Foreword

This is not what I had in mind.

The doorstep-book thing, I mean. Out of control.

This project started as a simple idea: What If. Many great projects start out that way. Sad to say, many more average or bad projects start out that way, only to fall short. Which group this book falls into is in the eye of the beholder, but one thing is for certain: it turned out to be much, much more, if not necessarily greater, than it was intended to be. Berinncorte took on a life of its own, along the way.

What If: I created something on my own, in the vein of existing books that I've adored and enjoyed?

I enjoy pretty much any roleplaying game book, eBook, or other work I can get my hands on. I have over a thousand of them, in various forms. I'm a total and complete sucker for anything hardcover; I'm fairly certain I own every single hardcover book produced by anyone for the D20 rules system. Every. Single. One. Yeah, it's a problem.

What If: I took some of my easy-come ideas, and just sketched them out in roleplaying format?

I've written a few novels. It's fairly difficult for me to write them. I may never know if I'm really any good at it, to be honest; my first few have sold, um, appallingly poorly. To wit: the Kickstarter for this book has already surpassed all of my lifetime sales for my novels. Heh.

You know what? I don't care. I've never been in it for the money, anyway. (Please do back my next Kickstarter project, though.)

I get ideas. All. The. Time. And I can't stand, can't stand, to have them just sit there. Or worse, forget them. I have a physical, emotional, need to codify ideas, even if they're not necessarily the greatest thing ever. Novels do that, and I love writing books-books. But roleplaying books like this one... I can say with total honesty, every single word (over half a million of them, good lord) was a pleasure, in a way that novel-writing has not always been.

What If... this was only the beginning?

The good news is, if you like this book, you're in luck.

Dark Obelisk: Berinncorte is a sliver, a tiny little pinhole view, into the mythos I have in mind, here. There's dozens of pages of detailed world-building and history, dozens of books outlined already. An entire universe, of which the humble village of Berinncorte, and the Realm it lies within, is but one tiny piece, the first glimpse of what these thoughts might someday become.

This project is imperfect.

I realize that, and admit to it readily. It's a single city, and the boundaries are disturbingly hard-coded. For a project whose lofty goals are the rarified air of truly dynamic content; for an adventure that is at its heart merely two sandboxes, one normal and one grim... for a project that tries so damned hard to be open and interactive, it's somewhat disheartening to have it box the story into a 300' wide city that you simply cannot leave.

There's no external map, no Realm map to place the city in context. There is perhaps a slim handful of mentions of other cities, and some characters are described as having come from "elsewhere in the Realm", that sort of thing. Such an approach smacks of either laziness, or failure to think things through fully. The pagecount presumably negates the former option, and you have to take my word on the latter simply not being the case: chalk the "hard boxing" up to a neophyte trying his hardest to imbue a single ship-in-a-bottle city-story with as much realistic and interesting detail as possible.

Speaking of which: In a way, this is a bizarre, masochistic experiment. How much runaway detail can you pack into a single, 400-person fantasy town? At what point does it all collapse under its own weight? Is such an approach feasible? Is such an approach even entertaining?

Only the reader, the players, the users of this book can truly answer those latter questions.

So, to summarize before we get on with it: I've always been pretty good at having ideas. Often, I've been lucky enough to figure out a meaningful way to get them started. It's unfortunately rare, though, that I'm able to get one of these ideas across the finish line. I have Kickstarter—and dozens of somewhat less-than-stimulating conference calls at my day job—to thank for the completion of this one.

Here's hoping this project is just the start.

Collector's Edition Foreword

This is exactly what I had in mind.

And the several-dozen things that followed? Definitely what I had in mind. In the dark, secret places of my heart that I try to not encourage, lest undue optimism take the place of cold, reasonable pragmatism.

What began as a single "what-if" has become far much more than that. And, yet, it's still the same: what if this, what if that, compounded a hundredfold, with no end in sight.

The very concept of producing a Collector's Edition of my first indie RPG project is still somewhat dizzying. This was an opportunity to enhance, to extend, and to learn from what I'd originally crafted. A chance to lay things out so they were, frankly, readable without eye strain. A chance to present things in a single volume, rather than the two that had been present before.

What you have before you is the definitive version of Dark Obelisk 1: Berinncorte. It's polished, it's revamped, and it's solid. It's been played through in near-entirety across over 100 gaming sessions that I'm aware of, by several gaming groups.

And it's just the tip of the iceberg: the Dark Obelisk Adventure Path contains over 3,000 pages as of this writing across four massive adventures, with more to come.

So I will indulge that dark, secret place in my heart once more, and lay optimism at the feet of a temple forged in optimism:

Here's hoping this is just the start.

About Infinium Game Studio

Founded in 2015, Infinium Game Studio (IGS) came about as the result of a simple mission: Make shared storytelling games easier and more fun for both players and referees alike.

Our vision is that Infinium Game Studio empowers referees, players, and the industry entire with innovative gaming tools; high-quality, deeply-designed products; and creative takes on established paradigms.

Values and Key Differences

Plays Well With Everyone

IGS products are engineered to be usable by both novice and veteran gaming groups. As a result, they must contain everything a novice GM might need to react quickly to his/her play group.

Comprehensive and Immersive

Each IGS product should “feel real” and come with everything the referee might require to make the setting, context, environment, or other content come alive.

Everything You Need

The ideal adventure should contain practically everything you need to run the game, except the core rulebook. Even the most skilled GM wastes time looking things up in multiple books. It’s so exceedingly rare that an adventure contain all of the crunch and fluff necessary to run it.

Maps: Where Are We, Again?

A picture is worth a thousand words... and also, a thousand seconds of prep time. Visually appealing, easy-to-use, and extensive Maps are an essential part of any shared-storytelling experience.

Pervasive Maps

Don’t put a building on a map if I can’t go inside it.

Prepared for Anything

In a gaming session, a good referee must be prepared for the PCs to explore any aspect of the content. All too often, an otherwise outstanding adventure will fail to provide for a major percentage of its content. If there are twenty buildings in a town, but maps for only two of them--well, it’s fairly apparent where the Big Bad is going to be holed up! Not every map will be riddled with secret passages, custom random encounters, and combat, but there should be something of interest in every building. Otherwise, it shouldn’t be there!

Thoroughness: But What If...?

It’s possible to have a 16-page adventure that’s wonderful and exciting. It’s also possible to have a 255-page sourcebook be boring and repetitive. Striking the right balance between over-padding and under-describing is challenging, but an important part of what we do at IGS.

Flexible

Each product should be usable on its own, completely out of context; as a start to a completely new campaign; as part of the “intended” Adventure Path or associated suite of IGS products; or to insert into an existing ongoing campaign.

Reusable

No IGS product is “one and done” by design.

FlexTale and Comprehensive Design enable this flexibility and reusability.

Production Quality

Our goal is to produce world-class products with high production values.

Introduction

What is FlexTale?

What is FlexTale?

FlexTale™ is an attempt to make roleplaying game adventure content dynamic and interesting. A module created using FlexTale is different each time it is run. Treasure, monsters, plot activities, NPC backstories and character arcs, and various actions and plot elements can all occur differently.

Differences can occur using the roll of dice, or the GM can simply choose the content that s/he prefers or feels would be most engaging to the play group.

There are two ways that FlexTale can help make an adventure dynamic: Dynamic Content and Dynamic Plots.

Dynamic Content

“Dynamic content” is a FlexTable term that refers to anything in an adventure that can be modified. Whether one NPC is in love with another, or who murdered the vagrant in the alley behind the town pub—FlexTale dynamic content makes it possible to have several explanations or paths through a story.

Dynamic Content is made possible by something called a FlexTable™.

FlexTables

Most roleplaying game resources have tables—lots and lots of tables, in many cases! Typically, these tables are two-column, or perhaps three-column: you have one column that lists the dice roll result, and you reference that row as the outcome of the randomization. This is all well and good, but it limits the scenario to that one set of probabilities and outcomes, without accounting for things that happen in the game that you might want to impact those outcomes.

A Traditional RPG Lookup Table

“Table 1: Traditional Lookup Table” is a typical “what’s in the treasure chest” table that requires rolling a  d100. You roll a d100, and then you look up which row your roll falls into, and then you get your single result. Interesting, to be sure, and it definitely provides for some variability... but the extent of that variability is constant.

Table 1: Traditional Lookup Table

D%	Result	Description
01-30	Nothing	The treasure chest is empty.
31-40	Minor Reward	1d20 gp and a silver locket worth 5 pp.
41-80	Average Reward	3d12 gp, a gold-hilted dagger worth 10 pp, and two potions of cure light wounds.
81-100	Major Reward	2d20 pp, a potion of cure moderate wounds, and a scroll of fireball (CL 12).

The FlexTable Difference

A FlexTable is used to do the same thing a normal RPG lookup table does. What makes FlexTables different is that they have multiple columns to represent dice rolls. Each of the columns represents a different situation or set of conditions under which that column is used to reference the result.

This seemingly simple change is used to make all of the following possible:

- Differences in probabilities for the individual outcomes.
- “Scalable” monsters and rewards that more appropriately match the level and power of the PCs.
- Proportional rewards, measured against the strength of a relationship or other conditions.
- Circumstantial content, restricted to certain conditions or prerequisites.

“: Sample Treasure Chest Contents” is the same table we saw earlier, modified to be a FlexTable.

Contexts

In the above example, there are now four columns used to indicate the range of the dice roll result. These columns are referred to as Contexts.

Before you roll on a FlexTable like this one, you will have to figure out which Context you should refer to. In the above table, the leftmost column is Context “A” (D%A), the next one is “B”, and so on. Each Context also indicates the dice to be rolled—in this example, you roll the same dice (d%) in each Context, but in some FlexTables, different dice may be used.

This straightforward example demonstrates the following differences in converting a standard table into a FlexTable:

FlexTable 1: Sample Treasure Chest Contents

D%A	D%B	D%C	D%D	Result	Description
01-30	01-20	01-10	01-30	Nothing	The treasure chest is empty.
31-40	21-50	21-30	31-40	Minor Reward	1d20 gp and a silver locket worth 5 pp.
41-80	51-60	31-50	41-45	Average Reward	3d12 gp, a gold-hilted dagger worth 10 pp, and two potions of cure light wounds.
81-100	61-100	51-100	46-50	Major Reward	2d20 pp, a potion of cure moderate wounds, and a scroll of fireball (CL 12).
n/a	n/a	n/a	51-100	Cursed Reward	6d6 cp, a rusted dagger (useless in combat), and whomever opens it is struck with a bestow curse spell (CL 8).

Different Probabilities: Context C is the most favorable, since it provides a much bigger range of rolls under which you would receive the “Major Reward”. Context B is the next best, since it, too, expands the range that Context A has.

Circumstantial Results: In Context D, not only are the favorable outcomes less likely, but there is a fifth result row that is only possible under this Context: “Cursed Reward”.

Determining Context: When you are called upon to roll on this FlexTable, the adventure will use some description to make it clear which Context to use. In the above example, perhaps the Context is determined by how favorable the party’s relationship is with a local wizard... but if the party has fought or slain that wizard, then Context D is used to represent the soured atmosphere.

Typically, just prior to a FlexTable, adventure content will summarize which Context should be used. The GM is encouraged to use his/her common sense and judgement in overriding this guidance as she/he sees fit based on the party and how the game is going. For example, a GM could choose to reference a specific Context even though the prerequisites aren’t met. She could also choose to simply ignore the table entirely, and force a specific result without even rolling. Experienced GMs should use this power wisely to improve gameplay if necessary; unless you have a specific reason for overruling the recommended use of a FlexTable, you should try to use it as it was intended to be used.

Here’s an example for the above table, assuming the example of the contents of the treasure chest scaling to the nature of the relationship the party has with the local wizard:

-  Use Context A:
If the party’s relationship to the wizard is Unfriendly or Indifferent.
-  Use Context B:
If the party’s relationship to the wizard is Friendly.
-  Use Context C:
If the party’s relationship to the wizard is Helpful.
-  Use Context D:
If the party’s relationship to the wizard is Hostile, or if the party has ever attacked the wizard (or slain her).

Dynamic Plots

This is an impressive-sounding title, but the goal is quite simple to describe: Let the story be different.

FlexTable 2: Sample Bartender Backstory

D%A	D%B	D%C	D%D	Result	Description
01-30	01-20	01-10	01-30	War Hero	In the Great War, Elkfist was a renowned warrior, notable for saving the lives of his comrades as much as for ending the lives of his foes.
31-40	21-50	21-30	31-100	War Deserter	Elkfist had his doubts about the Great War. Though it troubled him greatly, his conscience made him desert his comrades-in-arms rather than take up his blade against the innocent.
41-100	51-100	31-100	n/a	Walking Wounded	Though he fought in the Great War, Elkfist returned from the battlefield a changed half-orc. His demeanor now is distant and sour, and he is prone to staring off into unseen distances for minutes at a time, lost in his own memories.

FlexTable 3: Sample Plot Option

D%A	D%B	D%C	D%D	Result	Description
01-30	01-20	01-10	01-30	Unscathed in the Attack	Although quite shaken, the hog-herder sustained no injury in the attack.
31-40	21-50	21-30	31-100	Wounded in the Attack	Gloryth took some damage, and will likely bear the scars of his injuries forever... but, as he puts it, he “can still rope the swine all right”.
41-100	51-100	31-100	n/a	Slain in the Attack	Panicked and in shock, the swineherd suffered a lethal blow during the attack. As a grisly bonus, though, he died amidst his herd.

There are two ways this lofty goal is accomplished in a FlexTale: FlexNPCs, and FlexPlots.

FlexNPCs

A FlexNPC is one whose backstory, motivation, or actions may be different depending on the determination of the GM. Each such NPC has one or more NPC Options.

Simply put, NPC Options allow the GM to select, or randomize, many plot-related characteristics of the NPCs in the adventure. But before we talk about how this is done, let’s briefly discuss why we would be able to do this without sacrificing anything about the story itself.

The Role of NPCs in an Adventure’s Story

A well-written NPC “feels real”. They have some form of backstory or motivation, character quirks and traits, and a demeanor or perspective that helps the GM give them a sense of life and reality. In many adventures, the “realness” of the NPCs is a major component in how the game is received by the players, and how immersed everyone becomes in the story. NPCs are crucial in telling the story of most adventures, and their actions frequently dictate or help to determine the outcome of the main plot of the adventure.

That said, frequently, the details of a given NPC aren’t necessarily critically intertwined with the core plot of the story being told. Yes, the evil lich king who holds the realm under his sway pretty much has to be evil, otherwise the plot would be completely different. But what sort of man that lich was in his pre-undead life, what decisions he made, and the enemies or alliances he formed could differ significantly, all without derailing the core plot of the adventure.

As with the other dynamic elements in a FlexTale, the GM is encouraged to use this flexibility as he or she sees fit. It does add another layer of detail to the proceedings, and adds one more thing to keep track of in running the game.

NPC Options

Every NPC in a FlexTale adventure is designated as one of the following:

- Standard NPC (fixed characteristics, as in virtually every RPG adventure you’ve ever played)
- Flex NPC (dynamic characteristics, determined by the GM before play begins)

Standard NPCs are used exactly as you would a normal NPC in a non-FlexTale adventure. FlexNPCs have characteristics that are not fixed.

Before running a FlexTale adventure, the GM should do a quick run-through of all of the FlexNPCs. Each FlexNPC will have one or more NPC Options, each of which allows for something about that NPC to be different with each run-through of the adventure.

Notice that, like with a FlexTable, Context columns on the left of the table allow for different outcomes and probabilities depending on the circumstances of the roll. In some cases, an NPC Option table does not have different Contexts.

FlexPlots

FlexPlots are very similar to FlexNPCs, except the decisions determined by the GM relate to the plot overall, rather than specific NPCs. Instead of NPC Options, there are Plot Options. The two concepts are mechanically identical, relying on a complex riff on the standard RPG lookup table to make randomized, contextually-sensitive determinations about plot details.

FlexTables will often refer to a certain Plot Option in dictating which Context to use on a roll.

Before running a FlexTale adventure, the GM should do a quick run-through of all of the Plot Options. Each FlexNPC may have one or more Plot Options, each of which allows for something about that NPC to be different with each run-through of the adventure.

FlexTable: Sample Plot Option an example of possible plot options around a bartender. In some cases, a Plot Option table does not have different Contexts.

FlexTale Tracker

FlexTale's dynamic plot capabilities can make for a great deal of excitement and introduce an all-too-rare element of replayability to an adventure. However, these tools also add to the complexity of keeping track of everything that is going on in a series of gaming sessions.

Since GMs have enough to do as it is, FlexTale-enhanced adventures contain a FlexTale Tracker. This is a simple checklist where the GM can keep track of all the story- and character-related decisions that have been made. Think of it as a “cheat sheet” for the GM to remember all of the various NPC Options and Plot Options in a game.

In the Appendices of each FlexTale is a Tracker—basically a summary of all of the NPC Options and Plot Options possible in the adventure, with checkboxes next to each outcome. The GM is encouraged to use this resource in two important ways:

- To facilitate planning before the first gaming session is started: the Tracker reminds the GM of all of the dynamic plot elements that need to be determined.
- As a reminder during gameplay of the various determinations, either to dictate the reactions or actions of an NPC, or to help decide which Context to use in a FlexTable roll.

FlexTale and This Adventure

Now that you're all excited about the FlexTale concept, it's time for the bad news: there's not much of it herein.

Dark Obelisk: Berinncorte is a sandbox. Dynamic, yes, but in the sense that the PCs can do what they want, almost always when they want. The story is theirs to experience, to interact with.

The choices the PCs make in this adventure, however, have a significant impact in subsequent components of the  Adventure Path. Later adventures will make more extensive use of the concepts described in this section.

For now, though, the FlexTale concept is limited to a few handfuls of tables that allow for different uses and scaling of the same content.

Introduction to Dark Obelisk

Plot Summary

Upon arriving—or starting—at the village of Berinncorte, your party gets acquainted with the town, its occupants, and its services. It seems in all respects a typical medieval fantasy village. The party acquires side quests and objectives, can shop and rest, and generally get the lay of the land at their leisure.

Things turn violent, however, when an enormous black Obelisk erupts from the ground with no warning. Many prominent townsfolk are slain instantly, and in the ensuing chaos, the party has ample opportunity to live up to their alignments, good or evil, lawful or chaotic.

Evil creatures soon arrive, and appear to be defending the obelisk from investigation and generally fomenting further chaos as the town burns and screams fill the air. No matter their motives, this terror is not good for the party, and they must seek whatever order they can muster before the entire area succumbs to the forces that seem bent on destroying it.

The adventure concludes with the evil creatures defeated, the fires put out, the survivors rescued, and the town's population mostly accounted for.

What Is This Book?

This book is intended to be any or all of the following. These are listed in no particular order.

- A standalone adventure module, runnable on its own and ready to insert into your game world or as a one-off.
- A fully-detailed campaign setting, describing the village of Berinncorte in detail.
- A component in an intended  Adventure Path story arc.
- An element of a larger game world and campaign setting that will be elaborated on in subsequent Adventure Path elements, other Adventure Paths, and other IGS products.
- A source of “tidbits” of scenarios, plots, descriptions, and other game elements—you can “steal” content from this as a sourcebook and insert as desired into your own adventures or campaign
- Inspiration for construction of your own adventures and content.

In short, how you use this book is really dependent upon you and your needs as a GM.

Adventure Path Outline

This adventure was created with the intent of using it as part of a series of connected modules which together take the players through a single unified story. This does not mean that cannot be used on its own (see “Incorporation” on page 19).

If you do intend to use this adventure in sequence with its companion modules, here is the logical order in which to play them:

- Dark Obelisk: Berinncorte (this adventure)
- 2: Dark Obelisk: The Mondarian Elective
- 3: Dark Obelisk: Forge and Fluid (working title)
- 4: Dark Obelisk: The Siege of Berinncorte (working title)

In addition, the  Adventure Path described above is intended to be the beginning of a much broader story arc and campaign setting.

Regardless of which pieces of the envisioned world and story are published when, the intent is for a GM to be able to pick up any piece of the overall campaign setting and be able to play it without having any background of the other components that may come before or after it.

Notes & Conventions

As is typical in a roleplaying game adventure or module, some text herein is meant to be read or shown to players verbatim... but the majority of the content is meant to be for the Game Master's (GM) eyes only. Below please find some visual conventions that make this differentiation clear.

Player Descriptive Text

-  These sections are meant to be read aloud to players as-is. You are of course free to introduce your own changes as you see fit as a Game Master. Player Descriptive Text blocks are meant to serve as informative tidbits that have been preconstructed to reflect the exact nature of the situation being encountered by the party.

GM-Only Notes

-  Granted, nearly everything not highlighted in Player Descriptive Text is not meant to be read aloud to the players. However, some content is much more “sensitive” than others.

GM-Only Notes such as this typically give away plot points, major background, or other information that the players may not normally have access to—either right now, or in some cases, ever. Make sure to conceal these sections from players unless there is a specific reason to tell them!

Designer's Soapbox

 In some cases, the game designer will want to express a specific opinion about some aspect of the adventure. Typically, this takes the form of a discussion on interpreting rules, or a recommendation as to how best to play or run a particular piece of the adventure. In all cases, veteran GMs should feel comfortable ignoring these “soapbox” diatribes... but veteran and new GMs alike may find something of interest in the coalesced experience of three decades of roleplaying experience!

Quests

A quest can be large, tiny, or in between. Some can be very quickly accomplished; others span days, weeks, or even years, across multiple cities and even planes of existence!

In this book, all quests, big or small, have a similar presentation and key elements, as shown by the green block below.

Quest: Rats in the Cellar (example)

 Summary: Kill rats in a fantasy tavern. Fun and creative.

 Rewards: Rat corpses. Plus 10 gp from the bartender.

 Locations: Bar.

 Key NPCs: Bartender.

 Kickoff: When any PC speaks with the bartender.

 Description:

The bartender asks the party to slay  2d6 Giant Rats that have invested his basement.

In so doing, they will benefit from his goodwill, and a reward of 10 gp.

Obstacles

Doors, locks, and other obstacles that don't necessarily incorporate a trap. You'll find these prefaced by little brown symbols like this one:

Locked Secret Wooden Door (example)

5" thick; Hardness 5; hp 60; Wisdom (Perception) DC 16; Break DC 20; Disable Device DC 18

Skill Checks

Whether it's a single, simple check, or a series of checks in escalating difficulty, skill checks may be an opportunity to either avoid disaster or discover what might otherwise remain hidden and ignored. Such chances are indicated via yellow symbols as follows:

Some PCs may have insight into the Blacksmith's wealth; make a  DC 12 Knowledge (Profession) check.

Skill Challenges

Skill checks are typically a single roll, often made in secret by the GM. A skill challenge is usually a bit more involved than a simple check—or there's simply more at stake. Either way, a challenge is a more formal, and explicit, exercise, intentionally engaged in by the players.

You'll find a skill challenge in a yellow box such as this:

Falling Timbers (example)

First Check: DC 18 Wisdom (Perception) (16 if aflame) to notice the falling building; success cancels subsequent checks.

Second Check: DC 15 Dexterity (Acrobatics) to avoid the debris; failure inflicts  2d6 points of crushing damage plus a possible  1d8 points of fire damage; success cancels subsequent checks.

Third Check: DC 12 Strength to dislodge one's self from the debris; failure inflicts  1d4 points of crushing damage plus a possible  1d8 points of fire damage; success quits the challenge.

Rewards

Treasure, swords, gems, keys, filthy lucre—this is the stuff your players are really gunning for, right? Well, that, plus a good time with friends. And maybe, if you're lucky, a good, engaging session of shared storytelling that you'll all remember for a long time. At any rate, rewards are shown with blue boxes like this one:

Treasure Chest (example)

+1 dagger; 15 pp; two diamond necklaces, each worth 75 gp.

Traps

Hey, blame the rogue—who in all likelihood is suffering the brunt of the trap s/he either failed to detect, and/or to disarm. Whether it becomes a bragging right, a bargaining chip, or an epitaph, traps of all manner are shown in a purple box like this one.

♂ Acid Needle Trap (CR 1) (example)

Type Mechanical; Trigger Touch; Reset Repair

Effect Atk +2 melee and melee touch (1d2+1d8 acid)

Items

Be they simple items, magical items, rods, staves, potions, books, or something wondrous, items share a common block of information like the following... note that this format is used for all manner of non-weapon, non-armor equipment and usable items, both magical and mundane:

📖 Adventurer's Chronicle (example)

Value 50 gp; Weight 1 lb.; Materials paper; Nature non-magical; Aura none; Slot usable; CL n/a

This book is chock full of useful information. When used as a reference (an action that typically takes  1d4 full rounds of searching the text), an adventurer's chronicle grants a +2 competency bonus on a specific Knowledge check for which the book is designed.

Construction Requirements means to assemble a physical book; the author must have at least 10 ranks in the skill for which you are designing the book; Cost 30 gp

NPCs and Monsters

Crunch time! Monster stat blocks, with all their gory detail, can be found in the Appendices of this book.

PC Replacement Opportunities

No way around it: Dark Obelisk: Berinncorte is a gruesome, brutal, and challenging adventure, particularly for low-level parties. Unless the PCs are exceptionally fortunate with their dice, or if they or the GM railroad themselves into a very rapid escape from the city in Act Three, it's unlikely that they will all survive.

Each gaming group has its own perspective on what to do about PC demise. Many GMs enforce death as a consequence of decision-making, and if your beloved PC dies, so be it; roll up another character and start over again. Other groups are more in the storytelling aspect of things; lenient GMs will take every measure necessary to make sure that every single PC makes it through, no matter how bone-headed their decision-making or horrible their luck.

If one or more PCs die in the course of this adventure, the GM has some options. You may of course enforce the death, and either have the player roll up a brand-new first-level character, or create a character of a level matching the lowest current level of surviving party members.

Alternately, sprinkled throughout the adventure are PC Replacement Opportunities, denoted like this:

The blacksmith is an excellent replacement for Fighters, Barbarians, Paladins, or other martial characters.

These opportunities are chances for the specified NPC to be “taken over” by the player who lost a PC. This way, the player doesn't have to slow down play creating a new character, and the party can keep going.

This should be viewed as an opportunity for roleplaying: the GM may consider showing the player the detailed information for the NPC they are assuming control over, and the player should be encouraged to act as though their new PC had that background, secrets, and so on.

The gaming group is encouraged to roleplay the “taken over” NPC as though s/he still had their place in society and the greater scope of the adventure, and Adventure Path. For example, if a player takes over an NPC who hates a rival NPC, then subsequent interactions between the “taken over” PC and that rival should reflect that animosity in the player's roleplaying.

Variable Challenge

Dark Obelisk: Berinncorte was designed initially as an adventure for four to six first-level PCs. However, one of the things that has frustrated many GMs is that adventures are almost universally designed in this manner: for a specific level of challenge, or at most, a very narrow range of PC levels (e.g., “4th to 6th level”).

There are many advantages to this approach, not least of which being the guarantee that all challenges (monsters, traps, and NPCs) are calibrated very specifically to that narrow zone of difficulty.

The drawback, of course, is the narrowness of that range. GMs wishing to run a module designed for 10th-level PCs, for example, are either flat out of luck, or have to do some fairly intensive work to scale the content up or down to better align with the PCs she is playing with.

The degree to which a particular GM, or even gaming group, enjoys perusing and tweaking game statistics—“crunch”, in common parlance—varies, of course. Some GMs love crunch, and spend a majority of their prep time creating and refining their challenges to ensure the crunch is accurate and appropriately challenging. On the other end of the spectrum are “by the seat of their pants” GMs, who ignore crunch almost entirely, rarely referring to stat blocks lest it distract from the focus of storytelling.

This adventure, and in a broader sense, Infinium Game Studio, does not want to judge as to which approach is “better” or “worse”. What matters is that you have fun and enjoy yourselves!

However, we do want to make it as easy as possible to play this adventure no matter what level your PCs happen to be.

Experience Points and Reward Nuggets

There are many ways of calculating, dispersing, and accounting for experience points (XP) in a Pathfinder gaming group. What follows is a method that I have used over the decades, and it’s been a lot of fun. Although it may not be for every gaming group—your mileage may vary—it’s an interesting spin on traditional methods, and the approach may work for you.

Whether this approach works for you or not, however, it’s worth reading through, because all of the Quests in this adventure denote XP awards using this method.

I Want Candy

In the author’s early days as a GM, I tossed out candies as rewards to the players when their characters did a good job. Candy could be distributed for defeating a kobold, picking a lock, dodging an attack, convincing the castle guard to look the other way, or any of the ordinary actions whose consequence typically involve experience points.

However, I also gave out candy for good roleplaying, convincing dialogue, outstanding (or horrid) emulation of accents, meta-jokes about the circumstances of the game that were truly hilarious, suggesting things to me as the GM or other players that took the story in a new direction, or—and I have to be honest, here—helping me as a GM.

My general rule was, if I forgot a rule, and you pointed it out in a way that didn’t make you seem like a jerk, then you got rewarded. This could be something as innocuous as reminding me that your elf ranger’s longbow was firing +1 arrows, or as significant as reminding me that a certain piece of equipment granted a reroll to a critically-failed outcome.

Generally speaking, candy rewards were given out in my games for anything—literally, anything—that made the gaming experience more fun. Doorbell rings, and the pizza’s here, and your character is tied up in the cyclops’ cave, so you know you won’t be doing anything for a few minutes, and so you go and grab the grub, and tip the delivery guy—that’s worth a candy. Tell a funny joke—that’s worth a candy. Save the life of your comrade, only to drug him unconscious and use him as a prop, in the manner of Weekend at Bernie’s—okay, that’s a little ghoulish, but it’s in character, and amazing, so, yeah, that’s three candies right there.

Candy as XP

Candy is awesome, though for one of my gaming group, who was a diabetic, it was a controlled and mindful awesomeness. But even the most free-wheeling player wants their character to level up. I get it.

At the end of each gaming session, my players would “turn in” their candy wrappers. Each wrapper represented something gone right, a good deed done—and therefore it was converted to XP. Generally speaking, no matter what the PCs’ levels, no matter what the adventure, 10 candy wrappers meant you advanced to the next level. If you fell short—let’s say, you only got 6—then it meant you were closer for next gaming session (i.e., 4 needed in this example).

As years went on, it became a bit less practical and/or healthy to urge my friends to consume at least ten pieces of candy every time we got together, and so the approach was tweaked. Instead of candy wrappers, gold stars, or spare dice in a particular color, or Warhammer 40,000 figurines. The point was, you got a token, a “nugget” of reward, which was later converted into XP.

Rules lawyers hate this method, and I respect that. But even the most hardened min/maxer eventually recognizes that this approach, despite its drawbacks, keeps play flowing quite quickly, and keeps everyone focused on what I believe should be the goal of any roleplaying game session.

Namely: to have fun!

Reward Stars: The Formalized Approach

Whether or not you appreciated the above anecdote, or the approach it describes, it’s required reading, because now we’ll get to how it applies to Dark Obelisk: Berinn corte.

As with everything else in this book, the GM is encouraged to completely ignore or change this approach if you feel it would make it work better for your gaming group.

The following represent opportunities to gain an experience point reward in this adventure:

- Defeating monsters and NPCs.
- Avoiding traps, picking locks, or otherwise overcoming obstacles.
- Succeeding in skill challenges or checks.
- Fulfilling other objects in pursuit of a Quest.

Monsters and NPCs in this adventure list the XP reward the PCs should obtain for defeating them in combat. They also list the number of “Reward Stars” players should receive for success. This is denoted like this:  +2.

Think of a Reward Star as a sugar-free and abstracted version of a piece of candy from the earlier anecdote: players receive one or more most times that they achieve something in the game.

Locks, traps, and skill checks are typically “quadded”; each level of CR lists a suggested XP reward, but also a number of Reward Stars.

Quests only list Reward Stars. This is because Quests should be fun, interesting, and above all, useful to the PCs, but shouldn’t be game-breakingly powerful or ignorably impotent. A simple delivery quest, for example: what should that be worth? 500 XP? For a level one character, that can be almost halfway to levelling up; for a level 19 character, that makes for a completely worthless diversion. Using Reward Stars solves this problem, by automatically scaling the reward to be significant regardless of character level.

If you follow the approach I’ve used, then at the end of each gaming session (or in between sessions, or at the start of the next session, whatever works best for your schedule), convert the Reward Stars to traditional Experience Points.

The GM is heavily encouraged to augment the rewards documented with additional rewards, for perhaps-less-tangible contributions: good jokes, helpful behavior, playing fair and nice, being a good sport, paying for or even just ordering dinner, that sort of thing.

Such “intangible rewards” should be general in nature: a good, timely joke should be rewarded with a chunk of XP that’s meaningful and helpful to the PC in question, whether they’re level 1 or level 19.

Stay In Character... Or Else

In rare cases, or with certain gaming groups, the GM should reserve the right to remove or revoke the Reward Stars a particular player, or the group entire, has earned.

Such penalties should not be applied in a discouraging manner, or against players who are genuinely trying, but whose luck is simply poor, or for whom things just aren’t working out. Indeed, successful roleplaying in the face of dire circumstances should be rewarded more!

Reward Stars should only be revoked if the player is detracting from play, distracting others, making inappropriate jokes not appreciated by the rest of the group, not paying their fair share... or just generally being a jerk.

Converting Reward Stars to XP

Each Reward Star represents different XP depending on what your current level is.

If you’ve assigned Reward Stars to a particular PC, use the character’s current level on the table below to convert to an XP reward.

On some occasions, you may instead have granted Reward Stars to the party as a whole. In this scenario, calculate the Average Party Level (APL) as you normally would, and use that on the table below to convert the reward to standard XP.

If a PC has more than the minimum sufficient Reward Stars to advance in level, they may continue to advance! In such a scenario, count Stars using the PC’s current level, until they level up. Any remaining stars are converted to XP using the character’s new level. In exceptionally rare circumstances—or with exceptionally indulgent GMs!—this may involve a PC levelling up multiple times between sessions, though such power-levelling is generally discouraged.

Finally, in addition to different methods of determining rewards, gaming groups tend to have different theories as to how rapidly characters should level up. Slow, average, and fast tracks are shown here, which scale to the corresponding Character Advancement experience point totals in the Pathfinder Core Rulebook.

For purposes of Reward Stars, the following standard has been used:

- Slow advancement requires 15 Reward Stars to advance.
- Advancement with the Average progression demands 10 Reward Stars per level.
- Only 5 Reward Stars are needed to advance following the Fast track.

“Quadded” Stat Blocks

Toward the goal of having an adventure that can be run with PCs of various levels, all NPCs and monsters in this adventure have four separate sets of statistics.

These represent iterations of the creature in four distinct scales of challenge. These scales are referred to, in ascending difficulty, as Low, Moderate, Advanced, and Elite.

- ☒ Low-level statistics are the default, and are intended for parties of 1st to 4th level PCs. Typically, the Low CR for a creature will be in the range of fractional, up to 4.
- ☒ Moderate statistics present a bit more challenge, and are meant for 5th to 8th level PCs. CRs can be in the range from 4-10.
- ☒ Advanced creatures give even more of a fight, representing CRs in the range of 10-15, and are meant for adventurers of the same levels.
- ☒ Elite monsters and NPCs are the most evolved, and present formidable difficulty in the 12-20 CR range. These stat blocks are designed for PCs above 15th level.

To avoid confusion, elsewhere in the text outside of the creature’s quadded stat block definition, the statistics referred to are the Low, or default, block. For example, the condensed, “vital stats” block that is shown in red where the NPC or monster is introduced in the adventure uses the Low values.

Quadded Challenge Blocks

Skill challenges and checks, traps, poisons, and obstacles sometimes have quadded stat blocks as well.

Although nearly all NPCs and monsters have quadded stat blocks, not all other game elements do. This is intentional. It represents the reality that although monsters and people might be of advanced difficulty, the city of Berinncorte exists in a typical, average fantasy realm—DC 50 Mythic-caliber locks simply doesn’t exist, let alone on every door in town!

Below is an example of a door that has a quadded challenge block. The icons represent the scale of increasing difficulty; from top to bottom, they are Low, Moderate, Advanced, and Elite.

Incorporation

Some gaming groups are comfortable just sitting down around a table and starting things off by the GM informing everyone “all right, you’re in the Central Tavern on Main Street of Middle Town. What do you want to do?”

However, many gaming groups desire a bit more context. Particularly for play styles that emphasize storytelling, it can help for players to have a bit of information about the game world. What sort of law and order are kept, and by whom? What good and evil forces roam the land? What is the history of the region, and what wars or struggles have occurred or whose influence lingers still? And above all, what does the surrounding territory look like, and what are our options in terms of travelling elsewhere?

To play Dark Obelisk: Berinncorte, there are a few options to choose from to introduce your players to the larger world. Which option you select as a GM, and as a roleplaying game group, will depend mainly on how you want this adventure to tie in to the larger world and/or campaign setting.

Throughout the adventure, you will see sidebars that describe how a particular encounter may play differently depending on your approach to tying this adventure into a larger gaming world.

As a Start to the Adventure Path

This is the simplest option to using this adventure: simply generate your party's new characters and get going! Make sure you have a good variety of characters, races, classes, and so on represented.

Then, feel free to “drop” the party wherever it makes the most sense to do so—the inn or tavern being particularly traditional choices.

Using With an Existing Campaign

The plot, NPCs, and other elements of Dark Obelisk: Berinncorte do not hinge on a dependence to a particular gaming world. As such, it should be straightforward to use this adventure as a one-off module in the context of a grander, established campaign setting—either one “off the shelf”, or one of the GM's own creation.

In fact, Dark Obelisk: Berinncorte does not require you as a GM to have any larger gaming world established, described, or chosen. You can just play it as-is. If you choose to continue playing the other modules in the  Adventure Path, you can spool out additional details about the gaming world as they become relevant; for any given moment in time, your gaming group can focus simply on the plot and action happening that moment, and leave the world-building and grandiose backstory for a later time.

Where In the World...?

Berinncorte City was designed to be somewhat typical in nature and needs in terms of where it could be placed in an existing or new game world.

Realistically, it can “go anywhere”, so long as that context isn't too extreme—for example, it probably doesn't make much sense to have Berinncorte atop a mountain surrounded by a moat of lava!

Berinncorte can be situated in any temperate climate. The intended, explicit environs surrounding Berinncorte will be elaborated upon in subsequent campaign material, but suffice it to say that all of the following elements are nearby:

- Forest, very close by.
- The river, that flows through the city in the southwest corner, of course continues to the west and south.
- Hills to the north. These will play a major role in the second component of this intended  Adventure Path.

- Mountains, a bit farther off to the north.

As a Start to a New Campaign

You may wish to use this adventure to kick off a new campaign... but don't necessarily want to follow the Adventure Path to which it leads. Or, you may have an established campaign in mind

In such circumstances, feel free to ignore or amend any references to geography beyond Berinncorte found throughout the adventure. You can “place” Berinncorte anywhere you like within an existing map, campaign setting, or geography that makes sense. In doing so, remember that Berinncorte, while featuring some significant qualities, is not meant to be a geographic, economic, or political hub, and is in fact intended to be somewhat remote relative to other towns and villages.

You can also use Dark Obelisk: Berinncorte as a “transitional adventure” to change the setting, context, or theme of an existing adventure campaign. This is a bit trickier, since this module is meant for first-level characters. However, experienced GMs can modify the difficulty of challenges found herein to adapt the content to be a suitable match for more powerful PCs. Used in this manner, you can use the obelisks' eruptions to disrupt existing cities in your campaign world—if you're up to a bit of tweaking and advance preparation, you could even adapt the adventure so that it takes place in an existing city of your choice!

Hooks and Links

If you're looking for reasons that the party seeks out Berinncorte or begins their tale of adventuring there, here are some ideas. Of course, as a GM, you are by no means bound to selecting from among these... but it's always useful to have some inspiration or something to get started quickly.

Class-Based Hooks

These connections and motivations are based on the presence of one or more characters in the party who have at least one level in a particular class. As GM, you may judge that only one of these is a sufficient motivator; alternately, you can combine multiple class hooks to provide the entire party a believable reason to travel to Berinncorte.

Paladins

Rumor spreads of a growing angst between the  Sheergath Temple and the  Zugul Church in Berinncorte. A Paladin's local church, priest, or lay staff may request that the party's paladin assist, or explicitly task the PC with a mission to investigate the source of the strife and negotiate a truce between the factions.

Rogues

Every thief worth her lockpick knows that Berinncorte sports a wide variety of lucrative challenges—the fishery, the apothecary, the two richly-appointed churches, and the elaborate 📍 Mayoral estate. Such a test of the nimble-fingered adept’s talents should prove more than enough to merit a journey. If none of the party’s rogues takes the bait, you could always have a known ally or fellow rogue mention outright that Berinncorte has “good sport” and is “worth yer while”.

Fighters and Martial Characters

For such a small village, Berinncorte boasts a substantial militia, and its training facilities and 📍 Barracks are renowned for their combat prowess. Even the most skilled or jaded warrior could learn a thing or two... or so go the rumors.

Arcane Classes

Berinncorte’s 📍 Library is one of the best in the region, and its magical services outstrip those of towns much larger in size and economy. It’s said that the library contains spells not otherwise available in the area... and that its workers, properly motivated, cater to all manner of arcane leanings.

Divine Classes

Between the 🏛️ Sheergath Temple and 🏛️ Zugul Church, and the growing turf war between them, there’s more than enough incentive to provide clerics of virtually any alignment. Those of Chaotic or Lawful faith will have an immediate sympathy with the church that is given to their alignment. Those of Evil or Good faiths may have reasons to support one or the other church, but may not immediately see it as a priority to get involved. True Neutral faiths may feel compelled to remain impartial.

If you are still having difficulty engaging players along the lines of faith, you can always indicate that although the particular faiths involved may not relate directly to the interests of the party’s cleric, the strife is but an example of the threat of greater ecclesiastical conflict in the region—peace between faiths that are not meant to have actively at war is ultimately in the interest of all gods!

Monks and Druids

These classes have a bit more difficulty being drawn to a place such as Berinncorte... at least initially, before the Obelisk’s arrival. The town does feature some excellent natural resources, a beautiful river, gardens in excess of what might normally be found in a village of such size... it could be that a monk or druid wants to investigate further in order to find peace and ensure that the townsfolk are living in harmony with the bounty they have found themselves near.

General Hooks

These hooks are not linked directly to any particular race, class, or other party element, and can be deployed as the GM sees fit as best matches the play style and existing motivations of the party.

Ecclesiastical Strife

Mentioned before, and in more detail later, the growing conflict between the 🏛️ Sheergath Temple and the 🏛️ Zugul Church in town is cause for interest across the region.

⚔️ Solid “Base Camp”

Divine and arcane spells, a talented—if evil—apothecary, arms and armor galore: Berinncorte has abundant resources for any adventuring party. If nothing else, it could serve as an outstanding base of operations from which to explore other dungeons, caves, and areas of interest in the greater geography. Although the details of the region are discussed in greater focus in subsequent elements of the 📖 Adventure Path, a party looking to start their adventuring careers could do far worse than Berinncorte.

Friends of Olde

Many of the prominent NPCs in Berinncorte come from an adventuring background. It’s feasible that one of them was mentor to a party member years ago, or a close ally to their mentor now. A dying relative or father figure, a deathbed nostalgia for exploits “back in the day”, or other motivation could be just enough to convince a party member to make the journey to the city... or simply to justify why they are starting their career in the town.

Feel free to adjust the manner of introduction for key NPCs if this approach is taken. For example, the PCs may enter the town with instructions to go directly to the Blacksmith’s hut, or they may simply begin their adventuring in the Town Square.

Plot Overview

Although Dark Obelisk: Berinncorte does not have a great deal of linear plot, there are some key events that drive the story along to its conclusion.

Regardless of the motivations or actions of the PCs, the following is an outline of the events that comprise the adventure from start to finish. Within most of these key stages, the party is free to engage in a number of different activities and side quests if they so desire:

- Act 1: Berinncorte City.
- Act 2: The Obelisk Eruption.
- Act 3: Berinncorte City Aftermath.
- Adventure Epilogue.

The Campaign World

Overview

Aquilae, the campaign setting in which Berinncorte is located, will be elaborated and described in detail in other books by Infinium Game Studio. This is partly due to limitations of length: a focused narrative on the campaign world would itself take longer than the adventure itself! Scope is a factor, as well—too much about the broader game world may distract from the immediacy of the “day-to-day” plot of this particular adventure.

However, the biggest reason for an abbreviated depiction of the game world is that there is much, much more to this realm than meets the eye... and the events of this adventure, while seemingly isolated and bizarre, play a large role in the revelation of these attributes.

Dark Obelisk: Berinncorte aims to provide sufficient description of the larger campaign setting so you as a GM have what you need to run the adventure. While this is primarily limited to things that directly affect the narrative and activities in the adventure, there are some aspects of Aquilae that you may want to bear in mind as you guide the PCs through events—so you don’t have to “backtrack” in subsequent components of this  Adventure Path.

What You Need to Know

Here’s an executive summary of important aspects of the realm that may affect how you portray the game world in the context of this adventure:

- Gods are real, and many. (See Religion, below.)
- Nearly every sentient being pays  tribute to one or more gods. (See Tribute, below). Typically this is through tithing to the appropriate church, or government.
-  Tribute can be done in the form of monetary wealth, artwork or valuables, or a devotion of magical power. No matter what the form, nearly all tribute actually does end up being transported to the gods themselves!
- There is a power struggle between  Sheergath, the chaotic-neutral god, and  Zugul, the lawful-neutral deity. Both gods have churches in town.:
- Zugul’s church is larger (and even has its own administrative building and garden).
- Though officially neutral in the matter of religion, and though officially the city has no formally designated religion, it is difficult to ignore the political and social implications that  Mayor Symms is a devotee of Zugul’s.

- The  Berinncorte Militia, a major faction in town, is by nature a lawful organization. Though many members of its ranks worship Zugul, the militia itself has no official religious leanings.
- The  Obelisk Eruption, and the titular Dark Obelisk itself, are harbingers of a much greater encroachment of chaotic and undead forces into Aquilae.

High Ability, Low Tech

“What I’m fighting for is to prove I’m a better man than the others. There’s many a man worse than me, and some better.”

—Sgt. Buster Kilrain, Gettysburg

Leafing through the Key NPCs section, you may notice that the Ability Scores of most key NPCs are not what might be considered “average”. This is by design.

There are many schools of thought as to the differences, if any, between a player-character and a non-player-character, or a commoner. Are the PCs superhero-caliber individuals, each imbued with something special that drives their capabilities above and beyond that of normal people? Or instead, are the PCs just people, pretty much the same as everyone around them—they just happened down a different path than others, but one that others weren’t prevented from taking by some innate quality or limitation.

It’s possible to have a great deal of fun with either philosophy, or anywhere in between. This adventure, the city of Berinncorte, and the realm of Aquilae all operate under the theory that people are people, and most

In addition to which, Berinncorte sports a goodly number of fairly talented individuals. Hence the stats.

If your gaming group rebels against this sort of approach, you as a GM are of course welcome to “handicap” any or all NPCs so that they are more in line with your players’ expectations of what is considered “normal”.

Religion

Gods play a major role in Aquilae. The pantheon is varied and vast—dozens, perhaps hundreds, of supremely powerful beings. It is exceptionally uncommon to find someone who is not a devotee of at least one higher power—and there are many who are advocates of multiple gods. The general mindset of most sentient beings in Aquilae is an open acknowledgment, an agreement that all gods exist. Devotion to one or more gods in particular merely means that you favor their perspective on things... and, with any luck and enough tribute (see below), those gods return the favor by aiding you from time to time when it is needed most.

One might think of Roman and Greek mythology as a good comparison here: there are many gods, and while they are all immortal and wield immense power, they all share certain “human” weaknesses, such as a proclivity for playing tricks and engaging with mortal affairs. Some gods are more powerful than others, and the “society” of gods is a rich and storied plot unto itself which most mere mortals rarely glimpse.

Tribute

If you pray, you pay! Everyone, in every religion, gives money and resources to their god. In almost all cases, this is done through the church, though in remote situations, tithing in this manner can be quite difficult. Even isolated hermits typically worship at least one god.

Many devotees do not live near a temple of worship for their deity. The pantheon is flexible, however: any worshipper, of any god, can visit any church, and donate their tribute there. Part of each church’s responsibility is to make sure all tribute eventually gets sent to its appropriate god.

To be clear: in Aquilae, churches are kind of a form of tax center. And all tribute does in fact end up being shipped off to the gods themselves.

The mechanics of tribute, of how it gets processed and where it goes, how it actually gets to the objects of worship, and the nature of the gods themselves will all be discussed in greater detail in subsequent campaign books.

followers, and the influence of several key factions in town, most notably the Berinncorte Militia.

However, Sheergath has the advantage of numbers: the downtrodden and disenfranchised significantly outnumber the prosperous and powerful. The divide between gods in Berinncorte represents not only an alignment or theological difference, but one of perspective: chaos and law are at odds with one another, and each feels there should be less of the other if society is to be improved.

Many of the Prime Catalysts for causing the Obelisk Eruption are related to this conflict between the gods.

Factions in Berinncorte

Factions

Dozens of factions, religious and secular, struggle for control and influence in the greater world of Aquilae. Berinncorte is a smaller village, somewhat remotely located, and although it is proximate to natural resources, it is not a crucial part of the greater territory.

Other Factions

There are numerous other factions in Aquilae—traders, guilds, bandits, thieves, assassins, governments, clergy, and so forth. However, none of them holds formal sway within the city limits of Berinncorte.

This is hardly an anomaly: most settlements in the realm are ruled from within by a small handful of factions, who among them wield total power. Outsiders as individuals may be welcome, but external influences are typically not.

About Faction Profiles

The factions discussed here are the ones with the greatest influence in the city, and those with whom the residents are aligned.

Each faction has quite a bit of information associated with it, as follows:

Badge / Icon: Iconography can be important in factions. The symbol of a faction might be used to inform members as to the whereabouts of meeting locations, signal membership to others, or simply as a form of medieval “advertising” to spread knowledge of the faction’s presence.

Type: The general nature of the faction and its goals.

Alignments: Some factions enforce only certain alignments in their membership; others tend to attract those of a particular alignment. Many factions don’t care so much about alignment, and welcome members from all backgrounds and demeanors.

Motivations: The driving force of the faction itself, or the common goal, behavior, or desires of its membership.

Day-to-Day Goals: What the group hopes to accomplish on a day-to-day ongoing basis. Typically, this is a more humble hope than Long-Term Goals.

Long-Term Goals: In addition to short-term goals, most factions have an over-arching agenda they realize may take a long time to bring to fruition.

Notable Philosophies: A phrase or mantra that best summarizes the beliefs of members.

Influence: How much power the group and its members wield, if pressed to do so. This can be political power, military strength, magical prowess, etc.

Reputation: The general sentiment those outside the group have of the group itself.

Leadership: The nature of the faction’s leader(s), how they come to power, and under what circumstances leadership can change.

Inner Circle: In addition to Leadership, some factions also have an “inner circle” or group of Elders within their ranks. Such elite members are often privy to secrets about the faction and its motivation.

Size: Most factions have a fluctuating membership; the Size noted here is typically a range.

Stability: Thousand-year guilds or start-up social clubs, this indicates how likely the group is to still be around in a few years.

Enemies: If the group has enmity with any other factions, they are listed here. Sometimes, this is a general statement as to what sorts of people or organizations would be unwelcome in the midst of this faction.

Allies: Any formal alliances, or informal relationships, between factions are noted here.

Resources: This section describes how many resources the organization as a whole has at its immediate disposal—this can be arcane knowledge, money, or other assets.

Description: A summarization of the nature of the faction and its behavior. Anything noteworthy about the group that doesn’t belong in another heading goes here.

Membership: Most groups won’t let just anyone into their ranks—at least without getting to know them. Many groups demand something else, too: money, in many cases, but in certain factions, it may be necessary to embark upon a quest, create an item, discover new knowledge, save the life of an existing member, and so on.

Members: Description of the membership of the faction, whether any races, classes, etc. are forbidden.

Common Traits: If members have anything in common—either formally as part of their membership, or if many of them just happen to frequently have something notable about them—it is mentioned here.

Demeanor: The attitude of members, both in general (are they paranoid? Devout? Irrational?), and in the context of the faction itself (do they deny the group even exists? Are they proud of their membership?).

Tribute & Dues: Factions are not religious, but the gods and governments of Aquilae demand that even those who choose a secular lifestyle contribute as they are able. Nearly all factions collect at least a 1% tribute from each member annually. In all but the most extreme cases, members are not prevented from giving additional tribute to other religions or groups as they wish.

Religious Factions

About Religion Profiles

The profile of a religion contains the following information. It's important to note that the descriptions provided apply to the religion entire, and not merely to the presence of the religion within Berinncorte city limits.

Icon / Badge / Symbol: A description of the kind of iconography used to represent the religion, as well as an example of the badge itself. This symbolism finds its way into sculpture, vestments, armor, shields, flags, writing, personal and atop-building holy icons, and other visual representations involving the faith.

Alignment: Most religions have one or more alignments that describe the majority of the faithful. In most cases, this is a single alignment, and adherence to it is either a strict prerequisite for membership, or at minimum a strong recommendation.

Worshippers: The sorts of followers this faith tends to attract.

Domains: One or more domains and/or subdomains associated with the deity. Particularly important for clerics of that deity to determine domain-oriented spells.

Favored Weapon: One or more weapons that tend to be associated with the deity. Clerics of this faith tend to carry this sort of weaponry.

Description: General notes and comments about the religion, its members, its power and influence.

Sheergath, God of Resigned Fate

This Chaotic Neutral deity has a significant presence in Berinncorte—the second-largest building of religious significance is devoted to her. Most lower-class citizens worship Sheergath; nearly all well-off citizens do not.

Sheergath, God of Resigned Fate

Icon / Badge / Symbol: A goat head, or a female face with goat horns and/or goatee

Alignment: Chaotic Neutral

Worshippers: peasants, laborers, commoners

Notable Worshipers: Larissa the Elder, Denzys, Unglar

Domains: Chaos, Liberation, Death, Earth

Favored Weapon: sickle

Description: Usually depicted as a female, humanoid but with some goatlike features (goatee, and three small horns atop her head). Followers typically worship her out of a sense of disenfranchisement, of feeling as though their voice is not heard and their interests not served—either by government, faction, or other religions.

Religious Strife in Berinncorte

There is a power struggle of a sort between Sheergath and Zugul in the city. Zugul has the advantage in many ways: larger houses of worship, more powerful followers, and the influence of several key factions in town, most notably the Berinncorte Militia.

However, Sheergath has the advantage of numbers: the downtrodden and disenfranchised significantly outnumber the prosperous and powerful. The divide between gods in Berinncorte represents not only an alignment or theological difference, but one of perspective: chaos and law are at odds with one another, and each feels there should be less of the other if society is to be improved.

Many of the Prime Catalysts for causing the Obelisk Eruption are related to this conflict between the gods.

Zugul, Lord of Order

Law and peace are the main tenets of Zugul... though he doesn't seem to care much how these goals are achieved. Paintings, carvings, sculptures and stories evoke a calm, rational man focused on the betterment of his fellow people. And although his depictions de-emphasize weaponry, his simplified sigil is a mace over a lightning bolt: force is a very real part of his character, and his following.

Zugul, Lord of Order

Icon / Badge / Symbol: Lightning bolt and mace.

Alignment: Lawful Neutral

Worshippers: Merchants, military, government

Notable Worshipers: Cannock, Maghana, Daratis, Otibus

Domains: Law, Community, Protection

Favored Weapon: Light mace

Description: A bearded knight with long, greenish hair is typically how Zugul is rendered. He always carries a mace in his right hand, though it is depicted as smaller scale than the man himself, representing the necessity of force in a lawful society—but the preference for it not to law's foremost tool. His left hand sometimes bears a shield; other times, it is raised in greeting or command.

Non-Religious Factions

Berinncorte City

Icon / Badge: A rounded-kite shield, quartered with crimson and parchment.

Type: Government.

Notable Members: Dominika Symms, Cannock, Gurth, Ota Kuiduru, Oneib, Welby Goodbarrel

Alignments: Any allowed, though Lawful predominates.

Motivations: Keeping a city running.

Day-to-Day Goals: Keep Berinncorte running; maintain order.

Long-Term Goals: Help the city and its inhabitants to thrive by establishing relationships, trade, and investing back in infrastructure.

Notable Philosophies: Law and order are the most effective means of running a city.

Influence: Average.

Reputation: Good.

Age: Mature (~125 years).

Leadership: Autocracy (Mayor Symms).

Size: Small (~30 members).

Stability: Highly Stable.

Enemies: None officially.

Allies: Other cities in Aquilae.

Resources: Above Average.

Description: This is the government of Berinncorte, to which some notable NPCs are allied.

Membership: All members are either hired or appointed by the government.

Members: Typically Lawful or Lawful Neutral citizens with a knack for administration, or a special skill.

Common Traits: Other than their Lawful alignment, government officials tend to like their city.

Berinncorte may not feature the social life, culture, or other features of larger cities, but it is prosperous enough, and most of its citizens enjoy their lives and feel secure.

Demeanor: Effectiveness and efficiency, law and order are the goals of most government employees.

Tribute & Dues: Employees are expected to Tribute 1% of their wealth annually to the city. Citizens are also expected to tribute, either directly to the city, or to one of its factions or religions. As always, employees or citizens are welcome to tribute additional wealth to Berinncorte, though in practice this hardly ever happens unless the citizen in question needs something specific from the government. In theory, this is not quite as quid-pro-quo as it might seem; typically the extra tribute is paid to the city by way of thanks for extra effort.

Berinncoarte Militia

Icon / Badge: The Berinncoarte coat of arms, crossed by a silhouetted sword.

Type: Defense.

Notable Members: Ash “Executioner”, Debran Ormrick, Amadan, Skutt Krundarr

Alignments: Any allowed, but tend toward Lawful.

Motivations: Keeping the peace.

Day-to-Day Goals: Maintain order, stop crime.

Long-Term Goals: Hunt down criminals and help improve the quality of life of all citizens by providing for the common defense.

Notable Philosophies: Peace comes from a well-trained and capable security force who walk among the people and know their neighbors.

Reputation: Good. Though some may balk at the Lawful state of things in the city, few can argue with the results.

Age: Mature (~100 years).

Leadership: Militia Master Tansden is in charge of the force.

Inner Circle: There are several others with leadership positions within the Militia: Vice Master Skutt Krundarr, Armsmaster Amadan, Trainer Ash, and Treasurer Debran Ormick.

Size: Large (100-500 members).

Stability: Highly Stable.

Enemies: No true enemies as such, but many magic-oriented guilds and factions tend to be at odds with their goals.

Allies: None.

Resources: Very high.

Description: Rogues and knowledge workers, inventors, problem solvers, sages... any geeks who love the thrill of adventure are welcome to join, so long as they prove their creativity.

Membership: Requires inventing something and giving the schematics to the Order.

Members: Inquisitive and creative people of all races and backgrounds.

Common Traits: Members tend to be a bit, um, odd, in their demeanor, easily distracted, but also easily focused on a single purpose. Driven, dedicated, and unshakable in their belief that they can and will execute what the dream about.

Demeanor: Members aren't secretive, but they do guard membership quite jealously—it's a mark of prestige to them to be a member, and they want to ensure new members are up to snuff.

Tribute & Dues: Members are required to Tribute a minimum of 1% of gained wealth, though general expectation is that members will also gift additional resources, particularly those who create inventions. Non-members wishing to Tribute to the faction may pay an additional 1% or more as they desire.

The Scarlet Path

Icon / Badge: A dark red road-shaped triangle pointing north.

Type: Intelligence, Politics, Policy.

Notable Members: Biggen Gurble, Hueykins

Alignments: Lawful Evil (predominantly).

Motivations: Power and control.

Day-to-Day Goals: Know everything, of everything, about everyone.

Long-Term Goals: Gain control and influence of everything.

Notable Philosophies: Wealth is of use only as a means to furthering the ends of the faction.

Influence: Below Average.

Reputation: Poor.

Age: Ancient (though with different names over the years).

Leadership: Council, with Councilmaster. Councilmembers are elected via open ballot. Bribes to leaders are outlawed, though gifts as thank-yous are commonplace. Leadership is typically competent and decisive. Audiences with the Council are rare, and by special arrangement only.

Size: Large (100-500 members).

Stability: Highly Stable.

Enemies: All other factions, really, in theory.

Allies: Typically any LE-aligned faction. Other Lawful and/or Evil factions, for convenience.

Resources: Many. Merchants, politicians, and sages belong.

Description: Secretive and operating under the cover of shadow, The Scarlet Path nevertheless wields immense influence across Aquilae. In some cities they operate nearly in the open as a poorly-kept secret; in others, their presence is known only to those agents stationed there.

Membership: Requires influence, action, and acknowledgement by existing members.

Members: No distinguishing characteristics... that's the whole point!

Common Traits: Appear as normal people, but nearly all members are Lawful Evil.

Demeanor: Members tend to be secretive about the faction, but not necessarily secretive individuals—they "hide in plain sight".

Tribute & Dues: The Scarlet Path requires a Tribute of 1% of gained wealth, kept by the faction for its own purposes. Those wishing to Tribute to the faction may pay an additional 1% or more as they desire.

Lowman's Group

Icon / Badge: A utensil (frequently a spoon) silhouetted against a plate (typically a simple circle).

Type: Social / Support.

Notable Members: None.

Alignments: All allowed and accepted.

Motivations: Support of the needy.

Day-to-Day Goals: Ensure all members have access to basic human requirements such as food, shelter, and transportation.

Long-Term Goals: Ensure all members prosper by lending whatever form of other assistance a given member requires at a certain point in their lives.

Notable Philosophies: There is no one so noble who cannot fall low; there is no one so low who cannot gain ground.

Influence: Average.

Reputation: Excellent. Though many disagree with either the aims and/or the methods the group employs, ultimately, it's only members who are affected.

Age: Recent (<10 years).

Leadership: Head of Household and a leadership committee of 4 other Family Leaders. All positions rotate twice a year: the current Head of Household may become a Family Leader; any Family Leader may be elected Head of Household by the other Family Leaders; any Member may be elected a Family Leader by her peers. Family Leaders who do not become Head of Household rotate out automatically. While this approach introduces a fair amount of chaos and inconsistency, it meets the group's goals of fairness and offers ample opportunity for always-fresh perspectives in positions of authority.

Size: Medium (80-300 members).

Stability: Fairly Stable. Membership waxes and wanes a great deal; the largest problem is ensuring members maintain their commitments to the faction after achieving prosperity of their own.

Enemies: None.

Allies: Medical, religious, or other factions who help the impoverished, ailed, downtrodden.

Resources: Slight. The institution itself has almost zero resources to speak of; individual members have their own wealth such as it is.

Description: Lowman's Group was formed by a bartender whose best customer drank himself to death, alone. Out of guilt that the bartender never got to know the customer, even though he was there constantly, he started this faction as a kind of a social club, networking, and outreach program all in one.

Membership: Members must guarantee shelter and food, or accompaniment for travel, for any other member. Any member may apply for financial, protective, magical services, or other assistance from the Head of Household and the Family Leaders. Outside of brief room and board, supplicants must inquire formally at the faction lodge, and make their case. Any supplicants whose request is denied automatically suffer demotion of one level of membership. There are “levels” of membership in Lowman’s Group. Each level increases the burden: one week’s room and board, one day’s journey, one spell level of magic per month, and one percent wealth tithe contribution, per level of membership.

Members: Used heavily by very unfortunate or low level adventurers, or former adventurers who have fallen on hard times. Drunks, addicts, and others chronically in need of external assistance also tend to be foul-weather adherents.

Common Traits: None, though it’s rare to find a truly prosperous / wealthy member.

Demeanor: Members tend to have a relaxed, calm, and generally warm attitude toward strangers, out of the knowledge that anyone else might also be a member.

Tribute & Dues: Lowman’s Group collects no tribute itself, and keeps no resources on-hand as a central body. Members are required to donate up to 1% of their wealth to other members per level within the faction, within certain limits. Beyond that, special one-off gifts or devotion of wealth or resources are coordinated by the Head of Household and Family Leaders if a supplicant’s request is granted.

Order Mechanique

Icon / Badge: One or more black gears against a dark field.

Type: Trade guild of inventors and tinkers.

Notable Members: Blacksmith Dimblegruffe

Alignments: Any allowed, but tend toward Evil or Neutral alignments. Those of any Good alignment tend not to be allowed into the Inner Circle.

Motivations: Creativity, invention, advancement of technology.

Day-to-Day Goals: Get, and help others get, a little bit better at tinkering.

Long-Term Goals: Change the landscape of civilization by making truly impressive things possible through technology.

Notable Philosophies: Anything magic can do, technology can do... and perhaps a bit more reliably!

Influence: Below Average.

Age: Mature (200 years).

Leadership: A single Guildmaster holds the reigns, but he/she is elected and holds office for only a single year at a time.

Size: Large (100-500 members).

Stability: Highly Stable.

Enemies: No true enemies as such, but many magic-oriented guilds and factions tend to be at odds with their goals.

Allies: None.

Resources: Very high.

Description: Rogues and knowledge workers, inventors, problem solvers, sages... any geeks who love the thrill of adventure are welcome to join, so long as they prove their creativity.

Membership: Requires inventing something and giving the schematics to the Order.

Members: Inquisitive and creative people of all races and backgrounds.

Common Traits: Members tend to be a bit, um, odd, in their demeanor, easily distracted, but also easily focused on a single purpose. Driven, dedicated, and unshakable in their belief that they can and will execute what the dream about.

Demeanor: Members aren’t secretive, but they do guard membership quite jealously—it’s a mark of prestige to them to be a member, and they want to ensure new members are up to snuff.

Tribute & Dues: Members are required to Tribute a minimum of 1% of gained wealth, though general expectation is that members will also gift additional resources, particularly those who create inventions. Non-members wishing to Tribute to the faction may pay an additional 1% or more as they desire.

Meatsmiths

Icon / Badge: A black cleaver against a dark field.

Type: Trade guild of butchers and animal farmers.

Notable Members: Ganyc, Aramil Xiloscient

Alignments: Any allowed and supported.

Motivations: To ensure meatcraft is viewed as a prestige profession, and to encourage high protein prices.

Day-to-Day Goals: Advocate for, and increase, meat sales.

Long-Term Goals: Identify ways to reduce cost and increase quality and diversity in the harvest. (Note, however, ulterior motives in Description!)

Notable Philosophies: Butchers and farmers have difficult jobs, and it's not easy to ensure a quality product.

Influence: Below Average.

Reputation: Poor. In addition to being a somewhat gruesome profession, many question why these workers in particular need a guild to begin with.

Age: Mature (100 years).

Leadership: A single leader, called "the Cleaver". He or she rules the entire guild alone, and gets to decide when and if they retire, and who takes over the position. In practice, political and peer pressure are exerted if the Cleaver is found to be doing a poor job; the voice of members is certainly heard, even if there is no formal obligation to respond to them.

Inner Circle: There is also an Inner Circle of high-level members, typically between 19-40. These members are part of a dark and necromantic offshoot of the faction focusing on Fleshcraft: golems, augmented constructs, body manipulation, and enhancements. It's gruesome and macabre, but their work promises to bring about implants that bridge the gap between man, machine, and magic.

Size: Medium (50-200 members).

Stability: Somewhat Stable. The "face" of the guild is certainly stable, as the profession will always endure... but the faction's ulterior motives, if discovered, would lay waste to the group fairly quickly.

Enemies: Lawful Good professions.

Allies: Typically any LE-aligned faction. Other Lawful and/or Evil factions, for convenience.

Resources: Slight. Butchers tend not to be the wealthiest of tradespeople, and those elite in the Inner Circle tend to be of arcane bent, spending nearly all their resources on necromantic components, research, and books.

Description: Butchers and animal farmers from all over are welcome to join the Meathsmiths, who focus on animal husbandry, creature farming, butchery work, sales and trade. They prefer the term "flesh artisan" to the simple "butcher", though in practice their term is used almost exclusively by members.

Membership: Automatic, if you're an animal farmer or a butcher and wish to pay Tribute to the faction.

Members: They're all butchers or farmers. Though those in the Inner Circle are members of these professions in name only; they are nearly all necromantic wizards.

Common Traits: Most butchers are members, and nearly all members are butchers. If anyone did some proper research and inquiry, they would quickly find that the faction's ranks hold zero members of Good alignment, however.

Demeanor: Members will name-drop the guild as often as possible, and imply that to be a butcher is to continue a long, and storied, tradition of flesh artisans who have worked and honed their technique for thousands of years, and so on.

Tribute & Dues: Those wishing membership in Meathsmiths must comply with Tribute of 1% of gained wealth, kept by the faction for its own purposes. Those wishing to Tribute to the faction may pay an additional 1% or more as they desire. Members or non-members may puzzle at how little the guild appears to do with these resources... this is because the Inner Circle spends nearly everything on necromancy.

Liquid Guardians

Icon / Badge: A stylized water droplet, typically dark green, against a dark field.

Type: Trade guild.

Notable Members: Aramil Xiloscient

Alignments: Any allowed and supported, though Chaotic is most popular.

Motivations: Knowledge. Specifically, the secret of life... and of power over death.

Day-to-Day Goals: Promote and exercise the practice of potion-making and brewing.

Long-Term Goals: Discover the secret of immortality in a bottle.

Notable Philosophies: If it's possible to create, forge, or evoke, you can put it in a bottle.

Influence: Below Average.

Reputation: Fair. Nobody really pays them much mind until they need a potion.

Age: Ancient. Was popular long, long ago, but a "dark age" of the sect prevented its practice until recently (about 15 years ago).

Leadership: Single leader called the "Imbibor of Truth". Appointed for life, but given leadership's habit of themselves trying out the next attempt at a potion of immortality, this is significantly shorter a span of time than it might seem. Most Imbibors only last between 1-3 years.

Inner Circle: 19 designated Elders, all of whom are privy to the guild's secret: Historians are convinced that the sect of long ago did in fact succeed in their attempt to discover ancient and terrible secrets. Their dark knowledge, power over life, is said to be forbidden by the gods themselves, and brought about the ruin of the faction, though Elders differ on what happened exactly. Some believe they were punished by the gods themselves for their illicit knowledge, destroyed in a fiery wrath. Others believe that those who knew the secret instead became gods themselves. Cynical Elders think it's more likely that the gods played no role whatsoever—those in power wanted to keep the secret for themselves, and destroyed the entire cult lest others uncover their mysteries.

In truth, this last rendition is most accurate: Elders from long ago acquired what amounts to a functional immortality, and leaked just enough info to local Paladins to have them destroy and purge the cult. Surviving the extinction were but small handfuls of elders... who, gifted with the secret of eternal life, walk among us still!

Rise of this faction and research into its history also reveals an offsetting faction of paladins, also still around hiding in a subset of a well known paladin / cleric religion, keeping watch and hunting the remaining "liquescent immortals".

Size: Small (50-125 members).

Stability: Somewhat Stable.

Enemies: Everyone else, though other factions aren't even aware of this enmity.

Allies: Liquid Guardians trust no others with their work or the secrets they pursue.

Resources: Average. Potioncraft is an effective means to profit, but as the guild is effectively limited to arcane brewers, there are precious few among their ranks with actual political power or trade influence.

Description: Brewers and potionmakers from all walks of life claim affiliation with the Liquid Guardians. Their goal is the elevation of their tradecraft, which they view as a skill and practice above practically any other.

Membership: The sect assumes a total membership—that is, if you brew potions, the Liquid Guardians will eventually find you and ask that you formally join their ranks. And pay your share of Tribute, of course.

Members: Secretive to the point of paranoia, members of any rank will defend the guild to the last, firm in their belief that they are doing the work of the gods themselves... or, at least, seeking their power.

Common Traits: All members must have the Brew Potion feat, and preferably, practice the art. This can be either as a business, or as part of adventuring or other endeavors—members need not make potions as their sole focus.

Demeanor: Liquid Guardians tend to be shy and protective about the existence, let alone the nature, of their faction.

Tribute & Dues: Liquid Guardians require a Tribute of 1% of gained wealth, kept by the faction for its own purposes. Those wishing to Tribute to the faction may pay an additional 1% or more as they desire. In addition, the Imbibor of Truth or her Inner Circle of Elders may approach any member for special additional services, which include surveillance, information-gathering, potion-brewing, attempts at a new concoction, and, in rare cases, they might ask for a guinea pig to try and drink a new mixture to test its effects. Such "extra services" as these typically earn the giver significant favor in the faction... if they survive the endeavor, that is.

Antimagic Shell

Icon / Badge: Orange shield atop a dark field, with a circle in the middle bisected by a line from southwest to northeast.

Type: Belief, Lifestyle

Notable Members: Vanya Berezin

Alignments: All are allowed and accepted, though Lawful (and particularly Lawful Evil) alignments are most common.

Motivations: Prevention and elimination of perceived “taint” through lifestyle modification and living in accordance with their beliefs.

Day-to-Day Goals: Avoid being “tainted” with magic, and seek cleansing redemption if it’s unavoidable.

Long-Term Goals: Reduce, or eliminate, the role of magic in society as a whole.

Notable Philosophies: Magic is a subtle form of evil, loosed upon this world by dark forces who seek to undo the gods themselves.

Influence: Very Low.

Reputation: Poor. Magic is so useful in so many ways, most people find it very difficult to understand the group’s perspective... or their motivation.

Age: Recent (10 years).

Leadership: No formal leader. Some in the group are more respected and their will more acquiesced to than others. The group does own a single stronghold which it uses as its headquarters. Some members are labeled “Elders” but it’s unclear to most how this designation occurs.

Size: Small (20-125 members).

Stability: Unstable. Membership fluctuates a great deal; attrition is a major factor. Most members discover quickly how dependent they had been on magic and on magical effects... this either hardens their resolve to abstain, or helps them justify reverting to “normal” life.

Enemies: All magical factions, certainly, though they would not “war” with them formally.

Allies: Members of the Antimagic Shell respect those of the Order Mechanique. For their part, the Mechaniques think the Shell to be silly and bizarre, but they’re only too happy to take advantage of the perceived camaraderie on occasion.

Resources: Very Low. Forbidding magic, and dealings with those who traffic in magic and magical items, severely limits commerce and opportunities for influence.

Description: Detractors will joke that this is a tiny cult formed by people too stupid to become magic-users... and there’s probably a grain of truth in that assessment. No matter its origins, however, the present-day Antimagic Shell preaches a strict no-magic way of life, and claims all sorts of benefits from adherence to its doctrine.

Members: see magic as an unclean taint, almost an infection of mind, body, and soul. Their “evidence” for this belief is society’s over-reliance upon magic and magical items and effects.

The name is a none-too-subtle play on the spell of the same name; they envision themselves as a protective shell that shields civilization from the fouls of magic. Any member caught casting magic of any form (arcane, divine, Ranger, Druid, Bardic—anything at all) is immediately expelled from the faction.

Those using magical devices (wands, staves, magical arms or armor, or even a potion) or affected by magical spells must defend the action informally to at least three other members. Based on their assessment, the offending user may be expelled, or be required to do cleansing penance to purge the taint. This takes the form of an immediate Tribute to the faction of 1% of current wealth for each spell level (or magical item bonus) used or suffered, plus one day’s “voluntary solitary” confinement and labor in the faction’s stronghold.

In practice, this is fairly lenient—after all, if someone is the victim of a fireball, or must quaff a potion of cure moderate wounds to avoid death, it’s certainly understandable.

Some magical items are permissible. These must undergo a “protective ceremony” conducted by the faction’s Elders. In truth, this ceremony doesn’t do anything concrete to the weapon or armor, but the Elders require a 1% Tribute of the owner’s wealth per spell level of effect or Caster Level of the effect granted by the device.

“Pre-protected” magical items are available for sale at the faction’s stronghold... for twice the retail price.

Despite the obvious mercenary cynicism in this structure, nearly everyone in the faction truly believes that their choice of lifestyle is the “right way”, and makes them purer, more complete, and less tainted than those who walk a different path. The useless ceremony, the penance, and the multiple forms of extra tribute are merely to enforce the lifestyle and underscore its importance to those who are on the fence as to following it.

Membership: Requires only the disavowal of magic—which is more difficult than it might seem. No spell-use, of course, but beyond that, no magical healing, no magic weapons or equipment, no wands, staves, or other magical devices... and perhaps most frustratingly, members should not themselves be a target of magical spells or effects. No races with innate spell-like abilities are allowed membership, regardless of promises to abstain from use.

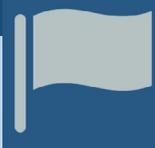

Members: Aside from owning no magical items, casting no spells, seeking no magical assistance, and picking non-magical jobs, they tend to be normal people in all other respects.

Common Traits: There's usually something (aside from mere membership in the Shell) that causes them to be, or feel, separate from other people.

Demeanor: Tend to be somewhat reclusive. If questioned about their devotion, they will gladly spell it out for you (pun intended).

Platinum Flag

Icon / Badge: A silver-blue flag atop a dark field.

Type: Financial.

Notable Members: None.

Alignments: Any, though Lawful Neutral predominates.

Motivations: Money. And the power, influence, control, and things that come with it.

Day-to-Day Goals: Acquire wealth.

Long-Term Goals: Acquire more wealth.

Notable Philosophies: Money first. Investment is the truest form of power.

Influence: Extremely High.

Reputation: Fair. Their acumen and business savvy is respected far and wide, though their tactics and “money above all else” approach to things tends to rub most people the wrong way.

Age: Ancient.

Leadership: A single executive leader, the Platinum Head. This position is confirmed or changed once a year in a voting ceremony. Typically this is the member with the most accumulated wealth, though in rare circumstances it has been the member who has grown the most wealth in the past year.

Inner Circle: Membership has ranks with precious-metal terminologies. The most elite inner circle is the Platinum Bar, a council of 19. Second most important is the Gold Bar, a council of 29 members; next the Silver Bar, with 49 members, and finally the Copper Order, which is the balance of the common membership.

Size: Huge (200-1,000 members).

Stability: Highly Stable.

Enemies: Formal enmity is typically not good for profit, so the Platinum Flag tends not to bear a grudge... at least not in a formal manner. They will war with any group interfering with their investments or operating against their schemes, but only if profit is threatened—they are not a fantasy “mafia”.

Tribute & Dues: The Antimagic Shell requires a Tribute of 1% of gained wealth, kept by the faction for its own purposes. Those wishing to Tribute to the faction may pay an additional 1% or more as they desire. It should be noted that although the mechanism for delivering and coordinating Tribute involves magic, the faction views this as an unavoidable sin—if the gods themselves demand that magic be involved in their tribute, it can hardly be toxic. Man-made, or man-executed, magic is the real evil to be avoided.

Allies: Formal alliances are not uncommon, but tend to be short-lived and only to fulfill a specific purpose. The Flag has found that the best way to keep good relations and to ensure others operate in your interests is to invest in their endeavors—and so the faction has a stake in nearly every single government, religion, and organization that seems successful.

Resources: Extremely High.

Description: A financial group, the Platinum Flag began long ago as a means of encouraging investment in long-term projects, and has been credited with enabling enormous advances in all manner of civilization. Power is one of the things money leads to, but money for the sake of what it makes possible is the core of the group's belief.

Membership: Requires a one-time Tribute of 10% of current wealth, and advocacy from at least one member of the Silver, Gold, or Platinum Bar. This gains you Copper membership; advancement from Copper to Silver costs another 10% and requires someone of Gold or Platinum membership to advocate for you. Going from Silver to Gold, you guessed it, another 10%, and this time, it has to be someone in the Platinum Bar that speaks on your behalf. To move from Gold to Platinum requires the Platinum Head herself to nominate you, and a majority of those in Gold and Silver status must vote for you to ascend... oh, and of course, they'll be needing that extra 10% Tribute.

Members: Merchants, business owners, tradesfolk, politicians, magicians, government officials—those from all walks of life who are wealthy or who would aspire toward wealth join the ranks of the Platinum Flag.

Common Traits: It's considered a bit garish to flaunt one's wealth, though exceptional taste is always respected. But the Flag strives to represent itself well, and will have a frank conversation with any member who behaves poorly, particularly if they do so in the name of the faction.

Demeanor: Members are almost universally proud.

Katkalls

Icon / Badge: White musical notes against a dark field.

Type: Casual guild / social club of performers, and entertainers.

Notable Members: Lingona

Alignments: Any, though Chaotic tends to be the case.

Motivations: Ensure employment and well-being for its members, and advocate for the profession.

Day-to-Day Goals: Get members work.

Long-Term Goals: Ideally, get bards, singers, and dancers into positions of power. Though most members are realistic as to how long that will take, and how unlikely it is.

Notable Philosophies: Music, laughter, and camaraderie are the true magics of the world.

Influence: Low.

Reputation: Extremely Good. Who doesn't like music and dancing?

Age: Ancient (though with different names over the years).

Leadership: There is a Head Jester, the tongue-in-cheek title of the group's de facto leader. She's more a figurehead than an actual decision-maker, though. Typically, the Jester is chosen in a wild night of revels and debauchery—sometimes as often as once a year, though frequently it's every other year, or every three or even five years.

Size: Large (100-500 members).

Stability: Highly Stable, though the group's power and membership grows and shrinks quickly.

Enemies: Some governments or Lawful organizations, if their zeal for order would punish those simply looking for a good time.

Allies: Musicians and singers don't really have formal allegiances.

Resources: Low. Though you'd be surprised what a large gang of impassioned, driven bards can accomplish if given direction.

Description: When times get tough, society tends to cut things out of its agenda—and spending on lavish entertainment is one of the first things to go. Katkalls feels that revelry serves an important function in any civilization, and that continued employment and job security for those who practice the various arts of performance should be one of the most fundamental human rights.

They also like a good mug of ale, if truth be told.

Membership: Any entertainer is welcome to join, but to do so, one must find at least two existing members and give them their best performance—preferably one that impresses.

Members: Bards, singers, musicians, dancers, orators, storytellers, comedians... pretty much anyone who entertains.

Common Traits: They're all entertainers, but that label applies to a quite broad spectrum of folk. Some influential and powerful government and religious officials are also members, if they strum a good lute in their spare time.

Demeanor: Friendly, effervescent, and whimsical. Or lugubrious, cynical, and biting. Alternately, snide and cunning. The only thing they all have in common is the ability to make things interesting.

Tribute & Dues: Unlike most other factions, Katkalls doesn't require any tribute annually. However, 5% of all fees gained through performance contracts must be handed over to the faction; this rate is 20% for contracts arranged by the group itself.

Those wishing to Tribute to the faction may pay 1% or more as they desire.

Mace and Blade

Icon / Badge: A mace and blade, crossed. Usually the mace takes the form of a morningstar, or bears spikes.

Type: Private military.

Notable Members: Oneib, Skutt Krundar

Alignments: All are allowed and accepted, but Lawful alignments are most popular.

Motivations: Security and enforcement.

Day-to-Day Goals: Ensure security contracts and employment for its members.

Long-Term Goals: Privatize and take over security for the entire realm. It goes without saying that Mace and Blade contractors would be the ones providing the security. For a reasonable fee, naturally.

Notable Philosophies: Civilization is nothing without security... and security must be independent, private, if it is to be trusted. Factions, be they government, religion, or secular, cannot be trusted with their own defense.

Influence: High.

Reputation: Average. Those who use their services swear by the quality and efficiency. Many others point out that the faction's ultimate goal is a police state for profit, and although they're not far from the mark, Mace and Blade members will point out that their biggest detractors are either those with no need of security, or those who unknowingly benefit from the defense efforts of others.

Age: Old (100 years).

Leadership: Organized like a military, there is a Commander-in-Chief who is in charge of the entire operation. There are generals, lieutenants, and so forth.

Size: Enormous (500-2,000 members).

Stability: Highly Stable.

Enemies: Other security and military services, though they ally on occasion, say, for a large contract.

Allies: The group is open to working with any other faction... for a price. In practice, most alliances are short-lived, for the duration of the contract, usually.

Resources: High.

Description: They're not quite military—they won't fight a war for you. But any other need of defense, security, enforcement—they're your men, women, and monsters. Mace and Blade have been serving the small- to medium-scale security needs of the realm for dozens of generations.

Membership: Requires fighting prowess, so certainly at least one class level in a hand-to-hand combat discipline. But no class is ruled out, as some clients would prefer their security forces to be less obviously brutish. To gain membership, all that's needed is the Tribute described below, and a brief demonstration of one's abilities.

Members: All walks of life, all races, and all classes. Adventurers may belong part-time as a means of a stable income to augment their dragon-slaying, dungeon-diving attempts.

Common Traits: They all have some combat ability, and most have seen combat themselves.

Demeanor: Members are proud of the faction and its services. They will freely discuss their membership and anything they know about the group.

Tribute & Dues: Mace and Blade requires a Tribute of 1% of gained wealth, kept by the faction for its own purposes. Those wishing to Tribute to the faction may pay an additional 1% or more as they desire. There is an informal, and rarely enforced, expectation that the higher one's "rank" within the organization, the greater the percentage of tribute should be.

Emerald Garden

Icon / Badge: A green leaf, or leaves, against a dark field.

Type: Outreach / support and defenders of a belief.

Notable Members: Kayzark

Alignments: Neutral Good almost exclusively, with some Chaotic Good.

Motivations: To help the growth and sustenance of all life.

Day-to-Day Goals: Keep people fed and prosperous, and preserve nature.

Long-Term Goals: Encourage the growth and diversity of life in the realm.

Notable Philosophies: Magic is the essence of life, given physical effect.

Influence: Below Average.

Reputation: Fair. It's hard to argue with the group's goals or motivation, but most others feel as though there are much more pressing matters that need to be addressed before we devote energy to helping trees grow. "Life grows fine enough without our help" tends to be a popular criticism from outsiders.

Age: Ancient (though with different names over the years).

Leadership: A Circle of Seers, a group of 7 elder members, makes leadership decisions. Seers typically serve a lifelong commitment once appointed, regardless of infirmity or insanity... mental instability or impairment is viewed to be simply another part of life, and must therefore be part of the plan of life, so including that perspective actually helps rather than hinders the diversity of opinion.

Size: Large (100-500 members).

Stability: Highly Stable.

Enemies: Any faction whose purpose involves preventing or destroying life of any kind. Military factions tend to be enemies.

Allies: Any other group that aims to help life that finds itself threatened.

Resources: Low. Farms, gardens, forests, and parks tend to be under their protection, but these rarely require protection.

Description: Benevolent do-gooders with an ultimate goal of helping all life, the Emerald Garden is a loosely-organized group of Membership: All magic is respected and revered, though its use is not required for membership. Rangers, druids, and clerics aligned with a life-oriented deity are very popular.

Members: Will calmly and rationally tell you how all governments and militaries are in the business of preventing life. Many retired adventurers of certain classes are among their ranks.

Common Traits: They're not all vegetarians or vegans, and many wear leather armor and other products taken from the lives of animals. Their efforts are focused on the long view—helping life flourish all over. They recognize that some life (e.g., people!) requires that other life (e.g., apples, cattle) be sacrificed that it might thrive.

Demeanor: Tend to be calm, serene, and know a lot about history.

Tribute & Dues: The Emerald Garden asks a Tribute of 1% of gained wealth, kept by the faction for its own purposes. Those wishing to Tribute to the faction may pay an additional 1% or more as they desire.

This is rarely enforced, however, and faction leaders in various areas have gotten in trouble with authorities and in some cases the gods themselves at not collecting and coordinating tribute properly.

Almost exclusively, retained tribute is used to purchase land, either to gift to members to farm and maintain, or to prevent its use for other purposes that would be counter to the group's aims.

Wild Kingdom

Icon / Badge: Golden long-grass against a dark (or no) field.

Type: Exploration, warfare, and adventure.

Notable Members: Ash “Executioner”, Esk, Ganyc (former), Rona Stonehammer (former).

Alignments: Any are allowed and accepted.

Motivations: Help countries wage war, see the world, have fun.

Day-to-Day Goals: Explore and travel the world.

Long-Term Goals: Visit every region, wage war with successful armies, and “see it all”.

Notable Philosophies: No matter how long you live, and how far you travel, there are always lands and wars yet to explore and fight.

Influence: Average.

Reputation: Good. Soldiers are often necessary, and Wild Kingdom members make outstanding adventuring companions.

Age: Very old (100+ years).

Leadership: Tribal Council of 5 leaders makes decisions. Officially, each of these positions may be challenged by any member at a ceremony once a year; in times past, the challenger must defeat and slay the incumbent in single combat to take the seat.

These days, succession decisions are political, and arrived at months ahead of time. The ceremony of challenge and combat is vestigial, and instead of death, the retiring Council member will lay down their sword, and beg mercy, which is then granted by the challenger, who assumes the seat thereafter.

Size: Huge (1,000-5,000 members).

Stability: Stable. Membership surges during wartime, and declines sharply when the battle is actually fought.

Enemies: The faction itself rarely wars with other groups, though almost by definition, members are part of warring forces. Wild Kingdom struggles to remain, or at least appear, neutral, apart from and above politics of the realm.

Allies: Any other military faction, so long as their ranks are on the side for which the Kingdom fights at the moment.

Resources: Average. Although an enormous population of members, attrition by combat (and dangerous exploration!) is unavoidable.

Description: Exploring the world without fear, and fighting the realm’s wars for them—that’s the life of a member of the Wild Kingdom. A martial faction devoted to warfare and exploration, Wild Kingdom has been fighting wars and slaying dragons for a hundred years.

Although detractors criticize them for being mercenaries and believing in no true cause, they will point out that they fight for the truest purpose: exploration and experience. No matter your politics or background, these are heady intoxicants to the stalwart.

Members of this faction are a favorite of caravans, merchants, and those wishing a combination of security and adventuring. Some are hired as bodyguards for well-to-do novice adventurers; they’re also great resources to fill out the ranks of an adventuring party.

Membership: Sign here, and pay your tribute; congratulations, you’re now a member. If you’re looking to go adventuring, let us know; there’s lots of your new colleagues who would love another sword at their side.

Members: Barbarians, fighters, warriors, ex-soldiers, mercenaries... even a few paladins who are disgruntled or bored.

Common Traits: A sense of adventure and a bold outlook on life. And weapons. Lots of weapons.

Demeanor: Most Wild Kingdom members will regale you with tales of their exploits. Although not a formal military, members have a great deal of respect for one another, and by default will stand shoulder-to-shoulder with anyone if they’re a known member.

Tribute & Dues: As an enormous, pseudo-military organization, the Wild Kingdom requires a Tribute of 1% of gained wealth, kept by the faction for its own purposes. Those wishing to Tribute to the faction may pay an additional 1% or more as they desire.

Although most factions collect tribute once a year, Wild Kingdom members tend to embrace a higher degree of volatility in their deeds... and so, the group collects their tribute from a given member whenever they are “back in town”, so to speak, or in between wars or quests.

Adamantium Trail

Icon / Badge: A white signpost.

Type: Merchant and trade guild.

Notable Members: Oneib, Welby Goodbarrel

Alignments: All are allowed and represented.

Motivations: Money, trade, and the flow of product within the realm.

Day-to-Day Goals: Conduct and expand business.

Long-Term Goals: Gain money, influence, and control the economy. Though most members recognize that the group is composed of selfish, personally-focused businesspeople, and organizing toward some greater purpose is a huge challenge.

Notable Philosophies: Buy it for one gold piece, sell it for two.

Influence: High.

Reputation: Good. Though some will call them money-grubbing profiteers, it's unavoidable that ultimately, everyone benefits from trade.

Age: Very old (200 years).

Leadership: A single Trailmaster leads. She buys her way into the position, outbidding her competitors in a fiscal ceremony that occurs every five years (or upon the death of an existing Trailmaster).

Size: Huge (500-1,000 members).

Stability: Highly Stable.

Enemies: Other trade guilds.

Allies: Also other trade guilds. Depends how profitable the other party is being in comparison.

Resources: Significant. Even a poor merchant tends to still do well.

Description: There are many trade guilds and merchant organizations. The Adamantium Trail attempts to unite all traders under a common banner—some sub-factions have been applying this a bit aggressively, of late.

Today, they are slowly morphing into a mafia kind of situation, edging out solitary and family-owned businesses and smaller guilds as their power and profit grow.

Membership: If you buy and sell, you may apply. To prove your worth, you are given a single platinum piece; your job is to generate at least 10 pp from it using your skills, connections, and knowledge. You have as much time as you like to do so; some members take more than a year to complete the task, but if they're successful, they're admitted.

Members: Most wear the icon of the faction—embroidered into their clothes, emblazoned on their wagons, or carved into their shop.

Common Traits: There are very, very few members who are not active traders or who own a stake in a mercantile company.

Demeanor: Always out to cut a deal, Adamantium Trail members are hustlers by nature.

Tribute & Dues: All members are expected to provide a Tribute of 1% of gained wealth, kept by the faction for its own purposes. Those wishing to Tribute to the faction may pay an additional 1% or more as they desire.

It's an unspoken rule that the more profitable you have been, the greater percentage of tribute you should provide. Many high-ranking members tribute more than 10%.

In addition, intra-faction bribery is commonplace, particularly when vying for the position of Trailmaster. It's not uncommon for a new Trailmaster candidate to run unopposed and assume the position without contest... because she has paid the other major contenders off so they won't run.

Squirrelheel Couriers

Icon / Badge: Squirrel silhouette against a light-green, easterly-pointing chevron.

Type: Guild of message deliverers.

Notable Members: Sorille

Alignments: Any allowed, but Neutral alignments are encouraged, particularly Lawful Neutral.

Motivations: Secure delivery of messages, profit.

Day-to-Day Goals: Deliver the message.

Long-Term Goals: Help empower all factions, governments, and citizens to trust that communications are secure.

Notable Philosophies: With a delivery job, trust is the real product that's being delivered.

Influence: Strong.

Reputation: Excellent. They're reliable and take no sides.

Age: Mature (200 years).

Leadership: A single Head Nut coordinates things, but the faction is so decentralized and its members so autonomous that she hardly ever gets involved in most matters.

Size: Large (100-500 members).

Stability: Highly Stable.

Enemies: No true enemies. Some messages are of woe, and there is a tendency to blame the messenger, but such fury rarely survives for long, and is almost never pinned to the organization of which the messenger is a part.

Allies: None.

Resources: Low. Members keep most of what they earn making deliveries, as the needs of the organization as a whole are few.

Description: Nimble and capable riders from all backgrounds take up the scroll case and the saddle, though most are young and many are former (or inadequate) adventurers.

Membership: Requires performing a delivery for a current member, and returning in a time representative of a challenging pace.

Members: Loners who are almost always on the job.

Common Traits: It takes a strong combination of wanderlust, adventure, and love of being alone to hack it with the Squirrels for very long.

Demeanor: Are typically proud, if not boastful, of their guild and its service. Most jobs are secured via word-of-mouth, or repeat business.

Tribute & Dues: Members are required to Tribute a minimum of 1% of gained wealth. Non-members wishing to Tribute to the faction may pay an additional 1% or more as they desire. As most members do not belong to a particular city or village, this tends to be the only tribute they pay.

The Ever-Present Oculus

Icon / Badge: A golden stylized eye atop a black globe.

Type: Diviners, mystics, and fortune-tellers who practice the craft either as entertainment, or for more formal purposes.

Notable Members: Arbelladon Moonside

Alignments: Any allowed, but tend toward Neutral or Chaotic. Lawfully-aligned members tend to avoid the entertainment aspects of the trade.

Motivations: Enhance the public Wisdom (Perception) of divination as a valuable component of society.

Day-to-Day Goals: Help members improve their skills, get work, and communicate significant findings amongst their community of members.

Long-Term Goals: Move diviners into places of prominent power—every government and faction should at least have a vizier or spiritual consultant who reports directly to the king, chieftain, leader, captain, or leadership.

Notable Philosophies: How can you plan when you do not know? How can you know if you do not ask?

Influence: Below Average.

Reputation: Average.

Age: Ancient (>1,000 years).

Leadership: The Eye is the all-powerful leader of the group, though only

Inner Circle: 33 Lenses are senior officials who coordinate things on a more granular basis—typically each Lens is associated with a geography, city, or region.

Size: Very Large (500-2,500 members).

Stability: Stable.

Enemies: Most factions who derive their influence or belief from alternative powers—e.g., religions, wizardly powers of a nature not specifically oriented toward divination—look upon the Eye as a self-important cult who is trying to boost in importance an art that may have its place, but not in a formal power structure.

Allies: None.

Resources: Low. Diviners as a general rule tend not to be too wealthy, though some in well-placed leadership or counseling positions may wield enormous influence.

Description: Anyone with an ability to cast Divination spells, or anyone interested in the performance or entertainment aspects of the craft, band together to improve their lot and that of their art.

Membership: Requires demonstrating their talents to one of the Lenses in the Inner Circle, and having them advocate for their entry into the faction.

Members: Diviners, bards, entertainers, and craftspeople.

Common Traits: Almost always, members will have the faction sigil embroidered, branded, tattooed, or stamped onto either their clothing, or their own skin. This may be quite difficult to locate in the case of some members, however.

Demeanor: For those who actually do cast Divination spells, as well as for those who merely practice at it as entertainment, much of the impact and power of the craft relies upon willing suspension of disbelief on the part of the audience... or at the very least, being granted benefit of the doubt. As a result, members of the Eye may not be secretive about their membership or the existence of the faction, but will wreathe their every statement and gesture in meaning and mysticism, whether it's merited or not.

Tribute & Dues: Members are required to Tribute a minimum of 1% of gained wealth. Non-members wishing to Tribute to the faction may pay an additional 1% or more as they desire.

Before You Begin

FlexPlot Setup : Who Does What, Why?

Before running this adventure, please read through this section and make some decisions. The nature of Dark Obelisk: Berinncorte is a fairly flexible sandbox, which can encourage dynamic, player-driven play. However, this puts a great deal of pressure on the GM to maintain a sense of continuity, and to keep the “main plot” of the adventure in mind and driven while side quests and NPC plots play themselves out with the party.

Every time you play this adventure, the dark obelisks erupt, and chaos reigns. But who brings the disorder about, their reasons for it and their reactions to it, can all be different. Plots can play out quite differently depending on the motivations of NPCs.

As a GM, you have a choice as to how you determine these dynamic factors: Early Determination, or Late Determination. With either approach, as with everything else FlexPlot-related, the GM is encouraged to apply their own experience and assessment of the players and the gaming style the group has. With this in mind, you are free to randomly determine these options using dice rolls, or to explicitly pick the options you feel would be best or most interesting.

Early Determination

Using this approach, you determine the dynamic elements of the main plot arc in advance of the first gaming session. This is fairly common, since it can be done at any time.

Early Determination may also be the easiest approach for novice GMs, since you can sculpt the actions, reactions, and conversations of affected NPCs to suit the tale you're telling.

Late Determination

Veteran GMs only! Fly by the seat of your pants, and just start playing. When you need to make a determination about a major plot point, then and only then do you need to do it.

This approach allows for a much greater amount of dynamicness in your storytelling. If the PCs focus on a particular NPC, for example, then you can force the decision that that NPC of interest is the one who plays a major role in the story. It could be that the party ignores Mayor Symms altogether, and galavants about town chasing other subplots; in such a scenario, it wouldn't resonate strongly for the Mayor to be the main reason the obelisks erupt later.

You can get around this sort of problem with railroading the players into interactions with the Mayor, but a flexible GM who is comfortable with changing things on the fly can avoid this using this approach of Late Determination.

Main Plot Summary

The PCs are introduced to the village of Berinncorte. After the party has been in town for a time, the Town Square is besieged by enormous ebon crystals that erupt through the ground unexpectedly.

Chaos reigns in the aftermath, as undead and chaotic creatures swarm from the fissure in the earth beneath the city.

It's up to the PCs as to what they do amidst this grim sandbox of opportunity in which the entire town evacuates amidst the destruction.

Prime Catalyst

The Catalyst is the NPC, faction, or entity that causes the main plot to come about. In Dark Obelisk: Berinncorte, this can be one of several different characters.

You can use the following FlexTable to randomly determine the Prime Catalyst for the Obelisk Eruption, or you can use the table's entries as inspiration to force a decision of your own as the GM.

-  Use Context A:
As a default, if none of the other Contexts applies..
-  Use Context B:
If the party contains at least one Paladin.
-  Use Context C:
If you are using Late Determination, and the party has had interactions with Mayor Symms..
-  Use Context D:
If you are using Late Determination, and the party has had interactions with Larissa the Elder.

Catalyst Trackers

Each of these Trackers manages the current state of affairs and power of forces at play in the city while the PCs are within it during this adventure. Each Tracker is affected by Quest resolutions, actions taken by the PCs, who they speak to, how they interact with NPCs, what they do in the city, who they fight, what they loot—pretty much everything they do could conceivably

FlexTable 4: Primary Catalyst

D%A	D%B	D%C	D%D	Result	Description
01-29	01-50	01-20	01-30	CAT-CM Cleric Maghana	Uncertain of how to reconcile her religious duties with her love of the High Priest, Maghana begins to lose faith in both of these devotions. The forces of Chaos take note, and use this as an opportunity to encroach. Monitored and triggered by the  Love Tracker.
30-59	51-89	21-79	31-49	CAT-MS Mayor Symms	The Mayor's love of order and rule goes a bit too far, and she begins to lose the sense of balance that helps the application of law serve justice as opposed to rigid order. Chaotic forces swell as citizens grow uneasy with the Mayor's approach. Use the  Law Tracker to determine when or if this catalyst triggers.
60-89	90-98	80-89	50-89	CAT-CH Larissa	The butler did it! This is a bit obvious, but those who worship the lords of Chaos have succeeded in bringing about the sort of disorder they preach. But be careful what you wish for—the extent of Chaos encroachment may be more than they bargained for. The  Chaos Tracker is used to monitor the force of this catalyst.
90-100	99-00	90-100	90-100	CAT-PC The PCs Themselves	If the PCs slay one or more Berinncorte Militia , it's quite likely that Mayor Symms will declare Martial Law shortly thereafter. This leads to an escalation of her normally lawful leanings, to the point where citizens actively resist the law and chaos gets its hooks into the soul of the city. There is no single  Tracker dedicated to this force. Instead, there are certain actions of the party itself that can trigger the Eruption .

have an impact on one or more Trackers.

Each Tracker is a visual indicator that (if printed out) can be marked with pencil to indicate the current level of Law, Chaos, and Love in the adventure as events unfold and the PCs interact with the citizens of the city. You can find a standalone, extra electronic copy of these Trackers for free on RPGnow, or on the Infinium Game Studio website.

These are similar to Attitude Trackers, in that they are a numerical representation of a collection of behavior and interactions that can be used as a shorthand to summarize the current state of things. They differ, however, in two key ways: one, with Attitude Trackers, higher numbers represent a greater affinity toward the PCs; with Catalyst Trackers, higher numbers represent a greater sense of disruption and danger. The second difference is of course that instead of measuring the Attitude of a single character, Catalyst Trackers instead measure the collective feelings, sympathies, urges, and, yes, attitudes of an entire city.

As with everything else in this adventure, these are merely tools that are meant to help the majority of GMs and gaming groups; you are free to modify, or ignore, them as you see fit. Veteran GMs, or those who know in advance that their group's play style will not coordinate well with this approach, can implement their own replacement system, potentially using this one as inspiration of intent.

When to Pay Attention

Whenever a conversation, battle, sale, or action or interaction results in an impact on one or more Catalyst Trackers, it will be noted in the text like this:  Catalyst: Chaos +2.

Unless the text specifically indicates this impact, then the party's actions generally do not have an impact on any of the Trackers. Of course, although this adventure attempts to discuss many contingencies and activities the party may undertake, if there's one thing that GMs understand, it's that PCs will do whatever they damn well please, and will constantly come up with inventive ways to try things that were simply not anticipated.

The GM is therefore encouraged to apply your own, additional, modifiers to any Catalyst Tracker in reflection of PC actions that are not covered by indicators in this text.

Finally, veteran GMs, or those whose gaming groups are simply not taking actions that result in impact to the Catalyst Trackers with sufficient rapidity, are encouraged to “move things along” by tweaking the state of the Trackers themselves.

Tracking Trackers

If you as the GM are using Early Determination, then you are really only paying attention to a single Tracker: the one that represents the Catalyst you have already selected as the root cause of the Obelisk Eruption. When that Tracker reaches a Trigger state, advance the adventure to Act Two and trigger the Eruption.

If instead you are using Late Determination, you should monitor all of the trackers, as any of them could trigger during the course of play. When any Tracker goes to Trigger, that’s when the party has inadvertently selected the Prime Catalyst, and you should immediately skip to Act Two.

In addition, each Tracker has a handful of additional pieces of information. These are described below.

Starting Value

This is a number representing the conditions of Berinn corte at the beginning of the adventure.

As the GM, you should feel free to adjust this starting value as you see fit; it is a suggestion that is meant to represent the state of affairs amongst the characters, factions, and general plot elements in play when the PCs arrive in the city.

Low Values

This section describes what low values in this Tracker indicate.

High Values

It may not be obvious what is meant if this Tracker escalates toward a Trigger state; this section indicates this.

Law Tracker

Summary: The imposition of law on a group who is not fundamentally and universally lawful in nature is always a balance between monitoring and control on the one hand, and free will and flexibility on the other. This Catalyst Tracker therefore does not merely reflect the extent of law and order—rather, it indicates the extent to which law impacts and interferes with the people, their desires, and their true natures. Indeed, negative modifiers to this Tracker could take the form either of decreased lawfulness, or of increased, but imposing lawfulness.

Starting Value: 22 (Dangerous)

Low Values: Indicate a effective, acceptable, and welcome creation of, and execution of, law to both help curb the bad and accentuate the good in society, to the betterment of most, if not all, citizens.

High Values: Represent either a low state of lawfulness, and/or the application of law with an iron fist or arbitrary and unfeeling will.

Chaos Tracker

Summary: Represents the degree of anarchy in the citizenry... but also the extent to which the populace embraces that chaos. A chaos unwanted will simply make the people cry out for an increase in law.

Starting Value: 14 (Tense)

Low Values: People are free to be chaotic, and do so, to limited degree. All things in moderation... including moderation itself. There’s the occasional rukus or conflict, but it’s swiftly and harmoniously addressed. Think of the level of chaos in the town as being the societal equivalent of “a good cry”, or of the occasional bout of drinking with an old friend.

High Values: Citizens lust to embrace a higher magnitude of chaos in their lives, to break free of an existence in which they feel increasingly shackled—by their families, by their jobs, by their customers, by society, by the gods themselves, even. Blood pressures are piqued, frenzies are common, and society in general is more in a state of blackout-drunkenness or drug addiction than in balanced and occasional excess.

♥ Love Tracker

Summary: This is really more a tracker of heartbreak, of despair, and of general emotional discontent.

Starting Value: 18 (Tense)

Low Values: Your average citizen feels actualized, self-fulfilled, and validated. This fulfillment could be derived from family, from friends, from employment, from love requited, or from a general sense of contentment and success shared by most. Families grow, happiness abounds, and productivity soars.

High Values: More and more people are sad, lonely, angry, frustrated, and filled with angst and ennui. Dark thoughts occur to many, and some may even have begun to take action on them—suicide rates increase as does this Tracker.

So You Like to Railroad

Inexperienced GMs may not like the open-ended nature of this book. Some gaming groups, players, or veteran GMs may simply not like that style of play. Still other groups may have very tight time restrictions, so they can't take a luxurious amount of time exploring every nook and cranny of a richly-detailed campaign environment.

Dark Obelisk: Berinncorte can accommodate these preferences.

Roadmap: Shortest Path

The quickest way to experience Dark Obelisk: Berinncorte and yet still encounter a majority of the intended "core content" and plot arcs is to guide the party as follows:

- Prime Catalyst: The PCs Themselves (CAT-PC), as they try to leave the city.
- Gaming Session 1: Introduction & Part 1 (starting on the next page).
- Gaming Session 2: Act 2 - Obelisk Attack & Act 3 - Aftermath.

Depending on the style of play, the length of your gaming sessions, and how players react to events, this may still be a little tight on time, but it should get the job done.

Roadmap: Longest Path

If you're looking to experience much more of the book, you're encouraged to structure play as follows:

- Session 1: Introduction & Part 1.
- Up to 3 Optional Sessions: Further Part 1 Encounters & Exploration.

Act I: Berinncorte City

Act I: Berinncorte City

Act One Overview

In this first adventure of the  Adventure Path, the village of Berinncorte starts off as a “sandbox”—an area with lots of content to explore, but with very little direct motivation.

The intent is to introduce the players to Berinncorte gradually, at their own pace, and in particular for them to meet and greet the denizens of the town. The more NPCs they connect with before the Obelisk erupts, the greater the horror when it does and kills many of the townsfolk they have spent this initial time getting to know.

Providing Guidance

This lack of a linear guide to play and plot may pose a challenge, particularly to inexperienced GMs, or to groups who have never played together before. Experienced or wise GMs can play off of the composition of the party members to provide incentives—for example, Paladins and some Clerics will want to visit the local Lawful Good-aligned church, Fighters and martial characters will want to resupply and upgrade equipment, and so on. To this end, many locations and encounters have a sidebar describing ways in which characters of different races, classes, and alignments might be incented to engage with the content.

As the GM, it's up to you when to trigger the Obelisk's eruption—you may have a group of players eager to get to combat, or a group who does not do well with loosely-defined goals. Regardless of the situation, however, it is recommended that you wait until the party has acquired at least one side quest, and met at least a handful of the key townspeople listed.

General Rules

Berinncorte is a comfortable place to live and do business. While not rich, it certainly is prosperous—and the general feeling of the townsfolk reflect this. Very few are truly destitute, and although there is certainly no shortage of strife and struggle, true misery is virtually unknown to the populace here.

Mayor Symms is perhaps a bit heavy-handed in her approach to ruling the citizenry, but even those who feel personally slighted by her acts and rules will, if pressed, admit that they bear her personally little ill-will, recognizing that the laws probably come from a place of good intent.

Key and Common NPCs

Throughout this adventure, if an NPC is mentioned, but it is not specified which stat block to use, treat them as a Townsfolk. This is a commoner's profile, generally unfit for challenging combat individually regardless of challenge level (see Quadded Stat Blocks)... but potentially volatile in droves.

“Placing” NPCs

This adventure is an urban one, taking place nearly entirely within the confines of a city. As with a real city, any given citizen moves about during the day and night, tending to business, entertaining themselves, getting food and drink, sleeping, carousing, and so on.

 Veteran GMs are encouraged to read through the Key NPCs section, and to have that in mind as the PCs work their way throughout the city. With rare exceptions where it simply doesn't make sense, you are encouraged to insert key NPCs as makes the most sense—both from the perspective of introducing plot elements and side quests, but also to keep things moving and interesting as opposed to just “we go to location X and have the rogue loot the drawers while the fighter guards them”.

Novice GMs, or those seeking a bit more direction (or formality of randomness!) have two options in determining which NPCs to “insert” where and when:

Option 1: By Character

Each key NPC has a section describing their Habits and Logistics. Some characters will always predictably be in a certain location; others have a varying habit that splits their time among more than one place.

This method is best if you’re looking to “place” a specific character(s), as it allows you to determine their position. Whether the PCs run into the person from that point is up to them, and others. It’s also the method better suited to elaborate planning ahead of time, if that is your style as a GM.

Using this approach also helps if the party is searching for a particular NPC; they might ask around as to whether anyone has seen them, and other townfolk can helpfully point them in the right direction.

Option 2: By Location

Each Area of Interest in Berinncorte begins with a brief introduction, followed by a Random Key NPCs table. As the PCs move into a location, this table makes it simple to make one or more quick rolls, and populate the area with not just a handful of generic Townfolk, but instead one or more characters of interest. Whether the key NPC approaches the party, or whether you as GM provide a description of the noteworthy individual in their midst, depends on both the NPC in question, and your style as a gaming group.

This method is best if your GM style is more in the vein of reacting to what the PCs do, rather than planning in advance. It also requires significantly less (zero, really!) preparation time ahead of the gaming session.

Below is a generic, all-purpose Random Key NPCs table... this serves as both an example of the concept, but also as the “default” table that encompasses all possible key NPCs. You can use this default table in

Law and Order

Of course, the greatest element of true conflict in Berinncorte only arises tangibly when the Obelisk Eruption occurs... but in the meantime, there are still plenty of interesting players in the game of everyday life.

Town Militia

Berinncorte's militia is composed mostly of volunteer citizens, with a few mercenaries mixed in as need (and funds!) dictate. For combat purposes, unless the party is engaged with a named NPC, treat all members of the militia as Berinncorte Militia.

Generally speaking, unless given an explicit reason to engage one of the party members, the militia will leave the PCs (as well as all other townsfolk) alone. Berinncorte is not an enormous city by any means, but it is not without its share of visitors; the party's presence is likely not a major event worth of investigation.

If the party is not engaging with NPCs, following side-quests, or if there is something about their makeup that demands attention, it's left the GM's discretion as to whether a militia member approaches them and questions them. For example, if the party is composed exclusively of eight-foot-tall, chaotic evil, half-orcs and half-demons, the militia would probably have a few questions as to what their intent in the town is!

Getting Arrested

For a variety of reasons, the party (or some subset thereof) may at some point become arrested. Generally speaking, law and order in Berinncorte are what you would expect of a civilized society—theft and murder, for example, are typically illegal, though self-defense is a viable explanation for the latter. Of particular note, dueling is legal if both parties involved agree to the showdown with at least one impartial witness. This is underscored later, in any quests where it is a plot option.

Table 3: Jail Fines

Offense Type	Fine
Simple Offense	10 gp per PC
Assault	25 gp per PC
Theft	30 gp per PC

Offense Type	Fine
Murder	100 gp per PC; martial law likely until someone is arrested

Should one or more PCs get arrested, the party has a few options to recover.

↳ They can try and fight their way out. This requires facing 2d4+1 Berinncorte Militia simultaneously; three rounds later, another 2d4 Militia arrive to help their comrades. This approach should generally be discouraged; the GM can scale the encounters and the difficulty accordingly.

↳ At night, the party may try and sneak out. This is a three-step progression of skill checks, and is therefore best attempted by a single party member. First, removing manacles requires a DC 16 Disable Device check. Next, another DC 16 Disable Device check to pick the lock on the cell. Finally, a DC 16 Dexterity (Stealth) check to sneak past the guards. Failing any of these three checks will result in the PC being re-incarcerated by the guards, and the difficulty of all three checks increasing by +1 next time.

↳ The party may try to bribe their way out of jail. This costs 50 gp per person; a DC 14 Charisma (Persuasion) check halves this amount.

↳ Should the above fail, or if the incarcerated PCs are neither sneaky nor burly, the only remaining option is to talk their way out and pay a fine. The exact fine amount should scale to the offense involved, and is left to the GM to determine; some examples are shown in "Table 3: Jail Fines" on page 48.

Murdering a Militia

If, under any circumstances, any PC slays a Berinncorte Militia, the result can be quite significant. It's left to the GM's discretion as to what occurs.

↳ The most rapid escalation is that the party (and the murder scene) is discovered immediately, by a large enough group of militia that the PCs will prefer not to start a fight. Under this scenario, the party is arrested (see above) on the spot.

↳ Another, less immediate, option is to assume the Militia body is discovered, say 1d4 hours afterwards. With no witnesses and no leads, Mayor Symms is forced to enact Martial Law (see below).

Regardless of the approach used, this can have an impact on the Prime Catalyst of the Obelisk Eruption.

Martial Law

During martial law, all reserves of Berinncorte Militia are called upon to patrol the town. In addition, all Jail Fines (see Table 3 on page 48) are doubled. Anyone already in jail is not retroactively affected by this additional fine, unless it is suspected that they were somehow involved or related to the event that brought about martial law.

Mayor Symms will herself also patrol the town, with her greatsword made clearly visible on her back (or, depending on the circumstances, even in her hand). A stickler for order and as someone who feels heavy the weight of her responsibilities, she nevertheless recognizes the difficulties the imposition of severe law may inflict upon innocent townsfolk. As a result, her driven, relentless attitude is really focused around ending or solving whatever caused the need for martial law in the first place. The very moment such a situation is resolved to her satisfaction—be it the arrest of a suspected murderer, the flight of a suspected felon, or some the answering of a mystery—she will be quick to revoke the state of heightened attention.

Rumors and Tales

The following snippets of conversation, convoluted retelling, misunderstanding, urban myth, hearsay, and outright lie are usable as additional incentives for the PCs to uncover mysteries about the town.

There are two ways to use these FlexTables:

First, if the PCs are actively searching for information, you can make a  Skill Check and look up the result. If you come to a result that has already been discovered by the PCs, at the GM's discretion, you may pick a result with a lower DC and read that instead. The party may use  Knowledge (Local) or Charisma (Persuasion); the DC listed applies equally to either of these skills. Alternately, a PC may use Knowledge (History), but with a -3 circumstance penalty (as knowledge of general history will apply in only a limited basis to the immediate vicinity of Berinncorte).

Alternately, if a specific quest explicitly rewards the PCs with a piece of lore, you may simply roll on the appropriate Context and read the result. In such a circumstance, a Skill Check is not required.

There are several different FlexTables to use here. One is the default, which is a good starting point for general lore and rumor. It will guide you to the more detailed FlexTables that are more topic-based.

Each of the subsequent topic-based FlexTables may be used directly, if the PCs are inquiring as to a specific topic. If the party is gathering information pertaining explicitly to NPCs, Factions, or Settings, roll directly on the relevant FlexTable. Skill checks focused on a particular subject take a -2 penalty.

As the party will not yet have heard anything about the Obelisk, it will be difficult to justify going explicitly to that FlexTable.

Default Rumors and Lore

Use "FlexTable 5: Default Rumors, Tales, and Lore" as a starting point for general rumors and lore discussed within the city of Berinncorte.

-  Use Context A:
As a Skill Check against one of the skills as described above.
-  Use Context B:
If the party is attempting to gather information from a Key NPC. Any named NPC is a "key" NPC for these purposes.
-  Use Context C:
If the party is gathering information from generic townsfolk, or NPCs without specific names. For example, Berinncorte Militia.
-  Use Context D:
If the party is blindly trying to obtain information in an unstructured manner.

-	-	-	01-30	-	No Rumor	No information is obtained.
01-09	01-15	01-12	31-37	12	A private society called the Scarlet Dillweed secretly controls many aspects of government and religion.	 Partially True. The faction is the Scarlet Path , and its influence is not quite that significant.
10-19	16-30	13-25	38-45	16	Armorers and blacksmiths all belong to a secret guild, which fixes prices and keeps supplies of adamantium and similarly elite material controlled.	 Partially True. The Order Mechanique does indeed have many blacksmiths, but they engage in none of the collusion referred to.
20-28	31-40	26-35	46-52	19	A trade guild called MeatSmiths has been hiring necromancers and other wizards to concoct a meat substitute that would be cheaper to produce than animal-based meat.	 Partially True. The MeatSmiths do dabble in necromancy, but its intent is far more sinister than a vegetarian alternative.
29-38	41-42	36-42	53-60	17	Tavern owner Jozan is a member of the Water Guards , a faction dedicated to controlling alcoholic beverages in the Realm, and preventing their theft and abuse.	 False. Though there is a faction called Liquid Guardians , its purpose is more alchemical, not alcoholic. Jozan is also not a member.

Faction-Based Rumors & Lore
D%A	D%B	D%C	D%D	DC	Description	Veracity
39-47	43-52	43-50	61-67	15	In the secret folds of society lie the seeds of an uprising against all who wield magic.	✔ True , though the doomsday described will likely never occur due to the lack of influence (and membership!) of the Antimagic Shell .
48-56	53-60	51-60	68-72	17	Those who worship coin above all other matters would do well to seek out The Platinum Standard , a financial guild which seeks to enrich the already-wealthy members of society.	✔ Partially True . Likely this refers to the Platinum Flag , but while their membership does require existing fiscal success to some degree, their services and guidance are available to all who wish it... for a price.
57-66	61-72	61-72	73-79	14	Looking to book a bard? Prices aren't as low as they should be, mostly because a guild controls the contracts of all who sing, dance, or play.	✔ Partially True . The Katkalls would dearly love to claim this level of influence, but such power is beyond their current means.
67-76	73-82	73-82	80-84	12	Many for whom security is a concern turn to a group called Mace and Blade for protection. Traders, wealthy citizens, and even governments have availed themselves of their services.	✔ True . The aims of the group go even farther beyond these current abilities, however.
77-86	83-85	83-88	85-90	14	The city's two gardens flourish regardless of weather conditions... but this is due not to Fey-like involvement, but the protection of a guardianship faction called the Emerald Garden .	✘ False . While the Emerald Garden does exist, and would certainly be interested in protecting the two gardens in Berinncorte , there is no actual involvement or protection.
87-93	86-94	89-96	91-95	10	Tons of hired blades have made their fortune on the roads of the Realm in a group called the Wild Kingdom . Sometimes, these mercenaries are even hired to supplement armies!	✔ True . This is almost exactly the role of the Wild Kingdom .
94-00	95-00	97-00	96-00	8	They say that everyone—everyone—worth their salt in the city is aligned with at least one of the many Factions that wield influence in the region.	✔ Partially True . Nearly all named NPCs belong to at least one Faction, but this is hardly a rule, and some belong to no faction whatsoever.

21-22	06-07	11-12	46	16	The city’s Fishmaster was once offered the job of Mayor, but turned it down, preferring a simple life.	 True. Brock Runnaheim will admit to this if asked.
23-24	08-09	13-14	47	19	Berinncorte’s Apothecary has a dark past. Some say he dabbles in necromancy.	 Partially True. Aramil Xiloscient is indeed a shady character, but although he tortures and kills innocents for “research”, his endeavors don’t truly qualify as necromancy.
25	10	15	48	11	Aramil , the apothecary, is forgetful, and will occasionally give the wrong potion to a customer.	 Partially True. While he does give the wrong potions to some customers, when he does so, it is intentional—his way of a dark prank.
26	11	16	49	16	The town Fortune Teller , in Town Square , is secretly a Druid spy.	 Partially True. Reporting back to her druidic relations is indeed part of Arbelladon Moonside’s duties, but “spy” seems a strong term for what is really just a bunch of letters containing observations.
27-28	12-14	17-18	50	16	The Militia’s trainer is far younger than he appears. He Charisma (Deception)s his youth with an elderly visage to appear wiser than he truly is.	 False. Though he has heard this rumor many times, Ash “Executioner” does nothing to dissuade folk from rumor-mongering, as it draws them away from the truth of his hidden addiction.
29	15	19	51	17	One of the workers at the Library is a famous author, who is only working in the town to do research on his next book. Many of the city’s wealthy know of his secret, and he demands they entertain him with lavish fetes.	False. Biggen Gurble is, and indulges in, none of these things.
30	16-17	20-22	52	13	High Priest Cannock of the Zugul Church is secretly a wizard of great power, who gave up his abilities to live a life of contemplative peace in the city.	 False. Cannock did, however, used to be a rogue, and gave up that way of life for that of the priesthood.

Act I

NPC-Based Rumors & Lore
D%A	D%B	D%C	D%D	DC	Description	Veracity
31	18	23	53	12	A druid merchant may be found in Town Square who can see the future.	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/> False. This likely refers to Caerthynna Tsornyl , who in no way has this ability.
32-33	19-22	24-26	54	13	A local farmerwoman has inherited a vast fortune, but interloping miscreants have kept from her the delivery of the notice that would give her this news. Ignorant of her ability to claim newfound wealth, she wanders from job to job, nearly destitute and eager for any work she might find.	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/> False. It's probable that townsfolk invented this story out of pity for poor Cora Brushgather , whose life does fit the latter portion of the rumor. Sadly, however, there is no wealth that might be inherited, nor does anyone wish to keep information from her.
34-35	23-25	27-29	55	10	Berinncorte's resident seamstress has talents far beyond this humble town. She stays here only out of love for her husband.	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Partially True. Daratis is quite talented, and does love her husband, Otibus . However, neither one of them wishes to leave Berinncorte .
36	26	30	56	14	There's something fishy about the Militia's treasurer . He might not be human!	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/> True. In fact, there is much that might be considered "fishy" about Debran Ormrick , but his kind-of secret race is far from the fishiest.
37-38	27-30	31-36	57	10	The Sheergath Temple's preacher secretly lusts after that institutions's Elder.	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/> True. Preacher Denzys does indeed long for Larissa , but keeps it under wraps.
39-40	31-33	37-38	58	13	The village Blacksmith once led a far more interesting life, but gave up a female lover and an adventuring career so that she could safely focus on her current trade.	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Partially True. Blacksmith Dimplegruffe did indeed used to be an adventurer, and gave it up. But she did not abandon a lover to do so; neither is she even gay.
41-42	34-36	39-41	59	12	Mayor Dominika Symms is having a secret affair with High Priest Cannock . This explains all the support that the Zugul Church receives from the town government!	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/> False. Symms has no time for such a dalliance, and Cannock is devoted to his work. The Zugul Church enjoys its relationship with the city because it consistently does right by that relationship; nothing more.
43	37	42	60	14	Donur Gravelsmasher , now a merchant in Town Square , gave up a life of dwarven royalty to pursue mercantile interests. Though he has no knack for business, he subsists on an allowance given him by his royal family.	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Partially True. Donur did indeed give up a solid position in his homeland to travel broadly, but it was political, not royal. His family and society of home does question this decision, but do not support him financially in any way.
44-45	38-40	43-44	61	8	A dwarven mercenary frequents the Tavern ; his talents can be bought for the right amount of coin, and he will ask no questions as to the task required of him.	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/> True. Einkill Holderhek is indeed a dwarven mercenary, and has recently been in the occasional employ of a burgeoning underworld interest.

D%A	D%B	D%C	D%D	DC	Description	Veracity
46	41	45	62	16	A wealthy and powerful merchant princess will occasionally stop into town to make sure her interests are protected. She secretly owns a great deal of the city's buildings, and the Mayor is beholden to her perspective on a great many topics.	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Partially True. Elena Lomazonne will indeed drop by, but she owns nothing in town save the quarters in the Upper-Class Residential District that she rents from Tarsheva Hornwood . Mayor Symms couldn't pick her out of a crowd, though.
47-48	42-44	46-47	63	12	If you ask around in Town Square , you can locate a prostitute whose abilities are renknowned far and wide in certain circles. She takes male and female clients alike.	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Partially True. While it's accurate that Elizavetta Burak performs the described services, and does so in Town Square , even she would laugh at the possibility of being famous for it. This rumor was most likely started by a client or two on whom Elizavetta had worked her illusory magic, who reacted a bit too strongly to her wiles.
49	45	48	64	17	Folk say they have seen the Innkeeper practicing dark magics, late at night, atop his establishment's roof.	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Partially True. Esk is private about his abilities as a Summoner, but would hardly characterize his craft as "dark", and has in point of fact never himself been atop his own roof.
50	46	49	65	18	The butcher's apprentice is secretly an ancient gnome, hundreds of years old, who hides beneath an illusory cloak of youth.	<input type="checkbox"/> False. Farzith is the age he appears to be. This tale likely has its genesis in folk thinking him to have wisdom beyond his years.
51-52	47-48	50-51	66	13	Butchery must pay—the town's butcher is rich indeed, keeping quarters in the elite residential district.	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Partially True. While it's indisputable that Ganyc rents a suite at the Upper-Class Residential District , he's far from rich: he indulges in the luxury at the very edge of his means, and is at risk of not being able to afford it quite frequently depending on how business is doing!
53-54	49-51	52-53	67	10	The Tribute Magister assigned to Berinncorte is a sociopathic jerk who values money above people.	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/> True. That's Gorin Bakelight in a nutshell, really.
55	52	54	68	18	There's something off, recently, about the Fishmaster . He looks haunted by something, but doesn't talk about it.	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/> True , as far as the tale goes. See Gumbrew's Background for more information about accidentally killing an intruder a few months ago.
56	53	55	69	15	The city's chief Librarian owns every single book in the building... but doesn't brag about it.	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Partially True. While Gunnloda Balderk did gift a substantial private collection to the Library, it only represents a bit more than half the total tomes.

57-60	54-58	56-58	70	8	Berinncorte's Cryptkeeper is an evil gnome who lives in squalor, murders people, and eats their eyes!	 False. Well, perhaps Partially True , in that Gurth does in fact live in squalor... but the rest is just pure nonsense. That's what people are prone to say about you, if you're a filthy drunk who lives in a graveyard, though.
61	59	57	71	17	The Gods sense a battle forthcoming, and have sent a warrior emissary to aid the city in the fight to come. He takes the form of an immense furred creature of the forest.	 False. The closest thing to it is Gyldor's presence in town, which is exclusively to keep watch over developments that may lead to an event such as the Eruption . The ranger's wolverine companion is far from immense.
62	60	58-60	72	14	The jester/greeter who hangs out in City Gate Square used to be a king. He went quite mad, though, and was exiled from his own country. Thankfully, he's so insane and quirky that he doesn't remember any of it.	 False. Although Hueykins is certainly not of Berinncorte originally, his secret is that he reports back as a spy to the Scarlet Path . He has never been royalty, that's for sure.
63-65	61-62	61	73	10	In Town Square , there's a half-orc paladin woman who raises beasts outside the city gates.	 True. This is Ines Borque . Though she realizes the uniqueness of her combination of traits, she herself would be surprised and bemused that such information would even qualify as lore.
66-67	63-64	62-64	74	12	The Tavern's barkeep is a charismatic half-orc who is secretly engaged to a dozen wealthy princesses and widowers across the realm.	 False. This rumor likely started after folk saw Joan flirt with, and ultimately take to bed, a number of wealthy ladies; however, such trysts are physical and temporary, and have never yet resulted in any sort of commitment.
68-69	65-66	65	75	16	A reclusive loner floats about town, frequently stopping in for refreshment in the Tavern . They say he hawks exotic and bizarre wares if asked in the right manner.	 True. This is Kayzark .
70-71	67-68	66-67	76	15	There is a humble-seeming man in Town Square who sells religious items representing both Zugul and Sheergath . This vendor is in reality but a shell of a man, a construct of flesh, created by the gods so that they might inhabit a mortal from time to time. On a given day, there's a good chance either Zugul or Sheergath is, themselves, incarnate in this vendor.	 False. Kerem Dogan does indeed sell religious wares of both major religions in town, but he has never been possessed by a god, and would laugh at the notion. This rumor likely started when folk noticed the man's salesmanship being equally effective to customers of either of the two faiths.

D%A	D%B	D%C	D%D	DC	Description	Veracity
72-73	69-70	68-70	77	13	The Sheergath Temple's Elder is a woman of exorbitant tastes, and unsatiable desires.	✓ True. Larissa the Elder would readily admit to this description, and strives to live up to it—both as a satisfying indulgence, as well as a means of “walking the talk” of Chaos itself.
74	71	71	78	15	The comely musician and dancer who performs—sometimes on the Stage in Town Square , others at the Tavern —is in truth an underworld crime lord. She has ordered the deaths of dozens who have stood against her interests.	✗ False. The closest pearl of truth here is that Lingona does perform at both mentioned locales, and occasionally runs a thievery trick with her lover Phadian Gess ; see event “Impromptu Performance”.
75	72	72	79	18	Among the leaders of the Berinncorte Militia is a mute armsmaster. His secret? He's only feigning the inability to speak; in reality, he's a perfectly fine orator, but he pretends muteness as a means of gathering information without revealing anything.	✓ Partially True. Mute though Amadan may indeed be, s/he does gather information through this silence.
76-77	73-77	73-75	80	12	If you catch her in the right light, a Cleric of the Zugul Church is truly beautiful—they say she may have been a courtesan, or an artisan's model, in her former life. Perhaps she moonlights still in such professions!	✗ False. While it's true that Cleric Maghana is beautiful, she has never engaged in any sort of the professions described.
78	78	76	81	17	The innkeeper's maid is in fact an accomplished bard, a Realm-class talent. But her current work is effectively enslavement, scrubbing floors and changing soiled sheets instead of singing to royalty. This circumstance is owing to the fact that Esk , her boss and the Inn's owner, has in his possession compromising letters between her and a foreign noble; he blackmails both the maid and the noble to keep quiet.	✗ False. Utterly, completely false, except for the fact that Mardnab Scheppen is indeed a fledgeling bard.
79	79	77	82	17	Watch interactions between the General Store owner and his bodyguard/salesman . There's more to that relationship than just mercenary security.	✓ True. Oneib and Welby Goodbarrel have a long history together, and indeed were once lovers, long ago, very briefly.

D%A	D%B	D%C	D%D	DC	Description	Veracity
80-81	80-81	78-80	83	15	Nobody knows why an accomplished monk serves as the Mayor's chief clerk and receptionist. There are whispers that he may have accidentally killed someone, and his current work is a form of self-imposed exile from his former life, penance for a misdeed long past.	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/> False. Although Ota Kuiduru is indeed a talented monk, he feels that his best contribution to order is in using his administrative talents.
82-83	82-83	81-82	84	11	The Textiles Shop is owned by an older couple. The wife is the brains and talent of the operation; the husband is in truth merely in the business of animal husbandry for the hides used.	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/> True. Otibus has but a limited role in the running of the Textiles Shop .
84	84	83-84	85	14	The two half-orc serving wenches in the Tavern are in fact secret lovers.	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/> False. Ownka and Thrunne are friends and co-workers, nothing more, and indeed, neither is gay.
85	85	85	85	16	A gorgeous rogue who spends time in the city's Tavern once used to be a merchant prince. Betrayed by his lover, he lost his entire fortune, and now enacts a kind of petty revenge against an entire sex by seducing and stealing from wealthy ladies.	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/> False. Though Phadian Gess is a rogue, and a thief, no other part of this rumor is accurate. Besides, he is monogamous with Lingona... at least, for the time being.
86	86	86	86	13	The half-orc slumlord of the city's cheaper apartment building may seem like a brute and a swindler, but she secretly has a heart of gold. In fact, she charges zero rent for several of her more disadvantaged tenants.	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/> False. It turns out that Pilga is exactly what she seems to be!
87	87	87	87	10	An ancient wizard hangs out in the Tavern , lending his destructive talents out as a mercenary.	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/> True. Rhirem is available to hire if you can find him in the Leaky Cask Tavern , though he might balk at being referred to as "ancient".
88	88	88	88	12	A dwarven combat trainer in Town Square comes from humble beginnings, but has fighting talents reknowned across the Realm.	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Partially True. A farming life comprised Rona Stonehammer's childhood, and although she's skilled at battle, there are few who have ever met her outside of the immediate Berinncorte region.
89	89	89	89	16	A mysterious halfling merchant in Town Square has taken a demon as a lover. The two meet at the stroke of midnight in the Graveyard to the north.	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/> False. Shakira Alam has taken Elizavetta Burak as a lover, who is far from a demon.
90	90	90	90	10	The gruntish, ruthless second-in-command of the town Militia is gunning for the Captain's job.	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/> True. There's no real secret that Skutt Krundar would love to overthrow Tansden as Militia Captain .

D%A	D%B	D%C	D%D	DC	Description	Veracity
91	91	91	91	14	A mysterious courier can sometimes be seen, entering or leaving the Mayor's House , late at night. What is she delivering? Or what is the Mayor sending?	✓ True. Sorille a member of the Squirrelheel Couriers , does occasionally have business with, or for, the Mayor . There is nothing sinister about these communications, however.
92	92	92	92	16	The fisher's apprentice might know how to get in touch with merchants on the black market.	✓ True , though Stewy's underworld ambitions far outstrip the simple connections mentioned.
93	93	93	93	15	It's said that the Militia Captain's family died from starvation in a farmland famine some decades past.	✓ True. The event saddens Tansden to this day.
94	94	94	94	13	One of the half-orc serving wenches at the Tavern is an assassin for hire, with a dozen contracts under her belt.	✗ False. Thrunne is a simple serving wench, little more. The rumor likely started after drunken bargoers noticed she wields a vicious-looking spiked gauntlet, but in truth, it's more for show than to inflict damage.
95	95	95	95	16	The upper-class apartments are owned and run by a half-elven ex-adventurer who bought and renovated the entire building herself.	✓ True. Tarsheva Hornwood is quite accomplished, both as an adventurer and an entrepreneur.
96	96	96	96	18	Hidden in secret passageways in the town Library —some say, between the very walls themselves—sits a bizarre mystic , a sage, who can tell the future for real... but only under the right circumstances.	✓ Partially True. While Tudra Coppereye is a sage, and her quarters and office are hidden behind secret doors in the Library , she has as much ability to tell the future as any other Oracle.
97	97	97	97	17	The least powerful of the Sheergath Temple's officers has a bloody history of adventuring. He was betrayed by his party one day, and though he survived, his spirit was broken, resulting in his devotion to the Temple .	✓ True. For more details on Unglar's history, refer to this Background.
98	98	98	98	15	The weakling food merchant in Town Square crafts his rations from dead rats.	✗ False. This is likely a vicious lie started by one of Vanya Berezin's competitors, though the only real one to speak of is the Leaky Cask Tavern , and Joan would never do such a thing.
99	99	99	99	14	In shady corners of the town's Tavern , a world-class jeweler occasionally sets up shop for small projects.	✓ True. This is Waywocket Ningel , who can indeed be found in the Leaky Cask Tavern sometimes.
00	00	00	00	12	The operator of the General Store has far-reaching mercantile interests, and is rich far beyond his apparent wealth here in the city.	✓ Partially True. While Welby Goodbarrel is indeed a successful businessman, and owns parts of caravans and companies outside of Berinncorte , he's pretty much as wealthy as he seems.

01-20	-	-	01-40	-	No Rumor	No information is obtained.
21-27	01-15	01-09	41-45	18	The Militia keeps guards outside the Upper-Class Residential District as personal security service to the city’s elite.	 True , though the Mayor would never admit it.
28-35	16-21	10-18	46-50	8	There’s only one entrance or exit into or out of the city: the City Gates .	 True . You need only look at a map to see that this is the case.
36-42	22-27	19-27	51-56	16	Berinncorte was designed by an insane military strategist, who thought the commission was for a fortress that was easily defensible. Though the design for a regular village was flawed for the intended purpose, those erecting the city had to begin quickly, and there was not time to devise an alternative approach.	 False . Though that would certainly explain why there is only one legitimate entry/exit to the city.
43-50	28-35	28-35	57-60	14	The city was built atop an ancient burial ground, and some say it remains cursed by the restless dead to this day.	 Partially True . There are indeed bodies buried in deeper layers of sediment and rock underneath the town, and the Cistern in particular is imbued with a bit of an undead nature... but the enormous graveyard described is not the case.
51-57	36-41	36-44	61-65	18	Once, long ago, Berinncorte was ruled by a king, and was used as the very seat of power for a dominion measuring dozens of other villages.	 True . Though this was indeed long ago.
58-64	42-47	45-53	66-70	17	Hundreds of years ago, Berinncorte was a place of learning, and of high magic. Sorcerers would come from all over the Realm to practice and enhance their art.	 True . Some who today wonder at the caliber of the town’s Library have this tradition to thank.

Setting-Based Rumors & Lore
D%A	D%B	D%C	D%D	DC	Description	Veracity
65-70	48-53	54-60	71-75	15	Dark, evil Fey powers rest, patient and vile, underneath the beauty of the City Gardens .	✓ True. In fact, some of these powers manifest in the wake of the Obelisk Eruption , when Dark Fey emerge from a fissure in the City Gardens .
71-76	54-60	61-65	76-80	10	Although neither religion will admit it, the idealistic clash between the Sheergath Temple and the Zugul Church has benefitted both, in that the strife has driven the faithful to both establishments in record numbers.	✓ True , though to be fair, neither Larissa the Elder nor High Priest Cannock has taken count, nor are they consciously aware of this passive and unintended benefit.
77-82	61-66	66-72	81-85	16	At one point in its development, Berinncorte used a paranoid architect to rebuild several of its buildings. To this day, there are secret doors and rooms in some establishments!	✓ True. Several of the secret areas in buildings were indeed designed by a paranoid architect, dozens of years ago.
83-90	67-72	73-80	86-90	11	Though the Zugul Church claims it is a Lawful establishment, some within it have sworn to destroy the Sheergath Temple and its followers, no matter what the cost!	✗ False. Though there are some parishoners with a high degree of fervor, none have claimed a desire to destroy anything at all.
91-95	73-90	81-90	91-95	12	Followers of Sheergath welcome open, bloody conflict, even riots, between those of their number and devotees of Zugul .	✓ Partially True. Some particularly Chaotic of the Zugul flock have indeed pronounced this preference, but they number few, and are generally denounced as crackpots or zealots by the majority.
96-00	91-00	91-00	96-00	18	Some say that in a city of this size, it's normal to have some sort of repository for water, in case of emergencies—either to provide clean drinking water to the people, or to aid in putting out fires. Nobody in town is aware of such a structure existing in Berinncorte .	✓ True , though misleading: there is indeed a Cistern in the south of town, but its undead aura causes people to be forgetful of it, and it's ignored entirely.

Obelisk Rumors and Lore

Truly, truly rare, there are some very faint snippets of information about the Obelisk and the forces it represents that remain in the minds and hearts of those who have studied strenuously. These are collected in “FlexTable 9: Obelisk-Based Rumors”.

41-53	11-27	21-35	81-84	18	In ancient times, rituals and desperate magicks were used to keep at bay vile forces from underneath the very earth.	 True.
54-66	28-40	36-50	85-88	20	On the other side of the world we know live countless hordes of the fallen, the vile, the dread, and the horrid... all of whom resent we “bright folk” who live in the light of the Sun, and seek to destroy us for their pitiful plight in life.	 True.
67-79	41-60	51-65	89-92	16	The entire Realm is but one enormous dream, had in the mind of a sleeping giant who dwells on an island, floating amidst a sea of acid, in a far-flung world we have never heard of.	 False. Whoever came up with this was likely under the influence of... something, when they had the idea.
80-90	61-80	66-85	93-96	19	Sprinkled in forgotten locations throughout the Realm are artifacts, powerful magics which each contain a fragment of a power that might be used to combat the greatest forces that might threaten the world.	 True.
91-00	81-00	86-00	97-00	20	In olden times, a warrior, priestess, or king was selected from among a random assortment of applicants. The selected person would become a champion of the living, given special powers, and equipped with ancient relics, that they might fight off encroaching evil that threatened all.	 True.

Realm Rumors and Lore

No city is an island, and Berinncorte is no exception. Some folk speak of events and locales far beyond the city walls. These may be found in “FlexTable 10: Realm-Based Rumors”.

These tales are hints of the world-building that has gone into the Realm entire, and are mainly foreshadowing for future publications in the mythos of Aquilae.

41-48	11-23	21-32	81-84	18	Far to the north of the Realm, there lies a mysterious island, from which no one who has ventured has yet returned alive.	True.
49-56	24-32	33-43	85-90	20	A conclave of gods—the vengeful and tricksters—has created a playground of the damned, a miniature realm where the sinful and horrid may be punished, and have a chance to atone for, their dark deeds.	True.
57-64	33-45	44-56	91-92	18	Deep beneath the surface, far under the tallest mountains, there dwell the remnants of ancient creatures who ruled the Realm in times long past.	True.
65-72	46-53	57-66	93-94	18	The system of Tribute that we know, that which funds government, and empowers the gods to hear our prayers and take helpful action on our behalf, is broken and corrupt, serving only an elite few at the expense of the many.	True.
73-80	54-65	67-76	95-96	17	Despite the appearance of power in the hands of government, rulers, and gods, the truth is that a small handful of secret and ultra-powerful factions dictates their whims to the massive preponderance of the population.	False. Mostly. Kind of. Depending on how you look at it...
81-89	66-80	77-85	97-98	15	Druids to the north of the Realm have begun digging deep into the earth, in an attempt to mine the knowledge of nature long dead. There is division amongst the druid populace as to the wisdom of this approach to gaining power; they say that which is dead should be let to rest, be it sentient life or that of plants.	True. Also True is the divisiveness of the issue, as is the justification for wariness.
90-00	81-00	86-00	99-00	22	Far, far beneath the land we know and live upon, there exists a sentient force not unlike a vampire, which requires and feeds off of surface life to sustain itself. Of the many vagrants, unfortunates, and hermits who go missing every year, some portion are in fact stolen from the surface by this vampiric force.	True.

Random Encounters

Generally speaking, aside from such “intentional” rolls as described below, roll on “FlexTable 11: Berinncorte Random Encounters” every 30 minutes the party spends on the streets of Berinncorte.

Application

It’s recommended that the GM use common sense when applying Random Encounters. If the party is spending their time hunting down quests, stocking up provisions, speaking with townsfolk, and generally “staying busy”, then perhaps random encounters should be kept to a minimum. Conversely, if the group is wandering aimlessly and seems to need a bit of “focusing”, then it might be time to whip out your D% and see if you can’t spice things up a bit.

-  Use Context A:
Use during daylight hours, if no other prerequisites described below applies
-  Use Context B:
Use during evening hours.
-  Use Context C:
If the party is in the midst of a Quest or pursuit from which you would prefer they not be distracted.
-  Use Context D:
If the party is struggling to become engaged in Quests or activities.

BRE-1: Bandit

Quest: Bandit!

 Summary: A party member is robbed.

 Rewards: Up to  1 Reward Star.

 Locations: Any.

 Key NPCs: None.

 Kickoff: Random Encounter.

 Description:

A  Common Thief sneaks up on one of the PCs (randomly determine which) and steals a small amount of gold ( 2d10). Make a  DC 12 Wisdom (Perception) check for the affected PC to notice; you may allow a DC 15 check for other party members if this initial check is failed.

 If the party (or just the affected PC) gives chase, they confront the thief in one of the town's many alleys (the associated Militia Guard Post is conveniently unoccupied for these purposes).

 If a single PC confronts the thief, she will fight back; if confronted by the party entire, she will try to give the gold back and talk her way out of it. Any talking confrontation with the thief takes the form of a  Charisma (Persuasion) or Charisma (Intimidation) check, opposed by the thief's Charisma (Persuasion) check. Success means the thief allows herself to be taken in; failure means the thief attacks the party.

The GM is encouraged to reward the party with  1 Reward Star (and the pilfered gold) whether they fight or talk, so long as it is in keeping with their alignments and characters.

If the entire party fails their Wisdom (Perception) checks to kick this quest off, it is canceled. At some later point—perhaps when they are attempting to buy provisions—the affected PC realizes they are short some coin inexplicably.

Finally, if the PCs catch the thief, there is a Catalyst Impact, as follows:

 Bandit! (Apprehend):  Law +1

If the PCs apprehend the miscreant and turn him in, there is a Catalyst Impact:  Law +1.

 Bandit! (Fight):  Chaos +1

If the party fights the thief—whether this is their first choice, or if they fail a skill check and are forced to defend themselves—there is a Catalyst Impact:  Chaos +1.

This Quest ends if the party doesn't notice the theft in the first place, if they find and deal with the thief, or if they ignore the theft and continue on their way.

BRE-2: Something Shiny

Quest: Something Shiny

 Summary: The party notices an odd treasure.

 Rewards: Up to 1 pp.

 Locations: Any.

 Key NPCs: None.

 Kickoff: Random Encounter.

 Description:

A glint catches the eye of a party member—at the GM's discretion, this can be automatic, or you can provide each party member a  DC 13 Wisdom (Perception) check to notice.

Upon investigation, there is  a single platinum piece lying half-hidden in a scattering of refuse on the flagstones. It is unmarked, and other than its placement is not noteworthy in any fashion.

This treasure is exactly as innocuous as it seems, and is attached to no further intrigue. The PCs are encouraged to speculate wildly as to the piece's origins; this can also be used to throw them off the trail of a larger plot or side quest.

BRE-3: Hurried Cutpurse

Quest: Hurried Cutpurse

 Summary: A thief rushes past the party; should they pursue, the PCs may recover the stolen goods.

 Rewards: Up to 3d12 gp; possibly a silver masterwork dagger; up to  2 Reward Stars.

 Locations: Any.

 Key NPCs: None.

 Kickoff: Random Encounter.

 Description:

“Out of me way!” Someone shouts as they push past the party, apparently sprinting for their life. A hurried  DC 14 Wisdom (Perception) check by any party member essentially reveals this to be a thief on the run, fresh from a job.

 If the party gives chase, they will corner the common thief (summary profile above) in an alley (just pick the one closest to the party’s most recent location). Cornered, the thief will fight to the death, though at the GM’s discretion, a  DC 16 Charisma (Persuasion) check or a DC 14 Charisma (Intimidation) check will cause the thief to give up the loot and go in peace. The party should receive  XP for vanquishing the thief via any of these approaches.

 Hurried Cutpurse (Talk):
 Law +1

If the PCs apprehend the miscreant and talk with her successfully, there is a Catalyst Impact:  Law +1.

 Hurried Cutpurse (Fight):
 Chaos +1

If the party fights the thief—whether this is their first choice, or if they fail a skill check and are forced to defend themselves—there is a Catalyst Impact:  Chaos +1.

Whether by combat or conversation, a defeated thief will give up the following treasure:

 Defeated Common Thief

3d12 gp; silver masterwork dagger

 Larissa the Elder then approaches the party, either immediately following the looting of the thief’s body, or after the thief turns over the loot and escapes. Larissa thanks the party for hunting the evildoer down, and asks if they found her stolen dagger and money. The party then has the option of handing over some combination of the looted dagger and gold, or keeping it.

 If the party returns the looted gold, they receive  1 Reward Star. If they return the dagger, they also receive  1 Reward Star. These rewards stack. The returned-treasure rewards are assuming that the action(s) is in keeping with the party’s character; the GM is left to their discretion as to whether such action qualifies for a reward.

 Hurried Cutpurse (Return Dagger):
 Law +1

Bizarrely, if the PCs help the leader of the Chaotic temple, there is a lawful Catalyst Impact:  Law +1.

Whether or not they return the dagger and/or the gold, Larissa thanks the party for their assistance hunting down the thief. She invites them to visit the Sheergath Temple, which can serve to introduce the party to that location if they have not already been there.

BRE-4: Bungled Mugging

Quest: Bungled Mugging

 Summary: A mugging goes wrong, and the assailant lies dead before a terrified victim.

 Rewards: Up to  1 Reward Star, plus goodwill with the Militia.

 Locations: Any.

 Key NPCs: None.

 Kickoff: Random Encounter.

 Description:

The party turns a corner, and finds a disturbing scene: blood from a prone figure splattered across the flagstones, and a shaking, terrified halfling standing over it. Nearby, a bloodied dagger lies discarded.

If the PCs approach and inquire, they learn that the dead man was a  Common Thief who attacked the now-stricken halfling. In self-defense, the halfling drew his dagger, and either through luck or cunning, slew his assailant. Terrified at his half-thought deed, the halfling is now in shock, and doesn't know what to do.

The party has a few options here:

 The PCs can attempt to calm the halfling down. Any cure or other healing-related spells will do the trick, or alternately a  Charisma (Persuasion) check at DC 15 will work as well. Doing so relieves the party of further responsibility, and grants them a reward of  1 Reward Star.

 Bungled Mugging (Charisma (Persuasion)):

 Law +1

If the PCs succeed in calming the halfling, there is a Catalyst Impact:  Law +1.

 They can simply walk away, in which case, the halfling is so aghast at the party's disinterest that he recovers and runs away himself.

 Bungled Mugging (Ignore):
 Chaos +1

If the party walks away from the situation, there is a Catalyst Impact:  Chaos +1.

 The party might attack the halfling, who will be so stunned as to offer no resistance. In this scenario, the party can loot both bodies—the halfling owns the dagger and some somewhat fine Small-sized clothing, plus some stale bread and 2d12 cp. Unless this is in keeping with the party's demeanor, class, and alignment, however, the GM is encouraged to have  2d4 members of the Berinncorte Militia show up on the scene immediately following this attack to arrest them.

 Bungled Mugging (Attack):
 Chaos +1

If the party attacks the poor halfling, there is a Catalyst Impact:  Chaos +4.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

This Quest terminates if the party walks away from the halfling, if they slay the halfling and all Militia that show up, or if they successfully calm the halfling down.

BRE-5: Startled Savior

Quest: Startled Savior

 Summary: A Berinncorte Militiawoman defends a mugging victim... only to slay the attacker accidentally.

 Rewards: Up to  2 Reward Stars.

 Locations: Any.

 Key NPCs: None.

 Kickoff: The party encounters a mugging in progress.

 Description:

The PCs come across a conflict: a woman is being assaulted by a brigand. Before they can take any action, however, a third person arrives—a Berinncorte Militiawoman runs up to defend the attacked woman.

In the very first round of combat, before the party can take any action other than possibly fire ranged weapons, the Militiawoman stabs the attacker, and he slumps to the ground, dead. The victim profusely thanks her savior, but the militiawoman can't take her eyes off the newly-made corpse, as though she is realizing the enormity, justified though she was, of what she has done.

This is primarily a social challenge for the party.

 Evil characters can attack either the victim or the militiawoman. If this occurs, the militiawoman snaps out of her confusion and defends herself; the victim, now terrified and shocked beyond belief, will attempt to flee.

 They can simply walk away, in which case, the halfling is so aghast at the party's disinterest that he recovers and runs away himself.

Startled Savior (Attack): Chaos +3

If the PCs attack either person in this scenario, there is a Catalyst Impact: Chaos +3.

Most parties will speak with both the victim and the savior, and try to calm both down. Success at a DC 14 Charisma (Persuasion) check will calm the savior down to the point where she can at least return to the Barracks; this should net the succeeding PC 1 Reward Star. More valiant PCs (for example, Paladins) may wish to personally escort the stricken militiawoman back to the barracks; if such behavior is consistent with their alignment or demeanor, that PC should receive a further 1 Reward Star, for a total of 2. The GM is encouraged to roll at least once on “FlexTable 11: Berinncorte Random Encounters” on page 63) during the escort, however, just to keep things interesting.

Startled Savior (Talk): Law +1 / +2

If the party is able to succeed at a skill check here, there is a Catalyst Impact: Law +1. If they then escort the militiawoman back to the Barracks, this increases to a total impact of Law +2.

This Quest ends if the PCs leave the area, whether they’ve attacked or spoken with either person involved.

BRE-6: It Was Like This When We Got Here

Quest: It Was Like This When We Got Here

Summary: A militiaman mistakenly accuses the party of attacking him.

Rewards: Up to 1 Reward Star.

Locations: Any.

Key NPCs: None.

Kickoff: The party rounds a corner, and encounters a prone Militia member. Coming to, he accuses the PCs of attacking him.

Description:

A Berinncorte Militiaman lies on the ground, his helmet clearly dented. He comes to a few moments after the PCs approach him. Dazed, he looks around, focuses on the party, and scowls angrily. “You!” he accuses them, and tries to stand and run to raise the alarm. He’s so confused and wounded, however, that the immediately collapses.

The party effectively has three options. In 4 rounds, 1d4 additional Berinncorte Militia arrive on the scene and confront the party.

They can try and run away. In this scenario, they receive no reward, but avoid further conflict.

It Was Like This... (Ignore): Chaos +1

Ignoring the situation causes a slight Catalyst Impact: Chaos +1.

The party can try and talk the militiaman down from his confused state. Suave PCs can point out that they have no weapons drawn, or that they have stolen nothing from the man, etc. Mechanically, this takes the form of a DC 16 Charisma (Persuasion) check or a DC 18 Charisma (Intimidation) check; either will work but the party only gets to make one of these checks before other guardsmen arrive; if they are successful, then the wounded guardsman waves them off, explaining that it is a mistake on his part. Success in any vein should grant the party a reward of 1 Reward Star.

It Was Like This.. (Talk): Law +1

Successfully using a conversational skill check here generates a Catalyst Impact: Law +1.

Finally, the party can attack either the wounded guardsman and/or his comrades who arrive. Should this occur, the party can of course loot the bodies, but they should only receive XP bonuses if the behavior is consistent with their characters.

It Was Like This... (Fight): Chaos +3

Attacking anyone involved is unjustified for Lawful or Good characters, and regardless, there is a Catalyst Impact: Chaos +4.

This Quest ends if the party leaves the area, slays all the Militia involved, or succeeds in a skill check.

BRE-7: Take a Look

A tall, lithe half-elf stands leaning casually against a building. He nods confidently at you as you come into view, and nods his head as though inviting you to approach.

Should the PCs approach, they will find Kayzark, a half-elven ranger 2. He has a handful of unusual items for sale. If attacked, he will attempt to flee; if pursued, he will try to find a Militia Guard Post (“BC-8: Militia Guard Posts”) and get some assistance from the Berinncorte Militia,  1d2+1 of whom will happen to be at the Post upon his arrival.

Despite the shady demeanor and CN alignment, Kayzark is in fact a legitimate businessman, though nobody inquires too closely as to how he procures his unique assortment of wares.

Table 5: Kayzark’s Wares

Type	Item	Price
Misc	Key, Wax Blank	20 gp
Misc	Lock, Good	82 gp
Animal	Falconry Gauntlet	12 gp
Gear	Oil, Lamp	1 sp
Gear	Sunrod	4 gp
Gear	Soap	2 cp
Gear	Tent, Small	6 gp

BRE-8: Brother, Have You Heard?

 A plainly-dressed, but generally pleasant-looking gentleman stands in the midst of an intersection, waving his hands plaintively yet politely at any passersby. Upon seeing the party, he gestures to the PCs invitingly.

If not completely ignored, this man will speak at great length, loudly, about the virtues of the Zugul Church, directing the PCs to visit the Church with every overly-emoted claim of praise.

The main function of this encounter is to make the party aware, both of the Zugul Church’s presence in the town, and of its likely influence, for someone to be so devoted to it. Simply put, it gives the PCs a reason to visit.

Treat this as a townsfolk:

Except for his overly-zealous proselytizing, the man is both harmless and unremarkable. If attacked, he is found to carry  8 cp and a beggar’s bowl.

 If accompanied back to the Church by a well-meaning party or PC, he is thankful; if such action is consistent with the alignment or class of the PC involved, s/he should receive  1 Reward Star as a bonus.

 Brother, Have You Heard? (Escort):
 Law +1

Walking the man back to the Church creates a Catalyst Impact:  Law +1.

BRE-9: Egads, The Bats

 1d4+1 Bats attack the party without warning. At the GM’s discretion, a  DC 14 Wisdom (Perception) check will give the party a round to either prepare or avoid the bats. Other than the normal  XP reward, the bats of course carry no treasure.

This encounter should apply only at night; otherwise you may either re-roll, or treat this result as “no encounter”.

BRE-10: Drunken Cryptkeeper

The party comes across the slovenly and inebriated figure of Cryptkeeper Gurth stumbling around town. Whether fresh from a visit to the town Tavern, or en route from his Shack, it’s hard to tell.

 If the party follows Gurth, he leads them to the closest of these two destinations based on where they came across him.

Gurth takes no heed of the party, even if they confront him; he simply walks around them, seemingly gazing at something long in the distance and ignoring the PCs entirely.

BRE-11: Dog Pack Attack

 2d4-1 Dogs (minimum 1) attack the party without warning. At the GM's discretion, a  DC 14 Wisdom (Perception) check will give the party a round to either prepare or avoid the dog pack.

Other than the normal XP reward, the dogs of course carry no treasure.

BRE-12: A Spider Beside Her

 1d3 Scarlet Spiders attack the party without warning. At the GM's discretion, a  DC 19 Wisdom (Perception) check will give the party a round to either prepare or avoid the spiders.

Other than the normal XP reward, the spiders of course carry no treasure.

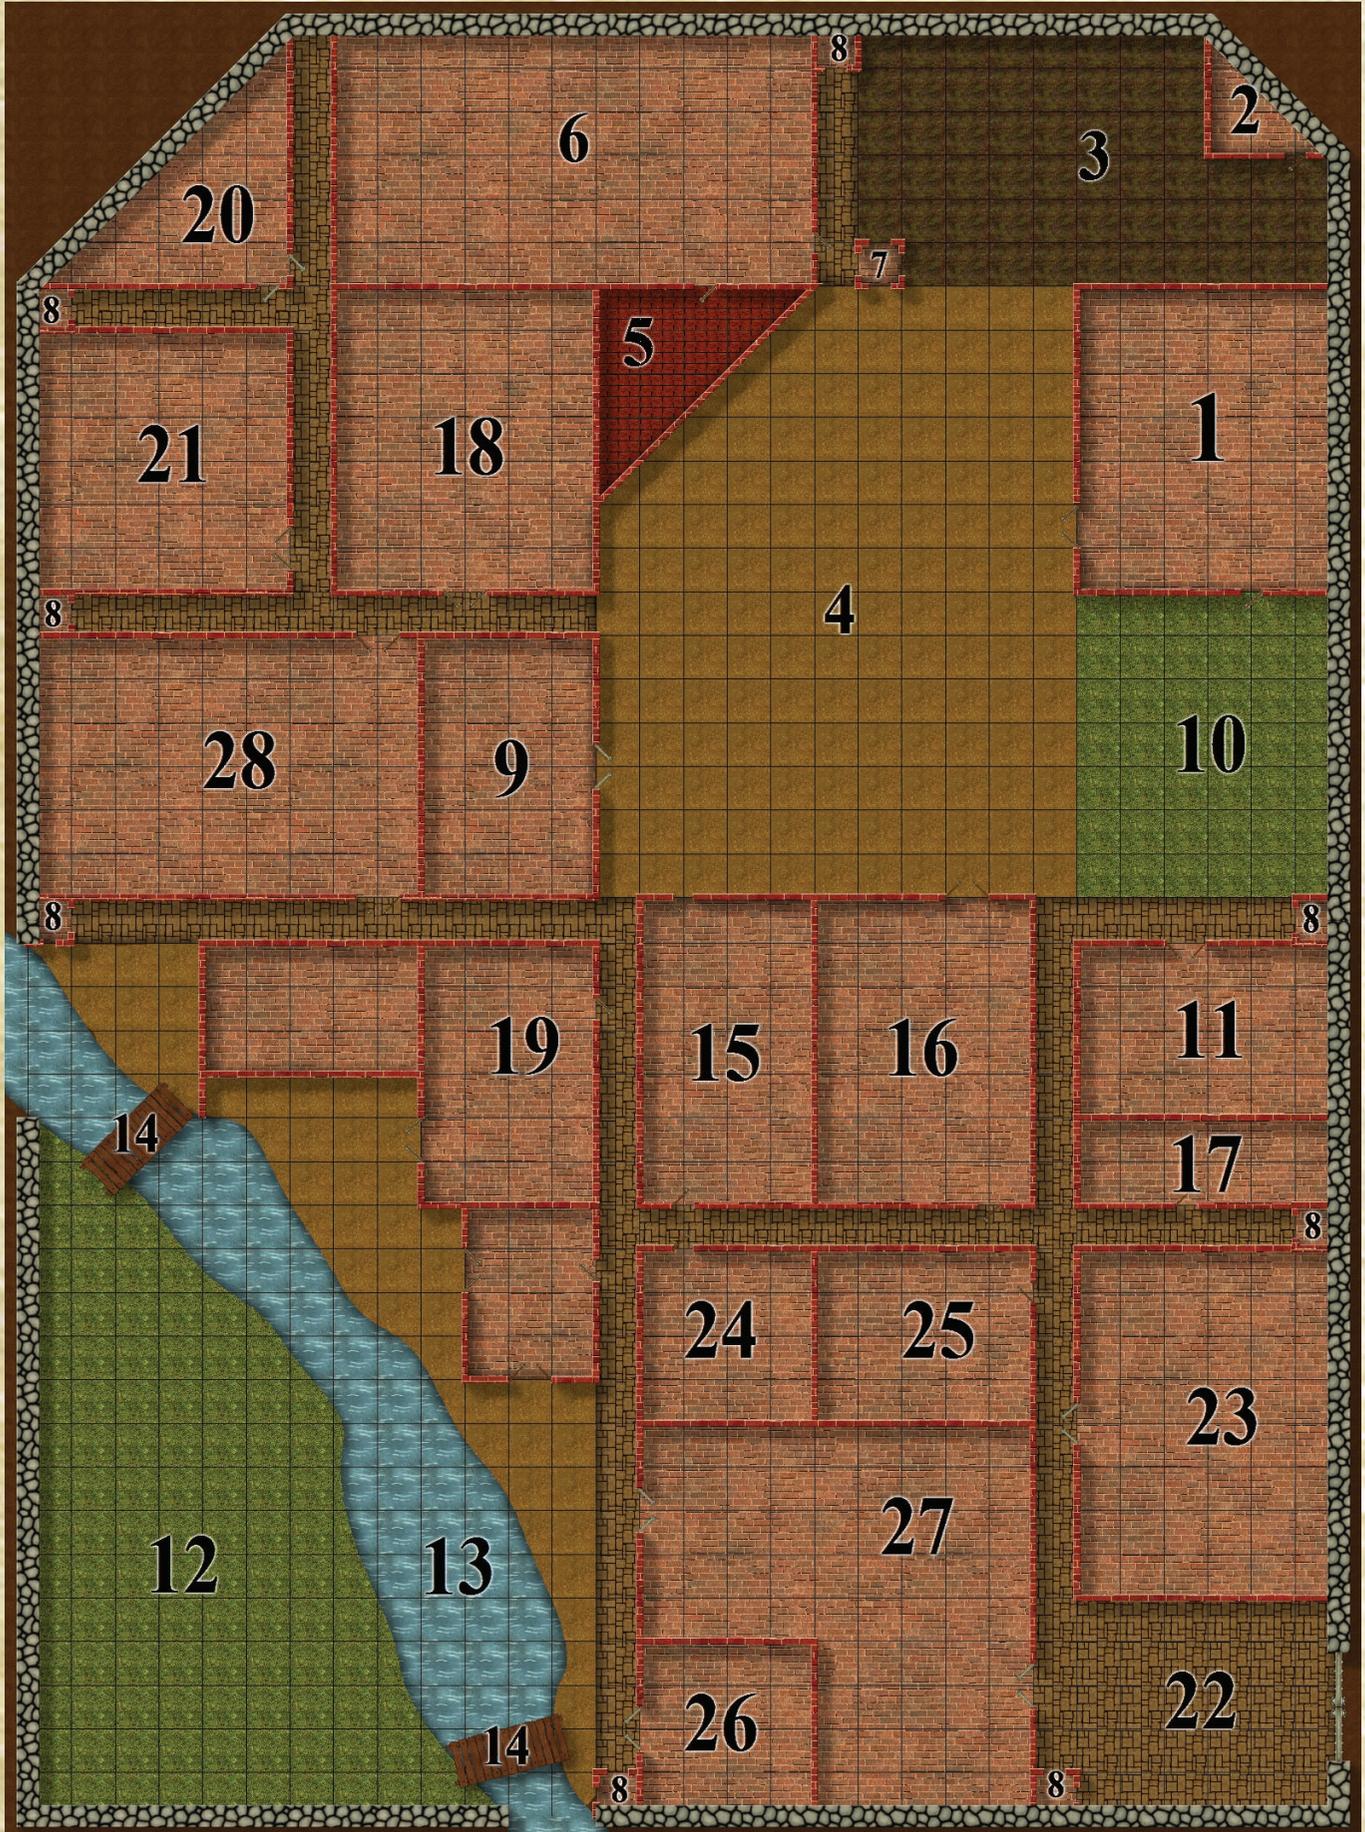

BRE-13: Egads, More Bats

One Bat Swarm attack the party without warning. At the GM's discretion, a  DC 16 Wisdom (Perception) check will give the party a round to either prepare or avoid the bats.

Other than the normal XP reward, the bats of course carry no treasure.

This encounter should apply only at night; otherwise you may either re-roll, or treat this result as “no encounter”.

BC-I: Zugul Church Overview

Upon entering the church, read the following text aloud to the players. Only read the italicized text if it is determined that High Priest Cannock is reading a sermon (see Sermons, below).

 You enter a church that seems twice the size it seemed from outside. Sculptures depicting epic battles and holy conflicts surround each column, and the windows seem to have been positioned so as to fill the chamber with light no matter what time of day it is. Vaulted ceilings reach 30' above you, with additional frescoes and sculpture work adorning seemingly every surface.

At the front of the church is an altar so plain and undecorated that it seems almost startlingly out of place. A pulpit all in white stands to the left of the altar.

Behind it stands a tall, gaunt man with a quiet yet imposing demeanor. Having paused for dramatic effect as you entered, he resumes his speech in a solid, impassioned tone.

This church is the largest in town, and rivals the Mayor's House in opulence and size. To any outsider, it's immediately clear that aside from the official political center, this church is a major focus of the town.

During daylight hours, there will be  2d8 parishioners present in the pews; after hours, there may yet be  1d6-2 people praying in quiet solitude with some candles lit here and there.

From a statistics standpoint, treat these parishioners as townsfolk.

Random Key NPCs

It is left to the GM to determine to what extent significant, named NPCs are there, and if the party recognizes them. If any key NPCs are present, unless there is a sermon being conducted, the party may approach and speak with them; in most cases, the NPCs will act just as they would if encountered in their "home turf" unless there is a specific note to the contrary, or if as GM you feel it would not make sense for the character to say or act in a certain manner in a church.

Forcing Introductions

If your players are having a hard time meeting important townsfolk, the Zugul Church is a perfect opportunity to force an introduction. One or more key NPCs just happen to be present when the party enters; seeing a new face, or otherwise being intrigued by some aspect of the PCs (race, class, facial or other notable features), that NPC approaches the party and engages them in conversation. As GM, you are encouraged, not to “railroad” the party to investigate specific aspects of the city, but certainly to force the party into an appreciation of all that Berinncorte has to offer.

Remember: the impact of the Obelisk Eruption and later events of this adventure rely heavily on the party having established some relationships with key NPCs in the city!

Among other ecclesiastical brethren, this is where High Priest Cannock can typically be found. In the evenings, he will be in the Undercroft, tending to administrative duties or asleep. There is very little reason for him to leave the confines of the church grounds; his staff typically handle all external duties and resupply the facility.

be present as well. During a Sermon, there is an  80% chance Maghana is in attendance, reverently bowing her head on the side of the altar opposite the pulpit; if a sermon is not being conducted, this chance dips to  40%. When not in church, she might be found in the Undercroft, tending to her clerical duties.

Finally, between 1 and 4 Clerical Lay Staff are typically in attendance whether there is a sermon going on or not.

Sermons

When the party enters the vicinity (areas 4 or 10, or upon entering the church itself), there is a  60% chance the High Priest is not only present, but preaching a sermon. If he is, then increase the congregation present to  3d12+4.

If not actively delivering a sermon, he is either discussing some spiritual matter with one of his flock ( 40%), or fussing about the church interior, tidying up or resupplying candles.

Privately make a  Wisdom (Perception) check for any Rogues in the party who are within earshot of his sermons for 5 minutes or more; this check is DC 12 to sense that he knows far more about locks and traps than he should as a typical cleric; DC 16 to know that a particular detail would only be known by someone familiar with the tools involved. In either case, party rogues should be left curious at the least if they succeed on either check.

BC-I: Zugul Church Ground Floor Map

Unless otherwise noted, High Priest Cannock usually holds the key to locked doors, though at your discretion, he may give the key to Cleric Maghana or stow it in his Personal Quarters.

The dark circles scattered throughout each floor of the church are circular pillars which support the building and its roof.

CHG-1: Main Entrance

These double doors open to the Town Square, and are kept open during daylight hours. Usually, they're also open after dusk, though at night, they're locked

🔒 Locked Reinforced Main Entrance

CHG-2: Garden Entrance

Most congregants use the Main Entrance to come and go. This smaller, single-door set to the south opens onto the Zugul Church Garden and is typically used by those wishing to get a breath of fresh air, or to stroll about the garden before or after a sermon. It is open during daylight hours, and locked at sundown.

🔒 Locked Reinforced Garden Entrance

CHG-3: Secret Entrance

Only High Priest Cannock and Cleric Maghana know of this entrance; no other acolytes are aware of its existence. Concealed against a carved gold-relief effect is a button which releases a spring; the wooden panel may then be pushed inward, revealing a hollow in the north wall of the church which heads to the Graveyard. There is no mechanism on the other side to release the panel, which swings back into place behind anyone leaving the church in this manner.

From within the church, the check is  Wisdom (Perception) DC 18 to notice the button... but only for those within 10' of the door, which would mean having to be standing at or near the Altar. Thus, it would be quite challenging to spot the secret during a Sermon or generally speaking during daylight hours, when other townsfolk and clergy would be present.

This secret exit was meant to be a means of urgent escape from the church in the event of a riot or fire; it was never meant to be used to gain ingress. As a result, on the Graveyard side of the door, the profile is as follows:

🔒 Secret Zugul Church Door (Graveyard Side)

Break DC 16; Wisdom (Perception) DC 18; Disable Device DC 14

CHG-4: Staircase

A narrow marble staircase descends into the relative darkness below.

This leads to the Undercroft and is otherwise unremarkable.

CHG-5: Altar

The altarpiece of the church is a simple, uncarved stone slab. It is simply adorned with a cloth and little else.

There is typically a very simple, unadorned white or yellow cloth laid atop it. It has no special or magical properties other than being a focal point for services.

The dark-blue line to the south represents the start of the stage, which is 2' taller than the rest of the main floor.

Any PC searching the altar may make a DC 13 Wisdom (Perception) check; success means they find a small note, which sparks the following Quest.

🏆 Quest: Under, Under, Under

 Summary: A note on the altar indicates another secret below the church.

 Rewards: jeweled dagger (125 gp); up to  2 Reward Stars.

 Locations: Altar of Zugul Church.

 Key NPCs: None.

 Kickoff: Discovering a note hidden on the Altar.

Description:

A note is hidden behind the altar of the Zugul Church. The paper is low-quality, and appears as though it may have been torn from a book and re-used. Crude handwriting says only "under, under, under" in Common.

The true meaning of this is that under the church is of course the undercroft; directly underneath this location is a rectangular table; underneath that can be found a secret.

Whether the PCs figure this cryptic message out, or if they are simply searching every single table and location meticulously, the corresponding secret can be found in the Common Area. In that area is a rectangular table, in roughly the center of that space. Searching underneath that table will yield a  jeweled dagger worth 125 gp.

It is recommended that the GM only award a  1 Reward Star bonus to a single party member, and then only if they decipher the riddle rather than simply search at random.

Those lacking this note must pass a  DC 18 Wisdom (Perception) check to locate the treasure.

Under, Under, Under (Discover): Love +1

Merely by discovering the note, there is a Catalyst Impact:  Love +1.

The note, and treasure, were left here by Otibus, as an unusually romantic gift for his wife Seamstress to find. He set this up more than a year ago, and although the jeweled dagger represents a significant gift and investment, his forgetful nature and the demands of day-to-day life have let this project fall by the wayside.

If the party starts showing the dagger to various NPCs in an attempt to discover its original owner, Otibus will indeed recognize it, though as he had forgotten it entirely, he won't push too hard to get it back. If the party then still gives the dagger back, and such an action is consistent with their alignment (e.g., a doo-gooder Paladin), then feel free to grant a further reward of  1 Reward Star.

Under, Under, Under (Return): Love +1, Law +2

Finding Otibus, speaking with him about the note and dagger, and trying to return it, all generate a total Catalyst Impact of  Love +1,  Law +2.

This Quest ends only if the party speaks with Otibus and tries to return the dagger; until then, the Quest remains open, meaning that the PCs can return the dagger at any time.

CHG-6: Shrine

 This prayer space is lit by handfuls of candles. An almost palpable aura of peace and concentration fills the air as you enter. To the north is a closed, simple wooden door.

On the eastern side of the church, nestled between two pillars, is a shrine. At any given time, this quiet space has a  30% chance of having  1d2 congregants (treat as townsfolk) kneeling in prayer amongst the candles.

A simple, unlocked wooden door to the north opens onto the back of the stage, from which one might easily sneak downstairs.

Assuming nobody else is in the Shrine, anyone attempting to sneak downstairs via this route will have to make a DC 16 Dexterity (Stealth) check to avoid being seen by anyone elsewhere on the stage (e.g., at the Altar, or speaking at the Pulpit, below). During a Sermon, this check's difficulty increases to DC 18. A single successful check means a character avoids detection and makes it downstairs (see Undercroft); failure means they are noticed, which will typically interrupt church services and require some quick-thinking explanation when the culprit is confronted!

Anyone in the Shrine notices the activity automatically. A separate Dexterity (Stealth) check is required for each character making the attempt. A similar attempt at the same difficulties is required when returning upstairs from the Undercroft.

CHG-7: Sculptures

Only read the italicized portion below if there is at least one PC who has at least 1 rank in the Craft (Stonemasonry) skill.

 In the southwest and southeast corners, at the back of the church, stand two well-carved statues. Both appear to be of the same figure: a strong, masculine deity, stripped to the waist, with shoulder-length hair, carrying an almost comically small light mace in one hand.

The pieces appear of very high quality, though perhaps not so much so as to be beyond the skill capabilities likely to exist in a town of this size.

In the southern corners of the church are pieces of elaborate stonework. A  Knowledge (Religion) check at DC 12 identifies the scenes as Zugul, a chosen warrior vanquishing chaos. The sculptures are otherwise unremarkable, though if questioned about them, members of the church clergy will talk at great length about the scenes and their history.

CHG-8: Pulpit

 Based on appearance, it would seem the centerpiece of the church's front is not the plainly-adorned altar, but rather this highly-polished and beautifully-wrought wooden pulpit.

High Priest Cannock delivers his Sermons from this pulpit. He is typically the only person who speaks from the podium. It would be odd, if not bizarre, for any member of the party to ascend to the stage, move behind the pulpit, and examine it during daylight hours, or indeed during any time when the church is occupied by any congregants.

That said, behind the pulpit is a shelf, about thigh-level on an adult human, containing a handful of ordinary candles, a tinderbox, and some miscellaneous parchment with scrawlings in Cannock's handwriting. Although indecipherable to anyone but him, they contain reminders and notes for use in his sermons. Most of them are quite old—years—and have not been referenced in quite some time.

Quest: Dear One, If Thee Read

 Summary: The party discovers a love note, and may track down its author and decipher its intent

 Rewards: Up to  2 Reward Stars.

 Locations: Pulpit of Zugul Church.

 Key NPCs: Cleric Maghana; High Priest Cannock.

 Kickoff: If the party searches the pulpit, they may discover a love note.

Description:

Make a  DC 12 Wisdom (Perception) check for any PC searching the pulpit; success means they have found the love note.

Feel free to show the players the following text of the note:

dear one, if thee read... knowa that i love thee caith all mine heart. though it not be proper...

The note is stained, either with water or tears, it's unclear. It's crumpled, as well, in the manner of the other papers behind the pulpit.

All in all, it seems as though whomever placed it here meant for it to go unnoticed for a time. From its placement here at the pulpit, it's a safe conclusion that the note was meant for none other than High Priest Cannock himself... though it's a mystery as to who placed it there.

Dear One, If Thee Read (Initiate):

 Love +5,  Chaos +2

Merely discovering this note, and initiating this quest, has a Catalyst Impact of  Love +5,  Chaos +2.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts in this Quest.

 The party may simply let the note go and perform no further investigation.

 The PCs may instead wish to inquire with various members of the Zugul Church in an attempt to discover the note's author. Doing so will require some subtlety, however, as outright asking “who left this love note for the high priest” will cause immediate suspicion and probably some pointed inquiry within the structure of the Church.

Questioning Cleric Maghana about the note will yield resistance, and she will attempt to end the conversation immediately. When she does, success at a  DC 14 Wisdom (Perception) check will reveal that she becomes anxious to the point of nearly hyperventilating. At this stage of conversation, showing any compassion or revealing pointed suspicion will get her to admit the truth.

Cleric Maghana wrote the note in a moment of weakness, and left it at the pulpit on an impulse. She planted it about a week ago, and immediately regretted it... but the High Priest began a sermon right afterwards, and she wasn't able to retrieve it. Since then, every time she has tried to get the note back, there hasn't been a good, safe time where nobody else wasn't watching. In the nighttime, she has several times gotten so far as to approach the pulpit... but she's always stopped herself.

Appropriate or not, the note does contain Maghana's true feelings about Cannock, and there is a part of her that wanted her feelings revealed.

At this point, Maghana is relieved that the note is no longer volatile, waiting to be found by Cannock... but right thereafter, her anxiety spikes again when she asks what the party's intent is, now that they know the truth.

The party now has a few options:

 They may turn Maghana in, so to speak, and tell Cannock the story. This will immediately trigger the Obelisk Eruption, and will force a determination of Cleric Maghana as the Prime Catalyst. Maghana will plead, resignedly, with the party not to do this, but she will not forcibly stop them from doing so. Faced with the reality of his colleague's convictions, Cannock will attempt to dismiss them as an ill-meant joke, at which point the Eruption will distract everyone from the proceedings. Assuming this action is consistent with their character and alignments, turning the love-lorn cleric in will net the party another reward of  1 Reward Star.

 Instead, the party may pledge to keep the secret. This automatically changes Maghana's Attitude to Helpful, and she will do pretty much anything to aid the party if it's within her power. Unless this sympathetic approach is opposed to their personalities, keeping the cleric's secret should benefit the party of another  1 Reward Star. Perhaps obviously, it is not possible to gain both this, and the previously-mentioned award for “turning her in”.

The party may try to exact reward or favor from the cleric to keep their silence; unfortunately, she has very little in the way of material possessions, and her vows (as well as her personal preferences and desires!) prevent her from offering physical comfort. At the GM's discretion, her "favor" may take the form of  1d4+1 rolls on the Rumors and Lore table as she shares what she knows about the town that might be of interest to the PCs.

Even with her secret kept, it's still possible for Maghana to be the Prime Catalyst of the Obelisk Eruption; she remains wildly conflicted between her duty and her passion, and that strife continues to gnaw away at her.

 Dear One, If Thee Read (Keep the Secret):
 Love +3,  Chaos +2

Completing the Quest by keeping Maghana's secret has a Catalyst Impact of  Love +3,  Chaos +2.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts in this Quest.

Sadly for Maghana, there is truly no resolution to her feelings that will satisfy her passion... for better or for worse, the situation is resolved for her when Cannock dies in the Obelisk Eruption.

BC-I: Zugul Church Undercroft Map

CHU-1: Staircase

- Steps here lead up, into a considerably more brightly-lit environment.

This staircase leads to the ground floor of the church.

CHU-2: Common Area

- A wide, long chamber adjoins the area south of the staircase. Various tables and chairs appear to be haphazardly scattered about. Wall sconces and candles give the area a cheery glow despite it being somewhat cold and underground. The marble floor underneath seems to penetrate the comfort of your boots.

A huge underground space, this area is packed with tables, chairs, and desks. It is used by ecclesiastical staff for a number of different functions: as a mess hall for meals, as a space for group prayer for a particular purpose not well suited to public, private events or support functions (such as for a gathering following the celebration of the life of a departed loved one), church social events, and so on.

During daylight hours, there is a  30% chance there will be 2d4 Acolytes here, chatting, eating, or helping organize the room for the next upcoming event.

Anyone sneaking downstairs may attempt to pass unnoticed to the hallway to the south; this is a  DC 14 Dexterity (Stealth) check. Those noticed, or those not attempting to sneak past, will be greeted warmly and asked if they are here for “the function”. Some quick thinking (and a successful  DC 14 Charisma (Deception) check) convinces the clergy that the PC(s) are indeed here for that purpose, albeit a bit early. At the GM’s discretion, they may then be allowed to wander about the undercroft as they wish prior to the event commencing.

The party may be aware of the Crypt already. They might come by this knowledge by speaking with Maghana, Cannock, a church staff member, or townsfolk, and asking “what’s under the church”, or asking about how expansive or grand the building appears. If they know of the Crypt, the difficulty of the Charisma (Deception) check mentioned above falls to  DC 12, and may be attempted using Charisma (Persuasion) or Knowledge (Religion) instead.

Please note, the rectangular table somewhat in the middle of this area is an important part of Quest: Under, Under, Under (page 74).

CHU-3: Cleric Maghana’s Quarters

- These are clearly living quarters, built around the column in the northeast corner. To the southwest is a wooden door, presumably leading to a closet. The chamber’s furnishings are simple, but sufficient: a straw bed, a writing desk, a round stool, and a rug with the colors of the church embroidered plainly. Writing supplies appear to have been used at the desk recently; a quill and some paper are scattered about.

These are the private quarters afforded to Cleric Maghana. During daylight hours, there is only a  5% chance that she will be found here; in the evening, this grows to  40%. Her room’s door is typically locked, whether or not she is within.

The room itself is fairly Spartan, and contains only a bed, a small desk with writing equipment and personal effects, and a mirror. In the middle of the room is a threadbare rug in the colors of the church.

Her closet, to the west of her room, is not locked, and contains only clothing:

Maghana’s Closet

4 sets of cleric vestments (Zugul Church)

CHU-4: Guest Room 1

- A very plain, Spartan room: it holds only a bed, small table, and a tiny stool. A closet with a wooden door is to the west, and a small rug faded with the church’s colors lies in the middle of the empty space.

Feel free to amend the description above, based on whether the party has first visited the very similar CHU-5: Guest Room.

This is one of two spare rooms used by the church for various purposes—as a rest home for elderly or impoverished congregants, as a safe refuge for those escaping domestic violence or other threats, or for visiting clergy from other churches.

Its minimalist furnishings consist of a bed, a small table with writing supplies, a three-legged stool, a small hand mirror (2 gp), and an oval rug in the center of the floor, woven in the church’s colors.

The closet to the west is a simple, unlocked wooden door and contains one spare set of shoddy clothes.

CHU-5: Guest Room 2

- A very plain, Spartan room: it holds only a bed, small table, and a tiny stool. A small rug faded with the church's colors lies in the middle of the empty space. A closet with a wooden door is to the west, but appears to have been protected by a padlock.

Feel free to amend the description above, based on whether the party has yet already visited the similarly-described CHU-4: Guest Room 1.

This room is identical to Guest Room 1 above. A simple rusted padlock has been applied to the door, however:

Quest: Missing Figure

 Summary: A figurine has gone missing from the Shrine on the ground floor of the Zugul Church; it was misplaced in one of the spare guest quarters in the Undercroft.

 Rewards: 25 gp; up to  1 Reward Star.

 Locations: Zuglu Church Undercroft.

 Key NPCs: Any Zugul Church officials.

 Kickoff: Either finding the figurine in CHU-5: Guest Room, or speaking with a member of the clerical staff about recent events.

 Description:

In the closet of CHU-5: Guest Room is a small clay figurine of Zugul mythology. Any PC who has been on the ground floor of the Zugul Church and seen (or even passed by) the sculptures there automatically recognizes the figure of Zugul; a quick  Knowledge (Religion) or Knowledge (Local) check at DC 12 will also reveal this information.

Although worthless on its own, the figurine had gone missing from the Shrine upstairs; returning it to any Zugul Church member will net a  25 gp reward (as well as  1 Reward Star), and will change all church staffs' Attitude toward the party to Helpful. If the party is already on Helpful terms with church staff, returning the figurine nets the reward but no further change to Attitude.

