestick is 4 inches tall and includes a small guard to keep wax from dripping onto the hand that holds it.

CENSER

A censer is an elaborate box designed to hold burning incense.

It swings from a chain in order to disperse the smoke from the incense more widely.

HOLY SYMBOL

The Player's Handbook gives prices for wood and silver holy symbols.

Characters may also purchase symbols made from gold or bronze.

INCENSE

A common spell component, incense is found in most spell component pouches.

For temple use, prices for a pound of common incense or an ounce of exotic incense are given on Table 1–6.

PRAYER BOOK OR SCRIPTURE

Many religions have holy texts or formalized prayers and rituals for use by clerics and believers.

These books are about the same size and weight as spellbooks, but smaller versions are typically used by clerics who travel, whether they are adventuring across the land or visiting the sick down the street.

A compact prayer book or scripture is not a complete text, but fits inside an altar case.

SNUFFING BELL

A snuffing bell is a 4-foot-long rod with two attachments: a wick holder to carry a flame for lighting candles, and a cup for extinguishing burning candles.

A snuffing bell can be used for lighting oil or other flammables.

DRACONOMICON (3.5)

BLOOD ELIXIR

A blood elixir is a concoction brewed from the concentrated blood of a true dragon.

A blood elixir grants the drinker a +2 enhancement bonus to Strength (if brewed from a chromatic dragon) or Charisma (if brewed from a metallic dragon), as well as an additional effect as noted on the table below, based on the dragon's variety.

You can consume a blood elixir as a full-round action (which provokes attacks of opportunity), and its effects last for 10 minutes.

These effects are extraordinary, not magical.

Dragon Variety	Effect	Price
Black	darkvision 120 ft.	700 gp
Blue	sound imitation <sup>1</sup>	900 gp
Brass	speaking with animals	400 gp
Bronze	water breathing	1,000 gp
Copper	spider climb	700 gp
Gold	polymorph <sup>2</sup>	1,700 gp
Green	suggestion <sup>2</sup>	1,200 gp
Red	dragon breath (fire) <sup>2</sup>	1,400 gp
Silver	cloudwalking <sup>1</sup>	1,400 gp
White	icewalking <sup>1</sup>	600 gp

Dragoncraft Price: see above; Dragon Part: dragon blood (1 gallon); Skill: Craft (alchemy); Weight: 1/2 lb.

DRAGONHIDE MANTLE

A dragon's hide can be rendered flexible enough to wear as a cloak.

Crafting a dragonhide mantle requires as much hide as a suit of hide armor, and the mantle must be created to fit the wearer's size.

A dragonhide mantle grants the wearer resistance 5 against a specific type of energy, as appropriate to the dragon (acid for black, copper, or green; cold for silver or white; electricity for blue or bronze; fire for brass, gold, or red).

This resistance is treated as an extraordinary (and thus nonmagical) feature of the mantle.

It doesn't stack with any other energy resistance (of the same type) possessed by the character. In addition, the wearer of a dragonhide mantle gains a +2 circumstance bonus on Intimidate checks against dragons. Dragoncraft Price: 3,800 gp; Dragon Part: dragon hide; Skill: Craft (leatherworking); Weight: same as ordinary hide armor of appropriate size.

BILE DROPPINGS

Distilled from the venomous excreta of certain breeds of monstrous spiders, this substance is a thick, viscous fluid. You can throw a flask of bile droppings as a ranged touch attack with a range increment of 10 feet.

Upon hitting a target, this sticky fluid deals 1d6 points of acid damage the first round and 1d6 points of acid damage in the second round.

If the target takes a full-round action to scrape it off it takes no damage in the second round.

In addition to causing acid damage, a flask of bile droppings releases a powerful stench when broken open, forcing anyone within 5 feet to make a successful DC 13 Fortitude save or be sickened for 1 round.

Anyone actually struck by the vile stuff takes a -4 penalty on the save.

Bile droppings can be created with a DC 15 Craft (alchemy) check and the proper raw materials (the spiders that create the droppings are bred by the dark elves, so these materials are readily available in a typical drow city).

CALLING

This lumpy black paste is magically infused with spider eggs and can be hidden in a dish of food, in which it is detectable only with a successful DC 20 Profession (cook) check.

If it is consumed, and if the victim fails the initial save, a swarm of spiders hatches within the victim's stomach, dealing the initial damage.

The swarm is then digested and destroyed without further harm, unless the second save is failed.

In that case, it bursts forth from the victim's nose and mouth, dealing the secondary damage and coalescing as a spider swarm (MM 239), attacking everyone in the area.

This poison can be created with a DC 28 Craft (poisonmaking) check and a summon swarm spell.

CREEPING NULLSCOURGE

Used during bouts of drow infighting, on failed save this poison drains 5 points of the target's spell resistance.

The secondary damage also drains 5 points of spell resistance.

Lost spell resistance returns at the same rate and by the same means as ability score damage.

This poison can be created with a DC 25 Craft (poisonmaking) check and an assay spell resistance spell.

DARKLIGHT BREW

Darklight ore (see page 154) is powdered and cut with a mild acid to create this poison.

The radiation of the ore is diminished greatly in this process, but its effect becomes acute when it is introduced into the bloodstream.

This poison can be made with a DC 28 Craft (poisonmaking) check.

The blindness from the poison lasts for 1 hour.

DARKVISION POWDER

This plain gray powder clings to surfaces and cannot be seen with normal vision from more than a few feet away. It glows brightly when viewed with darkvision, and thus is useful for creatures that have darkvision and wish to write messages that other creatures can't read.

Each vial contains enough powder for a message of up to 25 words.

By adding a mixture of spider silk oil, an ink can be created with the same properties as the powder.

Darkvision powder can be created with a DC 20 Craft (alchemy) check.

DWARFBLIND STONE

These small stones are treated with a substance that gives them a faint purple sheen.

When you throw a dwarfblind stone as a ranged touch attack with a range increment of 20 feet, it releases a burst of violet light upon striking a hard surface.

This burst illuminates a 10-foot radius for an instant and interferes with darkvision.

Creatures within the area of the burst must make a DC 15 Reflex save or lose their darkvision ability for 10 minutes. A dwarfblind stone has no effect on normal or low-light vision.

Since it doesn't need to hit you can simply aim a dwarfblind stone at a particular 5-foot square.

Treat the target as AC 5; if you miss, see Throw Splash Weapon, PH 158, to determine where the stone lands.

A dwarfblind stone can be created with a DC 25 Craft (alchemy) check.

FISH GLUE

The body oil of captured kuo-toas is used to create this poison, which is named for the rigidity it causes in the joints of the victim and its characteristic fishy smell.

It can be crafted with a DC 18 Craft (poisonmaking) check. The sickness from the poison lasts for 1 hour.

GUEST CLOAK

These mundane-seeming cloaks of an olive or pale green color are handed out to visitors to Erelhei-Cinlu by the drow guards at the entrance to the Vault.

The fabric of these cloaks is suffused with darkvision powder (see Alchemical items, below) so that they glow brightly when viewed with darkvision.

The drow use these to easily identify foreign guests within their city.

Any non-drow caught in the city and not wearing one of these cloaks is usually executed.

ILLITHID MINDSCORCH

The brain matter of recently slain illithids can be distilled, capturing some of its psionic potential and creating this extremely rare poison.

Though it is a liquid in its basic form, it is ineffective unless reduced to an aerosol and absorbed through the nasal passages of the victim.

It can be created with a DC 27 (poisonmaking) check, though the DC is reduced by 5 if the creator has ranks in Knowledge (psionics) or Psicraft or has levels in a psionic character class (see Expanded Psionics Handbook). Illithids immediately try to devour the brains of anyone they catch with this substance.

MISTER

This small steel hand-held device can contain a single dose of poison or a potion.

As a standard action that does not provoke attacks of opportunity, you can use it to deliver that dose in droplet form to any single target within 5 feet as a ranged touch attack.

The mister is an effective vehicle for both contact and inhaled poisons.

Ingested poisons allow the victim to attempt a DC 15 Reflex save to avoid contact with the mist and escape the poison's effect.

Mister-borne injury poisons are effective only if the victim is wounded and hasn't been treated with a Heal check.

If the mister delivers a potion, that potion can be used against an adjacent creature that breathes.

You can automatically do this to yourself or to a willing or disabled subject.

Oils, salves, and elixirs cannot be delivered through a mister.

Refilling a mister requires a full-round action and provokes attacks of opportunity.

POTION BLADDER

Crafted from the thin, rubbery organs of cloaklers and lurkers, these items are slung over the shoulder and worn on the upper back.

They are small enough that they do not interfere with backpacks, can be worn under armor, and are easily concealable (+5 circumstance bonus on Sleight of Hand checks to hide).

A flexible tube made from the same material runs from this rubbery bladder under the collar and ends below the chin of the wearer.

A potion bladder can hold a single dose of one potion.

A valve in the bladder prevents the potion from leaking unless suction is placed at the end of the strawlike tube.

A potion bladder allows you to drink the potion within as a standard action without provoking attacks of opportunity.

Refilling a potion bladder requires a full-round action and is done by siphoning the potion through the straw; this action provokes attacks of opportunity.

Insidious drow have been known to place poisons in the potion bladders of rivals.

PSYCHOTROPIC ROT

Distilled violet fungus and other chemicals can be mixed together to create this insidious toxin.

It can be created with a DC 17 Craft (poisonmaking) check.

ROACH PASTE

This brown paste is made from the crushed bodies of the carrion-eating giant roaches found in the Underdark.

It is known for its horrendous smell. It can be created with a DC 15 Craft (poisonmaking) check. The nausea from the poison lasts for 1 round. The disease it transmits is filth fever (DMG 293).

SHEDDEN

This gray paste is brewed from the exoskeletons of monstrous spiders ground with silk-based oils and mixed with various chemicals and reagents.

When spread on your exposed flesh, it temporarily hardens your skin, granting you a +1 bonus to natural armor for 2 minutes.

This bonus stacks with any other natural armor you already have.

It takes 1 minute to apply shedden to your entire body and obtain its benefits.

Shedden can be created with a DC 20 Craft (alchemy) check.

Certain master alchemists can create shedden that provides natural armor bonuses of +2 to +5, but doing so raises the Craft DC by 4 for each additional point of natural armor and increases the price as follows: 200 gp for +2, 500 gp for +3, 1,000 gp for +4, and 2,000 gp for +5.

SLOW TAINT

This poison reduces the target's speed by 10 feet on a failed save.

The secondary damage reduces speed by another 10 feet.

The target's speed cannot be reduced below 5 feet.

The poison can be created with a DC 18 Craft (poisonmaking) check and a slow spell.

Its effect has a duration of 1 hour.

SLOWSWARMING

Unlike swarming spiderbite below, this poison is for those drow caught in acts of treachery or blasphemy.

It is usually administered to a prisoner over several days; each dose creates a slower and more agonizing biting sensation similar to that caused by swarming spiderbite, but also disfigures the body with horrific red boils.

It can be created with a DC 21 Craft (poisonmaking) check and a poison spell.

SPELUNKER'S OIL

This clear, slick substance is derived from several types of slimes and certain mineral oils.

As a full-round action, you can apply a flask of it to your body and gain a +2 alchemical bonus on Escape Artist checks.

This oil is especially useful to cave explorers who have to squeeze through tight quarters.

However, when the oil is effective it bestows a -5 penalty on Climb checks.

Spelunker's oil can be created with a DC 20 Craft (alchemy) check.

SPIDER KIT

This kit includes hand, feet, elbow, and knee pads set with hundreds of tiny hooks and smeared with a sticky alchemical substance similar to that in a tanglefoot bag. These pads provide a +2 circumstance bonus on Climb checks; this stacks with the bonuses provided by climber's kits and spelunker's kits.

The substance on the pads actually becomes stickier when exposed to moisture, so no penalties apply for slippery surfaces if the slipperiness is caused by wetness.

In addition to the pads, the kit also includes a harness, to which are attached four retractable telescoping legs (two on each side to the back so there is room for a backpack between them).

These legs also end in the same sticky pads.

If you have made a successful Climb check, you can extend these legs and attach them to the surface you are climbing as a full-round action.

You then use your hands freely once the legs are extended, because the legs (along with your own feet and knees) adhere you to the wall.

The legs can be detached from the wall with a move action and refolded with another move action.

If you climb with the legs still extended, you do not gain the +2 bonus on Climb checks normally provided by the spider kit.

STONEBURN ACID

This substance is a weaker form of alchemist's mineral acid.

It harms only stone and other minerals.

It is not effective as a splash weapon, because it requires both contact and pressure to fully dissolve the exposed material.

Otherwise, it just makes small pocks in a surface.

When you apply it with pressure against rock or other minerals, it ignores hardness and deals 2d6 points of damage.

This dissolution happens almost instantly, after which the acid becomes inert.

Therefore, it is only useful for digging small divots into a stone surface or small openings in very thin walls.

It works best when used with stoneburners (described above).

Stoneburn acid can be created with a DC 22 Craft (alchemy) check.

STONEBURNERS

These are special boot tips and gloves with reinforced fingertips that hold small receptacles for stoneburn acid (see Alchemical items, below).

When pressure is applied these compartments, the acid is released onto whatever surface is being pressed.

If the surface is stone, the finger or foot tips immediately burn a small divot that can be used as a hand or foothold.

Using stoneburners along with stoneburn acid provides you a +2 circumstance bonus on Climb checks on stone surfaces.

This does not stack with the bonuses provided by climber's kits, spelunker's kits, or spider kits.

Stoneburners are typically used by drow who are in a hurry and are not picky about leaving behind a permanent trail.

A single flask of stoneburn acid provides enough substance for a wearer of stoneburners to climb up to 200 feet.

SWARMING SPIDERBITE

Usually taken to ensure an honorable death (or to avoid torture) by drow defeated in battle, the effect of this poison is like the biting mouths of venomous spiders starting from the extremities and advancing throughout the body. It can be created with a DC 26 Craft (poisonmaking) check and a poison spell.

UNDERDARK BLIGHT

Running a chemical solution over certain rare ores and minerals found in the Underdark creates this poison; it is effective at removing spell resistance. Lost spell resistance returns at the same rate and by the same means as ability score damage. Underdark blight can be created with a DC 20 Craft (poisonmaking) check.

VILEGRIP

This misty substance enhances the adhesive qualities of a web.

A single vial contains enough mist to fill a 10-foot cube in a single round.

All webs in this area become stickier and stronger, increasing the DC to avoid or break free by 2 for 1 hour. Vilegrip can also be used on the webs created by a web spell.

Vilegrip can be created with a DC 25 Craft (alchemy) check.

Type: The poison's method of delivery—ingested, inhaled, via an injury, or contact—and the DC needed to save.

Initial Damage: The damage the character takes immediately upon failing his saving throw against this type of poison. Ability score damage is temporary unless marked with an asterisk (*), in which case the loss is a permanent drain. Paralysis lasts for 2d6 minutes.

Secondary Damage: The amount of damage the character takes 1 minute after exposure as a result of the poisoning, if he fails a second saving throw. Unconsciousness lasts for 1d3 hours. Loss marked with an asterisk is permanent drain instead of temporary damage.

Price: The cost of one dose (one vial) of the poison. It is not possible to use or apply poison in any quantity smaller than one dose. The purchase and possession of poison is always illegal, and even in big cities it can only be obtained from specialized, less than reputable sources.

GALLEY

A three-masted ship with seventy oars on either side and a total crew of two hundred.

This ship is 130 feet long and 20 feet wide, and it can carry up to 150 tons of cargo or 250 soldiers.

For 8,000 gp more, it can be fitted with a ram and castles with firing platforms fore, aft, and amidships.

This ship cannot make sea voyages and sticks to the coast.

It moves about 4 miles per hour when being rowed or under sail.

KEELBOAT

A 50- to 75-foot-long ship that is 15 to 20 feet wide and has a few oars to supplement its single mast with a square sail.

It has a crew of eight to fifteen and can carry forty to fifty tons of cargo or one hundred soldiers.

It can make sea voyages as well as sail down rivers. (It has a flat bottom).

It moves about 1 mile per hour.

LONGSHIP

A 75-foot-long ship with forty oars and a total crew of fifty. It has a single mast and a square sail.

It can carry fifty tons of cargo or one hundred twenty soldiers.

A longship can make sea voyages.

It moves about 3 miles per hour when being rowed or under sail.

ROWBOAT

An 8- to 12-foot-long boat for two or three people.

It moves about 1-1/2 miles per hour.

SAILING SHIP

This larger, more seaworthy version of the coaster (a kind of sailing ship) is 75 to 90 feet long and 20 feet wide.

It has a crew of twenty.

It can carry cargo up to 150 tons.

It has square sails on its two masts and can make sea voyages.

It moves about 2 miles per hour.

WARSHIP

This 100-foot-long ship has a single mast, although oars can also propel it.

It has a crew of sixty to eighty rowers.

This ship can carry up to 160 soldiers, but not for long distances, since there isn't room for supplies for that many.

The warship cannot make sea voyages and sticks to the coast.

It is not used for cargo.

It moves about 2 1/2 miles per hour when rowed or under sail.

FF: Fiend Folio; MM2: Monster Manual II; MM3: Monster Manual III.

1: Conflagration ooze essence deals fire damage in addition to Constitution damage. Creatures that have immunity to poison still must save to avoid taking damage. Creatures that have immunity to fire still must save to avoid taking Constitution damage.

2: Damage from the injury that introduced the poison into the victim's body cannot be healed magically or naturally. A neutralize poison or heal spell removes the effect, and delay poison allows magical healing while in effect.

ACID NEUTRALIZER

Acid neutralizer reduces the strength of nonmagical acid, such as the type found in a variety of common dungeon traps.

Description: Acid neutralizer is a slippery, white substance similar in appearance to soap.

It is made and sold in fist-sized lump, wrapped in brown waxed paper.

When dropped in acid, the neutralizer foams and fizzes, turbulently churning the acid for 5 seconds.

Neutralized acid takes on the appearance of weakly colored water, retaining only a slight tint and no odor whatsoever.

Activation: To use a lump of acid neutralizer, just drop it into a vessel containing acid (free action).

Unwrapping the lump is not necessary, because any acid strong enough to warrant neutralization will eat through the paper wrapping easily.

Neutralization requires a full round and the acid will remain at full strength until the start of your next turn.

If you are immersed in acid while carrying lumps of acid neutralizer, they immediately activate unless stored in a stronger container such as a metal tin.

Being splashed with acid might activate the neutralizer if you keep it exposed rather than stored in a jar.

Effect: If you drop one lump of acid neutralizer into a container holding up to 10 cubic feet of nonmagical acid, the acid is permanently weakened such that contact with the acid deals no damage. Complete immersion in neutralized acid deals only 5d6 points of damage per round (instead of the usual 10d6 points).

Acid that has been neutralized in this manner no longer gives off toxic fumes (DMG 302).

Larger volumes of acid require additional doses; two lumps are needed to neutralize a 20-cubic-foot vat of acid.

Neutralizer is far less effective against magic acids, which regain their full acidity after 3d6 rounds.

If you wear a lump of acid neutralizer in a necklace or carry it otherwise exposed on your body, the lump prevents continuing damage from acid attacks for 1 minute after initial exposure.

It has no effect against the initial damage dealt by an acid attack.

Construction: DC 20 Craft (alchemy) check, 17 gp.

Weight: 1 lb. Price: 50 gp.

BOTTLED AIR

This strong vapor clears away fog, mist, and clouds in seconds, allowing you to see more clearly.

Description: Bottled air is stored as blue-tinted liquid in glass vials.

It gives off a strong acrid smell.

When a vial is opened, the liquid turns to mist and expands outward, creating a small area of fresh, clean air.

Activation: To activate bottled air, the vial in which it is stored must be opened (a standard action).

Bottled air can also be thrown as a splash weapon; the vial breaks on contact and releases the mist into the air.

Effect: Bottled air clears fog, smoke, and other gases from the square it occupies.

If you are carrying a vial when it is opened, you can apply the effect to a single square adjacent to you.

That square, and only that square, will be cleared.

A creature that stands in a clear square still gains the benefit of concealment from obscured squares around it, but it loses those benefits against foes adjacent to the clear space.

Once released from its vial, bottled air lasts for 2d4 rounds before it sputters out.

Construction: DC 25 Craft (alchemy) check, 17 gp.

Weight: —.

Price: 50 gp.

CLERIC-IN-A-BOX KIT

If your party lacks a cleric, or if your cleric focuses on offensive rather than defensive spells, the cleric-in-a-box kit is a fine substitute in an emergency.

With potions on hand to heal most ailments, you can march into a dungeon with the peace of mind that relief is never far away.

Item	Quantity	Cost	Weight
Antitoxin	4	200 gp	—

COLLAPSIBLE POLE

This 2-foot-long wooden pole is composed of six telescoping sections that allow it to extend to a length of 12 feet.

Each section can be turned to lock it in place to prevent the pole from collapsing prematurely.

The pole can be partially extended to 4 feet.

6 feet, 8 feet, or 10 feet.

You can use the pole to jam doors, pass objects across pits, spring traps, or serve any other needed function.

The thinnest section of a collapsible pole can be inserted into a second pole, creating a sturdy pole of up to 22 feet in length.

Expanding or collapsing a pole is a full-round action.

DOORBUSTER KIT

With this kit in your backpack.

no door will block your way.

If you cannot pick the lock, melt it.

If you cannot melt it, pry it open.

If you cannot pry it open, saw it off.

With all these options, you will yearn to face tougher locks—just for the change of pace.

Item	Quantity	Cost	Weight
Acid (flask)	4	40 gp	4 lb.
Crowbar	1	2 gp	5 lb.
Hacksaw, superior	1	20 gp	1 lb.
Locksick	2	360 gp	1 lb.

Wand of knock	1	4,500 gp	—
Total		5,022 gp	13 lb.

DRILL

This simple hand drill bores small holes in wood, metal, or stone.

As a standard action, you can use the drill to create a hole in an object if the drill can ignore the object's hardness (see below).

The hole is 1 inch deep and 1 inch in diameter.

Any Search checks or Spot checks through the hole are made at a –5 penalty.

Listen checks through the hole are made at a –2 penalty.

There are three types of drills.

A wood drill ignores up to 5 points of hardness when drilling.

An iron drill, commonly used on metal or stone, ignores up to 10 points of hardness.

An adamantite drill, used on only the most difficult surfaces, ignores up to 20 points of hardness.

A drill that does not ignore enough hardness of an object cannot bore a hole in that object.

Standard drills become dull after 20 rounds of use; masterwork drills last for 100 rounds.

New bits can be purchased for 10% of the cost of the drill.

FINDER'S CHALK

Marks made by this red chalk fade from casual view after 1 minute, allowing you to mark dungeon surfaces secretly.

The chalk lets you keep track of what areas you have and have not visited without alerting wandering creatures to your presence.

To detect a simple mark, such as a line or an X, make a successful DC 25 Search check.

To detect more complex marks, make a successful DC 40 Search check.

A finder's glass (see below) improves your ability to detect the chalk marks.

True seeing (PH 296) lets you detect the marks without making a Search check.

One piece of finder's chalk covers a 10-foot-square wall with marks.

FINDER'S GLASS

A finder's glass is a 3-inch-diameter circular disc of red glass set in a copper frame.

It can be held in front of your eye or inserted over the aperture of a standard bullseye lantern, causing it to emit dim red light.

When you look through a finder's glass, you gain a +30 alchemical bonus on your Search checks to find or read marks made by finder's chalk.

If the glass is used in conjunction with a lantern, all creatures in the area of bright illumination gain a +20 alchemical bonus on their Search checks to find or read such marks.

FIRMAMENT STONE

This violet crystal gem has been treated with an alchemical substance that reacts to the position of either the sun or the moon.

Even while indoors or below ground, you know the time of day (or night).

Description: Firmament stones are violet iolite gems that have a clear crystalline appearance.

While the heavenly body to which the stone is attuned is in the sky, a small yellow light glows within the stone, crossing from one side (when the body first appears in the sky) to the other (when the body sets).

By examining the position of the glow, you can approximate the time of day or night.

Activation: Once created, firmament stones are always active.

They need only be observed by someone who understands their significance.

Effect: Each stone is attuned to either the sun or the moon, glowing when the associated heavenly body is in the sky, and remaining dark otherwise.

The stones are most useful to divine spellcasters who must prepare spells at a specific time of day.

Firmament stones attuned to the moon also show the phase of the moon by altering the shape of the glow that travels through the stone each night.

Construction: DC 25 Craft (alchemy) check, 20 gp, one 50-gp iolite gemstone.

Weight: 1/2 lb. Price: 110 gp.

FLOTATION BLADDER

This item, used to aid in swimming, consists of two sealed, oiled leather sacks attached with a piece of rope.

Each sack can be inflated by blowing air into it through a small metal valve as a full-round action.

Once inflated and placed under the arms, a flotation bladder grants a +4 bonus on Swim checks to rise to the surface or remain at the surface.

The bladder also imposes a -4 penalty on Swim checks to descend deeper into the water.

Additional bladders do not grant further bonuses on Swim checks, but the penalties stack.

FLOUR POUCH

This deceptively simple burlap satchel of flour is tied loosely on purpose.

While it could be used to bake a loaf of bread on a particularly long expedition, its true purpose is to locate invisible opponents.

You can attempt to strike an invisible opponent with a flour pouch as a touch attack.

You still must pinpoint the target or choose a space to attack into, and the normal miss chance for total concealment applies.

If you hit the target, the pouch bursts open, spilling white flour over a portion of the invisible creature.

You can also throw a flour pouch as a splash weapon; any invisible creature standing in the space struck is covered in flour, as are all other creatures within 5 feet.

Coating an invisible creature in flour lets you keep track of its position and reduces the miss chance to 20% (instead of the normal 50% for total concealment).

While an invisible creature is coated in flour, its bonus on Hide checks is reduced to +10 if the creature is moving, or to +20 if it is not moving (PH 76).

If the creature moves through water, is subjected to a gust of wind, or spends a full-round action brushing the flour off, all the flour is removed from its body.

GHOSTWALL SHELLAC

It can be difficult to ward off creatures that have the ability to float through dungeon walls.

A quick coat of ghostwall shellac will keep pesky spirits from drifting in and out of your camp-site all night.

Description: Concentrated ghostwall shellac is a thick green sludge that is always warm to the touch.

It is usually stored in metal vials and mixed with water when needed.

Prepared shellac is lime green and runny, and it smells like dead flesh.

Activation: Ghostwall shellac must be mixed with 1 gallon of water to become active.

The mixture is then spread over any nonliving surface, most commonly the walls of a room.

Coating a 10-foot square with prepared shellac takes 1 minute, and 1 gallon of the green liquid covers 10 such squares.

Whether it is applied to a surface or left in a container, the shellac dries and hardens 1 hour after being mixed with water.

Effect: When ghostwall shellac dries, it changes the composition of the surface upon which it has been spread.

Incorporeal creatures can no longer pass through a coated wall any more than normal creatures can.

The shellac also causes the wall to simultaneously exist on the Ethereal Plane for a limited time, so creatures on that plane cannot see through or pass through the space it occupies.

When applying ghostwall shellac to the walls of a room, remember to coat the floor and ceiling as well, lest unwanted spirits merely enter through those surfaces instead.

Ghostwall shellac lasts for 4d6 hours once applied.

Construction: DC 30 Craft (alchemy) check, 50 gp.

Weight: 1 lb. Price: 150 gp.

GRAPPLING HOOK, MITHRAL

A mithral grappling hook is lighter than a standard hook but just as strong, and it can be thrown farther.

If the hook is attached to a silk rope (not a hempen one), any Use Rope check to seat the hook is made at a DC equal to 10 + 1 per 20 feet thrown, to a maximum DC of 20 for a hook thrown 200 feet.

GRAPPLING LADDER

This premade hemp rope ladder has two small steel grappling hooks on either end.

Throwing a grappling ladder is like throwing a grappling hook, only more difficult.

The Use Rope check to seat the ladder is made at a DC equal to 15 + 3 per 10 feet thrown.

A DC 10 Climb check is required to scale a grappling ladder.

The price and weight in Table 2—1 is for a 10-foot ladder, but longer ladders are commonly available.

For each additional 10 feet of the ladder, add 35 gp to the cost and 6 pounds to the weight.

GRAPPLING LADDER, SILK AND MITHRAL

The finest grappling ladders are made of silk rope and fashioned with two tiny mithral hooks.

They function as standard grappling ladders but are easier to seat; the Use Rope check is made at a DC equal to 13 + 2 per 10 feet thrown.

The standard +2 circumstance bonus on Use Rope checks for silk rope does not apply.

The price and weight in Table 2—1 is for a 10-foot ladder, but longer ladders are commonly available.

For each additional 10 feet of the ladder, add 150 gp to the cost and 3 pounds to the listed weight.

HACKSAW

This blade is designed to cut through thin metal.

It ignores the hardness of standard metal objects (excluding exotic metals such as mithral or adamantine), but it deals only 1 point of damage per 2 rounds of sawing.

A common blade lasts for 20 rounds, while a superior blade lasts for 40 rounds.

You can also buy a hacksaw with an adamantine blade which ignores hardness 25 or lower.

The saw also cut faster, dealing 1 point of damage per round.

HILT HOLLOW (WEAPON)

This modification is simply a hollow container hidden inside a weapon, usually in the hilt.

Creatures that are unaware of the hollow must make a successful DC 30 Search check to find it.

While holding the weapon, you merely press a tiny button hidden on the crosspiece, and the hollow springs open, depositing its contents into your other hand.

If your other hand is full, you can simultaneously drop your weapon (as a free action) as the hollow's contents are ejected, leaving you holding them instead of the weapon.

Either way, emptying the hollow is a swift action, and loading it is a full-round action.

The hollow is about 6 inches long and 1 inch in diameter, making it large enough for a single vial of potion.

Spellcasters often store material components in hilt hollows, allowing them to eject the components into their hand if they are grappled.

LARD

Simple cooking lard can be a great aid to dungeoneers.

You can spread it on the floor to make a slipper area similar to that created by a grease spell (PH 237).

Applying lard in this manner takes 1 minute, but the coated area remains slippery for 1 hour.

You can also take 1 minute to coat yourself in lard, which grants you a +5 circumstance bonus on Escape Artist checks and on grapple check made to resist or escape a grapple or pin.

The bonus last for 10 minutes.

LAVA STONES

Lava stones cool small areas of molten rock, allowing you to create a series of temporary steps across a body of magma.

Description: A lava stone is a tiny pebble that is cool to the touch.

When dropped in lava, the pebble sinks quickly, cooling the lava as it descends.

The result is a 2-foot-diameter column of hardened black stone that crests just above the surface of the lava.

Activation: Lava stones activate only when completely immersed in lava.

As a move action, you can drop one lava stone into a square adjacent to you.

The hardened platform, commonly referred to as a lava step, forms immediately, and you can step onto it with a second move action during the same turn.

You can also create a lava step at a distance by throwing the stone as an attack action.

Use the rules for throwing splash weapons (PH 158).

Once formed, a lava step lasts for 3d8 minutes before the surrounding heat turns it back into molten rock.

One round before the step melts, it glows orange and deals 1d6 points of fire damage to anyone standing on it.

In the following round, the step melts, dumping anyone still standing on it into fiery lava.

Effect: You can safely move into an adjacent square containing a lava step as a move action.

You can also move at half your normal speed across a path of lava steps that have already been sown within 5 feet of one another.

To do so, you must make a successful DC 10 Balance check as you move onto each step.

If you fail a check by 4 or less, you nearly lose your balance and cannot continue moving forward this turn.

If you fail a check by 5 or more, you fall into the lava.

Only Medium or smaller creatures can stand on a lava step.

Construction: DC 20 Craft (alchemy) check, 16 gp.

Variants: A greater lava stone is the size of a potato and forms a step that has a diameter of 6 feet.

Large creatures can walk across a trail of greater lava steps with a series of successful DC 10 Balance checks.

For Medium or smaller creatures, the DC of each check drops to 5.

Weight: — (standard) or 1 lb. (greater).

Price: 24 gp (standard) or 114 gp (greater).

LISTENING CONE

This iron cone can be placed against a surface, such as a door, to aid in Listen checks made through the surface.

The DC for listening through a door when using a cone increases by 2 (rather than 5), and the DC for listening through stone walls increases by 5 (rather than 15).

Listening cones have no effect if not used against a surface.

LOCKSLICK

Many locks rely on friction to keep their mechanical parts in place.

A few squirts of lockslick will loosen those parts, making them easier to open with thieves' tools.

Description: Lockslick is a slippery brown substance that resembles ordinary grease in appearance and texture.

It is stored in a small tin can with a long, tapered spout. Unlike grease, however, it does not easily rub off a surface to which it is applied, making it ideal for oiling locks without getting your hands or equipment messy. Further, lockslick is not flammable, which accounts for its popularity among adventuring thieves who might face flame-spewing monsters or traps.

Activation: To apply lockslick to a lock, insert the spout of the can into the keyhole or other crevice, and squirt (a standard action).

Lockslick can also help you disarm mechanical traps or devices.

If the mechanism has metal parts and you can touch them with the spout of the container, you can apply lockslick to the parts.

A can of lockslick holds 10 doses.

Effect: When lockslick is applied to a lock, the substance provides a +2 alchemical bonus on an associated Open Lock check.

When applied to a trap or mechanism, lockslick provides a +2 alchemical bonus on a Disable Device check to disarm it.

The effect lasts on the lock or trap until it is thoroughly scrubbed clean (a full-round action).

Construction: DC 25 Craft (alchemy) check, 60 gp.

Weight: 1/2 lb. Price: 180 gp.

MAGNET

This magnetized bar of metal picks up small objects of ferrous metal, such as iron or steel.

The magnet can lift up to 2 pounds of metal if touched to the object in question.

It can also attract metal objects weighing up to one-third of a pound at a distance of 1 foot.

You can tie a magnet to the end of a piece of twine and lower it into a pit to pick up objects or manipulate levers.

You can also lash a magnet to the end of a pole and slide it under door to retrieve items.

MANACLES, ADAMANTINE

Intended for chaining powerful dungeon monsters, these manacles can be broken only with a successful DC 52 Strength check.

They have 15 hit points and hardness 20.

Otherwise, adamantine manacle function as masterwork manacles (PH 126).

MOBILITY KIT

You should have no problem leading the party anywhere with this suite of climbing and exploring aids.

The potions cover special situations, while the climber's kit lets you scale a wall first before dropping a line back down for your companions.

And the bag of holding? Let's just say there is no such thing as having too much rope.

Item	Quantity	Cost	Weight
Bag of holding, type I	1	2,500 gp	15 lb.
Climber's kit	1	80 gp	5 lb.

OIL CHAMBER (WEAPON, ARMOR, OR SHIELD)

An oil chamber is a tiny vessel attached to the hilt of a weapon, the inside of a shield, or either forearm of a suit of armor.

You can fill the chamber with any magic or alchemical oil as a full-round action.

Sealing the oil inside the chamber creates pressure, such that opening the chamber again (a swift action) causes the oil to spray out over the armor or weapon.

In this way, you can apply the oil to your equipment quickly and efficiently.

You cannot open a full chamber without having the oil spray, however, so filling the chamber is a commitment to applying the oil to that armor or weapon at some point in the future.

Filling an oil chamber with poison is a bad idea.

Whoever is wielding or wearing the equipment is automatically exposed to the poison as it sprays out.

However, it is safe to fill a chamber with trollbane (see page 37)—assuming that you are not a troll.

Unlike most modifications, an oil chamber can be added to an existing weapon, shield, or armor fairly easily.

Weapons and shields can support one oil chamber, but a suit of armor can hold two (one on each forearm).

You can build an oil chamber into a missile weapon, such as a crossbow, in such a way that the oil sprayed affects the loaded missile, rather than the weapon.

PERISCOPE, HAND

This device consists of two steel mirrors placed opposite each other at angles, separate by a metal tube about 2 feet in length.

