THE CULT OF THE OLD GODS

The cult has always been in the back of society, pulling the strings from the shadows. Now that their goal of reviving the thing beneath the manor is within grasp, however, they have stepped out into the light to stake their claim over your ancestral home. They ally themselves most often with the other forces attempting to take control of the various lands around the manor. Purge these interlopers like the vermin they are.

Actions

Summon Skeleton Rabble(1/Short Rest): The cultist witch summons a Skeleton Rabble to assist her in combat. It disappears into dust when destroyed or after 1 minute.

Stressful Incantation: The Cultist Witch chants, and forces a target creature within 30 feet to make a Wisdom saving throw with DC 10. On failure, that creature takes 1d8 Psychic damage. Targets who speak Deep Speech have Advantage on this saving throw.

THE UNHOLY

The Unholy, beginning with the Necromancers that your Ancestor brought to this land, spread across the ruins, consuming all in their wake, the dead raising the dead, on and on down the years. They are the most likely faction to ally with the Cult, as most of their forces are mindless, serving the Necromancers or Cultists faithfully. They are also the faction most likely to be seen outside their 'base' if it can be called that, of the ruins, as their forces are innumerable and ever replenishing.

SKELETON RABBLE

The weakest of The Unholy's forces, Skeleton Rabble must rely on the advantage of numbers to take down even meager foes. Armed with only a club, and without enough Dexterity to dodge incoming attacks, these skeletons often serve as nothing more than a warning that an adventurer is approaching territory guarded by The Unholy.

The Cult has seen fit to arm and armor some Skeleton Soldiers better than their kin. These soldiers are CR 1/2, use Longswords (+4 to hit, 1d8+2 slashing) And have Studded Leather armor. (13 AC)

BONE BULWARKS

One of the most heavily armored tools at The Unholy's disposal, Bone Bulwarks take the frontline in outright combat against its enemies. Able to shield allies while still landing vicious blows, A Bulwark even alone may prove more than a match for an unwary adventurer.

BONE PIKEMAN

A more advanced Undead than its allies, the Bone Pikeman has enough intellect remaining to stand behind allies or cover and stab past them with his weapon to strike at foes without reproach. When forced to the frontline, they have no answer and are forced to retreat or die again. Due to the nature of their weapon, their blows are unpredictable.

THE NECROMANCERS

Necromancers, the origin of The Unholy, were originally brought to this land by your ancestor, as were many of the evils corrupting it. They are, despite their undead state, intelligent, viciously strong, and can endlessly revive or summon their undead allies to make any adventurer's life a living hell.

Six Feet Under All creatures within 30 feet of the Necromancer see a momentary vision of their death. They must make a DC14 Wisdom save or take 4d8 Psychic damage, half on success. Undead are immune to this effect.

THE PROPHET

Once a preacher, this man spent his days calling for a mob to stop your ancestor's work. Eventually, your ancestor had him put in chains... he escaped. After that, assassins were dispatched to deal with the man. He survived. Attempt after attempt was made on the prophet's life, but he lived through them all. Your ancestor relented, and brought the man to the dig site to show him the truth. After gazing into that abyss, the prophet ran, screaming, into the ruins. Whatever became of that man... he is no longer human.

Pews. The Prophet hides among the ruined Pews, which are Large objects with 60, 45, and 30 hp. They have resistance to Piercing damage but weakness to Acid, and 0 ac.

Rubble of Ruin. At the bottom of initiative, a pile of rubble falls from the ceiling in the location marked by Calamitous Prognostication. Each creature within the area must make a DC15 Dexterity saving throw or take 10d10 Bludgeoning damage as they are crushed beneath the falling stone.

Actions

Eye on You. Ranged Spell Attack: +8 to hit, reach 30ft., one target. Hit 17 (3d6 + 5) Psychic damage. Creatures hit by this attack must make a DC15 Wisdom saving throw or be Stunned until the end of their turn.

Fulminate. The Prophet vomits forth a spray of poisonous bile. All creatures within a 15 foot cone from the Prophet must make a DC 15 Dexterity saving throw or take 3d6 Acid damage. Creatures that fail this saving throw must then make a DC 15 Constitution saving throw or be Poisoned until the end of their next turn.