 Missing Figure (Return):  Law +1

Returning the figurine has a Catalyst Impact:  Law +1.

 Missing Figure (Keep):
 Chaos +1

Keeping the figurine—at least for the time being—creates a Catalyst Impact:  Chaos +1.

This Quest terminates only if the figurine is returned or sold; up until one of these things occurs, the party may theoretically return the item at any time.

CHU-6: High Priest's Quarters

Only read the italicized portion if the party has previously visited at least one other bedchamber here in the Undercroft.

 This room is a bit larger than others you have seen in the Undercroft.

The stone floor may be cold, but this chamber feels comfortable. It appears to have been built around two pillars to the west, but that there are two of them, and that they flank the entry door, give the room a regal feel rather than accidental. A closet is to the east behind a wooden door.

These are the personal quarters of High Priest Cannock. Despite his lofty position, this room is not dissimilar in its contents from the other quarters in the undercroft: a bed, a desk with writing supplies, a mirror, a rug in the church's colors, and a stool.

A  DC 12 Wisdom (Perception) check does tell any party member that the colors and quality of the furnishings are a bit higher than those in other rooms, but the difference is not so significant as to indicate corruption or even avarice. Make the check in this room only if the party has visited other rooms; otherwise, make the check upon entering any one of the other rooms in the church Undercroft—and then only once for entering that room.

CHU-7: Kitchen / Pantry Closet

 The north edge of this long room contains dozens of shelves lined with hundreds of miscellaneous cooking supplies—pots, pans, cups, plates, and silverware; as well as shelf-stable food items. The equipment appears to be old and dinged-up, but serviceable; likewise, the food seems to be simple but nourishing fare—what one might expect of a church pantry, in fact.

For those seeking to loot the premises, there is nothing in this room that could be resold for a profit, though a hungry adventurer might sneak a handful of carrots or the like.

In game mechanics, any PC may resupply up to  10 rations if they can cope with the fact that they will have literally taken food from the mouths of well-meaning clergy in doing so.

CHU-8: High Priest's Closet

Only read the italicized portion if the PCs have encountered at least one other door and/or lock in any buildings in town.

 This door seems a bit sturdier and its lock better-constructed than some others you have encountered in Berinncorte.

This would seem to be a simple closet door; however, it is locked.

The door to this closet is locked:

Locked High Priest Closet Door

Break DC 16; Disable Device DC 13

The High Priest himself always bears the key.

Within the closet are the following:

High Priest's Closet

3 sets of clerical vestments (Zugul Church); 1 special-occasion vestments (50 gp); unlocked, simple wooden box with 35 gp and an amethyst worth 50 gp

The special-occasional vestments with gold inlays would have to be sold outside the city, lest well-meaning townsfolk turn the PCs in for theft of such obvious church finery.

CHU-9: Church Storage

 Dust and a musty odor greet you as you swing wide the unlocked wooden door. Piles of extra stools lie strewn about a large table; in the corner is one of the pillars that support the church above.

In the corner of the Undercroft's Common Area is a storage room built around one of the building's pillars. The door to the south bears no lock. Inside are a pile of 15 three-legged wooden stools, a small waist-high table, and a handful of regular-sized rats.

Upon entering the room, the rats disperse quickly with a minor cacophony of squeaks; they have no combat presence or value.

CHU-10: Crypt

 You turn a corner, and although the wall-sconce lighting remains as even as it is elsewhere in the Undercroft, it feels more dim and yet more even. A sense of calm and rest pervades here.

A wide space of carved marble cobblestones contains two support pillars and three carved-stone tombs, waist-high. Clusters of candles are set up on the floor near each. Shadows flicker about, but there feels nothing sinister about this place of repose.

This large chamber is always well-lit with candles around the perimeter. To the north and east are simple carved-stone biers bearing religious iconography. A  DC 15 Knowledge (Religion) check will reveal that those interred are likely heroes and bringers of the faith who fell in conflict.

Typically, there will be  1d4-1 church Acolytes present, praying or tending to the candles. During daylight hours, there is a  25% chance of 1d2+1 townsfolk being present as well.

 In fact, these tombs contain relics of immense power. None in town are aware of the relics, not even the High Priest or his ecclesiastical staff. To them, these tombs are simply noteworthy in the context of historical events of the church.

Indeed, it is outside the context of this adventure to reveal the true nature of these relics. Their eventual importance to the overall  Adventure Path and mythology of the greater region is mentioned here only so that you, as a GM, can dissuade the PCs from despoiling or stealing the tombs or bodies within, or otherwise rendering the contents unusable in future adventures.

The tombs are solid stone. The difficulties listed below are intentionally high for the relative challenge of this adventure, and are meant to prevent or dissuade the party from interfering with the contents for the time being.

Stone Tombs

Break DC 35

Although certainly important, the tombs bear no magical barriers or other protection. They emit a faint  aura of magic and law.

 At the GM's discretion, you may wish to persuade PCs who are dead-set on interfering with these tombs to recognize the possible discrepancy between stone that seems incredibly difficult to move or break, and the lack of magical protection or aura. In fact, this is intentional: those who assembled these tombs originally wanted it to be difficult to interfere with the contents, but not that they were so obviously protected that it would be very attractive for powerful thieves or chaotic forces to make it a priority to get inside. In short, the tombs are "hiding in plain sight", in a way.

BC-2: Cryptkeeper's Shack Overview

Owing to the Shack's tiny size and reclusive nature, there is no need to populate it with Random Key NPCs as you would with most Areas of Interest.

Upon approaching within 20 ft. of this structure, read the following text aloud. Only read the italicized portion if the party is there after dark.

☐ Nestled in the corner of the graveyard, against the far corner of the village wall, is a shoddy lean-to. It looks about to collapse at any moment, and appears to be held together with twine and luck. What passes for the door appears to be a misshapen wooden plank that doesn't quite entirely cover a rectangular hole in the south side of the structure.

From within, you see the dingy orange flutters of a single candle. It fails to provide a view of much other than the shack's single occupant—a filthy gnome. He is hunched over the candle and is using his hand to scrape food of some kind into his mouth from a tin plate.

The shack is pretty much as it seems—little more, really, than a maintenance shed for the upkeep of the church grounds. The filthy and hunched gnomish Cryptkeeper Gurth is neither deaf nor dumb, but generally pretends to be both as he is viciously antisocial and solitary.

Ordinarily, such a man would be a hermit, and would live far outside the town's borders. Gurth, however, has a taste for alcohol, and so needs some sort of income and access to his vice. The stipend the church pays him for his service, and the location of the city's tavern right across the town square, nicely address both of these needs.

Gurth certainly has no formal training, or indeed any real relationship with any other person in town. The exception is High Priest Cannock, who pays him his stipend. Other than the monthly payment, both men are comfortable ignoring the other the rest of the time. Despite his lack of formal skills, he has cobbled together a set of shady talents along the years; for mechanical purposes, these count as having abilities similar to a first-level rogue.

BC-2: Cryptkeeper's Shack Map

CKS-1: Entrance

☐ The wooden entrance door is weathered and unlocked. It's a small house, and not sturdy. Yet it stands, and holds furnishings sufficient for its sole occupant. Within is a table, which holds the house's sole light source; a bed; and a cracked stool. The floorboards are battered and stained—only modestly better than raw dirt, in truth.

The entire shack is the living definition of the word “ramshackle”, though it does feel quite cozy. Entry could probably be accomplished by bashing one of the walls with sufficient strength, but formal ingress is provided via a standard-issue door. There is neither lock nor key, as the Cryptkeeper is none too concerned about anyone finding his valuables.

CKS-2: Table

☐ Against the hypotenuse of the shack's triangle sits a simple wooden table. It holds a few necessities and eating implements.

One of the fringe benefits from working the graveyard, and near a church, is that there is always a steady supply of candles; one is nearly always lit here, and a handful of extras typically lies nearby.

CKS-3: Bed

☐ Despite the comparatively slovenly surroundings, the sleep accommodations here are surprisingly comfortable. Heavens knows how Gurth keeps things clean, but a straw bed with two pillows sits in a corner of the shack. Gurth's two clay jugs usually sit next to the bed.

One of the jugs mentioned has fresh water, and the other is either empty, or has some rare indulgence like juice, wine, or ale.

CKS-4: Firepit

☐ In the northern corner of the shack, the wooden floorboards have been pried away, and stones (perhaps stolen from building sites, the church's undercroft, or the graveyard itself) have been laid to form a fireproof basis for a firepit.

Here is where the Cryptkeeper prepares his meager meals, and keeps warm during colder climes. When the PCs enter the Shack, the embers here indicate a recent fire.

CKS-5: Secret Stash

If the PCs intentionally search the ash and trash pile on the other side of the firepit, make a A DC 12 Wisdom (Perception) check. If the party is instead simply standing by and searching the rest of the Shack, make a passive A DC 18 Wisdom (Perception) check for each party member. Success at any of these, by any PC, yields the following; if none of these scenarios grants success, ignore this location entirely as the party does not discover it.

 Underneath the refuse, soot and refuse in the far corner of the firepit is a glint that does not belong. Some quick searching uncovers a tiny stash of valuables.

At the very apex of the firepit's corner, buried underneath a pile of ash, and mixed in with ancient feces, the Cryptkeeper holds his life's savings and emergency funds. There is no trap or lock—disgust and discomfort have always provided all needed security.

Cryptkeeper's Stash

18 pp; one diamond-shaped garnet (34 gp); and 2d6 pearls (each worth 7 gp)

BC-3: Graveyard Overview

Regardless of the time of day or other circumstances, read the following aloud to the party when they enter the graveyard:

☐ This patch of grassland is dotted with the expected gravestones, ranging in sophistication from simple stone markers to elaborately-carved plinths. The yard itself appears well-maintained, with trimmed grass and occasional wildflowers here and there.

Despite the somber purpose, the graveyard is precisely and only what it appears to be. None of the bodies here interred rests poorly, and there is no undead presence here.

Detect spells will reveal nothing other than corpses, and Cryptkeeper Gurth is a competent and straightforward steward of the land and its contents.

BC-3: Graveyard Map

A players' version of this map is available on page 467.

GRV-1: Mayor's Guard Post

GRV-2: Militia Guard Post

GRV-3: Alley

This alley separates the graveyard from the Mayor's House. It is otherwise nondescript, though given the importance of the Mayor's residence and offices, the Militia Guard Post to the north is always staffed with at least one Berinncorte Militia.

GRV-4: Secret Exit from Zugul Church

This is where the secret entrance in the Zugul Church exits into the graveyard.

GRV-5: Cryptkeeper's Shack

GRV-6: Zugul Church

GRV-7: Town Square

BC-4: Town Square Overview

Although geographically a bit north of center, this open area is clearly the heart of the city. Read the following when the party approaches the square.

☐ A hearty hubbub of noise and discussion greets you as the path enters onto a large open area. Prominent buildings surround the square, and a garden with a well-kept pathway sits to the east. Dozens of townsfolk of all ages mill about here and there. Some are merchants, others are musicians, and others appear to be on their way from one destination to another.

Sunlight and a light breeze wash over your skin, and despite the loudness of the surroundings, you feel at relative calm.

During daylight hours, between 🎲 4-48 (4d12) miscellaneous Townsfolk of various races will be present.

In addition, at any given time of day, there will be assorted marketfolk scattered about the square. Some specific merchants of note are indicated on the map as numbered items. If you wish to imbue additional detail at random, roll 🎲 2d4 (1d6-1 after sunset) to determine the number of merchants, then roll once on Table 10: Town Square Marketfolk for each.

Table 8: Town Square Marketfolk

D%	Marketfolk	Notes / Item(s) for Sale
01-30	General Merchant	Everything from the “Adventuring Gear” table in Pathfinder Roleplaying Game Core Rulebook.
31-40	Animal Care	Everything from the “Animals & Animal Gear” table in Pathfinder Roleplaying Game Core Rulebook.
41-50	Busker	Only a delightful melody. But tips are appreciated!
51-55	Amateur Bard	Treat as Busker , but if the party tips and engages with them, they may ask a single question about the town that can be revealed using a Knowledge (Local) check. Alternately, the party may simply roll once on the Rumors and Lore table.
56-70	Beggar	Beggars approach the party and will only relent if given at least 1 sp.

71-80	Children	Children are at play and will largely ignore the party.
81-85	Drunkard	With slurred speech and a chip on his shoulder, a drunken half-orc stumbles about aimlessly, shouting at anyone who is hapless enough to stand in his way. If the party confronts him—or simply fails to get out of the way quickly!—he will fight them ineptly. Treat this as a combat encounter with a Townsfolk ; the drunk will almost certainly lose, which brings the Berinncorte Militia and may get the PCs arrested if they cannot talk their way out of it.
86-00	Key NPC	Select an NPC at your discretion. Typically they will be in transit, en route from one place to another, but may be approached.

Social Epicenter

At the GM’s discretion, you can always have one or more Key NPCs of note in the square when the party enters it. This is particularly useful if the party is not as “thorough” in their non-combat investigations as you might wish them to be.

If they are truly set on ignoring the many buildings of interest in town, or in meeting any townsfolk, you might have key NPCs present in the Town Square who approach the party and engage with them. Such engagement might stem from a simple comment along the lines of “well met, brave souls! You’re not from around here, are you?”

Business Hours

The Town Square itself is “open” around the clock, though the Militia may pay special attention to anyone crossing through after darkness falls.

Kiosks in the Square are open from sun-up to sunset, plus an hour into the twilight portion of each evening. After that, some vendors will pack up, drape canvas over their tent, or join the revelry in the Shanty Town section of the center of the Square. Others will pack up entirely, and depart the city, needing to travel elsewhere (or living or spending their nights in the farmland outside the town, or even beyond).

Shopping at the Town Square

Elsewhere in Berinncorte, individual shops each carry supplies of a particular nature; going to a single location for specialty goods of the type vended by the proprietor is likely the best way for a group of adventurers to spend their coin wisely.

For those wishing a more eclectic sampling of wares, or those seeking an efficient, one-stop-shops-all outing, many have found that the multitude of kiosks arrayed in the city's largest single open space can be a superior option.

Kiosks

Whether it's a complex set of tents that function as one, or a simple lean-to hastily assembled to support a single transient peddler, each opportunity to spend money is referred to generically as a "kiosk".

Each kiosk contains at least one vendor, who offers at least one item for sale. Unless the particular kiosk at which the PCs are shopping indicates otherwise, each item for sale is subject to a bit of randomization in terms of price.

Partly, this is due to fluctuations of supply and demand; the microeconomic impacts of a constant flux of tradespeople into and out of an otherwise isolated mercantile environment; and the commoditization of even niche trade goods in an increasingly globalized economy across the realm, as dips in transportation costs and improvements on road safety mean a greater ability to disperse localized competitive advantage.

Partly, though, this is just merchants being erratic jerks.

Again, unless a kiosk's description says otherwise, roll on the following table for each item the PCs indicate they wish to purchase... after their intent has been made clear. All adjustments are made relative to the "retail price" for the item. For example, "+15%" for an item that is normally worth 100 gp means that the kiosk in question is selling that item for 115 gp.

Table 9: Town Square Kiosk Price Adjustments

D%	Price Adjustment	Description
1-2	+30%	"Crafted from the finest artisans in... well, you've never heard of the place; that's how high quality this item here is. It's a steal at twice the price, but I'll consider letting it go if you make it worth my while."
3-4	+10%	"Ah, that's a useful item. And much in demand, of late."
5-6	None	-
7	-5%	"Not much ask for this item, around here. I'd be glad to be rid of it."
8	-10%	"We've got too much stock! Have to get rid of it, you see."

Note that the prices of some items sold by some vendors is already either more, or less expensive than the typical, standard retail price listed in rulebooks. Modifiers determined in the Price Adjustments table above should be applied to the vendor's listed price, not the standard "rulebook price".

Kiosk Negotiations

At the GM's discretion, enterprising PCs can attempt to negotiate. Once a PC receives a result from the Price Adjustments table above, they may make a A Charisma (Persuasion), Charisma (Deception), Charisma (Intimidation), or Intelligence (Investigation) check, at DC 16, plus 1 for each full 500 gp of retail value (so negotiating for an item normally worth 1,225 gp would be DC 18).

Success by 1-5 points means the PC may force a re-roll on the Price Adjustments table, with a +1 circumstance modifier to the roll. The new roll stands, even if it is less favorable to the PC than the original roll pre-negotiations. If the GM allows it, a stubborn PC can attempt to negotiate further; each successive attempt increases the DC by +1, and these modifiers stack. Succeeding at multiple negotiations generates circumstance modifiers that DO stack!

Here's an example: a PC wants to purchase a masterwork dagger, which is normally worth 302 gp. The GM rolls on the Price Adjustments table, and rolls a 4—which means the kiosk sells the dagger for 10% more than normal, and therefore the transaction will require 332 gp. This PC is skilled in Charisma (Persuasion), however, and so asks to negotiate. The check is DC 16; the PC's check value is 18, so they succeed. The GM rerolls on the Price Adjustments table, and rolls a 1—but this time the roll benefits from a +1 modifier, and so it's treated as a 2 outcome. This is worse, however, than the original price! The PC asks to negotiate further, and the GM indulges them, but this time, the DC for the check is 17. The check outcome is 18, so the PC succeeds; the GM rerolls the Price Adjustments check, and this time adds +2, because it is the second successful negotiation. The roll is a 4, plus 2, with a 6 total outcome—and the masterwork dagger is now on sale for 302 gp. The PC accepts the price, and completes the transaction.

If the PC fails a negotiations check, the GM has some options as to how to penalize them. If the check is failed by 1-5 points, the price may simply stand as-is. Failure by 5-10 points might indicate that the price is fixed, and no further negotiations are possible with this vendor. Failure by more than 10 points might suggest that the price increase as though the next-worst result had been rolled on the Price Adjustments table.

In addition, the type of skill employed in negotiations might imply additional consequences. Failure at an Charisma (Intimidation) check, for example, might mean that the vendor refuses to do any further business with the PC in question; failure by more than 5 points may even involve the vendor calling the Militia and the PC possibly even getting Arrested.

Kiosks and the Militia

There's an uneasy relationship between the Berrincorte Militia and the vendors in Town Square. On the one hand, the improv market is an enormous benefit to the community, and many major services and shops would find it difficult to function without the ease of shopping for wares from distant lands all in one place. There are needs the city has that only the Town Square Kiosks truly service; though Welby Goodbarrel and his General Store, just to the northwest of Town Square, try to have everything possible in stock, there are exotic or "fad" items that are only for sale here.

On the negative side of things, however, the kiosk vendors are an unreliable, and occasionally underhanded, element of society, a threat to the law, peace, and order that the Mayor has struggled to impose on the town and its citizenry.

The form this dual-edged sword of commerce typically takes is willful ignorance, and tolerance. The odd vendor taking advantage of a naïve citizen simply is not sufficient to rouse Militia forces. Personal threats, robberies, and actual crime will be investigated, and punished, and ideally prevented, but the onus is on the victim or the threatened party to summon the Militia in order to get their attention.

The unspoken and widely-understood general rule for being in the Town Square market, let alone shopping there, is unchanged from the 16th-century Latin of our own world: caveat emptor.

Though one might say the Militia has become complacent in looking the other way when merchants occasionally take advantage of overly naïve customers, they most assuredly do not ignore threats of violence to the merchants themselves. Combat, in any form, for any level of provocation, occurring in plain sight in the Town Square is a risky affair for any who start a fight: there is a  30% chance per round that 1d4 Berinncorte Militia will arrive on the scene. Keep rolling every round! This means that there's a good chance an extended combat will eventually involve hordes of Militia.

The first priority of any Militia presence in a fight in Town Square is to quell the violence and keep combative parties separated; after two full rounds of no attack rolls occurring, you may stop rolling for additional Militia presence. They will then summon one of the Militia Leadership.

Random Key NPCs

It is left to the GM to determine to what extent significant, named NPCs are there, and if the party recognizes them. If any key NPCs are present, unless there is a sermon being conducted, the party may approach and speak with them; in most cases, the NPCs will act just as they would if encountered in their "home turf" unless there is a specific note to the contrary, or if as GM you feel it would not make sense for the character to say or act in a certain manner in a church.

SQR-10: Shanty Town

In roughly the center of the Town Square is a haphazard assemblage of tents, canopies, lean-tos, fire pits, stacks of firewood, and other artifacts of an impromptu and largely vagrant community. At first, it seems a multicolored affront to the senses: each tent and canvas appears to have been crafted with an eye toward using as many colors as possible, and in as bizarre a combination and pattern. Seeing one at a time would daze all but the most artistically-inclined; glimpsing the cluster that is arrayed in front of you makes your head hurt, or spin, or resettle, for just a moment.

Centered amidst the many kiosks of the Town Square is a Shanty Town—an informal gathering of vendors, vagrants, homeless, and hangers-on that changes on a day-to-day basis. There's always a few fires going in the evening, always a song to be sung, always a wineskin to be passed around, and generally a bubbling, impromptu sort of bonhomie. For some, it's an opportunity to share the loneliness of being on the road and away from family; for others, it's a good way to network, and establish connections elsewhere in the realm of commerce. And yes, for some few, it's viewed darkly as a chance to pickpocket, to take advantage, or to work one's crueler or more vile inclinations in an environment where nobody will notice one of their number disappearing suddenly.

In fact, next to the Leaky Cask Tavern, this is a good place to grab a brew and a few laughs... but one should watch one's pocket, and one's drink!

Denizens of Berinncorte's less-elite class will often hang out here, as well. Even the most xenophobic, paranoid merchant in town will need to drop by here occasionally, to establish or reaffirm connections, make deals, and generally see and be seen by members of the mercantile world outside the city proper.

Random Key NPCs: Shanty Town

Earlier in this section was a Random Key NPCs table, meant to drive placement of key NPCs in the Town Square itself. What follows is another, separate table, meant to indicate who might show up to the Shanty Town just around sunset.

Those most likely to be seen here tend to be entertainers, transients, merchants, or those who wish to business with such folk. Rarer are those who have particular, isolated need for the services of the Shanty Town—business of a nature ill suited to be conducted during daylight hours.

SQR-11: Religious Kiosks

 Toward the southeast corner of the square is a duo of awnings close together. You spot only one merchant, standing between them. In each, you see religious paraphernalia: icons, medallions, even shields embossed with divine sigils. The kiosk to the north appears to cater to the followers of Zugul; Sheergath devotees can shop for items in the southern stand.

These kiosks are both owned by the same man, who is standing between them as the party approaches.

Kerem Dogan is the dual-functioning proprietor of these shops, and hops between them as needs be. The human Expert 2 serves neither deity directly, though as he would put it, he serves the interests of both, and all, as the whim and needs of the people dictate.

At each awning, Kerem offers a sampling of religious items that may or may not be of use to the party:

Table 12: Wares of the Religious Kiosks

D%	Chance	Price

heavy wooden shield w/holy sigil (Zugul or Sheergath)	40%	10 gp
buckler w/holy sigil (Zugul or Sheergath)	70%	7 gp

Note that the most useful aspect of the merchant's inventory might be garb in which to Charisma (Deception) one's self: donning cleric's vestments of one of the churches in town grants a +3 circumstance bonus on Charisma (Deception) checks made to appear as a member of that church's clergy.

SQR-12: Camping Gear Kiosk

Only one of these two awnings is currently in use: to the south is a kiosk strewn with all manner of camping and outdoor gear. The salesman is a clean-shaven dwarf dressed in brown and green leather.

Donur Gravelsmasher is a dwarven Ranger 2 who sells camping and general adventuring equipment.

Donur typically has the following items for sale:

Table 13: Camping Gear Kiosk Wares

In addition, the GM is encouraged to have Donur offer any other additional miscellaneous items that the party may be in need of.

SQR-13: Healing and Plant Supply Kiosk

Four wooden kiosks outlined in colorful awnings form an "L" corner to the dirt pathways here. Only one, second from the right, with a green-and-white-striped awning, seems to be occupied, and that by an elven woman wreathed in richly-inscribed hide armor.

This shop is owned by an elved druid by the name of Caerthynna Tsornyl.

Replacement: Caerthynna Tsornyl

The merchant is a suitable swap-out for Druids, or Rangers. See page 16 for more explanation of how to undertake PC Replacement.

She tends to focus on plant- and nature-based items, but has an eclectic assortment of wares.

Talking in a polite and supportive manner with Caerthynna will result in the following Quest being initiated.

Quest: Sweet Sweet Poison

 Summary: Investigate sources of Darkvenom in the city, and acquire as much as you can to sell to Caerthynna.

 Rewards: Up to  1 Reward Star; and up to 650 gp.

 Locations: Nature Supply Kiosk in Town Square; Apothecary.

 Key NPCs: Caerthynna Tsornyl; Aramil Xiloscient; Ash “Executioner”.

 Kickoff: The PCs strike up conversation with Caerthynna at her kiosk, and either offer to help, or ask about her needs.

Description:

The druid merchant will ask the party to assist her if they can, explaining that one of her customers has need of Darkserum. As the PCs likely have never heard of this substance, she describes it as a particular poison with addictive qualities, rare to obtain and perilous to concoct. It has a normal value of 50 gp a vial; her client is willing to spend 100 gp if the party can find any. Caerthynna offers to split any profits evenly between the party and herself—so for example, if the party gets 10 vials at a cost of 20 gp each, the party’s share of the sale would be 400 gp (1,000 sale – 200 cost = 800, divided between the merchant and the party).

Caerthynna will not reveal the identity of the customer in question, though a  Wisdom (Perception) check opposed by the elf’s Charisma (Deception) check will suggest that the customer is likely an addict.

In truth, the customer is none other than Ash “Executioner”, the Berinncorte Militia’s trainer, who conceals his habit well.

Since the party is unlikely to venture outside the city limits in the context of this adventure, they would be well within their rights to ask Caerthynna how they might go about obtaining this poison. She will tell them that the Apothecary Shop is a good place to start; if Aramil himself doesn’t have a supply, he will certainly either be able to get his grimy hands on some, or at least be able to tell the party where to seek it further.

The party has a few options, at this point:

 They can ignore the request, and the Quest—which will terminate it.

 The PCs can inquire with Aramil as to the availability of the serum. He will bluster and deny at first, claiming Darkserum to be one of the most destructive substances of all time, reviling its impact on society, and generally exemplifying the idiom “methinks he doth protest too much”. Pushing even a little bit—no skill check required, even!—will get him to admit that he thinks he just might be able to find some. He will require one day, and asks 80 gp per vial. Making a successful  Intelligence (Investigation) or Charisma (Persuasion) check, opposed by Aramil’s Charisma (Deception) check, will reduce this to the retail price of 50 gp; a further check along these lines will reduce his asking price to 35 gp per vial if successful, but this is as low as he will go. He claims to be able to obtain up to 20 vials of Darkserum.

Whether the party negotiates or not, if they return the next day, Aramil will be true to his word... at least, in terms of having the product ready for them. In truth, he has it all along in his Secret Stash; claiming that he needs to use external connections to obtain it adds to the mystique of the product, and protects him from thieves or addicts who might otherwise seek to rob him of it right then and there.

Sweet Sweet Poison (Buy Serum): Chaos +1

Merely purchasing any quantity of darkserum creates a Catalyst Impact:  Chaos +1.

 If the party simply takes the vials and keeps them, then they should likely earn no additional reward, unless such behavior is perfectly consistent with their characters. If instead they return some or all of the vials to Caerthynna, she will thank the party profusely, and will give them their share of the profits as promised.

Sweet, Sweet Poison (Keep Serum): Chaos +1

Buying Darkserum and keeping it generates a Catalyst Impact:  Chaos +1.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

 Finally, with serum in hand, the party may attempt a  skill check to get the druid merchant to reveal her addict customer: this requires a successful Charisma (Intimidation) or Charisma (Persuasion) check, opposed by Caerthynna’s Wisdom (Perception) skill; if the party uses Charisma (Persuasion) and phrases their questioning along the lines of concern for the poor addicted soul, they gain a +2 circumstance bonus on their check. If the check is successful, the druid will sadly reveal that it is Ash, but will ask that the party keep the information to themselves.

Sweet, Sweet Poison (Discover):

 Law +2

Discovering the identity of the addict in this scenario creates a Catalyst Impact:  Law +2.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

No matter what course of action the party takes, if they come by the serum, and then act in accordance with their characters or their alignments, then the party entire should benefit from  2 Reward Stars.

SQR-14: Prostitute's Kiosk

 Off to the side, in the northeast corner near the graveyard, is a large, colorful tent of subdued, yet rich color. The proprietress is stunning, and garbed in lavish style with visible midriff and ample cleavage.

Lacking a brothel, Berinncorte can claim only this lowly, graveyard-adjacent kiosk as a locale providing services of the flesh in a formal manner.

 It's important to remember that although Elizavetta is an Illusionist, and uses this craft in her employment, these skills are a carefully-guarded secret, known only to herself, a few trusted clients, and her lover, Shakira Alam. The GM is strongly encouraged to present and roleplay Elizavetta as a standard-issue, ordinary courtesan... beautiful, imposing, with a strong personality, but with little outwardly-visible reason to suspect that she is actually a wizard.

Elizavetta Burak is the tent's owner—and, to put it bluntly, the product, as well.

Elizavetta prefers to use her myriad illusory talents in lieu of actual physical services, leaving clients with the impression that something happened which did not actually occur. That said, for powerful or attractive clients, or those whom she suspects would see through the act, she does engage in typical services.

Should the party be interested, fees for her services are left to the GM's discretion, but a suggested rate is 100 gp for an hour or two.

At the GM's discretion, the party can run into a dazzled customer of Elizavetta's somewhere in the Town Square. Alternately, they can encounter him as a Random Key NPC elsewhere in town. Whenever, wherever, the party runs into Gorin Bakelight, if the PCs have already visited the Prostitute's Kiosk in Town Square, chatting with Gorin will then kick off the following Quest. For this quest to have full dramatic impact, it's important that Elizavetta's wizardly skills are a secret and unknown to the party at this point.

Quest: Is This Love... Or Was I Dreaming?

 Summary: A customer of the Town Square's prostitute thinks he has fallen in love with her... but is curiously uncertain.

 Rewards: Up to  3 Reward Stars.

 Locations: Prostitute's Kiosk in the Town Square.

 Key NPCs: Elizavetta Burak, Gorin Bakelight.

 Kickoff: Talking with Gorin, after having visited or noticed the Prostitute's Kiosk.

 Description:

The first time the PCs encounter Gorin after having seen the Prostitute's Kiosk, he will act a bit stunned, distracted, and generally not altogether present for their conversation. Inquiring as to this reveals that the Tribute Magister is falling in love... but he seems distracted more at the strangeness of the feeling than by the feeling itself.

Exploring the topic with Gorin, he will freely but a bit guiltily admit to having availed himself of Elizavetta's services. At the time, he found the experience "adequate" (his words!), but every hour that passes, he finds himself feeling deeper and deeper feelings toward the woman. It's not that he's incapable of love. His frustration is that although his emotions are strong, and growing, he finds it difficult to recollect anything in particular about his time with her that might explain why he feels the way he does.

Gorin is perplexed, not enraged, at this point. If the PCs don't offer to help, Gorin's pride and slight embarrassment prevent him from asking for it outright, and the quest terminates.

 If instead they offer their assistance, the increasingly-lovesick man will accept, grudgingly but gratefully. He asks the PCs to speak with Elizavetta, and to ask after him; he grants that this amounts to little more than a schoolyard ploy of asking a friend to ascertain the romantic inclinations of a third party, but he can't think of a better way to figure things out.

 If the PCs point out that something extraordinary might be at work here—magic, for example—Gorin will react as though that possibility had simply not occurred to him (in truth, he has been so distracted by his feelings that he truly had not thought of this). His attitude toward the escort then turns a bit more harsh than inquisitive: He will ask the party to explore, to snoop, and to gather information about Elizavetta as best they can. Gorin even implies that his station and position are too important to the town to risk if foul play were somehow involved, and urging the party to take "any means necessary" to get to the bottom of the matter.

Merely hearing Gorin out, and offering to help, grants an Attitude Tracker bonus: either +4, or immediate escalation to Friendly (19), whichever results in a higher resulting Attitude value.

☞ Is This Love?... (Help): ♥ Love +1

Simply by agreeing to help, the PCs generate a Catalyst Impact: ♥ Love +1.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

The party has a few options to consider:

☞ They can let the matter drop, and ignore it. Gorin's Attitude toward the party will drop by -5, but he will not inquire further about the matter.

☞ Is This Love?... (Drop): ⊗ Chaos +1

Doing nothing—whether they initially offered to help, or simply ignored Gorin from the start—generates a Catalyst Impact: ⊗ Chaos +1.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

☞ The party can speak with Elizavetta about Gorin. At first, she will claim not to recall the man; pushing her on the matter (no skill check required) will reveal that yes, she does remember him, but not that he was anything special. A ▲ Wisdom (Perception) check, opposed by the prostitute's Charisma (Deception) check, will reveal that she is hardly surprised at the effect she has had on her customer, and that she's holding something back.

Whether the Wisdom (Perception) check was successful, or even attempted, the party can strong-arm her for more information: a successful ▲ Charisma (Intimidation) check will get her to reveal that Gorin is not the first customer to suffer from longer-term romantic inclinations. Failure in such a check should have serious repercussions: at the GM's discretion, Elizavetta might immediately fight the party, screaming for help, and drawing a crowd as well as 2d4 Berinncorte Militia to her aid.

Aside from, or in conjunction with, the above approaches, a PC might attempt a ▲ Charisma (Persuasion) check, opposed by Elizavetta's Charisma (Deception) check; any PC suffers a -3 circumstance penalty on such a check, because the prostitute is well aware of the risk posed by her magical prowess becoming public knowledge. Failure means a dead-end for the party; they may attempt one additional Charisma (Persuasion) check (this time with a -4 circumstance penalty), but if that, too, is failed, then the party is asked to leave the tent, and will not be allowed back inside to continue the discussion. A successful Charisma (Persuasion) check gets Elizavetta to reveal her true talents, and to admit to having used them on Gorin in preference to actually touching the man. While talented, her skills occasionally misfire, and result in a client feeling deep, seemingly true emotion for a few days. She assures the party that the feeling will pass, and implores them to keep her secret safe, even going so far as to offer her services for free to the PC who succeeded in the check (any race or gender is fair game for this proposition).

The party can't really "turn her in"; the Militia might raise an eyebrow in surprise that the town prostitute is also a magician, but as there's no law against it, it's hardly the sort of thing they can become involved in. Mayor Symms will actually increase her esteem for Elizavetta, and will certainly take no punitive action. The GM should consider whether keeping the illusionist's secret is, or is not, in character for the party; as she offers no monetary reward for their doing so, even the most mercenarily-minded PC would not have true reason to make the knowledge public.

☞ Finally, the party can sneak into Elizavetta's kiosk, and snoop around; doing so reveals several material components and a spellbook. Even if the party contains no wizard of their own, it doesn't take so much as a skill check to conclude how Gorin might have come by his infatuation!

Once the party has identified how the illusionist has worked her art on Gorin, they can inform him that his emotions should return to normal in a few days.

No matter how they come by the information, if the party identifies that Elizavetta is an illusionist, and informs Gorin, and deals with the prostitute's secret, all in a manner befitting their characters and/or alignments, the party should benefit from ✨ 2 Reward Stars. The PC who is most influential in discovering the secret—either by sneaking about, or by succeeding at Skill Checks—should be granted ✨ 1 Reward Star in addition.

☞ Is This Love?... (Discover): ⚖ Law +2, ♥ Love +3

Discovering the truth of the situation creates a Catalyst Impact: ⚖ Law +2 and ♥ Love +3.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

This Quest only ends if the party discovers the truth—even if they ignore the situation initially, or come up empty in their investigation or skill checks, theoretically they could attempt it again later, and find success.

SQR-15: Locks, Keys, and Rope Kiosk

☞ Near the Stage, and facing the alley to the West of the Town Square, is a plain-looking stand adorned in a green and red awning. Coils of rope of all material and size, padlocks, chains, and other related materials are on display, tacked to and hung from the wood frame of the stall.

A halfling rogue and ranger operates this shop:

All of Shakira's offerings are related to rope, locks, and binding:

Table 15: Locks and Rope Kiosk Wares

Item	Chance	Price
chain (10 ft.)	Always	32 gp
key (price to make a duplicate of an original key, provided by the customer)	Always	1 gp
skeleton key	Always, but only after inquiring specifically about it, and then only after a successful Charisma (Persuasion) check opposed by the vendor's Wisdom (Perception) check	100 gp simple lock (DC 12)	Always	18 gp
average lock (DC 15)	80%	40 gp
good lock (DC 20)	55%	85 gp
superior lock (DC 24)	25%	175 gp
common manacles	55%	12 gp
masterwork manacles	20%	55 gp
hemp rope (50 ft.)	Always	1 gp
silk rope (50 ft.)	80%	8 gp
spider's silk rope (50 ft.)	70%	90 gp
string or twine (50 ft.)	Always	5 cp

It would be reasonable for the party to inquire as to how much business there could possibly be for locks and chains in a small town. Shakira will shrug, and remind the party that not everyone uses her wares for restraining sentient beings; there is much farmland in the area surrounding Berinncorte, and beast handlers of all ilk have need of restraints. In addition, though the city may not be opulent, its riches require defending.

If the party inquires along these lines, or if they simply offer to help, or speak in a friendly manner toward Shakira, she will start the following Quest.

Quest: A Particular Sort of Skeleton

Summary: Shakira asks the party to obtain a Skeleton Bunk Key, so that she can make duplicates.

Rewards: Up to 4 Reward Stars; 500 gp.

Locations: Lock and Key Kiosk in Town Square, Garrison / Barracks.

Key NPCs: Shakira Alam.

Kickoff: TPCs offer to help Shakira, or strike up particularly friendly conversation with her.

Description:

Shakira needs the party's help: someone in the leadership of the Berinncorte Militia has commissioned her to make extra copies of the faction's Skeleton Bunk Key. Every member of Militia Leadership bears a copy of this key, which opens, but cannot lock, any of the personal cabinets in the Barracks common rooms. The leader gave Shakira his copy, but embarrassingly, she cannot recall where she may have put it; she fears it may have been stolen.

No skill check is required to get her to reveal the customer in this scenario: Skutt Krundar, the Militia's Vice Captain. She knows his wrath would be great were she to admit to losing the key. It's a long shot, but she suggests that the party ask if perhaps they might borrow the copy held by one of the other leaders: Amadan, the Armsmaster; Tansden, the Captain; Ash, the Trainer; or Debran Ormrick, the Treasurer. The halfling implies that she wouldn't lose any sleep if the party snuck in and stole the key as opposed to acquiring it via conversation.

She offers a reward substantial in comparison to what must be the paltry value of the commission: 500 gp. If the party asks as to the disparity between what she stands to gain, and the enormity of this reward, Shakira will admit that it represents a majority of her life savings, but fears the impact to her continued business in Berinncorte if she not only fails in a contract with its Militia, but has lost such an important key in so doing.

The ironic truth of the matter is, Skutt in fact never gave her his copy of the key to begin with; it is still in his armor in an inner pocket. Both Skutt and Shakira believe that their conversation naturally must have ended with the vice-captain giving the merchant his copy of the key to duplicate; however, with so much on the minds of each of them, both have entirely forgotten that this crucial event never took place!

Some options are available to the party, at this point:

They can ignore the plea, which benefits nobody, and of course, any time the PCs speak with (or even walk past the kiosk of) Shakira, she will ask how the quest is going, desperate for resolution.

➡ A Particular Sort... (Ignore):

⊗ Chaos +1

Ignoring the situation, while a perfectly reasonable option, does have a Catalyst Impact: ⊗ Chaos +1.

↪ The PCs can speak with any of the Militia Leadership enumerated above. How to roleplay this interaction, and the approach the PCs take, is up to your particular gaming group, the characters involved, and the extent of the party's interaction with these NPCs up until this point. However, a reasonable approach at minimum is for the party to describe the plea, and to ask for that NPC's key; convincing them should require a ⚠ Charisma (Persuasion) check at the very least, opposed by the NPC's Wisdom (Perception) check. The GM is encouraged to apply a -2 circumstance penalty on the party's check, reflecting that a group of well-armed strangers is asking someone they might hardly know for a copy of their key, which can open a number of cabinets containing personal effects!

↪ Alternately, or after failing the conversational approach, the party can attempt to pickpocket the key from one of the Militia Leaders. Failure may result in the offending PC Getting Arrested!

However they achieve it, if the PCs come by a copy of the Skeleton Bunk Key, and deliver it to Shakira, she will reward them true to her word. The party should receive an additional reward of ✨ 2 Reward Stars; the PC whose Skill Checks most directly result in acquiring the key should receive a personal reward of 2 additional ✨ Reward Stars.

⚖ Law +3

No matter how they accomplish it, if the PCs obtain a key and give it to Shakira, they incur a Catalyst Impact: ⚖ Law +3.

➡ A Particular Sort... (Keep):

⊗ Chaos +5

Obtaining a Skeleton Bunk Key, but then keeping it for themselves, means the PCs earn a Catalyst Impact: ⊗ Chaos +5.

This Quest terminates only if the PCs obtain a Skeleton Bunk Key and return it to Shakira; even if the the party ignores the Quest initially, theoretically, they may return to it at any time and complete it.

SQR-16: Stage Ticket Kiosk

🗨 This kiosk, facing and closest to the Stage, is little more than a lectern with an awning hovering above it. A colorfully-garbed bard stands behind it; she grins widely at you as you approach.

Lingona the bard typically staffs this kiosk during daylight hours; she sells "tickets" to a show put on by herself, Phadian Gess, and a few other entertainer hangers-on. A "show" amounts to little more than an improvisational satire, set to music performed by Lingona and a few of the performers; it's over in five minutes and those who purchased tickets are left to consider whether they have just witnessed true art, or if the quick endeavor was meant more as a practical joke at the expense of those who don't have the artistic sensibilities to know any better.

Lingona charges 8 sp per ticket for a performance; at least 5 such tickets must be sold in order for her and her cadre to view it as worthwhile to perform.

At the GM's discretion, during dusk hours, where visibility is somewhat more limited, Lingona and Phadian might instead execute a more public version of their event RTE-9 Impromptu Performance, a pickpocketing setup typically used in the Leaky Cask Tavern.

SQR-17: Beast Kiosk

🗨 Here, a half-orc woman stands behind a kiosk, armor gleaming in the sunlight and her visage proud. The smell of horse pervades the stall, but in a good, earthy, hard-working way. She nods gruffly, but not impolitely, at your approach.

Here works Ines Borque, something of an oddity in that she is a half-orc paladin with a penchant for animal husbandry:

↪ Replacement: Ines Borque

Although a somewhat unorthodox example of it, the merchant is a good option for lost Paladins or other martial characters. See p 16 for more explanation of how to undertake PC Replacement.

Ines offers many animal-based services, but as the Town Square offers little in the way of pens or tethers, many of her wares must be delivered or picked up from her farm, outside of the city proper. Any animals bought fall into this category.

SQR-18: Combat Training Kiosk

Underneath this awning is a dwarf barbarian; she stands in full combat gear and armor and loudly boasts of her skill to passersby. Behind her is arrayed a number of blunted, mock weaponry and shields. As your group approaches, she challenges you: “bet I can teach you a thing or two!” You would feel taunted and annoyed, but her wide grin is just too friendly to take the shout seriously as anything but close-ranged advertising.

Rona Stonehammer is the proprietess, and her skill the product, of this kiosk:

She offers what she calls “combat training”: in practice, this amounts to a mock fight in the dirt space right outside her kiosk. Whether any actual skill is conveyed in such a battle is up to the customer to conclude.

From a mechanical standpoint, any PC already proficient in the equipment used in a given combat style, who spends an hour training with Rona, benefits from a +1 competency bonus on skill and feat checks made using that equipment. This bonus lasts for 12 hours following the end of the training. Note that this bonus is on skill and feat-related checks only, and not on attack rolls or damage rolls. This bonus does apply to attack rolls that make use of a feat-related ability; for example, if a PC employs the Power Attack feat.

PCs who are not proficient in the use of a combat style’s equipment can also benefit from the mock battle: the normal penalty for not being proficient with a weapon is reduced from -4 to only -2 for 12 hours following the bout.

All services listed are for 30 minutes of fighting, unless otherwise specified. The time implied or explicitly described is required to gain the benefit from the training—for example, if a PC stops a standard training session after 25 minutes, they gain no benefit.

Unless the GM dictates otherwise, there is no limit to the number of training sessions Rona can be engaged for, though only one PC can train at a time, and the rest of the party has to find something to occupy them for the time spent.

SQR-19: Fortune-Teller’s Kiosk

You smell this tent before you see it: incense leaks out of it as water through a sieve. It’s not a rich scent, and it grows overpowering as you get closer, but it’s not unpleasant.

The elven druid who does business within is Arbelladon Moonside:

Though she dresses and speaks to give every impression of formality and capability, Arbelladon will begin any session with a customer by reminding them explicitly that her services are for entertainment purposes only. She claims that she performs no actual magic, but you never know what spirits or gods may be paying attention. This of course is a bit of a bend of truth: as a druid, she does do magic, just seldom in the support of fortune-telling services.

Should the party wish to engage her services, the GM is encouraged to have fun roleplaying the resulting interaction: remember, Arbelladon conducts these offerings for entertainment purposes, so their execution should be conducted in this light.

Table 18: Fortune-Teller’s Tent Services

Item	Chance	Price

spellcasting* (not an advertised service; see below)	40%	caster level × spell level × 10 gp

* To contract Arbelladon to cast spells on the party's behalf is a multi-step process. First, they must ascertain that the mystic is, in fact, a legitimate spellcaster, and a druid at that. This is not information she normally volunteers; the party must press explicitly on the subject, and then pass a Charisma (Persuasion) or Charisma (Intimidation) skill check opposed by Arbelladon's Wisdom (Perception) check. Success indicates that the fortune-teller will admit to her magical abilities, and will explore contracting for spellcasting.

SQR-20: Empty Kiosks (lootable)

Here stand two awnings with wooden frame. No vendor stands within either, and they appear largely ignored by both hawker and passerby.

These stalls are indeed unused right now, though they may be searched to reveal a modicum of lootables, as follows:

Locked Northern Empty Kiosk Storage Chest

Northern Empty Kiosk Storage Chest

masterwork sickle; 34 cp; fake square-cut emerald (appears to be worth 72 gp; an Intelligence (Investigation) check at DC 14 reveals it to have only 2 gp worth of value)

Nobody in town holds any key to this chest; it was abandoned by a vendor who needed to flee the city swiftly a few months ago, and through a combination of luck and ignorance, nobody has bothered or managed to loot it as of yet.

In the southern tent bears a sealed wooden barrel which must be smashed or pried open; within is the following "treasure", if treasure it can be called:

Southern Empty Kiosk Sealed Storage Barrel

rotted meat (40 lbs., no value; each character within 10 ft. when barrel is opened must make a Constitution saving throw at DC 14 or suffer from being Sickened for 1d4 hours)

Sickened: Take a -2 penalty on all attack rolls, weapon damage rolls, saving throws, skill checks, and ability checks.

SQR-21: Food Kiosk

A thin man stands here, his black facial hair standing out of his face in haphazard clumps. He hawks his wares in demure manner, as though not caring whether passersby take him up on his offers. The smell of food wafts slightly from his establishment, but you see nothing more than rations taked to the wood inside.

Vanya Berezin is this stall's merchant, specializing in all manner of travel food.

He'll gladly sell you a wide range of ration-formatted food, all at reasonable prices.

BC-5: Stage Overview

Read the following text to the players as they approach the northwest corner of the Town Square. You can also read this to them if they loiter in the Square for a while, or if they show no interest but decide to leave the Square via the western or northern alleys.

 Taking up one corner of the Town Square is a triangular wooden platform raised three feet from the ground. It appears solid and well-maintained. A door to the north side of the stage exits into the building nearby.

There is no staircase or other visible means of ascending onto the stage other than using the doors, or of course by simply Strength (Athletics) ing up (depending on the circumstances, you can simply allow success automatically, or impose a DC 12 Strength (Athletics) check if attempted during combat).

During daylight hours, there may be something happening on the Stage. Roll on Table 23: Stage Events to determine.

Table 20: Stage Events

D%	Event	Description
01-10	Merchant	Treat as Merchant from Table 10: Town Square Marketfolk, except the man is hawking wares from atop the Stage.

BC-6: Mayor's House Overview

Read the following text to the party as they approach the house, or if, from the Town Square, they show an interest in the nicest-looking building to the north.

 The most grandiose building in the town lies at the north of the Town Square. Larger than all others, and one of the few with a second story, the Mayor's House is clearly the most well-kept building in Berinn corte. Flags fly from pennants atop the roof.

The southern entrance, to the Stage, is always kept unless the Mayor is giving a public address on the Stage.

The eastern entrance, to the alley north of the Town Square, is the public's entryway and the only other visible door to the house. Supplicants, functionaries, and visiting guests of note use this entrance, as does Mayor Symms herself most of the time.

The secret door (active  DC 18 Wisdom (Perception) check to notice) at the end of the alley to the west was installed by a previous mayor to be used as an escape route in the event of riots. Mayor

D%	Event	Description
11-20	Stray Animal	A deer, a small flock of birds, or a sheep has wandered up here somehow.
21-30	Busker	Treat as Busker from Table 10: Town Square Marketfolk, except the performance occurs atop the Stage.
31-40	Bawdy Play	1d6+2 people of both genders are enacting a play whose main plot point appears to be mistaken identity leading to sexual congress. It's unclear whether these are inept professionals or drunken amateurs, but polite applause and occasional laughs greet their performance intermittently.
41-50	Sleeping Drunk	A single, ill-smelling man snores atop the Stage.
51-100	Empty	The Stage is bereft of entertainment right now.

Symms uses it to come and go without the public taking note, as otherwise, she has to walk straight through the center of the Town Square.

Strangers (as the party is, unless they have previously done business with the Mayor or are invited by her) may enter via the eastern entrance and seek audience with the Mayor... however, without some reason to do so, their chances of imposing on the mayor's busy schedule are slim.

Unless there is a specific reason you as GM decide otherwise, there is a  100% chance of Mayor Symms being present in her house, either conducting business, relaxing, or tending to administrative duties.

Random Key NPCs

As you consider placing key NPCs here, remember that the Mayor's House is a large establishment, combining the functions of a residence, a political structure, and the town's legal center. As a result, there is ample opportunity to place key NPCs here by way of introducing them to the party.

If you do place one or more key NPCs here, however, consider where within the building is best to place them. A good “default” location is in the Entry Hall / Waiting Room (see below), or one of the rooms to its north.

Table 21: Default Random Key NPCs

Suggested Population:  1d6 rolls

BC-6: Mayor's House Ground Floor Map

Unless otherwise noted, Mayor Symms holds a key to all locked doors. In addition, where noted, mayoral house staff or administrators also have a copy of the key to certain areas.

Thoroughly investigating (and, possibly, looting!) the Mayor's House will be nearly impossible during daylight hours, as most rooms will contain administrative staff as noted in each entry. During the evenings, though, most staff are gone for the day. It will still be challenging, however, as Mayoral House Guards typically patrol all areas of the ground floor.

Mayor's House Encounters

While the PCs are in the Mayor's House during evening hours, for every half-hour the party spends on the premises, roll on Table 26: Mayor's House Random Encounters. During daylight hours, subtract 20 (minimum 1) from the roll to represent the more active atmosphere.

Table 22: Mayor's House Random Encounters

D%	Event	Description
01-10	Group of Guards	A group of 1d2+1 Mayoral House Guards on patrol.
11-30	Solitary House Guard	One Mayoral House Guard on patrol.
31-45	Solitary Drunk Guard	One Mayoral House Guard on patrol. However, he has been partaking of spirits, and as a result, take a -4 penalty to his Wisdom (Perception) checks.
46-50	Thief	A single Common Thief is roaming the halls. Although low-level, he is stealthy; make a Wisdom (Perception) check against the Thief's Stealth to determine if the party even sees her.
51-100	No Encounter	The coast is clear... for now!

MHG-1: Main Entrance

The main entrance is a plainly-adorned, but steel-reinforced, door.

This is the public entrance, and also the entrance by which most staff enter and exit the building. Most mayoral staff are annoyed by this, because they must come and go with everyone else.

During daylight hours, this door is always left unlocked. After dark, it is typically locked, though all mayoral staff and house workers have a copy of the key, as does Mayor Symms, of course.

Locked Steel-Reinforced Entry Door

Break DC 18; Disable Device DC 15

MHG-2: Entry Hall / Waiting Room

Benches line the eastern and southern walls. To the west there is a wooden door, closed. To the north is a reception desk.

The room is the entrance chamber of the entire building. It also serves as a waiting room for those seeking audience with the Mayor, or to do business with other administrative officials.

Simple wooden chairs line the walls. During daylight hours, 2d4+2 Townsfolk will mill about here, waiting to do their business.

Forcing Introductions

If your players are having a hard time meeting important townsfolk, the Waiting Room is a perfect opportunity to force an introduction. One or more key NPCs just happen to be present when the party enters; seeing a new face, or otherwise being intrigued by some aspect of the PCs (race, class, facial or other notable features), that NPC approaches the party and engages them in conversation.

As GM, you are encouraged, not to "railroad" the party to investigate specific aspects of the city, but certainly to force the party into an appreciation of all that Berinn corte has to offer.

Remember: the impact of the Obelisk's eruption and later events of this adventure rely heavily on the party having established some relationships with key NPCs in the city!

To the north is a chest-high partition (blue line) that separates the waiting room from the Reception Desk (see below). This allows staff at the Reception Desk to speak with those in the waiting room. If more than 6 townsfolk are present, one of them will be standing at the partition, speaking with a mayoral staff member, as the party enters the room.

The door to the northwest opens to the Administrative Hallway, and is not kept locked. However, townsfolk are not meant to exit this room without a mayoral staff escort to take them wherever they have to go. During business (i.e., daylight) hours, townsfolk or PCs who approach the door with a visible intent to use it are admonished by the receptionist at the Reception Desk to the north.

A PC may attempt to sneak into the door during business hours. This requires a  DC 18 Dexterity (Stealth) check; increase this check's difficulty by 1 for each other townsfolk in the Waiting Room. If the check is failed, the receptionist notices; if he has previously warned that PC or the party, then guards are called (see below). If this is the first admonition, the PC may make a second attempt.

Calling the Guards

Using the door after being warned, or approaching it and being noticed more than once, will cause the receptionist to call an alarm; within three rounds,  1d2+1 Mayoral House Guard arrive to escort the offenders from the premises. If resisted, they will use force, though if other townsfolk are present in the room, they will do everything possible to take the fight outside to the Town Square.

These rules of "calling for the guards" apply elsewhere in the Ground Floor of the Mayor's House as well, though the violation which triggers the event may differ by location as noted.

MHG-3: Reception Desk

 Behind a waist-high partition stands a receptionist, a half-elven clerk. While not particularly warm, he seems friendly enough in dealing with townsfolk who approach him, though he is quick to rebuke those who fall out of line or who do not seem to be able to wait as directed.

During daylight hours, one receptionist always staffs this post, available to speak with townsfolk who enter the mayor's house to conduct business. Unless the GM has a reason otherwise, this is always Ota Kuiduru, a monk-turned-clerk:

The PCs may approach and speak with the receptionist, but he is only there to perform his duties, and is not interested in chatting about the town, key NPCs, or other matters. If it becomes clear that the party is not here on business, and wishes only to gather information, the receptionist will kindly but firmly ask them to leave. He will not call guards if they disobey, but will be suspicious if they then just hang out in the Waiting Room without purpose.

As A Matter of Fact, We Do have Business here

The party may attempt to  Charisma (Deception) (DC 20; 16 if the party has already spoken with Mayor Symms at all) the receptionist into believing that they do indeed have legitimate business in the Mayor's House. If failed, the party will be asked to leave the building.

If successful, the receptionist will ask the party to have a seat; five minutes later, a mayoral administrator will enter the room from the Administrative Hallway and escort them down the hallway to the Interview Office. It is possible, during this brief walk, for some PCs to try and sneak into one of the doors along the hallway. Make a  DC 18 Dexterity (Stealth) check (DC 16 if another PC is actively engaging the administrator in conversation so as to distract her). If more than one PC wishes to make the attempt, each PC must make their own Dexterity (Stealth) check, and, increase the DC for each of these checks by 2 for each PC past the first who wishes to try. Active conversation on the part of one PC as a diversion will still reduce the DC for each of these checks.

Once the party (or some subset of it!) arrives at the Interview Office, the administrator sits down, invites the PCs to do likewise, and then asks their business. At this point, the PCs had better have a convincing story as to why they are here! Encourage the players to roleplay the conversation and continue the Charisma (Deception) if they wish.

If they manage to slay or incapacitate the administrator in the Interview Office, there is a  20% chance per half-hour (make the check privately) that the body will be discovered and a general alarm will be sounded.

General Alarm

If the body is discovered, a General Alarm is sounded, placing all staff and guards on high alert and generally making things more challenging for an adventuring party to sneak about and explore. Instead of rolling on Table 26: Mayor's House Random Encounters every half-hour, roll every five minutes, and subtract a further 5 from the result each time (minimum 1; this stacks with the "during daylight hours" subtraction mentioned in that table's description).

A General Alarm will end one hour after it is sounded.

These rules for a General Alarm apply to other circumstances in the Mayor's House, although the triggering event will differ depending on the location.

MHG-4: Processing Office

 This clerical workroom adjoins the receptionist's desk, and is lined with bookshelves, tables, and desks. Inkwells, quills, and parchment lie everywhere; books are scattered about with seemingly no sense of order.

During business hours, the receptionist at the Reception Desk (see above) will flitter back and forth between the desk and the Processing Office room to its north. If the PCs enter this room during the daytime, there is a  40% chance the Receptionist is already here; if he is not already here, there is a 5% chance per minute that he comes in from the Reception Desk.

The door separating the Reception Desk and the Processing Office does not have a lock on it; the door to the west (which opens onto the Administrative Hallway) is locked after dark but all mayoral house staff and of course Mayor Symms have keys.

The Processing Office contains three wooden desks, each with the following:

Processing Office Desk (3x)

Full set of writing supplies; stacks of blank parchment (300 gp); a half-dozen three-legged wooden stools; books, ledgers, and other miscellany, the contents and organization of which make sense only to the Receptionist and a select few other staff.

MHG-5: Interview Office

 A rectangular room contains a small table with six high-quality, comfortable chairs in its center; and a stool to one corner. No other embellishments adorn its plain brick walls.

This rectangular room has a relatively small table in its center, surrounded by a matched set of very nice, comfortable, high-backed chairs with armrests (500 gp value, but it would be very difficult to sneak out of the house with them, and they could not be sold anywhere in town!).

Any townsfolk conducting routine business with the mayor's staff will come here to speak with an administrator, and typically, they will conduct the entirety of their business in this room, as clerks and administrators bustle in and out to bring needed paperwork and supplies (for example, quills and ink).

During daylight hours, there is a  15% chance that a Mayoral Clerk and 1d4 Townsfolk are here already when the PCs enter, chatting about permits, compensation, pay rates, taxes, or other common town business with the mayor's office. The clerk will ask the party to leave, and will call guards (see Calling the Guards, above) if they do not within a minute. Neither the clerk nor the townsfolk will fight the party, and if confronted with violence, will try to hide or escape.

Note that the PCs may end up in this room after Charisma (Deception)ing their way past the Reception Desk. Please see As A Matter of Fact, We Do Have Business Here (above) for more information.

MHG-6: Administrative Hallway

 A long, poorly-lit hallway stretches the entire height of the building from south to north, connecting the entry area to doors on either side. At its far end, this corridor turns to the west. Well-worn tiles underfoot denote frequent use.

This is the main hallway of business for the mayor's office. During daylight hours, staff frequently use the hallway to walk amongst the rooms that open onto it.

If the party enters the hallway, there is an  80% chance there are 1d2 staff walking along it; there are no tables or other structures behind which to hide, so PCs attempting to sneak will have to make a  DC 25 Dexterity (Stealth) check to remain hidden (and, at the GM's discretion, could automatically fail such an attempt, given the common-sense likelihood of failure).

Staff will confront intruders and ask them to leave to the Entry Hall / Waiting Room; if the PCs resist, they will call guards (see Calling the Guards, above).

After dark, the hallway still sees frequent use by Mayoral House Guard; instead of rolling every half-hour on Table 26: Mayor's House Random Encounters, roll on it immediately every time any PC enters the hallway, but add 10 to the result.

MHG-7: Conference Room

 A single, 25' long by 5' wide wooden conference table occupies most of this room, with all manner of chairs and stools sitting around it haphazardly.

This room is typically used for meetings among mayoral house staff; on occasion, when meeting with more than a small handful of townsfolk, it is also used to give audiences and discuss city business.

During business hours, there is a  15% chance that 2d4 Mayoral Administrators and 2d6 Townsfolk are present, all sitting around the table and discussing town business. The Administrators will ask any intruders to leave, and call guards (see Calling the Guards, above) if the PCs resist.

During daylight hours, there is also a  15% chance that Gorin Bakelight will be in this room, counting coin or updating ledgers. As the Tribute Magister assigned to Berinncorte, Gorin tends to the business of collecting, counting, registering, and securely transporting Tribute up the hierarchy, elsewhere in the Realm. (For more information about Tribute, please see page p 23).

Gorin is never in the room without an accompaniment of 3 Berinncorte Militia Elite Guards:

Other than the average-quality table and chairs, there is nothing of value in this room.

MHG-8: Main Activity Room

☐ A large, open space contains minimal furniture around its perimeter. Two large rugs break the space up in the middle, but otherwise, this is a big chamber filled with not much.

This is the room typically used to meet and greet visiting functionaries, perform social events for the town, or otherwise entertain up to 30 people.

Double doors to the west open onto the Open Office area; these are generally kept locked (all mayoral staff and Mayor Symms have keys) during events but unlocked and opened at all other times.

A door to the south allows entry to the Common Area; this is typically left open, particularly for events, so as to allow festivities to spill into a larger space if things get too cramped.

Around the perimeter of the room are 8 small tables, upon each of which rests a plant and/or a miscellaneous piece of sculpture; all are without resale value.

One such table in the northeast of the room has a drawer in it (it's not very obvious and has no handle; ⚠ DC 14 Wisdom (Perception) check to notice); within are the following:

🔒 Main Activity Room Table

Tiny onyx (25 gp); 9 sp

The staff has long forgotten that this table even has a drawer, so nobody will miss the contents if they go missing.

MHG-9: Rear Hallway

☐ The floor tiling here is less well-worn than in the hallway that led here from the entrance. Poorly lit, the only light comes from sources elsewhere; it's almost like a cave back here.

It's difficult to see, but there are tapestries on the walls.

Most office staff needing to move from the Administrative Hallway to the Open Office area will do so via one of the rooms that lie between them, so hardly anyone uses this dingy, poorly-lit hallway in the north of the building. Day or night, the PCs are free to traverse this hallway without risk of being noticed.

On the walls are battered and/or faded tapestries, and there are no torch sconces or other light sources in the hallway itself. All in all, though it bears no traps or dangers, it has a feel of a dungeon corridor more than an administrative passageway.

MHG-10: Stage Exit

☐ This locked door opens onto the Stage in the town square.

This door is always locked (only the Mayor has the key), unless there is a specific performance to be made on the Stage in the northwest corner of the Town Square.

🔒 Locked Wooden Stage Exit Door

Break DC 16; Disable Device DC 15

During the daytime, it would be difficult to attempt an entry into the building using this door, as townsfolk in the Town Square would almost surely see (⚠ DC 22 Dexterity (Stealth) check); if the PCs are noticed, there is a 🎲 50% chance the townsfolk observing them will call guards (see Calling the Guards, above), who will arrive to meet the PCs in the Common Area as soon as they enter the Mayor's House.

In the nighttime, the Stage Exit is a reasonable choice for entry into the Mayor's House, though it is a bit more challenging to bypass than most building doors in Berinncorte.

MHG-11: Common Area / Stage Prep

☐ This room contains all manner of stage equipment, costumes, props, and other performance paraphernalia.

The equipment here is meant for use in performances and speeches on the Stage in the Town Square.

There is very little organization, rhyme or reason as to how this material is stored. As a result, it is quite easy for intruders to hide in this room. Unless the party is intentionally ignoring stealth (e.g., running from pursuit!), do not roll on Table 26: Mayor's House Random Encounters as you normally would so long as the party is in this room. In addition, this room's disheveled state grants a +5 circumstance bonus to any Dexterity (Stealth) checks performed here.

The equipment itself is all standard-issue, moth-eaten, and in some cases, lousy; it has no resale value. However, any character who wishes may attempt to assemble a costume to impersonate one of the townsfolk (🎲 DC 15 Charisma (Performance)) or a specific Key NPC (Perform DC 17 + the CR of the NPC impersonated; round up for fractional CRs).

MHG-12: Open Office

☐ The narrow hallway from the north opens onto a large workspace. Tables, stools, and miscellaneous supplies are strewn about this large open area.

For large social functions, much of this is cleared away into the Common Area (see above) so as to maximize the usable space for people to mill about and talk.

During business hours, there will always be  2d8 clerks here, busy with parchment and pen. Treat them as townsfolk.

Looting all of the quills and writing equipment will net about 75 gp, but attempting to resell such sundries within town limits so soon after everything went missing would be cause for arrest and prosecution by the Mayor.

A focused search of all the desks (consuming 10 minutes) will turn up  25 gp in assorted change located in desk drawers.

The disorganized state of this room is such that any character attempting to hide receives a +3 circumstance bonus to Dexterity (Stealth) checks.

MHG-13: Weapons Locker

Only read the following italicized text if the PCs discover the secret door leading to this room.

 Behind a poorly-hidden secret and locked wooden door is a narrow passage under the stairs. The smell of metal and oil and musty storage float in the air.

Underneath the stairs is a secret room that only the Mayor and a handful of trusted advisors knows about: the Weapons Locker. A secret door to the east connects the locker to the much-larger Supply Room (see below).

Weapons Locker: East Locked Secret Wooden Door

Wisdom (Perception) DC 16; Break DC 15; Disable Device DC 14

The Mayor maintains the Weapons Locker for the same reasons she has such an extensive Emergency Supply Cache (see below)—her old adventuring ways have primed her for a life always steeled against disaster, and particularly in her position as Mayor, she feels the need for a contingency.

Within the Weapons Locker is a seemingly enormous array of basic, nonmagical, and otherwise ordinary weaponry and armor.

Mayoral Weapons Locker

2d4+1 of each simple weapon type; 30% chance for each martial weapon type; 500 crossbow bolts; 750 arrows; 1d6+1 of each light armor, 1d4-1 of each medium armor (a result of 0 means that armor is not present in any quantity)

Although the occasional piece is dented or dinged and shows signs of actual combat use ( 5% chance for a given item), Blacksmith Dimplegruffe is responsible for the creation of much of this stash.

She has a secret arrangement with the Mayor: if work is sparse, or if the blacksmith is simply looking for some extra coin in her leisure time, she can craft weaponry or armor as she desires, and the Mayor will buy any quantity from the town's coffers at a slight discount. The agreement between the two ladies is secret and unwritten, and was sealed in a handshake over ale a few nights after the Mayor assumed her current position.

Neither the Mayor nor the blacksmith is particularly embarrassed or otherwise secretive about this arrangement, but they will not volunteer the information. As the Mayor pointed out upon their initial meeting, some might misinterpret the stockpiling as preparing for war or some other pre-emptive action, or to meet a threat that is known but kept from the townsfolk. Although Dimplegruffe herself suspects that the Mayor has some greater purpose in mind, that's not the case: it's simple precaution, taken perhaps to a bit of an extreme. In any event, the blacksmith is more fond of coin than she is of her latent skepticism, and keeps her thoughts to herself on the matter.

MHG-14: Emergency Supply Cache

Only read the following italicized text if the PCs discover the secret door leading to this room.

 In the back of the pantry, past two ordinary casks, is a secret chamber with stone floor and brick walls. Crates and boxes and barrels lie all about, stacked atop each other with little care.

The secret door to the east requires a  DC 16 Wisdom (Perception) check to notice. The door is also locked—Mayor Symms has the only key, but gives it to staff as they require.

Emergency Supply Cache: East Locked Secret Wooden Door

Wisdom (Perception) DC 16; Break DC 14; Disable Device DC 13

The harder-to-spot and more difficult to unlock outer door to the west exits to an alley in the back of the building; only Mayor Symms herself knows of it, and she bears the only key on her person at all times.

Emergency Supply Cache: West Locked Secret Wooden Door

Wisdom (Perception) DC 16; Break DC 14; Disable Device DC 15

Within is a cramped space lined with narrow shelves, upon which are a wide variety of supplies:

Emergency Supply Cache

trail rations (20 each of standard, elven, halving, and dwarven), 20 bedrolls, 10 folding chairs, 5 hammocks, 10 small tents, 2 medium tents, 1 large tent, 40 blankets, 30 fishhooks, and a rusted bear trap.

These supplies form the mayor's emergency supply cache—a somewhat hilarious conceit, given that Berinncorte has almost zero chance of natural disaster and has indeed never even had a flood from its river.

Old habits die hard, however, and the inclination to have a huge cache of supplies comes from the mayor's old adventuring days. If ever questioned about it, the Mayor will shrug her shoulders, recognizing the absence of true need, but will point out that it is “better to have supplies, and not need them, than to desperately need them, and starve.”

Of course, in the context of this adventure, and the events of the Obelisk Eruption and its aftermath, such an attitude will turn out to be almost prescient in its appropriateness!

MHG-15: Supply Room

 An enormous amount of boxes, crates, barrels, sacks, and bins are scattered all over. There's barely enough room to walk among them, but a clear path is indeed visible leading from east to west. Odd bits of rice and wheat crunch underfoot as you move about.

This is the main supply room for the Kitchen (see below) and the house in general. All manner of foodstuffs, supplies, cooking vessels, and cleaning implements can be found here arrayed somewhat neatly on a great number of shelves and barrels.

PCs interested in valuables can restock their trail rations, but will be otherwise out of luck: the cooks' wares are mundane.

The secret door to the west leading to the Weapons Locker (see above) requires the  Wisdom (Perception) check noted in its entry to notice; in addition, several barrels of heavier supplies have been placed in front of the door and must be moved out of the way.

MHG-16: Hall of Portraits

 A rectangular hall connects the workspace to the south with the staircase to the north, and steel-reinforced doors to the northwest and west. A high-quality rug lies underfoot, and the walls contain eight painted portraits.

This hall bears a rug of higher quality than those found elsewhere in the establishment; though quite large, it is worth 250 gp (and, like many of the valuables in the building, cannot be resold in town without the Mayor finding out and pressing charges!).

On the walls to the east and west are richly-detailed and well-rendered portraits of various gentlemen in all manner of dress; a  DC 14 Knowledge (Local or Nobility) check will reveal that these 8 paintings are in fact of prior Berinncorte Mayors. Astute PCs will note the absence of Mayor Symms' own visage; tradition dictates that portraits be hung only after a mayor steps down from their post (or dies).

MHG-17: Staircase Up

 Stairs ascend to the second story of the residence / office building.

This staircase leads to the upper floor of the Mayor's House.

MHG-18: Kitchen

 A huge set of connected tables is at the center of this enormous space. Benches, ovens, and cabinets line the outside. To the south are two steel-reinforced doors, and to the east, a door opens into the hallway.

All food prepared in the Mayor's House is done here. At any given time during business hours, a staff of  1d4+1 chefs, line cooks, bussers, and waitstaff will be present here, going about their business; double this number during the hours just before, during, and after meals (breakfast, lunch, and dinner). In terms of game mechanics, treat all of these denizens as Townfolk.

In the evenings, there is only a  30% chance for a cook to be present, whipping up a quick late-night snack for the Mayor or her guests.

During the day, anyone attempting a  Dexterity (Stealth) check in the Kitchen gains a +4 circumstance bonus to the roll, on account of the labyrinthine counters and tables, and the general noise of the environment.

MHG-19: Main Dining Hall

 This large room bears a single, enormous circular table in the middle, around which sit 24 tall-backed and ornately-carved wooden chairs with embroidered padding. A large chandelier hangs over the center of the table.

Paintings and tapestries hang around the border of the room, packed in so tightly it's almost unseemly.

Two steel-reinforced doors open to the northwest and northeast; a curtain in rich fabric separates this room from the one to the south.

Each of the chairs would be worth 70 gp, were it only feasible to sneak it out the establishment and resell it somewhere outside the boundaries of town. If cut down, the chandelier weighs 200 lbs and is theoretically worth 500 gp.

The Dining Hall opens into the Banquet Hall (see below) to the south. Typically, formal functions begin in the Banquet Hall for pre-dinner cocktails and snacks, then shift to the Main Dining Hall, and finally spill back into the Banquet Hall for after-dinner drinks and discussion. It is rare that the two rooms are not used together for the same social event.

MHG-20: Banquet Hall

A large, open space is lined with rich wooden furniture and a few potted plants. Curtains separate this room from the one to the north, and a set of double doors opens onto the hallway to the east.

Lacking the finery and opulence of the Main Dining Hall (see above), the Banquet Hall to its south is typically used for informal components of social events. To facilitate mingling in smaller groups, it bears a half-dozen circular wooden tables, atop which are usually draped cloth when an event is in full swing.

The double doors to the east are typically used as the entrance and exit to both Halls for social events.

MHG-21: Stage

MHG-23: Militia Guard Post

Note that this one does have a secret door connecting to the east.

MHG-24: Militia Guard Post

BC-6: Mayor's House Second Floor Map

As with the Ground Floor, unless otherwise noted, Mayor Symms holds a key to all locked doors. In addition, where noted, mayoral house staff or administrators also have a copy of the key to certain areas.

The upper floor has two purposes: the residence and main office of the Mayor; and quarters for visiting dignitaries, honored guests, or other people who require high levels of service. Typically, not all of the guest rooms will be occupied, unless there is a major regional gathering for a specific purpose.

Although many staff and some citizens will come and go from the Mayor's Offices, generally speaking, it is easier to sneak around and investigate the premises than it is on the Ground Floor.

Roll on Table 26: Mayor's House Random Encounters for every half-hour spent in the Mayor's House, but add +10 (maximum 100) to the roll to represent the less active atmosphere.

MHU-1: Staircase Down

This leads downstairs to BC-6: Mayor's House Interior (Ground Floor).

MHU-2: North Guest Room

 This appears to be a large bedchamber populated with simple, but functional furniture: a comfortable and clean bed, a rug bearing the colors of Berinncorte, a mirror, a desk with full writing supplies, a small two-person table, two three-legged wooden stools, and a chamber pot. A wooden door connects to an amply-sized closet to the west.

This is one of a trio of rooms along the west side of the main hallway. They are all similarly adorned as described above.

Each also has a closet on its west side; the closet has a thin wooden door with a lock on it. Guests assigned to a room are typically given a key to the closet so they can store their valuables while they are about town; the Mayor and many house staff also have copies of the keys to all three closets.

MHU-3: West Guest Room

(See North Guest Room, above, for a description of this room's basic contents and the closet to the west.)

Other than minor differences as to how the furniture is arranged, the only thing notable is that the desk bears a simple pale-red vase (5 gp value) containing a single fading daffodil. The PCs are left to conjecture as to whose it was, and why it remains here still.

MHU-4: Southwest Guest Room

(See North Guest Room, above, for a description of this room's basic contents and the closet to the west.)

In the closet is a head-sized rotten gourd sitting atop a locked and trapped wooden box. The lock on the chest is obvious; the trap, less so:

Within the chest is the following:

Southwest Guest Room Wooden Chest

Chipped but otherwise gleaming thumbnail-sized emerald (75 gp); 5 pp

If the box or the treasure within are turned over to them, nobody in the Mayor's House knows the origins of this mysterious cache, but reason suggests it belonged to a previous occupant of the guest room, who either neglected to take it with them, or who died before they could recover it. The Mayor or her staff will let well-meaning PCs keep the treasure if they have already opened the box.

MHU-5: Mayor's Closet

 This enormous room outstrips the size of any other room in the house, but is merely the Mayor's closet. Clothing is everywhere, most in piles. There are several chairs, and a hexagonal table in the room's center.

This expansive room contains all of the Mayor Symms' clothes and belongings:

Mayor's Closet

22 well-made but otherwise plain outfits for everyday use value (200 gp in total); 3 more opulent formal gowns (would fetch prices of 300 gp apiece if they were sold well outside of town limits)

A locked and trapped chest in the southwest corner is discovered automatically if the PCs search the room. The chest contains mementos from the Mayor's adventuring days:

♂ Aresnic Needle Trap (CR 2)

Prior to the Obelisk Eruption, the Mayor's +1 greatsword will always be in this chest, as she has little reason to use it in her day-to-day activities.

Post-Obelisk, the sword will be on her person at all times unless she is asleep or is slain.

MHU-6: Mayor's Bedchamber

📄 The floorboards here are of a rich, lacquered wood; ample space abounds. A washing tub sits in the northwest. These are clearly the Mayor's personal quarters... and from the rectangular, six-person table in the southwest, also meant to serve as a more private office space as well for more sensitive matters. A steel-reinforced door opens to the south, and an ornately-carved wooden door connects to the closet in the west.

These are the personal quarters of Mayor Symms. During late evening hours, she will typically be here, finishing up a piece of writing, reviewing one final piece of correspondence, or otherwise tending to her duties and shirking sleep.

A locked bedside table to the south of the bed contains some valuables and personal effects.

🔒 Mayor's Locked Bedchamber Drawer

Break DC 14, Disable Device DC 12

In the drawer can be found the following treasure:

🗡️ Mayor's Bedchamber Drawer

15 pp, a ruby ring (15 gp), a silver letter-opener fashioned to appear as a dagger (as a Small dagger; 15 gp), sealing wax, 8 unlit candles, a tinderbox, and 3 sticks of sandalwood incense

Although finely crafted, nothing else in the bedroom is of particularly immense value, and in any event, it would be challenging indeed to sneak off with an entire bedspread!

MHU-7: Mayor's Offices

📄 Plenty of windows open onto the town square below to the south... and to the graveyard to the east, though from this vantage, it's still a beautiful sight. Several tables and benches are scattered in this room, which seems to serve as the main business office for most of the Mayor's affairs.

This room is where the Mayor conducts much of the business of the town that requires her personal involvement. It is a combination meeting room and workspace. During daylight hours, typically there are 1d4-1 functionaries and staff here, discussing matters of state or heads-down over their parchment. Mechanically, treat all such staffers as Townsfolk.

Windows to the east and south overlook the Town Square.

MHU-8: South Guest Room

(See North Guest Room, above, for a description of this room's basic contents and the closet to the west.)

Other than minor differences as to how the furniture is arranged, the only thing notable is that the desk bears no quill, ink, or parchment.

There is also no separate closet for this room; presumably those staying here tend to do so for a shorter term than those in the other rooms.

MHU-9: Hallway & Guards

📄 This L-shaped hallway is lined with high-quality tiles and is well-lit by wall sconces. On both sides are wooden doors. At the southeast tail of the "L" is a set of steel-reinforced double doors, flanked by chairs; these are occupied by armed and lightly-armored guards.

The hallway approaching the Mayor's Offices (see above) is well-lit, and generally contains two Berinncorte Militia standing guard, night or day.

The main double doors to the offices beyond are locked:

🔒 Hallway Locked Steel-Banded Door

Break DC 15; Disable Device DC 12

If the PCs intend to sneak about and investigate, and they did not notice the secret door to the Mayor's Closet (above), then sneaking into the Mayor's Offices (see above) to the east will be difficult.

Apply a -4 circumstance penalty to any ⚠️ Dexterity (Stealth) checks made in the main area of this hallway—not to the narrower part that links to the Staircase to the north. Should one or more PCs sneak their way past the guards, they will find the door locked.

The GM is encouraged to award rogues (or especially other classes!) who make their way past the guards and through the door a special spot reward of 🌟 1 Reward Star to reflect the difficulty of the combined challenge.

Finally, during any time of day, there is a very slight (📊 8%) chance that Sorille, the Squirrelheel Courier, is here, either en route to deliver a message to the Mayor, or fresh from receiving one and about to run off to deliver it elsewhere in the realm.

If the PCs interact with the courier in any favorable fashion, it will initiate a Quest which the party is free to accept or ignore:

🏆 Quest: If It's On Your Way

📄 Summary: A courier for the Mayor asks the party to deliver a message for her..

🏆 Rewards: Up to 🌟 1 Reward Star; 200 gp.

📍 Locations: Mayor's House (Upper Floor).

👤 Key NPCs: Sorille.

▶ Kickoff: By sheer chance, the PCs run into the courier as she is leaving the Mayor's private quarters; Sorille asks the party to deliver a message in-town if it's not too much trouble.

If the party interacts favorably with Sorille—by greeting her, saying hello, politely asking her business, that sort of thing—the elven ranger sizes the party up pretty quickly. If there are zero PCs among the party who have any assigned ranks in Charisma (Persuasion), this quest terminates before it begins; it does not matter, even, if the PC(s) interacting directly with Sorille have that skill, to what extent, whether they explicitly attempt a ⚠️ Charisma (Persuasion) skill check to some purpose—none of that matters. The Squirrelheel Courier has a knack for feeling this sort of thing out, and will pick up on the talent quickly, even if it's not on display.

Sorille's time is short; she likes the party, but can only hang around for another few questions. She explains that she's off to do business elsewhere, and that business will take her out of the city for at least a few days.

In the meantime, though, there's a message that needs to be delivered within Berinncorte, and although Sorille herself could do it, there's no time to waste before she has to leave as quickly as possible.

She asks the party, if it's not too much trouble, might they deliver the message on her behalf?

Probing to any degree will be met with secrecy; foremost among a Squirrelheel's code of conduct is to neither question, nor reveal, the contents of a message or its sender, unless such information is volunteered, or the contract makes plain that sharing such knowledge is acceptable. Neither is the case, here.

📄 Wisdom (Perception) or similar checks will reveal anxiety, but it should be made clear that the source is almost certainly the ticking clock on Sorille's out-of-town job, not concern over the circumstances of this in-town job for the PCs.

Bribery, or attempts to otherwise get more information about the message or its sender, will be stonewalled. Threats aren't a good idea: remember that Sorille is well-known to the Mayor and her household staff, and that the elf is a courier of trusted information. Any threat whatsoever would send the Guards stationed in the hallway nearby to her aid, and many more soon to follow once they all started yelling. So, not a great approach.

📄 The PCs may of course refuse: if they do so politely, with a reasonable-sounding excuse (at the GM's discretion, this could also require a ⚠️ Charisma (Persuasion) or Charisma (Deception) check, opposed by Sorille's Wisdom (Perception) check), then the courier will nod, and then excuse herself, because now, she's really up against the clock. If politeness is successful, then Sorille may ask the PCs to take on another delivery again in the future if they encounter her.

📄 If the party accepts, Sorille thanks them profusely, and gives them two things: a leather purse clinking with 200 gp in cash, and a sealed scroll case. She asks them to immediately, as quickly as possible, deliver the case to Welby Goodbarrel, who can be found either in his General Store, or his apartments in the Upper-Class Residential District.

At this point, the party has an additional choice to make: deliver the case, or keep the cash and ignore the delivery. In either scenario, they might also wish to try to open the case themselves to see if its contents might best be looted.

📄 Welby is not expecting the message, so if the party ignores the job and keeps the cash, he won't follow up with the Mayor or with Sorille, whom he barely knows anyway. The only impact is that the party loses out on the possible XP reward.

📄 If It's On Your Way (Keep the Case): ❌ Chaos +3

If the party takes the job, but does not deliver the message, there is a Catalyst Impact: ❌ Chaos +3.

Although eventually, under normal circumstances, the sender would notice that no reply was forthcoming, and eventually, they would follow up, the Obelisk Eruption happens far before any of that would matter, so the entire situation just gets ignored.

 If the party tries to open the case, they will find it fairly straightforward. There is no lock, and although it is sealed, most adventuring parties will have at least one member who is more than capable of opening the device:

Leather Scroll Case

Hardness 2; hp 2; Break DC 15

Inside is a simple parchment message:

pot in hall, goodbarrel

Cryptic, to say the least, particularly as the message is unsigned. There's nothing about the parchment, the ink, or the handwriting that is noteworthy, or which might shed additional light on the situation. Opening the case at all, whether it is then delivered or not, has a Catalyst Impact, which stacks with the impact of keeping the case.

If It's On Your Way (Open the Case): ⊠ Chaos +2

If the PCs open the scroll case and read the message inside, regardless of whether they then deliver the message, there is a Catalyst Impact: ⊠ Chaos +3.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

This is related to the Quest "Cinnamon's Son / New Jerseys", in which a cinnamon merchant feels slighted by Welby Goodbarrel. The note is, plainly, a threat from the merchant to Welby, and although not poisoned and quite frivolous, the real message is that the merchant cares enough about the feud to spend money on nothing more than a threat. The message is ultimately intended to accomplish little more than to spike the halfling merchant's blood pressure, and set him on edge as to the cinnamon master's next steps!

Note that once opened, it is impossible to reassemble the case so as to obscure the breach. If the party opens the case, they can patch it up as best they can, and then still attempt to deliver it. Despite their best efforts, Welby will immediately know they have tampered with the message, and his Attitude Tracker will decrease by -6 points. In addition, from then onward, when shopping at the General Store, no discounts will be given when they are rolled on Table 47: General Store Shopping Adjustments; treat any discount results as being normal prices. The party can attempt to placate the halfling by giving him the 200 gp delivery fee they were paid; this minimizes the Attitude Tracker impact to only -2, and eliminates the "no discount penalty" described above.

 If the party delivers the case, unopened, to Welby, they will gain  1 Reward Star... and, of course, the 200 gp that Sorille gave them initially.

If It's On Your Way (Delivery): ⊠ Law +2

If the PCs deliver the case as intended, whether they opened it or not, there is a Catalyst Impact: ⊠ Law +2.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

This Quest terminates if the party destroys the scroll case, delivers it, or declines the offer. So long as the party has the scroll case in their possession, whether it's been opened or not, this Quest remains active, meaning they could deliver the case at any time.

Map 9: Militia Guard Post (MGP)

BC-7: Mayor's Guardpost

This is very similar to the Militia Guard Posts scattered throughout the city. Unlike those posts, however, this one is always occupied during the daytime—nominally as a service to the deceased in the Graveyard. In reality, Mayor Symms staffs this post because it overlooks the Town Square, and (she feels) keeps revelry or conflicts from getting out of hand too quickly. In addition, it serves as a nice deterrent from citizens with nonsense issues approaching the main public entrance of the Mayor's House.

BC-8: Militia Guard Posts

All of the Militia Guard Posts around the city are identical in composition and nature.

During daylight hours, there is a  40% chance any given Post will have a single Berinncorte Militia soldier in it. Most militia members are male humans, but feel free to mix it up with female militiawomen and other representative races from the town's composition (see City Profile).

When the party approaches one of these posts for the first time, read the following text aloud. Only read the italicized portion of the text if it is determined that a militia soldier is present in the post.

 This guard post is not much more than glorified wooden roofed shed that provides some protection from the elements. Their only function appears meant to serve as relief areas for militia members who are making their rounds protecting the city.

Inside the post, leaning against one of the support beams, is a man in uniformed leather armor, picking his fingernails with the point of a dinged-up dagger.

If you are using this for guard posts of other orientation, please note that the large aperture should face toward the alley that the guard post “end-caps”.

Random Key NPCs

Militia Guard Posts are places where militia-related folk congregate to chat. An honest militia member will freely admit that unless a crime is actively being committed, or a citizen explicitly approaches them for assistance, guard duty tends to be boring. And so, much gossip and chatting occurs.

Help, Sir, Please Help Me!

Any NPC who approaches any Militia Guard Post may request assistance from the Militia stationed there. Typically, this would be in the context of the PCs attacking someone, and their fleeing to get help.

No matter the circumstances, the default reaction will be for  1d4+2 Berinncorte Militia to come immediately to the aid of whichever NPC shouted for them. By default, they will believe the word and request of a known citizen, and will assume the party—who are strangers to the town, unless the GM has arranged otherwise—is attacking them for nefarious purpose.

They will keep an open mind, however, and every round, they will ask both the NPC(s) being attacked and the PCs to lay down their arms and cease hostilities. If the PCs do, then the NPC(s) will as well, and the Militia will then ask both parties for more information about what caused all the ruckus.

Note that this may lead to one or more PCs getting Arrested.

MGP-1: Entrance

 Entry into the guard post is achieved via this archway, which contains no door.

This is an open entrance and exit into the guard post. There is no door or other means of blocking. Although this provides a Berinncorte Militia stationed here zero secrecy should they wish to take a nap on the job, it does allow them to sit on their stool and still have a view of the alley they are supposed to be keeping an eye on.

MGP-2: Windows

 To either side of the entryway is a shoulder-width window with no shutters or blinds.

To the left and right of the main entrance are two narrow windows. These are 3' x 3' open apertures.

MGP-3: Stool & Table

 Battered and chipped the wood may be, but this stool and table are serviceable for holding some basic necessities for a guard on duty—a cup, a candle, a knife, a platter, that sort of thing.

Every guard post has at least one stool—though it may be in disrepair—and a table of some sort, on which typically rests a candle (lit in the evenings, of course). Personal effects and eating supplies sprinkle across most tables. Any Militia who attempts to hide something or store supplies for later will put a bundle under this table.

BC-9: Blacksmith's Hut Overview

Only read the italicized portion if Dimblegruffe is present as the party is approaching (🎲 100% chance during daylight hours; 40% chance during dark):

🗨️ A blacksmith's hut stands to the west of the Town Square. Its eastern edge opens onto the Square. All manner of iron and steel works hang from the rafters around the edge of the structure—weapons and pieces of armor, but also more mundane and functional items such as hinges and doorknobs.

The rhythmic sound of a hammer on an anvil sings in the air as a determined and indefatigable dwarf woman works her forge relentlessly.

Blacksmith Dimblegruffe offers the standard services of a blacksmith for metal arms and armor, and will happily (if a bit gruffly) engage in commerce with the party if they so desire. Unless approached, she will ignore the party entirely. If the party isn't interested in buying, she's not interested in talking, and volunteers no outward opinion about any aspect of the town.

🔄 Replacement: Dimblegruffe

The blacksmith is an excellent replacement for Fighters, Barbarians, Paladins, or other martial characters. Please see p 16 for more explanation of how to undertake PC Replacement.

Despite this brusque demeanor, there's something compelling and charming about the dwarven forgesmith, however, and most townsfolk speak very positively of her if questioned.

Business Hours

The Blacksmith's Hut is open during daylight hours, plus one hour the latter side of sunset.

In addition, Dimblegruffe typically doesn't require a great deal of sleep: even during the evening hours, there is a 🎲 15% chance she is here, working (though she tries to keep her after-hours work to the quiet variety such as fletching or weaving leather or chain).

Shopping at the Blacksmith's Hut

Dimblegruffe has all Simple weapons, standard armor, and standard shields available for purchase at normal prices.

Table 24: Blacksmith's Hut Wares

Type	Chance	Price
Simple Weapons	Always	Standard prices.
Martial Weapons	80%	120% of normal prices.
Exotic Weapons	45%	150% of normal prices.
Armor & Shields	Always	Standard prices.

There's also a chance that Martial or Exotic weapons may also be for sale (roll separately for each weapon the party inquires about), but at premium prices.

Random Key NPCs

Dimblegruffe serves all comers, no matter their background, skills, talents, or politics. Nearly everyone needs something repaired from time to time, if they at all deal with anything metal—and the dwarven smith is the largely the only game in town for such needs.

BC-9: Blacksmith's Hut Map

BSH-1: Entrance

Only read the italicized portion below if Dimplegruff is currently working.

 The sounds of the blacksmith's hammer on iron echo through the Town Square. There is no curtain, door, or other buffer between the blacksmith's workspace and the large open market.

A dwarven smith is hard at work, bent over the tools of her trade. She doesn't acknowledge you as you approach; you can't even be sure she has even seen you yet.

This open-air entry area opens directly onto the Town Square. The sounds of Dimplegruff at work act as free advertising for the smithy whenever business is at hand—she is many things, but stupid is certainly not one of them!

Typically, a fire is kept lit against the north wall. This serves as another nice focal point for wanderers who may take an interest in the smithy's services.

Scattered across the work surfaces is an array of tools that can be counted as improvised hand weapons. These inflict 1d4 damage, have a thrown range of 10 ft., weigh 1 lb. apiece, and inflict either piercing or slashing damage.

Since it's such a large space, the Entrance is also used by customers and by Dimplegruff herself to try out the wares—during daylight hours, there is a  20% chance of someone wielding a weapon in this area to test the heft (or merely to impress those who might be watching).

Although she has much in the way of medieval-era marketing savvy, Dimplegruff also knows that mystique is another valuable bargaining tool: she will not go out of her way to greet the party as they arrive, and will perhaps acknowledge them with a curt nod while she goes about her business.

BSH-2: Workspace

Only read the italicized portion below if the dwarven smith is present.

 A long table littered with tools separates the entryway and Town Square from where the magic happens. Two firepits flank steel double doors in the center of the west brick wall. To the north is a workbench and an oven with bellows; to the south is a second oven and a giant barrel of water.

The smith is hard at work at her trade as you approach.

Sexist party members may be forgiven for assuming that blacksmith Dimblegruff is but a laborer for a true master smith, who is elsewhere. Stating such an assumption aloud automatically sets Dimblegruff's Attitude toward that character to Unfriendly.

This workspace, separated from the Town Square by no more than a large rectangular table, is the smith's true home. During daylight hours, there is a  95% chance she is here, working; even when she has no business contracted, she will continue to work tirelessly to create stock items or merely to appear busy to prospective clients.

At any given moment, there are  3d6 miscellaneous hand tools or small, "in-progress" weapons scattered about; treat these as Medium-sized, single-handed, Simple, Light melee weapons that inflict 1d4 damage with a standard x2 multiplier.

Given the preference, Dimblegruff will conduct all business here. She will lead customers into the Showcase Hall (below) only if asked to demonstrate her wares, or if asked for a specific Exotic or Martial weapon that she does in fact sell (see Shopping below).

The door leading to the Showcase Hall is steel. During daylight hours, it is unlocked and usually ( 70% chance) open; during evening hours or if for any reason Dimblegruff is not in the smithy, it is locked.

Blacksmith's Locked Steel Door

Break DC 22; Disable Device DC 20

BSH-3: Showcase Hall

 A long hall running from north to south is lined with high-quality tiles. Against the western wall is a thigh-high table, atop which are arrayed a wide variety of high-quality arms and armor.

Appointed nicely, this chamber is where the blacksmith's display pieces and nicer wares are shown. There are typically 2d12 items here arrayed in a pleasing manner.

BSH-4: Storage and Supplies

 The steel-reinforced double doors open onto a large storage area with a stone floor. Tables, chests, and bookcases are neatly arranged about the room; there is ample space to move about between them.

This large chamber with a stone floor is almost always locked; Dimblegruff has the only key. It is otherwise a normal locked door; the steel door to the north is meant as the primary safeguard against intrusion.

Within is a large array of forging supplies, completed products, and special orders. The PCs can find:

Blacksmith's Storage

3d12 Simple weapons (M); 2d8 Martial weapons (M); and 2d4-1 Exotic weapons

BSH-5: Personal Quarters

 This rectangular chamber has a decidedly warmer feel to it than the rest of the building. A washing basin sits in the middle. Two small tables lie on opposite sides of the room. A bed, writing desks, and some cabinets are also present.

Dimblegruff's personal quarters are located at the north of the building. There are very few items of true value here: a spare blacksmith's apron; four changes of common clothes; personal cleaning supplies.

There is no currency or other valuables here, a strange anomaly which may pique the party's interest if they are ransacking the establishment. At the GM's discretion, a  Knowledge (Profession) check (DC 12) may suggest to a party member that Dimblegruff seems to be doing a very successful business—it would be almost impossible for her to not have some currency or trade items somewhere.

BSH-6: Secret Stash

Only read the italicized portion if the party discovers the stash; if they do not search and find it, ignore this location entirely.

 You rummage through an arrangement of sacks—grain, rope, metal tidbits, scraps of leather and other smithing equipment and components.

At the bottom of the heap is a head-sized leather satchel of high quality, fastened with a shiny brass buckle.

The bag is notably different than its companions, and has a solid heft to it. From within comes the clink of coin when its contents shift.

Nested among an otherwise nondescript pile of sacks filled with various smithing supplies sits a drawstring leather bag.

Unless the party specifically indicates they intend to leave no stone unturned (i.e., "Take 20" for the Wisdom (Perception) skill check), this is a  DC 17 Wisdom (Perception) skill check. Success reveals the stash, which is neither trapped nor locked.

The stash contains:

Blacksmith's Secret Stash

28 pp; 178 gp; 355 cp; 1 onyx gem worth 63 gp; 1 square sapphire worth 37 gp

In practice, Dimblegruff roots through this bag as needed to conduct business, as she rarely keeps currency on her and prefers to conduct transactions using either exact change from her clients, or barter, neither of which requires on-the-spot use of coin.

The gems all belong to clients, who have given them to Dimblegruff as part of their request so she can work them into the hilt or other elements of the finished product.

Quest: Stilted Hiltwork

 Summary: The party loots a bag of gems meant to be used in metalwork for other customers.

 Rewards: Up to  1 Reward Star.

 Locations: Blacksmith's Hut.

 Key NPCs: Rhirem, Dimblegruffe.

 Kickoff: Begins only if the party discovers the Blacksmiths' Secret Stash, and takes the gems within for themselves.

 Description:

 1d4-1 hours after the party loots the gems, Rhirem approaches the blacksmith regarding his custom-forged jeweled dagger. A result of zero (0) means that Rhirem stops by as the PCs are thieving the gems.

If the party is looting during evening hours, then Rhirem drops by the smith's hut first thing the following morning.

If the party is at the Blacksmith's Hut when Rhirem stops by, or if they are in the Town Square, they overhear the exchange that follows.

The wizard had contracted Dimblegruffe to create the trinket as a spell component, and had given the smith the onyx gem (value 63 gp) to embed in the hilt.

He's expecting delivery of the completed object soon. Anxious to receive the item, and generally distrusting of others, Rhirem stops by to check the progress.

Dimblegruffe admits to not having yet begun work on the dagger, as she is swamped with other work that takes priority. Unsatisfied and frustrated, Rhirem asks for his gem back, and threatens to take his business elsewhere. Dimblegruffe well knows the wizard's local options are quite limited, as she is the only weaponsmith in town. She shrugs, and asks him to wait. Dimblegruffe then goes to her stash to find the gem.

 If the PCs are still in BSH-4: Storage and Supplies (above), they can try and hide; doing so in that room grants a +3 circumstance bonus to  Dexterity (Stealth) checks opposed by Dimblegruffe's Wisdom (Perception) skill. If Dimblegruffe notices the party, she will confront them: she will of course demand the return of her stash, plus at least 100 gp on top of that to keep her from turning the party in to the Berinncorte Militia; see Getting Arrested on p 48 for consequences.

 If the party attacks or threatens the blacksmith, she will fight back as only a disgruntled dwarf can, but she will try to maneuver so the fight goes outside, where she can call for guards. Should this occur,  1d4+1 Berinncorte Militia arrive 2 rounds after Dimblegruffe sets foot anywhere outside the steel double-door entrance in BSH-2: Workspace.

Stilted Hiltwork (Fight): Chaos +3

If the PCs attack Dimblegruffe, there is a Catalyst Impact of  Chaos +3.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

 If Dimblegruffe does not notice the party, or they are not in the supply room when the search occurred, the smith double-checks the pile of bags and surrounding part of the supply room. Coming up empty in terms of finding the gem, she then apologizes to Rhirem, who is quite irate. The dwarven smith soothes the wizard by offering to complete the job for free, should he provide a replacement gem. Still fuming, the wizard agrees, and storms off.

Stilted Hiltwork (Hide): Chaos +1

Successfully hiding from the blacksmith generates a Catalyst Impact of  Chaos +1.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

 If the party made an impression on Dimblegruffe in any way prior to the theft, she will remember the newcomers to the city and will seek them out, confronting them and demanding the return of the loot. In truth, she has nothing but a hunch to go on here; a  Wisdom (Perception) check opposed by the dwarf's Charisma (Deception) skill will reveal that the demand is all bluster. The party otherwise has the same options as described above in terms of returning the loot.

 It could be, instead, that the party has never spoken with the smith when all of this occurs. In such a case, give the situation 1 day; if the party speaks with Dimblegruffe during that time, then she immediately becomes suspicious and makes the demand above. If the PCs ignore the smith entirely, then she will start asking around; 1 day after the PCs stole her stash, she will track them down and confront them in the same manner as the other eventualities described.

The party stands to benefit from this quest only if they get away from the situation without having to return the loot, either by defeating Dimblegruffe or by besting her in a skill challenge. In such a scenario, the party of course keeps the stash, but benefits from 1 Reward Star. At the GM's option, you can grant the reward directly to the PC who performed the skill check(s) involved.

☒ Stilted Hiltwork (Talk):
☒ Chaos +1

Successfully skill check-ing their way out of this Quest in any fashion creates a Catalyst Impact: ☒ Chaos +1.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

☒ Stilted Hiltwork (Return Gem):
☒ Law +1

Whether compelled to do so, or if they voluntarily do so, returning the gem to Dimblegruffe generates a Catalyst Impact: ☒ Law +1.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

This Quest terminates if the party slays Dimblegruffe, if they successfully skill check their way out of all situations that apply, or if they return the gem.

Act I

BSH-7: Town Square

BSH-8: Lower-Class Residential District

BC-10: Zugul Church Garden Overview

Feel free to read the following when the party enters this area.

☐ A broad garden sports a lazy, quarter-circular stone path that approaches the church entrance to the north. Wildflowers and well-kept grass sprawl everywhere. A tiny wooden guard post lies on the southeast side.

This is a straightforward garden entrance to the Zugul Church to the north—peaceful, but otherwise boring. (For now!)

Peaceful Atmosphere

At your discretion, you may choose to ignore any “volatile” random encounter results rolled when the party is here. For the moment, before the Obelisk Eruption, this zone is an area of peace.

Random Key NPCs

Although this garden is technically affiliated with the Zugul Church, its size, splendor, and popular location so close to the bustling Town Square make it difficult to restrict only to followers of that god, even if that was High Priest Cannock’s intention. Unless someone is causing unrest, committing a crime, or interfering with those who wish to use the Garden as a means to enter the Church, no clergy will prohibit any citizen from making use of the quiet place of nature.

various flowering plants.

CGR-2: Church Entrance

During daylight hours, this entrance is generally open.

CGR-3: Pathway

☐ A well-worn quarter-circle stretches from the Town Square to the southern entrance to the Zugul Church. On either side are flowers of various types and sizes.

This pathway winds southwest to connect the Church Entrance with the Town Square to the west. On either side, it is lined somewhat haphazardly with

CGR-4: Town Square

CGR-5: Militia Guard Post

This is a standard Militia Guard Post in every way.

CGR-6: Alley Path

This alley separates the Garden and the Zugul Cleric House.

BC-II: Zugul Cleric House Overview

This is the “business office” of the Zugul Church. Here, ecclesiastical staff organize social outreach, discuss matters of faith, conduct counseling sessions, and other church business that would not necessarily be appropriate for the church itself. This is also where new adherents to the faith perform training, and where High Priest Cannock will organize and direct his staff.

During daylight hours, there is only a  15% chance the High Priest is present here, speaking with his brethren (unless, at the GM’s discretion, this would not make sense—for example, if the party has come here immediately following a Sermon at the church given by the High Priest!). During evening hours, this chance decreases to 5%, as the High Priest typically withdraws to the basement of the church itself.

 A serene quiet pervades this establishment. The only sound is hushed, contemplative conversation, the murmur of candles burning, and the scrawl of quills on parchment.

Acolytes of all ages garbed in clerical vestments of the Zugul Church roam about in their duties. As you enter, one of them walks over, smiles, and speaks:

At any given time,  3d4+2 Church Acolytes will be present. They are interested in the party’s arrival, and immediately upon their entrance, one Acolyte will approach and engage them in conversation. Their initial Attitude, unless given reason to feel otherwise, is Friendly.

In speaking with outsiders, they are motivated just as much by wanting the party to leave as they are to proselytize new applicants to the faith.

Random Key NPCs

Perhaps unsurprisingly, the only NPCs who might have business here are those with ties to the Zugul Church itself—largely clergy and related staff, but also citizens who have business with or complex requests of the church.

BC-II: Zugul Cleric House Map

CLH-1: Entrance

- Simple wooden double doors open onto a serene place of calm.

During daylight hours, these doors are kept open. At night, they are closed and locked as normal city doors; all clerical staff have keys.

CLH-2: Devotional

- A waist-high stone font sits in the middle of the entry area. Its water is clear and smells faintly of incense. To the west, a reclining statue sits atop a white marble dais, surrounded by candles.

At all times, there is a  15% chance that there are 1d4 Church Acolytes in this area, tending candles, praying, greeting visitors, and generally going about the business of a church, even though the Cleric House is more of an office than a church.

The font that greets visitors upon entry has no special magical powers, though devotees of the faith as well as visitors are encouraged to partake of its clean, clear water, which smells faintly of incense.

To the west, there is a statuary resting atop white marble, with dozens of lit candles at its base. There are no hidden chambers or other secrets to be found here, though if the party is exploring after dark, the GM is encouraged not to dissuade their efforts.

CLH-3: Pews

- Four wooden pews stand in formation to the east of the room, flanked by potted plants. A window opens to the alleyway to the north, admitting a little light.

Four pews lie facing the Devotional area to the west. The placement of hip-high flowerpots is such that it is somewhat of a maze to traverse from the entrance to the Common Area. In the northeast corner, against the easternmost pew, those attempting to Hide will benefit from a +4 circumstance bonus to their checks due to the lighting conditions and size of the plants.

During daylight hours,  1d4-1 villagers will be here, seated in the pews (treat these as Townfolk). Some come as overflow from the Zugul Church; others come for the relative quiet of this smaller establishment of worship.

CLH-4: Common Area

- Plain wooden double doors separate this area from the general space to the north; within is a hexagonal wooden table, a cabinet in the southwestern corner, a bench against the south and western walls, and a half-dozen bookshelves against the northwest and eastern walls.

During daylight and early evening hours, there is an  80% chance that 1d4-1 Church Acolytes will be here, eating a meal, reading a book, or otherwise conducting church business. This is a multifunction room, serving as both mess hall and office for the church's staff.

Among the bookshelves is scattered a number of texts, all secondhand, and none worth much ( 25 gp, total, for 350 pounds worth of reading material); searching them all exhaustively will take 5 minutes. At the GM's discretion, a failed  DC 12 Knowledge (Religion) check may convince a PC that they have discovered something of value; attempting to sell such a pilfered item will net only 1 sp.

CLH-5: Sleeping Chambers

- This appears to be the clerics' common bedchamber. A privy and wash basin appears to be in the southwest corner; a brick wall and a door provide some privacy. Each bed has a stool nearby, and tables and desks dot the room.

Six straw beds with pillows are arrayed here amidst various writing desks and bookshelves. During evening hours, there is a  60% chance that 1d4-2 of these will be occupied by sleeping Church Acolytes.

A washroom in the southwestern corner contains the nicest armchair in the building, and a wash basin that is typically kept filled with fresh water. There is nothing of value other than various sets of writing supplies (parchment, quills, etc.).

CLH-6: Apothecary

BC-12: City Gardens Overview

Nestled against the L-shaped wall that marks the city's southwestern corner is a triangle of lush greenery 50 ft. wide at the base and 70 ft. tall. The hypotenuse is formed by the river, with two bridges serving to connect the park to the village to the north and east.

Instead of rolling on the standard Random Encounters table for Berinncorte overall, while in the City Gardens, please refer to FlexTable 12: City Garden Random Encounters, above:

-  Use Context A:
Use during daylight hours, if no other set of prerequisites described below applies.
-  Use Context B:
Use during the nighttime.
-  Use Context C:
If the party is currently engaged in a Quest, or other focus, from which you would prefer they not be distracted.
-  Use Context D:

If the party has visited the City Gardens before, and has slain any Animal-type creatures. Additionally, automatically treat all Animals encountered has as Hostile.

Random Key NPCs

All manner of citizen is prone to take a stroll from time to time. As this area is somewhat low-challenge otherwise, the GM is encouraged to consider an intentional placement of key NPCs here, based on the feel of play.

If you would instead prefer a randomized population of key NPCs, please use the following table.

Table 28: Random Key NPCs, City Gardens

Suggested Population:  1d12-2 rolls (min. 0)

66-70	41-50	86-90	21-30	Bats	1d4-1 (min 1) bats roost in a tree nearby, and will attack if the party makes noise above a whisper (e.g., regular conversation). Applies after dark only; if rolled during daylight hours, you may choose to reroll or treat as Nothing.
71-75	51-60	91-94	31-40	Lizards	1d3 lizards who are initially indifferent to the party.
76-80	61-65	95-98	41-50	Fox	A single fox . She is hidden in bushes nearby and begins indifferent to the party. Should the party rest in the garden after this point, she will attempt to sneak a bite of food from their packs; a  DC 18 Wisdom (Perception) check causes that party member to awaken amidst the thievery.
81-85	66-70	99-00	51-60	Badgers	1d2 badgers. Each has its own attitude to the party: hostile (50%) or indifferent (50%). Combat of any kind against either badger will cause both to become hostile immediately.
86-90	71-75	-	61-70	Owl	A single great horned owl . While indifferent to the party and a standard creature in all stat-block respects, it is imbued ever so slightly with fey tendencies, such that if any party member disrespects nature to any degree, the owl becomes hostile and attacks at once.
96-100	81-90	-	71-80	Weasel	1d3 weasels scurry out of the underbrush. Whether they were chased by something larger, or are just out for a run, their shock at finding the party in their path causes them to turn hostile and attack.
-	91-100	-	81-90	Lone Thief	A common thief emerges from the shadows and attacks.
-	-	-	91-00	Thief Gang	1d2+1 common thieves attack, from multiple sides.

BC-12: City Gardens Map

GRN-1: East Bridge

☐ A solid-looking wooden bridge crosses the river here. To the west is the Garden; to the east is the Stables and Fishery.

This bridge connects the City Gardens with the Fishery & Stables.

GRN-2: North Bridge

☐ This bridge links the Gardens to the alley south of the Lower-Class Residential District to the north.

To the north, this bridge connects the City Gardens to the Lower-Class Residential District.

GRN-3: Pathway

☐ Grass of a slightly more trampled hue denotes this pathway, which winds around the outer edge of the Gardens. Twists and turns happen here and there, to no greater seeming purpose.

This trodden-foot pathway circles the gardens' lush, denser foliage. Its winding and meandering betrays no sense of order or human-made intention.

GRN-4: Mushroom Patches

☐ Flora appear to flourish all over the Gardens, but here you see a particularly bold patch of fungi. Knee-height and several handspans wide in the caps, these mushrooms seem both beautiful... and oddly out of place, somehow.

In patches along the pathway, sprouts of giant (caps 6"-18" in diameter) mushrooms bloom. Although the mushrooms themselves are neither poisonous nor otherwise extraordinary, they tend to attract wildlife and chaos. Whenever the party ventures near one of these patches, roll immediately on FlexTable 12: City Garden Random Encounters.

A general  Wisdom check (DC 14) will remind a character that mushrooms of practically any variety or origin tend to flourish in the shade or on the underside of trees or rocks—that several of these patches appear to be growing in broad daylight is a bit odd.

In reality, this is a symptom of the very faint Fey presence here in this garden.

BC-13: River

A freshwater river transects the south-west corner of Berinncorte. It varies in width between 10 ft. and 25 ft. across, and is between 2 ft. and 15 ft. deep in the center. Two simple wooden bridges span across it; these reach between 1 ft. and 3 ft. over the surface of the water.

The denizens of the water are of common, nonlethal, nonmagical variety—trout and small turtles are the largest threats. Current flows from northwest to the south.

The lands outside of Berinncorte will be described in greater detail in subsequent components of the  Adventure Path; should the party venture outside of the town via the river, the GM is encouraged to describe a common, nonthreatening temperate environment to the south and west.

BC-14: Bridges

These two simple wooden bridges span across the river (above); these reach between 1 ft. and 3 ft. over the surface of the water. Should the party find themselves in a situation where they, or others, are attempting to destroy the bridge, please use the following values:

Act I

BC-15: The Leaky Cask Tavern Overview

You may read the following text to the party as they enter the tavern from either of its entrances.

 You've been here before. Or, at least, in a place much like it: underpowered torch sconces, mainly to prevent the patrons from realizing how filthy it is; competent but bored serving wenches; and a general air of forced bonhomie swirl about the establishment.

You do a double-take when you take stock of the tavern's proprietor—a half-orc he may be, but quite an appealing one to be sure. His gaze washes over you too quickly for him to do more than acknowledge your arrival, but it's so confident and beautiful you find yourself interested in a drink all of a sudden.

The Leaky Cask Tavern is owned and operated by Jozan, a very capable and unusually charismatic half-orc. He is devoted to his establishment and its patrons, and will try and defuse any potentially lethal situation that crops up in the bar. He tends not to care what takes place immediately outside his bar, however; he will gladly kick any troublemakers out the door if he feels that's the safest way to keep the peace. In his experience, however, a free round of ale or a good meal tends to be the better approach—particularly with his smooth-talking manners.

Business Hours

The Leaky Cask Tavern is open from late morning to about 3 AM.

During daylight hours, there will be  2d4-1 generic townfolk here as patrons; double this number during the common meal times of lunch and dinner. After dinner, there are typically 3d6+2 patrons.

If the PCs inquire as to specific customers (e.g., “who's sitting at the corner table?”), the GM is encouraged to roll immediately on FlexTable 13: Random Tavern Encounters (below) to identify/generate specific NPCs of interest.

Jozan sells most food and drink listed in the Pathfinder Core Rulebook, at typical prices; see the table below for specific items.

Table 29: Leaky Cask Tavern Wares

Item	Price	Weight
Ale	4 cp	1 lb.
Bread	2 cp	½ lb.
Cheese	1 sp	½

Item	Price	Weight
Mead	5 cp	½ lb.
Meal, common	3 sp	-
Meal, good	5 sp	-
Meal, poor	1 sp	-
Rations, trail	5 sp	1 lb.
Wine, Common	2 sp	6 lbs.

Jozan employs 3 Serving Wenches: a half-orc named Thrunne, another half-orc named Ownka, and a male gnome named Zook Beren.

Thrunne and Ownka serve and cook; Zook is the brewer, responsible for ale and mead. All three affect a bored, yet competent, demeanor, and will answer basic questions about Berinncorte or Jozan himself. All three are well familiar with the proprietor's impropriety in his second job as a sometimes-gigolo, but none judges him for it—in fact, Zook is secretly a bit jealous of the success his boss has found in such endeavors.

Random Key NPCs

Taverns, bars, and establishments of their ilk are the lifeblood of many towns. Men and women of all rank and position enjoy a good meal and a fine brew, and the citizens of Berinncorte are little different in this regard.

Of special note in the Leaky Cask Tavern, however, is that there is some potential for overlap between using the Random Key NPCs table, and using the Random Tavern Encounters table (see below). As the GM, you are entitled to negotiate this as you desire; one approach is to make key NPC determinations first, then roll for random encounters; should a key NPC required for a random encounter not be among those rolled for populating the tavern, then simply have the required NPC enter the building at that point. Alternately, you can simply introduce the key NPC as one whom the party had not specifically viewed prior to the random encounter starting.

Random Tavern Encounters

For every 20 minutes the party (or at least one PC) spends in the Tavern, roll once on FlexTable 13: Random Tavern Encounters.

- Use Context A:
As the default, if no other circumstances below apply.
- Use Context B:
If the party has already visited the Tavern, or has already run into Jozan or one of the serving wenches.
- Use Context C:
If the party is currently occupied on a Quest, or other focus from which you would prefer they not be disturbed.
- Use Context D:
If any party member has been caught sneaking around in any establishment prior to this, or if the party has had a combat encounter in either the Inn or the Tavern.

Quest: A Shady Deal

Summary: The party overhears a negotiation at a neighboring table. It sounds less like a deal, and more like a strong-arm tactic.

Rewards: Up to 1 Reward Star; loot.

Locations: Leaky Cask Tavern.

Key NPCs: Einkill Holderhek, Cora Brushgather.

Kickoff: Make a DC 12 Wisdom (Perception) check for each PC; any who succeed happen to overhear a conversation at the round table near location TVN-9: Corner Table. Exact words are difficult to make out, but between the tone, volume, and gesticulations, it’s clear that there’s more threat than deal on offer: an armed and armored dwarf is pressuring a halfling into something she’s not wholly comfortable with.

Description:

The threatening dwarf is Einkill Holderhek, a none-too-bright mercenary fighter. Though quite dim, he’s nevertheless managed to become something of an entrepreneur, an odd combination fence for stolen goods and protection racketeer.

Einkill’s typical approach is to confront an obviously weaker patron of either the Tavern or the General Store, offering an item of dubious origin for an inflated price. He makes it plain that the sale comes with a fringe benefit: not getting beaten. Who could refuse?

In this particular instance, Einkill has cornered Cora Brushgather, a sprightly young halfling unaccustomed to direct confrontation.

She secretly longs to work at the Library, though she has had no formal training or education. Einkill is offering a journal book for 25 gp—two and a half times its normal price. The dwarf of course has no use for the book himself, and is just trying to get rid of it; through sheer happenstance, Cora would actually have great use for the item and would love to purchase it, but the price represents her entire wealth at the moment.

The party has a few options here:

👉 They can simply ignore the transaction and conversation. If the GM wishes to provide a further incentive for the party to engage, feel free to have Einkill offer to reduce the price if the comely halfling would only just accompany him next door to the Inn, where they could rent a room for a few hours. (Needless to say, Cora is not interested to the point of panicked shock at this turn in the conversation.)

⊗ A Shady Deal (Ignore): ⊗ Chaos +1

Ignoring the situation creates a Catalyst Impact: ⊗ Chaos +1.

👉 Paladins and pretty much any PC of a Good alignment should probably stop by and interrupt the conversation, challenging Einkill as to whether Cora is really interested in the deal. A ⚠️ Charisma (Persuasion) or Charisma (Intimidation) check, opposed by Einkill's Charisma (Intimidation) check will convince him to drop the price to the normal market price of 10 gp; Cora will begrudgingly accept this offer. Should the PCs wish, they may attempt a second ⚠️ opposed check; if successful, then Einkill will shrug and simply give the book to Cora rather than cause further fuss. If this happens, the party should benefit from an award of ✨ 1 Reward Star.

🗨️ A Shady Deal (Talk): 🗨️ Law +2

If the PCs apprehend the miscreant and talk with her successfully, there is a Catalyst Impact: 🗨️ Law +1.

If either check fails, Einkill will challenge the PC involved to a fight outside. If the party refuses, Einkill will unsling his warhammer attack right there in the bar; doing so will cause Jozan to come over and bodily shove both Einkill and the PC involved out the TVN-1: Northern Tavern Entrance, where the fight takes place once those involved dust themselves off.

If the PC accepts the challenge, then Einkill follows the party outside, where he will fight the one PC who had challenged him. Whether the PC accepts, or if thrown out by Jozan, the party may elect a different combatant from their ranks if they wish. If more than one party member joins the fight, or if he is losing at any point, the dwarf will try and flee.

If the party defeats Einkill, they are not subject to punishment by the law, as dueling is legal in Berinncorte. Chivalrous PCs may wish to gift the looted journal book to Cora, who will be immensely thankful. In this scenario, at the GM's discretion, they may receive an additional reward of ✨ 1 Reward Star.

⊗ A Shady Deal (Fight): ⊗ Chaos +2

Fighting Einkill, under any circumstances, produces a Catalyst Impact of ⊗ Chaos +2.

Note that regardless of the outcome, this Quest and event is a good introduction to Cora, whom the PCs may recognize from the drawing in Aramil's secret Experimentation Chamber in the context of the Quest "Morbid Curiosity".

RTE-2: A Waywocket With Jewels

☞ In a corner table, a homely and scar-faced gnome sits alone. A thin stein of mead sits nearby, largely untouched; her hands are instead busy fiddling with an array of artisan tools. A small handful of gemstones in various states of retouching and carving are spilled across the table.

This is Waywocket Ningel, a gnomish artisan of some repute. Her skills range from gemcutting and jewelry to stonemasonry; in fact, she did most of the stonework on the two churches in town and has worked both within and outside the Mayor's House.

Waywocket doesn't like to work alone, or in silence, so she does much of her work here, among the people. This approach has two other benefits: word of her skill spreads as even casual customers will take note of gemcraft occurring at an otherwise common drinkery, and she tends to benefit from the relative safety of the space as opposed to a private workspace at home, where intruders could simply storm in and steal her wares.

The gnome typically carries only supplies sufficient for her current work in process. She takes on, at most, two projects at a time, and is completing one project when the party first encounters her.

Mechanically, Waywocket can create masterwork jewelry for the party, and will gladly buy any gems they discover at full price. Should the PCs desire, she can also polish and cut a found gem to improve its value. This process takes one day per 200 gp (or increment thereof) of initial value of the gem involved, costs 10% of the initial value, and results in an increase of  2-50% (2d10 x 5) of the initial value (roll this improved amount only at the end of the process). So the gem is improved by, at worst, the cost of the process.

RTE-3: An Evocative Offer

☞ On the south side of the bar sits a young man wrapped in a cloak. He takes small, quick sips from his ale every minute, seemingly like clockwork. He looks at many of the other patrons occasionally, never seeming to quite meet their gaze yet appraising them all the same. He looks at you, takes you in, and then moves on to look at others.

Rhirem is a human level 3 Evoker, a wizard mercenary whose arcane talents are for hire to the highest bidder.

Replacement: Rhirem

Though his Alignment may present a challenge for some players (and parties), Rhirem is a great replacement for combat spellcasters who have lost their PC. Please see p 16 for more explanation of how to undertake PC Replacement.

The wizard typically charges 50 gp per day, plus an equal cut of any treasure the group comes across. He may be willing to forego his service charge, for either an equivalent value in specifically-mentioned treasure, or for a triple-portion of split booty.

Given the chance, he will betray his employers without too much guilt... but typically, the protection offered by adventuring with others outweighs whatever short-term benefits he may otherwise see.

The party may engage Rhirem in conversation, but unless they are interested in his services, he limits himself to mentioning his talents and his daily rate.

☞ Though right now, the PCs likely have little need for the additional combat advantage the man represents, his talents may become much more desirable in the aftermath of the Obelisk Eruption.

RTE-4: Rat-a-Tat-Tat

☞ A rustling and rummaging sound comes from underneath and behind the bar, though none of the staff is standing nearby. As you try to get a better look, there is a spattering of squeaks, and the furry and vicious forms of the dreaded tavern rat approaches you!

 1d4+1 Rats emerge from somewhere under the bar, and attack the party. At the GM's discretion, a  DC 13 Wisdom (Perception) check will give the party a round to either prepare or avoid the bats.

Other than the normal XP reward, the rats of course carry no treasure. Defeating the rats will earn the party pats on the back from all patrons, and a free round of drinks and meals from Jozan, who, at the news of having rats in his bar, will shake his head in all sincerity, and say "rats! In my bar! Who'd have thunk it possible?"

RTE-5: Ranger Stranger

☞ In a corner of the room sits an elven ranger. His garb and demeanor make no attempt to hide his chosen profession and way of life; in fact, he seems to be going out of his way to make his presence known in the small bar.

Gyldor is a male elven Ranger 5; his wolverine companion Glyff typically waits in an alley outside or sometimes even outside the town walls while the elf conducts his business in Berinncorte.

Just what that business is—that's a mystery to Jozan and other tavern denizens, too. The ranger will typically show up at least two times a week, order a common meal and a few mugs of ale, and leave after a few hours, usually without having spoken more than a handful of words to anyone present. Though most view this behavior as certainly odd, it's not harming anybody, and truth be told, Jozan is glad to have a strong presence on occasion in case things with unruly customers get too dicey.

Frustratingly, perhaps, this encounter is precisely what it appears: a mysterious, but otherwise uninteresting and unengaging, ranger. If approached, he will scowl into his drink and pointedly ignore the PCs. You may make a  DC 18 Wisdom (Perception) check when this occurs; success indicates that the ranger may seem disinterested, but is keenly aware of the PCs and their presence in town.

 A quick glimpse the man's abilities reveals that he seems custom-tuned to be a weapon against the chaotic and the undead... skills which will become invaluable in the wake of destruction caused by the Obelisk Eruption.

RTE-6: Noises From Below

 THUD! THUD! CLUD! From beneath the floorboards of the bar comes a dull thudding noise. After a few moments, the noises cease. Zook grimaces and shakes his head, sets down the handfuls of mugs he had been carrying, and kneels by the trapdoor. In a few seconds, he's gone, down below to the basement.

The party doesn't hear any further noises from the basement. Zook emerges five minutes later as though nothing had happened.

This somewhat unsettling and bizarre event is fairly commonplace in the tavern. Though the PCs may imagine there's a tethered ogre down there, the reality is far less sinister: Zook is the tavern's brewer, and the equipment he uses downstairs to brew ale and beer occasionally emits "hiccups" as compressed air escapes. His departure underneath is to inspect the gear and make sure everything is as intended. Though he secretly cherishes the responsibility, Zook affects annoyance whenever this occurs. If questioned, he is transparent about the nature of the noises, though such a mundane description may only make the PCs more interested, and serve to entice them back to investigate after-hours, when they can gain access to the mysterious underbelly of the bar.

RTE-7: Well, Hello There

Only use this encounter if there is at least one female PC in the party with a Charisma greater than 11; otherwise, you may treat it as No Encounter, or re-roll on FlexTable 13: Random Tavern Encounters.

Jozan takes a break from his busy duties tending bar to approach the party—and specifically, to address a comely female PC. If there is more than one female PC with a qualifying Charisma score, select the one with the lowest qualifying Charisma—Jozan seeks out the clientele most likely to engage his services in such a situation. The “you” in the passage below refers to this selected PC.

 The bartender finishes washing a mug, and bends to return it to its place underneath the bar. When he straightens, he looks right at you—and seems to see you for the first time. Just like that, though, the moment is gone, and his gaze and demeanor seem to expand to include the rest of your party as well.

Conversation begins innocently enough: the barkeep asks after the party, how they came to be in town, how long they plan on staying, that sort of thing. He also asks whether they have heard any recent gossip or rumors; if the party indicates they have not, he will provide a tidbit at random.

Jovially, the proprietor makes a sweeping gesture to TVN-3: Long Table, which at the time of this encounter is conveniently bereft of customers. He summons both Thrunne and Ownka to tend to the table; they are to give the PCs a round of good meals and ale, on the house. He just has a few questions for the target of his endeavors, while her comrades get started on the food and drink. (Any party member may attempt a  DC 17 Wisdom (Perception) check to detect that the serving wenches roll their eyes, well used to this approach and its intended result.)

In fairly short order, Jozan gets around to business, offering his “services” as a gigolo. He mentions that there is an Inn next door, with whom he has an understood arrangement.

The exact form of the proposition, and how explicit and aggressive Jozan is in pursuing things, is left to the GM's discretion. Though this is indeed an encounter involving history's oldest profession, it's also respected that such matters can be sensitive things, perhaps not suited for your particular gaming group. In such a circumstance, it's recommended that the GM omit this encounter entirely rather than risk offending or frustrating a player.

 If the lady agrees, then they are off to business next door. It is left to the GM as to for how long this takes, though the GM is encouraged to roll again on FlexTable 13: Random Tavern Encounters for something to keep the rest of the party busy in the meantime. Jozan is experienced and competent at his second trade; once money has changed hands, and services rendered, at the GM's option, the involved female PC benefits from the following effect:

Barkeep Afterglow

+1 circumstance bonus on all skill checks for 2 days

RTE-8: Drinking Cryptkeeper

(Not to be confused with BRE-10: Drunken Cryptkeeper.)

 An aged, dirty gnome sits at the edge of the bar. He drinks, shakenly, from a clay mug. He looks at nothing but his drink, and, occasionally, the surface of the bar itself.

As you watch, he drains his tankard. Without looking up, a serving wench approaches and takes it from his withered hand. She's poured it and replaced the mug before the gnome's hand can rest back on the table.

With a sigh, he grasps the replenished refreshment and tips it to his lips.

This is Cryptkeeper Gurth. After a few more rounds of progressively impaired imbibing, he scatters his money on the wood and lurches out the TVN-1: Northern Tavern Entrance.

 If the party follows, Gurth will lead them back to the Cryptkeeper's Shack. Unless the party physically confronts him along the way, he takes no heed of the PCs at all. Once inside, he collapses on his bed and passes out. At this point, he is so unconscious that the party can loot his humble establishment at their leisure; again, unless they physically confront or attack him, he's oblivious.

RTE-9: Impromptu Performance

 From across the bar, the sound of a mandolin, expertly wielded, arises. Within moments, the entire tavern is clapping along, hooting and hollering their appreciation of the performance.

Lingona, a human Bard 3, is a regular at the Leaky Cask Tavern. When the mood strikes her, she'll whip out her mandolin, give a quick performance, and then, just when the crowd is fully engaged, she'll put it away just as quickly as it appeared, and return to her drinks. This used to irritate other frequent drinkers, but everyone is used to her eccentricities now.

Replacement: Lingona

Players who have lost their Bard PC may swap out for Lingona instead. It's a great opportunity to roleplay her somewhat chaotic and ruthlessly free-spirited demeanor. Please refer to p 16 for more explanation of how to undertake PC Replacement.

This unpredictable pattern of musical interludes serves an ulterior function: Lingona's half-elven rogue 2 lover, Phadian Gess, who is in the tavern whenever she is. Phadian will typically sit across the room from his mate; while she performs, he will use the distraction to pick pockets.

The rogue is quite experienced, and the two have done this long enough to know just how much to pilfer without stirring up too much concern.

During the performance of this encounter, one of the PCs (randomly determine which one) is the victim. Make a Wisdom (Perception) check for the PC, opposed by a  Sleight of Hand check for Phadian. If the rogue wins, then 4d12 gp worth of currency is stolen from that PC; if they have any gems, the least-valuable one is also pilfered. If the rogue loses the opposed check, the PC catches him in the act.

 Phadian is no coward, but he can count, and chances are good the PCs outnumber him and his bard lover. If caught, the rogue will initially offer to trade information for escape; choosing this option gets the party  1d4+1 rolls on the Rumors and Tales table, and of course the return of the stolen goods.

If the party declines this offer, or makes any attempt to turn him in to the Berinncorte Militia, he will signal to Lingona, who will cast charm person on the burliest PC involved. She will follow up with cause fear, and subsequently dancing lantern as a means to distract the party while her lover escapes.

If the rogue is not caught red-handed, Lingona may be approached in the tavern. She knows much of Berinncorte and its environs, and will gladly trade information for gold: 10 gp for the first roll on the Rumor and Tales table; past that, each successive roll for a new result will cost an additional 5 gp (so, 15 gp for the second roll, 20 gp for the third, and so on).

 Phadian will die in the Obelisk Eruption attack, but the GM should make every attempt to keep Lingona alive during this and subsequent encounters. The bard knows far, far more about Berinncorte's ancient history than she makes plain; this knowledge will prove valuable in the devastation of the Eruption and the party's subsequent efforts to defeat the minions of Chaos.

BC-15: Leaky Cask Tavern Ground Floor

TVN-1: Northern Tavern Entrance

- ❑ A plain wooden door bears a lock with key scratches; it appears to be in normal use.

During early morning hours (2am in some cases, 4am other nights), this door is locked.

Break DC 16; Disable Device DC 14

Opening as it does onto the Town Square, this serves as the building's main entrance for customers.

TVN-2: Southern Tavern Entrance

- ❑ This plain wooden door has a steel lock plate.

During evening hours, this door is locked.

Locked Wooden South Tavern Door

Break DC 16; Disable Device DC 14

Typically this door is used as either an exit for customers resuming other business elsewhere in the city, or as a “staff entrance” for Jozan and his serving wenches. After daylight hours, it's locked mainly so the bar staff can keep their attention focused on the single entrance, to protect against those who might try skipping out before paying their bill.

TVN-3: Long Table

- ❑ A long, rectangular table sits here, stretching nearly the width of the entire establishment. Chairs of all manner sit haphazardly about it. The surface of the table bears scratches, dents, and cuts of varying thickness and depth.

This enormous table is nearly the width of the whole Tavern, and seats 15. It's meant as a communal dining area, and is indeed used for that during lunchtime. In the evening hours, however, this table takes the form of a gaming area, where all manner of typical bar games are played—dice, cards, and daggers.

PCs who sit down here looking to enjoy a drink, meal, or solitude will soon find themselves awkwardly out of luck.

TVN-4: Bar

- ❑ Occupying the entire middle third of the tavern, and demanding attention from all in the building, is the U-shaped bar—little more than a series of planks placed atop a chest-high wall of bricks, really. Over a dozen stools of all manner are speckled around its perimeter, atop which sit a sporadic handful of patrons in various states of gleeful inebriation.

The center of the establishment is a well-stocked and efficiently-run bar in a U-shape opening toward the western wall. Candlesticks of varying quality and upkeep are scattered here and there; utensils and vessels for dining are similarly haphazard. That said, when food is served, it's always with clean equipment, and the fare, though simple, is hearty and filling, and at a reasonable price.

Bar staff may raise a plank at either the northwest or southwest edges to move from the tavern's general space to behind the bar proper. Typically there's not much in the way of “table service” outside the bar itself, but for tavern regulars (e.g., Waywocket Ningel), wenches may make a special trip.

Any PC sitting at the bar need only wait a few minutes at most before being attended to, brusquely but effectively, by either Thrunne or Ownka.

TVN-5: Food Prep Station

- ❑ In the center of the bar area, two waist-high wooden tables have been placed together. Food and tools of various types and in various states are scattered here. Every once in a while, you see one of the serving wenches carve off some meat or slice a hunk of bread to put on a platter.

Meat, cheese, bread, and sundries lie in various states of assembly on this broad wooden table. It's deep enough that two, or even three, wenches can be working at it simultaneously, and they often are during peak meal times.

Aside from food, the table holds a few utensils of common quality and an assortment of edged tools that count as Small-sized daggers if used as improvised weapons in the heat of the moment.

TVN-6: Inner Bar

- ❑ Behind the U-shape of the bar planks is a rectangle of waterproofed, checkered tile. This is the inner bar area, where the half-orc bartender and his serving wenches are working to address the needs of their clientele.

When not actively hoisting supplies from the basement (see below) or helping customers in the tables around the outer edges of the tavern, Jozan and his three serving wenches can be found here, constantly working to take and fulfill orders. Monies collected during their shift are kept on the staff's person; at the end of the night, they settle up.

TVN-7: Casks

☞ In the western region of the bar area, two wooden casks sit, their lids ajar. As you watch, serving wenches dip mugs into one or the other cask; from your limited experience, you judge one to be ale, the other... well, you're not quite sure what it is.

Two giant casks of alcohol sit in the southwestern corner of the bar. They are generally open-topped—when the barrels are full, staff simply dip drinking vessels to refill them; spigots are also available on the bottom.

Evil-minded PCs could easily poison the entire room with a subtle and concentrated dose of poison dropped from just over the bar; this would require a A DC 20 Dexterity (Stealth) check to avoid notice (DC 24 during non-peak times).

Mechanically, this would require about 20 normal single-use doses of any poison administered via ingestion or touch. In addition, the quicker the onset time, the fewer patrons would be affected, as once one customer started acting strangely, all but the dullest would push their drinks away out of instinct.

TVN-8: Basement Trapdoor

☞ In the northwestern corner of the bar area, you notice a wooden trapdoor on hinges. Its iron handle is to the west; to the north, a single rusting rung has been bolted into the brick that supports the bar planks, presumably to facilitate egress from below.

During business hours, this trapdoor is kept unlocked; wenches or Jozan himself will Strength (Athletics) down here several times throughout an average evening to restock supplies (or as part of RTE-6: Noises From Below).

When the tavern is closed, the hatch is treated as an uncommonly challenging locked wooden door:

Locked Wooden Tavern Basement Trapdoor

Break DC 16; Disable Device DC 18

Once opened in this manner, the trapdoor will open and close without further incident until it is discovered the next morning.

This trapdoor leads to the Inn / Tavern Basement. Gaining access to the Tavern from the basement requires the same checks as described above, but apply a -2 circumstance penalty seeing as how an attempting PC will be working in the sub-optimal situation of clutching a ladder and working above his/her head.

TVN-9: Corner Table

☞ A rectangular table with six wooden chairs sits in the northeastern corner of the establishment. Candles in various stages of melt are scattered over the top. Several bar patrons are sitting there, talking or hunched over their fare.

This is by far the most popular location in the entire establishment. It's in a corner, far from the northern door, and has ample seating and dim lighting. It's perfect for a romantic interlude, a nefarious transaction, or just a good old-fashioned inebriated sulk.

TVN-10: Entrance Table

☞ A misshapen, octagonal wood table lies just inside the Tavern's northern entrance. Chairs sit haphazardly around it; it's difficult, in fact, to sit so as not to have to move when others use the door.

The second-most-popular table in the tavern. This and the Corner Table will typically fill up before anyone sits at the bar itself. However, its location being so close to the Northern Tavern Entrance (above) prevents it from being used by any patrons here on sinister intent.

TVN-11: Inn

TVN-12: Town Square

BC-16: Inn Overview

“Inn” is the name of Berinncorte’s only establishment welcoming travelers and visitors to the city. For downtrodden or simply cheap citizens, there is the Lower-Class Residential District, but travelers with coin are dissuaded from staying there. Whether the inn’s name (or lack thereof) is due to a deficiency of creativity on the part of its lizardfolk Summoner owner Esk, or if it is an intentional though weak attempt at humor, most don’t know... and don’t care.

Esk takes a little getting used to... but is generally as pleasant as can be. He knows he’s an aberration in these parts, and goes the extra mile not just to fit in, but to avoid conflict. He claims to have no opinion on any matters, but can always be relied upon to point you in the right direction to someone who CAN opine.

Cleaning up after the rooms, preparing the occasional meal, and providing some flute-based entertainment (at either the Inn or the Tavern) is Mardnab Scheppen, a gnomish Bard. She’s not good with the flute, and knows it; her true calling lies in textiles, though she lacks the confidence to approach the textile master about an apprenticeship.

Business Hours

The Inn is open round the clock, as customers might arrive at any time of day.

Staying at the Inn

Rates for staying at the Inn are 5 gp per person, per night. This does include one meal and accompanying drink at the Leaky Cask Tavern, with which Esk has an arrangement.

Unless the party has already snuck around and you have determined that too many rooms are already occupied with other guests, you may assume that Esk automatically has sufficient empty rooms to accommodate whatever sleeping arrangements the PCs desire.

Other Guests

Certain rooms are more favorable than others, and the Inn’s business waxes and wanes, often unpredictably. Each room’s description indicates the likelihood that it is already spoken for and occupied by a guest.

Unless otherwise indicated in a room’s entry, treat all Inn Guests as Townsfolk from a statistics standpoint. Any given guest is typically from out of town, and here only for 1d4 days. Should the party engage a given Inn Guest, the GM is encouraged to invent a specific NPC and backstory and so on, or simply have the guest dissuade the party from further discussion and keep them anonymous.

Guest Rooms

Unless otherwise specified, guest room doors have the following generic profile.

Locked Wooden Inn Guest Room Door

Break DC 16; Disable Device DC 14

If a guest room is already occupied (see Other Guests above), any cabinet or storage furniture it contains will hold 1d4-1 extra sets of Peasant’s Outfits (minimum zero), and 2d12 cp.

Random Key NPCs

It’s rare that a citizen of Berinncorte will take a room in the town’s Inn for the night, so there’s typically little call for additional key NPCs to be floating about. On occasion, however, a Militia member may be inquiring about a certain person’s whereabouts, or someone who normally sleeps out of the city proper may need a place to quickly crash for the night.

When determining such Random Key NPCs placement, consider whether it makes sense for them to be in a common area where the PCs would likely be—or if they might just be in their assigned room, sleeping.

If you have already rolled to determine which rooms are already occupied, you may “replace” one of the Townsfolk in said rooms with one or more key NPCs rolled on the Random Key NPCs table below.

BC-16: Inn Map Ground Floor

INN-1: Main Inn Entrance

Wooden double doors swing into the building. From the interior comes a warm, but stale, smell—inviting yet musty. You've arrived at an inn, for sure.

These doors are not usually locked; the Inn expects potential customers at pretty much any time of day, and current customers must be able to come and go as they please. There is a lock in the door, to which both Esk and Mardnab have a key. It is a standard locked door:

Locked Wooden Main Inn Door

Break DC 16; Disable Device DC 15

INN-2: Entrance Area

There is a large foyer here, with a few chairs and tables and a halfling-sized potted planet that has seen better days. To the southeast is a hallway stretching back toward the rear of the building; to the west is a chest-high partition with a wood-planked top surface. Wall scones burn shallowly but effectively for a cozy light.

This rectangular room serves as a foyer / reception area, and a common area for guests to congregate. There's always some candles atop the tables, and the chairs are comfortable (if a bit well-used). Upon entering this area, within $1d4$ minutes, Esk or Mardnab will greet the party from the Front Desk (below).

INN-3: Front Desk

During any time of day, there is an 85% chance that an inn-worker will be present here; 60% of the time it will be Esk; 40% of the time, it will be Mardnab Scheppen. Make a secret roll to determine these factors as the PCs enter the Inn. The 15% of the time a worker is not present here, Esk is either asleep or working; unless the party is trying to be sneaky, he will hear them and appear within $2d8$ minutes.

Only read the italicized portion below if it is determined that an inn-worker is already here.

Behind a chest-high partition is an array of keys on pegs, paperwork, writing tools, and a handful of books.

From behind the partition, someone appears suddenly, standing up from fiddling with supplies underneath. "Can I help you?" they say.

Either Esk or Mardnab is good for general pleasantries; please refer to their Conversation sections for additional details with which they might each be forthcoming.

INN-4: Meeting Room

The majority of this room is occupied by a rectangular wooden table ringed with six chairs. A cupboard sits to the north, a single wooden door hinges to the east, and wooden double doors connect to the south. There is a palpable scent of mustiness; you look closer, and notice that a thin film of dust sits atop the table.

This room is hardly ever used, as meetings aren't typically necessary in an inn comprised of two workers. But as Esk would point out, it's too small and poorly-positioned to be another guest room, and there's no need of additional storage for supplies between the Office (below) and the Basement.

As a result, this is referred to as the "meeting room", but in practice, it's workspace for when Esk cares to write letters, keep records, or reconcile paperwork.

The cupboard to the north contains plates and cups and is otherwise unremarkable.

INN-5: Office

A roughly square-shaped room has wooden double doors to the northwest, and a single steel-reinforced door to the southeast. Against the northeastern corner is a large wooden table, topped with sacks of grain and a huddle of candles whose wax has sealed their bases to the wood. The southwest corner contains a storage chest, a large hip-high urn, two barrels, and a large cupboard with smaller sacks on its top.

Esk calls this the “office”, but there are no quills or papers; it is essentially a large storage closet for commonly-needed items. Rummaging through the containers will likely alert Esk in his bedchamber to the south, or either inn worker if they are attending the Front Desk to the north. Every minute the PCs spend searching, make a secret Dexterity (Stealth) check at DC 12: failure means one or both workers hear something, and come into the room to investigate.

If the PCs do not explicitly indicate their intention to try and be quiet, increase the DC by 5.

No container here is locked, but some are trapped. While most contain cleaning and bedding supplies, more noteworthy things to find are described below.

INN-6: Owner's Quarters

This appears to be the bedchamber and private quarters of the Inn's owner. A simple but clean feather bed sits in the southwest corner of the room. A washing basin is in the northwest, with a large wooden table to its south, atop which sit several candles. A dressing and writing desk is to the northeast, south of the steel-reinforced door that connects to the Office to the north. A simple wooden door is to the southeast, and in the midst of the room is a threadbare and ordinary rug.

These are indeed the personal quarters of Esk, the building's owner and the Inn's master.

The door to the southeast is locked and trapped. Only Esk has a key, though Mardnab knows of the trap.

INN-7: Storeroom

This cramped square chamber sits beneath the stairs going up to the east. There is a great deal packed in here: a storage chest, several small casks, and a handful of mice that skitter away as you open the door.

These containers store food and wine, used on rare occasion to entertain guests when they stay over during a celebration or holiday. The storage chest in the northwest is locked, but frustratingly empty:

In the northeast is a trap door; it is not a secret door, but in all the clutter, it is possible to miss it; the GM is encouraged not to volunteer it in your description, instead forcing the players to notice it as drawn on the map itself and comment as to investigating further. Once noticed, it is rather easily bypassed, however; the wood has started to rot, and the lock is very old and partially rusted. Both Esk and Mardnab bear keys to this trapdoor.

A damp scent of raw earth escapes the chamber, but it does not seem overly moist.

This trapdoor leads to the Inn/Tavern Basement's eastern chamber.

This entrance is almost always kept locked. It's used by Esk or Mardnab (both of whom have keys) to return to the building after hours, or as a means of escape if anything serious happens.

The door itself has the following profile:

INN-11: Hallway

Across the length of the building stretches a hallway. Two doors are closed to the west; to the north, it opens into the foyer area.

At any given time, there is a 10% chance that someone will be walking down this hallway; if this is determined, the GM may roll again to determine who: there is a 35% chance it is Esk, a 40% chance it is Mardnab, and a 25% chance it is an Inn Guest.

INN-12: Guest Room 1

The northern guest room on the ground floor is a small, but uncramped, affair, with a threadbare rug, small table with a few chairs, a functional-and-not-much-more straw bed, and a small combination cupboard / desk in the southwest corner.

As it is the closest room to the foyer, and the main entrance of the Inn, this guest room is typically the very last one to be occupied, and is therefore empty unless there is a full house (or a problem in one of the other rooms, for example, damage to furniture).

When and if the PCs enter it, there is a 90% chance it is unoccupied; the remainder of the time, it is occupied by a single guest.

These features have all been placed intentionally by EsK so as to lend somewhat of an upper-class air to the rooms on this level. In truth, they are slightly nicer than those below: larger, and with a private privy in each.

This nice rectangle of a room contains all the necessary amenities: a dressing desk with chair, private privy, bed, and storage cabinet. A small but clean window allows a nice view of Town Square to the north.

There is a  50% chance this room is occupied by 1d2 guests; a 2 result indicates that a romantically-linked couple is sharing the room during their stay.

Whether occupied or not, unless this room is specifically rented to the PCs, it will be locked. Though the door itself is sturdy, the lock is from the original construction of the Inn, and is shabby at best.

INU-9: Northern Sitting Area

The northern end of the upstairs hallway terminates in a large window, in front of which is a potted plant and a sitting chair. You imagine it would be quite comfortable to sit up here and read, or simply nap.

Although this region is indeed comfy, of likely more use to the PCs is the pipe that is hidden among the fronds at the base of the plant:

BC-16: Inn and Tavern Basement Map

Both the Inn and the Tavern have basements. They are connected, however, via a set of secret doors and a very short passageway. The map which follows shows the basements of both establishments and the secret passageway which connects them. Superimposed atop these structures is the outline of the building above for reference.

Both subterranean chambers are used primarily as storerooms for the businesses above.

It should be noted that although there is much in the way of tempting storage containers down here, their contents are unguarded, and rather mundane—but that is often the way of most Inn and Tavern basements!

INB-1: Tavern Trapdoor

Please refer to the Tavern's basement trapdoor entry for more information.

Note that if the party is attempting to ascend into the Tavern from below without having come down into the basement from this trapdoor, it will find the trapdoor locked.

INB-2: Casks

☐ Against the east wall of the Tavern basement is an array of five large, sealed, wooden casks.

These casks store the fruits of Tavern brewer Zook Beren's labor: ale and mead, predominantly.

Just behind the northeastern-most cask is a secret and locked wooden door; dirt and mud from the raw earth floor has been smeared over the bottom gap and the door itself, so it appears as though it is part of the earthen wall that surrounds the rest of the chamber.

Once spotted, the door is relatively easily negotiated; once opened, no further skill checks are needed to open or close it.

Locked Secret Wooden Door

Wisdom (Perception) DC 18; Break DC 16; Disable Device DC 14

Once opened, it is obvious to anyone that this used to be a secret door, and has been discovered. If a PC on the western side of the basement (the "Tavern side") spends five minutes smearing earth back on the door, this will "reset" the appearance of the door so it will no longer appear as though someone discovered the secret.

Note that if the party goes all the way through the secret chamber into the Inn side of the basement, they would have to have a PC on each side perform this camouflage to fully mask their discovery!

INB-3: Crates

☐ Crates, chests, and boxes are piled high in the southwest corner of the basement. Arrayed around their base are urns of various sizes, and canvas sacks.

These are containers of foodstuffs for use in preparing meals for the Tavern above. Searching these thoroughly will take a great deal of time—two hours, at minimum; use of a crowbar or similar opening tools will cut this in half. The GM is encouraged to adapt this timeframe based on the behavior of the party; the boxes, chests, urns, and crates may all be treated as the following profile from the standpoint of sundering mechanics:

Foodstuff Container

Break DC 12

Regardless of the time spent searching, only foodstuff is yielded; at the GM's discretion, these may be treated as the equivalent of 1 trail ration (5 sp) per minute spent searching.

Frustratingly, there is no treasure of more titillating nature to be found in these containers.

INB-4: Sacks & Miscellaneous Storage

☐ Nestled in the southeast corner, between the casks to the north and the larger crates to the west, is a set of smaller casks, a knee-high urn, and several head-and-larger-sized leather sacks.

These contain rarer, more valuable ingredients, used either sparingly or on special occasion by the Tavern above for meal preparation.

No container is locked, though the casks are sealed; opening them will make tampering obvious to any who inspect. The GM may treat these as yielding 1 elven trail ration (2 gp) per minute spent searching, to a maximum yield of 20 such rations total.

In addition, one of the sacks contains finer fare. PCs explicitly searching the sacks will yield this treasure immediately; if instead the party simply says "we search this corner", there is merely a 10% chance per minute spent searching that this particular sack is searched.

Ingredient Sacks

4 torches (1 cp apiece), plus 1 everburning torch (110 gp); the latter is notable because its wooden handle has been painted a bright yellow.

INB-5: Table

 In roughly the center of the chamber is a square wooden table with four chairs. A crude candelabra sits in the middle; some sheets of parchment and writing supplies are scattered across the surface.

This table is where much of Jozan's paperwork and administrative duties are executed—ordering forms, reconciling pay, that sort of thing. If the party ventures down here during the daytime, and Jozan's whereabouts have not been determined, there is a  10% chance he is already down here, working at papers.

Underneath the table is a set of rudimentary leather straps nailed to the wood. Only if the party explicitly mentions they are searching the table should they locate the item rigged here; discovery is automatic if they do. Lenient GMs may offer a passive  Wisdom (Perception) skill check at DC 20 to reveal the item as well.

Writing Table Hidden Blade

masterwork dagger

INB-6: Crates & Tables

 Four wooden tables are arranged in an “L”-shape in the northeast corner. Candelabrae with well-worn candles are sprinkled across the surfaces.

These tables are used for meal preparation when upstairs at the Tavern is either too busy, or simply not closed. Prior to the Tavern officially opening, Thrunne, Ownka, or Zook Beren might be down here, chopping garnishes and doing general food prep for meal service.

If the party ventures into the basement and the whereabouts of these three NPCs have not yet been determined, there is a  5% chance, rolled separately for each of the three NPCs, that they are down here, cutting up vegetables or trimming fat from meat.

INB-7: Inn Trapdoor

 Above you, at the top of a wooden ladder, is a shut wooden trapdoor. The wood appears a bit rotted.

Please refer to the Inn's basement trapdoor entry for more information.

Note that if the party is attempting to ascend into the Inn from below without having come down into the basement from this trapdoor, it will find the trapdoor locked.

INB-8: Crates

 Large, sturdy-looking wooden crates are piled across the eastern and northern walls. Small storage chests and candelabrae with well-melted candles are sprinkled here and there among the piles.

These serve as a form of long-term storage for Esk, who owns the Inn above and the building itself. Inside these unlocked, untrapped wooden containers is a variety of mostly non-interesting personal items and general supplies.

PCs with crowbars, opening tools, or large axes or hammers may attempt to sunder the crates to double the rate at which useless items are yielded; make a  sunder or a Break check using the profile below for each minute of searching; if it is successful, you may grant two items for that minute instead of merely one.

The GM is encouraged to dole these out at the rate of one item for each minute of searching, until the party either exhausts the supplies rolled for, or figures out that there is nothing much of true interest within.

INB-9: Table

 Against the western edge of the basement, a rectangular table has been pushed up against the earthen wall. A crude candelabra with no candles sits atop it.

This table is a space for Esk to place anything that doesn't quite fit anywhere else, or as an “unpacking” table where containers might be unladen and organized.

There is nothing interesting or secretive about it, though if PCs indicate they want to dedicate time to searching it, lenient GMs may offer an additional passive  Wisdom (Perception) check to notice the secret door to the northwest (see Only read the following if the party actually discovers the secret door.).

INB-10: Sacks & Miscellaneous Storage

☞ The southwest corner of the basement holds an array of sacks in varying sizes, seemingly tossed about the base of a small storage chest.

Among these are discarded clothes, two sacks of straw for bedding, and the following treasure:

🗳️ Sacks

2 opals (51 gp apiece), 17 gp

Although the containers are neither trapped nor locked, searching them releases 🏠 3d4+2 Rats, which attack immediately.

INB-11: Secret Passage

Only read the following if the party actually discovers the secret door.

☞ You feel around the earthen wall edges, and discover that the dirt falls away in a pattern when disturbed. A line appears, a gap between the earth and... what now appears to be a wooden panel.

In the northwest corner of the room is a secret and locked wooden door; dirt and mud from the raw earth floor has been smeared over the bottom gap and the door itself, so it appears as though it is part of the earthen wall that surrounds the rest of the chamber.

Unlike the equivalent secret door on the western side of the basement, however, there is little in the way of furniture or objects to obfuscate the secret, so it is a bit easier to spot from this side.

Once spotted, the door is relatively easily negotiated; once opened, no further skill checks are needed to open or close it.

BC-17: Apothecary Overview

This small rectangular establishment is run by Aramil Xiloscient, a half-elven Alchemist 4 with a disturbing appearance.

Random Key NPCs

Much like other merchants, Aramil provides a service common to nearly all citizens. Though the ability to purchase, and the specific nature of the products needed, certainly varies among the populace, it's uncommon in modern society for a citizen to be entirely without need for an apothecary's services.

Given the nature of an apothecary transaction, and the small size of the establishment, it's recommended that any results on the Random Key NPCs table come in the form of a key NPC entering the shop during the PC's visit, or being just in the process of completing a transaction as the party enters the shop.

Business Hours

The Apothecary is open during daylight hours, plus one hour the latter side of sunset.

Shopping at the Apothecary

Aramil offers an eccentric and ever-changing selection of wares, and can concoct things rather quickly if asked for a specific item. If the party has a specific and/or esoteric request, there is a 🎲 30% chance, minus 5% per spell level of the effect desired, that he has it in stock.

Below please find a list of commonly-available items at the Apothecary Shop. You might note that some items are more expensive than normal, and others cheaper. If there is a rhyme or reason for this, Aramil is not forthcoming with it.

The "chance" listed is the chance for that item to be available; "Always" means the shop always carries that item, and has an effectively unlimited supply. For items with a percentage chance, roll once to determine if the item is available at all; if it is, then roll again, and keep rolling until a roll is failed. Each success represents one item in stock.

For example, cure moderate wounds has an 80% chance of being in stock. The GM rolls D100, and gets a 75; the item is indeed in stock. The second roll is a 35; this means that at least 2 such potions are in the store. The third roll is a 92; this means that only 2 potions of cure moderate wounds are available today.

The GM may reroll each day the party enters the store to determine the rotating stock.

APO-1: Southern Entrance

The shop's front door appears to be a simple wooden affair.

So long as the shop is open, the door is unlocked, though always closed. As the party enters, if Aramil is present, he gestures wildly at them to close the door behind them.

Locked Wooden Apothecary Door

Break DC 18; Disable Device DC 18

This door is locked at all times when Aramil is not inside, whenever he sleeps, and at odd times when he simply decides to close the shop for an hour. At any given time during daylight hours, there is an 80% chance the shop is actually open; otherwise, it is closed and locked, with no signs or other explanations as to why.

APO-2: Sample Table

Right inside the door to the east is a square table heavily laden with pots, pans, mugs, and liquid vessels of all sorts. Some are bubbling, others are sizzling, and one emits a greenish haze of mist.

These are Aramil's "samples"—concoctions he is working on, trying out, or particularly fond of.

Table 34: Apothecary Sample Effects

D%	Sample Effect
01-30	No effect. You can't tell if the apothecary might be playing a joke on you.
31-50	It tastes like water. Then, a few moments later, it tastes like ale. Finally, ten seconds after that, it tastes like sheep dung. You are not a fan. For 24 hours , you suffer from the Nauseated condition.
51-60	The mixture is viscous and dense. Swallowing it takes effort, but you feel as though a sweet, delicious honey has coated your throat. You recover 1 hp if you were not already at full health; if you were, the sample tastes good, but has no mechanical effect.
61-70	It's vile going down... and vile coming back up. You throw up, to the embarrassment of your party and to the disgust of the shopkeeper.

D%	Sample Effect
71-80	You swallow. The sample kind of tastes like wine. Nothing happens for a moment. Then, for a split second, the entire world appears to be black and white. You shake your head, and everything is back to normal. You're not entirely sure you didn't hallucinate the effect.
81-90	You are absolutely certain that the mixture was a poison. Evil permeates your skin, and seeps into your brain. You can feel death calling for you in an eerie voice, both hideous and tempting. For 24 hours , you suffer from the Shaken condition.
91-99	This must have been a potion of invisibility ... except that it only seems to have affected your lower half!
00	The liquid burns going down, and you have a violent urge to throw up. Just as you are struggling to remain upright, however, the sickness passes, and you feel much better. All of your Ability Scores gain a +1 benefit for 24 hours .

APO-3: Long Lab Table

Bisecting the room is a rectangular table, arrayed with many candleabrae, cooking pots, chopping boards, slicing implements, mortar and pestles, and other signs of works in progress.

This is the "front counter" of the store, and typically shows a number of potions that are in the process of being crafted. Aramil will typically be behind the counter, working on mixtures and ignoring folk who come in the door until they approach him.

APO-4: Firepit

In the southwest corner of the room, a lit fire crackles with life. Beneath and around it are a stone floor littered with ash from previous iterations of the makeshift furnace.

Aramil uses this firepit for a number of alchemical purposes. He will place glass apparatus over top to boil, reduce, or combine liquids. Occasionally, he will roast the odd bit of meat on a spit or stick—sometimes for a potion, other times for a meal. And on rare occasion, he will lock the front door and literally hold someone's feet to the flames, either as a precursor to more sinister intent at his secret laboratory, or as punishment or threat to someone who owes him money or welves on a deal.

APO-5: Tubing & Mixing

Any PC with at least one class level of Alchemist or any acquired ranks of Craft (Alchemy) has an additional observation to add; read the italicized portion below only in this scenario.

☐ A bizarre array of tubes, beakers, flasks, pipes, and other containers and vessels for liquids is scattered across the floor here, seemingly without rhyme or reason. Some of it appears to be in use, other parts appear to be simply stored here. Not only does the arrangement not make intuitive sense, but it's particularly odd that it's on the stone floor, and not on a table.

You realize that although the arrangement may not be orthodox or common, it does seem as though it would be effective in crafting potions and poisons. You suspect the equipment is atop stone to avoid common issues with mixing particularly volatile reagents—wood or marble may react as stone does not, if something were to be spilled.

This is Aramil's active workspace for mixing potions and poisons. Once they have reached a stable stage in the process, they are typically transferred to his long table to the east to finish.

The stone does indeed serve the purpose intuited above. The arrangement is on the floor for two reasons: one, Aramil simply likes to crouch; and two, it was simpler to have stone on the ground than to try and lift it up or support it.

APO-6: Door to Private Quarters

☐ A heavy metal door stands behind a rough blue curtain. It appears to be locked. The iron of the door's surface has etchings in a strange language that you cannot recognize.

For effect, and to increase player paranoia, the GM is encouraged to make some not-so-secret rolls at this point, as though checking skills as to whether any PC can decipher the scrawlings. In reality, the etchings are nonsense, carved by Aramil to make the door seem more menacing than it truly is.

🔒 Locked Iron Door

Break DC 24; Disable Device DC 20

Successfully unlocking the door may damage the mechanism: if a PC succeeds in their ⚠️ Disable

Device check, but succeeds by fewer than 5 points, the lock is obviously broken in the process.

This door is always kept locked, even if Aramil is in the shop. He will rarely use the door if customers are present, hoping that the curtain will keep anyone from noticing that there is even a door there at all.

APO-7: Lab

☐ This square-shaped room is dominated by the lab desk in the south. Atop it are all manner of writing materials, parchment scrawled in a bizarre script you cannot decipher, and potion-brewing equipment. A comfortable-looking chair with feather padding is nestled in the corner to its west. A plain-looking wooden door is in the northeast wall, and an iron door leads to the main shop area in the west. At the north of the room is a cupboard, and a stool sits near the lab desk.

This is where Aramil will conduct experiments—though of the mundanely potion-oriented variety. He keeps his more sinister experimentation safely behind the illusory wall that hides his secret laboratory. The writing is indeed undecipherable; it is a strange shorthand all his own that the alchemist has devised for keeping notes.

The cupboard to the north is trapped and locked, but bears some treasure for the party's pains.

APO-8: Secret Stash

☐ This secret chamber lies behind the lab desk to the north. It's cold, cramped, and dark back here, as there is no light. On the floor to the west is a wooden storage chest and a thigh-tall banded wooden cask of some sort.

This area contains some of Aramil's more valued items. The secret door to the northeast is fairly well-hidden, though the chair has been left a bit too close to the wall; at the GM's discretion, if a PC states that they are sitting in the chair, they may make a passive Wisdom (Perception) check with a +3 circumstance bonus to see if they notice the door. Success can be interpreted as they leaned back in the chair and when it hit the wall, the resultant "thunk" sounded hollow.

If the PCs search intentionally, and explicitly say that they are moving the chair from its corner, they may take a +5 circumstance bonus on the check. Perhaps obviously, this bonus does not stack with the one above.

APO-9: Private Quarters

In the far east of the apothecary's shop are the owner's personal quarters—a comparatively simple affair. A wash basin in the northeastern corner is flanked by a small table and stool; the straw bed in the southwest is accompanied by a storage cupboard in the southeast. Candles sit atop the table and cupboard.

Simple, usable surroundings greet Aramil at the end of his day. The cupboard is unlocked and untrapped, and contains only a handful of extra sets of clothes that have no unusual value or design. If the apothecary is sleeping here, his gear will be in the cupboard.

- ☐ A grand, long foyer greets your gaze. Ahead, the ceiling reaches two stories up to the glass-paneled roof. In front of you, an enormous long table occupies the center of the chamber. Along either long side, metal-reinforced doors stand open into the hall; in between them sit chairs and cupboards. At the far end, cyan curtains are hung over two iron-reinforced single doors. Candelabrae on the long table and numerous wall sconces complement the natural light from above, giving the whole area a warm, grand feel.

Normally, there is nothing on the table other than candles. Customers of larger objects, or those requiring inspection or repair, are encouraged to bring (or, in the case of heavier objects, to have Oneib bring) their potential purchases to the table so they can be seen in full light.

Doors to the storage rooms are almost always kept open; the exception is if a particular patron wishes privacy for some reason. Otherwise, Welby likes to keep the whole space a large, flowing thing; it encourages guests to delve into the side rooms if they're already invitingly open.

There's a good (🎲 80%) chance Oneib is in this room somewhere at any given time during business hours; slightly less so (60%) with Welby.

Each of the doors is locked, with its own key; Oneib bears a keyring to all of them.

MRC-3: Southwest Supply Room

- ☐ Plain wooden floorboards creak underneath as you examine the two large tables, laden with sacks and books. A storage chest is in the north of the room; bookcases line the southwestern wall, and a plain wooden chair sits nearby.

This room contains books and fine foodstuffs—spices, exotic ingredients. The PCs can spend time searching the bookshelves, but will largely come away with local books describing various aspects of the realm; nothing of unusual interest or value.

Sacks on the two tables contain common spices and some general adventuring supplies, as follows:

MRC-5: West Supply Room

Stone tile floors support three square tables, atop which lie large sacks. A potted plant sits to the north, and a large wooden barrel with metal ribs lies between the tables to the west. On the floor is a simple but new-looking rectangular rug.

This room stores more voluminous dry goods. The barrel contains 96 lbs of ale (12 gallons, 24 sp total value).

Dry Goods Sacks

wheat (20 lbs, 1 cp apiece); potatoes (30 lbs, 2 cp apiece); flour (20 lbs, 2 cp apiece)

Apart from the obvious utility to someone like Jozan, who runs a tavern or eatery, there is nothing else of significant value to be found in this room.

MRC-6: East Supply Room

This room's wall sconce sputters and provides only a dim, greasy light. In it, you can barely make out three square tables, a potted plant, a sack or two, and a barrel. The stone floor feels cold even through your boots, and even when standing atop the rug that sits in the center of the room.

The East Supply Room is much the same as its western neighbor. Despite the sinister-sounding description, the environs represent no undead threat; it's just a bit cold in here, and certainly time to replace the sconce's fuel.

The barrel contains another 96 lbs of ale (12 gallons, 24 sp total value), but it has gone a bit stale; a seasoned taster would offer no more than 10 sp for the whole barrel.

Dry Goods Sacks

wheat (40 lbs, 1 cp apiece); potatoes (50 lbs, 2 cp apiece); flour (5 lbs, 2 cp apiece)

Of particular interest, the potted plant does hide a sachet of cinnamon (1 lb, 10 gp), but this is not as an intentional hiding place: the packet simply fell off a nearby table during unpacking, and tumbled into the pot.

An intentional search automatically reveals this item; otherwise, you may make a passive Wisdom (Perception) check at DC 18 to notice it.

Discovering this item kicks off the following quest... if the GM so desires.

Quest: Cinnamon's Son / New Jerseys

Summary: A strangely-misplaced packet of cinnamon unravels a punitive chain of events.

Rewards: 1 lb of cinnamon (10 gp); 1 Reward Star; 10% discount on all General Store sales

Locations: General Store.

Key NPCs: Welby Goodbarrel.

Kickoff: The PCs discover a sachet of cinnamon hidden among the leaves of a potted plant in the Eastern Supply Room.

Description:

If the party pockets the spice, or ignores it, then this quest terminates immediately, with no further effect.

If instead, in the course of their discussions with either Oneib or Welby, they mention the discovery, then additional events unfold.

If the party approaches Oneib, he will scratch his head, then, upon remembering, he will say that he seems to recall some hubbub around an undelivered package of cinnamon, and some cotton shirts. He will send the PCs to Welby to discuss the matter further.

When asked about the cinnamon, Welby will feign ignorance, dismissing the item with a wave of the hand as though it was of little consequence. At this point, the party may not need a Wisdom (Perception) check opposed by Welby's Charisma (Deception) check to determine that he is hiding something. Whether they succeed on the check, or if they simply intuit that there is more to the story, if they press him, he will continue to push them off, unless they succeed in a Charisma (Persuasion) check, again opposed by Welby's Charisma (Deception) check.

Cinnamon's Son... (Talk):

Law +1

Successfully getting Welby to discuss matters via two successful skill checks creates a Catalyst Impact: Law +1.

If the party is unsuccessful, Welby's ire will grow through 2 failed such attempts, at which point he will speak no further to the party (about this matter, or indeed any other!); if the party wishes to make purchases at the General Store henceforth, it must deal with Oneib exclusively. (This will also adjust Welby's Attitude Tracker by -10 points.)

👉 Cinnamon's Son... (Failed Skill Check): ☒ Chaos +1

Multiple failures in skill checks produce a Catalyst Impact of ☒ Chaos +1.

👉 If on the first, or second, attempt, a PC succeeds, then Welby will admit the truth: a shipment came in a few months ago, containing mostly spices from far away, delivered by the son of the spicemaster who assembled the package. The crate was paid for by barter; Welby was to provide two dozen new, expert-made cotton shirts in exchange. However, upon unpacking the contents of the crate and tallying them, Welby noticed the absence of the spice he had been looking forward to using—cinnamon. He questioned the deliverer, who, despite being the son of the spicemaster and sender, claimed he had no knowledge of the contents of his shipment, but grew defensive and brusque at the accusation that anything was missing.

It so happens that Welby has both a lusty taste for cinnamon and a quick and often irrational temper... and so, he sent the delivery man back to his father with the cotton wares he had promised—but only one of them, instead of the 24 agreed upon.

Since then, Welby and the cinnamon-master's son have been at a kind of passive trade war, each accusing the other of misdeeds in what now appears to be a feud of no consequence.

Confronted with the missing spice, and now knowing it to be his own fault, Welby is embarrassed to say the least. He's not sure quite how he will deal with the matter, but he will definitely strive to make it right. In the meantime, however, he begs confidence of the PCs, that they will keep the matter to themselves. If the party agrees, Welby will give them an across-the-board discount of 📉 10% off anything they buy from the General Store in the future; this offer stacks with the randomized price variation described above, and applies to purchases made from either Welby or Oneib.

If the PCs succeed in uncovering the true story, they should benefit from a reward of 🌟 1 Reward Star, to be awarded to the PC who performed the skill checks successfully, or split up between multiple PCs if the checks were shared.

Oh, yes—and the PCs get to keep the 📦 cinnamon that started it all.

This Quest terminates if the PCs fail multiple skill checks, or succeed, and get Welby to discuss the matter honestly.

MRC-7: Northwest Supply Room

📦 The northwest corner of this room contains stacks of wooden crates, with a barrel on top and another in front of them on the floor. Two copper urns lie to the north, with a potted plant at their head. To the southwest of the room is a storage chest and a third urn.

This room contains more hardy foodstuffs. The three urns each contain 24 lbs. of mead (6 gp per urn) with a sealed stopper; the two barrels each store 30 lbs. of common wine (10 sp per barrel).

The storage chest in the southwest corner is locked:

MRC-8: Northeast Supply Room

📦 This room is quite cold; owing perhaps to the raw stone floor and relative lack of light. It's dark in here, and make no mistake; the wall sconce appears fresh, but diminished, as though the lighting were by design. A storage chest is near the door; to the southeast and against most of the eastern wall are wooden crates. To the north of the crates, snug in the northeast corner, is a potted plant. To the northwest is a wooden barrel, flanked by two copper urns.

The coldest of the chambers, this supply room holds food and ingredients that must be preserved to avoid spoilage.

The storage chest is probably what thieving PCs will want to examine first. It is, perhaps unsurprisingly, locked, but untrapped:

MRC-9: Entrance to Personal Quarters

☐ A fine cyan curtain is hung in front of this iron-reinforced wooden door. It appears to be locked.

At all times, this door is closed and locked, whether Welby is in the store, out of the store, or inside his quarters. He would much prefer that his quarters were separated more from the rest of the store, but alas, the space does not readily allow for a foyer or antechamber without either diminishing his quarters or disrupting the size and scale of the Main Hall.

🔒 Locked Iron-Reinforced Wooden Door

Welby alone carries a key to this door; Oneib typically sleeps in the Office/Kitchen (see This large rectangular room holds a square wooden table with four chairs. To the east is a stove against the far wall; a potted plant sits in the southeast corner just next to a cupboard.), and as Welby would put it plainly, has no business in his room that would necessitate a key.

Once bypassed, a PC inside the Personal Quarters (see below) can re-lock the door, and can close the locked door on their way out in a way that prevents Welby from detecting that the door's lock had been picked. Any PC with the Trapfinding class feature can deduce this by examining the opened door from the north side.

MRC-10: Entrance to Office

☐ A cyan curtain, somewhat more worn out than its partner to the west, is draped and drawn in front of this iron-reinforced wooden door.

This door is locked most of the time during business hours, unless there is a specific client who needs privacy to evaluate a purchase or to receive one-on-one VIP treatment from Oneib or Welby. After business hours, if either merchant is in the building, this door will be unlocked. Both owners carry a key.

🔒 Locked Iron-Reinforced Wooden Door

Break DC 22; Disable Device DC 18

This door's lock cannot be locked without the key, so if the PCs pick the lock and gain entry to the Office / Kitchen (see below), their intrusion is easily detected once the door is next inspected or used by others.

MRC-11: Personal Quarters

☐ This bedroom is cozy and warm, with a wash basin in the northeast, a dressing desk, a separate writing desk on which there sits a candle, a table and chairs, a potted plant, a soft feature bed of superior quality, a fine and soft rug on the floor, and a cupboard between the two desks.

These are of course Welby Goodbarrel's personal quarters.

The cupboard is trapped, locked, and contains some spare clothes and the halfling merchant's stash of extremely valuable items. Welby alone bears the key to this cupboard; Oneib knows that the merchant has some valuables that he keeps private, but he knows neither the exact location of this stash nor of the trap that protects it.

If interrogated, Welby will claim that the cupboard bears only extra clothes.

MRC-12: Office & Kitchen

 This large rectangular room holds a square wooden table with four chairs. To the east is a stove against the far wall; a potted plant sits in the southeast corner just next to a cupboard.

This is an odd combination of office and kitchen. Oneib prepares, and both men eat, meals here when they're not dining out; the human warrior has acquired quite a knack for seasoning during his years as a caravan guard.

During business hours, this room is typically used to provide one-on-one sales service to extra-special VIP customers, or those who request privacy. In a given day, there is only a  10% chance that Welby is back here, dealing with a customer.

The cupboard to the southeast is locked, and contains some common eating supplies, but also some spare cash for handling large or special transactions.

MRC-13: Secret Door

This section only applies if the PCs discover the secret door; in such a circumstance, read the italicized text below.

 You feel around, and there's a wooden panel here, laid up against a hole in the wall.

A secret door is hidden behind the potted plants in the Northeast Supply Room and Office/Kitchen (see above). It amounts to little more than a wooden panel; were the room fully lit, it would be even easier to spot. It is unlocked, and leads to the Office / Kitchen to the north.

Wisdom (Perception) DC 18; Break DC 16

Although there's no way for the party to know it, the door was installed by Oneib, who does much of the cooking for the establishment; he complained of getting too warm working the stove, so this secret panel was installed as a means of cooling things down: when he finds himself overheating, Oneib the chef will move this door ajar so as to let some of the cold air escape. The potted plants were moved to either side of the door to prevent inquisitive shoppers from intruding into the office.

Act I

BC-19: Fishery and Stables Overview

This large complex serves a dual purpose, and controlled by two masters.

The Fishery

The northern half, and the coastline, is the Fishery, the fruits of which serve Berinncorte's desires for consumption of the aqueous variety. It's run by Gumbrew, a middle-aged half-orc who has largely retired from the barbarian ways of his training, and is now content to fish on the banks of the river and dwell in modest prosperity.

The fishmaster typically deals directly with merchants and vendors; he's not really in the habit of selling his produce directly to citizens. Though he's not against the practice, it's not really worth his while to establish a formal shop.

Gumbrew has lately taken on an apprentice—Stewy, a criminally-minded human with a taste for enterprise. Apprenticing to a useful profession generally considered to be boring such as this fishing serves as a perfect cover for his growing underworld influence.

Fishery Business Hours

The Fishery is open during daylight hours, plus three hours the latter side of sunset.

Gumbrew can often (🎲 45%) be found fishing on the banks of the river, even after-hours.

Shopping at the Fishery

As mentioned earlier, the Fishery tends not to sell directly to consumers... but if someone shows up, they will gruffly sell what they have at a bit of an increased price.

Table 35: Fishery Wares

Potion or Poison	Chance	Price
meat (fish)	Always	5 sp
street meat (smelly fish)	Always	3 cp

Stables

The southern part of the building is the Stables, operated by stablemaster Brock Runnaheim, a sturdy dwarf with a laid-back demeanor. His dwarven stature and sensibilities are not without an appreciation for a creature of his height being a master of horses, and he will greet the party warmly.

Stables Business Hours

The Stables are formally open during daylight hours, plus one hour the latter side of sunset.

That said, Brock sleeps here, so if adventurers arrive after-hours, he's only too happy to assist them no matter the time of day.

Shopping at the Stables

If the party arrives in Berinncorte via horse, their beasts will take shelter and care here for the duration of their stay in town at standard rates:

Table 36: Stables Services

Service	Chance	Price
stable & feed	Always	10 sp per horse, per day

Random Key NPCs

As noted earlier, most of the Fishery's sales are to businesses such as the Leaky Cask Tavern, who in turn sell to citizens; very few citizens show up wanting to spend a silver on a single scrod.

Many citizens, however—particularly the wealthier ones, or those acting on official city or religious business—have need of a horse, from time to time.

As you roll on the table below, the GM is encouraged to consider whether it would make more sense to have a given key NPC in the Fishery area, or in the Stables area. More specifically, it is suggested that the default placement of such key NPCs should be in the Stables for the aforementioned reasons.

BC-19: Fishery and Stables Map

FSG-1: Fishery Entrance

☐ An iron-reinforced wooden door sits here, north of a window and flanked by two scones. The scones are sputtering and are struggling to stay lit.

This is the main entrance to the Fishery. As the fish are usually sold directly to other vendors, this door is almost only ever used by Gumrew and Stewy to enter and depart the building.

🔒 Locked Iron-Reinforced Double Doors

Break DC 22; Disable Device DC 20

Gumbrew and Stewy each have keys to this door, which is typically kept locked whether the fishermen are in the building or not.

FSG-2: Fishery Main Room

☐ This huge rectangular chamber has plenty of open space. Crates, pots, sacks, barrels, and storage chests dot the perimeter. A wooden table is surrounded by chairs in the north-center of the room, just north of a huge, well-worn and faded rug. A staircase leads down into the dark to the south; to the west of that is a line of stacked crates, next to which is a pyramid of stacked barrels. A single metal-reinforced door leads to the west; to its south is a similar set of double doors. Both doors are closed. The whole place reeks of fish in varying states of decay; it's nearly overpowering.

If Gumbrew or Stewy is on-premises, there is a 🎲 20% chance for each of those NPCs to be in this room when the PCs enter. They will act with suspicion and accusation (an immediate -10 to the Attitude Tracker of each NPC) if the party enters from anywhere but the Fishery Exit, as all other entrances to this room require bypassing at least one lock somewhere.

Fish Stink

The large open floor of this room is used sometimes to clean and gut, or more commonly to arrange and pack, fish and fish meat; the wooden floorboards and the rug have absorbed decades of fish ichor. Upon entering this room for the first time, each PC must make a ⚠️ Constitution save at DC 13; any character with at any ranks in Profession (Fisherman) gain a +2 competency bonus on this save for each rank, to a maximum of +5. If the double doors to the southwest (see Fishery Exit, below) are open, each PC gains a +1 circumstance bonus to their check.

Failure means that PC suffers from the condition Sickened (-2 penalty on all attack rolls, weapon damage rolls, saving throws, skill checks, and ability checks). This condition lasts until they leave the room, and thereafter for another full 2 hours.

A PC who has taken this check (succeed or fail) must take it again each time they enter the room, but having been exposed to the room previously grants them a +3 circumstance bonus on the roll (note that circumstance bonuses do stack, so PCs get a +4 total circumstance bonus if the Fishery Exit doors are open at this time).

Fishery Storage

The storage crates to the west are sealed and nailed shut; PCs must pry them open or break them apart if they wish to loot inside:

Western Sealed Storage Crates

Similarly, the storage crates to the south. These, however, are stacked, and so only half of the loot described is easily discoverable. To obtain everything would require a concerted effort over several hours of hacking and prying and splintering; while this is certainly possible, the GM is encouraged to dissuade such a massive and ultimately unprofitable looting spree.

Southern Sealed Storage Crates

No skill check is required to prise them apart, but replacing the lid does not hide the fact that they have been opened... though the GM is left to determine for herself how likely it is that one of the fishermen will actively search each and every barrel in this room!

Fishery Storage Barrels (17x)

fish meat (30 lbs per barrel, 180 sp per barrel total value)

Finally, the three piles of sacks all contain common foodstuffs. They are of course unlocked and untrapped, and are easily opened without fear of discovery after the fact.

FSG-3: Stairs to Fishery Basement

 A damp, cold, and unsavory smell wafts from the darkened basement stairs.

These lead to the Fishery Basement.

Note that PCs who venture into the basement, and return via these stairs, must re-take the Fish Stink check, though with a bonus the second or subsequent time.

FSG-4: Fishery Exit

 Iron-reinforced double doors swing out to the river's beach.

These doors are typically kept open while either fisherman is actively working; while open, it makes the large Main Room and the Production Beach like one big connected work area.

Locked Iron-Reinforced Double Doors

Break DC 20; Disable Device DC 18

Gumbrew and Stewy each have keys to this door, which is typically kept locked if both fishermen are not working.

FSG-5: Fishery Office

 This square room has much nicer cherry floorboards than the main chamber, and the rot of fish stink is not nearly so overwhelming here. In the center is an octagonal table ringed by wooden chairs; three corners bear a potted plant. The north and south walls each bear a centered wall sconce flanked by sealed windows. Three storage crates sit under most of the windows, and a storage chest can be found to the northwest. To the east is an iron-reinforced wooden door; to the southwest, a single wooden door stands behind a drawn crimson curtain.

This room is all-purpose, and serves as a meeting area for Gumbrew and Stewy. Often, Stewy will use it as sleeping quarters, bunking on the floor if the Lower-Class Residential District is full for the night.

The three under-window storage crates each have a bowl and a candle atop them. They are neither locked nor trapped, but are nailed shut and sealed, and so require hacking or prying to get at the rather mundane contents:

Locked Wooden Door

Break DC 18; Disable Device DC 19

Only Gumbrew has a key to this door, not trusting Stewy that far and besides which, not feeling as though there is any need for the apprentice to access his personal quarters. Unbeknownst to the fishmaster, however, his apprentice has long ago figured out how the lock mechanism works; Stewy can unlock this door in 1 minute at any time.

FSG-6: Fishery Private Quarters

No fish smell permeates from the other rooms into this personal bedroom of the fishmaster. A straw bed sits in the north, around which sit a wooden chair and a cupboard. To the west is a wash basin and smaller cupboard; to the east is a small round table with a few stools. A storage chest sits against the south wall, and a trapdoor appears to be in the southwest corner of the room. Unlike the other rooms in the building, this one has no windows save one that looks onto the beach to the south.

These are of course fishmaster Gumbrew's personal quarters, in which he sleeps every night. Apart from sleeping, preparing for the day, and a few quiet moments at the day's end, the half-orc is rarely in this room, though he will of course venture down the trapdoor when he must.

The northwestern cupboard contains extra clothing, and is freely accessed:

In the southwest corner of the private quarters is a locked trapdoor. The wood is rotted, but bears no fishy smell; moistness and time, and perhaps nothing more sinister, have done their work in warping the oak.

The trapdoor is always locked; if the PCs pick the lock, there is no visible means of "re-locking" it to avoid suspicion.

Locked Wooden Basement Trapdoor

Break DC 16; Disable Device DC 14

Gumbrew, and only the fishmaster, has a key to this hatch. He believes Stewy to be ignorant of its existence; in truth, the apprentice knows full well of the hatch and can pick its lock with ease.

FSG-8: Fishery Production Beach

The beach of the river that flows through Berinncorte is a densely-packed mixture, sandy in some parts and muddier like clay in others. This area appears to be a workspace for cleaning and gutting and portioning caught fish; the scent wafting off the rectangular work table tells you that much even without a background in fish production. To the north are a few storage crates and a work table with more industrious cutting and smashing tools; you suspect this might be for the more hard-shelled crustaceans that happen by. To the east, a set of iron-reinforced double doors leads into the fishery proper.

If any PC has skill ranks in Profession (Fisherman), the GM is encouraged to provide additional detail relevant to the trade—but it has little game impact. This is the beach where fish are indeed prepared.

The two storage crates to the north are unsealed and not nailed shut; they are freely accessible without fear of tamper-detection later.

Beach Storage Crates

fishing net (6x, 4 gp apiece); small aquatic cages (4x, 30 gp apiece)

FSG-9: Fishery Workshop

The northwestern portion of the beach contains a number of barrels—two open, two closed—and some sacks of supplies next to another work table laden with cutting and smashing tools.

This is another area where fish are prepared, though this region focuses more on the stocking and storing of already-butchered seafood.

The single storage crate is neither sealed nor nailed and is therefore easily opened.

Beach Storage Crates

bell net (2x, 2 gp apiece); small aquatic cages (3x, 30 gp apiece)

As mentioned, two of the barrels are empty, awaiting fish; the two filled barrels contain prepared fish and are sealed but not nailed shut.

Beach Storage Barrels (2x)

fish meat (30 lbs per barrel, 180 sp per barrel total value)

The sacks to the south of the workbench contain common foodstuffs; they are freely accessible.

Fishery Sacks (3x)

beans (10 lbs, 2 cp per lb); flour (50 lbs, 2 cp per lb)

FSG-10: Stablemaster's Quarters

The northmost chamber in the stables is a bit larger than the stables themselves, but noteworthy in that there is nothing separating it from the stables to the south. A stove is against the wall to the north; to its right is a small circular table with stools. Sacks of cooking supplies sit to the west of the stove; a simple potted plant is in the corner. To the east is a metal-reinforced door that leads to the city street; to the west is a set of iron-banded double doors.

Brock Runnaheim's personal quarters, such as they are, amount to just another section of plain-planed horse-smelling stable area, converted into a more human-livable zone. He commonly sleeps on the floor here, sometimes gathering some straw or hay from the stables, other times crashing out on the beach to the west.

The sacks to the left of the stove contain basic food and simple cooking supplies, and are of course unlocked:

Stoveside Sacks

beans (15 lbs, 2 cp per lb); flour (10 lbs, 2 cp per lb); wandermeal (4 lbs, 8 cp total value); trail rations (8x, 5 sp apiece)

The western doors are typically kept open to the beach so the entire Stables area has a breeze-swept, open feel to it. They can be locked, however, and are whenever the stablemaster is not here for whatever reason.

Locked Iron-Reinforced Double Doors

Break DC 20; Disable Device DC 16

The "main entrance" to the east is also unlocked whenever Brock is present. Some customers come in through this door; others approach from the simple double doors to the south in the Stables proper (see below).

Locked Iron-Reinforced Wooden Door

Break DC 20; Disable Device DC 18

The stablemaster bears the only key to both sets of doors.

FSG-11: Stables

Four horsemen might well keep their mounts here; eight if the horses are not shy or are already acquainted. Each stall appears clean, with fresh straw and some hay. Three of the stalls even have windows. To the south, double wooden doors open onto the beach.