The periscope allows you to peer around corners without revealing your presence.

Because only the end of the periscope protrudes, you can make a Hide check (with a +7 bonus) for the item to determine if the creatures you spy upon notice it.

The area visible through the periscope is cone shaped and begins in the space immediately around the corner.

While looking through the periscope, you take a -8 penalty on Spot checks to detect creatures not in the cone-shaped area.

RUBBER BALL

A bouncing rubber ball can give you an idea of what lies down a corridor.

Simply throw the ball at a space or grid intersection as you would throw a splash weapon, though with a range increment of 30 feet.

No matter where the ball lands, it bounces directly away from you, traveling half the distance it was first thrown. Then it lands and bounces again, covering half the distance of the previous bounce.

The ball continues in this manner until it makes a bounce that would be less than 5 feet in length, at which time it stops bouncing and begins rolling.

If the ball strikes a solid object, it reverses direction and continues rolling.

Thus, you can throw a rubber ball down a corridor to see whether or not it hits a wall and returns to you.

Either way, you learn something about the length of the hallway.

When you throw the ball, you can also listen carefully for other cues, especially if the ball does not return.

For example, if you hear a splash, you know that a liquid obstacle lies ahead.

RUBBING KIT

Adventurers often encounter ancient carvings and runes that they do not understand.

A rubbing kit allows them to bring a copy of the runes back to town for an expert to translate later.

The kit consists of a roll of thin paper 20 feet long and 1 foot wide, and numerous sticks of fine charcoal.

Simply place the paper over the carvings and rub it with charcoal.

Creating an accurate copy requires 1 minute for each foot of paper used (in length).

Rubbing more quickly reduces the time to a full-round action for the same amount of paper, but it adds 10 to the DC of any check related to interpreting the rubbing, such as a Decipher Script check.

SAFE REST KIT

When your party needs to rest, protect everyone with this kit of cautionary equipment.

Barricade yourself in a room by spiking the doors shut.

If ghosts or ethereal filchers are a concern, paint the walls, ceiling, and floor with ghostwall shellac to keep out things that go bump in the night.

Item	Quantity	Cost	Weight
Bedroll	6	20 gp	1 lb.
Ghostwall shellac	6	900 gp	6 lb.
Hammer	1	5 sp	2 lb.
Iron spike	5	5 sp	5 lb.
Stone of alarm	1	2,700 gp	2 lb.
Waterskin	1	1 gp	4 lb.
Total		3,622 gp	20 lb.

SANCTIFIED (ARMOR OR SHIELD)

While most clerics adorn their equipment with images associated with their faith, sanctified armor is actually engraved with the holy or unholy symbol of a religion. This modification makes the armor a legitimate divine focus for divine spellcasters of that faith.

Normally, a divine focus does not have to be in hand to cast a spell, so a sanctified shield is a matter of personal style for clerics who prefer a shield to an amulet.

Of course, a sanctified shield can be useful as a backup in case your primary focus is lost or damaged.

SPIKE, IRON

Iron spikes have a variety of uses, though they are most commonly hammered into door frames to keep the doors shut.

If you have a hammer or mallet, you can pound one spike in place as a full-round action.

A door with one spike in it is considered stuck, and a door with two or more spikes in it is considered locked for the purpose of breaking it down.

(For the break DCs for stuck and locked doors, see Table 3-10: Doors, DMG 61).

TRAPSPRINGER KIT

With a variety of tools for finding and neutralizing common traps, you are well prepared to face any mechanical hazard.

Use the dagger to cut through trap parts with ease (especially when dealing with encounter traps; see page 120).

Feel ahead for pressure plates with the collapsible pole, and send the animals from the bag of tricks ahead to test for traps.

Item	Quantity	Cost	Weight
Acid (flask)	3	30 gp	3 lb.
Acid neutralizer	3	150 gp	3 lb.
Antitoxin	5	250 gp	—
Bag of tricks, gray	1	900 gp	—
Collapsible pole	1	20 gp	8 lb.
Dagger, adamantite	1	3,002 gp	1 lb.
Goggles of minute seeing	1	1,250 gp	—
Hacksaw, adamantite	1	600 gp	1 lb.
Locksick	2	360 gp	1 lb.
Rubber ball	10	30 gp	—
Thieves' tools, masterwork	1	100 gp	2 lb.
Total		6,692 gp	19 lb.

TROLLBANE

Discovered by gnome alchemists as a safe alternative to flaming weapons, trollbane interferes with the natural ability of certain creatures to regenerate their flesh.

Dubbed trollbane because it is frequently used against those particular monsters, this poison is effective against any creature that rapidly heals its wounds.

Description: Trollbane is a sticky blue substance that resembles tar.

It is usually stored in metal jars.

Activation: Trollbane functions as injury poison (DMG 296) and can be applied directly to weapons prior to combat. A successful hit with a slashing or piercing weapon that has been coated in trollbane will expose the target to the poison.

Trollbane has no effect unless used in conjunction with a forceful blow from a weapon, so adventurers can carry it with little risk of exposure.

Effect: Any creature struck by a weapon that has been coated in trollbane loses the benefit of its regeneration ability (if any) against that attack.

A dose of trollbane applies only to the next successful attack with the coated weapon.

Additional attacks do not interfere with the target's regeneration ability (unless more trollbane is applied to the weapon).

Construction: DC 25 Craft (alchemy) check, 30 gp.

Weight: —.

Price: 90 gp.

TWINE

For situations where rope is too bulky, simple twine is a good substitute.

It can be tied around smaller objects and takes up less room.

Twine has 1 hit point and hardness 0.

WAND BRACER

This metal forearm band takes up space on the body as a bracer and can hold up to five wands.

Thin loops of thread fit over your fingers, each connected to a spring mechanism on one of the wand slots.

If your hand is empty, you can flex a finger as a swift action to cause the wand of your choice to spring into your grasp. You still must activate the wand as a standard action.

Replacing a wand in the sheath is tricky and requires a full-round action.

Most adventurers just drop the first wand to the ground (a free action) when they need a different one.

WAND CHAMBER (WEAPON OR SHIELD)

A wand chamber is a thin, cylindrical slot on the handle of a weapon or the edge of a shield that can hold a single wand.

When a wand is loaded in the chamber, it is considered ready and can be activated without having to drop the weapon or shield.

Changing the wand in the chamber is a full-round action.

FIEND FOLIO (3.0)

DOUBT BOMB

This small ceramic sphere contains a chemical mixture intended to overstimulate the "doubt centers" in the brain.

The bomb can be thrown as a grenadelike weapon.

A thrown bomb shatters on impact, creating a cloud of poisonous gas in a 10-foot spread (initial and secondary damage 1d6 Wisdom, Fort DC 15 negates).

Ethergaunts are immune to the effects of doubt bombs. A doubt bomb has a market price of 500 gp.

ALCHEMICAL SLEEP GAS

This liquid evaporates quickly when exposed to air, creating a temporary, mildly toxic cloud that puts living creatures to sleep.

You can throw a flask of sleep gas as a grenadelike weapon. It has a range increment of 10 feet.

On a direct hit (splashes have no effect because the gas dissipates instantly), a living target must succeed on a Fortitude save (DC 15) or fall asleep for 1 minute.

After 1 minute, the target must make another Fortitude save (DC 15) or sleep 1d4 additional minutes.

The sleep gas affects creatures that are immune to magical sleep effects but not creatures that are immune to poison.

Spells and effects that cancel or counter poisons (such as neutralize poison) are effective against the gas.

The gas affects only one creature of Small or larger size.

The gas affects all creatures of Tiny or smaller size in the 5-foot square where it strikes.

Note: A sleeping creature is helpless.

Slapping or wounding awakens the creature, but normal noise does not.

Awakening the creature is a standard action.

The Alchemy DC to make alchemical sleep gas is 25.

ASPERGILLUM

This lightweight metal device looks like a small club or a light mace.

Each contains a reservoir that can hold up to 3 pints (three flasks) of holy water.

By shaking the aspergillum as a standard action, you can sprinkle one flask of holy water on a target within melee reach.

This action is a ranged touch attack (which does not provoke an attack of opportunity).

An aspergillum does not require any proficiency to use.

Many adventurers prefer using an aspergillum to dispense holy water rather than throwing or pouring out the contents of a flask.

BANDOLEER

This leather belt has loops or pouches for carrying small items (up to dagger size).

It is usually worn across the chest.

It holds eight items.

BANDOLEER, MASTERWORK

This well-crafted bandoleer holds twelve items.

BLUELEAF

Recognizable by the eerie, gleaming blue color of their many-pointed leaves, blueleaves (not "blueleaves") bend in winds or under ice rather than breaking, often forming snow tunnels that shelter winter travelers.

Blueleaves grow close together in thick stands, reaching 40 feet in height but rarely attaining thick trunks.

Blueleaf wood is durable, and the sap and crushed leaves yield a vivid blue dye much favored in cloakmaking in the North.

When burned, it yields beautiful leaping blue flames (prized in inns and taverns as "mood" illumination for tale-tellers and minstrels).

Blueleaf is found in humid temperate and subarctic latitudes north of Amn.

DISAPPEARING INK

After being used to write a message, this blue or red ink vanishes from view at the end of an hour (though ink can be made, at greater expense, that will disappear after longer periods, such as a day, a tenday, or a month).

Heat (such as a candle flame) applied to the writing surface makes the ink appear again.

A Spot or Search check (DC 20) reveals traces of the writing.

The Alchemy DC to make disappearing ink is 15.

GAMES

Some games of skill are detailed below, but games of chance are also popular.

Wagering on any sort of game is also a favorite pastime.

CHESS

Faerûnian chess game pieces include kings, queens, priests (bishops), knights-errant (knights), rooks (castles), and pawns.

Sets often use famous figures, such as rulers or deities, as kings.

A set consists of thirty-two pieces and a board in a wooden case.

A fine set has ebony and ivory pieces and a marble board. A common set is made from more humble materials, such as carved and dyed wood.

DRAUGHTS

Draughts is similar to the modern game of checkers. A set consists of twenty-four clay or stone pieces and a board of alternating light and dark squares in a wooden case. The board is the same as a chessboard in pattern.

OLD MEN'S BONES

This game is similar to the modern game of pick-up sticks. The object is to remove the bones from the pile you have dumped them into one at a time without toppling the pile. The set has "sticks" made from bones (usually those of a fowl) and a leather or metal canister for carrying them.

TALIS DECK

A deck of seventy-eight cards, typically made of lacquered paper or parchment, in a wooden case. The deck is similar to a tarot deck.

HAMMOCK

An innovation from the land of Maztica, a hammock is a hemp or linen blanket with sturdy cords woven into it so that it can be strung up between two trees or other vertical supports.

HELMTHORN

A vinelike ground shrub that sometimes cloaks other bushes and dead trees, helmithorn has dark, waxy green leaves and bristling black thorns. As long as human hands, these sharp, durable thorns are often used as crude needles or dart points. Helmithorn berries are indigo in hue, edible (tart in flavor), and often harvested even when frozen or withered for use in winemaking. Helmithorn is very hardy and grows throughout Faerûn, providing food for many.

HERB, CASSIL

Cassil is a small shrub similar to a mustard plant. Its seeds are ground into a fine, tasteless powder that suppresses male fertility. Men who want to avoid fathering children use this herb. A male humanoid who eats about a teaspoon of cassil is rendered infertile for a period of 3d4 days, although it requires about an hour before the herb takes effect. Stories abound of disloyal courtiers dosing their kings or lords in order to prevent the conception of a royal heir. Using either the Heal skill or Profession (herbalist), the effects can be detected with a DC 15 check and countered with a DC 20 check.

HERB, NARAROOT

Nararoot is a black, woody tuber with a licoricelike flavor. Shavings steeped in hot water make a strong tea that renders a woman infertile for d4+2 days. Chewed raw, the root tastes unpleasant, but the effects are more potent, lasting 2d4+4 days. Women who do not wish to become pregnant use nararoot. Using either the Heal skill or Profession (herbalist), the effects can be detected with a DC 15 check and countered with a DC 20 check.

INSECT NETTING

These sheets of fine mesh are made of silk from Kara-Tur. When draped around a sleeper in a bedroll or hammock, insect netting keeps away normal insects (Fine vermin, but not magical effects that employ such creatures such as insect plague or creeping doom).

MARBLES

About two dozen assorted glass, flawed rock crystal, or clay spheres in a leather pouch. Commonly used as a toy, but also useful for checking the slope in a dungeon corridor (just set one down and see which way it rolls), or as a nondamaging alternative to caltrops. One bag covers an area 5 feet square. Creatures moving through or fighting in the area must make Balance checks (DC 15) or be unable to move for 1 round (or they may fall; see the Balance skill description in the Player's Handbook).

POTION BELT

This sturdy leather belt similar to a bandoleer has pockets shaped to hold potion vials and is fitted with ties or flaps to keep the potions from falling out. It holds six potions. Retrieving a potion from a potion belt is a free action once per round.

POTION BELT, MASTERWORK

This extremely well-made potion belt holds ten potions. Retrieving a potion from a potion belt is a free action once per round.

POWDERHORN

This waterproof horn holds 2 pounds of smokepowder.

POWDERKEG

This is a normal wooden keg that holds 15 pounds (240 ounces) of smokepowder.

SCENTBREAKER

This small bag contains either a collection of aromatic herbs or a strongly scented alchemical mixture. Either version can confound any creature's sense of smell.

You can toss the bag as a grenadelike weapon with a range increment of 10 feet, or you can scatter the contents someplace where a creature tracking by scent will come across it.

(It covers an area 5 feet square).

Once scattered, the contents remain potent for 1 hour.

A creature can sniff the bag's contents from a direct hit, from a splash, or from sniffing the area where the contents were scattered.

If struck by a direct hit, the creature must succeed at a Fortitude save (DC 18) or lose its scent ability for 1 minute. After the minute is up, the creature must make a second Fortitude save (DC 18) or lose its scent ability for another hour.

Being splashed or sniffing the scattered contents has the same effect, but the save DC is 15.

A direct hit or splash affects only one creature of Small or larger size.

The contents affect all creatures of Tiny or smaller size in the 5-foot square where a bag of scentbreaker strikes.

Note: The Alchemy DC to make scentbreaker is 15.

If you have 5 or more ranks in Profession (herbalist), you get a +2 synergy bonus on checks to craft it.

SCROLL ORGANIZER

This long strip of leather has an overlapping series of fifteen pockets sewn along one side, each large enough to hold a scroll of a single spell.

When slipped into a pocket, only the top of a scroll shows, allowing you to scan the scrolls' titles.

SHADOWTOP

The soaring giants of Faerûnian forests, shadowtops can grow 2 feet a year and top out at 90 feet.

A full-grown shadowtop flares out to a diameter of 10 feet or more at its base, its trunk surrounded by many pleatlike ridges.

Shadowtops are named for the dense clusters of feathery leaves at the tops of their trunks.

Shadowtop leaves are irregular in shape and have copper undersides and deep green upper surfaces.

Shadow-wood is fibrous and tough, but unsuitable for carving or structural work because under stress it splits down its length into splayed fibers.

These fibers are valued in ropemaking (a few added to the twist improves the strength and durability of a completed coil) and burns slowly but cleanly, generating a very hot fire, with little smoke.

This makes it ideal for cooking.

Shadow-wood is much used in the making of magical staffs, rods, and wands.

Shadowtops are found in all humid areas across Faerûn.

SUTH

Suth are graybark trees with olive-green leaves.

They grow almost horizontally and then double back to angle in another direction.

If a few suth trees grow together, their branches intertwine until they are inextricably entangled, forming a screen or wall barring passage to all things that can't fly over the tangled trees or scuttle under their lowest branches.

Suth leaves are long, soft, and fluffy, but spike-ended. Suth-wood is very hard and durably so hard that it's difficult to work without the finest tools.

Thin sheets of this wood retain astonishing strength for decades, and thus are favored for use in book covers.

Suth is also the preferred wood for shields since it never shatters and doesn't catch fire if soaked in water before battle.

A crushing blow might crack a suth-wood shield but won't cause it to fly apart.

The name of this tree may be a corruption of the word "south." Suth are found along the edges of the Shaar, in the woods of Chondath, and farther south in Faerûn.

WEIRWOOD

Weir trees resemble oaks but have leaves that are brown (with a silver sheen) on their uppers and velvety black beneath.

If undisturbed, weir trees grow into huge, many-branched forest giants.

Weirwood won't ignite in normal (nonmagical) fire and is resilient and durable.

It's favored in the making of musical instruments because of the unmistakable warm, clear tone it imparts.

Weirwood can be used as a replacement for oak or holly in any spell.

It grows throughout Faerûn but is very rare.

Most trees are now found deep in large forests and actively protected by dryads, treants, druids, and rangers.

ZALANTAR

Often called blackwood in the North because of its jet-black wood and bark, the zalantar tree has a central root and eight or more trunks that branch out from the root at ground level like the splayed fingers of a hand.

The trees may reach 60 feet in height, but are usually half that.

Their leaves are white through beige.

Zalantar wood is strong yet easily worked and sees much use in southern buildings and the making of wagons, litters, and wheels.

Southern wizards and sorcerers use durable and handsome zalantar wood almost exclusively in the making of rods, staffs, and wands.

This subtropical species is rarely seen north of the Shaar.

It is plentiful along the shores of Chult and the southern coasts of Faerûn and seems to grow in any terrain short of mountainous.

EFFECTS OF COLD ON EQUIPMENT

Although constant exposure to cold weather can damage many types of equipment, for the most part you should assume that player characters take at least some precautions to maintain and protect their gear from cold weather as they see fit. Nevertheless, certain items and pieces of equipment can be impacted by extreme cold, as detailed below.

Metal: Extreme cold can make metal objects fragile. If an unattended metal object is exposed to cold in excess of  $-20^{\circ}$  F for more than 1 hour, the break DC of the object takes a  $-2$  penalty until the object is warmed. Creatures who touch metal that is chilled to this extent take 1 point of cold damage per round of normal contact, or 1d4 points of damage per round of full bodily contact (such as in the case of wearing a suit of metal armor). If the temperature drops below  $-60^{\circ}$  F, this break DC penalty increases to  $-5$ ; creatures who touch metal chilled to this extent take 2 points of cold damage per round of normal contact, or 2d4 points of damage per round of full bodily contact. If chilled metal is suddenly exposed to direct flame or another source of powerful heat, the object must immediately make a DC 15 Fortitude save or shatter.

Undead Flesh: Corporeal undead creatures that are immune to cold can function with ease in environments that normally cause lethal damage ( $-20^{\circ}$  F or lower). An undead creature exposed to

VEHICLES IN FROSTFELL TERRAIN

Although air vehicles are unaffected by frostfell terrain, land and sea vehicles can be severely handicapped by fields of snow and sheets of ice.

Snow: Wheeled land vehicles become slowed by fields of snow. See the table below for speed penalties incurred when traveling through snowy areas. The "small" category includes Small and smaller vehicles, while the "large" category includes Large and larger vehicles. Water vehicles cannot travel through snow and air vehicles are not impeded.

Ice: Like snow, ice creates difficulty for wheeled land vehicles, causing them to become less easily controlled. Vehicle control check DCs are increased by 2 on icy surfaces.

Water vehicles traveling through bodies of water in frostfell environments run the risk of becoming trapped in freezing sheets of ice.

Water vehicles in any type of climate can encounter and collide with icebergs drifting down from frozen climes or gated in from the Elemental Planes. Likewise, air vehicles can encounter and such conditions for at least a day becomes frozen; this reduces the creature's land speed by 10 feet and imposes a  $-4$  penalty to its Dexterity, but increases its natural armor bonus by  $+5$  (for a net increase to its actual Armor Class of  $+3$ ). Undead with the cold subtype are considered to be frozen already and do not gain this benefit.

Liquids: Any liquid exposed to freezing temperatures freezes after 1 hour of continued exposure. Frozen liquid must be thawed before it can be used; one serving of frozen liquid can be thawed by a single torch's flame in 10 minutes. The thaw spell can do the same in the matter of an instant. Water freezes at  $32^{\circ}$  F, but most potions are made of hardier stuff and freeze at temperatures of  $20^{\circ}$  F or lower. Oils are even more difficult to freeze, and only do so at temperatures of  $-20^{\circ}$  F or lower. A frozen potion's or oil's magical qualities are unharmed by freezing, although the liquid must be thawed before it can be used.

Scrolls: A scroll (or any parchment, for that matter) allowed to remain in freezing temperatures unattended becomes brittle after a day of exposure. Reading or using a frozen scroll without taking the time to thaw it (typically requiring 10 minutes) requires the user to make a DC 15 Reflex save to avoid ruining the scroll. It is possible to use the skins of creatures with the cold subtype to create scrolls; these scrolls do not become brittle when exposed to cold.

TABLE 4-4: VEHICLE IMPEDIMENT IN SNOW

Snow Depth	—Wheeled Land Vehicle Size—
	Small	Medium	Large
Up to 6 inches	None	None	None
7–12 inches	Minor	None	None
13–24 inches	Major	Minor	None
25–36 inches	Major	Major	Minor
37–60 inches	Total	Major	Minor
61+ inches	Total	Total	Major

Minor: The vehicle must pay 2 squares of movement to enter each square of snow.

Major: The vehicle must pay 4 squares of movement to enter each square of snow.

Total: The vehicle can only move 1 square per round, regardless of its normal speed.

potentially crash into floating skybergs. For more information on handling a collision with an iceberg or skyberg, see Collisions in Chapter 3: Vehicles of the Arms and Equipment Guide.

ARMOR INSULATION

This thick red syrupy mixture is applied with a brush to the inner surface of a suit of armor.

When the mixture comes in contact with body heat and sweat, it puffs up to trap body heat, insulating the wearer against the effects of cold.

For 24 hours after application, the wearer of a suit of armor treated with armor insulation gains a +5 circumstance bonus on Fortitude saving throws against exposure to cold weather.

COLDFIRE SHIP

Colossal vehicle; Profession (sailor) +4; Spd ice 80 ft. (good); Overall AC -3; Section hp 50 (hardness 5); Section AC 3; Ram 12d6; Space 80 ft.; Height 20 ft.; Crew 10; Cargo 200 tons; Cost 500,000 gp.

This magic ship has an ice keel and a coldfire engine, enabling it to move through ice at a speed of 80 feet.

Planar sails stored belowdecks allow the ship to travel to the Elemental Planes or other frigid plane or layer where ice dominates the landscape (for more information on planar sails, see Chapter 3: Vehicles in the Arms and Equipment Guide).

The ship has two ballistae mounted on rotating platforms, each of which can fire one 5d6 lightning bolt per round.

CRAMPONS

Crampons consist of a set of metal spikes and hooks that lash on to boots and gauntlets to assist in climbing or walking across icy surfaces.

While you wear crampons, you gain a +2 circumstance bonus on any Balance checks made to avoid slipping on an icy surface, and a +2 circumstance bonus on Climb checks. Crampons impose a -10 ft. penalty to speed when not walking on snow or ice.

FREEZE POWDER

Freeze powder looks like salt but is much finer to touch.

One vial of freeze powder sprinkled into any liquid is enough to instantly freeze solid 1 cubic foot of liquid.

If introduced into a larger body of water or liquid, the powder freezes into a 1-foot diameter ball of ice.

Sprinkled on a wet floor, a vial of freeze powder can coat a 10-foot-square area with ice.

Freeze powder is dangerous to eat; anyone foolish enough to swallow a vial of freeze powder takes 2d6 points of cold damage as the powder freeze-burns his mouth and throat. A successful DC 15 Fortitude saving throw halves the damage.

FROSTBITE SALVE

This pale yellow cream provides instant relief from frostbite damage.

It does not cure frostburn damage (see page 17), but temporarily suppresses up to 2 points of ability score damage caused by frostbite.

The salve's effectiveness lasts for just one hour, after which point the ability score damage suppressed by the salve returns.

FUR CLOTHING

Fur clothing consists of thick layers of animal furs designed to be worn over a regular set of clothing or armor.

Wearing fur clothing grants a +5 circumstance bonus on Fortitude saving throws against exposure to cold weather.

Fur clothing can be worn over a cold weather outfit; in this case the circumstance bonuses granted by each item stack, granting a total +10 circumstance bonus on Fortitude saving throws against exposure to cold weather.

Fur clothing is cumbersome to wear.

Although the furs do not provide an appreciable armor bonus, they do increase your total armor check penalty for any armor worn by 2 points.

HUT, PORTABLE

A portable hut consists of a wooden framework that can be quickly assembled into a hut-shaped frame that covers a 10-foot square.

The frame's base consists of several iron spikes that can be driven through holes in the frame to affix the hut frame to the ground; further stability is granted by several rope supports that extend out 15 feet from the hut's edge.

Once the frame is in place, you simply attach the leather and fur wrappings over the outside of the wall and lash them directly to the frame to finish building the hut.

A portable hut provides excellent shelter in the wilderness; assembling or disassembling a portable hut only takes 15 minutes of work.

A portable hut serves as an improvised shelter (see page 10).

ICE CHALK

Ice chalk comes in a variety of colors.

These waxy sticks can be used to make temporary marks on any icy surface, similar to how chalk can be used to mark slate or stone.

ICE SLED-WAGON

Huge vehicle; Handle Animal -2; Spd drawn (poor); Overall hp 60 (hardness 5); Overall AC 3; Ram 4d6; Face 15 ft. by 10 ft.; Height 5 ft.; Crew 1; Weight 400 lb., Cargo 2 tons; Cost 35 gp.

A wagon is open-topped, so the driver and any passengers gain no cover.

The most common dray creatures for the wagon are two heavy horses, which are strong enough to pull a fully loaded wagon at a speed of 35 feet.

However, in frostfell regions, wagons may also be drawn by a single woolly mammoth or four saber-toothed tigers at a speed of 40 feet.

An ice sled-wagon can also be equipped with a heavy catapult (adding 2 tons to the wagon's weight and eliminating the cargo capacity) or a light catapult (adding 1 ton to weight, leaving 1 ton of cargo space for ammunition).

ICEBERG

Colossal vehicle; Profession (sailor) -20; Spd 5 ft. (nautical clumsy); Overall hp 900 (hardness 8); Overall AC -6; Section hp 50 (hardness 8); Section AC 3; Ram 20d6+1d6 cold; Space 100 ft.; Height 200 ft.; Cargo 1,000 tons; Cost —. An iceberg is a massive chunk of freshwater ice that has broken free of a glacier and fallen into the sea. These towering behemoths reach as high as 200 feet or more in height above the waterline (with usually another 800 feet or more hidden below the surface). An iceberg moves with the current and is impossible to control without some sort of sail, engine, or other force. For the specific terrain features of an iceberg, see Iceberg Terrain, page 25.

MELT POWDER

Utilizing some of the same principles as freeze powder, melt powder causes ice it is sprinkled upon to instantly melt. One vial of melt powder is enough to melt 1 cubic foot of ice. Sprinkled on an icy surface of up to 10 square feet, a vial of melt powder makes a 1-inch-deep pool of water that quickly refreezes. Melt powder is bitter tasting, but only harmful to creatures with the cold subtype if it is eaten. Such creatures take 2d6 points of acid damage as the powder desiccates and dissolves their tissues; a successful DC 15 Fortitude save halves the damage.

POLAR SKIN

This dull white cream provides limited protection against cold-based damage. Polar skin becomes ineffective once it has absorbed 5 points of cold damage. Regardless of whether it absorbs any damage, polar skin loses its effectiveness 1 hour after application. Polar skin does not stack with magical protection from cold. Magical effects such as resist energy supersede the protection provided by polar skin. Applying polar skin takes 1 minute.

RAZOR ICE POWDER

This granular white powder can be sprinkled over any icy surface; one vial is enough to coat one 5-foot square. The area coated immediately grows hundreds of tiny razor-sharp crystals of ice; these crystals function as if the area had been covered with razor ice (see page 16). Razor ice is difficult to see; a successful DC 20 Survival check reveals the danger, otherwise, a victim won't realize the true nature of the painful ice until she treads upon it. A creature with the cold subtype can use a standard action to sprinkle a vial of razor ice powder on any single natural weapon it possesses; it grants a +1 enhancement bonus on slashing damage for that natural attack for one hour.

SAILING ICE SHIP

Colossal vehicle; Profession (sailor) +4; Spd ice wind × 30 ft. (average), snow wind × 20 ft. (poor); Overall AC -3; Section hp 50 (hardness 5); Section AC 3; Rigging 80 hp (hardness 0), AC 1; Ram 12d6; Face 80 ft. by 20 ft.; Height 10 ft. (draft 10 ft.); Crew 20; Cargo 150 tons (Spd wind × 15 ft. if 75 tons or more); Cost 10,000 gp. A sailing ice ship has runners that allow it to travel across fields of snow as well as sheets of ice. The deck has enough room for two light catapults or ballistae. The ship can be converted from ice to water travel or vice versa with four hours of work by a full crew.

SAILING ICE WARSHIP

Colossal vehicle; Profession (pilot) +2; Spd ice wind × 15 ft. (average), snow wind × 20 ft. (poor); Overall AC -3; Section hp 100 (hardness 5); Section AC 3; Rigging 80 hp (hardness 0), AC 1; Ram 15d6; Face 100 ft. by 20 ft.; Height 20 ft. (draft 15 ft.); SA Ramming prow; Crew 260 (80 rowers, 160 marines); Cargo 5 tons; Cost 25,000 gp. Used by the military forces of snow kingdoms or by glacial barbarian raiders, a sailing ice warship can bring devastation and death to vast expanses of ice and snow. An ice warship can accommodate two heavy catapults or four light catapults or ballistae. The ship can be converted from ice to water travel or vice versa with four hours of work by a full crew.

SKATES

Skates allow full movement across icy surfaces for anyone with at least 5 ranks of Balance, but cannot be used at all on any other terrain.

SKIS AND POLES

Skis allow full movement across snow and icy surfaces but cannot be used at all on any other terrain. Downhill speed can be as a run (×4) on slight grades or as a run (×5) on severe grades. It takes a full-round action to don or to remove skis.

SKYBERG

Colossal vehicle; Profession (pilot) -20; Spd fly wind × 20 ft. (clumsy); Overall hp 900 (hardness 8); Overall AC -6; Section hp 50 (hardness 8); Section AC 3; Ram 20d6+1d6 cold; Space 100 ft.; Height 200 ft.; Cargo 1,000 tons; Cost —. A skyberg resembles an iceberg in every way, except that it drifts along on wind currents rather than water currents. Skybergs reach 1,000 or more feet in height. For the specific terrain features of a skyberg, see Skyberg Terrain, page 26.

SLED

Large vehicle; Handle Animal +2; Spd drawn (clumsy); Overall hp 40 (hardness 5); Overall AC 4; Ram 3d6; Face 15 ft. by 5 ft.; Height 5 ft.; Crew 1; Weight 300 lb., Cargo 1 ton; Cost 20 gp.

Drawn across ice or snow, the sled is an almost entirely exposed structure. Eight riding dogs can pull the sled over ice or packed snow at a speed of 40 feet, even if it's fully loaded. Untracked snow slows the speed by one-half, and deep snow cuts it to one-quarter.

SNOW GOGGLES

These wooden goggles have a thin horizontal slit in the middle. They grant a +2 circumstance bonus on saving throws to resist blinding effects, including snow blindness, extremely bright light, or spells that target vision indirectly (such as sunburst but not blindness). While wearing snow goggles, you incur a -4 circumstance penalty on Spot and Search checks.

SNOWSHOES

These allow the wearer to move across snow and ice with increased speed. Snow of any depth is considered a minor impediment (see page 12). Snowshoes take 1 minute to don and a full-round action to remove.

WHALE GREASE

Whale grease is a thick clear grease fashioned from a combination of melted whale blubber and various powdered minerals and waxy plants. This foul-smelling stuff must be applied directly to the skin (taking 1 minute to do so) to be effective; once applied, the grease insulates the user from hypothermia, providing complete protection from hypothermia effects for as long as it lasts. Whale grease loses its effectiveness 1 hour after application. It is not water soluble, but can be quickly removed with alcohol. While worn, the pungent odor the grease gives off allows creatures with the scent ability to detect you at double normal range.

WINTER FULLCLOTH

This is a heavily quilted undergarment that is worn underneath regular clothing to protect the wearer against cold. Winter fullcloth is considered part of the cold weather outfit described in the Player's Handbook. If worn by itself, it grants a +1 circumstance bonus on Fortitude saving throws against exposure to cold weather.

WORG WARSLED

Huge vehicle; Handle Animal +2; Spd drawn (poor); Overall hp 100 (hardness 7); Overall AC 3; Ram 6d6; Face 15 ft. by 10 ft.; Height 5 ft.; Crew 1 (plus 3 passengers); Weight 900 lb.; Cargo 700 lb.; Cost 400 gp. Goblins in snowy climes use their worg allies to pull massive sleds covered with makeshift armor and spikes.

The driver and passengers aboard such a warsled gain cover behind a 2-inch barrier of steel and wood (hp 20, hardness 7). Two worgs abreast pull the sled at a speed of 35 feet.

***These items weigh one-quarter this amount when made for Small characters.

CRETCHWATER OIL

This green oil smells strongly of crushed green plants. Against living creatures, it acts as Small monstrous centipede poison (injury DC 11, 1d2 Dex/1d2 Dex), but against ghosts, it functions as greenblood oil (injury DC 13, 1 Con, 1d2 Con).

DARK ECTOPLASM

This gray-black material is made from corrupted ectoplasm and is the bane of many ghost abilities. It is a poison that affects only ghosts (injury DC 18, 1d6 Cha/1d6 Cha) and usually is enough to temporarily disable the more dangerous ghost abilities.

DESK CLOCK

This bronze, copper, and steel device was invented by a gnome ghost who spent over a hundred years developing it. It uses springs, gears, and weights to measure time, and if wound daily, it keeps time to within a few minutes each day. The machine is about the size of a human head and tends to be less accurate if moved about or left in any position other than upright.

ECTOPLASMIC STABILIZER

This fine blue powder is instantly absorbed by ectoplasm, altering its properties so that it lasts ten days instead of only 10 minutes (multiple doses applied to an item extend the duration proportionately).

One ounce of powder is required for each pound of ectoplasm.

It has no effect if used on a living creature made of ectoplasm, but can be used on the remains of a slain ectoplasmic creature.

EQUIPMENT, ECTOPLASMIC

This is a weapon, piece of armor, or other equipment created out of ectoplasm and magically or alchemically stabilized for 10 days.

Ectoplasmic equipment can also be stabilized in advance for 100 days for 50 gp per pound instead of 5 gp per pound.

Ectoplasmic equipment can be purchased as standard quality or masterwork quality.

GHOST DISGUISE KIT

This is like a normal disguise kit, except all the parts are alchemically treated to match the transparency and coloration of ghosts.

A ghost disguise kit can be used to disguise a living creature as a ghost, although at a -10 circumstance penalty on the Disguise check.

RAW ECTOPLASM

This is raw, unshaped ectoplasm, either slippery or sticky. It decays into nothingness after 10 minutes unless stabilized with magic or ectoplasmic stabilizer.

SHELLCRAFT MANIKIN

This humanoid creation of metal and wood roughly resembles a tailor's dummy, with articulated limbs and head.

The unusual materials in its construction allow an incorporeal creature to enter the manikin (a standard action) and move it in a manner similar to how some ghosts can possess bodies, allowing a ghost to carry material objects even when outside the Manifest Ward.

Leaving the manikin is a standard action.

A ghost uses its own ability scores when inhabiting a manikin.

However, because a manikin is less efficient than a true body, a ghost operating a manikin takes penalties similar to those from wearing armor.

An inhabited manikin has a maximum Dex bonus of +2 and an armor check penalty of -5.

A ghost proficient in medium armor ignores these penalties.

A manikin can wear armor just as a normal character can; a ghost inhabiting such a manikin uses the smaller maximum Dex bonus of the two and adds together the armor check penalties.