THE SWINE

Deep in the warrens, the swine grow numerous. Their vile home is filled with disease, filth, and the masses of corpses of their own fallen and those they take from the surface, both sources of food. They are the most aggressive faction, almost always attacking all trespassers on sight. They are the least likely faction to ally with any other. Due to your ancestor's experiments, these creatures originate from creatures beyond the ken of man, forced into the minds of pigs. These warped abominations are a threat to all life on this planet, and must be routed. Adventurers with weak Constitutions should stay away, for fear of the plagues and other maladies that thrive in the warrens.

SWINE SLASHER

Arguably the most intelligent of the swine, this creature has learned the importance of armor to protect its otherwise weak frame. It also uses a meathook as a weapon, Lunging forwards to bring down opponents with practiced precision.

SWINE WRETCH

Beware the Wretches, identifiable by their small size but utterly vile method of attack. Because they are too frail to physically assault targets, they heave large amounts of bile at their foes, which while not terribly damaging in and of itself, it is highly virulent. Best to carry a way to deal with diseases while these creatures may be near.

SWINE PLAGUE

It takes 1d4 days for swine plague's symptoms to manifest in an infected creature. Symptoms include fatigue, headaches, an inability to focus, and in severe cases, vomiting. The infected creature suffers one level of Exhaustion, and it regains only half the normal number of hit points from spending Hit Dice and no hit points from finishing a Long Rest. While infected, a creature also has Disadvantage on Concentration Checks.

At the end of each Long Rest, an infected creature must make a DC 11 Constitution saving throw. On a failed save, the character gains one level of Exhaustion. On a successful save, the character's Exhaustion level decreases by one level. If a successful saving throw reduces the infected creature's level of Exhaustion below 1, the creature recovers from the disease.

(Shared) Morph. Two of the parts of the flesh swap places.

THE FORMLESS FLESH

The Formless Flesh is an amalgamate of corpses, possessed by the things your Ancestor brought to this plane through unknown means. Its mass constantly morphs, warps, and reshapes as it writhes and screams. It is not so much a part of the Swine as a maddened entity, dangerous to all life on this world. It must be stopped.

THE ROT

Your ancestor's alchemical research was benign at first, but grew more esoteric as his madness grew. A woman accompanied him in his research, until she grew so vile as to even disgust him, and she was cast out into the forests around the estate. There she lives now, creating more and more of her fungal abominations. They are the second most likely faction to assist the Cult, as the leader may even be one of the Cultists herself.

FUNGAL SCRATCHER

Created from a humanoid, these creatures are somewhere between a fungus and a zombie. The plant animates a corpse, and it stumbles forwards, serving as a durable frontline for the corruption spreading through the weald.

ECTOPLASM

When a corpse is too far gone for even the fungus to animate, the Hag creates an Ectoplasm. These slimes pull the skeleton into themselves, using them to give the mass form. Some Ectoplasms grow to exceptional size, pulling more and more of the weald's detritus into their mass. In combat, these creatures often perform Cytokinesis, splitting in half where both halves rapidly regenerate into full-size ectoplasms.

Engulf. The Ectoplasm (Large) engulfs a Medium or smaller creature Grappled by it. The engulfed target is Blinded, Restrained, and unable to breathe, and it must succeed on a DC 13 Constitution saving throw at the start of each of the Ectoplasm (Large)'s turns or take 13 (2d8 + 3) bludgeoning damage. If the Ectoplasm (Large) moves, the engulfed target moves with it. The Ectoplasm (Large) can have only one creature engulfed at a time.

CRONE

Students of the Hag, the crones spread the poison further, corrupt even more, and inflict the cult's dark influence over the weald. They share the ability to poison targets with Fungal Bombardiers, and can call the Scratchers to their aid to protect the corruption.

Failing this save a second time resets the duration to 1 minute.