Typically,  1d4-1 horses (minimum zero) will already be quartered here when the party arrives. At the GM's discretion, however, if the party arrives needing space for their own mounts, these stalls may be completely empty as required to accommodate the PCs. Any horses kept here are tethered, but not in any way that would keep a thief from stealing one of the animals; the true deterrents (other than the law!) are Brock himself and the locks on the doors.

If the stablemaster is not present, these doors will be closed and locked; otherwise, they are kept wide open so the beasts can feel the breeze.

Locked Wooden Double Doors

Break DC 20; Disable Device DC 18

Brock Runnaheim the stablemaster holds the only key to these doors.

FSG-12: Stable Grounds

 Horses may run and roam freely in this large open area of muddy beach.

Brock well realizes this area is close to both a flowing river and an active city street; he keeps a lead on any horse he brings out here for exercise. A ten-minute bout of leg-stretching, twice a day, is a part of the fees he charges.

FSG-13: Stable Beach

 The smell of fish production is faint here. If you avoid looking to the north, you'd never know the stables were right next to an active fishery. On the beach are a scattering of pots and pans; some folk pan for gold fruitlessly here on occasion, and fishermen use the pots to collect small batches of catch. Close by the iron-reinforced doors to the east is a firepit. To the south is a storage crate.

The firepit is rarely used unless it's a nice night, and Brock has a hankering for a roast that doesn't make use of his stove.

The storage crate is unsealed and unlocked, and is freely used:

Stables Beach Storage Crate horse feed (120 lbs / 12 portions, 5 cp per portion)

There is otherwise nothing of interest in this region.

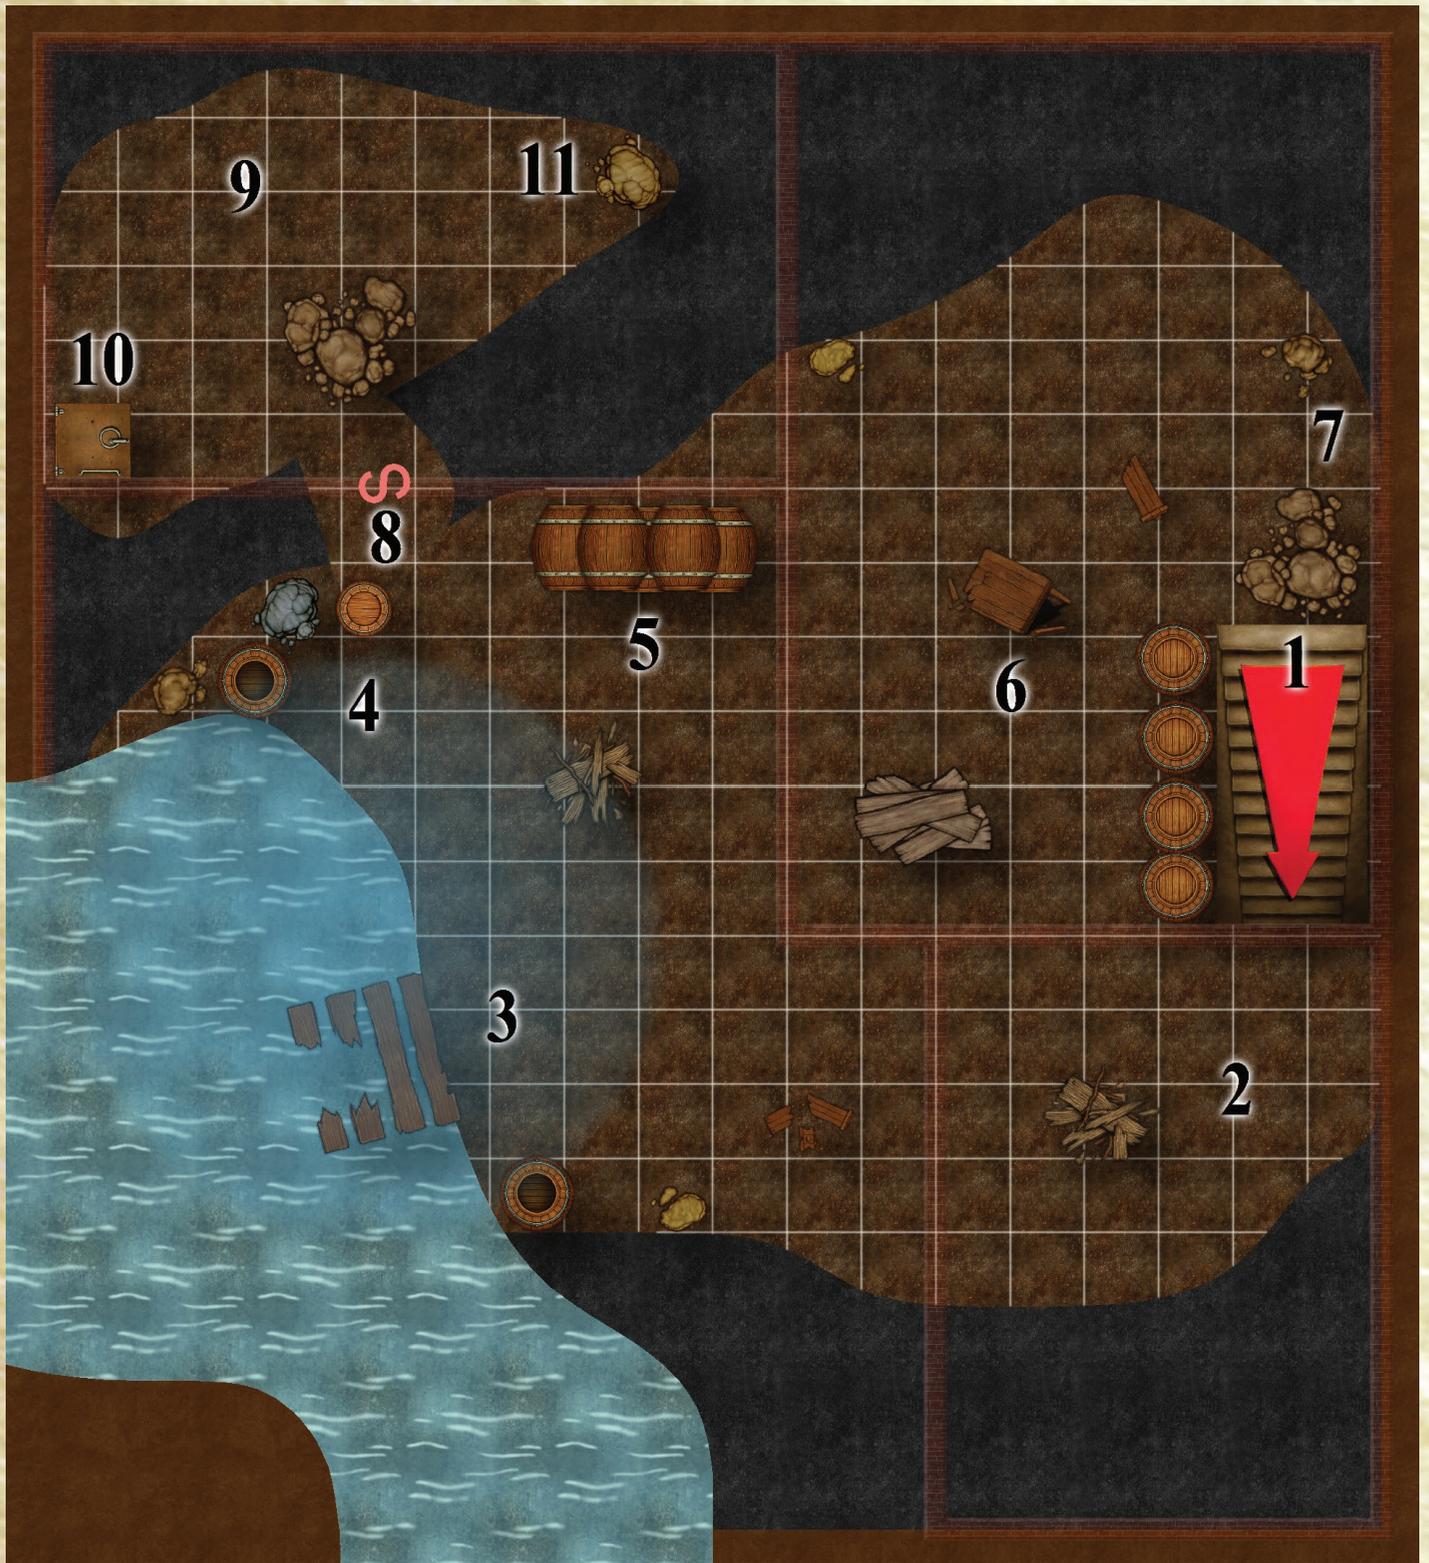

FSG-14: Lower-Class Residential District

FSG-15: Blacksmith's Hut

FSG-16: Town Square / Market

FSG-17: The Leaky Cask Tavern

FSG-18: Textiles Shop

BC-19: Fishery Basement Map

FSB-1: Stairs Up to Fishery

Read the italicized portion only if/when the party returns to the staircase to get back to the ground floor.

☞ The large subterranean chamber seems to be the basement for the entire fishery. The walls are of packed dirt; refuse piles dot the raw earth floor. The air is heavy with a damp, fishy smell, and feels somehow oily against your skin. In the west, you see what should not be possible—an underground river, but not in the usual sense: you actually see much of the bottom of the river, suspended in air and with nothing obvious holding it back from flowing into and flooding the basement!

You never thought the smell of rotted fish would be a welcome one... and you're still not sure that it is. But after being in the basement of this terrible place, you're looking forward to ascending back into daylight.

These stairs lead up into the Fishery's Main Room.

Note that any object not explicitly described in a location is of no consequence and contains nothing of interest—either threat or reward!

FSB-2: Debris Pile

☞ Here a pile of shattered wood planks sits alone. Bits of straw and twig appear to have been gathered here and there amidst the larger chunks of wood.

This may have once been an artifact of constructing the Fishery above; leftover wood or bits that were trimmed off were thrown in a pile. Recently, however, it has become home to a number of rats which together constitute a Rat Swarm.

There is a  50% chance that the Rat Swarm that lives here attacks the party as they pass by; if they do not attack, then the party is safe for now. Astute PCs may inquire as to whether the twig and straw look as though they might form a nest for such creatures; suspicion that this may be the case and an intent to avoid the creatures reduces the chance in passing to 30%.

Underneath the pile, if the party searches once the rats have been dealt with, there is a great deal of solidified rat feces and debris... and amidst it for their troubles a bit of treasure:

Rat Swarm Debris Pile

38 cp; silver bracelet (17 gp)

If the PCs pass the check, unless they disturb the pile, say, for searching—the rats do not attack them.

FSB-3: Underground River and Dock

☞ On the far west of the basement is its most remarkable feature: an underground river. This appears to be the same river you saw on the ground floor, only accessible from underneath and to the side... as though someone had been digging westward, had encountered the river, and for whatever unearthly reason, the water refused to pour into the hole and flood the entire basement immediately.

Bizarrely, broken wood planks extend into the water, as though it were a dock... but one that would take you into the floor of the water itself!

This should not be possible. Your skin prickles as you approach the area; a humming blue haze surrounds you and you feel certain that magical forces must be at work, here.

On the southern corner, just on the “bank” of the suspended underground river, an empty barrel sits.

The fishery's underground river is truly a marvel of magical engineering. Though both Gumbrew and Stewy know of it, neither has any idea as to its origin, only that it is magical, and it works, and prevents the whole building from flooding.

The blue haze shown in the map indicates the radius of effect of the “prickling sensation” mentioned above. Other than making low-level characters uncomfortable, it has no further impact.

Gumbrew is deeply uneasy about the entire concept, and avoids the main basement chamber altogether if he can send Stewy; the fishmaster fears that the magic will one day fail, and the resulting flood would not only render the main basement chamber useless, but his secret stash to the northwest as well—and, given that the walls are merely dirt with no reinforcement, he worries that the entire Fishery may collapse.

Stewy is more in awe than afraid, but he, too, is wary of anything he does not fully understand. Whenever he is down here, he keeps one eye consciously on the river; more than once, a trick of the light or something floating by has caused him to sprint back to and up the staircase in a false panic.

Bizarre and magical though it may be, it's perfectly safe. If someone wished to intentionally disrupt the effects, note that dispel magic and similar effects must make their checks against a  Caster Level of 18 (i.e., the total check DC is 29). The semi-permeable wall of force follows the normal rules for that spell, for example, that a mere dispel magic will not work against it. Dispel magic will, however, function to defeat the water breathing effect if the caster level check is passed.

Nobody else in Berinncorte knows of the phenomenon, and none was even alive when the magic was cast to protect the underground river. Though the PCs would likely have no capability of divining the information, the basement and Fishery itself were constructed hundreds of years ago, during a time when Berinncorte and its surroundings were a region of high magic.

Underwater Fishing

The magic used here has two effects: first, it holds the water back with a wall of force; second, it allows anyone on the dock the benefits of a water breathing. Both have permanency applied to them.

From a more mundane standpoint, the combined effect means that someone can simply walk into the water via the dock and grab fish as they swim past (likely the fish are quite perplexed when this occurs). Neither Stewy nor Gumbrew has attempted this in practice, though it has occurred to them that aside from being really impressive, this is likely the only beneficial effect that all of this trouble could have brought about.

Should the PCs wish, they can go “underwater fishing”. This requires some means of stabilizing the character who ventures onto the docks; two PCs holding onto the fishing PC should do the trick, as would a rope about the fisher’s waist, anchored by a PC from the north. The fisher of course gets wet, but once in place on the dock and anchored, may attempt to grab one fish every minute: make a Dexterity check with a DC of 14; success means you’ve caught a fish!

Aside from the spectacle, mystery, and fish-catching, this miracle of magic has no further purpose... for the time being. At the GM’s discretion, if the party insists that there simply must be some greater purpose they could discover if they only investigate enough, you may introduce a Rat Swarm or other imposition to dissuade or distract the party from their fruitless pursuit.

FSB-4: Storage and Debris

In the northwest area of the basement, just north of the underground river, two barrels stand amidst heaps of rubbish.

One barrel is empty, its contents long ago pilfered; it faintly smells of fish. The second is sealed and nailed shut, and so requires prying or hacking to discover its contents... its proximity to the dampness of the basement and of the river has warped the wood slightly, making it a bit easier to hack apart than it would otherwise be:

Rubbish Pile Sealed Barrel

Break DC 16

Rubbish Pile Barrel

diminutive aquatic cages (2x, 20 gp apiece); beans (20 lbs, 2 cp apiece)

The rubbish itself contains no loot; however, if disturbed, the pile will reveal itself to be home to 2d4 Scarlet Spiders, which attack the party immediately. At the GM’s discretion, a DC 16 Wisdom (Perception) check will give the party a round to either prepare or avoid the spiders.

Other than the normal XP reward, the spiders of course carry no treasure.

FSB-5: Cask Stack

Five wooden, iron-banded barrels are arranged in a stunted pyramid. They look a bit weather-worn, but otherwise intact. One—the one in the bottom middle—appears a bit damaged and its wood darker than its neighbors. A scent of putrid seafood comes from this notable bottom barrel.

These barrels are all sealed, and nailed shut, requiring a strong bash or careful crowbar to open.

Cask Stack Sealed Barrel

Break DC 18

Four of them contain fish, like the similar barrels on the ground floor above:

fish meat (30 lbs per barrel, 180 sp per barrel total value)

The fifth, the noteworthy one, had a knot in the wood, which over time eroded. A Giant Leech slithered through the magical barrier a few months ago, and, drawn to the scent of rotting fish from the broken barrel, made itself a home within. It has been content to remain inside, feasting at whim on the fish, but it has nearly run out of food.

If the PCs breach its new home, it will attack immediately.

What remains of the rotted fish in the leech’s barrel can hardly be considered treasure.

FSB-6: Signs of a Struggle

Read the italicized portion below if at least one PC succeeds in a passive Wisdom (Perception) check at DC 15.

An overturned wooden table here appears to bear axe-wounds, perhaps from someone trying to hack it apart into timber... but as you look more closely, you see dried and hardened blood around the axe strike. Whatever the circumstances may have been, the wielder either had terrible aim, or their target was not the table but who lay upon it!

Nearby, the dirt floor appears to bear a similar spatter of blood; it appears to have dried to roughly the same degree as the blotch on the table.

There's little chance the party will uncover the truth behind this mystery... but, on the off chance they interrogate the Stewy or Einkill, or simply to add flavor to the backstory of these two NPCs, here's what happened:

Stewy brought one of his connections down here along with a mercenary hireling—Einkill. The fisherman's apprentice and fledgeling crime lord Charisma (Intimidation)d the connection, who had skimmed gold from a deal Stewy had hired him for. The mercenary then bore the presumed axe in question, and hacked off a goodly portion of the connection's left-hand fingers. Stewy scooped up the fingers from the ground—hence the blood splatter described above—and handed them to the man, suggesting he keep them as a good-luck charm.

Even Einkill—who, remember, had just hacked off a man's fingers for a wage—was a bit stunned at this gesture.

FSB-7: Debris Cluster

Behind the staircase going up, a gloppy pile of mud and rocks forms a bizarre formation of earthy stalagmites. As you approach, shadows from the ceiling move, and drop, fluttering toward you with a screech.

At the party's approach,  2d4+2 Bats will descend from their perches and attack. At the GM's discretion, a  DC 16 Wisdom (Perception) check will give the party a round to either prepare or avoid the bats. Other than the normal XP reward, the bats of course carry no treasure.

Aside from the jump-scare of the bats, there is nothing else notable about this area.

FSB-8: Secret Crawlspace

Read the italicized portion below only if the secret passage is discovered, from either the north or the south side.

You poke at the dirt wall, feeling for anything unusual. At a certain place, your hand comes away with packed clay. Searching further, the clay comes off in chunks, and then falls away entirely. You have discovered a small crawlspace—barely big enough for an adult to wriggle through, if they don't mind getting muddy.

A Medium or smaller creature can indeed get through the crawlspace. At the GM's discretion, if the party contains Medium-sized humanoids who bear heavy armor and arms, they may be forced to either abandon them for a while, or unequip and slide them through the muck.

Secret Crawlspace

Wisdom (Perception) DC 15; Break DC automatic (earth)

The passage itself is hollow already, so only the clay pseudo-wall which hides the passage on either side must be removed. Once the PCs are done using the tunnel, they may spend some time attempting to replace the filth; to do so convincingly, they must succeed in a DC 12  Wisdom check to reproduce the look and feel of the originals.

FSB-9: Personal Quarters Basement

This unlit earthen chamber gives you a bit of claustrophobia, seeming more dungeon than basement. Rubble and mud lie in clods to the east and south.

Gumbrew discovered this hollow one day when trying to repair a floorboard in his Private Quarters. Realizing that there was a second chamber in the basement, he installed a trapdoor. He soon realized his private basement was separated from the main basement by only a thin wall of earth, and excavated a crawlspace to connect them.

Although the fishmaster has no real enemies, he nevertheless tends toward cautiousness; this paranoia has saved his skin more than once. A flexible means of escape just might come in handy; one never knows.

FSB-10: Trapdoor to Personal Quarters

A wooden trapdoor sits in a burrow of dirt in the ceiling; a grimy wooden ladder grants access.

This leads to the Trapdoor to Basement in Gumbrew's Private Quarters. Note that if the party is ascending from below, and has not already unlocked the trapdoor from above, they must hack through the trapdoor to get up through it, as the locking mechanism and hinges are all on the other side. Reaching above one's head to hack at the ceiling like this confers a -2 circumstance penalty on any  Break checks.

FSB-11: Debris

In the eastern niche of this chamber is a pile of refuse, muddy drippings, rocks, and what appears to be bat guano.

Unsavory as it may be, it is this very quality that makes this such an attractive secret stash for Gumbrew. His hope is that anyone looting his room above will be content with what they find, and even if they venture down here, they will assume it is simply unused storage.

If the party searches, they find a great deal of debris, and very little treasure; the  Wisdom (Perception) check below indicates the speed at which they can locate valuables among the garbage.

BC-20: Sheergath Temple Overview

Apart from the Mayor's House and the Zugul Church, this building is the most impressive in Berinncorte. Though not huge, it has a second story, so it is taller than most other structures in town.

Sheergath is a religion of Chaotic Neutrality, and welcomes many of the poor and downtrodden in the city and beyond. Guiding her flock in their adherence to Chaos is Larissa the Elder, a hypnotically beautiful but steely half-elf with a bloody adventuring background. Her fervor comes from ever wanting more—power, wealth, lovers, and adrenaline.

Aiding her—and enforcing her commands, should the need arise—is Unglar, a half-orc former barbarian.

Rounding out the temple leadership is Denzys, the church's primary officiant. The human cleric harbors a lust for Mayor Symms, which he interprets as love. Many of the more drastic preachings and actions of the temple go against the grain of his Chaotic Good tendencies; in his speeches to the congregation, he tries to temper the message a bit toward his own aims.

Throughout this section, the expression "Sheergath clergy" refers to all three of these key NPCs: Larissa, Denzys, and Unglar.

Services

If the party enters the temple during daylight hours, there is a  60% chance there is a service ongoing at the moment. Larissa (60% of the time) or Denzys (40%) will give the party a withering glare, then resume their sermon. If services are in progress, there will be 3d6+2 Townsfolk in attendance, spread out among the pews.

If services are not being conducted, there may yet be 2d4-2 (minimum zero) of the congregation here anyway, kneeling in prayer, ambling about, or indeed, taking a nap in the comfort of the building's warm interior.

Map References

For ease of reference, below please find a summary of other maps that may be useful for comparison.

Random Key NPCs

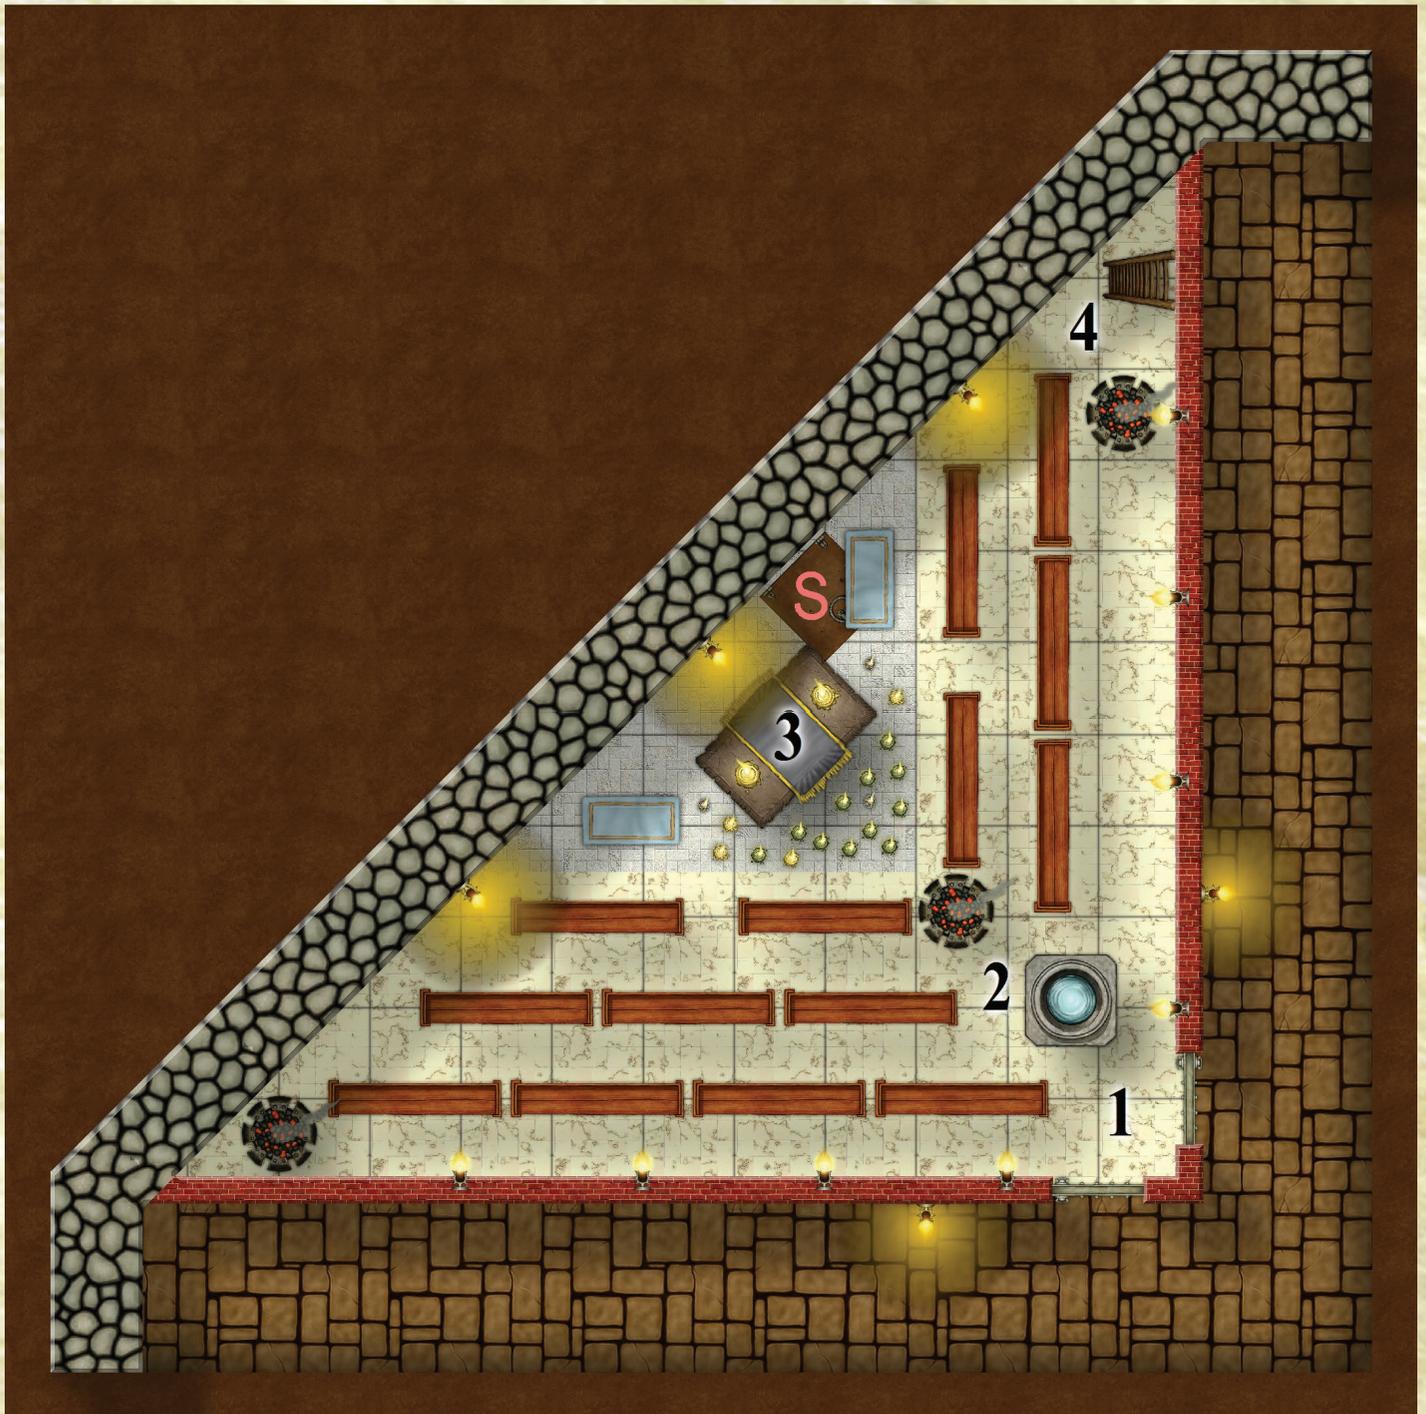

As Welby himself would point out, one of the great things As with the Zugul Church, the key NPCs listed here represent the congregation of the Temple.

Unless the GM has a very specific reason to do otherwise, it is suggested that all key NPCs placed via the Random Key NPCs table below be sitting in a pew, either listening to services in progress, or simply praying.

Table 38: Random Key NPCs, Sheergath Temple

Suggested Population:  2d6+2 rolls

D%	Key NPC	Profession
01-04	Aramil Xiloscient	Apothecary
05-06	Dimblegruffe	Blacksmith
07-09	Ash "Executioner"	Militia Trainer
10-11	Biggen Gurble	Reader
12-13	Brock Runnaheim	Stablemaster
14-16	Debran Ormick	Militia Treasurer
17-25	Denzys	Preacher
26	Dominika Symms	Mayor
27-28	Einkill Holderhek	Merchant / Mercenary
29	Elena Lomazonne	Merchant Princess
30	Esk	Innkeeper
31-32	Ganyc	Butcher
33-35	Gumbrew	Fishmaster
36-40	Hueykins	Jester / Greeter
41-60	Larissa	Elder of Sheergath
61-65	Lingona	Bard

Act I

BC-20: Sheergath Temple Ground Floor Map

CTG-1: Entryway

If the party approaches during daylight hours, the doors will be unlocked; they will be fully opened to the breeze if there are not services (see Services, above) in progress. During the nighttime, these doors will typically be locked, and are locked at all times that there is not a Sheergath Temple NPC (Larissa, Unglar, or Denzys) on the ground floor.

If the doors are closed, read the italicized portion; otherwise, read the normally-formatted portion of the description below.

☐ Two steel doors bar your way. They look impressively sturdy but plainly adorned.

Two steel doors act as sentinels to the temple; they are opened wide to welcome any from the street outside.

These doors are steel, and very sturdy; they were constructed by blacksmith Dimblegruffe and are quite similar to the doors on her own building:

Locked Steel Temple Entry Doors

Break DC 22; Disable Device DC 23

Larissa, Unglar, and Denzys each has a key to these doors, which have the same lock.

The pews are wooden, and ordinary in every way. Three braziers are evenly spaced between the pews; these are typically lit during colder weather—chaotic their god may be, but worshippers of Sheergath enjoy a cozy prayer.

CTG-2: Font

☐ A stone font greets you as you enter the temple. In its shallow basin is a pool of clear water.

Aside from tasting crisp and refreshing, there is nothing unusual about the water or the font itself. It is refilled at least once a day, typically by Unglar, using water from the River which is then blessed by Larissa or Denzys.

CTG-3: Altar

☐ Across the middle of the hypotenuse of the temple is a raised stone-mosaic triangle which forms the stage of the church. In the middle of this space is a stone altar, draped with gray and yellow tapestries bearing the iconography of Sheergath. Large candelabrae sit atop the altar; scattered seemingly chaotically about the corner in front of and around the altar are all manner of candles. The spent wax of hundreds of prior lights coats the floor around the altar. To the north and west are simple, but finely-crafted, rugs.

If services are in progress, the one providing the sermon will be standing behind the altar, though personal oratory preferences and the cadence of a given speech may cause the speaker to wander along the altar stage or even among the pew aisles.

Just north of the altar, hidden underneath a fine colored dust and a rug, is a secret and locked trapdoor, leading to the basement:

Locked Secret Temple Basement Trapdoor

Wisdom (Perception) DC 18; Break DC 20; Disable Device DC 18

Larissa and Denzys each have a key to this trapdoor. None of the Sheergath clergy use this trapdoor unless the Entry doors (see above) are closed and locked, lest the secret be discovered.

CTG-4: Ladder to Rooftop

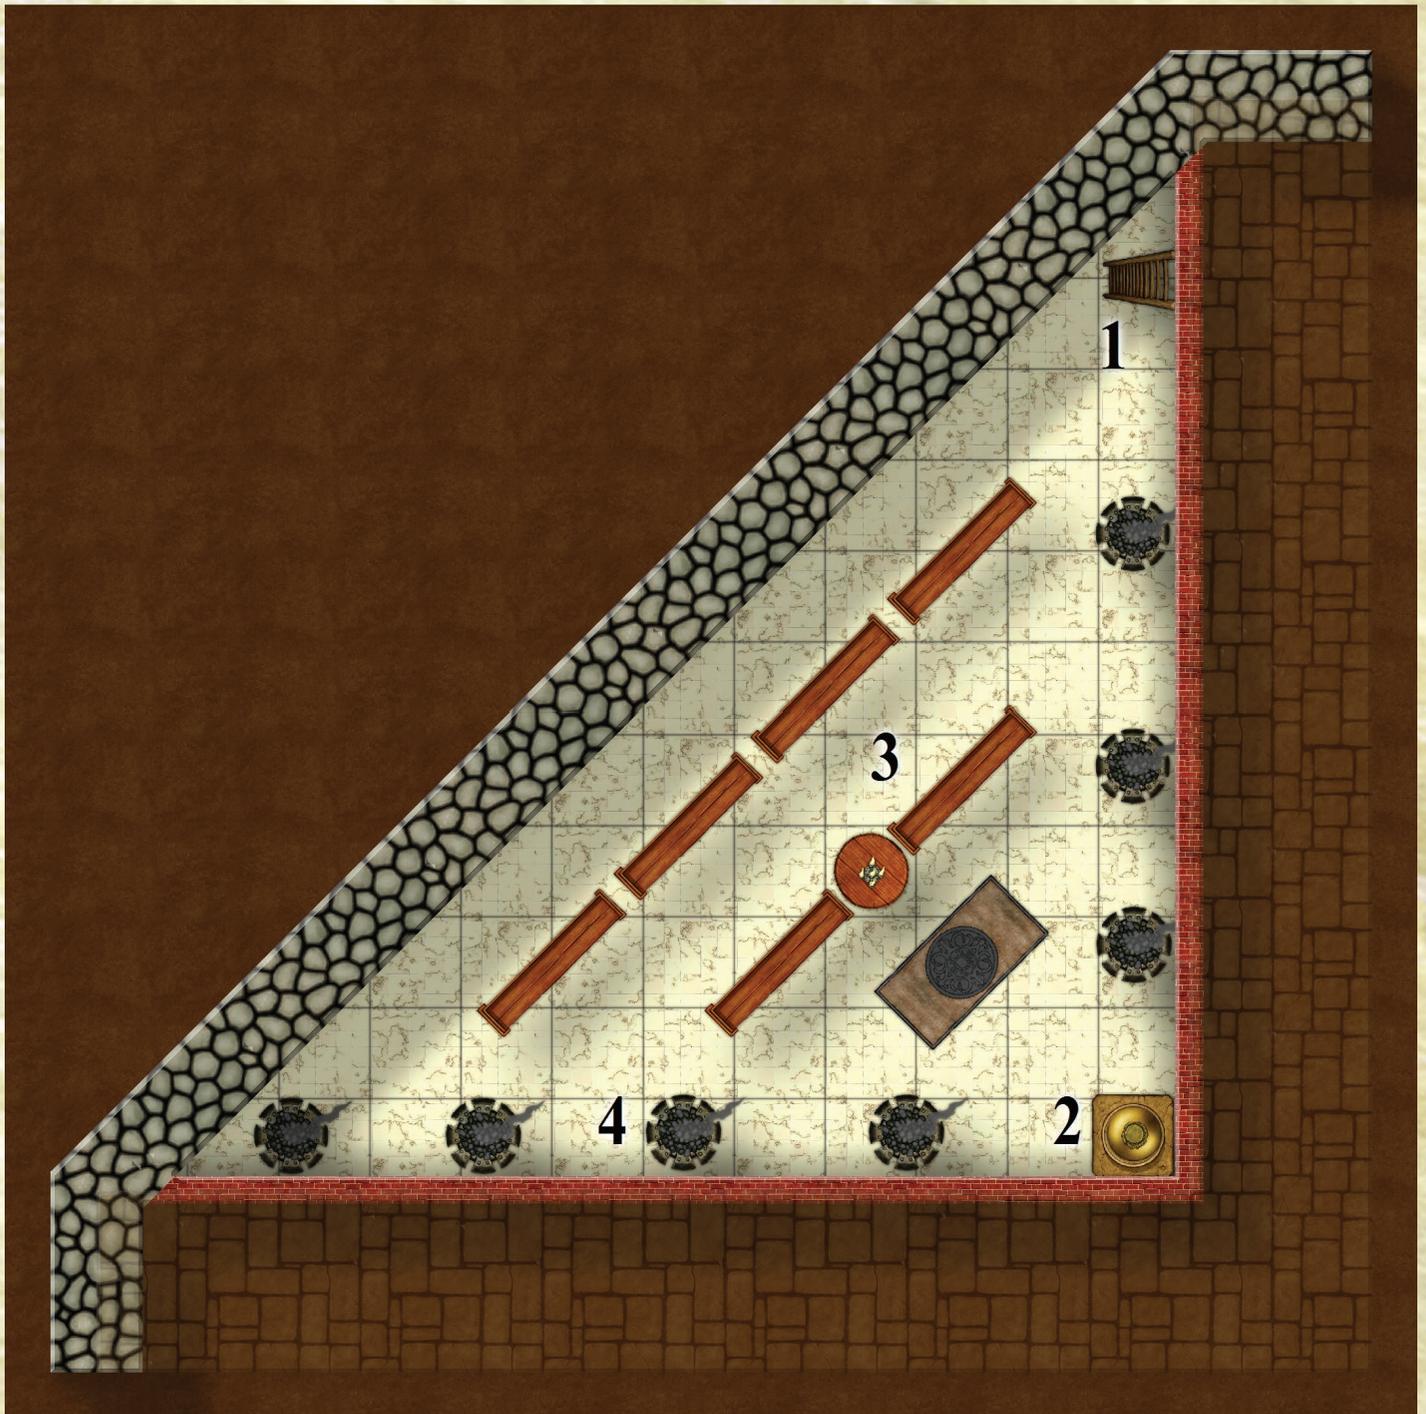

☐ In the northeastern corner of the temple, a wooden ladder lays against the east wall. Looking up, you see that it leads to a trapdoor in the ceiling.

This trapdoor leads to the rooftop. It is locked; please note that for PCs attempting ⚠ Break checks from a top the ladder, a -2 circumstance penalty applies.

Locked Rooftop Trapdoor

Break DC 18; Disable Device DC 16

Larissa and Denzys have each have a key to the trapdoor. It is always locked unless Sheergath clergy are on the rooftop.

Act I

BC-20: Sheergath Temple Rooftop Map

CTR-1: Ladder to Ground Floor

☐ A ladder leads down into the temple's ground floor.

This is the top of the ladder revealed by the trapdoor underneath.

Note that if the PCs picked the trapdoor's lock, there is no way to re-lock it upon descent without a key, so their tampering will be obvious the next time Sheergath clergy make use of the roof.

CTR-2: Urn

☐ This appears to be a ceremonial urn of great significance. It rests on a bronzed pedestal in the corner, overlooking the rest of the city. Plaques on the north and west sides on the base clarify that this is the "Holy Urn of Ginswyn the Defender"—the final resting place of a lady by the name of Ginswyn, a brazen defender of the power of chaos, and devotee of her lord Sheergath. The plaques do not describe what she defended, or how she perished.

If the party does anything more than pass by this urn, the following Quest is invoked:

🏆 Quest: Ginswyn, But Not Forgotten

📖 Summary: The PCs encounter an urn claiming to contain the remains of a fallen church hero. They may uncover the truth, loot the urn, or ignore the situation entirely.

🏆 Rewards: Hidden treasure within the urn (optional); up to 🌟 2 Reward Stars.

📍 Locations: Sheergath Temple.

👤 Key NPCs: Larrisa the Elder.

🎮 Kickoff: The PCs pass by the Urn on the temple rooftop, and read the plaques at its base.

❓ Description:

Urn this may be, but the contents are less holy than the plaques would have the party believe. "Ginswyn" is the name of Larissa's childhood friend, who died very young, before either girl had even heard of Sheergath. Her stature in this "resting place" is completely fabricated by Larissa—partly because she is confident nobody else has heard of the name, and partly as an apologetic, wistful homage to her fallen girlhood pal.

Nobody else in Berinncorte is aware of this charade—not even Denzys, Larissa's closest confidant. Occasionally, Larissa will include Ginswyn's name and some aspect of her mythology in a sermon, but she tries not to make it a habit, lest her flock inquire in greater detail.

🔑 The urn itself is not locked, trapped, or sealed—Larissa trusts the mystique and respect for the dead are obstacle enough to deter thieves. Unless the party has somehow teased out the truth from the Elder herself, the GM is encouraged to remind the players to roleplay their characters; for example, any Lawful Good character, Paladin, or Clerics of most Lawful deities should likely abstain or object from such a search.

If any party member suggests opening, or attempts to open, the urn to search it, any PC acting in a manner consistent with their character, class, and/or alignment should benefit from a reward of 🌟 1 Reward Star.

If the party opens the urn, they may discover that the contents aren't even ashes—it is simply dirt, taken from the basement. A successful 📖 Wisdom, Knowledge (Nature), or Wisdom (Medicine) check at DC 16 will make plain the terrestrial nature of the dirt. Without this knowledge, outright digging through the "remains" should come as a ghoulish endeavor. However, doing so is not without profit, as the Elder has hidden some heirlooms within:

🔍 Holy Urn of Ginswyn the Defender

+2 dagger; 41 gp; amethyst pendant (72 gp)

👉 Ginswyn, But Not Forgotten (Loot Urn): 📦 Chaos +1

Taking any treasure from the urn creates a Catalyst Impact: 📦 Chaos +1.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

📖 Please refer to Larissa's Conversation section for more detail on asking her about Ginswyn, and its impact on her Attitude Tracker. Depending on how hard they push, and what they suspect, they may get her to admit the truth; doing so grants the party an additional 🌟 1 Reward Star.

👉 Ginswyn, But Not Forgotten (Discover): 📖 Law +1, ❤️ Love +3

Discovering the truth of the matter in conversation with Larissa generates a Catalyst Impact of 📖 Law +1, and ❤️ Love +3.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

👉 Ginswyn, But Not Forgotten (Ignore):

Law +1

Ignoring the contents of the urn, once discovered, produces a Catalyst Impact:  Law +1.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

This quest is resolved if the PCs ignore the urn, if they get Larissa to reveal the truth, or if they simply loot the urn and never mention it to the Elder.

CTR-3: Pews

 Two rows of pews face the rug that serves as an altar. A table bearing a candelabra sits between the front two.

These pews are wooden, sturdy, and ordinary in every way. However, the round table has a false bottom; there is a hidden compartment underneath inside which can be found some religious valuables. It is trapped, but not locked:

Bloodroot Poison Needle Trap (CR 1)

Type Mechanical; Trigger Touch; Reset Repair

Secret Compartment

gold holy symbol of Sheergath (100 gp); holy water (2 vials, 25 gp apiece); incense (30 sticks, 30 gp total value)

Larissa and Denzys are both aware of this secret compartment; Unglar is oblivious.

CTR-4: Braziers

 On the southern and eastern edges of the rooftop, seven large braziers have been mounted. They are currently idle, but it appears as though they have fuel enough to be lit immediately; the coals are dry and ready.

For certain special ceremonies, these braziers are all lit; the effect of a fiery glow high above the street below is impressive indeed.

During colder weather, for rooftop ceremonies, a handful of these are lit, but mainly for warmth. Each is filled about halfway with ordinary coal or similar burning supplies.

At the base of the southwestern-most brazier is a bit of treasure, easily visible if the party strolls past:

Southwestern Brazier

thurable (3 lbs, 50 gp: When filled with coal and common herbs worth 2 sp, this miniature brazier fills an area 30 feet in diameter with light smoke for 1 hour. Any creature in the area of this smoke gains a +2 circumstance bonus on Constitution saves to resist inhaled diseases. This thurable comes filled as needed to induce the effect.)

CTB-1: Trapdoor to Ground Floor

- ❑ A sturdy wooden ladder reaches up to the ceiling, set in which is a wooden trapdoor.

This leads to the Altar area on the ground floor (page 198).

The basement's very existence is a secret, known only to the three Sheergath clergy. It is surprisingly warm and dry down here, despite the fact that the walls and floor are uncovered dirt. The floor has been well-packed and tamped, however, and it has the feel of a well-crafted chamber overall.

One side benefit of the construction is that the basement is effectively soundproofed from the temple above. If a sermon is happening above, the party can only detect it if they Strength (Athletics) the ladder and listen at the trapdoor.

CTB-2: Chairs

- ❑ Five well-crafted, comfortable armchairs are arrayed against the eastern wall, facing the rug to their west. A cupboard sits to the north of the rug.

This is where the Sheergath elite conduct their most secret, sacred ceremonies. Although all three clergy members know on some level that many of the ceremonies are just theatrics, they nevertheless have felt the power of their god, and conduct the rituals with reverence and respect. Larissa in particular brings zeal to any activity, regardless of how trite: you never know when Sheergath might be watching, or listening.

The cupboard is locked, and contains eating, drinking, and ceremonial supplies.

🔒 Locked Basement Cupboard

cups (5, 1 gp apiece); basket (4 sp); plates (5x, 1 sp apiece); silver dagger; incense (20 sticks, 20 gp total value); tindertwigs (4x, 1 gp apiece); Sheergath holy text (30 gp)

All three Sheergath clergy are aware of the cupboard, its contents, and bear a key to the lock.

CTB-3: Well

- ❑ This well appears to be quite deep—you cannot see the bottom. A rope leads down into the inkiness; here up top, it is attached to a winch. To the southwest is an array of buckets, presumably to hold hoisted water.

Despite its somewhat sinister-seeming location, this is an ordinary well... or, at least, it is in the context of this adventure. PCs who spend 5 rounds with the winch can raise the bucket that is already dipped in the water; the water is fresh and tasty but otherwise unremarkable. It takes another 10 rounds total (5 down, 5 up) to get another bucket of water.

- ❑ Note: This well actually contains a secret passage. However, its existence, use, and greater role is far beyond the context of this adventure. Should a PC venture down here, and demand a skill check, the Wisdom (Perception) DC alone is 35—likely far beyond the capabilities of the party. Of note, none of the Sheergath clergy are aware that this is anything but a standard well.

CTB-4: Casks

- ❑ In the northwestern area, just south of the trapdoor and its ladder, five barrels stand against the earthen wall. Atop two of these are candles.

Sheergath being a chaotic deity, many of her holy ceremonies and holidays demand that the participants imbibe well of alcoholic drink. These casks are the temple's reserve of such liquid. Unglar is typically tasked with fetching a barrel up the ladder for such special occasions; this is easily the least favorite of his duties. A close second-least-favorite is resupplying the barrels, which are usually purchased directly from Zook Beren at the Leaky Cask Tavern ("Map 14: The Leaky Cask Tavern Ground Floor (TVN)" on page 135).

The casks are sealed and nailed shut; opening them requires some physical effort, as follows:

🔒 Basement Sealed Barrel

Break DC 16

🔑 Basement Barrel (5x)

ale (12 gallons, 24 sp total value per barrel)

Tampering with the casks is obvious to any Sheergath clergy member once they investigate.

CTB-5: Cauldron

- ❑ In the western crevice of the basement is a firepit, atop which sits a big cauldron. To the east is an assortment of sacks.

Some ceremonies require fire; others demand the use of hot liquids or simple alchemical creations. On very rare occasion, a non-insasive form of branding is needed.

And, truth to tell, sometimes, the clergy of the temple just want a hot meal in a secret place.

Thankfully, smoke is not a problem, despite the confined conditions: although the clergy will claim the trapdoor or natural subterranean currents let any smoke escape, it is actually the secret passage concealed deep in the Well (see INU-3: Southeast Bedroom) that does most of the duty.

The sacks nearby are freely accessible, and contain emergency rations in the event that anyone is trapped down in the basement (or indeed, in the temple itself):

Act I

BC-21: Library Overview

For a city its size, Berinn corte boasts quite the elaborate and full-featured Library. Folk from all over this area of the Realm venture to town to explore and learn.

Dwarven librarian Gunnloda Balderk, an Expert, administers the building and oversees all activities. She runs the establishment through a combination of generous support from the Mayor (page 585) and a cut of paid services provided by the Sage component of the business (see below).

Aiding Gunnloda in administrative duties is Biggen Gurble, a halfling who is equal parts Expert and librarian, and Rogue and spy for the Scarlet Path.

In addition to being a Library in the traditional sense of the word, this building also holds a Sage in the person of Tudra Coppereye, a bizarre dwarven Oracle with an admittedly strong sense of the mystical.

Library Staff

Throughout this section, the phrase “Library Staff” refers to the three NPCs Biggen Gurble, Gunnloda Balderk, and Tudra Coppereye.

Using the Library

On a typical day, the party can expect to find  2d4+1 citizens in various places throughout the publicly-accessible halls of the building.

At the GM’s discretion, this is an excellent opportunity to introduce key NPCs if the party has been having difficulty doing so thus far.

Any citizens who are not specifically a key NPC from that section can be treated as Townfolk.

Random Key NPCs

Few businesses have true, regular need for expanding their knowledge, and there are many walks of life for whom broadening their minds may simply underscore their current woeful position in life.

That said, however, many key NPCs have occasional desire, if not true need, for a good read, or to consult a book in case it is helpful for a specific challenge. As a result, the scope of notable citizens who might be encountered here is perhaps a bit more expansive than one might otherwise think.

Pensive Study

Any PC may spend some time searching for knowledge among the tomes found here. To do so, pick any one Knowledge skill: for each hour spent in study on this subject, you gain a +1 competency bonus on a single check or question you wish to find the answer to, up to a total bonus of +5. If the PC has some assigned ranks in that skill, the total bonus grows, up to +5 or the assigned ranks that PC has in that skill, whichever is greater.

Once you “ask” the question, any hours accumulated are gone, whether the check involved was a success or a failure.

For example: if a PC wishes to know how long Berinncorte has been a city, they select Knowledge (Local), and begin studying. Three hours later, they pose the question to the GM, who makes the check with a +3 bonus. It’s a success, and the GM responds accurately. If that PC wishes to ask another Knowledge (Local) question, or a follow-up, they may, but no longer receive any bonus (they have “spent” the accumulated bonus researching the answer).

Another example: that same PC now begins study once more, this time spending 8 hours with her nose in a book. Although the bonus normally caps at +5, she actually has 6 ranks assigned in Knowledge (Local), so her maximum bonus is greater—but only +6. She spent two extra hours studying to no additional effect!

A Good Book in a Good Nook

Some areas of interest indicate a percentage chance of a certain tome being present if the PCs examine bookshelves there. These will usually take a form like so:

Good Book...: There is a  15% chance per minute spent searching that a adventurer’s chronicle (Knowledge (Local)) is present here (4 attempts maximum).

This means that, each minute the PCs indicate they wish to search, roll a  d100; on a 1-15, they find the indicated text. If they do not find the book, they may spend another minute searching, with the same chance of success, and so on, until either they find the book or 4 attempts have been made. In this example, if the party spends 4 minutes searching and does not succeed in this check, then the book mentioned is simply not there right now.

Unless otherwise specified, all books in the library are written in Common.

Library Policy

Citizens of Berinncorte are welcome to bring in books of their own and place them on the shelves; in fact, many of the common tomes here have been donated in such a fashion by wealthy merchants, nobles, or simply generous and well-off benefactors.

It’s generally discouraged to take a book out of the library, however, though there is precious little chance of the party being seen doing so. For each book the party attempts to smuggle out of the building, there is a  5% chance that someone (either a citizen, or one of the Library Staff themselves) notices the attempt and informs the Library Staff. Being caught in this way requires a fine of half the amount of the book(s) being stolen (minimum 5 gp per book); if the party fails to pay or makes trouble, the Library Staff will summon the Berinncorte Militia immediately.

Urns and Secret Doors

There are three secret doors in the Library; in front of each is an empty potted plant urn. Unfilled pots are far lighter and easier to move aside to gain access to the doors.

Every once in a while, one of the Library Staff fails to replace the urn when they use the building’s secret doors. When the party encounters this hallway, there is a  10% chance that the urn which typically stands in front of it has been placed ajar. This clue grants party members a +2 circumstance bonus on their  Wisdom (Perception) check to notice this door, and grants them each an automatic free passive check.

A Quiet Place

Similarly to today’s modern-day establishments, the Library of Berinncorte is a quiet place, and this attribute tends to be enforced not only by Library Staff, but also by other citizen guests.

Also, note that many actions the party may take while inside the building have an impact on one or more of the Library Staff’s Attitude Trackers; please refer to that section of the three NPC descriptions for more details.

BC-21: Library Map

LIB-1: Entrance

☐ These double, iron-banded doors have torches mounted to either side. Carved into the wood is a simple, yet easily recognizable, symbol of a book on the left, and a head on the right.

These doors are closed after sunset, and open each morning at sunrise. Whenever they are closed, they are locked as well. The torches burn during the twilight hour or so on each side of the evening.

🔒 Locked Reinforced Library Double Doors

LIB-2: Entry Hall

☐ This long hallway is well-lit, and inviting. Comfortable chairs, upholstered in a pleasant green hue, are sprinkled among stocked bookcases against the north and south walls. A potted plant is in the far southwestern corner.

Citizens joke about how the comfy chairs are the library's best asset. While bibliophiles would thumb their nose at this sentiment, it's tempting to agree with the proletariat on this one—no other building in town, in fact, has upholstered chairs with padding for the bottom and back.

It's occasionally gotten to the point where Biggen spends a noticeable portion of his time acting as a "chair bouncer", roving around the library's hallways and spotting folk who are clearly just here to grab a relaxing sit.

Good Book...

If the party stops to inspect the shelves, there is a 📖 15% chance per minute spent searching that an adventurer's chronicle (Knowledge (Local)) is present here (4 attempts maximum).

📖 Adventurer's Chronicle (book)

Value 50 gp; Weight 1 lb.; Materials paper; Nature non-magical; Aura none; Slot usable; CL n/a

This book is chock full of useful information. When used as a reference (an action that typically takes 📖 1d4 full rounds of searching the text), an adventurer's chronicle grants a +2 competency bonus on a specific ⚠️ Knowledge check for which the book is designed.

Construction Requirements means to assemble a physical book; the author must have at least 10 ranks in the specific Knowledge skill for which you are designing the book; Cost 30 gp

LIB-3: Reading Area A

☐ A large wooden table bears a candelabra and several books. Potted plants are in each of the two western corners, and next to each of the plants is a welcoming chair. It feels the perfect little nook to relax and read a book in.

Guests are invited to place books here to examine or to read while standing. Any who are reading are welcome to sit in one of the chairs.

LIB-4: Common Reading Area

☐ This large, central space connects hallways to the south, north, and west. A large, soft rug with cyan embroidery lies underfoot; benches sit against the eastern wall. Bookshelves and potted plants dot the walls along the halls. To the west, a large rectangular wooden table sits, surrounded by chairs and stacked with books and candles.

If there are any citizens wandering the library, at least one of them is here, sitting at the table. Though the chairs throughout the halls are comfortable, real studying tends to happen here, where the stiffness of the chairs and the creak of the wooden table under its burden of tomes tends to put more scholarly folk in the right mindset for true immersion.

Good Book...

If the party stops to inspect the shelves, there is a 📖 5% chance per minute spent searching that a tome of epics is present here (3 attempts maximum).

📖 Tome of Epics (book)

Value 50 gp; Weight 3 lb.; Materials paper; Nature non-magical; Aura none; Slot usable; CL n/a

This hefty book is bound in oilskin and decorated with scenes of glorious combat between ancient heroes and ferocious monsters. It contains several tales of valor, defeat, and victory, all with brightly colored illustrations. After consulting the book for 1 hour, for the next 24 hours, you gain a +2 competency bonus on ⚠️ Perform (Oratory) and Perform (Vocal) checks, and a +2 circumstance bonus on Knowledge (Nobility) checks pertaining to heroic lineages.

Construction Requirements means to assemble a physical book; the author must have at least 10 ranks in Knowledge (Nobility); Cost 30 gp

LIB-5: Reading Area B

☞ The hallway snakes around in an “S” pattern, resulting in a dead-end in the northeast corner of the building. Tables and bookshelves are along the walls. Potted plants are stationed in the corners; the one in the dead-end is just a pot and bears no plant inside.

Good Book...

If the party stops to inspect the shelves, there is a 🗃️ 5% chance per minute spent searching that the book Fishing in Solitude is present here (3 attempts maximum). Note that mentioning this book to fishmaster Gumbrew (page 637), or stealing it and trying to gift it to him, are favorable acts which will affect his Attitude Tracker.

📖 Fishing in Solitude: A Dedicated Seafood Artisan’s Memoir (book)

Value 50 gp; Weight 2 lbs.; Materials paper; Nature non-magical; Aura none; Slot usable; CL n/a

Picking it up, you never realized how alike the smell of an old tome and that of a fresh fish are. The book appears to be the personal story of a fisherman, and a ponderous one at that—either the gentleman in question lived to a deeply venerable age, or you hold in your hands the culmination of a life’s worth of “fishing stories”. You suppose the phrase “seafood artisan” is probably more attractive than “fisherman”.

Buried inside among the self-serving pompousness, however, are some keen observations on the subject of fishing. After reading the book for 1 hour, for the next 48 hours, you gain a +2 competency bonus to all ⚠️ Profession (Fisherman) checks, and may make such checks even if you are untrained (i.e., you have no assigned ranks in that skill).

Construction Requirements means to assemble a physical book; the author must have at least 10 ranks in Profession (Fisherman); Cost 30 gp

There is a secret door in the northeast corner of the hallway’s dead end:

🔒 Locked Secret NE Corridor Door

Wisdom (Perception) DC 18; Break DC 18; Disable Device DC 18

All Library Staff have keys to this secret door, and are aware of its presence.

LIB-6: Private Reading Area

☞☞ Once past the secret door, an unlit, narrow hallway lined with small cyan rugs leads to the west. It opens to a larger rectangular room with two potted plants (one filled with a ficus to the northwest, one empty to the southwest), a wooden table with some books scattered atop it, and a comfortable chair.

This is the private reading chamber of the Library Staff. Since it can only be accessed by secret door, they can read assured that their study will not be interrupted by citizens.

Good Book...

If the party stops to inspect the shelves, there is a 🗃️ 10% chance per minute spent searching that a Curated Carpentry is present here (5 attempts maximum).

📖 Curated Carpentry (book)

Value 50 gp; Weight 1 lb.; Materials paper; Nature non-magical; Aura none; Slot usable; CL n/a

This book reads like a textbook or instruction manual—lessons and exercises on creating useful objects from wood. One section describes different kinds of wood, and recommends the use of certain trees for certain types of project.

For those familiar with the craft, it can be quite a useful tome. After reading the book for 1 hour, for the next 24 hours, you gain a +2 competency bonus to all ⚠️ Craft (Carpentry) checks if you have at least one assigned rank in that skill already.

Construction Requirements means to assemble a physical book; the author must have at least 10 ranks in Craft (Carpentry); Cost 20 gp

There is a secret door in to the west of the hallway’s dead end. Although Biggen Gurble views this second layer of secrecy as a bit overkill, Gunnloda insists on it, as it’s possible someone could locate one secret, but would likely give up after finding that one.

🔒 Locked Secret Western Wooden Door

Wisdom (Perception) DC 16; Break DC 18; Disable Device DC 18

All Library Staff have keys to this secret door, and are aware of its presence.

LIB-7: Reading Area C

This is another reading area, favored by casual readers and those looking to merely sit a while in the quiet of the Library.

Good Book...

If the party stops to inspect the shelves, there is a  15% chance per minute spent searching that a copy of Turtlecoaxer is present here (2 attempts maximum). Note that mentioning this book to stablemaster Brock Runnaheim (page 539) will produce a laugh, some shared discussion, and an impact on the dwarf's Attitude Tracker.

Turtlecoaxer (book)

Value 75 gp; Weight 2 lb.; Materials paper; Nature non-magical; Aura none; Slot usable; CL n/a

A perhaps-too-passionate treatise on the subject of humanoid/beast interaction, this book delves at times into analysis and personal stories that may make a casual reader question the nature of the author's relationships with animals. Though most would use this book to learn how to better handle common mounts such as horses, a great deal of the author's anecdotes relate to "Stumpy", the hardshell companion from which the book derives its title.

Regardless, its plentiful stories and examples, complete with sketches demonstrating suggested hand gestures, are enlightening to all. After reading the book for 1 hour, for the next 72 hours, you gain a +2 competency bonus to all  Wisdom (Animal Handling) checks, and may attempt such checks without penalty, even if you are untrained in it (i.e., have no assigned ranks in that skill).

Construction Requirements means to assemble a physical book; the author must have at least 12 ranks in Wisdom (Animal Handling); Cost 35 gp

LIB-8: Reading Area D

 At the end of the twisting hallway is the coziest dead-end you've ever seen. A bench, two potted plants (one filled, one an empty urn), bookshelves, a large square table nearly buried in books, and a comfortable chair positioned just so as to see the entire scene... it's lit well enough to read, but dim enough to have the feel of a quaint cottage somewhere.

At the GM's discretion, any PC with an Intelligence or Wisdom score of at least 15 will instantly be drawn to this scenario, and will want to sit down and read (not compulsively, or as a magical effect—just by their nature of a being of learning). Although there is likely not space enough for the entire party to sit and indulge, the GM should encourage and reward the roleplay of such players acting out the lust for knowledge.

Good Book...

If the party stops to inspect the shelves, there is a 10% chance per minute spent searching that the book Requiem for an Ailment is present here (3 attempts maximum). Note that mentioning this book to the High Priest Cannock (page 545), apothecary Aramil (page 515), or stealing it and trying to gift it to either gentleman, are favorable acts which will affect their Attitude Trackers.

Requiem for an Ailment (book)

Value 80 gp; Weight 2 lbs.; Materials paper; Nature non-magical; Aura none; Slot usable; CL n/a

The first page gets right to the point: this text is "dedicated to all those who have lost their lives due to inept or uninformed care". Difficult to misinterpret that. This statement sets the tone for the rest of the tome—judgmental, pejorative, and accusatory, it seems to have been written in almost the second-person, from the perspective of one who knows, flinging educated insults at one who has failed.

It's an uncomfortable read, with many nauseatingly descriptive afflictions carefully catalogued... but it's all to a greater purpose, to be sure. After reading the book for 1 hour, for the next 48 hours, you gain a +2 competency bonus to all  Wisdom (Medicine) checks.

Construction Requirements means to assemble a physical book; the author must have at least 10 ranks in Heal; Cost 50 gp

There is a secret door in the northwest corner of the hallway's dead end.

Locked Secret NW Door

Wisdom (Perception) DC 18; Break DC 18; Disable Device DC 18

All Library Staff have keys to this secret door, and are aware of its presence.

LIB-9: Sage's Hall

 Beyond the secret door is an expansive and well-decorated room. A rectangular table carrying books is in the south portion; to its northwest is a row of comfortable chairs with cyan cushions. Northeast of the table is a line of three benches; to their north is another cushioned armchair. A cyan curtain with elaborate gold embroidery in seemingly mystical symbols blocks a set of wooden double doors behind it; to their west is a reading table with dozens of books around a single enormous open tome.

This is a multipurpose hall—it is where the Library Staff take meals, discuss matters, organize new influxes of books, and generally congregate for administrative purposes. Its main function, however, is as an office and séance space for Tudra Coppereye when she is consulted for a fee by citizens or visitors.

If any library staff is present in the building, there is a  20% chance, rolled separately for each of the three staff, that they are here, tending to business, eating, discussing matters, or simply resting. At the appearance of anyone not Library Staff, they will be startled and accusatory, fearing at minimum that their secret doors and passages have been compromised. Note that happening upon any of the Library Staff here also has an impact on their Attitude Trackers as noted in that section of each NPC's description.

Good Book...

If the party stops to inspect either of the book tables, there is a  20% chance per minute spent searching that the book Yelling to Yes is present here (3 attempts maximum). Note that mentioning this book to Larissa the Elder, Denzys, or stealing it and trying to gift it to either clergy member, are favorable acts which will affect their Attitude Trackers.

Yelling to Yes (book)

Value 40 gp; Weight ½ lb.; Materials paper; Nature non-magical; Aura none; Slot usable; CL n/a

This lightweight book is poorly-written and uses few impressive-sounding words. It seems to be a book of recommendations and observations on the art of fierce, persuasive oratory, written by someone who perhaps should not be writing.

What it lacks in sophistication, however, it makes up for in utility—you're certain the material would be far more interesting if it were presented in person by the author, who clearly knows her stuff. After reading the book for 30 minutes, for the next 12 hours, you gain a +2 competency bonus to all  Charisma (Intimidation) checks involving language.

Construction Requirements means to assemble a physical book; the author must have at least 10 ranks in Charisma (Intimidation);

Cost 15 gp

The double wooden doors to the north lead to the sage's personal quarters, and are locked and trapped. The trap is not meant to actually prevent anyone from entering, but to add to the mystique of the sage.

Fearsome Door Handle Trap (CR 1)

Type Magical; Trigger Touch; Reset None

Wisdom (Perception) DC 18; Disable Device DC 26

Effect cause fear cast upon the creature opening the door (CL 4; PC attempting to open the door is frightened for 1d4 rounds; Wisdom save at DC 13 reduces this to being shaken for 1 round; PCs of greater than 5 HD are immune to all effects)

Frightened: A frightened creature flees from the source of its fear as best it can. If unable to flee, it may fight. A frightened creature takes a -2 penalty on all attack rolls, saving throws, skill checks, and ability checks. A frightened creature can use special abilities, including spells, to flee; indeed, the creature must use such means if they are the only way to escape.

Shaken: A shaken character takes a -2 penalty on attack rolls, saving throws, skill checks, and ability checks.

Locked Wooden Double Doors

Break DC 16; Disable Device DC 20

To these double doors, only Tudra Coppereye bears a key. Gunnloda and Biggen are not aware of the trap, and have never attempted to gain access to the strange oracle's personal quarters. They are frankly a bit afraid of the bizarre dwarf crone.

LIB-10: Sage's Private Quarters

 This bizarrely-decorated room is the personal quarters for quite an eccentric individual. A feather bed is in the northwest, covered in a quilted cyan blanket. A large cupboard is in the north, to the left of a wash basin in the northeast corner. A writing and dressing desk is in the east, and a cask and smaller cabinet can be found in the southwest corner.

These are the personal quarters of Tudra Coppereye, the sage. She admits no one in here willingly, and is quite secretive about it even existing.

The cabinet to the north contains clothing and supplies, and is both untrapped and unlocked.

Large Cabinet

cups (2x, 1 gp apiece); basket (2x, 4 sp apiece); plates (3, 1 sp apiece); oracle's outfits (5x, 12 gp apiece)

The oracle's outfit noted above is a new, though mundane, item:

Oracle's Outfit

Value 12 gp; Weight 6 lbs.; Materials cloth, velvet; Nature non-magical; Aura none; Slot body; CL n/a

Includes a robe, sash, cordlike belt, soft-soled shoes, and a cloak. Similar to a scholar's outfit, but typically, an oracle's outfit will be constructed of finer (and more garish) materials such as silk, crushed velvet, and so on. Often, one or more components of the outfit will be embroidered with rich and mystical-seeming icons; most of the time, these are simply for show, and have no actual impact or reference.

Wearing an oracle's outfit anywhere outside the context of being a sage or divinatory advisor makes one appear quite out of place and bizarre. Conversely, anyone claiming to be an oracle, but dressing in an ordinary manner, is unlikely to be taken seriously.

Much more interesting is the smaller cabinet to the southwest, which is trapped and locked and as one would expect, bears more valuable contents:

♁ Centipede Poison Needle Trap (CR 1)

Type Mechanical; Trigger Touch; Reset Repair

Wisdom (Perception) DC 16; Disable Device DC 18

Effect Atk +3 melee and melee touch (1d4 plus small centipede poison)

Small Centipede Poison: Injury; Save Constitution DC 11; Frequency 1/round for 4 rounds; Effect 1 Dex; Cure 1 save

🔒 Locked Cupboard

Break DC 16; Disable Device DC 15

🗡️ Treasure Chest

potion of cure disease; potion of cure serious wounds; potion of invisibility; potion of water breathing; 55 gp

Like the door to this room, Tudra alone has a key; neither Biggen nor Gunnloda is aware of the trap or the contents of the cabinet.

LIB-11: Militia Guard Posts

BC-22: City Gates Overview

One of the most well-traveled regions in Berinncorte is its City Gates area. This is primarily because it is the only entry and exit to and from the city, owing to the original construction of the city and its walls as a protective shield around the populace. Nowadays, there is a great deal of commerce, tourism, and general coming and going in this area.

Comings and Goings

During the daytime, the party can expect to see  4d6+5 humanoids here, ranging across and roughly representative of the races of citizens in the city (see Berinncorte City Profile). If the GM is in a railroading mood, or simply wants to start things off with a bit of direction, she may sprinkle one or more key NPCs here. You can simply describe them as noteworthy, being dressed or acting different than the ordinary citizens, or you may even have one of them actively approach the PCs.

From a statistics standpoint, treat all non-key NPCs encountered here as Townfolk.

Whether your gaming group prefers open-ended play, or a forced path, if the PCs are starting the adventure here, it is strongly recommended that you at least have the group encounter Hueykins the jester (in the City Gates area of interest, below). In addition to being a knowledgeable figure of interest, he can provide right-off-the-bat information from the Rumors and Lore table. Perhaps most valuably, though, he gives the party a symbol-based map of the key buildings in Berinncorte, which is an invaluable tool in navigating the often-complex city.

Random Key NPCs

There are some citizens of Berinncorte who seldom leave the city proper; others come and go multiple times in an average day. All, however, have some need of escape, be it for rare supplies, to sleep for the night, or to keep an eye on enterprises beyond the city walls.

PDG-1: NPC Return

Roll on Table 58: Random Key NPCs, City Gates. The NPC identified is now walking into town, just as the party is trying to leave, and greets the party, sparking a conversation which hopefully serves as a distraction from the party’s immediate purpose.

For an additional incentive, or to make conversation between the introduced NPC and the party a bit easier to initiative, keep rerolling on the table until you pick an NPC with an Alignment or Class that matches that of one of the PCs.

Please, Don’t Go: Triggered Encounters

Leaving (or trying to leave) Berinncorte is one of the triggering events that can bring about the Obelisk Eruption. Attempts to leave early on in the gaming session may not be desirable for this reason. As the GM, you can’t exactly tell the players outright that they shouldn’t try to leave; at best, such an approach would feel forced and unnatural.

Likewise, you wouldn’t necessarily want to skip over all of the rich content of Act 1 to explore and enjoy right off the bat—and, from a more mechanical standpoint, the party needs to beef up at least by a level or two before they encounter the nightmares that Act 2 has in store for them!

If the party tries to leave the city “too early”, you might consider some of these triggered encounters, designed to keep the party within the city limits by

🏆 Quest: Urchin Plea

🗨️ Summary: A homeless waif begs the PCs to help him with some trivial matter.

🏆 Rewards: Up to 🌟 1 Reward Star.

📍 Locations: City Gates.

👤 Key NPCs: None.

▶ Kickoff: The PCs have a notion to leave the city via the City Gates “early”, and the GM wishes to introduce a triggered encounter that gets them to reconsider.

❓ Description:

A shabbily-dressed young boy approaches the party, and grabs the clothing of the PC with the fewest maximum HP.

💬 “Please, good folk,” the waif pleads, “a minute of your time. A moment, truly. My sister, she... she’s...” He trails off before conveying any details, but he seems truly distraught, and his eyes are red and his face stained with tears.

🔄 If the PCs ignore the waif, he will persist, repeating his plea; if the party remains obstinate, the urchin’s harried demeanor clears instantly: he gives an obscene gesture to the PCs, and runs away. If this behavior is consistent with the party’s Alignment and character, or if they are just being exceptionally paranoid, the GM may reward them with 🌟 1 Reward Star.

➡ Urchin Plea (Ignore):

⚡ Chaos +1

Ignoring the urchin’s plea generates a Catalyst Impact of ⚡ Chaos +1.

🔄 Most adventuring parties, and particularly those with Paladins or other Good-aligned PCs, will likely be at least curious, if not immediately willing to help. If they offer to help, the waif grabs the hand of the person with whom he was pleading, and guides the party to the nearest alley. Conveniently for the waif, any Militia Guard Posts that may sit at the terminus of such an alley are unmanned, currently, which leaves the party on their own when the ambush is sprung: 2d4-1 (minimum 1) Common Thieves jump from the rooftops, and demand all the gold and valuables the party has on them. Whether the PCs comply or not, they will attack the party.

➡ Urchin Plea (Ambush Battle):
⚡ Chaos +2

Fighting in the ambush—though unavoidable, if the party followed the urchin—generates a Catalyst Impact of ⚡ Chaos +2.

Aside from the normal XP acquired for defeating these ruffians, and the equipment they carry, there is no treasure to speak of, and the urchin is long gone by the time the dust settles.

This Quest ends if the party declines the waif’s plea, or once they have defeated the ambushing thieves.

🏆 Quest: Militia Inspection

🗨️ Summary: A group of Militia approaches the party and demands to search them, claiming a nearby crime has occurred.

🏆 Rewards: None.

📍 Locations: City Gates.

👤 Key NPCs: None.

▶ Kickoff: The PCs have a notion to leave the city via the City Gates “early”, and the GM wishes to introduce a triggered encounter that gets them to reconsider.

❓ Description:

A group of 2d4+2 Berinncorte Militia walk up to the PCs suddenly. In a quick, businesslike tone, that makes it sound as though the lady herself is sick and tired of giving this speech, their leader says:

💬 “Theft in the area, folks; please allow us to search

you.”

She will wait a few seconds for the party to acquiesce; if they do not, or they balk, or ask questions, she herself will draw her weapon, and ask one of the other Militia to approach the PCs.

It could be that the party has indeed done some thieving, in the area! This doesn’t really alter many aspects of the following choices, but does go some ways to justifying bloodshed, if it comes to that unavoidably.

🔄 The party can comply. Unless they have indeed stolen something obvious recently (either picking pockets, or from within buildings), they will lose 2 minutes per PC, and then the Militia will thank the party for their time. As they move on to the next group of possible suspects, the Militia leader will ask the party not to leave the city for the time being, just to be on the safe side.

➡ Militia Inspection (Comply):

⚖ Law +3

Complying with the Militia's request creates a Catalyst Impact: ⚖ Law +3.

👉 The party can try and talk their way out of a search. This requires a ⚠ Charisma (Persuasion), Wisdom (Perception), or Charisma (Intimidation) check, opposed by the Militia leader's Wisdom (Perception) skill. Success by the PCs means they've threatened or talked their way out of the situation; the Militia will leave the party alone, admonishing them to please remain within city limits for the time being. Failure on this check means the party's options are limited: comply, be Arrested, or fighting.

👉 Militia Inspection (Talk):
⚡ Chaos +1

Talking their way out of the situation means the PCs produce a Catalyst Impact: ⚡ Chaos +1.

🏆 Quest: Is There a Healer in the Area?

📄 Summary: Someone has suffered a grievous wound; the party is asked to help.

🏆 Rewards: Up to 🌟 1 Reward Star.

📍 Locations: City Gates.

👤 Key NPCs: None.

🎬 Kickoff: The PCs have a notion to leave the city via the City Gates "early", and the GM wishes to introduce a triggered encounter that gets them to reconsider.

❓ Description:

A clutch of townsfolk are gathered near another, fallen and apparently wounded citizen. One of their number sees your party, and gestures at you, shouting:

🗨 "Look! Adventurers! Good folk, surely one of you is of the healing arts. Please come and tend to our fallen friend!"

This quest is, perhaps disappointingly, exactly what it appears to be on its face: someone was wounded. The party has a few options at this point.

👉 They may choose to do nothing. If ignored, the townsfolk continues to implore the PCs, as though they didn't hear him the first time; if rebuffed a second time, he will spit in the party's direction, and look to someone else in City Gate Square to lend aid. The GM should consider the implications of any Good-aligned PCs who refuse what appears to be—and in truth, is—a legitimate plea for help that the party is indeed capable of offering.

👉 Is There a Healer in the Area? (Ignore):

👉 Fighting the Militia is neither a Good nor a Lawful act, even if the party has indeed stolen something, but it's an option. After 3 rounds of melee, an additional 2d6 Berinnorte Militia arrive, increasing the odds against the party. At any point, the PCs may surrender; doing so ceases all hostilities, and the party are then Arrested automatically.

👉 Militia Inspection (Fight):
⚡ Chaos +3

Opting to fight the Militia rather than comply or talk results in a Catalyst Impact of ⚡ Chaos +3.

This Quest ends when the party has been searched, if they are Arrested, or if the party slays all of the Militia.

⚡ Chaos +1

If they flat-out ignore the situation, the PCs unintentionally produce a Catalyst Impact of ⚡ Chaos +1.

👉 Paladins (and most adventurers) will want to help. The wounds aren't extensive or exotic, but nevertheless are critical; treat the fallen citizen as a townsfolk, wounded and reduced to 0 hp. Cure spells, potions, or even a simple ⚠ Wisdom (Medicine) check will at least stabilize the hapless woman. If stabilized, she will remain unconscious, but will at least not be at risk of immediate death; if healed to 1 hp or above, she will come to, and explain that she was stabbed during a mugging, and that the assailant left City Gate Square to the northwest. A ⚠ Wisdom (Medicine) check at DC 12, or ⚠ Wisdom (Perception) check at DC 16, verifies the nature of the wounds suffered; any PC may attempt either or both checks. If the party wishes to pursue the alleged miscreant, treat it as the event "Bandit!" from this point onward.

👉 Is There a Healer in the Area? (Help):
⚖ Law +2

Helping in any fashion to heal the injured innocent creates a Catalyst Impact of ⚖ Law +2.

This Quest terminates if the party refuses the plea of help a second time, or if they heal the fallen citizen. Note that regardless of their actions, there is no explicit reward intended for this Quest aside from that gained by pursuing the mugger.

🏆 Quest: Falsely Accused

📄 Summary: One of the PCs matches the description of a domestic assailant, and is arrested.

🏆 Rewards: Up to  1 Reward Star.

📍 Locations: City Gates.

👤 Key NPCs: None.

▶ Kickoff: The PCs have a notion to leave the city via the City Gates “early”, and the GM wishes to introduce a triggered encounter that gets them to reconsider.

❓ Description:

Choose a PC at random.

A severe-looking group of 6 Berinncorte Militia and 3 Militia Elite Guard approach the party. Their leader explains the situation in a calm, but disapproving and dispassionate, tone:

“Hold there, friends. It is my duty to inform you that s/he”—here he stabs a finger at one of you—“is suspected of domestic abuse. If you’ll please come with me peaceably, there’ll be no further cause for alarm, and we can get this settled quite easily.”

This scenario is intended to be easily defensible—first, the PC in question is almost certainly unmarried; second, they are most definitely not married to anyone in Berinncorte; and third, the entire rest of the party is a fairly solid alibi for whenever the alleged abuse was supposed to have taken place.

📄 This provides a fantastic opportunity to roleplay, for both the GM, and the players: a false accusation, tons of evidence to combat the claim, and righteous ire and indignation in a public place. The GM is encouraged to play this out as much as the players seem to wish it.

However, remember the purpose of this Quest, and other “Please, Don’t Go” (p 213) events, is singular: to keep the PCs inside the city of Berinncorte for the time being.

Let the PCs talk their way out of it, but make sure they understand that this does not mean they are truly free to go as they wish!

The PCs have some options to weigh.

🔄 They can attack the Militia. This should be reasonably considered a mistake, however: the Militia initially outnumber the party, and after 2 rounds of combat, another 2d6 Militia and 1d4 Elite Guard arrive on the scene to bolster the city’s forces. At any point, the PCs may surrender, at which point the entire party is automatically Arrested (page 48), and the charges will now include murder of any Militia slain in the confrontation.

➡ Falsely Accused (Attack):
⚔ Chaos +2

Fighting the Militia creates a Catalyst Impact ⚔ Chaos +2.

🔄 The party can try to talk their way out of it. This seems a particularly appealing option, given the amount of evidence on their side; nevertheless, it will require a ⚠ Charisma (Persuasion) check opposed by the Militia’s Wisdom (Perception) check. The PCs only get one shot at the check; failure means their options collapse to either fight (see above), or have at least the one accused PC arrested (see below). Success means they have explained their alibi and relevant martial status, and the Militia lets them go without arrest—but the entire party is challenged to remain within the city limits for the duration of the investigation. The Militia leader then walks over to the Gate Guards and tells them the same thing, pointing the PCs out. Succeeding at this skill check merits a reward of  1 Reward Star.

🔄 Whether as a result of a failed skill check, or as their first reaction, the party can willingly turn over the accused PC, or choose instead to follow the Militia to the Garrison to be Arrested. In the due course of events, the PC is of course exonerated, but as above, the entire party is asked to not leave town for the foreseeable future.

➡ Falsely Accused (Hand Over PC):
⚖ Law +4

Whether they are forced to, or if they volunteer to do so, handing over the accused PC to the Militia creates a Catalyst Impact of ⚖ Law +4.

This Quest terminates if the PCs succeed in their skill check, if they slay the Militia and their reinforcements, or if they are set free after being Arrested.

BC-22: City Gates Map

CGS-1: Outside Berinncorte

Only read the italicized portion below if you have attempted one or more triggered encounters from the “Please, Don’t Go” section (see above), and the party has not been dissuaded from leaving the city.

☐ A cool breeze greets you as you step outside the city of Berinncorte. It’s a beautiful day, and the rolling landscape of plains and farmland stretches out before you.

Just as you prepare to depart in earnest, however, there is an ominous rumbling from underfoot.

If the party makes it to this point, and you have not yet attempted a “Please Don’t Go” scenario, you should do so now... or, be prepared to potentially skip through a great deal of content in the adventure!

☐ Leaving the city is one of the key ways in which the Dark Obelisk: Berinncorte adventure is completed. The GM should not allow this to be successfully undertaken at any point prior to the Obelisk Eruption, and indeed, some part afterwards, so that the bulk of the adventure

Note that depending on your gaming group, there may be a low tolerance for “railroading” activities where it is quite obvious to the players that the GM is introducing obstacles simply for the sake of preventing their progress out of the city. In this sort of environment, with determined players, it is possible to depart Berinncorte very early on in Act One, and thus end the adventure.

Subsequent adventures in the Adventure Path that this book kicks off will make all attempts to scale difficulty to variety of challenge... however, many aspects of the adventures, and the “default” statistics they present, will assume that the party has completed Dark Obelisk: Berinncorte, and not merely “skipped” it as would occur if the party leaves the city early.

CGS-2: The City Gates

☐ Massive iron gates swing outward here on hinges. They are twenty feet tall—the same height as the enormous stone wall that surrounds the city proper.

During daylight hours, the gates are almost always open. At sunset, the doors are closed and locked, and remain that way until sunrise the next morning unless there is an exceptional circumstance (for example, if the Mayor was returning to the city at 2 AM).

At all times, there are 4 Berinncorte Elite Militia guards here—two guarding each side of the double door. When the gates are open, these guards stand to the side so as not to interfere unduly with legitimate passage; when the gates are closed, they stand four abreast, evenly spaced across the interior of the doors.

Whenever the gates are closed, an additional  2d4 Berinncorte Elite Militia join them.

The gates have the following profile. Note that the “Open” DC listed refers to the Strength check required to physically open or close the gates; typically such a check involves several soldiers and is only ever attempted once a day at most.

Locked Iron Double City Gates

 Break DC 26; Disable Device DC 25

 Break DC 28; Disable Device DC 27

 Break DC 30; Disable Device DC 28

 Break DC 34; Disable Device DC 30

The scales used above should reflect a near-impossibility for even a single-minded, maxed-out PC to accomplish much to overcome the gate; this is intentional, as attempting to leave the city will trigger the Obelisk Eruption as mentioned earlier.

All Berinncorte Elite Militia bear keys to this gate, and know its operation. It requires two people, each with a Strength score of at least 13, each pulling or pushing one of the two double doors, to swing them open or closed; this takes 5 full minutes. It is possible for a single person to perform this task; doing so involves closing one door, then the other, in sequence, and requires 12 minutes.

Welcome, Welcome

Any strangers approaching the city via the main gate will be approached by a bizarre, nimble little man named Hueykins. For a small fee (12 sp), he will provide the party with a handwritten map of Berinncorte—this takes the form of the Berinncorte City Map. This is perhaps the most profitable investment the PCs could make in this adventure, as it saves both them and the GM a great deal of effort in helping them find their way from place to place.

CGS-3: Garrison Militia Guard Post

☐ To the north of the gates, just inside the city walls and nestled up against the Garrison building, is a guard post. Two militia members stand within, and another handful mill about nearby.

This guard post is connected to the Garrison /

Barracks (see below), and indeed has a door in its north wall to gain entry directly into that building.

 1d4+1 Berinncorte Elite Militia are always stationed here; in addition, 2d4+2 regular Berinncorte Militia are typically nearby as described above.

CGS-4: Militia Guard Post

 In the southwest corner of the square is a second guard post, with three bored-looking soldiers in the colors of the city militia standing about.

This is a typical Militia Guard Post, except that it is always staffed, and by 3 Berinncorte Militia members.

Hold On There, Stranger

Given the strong presence of Militia guards to the east of the square, citizens joke that this guard post is here exclusively to act as personal security for the Upper-Class Residential District to which it is adjacent. While the Mayor would never publicly credit such a theory, it's fairly accurate—it's even listed in the Rumors and Tales table.

The simple fact is, some folk are up to no good, and the unfortunate placement of the nicer places to live is that it puts the city's wealthiest citizens right next to a large, busy square that allows rather immediate egress out of the city. Having a guard post right next to the nice part of town has reduced crime considerably.

As to how this impacts the PCs, it makes sneaking into the Upper-Class Residential District somewhat problematic via this east entrance, since guards here are paid to keep an eye on the very door the party would be using—and one of their chief roles is to stop and question any strange-looking visitors they haven't seen before.

To use modern concepts, this guard post acts as a doorman, a private security firm, and a handful of personally-assigned police officers, all in one.

Of course, this means that soldiers stationed here tend to see and know much more than the average Militia member. If the party is able to raise the Attitude of one of the Berinncorte Militia stationed here to Friendly, they may ask him or her for gossip—this will get the PC in question a free roll on the Rumors and Tales table, but will still reduce the Attitude Tracker by -2 as indicated in the NPC's description. (Basically, you can keep asking for gossip and rumors, but each time, you must be sure and raise the guard's Attitude back up to Friendly before asking for gossip.)

CGS-5: City Gate Square

 This massive open area is paved with well-worn deep brown flagstones. It's bumpy and uneven in some places, smooth as a well-paved road in others. Citizens and visitors alike sweep past, largely in ignorance of each other from the looks of it.

This huge space is occasionally home to some festivals or events, and is sometimes set up as a market. The Town Square does a much more regular and effective job of these functions, however, and so the City Gate Square is really just an empty space.

Occasionally there will be a proposal to repurpose the space, to build something in it, but it's swiftly pointed out that this is the only way in and out of the city, and there's not much you can do construction-wise that wouldn't impede folks moving about. A fountain and/or statue in the center tends to get some support, but without dedicated funds, no real traction is gained on the concept.

En Garde, Trainee!

This space is also occasionally used by the Berinncorte Militia to train recruits and to simulate combat that's more than a simple one-on-one affair. Though the Garrison (page 220) has a training hall, it's too narrow and confined for group combat simulation.

As a sporadic ( 5%) event, or at the GM's discretion, 3d8 Berinncorte Militia (page 841) plus 2d4 Berinncorte Elite Guard will be in the square, parading, talking, or fighting a mock battle, to the joy of onlookers. At such times, any Townfolk or key NPCs present in the Square will form a loose ring around the group, cheering on the simulated combat.

CGS-6: Northwest Alley

 Aside from entering the Garrison or the Upper-Class Residential District, the only way into the rest of Berinncorte is via this passage between the two buildings, which leads north.

This is a normal passageway that leads to the rest of the city.

CGS-7: Garrison / Barracks

CGS-8: Upper-Class Residential District

Act I

BC-23: Garrison / Barracks Overview

This complex is home to Berinncorte's civil defense forces, the Berinncorte Militia. It acts as a training building, a recruitment office, an administrative center for legal matters, and a major liaison point to the Mayor's House.

Perhaps most often, the PCs might find themselves here as a result of being Arrested. Some of the rooms within are open to the public, as well; the party may also enter and request a chat with key NPCs or Militia leadership, though of course they will be best off to have some specific business to discuss or else raise suspicion as to their motives.

Militia Leadership

Throughout this section, the phrase "Militia Leadership" refers to the following five key NPCs: Tansden, Amadan, Ash "Executioner", Debran Ormrick, and Skutt Krundar.

The Berinncorte Militia are led by Tansden, a human Fighter 3. His leadership is stern, yet fair, and above all, he has the interests of the town entire at heart.

Replacement: Tansden

If a player has lost a Fighter or other martial class, Tansden is an excellent replacement. Care must be taken, however, in terms of his existing roles and responsibilities as Militia Captain in town.

Please see p 16 for more explanation of how to undertake PC Replacement.

Second-in-command of the force is Skutt Krundar, a dwarven Fighter 2 who resents Tansden's leadership style and his close working relationship with the Mayor. Skutt would like to overthrow either leader and take their place, and feels perfectly confident in his superior ability to lead the city in either position.

Amadan is the mysterious Armsmaster, a half-elven Fighter 2 / Rogue 1. He is secretly a she, and although mute, runs an underground network of spies and informants. S/he is likely the most informed and wise citizen in all of Berinncorte, and none truly suspect much of her enterprise.

A good militia benefits from solid training. In charge in this capacity is Ash, aka "Executioner", a dwarven Fighter 1 / Barbarian 1. Ash is affable, much beloved by his soldiers, and hides a dark addiction to a powerful and horrible drug.

Last but far from least of the Militia's leadership is Debran Ormrick, a tiefling Enchanter 2 / Fighter 1. Debran is the militia's treasurer, and has recently taken a greater role in running the finances of the city itself. He is trusted by both the Mayor as well as all in the Militia's elite ranks... but has been skimming funds for years, toward his own personal agenda.

Ambient Force

The Militia is not a part-time force. Around the clock, during holidays, and every day of every year, some Militia presence exists, in both the city itself, as well as its headquarters.

At any given time, there will be  3d6+2 Berinncorte Militia, as well as 1d4-1 (minimum 0) Berinncorte Elite Guard present here. Some may be sleeping—in day or night; those sleeping during the day are likely to have just been working the night shift. Others are preparing to venture out for their shift, or just returning from a rotation and are changing to retire or go back out on the town as a civilian.

Hotel Bunking

The Militia's Barracks use a "first come, first served" approach to bunking: if it's free, grab it and use it. Although this approach leads to frustration for guards who feel a certain bed is "theirs", the advantage is that the building need only have sufficient bed space to accommodate those guards who are not actively on duty.

Each cabinet has a key; common and courteous practice is that the key to an unused cabinet is placed atop it; when a guard "claims" a bunk, he or she takes the key as well, locking valuables or off-duty personal effects within if desired. When the guard is finished using the bunk, they unlock the cabinet and place the key back on top. It seems prone to disaster and annoyance if misused, but in practice, the rigor of the paramilitary mindset lends itself to this sort of patterned approach to personal security.

Militia Leadership each carry a skeleton bunk key:

Skeleton Bunk Key

Value 2 gp; Weight ¼ lb.; Materials iron; Nature non-magical; Aura none; Slot none; CL n/a

This key has a bizarre array of teeth ringing its rod in a number of different ways. It will open, but cannot lock, any of the cabinets in the Garrison Barracks rooms.

Construction Requirements 1 lb. iron; blacksmith's forge; Cost 10 gp

Random Key NPCs

Key NPCs who hang about the city's military headquarters are largely restricted to those with official business within its walls. However, the Militia's role as a peacekeeping force as well as a service for more mundane duties such as clearing trash mean that all manner of citizens might have legitimate business here.

BC-23: Garrison / Barracks Map

GAR-1: Entrance

 A pair of well-polished double doors stands here, flanked by bright and well-maintained torch holders. Embossed upon the metal are stylized renderings of a shield and a lightning bolt.

At all times, unless there is a massive civil unrest very close by that demands their attention, are a pair of Berinncorte Elite Guard, who stand at attention just outside.

These guards will cautiously let citizens inside if they specify business with Militia Leadership that they need entry to discuss, but otherwise, the guards will politely direct any strangers to the Mayor's House if they have a complaint or question or other issue that needs an official decision.

Locked Iron Entrance Door

Break DC 20; Disable Device DC 18

These doors are always shut, though they are only locked during nighttime hours. All Militia Leadership have keys.

GAR-2: Foyer

 The floor here is well-polished and clean chequered marble, atop which sits a clean and padded rug bearing the city colors. Doors are closed in all four ordinal points: to the east is a set of wooden, iron-banded doors; to the north and south are metal single doors. The main entrance's iron double doors are to the west.

This is the entryway to the building's main entrance. It is typically unoccupied; a key NPC will be here if they are waiting to meet with someone who is to arrive through the main entrance.

These doors are always shut, though they are only locked during nighttime hours. All Militia Leadership have keys.

GAR-3: Mess Hall

A long rectangular room sits at the heart of the building. The only piece of furniture in the room is a massive longtable, surrounded by wooden chairs and with places set for sixteen. Candelabrae speckle the wooden table surface. Some platters are fresh, others recently-used and not cleaned up.

Iron-reinforced double doors lead to the west, north, and south; ordinary wooden double doors open to the east.

At any given time of day, there is a  15% chance that 1d4+2 Berinncorte Militia are seated here, eating.

The doors to the south and north are identical:

Locked North Reinforced Mess Hall Doors

Locked South Reinforced Mess Hall Doors

Break DC 18; Disable Device DC 15

Both sets of doors are typically shut, though they are rarely locked unless there is a private dinner here in the Mess Hall. All Militia Leadership have keys.

The doors to the east have no lock, and swing open and shut with ease; this is so the Kitchen staff can bear food and platters to and from the Mess Hall without needing a hand free.

GAR-4: Training Hall

This long, narrow room bears a large soft rug in the colors of the city. To the west is a well-lit octagonal wooden table, ringed with chairs. A metal door is to the southwest, iron-banded double doors to the south. To the northeast is a simple wooden door, and a similar one to the east.

This hall is used for training in one-on-one combat. There is a  15% chance that some of the soldiers in the building will be here, playing at combat either in response to a challenge, to settle a score, or as part of honing their martial skill on an ongoing basis.

There is a 25% chance that weaponry left over from the most recent such training will be lying here, on the floor; a pair of longswords is the most likely, though the GM is welcome to substitute in weaponry of your preference.

The door to the east leads to the kitchen. It is typically closed and locked; it's really only used by the Kitchen staff for serving the very rare meal directly into the Training Hall or Barracks A (see below).

Locked East Kitchen Door

Break DC 16; Disable Device DC 16

Note that while this hall is ideal for mono y mono training, group combat training happens outside, to the south, in City Gate Square (see En Garde, Trainee, below).

GAR-5: Barracks A

The entire northern edge of the building is a barracks. The row of five straw beds appears serviceable, if not necessarily comfy. Each bed has near it a small cabinet to hold personal effects while it is used to sleep. A small circular wooden table sits in the northeast corner, with stools around it.

A standard wooden door is to the southeast; to its north, a sturdy metal door leads to the east.

Please see Hotel Bunking below for a description of the Militia's approach to use of these beds and cabinets. Note in particular that each cabinet here has its own key, commonly placed atop it when not in use, and that all Militia Leadership each have a skeleton bunk key which will open, but will not lock, any cabinet.

GAR-6: North Equipment Room

In the northeastern corner of the Garrison is a small stone-floored room with two tables, a rug, and a tiny stool. Atop each table is laid an array of arms and armor.

The tables are freely accessed once entry into this room is gained, and contain a wealth of equipment, even if it is all ordinary and non-magical:

North Equipment Tables longswords (5x), large wooden shield, daggers (10x); greatswords (2x); rapiers (6x); shortbow (2x); arrows (80x); light crossbows (3x); heavy crossbow; crossbow bolts (50x), heavy maces (2x); light maces (6x)

The GM is encouraged to add customization and variety to this assortment if desired.

GAR-7: Kitchen

Much of the eastern portion of the building is taken up by the kitchen: two stoves at the north and south walls, and between them an enormous series of tables atop which is all manner of feasting food and cask.

There are always 1d4 cooks in this room; treat them as Townfolk from a statistics perspective. They are hardly cowards, but armed with ladles and cleavers and armored with aprons and grimy chef's toques, they will quickly flee any armed intruding force amid curses and shouts.

You may treat the array of foodstuffs as the following treasure, should the PCs wish to loot:

Kitchen Larder

20 trail rations (5 sp apiece); 5 banquet meals (10 gp apiece); 10 good meals (5 sp apiece); 20 common meals (3 sp apiece); ale (48 lbs, 4 cp per lb)

GAR-8: South Equipment Room

The southeast corner of the building is a small equipment room with two tables, a stool, a rug, and stone floors. Militia gear is organized neatly across and under the large table; the small table bears a lit candle and nothing more.

The tables are freely accessed once entry into this room is gained, and contain a wealth of equipment, even if it is all ordinary and non-magical:

South Equipment Tables

shortswords (5x), small wooden shields (3x), daggers (8x); greatsword; rapiers (3x); longbow (2x); arrows (80x); light crossbows (2x); heavy crossbows (2x); crossbow bolts (50x), heavy maces (2x); light maces (2x); morningstars (2x)

The GM is encouraged to add customization and variety to this assortment if desired.

GAR-9: Militia Guard Posts

These are standard Militia Guard Posts, except that they are always attended by 4 Berinncorte Elite Guard apiece.

Each of these two Guard Posts has a door leading to the Equipment Room to which it is adjacent; these doors are always kept closed and locked:

To the northwest is a metal door leading to the foyer; double wooden doors open to the kitchen in the east. A simple wooden door bars passage to the southeast.

Round the clock, 1d4-1 (minimum 0) Berrincorte Militia will be here, asleep or close to it.

Please see Hotel Bunking below for a description of the Militia's approach to use of these beds and cabinets. BC-24: Textiles Shop Overview

Daratis the seamstress, a gnome Expert 2, runs this shop. She's a somewhat demanding sort, and is quite skilled. In any event, unless you count the odd garment that finds its way into the General Store (page 172), hers is the only game in town clothing-wise.

Aiding her in running the business is her husband, Otibus. A quiet type, he's content do go about his work and lets his wife run most aspects of things; his contributions are of keeping the books, animal husbandry, and tanning hides.

Business Hours

The Textiles Shop is open during daylight hours only.

Shopping at the Textiles Shop

Most anything made of cloth or leather can be purchased here, and at reasonable prices. If the PCs wish something custom, it can typically be crafted in the span of 1 day per 50 gp of value or portion thereof; all common items are available in stock for immediate purchase.

The "chance" below indicates the likelihood that the item is available in-stock; if this roll fails, Daratis can always still make it on custom order in the timeframe indicated above.

Random Key NPCs

Everyone wears clothes. Period. So sooner or later, unless you have the skill, and tools, and supplies to make your own, chances are good that you'll have need of Daratis' services at least a few times each year.

Some folk keep favorite items in a good state of repair, taking them into the shop every month or so to sew up minor imperfections. Others, often the wealthier citizens of Berinncorte, always like to keep up with the latest style, and stop in from time to time to see what sorts of new fabric the seamstress has been able to acquire and work into her wares.

The GM is encouraged to be creative as to the nature of key NPCs who are in the shop at the same time as the PCs—perhaps one is completing a transaction as the party is stepping in, or perhaps one opens the door a few minutes after the PCs have started to question the seamstress' husband.

BC-24: Textiles Shop Map

TXL-1: Entrance

☐ A sturdy, yet welcoming door stands here. On either side are torch holders mounted into the brick of the building.

The Textiles Shop is open during daylight hours, plus an hour or so into the evening on either side of the day. While it is open, this door is closed yet unlocked; after-hours, the door is of course locked:

🔒 Locked Wooden Entry Door

Break DC 18; Disable Device DC 16

Daratis and Otibus both have a key to this door.

TXL-2: Main Shop

☐ Upon entering the shop, you're greeted with a well-lit and inviting main chamber with a large and beautifully-woven rug, a potted plant in the northwest corner, two wooden tables each ringed with chairs, and windows on the north and west walls.

This is of course the main area customers see while they do business in the shop. Aside from a silver candelabra on each of the two tables (25 gp apiece), there is nothing much of value or interest here.

TXL-3: Sample Table

☐ A front counter of sorts extends from the eastern wall; atop it is a wider array of fabric bolts than you have ever beheld. A few feet in back of the counter, you can see wooden double-doors leading to the rear of the store.

This counter is primarily for showcasing the latest and most beautiful—and therefore, often, the most expensive!—fabrics that the seamstress has come across of late. There are always 📦 3d4 bolts of fabric here; each is valued at 3d20 gp for the bolt. A given bolt contains 4d6 square yards of fabric.

Daratis has a somewhat encyclopedic mind for her wares, and will notice immediately if anything is misplaced or missing as soon as she comes into view of the counter.

The double doors are always closed; Daratis knows her clientele well enough to realize that the mystique of how clothes are fashioned, and indeed of the store as a whole, might be ruined if customers were to catch a glimpse of mundane boxes and crates and cloth piled up as they often are in her store room.

🔒 Locked Wooden Employee Access Dou

🚪 Employee Doors

Break DC 17; Disable Device DC 16

During business hours, these doors are typically not locked; after-hours, they are also not locked, until the seamstress and her husband retire for the evening. Both workers have keys to the doors.

TXL-4: Storage

☐ Crates and boxes are piled high, here; atop some of them, you see piles of fabric, clothes, and works-in-progress. Sacks lie at the base of many of these containers, and there is a stool. A sturdy wooden ladder reaches to the top of the gigantic crate in the northwest corner. A storage chest is in the southwestern shadow of that large crate. To the southwest is an iron-reinforced wooden door.

This is where all manner of supplies are stored, and where clothing that has been started, but not quite completed, is stored in a somewhat haphazard manner much in contrast to how Daratis would prefer to handle things. She is often complaining to her husband that this area needs to benefit from a greater degree of organization; ideally, Otibus would install clothes hangers or they would be able to purchase or fabricate some mannequins or clothes trees to put the in-progress items on, perhaps even for display. Alas, a combination of low funds and stubbornness to keep things the way they are tend to block progress toward the seamstress' goals of tidiness.

Atop the crates may be found some clothes in various states of assembly. For treasure purposes, you may treat them collectively as the following:

artisan's outfits (3x, 1 gp apiece); entertainer's outfits (2x, 3 gp apiece); noble's outfit (75 gp), peasant's outfits (6x, 1 sp apiece); scholar's outfits (2x, 5 gp apiece)

The crates are nailed shut, and require prying or hacking to gain entry to the bulky but possibly profitable innards. Although there are several crates, you may treat them all as one for the purposes of time spent opening and the reward to be obtained.

📦 Sealed Fabric Supply Crates

TXL-5: Personal Quarters

🗨 Warm sunlight streams into this private bedroom from the window in the western wall. The feather bed seems a bit small for two, but you presume the couple makes do. There is a large cabinet to the southwest with a candelabra atop it. To the northeast is a desk and chair, and to its west is a small cabinet.

These are the private chambers of the seamstress and her husband. They sleep here every night, except on the rare occasion where Otibus is traveling out of Berinncorte to buy rare supplies, trade the shop's wares in farther-flung locales, or if he simply falls asleep at the farm where their animals graze.

The large cabinet to the southwest holds the couple's personal clothes, and is unlocked:

TXL-6: Butcher's Shop

BC-25: Butcher's Shop Overview

Several citizens of Berinncorte prepare their own meat—they're farmers, or simply have the skill and/or patience for doing it themselves. Others refrain from eating meat as a regular part of their diet, either out of a sense of propriety, or on account of their income level not allowing for such expensive fare.

For everyone else in the city, however, and a bit beyond, Ganyc's Butcher Shop is nearly the exclusive place to obtain freshly-prepared animal foodstuffs. If you're looking to buy in bulk, or looking for salted / preserved meat, say, for a long voyage, then the General Store is likely a better bargain. And of course, if you're in need of just a single meal, prepared with accompaniments, presented with a tankard of brew, in an establishment with merriment and a bit of risqué, well, then, The Leaky Cask Tavern fits the bill.

Ganyc is a stoic human Warrior 2, a balding, portly, middle-aged gentleman who is not shy with his tongue if provoked, but mostly just cuts the meat and sells it. He's not passionate about the craft, but then, as he would tell you, anyone with a deep passion for butchery ain't too right in the head to begin with.

Assisting the meatmaster in his trade is the apprentice, Farzith. He's a somewhat disgusting, grimy little gnome with few ambitions in life. Such a being, it would seem, is the only type to be content with the less savory parts of butchery, serving a stern and unwarm master with no hope of advancement.

Business Hours

The Butcher's is open during daylight hours, plus one hour the latter side of sunset.

Shopping at the Butcher's Shop

Ganyc supplies commonly-available meats from farm animals. So, no Wyvern Cutlets or anything of exotic nature, even by special order.

In fact, the butcher rarely does anything "special". He has a small farm in the countryside, which supplies some of his animals for butchery; the remainder he contracts with other local farmers. If he or one of his farmer colleagues doesn't have a certain animal available on a given month, that foodstuff simply isn't available; Ganyc will by no means go out of his way to trade with caravans to acquire, for example, pork if it's a slow month for swine.

The "chance" below indicates the likelihood that the item is available in-stock; if the roll fails, that item is simply not available right now.

Table 45: Butcher Shop Wares

elven trail rations	20%	3 gp
gnome trail rations	30%	3 gp
halfling trail rations	10%	3 gp

Random Key NPCs

As described above, most citizens have at least occasional need for meat and associated foodstuffs, and Ganyc really is the only place in Berinncorte to acquire an individual-sized portion for the average person or family.

As with other shopping establishments in town, the GM is encouraged to "place" key NPCs as would make sense in real life—either just completing a transaction as the party enters, or arriving shortly after the PCs do.

BUT-1: Entrance

☐ The front door to the establishment is a plain, wooden affair. Someone has attempted to carve something into the door's wood, about head-height, but it's too crude to make out much of their work. You think you might see a stylized cleaver, but then the image escapes you, and it again looks like just a bunch of haphazard scuffs.

This is the entrance to the Butcher's Shop. It's unlocked during daylight hours, plus one hour into the dark each night; at all other times, it's closed and locked.

🔒 Locked Wooden Entry Door

Break DC 18; Disable Device DC 16

Only Ganyc bears a key, but he will occasionally loan a copy to his apprentice if Farzith is cleaning up or working late on a given night.

BUT-2: Waiting Area

☐ A nice, warmly-lit foyer greets you as you enter the building. Windows to the north and east allow some light, and candles and a wall sconce add more. In the northeast corner, there's an empty urn; the northwest bears a wooden armchair next to a cabinet. Another chair sits just south of the entry door.

This is the foyer, intended for customers waiting on an order. Ganyc works well and thoughtfully when he bends to task, but has a terrible ability to estimate his own skills and the time it will take him to deploy them, and so many customers are forced to wait. At least, they would tell you, there's a comfortable place in which to wait.

The cabinet to the west does not have a lock on it, but contains only mundane eating supplies.

🔒 Storage Cabinet

cups (4x, 1 gp apiece); basket (2x, 4 sp apiece); plates (4x, 1 sp apiece)

BUT-3: Front Desk

☐ A waist-high wooden partition bears convenient entry further to the south of the building. Atop it is a covered cooking skillet, two candles, various cleavers, and a cutting board. Although the array is none too tidy, it does look fairly clean, and not distasteful.

During business hours, either Ganyc or Farzith will appear at this desk within five minutes of customers arriving. There seems to be no rhyme or reason to this delay; sometimes, the butcher and/or his apprentice will be working at the Prep Tables, in plain view of the customer who has just arrived, and still, they will have to wait a full five minutes before being acknowledged.

BUT-4: Prep Tables

☐ Three large wooden tables are arrayed behind the front desk in the southeast corner of the shop. On each is an array of candles, cleavers, cutting tools, forks, and meats in various stages of preparation. To the west is a set of iron-banded wooden double doors.

For combat purposes, you may treat these tables as having a dozen assorted cutting implements, any of which may be wielded in combat as though it was a dagger (and may be used as though it were a Simple Weapon).

If the PCs are in a looting mood, you may treat the assorted cuts of meat on the tables as the following treasure:

🔒 Butcher Prep Tables

meat (8 portions, 3 sp apiece); street meat (6 portions, 1 cp apiece); trail rations (5x, 5 sp apiece)

The iron-reinforced double doors to the west are always closed, but only locked after business hours.

🔒 Locked Reinforced Prep Room Doors

Break DC 18; Disable Device DC 15

Both Ganyc and Farzith have keys to these doors.

BUT-5: Office and Warm Storage

☐ This cozy office has a small wooden table ringed with chairs. Sacks in varying sizes are piled in the southwest corner. To the north is a locked steel door.

The assortment of sacks is of course unlocked and freely accessible; you may treat them collectively as containing the following treasure:

🔒 Warm Storage Sacks

trail rations (16x, 5 sp apiece); elven trail rations (10x, 2 gp apiece); wandermeal rations (10x, 1 cp apiece)

To the north is the door leading to Cold Storage (see below). It is always kept closed and locked. It is a formidable barrier, but is not intended to be so imposing: Ganyc had it fashioned by blacksmith Dimblegruffe, with the requirement that it keep the cold from seeping through. The massive door that resulted fulfills this objective, but is so ominous that it seems better suited for a treasure vault!

Locked Steel Cold Storage Door

Break DC 22; Disable Device DC 20

Both Ganyc and Farzith have keys to the Cold Storage door.

BUT-6: Cold Storage

A rush of cold air greets you as you step into this large chamber. It is nearly freezing cold. The stone floor adds to this effect. Crates of all sizes are stacked in each corner; to the south, a handful of wooden tables have been pushed together to form a butchery workspace. From the assortment of carving implements and carcasses, it's clear this is where the brunt of the butchery takes place. To the east, a wooden storage chest sits on the floor.

This is where all perishables are kept in the shop, including carcasses.

Note that the storage crate in the northeast corner, described in Stash (see below), is not visible to those standing on the ground. If the party explicitly mentions they are searching on top of the crates, it is revealed; similarly, if they go about smashing open every single storage crate, they will come across this chest.

The storage crates are all nailed shut and sealed, requiring a crowbar or hacking to prise open. Describe the contents as largely consisting of well-preserved or fresh animal corpses in varying states of preparation; for looting purposes, you may treat the contents of each crate as follows:

Sealed Storage Crates (8x)

Break DC 16

Storage Crates (each)

The storage chest in the east is trapped, and locked:

Ganyc alone has the key to the storage chest; Farzith has of course seen the chest, but knows nothing of its contents or the trap that protects it.

BUT-7: Stash

Atop the enormous storage crate in the northeast corner of the cold storage room is a locked chest.

This is a storage chest atop the large crate in the northeast. It is merely locked:

Locked Banded Wooden Storage Chest (NE)

Break DC 16; Disable Device DC 18

The butcher alone has the key to this storage chest; his apprentice knows it's there, but has never seen inside.

BUT-8: Upper-Class Residential District

BUT-9: Textiles Shop

BC-256: Cistern Overview

This seemingly innocuous building was constructed to capture rainwater and store it for town emergencies (e.g., firefighting) or shortages. In practice, though, it has fallen into disuse over the years, and is now entirely abandoned.

☐ If asked about the cistern, townsfolk cannot recall any time when it had been used for its intended purpose, and that it has been abandoned for as long as they can remember. Even Mayor Symms balks at memories of this place or its upkeep. Shaking their head, any NPC will shrug and suggest that maybe it's just always been that way.

Make a passive DC 16  Knowledge (Nature) check for each PC; any who pass will note that the algae color on the bricks outside are very odd for what would be nearly entirely rainwater... there are other factors at work here, it would seem. At the GM's option, those passing the check at DC 20 or above may note that necromantic and undead forces have been known to taint water and aqueous plant life an orangish hue.

The truth of the matter is that the cistern was built atop a deep network of tunnels and graves. Decades ago, undead arose from the basement underneath, slew the maintenance workers inside, and nearly escaped, but were beaten back and the doors barred. Undead lurk still in the undercaverns, waiting for another intruder foolish enough to disturb their uneasy rest.

BC-256: Cistern Ground Floor Map

CSG-1: Guard Post

☐ To the south of the double-door entrance of this building sits an abandoned guard post. In contrast to similar posts throughout the rest of the city, this one seems completely unused: the furniture within is in pristine condition, with no knife marks or scuffs; the flagstones on the bottom of the structure show no sign of wear, and the brick appears as though it was set yesterday, with perfect joints.

This is a typical Militia Guard Post, except that it is never occupied. If the party passes nearby this location more than once, a passive DC 12  Wisdom (Perception) check by any PC causes them to realize that they have seen most other guard posts occupied from time to time; it's noteworthy that this one in particular has not been.

Berinncorte Militia shy away from duty here, even if assigned, due to the subliminal undead presence underground. It's rarely an issue, however, since the militia, like all other townsfolk, have a forgetful nature regarding the Cistern, and as a result, nobody thinks to assign a guard to this post because it slips their mind.

CSG-2: Entrance

☐ Solid metal double doors are closed and locked. The once-sturdy façade of this structure has clearly fallen into disrepair.

From here on the ground level, you can see the funnel system that had been constructed to capture rainwater and pipe it into the cistern's interior reservoir... but the funnel has collapsed, and moss and algae coat most surfaces. To the left of the door, a rainwater leak has stained the brick a deep greenish-orange as it has dripped down from the roof.

The double doors are steel, and locked; a DC 18  Disable Device check will unlock it, and a  DC 20 Break check will bash it open.

If bashed open, the noise rouses all hostile denizens of the ground floor, each group of which attacks the party 1d4 rounds afterwards if the door is not immediately closed.

CSG-3: Interior

☐ This air feels as though it hasn't been breathed for decades. It feels damp, sodden, and tainted.

The roof is caved in; you can see the remnants of the basin and pipe system that once efficiently collected rainwater and ensured its delivery into the reservoir, which occupies the bulk of the chamber in its center. Now neglected, it is covered in filth and grime; the greenish-orange glaze of algae and slime is more deeply orange than the similar patch of residue you saw outside.

Refuse and broken wood lies in piles around the edges of the room.

Unless the party has darkvision or brings their own light source, this room is nearly impossible to navigate at night because there are no light sources or sconces. During the day, it's dark but manageable, as the caved-in roof allows enough light in from above.

Every minute the party walks around in this room, there is a  20% chance that one of the creatures in the room notices the party and attacks immediately. If this is triggered, roll a D6: on a 1-2, the Slime Mold from CSG-4 attacks; on a 3-4, the Rat Swarm from CSG-5 emerges; and on a 5-6, the Greensting Scorpion from CSG-6 scuttles out.

CNG-4: Reservoir

 A stale, humid smell comes off of the basin which now lies nearly empty of water. Its inner surface is coated in what looks like a glistening combination of mushrooms and weirdly-colored plant life.

As you approach the reservoir, the carpet of residue moves, shifting, then rising up and slithering toward you.

Make a check as the party approaches to inspect the Reservoir: there is a  75% chance that the Slime Mold that lives within attacks the party. If not, then the mold lies ignorant of them until they move on to another area of the room.

At the bottom of the reservoir, underneath the slime mold, is a scattering of treasure from prior victims:

Slime Mold Treasure

34 gp, 28 sp, tourmaline pendant (62 gp)

Note that it is not possible to see, or obtain, the treasure if the slime mold is still lying atop it.

CSG-5: Woodpile

 Broken chairs, tables, and even a door or two lie in a heap here. There are patches of thatched material, straw, and other refuse that seems to have been gathered from elsewhere.

A faint rustling stirs from underneath the broken wood. As you watch, hosts of beady little eyes emerge as the rats attack.

There is a  75% chance that the Rat Swarm that lives here attacks the party as they pass by; if they do not attack, then the party is safe for now.

If the rats are vanquished, the PCs may search the pile to discover  41 gp, a silver dagger, and a ruby ring worth 51 gp. It is not possible to notice or to obtain this treasure while the rats are within the woodpile.

CSG-6: Refuse Pile

 This pile of trash stinks, though it's difficult to tell with all of the other bad smells in the Cistern. Old animal carcasses, rotting vegetation, cracked bowls, and all manner of common trash lies in a heap.

As the party approaches the refuse pile, make a check in secret: there is a  50% chance that the Greensting Scorpion that lives here attacks the party. However, it's so tiny, and there is so much trash everywhere, that it's difficult to notice: make a  DC 17 Wisdom (Perception) check for each PC; any who succeed will notice the movement as the scorpion emerges and scuttles across the floorboards toward the party.

The scorpion will attack the closest party member; if the party has not designated a formation and/or you are not using miniatures or maps for this purpose (i.e., "navigating conversationally"), select a PC at random as the victim.

Though the party will smell foul if they search the pile, there is disappointingly no treasure to be found.

CSG-7: Trapdoor to Basement

 In the northeast corner of the room, a trapdoor on the floor is surrounded by old sacks of spoiled grain and sand. A rotting barrel sits next to these bags.

The barrel contains an alchemical mixture once of use to potion-makers. However, it is now so rotted and spoiled, it has no use to anyone.

The contents are explosive, however, if subjected to fire, lightning, or force energy (e.g., if a spell with one of these energy type descriptors affects this area of the Cistern, or if for some reason a torch is thrown in this area, or the structure catches on fire during combat). If this occurs, there is a  40% chance per round that it will explode—roll each round until the barrel explodes, or the fire/energy exposure is prevented, or the party leaves the Cistern entirely.

An explosion causes 4d4 fire damage to those standing within 10' of the barrel; everyone between 10'-20' suffers only 2d4 fire damage. A DC 14  Dexterity save halves this damage in either case.

The trapdoor itself is wooden, and is both locked and trapped. The key has long ago been lost, so the only passage is by picking the lock or bashing it open.

CSG-8: Upper-Class Residential District

BC-26: Cistern Basement Map

The only access to this area is via the trapdoor on the ground floor of the Cistern (above).

CSB-1: Trapdoor and Ladder

Underneath the trapdoor is a wooden ladder—a bit slimy and rickety, but it seems serviceable enough to at least get you safely downstairs to the basement.

The ladder is indeed “serviceable”, though also slimy from the dampness and ambient algae covering almost everything to a degree. On the way down, make a DC 14 Strength (Athletics) check for each PC descending; failure means falling and suffering 1d6 points of crushing damage. Ascending, make a similar check, though it’s DC 15 this time—with the same consequences.

There is no natural light down here, and only the trapdoor connects the basement chamber to the Cistern’s ground floor above, so the party will need to bring their own light or have to stumble around the pitch black.

Once down, the party may be read the following:

Stale air that hints at a lingering decay pervades the chamber. The ground is damp and muddy, and the rock walls slippery with mildew and mold.

It’s an unwelcoming, forgotten place, to say the least.

There are many clumps of fungi, but only the Mushroom Cluster located at CSB-2 is noteworthy. All of the others are ordinary mushrooms.

None of the rocks harbors any unusual properties, though of course Strength (Athletics)ing over them counts as difficult terrain.

CSB-2: Mushroom Cluster

Overpowering the rest of the chamber is a huge cluster of fungi, directly underneath the reservoir that was on the ground floor. Water drips steadily from the rotted floorboards above; the mushroom caps glisten with a grimy moisture.

One mushroom in particular, in the middle of the group, seems larger than the others. As you watch, it shifts slightly, and you see a faint movement underneath the surrounding patch of fungi.

Only read the italicized portion if at least one PC succeeds in a DC 18 Wisdom (Perception) skill check—this indicates that the Fungal Crawler that lives in the patch has been spotted, and the party can prepare before it attacks.

When the first member of the party descends to the basement, secretly roll d4: this is the number of rounds it takes before the Fungal Crawler leaps out of the mushroom patch and attacks the closest PC. Note that this may mean that the Crawler begins its assault before the entire party has had a chance to come down.

Searching the mushroom cluster once the Crawler has been dealt with will yield 250 gp worth of alchemical ingredients. These must be harvested by a PC who passes a successful DC 17 Knowledge (Nature) check, a DC 12 Craft (Alchemy) check, a DC 15 Profession (Gardener) check, or a DC 12 Profession (Herbalist) check. You may make any number of these checks for any PC attempting to harvest; success at any of them by any PC means the harvest is successful. Failure by less than 5 points means the harvest is only partially successful, netting ingredients worth only 100 gp; failure by more than 5 points means the valuable components are accidentally ruined in the gathering and are therefore only worth 20 gp.

In any scenario, the results weigh 5 lbs. and are resellable only to an NPC with at least 2 ranks in one of the skills mentioned above. Aramil Xiloscient, the apothecary (page 515), would seem an excellent first choice for such a transaction.

CSB-3: Skeletons

A pile of bones stripped bare by time and scavengers lies here on the muddy floor.

Each of these locations is a pile of assorted bones; neither clothes nor flesh nor equipment yet remains. Make a secret check each time the party approaches any one of these piles; for each, there is a 40% chance that the Skeleton will animate and attack. If the party is intentionally trying to be sneaky and not disrupt the dead, instead make a DC 12 Dexterity (Stealth) check with each approach. If any party member fails the Dexterity (Stealth) check, or if the 40% roll is triggered, then the Skeleton arises (giving the party one round to equip or prepare), and attacks.

Make a check each time any party member passes within 10’ of one of these piles; after a given pile’s skeleton has been defeated, do not make a check for that pile again.

Each time a skeleton attack is triggered in this manner, make a secret check for each other pile that whose skeleton has not yet been triggered; there is a 20% chance per pile that a skeleton arises from that pile, too, and joins the fight.

CSB-4: Skeleton Crevice

Behind some hip-height stalagmites and a pile of head-sized mushroom caps, the cavern slants back and down to a point. Scattered across the floor is an assortment of humanoid bones; you see the glint of a greatsword underneath it all.

Each time one of the skeletons from one of the locations CSB-3 (see above) is “triggered”, make a check in secret: there is a  15% chance that the Barbarian Skeleton emerges from this crevice to join the fight.

If any PC approaches the Crevice directly, the Barbarian Skeleton that lies within will automatically arise and fight to the death.

In the back of the crevice is a small leather drawstring pouch containing the following:

Drawstring Pouch

13 pp; Amulet of Skill Bonus (Charisma (Intimidation) +1; 100 gp value)

The Amulet has the following profile:

Amulet of Skill Bonus

Value bonus squared x 100 gp; Weight 1 lb.; Materials silver; Nature magical; Aura slight transmutation; Slot necklace; CL 5

The wearer gains a competency bonus to skill checks of the indicated type.

Construction Requirements the author must have at least 10 ranks in the skill for which you are designing the book; Spellcraft or Craft check; Cost 65 gp

CSB-5: Cave-In Skeleton

Here lies a half-decomposed body that appears to be human. Rocks lie atop it; a large one lies near its head. From your seasoned dungeoneering analysis, it appears that this hapless person was struck by a falling stone and died.

Despite the numerous other undead presences in this area, this scene is precisely as it appears. The body, if searched, yields the following:

Cave-In Skeleton

12 gp, 34 cp, padded armor, short sword

CSB-6: Preserved Skeleton

All the way across the chamber, a humanoid body lies crumpled. Compared to the other remains, this set is remarkably well-preserved—though through recency of decease or some other factor, you cannot be certain. From his garb, this appears to have been a nicely-dressed, though unarmored, man who carried a quarterstaff, which sits at his side. The odor of decay hangs about his body, but compared to the other oppressive smells down here, you can't tell if it's a recent rot or a years-old rot.

In truth, the body is relatively well-preserved mainly because it is farther away from the dripping water and rot, and also far enough away from the undead that they have as of yet taken little notice of him. There's enough of an aura of magic here to also lend some delay to the onset of decay.

Dead Man

quarterstaff; jeweled amulet (118 gp)

Quest: Dearly Departed

 Summary: A man leaves his family and wanders off to die alone.

 Rewards: Up to  2 Reward Stars; jeweled amulet.

 Locations: Cistern Basement.

 Key NPCs: None.

 Kickoff: The PCs discover the man's corpse in the Cistern Basement.

 Description:

Knowing he had a terminal disease, and knowing that the cistern was abandoned, a doomed husband and father came down here to while away his time rather than subject his loved ones to the pain of seeing him wither.

At the time, he had lived in the Lower-Class Residential District (page 245), with his wife and three children. After several months of waiting for him, however, his family was forced to leave the city; they are now somewhere in the farmlands beyond the city walls, and therefore too beyond the scope of this adventure.

No skill check is required to note that the poor man must have died a few years ago.

 The party can ignore all of this, claim as much of the loot as they wish, and move on with their lives. They benefit only of the loot on the corpse, with this approach. Note that almost uniquely among Quests in this adventure, ignoring this Quest does not produce any  Catalyst Impact.

 It's far less likely, but the party may try and bury the body so as to put it at rest, either here in the basement earth of the Cistern, or in an extreme scenario, they might carry the body all the way across town to the Graveyard (page 84). Burying the corpse here grants the party 1 Reward Star; taking it across town should be worth 2 Reward Stars, particularly if such behavior is in-character.

Dearly Departed (Bury):
Law +3 / Law +5

Burying the body in-place in the Cistern basement creates a Catalyst Impact of Law +3. Doing so in the Graveyard increases this impact to +5.

This Quest ends only if the party buries the body in some fashion. Even if the PCs ignore the corpse, they may return to it at any point to fulfill the requirements for further reward.

BC-27: Upper-Class Residential District Overview

This two-story building is of superior construction quality. Bay windows flanking the doors show a warm light from within. Gently curved bay windows along the side of the wall feature large windows, stained from the outside.

Essentially an expensive apartment complex, this district is home to many of Berinncorte's elite who do not dwell in their own retail establishments.

Outsiders—those who do not own or rent quarters here—are discouraged intensely, and in fact are prohibited unless specifically invited by a tenant. Needless to say, anyone wandering the hallways or caught in a room had better have a good explanation for their presence; otherwise, the Berinncorte Elite Guard will be called.

All the accommodations are high-quality and present an expensive-looking appearance.

Operations & Landlord

Running the show, as it were, and keeping the demanding tenants pleased, is the owner of the building and landlord, Tarsheva Hornwood. Tarsheva is a half-elf Expert 2, and a supremely competent manager, catering to the indulgences of Berinncorte's elite.

Business Hours

This being a residential district, there are no “business hours” as such. However, as Tarsheva administers the preparation and serving of at least one meal a day at dinnertime, there is a schedule to keep nevertheless.

Tarsheva will bring in temporary workers to help prepare, serve, and clean up after dinner each day; frequently they will bring supplies in as well when they arrive. The landlord will begin admitting staff to the Kitchen at 1 pm each day; they will serve evening meal around 6pm, clean up afterwards, and leave the building between 9-10pm.

During these hours, there will always be 2d4 Meal Staff in the Kitchen, Dining Hall, and Pantry. Treat them as Townfolk from a game mechanics perspective.

Random Key NPCs

Note that unlike shops or other, communal locations, it's rare to find anyone in this building who doesn't live there. The list below is presented as a means of semi-randomly inserting key NPCs here, but do consider carefully the context of where within the building to place them.

Table 47: Random Key NPCs, Upper-Class Residential District

Suggested Population: 1d4 rolls

51-65	Gunnloda Balderk	Librarian
66-80	Larissa	Elder of Sheergath
81-85	Waywocket Ningel	Jeweler
86-00	Welby Goodbarrel	Merchant

BC-27: Upper-Class Residential District Ground Floor Map

UCG-1: Entrances

Steel double doors, artfully embossed with the city's symbol, form an imposing barrier here. To either side are well-attended torch sconces.

Both sets of these doors are always closed and locked. Note that these doors are patterned after blacksmith Grimbleduffe's own doors, and should represent quite a significant challenge for the party to overcome.

There are several ways around this. The PCs can murder a resident and steal their key, of course, though this leads to possible other consequences (see Getting Arrested, page 48, and refer to the Catalyst Trackers, page 41). Alternately, an enterprising and talented rogue may pickpocket the key from any resident.

Locked Steel Double Entry Doors

Break DC 20; Disable Device DC 22

All residents have keys.

UCG-2: Foyers

Rich, polished lacquer shines on the chequered floor. You can't spot a single mote of dust anywhere, and the hallway smells faintly of pinecones.

If the PCs run into a key NPC in this building, the Foyer is a likely place (or the Hallway; see INU-3: Southeast Bedroom) to encounter them. The GM is encouraged to be creative in launching surprises in this manner; for example, the PCs might already be inside, when one of the residents arrives home!

UCG-3: Hallway

Hallways in the building are well-maintained and the floors are polished. Sprinkled along the walls are comfortable armchairs, bookshelves, and small tables here and there.

Steps on the floor make a fair amount of noise; due to this and the acoustics in the hallway, any Dexterity (Stealth) checks here take a -2 circumstance penalty.

The bookshelves are communal, and act as a form of private library for the residents, who are free to take any tome they like, and leave a volume if they have one to spare. Some citizens have taken to appropriating some of the works from the Library, leading to a possible quest the party can happen upon.

Quest: The Wealth of Knowledge

Summary: Upper-Class residents have been stealing—er, relocating—per-Class Residential District, and inquire about returning them to the Library.

Description:

Astute and learned PCs might notice that some of the books on the hallway bookshelves of the Upper-Class Residential District might not be privately-owned. For each PC who has already visited the Library at least once, who moves along the Hallways in the Upper-Class Residential District, make a passive Wisdom (Perception) check at DC 16: success kicks this Quest off immediately. If the entire party fails, feel free to make another check each time the party moves along the hallways; alternately, the GM can simply initiate this Quest regardless of the outcome of the check.

Read the following aloud to the PC who passed the check:

Your eye roves along the spines of volumes on the hallway bookshelves. As with the Library, most of the titles don't catch your eye, and many don't even make sense to you. But as you look, one title in particular stands out. It appears to have a brownish stain on the bottom portion of the spine—exactly the same stain that a book by the same name had in the Library!

The book in question is Lore of the Nature of the Realm, an otherwise innocuous text chronicling rumor and myth from hundreds of years ago in the area surrounding Berinncorte. It's not useful in any fashion, other than the PC in question recalling that this title had also been in the Library.

If the PC does nothing, ignoring the book, then this Quest terminates with no further impact.

Wealth of Knowledge (Ignore): Chaos +1

Discovering the book, but doing nothing about it, creates a Catalyst Impact: Chaos +1.

Note that at the GM's discretion, this impact should only apply if the party have been in the Library before this point.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

Alternately, the PC can either take the book, or remember it, and follow up with one of the Library Staff (see Library). Gunnloda Balderk is most concerned with the possibility that one of her beloved tomes has gone missing, and moreso that someone in the Upper-Class Residential District might have done so—ironically, Gunnloda herself lives in the District, but had no idea! She defends her ignorance by explaining that she spends all day, every day, surrounded by and working with books—although she loves to read them, she rarely peruses the offerings in the District hallways, as the selection would always be dwarfed by that of the Library she works in!

Whether the PCs merely mention the lost book to Gunnloda, or if they return it to her, she shows her appreciation and thanks. The PC who was most directly responsible for the return should benefit from a reward of 2 Reward Stars (or simply share this reward among those PCs who returned it willingly).

Wealth of Knowledge (Return): Law +4

Returning the book produces a Catalyst Impact: Law +4.

This Quest terminates only if the book is returned, destroyed, or sold elsewhere; up until one of these things occurs, the PCs may still turn it in.

UCG-4: Fountain

In the corner of this L-shaped bend in the hallway sits a stone fountain. In the center is what may have once been a statue, but it's either so poorly-formed or so eroded that it resembles little more than a tower with water seeping out in a trickle. The water itself is clear and clean, however; so much so that you can see sparkles of coin on the bottom of the fountain's basin.

On the floor of the basin is an assortment of change that citizens have superstitiously tossed in over the years. That nobody has scraped it all up and collected it for their own speaks to the strength of either the residents' existing wealth, or their superstition, or perhaps both.

UCG-5: Northeast Suite (Ganyc's Quarters)

A cozy sitting area greets you as you enter the suite, enhanced by a bay window to the east. A cabinet stands in the southwest corner; to its north are an armchair and wooden table with a candelabra on it. In the northeast is a potted plant; just to its south is a comfortable padded armchair. Double wooden doors open to the north.

This suite is currently rented by Ganyc, the butcher, who makes just barely enough to afford the smallest apartment in this zone of opulence. He spends little on any other form of extravagance, however, so is content to eat like a commoner, so long as he can do it from one of the nicest spaces in the city.

The cabinet to the southwest is unlocked, but contains only mundane eating supplies:

UCG-6: Southwest Suite (Gunnloda's Quarters)

These quarters are cozy, and smell strongly of old musty books. Light streams in from the western bay window, in front of which is one of the most comfortable-looking chairs you've ever seen. To the south of the chair is a potted plant; to its north is a bookcase. The eastern part of the room holds a small cabinet; most of the eastern wall is consumed by a set of simple wooden double doors.

These quarters are owned by Gunnloda Balderk, librarian and something of a recluse in her time away from the Library. She revels in her solitude when she's holed up in her nice living space; often, she can be found in the armchair by the window, a book propped on her knees, but much of the time, she doesn't even read it, preferring instead to people-watch from the window.

The cabinet to the southeast of the room is unlocked, but contains only mundane eating supplies:

On the bookshelf in the northwest of the room can be found a specific tome of interest; it is only revealed if the PCs explicitly state they are searching the bookshelf, and then only if the searcher passes a Wisdom check at DC 14:

Metatome (book)

Value 150 gp; Weight 2 lbs.; Materials paper; Nature non-magical; Aura none; Slot usable; CL n/a Simply put, this is a book about books. It is an indulgent text by any measure, waxing poetic on the nature, use, and history of books in a manner only a book-lover could possibly absorb.

Studying the book for 1 hour will result in some ephemeral benefit: the reader gains a +4 competency bonus on any Profession (Librarian) check, or any skill or Ability Score check used to locate, read, create, or transcribe a book. This benefit lasts for 12 hours after study has completed.

Construction Requirements means to assemble a physical book; the author must have at least 10 ranks in the Profession (Librarian) skill; Cost 80 gp

UCG-7: Northwest Suite (Waywocket Ningel's Quarters)

The northwest suite seems a bit dusty, with a somewhat stale taste in the nostrils in contrast to the hallway outside. In the beautiful bay window is a comfy-looking armchair which appears pristine, as though it has never been used. To its north is a potted plant; in the southwest corner of the suite is a tiny bookshelf. A small cabinet is nestled in the northeast corner of this room, next to which is a set of plain wooden double doors.

Waywocket holds quarters in the Upper-Class Residential District primarily because she does not have a place to stay outside the city, and does not trust her valuables to those who might bunk nearby in the Lower-Class Residential District. She uses the suite only to sleep; store valuables securely; and, when she's not working in the Leaky Cask Tavern (p 135; see "A Waywocket With Jewels"), to go about the business of crafting gemstones and jewelry.

UCG-8: Southwest Bedroom (Gunnloda's)

Past the double doors, you find a small sitting area with two tables, an assortment of chairs, and candelabrae on top of the tables. To the east is a velvet privacy curtain; beyond, you see what appears to be a combination bedroom and closet. It contains a bed, several cabinets, a privy, a washing basin halfway filled with clean water, two bookshelves, a writing desk, and a dressing desk with stools.

Inside the closet area is an array of clothing in freely-accessible armoires and cabinets, which collectively can be treated as the following treasure:

The large cabinet next to the bed is always closed and locked. While it holds some clothes, it also contains some valuables, as follows:

☞ Past the double doors from the sitting area is a little office space with two tables and an assortment of chairs. A velvet privacy curtain separates this area from the bedroom proper; in that space is a bed, a cabinet, a privy and washing basin, a tiny bookshelf, a writing desk, a separate dressing desk, and some stools. A simple but locked wooden door opens into the closet area.

UCG-10: Northeast Bedroom (Ganyc's)

☞ A nice little eating and dressing area is just beyond the double doors leading to the suite's sitting area. To the east is a circular table with some chairs; a writing and a dressing desk are to the west, with a stool next to each. Past a large velvet privacy curtain is the bedroom itself: a washing basin, privy, bed, side table, cabinet, and bookshelves. In the northwest corner of the bedroom is a simple but locked wooden door; you presume it leads to the closet.

UCG-11: Staircase Up

☞ This staircase leads up to the second floor of the building.

This leads to the upper floor of the Upper-Class Residential District; please see page 256 for the Stairs Down.

UCG-12: Dining Hall

☞ A grand, expansive chamber is capped to the east by a beautiful bay window. The room is dominated by a banquet table, fully set and ready for a meal. To the southeast is a set of swinging double doors; to the west is an area that opens to the south.

Tarsheva Hornwood uses this area as her office, and will almost always be found here during the day unless she is away purchasing supplies. Keep in mind that afternoons and evenings, Meal Staff will be in this area; see Business Hours for more details.

The double doors leading in from the Hallway (see above) are typically unlocked; during meal times, they are also flung open invitingly. On rare occasions, such as when the Dining Hall is being cleaned, it may be locked:

Once a day, dinner is served here for all residents and their guests. Treat this as a banquet meal (10 gp apiece), but it would be quite difficult for the party to loot it right out from under the residents as they are served!

UCG-13: Kitchen

Two stoves are against the wall to the south. The tiled stone floor is speckled with stools here and there in front of the stoves, and the large wooden prep table to their west. To the northwest are two bookshelves. To the west is a simple wooden door.

Remember that afternoons and evenings, Meal Staff will be in this area; see Business Hours on page 246 for more details.

The bookshelves in the northwest are stocked with cooking tomes; searching them to any extent automatically reveals the following item:

The Art of Grouse (book)

Value 40 gp; Weight 1 lb.; Materials paper; Nature non-magical; Aura none; Slot usable; CL n/a

You can't tell if the author was a professional chef, a personal chef, or just someone who somewhat knew their way around a kitchen and decided to have a go of writing a cookbook. You're no expert, but you could swear that some of the tidbits and recommendations found herein have been cribbed from other, more authoritative works.

Regardless of its perhaps-dubious origins and integrity of assembly, The Art of Grouse is unquestionably an amalgamation of important cooking secrets. Reading the text for 1 hour will grant the reader a competency bonus of +2 on all Profession (Cook) checks attempted over the next 12 hours.

It can also be used as a spot reference; if you have a specific task or question (for example, "how do I cook grouse so as to please the king's sensibilities"), study the book for a number of minutes equal to 20, minus 1 for every rank of Profession (Cook) you possess—so, for example, if you have assigned 7 ranks of Profession (Cook), this study will take you 13 minutes. The minimum is still 1 minute of review no matter how many ranks beyond 20 you may have. As a result of this spot-reference, you benefit from a +4 competency bonus on any one Profession (Cook) skill check you make within the next 1 hour, provided of course the circumstances align with the question you posed when referencing the text.

Construction Requirements means to assemble a physical book; the author must have EITHER at least 10 ranks in Profession (Cook), OR access to at least 5 other cookbooks; Cost 15 gp

UCG-14: Pantry

This pantry contains multiple urns, a bookshelf that has been largely repurposed to store ingredients, a wooden table laden with foodstuffs, storage crates, and some sacks. The stone floor and separation from the stoves to the east seems to keep everything quite cool in here.

The sacks are of course unlocked and untrapped, and are thus freely accessible to PCs in a looting or inquisitive frame of mind:

Dry Goods Sacks

wheat (10 lbs, 1 cp apiece); potatoes (15 lbs, 2 cp apiece); flour (10 lbs, 2 cp apiece)

UCG-15: Sitting Area

 An octagonal table bears a beautiful silver candelabra with fresh candles and gold accents. To its south are three comfortable-looking padded armchairs, with potted plants in each southern corner.

Before or after the evening meal, or just during the day when one has guests over and does not want to bring them to one's private quarters, this area is commonly used to relax and chat.

UCU-6: Eastern Suite (Elena's)

☞ These quarters are extremely richly appointed, even by the standards of the rooms you've seen thus far in this building. Two ornate cabinets are in the southwest; opposite them is a large wooden table with comfortable chairs surrounding it. Light streams in the large window to the east. To the north is a set of double doors.

The merchant princess Elena Lomazonne keeps private quarters here as her base of operations in Berinncorte. That said, however, she is rarely here, as she's only in town about 🎲 15% of the time. She did not get to her current position from naivete or undue trust, however, and so her quarters are trapped and locked with a caliber of device not found elsewhere in the establishment.

The Art of the Hunt (book)

Value 250 gp; Weight 2 lb.; Materials paper; Nature non-magical; Aura none; Slot usable; CL n/a Written by, and for, Rangers, this text has a brief introduction, and then dives right into a series of chapters, each dedicated to a certain kind of terrain.

A character with at least one class level in a class with the avored terrain class feature who studies the textbook for 1 hour gains an additional avored terrain (cold, desert, forest, jungle, mountain, plains, planes (any one), swamp, underground, urban, water) for the next 24 hours. This benefit is granted even if the character has not yet acquired any avored terrains; it works even if they have a single level in a class that eventually grants the characteristic. The newly-selected avored terrain cannot be one that has already been selected, and this book cannot be used to increase an existing bonus granted by avored terrain. For example, if a PC with Ranger 3 who selected plains as their first avored terrain must, when reading this book, select a different avored terrain, and cannot pick plains again to gain an additional bonus.

Only read the italicized text if/when the party enters the bedroom proper.

The double doors open on a room with no windows... but yet, it feels comfortable and luxurious. Two comfortable chairs are in the southwest right next to a potted plant. To the north is a set of bookcases; to their east is a cabinet and a round table, each with a glimmering golden candelabra. A set of double doors occupies the southeast wall.

The bedroom seems a bit cramped for the otherwise luxurious surroundings. It contains a feather bed in the southeast corner, a stool, several bookshelves, and a privy.

These are the personal quarters of Welby Goodbarrel. He's not typically here, as he also has personal quarters in the General Store as well... on occasion, he will let Oneib sleep in the store, and will retreat to his quarters here in the Upper-Class Residential District. Welby alone holds a key to the entry door.

To the southeast, double doors open to the bedroom. They are always locked if Welby is not present in his quarters:

Locked Bedroom Wooden Double Doors

Break DC 20; Disable Device DC 16

As with the entry doors, Welby alone bears the key to these bedroom doors.

Past the bedroom doors is the bedroom itself. Only the bookshelves here are notable, as they bear an interesting book if the PCs but search for it—it's guaranteed that they find it if they search here.

Win and Win Again (book)

Value 80 gp; Weight 1 lb.; Materials paper; Nature non-magical; Aura none; Slot usable; CL n/a

Penned by what seems to be an archaic demon given human form, this book is a treatise on the art of making deals. It's crudely worded, and written with a fledgling speaker of Common in mind—but although this may turn off bibliophiles, it only makes the text more accessible to all. Any who read it cover-to-cover will conclude that it may indeed have been a joke—early chapters flat-out contradict later ones, and some of the parables are obviously fabricated retellings of historical events, as anyone with any ranks in Knowledge (Local) or Knowledge (History) can easily tell even without a skill check.

Whether or not the author benefitted from the lessons he attempts to impart is perhaps a subject for another book—an unsanctioned biography, perhaps. But some truths are somewhat universal, and whether one enjoys one's tour through the text or not, one can hardly stop benefitting from it to some degree. A character with at least 1 assigned rank in any of the Intelligence (Investigation), Charisma (Deception), Charisma (Intimidation), Charisma (Persuasion), or Wisdom (Perception) skills, who studies Win and Win Again for 1 hour, benefits from a +3 competency bonus on any one of those skill checks, once, any time in the following 12 hours. The character must state prior to the skill check being rolled that they are using the bonus on that particular check, and the use of the skill must be in the context of some form of negotiations, though it need not involve a purchase or exchange of wealth. For example, a PC might try negotiating whether the party can sneak back into town after a martial-law curfew; this counts as negotiations for the purposes of using Win and Win Again.

Construction Requirements means to assemble a physical book; the author must have at least 10 ranks in at least one of the Intelligence (Investigation), Charisma (Deception), Charisma (Intimidation), Charisma (Persuasion), or Wisdom (Perception) skills; Cost 50 gp

Finally, the door to the southwest leads to the closet (see below). It is always locked unless Welby himself is in the closet currently.

🔒 Locked Wooden Center Closet Door

Break DC 17; Disable Device DC 18

Welby holds keys to the closet door.

UCU-11: Center Closet (Welby's)

📖 This closet contains a writing desk, a dressing desk, stools, a washing basin, a potted plant in the southeast corner near the door, and two clothing cabinets to the southwest.

This is where Welby dresses and bathes, and occasionally tends to business such as writing letters, though in truth he prefers the latter task in his sitting room (above).

The clothes cabinets are both typically locked. The western one has nicer fare:

🔒 Locked Western Bedroom Cabinet

Break DC 18; Disable Device DC 18

🗝️ Western Bedroom Cabinet

royal outfits (2x, 200 gp apiece); noble's outfits (6x, 75 gp apiece)

The eastern cabinet, closer to the closet door, has more day-to-day wearables:

🔒 Locked Eastern Bedroom Cabinet

Break DC 18; Disable Device DC 14

🗝️ Eastern Bedroom Cabinet

courtier's outfits (3x, 30 gp apiece); artisan's outfits (4x, 1 gp apiece); hot weather outfits (2x, 8 gp apiece); cold weather outfits (2x, 8 gp apiece)

Welby holds the only keys to both cabinets.

UCU-12: Large Window

📖 The snaking, opulent hallway terminates here in a gorgeous floor-to-ceiling window with a centerpiece of stained glass. It's an impressive piece of engineering, particularly in a town where you've not seen much other examples of this sort of craftsmanship—not even in the town's churches!

By far, the most popular seats in the hallways, upper floor or ground floor, are the three armchairs to the east of this window. During the day and evening hours, there is a 🎲 40% chance that at least one of the NPCs rolled in the Random Key NPCs section for this building will be found here, reading a book or letter.

Although the window is perhaps the most valuable piece of architecture in the entire city, it would be nigh impossible to remove it, transport it, and resell it in any fashion using terrestrial powers and avoiding the impact of the law.

UCU-13: Western Suite (Gorin Bakelight's)

Only read the italicized text if and when the party gains entry into the bedroom proper in the southeast.

📖 The double doors open into an expansive sitting room, well-light from two windows overlooking the street below. Bookshelves sit against the wall in between the windows; in the northeast corner is a similar set of shelves. Large cabinets can be found to the east and southeast; between them is a set of wooden double doors, presumably leading to the bedroom. Two potted plants in the northwest and southwest corners, some comfortable armchairs, and a stool in front of a writing desk to the north of the southwest window round out the room.

The bedroom is a bit cramped compared to the sitting room—it bears two armchairs, a privy, a round bedside table, and a soft feather bed. To the north is a simple wooden door; you intuit that it likely leads to a closet.

Between the proximity to the District's window (see above) and the double windows in the main room, this is perhaps the most desirable suite in the building. Gorin Bakelight (page 632) makes his home here while he is in the city; his influence and power as the city's Tribute manager was critical in securing this particular set of rooms.

Uniquely among the residents, Gorin does not have a permanent office or establishment to run elsewhere in the city. As a result, he is quite often here, though during the day he can be seen out and about, collecting Tribute or simply checking in with those from whom he will soon be collecting. During the evening and overnight hours, however, there is a 🎲 75% chance that Gorin will be inside his quarters for the night.

The candelabra on the cabinet to the east is valuable:

🔑 Eastern Cabinet (atop)

Fine wine is shelved in the locked cabinet to the southeast:

🔒 Locked Clothes Cabinet

westrealm icewine (6 bottles, 120 gp total value; see item description below); fine wine (4 bottles, 40 gp total value)

Gorin has the only key to this cabinet. As noted above, the cabinet contains a particularly rare and valued icewine that Gorin has brought with him from elsewhere in the realms:

🍷 Westrealm Icewine (bottle)

Value 20 gp; Weight ½ lb.; Materials glass, wine; Nature non-magical; Aura none; Slot usable; CL n/a Sweet, but not cloying; lightly carbonated, but not fizzy enough to upset a sensitive stomach: westrealm icewine is valued far and wide in the Realms for its nearly-universal likeability. It pairs well with nearly all food, but particularly with sweet foods—appetizers or desserts, primarily.

The entrance to the suite is always closed, and locked. It is particularly well-constructed compared to the other suites in the building:

🔒 Locked Wooden Suite Entry Door

Break DC 22; Disable Device DC 20

The double doors to the southeast open into the bedroom (see above); they are closed and locked only when Gorin is not in the suite.

🔒 Locked Bedroom Wooden Double Doors

Break DC 20; Disable Device DC 17

As with the entry doors, Gorin alone bears the key to these bedroom doors.

The closet door in the north of the bedroom is always locked, save when Gorin is in the closet:

🔒 Locked Wooden Closet Door

Break DC 18; Disable Device DC 16

UCU-14: Western Closet (Gorin's)

🔑 A wash basin with fresh water sits in the southwest corner; to its north is a dressing desk and stool. The north wall bears three large cabinets. A small circular table is in the southeast corner near the door.

Of the three cabinets in the north, the center one alone is unlocked. Rather than clothes, it contains foodstuffs; Gorin is in the somewhat odd habit of bringing food with him, generally not trusting to vendors not to poison him. The Tribute Master suffers from a bit of self-important paranoia in this regard.

preserved banquet meal (5x, 15 gp apiece, see p 253); preserved good meal (10x, 8 sp apiece, see p 253); trail rations (10x, 5 sp apiece); cheese (8x, 1 sp apiece)

The western clothes cabinet is typically locked, and holds Gorin's finest finery:

🔒 Locked Western Closet Cabinet

🔑 Western Closet Cabinet

Gorin holds the only keys to both cabinets.

BC-28: Lower-Class Residential District Overview

☐ A two-story building sulks here, massive, yet still giving the impression of being little more than a shanty-town lean-to against the enormous and comparatively solid-seeming city wall to the west. Everything about its construction feels utilitarian and necessary, yet little more. The exterior brick and wood surface is clean, but you don't need skill in the carpentry profession to tell that the components have seen better days. "Upkeep" seems not in the vocabulary of whomever is in charge, here... but given the conditions, you suspect the residents may not mind, if the rates to stay here are in keeping with the low caliber of the residence.

Berinncorte's Lower-Class Residential District is a combination of hostel, slumtown, and homeless outreach center. Elites of the city may view this as distasteful, but even the most nose-thumbing of them will admit to the necessity of the project. Although the conditions may not compare to the Upper-Class Residential District across town, and not even to the personal quarters many shopkeepers have in their establishments, if the Lower-Class Residential District did not exist, then where would the city's somewhat less-well-off citizens rest their head?

The residents are a somewhat free-flowing collection of citizens. Some have been in the same private room for years, with no intention of uprooting. Others will arrange a space in common quarters for an evening at a time, and then will not be heard from for weeks until they need a bed again. Visitors without much coin, or who enjoy the occasionally uncouth company of random strangers, will use the District as a cheaper alternative to the town's Inn.

Many citizens have quarters outside the city proper, or are in the habit of simply carving out a bit of space on the ground somewhere nearby. Those who need to stay inside Berrincorte, however, typically stay here.

Operations & Landlord

Overseeing the tenants—but not so much the upkeep of the building and its rooms—is Pilga, a half-orc Barbarian 2 who carries her massive mattock and throwing axes around with her when she is called upon to inspect a claim that the accommodations are decrepit. She will say that the weapons are tools, but the menace in her eyes makes the message—and their true purpose—clear to all.

Shopping at the LCRD

Pilga will gladly make accommodations for the party if they're interested in paying. She will not judge the PCs, nor ask their intentions, why they're in Berinncorte, what they think about the town, and so on—she's interested only in what they wish to pay, and will try and upsell them as much as possible.

The "chance" listed is used to determine how many such services are available. For example, if "80%" is listed, roll once to determine if any such accommodations are available: if the roll is failed, all rooms are taken. If the roll succeeds, roll again to see if a second spot is free. Keep rolling until a roll is failed to determine how many spots are available.

Table 48: Lower-Class Residential District Accommodations

Service	Chance	Price
dining hall floor, one night stay	Always	2 sp
common room, one night stay	Always	5 sp
private room, one night stay (max. occupancy 2 people)	80%	1 gp
add one evening meal served in the dining hall	Always (requires purchase of one of the above accommodations)	+2 sp
extended bookings (5 nights or more at a stretch, paid half in advance, half at the end of the stay)	Always	20% discount

Throughout this section, the phrase "Current Tenants" refers to all people who currently are staying in the Lower-Class Residential District. This population shifts and changes day-to-day.

☐ From a GM perspective, this flexibility may seem frustrating to manage. However, you are encouraged to use it to your advantage—for example, if the party is searching the District, and you'd like to introduce them to a given key NPC, well, then, there's a chance that person is staying here.

Business Hours

This being a residential district, there are no "business hours" as such. Comings and goings throughout the day, and indeed throughout the night, are commonplace, and not administered in any real fashion.

Random Key NPCs

Note that unlike shops or other, communal locations, it's rare to find anyone in this building who doesn't live there. That said, many tenants are here only for a night or two, so it's typical to find a very free flow of occupants.

If a key NPC is not on this table, then that person typically does not stay in the District. Also, all citizens who have personal quarters elsewhere—for example in a shop, a church, or in the Upper-Class Residential District—will never voluntarily stay here in the Lower-Class district.

BC-28: Lower-Class Residential District Ground Floor Map

LCG-1: Entrances

☐ To the northeast and southeast of the building, sets of wooden double doors block entry.

These are the main—and only!—security barriers to entry to the District. There are no guards, and security here is twofold, though not strong: one is the locks on the doors, and the second is the “honor system” whereby guests and people who should not be here should not be admitted. In practice, “hold the door for me” security breaches of social engineering are commonplace.

Those not bypassing these doors using these methods will find a competent barrier:

🔒 Locked Wooden Entry Double Doors

Break DC 17; Disable Device DC 15

All Current Tenants have keys to these doors; the same key turns the locks in both sets of doors. For security purposes, Pilga discourages anyone keeping keys after their stay—she charges a penalty for tenants who fail to turn in their key when leaving. One would think that a well-meaning landlord would use these funds to occasionally change the locks. Pilga being much more self-serving than well-meaning, though, the locks only change when they are damaged or broken.

This is a long-winded way of describing the end result: that most people who have ever stayed here still have a key that works on these locks. For any given member of the Random Key NPCs list, there is a 🎲 65% chance that they still have a key to these Lower-Class Residential District's entry doors.

LCG-2: Dining Hall

☐ Past the double doors is a dining hall with a long common table and dozens of stools atop nice cherry floorboards. Everything is plain, but serviceable, and the place hums with forced bonhomie as people come, go, and grab a bite to eat.

During daylight and evening hours, there will always be at least one NPC here. After dinnertime and overnight—that's the only time to come here and sneak about, though the party can always try and claim they are staying here... or simply pay Pilga her fee to stay here in earnest.

Remember that one of the accommodations available is to sleep here. During evening hours, 🎲 1d6+1 people will be asleep here—count them as Townfolk for mechanical purposes.

Other than sleeping Townfolk bereft of wealth, there is nothing of value here to loot.

LCG-3: Kitchen

☐ A simple wooden door opens to reveal a stone-floored kitchen, sprinkled with stools. A wooden prep table hulks to the west; to its north is another wooden door leading to the west. A stove sits in the northeast corner.

During evening meal time preparation, Pilga will typically hire someone to cook, and that person will be in here, preparing common fare for the tenants who have chosen to add a meal to the day's fee. From a statistics standpoint, treat the chef as a common Townfolk.

The door to the Hallway (see below) is always locked if it is not mealtime:

🔒 Locked Wooden Kitchen Door

Break DC 14; Disable Device DC 15

Pilga bears the only key to the kitchen door. Similar, but with a rustier lock, is the door to the northwest, leading to the Pantry (see INU-4: Southwest Bedroom):

🔒 Locked Wooden Pantry Door

Break DC 13; Disable Device DC 15

Just like the kitchen door, Pilga alone has a key to the pantry door.

During mealtime, if the party overcomes the chef, you may treat the foodstuffs on the stove and prep table as the following loot:

🍴 Kitchen Foodstuffs

common meals (5x, 3 sp apiece); poor meals (10x, 1 sp apiece)

LCG-4: Pantry

☐ This stone-floored room is cluttered with food storage. Two urns, a pile of small sacks, a pile of larger sacks, a storage crate, and a storage chest atop it are all scattered haphazardly here.

The smaller sacks, taken together, contain the following ingredients:

🍴 Small Ingredient Sacks (3x)

beans (30 lbs, 2 cp per lb); flour (20 lbs, 2 cp per lb)

Three larger sacks collectively bear a bit more edible booty:

Dry Goods Sacks (3x)

wheat (30 lbs, 1 cp apiece); potatoes (30 lbs, 2 cp apiece); flour (10 lbs, 2 cp apiece)

The urns both contain a flat, flavorless, but otherwise harmless, ale:

Ale Urns (2x)

common ale (40 lbs, 10 sp total value)

In the southwest is an unsealed and unlocked storage crate, with a bit more interesting fare:

Storage Crate

common meal (10x, 3 sp apiece); meat (40 portions, 3 sp apiece); trail rations (30x, 5 sp apiece); cheese (20x, 1 sp apiece)

Finally, the storage chest on top of the crate contains some spices, and is locked:

Locked Wooden Ingredient Storage Chest

Break DC 13; Disable Device DC 14

Ingredient Storage Chest

coffee beans (2 lbs, 5 cp apiece); garlic (2 lbs, 5 sp apiece); mint (2 lbs, 5 sp apiece); walnuts (2 lbs, 3 cp apiece); turnips (3 lbs, 2 cp apiece)

Pilga has the only key to the chest.

LCG-5: Hallway

 Through the spine of the building runs a ten-foot-wide corridor littered with stools and chairs. A few tables jut out from the walls at intervals. To either side is an array of simple wooden doors. At the far, eastern end of the hallway is another door; just before it is a sturdy ladder that connects with the ceiling.

This hallway is also something of a common room. During daylight and early-evening hours, there will typically be  1d4-1 (minimum zero) people here, talking, sleeping, cleaning their fingernails with a dagger, and so on. Treat them as Townfolk, or at the GM's discretion, place one of the Random Key NPCs mentioned earlier here.

LCG-6: Ladder Up

 A large wooden ladder leads up to a trapdoor in the ceiling. Both ladder and hatch look well-used, but very sturdy; they may be some of the most well-constructed things you've seen in this building!

This leads to the trapdoor found on the second floor.

The trapdoor is not locked.

LCG-7: WC

 The simple wooden door opens to reveal a watercloset: two privies with potted plants nearby. The stench is somewhat overpowering, though the room and its contents appear fairly clean.

This room is well-used by most residents. There is no treasure to be found in the contents of the privies, though it is at the GM's discretion as to whether eager PCs should be dissuaded from searching.

Staying here for more than one round grants the sickened condition (affected characters take a -2 penalty on all attack rolls, weapon damage rolls, saving throws, skill checks, and ability checks) for 1 hour after leaving the room.

Searching the privy contents—in any capacity whatsoever—grants the nauseated condition (an affected character is unable to attack, cast spells, concentrate on spells, or do anything else requiring attention; the only action such a character can take is a single move action per turn) for 10 minutes.

The potted plants are also empty, but searching them delivers no negative effects.

LCG-8: Resident Rooms

Each of these six rooms is nearly identical, with the same furniture, doors, and space of accommodations.

 The GM is encouraged to “place” any key NPCs you determined (or selected) in the Random Key NPCs table in these rooms. Although that list contains a great deal of variety in terms of the caliber and wealthiness of citizen, chances are good that most key NPCs would be in a position to take a private room.

Similarly, the storage cabinet contents should be adapted to suit the belongings of any key NPCs who is staying there.

 This private chamber is compact and clean, but simple. A straw bed and pillow, a small round wooden table, a storage cabinet, and a round stool are the only contents, but they fill the room ably. It all seems just enough for what one person requires to make camp for a night... or much more, should they wish to stay longer.

Each room has an entry door that contains a lock different from its neighbors. Each room therefore has its own key. Pilga has a duplicate key for each of the doors; the main key for a given room's door is given to the tenant when they buy the room.

Locked Wooden Resident Door

Break DC 18; Disable Device DC 16

Inside each room is a storage cabinet. This has no lock, but chances are good that anyone renting this room will hold their valuables here, trusting to the security of their door rather than the cabinet itself. The following is an example of treasure that might be found in such a cabinet, though the GM is encouraged to modify it to suit your needs.

Resident Storage Cabinet

8 sp; 21 cp; dagger; cups (3x, 1 gp apiece); basket (4 sp); plates (2x, 1 sp apiece)

LCG-9: North Common Room

This large room is claustrophobically stuffed with beds, cabinets, and stools. There is barely enough room to walk among the furniture, and the whole area smells stuffy, stale, and somewhat moldy.

This and the South Common Room (see below) are quite popular for short-term stays. Residents get a key to the Entrances (see above), and that's it—bedding is first-come, first-served. Pilga doesn't keep too keen a count comparing people buying beds to the count of actual beds available, so there's often no guarantee that a paying customer gets a bed to rest their head on. In the event of this sort of "overbooking", the customer is welcome to crash on the floor in the Dining Hall (see TVN-1: Northern Tavern Entrance); Pilga won't refund the price difference between that and the common room, but will throw in a free meal at dinnertime.

The three storage cabinets are not locked, and as a result, generally contain only mundane eating supplies that are shared among the common-room tenants. Below are sample contents for one such cabinet; the GM is encouraged to modify the contents of a given cabinet if desired.

Common Room Storage Cabinet

broken dagger; cups (2x, 1 gp apiece); plates (2x, 1 sp apiece)

One of these cabinets contains special contents that kick off a Quest. By default, it's the southern cabinet, though the GM is encouraged to modify as you see fit.

Quest: I Believe This Is Yours

Summary: A note left behind by a prior tenant in the North Common Room of the Lower-Class Residential District may be returned to its owner for a reward... or the information can be used to gain an advantage over another character.

Rewards: Up to 2 Reward Stars.

Locations: Lower-Class Residential District.

Key NPCs: Possibly any of the following: Pilga, Einkill Holderhek, Farzith, Ganyc, and/or Stew.

Kickoff: The PCs search one of the cabinets in the North Common Room (see above) of the Lower-Class Residential District, and notice a strange item.

Description:

Like the other storage cabinets in the building's Common Rooms, the southern cabinet in the North Common Room is not locked, and contains mostly plates and cups, and a broken dagger, worn down from what might be years of use and sharing.

Stuck to the bottom of one plate, however, is a hastily-scrawled, handwritten note on poor-quality parchment. Grease stains the paper, and you have no doubt that if it had been left here for another day or two, the note would have torn or disintegrated with little trace.

For now, however, it remains legible, and reads as follows:

butcher at 6
say "cleaved cutlets"
- S.

There's nothing else of interest in the cabinet, or that might provide some context in which to understand the scrawl.

This strange message was written by Stewy, and meant for Einkill Holderhek, the dwarven mercenary and sometime-muscle for various criminal elements. Einkill was the tenant who most recently stayed here; he took out the message to memorize it, and then put it in the cabinet. He then went to the Leaky Cask Tavern, got drunk, returned to the District, ate some food he had brought with him, passed out, and awoke the next morning having completely forgotten about the note.

The message is a set of instructions for Einkill, who Stewy has commissioned to rob the butcher, in league with the butcher's apprentice, Farzith. Showing up at 6:00 (morning or night) guarantees that Farzith will be working in the back of the shop, breaking down the less-savory pieces of meat. To maintain an element of surprise—as well as to keep each of his pawns on their toes with respect to one another—Stewy has not described to Farzith who will be coming to perform the robbery. The fledgeling crimelord has told the apprentice only that whomever it is will come into the shop and say the phrase "cleaved cutlets". At this command phrase, Farzith is to leap into action, clubbing the butcher over the head and knocking him out so that the gnome apprentice and his new partner in crime can loot the place and escape. Afterward, they were to split up, then give any loot to Stewy, to be divided up evenly three ways between the participants in the plot.

The PCs, knowing none of this of course, have a few options here: they can abandon or ignore the note; they can go directly to the Butcher Shop to ask about the note; they can go to the Butcher Shop at 6:00 to see what happens; or they can ask the other tenants of the common room, or Pilga herself, who had most recently stayed in either of the southern beds.

🔍 If the PCs ignore the note, or destroy it, then this Quest ends immediately, with no further impact. Einkill will show up at the appointed time... but, forgetting the special phrase, he will chicken out at the last minute, and leave the shop rather than take Ganyc on alone.

🔍 I Believe This Is Yours (Ignore): ⊗ Chaos +1

Ignoring the note entirely generates a Catalyst Impact: ⊗ Chaos +1.

🔍 The PCs can go directly to the Butcher Shop. Asking Ganyc about, or showing him, the note will reveal shockingly little: he has never seen it, claims no knowledge of its message, and asks the PCs to stop wasting his time. At 6:00 (AM or PM, whichever the PCs have interpreted the note as intending), Einkill will walk into the shop, see the party talking with the butcher, and leave immediately, running away. From this point, please see Confronting the Would-Be Mugger, below.

🔍 The PCs can first ask the tenants of the common room, 🗨️ Pilga, about the former occupant of the common room. Tenants will, at first, shrug and describe a drunken and gruff dwarven warrior, and then joke that that doesn't narrow it down too much. Pilga will initially say nothing, mumbling something about secrecy and the sacred job of an innkeep or landlord never to reveal... oh, what's that? A bribe? Well, then. At least 5 gp of a bribe to either a tenant or the landlord will loosen their tongue: they will tell the party that it was Einkill, and recommend finding him at the Leaky Cask Tavern. For investigating things with rigor, the party should benefit from a reward of 🌟 1 Reward Star. From this point, please see Confronting the Would-Be Mugger, below.

🔍 I Believe This Is Yours (Investigate): ⚖️ Law +1

Thorough investigation in this manner produces a Catalyst Impact of ⚖️ Law +1.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

Confronting the Would-Be Mugger

To reach this point, and conclude the Quest, the party must either stumble into Einkill Holderhek, the dwarven mercenary and would-be perpetrator of the robbery, or investigate and determine that he is involved.

No matter how the party hunts him down, inquiring or confronting him with the note has the same result: he will not fight back, but will deny everything unless threatened with violence or if pressured successfully by a 🗨️ Charisma (Intimidation) or Charisma (Persuasion) check opposed by Einkill's Charisma (Deception) check (note that as Einkill has no assigned ranks in this skill, it should be somewhat easy to succeed at this).

🗨️ I Believe This Is Yours (Talk): ⚖️ Law +2

Talking Einkill down creates a Catalyst Impact of ⚖️ Law +2.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

Failure in these checks leaves the party with two options: attack him, or let him go. If the team lets him go, then the quest terminates, with no further reward for the party. If the team attacks him, he will fight until lowered to a third his maximum hit point capacity; he will then surrender. If instead he is besting the party, he will try to escape at every opportunity and run away. If the party lets him go, then this Quest terminates with no further reward or impact.

🗨️ I Believe This Is Yours (Fight): ⊗ Chaos +1

Fighting Einkill means a Catalyst Impact: ⊗ Chaos +1.

🗨️ I Believe This Is Yours (Let Go): ⊗ Chaos +2

Letting him go entirely generates a Catalyst Impact: ⊗ Chaos +2.

Whether Einkill surrenders in combat, or if the party prides it out of him via a skill check, he will reveal his role in the robbery plot. After describing everything he knows, the dwarf will offer to cut the PCs in on the grab, and split his share with the party if they help him finish the job.

🔍 If the PCs then turn him into the Berinncorte Militia, they will thank the party; give the PCs 🌟 1 Reward Star to be granted to the skill checker or combatants.

🗨️ I Believe This Is Yours (Turn In): ⚖️ Law +3

Turning Einkill in to the Militia produces a Catalyst Impact of ⚖️ Law +3.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

 If instead they take Einkill up on his offer, and participate in the looting, they will definitely be successful; refer to the Butcher Shop description for a description of the treasure they can find there. This incurs no additional XP or other bonus, but Stewy—who will meet with the party, Einkill, and Farzith in the Fishery Basement—will be true to his word, and give the party an even share of the loot (1/4 of the total value, to then be split up amongst the party as they figure out). At the GM's discretion, this ending of the Quest may incur the suspicion and wrath of the Berinn corte Militia (see Getting Arrested).

I Believe This Is Yours (Help Loot): Chaos +5

Aiding Einkill, Farzith, and Stewy in the looting creates a Catalyst Impact:  Chaos +5.

This Quest terminates if the PCs turn Einkill in, slay him, talk him down and then let him go, or if they participate in the looting. If they initially ignore the Quest, it remains active, in case on a given day if the PCs wish to show up at 6:00.

LCG-10: South Common Room

 In the southwest corner of the building is a cramped room, cluttered with beds and stools and cabinets. It's challenging to navigate the scant space between furniture. A stale, mildewy smell permeates the whole room.

This and the North Common Room (see above) are usually used by transient, poor, or short-term tenants. Residents at this cheaper rate get a key to the Entrances (see above), but only that. See the more detailed description of the North Common Room for other quirks of bedding at this caliber.

The two storage cabinets are not locked, but contain only communal and well-used eating supplies. Below are sample contents for one such cabinet; the GM is encouraged to modify the contents of a given cabinet if desired.

Common Room Storage Cabinet

broken dagger; cups (2x, 1 gp apiece); plates (2x, 1 sp apiece)

LCG-11: Militia Guard Posts

LCG-12: Blacksmith's Hut

BC-28: Lower-Class Residential District Second Floor Map

LCS-1: Trapdoor Down

☐ A sturdy oak trapdoor is embedded among the floorboards here. The handle is a thick iron ring, unrusty, but well-worn. The hinges are similarly durable and fully operational. There appears to be no lock mechanism.

This trapdoor leads to the ladder below on the ground floor. It does indeed not have a lock, and is often opened during periods of heavy use.

LCS-2: Hallway

☐ A long, wide, and plain hallway is studded with doors on both sides, except for a blank brick wall that starts about two-thirds of the way down on the south side; there are no doors across this expanse.

Unlike the one beneath it, this hallway is not a social center or common area. It is occasionally used for playing games, but Pilga discourages such behavior, preferring instead that the area be treated as a passage to gain access to guest rooms, and only that.

LCS-3: Southern Resident Rooms

☐ Across the southwest and south-central wall of the hallway, six simple wooden doors are spaced evenly. The interior of each room is nearly identical in its Spartan utility: a straw bed with cabinet and candle, wooden chair, and small circular table.

These are the “premium” rooms in the Lower-Class Residential District, in that they are isolated from the bustle of the identical rooms beneath them, and that in contrast to the bank of rooms to the north, they have a chair and table and a bit more space. In a rare show of restraint in finding profita at the expense of her customers, these preferred rooms nevertheless cost the same as any other private quarters in the building, but they tend to go quickly.

Any longer-term tenants—those who stay for weeks, if not months, at a time—will be found here; keep this in mind as you “place” key NPCs determined in Random Key NPCs earlier in this section.

Like the similar bank of rooms beneath it, each of these resident rooms has an entry door that contains a lock different from its neighbors. Each tenant gets a key for their own room. The landlord has a backup key for each of the doors. The lock quality is slightly better than the other resident doors in the building.

🔒 Locked Wooden Resident Door

Break DC 15; Disable Device DC 15

Inside each room is a small but functional storage cabinet with no lock mechanism. The following is an example of treasure that might be found in such a cabinet, though the GM is encouraged to modify it to suit your needs.

🗝 Resident Storage Cabinet

16 sp; 51 cp; dagger; cups (4x, 1 gp apiece); plates (4x, 1 sp apiece)

LCS-4: Northern Resident Rooms

☐ Nine simple wooden doors sit in the northern hallway; each opens into a nearly-identical scenario: a simple straw bed, a storage cabinet, and a wooden stool. The placement of this furniture within the room varies slightly, but although the cramped quarters offer no window, they seem somewhat cozy and useful for those needing a private place to lay their head.

Aside from having a stool in place of a table and chair, and being slightly smaller, these rooms are very similar to the rooms to the south (see above). These northern rooms are the least desirable ones on either floor given their size.

Each tenant gets a key to their door; Pilga has backup keys for all the doors, and each door requires a unique key.

🔒 Locked Wooden Resident Door

Break DC 16; Disable Device DC 15

Each room holds a storage cabinet that cannot be locked; feel free to use the following example of treasure that might be found in such a cabinet, though the GM is encouraged to modify it to suit your needs.

🗝 Resident Storage Cabinet

6 sp; 24 cp; dagger; cups (2x, 1 gp apiece); plates (2x, 1 sp apiece)

LCS-5: Secret Door

This is one of the most challenging areas in all of Berinncorte... or, at least, in the city before the Obelisk Eruption. At first glance, there's little reason for the party to suspect that there is anything interesting about the wall here. However, enterprising PCs may pick up on the fact that when viewed from street level to the south, the wall here on the second floor is flush with the line of southern guest rooms; it does not visibly indent as it might if there were indeed just empty space here.

 Note that the subplot and associated Quest related to this secret is not part of the central plot of this adventure. Ultimately, it might make little difference as to the outcomes that follow. That said, it is one of the more “dungeon-y” aspects of the otherwise urban-themed story, so you as a GM may be disappointed if the party fails to suspect that there is something of interest here.

At the GM’s option, then, one way of gently coaxing the PCs into investigating this area further is to make a secret  Wisdom check at DC 12; success indicates that something doesn’t “feel right” about the structure of the building. Further investigation can then be made between the outside and the inside, which should suggest to the passing PC that there might be a room up there. Whether the secret lies in the upstairs hallway, the adjoining upstairs southern guest room, or elsewhere, may take some effort to discover, but at least the hunt is on at that point!

The wall here, from the end of the southeastern-most guest room (see INU-3: Southeast Bedroom) to the eastern edge of the hallway (see TVN-1: Northern Tavern Entrance) is in reality an illusory wall, which covers up a patchwork real wall comprised of a mixture of materials.

Illusory Wall

Will DC 19 to realize the wall is not real; check may only be taken if the wall is interacted with.

Only read the italicized text below if the party interacts with the wall, and passes their  Will check (see above). Otherwise, treat the wall as just... well, as just a wall. If the party fails to discover the illusion, then they have no chance to discover the secret door.

 Your eyes behold a simple brick wall, but your hands discover a variety of textures behind the illusion. Brick, yes, but also mortar, stone, and perhaps wood. As you look and feel, you become convinced that this must be a trick of magic, devised to hide... something. What, you’re not quite certain!

Note that touching the wall and passing the  Will check merely allows the passer to realize that the wall is not real. It’s still possible for that character to fail to notice the secret door, which requires a  Wisdom (Perception) check to identify:

Locked Secret Wooden Experimentation Chamber Door

Wisdom (Perception) DC 20; Break DC 20; Disable Device DC 22

Only read the italicized text below if a PC identifies both the wall, and perceives the secret door:

 Hidden among the textures of the building materials, you feel an extended span of wood. Feeling lower, you notice a handle... this appears to be a door, secreted behind the illusion.

Once the wall is recognized for what it is, and the secret door is identified, the party has managed only half the battle, for the door is both locked (see above) and trapped (see below), posing two additional barriers to overcome for enterprising PCs.

Blood Leaf Residue Handle Trap (CR 2)

Type contact; Trigger touch; Reset Repair

Wisdom (Perception) DC 18; Disable Device DC 18

Effect Blood Leaf Poison

Blood Leaf Poison: Contact; Save Constitution DC 16; Frequency 1/min for 6 min; Effect 2d12 hp plus 1 Con; Cure 1 save

Needless to say, with all these formidable obstacles, the party should start to get excited about what they might find on the other side!

Whether this trap is sprung and depleted, or disarmed, the next time Aramil enters his secret room, he will notice that someone has been in here. Unless the party somehow makes it obvious that it was they who did so, the apothecary will start to view everyone in town with suspicion.

His increased paranoia has another, more quantitative side effect: starting the morning after the party gains entry to this room, the apothecary will raise all his prices by 20% for the remainder of the adventure. He will also reset the trap in the door handle—on the off chance that the party attempts to break back into the room, they are in for a nasty surprise if they assume things are as they were left!

LCS-6: Experimentation Chamber

 This large secret room appears to be of a scientific nature: there’s a lab table in the southwest corner with armchair; notes and equipment are littered everywhere. To the east of the lab table is an assortment of storage crates, chests, and casks, stacked haphazardly. A candelabra perched atop one small crate is unlit, so it’s difficult to make out the eastern part of the room. You think you see a cage in the southeast, and a cauldron and further crates and sacks in the northeast corner.

This room belongs to Aramil Xiloskien, whom the PCs may know already as a full-time apothecary and owner of that shop.

What they almost certainly do not realize is that he is a part-time sadist and torturer who experiments on sentient and partially-sentient creatures in this room.

The lab table contains some supplies that can be used to exercise one's Craft (Alchemy) skill, and the notes that kick off the Quest "Morbid Curiosity" (see below), but little else of resellable value. If taken together, the tools on the table comprise one alchemist's lab (200 gp, 40 lbs.); it would take an enterprising PC with at least one assigned rank in the Craft (Alchemy) skill (or at least one class level of Alchemist) ten minutes to pack everything up in a manner that preserves the resale value, though they would have to quickly find some way of keeping everything from breaking in transit to wherever they planned on selling it.

To the east are three storage crates. They are neither locked nor sealed, and can be opened easily. Collectively, they hold the following treasure:

Storage Crates (3x)

black powder (5 doses, 10 gp apiece); sulfur (10 doses, 5 sp apiece); magnesium (10 doses, 1 gp apiece); myrrh (8 doses, 5 sp apiece); phosphorous (20 doses, 2 sp apiece); quicksilver (5 doses, 1 gp apiece); saltpeter (4 doses, 3 gp apiece); alchemist's fire (4 flasks, 20 gp apiece)

Atop the crate closest to the case is a storage chest, which is locked and contains particularly vile instruments to aid Aramil in his endeavors, as well as the wand of silence which he uses to keep the screams of his victims from causing alarm elsewhere in the building:

Locked Instrument Chest

Break DC 16; Disable Device DC 18

Instrument Chest

dagger (2 gp); sickle (6 gp); brass knuckles (1 gp); punching dagger (2 gp); bayonet (5 gp); wand of silence (24 charges, CL Cleric 5, 3,600 gp)

Any Good-aligned character taking these weapons should realize their likely use in the context of this chamber, and perhaps give a second thought as to doing so; it is left to the GM as to any impact on their alignment or other character considerations (e.g., Paladins).

Finally, the casks both contain a viscous dark red liquid that any party member with any ranks of Knowledge (Nature) or an Intelligence score greater than 12 will immediately recognize as congealed blood. The cask to the south is filled with this substance, and is also sealed and nailed shut, requiring prying or smashing to open. To define the liquid within as "treasure" would be an affront to most:

Sealed Blood Cask

Break DC 16

The similar cask to the north is halfway full, and is neither sealed nor locked and can be opened freely.

The party is left to their own horrible logic as to the purpose of these casks, and how their contents came to be inserted. The reality is that Aramil... well, the reader is perhaps best left to your own imagination, too. Though it would take a particularly ghastly or deranged will to search these casks further, there is nothing else of use to be found inside the blood casks.

Reading the notes on the lab table, or examining the table itself, initiates the following Quest.

Quest: Morbid Curiosity

 Summary: The PCs stumble upon a secret room used to torture people and creatures, and can follow up to understand the extent of the horrors.

 Rewards: Up to  4 Reward Stars, depending on resolution.

 Locations: Lower-Class Residential District, Apothecary Shop.

 Key NPCs: Aramil Xiloscient, Cora Brushgather.

 Kickoff: The PCs discover the illusory wall and secret door guarding the Experimentation Chamber on the second floor of the Lower-Class Residential District, and investigate further.

 Description:

If the PCs discover the Experimentation Chamber, they will notice that on the lab table is a set of scrawled notes. Although the language, if you could call it that, is unknown to any party member (regardless of the languages they speak; the notes are an arcane custom shorthand developed and used solely by the apothecary), the drawings make it clear what is at play here: torture and vile experimentation on humanoids.

Morbid Curiosity (Discover): Chaos +5

Merely by discovering the Chamber, the PCs generate a Catalyst Impact of  Chaos +5.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

 The PCs may of course ignore the notes and chamber, in which case this Quest ends with no further impact (other than suspicion and raised prices as noted in Experimentation Chamber, TVN-5: Food Prep Station). No reward should be given—in fact, if the party contains any Good-aligned creatures, or Paladins, the GM should consider an XP (or Reward Star) penalty for ignoring such an obvious affront to decency and civilization. Finally, the GM should carefully consider a significant additional a  Catalyst Impact, for example,  Chaos +10. Depending on where your gaming group is at this point, the GM may decide to simply trigger the Obelisk Eruption outright, and segue immediately to Act Two.

Morbid Curiosity (Ignore): Chaos +3

If the PCs discover the Chamber, but resolve to take no further action, there is an additional Catalyst Impact of  Chaos +5.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

 Whether they have already visited Aramil or not, it might occur to the PCs that in this town, an Apothecary might be the only person capable of using the equipment here to any real purpose. A GM who wishes to push the party to this conclusion might make a secret  Wisdom or Craft (Alchemy) check at DC 14; success gives the succeeding PC an insight that these tools are beyond the skill of ordinary citizens, and that an apothecary, if not the town apothecary, must be involved. Suspecting, and then confronting, Aramil about his secret segues to “What In the Name of the Gods Are You Up To”; see below.

 The party could take a somewhat backseated approach, and merely inform the Berinncorte Militia about the discovery. In this scenario, they question Aramil and apprehend him; he is arrested, and the party benefits from a reward of  2 Reward Stars. Unless the party tags along to watch the confrontation, or informs Aramil that it was they who learned his secret, the apothecary never discovers who was behind his capture. It hardly matters: he does not return to his shop for the remainder of the adventure... so unfortunately, the party is denied access to his services.

Morbid Curiosity (Inform): Law +2

Telling the Militia about their discoveries means the PCs create a Catalyst Impact of  Law +2.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

 Aramil has quite a knack for illustration. While he prizes this as a virtue, it may well turn out to be his downfall: a thorough PC who reads through all of the notes on the lab table in the Experimentation Chamber will notice a sketched figure, eerily similar to the visage of Cora Brushgather, a halfling farmer whom the PCs likely have not yet met. Whether they copy, steal, or simply memorize the drawing, the next time they are in the Leaky Cask Tavern, the GM should immediately trigger the otherwise-random event/Quest “RTE-1: A Shady Deal” (page 145). In addition to proving an interesting diversion, this Quest also introduces Cora; upon seeing her in the Tavern, the PCs will immediately recognize her. After resolving RTE-1, asking Cora about the drawing will reveal that she has a twin sister, who went missing a few months ago—Cora had assumed that her sister Dora had simply taken to traveling, as she often did... but unfortunately, it’s the sad job of the PCs to reveal that Dora was likely captured at the hands of the apothecary. Although terrible, providing closure in this manner to a stricken sibling—Cora herself has little to offer (though her gratitude may come into play in a future adventure!), but karma should benefit the party by  4 Reward Stars. Note that this reward stacks with other rewards related more directly to the confrontation of Aramil.

Morbid Curiosity (Closure): Law +1, Love +5

If the PCs follow up with Cora, and tell her of the fate of her sister, there is a Catalyst Impact of  Law +1 and  Love +5.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

 Finally, the party could simply start questioning citizens, trying to get them to admit something that might lead them to conclude they were behind the secret. One might reasonably start with Pilga, who, as landlord, should surely know something about a giant hidden secret torture chamber in her own building... right? Unfortunately, the half-orc landlord was not involved with the construction of the District. She assumed control from a prior landlord who died unexpectedly; rumor is that he was murdered by a disgruntled tenant, though the Militia never found any firm evidence and nobody was arrested. Pilga does helpfully point out that she has seen Aramil in the neighborhood quite a bit, though as the apothecary is crafty and careful, Pilga has never seen him enter the building. As only Aramil has any awareness of the secret chamber, further questioning of other citizens will yield nothing further in the way of hints; the party will have to go on what little they have.

What In the Name of the Gods Are You Up To?

Though Aramil justifies his macabre insults to nature by taking notes, and has racked up quite an extensive log of his endeavors, some deep-down part of him realizes that his hobby is ultimately just to feed a perverse, insane need, a deliriously evil itch that must be scratched. It’s become very much an addiction for him; the sane portion of him recognizes the inherent danger in continuing the practice, particularly as he has taken to preying on more and more risky targets. He began initially just snatching the odd raccoon or badger, then escalated to larger prey, more recently drugging and abducting halflings, either on the trail outside of town, or even in the Leaky Cask Tavern, where he subdued Cora’s sister Dora (see above).

Confronting Aramil about any aspect of the secret room, his experiments, or Dora, will immediately send him into a panicked frenzy. If in his shop, he will flee to his secret chamber there, hoping that the party will leave him alone. If encountered elsewhere in town, he will try to escape and run away. If cornered, either on the streets or in his shop, he will fight to the death, knowing that the Militia will likely kill him for his crimes even if the PCs do not.

Defeating Aramil grants the typical XP award for overcoming an NPC, plus another  3 Reward Stars for solving the mystery.

Morbid Curiosity (Confront):

 Law +4

If the PCs confront Aramil in any fashion, it creates a Catalyst Impact of  Law +4.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

Adventurers Needs Must

If Aramil is arrested, or slain, or escapes, he never returns to run the Apothecary Shop... which, selfishly, means the party will be denied further opportunity to purchase potions. Although Berinncorte is far from the “base of operations” that many fantasy towns represent for PCs to resupply between journeys further afield, the lack of cure wounds vials may be problematic, particularly if the party has yet to stock up, or if they are pursuing a “completist” approach to the many wonders and side-quests that the city offers.

Lenient GMs may therefore establish that someone else in town starts selling potions—at least, ones of the cure wounds variety. Examples of citizens who might reasonably seize such an opportunity are Amadan, Ota Kuiduru, Maghana, or Welby Goodbarrel in his General Store.

LCS-8: Cauldron and Storage

 The northeast corner of the experimentation chamber contains a storage crate topped with a bunch of sacks. In front of the crate, to the west, is a cauldron.

The cauldron is used by the sadistic apothecary to heat and mix concoctions to try on his victims; when the PCs encounter this room, the fire beneath is unlit, and the cauldron itself is empty.

Though the contents of the unlocked and unsealed storage crate might not be considered “treasure” as such, they nevertheless represent an interesting artifact of the apothecary’s “tests”:

Bone Storage Crate

bones (80 lbs, no resale value)

These bones represent an array of creatures: animal, vermin, and what appear to be humanoid. Closer inspection reveals the skeletal remains of two halflings. One of these was Dora, Cora’s twin sister (see Quest “Morbid Curiosity”, above).