If the ghost is subject to attacks that would normally not harm an incorporeal creature, the attacks affect the manikin instead.

Attacks that do not harm the ghost because of its incorporeal miss chance do affect the manikin.

A manikin may be built in the form of a dwarf, elf, gnome, half-orc, halfling, or human.

A manikin has hardness 7 and 50 hit points if it is Medium-size, or 35 hit points if it is Small.

SOUL VENOM

This alchemical liquid smells like incense.

Soul venom is harmless to living creatures, but acts as Large monstrous scorpion venom (injury DC 18, 1d6 Str/1d6 Str) against manifested ghosts.

TEREPPEKIAN BLANK BOOK

This is a book made of 25 pages of Tereppekian paper, folded, cut, and bound into a soft leather cover to make a book with 100 blank pages.

TEREPPEKIAN PAPER

The people of Tereppek have developed a method of making paper from vegetable pulp, which is cheaper and faster than the cloth-fiber paper created elsewhere.

A single piece of paper is about four times the size of a single page from a spellbook.

TEREPPEKIAN SPELLBOOK

This is a spellbook made of extra-thick paper and bound in a stiff leather cover.

It otherwise is exactly like a normal parchment-page spellbook.

WRAITHWEED

Found only in far-off Tereppek, wraithweed is a nonmagical plant.

In the past few months, a select few have discovered that when this plant is alchemically treated, powdered, and then dissolved in liquid, it becomes a strange mixture that grants ghosts euphoria and relaxation.

Wraithweed is addictive to ghosts, who must make a Fortitude saving throw (DC 14) each time it is used or become hooked on the substance.

Once addicted, a ghost must make a Fortitude save (DC 14) every day or take 1d2 points of Strength damage and 1d2 points of Constitution damage (on the second day after the most recent use and every day after that, the DC is 19).

A failed save also means the addicted ghost flies into a fit of rage at a random time during the day, attacking anything in sight for 1d8 rounds and then becoming fatigued for 1 hour.

If the character succeeds on two of these saving throws in a row, he is no longer addicted and no longer needs to make recurring saving throws against the drug unless he takes it again.

The most terrible aspect of wraithweed is the long-term effects of addiction.

Over time, the drug breaks down the ectoplasm of an addicted ghost, turning it into an incorporeal undead creature.

A character reduced to 0 Strength because of wraithweed becomes an undead shadow.

One reduced to 0 Constitution because of wraithweed becomes a wraith.

Lesser restoration and restoration can combat the ability damage from the drug, but not the addiction.

A remove disease spell instantly cures a ghost's wraithweed addiction, but not the ability damage.

Greater restoration or heal cures the addiction and restores all ability damage it caused.

Through the influence of the Yisa-khardomas, wraithweed has been declared illegal.

Possession of it is a minor crime (100 gp fine), while distribution is a major crime resulting in banishment.

*Ability drain, not ability damage.

†Or ingestion DC 9; see text.

BLOODWINE

This thick, crimson positoxin includes garlic in its creation, making it particularly harmful to vampires and other undead with a vulnerability to garlic.

Such creatures take a -2 penalty on their Fortitude saves to resist damage.

Though normally delivered by injury, it can also be consumed by a living creature to deliver it to a vampire or similar blood-draining creature via ingestion.

A single dose, if consumed by a living creature, remains in the bloodstream for 12 hours.

Any undead creature draining blood from a creature that has ingested bloodwine must make a Fortitude save as if it had been injured by a weapon bearing the positoxin, though the save DC drops to 9.

BONESHARD PASTE

This positoxin includes bone fragments in its recipe, giving it a pale color.

BRITTLEBONE

This unguent must be spread over a set of bones before animation as a skeleton.

The ointment reduces the skeleton's natural armor by 2 points (to a minimum of 0), but when the skeleton is destroyed, its bones splinter and fly apart, sending shards in all directions.

Any creature within the skeleton's reach takes 1 point of piercing damage per HD of the skeleton (Reflex DC 15 half; minimum 1 point).

Spreading brittlebone over a creature's bones requires a full-round action.

A single flask of the substance is sufficient for a single creature of Medium size or smaller.

A Large creature requires two flasks, a Huge creature four flasks, a Gargantuan creature eight flasks, and a Colossal creature sixteen flasks.

TABLE 5-1: SPECIAL ITEMS AND ALCHEMICAL SUBSTANCES

Item	Cost	Weight	Craft DC
Brittlebone	30 gp	8 oz.	DC 20 (alchemy)
Bullet, priest's	20 gp	10 oz.	DC 15 (glassblowing)
Embalming fire	20 gp	8 oz.	DC 20 (alchemy)
Ghostoil	50 gp	1 lb.	DC 25 (alchemy)
Holy water sprinkler	62 gp	8 lb.	as weapon +5 (weaponsmithing)
Liquid night	150 gp	8 oz.	DC 25 (alchemy)

BULLET, PRIEST'S

These hollow glass sling bullets are filled with holy water. When they strike a target, they immediately shatter, dousing the target with holy water.

Undead and evil outsiders take 1d4 points of damage from the holy water in addition to the normal damage from the sling bullet.

To hold sufficient holy water, these bullets must be larger than normal, imposing a -2 penalty on the attack roll.

These bullets are useless against incorporeal creatures (since they won't shatter on impact) unless they also have the ghost touch special property or some other ability to affect incorporeal creatures.

Unholy versions of these bullets are also available.

CELESTIAL ESSENCE

This viscous golden substance seems almost to shine with an inner radiance.

EMBALMING FIRE

This bitter-smelling liquid must be poured over a corpse and allowed to soak for at least 1 minute before the corpse is animated as a zombie.

Once animated, if the zombie takes even a single point of damage, it bursts into blue flame for 1 minute.

This fire does no damage to the zombie, but its attacks during that time deal an additional 1d6 points of fire damage.

Spreading embalming fire over a creature's body requires a full-round action.

A single flask of the substance is sufficient for a single creature of Medium size or smaller.

A Large creature requires two flasks, a Huge creature four flasks, a Gargantuan creature eight flasks, and a Colossal creature sixteen flasks.

GHOSTOIL

This clear oil has a slight tint of gray, and strange, wispy forms seem to swirl through it.

When applied to a weapon, ghostoil allows it to affect incorporeal creatures normally for the next 2 rounds.

Applying ghostoil to a weapon of any size is a fullround action that provokes attacks of opportunity.

One flask of ghostoil contains enough liquid to coat one weapon of Medium size or smaller.

A Large weapon requires two flasks, a Huge creature four flasks, a Gargantuan weapon eight flasks, and a Colossal weapon sixteen flasks.

GRAVEDUST

This gray-brown powder derives its name from its resemblance to the grime common to tombs and other long-enclosed areas.

HOLY WATER SPRINKLER

The oversized, hollow head of this heavy mace is actually a reservoir that holds one pint of liquid (typically holy or unholy water).

Any hit by the holy water sprinkler also affects the target as if it had been within the splash radius of a thrown flask of holy water (1 point of damage to undead creatures and evil outsiders for holy water, or to good outsiders for unholy water).

A full reservoir has eight uses.

Alternatively, the wielder can choose to release the entire reservoir with a successful hit.

Treat this as if the target had been hit directly by a flask of holy (or unholy) water, but subtract 1 point of damage for each use already dispensed from the reservoir (for instance, a reservoir only 5/8 full would deal 2d4–3 points of damage).

There is no splash effect from such a hit.

Filling the reservoir is a standard action that provokes attacks of opportunity.

LICHBANE

This bone-white unguent is equally dangerous to all spellcasting undead, as well as to those that depend on mental ability scores for their special attacks.

The initial damage is permanent drain.

LIQUID MORTALITY

This potent oil is thought by most undead creatures to be mere myth.

Unlike other positoxins, it can reduce the target's ability score to 0.

Any undead creature whose Strength is reduced to 0 by this positoxin is utterly destroyed.

LIQUID NIGHT

This dark, sticky fluid provides a daylight-sensitive undead creature with temporary protection from the sun's deadly rays.

It allows the creature to ignore any vulnerability to sunlight for a full hour.

If subjected to a spell or magical effect that would cause extra damage to an undead creature that is vulnerable to sunlight, the creature is treated as not having that vulnerability (however, this also burns away the liquid night, ending the protection against either mundane or magical sunlight).

Liquid night has a distinct musky odor of moonflower (one of its ingredients).

Spreading liquid night over a creature's body requires a fullround action.

A single flask of the substance is sufficient for a single creature of Medium size or smaller.

A Large creature requires two flasks, a Huge creature four flasks, a Gargantuan creature eight flasks, and a Colossal creature sixteen flasks.

SUNLIGHT OIL

A thin, slippery liquid, sunlight oil lasts only 24 hours in conditions other than bright light.

LORDS OF DARKNESS (3.0)

FLASHPELLET

You can throw this small alchemical bead as a grenadelike weapon (see Grenadelike Weapon Attacks in the Player's Handbook).

When it strikes a hard surface or is struck sharply, it ignites with a bright flash.

Creatures within a 10-foot radius must succeed at Reflex saves (DC 15) or be dazzled.

A dazzled creature suffers a –1 penalty on attack rolls.

The creature recovers in 1 minute.

Sightless creatures are not affected by the flash.

The Alchemy DC to make a single flashpellet is 25.

GLOWPOWDER

This luminescent dust clings to surfaces and creatures, making them glow.

The grains of powder glow about as brightly as sparks from a campfire.

They don't provide illumination, but they are noticeable. When sprinkled on an object or surface, the powder helps reveal edges and details, granting a +2 circumstance bonus on Search checks made on the treated area.

A creature sprinkled with the powder is likewise easier to detect: Spot checks to see the creature gain a +2 circumstance bonus.

An invisible creature sprinkled with the dust has only one-half concealment (20% miss chance instead of 50%).

Once applied, the dust clings and glows for 1 minute.

A creature sprinkled with the powder can wash it off by taking a full-round action.

The powder usually comes in a tube that allows the contents to be blown or shaken out.

Blowing out the powder is a standard action that draws an attack of opportunity and creates a 10-foot cone.

If carefully sprinkled, the powder can cover 125 square feet (five 5-foot squares).

It takes a full-round action to shake out enough powder to cover a 5-foot square.

The Alchemy DC to make one tube of glowpowder is 20.

HAUNSPER

Description: Named after a wizard from Neverwinter, haunspeir is sold as a tobaccolike paste, or sometimes dried and compacted into pill form.

It is used by wizards and others who need to rapidly boost their Intelligence.

Type: Ingested DC 12.

Initial Effect: 1d4 points of damage.

Secondary Effect: 1d4+1 enhancement bonus to Intelligence for 1d10+15 minutes, plus side effects.

Price: 50 gp.

Side Effects: All slashing and piercing attacks against the target deal an additional 1 point of damage while the drug is in effect.

Overdose: If more than one dose is taken in a 24-hour period, the target immediately suffers 2d4 points of damage (no save), and the side effect is doubled.

Addiction: Low.

HEALING SALVE

Rubbing this stinky green paste into wounds promotes rapid healing.

Applying the salve is a full-round action.

One dose cures 1d8 points of damage to a living creature.

Only one dose may be applied per round, and there is no limit on how many salves can be applied over time.

The Alchemy DC to make one application of healing salve is 25.

If you have 5 or more ranks in Profession (herbalist), you get a +2 synergy bonus on checks to craft it.

JHUILD (“THRALLWINE”)

Description: This dark reddish brew is made in Thesk from certain grapes, fruits, and herbs grown near the Surmarsh. Slaveholders and overseers use it to strengthen captives engaged in hard labor while dulling their wills and minds.

Type: Ingested DC 15.

Initial Effect: 1 point of temporary Wisdom damage.

Secondary Effect: The imbiber gains a +2 alchemical bonus to Strength for 1d3 hours.

Price: 6 gp.

Side Effects: A creature under the effect of jhuild is fearful and extremely susceptible to suggestion.

The imbiber is shaken while under the drug's influence, and the DC of an Intimidate check used against the imbiber is reduced to 0 + target's Hit Dice.

Overdose: None.

Addiction: None.

KAMMARTH (MAGICAL)

Description: Sold as a powder or a beige-colored jelly, kammarth is made from the combination of a rare forest root and an Underdark fungus.

It causes a temporary increase in speed and reaction time.

Type: Contact DC 10 or ingested DC 13.

Initial Effect: Act as if under the effects of an expeditious retreat spell for the next 1d4+1 minutes.

Secondary Effect: +2 alchemical bonus to Dexterity for the duration of the drug's effect.

Price: 80 gp.

Side Effects: Kammarth is a potent stimulant and gives its user a sense of boundless energy and well-being.

Overdose: If more than one dose is taken in an 8-hour period, the user suffers 1d4 points of damage and is paralyzed for 2d4 minutes.

Using it more than three times in any 24-hour period causes 4d4 points of damage and paralyzes the user for 2d4 hours.

Addiction: Medium.

KATAKUDA (“DRAGONSKIN”) (MAGICAL)

Description: Imported from distant Kara-Tur, this drug was developed by an order of fighting monks of that land.

It is a brown paste that hardens the user's skin.

Because of its side effects, it was rarely used for training and saved for times when the monks expect a great battle.

Type: Contact DC 18.

Initial Effect: None.

Secondary Effect: User gains +3 natural armor bonus for 30 minutes.

Price: 100 gp.

Side Effects: When the secondary effect ends, the user suffers wracking pains and spasms, which cause 1d4+1 points of temporary Dexterity damage.

Overdose: A second dose taken within a tenday of the first dose provides only a +2 natural armor bonus.

Addiction: None.

MORDAYN VAPOR (“DREAMMIST”)

Description: Made of roughly ground leaves of a rare herb found in southern forests, mordayn is so potent that it is taken by steeping a small amount in hot water, and then inhaling the vapors of the resultant tea.

Raw mordayn powder and mordayn-tainted water are deadly poison; taking the powder directly or drinking the water produces an immediate overdose.

Dreammist is renowned for the beautiful visions it induces, and the deadly peril of its sinister embrace.

Type: Inhaled DC 17.

Initial Effect: Exotic visions of incredible beauty enthrall the user for the next 1d20+10 minutes.

During this time the user has a 50% chance to lose any action he attempts, as described in the bestow curse spell.

Secondary Effect: 1d4 points of temporary Con damage and 1d4 points of temporary Wisdom damage.

Price: 200 gp.

Side Effects: The visions of a dreammist user are incredibly beautiful and poignant.

His normal life seems drab and futile in comparison, and he aches to experience the transcendent beauty of his drug-induced dreams again.

When the dose wears off, the user must attempt a Will save (DC 17) or fall under a compulsion to do whatever is necessary to repeat the dreammist dose (treat this as a compulsion similar to that of a suggestion spell).

This compulsion lasts for 1d4 hours before fading.

Overdose: If two doses are taken within the space of an hour, or if raw mordayn powder or mordayn tea are ingested, the drug is a deadly poison (Ingested DC 17, 1d10 Con/1d10 Con).

Mordayn vapor addicts often throw out the tea as soon as they inhale and make sure that only one dose is available at a time in order to make sure they cannot overdose on the deadly drug.

Addiction: High.

ORUGHEN (“PHANTOMDUST”)

Description: This drug is made by refining rare cacti found in the alkaline sands of Azulduth, the Lake of Salt.

It is a gray, fine-grained dust normally carried in small paper envelopes.

It can temporarily blind and disable anyone unfortunate enough to inhale a pinch, and is popular with rogues and assassins who want a way to quickly discourage those who interfere with their work.

Phantomdust is normally employed by casting a pinch in an opponent's face.

Treat this as a standard action, melee touch attack; if the attack is successful, the target must make his Fortitude save or suffer the effects.

If the attack misses, the dose dissipates harmlessly.

Multiple doses of oruighen have no additional effect on the victim until the effects from the first dose wear off.

Type: Inhaled DC 14.

Initial Effect: The victim is blinded for 2d4 minutes and suffers from an extremely painful stinging in the nostrils and eyes.

The pain results in a -2 penalty on attack rolls, skill checks, and saving throws in addition to the penalties associated with blindness.

Secondary Effect: None.

Price: 20 gp.

Side Effects: None.

Overdose: None.

Addiction: None.

PANAEOLO (MAGICAL)

Description: This herb was well known in the time of Netheril, but its secret was lost when that empire fell. With the return of the City of Shade, the descendants of the Netherese told the Red Wizards of the herb's power. The Thayans have rescued small amounts of it from oases in Anauroch and have begun to sell the drug in small quantities.

Panaeolo's leathery-tasting leaves attune the user to the Weave, and boost the power of arcane spells.

Type: Ingested DC 8.

Initial Effect: None.

Secondary Effect: The DC of all arcane spells the user casts increases by +2 for the next 1d4 hours.

Price: 250 gp.

Side Effects: 1d6 points of temporary Charisma damage.

Overdose: If a second dose of panaeolo is taken within an hour of the first, the increase to the user's arcane spell DCs becomes +3 but the user suffers 2d8 points of temporary Charisma damage.

Additional doses within an hour do not increase the DCs any more but still cause the Charisma damage.

Addiction: Low.

PHANTOM INK

This substance is similar to disappearing ink (described in the FORGOTTEN REALMS Campaign Setting).

Messages written with this ink vanish from view at the end of an hour and thereafter can be read only under the right kind of light.

The usual types specify one of the following: firelight (which includes candles, torches, and other flames), magical light (which includes the dancing lights, light, and continual flame spells), moonlight, and starlight (this last usually isn't discernible unless the reader has darkvision). The Alchemy DC to make one vial of phantom ink is 20.

REDFLOWER LEAVES

Description: These crushed leaves of a tiny red bog flower native to Cormyr, Sembia, and the Dragon Coast are known for their ability to improve hand-to-eye coordination.

Type: Ingested DC 10.

Initial Effect: None.

Secondary Effect: As a move-equivalent action, the user may focus his attention upon a particular creature. If he follows that action with an attack against that creature, he gains a +4 competence bonus on the attack roll. This ability lasts 10 minutes.

Price: 300 gp.

Side Effects: None.

Overdose: Taking a second dose before the first has worn off causes the user to be nauseated for 1d4×10 minutes.

Addiction: Low.

RHUL (“BATTLEWINE”)

Description: A spicy red fluid with a bitter aftertaste, rhul causes increased physical prowess and aggression at the expense of caution and agility.

Type: Ingested DC 15.

Initial Effect: User gains a +4 alchemical bonus to Strength and Constitution, but suffers a -2 penalty to AC.

This lasts 1 minute.

Secondary Effect: User is fatigued.

Taking another dose of rhul causes the fatigue to go away for 1 minute (in addition to the drug's normal effects).

Two or more doses of rhul-induced fatigue cause the user to be exhausted.

Price: 50 gp.

Side Effects: Due to stimulation of the scent and tactile nerves, while the initial effect is functioning, the user prefers to engage in close battle.

If the user is given the choice of fighting in melee or with ranged attacks, he must make a Will saving throw (DC 16) or choose the melee attack.

Overdose: If more than one dose of rhul is taken in a period of 1 hour, the user takes 1d4 points of temporary Intelligence and Wisdom damage.

Addiction: Medium.

SAKRASH ("TWILIGHT MIND") (MAGICAL)

Description: This sweet, oily concoction of wines, rare tree saps, and certain herbs is only manufactured in Thay and Mulhorand.

It protects the user's mind and thoughts.

Type: Ingested DC 11.

Initial Effect: User is dazzled for 1 minute.

Secondary Effect: Cannot be detected by effects that read or alter thoughts (such as detect thoughts, zone of truth, and modify memory) or emotions (such as emotion or fear).

This lasts 1d4 hours.

Price: 500 gp.

Side Effects: Because the user's thoughts cannot be read, attempts to communicate with the user mentally (such as with Rary's telepathic bond, or the empathic link of a familiar to its master) fail, even if the user is willing.

Overdose: None.

Addiction: None.

SEZARAD ROOT

Description: The sezarad plant is a broad, vivid flower with a short, brittle root.

When chewed, the root breaks into soft splinters in the manner of a carrot.

It increases vitality.

Type: Ingested DC 14.

Initial Effect: User gains 1d8 temporary hit points.

Secondary Effect: User gains 1d8 temporary hit points.

These overlap (do not stack) with any other temporary hit points from sezarad root.

All temporary hit points from sezarad root wear off 10 minutes after it is ingested.

Price: 75 gp.

Side Effects: 1d4 points of temporary Wisdom damage.

Overdose: None.

Addiction: Low.

SUREGRIP

This gluey substance improves your grip, granting a +2 circumstance bonus on any check that deals with holding onto something, including Climb checks and grappling. When applied to a rope, it confers a +2 circumstance bonus on Use Rope checks that involve tying knots or binding creatures or objects.

Applied to the soles of one's footwear or feet, it confers a +2 circumstance bonus on Balance checks made to avoid slipping.

Once applied, suregrip lasts 10 minutes.

The Alchemy DC to make one application of suregrip is 20.

TEKKIL

Description: The fat red leaf of this succulent swamp plant releases a milky juice when chewed.

The juice is an analgesic, and is sometimes used by people suffering from extreme or chronic pain.

Addicts who seek to numb their senses and submerge themselves in a drug-induced stupor use it in greater doses.

Type: Ingested DC 9.

Initial Effect: None.

Secondary Effect: The user becomes numbed to pain for 1d4 hours.

Any attack, saving throw, or skill check penalties caused by extreme pain (such as from a symbol of pain) are reduced by 1.

The user also gains damage reduction 1/- against subdual damage only.

Price: 5 gp.

Side Effects: Tekkil causes lassitude and lethargy.

While the drug is in effect, the user suffers a -2 penalty on initiative checks.

Overdose: A second dose taken while the first dose is still in effect causes a numbing stupor for 2d4 hours.

The user acts as if under the effect of a slow spell until the stupor wears off.

Addiction: Medium.

WITCHWEED STICK

This paste, which smells like tobacco, is refined from the stalks and leaves of the witchweed plant.

It is packed into thick paper tubes about the size of a smokestick.

When ignited it creates a 10-foot cube of light smoke that provides no concealment.

Anyone attempting to cast arcane spells within the smoke must succeed at a Concentration check as if casting defensively (DC 15 + spell level).

If the check fails, the spell is lost.

The smoke loses its alchemical abilities after 5 rounds, and dissipates normally.

The alchemy DC to make one stick of witchweed is 20.

ZIRAN ("BLOODFAST")

Description: A bitter white powder usually compressed into a tablet, ziran is refined from several Underdark fungi by the drow.

Its secret has reached the surface, and some alchemists have begun to cultivate farms of the appropriate mushrooms.

Type: Ingested DC 17.

Initial Effect: User is dazed for 1 round.

Secondary Effect: User gains a +2 alchemical bonus to Dexterity for 1d3 hours.

Price: 100 gp.

Side Effects: When the secondary effect ends, the user suffers 2 points of temporary Constitution damage.

Ziran users describe a sense of detachment or out-of-body experience, feeling as if they're watching themselves act from a distance.

Overdose: If a second dose is taken within 24 hours of the first, the user suffers an additional 2 points of temporary Constitution damage.

Addiction: High.

AMARATHA

Also known as shieldstone, amaratha is a soft, greenish white or very pale green, sparkling type of jewel.

It is most often found in exposed canyon walls or in the Underdark.

An amaratha included in any wand whose effect provides resistance or immunity to acid, cold, electricity, fire, or sonic energy adds +2 to the effective caster level of the effect.

Material Cost: 5,000 gp.

BELJURIL

Beljurils, also known as fireflashes, are large gems (typically 4 inches in diameter).

Normally a deep, pleasant, sea water green, they periodically blaze with a sparkling, winking, flashing light. This discharge is pleasantly eye-catching in a candlelit great hall or a lantern-lit dancing grove, but in a dark chamber or the murky night, it is dazzling.

A beljuril included in any wand with a spell that has the electricity descriptor increases the save DC against the wand's effect by +2.

If no saving throw applies or is allowed, it instead adds +2 to the effective caster level of the effect.

Material Cost: 5,000 gp.

BLACK OPAL

Black opal is a greenish type of opal with black mottling and gold flecks, usually found in ancient hot springs or their dry remnants.

The Faerûn phrase "black as a black opal" means, effectively, not very black (or evil) at all.

It is used to describe good-hearted rogues and similar individuals who would be embarrassed by praise.

A black opal included in any wand with a spell that has the force descriptor increases the save DC against the wand's effect by +1.

If no saving throw applies or is allowed, it instead adds +1 to the effective caster level of the effect.

Material Cost: 1,000 gp.

BLACK SAPPHIRE

Black sapphire is a rare variety of sapphire that is a deep, rich black with yellow or white highlights.

These jewels come mostly from the South, in particular the Great Rift, since they are most plentiful in the Deep Realm of the dwarves and are brought up through the Great Rift to the surface world for trading.

A black sapphire included in any wand with a spell that has the darkness descriptor increases the save DC against the wand's effect by +2.

If no saving throw applies or is allowed, it instead adds +2 to the effective caster level of the effect.

Material Cost: 5,000 gp.

DARKBERRY

These small, purple berries grow deep in hidden clumps in the many forests surrounding the Sea of Fallen Stars.

Only a few berries manage to ripen from a bush each fall, and they become more rare every year.

Darkberries actually contain shadowstuff within their skins.

When a ripe darkberry is broken or crushed, it creates a 5-foot-diameter circle of blackness for 2 rounds.

DIAMOND

Diamonds are hard, translucent stones that can be clear (appearing blue-white), rich blue, yellow, or pink, among other hues.

A diamond included in any wand with a conjuration (healing) spell adds +2 to the effective caster level of the effect.

Material Cost: 5,000 gp.

EMERALD

A brilliant green beryl, the emerald is usually cut square. An emerald included in any wand with an enchantment spell increases the save DC against the wand's effect by +2. If no saving throw applies or is allowed, it instead adds +2 to the effective caster level of the effect.

Material Cost: 5,000 gp.

FAIRY DUST

Fey creatures, such as sprites, make fairy dust from their own shed hair and skin and give it to those who please them.

It cannot be created by any known alchemical process. Fairy dust has a soft, golden glow, visible only in darkness. It sparkles in normal light.

If an ounce of fairy dust is added to the material component for any illusion spell, it adds +1 to the saving throw DC.

FELSUL FLOWER OIL

The felsul tree seems to favor cold and poor soil, and in many rocky places felsuls provide the only tree cover to be seen.

Felsuls grow on crags, cliff edges, and clefts where few other trees can find purchase.

They are gnarled, twisted trees whose wood crumbles to the touch and is of a dusty cinnamon brown to deep brown hue.

When the trees flower in early spring (and not all trees flower every year), the crushed petals can be made into a fragrant perfume that adds a +1 competence bonus on any Charisma-based checks made to persuade another (such as Bluff, Diplomacy, or Intimidate) for 10 minutes.

A single ounce of the oil provides 10 uses, and a typical tree provides 1d4–1 (minimum 0) ounces of perfume per year.

FIRE OPAL

Brilliant orange-red gems, fire opals are usually uniform in hue or contain golden or greenish flecks.

They are most often found near active hot springs and geyser activity.

Fire opals are an essential part of producing helms of brilliance.

A fire opal included in any wand with a spell that has the fire descriptor increases the save DC against the wand's effect by +1.

If no saving throw applies or is allowed, it instead adds +1 to the effective caster level of the effect.

Material Cost: 1,000 gp.

FOG ROCK

These rocks wash up periodically on the shores of the Nelanther Isles and westernmost shores of the Moonshae Isles.

When dropped into fresh water, they produce mist that fills a 10-foot cube (providing one-half concealment to anyone within), which dissipates normally.

Salt water has no special effect on them, but they lose their ability if not kept damp with brine.

JACINTH

Also called hyacinth or flamegem, this fiery orange stone is a relative of the sapphire and other corundum stones. At the heart of every jacinth a tiny flame flickers and dances—not enough to illuminate surroundings, but enough to be seen from afar.

This property of the stone forms the basis for many splendid cloaks and gowns worn by wealthy nobles.

A jacinth included in any wand with a spell that has the fire descriptor increases the save DC against the wand's effect by +2.

If no saving throw applies or is allowed, it instead adds +2 to the effective caster level of the effect.

Material Cost: 5,000 gp.

JASMAL

Jasmal is a durable, very hard gem found in small veins or, very rarely, larger seam deposits in the Thunder Peaks and the Spine of the World mountains.

When polished, jasmals catch sunlight or torchlight and give off haloes of amber light, although they themselves remain transparent and colorless.

Hard enough to hold a cutting edge, jasmals are often worked into clasps on cloaks or tunics.

A jasmal included in any wand that grants an enhancement bonus to weapons or armor adds +1 to the effective caster level of the effect.

Material Cost: 1,000 gp.

KING'S TEAR

Sometimes called frozen tears or lich weepings, these very rare stones are clear, teardrop-shaped, smooth-surfaced, and awesomely hard; in fact, none have as yet been fractured, cut, or chipped, even by hammer and forge.

The origin of these stones is unknown, but folklore believes they are the crystallized tears of long-dead necromancer kings and queens.

A king's tear included in any wand with a divination spell increases the save DC against the wand's effect by +2.

If no saving throw applies or is allowed, it instead adds +2 to the effective caster level of the effect.

Material Cost: 5,000 gp.

MOONBAR

Moonbar crystals are pearly white, opaque gems found in desert and tropical areas of Toril.

Moonbars are naturally large and rectangular with curved corners.

The largest known moonbar serves as the lid of an unknown king's casket in a barrow on the Trollmoors and is almost 7 feet long, but most of these gems are approximately 1 foot long and 4 inches wide.

A moonbar included in any wand with a conjuration (calling) spell increases the save DC against the wand's effect by +1.

If no saving throw applies or is allowed, it instead adds +1 to the effective caster level of the effect.

Material Cost: 1,000 gp.

MULE POLLEN

A bright yellow flower, of the daisy variety, blooms in early spring upon the High Moor and in the grassy foothills of some mountain ranges.

When inhaled, the pollen grants a +2 bonus to the character's Strength but inflicts a -2 penalty to his Intelligence and Wisdom.

The effects last for 1d4×10 minutes.

Mule pollen is mildly addictive.

Each time a character inhales mule pollen, he must make a Fortitude save (DC 12).

If he fails, he is effectively fatigued whenever he is not under the influence of mule pollen.

This addiction can be removed with neutralize poison.

OPAL

Opaque, smooth gems, opals are pale blue with green and gold mottling.

They are related in type to fire and black opals, but are only slightly more common.

Opals are used in a number of magic items and spells, including helms of brilliance.

An opal included in any wand with an enchantment (charm) spell increases the save DC against the wand's effect by +1.

If no saving throw applies or is allowed, it instead adds +1 to the effective caster level of the effect.

Material Cost: 1,000 gp.

ORBLÉN

Orblén crystals yield deep golden gems of large size that can be faceted or cabochon cut.

The hue of this gem has earned it the nickname honeystone, and it is much favored in the Sword Coast North.

Though found in large masses, it is quite rare.

The largest known honeystone in existence, a huge hunk of rock 6 inches in diameter, is in the possession of the royal family of Cormyr.

An orblén included in any wand with a conjuration (creation) spell increases the save DC against the wand's effect by +1.

If no saving throw applies or is allowed, it instead adds +1 to the effective caster level of the effect.

Material Cost: 1,000 gp.

ORL

A gem believed unique to the northern half of Faerûn, orls are found only in blue caves such as those at Wheloon.

Orls occur in the softest rock as sharp-edged, spindle-shaped, symmetrical crystals.

These crystals are of red, tawny, or orange hue, but red-hued orls are the most valued.

Some orl fanciers prefer to wear the uncut, natural crystals rather than faceted cuttings, but most orls are finished into faceted forms.

An orl included in any wand with a spell that has the chaotic descriptor, or any spell that grants a luck bonus, increases the save DC against the wand's effect by +1.

If no saving throw applies or is allowed, it instead adds +1 to the effective caster level of the effect.

Material Cost: 1,000 gp.

RAVENAR

Ravenar, a glossy, black variety of tourmaline that is also called schorl, is highly valued in the northern half of Faerûn.

The gem is less prized in other lands, where it carries little value.

Ravenar is commonly used for inlay work on daggers, buckles, and the like.

A ravenar included in any wand with a spell that has the sonic descriptor increases the save DC against the wand's effect by +1.

If no saving throw applies or is allowed, it instead adds +1 to the effective caster level of the effect.

Material Cost: 1,000 gp.

RED HELMTHORN BERRY

Most berries of the helmthorn tree are tart in flavor and indigo in color.

Rarely, however, a sprig of scarlet-hued berries sprout from a branch.

The effect of a goodberry spell cast upon red helmthorn berries lasts for one day longer than normal.

RED TEAR

Also called Tempus's weeping, these teardrop-shaped, glossy crystals of vivid cherry-red, blood-crimson, or fiery orange hue are found in deep mines or gorge walls where old rock has been exposed.

Legends say they are the tears of lovers shed for their beloveds who were slain in battle, stained red by the spilled blood of the fallen.

A red tear included in any wand with a transmutation spell increases the save DC against the wand's effect by +1.

If no saving throw applies or is allowed, it instead adds +1 to the effective caster level of the effect.

Material Cost: 1,000 gp.

ROGUE STONE

Rogue stones are small stones of a shifting, rainbow-colored, iridescent hue.

Their fluid shades of color appear almost liquid under normal sunlight.

Rogue stones are extremely rare and always found as single stones among others in stone hoards or in cold regions or underwater in swamps; no more than one is ever found in one place at one time.

No one has as yet managed to determine in what sort of rock they are most likely to be found.

Rogue stones cleave into natural facets, and it is these surfaces that are iridescent.

Some primitive human tribes believe rogue stones to be the sentient essences of dragons or mighty heroes, but sages hold this view to be folk nonsense.

A rogue stone included in any wand with a spell that has the chaotic or teleportation descriptor increases the save DC against the wand's effect by +2.

If no saving throw applies or is allowed, it instead adds +2 to the effective caster level of the effect.

Material Cost: 5,000 gp.

RUBY

This clear to deep crimson red corundum stone is highly valued because of its sparkling shine and vivid hues.

Folklore generally holds rubies to be lucky objects.

A ruby included in any wand with an evocation spell increases the save DC against the wand's effect by +2.

If no saving throw applies or is allowed, it instead adds +2 to the effective caster level of the effect.

Material Cost: 5,000 gp.

SAPPHIRE

Sapphire is a brilliant blue, translucent corundum mineral. Sapphires vary from a clear, pale blue to a radiant azure.

A sapphire included in any wand with a conjuration (summoning) spell increases the save DC against the wand's effect by +1.

If no saving throw applies or is allowed, it instead adds +1 to the effective caster level of the effect.

Material Cost: 1,000 gp.

SHADOWTOP TORCH

The wood of the shadowtop tree burns more slowly (and cleanly) than normal wood.

A torch of shadowtop wood burns for 2 hours and gives off very little smoke.

SILVERBARK SAP

The sap of the silverbark tree is clear and slightly sticky.

It acts as a (minor) natural antitoxin, granting anyone who consumes at least one ounce a +2 alchemical bonus on Fortitude saving throws against poison for 1 hour.

A typical silverbark tree can be harvested of 2d4 ounces of sap per year.

SLEEPWEED POD

The pods of the sleepweed plant, which appear similar to those of milkweed plants, contain a sleep-inducing mold within them.

When a dried sleepweed pod bursts or is broken open, it releases these spores.

Striking a target with a thrown sleepweed pod requires a ranged touch attack (range increment 5 feet).

A target struck by a sleepweed pod must make a Will save (DC 12) or fall into a slumber for 1 minute.

STAR RUBY

A variation of the ruby (red corundum), this stone is less translucent than a normal ruby and has a white star highlighted at its center.

Such stars are caused by the optical properties of the mineral crystal.

They most commonly have six points, though other even-numbered combinations are possible.

Of every hundred rubies, one is a star.

A star ruby included in any wand with an illusion spell adds +2 to the effective caster level of the effect.