HATEFUL VIRAGO

The daughters of the Hag, the Viragos are as blighted and corrupted as she is. Some are abducted from the hamlet, some are willing as they join the Hag's coven and become fanatical, throwing themselves into her cauldron to be reborn. They are some of the most dangerous of the forces within the weald, and their Necrotic Fungi can make it even more difficult to deal with poison and wounds. They also have Disadvantage on Death saving throws.

Actions

Will of Corruption. The Virago curses a target within 30 feet of her. The target must make a DC13 Wisdom save or be Poisoned for 1 minute, and take 2d8 Psychic damage.

Putrid Breath (Recharge 3). The Virago exhales a cone of poisonous breath. Creatures inside a 20 foot cone must make a DC13 Constitution saving throw or be poisoned for 1 minute, and take 4d8 Poison damage, half on success.

Summon Corrupt Creature (Recharge 10) The Virago summons an Ectoplasm (Medium), Fungal Scratcher, or Fungal Bombardier. This summoned creature lasts for 1 minute or until slain.

THE HAG

One of the first corruptions your ancestor created, the Hag was the result of years of alchemical research gone wrong. Once she was expelled from the manor, she retreated into the weald, and continued her esoteric research, experimenting on herself as well as anyone she could capture. Somewhere along the way, she turned to cannibalism, as the easiest source of food was her own failed experiments...

Abduct. The hag makes an Athletics check to Grapple a target. If she succeeds, as a bonus action, she can dump them into her Pot. Cannot be used if there is already a creature in the pot.

Meat Tenderizer. Melee Weapon Attack: +6 to hit, reach 10ft., one target. Hit 10 (2d6 + 3) Bludgeoning Damage

Seasoning. The Hag hurls a pile of soup seasonings, poisonous wildlife, and other corruption at a target. They aren't damaging, but are disgusting. The target must make a DC14 Dexterity save or be poisoned for 1 minute and take 1d8 Acid damage, 1d8 Psychic damage, and 2d8 Poison damage.

Taste the Stew. If there is a creature in the pot, the Hag heals for 2d10+3.

THE PELAGIC

Deep in the ocean, the Pelagic grow their numbers. They are an ancient, unknowable race of bipedal fish in service to eldritch deities better left unknown. Their interest in the island is surely not for any reason we should allow to continue. They are the least likely faction to be seen outside their homes in the cove, as they are dependent on seawater to survive. They are the most likely faction to ally with outside forces, and may even be willing to strike a deal with you provided you find the right leverage.

PELAGIC GROUPEUR

Of course, to think you and the cult are the only groups attempting to gain control of the manor and the surrounding areas would be naive. A veritable army of brigands has swarmed across the land, and their leader, the Vvulf, may be even more of a threat than any of the horrors already living in this terrible place. They are the most likely faction to be seen exploring areas, and often in teams of similar size to your adventuring parties as they try to loot and slay the terrors within. If pressed, they may even be willing to help you face down a stronger foe.

BRIGAND CUTTHROAT

The common footsoldier of the Brigand army, the Cutthroat wields his swords with practised ease. They are moderately armed and armored, but not exceptionally so as the army is large, and granting them all exceptional gear would strain even the Vvulf's funding.

Barrel O' Bombs Vvulf has a Barrel O' Bombs. It has 100 HP, and 13 AC. At the top of each initiative, he throws a bomb into a tile within 40 feet of him. At the bottom of initiative, the bomb detonates and forces all creatures within 20 feet of the blast to make DC17 Dexterity saves, taking 8d6 Fire damage on failure, half on success.

Actions

War Cry. (Recharge 3) Vvulf lets out a rallying cry, summoning brigands to his side. He can summon any of the following: Two Cutthroats, Two Fusiliers, a Bloodletter, a Raider, or a Hunter with two Trained Dogs.

Stunning Blow. Melee Weapon Attack: +8 to hit, reach 5ft., one target. Hit 10 (2d6 + 4) Slashing damage. Vvulf bashes a target in melee with his shield. The creature must make a DC17 Constitution saving throw or be Stunned until the creature's next turn.