Finally, the sacks contain comparatively mundane offerings, and are of course unlocked and untrapped. The PCs might well imagine that the street meat is of horrible nature—this is partially true, in that it was taken from vermin and animal remains after experimentation. Even Aramil, however, did not go so far as to cannibalize the halfling corpses.

Food Sacks

trail rations (12x, 5 sp apiece); street meat (16x, 1 cp apiece)

LCS-7: Cage

 In the southeast corner of the chamber is a cage, capable of holding a large creature or several smaller ones. The wood floor is filthy, and littered with straw, feces, and other bodily fluids of whose nature you’re less certain. A gate is set into the northwestern edge; an iron padlock secures it. Bones from what might be a humanoid

The cage is currently empty. It is where Aramil keeps his current victims. He is “in between” experimentation subjects at the moment, having just “depleted” a halfling vagrant.

Locked Iron Cage Door

Break DC 24; Disable Device DC 22

Aramil holds the sole key to this door. Although bypassing the lock or bars is a difficult feat for the party at low levels, there is disappointingly nothing to be looted inside.

Act II: The Obelisk Eruption

Act II: The Obelisk Eruption

Act Two Overview

Act One should introduce the PCs to the city of Berinncorte—and should also introduce the inhabitants of the town to the party. It's possible to spend part of a single gaming session in Act One, or with a creative GM and detail-oriented group of players, your gaming group could spend a half-dozen sessions or more just wandering about the town, exploring locations, people, and quests.

Once the PCs have established their presence in Berinncorte, Act Two commences. There are several ways to trigger the Obelisk Eruption that comprises Act Two.

Act Two vs. Act Three

Note that Act Two is a relatively fast-paced and quick piece of the adventure. Despite its size, it covers the span of time of the Eruption itself, and the handful of minutes immediately following it.

The true aftermath of the Eruption, opportunities to take stock of the situation, loot bodies, save innocents, and evacuate the city—these are the events of Act Three.

Plot Summary

With the force of an earthquake, an enormous purplish-black crystal bursts free from the ground in the middle of Town Square. Dozens of people are slain instantly. A quarter of the town is destroyed, and most buildings are damaged or set ablaze.

The devastation gets worse. For with the Obelisk comes its defenders, collectively the "Forces of the Obelisk"—creatures of chaos, of undeath, and of one's darkest nightmares. Some are but minions, foot soldiers of the calamity; others are dread harbingers, beings of true malaise and formidable challenge.

The entire city is thrown into chaos as citizens and leaders alike struggle to make sense of this catastrophe without precedent.

GM Guidance

The short version here is: Get the players to care. Keep in mind, Dark Obelisk: Berinncorte is an adventure in which a somewhat stereotypical medieval fantasy city is presented, and then mostly destroyed by chaotic and undead forces. The ultimate source of the chaos is never revealed in this piece of the  Adventure Path, and the true grander scheme of things is beyond the scope even of that. Without the grander sense of how the catastrophe fits into some clearer vision, all the players will have available to care about is the city, its denizens, and the destruction.

The players should feel frustrated, confused, and fueled with adrenaline, ready to take action, but not quite knowing what the right thing to do is, mainly because they don't yet understand what is happening. Things get a bit clearer in Act Three, as NPCs can guide the party's actions and make suggestions via dialogue.

Act Two, though, is merely a series of vignettes—quick, hour-long-at-most scenes that play out at each of the main Areas of Interest in the city. Your gaming group will typically only experience one, or at most two, of these vignettes. The vast majority of what happens when the Obelisk erupts happens "off-camera"—that is, the PCs don't witness most of the carnage. They will learn about what happens in Act Three, and will have a greater ability to help control things and interact with events... but for now, they're relatively powerless.

Which is precisely the whole point of the Obelisk Eruption.

Tone, Sympathy, and Chaos

A high school drama teacher once advised that nobody in the audience will ever care half as much as the performers do. Keep this in mind as you guide the players through Act Two. Specifically, if you, the GM, cares obviously about the NPCs who perish or who are imperiled, then the players have a chance of caring as well. If you don't care, they almost certainly won't, either.

If you treat Mayor Symms as just another stat block, the players will, too. If you roleplay her as a stoic, conflicted former soldier, trying to do what's best for the city and its citizens, someone who feels stuck in her role because nobody else wants to take up the mantle of leadership... well, then, the players have a strong chance of sympathizing with those qualities.

How you convey emotion, and how you demonstrate that you care about the NPCs of Berinncorte, are a function of many factors. No matter how hard you try, it's worth recognizing that not all gaming groups will find success imbuing abstract, on-paper characters with true emotion. Not every player will be able to empathize with what is ultimately just a half-dozen pages of printed text and numbers, on rare occasion, accompanied by an artist's rendering.

Your personality as a person and as a GM play heavily into this equation, but it's also a matter of how your gaming group gets along, and what each player wants to get out of the experience. Min/maxers, who are only playing to bump up their PC to the next level and increase their Intelligence to get as many bonus spells as possible—those are the folks who might find it challenging to find sadness in the sudden passing of an NPC.

So, the point is: Find some way of making the players care. If you can. The more they care, the greater the impact of Act Two. Otherwise, it's just a quick segue into the true aftermath, which admittedly, some gaming groups might prefer.

The ideal run-through of Dark Obelisk: Berinncorte is one in which Acts Two and Three come as a complete surprise, where the players are every bit as shocked, as devastated, as emotionally disrupted, as the characters they are roleplaying and the other citizens of the town.

Anything you as a GM can do to increase that effect is to the benefit of the gaming group entire.

Roleplaying and Rewards

Even the most heroic among us is thrown for a loop when something truly awful and unexpected happens. The austere Paladin among the party who seems ever prepared, ever ready to spring into action—she might she freeze up, when a spooky jewel the size of an elephant breaks through the ground of Town Square like a rock thrown through moist paper. On the flip side, the jittery, antisocial alchemist who seems more at home in a book than with friends could find unexpected courage in the worst of calamities.

Players should be rewarded for roleplaying the confusion or resolve of their characters in Acts Two and Three.

Veteran GMs, particularly those who tend toward a more roleplaying, social, or storytelling form of conducting the game, will find ample opportunity to grant rewards in the remaining sections of the adventure.

Table 50: Roleplaying Rewards for Acts 2 and 3

Type	Description	Suggested Reward
Action	PC freezes up, unable to move or take action for X rounds.	100 XP per round
Action	PC becomes unable to speak.	★ 1 Reward Star
Condition	PC suffers from the nauseated condition. Nauseated: Nauseated creatures are unable to attack, cast spells, concentrate on spells, or do anything else requiring attention. The only action such a character can take is a single move action per turn.	★ 1 Reward Star
Condition	PC suffers from the confused condition.	★ 2 Reward Stars
Condition	PC suffers from the cowering condition. Cowering: The character is frozen in fear and can take no actions. A cowering character takes a -2 penalty to Armor Class and loses his Dexterity bonus (if any).	★ 2 Reward Stars
Condition	PC suffers from the frightened condition. The source of fear in this case is the Obelisk itself (if the PC has seen it themselves), or the city of Berinncorte if the Obelisk has not yet been directly observed. Frightened: A frightened creature flees from the source of its fear as best it can. If unable to flee, it may fight. A frightened creature takes a -2 penalty on all attack rolls, saving throws, skill checks, and ability checks. A frightened creature can use special abilities, including spells, to flee; indeed, the creature must use such means if they are the only way to escape.	★ 1 Reward Star
Condition	PC suffers from the shaken condition. Shaken: A shaken character takes a -2 penalty on attack rolls, saving throws, skill checks, and ability checks.	★ 1 Reward Star

Action	PC readies their weapon(s), and runs to the nearest visible source of conflict, ignoring the rest of the party.	★ 1 Reward Star

For novice GMs, or those unused to or whose style of play is typically not to view roleplaying as a rewardable concept in the formal sense, here is a list of ideas that you should feel free to amend or ignore as you and your gaming group see fit. Some of these may also serve as inspiration, if you want to “force” a particular effect onto a PC. For example, you might simply direct the party’s Ranger that he is overcome with panic, and cannot communicate verbally for the next hour.

Note that a player must explicitly volunteer that their character is suffering from one of the listed conditions in order to receive the associated XP reward. At your discretion, you may “assign” a condition to a PC; if the player then roleplays their character suffering that disorder, they may also receive the XP reward.

Triggering Events & Determination of the Prime Catalyst

There is no hard-and-fast rule as to when Act One should transition into Act Two. It’s a decision the GM should arrive at yourself. Refer to the Prime Catalyst section, on page 41, for more notes and thoughts on the tracking of various factors that may culminate in the Eruption.

Casually speaking, though, initiating Act Two should be done at a “good point in the story”. There’s a balance, between having the party navigate the content in Act One, and having them endure the content in Act Three.

Act Two serves as the transition, the anxiety-riddled and venomously dangerous “intermission” between the two halves of the adventure. And for novice GMs in particular, it can be challenging to know when to start the change.

Trigger the Eruption too soon, and your group will miss out on a great deal of content in the first Act; kick it off too late, and the party may grow bored if they’ve begun to exhaust the content in Act One.

The following are some guidelines, suggestions, and general considerations to weigh in your decision as to when to kick the adventure’s true action off. Ultimately, they are more or less all a recap or condensation of detail from the Prime Catalyst discussion earlier in the book.

More than anything, however, the transition should be a function of your gaming group, and what feels right to you as a GM.

Attempting to Leave the City

This is perhaps the most unavoidable trigger. It’s hard to continue the adventure beyond the City Gates (page 212), since this book contains no details about that area! To help you corral the PCs in the event they try and “escape”, there is a slew of options called “Please, Don’t Go”, found on page 213. The goal of each of those encounters is to detain, distract, or otherwise prevent the party from physically passing beyond the City Gates (page 218).

Should any or all of those encounters fail in their primary purpose, however, there is one absolutely insurmountable obstacle you may place in their path: an immediate transition to Act Two, and the initiation of the Obelisk Eruption (page 277).

Attacking a Key NPC

This need not, in and of itself, cause the transition: very few NPCs are truly “indisposable”, and indeed, although greater plans are in store for many characters, contingencies will be described in future components of this Adventure Path to accommodate gaming groups who kill off elements of major plotlines.

That said, great pains have been taken to make most NPCs memorable, and to imbue them each with enough backstory, secrets, and motivations that any of them could take on a major life of their own beyond the scope of Dark Obelisk: Berinncorte.

The GM, having read through much of the material in advance, might become attached to a particular NPC, and the idea that they might not survive might seem anathema to your plans. Consider the extensive, bloody, and compelling backstory of the merchant princess (page 602), who herself is barely mentioned in the context of this adventure: an entire Adventure Path could itself be written just around this plot!

As a result, if the PCs find themselves in a position where a notable, beloved, or significant NPC is about to die at their hands, one solution is to introduce the Obelisk Eruption as a way of forcing the issue and distracting all present.

Murdering a Non-Key NPC

There are some gaming groups where slaying townsfolk, or minor NPCs, is so commonplace that it’s a non-event. Being an urban adventure in a lawful town, however, Dark Obelisk: Berinncorte assumes a bit less chaotic slaughter than this as a default.

Killing anyone in Berinncorte, regardless of reason or context, is a significant event. The city’s not so big that folk don’t take notice, and a body is exceedingly difficult to hide; what alleyways there are are generally capped with a Militia Guard Post (page 122), for goodness' sake. The Militia will almost certainly get involved, either right away, or after the deed, as a follow-up once the body(ies) is found.

Note that at the GM's discretion, encounters that introduce humanoids (for example, the Quest "Bandit!" on page 61) as obstacles or foes should not merit this sort of attention, since the PCs are pretty much expected to face their enemies in combat as a primary means of resolving the situation.

Pacing / Motivation

Veteran GMs will likely default to this approach, even without any explicit written advice (and in truth have likely skipped this entire section!). Even less-experienced GMs will at least have a "feel" for their gaming group, which typically includes at least some friends from outside the game itself.

Simply put, if the players are getting bored, change it up. That statement applies regardless of the adventure itself, and applies to all gaming groups. People play RPGs for many reasons, but "being bored" is surely never one of the goals of playing!

And what better way to "change it up" than to introduce a city-wrecking and civilization-upheaving force such as the Obelisk?

Discovering Morghana Loves Cannock, and Doing Something About It

As described in the Quest "Dear One, If Thee Read", if the party discovers the ill-considered love note from Cleric Maghana, and informs the intended recipient High Priest Cannock about it, the turbulence of love, law, and chaos that results will immediately trigger the Obeisk Eruption.

If the conversation takes place in the Zugul Church, it will make for quite a compelling series of events, as the confrontation, the Eruption, Cannock being slain, and Maghana cradling his body and assuming control of the church makes for a memorable and consistent sequence.

At the GM's discretion, however, this discovery need not necessarily trigger the Eruption outright. If, for example, the note's discovery is the very first thing that happens to the party in Berinncorte, the gaming group may not be quite familiar enough with the city and its inhabitants for the events and characters of Act Three to make much sense, or have as much impact.

Note, too, that there are paths through the Quest above that do not involve informing on Maghana, and thus it's possible to resolve that Quest and yet avoid triggering the Eruption.

Discovering Aramil's Experiments, and Doing Nothing About It

The city's Apothecary, Aramil Xiloscient, keeps a secret chamber where he tortures and kills innocent humanoids he has abducted. Please refer to the Quest "Morbid Curiosity" for more details.

Whether it is consistent with their characters or not, discovering this torture chamber, and deciding to take no further action about it, may be sufficiently chaotic so as to immediately trigger the Eruption.

As with the "Dear One, If Thee Read" Quest above, however, it may simply "feel" too early on in the adventure to initiative the transition to Act Two, depending on what the party has yet done by this point.

GM's Other Discretion

Maybe one of the players is about to go on vacation next week, so you want to start the next Act before that happens. Perhaps one of your players is away on a business trip next week; wouldn't it be nice to introduce Act Two before she has to leave? Or, it could be as simple as things have gotten a bit stale, and you as the GM can tell that the players are getting antsy about the "real" adventure here.

Kick things up a notch by transitioning to Act Two.

Take advantage of the fact that, in the scope of Dark Obelisk: Berinncorte, at least, there is no satisfying explanation of what the Obelisk is, what the Forces of the Obelisk are, who controls either, and why any of this is happening to a peaceful little town like Berinncorte.

At the end of this adventure, the players as well as the PCs should be wondering about all these things, and desperate to continue with discovering answers. So if it's unclear as to what event, if any, brought all of this about, so much the better for feeding the confusion and frustration!

Who Makes It: NPC Summary

With so many key NPCs, it can be extremely challenging for even a well-organized and veteran GM to keep track of who survives, and what happens to everybody, during the attack. The following table summarizes these critical events for easy reference.

to be in locations other than their “home base” and primary location during the attack. For example, two serving wenches who are typically found in the Leaky Cask Tavern are actually shopping for supplies in the Town Square when the Obelisk Erupts.

 Note that many key NPCs listed below just happen

Table 51: Key NPC Obelisk Eruption Summary

Name	Location During Attack	Lives?	Description
Amadan	Garrison / Barracks	Yes	Amadan recognizes the Obelisk from lore, and hunkers down to defend the Garrison.
Aramil Xiloscient	Apothecary	Yes	Runs like a coward; afterwards, claims he was hit on the head and knocked out.
Dimblegruffe	Blacksmith's Hut	Yes	Blinded in left eye by debris; fights to defend townsfolk.
Ash “Executioner”	Garrison / Barrack	Yes	Fights to defend townsfolk; wounded, but not slain; adrenaline of the attack helps to resolve his addiction.
Biggen Gurble	Library	Yes	Stays inside the Library.
Brock Runnaheim	Fishery / Stables	Yes	Hacks off own left arm to free himself of fallen debris, then fights to save others.
Cannock	Zugul Church	No	Wounded in Church; later, helping rescue wounded villagers, he dies in Maghana's arms.
Cora Brushgather	Library	Yes	Survives, and then thrives—she takes over for Gunnloda Balderk as the Librarian.
Daratis	Town Square	No	Slain instantly in the eruption.
Debran Ormick	Garrison / Barracks	Yes	Aids the Militia in helping defend and organize the populace.
Denzys	Sheergath Temple	Yes	Completely unharmed, as is everyone in the Sheergath Temple.
Dominika Symms	Mayor's House	No	Dies after being mortally wounded helping townsfolk escape to safety.
Einkill Holderhek	Leaky Cask Tavern	No	Slain as he drunkenly tries to attack the Forces of the Obelisk outside the Tavern.
Elena Lomazonne	Zugul Church	Yes	Outside the city when the Obelisk erupts.
Esk	Inn	Yes	Wounded; loses two fingers from right hand; opens up the Inn as a refuge for those fleeing the Forces of the Obelisk.
Cherissur	Inn	Yes	As Esk's Eidolon, Cherissur survives as well.
Farzith	Butcher's Shop	No	Run through by Forces of the Obelisk upon leaving the Butcher's Shop to see what the commotion is about.
Ganyc	Butcher's Shop	Yes	Out of town, visiting a farm for supplies.
Gorin Bakelight	Mayor's House	No	Slain while trying to abscond with Trbiute funds.
Gumbrew	Town Square	No	Gumbrew is standing on top of the eruption site and is slain instantly.
Gunnloda Balderk	City Gardens	No	Gunnloda runs to the Library to see if things are okay there; en route, she is slain.

Name	Location During Attack	Lives?	Description
Gurth	Cryptkeeper's Shack	Yes	Gurth hides in his Shack.
Gyldor	Leaky Cask Tavern	Yes	Gyldor escapes town, saving some citizens on the way.
Glyff	None	Yes	As Gyldor's animal companion, Glyff survives as well.
Hueykins	City Gates	Yes	Escapes town immediately so as to inform the Scarlet Path.
Jozan	Leaky Cask Tavern	Yes	He's asleep during the Eruption, but wakes up quickly and helps others run to safety.
Kayzark	Leaky Cask Tavern	Yes	Escapes to warn the Druids who live to the North.
Larissa	Sheergath Temple	Yes	Approaches Town Square to see what's going on; starts fighting Forces of the Obelisk with zeal.
Lingona	Leaky Cask Tavern	Yes	Performing during the Eruption. She escapes town immediately.
Maghana	Zugul Church	Yes	Cannock dies in her arms; she assumes control of the Zugul Church with a vicious conviction.
Mardnab Scheppen	Inn	No	She's crushed under part of a collapsing roof; Esk fends off Forces of the Obelisk who start to eat her corpse.
Oneib	General Store	No	Dies trying to get into the General Store; his colleague and one-time lover Welby bars the doors to him and others.
Ota Kuiduru	Mayor's House	Yes	Hearing the commotion, he springs into action, fighting Forces of the Obelisk with calm conviction.
Otibus	Textiles Shop	Yes	His wife dies instantly; he sadly takes up the mantle of the Textiles Shop afterwards.
Ownka	Town Square	No	Dies shopping for supplies in the Town Square.
Phadian Gess	Leaky Cask Tavern	No	Dies trying to follow Lingona to safety.
Pilga	Lower-Class Residential District	Yes	She stays inside the District, and loots tenant rooms in the chaos following the Eruption.
Rhirem	Leaky Cask Tavern	Yes	Thoroughly enjoys blasting Forces of the Obelisk.
Skutt Krundarr	Inn	No	Dies defending Tansden, the Captain he sought to overthrow.
Sorille	Mayor's House	Yes	Takes a message from Ota Kuiduru and leaves town immediately.
Stewy	Fishery / Stables	Yes	Runs out of the city as soon as the Eruption happens.
Tansden	Leaky Cask Tavern	Yes	Unscathed, and helps citizens in the chaos. Suffers survivor's guilt and commits to the Zugul Church.
Tarsheva Hornwood	Upper-Class Residential District	No	Dies trying to help citizens to safety.
Tudra Coppereye	Library	Yes	Stays locked in her private quarters.
Thrunne	Town Square	No	Dies shopping for supplies in the Town Square.
Unglar	Sheergath Temple	No	Dies fighting his way toward the Town Square carnage.
Waywocket Ningel	Leaky Cask Tavern	Yes	Jozan helps her escape through the Tavern's south door.
Welby Goodbarrel	General Store	Yes	Locks himself in the General Store.
Zook Beren	Leaky Cask Tavern	Yes	Hides in the basement/cellar of the Tavern.

What Occurs in Act II

The Obelisk erupts through the ground in the middle of the Town Square, destroying everything in its immediate vicinity. An earthquake and explosion of sonic force accompanies the eruption, wreaking additional and more widespread devastation. Bolts of pure chaos energy strike outwards from the obelisk, finding root in various places around the town. Fires are everywhere, and citizens are thrown into a panicked disorder.

The Scope of Carnage

Between the deaths directly caused by the Obelisk and the related effects of buildings being destroyed or damaged, 10% of the city's population dies instantly in the eruption itself.

Forces of the Obelisk

The Obelisk has brought with it a horde of chaotic, undead, aberrant, and other creatures, collectively referred to as "Forces of the Obelisk" (or simply "Forces").

Many of these beasts—particularly the sentient and/or powerful ones—are not controlled as such by the Obelisk, so much as united in common purpose by what it represents. The PCs will not discover this unifying purpose in this adventure; suffice it to say that it is both chaotic and vengeful in nature, and has a scope far, far beyond the humble city of Berinncorte!

Normal Nasties

Skeletons, crawling hands, ghouls, zombies, and more—low-level yet terrifying creatures represent the bulk of the Forces. Many random encounters in Act Three will involve beasties of this ilk. As quickly as the PCs, and other citizens, can defeat these creatures, more emerge just as rapidly from the chasm underneath the Obelisk.

In the immediate context of this adventure, there is no means of truly defeating these common Forces.

Untouchable Creatures

"This foe is beyond any of you. Run!"

—Gandalf the Grey, Fellowship of the Ring

Most Pathfinder, and indeed, fantasy roleplaying, adventures, involve a degree of challenge—some much more than others. Even the most brutally-vexing adventure, however, often involves some means of overcoming the obstacles set before the party. No matter how high-level the Big Boss Monster is, there's a magical sword that can give the PCs an edge; no matter how crafty the traps are, a skilled Rogue who has discovered the hidden super-masterwork picks can bypass the locks.

Not so, with Dark Obelisk: Berrincorte.

The point of this adventure is to terrify the PCs amidst a panicked town. The plot of the overall Adventure Path is that the intrusion of the Obelisk, a chaotic and strange force, into everyday life, that it must be overcome by planning, and alliance, and lore, and knowledge, and power, and everything that the forces of this realm can bring to bear against it.

It stands to reason, therefore, that they should be—must be—incapable of defeating the challenge posed to them, despite their possibly-best preparation and possibly-best intentions.

There are some Forces of the Obelisk who present a threat well beyond the abilities of the party—regardless of the level they are playing the adventure at. Such an enemy is referred to as an "Untouchable"—not that the party cannot ever defeat them, nor that they are invulnerable—but that the party is never meant to defeat them, at least not right now.

From a GM's perspective, the challenge here is to present any encounter with an Untouchable in a way that makes the players afraid to engage with the foe. Typically, this is handled by having the Untouchable dispatch citizens, allies, or key NPCs in a manner that makes the monster's formidable prowess obvious.

But as a GM, you have many other tools at your disposal to discourage even the bravest PCs from attempting combat with these enemies. Below are some suggestions that may come in handy, or as starting points for your own ideas.

I've Got a Bad Feeling About This

Sometimes, your spidey-sense just tingles. As adventurers, the PCs may simply have a knack for knowing in their bones when a situation is a bad deal. You can communicate this by stating plainly that the PCs are afraid, even if the players themselves fear not for their characters.

In extreme situations where the players ignore this well-intentioned warning, the GM can even force a condition to one or more PCs—shaken, panicked, or even cowering might apply. Most play styles and gaming groups prefer to avoid this sort of railroaded behavior, but your PCs may leave you little option than to force a rules override... or let them all be slain by an Untouchable monster.

Knowledge is Power... Or Lack Thereof

GMs looking for a similar approach, but with a bit more of a mechanical backing, is to have one or more PCs make A Knowledge skill checks in order to come by their fear from a place of rolling and referencing, rather than an elaborate description.

You may create whatever such checks you like, with DCs intentionally raised or lowered to ensure success or failure. But the outcome—pass or fail—should be that the checking PC realizes suddenly that the Untouchable creature the party faces is a being out of legend, a monstrosity with powers that would demolish the group at their current level.

If the party ignores this knowledge and proceeds anyway, well, then, they deserve what they get!

This approach also tends to work well with a gaming group full of “rules-lawyers”, who would blanch and threaten at a GM who tried to impose conditions without Wisdom saves and the like.

Divine Premonition

Similar to the above two options, this disincentive involves a feeling or knowledge that a foe is a major threat, but rather than the PC coming by this feeling via intuition or knowledge, they gain insight provided by their patron deity.

While “God told me not to fight that mohrg” is unlikely to be very popular with rogues or bards, any Cleric worth their holy symbol is likely to pay respectful heed to any divine intervention or guidance. As a GM, you can be the voice of god, and tell a Cleric that their god seems to be communicating with them directly.

For example: “You feel a divine sensation, a whispered word in a language you have yet to comprehend. Your spine tingles as your hand inadvertently and Dexterityively grasps your holy symbol. Your lips move, forming an automatic prayer of thanks for the intervention of a being to whom you have dedicated your life. The message is clear: thou shouldst flee.”

We've Got Better Things to Do

A group of more mercenary-minded PCs may be more easily, and crudely, swayed from any intent to fight a powerful being. Simply place a more desirable target in front of them, one where the chance to succeed, and/or the opportunity for reward, is clearly greater. PCs of most any class will take the sure thing over the massive fear, if it's presented in the right way.

They may find it a challenge to convince the group's Cleric, Monk, or Paladin... but if the party's Rogue runs off on her own to slay the easy-pickings skeleton with the gold crown in the alley nearby, the rest of the group may be forced to follow her.

Is it Gone Yet?

If any PC is by nature a coward—I'm looking at you low-level Wizards and Sorcerers, here—then you might suggest a level of fear for that character quite beyond what the rest of the party may be experiencing. If that one PC is afflicted with, or roleplays, fear, it may on its own be sufficient to distract the entire party.

Party Reactions

Although each player is of course free to roleplay his or her character as they wish, and the gaming style of each group is different, stereotypes often exist for a reason. It may be of assistance—either to the GM, or to players—to consider a “standard-issue” reaction to the situation, either as inspiration, or to check against demonstrated behavior as a means of rewarding good roleplaying (or to critique or penalize poor or inappropriate roleplaying).

There are two ways of considering such “default” reactions—by character class, and/or by alignment. You are welcome to consider one, the other, both, or ignore this section completely as it suits your style of play.

Reactions by Class

For multiclassed characters, there is a perhaps-challenging opportunity to demonstrate roleplaying that blends the likely reactions of the multiple classes—note that these may be in conflict! A player may also simply choose to react solely from the perspective of the class in which she has the most levels.

Barbarian

If nothing else, the Obelisk Eruption provides a wealth of targets! Smash away, assured in the knowledge that whatever comes out of that chasm, it's fair game for your weapon and rage. Just be mindful of the innocents that may stagger into your path along the way.

Barbarians will likely view the Obelisk as an opportunity for carnage.

Bard

Unfortunately, this is hardly a situation that calls for a great deal of Charisma. There's no negotiating with the Forces of the Obelisk; creatures of pure evil, death, chaos, or general malevolence won't stop and consider your perspective, or what might be in it for them to cease their wrath. That said, the chaos of the citizenry might be quelled, or at least diminished, by the right song in the right place. Although many will run, few will stand and fight—and they're going to need all the help they can get!

Bards will generally have a more laid-back reaction to the Obelisk than most, and are flexible as to how they react.

Cleric

A cleric's reaction will, to a certain extent, be dictated by the alignment (see TVN-5: Food Prep Station) and demeanor of their god. That said, unless one's deity of choice is of a Chaotic nature, or invokes a Domain of Chaos, Death, or Destruction, it's difficult to view the Obelisk Eruption as anything other than an offense to your god's wishes. As the Eruption represents a massive disruption to the natural state of affairs, and is directly opposed to Law and Nature, any cleric who worships a deity aligned with those Domains should have a particularly zealous reaction to the event. Most Clerics will view the Obelisk as an offense that must be remedied.

Druid

Whatever this giant thing is that's burst forth into the city, it's not of the natural order of life, that's for certain. The forces it has brought with it seem clearly bent on causing as much destruction and death as possible; though for now the disruption appears to be limited to within the urban environment, it's by no means a given that the chaos will be constrained to the city—and even so, there are two quite nice gardens in town.

Druids of any background should view the Obelisk with strong abhorrence, a violation of natural order that must be expunged.

Fighter

Fighters are typically united in their collection of abilities, moreso than in their morales or mindset. That said, most Fighters will recognize the Obelisk Eruption as an opportunity to demonstrate their talents, if nothing else. How these talents are executed, and toward what goals, are up to the character, their alignment (see below), and background, than anything else.

Fighters are flexible in their response to the Eruption.

Monk

This is pretty straightforward: As monks are of Lawful alignment, and the Obelisk is an entity of nearly pure Chaos, the eruption is as close to an anathemic event as a monk could conceive of. No matter what their other inclinations, monks of all walks of life will need, not merely want, to address this universal problem.

Monks will almost universally view the Obelisk as a fundamental abhorrence. Defeating it, and its Forces, are of the utmost importance for such characters.

Paladin

Very much like monks, and even more so perhaps, paladins will view the Obelisk as an offense against everything they hold dear. There's no version of their world where the Obelisk can survive acceptably, and its impact on the landscape of the town and its citizens. On top of which, the death, destruction, and risk to innocents that the catastrophe represents is collectively a huge driving factor in whatever steps any Paladin takes next.

Paladins will view defeating the Obelisk as their very top priority.

Ranger

In a perverse manner, one might cynically consider the similarities between rangers, and the Forces of the Obelisk. Both are driven by the hunt, the need to subdue prey, and stalking to demonstrate power or influence over another party. But while rangers might deploy these talents toward a noble goal, there is no such goal immediately visible in the context of the Obelisk Eruption.

Rangers may not generally like the Obelisk, but depending on their nature, background, and alignment, they may not feel as much of a need to be directly involved with defeating it as other classes might.

Rogue

Perhaps uniquely amongst other classes, rogues may see the Obelisk Eruption as a net benefit! After all, consider the implications of an otherwise-prosperous civilization thrown into upheaval: looting, thieving, stabbing, and other conquests immediately become much more viable. And no matter what one's morals or greater goals in life, it's an unavoidable fact that the town Militia (page 28) is unlikely to care who stole Madam Pendergrast's silver locket if there's a fleet of mohrgs in Town Square!

Rogues will react to the Obelisk in a manner fitting their alignment (see below), but will generally not see it in as negative a light as many other classes.

Sorcerers & Wizards

The Obelisk represents a challenging conundrum for an arcanist. On the one hand, it's a terrifying object that brings with it creatures that are clearly out for the blood of the surface world, so yes, there's an immediate, personal threat to one's well-being. But on the other, it seems to be an object of nearly pure magic, a power possible absolute, and one that appears to have a great many forces in league with its whim.

Perhaps, just maybe, the Obelisk and its Forces might be bent to one's will. Surely, there must be a way to gain sufficient knowledge so as to grant one's self mastery over such an entity?

Sorcerers and Wizards will be a bit conflicted about the Obelisk, and while ultimately they may view its defeat as necessary, their main motivation is to understand more about it first.

Reactions by Alignment

These descriptions may conflict with one another—two different Lawful Evil characters, for example, may view the situation quite differently. As mentioned earlier, however, these descriptions are meant as guiding possibilities or inspiration, and not hardly as stereotypes that must be adhered to.

Lawful

Little may be known of the Obelisk, its nature, its origins, and its intent... but it is indisputably an entity of Chaos. As such, no Lawful character can reasonably be in favor of its continued existence. Understanding more about it may be helpful, but only inasmuch as it brings Lawful forces closer to its defeat.

Lawful characters must be driven above nearly all else to defeat the Obelisk.

Chaotic

Chaotic characters have perhaps the most difficult job in determining their reaction. On the one hand, the Obelisk is of Chaos, and the character is of Chaos, so there should be some common ground to be had. But on the more selfish side of things, while the Obelisk may be of similar nature to a Chaotic creature, a Chaotic PC has no control over it... and therefore is likely to derive no benefit from it. If a Chaotic character wants to help defeat the Obelisk, it should be not because of what it is, but of what it does.

Chaotic characters may be conflicted about the Obelisk—not in favor of it per se, but not innately driven to its destruction simply because of its nature.

Good

While the PCs do not know this in the context of this adventure, the Obelisk is not of Evil nature. But the destruction it unleashes, and the rampant death and wanton carnage brought about by the Forces acting on its behalf—those are not Good things, by any means. The truly Good among us, however, realize that there is little in this world that is Evil without purpose—perhaps there is some deeper reason behind the Obelisk that causes it to be as it is. If we could but understand it better, it might be that we could change those circumstances, and by doing so, change the very nature of the Obelisk.

Then again.... although little in the world is evil without purpose, the Obelisk seems to be hardly of this world.

Good characters may seek to destroy the Obelisk, but ideally, would seek to learn as much as possible about it to verify that it needs destroying.

Evil

Evil and Chaos are frequently aligned, and the purposes of one often serve the other. Lawful Evil characters may be the most conflicted about the Obelisk: on the one hand, destruction and wrath are generally inspiring qualities, and the damage done to Berinncorte and its inhabitants is truly impressive. But consider that the chaos of the Obelisk seems to have no greater purpose—there is no justice, no pattern, to the blight that is visited upon the city. No lesson here is learned, though many such lessons need to be taught.

Evil characters may be in favor of, or opposed to, the Obelisk, as suits their greater purpose in life.

Act II Scene Vignettes

Areas of Interest

It is possible for the PCs to be anywhere in the city of Berinncorte when the Obelisk erupts.

This section describes what takes place based on where the PCs are. Although the intent here is that the GM refer to only a single section for Act Two—namely, the location where the party is when the Obelisk erupts—the GM is also encouraged to read through the other zones, both as inspiration and as preparation for the state of those other locations in Act Three.

Using Act 2 Vignettes

The immediate use of these scenes is to play through what happens in the party's immediate vicinity when the Obelisk Erupts. Therefore, unless the party is split up, you'll play through one, and typically only one, of these scenes, and then Act Two is completed.

As there are several critical events that occur in Act Two, from a plot and story standpoint, some of them must occur in a manner that the PCs can witness. As a result, when you are in Act Three, you as the GM will have to “backtrack” to some of the key scenes in Act Two. Don't worry if this seems complicated—each instance of this is described in detail in Act Three, and if things happen differently whether a vignette is played out Act Two or backtracked from Act Three, that is described, as well.

Backtracking Example

For example: If the party is in the Zugul Church when the Obelisk Erupts, they get to directly witness one of the pivotal things that happens in Act Two: the High Priest Cannock is wounded, and, cradled in the arms of the woman who loves him but has never told him, he dies. It's meant to be a moving, weighty moment in the story; that it happens, and how it happens, help drive Maghana's actions in subsequent pieces of the Adventure Path.

If the party isn't there at the start of Act Two, Cannock's death still needs to happen... and although it would have some impact if the PCs discovered the event by word of mouth from another key NPC, it wouldn't have nearly the impact that witnessing it first-hand would.

So, some pivotal moments, that normally happen in Act Two, happen instead in Act Three if the party wasn't around to bear witness firsthand. In the above scenario, if the party had instead been at the Fishery when the Obelisk Erupted, then Cannock survives Act Two... but as soon as the party shows up at the Zugul

Church, the scene takes place in exactly the same way.

Movie Metaphor

Think of Dark Obelisk: Berinncorte from this point onward as a movie, with certain key plot events that the audience (i.e., the players) need to see in order to make sense of what follows, and in order to be affected by the film. You, the GM, are the narrator in this analogy—you get to decide what happens, when, and you get to do so in a way that guarantees that the PCs see as much as possible that's of interest.

This structure, this flexibility—and this demand on the GM's time, to keep track of it all—it's unlike the structure of most adventures. But remember, unless they've secretly read the book and spoiled all the fun for themselves, your players don't know that Cannock was “supposed” to die in Act Two! In the above scenario, where the party is in the Fishery, and in the aftermath of the Eruption, stumbles across the Zugul Church just in time to see Cannock die—for all they know, that's precisely how things were “supposed” to have happened.

Healing Isn't Appealing

Dark Obelisk: Berinncorte is meant to be a flexible sandbox in which gaming groups of any style or preference can explore and have fun. The overarching Adventure Path to which this adventure is an introduction is meant to be a dynamic one, one in which some NPCs can live or die without total disruption to the overall plot.

That said, at least in the context of this adventure, there are some characters who are, for lack of a better phrase, meant to die. There's no escaping it; the adventure requires them to be slain by monsters, or fall into a pit, or otherwise meet their doom. Certain NPCs are simply marked for death in this adventure.

For such NPCs, death is inevitable, and unavoidable.

⚠ Wisdom (Medicine) checks of any DC simply indicate to the checker that their wounds are mortal, and that they are dying. Cure wounds spells, potions, or effects may seem to work, but a few moments after the spell resolves, the better color in the NPC's cheeks fades to the ashen, hollowed appearance they had before the spell was cast.

Rules-lawyer players may quibble as to what kind of monster dealt the NPC wounds that refuse to heal. As the GM, you can give a quick explanation that the Obelisk itself bears powers and qualities that the PCs have no exposure to; those factors, as well as attributes of the Forces of the Obelisk and their weaponry that are also new to the players, could be a quick and easy way of satisfying those with a need for justification, while not distracting unduly from the pace of play.

He's Dead Already, Jim

It's possible that an NPC described in these vignettes has already met their untimely demise. In some run-throughs of this adventure, the PCs themselves may even have done the deed, justified or not by the circumstances.

This doesn't present too big a problem for even novice GMs. The main impact, of course, is that a scene involving a marked for death NPC in Act Two simply can't occur. The party has robbed themselves of the opportunity of seeing that scene. But other than that, there should be little impact.

Areas of Interest Act 2 Summary

Even the most organized GM might feel it a challenge to keep track of what happens to each location during the chaos of the Eruption. Below is a summary of the impact of this catastrophic event on each of the major locations of interest in the city for ease of reference.

"Damaged?" refers to structural damage to the building itself, not to its denizens. Collapsed roofs, broken timbers, active fires, barred entrances—any of these phenomena would qualify a location as being "damaged".

"Corrupted?" means to the extent to which a location has been infested with Forces of the Obelisk. Corrupted locations are ones whose nature, or occupants, have been altered—it is no longer under the control of any citizens of Berinncorte, and instead has "fallen" to the Forces.

Table 52: Areas of Interest Act 2 Summary

 Note that the "Page" listed refers to the Act Three, fuller entry for each location.

Location	Code	Damaged?	Corrupted?	Description
Zugul Church	BC-1	Yes	No	An Untouchable monster sets up shop on ground floor; captives are kept in the basement.
Cryptkeeper's Shack	BC-2	No	No	Gurth stays here, unable to escape to the south because that's where the Obelisk is.
Graveyard	BC-3	No	Yes	A place of death already, and close to the site of the Eruption, it's a natural focal point for the Forces.
Town Square	BC-4	Yes	Yes	Town Square as it was known is essentially destroyed.
Stage	BC-5	Yes	Yes	The Stage as it was known is essentially destroyed.
Mayor's House	BC-6	Yes	No	Symms dies defending it and its citizens; Ota Kuiduru leads a raid into the equipment stash.
Mayor's Guardpost	BC-7	Yes	Yes	An Untouchable creature claims this post as his perch and stronghold.
Militia Guard Posts	BC-8	No	Some	These Posts are largely unaffected—although they are now unoccupied by Militia! Some are claimed by Forces of the Obelisk as their home.
Blacksmith's Hut	BC-9	Yes	Yes	It's nearly destroyed. Powerful creatures use it to equip themselves.
Zugul Church Garden	BC-10	Yes	Yes	This former haven of solace is now swarming with monsters.
Zugul Cleric House	BC-11	Yes	Yes	All inhabitants were slain... and many have been brought back as undead servants of the Obelisk.
City Gardens	BC-12	Yes	Yes	Though it's far away from the Eruption itself, a chaos bolt has burned much of the foliage. Undead and chaotic Fey, and magical beasts, roam where once nature ruled.
River	BC-13	No	No	Fortunately, the river is untouched thus far.
Bridges	BC-14	Yes	No	The northwest bridge is untouched; the southeast one is destroyed.

Location	Code	Damaged?	Corrupted?	Description
Leaky Cask Tavern	BC-15	Yes	Yes	An Untouchable monster sets up shop on the ground floor.
Inn	BC-16	Yes	No	The Inn was, and is, largely unoccupied in the Eruption.
Apothecary	BC-17	Yes	No	Powerful and sentient Forces have raided this building for supplies.... Citizens have looted everything else of value. The secret door and room inside remain undiscovered, however.
General Store	BC-18	Yes	No	Citizens (including Oneib) sought shelter; Welby Goodbarrel barred them. The merchant is now trapped inside with a handful of other citizens; he refuses to open the door.
Fishery & Stables	BC-19	Yes	Yes	The basement has been taken over by low-level Forces of the Obelisk. The ground level is nearly unchanged and has so far been ignored.
Sheergath Temple	BC-20	Yes	No	An Untouchable creature establishes a perch on the rooftop.
Library	BC-21	No	No	Some citizens are here; the Library Staff has shown them the establishment's secret doors and chambers, and has sequestered them. Biggen Gurble stays in the public area, ready to escort any newly-arriving citizens to safety.

Default Obelisk Eruption Scene

The vignettes which comprise the remainder of this Act are intended to describe events no matter where the PCs happen to be when the Obelisk Erupts. It could be, however, that the PCs are in a situation that doesn't quite fit into any of the scenarios provided. In addition, there are some locations that are "generic"—one might say "boring!"—in terms of what happens there during the Eruption itself.

Finally, many Areas of Interest make reference to this "Default Scene": for such references, play out the following scene, then refer back to the location's detail for more information (and, possibly, consequences!).

Once you have determined the Prime Catalyst (page 41) of the Eruption, and it has been Triggered (via event or if one of the Catalyst Trackers has been advanced sufficiently), read the following text to the players.

You may pick an appropriate pause in the action of the adventure, or simply interrupt whatever is happening at the moment; in either case, however, your tone and demeanor should make it clear to the players that there is something absolutely massive at stake here.

All of a sudden, the ground shakes. Once, twice, and a third time.

But "shake" falls short of describing it. It's not quite an earthquake—there's no rumble, just a series of shaking thuds, as though some enormous fist is punching up beneath the earth. A fourth thud—and now there is a rumble, not low and deep, but terrible and wrenching; somewhere within a few hundred feet, there's a rending sound. The enormous fist you imagined before now sounds like it has claws, and is using them to tear the ground apart, viciously.

You look around, but can't see anything within eyeshot that might explain what is taking place. Elsewhere in the city, you hear screams—some of panic, others of terror, and perhaps a few of agony as well. Whatever this is, it sounds as though it may be affecting the entire village of Berinn corte!

After reading this, each PC must take an immediate A Dexterity (Acrobatics) check, at DC 16; the GM should make a check for each NPC or creature that the party can see at the time of the event. Failure means that character loses their footing, and falls to the ground; they are immediately rendered prone (–4 penalty on melee attack rolls; cannot use a ranged weapon (except for a crossbow); +4 bonus to AC vs. ranged attacks, but –4 penalty to AC vs. melee attacks; standing up is a move-equivalent action that provokes an attack of opportunity).

If the party had been merely walking down the street, this may not be cause for alarm, but depending on the circumstances, it could be quite devastating!

If the party is outside of any building (i.e., on a street or alley), 2d4+3 Townsfolk sprint past them, heading in the general direction of the City Gates; by merely looking at them, it's clear that they are panicked (must drop anything and flee at top speed from the source of its fear, as well as any other dangers it encounters, along a random path; no other actions may be taken; -2 penalty on all saving throws, skill checks, and ability checks; if cornered, a panicked creature cowers and does not attack, typically using the total defense action in combat). They ignore the party completely.

If you are playing through this Default Scene without

BC-I: Zugul Church in Act 2

Summary

High Priest Cannock is wounded, but is able to crawl back into the church. He dies, cradled in Maghana's lap. She never gets the chance to tell him how she feels about him. The stricken cleric assumes control of the Zugul Church.

Immediate NPC Impact

Cannock dies. Maghana now controls the Zugul Church.

Action With PCs In Situ

If the PCs are in the basement, they hear a commotion upstairs that should prompt them to go up and take a look.

If Cannock is already on the ground floor, inside the church, he reveals that he has been wearing his full suite of equipment; he boldly throws open the western double doors and steps out to fight the madness that has erupted into the Town Square.

Maghana need not be present when the scene begins. If she's not there right away, she can enter via the south door while Cannock is in Town Square, fighting.

☐ You see the High Priest react—calmly, but hardly without passion. His chin set, his eyes narrow, and he draws a dagger from a sheath you hadn't seen before. The dagger pulses a faint crimson in his hand. He strides confidently to the double doors in the west of the church, and grasps the handles.

Cannock stays there a moment, hands on the doors, and takes a deep, slow breath. Then he flings the doors wide to reveal the carnage of the Obelisk fissure, with creatures of dread visage crawling and flying out from the chasm in the earth.

Grimly, yet without fear, the High Priest of Zugul strides forward into the chaos.

👉 If the party attempts to stop Cannock, they will be rebuffed; the man has no idea what foes he might be facing, but he feels as though he must try to help fight.

it being referenced from elsewhere, then you may shift immediately into Act Three without further ado. That's okay; note that Act Two is meant to be quick!

Speaking to him about the risk, or how he might be needed more elsewhere, or explaining ways in which he could be more helpful in defending or escorting the citizens to safety—none of that seems to sink in.

Cannock is almost in a daze, a trance, though he is hypnotized not by magic, or tricks of chaotic beasts. The High Priest is hypnotized by his own zeal, and cannot be dissuaded from what he feels is his mission.

👉 If the party follows Cannock outside, either to try to reason with him further, or to join him in the fight, they will encounter resistance; segue to the Act Two vignette for the Town Square. Arrange for Cannock to take a grievous wound; try and make it so the PCs feel compelled to escort him back to the relative safety of the Church.

👉 If the party stays in the Church, Maghana appears. If she hadn't been in the Church's ground floor already when Act Two kicked off, she will ask the PCs what happened to Cannock. Assuming they tell her the truth, Maghana will appear stricken, as though slapped, and will start to run to the western double doors, seemingly to follow the High Priest.

Once Maghana is in the church but not yet to the doors, Cannock bursts through the doors coming back inside. He's obviously wounded; blood oozes forth in an ever-widening circle on this vestments. His +1 dagger is nowhere to be seen.

👉 The party may attempt to heal Cannock: this will not succeed (see Healing Isn't Appealing).

When he arrives in Church, Maghana runs to Cannock, and the two sink to the floor by the pulpit in the northwest of the church. Maghana hunches over him, and her lips move, but no voice emerges; the High Priest, for his part, may not even be in a state where he could hear her and understand her words if she were even to say them. After a few moments, Cannock's limbs cease their intermittent flailing, and he is gone. Maghana freezes, as though paused, then hugs the man's head to her chest, and kisses his forehead. Gently putting his head on the floor, she stands, brushes her vestments off the debris on which she had been kneeling, and wipes a tear from her eye.

Seeing the party, she nods, and says that she is headed downstairs to the Undercroft, to take stock of things down there, and to attend to any survivors. Though the party may wish to converse further, she's clearly in no mood to talk idly.

If the PCs try and stop her, or if they dawdle in the Church once she descends the stairs, the now-closed and locked double doors to the west thud as something on the other side is clearly trying to break in.

This segues the Zugul Church into its state as described in Act Three.

Rumors and Impact With PCs Elsewhere

This vignette is a pivotal scene, and as such, it is strongly recommended that the party encounter it in Act Three if they are not in the Zugul Church at the time of the Eruption.

Unfortunately, the Church is very close to the Eruption, so the PCs may not consider it safe or worthwhile to venture here in the aftermath. If they cannot, or choose not to, be there in person for Cannock's death, NPCs of all walks of life will bring it up in conversation, and the party will begin to hear whispered conversations as to how he died, the size of the monster that slew him, and so on.

BC-2: Cryptkeeper's Shack in Act 2

Summary

Cryptkeeper Gurth's humble abode is mercifully untouched in the Obelisk Eruption. As the Graveyard is crawling with Forces of the Obelisk, Gurth is trapped inside, but thus far the Forces have ignored both the grimy gnome and his shelter.

Immediate NPC Impact

Gurth is trapped in the Shack.

Action With PCs In Situ

It's unlikely that the party will be in the Cryptkeeper's Shack when the Obelisk Erupts... but if they are, play through the Default Scene, adding that Gurth cowers in the northwest corner of his shack amidst the coals and cauldron from his fire pit.

Just as Gurth is effectively trapped in the Shack when the Obelisk Erupts, so are the PCs... unless they know of the secret entrance to the Zugul Church in the north wall behind the altar.

Note that only Maghana and Cannock know of this secret entrance to the Church. Cannock dies, and as a result Maghana has more than enough to think about; seeing if the Cryptkeeper is still alive, whether he is in his Shack, and rescuing him from a graveyard full of monsters is hardly a priority for her right now.

Despite his close involvement with the surrounding area, and the fact that he lives within 15 ft. of it, Gurth is not aware of the secret entrance to the Church.

Rumors and Impact With PCs Elsewhere

It's similarly unlikely that the PCs would care overmuch about the whereabouts of the drunken, smelly gnome who keeps the graves clean. The NPC with whom Gurth was closest was Cannock, but Cannock dies shortly after the Obelisk Eruption. On top of all of that, both the Town Square and the Graveyard block the Shack from the rest of the city... so venturing there once Act Two begins is perilous to little obvious reward.

Wherever the PCs find themselves, they won't hear much in the way of rumor about the trapped cryptkeeper.

BC-3: Graveyard in Act 2

Summary

As one might expect when the town is invaded by creatures of chaos and undeath, the Graveyard of Berinncorte turns sinister following the Obelisk Eruption. Forces of the Obelisk take it over, and dead creatures rise from some of the graves.

Immediate NPC Impact

None. During Act Two, there are no key NPCs in the Graveyard. Note that Cryptkeeper Gurth is trapped in his Shack (see above), but in the Graveyard itself there is nobody.

Action With PCs In Situ

Read through the default Eruption description, then roll once on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context D, and reroll until you get a monster-based encounter, which proceeds immediately.

If a villain-based or untouchable encounter is rolled, the GM is encouraged to introduce any monster(s) from the north end of the Graveyard, so the PCs are able to escape to the south.

Rumors and Impact With PCs Elsewhere

 Some citizens will mention that they have heard the dead once again walk the earth.

BC-4: Town Square in Act 2

Summary

If the party is in Town Square during the Eruption, they have a front-row seat... which may or may not be what they want!

Immediate NPC Impact

Several key NPCs perish immediately in the Eruption. The following NPCs are standing above, or very close by, the eruption site, and are therefore slain instantly by the explosion of earth and fire: mystic Arbelladon Moonside; seamstress Daratis; fishmaster Gumbrew; merchant Kerem Dogan; serving wenches Ownka and Thrunne; trainer Rona Stonehammer; and merchant Vanya Berezin.

Einkill Holderhek stumbles out of the Leaky Cask Tavern, and challenges the monsters to a fight. In his inebriated state, he's no match for them, and they slay him easily.

Elizavetta Burak is with a customer, who sheensorcells to escort her to safety. Sadly, they do not get too far before the Forces of the Obelisk overtake them, and both are slain.

Of all the NPCs slain in Town Square, however, none has nearly the emotional weight or plot significance as Mayor Dominika Symms (see Quest "Take This Sword, and My Word, And Go Forth", INU-4: Southwest Bedroom).

Action With PCs In Situ

 The earth buckles, shakes, and melts before your eyes. A form emerges in violence and chaos: it appears hazy, the air around it a translucent and vile haze of purplish black. You can't tell if it's a sphere, a rock, a monster, or something else entirely, but you can tell with certainty that it is not of this world.

Blood, bodies, and kiosks are shattered instantly, and tossed into the air and about the square like playthings.

As you stare, aghast in horror, a chasm deepens underneath the interloping Obelisk. Darkness wells and burgeons amidst the descending black, and the air seems to dissolve in sinewy lines. A horn, a claw, a wing, and a talon: shapes emerge from the pit.

The Obelisk spits forth a great horde, to start. Roll  2d4 times on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context D. For each, reroll any results that are not monster-based. All monsters introduced via these rolls come from the Obelisk itself.

The GM is encouraged to roll additional times if no untouchable encounters and no villainous encounters are rolled in this initial batch.

 It perhaps goes without saying, but just to clarify: the enormity of the threat here is not meant to face the PCs head-on. Any number or combination of rolls should represent a threat far, far beyond the capabilities of the party, at any level of difficulty. The purpose of introducing so many monsters, all at once, in this manner, is threefold.

First, it introduces the fact that the Obelisk is a source of monsters, a generator if you will. Subsequent run-ins with monsters as random encounters elsewhere in the city should not cause the players confusion as to where the creatures came from.

Second, it should terrify the PCs, and force them to leave Town Square immediately. This keeps things moving, and forces the party out of any comfort zone, and into the chaos that now swallows the entire city.

Third, it should reinforce the notion that the Obelisk is an obstacle, a foe, that is not meant to be defeated, at least not in the context of this adventure.

Most of the monsters should amble about, not necessarily focusing on the PCs, at least not at first. They should emerge, and cause destruction.

As part of the chaos, Mayor Dominika Symms strides in front of the party, wielding her greatsword and joining battle with the monsters.

Quest: Take This Sword, and My Word, And Go Forth

 Summary: The Mayor dies fighting monsters, and conveys a final message to the PCs.

 Rewards: +1 greatsword.

 Locations: Town Square.

 Key NPCs: Mayor Dominika Symms.

 Kickoff: The PCs are in Town Square during the Eruption, or approach Town Square in Act Three.

 Description:

If there are not already monsters in Town Square, roll  1d4 times on the Aftermath Random Encounter table, using Context D; for each such roll, reroll any non-monster encounters. After you've introduced these creatures, if there are still no villains or untouchables in play, roll once more on the Random Encounter table, again using Context D, and keep rerolling until you get a villain or an untouchable monster.

All creatures are introduced from the Dark Obelisk in the center of the square.

Select one of the villainous or untouchable monsters in Town Square: Mayor Symms attacks that creature. The two engage in battle for a few rounds; the PCs are welcome to come to the Mayor's aid if they wish. The formidable monster keeps its attention focused on Symms, despite any assistance given by the party.

This battle is a wonderful opportunity for the GM to roleplay Symms' attempt to physically confront what she sees as, and what truly is, a manifestation of the chaos she has railed against all her life.

Even with the PCs' help, it's unlikely that the foe will be vanquished. It's far more likely that the enemy will slay Symms legitimately through rules-based combat. If for some reason the villain or untouchable is ever in danger of losing, the GM can either fudge a few rolls to slay the Mayor, or if the immediate threat is defeated, introduce a new foe from the Obelisk, who catches Symms off-guard and finishes her off.

The point is that Symms loses the battle, either directly to the monster selected, or via the introduction of another creature.

Satisfied, the monster who slew her withdraws, refocusing its attention elsewhere, and escapes to other parts of the city in a burst of speed.

Mortally wounded, Symms beckons the party closer. Healing spells and curative items may help to restore some life to the doomed woman, but there is a ghastly-looking purplish-black stain on her face, one that is spreading by the moment. She knows, with certainty, that her time is at an end.

 "My friends," the fallen mayor gasps. Doing so must bring her pain, as she grimaces, and steels herself to continue. "I die, as I have fought, as I have lived, for this city." As she continues, her voice weakens, but you can still make out her words. "Dark days are ahead for Berinncorte, I fear. But all is not lost." She grasps her sword, and forces the hilt into your hand. "Take this. Please," she says, her voice now a whisper amidst the chaos of the square. "Use it, to help the city. Have hope. And may fortune smile upon your efforts." This last is barely audible.

She is gone.

Dominika Symms bequeaths her greatsword to one of the PCs.

Take This Sword, And My Word...: Chaos +3

Although unavoidable, encountering this scene nevertheless produces a Catalyst Impact:  Chaos +3.

This Quest ends when the mayor does. Aside from her weapon and her plea, there is no reward to speak of for the PCs.

Rumors and Impact With PCs Elsewhere

 Everyone whispers of the massive damage to Town Square, and the giant horrible rock that now sits at its center.

 Few people who still live were actually there at Town Square during the Eruption... but many speak of the many deaths that occurred there.

 Some folk will say that Mayor Symms herself may even have perished.

BC-6: Mayor's House in Act 2

Summary

An Ettin emerges from the Obelisk chasm, and stumbles into the Mayor's House, demolishing a great deal of the entrance.

Immediate NPC Impact

Ota Kuiduru and Mayor Symms both evacuate the Mayor's House as a result of the attack.

Action With PCs In Situ

Begin by reading through the default eruption event on page 290. Then, add the following:

☞ The building shakes. Then all is silent. In the distance, to the southeast, you hear something, a roar, an ugly, angry sound. A harbinger of doom. Something in Town Square is furious. The ground thuds, thuds, thuds as something pounds heavily across the square. With a shudder and a groan, the building absorbs its fury, as something smashes into the Mayor's House.

One final roar, this time seeming to carry an undertone of satisfaction, and then the thudding sound of enormous footsteps recedes to the south.

The PCs are not meant to encounter the Ettin inside the building; however, if they gain a glimpse of it, they may leave on their own will to engage.

☞ The goal here is to portray enough detail that the PCs get a mental image of something massive slamming into the building, but not so much that's unrealistic: remember, they are inside the building, so they can't see exactly what's going on.

Also, the GM is encouraged to add to this description as the PCs' location seems appropriate. For example, if the PCs are in one of the rooms that is damaged by the Ettin's attack, they should get some description of the damage, and of the monster itself.

Ota Kuiduru rushes past the party, offering apologies for shoving them out of the way en route. The party thinks they see the Mayor, greatsword in hand, stride purposefully toward the exit.

If the party ends up outside the Mayor's House as a result of this action, the GM is encouraged to immediately trigger the Quest "Take This Sword and My Word", above; Mayor Symms dies as a result.

Rumors and Impact With PCs Elsewhere

☞ Folk speak of a monster attacking the Mayor's House... and worry that it is now abandoned.

BC-8: Militia Guard Posts in Act 2

Summary

Guardposts are unchanged. But in the aftermath of the Eruption, very few of them are ever staffed by Militia as they once were.

Immediate NPC Impact

None.

Action With PCs In Situ

Simply read through the default Eruption description.

Rumors and Impact With PCs Elsewhere

None.

BC-9: Blacksmith's Hut in Act 2

Summary

The earthquakes destroy some walls. Monsters attack, and drive the PCs and the proprietress out of the building.

Immediate NPC Impact

If Dimblegruffe is here already, she will fight to defend her shop, but when the party is overwhelmed, she will flee with them.

Action With PCs In Situ

Read through the description in the default Eruption scene, and add to it the description of Town Square, since Town Square is clearly visible from the Hut.

Finally, read the below description. Only read the italicized portion if the party can see the entryway area of the Blacksmith's Hut during the Eruption.

 The earthquakes appear to have collapsed many walls in this structure.

As you watch, the inky blackness underneath the Obelisk is slashed by arcs of whitest bone. Skeletons in the shape of giant centipedes emerge, crawling toward you. They stay within Town Square, however, seeming to recoil once they get a certain distance away from the Obelisk.

To the immediate north and south of the entrance, boiling pools of a devilishly purlish liquid erupt from under the earth. The substance looks vile and threatening, but stays in its place... at least for now.

Amidst the Eruption, which is visible from the Blacksmith's Hut, monsters emerge. In particular, 4d6 Giant Skelepedes slither out of the chasm, and crawl toward the Hut in search of the living.

The Skelepedes will attack ruthlessly, but will not follow the party outside the area of Town Square and the open-air entry area of the Hut.

 Although individually, these creatures likely do not pose a challenge to the party, this volume of monsters all at once should represent a formidable opponent. Together, they should be treated as an untouchable encounter, served up here to drive the party away from the Hut and to elsewhere in the town.

Rumors and Impact With PCs Elsewhere

 Folk say that the Blacksmith's Hut is abandoned, and taken over by evil monsters.

BC-IO: Zugul Church Garden in Act 2

Summary

Earthquakes destroy much of the vegetation here; the remainder is swallowed into chasm tendrils that have extended from the west.

Immediate NPC Impact

None.

Action With PCs In Situ

Read through the description in the default Eruption scene, and add to it the description of Town Square, since Town Square is clearly visible from the Hut.

☐ The narrow onyx pits that have appeared in the cracks of the earth extend, reaching out, into the garden. Bushes, flowers, and grass all fall to its inky blackness, the life swallowed whole. In its place, a pale, grey fog emerges, settling over the nearly-barren landscape.

Rumors and Impact With PCs Elsewhere

None. Although previously quite pretty, the garden does not truly merit focus of most townsfolk's attention, given everything else happening to the city!

BC-II: Zugul Cleric House in Act 2

Summary

The earthquakes destroy much of the northern and western walls. Some of the monsters loosed in the Eruption may be drawn to the Cleric House.

Immediate NPC Impact

None.

Action With PCs In Situ

Read through the default Eruption description, then add the following description:

☐ Earthquakes have destroyed much of the northern wall of the building; the western wall and the shrine and statuary there have also been reduced to rubble.

A fireball streaks out of the sky from the north and slams into the wall still standing in the northwest, collapsing a fair amount of the roof.

If the PCs are in the Shrine area in the northwest of the building, or are outside it, treat this as the Fireball encounter.

Finally, roll once on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context B; any monsters rolled come from the alley in the northwest corner of the map.

Rumors and Impact With PCs Elsewhere

💬 They say that no structure is safe from damage—the gods have even smote the Cleric House, reducing much to rubble and destroying the shrine therein.

BC-12: City Gardens in Act 2

Summary

Most flowering life is snuffed out, and a chasm opens.

Immediate NPC Impact

None, as no named NPCs typically cavort in the garden pre-Eruption.

Action With PCs In Situ

Read through the description in the default Eruption scene, then read the following.

As the earthquakes subside, the sky darkens, an ominous, amorphous formation the color of burnt flesh. Blackish-red clouds form above you. You hear the burgeoning pitter-patter of rain on vegetation, but it's more sinister, tinged with a sizzling sound that sets your hair on end.

Amidst this chaos, another earthquake, this one seemingly coming from the center of the Garden, strikes, knocking you on your feet. You watch, prone and aghast, as the earth seems to swallow bushes and flowers whole, leaving a stinking, yawning blackness underneath.

Treat this as a Fire Rain event, which affects every square in the entire Garden. All PCs must pass a DC 18 A Dexterity (Acrobatics) check or be knocked prone at the start of the event.

Rumors and Impact With PCs Elsewhere

Some speak of the blight against nature: the Gardens themselves have been rendered an evil shade of their former glory.

BC-15: The Leaky Cask Tavern in Act 2

Summary

A fireball smashes into the northern wall; in its wake, monsters stalk toward the building.

Immediate NPC Impact

Thrunne and Ownka are both shopping in Town Square when the Eruption takes place, and are slain instantly.

Einkill Holderhek is within the bar, drunk; after the fireball hits, he stands up, and runs north toward the Obelisk. He is slain quite quickly.

Jozan the bartender and proprietor, and Zook Beren are both inside. Both of them run out the southern entrance as soon as the northern wall is destroyed.

Phadian Gess and his lover Lingona are also in the tavern; they leave to the south as well.

Action With PCs In Situ

Read through the description in the default Eruption scene, and add to it the description of Town Square, since Town Square is clearly visible from the Tavern. Then read the following.

The air screams as an enormous fireball slams into the northern wall of the building, destroying window, wall, and door instantly and reducing it to ashy rubble.

In its wake, you see shapes emerge from the inky chaos beneath the Obelisk. They begin to walk slowly toward the Tavern. The drunken dwarf warrior at the bar stands up, unslings his axe, and, bellowing, charges north, toward the monsters.

Since the fireball hits the outside of the building, the PCs are in no danger from it... but they most certainly are from the monsters that are approaching.

6 Quasit Demons and 1 Babau Demon are the force that slowly walks toward the bar. They should be portrayed as representing a foe clearly beyond the capabilities of the party, even if they could convince the handful of NPCs around them to take up arms and help.

The point of this encounter is to get the PCs to follow Jozan and Zook Beren out of the building, as quickly as possible. This encounter should be considered an untouchable encounter.

Rumors and Impact With PCs Elsewhere

 Tales say a demon and his minions have claimed the tavern as their own, and are dead-set on drinking themselves into oblivion. They will slay any who threaten this endeavor!

BC-16: Inn in Act 2

Summary

The earthquake destroys a lot of the northeast corner of the building.

Rumors and Impact With PCs Elsewhere

None. The Inn hardly registers on the radar of most townsfolk.

Immediate NPC Impact

Mardnab Scheppen is struck by a falling timber on her way out; she escapes, wounded and dazed, through the south entrance.

Esk the innkeeper waits until the earthquakes subside, notices monsters to the north, and then he, too, leaves via the south entrance.

Action With PCs In Situ

Read through the description in the default Eruption scene, and add to it the description of Town Square, since Town Square is clearly visible from the Inn.

Then read the following.

 The earthquakes appear to have brought down the walls and door in the northeast corner of the Inn. The ceiling above, and the roof, have lent their own substance to the debris, which is piling up high as more pieces fall by the minute.

Beyond them, you can see monsters—lots of creatures, stomping about, slaying townsfolk, and generally causing a great deal of chaos.

 The GM must struggle to portray the presence of monsters in Town Square to the north as a threatening, looming, horrible thing to be avoided, not as the players may interpret it as a boatload of experience points waiting to be conquered!

BC-17: Apothecary in Act 2

Summary

The southwest corner of the building is destroyed, as is most of the potion-making equipment in the store.

Immediate NPC Impact

Aramil Xiloscient (page 515) leaves the shop immediately, locking all doors behind him and admonishing the party to leave, too, if they have any decency.

In truth, Aramil is concerned about his Experimentation Chamber (see LCS-6: Experimentation Chamber, page 272), and is leaving to check on it to ensure its secret remains safe.

Action With PCs In Situ

Read through the description in the default Eruption scene, then read the following:

☐ The earthquake appears to have broken the entire western wall, and much of the southern wall as well. Shattered beakers, tubes, and other equipment lies among the rubble; you doubt if many potions will be concocted in the near future here!

Then, roll once on the Aftermath Townsfolk Encounter table; any townsfolk encountered come

BC-18: General Store in Act 2

Summary

Welby Goodbarrel seals the main entrance. His comrade and friend Otibus dies outside, trying to get in.

Immediate NPC Impact

Welby Goodbarrel is inside; as soon as the earthquake starts, he makes for the front door, slams it shut, locks it, and begins barricading it. The townsfolk who were milling about, shopping, join him, happy to have something to do that seems as though it might help.

Otibus is slain outside, pounding on the door to get inside.

Action With PCs In Situ

Read through the description in the default Eruption scene, then read the following:

☐ The earthquake subsides, and you hear groans and from the northwest corner of the map.

Rumors and Impact With PCs Elsewhere

☐ Even those who never frequented the shop lament the apparent loss of the city's only Apothecary Shop, particularly as healing draughts are now much in demand.

roars from the southeast. Something, or a group of somethings, is on the prowl. Screams, curses, and the clash of steel seem to do little to stall the progress of what sounds like a horde of monsters.

From the other side of the main entrance door, you hear a soldier demanding, then pleading, and finally begging, to be let inside. The store's halfling proprietor is adamant that the door remain closed, and the terrified townsfolk about him seem to agree.

A scream, a thud, the rake of claws, and a final grunt.

There is silence from the other side of the door, as you hear something stalk away with thundering footsteps.

The PCs are now in a prime position to kick off the Quest "Come Out, Come Out".

☐ Part of the challenge the GM faces here is to present the events in a way that makes it seem as though keeping the door shut in the immediate chaos is indeed the right decision, fatal as it is to a friend of Welby's. The halfling is not an evil man, just scared, and the townsfolk initially support the call.

As the minutes tick by, however, the townsfolk grow restless, and as the silence from the other side of the entrance continues to deafen, it's clear that whatever the threat was, it's long gone by now.

customers.

Rumors and Impact With PCs Elsewhere

Many speak of the General Store, and the brave—some say foolish—action its owner took to defend his

BC-19: Fishery and Stables in Act 2

Summary

A fireball, and then fire rain, assaults the northeast corner of the building. In the wake of these environmental challenges, monsters encroach, and descend into the basement.

Immediate NPC Impact

Fishmaster Gumbrew is actually in Town Square during the Eruption, and is slain instantly. Apprentice Stewy is present here in the Fishery at the time, but flees immediately, terrified of the events unfolding. Brock Runnaheim, the stablemaster, is here as well, and loses an arm trying to fend off the monsters.

Action With PCs In Situ

Read through the description in the default Eruption scene, then read the following:

The world shrieks horribly, and a fireball slams into the northeast corner of the building. In the aftermath of the explosion that levels much of the building there, fiery rain slips down, sizzling, from ebon-red clouds that have appeared above the city.

The northwest corner of the building appears to have fallen apart due to the earthquakes; debris is stacked head-high in most places.

As the fiery liquid falls upon the rubble, from the shattered remnants of Town Square to the northeast, you see a group of monsters approach the Fishery.

The fireball causes no damage to the party; the fire rain, however, might if the PCs are anywhere near the northeast corner. Treat this as a fire rain event, except it only affects PCs who are in rubble squares.

The monsters comprise those who will end up in the Fishery Basement: 2 Ogres, 3d4 Ghouls, and 2d4 Skulks.

Whether the PCs join battle with these monsters or not, Brock Runnaheim charges into the fore. He slats several Ghouls, but one of the Ogres picks him up, and rends his left arm off his body. The resulting spray of blood temporarily blinds the Ogre in question, which Brock takes advantage of and kills.

Wounded and bleeding out, he collapses amidst the rubble.

Note that the goal here is to push the PCs elsewhere. The volume of monsters presented should represent an untouchable encounter no matter what level of variable challenge your gaming group is using. If nothing else, Brock's demise should underscore the formidable level of foe.

Rumors and Impact With PCs Elsewhere

Rumors tell that monsters have taken over the Fishery, and that the basement holds demons and torture.

BC-20: Sheergath Temple in Act 2

Summary

Monsters attack the Temple, driving everyone out and claiming residence on the rooftop.

Immediate NPC Impact

Unglar leaves the Temple immediately, and strides toward Town Square to defeat monsters. He is instead slain.

Larissa the Elder flees the building when it becomes clear that the encroaching monsters are too much for the people there. She and Denzys try to lead as many townsfolk as possible to safety, and in so doing, they are separated in the resulting chaos of the city.

Action With PCs In Situ

Read through the description in the default Eruption scene, then read the following:

 The earthquakes appear to have ruptured the walls in the northeast of the temple. Larissa closes and locks the entry doors, then she and Denzys organize their flock to forming a barricade atop the rubble of the wall.

With a scream, Unglar takes up his weapons and rushes to the east. You hear groans, roars, and the clash of steel... and then, amidst the sounds of melee, Unglar screams, and is silent.

Plodding footsteps—many of them—approach from the alley into which the fallen priest had run.

The monsters are those who will perch atop the roof: 1 Chaos Beast, 12 Zombie Townsfolk, and 5 Human Skeletons.

 Perhaps obviously, the goal here is to push the PCs out of the Temple and into the streets. The Chaos Beast on its own is an untouchable encounter; the addition of all the other minions should make it clear that no assemblage of adventurers could take on all these forces easily.

The townsfolk are of a morale to be led by Larissa and Denzys, but only to stack furniture; they are in no shape to mount a counterattack against the monsters that threaten them. Church leadership themselves may not be slouches in combat, but they see mismatched odds as easily as the PCs hopefully do.

In summary: if the PCs wish to fight the monsters, they're on their own!

Any battle that occurs should be swift and decisive, and may involve the death of one or more PCs if they are insistent about it. As the monsters approach, the townsfolk lose their will, and flee to the south.

Rumors and Impact With PCs Elsewhere

 People speak of the lost Sheergath Temple, and the irony of a temple to chaos being overrun by forces of chaos.

BC-21: Library in Act 2

Summary

There's zero damage to the building, which becomes the safest place of sanctuary in the city.

Immediate NPC Impact

Librarian Gunnloda Balderk is out of the building when the Eruption occurs. She dies in City Gate Square trying to safeguard the return of books to the library.

Reader Biggen Gurble takes it upon himself to organize a defense.

Seer Tudra Coppereye stays in her chambers the entire time.

Action With PCs In Situ

Read through the description in the default Eruption scene, then read the following:

 The halfling scholar speaks up in a suddenly booming voice: “Inside, people! Inside! Close the doors, but be on the lookout for other townsfolk to admit! Now, you; come with me.” He takes charge, and whos Reveal the GM's version of the map of the Library (page 207) at this point, as Biggen shows all citizens inside the true layout of the building. He encourages everyone to take shelter, and in the later aftermath, he will take charge of pooling and disseminating rations to those who stay here.

 The PCs are free to leave at any point, as are any townsfolk inside. This is in contrast to Welby Goodbarrel's (page 830) similar approach to barricading his establishment.

Rumors and Impact With PCs Elsewhere

 They say that the Library is mostly safe. Mostly.

BC-22: City Gates in Act 2

Summary

An enormous meteor-like fireball smashes the center of the square, killing several.

Immediate NPC Impact

Gunnloda Balderk is slain instantly by the fireball.

Mardnab Scheppen is burnt to death by the flames that ensue.

Vice Captain Skutt Krundar dies dragging Militia Captain Tansden to safety.

Action With PCs In Situ

Read through the description in the default Eruption scene, then read the following:

 Your vision burns, and your body quakes, as a horse-sized fireball screams across the sky and smacks into the middle of the square. Chunks of flaming cobblestone and body parts are flung past you as terror reigns. You see a dozen citizens bloodied or destroyed instantly.

In the wake of this terrible destruction, a group of what looks like skeletonized minotaurs, wielding enormous greataxes, thud into the square from the northwest. Several militia members, including two of its leadership, rush into the fray.

The PCs may assist the Militia forces if they wish, which are comprised of 6 Berinncorte Militia, 4 Berinncorte Elite Guards, Tansden, and Skutt Krundar.

Opposing them—and inevitably slaughtering them all—are 10 Skeleataurs, a formidable force which should dissuade the PCs from staying here too long.

In the fighting, Tansden is wounded, and Skutt Krundar drags him to safety. After a few rounds of combat, read the following:

 The militia captain screams, and falls to the ground, wounded and clutching his arm. Amidst the heat of battle, his second-in-command rushes to his side, grabs his uniform by the shoulder, and drags him to safety. As this happens, the vice captain is sliced nearly in two by a skeleataur's greataxe; he falls atop his commander, dead already.

 This group of monsters is, together, one of the most challenging obstacles presented to the PCs in the entire adventure. Although they may wish to help out initially, or even feel compelled to do so, it should swiftly become clear that they—and the Militia forces they assist—have no hope of winning.

The GM is encouraged to helpfully point out that many townsfolk are fleeing the scene to the northeast via the Garrison, or to the west into the Upper-Class Residential District.

BC-23: Garrison / Barracks in Act 2

Summary

The northwest corner of the building is destroyed.

Immediate NPC Impact

None. All Militia Leadership is outside the building when the Eruption begins.

Action With PCs In Situ

Read through the description in the default Eruption scene, then read the following:

- ☐ The earthquake appears to have destroyed the northwest corner of the building, and much of the contents therein.

Despite the Garrison having such a central location, and strong military presence, there's little else that happens here.

- ☐ If the PCs are a bit paralyzed as to what their next move should be, you can coax them into (or away from) the action to the south in City Gate Square, or introduce an untouchable encounter from the south to lead them northwards.

Rumors and Impact With PCs Elsewhere

- ☒ They say that, miraculously, there's little damage to the Garrison, and it remains a stronghold of military presence and defense against the monsters.

BC-24: Textiles Shop in Act 2

Summary

Only the northwest corner is damaged.

Immediate NPC Impact

Oneib rushes out as soon as there is a commotion, trying to find his wife.

Daratis is in Town Square, and dies immediately.

Action With PCs In Situ

Read through the description in the default Eruption scene, then read the following:

- ☐ The earthquake appears to have damaged the walls and door to the northwest of the shop, but little else is destroyed. Far off in the distance, you hear what might be monsters moving about.

Rumors and Impact With PCs Elsewhere

None.

BC-25: Butcher's Shop in Act 2

Summary

The entire northeast of the building is demolished. Monsters move in.

Immediate NPC Impact

Apprentice Farzith is mortally wounded by monsters. Ganyc is in his quarters when the Eruption starts.

Action With PCs In Situ

Read through the description in the default Eruption scene, then read the following:

- ☐ The entire northeast corner of the shop has been completely demolished. As you stare, stunned at the destruction, you hear the scrape of claws on cobblestones. Monsters are approaching!

3 Giant Scorpions scuttle toward the building.

- ☐ This is intended as a battle the party has a reasonable chance of winning. The positioning of the monsters should allow for the PCs to escape to the south if they wish.

Rumors and Impact With PCs Elsewhere

None.

BC-26: Cistern in Act 2

Note that the Cistern building is not damaged or otherwise transformed in the Eruption.

Summary

This building is completely, entirely, unaffected by the Eruption.

Immediate NPC Impact

None. There are never any NPCs here.

Action With PCs In Situ

Read through the description in the default Eruption scene, then read the following:

☐ An eerie calm descends upon the cistern in the wake of the earthquake.

☐ The natural reaction of the players, if not the PCs, should be to leave and check things out at this point.

Rumors and Impact With PCs Elsewhere

None. Remember that nobody in town is consciously aware of the Cistern's existence.

BC-27: Upper-Class Residential District in Act 2

Summary

An Ettin fights two Scorpitaurs; in so doing, they make a ruin of the western edge of the building.

Immediate NPC Impact

All NPCs who are present here at the time of the Eruption escape immediately. Tarsheva Hornwood leaves as well.

They all depart through the eastern doors.

Action With PCs In Situ

Read through the description in the default Eruption scene, then read the following:

☐ Animal screeches meet a horrible roar, and you see three monsters fighting in the alley to the west. As you watch, two scorpitaurs skitter about an ettin; the two animals trip the ettin, who bumbles into the building. With a thundering shudder, the walls, doors, and windows are reduced to rubble.

These foes together should represent a difficult, but not impossible to overcome, challenge, should the PCs wish to join the battle. Clever PCs, of course, will wait to see which side wins before moving in to defeat any monsters that remain.

Rumors and Impact With PCs Elsewhere

☐ Few speak of this building. Some say it was damaged, and seem to revel in the possibility that the upper class of the city are just as prone to disaster as everyone else. Others say it's in pristine shape, and lament the double dose of undue fortune.

BC-28: Lower-Class Residential District in Act 2

Summary

A series of fireballs renders the ground floor useless.

Immediate NPC Impact

Any named NPCs present in the building during the Eruption escape immediately to the north.

Pilga remains, to begin her plundering of her tenants' rooms.

Action With PCs In Situ

Read through the description in the default Eruption scene, then read the following:

☐ With a searing roar through the heavens, a series of fireballs descends on the building, striking predominantly on the ground floor to the south. Explosive force renders much of that area into rubble.

The PCs are in no danger unless they occupy one of the squares that will become rubble; if they do, then treat it as a Fireball encounter.

Rumors and Impact With PCs Elsewhere

☐ Talk is of the damage to the structure, and many are saddened by the terrible tragedy against an already-impoverished class of people.

Act III: The Aftermath

Act III: The Aftermath

Act Three Overview

Before we begin, please allow me a brief indulgence—one which, if read by the right audience, might do what a dozen pages of explanation might otherwise fail to convey.

An Indulgent Aside: The Inverted Castle

One of the author's favorite games of all time is the 1990's classic platformer Castlevania: Symphony of the Night. Astute veterans of this game might notice more than a few influences on this adventure. I'll just describe the biggest one.

In this game, you battle through Dracula's enormous castle, defeating foes, finding keys, gathering equipment, and so on, all in the very best tradition of these sorts of games. Finally, after hours and hours of play, you get to what you believe to be the end of the quest: your preparation culminates in unlocking a chamber in the dark heart of the dread castle, revealing the kingpin vampire himself. Bravely, and as the uncommonly emotional and exceptionally well-executed music swells, you pick up your whip, or sword, and defeat him.

But... if you have a certain item, you see the battle for what it truly is: an illusion.

And then, the second half of the game begins.

The huge castle you've been exploring is literally turned upside down. Its denizens and challenges and treasures are "reset". Difficulty scales up accordingly.

The second half, or more, of the game is playing through the castle you've already explored once—but it's entirely different now. Entirely more challenging, and the story, such as it is, has taken on an entirely new feel and theme. If you didn't see it coming, and weren't already aware of the twist, it felt very much like getting an entire second game for free.

There are very, very few experiences like that surprise, that shock: that everything you've been working towards, while valuable and entertaining, has been but preamble to the real challenge, which only just starts at that point.

The Inverted Castle of Berinncorte

This is basically what Dark Obelisk: Berinncorte is meant to do.

Act One is elaborately detailed, meant to be an immersive fantasy city with a large array of quests, loot, and characters. And then Act Two happens, and that's what reveals all of this standard-issue fantasy-city stuff to be an illusion: that the real adventure starts now, when the city is partially destroyed and dozens of people are killed.

(Fun side note: It was a full decade after the game had been released that I realized the PC's name, Alucard, was simply "Dracula" spelled backwards. At the time, I thought it was just a neat-sounding French name in the vein of Interview with the Vampire and similar novels by Anne Rice! But, anyway. You've indulged me long enough at this point. Back to the adventure, then.)

Plot Summary

More NPCs die.

Outflux of chaotic and undead creatures from the Obelisk fissure increases and it becomes clear the city must be abandoned.

The party has opportunities to help or take advantage of citizens; adventure ends when the PCs leave the city.

NPC Locations

In Act One, it wasn't too necessary to keep track of the location of each and every NPC. It's still not essential in Act Three, but it's worth noting that random encounters can occur on the streets or within buildings.

For GMs worried about consistency, or those who simply want to keep track of things, a good approach is to print a copy of the Berinncorte City Map, and simply mark NPC locations in pencil. Remember that this is really only useful in the context of the PCs' knowledge; there's little value in pre-determining the location of each and every NPC. Whenever the party encounters an NPC, mark that NPC's location in pencil; that way, if that same NPC is rolled for a separate location, it'll be easy to determine if that's realistic in the context of events that have unfolded for your gaming group.

Catalyst Tracking in Act 3

In Act One, it was crucial to track Catalyst Impacts, mainly to determine when, and how, the Obelisk Eruption was triggered to bring about Act Two.

In Act Three, there is no major event toward which things are karmically building... but it's still useful to track Catalyst Impacts.

This is primarily because the values of the three Catalysts will be used in future components of this Adventure Path.

GM Guidance for Act III

Theme

Act Three should be brutal, visceral, and primal. Desperate, one might say, particularly for the ordinary folk of the town, and for the lower-caliber NPCs, even. Regardless of what happened in Act One, and regardless of the level or demeanor of the PCs, Berinncorte should now induce an atmosphere of dread, of fear... and of chaos.

Ideally, the players themselves should feel fear.

Moving About

In Act Three, it becomes much more important where the party is currently. You can use a die, placed atop the Players' Map of Berinncorte, to mark the party's current location. Many of Act Three's Random Encounters may spawn combat, in which case, tracking where the party is may be particularly useful.

Pacing

Events should happen fast and furious in Act Three, with little reprieve. Of the words the players think of when describing this section of the adventure, "boring" should never be one of them.

NPCs and common townsfolk alike may be slaughtered outright by villains and untouchable encounters. The GM is encouraged to force one of these scenarios as a random encounter, and kill off one or more NPCs as a means of having a "set piece" or memorable event to truly drive home how dangerous and chaotic the city has now become.

Refuge should be rare, and short-lived. Even finding one of the scant few places of sanctuary should provide only a temporary reprieve from the dangers of the city; after all, the party can't expect to stay in the Library for the entire second half of the adventure!

That said, it's dangerous out there. The GM is encouraged to provide healing opportunities in the form of Beneficial Encounters whenever necessary to help ensure the party's survival.

Also, keep in mind the possibility of PC Replacement Opportunities, which offer some capability for players whose PCs perish in the chaos to keep playing without too much interruption.

Guiding the Party Toward the Exit

Most PCs will see an elephant-sized chunk of evil-looking chaos incarnate in the center of a previously-peaceful town, and see it as their mission in life to discover how to destroy it.

Bad news for such PCs: That's not going to happen. At least, not in the context of this adventure.

Throughout Act Three, the PCs should gradually realize that it's not possible to defeat the Obelisk, and instead the only reasonable approach is to leave the city (see Quest "Evacuate the City"). Paladins, Barbarians, and most PCs in general may find this approach somewhat abhorrent, or defeatist.

For that matter, many players may see this as a frustrating, or disappointing, development!

As the GM, your job in conveying this message is made easier by the sheer ignorance of the citizenry. None of them has ever heard of the Obelisk, either in teachings or in lore. Nobody has ever seen an Obelisk, and as far as every NPC in this adventure communicates, this event is something that has never occurred in the history of the entire Realm.

Typical roleplaying adventures may set out fortifying tidbits of information when faced with something like the Obelisk: A sage knows of this, or someone heard of something like this happening, or everyone knows the legend but this is real life, et cetera.

Little such lore or legend related to the Obelisk is available here, in Berinncorte, in the context of this adventure. Such as there is can be found in the Obelisk-Related Lore table, onp 61.

If roleplayed right, and conveyed well by the GM, the mere absence of any such lore and "hints" or guides as to how to defeat this menace should feel wrong to the players, who should suspect this may indicate that they are not even meant to destroy the obstacle.

Tracking Reward Stars

As in Acts One and Two, keeping track of  Reward Stars is quite important, both for keeping the players motivated, and for dishing out more detailed rewards at the conclusion of gaming sessions or the adventure entire.

In Act Three, there is an additional component to consider. The final Quest, "Evacuate the City", and other adventure components, can be made easier if the party has achieved some interstitial objectives within the city. The more citizens the party helps, the greater their sway among the populace, and the easier some skill challenges become.

As the GM, you should keep track of  Reward Stars earned during Act Three.

Factions and Conflict

The nature, influence, and focus of most major factions in town have shifted as a result of the Eruption and the chaos and creatures that now infest the city.

Zugul Church

Their leader is slain. Their church, garden, and cleric house are all partially demolished. The seat of their power is a mere dozen feet from the Obelisk itself.

It's safe to say that the church of Zugul is not a significant factor in fighting the Forces of the Obelisk, despite the obvious law vs. chaos nature of their faith.

Sheergath Temple

This building has been taken over by Forces of the Obelisk. Unglar is dead, and the remaining temple leadership have their hands full trying to get back inside.

Sheergath influence is near zero, though devotees will claim enhanced powers and meaning because of the Obelisk's clear chaotic nature.

Berinncorte City Government

Sadly, Mayor Symms is slain. Ota Kuiduru and all mayoral house staff have evacuated the Mayor's House, which no longer functions as either a seat of government or as a residence.

The government of Berinncorte City has effectively ceased to function, at least in the context of the remainder of this adventure.

Berinncorte Militia

In the chaos of the Obelisk, and with the dangers of the monsters that now crawl about the town, the role of the Militia is even more necessary. They maintain the Garrison, which is a position of relative strength, and occasionally, the PCs may encounter them.

However, they staff hardly any of the Militia Guard Posts in town, and their level of vigilance is substantially lower than it was in Act One. As a shorthand, any offense short of outright murder of a citizen is likely to go overlooked, and the rules of being Arrested are pretty much suspended unless otherwise explicitly mentioned as a consequence.

Revised City Profile

The devastation unleashed by the Obelisk, the terror and death caused by its Forces, and the general chaos of the city and its inhabitants—old and new!—mean that the city is no longer the prosperous city it had been. Below is the revised city profile for Berinncorte, as it is now "Obelisk-Encroached".

Places of Sanctuary

There are only four regions of safety in all of Berinncorte, following the Obelisk Eruption:

The Library. The entire building is safe once entered.

The Cryptkeeper's Shack. Although the structure interior is safe, to reach it, one must cross the graveyard, which is riddled with Forces of the Obelisk.

The Cistern, but only once the denizens therein have been cleared out, either before or after the Eruption.

The basement of the Sheergath Temple. Note, however, that although the basement is secure and completely safe, it rests under a secret trapdoor, and to reach it, one must brave the ground floor of the Temple, which is not safe.

The party may rest at any of these locations without fear of interruption, and without any random encounters taking place. These safe places are the only locations to which innocents may be "delivered" for the purposes of being escorted to safety; leading NPCs anywhere else in town, no matter how safe-seeming, may result in their being attacked and/or slain.

Everywhere else in the city, the party is subject to Random Encounters.

NPC Assistance

By coin, by charm, or by necessity, it's possible that one or more NPCs join the party during their adventures in Act Three. Whenever the party is augmented in this manner, the GM should handle combat and other actions on behalf of any NPCs. Unless otherwise indicated by the Quest or encounter that causes the NPC(s) to join the party, they will fight alongside the party and will do their best to defeat any monsters they run across.

In addition, the PCs may ask any NPCs who have joined them to perform skill checks. Unless the GM conceives of a solid reason why the character would balk at doing so, the party can then use that NPC's skill values for checks they wish to undertake.

Care should be taken if the party runs into a non-monster encounter while they have an NPC in tow. The GM should exercise reasonable reactions on the part of the NPC if the party makes decisions that are in contrast to that NPC's character, personality, beliefs, etc. Note that in extreme situations, this may result in the NPC voluntarily leaving the party.

Unless explicitly described as part of the NPC's "joining description", NPCs who join the party will stay with the party until the conclusion of whatever purpose they have joined for. The party may dismiss any NPCs at any time.

If an NPC leaves the party—whether it's as a result of being separated in combat, a voluntary decision that the NPC has to separate as a result of actions the party takes that the NPC considers abhorrent, or if the party dismisses the NPC—any Quest that the party was engaged in together with that NPC is automatically cancelled, unless that Quest explicitly describes otherwise.

If an NPC is privy to valuable information, it is left to the GM's discretion as to whether they share that information with the party along the way—though it is suggested that they generally keep it to themselves. One common example is knowing about any places of sanctuary (above): some Quests will tell you when this information is shared, but generally, it should be considered a reward, not something that would be volunteered independent of some accomplishment or quid pro quo.

Avoiding TPKs

A TPK is a total-party-kill: a situation in which every single PC is slain or otherwise defeated. Although some gaming groups—and indeed, some adventures—relish such an occurrence, most GMs would abhor this happening, and would want to prevent it at almost all costs.

Villainous and untouchable encounters are, by their nature and intent, potential TPK situations.

Veteran GMs whose style is not to encourage PC death will already have their own approach to this possibility, but here are some suggestions to try and prevent (or minimize!) TPKs in running through Dark Obelisk: Berinncorte.

Monster Descriptions

Descriptions that imply that a foe is beyond the party's capabilities are a good way of subtly telling them they should run. As the GM, your language, your detail, in setting up a potential TPK encounter should be far more lavish and extensive than any other type of encounter.

Hopefully the players take the hint!

Human Sacrifice

If the PCs haven't encountered a particular sort of monster before, they may not innately realize the level of danger involved. The GM can introduce a townsfolk, or a minor NPC, and have the villainous or untouchable monster slay them outright as a means of pointing out the danger.

"We Are Leaving!"

A mob of townsfolk may not, even together, measure up to the party's capabilities from a combat perspective, but they can physically grab the PCs and move them along. In the chaos of the moment, the GM can introduce a mob, in whose current the PCs are caught up, leaving them only a glimpse of the foe who may otherwise have been their demise.

Get Over Here

Any monster with a good grapple capability can also physically move the PCs around. If the party sees a formidable opponent, and draws weapons instead of starts to run, you can introduce more monsters, who immediately grapple each PC and drag them into a different area of the map. You can then play out the encounter with the lower-level grapplers.

New and Revised Rules for Act III

Lycanthropy and the Obelisk

Chaos and unpredictability swirl around the Obelisk: The Wisdom saves of lycanthropes to suppress their transformation during the onset of a full moon increases by +4 if faced within 100 ft. of an Obelisk.

In addition, merely being in the presence of the Dark Obelisk may trigger an unwanted transformation, as though there were a full moon. Once every hour a lycanthrope in human form spends within 500 ft. of an Obelisk, that creature must attempt a Wisdom save (without the above penalty) or transform for 1 hour.

New Auras

The Dark Obelisk generates a nearly-palpable aura of effects. Some are merely cosmetic, but others have a mechanical, in-game impact.

The following auras apply to Act Three.

Minor Obelisk Taint

Effect Lawful creatures within 30 ft. suffer a -1 penalty on their attack rolls, skill checks, and damage rolls if used against a creature with this aura. In addition, a creature with this aura may Take 10 on skill checks used in opposition to groups of creatures with at least one member who has the Lawful descriptor.

The effects of this aura do not stack with those of Greater Obelisk Taint, though a single creature may be under the impact of both auras simultaneously.

Origin All creatures with the Chaotic descriptor, who are within 50 ft. of an Obelisk, gain the benefit of this aura, which lasts for 1 hour after this proximity. In the context of this adventure, all Chaotic monsters have this aura.

Greater Obelisk Taint

Effect Lawful creatures within 30 ft. suffer a -2 penalty on their attack rolls, skill checks, and damage rolls if used against a creature with this aura. In addition, a creature with this aura may Take 10 on skill checks used in opposition to groups of creatures with at least one member who has the Lawful descriptor.

The effects of this aura do not stack with those of Minor Obelisk Taint, though a single creature may be under the impact of both auras simultaneously.

Origin All creatures with the Chaotic descriptor, who are within 20 ft. of an Obelisk, gain the benefit of this aura, which lasts for 10 minutes after this proximity.

New Potions

Darkserum (potion)

Value 50 gp; Weight ½ lb.; Materials darkserum; Nature faintly magical; Aura faint Chaos; Slot usable; CL n/a

This viscous liquid appears jet black when viewed directly, but out of the corner of one's eye, it appears to pulsate with a sinister dark purple glow, throbbing like an infernal heartbeat. Should one take a vial of darkserum within 50 ft. of an Obelisk, this purplish pulsing effect grows noticeably stronger; within 25 ft. of an Obelisk, the vial's colors rhythmically change from dark purple to black and back... though if you're that close to an Obelisk, chances are good that you have better things on your mind than a vial of this drug!

A vial of darkserum is the liquid form, and most common. To make it requires an ounce of powdered Obelisk; inhaling the compound in its powdered form (for example, while transporting or preparing darkserum) grants the same effects as ingesting the prepared solution.

Darkserum is incredibly rare in the Realm, and difficult to acquire. In Berinncorte, only Aramil the apothecary (page 515) has connections to acquire the compound.

Drug Type ingested or injury (inhaled, in powdered form); Addiction minor, Constitution DC 13; Effects 6 hours, +2 Str and +2 Cha, +2 competency bonus on Charisma (Persuasion), Wisdom (Perception), and Charisma (Deception) checks; Damage 1d4 Con

Minor Addiction: Type disease; Save Constitution DC 13; Onset 1 day; Frequency 1/day; Effect -2 penalty to Con plus shaken condition; Cure 2 consecutive saves

Construction Requirements powdered chunk of Obelisk; Cost 35 gp

 Note that in the context of this adventure, darkserum really has only one role to play: that Ash suffers from an addiction to it. Darkserum and its associated products, and the trade and manufacture of Obelisk-related crafts, have increased significance in the broader Adventure Path.

Blocked Paths & Broken Buildings

Nearly all of the buildings and structures in Berinncorte have suffered some damage as a result of the Obelisk Eruption. Some special rules apply to these areas of debris and fallen objects, as follows.

As with everything else in Dark Obelisk: Berinncorte, your gaming group is free to ignore or revise these rules, or apply different house rules, as suits your preferences.

Rubble

Unless otherwise indicated, all rubble counts as difficult terrain. This imposes a 2x movement penalty; that is, each square counts as two squares for movement purposes.

Obstacles

Some ruins and debris counts as having obstacles. Obstacles generally count as difficult terrain for the purposes of movement, but also require at least one skill check to navigate without additional adverse effect.

Usually, the context will advise what sort of skill check might be required to move safely through or around the obstacle(s) present, and what effects, if any, are applied if such a check is failed. If no such check is explicitly indicated, use the following as a default:

Default Obstacle

Dexterity (Acrobatics) DC 15; success means movement at difficult terrain speed (1 square counts as 2); failure knocks a character prone

Scaling and Grappling

In some areas, either an obstacle is so large it completely prevents horizontal movement past it, or damage to a building actually creates an opportunity to move among floors in ways not possible before the disaster.

Grappling hooks may be used to aid with ascend or descent; throwing a grappling hook requires a ranged attack roll as a thrown weapon; oppose this with an AC of 5 unless otherwise specified. A “hit” resolved in this manner means the hook has snagged something and can be considered secure for Strength (Athletics)ing purposes.

Without a grappling hook in place, the DC of any Strength (Athletics)ing challenge among the rubble of the city is increased by 4.

Most opportunities to Strength (Athletics) rubble indicate the numbers involved; if such statistics are missing, use the following default challenge as a guide:

Default Grappling

Strength (Athletics) DC 16; grappling hook AC 5; failure suffers 1d4 bludgeoning damage and knocks the character prone

Aftermath Random Encounters

Most locations in Berinncorte have their own separate Random Encounters table.

If the PCs are in a location that does not have its own explicit Random Encounters table, or if they are in between locations (for example, if they're in an alley, or if they're attempting to rest and memorize spells outside for whatever bizarre reason), roll on the following table every 10 minutes the party spends in the city, if they are not involved in other activities.

 Note that this is a fairly aggressive rate of rolling, and the possibilities for rolling an extremely challenging or “high-caliber” random encounter can be punishingly difficult. This is by design: remember, the point of Act 3 is to terrify the PCs, and, ideally, the players themselves. If they loiter about, only to run into some exceedingly straightforward run-of-the-mill random encounters, this is difficult to pull off.

The GM is encouraged to suppress these rolls at your own discretion. For example, if the party is actively engaged in a quest, and you feel that the momentum of the moment would be ruined by inserting a random encounter, simply don't roll!

-  Use Context C:
If the party is actively engaged in a quest, or if you prefer they remain focused on pressing immediate matters.
-  Use Context D:
If the PCs are actively flaunting the danger posed by the Obelisk and its forces, or to encourage storytelling momentum.

ABE-1: Lay Cleric

A priest dressed in robes bearing the colors and sigil of Zugul approaches you, her hands out. “What news, good folk? Are you in need of aid?”

This is a Clerical Lay Staff who has taken it upon herself to brave the streets, helping wherever she might. Although no spellcaster, she does bear .

1d4+1 potions of cure light wounds, which she will gladly share with the party if they ask.

For more advanced difficulty levels (page 19), upgrade the potions to moderate, serious, or critical wounds potions.

ABE-2: Wandering Bard

Quest: Wandering Bard

Summary: A lone and scared bard offers to help the party.

Rewards: Beneficial Bard spells cast on the party for a few encounters.

Locations: Any.

Key NPCs: None.

Kickoff: Random Encounter.

Description:

A charismatic woman dressed in puffy, eccentric garb stands leaning against a wall. In her hands is a lute; she is tuning it as you approach. As you get closer, you see her hands shake slightly, and she is biting her lower lip; it’s clear that her laid-back demeanor is but an act.

This is a bard who traveled into Berinncorte on her way elsewhere in the realm; the Obelisk Eruption has trapped her here, without friends, family, or a patron business. She’s terrified of what she’s seen already on the streets, and although some part of her has resigned herself to die here in the city, a larger, more boisterous part has decided that she will at the very least not go quietly.

She immediately befriends the PCs, asking if she might accompany them. If they decline, she will nevertheless follow them at a distance for protection; the party may notice her via a Wisdom (Perception) check opposed by the bard’s Dexterity (Stealth) check.

From a statistics standpoint, simply use the statblocks for Lingona, the bard, shown below.

The wandering bard will stay with the party for 1d4 of the next encounters, or until the PCs stop by any place of sanctuary. She will cast beneficial spells on the party, but will generally avoid melee herself if she can avoid it.

This Quest terminates if the bard is slain, or if she is separated from the party for any reason.

ABE-3: Temporarily Free for Hire

☐ Crouched in the shadows, gnawing on a turkey leg, is a middle-aged man in crimson robes. He waves you over,

This is Rhirem, the mercenary evoker whom the party may already have encountered, most notably in the Leaky Cask Tavern. In the aftermath of the Eruption, he has suspended his normal fee and will willingly accompany the party and cast spells on their behalf for the next 1d4-1 encounters, or until the PCs stop by any place of sanctuary (page 316).

Although this seems like an altruistic, harmonizing approach to the chaos, Rhirem remains Neutral Evil—he has simply calculated that this approach is the most likely way he can stay alive until he can escape the city. If an opportunity presents itself where he might benefit from betraying the party, he will take advantage of it immediately—but seeing as how all of the foes he and the PCs might face are chaotic, soulless, undead, or a combination thereof, it's not as though the spellcaster has many options to do so!

ABE-4: Church Acolyte

☐ A townsfolk approaches you. Underneath his tattered and grimy cloak, you catch a flash of clerical vestments. “Don’t say nothing, please,” he implores you. “Trying not to get a target on my back. There’s some few of us, of Zugul, wandering about as though common citizens, helping where we can. Are you wounded, my friends?”

This is a Zugul Church Acolyte who tells a true story:

he and a handful of his brethren are searching about, trying to help where they can. He has memorized 1d4 instances of cure light wounds; he will willingly cast all of these on any PC if they desire.

For more advanced difficulty levels (page 19), upgrade the spells to moderate, serious, or critical wounds spells.

ABE-5: Uncannily Quiet Zone

☐ You round a corner, and encounter... nothing. In a good way, that is: no hubbub, no monsters, no fireballs from the sky: nothing at all. It's a zone of eerily calm, amidst the craziness of the rest of the city. You innately feel as though you are safe here, somehow; that despite the proximity to the Obelisk and the cruel misfits it has brought forth, there is naught to disturb you for the moment.

The ebb and flow and general chaos generated by the Dark Obelisk occasionally align, and result in a strange calm: the eye in the storm. The party may rest and recover here, in a space of 20 ft. by 20 ft., without fear of random encounters.

It's a fleeting effect, however: 4d20 minutes after the party discovers the calm zone, the effect dissipates. It's presaged by a feeling in the PCs' stomachs that intuitively tells the party their peace is about to expire, 1 minute before it does.

ABE-6: A Glint in the Darkness

☐ In the bloody grime of the streets, you see a slight glimmer next to a dead body.

The half-elven corpse is of a townsfolk; the wounds suggest any number of different fates, but it's fairly clear the man was slain by one of the many Forces of the Obelisk.

Searching the body yields an unexpected treasure that may be of great use to the party.

🗡️ Looted Corpse

potions of cure moderate wounds (3x); 12 pp; masterwork dagger with jeweled hilt (615 gp); chain shirt; explorer's outfit (10 gp)

ABE-7: Solace from the Soulless

- ❑ A middle-aged citizen in ordinary dress rounds the corner, and bumps into you. Breathless, she apologizes, and aims to make haste away from you.

This is a more or less panicked Townfolk who is trying to run back to safety as quickly as possible. Locate the nearest place of sanctuary; that is her destination. She desperately does not want to linger; if the party delays her, they will have to do so by physically restraining her.

If the PCs attempt to slow her down or talk to her, she will say only that she must get to safety immediately, and tells the party of her destination, and that it is safe there.

From a strictly mercenary standpoint, the party benefits from knowing the location of at least one place of sanctuary as a result of this encounter. They may follow the lady if they wish; on their way, there will be no random encounters to impede their progress.

Aftermath General Encounters

These encounters represent an average level of challenge for the party.

- 🏠 Use Context A:
By default, or if no other Context applies.
- 🏠 Use Context B:
At nighttime.
- 🏠 Use Context C:

If the party is actively engaged in a quest, or if you prefer they remain focused on pressing immediate matters.

If the PCs are actively flaunting the danger posed by the Obelisk and its forces, or to encourage storytelling momentum.

ARE-1: Skeleton Attack

Roll on the following table to determine what manner of skeletons approach the party. Roll separately for each type of enemy; this means that there is a chance that multiple types of skeleton enemies will attack the PCs.

Table 53: Skeleton Attack Composition

Chance	Enemy	Description
60%	Human Skeletons	🎲 2d4+2 Human Skeletons
40%	Skeleton Rogues	🎲 2d4 Skeleton Rogues
15%	Skeleton Barbarians	🎲 1d4 Skeleton Barbarians

If any Skeleton Rogues are present in the assault, before the combat, make a 🎲 Wisdom (Perception) check on behalf of the PCs, opposed by each Skeleton Rogue's Charisma (Deception) check; make a separate check for each Skeleton Rogue, but compare it to only one PC (the one with the greatest Wisdom (Perception) skill). Failure on the part of the PCs means that Skeleton Rogue makes its first attack as a Sneak Attack.

Mindless and determined, skeletons of any nature will fight to the death.

ARE-2: Townsfolk Encounter

Roll on the following table to determine the nature of the encountered townsfolk:

Table 54: Townsfolk Attack Composition

Quest: Wounded Townsfolk

 Summary: A group of wounded townsfolk sits tending their wounds. The party may aid them if they desire.

 Rewards:  1 or 2 Reward Stars.

 Locations: Any.

 Key NPCs: None.

 Kickoff: Random Encounter.

 Description:

 A group of citizens sits huddled on the ground. Their drab clothing is stained here and there with mud and blood. As you approach, they appear to be attempting to tend their wounds... but it's clear they lack both supplies and skill.

 3d6 Townsfolk are here. They have all been wounded, most in residual damage, others by Forces of the Obelisk. They will fight back, but only out of necessity; under no circumstances will they attack the party on their own initiative.

The party may help them, ignore them, or assault them.

 If the party ignores them, then this quest ends without any real impact, though the GM is encouraged to consider penalizing any Good-aligned PCs (particularly Paladins) for ignoring a perfect opportunity to be of assistance to innocents.

Wounded Townsfolk (Ignore): Chaos +1

Ignoring the wounded innocents generates a Catalyst Impact:  Chaos +1.

 Helping the townsfolk can take two forms: healing them, and/or leading them to safety. Either act on its own merits a reward of  1 Reward Star; combining the two is worth 2 Reward Stars. (See “Places of Sanctuary”, page 316.) Unless this quest occurs when the party is already within 20 ft. of one of these safe places, the GM is encouraged to roll at least once on the Aftermath Random Encounters table (page 319) en route.

Wounded Townsfolk (Aid): Law +1

If the party proffers any degree of assistance, they produce a Catalyst Impact of  Law +1.

 Attacking what is obviously a group of beleaguered innocents should only be justifiable by a group of Evil-aligned PCs, and even then, the subsequent looting is paltry at best. The GM is encouraged to punish any non-Evil party in a manner deemed appropriate; one suggestion is to roll immediately on the Aftermath Untouchable Encounters table (page 392).

Wounded Townsfolk (Attack): Chaos +3

Picking a slam-dunk fight with wounded innocents creates a Catalyst Impact:  Chaos +3.

This quest ends when the party moves on, either from slaying the townsfolk, ignoring them, healing them, or having escorted them to safety.

Quest: Imperiled Townsfolk

 Summary: A group of townsfolk is set upon by monsters. The party may intervene or escape.

 Rewards:  1, 2, or 3 Reward Stars, plus possible XP for defeating the monsters.

 Locations: Any.

 Key NPCs: None.

 Kickoff: Random Encounter.

 Description:

2d8 Townsfolk scream as they are attacked by Forces of the Obelisk. Roll on the Aftermath Encounters table (page 322); if the result is a Quest or does not involve at least one monster, ignore the result, and roll again. When you have rolled a “monster result”; ignore everything in that encounter except for the monster(s) involved: those are the foes faced in this quest. For example, if you roll ARE-1, make the subsequent 2d4+2 roll to determine how many Skeletons are faced.

Whatever monster(s) rolled, these foes begin the encounter attacking the Townsfolk. They do not yet notice the PCs.

The party may help the townsfolk, flee to save themselves from the monsters, or hide, waiting for the monsters to kill the townsfolk so they can loot the bodies.

If the party ignores the townsfolk and flees, they may or may not be successful. Make a Wisdom (Perception) check for the monster(s), opposed by the PC with the weakest Stealth skill; success for the monster means the party was noticed; it is up to the GM as to whether one or more monsters then set off to attack the PCs separately. If the party is weakened, and running low on resources, then fleeing is a viable and worthy option. If they sneak away successfully, then this quest ends, though at the GM’s discretion, returning to the site of the incident will reveal a great deal of blood but no bodies... leaving the party to wonder what became of the poor townsfolk after the assault.

If the party is well-prepared, and still chooses to flee, the GM is encouraged to consider penalizing any Good-aligned PCs (particularly Paladins) for ignoring a perfect opportunity to be of assistance to innocents.

Imperiled Townsfolk (Ignore): Chaos +1

Ignoring the plight of imperiled innocents creates a Catalyst Impact: Chaos +1.

A party with one or more Good-aligned PCs in a condition where they are able to help should join the fray, fighting back the monsters in defense of the innocents. Should they succeed at defeating the enemy, the party should benefit from 1 Reward Star in addition to the XP for the monsters themselves. Afterwards, if they heal or tend to any wounded townsfolk, they should gain the benefit of a second Reward Star. Finally, if the party is so inclined, they may lead the townsfolk to safety; doing so successfully should earn a third and final Reward Star. (See “Places of Sanctuary”.) Unless this quest occurs when the party is already within 20 ft. of one of these safe places, the GM is encouraged to roll at least once on the Aftermath Random Encounters table en route.

Imperiled Townsfolk (Defend):

Law +2

Defending the townsfolk, whether successful or not, produces a Catalyst Impact (page 41) of Law +2.

An Evil-aligned party may try to hide and wait out the attack, seeing if the monsters leave the bodies of their victims so the party might then loot them. Doing so requires stealth—make at least one initial Wisdom (Perception) check for the monster(s), opposed by the PC with the weakest Stealth skill. Success for the monster is as described above; one or more of the monsters peels off from the townsfolk attack and targets the PCs.

Taking this “wait and loot” approach should merit significant punishment for a Good-aligned party—for example, rolling automatically on the Aftermath Untouchable Encounters table and having a much more formidable foe attack the waiting party!

Imperiled Townsfolk (Attack): Chaos +5

Murdering innocents who are already imperiled results in a Catalyst Impact: Chaos +5.

No matter what happens to the party while they hide, or the moral consequences inflicted by the GM’s whim for their choice of action, the monsters do not leave much to reward the PCs: they are unquestionably more than a match for the townsfolk. Detail-oriented GMs may choose to roll out the encounter, but it’s no contest: in a matter of rounds (say, 3d4), the contest is over. Once the citizens have been slain, the monsters drag their bodies away, toward the site of the Dark Obelisk in Town Square. Scattered across the ground in the macabre wake is 2d20 cp and a rusty dagger.

Revenants or other murder-motivated undead who happen upon the party later in the adventure may be sourced from this incident—in other words, the GM is encouraged to present select subsequent encounters as being re-animated townsfolk from this event.

This quest ends when the party moves on, either from waiting for the townsfolk to perish, fleeing from the scene, fighting back the monsters and/or healing them, and/or having escorted them to safety.

Quest: Maniacal Vagrant

Summary: A possibly-insane vagabond runs across the party; how they react determines how volatile the situation becomes.

Rewards: 1 Reward Star.

Locations: Any.

Key NPCs: None.

Kickoff: Random Encounter.

? Description:

A man dressed in shabby, filthy rags is heard and smelt before he is seen. Rambling loudly and without heed for the possible dangerous attention he might attract, he careens around a corner and stumbles brashly into the party without barely noticing. His ramblings stop for a moment as he picks himself up off the ground, but he quickly returns to what seems to be a tirade against a mingled hodgepodge of topics. These include, but are not limited to: the establishment of government of any form; the imposition of law over beings of free will; the institution of marriage; those who flaunt the institution of marriage; women of low moral fiber; men of high self esteem; transgender elves who do not return the vagrant's earnest missives... and so on.

The party has a few options, here: they may extricate themselves from the bizarre man, they can attack him, or they can attempt conversation.

↪ Attempting to leave the situation may be interpreted as a slight: roll a D6: on a 1-3, the vagrant lets the party leave, and begins spewing his thoughts in an entirely different direction; on a 4-5, he pursues the party, asking pointedly whether they agree with his beliefs or not; on a 6, he misinterprets the PCs' movements as a threat, and attacks the nearest PC wildly.

↪ Maniacal Vagrant (Ignore):
☒ Chaos +1

Trying to ignore the vagrant, no matter what his reaction, creates a Catalyst Impact: ☒ Chaos +1.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

↪ Attacking the man is almost certainly an easy win for the PCs, as despite his vehemence and eccentricity, he is but a simple commoner after all. Aside from the standard possessions of a Townfolk, his rags bear indecipherable scribblings and a broken piece of black charcoal which appears to have been used to compose them.

↪ Maniacal Vagrant (Fight):
☒ Chaos +3

Whether forced into it, or if it is their first choice of action, battling the vagrant results in a Catalyst Impact of ☒ Chaos +3.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

↪ Trying to speak with the man may bear some fruit: make a Charisma (Persuasion) check, opposed by the vagrant's Wisdom (Perception) skill. Success for the party means they placate him, and may leave without further incident. Success by 5 points or more means they have gotten through to the man; not only does he let the PCs go, but he imparts a random piece of Rumor and Lore that is True (roll once on the table; if the result is not True, keep rerolling until a True result is obtained). Succeeding in this fashion should also grant the succeeding PC ☀ 1 Reward Star.

↪ Maniacal Vagrant (Talk):
♥ Love +1

Successfully talking the vagrant down produces a Catalyst Impact of ♥ Love +1.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

The GM is encouraged to roleplay interactions with the Maniacal Vagrant if the gaming group is of a mind to have fun with the conversation. The quest ends if the vagrant is slain, if the party manages to escape him, or if they succeed in the aforementioned Charisma (Persuasion) check.

🏆 Quest: Lend a Hand

📖 Summary: The PCs come across a group of looters in the act.

🏆 Rewards: Up to ☀ 2 Reward Stars.

📍 Locations: Any.

👤 Key NPCs: None.

🏁 Kickoff: Random Encounter.

? Description:

Pick a retail establishment (e.g., Textiles Shop, Butcher's Shop, etc.) near the party's location. A group of 2d6 Townfolk are loitering about the building; some appear to be standing guard while others are ransacking the interior. It's pretty clear these townfolk are in the act of looting the business, taking the opportunity of the chaos and abandoned building to collect what valuables they can.

↪ Good-aligned PCs will likely want to approach the looters and get them to stop. Getting the looters to stop and take the party seriously, without violence, requires an initial Charisma (Persuasion) or Charisma (Intimidation) check, opposed by the looters' Charisma (Deception) check; failure means the party is simply ignored, and success means they stop and listen to what the PCs have to say. Next, perform a second skill check using the same two skills; failure means the looters return to looting immediately, but success this second time convinces the looters to cease their crime and disperse. This state should benefit the testing PC with ☀ 1 Reward Star. If the party wishes, they may attempt a third skill check, this time with a -2 circumstance penalty for the PCs; success will convince the looters to return any valuables they stole from this business; failure means the looters run away as quickly as possible. Success with this third check should merit a second Reward Star for the succeeding PC.

Lend a Hand (Talk):

 Law +2 / +4

Successfully talking the mob down creates a Catalyst Impact of  Law +2; succeeding at the optional subsequent check to get them to return the stolen goods increases this impact to +4.

 The party can simply ignore the looters. The noise made by the criminals, however, prompts a roll on the Aftermath Random Encounters table.

Lend a Hand (Ignore):

 Chaos +1

Letting him go entirely generates a Catalyst Impact:  Chaos +2.

 Evil-aligned PCs, or those with a particularly vicious sense of justice and law, might attack the looters. They are only Townfolk, so the battle should easily sway in favor of the party; as soon as the first of their number falls in battle, the remaining looters will attempt to run away. The resulting fracas, however, necessitates a roll on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context D.

Lend a Hand (Attack):

 Chaos +2

Attacking the mob results in a Catalyst Impact:  Chaos +2.

This quest terminates if the looters disperse, if either of the Aftermath Random Encounter table rolls results in “no encounter”, or once an encounter spawned via either of those rolls is resolved.

Quest: Panicked Mob

 Summary: A swarm of agitated townfolk approaches the party.

 Rewards: Up to  2 Reward Stars.

 Locations: Any.

 Key NPCs: None.

 Kickoff: Random Encounter.

 Description:

Shrieks and shouts, incoherent but urgent, presage the arrival of a host of Townfolk in a panicked state.

(As a reminder, panicked creatures must drop anything they hold, and flee at maximum speed from the source of their fear—in this case, the Dark Obelisk in Town Square—as well as any other dangers they encounter, along a random path. They may not take any other actions. In addition, these characters take a -2 penalty on all saving throws, skill checks, and ability checks. If cornered, a panicked creature will cower, and does not attack, typically using the total defense action in combat.)

These  4d12 citizens are dressed in all manner of outfit and uniform—the mob even contains 1d6 Berinncorte Militia! Representing all races and walks of life, the common folk in this mob are the panicked embodiment of “safety in numbers”; their shocked and chaotic state has resulted in what amounts to a sentient school of fish. It’s unclear what, if anything, they are running from, and even if the PCs have discovered that there are indeed some scant locations in the city that might be considered safe (see Places of Sanctuary), it’s obvious that the mob itself isn’t headed in the direction of any of those places.

Astute and possibly Good-aligned PCs will swiftly come to the conclusion that without outside intervention, or a sudden moment of clarity, the panicked mob is doomed, as it’s only a matter of time until the Forces of the Obelisk discover them.

 The party may simply ignore the mob, trying to stay out of their way. Even this is not without peril: make an  Dexterity (Acrobatics) check for each PC, at a DC equal to half the number of citizens in the mob—so for example, if the mob consists of 30 townfolk, the DC is 15. Success means that PC manages to dance out of the way or otherwise avoid the tumult; failure means the PC is knocked prone. Being knocked to the ground in this manner inflicts no damage (other than to one’s pride), but the GM should immediately roll on the Aftermath Random Encounters table to determine whether the mob was running away from a particular threat that has now followed them—or if perhaps the noise and chaos of the throng has attracted some attention. If an encounter is rolled on that table in this manner, it appears soon after the mob has run away from the scene, leaving the PCs to deal with the encounter on their own.

Panicked Mob (Ignore):

 Chaos +2

Ignoring the mob, regardless of the consequences described above, also results in a Catalyst Impact:  Chaos +2.

 Daring PCs may try to subdue or talk sense into the mob, with an ultimate aim of guiding them to safety as opposed to letting them run rampant about the town. The old adage holds, however, that while individual people may be smart, mobs tend not to be! Before the mob rushes into the party, there’s enough time for a single  Charisma (Persuasion) or Charisma (Intimidation) check, at a DC equal to half the number of townfolk, minus 2. For example, if the mob is comprised of 24 citizens, the DC is 14. Failure means the mob tramples the party; make  Dexterity (Acrobatics) checks for each PC as described with the “ignore” option above, except that failure not only knocks a PC prone but inflicts 1d4 points of crushing damage as they are trodden upon by their fellow man.

Succeeding at this Charisma (Persuasion)/Charisma (Intimidation) check gives the mob pause, and they slow to a stop. The party may at this point try and extricate themselves from the situation without additional risk (either of being knocked down, or attracting further encounters); doing so merits a single Reward Star for the PC who made the check.

Panicked Mob (Talk):

Law +1

Successfully calming the mob creates a Catalyst Impact of Law +1.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

Alternately, the PCs may attempt to escort the mob to safety at this point—see Places of Sanctuary. Along the way, the GM should roll at least once on the Aftermath Random Encounters table to determine if something interesting occurs en route. Note that the mob and the PCs will be traveling as a group, so any encounter that impacts the entire party will affect the mob as well—for example, a Voidstorm may end up slaying many of the mob's members.

Successfully delivering at least one citizen to safety should generate an additional Reward Star for the party; this should apply to each individual PC if the group fought off at least one encounter along the way if no citizens were harmed.

Panicked Mob (Escort):

Law +1, Love +3

Escorting members of the mob to safety generates a Catalyst Impact of Law +1, Love +3.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

The players and GM are encouraged to roleplay the interactions rather than simply roll dice and compare numbers, but the extent to which this is done, and the level of seriousness with which it is undertaken, will be a function of your gaming group and its personality!

This quest concludes once the mob rushes past the PCs, if the PCs leave the scene after talking the mob down, if the mob is slain, or if the mob is led to safety.

Quest: Suicidal Townsfolk

Summary: Some citizens have been driven almost insane by the Eruption, and have developed suicidal tendencies.

Rewards: Up to 2 Reward Stars.

Locations: Any.

Key NPCs: None.

Kickoff: Random Encounter.

Description:

For your average citizen of Berinncorte, not only life, but reality itself has been turned upside down in a handful of calamitous moments. It's enough to drive some to loot, others to viciousness... and some to insanity.

The PCs come across 1d4 Townsfolk who are clearly not right in the head. They seem normal in dress and appearance, but their demeanor is just fundamentally off.

Driven to the brink of sanity by the events of the Eruption, these townsfolk are doomed to try and kill themselves. How, exactly, depends on the actions of the PCs in these crucial first moments when they meet.

If the party ignores the townsfolk, or tries to leave, roll immediately on the Aftermath Random Encounters table; ignore any result that does not involve a monster, and keep rerolling until you get a result that involves at least one monster. If the encounter rolled describes the enemy as attacking the party, instead have the monster(s) appear, but at a slight distance. Before the party or the monster(s) can act, something snaps in the minds of the townsfolk, and they begin walking resignedly toward the menace. Even without a skill check, their intent is clear: commit suicide by walking into the face of certain doom.

Suicidal Townsfolk (Ignore):

Chaos +1

Ignoring—or attempting to ignore—the townsfolk creates a Catalyst Impact: Chaos +1.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

This scenario will all but force the hand of any Good-aligned PCs, who will feel compelled to intervene. If the party engages with the monster(s) in combat, it's enough to disrupt the suicidal thoughts of the townsfolk momentarily; they shamle off as the fight commences in earnest. The party should receive 1 Reward Star for joining battle with the threat in defense of the innocent.

Suicidal Townsfolk (Defend):

Law +2

Defending the townsfolk from the monster(s) produces a Catalyst Impact of Law +2.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

Assuming the party is successful in the battle, they may leave the scene with no further impact, in which case this quest ends.

Alternately, a PC may counsel the suicidal townsfolk; a “pep talk” conducted via a Charisma (Persuasion) or Charisma (Intimidation) check at DC 13 will not fix them completely, but will at least help keep suicidal thoughts at bay for a while.

Truly thorough PCs may lead the townsfolk to safety; the recently-suicidal citizens will come willingly, and will not cause trouble en route. On the way, make a roll on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context C, to determine if their journey is perilous. Successfully delivering at least one townsfolk to safety should benefit the party of 1 additional Reward Star.

Suicidal Townsfolk (Escort):

Law +1, Love +2

There is a Catalyst Impact of Law +1, Love +2 if the PCs escort any townsfolk to safety.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

The party may attack the townsfolk, either out of greed for what paltry looting they might anticipate, or out of a somewhat perverse sense of giving the suicidal citizens what they appear to want. No matter the motive, the battle will be swift, as the citizens do not fight back (count them as flat-footed for the battle, or streamline it by assuming that it's straightforward to slit the throats of willing victims). The GM is encouraged to consider possible penalties for Good-aligned PCs who perform, or witness and do not stop, this approach.

In the hubbub of the slaughter, however, Forces of the Obelisk may take notice: make a roll on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, but use Context B, to represent the evil and chaotic nature of the action being taken, and the likelihood that such an act has of attracting foes. Needless to say, there is no additional treasure to be had other than the standard possessions of common townsfolk.

Suicidal Townsfolk (Attack):

Chaos +3

Fighting the townsfolk results in a Catalyst Impact: Chaos +3.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

This quest concludes if the townsfolk perish, if the remaining alive ones are delivered to safety, or if the party successfully leaves the scene.

Quest: This Is Not Happening

Summary: A citizen appears to be in complete denial about what has happened to the city, to his own possible peril.

Rewards: Up to 2 Reward Stars.

Locations: Any.

Key NPCs: None.

Kickoff: Random Encounter.

Description:

The party happens upon a townsfolk, dressed nicely, and in what seem to be good spirits. It's a bizarre sight in a town that is partly destroyed, where fire rains from the darkened sky, and where monsters roam the streets freely.

The woman citizen spies the party, and hails them. If they approach, she greets them warmly, asking if they have any plans on this fine bright day. She herself, she tells them, plans on heading to Town Square to do some shopping, and maybe even see a show.

Since Town Square as it was no longer exists, this should give the PC some pause.

The GM is encouraged to have fun roleplaying the interaction with unquestionable sincerity; the players should interpret the woman as genuinely believing that things are completely normal, and conclude that her mind has warped around the calamity of the Eruption and this is her way of dealing with it as best as her sanity is able.

The party can hold a conversation on the woman's own terms, interact as though she were completely correct, and part ways with her as quickly as possible. One might consider the moral impact of such an approach on Good-aligned PCs: one might argue that there's no harm done, but if this delusional woman truly means to walk into Town Square, her doom is all but certain, and leaving her to this plan is equivalent to letting her die without trying to help. Aside from alignment penalties, which your gaming group may not even enforce or consider, there is no further impact... other than the woman's fate laying on the conscience of the party!

This Is Not Happening (Pretend):

Chaos +1

Pretending as though the woman is acting in a normal fashion creates a Catalyst Impact: Chaos +1.

PCs wishing to help may try and talk sense into the woman. You can go through the motions of making a Charisma (Persuasion) or Charisma (Intimidation) check, but such checks are at DC 28—representing the extent of damage to the mind and spirit of this citizen, and the intractability of her condition. Success should benefit all but the highest-level parties of 1 Reward Star immediately; although this does not “fix” the citizen, it at least reminds her of enough danger to dissuade her from her suicidally-insane plan.

This is Not Happening (Talk):

Love +1

Successfully talking the woman down creates a Catalyst Impact of Love +1.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

Though good Samaritans may wish to escort the woman to safety. If the PCs have already been successful at the DC 28 skill check mentioned above, the woman will walk with the party willingly and without further complaint; otherwise, the PCs must first succeed at a DC 16 Charisma (Persuasion) or Charisma (Intimidation) check to coerce her into following. The GM and players are encouraged to roleplay this interaction; one convincing approach is to suggest to the woman that they go and check out a good book, for example. Along the way, the party and their charge may suffer unwanted attentions: make a roll on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, but use Context C. Successfully delivering the woman to a place of sanctuary benefits the party of a further Reward Star.

☞ This is Not Happening (Escort): ♥ Love +4

Going the extra mile, and escorting the poor woman to safety, results in a Catalyst Impact of ♥ Love +4.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

It's theoretically possible that the party may simply attack the woman. She will fight back, though as she is a normal townsfolk, the combat should be brief and decisive in favor of the PCs. As soon as the party declares their intent to assault the poor innocent, however, the GM should roll on Aftermath Random Encounters table, but use Context D; any resulting encounter will intercede immediately, likely as the PCs are attacking the poor woman. Unless the party makes finishing the hapless innocent off their priority, the woman will flee safely as soon as the attentions of the PCs are diverted.

☞ This Is Not Happening (Attack): ⊗ Chaos +5

Fighting—and almost certainly slaying—a mentally unbalanced innocent produces a Catalyst Impact: ⊗ Chaos +5.

This quest terminates when the woman is left to venture to Town Square on her own, if she dies, or if the party escorts her to safety.

🏆 Quest: Drunk Harbinger

Summary: A drunk stumbles about, spewing possibly-accurate rumors and lore.

Rewards: Rumors and Lore tidbits.

Locations: Any.

Key NPCs: None.

Kickoff: Random Encounter.

Description:

An inebriated townsfolk stumbles around in front of the party. Whether the man was already drunk when the Obelisk Erupted, or if he turned to drink as a means of calming his burgeoning panic, it's unclear.

If the party ignores him or leaves, this quest terminates with no further impact. The man is harmless, and arguably better off than many other citizens who are forced to face the chaos that plagues the city without benefit of the drunken haze in which he finds himself. Notably, this generates zero Catalyst Impact.

The party can try to help him. No amount of skill checks or threats will sober the man up, however; if by chance some magic or other method is used to remove his impairment, he becomes single-minded in pursuit of more booze, and flees immediately to the Leaky Cask Tavern.

☞ Drunk Harbinger (Help): ♥ Love +1

Offering, or trying, to help the drunk may not be successful, but nevertheless results in a Catalyst Impact of ♥ Love +1.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

Another option is to simply listen. This is likely the most valuable for the party, as between rumor, gossip, and pure conjecture, the drunk is a veritable font of information. Make a secret roll on the Rumors and Lore table, and convey the information; it's unclear whether the tidbit is true or not, and the drunk himself isn't quite certain.

If the party then hangs around to listen further, make a roll on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context C; if this results in an encounter, then the drunk disperses just as the encounter begins and is not further seen.

If the roll does not result in an encounter, make a further roll on the Rumors and Lore table, as above. Although your rolls are secret, and therefore the party may be ignorant of their possible peril, the PCs may continue to press their luck forever in this manner!

☞ Drunk Harbinger (Listen): ♥ Love +1

Calmly listening to the madman creates a Catalyst Impact of ♥ Love +1.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

It's possible an Evil party may want to slay the drunk. Although he fights back, remember that he is drunk; out of simplicity, simply apply a -2 penalty to all rolls the man makes (e.g., attack rolls, skill checks, etc.). As such, he's likely no match at all for the party, and will be defeated easily. If this attack is not consistent with the party's alignment and behavior, however, the GM is encouraged to roll on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context B.

☛ Drunk Harbinger (Attack): ☒ Chaos +3

Needlessly attacking the drunk produces a Catalyst Impact: ☒ Chaos +3.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

This quest ends if the drunk dies, if any encounter is rolled, or if the party leaves the area.

ARE-3: Environmental Encounter

Roll on the following table to determine the nature of the environmental occurrence:

Table 55: Environmental Encounters

D%	Encounter
01-35	Falling Timbers
36-50	A Small Spark
51-65	Afterquake
66-75	Fire Rain
76-85	Micro-Eruption
86-95	Fireball
96-00	Voidstorm

Falling Timbers

If this encounter is rolled while the party is not nearby a building of some sort, treat it as no result and ignore the quest.

A piece of the nearest building falls on the party. It doesn't matter if the most proximate building is one that hasn't suffered a great deal of obvious damage; remember that the Obelisk Eruption was a significant earthquake-level event, causing widespread structural impairment to even the most cosmetically-intact establishment.

There is a 🏠 30% chance the falling debris is aflame; this makes it easier to spot as it falls, but causes more damage if it's not avoided.

Each and every PC is automatically engaged in the following skill challenge:

▲ Falling Timbers

First Check: DC 18 Wisdom (Perception) (16 if aflame) to notice the falling building; success cancels subsequent checks.

Second Check: DC 15 Dexterity (Acrobatics) to avoid the debris; failure inflicts 2d6 points of crushing damage plus a possible 1d8 points of fire damage; success cancels subsequent checks.

Third Check: DC 12 Strength to dislodge one's self from the debris; failure inflicts 1d4 points of crushing damage plus a possible 1d8 points of fire damage, and necessitates performing this check again; success quits the challenge.

If each PC succeeds in at least one of these checks, the entire party benefits from 🌟 1 Reward Star.

🏆 Quest: A Small Spark

📖 Summary: The PCs notice that part of a building has caught fire. They may intervene, or ignore the incident.

🏆 Rewards: 🌟 1 Reward Star.

📍 Locations: Any.

👤 Key NPCs: None.

▶ Kickoff: Random Encounter.

❓ Description:

The PCs (randomize, or simply select the one with the highest Wisdom (Perception) skill) see a fireball streak through the air and strike the nearest building. The smoking cinder appears to have inflicted no serious damage... but as the party watches, the husk of the object pulses, and a small fire starts.

Options at this point include doing nothing, or trying to quench the burgeoning flames.

🔄 Busy or disinterested PCs, or those weakened and in no mood to stick around any longer than necessary, can simply ignore the situation. This generates no reward, of course, but should also not inflict any penalty, regardless of the party's alignment: there are many fires and ruined building pieces in the city right now, and even the most stalwart and well-intentioned group of adventurers simply cannot solve everything!

☛ A Small Spark (Ignore): ☒ Chaos +1

Knowingly ignoring a burgeoning fire creates a Catalyst Impact: ☒ Chaos +1.

🔄 Alternately, PCs can try and put the fire out. It's far from a blaze, so even something as minimal as slapping a standard-issue blanket atop the spark is sufficient to remedy the situation. Assuming that such an action is in keeping with the party's alignment and character, the PC who herself sets things right should be granted 1 Reward Star... but immediately afterwards, the GM should roll on the Aftermath Encounters table, using Context C, to determine whether the incident has attracted the attention of Forces of the Obelisk.

A Small Spark (Quench):

Law +1

Helping to put out a fire that may have caused a great deal of damage results in a Catalyst Impact of Law +1.

This quest ends if the party leaves the scene, or if they successfully put the fire out. No significant damage to the building in question is inflicted as a result of the fire, either way.

Afterquake

In the aftermath of the Dark Obelisk's Eruption, aftershocks and tremors continue to ravage the city of Berinncorte. This encounter reflects that such a seismic event has occurred.

Although the immediate impact is somewhat negligible—falling down is the worst that might be feared!—it may betoken a greater threat afterwards.

First, make a DC 17 Dexterity (Acrobatics) check for each PC; any who fail are knocked prone.

Then, immediately roll on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context D, to determine if the afterquake brings with it any other foes. Monsters introduced via this roll should appear immediately, while any PCs are still prone, and the first round of combat should commence with knocked-down characters still in that position of defenselessness.

Aside from the rewards associated with a possible encounter determined by the roll mentioned above, the Afterquake event itself brings with it no benefit.

Micro-Eruption

The ground quakes, and your world is shaken. Your vision blurs, and your nostrils burn, as the ground ruptures; fissures appear, glowing an ominous and malignant purplish-black beneath your feet.

This is a much smaller, isolated version of the Dark Obelisk itself erupting in Town Square. Although the fissures will not grow large enough for any PCs to fall into, the incident should still be portrayed as a terrifying event.

Each and every PC is automatically engaged in the following skill challenge:

Micro-Eruption

First Check: DC 15 Wisdom (Perception) to notice the ground cracking, and to step out of the way; success cancels subsequent checks.

Second Check: DC 16 Dexterity (Acrobatics) to dance out of the way of the fissures; failure knocks the PC prone, and inflicts 1d4 points of electrical damage; success cancels subsequent checks.

Third Check: Another DC 16 Dexterity (Acrobatics) to pick one's self up and move out of the way amidst the tremors; failure means the PC remains prone, and inflicts another 1d4 points of electricity damage, and necessitates performing this check again until successful or until assisted out of the way by a friendly PC; success quits the challenge.

If each PC succeeds in at least one of the first two checks, the entire party benefits from 1 Reward Star.

Immediately after all PCs have attempted the First Check, roll on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context D, to determine if the fissure brings with it any other foes. Monsters introduced via this roll should appear immediately, while any PCs are still prone, and the first round of combat should commence with knocked-down characters still in that position of defenselessness.

Aside from the rewards associated with a possible encounter determined by the roll mentioned above, the Micro-Eruption event itself brings with it no benefit.

Fire Rain

Airborne ciders streak the sky above you. The smoke-trailing motes appear tiny, but sizzle the air about them with a malignant heat.

Define a 40 ft. by 40 ft. "target" with the PCs at its center; this is the area affected by the Fire Rain. Any creatures within this area during the rain will suffer fire damage.

For mechanical purposes, treat this as a Trap which attacks each PC, every round they remain in the rain. Note that "Fort with shield" indicates that any PC bearing a shield, and who passes a Constitution check, suffers no damage that round. A PC bearing a Tower Shield may use it to protect themselves and one other creature of up to their own Size; the protected must still make and pass their own Constitution save in order to zero-out the damage that round.

Fire Rain (CR 1)

Type Environmental; Trigger none; Reset n/a

Effect Atk +5 melee (1d8 fire; Constitution DC 16 halves; Fort with shield negates)

The Fire Rain lasts for  2d12 rounds, but hopefully the party moves out of the way more quickly than the rain lasts!

There is no XP or other reward for this encounter.

Voidstorm

 The air breaks open before your eyes, splitting reality asunder. It seems that an extremely isolated ribbon of existence has simply been ripped apart by a cosmic blade; beyond is a blackened and tumultuous field that your eyes have difficulty interpreting. Surrounding the void is what appears to be a hurricane, writ small, with tiny pellets of black and silver whipping around the phenomenon like a dread hailstorm.

A voidstorm is a hyper-localized weatherlike phenomenon caused by a conflux of order and chaos. Visually, it takes the form of a miniature hurricane or thunderstorm; instead of rain, however, there are micro-pellets of voidstone. The entire storm is harmful to living beings.

Define a 30 ft. by 30 ft. “target” with the PCs at its center; this is the area affected by the Voidstorm. Any creatures within this area during the storm will suffer electricity damage.

For mechanical purposes, treat this as a Trap which attacks each PC, every round they remain in the storm.

Voidstorm (CR 2)

Effect Atk +8 melee (2d6 electricity; Constitution DC 18 halves)

The Voidstorm lasts  2d6 rounds, after which it collapses in upon itself with a reverberant slurp sound that leaves a clap of thunder in its wake. No other evidence of the storm remains afterward; the voidstone pellets are sucked back into the tear in reality.

There is no XP or other reward for this encounter, other than being able to share a very impressive story with tavern patrons that is ultimately not believed for a second.

Fireball

 You hear a shrill noise pierce the air above you. With no further warning, a cinder sphere, ablaze in a brilliant heat, smashes into your party.

Though the fissures beneath the Dark Obelisk contain much in the way of horrid monsters, as well as a pathway back to their origin, there's also the fundamental nature of the Realm and the lava core underneath its terrain. The warped and chaotic magic that has made the Eruption possible, and sustains its presence, causes strange things to occur from a physical perspective.

In this scenario, such phenomena result in a fireball hurling through the air.

Treat this as a fireball, as per the spell, cast by a sixth-level sorcerer (CL 6), targeting the center of the party. Although the spell hits its target automatically, there's no sentience or intent behind the blast, so each PC is allowed a preliminary  Wisdom (Perception) check at DC 18 allows them to dodge out of the area before the fireball comes closer.

For those PCs who fail this initial check, a  Dexterity save at DC 14 halves the normal 6d6 points of fire-based damage that ensues.

There is no XP or other reward for this encounter, other than possibly avoiding damage!

Giant Skelepede Attack

Burrowing up through the ground, or simply scuttling along the ground, are  2d4+1 Giant Skelepedes. They attack the party immediately, and fight without retreat.

They automatically catch the party by surprise and enjoy a surprise round of combat, unless at least one PC can succeed in a passive  Wisdom (Perception) check opposed by the Giant Skelepedes' Dexterity (Stealth) check.

There is no treasure to be found amongst the bones of the defeated monsters.

Dark is the Night That Covers Me

Lurking in the shadows of the city near the PCs are  1d4 Dark Stalkers.

They automatically catch the party by surprise and enjoy a surprise round of combat, unless at least one PC can succeed in a passive  Wisdom (Perception) check opposed by the Dark Stalkers' Dexterity (Stealth) check.

Aside from the normal possessions carried by the party's foes, there is no treasure to be found amongst the bones of the defeated monsters.

Two heads Are Better Than One

A grumble, a snort, and a thudding sound herald the arrival of the party's latest foe: a solitary Ettin, who is stalking through the city streets in search of meat and entertainment. The party qualifies as both, so the Ettin launches into combat immediately upon seeing the PCs.

If any member of the party passes a passive  Wisdom (Perception) check opposed by the Ettin's Dexterity (Stealth) check, the PCs hear the approach of the lumbering creature before it knows of them, and they gain the advantage for a surprise round of combat.

Aside from the normal items borne by the Ettin, there is no loot to be gained from this encounter; however, given the somewhat escalated difficulty of the Ettin as a random encounter, at the GM's discretion, the party may benefit of  1 Reward Star in addition to the standard XP gained for defeating the monster.

Implacable Slurry of Doom

Roll on the following table to determine the nature of the ooze-based attack:

Table 57: Ooze-Based Encounters

D%	Enemy	Description
01-50	Garden Ooze	 1d4 Garden Oozes
51-80	Gelatinous Cube	 1d4 Gelatinous Cubes
81-00	Gray Ooze	 1d2 Gray Oozes

Unless the party is blatantly flouting the danger posed by the post-Eruption environs of the city, they automatically see their slushy, translucent foe first, and thus gain a surprise attack round to initiate combat (or alternately, to get a head start on fleeing the danger!).

There is no treasure to be found following this encounter; however, given the somewhat escalated difficulty of the creatures as a random encounter, at the GM's discretion, the party may benefit of 1 Reward Star in addition to the standard XP gained for defeating the monster(s).

Night's Terrible Wings

So many citizens keep their eyes and heads down, or at best levelled at their fellow street travelers. Most forget that in times of true terror, foes may come from on high in the third dimension. As a result, they may miss the signs that herald an attack by 1d4 Giant Vultures.

PCs may attempt a passive Wisdom (Perception) check, opposed by the Giant Vulture's Dexterity (Stealth) check; the PCs take a -4 circumstance penalty for not being in the habit of scanning the skies. Failure on the part of all PCs means the Vulture(s) gain the advantage of a surprise round of combat.

The vulture(s) bear no treasure.

That Sound, That Awful Sound

1d4 Howlers attack the party.

Make a passive Wisdom (Perception) check on behalf of each PC, opposed by the Howlers' Dexterity (Stealth) check. Failure on the part of all PCs means the Howler(s) spot the PCs first, and benefit from a surprise round of combat.

The howler(s) bear no treasure.

A Taste for Flesh

With a shamble and a leap, 2d6 Ghouls attack the party.

Make a passive Wisdom (Perception) check on behalf of each PC, opposed by the Ghouls' Dexterity (Stealth) check. Success on the part of at least one PC means they spot the Ghouls first, and may fight a surprise round of combat before their foes join the fray fully.

The Ghoul(s) bear no treasure.

Ogre, Ogre

1d4 Ogres assault the party.

Make a passive Wisdom (Perception) check on behalf of each PC, opposed by the Ogres' Dexterity (Stealth) check. If at least one PC succeeds, they spot the Ogres first, and may fight a surprise round of combat before their foes join the fray fully.

The Ogres bear no treasure aside from their possessions.

The Sting of Darkness

A group of scorpion creatures attacks the party. Roll on the following table to determine the composition of the enemy forces.

Table 58: The Sting of Darkness Encounter Composition

Chance	Event	Description	Additional Reward
01-60	Giant Scorpions	1d4 Giant Scorpions	1 Reward Star
61-90	Scorpitaurs	1d4 Scorpitaurs	1 Reward Star
91-00	Combination Forces	1d2 Scorpitaurs plus 1d2 Giant Scorpions	2 Reward Stars

Both types of enemy represent a solid threat; in quantity or in combination, they represent a potentially major challenge to parties of any difficulty scale. As a result, the GM is encouraged to consider an additional reward on top of the usual XP award for defeating the monster(s) involved.

The scuttling and clacking of pincers tends to be somewhat noticeable; before combat begins, make a passive Wisdom (Perception) check on behalf of each PC, opposed by the monsters' Dexterity (Stealth) check. If at least one PC succeeds, they spot the enemy first, and may fight a surprise round of combat before their foes join the fray fully.

The monsters bear no treasure.

Quest: Opportunistic Lycanthrope

Note: The title of this encounter gives away a good deal of its nature, which should not be apparent to the PCs at first. The GM is encouraged to read through this encounter in its entirety before running it for the first time.

Summary: A werewolf, suffering from the unpredictable effects of the Dark Obelisk, masks his deeds by pretending to be a victim himself.

Rewards: 2 Reward Stars.

Locations: Any.

Key NPCs: None.

Kickoff: Random Encounter.

Description:

Among the many side effects introduced by the presence of the Dark Obelisk, one impacts lycanthropes in particular, causing erratic behavior, spontaneous transformations, and general instability in their already-unstable existences.

One such werewolf, an afflicted lycanthrope, normally keeps his curse under a modicum of control, and attempts to be an otherwise normal citizen. In the presence of the Obelisk, however, his control has suffered, and even in the short time since the Eruption, he has seen terrible things, and has realized that it was he himself who did the deeds.

Uncertain as to how to regain control, and lacking options amidst the chaos in which the city finds itself, the man has chosen to blame others. Every time he transforms and enacts a heinous deed, he takes steps to frame someone else. While this is often hurried and barely effective, he's thus far been successful at eluding justice.

It is in this state of mind and action that the PCs discover the man, in human form, slumped next to the corpse of a man and a woman (count these two as Townfolk).

You see three bloodied humans, in sitting positions and slumped against the wall. All three—two men and a woman—bear obvious wounds, though their nature or origins are not immediately apparent. The man on the left stirs, and looks about him in a daze. Beholding the party, he cowers defensively, holding his hands up and squinting away, as though even making eye contact would be the death of him.

The man will allow himself to be calmed, and will speak with the party. He says that he was fleeing with the other two, trying to find safety, when all three of them were set upon by a furry monster with the visage of a slavering hound. Claws met steel as the three humans tried to defend themselves, but the beast was stronger, and soon all three were defeated. The man still alive—he calls himself Clay, if asked—passed out, sure of his own death, but heard a commotion and an attack. Looking about him, and finding himself alive and all three of them uneaten, he concludes that the beast was chased off by the Militia, or some other do-gooder.

The PCs may offer to heal him: he waves off this support, saying that he will be on his way as soon as he recovers from the shock. In addition to, or instead of, this approach, the party may offer to escort him to safety (page 316); Clay will also decline this assistance, saying that he has to meet up with others before he can pursue a haven. If the PCs cast healing spells on him despite or before his protests, make a passive Heal or Wisdom (Perception) check for the casting PC; success reveals to that PC that the spell appears to have had little effect, suggesting either that the spell failed, or that Clay was not damaged to begin with, despite his story.

In reality, Clay wants to be free of the party's involvement as quickly as possible, before his control suffers again, and his secret is revealed; getting out of the area without the PCs is his top priority. His behavior in the face of such sane and helpful offers may help give the PCs pause and increase their suspicions as to what exactly is happening here.

The party has some options at this point.

They may be skeptical about Clay's story, or simply curious as to more detail. An intentional Heal or Wisdom (Survival) check at DC 18 will suggest that the wounds of the three "victims" are not identical. While the dead humans' wounds do indeed seem to be from claw attacks, Clay's marks are shallower, and angled oddly. Passing an additional Wisdom (Medicine) check at DC 22 will convince a PC that Clay's wounds might even be self-inflicted.

The party may accept Clay's story without further discussion, and be on their way. Leaving the scene in this manner ends the quest, and neither benefits the party nor merits punishment; Clay simply gets away with murder and the party is none the wiser. Notably, this doesn't produce a Catalyst Impact.

Although the three humans don't appear to be nobility, Clay himself bears some nice arms and armor. Evil or ruthlessly opportunistic PCs may choose to attack Clay while he is weakened, hoping to scavenge some loot; they will soon discover him to be at full health and undamaged, and ready to defend himself as needed. On top of that, between the commotion of Clay's attack and this battle the PCs now pick, attention may be attracted to the area: roll on the Aftermath Encounter table, using Context B. Defeating Clay and any encounter that is rolled will end this quest.

Opportunistic Lycanthrope (Attack): Chaos +1

Choosing to pick a fight with the admittedly not-so-innocent Clay will have a Catalyst Impact: Chaos +1.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

Backed up by their skill check(s) above or simply by intuition alone, the PCs may accuse Clay of not being forthright with them. He gets defensive, and asks the party to leave him be, in a tone a bit too gruff and rude for someone just awakened from what they believed to be a certain death. Make a  Charisma (Persuasion) or Charisma (Intimidation) check, opposed by Clay's Charisma (Intimidation) skill (note that this might normally be a Charisma (Deception) opposition, but Clay's personality and his intent here merit the use of his more favorable skill). Failure means Clay feels he's cornered, without options: he attacks the party immediately; defeating him yields the normal XP award, plus  1 Reward Star for having partly uncovered the truth. The PCs are left to their own conclusions as to what truly happened here with the deceased couple, who bear no interesting treasure.

Success means the party has convinced Clay to admit the truth: he dejectedly shares his secret, and tells the PCs that he has been "accidentally" murdering citizens and slaying monsters ever since the Obelisk Erupted. He doesn't defend his actions, but does claim that he lacks the control he is normally able to exert. He asks for mercy, and aid, if the party has it, but accepts his fate if the party decides to turn him in to the Militia.

Opportunistic Lycanthrope (Talk): Law +1

Getting Clay to admit to the truth produces a Catalyst Impact of  Law +1.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

 Turning him in to the Militia will be more challenging than it seems. First, the Militia has much more to contend with than a single errant lycanthrope. Second, while Clay in human form is apologetic and (eventually) forthright about his actions, the instability of his curse almost guarantees his transformation between here and turning him in, which will force the PCs to either let him go, or kill him.

Opportunistic Lycanthrope (Turn In): Law +2

Turning Clay in to the Militia results in a Catalyst Impact of  Law +2.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

 Deciding to slay him on the spot for his crimes will immediately trigger Clay's transformation, and the PCs will have a fight on their hands. The commotion may summon other events; roll on the Aftermath Encounter table (page 319), but use Context C.

 The party may instead decide to simply let Clay go, even if it's not their favorite choice. PCs of any alignment will find this a difficult decision: there's no easy law-abiding way of ensuring Clay answers for his crimes or even is prevented from committing more of them!

Opportunistic Lycanthrope (Let Him Go): Love +3, Chaos +1

Discovering the truth about Clay, and letting him go, has a compound Catalyst Impact of  Love +3 and  Chaos +1.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

Whatever their decision, the party should benefit from  2 Reward Stars for uncovering the truth of the matter.

The Shadow Knows

 In the dim light of the city's alleyways, a dark shape moves, shifts subtly.

Each PC may make a passive  Wisdom (Perception) check opposed by the Shadow's Dexterity (Stealth) check; failure on the part of all PCs indicates that the enemy gains the advantage of a surprise round of combat.

There is no treasure to be gained from this encounter aside from the usual XP award; however, given the somewhat escalated difficulty of the Shadow as a random encounter, particularly for low-level parties, at the GM's discretion, the party may benefit of  1 Reward Star in addition to the standard XP gained for defeating the monster.

Dark hound's Bay

 A hound bays, terrible and eerie in the chaotic post-Eruption landscape of the city's shade. Whether it's nearby, or far away, you cannot say, but it chills you to the bone.

A single Shadow Mastiff stalks the party from afar.

The party may attempt a single  Wisdom (Perception) check opposed by the Shadow Mastiff's Dexterity (Stealth) check; success on the part of the party indicates that they benefit from a surprise round of combat.

No treasure remains in the aftermath of the encounter. However, the CR of this encounter is likely a bit out of scale with the party's abilities, particularly for low-level parties. As a result, the GM is encouraged to grant them an additional  1 Reward Star (2 Reward Stars for first-level parties) in addition to the standard XP gained for defeating the monster.

Skeleton Attack

 With a beastly roar and thudding hoofstomps, what appears to be a skeletonized minotaur wielding a greataxe walks toward you.

A Skeletaur wades directly into combat with the PCs. Between the monster's keen awareness, and the obvious noise it makes, neither party has a chance to gain the element of surprise.

Aside from the beast's equipment and usual XP award, there is no loot to be had from this encounter.

Skulking About

With a shamble and a leap, 2d6 Skulks attack the party.

On behalf of the party, make a single Wisdom (Perception) check, opposed by the Skulks' Dexterity (Stealth) check. Failure means the Skulks execute a round of surprise attack.

The Skulks bear no treasure aside from their weapons.

Dark Fey's Rise

Grimy, hunched, gnome-like figures lumber toward you, wielding crossbow and morningstars. The smell of unwashed exertion and something fouler precedes them, as they seem to grow larger before your eyes.

2d4 Spriggans attack the party.

Make a passive Wisdom (Perception) check on behalf of each PC, opposed by the Spriggans' Dexterity (Stealth) check. Failure on the part of at the PCs mean the dark folk may make a round of ranged surprise attack before combat truly begins, shooting at the party with their crossbows from the shadows.

The Spriggans bear no treasure aside from their equipment.

Ghosts of Townsfolk Past

In the distance, you see what appears to be a mob of townsfolk gathered. Wordlessly, they turn, and approach; it takes a second or two for you to realize that they are floating towards you, not walking... and that their bodies are translucent.

3d8 Townsfolk Ghosts drift toward the party.

The PCs automatically have the advantage of a surprise round of combat, which they may use to attack, prepare, or attempt escape.

For low-level parties without ready access to magical weaponry, the GM is encouraged to award an additional 2 Reward Stars if they defeat these enemies.

The Townsfolk Ghosts yield no loot in the wake of the encounter.

Rats, But Slower

Slowly, a bizarre assortment of tattered, zombified rodents scuffles toward you, teeth bared and claws flashing.

1d4 Zombie Rat Swarms attack the party, and fight to the death.

They automatically catch the party by surprise and enjoy a surprise round of combat, unless at least one PC can succeed in a passive Wisdom (Perception) check opposed by the Dark Stalkers' Dexterity (Stealth) check.

There's nothing of interest or value to discover amidst the corpses.

Zombie Townsfolk Shuffle

A mob of townsfolk turns the corner. After a moment, you notice they have a shambling gait, and their stare is unsettlingly unearthly.

3d6 Zombie Townsfolk assault the party, and fight to the death.

Make a Wisdom (Perception) check on behalf of each PC, opposed by the Zombies' Dexterity (Stealth) check; success means the PCs may enjoy a surprise round of combat as they catch their foes off guard.

Aside from the weapons and clothes borne by the Zombie Townsfolk, there's nothing of value to be found in the aftermath.

Demonic Attack

A host of demons attacks the party. Roll on the following table to determine the composition of the enemy forces.

Table 59: Demonic Attack Encounter Composition

Chance	Event	Description	Additional Reward
01-30	Dretch Demon	1d4 Dretch Demons	1 Reward Star
31-60	Quasit Demon	1d4 Quasit Demons	1 Reward Star

Chance	Event	Description	Additional Reward
61-90	Schir Demon	 1d2 Schir Demon(s)	 2 Reward Stars
91-00	Combination Force	 1d2 Dretch Demon(s) plus 1d2 Schir Demon(s)	 2 Reward Stars

All types of enemy represent a significant threat; in quantity or in combination, they represent a major challenge to parties of any difficulty scale (page 19). The GM is therefore encouraged to consider an additional reward on top of the usual XP award for defeating the monster(s) involved.

Make a single passive  Wisdom (Perception) check on behalf of the party, opposed by the highest Stealth value of the monster(s) involved. If the party succeeds, they spot the enemy first, and may fight a surprise round of combat before their foes join the fray fully.

The monsters bear no treasure aside from their equipment.

Aftermath NPC Encounters

When rolling on this table, you must consider the results in the context of events that have transpired, and the current location of the party. For example, if the party has slain Larissa the Bard, and she is rolled as an NPC encounter, then obviously it doesn't make sense.

Location does not matter as much as it did prior to the Obelisk Eruption. In Act One, NPCs typically were found in their "primary" or "home" location—Esk was always in the Inn, for example. In the chaos and disorder of the Obelisk, however, Act Three may reasonably find any or all citizens displaced, chased away, or otherwise "away" from what would otherwise be the location they would typically be found in.

As the GM, your job in using this table is to apply common sense, and struggle to maintain a somewhat cohesive, and realistic, narrative. If you roll the same NPC for multiple random encounters, you may have to create a compelling reason why that NPC has resurfaced in a different location—for example, they might have simply been chased down the street by a monster, and found themselves wherever the PCs discover her at now.

Alternately, you may simply reroll the result on the Aftermath NPC Encounters table until you find a result that is easier to accommodate.

Dead NPCs Return

Any non-Key NPC who died BEFORE the attack has a chance to come back. If you roll an NPC who has perished, you may treat the roll as "No Encounter", reroll the result to find an NPC who is still alive... or, alternately, you can still have an encounter with that dead NPC.

The power of the Dark Obelisk has many effects and bizarre behaviors, amongst them the ability to resurrect or animate the dead, or to bind previously-mortal bodies and souls and contort them to chaotic whim.

For statistics purposes, you can use the Townfolk Ghost as representative of nearly all NPCs. The challenge here for you as a GM is to determine what, if anything, the newly-undead NPC does and says, and what their purpose in encountering the party is. Much of this should be derived from the manner of the NPC's passing—if, for example, the party murdered the NPC, then they might approach the PCs violently; if the party attempted to defend, say, Cora Brushgather, and she was slain as an innocent bystander, an undead Cora might attempt to assist the party.

There are two types of dead NPCs: those whom the adventure itself kills off, and those whom the PCs may slay or cause to die of their own actions. Of the first group of NPCs, none is killed by the party, so they should at the very worst remain neutral toward the PCs.

-  Use Context A:
By default, or if no other Context applies.
-  Use Context B:
At nighttime.
-  Use Context C:
If the party is actively engaged in a quest, or if you prefer they remain focused on pressing immediate matters.
-  Use Context D:
If the PCs are actively flaunting the danger posed by the Obelisk and its forces, or to encourage storytelling momentum.

🏆 Quest: Cleric Maghana, Aftermath

👤 Summary: The stricken yet resolved Cleric Maghana leads innocents to safety; the party may help her.

🏆 Rewards: Up to 🌟 2 Reward Stars.

📍 Locations: Any.

👤 Key NPCs: Cleric Maghana.

▶ Kickoff: Random Encounter.

❓ Description:

🗨️ You approach a woman, hunched from a wound, and dressed in the robes of the Zugul Church. Her gaze passes over you without visibly taking you in. Within her blank stare, you nevertheless sense a steely resolve. She seems to be leading a group of townsfolk.

This is Cleric Maghana, who is both in shock at the death of her secretly-beloved Cannock, and hardened in her zealous devotion to the church in these times of chaotic strife.

Though she longs to rebuild the church, she remains stable enough to realize that it's not the right time, and particularly given that building's proximity to the Dark Obelisk, it's indeed time to get the hell away from there as quickly as possible so she can survive to rebuild another day.

Her mission of the moment, therefore, is to escort the 🏠 3d8 Townsfolk following her to a place of sanctuary, though as of now, neither she nor any of her followers knows for certain which buildings are safe.

📍 If the party knows, has heard of, or has been to a place of sanctuary, they may share this information; merely by conveying the information, they benefit from 🌟 1 Reward Star and a +10 modifier to Maghana's Attitude. Going the then-further step of helping to escort the innocents to safety will yield a second 🌟 Reward Star, and a further +10 modifier to Maghana's Attitude Tracker. Along the way, they may encounter a hazard; roll once on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context B.

👉 Cleric Maghana, Aftermath (Help):
⚖️ Law +1, ❤️ Love +3

Helping the cleric (now High Priestess) escort the helpless generates a Catalyst Impact of ⚖️ Law +1, ❤️ Love +3. Even if they know of no places of sanctuary when this Quest begins, accompanying Maghana and her charges counts to trigger this impact.

📍 Alternately, the party may simply ignore the cleric and be on their way; this culminates in no reward, but also no penalty, particularly if the PCs do not yet know of or suspect any places of sanctuary. A “middle ground” here is that if the party knows no safe places, but wishes still to do good, they may offer to accompany Maghana and her group. By sheer coincidence, Maghana's next stop will be one of the places of sanctuary, but on the way, the PCs, cleric, and townsfolk will almost certainly suffer at least one random encounter: roll on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context B.

👉 Cleric Maghana, Aftermath (Ignore):
🗨️ Chaos +1

Ignoring the situation entirely causes a Catalyst Impact: 🗨️ Chaos +1. This impact is only triggered if the party intentionally ignores the situation.

📍 Villainous or darkly opportunistic PCs may attempt to attack Maghana and her charges; doing so immediately attracts the attention of monsters in the form of a roll on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context D, and ignoring and rerolling any encounter that does not explicitly involve a monster. The monster(s) encountered should attack instantly, before Maghana is herself defeated by the party; the ensuing melee should be enough distraction for the cleric to escape with some of her followers. Defeating the creature(s) who interceded grants the party the usual XP award, but nothing further.

👉 Cleric Maghana, Aftermath (Attack):
🗨️ Chaos +5

Assaulting Maghana and/or her charges produces a Catalyst Impact: 🗨️ Chaos +5.

This quest ends if the party slays Maghana, if she and her followers leave the party's presence, or if the party gives directions or escort to a place of sanctuary.

Quest: Cora Brushgather, Aftermath

 Summary: A halfling farmer is depressed and in shock in the wake of the Eruption. The party may take advantage of this, or come to her aid.

 Rewards: Up to  2 Reward Stars.

 Locations: Any.

 Key NPCs: Cora Brushgather.

 Kickoff: Random Encounter.

 Description:

 The beautiful halfling before you seems shrunken into herself, as though the weight of the chaos around her is confining her, pressing in from all sides, diminishing her and threatening to keep her from being able to breathe.

Cora is nearly catatonic. She's unable to do or say much at all, and will passively follow practically any command given to her in an authoritative, non-threatening tone. She answers any questions as to what she's seen, where she's been, and what she's been doing since the Eruption with a wide-eyed, far-off stare, as though glimpsing a source of petrifying evil just barely over the horizon behind the PC posing the question.

Throughout this encounter, attempting any sort of Charisma (Intimidation) check against her—for whatever purpose, and whether successful or not—will send her over the edge, and she will become panicked, with the PCs themselves as the source of the panic. As a reminder, panic means she drops everything she holds, and flees at top speed away from the party along a random path; she can't take any other actions along the way. In addition, she takes a -2 penalty on all saving throws, skill checks, and ability checks. If cornered, a panicked creature cowers and does not attack, typically using the total defense action in combat.

 The party can help her, trying all manner of healing spells or effects. While none of these works—hers is a psychological, not magical or supernatural, damage, and can only be healed with time, safety, and comfort—it's a good act. This approach may be used in combination with any of those that follow, and is not on its own worth any reward or punishment.

 Cora Brushgather, Aftermath (Heal):
 Love +1

Although unsuccessful, the act of trying to heal or comfort Cora's mind produces a Catalyst Impact of  Love +1.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

 The PCs can offer to escort her to safety, regardless of whether they know of any place of sanctuary. At least one incident may make their journey interesting, however; roll once on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context C. Depending on how far away from safety the party is when they come across Cora, and how long they take to get there, additional random encounters may apply, depending on time. Merely offering to escort Cora, and coaxing her to follow, is a helpful act, worth  1 Reward Star; successfully following through and delivering her to safety merits an additional, second  Reward Star.

 Cora Brushgather, Aftermath (Escort):
 Love +2

Escorting the halfling to safety results in a Catalyst Impact of  Love +2.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

 Evil or particularly horrible PCs may take advantage of the poor halfling's condition—either to take her valuables (of which she has practically none), to slay her (for the paltry XP award), or perhaps even worse, to seduce her into a lewd act. Whether or not this is in keeping with the PCs' personalities and/or alignments, it's a terrible, vile thing—enough to almost guarantee unwated attention. Just before any attack or inappropriate action can occur, roll on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context D; reroll any results of “No Encounter” or those which do not explicitly involve one or more monsters. The monster(s) which result from this roll will target the party exclusively; it's not that they are not interested in the stricken halfling, but they will focus on defeating the harder targets (i.e., the party) first. In the confusion of the resulting melee, however, Cora slips away, never to be seen by the party again. The GM is encouraged to award XP for this fight only if your gaming group is intentionally playing an evilly-aligned game.

 Cora Brushgather, Aftermath (Attack or Seduce):
 Chaos +3

Taking advantage of the poor halfling creates a Catalyst Impact:  Chaos +3.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

The quest terminates if Cora is slain, if she is escorted safely to a place of sanctuary, or if the PCs leave her be where she is and leave the scene.

Quest: Amadan, Aftermath

 Summary: The Berinncorte Militia's mute armsmaster is fleeing the city... but offers some aid before s/he departs.

 Rewards: One or more common weapons.

 Locations: Any.

 Key NPCs: Amadan.

 Kickoff: Random Encounter.

 Description:

 A half-elf with drawn twin shortswords rounds the corner. Upon seeing you, he squints, taking your measure. Something in your visage must convince him positively, as he nods to himself, sheathes both weapons, and walks toward you. His black cloak does not cover the uniform of the town Militia; his hood is drawn and wrapped about his face as though it might keep him concealed from the terrors that infest his once-peaceful town.

This is Amadan, who is above described in the masculine—but recall that she is actually a woman. The remainder of this quest text will use the feminine, but the GM is encouraged to remember to portray her as a man until her secret is discovered, or if she chooses for whatever reason you determine to reveal her true nature to the PCs.

The chaos of the Obelisk, and the pull of its eclectic powers, are too much for her; she is leaving the town just as quickly as she can, and she has no interest in teaming up with anyone along the way.

Though she understands speech normally, Amadan is indeed mute, so the GM is encouraged to roleplay any interaction with her in an entertaining and informative manner. The armsmaster has had a long chunk of her life to adapt to her disability, and is quite expressive in her demeanor; those who communicate with her are often surprised at how facile such a sharing of information can still be without speech on the part of one party.

 If the party attacks Amadan, she will fight back if she feels she has a chance, but will attempt to flee if an opportunity presents itself. Indeed, 2 rounds after battle commences with her, make a roll on the Aftermath Random Encounter table, and reroll until you get a result that involves one or more monsters. The attack from the monster(s) rolled occurs to start the third round of combat; in the resulting confusion, Amadan flees the scene.

 Amadan, Aftermath (Attack):

 Chaos +4

If the PCs attack Amadan, they cause a Catalyst Impact:  Chaos +4.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts in this Quest.

 The PCs may simply ignore the armsmaster, and leave the scene. There is no punishment for this decision, and it does not prevent Amadan from appearing in identical fashion in future random encounters. There is no  Catalyst Impact for this approach.

 Although she will not accompany the party, and makes her preference for solitude clear in her gestures and demeanor, Amadan is nevertheless willing to help however she can. Mechanically, this takes the form of offering weapons—she offers an array of common, mundane weaponry such as daggers, shortswords, a longsword, and a light mace, all for free if the PCs wish. There is no  Catalyst Impact for this approach.

If your group is using variable challenge, the GM is encouraged to upgrade this mundane equipment to masterwork quality weapons at  moderate difficulty, and +1 weaponry at  elite levels of difficulty.

The party may make a request for an weapon other than these. In her capacity as armsmaster, Amadan certainly has access to all manner of weaponry: for each weapon requested, there is a chance that Amadan may be able to locate one of these weapons.

Amadan innately knows where her weapons caches are located, and their contents; roll to determine availability of the requested item immediately, and if it's unavailable, the armsmaster will shake her head; the PCs may then request a different weapon if they wish.

Once an item is requested that is indeed available, Amadan will have to leave the party for a brief amount of time to go get it. During this time, there is a chance that a random encounter may transpire, that the PCs will have to face before the armsmaster returns bearing the requested item. All rolls are to be from the Aftermath Random Encounters table, using the Context indicated.

If the PCs are defeated by one of these random encounters, or if they are forced to flee, Amadan does not go out of her way to track the party down; the item is effectively lost. On the rare likelihood that the party encounters Amadan again subsequently in their journeys, however, the armsmaster will cheerily deliver the requested item as though no time had passed.

Once Amadan returns with a requested weapon, there is a  60% chance she will immediately be on her way; if she stays, then the party may make a request of a further weapon if they wish. So long as their rolls are lucky and the random encounters are not too punishing, there is no limit to the number of weapons the party may acquire in this manner, though in practice the probabilities don't make it too rewarding a proposition!

This quest ends if Amadan leaves the party not on a mission to obtain an item for them, if the party attacks Amadan, or if a random encounter either defeats or forces the party to leave the area.

🏆 Quest: Ash, Aftermath

📄 Summary: The city's militia trainer is suffering withdrawal symptoms; the party may come to his aid or take advantage of the situation.

🏆 Rewards: Up to 🌟 2 Reward Stars, plus a magical weapon.

📍 Locations: Any.

👤 Key NPCs: Ash "Executioner".

▶ Kickoff: Random Encounter.

❓ Description:

🗨️ A gray-haired dwarf sits huddled in a corner. A robust physique and confident visage seem in contrast to the dejected form you see rocking back and forth before you. He seems a beaten man, one controlled or consumed by a force or will not his own.

Sadly but avoidably, Ash's addiction to 📖 Darkserum has taken hold. In the Eruption, his stash was destroyed, and in the chaos that has followed, it's not been feasible to acquire more. As a result, the city's Militia trainer is now suffering withdrawal symptoms.

Note that the profile below reflects a pre-withdrawal Ash; his current profile involves a -2 penalty to Con, and the shaken condition (-2 on attack rolls, saving throws, skill checks, and ability checks).

It's far from his preference, but given his current state, he's forced to admit to his addiction outright if pressed. He'll admit it, then implore the party to try and find some.

He promises and swears up and down that, long-term, he will work hard and dedicate himself to ridding himself of the addiction, but in the here and now, with all that is threatening the town and its population, he's of no use to anyone in his current state, and really just needs a bit to get him through.

As part of the reward for any outcome that involves giving the dwarf at least one dose of Darkserum, Ash will give the party an additional treasure: a 📖 magical weapon.

📖 Darkserum Thank-You

Pick a PC at random; whatever that PC's primary melee weapon is, that's the type of weapon gifted. If the PC randomly selected has absolutely no melee weapons—remember, a quarterstaff or dagger still counts!—then select a different PC at random. The nature of the weapon given depends on the level of variable challenge (page 19):

A 📖 masterwork weapon by default, or for 📖 low difficulty; for 📖 moderate difficulties, Ash gives a +1 weapon; a +2 weapon is gained in games of 📖 advanced challenge; and finally, in 📖 elite games, the trainer grants the party a +3 weapon.

The PCs have some options, at this point.

They can simply ignore the poor dwarf. This diminishes Ash's Attitude Tracker by -10 points, but otherwise has no adverse impact. This approach also terminates the quest as soon as the PCs leave the area, but does not prevent the PCs from encountering Ash in future encounters. No Catalyst Impact is rendered as a result of this option.

Dastardly PCs might wish to take advantage of the situation, and attack Ash. In his weakened state, he's nevertheless somewhat formidable, but won't pose a great deal of challenge. Fortunately for him, attacking an innocent draws a great deal of attention from the Forces of the Obelisk. As soon as the PCs make the decision to assault the trainer, roll on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context D; reroll until you get an encounter that involves at least one monster, who will attack the party and mostly ignore Ash. In the resulting struggle, the addicted trainer will slink away.

Ash, Aftermath (Attack): Chaos +2

Attacking the stricken dwarf results in a Catalyst Impact of Chaos +2.

The party can try and aid the man. Healing or aid spells, except those explicitly addressing addiction and withdrawal symptoms, are of no help. If by some chance the party already possesses a dose or more of the drug, they may offer it immediately; doing so ends the quest and grants the PCs 1 Reward Star.

If they lack ready doses of Darkserum but still wish to offer assistance, Ash will offer up his source: Aramil, the apothecary. Ash asks the PCs to venture to the Apothecary Shop, and see either if Aramil himself is still there, or if by any chance he left a cache of the substance somewhere in his shop that might help. Ash will stay where he is, or will try to do so. If the PCs follow through with this request, they stand a goodly chance of discovering or acquiring some Darkserum among the damaged contents of the store or from the apothecary himself. Returning to this spot where they discovered Ash with at least one vial of Darkserum, he will thank the group profusely, and will immediately ingest a dose, restoring his statistics to full and benefitting the party of 2 Reward Stars.

Ash, Aftermath (Help): Love +2

Helping Ash by providing him his drug produces a Catalyst Impact of Love +2.

If the PCs have a moral or religious objection to drug addiction, or simply want to help in a different manner, they can offer to escort Ash to safety, where he might not receive any drugs, but will at least be out of harm's way for the time being while he works the addiction out of his system. Ash will resist; make a Charisma (Intimidation) or Charisma (Persuasion) check, opposed by Ash's Charisma (Intimidation) skill—in this special scenario, do not apply Ash's penalty for being shaken, and instead apply a -2 modifier on the PCs' roll to reflect the desperation of Ash's desire. Failure means they have not yet convinced the man; they may make one further attempt, but if this second check fails as well, Ash will attempt to leave the area immediately. Success with either check means they have at least temporarily convinced the dwarf to accompany them. By passing one of these checks and beginning their journey to safety, the party gains 1 Reward Star.

Along the way, regardless of how close by the nearest place of sanctuary is, they will be beset by trouble: roll on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context B, and reroll any results of "No Encounter". So long as Ash remains with the party, he will attempt to sneak away during any random encounter; the only way to avoid this (short of a spell that fixes the dwarf in place, or a similarly-creative solution) is to have one PC dedicated to keeping him there. This effectively removes that PC from combat.

Successfully delivering Ash to a safe location grants the party a second, additional 1 Reward Star.

Ash, Aftermath (Escort): Law +1, Love +4

Delivering the man to a place of safety, where he might get some help, results in a Catalyst Impact of Law +1, Love +4.

This quest terminates if Ash is slain, if he leaves the party, if the party leaves the area, or if he is delivered to a place of sanctuary.

🏆 Quest: Debran Ormrick, Aftermath

🗨️ Summary: The Militia Treasurer has a special favor to ask of the party.

🏆 Rewards: 1,000 gp plus 4 potions of remove disease, plus up to 🌟 2 Reward Stars.

📍 Locations: Any.

👤 Key NPCs: Debran Ormrick, Welby Goodbarrel.

▶️ Kickoff: Random Encounter.

Debran Ormrick greets the party—somewhat casually, it must be said, given the circumstances. As though giant goat-headed demons were not roaming the streets, as though fireballs did not streak occasionally across the sky, and as though the entirety of Town Square had not become a barren hellscape punctuated by a phallic eruption of pure chaos, the town's Militia Treasurer asks the party in a calm, clear voice if they wouldn't mind helping him out on a small matter that he himself is unable to address.

The quest seems straightforward: convince Welby Goodbarrel to open his doors. The portly halfling merchant has locked himself and a handful of townsfolk inside his General Store, and refuses to let anyone in or out. To be fair, the man is simply worried about safety: his store is quite close to the Dark Obelisk, and he and his fellow citizens are terrified of any monsters getting inside.

If pressed as to why he cares, Debran will say that he's concerned about the safety of the merchant, and the citizens trapped inside; surely they would do better if they were to be freed, and allowed to seek refuge elsewhere? Using the party's highest Wisdom (Perception) skill, make a passive 🚩 Wisdom (Perception) check, opposed by Debran's Charisma (Intimidation) skill; success suggests that the tiefling may not be telling his entire side of the story. On such suspicion, or intuition, the party may attempt a 🚩 Charisma (Persuasion) or Charisma (Intimidation) check in opposition to Debran's own Charisma (Intimidation) skill; success will get him to admit that there's more to it than that, but he will shrug, and not admit to anything further.

In reality, Debran wants the General Store opened so he can make sure of Welby's whereabouts; Debran distrusts the conniving merchant, and views him as a rival in his own aims of financially conquering and leaching from the city of Berinncorte. A rival trapped in his own stronghold is acceptable; a rival cast loose on the streets of a chaotic wasteland is a step even better! Debran himself can handle himself in a fight, and has plans to depart the city very soon; Welby is not nearly so prepared, particularly after the loss of his right-hand man and bodyguard, Oneib.

For their efforts, Debran promises money and some useful potions. If pressed, he will reveal their details and quantity (see below).

Any outcome that sees the doors of the General Store opened gains the party Debran's thanks, as well as 🌟 1 Reward Star. Outcomes that involve Welby leaving the store, even for a brief amount of time, will gain the party a second 🌟 1 Reward Star, and Debran will deliver the promised treasure:

🏆 Debran's Gratitude

1,000 gp; 4 potions of remove disease.

The party of course has some options at their hands at this point.

👉 They may simply ignore the request, and go about their business. If they at some later point do convince Welby to take action in accordance with Debran's wishes, the tiefling will catch up with the PCs and give them their reward soon thereafter; the GM is encouraged to introduce this follow-up quickly, without waiting to see if a random encounter result forces the event. Ignoring this Quest does not produce any 🚩 Catalyst Impact.

👉 Evil PCs, or those who correctly interpret his true intent here, and take great issue with it, might attack Debran. The tiefling treasurer is capable and uninjured; he will fight back if necessary, but if reduced to half his total hit points or fewer, the battle will attract attention in the form of one or more monsters rolled on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context B. Reroll any results of "No Encounter", or those which do not involve monsters. Creatures introduced in this manner will focus on the PCs; in the ensuing hubbub, Debran will sneak away to fight another day.

📖 Defeating Debran is strongly discouraged; the GM should take all reasonable steps to avoid this scenario. The tiefling puppet-master has many roles to play in future adventures; slaying him in this early scenario unhinges much of the fun to come!

🚩 Debran Ormrick, Aftermath (Attack): 🚩 Chaos +3

There's little reason to do so, but attacking Debran creates a Catalyst Impact: 🚩 Chaos +3.

👉 Regardless of their misgivings or suspicions, the party may take Debran at his word, and attempt to parlay with Welby. Depending on the distance between Debran and the General Store, one or more random encounters may intercede. Once at the store, the PCs will have to converse with the halfling through the door. The GM is encouraged to roleplay this interaction to both dramatic, and possibly comedic, effect, but mechanically, the PCs must succeed in the following skill challenge.

Come Out, Come Out

First Check: Charisma (Persuasion), opposed by Welby's own Charisma (Persuasion); failure requires repeat (max 3); success advances.

Second Check: Charisma (Persuasion) or Charisma (Intimidation), opposed by Welby's Charisma (Deception) skill. Failure reverts to First Check; success advances.

Third Check: Charisma (Persuasion) or Charisma (Intimidation), opposed by Welby's own Charisma (Intimidation) skill. Failure reverts to Second Check; success completes the skill challenge.

Successfully completing the entire skill challenge convinces the halfling merchant to open his doors. He will admit any townsfolk who wish to gain entry and possible refuge, and will allow any citizens who had been inside to escape as they wish. He himself will remain in the building, and will reseal the entrance as soon as the PCs depart, unless they succeed at one final  Charisma (Persuasion) or Charisma (Intimidation) check, opposed by Welby's Survival skill; failure means the merchant will blithely promise to remain outside his establishment, but will close the doors and barricade them as soon as is feasible; success convinces the merchant to try his luck seeking safety elsewhere.

At this point, whether the party returns to Debran or not, they should gain  1 Reward Star for having navigated the skill challenge.

Debran Ormrick, Aftermath (Succeed): Law +1

Getting Welby to leave his stronghold produces a Catalyst Impact of  Law +1.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts in this Quest.

 Good-aligned PCs, or those who doubt the purity of Debran's motives, may take things a step further, and try and escort Welby and any townsfolk who were freed to a place of sanctuary. Along the way, they will likely encounter something interesting to impede their smooth travels; roll once on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context B. Assuming at least Welby himself survives any ensuing encounter, delivering him to safety should grant the party the benefit of a second, additional  Reward Star.

Debran Ormrick, Aftermath (Escort): Love +2

Going the extra mile and escorting townsfolk and/or Welby to safety means a Catalyst Impact of  Love +2.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts in this Quest.

This quest terminates if Debran is slain, or if the party returns to him after speaking with Welby.

Quest: Tansden, Aftermath

 Summary: The city's Militia Captain weeps for the loss of a rival, and asks the PCs' help in burying him.

 Rewards: Up to  3 Reward Stars.

 Locations: Any.

 Key NPCs: Tansden.

 Kickoff: Random Encounter.

 Description:

 You see a bearded, kindhearted bear of a man, his body bloodied, his eyes moist, and his facial hair stained with tears. Dressed in the uniform of the Berinncorte Militia, he stands hunched over the body of a fellow dwarven Militia member, who appears to have perished as the result of a series of gruesome attacks.

This is Tansden, the city's Militia Captain. He's wounded greatly, but still quite alive. The dwarf corpse at his feet is Skutt Krundar, a sometimes-rival who perished saving Tansden himself from the clutches of a Dullahan.

The Militia Captain is stunned, both at the loss of his second-in-command, as well as at the loss of his city—or its lawful sanity and order, at least. He's not quite in shock, and has his wits about him, but he's definitely on edge and skittish. If the party has previously encountered the man, they will notice the difference from Tansden's normally solid composure without any skill checks necessary.

Tearful, yet resolved, he tells the party that Skutt deserves a soldier's burial, even amidst this chaos. He refuses to let the dwarf's body fall into the claws and tentacles of the Forces of the Obelisk. Tansden will refuse direct assistance; he will do the work of the thing himself, but asks the party to defend him while he goes about his gruesome task. Without the party's defense, he worries that in his morbid distraction, he will be set upon by monsters and will die trying to put the dead to rest.

The party has limited options, here.

 They may leave Tansden to work his task alone. This leaves the man himself with a horrible dilemma: shirk what he feels is his duty to a fallen comrade, or almost certainly die in the attempt? Sadly, the PCs will not be around to learn of the outcome if they leave the scene. This option does not produce a  Catalyst Impact.

Even the most evil PCs might shrink from the option of attacking Tansden, but it's still technically an option. Doing so is perhaps one of the more vile options in the Aftermath, and as such attracts an equivalently vile attention: roll once on the Aftermath Untouchable Encounters table, using Context D, and reroll any result of "No Encounter". Any monster(s) introduced in this manner will attack the PCs exclusively, and will ironically grant Tansden some of the protection he was requesting; he will drag Skutt's body away from the scene, and will not be seen again by the party.

➡ Tansden, Aftermath (Attack): ☒ Chaos +6

Attacking a grieving man who wants merely to bury his comrade is definitely worth of a Catalyst Impact:
☒ Chaos +6.

Helping Tansden out is really the only option that's feasible for Good-aligned parties; Clerics and Paladins in particular should roleplay this as a necessity or foregone conclusion. Offering to help, or healing Tansden, should grant the party an immediate reward of 1 Reward Star.

Defending Tansden takes a while. Roll once on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context B, and reroll any results of "No Encounter". Remember that although Tansden is on the scene, he contributes nothing to the battle, as he is working as fast as possible to complete the burial. If this encounter is not a Beneficial Encounter, the party should receive 1 Reward Star in addition to whatever XP or other reward might have been involved.

Resolve that encounter, then roll a second time on that same table, this time using Context D. As above, Tansden is finishing his work, and cannot fight on the party's behalf.

Assuming the PCs successfully resolve both encounters, Tansden completes his work, and warmly embraces each and every PC. His Attitude Tracker with respect to the party gains +20 points. He takes his leave of the PCs at that point; if they pursue him or offer to accompany him, he declines, saying that he needs some time on his own to process what has occurred. The party should receive 1 Reward Star as a final boon for their good work.

➡ Tansden, Aftermath (Defend): ☒ Law +1, Love +5

Successfully defending Tansden during his task produces a Catalyst Impact of ☒ Law +1, Love +5.

If during either encounter the party is defeated, or if they choose to (or are forced to) flee the scene, Tansden flees as well, dragging Skutt's body if possible. The party loses track of the Militia Captain, and does not see him again during this adventure.

This quest ends if Tansden is slain or leaves the scene, if the party leaves the scene, or if the party is successful in their defense and receive the Captain's reward.

🏆 Quest: Ota Kuiduru, Aftermath

Summary: The Mayor's chief administrator needs the PCs' help to raid a secret supply cache, and deliver much-needed arms and armor, and general supplies.

Rewards: Up to 2 Reward Stars, plus the party's pick of any of the supplies returned, plus the location of all places of sanctuary

Locations: Any.

Key NPCs: Ota Kuiduru.

Kickoff: Random Encounter.

Description:

A serious-looking half-elf in a severe haircut and dress motions to you to approach. Conspiratorially, he looks about you, as though eavesdropping was a graver threat than the winged and tentacle monstrosities that now stalk the city streets.

Ota Kuiduru was Mayor Symms' chief clerk and administrator before the Eruption. He is now attempting to coordinate survivors and efforts to bring whatever order and peace he might to the situation, though he realizes it is an uphill and perhaps hopeless struggle.

He is aware of every place of sanctuary, and will gladly share this information with the PCs if they will commit to helping him perform a crucial task: bringing supplies to those who have sought shelter in the Library. It seems that Mayor Symms had two secret supply caches, hidden within the walls of the Mayor's House: one holding arms and armor, the other bearing general supplies.

Ota wishes to return to the building and get these supplies, but there are two challenges in his doing so alone: first, a capable though he is in a fight, he alone is unlikely to survive many of the monsters that he will undoubtedly come across in such a journey. Second, even if his safe passage were guaranteed, he alone cannot bear a great deal of supplies, so the aid he would return with would not be all that helpful.

A party of the PCs' size would be just right, he suggests. (He suggests this no matter how many PCs are in your gaming group.) He begs them to do what is right, and help those in need.

 The PCs can ignore the half-elf, and be on their way. Ota will scowl, the party will lose -10 points on his Attitude Tracker, and he will of course not share the location of any place of sanctuary. The PCs may attempt any number of Charisma (Intimidation) or Charisma (Persuasion) checks they wish, but unless they help him in his mission, his lips are sealed.

 Ota Kuiduru, Aftermath (Ignore):
 Chaos +1

Ignoring the situation entirely causes a Catalyst Impact:  Chaos +1.

 Either as part of the above approach, or as its own strategy, the party may attack the half-elf monk. Ota will fight back defensively, imploring the party that this is neither the noble nor the sane thing to be doing at a time when madness stalks the streets. While he points this out, madness itself may manifest: roll on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context B, and reroll any result that does not involve at least one monster. Any monster(s) rolled will attack the PCs; in the resulting melee, Ota will flee to seek out other citizens of nobler purpose to aid him in his endeavor.

 Ota Kuiduru, Aftermath (Attack):
 Chaos +3

Picking a needless fight with the administrator produces a Catalyst Impact:  Chaos +3.

 The party can help him, as Good-aligned PCs will likely feel compelled to do. Accompanying Ota merits  1 Reward Star right off the bat. On their way to the Mayor's House, the group may encounter resistance; roll at least once on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context A. Depending on the distance between where the PCs encounter Ota, and the Mayor's House, they may have to roll additional times on this table.