Material Cost: 5,000 gp.

STAR SAPPHIRE

An exceedingly valuable variation of the sapphire (blue or black corundum), this stone is less translucent than a normal sapphire and has a white star of four or more points highlighted at its center.

Such stars, caused by the optical properties of the mineral, always have an even number of points—most commonly six.

For every thousand sapphires found, one is a star.

A star sapphire included in any wand with an abjuration spell increases the save DC against the wand's effect by +2.

If no saving throw applies or is allowed, it instead adds +2 to the effective caster level of the effect.

Material Cost: 5,000 gp.

TOMB JADE

This rare, highly prized gem is jade that has turned red or brown from being buried for great lengths of time.

Buried jade can also be turned green if bronze objects are buried near it; jade of such hue is no more valuable than normal jade.

A piece of tomb jade included in any wand with an enchantment (compulsion) spell increases the save DC against the wand's effect by +1.

If no saving throw applies or is allowed, it instead adds +1 to the effective caster level of the effect.

Material Cost: 1,000 gp.

WATER OPAL

Water opal is a clear, translucent variety of opal with only a play of color to it, like oil on a clear puddle.

Water opals are rare and valuable gems used as ornaments around mirrors and windows or in the crafting of magical scrying devices (such as crystal balls).

A water opal included in any wand with a divination spell increases the save DC against the wand's effect by +1.

If no saving throw applies or is allowed, it instead adds +1 to the effective caster level of the effect.

Material Cost: 1,000 gp.

WEIRWOOD

These rare trees are actively protected by dryads, treants, druids, and rangers.

If undisturbed, they grow into huge, many-branched forest giants that resemble oaks with dual-colored leaves (brown with a silver sheen on top, velvety black underneath).

Weirwood is favored for lutes, harps, birdpipes, and longhorns because of the unmistakable warm, clear sound it gives to such instruments (many masterwork instruments of these kinds are made from weirwood). Any weirwood (or item created of weirwood) within an area illuminated by a magical light source (such as dancing lights, light, or continual flame) emits a gentle magical glow equivalent to a candle for 1d4+1 rounds after leaving the area of illumination.

Living weirwood has fire resistance 20, though no one has ever discovered a method of preserving this quality after the wood is harvested.

ZENDALURE

A mottled blue-white gem, zendalure is found as large, egg-shaped crystals 2 to 6 inches in diameter in solidified lava flows.

Polished to a glassy finish, zendalures are used for inlay work and as tiny cabochons in rings, earrings, and pendants.

A zendalure crystal included in any wand with a necromancy spell increases the save DC against the wand's effect by +1.

If no saving throw applies or is allowed, it instead adds +1 to the effective caster level of the effect.

Material Cost: 1,000 gp.

MANUAL OF THE PLANES (3.0)

SINMAKER'S SURPRISE

The demon proprietor synthesizes a special acidic poison from the acid plants native to the plane called Sinmaker's Surprise.

This concoction has two components: poison and acid. Sinmaker's Surprise is specially formulated such that its caustic qualities remain quiescent until it comes into contact with living tissue.

Therefore, it does not harm weapons or objects to which it is applied.

Victims make saving throws against the poisonous component normally, but automatically take damage from the acid component.

Sinmaker's Surprise has the following characteristics: Fortitude Save: DC 24 (injury) or DC 18 (ingested).

Initial Damage: 2d6 points of temporary Constitution damage (from poison).

Acid Damage: 1d6 points of damage per round for 3 rounds.

Secondary Damage: 2d6 points of temporary Constitution damage.

Price: 4,400 gp.

MONSTER MANUAL 2 (3.0)

BREATHING MASK

This mask covers the user's face.

It is fitted with goggles and a bag of an alchemical substance that allows the wearer to breathe for up to 4 hours.

With the mask on, the wearer can ignore the effects of noxious fumes and inhaled toxins.

The mask even enables the wearer to survive underwater or in an airless environment.

The item consists of a masterwork leather mask with goggles (cost 50 gp), and the alchemical air supply, which costs 950 gp and can be manufactured with a successful Alchemy check (DC 20).

A partially used air supply cannot be combined with another partially used one to get a fresh supply, but it can be discarded and replaced with a new supply.

Cost: 1,000 gp; Weight: 5 lb.

CABLE

This 100-foot-long metal cord is thinner, stronger, and lighter than even silk rope.

It is too thin for most creatures to climb it easily (Climb DC 20), but desmodus using a cable can climb at their normal climb speed.

The cable has a snap ring at each end so that it can be quickly attached to or detached from a piton, spike, grappling hook, or other item without a Use Rope check. The cable has 10 hit points and hardness 5.

It can be burst with a successful Strength check (DC 32). Its stiffness imposes a -2 circumstance penalty on Use Rope checks.

Cost: 50 gp; Weight: 4 lb.

CABLESPOOL

This gadget carries 100 feet of cable in an enclosed reel.

The reel is spring-wound and can pull in all 100 feet of cable in 1 round (pulling with an effective Strength score of 16).

It can be set to reel or unreel the cable automatically as the user climbs, or to act as a brake, allowing the user to jump down 100 feet without harm.

Cost: 125 gp (175 with cable); Weight: 2 lb. (6 lb. with cable).

FROSTFIRE

This sticky, adhesive substance drains away heat when exposed to air or moisture.

A flask of frostfire can be thrown as a grenadelike weapon with a range increment of 10 feet, and a direct hit deals 1d6 points of cold damage.

The target can then attempt to scrape off or wash away the frostfire, if desired.

If this does not occur, the target takes an additional 1d6 points of cold damage on the round following the direct hit.

Removing frostfire by scraping requires a successful Reflex saving throw (DC 15).

Alternatively, the substance can be removed automatically by dousing it with at least 1 pint of an alcoholic or acidic solution (such as wine or vinegar).

Either method requires a full-round action.

Cost: 40 gp; Weight: 1 lb.

HARNESS

Desmodus cannot wear belts because of the flaps of skin attached to their flanks.

Instead, they wear harnesses that loop over their shoulders and between their legs.

Straps crisscross the front and back of the desmodu's body to keep the harness from slipping off.

Each desmodu harness is fitted with rings, hooks, and ties for carrying weapons and equipment.

A reinforced hook hangs near the waist for carrying a cablespool.

Cost: 20 gp; Weight: 2 lb.

KINSHIP BADGE

This item resembles an exquisite cymbal or flattened bell, measuring 3 or 4 inches across.

When struck, it emits a single musical note.

It also resonates and produces a distinctive ultrasonic tone when a desmodu's echolocation sounds strike it.

Desmodus usually exchange kinship badges with their age-mates and use them to identify each other in battle.

Cost: 5 gp; Weight: —.

MYSTERIES OF THE MOONSEA (3.5)

PLANT REPELLENT

All Thayans who come here from the enclave first apply to their bodies an alchemical substance that smells bad, tastes bad, and has slight herbicidal properties; the aggressive plants here recognize the smell and taste of this substance and do not attack those marked with it.

Any aggressive plants that are unable to sense this marker or attack despite it have been killed and removed from the garden; other creatures that come near without using the repellent are fair game.

The repellent is not stored here; doing that would make it too easy for someone to steal the repellent and immediately infiltrate the garden.

The repellent has no effect anywhere but in the arboretum.

ARTISAN'S OUTFIT

A pullover shirt, a thigh-length cotton robe (happi), loose knee-length trousers with a drawstring, a simple sash (obi), and sandals.

BACKPACK

Two forms of backpacks are available in Oriental Adventures: a wicker basket with shoulder straps or a furoshiki sack, a bundle of fabric folded and thrown over the shoulder.

BLANKET, WINTER

Use the same price and weight for a straw mat.

BOTTLE, WINE, GLASS

The lands of Oriental Adventures typically use ceramics rather than glass.

In Rokugan, the Unicorn clan is a notable exception.

CALTROPS

Caltrops are also called shaken.

COLD WEATHER OUTFIT

A heavy robe (kimono), padded with cotton, worn over several other layers: knee-length trousers (hakama), pullover shirt, thigh-length outer robe, and sleeved jacket (haori).

COURTIER'S OUTFIT

A noble's outfit in the finest silks.

Jewelry is not necessary to complete this outfit.

EGGSHELL GRENADES

A favorite tool of ninja, used to create distractions, eggshell grenades are emptied eggshells carefully packed with various alchemical substances.

Common grenade types include dust, flashpowder, pepper, and poison smoke.

All use the grenadelike weapons rules explained in the Player's Handbook: The thrower makes a ranged touch attack roll to hit the target.

Naturally, eggshell grenades are very fragile and must be stowed carefully to avoid breakage.

If a character carrying these items suffers damage from falling, each eggshell grenade must make a Fortitude save (as if the character were making the saving throw) against a DC of 10 + the amount of damage suffered.

An eggshell grenade's light weight makes it very difficult to throw far.

All eggshell grenades have a range increment of 5 feet. Making an eggshell grenade requires the Alchemy skill (DC 20 for dust and pepper, DC 25 for flashpowder and poison smoke) and follows the rules for making things found in the Craft skill description in the Player's Handbook.

DUST

A dust grenade that hits its target directly blinds the target for 1d4 rounds.

A creature within the "splash" radius of the dust cloud (5 feet) must make a Fortitude save (DC 10) or be blinded for 1 round.

FLASHPOWDER

A flashpowder grenade is effective only when thrown into a fire source, where it explodes in a brilliant flash of light. Any creature within 10 feet must make a successful Fortitude save (DC 10) or be blinded for 1d4 rounds. There is no effect if the grenade misses the fire (though the grenade is ruined).

PEPPER

A pepper grenade that hits its target directly incapacitates the target for 1 round unless he makes a successful Fortitude save (DC 10).

The target is treated as stunned: He loses his Dexterity bonus to AC and can take no actions, while enemies gain a +2 bonus to hit him.

There is no "splash" effect.

POISON SMOKE

A poison smoke grenade is effective only when thrown into a fire source, where it bursts into a cloud of vile, stinking smoke.

The cloud spreads to a radius of 10 feet from the fire source, and has the effect of a stinking cloud spell: Creatures within the cloud must make a successful Fortitude save each round (DC 13) or become nauseated.

The only action a nauseated character can take is a single move (or move-equivalent) action per turn.

The effect lasts for 1d4+1 rounds after the character leaves the cloud.

There is no effect if the grenade misses the fire (though the grenade is ruined).

ENTERTAINER'S OUTFIT

A light kimono with an embroidered obi (sash).

FLASH PAPER (MOERAGARU)

Flash paper is thin rice paper that has been treated with a chemical that ignites upon friction.

When a character rubs the paper, it ignites and burns with a bright flash equivalent to a flare cantrip.

If the paper is held close to the eyes of another creature, that creature is dazzled unless it makes a successful Fortitude save (DC 10).

A dazzled creature suffers a -1 penalty on attack rolls.

The creature recovers in 1 minute.

Sightless creatures are not affected by flash paper.

HOLY SYMBOL, SILVER

Use this price and weight for items such as prayer wheels or larger bells.

HOLY SYMBOL, WOODEN

Use this price and weight for items such as prayer beads, small bells, or gongs, which shamans may use when casting spells.

INKPEN

Use this price and weight for a calligraphy brush and inking stone.

JADE POWDER

Jade powder is a mixture of viscous oil and ground jade used to coat blades for combat with Shadowlands creatures, which are vulnerable to jade.

A weapon coated with jade powder deals normal damage to oni, and can penetrate their damage reduction, but the powder wears off after one successful strike.

Applying jade powder to a weapon is a full-round action that provokes an attack of opportunity.

Jade powder may not be available in campaign settings other than the featured setting of Rokugan.

Making jade powder follows the rules for making things found in the Craft skill description in the Player's Handbook.

LAMP, COMMON

A common lamp in Oriental Adventures is a paper lantern, which shares one of the drawbacks of the lamp described in the Player's Handbook, in that it can easily catch on fire if carried around.

LIQUID SMOKE (EKITAI KEMURI)

Liquid smoke creates thick, opaque smoke when exposed to air.

The smoke fills a 10-foot cube.

The smoke dissipates naturally after 1 round.

The smoke obscures all sight, including darkvision, beyond 5 feet.

A creature 5 feet away has one-half concealment (attacks have a 20% miss chance).

Creatures separated by 10 feet of smoke have total concealment (50% miss chance, and the attacker cannot use sight to locate the target).

Making liquid smoke requires the Alchemy skill (DC 20) and follows the rules for making things found in the Craft skill description in the Player's Handbook.

MEAT, CHUNK OF

In most lands of Oriental Adventures, seafood, chicken, and pork are the only common meats.

Cows are rare (or sacred) and valued more for their milk than for their meat.

Fish is boiled, broiled, fried, stewed, or served raw on vinegar-treated rice.

Nobles tend to avoid eating meat, since they believe it makes them smell dirty.

Monks do not eat meat for religious reasons.

MONK'S OUTFIT

As described in the Player's Handbook.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENT, COMMON OR MASTERWORK

Popular instruments in Rokugan include the samisen (plucked lute), the biwa (plucked lute), the koto (zither), the kokyu (bowed lute), and the shakuhachi (bamboo flute).

Instruments of other cultures in Oriental Adventures include the dan tinh (2-stringed plucked lute), dizi (bamboo flute), er-hu (two-stringed bowed lute covered with snakeskin), kaen (bamboo reed instrument), kenbau (double reed), khenthai (wooden flute), pipa (large plucked lute), salaw (a bowed lute made from a coconut shell), sarod (large plucked or bowed lute), sitar (large plucked lute), soong (lute), suling (flute), tambura (large bowed lute used to provide a drone), t'rung (bamboo xylophone), yang chin (hammer dulcimer), zheng (zither), and the various gongs and metallophones that make up the gamelan (kenong, bonang, slenthem, saron, gambang, and others).

NOBLE'S OUTFIT

An elaborate silk or fine linen robe (kimono) with exaggerated sleeves, an enlarged sash (obi), and a sleeveless outer jacket (kataginu) that emphasizes the shoulders, bearing the mark of the wearer's family.

PAPER

Paper is commonly made from rice pulp rather than cloth fibers in the lands of Oriental Adventures.

Parchment is not used.

PEASANT'S OUTFIT

A pullover shirt and loose, knee-length trousers with a drawstring.

RATIONS, TRAIL

Trail rations typically consist of rice cakes.

ROYAL OUTFIT

The emperor's court wear is extremely elaborate, with a long train and many layers.

SCHOLAR'S OUTFIT

A long silk kimono with a simple obi (sash), a thigh-length robe (kimono) to serve as a jacket, and sandals.

SLEEPING FIRE (HINEMURI)

Sleeping fire is a special form of alchemical fire that ignites when its temperature changes even slightly.

It is often painted thinly on items as a trap; a creature touching or even breathing on an area so coated triggers a blast of fire that causes 1d3 points of damage, with an additional 1d3 points of damage in the following round. Burning characters can use a full-round action to extinguish the flame, as described for alchemical fire in the Player's Handbook.

Making sleeping fire requires the Alchemy skill (DC 20) and follows the rules for making things found in the Craft skill description in the Player's Handbook.

SPELLBOOK, WIZARD'S

Shugenjas do not use holy symbols to cast their spells, although they are divine spellcasters.

Instead, they use ofudas as focus items.

A set of ofudas costs 15 gp and weighs 3 pounds, just like a wizard's spellbook.

TRAVELER'S OUTFIT

As artisan's outfit, plus a large straw hat.

VINEGAR

This costs 1 cp.

It is primarily used as a cooking ingredient.

WINE, COMMON

This is sake, the popular rice wine of Rokugan.

It is normally served warm in a small cup.

WINE, FINE

A more potent version of sake is called shochu.

Only very serious drinkers partake of shochu.

PLANAR HANDBOOK (3.5)

THROW SPLASH WEAPON

Splash weapons, described on page 158 of the Player's Handbook, can be slightly more complicated to use on other planes. In order to be effective, a splash weapon must impact a solid surface in order to break—but many planes have abnormal gravity

ANARCHIC WATER

Anarchic water damages lawful outsiders almost as if it were acid.

A flask of anarchic water can be thrown as a splash weapon (see the Throw Splash Weapon sidebar).

Treat this attack as a ranged touch attack with a range increment of 10 feet.

A flask breaks if thrown against the body of a corporeal creature, but to use it against an incorporeal creature, the or little in the way of terrain. In such environments, targeting a specific grid intersection or missing a target may not produce any results. A flask will simply continue along the path it was thrown until it collides with something, often far away.

bearer must open the flask and pour the anarchic water out onto the target.

Thus, a character can douse an incorporeal creature with anarchic water only if he is adjacent to it.

Doing so is a ranged touch attack that does not provoke attacks of opportunity.

A direct hit by a flask of anarchic water deals 2d4 points of damage to a lawful outsider.

Each such creature within 5 feet of the point where the flask hits takes 1 point of damage from the splash.

ANTITRAIT GREASE

Antitrait grease is made in four varieties—evil, law, chaos, and good—using essences collected from planes on the “opposite” side of the Great Wheel to help moderate the effects of the opposing alignment.

When visiting a plane that is aligned, those who smear on antitrait grease ignore penalties on their Charisma checks that mildly aligned planes impose on visitors of opposed alignments.

One vial of grease protects a visitor for 1 hour.

The Wisdom and Intelligence check penalties associated with strongly aligned planes are not affected.

ASTRAL SKIFF

Huge vehicle; Profession (sailor) +0; Spd fly 120 ft. (average); Overall AC 3; Section hp 40 (hardness 10); Section AC 3; Ram 4d8; Face 15 ft. by 5 ft.; Height 10 ft.; SA ramming; Crew 1 (carries 3); Cargo 1 ton (Spd 100 ft. if carrying 1/2 ton or more); Cost 10,000 gp.

On the Astral Plane, githyanki commonly wage war from astral ships.

Such vessels range in size from those large enough for a single squad of soldiers (the astral skiff) to those far larger. Powered by magic sails that catch the motion of astral energies, these ships are normally useless on the Material Plane, where no such arcane winds blow.

However, the vehicle is ideal for journeys on the infinite Astral Plane itself.

ATRAMEN OIL

This substance is cold pressed from atramen fruit that grows on shoals of Elemental Earth that have drifted too close to the Negative Energy Plane.

A flask of atramen oil can be thrown as a splash weapon (see the Throw Splash Weapon sidebar).

Treat this attack as a ranged touch attack with a range increment of 10 feet.

A direct hit causes the target to take a -4 penalty on Fortitude saves for 1 minute.

Every creature within 5 feet of the point where the flask hits takes a -1 penalty on Fortitude saves for 1 minute.

AXIOMATIC WATER

Axiomatic water damages chaotic outsiders almost as if it were acid.

A flask of axiomatic water can be thrown as a splash weapon (see the Throw Splash Weapon sidebar).

Treat this attack as a ranged touch attack with a range increment of 10 feet.

A flask breaks if thrown against the body of a corporeal creature, but to use it against an incorporeal creature, the bearer must open the flask and pour the axiomatic water out onto the target.

Thus, a character can douse an incorporeal creature with axiomatic water only if he is adjacent to it.

Doing so is a ranged touch attack that does not provoke attacks of opportunity.

A direct hit by a flask of axiomatic water deals 2d4 points of damage to a chaotic outsider.

Each such creature within 5 feet of the point where the flask hits takes 1 point of damage from the splash.

BAHAMUT'S BREATH

Bahamut's breath damages evil outsiders almost as if it were acid, while at the same time, it heals good outsiders as if it were a potion of cure light wounds.

One ingredient for this alchemical substance is a breath of air gathered from any of the four lowest levels of Celestia.

A flask of Bahamut's breath can be thrown as a splash weapon (see the Throw Splash Weapon sidebar).

Treat this attack as a ranged touch attack with a range increment of 10 feet.

A direct hit by a flask deals 2d4 points of damage to an evil outsider.

Each such creature within 5 feet of the point where the flask hits takes 1 point of damage from the splash.

A direct hit by the flask heals 2d4 points of damage to a good outsider.

Each such creature within 5 feet of the point where the flask hits is cured of 1 point of damage from the splash.

CELESTIAL CLOAK

Planar hunters frequently visit the Wilderness of the Beastlands to slay and skin celestial animals, for, when the beasts are slain on their home plane and their hides properly treated, some of their properties reside in their pelts.

A celestial cloak looks much like an ordinary cloak made of fur from the appropriate animal, but it has a golden sheen that is especially evident when viewed under the noonday sun or in the light of the full moon.

When worn, a celestial cloak confers upon its wearer resistance to acid 1, cold 1, and electricity 1.

This resistance does not stack with similar benefits gained from other sources.

CHAOS FLASK

A chaos flask contains a small amount of the raw stuff of the plane of Limbo.

This material can be shaped by someone with a strong enough will (DC 13 Wisdom check) into nearly any single nonmagical object, provided the total volume is no greater than that of the flask's contents—with denser objects requiring more of the material.

A flask contains enough raw chaos to create a Diminutive metal or stone object, a Tiny wooden object, or a Small cloth or leather object.

The user can even shape the matter into a living creature of Diminutive size or smaller, but doing this raises the Wisdom check DC to 18.

Shaping the Limbo matter is a free action, and the user can attempt the Wisdom check once per round.

The item so shaped persists for a number of rounds equal to the user's Wisdom score, and then dissipates into nothingness.

The user can cause the object to dissipate sooner with another Wisdom check (same DC).

DIFFERENTIAL HOURGLASS

Because time can flow at different rates on different planes, it can sometimes help planar travelers to know how much time is passing on other planes.

A differential hourglass consists of two hourglasses—one large, one small—mounted end to end.

The substance inside each hourglass flows at the same speed, but one of the hourglasses measures the passage of local time, and the other measures the passage of remote time.

Differential hourglasses are usually built with a specific pair of planes in mind, and as such are rather useless for any other purpose.

Depending on the difference between the two planes in question, the smaller hourglass could measure seconds, rounds, minutes, hours, or days, while the larger of the two could measure rounds, minutes, hours, days, weeks, or even some longer period, depending on the time differential between the two planes.

ELEMENTAL LOADSTONE

Although it appears to be an ordinary stone about the size of a sling stone, an elemental loadstone is, in fact, extremely dense, weighing around 50 pounds.

A loadstone can be thrown (with a range increment of 5 feet) or fired from a sling (with a range increment of 10 feet) and deals 2d6 points of bludgeoning damage on a successful hit.

In addition, some particularly muscular rogues have developed an interesting tactic: slipping elemental loadstones into the pockets of physically weaker opponents by means of Sleight of Hand checks.

With enough of these on his person, the average wizard or sorcerer can quickly be rendered immobile.

ETHER HARNESS

Designed after harnesses used by burglars for breaking into homes, the ether harness is simply a network of leather straps fitted with metal rings for tying items down.

It is meant to ensure that a group of ethereal travelers caught in an ether cyclone remain together, rather than being scattered across the planes.

Tying travelers together by means of their ether harnesses grants a +2 circumstance bonus on Use Rope checks made to ensure that the knots do not come untied.

ETHEREAL TUNNELER

Huge vehicle; Profession (miner) +4; Spd burrow 10 ft. (clumsy); Overall AC 3; Section hp 40/120 (hardness 20/5); Section AC 3; Ram 10d6; Face 10 ft. by 20 ft.; Height 10 ft.; SA ramming; SQ steering mechanism triggers ethereal jaunt on vehicle and all passengers 1/day for up to 20 rounds; Crew 5 (plus 10 soldiers); Cost 140,000 gp.

This tanklike vehicle slowly digs tunnels through earth—and when solid stone stymies it, the vehicle can briefly shift into the Ethereal Plane.

When not tunneling into otherwise sealed regions of earth or past undefeatable defenses, an ethereal tunneler can be used for outright warfare.

The vehicle is adamantine-armored and large enough to accommodate a squad of 10 soldiers.

Its treads have been magically animated to provide propulsion at the direction of the crew, who pull levers while they watch the earth for signs of cave-ins.

The massive drill at the front is better than a ramming prow; an ethereal tunneler never takes damage from rams it initiates.

FIREPROOF CLOTHING

As with fireproof parchment, this clothing is made from the hides of animals that have natural immunity to fire, making the clothing safe to wear in fire-dominant environments.

Any style of clothing can be made from the material; the cost simply increases by 50 gp.

FIREPROOF PARCHMENT

Not strictly parchment, this writing material is made of hide from animals found on the Elemental Plane of Fire, and it retains the creatures' immunity to fire.

Thus, fireproof parchment does not catch fire when exposed to a fire-dominant plane or environment.

FIREPROOF SPELLBOOK

With pages made of fireproof parchment (see Adventuring Gear, above), covered in leather made from fire-resistant animals, and bound with steel, a fireproof spellbook does not catch fire when exposed to a fire-dominant plane or environment.

GATE ZEPPELIN

Colossal vehicle; Profession (pilot) -4; Spd fly 40 ft. (nautical average); Overall AC -3; Section hp 30 (hardness 5); Section AC 3; Rigging 200 hp (hardness 0), AC 1; Ram 4d6; Face 40 ft. by 10 ft.; Height 10 ft.; SA ramming; SQ steering mechanism triggers gate 1/day through which zeppelin may pass (after which the gate closes); Crew 10; Cargo 10 tons (Spd 20 ft. if carrying 5 tons or more); Cost 160,000 gp.

A zeppelin relies on hot air trapped in a massive balloon for lift and animated propellers for propulsion.

The balloon that provides lift is segmented so that one puncture isn't disastrous.

Zeppelins have no minimum forward speed, and they can hover.

A mechanism in the captain's cabin can trigger a gate-like opening once per day that allows planar travel.

GRAVITY TENT

Designed for use on planes that have no gravity, a gravity tent is merely a tent in the shape of a diamond, with loops and clips inside to hold bedrolls in a more or less stable position (secured to the tent's cross-poles).

It sleeps up to four comfortably, and up to eight total.

LIQUID EMBERS

Liquid embers is a sticky adhesive goo not unlike alchemist's fire, except that liquid embers contains ash or soot of an object burned with fire from the Elemental Plane of Fire.

A flask of liquid embers can be thrown as a splash weapon (see the Throw Splash Weapon sidebar).

Treat this attack as a ranged touch attack with a range increment of 10 feet.

A direct hit deals 3d6 points of fire damage.

Every creature within 5 feet of the point where the flask hits takes 1d6 points of fire damage from the splash.

On the round following a direct hit, the target takes an additional 3d6 points of damage.

If desired, the target can use a full-round action to attempt to extinguish the flames before taking this additional damage.

Extinguishing the flames requires a DC 17 Reflex save.

Rolling on the ground provides the target a +2 bonus on the save.

Leaping into a lake or magically extinguishing the flames automatically smothers the fire.

MECHANUS EYE

This 2-inch-diameter metallic orb resembles an eye, though streamlined and idealized.

These eyes are purportedly salvaged from secret graveyard cogs on Mechanus, where a demolished race who once claimed the plane now lies forgotten.

Anyone looking through a Mechanus eye gains a +1 competence bonus on Search checks.

OCANTHUS KNIFE

Ocanthus knives are actually alchemically stabilized shards of magically charged black ice gathered from the fourth layer of Acheron.

An ocanthus knife has all the melee weapon characteristics of a dagger, except for the following: On a successful strike, a Medium ocanthus knife deals 2d6 points of damage (a Small knife deals 1d8, and a Large knife deals 3d6). After striking a foe, the knife loses its stability and immediately shatters and melts, gone but for telltale oily residue.

PLANAR ATLAS

Countless versions of these handy tomes exist, each of which is meant to describe the relationships between various planes for the convenience of travelers.

They are rarely accurate when it comes to detailing the locations of planar portals (or the instructions for how to activate them), but the information on the planes grants a +2 competence bonus on Knowledge (the planes) checks.

PLANAR SAILER

Colossal vehicle; Profession (sailor) +4; Spd wind × 20 ft. (nautical average); Overall AC -3; Section hp 50 (hardness 5); Section AC 3; Rigging 80 hp (hardness 0), AC 1; Ram 12d6; Face 80 ft. by 20 ft.; Height 10 ft. (draft 10 ft.); SA ram; SQ steering mechanism triggers special plane shift effect on vehicle and contents; Crew 20; Cargo 150 tons (Spd wind × 15 ft. if 75 tons or more); Cost 25,000 gp.

In most situations, a planar sailer seems no different from a common sailing ship.

Measuring some 80 feet in length, this three-masted ship requires a crew of 20 when sailing on water and using the wind for locomotion.

A planar sailer has a special ability that allows it to sail celestial seas, following the commands of the captain of the vessel as he stands at the wheel.

A planar sailer has enough room on deck for two light catapults or ballistas.

It usually uses a launch as a lifeboat (not included in the price).

PURE ELEMENT

Each flask of pure element contains a small amount of the essence of an Elemental Plane: air, earth, fire, or water, painstakingly recreated from ancient alchemical formulas. The bearer can pour this substance upon other beings or objects by making a melee touch attack (which provokes attacks of opportunity), or hurl it as a thrown weapon that targets a creature.

The pure element air, earth, fire, or water contained within then bonds with whatever it touches, temporarily altering the target in a fashion dependent on the element's nature. The effects of the pure element last for 10 minutes, unless otherwise noted.

AIR

This clear liquid does not seem to flow from the flask as much drift from it.

Objects or creatures exposed to pure element air weigh only one-half their normal weight; creatures so affected gain a +2 bonus on Climb and Jump checks but take a -2 penalty on damage rolls.

Elementals with the air subtype that are exposed to this pure element gain a +2 enhancement bonus to Constitution.

Elementals with the earth subtype, as well as objects made of earth or stone, take 2d6 points of damage (this effect overcomes the damage reduction or hardness of such creatures or objects).

EARTH

This grayish-brown ooze looks like ordinary mud.

Objects or creatures exposed to pure elemental earth weigh twice their normal weight; creatures so affected take a -2 penalty on Balance, Climb, Jump, Ride, Swim, and Tumble checks.

The creature also gains damage reduction 1/adamantine. Elementals with the earth subtype that are exposed to this pure element gain a +2 enhancement bonus to Constitution.

Elementals with the air subtype take 2d6 points of damage (this effect overcomes the damage reduction of such creatures).

FIRE

This bright orange-yellow liquid bursts from the flask like an explosion.

A creature or object exposed to pure elemental fire takes 1d6 points of damage and catches fire unless it succeeds on a DC 15 Reflex save.

A creature or object that catches fire takes 1d6 points of fire damage per round for 5 rounds.

The flames may be extinguished only by exposure to pure elemental water.

Elementals with the fire subtype that are exposed to this pure element gain a +2 enhancement bonus to Constitution.

Elementals with the water subtype take double the initial fire damage dealt by this substance, but do not catch on fire unless they are wearing flammable items.

WATER

This liquid appears to be a deep blue, almost indigo water. Living creatures exposed to pure elemental water must make a DC 10 Constitution check or begin drowning. Each round thereafter until 1 minute has elapsed, the DC increases by 1.

Elementals with the water subtype that are exposed to this pure element gain a +2 enhancement bonus to Constitution.

Elementals with the fire subtype take 2d6 points of damage.

RED TIDEWATER

Harvested from areas of red tide on the Elemental Plane of Water, this water is full of an algae that can cause temporary blindness if it gets into a living creature's eyes. A flask of red tidewater can be thrown as a splash weapon (see the Throw Splash Weapon sidebar).

Treat this attack as a ranged touch attack with a range increment of 10 feet.

A direct hit forces the target to make a DC 15 Reflex save or be blinded for 2d4 rounds.

All those within 5 feet of the point of impact must make a DC 10 Reflex save or be blinded for 1 round.

Anyone who fails the save has been exposed to blinding sickness (see Disease, page 292 of the Dungeon Master's Guide).

TOUCHSTONE BLADE

A touchstone blade is a nonmagical masterwork sword or other weapon forged from metal found at the site of a planar touchstone—thus qualifying it as the portable object required by the Planar Touchstone feat.

The cost of a touchstone blade is equal to the cost of the weapon plus 500 gp (300 gp for the masterwork weapon, plus another 200 gp for the connection to the planar touchstone).

Such items are understandably rare and sold even more rarely, given the magical benefit they can provide.

TRUE DIVINE FOCUS

Druids use sprigs of holly and mistletoe as the default divine focus for their spells, and these come directly from the home plane of the druid's deity.

Imbued with the raw power of nature, these divine cuttings increase the druid's effective caster level by 1 for purposes of determining level-dependent spell variables (such as damage or range) and for caster level checks.

The cuttings last for one week.

TRUE HOLY SYMBOL

Appearing in all other ways to be merely a holy symbol, this item in fact comes from the home plane of the deity the symbol represents—and carries with it a modicum of the deity's power.

Attempts to turn undead using the true holy symbol provide a +2 sacred bonus on the character's turning check (1d20 + the character's Cha modifier).

TRUE UNHOLY SYMBOL

The evil counterpart to the true holy symbol, this otherwise unremarkable ornament confers a +2 profane bonus on the wielder's attempts to rebuke, command, or bolster undead, or to dispel a good cleric's turning effect.

WATERPROOF INK

Because ordinary ink smears and runs when it comes in contact with water, this "ink"—actually a mixture of grease, wax, and pigments—is quite useful for making maps and other writings in water-dominant planes.

WATERPROOF SPELLBOOK

Utilizing waterproof ink and pages sealed in paraffin, this spellbook can survive being immersed in water—an extremely useful item for a wizard journeying to a water-dominant plane.

WEIGHT SUIT

A weight suit is a collection of straps and pouches containing lead pellets.

When the complete suit is worn, it distributes extra weight across the wearer's body, counteracting the skill check and attack roll penalties of light-gravity environments (because the weight is distributed, rather than concentrated in one place, such as with a backpack).

In environments with normal gravity, the suit is little more than a curiosity, except to certain physical fitness fanatics.

Thunderstone	Sonic attack	—	20 ft.

*Grenadelike weapons require no proficiency to use. See text for full details on using these weapons.

**Grenadelike weapons deal splash damage to all creatures within 5 feet of where they land.

ACID

You can throw a flask of acid as a grenadelike weapon (see Table 7-10: Grenadelike Weapons, page 114, and Grenadelike Weapon Attacks, page 138).

ALCHEMIST'S FIRE

Alchemist's fire is a sticky, adhesive substance that ignites when exposed to air.

You can throw a flask of alchemist's fire as a grenadelike weapon (see Table 7-10: Grenadelike Weapons, page 114, and Grenadelike Weapon Attacks, page 138).

On the round following a direct hit, the target takes an additional 1d6 points of damage.

The target can take a full-round action to attempt to extinguish the flames before taking this additional damage. It takes a successful Reflex saving throw (DC 15) to extinguish the flames.

Rolling on the ground allows the character a +2 bonus. Leaping into a lake or magically extinguishing the flames automatically smothers the flames.

ALCHEMIST'S LAB

This includes beakers, bottles, mixing and measuring equipment and a miscellany of chemicals and substances. This is the perfect tool for the job and so adds a +2 circumstance bonus to Alchemy checks, but it has no bearing on the costs related to the Alchemy skill (see the Alchemy skill, page 63).

Without this lab, a character with the Alchemy skill is assumed to have enough tools to use the skill but not enough to get the +2 bonus that the lab provides.

ANTITOXIN

If you drink antitoxin, you get a +5 alchemical bonus on all Fortitude saving throws against poison for 1 hour.

ARMOR OR SHIELD, MASTERWORK

These well-made items function like the normal versions except that their armor check penalties are reduced by 1.

ARROW, BOLT, OR BULLET, MASTERWORK

A masterwork projectile functions like a normal projectile of the same type except that it is so aerodynamically sound you get a +1 bonus on attack rolls when you use it.

This bonus stacks with any bonus you might get by using a masterwork bow, crossbow, or sling.

The projectile is damaged (effectively destroyed) when it is used.

ARROW, BOLT, OR BULLET, SILVERED

A silvered projectile functions like a normal projectile, except that some creatures that resist damage from normal weapons, such as werewolves, can be hurt by silvered weapons.