THE CRIMSON COURT

The Court your ancestor held was once a noble gala, a party for the most elite of society. When the corruption spread, the Crimson Curse took hold, turning all of the court's partygoers into vampiric insects, puppeting their old human forms. They thirst for The Blood, blood fouled by the Curse, the only thing that can slake their thirst. Due to their nature, they swarm out of the Courtyard, always seeking more Blood to sate their endless thirst. Most of the court's denizens do not bother with armor.

SUPPLICANT

The weakest of the monsters of the court, Supplicants are large ticks puppeting corpses. They collect The Blood, and return with it to the Courtyard, where it is bottled into vials of The Blood. They are individually weak, but their every bite risks infection.

THE CRIMSON CURSE

When bitten by a Cursed creature or otherwise exposed to The Curse, creatures must make a Constitution save. On a failure, they are infected with The Crimson Curse.

The symptoms of the The Crimson Curse take 1d8 days to manifest, and include a strange, unslakeable thirst, bloodlust, a feeling of starvation, and in severe cases, even death. Cures are rare, and The Crimson Curse can even resist magical attempts at curing diseases. If a creature does not consume The Blood within a week of symptoms showing, they begin to starve.

While starving, they take -2 to all physical stats. If they do not consume The Blood for another week, they begin to waste away. A Wasting creature takes -4 to all stats, has disadvantage on skill checks and saves. When a creature attempts to remove the disease through magical means such as Lesser Restoration, they must roll a d20. On a 15 or lower, the disease is not cured and another attempt cannot be made for a week. Once symptoms have begun to show, infected creatures gain a Natural Attack that has the Finesse trait, and deals 1d6+STR/DEX Piercing damage as they bite down. This exposes the target to The Crimson Curse, heals the attacker for the same damage it deals, and slakes their thirst.

If a druid transforms into a Beast that can infect others with The Crimson Curse, s/he is automatically infected and will begin to show symptoms as soon as they return to their normal form.

During this dance, she can only use attacks marked (Dance)

The Veil Consumed. When she reaches 150 HP, the countess ceases to dance, and begins the battle in earnest. Her AC becomes 18 as her Dexterity rises to 20. She can use any attack not marked (Dance) or (Berserk) in this state.

The Last Dance When the Countess reaches 75 HP, she loses all composure, and becomes berserk. Her AC drops to 12, but her Strength becomes 25, giving her an attack modifier of +10 and +7 damage. She can use any attack marked (Berserk) in this state.

Actions

(Dance) Discordant Laughter. The countess laughs, the hollow sound echoing in the mind of all who hear it. Any creature within 30 feet of the countess must make a DC18 Wisdom save or take 2d8 Psychic damage.

(Dance) Fan. (Recharge 2) The countess fans herself, healing for 3d8.

Lunging Claw. Melee Weapon Attack: +5 to hit, reach 5ft., one target. Hit 18 (4d6 + 2) Slashing damage.

Dissonant Song. (Recharge 2) The countess sings, and all who hear it must make DC18 Wisdom saves or take 3d8 Psychic damage.

(Berserk) Multiattack. The Countess makes two (Berserk) Claw attacks.

(Berserk) Claw. Melee Weapon Attack: +10 to hit, reach 5ft., one target. Hit 23 (4d6 + 7) Slashing damage.

THE COUNTESS

The progenitor of The Crimson Curse, she joined the court of your ancestor for unknown reasons. Under the light of the pale moon, she prepared to attack him, but he struck first. Thought slain, he performed the first of his fatal experiments, mixing her blood into the wine, serving it to the Court. The courtgoers mutated, becoming the monsters that now infest the Crimson Court.

Once the countess has met her end, the curse is not gone forever, and people can still be infected by existing infected creatures, but the Curse loses its resistance to being cured. Attempts at curing the Curse no longer have to roll a d20 to check for success.

Challenge 15 (13000 XP)

Hate Beyond Time. When the shield falls, the Statue enters a rage. At the top of each initiative, it adds 1d6 damage to all of its attacks. This stacks indefinitely.