Once at the Mayor's House, Ota shows the party the two secret chambers on the ground floor: the Emergency Supply Cache, and the Weapons Cache. The goal now is for each PC to load up with as much equipment as they can bear. Detail-oriented gaming groups can weigh out exactly who carries what, but as each and every piece of equipment and individual supply will be given over to others at their destination, one quick-and-dirty approach is to simply count everyone as now suffering under a heavy load (Max Dex Bonus +1, Check Penalty -6, Speed 20 ft./15 ft., Run x3) until they deliver everything.

On their way from the Mayor's House to the Library, they may once again encounter interference: roll once more on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, but this time, use Context B. You may assume that during any combat encounter, the PCs and Ota drop the extra supplies, fight, and then pick it back up, assuming they are successful and are not forced to flee.

Once at the Library, Ota will thank the party profusely, and offer each PC their pick of any supplies they have recovered. In addition, his Attitude Tracker benefits from +15, the party receives  1 Reward Star, and Ota will reveal the locations of all other places of sanctuary.

 Ota Kuiduru, Aftermath (Help):
 Law +4

Aiding Ota in his needs results in a Catalyst Impact of  Law +4.

This quest terminates when the PCs successfully deliver the supplies to the Library, if Ota leaves their sight, if Ota is slain, or if the PCs and Ota are forced to abandon dropped supplies in the course of bringing them to sanctuary.

Quest: Esk, Aftermath

 Summary: The innkeeper asks the PCs' help in taking the body of his maid employee and friend to Town Square.

 Rewards: Up to  3 Reward Stars.

 Locations: Any.

 Key NPCs: Esk.

 Kickoff: Random Encounter.

 Description:

 Esk, the lizardman innkeeper, is carrying the corpse of a gnomish woman dressed in bloody commoner's clothes. Seeing you, he inclines his head, and gently puts the woman down on the ground as he speaks to you. "I would ask a favor," he begins without preamble.

Esk's favor is somewhat odd, given the circumstances of the city: the dead gnome is Mardnab Scheppen, the inn's maid and general housekeeper, and Esk's now-deceased employee. She was crushed under part of a collapsing roof shortly after the Eruption, and her body was set upon by monsters. Esk chased the creatures off, and now wishes to put her body to rest in a peaceful and respectful manner.

What complicates matters is that he wants to bury her in the Graveyard. While this would ordinarily be quite a reasonable request, the terrible fact is there is no easy way to get to this location without braving the heart of the storm: Town Square, and within it, the Dark Obelisk itself. Certainly a dangerous journey.

Unless the PCs have cast know alignment or have similar intuition, they are at this point almost certainly ignorant of Esk's Chaotic Evil temperament. In truth, he doesn't care at all what becomes of the corpse of what to him was merely an employee... but he sees this an excuse, an opportunity, to involve others in what could be a bloodbath.

In summary, his "favor" is merely to use Mardnab's burial as bait to get more innocent people slaughtered by Forces of the Obelisk.

It's quite possible that the PCs suspect none of this at all. Esk is a creepy character regardless of what he says or does, and it's natural for Good-aligned PCs, particularly those of minority or put-upon races (e.g., half-orcs especially), to sympathize with what very well may be the only lizardfolk within miles of the city. At the GM's discretion, a PC may explicitly request a  Wisdom (Perception) check, opposed by the innkeeper's Charisma (Deception) check; success may suggest that there might be ulterior motives involved in what seems a simple, if dangerous, request... but nothing more than that.

 The party can ignore or decline the request. Esk nods in understanding; secretly, he is disappointed, but it's reasonable to want to avoid almost certain danger simply to help someone bury another someone you don't know. Sad and somber, the innkeeper picks up his gnomish burden and walks away from the party, in the general direction of the Graveyard. There is no  Catalyst Impact to this approach.

 Malicious PCs may see easy pickings, and assault the innkeeper. This surprises Esk, who is caught off guard; the party enjoys a surprise round of combat automatically. Thereafter, Esk will grin, summon his eidolon, Cherissur, and join battle; the rush of adrenaline and the fact that the party has willingly devolved to a Chaotic Evil action against him pleases him to no end. At the start of the third round of combat (that is, after the surprise round, and one round of normal combat), roll on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context B; any creatures rolled will wade into the fray, distracting the PCs and allowing Esk to escape almost certain doom.

Esk, Aftermath (Attack): Chaos +1

Attacking Esk creates a Catalyst Impact of  Chaos +1.

 Good-aligned PCs will want to help the innkeeper in his seemingly-noble task, even if they fully realize the threat. Depending on how far away the party is when they encounter Esk, they may have quite a few random encounters to survive. At minimum, it's recommended that you roll once on the Aftermath Random Encounters table on the way to Town Square, using Context A. Once in Town Square itself, roll again, using Context D.

Once the party makes it to the Graveyard, grant them  1 Reward Star for surviving the journey to this point. Then roll for yet another random encounter, using Context D, while Esk starts digging; this time, however, reroll any results that do not explicitly involve at least one monster. The innkeeper completes his morbid task at the conclusion of any encounter rolled in the Graveyard. During any combat in the Graveyard, make a passive  Wisdom (Perception) check for the PC with the greatest skill in this area, opposed by Esk's Charisma (Deception) skill, and with a -4 circumstance penalty for the PCs. If the PC is successful, they pick up on the fact that the innkeeper is chuckling to himself while he works, as though he finds the whole situation of burying Mardnab while a group of strangers defends him from monsters hilarious.

Finally, unless the party is aware of the secret door that connects the Graveyard to the north of the Zugul Church, they must make their way back across the Town Square—roll one final time for a random encounter, this time using Context B.

At the conclusion of any encounter this final roll, award the party with an additional  1 Reward Star. Esk thanks the party for their efforts, and claims that he has neither coin nor treasure to share with them, other than his thanks.

Esk, Aftermath (To Graveyard): Law +1, Love +2

Making it to the Graveyard and completing the task there produces a Catalyst Impact of  Law +1,  Love +2.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts in this Quest.

 If the party was successful in the Graveyard skill check, or if they are suspicious for any number of other reasons, they may challenge Esk as to his true motives. The GM is encouraged to roleplay this in a manner suited to the gaming group's preferences, but mechanically, uncovering the truth takes the form of the following skill challenge:

Esk's True Motives

First Check: Wisdom (Perception) or Charisma (Intimidation), opposed by Esk's Charisma (Deception) check. Failure means Esk leaves the scene and the skill challenge fails; success gets him to admit that he and Mardnab were far from close, and advances to the next check.

Second Check: Charisma (Persuasion) or Charisma (Intimidation), opposed again by Esk's Charisma (Deception). Failure has no impact, as Esk stalls; you may repeat this attempt one more time, but failure a second time means the innkeeper leaves. Success means Esk admits that the gnomish maid had never even asked him to make sure she was buried respectfully if she were to perish, and advances to the next check.

Third Check: Charisma (Persuasion), Charisma (Intimidation), or Wisdom (Perception), opposed one final time by Esk's Charisma (Deception). Failure means Esk leaves the conversation immediately; success forces him to admit, finally, that he was having a cruel joke at the party's expense, that the burial was completely unnecessary, and that he did it both to have fun with the possible death and suffering of the PCs, but also for the possibility that they might be defeated, and that he might escape, to later return and loot the bodies.

If the party is successful in obtaining this final revelation, they should receive a third and final  1 Reward Star. At this point, they can attack Esk, who will try to escape but may easily be defeated. They could also try and “turn him in”, though the authorities are quite busy with other priorities at the moment and will not really have the ability to take him into custody in any real sense.

Esk, Aftermath (Uncover Truth): Law +3

Getting Esk to reveal the truth of the matter results in a Catalyst Impact of  Law +3.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts in this Quest.

This quest terminates if Esk is slain, if Esk or the party leave each others' presence, or if Mardnab is successfully buried.

Quest: Biggen Gurble, Aftermath

 Summary: The Library's humble reader is in over his head, and needs the PCs' help to get citizens to safety.

 Rewards: Up to  5 Reward Stars.

 Locations: Any.

 Key NPCs: Biggen Gurble.

 Kickoff: Random Encounter.

 Description:

The Library's reader finds himself in de facto charge of the building, which has also become the foremost place of sanctuary in all of Berinncorte. The halfling is in way over his head, pun not intended, and is desperate for any manner of help.

Foremost of his concerns, though, is making sure that townsfolk are helped to find their way safely into the building so they can take refuge there. He asks the PCs to go forth and find innocents who might otherwise perish in the chaos of the streets, and help guide them back to the Library.

Biggen has no coin nor treasure to speak of with which to adequately compensate the party, but promises that the townsfolk, the city, and he himself will remember

In simple terms, this is a collect / escort mission. Each group of townsfolk the PCs shepherd back to the Library will be worth an additional  1 Reward Star, to a maximum of 5 total.

Mechanically, there are two impacts to this quest being in effect: first, there is a much greater likelihood of encountering random groups of innocents in the city; and second, the rewards for helping such citizens are increased.

Once this quest is begun, any time you roll on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, and receive a result of “No Encounter”, treat it instead as the Quest “Wounded Townsfolk”. Note that the  Reward Star benefit from that Quest DOES stack with the reward for the this quest. Note, also, that this “treat No Encounter as Wounded Townsfolk” effect applies only to the Aftermath Random Encounters table, and not any of the more detailed tables on which you might be called upon to roll. For example, if you are asked to roll on the Untouchable Random Encounters table, and get a “No Encounter” result, that result is still “No Encounter”.

In addition, in any scenario in which the PCs find themselves with one or more townsfolk, they may escort those citizens back to the Library and it will count for the bonus of this quest.

 Biggen Gurble, Aftermath (Escort):

Law +1

Each time the PCs deliver a new batch of townsfolk to safety at the Library, there is a Catalyst Impact of  Law +1. This is irrespective of the number of people involved: delivering a group of 20 people, then two groups of 3 people each, produces a total impact of Law +3.

This impact stacks with subsequent iterations of itself.

If for some reason Biggen Gurble himself is slain, the party may continue to escort more innocents to safety, for the same reward—unless the PCs themselves were behind Biggen's death!

This quest terminates if the PCs kill Biggen, or if they rescue 5 groups of townsfolk. It remains in effect until one of these conditions is met.

Quest: Denzys, Aftermath

 Summary: The Preacher of the Sheergath Temple is eager to find Larissa the Elder, and asks the party's aid in doing so.

 Rewards: Up to  1 Reward Star; 3 potions of cure light wounds

 Locations: Any.

 Key NPCs: Denzys, Larissa the Elder.

 Kickoff: Random Encounter.

 Description:

Denzys is distraught and shaken (though not in the formal manner of having the condition of the same name). The church's bodyguard, Unglar, was slain assaulting the monsters near the Obelisk, monsters of unspeakable origin have taken up shop on the rooftop of the temple, and worst of all, he cannot locate Larissa.

Though he himself is too shaken to follow, and somewhat inept in combat to begin with, Denzys offers some aid up-front in the form of healing potions, whose caliber scales in accordance with the variable challenge you are using:

Denzys' Gift

 4 potions of cure light wounds

 4 potions of cure moderate wounds

 4 potions of cure serious wounds

 4 potions of cure critical wounds

 If the PCs wish, they can help Denzys wipe out the monsters that infest the Sheergath Temple; this takes the form of the separate Quest "Cleanse the Temple", on page <?>. The rewards gained in that quest are in addition to those possible from this one.

 The party may choose to simply ignore Denzys and his predicament. Paladins and other Lawful Good-aligned PCs have an excuse to look the other way in that Denzys and his brethren are Chaotically-aligned, but other Good alignments may be challenged to justify their ignorance here. In any event, there is no real impact to the party other than the negative impact to Denzys' Attitude Tracker.

 It's possible the party simply attacks the man. This is something of a vile action, and as such attracts attention: roll on the Aftermath Random Encounter table, using Context D; reroll any non-monster result. Monster(s) that are introduced in this manner will target the party; Denzys will use the chance to escape if he can.

Denzys, Aftermath (Attack): Chaos +2

Fighting Denzys unnecessarily creates a Catalyst

Impact:  Chaos +2.

 Helping out involves finding Larissa, and returning her to Denzys. The preacher will tell the party that he last saw her heading South away from the Temple, toward the Lower-Class Residential District. Denzys asks that the party locate the Elder, and escort her to him; he says that he will meet the party in the alley just to the southwest of the Sheergath Temple.

This is really all the party has to go on. Finding Larissa is a matter of luck more than anything else: as the party searches and casts about the town, roll as you normally would on the Aftermath Random Encounter table. Any result that triggers a roll on the Beneficial Random Encounters table means that Larissa is found. Resolve the roll on the Beneficial table as normal; Larissa is simply accompanying any NPC(s) that the party encounters as a result. Upon hearing from the PCs that Unglar has died, her Temple has been overrun by monsters, and that Denzys is looking for her, she will wish to make haste to meet with her preacher and make further plans at once; she joins the party.

Escorting Larissa back to Denzys will likely involve at least one interesting encounter: roll once shortly after she joins the party on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context B. Depending on where Larissa was discovered, there may be additional opportunities for rolling on this table.

Once Larissa is escorted back to Denzys, the two of them embrace warmly, and thank the party. Larissa mentions that she lacks any real monetary reward for the party, but her Attitude Tracker as well as Denzys' increases by +15 as a result of this success. In addition, the party receives  1 Reward Star.

Denzys, Aftermath (Find Larissa): Love +2

Locating Larissa the Elder, and escorting her back to Denzys, produces a Catalyst Impact of  Love +2.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts in this Quest.

The two Sheergath devotees will then request, knowing and admitting that it asks too much of the PCs given their already-enormous effort helping out, if they might consider clearing out the monsters in the temple. This is an easy segue to the Quest "Cleanse the Temple", since the party will already be right there.

This quest will be concluded if Denzys is slain, if Larissa is slain after having been discovered, or if Larissa is successfully and safely found and returned to the preacher.

🏆 Quest: Cleanse the Temple

📖 Summary: The party is asked to purge monsters from the Sheergath Temple.

🏆 Rewards: Up to 🌟 1 Reward Star, plus 2,500 gp.

📍 Locations: Sheergath Temple.

👤 Key NPCs: Denzys, Larissa the Elder.

▶ Kickoff: Denzys or Larissa ask the party to help purify the temple of encroaching monsters.

❓ Description:

As part of side-quests for either Denzys or Larissa, the PCs may be asked to help purge monsters from the Sheergath Temple. Most prominently, this means slaying the beasties atop the roof.

To succeed in this quest, the task is fairly simple:

destroy all Forces of the Obelisk inside the Sheergath Temple. Once this is done, the PCs may return to Denzys and/or Larissa for their reward: 2,500 gp, plus 🌟 1 Reward Star.

➡ Cleanse the Temple (Succeed):
⚖️ Law +1, ☒ Chaos +1

Helping restore order to a temple of Chaos has a strange combination of Catalyst Impacts: ⚖️ Law +1, ☒ Chaos +1.

This quest remains in effect until Denzys and Larissa are both dead for whatever reason, or until the party successfully slays all monstrous occupants of the Sheergath Temple and return to one of the NPCs for a reward.

🏆 Quest: War is Good For Business

📖 Summary: Apprentice Stewy wants help growing his underground black market operations in the wake of the Eruption.

🏆 Rewards: Up to 750 gp, plus pick of the supplies stolen.

📍 Locations: Any.

👤 Key NPCs: Stewy.

▶ Kickoff: Random Encounter.

❓ Description:

🗨️ “You! Yeah, you, there; don’t act so surprised. C’mere. I got a job, needs doing, and you look like you could use a break, right?”

The shabby, penniless-looking fishery apprentice has truly flourished in the destruction of the Obelisk’s arrival. His fledgeling underground crime ring has prospered, and though it’s not yet been but a few hours, his agents have pounced on the many opportunities for petty and more severe crime while the Militia is distracted and chaos runs rampant.

Stewy’s proposition is straightforward: he knows of secret supply caches, hidden in the Mayor’s House. How he came by this intelligence, he will not say; no amount of skill checks will force his voice in the matter.

The mission is to sneak into the building, locate at least one of the secret rooms, steal as many supplies as they can, and return to the Cistern, where Stewy will be waiting to receive the goods. As reward, the apprentice offers 10% of the street value of the stolen supplies (maximum 750 gp), plus the party’s pick of anything stolen—one item per PC, that is.

👉 Ignoring the proposal seems easy, but it’s not, so much: refusing to help will prompt Stewy to shrug, and point out his perspective that if you’re not part of the solution, you’re part of the problem... in this case, the problem of do-gooders having information about secret and illegal operations. The apprentice underlord himself is no combatant, but at a gesture, 1d4+2 Hired Goons walk silently out of the shadows to flank him. The menace is clear: help, or Stewy will be forced to ensure the party’s silence in the only manner guaranteed to be effective. If the party still refuses, they may try and talk their way out of the fight that is almost certain to ensue: make a ⚠️ Charisma (Persuasion) or Wisdom (Perception) check, opposed by Stewy’s Charisma (Intimidation) check. Failure means Stewy is convinced—not of the party’s silence or good faith, but that they must be killed; he gestures, and the Goons attack the PCs. In the bloodbath that follows, Stewy leaves the scene immediately, safe to scheme another day.

Success means the PCs have convinced Stewy, either that they won’t tell a soul, or that he’s better off letting them live. He dismisses the goons, who lurk back into the shadows from whence they came, but leaves the party with a final threat: tell anyone about the supply caches, or seek to raid them for themselves, and the PCs will soon learn just how wide-reaching his underworld crime ring is.

➡ War is Good For Business (Ignore):
⚖️ Law +2

Ignoring Quests typically produces a Chaos-based Catalyst Impact, but in this case, it instead creates ⚖️ Law +2.

↪ Attacking Stewy will immediately reveal the Hired Goons mentioned above, who rush to defend their leader. Using the highest value amongst the PCs, make a Wisdom (Perception) check, opposed by the Goons' Dexterity (Stealth) check: failure means the Goons catch the party off-guard, and enjoy a surprise round of combat before the PCs can get at the apprentice fisherman himself. As above, Stewy escapes in the resulting melee.

↪ War is Good For Business (Attack): ☒ Chaos +2, ☒ Law +1

Confusingly, attacking Stewy creates both law and order: there is a Catalyst Impact of ☒ Chaos +2, ☒ Law +1.

↪ Whether they eagerly accept the work, or feel threatened into it by the brutish hirelings, the party may simply go for it, and try to help. Stewy knows only that there are two caches in the building: one of weapons, the other of general supplies. He doesn't know if they're on the ground or second floor, nor if their doors are trapped. It's up to the PCs to locate these caches, if they aren't already aware of them.

Note that there are other opportunities to raid these supply caches—via Quest, encounter, or simply happening across the secrets. There's so much in the secret rooms, however, that the PCs can “go back to the well” as many times as prompted by these opportunities, without depleting the stores.

On their way from Stewy to the Mayor's House, roll at least once on the Aftermath Random Encounters table (page 319). Depending on the distance remaining yet to go, you may be called upon roll a second time.

Once at the house, the party needs to locate at least one of the two secret rooms: the Emergency Supply Cache, and the Weapons Cache. Once found, supplies should be loaded; it's up to the party as to who carries what, but recall that the reward scales with the amount of loot pilfered. Detail-oriented gaming groups can weigh out exactly who carries what, but as each and every piece of equipment and individual supply will be given over to others at their destination, one quick-and-dirty approach is to simply count everyone as now suffering under a heavy load (Max Dex Bonus +1, Check Penalty -6, Speed 20 ft./15 ft., Run x3) until they deliver everything.

Assuming the party is successful in raiding at least one of the rooms, they must return: roll again on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, this time using Context B.

Upon reaching the Cistern, the party will be met by Stewy and his Hired Goons, who gladly accept the supplies. True to his word, Stewy will let each PC pick one item, and will then give them the monetary reward, calculated based on what remains.

↪ Stewy, Aftermath (Complete): ☒ Chaos +3

Successfully completing the mission for Stewy generates a Catalyst Impact of ☒ Chaos +3.

If asked as to his plans for the booty, he will smirk and tell the PCs that's his business; if pressed, he'll admit that he intends to sell them on the black market for as much as he can gouge for.

This quest terminates if Stewy is somehow slain, if the PCs end up fighting the Hired Goons, if the PCs refuse and succeed at their skill check to talk their way out of the fight, or if the PCs successfully raid the supply cache(s) and return with booty for the apprentice.

🏆 Quest: It's Not As Though They're Coming Back

👤 Summary: The half-orc landlord takes the opportunity of the deserted building to loot through her apartments. The PCs may intervene, or let her be.

🏆 Rewards: Up to 🌟 2 Reward Stars.

📍 Locations: Any.

👤 Key NPCs: Pilga.

▶ Kickoff: Random Encounter.

❓ Description:

💬 "Shit for sale!" A tall, sturdy half-orc woman is hawking wares on the street, seemingly unaware of the chaos that swarms about the city. As you watch, she snorts, and spits mucus. Satisfied, she resumes her loud chanting and salesmanship.

No skill check is required to notice that Pilga is selling other peoples' valuables.

👉 The party can simply let her be. Since there's not definitive proof necessarily, there's no real harm to Good or Lawfully-aligned PCs, however Paladins and others of Lawful Good orientation should at least check things out in more detail. There's no 📌 Catalyst Impact to this approach.

👉 It would be a bit of a drastic action, and a huge overreaction, but the party may simply attack the landlord-turned-hawker. Pilga sees the PCs coming, but is taken by surprise at their attack; the PCs enjoy a round of surprise attack before combat is truly joined.

🎲 1d4 rounds into the battle (counting the surprise attack round), roll on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context B; any monsters that result will wade into the fray, favoring the PCs as targets. This gives Pilga a chance to escape, if she's not faring too well in the melee.

👉 It's Not As Though They're Coming Back (Attack):
⊗ Chaos +1

Attacking results in a Catalyst Impact: ⊗ Chaos +1.

👉 Most likely, the party will want to check the situation out. In conversation, the half-orc readily admits that she has been going through the left-behind belongings of her tenants, rooting through to find anything of value that she can sell. She sees to problem with this; after all, even if things return to normal right away, her tenants left, and might not come back at all. Pilga has to pay the bills and feed herself just like anyone else, so why shouldn't she go through what might otherwise just be trash?

If the PCs wish to press further, or to get her to stop doing this, they'll have to wade through the following skill challenge. If at any stage, Pilga and the PCs find themselves in combat, it may attract Forces of the Obelisk; 2 rounds into the battle, roll on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context A, and reroll any results that do not introduce a monster.

⚠️ Mend Your Ways

First Check: Charisma (Persuasion) or Charisma (Intimidation), opposed by Pilga's Charisma (Intimidation) check. Failure with an Charisma (Intimidation) check causes Pilga to become enraged, and attack the party. Failure with a Charisma (Persuasion) check applies a -2 circumstance penalty to the party's subsequent checks in this skill challenge, but this stage may be attempted once again. Success gets the landlord's attention, and advances the challenge to the next stage.

Second Check: Wisdom (Perception), opposed by Pilga's Charisma (Deception) check. Failure reverts the challenge to the first check; success gives Pilga the impression that the PCs understand her plight, and sympathize with it.

Third Check: Charisma (Persuasion) or Charisma (Intimidation), opposed by Pilga's Charisma (Deception) check. Failure with Charisma (Intimidation) antagonizes Pilga into attacking the party; failure with Charisma (Persuasion) regresses the challenge to the Second Check. Success finally convinces the landlord merchant to give up her morbid scavenging altogether.

👉 It's Not As Though They're Coming Back (Mend Your Ways):
⚖️ Law +3

Completing the skill challenge and convincing Pilga to mend her ways has a Catalyst Impact of ⚖️ Law +3.

This quest terminates if Pilga is slain or attacks the PCs, if she leaves the area, or if the party convinces her to mend her ways.

Quest: The Earth Shook

 Summary: Jozan, the barkeep / gigolo, was engaged in extracurricular activities during the Obelisk Eruption, and has a somewhat sensitive situation with which he could use some discreet help.

 Rewards: Up to  3 Reward Stars, plus 75 gp, plus free drinks at the Leaky Cask Tavern

 Locations: Any.

 Key NPCs: Jozan.

 Kickoff: Random Encounter.

 Description:

The party is approached by Jozan, who looks sheepish and awkward. If the PCs have encountered him before the Eruption, they will immediately notice the difference, and that this demeanor is out of character for the normally-confident and effervescent bartender.

As the party might know already, Jozan has been known to offer his services in the way of temporary romantic encounters... he's a gigolo, and was engaged in business in one of the Inn's rooms when the Obelisk Erupted. In the moment, it was quite an effect; the services were, as Jozan tactfully puts it, quite successful, and once the earthquakes had subsided, he had considered it a job well done. The trouble is, the woman who commissioned his work appears to have had a heart attack, and died during the rendering of said services.

Now, Jozan is slowly realizing the true threat to the city, but is still quite embarrassed about the debacle he left in the Inn. The woman was not from Berinn corte, and merely passing through on her way elsewhere, and Jozan suspects that nobody really knew her, so that's not what he's worried about... this sort of thing has never happened to him before, and out of respect for the poor woman, and in the chaos of the city now, he'd prefer that he not just leave her there, embarrassingly deceased and easy pickings for evil monsters to consume.

The bartender has no real wealth other than his bar, which currently has monsters in it, but he promises to give the PCs the payment from the deceased—75 gp—as well as all of their drinks, on the house, for the remainder of the month, assuming the Leaky Cask Tavern ever opens again!

 The PCs may choose to ignore the situation, either because they're too busy with other tasks, or if they have some sort of moral objection to the incident or Jozan's line of work. The barkeep is disappointed, but understands, and leaves the party to their other tasks.

 It's difficult to guess why, but the party might attack the bartender. Jozan defends himself, of course, but the unprovoked attack on one of the city's most beloved characters surely draws attention: roll once on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, use Context D, and reroll any results that don't explicitly involve one or more monsters. Any nasties introduced in this manner target the PCs, and Jozan will be able to escape to seek help elsewhere.

The Earth Shook (Attack): Chaos +3

Attacking the bartender produces a Catalyst Impact of  Chaos +3.

 Helping the poor man out may not qualify as a noble act, but it certainly seems low-risk. Unless the party comes across Jozan while in the Inn itself, they may encounter some interesting diversion as they follow him back to that establishment: roll on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context C, to determine what occurs.

Once they arrive at the Inn, the party gains  1 Reward Star. Jozan will lead the party to the appropriate bedroom, where he will respectfully wrap the departed lady in sheets, and together with one party member, they can carry her out of the building. During any combat that results from this point onward, Jozan will drop their morbid burden so he can participate in the fighting.

Phase two of the mission involves carrying her to the Graveyard. The PCs may not have realized that this was the man's intent, but at this point, it's almost too late to avoid seeing things through! En route, the party will likely be attacked; roll on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context B.

As they carry their charge through Town Square, roll yet again on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, this time using Context D.

Reaching the Graveyard at all benefits the party of an additional  1 Reward Star. Once there, Jozan will begin to dig; while he is performing the burial, roll one final time on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context B again, but this time, keep rerolling any results that do not involve at least one monster. Jozan is of course occupied digging, so will not participate in the attack that ensues.

At the conclusion of the combat, Jozan completes his task, and thanks the party immensely. He pays them, and is ready to send them on their way... when he realizes that he and the party are all stranded in the Graveyard! If the party is aware of the secret door connecting the south of the Graveyard with the north wall of the Zugul Church, they may suggest using that to escape to safety; doing so means they can navigate to the south of the Town Square without further challenge. Lacking knowledge of such a shortcut, however, the group will have to move through the area encroached directly by the Dark Obelisk—roll one final time on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context D.

Successfully escaping the Graveyard / Town Square area, via either method, merits one third and final  Reward Star.

The Earth Shook (Complete):

 Law +2,  Love +2

Successfully burying the body in the Graveyard generates a Catalyst Impact of  Law +2,  Love +2.

This quest terminates when the PCs complete their aid of the situation, if Jozan and the PCs part company, or if somehow Jozan is slain.

Quest: Kisses from Afar

 Summary: Driven slightly maniacal after the death of her lover Phadian Gess, Lingona takes bow shots at strangers until she's discovered.

 Rewards: Up to  3 Reward Stars.

 Locations: Any.

 Key NPCs: Lingona the bard.

 Kickoff: Random Encounter.

 Description:

To start things off, first make a ranged attack on the party—select a PC at random. Use Lingona's standard attack with a thrown dagger (i.e., dagger (thrown) +4 (1d4+1/19-20)). The attacked PC hears a whiff in the air, and nothing more; the main reason anyone in the party realizes they're being attacked is either the dagger clattering to the cobblestones, or the blade suddenly sticking out of the armor of one of their own!

 In the spirit of equipping the GM enough to preemptively debate any strict rules adherents in the gaming group, ordinarily, the PCs would have a well-regulated chance to notice the bard's attack, and the whole matter might be handled differently according to certain rules. However, it's worth remembering that this is the chaotic aftermath of an upheaval of the natural state of things: an enormous chunk of pure chaos has just burst forth, along with dozens, perhaps hundreds, of nasty creatures. Fire rains from the sky; fireballs streak across it. No building in town is completely unscathed, and all but the most stalwart or sociopathic citizens are unhinged to varying degrees.

So, yes, it's a bit harder than usual to notice who's flinging daggers at you.

Lingona's normal profile indicates she ordinarily carries a single dagger—these are not ordinary times. She's scavenged all manner of weaponry from dead bodies, the Leaky Cask Tavern, and households; the bard is equipped with a sufficient stock of edged, somewhat aerodynamic tossable arms to keep this up for a long time.

This quest is all about avoiding the attacks until they cease, or finding their source and putting an end to it. Until this quest terminates, every  1d4 minutes (i.e., 10-40 rounds), Lingona will attack again, with the same profile.

In her newly-chaotic and reckless state, Lingona lacks a focused attention span, and could easily get bored with her little morbid game. After the first attack, there is a  10% chance she will cease her attacks. Make this same check after each attack; every subsequent attack increases this likelihood of distraction by 2%. So, for example, after the fourth attack, there is a 16% chance she will stop. If she decides to stop attacking, this quest ends without any further chance of the PCs discovering who was behind the bizarre anonymous assaults; surely frustrating.

 If your gaming group is the sort that simply must figure everything out, and you determine that Lingona stops her sniping, the GM is encouraged to forcibly select this Quest again sometime later in the adventure, to give the PCs a chance to solve the mystery. Or, alternately, you can simply ignore this “chance to stop” entirely and just have her keep attacking until the PCs pass their check (see below).

Despite the chaos of their surroundings, sharp PCs may be able to figure out where the attacks are coming from. After each attack is resolved, assuming the PCs are explicitly interested in noticing the source of the attack, you may make a  Wisdom (Perception) check, opposed by Lingona's Charisma (Deception) check; the PCs take a -2 circumstance penalty to reflect the chaos of their surroundings.

Success means they see a flash of clothing around a particular corner, and the chase is on. Lingona will of course flee, but not far; she will duck into the nearest alley or building and try to hide. If the PCs follow her, make an additional  Wisdom (Perception) check, again opposed by Lingona's Charisma (Deception) check, but this time with no penalty; failure means she remains hidden and will escape once the PCs leave the area to search further—her attacks will resume 10 minutes later. Success with this second check reveals the sneaky bard, and grants the PCs  1 Reward Star for doing so.

 The PCs can simply attack or kill her; she will put up a fight, but her main aim is to try and escape if she can. This attack is fairly justified, but still, there may be more peaceful ways to resolve the situation, and so it may still attract chaotic attention: roll once on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context C, to see if anything intervenes. If a combat encounter ensues from this roll, Lingona will use the distraction to sneak away, cackling to herself while doing so; she then survives and this Quest may be randomly picked again later in the adventure, but for now, this Quest ends.

If attacked, Lingona has lost enough of her sanity that she won't even try to talk her way out of the situation; she will grin maniacally and join combat grimly. The effect is fairly unsettling, and all at once, somewhat explains her behavior: of course she's flinging daggers; she's insane. If the PCs notice this, conclude that she is simply insane, and sheath their weapons, she will look puzzled, and put down her own as well, allowing the group to continue in the vein of a possibly-nonlethal solution (see below).

Kisses From Afar (Attack):

 Law +1

Attacking Lingona produces a Catalyst Impact of  Law +1.

 The possibly-nonlethal approach is to try and talk with her. As mentioned above, Lingona is on the brink of losing her mind fully, so the situation must be approached delicately. The gaming group is encouraged to take advantage of this opportunity to roleplay on both sides, but from a rolling-and-checking standpoint, it takes the form of the following skill challenge.

If by some chance the PCs are aware that Phadian Gess has died in the Eruption, and that he and Lingona were lovers, then they may skip the First Check entirely, and consider it automatically passed if reverted to.

Just Put Down the Knife

First Check: Wisdom (Perception), opposed by Lingona's Charisma (Deception). Failure means she tries to run away again. Success gives the PCs the impression that she might have lost someone dear to her in the Eruption; the sympathy they may now feel advances the challenge.

Second Check: Charisma (Persuasion), opposed by Lingona's Charisma (Deception). Failure reverts to the First Check; success gets the bard to listen to the party seriously, and advances the challenge.

Third Check: Lingona takes out her mandolin and begins to play. It's not magical, however; any bard in the party immediately notices that it's simply nervous playing. This check therefore is Charisma (Persuasion) or Charisma (Intimidation), opposed by Lingona's Charisma (Deception) (Perform (String Instruments)). Failure reverts the challenge to the Second Check; success completes the challenge.

Successfully completing the challenge above convinces Lingona to stop with the morbid theatrics, and try and get to safety where someone can look after her and help her begin to heal. Completing the skill challenge grants the party a second  1 Reward Star.

If the party is aware of any places of sanctuary, they may go the extra mile and attempt to escort her to safety. Successfully doing so merits a third  1 Reward Star, but may not be a walk in the park: roll on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context B, to see if anything impedes their progress.

Kisses From Afar (Talk):

 Law +2 / +4

Talking Lingona down creates a Catalyst Impact of  Law +2. Escorting her to safety increases this impact to Law +4.

This quest only ends if the party discovers and confronts Lingona (and either kills her, or convinces her to stop), if she is slain in some other fashion, or if the GM determines that she has become bored and takes her mayhem elsewhere.

Quest: A Devil Made Me Do It

 Summary: Zook Beren claims to know of a safe place; instead, he leads the PCs into an ambush because he's under the influence of powerful and evil villains.

 Rewards: Up to  2 Reward Stars.

 Locations: Any.

 Key NPCs: Zook Beren.

 Kickoff: Random Encounter.

 Description:

 “Ah, thank the Gods someone's there! Come, quickly, now!” A young and competent-looking gnome beckons you to him. “Ye've gotta be daft, to be out and about. Don't ye know the city's gone mad? Evil everywhere, and where there's not evil, chaos. Come with me. This way!”

The Leaky Cask Tavern's master brewer, Zook Beren, approaches the party and claims to know of a safe place. If the party has met with Zook before, they may know him to be a straightforward, seemingly honest gnome, and will likely trust him, particularly if their health and resources are low already from prior battles.

Zook does not state a particular building or objective; as this encounter might occur anywhere in the city, simply have Zook guide the party along the nearest alley, in a direction generally away from the City Gates. If the party asks him where this sanctuary is, he simply says it's closeby.

If the party already knows of one or more places of sanctuary in the city, they may suspect something, as it's clear that the brewer is not leading them to one of them.

After 3 minutes of leading the party along, an ambush is sprung: roll on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context D; reroll any results that do not explicitly involve one or more monsters. The monster(s) target the PCs; Zook himself says “I'm dreadfully sorry! They got hold of my mind, and... well, best of luck to ye, truly!” He then escapes while the PCs' attention is presumably occupied.

Zook was cornered by a powerful mind, and coerced into leading townsfolk into this ambush. For his part, he was under the impression that it guaranteed his own safety, so long as he succeeded in his task. He truly does regret what he is doing, but in the chaos and villainy of the aftermath, he doesn't see any other option.

 Either out of suspicion, or general evil hostility, the party can attack Zook. Whether this happens right away upon seeing him, or just before the ambush is sprung, it brings the same attention: roll as described above on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, and have the monster(s) attack the party wherever they are stopped. Zook escapes in the ensuing battle.

A Devil Made Me Do It (Attack): Chaos +1

Attacking Zook produces a Catalyst Impact:  Chaos +1.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts in this Quest.

 The party can simply walk into the trap, unawares. If they truly didn't suspect anything about Zook and his promised sanctuary, they are automatically taken by surprise; the enemy gets a surprise round of combat before the battle is truly joined. If they even vaguely didn't trust the gnome's purpose, make a single  Wisdom (Perception) check for the party, using the PC with the highest such value; oppose it with the monster(s)' Dexterity (Stealth) check. The monster(s) get a +4 circumstance bonus for lurking in hiding already. If the PCs fail, they suffer the enemy having a surprise round of combat; if they succeed, combat proceeds as normal.

Aside from the normal XP award for defeating the creature(s) involved in the ambush, there is no additional reward for either of these options (attack Zook, or follow him blindly).

Falling into the trap has no  Catalyst Impact.

 Suspicious PCs may question Zook before agreeing to follow him. Make a  Wisdom (Perception) check, opposed by Zook's Charisma (Deception) check; success suggests that the gnome is flustered, anxious, and generally amped up in a manner far more than seems appropriate for the context. If this isn't enough on its own to keep the PCs wary, they might sensibly question him: if it's so dangerous in the city, how come Zook himself seems safe? Zook will claim it's because he's aware of this safe place, and he only leaves it for short durations, and then only to gather innocents like the party back into safety. The PCs may attempt another check with this response, same as before, if they didn't succeed, with the same results. Successfully passing at least one of these checks, and having reasonable doubts in the first place, merits  1 Reward Star. Once the party has gained this amount of suspicion, they may attack him (see above), follow him anyway (see above), leave him altogether (see below), or offer to escort him to a true safe place (see below).

A Devil Made Me Do It (Truth): Law +2

Discovering the truth begets a Catalyst Impact of  Law +2.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts in this Quest.

↳ At any point prior to following Zook, the PCs may offer to lead the anxious gnome to safety of their own selection. This is possible only if the party is already aware of at least one place of sanctuary. Zook will have misgivings, and feebly claim his own is closer by, but once he understands the party is sincere, he will seize upon the opportunity. Along the way, make at least one roll on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context B. During any combat encountered in this manner, Zook will stand by, terrified not only of the battle but of villains behind the monsters holding him accountable for his treachery. Successfully escorting the gnome to true safety will earn the party 1 Reward Star; this may stack with the Star that may already have been earned via skill checks (above).

⇒ A Devil Made Me Do It (Escort):
 Law +1, Love +2

Escorting the gnome to safety brings about a Catalyst Impact of Law +1, +2.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts in this Quest.

↳ If for any reason—disinterest, preoccupation, or suspicion, for example—the PCs do not choose to follow Zook, he becomes noticeably more flustered. He repeats his dire assessment about the safety of the city, and urges the party to come with him for their own good. Wise PCs will pursue questioning (see above), but if that is unsuccessful, or if the party does not question him, they may simply decline a second time. Zook finally begs the PCs to follow him, and vaguely suggests his own life is in danger if they do not comply. If the party leaves him at this point, roll once on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context C; any monsters that result will attack the party, during which time Zook will escape. Once any encounter has been resolved, or if no encounter is rolled, then the PCs may take their leave of the gnomish brewer with no further consequence... other than the thought of the terrified gnome imporing them to comply.

This quest terminates if Zook leaves the PCs' presence or is slain, if the ambush is sprung, or if Zook is delivered to safety by the PCs.

Quest: Havens for Gold

Summary: Berinncorte's jester and greeter is willing to share valuable information... for a price.

Rewards: Up to 1 Reward Star.

Locations: Any.

Key NPCs: Hueykins (page 662).

Kickoff: Random Encounter.

Description:

☞ A brightly-dressed bard hails you, and greets you with wary warmth. He appears anxious, and constantly checking his surroundings. "How fare you, friends? Much luck finding shelter?" He shakes his head. "The things I've seen, these last few... what has it been? Minutes? Days? Years? It's hard to tell." Sighing, he brightens up all of a sudden. "Well, then. Good news, I have to share. Yes! If perhaps you've not yet heard, there are some scant few places, hidden here and there, where one might find solace, temporary reprieve, yes, from the terrors coming out of Town Square. I'm obliged to share them with you, to help ensure your safety. If I might, however, before I do... do you happen to have any coin to spare? I'm afraid I've donated my wealth, all, to those less fortunate, and as such the only currency to my name is knowledge."

Hueykins is more than willing to share his information... for a price. He claims to know of three safe places, and will share any number of them for 250 gp apiece. He will accept coin, gems, or anything of value, so long as the street prices total his ask.

In no particular order, he claims these havens to be: the Stables, the Butcher's Shop, and the Cryptkeeper's Shack.

Note that two of these are most certainly not actual places of sanctuary!

In fact, Hueykins has no idea as to where is safe and where is not safe, and is merely trying to make a gold piece or two along the way, taking advantage of the chaos and townfolks' general uncertainty. His accuracy, that the Shack is indeed safe, is pure chance: he picked it randomly.

In addition, the bard will give the PCs a discount for information: 100 gp for each NPC that the party knows is alive or dead, and their location. He claims to be broke, so will only offer this payment in the form of a discount on his own knowledge.

⇒ Havens for Gold (Believe):
 Chaos +2

Paying for, and accepting, information from the jester incurs a Catalyst Impact of Chaos +2.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts in this Quest.

↳ If the party is suspicious, they may attempt a single Wisdom (Perception) check, opposed by the bard's Charisma (Deception) check; success suggests that he may not be entirely confident in his claim. They may attempt this check anew for each claimed haven, so if the party spends the maximum bribe of 750 gp, they may attempt this three times. In each case, use the Wisdom (Perception) value of the PC whose value is highest.

🔍 It could be that the PCs have actually visited one or both of the false “safe” places that Hueykins claims. If they point out to him one such mistake, he will apologize, shake his head, and explain that he is quite flummoxed from the chaos and running away from one monster or the other. He meant to say, instead, the Sheergath Temple. Note that this, too, is unsafe; even more so than the other two false havens! If the party points out a second mistake, Hueykins will shrug, then grin, saying “well, you can’t fault a bard for trying to make a profit, can you?” He will return the party’s payment and own up to the truth.

🔍 As a result of a successful skill check, or as a result of proving him false through personal experience, the party may accuse Hueykins of treachery. Discovering the truth in either of these forms grants the party 1 Reward Star. The bard knows he is outnumbered and outclassed in terms of combat capabilities; he will first try to pay them to forget the incident, offering 300 gp. If the party accepts, he will bid them good day. If they refuse, Hueykins will increase the payoff to 500 gp. If the PCs still decline, he will get angry, and try to run away. If they let him go, the PCs will not see the bard again in this adventure; if they chase him down, he will surrender if caught and plead mercy. Further action is left to the discretion of the GM; the town Militia has their hands full, so may not pay attention to a lying bard whose claims they already know to be of questionable accuracy.

📌 Havens for Gold (Truth): 🔮 Law +1

Discovering the truth about the claimed havens produces a Catalyst Impact of 🔮 Law +1.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts in this Quest.

🔍 Attacking Hueykins, either as a consequence of discovering his ruse, or simply as its own evil act, will bring attention: roll immediately on the Aftermath Random Encounters table. Use Context B if the PCs have no real motive; use Context C if they have discovered the truth of his claims. Any monsters encountered will disrupt the conversation, and allow Hueykins the chance to escape.

📌 Havens for Gold (Attack): 🔮 Chaos +1

Fighting Hueykins results in a Catalyst Impact: 🔮 Chaos +1.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts in this Quest.

This quest terminates if the PCs and Hueykins part ways, or if Hueykins is slain.

🏆 Quest: Unexpected Ally

🗺️ Summary: A lone elven ranger and his animal companion offer to join the party.

🏆 Rewards: Gyldor and Glyff join the party for the duration of the adventure.

📍 Locations: Any.

👤 Key NPCs: Gyldor and Glyff.

▶️ Kickoff: Random Encounter.

❓ Description:

🗨️ You see a tall elven ranger; to his side crawls an intelligent-seeming wolverine. Gyldor greets you silently and beckons you closer.

With no preamble, he begins: “Well met, friends. I’ve been watching you for some time. Present circumstances prevent a more thorough discussion of the matter, but suffice it to say, you’re needed... and elsewhere. Just so happens, I’m of a mind of get out of town as well. So I’d propose that we join forces, and get out of here with all alacrity.”

Gyldor will, frustratingly, not elaborate on this cryptic description of the situation. The offer—and indeed, the circumstances—are precisely what they appear, and the offer is genuine.

This Quest results in no 📌 Catalyst Impact.

🔍 If the party attacks Gyldor at any time, he defends the blows and tries to escape. This is helped greatly by the attention such an act attracts—roll on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context D, and keep rerolling until you get an encounter that involves at least one monster. Such monster(s) attack the party, and give Gyldor a chance to withdraw.

📖 Note that Gyldor has a significant role to play in future components of this Adventure Path. The GM is encouraged, by hook or by crook, to endeavor to keep him alive if at all possible. If the PCs are dead-set against the elven ranger ally for some reason, further adventures will have a contingency available, but it’s much better to simply have him alive. One option is to introduce a version of Gyldor who is more advanced than the variable challenge you are using for the PCs.

🔍 The PCs may be wary of the stranger’s offer of help—justly so, given the circumstances! Any amount of Wisdom (Perception) or similar checks will reveal sincerity. But if the party isn't biting, then Gyldor will not press them; he takes his leave of the group and wishes them well. "I'm certain we will see each other again," he leaves them with.

 Most parties will be only too glad of the help in the wake of the chaos! Gyldor joins the party if the PCs are willing, and will stay with them until the adventure concludes (or until he dies, of course). After each encounter, and during each decision as to what to do next, he presses the party to escape town with all urgency. As with other allies, he fights to the best of his abilities alongside the party. The GM is, however, encouraged to "fudge" the rules if necessary along the way to help ensure his safety (see GM note above).

While he is with the party, the PCs may have any number of questions for him. They may use his skills for challenges on behalf of the party, and he will answer any general questions about the city of Berinncorte, the locations of buildings, that sort of thing. He is not aware of any places of sanctuary, and in any event, would not seek them out, preferring instead to find a way out of the city entirely. Gyldor will not address any questions about his claims of having watched the party, about their larger purpose, or his own origins;

 While cryptic, such discussions are beyond the scope of this adventure, and in any event do not fit the "mood" of Act Three. Though the players may be frustrated, the GM is encouraged to portray Gyldor in such a manner that such ambiguity is consistent with his character.

This quest ends if the party and Gyldor part ways, if Gyldor is slain, or if Gyldor joins the party.

Quest: Protection for a Price

 Summary: A strange half-elven hawker offers seemingly vital items for sale.

 Rewards: Up to  1 Reward Star.

 Locations: Any.

 Key NPCs: Kayzark.

 Kickoff: Random Encounter.

 Description:

This quest is similar to the random encounter "Take a Look", in that Kayzark appears, and has a hodgepodge of odd items for sale.

In addition to the items for sale in Table 5: Kayzark's Wares, which are still for sale at the same prices, he offers the following:

Table 61: Kayzark's Wares, Aftermath

Type	Item	Price
Protection	signet ring of obscurity (see below)	500 gp
Protection	necklace of nondetection (see below)	1,000 gp

Note that both items are cursed; see the descriptions below. Although both items function identically, the necklace is twice the price—Kayzark will claim it is due to the extra protection offered, but this, like the items' true nature, is a complete fabrication!

Signet Ring of Obscurity (cursed)

Value 50 gp; Weight ¼ lb.; Materials gold; Nature magical; Aura faint divination; Slot ring; CL n/a

This ring is black in color, with a faint purplish tinge in the signet area, which takes the shape of a cloak woven about a humanoid figure. It is typically marketed as providing protection; the wearer is supposed to suffer less attention from evil or chaotic enemies.

In reality, this is a cursed ring. Wearers may remove it at any time, but it bestows adverse effects that may be difficult to diagnose in separation from other factors. Donning the ring, the wearer feels as though a dark shade or shadow has fallen over them; this should be interpreted optimistically as though it were a kind of cloak of protection unless the truth of the ring is known.

In the context of Dark Obelisk: Berinncorte, if this ring is worn by any PC, it "worsens" any rolls on any Aftermath Random Encounter tables. Specifically, rolls using Context A use Context B instead; Context B becomes Context D; and Context C is changed to Context A. Worst of all, rolls already using Context D are changed to two rolls: one using Context D, and a second roll using Context C.

Any conditions or restrictions that the circumstances apply to the roll still apply, and will apply to both rolls if two are called for using the above logic. For example, if an encounter asks you to roll on the Random Encounter table, and reroll until you get a monster encounter, you would still do that, but you would do it using the "worsened" Context.

Construction Requirements signet ring; ability to cast bestow curse; Cost materials and spellcasting

Necklace of Nondetection (cursed)

Value 50 gp; Weight ¼ lb.; Materials obsidian and silver; Nature magical; Aura faint divination; Slot neck; CL n/a Blackish-purple in hue, this necklace is iridescent, and appears to be comprised of a series of ovular chunks of a polished stone, strung together on a chain of pure silver.

Hawkers will claim the item grants protective properties, shielding the wearer from enemies of all sorts, and granting additional favor if combat with such enemies is unavoidable.

In reality, this jewelry is cursed. A wearer may remove it at any time, but until they do, it will bestow adverse effects that may be difficult to diagnose in separation from other factors.

This necklace behaves exactly as a Signet Ring of Obscurity (cursed); see above.

Construction Requirements necklace; ability to cast bestow curse; Cost materials and spellcasting

If the party is skeptical, they may attempt magic to discover the items' true nature. Alternately, the party may attempt a single Wisdom (Perception) check (use the highest value among the PCs), opposed by Kayzark's Charisma (Deception) check; success indicates that the half-elf is hiding something about the true nature or use of the jewelry on offer. Succeeding in one of these approaches grants the party 1 Reward Star.

Protection for a Price (Truth):
Law +1

Succeeding at a skill check as a result of skepticism, or divining the truth nature of the cursed items, creates a Catalyst Impact of Law +1.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts in this Quest.

Skepticism, intuition, or a simple evil nature may cause the party to attack the vendor. Kayzark is prepared for this, and conducts his transactions tensed, with his adrenaline up; he has one foot out the door already. Make a separate Wisdom (Perception) check (use the highest value among the PCs), opposed by Kayzark's Charisma (Deception) check; if the PCs fail, Kayzark gains a surprise round of combat, which he uses to flee at top speed away from the party. If the PCs pursue, he will continue to flee. If the PCs catch up with him, he will claim the jewelry is useless, and ask forgiveness; another Wisdom (Perception) check (use the highest value among the PCs), opposed by Kayzark's Charisma (Deception) check will reveal that he is still lying about something. Further action is left to the GM to regulate, recalling that the Militia has their hands full and will likely not care too much about a fraudulent vendor!

Protection for a Price (Attack):
Chaos +2

Fighting Kayzarck, justified or not, results in a Catalyst Impact: Chaos +2.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts in this Quest.

This quest ends when Kayzark is slain, or if Kayzark and the PCs part ways.

Quest: Lend a Hand for a Landlord

Summary: The landlord of the Upper-Class Residential District has a few opportunities for a helpfully-minded group of adventurers such as the PCs.

Rewards: Up to 3,000 gp, plus up to 2 Reward Stars.

Locations: Any .

Key NPCs: Tarsheva Hornwood.

Kickoff: Random Encounter.

Description:

A half-elf woman in sophisticated garb heralds you and asks you to approach. "Well met, friends—or I hope that be so. I would ask your favor, in any of a few matters of some urgency."

There are three tasks that Tarsheva Hornwood asks of the party: Retrieve an item from one of her tenants' rooms, Inform her of the whereabouts of any or all of her tenants, and Defend the building against waves of attacks from Forces of the Obelisk.

The party may undertake any, all, or none of these activities, for varying levels of reward. The PCs may attempt these tasks in any order desired.

If at any point the PCs attack Tarsheva, it will attract attention: roll once on the Aftermath Random Encounter table, using Context B; keep rerolling until you resolve to an encounter that explicitly involves one or more monsters. Such enemies will target the party, allowing Tarsheva herself to escape if possible.

Retrieve

Tarsheva knows that one of her tenants, the butcher Ganyc, will be desperate to know the whereabouts of a particular item, normally kept in his room. As she has not seen the man, she assumes it is still in his quarters in the Upper-Class Residential District. She asks the PCs to venture into the building, gain access to his rooms, retrieve the item, and give it back to her.

The item itself is completely mundane: it's a writing quill, found on the writing desk in his bedroom. The challenge here lies in navigating the building without, or defeating any, incident.

Upon return of the item to Tarsheva, the party benefits of 600 gp and 1 Reward Star.

Lend a Hand for a Landlord (Retrieve):

Law +1, Love +2

Retrieving the item for Ganyc introduces a Catalyst Impact of Law +1, Love +2.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts in this Quest.

Inform

Simply put, Tarsheva is worried about her tenants. If the PCs know of any of them, whether they're alive or dead, and where they were last seen, she will pay for the knowledge: 100 gp for each of the following NPCs: Ganyc, Welby Goodbarrel, Elena Lomazonne, Gunnloda Balderk, Larissa, or Waywocket Ningel.

The PCs may return any number of times to the landlord, and can provide information on any number of NPCs when they do. Tarsheva will pay 100 gp for the first update about any given NPC, and thereafter, if the PCs encounter a tenant again and report back with a new location, she will give a further 50 gp for each such occurrence.

Lend a Hand for a Landlord (Inform):

Law +1, Love +1

Each time the party produces information for Tarsheva, it creates a Catalyst Impact of Law +1, Love +1. This impact is regardless of the number of PCs described in each occurrence. For example, say the party informs three separate times: the first time, they describe one NPC; the second time, they describe four NPCs; and the third time, they describe two NPCs. The total impact is Law +3, Love +3.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts in this Quest.

Defend

There have been noises in the area, particularly to the west. Tarsheva asks the party to help defend the Upper-Class Residential District building against multiple waves of attackers. Of the three tasks she asks of the party, this is the only one that is time- and location-specific; whenever the party agrees, she will escort them to the western entrance of the District, and will help them defend. Treat her as an ally for the battles.

Joining their ranks will be Berinncorte Militia forces. At the start of the battle, 2d6 Berinncorte Militia plus 1d4-1 (minimum zero) Berinncorte Elite Guard will be present. In between the waves, additional Militia will arrive to assist and help cover any losses.

Wave 1: Skeleton Attack, and roll three times on that table to determine the assaulting force.

In between Waves 1 and 2, another 1d6 Berinncorte Militia and 1d2 Berinncorte Elite Guard arrive to bolster the defense.

Wave 2: Ettins and Ogres; one Ettin, two Ogres, and one Skelettin attack.

In between Waves 2 and 3, another 1d4 Berinncorte Militia and 1d4 Berinncorte Elite Guard arrive to bolster the defense.

Wave 3: 1 Skelettin plus 1d4 Chaos Beasts.

The PCs will be rewarded handsomely upon the conclusion of combat: 1,200 gp, plus 1 Reward Star.

Lend a Hand for a Landlord (Defend):

Law +5

Defending against all three waves of enemies results in a Catalyst Impact of Law +5. If the party leaves for any reason before the conclusion of all three waves and the defeat of all enemies involved, there is zero Catalyst Impact for the "Defend" component of this Quest.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts in this Quest.

This quest terminates if Tarsheva is slain, or if the PCs complete all three of the requested activities (retrieve, inform, and defend).

Quest: The Luck of a Drunken Fool

 Summary: Cryptkeeper Gurth stumbles about in a stupor... oblivious to the hazards around him.

 Rewards: Up to  2 Reward Stars.

 Locations: Any.

 Key NPCs: Cryptkeeper Gurth.

 Kickoff: Random Encounter.

 Description:

 Note: This Quest is only available if the party has already completed the Quest “It’s Safe, But You Can’t Stay Here” onp <?>. Otherwise, do not initiate this Quest, and instead treat it as No Encounter unless otherwise specified in the Random Encounter table that brought you here.

 Stumbling about before you is a stinking, disheveled gnome. He reeks of drink, and his gait is erratic. This is the Gurth you know and love, but in his intoxicated ambling, he seems to have no conception of what horrors face him in the city!

This is of course our beloved Cryptkeeper, in all his glory. In the wake of his all-consuming terror in the Shack, he has once again taken to drink, and acts for all the world as though there is not in fact an enormous, building-sized boulder of pure chaos lodged in Town Square.

The party has some options, observing him.

 They can ignore him, and be on their way. Good-aligned characters, and those who spoke up for sheltering the gnome back to safety in the prior quest that enables this one, will likely balk at this approach. However, the Cryptkeeper benefits from a good deal of luck, and will be just fine, despite the seemingly obvious danger inherent in his ways.

 It’s almost beyond possibility that the party would attack the gnome, but doing so would generate a great deal of chaotic attention: roll immediately on the Aftermath Random Encounter table, using Context D, and repeat the roll until you resolve to an encounter involving at least one monster. Said monster(s) assault the party directly, leaving Gurth to stumble freely away, ending this Quest.

 The Luck of a Drunken Fool (Attack):
 Chaos +6

Slaying the hapless, drunken gnome introduces a Catalyst Impact of  Chaos +6.

 Kind-hearted PCs will want to help the gnome. This is easier said than done: Gurth is in a complete stupor, and cannot comprehend the presence of others, let alone the meaning of their words. The smell of drink coming off the man far exceeds even the stench the party has encountered before; wise PCs will correctly surmise that the terrified Cryptkeeper has resorted to his steadfast companion, the bottle, to address his fears.

This is an outstanding opportunity for a gaming group to roleplay to hilarious effect. Regardless of the manner the GM and players wish to portray things, the challenge here involves defending Gurth against his own folly.

Left to his own pace, Gurth will walk in a random direction at half-maximum speed.

There are two approaches that will work, here.

 A strong PC can opt to simply hoist the gnome up and carry him against his will, returning him to one of the places of sanctuary. Though the Cryptkeeper will struggle and protest incoherently, this will absolutely work; however, en route, the party may be affected by a random encounter: roll on the Aftermath Random Encounter table, using Context B. Note that Gurth must be held during any combat encounter; if he’s put down, he will immediately start shambling away. This effectively removes one PC from fighting during any combat encountered.

When placed down in safety, Gurth will scowl at the PC who bore him, and spit in their face, but the party will benefit from  1 Reward Star nevertheless.

 Alternately, the PCs can simply play shepherd, letting Gurth amble along, but defending him against threats. This is possibly the more entertaining approach, but certainly the more chaotic. The PCs must survive 4 random encounters, protecting the Cryptkeeper along the way.

For each of these encounters, roll on the Aftermath Random Encounter table, using Context A. Reroll any Beneficial, Untouchable, or Villain encounters. During any rolled encounter, Gurth will be completely untouched—no fireballs strike him, he suffers no damage from acid rain, no monsters target him, and so on. He will amble about randomly, but will not stray too far from the party—when determining a random direction, don’t let him move more than 30 ft. away from the nearest PC.

After the 4 random encounters are navigated, Gurth comes to his senses, and looks at the PCs as though seeing them for the first time. “What are ye doing here?” he snorts, and walks away, toward the closest place of sanctuary. The PCs can follow him for additional protection, but strangely, no further random encounters plague him along the way.

After each encounter, there is a brief peace of no more than 1 minute—then the next event begins!

Once Gurth is safely in a place of sanctuary, the party gains another 1 Reward Star.

The Luck of a Drunken Fool (Escort): Law +1, Love +2

No matter how they go about it, if the PCs succeed in helping Gurth to safety, they create a Catalyst Impact of Law +1, Love +2.

This quest terminates if Gurth is slain or shambles away from the party, if the PCs successfully guide the gnome to a place of sanctuary, or after the PCs have suffered through 4 random encounters to help ensure the cryptkeeper's safety.

Quest: A Quavering Quaffer

Summary: Berinncorte's apothecary now wanders the streets, selling potions of a much-needed nature.

Rewards: 4 potions of cure light wounds; 1 Reward Star.

Locations: Any.

Key NPCs: Aramail Xiloscient.

Kickoff: Random Encounter.

Description:

A prickly half-elf dressed in robes grins vilely upon seeing you. He approaches, tosses wide his cloak, and offers his wares to the needy.

This is Aramil Xiloscient, the village apothecary. If the party has encountered him before, they may enter this encounter with a healthy dose of suspicion already; if not, they may venture into dangerous territory without a care.

In the wake of the Eruption, and with many more townsfolk in desperate need of healing and cures, Aramil sells all manner of potions. Everything on “Table 44: Apothecary Wares” on page 159) is for sale... but at scarcity-infected rates. His price for any cure potion is four times the price listed on that table; all other potions are merely twice the listed value.

If challenged on this scheme, he shrugs, and willingly admits to gouging the needy. But, as he helpfully points out, he's only so much inventory to dispose of; since his shop is so damaged, he can't easily make more. The high prices will help him restore his humble abode to full operation, at which time he will make it a point to offer sales and lower prices as a courtesy to those affected by the disaster.

In truth, he intends none of this, of course. Also, he has run out of stock a while ago, and is now selling possibly-harmful placebos in lieu of actual-functioning potions.

Keep track of any potions the party purchases. This may be difficult without arousing too much suspicion; one easy way of doing it is to note the type of potion purchased, and the next time a PC drinks a potion of that nature, assume it's the one they bought from Aramil as part of this quest, and its true effect is revealed. If the players themselves don't put two and two together, you can introduce a Wisdom check, at DC 16, to see if a PC connects the potion intended to the purchase.

When one of Aramil's potions bought as part of this quest is imbibed, roll on “Table 45: Apothecary Sample Effects” on page 160. In addition to whatever effect resolved there, the drinker suffers 1d4 points of damage, and feels as though their insides are being jabbed with sharp metal for a few seconds.

The GM is encouraged to add additional, comedic or sinister effects if you desire.

Needless to say, the effect for which the potion was purchased and intended does not transpire. For example, a potion of cure light wounds heals no damage.

The party might attack the apothecary, particularly if they have discovered his secret of experimentation on and torture of sentient transients in town (see Quest “Morbid Curiosity”). If attacked, Aramil will attempt to flee, using all manner of devices to aid his escape. In addition, roll on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context B; keep rerolling until you get an encounter with at least one monster, which will attack the PCs, allowing the apothecary a chance to escape.

A Quavering Quaffer (Attack): Chaos +2, Law +1

Attacking an evil man without provocation has a complex impact: specifically, a Catalyst Impact of both Chaos +1, and Law +1.

If, before a purchase, the party suspects something, they may attempt one Wisdom (Perception) check, opposed by the apothecary's Craft (Alchemy) skill; success indicates that he is lying about some aspect of the potions' natures. If the party wishes to confront Aramil with this suspicion, make a Charisma (Intimidation) or Charisma (Persuasion) check, opposed by Aramil's Charisma (Deception) check; success will grant the party 1 Reward Star, gets the apothecary grifter to admit to his ruse, and as apology, he will give the party some actual potions that do work as normal:

Aramil's Apology

 4 potions of cure light wounds

 4 potions of cure moderate wounds

 4 potions of cure serious wounds

 4 potions of cure critical wounds

A Quavering Quaffer (Truth):

Law +2

Discovering the truth, and benefitting by it, produces a Catalyst Impact of  Law +2.

This quest terminates if Aramil is slain, if the party figures out his ruse and challenges him on it, or if the party ignores him and doesn't make a purchase. Unless the PCs figure out what he is doing, it's possible to encounter Aramil again later in the adventure if this Quest is rolled.

Quest: Come With Me If You Want to Live. Or Not.

 Summary: Blacksmith Dimblegruffe offers to escort the party to safety if they wish.

 Rewards: Discovery of one place of sanctuary.

 Locations: Any.

 Key NPCs: Blacksmith Dimblegruffe.

 Kickoff: Random Encounter.

 Description:

 A grizzled dwarven warrior approaches you. Dimblegruffe cuts right to the chase: "Looking to get to safety? Follow me, if you want; I know a place that's safe enough."

The offer is just what it seems: Dimblegruffe offers to guide the party to safety. Pick the nearest place of sanctuary; that's the safe haven toward which the blacksmith will lead the party. If the PCs are aware of a different haven they would prefer instead, Dimblegruffe won't argue, and will instead escort the party there.

Treat this as the blacksmith joining the party as an ally; she will fight alongside them en route. If the haven needs to be "cleared out" of monsters before it is considered safe (e.g., the Cistern), the blacksmith will fight alongside the party to help cleanse the enemy before partying ways.

Along the way, introduce at least one encounter: roll on the Aftermath Random Encounter table, using Context B. Resolve any encounter rolled in this manner. Then, unless that encounter specifically introduced at least one monster, roll a second time on the same table, using the same context; then resolve that second encounter. Repeat this cycle until the PCs and the blacksmith have fought at least one battle.

 The PCs may be embroiled or interested in other activities, and not have time for this right now. They can simply ignore the blacksmith and be on their way. Dimblegruffe will still tell the party the location of the haven she has in mind, however. No  Catalyst Impact is produced by this approach.

 It would be a bit bizarre and evil, but the party might turn on the blacksmith, and attack her. She will fight back as best she's able, but she'll know she's almost certainly outmatched. Fortunately, she will have a distraction to help her retreat and escape: as soon as battle is joined with Dimblegruffe, roll on the Aftermath Random Encounter table, and reroll until you get a monster encounter. The monster(s) indicated will attack the PCs.

Come With Me If You Want To Live... (Attack): Chaos +4

Refusing the offer of assistance, and attacking the innocent blacksmith, brings about a Catalyst Impact of  Chaos +4.

Aside from revealing and obtaining assisted passage to a place of sanctuary, and any XP awards earned along the way via random encounters, there is no other reward to be gained from this Quest.

This quest terminates if Dimblegruffe parts ways with the party for any reason, if the blacksmith is slain, or when the PCs arrive at a place of sanctuary with her.

Quest: Horseman for Hire

 Summary: The city's stablemaster offers to join the party to help fight, for a price... but is of questionable resoluteness.

 Rewards: Up to  1 Reward Star, plus an ally joins the party (but see below).

 Locations: Any.

 Key NPCs: Brock Runnaheim.

 Kickoff: Random Encounter.

 Description:

 An older dwarf smelling of horse approaches you. “Been out and about, much, have you? Seen any... well, I’ve seen some rather nasty beasts out there, and far worse. Could be that we could help each other out, is what I’m sayin’. Fancy an addition to your gathering, here?”

Brock Runnaheim is a bit shaken, and visibly anxious, at the state of the city in the wake of the Eruption. He’s eager to join the party for protection, but will start off by negotiating for a commission.

His asking price to help with the party’s defense is 100 gp.

 The party can accept this rate, or haggle, which takes the form of the following skill challenge. At any stage, the party can accept the current terms and exit the challenge.

Horseman for Hire Negotiations

First Check: Rate is 100 gp. Any pushback or negotiations by the PCs advances to the next check; the GM is encouraged to make a show of rolling a skill check, but it is not necessary.

Second Check: Rate is 50 gp. Charisma (Persuasion) or Charisma (Intimidation) check by the PCs, opposed by Brock’s Charisma (Deception) check: Success means the PCs advance to the next check. Failure means Brock holds firm to the current rate, though the PCs may attempt this check once more before he considers the offer final and the party must either accept or reject his help.

Third Check: Rate is 25 gp. Charisma (Persuasion) or Charisma (Intimidation) check by the PCs, opposed by Brock’s Charisma (Deception) check: Success reduces his rate to 0 and concludes the challenge; the PCs get his help for free. Failure means Brock holds firm to the current rate, though the PCs may attempt this check once more before he considers the offer final and the party must either accept or reject his help. Successfully negotiating to a zero-cost ally grants the party  1 Reward Star as an additional benefit.

Horseman for Hire (Negotiations):

 Law +1

Zeroing out Brock’s rate is worth a Catalyst Impact of  Law +1.

Note that Brock is not quite the steadfast warrior he may once have been! He will fight as normal during combat encounters, but if any Villain Encounters or Untouchable Encounters turn up while he is with the party, he will immediately become panicked, and run away from the scene as quickly as he can. If the stablemaster escapes in this manner, it does not preclude him turning up later in the adventure, but he will immediately reduce his rate to zero and offer to help as best he can. Note that this “automatic freebie” does not grant the party the Reward Star it would if they came by this rate via navigating the skill challenge above.

 The party may opt to assault Brock for the loot. This evil act attracts attention: as soon as the PCs declare their intent, roll on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context B; reroll until a monster encounter is determined. Monster(s) that result attack the party; Brock can use the distraction to escape.

Horseman for Hire (Attack):

 Chaos +4

Attacking Brock amidst his offer of help incurs a Catalyst Impact of  Chaos +4.

 If the PCs decline his offer at any point of negotiations, Brock will look stricken and terrified, but will let the party leave.

This quest terminates if Brock is separated from the PCs for any reason, or if Brock is slain.

Quest: What of the People?

 Summary: Berinncorte's sage will pay good coin for information about its notable citizens.

 Rewards: 100 gp for each initial report on an NPC; 25 gp extra for each subsequent update (theoretically, no upper limit).

 Locations: Library.

 Key NPCs: Tudra Coppereye.

 Kickoff: Random Encounter / visiting Tudra in the Library.

 Description:

 Note that this encounter is a bit different than most others, in that it is indeed somewhat location-dependent: Tudra is in the Library, from which she has no intention of straying. However, this Quest that involves her may be initiated anywhere in the city, in that word of mouth will bring the opportunity to the PCs' attention.

 If the PCs are being introduced to this quest by visiting Tudra in the Library, she will describe the situation herself:

 "I see them," the wizened, bizarre little dwarf croaks. "I see them, about the city. Some here, some there. Points of light, and sparks of darkness. I cannot tell one from the other; my vision is clouded as through the dewy spiderweb of a grim morn." In the ensuing five minutes of cryptic mysticism, you deduce that the mystic is willing to pay for updates on key townsfolk.

Tudra Coppereye will pay 100 gp for an update on any named NPC: specifically, whether they are alive or dead, and the location of where they were last seen. Subsequent to this first report on a given NPC, if the party encounters that NPC at a different location, they can return to Tudra to report that updated information; doing so is worth a payout of 25 gp.

There is theoretically no upper limit to the amount of gold the PCs might earn in this manner, though in practice, traveling the city to search out NPCs is a treacherous endeavor, so it's unlikely that the party will see this as a bottomless pit of profitability. (In addition to which, it's something of a boring activity to do repeatedly, and only for this Quest!)

 If instead the PCs are out and about in the city when this Quest is triggered, they come across a group of  1d6 townsfolk. They seem to be searching about, walking swiftly and looking about them with a purpose. If the party approaches them, they will convey their task: Tudra Coppereye is willing to pay coin for information on certain key people; this group of citizens has banded together for some degree of safety in numbers in hopes of catching glimpses of, or hearing information about, anyone on her list. The conditions, payout, and all other aspects of the Quest are as described above.

 What of the People? (Inform):
 Law +1,  Love +1

Each time the PCs provide information on citizens to Tudra, it produces a Catalyst Impact of  Law +1,  Love +1. This is irrespective of the number of NPCs involved. So for example, if the party visits the Library twice, once to report on the whereabouts of 8 NPCs, and a second time to inform on 2 other NPCs, the total impact is Law +2, Love +2.

This Quest only terminates if Tudra is slain. Barring that unlikely event, she will always continue to pay for updated information so long as the PCs remain in Berinncorte and the adventure has not concluded.

Quest: Fabric of a Life

 Summary: Otibus is willing to join the party and help them, if they will help him search the ruins of his family business.

 Rewards: An ally joins the party, plus up to  2 Reward Stars.

 Locations: Any initially, plus Textiles Shop.

 Key NPCs: Otibus.

 Kickoff: Random Encounter.

 Description:

 A handsome, but sad-looking, dwarf inclines his head upon seeing the party. He approaches, shakes your hands warmly, and greets you. “Well met, friends,” he says, his voice thick with weary. “I’ve a proposition for you, if you’ve a mind to help a grieving husband.”

The offer is simple: help Otibus search the Textiles Shop, and afterwards, he’ll join the party and help where he can.

 If the party attacks him—a widower in mourning, asking for a simple task of help—it will attract vile attention and retribution. Roll on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context D; keep rerolling until you get a monster encounter, which will target the party exclusively. This gives the confused and saddened Otibus a chance to escape the party’s wrath.

 Fabric of a Life (Attack):
 Chaos +6

Attacking Otibus for any reason incurs a Catalyst Impact of  Chaos +6.

 The PCs may have their hands full with other quests, or their resources may be low—they can simply decline, and walk away. Though this saddens the seamstress’ husband, he doesn’t stop them.

 Taking Otibus up on the offer momentarily brightens his spirits. The party must then escort him to the Textiles Shop; on the way, make at least one roll on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context C. Once in the shop, roll additional random encounters there as you normally would; reroll any results of No Encounter while the party is there, investigating. Otibus requires ten minutes to search the house, during which he will not participate in fighting if a combat encounter occurs. Once the party has defended him and helped him search for ten minutes, he shakes his head sadly, then tells the party “we can leave, now. I’m in your debt, and service, for as long as you wish.” Helping in this manner grants the party  1 Reward Star.

 Fabric of a Life (Help Search):
 Love +2

Aiding Otibus in his search grants a Catalyst Impact of  Love +2.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts in this Quest.

Good-aligned PCs, or those sympathetic with the poor man’s plight, may realize that fighting monsters amidst the rubble of his home city might not be the best therapy for the stricken Otibus. If, in their journeys, the party escorts him to a place of sanctuary, and drops him there, he will thank them earnestly. Though he has no wealth to bestow upon them in thanks, Otibus’ Attitude Tracker grows +15, and the party gains a second, additional  1 Reward Star.

 Fabric of a Life (Escort):
 Love +4

Escorting the stricken widower to a place of safety bestows a Catalyst Impact of  Love +4.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts in this Quest.

This quest terminates if Otibus leaves the party’s presence, or if he is slain.

Quest: Comrade in Arms and Armor

 Summary: A merchant, formerly of Town Square, now travels the city, looking to buy or sell. He will join the party for the right price.

 Rewards: Gold for arms and armor; an ally joins the party (but see below).

 Locations: Any.

 Key NPCs: Donur Gravelmasher.

 Kickoff: Random Encounter.

 Description:

 A gritty dwarf in armor, shield, and morningstar sees you, and hollers, oblivious of the danger present in the city. Cheerily, he stomps up to you and greets you. He puts down the large sack of supplies he had been dragging behind him, and shakes your hands.

Donur Gravelmasher has with him everything he used to sell in the Town Square; see SQR-12: Camping Gear Kiosk, for details. He has but  1d4 of each item, and sells them at scarcity pricing: 175% of prices listed in Table 16: Camping Gear Kiosk Wares, rounded up.

He buys, as well as sells: any arms or armor the party wishes to part with, he'll pay dearly for: twice the retail value.

Finally, he offers to join the party, selling his mercenary services as well. His rate is 75 gp per day, counting today as a full day. He won't negotiate this rate down any, but the party can trade for the value using arms or armor.

 If the party runs into a combat encounter involving any one hostile creature or character with a Challenge Rating more than 2 greater than Donur himself's, he will flee in panic and will not rejoin the party until this Quest turns up again.

 Comrade in Arms and Armor (Flee):
 Chaos +1

When Donur runs away, it also applies a Catalyst Impact of  Chaos +1.

 The party could attack him, perhaps for the loot he bears. He'll defend himself, but there will also be a distraction: roll on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context B; keep rerolling until you get a monster encounter. The monster(s) involved will target the PCs, leaving Donur free to drag his booty away to buy and sell another day.

 Comrade in Arms and Armor (Attack):
 Chaos +3

Assaulting the dwarf begets a Catalyst Impact of

Chaos +3.

 Ignoring the chance to hire an ally, the party can do whatever trading they wish with the dwarf, and be on their way. There is neither benefit nor penalty to this approach.

This quest ends if Donur parts company with the party, or if he is slain.

🏆 Quest: Of Noble Purpose

👤 Summary: Town Square's beastmaster demands the party's help escorting innocents to safety, and will then join the party... but only if the PCs act in a Lawful Good manner.

🏆 Rewards: Up to 🌟 1 Reward Star, plus an ally joins the party (but see below), plus identifying the foremost place of sanctuary in the city.

📍 Locations: Any.

👤 Key NPCs: Ines Borque.

▶ Kickoff: Random Encounter.

❓ Description:

🗨️ You turn a corner, and see a half-orc woman leading a group of commoners all dressed in stained, shabby, torn garb. Seeing you, she shouts at the group to halt, then approaches you with grim but polite determination. Calmly, she greets you: "Well met, if friends you be. I'm leading these good people to safety; I might use any help I can obtain."

The party first sees Ines with a group of 🏠 3d6 townsfolk; she is leading them to safety in the form of the Library. The half-orc paladin will sense any paladins in the party; if she detects one, she will demand outright that the party join her in defense of the innocents. Absent a paladin PC, Ines will nevertheless be quite strong in her purpose, and in her request that the party join her.

🔪 Attacking Ines at any point in this quest is a terrible act, with consequences: in addition to a possible 🌟 Reward Star penalty if any PC is Lawful and/or Good, roll on the Aftermath Random Encounter table, using Context B. Keep rerolling anything other than a monster result, and have the monster(s) target the PCs exclusively; this gives Ines and her charges an opportunity to escape the melee.

🔪 Of Noble Purpose (Attack):
⚡ Chaos +5

Attacking this Paladin in the midst of a Good act applies a Catalyst Impact of ⚡ Chaos +5.

🔪 Ignoring the paladin's request might also incur a penalty, at the GM's discretion, but Ines will not fight the party if they choose to decline her demand. It will, however, degrade her Attitude Tracker by -15; -20 if the party contains one or more Paladins.

🔪 Of Noble Purpose (Ignore):
⚡ Chaos +1 / +3

Refusing the call of Ines to help results in a Catalyst Impact of ⚡ Chaos +1. If the party includes one or more Paladins, this increases to +3.

🔪 Following her is the likely choice, here, though the way is perilous: along the way, roll once on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context A. Two minutes after any encounter rolled is resolved, roll a second time on that same table, using Context B.

Upon successfully escorting the innocents to safety, if at least one townsfolk has survived, the party benefits of 🌟 1 Reward Star. In addition, Ines offers to join the party for free. Assuming the PCs accept, she remains with the party for the remainder of the adventure.

🔪 Of Noble Purpose (Escort):
⚡ Law +2, ❤️ Love +3

Helping Ines finish the job produces a Catalyst Impact of ⚡ Law +2, ❤️ Love +3.

However, if at any time, the party makes a decision that is not Lawful Good, Ines will suffer a -5 hit to her Attitude Tracker, and will leave the party. It is left to the GM's discretion as to whether Ines gives a "warning" of her intent before leaving, how many violations it takes for her to depart, what exactly constitutes a violation in the first place, and so on.

This quest terminates if Ines leaves the party, or if she is slain.

Quest: Sad Searching

 Summary: Shakira Alam was out of town when the Obelisk erupted; she now wishes to search for her lover, who she suspects perished in the attack.

 Rewards: Up to  3 Reward Stars.

 Locations: Any.

 Key NPCs: Shakira Alam.

 Kickoff: Random Encounter.

 Description:

 A solemn halfling approaches you. Her anxiety is palpable, and she asks your help: “I was hunting when the... thing came, to our city. I fear my... that a friend has... that she was in Town Square, when it... oh Gods...” Her words may drown out at this point, but her intent is clear.

Once she recovers, Shakira Alam will sell the party anything she would have done at the Town Square; refer to Table 18: Locks and Rope Kiosk Wares, on page 100. She has only  1d4-2 of any given item (minimum zero; roll separately for each item), and will sell at scarcity pricing: double the listed price, rounded up.

Although it might seem a huge distraction, and not that important given the events of the Eruption, the rope and lock merchant will still engage the party’s services per the Quest “A Particular Sort of Skeleton”, on page 101.

Her main focus, however, is on Elizavetta Burak, the town’s only real prostitute and Shakira’s lover. Sadly, Elizavetta perished in the Eruption. Shakira suspects this, as the woman did work right in Town Square, but she doesn’t know for certain, and nevertheless, she just wants to see the body, if body there be.

The task asked of the PCs is simple: help Shakira search Town Square for the body of her lover, and defend her as she says goodbye.

 The party can of course decline, and be on their way. No penalty or benefit is gained, and they may still buy items from Shakira, and/or pursue her other Quest. Walking away from her also does not preclude her turning up again, and offering the same opportunity to help her, if this Quest is randomly selected again later in the adventure. There is no  Catalyst Impact to this decision.

 It would be a truly horrific thing to attack Shakira. If the party states their intent to do so, roll twice on the Aftermath Random Encounter table. For each roll, keep rerolling until you get an encounter involving a monster. All the monsters from both of these randomized encounters descend upon the party at once; Shakira herself flees in panic immediately.

Sad Searching (Attack): Chaos +5

No matter what their bizarre motives, if the PCs attack this frantic lovelorn woman, there is a Catalyst Impact:  Chaos +5.

 Helping her do what she asks is the clear choice for Good-aligned parties; treat this as Shakira joining the party for the time being. On their way to Town Square, roll once on the Aftermath Random Encounter table, using Context B. Once at Town Square, the party gains  1 Reward Star for their efforts. It’s unfortunately not difficult to locate Elizavetta’s body; stricken, Shakira kneels at her lover’s side, and begins to say goodbye in her own private way. While the party is giving her the space she needs to start to deal with her grief, roll again on the Aftermath Random Encounter table, using Context D; during any combat encounter that results, Shakira will be unable to participate.

Assuming the party successfully defends the halfling against any intrusion, they gain a second  1 Reward Star. At this point, Shakira thanks them dearly for their assistance, and tells them they may go; from this point onward, any purchases from her at a 50% discount from the prices listed in Table 18: Locks and Rope Kiosk Wares.

 If the party knows of one or more places of sanctuary, they may go the extra mile at this point, and offer to escort Shakira to safety. Along the way, roll on Aftermath Random Encounter table, using Context B. Once the party safely drops the halfling off in a safe place, they may gain a third and final  1 Reward Star.

Sad Searching (Help): Law +1, Love +3 / +6

Helping produces a Catalyst Impact of  Law +1,  Love +3. If the party goes the extra mile, and escorts Shakira to a safe place afterwards, the impact increases to Law +1, Love +6.

This quest ends if Shakira is slain, or if she and the party part ways for any reason.

Quest: Come Out, Come Out

 Summary: The city's foremost merchant has barricaded himself and several townsfolk in his store, and refuses to open the doors or come out.

 Rewards: Up to  1 Reward Star.

 Locations: Any, plus General Store.

 Key NPCs: Welby Goodbarrel.

 Kickoff: Random Encounter / visiting the General Store.

 Description:

 Note that this encounter is a bit different than most others, in that it is indeed somewhat location-dependent: Welby Goodbarrel is in his General Store, from which she has no intention of straying. However, this Quest that involves him may be initiated anywhere in the city, in that word of mouth will bring the opportunity to the PCs' attention.

 If the PCs are being introduced to this quest by visiting the General Store, they will hear Welby inside:

 "I hear you," a muffled voice erupts from inside. "We don't trust you. We don't want you. Go away!" You hear a commotion, some scuffles, and then a different, more urgent, pleading voice: "He won't open the door! He's got us trapped inside! Please help!" Another scuffle, and the original voice returns: "Pay them no mind, interlopers! They're quite in shock, at what's become of our fair city, and can't be trusted with their own freedom! The risk is too great! Yes, too great!"

 If instead the PCs are out and about in the city when this Quest is triggered, they come across a group of  1d6 townsfolk. They seize the arms of the PCs, pleading with them to help: they describe the situation, and claim that Welby Goodbarrel has barricaded himself, and several poor townsfolk, inside the General Store.

The quest is straightforward: convince Welby Goodbarrel to open his doors. The portly halfling merchant has locked himself and a handful of townsfolk inside his General Store, and refuses to let anyone in or out. To be fair, the man is simply worried about safety: his store is quite close to the Dark Obelisk, and he and his fellow citizens are terrified of any monsters getting inside.

Note that fulfilling this quest may be done in conjunction with the quest "Debran Ormrick, Aftermath" as the objectives are identical: get Welby to open his doors.

To attempt the quest, the PCs need merely approach the door and try to speak with Welby. The GM is encouraged to roleplay this interaction to both dramatic, and possibly comedic, effect, but mechanically, the PCs must succeed in the following skill challenge.

Come Out, Come Out

First Check: Charisma (Persuasion), opposed by Welby's own Charisma (Persuasion); failure requires repeat (max 3); success advances.

Second Check: Charisma (Persuasion) or Charisma (Intimidation), opposed by Welby's Charisma (Deception) skill. Failure reverts to First Check; success advances.

Third Check: Charisma (Persuasion) or Charisma (Intimidation), opposed by Welby's own Charisma (Intimidation) skill. Failure reverts to Second Check; success completes the skill challenge.

Successfully completing the entire skill challenge convinces the halfling merchant to open his doors. He will admit any townsfolk who wish to gain entry and possible refuge, and will allow any citizens who had been inside to escape as they wish. He himself will remain in the building, and will reseal the entrance as soon as the PCs depart, unless they succeed at one final  Charisma (Persuasion) or Charisma (Intimidation) check, opposed by Welby's Survival skill; failure means the merchant will blithely promise to remain outside his establishment, but will close the doors and barricade them as soon as is feasible; success convinces the merchant to try his luck seeking safety elsewhere.

At this point, the PCs benefit from  1 Reward Star for having navigated the skill challenge.

Come Out, Come Out (Succeed): Law +1

Getting Welby to leave his stronghold produces a Catalyst Impact of  Law +1.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts in this Quest.

 Lawful Evil (or militantly Lawful Good, presumably) PCs may wish to hold Welby to account for his forcible detention of unwilling innocents. The Militia probably will not care about such a trivial matter amidst everything else going on. Attacking Welby once he's already opened his doors seems a bit excessive; roll on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context A, and reroll until you get a monster encounter. Said monster(s) target the PCs, allowing the portly little merchant to slink away safely.

Come Out, Come Out (Attack): Law +1, Chaos +3

Assaulting Welby, no matter their reasons, means the PCs create a Catalyst Impact of  Law +1 and  Chaos +3.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts in this Quest.

This quest only terminates if Welby indeed does open his doors.

🏆 Quest: Ganyc, Aftermath

🗝️ Summary: The town butcher seeks a place of safety... and the return of a precious item from his rooms.

🏆 Rewards: Up to 🌟 2 Reward Stars, plus 750 gp.

📍 Locations: Any, plus Upper-Class Residential District.

👤 Key NPCs: Ganyc.

▶️ Kickoff: Random Encounter.

❓ Description:

🗨️ Ganyc the town butcher approaches you, desperate and flummoxed. In a gibbering, distracted tone, he asks two things of you: “Please get me to safety, if you’ve a heart and a care for an innocent man’s life! Also, it pains me, but there’s an item I’d most want... it’s in my rooms, in the south of town. Vanity it may be, but there’s a quill that’s important to me. To speak plain, good sirs and madams, I’d be grateful of your help in either or both of these, if you’ve the time to be of aid.”

There are two tasks here, either or both of which the PCs may undertake: Retrieve an item from the man’s rooms, and Escort him to safety.

🔍 The party might choose to ignore both options, and leave the man to his own devices. This incurs no penalty, and of course no reward, but ends the quest as soon as the butcher is out of sight. Such a path does not preclude this Quest being initiated again via another random encounter later in the adventure.

🔍 A bit bizarrely, the PCs might attack Ganyc, either right away, or at any later point in the Quest. This draws attention, as the man has done nothing wrong: make a roll on the Aftermath Random Encounter table, using Context D, and keep rerolling until you get a monster encounter. Monster(s) involved will seek out the PCs, and Ganyc can escape.

🗨️ Ganyc, Aftermath (Attack):
⚔️ Chaos +2

Attacking Ganyc when he’s simply asking for help means a Catalyst Impact: ⚔️ Chaos +2.

Retrieve

Ganyc asks the PCs to venture into the Upper-Class Residential District, gain access to his rooms, retrieve an item, and give it back to him.

The item itself is completely mundane: it’s a writing quill, found on the writing desk in his bedroom. The challenge here lies in navigating the building without, or defeating any, incident. Its value is entirely sentimental, but the butcher will not go into any amount of further detail in the matter. He seems flustered, but not embarrassed, by the seemingly disproportionate attachment to such a relatively common item.

Upon return of the item to Ganyc, the party benefits of 750 gp and 🌟 1 Reward Star. Returning the item, however, can be problematic, as the butcher will not necessarily be in the Butcher’s Shop where he might reliably have been found before the Eruption. Smart PCs will decide to first Escort him to safety, where he will be secure and predictable in his location.

Note that this Quest overlaps with the Retrieve component of the Quest “Lend a Hand for a Landlord”, on p 337. If the PCs are aware of both Quests, they may return the quill to either Tarsheva Hornwood or to Ganyc directly.

🗨️ Ganyc, Aftermath (Retrieve):
⚖️ Law +1, ❤️ Love +3

Obtaining the quill and returning it to the butcher creates a Catalyst Impact of ⚖️ Law +1 and ❤️ Love +3.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

Escort

The task here is straightforward: lead Ganyc to the nearest place of sanctuary. Treat this as the man joining the party temporarily as an ally. If the PCs know of no such havens at the moment, they may simply keep the butcher in their party until one is discovered.

Assuming the PCs know a haven with certainty, their way may be perilous: roll at least once on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context B. As a party ally, Ganyc will of course help fight in any combat encounter.

When they drop him off at a place of sanctuary, the party is thanked profusely and benefits from 🌟 1 Reward Star.

This quest terminates only if Ganyc is slain, if the party declines his request, or if the party both leads him to safety, and retrieves the item he seeks from his quarters. Leading him to safety will leave him there, but will keep this Quest active; the party may return to him at any time to get the reward for obtaining the quill.

🗨️ Ganyc, Aftermath (Escort):
⚖️ Law +1, ❤️ Love +1

Making sure Ganyc is safe generates a Catalyst Impact of ⚖️ Law +1 and ❤️ Love +1.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

🏆 Quest: Don't You Know Who I Am?

Summary: A powerful merchant princess demands safe passage out of the city. She will also pay good coin for information on surviving NPCs.

Rewards: Up to 2 Reward Stars, plus gold (100 gp per known NPC), plus an ally joins the party.

Locations: Any.

Key NPCs: Elena Lomazonne.

Kickoff: Random Encounter.

Description:

A beautiful, finely-garbed lady wielding an impressive array of weaponry and flanked by a pair of Militia Elite Guard approaches you. With the collected bearing of royalty, she greets you. "Good day, sirs and madams. I am in need of escort and information, and will pay well for either. Might you be agreeable?"

The ruthless merchant princess asks two things of the party: Information, and Escort. The PCs are free to do either, both, or neither of these things. She has already requisitioned the two Berinncorte Militia Elite Guards to escort her, but given the level of danger present in the city, she is uncomfortable with just them as her escort to freedom.

The PCs may simply decline her offer entirely. Elena shrugs, says "your loss, then. Off with you," and motions for her existing escort to follow her. This does not preclude her turning up again later in the adventure, if this Quest is randomly selected; she will have the same offer for the party, but will begin the conversation with "Reconsidered, then?"

If the PCs try to attack her, they will have their hands full: In addition to her formidable guards, Elena herself is no slouch in combat. On top of this, roll on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context B; keep rerolling until you get a monster encounter. In the resulting confusion, Elena and her guards will attempt to leave the area safely.

Don't You Know Who I Am? (Attack):
Chaos +3

Attacking the merchant princess produces a Catalyst Impact of Chaos +3.

Information

Elena will pay for information on NPCs who have survived the Eruption: specifically, 100 gp per NPC if the party has seen them with their own eyes, and can report on their most recent location.

As a merchant princess, Elena is foremost interested in the whereabouts and status of her competition. If the party has resolved any quests involving Welby

Goodbarrel, she will pay 250 gp for the full story and his current whereabouts (note that this does not stack with the 100 gp reward mentioned above simply for knowing he's alive).

Don't You Know Who I Am? (Information):
Law +1

Producing information on Welby creates a Catalyst Impact of Law +1.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

Escort

Elena will join the party as an ally. Any Berinncorte Militia Elite Guard she has accompanying her will also join the party.

Escorting her to a place of sanctuary is not ideal in her view, but she acknowledges that it's better and safer than simply finding her own way, even with her guards. If the PCs insist, she will begrudgingly stay there, leaving the party and remaining safe for the time being. For escorting her to safety, the party gains 1 Reward Star and a +5 modifier (+10 if she is left in the nicer option of the Library) on Elena's Attitude Tracker. Eventually, she will start to feel imprisoned, and venture once again out on her own, but such behavior is beyond the scope of this adventure. At any subsequent part of this adventure, the party can return to the place where they left Elena, and ask her to again join their ranks, to be escorted out of the city; she will gladly take them up on the offer.

Elena's primary goal is to escape the city. If the party successfully leaves the city, with Elena as part of their number, they gain 2 Reward Stars (only 1, if they have previously benefitted from leaving her in safety).

The GM is encouraged to try and keep Elena alive as much as is feasible. Introduce random monster encounters, allow Elena some fudged rolls, whatever it takes. She and her backstory have a larger role to play in subsequent adventures, and although there will be contingencies in the event that she has been unavoidably killed, the narrative will flow much better if it is she who drives these events.

Don't You Know Who I Am? (Escort):
Law +1, Love +2

Successfully escorting Elena to safety results in a Catalyst Impact of Law +1 and Love +2.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

This quest terminates if Elena is slain, if the PCs and Elena part ways for any reason, or if the party escorts her to safety and leaves her there.

Quest: Waywocket Ningel, Aftermath

 Summary: The town's foremost jeweler will pay well to be escorted to safety, or merely even to learn where safety might be found.

 Rewards: Up to  1 Reward Star, plus gems worth 800 gp.

 Locations: Any.

 Key NPCs: Waywocket Ningel.

 Kickoff: Random Encounter.

 Description:

 A stubby gnome approaches you meekly. She greets you, then asks in a hoarse voice if you might be able to help her to safety. As payment, she points out that she is a jeweler of some renown.

Waywocket Ningel will settle merely for the name of any places of sanctuary, if the party is aware of any. She will pay 100 gp for the first such location's name, and thereafter 50 gp for additional locations.

Her preference, of course, is to be escorted to one of these places. She will pay in the form of a pouch of gemstones worth a combined 800 gp (rubies and onyx, small ones, in various shapes), and will part with this treasure upon successful delivery to a place of safety. Until that time, you may treat her as having joined the party as an ally, and although her combat effectiveness is somewhat questionable, her skills and talents may be of assistance to the PCs.

 Successfully escorting Waywocket to a place of sanctuary results in a reward of  1 Reward Star.

 Waywocket Ningel, Aftermath (Escort):
 Law +2,  Love +1

Escorting Waywocket as promised creates a Catalyst Impact of  Law +2 and  Love +1.

 The party may decline her offer. There's no penalty for this, other than to bear the memory of how sad the poor craftswoman looks in her disappointment (and her Attitude Tracker suffering a penalty of -5). This approach does not preclude helping her at some later point in the adventure, if this Quest is randomly selected again.

 Waywocket Ningel, Aftermath (Ignore):
 Chaos +1

Ignoring the request has a slight Catalyst Impact:  Chaos +1.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

 If the party attacks the poor gnome, chaotic forces will take note: roll on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context B. Reroll any non-monster encounters, and focus the attention of any creatures introduced in this manner on the PCs. In the resulting chaos of battle, a terrified Waywocket will try to escape the situation.

 Waywocket Ningel, Aftermath (Attack):
 Chaos +4

Needlessly assaulting the gnomish jeweler results in a Catalyst Impact:  Chaos +4.

This quest terminates if Waywocket is slain, if she and the PCs part company for any reason, or when the party successfully escorts her to a place of sanctuary.

🏆 Quest: What an Endtimes to Be Alive

🗨️ Summary: Larissa the Elder preaches the end-times to any who will listen.

🏆 Rewards: Up to 🌟 1 Reward Star.

📍 Locations: Any.

👤 Key NPCs: Larissa the Elder.

🏃 Kickoff: Random Encounter.

❓ Description:

🗨️ A comely half-elf in full combat gear sees you, and strides toward you with zeal and purpose. “Well met, fellow doomed! How are you enjoying your last days upon this Realm?” You cannot tell if she is playing an elaborate joke that is falling flat, or whether she truly believes the words she is saying.

Larissa is not quite insane... not quite. She’s driven, filled with a renewed mission, as a result of the Eruption. As an ardent follower of Sheergath, the Lord of Resigned Fate, she views the emergence of a giant chunk of chaotic rock as a sign from her god. The fact that chaos reigns in what was once an orderly city has also not escaped her attention, though it’s not quite as grand as she has imagined it.

She never imagined so much blood, for one thing.

Larissa’s main goal now is to preach the end-times, telling all who will hear her that the world’s end is nigh, that the Obelisk is a signal, and that the Realm shall be cleansed in a chaos of dark and fire.

Cheery things, basically.

While she is with the party, Larissa’s chants, shouts, and general musings attract a great deal of attention: whenever you roll on the Aftermath Random Encounter table, roll a second time, and use the higher value of the two rolls to resolve the encounter. For example, if you roll a 34, and a 68, you would treat it as having only rolled the 68.

The PCs have a few options:

🔁 They can ignore her. Ridding themselves of her, however, is somewhat more difficult: latching on, she will follow the party and continue her preaching and malcontent. The GM is encouraged to portray her to darkly comedic effect in her sayings and observations. She will leave the party if attacked by the PCs (see below). Larissa will also leave the party if she and the PCs run into another group of townsfolk of any nature via Random Encounters; seeing fresh minds, she will latch onto that group instead, and follow them elsewhere. During any combat encounter, she will hold her own; treat her as having joined the party as an ally, whether they wanted it that way or not!

(Ignore):

⚖️ Law +1

Although typically, ignoring a Quest produces Chaos, trying to ignore the chanting of the Elder of a Chaotic temple instead produces a Catalyst Impact of ⚖️ Law +1.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

🔁 If they are familiar with the Sheergath Temple, they may offer to escort Larissa there. She will gladly join them, and will return to her temple; upon arriving, she will note that it is overrun, introducing the Quest “Cleanse the Temple”. Escorting her back to the Temple grants a reward of 🌟 1 Reward Star to the party.

👉 What An Endtimes to be Alive

(Escort):

⚡ Chaos +1, ⚖️ Law +1, ❤️ Love +1

If the PCs successfully drop Larissa off at her own temple, it means a compound Catalyst Impact: ⚡ Chaos +1, ⚖️ Law +1, and ❤️ Love +1.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

🔁 Chaotic and annoying she may be, but Larissa is an innocent—attacking her without cause is sure to draw attention. Roll on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context B, and keep rerolling until you get a monster encounter, which will focus on the PCs. This allows Larissa the chance to escape.

👉 What An Endtimes to be Alive

(Attack):

⚡ Chaos +3

Attacking the irksome—yet innocent—Elder provokes a Catalyst Impact of ⚡ Chaos +3.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

This quest terminates if Larissa is slain, or if she and the party part company for any reason.

👉 What An Endtimes to Be Alive

Aftermath Untouchable Encounters

Untouchable Encounters are those that are presented to the party with little chance of winning. They are meant to terrify and reroute, not to overcome. Depending on how many, and which, allies may have joined the party, the PCs may fare better at these challenges, but in any circumstance, they will still be formidable indeed. The GM is encouraged to offer any reasonable opportunity for the party to flee.

Generally speaking, if the party is somehow able to overcome any Untouchable Encounter, they should be awarded between 1-3 Reward Stars in addition to the XP they normally receive, to represent the significant discrepancy in scale of challenge.

See “Untouchable Encounters”, for more description on this concept.

- Use Context A:
By default, or if no other Context applies.
- Use Context B:
At nighttime.
- Use Context C:
If the party is actively engaged in a quest, or if you prefer they remain focused on pressing immediate matters.
- Use Context D:
If the PCs are actively flaunting the danger posed by the Obelisk and its forces, or to encourage storytelling momentum.

ART-1: Creatures of Chaos

A single Chaos Beast attacks the party, fighting to the death.

If any member of the party passes a passive Wisdom (Perception) check opposed by the Chaos Beast's Dexterity (Stealth) check, the PCs hear the approach of the creature; if the PCs fail this check, the enemy gains the advantage of a surprise round of combat.

Chaos Beasts bear no treasure.

ART-2: Mohrg-id Curiosity

One Mohrg attacks the party, and will fight to the death.

Make a single Wisdom (Perception) check for the party (use the PC with the highest such value); oppose it with the Mohrg's Dexterity (Stealth) check. If the PCs succeed, they are not taken unawares; if they fail, the monster gets a surprise round of combat.

The Mohrg bears no treasure.

ART-3: Something Headless This Way Comes

Grim and terrifying, a Dullahan rides into battle with the party. It will fight until defeated.

Any PC may attempt a Wisdom (Perception) check, opposed with the Dullahan's Dexterity (Stealth) check. If any of the PCs succeed, they gain the benefit of a surprise round of combat.

Aside from the normal arms and armor carried by the creature, Dullahans yield no treasure.

ART-4: Hollow Heads, Hollow Heart

The party hears this threat before they see it: a Skelettin, lumbering about the town, sends tiny earthquakes in all directions when it stomps.

Any PC may attempt a Wisdom (Perception) check, opposed by the Skelettin's Dexterity (Stealth) check. If any of the PCs succeed, they gain the benefit of a surprise round of combat.

Aside from the normal arms and armor carried by the creature, Skelettins carry no treasure to speak of.

ART-5: Spectre of Death

Ghostly and surreal, a Spectre glides toward the party.

Before combat begins, make a single Wisdom (Perception) check, opposed by the Spectre's Dexterity (Stealth) check. If the PCs fail, the Spectre gains a surprise round of combat.

The Spectre bears no treasure.

ART-6: From Beyond the Grave

A single Revenant assaults the party.

If the PCs have slain any NPCs, seen any perish, or come across any dead NPCs in their journeys through the city, the GM is encouraged to portray details about the monster in a manner that gives the PCs the impression that it's one of those NPCs.

Before combat begins, make a single Wisdom (Perception) check on behalf of the party, opposed by the Revenant's Dexterity (Stealth) check. If the PCs fail, the Revenant gains a surprise round of combat.

The Revenant carries no treasure.

ART-7: Gaunt and Mighty

A Bodak attacks the PCs.

The party may make a Wisdom (Perception) check, opposed by the Bodak's Dexterity (Stealth) check. If the PCs fail, the Bodak gains a surprise round of combat.

The Bodak bears no treasure.

ART-8: Shadow Demon

One Shadow Demon attacks the PCs.

As soon as this encounter is determined, make a single Wisdom (Perception) check on behalf of the party, opposed by the Shadow Demon's Dexterity (Stealth) check. If the PCs fail, the Shadow Demon gains a surprise round of combat.

There is no treasure to be had in the wake of defeating the Shadow Demon.

ART-10: Babau Demon

A single Babau Demon assaults the PCs.

Immediately make one Wisdom (Perception) check on behalf of the party, opposed by the Babau Demon's Dexterity (Stealth) check. If the PCs fail, the Babau Demon gains a surprise round of combat.

There is no treasure to be had in the wake of defeating the Babau Demon.

ART-11: Nabasu Demon

One Nabasu Demon assaults the PCs.

Make a single Wisdom (Perception) check on behalf of the PCs, opposed by the Nabasu Demon's Dexterity (Stealth) check. If the PCs fail, the Nabasu Demon gains a surprise round of combat.

The Nabasu Demon bears no treasure.

ART-12: Villain Encounter

Villains are even more powerful than Untouchables. The purpose of introducing Villains is twofold: first, to terrify the PCs and underscore the vileness and threat of the Forces of the Obelisk; second, to introduce characters who will have a greater role to play in future adventures in this Adventure Path.

To be clear: under no circumstances is the party expected to actually face, or defeat, any Villain in combat! Your job as a GM is to present any of these encounters in a manner to suggest that it would be suicide to face such a foe head-on.

A host of demons attacks the party. Roll on the following table to determine the composition of the enemy forces.

Table 62: Villain Encounter Composition

D%	Event
01-25	Crixen (Babau Demon)
26-50	Idelifix (Schir Demon)
51-75	Lythinmortus (Dark Stalker)
76-00	Vildanna (Dullahan)

Make a single passive  Wisdom (Perception) check on behalf of the party, opposed by the highest Stealth value of the monster(s) involved. If the party succeeds, they spot the enemy first, and may fight a surprise round of combat before their foes join the fray fully. This surprise round may—and likely should!—be used to escape as quickly as possible. If they fail by more than 5 points, the enemy gains a surprise round of combat instead.

If, by some bizarre combination of luck and—well, a great deal more luck—the party fights a Villain and prevails, the rewards should be immense. Every single PC, whether they survive or not, should automatically gain enough XP to gain their next level. In addition, the GM is encouraged to invent a treasure reward appropriate for each character.

Aftermath Areas of Interest

Nearly all buildings and areas in Berinncorte have suffered damage. Many have monsters roaming about.

Those areas of interest that were structurally unaffected by the Eruption should use the same map as in Act One. All other areas will have updated maps listed in their section below.

Localized Random Encounters

Nearly all locations have localized random encounter tables; in most cases as well, this table will have specific instructions as to how and when to roll upon it.

By default, though, unless there is a compelling reason to do otherwise, roll on the appropriate localized random encounter table once when the party first enters an area of interest.

Once any encounter rolled has been resolved, roll again on that table for every 10 minutes the party remains in that area of interest.

As with every other rule, roll, and random encounter, the GM is encouraged to “override” this guidance. This applies in both directions: if the pace is slow, or the PCs are listless, then the GM may force a roll on the table immediately. Similarly, if the party is focused, actively pursuing a Quest, or crippled nearly to the point of a TPK (page 317), the GM is encouraged to suppress the roll entirely.

BCA-I: Zugul Church, Aftermath

Summary

The Zugul Church, located immediately to the east of the Town Square and now of the Obelisk, has been damaged greatly in the Eruption.

In the aftermath of the Eruption, the ground floor has been largely taken over by the Forces of the Obelisk (page 879). Some citizens cower in the Undercroft, as yet undiscovered by the creatures above that now seek their demise.

Damage Summary

The ground floor is a mess: the northwestern part of the wall is destroyed, leaving the altar area exposed to the Town Square. Three groups of broken pillars make navigating the church difficult. The secret door in the north and the entrance from the Gardens are both intact, but the main entrance to the west is destroyed rubble.

Corruption Status

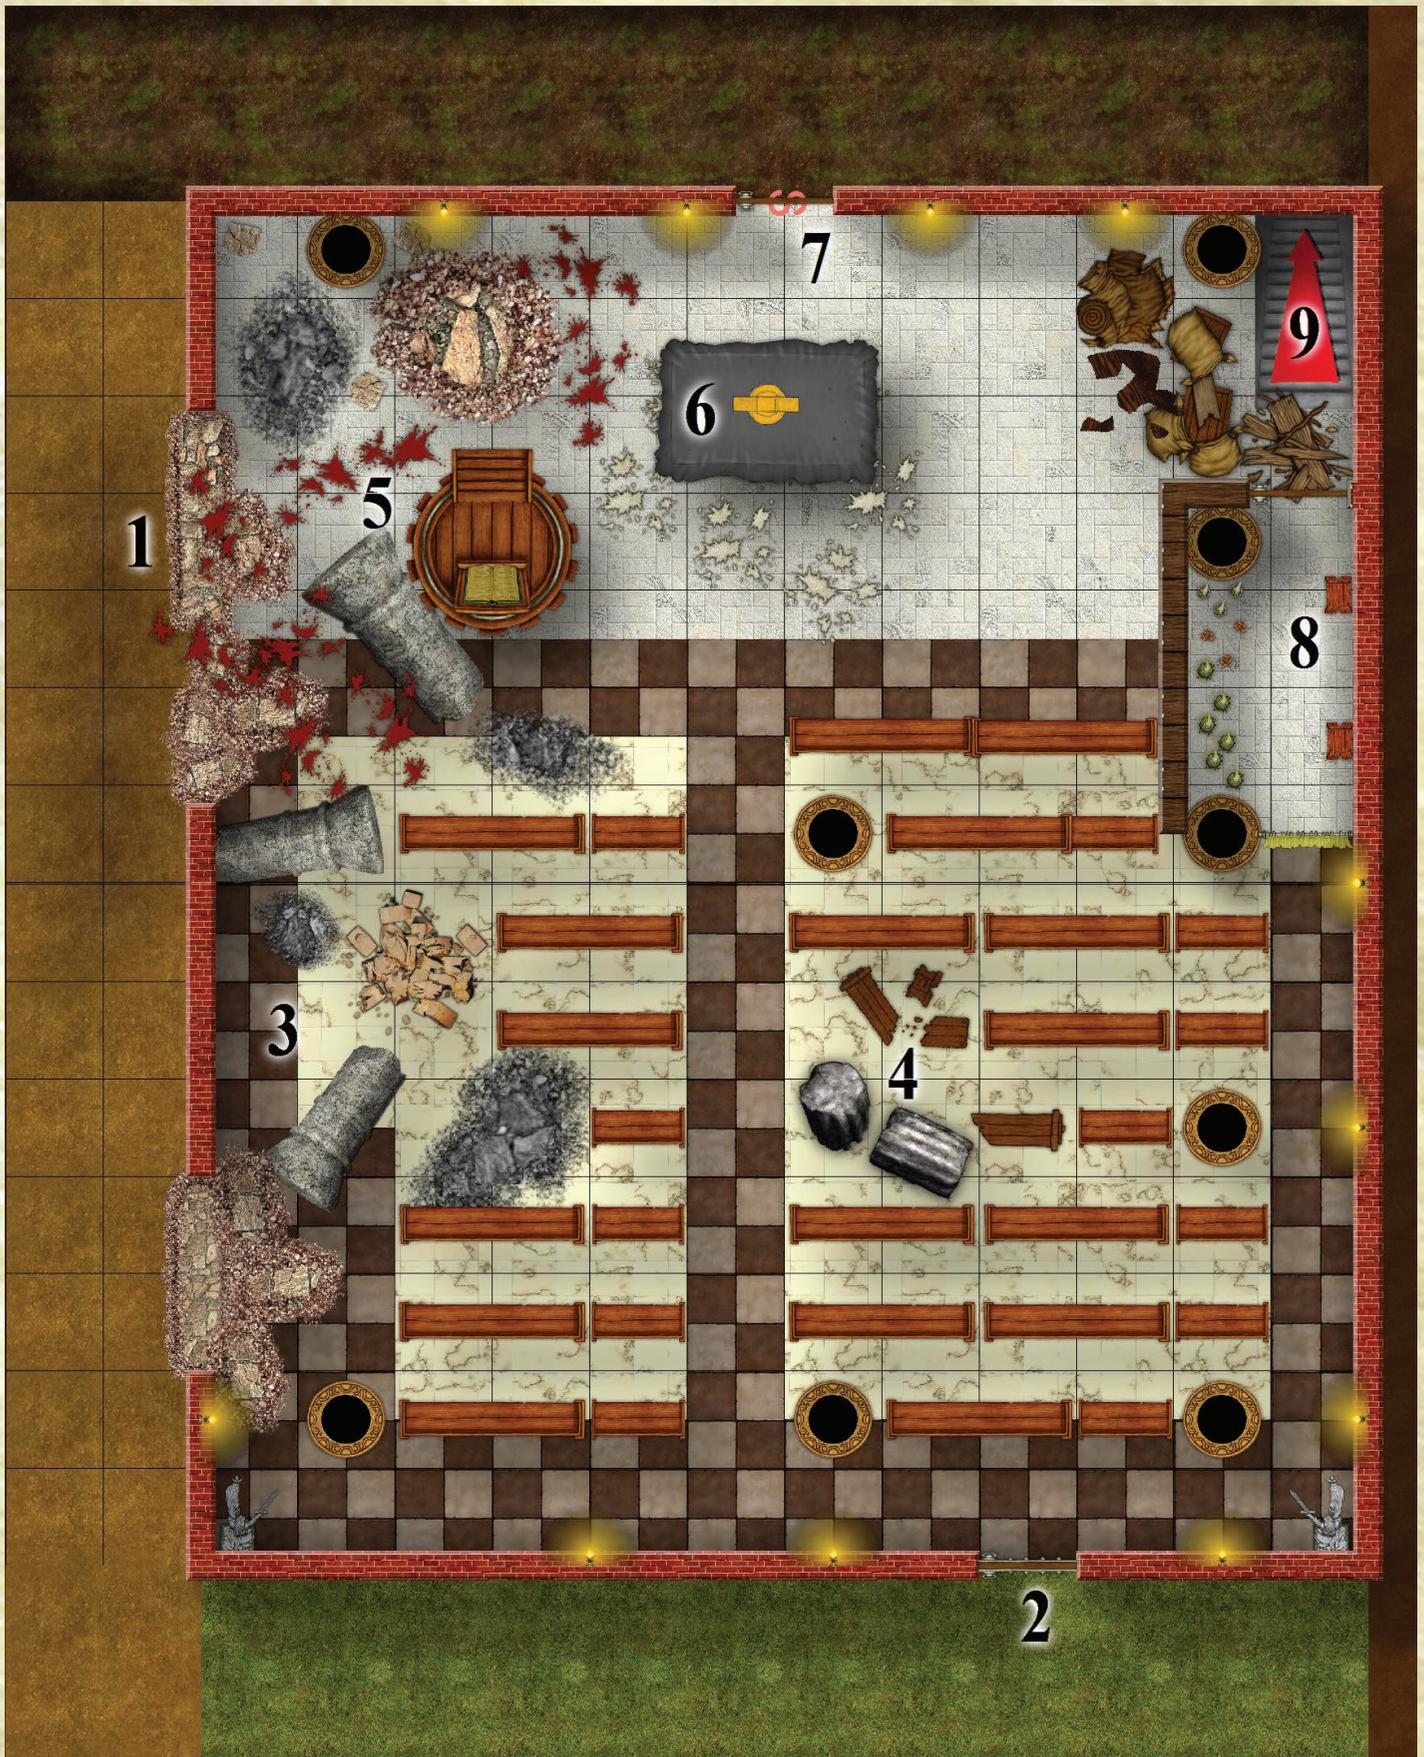

Moderate.

BCA-I: Zugul Church Ground Floor Map, Aftermath

CAG-1: Ruined Wall

- The wall here has been smashed in; rubble forms a pattern that was once a barrier to entry.

The debris here counts as difficult terrain, with an obstacle.

Ruined Western Church Wall

Dexterity (Acrobatics) DC 16; success means movement at difficult terrain speed (1 square counts as 2); failure knocks a character prone

CAG-2: South Entrance

- The single iron-banded door here appears to be untouched by the disaster, and operates normally.

This is exactly as described in CHG-2: Garden Entrance, on page p 75.

CAG-3: Fallen Pillars

- To the west of this bank of pews, support pillars have collapsed and are strewn about with debris from the ceiling. The roof above appears to be in no immediate danger of falling. What was once the main entrance is now a pile of debris; you can’t even see anything that might once have been a set of double doors.

There is a great deal of difficult terrain here. The wall section where the door used to be counts as an obstacle as well, as follows:

Ruined Main Church Entrance

Dexterity (Acrobatics) DC 17; success means movement at difficult terrain speed (1 square counts as 2); failure knocks a character prone

CAG-4: Damaged Pews

 A pillar in the middle of the church has partially fallen atop some pews; wood splinters from the benches are scattered across the marble floor.

What scant pieces of debris are here count as difficult terrain.

Note that it's still possible here to find the note among the rubble that sets in motion the Quest "Under, Under, Under".

CAG-5: Pulpit Rubble

 Behind the pulpit, the western stage of the church is a disaster area. Blood is spattered in a trail from the western pile of rubble to where the church's high priest lies dead of combat wounds. Rubble is strewn everywhere.

High Priest Cannock's Body

This character died in the Obelisk Eruption.

The body of High Priest Cannock can be found here. The entire area counts as difficult terrain.

Note that Maghana has retrieved the note she had put here that would normally set off the Quest "Dear One, If Thee Read", so it is no longer possible to initiate or resolve that Quest. Besides, the emotional weight and secrecy of Maghana's love is now somewhat moot, as the object of her affection has been slain.

CAG-6: Desecrated Altar

 Guano from what appears to be a dozen enormous—and vile—birds is spattered over what was once the church's most holy icon and structure.

The feces here are from the Giant Vultures who have taken roost in the ceiling above. Make a  Wisdom (Perception) check for each PC, opposed by the Vultures' Dexterity (Stealth) check; failure means the Vultures get a surprise round of combat.

 1d4-1 (minimum 1) Giant Vultures swoop down from the ceiling to attack the party. They carry no treasure.

CAG-7: Secret Exit

This functions and appears just as described in CHG-3: Secret Entrance, on p 75.

CAG-8: Shrine

 Strangely, this candlelit nook appears untouched. Standing behind the wooden partition, you can almost forget what has happened to the city, and what the church has become in its aftermath.

This has not changed from its description in CHG-6: Shrine on p 76.

The shrine may be used to hide from any combat encounters initiated while the PCs are in the church; Dexterity (Stealth) checks from such foes are performed with a +4 circumstance bonus while the party is here.

CAG-9: Stairs to Undercroft

This leads to CAU-1: Stairs to Ground Floor, page 404.

BCA-I: Zugul Church Undercroft Map, Aftermath

CAU-1: Stairs to Ground Floor

These lead to CAG-9: Stairs to Undercroft.

CAU-2: Damaged Sitting Area

- ☐ Tables and chairs destroyed by unknown forces lie in a heap amidst their better-surviving brethren. Some candles yet flicker amidst the gloom that now pervades this common area.

The wooden rubble itself counts as difficult terrain, with an obstacle, as follows:

▮ Destroyed Wood Pile

Dexterity (Acrobatics) DC 14; success means movement at difficult terrain speed (1 square counts as 2); failure knocks a character prone

Note that amidst the wreckage can still be found the item that is part of the Quest “Under, Under, Under”, which may still be resolved in Act Three.

CAU-3: Destroyed Table

- ☐ What appears to have been a large, solid common table for eating is now a smashed mess.

This counts as an obstacle if any character needs to move in this area:

▮ Damaged Table

Dexterity (Acrobatics) DC 13; success means movement at normal speed; failure means movement at difficult speed (one square counts as two)

CAU-4: Damaged High Priest’s Quarters

- ☐ The entrance to this room is smashed to bits, with debris strewn everywhere; to the southwest, a pillar has been knocked over, but the ceiling holds well. To the northeast is more debris that seems to have fallen from the ground floor above.

The debris in all cases counts as difficult terrain; the squares touched by the pillar itself count as the following obstacle:

▮ Fallen Pillar

Dexterity (Acrobatics) DC 16; success means movement at difficult terrain speed (1 square counts as 2); failure causes  1d2 bludgeoning damage, and knocks a character prone

This room is otherwise just as described in CHU-6: High Priest’s Quarters and CHU-8: High Priest’s Closet.

CAU-5: Damaged Pantry Closet

- ☐ The entrance to this room has fallen apart and disintegrated; rubble is strewn about the entrance and to its north.

The entrance and rubble squares count as difficult terrain; the room itself is otherwise as described in CHU-7: Kitchen / Pantry Closet.

CAU-6: Damaged Guest Room 1

- ☐ The entrance to this room is intact. Within, a great deal of debris has fallen from the ceiling.

The rubble squares count as difficult terrain; the room itself is otherwise as described in CHU-4: Guest Room 1.

Note that to the north, Cleric Maghana’s Quarters are miraculously untouched by damage, and are precisely as described in CHU-3: Cleric Maghana’s Quarters.

CAU-7: Damaged Guest Room 2

- ☐ The entrance to this room is intact. Within, a great deal of debris has fallen from the ceiling.

The rubble squares count as difficult terrain; the room itself is otherwise as described in CHU-5: Guest Room.

CAU-8: Crypt

Untouched in every way, and still exhibiting an aura of serene calm, this area is exactly as depicted in CHU-10: Crypt.

CAU-9: Storage

- ☐ What might once have been a stack of stools and chairs is now mostly broken wood splinters, with a handful of somewhat-operational seating devices still in place.

This room is just as described in CHU-9: Church Storage, except that 80% of the chairs in here have been destroyed, and as such the room counts as difficult terrain.

BCA-2: Cryptkeeper's Shack, Aftermath

Summary

Surprisingly, the Shack is unscathed by the Eruption, and is intact. However, it's surrounded by the Graveyard itself, which is infested with all manner of monsters.

Cryptkeeper Gurth begins Act Three trapped here.

Damage Summary

The Shack suffered no damage at all.

Corruption Status

No Forces of the Obelisk inhabit the Shack. In fact, the structure is an anomaly in the post-Eruption city: it's a safe sanctuary in which the party may rest unmolested... though of course they will have to explain their presence to the terrified Gurth.

Localized Random Encounters

There are none, here. This house is one of the scant few places of sanctuary in Berinncorte.

The PCs may rest here for any length of time without fear of interruption or attack... but that also means that it's a fairly boring place to be, particularly once and if the party helps free Gurth and spirit him off to a haven of more hospitable surroundings.

That said, there is one Quest that triggers automatically upon the PCs entering the Shack:

🏆 Quest: It's Safe... But You Can't Stay Here

📄 Summary: Cryptkeeper Gurth is terrified and immobile in his Shack, and refuses to leave.

🏆 Rewards: ✨ 2 Reward Stars.

📍 Locations: Cryptkeeper's Shack.

👤 Key NPCs: Cryptkeeper Gurth.

▶ Kickoff: Either the PCs are in the Shack during the Eruption, or they enter it afterwards, and discover the gnome.

❓ Description:

Gurth himself gives no indication that he wishes to leave; although terrified, he is vaguely aware that no monsters are actively attacking him in his current location, and he hears far, far worse things happening beyond the humble walls of his shack. Good-aligned PCs will likely take it upon themselves to come to the aid of the poor gnome; neutral or otherwise preoccupied parties may simply ignore the quest altogether, leaving Gurth to his fate—after all, he is in his own home, and seems to be better off than many other townsfolk!

In fact, the GM is encouraged to consider an XP or ✨ Reward Star penalty for Good-aligned PCs to whom it does not occur to offer assistance at all.

👉 Convincing Gurth to flee with the party takes some doing, as he is something of a coward by nature, and is quite paralyzed by the calamity surrounding him. It's not sufficient to simply tell him the party is here to help him; he's in shock. Any conversation-based ⚠️ skill checks with the Cryptkeeper in his current state suffer from a -3 circumstance penalty. The party's healer(s) may attempt to subdue this effect; cure spells or healing effects of any nature will reduce this penalty to only -1, but will not remove it entirely.

To get Gurth to escape willingly with the party, three successive ⚠️ Charisma (Persuasion) or Charisma (Intimidation) checks are needed, opposed by the gnome's own Wisdom (Perception) check. The GM and players are encouraged to roleplay this conversation.

Each check requires 2-5 minutes, during which you should secretly roll on Table 114: Graveyard Random Encounters, Aftermath. Ignore all non-monster encounters identified in this manner. Combat encounters mean the party hears the monster(s) involved, stalking outside the door, but the enemy disperses without coming inside.

Assuming the party does convince the gnome to accompany them, they receive ✨ 1 Reward Star as a prize. Escorting the gnome to an alternate place of sanctuary may be treacherous: along the way, roll at least once on Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context B. You may also have to roll again on this table, depending on how long the party takes, and their distance to the chosen haven they are taking Gurth to.

While Gurth is being escorted in this manner, count him as having joined the party as an ally... but an inebriated one. All his skill checks, attack rolls, and saves are at -2, but if faced with obvious danger, he will fight back.

If the party successfully delivers Gurth to a different place of solace, they receive a filthy sneer from the unappreciative and unaware gnome... and, perhaps more importantly, ✨ 1 Reward Star.

👉 It's Safe... But You Can't Stay Here (Escort):

⚖️ Law +1, ❤️ Love +1

Successfully escorting Gurth to safety produces a

Catalyst Impact of Law +1 and Love +1.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

The party may attack Gurth, perhaps deeming it easier to slay the gnome and toss his body out into the graveyard than to muck about with any complicated skill check. Doing so does not draw immediate attention, and poor Gurth will almost certainly go down without much of a fight. Once the party leaves the Shack, however, roll on the Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context D; keep rerolling until you get a monster result. The monster(s) involved target the PCs, and will follow them into the Shack if necessary. Good-aligned PCs may also suffer a penalty for slaughtering a drunken and terrified innocent!

It's Safe... But You Can't Stay Here (Attack):
 Chaos +4

Assaulting the terrified, drunken gnome, who bears no treasure to speak of, results in a Catalyst Impact: Chaos +4.

If the party simply ignores the gnome, Gurth leaves them alone for the most part, though periodically he will look at them as though noticing them for the first time, and shout at them to leave, lest they lead creatures into his shack.

It's Safe... But You Can't Stay Here (Ignore):
 Chaos +1

Good-aligned PCs might worry that they are leaving a drunken innocent to what seems like certain (though eventual) doom creates a Catalyst Impact: Chaos +1.

This quest ends if Gurth is slain, or if he and the PCs part company along the way for any reason.

BCA-3: Graveyard, Aftermath

Summary

Aside from Town Square and the site of the Dark Obelisk itself, the Graveyard is the most dangerous place in Berinncorte once the Obelisk Erupts.

Damage Summary

Graves are broken and overturned, the dead rise, and a dense and macabre fog lays heavily over the once-serene region.

Corruption Status

The graveyard is very near the Obelisk, and as a place of death by nature, it is uniquely affected by the Eruption. The foes faced here tend to be of far greater difficulty than elsewhere in the city; as a result, it's unlikely the party will spend too much time here willingly.

Every 5 minutes the party spends in the Graveyard, roll on the following table to determine if a random encounter must be inserted into the action. Note that many of these are Untouchable Encounters.

Localized Random Encounters

Unless there is a compelling reason to do otherwise, roll on the following table when the party enters this area. Roll again on this table for every 10 minutes the party remains in this building.

BCA-3: Graveyard Map, Aftermath

GRA-1: Mayor's Guardpost

Strangely, despite being the portion of the Graveyard closest to the Obelisk, this structure has not been altered, and is a standard guard post.

The only odd thing is of course the Skelebat Swarm that roosts atop it. It will attack once the PCs approach within 20 ft. of the guard post. It bears no treasure to speak of if defeated.

GRA-2: Militia Guardpost

Though dark and forboding, this guardpost is oddly unoccupied.

GRA-3: Alley

☐ A thin line of brown cobblestones separates the Graveyard from the Mayor's House—one might say the darkest, and the brightest, areas in town.

Other than its location, there's not much interesting here.

GRA-4: Secret Entrance

This is unchanged from its depiction in CHG-3: Secret Entrance.

GRA-6: Zugul Church

GRA-7: Town Square

GRA-8: Western Broken Grave

☐ A rectangular gravestone appears to have been smashed open here. But from outside—or inside!—you cannot be certain.

Approaching this grave and examining it causes its contents to rise: a single Skeleton Barbarian. Apart from his arms and armor, he yields no treasure, and his grave is otherwise empty.

GRA-9: Southern Broken Grave

☐ A gravestone has been disturbed, but you can't tell if it was from external forces, of from the might of something within yearning to break out.

As the party approaches this grave and examines it, a Human Skeleton emerges and attacks. As he does so, another  1d4 Human Skeletons attack from the south where Town Square and the Obelisk are located.

Apart from their equipment, the skeletons have no treasure.

GRA-10: Northern Broken Grave

☐ A third grave lies wrecked from unexplained circumstances. As you approach, the earth underfoot starts to swell a bit, as though giving rise to some vile earthquake of the dead.

As the party approaches to take a closer look, the earth all around them buckles, as the hands and claws and more of  1d4 Skeleton Rogues emerge to assault the PCs.

These monsters carry weapons and armor, but little more in the way of loot once defeated.

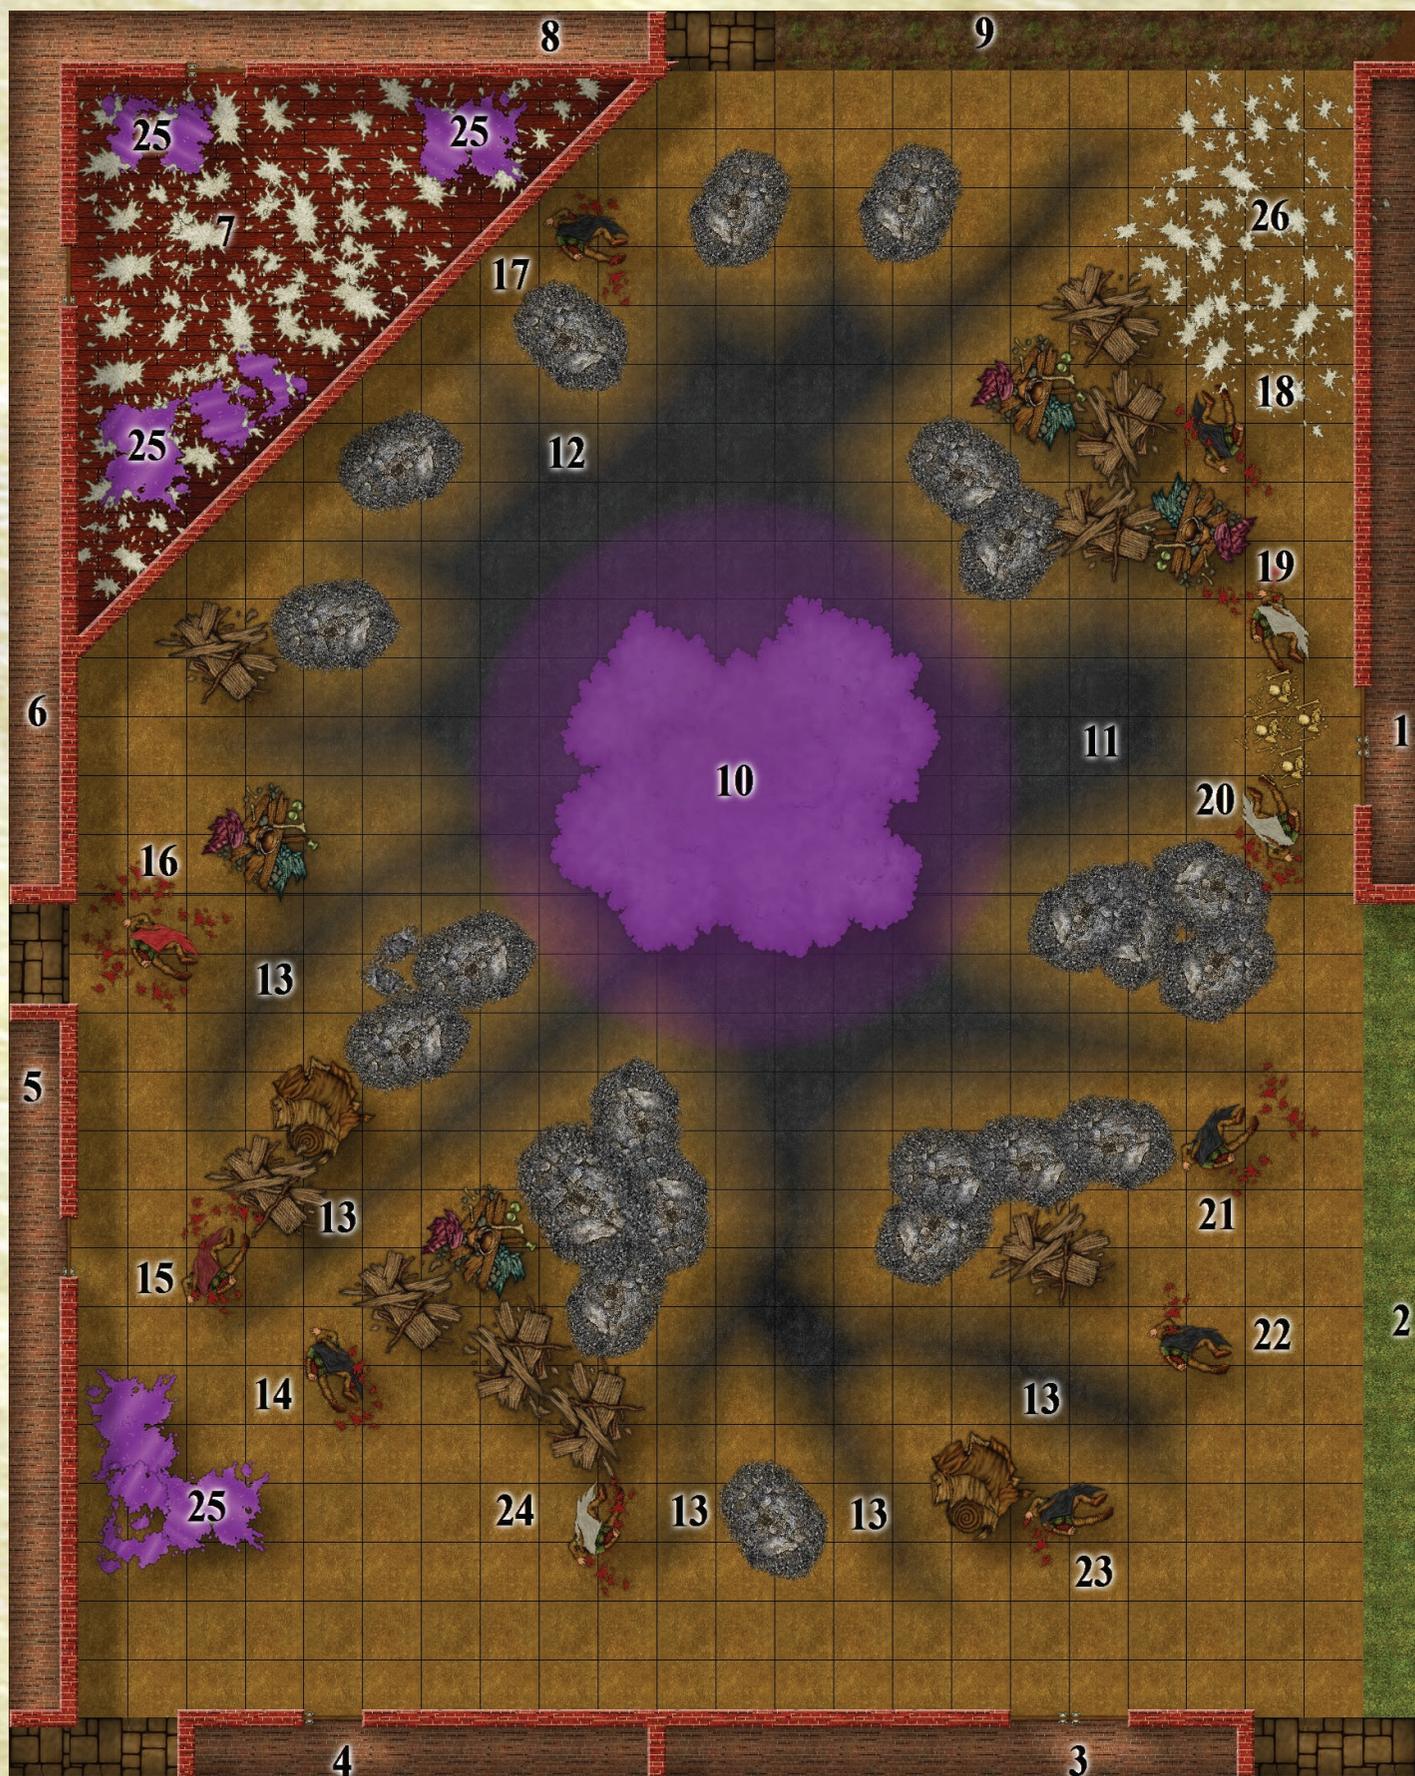

GRA-11: Far Northern Broken Grave

☐ At the far center-north of the graveyard is a square stone marker that appears to have been shattered.

Alone among the four broken gravesites, this one is harmless. Searching it yields the following treasure, which the PCs are free to take unmolested.

🔮 Far Northern Broken Grave

sapphire pendant (185 gp), masterwork silver dagger

BCA-4: Town Square, Aftermath

Summary

Town Square as it was has been destroyed. The Dark Obelisk, its chasm, and the fissures extending from it are all-consuming. No structure exists as it was before the Eruption.

Chaotic Miasma

The Dark Obelisk exudes a chaotic miasma. This is an oppressive, soul-burdening pulse of psychic energy that seems to be sourced from within a creature's own soul. It brings to mind thoughts of despair, of enervation, and opposite ends of the spectrum of energy and feeling.

All characters entering this region must make a  Wisdom save at DC 16 or be shaken (-2 on attack rolls, saving throws, skill checks, and ability checks). This effect lasts as long as a character is in Town Square, plus  1d4 minutes afterwards.

Each time a character re-enters the Town Square area, they must re-attempt the save, even if they have passed it before.

Creatures with the Chaotic subtype (not merely the Chaotic alignment component) are not subject to this effect. Creatures without a Constitution score are also immune.

Damage Summary

The damage to the ground is near total. A seemingly bottomless chasm yawns beneath the Obelisk itself; fissures crack off in all directions from its base.

Corruption Status

Total. The entire area is, perhaps obviously, entirely under control of Forces of the Obelisk.

Localized Random Encounters

TSA-1: Zugul Church

TSA-8: Mayor's House

TSA-2: Zugul Church Gardens

TSA-9: Graveyard

TSA-3: Inn

TSA-10: The Dark Obelisk

TSA-4: The Leaky Cask Tavern

TSA-5: Blacksmith's Hut

TSA-6: General Store

TSA-7: Stage

☐ The fine and solid cherry of the stage's wood has been stained heavily by massive quantities of feces.

Walking on this area counts as difficult terrain, with an obstacle, in the sense that the guano is slippery and foul.

☐ Stage Guano

Dexterity (Acrobatics) DC 14; success means movement at difficult terrain speed (1 square counts as 2); failure knocks a character prone (and covers them with giant vulture feces; -2 circumstance penalty to all Charisma (Persuasion) checks for 1d4 hours)

Groups of Giant Vultures have spattered the oft-pristine stage with guano. Several of them roost nearby, atop the General Store and the Mayor's House, and will attack if anyone attempts to Strength (Athletics) up on the stage.

At any given time, 1d4 Giant Vultures will descend and attack whomever is Strength (Athletics)ing up. They view the Stage as their own territory, and tend not to pursue enemies beyond it; if the PCs jump off the stage or Strength (Athletics) back down to the dirt of Town Square, any Vultures who have attacked them will return to their roosts.

Whether the Vultures have yet attacked them or not, the PCs may use ranged weapons or spells to attack the creatures. Doing so will cause the mammoth birds to attack, and to persist so long as the PCs are in the Town Square area, regardless of whether anyone is on the Stage.

☐ A thick, foreboding purplish haze surrounds what appears to be a chunk of rock the size of an elephant. Though it's only about twenty feet high, it has a pure sense of presence, and seems to loom large over the entire town. Sunlight seems to dim in a thirty-foot radius around it. None of the Town Square you knew is present, any longer: it looks for all the world as though the Obelisk has remade the space to serve as an arena with it at the center.

The stone itself seems not of this world: it's black, but purple; it is iridescent, but containing a spectrum comprised only of those colors used in the macabre, those glimpsed out of the corner of one's eye, those never seen directly or viewed head-on. You find it difficult, painful even to gaze at it directly; instinct pulls at your eye and neck muscles, and you find yourself instead looking elsewhere.

Yawning beneath the purplish-black of the Obelisk itself is a chasm, seemingly bottomless. Light seems to permeate with difficulty, so you cannot be sure: the pit could be twenty feet deep or twenty thousand; neither would surprise you overmuch.

Stretching out from this center are fissures. Like malignant tendrils of cancer, like cronish fingernails infected with some dread malaise, these cracks in the earth spread out with seemingly no purpose. Were this a typical earthquake, they might merely be physical artifacts of the pressures involved of stone on stone, and earth on earth... but as you suspect the Obelisk is not of this earth, you conceive instead that these are living things, almost; perhaps not sentient, but you feel as though the fissures are purposeful, spread with intent, to subdue and subvert.

You shake your head, not normally given to poetic interpretations of what is, what must still be, an explainable phenomenon.

The titular encourachment of pure chaos into the Realm of Berinncorte sits in the middle of Town Square. The pit beneath is indeed bottomless, or effectively so for the purposes of this narrative; it stretches indeed to the nether side of the Realm.

The fissures are mainly physical, caused by the earthquake-like forces of the Eruption itself and the aftermaths. Pits and chasms exist at varying depths; these are described individually.

Rubble is strewn everywhere. Some is from the utterly destroyed structures that used to be here; others are chunks of earth and dug-up earth that were thrown into the air during the Eruption, displaced violently by the Obelisk in its quest to break free of the confinement of the earth.

From the standpoint of pure game mechanics, it's not possible to touch the Obelisk: the pit that surrounds it will effectively kill off any PC who attempts to jump it.

TSA-11: Eastern Chasm Pit

☐ The eastern tendril of the fissure extending out from the Obelisk ends in a semi-circular pit, about ten feet deep. Its bottom appears to be scorched earth; the smell of some ill fire, long smouldering, assaults your nostrils.

This pit is caustic: being in it causes  1d4 points of Acid damage per round. Jumping in with no additional preparation causes 1d6 points of bludgeoning and piercing damage from the fall and the jagged surface on the bottom.

Strength (Athletics)ing out requires a  Strength (Athletics) skill check at DC 18. Failure inflicts 1d4 points of bludgeoning and piercing damage, plus of course the Acid damage mentioned above for remaining in the pit another round.

Moving about within the pit counts as difficult terrain.

There is nothing of value to be found in the bottom of the pit, though it's possible one or more PCs may end up here as a result of combat that takes place in Town Square. Or, completist-style parties may send a hapless member down here merely to ensure they are not letting any stone go unturned in search of possible treasure.

TSA-12: Northwest Chasm Pit

☐ This wide pit forms a ledge; to the south, it drops off suddenly into the pit that lies under the Obelisk. A stench of sulfur and long-gone fire rolls off of the surface of the pit; a faint haze of purplish smoke hangs in the air above it like a fog.

Ten feet deep, there's little to merit a journey down here... but inquisitive PCs or those embroiled in combat may end up here.

As with other pits in the area, this one is unhealthy: any character within suffers  1d4 points of Acid damage per round. Jumping in with no additional preparation causes 1d6 points of bludgeoning and piercing damage from the fall and the jagged surface on the bottom.

Strength (Athletics)ing out requires a  Strength (Athletics) skill check at DC 18. Failure inflicts  1d4 points of bludgeoning and piercing damage, plus of course the Acid damage mentioned above for remaining in the pit another round.

Moving about within the pit counts as difficult terrain.

There is nothing of value to be found in the bottom of the pit, though it's possible one or more PCs may end up here as a result of combat that takes place in Town Square. Or, completist-style parties may send a hapless member down here merely to ensure they are not letting any stone go unturned in search of possible treasure.

TSA-13: Chasm Tendrils

☐ Throughout the square, thin fissures glowing of ebony stretch across the terrain.

Looking at these cracks directly is challenging; they appear a bit fuzzy, as though the viewer has water in their eyes. Though not wide, these fissures do represent a change in terrain level by at least a few inches, and in some cases close to a foot.

The net impact of all of these characteristics is that any square touched by these tendrils counts as difficult terrain.

Any object dropped into the fissure is lost forever, so the PCs would do well not to attempt such a foolish action!

TSA-14: Arbelladon Moonside's Corpse

☐ Here rests an elf in fortunetelling garb. She appears at peace, though her body is ravaged by gory rakelike wounds.

This is the final resting place of Arbelladon Moonside. She died almost immediately during the Eruption.

Arbelladon Moonside's Body

This character died in the Obelisk Eruption.

TSA-15: Elizavetta Burak's Corpse

☐ A gorgeous and exotically-dressed human woman lies here; nearby is a second corpse of a partially-dressed man with a warped and chipped shortsword at his side.

Elizavetta Burak was with the man as her client during the Eruption; though the man was terrified, she used her powers of persuasion to get him to escort her to safety. Tragically, both were slain by Forces of the Obelisk before they could make it very far outside her stall.

Elizavetta Burak's Body

This character died in the Obelisk Eruption.

TSA-16: Kerem Dogan's Body

A charming-looking human male lies here, blood from enormous gashes pooled underneath.

In the wake of the immediate damage, which he survived, Kerem Dogan tried still to hawk his wares, hoping that chaos would lead to desperation. Chaos instead led to his slaughter.

Kerem Dogan's Body

This character died in the Obelisk Eruption.

TSA-17: Rona Stonehammer's Corpse

A solid female dwarf lies here, apparently killed by the wounds of many blades.

The charismatic dwarven trainer immediately started to group townsfolk together and get them to safety. In this she was partially successful; several commoners were indeed able to escape, but at the expense of their savior, who become embroiled with a Dullahan she could not hope to overcome.

Rona Stonehammer's Body

This character died in the Obelisk Eruption.

TSA-18: Vanya Berezin's Corpse

A human vendor lies here, burnt almost beyond recognition. What remains of his face has a sad composure.

The tragic end of Vanya Berezin is hinted at by his corpse. He was slain instantly by the explosive forces of the Eruption.

Vanya Berezin's Body

This character died in the Obelisk Eruption.

TSA-19: Daratis' Corpse

Berinncorte's seamstress lies here. Her body is torn, but nearby dropped bolts of silk and cloth are intact. The contrast, and peaceful repose, tear your eyes.

Daratis was shopping in Town Square during the Eruption, and was slain instantly.

Daratis' Body

This character died in the Obelisk Eruption.

TSA-20: Fishmaster Gumbrew's Corpse

The wound-riddled and burnt corpse of a half-orc in fishing regalia lies here.

Fishmaster Gumbrew was standing nearly atop the spot of the Eruption, and was slain immediately.

Gumbrew's Body

This character died in the Obelisk Eruption.

TSA-21: Ownka's Corpse

The corpse of a half-orc commoner sits here, her face frozen in a combined state of terror and shock.

Ownka and Thrunne were shopping together for supplies when the Obelisk Erupted; both were slain instantly, and tossed about in the resulting disruption.

Ownka's Body

This character died in the Obelisk Eruption.

TSA-22: Thrunne's Corpse

A half-orc serving wench appears to have died here; half her body seems to have been melted away by some horrible energy.

Thrunne was shopping about Town Square with her co-worker Ownka during the Eruption; both were destroyed immediately.

Thrunne's Body

This character died in the Obelisk Eruption.

TSA-23: Mayor Dominika Symms' Corpse

Note that of all the NPC bodies littered about Town Square, that of Mayor Symms is arguably the most important. Her death here must be handled carefully.

If the party was in Town Square during Act Two, then Symms has already spoken to them before she died as part of the Act Two vignette Quest "Take

This Sword, and My Word, And Go Forth”, on p 272.

If the PCs are only encountering her here during Act Three, then you must revert to the vignette Quest and activate it. Succinctly: Symms should only die here as a means to give the PCs her sword and mission; she should not simply be a pre-existing corpse that the party stumbles upon like all the others!

Only read the italicized portion if the PCs are encountering the Mayor’s body for the first time, and did not witness her death themselves.

Here rests the Mayor. Her body is bloodied, but unbroken; she appears at peace, restful, as though she had intended to lie down here, at this time, in this place, amidst the chaos.

As you contemplate the visage of the noble yet defeated warrior, she coughs, blood spurting. She yet lives!

Please refer to Quest “Take My Sword, and My Word...”, to read through the last words, and wishes, of Mayor Symms.

Dominika Symms’ Body

This character died in the Obelisk Eruption.

TSA-24: Einkill Holderhek’s Corpse

A dwarven warrior lies here, the stink of liquor lying about him nearly as thickly as the blood he has spilled. Nearby, the bodies of several hacked-apart skeleton warriors are arrayed; reconstructing what occurred here is not the work of a Ranger.

Drunken Einkill sauntered out of the Leaky Cask Tavern to the south to fight him some monsters, and fight he did, until they overcame him.

Einkill Holderhek’s Body

This character died in the Obelisk Eruption.

TSA-25: Dreadslime Patches

A bubbling, gurgling patch of acidic-looking goo sits here. As you watch, it seems to move, undulating within itself as though a self-contained ocean; the peaks of the fingernail-sized wavelets seem to reach, to bubble up at their apex, in an attempt to yearnfully gain purchase on the nearest organic matter. It looks like nothing so much as a glob of purplish, goopy slime, stuck amidst the process of coming to life.

Thankfully, dreadslime is not an actual ooze-based monster; it has no intelligence, and more importantly, no mobility. That said, however, it can still pose a significant obstacle, particularly if its danger is overlooked.

Treat dreadslime patches as a trap, with the following profile. Stepping into, or across, any square containing a dreadslime patch will automatically cause damage unless an Dexterity (Acrobatics) check is passed. A PC may attempt the Dexterity (Acrobatics) check first, and thereafter the Dexterity check if that is failed.

Dreadslime Patch (CR 3)

Type Organic; Trigger Touch; Reset Automatic

Wisdom (Perception) DC 12 / automatic; Disable Device n/a

Effect 2d8 acid (Dexterity DC 20 halves; Dexterity (Acrobatics) DC 22 negates)

Detecting a dreadslime patch is automatic under full light. Under darkened conditions, dreadslime grows darker, and is more challenging to detect. If encountered outside during full daylight hours, assume the PCs see the dreadslime; indoors, or at dusk or night, the Wisdom (Perception) check above applies.

Within the context of this adventure, there is no solvent or other useful means of getting rid of a patch of dreadslime; it is merely an obstacle that must either be suffered, or preferably, avoided.

TSA-26: Guano Patch

The entire northeast corner of Town Square appears to have been shat upon from on high by dozens of foul beasts. Feces litter the area, in some patches laid several inches thick.

Any character walking through this area—which is nearly unavoidable, to reach the Graveyard—must pass a DC 16  Constitution save, or suffer from being sickened (-2 penalty on all attack rolls, weapon damage rolls, saving throws, skill checks, and ability checks) for  2d10 minutes.

Although the guano here is indeed from the Giant Vultures that currently roost atop the various buildings surrounding the Square, walking through this zone does not catch their attention unduly, and they do not attack the party if they pass here.

Walking on this area counts as difficult terrain, with an obstacle, in the sense that the guano is slippery and foul.

Spattered Guano

Dexterity (Acrobatics) DC 16; success means movement at difficult terrain speed (1 square counts as 2); failure knocks a character prone (and covers them with giant vulture feces; -2 circumstance penalty to all Charisma (Persuasion) checks for 1d4 hours)

BCA-6: Mayor's House, Aftermath

Formerly a focus of politics and law, the Mayor's House is now a damaged, abandoned mess.

Summary

Mayor Symms ventured into Town Square to fight the emerging monsters, but was slain. All mayoral staff have abandoned the building.

Damage Summary

Damage is contained to the entryway, and the portion of the Mayor's chambers directly above it.

Corruption Status

Although no Forces of the Obelisk have truly claimed the building as their own, many monsters roam the halls where government once held sway.

BCA-6: Mayor's House Ground Floor Map, Aftermath

MGA-1: Town Square

MGA-2: Stage

MGA-3: Ruined Entrance

☐ The former entrance to the Mayor's House is completely destroyed. There's nothing among the wood, stone, and various debris that even looks like it was once a door. Whatever smashed through here was enormous, strong, vile, or some combination of all three.

Any area touched by debris counts as difficult terrain; in addition, the entrance itself requires passing an obstacle, as follows:

▮ Ruined Entrance

Dexterity (Acrobatics) DC 16; success means movement at difficult terrain speed (1 square counts as 2); failure knocks a character prone, and requires a roll on the Aftermath Random Encounters table (page 319), using Context C, to see if the noise and commotion has attracted attention from Town Square to the south (maximum one such check for each combined party attempt to move through this area)

If the party fails any Dexterity (Acrobatics) checks, and if they appear unwilling to venture forth into the building, the GM is encouraged to introduce the specific Untouchable Encounter "Hollow Heads, Hollow Heart", which is comprised of a Skelettin, attacking from the south. This may help to serve two functions: one, it will almost certainly drive the party within the building; and two, it may help explain how the entrance was destroyed in this manner.

MGA-4: Ruined Waiting Room

☐ Fallen wood, timbers, destroyed furniture, and more lie scattered about in waist-high piles in what was formerly the reception room of the Mayor's House. Some heaps of debris are head-high; above you, there is a huge hole in the ceiling, and you can see into the second floor easily.

This entire area counts as difficult terrain; in addition, for each two squares passed, a character must pass an obstacle, as follows:

▮ Ruined Waiting Room Obstacle

Dexterity (Acrobatics) DC 18; success means movement at difficult terrain speed (1 square counts as 2); failure knocks a character prone and inflicts 2

points of bludgeoning damage

Note that it's possible to grapple and scale from anywhere in this region to the second floor; doing so successfully places you in MUA-13: Destroyed Building Corner.

MGA-5: Reception Desk

Other than the complete absence of Ota Kuiduru, this room is as it was described in Act One, on page MHG-3: Reception Desk, on p 106.

If you happen to need to roll for a random encounter while here, it is automatically the Quest "Ota Kuiduru, Aftermath".

MGA-6: Processing Office

Please see this area's original description in MHG-4: Processing Office.

MGA-7: Interview Office

This office is unchanged from MHG-5: Interview Office.

MGA-8: Conference Room

The original description of this room, MHG-7: Conference Room still applies.

MGA-9: Main Activity Room

This room is unchanged from its original depiction, MHG-8: Main Activity Room.

MGA-10: Weapons Locker

MGA-10: Weapons Locker, still applies here. Note that this area is the target of several Quests, as it is a fabulous array of supplies, either for the party's use, or to assist other NPCs.

MGA-11: Open Office

This area is largely the same as described in MHG-12: Open Office.

MGA-12: Common Area / Stage Prep

Please refer to the description of MHG-11: Common Area / Stage Prep, for more information on this area.

MGA-23: General Store

MGA-13: Banquet Hall

This area is unchanged from its depiction in MHG-20: Banquet Hall.

MGA-14: Main Dining Hall

MGA-15: Kitchen

This Kitchen is as described in MHG-18: Kitchen.

MGA-16: Supply Room

“MHG-15: Supply Room” describes this area.

MGA-17: Emergency Supply Cache

This area is unchanged from its Act One description, “MHG-14: Emergency Supply Cache”.

MGA-18: Northwest Militia Guard Post

This otherwise ordinary Militia Guard Post contains a secret door to the east.

MGA-19: Western Alley

This alley separates the Mayor’s House from the Sheergath Temple.

MGA-20: Staircase Up

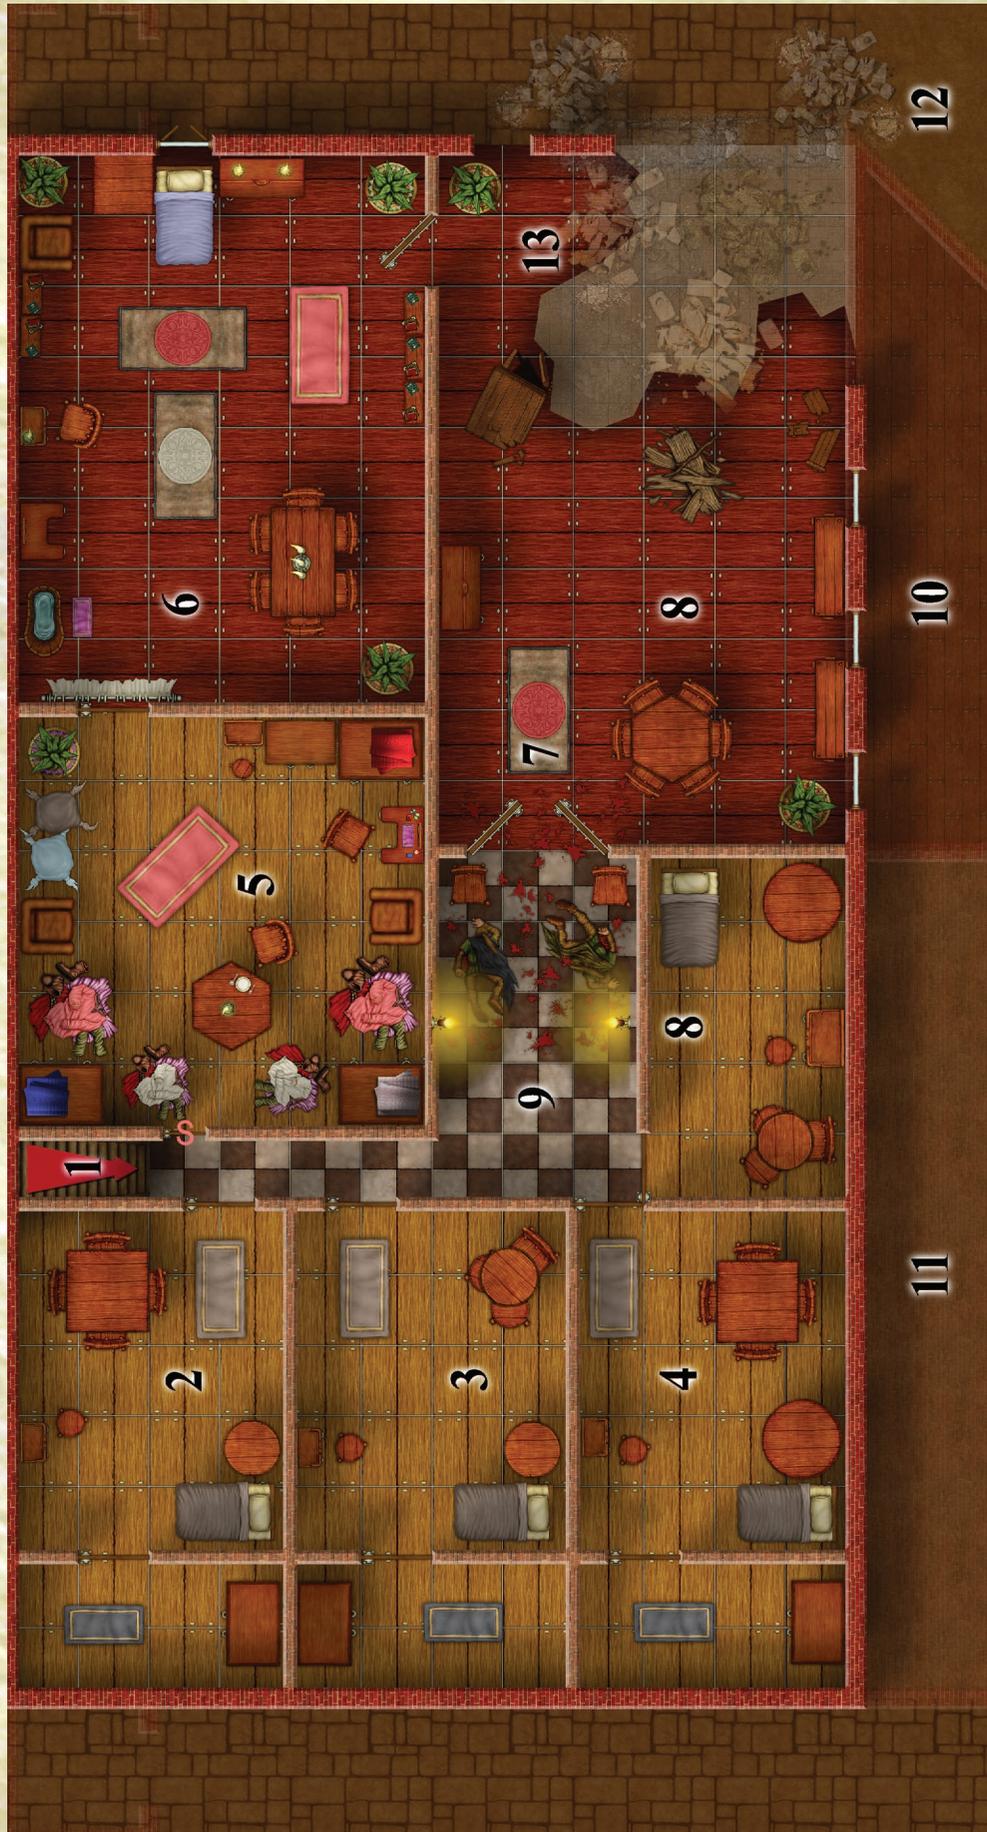

This staircase leads to the second floor, specifically to location MUA-1: Staircase Down.

MGA-21: Northeast Militia Guard Post

This is a typical Militia Guard Post.

MGA-22: Eastern Alley

This cobblestone separates the Mayor’s House from the Graveyard to the east.

“MHU-3: West Guest Room”, contains more information about this room.

MUA-4: Southwest Guest Room

There is more information about this room in “MHU-8: South Guest Room”.

MU-5: Mayor's Closet

Please see MHU-5: Mayor's Closet for more details.

MUA-6: Mayor's Bedchamber

Please see “MHU-6: Mayor's Bedchamber”, for more information on this room.

MUA-7: Office Entrance

☐ These steel-reinforced doors have been stuck open and damaged. Blood spatters the floor in the entryway and leads out into the hall. To the west, two Berinnorte Militia guards have been slaughtered and lay on the floor in pools of their own blood.

These doors are damaged, and no longer close properly. They are otherwise unremarkable.

The Forces of the Obelisk who slew the two guards have long since escaped, but disturbing the bodies might draw attention. If the party stops to loot or otherwise examine the corpses, roll on the generic Aftermath Random Encounters table, using Context C, to determine if anything interesting intercedes.

MUA-8: South Guest Room

This room is unchanged from its depiction in MHU-8: South Guest Room.

MUA-9: Hallway

☐ The hallway is dark and dreary. Wall sconces to the southeast flicker as though clinging to life. You get a general sense of unease in this area.

If the PCs have been here before, in Act One, they will notice a definite change in the lighting and general atmosphere. Although it seems sinister, it's merely a result of the sputtering sconces, and the dead guards to the east.

See MUA-7: Office Entrance, above, for more details on the bodies and the attention that disturbing them may bring.

MUA-10: Stage

MUA-11: General Store

MUA-12: Town Square

MUA-13: Destroyed Building Corner

☐ The entire southeast corner of the second floor has fallen to the ground below. You can see the graveyard to the east, the Town Square to the south... and looming like a swollen, festering cyst in the earth, the Dark Obelisk in its midst.

Any PC walking on any of the squares touched by the damage must pass an obstacle challenge, or fall to the ground floor below:

▮ Destroyed Mayoral Office

Dexterity (Acrobatics) DC 12; success means movement at difficult terrain speed (1 square counts as 2); failure means a character falls to the ground floor, suffering 1d6 bludgeoning damage

Descending—either in a controlled or uncontrolled manner—takes you to MGA-4: Ruined Waiting Room. Safe descent is possible via rope; use the rules for scaling and grappling.

BCA-8: Militia Guard Posts, Aftermath

These guard posts are sprinkled throughout the city. Although they are largely unchanged, and oddly none of them has suffered any damage

Summary

These guard posts are unchanged. However, none of them is ever manned by Berinncorte Militia.

Damage Summary

No damage.

Corruption Status

No inherent corruption, though random encounters may occur at any guard post.

BCA-9: Blacksmith's Hut, Aftermath

Dimblegruffe no longer runs the shop; it's too damaged, and too close to the Obelisk.

Summary

Once a mercantile nexus for arms and armor, this ruined building is now a slightly-risky and dangerous opportunity to score some loot.

Damage Summary

Damage is extensive and pervasive; no part of the structure remains fully intact.

Corruption Status

High; in addition to a high risk of dangerous random encounters, the two dreadslime pools that have spawned up around the entryway clearly mark this territory as being of the Obelisk now.

Localized Random Encounters

Unless there is a compelling reason to do otherwise, roll on the following table when the party enters this area. Roll again on this table for every 10 minutes the party remains in this building.

Localized Random Encounters

BCA-9: Blacksmith's Hut Map, Aftermath

BHA-1: Chasm Tendrils

- ☐ Thin fissures, glowing of ebony, stretch from Town Square to the east.

Looking at these cracks directly is challenging; they appear a bit fuzzy, as though the viewer has water in their eyes. Though not wide, these fissures do represent a change in terrain level by at least a few inches, and in some cases close to a foot.

Mechanically, treat any square touched by these tendrils as difficult terrain.

BHA-2: Entryway

- ☐ Once, this area served as a place of light, the clash of iron and steel ringing brightly and in a welcoming manner across the square. Now, it's dark, dismal, with pools of purplish goo providing the only light.

As with other areas in the Hut, any square touched by debris counts as difficult terrain.

BHA-3: Dreadslime Pools

- ☐ A bubbling, gurgling patch of acidic-looking goo sits here. As you watch, it seems to move, undulating within itself as though a self-contained ocean; the peaks of the fingernail-sized wavelets seem to reach, to bubble up at their apex, in an attempt to yearnfully gain purchase on the nearest organic matter. It looks like nothing so much as a glob of purplish, gooey slime, stuck amidst the process of coming to life. It's self-contained, in a pool; it looks a few feet deep, and ringed with stone and rubble that has burst forth from the ground underneath.

Thankfully, dreadslime is not an actual ooze-based monster; it has no intelligence, and more importantly, no mobility. That said, however, it can still pose a significant obstacle, particularly if its danger is overlooked.

As a result, the only way that the party might encounter the trap that represents the pool is to step into, or poke a limb around in, the pools. Monsters or NPCs might also try and fling them or dip them into the pools, although that seems far less likely.

Any time organic or other matter touches a dreadslime pool, treat it as the following:

♂ Dreadslime Pool (CR 3)

Type Organic; Trigger Touch; Reset Automatic

Wisdom (Perception) Automatic; Disable Device n/a
Effect 2d8 acid (Dexterity DC 20 halves; Dexterity (Acrobatics) DC 22 negates)

Within the context of this adventure, there is no solvent or other useful means of getting rid of dreadslime; it is merely an obstacle that must either be suffered, or preferably, avoided.

BHA-4: Ruined Doorway

- ☐ Twisted metal and stone now marks the entrance of the blacksmith's hut.

All squares touched by debris count as difficult terrain. The doorway itself requires an obstacle check, as follows:

▣ Ruined Doorway

Dexterity (Acrobatics) DC 18; success means movement at difficult terrain speed (1 square counts as 2); failure knocks a character prone

BHA-5: Showcase Hall

Please refer to page p 122, "BSH-3: Showcase Hall", for more information about this area. It's unchanged from Act One.

BHA-6: Personal Quarters

- ☐ What was once the private quarters of the proprietress is now a half-ruined mess.

Please see BSH-5: Personal Quarters, for more information about most of the contents.

All squares touched by debris count as difficult terrain. The area that used to be a wall to the east also requires an obstacle check, as follows:

▣ Blacksmith's Personal Quarters Rubble

Dexterity (Acrobatics) DC 17; success means movement at difficult terrain speed (1 square counts as 2); failure knocks a character prone

BHA-7: Ruined Walls

- ☐ A great deal of damage has occurred here; the walls of the hut have been caved in by enormous force. Charred, splintered wood, stone, and metal form a hideous amalgam of debris that looks treacherous to overcome.

All squares touched by debris count as difficult terrain. Any squares that contain what used to be a wall will also require an obstacle check to navigate, as follows:

▣ Ruined Walls

Dexterity (Acrobatics) DC 17; success means movement at difficult terrain speed (1 square counts as 2); failure knocks a character prone and deals 1d2 points of bludgeoning and piercing damage

BHA-8: Storage Vault

▣ The western half of this room appears mostly untouched, with a table smashed and a few piles of debris.

All squares touched by debris count as difficult terrain.

This room is otherwise as described in BSH-4: Storage and Supplies.

BHA-9: Ruined Storage Walls

▣ The walls here have been utterly ravaged by force. Tables and chairs and containers within have been smashed, and arms and armor that had been stored inside are strewn about in a gigantic pile of trash and debris. Here and there, you see sharp points of edged weapons sticking out.

All squares touched by debris count as difficult terrain.

Any squares that contain what used to be a wall will also require an obstacle check to navigate, as follows:

▣ Storage Vault Rubble

Dexterity (Acrobatics) DC 13; success means movement at difficult terrain speed (1 square counts as 2); failure knocks a character prone and deals 1d2 points of bludgeoning and piercing damage

Note that the items described in BSH-6: Secret Stash still remain, but require a DC 16 ⚠ Wisdom (Perception) check to locate.

The Quest, “Stilted Hiltwork”, associated with these items is no longer initiated or resolvable at this point if the PCs did not encounter it in Act One.

BHA-10: Lower-Class Residential District

Act III

BCA-10: Zugul Church Garden, Aftermath

This once-serene garden has been corrupted by the encroaching Obelisk, and now neither safe nor serene.

Summary

A dark haze has settled over the area, and it scorches the nostrils. It's nothing more than an irritant, but while in this area, it's a constant reminder to the PCs that this is no longer the garden it once was.

Damage Summary

That pathway, and all flowers, are gone, replaced instead by a chasm fissure and debris.

Corruption Status

High. Random encounters here, this close to the Obelisk itself, are dangerous, though this is likely still the safest way to approach and enter the Zugul Church to the north.

Localized Random Encounters

Unless there is a compelling reason to do otherwise, roll on the following table when the party enters this area. Roll again on this table for every 10 minutes the party remains in this building.

BCA-IO: Zugul Church Garden Map, Aftermath

ZGA-1: Zugul Church

ZGA-2: Southern Entrance

“CAG-2: South Entrance”, contains information about this entrance.

ZGA-3: Town Square

ZGA-4: Chasm Tendrils

Most of the garden has been infested by a creeping, smoldering fissure of pure black, that seems to pulse before your eyes. Although the black areas are but a few inches deep, along the bottom surface of the pit are deeper cracks that yawn in a dizzying manner.

Looking at these cracks directly is challenging; they appear a bit fuzzy, as though the viewer has water in their eyes. Though not wide, these fissures do represent a change in terrain level by at least a few inches, and in some cases close to a foot.

The net impact of all of these characteristics is that any square touched by these tendrils counts as difficult terrain.

Any object dropped into the smaller fissures is lost forever, so the PCs would do well not to attempt such a foolish action!

ZGA-5: Living Thicket

The mass of vegetation here occupies much of the northern portion of the garden. As you watch, you could swear you see part of the foliage move... then move back to where it was. It may simply have been an odd effect of the light, or the oppressive feeling of the Obelisk getting to you.

Chaos is not the only force unleashed and empowered by the Obelisk—Fey and fey-like forces are also enhanced by its presence. Elsewhere in the city, the most noticeable effect of this is the introduction of random Spriggan encounters, but here, the powers have manifested in a much more tangible manner.

The foliage here is in the process of becoming alive. For the time being, however, it is merely testing the waters of its newfound intelligence, its new abilities in various degrees of efficacy. Even for adventurers who have fought plant-based monsters hand-to-hand, the notion of a burgeoning, but not quite alive, force of nature can be unsettling.

Mechanically, this patch of hedges and bushes counts as difficult terrain. However, the grabbing and grasping nature of the foliage means that any character attempting to traverse a square of this patch must also make an obstacle check, as follows:

Living Thicket

Dexterity (Acrobatics) DC 16; success means movement at difficult terrain speed (1 square counts as 2); failure means even more or a movement penalty: 1 square counts as 3

While moving through these squares, do not roll for random encounters. If the PCs can get over the creepiness of intentionally wading through moving bushes, and the unsettling thought that the situation might turn truly gruesome at any moment, this is actually the safest way to approach the Zugul Church entrance to the northeast.

ZGA-6: Militia Guard Post

This is a typical Militia Guard Post in every way. Remember that in Act Three, no Guard Post is ever manned with Militia.

ZGA-7: Chasm Tendril Pit

The fissure deepens, here, plummeting down 40 feet without warning or ledge. Between the ebon dank of the pit, and the smoky haze settled over the garden entire, it's difficult to even see the bottom of this area.

This pit is caustic: being in it causes $1d4$ points of Acid damage per round. Jumping in with no additional preparation causes $4d6$ points of bludgeoning and piercing damage from the fall and the jagged surface on the bottom.

Strength (Athletics)ing out requires a Strength (Athletics) skill check at DC 18. Failure inflicts $2d6$ points of bludgeoning and piercing damage, plus of course the Acid damage mentioned above for remaining in the pit another round.

Moving about within the pit counts as difficult terrain. The tendrils that surround it on the surface also count as difficult terrain, but of course do not inflict the Acid damage.

There is nothing of value to be found in the bottom of the pit, though it's possible one or more PCs may end up here as a result of combat that takes place in Town Square. Or, completist-style parties may send a hapless member down here merely to ensure they are not letting any stone go unturned in search of possible treasure.

encounters while the PCs are in this southern portion of the Garden.

ZGA-8: Southern Tendril

Across the southeastern stretch of the now-barren garden, a thin and shallow ribbon of chasm extends from the north.

This region isn't even sufficiently dangerous to count it as difficult. However, it's a large, open space in full view of the Obelisk; roll twice as often for random

Map 44: Zugul Cleric House, Aftermath (CHA)

One square equals 5 ft.

BCA-II: Zugul Cleric House, Aftermath

Although damaged and abandoned, the Cleric House is only partly consumed by monsters.

Summary

There are no longer any Acolytes or other staff around. Between the smell of rubble, fire, ash, and holy water, it's a somewhat terrifying mélange of scents to dwell amidst.

Damage Summary

The north and eastern portions of the building have collapsed.

Corruption Status

Partial. Random encounters are dangerous, but no particular Forces of the Obelisk have yet claimed this area.

BCA-II: Zugul Cleric House Map, Aftermath

CHA-1: Ruined Entryway

☐ The entire façade of the cleric house has been ruined. Rubble is strewn everywhere, and with it in many places the ceiling and roof of the building. Of the doors there is no longer any visible remnant.

All squares touched by debris count as difficult terrain.

Any squares that contain what used to be a wall or door will also require an obstacle check to navigate, as follows:

☐ Cleric House Ruined Entryway

Dexterity (Acrobatics) DC 15; success means movement at difficult terrain speed (1 square counts as 2); failure knocks a character prone and deals 1d2 points of bludgeoning damage

CHA-2: Militia Guard Post

This is a typical Guard Post; recall that none is now manned by Militia in Act Three.

CHA-3: Ruined Building Corner

☐ The shrine that once stood in the northwest corner of the cleric house has been mostly damaged. Among the substantial rubble, you think you see a glint, here and there; it could just be a trick of the light, or a reflection off of twisted metal supports.

The “glints” referred to are coins folk had placed or thrown at the statue here in a misguided attempt to have wishes fulfilled. In all, there is a fair amount of treasure to be had here... however, the substantial amount of rubble means that it takes a full minute of searching to yield  2d10 coins (randomize which type).

☐ Statue Coins

56 sp; 118 cp

As it is in sight of the Obelisk, searching or scavenging here may draw attention; while the PCs search or otherwise linger here, roll twice as often as normal on random encounter tables.

All squares touched by debris count as difficult terrain.

Any squares that contain what used to be a wall or door will also require an obstacle check to navigate, as follows:

☐ Cleric House Ruined Corner

Dexterity (Acrobatics) DC 15; success means movement at difficult terrain speed (1 square counts as 2); failure knocks a character prone and deals 1d2 points of bludgeoning damage

CHA-4: Damaged Altar

☐ Rubble has besmirched the beautiful stonework that was once here. All candles are squashed and unlit, and debris is strewn everywhere.

Although it might bring a tear to the eye of any PC with points in Craft (Stonemasonry) or the Stonecutting racial trait, there is no impact here other than, as with nearly everywhere else in town, squares with debris mean difficult terrain.

CHA-5: Ruined Wall

☐ The southwestern wall of the cleric house is now a shambles. Shards of glass lie scattered about, presumably from the window that was once here.

All squares touched by debris count as difficult terrain.

Any squares that contain what used to be a wall will also require an obstacle check to navigate, as follows:

☐ Cleric House Ruined Wall

Dexterity (Acrobatics) DC 16; success means movement at difficult terrain speed (1 square counts as 2); failure knocks a character prone and deals 1d4 points of bludgeoning and piercing damage

CHA-6: Sleeping Chambers

Aside from the missing western wall, and the fact that the house has been abandoned, there is no difference from the description offered in CLH-5: Sleeping Chambers.

CHA-7: Common Area

The Cleric House is abandoned, but otherwise, the content of this room is identical to the Act One version, “CLH-4: Common Area”.

CHA-8: Pews

There is a great deal of rubble to the northwest of this area, but otherwise, it's the same as it was back in “CLH-3: Pews”.

CHA-9: Apothecary

BCA-12: City Gardens, Aftermath

Once beautiful, these gardens are now scorched and dangerous.

Summary

These gardens are no longer worthy of the title, and contain quite dangerous foes.

Damage Summary

All pathways are now scorched tendrils of chasm. One of the bridges has been destroyed. The previous faint Fey-like energy has given rise to horrible swathes of Spriggan invaders who tear through the foliage without mercy.

Corruption Status

High. Though no villain has yet claimed the area, monsters run rampant in what was once the prettiest and often quietest place in the city.

Localized Random Encounters

Unless there is a compelling reason to do otherwise, roll on the following table when the party enters this area. Roll again on this table for every 10 minutes the party remains in this building.

BCA-12: City Gardens Map, Aftermath

CGA-1: Destroyed Bridge

☐ Posts and chunks of wood lie on either side of the river, here, at once was once a bridge.

No passage here! PCs wishing to cross must head to the north, where the only bridge remains.

CGA-2: Intact Bridge

☐ Rickety, and pockmarked with debris though it may be, this bridge seems intact, and stable.

It is indeed: no skill check is required to navigate this bridge, though the GM is encouraged to give the PCs a scare in transit by indicating that it creaks under their weight.

CGA-3: Dread Chasm

☐ In the center of the gardens is a deep chasm. A sharp dropoff from the fissures that extend in all directions from it, you can see down 50 feet; you don't see any ledges to speak of. A fiery scent lingers in the air above; your nostrils burn a bit from the weird, grimy sensation.

This pit is caustic: being in it causes  1d4 points of Acid damage per round. Jumping in with no additional preparation causes 5d6 points of bludgeoning and piercing damage from the fall and the jagged surface on the bottom.

Strength (Athletics)ing out requires a  Strength (Athletics) skill check at DC 20. Failure inflicts  3d6 points of bludgeoning and piercing damage, plus of course the Acid damage mentioned above for remaining in the pit another round.

Moving about within the pit counts as difficult terrain. The tendrils that surround it on the surface also count as difficult terrain, but of course do not inflict the Acid damage.

There is, frustratingly, absolutely nothing of value to be found in the bottom of the pit, though it's possible one or more PCs may end up here as a result of combat that takes place elsewhere in the gardens. Or, completist-style parties may send a hapless member down here merely to ensure they are not letting any stone go unturned in search of possible treasure.

Fissures of the crevasse extend all around the Garden. Any square touched by this blackish crack counts as difficult terrain; this means that the vast majority of the Garden is now treated in this manner. This central area is the only pit to speak of; nearly all other fissures are mere inches deep.

The exception is the chasm to the south, leading to CGA-5: Ebon Fey (see below); this area is around ten feet deep, with a Strength (Athletics)able slope. Attempting an ascent to this southern portion grants a +5 circumstance bonus to any Strength (Athletics) checks involved, but may trigger the attention of Spriggans; roll once a minute on the Localized Random Encounter table above when attempting escape in this manner.

CGA-4: Bank of Solace

☐ Strange in the destroyed and abandoned garden, green, living foliage dwells still on the embankment, and to either side. It feels peaceful, serene... though even sitting in the relative quiet of this bank, you can easily see debris and fissures to the south and west.

While the party rests here, roll $\frac{1}{4}$ as often as normal on Random Encounters tables, and use Context C (if applicable) when doing so.

CGA-5: Ebon Fey

☐ Scuttling and crawling from the dark fissure, grimy and grim gnomish beasts emerge.

Entering this area—for the first time, or subsequently, if the party has been away from the area for more than 5 minutes—automatically triggers the encounter Dark Fey's Rise, found on p 310.

CGA-6: Mushroom Patch

☐ Head-sized mushroom caps of a rich orange-red hue float here in the breeze. And then the breeze stops... and the caps still float to and fro. It looks for all the world as though they are tendrils of some larger creature, reaching out and exploring as much as their limited reach and mobility can allow.

Much like the ZGA-5: Living Thicket in the City Gardens, these flora are in the process of becoming truly alive and mobile, plant-typed monsters. For now, however, these mushroom patches are simply that: patches of non-sentient mushrooms.

Treat this as difficult terrain to move through. However, the grabbing and grasping nature of the caps means that any character attempting to traverse a square of this patch must also make an obstacle check, as follows:

Living Mushroom Caps

Dexterity (Acrobatics) DC 13; success means movement at difficult terrain speed (1 square counts as 2); failure means even more or a movement penalty: 1 square counts as 3

CGA-7: Safe Approach

Green bushes on either side border a seemingly peaceful path from north to south.

This path is as it appears: safe. While moving through this area, do not roll on the Localized Random Encounter table. The party cannot simply stay here, however; if the PCs stop, random encounters are “back on”.

CGA-8: Corrupted Approach

A thin fissure runs, pathlike, from north to south and then southeast, to the larger chasm.

This foreboding path is much more dangerous than the seemingly—and actually—safer path to the east.

Upon following down this path from the north, roll immediately on Table 127: City Gardens Random Encounters, Aftermath. On any subsequent encounter FlexTables, use Context B. Keep rerolling until you resolve to a monster encounter.

Thereafter, using this pathway does not automatically trigger this sort of encounter.

CGA-9: Northeast Tendril

Snaking out from the chasm in the center of the garden is a tendril of fissure that reaches nearly to the shore where the now-destroyed bridge used to stand.

Any square touched by this blackish crack counts as additionally-difficult terrain, nearly a foot deep as opposed to the inches-deep fissures elsewhere. One square of movement along these squares counts instead as 3 squares.

Act III

BCA-15: The Leaky Cask Tavern, Aftermath

Mostly intact, the Tavern is now the domain of a powerful enemy.

Summary

Monsters have claimed this damaged property. All citizens have escaped. The only safe entry is via the trapdoor behind the bar, which can be reached via the secret passage in the connected basement via the Inn to the east.

Damage Summary

The entire northern wall has been destroyed, leaving the bar open to the Town Square to the north, and providing a clear view of the Obelisk.

Corruption Status

Total. This building has been claimed by a Babau Demon and his minions.

BCA-15: The Leaky Cask Tavern Map, Aftermath

TVA-1: Town Square

the PCs are walking around here.

Forces of the Obelisk gain a +3 competency bonus on all Dexterity (Acrobatics) checks made in this rubble to keep their balance.

TVA-2: Inn

TVA-3: Corpse of Phadian Gess

☞ A flamboyantly-dressed rogue lies here, slain from bloody slashing wounds.

Phadian Gess perished trying to escort his lover Lingona to safety.

☞ Phadian Gess' Body

This character died in the Obelisk Eruption.

TVA-4: Ruined Entrance

☞ The entirety of the northern façade of the Leaky Cask Tavern has been destroyed. Rubble is strewn everywhere; of the door and windows that once were here, you see only the occasional shard of glass. There's a clear view from the Town Square and the Obelisk right into the bar; you can see monsters lurking in the bar and an enormous demon standing proud and fearless behind the bar itself where a charismatic half-orc once held keep.

Navigating any square touched by rubble counts as difficult terrain. In addition, any square with rubble that used to be a door or wall counts as having an obstacle, as follows.

☐ Obstacle

Dexterity (Acrobatics) DC 14; success means movement at difficult terrain speed (1 square counts as 2); failure knocks a character prone and causes 1d4 points of bludgeoning and piercing damage

Note that although these characteristics are hardly rare in the post-Eruption city, their presence here is particularly noteworthy, as combat is unavoidable if

TVA-5: Sentries

☞ Lurking and crawling about the shattered remnants of tables and chairs and walls is a trio of Quasit Demons.

These three demons are somewhat smart, and know that their greatest combat advantages are the rubble the PCs have to cross to face them, and the Babau Demon at their backs. They will wait, scuttling back and forth and taunting the party, but will not attack the party unless attacked at range.

Note that there is a great amount of debris from smashed tables here; any square touched by debris counts as difficult terrain.

Also remember that any combat that takes place here will likely subject either the PCs and/or the demons to the obstacle of the ruined wall to the north (see INU-3: Southeast Bedroom).

TVA-6: Babau Demon Bartender

☞ A demon stands here behind the bar. His stance suggests an equal chance that he will ask you what you want to drink, or reach over and crush your face in his claws. He is a stick-thin humanoid skeleton, covered in tight flesh of grimy and slippery leather. A horn erupts from the back of his head, like that of some sort of perversely evil unicorn.

The self-appointed master of the tavern, this Babau Demon is quite a challenge for the party, particularly given his tactical position and the likely help of his trio of Quasit Demon minions to the north.

If the party wishes to defeat this normally Untouchable monster, it is suggested that they approach via the trapdoor (see TVN-5: Food Prep Station) to gain some advantage on the situation.

This Babau Demon bartender will attack the party wisely, using his minions and bar as cover as needed.

TVA-7: Bar Area

Surprisingly, this area is unchanged from its description in TVN-6: Inner Bar.

TVA-8: Trapdoor to Basement

This is identical to how it was portrayed in Act One, “TVN-8: Basement Trapdoor”, and leads to the basement, specifically INB-7: Inn Trapdoor.

Sneaking up through here is the only good way to attack the Babau Demon bartender. Coming up through the trapdoor delivers two advantages: first, it gives the PCs a surprise round of attack; and second, it delays the Quasit Demon allies from joining the fray, as it will take those monsters two full rounds to scabble over the bar—and even then, not all of them might fit behind the bar, depending on the size of the party.

TVA-9: Southern Entrance

This is intact, and remains as depicted in TVN-2: Southern Tavern Entrance.

TVA-10: Corpse of Farzith

☞ Here lies the butcher’s apprentice. Farzith is still dressed in a butcher’s smock, making it difficult to tell which smears of blood are his own, versus that of his trade.

The hapless butcher’s apprentice was wounded by flying chunks of fiery rock immediately during the Eruption, stumbled about for a bit, and then bled out.

🗿 Farzith’s Body

This character died in the Obelisk Eruption.

Act III

BCA-16: Inn, Aftermath

Only the northeast corner is damaged; otherwise, this building is almost entirely as it was before the Eruption.

Summary

All occupants have abandoned the Inn. Esk is nowhere to be found, and Mardnab Scheppen, the maid, is similiarly absent, though she has gone on to meet a far worse end.

Damage Summary

The entire northeast corner has been destroyed; rubble from falling ceiling parts litters the entryway and prevents movement along the southeast hall.