ARTISAN'S OUTFIT

A shirt with buttons, a skirt or pants with a drawstring, shoes, and perhaps a cap or hat.

This outfit may include a belt or a leather or cloth apron for carrying tools.

ARTISAN'S TOOLS

This is the set of special tools needed for any craft.

Without these tools, you have to use improvised tools (-2 penalty on your Craft check) if you can do the job at all.

ARTISAN'S TOOLS, MASTERWORK

As artisan's tools, but these are the perfect tools for the job, so you get a +2 circumstance bonus on your Craft check.

BACKPACK

A leather pack carried on the back, typically with straps to secure it.

BARDING, MEDIUM-SIZE CREATURE AND LARGE CREATURE

Barding is simply some type of armor covering the head, neck, chest, body, and possibly legs of a horse.

Heavier types provide better protection at the expense of lower speed.

Barding comes in most of the types found on Table 7-5: Armor.

As with any nonhumanoid Large creature, a horse's armor costs four times what a humanoid Medium-size creature's armor costs and also weighs twice as much as the armor found on Table 7-5: Armor (see Armor for Unusual Creatures, page 105).

(If the barding is for a pony, or other Medium-size mount, the cost is only double, and the weight is the same).

Medium or heavy barding slows mounts:

	Speed (40 ft.)	(50 ft.)	(60 ft.)
Barding
Medium	30 ft.	35 ft.	40 ft.
Heavy	30 ft.*	35 ft.*	40 ft.

*A mount wearing heavy armor moves at only triple normal rate when running instead of quadruple.

Flying mounts can't fly in medium or heavy barding.

Barded animals require special attention.

You must take care to prevent chafing and sores caused by the armor.

The armor must be removed at night and ideally should not be put on the mount except to prepare for a battle.

Removing and fitting barding takes five times as long as the figures given on Table 7-6: Donning Armor.

Barded animals cannot be used to carry any load other than the rider and normal saddlebags.

Because of this, a mounted warrior often leads a second mount for carrying gear and supplies.

BEDROLL

Adventurers never know where they're going to sleep, and bedrolls help them get better sleep in haylofts or on the cold ground.

A bedroll is bedding and a blanket thin enough to be rolled up and tied.

In an emergency, it can double as a stretcher.

BLANKET, WINTER

A thick, quilted, wool blanket.

CALTROPS

Caltrops resemble large metal jacks with sharpened points rather than balls on the ends of their arms.

They are essentially iron spikes designed so that one point is always facing up.

You scatter them on the ground in the hope that your enemies step on them or are at least forced to slow down to avoid them.

One bag of caltrops (the 2-pound unit listed on Table 7-7: Goods and Services) covers an area 5 feet square.

Each time a creature moves into an area covered by caltrops (or spends a round fighting while standing in such an area), the creature may step on one.

The caltrops make an attack roll (base attack bonus +0) against the creature.

For this attack, the creature's shield, armor, and deflection bonus do not count.

(Deflection averts blows as they approach you, but it does not prevent you from touching something dangerous).

If the creature is wearing shoes or other footwear, it gets a +2 armor bonus to AC.

If the caltrops succeed at the attack, the creature has stepped on one.

The caltrop deals 1 point of damage, and the creature's speed is reduced by one-half because its foot is wounded. This movement penalty lasts for one day, until the creature is successfully treated with the Heal skill (DC 15), or until it receives at least 1 point of magical curing.

A charging or running creature must immediately stop if it steps on a caltrop.

Any creature moving at half speed or slower can pick its way through a bed of caltrops with no trouble.

The DM judges the effectiveness of caltrops against unusual opponents.

A giant centipede, for example, can scramble among the caltrops with no chance of hurting itself, and a fire giant wearing fire-giant-size boots is immune to normal-size caltrops.

(They just get stuck in the soles of his boots).

CANDLE

A candle clearly illuminates a 5-foot radius and burns for 1 hour.

CART

A two-wheeled vehicle drawn by a single horse (or other beast of burden).

It comes with a harness.

CASE, MAP OR SCROLL

A capped leather or tin tube for holding rolled pieces of parchment or paper.

CHAIN

Chain has a hardness of 10 and 5 hit points.

It can be burst with a Strength check (DC 26).

CLERIC'S VESTMENTS

Ecclesiastical clothes for performing priestly functions, not for adventuring.

CLIMBER'S KIT

Special pitons, boot tips, gloves, and a harness that aids in all sorts of climbing.

This is the perfect tool for climbing and gives you a +2 circumstance bonus to Climb checks.

COLD WEATHER OUTFIT

A wool coat, linen shirt, wool cap, heavy cloak, thick pants or skirt, and boots.

When wearing a cold weather outfit, add a +5 circumstance bonus to Fortitude saving throws against exposure to cold weather (see the DUNGEON MASTER'S Guide for information on cold dangers).

COURTIER'S OUTFIT

Fancy, tailored clothes in whatever fashion happens to be the current style in the courts of the nobles.

Anyone trying to influence nobles or courtiers while wearing street dress will have a hard time of it.

Without jewelry (costing perhaps an additional 50 gp), you look like an out-of-place commoner.

CROWBAR

An iron bar for levering things open.

DAGGER, SILVERED

A silvered dagger functions as a normal dagger, except that some creatures that resist damage from normal weapons, such as werewolves, can be hurt by silvered weapons.

DISGUISE KIT

A bag containing cosmetics, hair dye, and small physical props.

This is the perfect tool for disguise and adds a +2 circumstance bonus to Disguise checks.

It's exhausted after ten uses.

ENTERTAINER'S OUTFIT

A set of flashy, perhaps even gaudy, clothes for entertaining.

While the outfit looks whimsical, its practical design lets you tumble, dance, walk a tightrope, or just run (if the audience turns ugly).

EXPLORER'S OUTFIT

This is a full set of clothes for someone who never knows what to expect.

It includes sturdy boots, leather breeches or a skirt, a belt, a shirt (perhaps with a vest or jacket), gloves, and a cloak.

Rather than a leather skirt, a leather overtunic may be worn instead over a cloth skirt. The clothes have plenty of pockets (especially the cloak). The outfit also includes any extra items you might need, such as a scarf or a wide-brimmed hat.

FEED

Horses, donkeys, mules, and ponies can graze to sustain themselves, but providing feed for them (such as oats) is much better because it provides a more concentrated form of energy, especially if the animal is exerting itself. If you have a riding dog, you have to feed it at least some meat, which may cost more or less than the given amount.

FLASK

A ceramic, glass, or metal container fitted with a tight stopper. It holds 1 pint of liquid.

FLINT AND STEEL

Striking the steel and flint together creates sparks. By knocking sparks into tinder, you can create a small flame. Lighting a torch with flint and steel is a full-round action, and lighting any other fire with them takes at least that long.

GRAPPLING HOOK

Tied to the end of a rope, the hook can secure the rope to battlements, windows, tree limbs, and so forth.

HAMMER

A one-handed hammer with an iron head that is useful for pounding pitons into a wall.

HEALER'S KIT

This kit is full of herbs, salves, bandages and other useful materials. It is the perfect tool for anyone attempting a Heal check. It adds a +2 circumstance bonus to the check. It's exhausted after ten uses.

HOLLY AND MISTLETOE

Sprigs of holly and mistletoe are used by druids as the default divine focus for druid spells. Holly and mistletoe plants are easily found in wooded areas by druids, and sprigs from them are harvested essentially for free.

HOLY SYMBOL, SILVER OR WOODEN

A holy symbol focuses positive energy. Clerics use them as the focuses for their spells and as tools for turning undead.

Each religion has its own holy symbol, and a sun symbol is the default holy symbol for clerics not associated with any particular religion. A silver holy symbol works no better than a wooden one, but it serves as a mark of status for the wielder.

HOLY WATER

Holy water damages undead and evil outsiders almost as if it were acid. Typically, a flask of holy water deals 2d4 points of damage to an undead creature or an evil outsider on a direct hit or 1 point of damage if it splashes such a creature. Also, holy water is considered blessed, which means it has special effects on certain creatures. A flask of holy water can be thrown as a grenadelike weapon (see Table 7–10: Grenadelike Weapons, page 114, and Grenadelike Weapon Attacks, page 138). A flask breaks if thrown against the body of a corporeal creature, but against an incorporeal creature, the flask must be opened and the holy water poured out onto it. Thus, you can only douse an incorporeal creature with holy water if you are adjacent to it. Doing so is a ranged touch attack that does not provoke attacks of opportunity. Temples to good deities sell holy water at cost (making no profit) because they are happy to supply people with what they need to battle evil.

INK

This is black ink. You can buy ink in other colors, but it costs twice as much.

INKPEN

A wooden stick with a special tip on the end. The tip draws ink in when dipped in a vial and leaves an ink trail when drawn across a surface.

JUG, CLAY

A basic ceramic jug fitted with a stopper. It holds 1 gallon of liquid.

LADDER, 10-FOOT

A straight, simple wooden ladder.

LAMP, COMMON

A lamp clearly illuminates things in a 15-foot radius and burns for 6 hours on a pint of oil. It burns with a more even flame than a torch, but, unlike a lantern, it uses an open flame and it can spill easily, making it too dangerous for most adventuring. You can carry a lamp in one hand.

LANTERN, BULLSEYE

A bullseye lantern has only a single shutter, with its other sides being highly polished inside to reflect the light in a single direction.

It illuminates a cone 60 feet long and 20 feet wide at the end, and it burns for 6 hours on a pint of oil. You can carry a lantern in one hand.

LANTERN, HOODED

A hooded lantern is a standard lantern with shuttered or hinged sides.

You can carry a lantern in one hand.

It clearly illuminates a 30-foot radius and burns for 6 hours on a pint of oil.

LOCK

A lock is worked with a large, bulky key.

The DC to open this kind of lock with the Open Locks skill depends on the lock's quality: very simple (DC 20), average (DC 25), good (DC 30), amazingly good (DC 40).

MAGNIFYING GLASS

This simple lens allows a closer look at small objects.

It is useful as a substitute for flint, steel, and tinder when starting fires (though it takes light as bright as direct sunlight to focus, tinder to light, and at least a full-round action to light a fire with a magnifying glass).

It grants you a +2 circumstance bonus on Appraise checks involving any item that is small or highly detailed, such as a gem.

MANACLES AND MANACLES, MASTERWORK

These manacles can bind a Medium-size creature.

The manacled character can use the Escape Artist skill to slip free (DC 30, or DC 35 for masterwork manacles).

To break the manacles requires success at a Strength check (DC 26, or DC 28 for masterwork manacles).

Manacles have a hardness of 10 and 10 hit points.

Most manacles have locks; add the cost of the lock you want to the cost of the manacles.

For the same price, one can buy manacles for Small creatures.

For Large creatures, manacles cost ten times this amount, and for Huge creatures, one hundred times this amount.

Gargantuan, Colossal, Tiny, Diminutive, and Fine creatures can only be held by specially made manacles.

MIGHTY COMPOSITE LONGBOW OR SHORTBOW

A mighty bow is a composite bow made with an especially heavy pull to allow a strong archer to take advantage of an above-average Strength.

The mighty bow allows you to add your Strength bonus to damage up to the maximum bonus listed.

For example, Tordek has a +2 Strength bonus.

With a regular composite shortbow, he gets no modifier to damage.

For 150 gp, he can buy a mighty composite shortbow (+1), which lets him add +1 to the damage.

For 225 gp, he can buy one that lets him add his entire +2 bonus.

Even if he paid 400 gp for a mighty composite longbow (+3), he would still only get +2 to damage.

The bow can't grant him a higher bonus than he already has.

MIRROR, SMALL STEEL

A polished steel mirror is handy when you want to look around corners, signal friends with reflected sunlight, keep an eye on a medusa, make sure that you look good enough to present yourself to the queen, or examine wounds that you've received on hard-to-see parts of your body.

MONK'S OUTFIT

This simple outfit includes sandals, loose breeches, and a loose shirt, and is all bound together with sashes.

Though it looks casual, the outfit is designed to give you maximum mobility, and it's made of high-quality fabric.

You can hide small weapons in pockets hidden in the folds, and the sashes are strong enough to serve as short ropes.

Depending on your style, the outfit may be decorated with designs that indicate your lineage or philosophical outlook.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENT, COMMON OR MASTERWORK

Popular instruments include fifes, recorders, lutes, mandolins, and shalms.

A masterwork instrument is of superior make.

It adds a +2 circumstance bonus to Perform checks and serves as a mark of status.

NOBLE'S OUTFIT

This set of clothes is designed specifically to be expensive and to show it.

Precious metals and gems are worked into the clothing.

To fit into the noble crowd, every would-be noble also needs a signet ring (see Adventuring Gear above) and jewelry (worth at least 100 gp, or at least appearing to be worth that much).

And it would be advisable to not show up to a ball in the same noble's outfit twice.

OIL

A pint of oil burns for 6 hours in a lantern.

You can use a flask of oil as a grenadelike weapon (see Table 7–10: Grenadelike Weapons, page 114, and Grenadelike Weapon Attacks, page 138).

Use the rules for alchemist's fire, except that it takes a full-round action to prepare a flask with a fuse.

Once it is thrown, there is only a 50% chance that the flask ignites successfully.

You can pour a pint of oil on the ground to cover an area 5 feet square (provided the surface is smooth).

If lit, the oil burns for 2 rounds and deals 1d3 points of damage to each creature in the area.

PAPER

A white sheet of paper made from cloth fibers.

PARCHMENT

Goat hide or sheepskin prepared for writing on.

PEASANT'S OUTFIT

A loose shirt and baggy breeches, or a loose shirt and skirt or overdress.

Cloth wrappings are used for shoes.

PITON

When a wall doesn't offer you handholds and footholds, you can make your own.

A piton is a steel spike with an eye through which you can loop a rope.

(See the Climb skill, page 64).

POLE, 10-FOOT

When you suspect a trap, you'd rather put the end of your 10-foot pole through a hole in a wall than your hand.

POUCH, BELT

This leather pouch straps to your belt.

It's good for holding things that you may need in a hurry, such as potions.

RAM, PORTABLE

This iron-shod wooden beam is the perfect tool for battering down doors.

Not only does it give you a +2 circumstance bonus on your Strength check to break open a door, but it allows a second person to help you without having to roll, adding another +2 to your check (see Breaking Open Doors, page 62).

RATIONS, TRAIL

Trail rations are compact, dry, high-energy foods suitable for travel, such as jerky, dried fruit, hardtack, and nuts.

RATIONS, TRAIL

See Adventuring Gear, above.

ROPE, HEMP

This rope has 2 hit points and can be burst with a successful Strength check (DC 23).

ROPE, SILK

This rope has 4 hit points and can be burst with a successful Strength check (DC 24).

It is so supple that it adds a +2 circumstance bonus to Use Rope checks.

ROYAL OUTFIT

This is just the clothes, not the royal scepter, crown, ring, and other accoutrements.

Royal clothes are ostentatious, with gems, gold, silk, and fur in abundance.

SACK

A drawstring sack made of burlap or a similar material.

SADDLE, EXOTIC

An exotic saddle is like a normal saddle of the same type except that it is designed for an unusual mount, such as a pegasus.

Exotic saddles come in military, pack, and riding styles.

SADDLE, MILITARY

A military saddle braces the rider, adding a +2 circumstance bonus to Ride checks related to staying in the saddle.

If you're knocked unconscious while in a military saddle, you have a 75% chance to stay in the saddle (compared to 50% for a riding saddle).

SADDLE, PACK

A pack saddle holds gear and supplies, not a rider.

A pack saddle holds as much gear as the mount can carry. (The Monster Manual has notes on how much mounts can carry).

SADDLE, RIDING

The standard riding saddle supports a rider.

SCALE, MERCHANT'S

This scale includes a small balance and pans and a suitable assortment of weights.

A scale grants you a +2 circumstance bonus to Appraise checks involving items that are valued by weight, including anything made of precious metals.

SCHOLAR'S OUTFIT

A robe, a belt, a cap, soft shoes, and possibly a cloak.

SIGNET RING

Your signet ring has a unique design carved into it.

When you press this ring into warm sealing wax, you leave an identifying mark.

SLED

This is a wagon on runners for moving through snow and over ice.

In general, two horses (or other beasts of burden) draw it. It comes with the harness needed to pull it.

SLEDGE

A two-handed, iron-headed hammer that is good for smashing open treasure chests.

SMOKESTICK

This alchemically treated wooden stick instantly creates thick, opaque smoke when ignited.

The smoke fills a 10-foot cube.

The stick is consumed after 1 round, and the smoke dissipates naturally.

SPELL COMPONENT POUCH

A small, watertight leather belt pouch with many small compartments.

A spellcaster with a spell component pouch is assumed to have all the material components and focuses she needs except those that have a listed cost, divine focuses, or focuses that wouldn't fit in a pouch (such as the natural pool that a druid needs to look into to cast scrying).

SPELLBOOK, WIZARD'S (BLANK)

A large, leatherbound book that serves as a wizard's reference.

A spellbook has 100 pages of parchment, and each spell takes up two pages per level (one page for 0-level spells). See Arcane Spells, page 154.

SPYGLASS

Objects viewed through a spyglass are magnified to twice their size.

SUNROD

This 1-foot-long, gold-tipped, iron rod glows brightly when struck.

It clearly illuminates a 30-foot radius and glows for 6 hours, after which the gold tip is burned out and worthless.

TANGLEFOOT BAG

You can throw this round leather bag full of alchemical goo as a grenadelike weapon (see Table 7-10: Grenadelike Weapons, on this page, and Grenadelike Weapon Attacks, page 138).

When you throw the bag against a creature (as a ranged touch attack), the bag comes apart and the goo bursts out, entangling the target and then becoming tough and resilient on exposure to air.

An entangled creature suffers a -2 penalty to attack rolls and a -4 penalty to effective Dexterity.

The entangled character must make a Reflex save (DC 15) or be glued to the floor, unable to move.

Even with a successful save, it can only move at half speed.

A character who is glued to the floor can break free with a successful Strength check (DC 27) or by dealing 15 points of damage to the goo with a slashing weapon.

A character trying to scrape goo off himself, or another character assisting, does not need to make an attack roll; hitting the goo is automatic, after which the character who hit makes a damage roll to see how much of the goo he happened to scrape off.

Once free, a character can move at half speed.

A character capable of spellcasting who is bound by the goo must make a Concentration check (DC 15) to cast a spell.

The goo becomes brittle and fragile after 10 minutes.

TENT

This simple tent sleeps two.

THIEVES' TOOLS

These are the tools you need to use the Disable Device and Open Lock skills.

The kit includes one or more skeleton keys, long metal picks and pries, a long-nosed clamp, a small hand saw, and a small wedge and hammer.

Without these tools, you have to improvise tools, and you suffer a -2 circumstance penalty on your Disable Device and Open Locks checks.

THIEVES' TOOLS, MASTERWORK

This kit contains extra tools and tools of better make, granting you a +2 circumstance bonus on Disable Device and Open Lock checks.

THUNDERSTONE

You can throw this stone as a grenadelike weapon (see Table 7-10: Grenadelike Weapons, on this page, and Grenadelike Weapon Attacks, page 138).

When it strikes a hard surface (or is struck hard), it creates a deafening bang (a sonic attack).

Creatures within a 10-foot radius must make Fortitude saves (DC 15) or be deafened.

Deaf creatures, in addition to the obvious effects, suffer a -4 penalty on initiative and a 20% chance to miscast and lose any spell with a verbal (V) component that they try to cast.

TINDERTWIG

The alchemical substance on the end of this small, wooden stick ignites when struck against a rough surface.

Creating a flame with a tindertwig is much faster than creating a flame with flint and steel (or a magnifying glass) and tinder.

Lighting a torch with a tindertwig is a standard action (rather than a full-round action), and lighting any other fire with one takes at least a standard action.

TOOL, MASTERWORK

This well-made item is the perfect tool for the job and adds a +2 circumstance bonus to a related skill check (if any).

Some examples of this sort of item are on Table 7-7: Goods and Services, such as masterwork artisan's tools, masterwork thieves' tools, disguise kit, climber's kit, healer's kit, and masterwork musical instrument.

This entry covers just about anything else.

Bonuses provided by multiple masterwork items used toward the same skill check do not stack, so masterwork pitons and a masterwork climber's kit do not provide a +4 bonus if used together on a Climb check.

TORCH

A wooden rod capped with twisted flax soaked in tallow or a similar item.

A torch clearly illuminates a 20-foot radius and burns for 1 hour.

TRAVELER'S OUTFIT

Boots, a wool skirt or breeches, a sturdy belt, a shirt (perhaps with a vest or jacket), and an ample cloak with a hood.

UNHOLY SYMBOLS

An unholy symbol is like a holy symbol except that it focuses negative energy and is used by evil clerics (or by neutral clerics who want to cast evil spells or command undead).

A skull is the default unholy symbol for clerics not associated with any particular religion.

VIAL

A ceramic, glass, or metal vial fitted with a tight stopper. The stoppered container usually is no more than 1 inch wide and 3 inches high.

It holds 1 ounce of liquid.

WAGON

This is a four-wheeled, open vehicle for transporting heavy loads.

In general, two horses (or other beasts of burden) draw it. It comes with the harness needed to pull it.

WATER CLOCK

This large, bulky contrivance gives the time accurate to within half an hour per day since it was last set.

It requires a source of water, and it must be kept still because it marks time by the regulated flow of droplets of water.

It is primarily an amusement for the wealthy and a tool for the student of arcane lore.

Most people have no way to tell exact time, and there's little point in knowing that it is 2:30 P.

M.

if nobody else does.

WATERSKIN

A leather pouch with a narrow neck that is used for holding water.

WEAPON, MASTERWORK

These well-made weapons add a +1 bonus to attack rolls.

Prices for these items are given on Table 7–9: Special and Superior Items.

A masterwork weapon's bonus to attack does not stack with an enhancement bonus to attack.

— No weight, or no weight worth noting.

<sup>1</sup> These items weigh one-quarter this amount when made for Small characters. Containers for Small characters also carry one-quarter the normal amount.

<sup>2</sup> See spell description for additional costs. If the additional costs put the spell's total cost above 3,000 gp, that spell is not generally available, except by the DM's permission.

ACID

You can throw a flask of acid as a splash weapon (see Throw Splash Weapon, page 158).

Treat this attack as a ranged touch attack with a range increment of 10 feet.

A direct hit deals 1d6 points of acid damage.

Every creature within 5 feet of the point where the acid hits takes 1 point of acid damage from the splash.

ALCHEMIST'S FIRE

Alchemist's fire is sticky, adhesive substance that ignites when exposed to air.

You can throw a flask of alchemist's fire as a splash weapon (see Throw Splash Weapon, page 158).

Treat this attack as a ranged touch attack with a range increment of 10 feet.

A direct hit deals 1d6 points of fire damage.

Every creature within 5 feet of the point where the flask hits takes 1 point of fire damage from the splash.

On the round following a direct hit, the target takes an additional 1d6 points of damage.

If desired, the target can use a full-round action to attempt to extinguish the flames before taking this additional damage.

Extinguishing the flames requires a DC 15 Reflex save.

Rolling on the ground provides the target a +2 bonus on the save.

Leaping into a lake or magically extinguishing the flames automatically smothers the fire.

ALCHEMIST'S LAB

This set of equipment includes beakers, bottles, mixing and measuring containers, and a miscellany of chemicals and substances.

An alchemist's lab always has the perfect tool for making alchemical items, so it provides a +2 circumstance bonus on Craft (alchemy) checks.

It has no bearing on the costs related to the Craft (alchemy) skill (page 70).

Without this lab, a character with the Craft (alchemy) skill is assumed to have enough tools to use the skill but not enough to get the +2 bonus that the lab provides.

ANTITOXIN

If you drink antitoxin, you get a +5 alchemical bonus on Fortitude saving throws against poison for 1 hour.

ARTISAN'S OUTFIT

This outfit includes a shirt with buttons, a skirt or pants with a drawstring, shoes, and perhaps a cap or hat.

It may also include a belt or a leather or cloth apron for carrying tools.

ARTISAN'S TOOLS

These special tools include the items needed to pursue any craft.

Without them, you have to use improvised tools (–2 penalty on Craft checks), if you can do the job at all.

ARTISAN'S TOOLS, MASTERWORK

These tools serve the same purpose as artisan's tools (above), but masterwork artisan's tools are the perfect tools for the job, so you get a +2 circumstance bonus on Craft checks made with them.

BACKPACK

A backpack is a leather pack carried on the back, typically with straps to secure it.

BARDING, MEDIUM CREATURE AND LARGE CREATURE

Barding is a type of armor that covers the head, neck, chest, body, and possibly legs of a horse or other mount. Barding made of medium or heavy armor provides better protection than light barding, but at the expense of speed. Barding can be made of any of the armor types found on Table 7–6: Armor and Shields.

Armor for a horse (a Large nonhumanoid creature) costs four times as much as armor for a human (a Medium humanoid creature) and also weighs twice as much as the armor found on Table 7–6 (see Armor for Unusual Creatures, page 123).

If the barding is for a pony or other Medium mount, the cost is only double, and the weight is the same as for Medium armor worn by a humanoid.

Medium or heavy barding slows a mount that wears it, as shown on the table below.

Barding	Base Speed
	(40 ft.)	(50 ft.)	(60 ft.)
Medium	30 ft.	35 ft.	40 ft.
Heavy	30 ft. <sup>1</sup>	35 ft. <sup>1</sup>	40 ft. <sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> A mount wearing heavy armor moves at only triple its normal speed when running instead of quadruple.

Flying mounts can't fly in medium or heavy barding.

Barded animals require special attention.

You must take care to prevent chafing and sores caused by the armor.

The armor must be removed at night and ideally should not be put on the mount except to prepare for a battle.

Removing and fitting barding takes five times as long as the figures given on Table 7–7: Donning Armor.

A barded animal cannot be used to carry any load other than the rider and normal saddlebags.

Because of this limitation, a mounted warrior often leads a second mount loaded with gear and supplies.

BEDROLL

You never know where you're going to sleep, and a bedroll helps you get better sleep in a hayloft or on the cold ground.

A bedroll consists of bedding and a blanket thin enough to be rolled up and tied.

In an emergency, it can double as a stretcher.

BLANKET, WINTER

A thick, quilted, wool blanket made to keep you warm in cold weather.

CALTROPS

A caltrop is a four-pronged iron spike crafted so that one prong faces up no matter how the caltrop comes to rest. You scatter caltrops on the ground in the hope that your enemies step on them or are at least forced to slow down to avoid them.

One 2-pound bag of caltrops covers an area 5 feet square. Each time a creature moves into an area covered by caltrops (or spends a round fighting while standing in such an area), it might step on one.

The caltrops make an attack roll (base attack bonus +0) against the creature.

For this attack, the creature's shield, armor, and deflection bonuses do not count.

(Deflection averts blows as they approach, but it does not prevent a creature from touching something dangerous).

If the creature is wearing shoes or other footwear, it gets a +2 armor bonus to AC.

If the caltrops succeed on the attack, the creature has stepped on one.

The caltrop deals 1 point of damage, and the creature's speed is reduced by one-half because its foot is wounded.

This movement penalty lasts for 24 hours, or until the creature is successfully treated with a DC 15 Heal check, or until it receives at least 1 point of magical curing.

A charging or running creature must immediately stop if it steps on a caltrop.

Any creature moving at half speed or slower can pick its way through a bed of caltrops with no trouble.

The DM judges the effectiveness of caltrops against unusual opponents.

A Small monstrous centipede, for example, can slither through an area containing caltrops with no chance of hurting itself, and a fire giant wearing fire giant-sized boots is immune to normal-size caltrops.

(They just get stuck in the soles of his boots).

CANDLE

A candle dimly illuminates a 5-foot radius and burns for 1 hour.

See page 164 for more rules on illumination.

CARRIAGE

This four-wheeled vehicle can transport as many as four people within an enclosed cab, plus two drivers.

In general, two horses (or other beasts of burden) draw it. A carriage comes with the harness needed to pull it.

CART

This two-wheeled vehicle can be drawn by a single horse (or other beast of burden). It comes with a harness.

CASE, MAP OR SCROLL

This capped leather or tin rube holds rolled pieces of parchment or paper.

CHAIN

Chain has hardness 10 and 5 hit points. It can be burst with a DC 26 Strength check.

CLERIC'S VESTMENTS

These ecclesiastical clothes are for performing priestly functions, not for adventuring.

CLIMBER'S KIT

A climber's kit includes special pitons, boot tips, gloves, and a harness that aids in all sorts of climbing. This is the perfect tool for climbing and gives you a +2 circumstance bonus on Climb checks.

COLD WEATHER OUTFIT

A cold weather outfit includes a wool coat, linen shirt, wool cap, heavy cloak, thick pants or skirt, and boots. This outfit grants a +5 circumstance bonus on Fortitude saving throws against exposure to cold weather (see the Dungeon Master's Guide for information on cold dangers).

COURTIER'S OUTFIT

This outfit includes fancy, tailored clothes in whatever fashion happens to be the current style in the courts of the nobles.

Anyone trying to influence nobles or courtiers while wearing street dress will have a hard time of it (-2 penalty on Charisma-based skill checks to influence such individuals).

If you wear this outfit without jewelry (costing an additional 50 gp), you look like an out-of-place commoner.

CROWBAR

This iron bar is made for levering closed items open. A crowbar is the perfect tool for prying open doors or chests, shattering chains, and the like, and it grants a +2 circumstance bonus on Strength checks made for such purposes.

If used in combat, treat a crowbar as a one-handed improvised weapon (see page 113) that deals bludgeoning damage equal to that of a club of its size.

DISGUISE KIT

This bag contains cosmetics, hair dye, and small physical props.

The kit is the perfect tool for disguise and provides a +2 circumstance bonus on Disguise checks. A disguise kit is exhausted after ten uses.

ENTERTAINER'S OUTFIT

This set of flashy, perhaps even gaudy, clothes is for entertaining. While the outfit looks whimsical, its practical design lets you tumble, dance, walk a tightrope, or just run (if the audience turns ugly).

EVERBURNING TORCH

This otherwise normal torch has a continual flame spell cast upon it.

An everburning torch clearly illuminates a 20-foot radius and provides shadowy illumination out to a 40-foot radius. See page 164 for more rules on illumination.

EXPLORER'S OUTFIT

This is a full set of clothes for someone who never knows what to expect.

It includes sturdy boots, leather breeches or a skirt, a belt, a shirt (perhaps with a vest or jacket), gloves, and a cloak. Rather than a leather skirt, a leather overtunic may be worn over a cloth skirt.

The clothes have plenty of pockets (especially the cloak). The outfit also includes any extra items you might need, such as a scarf or a wide-brimmed hat.

FEED

Horses, donkeys, mules, and ponies can graze to sustain themselves, but providing feed for them (such as oats) is much better because it provides a more concentrated form of energy, especially if the animal is exerting itself.

If you have a riding dog, you have to feed it at least some meat, which may cost more or less than the given amount.

FLASK

This ceramic, glass, or metal container is fitted with a tight stopper and holds 1 pint of liquid.

FLINT AND STEEL

Striking steel and flint together creates sparks.

By knocking sparks into tinder, you can create a small flame.

Lighting a torch with flint and steel is a full-round action, and lighting any other fire with them takes at least that long.

GALLEY

This three-masted ship has seventy oars on either side and requires a total crew of 200.

A galley is 130 feet long and 20 feet wide, and it can carry 150 tons of cargo or 250 soldiers.

For 8,000 gp more, it can be fitted with a ram and castles with firing platforms fore, aft, and amidships.

This ship cannot make sea voyages and sticks to the coast. It moves about 4 miles per hour when being rowed or under sail.

GRAPPLING HOOK

When tied to the end of a rope, a grappling hook can secure the rope to a battlement, window ledge, tree limb, or other protrusion.

Throwing a grappling hook successfully requires a Use Rope check (DC 10, +2 per 10 feet of distance thrown).

HAMMER

This one-handed hammer with an iron head is useful for pounding pitons into a wall.

If a hammer is used in combat, treat it as a one-handed improvised weapon (see page 113) that deals bludgeoning damage equal to that of a spiked gauntlet of its size.

HEALER'S KIT

This kit is full of herbs, salves, bandages and other useful materials.

It is the perfect tool for healing and provides a +2 circumstance bonus on Heal checks.

A healer's kit is exhausted after ten uses.

HOLLY AND MISTLETOE

Sprigs of holly and mistletoe are used by druids as the default divine focus for druid spells.

Druids can easily find these plants in wooded areas and then harvest sprigs from them essentially for free.

HOLY SYMBOL, SILVER OR WOODEN

A holy symbol focuses positive energy.

A cleric or paladin uses it as the focus for his spells and as a tool for turning undead.

Each religion has its own holy symbol, and a sun symbol is the default holy symbol for clerics not associated with any particular religion.

A silver holy symbol works no better than a wooden one, but it serves as a mark of status for the wielder.

HOLY WATER

Holy water damages undead creatures and evil outsiders almost as if it were acid.

A flask of holy water can be thrown as a splash weapon (see Throw Splash Weapon, page 158).

Treat this attack as a ranged touch attack with a range increment of 10 feet.

A flask breaks if thrown against the body of a corporeal creature, but to use it against an incorporeal creature, you must open the flask and pour the holy water out onto the target.

Thus, you can douse an incorporeal creature with holy water only if you are adjacent to it.

Doing so is a ranged touch attack that does not provoke attacks of opportunity.

A direct hit by a flask of holy water deals 2d4 points of damage to an undead creature or an evil outsider.

Each such creature within 5 feet of the point where the flask hits takes 1 point of damage from the splash.

Temples to good deities sell holy water at cost (making no profit) because the clerics are happy to supply people with what they need to battle evil.

INK

This is black ink.

You can buy ink in other colors, but it costs twice as much.

INKPEN

An inkpen is a wooden stick with a special tip on the end.

The tip draws ink in when dipped in a vial and leaves an ink trail when drawn across a surface.

JUG, CLAY

This basic ceramic jug is fitted with a stopper and holds 1 gallon of liquid.

KEELBOAT

This 50- to 75-foot-long ship is 15 to 20 feet wide and has a few oars to supplement its single mast with a square sail.

It has a crew of eight to fifteen and can carry 40 to 50 tons of cargo or 100 soldiers.

It can make sea voyages, as well as sail down rivers (thanks to its flat bottom).

It moves about 1 mile per hour.

LADDER, 10-FOOT

This item is a straight, simple wooden ladder.

LAMP, COMMON

A lamp clearly illuminates a 15-foot radius, provides shadowy illumination out to a 30-foot radius, and burns for 6 hours on a pint of oil.

It burns with a more even flame than a torch, but, unlike a lantern, it uses an open flame and it can spill easily, a fact that makes it too dangerous for most adventuring.

You can carry a lamp in one hand.

See page 164 for more rules on illumination.

LANTERN, BULLSEYE

A bullseye lantern has only a single shutter.

Its other sides are highly polished inside to reflect the light in a single direction.

A bullseye lantern provides clear illumination in a 60-foot cone and shadowy illumination in a 120-foot cone.

It burns for 6 hours on a pint of oil.

You can carry a bullseye lantern in one hand.

See page 164 for more rules on illumination.

LANTERN, HOODED

A hooded lantern has shuttered or hinged sides.

It clearly illuminates a 30-foot radius and provides shadowy illumination in a 60-foot radius.

It burns for 6 hours on a pint of oil.

You can carry a hooded lantern in one hand.

See page 164 for more rules on illumination.

LOCK

A lock is worded with a large, bulky key.

The DC to open a lock with the Open Lock skill depends on the lock's quality: simple (DC 20), average (DC 25), good (DC 30), or superior (DC 40).

LONGSHIP

This 75-foot-long ship with forty oars requires a total crew of 50.

It has a single mast and a square sail, and it can carry 50 tons of cargo or 120 soldiers.

A longship can make sea voyages.