Three Sections. The Statue is three huge constructs, a Spear, a Body, and a Shield. They all share the same HP total, with the Shield having 67 HP and 18 AC, the Spear having 50 HP and 15 AC, and the body having 130 HP. If the body reaches 0 HP, it can drain any amount of hp from either other section to restore itself as a reaction. However, it cannot Destroy any other section of its body, only capable of reducing them to a minimum of 1 hp. Each section attacks independently, with abilities marked (Spear), (Shield), or (Body)

False Appearance. While the statue remain motionless, it is indistinguishable from a normal statue.

Reorient The Statue can move the shield and spear around its body freely, rotating on the spot.

Actions

(Spear) Blood lance. Ranged Weapon Attack: +9 to hit, reach 30ft., one target. Hit 17 (4d6 + 5) Piercing damage.

(Spear) Sweep. The spear creates a bolt of blood that shoots down and sweeps across the ground, creating a blast of deadly blood. Creatures in a 10 foot sphere around the spear must make a DC19 Dexterity saving throw or take 6d8 Psychic damage as the blood spray hits them, half on success.

(Body) Rage of The Abandoned. Ranged Weapon Attack: +9 to hit, reach 30ft., one target. Hit 21 (8d4 + 5) Psychic damage.

(Shield) Slam Melee Weapon Attack: +4 to hit, reach 15ft., one target. Hit 17 (4d6 + 5) Bludgeoning Damage.

Guardian. The shield uses its Reaction to take damage for the Spear or Body.

THE GARDEN GUARDIAN

An ancient statue of unknown import, the statue too became corrupted by the spreading Crimson Curse. It remains keeping to itself, but an endless font of The Blood flows from its base. No matter how many times it is destroyed, it always slowly repairs itself beneath the murk, and eventually must be destroyed again.

UNALIGNED CREATURES

Some creatures are not beholden to any of the factions currently trying to take control of the lands around the manor. Many creatures are simply trying to survive on their own, or are feral monsters that even the Swine or the Cult could not control.

Another creature that is Adjacent to a bleeding creature can attempt the same Medicine check as a Bonus Action.

POLYP

There truly is no words for the abominations that creep through these halls. The Polyp has no proper structure, no sensory organs, no way to move about except for its wings. How this creature even finds its way around is a mystery, let alone how it detects prey. What is known, however, is once it has identified a target it hunts them down with no rest, chasing them to the ends of the earth.

Phlegm Launch. Ranged Weapon Attack: +4 to hit, reach 20ft., one target. Hit 7 (1d4 + 4) Acid damage. Targets must make a DC13 Constitution save or be Poisoned for 1 minute. While poisoned in this way, the target's speed is 5 lower.

Banishing Screech. The Polyp screeches, and a target must make a DC13 Wisdom save or be Frightened of the Polyp for 1 minute.

THE TEMPLARS

Apparently the end-goal of the transformations the cultists are going under, the templars are a group of monstrosities that are the most elite of the cultists warriors. All templars have an ability called "Revelation" which adventurers will need to find a way around if they have any hope to defeat them. It is extremely rare to see more than one templar in an area.

TEMPLAR IMPALER

The Impaler is a Templar with a stinger carrying an extremely lethal poison. Their claws are highly lethal and their body is built for frontline combat.

TEMPLAR WARLORD

The Warlord is a Templar with a stinger that can launch a deadly spine. Their poison is less lethal than an Impaler, but their spines can be rained down over an area.

Truth. When the Templar is Critically hit, roll 1d100. If the roll is greater than 50, the Critical Hit is nullified as the Templar's body contorts and warps.

Creator And Destroyer. The Heart is just the heart of a much larger being. If it was to fully awaken, no force on this world or another could possibly hope to stand in its way.

Alpha and Omega. Reducing The Heart to 0 hp does not slay it, only put it to rest. The Heart falls into slumber for decades equal to the party's combined Wisdom.

Deific Demand. When the Heart reaches 50% hp, it makes a demand that must be met. It is invulnerable until the following condition is met: One creature must willingly damage itself. When they do, that creature is immediately reduced to 0 hp and fails its first two death saving throws. The Heart regains twice the hp lost in this manner. This ability can only be used once.

Gestation. The Heart spends the first three rounds of its life Gestating, taking no actions.