Corruption Status

None. There is the occasional wandering Force of the Obelisk, given that it is so close to Town Square, but the interior is eerily calm.

BCA-16: Inn Ground Floor Map, Aftermath

IGA-1: Town Square

IGA-2: The Leaky Cask Tavern

IGA-3: Ruined Entrance

☐ The northeast corner of the Inn has been wrecked. Walls, doors, and windows are destroyed; bits of ceiling and roof have fallen and litter the entrance.

All squares touched by rubble count as difficult terrain. In addition, squares that are touched by what used to be a wall or door count as having an obstacle, as follows:

▮ Obstacle

Dexterity (Acrobatics) DC 16; success means movement at difficult terrain speed (1 square counts as 2); failure knocks a character prone

IGA-4: Destroyed Entrance Area

☐ Debris is heavy here. You see destroyed tables, powdered stone and brick from the walls, and shards of glass occasionally. In some places—particularly to the southeast—the rubble is chest-high or taller.

All rubble here counts as difficult terrain. The rubble is stacked so high to the southeast that passage to the hallway beyond is impossible.

IGA-5: Front Desk

This area is unchanged from its description in Act One, “INN-5: Office”.

IGA-6: Meeting Room

Please refer to INN-4: Meeting Room for more details about this room.

IGA-7: Office

INN-5: Office contains more details about this room.

IGA-8: Owner's Quarters

This chamber is unchanged from its depiction in “INN-6: Owner's Quarters”.

IGA-9: Storeroom and Trapdoor to Basement

The trapdoor is as described in INN-8: Basement Trapdoor, and leads to the basement trapdoor.

IGA-10: Staircase Up

This leads upstairs to the upper floor of the Inn.

IGA-11: Rear Entrance

This is unaltered from its description in INN-10: Rear Inn Entrance.

IGA-12: Eastern Hallway

This hallway is as given in INN-11: Hallway. Note that passage from here to the north into the entrance area is impossible, due to piled-up rubble.

IGA-13: Guest Room 1

Please refer to INN-12: Guest Room 1 for more details about this room.

IGA-14: Guest Room 2

“INN-13: Guest Room 2” contains the unaltered description of this room.

BCA-16: Inn Second Floor Map, Aftermath

IUA-1: Staircase Down

This leads to the ground floor of the building.

IUA-2: Hallway

This area is exactly as described in INU-2: Hallway, on page 162... except of course that the light streaming in through the northern window is now dark and purplish-tinted.

IUA-3: Southwest Bedroom

This guest room is as described in INU-4: Southwest Bedroom, except that there is no chance of it being occupied.

IUA-4: Southeast Bedroom

Please refer to INU-3: Southeast Bedroom for more information, excepting that there are never any renters here in Act Three.

IUA-5: Western Bedroom

In Act Three, no rooms are typically rented out in the Inn. Other than that, there is no change from this area's description in INU-5: Western Bedroom.

IUA-6: Eastern Bedroom

This chamber is exactly as described in Act One, except that, as with the other rooms in the building, this one is never occupied by tenants now.

IUA-7: Northwest Bedroom

"INU-8: Northwestern Bedroom", describes this room, except that it never has tenants now.

IUA-8: Northeast Bedroom

 This room has been partially destroyed. The roof in the northeast corner has collapsed, wrecking the windows, walls, and much of the furniture.

Although no one rents this room any longer, it's more or less as described in INU-7: Northeastern Bedroom.

The rubble counts as difficult terrain. It's possible to scale down to the ground floor using this corner, but doing so requires an obstacle check, as follows:

Strength (Athletics)ing to Inn Ground Floor

Dexterity (Acrobatics) DC 18; success means movement at difficult terrain speed (1 square counts as 2) and moves to the ground floor safely; failure knocks a character prone on the ground floor and inflicts 1d6 bludgeoning damage, plus 1d4 piercing damage

BCA-17: Apothecary, Aftermath

Abandoned and creepy, this former business is now a quest target and opportunity to loot, and little more.

Summary

Aramil Xiloscient, the proprietor, has fled; the building is currently unoccupied. However, it has been such a staple of life for many citizens—and a reliable source of healing potions, which are now in desperate need—that many townsfolk and noteworthy NPCs happen by here in the aftermath of the Eruption.

Damage Summary

The southwestern corner of the establishment has been crumbled into rubble. All glassware in the main room has been shattered.

Corruption Status

Minor. Monsters roam about here on occasion, but no villain has yet made it her home.

APA-1: Southern Entrance

- ☐ Miraculously, this entry door appears to be intact, despite the massive damage to the walls to the west.

Please refer to APO-1: Southern Entrance, for more details. The door is locked when the PCs encounter it.

APA-2: Ruined Walls

- ☐ The southwest and entire western wall here have been reduced to rubble. Shards of jagged glass litter the debris; you see pieces of what must once have been stemware and vessels used to concoct potions here and there.

All squares touched by debris count as rubble, but in addition, count as requiring an obstacle check, as follows:

☐ Ruined Apothecary Walls

Dexterity (Acrobatics) DC 12; success means movement at difficult terrain speed (1 square counts as 2); failure knocks a character prone and inflicts 1d4 points of bludgeoning and piercing damage

Like much of the rest of the building, this room is unchanged from Act One: please see APO-9: Private Quarters.

APA-7: Militia Guard Post

This is a standard Militia Guard Post; remember that none of them is ever staffed with Militia in Act Three.

BCA-18: General Store, Aftermath

This building is almost entirely untouched by the disaster, and currently serves as a paranoid stronghold for its proprietor and any townsfolk trapped inside.

Summary

Welby Goodbarrel has barricaded himself within, along with handfuls of townsfolk.

Damage Summary

The entrance has some rubble, mostly from falling pieces of ceiling, but the doors are still fully operational, and have been closed to the outside. Within, the wood and makeshift barricade has been self-inflicted damage, formed from chopping up and shoving piles of supplies against the door.

Corruption Status

Zero. There are no random encounters within. NPCs rolled on the Localized Random Encounters table below indicate that that NPC was among those trapped within when Welby closed the doors.

BCA-18: General Store Map, Aftermath

GSA-1: Alley Rubble & Oneib's Corpse

☐ The double doors here are closed and locked. Light rubble is piled about the front; it appears to be merely an accumulation of debris dislodged from the roof.

Debris squares count as difficult terrain.

Please refer to the description from Act One for more details about this door.

Lying bloody and betrayed on the rubble to the southwest of the door is a shattered testament to the stubborn fear of Welby Goodbarrel, in that he barricaded the doors to his shop and let his closest friend perish while the proprietor himself rested in safety.

🗿 Oneib's Body

This character died in the Obelisk Eruption.

GSA-2: Barricaded Entrance

☐ All manner of supplies have been stacked and pushed against the door here, in an effort to keep the entrance barricaded.

This entire area counts as difficult terrain, with an obstacle challenge required to navigate:

🚧 Barricaded Entrance

Dexterity (Acrobatics) DC 14; success means movement at difficult terrain speed (1 square counts as 2); failure knocks a character prone

GSA-3: Southwest Storage Room

Please refer to MRC-3: Southwest Supply Room, for more details.

GSA-4: Southeast Storage Room

This room is identical to its description in Act One, MRC-4: Southeast Supply Room.

GSA-5: Western Storage Room

This room, too, is unchanged from the first act: see MRC-5: West Supply Room.

GSA-13: Entrance to Office / Kitchen

This entrance is unchanged from its depiction in MRC-10: Entrance to Office.

GSA-14: Town Square

GSA-15: Mayor's House

GSA-16: Stage

This region's description has been incorporated into that of Town Square.

BCA-19: Fishery and Stables, Aftermath

This compound structure has suffered damage, and a fair amount of infestation of Forces of the Obelisk.

Summary

This structure's basement is wholly infested, but otherwise, it's home to a murder scene and random packs of monsters and little else.

Damage Summary

Both northern corners of the structure have been destroyed, but otherwise, the building is fairly intact.

Corruption Status

Medium. The basement is fully infested, but the surface building, while not as safe as many other structures in town, is not claimed by a particular villain as of yet.

BCA-19: Fishery and Stables Ground Floor Map, Aftermath

FSA-1: Ruined Entrance

Of the fishery’s main entrance, there is little sign; the entire northeast corner of the building appears to have been reduced to rubble by an enormous fireball, the remnants of which you still see smoking in various pieces amongst the debris.

All squares touched by debris count as difficult terrain; those that used to contain walls also require an obstacle check to scale, as described below:

Fishery Ruined Entrance

Dexterity (Acrobatics) DC 16; success means movement at difficult terrain speed (1 square counts as 2); failure knocks a character prone and inflicts 1d2 points of bludgeoning and fire damage

FSA-2: Fishery Main Room

The fishery’s main room is in shambles, except for the southwest corner. A thick, dense, fishy fog pervades the room; it feels like a formidable cloud of fish dew, mixed with a bit of fiery brimstone. It collects and clumps most notably above the stairs in the southeast corner.

Though the fog is densest close to the staircase to the southeast, it nevertheless affects the entire room. The haze cuts visibility in $\frac{3}{4}$ (e.g., 40 ft. becomes 10 ft.), and imposes a -6 circumstance penalty on all Wisdom (Perception) checks made in this room.

All squares touched by debris count as difficult terrain.

Much of the contents are otherwise still intact; refer to FSG-2: Fishery Main Room, for details. In particular, note the continued presence of Fish Stink, which affects all PCs who enter here.

FSA-3: Fishery Office

This room is untouched from its former incarnation as described in FSG-5: Fishery Office.

FSA-4: Ruined Private Quarters

Nearly all furniture in this room has been destroyed. The walls comprising the northwest corner are now ten-foot-high rubble, barring passage to the alley outside.

This room is barren but for the debris; it looks as though everything that had been inside the room has been pulverized and mixed in with the debris from the walls, window, and bits of ceiling to form a new haphazard wall of rubble that more or less replaces the original one—and performs the same purpose of barring passage.

PCs may not enter or exit this room to the alleyway to the north or west via the rubble—except for finding and using the secret passage. Note that among the rubble, in what was once the west wall of the building, there is a kind of coincidental tunnel that can be viewed by pushing some debris out of the way and used by any Medium or smaller-sized character.

Treat this as a secret door, with the following profile:

Fishery Private Quarters Rubble Passage

Wisdom (Perception) DC 20; Break DC 20

Note that in this context, the Break check required to “open” the passage refers to the difficulty in moving some large chunks of debris out of the way to clear the passage.

All rubble counts as difficult terrain; in addition, because it is all wall, even attempting to scale it requires an obstacle check:

Fishery Private Quarters Rubble Wall

Dexterity (Acrobatics) DC 18; success means falling down without damage; failure knocks a character prone and inflicts 1d6 points of bludgeoning damage

Alone among the furniture, only the storage chest

next to the trapdoor in the southern part of the room has survived intact; its profile from FSG-6: Fishery Private Quarters is copied below:

🔒 Locked Southern Storage Chest

Break DC 16; Disable Device DC 14

🗡️ Southern Storage Chest

fishhooks (20x, 1 sp apiece); 212 gp; 39 pearls (12 gp apiece); masterwork dagger; necklace of deflection (+1 AC)

FSA-5: Trapdoor to Basement

This is untouched from its description in FSG-7: Fishery Trapdoor to Basement, and leads to FBA-6: Trapdoor to Personal Quarters.

FSA-6: Fishery Production Beach

This is unchanged from its description in FSG-8: Fishery Production Beach.

FSA-7: Gorin Bakelight's Corpse

🗨️ A man dressed in richly-appointed noble's clothes lays here, torn apart by a dozen wounds.

The city's Tribute Magister was escaping with money—to "safeguard" it, he would have claimed—when he was set upon by Forces of the Obelisk. They chased him through the Fishery, until the confrontation came to a head here.

🗿 Gorin Bakelight's Body

This character died in the Obelisk Eruption.

FSA-8: Stables

Other than being completely deserted, this area is unchanged from the descriptions in FSG-10: Stablemaster's Quarters, and FSG-11: Stables.

FSA-9: Ebon Fissure

🗨️ To the south of the Stables, what was once a nice patch of grazing grass and dirt is now a dirty, black pit, smelling of scorched earth and broken land. It appears about ten feet deep; its bottom surface jagged with pointed rocks that look as though they have been rent apart and send forth from underneath the ground.

This pit is caustic: being in it causes 🗨️ 1d4 points of Acid damage per round. Jumping in with no additional preparation causes 1d6 points of bludgeoning and piercing damage from the fall and the jagged surface on the bottom.

Strength (Athletics)ing out requires a ⚠️ Strength (Athletics) skill check at DC 18. Failure inflicts 🗨️ 1d4 points of bludgeoning and piercing damage, plus of course the Acid damage mentioned above for remaining in the pit another round.

Moving about within the pit counts as difficult terrain.

At the bottom of the pit, vaguely visible from above, is the skeleton of a horse, picked clean by Giant Vultures, and burnt black by the smoldering forces and heat of the Eruption and its aftermath quakes. The horse contains no treasure, and is merely a morbid testament to how rapidly the destructive forces of the Obelisk have rent their will upon the land.

FSA-10: Upper-Class Residential District

FSA-11: Textiles Shop

FSA-12: The Leaky Cask Tavern

FSA-13: Town Square

FSA-14: Blacksmith's Hut

FSA-15: Lower-Class Residential District

FSA-16: River

Note that only one bridge remains: the one to the northwest. Please see CGA-2: Intact Bridge for more information.

FSA-17: City Gardens

BCA-19: Fishery and Stables Basement Map, Aftermath

FBA-1: Staircase Up

This leads to FSA-2: Fishery Main Room.

FBA-2: Forces of the Obelisk

 A small horde of nasty monsters appears to have taken up residence here.

All in all, this mob consists of: 1 Ogre,  2d4 Ghouls, and 1d4 Skulks. They attack the party on sight, and will fight until defeated.

If the party is entering this main chamber of the basement via the staircase (see above), then roll for initiative as normal to begin combat. PCs who are sneaking up on the monsters after having discovered and struggled through the secret crawlspace to the northwest may attempt a  Dexterity (Stealth) check, opposed by the highest Wisdom (Perception) value of the monsters (likely the Ghouls). Success means the PCs gain the benefit of a surprise round of combat.

In addition to the gear normally carried by the monsters, there is a bit of additional treasure, representing the ill-gotten gains the creatures have obtained by looting townsfolk corpses.

Basement Monster Horde Treasure

68 gp; 32 pp; +1 dagger; silver goblet (38 gp)

FBA-3: Cask Stack

This is unchanged from FSB-5: Cask Stack. In particular, please note the possible encounter with a Giant Leech.

FBA-4: Secret Crawlspace

Please refer to FSB-8: Secret Crawlspace for more information.

FBA-5: Personal Quarters Basement

This chamber is the same as described in FSB-9: Personal Quarters Basement.

FBA-6: Trapdoor to Personal Quarters

This leads to FSA-5: Trapdoor to Basement, and is as described in FSB-10: Trapdoor to Personal Quarters.

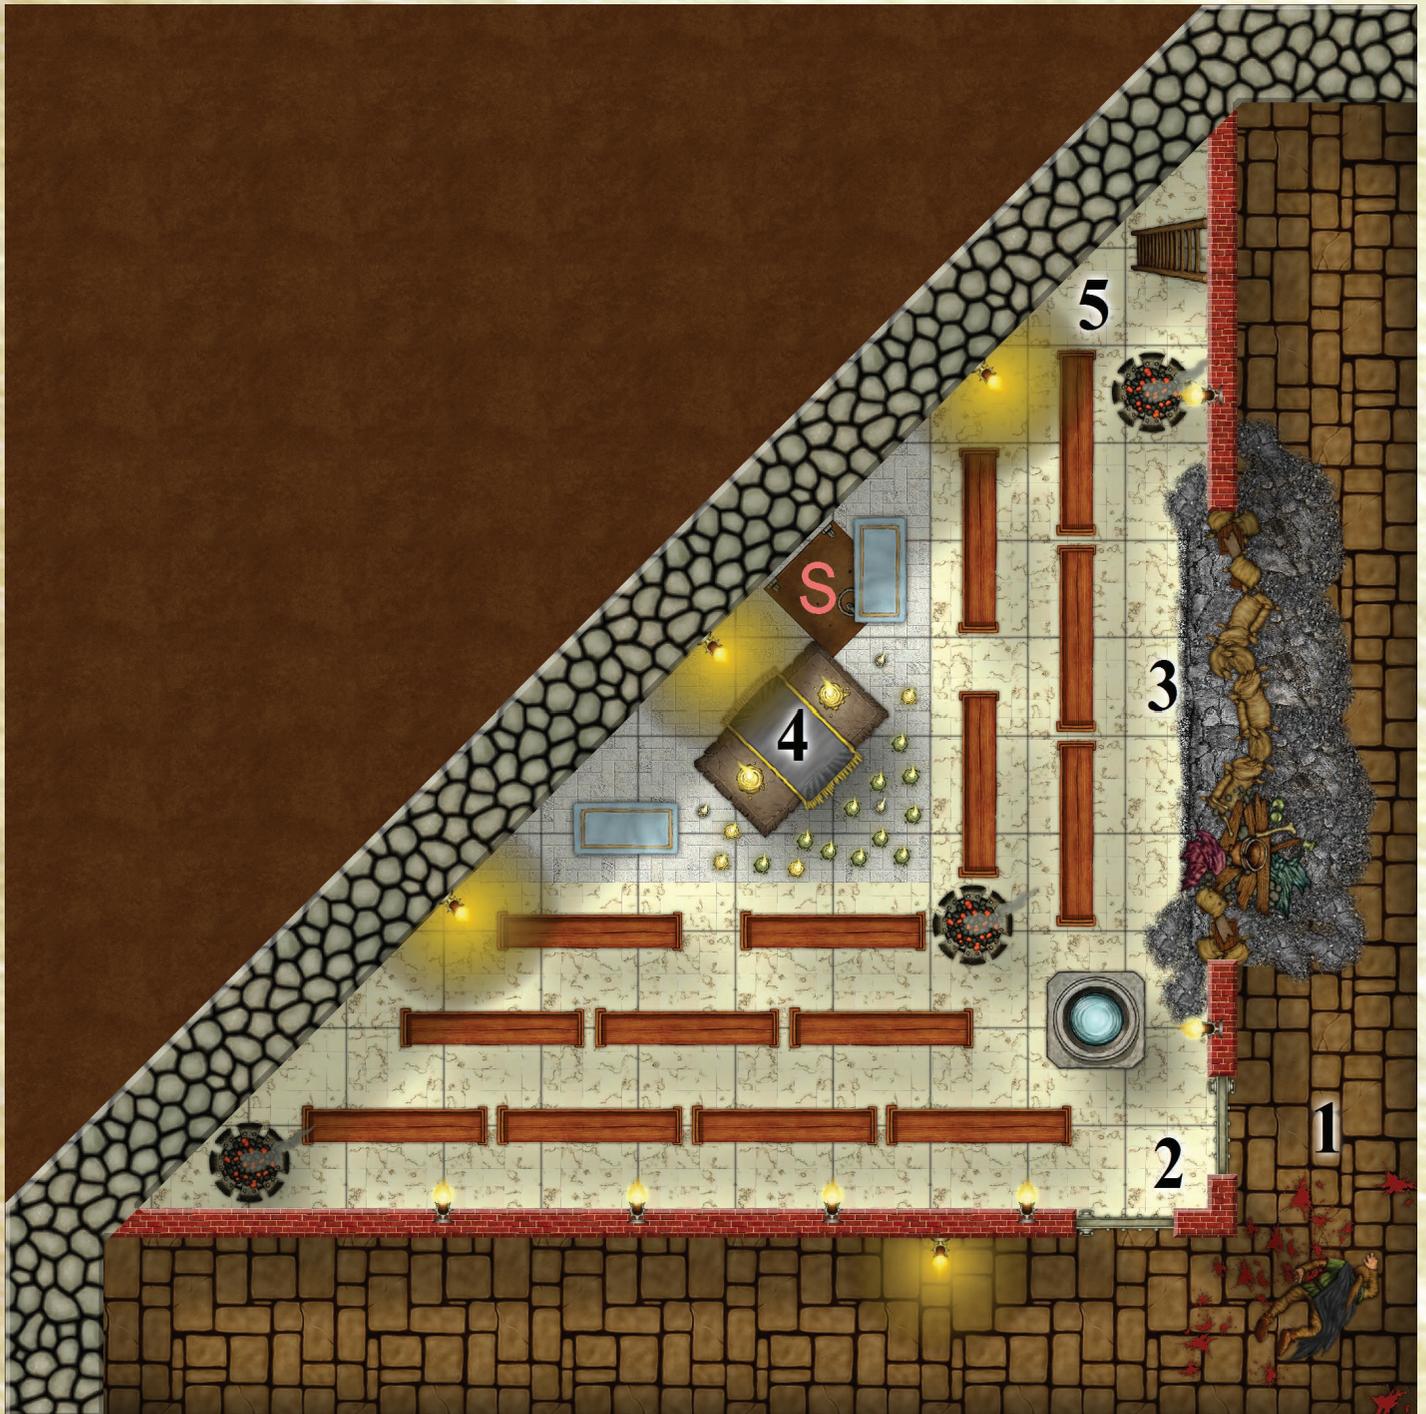

FBA-7: Underground River and Dock

This is unchanged from its depiction in FSB-3: Underground River and Dock.

FBA-8: Opportunistic Ooze

This gelatinous cube lurks behind the staircase; not even the forces of the obelisk which hang out in the main chamber of the basement have noticed it. If the PCs become embattled with the monsters to its southwest, the Cube will sploosh forward, attacking the party from behind.

Generous GMs may give each PC a passive  Wisdom (Perception) check, opposed by the Gelatinous Cube's Dexterity (Stealth) check; give the monster a +5 circumstance bonus for attacking silently while the party is preoccupied. If the PCs fail, or if the GM does not wish to give them this benefit, the Cube automatically gets a surprise round of combat against the party.

BCA-20: Sheergath Temple, Aftermath

This temple has been claimed by chaotic evil forces.

Summary

Damaged and infested, this temple represents a significant challenge to any who would see it restored to its pre-Eruption state.

Damage Summary

The eastern wall which opens to the alley separating the Temple from the Mayor's House has been destroyed.

Corruption Status

High. Monsters have infested the rooftop in particular. They have not yet discovered the basement.

BCA-20: Sheergath Temple Ground Floor Map, Aftermath

SGA-1: Unglar's Corpse

Here lies the body of a man dressed in the robes of Sheergath.

Unglar left the Temple immediately, and started making his way toward Town Square, firm in the belief that either these were the End Times, or that chaos had brought its reign to the Realm, and that he, a devoted servant of Sheergath, would be favored for his urgency.

Sadly, the Forces of the Obelisk seemed to be largely unaware of these thoughts, and slew him quickly on the cobblestones outside his temple.

Unglar's Body

This character died in the Obelisk Eruption.

SGA-2: Entrance

Though it hardly matters, what with the wall to the north having been knocked down, the double entrances are completely intact, and have been locked.

SGA-3: Collapsed Wall Barricade

A large chunk of wall here has been destroyed. Atop the rubble is what appears to be a makeshift barricade, seemingly constructed to defend the Temple from within.

Initially, occupants had constructed a sort of makeshift defense; they were quickly overwhelmed and their bodies carried away.

Now, any square touched by rubble counts as difficult terrain, and in addition, any square touched by something that used to be a wall, or is now a barricade, requires an obstacle check to pass, as follows:

Obstacle

Dexterity (Acrobatics) DC 17; success means movement at difficult terrain speed (1 square counts as 2); failure knocks a character prone

SGA-4: Altar and Trapdoor to Basement

These are unchanged from their description in CTG-3: Altar. Surprisingly, no Forces of the Obelisk have noticed the secret door.

SGA-5: Ladder to Rooftop

This has not changed from its depiction in CTG-4:

Ladder to Rooftop.

BCA-20: Sheergath Temple Map (Rooftop), Aftermath

SRA-1: Chaos Beast

In the southeast corner of the rooftop, where religious services were once focused and performed, is a Chaos Beast. It oversees much of the city with a perfect view.

It will bide its time if the PCs emerge from the trapdoor, waiting for the other Forces of the Obelisk here to attack. If all else fails, it will amble into battle with the party.

Note that the Chaos Beast is normally an Untouchable Encounter. It will, and should be, a very challenging task to defeat both this formidable monster, and its several minions, in an area with not much room to maneuver! Also recall that several Quests in Act Three refer to the task of “clearing” the Temple; destroying all monsters on the rooftop fulfills this task.

Note that once the Chaos Beast has been defeated, it’s possible to examine the urn in the southeast corner, triggering the Quest “Ginswyn, But Not Forgotten”, on page 200, if the party has not already resolved it in Act One.

SRA-2: Skeleton Guards

As you emerge from the trapdoor, two animated undead skeletons strike at you!

The first line of defense of the rooftop is 2 Skeletons, as described below. They attack the party immediately upon their emergence from the trapdoor; unless the GM is feeling generous, the skeletons should likely gain a surprise round of combat for their positioning as guards against a force emerging one at a time from a trapdoor accessed via a ladder.

SRA-3: Southern Zombie Monitors

4 Zombie Townsfolk stand here, shuffling to and from amidst the braziers. They will move toward the party and attack them as soon as they arrive on the rooftop.

SRA-4: Eastern Zombie Monitors

3 Zombie Townsfolk stand here, mindlessly scanning the streets below for enemies.

As the PCs emerge onto the rooftop, these forces will wade into combat as an opportunity presents itself.

Aside from their arms and armor, these zombies carry no loot.

SRA-5: Pew Wreckage

Shattered and smashed wooden pews and tables lie strewn about here. It looks as though something large and terrible has been battering the furniture about... which, you realize, might be exactly what has happened here.

All squares touched by debris—which is to say, nearly the entire rooftop—counts as difficult terrain.

BCA-20: Sheergath Temple Map (Basement), Aftermath

SBA-1: Trapdoor to Ground Floor

This is the same as it was in Act One.

SBA-2: Rubble

The debris here seems to have been caused by large, heavy wreckage falling from the ceiling above, which in turn smashed what must have been finely-appointed and very nice chairs and at least one table.

All squares touched by rubble count as difficult terrain. The scene is precisely as depicted, but there is no structural damage that would cause further falling debris or danger.

SBA-3: Well

This is as described in CTB-3: Well.

SBA-4: Dead Citizens

A pile of corpses lies here. Individual people may have been slain by stabbing, fire, or unknown magical scarring... but collectively, it’s clear they were all killed by the forces of the Obelisk.

One of the dead townsfolk here, knowing that the basement was one of the few safe places in the city, performed the gruesome deed of carrying the dead down the trapdoor, in the hopes that it would keep the bodies from being corrupted or maltreated by monsters. Several times, he emerged from relative safety in the basement, solely to venture out in search of bodies to save, at great personal risk.

Although successful in his task, during one such expedition, he was wounded by a monster; although he made it back to safety here, he died of his wounds shortly thereafter. It now is difficult to tell this hero from the people he tried to preserve.

The four bodies here all count as townsfolk; none bear any treasure aside from what such folk normally carry.

SBA-5: Casks

These remain as depicted in CTB-4: Casks.

BCA-2l: Library, Aftermath

One of the few places of sanctuary in the wake of the Eruption—and perhaps the best—the Library now acts as a sort of safehouse for collecting townsfolk.

Summary

Although Gunnloda Balderk has been slain, Biggen Gurble and others have ably stepped in to take her place, both in terms of running the Library, and in terms of coordinating the defense and safety of those townsfolk who have entered here.

Note that due to the necessity of housing dozens of townsfolk, all secret passages are now revealed to anyone who enters and speaks with Biggen Gurble.

In addition to Biggen Gurble and Tudra Coppereye (page 804), who are nearly always inside, 3d12 townsfolk have sought and gained shelter here, and are now ambling about the halls. As the establishment is most certainly not equipped with that many beds, most people simply sleep on the floor when they need to, preferring rugs if possible.

Note that the Library, and other places of sanctuary, is a target of many Quests that require the PCs to escort folk to safety; the GM is encouraged to track which NPCs may have been deposited here, so that they might be available for the party to consult or shop with as needed when they return.

All services, secrets, items, and other descriptions remain as they were in Act One.

Damage Summary

None. It's pristine and unravaged, as of yet, from the Forces of the Obelisk.

Corruption Status

Zero. There are no monster-based random encounters while the party is within the walls of the Library.

BCA-22: City Gates, Aftermath

If the party wasn't clear before the Eruption, it should become obvious quite quickly in its aftermath that this area is of critical importance, as it guards the only real entry to—and, probably more importantly, with the monsters roaming the city—exit from the city.

Summary

The City Gates area is the one which many citizens naturally ran toward, when the Eruption began. Although the gate is intact, many citizens were slain shortly after arriving, when an enormous fireball slammed into the southern portion of the open area.

Damage Summary

The still-smoldering husk of a gigantic fireball fragment remains in the charred debris to the south. Aside from that, all nearby walls are thankfully untouched.

Corruption Status

Moderate. No Forces of the Obelisk have yet claimed this area, but the influx of citizens and the concentration of people and chaos here is a strong draw for monsters.

Random Key NPCs

Unique among Areas of Interest in the wake of the Obelisk Eruption, the City Gates area is a focal point of citizen escape. As a result, there are always interesting NPCs here, trying to organize an escape.

Each time the party arrives at this area after having left it (including the first time they arrive here), roll on the Localized Random Encounter table above to “populate”  2d4 NPCs of interest. Each time you roll to select an NPC, keep rerolling any non-NPC result, and of course reroll any NPCs who have died already.

The GM is encouraged to keep track of which NPCs are, and are not, here in the City Gates area, so the PCs have a reasonable chance of finding interesting NPCs again if they leave with an intent of coming back.

In addition to the notable, named NPCs present here, there are typically about  4d8 townsfolk here as well, in various stages of grief, anxiety, panic, or terror.

BCA-22: City Gates Map, Aftermath

CTA-1: Outside Berinncorte

☐ The massive iron gates are closed. Whether it is to keep monsters inside the city, or to prevent other enemies from entering, you cannot be sure.

In front of the gate is a line of disciplined, heavily-armed soldiers, keeping guard and alertly scanning the square for threats. They stand about five feet west of the door, nearly literally with their backs to the door.

Agruably, the entire goal of Act Three is for the PCs to escape Berinncorte via this gate.

However, whenever, and under whatever circumstances the PCs open, and leave via, the Gate here, you may skip to the Adventure Epilogue and conclude the adventure.

☐ Leaving the Gate ends the adventure. As the GM, perhaps your most challenging job is to help the PCs strike a balance between leaving as soon as possible, once the Eruption occurs, and staying forever and picking up side-quests and random monster encounters endlessly.

The City Gates are as presented in CGS-2: The City Gates. The Berinncorte Militia Elite Guard posted here has been tripled to 12 fine soldiers; these will defend the gate against all manner of monster, but will not leave their post to assist the PCs in any combat encounter initiated in the City Gate area.

CTA-2: Garrison Militia Guard Post

This is as described in CGS-3: Garrison Militia Guard Post. Unlike nearly all other guard posts in the city in the wake of the Eruption, this one is indeed manned as described.

CTA-3: Garrison / Barracks

CTA-4: Upper-Class Residential District

CTA-5: Militia Guard Post

Please see CGS-4: Militia Guard Post for more details about this structure, which is unchanged from that description. Like the similar post to the northeast, this one remains staffed by Berinncorte Militia despite the chaos caused by the Eruption.

CTA-6: Northwest Alley

Only read the italicized text below when the PCs are entering the City Gates area for the first time in the wake of the Eruption.

☐ A huge hubbub of people exists here. Citizens in varying states of dress, in various states of grief, and to varying degrees wounded or on the brink of death—they're all here, seeking safety. Some hope to escape, others to simply stay here until the crisis is averted or moves on. The entire spectrum of the city's populace is represented here.

Beneath it all, you detect a horrid, weakening despair, that things will not get better, the chaos will not improve... and that everyone in the city will perish amidst the forces of the Obelisk.

If any non-flying enemies are summoned via a Random Encounter while the PCs are in the City Gates area, the enemy arrives from this alley.

Entering the City Gates area for the first time triggers the following Quest.

🏆 Quest: Evacuate the City

📖 Summary: With few other options, the PCs must get out of Berinncorte.

🏆 Rewards: Up to 🌟 3 Reward Stars.

📍 Locations: City Gates.

👤 Key NPCs: None.

🏁 Kickoff: Entering City Gates area for the first time after the Eruption.

❓ Description:

☐ To the extent to which Dark Obelisk: Berinncorte can be said to have a “main quest”, or story, this quest is it.

If the PCs have spent much time elsewhere in the city prior to kicking off this Quest, they may already appreciate that there is no immediate means of defeating the Obelisk. If they're instead coming to the City Gates shortly after the Eruption, and have not yet dealt with the city enough to understand, you may have to introduce additional obstacles to prevent them from leaving as of yet. Please refer to the more detailed discussion in “Guiding the Party Toward the Exit”.

Once the PCs understand that the only true option is to leave, they may attempt to do so at any time.

Resolving the Quest involves a relatively straightforward goal: convince the guards to open the city gates, open the city gates, and leave.

This takes the form of the following skill challenge, representing the interaction between the PCs and the Elite Guards who currently refuse to open the gate for any reason.

 The GM is encouraged to roleplay the interaction, particularly as it may not be clear why on earth the guards would be so dead-set on keeping the gates closed.

From the guards' perspective, their city has been partly destroyed, and although they want to help keep citizens safe if possible, they're not clear who's in charge, what their orders are, or if for that matter the city is under attack from outside forces—that is, enemies outside the city.

The PCs' job is to understand the guards' view on things, convince them that the attack is solely from within the city, and get them to agree that the only option is to open the gate and evacuate the townsfolk so that all might regroup elsewhere once they're outside.

Note that if you have kept track of the  Reward Stars the party has earned during Act Three, their task here may be made easier.

Opening the City Gates

First Check: Charisma (Persuasion) or Charisma (Intimidation) check, opposed by the Berinncorte Militia Elite Guard's Profession (Soldier) check, to convince the guards to listen to you. Each failure (including the first) has a  25% chance of triggering a Localized Random Encounter roll. Success at this check advances to the next step.

Second Check: Wisdom (Perception) check, opposed by the Elite Guard's Charisma (Intimidation) check, to understand why the guards are so resistant to opening the gates. Success advances to the Third Check. Failure by more than 5 points will revert progress back to the First Check. Failure by 5 or fewer points has a  15% (plus 5% per point by which the check was failed) chance of triggering a Localized Random Encounter roll. For example, if the PCs check value is 18, there is a 25% chance of a random encounter.

Third Check: Charisma (Persuasion) or Charisma (Intimidation) check, opposed by the Elite Guard's Charisma (Intimidation) check, to coerce the guards. Success advances the challenge. Failure by more than 5 points reverts progress to the Second Check. Failure by more than 5 points will revert progress back to the First Check. Failure by 5 or fewer points has a  25% (plus 5% per point by which the check was failed) chance of triggering a Localized Random Encounter roll.

Fourth Check: Strength check, opposed by the Open

DC of the City Gates. Failure by any amount has a  35% (plus 5% per point by which the check was failed) chance of triggering a Localized Random Encounter roll. Success opens the gates... and automatically triggers an encounter: roll once on the Aftermath Random Encounters table (page 319), using Context D, and keep rerolling until you identify a monster encounter, which serves to chase the PCs out of the city.

Once the skill challenge is completed, the gates are open. The final monster encounter that chases the party out also chases every single citizen in the City Gates area out.

The PCs receive  1 Reward Star for completing the skill challenge. In addition, if at any point during the challenge they defeat one or more monsters and defend at least one townsfolk, they should receive one additional  Reward Star for each such occurrence, to a maximum of 2 for such nobility.

This Quest—and likely the adventure itself!—ends if the PCs successfully open the gates and depart, if the PCs are defeated by Forces of the Obelisk, or if they abandon the attempt and leave the area. If they abandon the Quest, it is re-initiated automatically the next time they approach the City Gates.

There is no further  Catalyst Impact to resolving this Quest; whatever state the Catalyst Trackers are in when the PCs leave the city, that is where they remain at the conclusion of this adventure.

CTA-7: Fireball Crater

 In nearly the center of the square, the smoking remains of a giant fireball sit amidst melted cobblestones, tar, ash, and burned bodies. Nearly a dozen bodies lie strewn about and on the debris. The giant cinder at the center is still warm; you can feel it from here.

As in other areas of the city, all squares touched by rubble count as difficult terrain.

The cinder itself is quite hot—standing within 5 ft. of it inflicts  1d2 points of fire damage per round.

CTA-8: Gunnloda Balderk's Corpse

 A dwarven scholar lies here, amidst a handful of spilled books.

Here lies the city's librarian, run down by Forces of the Obelisk amidst her attempt to return some books to the Library.

Gunnloda Balderk's Body

This character died in the Obelisk Eruption.

Quest: Papercuts

 Summary: Retrieve the dropped books the city's librarian was carrying at the time of her death, and return them to the Library.

 Rewards: Up to  2 Reward Stars.

 Locations: City Gates, then Library/Sage.

 Key NPCs: Biggen Gurble.

 Kickoff: The PCs come across the body of Gunnloda Balderk.

Description:

Whether or not the party has encountered Gunnloda Balderk in Act One in her official capacity as the city's librarian, the scene made by her corpse should make her profession and position plain. She died, trying to ensure the safety of books: there could be no finer dedication to one's trade than such devotion.

No greater folly, too, one might say, but that's no longer here or there.

 If the PCs pick up the books with the stated intent of returning them to the Library, as a means of honoring the clear final wish of the librarian, they should receive an immediate reward of  1 Reward Star.

 Taking the books back to the Library, they may hand them over to Biggen Gurble, whose Attitude Tracker will grow by +15, and who will thank the party immensely for their thoughtfulness. The PCs will also gain a second  Reward Star.

Papercuts (Return Book):

 Law +4,  Love +2

Returning this seemingly insignificant text to the Library produces a Catalyst Impact (page 41) of  Law +4 and  Love +2.

This quest terminates if the books are destroyed somehow, if the PCs return the books to Biggen Gurble, or sell the books elsewhere. If the PCs pick the books up with the intent to sell them, this quest remains active until the books actually part company with the party. Similarly, if the party ignores the books for now, they will remain here, and the Quest will remain active, should the party change their mind at some later point.

CTA-9: Mardnab Scheppen's Corpse

 A scroungy-looking gnome body lies here, a sad look on her half-burnt face.

The Inn's maid fled immediately upon hearing the Eruption, and made it as far as here before the Forces of the Obelisk found her. On her way, she was wounded by falling debris; the fireball here in City Gate Square finished her off.

Mardnab Scheppen's Body

This character died in the Obelisk Eruption.

CTA-10: Skutt Krundar's Corpse

 A noble-looking Militia leader lies here, skewered in many places and lying in a thick pool of blood.

The Militia's second-in-command was mortally wounded while saving his captain, Tansden.

Skutt Krundar's Body

This character died in the Obelisk Eruption.

Act III

BCA-23: Garrison / Barracks, Aftermath

Slightly damaged, this building serves as a stronghold of sorts in the haphazard attempt to regroup and defend the citizenry of Berinncorte.

Summary

Militia presence here is strong: at any given moment, each room contains  1d4-1 (minimum zero) Berinncorte Militia. They are friendly toward any citizen—or indeed, at this point, anyone who is not a chaotic, demonic, undead, or other such monster!

During any combat encounter the PCs face here, any Militia present will fight on their behalf. Note this only applies if the PCs haven't done something stupid to alienate the Militia presence.

Damage Summary

The northwest corner of the building has been smashed to bits, but otherwise, things are intact.

Corruption Status

Moderate. The building itself is quite secure and stable; however, the gap in the northeast corner leaves things quite open to monster attack.

Any monster-based random combat encounter rolled while the PCs are here initiates from the northwest corner; if the PCs are more deeply inside the building's rooms when the encounter is rolled, the monster(s) will come at them from the approach easier from that area.

BCA-23: Garrison / Barracks Map, Aftermath

GBA-1: Ruined Corner

 The entire northwest corner of the building appears to have suffered a great deal of damage. Fireball cinders, enormous claw marks, and magical scorchings are all indicated; it’s not clear which if any of them may have caused, or contributed to, the damage.

Any square touched by debris counts as difficult terrain. In addition, any square that used to touch a wall or window requires an obstacle check to traverse:

Ruined Garrison Corner

Dexterity (Acrobatics) DC 16; success means movement at difficult terrain speed (1 square counts as 2); failure knocks a character prone

GBA-2: Training Hall

The table and chairs have been smashed to bits, and there is a dead man a few feet to the west... but other than that, this room is as described in GAR-4: Training Hall, on p 206.

GBA-3: Barracks A

Other than the ruin of the western portion, this room remains the same as in GAR-5: Barracks A.

GBA-4: Northern Militia Guard Post

This is a standard Militia Guard Post; note that it is unmanned in Act Three.

GBA-5: North Equipment Room

This room is unchanged from its description in GAR-6: North Equipment Room.

GBA-6: Kitchen

“GAR-7: Kitchen”, has more details on this room, which remains unchanged.

Please refer to GAR-10: Barracks B for more details about this room.

GBA-11: Barracks C

“GAR-11: Barracks C” describes this chamber.

GBA-12: Southern Militia Guard Post

This is a standard Militia Guard Post... except that it is actually manned in Act Three, one of the very few that are.

GBA-13: South Equipment Room

Please refer to “GAR-8: South Equipment Room”, for more details about this room.

GBA-14: Dead NPC

This is merely the corpse of an ordinary townsfolk, but before dying, she managed to steal the uniform of a Berinncorte Militia. Searching her body yields nothing out of the ordinary save the uniform, and causes an automatic roll on the Localized Random Encounter table due to its position.

BCA-24: Textiles Shop, Aftermath

This establishment is largely intact, though defunct now that its owner has died.

Summary

This building is entirely vacant.

Damage Summary

The northeast corner has been pulverized, and the front room is a mess, but otherwise, remarkably little damage has been done.

Corruption Status

Minimal. Very few monsters have a taste for high fashion.

TXA-1: Ruined Corner

☐ This area appears to have been smashed to bits, though by earthquake, giant fist, or other device, you can't quite be certain.

All debris squares count as difficult terrain. In addition, any square touching what was once a wall or door requires an obstacle check to navigate:

Dexterity (Acrobatics) DC 13; success means movement at difficult terrain speed (1 square counts as 2); failure knocks a character prone

TXA-2: Shop Interior

☐ It's a mess—but largely intact, your surprise. Perhaps zombies don't have a good deal of taste for high-end fashion and sensible eveningwear.

Other than the debris and general destruction, this room is as described in TXL-2: Main Shop, on p 212.

BCA-25: Butcher’s Shop Map, Aftermath

BSA-1: Rubble

What was once the entrance and foyer of the butcher’s shop is now a complete disarray. Rubble is strewn everywhere, not just from the walls and roof of the building, but apparently from elsewhere. Several piles of trash are lumped here, their origins unknown.

All squares touched by rubble—which is to say, the entire northeastern quarter of the shop!—counts as difficult terrain. In addition, squares that used to have walls require an obstacle check to walk over:

Butcher Shop Rubble

Dexterity (Acrobatics) DC 16; success means movement at difficult terrain speed (1 square counts as 2); failure knocks a character prone and requires passing a second Dexterity (Acrobatics) check at DC 14 to avoid 1d2 points of bludgeoning damage

BSA-2: Ruined Waiting Area

Tables and chairs are smashed to bits here. It all reeks of meat and blood.

Debris counts as difficult terrain.

It’s possible to search this area for the loot described in BUT-2: Waiting Area.

BSA-3: Prep Tables

This area is unchanged from BUT-4: Prep Tables.

BSA-4: Office and Warm Storage

Please refer to BUT-5: Office and Warm Storage for more information.

BSA-5: Cold Storage

This room is unchanged from its description in BUT-6:

Cold Storage.

BSA-6: Stash

This is as described in TXL-4: Storage.

BSA-7: Dead Placeholder NPC

This is an ordinary NPC. However, at the GM’s discretion, this corpse may be “switched” with any other named NPC. This might be useful in circumstances where the GM wishes to introduce a dead NPC with whom the party may have interacted, but the PCs are not traveling to the place where the “actual” corpse is, as-written.

If the GM sees no need to swap this NPC “placeholder corpse” for another named NPC, then you may treat it as simply a dead townsfolk.

BSA-8: Upper-Class Residential District

BSA-9: Textiles Shop

BCA-27: Upper-Class Residential District, Aftermath

Although the actual damage is minimal, wealth residents have largely abandoned this structure in search of safer environs.

Summary

Unless otherwise indicated via a roll on the Localized Random Encounters table (see below), this building is vacant.

Note that various components of the interior are targets of Quests that might be initiated during Act Three, and its proximity to the City Gates area, it may nevertheless be a focal point for the party in their journeys after the Eruption.

Damage Summary

The western portion of the building has been demolished, which has the primary effect of allowing monsters into the building.

Corruption Status

Low. Forces of the Obelisk roam about, but not unduly, and there is no villainous presence here to speak of.

Localized Random Encounters

Unless there is a compelling reason to do otherwise, roll on the following table when the party enters this area. Roll again on this table for every 10 minutes the party remains in this building.

BCA-27: Upper-Class Residential District Ground Floor Map, Aftermath

UGA-1: Ruined Western Entrance

☐ The once-beautiful façade of this elite building is a shambles. Both stories have substantial damage; rubble from walls, windows, furniture, and roof form chest-high piles in places.

Rubble and debris squares count as difficult terrain. In addition, squares touching what was once a wall or window require an obstacle check to navigate safely:

▮ UCRD Ruined West Entrance

Dexterity (Acrobatics) DC 13; success means movement at difficult terrain speed (1 square counts as 2); failure knocks a character prone

UGA-2: Northwestern Suite (Waywicket Ningel's Quarters)

Apart from the damage in the western entry parlor, this area is as described in UCG-7: Northwest Suite, on p 229.

UGA-3: Southwest Suite (Gunnloda's Quarters)

Although there is significant damage to the west, these rooms are otherwise as depicted in UCG-6: Southwest Suite.

UGA-4: Western Hallway

☐ It appears as though residents other citizens have attempted to erect a makeshift barricade here, which has been abandoned. What appears to be a dead body lies in the hallway behind the barricade, seemingly a testament to the inadequacy of the obstacle.

Note that the hallways in this building are generally as described in UCG-3: Hallway. This includes the opportunity to initiate and resolve the 🗺️ Quest “The Wealth of Knowledge”, although its objectives are somewhat tame in comparison to the current chaos of the city.

The “corpse” is actually a Dark Stalker playing dead. She will wait until the party passes or tries to search her body, and will jump up and attack, gaining the advantage of a surprise round of combat.

UGA-5: Southwest Bedroom

(Gunnloda's)

This room is identical to its description in UCG-8: Southwest Bedroom.

UGA-6: Fountain

This is as described in UCG-4: Fountain, except that due to the superstition of citizens passing through here amidst the chaos, the change in the fountain is a bit larger than it was in Act One:

🗨️ Fountain Change

124 gp; 64 sp; 91 cp

UGA-7: Eastern Hallway

Please refer to UCG-2: Foyer for more details.

UGA-8: Eastern Entrance

This one remaining entrance is locked by default in the context of Act Three.

UGA-9: Northeast Suite (Ganyc's Quarters)

Please refer to UCG-5: Northeast Suite for more information.

Note that this room is the target of several Quests in Act Three.

BCA-27: Upper-Class Residential District Map (Second Floor), Aftermath

UUA-1: Ruined Window Corner

❑ Shards of broken glass—still beautiful, though destroyed—litter the rubble here. It appears that citizens tried to build a sort of barricade to keep out flying enemies; the giant vulture corpse on the floor suggests that this strategy was less than completely successful.

Traversing any of the squares touched by rubble here requires an obstacle check:

▣ UCRD Ruined Window Corner

Dexterity (Acrobatics) DC 16; success means movement at difficult terrain speed (1 square counts as 2); failure knocks a character prone, and inflicts 1d4 points of piercing damage from the broken glass

BCA-28: Lower-Class Residential District, Aftermath

This building is completely abandoned, and quite damaged.

Summary

Damage and rot has taken over this building, but most rooms are undisturbed from their description in Act One.

Damage Summary

The southern area is quite demolished, and the upstairs is also damaged.

Corruption Status

Moderate. Forces of the Obelisk occasionally run around in this building.

BCA-28: Lower-Class Residential District Ground Floor Map, Aftermath

LGA-1: Ruined Southern Entrance

The ruin of multiple rooms, plus debris from the damaged second floor, and the roof, lie here. A dead body lies on the cobblestones.

Debris squares count as difficult terrain. In addition, squares touching what used to be walls or doors require an obstacle check to move about:

LCRD Ruined South Entrance

Dexterity (Acrobatics) DC 16; success means movement at difficult terrain speed (1 square counts as 2); failure knocks a character prone and causes 1d2 points of bludgeoning damage

The dead body is just a townsfolk, but at the GM’s discretion, it may be “replaced” with a named NPC if it facilitates introduction to the demise of a previously-encountered character.

LGA-2: Dining Hall

This room contains nothing but large swathes of smashed-up wood, which count as difficult terrain.

LGA-3: Northern Barricade

The doors here have been smashed and destroyed, replaced by a number of bags, sacks, and other debris in a stack.

To pass through here requires an obstacle check, as follows:

LCRD Northern Barricade

Dexterity (Acrobatics) DC 19; success means movement at difficult terrain speed (1 square counts as 2); failure knocks a character prone and must re-attempt the check to navigate through

LGA-4: Kitchen & Pantry

Adventure Epilogue

RPG Epilogues

Epilogues are rare in roleplaying adventures.

In short adventures, an epilogue isn't necessary. In well-described, well-paced adventures, with a single, easy-to-follow storyline, it's difficult for the PCs to venture too far off the path; towards the end, the story wraps itself up nicely. In longer, more complex, or open-ended adventures, the final "set piece" or climactic scenario brings things to a conclusion, or ties up loose ends in a neat manner.

Even in well-composed Adventure Paths, the ending of each individual component marks a clear terminus, a clear accomplishment.

None of these is truly the case with Dark Obelisk: Berinncorte.

Recap

No matter what the PCs did before the Eruption, and no matter how extensively they fought and/or explored the grim sandbox of Act Three, they either perished, or were able to escape the city successfully.

Bloodied, perhaps, and worn thin from many encounters, their limits and resources tested and nearly depleted. But successful nevertheless.

Overview

The PCs aren't alone. Many are those who fled the city, both initially before the City Gates could be closed, and afterwards. Some sweet-talked the Elite Gate Guards; others simply bribed them.

Depending on your gaming group's tone and preferences, the GM is encouraged to introduce the notion that the Elite Gate Guards the PCs encountered were hardly the first such group stationed there—that several groups of panicked townsfolk were able to overwhelm the guards and escape.

The aftermath of the events of the Obelisk Eruption are bleak: nearly all the citizens have either perished in the city, or have made their way beyond, and are homeless, wounded in many cases. Despair claws at even the staunchest heart, and many are those who have lost loved ones in the disaster.

The situation is growing desperate.

Segue

The following are recommended bits of information, glimpses to the future of this Adventure Path, that the GM is encouraged to flesh out, if needed, to bridge the gap between Dark Obelisk: Berinncorte, and the next adventure.

A hurried and harried shanty town is constructed outside the city gates.

There is no true leadership among those who have escaped.

Handfuls of citizens remain trapped on the other side of the City Gates.

What few Militia survived are put in charge of guarding the City Gates from the outside, to ensure the evil and chaos swarming within the city walls stays there.

Factions within the surviving population spring up. Some wish to stay close to the city, so they can monitor if the menace dissipates. Others wish to leave, to put as much distance between themselves and the horrors of Town Square as possible, lest the chaos spread.

On one thing, both factions agree: Any notion of overcoming the Forces of the Obelisk, and retaking the city, is unthinkable at this point.

Of those assembled outside the city, none know of the Obelisk, or how to destroy it.

Until one day, a stranger rides into their midst...

Key NPCs

Key Character Overview

Crunch and Fluff

“Crunch” is a term commonly used to refer to the dozens of statistics that describe a creature from the standpoint of raw game mechanics. Although there is a great deal of flexibility in these stat blocks being used to convey flavor, demeanor, behavior, and personality, such “softer” yet still important game elements are often referred to as “fluff”.

Each GM and player has their own relationship to these game elements, and preferences as to their balance in gameplay. Some groups live by crunch, and largely ignore fluff; adventures tend to be little more than an organized dungeon crawl, and min/maxing your PC’s character options and equipment is commonplace. Other groups focus solely on storytelling, and use game mechanics only when it’s necessary to introduce a bit of randomness to the proceedings.

You can have a great deal of fun at either end of the spectrum, or anywhere in between! To support the various approaches to describing monsters and characters, this adventure takes the approach of providing a great deal of crunch, and a great deal of fluff.

Some may consider this overkill, and it’s likely that some gaming groups will ignore a portion of what follows to focus on what matters most to their style of play. That’s exactly as it is intended to be used: hopefully it has everything you need, so you can use it however you like!

Quadded Stat Blocks and Default Language

A creature’s fluff uses language assuming that you are playing the Low level of difficulty version of that creature. For example, the Low level of an NPC might wield a run-of-the-mill rapier, and the Elite version might instead use a +3 corrosive burst rapier; the descriptions that accompany that NPC would refer merely to her rapier as the default equipment. Similarly, any illustrations drawn will typically use imagery associated with Low-challenge gear and items.

Header

The header is simply the name of the monster. NPCs have a name, and also parenthetically their position, job title, profession, or how they are best known.

Beneath this header is the subheading, which shows the Challenge Rating of the creature, and the Experience Points to be awarded if they are defeated. Note that in the context of quadded stat blocks, the CR/XP values shown here are taken from the Low difficulty version of the creature.

It’s worth noting that not every monster and NPC is meant to be defeated in combat... in fact, the GM is encouraged to award XP only for combat that is consistent with the alignment and characters of the PCs, or if they are forced into combat by circumstances beyond their control. A Lawful Good Paladin, for example, should not reap XP for conducting a baseless murder spree of first-level townsfolk.

Combat Tactics

This section describes how the creature behaves prior to, and once in, combat. Some monsters are alarmingly simple in this regard: “will fight the PCs on sight, and will fight to the death” is about as straightforward as you can get, here. More nuanced NPCs may have a general statement as to tactics, such as “will focus on melee opponents first, and then move on to ranged enemies”. Complex enemies may have a round-by-round description of their approach, listing the spells or techniques they choose to employ at each step of the battle.

Of course, as with most things, the GM is welcome to ignore this section entirely and play the creature as they wish.

Description

All NPCs have some description here, conveying a general sense of the character. Monsters might have a physical description, or a walk-through of how they emerge to face the party when discovered.

Appearance

This section refers to the physical appearance of the creature. This is particularly important for NPCs who do not have illustrations.

Factions

Nearly all NPCs belong, at least casually, to one or more factions. Which factions, and the extent of their membership and involvement, are mentioned in this section.

Attitude Tracker

This section is meant to help track the NPC's current Attitude toward the party. Pathfinder uses the five classifications of Hostile, Unfriendly, Indifferent, Friendly, and Helpful; this adventure introduces a bit more detail into the equation.

As with other elements of this adventure, the GM is encouraged to use this approach to tracking NPC Attitude only if it is desired; of course the GM may use alternate approaches, house rules, or other rule systems to manage how NPCs view the party.

An example of an Attitude Tracker is shown below. The GM is encouraged to use pencil to mark the current and changing Attitude of each NPC as the game progresses.

Note that some quests, conversation topics, plot activities, and actions rely on a given NPC having a certain Attitude toward the party, so it can be helpful to have some way of managing the many different characters the PCs might encounter in their journey through Berinncorte.

Using the Attitude Tracker

Attitude is measured on a 29-point scale: 1 is the worst possible feeling an NPC can have toward the party, and 29 is the most favorable. This is referred to as an NPC's Attitude Value.

The five Attitude classifications defined in the Pathfinder Roleplaying Game correspond to roughly 6-point "blocks" of these values. Specifically, Attitude Values between 1-6 represent a Hostile character, values between 7-12 mean the NPC is Unfriendly, Indifferent characters have Attitude Values between 13 and 18, and any value of 19 or above means the character is Helpful toward the party. This is the NPC's Attitude overall.

Each NPC has a "Starting Attitude", and the for example, "14 (Indifferent)". When the adventure begins, and with no other considerations or complicating factors, this is the NPC's initial perspective on the party.

Attitude Modifiers

Beneath "Starting Attitude" can be one or more

Attitude Modifiers. Each describes a scenario, and the effect it has on that NPC's Attitude Value.

Attitude Modifiers can be pre-existing, unchangeable things, such as "Party Contains at Least One Elf". These Modifiers should be taken into consideration as soon as the party see the NPC, or even during pre-game setup by the GM.

Some are action-based: for example, "Party Engages in Conversation: +2"; in that scenario, the moment the party approaches the NPC and greets her, that NPC's Attitude increases by 2 points. Action-based Attitude Modifiers only have an effect once; in the example above, if the party approaches the NPC the next day and speaks with her, there is no further effect to her Attitude.

An NPC may have repeatable action-based Attitude Modifiers; these may take effect multiple times, and are usually phrased to make this obvious. For example: "Each Time the Party Slays a Giant Rat on the Property: +1".

Others have maximum effect caps. In the example "Making a Purchase (+1 per 50 gp spent, max 5)", the NPC in question will grow more fond of the party the more they buy... but this caps out at +5 for 250 gp spent. The party is of course welcome to spend more money than that, but it will have no further effect in terms of the NPC's Attitude.

Attitude Modifiers that cause an NPC's Attitude to shift to the range for a different classification take immediate effect as it applies to Charisma (Persuasion) rolls and the like. For example, if an NPC's Attitude Value is 18 (Indifferent), and speaking with her grants +1, this would bump her up from Indifferent to Friendly. So, starting a chat with her means the ensuing conversation would take place with her being Friendly.

Modifiers that would take an NPC's Attitude Value above 29, or below 1, have no effect.

Quadded Stat Blocks

Below factions is the list of quadded stat blocks. Note that unless otherwise specified, bonuses and penalties from all sources should be included already in the figures provided. For example, the Attacks section should reflect ability score modifiers, skill and feat modifiers, special ability / special quality modifiers, and modifiers derived from the enhancement bonuses of the weapon itself.

The exception to this is effects coming from magical weapons: for example, a corrosive light crossbow might show as dealing 1d8 damage. This value does not, however, include the corrosive effect, which normally causes the weapon to deal an additional 1d6 points of acid damage when the effect is activated.

Also of note is the Prepared Spells section. For NPCs with class levels of a spellcasting class that must prepare spells in advance, this section reflects a suggested pool of spells that have been memorized or that are otherwise ready to cast. The GM is of course encouraged to modify the list as she desires to fit the circumstances of gameplay; for example, if the party starts attacking townsfolk willy-nilly, then spellcasters in town might be more likely to ready defensive and combat spells.

Finally, the Treasure section in the stat blocks lists the equipment normally carried or used by the creature. Gold, jewels, and non-combat items that do not have an impact on game mechanics and crunch are not listed here.

Special Abilities

All special abilities, auras, special qualities, and other remarkable effects that apply to the creature are described here, in alphabetical order.

Note that this section lists a complete set of possible special abilities that apply to the creature taken from its Elite stat block. Individual stat blocks above this section will list out which special abilities / SQs apply to the creature in its various forms of CR.

With this, and the Feats section afterward, there is considerable duplication—many NPCs have Low-Light Vision, for example. This is by design, and speaks to a common complaint among GMs: bestiaries and NPC listings are great for getting the vital details, but it's often hard to remember just exactly what the Power Attack feat means.

The intent with the Infinium Game Studios approach to NPC and monster definitions is to make it as easy as possible to play a given creature, without having to refer to multiple other rulebooks. GMs dancing among tomes, trying to cross-reference dozens of characteristics to figure out what the creature does next is unsatisfying, wasteful of time, and takes everyone in the game out of immersion—“hold on, let me remind myself what an Alchemist's Explosive Bombs are like” doesn't exactly keep players on the edge of their seats!

Feats

All feats taken by the creature in its class level progression are listed here, in alphabetical order. As with the Special Abilities section, the list here is a superset of everything that applies to the Elite version of the creature; specific feats taken at lower-challenge iterations are listed in the Feats section of the quadded stat block.

Known Spells

Creatures of some spellcasting classes may only know a certain number of spells at a time. For those classes, and only those classes, this section exists, and lists all of the spells from which the creature might draw. This is a useful section for GMs wishing to make changes to the Prepared Spells section.

For classes who could theoretically memorize every single spell in the world, this section is omitted.

Treasure

If the creature carries wealth, jewels, or valuables beyond their equipment listed earlier, such booty is described here. Creatures whose only possessions are arms and armor might not have this section at all.

Habits and Logistics

NPCs tend to have habits, particularly those with jobs. The Habits and Logistics section indicates where the NPC can be found, when; typically there will be a Daytime and a Nighttime listing here at minimum. Characters may have more complex schedules as well, breaking down their day into hour-by-hour chunks of time.

This is useful fluff for GMs wishing to introduce an NPC in a manner that fits with the character's habits.

Background

Family history, dark deeds, secret agendas—it can all be found in the Background section of an NPC. Such backstory might never be used at all, but sometimes, simply having it in mind may help guide the GM as to the interaction and behavior of an NPC when questioned by the PCs.

In the Obelisk Attack

Not everyone makes it. All NPCs have this section, which indicates what happens to the character during the Obelisk Eruption. In the context of this adventure, this is critically important, as it's the core focus of the “main plot” of the story being told.

Conversation

Some NPCs have a lot to say; others, not so much. Experienced GMs can create their own conversation trees off the cuff in the midst of gameplay, but others may wish a more explicit, prepared approach. Noteworthy conversation topics and responses are described here.

In certain cases, the PCs may be able to get more information if they are skilled at steering the dialogue in a certain direction, or if they simply provide a bribe. If having sufficient skill or offering payment would reveal more than normal, or if the PCs can apply pressure to get to the heart of the matter, skill challenges are listed here as well, along with the response that success at such a challenge will elicit.

Often, such “additional” dialogue will follow from pressing the conversation on a topic that has been listed earlier.

Aramil Xiloscient (Apothecary)

CR 3

☞ Combat Tactics

Aramil will defend his secret laboratory (see below) to the death, for he knows full well that discovery would mean his death, or at best, life imprisonment by the authorities. Outside of that, however, he tries to live a secretive, simple life of transacting the business of a seemingly straightforward village apothecary, and as such will avoid armed conflict if he feels it's not absolutely necessary to defend his secrets.

📄 Description

The town's apothecary hides a deep secret—experimentation on sentient life. Behind an illusory wall and secret door in the city's Lower-Class Residential District, he conducts his gruesome and macabre experiments on all manner of creature—particularly lost souls who run afoul of his trickery. Some vaguely moral part of him realizes it's a horrible, terrible thing he does... but he feels driven to do it, and justifies it by taking exceptionally detailed notes. Though he has yet to demonstrate or prove anything conclusive or useful, he believes wholeheartedly that his actions will ultimately be justified once he finds something truly remarkable via what others may simply view as torture and dissection.

👤 Appearance

A half-elf he may be, but Aramil appears an amalgamation of sinister features from various races. His jawbone and facial structure seem reptilian, as though perhaps there is some lizardfolk in his family tree (there is, in fact, though Aramil himself is unaware of this as fact). His eyes are uncannily bright, vibrant, and soulful, giving a clear genetic tip of the hat to his elven mother. His insincere smile and gleaming teeth evoke the very essence of human deceit, and his physical frame and silhouette seem almost verminlike in shape and movement.

🏴‍☠️ Factions

He will admit to being a Liquid Guardian, though most likely will not bring it up on his own.

Part of his secret is membership in the Inner Circle of the Meatsmiths; since he is obviously not a butcher, mere knowledge of this membership would be enough to raise eyebrows as to his true purpose.

Special Abilities

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 8th, 12th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.

Arcane Recovery You have learned to regain some of your magical energy by studying your spellbook. Once per day when you finish a short rest, you can choose expended spell slots to recover. The spell slots can have a combined level that is equal to or less than 9, and none of the slots can be 6th level or higher. For example, if you're a 4th-level wizard, you can recover up to two levels worth of spell slots. You can recover either a 2nd-level spell slot or two 1st-level spell slots.

Arcane Tradition When you reach 2nd level, you choose an arcane tradition, shaping your practice of magic through one of eight schools: Abjuration, Conjunction, Divination, Enchantment, Evocation, Illusion, Necromancy, or Transmutation. The school of Evocation is detailed at the end of the class description; see the Player's Handbook for information on the other schools. Your choice grants you features at 2nd level and again at 6th, 10th, and 14th level.

Cantrips At 1st level, you know three cantrips of your choice from the wizard spell list. You learn additional wizard cantrips of your choice at higher levels, as shown in the Cantrips Known column of the Wizard table.

Empowered Evocation Beginning at 10th level, you can add +5 to the damage roll of any wizard evocation spell you cast. The damage bonus applies to one damage roll of a spell, not multiple rolls.

Evocation Savant Beginning when you select this school at 2nd level, the gold and time you must spend to copy an evocation spell into your spellbook is halved.

Overchannel Starting at 14th level, you can increase the power of your simpler spells. When you cast a wizard spell of 5th level or lower that deals damage, you can deal maximum damage with that spell. The first time you do so, you suffer no adverse effect. If you use this feature again before you finish a long rest, you take 2d12 necrotic damage for each level of the spell, immediately after you cast it. Each time you use this feature again before finishing a long rest, the necrotic damage per spell level increases by 1d12. This damage ignores resistance and immunity. The feature doesn't benefit cantrips.

Potent Cantrip Starting at 6th level, your damaging cantrips affect even creatures that avoid the brunt of the effect. When a creature succeeds on a saving throw against your cantrip, the creature takes half the cantrip's damage (if any) but suffers no additional effect from the cantrip.

Preparing and Casting Spells The Wizard table shows how many spell slots you have to cast your spells of 1st level and higher. To cast one of these spells, you must expend a slot of the spell's level or higher. You regain all expended spell slots when you finish a long rest. You prepare the list of wizard spells that are available for you to cast. To do so, choose a number of wizard spells from your spellbook equal to 23. The spells must be of a level for which you have spell slots. For example, if you're a 3rd-level wizard, you have four 1st-level and two 2nd-level spell slots. With an Intelligence of 16, your list of prepared spells can include six spells of 1st or 2nd level, in any combination, chosen from your spellbook. If you prepare the 1st-level spell magic missile, you can cast it using a 1st-level or a 2nd-level slot. Casting the spell doesn't remove it from your list of prepared spells. You can change your list of prepared spells when you finish a long rest. Preparing a new list of wizard spells requires time spent studying your spellbook and memorizing the incantations and gestures you must make to cast the spell: at least 1 minute per spell level for each spell on your list.

Ritual Casting You can cast a wizard spell as a ritual if that spell has the ritual tag and you have the spell in your spellbook. You don't need to have the spell prepared.

School of Evocation You focus your study on magic that creates powerful elemental effects such as bitter cold, searing flame, rolling thunder, crackling lightning, and burning acid. Some evokers find employment in military forces, serving as artillery to blast enemy armies from afar. Others use their spectacular power to protect the weak, while some seek their own gain as bandits, adventurers, or aspiring tyrants.

Sculpt Spells Beginning at 2nd level, you can create pockets of relative safety within the effects of your evocation spells. When you cast an evocation spell that affects other creatures that you can see, you can choose a number of them equal to 1 + the spell's level. The chosen creatures automatically succeed on their saving throws against the spell, and they take no damage if they would normally take half damage on a successful save.

Spellcasting As a student of arcane magic, you have a spellbook containing spells that show the first glimmerings of your true power. See chapter 10 for the general rules of spellcasting and chapter 11 for the wizard spell list. Spell save DC 19; Spell attack modifier +11,

Spell Mastery At 18th level, you have achieved such mastery over certain spells that you can cast them at will. Choose a 1st-level wizard spell and a 2nd-level wizard spell that are in your spellbook. You can cast those spells at their lowest level without expending a spell slot when you have them prepared. If you want to cast either spell at a higher level, you must expend a spell slot as normal. By spending 8 hours in study, you can exchange one or both of the spells you chose for different spells of the same levels.

Habits and Logistics

During daylight hours, Aramil can be found in his Apothecary Shop.

At night, he will often spend a good deal of the evening in the Lower-Class Residential District, experimenting on unwilling subjects. For at least three hours each night, however, he will return to the Apothecary Shop, where he sleeps.

Background

Aramil makes no apologies for his sinister appearance; in fact, he welcomes it, and the reputation it enforces.

Frequently he will decorate his shop in macabre fashion.

The alchemist will occasionally “forget” which potion should be sold to whom, and switches them around. Sometimes this is just for a laugh; other times, it’s to revenge a perceived wrongdoing.

⚠ In the Obelisk Attack

He will claim, afterward, that he was hit by falling rock and knocked out.

In fact, however, he ran like the utter coward he is, ignoring pleas for help. While this is hardly the act of a good samaritan, it’s particularly neglectful and selfish for an apothecary—who could actually help most of the people he ignored.

Although his Chaotic Evil leanings are very light, the attack causes them to grow in strength, as he feels the allure of the Obelisk and its call.

🗨 Conversation

What do you think of Berinncorte?

🗨 “It’s a town, isn’t it? Got people, and people need potions. So yeah, not a bad place, I guess. Speaking of needing potions, can I interest you in anything?”

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

🗨 “I’ve heard, probably the same things you have, and I live here. Law nuts are worried the Chaos folks are going to go crazy and destroy the town; Chaos folks are worried the Law nuts are going to get the Mayor to make the city a police state. Nothing changes, though, so it’s nothing to me either way. They’re both loons, if you ask me; you gotta have balance if there’s to be any sanity around here.”

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

🗨 “Don’t really care. They stay out of my way, keep some law and order, sure, that’s fine. Long as they don’t try and tell me what I can and can’t do, they’re free to do whatever they like.”

Tell me about being an apothecary.

🗨 “Some might say it’s the work of the gods, taking power and putting it in a bottle. If you can cast it, it can go in a vial. Never know when you might need it to get you out of a tough situation. I’ve yet to meet the person who can survive without potions—in the real world, mind you; not the cushy city life most of the folk around here lead.”

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

🗨 “Not sure what you mean by that. Now, do you want a potion, or not? Stop wasting my time, strangers.”

⚠ Sense Motive check opposed by Aramil’s Knowledge (Nature) check:

🗨 “Well, yes, it’s true—some of the things around here aren’t run-of-the-mill. Special-occasion, you see, for the odd request that comes in here and there. Hardly ever use the stuff... but it’s wise to keep certain things on hand in case there’s a need.”

⚠ Heal check at DC 18:

🗨 “Those? Oh, those are surgeon’s tools, sure. Not really all that useful for making most potions, you understand, but sometimes, for some potions, you have to... extract components from dangerous sources. Teeth, poison glands, that sort of thing. Didn’t know you were quite the healer.”

Arbelladon Moonside (Fortune Teller)

CR 2; Starting Attitude: 18 (Indifferent)

Description

It would seem that Berinncorte's resident fortune-teller and mystic would compete for business with Tudra Coppereye, the sage in the Library, but in practice, there's little overlap of clientele between the two women. Customers trust the severe bizarreness of Tudra, and tend to consult her when they feel as though they must... but many will come instead to Arbelladon out of a desire for entertainment, when they want to gain wisdom and insight.

Appearance

Arbelladon cuts an odd figure: a silhouette which constantly changes, though from stance, a flux in clothing, or something more intentional, it's difficult to tell. She typically sheaths her entire body in various layers of multicolored scarves and wispy wraplike dresses; the combinations and draping give the impression of an iridescence of color, though her clothing is mundane in nature. She's hardly imposing, and quite slight in build and stature—but once a séance or reading session commences, her true mystical nature and power come to the fore, and one must reverse one's assessment of the otherwise unassuming druid.

Combat Tactics

The elven druid is not afraid to fight, though she views it as a last resort, and generally as a failure on the part of both parties involved to resolve things in other ways. She will try to keep her distance from melee, preferring to use spells and ranged weapons from afar as she yells to get the attention of Townfolk and the Militia to intervene. In a severe or prolonged fight, she will call upon her fellow merchant druid Caerthynna Tsornyl for support.

Factions

Arbelladon is a member of the Ever-Present Occulus. In addition, she is strongly devoted to the druid sect to the north of Berinncorte, a region and faction which will be explored in more detail in future adventures in this Adventure Path.

Special Abilities

Cantrip You know one cantrip of your choice from the wizard spell list. Intelligence is your spellcasting ability for it. Spell save DC 11; Spell attack modifier +3

Darkvision Accustomed to twilight forests and the night sky, you have superior vision in dark and dim conditions. You can see in dim light within 60 feet of you as if it were bright light, and in darkness as if it were dim light. You can't discern color in darkness, only shades of gray.

Elf Weapon Training You have proficiency with the longsword, shortsword, shortbow, and longbow.

Extra Language You can speak, read, and write one extra language of your choice.

Fey Ancestry You have advantage on saving throws against being charmed, and magic can't put you to sleep.

Keen Senses You have proficiency in the Perception skill.

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common and Elvish. Elvish is fluid, with subtle intonations and intricate grammar. Elven literature is rich and varied, and their songs and poems are famous among other races. Many bards learn their language so they can add Elvish ballads to their repertoires.

Trance Elves don't need to sleep. Instead, they meditate deeply, remaining semiconscious, for 4 hours a day. (The Common word for such meditation is "trance.") While meditating, you can dream after a fashion; such dreams are actually mental exercises that have become reflexive through years of practice. After resting in this way, you gain the same benefit that a human does from 8 hours of sleep.

Bonus Cantrip When you choose this circle at 2nd level, you learn one additional druid cantrip of your choice.

Cantrips At 1st level, you know two cantrips of your choice from the druid spell list. You learn additional druid cantrips of your choice at higher levels, as shown in the Cantrips Known column of the Druid table.

Druid Circle At 2nd level, you choose to identify with a circle of druids: the Circle of the Land or the Circle of the Moon, both detailed at the end of the class description. Your choice grants you features at 2nd level and again at 6th, 10th, and 14th level.

Druidic You know Druidic, the secret language of druids. You can speak the language and use it to leave hidden messages. You and others who know this language automatically spot such a message. Others spot the message's presence with a successful DC 15 Wisdom (Perception) check but can't decipher it without magic.

Natural Recovery Starting at 2nd level, you can regain some of your magical energy by sitting in meditation and communing with nature. During a short rest, you choose expended spell slots to recover. The spell slots can have a combined level that is equal to or less than 1, and none of the slots can be 6th level or higher. You can't use this feature again until you finish a long rest. For example, when you are a 4th-level druid, you can recover up to two levels worth of spell slots. You can recover either a 2nd-level slot or two 1st-level slots.

Ritual Casting You can cast a druid spell as a ritual if that spell has the ritual tag and you have the spell prepared.

Spellcasting Drawing on the divine essence of nature itself, you can cast spells to shape that essence to your will. See chapter 10 for the general rules of spellcasting and chapter 11 for the druid spell list. Spell save DC 13; Spell attack modifier +5; Number of spells to prepare 5.

Spellcasting Focus You can use a druidic focus (found in chapter 5) as a spellcasting focus for your druid spells.

Wild Shape Starting at 2nd level, you can use your action to magically assume the shape of a beast that you have seen before. You can use this feature twice. You regain expended uses when you finish a short or long rest. Your druid level determines the beasts you can transform into. At 2nd level, for example, you can transform into any beast that has a challenge rating of 1/4 or lower that doesn't have a flying or swimming speed. You can stay in a beast shape for a number of hours equal to 1. You then revert to your normal form unless you expend another use of this feature. You can revert to your normal form earlier by using a bonus action on your turn. You automatically revert if you fall unconscious, drop to 0 hit points, or die. While you are transformed, the following rules apply: Your game statistics are replaced by the statistics of the beast, but you retain your alignment, personality, and Intelligence, Wisdom, and Charisma scores. You also retain all of your skill and saving throw proficiencies, in addition to gaining those of the creature. If the creature has the same proficiency as you and the bonus in its stat block is higher than yours, use the creature's bonus instead of yours. If the creature has any legendary or lair actions, you can't use them. When you transform, you assume the beast's hit points and Hit Dice.

When you revert to your normal form, you return to the number of hit points you had before you transformed. However, if you revert as a result of dropping to 0 hit points, any excess damage carries over to your normal form. For example, if you take 10 damage in animal form and have only 1 hit point left, you revert and take 9 damage. As long as the excess damage doesn't reduce your normal form to 0 hit points, you aren't knocked unconscious. You can't cast spells, and your ability to speak or take any action that requires hands is limited to the capabilities of your beast form. Transforming doesn't break your concentration on a spell you've already cast, however, or prevent you from taking actions that are part of a spell, such as call lightning, that you've already cast. You retain the benefit of any features from your class, race, or other source and can use them if the new form is physically capable of doing so. However, you can't use any of your special senses, such as darkvision, unless your new form also has that sense. You choose whether your equipment falls to the ground in your space, merges into your new form, or is worn by it. Worn equipment functions as normal, but the DM decides whether it is practical for the new form to wear a piece of equipment, based on the creature's shape and size. Your equipment doesn't change size or shape to match the new form, and any equipment that the new form can't wear must either fall to the ground or merge with it. Equipment that merges with the form has no effect until you leave the form.

Circle of the Land The Circle of the Land is made up of mystics and sages who safeguard ancient knowledge and rites through a vast oral tradition. These druids meet within sacred circles of trees or standing stones to whisper primal secrets in Druidic. The circle's wisest members preside as the chief priests of communities that hold to the Old Faith and serve as advisors to the rulers of those folk. As a member of this circle, your magic is influenced by the land where you were initiated into the circle's mysterious rites.

Habits and Logistics

 During daylight hours, Arbelladon will be in her kiosk in the Town Square.

 At night, she will keep some late appointments, and then spend her evenings in the camaraderie of the Shanty Town area of Town Square.

Background

Arbelladon was raised and trained a druid in the nature-rich region to the north of Berinncorte. She wanted to be a fighter, but her family counselled her against that training; she instead chose a path of divination. Her role in the city is not merely as an entertainer; she reports back to her druidic relations often as to the development of factions and influence within the town.

In the Obelisk Attack

The elven fortune-teller is slain shortly after the Obelisk Erupts.

Conversation

What do you think of Berinncorte?

 "Tis a place of great power, great men and women, and great spirits, watching from on high and even among us."

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

 "Though they are both spiritual, I prefer to avoid disputes of the mortal, focusing instead on the relations of the spirits, and those beyond."

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

 "The peace is kept, but spirits do not rest easy. Though they do pay attention to the affairs of mortals."

Tell me about being a fortune-teller.

 "I speak with low men and noble women, the poor and the wealthy alike. I speak with the dead, the living, and to both at once, if desired. I commune with nature, the gods, and everything in between, in support of answering life's toughest queries. "

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

 "What an odd question."

 Diplomacy or Intimidate check opposed by Arbelladon's Deception check:

 "To be honest, this is entertainment. There's little magic in what I do. To be fair, though, that's often enough for most inquisitive minds. I find that many would prefer not to have actual, true answers to the questions they claim to want addressed. I provide a valuable service, one that some find worth the cost and time spent. Your opinion may freely differ from theirs."

Ash "Executioner" (Militia Trainer)

CR 2; Starting Attitude: 14 (Indifferent)

Description

Though he pretends to be just another one of the lads, Ash is in fact something of a genius. His eyes speak to a wide spectrum of deeds witnessed and performed, and every once in a while, you'll catch something in his demeanor that makes you wonder: just how old is this dwarf? Where did he come from? What has he seen?

Ash will speak in generalities about experiences far and wide, but as though they are common knowledge, never in the specifics as to whether he personally has been involved with, say, a certain war, or battle... or even if he himself has ever been to that nation.

Appearance

A tall, muscular dwarf with thick ropes of braided gray beard, Ash seems the quintessential trainer. He's quick with a quip, picks on his trainees constantly, and ultimately helps everyone become a better soldier and fighter. For a dwarf, he's quite tall.

Combat Tactics

A professional trainer, he's used to fighting when it doesn't truly matter. It generally takes him a full round of combat before he is convinced a given fight is "real"; immediately thereafter, he will rage and seek out the beefiest, most melee-worthy opponent, eliminating that threat before moving on to ranged combatants and magic-wielders.

If confronted in the company of any other Berinncorte Militia, he will command them to join the fray, goading them with his typical jokes and jabs.

Factions

Berinncorte Militia, as their chief trainer.
Used to be part of the Wild Kingdom.

📍 Special Abilities

Darkvision Accustomed to life underground, you have superior vision in dark and dim conditions. You can see in dim light within 60 feet of you as if it were bright light, and in darkness as if it were dim light. You can't discern color in darkness, only shades of gray.

Dwarven Combat Training You have proficiency with the battleaxe, handaxe, light hammer, and warhammer.

Dwarven Resilience You have advantage on saving throws against poison, and you have resistance against poison damage (explained in chapter 9).

Dwarven Toughness Your hit point maximum increases by 1, and it increases by 1 every time you gain a level.

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common and Dwarvish. Dwarvish is full of hard consonants and guttural sounds, and those characteristics spill over into whatever other language a dwarf might speak.

Smith's Tools Proficient with Artisan Smith's Tools.

Stonecunning Whenever you make an Intelligence (History) check related to the origin of stonework, you are considered proficient in the History skill and add double your proficiency bonus to the check, instead of your normal proficiency bonus.

Tool Proficiency You gain proficiency with the artisan's tools of your choice: smith's tools, brewer's supplies, or mason's tools.

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 8th, 12th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.

Brutal Critical Beginning at 9th level, you can roll 2 additional weapon damage die when determining the extra damage for a critical hit with a melee attack.

Danger Sense At 2nd level, you gain an uncanny sense of when things nearby aren't as they should be, giving you an edge when you dodge away from danger. You have advantage on Dexterity saving throws against effects that you can see, such as traps and spells. To gain this benefit, you can't be blinded, deafened, or incapacitated.

Extra Attack Beginning at 5th level, you can attack twice, instead of once, whenever you take the Attack action on your turn.

Fast Movement Starting at 5th level, your speed increases by 10 feet while you aren't wearing heavy armor.

Feral Instinct By 7th level, your instincts are so honed that you have advantage on initiative rolls. Additionally, if you are surprised at the beginning of combat and aren't incapacitated, you can act normally on your first turn, but only if you enter your rage before doing anything else on that turn.

Frenzy Starting when you choose this path at 3rd level, you can go into a frenzy when you rage. If you do so, for the duration of your rage you can make a single melee weapon attack as a bonus action on each of your turns after this one. When your rage ends, you suffer one level of exhaustion (as described in appendix A).

Path of the Berserker For some barbarians, rage is a means to an end—that end being violence. The Path of the Berserker is a path of untrammelled fury, slick with blood. As you enter the berserker's rage, you thrill in the chaos of battle, heedless of your own health or well-being.

Persistent Rage Beginning at 15th level, your rage is so fierce that it ends early only if you fall unconscious or if you choose to end it.

Primal Path At 3rd level, you choose a path that shapes the nature of your rage. Choose the Path of the Berserker or the Path of the Totem Warrior, both detailed at the end of the class description. Your choice grants you features at 3rd level and again at 6th, 10th, and 14th levels.

Rage In battle, you fight with primal ferocity. On your turn, you can enter a rage as a bonus action. While raging, you gain the following benefits if you aren't wearing heavy armor: You have advantage on Strength checks and Strength saving throws. When you make a melee weapon attack using Strength, you gain a bonus to the damage roll equal to 4. You have resistance to bludgeoning, piercing, and slashing damage. If you are able to cast spells, you can't cast them or concentrate on them while raging. Your rage lasts for 1 minute. It ends early if you are knocked unconscious or if your turn ends and you haven't attacked a hostile creature since your last turn or taken damage since then. You can also end your rage on your turn as a bonus action. Once you have raged the number of times equal to 5, you must finish a long rest before you can rage again.

Reckless Attack Starting at 2nd level, you can throw aside all concern for defense to attack with fierce desperation. When you make your first attack on your turn, you can decide to attack recklessly. Doing so gives you advantage on melee weapon attack rolls using Strength during this turn, but attack rolls against you have advantage until your next turn.

Relentless Rage Starting at 11th level, your rage can keep you fighting despite grievous wounds. If you drop to 0 hit points while you're raging and don't die outright, you can make a DC 10 Constitution saving throw. If you succeed, you drop to 1 hit point instead. Each time you use this feature after the first, the DC increases by 5. When you finish a short or long rest, the DC resets to 10.

Unarmored Defense While you are not wearing any armor, your Armor Class equals 10 + your Dexterity modifier + your Constitution modifier. You can use a shield and still gain this benefit.

Habits and Logistics

☀ During daylight hours, Ash will be going about his business in the Garrison / Barracks, usually training new recruits or leading regular exercises. Occasionally, he will conduct one-on-one training sessions

🌙 At night, Ash will be asleep in quarters in the Barracks. Sometimes (🎲 30%), he will stop by the Tavern for a drink or two. Once a week, he will drop by the Apothecary to obtain the compound to which he is addicted (see below).

Background

Ash used to live the life of an adventurer and warmonger, traveling the world and slaying many of its inhabitants. His physique and passions seemed purpose-built for membership in the Wild Kingdom, and he swiftly rose in their ranks.

While adventuring in lands far north, he developed a taste for Darkserum. Sadly, the same qualities that made him an outstanding warrior also made him a rapid addict, and he has struggled with his reliance on the drug for almost a decade now. No dunces, Ash realized the nature of his addiction fairly quickly, and recognized that continued travel to far-flung lands would make satisfying his desire quite problematic.

Rather than face and defeat the addiction, he chose instead to settle down, abandoning the wandering but keeping the profession that had been at the core of his travels. Soldiering suits Ash well, as does his position: although there's little warfare about Berinncorte to speak of, training new recruits is somewhat replicative of his earlier exploits.

Berinncorte also just happens to have an apothecary who regularly carries Darkserum, so that helped in his choice of city, too. Between his profession and his drug, he's a happy man, content with his lot.

In the Obelisk Attack

Ash springs immediately into action, organizing townsfolk and helping them escape. Born to combat, his instincts take over, and he is actually grinning during much of the battle in the attack itself. He defeats several monsters, and although he's wounded, it's nothing critical, and he soon heals in the aftermath.

Bizarrely, the adrenaline of the attack and the chaos that follows seems to dissolve the addiction that had so driven him before.

Conversation

What do you think of Berinncorte?

🗨️ “Lovely little burg. Could've ended up in a dozen places, but I'm peachy that I ended up here. It's got everything you need, and isn't so big that you get lost. A man can... find his place, here. And I have; that's the truth of it.”

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

🗨️ “Religion'll have conflict, no way around it. You got people believing that their god created the world, or is the most important thing, or has the most influence, or whatever. And across town, you got a different bunch of people, thinks the same thing, only about a different god. I've seen a lot of the world, my new friends, and the only true thing I can say about gods is, most folk seem to have the right intention about worshipping them... it's the gods themselves that are imperfect about it, if you ask me.”

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

🗨️ “She keeps order, that's the truth. Supports the Militia, that's a good thing. Never had any problems with her government, though I do hear some folk get a bit testy about the way she goes about it. Seems to me, peace and quiet are never what people complain about—it's the law and order way of getting it that rubs folk the wrong way, sometimes.”

Tell me about being a militia trainer.

🗨️ “I love it.” He pauses, grinning broadly. “You want more detail? Okay: I really love it. Seriously, it's great. I get all the joy of combat, but none of the blood and guts and ick, and afterwards, I get to drink with the poor chap tried to go against me. Much better than war, I must say. Though I do miss real combat, sometimes—training gets your blood up, but there's part of you still knows it ain't real.”

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

🗨️ “Well, I am a strong supporter of small local businesses. The Leaky Cask Tavern, primarily.” He smiles.

📌 Sense Motive, Knowledge (Nature), or Craft (Alchemy) check opposed by Ash's Intimidate check:

🗨️ “Sure, I go to Aramil's shop from time to time. Grab a potion, if I need one. You know, training, sometimes, you get a fella, doesn't check his swing, and..." He shrugs. "Accidents happen. Gotta be prepared to heal that up, know what I mean?"

Biggen Gurble (Library Reader)

CR 3; Starting Attitude 18 (Indifferent)

Description

This charismatic, whip-smart halfling is too clever by half... so what is he doing as an assistant and reader in an average-sized city's Library? His colleagues Gunnloda Balderk and Tudra Coppereye suspect he's more than he seems, but they lack the evidence and the interest to press the matter, seeing as how Biggen does his job well and seems to contribute a great deal to the establishment.

With patrons of the library, he's efficient and personable, often so much so that he gets them to reveal much more about themselves and their purpose than they perhaps had intended.

Appearance

Small in stature even for a halfling, Biggen is a cherubic waif of a librarian, with spectacles perched at the end of his considerable nose. He's lithe and dexterous, and knows his way around the library like the back of his hand; observant Rogues in the party may make a passive DC 18 Wisdom (Perception) check to notice that his mannerisms and actions speak to likely Rogue-ish experience. His silvery hair is thick and curly, and frames his puffy cheeks in quite the adorable manner.

Combat Tactics

Biggen is not a fighter, and will avoid armed conflict if at all possible. He will flee if fought, using the secret passages in the library to his advantage if the fight occurs in that building.

The exception is if he is confronted with being a spy for the Scarlet Path (see below); if it seems that his secret is likely to be spilled to others, or if those facing him with this knowledge seem enraged or otherwise against the faction, he will defend himself vigorously, knowing that his position and livelihood here in the city and with his faction are most certainly at risk.

Factions

Secretly, he is a member of The Scarlet Path, placed here years ago as the group's representative for keeping an eye on things in the city of Berinncorte.

Special Abilities

Brave You have advantage on saving throws against being frightened.

Halfling Nimbleness You can move through the space of any creature that is of a size larger than yours.

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common and Halfling. The Halfling language isn't secret, but halflings are loath to share it with others. They write very little, so they don't have a rich body of literature. Their oral tradition, however, is very strong. Almost all halflings speak Common to converse with the people in whose lands they dwell or through which they are traveling.

Lucky When you roll a 1 on an attack roll, ability check, or saving throw, you can reroll the die and must use the new roll.

Naturally Stealthy You can attempt to hide even when you are obscured only by a creature that is at least one size larger than you.

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 8th, 12th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.

Blindsight Starting at 14th level, if you are able to hear, you are aware of the location of any hidden or invisible creature within 10 feet of you.

Cunning Action Starting at 2nd level, your quick thinking and agility allow you to move and act quickly. You can take a bonus action on each of your turns in combat. This action can be used only to take the Dash, Disengage, or Hide action.

Evasion Beginning at 7th level, you can nimbly dodge out of the way of certain area effects, such as a red dragon's fiery breath or an ice storm spell. When you are subjected to an effect that allows you to make a Dexterity saving throw to take only half damage, you instead take no damage if you succeed on the saving throw, and only half damage if you fail.

Expertise At 1st level, choose two of your skill proficiencies, or one of your skill proficiencies and your proficiency with thieves' tools. Your proficiency bonus is doubled for any ability check you make that uses either of the chosen proficiencies. At 6th level, you can choose two more of your proficiencies (in skills or with thieves' tools) to gain this benefit.

Fast Hands Starting at 3rd level, you can use the bonus action granted by your Cunning Action to make a Dexterity (Sleight of Hand) check, use your thieves' tools to disarm a trap or open a lock, or take the Use an Object action.

Reliable Talent By 11th level, you have refined your chosen skills until they approach perfection. Whenever you make an ability check that lets you add your proficiency bonus, you can treat a d20 roll of 9 or lower as a 10.

Roguish Archetype At 3rd level, you choose an archetype that you emulate in the exercise of your rogue abilities. Your choice grants you features at 3rd level and then again at 9th, 13th, and 17th level.

Second-Story Work When you choose this archetype at 3rd level, you gain the ability to climb faster than normal; climbing no longer costs you extra movement. In addition, when you make a running jump, the distance you cover increases by a number of feet equal to 5.

Slippery Mind By 15th level, you have acquired greater mental strength. You gain proficiency in Wisdom saving throws.

Sneak Attack Beginning at 1st level, you know how to strike subtly and exploit a foe's distraction. Once per turn, you can deal an extra 8d6 damage to one creature you hit with an attack if you have advantage on the attack roll. The attack must use a finesse or a ranged weapon. You don't need advantage on the attack roll if another enemy of the target is within 5 feet of it, that enemy isn't incapacitated, and you don't have disadvantage on the attack roll.

Supreme Sneak Starting at 9th level, you have advantage on a Dexterity (Stealth) check if you move no more than half your speed on the same turn.

Thief You hone your skills in the larcenous arts. Burglars, bandits, cutpurses, and other criminals typically follow this archetype, but so do rogues who prefer to think of themselves as professional treasure seekers, explorers, delvers, and investigators. In addition to improving your agility and stealth, you learn skills useful for delving into ancient ruins, reading unfamiliar languages, and using magic items you normally couldn't employ.

Thieves' Cant During your rogue training you learned thieves' cant, a secret mix of dialect, jargon, and code that allows you to hide messages in seemingly normal conversation. Only another creature that knows thieves' cant understands such messages. It takes four times longer to convey such a message than it does to speak the same idea plainly. In addition, you understand a set of secret signs and symbols used to convey short, simple messages, such as whether an area is dangerous or the territory of a thieves' guild, whether loot is nearby, or whether the people in an area are easy marks or will provide a safe house for thieves on the run.

Uncanny Dodge Starting at 5th level, when an attacker that you can see hits you with an attack, you can use your reaction to halve the attack's damage against you.

Use Magic Device By 13th level, you have learned enough about the workings of magic that you can improvise the use of items even when they are not intended for you. You ignore all class, race, and level requirements on the use of magic items.

Habits and Logistics

☀ During daylight hours, Biggen will be in the library, performing his duties. Occasionally (🎲 15%), he will be home asleep, working the night shift at the library instead.

🌙 At night, Biggen will usually (🎲 85%) be at home asleep; the rest of the time, he will be in the library, working the night shift as described above. Night-shift work at the library consists mainly of organizing and reshelving books; no patrons are typically allowed during evening hours.

Background

Most notably, Biggen is a member of the Scarlet Path, and has been "stationed" by the group here in Berinncorte to keep an eye on things in the city. His primary focus is on the government, and the conflict between law and chaos that Mayor Symms finds herself amidst between the Zugul Church and the Sheergath Temple factions and their member citizens. His reports back to the Path are conducted primarily via messenger; occasionally, a fellow faction member will come into town, and will make contact to receive an update.

In the Obelisk Attack

Biggen is a knowledgeable halfling, and although he did not see this particular incident coming, he is unsurprised that the warring mentalities within the town brought about some form of greater conflict. His focus in the aftermath of the Eruption is focused on learning as much as he can about the Obelisk and its history; given the preference, he would lock himself up in the Library and stay sequestered until he knew something that might be of use.

Conversation

What do you think of Berinncorte?

🗨 "It's a nice enough place. The people could be better educated, take advantage of the library. But at least there's a very nice library, even if it's ignored most of the time."

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

🗨 "I'm sorry to say that it simply doesn't involve me. The closest I come to any 'strife' as you call it is research and study of the deities themselves, an historical perspective, you understand. Couldn't really say as to how that affects us here in the city today."

⚠ As above, but with a successful Sense Motive check opposed by Biggen's Deception check:

🗨 "Well, I'm not blind, I'll admit it—you'd have to be, to ignore the obvious signs there's a bit of turmoil. I keep an eye on things as much as I can, but I'm not particularly in a position to do much about it either way. It comes down to the nature of humanity, I suspect... and perhaps this church-on-church opposition of views is a microcosm of a broader issue. But I ramble!"

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

☞ “Symms keeps the peace, and funds the library. That’s all I mostly look for in a government. I could complain that we could use more books, more space, more resources... but that really would be unreasonable. Look around—we’ve the supplies and knowledge of a town six times our size.”

Tell me about being a reader.

☞ “Working at the library is a dream come true. I’ve always been the sort to poke his nose in a book, rather than someone else’s business... here, I get to do a bit of both, truth be told. A ‘reader’ is really just a fancy name for someone who does the busywork of a library—anything Gunnloda wants, anything at all, I’m the halfling for her. Same thing for customers—you need something, I’m your half-man.” He grins. “It’s a lot more interesting than you might think. You get to know a lot about people based on the sorts of books they look for.”

What’s your relationship with Tudra Coppereye?

☞ “She’s the Sage, here at the library. Not much call for her and me to speak, most of the time. She does her thing, and I do mine—Gunnloda works a bit with us both, but rarely all together. Gunnloda and I, we deal with what you see here—” he spreads his hands “—and keep it to what we can see, and read, and touch. Tudra, she... well, she goes a ‘bit beyond’, is how she’d probably put it.”

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

☞ “I read, every chance I get. In the time I’ve been in the city, I reckon I’ve read about 20% of everything that’s in this building. Take me another ten years just to get up to half of it!”

▲ Knowledge (Local), Knowledge (Geography), or Knowledge (History) check, at DC 20:

☞ “Look alive, we’ve a scholar among us! I didn’t know adventurers stocked our sort.” The succeeding PC may make a free roll on the Rumors and Lore table as the two continue their shared interest and passion for knowledge. In addition, Biggen will reveal (accurately!) whether he believes the information to be true or not.

▲ Diplomacy check at DC 14, and sharing an entry from any of the Rumors and Lore tables:

If successful, Biggen will reveal (accurately) whether the item is true. If the check fails, the GM is encouraged to still have Biggen provide a response, but perhaps not so accurately!

Brock Runnaheim (Stablemaster)

CR 4; XP 1,200; Starting Attitude: 14 (Indifferent)

Description

This solidly-built and aging dwarf is master of horse in Berinncorte. If the GM determines that the party arrives in the city via horseback, it's in his accommodations that their conveyances will be kept for the duration of their stay in town; this is a possible means of introducing the knowledgeable and helpful stablemaster early on.

Brock is comfortable and laid-back, an older dwarf with the attitude and demeanor of a long-retired general. He has a great sense of self-deprecating humor about a dwarf being a master of horses, but he knows his trade well, and is well-regarded among other townfolk.

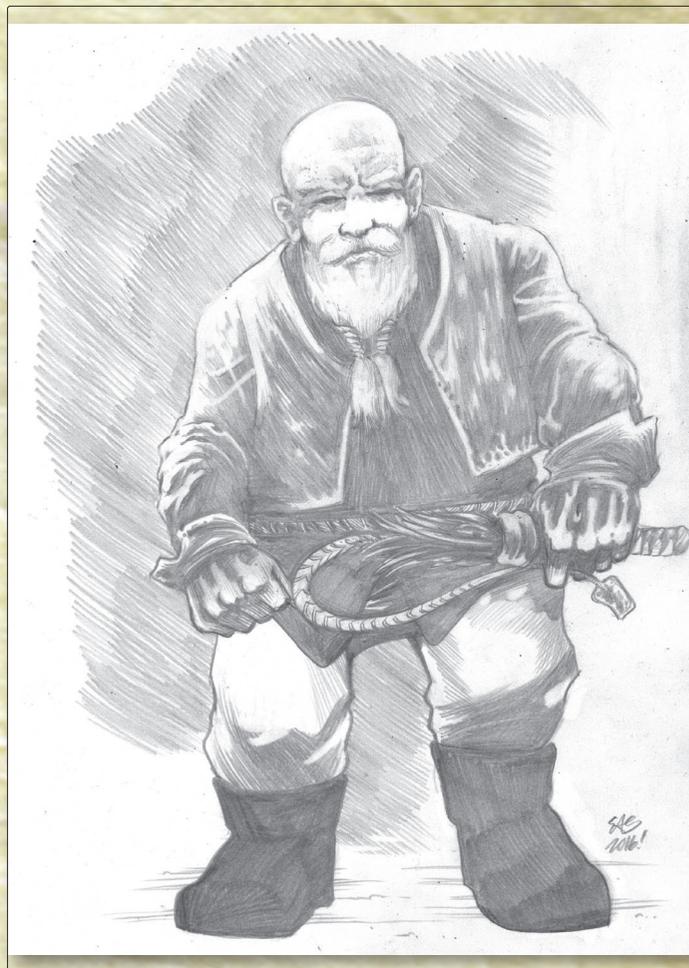

Appearance

For a man who spends day and night in the stables, he smells not too strongly of horse; his location near the river helps greatly in his routine of daily washing. He is otherwise a stout and unremarkable dwarf of advancing age, with the elaborate facial hair to prove it.

Combat Tactics

A former adventurer, Brock is never one to shy from a fight, so long as it's one he feels he can win... and although it pains him to admit it, he realizes he's not the young rogue he once was.

If outmatched (as he almost certainly would be by a party of equivalent-level PCs), he won't hesitate to run, seeking help from either the Fishery or one of the nearby Militia Guard Posts. Should he make it to either such location, the GM is encouraged to introduce 2d4+1 Berinncorte Militia, and possibly one or more NPCs who make their business in nearby establishments.

Factions

Though he has seen much and traveled extensively, Brock now only wishes to work in peace, and hopes to live his remaining years in comfort. He occasionally attends sermons at the Sheergath Temple, but is not what he himself would call an adherent—though he is a good friend of Preacher Denzys. His tribute goes directly to the city of Berinncorte each year.

Special Abilities

Darkvision Accustomed to life underground, you have superior vision in dark and dim conditions. You can see in dim light within 60 feet of you as if it were bright light, and in darkness as if it were dim light. You can't discern color in darkness, only shades of gray.

Dwarven Combat Training You have proficiency with the battleaxe, handaxe, light hammer, and warhammer.

Dwarven Resilience You have advantage on saving throws against poison, and you have resistance against poison damage (explained in chapter 9).

Dwarven Toughness Your hit point maximum increases by 1, and it increases by 1 every time you gain a level.

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common and Dwarvish. Dwarvish is full of hard consonants and guttural sounds, and those characteristics spill over into whatever other language a dwarf might speak.

Mason's Tools Proficient with Artisan Mason's Tools.

Stonecunning Whenever you make an Intelligence (History) check related to the origin of stonework, you are considered proficient in the History skill and add double your proficiency bonus to the check, instead of your normal proficiency bonus.

Tool Proficiency You gain proficiency with the artisan's tools of your choice: smith's tools, brewer's supplies, or mason's tools.

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 8th, 12th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.

Blindsight Starting at 14th level, if you are able to hear, you are aware of the location of any hidden or invisible creature within 10 feet of you.

Cunning Action Starting at 2nd level, your quick thinking and agility allow you to move and act quickly. You can take a bonus action on each of your turns in combat. This action can be used only to take the Dash, Disengage, or Hide action.

Evasion Beginning at 7th level, you can nimbly dodge out of the way of certain area effects, such as a red dragon's fiery breath or an ice storm spell. When you are subjected to an effect that allows you to make a Dexterity saving throw to take only half damage, you instead take no damage if you succeed on the saving throw, and only half damage if you fail.

Expertise At 1st level, choose two of your skill proficiencies, or one of your skill proficiencies and your proficiency with thieves' tools. Your proficiency bonus is doubled for any ability check you make that uses either of the chosen proficiencies. At 6th level, you can choose two more of your proficiencies (in skills or with thieves' tools) to gain this benefit.

Fast Hands Starting at 3rd level, you can use the bonus action granted by your Cunning Action to make a Dexterity (Sleight of Hand) check, use your thieves' tools to disarm a trap or open a lock, or take the Use an Object action.

Reliable Talent By 11th level, you have refined your chosen skills until they approach perfection. Whenever you make an ability check that lets you add your proficiency bonus, you can treat a d20 roll of 9 or lower as a 10.

Roguish Archetype At 3rd level, you choose an archetype that you emulate in the exercise of your rogue abilities. Your choice grants you features at 3rd level and then again at 9th, 13th, and 17th level.

Second-Story Work When you choose this archetype at 3rd level, you gain the ability to climb faster than normal; climbing no longer costs you extra movement. In addition, when you make a running jump, the distance you cover increases by a number of feet equal to 0.

Slippery Mind By 15th level, you have acquired greater mental strength. You gain proficiency in Wisdom saving throws.

Sneak Attack Beginning at 1st level, you know how to strike subtly and exploit a foe's distraction. Once per turn, you can deal an extra 8d6 damage to one creature you hit with an attack if you have advantage on the attack roll. The attack must use a finesse or a ranged weapon. You don't need advantage on the attack roll if another enemy of the target is within 5 feet of it, that enemy isn't incapacitated, and you don't have disadvantage on the attack roll.

Supreme Sneak Starting at 9th level, you have advantage on a Dexterity (Stealth) check if you move no more than half your speed on the same turn.

Thief You hone your skills in the larcenous arts. Burglars, bandits, cutpurses, and other criminals typically follow this archetype, but so do rogues who prefer to think of themselves as professional treasure seekers, explorers, delvers, and investigators. In addition to improving your agility and stealth, you learn skills useful for delving into ancient ruins, reading unfamiliar languages, and using magic items you normally couldn't employ.

Thieves' Cant During your rogue training you learned thieves' cant, a secret mix of dialect, jargon, and code that allows you to hide messages in seemingly normal conversation. Only another creature that knows thieves' cant understands such messages. It takes four times longer to convey such a message than it does to speak the same idea plainly. In addition, you understand a set of secret signs and symbols used to convey short, simple messages, such as whether an area is dangerous or the territory of a thieves' guild, whether loot is nearby, or whether the people in an area are easy marks or will provide a safe house for thieves on the run.

Uncanny Dodge Starting at 5th level, when an attacker that you can see hits you with an attack, you can use your reaction to halve the attack's damage against you.

Use Magic Device By 13th level, you have learned enough about the workings of magic that you can improvise the use of items even when they are not intended for you. You ignore all class, race, and level requirements on the use of magic items.

Habits and Logistics

☀ During daylight hours, Brock will be tending to his job at the Stables. If the city hosts a large event, he will occasionally hire an extra worker or two to help with the extra horses he anticipates, but largely, the dwarf works alone, content with the company of horses and his own thoughts.

🌙 At night, Brock will sleep in the stables where he makes his home. Every morning, and the occasional (🎲 20%) evening, he will bathe in the river, his belongings piled on the nearby bank.

Background

A former adventurer, he was approached about being mayor himself a few years ago, but turned it down, saying that he had no business doing what he has no business doing.

Though a former rogue, his exploits involve nothing too untoward; his adventuring life was fairly boring (and therefore not greatly lucrative).

He does prefer elven women to his own kind, which, if discovered, embarrasses him to no end. He will act more favorably and congenially toward any female character of elven ancestry with a Charisma of 12 or greater (any PC may passively notice this favoritism via a DC 12 🗲 Sense Motive check).

In the Obelisk Attack

Brock loses an arm in the attack. More specifically, he gets his left arm pinned under rubble, and hacks it off with his spear so as to be freed from the fallen timber; he then braves the fires to save others. It's a good thing he does: a spear is hardly the most efficient weapon with which to hack off one's own limb, and the action leaves the wound mangled and raw; leaping in and out of fire actually cauterizes the wound, preventing a bleed-out and likely saving his life.

Conversation

What do you think of Berinncorte?

🗨️ "Peaceful, calm. Steady business, not too hard to manage. It's a good place to finish one's life, I suspect."

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

🗨️ "I'm more of a Sheergath man, but not to the point where I mind Zugul having the nicer church, let's say. I've seen much of the religions of the land; anyone who seeks church for something more than their own personal peace and presence of mind is asking for trouble. Or stirring it up, usually for their own purposes."

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

☞ “Seems peaceful enough to me around here. Past that, I don’t really care; I’ve no trouble with the law, and I don’t own so much of anything as anyone would provoke trouble with me. Anybody steals a horse, there’ll be more to answer to than my own ire, and usually it’s just not worth it to folk.”

Tell me about being a stablemaster.

☞ “Horses don’t complain. They got specific interests, understand, and you keep them fed and watered, brush them down from time to time, they’re happy. Come to think of it, I’m pretty much the same, I am. It’s everything I want, and nothing I don’t.”

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

☞ “No. I left that life behind me. Not that there was much of it to be interesting, even back then, you understand.”

Cannock (High Priest of Zugul)

CR 4; Starting Attitude: 18 (Indifferent)

Description

As a former adventurer, his sermons are filled with slightly-exaggerated confrontations and tales from his adventuring days. If he lacks the outward fervor of Denzys, it's only because he feels more secure in his position: his church is larger, more supported by the village, with a greater congregation, and more beautiful grounds. This is in large part because he volunteered his church for the social support of cemetery, burial, and most of the healing and hospital duties, but the general mindset of citizens tends to be more lawful than chaotic in these parts.

Appearance

Cannock was once a well-built man with broad shoulders sitting above a narrow waist, yet with agility and grace in his step. His recent life as a cleric has eroded much of his former musculature, but he retains the grace and broad shoulders, and above all, the kind and attentive demeanor that make him yet a charming man of the cloth. He bears a faint scar above his left eye; if asked, he will dismiss it as a remnant of a childhood incident brought about by foolish play. In reality, the scar was given him by a wyvern during his adventuring days.

Combat Tactics

Cannock will not attack unless presented with an unavoidable reason to do so—self-defense, or saving the lives of innocents nearby who are threatened. When faced with armed conflict, he will do what he can, but despite his adventuring background, Cannock has no taste for warfare and will seek to escape and hide whenever possible, utilizing his skills as a former rogue to do so. In defending members of his congregation, however, he will fight to the death, urging them to escape while he faces the brunt of the attack.

Factions

Zugul Church, of course, as its leader.

Also, both he and his church have a formal allegiance to and alliance with the Berinncorte City Government; the church helps out with many civic projects, and Cannock himself donates much of his time to city endeavors.

Special Abilities

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common and one extra language of your choice. Humans typically learn the languages of other peoples they deal with, including obscure dialects. They are fond of sprinkling their speech with words borrowed from other tongues: Orc curses, Elvish musical expressions, Dwarvish military phrases, and so on.

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 8th, 12th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.

Blessed Healer Beginning at 6th level, the healing spells you cast on others heal you as well. When you cast a spell of 1st level or higher that restores hit points to a creature other than you, you regain hit points equal to 2 + the spell's level.

Bonus Proficiency When you choose this domain at 1st level, you gain proficiency with heavy armor.

Cantrips At 1st level, you know three cantrips of your choice from the cleric spell list. You learn additional cleric cantrips of your choice at higher levels, as shown in the Cantrips Known column of the Cleric table.

Channel Divinity At 2nd level, you gain the ability to channel divine energy directly from your deity, using that energy to fuel magical effects. You start with two such effects: Turn Undead and an effect determined by your domain. Some domains grant you additional effects as you advance in levels, as noted in the domain description. When you use your Channel Divinity, you choose which effect to create. You must then finish a short or long rest to use your Channel Divinity again. Some Channel Divinity effects require saving throws. When you use such an effect from this class, the DC equals your cleric spell save DC. You can use your Channel Divinity 2 times between rests. When you finish a short or long rest, you regain your expended uses.

Channel Divinity: Preserve Life Starting at 2nd level, you can use your Channel Divinity to heal the badly injured. As an action, you present your holy symbol and evoke healing energy that can restore a number of hit points equal to 80. Choose any creatures within 30 feet of you, and divide those hit points among them. This feature can restore a creature to no more than half of its hit point maximum. You can't use this feature on an undead or a construct.

Channel Divinity: Turn Undead As an action, you present your holy symbol and speak a prayer censuring the undead. Each undead that can see or hear you within 30 feet of you must make a Wisdom saving throw. If the creature fails its saving throw, it is turned for 1 minute or until it takes any damage. A turned creature must spend its turns trying to move as far away from you as it can, and it can't willingly move to a space within 30 feet of you. It also can't take reactions. For its action, it can use only the Dash action or try to escape from an effect that prevents it from moving. If there's nowhere to move, the creature can use the Dodge action.

Destroy Undead (CR 3) Starting at 5th level, when an undead fails its saving throw against your Turn Undead feature, the creature is instantly destroyed if its challenge rating is at or below a certain threshold, as shown in the Destroy Undead table.

Disciple of Life Also starting at 1st level, your healing spells are more effective. Whenever you use a spell of 1st level or higher to restore hit points to a creature, the creature regains additional hit points equal to 2 + the spell's level.

Divine Domain Choose one domain related to your deity: Knowledge, Life, Light, Nature, Tempest, Trickery, or War. The Life domain is detailed at the end of the class description and provides examples of gods associated with it. See the Player's Handbook for details on all the domains. Your choice grants you domain spells and other features when you choose it at 1st level. It also grants you additional ways to use Channel Divinity when you gain that feature at 2nd level, and additional benefits at 6th, 8th, and 17th levels.

Divine Intervention Beginning at 10th level, you can call on your deity to intervene on your behalf when your need is great. Imploring your deity's aid requires you to use your action. Describe the assistance you seek, and roll percentile dice. If you roll a number equal to or lower than 16, then your deity intervenes. The DM chooses the nature of the intervention; the effect of any cleric spell or cleric domain spell would be appropriate. If your deity intervenes, you can't use this feature again for 7 days. Otherwise, you can use it again after you finish a long rest. At 20th level, your call for intervention succeeds automatically, no roll required.

Divine Strike At 8th level, you gain the ability to infuse your weapon strikes with divine energy. Once on each of your turns when you hit a creature with a weapon attack, you can cause the attack to deal an extra 2d8 radiant damage to the target.

Treasure

On his person, Cannock wears priestly garb (well-made but otherwise unremarkable) and bears a silver Holy Icon (15 gp). In his office is a +1 short sword and a masterwork dagger from his adventuring days. In his room is his +1 padded leather armor and a leather sack containing two potions of cure light wounds (CL4). If he is forewarned as to approaching danger—for example, if the PCs start rampaging around town—he will equip all of these items. After the Obelisk Eruption, he will typically wear all of this equipment during the day.

Habits and Logistics

During daylight hours, Cannock is always in BC-1: Zugul Church. He's either delivering or preparing for sermons, speaking with townsfolk, meeting with key NPCs, or otherwise going about the business of the church. On rare occasion (5%), he will instead be in the Cleric House, helping tend to a specific matter or encouraging his faithful.

At night, he can also be found in the Church, though typically he will be in the Undercroft, or in his room.

Background

The High Priest started his adventuring life as a CN rogue, which he tries to keep secret since it is somewhat in contrast to his law-abiding and clerical life. None in town knows of his past as or his lifestyle change from being an adventurer, a rogue, and/or a Chaotic Neutral person.

In the Obelisk Attack

Cannock is wounded in his church, and then, helping rescue wounded villagers in the square, he is ripped apart horribly by evil creatures. Mortally wounded, he is collected in the arms of Maghana; he dies never realizing she loved him.

Conversation

Tell me about your church.

"Our devotion to Zugul is paramount to everything we do here. Living in the word of the Lord of Order is of utmost importance, not only to our faith, but as a means of living at peace with our fellow man.”

▲ DC 14 Religion check:

☞ “While it’s true that followers of Zugul have a lawful approach to things, I must admit that the fervor of the faith infuses a certain zeal in some more impressionable followers. Part of the teachings of the church are to convert these feelings into useful action, lest they emerge in a less savory, and more combative, form.”

▲ DC 18 Religion check, or Sense Motive check opposed by Cannock’s Deception check:

☞ “I’ll admit that we in the church of Zugul have it good, compared to those in the temple across the way. Sheergath supporters are always at odds with our efforts, with our nature, truly—it’s really by definition, the difference between the two gods. I fear there may come a time when the difference in perspective culminates in something... less savory, more physical. I pray to Zugul that He might give us all strength enough to avoid such a catastrophe. And although my faith is solid, yet I fear it nevertheless.”

What do you think of Berinncorte?

☞ “It’s a splendid town. The people are some of the most deserving, hardest-working folk you’ll ever encounter. We are fortunate to have such a place of prominence, in such a place of importance.”

Caerthynna Tsornyl (Druid Merchant)

CR 2; Starting Attitude: 14 (Indifferent)

Description

Caerthynna is a pretty, aging elvish druid with a knack for salesmanship. She set up shop in Town Square, but travels quite frequently around the Realm, taking her wares with her as she does. Though an elf, and a druid, she nevertheless recognizes the need of most sentient races to enslave, destroy, and generally make occasionally-destructive use of nature and its resources, and so she wastes little time trying to change anyone's opinion, particularly in the context of trying to get them to make purchases.

Appearance

Long, straight reddish-brown hair frames a face considered cherubic for an elf. Her ears lack much of her race's typical pointiness, and she dresses in richly-embroidered or embossed armor.

Combat Tactics

Caerthynna will fight ferociously, but wisely, using magic as best she is able, and leveraging the support of the Militia by shouting loudly to call to them. In a severe or prolonged fight, she will call upon her fellow merchant druid Arbelladon Moonside for support.

Factions

Caerthynna owes no formal allegiance to a faction; while in the town, she pays her Tribute to Berinncorte City itself. In addition, she is strongly devoted to the druid sect to the north of Berinncorte, a region and faction which will be explored in more detail in future adventures in this Adventure Path.

☒ Special Abilities

Cantrip You know one cantrip of your choice from the wizard spell list. Intelligence is your spellcasting ability for it. Spell save DC 15; Spell attack modifier +7.

Darkvision Accustomed to twilight forests and the night sky, you have superior vision in dark and dim conditions. You can see in dim light within 60 feet of you as if it were bright light, and in darkness as if it were dim light. You can't discern color in darkness, only shades of gray.

Elf Weapon Training You have proficiency with the longsword, shortsword, shortbow, and longbow.

Extra Language You can speak, read, and write one extra language of your choice.

Fey Ancestry You have advantage on saving throws against being charmed, and magic can't put you to sleep.

Keen Senses You have proficiency in the Perception skill.

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common and Elvish. Elvish is fluid, with subtle intonations and intricate grammar. Elven literature is rich and varied, and their songs and poems are famous among other races. Many bards learn their language so they can add Elvish ballads to their repertoires.

Trance Elves don't need to sleep. Instead, they meditate deeply, remaining semiconscious, for 4 hours a day. (The Common word for such meditation is "trance.") While meditating, you can dream after a fashion; such dreams are actually mental exercises that have become reflexive through years of practice. After resting in this way, you gain the same benefit that a human does from 8 hours of sleep.

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 8th, 12th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.

Bonus Cantrip When you choose this circle at 2nd level, you learn one additional druid cantrip of your choice.

Cantrips At 1st level, you know two cantrips of your choice from the druid spell list. You learn additional druid cantrips of your choice at higher levels, as shown in the Cantrips Known column of the Druid table.

Circle Spells Your mystical connection to the land infuses you with the ability to cast certain spells. At 3rd, 5th, 7th, and 9th level you gain access to circle spells connected to the land where you became a druid. Choose that land—arctic, coast, desert, forest, grassland, mountain, swamp, or Underdark—and consult the associated list of spells. Once you gain access to a circle spell, you always have it prepared, and it doesn't count against the number of spells you can prepare each day. If you gain access to a spell that doesn't appear on the druid spell list, the spell is nonetheless a druid spell for you.

Druid Circle At 2nd level, you choose to identify with a circle of druids: the Circle of the Land or the Circle of the Moon, both detailed at the end of the class description. Your choice grants you features at 2nd level and again at 6th, 10th, and 14th level.

Druidic You know Druidic, the secret language of druids. You can speak the language and use it to leave hidden messages. You and others who know this language automatically spot such a message. Others spot the message's presence with a successful DC 15 Wisdom (Perception) check but can't decipher it without magic.

Land's Stride Starting at 6th level, moving through nonmagical difficult terrain costs you no extra movement. You can also pass through nonmagical plants without being slowed by them and without taking damage from them if they have thorns, spines, or a similar hazard. In addition, you have advantage on saving throws against plants that are magically created or manipulated to impede movement, such those created by the entangle spell.

Natural Recovery Starting at 2nd level, you can regain some of your magical energy by sitting in meditation and communing with nature. During a short rest, you choose expended spell slots to recover. The spell slots can have a combined level that is equal to or less than 7, and none of the slots can be 6th level or higher. You can't use this feature again until you finish a long rest. For example, when you are a 4th-level druid, you can recover up to two levels worth of spell slots. You can recover either a 2nd-level slot or two 1st-level slots.

Nature's Sanctuary When you reach 14th level, creatures of the natural world sense your connection to nature and become hesitant to attack you. When a beast or plant creature attacks you, that creature must make a Wisdom saving throw against your druid spell save DC: 18. On a failed save, the creature must choose a different target, or the attack automatically misses. On a successful save, the creature is immune to this effect for 24 hours. The creature is aware of this effect before it makes its attack against you.

Nature's Ward When you reach 10th level, you can't be charmed or frightened by elementals or fey, and you are immune to poison and disease.

Ritual Casting You can cast a druid spell as a ritual if that spell has the ritual tag and you have the spell prepared.

Spellcasting Drawing on the divine essence of nature itself, you can cast spells to shape that essence to your will. See chapter 10 for the general rules of spellcasting and chapter 11 for the druid spell list. Spell save DC 18; Spell attack modifier +10; Number of spells to prepare 19.

Spellcasting Focus You can use a druidic focus (found in chapter 5) as a spellcasting focus for your druid spells.

Wild Shape Starting at 2nd level, you can use your action to magically assume the shape of a beast that you have seen before. You can use this feature twice. You regain expended uses when you finish a short or long rest. Your druid level determines the beasts you can transform into. At 2nd level, for example, you can transform into any beast that has a challenge rating of 1/4 or lower that doesn't have a flying or swimming speed. You can stay in a beast shape for a number of hours equal to 7. You then revert to your normal form unless you expend another use of this feature. You can revert to your normal form earlier by using a bonus action on your turn. You automatically revert if you fall unconscious, drop to 0 hit points, or die. While you are transformed, the following rules apply: Your game statistics are replaced by the statistics of the beast, but you retain your alignment, personality, and Intelligence, Wisdom, and Charisma scores. You also retain all of your skill and saving throw proficiencies, in addition to gaining those of the creature. If the creature has the same proficiency as you and the bonus in its stat block is higher than yours, use the creature's bonus instead of yours. If the creature has any legendary or lair actions, you can't use them. When you transform, you assume the beast's hit points and Hit Dice. When you revert to your normal form, you return to the number of hit points you had before you transformed. However, if you revert as a result of dropping to 0 hit points, any excess damage carries over to your normal form. For example, if you take 10 damage in animal form and have only 1 hit point left, you revert and take 9 damage. As long as the excess damage doesn't reduce your normal form to 0 hit points, you aren't knocked unconscious. You can't cast spells, and your ability to speak or take any action that requires hands is limited to the capabilities of your beast form. Transforming doesn't break your concentration on a spell you've already cast, however, or prevent you from taking actions that are part of a spell, such as call lightning, that you've already cast. You retain the benefit of any features from your class, race, or other source and can use them if the new form is physically capable of doing so. However, you can't use any of your special senses, such as darkvision, unless your new form also has that sense. You choose whether your equipment falls to the ground in your space, merges into your new form, or is worn by it. Worn equipment functions as normal, but the DM decides whether it is practical for the new form to wear a piece of equipment, based on the creature's shape and size. Your equipment doesn't change size or shape to match the new form, and any equipment that the new form can't wear must either fall to the ground or merge with it. Equipment that merges with the form has no effect until you leave the form.

Circle of the Land The Circle of the Land is made up of mystics and sages who safeguard ancient knowledge and rites through a vast oral tradition. These druids meet within sacred circles of trees or standing stones to whisper primal secrets in Druidic. The circle's wisest members preside as the chief priests of communities that hold to the Old Faith and serve as advisors to the rulers of those folk. As a member of this circle, your magic is influenced by the land where you were initiated into the circle's mysterious rites.

Habits and Logistics

 During daylight hours, Caerthynna will be in her stall in Town Square, offering her services.

 At night, she will spend her evenings in the relative security of the Shanty Town area of Town Square.

Background

Caerthynna comes from a long line of elven druid nobility, going back several generations. Her family is well-respected in the druid sects to the north, and elsewhere in the Realm. Her decision to act as a traveling spy and merchant, exploring the world in a quite unorthodox manner, was received poorly by all, and has led to her being borderline-estranged from her parents, who still hold quite prominent roles within elven druidic society.

In the Obelisk Attack

Amidst the Eruption, Caerthynna thinks only of her family, and escapes Town Square, leaving everything behind.

Conversation

What do you think of Berinncorte?

 "Every town has its charm. I like this one for its mixture—rich and poor, powerful and weak, skilled and unskilled. All have use of nature, and its bounty, however."

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

 "It's somewhat silly, to be honest with you. Life is governed by a balance of both order and chaos, so to pretend or claim as though one should be the focus to the exclusion of the other is erratic at best. Consider nature: it abides by laws, such as plants requiring sunlight to grow. But within the context of those laws, which are required for life to occur, chaos rules—plants will grow if, when, and wherever they choose. Ask any gardener about the chaos of plants!"

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

 "She seems a fair sort, though in truth I've never spoken with her. From what folk say, and from the Militia's presence, there's safety, but I sympathize with those citizens who wonder at what cost."

Tell me about being a merchant.

 "Town Square's right in the center of things, here; it's unavoidable that you'll run into all manner of folk, doing business here. It's interesting, though not always stimulating, let's say that."

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

 "I hunt, I fish, I try to cultivate a garden or grove or two out there beyond the walls. I travel quite a lot, from town to town, you see, and so I put down no real roots to speak of anywhere."

Cora Brushgather (Farmer)

CR 1; Starting Attitude: 16 (Indifferent)

Description

A comely young halfling barely of adult age, Cora has yet to find her way in the world. She drifts from job to job, helping out where she can on farms, in shops, and generally struggling to make herself useful and support herself. She lives in the Lower-Class Residential District, but is trying to find a shop or farm that will take her in on a permanent basis.

Appearance

Diminutive even for a halfling, she has collar-length golden hair which she holds back in a bun. She dresses conservatively and typically wears a cloak, even when indoors. Cora has deep blue eyes and freckles across both forearms.

Combat Tactics

Cora has no combat training, and no desire to obtain any first-hand; she will flee immediately if faced with a fight and will seek out the nearest Militia Guard Post or authority figure. She is non-confrontational to a fault, and will try practically anything to avoid a fighting scenario.

Factions

Cora has no official affiliations with any faction. When faced with the need for Tribute by the authorities, she will simply give to the city itself, though she rarely volunteers this action as she hardly ever has a great deal of wealth.

📖 Special Abilities

Brave You have advantage on saving throws against being frightened.,

Halfling Nimbleness You can move through the space of any creature that is of a size larger than yours.,

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common and Halfling. The Halfling language isn't secret, but halflings are loath to share it with others. They write very little, so they don't have a rich body of literature. Their oral tradition, however, is very strong. Almost all halflings speak Common to converse with the people in whose lands they dwell or through which they are traveling.,

Lucky When you roll a 1 on an attack roll, ability check, or saving throw, you can reroll the die and must use the new roll.,

Naturally Stealthy You can attempt to hide even when you are obscured only by a creature that is at least one size larger than you.,

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 6th, 8th, 12th, 14th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.,

Action Surge Starting at 2nd level, you can push yourself beyond your normal limits for a moment. On your turn, you can take one additional action on top of your regular action and a possible bonus action. Once you use this feature, you must finish a short or long rest before you can use it again. You can use this feature 1 time(s) before a rest, but only once on the same turn.,

Additional Fighting Style At 10th level, you can choose a second option from the Fighting Style class feature.,

Champion The archetypal Champion focuses on the development of raw physical power honed to deadly perfection. Those who model themselves on this archetype combine rigorous training with physical excellence to deal devastating blows.,

Extra Attack Beginning at 5th level, you can attack twice, instead of once, whenever you take the Attack action on your turn. The number of attacks increases to three when you reach 11th level in this class and to four when you reach 20th level in this class.,

Fighting Style You adopt a particular style of fighting as your specialty. Choose one of the following options. You can't take a Fighting Style option more than once, even if you later get to choose again.,

Improved Critical Beginning when you choose this archetype at 3rd level, your weapon attacks score a critical hit on a roll of 19 or 20.,

Indomitable Beginning at 9th level, you can reroll a saving throw that you fail. If you do so, you must use the new roll, and you can't use this feature again until you finish a long rest. You can use this feature 1 time(s) between long rests.,

Martial Archetype At 3rd level, you choose an archetype that you strive to emulate in your combat styles and techniques. The Champion archetype is detailed at the end of the class description; see the Player's Handbook for information on other martial archetypes. Your archetype grants you features at 3rd level and again at 7th, 10th, 15th, and 18th level.,

Remarkable Athlete Starting at 7th level, you can add half your proficiency bonus (round up) to any Strength, Dexterity, or Constitution check you make that doesn't already use your proficiency bonus. In addition, when you make a running long jump, the distance you can cover increases by a number of feet equal to +1.,

Second Wind You have a limited well of stamina that you can draw on to protect yourself from harm. On your turn, you can use a bonus action to regain hit points equal to 1d10 + your fighter level. Once you use this feature, you must finish a short or long rest before you can use it again.,

Defense While you are wearing armor, you gain a +1 bonus to AC.,

Protection When a creature you can see attacks a target other than you that is within 5 feet of you, you can use your reaction to impose disadvantage on the attack roll. You must be wielding a shield.

Habits and Logistics

☀ During daylight hours, Cora will be out and about, finding work where she can. The GM is encouraged to "place" her in any random shop if the party has not encountered her otherwise via a specific quest.

🌙 At night, Cora is similarly aimless, often trying to find a party or a banquet meal of which she can partake without paying. She's often to be found in the Tavern, though she's aware that an attractive young woman on her own is not always safest in such an establishment. When at the tavern, she never drinks to excess, and always tries to keep her wits about her.

Background

Cora grew up on a farm not far outside of the city. Her parents passed away a few years ago; though she tried to keep the farm going, she's not meant for such work, at least not on her own. With little other options, she left the farm to seek out a more successful life in the city; the farm with its meager shack of a farmhouse still sits, a few hours' walk away from the city, forgotten and moldering.

Despite her humble upbringing and the borderline-poverty of her current circumstances, Cora is far from stupid, and secretly longs for an opportunity to be of use in the Library.

In the Obelisk Attack

Cora survives the attack, and thrives. She had just been entering the Library when the Obelisk Eruption took place; when Gunnloda Balderk dies in the attack, Cora steps in, makes herself useful, and soon takes over the position and the general day-to-day running of the establishment.

Though the circumstances are truly horrible, she couldn't be happier with the change in her personal lifestyle.

Daratis (Seamstress)

CR 1/2; XP 200; Starting Attitude: 14 (Indifferent)

Description

Daratis does a fine job serving the city's clothing and textiles needs. She and her husband Otibus work together and alone at the shop. She and her husband tan hides in her farmhouse outside of town; in-town, she does the majority of clothing and non-metal armor manufacture and repair.

Appearance

A middle-aged gnome with a heart of gold, Daratis gets in trouble with her husband from time to time for being too generous. He keeps the books and manages the money, and when his well-meaning wife gives away clothing and supplies to needy or impoverished patrons, it enrages him to no end. At the end of the day, the gray-haired, dimpled, and wart-nosed seamstress has a warm place in nearly everyone's hearts; to a person, she reminds them of a grandmother or distant relation.

Combat Tactics

The seamstress will avoid conflict at all costs, though she will gruffly ask you to leave if you cause trouble in her shop, or threaten innocents or her husband. The only scenario in which she will willingly fight to the death is if her husband is imperiled; outside of that, she will flee immediately and seek the authorities, running to the Garrison/Barracks or the nearest Militia Guard Post.

Factions

Daratis has several times been approached by members of various textiles, clothing, fashion, and materials guilds, but has turned all of them away, not unkindly. She just has all the business she can handle right now, as she is, and would rather avoid additional fuss and bother.

She is a devout follower of Zugul.

Special Abilities

- Artificer's Lore Whenever you make a History check related to magic items, alchemical objects, or technological devices, you can add twice your proficiency bonus (8), instead of any proficiency bonus you normally apply.
- Darkvision Accustomed to life underground, you have superior vision in dark and dim conditions. You can see in dim light within 60 feet of you as if it were bright light, and in darkness as if it were dim light. You can't discern color in darkness, only shades of gray.
- Gnome Cunning You have advantage on all Intelligence, Wisdom, and Charisma saving throws against magic.
- Languages You can speak, read, and write Common and Gnomish. The Gnomish language, which uses the Dwarvish script, is renowned for its technical treatises and its catalogs of knowledge about the natural world.
- Tinker You have proficiency with tinker's tools. Using those tools, you can spend 1 hour and 10 gp worth of materials to construct a Tiny clockwork device (AC 5, 1 hp). The device ceases to function after 24 hours. (unless you spend 1 hour repairing it to keep the device functioning), or when you use your action to dismantle it; at that time, you can reclaim the materials used to create it. You can have up to three such devices active at a time. When you create a device, choose one of the following options: Clockwork Toy: This toy is a clockwork animal or person, such as a frog, mouse, bird, or soldier. When placed on the ground, the toy moves 5 feet across the ground on each of your turns in a random direction. It makes noises as appropriate to the creature it represents. Fire Starter: The device produces a miniature flame, which you can use to light something like a candle, torch, or campfire. Using the device requires your action. Music Box: When opened, this music box plays a single song at a moderate volume. The box stops playing when it reaches the song's end or when it is closed.
- Tinker's Tools Proficient with Artisan Tinker's Tools.
- Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 6th, 8th, 12th, 14th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.
- Action Surge Starting at 2nd level, you can push yourself beyond your normal limits for a moment. On your turn, you can take one additional action on top of your regular action and a possible bonus action. Once you use this feature, you must finish a short or long rest before you can use it again. You can use this feature 1 time(s) before a rest, but only once on the same turn.
- Additional Fighting Style At 10th level, you can choose a second option from the Fighting Style class feature.
- Champion The archetypal Champion focuses on the development of raw

- physical power honed to deadly perfection. Those who model themselves on this archetype combine rigorous training with physical excellence to deal devastating blows.
 - Extra Attack Beginning at 5th level, you can attack twice, instead of once, whenever you take the Attack action on your turn. The number of attacks increases to three when you reach 11th level in this class and to four when you reach 20th level in this class.
 - Fighting Style You adopt a particular style of fighting as your specialty. Choose one of the following options. You can't take a Fighting Style option more than once, even if you later get to choose again.
 - Improved Critical Beginning when you choose this archetype at 3rd level, your weapon attacks score a critical hit on a roll of 19 or 20.
 - Indomitable Beginning at 9th level, you can reroll a saving throw that you fail. If you do so, you must use the new roll, and you can't use this feature again until you finish a long rest. You can use this feature 1 time(s) between long rests.
 - Martial Archetype At 3rd level, you choose an archetype that you strive to emulate in your combat styles and techniques. The Champion archetype is detailed at the end of the class description; see the Player's Handbook for information on other martial archetypes. Your archetype grants you features at 3rd level and again at 7th, 10th, 15th, and 18th level.
 - Remarkable Athlete Starting at 7th level, you can add half your proficiency bonus (round up) to any Strength, Dexterity, or Constitution check you make that doesn't already use your proficiency bonus. In addition, when you make a running long jump, the distance you can cover increases by a number of feet equal to +1.
 - Second Wind You have a limited well of stamina that you can draw on to protect yourself from harm. On your turn, you can use a bonus action to regain hit points equal to 1d10 + your fighter level. Once you use this feature, you must finish a short or long rest before you can use it again.
 - Defense While you are wearing armor, you gain a +1 bonus to AC.
 - Protection When a creature you can see attacks a target other than you that is within 5 feet of you, you can use your reaction to impose disadvantage on the attack roll. You must be wielding a shield.
- ### Habits and Logistics
- During daylight hours, Daratis can be found in the front of her shop, tending to business. On rare occasion (5%), she will be in the Town Square, purchasing supplies or bartering her wares.

🗨️ At night, Daratis will always be in her shop, usually finishing the day's work or sleeping.

📖 Background

Daratis and her husband moved to Berinncorte over twenty years ago, taking over the textiles shop from its previous owner, a merchant who had been a good trader but a horrible clothes-maker. The merchant died a few months prior to their arrival, and so the town was eager for a replacement; Daratis claims to this day that the gods themselves smiled upon them with fortune, that such a coincidence should occur.

She is otherwise exactly what she appears, though she always did want to be an adventurer, a factoid she will volunteer with almost no prodding when she converses a group of adventurers just starting their careers. She attends the Zugul Church constantly, and wishes they would go farther in their preaching and public acts; if she has a "secret", it's that she would prefer the church take over the Mayor's house.

Daratis also wishes Otibus would come to church more often; he grudgingly goes a few times a month; more if he's in a good mood.

🗨️ In the Obelisk Attack

Regrettably, the seamstress is in the Town Square when the Obelisk Erupts, and is slain instantly by the obelisk itself. Her husband, stricken, takes over the shop, applying what comparatively meager skill he has learnt from his wife in sober memorial to her skill.

🗨️ Conversation

What do you think of Berinncorte?

🗨️ "Oh, it's just such a lovely place! So lucky, we are, that we ended up here, right Otibus? Ah, he can't hear us anyway; always has his head in the books, he does."

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

🗨️ "The only strife I'd say is justified is the color scheme that temple has. Ghastly, you ask me; they could do far better, but I suppose it's not up to them, so much as the gods, is it? Sheergath must have quite the power in other ways, to have gone with such a horrid palette for her sigil!"

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

🗨️ "Symms does a good job, and I like her. Though you would think a women of her stature, of her position, would want more in the way of fancy ball gowns and the like. I hardly ever see the Mayor in our shop, and then only to mend an existing item; I can't for the life of me picture why she doesn't get dolled up from time to time. I mean, we're basically paupers, we are, and I still like the odd bit of sparkle, don't I, dear? Otibus? Ah, he's going deaf, I swear it."

Tell me about being a seamstress.

🗨️ "You know, those fancy-pants guilds would have you use the fancy-pants expression 'textile artisan', but me, that's just hogwash. I make clothes, so I do, and at the risk of tooting my own trumpet, I'm not all that bad at it, I'll have you know. It's fine work, it is, and a glorious thing to know most everyone in town is walking around all gussied up in something you yourself made them."

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

🗨️ "Like what, do you mean? Drugs? Potions? You'll want to see Aramil about that. I don't go in for that creepy stuff, and besides, we've all the work we can handle as it is, isn't that right, love? Love? Lovely-toot? Ah, he's all but clumped-up in the ears, is my dear Otibus."

(If any party member has a non-metal garment worth more than 500 gp):

🗨️ "Ah! Come here a sec, would you, dearie? I'd love to see that up close. Not you; the thing what is you're wearing! Let me see." Assuming the PC allows her to get close and take a look, or if the PC takes the garment off and shows her: "Whew, but that is fine!" Daratis immediately increases her Attitude toward the party to Helpful if they let her take a look.

Debran Ormrick (Militia Treasurer)

CR 4; Starting Attitude: 14 (Indifferent)

Description

Debran is the treasurer of the Berinncorte Militia. He controls the purse strings of the town's security forces... and, to an increasing degree, the city itself. Well-liked and respected in both the Militia as well as the government, Debran has used his influence and power to skim quite a bit of money from the coffers of both establishments over the past ten years.

His profit-skimming is well-hidden. At the GM's option, the PCs would require full and prolonged access to all financial records. Each day during which a PC studies the records, they may make an opposed A skill check: the PC's raw Intelligence, Profession (Soldier), or Knowledge (Local) opposed by Debran's Profession (Soldier) skill. Success on a given day means progress has been made, but the PC must continue studying. Three successively successful skill checks in this manner are required to gain a hunch as to how the money has been taken; five wins are needed to identify firm proof. Debran's focused and labyrinthine manipulations are such that any failed skill check along the way will "reset" the count of wins, and the PC will have to start all over again.

It should be noted that nobody in either the Militia or the town government suspects any wrongdoing whatsoever—the finances have been handled impeccably well under Debran's watch, and neither organization feels as though they have ever wanted for resources, so there is little cause for suspicion.

Appearance

At first glance, Debran may not seem a soldier: he's more charismatic and nimble than brutish, and he looks like he could barely hold a sword. He may not even seem tiefling, either: his hat of Charisma (Deception) is used to appear as a human; without it, he still appears mostly human, apart from the cloven hooves and red skin of his race. He tends to opt out of the uniform of his office, preferring instead to dress conservatively, but fastidiously, aside from a large garnet amulet he keeps enchanted to seem like a powerful magic item—in game terms, the jewelry confers no mechanical benefit.

Combat Tactics

Debran's goals are of the long-viewed sort; despite his membership in the militia, he does not enjoy armed conflict and will avoid it at all costs.

No physical combatant, Debran will seek to avoid melee to the extent possible. He will try to use his enchantment spells to either avoid conflict altogether, escape, or subdue the most powerful adversaries he faces. If confronted on his own, he will attempt to flee; if escape seems impossible, he will attempt to enchant or disable the most melee-prone enemies and then focus ranged attacks on ranged enemies.

If attacked in the presence of fellow Militia members, close by a Guard Post, or within running distance of the Garrison/Barracks, he will scream for help, typically enlisting the impromptu involvement of 2d6+2 Berinncorte Militia. As treasurer, he is well-known to all militia members, and although some may snicker at his arcane preferences and poke fun at his lack of martial prowess, they will immediately put aside such chicanery in the defense of a threatened comrade.

Factions

Berinncorte Militia, as its treasurer.

Secretly, also a member of another faction with influence and presence outside Berinncorte, beyond the scope of this adventure.

📖 Special Abilities

Darkvision Thanks to your infernal heritage, you have superior vision in dark and dim conditions. You can see in dim light within 60 feet of you as if it were bright light, and in darkness as if it were dim light. You can't discern color in darkness, only shades of gray.

Hellish Resistance You have resistance to fire damage.

Infernal Legacy You know the thaumaturgy cantrip. Once you reach 3rd level, you can cast the hellish rebuke spell once per day as a 2nd-level spell. Once you reach 5th level, you can also cast the darkness spell once per day. Charisma is your spellcasting ability for these spells. Spell save DC 17.

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common and Infernal.

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 6th, 8th, 12th, 14th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.

Action Surge Starting at 2nd level, you can push yourself beyond your normal limits for a moment. On your turn, you can take one additional action on top of your regular action and a possible bonus action. Once you use this feature, you must finish a short or long rest before you can use it again. You can use this feature 1 time(s) before a rest, but only once on the same turn.,

Additional Fighting Style At 10th level, you can choose a second option from the Fighting Style class feature.,

Champion The archetypal Champion focuses on the development of raw physical power honed to deadly perfection. Those who model themselves on this archetype combine rigorous training with physical excellence to deal devastating blows.,

Extra Attack Beginning at 5th level, you can attack twice, instead of once, whenever you take the Attack action on your turn. The number of attacks increases to three when you reach 11th level in this class and to four when you reach 20th level in this class.,

Fighting Style You adopt a particular style of fighting as your specialty. Choose one of the following options. You can't take a Fighting Style option more than once, even if you later get to choose again.,

Improved Critical Beginning when you choose this archetype at 3rd level, your weapon attacks score a critical hit on a roll of 19 or 20.,

Indomitable Beginning at 9th level, you can reroll a saving throw that you fail. If you do so, you must use the new roll, and you can't use this feature again until you finish a long rest. You can use this feature 2 time(s) between long rests.,

Martial Archetype At 3rd level, you choose an archetype that you strive to emulate in your combat styles and techniques. The Champion archetype is detailed at the end of the class description; see the Player's Handbook for information on other martial archetypes. Your archetype grants you features at 3rd level and again at 7th, 10th, 15th, and 18th level.,

Remarkable Athlete Starting at 7th level, you can add half your proficiency bonus (round up) to any Strength, Dexterity, or Constitution check you make that doesn't already use your proficiency bonus. In addition, when you make a running long jump, the distance you can cover increases by a number of feet equal to +1.,

Second Wind You have a limited well of stamina that you can draw on to protect yourself from harm. On your turn, you can use a bonus action to regain hit points equal to 1d10 + your fighter level. Once you use this feature, you must finish a short or long rest before you can use it again.,

Superior Critical Starting at 15th level, your weapon attacks score a critical hit on a roll of 18-20.,

Defense While you are wearing armor, you gain a +1 bonus to AC.,

Great Weapon Fighting When you roll a 1 or 2 on a damage die for an attack you make with a melee weapon that you are wielding with two hands, you can reroll the die and must use the new roll, even if the new roll is a 1 or a 2. The weapon must have the two-handed or versatile property for you to gain this benefit.,

Habits and Logistics

 During daylight hours, Debran will likely be somewhere in the  Garrison/Barracks, tending to business and duties. Most of his duties involve bookkeeping, but occasionally he will consult with others in the Militia, discussing materials needs with the armsmaster, for example. Some  15% of his time is spent at the  Town Square, shopping for supplies.

 At night, the tiefling typically hits the Tavern, or stays in to finish work before the next day. Like most in the Militia, he sleeps in common quarters in the Barracks.

Background

Debran's gifted skimming is to a higher, or at least greater, purpose: a brothel of growing repute in a town a few day's ride from Berinncorte.

Though this establishment—and the town in which it sits—are beyond the scope of this adventure, the GM may wish to note that despite its tradecraft, the brothel is a well-intentioned establishment that treats its employees well, giving them training in skills beyond the realm of their immediate purpose. The tiefling's involvement is to help things improve, both for the brothel, its employees, and its city.

In the Obelisk Attack

Debran survives the attack unscathed. His background and nature make him well-suited to the sudden attack, and although he tends to be a better bookkeeper and politician than combatant, he is of great assistance during the fighting that emerges after the Obelisk Eruption.

Conversation

What do you think of Berinncorte?

 "A fine city, with, of course, a robust and effective militia."

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

 "Between law and chaos? Or between these two churches? Or the buildings? Or do you mean between Cannock and Larissa? Because those are all quite separate questions, I'm afraid. Ultimately, no matter which of those you think you mean, you're really asking about law versus chaos. And although I have my own views on the matter, to be sure, I'm not so certain that's why you're asking. I don't think the matter will be resolved in our time... but what plays out in Berinncorte may signal a broader change in the realm. Who can say?"

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

 "She likes law and order, so she keeps us employed. But the general populace, I'm not so sure they do like law and order, so we're not just employed, we're busy. Hey, there are worse lives."

Tell me about being treasurer.

 "It's about what you'd expect—facts and figures, numbers, that sort of thing. I'm no stranger to magic, but I've yet to find the spell that makes it any easier. Maybe a read magic spell? Hm, maybe that would help with accounting. I'm joking, but now that I say that aloud, I might even try it later. With me in the books and everyone else out there on the streets actually doing real work, you can imagine how rarely I get to cast spells!"

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

 "What an interesting question. It's even more interesting that you're asking it of a member of the town Militia. You know, I've been in some towns where merely asking that sort of question of the wrong people could get you arrested." He laughs heartily. "Though not here, of course."

Denzys (Preacher of Sheergath)

CR 4; Starting Attitude: 14 (Indifferent)

Description

He and Larissa the Elder maintain a loose flock of between 10-50 brethren, depending on how things are going: in a bad economy, his numbers surge. Things are fairly good now, but even small numbers of his disciples rankle at the perceived order and lawfulness of the town. In particular, Mayor Symms and her perfectionist approach to running the town irritate the Preacher; he views her and the High Priest as being in cahoots... and if pressed, insinuates that he believes the two to be having an affair.

Appearance

A grim man with little smile, his face seems persistently caught mid-smirk, as though Denzys has just now figured out a way to get the better of you... a secret that he plans to lord over you in ways that work to his will. He's a fine orator, and a motivational leader, but only to those whose predilections already lean toward his faith and its aims. With a bit of early-onset male-pattern baldness, he's chosen to shave his head entirely, save for a bit of scruff around each ear—this makes him seem both older than he actually is, and (because it suits his head shape ill) less wise as a result.

Combat Tactics

Denzys is willing to fight, and at times, feels like he's itching for one. But when faced with an option, he'll tend to Charisma (Deception), sabre-rattling as a means of intimidation, but ultimately keeping his weapon sheathed in favor of a more diplomatic solution. Defense of his church, innocents, or of anyone else, doesn't really motivate him from a life-and-death standpoint... save for Mayor Symms, whom he will defend to the death if circumstances present themselves that way. He's gruff bravado, with little actual hands-on experience to back it up.

Factions

Sheergath Temple, as its main Preacher, and effectively its second-in-command behind Larissa.

Over the years, he's been tempted toward more nefarious groups, but has sworn allegiance to none of them.

Special Abilities

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common and one extra language of your choice. Humans typically learn the languages of other peoples they deal with, including obscure dialects. They are fond of sprinkling their speech with words borrowed from other tongues: Orc curses, Elvish musical expressions, Dwarvish military phrases, and so on.,

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 8th, 12th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.,

Blessed Healer Beginning at 6th level, the healing spells you cast on others heal you as well. When you cast a spell of 1st level or higher that restores hit points to a creature other than you, you regain hit points equal to 2 + the spell's level.,

Bonus Proficiency When you choose this domain at 1st level, you gain proficiency with heavy armor.,

Cantrips At 1st level, you know three cantrips of your choice from the cleric spell list. You learn additional cleric cantrips of your choice at higher levels, as shown in the Cantrips Known column of the Cleric table.,

Channel Divinity At 2nd level, you gain the ability to channel divine energy directly from your deity, using that energy to fuel magical effects. You start with two such effects: Turn Undead and an effect determined by your domain. Some domains grant you additional effects as you advance in levels, as noted in the domain description. When you use your Channel Divinity, you choose which effect to create. You must then finish a short or long rest to use your Channel Divinity again. Some Channel Divinity effects require saving throws. When you use such an effect from this class, the DC equals your cleric spell save DC. You can use your Channel Divinity 2 times between rests. When you finish a short or long rest, you regain your expended uses.,

Channel Divinity: Preserve Life Starting at 2nd level, you can use your Channel Divinity to heal the badly injured. As an action, you present your holy symbol and evoke healing energy that can restore a number of hit points equal to 80. Choose any creatures within 30 feet of you, and divide those hit points among them. This feature can restore a creature to no more than half of its hit point maximum. You can't use this feature on an undead or a construct.,

Channel Divinity: Turn Undead As an action, you present your holy symbol and speak a prayer censuring the undead. Each undead that can see or hear you within 30 feet of you must make a Wisdom saving throw. If the creature fails its saving throw, it is turned for 1 minute or until it takes any damage. A turned creature must spend its turns trying to move as far away from you as it can, and it can't willingly move to a space within 30 feet of you. It also can't take reactions. For its action, it can use only the Dash action or try to escape from an effect that prevents it from moving. If there's nowhere to move, the creature can use the Dodge action.,

Destroy Undead (CR 3) Starting at 5th level, when an undead fails its saving throw against your Turn Undead feature, the creature is instantly destroyed if its challenge rating is at or below a certain threshold, as shown in the Destroy Undead table.,

Disciple of Life Also starting at 1st level, your healing spells are more effective. Whenever you use a spell of 1st level or higher to restore hit points to a creature, the creature regains additional hit points equal to 2 + the spell's level.,

Divine Domain Choose one domain related to your deity: Knowledge, Life, Light, Nature, Tempest, Trickery, or War. The Life domain is detailed at the end of the class description and provides examples of gods associated with it. See the Player's Handbook for details on all the domains. Your choice grants you domain spells and other features when you choose it at 1st level. It also grants you additional ways to use Channel Divinity when you gain that feature at 2nd level, and additional benefits at 6th, 8th, and 17th levels.,

Divine Intervention Beginning at 10th level, you can call on your deity to intervene on your behalf when your need is great. Imploring your deity's aid requires you to use your action. Describe the assistance you seek, and roll percentile dice. If you roll a number equal to or lower than 16, then your deity intervenes. The DM chooses the nature of the intervention; the effect of any cleric spell or cleric domain spell would be appropriate. If your deity intervenes, you can't use this feature again for 7 days. Otherwise, you can use it again after you finish a long rest. At 20th level, your call for intervention succeeds automatically, no roll required.,

Divine Strike At 8th level, you gain the ability to infuse your weapon strikes with divine energy. Once on each of your turns when you hit a creature with a weapon attack, you can cause the attack to deal an extra 2d8 radiant damage to the target.,)

Habits and Logistics

During daylight hours, Denzys will be in the Sheergath Temple, tending to the business of the church or conferring with Larissa and/or Unglar.

At night, Denzys moves about quite a bit: he might (30%) be at the Tavern; he may (30%) be at the Gardens; and he may instead (40%) be at the Sheergath Temple finishing his work.

Background

In truth, he himself is attracted to the Mayor, though this inclination is not reciprocated. As children, he propositioned her, and she gave him the "let's just be friends" response.

Although certainly not the sole reason he is Chaotic Neutral today, it certainly steered him on that course.

In the Obelisk Attack

Completely unharmed in the attack, as is his entire building and anyone in attendance. He laments the death of the Mayor, but sees it as a sign that his God disliked the order that was imposed, and supports he and his followers in their endeavors. His fervor doubles after the attack

Conversation

What do you think of Berinncorte?

“Wicked little town. Seems quite orderly, right? But under the surface... there’s all manner of man, seething and itching to cause trouble. It’s the natural order of things, this chaos... but the oppressive rule of law makes it worse, stifles it, bottles it up, until it just comes out anyway. And far worse, than if folk were simply let to be as they so clearly are.”

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

“Why, yes, I do know a bit about that, seeing as how I’m one-half of the problem, right? In truth, I’d lay the dragon’s share of the blame on the goodly folks across the square; Zugul’s got too much pull with the Mayor by half, and it’s not for the better. You take your average man or woman on the street, a farmer, a butcher, anyone, and they’ll be fine with not getting robbed, that’s true... but they’ll rankle at the rule of law as Symms makes it.”

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

“She’s...well, I’m not one for snide words at the expense of another. But she’s not got her head on straight about the town, and she over-uses the Militia like it’s her little toy for keeping folk in line. You ask me... well, I’ve said too much already.”

Diplomacy or Sense Motive check at DC 14:

“If I’m to be honest with you, I’ve been thinking there’s a fairly straightforward explanation for the favor Symms gives the Militia... she might be having an affair with their master Tansden. But hey, I’ve no evidence of that. Seems possible, though; see the way she looks at him.”

Tell me about being a preacher.

“Ah, it’s glorious, preaching true words to receptive folk. Nothing quite so glorious as speaking truth to the masses, and I’m damned good at it, which just makes it better. Plus, no bad thing working with someone like Larissa, right? Wow.”

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

“I’ve no time! And though I’ve plenty of inclination to pick up some work on the side, you know I’ve a quite impressive set of skills, there’s just no need—I get all the satisfaction I require just by preaching the word of Sheergath.”

A PC of a Chaotic alignment, making a Diplomacy check at DC 20:

“I’d never use the word ‘revolution’, you understand—that’s a loaded term, and one likely to get you in trouble. But I’d be surprised if nothing changes in this town, sometime soon. There’s just too much oppression, too little understanding, and too little regard for the common man in this city. Something’s going to happen, that much I’m sure of.”

Dimblegruffe (Blacksmith)

CR 1; XP 400; Starting Attitude: 14 (Indifferent)

Description

Berinncorte's resident blacksmith is a dwarf of no mean skill, who plies her trade day and night. Adventurers, common folk in need of tools, and of course the town Militia—Dimblegruffe serves all comers, and her work is renowned even outside the city's immediate area.

Appearance

She's got greasy dimples and is gruff—which is pretty much how she got her name. With a bit of a misspelling when her parents logged her name in her home village's records; her mother told Dimblegruffe it was a smudge, from tears at how beautiful Dimblegruffe was. In truth, it was drops of ale from her father's beard, having celebrated the birth a bit too much the night before.

Combat Tactics

Dimblegruffe will only attack if threatened or provoked, or to save her blacksmith's store. She will typically fight to the death, but given her proximity to the Town Square, will sensibly shout for help from other townsfolk and militia while doing so. If defending her blacksmith's store during daylight hours, her shouts have a 75% chance each round of summoning 1d4+1 Berrincorte Militia to her aid; decrease this to 40% if she is attacked during evening hours. Stop making this check once one group of Militia are summoned in this manner.

Factions

She's technically a member of the Order Mechanique, but hasn't attended a meeting or contributed tribute to them for a few years. They don't really call her on it, primarily because Berinncorte is low-tech and low-magic and therefore judged to be a bit out of the epicenter of things.

📖 Special Abilities

Darkvision Accustomed to life underground, you have superior vision in dark and dim conditions. You can see in dim light within 60 feet of you as if it were bright light, and in darkness as if it were dim light. You can't discern color in darkness, only shades of gray.

Dwarven Combat Training You have proficiency with the battleaxe, handaxe, light hammer, and warhammer.

Dwarven Resilience You have advantage on saving throws against poison, and you have resistance against poison damage (explained in chapter 9).

Dwarven Toughness Your hit point maximum increases by 1, and it increases by 1 every time you gain a level.

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common and Dwarvish. Dwarvish is full of hard consonants and guttural sounds, and those characteristics spill over into whatever other language a dwarf might speak.

Smith's Tools Proficient with Artisan Smith's Tools.

Stonecunning Whenever you make an Intelligence (History) check related to the origin of stonework, you are considered proficient in the History skill and add double your proficiency bonus to the check, instead of your normal proficiency bonus.

Tool Proficiency You gain proficiency with the artisan's tools of your choice: smith's tools, brewer's supplies, or mason's tools.

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 6th, 8th, 12th, 14th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.

Action Surge Starting at 2nd level, you can push yourself beyond your normal limits for a moment. On your turn, you can take one additional action on top of your regular action and a possible bonus action. Once you use this feature, you must finish a short or long rest before you can use it again. You can use this feature 1 time(s) before a rest, but only once on the same turn.

Additional Fighting Style At 10th level, you can choose a second option from the Fighting Style class feature.,

Champion The archetypal Champion focuses on the development of raw physical power honed to deadly perfection. Those who model themselves on this archetype combine rigorous training with physical excellence to deal devastating blows.,

Extra Attack Beginning at 5th level, you can attack twice, instead of once, whenever you take the Attack action on your turn. The number of attacks increases to three when you reach 11th level in this class and to four when you reach 20th level in this class.,

Fighting Style You adopt a particular style of fighting as your specialty. Choose one of the following options. You can't take a Fighting Style option more than once, even if you later get to choose again.,

Improved Critical Beginning when you choose this archetype at 3rd level, your weapon attacks score a critical hit on a roll of 19 or 20.,

Indomitable Beginning at 9th level, you can reroll a saving throw that you fail. If you do so, you must use the new roll, and you can't use this feature again until you finish a long rest. You can use this feature 2 time(s) between long rests.,

Martial Archetype At 3rd level, you choose an archetype that you strive to emulate in your combat styles and techniques. The Champion archetype is detailed at the end of the class description; see the Player's Handbook for information on other martial archetypes. Your archetype grants you features at 3rd level and again at 7th, 10th, 15th, and 18th level.,

Remarkable Athlete Starting at 7th level, you can add half your proficiency bonus (round up) to any Strength, Dexterity, or Constitution check you make that doesn't already use your proficiency bonus. In addition, when you make a running long jump, the distance you can cover increases by a number of feet equal to +5.,

Second Wind You have a limited well of stamina that you can draw on to protect yourself from harm. On your turn, you can use a bonus action to regain hit points equal to 1d10 + your fighter level. Once you use this feature, you must finish a short or long rest before you can use it again.,

Dueling When you are wielding a melee weapon in one hand and no other weapons, you gain a +2 bonus to damage rolls with that weapon.,

Great Weapon Fighting When you roll a 1 or 2 on a damage die for an attack you make with a melee weapon that you are wielding with two hands, you can reroll the die and must use the new roll, even if the new roll is a 1 or a 2. The weapon must have the two-handed or versatile property for you to gain this benefit.,

Treasure

In addition to the gear and gold described above, note that as the sole proprietress of her shop, if Dimblegruffe is slain, the offending party will have complete access to her wares.

Habits and Logistics

During daylight hours, Dimblegruffe will be in her shop, working. She rarely goes inside her building except to fetch supplies; products completed that day stay out on her workbench until nightfall, both as an example of her craft and so she can perform a quick visual tally of work finished.

At night, the blacksmith will retire to her personal quarters. Occasionally (15%), she will have a drink or two at the Tavern before retiring for the night.

Background

A fighter by nature, she longs to go back to the life of adventuring she gave up to have a more stable, sensible income. The longer she stays at her current task, however, the more she realizes the delight in the profession, and although "delight" is hardly a word that most would use to describe her demeanor, she takes quiet joy in the execution of her job.

In the Obelisk Attack

Dimblegruffe is at her forge when the Obelisk Eruption occurs. Debris is flung into her face, which leaves her blind in the left eye; she nevertheless picks up some weapons and joins the fray, defending townsfolk against the onslaught of chaotic and undead forces.

Conversation

What do you think of Berinncorte?

"It's fine. It's got lots of people who need tools. Only some want weapons and armor, and fewer still need them. But I can't complain. Business is good. I've a great view of the Square from here."

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

"Don't really care. Religious zealots are only useful to a woman in my profession when they take up arms against one another... don't think they're there yet, but if they get there, want to guess who'll provision them for it? Both sides. I'm neutral. Equally profitable. Though Zugul folks tend to have more gold, they also tend to be jerks."

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

"Symms is fine. 'Trust' is a strong word, but I've seen far worse in positions of power."

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

"Stranger, I've got more work than I can handle. See any other smiths in town? No? Well, then, that means I've all the metal-working business of the whole city, now don't it?"

Diplomacy or Sense Motive check at DC 18 with either of the above two questions:

"Symms and I, we've an agreement. If business is slow, I still produce—and it all goes to her. Stockpiling arms and armor and tools and equipment. She'll buy anything I can make, and she'll buy as much as I can get her. Don't know what she's doing with it. But her coin is good, and even so, she seems a decent sort."

Tell me about being a blacksmith.

"Hammer, forge, bend, sand, polish, sheath, sell. It's repetitive work, but never dull." The dwarf offers a rare smile, barely a hint of upturned corners of her mouth. "Get it?"

Dominika Symms (Mayor of Berinncorte)

CR 6; Starting Attitude: 14 (Indifferent)

Description

A former adventurer, Mayor Symms only leads Berinncorte because nobody else will... and her prickly approach to things demands perfection. She's concerned about the state of the lower-class residential neighborhoods; if asked about the church disputes she shrugs and claims it's an ecclesiastical issue that she wants no part of and has no role in.

Appearance

Symms is a tall, imposing woman, lithe and powerful. She has shoulder-length straight black hair and is missing her left earlobe; her businesslike demeanor and position of power have meant that it's incredibly rare for anyone to ask her about this, and when asked, she likes to glare the questioner down until they change the subject on their own. In truth, it's an emotionally-painful reminder of her failure to her lover during her adventuring days. Her eyes are a bit sunken, her cheekbones high—but not pronounced enough to grant her the distracting comeliness of her fairer rivals. Hers is a stark, intimidating form of beauty, and she likes it that way—it forces those who deal with her to see her first as an administrator, second as a woman.

Combat Tactics

The Mayor will engage with anyone who threatens herself, her city, or her townsfolk in a serious manner. She's a politician, though, and would much prefer to talk over any conflict or perceived conflict. During combat, if fighting someone who seems as though they might be reasoned with, she will attempt to talk them down.

As GM, it's up to you how this comes across, based on the particular nature of the conflict that started the fight. Against mindless creatures or clear, unequivocal threats, however (e.g., the defenders of the Obelisk later in the adventure), she will fight to the death, with her main priority being to save as many townsfolk as possible in so doing.

Factions

Berinncorte government, perhaps obviously.

Briefly, at the start of her adventuring career, she was a member of Mace and Blade.

Special Abilities

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common and one extra language of your choice. Humans typically learn the languages of other peoples they deal with, including obscure dialects. They are fond of sprinkling their speech with words borrowed from other tongues: Orc curses, Elvish musical expressions, Dwarvish military phrases, and so on.,

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 6th, 8th, 12th, 14th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.,

Action Surge Starting at 2nd level, you can push yourself beyond your normal limits for a moment. On your turn, you can take one additional action on top of your regular action and a possible bonus action. Once you use this feature, you must finish a short or long rest before you can use it again. You can use this feature 2 time(s) before a rest, but only once on the same turn.,

Additional Fighting Style At 10th level, you can choose a second option from the Fighting Style class feature.,

Champion The archetypal Champion focuses on the development of raw physical power honed to deadly perfection. Those who model themselves on this archetype combine rigorous training with physical excellence to deal devastating blows.,

Extra Attack Beginning at 5th level, you can attack twice, instead of once, whenever you take the Attack action on your turn. The number of attacks increases to three when you reach 11th level in this class and to four when you reach 20th level in this class.,

Fighting Style You adopt a particular style of fighting as your specialty. Choose one of the following options. You can't take a Fighting Style option more than once, even if you later get to choose again.,

Improved Critical Beginning when you choose this archetype at 3rd level, your weapon attacks score a critical hit on a roll of 19 or 20.,

Indomitable Beginning at 9th level, you can reroll a saving throw that you fail. If you do so, you must use the new roll, and you can't use this feature again until you finish a long rest. You can use this feature 3 time(s) between long rests.,

Martial Archetype At 3rd level, you choose an archetype that you strive to emulate in your combat styles and techniques. The Champion archetype is detailed at the end of the class description; see the Player's Handbook for information on other martial archetypes. Your archetype grants you features at 3rd level and again at 7th, 10th, 15th, and 18th level.,

Remarkable Athlete Starting at 7th level, you can add half your proficiency bonus (round up) to any Strength, Dexterity, or Constitution check you make that doesn't already use your proficiency bonus. In addition, when you make a running long jump, the distance you can cover increases by a number of feet equal to +5.,

Second Wind You have a limited well of stamina that you can draw on to protect yourself from harm. On your turn, you can use a bonus action to regain hit points equal to 1d10 + your fighter level. Once you use this feature, you must finish a short or long rest before you can use it again.,

Superior Critical Starting at 15th level, your weapon attacks score a critical hit on a roll of 18-20.,

Survivor At 18th level, you attain the pinnacle of resilience in battle. At the start of each of your turns, you regain hit points equal to 8 if you have no more than half of your hit points left. You don't gain this benefit if you have 0 hit points.,

Defense While you are wearing armor, you gain a +1 bonus to AC.,

Great Weapon Fighting When you roll a 1 or 2 on a damage die for an attack you make with a melee weapon that you are wielding with two hands, you can reroll the die and must use the new roll, even if the new roll is a 1 or a 2. The weapon must have the two-handed or versatile property for you to gain this benefit.,

Treasure

Aside from the equipment listed in her profile, Dominika's treasure is located entirely in her chambers at her house. Day-to-day, she carries no wealth with her; typically, she wants for no payment if she stops by a shop or two in her journeys within city limits.

Habits and Logistics

During daylight hours, Mayor Symms can typically be found in her house, which doubles as administrative offices for all of Berinn corte. Her duties take her nearly everywhere else in town as well; it is left to the GM's discretion as to where to "place" her for maximum effect in a given scenario. As mayor and defender / administrator of the city, there are many pretexts that call for her attention at certain locations.

At night, the Mayor will likely be in her personal quarters. She will occasionally (25%) leave her quarters to walk about the town anonymously; she uses the secret entrances to her closet and the ground floor of her house to sneak out and take the measure of her town without administrative pressure.

Background

During her adventuring days, she once escaped from the lair of a wyvern, who slew her lover as she ran. Symms deeply regrets leaving, even though it would have meant certain death for them both if she had stayed.

In the Obelisk Attack

Mayor Symms dies after being mortally wounded helping townsfolk escape to safety... but only after telling the PCs they need to help establish order and determine the succession plan.

Conversation

What do you think of Berinn corte?

"I love our city. It's not without its difficulties, to be sure. But where else would you find such strong-willed, capable people? Such diversity of resources? We're truly blessed with bounty here, more often than not."

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

"Of course. There's no love lost between our city's most prominent religions. But it's not out of any specific action or perceived slight. It's more an ideological difference; the two are bound to rub each other the wrong way by definition. You can't be orderly without resenting Chaos; neither is it reasonable to be chaotic without an aversion to Law. It's the way of things, I'm afraid. As a ruler, as a mayor, as a member of government—there's a clear allegiance I owe to keep things orderly and peaceful, and I'm afraid that may not make me popular with our dear Sheergath followers. It's not that I take sides—far from it; I strive to make sure both organizations have ample opportunity. I do note that Cannock—the High Priest of Zugul, I mean—and his church tend to take advantage of that opportunity far more than Larissa and Denzys seem to."

Tell me about being Mayor.

"I enjoy my duty, and I hope that the citizens respect that. They might not all agree with me... or my methods, or approach. But I do hope that they recognize the results that approach has achieved, here, and even if they don't do at least that, they certainly feel safe on the streets more often than not. Whether they attribute that to me or not, they benefit from the peace, and that reassures me in my darker moments.”

▲ Diplomacy or Sense Motive check at DC 14:

☞ “Ah, truth to tell—I miss adventuring. That lifestyle. The... risk, I suppose you could call it. The wind in your face, on the open road. Nobody to answer to except the next mountain, the next forest, the next swamp. And behind it all, an endless bounty of possibility, just waiting to be explored and seized.” She sighs, longingly. “It’s a far cry from being here, and if I’m being honest, I wouldn’t actually leave or trade my current life for my former. But that doesn’t mean I don’t miss it. At times, I feel almost trapped behind these walls. Far from the open road, it is!”

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

☞ “You mean, aside from running an entire city, seemingly by myself? No. No, I don’t have any side professions or hobbies, even.”

Donur Gravelsmasher (Merchant Ranger)

CR 2; Starting Attitude: 14 (Indifferent)

Description

Donur is an outdoorsman to his core. His soul is at peace only when out in the land, camping near a river, hiking mountains, or even simply wandering an endless plain. To be confined to something as fixed and bounded as a city tends to rub him the wrong way, and so he spends as little time within the walls of Berinncorte as possible, though he finds it necessary to make enough profit to support his lifestyle.

Appearance

“Gravelsmasher” is a bit of a misnomer for this clean-shaven, tall dwarf: he seems more an elegant, slender fighter, somewhat stocky and slight for a human, if viewed without the clue of his facial features. A single, complex braid, no wider than a sliver, draped down his back is the only token nod to the hairstyles of his race, which are typically much more involved.

Combat Tactics

Donur abhors combat, but is quite adept at it if the need truly presents itself. He knows several of the common members of the Militia well, and will freely avail himself of their assistance if faced with melee within Town Square.

Factions

Donur is an active member in several dwarven factions, all of which fall outside the context of this adventure. His Tribute, while he spends some time within Berinncorte, goes to the city itself.

 Special Abilities

Brewer's Supplies Proficient with Artisan Brewer's Supplies.,

Darkvision Accustomed to life underground, you have superior vision in dark and dim conditions. You can see in dim light within 60 feet of you as if it were bright light, and in darkness as if it were dim light. You can't discern color in darkness, only shades of gray.,

Dwarven Combat Training You have proficiency with the battleaxe, handaxe, light hammer, and warhammer.,

Dwarven Resilience You have advantage on saving throws against poison, and you have resistance against poison damage (explained in chapter 9).,

Dwarven Toughness Your hit point maximum increases by 1, and it increases by 1 every time you gain a level.,

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common and Dwarvish. Dwarvish is full of hard consonants and guttural sounds, and those characteristics spill over into whatever other language a dwarf might speak.,

Stonecunning Whenever you make an Intelligence (History) check related to the origin of stonework, you are considered proficient in the History skill and add double your proficiency bonus to the check, instead of your normal proficiency bonus.,

Tool Proficiency You gain proficiency with the artisan's tools of your choice: smith's tools, brewer's supplies, or mason's tools.,

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 8th, 12th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.,

Defensive Tactics At 7th level, you gain one of the following features of your choice.,

Extra Attack Beginning at 5th level, you can attack twice, instead of once, whenever you take the Attack action on your turn.,

Favored Enemy Beginning at 1st level, you have significant experience studying, tracking, hunting, and even talking to a certain type of enemy. Choose a type of favored enemy: aberrations, beasts, celestials, constructs, dragons, elementals, fey, fiends, giants, monstrosities, oozes, plants, or undead. Alternatively, you can select two races of humanoid (such as gnolls and orcs) as favored enemies. You have advantage on Wisdom (Survival) checks to track your favored enemies, as well as on Intelligence checks to recall information about them. When you gain this feature, you also learn one language of your choice that is spoken by your favored enemies, if they speak one at all. You choose one additional favored enemy, as well as an associated language, at 6th and 14th level. As you gain levels, your choices should reflect the types of monsters you have encountered on your adventures.,

Fighting Style At 2nd level, you adopt a particular style of fighting as your specialty. Choose one of the following options. You can't take a Fighting Style option more than once, even if you later get to choose again.,

Giant Killer When a Large or larger creature within 5 feet of you hits or misses you with an attack, you can use your reaction to attack that creature immediately after its attack, provided that you can see the creature.,

Hide in Plain Sight Starting at 10th level, you can spend 1 minute creating camouflage for yourself. You must have access to fresh mud, dirt, plants, soot, and other naturally occurring materials with which to create your camouflage. Once you are camouflaged in this way, you can try to hide by pressing yourself up against a solid surface, such as a tree or wall, that is at least as tall and wide as you are. You gain a +10 bonus to Dexterity (Stealth) checks as long as you remain there without moving or taking actions. Once you move or take an action or a reaction, you must camouflage yourself again to gain this benefit.,

Hunter Emulating the Hunter archetype means accepting your place as a bulwark between civilization and the terrors of the wilderness. As you walk the Hunter's path, you learn specialized techniques for fighting the threats you face, from rampaging ogres and hordes of orcs to towering giants and terrifying dragons.,

Hunter's Prey At 3rd level, you gain one of the following features of your choice.,

Land's Stride Starting at 8th level, moving through nonmagical difficult terrain costs you no extra movement. You can also pass through nonmagical plants without being slowed by them and without taking damage from them if they have thorns, spines, or a similar hazard. In addition, you have advantage on saving throws against plants that are magically created or manipulated to impede movement, such those created by the entangle spell.,

Natural Explorer You are particularly familiar with one type of natural environment and are adept at traveling and surviving in such regions. Choose one type of favored terrain: arctic, coast, desert, forest, grassland, mountain, swamp, or the Underdark. When you make an Intelligence or Wisdom check related to your favored terrain, your proficiency bonus is doubled if you are using a skill that you're proficient in. While traveling for an hour or more in your favored terrain, you gain the following benefits: * Difficult terrain doesn't slow your group's travel. * Your group can't become lost except by magical means. * Even when you are engaged in another activity while traveling (such as foraging, navigating, or tracking), you remain alert to danger. * If you are traveling alone, you can move stealthily at a normal pace. * When you forage, you find twice as much food as you normally would. * While tracking other creatures, you also learn their exact number, their sizes, and how long ago they passed through the area. You choose additional favored terrain types at 6th and 10th level.,

Primeval Awareness Beginning at 3rd level, you can use your action and expend one ranger spell slot to focus your awareness on the region around you. For 1 minute per level of the spell slot you expend, you can sense whether the following types of creatures are present within 1 mile of you (or within up to 6 miles if you are in your favored terrain): aberrations, celestials, dragons, elementals, fey, fiends, and undead. This feature doesn't reveal the creatures' location or number.,

Ranger Archetype At 3rd level, you choose an archetype that you strive to emulate: Hunter or Beast Master, both detailed at the end of the class description. Your choice grants you features at 3rd level and again at 7th, 11th, and 15th level.,

Spellcasting By the time you reach 2nd level, you have learned to use the magical essence of nature to cast spells, much as a druid does. See chapter 10 for the general rules of spellcasting and chapter 11 for the ranger spell list. Spell save DC 16; Spell attack modifier +8,

Spell Slots The Ranger table shows how many spell slots you have to cast your spells of 1st level and higher. To cast one of these spells, you must expend a slot of the spell's level or higher. You regain all expended spell slots when you finish a long rest. For example, if you know the 1st-level spell animal friendship and have a 1st-level and a 2nd-level spell slot available, you can cast animal friendship using either slot. You know two 1st-level spells of your choice from the ranger spell list. The Spells Known column of the Ranger table shows when you learn more ranger spells of your choice. Each of these spells must be of a level for which you have,

Steel Will You have advantage on saving throws against being frightened.,

Vanish Starting at 14th level, you can use the Hide action as a bonus action on your turn. Also, you can't be tracked by nonmagical means, unless you choose to leave a trail.,

Whirlwind Attack You can use your action to make a melee attack against any number of creatures within 5 feet of you, with a separate attack roll for each target.,

Dueling When you are wielding a melee weapon in one hand and no other weapons, you gain a +2 bonus to damage rolls with that weapon.,

Beasts Advantage on Wisdom (Survival) checks to track Beasts, as well as on Intelligence checks to recall information about them. You also learn one language of your choice that is spoken by your favored enemies, if they speak one at all.

Humanoids Advantage on Wisdom (Survival) checks to track Humanoids, as well as on Intelligence checks to recall information about them. You also learn one language of your choice that is spoken by your favored enemies, if they speak one at all.

wAdvantage on Wisdom (Survival) checks to track Monstrosities, as well as on Intelligence checks to recall information about them. You also learn one language of your choice that is spoken by your favored enemies, if they speak one at all.

Habits and Logistics

 During daylight hours, there is an  80% chance Donur will be at his kiosk, doing business. The remainder of the time, he will be outside city limits, foraging for ingredients, traveling to another town, or simply camping in the great outdoors.

 At night, most ( 70%) of the time, the dwarven merchant will drink until late with his cronies in Shanty Town area of Town Square, then fall asleep there.

Background

Donur has a long history training with, and serving, dwarven interests. He chose to leave behind a likely life in dwarven politics and power to travel broadly. Needless to say, this somewhat unusual decision for a dwarf to leave his people behind in preference of a life lived out in the open under the stars was not warmly welcomed. His abilities and alliances back home, however, mean there is more pining for his presence than criticism or speak of exile.

In the Obelisk Attack

Donur picks up weapons and starts to fight, leading others to safety and eventually evacuating the town successfully.

Conversation

What do you think of Berinncorte?

 “Shrug.” He actually says the word “shrug”, rather than emote it physically.

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

 “Silly nonsense, you ask me. It doesn’t matter in the slightest, so any who want to fight along those lines... well, it’s just lunacy.”

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

 “Symms, right? She does fine. It’s peaceful, here; more so than I’ve seen, most of the Realm.”

Tell me about being a merchant.

 “It’s hardly my passion. It helps pay the bills, but I’d never step foot inside another city, anywhere, if I had my way.”

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

 “This is my side work. My main activity is roaming, camping, fishing, hunting, just being out there. Gods, I miss it so.”

Einkill Holderhek (Merchant / Mercenary)

CR 2; Starting Attitude: 14 (Indifferent)

Description

Einkill is a mercenary fighter. Despite being far from the sharpest blade in a smithy, he has nevertheless managed to create quite a name for himself as a fence for stolen goods. Big or small, common or rare, the dwarf brute will get it sold... whether the prospective buyer wants the item or not!

Appearance

Slashing scars speckle the dwarf's face, but as he was never much the ladies' man to begin with, he likes them; it enhances his menacing appearance and tends to make business easier. As he will himself say, if you threaten someone, they might not immediately believe you're capable of violence; a face full of scars speaks volumes without saying a word.

He is otherwise a dwarf of unremarkable stature; not unhandsome, but brutish to the point of social aversion.

Combat Tactics

Einkill is a bully, through and through, and relishes a fight against weaker opponents; he'll play around with them before finishing them off, particularly if there is an audience for the battle. He enjoys an evenly-matched combat as well, though he will tend to focus on tactics and winning more than showmanship unless his advantage is clear.

Against an overwhelming force—as an entire party of PCs would likely be—he will fight for a few rounds to get the measure of his enemies, and thereafter will not hesitate to call the authorities or run away if it seems obvious he is outmatched.

Einkill is a fine warrior, but not tactician—he will charge into melee with the most thuggish-looking of his enemies, assuming that ranged and magical foes will avoid striking from afar lest they hit their ally.

Factions

As the mood strikes him, he will claim allegiance to either Mace and Blade, and/or the Adamantium Trail, though it's really a matter of who is paying more for the work at the moment. Einkill has no oral or ideological leanings, and cares not for what either organization might ultimately be playing at in the long run.

Dwarven Resilience You have advantage on saving throws against poison, and you have resistance against poison damage (explained in chapter 9).,

Dwarven Toughness Your hit point maximum increases by 1, and it increases by 1 every time you gain a level.,

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common and Dwarvish. Dwarvish is full of hard consonants and guttural sounds, and those characteristics spill over into whatever other language a dwarf might speak.,

Mason's Tools Proficient with Artisan Mason's Tools.,

Stonecunning Whenever you make an Intelligence (History) check related to the origin of stonework, you are considered proficient in the History skill and add double your proficiency bonus to the check, instead of your normal proficiency bonus.,

Tool Proficiency You gain proficiency with the artisan's tools of your choice: smith's tools, brewer's supplies, or mason's tools.,

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 6th, 8th, 12th, 14th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.,

Action Surge Starting at 2nd level, you can push yourself beyond your normal limits for a moment. On your turn, you can take one additional action on top of your regular action and a possible bonus action. Once you use this feature, you must finish a short or long rest before you can use it again. You can use this feature 1 time(s) before a rest, but only once on the same turn.,

Additional Fighting Style At 10th level, you can choose a second option from the Fighting Style class feature.,

Champion The archetypal Champion focuses on the development of raw physical power honed to deadly perfection. Those who model themselves on this archetype combine rigorous training with physical excellence to deal devastating blows.,

Extra Attack Beginning at 5th level, you can attack twice, instead of once, whenever you take the Attack action on your turn. The number of attacks increases to three when you reach 11th level in this class and to four when you reach 20th level in this class.,

Fighting Style You adopt a particular style of fighting as your specialty. Choose one of the following options. You can't take a Fighting Style option more than once, even if you later get to choose again.,

Improved Critical Beginning when you choose this archetype at 3rd level, your weapon attacks score a critical hit on a roll of 19 or 20.,

Indomitable Beginning at 9th level, you can reroll a saving throw that you fail. If you do so, you must use the new roll, and you can't use this feature again until you finish a long rest. You can use this feature 2 time(s) between long rests.,

Martial Archetype At 3rd level, you choose an archetype that you strive to emulate in your combat styles and techniques. The Champion archetype is detailed at the end of the class description; see the Player's Handbook for information on other martial archetypes. Your archetype grants you features at 3rd level and again at 7th, 10th, 15th, and 18th level.,

Remarkable Athlete Starting at 7th level, you can add half your proficiency bonus (round up) to any Strength, Dexterity, or Constitution check you make that doesn't already use your proficiency bonus. In addition, when you make a running long jump, the distance you can cover increases by a number of feet equal to +5.,

Second Wind You have a limited well of stamina that you can draw on to protect yourself from harm. On your turn, you can use a bonus action to regain hit points equal to 1d10 + your fighter level. Once you use this feature, you must finish a short or long rest before you can use it again.,

Defense While you are wearing armor, you gain a +1 bonus to AC.,

Protection When a creature you can see attacks a target other than you that is within 5 feet of you, you can use your reaction to impose disadvantage on the attack roll. You must be wielding a shield

Habits and Logistics

☀ During daylight hours, Einkill might (🎲 30%) be sleeping off last night's revels in the Lower-Class Residential District, where he keeps a bed in the common area. He might (🎲 50%) instead be ambling about the Town Square, looking for wares to purchase and resell using his particular method of salesmanship. If he's not doing either of those things (🎲 20%), he'll be in the Tavern, getting a head start on the night's drinking.

🌙 At night, he will be in the Tavern until it closes, and thence either to sleep, or to carouse about town, preying on the weak and occasionally (🎲 5%) mugging someone if he finds a weak victim alone on the dark streets.

Background

Einkill is an adventurer by nature, but with a bully's weakness for preferring weak adversaries. As the easy pickings of lairs and caves in the immediate area have been cleared out, the dwarf has been forced into various positions of sword-for-hire, most recently settling on the fairly lucrative approach of thuggish mercantilism.

In the Obelisk Attack

Einkill is in the Tavern as the Obelisk Erupts. At the commotion, he stumbles drunkenly out of the building and into the Town Square. When he sees the monsters wreaking havoc, he unslings his warhammer and shouts a challenge; he is almost instantly slain by a particularly nasty creature.

Elena Lomazonne (Merchant Princess)

CR 4; Starting Attitude: 14 (Indifferent)

Description

Beautiful, dashing, and brutal in negotiations, Elena is a ruthless entrepreneur. Though gifted more with intelligence than combat expertise, she nevertheless takes pains to keep herself trained and equipped as though she alone would have to defend herself, though she has no shortage of retainers, bodyguards, and armed and efficient personal staff.

Appearance

Curved, chin-length black hair frames a narrow, severe face. Hers is a Charisma fueled by presence, by stature, and by an imposing willpower bent toward determined goals. A reddish mole dances on her temple, at the outer edge of her eyebrow; casual observers might think she has recently suffered a cut to the head.

Combat Tactics

Elena does not flinch from the necessity of combat, but well knows her own shortcomings in battle—she will approach combat strategically, getting her allies to come to her assistance. If she is pressed to single combat, or part of a larger melee, she will fight relentlessly, and without remorse.

Factions

Elena is a tribute-paying member of the Adamantium Trail, to which she pays 8% in representation of her elevated stature.

Defense While you are wearing armor, you gain a +1 bonus to AC.,

Dueling When you are wielding a melee weapon in one hand and no other weapons, you gain a +2 bonus to damage rolls with that weapon.,

Habits and Logistics

 Note: Unlike many other NPCs, Elena's role in this adventure is somewhat limited to a certain side quest. She has a larger role to play in the future of the Adventure Path of which Dark Obelisk: Berinncorte is a part, however, and so the GM is encouraged to find creative ways to ensure her survival.

 During daylight hours, she will be part of her caravan, well outside Berinncorte.

 At night, she will likely also be with her caravan.

Background

Elena was born to a wealthy merchant family, the youngest and sole female of six children. Her mother perished soon after giving birth to her, and although none in her family ever held it against her, she heard the street-level taunts leveled in her direction, and felt an unreasonable and heavy guilt.

When young, she and her elder brothers wanted for nothing, and while her siblings took advantage of her family's largess and doting, the sole Lomazonne heiress took advantage of a different sort. Books, tutors, trainers, and travel—she experienced as much as her family's ample fortune could make possible, saw much of the Realm, and learned even more.

When she was in her early twenties, Elena saw the threads of the fine tapestry of her family begin to fray. Her father, and her two uncles, began to lose money on the occasional deal—a supreme rarity in prior times. Everyone shrugged these mishaps off as the merchants finally running out of luck. But in conversations, parties, and bedrooms, the whispered rumor grew in strength that the Lomazonne family elders were instead running out of sanity.