It moves about 3 miles per hour when being rowed or under sail.

MAGNIFYING GLASS

This simple lens allows a closer look at small objects.

It is also useful as a substitute for flint and steel when starting fires.

Lighting a fire with a magnifying glass requires light as bright as sunlight to focus, tinder to ignite, and at least a full-round action.

A magnifying glass grants a +2 circumstance bonus on Appraise checks involving any item that is small or highly detailed, such as a gem.

MANACLES AND MANACLES, MASTERWORK

The manacles detailed on Table 7–8: Goods and Services can bind a Medium creature.

A manacled creature can use the Escape Artist skill to slip free (DC 30, or DC 35 for masterwork manacles).

Breaking the manacles requires a Strength check (DC 26, or DC 28 for masterwork manacles).

Manacles have hardness 10 and 10 hit points.

Most manacles have locks; add the cost of the lock you want to the cost of the manacles.

For the same cost, you can buy manacles for a Small creature.

For a Large creature, manacles cost ten times the indicated amount, and for a Huge creature, one hundred times this amount.

Gargantuan, Colossal, Tiny, Diminutive, and Fine creatures can be held only by specially made manacles.

MIRROR, SMALL STEEL

A polished steel mirror is handy when you want to look around corners, signal friends with reflected sunlight, keep an eye on a medusa, make sure that you look good enough to present yourself to the queen, or examine wounds that you've received on hard-to-see parts of your body.

MONK'S OUTFIT

This simple outfit includes sandals, loose breeches, and a loose shirt, and is all bound together with sashes.

The outfit is designed to give you maximum mobility, and it's made of high-quality fabric.

You can hide small weapons in pockets hidden in the folds, and the sashes are strong enough to serve as short ropes.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENT, COMMON OR MASTERWORK

Popular instruments include the fife, recorder, lute, mandolin, and shawm.

A masterwork instrument grants a +2 circumstance bonus on Perform checks involving its use.

NOBLE'S OUTFIT

This set of clothes is designed specifically to be expensive and to show it.

Precious metals and gems are worked into the clothing. To fit into the noble crowd, every would-be noble also needs a signet ring (see Adventuring Gear, above) and jewelry (worth at least 100 gp).

OIL

A pint of oil burns for 6 hours in a lantern.

You can use a flask of oil as a splash weapon (see Throw Splash Weapon, page 158).

Use the rules for alchemist's fire, except that it takes a full-round action to prepare a flask with a fuse.

Once it is thrown, there is a 50% chance of the flask igniting successfully.

You can pour a pint of oil on the ground to cover an area 5 feet square, provided that the surface is smooth.

If lit, the oil burns for 2 rounds and deals 1d3 points of fire damage to each creature in the area.

PAPER

A sheet of standard paper is made from cloth fibers.

PARCHMENT

A sheet of parchment is a piece of goat hide or sheepskin that has been prepared for writing on.

PEASANT'S OUTFIT

This set of clothes consists of a loose shirt and baggy breeches, or a loose shirt and skirt or overdress.

Cloth wrappings are used for shoes.

PITON

When a wall doesn't offer handholds and footholds, you can make your own.

A piton is a steel spike with an eye through which you can loop a rope.

(See the Climb skill, page 69).

POLE, 10-FOOT

When you suspect a trap, you can put the end of your 10-foot pole through that hole in the wall instead of reaching in with your hand.

POUCH, BELT

This leather pouch straps to your belt. It's good for holding small items.

RAM, PORTABLE

This iron-shod wooden beam is the perfect tool for battering down a door.

Not only does it give you a +2 circumstance bonus on Strength checks made to break open a door and it allows a second person to help you without having to roll, increasing your bonus by 2 (see Breaking Items, page 167).

RATIONS, TRAIL

Trail rations are compact, dry, high-energy foods suitable for travel, such as jerky, dried fruit, hardtack, and nuts.

ROPE, HEMPEN

This rope has 2 hit points and can be burst with a DC 23 Strength check.

ROPE, SILK

This rope has 4 hit points and can be burst with a DC 24 Strength check. It is so supple that it provides a +2 circumstance bonus on Use Rope checks.

ROWBOAT

This 8- to 12-foot-long boat holds two or three Medium passengers. It moves about 1-1/2 miles per hour.

ROYAL OUTFIT

This is just the clothing, not the royal scepter, crown, ring, and other accoutrements. Royal clothes are ostentatious, with gems, gold, silk, and fur in abundance.

SACK

This item is made of burlap or a similar material and has a drawstring so it can be closed.

SADDLE, EXOTIC

An exotic saddle is like a normal saddle of the same sort except that it is designed for an unusual mount, such as a hippogriff. Exotic saddles come in military, pack, and riding styles.

SADDLE, MILITARY

A military saddle braces the rider, providing a +2 circumstance bonus on Ride checks related to staying in the saddle. If you're knocked unconscious while in a military saddle, you have a 75% chance to stay in the saddle (compared to 50% for a riding saddle).

SADDLE, PACK

A pack saddle holds gear and supplies, but not a rider. It holds as much gear as the mount can carry. (The Monster Manual has notes on how much mounts can carry).

SADDLE, RIDING

The standard riding saddle supports a rider.

SAILING SHIP

This larger, seaworthy ship is 75 to 90 feet long and 20 feet wide and has a crew of 20. It can carry 150 tons of cargo. It has square sails on its two masts and can make sea voyages. It moves about 2 miles per hour.

SCALE, MERCHANT'S

This scale includes a small balance and pans, plus a suitable assortment of weights. A scale grants a +2 circumstance bonus on Appraise checks involving items that are valued by weight, including anything made of precious metals.

SCHOLAR'S OUTFIT

Perfect for a scholar, this outfit includes a robe, a belt, a cap, soft shoes, and possibly a cloak.

SIGNET RING

Each signet ring has a distinctive design carved into it. When you press this ring into warm sealing wax, you leave an identifying mark.

SLED

This is a wagon on runners for moving through snow and over ice. In general, two horses (or other beasts of burden) draw it. A sled comes with the harness needed to pull it.

SLEDGE

This two-handed, iron-headed hammer is good for smashing open treasure chests.

SMOKESTICK

This alchemically treated wooden stick instantly creates thick, opaque smoke when ignited.

The smoke fills a 10-foot cube (treat the effect as a fog cloud spell, except that a moderate or stronger wind dissipates the smoke in 1 round).

The stick is consumed after 1 round, and the smoke dissipates naturally.

SPELL COMPONENT POUCH

This small, watertight leather belt pouch has many compartments.

A spellcaster with a spell component pouch is assumed to have all the material components and focuses needed for spellcasting, except for those components that have a specific cost, divine focuses, and focuses that wouldn't fit in a pouch (such as the natural pool that a druid needs to look into to cast scrying).

SPELLBOOK, WIZARD'S (BLANK)

This large, leatherbound book serves as a wizard's reference. A spellbook has 100 pages of parchment, and each spell takes up one page per spell level (one page each for 0-level spells).

See Space in the Spellbook, page 179.

SPYGLASS

Objects viewed through a spyglass are magnified to twice their size.

STABLING

Includes a stable, feed, and grooming.

SUNROD

This 1-foot-long, gold-tipped, iron rod glows brightly when struck.

It clearly illuminates a 30-foot radius and provides shadowy illumination in a 60-foot radius.

It glows for 6 hours, after which the gold tip is burned out and worthless.

See pages 164 for more rules on illumination.

TANGLEFOOT BAG

This round leather bag is full of alchemical goo.

When you throw a tanglefoot bag at a creature (as a ranged touch attack with a range increment of 10 feet), the bag comes apart and the goo bursts out, entangling the target and then becoming tough and resilient upon exposure to air.

An entangled creature takes a -2 penalty on attack rolls and a -4 penalty to Dexterity and must make a DC 15 Reflex save or be glued to the floor, unable to move.

Even on a successful save, it can move only at half speed.

Huge or larger creatures are unaffected by a tanglefoot bag.

A flying creature is not stuck to the floor, but it must make a DC 15 Reflex save or be unable to fly (assuming it uses its wings to fly) and fall to the ground.

A tanglefoot bag does not function underwater.

A creature that is glued to the floor (or unable to fly) can break free by making a DC 17 Strength check or by dealing 15 points of damage to the goo with a slashing weapon.

A creature trying to scrape goo off itself, or another creature assisting, does not need to make an attack roll; hitting the goo is automatic, after which the creature that hit makes a damage roll to see how much of the goo was scraped off. Once free, the creature can move (including flying) at half speed.

A character capable of spellcasting who is bound by the goo must make a DC 15 Concentration check to cast a spell.

The goo becomes brittle and fragile after 2d4 rounds, cracking apart and losing its effectiveness.

An application of universal solvent (see page 268 of the Dungeon Master's Guide) to a stuck creature dissolves the alchemical goo immediately.

TENT

This simple tent sleeps two.

THIEVES' TOOLS

This kit contains the tools you need to use the Disable Device and Open Lock skills.

The kit includes one or more skeleton keys, long metal picks and pries, a long-nosed clamp, a small hand saw, and a small wedge and hammer.

Without these tools, you must improvise tools, and you take a -2 circumstance penalty on Disable Device and Open Locks checks.

THIEVES' TOOLS, MASTERWORK

This kit contains extra tools and tools of better make, which grant a +2 circumstance bonus on Disable Device and Open Lock checks.

THUNDERSTONE

You can throw this stone as a ranged attack with a range increment of 20 feet.

When it strikes a hard surface (or is struck hard), it creates a deafening bang that is treated as a sonic attack.

Each creature within a 10-foot-radius spread must make a DC 15 Fortitude save or be deafened for 1 hour.

A deafened creature, in addition to the obvious effects, takes a -4 penalty on initiative and has a 20% chance to miscast and lose any spell with a verbal component that it tries to cast.

Since you don't need to hit a specific target, you can simply aim at a particular 5-foot square.

Treat the target square as AC 5; if you miss, see Throw Splash Weapon, page 158, to determine where the thunderstone lands.

TINDERTWIG

The alchemical substance on the end of this small, wooden stick ignites when struck against a rough surface.

Creating a flame with a tindertwig is much faster than creating a flame with flint and steel (or a magnifying glass) and tinder.

Lighting a torch with a tindertwig is a standard action (rather than a full-round action), and lighting any other fire with one is at least a standard action.

TOOL, MASTERWORK

This well-made item is the perfect tool for the job.

It grants a +2 circumstance bonus on a related skill check (if any).

Some examples of this sort of item from Table 7–8 include masterwork artisan's tools, masterwork thieves' tools, disguise kit, climber's kit, healer's kit, and masterwork musical instrument.

This entry covers just about anything else.

Bonuses provided by multiple masterwork items used toward the same skill check do not stack, so masterwork pitons and a masterwork climber's kit do not provide a +4 bonus if used together on a Climb check.

TORCH

A typical torch is a wooden rod capped with a twisted flax soaked in tallow.

A torch burns for 1 hour, clearly illuminating a 20-foot radius and providing shadowy illumination out to a 40-foot radius.

See page 164 for more rules on illumination.

If a torch is used in combat, treat it as a one-handed improvised weapon (see page 113) that deals bludgeoning damage equal to that of a gauntlet of its size, plus 1 point of fire damage.

TRAVELER'S OUTFIT

This set of clothes consists of boots, a wool skirt or breeches, a sturdy belt, a shirt (perhaps with a vest or jacket), and an ample cloak with a hood.

UNHOLY SYMBOLS

An unholy symbol is like a holy symbol except that it focuses negative energy and is used by evil clerics (or by neutral clerics who want to cast evil spells or command undead).

A skull is the default unholy symbol for clerics not associated with any particular religion.

VIAL

This ceramic, glass, or metal vial is fitted with a tight stopper and holds 1 ounce of liquid.

The stoppered container usually is no more than 1 inch wide and 3 inches high.

WAGON

This is a four-wheeled, open vehicle for transporting heavy loads.

In general, two horses (or other beasts of burden) draw it. A wagon comes with the harness needed to pull it.

WARSHIP

This 100-foot-long ship has a single mast, although oars can also propel it.

It has a crew of 60 to 80 rowers.

This ship can carry 160 soldiers, but not for long distances, since there isn't room for supplies to support that many people.

The warship cannot make sea voyages and sticks to the coast.

It is not used for cargo.

It moves about 2-1/2 miles per hour when being rowed or under sail.

WATER CLOCK

This large, bulky contrivance gives the time accurate to within half an hour per day since it was last set.

It requires a source of water, and it must be kept still because it marks time by the regulated flow of droplets of water.

It is primarily an amusement for the wealthy and a tool for the student of arcane lore.

Most people have no way to tell exact time, and there's little point in knowing that it is 2:30 p.

m.

if nobody else does.

WATERSKIN

A waterskin is a leather pouch with a narrow neck that is used for holding water.

POWER OF FAERÛN (3.5)

AMN COINS

A wide variety of earlier city-based mintings are being actively replaced (old ones collected and melted down) by a new currency that has also been officially adopted in Tethyr.

These "new glint" are all finely stamped and identical, though they retain the names of the earlier coins: fandar (copper), taran (silver), and danter (gold).

(In Tethyr they are referred to as donsar, paxar, and aenar, respectively, with both realms retaining their slang terms for all coins).

Foreface: a circle of six tiny four-pointed stars.

Obverse: an eight-spoked wagon wheel, side-on.

AUTHOKH AND THE BELBOLT

The authokh and the belbolt (usually known merely as the bolt) began as the coins of a single city in Chessenta; just which one is now forgotten.

An authokh is a square coin stamped out of delmed silver, with a small central hole to allow it to be strung onto a paythong or wire loop.

On one face, it bears an engraved ring of twelve leaves encircling the hole, and on the other a ring of twelve radiating daggers.

Although originally worth 12 gp in Chessenta, authokhs today are universally valued at 5 gp.

“Delming” is the practice of preventing silver from tarnishing by alloying it with copper and certain white metals in precise proportions.

Delmed silver turns a translucent green and is incapable of taking a high shine, no matter how much it is polished.

Belbolts are thick, heavy gold coins of curious shape: a circle with two shallow, matching cut-outs in its edges.

The result resembles two axe-heads fused back-to-back with curved blades outermost.

Belbolts are worth 20 gp.

BLOODPURGE

Found in the depths of freshwater, marshes polluted by magical and nonmagical wastes, this herb can neutralize minor poisons.

It grants a +2 alchemical bonus on Heal checks to treat poison.

Cost: 15 gp/dose.

BLOODSTAUNCH

Found in dry gullies in semi-arid temperate zones, this herb thickens blood very quickly upon direct contact, and so can be applied to open wounds to slow or stop bleeding.

It grants a +2 alchemical bonus on Heal checks to administer first aid.

Cost: 10 gp/dose.

CORMYR COINS

Copper pieces are referred to as thumbs, silvers are falcons, gold are lions and platinum coins are tricrowns.

Modern Cormyrean coins bear the monarch’s face and name on the foreface as well as a date, denomination, and mint mark on the obverse.

The mark is almost always that of the Royal Mint in Suzail (a full-on bearded, hatless wizard’s face, colloquially known as “Old Vangey”).

About ten percent of coins bear the mark of High Horn minting (two parallel crescent moons, horns to the right).

There has only been one minting since the death of Azoun IV, and these Regency coins bear the Purple Dragon royal arms with five parallel horizontal bars across its body, rather than the face of the regent, Alusair, or the infant Azoun V.

Elder Forest Kingdom coins (those more than eighty years old) are identical to modern ones except that instead of dates they bear the words “first minting”, “second minting”, and so on.

These numbered mintings denote occasions during the reign of a particular monarch that coins were issued (there were eight mintings in the reign of Azoun IV, but most early kings had three mintings at most).

FLESHWORT

Made from the stalk of a gray, celerylike vegetable, fleshwort is found only on recent battlefields, where corpses are buried near the surface or left to rot above ground.

If sewn into an internal wound, fleshwort is slowly absorbed by any mammalian body as raw material to build new tissue.

It grants a +2 alchemical bonus on Heal checks to provide long-term care.

Cost: 5 gp/application.

SALT AND SPICES

The salt trade is very important, but it is not as expensive in Faerûn as it was historically in the real world.

This is due to other preservatives being readily available (so salt serves primarily as a seasoning), and because salt has never been scarce.

Salt can be had fairly cheaply from a nearby source almost everywhere in settled Faerûn, so shipping great amounts of it isn’t vital.

Salt is gleaned from many salt marshes—such as the Flooded Forest between the Moonsea and the Dragonreach, the Adder Swamp in Chessenta, the Spider Swamp, and Rethild (The Great Swamp)—by ladling the water out on large, flat, sunbaked rocks or rocks over which expanses of black cloth have been spread.

It is also mined from natural rock-coating deposits around the shores of the Lake of Steam and Azulduth the Lake of Salt, and from vast salt plains in Anauroch and Raurin where there were once large seas.

Salt mines are also located in Chult, Calimshan, under certain islands in the Korinn Archipelago and north of Militant, in the mountains girdling Amn, in the Orsraun Mountains, and so on.

Given the various aquatic and subterranean races present in Faerûn, gleaning salt is seldom difficult.

Many gnome families make good livings mining small salt deposits and trundling the results to the nearest human town or village market, so salt caravans are unheard of (though individual salt wagons are often found in mixed-goods caravans).

Much of the price of salt comes from transporting this heavy commodity.

Like salt, spices are produced from local plants (usually dried, ground up, and mixed together in secret proportions) in many locales.

In recent years, increasing distances habitually traveled by merchants have spread local spices widely.

and trade in various bulk dried, powdered spices is steadily increasing.

SEMBIA COINS

Steelpence (of iron, and square) are used in place of copper, silver coins (triangular, with blunted corners) are called ravens, and gold coins (five-sided) are nobles.

All Sembian coins have the raven-and-silver arms of Sembia on the foreface, and the denomination stamped above (for example, “ONE NOBLE”) and the date (in DR) below—always curving, regardless of the shape of the coin—around a “proof stamp” (minting mark) on the obverse.

Sembian coins often have a bluish tinge, from the grease acquired during minting being burned off in a flame. This grease is deliberately cooked into all steelpence to inhibit rust (it does a fair, not foolproof, job).

SILVERBARK SAP

The sap of the silverbark tree is clear and slightly sticky. It acts as a minor antitoxin, granting anyone who consumes at least 1 ounce a +2 alchemical bonus on Fortitude saving throws against poison for 1 hour.

A typical silverbark tree can lie harvested of 2d4 doses of sap per year.

Cost: 10 gp/dose.

TRADEBARS

Tradebars are very widely accepted because they must conform closely to a given size and weight.

They are the best way to melt down and reuse “suspicious” coins, because an existing tradebar can easily be pressed into handy riverbank clay to make a mold for a new one.

A 25-gp tradebar is a brick with rounded corners measuring just over an inch thick, three inches across, and six inches in length.

Calishite tradebars (also used in Tharsult, Tashluta, the Tashalar, and other Southern trade) are seven inches long, but both long sides bow smoothly inward half an inch on each side, making the bar easier to grip.

A 50-gp tradebar has the same dimensions around its bottom as a 25-gp bar, but is three inches thick, and tapers inward so the top surface is a half-inch smaller, all around. No (legal) bow-sided 50-gp tradebars exist.

A 75-gp tradebar is an inch thicker (taller) than a 50-gp bar, with no taper to its sides at all.

A 100-gp tradebar is two inches thick, three inches across, and nine inches long, with a central hole (for carrying or for passing a cord through, to tie into bundles).

The hole shouldn't be much more than an inch across.

Proof and ownership marks are commonly stamped into the bottom surface of a tradebar, and don't affect value.

Tradebars minted more than two centuries ago vary widely in dimensions and value, but are either weighed (and valued on the spot) when traded today, or melted down when they must be transferred from one owner to another. Most tradebars found in hidden “treasure” hoards are hasty burials in the face of advancing foes or fierce weather, and they are soon snapped up when nature or chance digging shifts enough earth to reveal them.

ZHENTIL KEEP COINS

A trading center since its founding, and brief home to a continuous flow of gems and metals (in the form of rough-smelted tradebars) from the mines north of the Moonsea, Zhentil Keep has minted various coins down the years. (Persistent rumors tell of vast amounts of smelted gold buried under or near the Citadel of the Raven).

Most Zhent coins are rough-edged and irregular, bearing crude stampings of a portcullis gate on one side and a diamond-shaped gemstone on the other.

Since the most recent rebuilding of the Keep, a few copper and silver coins and many gold coins have been minted.

The copper and silver are mere coatings on iron, deemed worthless by most folk outside Zhentil Keep, but the gold coins are the real thing (the slightly reddish gold found mainly northeast of Glistar).

The copper coin is squarish, pierced by a central hole to allow stringing, with the four sharp corners snapped off. Foreface: the Wingless Dragon (scaled serpent with fanciful head facing counter-clockwise) biting its own tail, curling around central hole.

Obverse: ten tiny four-point stars encircling the central hole.

Known as a fang to Zhents and in the Dales, but as “dung-pieces” elsewhere.

The silver coin is triangular, also pierced with a central hole for stringing, but with the corners not clipped (the silver coating usually wears off quickly in those areas).

Both sides: six four-pointed stars encircle the central hole.

Known as a talon or a naal in the Keep and the Dales, but everywhere else as a “dung-flea bit” or just a “flea-bit”.

The gold coin is square, with corners untrimmed.

Two parallel sides bow inward symmetrically (concave), for easy grasping by thumbs (no central hole).

Foreface: three crenellated castle turret-tops, central one slightly taller than the others.

Obverse: wolf head, side-on with nose to the right and with three drops of tears or blood falling away beneath it.

Known formally as a glory, but called a weeping wolf everywhere.

RACES OF FAERÛN (3.0)

TABLE A-3: ADVENTURING GEAR

Item	Cost	Weight
Armor lubricant	40 gp	1 lb.
Caltrops, crystal	150 gp	2 lb.
Drogue wing	300 gp	30 lb.
Footsaw trap	700 gp	15 lb.
Mobile brace	10 gp	3 lb.
Potion bladder	2 gp	1/10 lb.
Rope climber	15 gp	3 lb.
Snowshoes	1 gp	2 lb.
Wagon shield
Standard	75 gp	40 lb.
Sniper	100 gp	40 lb.

TABLE A-4: SPECIAL ITEMS

Item	Cost	Weight
Drow poison	75 gp	1/10 lb.
Flash grenade	60 gp	1/10 lb.
Instant campfire	50 gp	10 lb.
Wild dwarf knockout poison	150 gp	1/10 lb.

ARMOR LUBRICANT

This nonmagical oil reduces the friction that impedes movement in metallic armor.

One application of armor lubricant reduces the armor check penalty by 1 (to a minimum of 0).

Each application takes 1 minute to apply and lasts 1d4 hours.

It is not possible to apply armor lubricant to armor currently being worn.

Armor lubricant provides no benefit to shields or to armor not made primarily of metal.

Creating one application of armor lubricant requires a successful Alchemy check (DC 15) and follows the rules outlined in the discussion of Craft skills in the Player's Handbook.

CRYSTAL CALTROPS

These special caltrops are made out of a tough crystal.

These are deployed just like traditional caltrops.

When they score a hit, they do normal damage and release a poisonous gas.

The victim must make a Fortitude save (DC 12) or instantly fall asleep for 1 minute.

After 1 minute, the target must make another Fortitude save (DC 12) or sleep for an additional 1d4 minutes.

The gas affects creatures immune to magical sleep, but not creatures immune to poison.

DROGUE WING

This pleated cloak unfurls into a gliding batlike wing 15 feet across if the wearer falls more than 20 feet.

A drogue wing needs another 20 feet of falling distance in order to arrest the wearer's fall and unrestricted (at least 50 feet in diameter) gliding room.

If all three conditions are met, a drogue wing negates falling damage.

Once deployed, a drogue wing must be carefully refolded (a tedious task that requires 1 full hour) before it can be reused.

There is a 25% chance that a drogue wing is ruined after each use.

Drogue wings are popular among the hippogriff-mounted skyriders of the Great Rift.

DROW POISON

Drow are renowned for their use of unconsciousness-inducing poison in subterranean ambushes.

The dark elves carefully guard the secret of their venom, and it is exceedingly difficult to find it outside drow realms and outposts.

Type: Injury DC 13; Initial Damage: Unconsciousness for 1 minute; Secondary Damage: Unconsciousness for 2d4 hours; Price: 75 gp.

FLASH GRENADE

A creation of the deep gnomes (svirfneblin), this small sphere about the size of a chicken egg requires a ranged touch attack to hit (range increment 10 ft.) and scatters as a grenadelike weapon.

It is effective only when thrown into a fire source, where it explodes in a brilliant flash of light.

Any creature within 10 feet must make a successful Fortitude save (DC 10) or be blinded for 1d4 rounds.

Creatures with light blindness (such as drow) are affected as if a daylight spell had been cast.

There is no effect if the grenade misses the fire, although the grenade is ruined.

FOOTSAW TRAP

This item is similar to others of its kind that are typically designed to trap large animals such as bears or cougars. Its jaws are fitted with thin saw blades mounted on springs, and the mechanism is designed to cut the feet of any captive who struggles against its grip.

The ghostwise hin did not invent this trap, but they have made excellent use of it: When enemies threaten, they salt the ground near their campsites with these dangerous devices, hiding them under thin layers of leaves or soil.

A creature can discover a concealed footsaw trap with a successful Search check (DC 15).

Once found, the trap can be disabled with a successful Disable Device check (DC 15).

Anyone who walks over a footsaw trap triggers it; the trap makes a melee touch attack with a +8 bonus.

If its attack is successful, the trap deals 1d6 points of damage to the victim.

A victim caught in a footsaw trap can move at half speed if the device is not attached to another object (such as to a tree or boulder by a length of chain).

If it is attached in such a fashion, the victim must break the attachment, otherwise he cannot move.

The trap inflicts an additional 1d4 points of damage from the saw blades every round that a trapped victim takes any action that involves movement.

A trapped creature can pry open the jaws of the trap and escape (Strength check DC 25) or loose himself with an Escape Artist check (DC 30).

Failure means that the trap deals another 1d4 points of damage to the victim and that the victim remains trapped.

A footsaw trap is a CR 2 trap.

They can be constructed with the Craft (trapmaking) skill (DC 20).

INSTANT CAMPFIRE

An instant campfire consists of a leather bag filled with tinder, logs, and fuel.

The drawstring that holds the sack shut is studded with tiny flakes of flint and steel; the sack itself is alchemically treated so that it catches fire easily.

When the drawstring is pulled, the entire bag immolates, creating a Tiny campfire (suitable for cooking) in 1 round.

The campfire lasts for 30 minutes after ignition, but can be fed with dry wood just like any other fire.

These items ignite even in moderate rain, but burn out quickly in wet conditions unless shelter is provided.

MOBILE BRACE

This small staff can extend and lock at any length from 5 to 11 feet.

It is commonly used to make a sturdy brace across a passage, granting a sure purchase for one or more ropes.

A properly set brace can support up to 400 pounds of weight (less if the walls are soft, slippery, crumbling, or otherwise offer unsure purchase).

Setting a brace allows characters to securely set a rope or grappling hook where doing so would normally be impossible.

Adventuring groups can send a skilled climber or jumper to negotiate tricky ascents or dangerous falls, set a brace on the far side of the obstacle, and then give less nimble characters something to hang on to while they cross the dangerous area.

POTION BLADDER

This is a flexible, narrow-necked pouch, usually made of oiled leather or the preserved stomach of a small animal. Used extensively by water-dwelling creatures such as aquatic elves, these pouches hold 1 ounce of liquid (the same volume as a potion) and can be squeezed carefully to allow drinking of fluids (such as potions) underwater without spilling.

ROPE CLIMBER

This hand-held device consists of a powerful winch and locking wheel assembly that fits most standard ropes. When threaded with a rope, the winch offers one-way travel with the benefit of tremendous leverage. Using the climber to ascend a rope grants a +5 circumstance bonus on Climb checks, but it halves the rate of ascent.

Threading a rope through the climber is a full-round action, as is removing it from a rope.

The locking wheels turn only in one direction, preventing the user from slipping back down the rope.

However, this means that for two people to use the same rope climber, one must ascend the rope, remove the device, and lower it back down to the next user.

SNOWSHOES

Fashioned of wood and strips of rawhide or sinew, snowshoes are invaluable for movement across deep snow. Snowshoes eliminate the hampered movement penalty for movement across deep snow but impose a 1/2 movement penalty across other types of terrain (see Hampered Movement in Chapter 9 of the Player's Handbook, pages 142–143).

WAGON SHIELDS

These are large wooden shields (generally of solid oak) reinforced with iron.

They can be quickly fitted together to protect wagons and similar open-topped vehicles.

One person can mount a wagon shield as a full-round action.

Two people working together can mount a shield as a standard action.

Once mounted, each shield provides a Small character in the wagon with three-quarters cover; a Medium-size character gains one-half cover behind a wagon shield. Each wagon shield has hardness 5 and 30 hit points.

Some are fitted with arrow slits to allow those inside the wagon to fire on attackers without additional exposure.

Most wagons in Luiren are constructed with special racks beneath the wagon bed that hold six shields.

The shields are normally sold in quantities of six, as that is the number required to fully protect the average Luiren wagon.

WILD DWARF KNOCKOUT POISON

Wild dwarves coat their blowgun darts with poison made from a plant that grows only in the Jungles of Chult.

Wild dwarves are immune to the effects of the poison.

Type: Injury DC 14; Initial Damage: slow effect for 5 rounds; Secondary Damage: Unconsciousness for 1 minute; Price: 150 gp.

RACES OF STONE (3.5)

TABLE 7-4: MISCELLANEOUS GEAR

Item	Cost	Weight	Craft DC
Blasting pellets (1 bag)	50 gp	2 lb.	25

Spiderlily essence (1 application)	75 gp	—	25

BLASTING PELLETS

Blasting pellets look like ball bearings or stones and come in bags.

One bag of these alchemical items is enough to cover a 5-foot square.

During each round when a creature moves through an area covered in blasting pellets (or fights while standing in such an area), it must make a successful DC 15 Reflex saving throw to avoid breaking one.

Breaking one pellet sets off a chain reaction among the others, and they all explode loudly, dealing 1d6 points of sonic damage to the creature in the square.

Spreading a bag of pellets over a wider area or throwing the bag at a target has no substantial effect.

Gnomes use blasting pellets mainly as an alarm system, hiding the pellets under leaves or among other stones and gravel.

BLISTER OIL

Blister oil is a highly refined alchemical liquid that causes painful blisters upon contact.

To use it, a thin coat must be applied to a surface, such as a sword hilt or door handle.

One application covers roughly a 6-inch-by-6-inch square area.

Once applied, it remains effective for 2d4 hours. Each vial of blister oil contains 1d8 applications. When the oil touches bare skin, the victim must make a DC 15 Fortitude save to avoid painful red blisters that spring up on the affected area of skin, dealing 1d4 points of damage per application used. In addition, the victim takes a -2 penalty on Dexterity-based checks, including Reflex saves, for 2d4 days. Magical healing applied to this damage removes the blisters and the penalty. Natural healing can remove the damage normally, but the penalty on Dexterity-based checks remains until magical healing is applied or the 2d4 days elapse.

EARTHSILK JERSEY

One material the dwarves developed early on in their society was earthsilk. The basis of the material is an odd fungus known as maiden's hair. It grows long, thin, silken tendrils that hang down from the main mass and collect moisture from the damp underground air. The fungus itself is time consuming to harvest, because it is very tough and difficult to cut despite its delicate appearance. Once the fungus is harvested, the long, thin tendrils are removed and used as thread or light yarn. This thread is called earthsilk, and it can be woven into a fabric that rivals the finest silks of the surface world for feel and sheen, though it is far heavier and coarser than any elven silk made. Earthsilk fabric is a staple of the dwarven wardrobe, and nearly every subterranean dwarf owns at least one earthsilk jersey, typically worn in place of an ordinary tunic under a vest or armor. An earthsilk jersey retains the fibers' natural toughness, providing its wearer with damage reduction 1/slashing or bludgeoning. It may be worn under another type of armor. Once crafted, earthsilk fabric is durable unless torn. If the wearer of an earthsilk jersey takes a critical hit that deals piercing damage, the garment is torn and does not provide damage reduction unless it is repaired.

EARTHSILK ROPE

In addition to being used for clothing, earthsilk fibers can be woven together to form a strong, thin rope that finds common use in many dwarf cities. Earthsilk rope feels similar to silk ropes made in the surface world but is roughly twice as thick, putting it between silk and hempen ropes in bulk and ease of use. It is stronger even than silk rope, however, and can bear heavier loads without breaking. Earthsilk rope has hardness 1, 10 hit points, and can be burst with a DC 26 Strength check.

GOLIATH HEALING KITS

Many races have mastered the use of herbs and medicines to treat injuries, and the goliaths are no exception. They discovered the healing properties of the items available to them in their mountain homes long ago.

Through time and experimentation, goliath healers have come to specialize in healing methods for their own people. Although goliaths are anatomically similar to other humanoid and monstrous humanoid races, their connection to the earth has granted them a special affinity for the creatures and plants that grow in the mountains and the dark places below. A goliath healing kit grants a +4 circumstance bonus on Heal checks made by goliaths and other earth-linked races, including dwarves and gnomes. It provides no bonus on Heal checks for a member of any other race. A goliath healing kit has twelve uses before it is depleted.

HEARTHFIRE

A concoction of dwarf alchemists, hearthfire is a blue-green gel, typically poured into a large shallow container and allowed to solidify. The substance is then left in the pan as is or removed and cut into 2-inch cubes. When water is poured onto the gel (1 ounce per 2-inch cube is sufficient), it "ignites", causing blue-green flames to spring from the substance. The flames have no heat and will not harm anything that touches them. Each 2-inch block provides light for 24 hours when wet, shedding illumination as a torch (20-foot radius). The hours of use need not be continuous, so a flaming cube can be extinguished, dried off, and used again at a later time. In the dwarves' underground communities, hearthfire sees common use in city lanterns, as well as home hearths and braziers. Hearthfire lanterns hold one dose each and are typically hooded.

SADDLE, BURROWER'S

This specialized exotic saddle allows the rider to stay safely on a mount that has the ability to burrow. The saddle includes a secure system of straps and buckles that holds the rider flush to the burrowing mount's back. In addition, a thick, round-edged piece of leather reinforced with bone or wood rises from the front of the shield, just before the rider's seat, roughly to the height of the rider's chest. The curved piece of leather bends up and toward the rider, allowing her to duck behind it while her mount burrows, shielding her from most of the dirt and rocks that might otherwise tear the rider from her perch, straps or no straps. Similar bits of reinforced leather protect the front and sides of the rider's legs. Strapping oneself to the saddle requires three consecutive full-round actions that provoke attacks of opportunity. Unbuckling the straps is a full-round action that provokes attacks of opportunity. While strapped into the saddle, you lose your Dexterity bonus to Armor Class and take a -4 penalty on all attack rolls. You must be strapped into the saddle to ride a mount while it burrows, but the saddle functions as a normal saddle if the mount does not choose to burrow, allowing you to ride without taking the abovementioned penalties for being strapped to the saddle. While strapped into a burrower's saddle, a rider need not make Ride checks to stay in the saddle. The rider can break out of the straps as a standard action that requires a DC 25 Strength check and does not provoke attacks of opportunity. If its straps are broken, a burrower's saddle functions only as a normal saddle until they are repaired. The burrower's saddle comes in two varieties: pack and riding.

SADDLE, FLYER'S

This specialized exotic saddle allows a properly strapped-in rider to stay safely on the back of a flying or climbing mount.

The saddle includes a secure system of straps and buckles that hold the rider in place while minimizing the time it takes to get in and out of the saddle. Buckling yourself into a flyer's saddle is a full-round action that provokes attacks of opportunity. Unbuckling the straps is a move action that does not provoke attacks of opportunity. While strapped into a flyer's saddle, a rider need not make Ride checks to stay in the saddle. The rider can break out of the straps as a standard action that requires a DC 20 Strength check and does not provoke attacks of opportunity. If its straps are broken, a flyer's saddle functions only as a normal saddle until they are repaired. The flyer's saddle comes in three varieties: pack, riding, and military.