They say the best rumors have a basis in truth, and this one was no exception to the aphorism. Elena's father Guzman was aging, and his mind slipping, but he was in complete denial even of the mere possibility. Followers, trusted advisors who had served the family for generations, kindly suggested that perhaps the lord should start to move some decisions, unimportant matters at first, to the elder sons, so that they might benefit from the experience of starting to manage the family industry.

Guzman had these advisors executed for what he labeled “treason”.

That his two younger brothers, Elena's uncles, were declining as well, and at rates far more rapid than their elder brother, did not help matters. The three comprised a trinity of increasing self-delusion and declining sensibilities. With their wealth diminishing rapidly, the Lomazonne trio was widely viewed as the head family empire soon for demise. Merchants are nothing if not an opportunistic folk, and so the buzzards started circling, ready to pick clean the remnants of the insane leaders.

Elena, no slouch in the family business and in worldly matters besides, recognized the situation with a horrific clarity. She spoke with her brothers, but none of the five was interested, preferring instead to wallow in a continued fantasy free from want. Most advisors understood the situation as she did, and respected her for her honesty and forthrightness... but feared the wrath of Guzman and his brothers, should they help her intervene. Alone, and seeing few other options, she took up with the one family advisor who was willing to help.

And murdered her father.

She had hoped that the death would improve matters—otherwise, she wouldn't have taken such drastic measures. It did not. Her older uncle took over the family business, as tradition decreed. Though his dementia was not quite as woeful as his departed brother, he, too, was far past the point of being able to ably run a complex business empire, and so the decline of the family's assets continued, more or less unabated. Elena considered the new head of the family, his mental instability, and the similar instability of her second uncle. She realized, with a sick, startling sanity that stood in stark contrast to her parent's generation, what must be done.

And slew both her uncles.

The advisor who had helped her plan and execute all three assassinations had cautioned her that tradition meant the family business would then pass to the eldest son, and then next-eldest, and so on. Not only did tradition tend to frown upon a daughter taking up the business, but the youngest daughter at that—no way. It was without precedent.

Elena took to task establishing a new precedent.

She blackmailed her oldest brother, after finding him in bed with a boy a third his age. Her next-eldest brother, she threatened with violence, not quite revealing her role behind the murders, but insinuating that she at least was well-acquainted with whomever did the deeds. With brother number three, she paid a gigolo to seduce his fiancée. Elena confronted her sibling with the news, and had planned on threatening him with publishing the love letters she had intercepted between the fiancée and the prostitute... but the loss of his beloved had been enough to push him over the edge; Brother Three killed himself.

By this point, the remaining two brothers, lackadaisical as they may have been, were at least saavy enough at pattern recognition to understand what might be going on. They abdicated any claim they may have had to the estate at once, signing four times as much paperwork as they really needed to. Elena still exiled them from the family estate, gave them a stipend off of which to live going forward, and banished them from ever doing business as merchants again.

The tale of how this was all accomplished, the note the Adamantium Trail and others paid to the proceedings, and Elena's stratospheric rise through the ranks of that organization to become the Merchant Princess she is today... that's quite the interesting story, for another time. Suffice it to say that she is not small beans, holds no small sway... and you had better hope that you do not stand between her and what she desires.

🛡️ In the Obelisk Attack

Elena is outside the city when the Obelisk Erupts, and survives as a result.

🗨️ Conversation

What do you think of Berinnccorte?

🗨️ “It’s a quaint city. Bigger than it seems.”

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

🗨️ “It’s no matter. Happens all over. Won’t amount to much; people need to buy things no matter their ideology.”

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

🗨️ “She keeps the peace. Order is good for business.”

Tell me about being a merchant.

🗨️ “It’s grand. All the power and influence of a king, but no subjects to satisfy. Unless you mean employees, hirelings, contractors, mercenaries. Money is something everyone understands, no matter their background, station, job, or talents.”

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

🗨️ “No time for any of that!”

Elizavetta Burak

(Illusionist / Prostitute)

CR 3; Attitude: 14 (Indifferent)

Description

Prostitution is legal in much of the Realm, and a service that is not unpopular. Mayor Symms is a sensible realist, and recognizes the role of the trade in the greater scheme of things and in history, but is also not its greatest fan—and so while the art is legal in the city, there is only one licensed practitioner. Elizavetta Burak is that tradeswoman, and she caters to all manner of clientele—man and woman, and of any sentient race.

Appearance

Beautiful, but imposing, Elizavetta knows well her craft. Her manner of dress is chosen to both attract and entertain customers during execution of a contract. Her eyes and hair are black, and her makeup accentuates the power of her eyes and long lashes. She's tall, but slender.

Combat Tactics

Elizavetta prefers to avoid combat, and will call upon the Militia immediately if she senses true fighting is about to begin. If it's necessary for her to be involved, she will fight using mundane means as a first approach, using her magical talents only as an absolute last resort.

Factions

She pays tribute only to Berinncorte City.

 Special Abilities

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common and one extra language of your choice. Humans typically learn the languages of other peoples they deal with, including obscure dialects. They are fond of sprinkling their speech with words borrowed from other tongues: Orc curses, Elvish musical expressions, Dwarvish military phrases, and so on.

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 8th, 12th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.

Arcane Recovery You have learned to regain some of your magical energy by studying your spellbook. Once per day when you finish a short rest, you can choose expended spell slots to recover. The spell slots can have a combined level that is equal to or less than 8, and none of the slots can be 6th level or higher. For example, if you're a 4th-level wizard, you can recover up to two levels worth of spell slots. You can recover either a 2nd-level spell slot or two 1st-level spell slots.

Arcane Tradition When you reach 2nd level, you choose an arcane tradition, shaping your practice of magic through one of eight schools: Abjuration, Conjunction, Divination, Enchantment, Evocation, Illusion, Necromancy, or Transmutation. The school of Evocation is detailed at the end of the class description; see the Player's Handbook for information on the other schools. Your choice grants you features at 2nd level and again at 6th, 10th, and 14th level.

Cantrips At 1st level, you know three cantrips of your choice from the wizard spell list. You learn additional wizard cantrips of your choice at higher levels, as shown in the Cantrips Known column of the Wizard table.

Empowered Evocation Beginning at 10th level, you can add +5 to the damage roll of any wizard evocation spell you cast. The damage bonus applies to one damage roll of a spell, not multiple rolls.

Evocation Savant Beginning when you select this school at 2nd level, the gold and time you must spend to copy an evocation spell into your spellbook is halved.

Overchannel Starting at 14th level, you can increase the power of your simpler spells. When you cast a wizard spell of 5th level or lower that deals damage, you can deal maximum damage with that spell. The first time you do so, you suffer no adverse effect. If you use this feature again before you finish a long rest, you take 2d12 necrotic damage for each level of the spell, immediately after you cast it. Each time you use this feature again before finishing a long rest, the necrotic damage per spell level increases by 1d12. This damage ignores resistance and immunity. The feature doesn't benefit cantrips.

Potent Cantrip Starting at 6th level, your damaging cantrips affect even creatures that avoid the brunt of the effect. When a creature succeeds on a saving throw against your cantrip, the creature takes half the cantrip's damage (if any) but suffers no additional effect from the cantrip.

Preparing and Casting Spells The Wizard table shows how many spell slots you have to cast your spells of 1st level and higher. To cast one of these spells, you must expend a slot of the spell's level or higher. You regain all expended spell slots when you finish a long rest. You prepare the list of wizard spells that are available for you to cast. To do so, choose a number of wizard spells from your spellbook equal to 20. The spells must be of a level for which you have spell slots. For example, if you're a 3rd-level wizard, you have four 1st-level and two 2nd-level spell slots. With an Intelligence of 16, your list of prepared spells can include six spells of 1st or 2nd level, in any combination, chosen from your spellbook. If you prepare the 1st-level spell magic missile, you can cast it using a 1st-level or a 2nd-level slot. Casting the spell doesn't remove it from your list of prepared spells. You can change your list of prepared spells when you finish a long rest. Preparing a new list of wizard spells requires time spent studying your spellbook and memorizing the incantations and gestures you must make to cast the spell: at least 1 minute per spell level for each spell on your list.

Ritual Casting You can cast a wizard spell as a ritual if that spell has the ritual tag and you have the spell in your spellbook. You don't need to have the spell prepared.

School of Evocation You focus your study on magic that creates powerful elemental effects such as bitter cold, searing flame, rolling thunder, crackling lightning, and burning acid. Some evokers find employment in military forces, serving as artillery to blast enemy armies from afar. Others use their spectacular power to protect the weak, while some seek their own gain as bandits, adventurers, or aspiring tyrants.

Sculpt Spells Beginning at 2nd level, you can create pockets of relative safety within the effects of your evocation spells. When you cast an evocation spell that affects other creatures that you can see, you can choose a number of them equal to 1 + the spell's level. The chosen creatures automatically succeed on their saving throws against the spell, and they take no damage if they would normally take half damage on a successful save.

Spellcasting As a student of arcane magic, you have a spellbook containing spells that show the first glimmerings of your true power. See chapter 10 for the general rules of spellcasting and chapter 11 for the wizard spell list.

 Habits and Logistics

 During daylight hours, Elizavetta will be in her tent, though daytime is not her most popular time to offer services.

 At night, she will also be in her tent, offering services; popular times are in the late evening hours.

 Background

Born on a farm to farming parents, Elizvetta was bored of her childhood almost from the start. Her parents fought constantly, and broke up shortly after she arrived; though she never blamed herself, and her parents both treat her well, she learned from an early age that neither could quite be trusted, and she struck out on her own as early as she could manage. She has come by her training in a variety of locations, studying under illusionists and other wizards in various cities to gain more and more power. When she came to Berinncorte a few years ago, she was taken immediately with Shakira Alam, and formed a romantic relationship with the understanding halfling shortly thereafter.

 In the Obelisk Attack

She's with a customer at the time; she compels him to lead her to safety, but en route, both her and her client are slain by Forces of the Obelisk.

 Conversation

What do you think of Berinncorte?

 "It's better than most towns I've been to. Safe, peaceful, and not boring; that's a difficult balance."

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

 "So sad, that such impassioned people cannot set aside fabricated differences and come together... or to simply live and let live."

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

 "She does as good a job as any I've seen in keeping the peace. And she lets me operate in a near-monopoly, so it's hard for me to complain.”

Tell me about being a... prostitute? Courtesan? Which title do you prefer?

☞ “You can call me nearly anything you want, so long as you're a paying customer. Those who are simply conversing, however, may call me Elizavetta. And I don't mind my work. Most folk are appreciative of the service, and try to do as best they can by me, for what that's worth. I've heard of many in my trade, men and women, who are mistreated, taken advantage of, or worse... I'm my own mistress, owe no soul money or allegiance, and set my own hours. There are worse lives, to be sure.”

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

☞ “What, is my normal job not sufficiently interesting, that you imagine I do something else on the side? Like what? What would that be—slaying dragons? Not quite.”

Esk (Innkeeper)

CR 2; Starting Attitude: 14 (Indifferent)

Description

As one of the only lizardfolk in Berinncorte, and as its only Summoner, Esk takes a little getting used to... but is generally as pleasant as can be. He knows he's an aberration in these parts, and goes the extra mile not just to fit in, but to avoid conflict.

He claims to have no opinion on any matters, but can always be relied upon to point you in the right direction to someone who can opine.

Appearance

To a humanoid observer, Esk seems both alien and quite human—he's quite strong and nimble, but most folk don't notice, particularly if they've never seen lizardfolk. He dresses conservatively and simply, and prefers dark blue and white colors. When outside, he prefers cloaks with hoods so as to minimize the impact of his uncommon appearance on those who might be prejudiced against strange races.

Combat Tactics

Esk prefers to talk, and to strike a deal, even if it is unfavorable to his interests. He's painfully aware of his anomalous appearance, and wants to give the Militia as little reason as possible to investigate him or his doings. To this end, he will take great pains to avoid conflict, even if it seems certain. He will flee if overmatched, and will fight only if necessary.

Once engaged in combat, however, Esk shows his true colors as a Chaotic Evil summoner... he uses every spell and trick at his disposal to cause as much damage, as quickly as he can. If he gains the advantage, he shows no mercy, and will remorselessly slaughter everyone in the building if he feels it's necessary to avoid further conflict.

Factions

He has been involved with the Wild Kingdom, but left them when it became clear that he felt better suited to plots and schemes than outright warfare. He currently tributes to Sheergath.

Special Abilities

Darkvision Thanks to your orc blood, you have superior vision in dark and dim conditions. You can see in dim light within 60 feet of you as if it were bright light, and in darkness as if it were dim light. You can't discern color in darkness, only shades of gray.

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common and Orc. Orc is a harsh, grating language with hard consonants. It has no script of its own but is written in the Dwarvish script.

Menacing You gain proficiency in the Intimidation skill.

Relentless Endurance When you are reduced to 0 hit points but not killed outright, you can drop to 1 hit point instead. You can't use this feature again until you finish a long rest.

Savage Attacks When you score a critical hit with a melee weapon attack, you can roll one of the weapon's damage dice one additional time and add it to the extra damage of the critical hit.

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 8th, 12th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.

You can change your list of prepared spells when you finish a long rest. Preparing a new list of wizard spells requires time spent studying your spellbook and memorizing the incantations and gestures you must make to cast the spell: at least 1 minute per spell level for each spell on your list.

Ritual Casting You can cast a wizard spell as a ritual if that spell has the ritual tag and you have the spell in your spellbook. You don't need to have the spell prepared.

School of Evocation You focus your study on magic that creates powerful elemental effects such as bitter cold, searing flame, rolling thunder, crackling lightning, and burning acid. Some evokers find employment in military forces, serving as artillery to blast enemy armies from afar. Others use their spectacular power to protect the weak, while some seek their own gain as bandits, adventurers, or aspiring tyrants.

Sculpt Spells Beginning at 2nd level, you can create pockets of relative safety within the effects of your evocation spells. When you cast an evocation spell that affects other creatures that you can see, you can choose a number of them equal to 1 + the spell's level. The chosen creatures automatically succeed on their saving throws against the spell, and they take no damage if they would normally take half damage on a successful save.

Spellcasting As a student of arcane magic, you have a spellbook containing spells that show the first glimmerings of your true power. See chapter 10 for the general rules of spellcasting and chapter 11 for the wizard spell list.

Habits and Logistics

During daylight hours, Esk may (35%) be at the Town Square, buying provisions or just meeting and greeting folk in case they are useful. He might (45%) instead be in the Inn, staffing the front desk should guests arrive or have issues. The remainder of the time (20%) he might be enjoying a sip and a snack at the Tavern next door.

At night, Esk will always be in the Inn, tending to the business of innkeeping or sleeping.

Background

Esk was secretly exiled from his clan far away. Although he was exiled because he murdered his father, it must be admitted that the main was evil and sadistic. Most of Esk's family, and some elders who knew what was what, send him a stipend by way of support and apology.

The GM is encouraged to take some steps to ensure that Esk remains alive; his family, the nobility, politics around the death, and so on might factor into a future adventure opportunity.

Finally, and perhaps most significantly, unbeknownst to Esk, his eidolon Cherissur is secretly plotting a takeover of the surface world from the dark side of the realm. Such plots and their impact are beyond the scope of this adventure, however... Cherissur and her allies are playing the long game with their schemes, and will take no action in the timeframe of what occurs during the Obelisk Eruption.

In the Obelisk Attack

Esk is wounded, and loses two fingers from his right hand in the attack, but he shrugs it off and focuses on opening his rooms and common area to anyone who was wounded or needs to recover. Charges criminally low rates for those whose houses were destroyed in the attack, because he can afford to.

☐ Note that much of this behavior is a sham, as Esk is indeed Chaotic Evil, and such philanthropy and goodwill seem quite counter to this alignment. He nevertheless knows what best to do so as to fit in, and he assumes that his seemingly good actions in this regard will simply offer him increased opportunity in the future.

☛ Conversation

What do you think of Berinncorte?

☛ “Stable place, peaceful. Good for business. Not a great place to travel through on your way someplace else, though; business could be better.”

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

☛ “Worship any gods you like; you still need a place to rest your head. I go to Sheergath, myself, but only because there’s enough law as it is around here. I think folk tend to worship what they wish there was more of in the world, no?”

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

☛ “She keeps the peace, it must be said. Not a fan that the city and Zugul are so tight. There’s nothing wrong; it’s just that Zugul feels slighted, I think.”

Tell me about being an innkeeper.

☛ “You meet all manner of folk. Sometimes that’s a good thing, other times, not so much. It’s a stable job; there’ll always be folk in need of a bed. Speaking of which, do you need a room or two for the night?”

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

☛ “What do you mean?” He sounds wary, but not defensive.

▲ Diplomacy check at DC 17, pressing on the question above:

☛ “Well, I dabble in the arcane arts. Summoning, mostly. Fascinating craft, that; do you have any background?”

He seems genuinely interested in sharing his knowledge, and will immediately become Friendly to any PC with at least one class level of Summoner.

A further Diplomacy check at DC 18 will get the party’s rooms comped for up to four nights while they stay in town as a result of this interaction.

Farzith (Butcher's Apprentice)

CR 1; Starting Attitude: 12 (Indifferent)

Description

Apprenticing for a butcher is one of the most unsavory tasks a young gnome might undertake, but there's something in the brutal simplicity of it that seems to make sense to Farzith. He's somber and focused on his work, which he does seem to be quite good at.

Appearance

Perpetually dirty, Farzith seems a gnome three times his age—an “old soul”, trapped in the body of an adolescent. Grimy black hair keeps falling on his face, and his choice of dress—drab and dark—doesn't help his appearance.

Combat Tactics

Farzith is not a fighter, and will flee immediately if swords are even drawn in his presence. If confronted directly, he will run as fast as he can to the nearest Militia Guard Post, calling for help all the way.

Factions

None officially, though he does attend services on occasion at the Sheergath Temple. His tribute goes mostly unnoticed, and oscillates between the city of Berinncorte itself and Sheergath.

📖 Special Abilities

Artificer's Lore Whenever you make a History check related to magic items, alchemical objects, or technological devices, you can add twice your proficiency bonus (8), instead of any proficiency bonus you normally apply.,

Darkvision Accustomed to life underground, you have superior vision in dark and dim conditions. You can see in dim light within 60 feet of you as if it were bright light, and in darkness as if it were dim light. You can't discern color in darkness, only shades of gray.,

Gnome Cunning You have advantage on all Intelligence, Wisdom, and Charisma saving throws against magic.,

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common and Gnomish. The Gnomish language, which uses the Dwarvish script, is renowned for its technical treatises and its catalogs of knowledge about the natural world.,

Tinker You have proficiency with tinker's tools. Using those tools, you can spend 1 hour and 10 gp worth of materials to construct a Tiny clockwork device (AC 5, 1 hp). The device ceases to function after 24 hours. (unless you spend 1 hour repairing it to keep the device functioning), or when you use your action to dismantle it; at that time, you can reclaim the materials used to create it. You can have up to three such devices active at a time. When you create a device, choose one of the following options: Clockwork Toy: This toy is a clockwork animal or person, such as a frog, mouse, bird, or soldier. When placed on the ground, the toy moves 5 feet across the ground on each of your turns in a random direction. It makes noises as appropriate to the creature it represents. Fire Starter: The device produces a miniature flame, which you can use to light something like a candle, torch, or campfire. Using the device requires your action. Music Box: When opened, this music box plays a single song at a moderate volume. The box stops playing when it reaches the song's end or when it is closed.,

Tinker's Tools Proficient with Artisan Tinker's Tools.,

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 6th, 8th, 12th, 14th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.,

Action Surge Starting at 2nd level, you can push yourself beyond your normal limits for a moment. On your turn, you can take one additional action on top of your regular action and a possible bonus action. Once you use this feature, you must finish a short or long rest before you can use it again. You can use this feature 1 time(s) before a rest, but only once on the same turn.,

Additional Fighting Style At 10th level, you can choose a second option from the Fighting Style class feature.,

Champion The archetypal Champion focuses on the development of raw physical power honed to deadly perfection. Those who model themselves on this archetype combine rigorous training with physical excellence to deal devastating blows.,

Extra Attack Beginning at 5th level, you can attack twice, instead of once, whenever you take the Attack action on your turn. The number of attacks increases to three when you reach 11th level in this class and to four when you reach 20th level in this class.,

Fighting Style You adopt a particular style of fighting as your specialty. Choose one of the following options. You can't take a Fighting Style option more than once, even if you later get to choose again.,

Improved Critical Beginning when you choose this archetype at 3rd level, your weapon attacks score a critical hit on a roll of 19 or 20.,

Indomitable Beginning at 9th level, you can reroll a saving throw that you fail. If you do so, you must use the new roll, and you can't use this feature again until you finish a long rest. You can use this feature 1 time(s) between long rests.,

Martial Archetype At 3rd level, you choose an archetype that you strive to emulate in your combat styles and techniques. The Champion archetype is detailed at the end of the class description; see the Player's Handbook for information on other martial archetypes. Your archetype grants you features at 3rd level and again at 7th, 10th, 15th, and 18th level.,

Remarkable Athlete Starting at 7th level, you can add half your proficiency bonus (round up) to any Strength, Dexterity, or Constitution check you make that doesn't already use your proficiency bonus. In addition, when you make a running long jump, the distance you can cover increases by a number of feet equal to +3.,

Second Wind You have a limited well of stamina that you can draw on to protect yourself from harm. On your turn, you can use a bonus action to regain hit points equal to 1d10 + your fighter level. Once you use this feature, you must finish a short or long rest before you can use it again.,

Defense While you are wearing armor, you gain a +1 bonus to AC.,

Dueling When you are wielding a melee weapon in one hand and no other weapons, you gain a +2 bonus to damage rolls with that weapon.

Habits and Logistics

 During daylight hours, Farzith will almost always ( 85%) be at the Butcher's Shop, helping with the preparation and sale of product. The remainder of the time, he will find himself at the Town Square, purchasing supplies or selling foodstuff.

 The largely friendless gnome will typically ( 75%) start his evening finishing his work. The remainder of the time, he will visit the Tavern for a bite to eat and (when he can afford it from his meager wages) an ale. The rest of his evening will be spent sleeping, either in the Lower-Class Residential District common area, or worst-case scenario, in an alley, though the latter scenario is discouraged by the Militia.

Background

Farzith is an orphan since an early age. He was raised on various farms in the region, bouncing from farmhouse to farmhouse, staying until goodwill or the need for helpers was exhausted. Although physically and mentally quite capable, the gnome has never truly found his place, nor friends or family willing to lend a more permanent assistance or a chance to better his life.

His current position is perhaps not the best match for his aptitudes, but nevertheless, he shows talent at butchery. He hopes to make a longer-term job of it eventually, either taking over a more significant role from Ganyc, or leaving Berinnccorte for opportunities in another city, perhaps more in need of a meatsmith.

In the Obelisk Attack

Regrettably, Farzith is slain in the attack. He's working the Butcher Shop, hears the commotion, emerges from the shop, and on the threshold of the door itself, is run through by one of the chaotic undead creatures. Severely wounded, he manages to limp to the back of the shop for safety, but the building's proximity to the chaos means that nobody searches there for survivors... and thus the gnome apprentice dies of his wounds later that day.

Conversation

What do you think of Berinnccorte?

 "It's okay. Militia's not so bad. They tell me no sleeping on the streets, but don't beat me up. It's been worse."

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

 "No. I've been to Sheergath but didn't know there was a problem. Will it be okay?"

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

 "I don't know her. I think I saw her once, in the Square. Big sword, right?"

Tell me about being a butcher.

 "Ganyc would want me to make plain: I'm an apprentice. No butcher. He's the butcher. Meatsmith, he's said, sometimes, but I get the feel that's more of a group, maybe? I dunno. But it's okay. Steady job. Not everyone likes this work, but I don't mind it."

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

 "It's all I can do to get my work done here. My side job is keeping myself fed and finding a place to sleep."

 Diplomacy check at DC 18, or giving him at least 5 gp worth of a donation to his well-being:

 "I've heard a thing or two around the way. Don't know if it's helpful, or even true." The succeeding PC may make a free roll on Error! Reference source not found.the Rumors and Tales table, but Farzith doesn't know whether the conveyed information is true.

Ganyc (Butcher)

CR 1; Starting Attitude: 14 (Indifferent)

Description

Ganyc is a solid butcher—he might be great at it, or merely competent, but there’s nothing so complex in his profession that would allow you to tell the difference. Animals in the area are straightforward, simple, and not difficult to butcher and break down into sellable portions. He does his job well enough, but keeps to himself. This is partly his own preference and demeanor, but also brought about by his trade; not many want to hang out with a man elbows-deep in offal.

Appearance

The stereotypical image of a village butcher is an overweight, balding, sweating, and somewhat burly middle-aged man who swears a lot. Ganyc does not fail to deliver on this ideal, if ideal it might be called.

Combat Tactics

No idiot, Ganyc will defend himself and his shop, but past that, all bets are off. He’s no wish to die, and although he would prefer not to lose the Butcher’s Shop, he knows that there’s nothing inside that’s difficult to replace—the same can’t be said of his person!

If confronted, he will try and flee to the Town Square or a Militia Guard Post for aid, yelling the whole time to arouse others. Ganyc is not beloved of the townsfolk, but many rely upon his shop for their food; 1d4+1 Townsfolk will come to his aid along the way, trying to trip and hold back the PCs if they pursue with militant intent.

Factions

Ganyc is a member of the Meatsmiths, though he knows nothing of the more nefarious purpose of the guild.

In his younger life, he was a proud member of Wild Kingdom, but it’s been more than five years since he had anything to do with that group.

📖 Special Abilities

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common and one extra language of your choice. Humans typically learn the languages of other peoples they deal with, including obscure dialects. They are fond of sprinkling their speech with words borrowed from other tongues: Orc curses, Elvish musical expressions, Dwarvish military phrases, and so on.

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 6th, 8th, 12th, 14th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.

Action Surge Starting at 2nd level, you can push yourself beyond your normal limits for a moment. On your turn, you can take one additional action on top of your regular action and a possible bonus action. Once you use this feature, you must finish a short or long rest before you can use it again. You can use this feature 1 time(s) before a rest, but only once on the same turn.

Additional Fighting Style At 10th level, you can choose a second option from the Fighting Style class feature.

Champion The archetypal Champion focuses on the development of raw physical power honed to deadly perfection. Those who model themselves on this archetype combine rigorous training with physical excellence to deal devastating blows.

Extra Attack Beginning at 5th level, you can attack twice, instead of once, whenever you take the Attack action on your turn. The number of attacks increases to three when you reach 11th level in this class and to four when you reach 20th level in this class.

Fighting Style You adopt a particular style of fighting as your specialty.

Choose one of the following options. You can't take a Fighting Style option more than once, even if you later get to choose again.,

Improved Critical Beginning when you choose this archetype at 3rd level, your weapon attacks score a critical hit on a roll of 19 or 20.,

Indomitable Beginning at 9th level, you can reroll a saving throw that you fail. If you do so, you must use the new roll, and you can't use this feature again until you finish a long rest. You can use this feature 1 time(s) between long rests.,

Martial Archetype At 3rd level, you choose an archetype that you strive to emulate in your combat styles and techniques. The Champion archetype is detailed at the end of the class description; see the Player's Handbook for information on other martial archetypes. Your archetype grants you features at 3rd level and again at 7th, 10th, 15th, and 18th level.,

Remarkable Athlete Starting at 7th level, you can add half your proficiency bonus (round up) to any Strength, Dexterity, or Constitution check you make that doesn't already use your proficiency bonus. In addition, when you make a running long jump, the distance you can cover increases by a number of feet equal to +4.,

Second Wind You have a limited well of stamina that you can draw on to protect yourself from harm. On your turn, you can use a bonus action to regain hit points equal to 1d10 + your fighter level. Once you use this feature, you must finish a short or long rest before you can use it again.,

Defense While you are wearing armor, you gain a +1 bonus to AC.,

Dueling When you are wielding a melee weapon in one hand and no other weapons, you gain a +2 bonus to damage rolls with that weapon.,

Habits and Logistics

☀ During daylight hours, there's a good chance (🎲 65%) Ganyc will be in the Town Square, shopping and selling and negotiating and making connections. Some of the time (🎲 15%), he will be out of the city proper, meeting with the farmers and shepherds who provide his stock. The remainder of the time (🎲 20%), he will be in his shop, going about the business of the day.

🌙 At night, Ganyc leaves his shop at sundown, hitting the Tavern for a few hours. He'll stroll past his shop on his way back to his private quarters in the Lower-Class Residential District to make sure all is well. He leaves the business of finishing up to his apprentice, Farzith, in whom he places a great deal of trust, though he would never show it to the young gnome.

Background

Ganyc was once a mercenary infantryman who traveled far and wide with the Wild Kingdom. After a few ales, a comrade once remarked to him how similar their trade was to that of a butcher. In the morning after, after a particularly brutal battle, Ganyc reflected on how true this comment had been, and sought the nearest village to see if he might ply the trade. Fortunately, he happened upon Berinncorte, which had no butcher formally. He sunk his entire life savings from mercenary work into the building he now occupies, and set up shop.

In the Obelisk Attack

Ganyc is out of town, visiting a farm that supplies him with meat, inspecting the animals, when the Obelisk Eruption occurs. He makes his way back into town, but arrives too late to do anything to save his apprentice Farzith.

Conversation

What do you think of Berinncorte?

🗨️ "Got nothing against it. I've seen nicer cities, but it seems to treat me well enough. Best thing I can say for it is, there's no other butcher!"

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

🗨️ "Nope. Don't care, unless it affects me or the shop. If I don't know about it now, seems likely it won't affect me."

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

🗨️ "Symms is fine. She's a good customer, actually; loves mutton, don't ya know. I stay away from politics, generally. Meat sells just as well if there's law and order, or if everyone's rioting in the streets. Folk's gotta eat, if they've the coin."

Tell me about being a butcher.

🗨️ "Well, you destroy animals and reshape them in order to satisfy the gullets of folk better off than you. So it's no glorious life, make no mistake. But it pays well enough, and I don't mind the blood and guts. Similar enough to the life of an infantryman, it is, though I've no wistfulness for doing that again."

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

🗨️ "I give to charities. One charity, actually: the Leaky Cask. Old joke, and a bad one, but I love it."

Gorin Bakelight (Tribute Magister)

CR 2; Starting Attitude: 14 (Indifferent)

Description

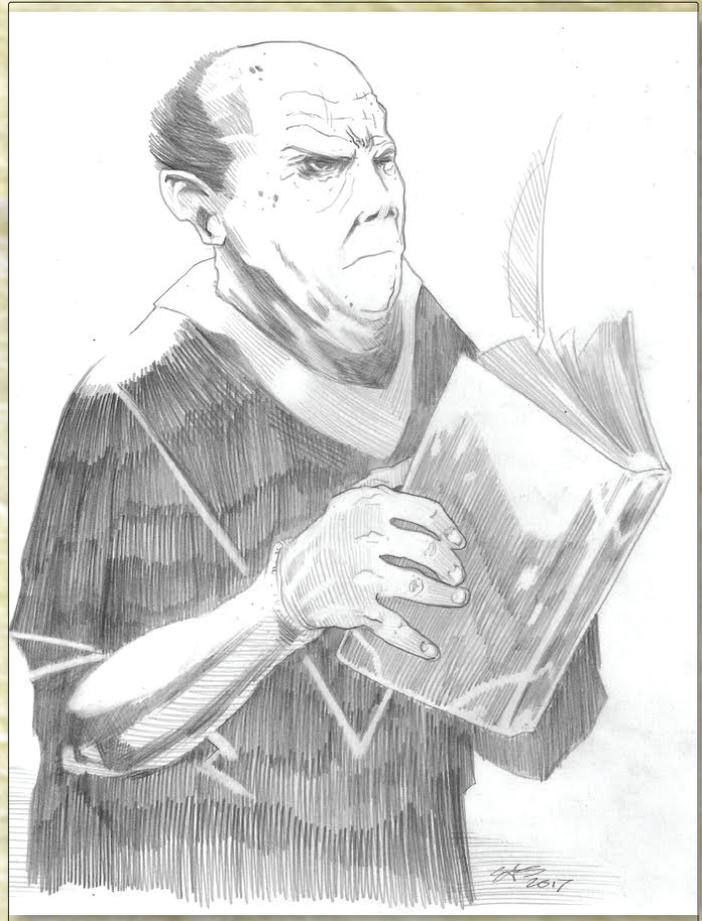

Gorin is a greedy, selfish, jerk of a man with a knack for finances and accounting—and with just enough of an occasional ability to turn on the charm and press the flesh when the circumstances demand it. His skills and personality are tailor-made for his role as Tribute Magister: sociable enough to impress political allies and religious zealots, yet vehemently introverted and snooty enough to form no lasting friendships (and thus maintain his impartiality).

Appearance

Gorin is a pale, nearly-middle-aged, balding man with a burgeoning paunch. That his underlying physical architecture and habits have doomed him to a life of eventual obesity seems nearly guaranteed; a somewhat early demise from heart disease or gout would appear to be a similarly foregone event. His eyes are somewhat sunken, and his chins doubled; his ears are tiny little things that still manage to stick out from his head sufficiently to give the subtextual impression of goblinoid appearance. Yet when he speaks, it's with the voice of a chorus of demanding angels—a deep baritone, as though the human throat had been fashioned into a divine trumpet. He's far from perfect, but seems altogether balanced sufficiently to have it all work to his favor.

Combat Tactics

Tribute Magisters are, as a general rule, not warriors, and Gorin Bakelight is hardly an exception in this regard. A coward to his core, Gorin will flee combat wherever possible, and will summon help at the earliest convenience. The man will fight back if there seems to be literally no other option; as a nobleman, he has had training in the use of his sword cane and other equipment, and is actually quite competent in combat. He will attempt to use his position as Tribute Magister as an excuse to avoid fighting, even if toward noble purpose: the role, and his person, he will claim, are simply too valuable, too important, to Berinncorte, its citizens, and indeed the Realm entire, to risk harm in a brutish exercise.

Factions

Gorin owes allegiance to the gods themselves, as he would put it, and in his role as Magister, himself has no income and therefore pays no tribute. His formal devotion is to the Realm.

Habits and Logistics

 During daylight hours, Gorin will usually be at the Mayor's House tending to business, or sometimes ( 25% of the time) will be at either the Zugul Chruuch or the Sheergath Temple, with equal chance.

 At night, Gorin retires early to his chambers in the Upper-Class Residential District.

Background

Gorin was trained in one of the Realm's capital cities as a nobleman, and was actually doing quite well in pursuing his childhood dream of being a dashing knight. Then he discovered the mysteries of wine, and the luxuries of good food, and his gluttony dashed such dreams quite effectively. Everything seemed so difficult, compared to eating, drinking, and counting money; indeed, once he began down the path of becoming a Tribute Magister, he wondered in genuine amazement that anyone could possibly want anything else more in life.

In the Obelisk Attack

At the very first sign of trouble, Gorin scoops up all the wealth he can physically carry, and flees town immediately.

Conversation

What do you think of Berinncorte?

 "Tis a lovely burg. No drama, stable—if humble—wealth, strict rule of law... it's pretty much the ideal, as far as I'm concerned. Though a slightly larger, well-to-do town, one with better chefs, and access to the best spices... yes, well, that would be ideal, really, but Berinncorte... it's not bad, let's say that, yes?"

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

 "Two sides of an absurdly conflicted coin. There's no cause for either to be up in arms; both can coexist peacefully. I've been to cities with quite literally ten times the churches, the factions, the chance for division... and yes, while there are spirited debates, and the occasional threat, it's all conducted in a much more civilized manner than here. I'm not quite sure what Cannock and Larissa are on about, but it's nearly as though they each want to incite disaster, sometimes. But what do I know? I just collect the coin from them both."

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

 "Symms runs a tight ship, it must be said. I have great respect for the lady, and the role she plays. Now, I do question whether the Tribute flowing out of Berinncorte is quite what it should be, but that's a discussion for other ears, I do believe."

Tell me about being a Tribute Magister.

 "It's the most important job in the Realm. No, seriously. Some folk laugh when they hear that, but consider: who serves the gods themselves? Priests? Confessors? Ministers? Bishops? Yes, those all serve a deity, that's true, and I'd wager all the Tribute in the Realm that any of those in such noble religious offices are likely much closer to their deity than I am to any. But again: who serves all gods? Only Magisters. Only Magisters ensure the flow of Tribute from every citizen, ensure that the proper percentage of every life's contributions are collected, counted, accounted, and then flowed through, escalated, to the proper channels, until eventually, the fruit of even the lowliest farmer ends up in the hands, the mouths, can you comprehend it, of the gods themselves. All the gods. Frankly, it boggles the mind, staggers the intellect, to conceive of the role that I and my colleagues play... and the role we make it possible for common folk to play in it all."

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

 "I've no time for anything else whatsoever. Do you have any idea, any comprehension, how complex my task is? Truly? I think not."

 Diplomacy check opposed by Gorin's Deception check:

 "From time to time, I have been known to sample the occasional wine, the odd savory tidbit, the rarity of cuisine. I'm not made of stone, you understand. And I can appreciate the fruits of the labor of those skilled at foodcraft."

Gumbrew (Fishmaster)

CR 3; Starting Attitude: 14 (Indifferent)

Description

Trained as a barbarian, Gumbrew didn't take to it at all, all he wants to do is fish in peace. Although master of the fishery, he turns the public-facing aspects of things (sales, negotiations) to his apprentice Stewy.

One might wonder at the circumstances by which a burly, tall, and hardy half-orc such as Gumbrew came to be a simple fisherman. There are many theories the townsfolk whisper to one another, but the truth is far from sinister: he simply prefers this sort of life. Simple, peaceful, and quiet, where he can go about his business without owing allegiance or money to anyone.

It's an odd sight, a middle-aged, peaceful half-orc, whistling to himself as he fishes in the river.

Appearance

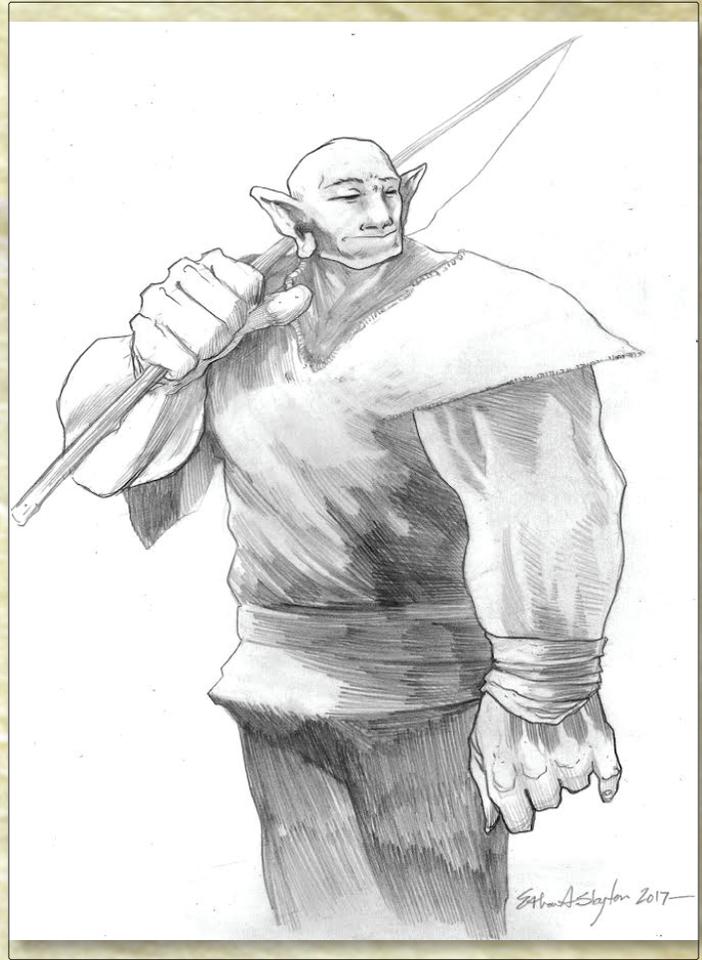

Gumbrew is large and sturdy, even by half-orc standards. He has slightly grayish skin, but the effect is one glimpsed most out of the corner of one's eye; he seems normal when viewed head-on. His teeth are thick and unsharp, his hair disheveled; his general appearance is unkempt and laid-back. He dresses casually and simply, and owns but three pairs of clothes as he can wash them in the river as often as he likes.

Combat Tactics

Those who see but a simple fishhand forget that the half-orc was trained as a barbarian: when faced with conflict, Gumbrew will not back away from a fight, even one he is obviously outmatched in. He has no big stock in the fishery, and tends not to stand in between innocents and a threat; he's just stubborn and hard-headed, and his temper gets up quickly if he takes offense.

Gumbrew will slam into the nearest combatant when battle starts, chucking a throwing axe or two on the way. He will relentlessly attack this first adversary until it is defeated, and will proceed to the next closest enemy, and so on.

His orcish battle roar is a vestige of his former days as a barbarian, but is loud enough to rouse those nearby: each round of combat, there is a cumulative $\text{d}4$ 10% chance of $\text{d}4$ +1 Berinncorte Militia arriving on the scene (so a 10% chance the first round, a 20% chance the second round, and so on); once they arrive, they will side with the fisherman they know rather than the group of strangers the PCs are to them. Any PC may attempt a $\text{d}20$ Charisma (Persuasion) check at DC 18 to convince the Militia that it is instead Gumbrew who is at fault here; success does not convince the Militia outright, but will sow enough of a seed of doubt to cause them to not attack the party immediately.

Factions

Gumbrew pays tribute as required to the City of Berinncorte, but otherwise owes allegiance to no group or order.

Special Abilities

Darkvision Thanks to your orc blood, you have superior vision in dark and dim conditions. You can see in dim light within 60 feet of you as if it were bright light, and in darkness as if it were dim light. You can't discern color in darkness, only shades of gray.

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common and Orc. Orc is a harsh, grating language with hard consonants. It has no script of its own but is written in the Dwarvish script.

Menacing You gain proficiency in the Intimidation skill.

Relentless Endurance When you are reduced to 0 hit points but not killed outright, you can drop to 1 hit point instead. You can't use this feature again until you finish a long rest.

Savage Attacks When you score a critical hit with a melee weapon attack, you can roll one of the weapon's damage dice one additional time and add it to the extra damage of the critical hit.

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 8th, 12th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.

Brutal Critical Beginning at 9th level, you can roll 1 additional weapon damage die when determining the extra damage for a critical hit with a melee attack.

Danger Sense At 2nd level, you gain an uncanny sense of when things nearby aren't as they should be, giving you an edge when you dodge away from danger. You have advantage on Dexterity saving throws against effects that you can see, such as traps and spells. To gain this benefit, you can't be blinded, deafened, or incapacitated.

Extra Attack Beginning at 5th level, you can attack twice, instead of once, whenever you take the Attack action on your turn.

Fast Movement Starting at 5th level, your speed increases by 10 feet while you aren't wearing heavy armor.

Feral Instinct By 7th level, your instincts are so honed that you have advantage on initiative rolls. Additionally, if you are surprised at the beginning of combat and aren't incapacitated, you can act normally on your first turn, but only if you enter your rage before doing anything else on that turn.

Frenzy Starting when you choose this path at 3rd level, you can go into a frenzy when you rage. If you do so, for the duration of your rage you can make a single melee weapon attack as a bonus action on each of your turns after this one. When your rage ends, you suffer one level of exhaustion (as described in appendix A).

Path of the Berserker For some barbarians, rage is a means to an end--that end being violence. The Path of the Berserker is a path of untrammelled fury, slick with blood. As you enter the berserker's rage, you thrill in the chaos of battle, heedless of your own health or well-being.

Primal Path At 3rd level, you choose a path that shapes the nature of your rage. Choose the Path of the Berserker or the Path of the Totem Warrior, both detailed at the end of the class description. Your choice grants you features at 3rd level and again at 6th, 10th, and 14th levels.

Rage In battle, you fight with primal ferocity. On your turn, you can enter a rage as a bonus action. While raging, you gain the following benefits if you aren't wearing heavy armor: You have advantage on Strength checks and Strength saving throws. When you make a melee weapon attack using Strength, you gain a bonus to the damage roll equal to 3. You have resistance to bludgeoning, piercing, and slashing damage. If you are able to cast spells, you can't cast them or concentrate on them while raging. Your rage lasts for 1 minute. It ends early if you are knocked unconscious or if your turn ends and you haven't attacked a hostile creature since your last turn or taken damage since then. You can also end your rage on your turn as a bonus action. Once you have raged the number of times equal to 5, you must finish a long rest before you can rage again.

Reckless Attack Starting at 2nd level, you can throw aside all concern for defense to attack with fierce desperation. When you make your first attack on your turn, you can decide to attack recklessly. Doing so gives you advantage on melee weapon attack rolls using Strength during this turn, but attack rolls against you have advantage until your next turn.

Relentless Rage Starting at 11th level, your rage can keep you fighting despite grievous wounds. If you drop to 0 hit points while you're raging and don't die outright, you can make a DC 10 Constitution saving throw. If you succeed, you drop to 1 hit point instead. Each time you use this feature after the first, the DC increases by 5. When you finish a short or long rest, the DC resets to 10.

Unarmored Defense While you are not wearing any armor, your Armor Class equals 10 + your Dexterity modifier + your Constitution modifier. You can use a shield and still gain this benefit

Habits and Logistics

☀ During daylight hours, Gumbrew is fishing in the river most (🎣 85%) of the time. He occasionally (🎣 15%) will visit the 🏘 Town Square to buy supplies or sell fish.

🌙 At night, Gumbrew will be on the bank of the river (🎣 60%), either fishing more or simply relaxing, or tending to business inside the Fishery (🎣 40%).

Background

A few months ago, Gumbrew accidentally killed someone who had been sneaking into his property late at night. He struck the interloper on the head; they were knocked out, and fell into the river, drowning. He assumes they ended up downstream somewhere. The half-orc is less haunted by the death than he is worried that he'll be discovered and punished, but keeps the whole thing secret.

In the Obelisk Attack

Gumbrew is standing directly atop the point at which the Obelisk erupts, and is slain instantly.

Conversation

What do you think of Berinncorte?

🗨 “Peaceful place, no? Came here to make a life for myself, find some quiet. Seems I found that.”

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

🗨 “I notice things; sure, there's some conflict all right. But I doubt it will escalate much. Folks have too much to live for, here, to put that all at risk for—what? A holy war? Please.”

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

🗨 “Militia keeps the peace, and the Mayor does a fine job running things. I've no complaints. But neither do I deal with the government all that much.”

⚠ Sense Motive check opposed by Gumbrew's Deception check:

🗨 You get the impression that the fisherman is being less than forthright about law and order in the city. “Seems peaceful enough, 'tis true... but there are crimes around here that never get solved. Trust me. But I'll say no more on the subject.”

Tell me about being a fisherman.

🗨 “That stream there, that's everything I need. Plenty of fish, and I've no mean skill with hook or net. It's an endless supply of happiness for me, really.”

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

🗨 “Heh, not sure what you mean about that. I'm quite boring; I fish, I trade, and I nap. So yeah, on the side? I guess you could say I do a lot of napping. It's my hobby.”

Gunnloda Balderk (Librarian)

CR 2; Starting Attitude: 16 (Indifferent)

Description

Jack of all trades, master of... well, many of them, actually; that's Berinncorte's librarian, Gunnloda. Spine a bit hunched, eyes a bit pinched, she is every of her few inches a book-mongering literate.

Appearance

Gunnloda is approaching middle-age, but has the bearing and demeanor of a dwarf twice her years; she actually paints her hair white so as to appear a bit more venerable (and thus, she believes, more respectable and wise).

Whether this technique is effective or necessary, it almost doesn't matter: as the woman in charge of the town's only source of terrestrial wisdom, Gunnloda is in a unique position and is taken seriously and respected regardless of any trickery.

Combat Tactics

This dwarf will fight for nothing except her books. If cornered, she will beg for mercy and offer anything she can that might be of interest, but in truth she has precious little wealth to offer and few skills outside of her knowledge. Similarly, if innocents are threatened in her presence, or her colleagues Biggen Gurble or Tudra Coppereye, she knows she has little to offer the proceedings, and will simply try and run and get help at the nearest Militia Guard Post.

If it is instead her library, or its contents, that are threatened, then... well. She will ferociously defend the building and its books, until death. Gunnloda does not know this about herself, and would only discover it to be true if placed in such a situation—where her own reaction would surprise her!

Factions

Gunnloda has dabbled in the Antimagic Shell, but is on the fence as to whether it is worthwhile committing to them. While she agrees with some of their principles, and certainly feels that society has become quite over-reliant upon magic as a means of “shortcutting” manual effort in many cases, abstaining entirely from magic’s use seems an overreaction to her.

For the time being, at least, her tribute therefore goes to Berinncorte City proper.

Special Abilities

Darkvision Accustomed to life underground, you have superior vision in dark and dim conditions. You can see in dim light within 60 feet of you as if it were bright light, and in darkness as if it were dim light. You can't discern color in darkness, only shades of gray.,

Dwarven Combat Training You have proficiency with the battleaxe, handaxe, light hammer, and warhammer.,

Dwarven Resilience You have advantage on saving throws against poison, and you have resistance against poison damage (explained in chapter 9).,

Dwarven Toughness Your hit point maximum increases by 1, and it increases by 1 every time you gain a level.,

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common and Dwarvish. Dwarvish is full of hard consonants and guttural sounds, and those characteristics spill over into whatever other language a dwarf might speak.,

Mason's Tools Proficient with Artisan Mason's Tools.,

Stonecunning Whenever you make an Intelligence (History) check related to the origin of stonework, you are considered proficient in the History skill and add double your proficiency bonus to the check, instead of your normal proficiency bonus.,

Tool Proficiency You gain proficiency with the artisan's tools of your choice: smith's tools, brewer's supplies, or mason's tools.,

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 6th, 8th, 12th, 14th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.,

Action Surge Starting at 2nd level, you can push yourself beyond your normal limits for a moment. On your turn, you can take one additional action on top of your regular action and a possible bonus action. Once you use this feature, you must finish a short or long rest before you can use it again. You can use this feature 1 time(s) before a rest, but only once on the same turn.,

Additional Fighting Style At 10th level, you can choose a second option from the Fighting Style class feature.,

Champion The archetypal Champion focuses on the development of raw physical power honed to deadly perfection. Those who model themselves on this archetype combine rigorous training with physical excellence to deal devastating blows.,

Extra Attack Beginning at 5th level, you can attack twice, instead of once, whenever you take the Attack action on your turn. The number of attacks increases to three when you reach 11th level in this class and to four when you reach 20th level in this class.,

Fighting Style You adopt a particular style of fighting as your specialty. Choose one of the following options. You can't take a Fighting Style option more than once, even if you later get to choose again.,

Improved Critical Beginning when you choose this archetype at 3rd level, your weapon attacks score a critical hit on a roll of 19 or 20.,

Indomitable Beginning at 9th level, you can reroll a saving throw that you fail. If you do so, you must use the new roll, and you can't use this feature again until you finish a long rest. You can use this feature 1 time(s) between long rests.,

Martial Archetype At 3rd level, you choose an archetype that you strive to emulate in your combat styles and techniques. The Champion archetype is detailed at the end of the class description; see the Player's Handbook for information on other martial archetypes. Your archetype grants you features at 3rd level and again at 7th, 10th, 15th, and 18th level.,

Remarkable Athlete Starting at 7th level, you can add half your proficiency bonus (round up) to any Strength, Dexterity, or Constitution check you make that doesn't already use your proficiency bonus. In addition, when you make a running long jump, the distance you can cover increases by a number of feet equal to +1.,

Second Wind You have a limited well of stamina that you can draw on to protect yourself from harm. On your turn, you can use a bonus action to regain hit points equal to 1d10 + your fighter level. Once you use this feature, you must finish a short or long rest before you can use it again.,

Defense While you are wearing armor, you gain a +1 bonus to AC.,

Protection When a creature you can see attacks a target other than you that is within 5 feet of you, you can use your reaction to impose disadvantage on the attack roll. You must be wielding a shield.

Habits and Logistics

During daylight hours, Gunnloda will be in the Library, usually (85%) reading. She tends to leave the work of dealing with the public to her Reader, Biggen Gurble, who effectively runs the operation as far as the public is concerned. Gunnloda is also the means of contacting Tudra Coppereye, with whom she speaks the remainder of her daylight hours (though much of that time (75%)), Gunnloda and Tudra are meeting with at least one Townfolk to address their question.

At night, Gunnloda keeps to herself, indulging in even more bookreading. Occasionally, she will be forced to discuss matters with her colleagues at the Library, and will either speak with them in the building (40%), or the three of them will visit the Tavern (60%) to converse, locking the building while they are gone.

Background

Gunnloda was always a bookworm, and a bit of a social outcast as a result. She's long preferred the company of books to people, and takes to herself most of the time.

She was appointed Librarian of Berinncorte many years ago by the then-Mayor, who created the building. The Library was stocked by donations from the Mayor and contributions from citizens and other cities... and, largely, from Gunnloda's personal collection, which still comprises some 55% of the books in the building.

In the Obelisk Attack

Gunnloda is in the Gardens when the Eruption occurs; she immediately runs toward the Library to see if the books are okay, and runs afoul of a winged creature who mortally wounds her. She spends the last of her breath dragging herself toward the building she sought.

Conversation

What do you think of Berinncorte?

“Lovely town, with an incomparable library. Did you know, much of what we have comes from my personal collection? It's true.”

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

“Tale as old as time... or, at least, as old as those two faiths. Zugul and Sheergath have been at ideological odds with one another for eons untold; in a way, their strife is a theological incarnation of the broader interplay of chaos versus order, of law versus unrest. In the broader context of the pantheon, Zugul represents—ah, I ramble. I tend to get excited about some topics.”

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

“Symms does a good enough job. She doesn't appreciate knowledge, though—I don't believe she's ever actually been in the Library.”

Tell me about being a librarian.

“My first job is to learn, to study, that I might help others more effectively. For those who require wisdom a bit beyond the capabilities of mere books, there's Tudra—and she's a bit of an odd sort; most folk prefer dealing with me, so I try and help the relationship as I can.”

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

☛ “I’m not quite sure what you mean. I read quite a bit.”

▲ Diplomacy check at DC 18, or a donation of at least 15 gp worth of a donation to the library:

☛ “I come across much knowledge, in my world. Hopefully this is of assistance.” The succeeding PC may make a free roll on the Rumors and Lore table; Gunnloda does in fact know and does convey whether it is accurate.

Gurth (Cryptkeeper)

CR 1; Starting Attitude: 14 (Indifferent)

Description

No way around it—Gurth is an unsavory gnome, but he likes it that way. He keeps to himself, even actively avoiding other people whenever possible.

If slain under any unnatural circumstances, High Priest Cannock will demand an investigation, and will work with Mayor Symms to exact severe justice if he knows the PCs perpetrated the crime. This is, however, less out of a sense of genuine emotion for the lost gnome, and more outrage that such a crime would be enacted against his church.

Appearance

He's a crusty, filthy, and altogether unpleasant-looking example of his race. Townsfolk joke that he's never taken a bath—but soberly, some wonder whether how often he bathes. His clothes are tattered and soiled, and his hair is greasy with bits of twig inexplicably here and there.

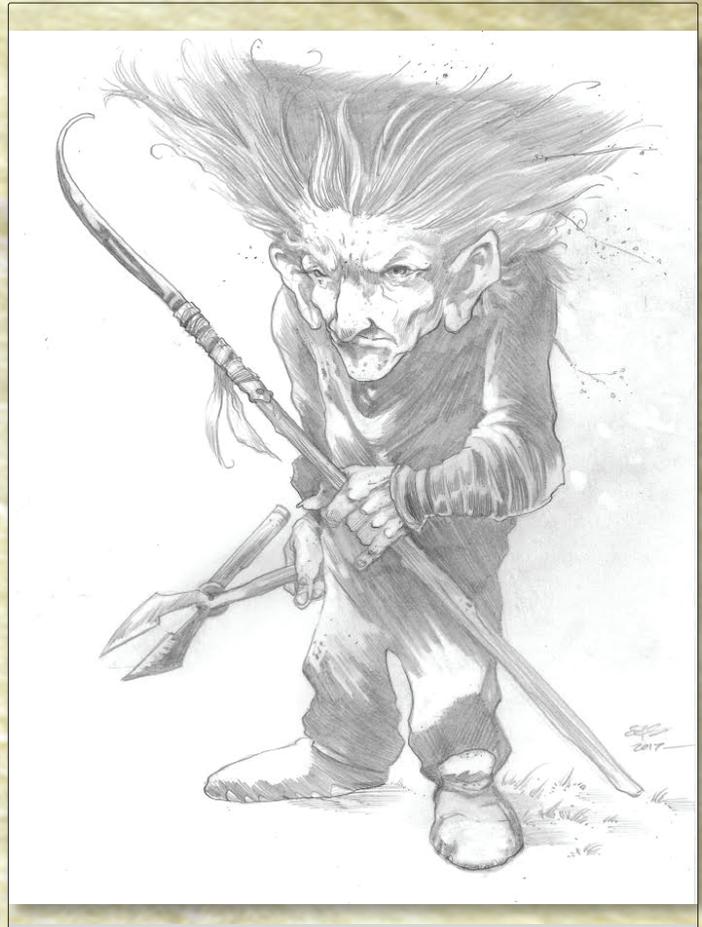

Combat Tactics

Gurth is actually quite content with his life, despite his living conditions. He is motivated by greed and liquor, but will rarely attack anyone outright unless given significant incentive to do so.

If attacked, he will try to escape, seeking sanctuary in the Zugul Church. He is not aware of the secret door in the north of the church, so will attempt to make it to the main entrance in the west of the building. If cornered, he will fight, begging and pleading for mercy all the while.

Factions

Berinncorte City pays him a stipend, as does the Zugul

Church.

He “forgets” his tribute duties every year, and most officials revolt at the concept of paying him a visit to remind him... but when pressed, or if he remembers, his tribute is split between the two factions that pay his wages.

📖 Special Abilities

Artificer's Lore Whenever you make a History check related to magic items, alchemical objects, or technological devices, you can add twice your proficiency bonus (8), instead of any proficiency bonus you normally apply.

Darkvision Accustomed to life underground, you have superior vision in dark and dim conditions. You can see in dim light within 60 feet of you as if it were bright light, and in darkness as if it were dim light. You can't discern color in darkness, only shades of gray.

Gnome Cunning You have advantage on all Intelligence, Wisdom, and Charisma saving throws against magic.

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common and Gnomish. The Gnomish language, which uses the Dwarvish script, is renowned for its technical treatises and its catalogs of knowledge about the natural world.

Tinker You have proficiency with tinker's tools. Using those tools, you can spend 1 hour and 10 gp worth of materials to construct a Tiny clockwork device (AC 5, 1 hp). The device ceases to function after 24 hours. (unless you spend 1 hour repairing it to keep the device functioning), or when you use your action to dismantle it; at that time, you can reclaim the materials used to create it. You can have up to three such devices active at a time. When you create a device, choose one of the following options: Clockwork Toy: This toy is a clockwork animal or person, such as a frog, mouse, bird, or soldier. When placed on the ground, the toy moves 5 feet across the ground on each of your turns in a random direction. It makes noises as appropriate to the creature it represents. Fire Starter: The device produces a miniature flame, which you can use to light something like a candle, torch, or campfire. Using the device requires your action. Music Box: When opened, this music box plays a single song at a moderate volume. The box stops playing when it reaches the song's end or when it is closed.

Tinker's Tools Proficient with Artisan Tinker's Tools.

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 8th, 12th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.,

Cunning Action Starting at 2nd level, your quick thinking and agility allow you to move and act quickly. You can take a bonus action on each of your turns in combat. This action can be used only to take the Dash, Disengage, or Hide action.,

Evasion Beginning at 7th level, you can nimbly dodge out of the way of certain area effects, such as a red dragon's fiery breath or an ice storm spell. When you are subjected to an effect that allows you to make a Dexterity saving throw to take only half damage, you instead take no damage if you succeed on the saving throw, and only half damage if you fail.,

Expertise At 1st level, choose two of your skill proficiencies, or one of your skill proficiencies and your proficiency with thieves' tools. Your proficiency bonus is doubled for any ability check you make that uses either of the chosen proficiencies. At 6th level, you can choose two more of your proficiencies (in skills or with thieves' tools) to gain this benefit.,

Fast Hands Starting at 3rd level, you can use the bonus action granted by your Cunning Action to make a Dexterity (Sleight of Hand) check, use your thieves' tools to disarm a trap or open a lock, or take the Use an Object action.,

Roguish Archetype At 3rd level, you choose an archetype that you emulate in the exercise of your rogue abilities. Your choice grants you features at 3rd level and then again at 9th, 13th, and 17th level.,

Second-Story Work When you choose this archetype at 3rd level, you gain the ability to climb faster than normal; climbing no longer costs you extra movement. In addition, when you make a running jump, the distance you cover increases by a number of feet equal to 5.,

Sneak Attack Beginning at 1st level, you know how to strike subtly and exploit a foe's distraction. Once per turn, you can deal an extra 5d6 damage to one creature you hit with an attack if you have advantage on the attack roll. The attack must use a finesse or a ranged weapon. You don't need advantage on the attack roll if another enemy of the target is within 5 feet of it, that enemy isn't incapacitated, and you don't have disadvantage on the attack roll.,

Supreme Sneak Starting at 9th level, you have advantage on a Dexterity (Stealth) check if you move no more than half your speed on the same turn.,

Thief You hone your skills in the larcenous arts. Burglars, bandits, cutpurses, and other criminals typically follow this archetype, but so do rogues who prefer to think of themselves as professional treasure seekers, explorers, delvers, and investigators. In addition to improving your agility and stealth, you learn skills useful for delving into ancient ruins, reading unfamiliar languages, and using magic items you normally couldn't employ.,

Thieves' Cant During your rogue training you learned thieves' cant, a secret mix of dialect, jargon, and code that allows you to hide messages in seemingly normal conversation. Only another creature that knows thieves' cant understands such messages. It takes four times longer to convey such a message than it does to speak the same idea plainly. In addition, you understand a set of secret signs and symbols used to convey short, simple messages, such as whether an area is dangerous or the territory of a thieves' guild, whether loot is nearby, or whether the people in an area are easy marks or will provide a safe house for thieves on the run.,

Uncanny Dodge Starting at 5th level, when an attacker that you can see hits you with an attack, you can use your reaction to halve the attack's damage against you.

Habits and Logistics

 During daylight hours, Gurth will be minding the Graveyard or the Zugul Church Gardens.

 At night, Gurth will invariably ( 85%) be at the Tavern, drinking away his entire stipend more often than not. At closing time, he will stumble about the streets fearlessly, retiring to his shack. If he does not go to the Tavern, he will idle about the Graveyard for a bit, and then simply turn in early to sleep.

Background

Gurth is actually older than the church or the graveyard he keeps. A venerable gnome, he used to be a thief, until his relative lack of skill caught up with him and he lost everything he had. The guilds and factions in the area effectively banished him from that region of the realm, and after a few years wandering, he ended up drunk on the streets of Berinncorte, where a young High Priest Cannock took pity on the destitute gnome and gave him a job and some degree of purpose.

In the Obelisk Attack

The terrified gnome seeks shelter in his shack during the  Eruption, and through sheer dumb luck, survives. He suffers no guilt whatsoever at not having come to the aid of his fellow townsfolk, and resumes his duties as best as he is able in the aftermath of the attack, as though nothing had happened.

Conversation

 Note: The GM is encouraged to have fun roleplaying Gurth and his reactions. His responses should be terse, yet his expression should be flexible. Remember, this is an exceedingly low-Charisma, filthy, drunken gnome with a macabre profession; the party should have realistically low expectations as to how fruitful any conversation with him is likely to be!

What do you think of Berinncorte?

 “What do I think of what? This? The city? ‘s fine, I guess. Keeps me in ale.”

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

 “You don't go sayin'... don't sayin' yo...” The gnome visibly pulls himself together, as best he can. “Don't you go sayin' a word agains' Cannock, y'hear? Cannock's is all right. All right. Anyone 's a problem with him, they gotta go through me.”

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

 “Who? An' what? I dunno. He's a good horse, I reckon. Shod well.”

Tell me about being a, um, cryptkeeper.

 “Best job in the world! Really? No! Hells, no. 's a 'orrible job. Truly rank. Foul, 't is. But someun's gotta do it, annit pays all right.” He grins at you with rotted teeth, their stench remarkable. “Ya meet interesting people, so ya do. Heh, heh.”

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

 “Does ale count as work? No? Well 'en, nope, no side jobs, I suppose.”

You must hear a lot of interesting stories and rumors in your line of work.

 “Oh, aye? Ah, now you mention it, I did hear summin... that your mammy lay with elk! A hahaha!”

 Diplomacy check at DC 13, pressing the matter as to rumors:

 “Ah, sure, why not; here's what I know.” The succeeding PC may make a free roll on the Rumors and Lore table... however, keep rerolling until the result is a False statement. Gurth passes this falsehood off as true; a  Sense Motive check at DC 16 will tell any PC of his ruse.

Gyldor

CR 5; Starting Attitude: 14 (Indifferent)

Description

This elven ranger is purpose-built to be of assistance in the aftermath of the Obelisk Eruption. His presence here is no coincidence, though it is beyond the scope of this adventure as to how, and by whose command, Gyldor and his wolverine companion have come to be in Berinncore.

Appearance

Tall, mysterious, and quiet, this elf seems out of place in a good-natured, lawful town such as this. Although hardly ugly, and certainly noteworthy, his presence seems to slide off your mind unless you focus upon him intently. His straight dirty-blond hair is shoulder-length, and his ears are severely pointed than others of his kind; his shoulders are broad and support an athletic, lithe build.

Combat Tactics

Gyldor's true purpose here is to combat the Obelisk and the creatures it draws forth; he has little time or patience for any matters that threaten to distract him from that aim. While certainly capable in a fight, he will try to avoid conflict, as he does not wish to explain his presence to the authorities. Ideally, he is here, but not noticed; present, but then forgotten.

Faced with unavoidable battle, he will fight smartly, using ranged attacks against magic-wielding opponents and backing away if possible so as to continue to use his primary weapon, his longbow. Forced into melee, he will use his falchion and attempt to free himself to return to the longbow.

Regardless of circumstances, he will not seek the authorities, and will run away rather than lose; he believes his presence in the city to be absolutely essential to the survival of its citizens, and that importance is far too great to risk on a tavern brawl or a routine mugging.

Factions

Gyldor belongs to a very important faction, but knowledge of its existence and its impact is beyond the scope of this adventure.

The GM is encouraged to try hard to keep Gyldor alive during this adventure, as he has a significant role to play in future components of this Adventure Path. If you are playing this adventure as a one-off, or if Gyldor dies unavoidably, it is still quite possible to continue the adventure path thereafter; details as to how to “replace” Gyldor in his plot role are described in subsequent adventures.

Special Abilities

Cantrip You know one cantrip of your choice from the wizard spell list. Intelligence is your spellcasting ability for it. Spell save DC 15; Spell attack modifier +7.

Darkvision Accustomed to twilight forests and the night sky, you have superior vision in dark and dim conditions. You can see in dim light within 60 feet of you as if it were bright light, and in darkness as if it were dim light. You can't discern color in darkness, only shades of gray.

Elf Weapon Training You have proficiency with the longsword, shortsword, shortbow, and longbow.

Extra Language You can speak, read, and write one extra language of your choice.

Fey Ancestry You have advantage on saving throws against being charmed, and magic can't put you to sleep.

Keen Senses You have proficiency in the Perception skill.

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common and Elvish. Elvish is fluid, with subtle intonations and intricate grammar. Elven literature is rich and varied, and their songs and poems are famous among other races. Many bards learn their language so they can add Elvish ballads to their repertoires.

Trance Elves don't need to sleep. Instead, they meditate deeply, remaining semiconscious, for 4 hours a day. (The Common word for such meditation is "trance.") While meditating, you can dream after a fashion; such dreams are actually mental exercises that have become reflexive through years of practice. After resting in this way, you gain the same benefit that a human does from 8 hours of sleep.

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 8th, 12th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.

Defensive Tactics At 7th level, you gain one of the following features of your choice.

Extra Attack Beginning at 5th level, you can attack twice, instead of once, whenever you take the Attack action on your turn.

Favored Enemy Beginning at 1st level, you have significant experience studying, tracking, hunting, and even talking to a certain type of enemy. Choose a type of favored enemy: aberrations, beasts, celestials, constructs, dragons, elementals, fey, fiends, giants, monstrosities, oozes, plants, or undead. Alternatively, you can select two races of humanoid (such as gnolls and orcs) as favored enemies. You have advantage on Wisdom (Survival) checks to track your favored enemies, as well as on Intelligence checks to recall information about them. When you gain this feature, you also learn one language of your choice that is spoken by your favored enemies, if they speak one at all. You choose one additional favored enemy, as well as an associated language, at 6th and 14th level. As you gain levels, your choices should reflect the types of monsters you have encountered on your adventures.

Fighting Style At 2nd level, you adopt a particular style of fighting as your specialty. Choose one of the following options. You can't take a Fighting Style option more than once, even if you later get to choose again.

Giant Killer When a Large or larger creature within 5 feet of you hits or misses you with an attack, you can use your reaction to attack that creature immediately after its attack, provided that you can see the creature.

Hide in Plain Sight Starting at 10th level, you can spend 1 minute creating camouflage for yourself. You must have access to fresh mud, dirt, plants, soot, and other naturally occurring materials with which to create your camouflage. Once you are camouflaged in this way, you can try to hide by pressing yourself up against a solid surface, such as a tree or wall, that is at least as tall and wide as you are. You gain a +10 bonus to Dexterity (Stealth) checks as long as you remain there without moving or taking actions. Once you move or take an action or a reaction, you must camouflage yourself again to gain this benefit.

Hunter Emulating the Hunter archetype means accepting your place as a bulwark between civilization and the terrors of the wilderness. As you walk the Hunter's path, you learn specialized techniques for fighting the threats you face, from rampaging ogres and hordes of orcs to towering giants and terrifying dragons.

Hunter's Prey At 3rd level, you gain one of the following features of your choice.

Land's Stride Starting at 8th level, moving through nonmagical difficult terrain costs you no extra movement. You can also pass through nonmagical plants without being slowed by them and without taking damage from them if they have thorns, spines, or a similar hazard. In addition, you have advantage on saving throws against plants that are magically created or manipulated to impede movement, such those created by the entangle spell.,

Multiattack At 11th level, you gain one of the following features of your choice.,

Natural Explorer You are particularly familiar with one type of natural environment and are adept at traveling and surviving in such regions. Choose one type of favored terrain: arctic, coast, desert, forest, grassland, mountain, swamp, or the Underdark. When you make an Intelligence or Wisdom check related to your favored terrain, your proficiency bonus is doubled if you are using a skill that you're proficient in. While traveling for an hour or more in your favored terrain, you gain the following benefits: * Difficult terrain doesn't slow your group's travel. * Your group can't become lost except by magical means. * Even when you are engaged in another activity while traveling (such as foraging, navigating, or tracking), you remain alert to danger. * If you are traveling alone, you can move stealthily at a normal pace. * When you forage, you find twice as much food as you normally would. * While tracking other creatures, you also learn their exact number, their sizes, and how long ago they passed through the area. You choose additional favored terrain types at 6th and 10th level.,

Primeval Awareness Beginning at 3rd level, you can use your action and expend one ranger spell slot to focus your awareness on the region around you. For 1 minute per level of the spell slot you expend, you can sense whether the following types of creatures are present within 1 mile of you (or within up to 6 miles if you are in your favored terrain): aberrations, celestials, dragons, elementals, fey, fiends, and undead. This feature doesn't reveal the creatures' location or number.,

Ranger Archetype At 3rd level, you choose an archetype that you strive to emulate: Hunter or Beast Master, both detailed at the end of the class description. Your choice grants you features at 3rd level and again at 7th, 11th, and 15th level.,

Spellcasting By the time you reach 2nd level, you have learned to use the magical essence of nature to cast spells, much as a druid does. See chapter 10 for the general rules of spellcasting and chapter 11 for the ranger spell list. Spell save DC 19; Spell attack modifier +11,

Spell Slots The Ranger table shows how many spell slots you have to cast your spells of 1st level and higher. To cast one of these spells, you must expend a slot of the spell's level or higher. You regain all expended spell slots when you finish a long rest. For example, if you know the 1st-level spell animal friendship and have a 1st-level and a 2nd-level spell slot available, you can cast animal friendship using either slot. You know two 1st-level spells of your choice from the ranger spell list. The Spells Known column of the Ranger table shows when you learn more ranger spells of your choice. Each of these spells must be of a level for which you have,

Steel Will You have advantage on saving throws against being frightened.,

Superior Hunter's Defense At 15th level, you gain one of the following features of your choice.,

Uncanny Dodge When an attacker that you can see hits you with an attack, you can use your reaction to halve the attack's damage against you.,

Vanish Starting at 14th level, you can use the Hide action as a bonus action on your turn. Also, you can't be tracked by nonmagical means, unless you choose to leave a trail.,

Volley You can use your action to make a ranged attack against any number of creatures within 10 feet of a point you can see within your weapon's range. You must have ammunition for each target, as normal, and you make a separate attack roll for each target.,

Archery You gain a +2 bonus to attack rolls you make with ranged weapons.,

Aberrations Advantage on Wisdom (Survival) checks to track Aberrations, as well as on Intelligence checks to recall information about them. You also learn one language of your choice that is spoken by your favored enemies, if they speak one at all.,

Giants Advantage on Wisdom (Survival) checks to track Giants, as well as on Intelligence checks to recall information about them. You also learn one language of your choice that is spoken by your favored enemies, if they speak one at all.,

Humanoids Advantage on Wisdom (Survival) checks to track Humanoids, as well as on Intelligence checks to recall information about them. You also learn one language of your choice that is spoken by your favored enemies, if they speak one at all.

Habits and Logistics

 During daylight hours, Gyldor will be out and about, either within the city limits, or nearby outside. His mission in Berinncorte takes him all over the village, so as the GM, you are free to "place" him anywhere, or nowhere, as suits your purpose.

 At night, Gyldor retires to the solitude of the forest outside the city, sleeping in a tree with his wolverine animal companion.

Background

Gyldor belongs to one of the very few organizations in the realm who know anything about the Obelisk, its history, and its nature. His role here in Berinncorte is to act on information that faction has obtained, indicating that an event might occur soon in the city.

In the Obelisk Attack

To say Gyldor "saw this coming" is perhaps a bit of an overstatement, but not much of one; he has ever been on guard and on watch for an event such as this. As a result, he is ready when it occurs; he saves several Townfolk, then escapes out of the city as rapidly as possible.

Conversation

What do you think of Berinncorte?

 "It's a fine town. Lovely people. Peaceful."

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

 "Silly and unnecessary. These faiths are two sides of the same coin. They should learn to benefit one another, to work together. They threaten to tear this town apart, and it's so avoidable it hurts to contemplate it."

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

 "She does a good job. Things are orderly, peaceful, generally quiet. She may take things a bit far with the law and order approach to keeping the peace; that's a concern."

Tell me about being a... ranger?

 "I'm more than that, but then, I wager you've figured that much out. I'm content in my station, and glad to be in Berinncorte. There are many worse places I could have ended up."

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

 "Needlepoint. Do you have any serious questions?"

 Diplomacy or Sense Motive check opposed by Gyldor's Knowledge (Local) check, pressing the matter above:

 "I'm here to help keep things peaceful and civilized. Hopefully I'm not necessary. And that's all I will say on the matter."

Hueykins (Jester)

CR 3; Starting Attitude: 14 (Indifferent)

Description

In a regal, court setting, this bard would be a fool, a jester—but hanging out by the city gates, his lively manner and good-natured cavorting antics take more the form of a greeter, an unofficial “welcomer” into the city. He’s good with faces and names, as most bards must be, and quick to identify strangers. When he spots someone he doesn’t yet know, he will swoop in with an impromptu performance to catch their attention, then welcome them to the city.

Appearance

Hueykins is a bizarre, nimble little man. His clothes are garish colors, but the nature of his armor remains easy to spot. He has flowing, straight, shoulder-length brown hair, a moustache, and grimy fingernails.

Combat Tactics

Although he seems a fool, Hueykins is a trained fighter and will not shy away from a fight if it seems unavoidable. As he hangs out in the City Gates area, he does not intentionally call for assistance from the Militia, trusting that if strangers (such as the party) assault him, they will come to his defense as a known quantity if nothing else.

Factions

Everything about his demeanor and speech would suggest him to be a devotee of the City of Berinncorte itself.

However, in truth, he is a secret member of The Scarlet Path, placed here in the city by them so as to keep an eye on things as their representative.

Special Abilities

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common and one extra language of your choice. Humans typically learn the languages of other peoples they deal with, including obscure dialects. They are fond of sprinkling their speech with words borrowed from other tongues: Orc curses, Elvish musical expressions, Dwarvish military phrases, and so on.,

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 8th, 12th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.,

Additional Magical Secrets At 6th level, you learn two spells of your choice from any class. A spell you choose must be of a level you can cast, as shown on the Bard table, or a cantrip. The chosen spells count as bard spells for you but don't count against the number of bard spells you know.,

Bard College At 3rd level, you delve into the advanced techniques of a bard college of your choice: the College of Lore or the College of Valor, both detailed at the end of the class description. Your choice grants you features at 3rd level and again at 6th and 14th level.,

Bardic Inspiration You can inspire others through stirring words or music. To do so, you use a bonus action on your turn to choose one creature other than yourself within 60 feet of you who can hear you. That creature gains one Bardic Inspiration die, a d10. Once within the next 10 minutes, the creature can roll the die and add the number rolled to one ability check, attack roll, or saving throw it makes. The creature can wait until after it rolls the d20 before deciding to use the Bardic Inspiration die, but must decide before the DM says whether the roll succeeds or fails. Once the Bardic Inspiration die is rolled, it is lost. A creature can have only one Bardic Inspiration die at a time. You can use this feature a number of times equal to 5. You regain any expended uses when you finish a long rest.,

Bonus Proficiencies When you join the College of Lore at 3rd level, you gain proficiency with three skills of your choice.,

Cantrips You know two cantrips of your choice from the bard spell list. You learn additional bard cantrips of your choice at higher levels, as shown in the Cantrips Known column of the Bard table.,

College of Lore Bards of the College of Lore know something about most things, collecting bits of knowledge from sources as diverse as scholarly tomes and peasant tales. Whether singing folk ballads in taverns or elaborate compositions in royal courts, these bards use their gifts to hold audiences spellbound. When the applause dies down, the audience members might find themselves questioning everything they held to be true, from their faith in the priesthood of the local temple to their loyalty to the king. The loyalty of these bards lies in the pursuit of beauty and truth, not in fealty to a monarch or following the tenets of a deity. A noble who keeps such a bard as a herald or advisor knows that the bard would rather be honest than politic. The college's members gather in libraries and sometimes in actual colleges, complete with classrooms and dormitories, to share their lore with one another. They also meet at festivals or affairs of state, where they can expose corruption, unravel lies, and poke fun at self-important figures of authority.,

Countercharm At 6th level, you gain the ability to use musical notes or words of power to disrupt mind-influencing effects. As an action, you can start a performance that lasts until the end of your next turn. During that time, you and any friendly creatures within 30 feet of you have advantage on saving throws against being frightened or charmed. A creature must be able to hear you to gain this benefit. The performance ends early if you are incapacitated or silenced or if you voluntarily end it (no action required).,

Cutting Words Also at 3rd level, you learn how to use your wit to distract, confuse, and otherwise sap the confidence and competence of others. When a creature that you can see within 60 feet of you makes an attack roll, an ability check, or a damage roll, you can use your reaction to expend one of your uses of Bardic Inspiration, rolling a Bardic Inspiration die and subtracting the number rolled from the creature's roll. You can choose to use this feature after the creature makes its roll, but before the DM determines whether the attack roll or ability check succeeds or fails, or before the creature deals its damage. The creature is immune if it can't hear you or if it's immune to being charmed.,

Expertise At 3rd level, choose two of your skill proficiencies. Your proficiency bonus is doubled for any ability check you make that uses either of the chosen proficiencies. At 10th level, you can choose another two skill proficiencies to gain this benefit.,

Font of Inspiration Beginning when you reach 5th level, you regain all of your expended uses of Bardic Inspiration when you finish a short or long rest.,

Jack of All Trades Starting at 2nd level, you can add half your proficiency bonus, rounded down, to any ability check you make that doesn't already include your proficiency bonus.,

Magical Secrets By 10th level, you have plundered magical knowledge from a wide spectrum of disciplines. Choose two spells from any class, including this one. A spell you choose must be of a level you can cast, as shown on the Bard table, or a cantrip. The chosen spells count as bard spells for you and are included in the number in the Spells Known column of the Bard table. You learn two additional spells from any class at 14th level and again at 18th level.,

Peerless Skill Starting at 14th level, when you make an ability check, you can expend one use of Bardic Inspiration. Roll a Bardic Inspiration die and add the number rolled to your ability check. You can choose to do so after you roll the die for the ability check, but before the DM tells you whether you succeed or fail.,

Song of Rest Beginning at 2nd level, you can use soothing music or oration to help revitalize your wounded allies during a short rest. If you or any friendly creatures who can hear your performance regain hit points at the end of the short rest, each of those creatures regains an extra 1d10 hit points. A creature regains the extra hit points only if it spends one or more Hit Dice at the end of the short rest.,

Spellcasting You have learned to untangle and reshape the fabric of reality in harmony with your wishes and music. Your spells are part of your vast repertoire, magic that you can tune to different situations. See chapter 10 for the general rules of spellcasting and chapter 11 for the bard spell list.

Habits and Logistics

During daylight hours, Hueykings will cavort about the City Gates, greeting strangers and acting as the city's unofficial welcomer.

At night, nobody knows where Hueykings goes. In reality, he slips away outside the city to rest, either among his Scarlet Path brethren to deliver a report, or in a field or forest.

Background

Hueykings was raised in a troupe of performers. One day, the Scarlet Path became aware of their political leanings, and concluded that they were acting against the Path's agenda. Path mercenaries slaughtered many, and of those saved, they convinced most to join the Path. The 12-year-old human bard was one of these survivors.

In the Obelisk Attack

When the Obelisk Erupts, Hueykins realizes that something of monumental import is taking place. Although he yearns to stick around and see what transpires, he knows that his first duty is to make sure the Scarlet Path is informed of the event; he flees the city immediately and thus survives.

Conversation

What do you think of Berinncorte?

“Ah, ‘tis a wondrous place! A place of peace! A city of splendors! A village of good, hearty folk! Yes, truly a wondrous and magical place to call home!”

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

“What a wonderful thing it is, that Berinncorte is so large and important and impressive that it sports two churches of significance enough that there is a conflict at all? I’m sure whatever it is they are fighting about, it seems all very important to the folk involved... but ultimately, they’ll realize that they can both prosper in a city such as this. All may prosper here!”

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

“Ah, Symms does a fine job, a fine job, indeed, keeping the peace! The Militia as well. Blessed, we all are, in Berinncorte, that such leadership acts so effectively on our behalf.”

Tell me about being a... greeter? Jester? Fool?

“What does it look like? It’s the greatest thing in the world, to sing the praises of one fo the best places on earth. Some folk say they get to meet interesting people... well, I get to meet all the people in the city! Coming in or out!”

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

For a brief moment, you think you see the jester’s façade fall away, and a glint of suspicion haze his eyes. Then, his usual bonhomie resurfaces. “You see, this is my full-time job, so it is. Not quite profitable, but it suits my needs just fine.”

Sense Motive check opposed by Hueykins’ Deception check, continuing the above line of inquiry:

“It’s a great deal more than it seems, greeting folk. You get to meet all of the new people, know who they are, often before anyone else in town knows they’re even here. You also get to understand, to know, to feel the patterns of the citizens, their comings and goings. There’s knowledge in power, so they say.”

Hear anything interesting?

“I do, I do, of course I do! But you see, friends, this is my only job, my only trade, my only profession, such as it is. I’d be a starving gutter rat if I didn’t see some profit off it. The map’s at-cost, you see; it’s rumors and lore that put food in my tummy, most nights.” Any PC may pay 5 gp for a roll on the Rumors and Lore table, and for another 5 gp, Hueykins will tell you if it’s true or not. The party may spend up to 60 gp in total via this approach, or up to another limit that the GM determines is appropriate.

Ines Borque (Merchant / Beast Raiser)

CR 2; Starting Attitude: 16 (Indifferent)

Description

Ines Borque is a half-orcish female farmer and paladin, with a special talent for animal husbandry. She's well aware that a combination of any two of those elements would typically be greeted with quixotic looks at best, and torches and pitchforks at worst. She's learned to live with it, and not to spend too much time trying to convince others of the merits of what is ultimately just who she is.

Appearance

A hardened, stoic woman, Ines is strong, capable, and is possessed of an undeniable presence. Her cheekbones are high and mighty, and though it's impossible to escape the definite genetic influence of her orcish heritage, her face and gait seem graceful, as though they have combined the most confident and pleasing aspects of both races.

Combat Tactics

Ines will fight to defend any innocent, herself, her business, or the town itself, and will not hesitate to do so. She's used to handling and managing many creatures simultaneously, whose combined mass outweighs her by an order of magnitude, and in her early life, was a cave-diving adventurer... and so a squabble in the city is not going to faze her in the slightest. She won't turn away help from the Militia if they get involved, but it simply won't even occur to her to yell for their help, herself.

Factions

Ines owes allegiance to no faction or religion, though she can occasionally be seen in the Zugul Church.

Her Tribute goes to Berinncorte City itself.

Special Abilities

Darkvision Thanks to your orc blood, you have superior vision in dark and dim conditions. You can see in dim light within 60 feet of you as if it were bright light, and in darkness as if it were dim light. You can't discern color in darkness, only shades of gray.,

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common and Orc. Orc is a harsh, grating language with hard consonants. It has no script of its own but is written in the Dwarvish script.,

Menacing You gain proficiency in the Intimidation skill.,

Relentless Endurance When you are reduced to 0 hit points but not killed outright, you can drop to 1 hit point instead. You can't use this feature again until you finish a long rest.,

Savage Attacks When you score a critical hit with a melee weapon attack, you can roll one of the weapon's damage dice one additional time and add it to the extra damage of the critical hit.,

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 8th, 12th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.,

Aura of Courage Starting at 10th level, you and friendly creatures within 10 feet of you can't be frightened while you are conscious.,

Aura of Devotion Starting at 7th level, you and friendly creatures within 10 feet of you can't be charmed while you are conscious.,

Aura of Protection Starting at 6th level, whenever you or a friendly creature within 10 feet of you must make a saving throw, the creature gains a bonus to the saving throw equal to 2. You must be conscious to grant this bonus.,

Channel Divinity Your oath allows you to channel divine energy to fuel magical effects. Each Channel Divinity option provided by your oath explains how to use it. When you use your Channel Divinity, you choose which option to use. You must then finish a short or long rest to use your Channel Divinity again. Some Channel Divinity effects require saving throws. When you use such an effect from this class, the DC equals your paladin spell save DC.,

Divine Health By 3rd level, the divine magic flowing through you makes you immune to disease.,

Divine Sense The presence of strong evil registers on your senses like a noxious odor, and powerful good rings like heavenly music in your ears. As an action, you can open your awareness to detect such forces. Until the end of your next turn, you know the location of any celestial, fiend, or undead within 60 feet of you that is not behind total cover. You know the type (celestial, fiend, or undead) of any being whose presence you sense, but not its identity (the vampire Count Strahd von Zarovich, for instance). Within the same radius, you also detect the presence of any place or object that has been consecrated or desecrated, as with the hallow spell. You can use this feature 3 times. When you finish a long rest, you regain all expended uses.,

Divine Smite Starting at 2nd level, when you hit a creature with a melee weapon attack, you can expend one spell slot to deal radiant damage to the target, in addition to the weapon's damage. The extra damage is 2d8 for a 1st-level spell slot, plus 1d8 for each spell level higher than 1st, to a maximum of 5d8. The damage increases by 1d8 if the target is an undead or a fiend.,

Extra Attack Beginning at 5th level, you can attack twice, instead of once, whenever you take the Attack action on your turn.,

Fighting Style At 2nd level, you adopt a style of fighting as your specialty. Choose one of the following options. You can't take a Fighting Style option more than once, even if you later get to choose again.,

Improved Divine Smite By 11th level, you are so suffused with righteous might that all your melee weapon strikes carry divine power with them. Whenever you hit a creature with a melee weapon, the creature takes an extra 1d8 radiant damage. If you also use your Divine Smite with an attack, you add this damage to the extra damage of your Divine Smite.,

Lay on Hands Your blessed touch can heal wounds. You have a pool of healing power that replenishes when you take a long rest. With that pool, you can restore a total number of hit points equal to 65. As an action, you can touch a creature and draw power from the pool to restore a number of hit points to that creature, up to the maximum amount remaining in your pool. Alternatively, you can expend 5 hit points from your pool of healing to cure the target of one disease or neutralize one poison affecting it. You can cure multiple diseases and neutralize multiple poisons with a single use of Lay on Hands, expending hit points separately for each one. This feature has no effect on undead and constructs.,

Oath of Devotion The Oath of Devotion binds a paladin to the loftiest ideals of justice, virtue, and order. Sometimes called cavaliers, white knights, or holy warriors, these paladins meet the ideal of the knight in shining armor, acting with honor in pursuit of justice and the greater good. They hold themselves to the highest standards of conduct, and some, for better or worse, hold the rest of the world to the same standards. Many who swear this oath are devoted to gods of law and good and use their gods' tenets as the measure of their devotion. They hold angels-the perfect servants of good-as their ideals, and incorporate images of angelic wings into their helmets or coats of arms.,

Oath Spells Each oath has a list of associated spells. You gain access to these spells at the levels specified in the oath description. Once you gain access to an oath spell, you always have it prepared. Oath spells don't count against the number of spells you can prepare each day. If you gain an oath spell that doesn't appear on the paladin spell list, the spell is nonetheless a paladin spell for you.,

Sacred Oath When you reach 3rd level, you swear the oath that binds you as a paladin forever. Up to this time you have been in a preparatory stage, committed to the path but not yet sworn to it. Now you choose the Oath of Devotion, the Oath of the Ancients, or the Oath of Vengeance, all detailed at the end of the class description. Your choice grants you features at 3rd level and again at 7th, 15th, and 20th level. Those features include oath spells and the Channel Divinity feature.,

Sacred Weapon As an action, you can imbue one weapon that you are holding with positive energy, using your Channel Divinity. For 1 minute, you add +2 to attack rolls made with that weapon. The weapon also emits bright light in a 20-foot radius and dim light 20 feet beyond that. If the weapon is not already magical, it becomes magical for the duration. You can end this effect on your turn as part of any other action. If you are no longer holding or carrying this weapon, or if you fall unconscious, this effect ends.,

Spellcasting By 2nd level, you have learned to draw on divine magic through meditation and prayer to cast spells as a cleric does. See chapter 10 for the general rules of spellcasting and chapter 11 for the paladin spell list. Spell save DC 15; Spell attack modifier +7; Number of spells to prepare 8.,

Spellcasting Focus You can use a holy symbol (found in chapter 5) as a spellcasting focus for your paladin spells.,

Turn the Unholy As an action, you present your holy symbol and speak a prayer censuring fiends and undead, using your Channel Divinity. Each fiend or undead that can see or hear you within 30 feet of you must make a Wisdom saving throw. If the creature fails its saving throw, it is turned for 1 minute or until it takes damage. A turned creature must spend its turns trying to move as far away from you as it can, and it can't willingly move to a space within 30 feet of you. It also can't take reactions. For its action, it can use only the Dash action or try to escape from an effect that prevents it from moving. If there's nowhere to move, the creature can use the Dodge action.,

Protection When a creature you can see attacks a target other than you that is within 5 feet of you, you can use your reaction to impose disadvantage on the attack roll. You must be wielding a shield.

Habits and Logistics

During daylight hours, Ines will often 60% of the time) be in her stall in the Town Square, tending to sales and negotiations. The remainder of the time, she will be on various farmland outside the city, completing sales and managing her animals.

🌙 At night, Ines will return to her farmland to sleep.

Background

Ines never knew her orcish father, and her human mother never spoke of him, acting for all the world as though he had never even existed. From an early age, her mother counseled Ines that the world would always view her as different, which is not the worst thing to be. So long as others would assume her to be different—whatever that meant—she might as well be as different as her heart truly wished to be. And so an adolescent Ines set out to become an adventurer, and paladin, and along the way, helped farmers in various capacities... and soon learned that she had a knack for raising and controlling animals.

In the Obelisk Attack

Ines realizes something bad is happening as soon as the rumbling starts. She gathers some supplies, and escapes the town, fleeing to the relative safety of her farmland.

Conversation

What do you think of Berinncorte?

🗨️ “It’s a town of small size, but not of small mind. It’s progressive, and while not accepting, really, nobody is, and so I’ve found a home here. I still feel more at home among the animals than I do among the people, though.”

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

🗨️ “People seem to be quite creative in fabricating ways of going at each others’ throats. There are so few legitimate reasons, but that never stops folk. It’s sad.”

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

🗨️ “Symms is a good lass. She tries hard, and it’s hard to criticize the results. Berinncorte is as peaceful and safe a place as I’ve ever been, apart from the farm.”

Tell me about being a beast raiser.

🗨️ “I’ve found many things that bring me pleasure, but few that bring me joy. Raising beasts does both. It’s hard, challenging work, but I’m born for it, and enjoy it immensely.”

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

🗨️ “Well, I’ve been known to accompany an adventuring party or two, from time to time. No availability for such endeavors at the moment, however. Though I must admit seeing you all together, ready to go out and make your name... I’m jealous, I don’t mind saying!”

Jozan (Bartender)

CR 1/2; XP 200; Starting Attitude: 18 (Indifferent)

Description

Jozan is a charismatic half-orc, used to unfair prejudice and used to shrugging it off. He suspects he's capable of much more in life—either as an adventurer, a mercenary, or as a merchant of more than just a simple bar... but he likes it this way. The word that best describes him is comfortable.

Appearance

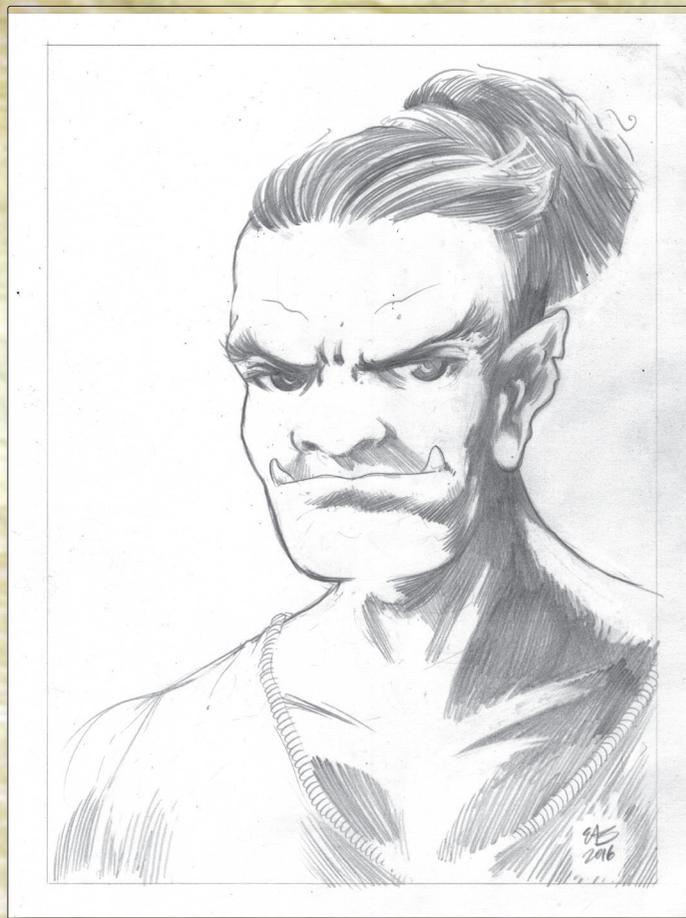

There's a notch in one of his ears; not even Jozan himself recalls how it got to be that way, but the tale he tells is that his mother thought it would be cute. His smile is broad and welcoming, and he has a knack for including each and every patron in his gaze as he works. None feel as though they wait for a drink, even when they are in fact waiting.

Combat Tactics

Jozan loves his bar, but will not fight to the death to defend it. His myriad talents add up to the equivalent of one class level of Rogue, and he's certainly no coward, but given the choice between surviving for another day and playing the hero, his choice is clear: he'll see you tomorrow.

Factions

None. Jozan gives his tribute directly to the City of Berinncorte.

📖 Special Abilities

Darkvision Thanks to your orc blood, you have superior vision in dark and dim conditions. You can see in dim light within 60 feet of you as if it were bright light, and in darkness as if it were dim light. You can't discern color in darkness, only shades of gray.

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common and Orc. Orc is a harsh, grating language with hard consonants. It has no script of its own but is written in the Dwarvish script.

Menacing You gain proficiency in the Intimidation skill.

Relentless Endurance When you are reduced to 0 hit points but not killed outright, you can drop to 1 hit point instead. You can't use this feature again until you finish a long rest.

Savage Attacks When you score a critical hit with a melee weapon attack, you can roll one of the weapon's damage dice one additional time and add it to the extra damage of the critical hit.

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 8th, 12th,

16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.

Cunning Action Starting at 2nd level, your quick thinking and agility allow you to move and act quickly. You can take a bonus action on each of your turns in combat. This action can be used only to take the Dash, Disengage, or Hide action.

Evasion Beginning at 7th level, you can nimbly dodge out of the way of certain area effects, such as a red dragon's fiery breath or an ice storm spell. When you are subjected to an effect that allows you to make a Dexterity saving throw to take only half damage, you instead take no damage if you succeed on the saving throw, and only half damage if you fail.

Expertise At 1st level, choose two of your skill proficiencies, or one of your skill proficiencies and your proficiency with thieves' tools. Your proficiency bonus is doubled for any ability check you make that uses either of the chosen proficiencies. At 6th level, you can choose two more of your proficiencies (in skills or with thieves' tools) to gain this benefit.

Fast Hands Starting at 3rd level, you can use the bonus action granted by your Cunning Action to make a Dexterity (Sleight of Hand) check, use your thieves' tools to disarm a trap or open a lock, or take the Use an Object action.,

Roguish Archetype At 3rd level, you choose an archetype that you emulate in the exercise of your rogue abilities. Your choice grants you features at 3rd level and then again at 9th, 13th, and 17th level.,

Second-Story Work When you choose this archetype at 3rd level, you gain the ability to climb faster than normal; climbing no longer costs you extra movement. In addition, when you make a running jump, the distance you cover increases by a number of feet equal to 3.,

Sneak Attack Beginning at 1st level, you know how to strike subtly and exploit a foe's distraction. Once per turn, you can deal an extra 5d6 damage to one creature you hit with an attack if you have advantage on the attack roll. The attack must use a finesse or a ranged weapon. You don't need advantage on the attack roll if another enemy of the target is within 5 feet of it, that enemy isn't incapacitated, and you don't have disadvantage on the attack roll.,

Supreme Sneak Starting at 9th level, you have advantage on a Dexterity (Stealth) check if you move no more than half your speed on the same turn.,

Thief You hone your skills in the larcenous arts. Burglars, bandits, cutpurses, and other criminals typically follow this archetype, but so do rogues who prefer to think of themselves as professional treasure seekers, explorers, delvers, and investigators. In addition to improving your agility and stealth, you learn skills useful for delving into ancient ruins, reading unfamiliar languages, and using magic items you normally couldn't employ.,

Thieves' Cant During your rogue training you learned thieves' cant, a secret mix of dialect, jargon, and code that allows you to hide messages in seemingly normal conversation. Only another creature that knows thieves' cant understands such messages. It takes four times longer to convey such a message than it does to speak the same idea plainly. In addition, you understand a set of secret signs and symbols used to convey short, simple messages, such as whether an area is dangerous or the territory of a thieves' guild, whether loot is nearby, or whether the people in an area are easy marks or will provide a safe house for thieves on the run.,

Uncanny Dodge Starting at 5th level, when an attacker that you can see hits you with an attack, you can use your reaction to halve the attack's damage against you.

Habits and Logistics

 During daylight hours, Jozan will typically ( 80%) sleep, clean the bar, or otherwise prepare for the day at the  Tavern. The remainder of his daytime is spent shopping for supplies at the  Town Square.

 At night, Jozan of course runs the bar until close. If he is not engaged in after-hours servies (see below), he will clean up and then turn in to bed.

Background

In his position as barkeep, he's had ample opportunity to engage in a side profession as well: gigolo. He's not quite retired, as such, but he's comfortable enough with his situation that he's much more discriminating in his customers.

Attractive PCs who show even a passing interest in Jozan will find themselves hit on, and eventually propositioned for a fee; it's left to the GM's discretion as to whether this is appropriate for the gaming group. Typical gigolo fees for "standard services" are 80 gp per evening... minus 10 per point of Charisma above 12.

In the Obelisk Attack

Jozan survives; he is asleep when the Eruption takes place.

He throws on some clothes and leaps to the door, and then helps others run to safety.

Conversation

What do you think of Berinncorte?

 "'Tis a fine place, you ask me. Good people with a hearty appetite and a sense of humor, more often than not."

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

 "Doesn't concern me much, really. I mean, you hear talk, you can't not, tending bar... but I've no particular love for either church, and most folk who come here don't do so to get involved in a theological debate."

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

 "Symms does a good job. Running the Leaky Cask is tough enough; I can't imagine how she manages the entire city."

Tell me about being a bartender.

 "It's a great job. Pay won't make me wealthy, but it's comfortable work, and suits me. Get to know a lot of people, that's true enough—I can't think of anyone in town who doesn't pop in from time to time. No matter your religion, stature, wealth, or profession, everyone can appreciate a hearty meal and a good mug of ale. I like to think it brings folk together, you know?"

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

 "Well, sure; 'twould be rare to not have a little hobby on the side, now wouldn't it?" If the party asking him these questions includes at least one female PC with a Charisma greater than 11, Jozan will now launch into the event RTE-7: Well, Hello There. If not, he leaves his vague comment as-is without further clarification.

Diplomacy check, pressing the matter above:

 "I've certain skills in the bedroom, don't you know. 'Tis a gift, I suppose, and while some make sport of the talent, I'm an entrepreneur when it comes down to it. Most folk'd be surprised to learn how many comely lasses enjoy a bit of no-questions-asked hobby in the sheets."

Kayzark (Vendor)

CR 2; Starting Attitude: 16 (Indifferent)

Description

Kayzark is a tall, lithe half-elf vendor with a knack for finding the obscure. In his ideal scenario, folk would commission him to locate unique or rare items, and he would do so for at most a handful of elite, wealthy collectors, whose requests would send him far and wide across the realm with an expense account as his ally.

In reality, right now, he has to settle for peddling bizarre knickknacks and tools of esoteric use.

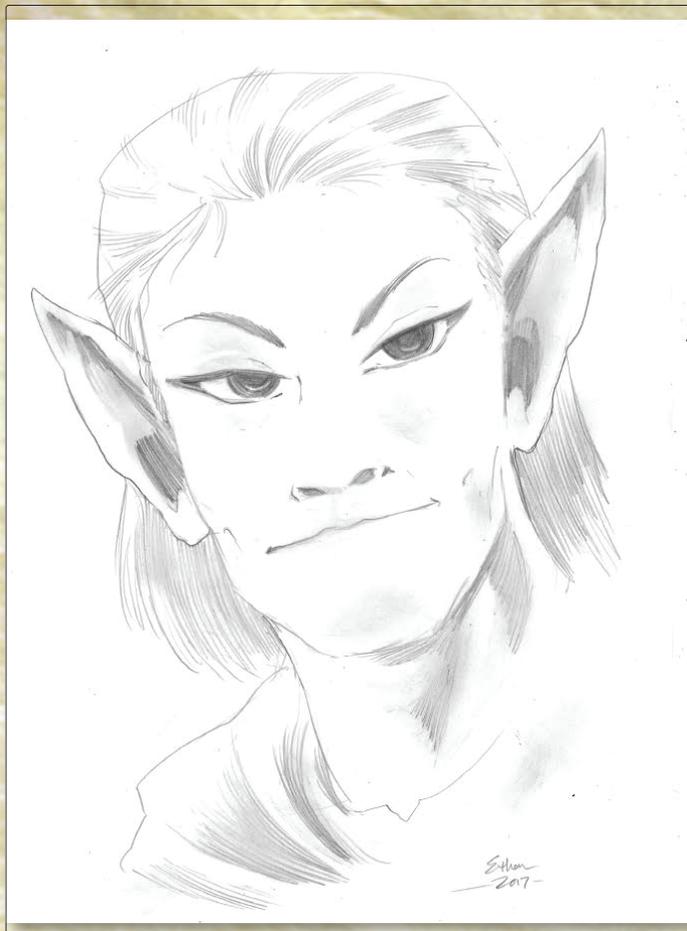

Appearance

A handsome fellow, Kayzark seems to have acquired the most petlike of aspects from his ancestor races: decidedly pointed elven ears not unlike a cat's, and dimpled cheeks with masculine, ruggedly human facial lines. He usually wears a dark green velvet cloak which he keeps wrapped about his torso; he affixes many of his wares to the inside lining so he can showcase them dramatically when approached for a sale.

Combat Tactics

His searches for the obscure do indeed take Kayzark across the realm, and so he is no stranger to necessary conflict. That said, he will avoid it where possible, particularly if he seems overmatched; he views battle's main utility to be hunting for food or escaping from ruffians and highwaymen.

If he is faced with conflict, he will attempt to talk or trade his way out of it; if battle seems inevitable, he will prefer ranged combat with his shortbow, closing with his rapier only when it is down to one-on-one action. A loner unused to the security offered by most cities, he will not seek assistance from authorities, as this possibility simply doesn't even occur to him, particularly in the throes of combat.

Factions

His allegiance, and his tribute, go to the Emerald Garden. The half-elf hawker will plant trees and other plants in his journeys, and will forage and hunt in a manner that does not impair sustainability.

Special Abilities

Darkvision Thanks to your elf blood, you have superior vision in dark and dim conditions. You can see in dim light within 60 feet of you as if it were bright light, and in darkness as if it were dim light. You can't discern color in darkness, only shades of gray.

Fey Ancestry You have advantage on all saving throws against being charmed or put to sleep.

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common, Elvish, and one extra language of your choice.

Skill Versatility You gain proficiency in two skills of your choice.

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 8th, 12th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.

Defensive Tactics At 7th level, you gain one of the following features of your choice.

Extra Attack Beginning at 5th level, you can attack twice, instead of once, whenever you take the Attack action on your turn.

Favored Enemy Beginning at 1st level, you have significant experience studying, tracking, hunting, and even talking to a certain type of enemy. Choose a type of favored enemy: aberrations, beasts, celestials, constructs, dragons, elementals, fey, fiends, giants, monstrosities, oozes, plants, or undead. Alternatively, you can select two races of humanoid (such as gnolls and orcs) as favored enemies. You have advantage on Wisdom (Survival) checks to track your favored enemies, as well as on Intelligence checks to recall information about them. When you gain this feature, you also learn one language of your choice that is spoken by your favored enemies, if they speak one at all. You choose one additional favored enemy, as well as an associated language, at 6th and 14th level. As you gain levels, your choices should reflect the types of monsters you have encountered on your adventures.

Fighting Style At 2nd level, you adopt a particular style of fighting as your specialty. Choose one of the following options. You can't take a Fighting Style option more than once, even if you later get to choose again.

Giant Killer When a Large or larger creature within 5 feet of you hits or misses you with an attack, you can use your reaction to attack that creature immediately after its attack, provided that you can see the creature.

Hide in Plain Sight Starting at 10th level, you can spend 1 minute creating camouflage for yourself. You must have access to fresh mud, dirt, plants, soot, and other naturally occurring materials with which to create your camouflage. Once you are camouflaged in this way, you can try to hide by pressing yourself up against a solid surface, such as a tree or wall, that is at least as tall and wide as you are. You gain a +10 bonus to Dexterity (Stealth) checks as long as you remain there without moving or taking actions. Once you move or take an action or a reaction, you must camouflage yourself again to gain this benefit.

Hunter Emulating the Hunter archetype means accepting your place as a bulwark between civilization and the terrors of the wilderness. As you walk the Hunter's path, you learn specialized techniques for fighting the threats you face, from rampaging ogres and hordes of orcs to towering giants and terrifying dragons.

Hunter's Prey At 3rd level, you gain one of the following features of your choice.

Land's Stride Starting at 8th level, moving through nonmagical difficult terrain costs you no extra movement. You can also pass through nonmagical plants without being slowed by them and without taking damage from them if they have thorns, spines, or a similar hazard. In addition, you have advantage on saving throws against plants that are magically created or manipulated to impede movement, such those created by the entangle spell.

Multiattack At 11th level, you gain one of the following features of your choice.

Multiattack Defense When a creature hits you with an attack, you gain a +4 bonus to AC against all subsequent attacks made by that creature for the rest of the turn.

Natural Explorer You are particularly familiar with one type of natural environment and are adept at traveling and surviving in such regions. Choose one type of favored terrain: arctic, coast, desert, forest, grassland, mountain, swamp, or the Underdark. When you make an Intelligence or Wisdom check related to your favored terrain, your proficiency bonus is doubled if you are using a skill that you're proficient in. While traveling for an hour or more in your favored terrain, you gain the following benefits: * Difficult terrain doesn't slow your group's travel. * Your group can't become lost except by magical means. * Even when you are engaged in another activity while traveling (such as foraging, navigating, or tracking), you remain alert to danger. * If you are traveling alone, you can move stealthily at a normal pace. * When you forage, you find twice as much food as you normally would. * While tracking other creatures, you also learn their exact number, their sizes, and how long ago they passed through the area. You choose additional favored terrain types at 6th and 10th level.

Primeval Awareness Beginning at 3rd level, you can use your action and expend one ranger spell slot to focus your awareness on the region around you. For 1 minute per level of the spell slot you expend, you can sense whether the following types of creatures are present within 1 mile of you (or within up to 6 miles if you are in your favored terrain): aberrations, celestials, dragons, elementals, fey, fiends, and undead. This feature doesn't reveal the creatures' location or number.

Ranger Archetype At 3rd level, you choose an archetype that you strive to emulate: Hunter or Beast Master, both detailed at the end of the class description. Your choice grants you features at 3rd level and again at 7th, 11th, and 15th level.

Spellcasting By the time you reach 2nd level, you have learned to use the magical essence of nature to cast spells, much as a druid does. See chapter 10 for the general rules of spellcasting and chapter 11 for the ranger spell list. Spell save DC 13; Spell attack modifier +5.

Spell Slots The Ranger table shows how many spell slots you have to cast your spells of 1st level and higher. To cast one of these spells, you must expend a slot of the spell's level or higher. You regain all expended spell slots when you finish a long rest. For example, if you know the 1st-level spell animal friendship and have a 1st-level and a 2nd-level spell slot available, you can cast animal friendship using either slot. You know two 1st-level spells of your choice from the ranger spell list. The Spells Known column of the Ranger table shows when you learn more ranger spells of your choice. Each of these spells must be of a level for which you have,

Whirlwind Attack You can use your action to make a melee attack against any number of creatures within 5 feet of you, with a separate attack roll for each target.

Archery You gain a +2 bonus to attack rolls you make with ranged weapons.

Elementals Advantage on Wisdom (Survival) checks to track Elementals, as well as on Intelligence checks to recall information about them. You also learn one language of your choice that is spoken by your favored enemies, if they speak one at all.

Monstrosities Advantage on Wisdom (Survival) checks to track Monstrosities, as well as on Intelligence checks to recall information about them. You also learn one language of your choice that is spoken by your favored enemies, if they speak one at all.

Habits and Logistics

 During daylight hours, Kayzark will be out and about, searching for new items of interest and trading existing ones where he can. As the GM, feel free to "place" him anywhere (or nowhere) during the day; doing so should invoke the event BRE-7: Take a Look.

 At night, the half-elf will likely (65%) be in the Tavern, enjoying a meal and possibly a transaction should he find a prospective buyer who seems suitable. The rest of the time, he will be outside Berinncorte, on a mission to buy, sell, or find.

Background

Kayzark is a loner, and a bit of a recluse, even, vastly preferring the company of nature to anyone he might find in-city. His interest in the exotic and bizarre, however, forces his participation in society to a certain extent: few vendors venture into the wilderness in search of a sale, and fewer still who have unique items.

He floats in and out of cities, lingering until he feels he has exhausted the region's available stock of intriguing commerce; he will then uproot and travel across the realm to another city to use as his base of operations for a time.

Typically, these cycles are in the neighborhood of six months to two years; he has been in the Berinncorte area for about nine months thus far.

In the Obelisk Attack

Kayzark survives; he's taking a stroll in the Gardens when the Obelisk Erupts. Although he has no idea what it is, or what might have caused it, he is terrified that it might be one aspect of a larger phenomenon, and so he flees the city, traveling north to warn Druids with whom he is friendly. This journey, the Druids, and their role in the larger scheme of the plot will be addressed in a future component of the Adventure Path.

Conversation

What do you think of Berinncorte?

☞ "It's got its share of interesting inhabitants, and their things."

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

☞ "It's sad, really. Chaos is natural, and law is man-made, and it's foolish to think you can have any sort of civilization without both. These two churches should cherish each other, rather than trying to prove that one is more valuable or the other is more worthy. Foolish, I say."

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

☞ "Things seem fairly peaceful in these parts, so I'm inclined not to judge her too badly. But the truth is, I don't know her, and I never have dealings with the authorities, so I couldn't say."

Tell me about being a... vendor? Trader? What do you do, exactly?

☞ "This and that, is the short answer. The longer answer involves making a purchase from my assortment of bizarre and unusual. Care to do so?" Kayzark will then show his wares, inviting the PCs to make a purchase (see event BRE-7: Take a Look). Doing so doesn't get him to open up further at all, but will please him.

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

☞ "What a strange question. To most folk, such peddling of the inane is a side business. I guess you could say that, on the side, I stay alive and keep myself busy. Nothing more."

Kerem Dogan (Vendor)

CR 1; Starting Attitude: 14 (Indifferent)

Description

Kerem is an opportunist, a sly and conniving merchant with an inability to take sides on anything contentious, lest he rule out doing business with one side or the other. He has set up shop in Berinncorte more and more often of late, hoping to capitalize on the growing tensions and sect-ism between the followers of Zugul and those of Sheergath.

Appearance

A rail-thin human, Kerem has a swarthy and clean complexion, with a long and pointed beard. He's fond of running his hand underneath his beard so that the top of his facial hair scrapes gently across the top of his hand. The merchant dresses in conservative and neutral robes, and is careful to match the color scheme against the city he does business in such that the colors he wears are clearly not aligned with any of that town's favored deities.

Combat Tactics

Kerem is not quite a coward, but he loathes fighting, and knows that he is hardly skilled at it to begin with. If faced with violence, he will try to summon help not only from the Militia, but also from the Zugul Church nearby the Town Square. If either of these other groups intercedes, Kerem himself will attempt to withdraw from the fighting, and will flee if given the opportunity to do so.

Factions

Kerem has previously been aligned with the Adamantium Trail, but has no interest in such formality. He secretly despises and is jealous of magic-users of all walks, and so is looking to join the Antimagic Shell, but has not yet officially done so.

Characters

For the time being, then, Kerem's Tribute flows directly to Berinncorte City itself.

📖 Special Abilities

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common and one extra language of your choice. Humans typically learn the languages of other peoples they deal with, including obscure dialects. They are fond of sprinkling their speech with words borrowed from other tongues: Orc curses, Elvish musical expressions, Dwarvish military phrases, and so on.,

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 6th, 8th, 12th, 14th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.,

Action Surge Starting at 2nd level, you can push yourself beyond your normal limits for a moment. On your turn, you can take one additional action on top of your regular action and a possible bonus action. Once you use this feature, you must finish a short or long rest before you can use it again. You can use this feature 1 time(s) before a rest, but only once on the same turn.,

Additional Fighting Style At 10th level, you can choose a second option from the Fighting Style class feature.,

Champion The archetypal Champion focuses on the development of raw physical power honed to deadly perfection. Those who model themselves on this archetype combine rigorous training with physical excellence to deal devastating blows.,

Extra Attack Beginning at 5th level, you can attack twice, instead of once, whenever you take the Attack action on your turn. The number of attacks increases to three when you reach 11th level in this class and to four when you reach 20th level in this class.,

Fighting Style You adopt a particular style of fighting as your specialty. Choose one of the following options. You can't take a Fighting Style option more than once, even if you later get to choose again.,

Improved Critical Beginning when you choose this archetype at 3rd level, your weapon attacks score a critical hit on a roll of 19 or 20.,

Indomitable Beginning at 9th level, you can reroll a saving throw that you fail. If you do so, you must use the new roll, and you can't use this feature again until you finish a long rest. You can use this feature 1 time(s) between long rests.,

Martial Archetype At 3rd level, you choose an archetype that you strive to emulate in your combat styles and techniques. The Champion archetype is detailed at the end of the class description; see the Player's Handbook for information on other martial archetypes. Your archetype grants you features at 3rd level and again at 7th, 10th, 15th, and 18th level.,

Remarkable Athlete Starting at 7th level, you can add half your proficiency bonus (round up) to any Strength, Dexterity, or Constitution check you make that doesn't already use your proficiency bonus. In addition, when you make a running long jump, the distance you can cover increases by a number of feet equal to +0.,

Second Wind You have a limited well of stamina that you can draw on to protect yourself from harm. On your turn, you can use a bonus action to regain hit points equal to 1d10 + your fighter level. Once you use this feature, you must finish a short or long rest before you can use it again.,

Defense While you are wearing armor, you gain a +1 bonus to AC.,

Protection When a creature you can see attacks a target other than you that is within 5 feet of you, you can use your reaction to impose disadvantage on the attack roll. You must be wielding a shield.,

Habits and Logistics

 During daylight hours, Kerem will be in his stall in the Town Square, hawking religious wares.

 At night, Kerem spends his evenings in the warm glow of the Shanty Town area of Town Square.

Background

The product of a caravan liaison, Kerem has never had much of an aptitude for anything too complex; even sports eluded him from an early age. In his teenage years, he joined various religions and cults in his travels, and immediately took to the concept—not as an adherent, but as one who sees the power such factions wield over the minds and souls (and purses!) of their fellow man.

As he could not stomach devoting his life to any established sect, his first thought was to form his own religion. This proved to be quite a bit more challenging than he had anticipated, however. He found, though, that he can be fairly influential, particularly to those whose hearts were already open to a religion.

One day, a street vendor offered to sell him a religious icon—a shabby thing, wooden and worn, discarded or lost from someone's pocket. The idea struck him that although he may not be suited for the life of priests, he could still take advantage of their followers, and so he established his traveling store for religious paraphernalia.

In the Obelisk Attack

One has to admire the tenacity: Kerem continues to hawk his inventory during the events of the Eruption, seeing it foremost as an opportunity for those truly shaken by the catastrophe to redouble their devotion, and in so doing, spend money. Unfortunately, this lust for sales drives him to ignore his own safety, and he is quickly slain by Forces of the Obelisk.

Conversation

What do you think of Berinncorte?

 “It’s a marvelous town, to have two such well-established, well-populated religions. Folk on both sides are strong in their faith, and I respect that in equal measure.”

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

 “It’s never a good thing—for people as well as for business!—when religion drives one man to assault another, and fortunately, though, that’s not quite how things are here. Yet. Some amount of strife, some friction between sects is not a bad thing, though, wouldn’t you agree? Keeps the blood up. High tempers mean good attendance at church!”

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

 “I guess they’re okay? I’ve not had much interaction with either the Mayor or her government, I must admit.”

Tell me about being a merchant of religious items.

 “They say priests, elders, bishops—all those formal religious folk, they speak directly to their god, or that their god speaks through them; I suppose it varies, from sect to sect, and even from town to town sometimes. But if a priest speaks for her god, I can help folk speak directly to any god. I myself am not a religious man, you understand—but that doesn’t mean I’m not a deeply, committed, spiritual man. I talk to the gods all the time. And while they may not talk back, I’m confident that they approve of the work I do, in their name, in the mortal realm, to help give them a little edge on their neighbors, up there.”

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

 “No time for anything else! If I find myself with time on my hands, it usually means I’ve slackened my commitment to sales. I either bear down and try harder, or pack up and try harder in another town.”

 Diplomacy check opposed by Kerem’s Deception check, pursuing the above matter, or asking if he’s taking advantage of people:

 “I’ll admit, some folk aren’t too keen on people like me profiting from religion. I’ve even had the odd person accuse me of taking advantage of followers of religion. I ask you, though: how am I any different from a priest, in that regard? I charge money, and provide a product, a tangible good that can be used by anyone to get closer to their god, their spiritual connection. What’s the difference between what I provide, and what the High Priest provides in the church over yonder? He’ll say he doesn’t charge for his services, but I know better—that collection basket, those donation boxes, they’re no different than my fees. Not really, when it comes down to it. At least with me, you get a physical product, and these shields, they’re useful no matter of what you believe, or what god might be listening to you.”

Larissa (Elder of Sheergath)

CR 3; Starting Attitude: 14 (Indifferent)

Description

Her powerful voice, her command of language, and her intimidating glare seem custom-made for her role as an elder of a Chaotic Neutral deity. She cherishes her duties and role in society, and sees her religion as a necessity, a balancing force to those (such as the Mayor) who would wish to control things unduly.

Appearance

A tall, slim stick-figure of a woman, Larissa is an imposing presence in any room. Slightly built, she has grown out her blonde hair to waist-height, and uses black dye to streak alternating strands to create a startling vertical pattern golden and black. Her face evokes her elven ancestry far more than her human, but her ears lack the graceful pointedness her race typically has.

She's well aware of the sexist perspective that many of her flock might normally have, and aware too of her un-imposing frame. Though her stentorian oration immediately nullifies any who would view her as unimportant, she nevertheless tends to arrive at the pulpit in full battle gear, wearing her entire array of weaponry.

Rumors say that once, she actually fired her crossbow in the middle of a speech, aiming it mere feet above the head of a congregant who dared to fall asleep during her preaching. Needless to say, all who attend the Temple of Sheergath now remain conscious the entire time.

Combat Tactics

Larissa is an adept tactician, and can quickly “read” a scene. She will take every advantage she can, if faced with combat; she enjoys the adrenaline rush and will view it as an opportunity to get closer to the will of her God by being a direct agent of chaos.

If in the Temple, she will call for Denzys and/or Unglar; if the GM has not determined their whereabouts when combat begins, there is an 80% chance for each that they are already in the building and will come to their Elder's defense within 1d4 rounds.

Faced outside the Temple, or if confronted alone, Larissa will engage the highest-level PC first; if there is a tie, she will attempt to disable spellcasters first if she can.

In any scenario, she will not run or request assistance from the authorities, but if reduced to fewer than 10 hit points, she will attempt to surrender, offering anything her attackers wish if they stop their attack and help her heal. Given her lust for the extraordinary and relative lack of monetary wealth, the GM is encouraged to be creative in helping the PCs interpret what is meant by “anything”; she is after all quite closely connected with several key townsfolk, and is privy to a great many secrets.

Factions

Sheergath, God of Resigned Fate, to which an enormous 15% of her wealth is tributed annually.

Special Abilities

Darkvision Thanks to your elf blood, you have superior vision in dark and dim conditions. You can see in dim light within 60 feet of you as if it were bright light, and in darkness as if it were dim light. You can't discern color in darkness, only shades of gray.

Fey Ancestry You have advantage on all saving throws against being charmed or put to sleep.

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common, Elvish, and one extra language of your choice.

Skill Versatility You gain proficiency in two skills of your choice.

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 8th, 12th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.

Blessed Healer Beginning at 6th level, the healing spells you cast on others heal you as well. When you cast a spell of 1st level or higher that restores hit points to a creature other than you, you regain hit points equal to 2 + the spell's level.

Bonus Proficiency When you choose this domain at 1st level, you gain proficiency with heavy armor.

Cantrips At 1st level, you know three cantrips of your choice from the cleric spell list. You learn additional cleric cantrips of your choice at higher levels, as shown in the Cantrips Known column of the Cleric table.

Channel Divinity At 2nd level, you gain the ability to channel divine energy directly from your deity, using that energy to fuel magical effects. You start with two such effects: Turn Undead and an effect determined by your domain. Some domains grant you additional effects as you advance in levels, as noted in the domain description. When you use your Channel Divinity, you choose which effect to create. You must then finish a short or long rest to use your Channel Divinity again. Some Channel Divinity effects require saving throws. When you use such an effect from this class, the DC equals your cleric spell save DC. You can use your Channel Divinity 2 times between rests. When you finish a short or long rest, you regain your expended uses.

Channel Divinity: Preserve Life Starting at 2nd level, you can use your Channel Divinity to heal the badly injured. As an action, you present your holy symbol and evoke healing energy that can restore a number of hit points equal to 75. Choose any creatures within 30 feet of you, and divide those hit points among them. This feature can restore a creature to no more than half of its hit point maximum. You can't use this feature on an undead or a construct.

Channel Divinity: Turn Undead As an action, you present your holy symbol and speak a prayer censuring the undead. Each undead that can see or hear you within 30 feet of you must make a Wisdom saving throw. If the creature fails its saving throw, it is turned for 1 minute or until it takes any damage. A turned creature must spend its turns trying to move as far away from you as it can, and it can't willingly move to a space within 30 feet of you. It also can't take reactions. For its action, it can use only the Dash action or try to escape from an effect that prevents it from moving. If there's nowhere to move, the creature can use the Dodge action.

Destroy Undead (CR 3) Starting at 5th level, when an undead fails its saving throw against your Turn Undead feature, the creature is instantly destroyed if its challenge rating is at or below a certain threshold, as shown in the Destroy Undead table.

Disciple of Life Also starting at 1st level, your healing spells are more effective. Whenever you use a spell of 1st level or higher to restore hit points to a creature, the creature regains additional hit points equal to 2 + the spell's level.

Divine Domain Choose one domain related to your deity: Knowledge, Life, Light, Nature, Tempest, Trickery, or War. The Life domain is detailed at the end of the class description and provides examples of gods associated with it. See the Player's Handbook for details on all the domains. Your choice grants you domain spells and other features when you choose it at 1st level. It also grants you additional ways to use Channel Divinity when you gain that feature at 2nd level, and additional benefits at 6th, 8th, and 17th levels.

Divine Intervention Beginning at 10th level, you can call on your deity to intervene on your behalf when your need is great. Imploring your deity's aid requires you to use your action. Describe the assistance you seek, and roll percentile dice. If you roll a number equal to or lower than 15, then your deity intervenes. The DM chooses the nature of the intervention; the effect of any cleric spell or cleric domain spell would be appropriate. If your deity intervenes, you can't use this feature again for 7 days. Otherwise, you can use it again after you finish a long rest. At 20th level, your call for intervention succeeds automatically, no roll required.

Divine Strike At 8th level, you gain the ability to infuse your weapon strikes with divine energy. Once on each of your turns when you hit a creature with a weapon attack, you can cause the attack to deal an extra 2d8 radiant damage to the target.

Habits and Logistics

During daylight hours, Larissa will usually (70%) be in the Sheergath Temple, tending to the business of the church, delivering sermons, and so on. The remainder of the time, she will be in the Town Square, purchasing supplies or personal items, meeting people, casually proselytizing, and being among the people, as it were.

At night, there is a variety of places Larissa could be. 40% of the time, she'll be in the Tavern; 15% of those times, she will end up in bed with Jozan, who comps her his typical rate. Neither enjoys the other for anything more than the physical act in which they partake, and Larissa leaves the Inn shortly afterward.

Instead of the Tavern, 30% of the time, she'll be in the Temple, still, either delivering an after-hours sermon, meeting with congregants in small groups, or meeting with her colleagues of the faith to plan future events.

The remainder of the time (30%), the GM is encouraged to place her anywhere at all. Between her exploits, her chaotic nature, and her self-styled role of a clerical leader who embraces the opportunity to walk among her flock, she has reason and motive to be anywhere at all in Berinncorte on a given night.

Background

Larissa never knew her parents; she was raised first by clerics in a temple. At age 8, she ran away from what she at the time called their "clutches", and tried to make her way as a beggar, and then a mercenary, then an entertainer... and then, when it became apparent she was too young for anyone to take her seriously in those capacities, she simply foraged for wildlife and flitted in and out of cities until she grew older.

In her teenage years, she returned to city life, drawn to the hum and bustle of people and their business. One day, as thunderstorms grew near, she sought shelter in the nearest building... which happened to be a temple of Sheergath.

Transfixed, she spent the next hour listening to the sermon and feeling as though she had finally stumbled upon a place of true knowledge, of true wisdom. Larissa spent more and more time at the temple, joining their ranks officially a year later, and rising through the clerical ranks as they taught and fed and clothed her.

When the faction had assembled sufficient capital to construct a new temple in Berinncorte, the elders promoted Larissa and tasked her with guiding the new flock. She has flourished ever since, in the position of authority and guidance and chaos she feels she was born to fulfill.

In the Obelisk Attack

At first, Larissa believes the Eruption to be a sign of Sheergath herself, entering the mortal realm. As she walks from the Temple to the Town Square, however, she is attacked by one of the monstrosities that the eruption has called forth; stunned and bleeding, she draws her crossbow and fights back with a vicious zeal.

Conversation

What do you think of Berinncorte?

"Good people who work hard, that's what comprises most of the city. A few elites, snobs, at the top of the food chain look down on us common folk, but we've a message for them: your time will come, and right soon."

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

"Are you being serious? Yes. Yes, I'm more than a bit aware that right across town, there's a church of a god whose beliefs and false preachings run counter to everything we hold dear and know to be true. Yes, I'm aware that church is linked so closely to the Mayor and her government that they might as well be one and the same. And yes, I'm painfully aware that the Militia runs rampant across the already-downtrodden citizens of Berinncorte in the name of nebulous and unchasable concepts like 'peace' and 'order'."

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

"She's little more than a tool of Cannock and those law-followers." She spits the phrase through her teeth as though it were rotten. "They're so in league, I can't believe they have the gall to claim they're independent from one another. Those who claim Symms has done anything about maintaining law are full of pigslop—there's crime, all the time. Oppression is worse than the occasional mugging!"

Tell me about being an Elder of the faith.

"It's what I was born to do." She smiles so broadly and so genuinely that you feel a bit stunned, for a moment. "Standing in front of a bunch of people who come to me to gain a better understanding of their lives? And the lives of others? And I get to tell them what I feel? There's no glory better than that. It helps that it's true, and I'm preaching what really is, and that Sheergath is a vehicle of mankind's true form, chaos, that we're all just here to flail away as best we can, and any imposition of order or law or rule beyond that is simply a travesty, a façade, built by those in power to keep it... that's all just a bonus."

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

"Is that a proposition?" She asks with a wicked grin, not unkindly. (Note that she gives this response regardless of the race, gender, or Charisma of the PC who is inquiring.)

Diplomacy check opposed by Larissa's Deception check, continuing any of the above questions:

"I'm not one to wish woe upon my fellow man. Not unless he's earned it, you understand. But chaos is the nature of life; there's no way to see things otherwise. If you choose to try to constrain people into law, into order, into your own personal, deluded sense of what is right... well, they're going to fight you for it, make no mistake. It's people's nature. It's in their souls, not to be controlled. Wouldn't you agree?"

Who was Ginswyn? (see “Urn” on the rooftop of the Sheergath Temple)

“How do you come by that name? I’ve not used it in some time, in my sermons, and it’s hardly commonplace. Ginswyn was a follower of Sheergath, who died in defense of her beliefs, years ago. The only place you’d be able to see her name is... have you been prying about the rooftops of the Temple, now?”

▲ Diplomacy or Sense Motive check opposed by Larissa’s Deception check, pressing the matter of Ginswyn:

“In truth, Ginswyn was a friend of mine. A childhood friend. She... she died. Senselessly, stupidly. We were playing, running along fields and climbing rocks, and she fell, hit her head. She was dead on the spot. I cried for an hour before I took up the courage to run back home and tell my parents. Tragic... and eventually, inspirational; in my grief thereafter, I learned that whatever the gods may claim, the pantheon that looks down from on high is, as a collective, truly chaotic. So why waste time worshipping gods who claim they represent otherwise?” The faraway look in her eyes subsides. “Now you know. And although it’s a falsehood, it’s a truthful one—she did exist, she did die, and she is a defender, a champion, of Sheergath. For all I know, Sheergath Herself took her, as means of helping me find my faith. So it’s not too much of a subterfuge. I’d ask that you keep my secret, so she may continue to inspire others of my flock.”

Lingona (Bard)

CR 3; Starting Attitude: 14 (Indifferent)

Description

Lingona is a vibrant, free soul, born to bard. She lives for excitement, experience, and interacting with interesting people. Her lover, Phadian Gess, is of similar perspective, though of more criminal bent. It was he who talked her into their current coordinated racket of distraction and robbery.

Appearance

She dresses in comfortable, loose-fitting tops that tend to show plenty of cleavage, and men's trousers a size or two too large. Lingona is an entertainer, but also an opportunist; she dresses for comfort and flow, but also because it's easier to conceal weapons and stolen items. She's somewhat short in stature, but her personality fills the room when she turns on the charm.

Combat Tactics

Lingona is no militant, but fortunately, her skills as bard and her position as entertainer in the Leaky Cask Tavern provide her with tools to escape should battle come a-calling. Her first priority is fleeing safely; second far behind that is ensuring that Phadian also escapes. Tied for second is holding onto whatever illicitly-acquired goods likely were cause for the combat to have started.

Factions

She's a proud member of Katkalls, to which a full 5% of her wealth is tributed each year.

 Special Abilities

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common and one extra language of your choice. Humans typically learn the languages of other peoples they deal with, including obscure dialects. They are fond of sprinkling their speech with words borrowed from other tongues: Orc curses, Elvish musical expressions, Dwarvish military phrases, and so on.,

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 8th, 12th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.,

Additional Magical Secrets At 6th level, you learn two spells of your choice from any class. A spell you choose must be of a level you can cast, as shown on the Bard table, or a cantrip. The chosen spells count as bard spells for you but don't count against the number of bard spells you know.,

Bard College At 3rd level, you delve into the advanced techniques of a bard college of your choice: the College of Lore or the College of Valor, both detailed at the end of the class description. Your choice grants you features at 3rd level and again at 6th and 14th level.,

Bardic Inspiration You can inspire others through stirring words or music. To do so, you use a bonus action on your turn to choose one creature other than yourself within 60 feet of you who can hear you. That creature gains one Bardic Inspiration die, a d12. Once within the next 10 minutes, the creature can roll the die and add the number rolled to one ability check, attack roll, or saving throw it makes. The creature can wait until after it rolls the d20 before deciding to use the Bardic Inspiration die, but must decide before the DM says whether the roll succeeds or fails. Once the Bardic Inspiration die is rolled, it is lost. A creature can have only one Bardic Inspiration die at a time. You can use this feature a number of times equal to 5. You regain any expended uses when you finish a long rest.,

Bonus Proficiencies When you join the College of Lore at 3rd level, you gain proficiency with three skills of your choice.,

Cantrips You know two cantrips of your choice from the bard spell list. You learn additional bard cantrips of your choice at higher levels, as shown in the Cantrips Known column of the Bard table.,

College of Lore Bards of the College of Lore know something about most things, collecting bits of knowledge from sources as diverse as scholarly tomes and peasant tales. Whether singing folk ballads in taverns or elaborate compositions in royal courts, these bards use their gifts to hold audiences spellbound. When the applause dies down, the audience members might find themselves questioning everything they held to be true, from their faith in the priesthood of the local temple to their loyalty to the king. The loyalty of these bards lies in the pursuit of beauty and truth, not in fealty to a monarch or following the tenets of a deity. A noble who keeps such a bard as a herald or advisor knows that the bard would rather be honest than politic. The college's members gather in libraries and sometimes in actual colleges, complete with classrooms and dormitories, to share their lore with one another. They also meet at festivals or affairs of state, where they can expose corruption, unravel lies, and poke fun at self-important figures of authority.,

Countercharm At 6th level, you gain the ability to use musical notes or words of power to disrupt mind-influencing effects. As an action, you can start a performance that lasts until the end of your next turn. During that time, you and any friendly creatures within 30 feet of you have advantage on saving throws against being frightened or charmed. A creature must be able to hear you to gain this benefit. The performance ends early if you are incapacitated or silenced or if you voluntarily end it (no action required).,

Cutting Words Also at 3rd level, you learn how to use your wit to distract, confuse, and otherwise sap the confidence and competence of others. When a creature that you can see within 60 feet of you makes an attack roll, an ability check, or a damage roll, you can use your reaction to expend one of your uses of Bardic Inspiration, rolling a Bardic Inspiration die and subtracting the number rolled from the creature's roll. You can choose to use this feature after the creature makes its roll, but before the DM determines whether the attack roll or ability check succeeds or fails, or before the creature deals its damage. The creature is immune if it can't hear you or if it's immune to being charmed.,

Expertise At 3rd level, choose two of your skill proficiencies. Your proficiency bonus is doubled for any ability check you make that uses either of the chosen proficiencies. At 10th level, you can choose another two skill proficiencies to gain this benefit.,

Font of Inspiration Beginning when you reach 5th level, you regain all of your expended uses of Bardic Inspiration when you finish a short or long rest.,

Jack of All Trades Starting at 2nd level, you can add half your proficiency bonus, rounded down, to any ability check you make that doesn't already include your proficiency bonus.,

Magical Secrets By 10th level, you have plundered magical knowledge from a wide spectrum of disciplines. Choose two spells from any class, including this one. A spell you choose must be of a level you can cast, as shown on the Bard table, or a cantrip. The chosen spells count as bard spells for you and are included in the number in the Spells Known column of the Bard table. You learn two additional spells from any class at 14th level and again at 18th level.,

Peerless Skill Starting at 14th level, when you make an ability check, you can expend one use of Bardic Inspiration. Roll a Bardic Inspiration die and add the number rolled to your ability check. You can choose to do so after you roll the die for the ability check, but before the DM tells you whether you succeed or fail.,

Song of Rest Beginning at 2nd level, you can use soothing music or oration to help revitalize your wounded allies during a short rest. If you or any friendly creatures who can hear your performance regain hit points at the end of the short rest, each of those creatures regains an extra 1d10 hit points. A creature regains the extra hit points only if it spends one or more Hit Dice at the end of the short rest.,

Spellcasting You have learned to untangle and reshape the fabric of reality in harmony with your wishes and music. Your spells are part of your vast repertoire, magic that you can tune to different situations. See chapter 10 for the general rules of spellcasting and chapter 11 for the bard spell list. Spell save DC 18; Spell attack modifier +10, t

Habits and Logistics

 During daylight hours, Lingona will typically be sleeping in her tent in the Town Square, or outside the city proper.

 At night, she will be either performing for an audience in the Town Square ( 35%), at an event or party outside the city ( 25%), or more than likely ( 45%), in the Leaky Cask Tavern, where on any given evening, she may ( 25%) team up with Phadian Gess to perform and steal (see event RTE-9: Impromptu Performance).

Background

Lingona was the child of a bard in a caravan and a one-time tryst with a caravan guard. Her mother raised her in the caravan, training her in her craft and introducing her to the realm. Her mother travels still, and will stop by Berinncorte to visit her daughter when trade takes her close by.

In the Obelisk Attack

The bard is performing at the Leaky Cask Tavern for a very slim audience, trying out new material against the low-risk small batch of clientele. When the disaster strikes, she runs away quickly; her lover Phadian Gess attempts to follow, but monsters pick him apart as Lingona is forced to watch from afar. She does what she can to fight back, but it's rapidly clear that she is outmatched, and she must flee the scene, tears in her eyes.

Conversation

What do you think of Berinncorte?

 “Lovely town. I’ve seen bigger, nicer, more cultured, sure. But Berinncorte’s a nice balance of it all.”

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

 “I don’t dabble deeply in faith; it’s hard to put much stock in such as you can’t see or hear or touch. But as a performer, well... it’s hard to side with Zugul, if there is conflict to be had. Folks are chaotic, no question about that. Just come to the Cask toward closing, most nights; you’ll see how much law and order will get you!”

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

 “Symms is no fine supporter of the arts, as it were, but she stays out of my way, and I out of hers. Never met the woman, but I’ve seen her about. Seems uppity, to me; you ask me, what that lady needs is a good night of drinking and dancing to loosen her up a bit.”

Tell me about being a bard.

 “Entertainment artisan, I should call it; that’s how the Katkalls tell it, anyway. But call me anything you like, so long as you leave some silver in my palm. It’s a grand trade; no other encourages you to hoot and holler and cavort so. I can’t imagine doing anything else, to tell you straight, and I’m glad of being able to make a living in so doing.”

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

 “If I catch your drift right, you’ll be wanting to ask Jozan that question, I should think. I’m a performer, and that’s all, no matter how much gold is on offer, I’ll have you know.”

Diplomacy check opposed by Lingona’s Deception check, pursuing either of the above two questions:

 “All gypsies are thieves, is that it? Well, I’ll have you know I’m no stranger to the dicier aspects of tavern life. I’ve been known to steal from the rich and give to the poor—the ‘poor’ being defined herein as myself, naturally. But I only ever do it when I need money, you understand. Only then.”

Amadan (Militia Armsmaster)

CR 3; Starting Attitude: 19 (Friendly)

i Description

Amadan is a mysterious figure.

To most in the Militia, he is a wise, but mute, armsmaster, a man who collects jewels, both as trinkets, and as payment for favors from those who know (or suspect) he knows quite a bit more than he lets on. Whether it's information, connections, or rarities, Berinncorte's armsmaster has a whispered reputation as a guy who can make sure you get what you need.

To a very, very few who know the truth, however: she is a master of intelligence, with spies and agents in every corner of the city... and far beyond it. Amadan well knows, firsthand, the unfortunate difference in perspective many folk give a woman, and chooses to remain androgynous; as she is mute, and in a position of militant authority, those who deal with her generally assume she is a man.

She has found this mistake to be to her ultimate advantage in any number of ways.

Her position as Armsmaster allows her the pick of equipment, and between her muteness and her reputation, none challenge that she might deserve the best arms and armor the Militia comes across.

i Appearance

Amadan seems to always wear studded leather armor and full combat gear. She wears a hooded cloak with myriad pockets within; rumors joke that she has everything you could want in that cloak, for the right price.

Her half-elven nature plays to her androgynous advantage: high cheekbones and feminine features are common among both sexes. Her Charisma is one of presence and of stature, not necessarily of beauty, but as she rarely takes any effort to accentuate her natural features via makeup or clothing, it's difficult to say for certain. Her shortswords swing in sheaths to either side, and an array of daggers nestle in bandoliers across her chest.

Her eyes are a dull gray, like the sea at midnight; at times they capture and throw back elements of the color of her surroundings. This has an unsettling, intimidating effect to most who glimpse it.

⚔ Combat Tactics

The half-elven armsmaster dual-wields shortswords in preference to all other forms of combat. If she begins combat out of melee, she will open with tossed daggers, closing quickly to the largest and seemingly least dexterous opponent.

Amadan knows a great deal, controls much, and has a lot on her mind and in her grasp—on top of being a woman in what can be a man's position. She will attack the moment she calculates it is necessary, and not an instant before, using her speed and versatility to catch her would-be assailants off-guard.

Although rumor speculates that she might be faking it, her muteness is indeed real, and so calling for aid is difficult; if faced with an overwhelming adversary, she will try and maneuver elsewhere so the commotion draws others near. Such are her dealings far and wide with many forms of citizen that nearly anyone would come to her aid; if she is part of a fight in any public location, or in the Garrison/Barracks, there is a cumulative 15% chance (i.e., 15% chance the first round, 30% chance the second, and so on) that 1d4+2 Townsfolk come to her defense.

🏰 Factions

Berinncorte Militia, as their armsmaster. Were she not mute—and were she forthright about it—Amadan would say that ultimately, she serves the realm entire.

Special Abilities

Darkvision Thanks to your elf blood, you have superior vision in dark and dim conditions. You can see in dim light within 60 feet of you as if it were bright light, and in darkness as if it were dim light. You can't discern color in darkness, only shades of gray.

Fey Ancestry You have advantage on all saving throws against being charmed or put to sleep.

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common, Elvish, and one extra language of your choice.

Skill Versatility You gain proficiency in two skills of your choice.

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 6th, 8th, 12th, 14th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.

Action Surge Starting at 2nd level, you can push yourself beyond your normal limits for a moment. On your turn, you can take one additional action on top of your regular action and a possible bonus action. Once you use this feature, you must finish a short or long rest before you can use it again. You can use this feature 1 time(s) before a rest, but only once on the same turn.

Additional Fighting Style At 10th level, you can choose a second option from the Fighting Style class feature.

Champion The archetypal Champion focuses on the development of raw physical power honed to deadly perfection. Those who model themselves on this archetype combine rigorous training with physical excellence to deal devastating blows.

Extra Attack Beginning at 5th level, you can attack twice, instead of once, whenever you take the Attack action on your turn. The number of attacks increases to three when you reach 11th level in this class and to four when you reach 20th level in this class.

Fighting Style You adopt a particular style of fighting as your specialty. Choose one of the following options. You can't take a Fighting Style option more than once, even if you later get to choose again.

Improved Critical Beginning when you choose this archetype at 3rd level, your weapon attacks score a critical hit on a roll of 19 or 20.

Indomitable Beginning at 9th level, you can reroll a saving throw that you fail. If you do so, you must use the new roll, and you can't use this feature again until you finish a long rest. You can use this feature 2 time(s) between long rests.

Martial Archetype At 3rd level, you choose an archetype that you strive to emulate in your combat styles and techniques. The Champion archetype is detailed at the end of the class description; see the Player's Handbook for information on other martial archetypes. Your archetype grants you features at 3rd level and again at 7th, 10th, 15th, and 18th level.

Remarkable Athlete Starting at 7th level, you can add half your proficiency bonus (round up) to any Strength, Dexterity, or Constitution check you make that doesn't already use your proficiency bonus. In addition, when you make a running long jump, the distance you can cover increases by a number of feet equal to +4.

Second Wind You have a limited well of stamina that you can draw on to protect yourself from harm. On your turn, you can use a bonus action to regain hit points equal to 1d10 + your fighter level. Once you use this feature, you must finish a short or long rest before you can use it again.

Superior Critical Starting at 15th level, your weapon attacks score a critical hit on a roll of 18-20.

Dueling When you are wielding a melee weapon in one hand and no other weapons, you gain a +2 bonus to damage rolls with that weapon.

Two-Weapon Fighting When you engage in two-weapon fighting, you can add your ability modifier to the damage of the second attack.

Habits and Logistics

☀ During daylight hours, Amadan will be in the Garrison/Barracks, tending to her duties as armstronger.

🌙 At night, she will be asleep in common soldiers' quarters some of the time (🎲 25%). The remainder of the time, she will be out and about, and none know where she goes on these sojourns. During these trips, she is almost always checking in with contacts and spies all over the city, and beyond its walls. She communicates across longer distances via messenger pigeon, of which she has an entire cage not too far away from the city. In the evening, the GM is encouraged to "place" her anywhere if necessary.

Background

Amadan was raised in a verbally abusive, lower-class household. She soon learned that whatever twist of fate, genetic anomaly, or mistake of the gods had gifted her with intelligence and skill far beyond her parentage, it sure didn't plan for her to apply these advantages by staying there.

She ran away from home when she was ten, seeking her fortune on the open road. Her adolescent adventures could populate a separate Adventure Path, but suffice it to say that she saw much, learned more, and suffered greatly. At age 35, a few years ago, she came out of her journeys both lacking gold and a tongue, and took up her position as Armstronger as a means of settling down and staying safely in one place for a period.

She got bored in a month, and swiftly spun up her current reputation, seeding and growing her network of informants and rumor-mongers in ways both straightforward and sinister.

No matter her background or methods, Amadan believes that her efforts are toward the benefit of the whole realm, keeping it on a safe path, and minimizing mankind's own predilection to do itself in.

Although she has access to a wealth of knowledge, the armstronger doesn't know the PCs, and is wary of strangers. She will share nothing at this time.

In the Obelisk Attack

Of all the citizens of Berinncorte, Amadan comes closest to seeing the Obelisk for what it truly is. She recognizes it from tales and lore gathered on the far side of the realm, and hunkers down in the Garrison to defend it. She does so well, though in truth the core of the fighting occurs elsewhere.

Conversation

📖 Note: As Amadan is mute, it may be challenging to roleplay interactions with her, particularly for novice GMs. You are encouraged to mime things out as best you can, and rely on that as your main form of communication. As a shortcut, or if you would simply prefer it that way, you can mime writing supplies from the outset of the conversation, and simply scrawl your responses as though you were Amadan; the arms and intelligence master is of course fully literate in the languages she speaks.

Also remember that her true sex is a secret; as a result, the interactions that follow, as well as the majority of other references to Amadan throughout the book, are in the masculine despite her true, hidden nature.

Her responses below are suggestions as to how to try and convey them via gestures; feel free to amend as you see fit.

What do you think of Berinncorte?

☞ Thumbs up. Shrug. Some good, some bad. Most good.

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

☞ Shrug. Dismissive wave.

☞ You sense that the man definitely has an opinion on the topic, and perhaps even a stance. But whatever it is, he isn't saying.

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

☞ Pensive consideration. Shrug, then a begrudging, halfhearted thumbs-up.

Tell me about being an armsmaster.

☞ Amadan grins, and draws both her shortswords in a practiced, fluid movement. Her motions imply not aggression, but showmanship. Still smiling, he twirls the blades around in his palms and sheaths them. You feel like applauding.

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

☞ Blank stare. Frown. Shake of the head.

▲ Sense Motive check opposed by Amadan's Deception check, pressing the above matter:

☞ Bobs his head in a gesture implying "a little of this, a little of that". Hand held to brow and scanning the horizon, as though searching for something. Points to own chest, makes a motion that indicates he has found it, and puts it in his pocket. Motion of giving, or returning, the found item. You believe he is trying to say that he can locate things if you're looking for them.

Maghana (Cleric of Zugul)

CR 3; Starting Attitude: 14 (Indifferent)

Description

A former adventuring companion of the High Priest, she followed Cannock to the town when he decided to focus on more formally ecclesiastical pursuits.

Appearance

Maghana is beautiful, but her femininity is not so overpowering that she can't mask it with clerical robes and a general state of unkemptness. She has high cheekbones, a small nose, and long light-brown hair. In her day-to-day life at the Church, she struggles between looking the part of a woman of the cloth, and appealing to Cannock. Although usually quite solemn, this is due to her duties and her conflicted feelings for the man with whom she works... her actual nature, however, is quite bubbly, and her broad smile is infectious.

Combat Tactics

Like High Priest Cannock, Maghana will not attack unless it is unavoidable, or if it appears that Cannock or any civilian innocent is threatened. In a combat situation, her first priority is to ensure Cannock's safety—and she will defend him to the death.

Factions

Zugul Church; second-in-command behind Cannock.

 Special Abilities

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common and one extra language of your choice. Humans typically learn the languages of other peoples they deal with, including obscure dialects. They are fond of sprinkling their speech with words borrowed from other tongues: Orc curses, Elvish musical expressions, Dwarvish military phrases, and so on.

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 8th, 12th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.

Aura of Courage Starting at 10th level, you and friendly creatures within 10 feet of you can't be frightened while you are conscious.

Aura of Devotion Starting at 7th level, you and friendly creatures within 10 feet of you can't be charmed while you are conscious.

Aura of Protection Starting at 6th level, whenever you or a friendly creature within 10 feet of you must make a saving throw, the creature gains a bonus to the saving throw equal to 3. You must be conscious to grant this bonus.

Channel Divinity Your oath allows you to channel divine energy to fuel magical effects. Each Channel Divinity option provided by your oath explains how to use it. When you use your Channel Divinity, you choose which option to use. You must then finish a short or long rest to use your Channel Divinity again. Some Channel Divinity effects require saving throws. When you use such an effect from this class, the DC equals your paladin spell save DC.

Cleansing Touch Beginning at 14th level, you can use your action to end one spell on yourself or on one willing creature that you touch. You can use this feature 3 times. You regain expended uses when you finish a long rest.

Divine Health By 3rd level, the divine magic flowing through you makes you immune to disease.

Divine Sense The presence of strong evil registers on your senses like a noxious odor, and powerful good rings like heavenly music in your ears. As an action, you can open your awareness to detect such forces. Until the end of your next turn, you know the location of any celestial, fiend, or undead within 60 feet of you that is not behind total cover. You know the type (celestial, fiend, or undead) of any being whose presence you sense, but not its identity (the vampire Count Strahd von Zarovich, for instance). Within the same radius, you also detect the presence of any place or object that has been consecrated or desecrated, as with the hallow spell. You can use this feature 4 times. When you finish a long rest, you regain all expended uses.

Divine Smite Starting at 2nd level, when you hit a creature with a melee weapon attack, you can expend one spell slot to deal radiant damage to the target, in addition to the weapon's damage. The extra damage is 2d8 for a 1st-level spell slot, plus 1d8 for each spell level higher than 1st, to a maximum of 5d8. The damage increases by 1d8 if the target is an undead or a fiend.

Extra Attack Beginning at 5th level, you can attack twice, instead of once, whenever you take the Attack action on your turn.

Fighting Style At 2nd level, you adopt a style of fighting as your specialty. Choose one of the following options. You can't take a Fighting Style option more than once, even if you later get to choose again.

Improved Divine Smite By 11th level, you are so suffused with righteous might that all your melee weapon strikes carry divine power with them. Whenever you hit a creature with a melee weapon, the creature takes an extra 1d8 radiant damage. If you also use your Divine Smite with an attack, you add this damage to the extra damage of your Divine Smite.

Lay on Hands Your blessed touch can heal wounds. You have a pool of healing power that replenishes when you take a long rest. With that pool, you can restore a total number of hit points equal to 75. As an action, you can touch a creature and draw power from the pool to restore a number of hit points to that creature, up to the maximum amount remaining in your pool. Alternatively, you can expend 5 hit points from your pool of healing to cure the target of one disease or neutralize one poison affecting it. You can cure multiple diseases and neutralize multiple poisons with a single use of Lay on Hands, expending hit points separately for each one. This feature has no effect on undead and constructs.

Oath of Devotion The Oath of Devotion binds a paladin to the loftiest ideals of justice, virtue, and order. Sometimes called cavaliers, white knights, or holy warriors, these paladins meet the ideal of the knight in shining armor, acting with honor in pursuit of justice and the greater good. They hold themselves to the highest standards of conduct, and some, for better or worse, hold the rest of the world to the same standards. Many who swear this oath are devoted to gods of law and good and use their gods' tenets as the measure of their devotion. They hold angels—the perfect servants of good—as their ideals, and incorporate images of angelic wings into their helmets or coats of arms.

Oath Spells Each oath has a list of associated spells. You gain access to these spells at the levels specified in the oath description. Once you gain access to an oath spell, you always have it prepared. Oath spells don't count against the number of spells you can prepare each day. If you gain an oath spell that doesn't appear on the paladin spell list, the spell is nonetheless a paladin spell for you.

Purity of Spirit Beginning at 15th level, you are always under the effects of a protection from evil and good spell.

Sacred Oath When you reach 3rd level, you swear the oath that binds you as a paladin forever. Up to this time you have been in a preparatory stage, committed to the path but not yet sworn to it. Now you choose the Oath of Devotion, the Oath of the Ancients, or the Oath of Vengeance, all detailed at the end of the class description. Your choice grants you features at 3rd level and again at 7th, 15th, and 20th level. Those features include oath spells and the Channel Divinity feature.

Sacred Weapon As an action, you can imbue one weapon that you are holding with positive energy, using your Channel Divinity. For 1 minute, you add +3 to attack rolls made with that weapon. The weapon also emits bright light in a 20-foot radius and dim light 20 feet beyond that. If the weapon is not already magical, it becomes magical for the duration. You can end this effect on your turn as part of any other action. If you are no longer holding or carrying this weapon, or if you fall unconscious, this effect ends.

Spellcasting By 2nd level, you have learned to draw on divine magic through meditation and prayer to cast spells as a cleric does. See chapter 10 for the general rules of spellcasting and chapter 11 for the paladin spell list. Spell save DC 16; Spell attack modifier +8; Number of spells to prepare 10.

Spellcasting Focus You can use a holy symbol (found in chapter 5) as a spellcasting focus for your paladin spells.

Turn the Unholy As an action, you present your holy symbol and speak a prayer censuring fiends and undead, using your Channel Divinity. Each fiend or undead that can see or hear you within 30 feet of you must make a Wisdom saving throw. If the creature fails its saving throw, it is turned for 1 minute or until it takes damage. A turned creature must spend its turns trying to move as far away from you as it can, and it can't willingly move to a space within 30 feet of you. It also can't take reactions. For its action, it can use only the Dash action or try to escape from an effect that prevents it from moving. If there's nowhere to move, the creature can use the Dodge action.

Protection When a creature you can see attacks a target other than you that is within 5 feet of you, you can use your reaction to impose disadvantage on the attack roll. You must be wielding a shield.

 Habits and Logistics

 During daylight hours, Maghana splits her time evenly between duties at the Zugul Church and the Cleric House.

 At night, Maghana sometimes finishes her duties at the Church (🗳️ 35%) or the Cleric House (🗳️ 40%); the remainder of the time, she is in her private quarters in the undercroft of the church.

 Background

Maghana is secretly in love with High Priest Cannock. For his part, Cannock is either so obtuse, or so focused on his work, that he remains still unaware of the infatuation. She has resigned herself to an unrequited relationship, and has long since given up actively pursuing things. She still holds him in high regard, however, and will do anything for him.

Characters

Growing up, she always sought to be a part of something greater than herself, and assumed from an early age this meant religious devotion. She now questions if her love for Cannock is instead the “greater force” she has sought all her life.

📌 In the Obelisk Attack

Cannock dies right after saving her, before her eyes. His blood is literally on her hands and elsewhere on her person in the aftermath. Between this violence and the emotion she held for the man, she takes up the mantle of the church with a devotion and zeal that Cannock himself would never have countenanced, exacerbating the rift between the Zugul Church and the Sheergath Temple.

🗨️ Conversation

What do you think of Berinncorte?

🗨️ “A wonderful place, with lovely people.”

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

🗨️ “Unfortunately, it’s hard to avoid. I do wish that we could simply come to an understanding, a truce. I don’t like the way things seem to be... escalating, I guess is the word. Words one month, then insults the next, and most recently, threats. I don’t like where it’s all going. I feel powerless to do anything about it, other than what I do every day in the Church.”

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

🗨️ “Symms is an exceptional woman, and a competent leader. She’s done wonders for this town, and the people in it. I’m fortunate that our church enjoys such a positive relationship with her offices, and that she finds the volunteering we offer helpful.”

Tell me about being a cleric.

🗨️ “They say that if you love what you do, you’ll never really work a day in your life. I think that’s how I feel, having found my true calling here at the church. People seek faith because they are in need of answers; it’s not always the easiest message to tell folk that the real answer has been there all along: abide by the rule of law.”

⚠️ Sense Motive check opposed by Maghana’s Deception check, pressing the matter above:

🗨️ “I love the Zugul Church, and its people. Cannock especially is... well, he’s quite a man, quite a leader.”

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

🗨️ “Well, I’m almost always a part of the volunteer work organized by the church, and I work quite a bit with the Mayor’s office in organizing events and outreach programs. Is that what you meant?”

Characters

Mardnab Scheppen (Maid / Bard)

CR 1; Starting Attitude: 14 (Indifferent)

Description

This middle-aged gnome has had a somewhat boring life, until about ten years ago, she discovered an aptitude for playing the flute. Though she had enjoyed music all her years, learning that she could produce it herself caused her no shortage of joy.

She's now the maid and some-time entertainer for Esk and his Inn; though occasionally guests hearing her play will tell her she is capable of more, she's actually quite content in her position. It may not be powerful, and it may not make her wealthy, but it's easy work she knows how to do, and it leaves her plenty of time to hone her newly-found craft.

Appearance

Mardnab is nimble, with deft fingers, but is otherwise an unremarkable gnome. She knows her plain features and so-so voice lock her out of the options available to many other bards, but accepts her lot in life with grace, grateful that she discovered she could even play.

Combat Tactics

The gnomish maid will flee at the first sign of conflict, whether it threatens her directly or not. She will try to rouse Esk to do something if the commotion occurs in his Inn; otherwise, she will seek the help of the authorities, running to the nearest Militia Guard Post.

Factions

None. Her tribute goes to Berinncorte City.

Special Abilities

Artificer's Lore Whenever you make a History check related to magic items, alchemical objects, or technological devices, you can add twice your proficiency bonus (8), instead of any proficiency bonus you normally apply.

Darkvision Accustomed to life underground, you have superior vision in dark and dim conditions. You can see in dim light within 60 feet of you as if it were bright light, and in darkness as if it were dim light. You can't discern color in darkness, only shades of gray.

Gnome Cunning You have advantage on all Intelligence, Wisdom, and Charisma saving throws against magic.

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common and Gnomish. The Gnomish language, which uses the Dwarvish script, is renowned for its technical treatises and its catalogs of knowledge about the natural world.

Tinker You have proficiency with tinker's tools. Using those tools, you can spend 1 hour and 10 gp worth of materials to construct a Tiny clockwork device (AC 5, 1 hp). The device ceases to function after 24 hours. (unless you spend 1 hour repairing it to keep the device functioning), or when you use your action to dismantle it; at that time, you can reclaim the materials used to create it. You can have up to three such devices active at a time. When you create a device, choose one of the following options: Clockwork Toy: This toy is a clockwork animal or person, such as a frog, mouse, bird, or soldier. When placed on the ground, the toy moves 5 feet across the ground on each of your turns in a random direction. It makes noises as appropriate to the creature it represents. Fire Starter: The device produces a miniature flame, which you can use to light something like a candle, torch, or campfire. Using the device requires your action. Music Box: When opened, this music box plays a single song at a moderate volume. The box stops playing when it reaches the song's end or when it is closed.

Tinker's Tools Proficient with Artisan Tinker's Tools.

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 8th, 12th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.

Additional Magical Secrets At 6th level, you learn two spells of your choice from any class. A spell you choose must be of a level you can cast, as shown on the Bard table, or a cantrip. The chosen spells count as bard spells for you but don't count against the number of bard spells you know.

Bard College At 3rd level, you delve into the advanced techniques of a bard college of your choice: the College of Lore or the College of Valor, both detailed at the end of the class description. Your choice grants you features at 3rd level and again at 6th and 14th level.

Bardic Inspiration You can inspire others through stirring words or music. To do so, you use a bonus action on your turn to choose one creature other than yourself within 60 feet of you who can hear you. That creature gains one Bardic Inspiration die, a d10. Once within the next 10 minutes, the creature can roll the die and add the number rolled to one ability check, attack roll, or saving throw it makes. The creature can wait until after it rolls the d20 before deciding to use the Bardic Inspiration die, but must decide before the DM says whether the roll succeeds or fails. Once the Bardic Inspiration die is rolled, it is lost. A creature can have only one Bardic Inspiration die at a time. You can use this feature a number of times equal to 1. You regain any expended uses when you finish a long rest.

Bonus Proficiencies When you join the College of Lore at 3rd level, you gain proficiency with three skills of your choice.

Cantrips You know two cantrips of your choice from the bard spell list. You learn additional bard cantrips of your choice at higher levels, as shown in the Cantrips Known column of the Bard table.

College of Lore Bards of the College of Lore know something about most things, collecting bits of knowledge from sources as diverse as scholarly tomes and peasant tales. Whether singing folk ballads in taverns or elaborate compositions in royal courts, these bards use their gifts to hold audiences spellbound. When the applause dies down, the audience members might find themselves questioning everything they held to be true, from their faith in the priesthood of the local temple to their loyalty to the king. The loyalty of these bards lies in the pursuit of beauty and truth, not in fealty to a monarch or following the tenets of a deity. A noble who keeps such a bard as a herald or advisor knows that the bard would rather be honest than politic. The college's members gather in libraries and sometimes in actual colleges, complete with classrooms and dormitories, to share their lore with one another. They also meet at festivals or affairs of state, where they can expose corruption, unravel lies, and poke fun at self-important figures of authority.

Countercharm At 6th level, you gain the ability to use musical notes or words of power to disrupt mind-influencing effects. As an action, you can start a performance that lasts until the end of your next turn. During that time, you and any friendly creatures within 30 feet of you have advantage on saving throws against being frightened or charmed. A creature must be able to hear you to gain this benefit. The performance ends early if you are incapacitated or silenced or if you voluntarily end it (no action required).

Cutting Words Also at 3rd level, you learn how to use your wit to distract, confuse, and otherwise sap the confidence and competence of others. When a creature that you can see within 60 feet of you makes an attack roll, an ability check, or a damage roll, you can use your reaction to expend one of your uses of Bardic Inspiration, rolling a Bardic Inspiration die and subtracting the number rolled from the creature's roll. You can choose to use this feature after the creature makes its roll, but before the DM determines whether the attack roll or ability check succeeds or fails, or before the creature deals its damage. The creature is immune if it can't hear you or if it's immune to being charmed.

Expertise At 3rd level, choose two of your skill proficiencies. Your proficiency bonus is doubled for any ability check you make that uses either of the chosen proficiencies. At 10th level, you can choose another two skill proficiencies to gain this benefit.

Font of Inspiration Beginning when you reach 5th level, you regain all of your expended uses of Bardic Inspiration when you finish a short or long rest.

Jack of All Trades Starting at 2nd level, you can add half your proficiency bonus, rounded down, to any ability check you make that doesn't already include your proficiency bonus.

Magical Secrets By 10th level, you have plundered magical knowledge from a wide spectrum of disciplines. Choose two spells from any class, including this one. A spell you choose must be of a level you can cast, as shown on the Bard table, or a cantrip. The chosen spells count as bard spells for you and are included in the number in the Spells Known column of the Bard table. You learn two additional spells from any class at 14th level and again at 18th level.

Song of Rest Beginning at 2nd level, you can use soothing music or oration to help revitalize your wounded allies during a short rest. If you or any friendly creatures who can hear your performance regain hit points at the end of the short rest, each of those creatures regains an extra 1d8 hit points. A creature regains the extra hit points only if it spends one or more Hit Dice at the end of the short rest.

Spellcasting You have learned to untangle and reshape the fabric of reality in harmony with your wishes and music. Your spells are part of your vast repertoire, magic that you can tune to different situations. See chapter 10 for the general rules of spellcasting and chapter 11 for the bard spell list. Spell save DC 12; Spell attack modifier +4, s.

Habits and Logistics

During daylight hours, Mardnab does a variety of things: sometimes 35%) she will go to the Town Square to buy and trade personal items and cleaning supplies, for which Esk gives her a stipend; other times 40%) she will perform tasks in the Inn (sweeping, changing linens and mattress straw, and so on). The remainder of the time (📊 25%) she will take a stroll through the Garden.

🌙 At night, the gnomish bard will typically (📊 65%) tend to duties at the Inn. The remainder of the time (📊 35%), she will be at the Leaky Cask Tavern, treating herself to a prepared meal and a drink, and wistfully daydreaming of another world in which it is she who performs to entertain the patrons.

📖 Background

Mardnab has humble goals and dreams, and she's worldly enough to be realistic about them. She knows her station is lowly, but Esk treats her not unfairly, pays a reasonable wage, and her job is quite stable, so the gnome tends to just try and enjoy each day as best she can.

🛡️ In the Obelisk Attack

Sadly, Mardnab perishes in the attack; she is crushed under a piece of roof that collapses.

🗨️ Conversation

What do you think of Berinncorte?

🗨️ “Oh, it's a fine town. Decent people, safe streets, a reasonable wage. Can't complain.”

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

🗨️ “I tend to keep to myself... I probably should be more devout, but I'm sorry to say I've not found a faith I support, quite. I keep my nose out of things as it comes to the two in town.”

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

🗨️ “The Mayor must be doing a good job, as it seems quite the safe place around here. Other than tribute I don't have much dealings with her or her staff.”

Tell me about being a maid.

🗨️ “Well, it's simple work, no mistake. But it pays decent enough, and leaves me plenty of time to pick up my flute. I'm still stunned it took me so much of my life to even try to play!”

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

🗨️ “I play the flute, but not in the habit of doing it for others. I'm not yet good enough, to be true.”

Oneib (Salesman / Security Guard)

CR 3; Starting Attitude: 16 (Indifferent)

Description

Oneib is an unlikely salesman, to say the least: once a rough-and-tumble caravan guard, he has lately turned his surprisingly well-balanced set of talents to a mixture of security and salesmanship for the General Store, owned by his good friend and longtime comrade Welby Goodbarrel.

Oneib's is a gruff form of presence, and his salesmanship is best defined as "here's the product; any questions?" However, there are many folk who seem to prefer that sort of straightforward, no-haggle approach to purchases. He walks around the store in full battle dress with weapons slung; clearly a bold statement as to his security role... but also, occasionally an incentive toward purchases.

Appearance

His face is pock-marked, sandblasted from so many years guarding caravans and living on the road. Oneib's skin is scratchy, and his beard is an unsightly combination of light brown and grey. He's not burly enough to appear overly threatening as a barbarian, but neither is he nimble enough to make it as a full-on rogue or ranger.

Combat Tactics

His array of arms and armor make Oneib useful in practically any combat scenario. Given time to maneuver or plan, he will engage with the strongest-seeming ranged combatant, eliminating marksmen and spellcasters on his way to any beefier melee foes.

As his main purpose at the Store is security, Oneib is used to causing combat, not reacting to it; if a battle is sprung upon him, he will certainly fight back. If combat occurs at the Store, he will shout for civilians to run to safety, asking them to please call the Militia on their way if they wouldn't mind. Regular patrons of the Store will take him up on the request; each round after any civilians escape, there is a cumulative \uparrow 20% chance (that is, 20% chance the first round, 40% the second, and so forth) that \uparrow 2d4+1 Berinncorte Militia will arrive; by default, they will defend the known Oneib, assuming that the party is attacking him and started the fight.

Factions

Oneib is a member of both Mace and Blade and the Adamantium Trail, each of which he tributes 2% of his wealth annually. He and Welby also have a very positive relationship with the City of Berinncorte, and perform many services and offer many discounts for the Berinncorte Militia, who in return will offer occasional security services.

🎯 Special Abilities

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common and one extra language of your choice. Humans typically learn the languages of other peoples they deal with, including obscure dialects. They are fond of sprinkling their speech with words borrowed from other tongues: Orc curses, Elvish musical expressions, Dwarvish military phrases, and so on.,

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 6th, 8th, 12th, 14th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.,

Action Surge Starting at 2nd level, you can push yourself beyond your normal limits for a moment. On your turn, you can take one additional action on top of your regular action and a possible bonus action. Once you use this feature, you must finish a short or long rest before you can use it again. You can use this feature 1 time(s) before a rest, but only once on the same turn.,

Additional Fighting Style At 10th level, you can choose a second option from the Fighting Style class feature.,

Champion The archetypal Champion focuses on the development of raw physical power honed to deadly perfection. Those who model themselves on this archetype combine rigorous training with physical excellence to deal devastating blows.,

Extra Attack Beginning at 5th level, you can attack twice, instead of once, whenever you take the Attack action on your turn. The number of attacks increases to three when you reach 11th level in this class and to four when you reach 20th level in this class.,

Fighting Style You adopt a particular style of fighting as your specialty. Choose one of the following options. You can't take a Fighting Style option more than once, even if you later get to choose again.,

Improved Critical Beginning when you choose this archetype at 3rd level, your weapon attacks score a critical hit on a roll of 19 or 20.,

Indomitable Beginning at 9th level, you can reroll a saving throw that you fail. If you do so, you must use the new roll, and you can't use this feature again until you finish a long rest. You can use this feature 2 time(s) between long rests.,

Martial Archetype At 3rd level, you choose an archetype that you strive to emulate in your combat styles and techniques. The Champion archetype is detailed at the end of the class description; see the Player's Handbook for information on other martial archetypes. Your archetype grants you features at 3rd level and again at 7th, 10th, 15th, and 18th level.,

Remarkable Athlete Starting at 7th level, you can add half your proficiency bonus (round up) to any Strength, Dexterity, or Constitution check you make that doesn't already use your proficiency bonus. In addition, when you make a running long jump, the distance you can cover increases by a number of feet equal to +5.,

Second Wind You have a limited well of stamina that you can draw on to protect yourself from harm. On your turn, you can use a bonus action to regain hit points equal to 1d10 + your fighter level. Once you use this feature, you must finish a short or long rest before you can use it again.,

Superior Critical Starting at 15th level, your weapon attacks score a critical hit on a roll of 18-20.,

Defense While you are wearing armor, you gain a +1 bonus to AC.,

Protection When a creature you can see attacks a target other than you that is within 5 feet of you, you can use your reaction to impose disadvantage on the attack roll. You must be wielding a shield.,

🏠 Habits and Logistics

☀️ During daylight hours, Oneib walks around the General Store, providing salesmanship to the customers and security services to the store itself.

🌙 At night, Oneib will frequently (🎲 70%) continue his pacing, acting as a passive night watch for the store until he sleeps within it. The remainder of the time, he will be at the Tavern, often until closing, thence back to the store for sleep.

🏠 Background

Oneib has accompanied his business partner Welby Goodbarrel through much of his professional life, guarding caravans and often acting as personal security for the halfling.

At one point in their history, the two were lovers. That level of their relationship lasted only a single caravan, beginning and ending during a dust storm that drove the two together for protection in a single tent. Neither man has spoken of the events since, and there is a certain unspoken tension between them (a 🎲 DC 19 Sense Motive check will reveal to a PC only that there is some tension, certainly not the source or backstory).

🛡️ In the Obelisk Attack

Oneib is stuck outside in the streets when the Obelisk Eruption occurs. He is struck and trampled by a running horse, and though he tries to make it into the General Store, he is unable to do so before Welby closes the door.

Oneib dies, attacked by the undead, pounding on the store's front doors.

🗨️ Conversation

What do you think of Berinncorte?

🗨️ “Good enough place to live. Plenty of need for supplies, so me an’ Welby make out okay.”

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

🗨️ “Strife and struggle don’t worry me much. If it affects us personally, I can usually take care of threats well enough. If it doesn’t affect us directly... well, fighting can be good for business. I’m to understand, though, that two cults at odds with each other’s beliefs can’t get along. Will wonders never cease.”

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

🗨️ “Symms seems competent, if not a likeable lady. Me, I like her style; direct, to the point. Law and order are good on a grand scale, but the Militia can get a bit up in your face, so I hear. As a store, though, we benefit from that level of scrutiny.”

Tell me about being a... security guard? Salesman? Both?

🗨️ “Both, proud to say. Bet you never met someone like that, huh? It’s fine. I don’t get up to trickery in selling, and don’t need to; our wares speak for themselves, and folk need supplies, so that end of things is pretty simple. Security, too, is a lazy job most often. The Militia keeps the peace well enough, and folks need supplies; though Welby's got some coin to his name, and make no mistake, nobody wants to ruin the sole source of stuff, now do they?"

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

☞ "You mean between two jobs that are each basically full-time? No. No, I don't."

Do you and Welby come by any supplies that are particularly... interesting? Or rare?

☞ "Define 'interesting'. You might do better to ask the apothecary; Aramil's across town."

⚠ Diplomacy or Knowledge (Local) check at DC 15, pressing the above question:

☞ "Ah, well. We're not typically in that sort of business; don't need to be, to make a good coin. But I hear as Amadan, the Militia armsmaster, is often in the way of finding himself the odd piece of whatever. A mute and a Militiaman, if you can believe it, but the man's got his hooks everywhere, so I hear."

Ota Kuiduru (Chief Clerk)

CR 3; Starting Attitude: 14 (Indifferent)

Description

Trained as a monk, Ota now staffs the Mayor's Office Reception Desk, and acts as the city government's chief clerk. To bystanders, this may seem a truly bizarre turn of events, but Ota himself will point out that much of the day-to-day business of helping citizens navigate bureaucracy demands a calm soul and a serene presence to manage effectively.

In truth, the pairing of his skills and station seems to be to great benefit to the town, and Mayor Symms has come to rely upon the half-elf's steady hand and calming demeanor in executing the crucial duties of his role.

Appearance

No trace of a smile can be seen in the half-elf's calm and neutral visage... unless you catch him in one of his common moments of dry wit. His jokes can be difficult to absorb, but those who look closely will observe a definite curl of the lip and twitch of the cheeks as puns and mocking analogies are delivered.

Ota's long brown hair is tied back in a severe bun to the top-rear of his head; a whisper of a moustache of the same color underlies his definitely elfish nose. Though somewhat slight in stature, he is brutally nimble in execution of his duties; it's easy to tell at a glance that the man was trained for much more than administrative duties.

Combat Tactics

Ota does not relish combat, but recognizes its occasional necessity, and in defense of his office and that of the city government, he will not hesitate to exercise his prowess to remove intrusions and threats. He much prefers, however, to use a demanding tone and the social pressure of other citizens to force troublemakers out of the building if needed.

Faced with inevitable combat, Ota takes a measured approach, seeking the weakest member of his enemies and neutralizing her before working his way up the ranks, evading tough melee where possible in so doing.

As a member of city government in the heart of that faction, he will not hesitate to call for backup; if fighting in the Mayor's House, 2d4+1 Mayoral House Guard will arrive one round after he joins combat. If faced outside the building, he will seek the nearest Militia Guard Post for backup; doing so will cause 1d6+1 Berinncorte Militia to join the fray in his defense.

Factions

Berinncorte City, as its chief clerk and administrator, and aide to Mayor Symms.

Characters

🔮 Special Abilities

Darkvision Thanks to your elf blood, you have superior vision in dark and dim conditions. You can see in dim light within 60 feet of you as if it were bright light, and in darkness as if it were dim light. You can't discern color in darkness, only shades of gray.

Fey Ancestry You have advantage on all saving throws against being charmed or put to sleep.

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common, Elvish, and one extra language of your choice.

Skill Versatility You gain proficiency in two skills of your choice.

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 8th, 12th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.

Deflect Missiles Starting at 3rd level, you can use your reaction to deflect or catch the missile when you are hit by a ranged weapon attack. When you do so, the damage you take from the attack is reduced by 1d10 + 19. If you reduce the damage to 0, you can catch the missile if it is small enough for you to hold in one hand and you have at least one hand free. If you catch a missile in this way, you can spend 1 ki point to make a ranged attack with the weapon or piece of ammunition you just caught, as part of the same reaction. You make this attack with proficiency, regardless of your weapon proficiencies, and the missile counts as a monk weapon for the attack. The range of the monk's ranged attack is 20/60 feet.

Diamond Soul Beginning at 14th level, your mastery of ki grants you proficiency in all saving throws. Additionally, whenever you make a saving throw and fail, you can spend 1 ki point to reroll it and take the second result.

Evasion At 7th level, your instinctive agility lets you dodge out of the way of certain area effects, such as a blue dragon's lightning breath or a fireball spell. When you are subjected to an effect that allows you to make a Dexterity saving throw to take only half damage, you instead take no damage if you succeed on the saving throw, and only half damage if you fail.

Extra Attack Beginning at 5th level, you can attack twice, instead of once, whenever you take the Attack action on your turn.

Flurry of Blows Immediately after you take the Attack action on your turn, you can spend 1 ki point to make two unarmed strikes as a bonus action.

Ki Starting at 2nd level, your training allows you to harness the mystic energy of ki. Your access to this energy is represented by a number of ki points. You have a total of 15 ki points. You can spend these points to fuel various ki features. You start knowing three such features: Flurry of Blows, Patient Defense, and Step of the Wind. You learn more ki features as you gain levels in this class. When you spend a ki point, it is unavailable until you finish a short or long rest, at the end of which you draw all of your expended ki back into yourself. You must spend at least 30 minutes of the rest meditating to regain your ki points. Some of your ki features require your target to make a saving throw to resist the feature's effects. The saving throw DC is as follows: Ki save DC = 18,

Ki-Empowered Strikes Starting at 6th level, your unarmed strikes count as magical for the purpose of overcoming resistance and immunity to nonmagical attacks and damage.

Martial Arts At 1st level, your practice of martial arts gives you mastery of combat styles that use unarmed strikes and monk weapons, which are shortswords and any simple melee weapons that don't have the two-handed or heavy property. You gain the following benefits while you are unarmed or wielding only monk weapons and you aren't wearing armor or wielding a shield: * You can use Dexterity instead of Strength for the attack and damage rolls of your unarmed strikes and monk weapons. * You can roll a d8 in place of the normal damage of your unarmed strike or monk weapon. * When you use the Attack action with an unarmed strike or a monk weapon on your turn, you can make one unarmed strike as a bonus action. For example, if you take the Attack action and attack with a quarterstaff, you can also make an unarmed strike as a bonus action, assuming you haven't already taken a bonus action this turn. Certain monasteries use specialized forms of the monk weapons. For example, you might use a club that is two lengths of wood connected by a short chain (called a nunchaku) or a sickle with a shorter, straighter blade (called a kama). Whatever name you use for a monk weapon, you can use the game statistics provided for the weapon in chapter 5.,

Monastic Tradition When you reach 3rd level, you commit yourself to a monastic tradition: the Way of the Open Hand, the Way of Shadow, or the Way of the Four Elements, all detailed at the end of the class description. Your tradition grants you features at 3rd level and again at 6th, 11th, and 17th level.,

Open Hand Technique Starting when you choose this tradition at 3rd level, you can manipulate your enemy's ki when you harness your own. Whenever you hit a creature with one of the attacks granted by your Flurry of Blows, you can impose one of the following effects on that target: * It must succeed on a Dexterity saving throw or be knocked prone. * It must make a Strength saving throw. If it fails, you can push it up to 15 feet away from you. * It can't take reactions until the end of your next turn.,

Patient Defense You can spend 1 ki point to take the Dodge action as a bonus action on your turn.,

Purity of Body At 10th level, your mastery of the ki flowing through you makes you immune to disease and poison.,

Slow Fall Beginning at 4th level, you can use your reaction when you fall to reduce any falling damage you take by 75.,

Step of the Wind You can spend 1 ki point to take the Disengage or Dash action as a bonus action on your turn, and your jump distance is doubled for the turn.,

Stillness of Mind Starting at 7th level, you can use your action to end one effect on yourself that is causing you to be charmed or frightened.,

Stunning Strike Starting at 5th level, you can interfere with the flow of ki in an opponent's body. When you hit another creature with a melee weapon attack, you can spend 1 ki point to attempt a stunning strike. The target must succeed on a Constitution saving throw or be stunned until the end of your next turn.,

Timeless Body At 15th level, your ki sustains you so that you suffer none of the frailty of old age, and you can't be aged magically. You can still die of old age, however. In addition, you no longer need food or water.,

Tongue of the Sun and Moon Starting at 13th level, you learn to touch the ki of other minds so that you understand all spoken languages. Moreover, any creature that can understand a language can understand what you say.,

Tranquility Beginning at 11th level, you can enter a special meditation that surrounds you with an aura of peace. At the end of a long rest, you gain the effect of a sanctuary spell that lasts until the start of your next long rest (the spell can end early as normal). The saving throw DC for the spell equals 18.,

Unarmored Defense Beginning at 1st level, while you are wearing no armor and not wielding a shield, your AC equals 10 + your Dexterity modifier + your Wisdom modifier.,

Unarmored Movement Starting at 2nd level, your speed increases by 10 feet while you are not wearing armor or wielding a shield. This bonus increases when you reach certain monk levels, as shown in the Monk table. At 9th level, you gain the ability to move along vertical surfaces and across liquids on your turn without falling during the move.,

Way of the Open Hand Monks of the Way of the Open Hand are the ultimate masters of martial arts combat, whether armed or unarmed. They learn techniques to push and trip their opponents, manipulate ki to heal damage to their bodies, and practice advanced meditation that can protect them from harm.,

Wholeness of Body At 6th level, you gain the ability to heal yourself. As an action, you can regain hit points equal to 45. You must finish a long rest before you can use this feature again.

Habits and Logistics

 During daylight hours, Ota will be at the Mayor's House, performing his administrative duties in various rooms, but focusing of course on the Reception Desk at the front of the building.

 At night, Ota will work long hours finishing up his work and organizing, then retire to his humble home outside city limits, which used to be a small farmhouse.

Background

Ota grew up a farmhand; upon turning 15, he discovered that he was adopted. He left home in search of more information about his history; along the way, he came upon a temple where he studied a great deal, and learned much of the monkish arts. One morning, he arose to meet the sun, and realized that during his journey, he had grown less interested of his original purpose. Smiling grimly, he left the temple and set forth on adventures of his own purpose.

His journey since then would be its own intriguing story, but three years ago, he came to Berinncorte and decided to settle down and stay put, at least for a while. Since then, he has served the city's government well, though he occasionally gets the itch to seek more, beyond.

In the Obelisk Attack

Ota hears the commotion outside in the Town Square, and springs into action without thought, saving lives and doing battle with chaos.

Conversation

What do you think of Berinncorte?

 "A most agreeable town. Good people, ruled well by a woman with a solid head on her shoulders."

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

 "I sympathize most with Zugul in terms of a perspective on the world. But to assert that chaos is not part of sentient nature is simply foolish. Likewise is it idiocy to rail unduly against lawfulness, when it is the peace provided by that law that allows both churches to even exist." He shakes his head sadly. "It is ever thus, with faith, I fear."

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

 "Dominika does an adept job serving her people. I daresay myself and the rest of her staff do an adequate job in supporting her day-to-day, but she provides the vision, the peaceful directive, at the heart of it."

Tell me about being a receptionist.

 "I'm much more than that, friend. In addition to serving here at the front desk, I also handle much of the city's administrative tasks, or at minimum, aid others in the execution thereof. It is a noble task, unsung and not often desired. But I feel I have a mind that is up to the work, and there is a certain serenity in the job. The seas of administration are deep, but calm."

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

 "Well, as you've likely gathered, my original training is not quite administrative. But I have put that life on hold, for the time being."

Otibus (Seamstress' Husband)

CR 1; Starting Attitude: 14 (Indifferent)

Description

Otibus is married to Berinncorte's seamstress and only real seller of textiles, Daratis. His role in the business—and largely in the marriage!—is administrative; he keeps the books primarily. He also does most of the animal husbandry, butchering, tanning, and unsavory aspects of the family business.

The dwarven textiler doesn't really talk much, and spends nearly all his time on the farm; he will come into town only when absolutely unavoidable.