SONG COLLAR

These iron tubes are designed to aid traveling musicians in learning new or complex compositions for the lute, violin, or another similar stringed instrument. Built to fit snugly over a normal quarterstaff, this item consists of a long metal collar that slips down over the top half of the staff, roughly 1 foot long for a Small staff or 2 feet long for a Medium staff. The metal's surface is covered with rows of small, dimpled indentations, ostensibly to provide a better grip on the staff. In reality, these indentations correspond with the fingering for a piece of music to be played on a preferred instrument of the owner. Song collars are sold by gnome maesters as training tools for journeymen, enabling them to practice chords and notes while traveling without attracting attention. If a character uses a song collar for 1 hour a day on seven consecutive days, he gains a +2 bonus on Perform checks involving that particular instrument and composition. A song collar does not prevent a quarterstaff from being used normally in combat.

SPIDERLILY ESSENCE

Spiderlily essence is noxious to most vermin (with the notable exception of spiders, which ironically cannot detect the stuff).

Fine vermin avoid creatures that wear the essence, and monstrous vermin (except spiders) must make a successful DC 15 Will saving throw to attack the target. Once a vermin makes a successful save, it is immune to the effects of spiderlily essence for 1 hour. A single application of this alchemical concoction is enough to affect one Small creature. For creatures of other sizes, the number of applications needed is doubled (or halved) for each size category larger (or smaller) than Small. An application of the essence wears off in 1 hour.

RACES OF THE DRAGON (3.5)

TABLE 8-1: SPECIAL SUBSTANCES AND ITEMS

Item	Cost	Weight
Bitterleaf oil	25 gp	—
Ditherbomb (strong)	300 gp	1/2 lb.
Ditherbomb (weak)	100 gp	1/2 lb.
Ditherbomb (wyrms)	1,000 gp	1 lb.
Fire beetle lamp	10 gp	1 lb.
Sundark goggles	10 gp	—

BITTERLEAF OIL

Kobolds use this salve to keep their scales healthy and shiny. Each bottle of bitterleaf oil holds enough for ten applications. If the oil is applied each day (a full-round action), it staves off shedding indefinitely. In addition, on any day when bitterleaf oil is applied, the character naturally heals 1 additional point of damage per HD (max. 5) with a full night's rest.

DITHERBOMB

These are spherical explosive devices created by kobold alchemists to reduce large boulders to rubble during mining operations. They have also been adapted for military purposes. Activating a ditherbomb is move action that involves violently shaking the device, which explodes 1d3 rounds later. (Violently shaking the bearer of a ditherbomb often sets the bomb off as well). Throwing a ditherbomb is a standard action. Ditherbombs come in three varieties, each of which deals a different amount of damage and has a different blast radius. Weak ditherbombs deal 1d6 points of acid damage to creatures and objects in a 5-foot-radius burst (Reflex DC 10 half). Strong ditherbombs deal 1d4×1d6 points of acid damage (Reflex DC 12 half) in a 10-foot-radius burst. The most potent ditherbombs, called wyrm ditherbombs, deal 1d6×1d8 points of acid damage in a 15-foot-radius burst (Reflex DC 15 half). The damage dealt by a ditherbomb ignores the hardness of stone.

The more powerful ditherbombs are inherently unpredictable, as reflected in their variable damage values. To determine the damage dealt by a strong ditherbomb or a wyrm ditherbomb, roll two different dice and multiply the results.

For example, a strong ditherbomb deals  $1d4 \times 1d6$  points of damage, which means that you roll  $1d4$  and  $1d6$  and multiply the result together to determine the damage it deals when it explodes.

The strong ditherbomb is thus just as likely to deal 1 point of damage as it is to deal 24 points of damage (but is most likely to deal somewhere around 9 points of damage).

A wyrm ditherbomb's average damage is about 16 points.

FIRE BEETLE LAMP

This lamp uses the luminous gland located above each eye of a fire beetle as its light source.

Thanks to a special alchemical treatment, a fire beetle lamp shines as brightly as a common lamp (bright illumination out to 15 feet, shadowy illumination to 30 feet) and lasts for 6 days after creation.

(Most fire beetle lamps are put into service immediately upon creation, but some unscrupulous merchants sell lamps after they have been used for a few days).

Kobold miners use these lamps when they need to see more than darkvision typically allows, specifically when color might be important.

SUNDARK GOGGLES

The smoked lenses of these goggles block light. They are typically fixed into a band of canvas that clasps together at the back to keep the goggles from falling off. Sundark goggles negate the dazzled condition experienced by a creature with light sensitivity while in bright illumination.

As a side effect, they grant the wearer a +2 circumstance bonus on saving throws against gaze attacks.

A creature wearing sundark goggles can't use a gaze attack, since other creatures can't see its eyes.

Creatures without low-light vision or darkvision that wear sundark goggles take a -2 penalty on Search and Spot checks.

RACES OF THE WILD (3.5)

TABLE 7-3: GEAR

Item	Cost	Weight
Carry net	10 gp	5 lb.
Cargo kite	150 gp	50 lb.
Elven harp
Hand	150 gp	2 lb.
Lap	350 gp	4 lb.
Great	1,500 gp	150 lb.
Honey leather
Small tarpaulin	15 gp	1/4 lb.
Big tarpaulin	40 gp	1 lb.
Small pup tent	30 gp	2 lb.
Medium pup tent	60 gp	5 lb.
10-foot square tent	120 gp	20 lb.
20-foot square tent	240 gp	40 lb.
Sashling	10 gp	1 lb.

CARGO KITE

Actually something like a glider, a cargo kite can lift up 250 pounds when towed forward.

The cargo is slung in a basket or net under the kite.

A collection of five or so 30-foot-long hemp cords allows one or more creatures to tow the kite.

The kite itself is as big as a Large creature (10-foot space).

To tow a loaded kite through the air, a creature (or several creatures) must be able to drag the weight of the kite and its cargo.

Material carried in the kite doesn't count as weight the towing creatures carry, but the towing creatures move at encumbered speed (see page 162 of the Player's Handbook and page 20 of the Dungeon Master's Guide) unless they are capable of dragging at least twice the weight of the kite and its cargo.

A towed kite has poor maneuverability and a minimum forward speed of 40 feet.

If it does not maintain its minimum forward speed, the kite descends at the rate of 60 feet a round.

A strong wind (see page 95 of the Dungeon Master's Guide) can lift a loaded kite, provided someone stays on the ground to steady it.

CARRY NET

This sturdy net has a looser weave than a fishnet.

Raptorans use them to haul goods from raptoran villages to trading markets.

The net is about 5 feet square and has a 20-foot-long hemp cord dangling from each end.

The cords allow two raptorans to share the net's load.

The net can hold 100 pounds of material.

ELVEN HARP

Musicians from all cultures prize these masterwork instruments for their clear, dulcet tones.

Bards covet them.

They produce a purity of sound unheard of in any non-elven crafted instrument.

Like any masterwork instrument, an elven harp grants a +2 circumstance bonus on Perform checks made with it.

The instrument is so fine, however, that a truly skilled musician can work wonders with it.

Characters with at least 5 ranks in Perform (string instruments) gain an extra +1 circumstance bonus on Perform checks made with the harp (for a total bonus of +3).

Not only does an elven harp produce music unrivaled by any other mortal instrument, it is a beauty to behold.

Because its beauty relies on a particular intricate design, it is more difficult to craft than other masterwork instruments, requiring extra care and taking twice as long. When checking the item maker's weekly or daily progress in crafting the item, multiply the check result by one-half the item's DC to determine the value of the crafter's work. The elven harp comes in several different sizes.

A hand harp is only about 6 inches tall and 8 inches wide. It has a high pitch, thanks to its fairly short strings, but sounds sweet just the same.

The harp's base includes a handle so the musician can hold it firmly while plucking the strings.

A lap harp is about 2 feet high and 3 feet wide. The musician usually places the harp on a table or sits and holds it in her lap. It's possible to play a lap harp standing up, but the musician takes a -1 penalty on her Perform check (though the circumstance bonuses from the harp's quality and the player's skill still apply). A great harp is a glorious instrument, nearly 6 feet high and just as wide. The musician usually sits in a chair or on a stool to play it.

HONEY LEATHER

Honey leather is a light canvas used as protection against rain and dampness. It gets its name from its golden color and its texture, which resembles soft, cured leather. Elves, raptorans, and halflings use honey leather for tents and to protect camping gear. It snags and tears easily, so honey leather isn't much good outside camp. It is, however, waterproof thanks to the alchemical treatment that gives it its color and texture. A character equipped with a honey leather tarpaulin big enough to drape over his body gains a +1 circumstance bonus on Survival checks made to resist the effect of severe weather. If the character is stationary, the bonus increases to +2. A tarpaulin ranges in size from 3 feet square (for Small or Medium characters) to 6 feet square (for Medium or Large characters). A tent made of honey leather provides a +4 bonus on Survival checks for anyone inside. The cost of all such tents include poles and stakes.

A small pup tent (roomy enough for one Small character to lie down with his gear) is 2 feet wide by 4 feet long. A medium pup tent (roomy enough for one Medium character and gear) is 3 feet by 7 feet. Pup tents are as tall as they are wide. A square tent 10 feet wide is big enough for a party of four Small or Medium characters. A square tent 20 feet wide is big enough for a party of eight Small or Medium characters or four Large characters. Square tents are half as tall as they are wide.

SASHLING

This broad, pleated cloth belt hides a great many interior pockets. Ten pockets are sewn into the folds of a sashling, each capable of holding an item weighing about a quarter-pound. A sashling's pleats can conceal almost anything that may be placed inside the belt: An object up to the size of a hen's egg leaves no visible bulge on the sashling's exterior. A sashling is ideal for carrying small items such as coins, gems, vials, material components, and pieces of jewelry unobtrusively. It grants a +2 circumstance bonus on Sleight of Hand checks made to hide small objects on your body (see Sleight of Hand, page 81 of the Player's Handbook). For wearers who need to carry more supplies, many sashlings are made with hooks on the outer side. The wearer can hang pouches and other items from the outside of the sashling as well, just as with a normal belt.

ARMORBRIGHT

This metallic paint is applied with a brush to the outside of a suit of armor (requiring 1 minute to apply), producing a shiny surface that reflects the light of the sun to reduce the effects of hot weather on the wearer.

For 24 hours after applying armorbright to a suit of armor, you gain a +2 bonus on Fortitude saving throws to avoid heat dangers.

Armorbright also raises your level of protection against heat by one step (see page 14).

Armorbright is not effective in hot environments with no sun, such as the Elemental Plane of Fire.

ASHERATI SAND SCULPTURE

Asheratis know the special sands, adherents, and natural dyes that are required to create stunning works of sculpture.

The typical asherati sculpture is 2 to 3 feet high and weighs 10 to 20 pounds.

Like any piece of art, value is in the eye of the beholder; however, anyone with the Appraise skill can determine the approximate price a particular sculpture would fetch in wider markets.

Use Table 3-7: Art Objects, page 55 of the Dungeon Master's Guide, to determine the price of an asherati sand sculpture found in a treasure hoard or in the marketplace.

BARGE

Colossal vehicle; Profession (sailor) -2; Spd oars 5 ft. (nautical clumsy); Overall AC -3; Section hp 50 (hardness 5); Section AC 3; Ram —; Space 40 ft.; Height 10 ft. (draft 10 ft.); Crew 10 (40 phantom rowers); Cargo 100 tons.

See the Arms and Equipment Guide for more information on barges and other ships.

BLACKEYE

This oily paint is smeared around your eyes and on your cheeks to reduce the effects of bright sun, protecting you from sun glare for 4 hours.

CLOUDSKATE

Huge vehicle; Profession (sailor) +2; Spd wind × 10 ft. (nautical good) or 20 ft. during daylight; Overall AC 1; Section hp 40 (hardness 5); Section AC 3; Rigging 30 hp (hardness 0), AC 3; Ram 4d6; Space 20 ft.; Height 10 ft. (draft 5 ft.); Crew 4; Cargo 10 tons; Cost 3,000 gp.

This vehicle is similar to a small keelboat—it is a 20-foot ship without oars—except that it has stabilizing runners along each side.

It has a single mast on which a sail can be set.

A blade is sturdily mounted on the bottom exterior of the vehicle, running the whole length of the hull, and similar blades are attached to each runner.

The rudder is another blade that drags behind the ship, allowing it to be steered.

This configuration allows the vehicle to skate on glass seas at a rate of 1 to 3 miles per hour.

An empty cloudskate can carry up to twenty passengers.

CRYSTAL SCORPION POISON

Distilled from the venom of monstrous scorpions, this alchemically treated (Craft [alchemy] DC 25) poison is often sought out by warlords or assassins who want to see a victim suffer for days.

The process of treating the venom renders it translucent, but with the refractive qualities of a perfect prism when held up to the light in a clear container.

DEEP DRAUGHT

This powder is a mixture of salt, dried herbs, and extracts of desert plants.

Adding it to water increases your body's retention of fluid and helps counteract the effects of dehydration.

One packet of deep draught is enough for 1 gallon of solution, which grants a +5 bonus on the Heal check to treat dehydration (see page 15).

DESERT OUTFIT

This outfit consists of loose, billowy clothing to keep the wearer cool and protected from the sun while in hot, dry desert terrain.

It includes a caftan, turban, scarf, loose pantaloons, and sandals or high cloth boots.

This outfit counts as light clothing and offers limited protections against some waste hazards (see Chapter 1). The protection it offers against heat is negated if the wearer also dons armor.

DISTILLATION KIT

Water is precious in the waste.

This simple kit uses the sun and the ambient heat to evaporate pure water from body or cooking waste, salt lakes, poisonous plant saps, and so on.

This “solar still” consists of a sheet of glass fastened at an angle into a frame, with a lip and a small spout (the components are packed separately and assembled when needed).

The bottom and sides of the frame are covered with black oilcloth, the edges sealed with grease or tar to make it watertight.

To use the still, pour the dirty water into the bottom of the container, then place the glass lid on top.

The water evaporates and condenses on the underside of the glass surface, where it runs down and collects in the lip, dripping through the spout and producing about 1 gallon of water per day (if the container is filled to capacity).

DRILL

Whether they are used to carve sandstone, locate water, or mine salt and other precious minerals, drills are important tools in any wasteland environment.

These objects can range from a primitive bow drill, suitable for perforating bone and wood, to a massive assembly of cast-iron pipes and bits, turned by wheels or beasts of burden.

The drill described here is made of iron with a wooden handle, about 3 feet long.

(In metal-poor areas, the bit might be of hard crystal instead of iron).

Wrapping a cord about the shaft and pulling it sharply sets the drill spinning.

It can penetrate roughly 6 inches of stone per hour; the rate of drilling is faster in softer material, such as salt.

A drill can be used as an improvised club or shortspear.

DUNEWINDER VENOM

See the dunewinder monster entry, page 159.

FILTER MASK

A filter mask is a fine cloth mesh, usually of silk or cotton, that covers your mouth and nose.

Cords or straps fasten the cloth around the back of your head to provide a good seal.

A filter mask grants a +2 bonus on saves against gas-based effects.

It negates the effects of suffocation from dust and sand, as well as the effects of supernatural or magic dust (such as slumber sand) for up to 4 hours.

After this time, the mesh is clogged with grit and can no longer allow air to pass through freely.

A clogged filter mask requires thorough laundering before it can be reused, but most travelers simply replace it with fresh fabric.

FRAME WHEEL

Large vehicle; Handle Animal +2, Diplomacy +2, or Intimidate +2; Spd drawn (poor); Overall hp 15 (hardness 5); Overall AC 3; Ram 3d6; Space 10 ft.; Height 10 ft.; Crew 1; Weight 300 lb., Cargo 4 tons; Cost 15 gp.

A frame wheel consists of a pair of wooden wheels constructed around a large, heavy object, such as a block of stone.

The wheels cap the ends of the object and keep it off the ground, allowing the object to be rolled along like an oversized log.

Like a sledge, a frame wheel can be drawn by beasts of burden or by people and is difficult to steer, but it moves more easily up and down slopes than a sledge does.

The major drawback of a frame wheel is that it is usually only good for a single load, after which it has to be disassembled, returned to the point of departure, and built all over again around a new load.

When multiple loads are of a uniform size, however, the same set of wheels can be used many times.

HEATSUIT OUTFIT

This suit is designed to protect against heat.

It consists of heavy pants and coat, a specially treated leather apron, thick mittens, a thick hood, and goggles. A heatsuit outfit prevents 3 points of lethal or nonlethal damage per round from hot environments.

Although the outfit is heavy clothing, its heat-resistant materials negate the usual -4 penalty on Fortitude saves against damage dealt by hot environments.

HYDRATION SUIT

The hydration suit is a masterpiece of water retention, crafted by waste-dwellers with technical skill and unusual materials.

Its design allows you to recover nearly all the water your body loses through sweat and exhalation.

A hydration suit is made of the skin and tissue of various desert-dwelling beasts and treated with oils or waxes for water retention.

It covers your entire body, with a tight-fitting hood over the head and a mask covering the mouth and nose. Inside the mask is a glass plate to collect condensation and a tube fashioned from watertight materials.

An inner lining wicks sweat away from your body and collects it in spongelike filtration material that can be removed after you doff the hydration suit.

The tube from the facemask twists in loops around your body, through the sponge, to reclaim moisture, condensing it in a reservoir from which you can sip.

A functioning hydration suit eliminates the need to make Constitution checks to avoid dehydration.

It raises the level of protection from heat dangers by two steps (see page 14), and its mask functions as a filter mask. A hydration suit offers no protection from magical dessication damage.

IRONTHORN EXTRACT

The ironthorn plant has extremely tough tissues to prevent water loss.

This extract of the plant is used to harden delicate items, make containers waterproof, and stiffen clothing to provide some protection.

One flask of ironthorn extract is enough to treat a typical outfit, increasing the clothing's armor bonus to +1.

Ironthorn extract does not improve materials that already provide an armor bonus.

When applied to cloth, leather, or similar material, ironthorn extract improves its hardness by 1, to a maximum of 5.

Both benefits last for one week or until the item is thoroughly washed.

KEEPCOOL SALVE

This small clay pot contains several ounces of a pearly ointment, enough to cover one Medium creature.

Applying the ointment to your skin increases your level of protection against heat by one step (see page 14).

The salve also grants a +1 circumstance bonus on Fortitude saves to resist damage from hot environments.

LIQUID SALT

This deadly supernatural substance (see Red Seas, page 25) can be used as a splash weapon.

A direct hit deals 2d6 points of dessication damage (2d8 points to plants or elementals with the water subtype).

Every creature within 5 feet of the point where the flask hits takes 1d4 points of dessication damage from the splash (1d6 points to plants or elementals with the water subtype).

Liquid salt is always carried in a glass container.

OLEUM

A black liquid, oleum has a foul, bitter odor.

It occurs naturally around the world, but is particularly common in the waste.

Though it forms underground, oleum is generally found in surface pools in areas of barren waste terrain.

You can use a flask of oleum as a splash weapon.

Use the rules for alchemist's fire (page 128 of the Player's Handbook), except that it takes a full-round action to prepare a flask with a fuse.

Once it is thrown, there is a 50% chance of the flask igniting successfully.

Burning oleum is hard to put out, granting a -4 penalty on the Reflex save to extinguish the fire.

The oleum burns away within 4 rounds (eliminating the penalty on putting out the fire).

Raw oleum burns readily, but it is smoky when it does so. The smoke created by burning oleum is heavy smoke (see Smoke, page 304 of the Dungeon Master's Guide), so a wide area of open air is required for the substance to burn safely. Every round when raw oleum burns, it produces enough smoke to fill a 5-foot cube.

For this reason, oleum is typically used only in lamps made to burn outdoors.

The smoke drives away flying insects.

Oleum is also used to lubricate moving parts; a flask of it can cover a 5-foot square, provided that the surface is smooth.

A creature can walk within or through an area of oleum at half normal speed by making a DC 10 Balance check.

Failure means it can't move that round, while failure by 5 or more means it falls prone (see the Balance skill description, page 67 of the Player's Handbook, for details).

If an area of oleum is ignited, it burns for 4 rounds and deals 1d3 points of fire damage to each creature in the area.

A quart of oleum (two flasks) can coat a Medium creature, providing a +4 circumstance bonus on Escape Artist checks and opposed grapple checks made to resist being grappled or to escape a pin.

Oleum applied in this manner also acts as insect repellent, protecting you from normal vermin (such as those summoned by insect plague) and granting a +4 bonus to Armor Class against vermin.

A creature with oleum on its hands takes a -4 penalty on grapple checks or any task requiring a solid grip, including attack rolls with weapons.

A roll of 1 on the attack means the oleum-coated creature drops the slippery weapon.

When worn, oleum is uncomfortable and unpleasant.

You take a -2 penalty on Fortitude saves against natural heat effects.

Further, oleum makes you quite flammable, granting a -4 penalty on saves against supernaturally hot effects and any attack involving fire, including Reflex saves to put yourself out after catching fire.

When subjected to a fire-based attack that does not normally cause subjects to catch on fire, you must make a DC 14 Reflex save or catch on fire.

As indicated above, oleum burns away after 4 rounds.

An ounce of oleum can substitute for the material component usually used for a grease spell.

PARASOL

The simplest form of portable shade, a parasol can range from an animal hide draped over a crude framework to a collapsible construction of textile and metal.

The typical parasol described here is made of stretched canvas over wood or bone.

A parasol offers immunity to sun glare and limited protection from heat dangers and some sun hazards (see Chapter 1).

It also grants a +1 bonus on Fortitude saves against dehydration.

SAND GALLEY

Colossal vehicle; Profession (sailor) -2; Spd wind × 10 ft. (nautical poor); Overall AC -3; Section hp 25 (hardness 5); Rigging 15 hp (hardness 0), Section AC 1; Ram 10d6; Space

60 ft.; Height 20 ft.; Crew 25; Cargo 100 tons; Cost 16,000 gp.

A step up from the sand schooner, the sand galley is specifically designed as a warship.

It has sufficient deck space to accommodate three heavy catapults or six ballistas or light catapults.

Much of the vessel's cargo space is often used for troops rather than for stores or merchandise.

Like a sand schooner, a sand galley has one bulkhead on either side of the hull that opens downward to act as a ramp—in this case, facilitating the swift deployment of soldiers.

A sand galley moves 1 to 3 miles per hour, depending on the wind, and requires flat, open sand on which to travel.

SAND SCHOONER

Gargantuan vehicle; Profession (sailor) +2; Spd wind × 20 ft. (nautical average); Overall AC -3; Section hp 25 (hardness 5); Rigging 15 hp (hardness 0), Section AC 3; Ram 8d6; Space 40 ft.; Height 15 ft.; Crew 15; Cargo 50 tons; Cost 8,500 gp.

Though rarely seen, the sand schooner is a popular vehicle among certain deep-desert denizens, who use it as a merchant vessel and as a warship.

A sand schooner has enough room on its deck for two light catapults or ballistas.

Because ships that travel on sand need not worry about sinking, a schooner's cargo holds have additional hatches located on either side of the hull.

These two doors are built to pivot downward and create a simple but effective cargo ramp.

A sand schooner moves 2 to 7 miles per hour, depending on the wind, and requires flat, open sand on which to travel.

SAND SKIFF

Large vehicle; Profession (sailor) +2; Spd wind × 30 ft. (nautical good); Overall AC 3; Section hp 15 (hardness 5); Rigging 10 hp (hardness 0), Section AC 3; Ram 2d6; Space 10 ft.; Height 5 ft.; Crew 1; Weight 200 lb., Cargo 500 lb.; Cost 150 gp.

This lightweight framework rests atop a pair of polished runners and sports a single tall sail.

Designed for a single rider, a sand skiff is useful for scouting, carrying messages, and as entertainment.

The major advantage of the sand skiff lies in how easy it is to construct, though the major disadvantage is that those with the appropriate skill to pilot them are few and far between in the wastes.

A sand skiff moves 3 to 10 miles per hour, depending on the wind, and requires flat, open sand on which to move.

SAND TUBE

When a storm scours the land, the best defense is to escape. Burrowing into the ground is one way to do this, but sand is loose and difficult to stabilize.

This handy device enables you to create a burrow beneath the sand, in which you can rest while waiting for the storm to pass.

A sand tube looks something like an open-ended sleeping bag, made of treated hide attached to a number of collapsible hoops.

After digging a small hole in the sand to get started, you shove one end of this apparatus inside the hole and expand the hoops to stiffen it into a tube.

More sand can then be dug from the buried end (usually you crawl partway into the tube and use your hands) and removed through the tube, which is shoved more deeply into the tunnel as digging progresses.

In normal sand, it takes 10 minutes of digging to fully bury a sand tube.

When fully buried, a sand tube can hold one Medium humanoid.

A flap fastens over the exposed end to provide shade and protection from duststorms and sandstorms.

SHAPESAND

Shapesand is a special kind of wasteland soil that is psychoreactive; it can be sculpted into any form according to your will.

The new object is made of sand, but serves as a normal item of the same sort.

A shapesand hammer functions just like an ordinary hammer, and a shapesand waterskin is just as watertight as an ordinary skin.

Controlling shapesand is an exercise in willpower.

A DC 16 Wisdom check establishes control of a volume of sand based on the shaper's Wisdom score:

Wisdom Score	Controllable Volume
1-3	None
4-7	1-ft. cube
8-11	2-1/2-ft. cube
12-15	5-ft. cube
16-19	7-1/2-ft. cube
20-23	10-ft. cube
24+	+2-1/2 ft per 4 points of Wisdom

If your Wisdom check succeeds, you can reshape the volume of sand as you desire.

Once control is established, the shape lasts as long as you remain within 100 feet of it.

Thus, those with sufficient patience and strong enough will can construct small fortresses out of shapesand, even if they must do so a few cubic feet at a time.

Another character can wrest control of a shapesand item away from you by succeeding on an opposed Wisdom check, though the winner's Wisdom score must be high enough to shape an item the size of the one contested.

For example, if two characters are attempting to control a 5-foot cube of shapesand, the challenger must not only beat his opponent's roll, but must also have a Wisdom score of at least 12.

If you are a sand shaper (new prestige class, see page 76) or a cleric with the Sand domain (see page 107) using shapesand in conjunction with your sand shaping abilities, you do not count shapesand items against the total number of items you can maintain at one time.

In addition, if you are a sand shaper, you can give control of shapesand objects to other individuals, and those items persist even if the new owner takes them outside the normal 100-foot control area.

The new owner need not make a Wisdom check to establish control of the item, so long as his Wisdom score meets the minimum requirement for the object's volume.

SLEDGE

Large vehicle; Handle Animal +2, Diplomacy +2, or Intimidate +2; Spd drawn (clumsy); Overall hp 40 (hardness 5); Overall AC 4; Ram 2d6; Space 10 ft.; Height 1 ft.; Crew 1; Weight 500 lb., Cargo 2 tons; Cost 15 gp.

A primitive conveyance still used in many parts of the wastes, especially in sandy areas, the venerable sledge is popular because it does not become mired in sand as easily as wheeled vehicles can.

Consisting of a flat expanse of reinforced wood, a sledge is really just a convenient platform for heavy loads; one can stack up to two tons of material on a sledge and push or pull it all at once.

The “driver” of a sledge rarely rides upon the vehicle, but instead paces back and forth between groups of workers or animals that are doing the work, coordinating the team.

SLUMBER SAND

Slumber sand is a supernatural hazard (see page 26), but alchemists make a substance that mimics the hazard's effects.

A target struck by a flask of slumber sand must make a DC 15 Fortitude save or fall asleep for 1 minute.

Slumber sand affects only a creature struck by it, and creatures with 5 or more Hit Dice have immunity to the effect.

Slumber sand is more effective when a flask of it is used as an optional material component for sleep, deep slumber, or symbol of sleep.

When so used, the total Hit Dice of creatures affected increases by 2 (the symbol of sleep affects creatures of up to 12 HD), and the DC for the Will saving throw increases by +1.

SUN LENSES

This item, made of thin slabs of mica or volcanic glass affixed to curved frames, can protect your eyes from being dazzled by bright light, such as glare (see page 18).

If you are already dazzled when you don the lenses, you are treated as if you had entered an area of shade; you recover from the dazzled condition 1 hour if you continue to wear the lenses.

SUNSHADE LOTION

This translucent green lotion contains extracts of succulent plants, mixed with oils from the skin of chameleons.

It darkens slightly on exposure to sunlight.

One flask is sufficient to protect a Medium creature from nonlethal damage due to sunburn (see page 18) for 4 hours.

VOLCANIC GAS

Active volcano craters, mud pots, and similar features often vent a poisonous mixture of gases.

Volcanic gas is an inhaled poison, but unlike with a thrown vial, the gas cloud persists in the area it fills.

Characters exposed to the gas must continue to make saves each minute against the secondary damage until they leave the gas-filled zone.

The volume filled by a cloud of volcanic gas might consist of many 10-foot cubes.

A pit trap might include a volcanic fissure that adds poisonous fumes to the hazard.

SAVAGE SPECIES (3.0)

TABLE 5-5: SPECIAL AND SUPERIOR ITEMS

Item	Cost	Weight
Aboleth mucus, vial	20 gp	1 lb.
Breathing mask	1,000 gp	5 lb.
Cable (50 ft.)	25 gp	2 lb.
Cablespool	125 gp	2 lb.
with cable	175 gp	6 lb.
Delver slime, vial	150 gp	1 lb.
Drow arrow poison, dose	120 gp	1/4 lb.
Flash tube	30 gp	1 lb.
Frostfire	40 gp	1 lb.
Harness	20 gp	2 lb.
Sculptor's slime, vial	750 gp	4 lb.
Spore flask	1,000 gp	1 lb.
Sun lantern	162 gp	3 lb.

ABOLETH MUCUS

An aboleth underwater surrounds itself with a viscous cloud of mucus roughly 1 foot thick.

Occasionally this substance finds its way into marketplaces. Glass vials of the mucus can be thrown as grenadelike weapons.

Any creature coming into contact with or inhaling this substance must succeed on a Fortitude save (DC 19) or lose the ability to breathe air for the next 3 hours (see the Suffocation sidebar in Chapter 3 of the DUNGEON MASTER's Guide).

There is no splash effect for aboleth mucus.

BREATHING MASK

This desmodu-made (see Appendix 3: New Creatures) mask covers the user's whole face.

It is fitted with goggles and a bag of an alchemical substance within that allows the wearer to breathe for up to 4 hours.

With the mask on, the wearer can ignore the effects of noxious fumes and inhaled toxins.

It even enables the wearer to function underwater or in an airless environment.

A slightly different version (with the same cost and weight) allows water-breathers to function out of water.

The item consists of a masterwork leather mask with goggles (cost 50 gp) and the alchemical air supply, which costs 950 gp and can be manufactured with a successful Craft (alchemy) check (DC 20).

A partially used air supply cannot be combined with another partially used one to get a fresh supply, but it can be discarded and replaced with a new supply.

CABLE

Desmodu (see Appendix 3: New Creatures) make a metal cord that is thinner, stronger, and lighter than even silk rope.

It is too thin for most creatures to climb easily (Climb DC 20), but desmodus using a cable can climb at their normal climb speed.

The cable has a snap ring at each end so that it can be quickly attached to or detached from a piton, spike, grappling hook, or other item without a Use Rope check.

The cable has 10 hit points and hardness 5.

It can be broken with a successful Strength check (DC 32).

Its stiffness, however, imposes a –2 circumstance penalty on use Rope checks.

CABLESPOOL

This desmodu (see Appendix 3: New Creatures) gadget carries 100 feet of cable (see above) in an enclosed reel.

The reel is spring-wound and can pull in all 100 feet of cable in 1 round (pulling with a Strength score of 16).

It can be set to reel or unreel the cable automatically as the user climbs, or to act as a brake, allowing the user to jump down 100 feet without harm.

DELVER SLIME

Delvers produce a mucuslike slime that contains a highly corrosive substance.

The slime is particularly effective against stone.

Glass vials of this substance occasionally appear in marketplaces, sold by enterprising dwarves who bribed delvers with gems.

Vials of the slime can be thrown as grenadelike weapons.

A successful hit deals 2d6 points of acid damage to organic creatures or objects.

Against metallic creatures or objects, the delver's slime deals 4d8 points of acid damage, and against stony creatures (including earth elementals) or objects it deals 8d10 points of acid damage.

All creatures within 5 feet of where the vial lands take 1d6 points of acid damage from the splash, but objects within 5 feet are not affected.

DROW ARROW POISON

Drow arrow poison is an injury poison (Fortitude DC 17) that causes unconsciousness.

After 1 minute, the injured creature must make a second Fortitude save (same DC) or remain unconscious for 2d4 hours.

FLASH TUBE

Ingenious alchemists figured out how to duplicate the effect of a gibbering moulder's spittle.

Vials of this substance can be thrown as grenadelike weapons.

The fluid within ignites on contact with the air, creating a blinding flash of light.

All sighted creatures within 60 feet of where the vial lands must succeed on a Fortitude save (DC 13) or be blinded for 1d3 rounds.

See the Condition Summary in Chapter 3 of the DUNGEON MASTER's Guide for details on the effects of blindness.

A flash tube requires a Craft (alchemy) check (DC 20) to create.

FROSTFIRE

This sticky, adhesive substance drains away heat when exposed to air or moisture.

A flask of frostfire can be thrown as a grenadelike weapon with a range increment of 10 feet, and a direct hit deals 1d6 points of cold damage.

The target can then attempt to scrape off or wash away the frostfire, if desired.

If this does not occur, the target takes an additional 1d6 points of cold damage on the round following the direct hit.

Removing frostfire by scraping requires a successful Reflex saving throw (DC 15).

Alternatively, the substance can be removed automatically by dousing it with at least a quart of an alcoholic or acidic solution (such as wine or vinegar).

Either method requires a full-round action.

Frostfire requires a Craft (alchemy) check (DC 20) to create.

HARNESS

Desmodus (see Appendix 3: New Creatures) cannot wear belts because of the flaps of skin attached to their flanks.

Instead, they wear harnesses that loop over their shoulders and between their legs.

Straps crisscross the front and back of the desmodu's body to keep the harness from slipping off.

Each desmodu harness is fitted with rings, hooks, and ties for carrying weapons and equipment.

A reinforced hook hangs near the waist for carrying a cablespool.

SCULPTOR'S SLIME

Another product of dwarf dealings with delvers, this slimy liquid softens stone.

One flask allows a Craft (stonemasonry) check (DC 10) to shape up to 25 cubic feet of stone, as stone shape cast by a 15th-level druid.

Sculptor's slime requires a Craft (alchemy) check (DC 20) to create.

SPORE FLASK

No one knows who first persuaded a vrock to allow the bottling of its spores, or how it was persuaded.

No doubt, the horrible tanar'ri delight in the idea of inflicting pain without even being present.

A flask of vrock spores can be thrown as a grenadelike weapon.

The spores automatically deal 1d8 points of damage to all creatures within 5 feet of where the flask lands.

They then penetrate the skin and grow, dealing an additional 1d2 points of damage each round for 10 rounds.

At the end of this time, the victim is covered with a tangle of vinelike growths.

A delay poison spell stops the spores' growth for its duration.

Bless, neutralize poison, or remove disease kills the spores, as does sprinkling the victim with a vial of holy water.

SUN LANTERN

This is a bullseye lantern, but without any reservoir for oil. Instead, a sunrod may be inserted into a socket on one end. Once the sunrod is in place, a simple twist locks it there and activates it.

A sun lantern provides light as a bullseye lantern, with the duration of a sunrod.

Rules for bullseye lanterns and sunrods appear in Chapter 7 of the Player's Handbook.

Any sunrod functions in a sun lantern.

KINSHIP BADGES This item resembles an exquisite cymbal or flattened bell, measuring 3 or 4 inches across.

When struck, it emits a single musical note.

It also resonates and produces a distinctive ultrasonic tone when a desmodu's echolocation sounds strike it.

Desmodus usually exchange kinship badges with their siblings and use them to identify each other in battle.

AMASSTARTAE

The green smoke produced by this oil is shot through with twinkling silvery metallic flecks that resemble sparks. Its smell is often described as "prickle-nose spicy".

Amasstartae oil is produced by combining sap from the leaves of the silverthorn weed with a distillate of crushed and boiled scales from any salt-water fish.

Amasstarte oil grants the benefit of a cure light wounds spell to any Scaled One who pours a vial of it into a bath and soaks in the resulting mixture for at least 1 hour.

The effects are cumulative for multiple hours.

BATTASSS

The ruby-red smoke emitted by this oil flickers with random darker "threads" and smells like scorching milk. Battass oil is made from palm oil and the petals of the tiny white wildflower known as fallen snow.

When inhaled by a Scaled One, battass smoke produces extreme clarity of mind.

During this time, the Scaled One requires no Concentration check to perform any action, regardless of distractions or combinations of effects that might ordinarily impair spellcasting or performance.

Furthermore, the affected reptile gains a +5 bonus on Will saves.

These effects persist for as long as the Scaled One inhales the smoke and for 3d6 minutes thereafter.

BLOODFLOWER SALVE

Bloodflowers are red-leafed wildflowers with magical properties.

Once prevalent on open plains that had been used as battlefields, bloodflowers are now found only in the depths of the Jungles of Chult and the Mhair Jungles.

Bloodflower salve must be rubbed onto the body before damage is taken.

Thereafter, it delivers the benefit of a cure minor wounds spell when anyone within 25 feet speaks a command word specified during the creation of the salve.

Bloodflower salve remains active until the command word is spoken or until washed off with at least a quart of liquid.

BLUE FROG PASTE

The otherwise harmless bright blue frogs of the Serpent Hills secrete a unique poison that the lizardfolk of Kalran have learned to harvest.

Mixing it with other natural substances produces a highly toxic oil suitable for applying to weapons.

DUTHLAH'HASS

This oil produces a bright amber smoke with a smell similar to that of sizzling seaweed or burnt moss.

Humanoids sometimes describe the scent as “fiery” or “nose-clearing”.

Duthlah'hass oil is prepared from mint, the bark of certain tropical trees, and the sap of the greater jungle clingvine.

In Scaled Ones, duthlah'hass smoke induces dreamsleep—a deep, relaxed slumber in which they receive visions from their own subconscious minds and occasionally their deities.

The effects of dream or suggestion spells cast upon them by other beings may also manifest during such a sleep.

Dreamsleeping Yuan-ti can retrieve memories (such as where or how they hid something long ago, or snatches of overheard conversation) with crystal clarity.

A dreamsleeper awakens immediately upon taking damage; otherwise the sleep lasts for 2d4 hours after the initial duthlah'hass contact (regardless of whether or not the smoke is gone).

EKTHARISS

The dark purple smoke generated by this oil is highlighted by occasional puffs of a slightly lighter blue color.

Its smell is reminiscent of fresh-cut lemons or limes.

Ekthariss oil is distilled from the sap of the nightshadow jungle plant, which can be easily recognized by its shield-sized, brilliant purple leaves.

Ekthariss alters the body density of Scaled Ones in contact with its smoke, enabling them to use levitate as a spell-like ability at will for as long as they are in contact with the vapors (maximum weight 200 lbs.).

Yuan-ti often use this ability to reach high ledges, doors, or openings leading to treasure storage areas.

Some also use it to rest, study, or work above the reach of distractions or hostile beings.

Extreme care is required, however, since normal weight returns the instant contact with ekthariss smoke is lost, making falls quite likely.

As with the spell, the affected creature must be willing to rise, and objects can be lifted only by a Scaled One in contact with the smoke.

FAELE

This oil produces a deep blue smoke laced with occasional streamers of bright emerald hue.

Its reek is similar to the sickly-sweet “death smell” of rotting human or elf flesh.

Faele oil consists of human or elf blood mixed with a distillate of boiled boar brain.

Faele smoke grants a Scaled One a +4 circumstance bonus on all Fortitude saving throws.

Furthermore, any hit point damage taken by a Scaled One under its effects is reduced by 1 point per die, or by 1 point per attack if no die roll is involved.

These benefits persist for 1d4 hours from initial contact with faele smoke.

Continued contact after that period does not extend the effect, nor does any new contact with it renew the benefits until 24 hours have elapsed from the expiration of the previous effect.

HOOLOOND

This oil generates a yellow-green smoke shot through with momentary jets of red smoke that resemble licks of flame. The scent of hooloond smoke is often likened to the minty smell of fresh-cut jungle vines or melons, though it is much stronger.

Hooloond oil contains the blood of a constrictor snake and the venom of a viper.

At least 3 minutes of continuous contact with hooloond smoke heals a Scaled One of 1d4+2 points of damage.

An individual can gain this benefit twelve times in swift succession if opportunity permits, but the smoke won't affect that particular reptile again for a full 24 hours after its last healing.

Yuan-ti often plan their battles so that they can fight in continuous contact with hooloond smoke (for example, inside a smoke cloud or smoke-filled room).

Doing so allows them to receive this healing automatically every 3 minutes.

JALASSS

This oil produces white smoke shot through with short-lived, rainbowlike bands of iridescence.

Its smell is like that of burning paint or strongly dyed fabric.

Jalasss oil is a distillate of crushed snails and the sap of the launteene—an edible plant native to the wild floral hotlands.

Jalasss smoke instantly and permanently banishes the effects of all enchantment spells from the minds of Scaled Ones in contact with it and makes them immune to such effects for 1d4 hours after contact ceases.

Contact with ignited jalasss oil for 1 round maximizes this extension but deals damage as burning oil.

LAERISSS

The brown smoke generated by this oil smells like burning olives.

Laeriss oil contains certain crushed insects and the roots of several floating swamp plants.

Laeriss smoke causes a quickening of reactions in a Scaled One that manifests as a +2 bonus on all Reflex saves.

This effect lasts for 3d6 minutes from initial contact.

The same individual cannot be affected again for 1d4 hours, even if it remains in contact with the smoke.

RUUSSTANTAR

The green smoke produced by this oil is shot through with ribbons of purple vapor, and its scent is like that of freshly crushed grapes.

Ruusstantar oil contains a distillate of snakeskin and crushed dragon bone.

Any Scaled One in contact with ruusstantar smoke gains 1d12 temporary hit points that last for 1d4 hours.

A Scaled One that pours the ignited oil over her body instead gains 2d12 temporary hit points and take no damage from the burning oil.

These effects do not stack.

Once affected by ruusstantar, a Scaled One can't gain the benefits from either the smoke or the oil again until 2d4 full days have elapsed.

SLEEP POISON

The lizardfolk have developed a technique for distilling the extract of several jungle plants to produce a poison that renders enemies unconscious.

SSSARTISSS

A distillate of the venoms of several kinds of poisonous serpents, sssartiss has a bitter tang when wet and a scaled or furrowed texture when dry.

TS'OUS

This substance is a mixture of cobra venom and the extracts of several poisonous plants.

It smells like overripe fruit when wet and dries clear.

ULATHLASSS

The dull, heavy, green smoke generated by this oil flows over floors and then up walls and furnishings as though it were a lazy serpent.

Its smell is similar to that of roasting boar.

Ulathlasss oil is made from the internal juices of both carrion crawlers and centipedes.

Ulathlasss smoke renders Scaled Ones immune to all effects related to extremes of heat and cold (including natural torpor and natural or magical damage), but not the effects of natural or magical fire and ice, which deal half damage.

This benefit lasts for as long as the Scaled One is in contact with the smoke and for 2d6 minutes thereafter.

Contact with ignited ulathlasss oil has the same effects on reptiles as contact with the smoke, except that the user also becomes immune to damage from natural and magical fire and ice, and all benefits persist for 3d6 minutes after contact with the oil ceases.

Ulathlasss confers no protection against lightning or any other electricity-based effect in any of its forms.

SILVER MARCHES (3.0)

searching for herbs

Locating a particular herb is not as simple as strolling into the woods and plucking flowers. Searching for herbs requires a successful Wilderness Lore or Knowledge (herbalism) check, depending on how common the herb is in the immediate vicinity.

Common	DC 10
Uncommon	DC 20
Rare	DC 30
Not present	Impossible

Any character may attempt to locate herbs with a Search check, but only if the DC for the particular herb is 10 or lower.

Each attempt requires 10 minutes and covers the ground in an area roughly 100 feet square. A character with the nature sense ability (a druid, for example) only requires 1 minute per attempt.

AMAUNAUTH (RARE)

Also known as "greenflower" for its rich green leaves, which open in a starburst close to the ground, amaunauth is a hardy broadleaf groundweed.

It grows across colder areas of the North, from the Dessarin Valley north to where ice or snow always lies.

If eaten raw, amaunauth is harmful to humans, elves, orcs and all goblinkin, and their half-kin, but has no effect on dwarves, gnomes, halflings, fey creatures, and gnolls, nor on horses, goats, sheep, rothé, and deer.

The poison called amaunauth is brewed from the sap or internal juices of the weed.

An herbalist can concoct amaunauth by crushing the leaves of the plant, boiling whole plants, or even dissolving the leaves in alcohol (Alchemy or Knowledge [herbalism] check, DC 15, and one day's work to manufacture).

A single plant can produce 1d4+2 doses.

Amaunauth: Injury DC 19, initial damage 2d4 hp, secondary damage unconsciousness, price 100 gp.

DUSKWOOD

Named for the dark, eerie appearance of their closely clustered stands, duskwoods grow arrow-straight up to 60 feet tall.

Their smooth, bare, trunks are crowned by halos of tiny, lacy branches.

Duskwoods have black bark that turns silvery gray when newly broken or peeled.

The wood beneath is smoky gray, and hard as iron. Most mast spars and building roof-beams in Faerûn are made of duskwood.

It is very resistant to fire, smoldering rather than blazing. Duskwood trees tend to survive both forest fires and the axes of firewood-seekers because of this.

Duskwood grows widely all over Faerûn.

EMBRAMAPH (COMMON)

A tall flowering plant with irregular petals of rich purple, embramaph grows in sunny soil.

Embramaph is an antidote to many poisons, diseases, molds and rots, but its effects vary for each individual.

Its leaves and stems, eaten or crushed and rubbed on the skin, are effective throughout the year.

Also known as fairflower because of its beneficial effects, embramaph has almost no market value, since it loses its potency within a day of being harvested.

A dose of embramaph confers a +4 bonus on Heal checks made to treat poison or treat disease.

A single embramaph plant yields 1d4 doses.

FELSUL

“A poor excuse for a tree” is the common judgement of the felsul.

Most folk agree when they first examine these gnarled, twisted trees of a dusty cinammon hue that constantly shed flakes of rotting bark.

Felsul-wood readily crumbles, splits, cracks, burns poorly, and is too weak and misshapen to be usable in building or furniture making.

Early each spring, felsuls burst briefly into bloom.

A sack of vivid yellow-and-purple felsul flowers fetches from 5 to 30 silver pieces, depending on the size and lushness of the blossoms in any particular year.

The crushed petals of felsul flowers yield an expensive perfume prized throughout Faerûn.

Felsul-root is sometimes favored for use in small carvings such as holy symbols, figurines, and toys.

Felsuls favor cold and poor soil, and grow on crags, cliff-edges, and clefts where few other trees can find purchase.

In many rocky places in the North, felsuls are the only trees to be seen.

GROUNDPINE

These stunted, many-armed pines seldom grow more than 1 foot high, but spread out in all directions “like spiders turned on their backs”, in the words of one forester.

A hazard underfoot to horses, groundpines cloak many hilltops or moors downslope in the North, flourishing where biting winds blow and less hardy species struggle. Their cones feed many small birds and furry creatures, and their needles offer cover for both predators and traps placed to harm or capture humans.

As with certain spruces, groundpine bark can be boiled to derive a searing-cool sweet drink that refreshes but doesn't intoxicate.

HIEXEL

Upright oval trees usually 30 feet in height, hiexels can grow 70 feet tall in sheltered spots.

They have gently curved, sparse branches; brittle, green, waxy wood (called simply “hiexel”); and silver-green bark. Hiexel rots easily and produces profuse amounts of thick, oily smoke when ignited.

This brings it frequent use in signal fires and for smoking meat or fish, or to drive beasts or foes out of an enclosed area.

Hiexel bark sees use in bookbinding.

It's also used to seal the walls of wooden buildings against damp, stuck down with wooden pegs and sealed with mud and clumps of moss.

As they grow, hiexel trees dry out unevenly, so windstorms often fell old or large specimens.

Hiexel is unsuitable for sledges, bridges, and other hard usages.

It shouldn't be used in magic items, because its unstable nature will cause breakage after a few years at most.

Hiexel trees are very common in the Dales, growing in thickets in ravines and on hillsides.

They are rarer in the North, but can be found scattered there everywhere south of the Nether Mountains, particularly in the Rauvin and Delimbiyr vales.

LASPAR

Evergreens of a distinctive olive-green hue, laspars are sometimes mistakenly thought to be dead by passing travelers.

Laspars look like squat cedars, rarely topping 30 feet in height, and have thick foliage that foils most searching eyes seeking to see under a single tree, let alone a stand of them.

Laspar needles are flat and smooth-pointed.

They grow in spherical clusters (“shags”) at the ends of delicate branches that swirl around a straight, strong central trunk.

The trunks have dusty green bark that tends to form a surface of many small, interlocked concave plates.

Under the bark is a golden-hued wood that's as easily worked as pine—but is also pitchy, spitting too many sparks for safe burning.

Crushed needles are used in making scents and are often worked into torches and candles of superior quality.

Laspars grow everywhere west of Thay that's also north of the Forest of Tethir.

They thrive around Turnstone Pass, and down Delimbiyr Vale into the Far Forest.

PHANDAR

Phandars grow up to 60 feet high, with terrifically strong, springy curving boughs sprouting in great numbers from a massive, knobbly central trunk.

Triangular leaves of mottled, varicolored green grow on branches that form the rough shape of a horizontal egg, with its long axis (the “tail” of the tree) pointing away from the prevailing wind, so that a stand of phandars all seem to be pointing in one direction.

Some adventurers say they greatly resemble the feared monsters known as ropers.

Phandar wood is greenish-brown striped with thin black grain lines throughout, which when cut for use in the making of jewelry form striking waves of curling parallel lines.

Tool and weapon handles and bows are often fashioned of phandar wood, though its curving nature makes it unsuitable for spears, wands, staffs, and other uses where straightness is desirable.

Phandars are very hardy.

Stumps often grow new trees, and even cut, fallen boughs may sprout seedlings.

This quality has probably saved the tree from total extinction; loggers prize phandar trunks because they're strong enough to support the heaviest roof, and they can be chiseled to accept crossbeams without cracking or splitting. Phandars are found across Faerûn, but are sparse north of the High Forest.

They are increasingly rare everywhere due to overcutting.

SILVERBARK

Silverbarks are thin and straight, seldom more than a dozen feet tall.

They are plentiful, and grow in thickets.

Silverbark wood is reddish and dries out thoroughly after it's cut, becoming very light but also very brittle after a year or so.

The silver bark is loose and easily torn away.

Silverbark leaves are waxy to the touch, deep red in color, large and oval with pointed tips and tiny saw-toothed edges.

They are strong enough to carry game or kindling in.

Silverbark trunks serve the poor as staffs, poles, and (once points have been whittled and hardened in a slow fire) as defensive stakes.

The weakness of the wood makes it unsuitable for lance shafts, fence rails, or structural work.

Silverbarks flourish in wet ground throughout Faerûn.

THUMBERRY

This globe-shaped shrub of lime-green, ragged leaves is studded year-round with white berries the size and shape of human thumbs.

The edible, fatty berries can be shaped into candles and burned, and they have kept many a lost or hungry traveler alive, although their taste wins few accolades.

Thumberry-root can be boiled to yield a potent slate-gray dye or ink.

VARATHAR (UNCOMMON)

Also known as "moonglow" for the pale silver-blue radiance it shows in moonlight, varathar is an unattractive, rare ground cover that looks like shredded, rotting brown mushrooms.

A character may administer a dose of varathar with a successful Heal check (DC 10); a creature treated in this fashion is healed of 1d4 points of damage.

The DC of the Heal check to administer varathar increases by +10 per dose taken per day, making it difficult for a creature to benefit more than once or twice a day from varathar.

Varathar retains its potency for 1d4+1 days after harvesting, and commands a market price of 10 gp per dose.

A single varathar plant normally yields 1d4 doses.

WINTERBERRY

These tangled vines are dusty brown in hue and constantly shed ragged strips of bark.

They customarily form spherical coils that bulk as large as bushes, and are often overgrown by lesser creepers so as to look quite substantial.

Winterberries shed their silver-gray leaves in fall, but only after persistent freezing weather has come do the apparently bare and lifeless vines split apart to reveal waxy, white, sour-sweet berries.

Many birds and small forest creatures (and more than one hungry, desperate human) depend on winterberries—because they can be eaten frozen, and deer hate their taste and so let them be.

ALPHORN

A favorite of the more sophisticated giant races, the alphorn (or white horn) is a long, straight, wooden pipe with an upturned bell at the very end.

The pipe is typically 12–20 feet long and wound with birch bark, which gives the instrument its pale color and distinctive hollow tone.

To play an alphorn, the musician rests the bend of the instrument on the ground and blows into the mouthpiece. Since alphorns have no fingerholes for altering the pitch, each can produce only one note.

An alphorn's sound carries for great distances, so some isolated giants use it to communicate with their distant neighbors.

An unfriendly critic once compared the result to wolves baying at the moon, but his heirs issued a lavish posthumous apology after the offended giants showed him the error of his ways.

Bardic Music: The alphorn's deep pitch carries its sound to a distance of 1d10 miles.

This allows the use of inspire greatness, countersong, and inspire courage effects even when great distances separate the musician from his or her listeners.

AUTOMATED FOOTPAD

A gnome creation, this device looks like a small, wind-up toy.

When wound and set in motion, it heads off in a straight line, making distinct, audible footsteps every few seconds. Its chief purpose is to distract guards' attention by making it seem that someone is walking down a corridor, though it can also make a useful trap-detection tool.

If the user makes a successful Disable Device check (DC 25), the device can set off a touch- or proximity-triggered trap.

BAGPIPES

A set of bagpipes consists of a cloth or skin bag fitted with three reeded pipes (drones), plus a blowpipe and a chanter (melody pipe).

The piper inflates the bag through the blowpipe, then squeezes the air out through the other four pipes to produce the sound.

Fingerholes in the chanter allow it to produce a wide range of notes.

Meanwhile, each of the drones emits a single, low-pitched, buzzing tone.

Together, these provide harmony for the chanter's tune.

A few societies prize bagpipes for their distinctive qualities, though their music is definitely an acquired taste.

The instrument is very strenuous to play because the piper must keep the bag supplied with enough air to fill all four pipes at once.

Therefore, a musician who can play long pieces on it wins the grudging respect of his or her fellows, whatever their feelings toward bagpipes in the abstract.

Bardic Music: The musician can produce an unearthly wail that imposes a  $-1$  morale penalty on the listeners' saving throws against fear effects.

This is a supernatural, mind-affecting ability.

BANJOLELE

This instrument has a tambourinlike, circular body with vellum stretched tightly across it to act as a sounding board. Five metal strings span the body of the instrument, secured by pegs at the end of the long, straight neck.

A typical banjolele is about 18 inches in length.

A favorite of halfling bards, this instrument is otherwise rare.

Some find its music jaunty and uplifting; others maintain that it combines all the worst characteristics of a banjo and a ukulele.

Bardic Music: When played to inspire courage, this cheerful instrument increases the morale bonus on saving throws against fear effects from  $+2$  to  $+3$  for listeners allied with the musician.

BELL, HANGING

A hanging bell is a larger-scale version of a handbell (see below).

Hanging bells are usually made of bronze or some other metal, though stone versions are also known.

They have no handles; instead, they hang from pivots mounted on frames.

Hanging bells are quite large (up to several feet high) and often weigh more than a ton each.

The typical hanging bell has a metal rod called a clapper suspended within it.

The performer usually plays a hanging bell by swinging or tugging on a rope attached to the clapper rather than by moving the bell itself.

The rare hanging bell that has no clapper can be played by striking the outside with a mallet.

Each of these instruments produces only one note—the larger the bell, the lower its pitch.

The sound of a hanging bell can carry for miles, especially when it is mounted high in a bell tower.

Thus, this instrument can be used to raise an alarm, pass along signals, mark special occasions, denote specific time periods (the hours of the day, the changing of the guard, the time to pray, and so forth), or simply make a joyous noise.

Bardic Music: When played to inspire courage, a hanging bell weighing at least 1 ton increases the morale bonus on allies' saves against fear and charm effects from  $+2$  to  $+3$ .

The music also imposes a  $-1$  morale penalty on foes' saves against those same effects.

BONES

Despite their name, these percussion instruments are actually small wooden blocks, typically dark-colored and highly polished.

A complete set consists of twelve to thirty pieces, all different lengths.

Each is tapered in the middle for easy insertion between the fingers.

When struck, each "bone" gives off a hollow, reverberating sound at a particular pitch.

The bones are played by striking pairs of pieces together in succession, thus creating combinations of tones.

A dexterous performer can achieve a wide range of effects by varying which pieces connect and how long each vibrates, as well as how hard and how often they hit.

Kobolds in particular love this form of percussion.

In fact, it is not uncommon for a kobold minstrel to manipulate two or more pieces in each hand, switching them off with the remaining pieces at dazzling speed—almost as if he were juggling as well as playing.

Audiences often admire the speed of the performer's hand gestures as much as the music itself.

Bardic Music: The hollow, eerie, rattling of the bones imposes a  $-2$  morale penalty on listeners' saving throws against fear effects.

Creating this effect is a supernatural, mind-affecting ability.

CHIMES, WIND

Wind chimes can be made of wood, metal, or crystal.

The simplest type consists of strips of the chosen material, all the same length, hanging parallel to one another from a support.

A more complex type uses strips of different lengths, but they still hang parallel about one-half inch apart.

The most sophisticated of all wind chimes, the chromatic chime, consists of actual tubular bells, each tuned to a different note and carefully arranged to create a harmonious scale.

Individual chimes of any type can be as short as a few inches or as long as 8 feet.

Wind chimes are hung in a place where the wind can easily reach them.

When a strong enough breeze blows, the pieces knock together and chime.

If all the pieces are the same length, the instrument can sound only one note, though its rhythm is random.

Wind chimes with pieces of different lengths produce different notes, depending upon exactly which pairs of chimes come into contact.

The most common type of magic wind chimes grants a +1 morale bonus on listeners' saving throws against charm and fear effects for as long as it sounds.

CLAVICHORD

The clavichord, an ancestor of the modern piano, borrows the pipe organ's keyboard but substitutes horizontal strings for its pipes.

Pressing a key causes an attached metal piece to strike a string or pair of strings inside the instrument, sounding the note.

A clavichord looks like a flat, rectangular or oblong box about 1 foot wide and a bit more than 3 feet long.

The musician typically places it on a table or similar flat surface for a performance.

Soft and silvery in tone, the clavichord allows great variety of expression.

The volume varies slightly according to the force with which the keys are struck, but the instrument is never particularly loud.

Clavichords are particularly popular in orchestral arrangements and as showpieces in the homes of well-to-do merchants.

Bardic Music: A musician using a clavichord can maintain only a single bardic music or virtuoso performance effect at a time.

Because of its soft tone, the clavichord imposes a -1 circumstance penalty on Perform checks for countersong attempts, but it grants a +2 circumstance bonus on Perform checks for fascinate or suggestion.

It also grants a +1 circumstance bonus on the musician's Diplomacy and Gather Information checks made against audience members for 1d6 hours after the performance ends.

CRUMHORN

The true crumhorn is a triple-reed instrument created by and favored by treant musicians, but quite unplayable by most humanoids.

A true crumhorn is a straight tube about 6 feet long with six to eight fingerholes and a slightly flared bell.

A small wooden cup containing the reeds serves as the mouthpiece.

The human version, about 3 feet long, produces a reedy, nasal sound quite unlike the majestic timbre of the true crumhorn.

Though treants are the primary players of crumhorns, dryads are also exceptionally fond of their music.

Most other forest denizens find the crumhorn melodic but melancholy.

Bardic Music: A crumhorn of any type grants the musician a +1 circumstance bonus on all Perform checks when the listeners are sylvan folk other than dryads.

Every such listener also incurs a -4 circumstance penalty on saving throws made to resist the performer's fascinate or suggestion effects.

These modifiers double for dryad listeners.

Producing the saving throw penalty is a supernatural, mind affecting ability.

DOUBLE-SIDED CLOTHES

This specially made set of clothing is useful for allaying suspicion and throwing off pursuit.

A bard who has been spotted leaving an assignation, a spymaster who is trying to throw off a tail, or a thief who wants to establish an alibi—any of these can benefit greatly from this relatively simple item.

Each piece of clothing in the set is reversible, and the two sides differ markedly in color, style, and general appearance.

Neither side resembles the other in any way, and most often the two ensembles even correspond to different social stations.

Thus, the wearer can take pains to be seen wearing one outfit, then duck briefly out of sight and emerge looking so different that only the most suspicious observer would connect him or her with the person who vanished a few moments before.

However, it would behoove the suit's owner not to use it too many times in the same town, lest some bright citizen make a connection between the disappearance of one person and the appearance of the other.

It takes 2 minutes to reverse the clothing and alter other details (such as hairstyle, jewelry, and so forth) appropriately.

A character who completes the change gains the standard +5 bonus on Disguise checks for alteration of minor details.

If the wearer attempts any additional changes (such as using spells or a disguise kit, or appearing as a different gender, race, or class), apply the corresponding check modifiers (see the Disguise skill description in Chapter 4 of the Player's Handbook) and extend the time required appropriately.

DRUM

Possibly the oldest of all instruments, the drum exists in types without number.

Drums range from simple hollow trees pounded with sticks to a celebrated magic lake named Irontick, which a musician can "play" by jumping up and down on its rigid surface.

A typical drum consists of skin, parchment, or some similar material stretched tightly over the opening of a hollow wooden cylinder or pot.

This covered opening is called the drumhead.

Some drums have only one drumhead; others have two or more.

Striking the drumhead with sticks, mallets, or even the hands produces the sound.

Drums are popular with almost every race and culture for their ability to stir the emotions, establish a background beat for dancing, and provide counterpoint for a melody produced by some other instrument.

The rare exceptions include celestials, who consider drum rhythms primitive, and elves, who find them vaguely disturbing and extremely annoying (a prejudice reinforced, perhaps, by the enthusiasm with which many of their enemies embrace them).

Half-orcs, lizardfolk, troglodytes, trolls, ogres, and the more dim-witted giants are the races most likely to enjoy simple drum music.

Demons, of course, love an unholy din, so they not only enjoy drums but also prefer to play several different kinds at once.

Bardic Music: When played to inspire courage, drums boost the morale bonus on saves against fear effects from +2 to +4, but decrease the morale bonus on saves against charm effects from +2 to +0.

DRUMS, BONGO

These small drums always come in sets of two. One drum of each pair is about 5 inches in diameter; the other is about 7 inches.

The bongo player can either set the drums down to play them or carry them on a strap.

Bongos are played by rapidly tapping the drumheads with the fingertips, and a skilled drummer can create very complex rhythms by rapidly switching between the two drums.

Goblins are quite fond of the bongos, which they play for entertainment, to call together war parties, and to transmit messages through complex rhythms.

All these applications tend to sound the same to members of other races.

Bardic Music: See drum.

DRUMS, KETTLE

Also called timpani, kettle drums are large, heavy, metal pots 2–3 feet high with skin or parchment drumheads. The drummer plays them by pounding on the drumheads with special mallets swathed in cloth.

Kettle drums come in sets of at least two and sometimes up to five individual drums, each a different size and pitch (the larger the drum, the deeper its tone).

Because of their weight, kettle drums are not portable.

By striking multiple drums in rapid succession, the drummer can produce a rapid, multitone sound that reverberates for several moments.

This effect combined with a mounting crescendo provides a rousing finale for any musical performance.

Kettle drums are quite popular among gnolls, who have developed highly sophisticated rhythms with them.

Most gnoll timpani concerts end with the audience rushing to attack any convenient targets.

Bardic Music: See drum.

DULCIMER, HAMMERED

This instrument has a flat, trapezoidal soundbox with several pairs of strings stretched horizontally across it. Because of its size (about 30 inches by 18 inches), it is usually set on a stand at an angle rather than held on the lap.

The musician plays this unusual instrument by striking the strings in rapid succession with tiny hammers, one held in each hand.

Bardic Music: See zither, below.

EXPANDABLE POLE

This sturdy but hollow bamboo rod is 1 foot long and capped at each end.

By removing the caps, the user can slide out up to five additional sections from each tip.

When extended and rotated into “locked” position (a move-equivalent action), each of these sections adds 1 foot to the total length of the rod.

Since each end can produce the same number of extensions, the pole can be set at any 1-foot increment up to 11 feet.

The usual settings are 5 feet, 7 feet, 9 feet, and 11 feet.

Collapsing the pole back to its original 1-foot length requires twisting each section to unlock it, then sliding it back inside the next larger piece (a move-equivalent action).

The primary function of this device is to bridge holes or gaps and anchor ropes for descent into pits and shafts.

How far the pole is extended determines how much weight it can bear: It can hold 150 pounds at 5 feet, 120 pounds at 7 feet, 100 pounds at 9 feet, or 50 pounds at 11 feet.

Halflings and gnomes in particular find this a useful piece of dungeoneering equipment.

FIDDLE

An ancestor of the modern violin, the fiddle is a small, portable, stringed instrument with a body shaped rather like an hourglass.

Four or five strings made of gut or sinew stretch across the body, anchored by pegs at the end of a long, thin neck.

A separate piece, called the bow, is a long, thin piece of wood strung with fine strands of animal hair.

Fiddles vary in length between 2 feet (for Medium-size fiddlers) and 18 inches (for Small fiddlers).

To play the fiddle, the musician holds it horizontally, typically with the base tucked under his or her chin, and draws the bow back and forth across the strings.

The fiddle is popular among bards who prefer lively dance music (reels or jigs) over serene but detached “pure” music.

Though it is welcome almost anywhere, the fiddle is the favorite instrument of kobolds, whose clever hands mastered its fingerings ages ago.

(They insist that they invented the fiddle, but other races find that claim dubious).

Kobold minstrels and halfling bards typically caper about while playing, showing their audience an example of the lively dancing their music encourages.

Musicians of other races usually sit or stand to play the fiddle.

Bardic Music: Like the other two prime bardic instruments, the lute and the lap-harp, the fiddle enables the performer to maintain one bardic music or virtuoso performance effect while initiating another.

Thus, a bard could maintain a countersong effect on one listener while inspiring courage in others.

FLUTE

The flute is the highest pitched of all the woodwinds.

Unlike the recorder-flute, from which it derives, the flute is held at a right angle to the musician's mouth, so that air blown into it bends to the side.

Flutes range from 8 inches to about 2 feet long.

The shortest type is often called a piccolo.

Each flute has six holes (or, more rarely, eight), plus a thumbhole that, when covered, lowers each of the other notes by an octave.

Flutes have a reputation for producing gentle, idyllic music, but they can also create more martial effects or distorted wailing sounds.

Abyssal flutes always have an odd number of fingerholes, and they conform to no scale or key used by humanoid bards.

Particularly in the hands of demon pipers, they produce “music” that sounds to mortal ears like a disharmonic combination of sharps, flats, and bizarre, minor-key effects.

Bardic Music: See recorder-flute, below.

GONG

A gong is a large, gently curved plate, rather like a single, huge cymbal.

The typical version is made of bronze and has a distinct, curved-in rim and a boss, or slightly raised knob, in the center.

Gongs usually hang suspended from wooden frames to ensure that they can reverberate freely.

Both the frames and the gongs themselves can be as simple or as highly decorated as desired.

The sound of a gong never fails to get attention.

To play it, the musician simply strikes the boss with a large mallet, which is usually covered with either felt or cloth.

Each gong can produce only a single note, but it is audible to a considerable distance and reverberates for 5 rounds after each strike.

So impressive is the sound that enthusiasts claim no other instrument can match it.

Stationary gongs usually weigh several hundred pounds each, so they are not suitable for adventuring.

However, they are quite popular for ceremonial music and as warning signal devices.

Primitive races often hang circular metal shields on their walls to serve as makeshift alarm gongs.

Bardic Music: While it reverberates, the gong adds +5 to the DC for each Concentration check made by a listener (including the performer).

Creating this effect is a supernatural, sonic ability.

When played as part of a countersong attempt, the gong gives the user a +5 circumstance bonus on the Perform check required for that effect.

GORGET

This metal collar offers superior protection for the neck, providing a +10 armor bonus against garrote attacks.

The typical gorget consists of two semicircular metal plates held in place with a metal pin.

It is typically worn as part of a set of full plate, though it can also be worn alone or as part of a helmet.

Adding spikes to a gorget doubles the cost and may make certain opponents reconsider attacking the wearer’s throat, but this feature adds nothing to its armor bonus.

A gorget has a hardness of 10.

Because it can restrict breathing, long-term exertion is difficult for the gorget wearer.

The item imposes a –4 circumstance penalty on any checks made to perform physical actions that extend over a period of time (running, swimming, breath-holding, and so on).

HANDBELL

The handbell is a hollow, beehive-shaped instrument with a clapper inside and a handle at the top.

Handbells are usually cast from bronze or some other sturdy metal.

A handbell is small enough (typically 2–12 inches long) to be used in one hand.

To play one, the performer need only swing it back and forth, causing the clapper to strike the sides repeatedly.

Each handbell produces a single, ringing note—the larger the bell, the deeper its tone.

Handbells are usually grouped together for musical performances.

When played in specific sequences by experts, they can produce highly complex chords and melodies.

Humans, elves, and celestials are especially fond of handbell music.

A magic handbell can be played only if it has the correct clapper, which may or may not be present upon its discovery.

Bardic Music: A handbell grants the performer a +1 circumstance bonus on Perform checks made for countersong attempts.

Additional handbells do not increase this bonus.

HARMONICA

A later refinement on pan pipes (see below), the harmonica substitutes metal tubes for the reeds and encloses them in a small, rectangular casing.

The musician simply blows into the top of the harmonica at various points to produce a range of notes.

This instrument’s high, buzzing sound is popular among some halflings and gnomes.

Bardic Music: Harmonica music warms the hearts of commoners and other folk of humble station.

Thus, a successful Perform check in such company grants the musician a +4 circumstance bonus on Bluff, Diplomacy, Disguise, and Gather Information checks involving any of those listeners for 1d6 hours after the performance ends.

In addition, it shifts the attitude of the listeners by one category in the performer’s favor (for example, from friendly to helpful—see the NPC Attitudes section in Chapter 5 of the Dungeon Master’s Guide).

However, it also imposes a –4 circumstance penalty on Intimidate checks made against such listeners for the same period.

Producing these effects is a supernatural, mind-affecting ability.

HARP

Far less portable than its smaller cousin the lapharp, a standing harp is often 5 or even 6 feet in height.

Its forty-six strings give it an astonishing range of more than five octaves.

An optional pedal attachment allows the musician to raise (sharpen) or lower (flatten) the notes, thus generating an even wider range.

Despite their size, harps are rather delicate and easily damaged.

This tends to restrict harp performances to indoor settings, typically theaters or residences of aristocrats rich enough to own these instruments.

Connoisseurs of harp music maintain that it is even more ethereal and elegant than the music of a lap-harp, although champions of the latter hold their instruments to be richer in tone.