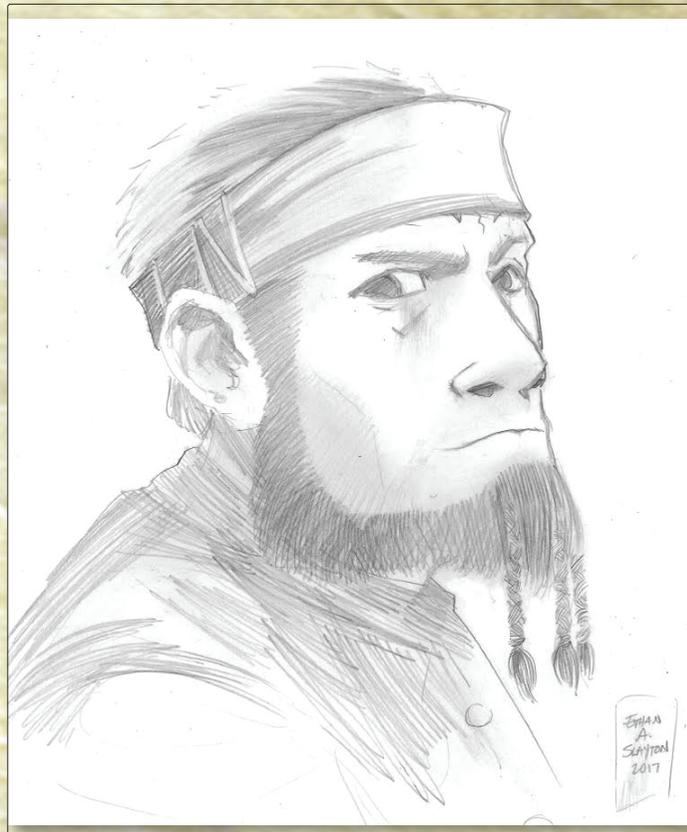

Appearance

A strong, silent dwarf, Otibus is aging well, the silver flecks in his chin-length hair and braided beard suiting well his stern facial features. He's lately put on a bit of weight, but manages it well enough.

Combat Tactics

Otibus is no stranger to battle, but much prefers a calm life; he will avoid armed conflict if at all possible. In defense of the Textiles Shop or his wife, however, he is vicious and implacable, charging into battle with the nearest melee combatant and continuing his assault until either he or his foe is defeated.

Such is his focus in battle that he will forget to call for help. If Daratis is nearby during the fight, however, she will certainly retain the presence of mind to scream for aid; each round after combat starts with her present, there is a cumulative 20% (that is, 20% chance the first round, 40% chance the second, and so on) likelihood that 2d4+2 Townsfolk and 1d4-1 Berinncorte Militia (none show up if a 1 is rolled on that 1d4) appear in defense of the couple.

Daratis will join the fray in aid of her husband, though he will yell at her to run away while she does so.

Factions

Though not nearly as devout as his wife Daratis, he will nevertheless attend services with her at the Zug Church.

📖 Special Abilities

Darkvision Accustomed to life underground, you have superior vision in dark and dim conditions. You can see in dim light within 60 feet of you as if it were bright light, and in darkness as if it were dim light. You can't discern color in darkness, only shades of gray.

Dwarven Combat Training You have proficiency with the battleaxe, handaxe, light hammer, and warhammer.

Dwarven Resilience You have advantage on saving throws against poison, and you have resistance against poison damage (explained in chapter 9).

Dwarven Toughness Your hit point maximum increases by 1, and it increases by 1 every time you gain a level.

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common and Dwarvish.

is full of hard consonants and guttural sounds, and those characteristics spill over into whatever other language a dwarf might speak.

Mason's Tools Proficient with Artisan Mason's Tools.

Stonecunning Whenever you make an Intelligence (History) check related to the origin of stonework, you are considered proficient in the History skill and add double your proficiency bonus to the check, instead of your normal proficiency bonus.

Tool Proficiency You gain proficiency with the artisan's tools of your choice: smith's tools, brewer's supplies, or mason's tools.

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 6th, 8th, 12th, 14th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.

Action Surge Starting at 2nd level, you can push yourself beyond your normal limits for a moment. On your turn, you can take one additional action on top of your regular action and a possible bonus action. Once you use this feature, you must finish a short or long rest before you can use it again. You can use this feature 1 time(s) before a rest, but only once on the same turn.,

Additional Fighting Style At 10th level, you can choose a second option from the Fighting Style class feature.,

Champion The archetypal Champion focuses on the development of raw physical power honed to deadly perfection. Those who model themselves on this archetype combine rigorous training with physical excellence to deal devastating blows.,

Extra Attack Beginning at 5th level, you can attack twice, instead of once, whenever you take the Attack action on your turn. The number of attacks increases to three when you reach 11th level in this class and to four when you reach 20th level in this class.,

Fighting Style You adopt a particular style of fighting as your specialty. Choose one of the following options. You can't take a Fighting Style option more than once, even if you later get to choose again.,

Improved Critical Beginning when you choose this archetype at 3rd level, your weapon attacks score a critical hit on a roll of 19 or 20.,

Indomitable Beginning at 9th level, you can reroll a saving throw that you fail. If you do so, you must use the new roll, and you can't use this feature again until you finish a long rest. You can use this feature 1 time(s) between long rests.,

Martial Archetype At 3rd level, you choose an archetype that you strive to emulate in your combat styles and techniques. The Champion archetype is detailed at the end of the class description; see the Player's Handbook for information on other martial archetypes. Your archetype grants you features at 3rd level and again at 7th, 10th, 15th, and 18th level.,

Remarkable Athlete Starting at 7th level, you can add half your proficiency bonus (round up) to any Strength, Dexterity, or Constitution check you make that doesn't already use your proficiency bonus. In addition, when you make a running long jump, the distance you can cover increases by a number of feet equal to +5.,

Second Wind You have a limited well of stamina that you can draw on to protect yourself from harm. On your turn, you can use a bonus action to regain hit points equal to 1d10 + your fighter level. Once you use this feature, you must finish a short or long rest before you can use it again.,

Defense While you are wearing armor, you gain a +1 bonus to AC.,

Protection When a creature you can see attacks a target other than you that is within 5 feet of you, you can use your reaction to impose disadvantage on the attack roll. You must be wielding a shield.,

Habits and Logistics

 During daylight hours, Otibus will almost always ( 75%) be outside the city, tending to livestock or preparing hides or wool. The remainder of the time, he will be in the Textiles Shop, preparing or packing or otherwise being useful.

 At night, Otibus will typically ( 65%) be working on the books of the business; after he is done, and the remainder of the time in general, he will retire to sleep in the shop's bedroom with his wife.

Background

Otibus one considered life as a mercenary, but on the day he had packed up his equipment and readied himself for signing up at the local Mace and Blade headquarters, he stopped for a meal at a local tavern, and struck up a conversation with the gnome who would eventually be his wife. Ever since, the two have been inseparable; behind his gruff and quiet demeanor lies a romantic dwarf with a gentle heart.

In the Obelisk Attack

Otibus himself survives; he is outside the city when the Obelisk Erupts. Stricken, he returns to the Textiles shop to run it in his wife's absence, though he weeps every day for her absence.

Conversation

What do you think of Berinncorte?

 "Tis a fine city. Daratis loves it; I'm more at home outside on the farm."

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

 "We're Zugul folk—well, my wife more than me, truth to tell. Sheergath's a bit overzealous, if you ask me, but to be fair, some Zugul folk're a bit too passionate about it too. Church of any sort is for peace and quiet and thinking, not for warmongering or shouting."

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

 "Symms is all right by me. Though not to be sexist, I'm surprised she's not a better customer. I fear she's shopping at other towns, finding finer cloth, but to see her on the street, you'd never know by the way she's dressed."

Tell me about being in the textiles business.

 "Steady work—high or low, rich or poor, folk've need of clothes, right? It's not the work I was meant for, perhaps, but then again, I've not yet found that, whatever it is. I joke with Daratis that the job title the gods intended for me was 'husband', and that may not be too far from the truth of things." He grins, and his eyes shine for a moment. "There're worse jobs."

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

 "I raise animals, cut and prep them, sell the meat to Ganyc next door usually, keep some for ourselves. Also tend the books and help with the shop. I've precious little time to grab a mead, on occasion; what else would I do even if I had the time?"

Ownka (Serving Wench)

CR 1; Starting Attitude: 14 (Indifferent)

Description

Ownka is a half-orc serving wench at the Leaky Cask Tavern. She helps out wherever needed, but primarily cooks, serving occasionally if necessary. Nimble she may be, but not overly pleasant; she looks down on most patrons and just barely manages to hold her contempt in check most of the time.

Appearance

The serving wench is tall, thin, and dresses in man's clothes; she has no interest in appearing feminine or more human than she is. Her black hair is cut short, and she does nothing with it; it simply flops about wherever it pleases. Much of the time, she dresses in peasant's garb, hoping that tavern guests will mistake her for another customer, so that they will bother her colleague Thrunne instead.

Combat Tactics

Ownka has no patience for troublemakers, and will not hesitate to pre-emptively sucker-punch anyone who seems like they may be a problem. Her brutishness is limited to threats and nonlethal confrontation, however: no job, and certainly not this one, is worth dying over, and if blades are drawn or magic is wielded, she flees the scene as quickly as possible, seeking the Militia.

Factions

None. Her tribute, such as it is, goes to the City of Berinncorte itself.

Special Abilities

Darkvision Thanks to your orc blood, you have superior vision in dark and dim conditions. You can see in dim light within 60 feet of you as if it were bright light, and in darkness as if it were dim light. You can't discern color in darkness, only shades of gray.

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common and Orc. Orc is a harsh, grating language with hard consonants. It has no script of its own but is written in the Dwarvish script.

Menacing You gain proficiency in the Intimidation skill.

Relentless Endurance When you are reduced to 0 hit points but not killed outright, you can drop to 1 hit point instead. You can't use this feature again until you finish a long rest.

Savage Attacks When you score a critical hit with a melee weapon attack, you can roll one of the weapon's damage dice one additional time and add it to the extra damage of the critical hit.

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 6th, 8th, 12th, 14th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.

Champion The archetypal Champion focuses on the development of raw physical power honed to deadly perfection. Those who model themselves on this archetype combine rigorous training with physical excellence to deal devastating blows.

Extra Attack Beginning at 5th level, you can attack twice, instead of once, whenever you take the Attack action on your turn. The number of attacks increases to three when you reach 11th level in this class and to four when you reach 20th level in this class.

Fighting Style You adopt a particular style of fighting as your specialty. Choose one of the following options. You can't take a Fighting Style option more than once, even if you later get to choose again.

Improved Critical Beginning when you choose this archetype at 3rd level, your weapon attacks score a critical hit on a roll of 19 or 20.

Indomitable Beginning at 9th level, you can reroll a saving throw that you fail. If you do so, you must use the new roll, and you can't use this feature again until you finish a long rest. You can use this feature 1 time(s) between long rests.

Martial Archetype At 3rd level, you choose an archetype that you strive to emulate in your combat styles and techniques. The Champion archetype is detailed at the end of the class description; see the Player's Handbook for information on other martial archetypes. Your archetype grants you features at 3rd level and again at 7th, 10th, 15th, and 18th level.

Remarkable Athlete Starting at 7th level, you can add half your proficiency bonus (round up) to any Strength, Dexterity, or Constitution check you make that doesn't already use your proficiency bonus. In addition, when you make a running long jump, the distance you can cover increases by a number of feet equal to +2.

Second Wind You have a limited well of stamina that you can draw on to protect yourself from harm. On your turn, you can use a bonus action to regain hit points equal to 1d10 + your fighter level. Once you use this feature, you must finish a short or long rest before you can use it again.

Dueling When you are wielding a melee weapon in one hand and no other weapons, you gain a +2 bonus to damage rolls with that weapon.

Protection When a creature you can see attacks a target other than you that is within 5 feet of you, you can use your reaction to impose disadvantage on the attack roll. You must be wielding a shield.

Habits and Logistics

During daylight hours, Ownka will amble about, sometimes appearing in the Town Square to shop for personal items or food. The GM is encouraged to “place” her anywhere desired; she has a habit of roaming the town, taking in the sights.

At night, Ownka works at the Leaky Cask Tavern from noon until closing time. She then cleans up, and retires to a bunk in the Lower-Class Residential District if one is available; she’s not above sleeping in the streets or Town Square if it’s full up.

Background

Ownka has held a number of jobs, and although “serving wench” is hardly a title to which she has aspired, she finds the job an acceptable enough balance of security, income, and interest. Annoying though they may be to her, the diversity of patrons do keep things from being boring.

In the Obelisk Attack

Ownka and her fellow serving wench Thrunne are shopping together in the Town Square when the Obelisk erupts. They both die soon after the fighting starts.

Conversation

What do you think of Berinncorte?

“It’s a town like any other. Maybe not like some others. I dunno. It’s okay, I’ll say that.”

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

“Don’t know; don’t care. No matter what your faith is, you drink ale the same, and pay the same price for it, aye.”

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

“Symms is too good to be seen in a place like this. So that’s annoying. Other than that, I don’t care.”

Tell me about being a serving wench.

“Ah, ‘tis marvelous. I get to see the world, make a ton of gold, and take pleasure in the realm’s most desirable men and women. How do you think it is, being a serving wench in a village’s only eatery?”

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

“Heh, you’ll want to ask Jozan about that, if I understand you right. I’ve all the work I can manage, serving these fools.”

Phadian Gess

CR 2; Starting Attitude: 14 (Indifferent)

Description

A half-elven trickster and passionate soul, Phadian Gess is fond of declaring that he would have been a fine bard in another life, another world, than this. He's quick with his hands, and uses this skill to steal... either hearts or gold, depending on his whim.

Appearance

Phadian is a beautiful man. He's slender, lithe, and his facial features strike an intriguing balance between human and elf, between masculine and feminine. He's bisexual, though this is in truth more because he has found that he appeals to both men and women; as he views relationships as mainly serving his own interests, he's flexible as to who he sleeps with, so long as they are profitable.

Combat Tactics

Though quite competent in a fight, Phadian is no idiot. Typically, battle comes to him as a means of recovering lost items, and victims rarely come alone. If outmatched, he will use his talents to escape if at all possible.

Faced with a confrontation he cannot avoid, Phadian will act quickly, striking at the slowest enemy, darting from foe to foe as the melee allows, trying to keep his opponents off guard. In a tavern, he will battle for showmanship, rallying the crowd to his cause as a means to distract, entertain, and dissuade things from becoming lethal.

In no way will he seek the aid of the authorities; he's been involved in so many thefts and trysts that he figures he can't take the chance he would be formally accused.

Factions

He's what nobody would call devout, but he can be found in the Sheergath Temple from time to time.

His tribute—at least what he declares—goes to the City of Berinn corte, however.

📖 Special Abilities

Darkvision Thanks to your elf blood, you have superior vision in dark and dim conditions. You can see in dim light within 60 feet of you as if it were bright light, and in darkness as if it were dim light. You can't discern color in darkness, only shades of gray.

Fey Ancestry You have advantage on all saving throws against being charmed or put to sleep.

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common, Elvish, and one extra language of your choice.

Skill Versatility You gain proficiency in two skills of your choice.

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 8th, 12th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.

Blindsight Starting at 14th level, if you are able to hear, you are aware of the location of any hidden or invisible creature within 10 feet of you.

Cunning Action Starting at 2nd level, your quick thinking and agility allow you to move and act quickly. You can take a bonus action on each of your turns in combat. This action can be used only to take the Dash, Disengage, or Hide action.

Evasion Beginning at 7th level, you can nimbly dodge out of the way of certain area effects, such as a red dragon's fiery breath or an ice storm spell. When you are subjected to an effect that allows you to make a Dexterity saving throw to take only half damage, you instead take no damage if you succeed on the saving throw, and only half damage if you fail.

Expertise At 1st level, choose two of your skill proficiencies, or one of your skill proficiencies and your proficiency with thieves' tools. Your proficiency bonus is doubled for any ability check you make that uses either of the chosen proficiencies. At 6th level, you can choose two more of your proficiencies (in skills or with thieves' tools) to gain this benefit.

Fast Hands Starting at 3rd level, you can use the bonus action granted by your Cunning Action to make a Dexterity (Sleight of Hand) check, use your thieves' tools to disarm a trap or open a lock, or take the Use an Object action.

Reliable Talent By 11th level, you have refined your chosen skills until they approach perfection. Whenever you make an ability check that lets you add your proficiency bonus, you can treat a d20 roll of 9 or lower as a 10.

At 3rd level, you choose an archetype that you emulate in the exercise of your rogue abilities. Your choice grants you features at 3rd level and then again at 9th, 13th, and 17th level.

Second-Story Work When you choose this archetype at 3rd level, you gain the ability to climb faster than normal; climbing no longer costs you extra movement. In addition, when you make a running jump, the distance you cover increases by a number of feet equal to 5.

Sneak Attack Beginning at 1st level, you know how to strike subtly and exploit a foe's distraction. Once per turn, you can deal an extra 7d6 damage to one creature you hit with an attack if you have advantage on the attack roll. The attack must use a finesse or a ranged weapon. You don't need advantage on the attack roll if another enemy of the target is within 5 feet of it, that enemy isn't incapacitated, and you don't have disadvantage on the attack roll.

Supreme Sneak Starting at 9th level, you have advantage on a Dexterity (Stealth) check if you move no more than half your speed on the same turn.

Thief You hone your skills in the larcenous arts. Burglars, bandits, cutpurses, and other criminals typically follow this archetype, but so do rogues who prefer to think of themselves as professional treasure seekers, explorers, delvers, and investigators. In addition to improving your agility and stealth, you learn skills useful for delving into ancient ruins, reading unfamiliar languages, and using magic items you normally couldn't employ.

Thieves' Cant During your rogue training you learned thieves' cant, a secret mix of dialect, jargon, and code that allows you to hide messages in seemingly normal conversation. Only another creature that knows thieves' cant understands such messages. It takes four times longer to convey such a message than it does to speak the same idea plainly. In addition, you understand a set of secret signs and symbols used to convey short, simple messages, such as whether an area is dangerous or the territory of a thieves' guild, whether loot is nearby, or whether the people in an area are easy marks or will provide a safe house for thieves on the run.

Uncanny Dodge Starting at 5th level, when an attacker that you can see hits you with an attack, you can use your reaction to halve the attack's damage against you.

Use Magic Device By 13th level, you have learned enough about the workings of magic that you can improvise the use of items even when they are not intended for you. You ignore all class, race, and level requirements on the use of magic items.

Habits and Logistics

 During daylight hours, Phadian is typically  70% at the Town Square, hawking stolen wares as a fence, trading, or just hanging out and seeing if anything interesting takes place. The rest of the time, he will be sleeping off the previous night's revelry, either in the Lower-Class Residential District or in a field outside the city limits.

 At night, Phadian tends  60% to stop by the Leaky Cask Tavern for at least some of the evening, often engaging with his lover Lingona to perform some mild thievery (see event RTE-9: Impromptu Performance). The remainder of the time, he will wander about, seeing where the evening takes him; the GM is welcome to "place" him anywhere in the city (or outside).

Background

Phadian is a wandering sort, never in one place for very long. He's been in Berinn corte about half a year, and is already growing weary of its somewhat normal, average décor. His wandering is strategic, as well: his sleight of hand tricks and casual way with the ladies leads to him often outstaying his welcome in a village of any size.

His talents have always served him well, and he has never had cause to form any sort of long-term plan or mission.

In the Obelisk Attack

Lingona escapes the Tavern, and Phadian follows her... but he is set upon by monsters, and though she tries to help fight them off, he succumbs quickly to their power and is slain trying to follow his lover to safety.

Conversation

What do you think of Berinn corte?

 "Bit of a back-woods sort of village, no? I mean, I've been to places you could actually call a city; Berinn corte's got its charm, to be sure, but I find it a bit droll at the end of the day."

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

 "I've heard of some conflict, sure. At services at Sheergath, they talk of how law and order will doom us all, et cetera, and so on, pass the collection plate, thank you very much. And it's true there's too much Militia and law and order and do-as-I-say in this town. But you ask me, the whole church-on-church thing is all made up, it's just a thing they each use to get you to pay attention, because the gods themselves aren't doing much of anything as it benefits your average person."

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

 "Symms is a bit of an ugly bloke, no? I suppose she's an adequate Mayor; I wouldn't quite know, after all."

Tell me about being a... what are you, exactly?

 "A lover, when I can be. A fool, when I can't be. And ever, ever the jolly sort to have fun, no matter the occasion. Sometimes all three at once, with the right person."

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

 "I'd say all my work is 'on the side'. Or on my back, lots of the time." He winks, but his eyes know the joke is merely that.

Hear anything interesting in your travels around the town?

 "I hear much, but repeat little... without coin."

Diplomacy check at DC 16, pressing the above matter—OR a bribe of at least 10 gp:

 "Well, I can't say as it's true, necessarily, but I've certainly come across some tidbits, might be of interest to such as yourselves." The succeeding or bribing PC may make a free roll on the Rumors and Lore table, but if indeed Phadian knows whether it's true, he doesn't say. Bribes in excess of 10 gp will provide one separate roll on this table for each full 10 gp of value, up to a maximum of 5 rolls for 50 gp.

Pilga (Landlord)

CR 2; Starting Attitude: 14 (Indifferent)

Description

In many ways, Pilga was born to be the landlord of the Lower-Class Residential District: she's strict, mean, has a ferocious temper, and is feared more than respected, but sometimes one because of the other.

Appearance

Grizzled and grim, Pilga's visage appears to embody the most severe stereotypes of both orc and dwarf. She's not entirely sure of her ancestry, but some have sworn they see Dwarf notably in her expression and features. Pilga herself neither knows for certain nor cares, preferring instead to

Combat Tactics

Pilga relishes combat, and any excuse to participate in a melee. If engaged from a distance, she'll close ranks while tossing throwing axes; once up close and personal, she will swing away at the burliest-seeming foe until they drop, then proceed through the enemy's ranks as opportunities present themselves. Though she would not be above summoning help, and indeed will call upon the Militia if she's reduced to fewer than 10 hit points, in the thick of battle she fears that official involvement would diminish the chance to cause slaughter.

Factions

Pilga serves no one. Her Tribute, at least that which she admits to and pays, goes to the city of Berinncorte itself.

📖 Special Abilities

Darkvision Thanks to your orc blood, you have superior vision in dark and dim conditions. You can see in dim light within 60 feet of you as if it were bright light, and in darkness as if it were dim light. You can't discern color in darkness, only shades of gray.

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common and Orc. Orc is a harsh, grating language with hard consonants. It has no script of its own but is written in the Dwarvish script.

Menacing You gain proficiency in the Intimidation skill.

Relentless Endurance When you are reduced to 0 hit points but not killed outright, you can drop to 1 hit point instead. You can't use this feature again until you finish a long rest.

Savage Attacks When you score a critical hit with a melee weapon attack, you can roll one of the weapon's damage dice one additional time and add it to the extra damage of the critical hit.

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 8th, 12th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.

Brutal Critical Beginning at 9th level, you can roll 2 additional weapon damage die when determining the extra damage for a critical hit with a melee attack.

Danger Sense At 2nd level, you gain an uncanny sense of when things nearby aren't as they should be, giving you an edge when you dodge away from danger. You have advantage on Dexterity saving throws against effects that you can see, such as traps and spells. To gain this benefit, you can't be blinded, deafened, or incapacitated.

Extra Attack Beginning at 5th level, you can attack twice, instead of once, whenever you take the Attack action on your turn.,

Fast Movement Starting at 5th level, your speed increases by 10 feet while you aren't wearing heavy armor.,

Feral Instinct By 7th level, your instincts are so honed that you have advantage on initiative rolls. Additionally, if you are surprised at the beginning of combat and aren't incapacitated, you can act normally on your first turn, but only if you enter your rage before doing anything else on that turn.,

Frenzy Starting when you choose this path at 3rd level, you can go into a frenzy when you rage. If you do so, for the duration of your rage you can make a single melee weapon attack as a bonus action on each of your turns after this one. When your rage ends, you suffer one level of exhaustion (as described in appendix A),

Path of the Berserker For some barbarians, rage is a means to an end--that end being violence. The Path of the Berserker is a path of untrammelled fury, slick with blood. As you enter the berserker's rage, you thrill in the chaos of battle, heedless of your own health or well-being.,

Primal Path At 3rd level, you choose a path that shapes the nature of your rage. Choose the Path of the Berserker or the Path of the Totem Warrior, both detailed at the end of the class description. Your choice grants you features at 3rd level and again at 6th, 10th, and 14th levels.,

Rage In battle, you fight with primal ferocity. On your turn, you can enter a rage as a bonus action. While raging, you gain the following benefits if you aren't wearing heavy armor: You have advantage on Strength checks and Strength saving throws. When you make a melee weapon attack using Strength, you gain a bonus to the damage roll equal to 3. You have resistance to bludgeoning, piercing, and slashing damage. If you are able to cast spells, you can't cast them or concentrate on them while raging. Your rage lasts for 1 minute. It ends early if you are knocked unconscious or if your turn ends and you haven't attacked a hostile creature since your last turn or taken damage since then. You can also end your rage on your turn as a bonus action. Once you have raged the number of times equal to 5, you must finish a long rest before you can rage again.,

Reckless Attack Starting at 2nd level, you can throw aside all concern for defense to attack with fierce desperation. When you make your first attack on your turn, you can decide to attack recklessly. Doing so gives you advantage on melee weapon attack rolls using Strength during this turn, but attack rolls against you have advantage until your next turn.,

Relentless Rage Starting at 11th level, your rage can keep you fighting despite grievous wounds. If you drop to 0 hit points while you're raging and don't die outright, you can make a DC 10 Constitution saving throw. If you succeed, you drop to 1 hit point instead. Each time you use this feature after the first, the DC increases by 5. When you finish a short or long rest, the DC resets to 10.,

Retaliation Starting at 14th level, when you take damage from a creature that is within 5 feet of you, you can use your reaction to make a melee weapon attack against that creature.,

Unarmored Defense While you are not wearing any armor, your Armor Class equals 10 + your Dexterity modifier + your Constitution modifier. You can use a shield and still gain this benefit.

Habits and Logistics

 During daylight hours, Pilga will be in the Lower-Class Residential District, tending to the business of a landlord (albeit begrudgingly).

 At night, the half-orc proprietress will either be drinking (typically at the Leaky Cask Tavern), or will be outside the city, where she tends to sleep in the wilderness, preferring a cold rock to a warm bed.

Background

Pilga is an orphan, and presumably the product of an orc/human liaison, which is further presumed to be unwanted by the human portion of the equation, and yet further presumed to have occurred as part of an orcish raid or plunder. Though many she has encountered are aghast at the implications, and assume that such a person would have a need to know as much of the detail as she could come by, Pilga herself has never much cared. She is; that much she's certain of, and delving back into the past of an orphan seems quite a lot of work, and to what eventual end? The best-case scenario, in her view, is that she was the product of a wanted liaison, but is herself unwanted; is that any better than the ambiguity that now clouds the possibilities?

A good shrug and a strong ale tend to wash away any such concerns, Pilga has found.

In the Obelisk Attack

When the Obelisk Erupts, Pilga is in the Lower-Class Residential District. She stays there as chaos descends, and takes the opportunity to loot rooms. She does so with a crystal-clean conscience: it seems that the world is ending, or perhaps that every one of her tenants has rushed off to either their untimely demise or to flee the city. In any of these scenarios, they certainly won't be coming back anytime soon to collect their paltry treasures, so why not help herself to the loot?

Conversation

What do you think of Berinncorte?

 "It's awful. And the people smell, and are hateful. But the Cask's okay."

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

 "There's no way I could possibly care less. Wait; I take that back—if you ask me again, then I'll care less, and then I'll punch you. Which, in a weird way, would make me care more. So to answer your question, shut up."

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

 "Her name's Symms, right? Yup. That's all I know. Or care about it."

Tell me about being a landlord.

 "People are rude, they smell, most of 'em trash the place—not that there's much to trash, here, you mind, but somehow they still find a way to muck things up. Them that aren't any of those terrible things stiff you on the rent. So yeah, it's basically the best thing ever."

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

 "Like what? Play the lute? Sing and dance? Got no time for such nonsense, nor desire, truth to tell."

Rhirem (Mercenary Evoker)

CR 2; XP 600; Starting Attitude: 14 (Indifferent)

Description

Rhirem is something of a rarity—a spellcaster for hire. He's a somewhat antisocial loner with a spirit for adventure—and he has come to realize that he has chosen entirely the wrong class for such a combination of attitudes. Thus, he is now a mercenary: never having to work too closely with anybody for much time, but protected to some extent by safety in numbers when he goes out into the dangers of the wild.

Appearance

Dressed in dark-red robes unadorned by embroidery, the gaunt human has a stubby nose and noticeably large earlobes. His right hand bears numerous scars, though he will not say anything as to their origin.

Combat Tactics

Rhirem adores combat, but typically fears for his safety unless accompanied by at least a handful of others who can block melee enemies and otherwise protect him so he can focus on ranged magic. He will try to inflict as much damage, as quickly as possible, on as many enemies as possible—sometimes “forgetting” the range and radius of effect of spells in order to do so, catching allies on the outskirts of the effect.

If reduced to fewer than half his maximum hit points the mercenary will begin to rethink the alliance with this acquaintances, and will likely try to flee if he feels it safe. If he does so, and the rest of the party wins the day, he will try to explain that he escaped so he could cover an exit, or that he feared for his life, or something else that makes his actions sound less cowardly. If pressed, he will brusquely admit to running away, and will then remind the PCs that he is, after all, nothing more than a mercenary, and in order to get paid, one has to survive, doesn't one?

Factions

Rhirem has heard of The Scarlet Path, and would probably consider joining—if he could only find out how to do so. He's not had the right combination of free time, proximity of access to Path members, and intent to follow through with this plan, but he feels it's in his near future.

For the time being, his tribute goes to Berinncorte City itself.

Special Abilities

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common and one extra language of your choice. Humans typically learn the languages of other peoples they deal with, including obscure dialects. They are fond of sprinkling their speech with words borrowed from other tongues: Orc curses, Elvish musical expressions, Dwarvish military phrases, and so on.,

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 8th, 12th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.,

Arcane Recovery You have learned to regain some of your magical energy by studying your spellbook. Once per day when you finish a short rest, you can choose expended spell slots to recover. The spell slots can have a combined level that is equal to or less than 8, and none of the slots can be 6th level or higher. For example, if you're a 4th-level wizard, you can recover up to two levels worth of spell slots. You can recover either a 2nd-level spell slot or two 1st-level spell slots.,

Arcane Tradition When you reach 2nd level, you choose an arcane tradition, shaping your practice of magic through one of eight schools: Abjuration, Conjunction, Divination, Enchantment, Evocation, Illusion, Necromancy, or Transmutation. The school of Evocation is detailed at the end of the class description; see the Player's Handbook for information on the other schools. Your choice grants you features at 2nd level and again at 6th, 10th, and 14th level.,

Cantrips At 1st level, you know three cantrips of your choice from the wizard spell list. You learn additional wizard cantrips of your choice at higher levels, as shown in the Cantrips Known column of the Wizard table.,

Empowered Evocation Beginning at 10th level, you can add +5 to the damage roll of any wizard evocation spell you cast. The damage bonus applies to one damage roll of a spell, not multiple rolls.,

Evocation Savant Beginning when you select this school at 2nd level, the gold and time you must spend to copy an evocation spell into your spellbook is halved.,

Overchannel Starting at 14th level, you can increase the power of your simpler spells. When you cast a wizard spell of 5th level or lower that deals damage, you can deal maximum damage with that spell. The first time you do so, you suffer no adverse effect. If you use this feature again before you finish a long rest, you take 2d12 necrotic damage for each level of the spell, immediately after you cast it. Each time you use this feature again before finishing a long rest, the necrotic damage per spell level increases by 1d12. This damage ignores resistance and immunity. The feature doesn't benefit cantrips.,

Potent Cantrip Starting at 6th level, your damaging cantrips affect even creatures that avoid the brunt of the effect. When a creature succeeds on a saving throw against your cantrip, the creature takes half the cantrip's damage (if any) but suffers no additional effect from the cantrip.,

Preparing and Casting Spells The Wizard table shows how many spell slots you have to cast your spells of 1st level and higher. To cast one of these spells, you must expend a slot of the spell's level or higher. You regain all expended spell slots when you finish a long rest. You prepare the list of wizard spells that are available for you to cast. To do so, choose a number of wizard spells from your spellbook equal to 20. The spells must be of a level for which you have spell slots. For example, if you're a 3rd-level wizard, you have four 1st-level and two 2nd-level spell slots. With an Intelligence of 16, your list of prepared spells can include six spells of 1st or 2nd level, in any combination, chosen from your spellbook. If you prepare the 1st-level spell magic missile, you can cast it using a 1st-level or a 2nd-level slot. Casting the spell doesn't remove it from your list of prepared spells. You can change your list of prepared spells when you finish a long rest. Preparing a new list of wizard spells requires time spent studying your spellbook and memorizing the incantations and gestures you must make to cast the spell: at least 1 minute per spell level for each spell on your list.,

Ritual Casting You can cast a wizard spell as a ritual if that spell has the ritual tag and you have the spell in your spellbook. You don't need to have the spell prepared.,

School of Evocation You focus your study on magic that creates powerful elemental effects such as bitter cold, searing flame, rolling thunder, crackling lightning, and burning acid. Some evokers find employment in military forces, serving as artillery to blast enemy armies from afar. Others use their spectacular power to protect the weak, while some seek their own gain as bandits, adventurers, or aspiring tyrants.,

Sculpt Spells Beginning at 2nd level, you can create pockets of relative safety within the effects of your evocation spells. When you cast an evocation spell that affects other creatures that you can see, you can choose a number of them equal to 1 + the spell's level. The chosen creatures automatically succeed on their saving throws against the spell, and they take no damage if they would normally take half damage on a successful save.,

Spellcasting As a student of arcane magic, you have a spellbook containing spells that show the first glimmerings of your true power. See chapter 10 for the general rules of spellcasting and chapter 11 for the wizard spell list. Spell

Habits and Logistics

☀ During daylight hours, Rhirem will amble about; the GM is free to "place" him anywhere desired (or nowhere).

🌙 At night, Rhirem will usually (🎲 85%) be at the Leaky Cask Tavern, basically hanging out and looking strange in the hopes that it might serve to attract clients who want to hire his services. He has found that wearing robes indoors, avoiding direct social contact, and being just generally "wizardly" are normally sufficient to generate the sort of attention he's interested in. This matches well with his lazy approach to employment and changing his demeanor; he simply doesn't care. If he is not at the Tavern, it's because he's out of the city altogether, working with clients who have hired him for the day (or longer).

Background

Rhirem fell into being a spellcaster almost by accident; the son of a wealthy merchant, he attended schooling, but between his social anxiety and his high intelligence, was unliked and picked on mercilessly. Knowing he couldn't fight back effectively in a physical manner, he asked his parents for a tutor to study magic. Within a few months, he had gathered enough knowledge and skill to repay his tormentors the unkindness visited upon him a hundredfold.

It's unclear whether he had set out to kill the two older boys who had bullied him. But regardless of his original intent, or his claims in heated discussions with the schoolmaster, the authorities, and his parents, he was asked to leave both school and family.

And so, he set out on his own at the tender age of 14, though his parents did then and still send him a stipend, less out of a desire to see him do well and more out of pure guilt at having exiled him from a prosperous and otherwise loving home.

Needless to say, the event pushed him even further away from others, and now, Rhirem lives mainly to use his art for the destruction of others. That some people would not only sanction such a perspective, but pay for him to do so—well, isn't that just the best way this could have turned out?

In the Obelisk Attack

Rhirem is in the Tavern when the attack occurs. At first, he shies away from the chaos, but as soon as it's clear that there is combat taking place, and that the general distraction of everything happening at once means he won't be singled out by the creatures emerging from the fissure, he starts fighting, laying about him in an ecstatic frenzy until his spells are exhausted and he is forced to seek safety.

Perhaps more than any other resident of Berinncorte, Rhirem thirsts for more of the Obelisk and what it has brought forth.

Conversation

What do you think of Berinncorte?

🗨 "What do I think of... are you serious? You're serious, aren't you. It's a city. You're in it, right now. You tell me how it is."

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

☞ “Yes. I know it’s silly and pathetic and that everyone involved even a little bit should have better things on their mind. You included, apparently, since you’re so concerned about it.”

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

☞ “Symms is not my favorite person. But then, nobody is, because you’re all horrible. In different ways, mind. You, for example: you’re horrible because you ask inane questions.”

Tell me about being a magician for hire.

☞ “Magicians do party tricks. I set monsters on fire so others can get the gold in their lair. There’s a difference, I’ll have you know. That is absolutely amazing, and it’s the best thing in the world, and I get to do it, so therefore, I am awesome.”

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

☞ “My main profession is incinerating other people, or monsters, for gold. And that pays well. What possible purpose would I have doing anything else too?”

Heard anything interesting around here?

☞ “I don’t like talking to people. You included, now that we’re on the subject.”

▲ Diplomacy check opposed by Rhirem’s Deception check, pressing the above matter:

☞ “Oh, fine. I spend all my free time at a tavern, drinking and waiting for clients to take note and hire me; of course I hear interesting things! Here’s what I know, but it’ll cost you. Five gold.” If the succeeding PC pays up, she may make a free roll on the Rumors and Lore table. In relating the information, roll a D6: on a 1-2, Rhirem accurately relates whether the item is true or not; on a 3-4, he lies (saying it is true if it isn’t, and false if it’s true); on a 5-6, he does not volunteer anything as to the accuracy of the tidbit.

Rona Stonehammer (Combat Trainer)

CR 2; Starting Attitude: 14 (Indifferent)

Description

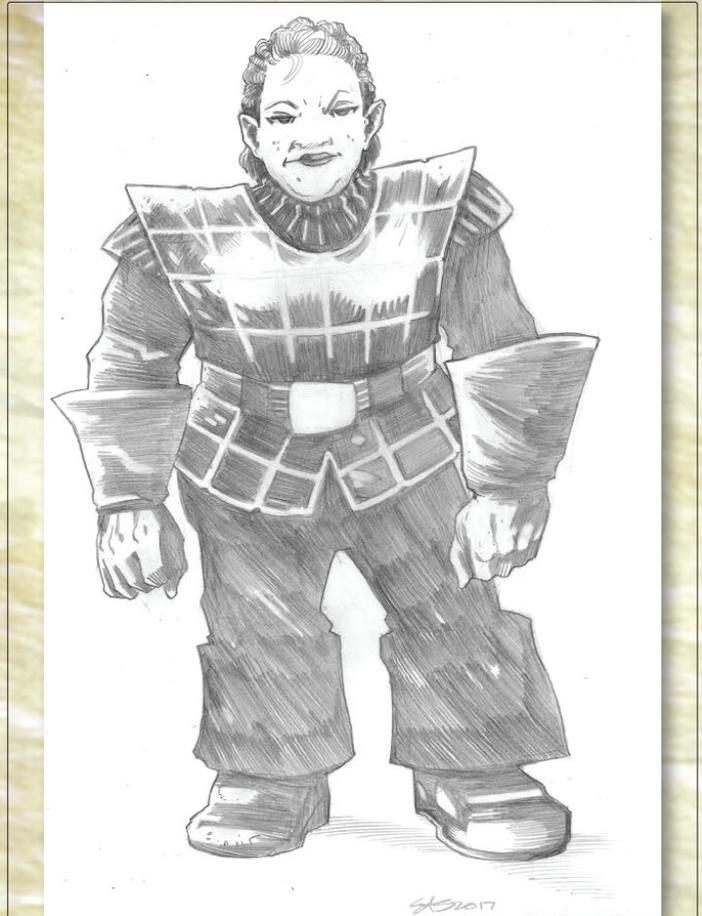

Ash “Executioner” may be the city’s formal trainer and leader of doing so in the context of the Militia, but for the common citizen or visitor, there’s no substitute for this dwarven blowhard. She’s strong, capable, and demanding, and one can never quite tell if her taunts, boasts, and insults are meant as playful encouragement, biting wit, or simply a social cruelty. In the end, though, it hardly matters: while the occasional comment might sting those with a thin skin, it’s difficult not to love and get along with Rona Stonehammer.

Appearance

Rona is an intimidating presence, but with a clear sense of humor and general lust for life; in this manner, she’s similar to Ash “Executioner” the Militia trainer. She keeps her hair braided and cut short, and it’s not uncommon that she be mistaken for a male dwarf at first glance—Rona takes no offense to this generally. Her hair is greying a bit, and as she will admit, she’s put on a few pounds since her prime, but she can still dual-wield longswords with the best of them.

Combat Tactics

Rona is a hardened veteran, and a combat trainer: naturally, she won’t shy away from a fight, but will choose to fight when the conditions favor her. She’s not above Militia involvement if circumstances aren’t going her way, but will begin combat on her own.

Factions

Rona pays her Tribute directly to the city of Berinn corte. In her youth, she was a member of The Wild Kingdom for a few years, and still knows a few people in that organization that have achieved leadership positions, but other than those few old friends, has no further current ties to the group.

📖 Special Abilities

Darkvision Accustomed to life underground, you have superior vision in dark and dim conditions. You can see in dim light within 60 feet of you as if it were bright light, and in darkness as if it were dim light. You can't discern color in darkness, only shades of gray.

Dwarven Combat Training You have proficiency with the battleaxe, handaxe, light hammer, and warhammer.

Dwarven Resilience You have advantage on saving throws against poison, and you have resistance against poison damage (explained in chapter 9).

Dwarven Toughness Your hit point maximum increases by 1, and it increases by 1 every time you gain a level.

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common and Dwarvish. Dwarvish is full of hard consonants and guttural sounds, and those characteristics spill over into whatever other language a dwarf might speak.

Smith's Tools Proficient with Artisan Smith's Tools.

Stonecunning Whenever you make an Intelligence (History) check related to the origin of stonework, you are considered proficient in the History skill and add double your proficiency bonus to the check, instead of your normal proficiency bonus.

Tool Proficiency You gain proficiency with the artisan's tools of your choice: smith's tools, brewer's supplies, or mason's tools.

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 8th, 12th,

16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.,

Brutal Critical Beginning at 9th level, you can roll 1 additional weapon damage die when determining the extra damage for a critical hit with a melee attack.,

Danger Sense At 2nd level, you gain an uncanny sense of when things nearby aren't as they should be, giving you an edge when you dodge away from danger. You have advantage on Dexterity saving throws against effects that you can see, such as traps and spells. To gain this benefit, you can't be blinded, deafened, or incapacitated.,

Extra Attack Beginning at 5th level, you can attack twice, instead of once, whenever you take the Attack action on your turn.,

Fast Movement Starting at 5th level, your speed increases by 10 feet while you aren't wearing heavy armor.,

Feral Instinct By 7th level, your instincts are so honed that you have advantage on initiative rolls. Additionally, if you are surprised at the beginning of combat and aren't incapacitated, you can act normally on your first turn, but only if you enter your rage before doing anything else on that turn.,

Frenzy Starting when you choose this path at 3rd level, you can go into a frenzy when you rage. If you do so, for the duration of your rage you can make a single melee weapon attack as a bonus action on each of your turns after this one. When your rage ends, you suffer one level of exhaustion (as described in appendix A),

Path of the Berserker For some barbarians, rage is a means to an end--that end being violence. The Path of the Berserker is a path of untrammelled fury, slick with blood. As you enter the berserker's rage, you thrill in the chaos of battle, heedless of your own health or well-being.,

Primal Path At 3rd level, you choose a path that shapes the nature of your rage. Choose the Path of the Berserker or the Path of the Totem Warrior, both detailed at the end of the class description. Your choice grants you features at 3rd level and again at 6th, 10th, and 14th levels.,

Rage In battle, you fight with primal ferocity. On your turn, you can enter a rage as a bonus action. While raging, you gain the following benefits if you aren't wearing heavy armor: You have advantage on Strength checks and Strength saving throws. When you make a melee weapon attack using Strength, you gain a bonus to the damage roll equal to 3. You have resistance to bludgeoning, piercing, and slashing damage. If you are able to cast spells, you can't cast them or concentrate on them while raging. Your rage lasts for 1 minute. It ends early if you are knocked unconscious or if your turn ends and you haven't attacked a hostile creature since your last turn or taken damage since then. You can also end your rage on your turn as a bonus action. Once you have raged the number of times equal to 5, you must finish a long rest before you can rage again.,

Reckless Attack Starting at 2nd level, you can throw aside all concern for defense to attack with fierce desperation. When you make your first attack on your turn, you can decide to attack recklessly. Doing so gives you advantage on melee weapon attack rolls using Strength during this turn, but attack rolls against you have advantage until your next turn.,

Relentless Rage Starting at 11th level, your rage can keep you fighting despite grievous wounds. If you drop to 0 hit points while you're raging and don't die outright, you can make a DC 10 Constitution saving throw. If you succeed, you drop to 1 hit point instead. Each time you use this feature after the first, the DC increases by 5. When you finish a short or long rest, the DC resets to 10.,

Unarmored Defense While you are not wearing any armor, your Armor Class equals 10 + your Dexterity modifier + your Constitution modifier. You can use a shield and still gain this benefit

Habits and Logistics

 During daylight hours, Rona will be in her stall in the Town Square, hawking and delivering her services.

 At night, she will steep in the wine, song, and warmth of the Shanty Town area of Town Square.

Background

Rona was born to a proud, though poor, dwarven family. Farmers by trade, they thus occupied one of the lower, yet essential, roles in the race's culture: food is of course necessary to live, but requires being out of doors and relatively socially isolated, and was generally speaking not too profitable. The Stonehammer clan began as militants, capable members of the dwarven military who often held leadership roles, but in prolonged times of peace, they took up farming as a functional alternative to butchery.

As she matured, and grew in stature as well as physical prowess, it became clear that Rona was certainly not for the farming life, and any attempts to force the matter would either push her into a desperate escape from the lifestyle, or if she gave in, depress something essential about her spirit. And so her parents scraped together what money they could, and gave her the opportunity to set forth and make her name in the world. Eight years of occasionally-profitable adventuring later, Rona had a good deal of spirit and fight left in her... but the risk seemed too great, at least going it alone.

These days, she trains and taunts, and will occasionally consider joining a band of adventurers for the fun of it (and a share of the loot).

In the Obelisk Attack

Sadly, Rona perishes trying to escort others to safety.

Conversation

What do you think of Berinncorte?

 "Ah, I've been a lot of places, and this is as fine as any I've seen. Not dirty enough, you ask me, though. I never trust anybody who doesn't like to get their hands messy once in a while, and the same holds true for cities. Too clean. Makes you wonder why they feel the need to wash up so often, you know what I mean?"

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

 "Two churches, with an ideological difference between them? And each seems to be exploiting it to summon fervor for their flock? What a unique situation. Certainly never seen that before. In any city in the entire Realm." The sarcasm seems as though it has a personal edge to it, but she doesn't volunteer more.

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

 "Symms is all right. Mind, I've not shared drinks with the lady, so I can't claim to know her mind, but she seems to do right by the city, even if common word is that she does so with a hard hand."

Tell me about being a trainer.

 "I get to yell at people, and hit them with sticks. And then they pay me. Usually they even thank me, too. So to answer your question, it's pretty much the best thing ever. It's a lot of the excitement of adventuring, but at the end of the day, I don't have to find a cleric to help grow my arm back after an ogre bit it off."

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

 "For the right price, I can usually be coerced into joining a group of adventurers, if the risk isn't too great, and I get a share of the treasure too."

Shakira Alam (Merchant)

CR 3; Starting Attitude: 14 (Indifferent)

Description

Berinncorte's primary source of locks, ropes, chains, cages, and all manner of binding things, Shakira Alam is a young halfling rogue and ranger with myriad talents and a short attention span. One wonders at her ability to stand in her stall, day in, day out, and wait for business; indeed, much of the time, she's whittling something or woodworking. She has a strong relationship with most of the other female merchants in town, and is romantically involved with Elizavetta Burak; the halfling lock merchant doesn't care a whit about her companion's chosen profession, and is not threatened in the least that her lover is herself lover to many others.

Appearance

Short and slender, Shakira prefers loose leather armor rather than the more form-fitting manner more stereotypical of her gender. It's difficult to get, generally, and so much of her armor has been custom-made by tailors and leathercrafters. Shakira has reddish-black hair, a bizarre genetic anomaly that most assume is an affectation made possible by dye. She keeps it chin-length and straight; it frames her face in an effortless but not unpretty manner.

Combat Tactics

Shakira won't wade into an existing combat, or seek one out, but won't flee from one once started, either. Her short temper, dwindling attention span, and generally impetuous nature have made unsought combat an occasional necessity; she knows her way around a blade.

Factions

Shakira has been solicited by the Emerald Garden, but truthfully doesn't care much for the environment as an entity unto itself. She has great respect for nature, and will go out of her way to benefit it and avoid disrupting it to too great an avoidable extent. But her experience with, and her very interest in, nature has taught her that Gaia does all right by herself; the very most that is required of any who are truly concerned for the Realm is to stay out of Her way as much as possible, and let her do her own thing.

As a result, her Tribute, while she is in the city, goes to Berinncorte City itself.

📖 Special Abilities

Brave You have advantage on saving throws against being frightened.,

Halfling Nimbleness You can move through the space of any creature that is of a size larger than yours.,

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common and Halfling. The Halfling language isn't secret, but halflings are loath to share it with others. They write very little, so they don't have a rich body of literature. Their oral tradition, however, is very strong. Almost all halflings speak Common to converse with the people in whose lands they dwell or through which they are traveling.,

Lucky When you roll a 1 on an attack roll, ability check, or saving throw, you can reroll the die and must use the new roll.,

Naturally Stealthy You can attempt to hide even when you are obscured only by a creature that is at least one size larger than you.,

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 8th, 12th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.,

Cunning Action Starting at 2nd level, your quick thinking and agility allow you to move and act quickly. You can take a bonus action on each of your turns in combat. This action can be used only to take the Dash, Disengage, or Hide action.,

Evasion Beginning at 7th level, you can nimbly dodge out of the way of certain area effects, such as a red dragon's fiery breath or an ice storm spell. When you are subjected to an effect that allows you to make a Dexterity saving throw to take only half damage, you instead take no damage if you succeed on the saving throw, and only half damage if you fail.,

Expertise At 1st level, choose two of your skill proficiencies, or one of your skill proficiencies and your proficiency with thieves' tools. Your proficiency bonus is doubled for any ability check you make that uses either of the chosen proficiencies. At 6th level, you can choose two more of your proficiencies (in skills or with thieves' tools) to gain this benefit.,

Fast Hands Starting at 3rd level, you can use the bonus action granted by your Cunning Action to make a Dexterity (Sleight of Hand) check, use your thieves' tools to disarm a trap or open a lock, or take the Use an Object action.,

Reliable Talent By 11th level, you have refined your chosen skills until they approach perfection. Whenever you make an ability check that lets you add your proficiency bonus, you can treat a d20 roll of 9 or lower as a 10.,

Roguish Archetype At 3rd level, you choose an archetype that you emulate in the exercise of your rogue abilities. Your choice grants you features at 3rd level and then again at 9th, 13th, and 17th level.,

Second-Story Work When you choose this archetype at 3rd level, you gain the ability to climb faster than normal; climbing no longer costs you extra movement. In addition, when you make a running jump, the distance you cover increases by a number of feet equal to 5.,

Sneak Attack Beginning at 1st level, you know how to strike subtly and exploit a foe's distraction. Once per turn, you can deal an extra 6d6 damage to one creature you hit with an attack if you have advantage on the attack roll. The attack must use a finesse or a ranged weapon. You don't need advantage on the attack roll if another enemy of the target is within 5 feet of it, that enemy isn't incapacitated, and you don't have disadvantage on the attack roll.,

Supreme Sneak Starting at 9th level, you have advantage on a Dexterity (Stealth) check if you move no more than half your speed on the same turn.,

Thief You hone your skills in the larcenous arts. Burglars, bandits, cutpurses, and other criminals typically follow this archetype, but so do rogues who prefer to think of themselves as professional treasure seekers, explorers, delvers, and investigators. In addition to improving your agility and stealth, you learn skills useful for delving into ancient ruins, reading unfamiliar languages, and using magic items you normally couldn't employ.,

Thieves' Cant During your rogue training you learned thieves' cant, a secret mix of dialect, jargon, and code that allows you to hide messages in seemingly normal conversation. Only another creature that knows thieves' cant understands such messages. It takes four times longer to convey such a message than it does to speak the same idea plainly. In addition, you understand a set of secret signs and symbols used to convey short, simple messages, such as whether an area is dangerous or the territory of a thieves' guild, whether loot is nearby, or whether the people in an area are easy marks or will provide a safe house for thieves on the run.,

Uncanny Dodge Starting at 5th level, when an attacker that you can see hits you with an attack, you can use your reaction to halve the attack's damage against you.

Habits and Logistics

 During daylight hours, Shakira will most of the time ( 60%) be at her stall in Town Square. The remainder of the time, she will be outside the city proper, foraging for supplies, trading elsewhere, or just roaming the countryside.

 At night, there's a good possibility ( 70%) that the halfling merchant will be with many of her colleagues in the Shanty Town area of Town Square. Elsewise, she will be out of the city, staying elsewhere, or sleeping under the stars.

Background

Shakira never knew her parents; she was raised by monks far in the East of the Realm who were sworn to silence about her origins. As she matured and grew, so did her desire to know more about her past and lineage, but after five years of increasingly desperate searching across many parts of the land, she has changed her perspective a bit.

Though she will never give up her search, she recognizes that whether or not she will ever learn the truth of her heritage, in the meantime, she will only do herself a disservice if she does not focus at least a bit on herself and her own fulfillment, independent of the parents whom she never knew.

In the Obelisk Attack

Shakira survives, as she is out of town hunting when the Obelisk Erupts. In the aftermath, she is stricken with the loss of her lover, Elizavetta.

Conversation

What do you think of Berinncorte?

 "Fair. Yeah, that's how I'd assess it: fair."

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

 "Bit odd to begin with, folk devoting themselves to a god like that. When has a god ever dabbled overmuch in our lives? I mean, clerics get some return attention, but most folk who show up once a week don't get much to show for it except a lighter pocket once the collection basket travels 'round. So you got a lotta folk who are just plain odd about doing church at all. Then you got folk, more and more I hear, who aren't content to just do church, no; it's to the point where you've gotta prevent other odd folk from doing their church. Foolery atop foolery, you ask me."

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

 "Symms is all right. I'd like her a lot better if she came 'round more often, maybe softened up on her garb, you know? Greatsword and armor is all right for keeping the peace and all, but doesn't do much for the emotions of the citizenry. Especially this citizenry. Symms could be easy on the eyes if she just gave a damn about it at all."

Tell me about being a merchant.

 "Everyone's got something that's important to 'em. Rich folk, yeah, they've all got a lot to be protective of. But even us poor folk, regular folk, there's always something we don't want falling into the wrong hands. Even if it's just nostalgia, or emotional value. Doesn't gotta be platinum to be worth your life for keeping safe. So everyone's gotta need for locks, is my point, here, you understand?"

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

 "I hate dragons, and ogres, and bears, and trolls. And pretty much anything that might be guarding a gold piece, you catch my drift. You all need some help in that regard? Need another blade, someone handy with a bow, knows her way around a forest? I might be your girl, you keep in touch, right?"

Skutt Krundar (Militia Vice Captain)

CR 2; Starting Attitude: 18 (Indifferent)

Description

The second-in-command of the Berinncorte Militia is a somewhat brusque dwarf with ambitions of power: he sees the time is nearly nigh for someone like him to take over either the Mayor's or the Militia Captain's position. He stops short of openly disrespecting either figure in public or to their faces, but it's obvious to any who watch that having to obey them both rankles the dwarf to no end.

Appearance

Skutt is a tall dwarf with lanky arms and legs but a solid and thickly-built chest. His beard is reddish-brown with streaks of black; he likes to say that it looks like volcanic rock.

Combat Tactics

Skutt has heavy power with both ranged and melee weaponry, and will deploy both or either as circumstances merit. If fighting alone against a superior force, he will summon his comrades; anywhere in the city, there is a cumulative 10% chance (i.e., 10% the first round, 20% the second, and so on) that 2d4+1 Berinncorte Militia will arrive in support of their vice-captain.

If clearly overwhelmed, or when reduced to fewer than 10 hit points, he will attempt to surrender, hoping to fight and scheme another day... but he will not soon forget the attack, and will try his best to ambush the PCs using 12 of his colleagues-in-arms once he has recovered from the wounds.

Factions

Berinncorte Militia, of course, to which his tribute is paid annually.

He has also served in Mace and Blade, about six years ago, and then only for a year.

📍 Special Abilities

Darkvision Accustomed to life underground, you have superior vision in dark and dim conditions. You can see in dim light within 60 feet of you as if it were bright light, and in darkness as if it were dim light. You can't discern color in darkness, only shades of gray.

Dwarven Combat Training You have proficiency with the battleaxe, handaxe, light hammer, and warhammer.

Dwarven Resilience You have advantage on saving throws against poison, and you have resistance against poison damage (explained in chapter 9).

Dwarven Toughness Your hit point maximum increases by 1, and it increases by 1 every time you gain a level.

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common and Dwarvish. Dwarvish is full of hard consonants and guttural sounds, and those characteristics spill over into whatever other language a dwarf might speak.

Smith's Tools Proficient with Artisan Smith's Tools.

Stonecunning Whenever you make an Intelligence (History) check related to the origin of stonework, you are considered proficient in the History skill and add double your proficiency bonus to the check, instead of your normal proficiency bonus.

Tool Proficiency You gain proficiency with the artisan's tools of your choice: smith's tools, brewer's supplies, or mason's tools.

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 6th, 8th, 12th, 14th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.

Action Surge Starting at 2nd level, you can push yourself beyond your normal limits for a moment. On your turn, you can take one additional action on top of your regular action and a possible bonus action. Once you use this feature, you must finish a short or long rest before you can use it again. You can use this feature 1 time(s) before a rest, but only once on the same turn.

Additional Fighting Style At 10th level, you can choose a second option from the Fighting Style class feature.

Champion The archetypal Champion focuses on the development of raw physical power honed to deadly perfection. Those who model themselves on this archetype combine rigorous training with physical excellence to deal devastating blows.

Extra Attack Beginning at 5th level, you can attack twice, instead of once, whenever you take the Attack action on your turn. The number of attacks increases to three when you reach 11th level in this class and to four when you reach 20th level in this class.

Fighting Style You adopt a particular style of fighting as your specialty. Choose one of the following options. You can't take a Fighting Style option more than once, even if you later get to choose again.

Improved Critical Beginning when you choose this archetype at 3rd level, your weapon attacks score a critical hit on a roll of 19 or 20.

Indomitable Beginning at 9th level, you can reroll a saving throw that you fail. If you do so, you must use the new roll, and you can't use this feature again until you finish a long rest. You can use this feature 2 time(s) between long rests.,

Martial Archetype At 3rd level, you choose an archetype that you strive to emulate in your combat styles and techniques. The Champion archetype is detailed at the end of the class description; see the Player's Handbook for information on other martial archetypes. Your archetype grants you features at 3rd level and again at 7th, 10th, 15th, and 18th level.,

Remarkable Athlete Starting at 7th level, you can add half your proficiency bonus (round up) to any Strength, Dexterity, or Constitution check you make that doesn't already use your proficiency bonus. In addition, when you make a running long jump, the distance you can cover increases by a number of feet equal to +5.,

You have a limited well of stamina that you can draw on to protect yourself from harm. On your turn, you can use a bonus action to regain hit points equal to 1d10 + your fighter level. Once you use this feature, you must finish a short or long rest before you can use it again.,

Dueling When you are wielding a melee weapon in one hand and no other weapons, you gain a +2 bonus to damage rolls with that weapon.,

Great Weapon Fighting When you roll a 1 or 2 on a damage die for an attack you make with a melee weapon that you are wielding with two hands, you can reroll the die and must use the new roll, even if the new roll is a 1 or a 2. The weapon must have the two-handed or versatile property for you to gain this benefit.

Habits and Logistics

 During daylight hours, Skutt is typically  70% in the Garrison/Barracks, tending to the duties of a vice captain. The remainder of the time, he will be out and about the town, or outside it; the GM is free to "place" him wherever desired.

 At night, Skutt will sometimes  20% grab an indulgent ale and meal at the Leaky Cask Tavern; the rest of the time, he will be in the Barracks, finishing his duties and then getting some sleep.

Background

Skutt is a hard-headed grunt of a man. He longs for the simple life of a mercenary fighter, but he gets easily frustrated due to his intelligence—it galls him to take orders from anyone whom he feels is either wrong, less smart than himself, or, gods forbid, both at once.

He will say that he left Mace and Blade on his own will—but the truth is, his commander grew irate and the two nearly came to blows. Skutt was transferred to a different city and a different leader, but soon confronted him, too. It was made clear to the dwarf that he should take his talents to another guild, or else. Furious at what he felt to be unfair treatment at the hands of simpletons, Skutt was only too happy to oblige.

In the Obelisk Attack

All of Skutt's Machiavellian plans burn up in ash when the Obelisk Erupts. Conniving he may be, but his heart has ever been in the right place; sensing a dire threat to his city, he seizes upon his duty, and sets about him, defending his fellow citizens.

In the fray, he finds himself leaping into battle to defend Tansden, the captain he has long sought to overthrow. In a cruel twist of fate, the dwarf dies defending the man he had plotted against; as his life slips from him at last, he smiles grimly, content in the knowledge that he at least did the right thing.

Conversation

What do you think of Berinncorte?

 "Nice place. Glad I'm here."

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

 "It's a shame, really. Both churches seem good for the people. Both have a following. But faith has a way of being embattled."

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

 "The town is peaceful, it must be said—but more because of us Militiamen than the Mayor. Symms is out of her depth. Berinncorte needs a true leader, someone with militant background and a spine of steel, to steer her right."

Tell me about being a militia vice captain.

 "Well, you could say it's the second best thing to be in the city. Or third, if you count the Mayor's post. Past that? It's all right. These folk are all right; most of 'em have a head on their shoulders and a good heart, even if they are mostly idiots."

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

 "I sing, dance, and take lovers for hire at the tavern, of course; isn't it obvious? What sort of question is that?"

Sorille (Courier)

CR 4; Starting Attitude: 19 (Friendly)

Description

This elven courier is on retainer for the city of Berinncorte, under payment and seal of Mayor Symms herself. Messages of sufficient criticality are infrequent, however, and so Sorille spends a goodly deal of time hunting in the surrounding territory, and picking up side jobs where she can.

Appearance

At first glance, she doesn't appear quick—she's somewhat beefily built for an elf, shy of portly but with definitely more meat on her bones than one might expect from a courier. Dark-brown freckles dot her face and shoulders; she styles her long hair so that it obscures them as much as is feasible.

Combat Tactics

Sorille is well used to fighting, and usually on her own—the open road dissuades allies, and encourages ambushes. She won't hesitate to fight back, but also recognizes that conflict is often unnecessary, if one can determine what is desired and find an alternate means of providing it.

She spends enough time in the city, and in the Mayor's House, that she realizes the value in calling the Militia if needed; if confronted out on the streets, she will maneuver closer to a Militia Guard Post.

Factions

Sorille is a member of the Squirrelheel Couriers.

 Special Abilities

- Cantrip You know one cantrip of your choice from the wizard spell list. Intelligence is your spellcasting ability for it. Spell save DC 14; Spell attack modifier +6.
- Darkvision Accustomed to twilight forests and the night sky, you have superior vision in dark and dim conditions. You can see in dim light within 60 feet of you as if it were bright light, and in darkness as if it were dim light. You can't discern color in darkness, only shades of gray.
- Elf Weapon Training You have proficiency with the longsword, shortsword, shortbow, and longbow.
- Extra Language You can speak, read, and write one extra language of your choice.
- Fey Ancestry You have advantage on saving throws against being charmed, and magic can't put you to sleep.
- Keen Senses You have proficiency in the Perception skill.
- Languages You can speak, read, and write Common and Elvish. Elvish is fluid, with subtle intonations and intricate grammar. Elven literature is rich and varied, and their songs and poems are famous among other races. Many bards learn their language so they can add Elvish ballads to their repertoires.
- Trance Elves don't need to sleep. Instead, they meditate deeply, remaining semiconscious, for 4 hours a day. (The Common word for such meditation is "trance.") While meditating, you can dream after a fashion; such dreams are actually mental exercises that have become reflexive through years of practice. After resting in this way, you gain the same benefit that a human does from 8 hours of sleep.
- Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 8th, 12th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.
- Defensive Tactics At 7th level, you gain one of the following features of your choice.
- Escape the Horde Opportunity attacks against you are made with disadvantage.
- Evasion You can nimbly dodge out of the way of certain area effects, such as a red dragon's fiery breath or a lightning bolt spell. When you are subjected to an effect that allows you to make a Dexterity saving throw to take only half damage, you instead take no damage if you succeed on the saving throw, and only half damage if you fail.
- Extra Attack Beginning at 5th level, you can attack twice, instead of once, whenever you take the Attack action on your turn.
- Favored Enemy Beginning at 1st level, you have significant experience studying, tracking, hunting, and even talking to a certain type of enemy. Choose a type of favored enemy: aberrations, beasts, celestials, constructs, dragons, elementals, fey, fiends, giants, monstrosities, oozes, plants, or undead. Alternatively, you can select two races of humanoid (such as gnolls and orcs) as favored enemies. You have advantage on Wisdom (Survival) checks to track your favored enemies, as well as on Intelligence checks to recall information about them. When you gain this feature, you also learn one language of your choice that is spoken by your favored enemies, if they speak one at all. You choose one additional favored enemy, as well as an associated language, at 6th and 14th level. As you gain levels, your choices should reflect the types of monsters you have encountered on your adventures.
- Fighting Style At 2nd level, you adopt a particular style of fighting as your specialty. Choose one of the following options. You can't take a Fighting Style option more than once, even if you later get to choose again.
- Giant Killer When a Large or larger creature within 5 feet of you hits or

- misses you with an attack, you can use your reaction to attack that creature immediately after its attack, provided that you can see the creature.
- Hide in Plain Sight Starting at 10th level, you can spend 1 minute creating camouflage for yourself. You must have access to fresh mud, dirt, plants, soot, and other naturally occurring materials with which to create your camouflage. Once you are camouflaged in this way, you can try to hide by pressing yourself up against a solid surface, such as a tree or wall, that is at least as tall and wide as you are. You gain a +10 bonus to Dexterity (Stealth) checks as long as you remain there without moving or taking actions. Once you move or take an action or a reaction, you must camouflage yourself again to gain this benefit.
- Hunter Emulating the Hunter archetype means accepting your place as a bulwark between civilization and the terrors of the wilderness. As you walk the Hunter's path, you learn specialized techniques for fighting the threats you face, from rampaging ogres and hordes of orcs to towering giants and terrifying dragons.
- Hunter's Prey At 3rd level, you gain one of the following features of your choice.
- Land's Stride Starting at 8th level, moving through nonmagical difficult terrain costs you no extra movement. You can also pass through nonmagical plants without being slowed by them and without taking damage from them if they have thorns, spines, or a similar hazard. In addition, you have advantage on saving throws against plants that are magically created or manipulated to impede movement, such those created by the entangle spell.
- Multiattack At 11th level, you gain one of the following features of your choice.
- Natural Explorer You are particularly familiar with one type of natural environment and are adept at traveling and surviving in such regions. Choose one type of favored terrain: arctic, coast, desert, forest, grassland, mountain, swamp, or the Underdark. When you make an Intelligence or Wisdom check related to your favored terrain, your proficiency bonus is doubled if you are using a skill that you're proficient in. While traveling for an hour or more in your favored terrain, you gain the following benefits: * Difficult terrain doesn't slow your group's travel. * Your group can't become lost except by magical means. * Even when you are engaged in another activity while traveling (such as foraging, navigating, or tracking), you remain alert to danger. * If you are traveling alone, you can move stealthily at a normal pace. * When you forage, you find twice as much food as you normally would. * While tracking other creatures, you also learn their exact number, their sizes, and how long ago they passed through the area. You choose additional favored terrain types at 6th and 10th level.
- Primeval Awareness Beginning at 3rd level, you can use your action and expend one ranger spell slot to focus your awareness on the region around you. For 1 minute per level of the spell slot you expend, you can sense whether the following types of creatures are present within 1 mile of you (or within up to 6 miles if you are in your favored terrain): aberrations, celestials, dragons, elementals, fey, fiends, and undead. This feature doesn't reveal the creatures' location or number.
- Ranger Archetype At 3rd level, you choose an archetype that you strive to emulate: Hunter or Beast Master, both detailed at the end of the class description. Your choice grants you features at 3rd level and again at 7th, 11th, and 15th level.
- Spellcasting By the time you reach 2nd level, you have learned to use the magical essence of nature to cast spells, much as a druid does. See chapter 10 for the general rules of spellcasting and chapter 11 for the ranger spell list. Spell save DC 17; Spell attack modifier +9.
- Spell Slots The Ranger table shows how many spell slots you have to cast spells of 1st level and higher. To cast one of these spells, you must expend a slot of the spell's level or higher. You regain all expended spell slots when you finish a long rest. For example, if you know the 1st-level spell animal friendship and have a 1st-level and a 2nd-level spell slot available, you can cast animal friendship using either slot. You know two 1st-level spells of your choice from the ranger spell list. The Spells Known column of the Ranger table shows when you learn more ranger spells of your choice. Each of these spells must be of a level for which you have,

Superior Hunter's Defense At 15th level, you gain one of the following features of your choice.,

Vanish Starting at 14th level, you can use the Hide action as a bonus action on your turn. Also, you can't be tracked by nonmagical means, unless you choose to leave a trail.,

Volley You can use your action to make a ranged attack against any number of creatures within 10 feet of a point you can see within your weapon's range. You must have ammunition for each target, as normal, and you make a separate attack roll for each target.,

Archery You gain a +2 bonus to attack rolls you make with ranged weapons.,

Beasts Advantage on Wisdom (Survival) checks to track Beasts, as well as on Intelligence checks to recall information about them. You also learn one language of your choice that is spoken by your favored enemies, if they speak one at all.,

Giants Advantage on Wisdom (Survival) checks to track Giants, as well as on Intelligence checks to recall information about them. You also learn one language of your choice that is spoken by your favored enemies, if they speak one at all.,

Humanoids Advantage on Wisdom (Survival) checks to track Humanoids, as well as on Intelligence checks to recall information about them. You also learn one language of your choice that is spoken by your favored enemies, if they speak one at all.

Treasure

In addition to that described in the stat blocks above, Sorille will also typically be carrying an item in transit in her role as a courier. It is left to the GM as to the nature, value, and possible plot implications of such items.

Habits and Logistics

 During daylight hours, Sorille will sometimes ( 25%) be in the Mayor's House, either delivering an item, preparing a delivery, or waiting for Mayor Symms to become available to do one of these things. Sorille also speaks quite often with Ota Kuiduru for these purposes. The remainder of the time, she is out of the city on a delivery, either coming or going.

 At night, Sorille will be outside the city, preferring to sleep alone in nature under the stars, and generally not trusting to her safety otherwise. She has the same chances as during daytime to be en route on a delivery.

Background

Sorille has never felt completely comfortable around others, feeling distant even from her own family, who live far away elsewhere in the realm. She set out on her own to find fortune as soon as she was able. Although she's had some missteps and adventures along the way, she's settled on a profession that meets her needs, matches well to her skills, and allows her freedom from dealing too closely with others.

In the Obelisk Attack

The courier is in the Mayor's Office when the Obelisk

Erupts. Ota Kuiduru tasks her with sending a message announcing the emergency to the closest village, and Sorille flees the city as rapidly as she can.

Conversation

What do you think of Berinncorte?

 "It's okay. Better than some. Not all. I like it here, well enough, but I'm out and about most of the time, so it don't matter."

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

 "No. You hear folk talk a little, but I never put two and two together. Is there a conflict?"

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

 "Symms is all right. Some rulers, they're all politics, invite you to balls, introduce you to folk, that sort of thing. Symms is all business—here's a message, take this here, thanks for the delivery. I like it that way."

Tell me about being a courier.

 "Best way to see a lot of the realm. Not necessarily the safest, but the quickest. You have to be!"

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

 "Any time I get a commission to deliver, it's a full-time, round-the-clock job until it's done. Sometimes I get lucky, and I can take more than one delivery at a time—stop by someplace on the way to my eventual destination. Apart from that... I hunt. Fish."

Any interesting deliveries lately? Or information you've heard?

 "I never unseal deliveries, never ask questions, and keep my head down. It's kept me alive."

 Diplomacy check at DC 14, pressing the above matter:

 "Well, it's true I don't get too nosy in most matters. But if you're there to deliver something, most folk pay you no heed, treat you like furniture. You overhear some things." The succeeding PC may make a free roll on the Rumors and Lore table. Sorille neither knows, nor says, if the information conveyed is truthful.

Stewy (Apprentice Fisherman / Fledgeling Underlord)

CR 1; Starting Attitude: 12 (Indifferent)

Description

He's a young, weakling apprentice to a half-orc boss who couldn't care less about him. And the profession he's apprenticing is fishing. Stewy has no illusions about his lowly station in life; he realizes full well that if there's a bottom rung on the ladder of society here in Berinncorte, it's him.

Little does his master realize that he has been slowly building an underground network of like-minded thieves and miscreants in an attempt to generate a black-market enterprise in this fair city.

Appearance

Stewy is rail-thin and sparsely built. His nose is a thin and sharp wedge, stark amidst his gaunt cheekbones. His forehead seems much larger than it should be, an effect of early-onset receding hairline. The young man keeps his straight black hair clean, but loose and long; it falls in a strangely soft halo to either side of his head.

He typically wears dark colors of simple clothes, and knee-high black boots—the one piece of obvious finery he displays.

Combat Tactics

Stewy knows full well he lacks the physique required to make a realistic combatant, but has been training hard in expectation of having to defend himself at some point. This has partly been effective, and results in the classes indicated at his various challenge levels.

He will try to maintain conversation with foes, stalling until he can either flee, or catch one of them by surprise. Despite his fundamental lack of strength, he is nimble to excess, and his shady dealings have been sufficiently profitable to keep him equipped far beyond the means of a normal fishery apprentice.

No matter the circumstances, he won't hesitate to call upon townfolk, the law, or his master to help him out. If battle takes place in or within 20 ft. of the Fishery / Stables, there is a 15% chance per round of combat that Gumbrew will arrive in response to his apprentice's shouts. Elsewhere, Stewy will try to maneuver to the closest Militia Guard Post; upon getting within 30 ft., 1d4+1 Berinncorte Militia will burst onto the scene in his defense.

Though somewhat unsavory, Stewy has never been in trouble with the law, and is recognizable by many townfolk and Militia; in a combat situation with strangers (such as the PCs), citizens of Berinncorte will assume that Stewy is the wronged party.

Factions

None currently; Stewy pays tribute on legally-acquired wages to Berinncorte City proper.

His efforts toward underworld dealings represent his plan to form a brand-new faction within city limits, specializing in the contracted theft and fencing of goods of all value.

📖 Special Abilities

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common and one extra language of your choice. Humans typically learn the languages of other peoples they deal with, including obscure dialects. They are fond of sprinkling their speech with words borrowed from other tongues: Orc curses, Elvish musical expressions, Dwarvish military phrases, and so on.

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 8th, 12th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.

Cunning Action Starting at 2nd level, your quick thinking and agility allow you to move and act quickly. You can take a bonus action on each of your turns in combat. This action can be used only to take the Dash, Disengage, or Hide action.

Evasion Beginning at 7th level, you can nimbly dodge out of the way of certain area effects, such as a red dragon's fiery breath or an ice storm spell. When you are subjected to an effect that allows you to make a Dexterity saving throw to take only half damage, you instead take no damage if you succeed on the saving throw, and only half damage if you fail.,

Expertise At 1st level, choose two of your skill proficiencies, or one of your skill proficiencies and your proficiency with thieves' tools. Your proficiency bonus is doubled for any ability check you make that uses either of the chosen proficiencies. At 6th level, you can choose two more of your proficiencies (in skills or with thieves' tools) to gain this benefit.,

Fast Hands Starting at 3rd level, you can use the bonus action granted by your Cunning Action to make a Dexterity (Sleight of Hand) check, use your thieves' tools to disarm a trap or open a lock, or take the Use an Object action.,

Roguish Archetype At 3rd level, you choose an archetype that you emulate in the exercise of your rogue abilities. Your choice grants you features at 3rd level and then again at 9th, 13th, and 17th level.,

Second-Story Work When you choose this archetype at 3rd level, you gain the ability to climb faster than normal; climbing no longer costs you extra movement. In addition, when you make a running jump, the distance you cover increases by a number of feet equal to 5.,

Sneak Attack Beginning at 1st level, you know how to strike subtly and exploit a foe's distraction. Once per turn, you can deal an extra 5d6 damage to one creature you hit with an attack if you have advantage on the attack roll. The attack must use a finesse or a ranged weapon. You don't need advantage on the attack roll if another enemy of the target is within 5 feet of it, that enemy isn't incapacitated, and you don't have disadvantage on the attack roll.,

Supreme Sneak Starting at 9th level, you have advantage on a Dexterity (Stealth) check if you move no more than half your speed on the same turn.,

Thief You hone your skills in the larcenous arts. Burglars, bandits, cutpurses, and other criminals typically follow this archetype, but so do rogues who prefer to think of themselves as professional treasure seekers, explorers, delvers, and investigators. In addition to improving your agility and stealth, you learn skills useful for delving into ancient ruins, reading unfamiliar languages, and using magic items you normally couldn't employ.,

Thieves' Cant During your rogue training you learned thieves' cant, a secret mix of dialect, jargon, and code that allows you to hide messages in seemingly normal conversation. Only another creature that knows thieves' cant understands such messages. It takes four times longer to convey such a message than it does to speak the same idea plainly. In addition, you understand a set of secret signs and symbols used to convey short, simple messages, such as whether an area is dangerous or the territory of a thieves' guild, whether loot is nearby, or whether the people in an area are easy marks or will provide a safe house for thieves on the run.,

Uncanny Dodge Starting at 5th level, when an attacker that you can see hits you with an attack, you can use your reaction to halve the attack's damage against you

Habits and Logistics

 During daylight hours, Stewy will be fishing in the river ( 60%), or helping his master at the Fishery ( 40%).

 At night, Stewy will sometimes wrap up his work late ( 30%). The rest of the time, he will be hunting about the city, speaking with connections and executing deals ( 70%); the GM is encouraged to "place" him anywhere at all, as his business might conceivably take him anywhere inside or outside the city walls.

Background

Stewy has always been a bit "off", even to his parents, who passed away when he was twelve years old. He took a bit too much pleasure in maiming or slaying insects, and was a bit too gleeful when fighting with other children. Such activities seemed not a jest to him, nor an experiment—his mother, shocked at how brutal a bout of fisticuffs had gotten, once classified it as "practice for something far, far worse".

She wasn't entirely wrong: the lanky lad is sociopathic, viewing all other people as simply means to his own ends, deserving of nothing more. Be it an ant; a bird a rabbit; or even a lost halfling bard in an alley, visiting from out of town; Stewy is not above wounding or taking another life if it serves his pocket—or simply his pleasure in the moment.

In the Obelisk Attack

Neither fool nor hero, Stewy runs out of the city as soon as something loud and rancorous happens, and survives because of it.

In the aftermath of the Obelisk Eruption, his fledgeling black-market operation thrives, both to help those displaced and impoverished by the devastation, and to take advantage of them. It's all profit and power to the former fisherman's apprentice.

Conversation

What do you think of Berinncorte?

 "Seedy little burg. At least that's how I see it. Most don't; they just focus on how you don't get mugged so often in the alleys. That'll change."

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

 "Chaos and law are illusions of man. Power, money, strength—those are the true influences, the true gods. I've never much respected anyone who gives up their time to sit and be yelled at by someone who knows nothing more than they do about how to be successful. Any conflict that comes up between two faiths—that's always going to happen; it's the unavoidable result of two delusions trying to blame each other for their own inability to follow through on empty promises. Far easier to blame the other guy, than to actually help make people's lives different."

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

 "She's all right. Law and order can be good for business, that's true enough, but some folk feel there's not enough wiggle room to do what they want. Lots of different kinds of folk can follow orders, but it's what they want out of it that matters."

Tell me about being a fisherman's apprentice.

 "It's just about the most awful job you can think of. No, hear me out—think of everything unsavory you can imagine, when you think about what a fisherman does. Right? Okay, now the bad parts of all that—that's my job. I get to do all the stuff a fisherman doesn't care to do. So yeah, it's right peachy. Keeps most folk away from me, as my clothes get fish-stink in them no matter how much I wash in the river. I mean, yeah, I'm learning a trade... and it's not like there's lots of other options for folk who want fish in this town. Gumbrew's pretty much it. So there's stability."

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

 "What on earth could you mean by that, I wonder?" If the party wishes to pursue this line of questioning, please see the quest "Good Fences Make Good Neighbors", below.

Quest: Good Fences Make Good

Neighbors

Summary: The fishery apprentice Stewy reveals his true calling as a fence for stolen goods, and sells the party an item they request.

Rewards: The item requested (at a significant discount).

Locations: Fishery / Stables.

Key NPCs: Stewy.

Kickoff: The party meets with Stewy, passes a skill check inquiring as to the nature of his business on the side, and follows up with him, asking for a particular item.

Description:

In conversation with Stewy, make a Diplomacy, Sense Motive, or Knowledge (Local) check opposed by Stewy's Deception check. If it is failed, Stewy brushes the topic aside, and says nothing; the party may retry the check as many times as desired.

Upon passing the check, the fisherman's apprentice opens up a bit as to his black-market side job:

"The most high-brow, law-abiding, do-goody town in the world, you're still gonna have folk who want to take advantage of other folk. It's gonna happen. And one thing I'll agree with Symms about—you don't want it to go down all willy-nilly; chaos can get out of control right-quick. But if it's gonna happen anyway—and it will, make no mistake—you might as well have it organized. Right? Keep it contained, keep it civil, keep blood off the streets... if not necklaces in lockboxes."

If the party then follows up asking for a particular item, Stewy coyly accepts:

"Well, I can't promise nothing. I am but a simple, humble fishery lad, after all. But I can give it a try. For the right price, of course."

Each time the party requests Stewy's services, they may ask for any item worth 1,000 gp or less. Stewy will require one day for items up to 500 gp in value, two days for items 500-800 gp in value, and three days for items worth more than 800 gp.

Good Fences Make Good Neighbors (Request): Chaos +1

Each time the PCs request an item of Stewy, it generates a Catalyst Impact: Chaos +1.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

If the party returns in the indicated time, there is a 60% chance that Stewy has "acquired" the requested item. He charges only 60% of the item's value. Alternately, the item may be purchased at the even lower price of 20% of its value... but Stewy will ask the party to do a job for him in return. He takes the lower payment and hands over the item immediately, but this then launches quest "On the Fence About It", below.

Whether the party pays the discounted, or even more steeply discounted, price, there is an additional cost: risk. One day after completing the transaction, make a private check: there is a 5% chance per full 100 gp of the item's full value that the party will be questioned by the Berinncorte Militia.

"We've a Few Questions For You Strangers"

The PCs are confronted on the streets by 5 Militia members, led by vice-captain Skutt Krundar. Skutt and others in the Militia are questioning anyone who might have stolen a lost item recently; the PCs are prime suspects regardless of their nature or actions of late, because they are new to town and therefore unknown quantities.

Good Fences Make Good Neighbors (Militia): Chaos +2

Merely being confronted by the Militia in the context of this Quest produces a Catalyst Impact: Chaos +2.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

If the party fights, Skutt and the others will summon aid; there is a cumulative 10% chance (that is, 10% the first round, 20% the second round, and so on) that a four-strong squad of Berinncorte Elite Guards will arrive to join the battle. If the party yields at any time, they will be Arrested.

Good Fences Make Good Neighbors (Fight Militia): Chaos +4

Fighting the Militia—whether forced to do so, or as a first reaction—creates a Catalyst Impact: Chaos +4.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

If instead the party goes willingly with them, they will be questioned about the theft, their relationship with Stewy, their possible knowledge of the theft, of his reputation, and so on. The GM is encouraged to play through the encounter as desired, depending on the "investigation" gameplay preferences of the gaming group. At the core of the matter involves convincing Skutt and his interrogators that they had nothing to do with the item's disappearance from its original owner.

At minimum, this should involve each party member making a Diplomacy or Deception check opposed by Skutt's Sense Motive check. If all party members succeed, they are free to go with no further fuss or bother from the Militia. If a majority of PCs fail, they are Arrested. If some fail, but not a majority, they are free to go for now... but the next day, Skutt has a chance of approaching them again, with the same consequences described above: this chance is 10% per PC who failed the check. If this check does not “trigger”, then Skutt has decided that the PCs are no longer suspects, and will not question them further on this matter.

⇒ Good Fences Make Good Neighbors (Comply): ⚖️ Law +2

Going along with the Militia results in a Catalyst Impact of ⚖️ Law +2.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

↪️ At any time, the party can simply return the item to Skutt (or indeed, any Militia member of the Mayor). In so doing, they will be thanked for their honesty, but one party member will have to pass one a ⚠️ Diplomacy or Deception check opposed by Skutt's Sense Motive check: success indicates the PCs receive a stern warning to be on their toes in the future, but no further penalty; failure indicates a fine of 100 gp plus 20% of the item's full value, which the party must pay immediately or be Arrested.

⇒ Good Fences Make Good Neighbors (Return): ⚖️ Law +3

Returning any “acquired” goods to the Militia when confronted means a Catalyst Impact of ⚖️ Law +3.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

↪️ If at any point, the party informs on Stewy and his schemes, Skutt will nod, and will thank the party for adding their information to a growing pattern of misdeeds linked to the supposed fisherman. Similar to the “return the item” approach above, the party must then select one PC to pass one a ⚠️ Diplomacy or Deception check opposed by Skutt's Sense Motive check: success indicates the PCs receive a stern warning to be on their toes in the future, but no further penalty; failure indicates a fine of 100 gp plus 20% of the item's full value, which the party must pay immediately or be Arrested.

⇒ Good Fences Make Good Neighbors (Inform): ⚖️ Law +5, ⚡ Chaos +1

Telling the Militia about Stewy's burgeoning criminal enterprise produces a Catalyst Impact of ⚖️ Law +5 and ⚡ Chaos +1.

This stacks with other Catalyst Impacts for this Quest.

However, once Skutt lets the party go after having informed on Stewy, the fisherman underlord will soon find out about their betrayal. Within 2d8+3 hours, the party is set upon by 2d4+1 Hired Goons, who approach the party wherever they are on the streets. “It's nuttin' personal, you unnerstan',” they say, drawing their weapons, “Stewy's gotta make sure his reputation speaks for itself, in the future.” They will then attack the party. See their Combat Tactics section for their behavior, but suffice it to say, as hired toughs, they will not willingly fight to the death on behalf of their employer.

Once the party has paid their fine for being Arrested, defeats Skutt and his full complement of Militia comrades, successfully passes the checks above, or defeats the gang of goons sent by Stewy, this quest is resolved.

🏆 Quest: On the Fence About It

📄 Summary: The PCs are tasked with stealing an item, in return for a significant discount on another stolen item they purchased from him already.

🎁 Rewards: The discount already taken on the item already obtained. And, possibly, additional booty acquired during the heist (see below).

📍 Locations: Fishery / Stables.

👤 Key NPCs: Stewy.

▶️ Kickoff: The PCs ask the fishery apprentice for his help obtaining an item via the black market (see quest “Good Fences Make Good Neighbors”, above), and to get an even better discount, the party offers to steal something for Stewy.

📄 Description:

Despite his upstart nature, and the underground aspect of his enterprise, Stewy is a shrewd businessman, averse to unnecessary risk like those in most legitimate professions. He never does the dirty work himself, if he can avoid it, and instead hires underlings to take care of the gruntwork.

Case in point: the PCs are tasked with acquiring an item of value. This is seemingly a worthless item—a writing quill, belonging to the city's butcher—but its sentimental value is great. Intuitive PCs will swiftly (and correctly) deduce that Stewy likely means to blackmail or ransom the item to get money out of Ganyc.

The task is simple: sneak into Ganyc's Suite and steal the quill, then hand it over to Stewy. There are many ways of doing this; how is left to the PCs. While they're doing so, they may of course loot the rest of the suite; there are some valuables to come by in so doing. There is no further reward explicitly for this Quest, however.

⇒ On the Fence About It (Return): ⚡ Chaos +4

Completing the theft, and delivering the requested item, means a Catalyst Impact: ⚡ Chaos +4.

Note that completing this Quest will prevent the retrieval of Ganyc's quill as part of some Quests in Act Three, as it will no longer be in his suite.

Refusing the task will earn Stewy's displeasure; the GM is encouraged to come up with inventive ways of demonstrating such emotion. One suggestion is that Bandit! random encounters may start to plague the party periodically, seemingly unconnected from the refusal of this task.

⇒ On the Fence About It (Return):
☞ Law +2

Explicitly refusing the task produces a Catalyst Impact of ☞ Law +2.

This Quest terminates if the PCs steal the quill and give it to Stewy, or if they complete one of the Quests that involves retrieving the quill on Ganyc's behalf in Act Three.

Tansden (Militia Captain)

CR 3; Starting Attitude: 14 (Indifferent)

Description

He's stern and tough and unrelenting, but fair, and sweet in his own way. Though it's merely the militia of a medium-sized town, the Berinncorte Militia is nevertheless run with military efficiency. Tansden has seen and heard enough of war that he greatly fears being unprepared, should the factions at strength in the area turn their greed toward his benevolent and lovely village.

Mayor Symms is attracted to him but has never pursued it given their positions; little does she know, however, that He's gay and sees this as a weakness, hiding it from everyone. he grew up in a family that viewed it as a sin, but what he doesn't realize is that nearly everyone in town wouldn't care in the slightest... and more than one young man in his service would welcome the news!

Appearance

A handsome and rugged man, Tansden wears a full beard, neatly trimmed into severe lines. Even when not strictly necessary, he wears his armor and full kit of weaponry—he feels this not only sends a strong message to his troops that they should always be ready and prepared for combat, but it's also a means of keeping fit

With his heavy armor, longsword and heavy steel shield, he is the prototypical strongman fighter.

Combat Tactics

Tansden may be an effective leader, but he has focused on directing the actions of others, rather than on improving his own tactical abilities. In an unavoidable conflict, he will focus on the largest, closest melee fighter amongst his opponents, proceeding in similar fashion to the next-closest once that foe is disabled.

Anywhere within the city limits, Tansden will summon support to his side: each round, there is a 10% chance that 1d4+2 Berinncorte Militia plus 1d4 Berinncorte Elite Guard will arrive to fight by his side. Note that unlike most other fighting support, once a batch of Guard arrives, the GM should continue to roll each round to determine whether additional support arrives.

Factions

Berinncorte Militia, of course, as its leader.

The Militia is ultimately beholden to Berinncorte City proper.

Tansden tries to maintain a neutral tone when on duty, but when off duty, he is a follower of Zugul, to which his tribute is paid.

🎯 Special Abilities

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common and one extra language of your choice. Humans typically learn the languages of other peoples they deal with, including obscure dialects. They are fond of sprinkling their speech with words borrowed from other tongues: Orc curses, Elvish musical expressions, Dwarvish military phrases, and so on.,

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 6th, 8th, 12th, 14th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.,

Action Surge Starting at 2nd level, you can push yourself beyond your normal limits for a moment. On your turn, you can take one additional action on top of your regular action and a possible bonus action. Once you use this feature, you must finish a short or long rest before you can use it again. You can use this feature 1 time(s) before a rest, but only once on the same turn.,

Additional Fighting Style At 10th level, you can choose a second option from the Fighting Style class feature.,

Champion The archetypal Champion focuses on the development of raw physical power honed to deadly perfection. Those who model themselves on this archetype combine rigorous training with physical excellence to deal devastating blows.,

Extra Attack Beginning at 5th level, you can attack twice, instead of once, whenever you take the Attack action on your turn. The number of attacks increases to three when you reach 11th level in this class and to four when you reach 20th level in this class.,

Fighting Style You adopt a particular style of fighting as your specialty. Choose one of the following options. You can't take a Fighting Style option more than once, even if you later get to choose again.,

Improved Critical Beginning when you choose this archetype at 3rd level, your weapon attacks score a critical hit on a roll of 19 or 20.,

Indomitable Beginning at 9th level, you can reroll a saving throw that you fail. If you do so, you must use the new roll, and you can't use this feature again until you finish a long rest. You can use this feature 2 time(s) between long rests.,

Martial Archetype At 3rd level, you choose an archetype that you strive to emulate in your combat styles and techniques. The Champion archetype is detailed at the end of the class description; see the Player's Handbook for information on other martial archetypes. Your archetype grants you features at 3rd level and again at 7th, 10th, 15th, and 18th level.,

Remarkable Athlete Starting at 7th level, you can add half your proficiency bonus (round up) to any Strength, Dexterity, or Constitution check you make that doesn't already use your proficiency bonus. In addition, when you make a running long jump, the distance you can cover increases by a number of feet equal to +5.,

Second Wind You have a limited well of stamina that you can draw on to protect yourself from harm. On your turn, you can use a bonus action to regain hit points equal to 1d10 + your fighter level. Once you use this feature, you must finish a short or long rest before you can use it again.,

Superior Critical Starting at 15th level, your weapon attacks score a critical hit on a roll of 18-20.,

Defense While you are wearing armor, you gain a +1 bonus to AC.,

Dueling When you are wielding a melee weapon in one hand and no other weapons, you gain a +2 bonus to damage rolls with that weapon..

🏠 Habits and Logistics

☀️ During daylight hours, there is a chance (🎲 25%) that Tansden will be at the Garrison/Barracks, tending to the business of the Militia. Some of the time (🎲 25%) he will instead be meeting with Mayor Symms in the Mayor's House. The rest of the time, he will be out and about, patrolling the city as any other of his charge. The GM is encouraged to "place" him anywhere desired.

🌙 At night, Tansden works late at the Garrison/Barracks, then turns in to sleep.

🏠 Background

Tansden grew up a farmer; then left his family to pursue adventuring. While away, his family succumbed to the famine and disease of a bad harvest, unbeknownst to him. When he returned with a bounty of treasure to share, he discovered the sad truth of what had become of his parents and older brother. Immediately, he settled down in Berinncorte and joined the militia, swiftly rising to Captain since he had had the most experience.

🛡️ In the Obelisk Attack

It just happens to be his day off, so he's in the Tavern. He's unscathed, but he loses many of his staff in the attack and in the aftermath. He has survivor's guilt, and never forgives himself for not being there more readily to help save everyone. This strengthens his resolve to become a church-going man of faith given his alignment.

🗨️ Conversation

What do you think of Berinncorte?

🗨️ "I love this town. Good people who mean well. The role of the Militia is necessary, even so, and I like to think that your average citizen recognizes the role we serve, the good we do."

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

🗨️ "It's no secret that I myself am on the Zugul side of things, at least from a belief and involvement standpoint. That's personally, however. Officially, I don't choose sides; if my fellow Zugul-followers take their ideological disagreement too far, I'll arrest them without a second thought. Sheergath folk don't mean ill, generally; they're just unsettled with their lot in life, it seems, and want more. Difficult to blame them for that! But both sides need to keep it a matter of disagreeing faith, and nothing more. It concerns me when I hear folk get too riled up about this."

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

🗨️ "Dominika Symms is a fabulous ruler, and does well by the city and its people. We enjoy a healthy partnership in our shared desire to benefit the citizens, to protect them, and to keep businesses and people alike safe."

Tell me about being a militia master.

🗨️ "It's a grand role. To be at the lead of such a well-oiled organization, promoting a noble cause... well, it's just great."

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

☛ “Friend, Berinn corte may seem a peaceful city, but believe you me, there’s more than enough to keep me busy. Peaceful cities seem that way because of all the diligence and work and relationships that their security forces provide.”

Tarsheva Hornwood (Landlord)

CR 1/2; XP 200; Starting Attitude: 20 (Friendly)

Description

The strong-willed force of nature that keeps the Upper-Class Residential District running single-handedly, Tarsheva Hornwood is a cool, efficient half-elf who dominates any situation quietly and with a serene sense of calm. She has an uncanny knack for walking into a situation where one or more people are yelling, screaming, even threatening herself or others, and leaving the room some time later with all parties satisfied that their honor, or sense of being wronged, has been addressed... whether or not any “give” was actually given.

If you put a large handful of Berinncorte’s most powerful and wealthy individuals together in a single building, there’s bound to be drama and interesting occurrences. Though Tarsheva tries to keep a sense of secrecy to her dealings, and certainly wishes to maintain trust with her tenants, she’s also been known to keep Amadan informed of nefarious goings-on around the building. Sometimes this is done for a price, and other times simply for the knowledge that she has done the right thing by letting someone else know.

Through these dealings, Tarsheva has come to suspect Amadan’s secret (that Amadan is in actuality a woman), but has never pressed the matter. She sympathizes with any number of possible reasons Amadan might have for being as she is and acting as she does, and none of it is Tarsheva’s business. And neither does it matter to the landlord anyway; she keeps the possible secret not out of a sense of honor, or respect for Amadan, but out an obliviousness that it should even be an issue worth reporting to others.

Appearance

Tarsheva Hornwood is a striking half-elf. Her dark brown hair flows straight to her shoulders; while on the job (which is nearly all the time!), she ties it back in a braid or bow. She’s slender, and her arms appear too thin to support much at all, and she’s constantly fending off assistance from her staffers whenever she lifts anything.

She wears conservative, but smartly-cut and expensive-looking, outfits that she typically has custom-made from Daratis; the two entrepreneurs have a good friendship and a strong mutual respect born out of camaraderie, similar senses of humor, and their shared devotion to church.

Combat Tactics

Tarsheva is smart, and in it for the long game. She’ll lose a fight and surrender if it means surviving. In that context, however, she will go to great lengths to defend her business, which often means defending her building and its occupants, unsavory as some of those people and their deeds may be.

Factions

Tarsheva worships at the Zugul Church, and pays her Tribute there.

📖 Special Abilities

Darkvision Thanks to your elf blood, you have superior vision in dark and dim conditions. You can see in dim light within 60 feet of you as if it were bright light, and in darkness as if it were dim light. You can't discern color in darkness, only shades of gray.

Fey Ancestry You have advantage on all saving throws against being charmed or put to sleep.,

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common, Elvish, and one extra language of your choice.,

Skill Versatility You gain proficiency in two skills of your choice.,

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 8th, 12th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.,

Cunning Action Starting at 2nd level, your quick thinking and agility allow you to move and act quickly. You can take a bonus action on each of your turns in combat. This action can be used only to take the Dash, Disengage, or Hide action.,

Evasion Beginning at 7th level, you can nimbly dodge out of the way of certain area effects, such as a red dragon's fiery breath or an ice storm spell. When you are subjected to an effect that allows you to make a Dexterity saving throw to take only half damage, you instead take no damage if you succeed on the saving throw, and only half damage if you fail.,

Expertise At 1st level, choose two of your skill proficiencies, or one of your skill proficiencies and your proficiency with thieves' tools. Your proficiency bonus is doubled for any ability check you make that uses either of the chosen proficiencies. At 6th level, you can choose two more of your proficiencies (in skills or with thieves' tools) to gain this benefit.,

Fast Hands Starting at 3rd level, you can use the bonus action granted by your Cunning Action to make a Dexterity (Sleight of Hand) check, use your thieves' tools to disarm a trap or open a lock, or take the Use an Object action.,

Roguish Archetype At 3rd level, you choose an archetype that you emulate in the exercise of your rogue abilities. Your choice grants you features at 3rd level and then again at 9th, 13th, and 17th level.,

Second-Story Work When you choose this archetype at 3rd level, you gain the ability to climb faster than normal; climbing no longer costs you extra movement. In addition, when you make a running jump, the distance you cover increases by a number of feet equal to 3.,

Sneak Attack Beginning at 1st level, you know how to strike subtly and exploit a foe's distraction. Once per turn, you can deal an extra 5d6 damage to one creature you hit with an attack if you have advantage on the attack roll. The attack must use a finesse or a ranged weapon. You don't need advantage on the attack roll if another enemy of the target is within 5 feet of it, that enemy isn't incapacitated, and you don't have disadvantage on the attack roll.,

Supreme Sneak Starting at 9th level, you have advantage on a Dexterity (Stealth) check if you move no more than half your speed on the same turn.,

Thief You hone your skills in the larcenous arts. Burglars, bandits, cutpurses, and other criminals typically follow this archetype, but so do rogues who prefer to think of themselves as professional treasure seekers, explorers, delvers, and investigators. In addition to improving your agility and stealth, you learn skills useful for delving into ancient ruins, reading unfamiliar languages, and using magic items you normally couldn't employ.,

Thieves' Cant During your rogue training you learned thieves' cant, a secret mix of dialect, jargon, and code that allows you to hide messages in seemingly normal conversation. Only another creature that knows thieves' cant understands such messages. It takes four times longer to convey such a message than it does to speak the same idea plainly. In addition, you understand a set of secret signs and symbols used to convey short, simple messages, such as whether an area is dangerous or the territory of a thieves' guild, whether loot is nearby, or whether the people in an area are easy marks or will provide a safe house for thieves on the run.,

Uncanny Dodge Starting at 5th level, when an attacker that you can see hits you with an attack, you can use your reaction to halve the attack's damage against you.

🛡️ In the Obelisk Attack

Tarsheva survives. She's in the Upper-Class Residential Building when the Obelisk Erupts; she first checks the building and urges every tenant to evacuate the town, then she locks up and flees through the City Gate to the east.

🗨️ Conversation

What do you think of Berinncorte?

🗨️ "It's a lovely town, full of interesting people. Of course, I'm blessed to have some of the nicest, best, and wealthiest members of society under my care, so I'm a bit partial in my view."

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

🗨️ "It's such a shame, really. If both sides could simply put aside their differences, I think they'd find that they can safely ignore one another and yet still believe what they wish. They'd all be so much more productive, both in their lives and in their faith."

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

🗨️ "Dominika Symms does a good job. Things are peaceful here, and not just for the elite. Common citizens enjoy the same comfort, and protection, as do our wealthiest. That's not often the case, across the Realm, as I've seen it."

Tell me about being a landlord.

🗨️ "It's interesting work, to say the least. I hire a few part-time workers to assist with meals, but other than that, I'm a one-woman show, here. I've picked up skill through necessity in carpentry, negotiations, any number of things I never thought I'd have need to demonstrate. Here, though, and catering to the city's most powerful and hard-to-please folk, it's a never-ending challenge. One that I relish, to be fair, but still, a challenge."

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

🗨️ "Ha! No time for any of that, I'm afraid. My tenants keep me plenty busy. If I'm lucky and have a calm afternoon, I'll take a stroll in the gardens, or as an extravagance, I'll venture out of town for rare provisions."

Thrunne (Serving Wench)

CR 1; Starting Attitude: 14 (Indifferent)

Description

Thrunne and Ownka are both half-orc serving wenches and sometimes-cooks at the Leaky Cask Tavern. The similarities end there, however: Thrunne is decidedly the more charming, full-figured, and personable of the two, though in a fight, you'd want Ownka by your side, no doubt.

You can't judge a half-orc by her smile, however, and even though that's not really a colloquialism anybody says in town, Thrunne's warm demeanor belies her Lawful Evil nature: she'll take advantage of any customer who's had quite too many drinks. Between her bodice and the ale, she can generally upsell a customer to give them a more expensive meal, ask them outright to tip her a certain extra amount, or even buy her items. She's Lawful, however, so will never steal from such customers; it's important to her that they do what they do my their own free will, just... incented, a little bit, as needs be.

Appearance

"Buxom for a half-orc maid" is the way most would describe her, and it's true; Thrunne is lovely and warm in all the ways most would expect of a stereotypical serving wench. She's just also got huge incisors, and a somewhat brutish physique underlying her curves. She keeps her blackish-brown hair long and brushed out, usually with a bow of some manner; sometimes she gives braiding a try.

Combat Tactics

Thrunne has no taste for combat, and will generally avoid it unless it's clear she's about to get killed unless she does something. Given any chance to maneuver, she will flee the Tavern and seek the nearest Militia Guard Post.

Factions

None. Thrunne's tribute goes directly to Berinncorte City.

Special Abilities

Darkvision Thanks to your orc blood, you have superior vision in dark and dim conditions. You can see in dim light within 60 feet of you as if it were bright light, and in darkness as if it were dim light. You can't discern color in darkness, only shades of gray.

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common and Orc. Orc is a harsh, grating language with hard consonants. It has no script of its own but is written in the Dwarvish script.

Menacing You gain proficiency in the Intimidation skill.

Relentless Endurance When you are reduced to 0 hit points but not killed outright, you can drop to 1 hit point instead. You can't use this feature again until you finish a long rest.

Savage Attacks When you score a critical hit with a melee weapon attack, you can roll one of the weapon's damage dice one additional time and add it to the extra damage of the critical hit.

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 6th, 8th, 12th, 14th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.

Action Surge Starting at 2nd level, you can push yourself beyond your normal limits for a moment. On your turn, you can take one additional action on top of your regular action and a possible bonus action. Once you use this feature, you must finish a short or long rest before you can use it again. You can use this feature 1 time(s) before a rest, but only once on the same turn.

Additional Fighting Style At 10th level, you can choose a second option from the Fighting Style class feature.

Champion The archetypal Champion focuses on the development of raw physical power honed to deadly perfection. Those who model themselves on this archetype combine rigorous training with physical excellence to deal devastating blows.

Extra Attack Beginning at 5th level, you can attack twice, instead of once, whenever you take the Attack action on your turn. The number of attacks increases to three when you reach 11th level in this class and to four when you reach 20th level in this class.

Fighting Style You adopt a particular style of fighting as your specialty.

Choose one of the following options. You can't take a Fighting Style option more than once, even if you later get to choose again.

Improved Critical Beginning when you choose this archetype at 3rd level, your weapon attacks score a critical hit on a roll of 19 or 20.

Indomitable Beginning at 9th level, you can reroll a saving throw that you fail. If you do so, you must use the new roll, and you can't use this feature again until you finish a long rest. You can use this feature 1 time(s) between long rests.

Martial Archetype At 3rd level, you choose an archetype that you strive to emulate in your combat styles and techniques. The Champion archetype is detailed at the end of the class description; see the Player's Handbook for information on other martial archetypes. Your archetype grants you features at 3rd level and again at 7th, 10th, 15th, and 18th level.

Remarkable Athlete Starting at 7th level, you can add half your proficiency bonus (round up) to any Strength, Dexterity, or Constitution check you make that doesn't already use your proficiency bonus. In addition, when you make a running long jump, the distance you can cover increases by a number of feet equal to +4.

Second Wind You have a limited well of stamina that you can draw on to protect yourself from harm. On your turn, you can use a bonus action to regain hit points equal to 1d10 + your fighter level. Once you use this feature, you must finish a short or long rest before you can use it again.

Defense While you are wearing armor, you gain a +1 bonus to AC.

Dueling When you are wielding a melee weapon in one hand and no other weapons, you gain a +2 bonus to damage rolls with that weapon

Habits and Logistics

☀ During daylight hours, Thrunne will either be asleep in quarters in the Lower-Class Residential District (📍 65%), or be shopping for supplies and catching up with friends in the Town Square (📍 35%).

🌙 At night, she will be working at the Leaky Cask Tavern until closing, then heading back to her room after helping clean up.

Background

Thrunne comes from a warm, caring half-orc family, on the other side of the realm. She helped with the farming, but the work bored her; toward the end of her teenage years, her wanderlust and sense of adventure caused her to set out on her own. Her parents, while devastated to lose their darling daughter, were nevertheless supportive, and she was off.

The half-orc had some somewhat tame, timid adventures over the past three years, but has settled in Berinncorte for the time being. Serving and cooking pays the bills, and she manages to save a bit here and there, toward the next phase of her adventures... whatever those might be!

☑ In the Obelisk Attack

Ownka and Thrunne are shopping for supplies together at the Town Square when the Obelisk Erupts. Both are sadly slain fairly quickly after the creatures emerge from the fissure into the town.

Conversation

What do you think of Berinncorte?

☑ “Oh, it’s a lovely town. Good-hearted, kind, decent folk... and it’s not too hard to find a few who take to the drink a bit too much more than they should.” She winks.

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

☑ “Oh, sure, you hear things; how could you not, in a tavern? But I pay it no mind. I’ve not seen all the realm, but enough of it to know religions will always be at each others’ throats. A faith on its own would be a boring thing! No, they need the other chapel across the town, the country, whatever, to compete with. The gods must have great sport of us to watch us posture and accuse in their names!”

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

☑ “Symms seems okay. Never seen her hoist a mug of ale in the Cask, though. I don’t trust anyone, thinks themselves too good to drink with the common man.”

Tell me about being a serving wench.

☑ “Well, it’s crude work, and make no mistake. But you meet lots of interesting folks. I daresay nobody knows the citizens of Berinncorte as we do!”

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

☑ “If you mean singing, dancing, or a hobby, no, not really. I’ve a hankering for adventure; always wanted to hunt around in caves and such. But as you can see, I can’t go alone; I’d need a group to help, to be sure. Past that, if you’re looking for a bed companion, you’re best off asking Jozan.”

CR 3; Starting Attitude: 14 (Indifferent)

Description

Berinncorte's resident Sage, Tudra operates out of the Library. She's part of why the building is often referred to as the "Library/Sage's".

She typically keeps to herself, isolated and in a strange combination of research and communing with... something. What, exactly, it is that she speaks to, when she's alone and the door is closed, not even her colleagues know.

Despite her bizarre habits and creepy practices, she's often consulted by those who are seeking answers, guesses, or something far beyond what mere books and first-hand experience can provide.

Appearance

Tudra is a hunched, wizened dwarf with cloudy eyes and tons of off-putting black ear hair. Her movements are jerky, unpredictable, and spastic; they are the motions of something not quite dwarven, not quite humanoid.

An Oracle, she's prone to holding conversations heard one-way, with someone or something unseen. Some of these are legitimate Oracular séances; other times, it's more like she's speaking to herself, but aloud, and in a way that mimics those spiritual connections.

She dresses in multicolored robes and cloaks, often several piled atop one another. As such, it's very difficult to tell how large she is; a sizable percentage of her apparent volume is simply clothing of various natures.

Combat Tactics

Tudra will not willingly fight, but if challenged, she will cast spells as best she is able. She'll avoid melee if possible, and will generally speaking not flee.

What little part of her is self-reflective is well aware how bizarre her appearance, demeanor, and actions can appear to be, and she will use this to her advantage in a fighting scenario.

The GM is encouraged to remember that in most circumstances, it's not necessarily apparent to an observer what class and level an NPC is—at any challenge level, for all the PCs know, Tudra might well be a 20th-level character! Use this mystique to Tudra's advantage, and play up the aura of the bizarre as its own form of "social armor".

Factions

Tudra has been involved in many mysticisms, and even some organizations some might describe as "cults"... but none, formally, right now.

Her tribute thus goes direct to Berinncorte City.

 Special Abilities

Darkvision Accustomed to life underground, you have superior vision in dark and dim conditions. You can see in dim light within 60 feet of you as if it were bright light, and in darkness as if it were dim light. You can't discern color in darkness, only shades of gray.

Dwarven Combat Training You have proficiency with the battleaxe, handaxe, light hammer, and warhammer.

Dwarven Resilience You have advantage on saving throws against poison, and you have resistance against poison damage (explained in chapter 9).

Dwarven Toughness Your hit point maximum increases by 1, and it increases by 1 every time you gain a level.

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common and Dwarvish. Dwarvish is full of hard consonants and guttural sounds, and those characteristics spill over into whatever other language a dwarf might speak.

Smith's Tools Proficient with Artisan Smith's Tools.

Stonecunning Whenever you make an Intelligence (History) check related to the origin of stonework, you are considered proficient in the History skill and add double your proficiency bonus to the check, instead of your normal proficiency bonus.

Tool Proficiency You gain proficiency with the artisan's tools of your choice: smith's tools, brewer's supplies, or mason's tools.

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 8th, 12th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.

Beguiling Influence You gain proficiency in the Deception and Persuasion skills.

Book of Ancient Secrets You can now inscribe magical rituals in your Book of Shadows. Choose two 1st-level spells that have the ritual tag from any class's spell list. The spells appear in the book and don't count against the number of spells you know. With your Book of Shadows in hand, you can cast the chosen spells as rituals. You can't cast the spells except as rituals, unless you've learned them by some other means. You can also cast a warlock spell you know as a ritual if it has the ritual tag. On your adventures, you can add other ritual spells to your Book of Shadows. When you find such a spell, you can add it to the book if the spell's level is equal to or less than half your warlock level (rounded up) and if you can spare the time to transcribe the spell. For each level of the spell, the transcription process takes 2 hours and costs 50 gp for the rare inks needed to inscribe it. The rituals needn't be from the same spell list.

Cantrips You know two cantrips of your choice from the warlock spell list. You learn additional warlock cantrips of your choice at higher levels, as shown in the Cantrips Known column of the Warlock table.

Dark One's Blessing Starting at 1st level, when you reduce a hostile creature to 0 hit points, you gain temporary hit points equal to 17.

Dark One's Own Luck Starting at 6th level, you can call on your patron to alter fate in your favor. When you make an ability check or a saving throw, you can use this feature to add a d10 to your roll. You can do so after seeing the initial roll but before any of the roll's effects occur. Once you use this feature, you can't use it again until you finish a short or long rest.

Eldritch Invocations In your study of occult lore, you have unearthed eldritch invocations, fragments of forbidden knowledge that imbue you with an abiding magical ability. At 2nd level, you gain two eldritch invocations of your choice. Your invocation options are detailed at the end of the class description. When you gain certain warlock levels, you gain additional invocations of your choice, as shown in the Invocations Known column of the Warlock table. Additionally, when you gain a level in this class, you can choose one of the invocations you know and replace it with another invocation that you could learn at that level.

Eldritch Sight You can cast detect magic at will, without expending a spell slot.

Expanded Spell List The Fiend lets you choose from an expanded list of spells when you learn a warlock spell. The following spells are added to the warlock spell list for you.

Fiendish Resilience Starting at 10th level, you can choose one damage type when you finish a short or long rest. You gain resistance to that damage type until you choose a different one with this feature. Damage from magical weapons or silver weapons ignores this resistance.

Gaze of Two Minds You can use your action to touch a willing humanoid and perceive through its senses until the end of your next turn. As long as the creature is on the same plane of existence as you, you can use your action on subsequent turns to maintain this connection, extending the duration until the end of your next turn. While perceiving through the other creature's senses, you benefit from any special senses possessed by that creature, and you are blinded and deafened to your own surroundings.

Hurl Through Hell Starting at 14th level, when you hit a creature with an attack, you can use this feature to instantly transport the target through the lower planes. The creature disappears and hurtles through a nightmare landscape. At the end of your next turn, the target returns to the space it previously occupied, or the nearest unoccupied space. If the target is not a fiend, it takes 10d10 psychic damage as it reels from its horrific experience. Once you use this feature, you can't use it again until you finish a long rest.

Mire the Mind You can cast slow once using a warlock spell slot. You can't do so again until you finish a long rest.

Misty Visions You can cast silent image at will, without expending a spell slot or material components.

Mystic Arcanum At 11th level, your patron bestows upon you a magical secret called an arcanum. Choose one 6th-level spell from the warlock spell list as this arcanum. You can cast your arcanum spell once without expending a spell slot. You must finish a long rest before you can do so again. At higher levels, you gain more warlock spells of your choice that can be cast in this way: one 7th-level spell at 13th level, one 8th-level spell at 15th level, and one 9th-level spell at 17th level. You regain all uses of your Mystic Arcanum when you finish a long rest.

Otherworldly Patron At 1st level, you have struck a bargain with an otherworldly being of your choice: the Archfey, the Fiend, or the Great Old One, each of which is detailed at the end of the class description. Your choice grants you features at 1st level and again at 6th, 10th, and 14th level.

Pact Boon At 3rd level, your otherworldly patron bestows a gift upon you for your loyal service. You gain one of the following features of your choice.

Pact Magic Your arcane research and the magic bestowed on you by your patron have given you facility with spells. See chapter 10 for the general rules of spellcasting and chapter 11 for the warlock spell list. Spell save DC 15; Spell attack modifier +7.

Pact of the Tome Your patron gives you a grimoire called a Book of Shadows. When you gain this feature, choose three cantrips from any class's spell list. While the book is on your person, you can cast those cantrips at will. They don't count against your number of cantrips known. If you lose your Book of Shadows, you can perform a 1-hour ceremony to receive a replacement from your patron. This ceremony can be performed during a short or long rest, and it destroys the previous book. The book turns to ash when you die. The cantrips are considered warlock spells for you, and they needn't be from the same spell list.

Spellcasting Focus You can use an arcane focus (found in chapter 5) as a spellcasting focus for your warlock spells.

Spell Slots The Warlock table shows how many spell slots you have. The table also shows what the level of those slots is; all of your spell slots are the same level. To cast one of your warlock spells of 1st level or higher, you must expend a spell slot. You regain all expended spell slots when you finish a short or long rest. For example, when you are 5th level, you have two 3rd-level spell slots. To cast the 1st-level spell thunderwave, you must spend one of those slots, and you cast it as a 3rd-level spell. Slot Level: 5, spell slots 3,

The Fiend You have made a pact with a fiend from the lower planes of existence, a being whose aims are evil, even if you strive against those aims. Such beings desire the corruption or destruction of all things, ultimately including you. Fiends powerful enough to forge a pact include demon lords such as Demogorgon, Orcus, Fraz'Urb-luu, and Baphomet; archdevils such as Asmodeus, Dispat, Mephistopheles, and Belial; pit fiends and balors that are especially mighty; and ultraloths and other lords of the yugoloths.,

Whispers of the Grave You can cast speak with dead at will, without expending a spell slot.

Habits and Logistics

 During daylight hours, Tudra will be in the Library. There is a  35% chance she will be asleep, a  35% chance she will be awake and reading, and a  30% chance she will be holding a session with a client.

 At night, Tudra holds the exact same pattern as during the day. It may seem unusual for her to see clients at all hours, but this only adds to the mysteriousness she cultivates with her odd behavior.

Background

There are many strange things about the city's Oracle. Perhaps the oddest is also the most difficult to figure out: nobody in the city knows when and where she came from!

Despite many citizens having been born, raised, and having lived their entire lives in Berinncorte, none can quite put their finger on when it is that the venerable dwarf oracle came to be in her current position. Her colleagues, the ones who know her best, perhaps, are no help: both Biggen Gurble and Gunnloda Balderk have arrived to their positions within the past ten years, and both will swear that old Tudra was already in residence at the Library/Sage when they did.

In reality, this seemingly otherworldly effect has a much more natural source: Tudra is the oldest citizen still living in Berinncorte, and is much, much older than she seems. Makeup, a bit of enchantment, and numerous other more mundane effects all contribute to her appearing old, but not as ancient as she truly is.

In the Obelisk Attack

Tudra is in her private quarters during the Obelisk Eruption, and stays there. She perhaps knows more about the Obelisk and its true purpose than nearly anyone in the city, but is so shocked and unnerved by its appearance and the events that follow that she does not volunteer her knowledge broadly in the aftermath.

Conversation

What do you think of Berinncorte?

 “One, there was, what might be bold; two, there was, their tale untold.” This is intentionally gibberish, and has nothing to do with any prophecy, city, or citizen.

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

 “One, there was, what might be bold; two, there was, their woes tenfold.”

 Sense Motive, Knowledge (Local), or Knowledge (Religion) check at DC 17, upon hearing the above: You sense that this may mean that if only one of the faiths had been in the city, without the other, the present conflict would not exist.

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

 “Without the stalwart Mayor, the lands would be stripped bare; indeed must be a struggle, but not all fall to rubble.”

 Sense Motive, Knowledge (Local), or Knowledge (Religion) check at DC 14, upon hearing the above: You're not exactly sure, but your skin tingles with a sense of true prophecy. What precisely this means, you don't yet know.

Tell me about being an Oracle.

 She looks at you with a sudden clarity, as though a murky veil had temporarily been dropped. “Why, ‘tis wondrous. All folk need answers, and those that have them, needs must give.” She smiles, and then, just as quickly as it had begun, her brief moment of happiness and normalcy fades away; her eyes unfocus and stare at something just behind you, or far past you, and her smile exhausts itself on her face.

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

 She stares blankly at you, her head shifting forward and back in time with her heartbeat. She says nothing; you cannot be certain she even absorbed the question.

Unglar (Sheergath Guard)

CR 3; Starting Attitude: 14 (Indifferent)

Description

Unglar is a devout half-orc, and serves as a strange combination of security guard and cleric. He helps with temple services, takes out the trash (literally; that's not a euphemism for handling disorderly intruders), cleans up, and will occasionally hold services himself in the absence of Larissa or Denzys.

Appearance

The half-orc barbarian cleric is a deep-voiced, solemn sort. His hair is cut like a monk's, and he always wears flowing long cloaks in the colors and symbolic embroidery of Sheergath. His hands are enormous, even for a half-orc's, and bear dozens of scars that reach up his forearms. He will not say anything as to their genesis, only shaking his head in serious remembrance.

Combat Tactics

A vicious, zealous fighter, Unglar will fight to the death in defense of his livelihood, his colleagues, or his church. He will also dive into any combat he happens upon, picking a side mostly on instinct and loving a good battle.

Even so, he will tend not to seek out a fight that does not already exist, and will gladly talk or shout at you if you'd prefer to simply have words with him.

Factions

Sheergath Temple; security / enforcer.

📖 Special Abilities

Darkvision Thanks to your orc blood, you have superior vision in dark and dim conditions. You can see in dim light within 60 feet of you as if it were bright light, and in darkness as if it were dim light. You can't discern color in darkness, only shades of gray.

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common and Orc. Orc is a harsh, grating language with hard consonants. It has no script of its own but is written in the Dwarvish script.

Menacing You gain proficiency in the Intimidation skill.

Relentless Endurance When you are reduced to 0 hit points but not killed outright, you can drop to 1 hit point instead. You can't use this feature again until you finish a long rest.

Savage Attacks When you score a critical hit with a melee weapon attack, you can roll one of the weapon's damage dice one additional time and add it to the extra damage of the critical hit.

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 8th, 12th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.

Brutal Critical Beginning at 9th level, you can roll 2 additional weapon damage die when determining the extra damage for a critical hit with a melee attack.

Danger Sense At 2nd level, you gain an uncanny sense of when things nearby aren't as they should be, giving you an edge when you dodge away from danger. You have advantage on Dexterity saving throws against effects that you can see, such as traps and spells. To gain this benefit, you can't be blinded, deafened, or incapacitated.

Extra Attack Beginning at 5th level, you can attack twice, instead of once, whenever you take the Attack action on your turn.

Fast Movement Starting at 5th level, your speed increases by 10 feet while you aren't wearing heavy armor,

Feral Instinct By 7th level, your instincts are so honed that you have advantage on initiative rolls. Additionally, if you are surprised at the beginning of combat and aren't incapacitated, you can act normally on your first turn, but only if you enter your rage before doing anything else on that turn.,

Frenzy Starting when you choose this path at 3rd level, you can go into a frenzy when you rage. If you do so, for the duration of your rage you can make a single melee weapon attack as a bonus action on each of your turns after this one. When your rage ends, you suffer one level of exhaustion (as described in appendix A),

Path of the Berserker For some barbarians, rage is a means to an end--that end being violence. The Path of the Berserker is a path of untrammelled fury, slick with blood. As you enter the berserker's rage, you thrill in the chaos of battle, heedless of your own health or well-being.,

Persistent Rage Beginning at 15th level, your rage is so fierce that it ends early only if you fall unconscious or if you choose to end it.,

Primal Path At 3rd level, you choose a path that shapes the nature of your rage. Choose the Path of the Berserker or the Path of the Totem Warrior, both detailed at the end of the class description. Your choice grants you features at 3rd level and again at 6th, 10th, and 14th levels.,

Rage In battle, you fight with primal ferocity. On your turn, you can enter a rage as a bonus action. While raging, you gain the following benefits if you aren't wearing heavy armor: You have advantage on Strength checks and Strength saving throws. When you make a melee weapon attack using Strength, you gain a bonus to the damage roll equal to 3. You have resistance to bludgeoning, piercing, and slashing damage. If you are able to cast spells, you can't cast them or concentrate on them while raging. Your rage lasts for 1 minute. It ends early if you are knocked unconscious or if your turn ends and you haven't attacked a hostile creature since your last turn or taken damage since then. You can also end your rage on your turn as a bonus action. Once you have raged the number of times equal to 5, you must finish a long rest before you can rage again.,

Reckless Attack Starting at 2nd level, you can throw aside all concern for defense to attack with fierce desperation. When you make your first attack on your turn, you can decide to attack recklessly. Doing so gives you advantage on melee weapon attack rolls using Strength during this turn, but attack rolls against you have advantage until your next turn.,

Relentless Rage Starting at 11th level, your rage can keep you fighting despite grievous wounds. If you drop to 0 hit points while you're raging and don't die outright, you can make a DC 10 Constitution saving throw. If you succeed, you drop to 1 hit point instead. Each time you use this feature after the first, the DC increases by 5. When you finish a short or long rest, the DC resets to 10.,

Unarmored Defense While you are not wearing any armor, your Armor Class equals 10 + your Dexterity modifier + your Constitution modifier. You can use a shield and still gain this benefit.

Habits and Logistics

☀ During daylight hours, Unglar will typically (🎲 70%) be in the Sheergath Temple, tending to his duties with the church. The remainder of the time (🎲 30%), he will be in the Town Square, buying supplies, speaking with others, and so on.

🌙 At night, Unglar sleeps in the church itself, on one of the pews. He does this out of a sense of devotion, but in truth, it's also an easily-defensible way of being frugal and saving money.

Background

Unglar was a brutal adventurer in his youth, traveling the realm, slaying monsters, and winning treasure. He made enemies of his allies easily, however, and one day, his comrades turned on him, leaving him for death in a cavern. Unglar fought his way out, and one by one, tracked his betrayers down and slew them all.

Though he survived and got his vengeance, he was left psychologically battered, and uncertain as to his fate going forward. Weary, weeping, and in pain, he stumbled into the Sheergath Temple of Berinncorte, and found within the peace and direction he had so desperately sought.

Ever since, he has been a loyal, dedicated servant of the church and its god.

In the Obelisk Attack

Unglar hears the commotion, and charges across town, wading into the fray and doing battle with the monsters that attack the town. He is overcome, however, and perishes amid the horrid intruders.

Conversation

What do you think of Berinncorte?

🗨️ "It is the location of my salvation, and home to a sterling example of faith to the one true god, Sheergath."

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

🗨️ "Quite. Sheergath devout such as myself see the wisdom of her teachings: that chaos is a word we use to label human nature, and order is the enemy of the true attitude of all beings. Nature, the gods, the realm entire—it is all chaos, and any attempt to view it otherwise is foolishness. The 'strife' of which you speak is at the very core of our faith, and cannot be resolved until the town rids itself of the falsehoods of Zugul."

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

🗨️ "Symms is embattled with the very nature of her citizens. Rather than accept, embrace, nurture, or harness the chaos of their lives, she tries to squash that core aspect of their being. Many feel as though the rules, the law, the order of the city are punishingly unreasonable, even if they are meant well and toward a noble purpose of peace and prosperity. Given proper direction, all can prosper under chaos."

Tell me about being a... cleric?

🗨️ "Ah, my role is quite interesting, no? I am indeed a humble, novice, cleric of Sheergath, though not of the caliber of my colleagues. I am still but a learner, as are we all in the wisdom of Sheergath, but the more so me. In that capacity, Sheergath on occasion requires my... baser talents, of combat and raw physical power, to aid her, that her word may reach many."

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

🗨️ "I am a full-time worshipper of Sheergath, and a part-time devotee of Sheergath, and on the side, my hobbies include learning more of Sheergath's wisdom and teachings."

Vanya Berezin

(Merchant)

CR 1/2; XP 200; Starting Attitude: 14 (Indifferent)

Description

There are many places to go in Berinncorte for a bite to eat—but for the adventurer or traveler, few vendors do as good a job, and have as many wares, as Vanya Berezin. The petulant yet persistent human hawks all manner of rations and trail food, and does so at prices that undercut most other sources in town. He's only in the city for a part of the year, and then on to other towns in his rotation. Of late, though, sales here have been so good that he's considering putting down roots for the first time ever.

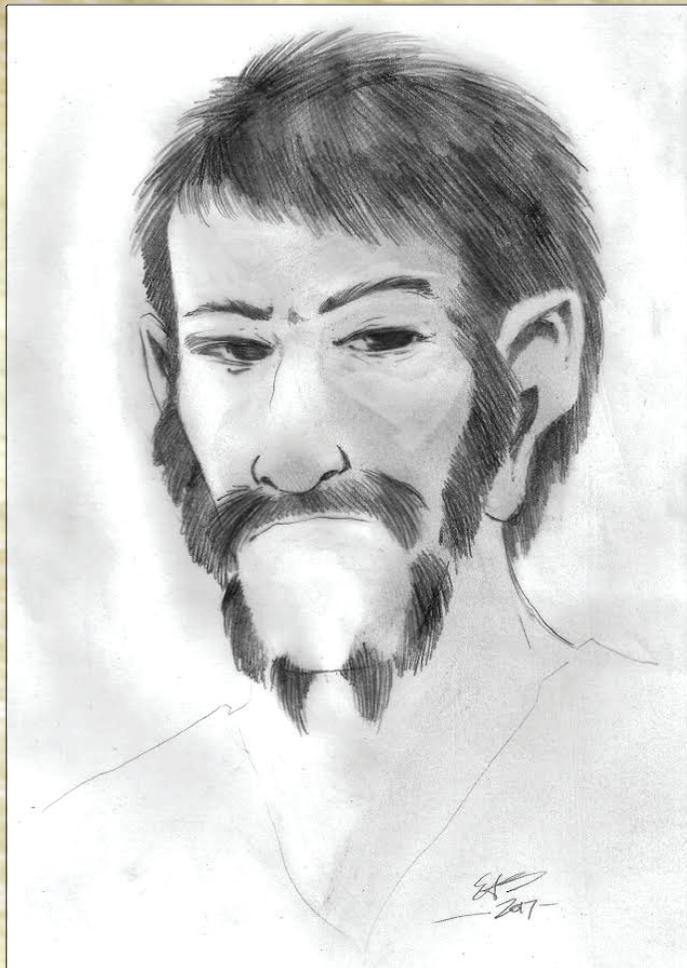

Appearance

Vanya is a scrawny man, slender in both build and bones. He wears black facial hair in erratic tufts that seems unintentional—which likely means he spends a great deal of time cultivating the look, which has the effect mainly of suggesting to onlookers that he possesses no mirrored surface.

Combat Tactics

No other way to put it: Vanya Berezin is a coward, plain and simple. He shies away from violence, and will threaten to call the Militia for the least little thing. In game terms, any Charisma (Intimidation) check the party attempts against the man will result in him summoning the Militia to his aid. To the party's benefit, however, most Militia members know Vanya well for this frequent “crying wolf”; they feel duty-bound to approach, but will start conversation Unfriendly to the merchant and Indifferent to whomever is the “cause” of the complaint.

In an actual fight, Vanya will flee no matter what the circumstances; if cornered and further escape is physically impossible, he will attempt to surrender or offer the assailants whatever they wish.

Factions

Vanya is a member of the Antimagic Shell, mainly out of his hatred and jealousy of those who wield magical powers. He himself was picked on as a child by acquaintances with an aptitude; his prejudice is born partly from those memories.

📖 Special Abilities

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common and one extra language of your choice. Humans typically learn the languages of other peoples they deal with, including obscure dialects. They are fond of sprinkling their speech with words borrowed from other tongues: Orc curses, Elvish musical expressions, Dwarvish military phrases, and so on.

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 8th, 12th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.

Cunning Action Starting at 2nd level, your quick thinking and agility allow you to move and act quickly. You can take a bonus action on each of your turns in combat. This action can be used only to take the Dash, Disengage, or Hide action.

Evasion Beginning at 7th level, you can nimbly dodge out of the way of certain area effects, such as a red dragon's fiery breath or an ice storm spell. When you are subjected to an effect that allows you to make a Dexterity saving throw to take only half damage, you instead take no damage if you succeed on the saving throw, and only half damage if you fail.

Expertise At 1st level, choose two of your skill proficiencies, or one of your skill proficiencies and your proficiency with thieves' tools. Your proficiency bonus is doubled for any ability check you make that uses either of the chosen proficiencies. At 6th level, you can choose two more of your proficiencies (in skills or with thieves' tools) to gain this benefit.

Fast Hands Starting at 3rd level, you can use the bonus action granted by your Cunning Action to make a Dexterity (Sleight of Hand) check, use your thieves' tools to disarm a trap or open a lock, or take the Use an Object action.

Roguish Archetype At 3rd level, you choose an archetype that you emulate in the exercise of your rogue abilities. Your choice grants you features at 3rd level and then again at 9th, 13th, and 17th level.

Second-Story Work When you choose this archetype at 3rd level, you gain the ability to climb faster than normal; climbing no longer costs you extra movement. In addition, when you make a running jump, the distance you cover increases by a number of feet equal to 4.,

Sneak Attack Beginning at 1st level, you know how to strike subtly and exploit a foe’s distraction. Once per turn, you can deal an extra 5d6 damage to one creature you hit with an attack if you have advantage on the attack roll. The attack must use a finesse or a ranged weapon. You don’t need advantage on the attack roll if another enemy of the target is within 5 feet of it, that enemy isn’t incapacitated, and you don’t have disadvantage on the attack roll.,

Supreme Sneak Starting at 9th level, you have advantage on a Dexterity (Stealth) check if you move no more than half your speed on the same turn.,

Thief You hone your skills in the larcenous arts. Burglars, bandits, cutpurses, and other criminals typically follow this archetype, but so do rogues who prefer to think of themselves as professional treasure seekers, explorers, delvers, and investigators. In addition to improving your agility and stealth, you learn skills useful for delving into ancient ruins, reading unfamiliar languages, and using magic items you normally couldn’t employ.,

Thieves’ Cant During your rogue training you learned thieves’ cant, a secret mix of dialect, jargon, and code that allows you to hide messages in seemingly normal conversation. Only another creature that knows thieves’ cant understands such messages. It takes four times longer to convey such a message than it does to speak the same idea plainly. In addition, you understand a set of secret signs and symbols used to convey short, simple messages, such as whether an area is dangerous or the territory of a thieves’ guild, whether loot is nearby, or whether the people in an area are easy marks or will provide a safe house for thieves on the run.,

Uncanny Dodge Starting at 5th level, when an attacker that you can see hits you with an attack, you can use your reaction to halve the attack’s damage against you.

Habits and Logistics

☀ During daylight hours, there is a good (🎲 55%) chance you will find Vanya Berezin in his kiosk in Town Square; the balance of his time, he will spend out of Berinncorte, making the rounds to his suppliers and other towns along the way.

🌙 At night, the man will frequently (🎲 70%) be found in the Shanty Town area of Town Square.

Background

Vanya will describe himself as always having been the underdog: physically weak, not gifted intellectually, and struggling at all ages to find his place in the Realm. This pattern continues to this day; though he has found some success in his current profession, it grants him no sense of fulfillment, of true purpose, and he is restless.

Worse still, he’s never even had much in the way of dreams. Even in his childhood, when friends predicted they would be fighting dragons, or described themselves as “future kings”, or assumed they would wind up being wealthy merchants, Vanya could only stare at the clouds and see blots, stains on an otherwise blue sky. It isn’t that the man lacks imagination—just as it applies to his own life.

In the Obelisk Attack

Vanya is in his kiosk when the Obelisk Erupts, and is slain instantly. The good thing is that he feels no pain, but it’s hard comfort and a sorry end for a man who never quite found himself and his reason for being.

Conversation

What do you think of Berinncorte?

☞ “People here are just as hungry as they are elsewhere, I’ve found. Past that, it’s a nice town, no real crime to speak of, and mercantile enterprises such as mine aren’t interfered with.”

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

☞ “I’m really not here long enough to form an opinion. I mean, yeah, I’ve heard some things, but likely not much more than you yourselves have, and I say that realizing you’re strangers here.”

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

☞ “Symms gets a reputation for telling everyone what to do and not do. I don’t get it. She’s never told me what to do or not do, and I like it that way. But I really don’t do all that much, I suppose.”

Tell me about being a food merchant.

☞ “People need to eat. I help out with that. They seem to like my stuff. I try and do a good job, but let’s be honest—I sell trail rations. Traveling food, you know? If it’s awful, I’ll not hear of it for many moons.”

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

☞ “Ah, to have such drive, such ambition. No, good folk, I do not have any other enterprises on the side. Do you mean it’s not enough? Selling food? Well... actually, I tend to agree with you on that. But it’s what I do, and it seems I do it well. Keeps me fed. Not a bad life. Not a great one, barely even a good one, really. But not bad.”

Waywocket Ningel (Jeweler)

CR 2; Starting Attitude: 14 (Indifferent)

Description

This humble-looking gnome is one of Berinncorte's finer and more reputed artisans, specializing in jewelcrafting and masonry. For her, it's a hobby, something to keep her mind busy; for others, it's a work of art.

She can't remember a time when she didn't have at least one project in the works; when one is nearing completion, someone always tends to come along with another one, so she is never bored. She does her work at the Leaky Cask Tavern; see RTE-2: A Waywocket With Jewels.

Appearance

A middle-aged gnome with a sunken face, she seems unremarkable at first glance: matted dark-brown hair tied back in a bun, drab clothes, and ever hunched over her work. One is tempted to overlook her, scanning on to the rest of the room, but there is something noteworthy about the obvious passion in her hands, in her focus, as she goes about the business of stonecrafting.

Combat Tactics

Waywocket is an artisan, not a soldier, and will shy away from a fight however it presents itself. She keeps a crossbow and dagger primarily for hunting game outside city limits, but knows how to use them both well enough to fight back should the absolute necessity present itself.

She is much loved in Berinncorte, and so will attract support if attacked. In any building, 2d4+2 Townsfolk will join the fight one round after combat begins; on the streets, she will seek the nearest Militia Guard Post to similar, but more martially competent, effect.

Factions

Although her talent would allow her a pick of any of a number of merchant and crafting guilds, she keeps to herself, giving her share of tribute directly to the City of Berinncorte.

📖 Special Abilities

Artificer's Lore Whenever you make a History check related to magic items, alchemical objects, or technological devices, you can add twice your proficiency bonus (8), instead of any proficiency bonus you normally apply.

Darkvision Accustomed to life underground, you have superior vision in dark and dim conditions. You can see in dim light within 60 feet of you as if it were bright light, and in darkness as if it were dim light. You can't discern color in darkness, only shades of gray.

Gnome Cunning You have advantage on all Intelligence, Wisdom, and Charisma saving throws against magic.

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common and Gnomish. The Gnomish language, which uses the Dwarvish script, is renowned for its technical treatises and its catalogs of knowledge about the natural world.

Tinker You have proficiency with tinker's tools. Using those tools, you can spend 1 hour and 10 gp worth of materials to construct a Tiny clockwork device (AC 5, 1 hp). The device ceases to function after 24 hours. (unless you spend 1 hour repairing it to keep the device functioning), or when you use your action to dismantle it; at that time, you can reclaim the materials used to create it. You can have up to three such devices active at a time. When you create a device, choose one of the following options: Clockwork Toy: This toy is a clockwork animal or person, such as a frog, mouse, bird, or soldier. When placed on the ground, the toy moves 5 feet across the ground on each of your turns in a random direction. It makes noises as appropriate to the creature it represents. Fire Starter: The device produces a miniature flame, which you can use to light something like a candle, torch, or campfire. Using the device requires your action. Music Box: When opened, this music box plays a single song at a moderate volume. The box stops playing when it reaches the song's end or when it is closed.,

Tinker's Tools Proficient with Artisan Tinker's Tools.,

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 8th, 12th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.,

Cunning Action Starting at 2nd level, your quick thinking and agility allow you to move and act quickly. You can take a bonus action on each of your turns in combat. This action can be used only to take the Dash, Disengage, or Hide action.,

Evasion Beginning at 7th level, you can nimbly dodge out of the way of certain area effects, such as a red dragon's fiery breath or an ice storm spell. When you are subjected to an effect that allows you to make a Dexterity saving throw to take only half damage, you instead take no damage if you succeed on the saving throw, and only half damage if you fail.,

Expertise At 1st level, choose two of your skill proficiencies, or one of your skill proficiencies and your proficiency with thieves' tools. Your proficiency bonus is doubled for any ability check you make that uses either of the chosen proficiencies. At 6th level, you can choose two more of your proficiencies (in skills or with thieves' tools) to gain this benefit.,

Fast Hands Starting at 3rd level, you can use the bonus action granted by your Cunning Action to make a Dexterity (Sleight of Hand) check, use your thieves' tools to disarm a trap or open a lock, or take the Use an Object action.,

Reliable Talent By 11th level, you have refined your chosen skills until they approach perfection. Whenever you make an ability check that lets you add your proficiency bonus, you can treat a d20 roll of 9 or lower as a 10.,

Roguish Archetype At 3rd level, you choose an archetype that you emulate in the exercise of your rogue abilities. Your choice grants you features at 3rd level and then again at 9th, 13th, and 17th level.,

Second-Story Work When you choose this archetype at 3rd level, you gain the ability to climb faster than normal; climbing no longer costs you extra movement. In addition, when you make a running jump, the distance you cover increases by a number of feet equal to 5.,

Sneak Attack Beginning at 1st level, you know how to strike subtly and exploit a foe's distraction. Once per turn, you can deal an extra 6d6 damage to one creature you hit with an attack if you have advantage on the attack roll. The attack must use a finesse or a ranged weapon. You don't need advantage on the attack roll if another enemy of the target is within 5 feet of it, that enemy isn't incapacitated, and you don't have disadvantage on the attack roll.,

Supreme Sneak Starting at 9th level, you have advantage on a Dexterity (Stealth) check if you move no more than half your speed on the same turn.,

Thief You hone your skills in the larcenous arts. Burglars, bandits, cutpurses, and other criminals typically follow this archetype, but so do rogues who prefer to think of themselves as professional treasure seekers, explorers, delvers, and investigators. In addition to improving your agility and stealth, you learn skills useful for delving into ancient ruins, reading unfamiliar languages, and using magic items you normally couldn't employ.,

Thieves' Cant During your rogue training you learned thieves' cant, a secret mix of dialect, jargon, and code that allows you to hide messages in seemingly normal conversation. Only another creature that knows thieves' cant understands such messages. It takes four times longer to convey such a message than it does to speak the same idea plainly. In addition, you understand a set of secret signs and symbols used to convey short, simple messages, such as whether an area is dangerous or the territory of a thieves' guild, whether loot is nearby, or whether the people in an area are easy marks or will provide a safe house for thieves on the run.,

Uncanny Dodge Starting at 5th level, when an attacker that you can see hits you with an attack, you can use your reaction to halve the attack's damage against you.,

Habits and Logistics

 During daylight hours, Wayrocket typically  70% will be in the Town Square, shopping for materials and components for her craft. The remainder of the time, she will be outside city limits, hunting or traveling.

 At night, the gnome artisan will almost always  80% be at the Leaky Cask Tavern, plying her trade and taking on customers if she's a mind to. The remainder of the time, she will be out of town, either delivering a particularly expensive item by hand, or searching for rare materials.

Background

Wayrocket was always a quiet sort, heads-down over one project or another, and always curious about stones, rocks, and tools. She's worked in various side jobs, but has always considered her main focus to be stonework and jewelry. She views it as tremendously fortunate that she herself has no interest in jewels or adornments of her own—this frees her to be able to work without wanting to keep her creations.

In the Obelisk Attack

The gnome is hunched over her work at the Tavern, and hears the commotion. Jozan (page 675) helps her escape through the Tavern's southern door.

Conversation

What do you think of Berinncorte?

 "It's fine. Love the Leaky Cask, and Jozan lets me do as much work as I want, here. Good business, quiet, and safe."

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

 "Not particularly. I'm aware there are two churches in town, but that's fairly it."

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

 "I suppose Symms keeps the peace? Or is that the Militia? Who gets credit?" She shrugs, clearly disinterested.

Tell me about being a jeweler.

 "I'd say 'stone artisan'. Or 'tinkerer', heh. It's fine work. I get to focus on something I do quite well, and do it as much as I want. I've no shop or upkeep, no children, no family... it's nice to be freed, entirely, to focus on exactly and only what I want."

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

 "No. Mine's a quiet life, truly; work and sleep, with occasional interesting jaunts to deliver or acquire materials."

Welby Goodbarrel (Merchant)

CR 1; Starting Attitude: 16 (Indifferent)

Description

Berinncorte's General Store is owned by a childlike, cherubic halfling. Welby Goodbarrel is a humorous, energetic chap with a taste for fine wine.

Appearance

Welby appears to be an indulged child, writ slightly larger: chubby cheeks, wet eyes, perpetually-tousled light-brown hair, and freckles dotting his face and arms. Nevertheless, he's a ruthless tactician and negotiator, and though his demeanor feels ingratiating and generous, he is ever focused on his profit.

He dresses in extremely fine, well-made, and hand-tailored clothes, with only slight embroidery: riding the line, visually, between appearing fashionable and excessive.

Combat Tactics

Welby pays his long-time friend and good companion Oneib (page 725) in large part to ensure that he himself will never see battle first-hand. The halfling merchant will avoid armed conflict at all costs.

If possible, he will shout to his bodyguard to take the fight outside—partly to distance himself from the action, but also to ensure support from the Berinncorte Militia, 2d4+2 of whom will arrive promptly if fighting commences in the vicinity of the General Store.

If the combatants are distracted, Welby will watch the action as entertainment. If foes notice or creep toward him, or if the battle appears to be going poorly for the Militia and/or Oneib, he will escape. Make no mistake, he will feel truly guilty for abandoning his longtime comrade... but he will feel this guilt alive and well and prosperous somewhere else, to be sure.

Factions

Welby is a 3% tribute-paying member of the Adamantium Trail.

📖 Special Abilities

Brave You have advantage on saving throws against being frightened.,

Halfling Nimbleness You can move through the space of any creature that is of a size larger than yours.,

Languages You can speak, read, and write Common and Halfling. The Halfling language isn't secret, but halflings are loath to share it with others. They write very little, so they don't have a rich body of literature. Their oral tradition, however, is very strong. Almost all halflings speak Common to converse with the people in whose lands they dwell or through which they are traveling.,

Lucky When you roll a 1 on an attack roll, ability check, or saving throw, you can reroll the die and must use the new roll.,

Naturally Stealthy You can attempt to hide even when you are obscured only by a creature that is at least one size larger than you.,

Ability Score Improvement When you reach 4th level, and again at 8th, 12th, 16th, and 19th level, you can increase one ability score of your choice by 2, or you can increase two ability scores of your choice by 1. As normal, you can't increase an ability score above 20 using this feature.,

Cunning Action Starting at 2nd level, your quick thinking and agility allow you to move and act quickly. You can take a bonus action on each of your turns in combat. This action can be used only to take the Dash, Disengage, or Hide action.,

Fast Hands Starting at 3rd level, you can use the bonus action granted by your Cunning Action to make a Dexterity (Sleight of Hand) check, use your thieves' tools to disarm a trap or open a lock, or take the Use an Object action.,

Roguish Archetype At 3rd level, you choose an archetype that you emulate in the exercise of your rogue abilities. Your choice grants you features at 3rd level and then again at 9th, 13th, and 17th level.,

Second-Story Work When you choose this archetype at 3rd level, you gain the ability to climb faster than normal; climbing no longer costs you extra movement. In addition, when you make a running jump, the distance you cover increases by a number of feet equal to 4.,

Sneak Attack Beginning at 1st level, you know how to strike subtly and exploit a foe's distraction. Once per turn, you can deal an extra 5d6 damage to one creature you hit with an attack if you have advantage on the attack roll. The attack must use a finesse or a ranged weapon. You don't need advantage on the attack roll if another enemy of the target is within 5 feet of it, that enemy isn't incapacitated, and you don't have disadvantage on the attack roll.,

Supreme Sneak Starting at 9th level, you have advantage on a Dexterity (Stealth) check if you move no more than half your speed on the same turn.,

Uncanny Dodge Starting at 5th level, when an attacker that you can see hits you with an attack, you can use your reaction to halve the attack's damage against you.

Treasure

In addition to the gear and loot described above, Welby carries on him the keys to the entire General Store, whose contents of course represent a great deal more wealth than he carries on his person.

The halfling merchant also holds sizable investments in many establishments across the realm.

Habits and Logistics

 During daylight hours, Welby will be in the General Store, tending to business or counting coin.

 At night, he will also remain in the General Store. Any food, drink, or other needs he has, he will typically send Oneib to obtain and bring back to his establishment. This partly serves the halfling's desire for comfort, but also security—the town's most prosperous merchant sitting down to rub elbows at the Leaky Cask Tavern might be a too-tempting invitation for mischief.

Background

Welby was born to a dirt-poor halfling family well across the realm. Struggling, and desperate, they sold their youngest son Welby to a seedy caravan.

Though the transaction, and that caravan's reputation, was nearly indistinguishable from slavery, the halfling was treated well, and given work to which his physique was adequate. One day, he happened to overhear a conversation at the right time, and put in a quick comment to aid his master, the lead merchant in the caravan. Welby's keen eye noticed a style imperfection in what was later discovered to be a fake masterpiece; the merchant was saved from a very costly mistake.

From that time onward, Welby was taken under the wing of the caravan leader as though a son never had. The change in relationship and stature served both men well, and ten years later, the caravan leader gifted Welby with two things: his freedom, and a retroactive 10% commission on every transaction in which the halfling slave had been of assistance. Tears in his eyes, Welby parted from the only father figure he had ever truly valued, and set out to make his own profit.

In the Obelisk Attack

The halfling survives, though not without cost: he closes the doors to the store on Oneib, his longtime companion (and one-time lover). Tears may bead his eyes when he does so... but still, he does so.

Conversation

What do you think of Berinncorte?

 "Great! It's great. Well, not so much for fashion. Or fine dining. Or, truth be told, its ale, though don't go saying that to Jozan. I'm glad of the business, and thrilled I can give back so much to the citizens who have helped me prosper."

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

 "This god, that god—makes little difference to me, unless you're in the market for a specific religious icon crafted of cold iron, or the like. Devotion isn't bad for business, so long as you're in that business. Past that, I stay out of the way—can't afford to be taking sides, or to be seen to be taking sides."

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

 "Symms keeps things orderly around here, and the Militia helps keep the store safe. It's a boon to all citizens, this humble establishment, so it well behooves Her Honorableness Dominika to lend a hand as she will to help ensure no tomfoolery derails the enterprise."

Tell me about being a merchant.

 "Well, let me tell you—it's far more than the simple cliché of 'buy low, sell high'. That may work if you're a caravan master, but a small-town merchant? You're in it for more than just the profit, friend. I don't sell ladders, I sell repaired roofs. I don't sell foodstuffs, I sell a full tummy and a clear head. I don't just sell feather mattresses, I sell a good night's sleep, well-earned at the end of a day of hard, honest work. I sell the comforts, and the necessities, of life, here, and all are better for it."

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

 "I buy, I sell, and in my spare time, I buy and sell, a little. Or is that what you meant?"

You must come across interesting rumors and tales, in your line of work.

 "From time to time, the odd tidbit hits my ears, it's true.”

▲ Diplomacy check at DC 15, or a bribe of at least 10 gp, pressing the above topic:

🗨️ “Well, now you mention it, there’s something might interest a fine group of adventuring-types such as yourselves.” The party may make a free roll on the Rumors and Lore table. Welby typically does not know, and in any event never tells, if the information is true or false.

Zook Beren (Brewer / Cook)

CR 1/3; XP 135; Starting Attitude: 14 (Indifferent)

Description

The Leaky Cask Tavern's resident ale brewer and cook, Zook Beren is also the employee of smallest stature. He's inquisitive, and demanding of himself, despite Joan (page 675) not really caring about the quality of what he serves. Zook may be a cook and brewer in a medium-sized village, but he wants more out of his work than merely to avoid giving his guests food poisoning.

Appearance

Zook is a grimy, hands-on gnome. He's young, but looks middle-aged at times: black hair with streaks of grey, and a stature hunched from long hours at the stove.

Combat Tactics

Zook won't seek combat, but neither will he shy away from it if it's necessary. He has but meager skill, but passion to spare, and will wield both as best as he's able in defense of his fellow man.

Factions

Zook holds no allegiance to any group. His tribute goes to the City of Berinn corte.

📖 Special Abilities

Defensive Training (Ex) Gnomes get a +4 dodge bonus to AC against monsters of the giant type.

Gnome Magic (Sp) Gnomes add +1 to the DC of any saving throws against illusion spells that they cast. Gnomes with a Charisma of 11 or higher also gain spell-like abilities.

Hatred (Ex) Gnomes receive a +1 bonus on attack rolls against humanoid creatures of the reptilian and goblinoid subtypes due to special training against these hated foes.

Illusion Resistance (Ex) Gnomes get a +2 racial saving throw bonus against illusion spells or effects.

Keen Senses (Ex) Gnomes receive a +2 bonus on Wisdom (Perception) skill checks.

Low-Light Vision (Ex) You can see x2 as far as humans in low illumination.

Characters with low-light vision have eyes that are so sensitive to light that they can see twice as far as normal in dim light. Low-Light Vision is color vision. A spellcaster with low-light vision can read a scroll as long as even the tiniest candle flame is next to her as a source of light. Characters with low-light vision can see outdoors on a moonlit night as well as they can during the day.

Obsessive (Ex) Gnomes receive a +2 racial bonus on a Craft or Profession skill of their choice.

Single Simple Weapon Proficiency (Dagger) You understand how to use a Dagger.

Weapon Familiarity (Ex) Gnomes treat any weapon with the word "gnome" in its name as a martial weapon.

⚡ Feats

Acrobatic You are skilled at leaping, jumping, and flying. You get a +2 bonus on all Dexterity (Acrobatics) and Fly skill checks. If you have 10 or more ranks in one of these skills, the bonus increases to +4 for that skill.

Alertness You often notice things that others might miss. You get a +2 bonus on Wisdom (Perception) and Wisdom (Perception) skill checks. If you have 10 or more ranks in one of these skills, the bonus increases to +4 for that skill.

Armor Proficiency, Light You are skilled at wearing light armor. When you wear a type of armor with which you are proficient, the armor check penalty for that armor applies only to Dexterity- and Strength-based skill checks.

Armor Proficiency, Medium You are skilled at wearing medium armor. When you wear a type of armor with which you are proficient, the armor check penalty for that armor applies only to Dexterity- and Strength-based skill checks.

Great Constitution You are resistant to poisons, diseases, and other deadly maladies. You get a +2 bonus on all Constitution saving throws.

Iron Will You are more resistant to mental effects. You get a +2 bonus on all Will saving throws.

Lightning Dexterities You have faster Dexterities than normal. You get a +2 bonus on all Dexterity saving throws.

Skill Focus (Profession (Brewer)) You are particularly adept at your chosen skill. You get a +3 bonus on all checks involving the chosen skill. If you have 10 or more ranks in that skill, this bonus increases to +6.

Throw Anything You are used to throwing things you have on hand. You do not suffer any penalties for using an improvised ranged weapon. You receive a +1 circumstance bonus on attack rolls made with thrown splash weapons.

🏠 Habits and Logistics

☀️ During daylight hours, Zook will be out and about; the GM is encouraged to “place” him anywhere desired.

🌙 At night, Zook works at the Leaky Cask Tavern until it closes, and then turns in to quarters in the Lower-Class Residential District.

📖 Background

The gnomish brewer grew up on a vegetable farm, where he tried his hand at brewing and acquired quite a lot of skill as the family chef. As his teenage years grew late, he yearned for something more, and set out on his own. He sends a share of his earnings at the Tavern back to his family, whose farm is within a day’s journey of Berinncorte.

🛡️ In the Obelisk Attack

Zook is working in the cellar of the Tavern when the Obelisk Erupts, working on a new concoction. Torn between wanting to help, curiosity at what was happening, and a degree of cowardice, he stays put... and survives.

🗨️ Conversation

What do you think of Berinncorte?

🗨️ “It’s fine enough, I suppose. The Cask lets me work on cooking and brewing, and that’s what I enjoy most. It’s fun. The people are interesting, too, so that’s all right.”

Do you know anything about the strife between Zugul and Sheergath?

🗨️ “Oh, man, I could not care in the least. Zugul, Sheergath, goat gods, bull gods, flower gods, any of them—no matter who you follow, you eat and drink, just like anyone else, so you’ll end up in the Cask eventually.”

What do you think of the Mayor and the government?

🗨️ “Symms is fine, though she’s never in the Cask, which is weird to the point of oddity.”

Tell me about being a brewer, cook, or whatever it is you do here.

🗨️ “It’s great. The Cask is good; Jozan treats us well, and the patrons keep the peace, even if they do get a bit rowdy from time to time.”

Do you do any... other sorts of work on the side?

🗨️ “Nope. No time. I mean, I cook and brew for work, and then, as a side hobby, I work on improving my cooking and brewing.”

Villains

Villain Overview

True Villainy

The story of Dark Obelisk: Berinncorte is not so complex or involved that there are true villains, as such: simply more advanced enemies who pose a more significant threat.

These should all be treated as Untouchable enemies, in that they should only be faced directly in combat through folly, horrible luck, or as a terrifying preface to inevitable retreat. Many of these villainous creatures have backstories, motivations, and roles beyond the scope of this adventure, but within the scope in which the PCs will encounter them here, they are intended to be presented simply as terrors beyond measure.

This section describes these creatures in detail.

Special Abilities

Aligned (Chaotic, Evil) Your natural weapons, as well as any weapons you wield, are treated as Chaotic and Evil for the purpose of resolving damage reduction.

Bleeding Attack You can cause living opponents to bleed when hitting them with a sneak attack. This attack causes the target to take 9 additional points of damage each round. Bleeding creatures that that amount of damage every round at the start of their turns. The bleeding can be stopped by a DC 15 Heal check or the application of any effect that heals hit point damage. Bleeding damage from this ability does not stack with itself. Bleeding damage bypasses any damage reduction the creature might possess.

Camouflage Once per day, a rogue with this talent can craft simple but effective camouflage from the surrounding foliage. The rogue needs 1 minute to prepare the camouflage, but once she does, it is good for the rest of the day or until the rogue fails a saving throw against an area effect spell that deals fire, cold, or acid damage, whichever comes first. The rogue gains a +4 bonus on Stealth checks while within terrain that matches the foliage used to make the camouflage. This ability cannot be used in areas without natural foliage.

Darkvision Range 60 ft.; Darkvision is the extraordinary ability to see with no light source at all, out to a range specified for the creature. Darkvision is black and white only (colors cannot be discerned). It does not allow characters to see anything that they could not see otherwise-invisible objects are still invisible, and illusions are still visible as what they seem to be. Likewise, darkvision subjects a creature to gaze attacks normally. The presence of light does not spoil darkvision.

Evasion You can avoid damage from many area-effect attacks. If you make a successful Reflex saving throw against an attack that normally deals half damage on a successful save, you instead take no damage. Evasion can only be used if you are wearing light armor or no armor. If you are helpless, you do not gain the benefit of evasion.

Fast Getaway After successfully making a sneak attack or Sleight of Hand check, a rogue with this talent can spend a move action to take the withdraw action. She can move no more than her speed during this movement.

Fast Stealth This ability allows you to move at full speed using Stealth without penalty.

Improved Uncanny Dodge You can no longer be flanked. This defense denies a rogue the ability to sneak attack you by flanking you, unless the attacker is a rogue of at least level 17.

Outsider Traits Unlike most living creatures, an outsider does not have a dual nature--its soul and body form one unit. When an outsider is slain, no soul is set loose. Spells that restore souls to their bodies, such as raise dead, reincarnate, and resurrection, don't work on an outsider. It takes a different magical effect, such as limited wish, wish, miracle, or true resurrection to restore it to life. Outsiders breathe, but do not need to eat or sleep (although they can do so if they wish).

Protective Slime A layer of acidic slime coats a babau's skin. Any creature that strikes a babau with a natural attack or unarmed strike takes 1d8 points of acid damage from this slime if it fails a DC 18 Reflex save. A creature that strikes a babau with a melee weapon must make a DC 18 Reflex save or the weapon takes 1d8 points of acid damage; if this damage penetrates the weapon's hardness, the weapon gains the broken condition. Ammunition that strikes a babau is automatically destroyed after it inflicts its damage.

Redirect Attack Once per day, when a rogue with this talent is hit with a melee attack, she can redirect the attack to strike at an adjacent creature with a free action. The creature targeted must be within melee reach of the attack that hit the rogue, and the creature that made the attack against the rogue must make a new attack roll against the new target.

See Invisibility You can See Invisibility, as per the spell, as a constant ability. Constant spell-like abilities function at all times but can be dispelled. Constant spell-like abilities can be reactivated as a swift action.

Sneak Attack If you can catch an opponent when he is unable to defend himself effectively from your attack, you can strike a vital spot for extra damage. Your attack deals 9d6 points of extra damage anytime your target would be denied a Dexterity bonus to AC, or when you flank your target. Should you score a critical hit with a sneak attack, this extra damage is not multiplied. Ranged attacks can count as sneak attacks only if the target is within 30 feet. With a weapon that deals nonlethal damage, you can make a sneak attack that deals nonlethal damage instead of lethal damage. You cannot use a weapon that deals lethal damage to deal nonlethal damage in a sneak attack, not even with the usual -4 penalty. You must be able to see the target well enough to pick out a vital spot and must be able to reach such a spot. You cannot sneak attack while striking a creature with concealment.

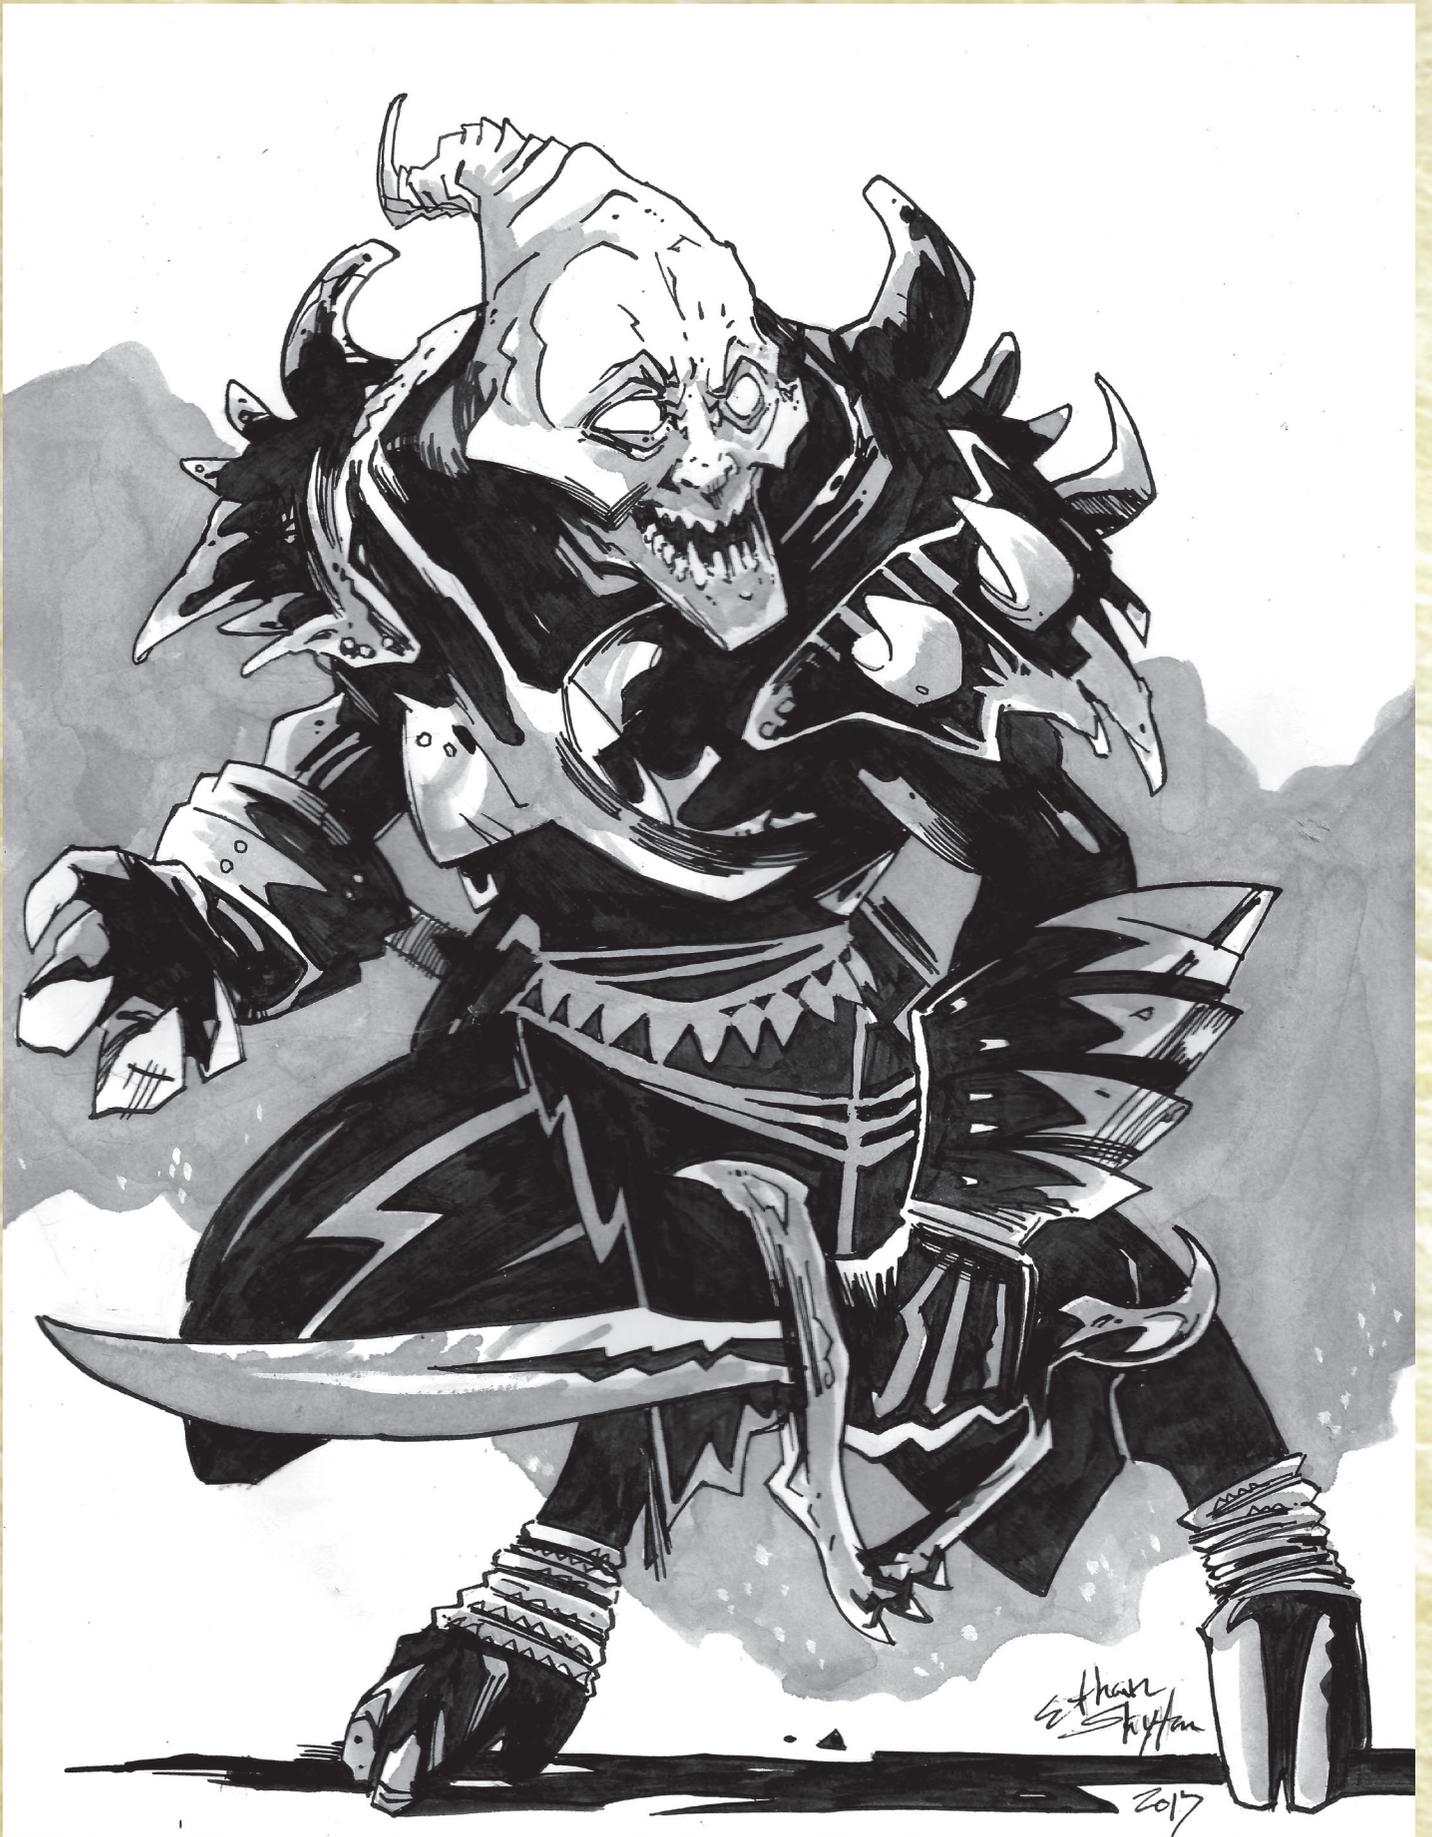

Stand Up You can stand up from a prone position as a free action. This still provokes attacks of opportunity for standing up while threatened by a foe.

Telepathy You can mentally communicate with any other creature within 100 feet that has a language. It is possible to address multiple creatures at once telepathically, although maintaining a telepathic conversation with more than one creature at a time is just as difficult as simultaneously speaking and listening to multiple people at the same time.

Trapfinding You add +6 to Perception skill checks made to locate traps and to Disable Device skill checks. You can use the Disable Device skill to disarm magical traps.

Trap Sense You gain a +4 bonus on Reflex saves made to avoid traps, and a +4 dodge bonus to AC against attacks made by traps.

Uncanny Dodge You can react to danger before your senses would normally allow you to do so. You cannot be caught flat-footed, nor do you lose your Dexterity bonus to AC if the attacker is invisible. You still lose your Dexterity bonus to AC if immobilized. You can still lose your Dexterity bonus to AC if an opponent successfully uses the feint action against you.

☒ Special Abilities

Aligned (Chaotic, Evil) Your natural weapons, as well as any weapons you wield, are treated as Chaotic and Evil for the purpose of resolving damage reduction.

Armor Training You are more maneuverable while wearing armor. Whenever you are wearing armor, you reduce the armor check penalty by 3 and increase the maximum Dexterity bonus allowed by your armor by +3

Bravery You gain a +3 bonus to Will saves against fear effects.

Darkvision Range 60 ft.; Darkvision is the extraordinary ability to see with no light source at all, out to a range specified for the creature. Darkvision is black and white only (colors cannot be discerned). It does not allow characters to see anything that they could not see otherwise-invisible objects are still invisible, and illusions are still visible as what they seem to be. Likewise, darkvision subjects a creature to gaze attacks normally. The presence of light does not spoil darkvision.

Disease A schir gnaws constantly at the ends of its halberd. This infuses the blades with disease from the demon's filthy spittle. Any creature struck by a schir's halberd must succeed at a DC 15 Fortitude save or contract gray pox-a frightening disease that causes weakness, gray splotches on the skin, and eventual catatonia. The save DC is Constitution-based. Gray Pox: Halberd-injury; save Con DC 15; onset 1 day; frequency 1/day; effect 1d6 Str damage; cure 2 consecutive saves.

Outsider Traits Unlike most living creatures, an outsider does not have a dual nature--its soul and body form one unit. When an outsider is slain, no soul is set loose. Spells that restore souls to their bodies, such as raise dead, reincarnate, and resurrection, don't work on an outsider. ☒ Special Abilities

Bleeding Attack You can cause living opponents to bleed when hitting them with a sneak attack. This attack causes the target to take 9 additional points of damage each round. Bleeding creatures that that amount of damage every round at the start of their turns. The bleeding can be stopped by a DC 15 Heal check or the application of any effect that heals hit point damage. Bleeding damage from this ability does not stack with itself. Bleeding damage bypasses any damage reduction the creature might possess.

Camouflage Once per day, a rogue with this talent can craft simple but effective camouflage from the surrounding foliage. The rogue needs 1 minute to prepare the camouflage, but once she does, it is good for the rest of the day or until the rogue fails a saving throw against an area effect spell that deals fire, cold, or acid damage, whichever comes first. The rogue gains a +4 bonus on Stealth checks while within terrain that matches the foliage used to make the camouflage. This ability cannot be used in areas without natural foliage.

Death Throes When a dark stalker is slain, its body combusts in a flash of white-hot flame. This acts like a fireball that deals 3d6 points of fire damage to all creatures within a 20-foot-radius burst. A DC 21 Reflex save halves this damage. A dark stalker's gear and treasure are unaffected by this explosion.

Evasion You can avoid damage from many area-effect attacks. If you make a successful Reflex saving throw against an attack that normally deals half damage on a successful save, you instead take no damage. Evasion can only be used if you are wearing light armor or no armor. If you are helpless, you do not gain the benefit of evasion.

Expert Leaper When making jump checks, the rogue is always considered to have a running start. Also, when the rogue deliberately falls, a DC 15 Acrobatics check allows her to ignore the first 20 feet fallen, instead of the first 10 feet.

Humanoid Traits Humanoids breathe, eat, and sleep.

Improved Uncanny Dodge You can no longer be flanked. This defense denies a rogue the ability to sneak attack you by flanking you, unless the attacker is a rogue of at least level 16.

Lasting Poison A rogue with this talent can apply poison to a weapon in such a way that it is effective for two successful attacks instead of one. The poison has a reduced effect, however, and saves made against the poison receive a +2 circumstance bonus. Applying poison in this way requires a full-round action, or a standard action if the rogue has the swift poison talent.

Light Blindness You are blinded for 1 round if exposed to bright light, such as sunlight or the daylight spell. You are dazzled as long as you remain in areas of bright light.

Poison Use Dark Folk are skilled in the use of poison and never risk accidentally poisoning themselves. Dark Folk favor a foul-smelling black paste distilled from certain deep-underground fungi known as black smear--injury; save Con DC 15; frequency 1/round for 6 rounds; effect 1d2 Str; cure 1 save.

See in Darkness Dark Folk can see perfectly in darkness of any kind, including that created by deeper darkness.

Sneak Attack If you can catch an opponent when he is unable to defend himself effectively from your attack, you can strike a vital spot for extra damage. Your attack deals 9d6 points of extra damage anytime your target would be denied a Dexterity bonus to AC, or when you flank your target. Should you score a critical hit with a sneak attack, this extra damage is not multiplied. Ranged attacks can count as sneak attacks only if the target is within 30 feet. With a weapon that deals nonlethal damage, you can make a sneak attack that deals nonlethal damage instead of lethal damage. You cannot use a weapon that deals lethal damage to deal nonlethal damage in a sneak attack, not even with the usual -4 penalty. You must be able to see the target well enough to pick out a vital spot and must be able to reach such a spot. You cannot sneak attack while striking a creature with concealment.

Stealthy Sniper When a rogue with this talent uses the Stealth skill to snipe, she only suffers a -10 penalty on the Stealth check, instead of -20.

Swift Poison A rogue with this talent can apply poison to a weapon as a move action, instead of a standard action.

Trapfinding You add +6 to Perception skill checks made to locate traps and to Disable Device skill checks. You can use the Disable Device skill to disarm magical traps.

Trap Sense You gain a +4 bonus on Reflex saves made to avoid traps, and a +4 dodge bonus to AC against attacks made by traps.

Uncanny Dodge You can react to danger before your senses would normally allow you to do so. You cannot be caught flat-footed, nor do you lose your Dexterity bonus to AC if the attacker is invisible. You still lose your Dexterity bonus to AC if immobilized. You can still lose your Dexterity bonus to AC if an opponent successfully uses the feint action against you.

Vildanna (Dullahan)

CR 8

Description

Vildanna is a fallen paladin, once a valiant defender of the Realm, but banished to the underside of the world for dark yet necessary deeds long forgotten.

Appearance

Armed to the teeth—if her headless nature included a face and mouth in which to bare them—this dark-cloaked, lithe rider emanates a feeling of dread and despair.

Combat Tactics

Vildanna loathes the surface world, and all those who inhabit it. She yearns to reap vengeance upon all who have slighted her—which in her twisted perspective is everyone breathing life in the Realm.

 Special Abilities

Aura of Cowardice You radiate a palpably daunting aura that causes all enemies within 10 feet to take a -4 penalty on saving throws against fear effects. Creatures that are normally immune to fear lose that immunity while within 10 feet of you. This ability functions only while you remain conscious, not if you are unconscious or dead.

Aura of Despair Enemies within 10 feet of you take a -2 penalty on all saving throws. This penalty does not stack with the penalty from aura of cowardice. This ability functions only while you remain conscious, not if you are unconscious or dead.

Blindsight Range 60 ft.; Some creatures have blindsight, the extraordinary ability to use a nonvisual sense (or a combination of such senses) to operate effectively without vision. Such sense may include sensitivity to vibrations, acute scent, keen hearing, or echolocation. This ability makes invisibility and concealment (even magical darkness) irrelevant to the creature (though it still can't see ethereal creatures and must have line of effect to a creature or object to discern that creature or object). This ability operates out to a range specified in the creature description. The creature usually does not need to make Spot or Listen checks to notice creatures within range of its blindsight ability. Unless noted otherwise, blindsight is continuous, and the creature need do nothing to use it. Some forms of blindsight, however, must be triggered as a free action. If so, this is noted in the creature's description. If a creature must trigger its blindsight ability, the creature gains the benefits of blindsight only during its turn. Blindsight never allows a creature to distinguish color or visual contrast. A creature cannot read with blindsight. Blindsight does not subject a creature to gaze attacks (even though darkvision does). Blinding attacks do not penalize creatures using blindsight. Deafening attacks thwart blindsight if it relies on hearing. Blindsight works underwater but not in a vacuum. Blindsight negates displacement and blur effects.

Channel Negative Energy You can unleash a wave of negative energy. You must choose to deal 4d6 points of negative energy damage to living creatures or to heal undead creatures of 4d6 points of damage. Creatures that take damage from channeled energy receive a DC 22 Will save to halve the damage. Using this ability consumes two uses of your touch of corruption ability.

Channel Resistance You are less easily affected by clerics or paladins. You add +4 to saves made to resist the effects of channel energy, including effects that rely on the use of channel energy.

Chilling Blade A dullahan is proficient with all simple and martial weapons. When it wields a slashing weapon, the blade inflicts +1d6 cold damage and gains the keen weapon property.

Cruelty At 3rd level, and every three levels thereafter, an antipaladin can select one cruelty. Each cruelty adds an effect to the antipaladin's touch of corruption ability. Whenever the antipaladin uses touch of corruption to deal damage to one target, the target also receives the additional effect from one of the cruelties possessed by the antipaladin. This choice is made when the touch is used. The target receives a Fortitude save to avoid this cruelty. If the save is successful, the target takes the damage as normal, but not the effects of the cruelty. The DC of this save is 22.

Darkvision Range 60 ft.; Darkvision is the extraordinary ability to see with no light source at all, out to a range specified for the creature. Darkvision is black and white only (colors cannot be discerned). It does not allow characters to see anything that they could not see otherwise-invisible objects are still invisible, and illusions are still visible as what they seem to be. Likewise, darkvision subjects a creature to gaze attacks normally. The presence of light does not spoil darkvision.

Death's Calling Once per day as a standard action, a dullahan may place death's calling on a target within 60 feet (DC 29 Fortitude negates). If the dullahan knows and speaks the target's name, the target takes a -2 penalty on the save. If the victim fails the save, he becomes staggered for 1d6 rounds. For the next 24 hours (or until the dullahan is slain), all critical hits against the victim automatically confirm. Finally, the victim automatically fails all Constitution checks to stabilize while dying. This is a mind-affecting curse effect.

Detect Good At will, you can use Detect Good, as the spell. You can, as a move action, concentrate on a single item or individual within 60 feet and determine if it is good, learning the strength of its aura as if having studied it for 3 rounds. While focusing on one individual or object, you do not detect good in any other object or individual within range.

Diseased Whenever you use Touch of Corruption to deal damage to one target, the target also contracts a disease, as if you had cast Contagion (caster level 8).

Enhance Weapon Your fiendish boon allows you to enhance your weapon as a standard action by calling upon the aid of a fiendish spirit for 8 minutes. When called, the spirit causes the weapon to shed unholy light as a torch. This spirit grants the weapon a +2 enhancement bonus. This bonus can be added to the weapon, stacking with existing weapon bonuses to a maximum of +5, or they can be used to add any of the following weapon properties: flaming, keen, vicious (+1), anarchic, flaming burst, unholy, wounding (+2), speed (+3), and vorpal (+5). Adding these properties consumes an amount of bonus equal to the property's cost. These bonuses are added to any properties the weapon already has, but duplicate abilities do not stack. If the weapon is not magical, at least a +1 enhancement bonus must be added before any other properties can be added. The bonus and properties granted by the spirit are determined when the spirit is called and cannot be changed until the spirit is called again. The fiendish spirit imparts no bonuses if the weapon is held by anyone other than you but resumes giving bonuses if returned to you. These bonuses apply to only one end of a double weapon. You can use this ability 1 times per day. If a weapon bonded with a fiendish spirit is destroyed, you lose the use of this ability for 30 days, or until you gains a level, whichever comes first. During this 30-day period, you take a -1 penalty on attack and weapon damage rolls.

Fast Healing You regain hit points at 5 hit points per round. You regain hit points at 5 per round. Fast healing does not restore hit points lost from starvation, thirst, or suffocation, nor does it allow a creature to regrow lost body parts. Unless otherwise stated, it does not allow lost body parts to be reattached. Fast healing continues to function (even at negative hit points) until a creature dies, at which point the effects of fast healing end immediately.

Frightful Presence Your very presence unsettling to foes. Activating this ability is a free action that is usually part of an attack or charge. Opponents within range who witness the action may become frightened or shaken. The range is 30 feet, and the duration is usually 5d6 rounds. This ability affects only opponents with fewer Hit Dice or levels than the creature has. An affected opponent can resist the effects with a successful Will save (DC 23). On a failed save, the opponent is shaken, or panicked if 4 HD or fewer. An opponent that succeeds on the saving throw is immune to your frightful presence for 24 hours. Frightful presence is a mind-affecting fear effect.

Plague Bringer The powers of darkness make you a beacon of corruption and disease. You do not take any damage or from diseases. You can still contract diseases and spread them to others, but you are otherwise immune to their effects.

Shaken Whenever you use Touch of Corruption to deal damage to one target, the target is also shaken for 8 rounds.

Sickened Whenever you use Touch of Corruption to deal damage to one target, the target is also sickened for 8 rounds.

Smite Good You can call out to the dark powers to crush the forces of good 3 times per day. As a swift action, you choose one target within sight to smite. If this target is good, you add +8 to your attack rolls and +8 on all damage rolls made against the target of your smite. If the target of Smite Good is an outsider with the good subtype, a good-aligned dragon, or a good creature with levels of cleric or paladin, the bonus to damage on the first successful attack increases to +16. Regardless of the target, Smite Good attacks automatically bypass any DR the creature might possess. In addition, while Smite Good is in effect, you gain a +8 deflection bonus to your AC against attacks made by the target of the smite. If you target a creature that is not good, the smite is wasted with no effect. The Smite Good effect remains until the target of the smite is dead or the next time you rest and regain your uses of this ability.

Summon Mount As a standard action, a dullahan can summon a war-trained heavy horse with the fiendish creature simple template. This horse remains until it is slain or the dullahan dismisses it. He can only have one such horse in his service at a time.

Touch of Corruption You surrounds your hand with a fiendish flame, causing terrible wounds to open on those you touch. You can use this ability 12 times per day. As a touch attack, you can cause 4d6 points of damage. Using this ability is a standard action that does not provoke attacks of opportunity. Alternatively, you can use this power to heal undead creatures, restoring 4d6 hit points. This ability is modified by any feat, spell, or effect that specifically works with the lay on hands paladin class feature.

Undead Traits Undead are immune to death effects, disease, mind-affecting effects (charms, compulsions, morale effects, phantasms, and patterns), paralysis, poison, sleep, stun, and any effect that requires a Fortitude save (unless the effect also works on objects or is harmless). Undead are not subject to ability drain, energy drain, or nonlethal damage. Undead are immune to damage or penalties to their physical ability scores (Strength, Dexterity, and Constitution), as well as to fatigue and exhaustion effects. Undead are not at risk of death from massive damage.

Unholy Resilience At 2nd level, an antipaladin gains a bonus equal to his Charisma bonus (if any) on all saving throws.

You agree not to indicate compatibility or co-adaptability with any Trademark or Registered Trademark in conjunction with a work containing Open Game Content except as expressly licensed in another, independent Agreement with the owner of such Trademark or Registered Trademark. The use of any Product Identity in Open Game Content does not constitute a challenge to the ownership of that Product Identity. The owner of any Product Identity used in Open Game Content shall retain all rights, title and interest in and to that Product Identity.

8. Identification: If you distribute Open Game Content You must clearly indicate which portions of the work that you are distributing are Open Game Content.

9. Updating the License: Wizards or its designated Agents may publish updated versions of this License. You may use any authorized version of this License to copy, modify and distribute any Open Game Content originally distributed under any version of this License.

10. Copy of this License: You MUST include a copy of this License with every copy of the Open Game Content You distribute.

11. Use of Contributor Credits: You may not market or advertise the Open Game Content using the name of any Contributor unless You have written permission from the Contributor to do so.

12. Inability to Comply: If it is impossible for You to comply with any of the terms of this License with respect to some or all of the Open Game Content due to statute, judicial order, or governmental regulation then You may not Use any Open Game Material so affected.

13. Termination: This License will terminate automatically if You fail to comply with all terms herein and fail to cure such breach within 30 days of becoming aware of the breach. All sublicenses shall survive the termination of this License.

14. Reformation: If any provision of this License is held to be unenforceable, such provision shall be reformed only to the extent necessary to make it enforceable.
